Men From Bremen Arrive In Quebec

Ford Plane Carries Trio Who Crossed Atlantic To Civilization Once More; Will Go To Washington.

(By Associated Press.)
LAKE ST. AUGUSTINE, Que., April 26. (AP)—The crew of the monoplane, which came back to civilization today in the tri-motor Ford airplane which had taken them off an island where they were marooned 13 days ago.

The big ship swooped down on the frozen lake which serves as a landing field for this improvised airport and a hundred newspapermen and photographers surrounded the plane.

With Bert-Balchen at the controls, the plane had made a quick trip from the barren island off the tip of Labrador. Several times it flew above the lake while the crew set off smoke signals telling that the surface was safe for landing.

Once the ship was down, eager newsmen surrounded Baron von Muench, Captain Konig and Commandant Pitman. Men in military uniforms came to greet the three men and the three men posed with Balchen for still photographs.

One cameraman had an airplane hoisted up for a quick take-off as the ship was being towed.

The proponents of birth control legislation because of the bitterness that might be injected through a discussion of the subject, agreed not to continue their fight on the floor of the convention. They had lost in committee. As a result birth control has mentioned only once during the day's activities and then incidentally.

Repatee From Postmaster Vaughan Gives Zest to Address of GOP Leader

Wurzbach, Lone Texas Republican Congressman, Dives Into Attack On Present Republican Structure In Texas—Exception Taken by Vaughan

The various wings of the democratic party in Texas do not represent the only lack of political harmony in the state—that is if indications during the meeting of South Plains republicans here yesterday can be taken as a criterion. For, with the Wurzbach division of the Texas G. O. P. holding sway, it was not without some friction that the meeting went on.

The meeting, which was held in the courthouse yesterday afternoon, was featured by an address of Harry M. Wurzbach of Seguin, the only republican from Texas in the United States congress at the present time, and was marked by lively repartee between the visiting congressman and Postmaster John L. Vaughan, a supporter of the wing dominated by R. B. Creager of Brownsville. The Wurzbach-Creager feud among Texas republicans has long been a matter of interest, even to democrats, and there were not a few of the latter present at yesterday's session.

Mr. Wurzbach has the distinction of being the only republican congressman from Texas doing duty at the national capitol. He is a native of Texas, born in the shadow of the Alamo. His father was a Confederate soldier, and he stated that his politics was a matter of choice rather than birth.

Reps "Patronage System." In the course of his address the congressman declared that the republican organization in Texas was wholly and solely a patronage or party organization.

Harmony Appears Still An Evasive Factor For Demos

(By Associated Press.)
DALLAS, April 26. (AP)—Asked if there is any hope of "harmony" with the democrats led by former Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey, Governor Dan Moody, here tonight on an allegedly political mission with Lynch Davidson, chairman of the democrats of Texas, said:

"I do not know, but I do know Senator Bailey is not going to get any argument out of me on the subject of the pledge or democratic party loyalty. I am as strong a democrat as he is, and as strong for standing by the party's nominees. I am not for Reed, a wet candidate, and he is I am for national prohibition as it is written in the constitution of the United States and he is not for it."

DALLAS, April 26. (AP)—Governor Dan Moody and Lynch Davidson, chairman of the democrats of Texas, arrived here late Thursday on what they frankly said was a political mission. They will hold a series of conferences with Dallas

GOP CALLS ILLEGAL

That Is What Republican Chairman Says

The election of delegates to the republican state convention is regulated by the same state law as the election of those to the democratic national convention. Whittington said, "The provisions are separate from those of the so-called primary law. One article of the statutes provides a general law for all parties."

"This requires that all delegates be selected at a state convention."

PHONES 13 AND 14

WOMAN'S DAY
By Allene Sumner

Even though the marriage of Berlin, the immigrant boy composer, to Ellen Mackay, heiress to one of America's great fortunes, is years old by now, that marriage continues to "make page one" again and again as a fresh rumor sprouts up that Papa Mackay has forgiven his darling daughter and gone to implant a grandfatherly kiss upon the cheek of his tiny granddaughter. What a sentimental, romance-loving, gossiping, plain "nosey" people we are!

THE GIGOLO.

The gigolo has come into his own. He now carries a card like a union man and is officially recognized as "a gentleman of occupation." In case anyone needs a definition, a gigolo is a ladylike young man who hesitates to soil his lily white fingers with menial toil, but who has learned that certain rich ladies past the first fine flush of youth will pay well for a handsome youth to escort them to teas, dance with them, pay checks from their own purses, seated under the table, and in general make the world believe that lady's charms are so have gained her the gallant attentions.

IT'S SAD, TOO.

Gigoloing has been more or less under a cloud until, just recently, the merry band of boy friends were licensed, given cards, in every thing. It isn't to the point to explain that all this was done because so many of them "carelessly" misplaced their lady employers' jewels.

Gigoloing has brought more smiles and jeers for the employee than the employer, however. Doesn't one see neither "too" too? The pathos of a world which demands escorts for women if women go forth at all and which, in the same breath, denies them the minute a woman grows old, whereas a man can "step out" alone or accompanied to the end of the picture?

JEWELS FOR BLONDES.

A wealthy brewer recently married a blonde show girl. He is said to have given her 10 diamond and emerald bracelets, three diamond rings, and a $2,000 pearl necklace. And, after all, what difference does this superfluity of jewelry mean to her, and why in the world should she be any happier with 10 bracelets than with two? The tragedy of too much wealth is that all too often there seems nothing in particular to do with it.

Child Training Is Easy Providing The Child Has An Interest In His Life

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a series of five articles written for the Avalanche and NEA Service by mothers of famous "children." As their part in the observance of National Child Health Day on May 1, they discuss their principles of child training.

BY MRS. WILSON FOLLETT
Mother of Barbara Newhall Follett, 14-Year-Old Author of "The House Without Windows" and "The Voyage of the Norman D."

"You can't teach children—they teach you."
When I first started to teach Barbara, I found her changing before my very eyes. She never has gone to school, for when she was small we lived in the country and there was no good school there. So I began teaching her at home. I found that I had to be on the alert all the time in order to keep up with her.

When she was about four years old, she showed a consistent interest in her father's typewriter and in mine. She was given a typewriter of her own and learned the alphabet and spelling on the typewriter keys.

Found Writing Easy
It always has been my theory that the mechanics of writing was difficult for children. I found with Barbara that she learned the mechanics of typewriting as easily as she learned to manipulate her knife and fork correctly. Then, not having to think about the formation of her letters, an inner stream of expression was turned loose.

I never permitted her to write themes or compositions. I even avoided using the words. I told her that she must always write to someone, or, at least, have someone in mind when she wrote. As a result, she showed a tendency to write letters. And she has written volumes of them. Many of them have been to famous people, and her correspondence with people like Walter de la Mare, William Lyon Phelps, Elinor Wylie, etc.

MATRONS HOSTESSES

Wednesday Club Meets In Hilburn Home

Mesdames M. B. Hilburn and F. M. Maddox were hostesses to the Wednesday Needle Club this week in the Hilburn home 1214 Avenue M. Refreshments of strawberry ice cream and coconut cake were served by the hostesses after an hour of sewing. Those in attendance were Mesdames C. M. Fallenger, W. B. Rushing, C. J. Wagner, Roscoe Wilson, C. S. Wilson, Gus Ford, T. B. Dugan, J. H. Goodman, L. B. Wright, E. L. Kiett, T. W. Thomas, W. B. Atkins, E. L. Robertson, W. N. Campbell, O. Denver, L. C. Majors, of Dallas; Murray Jones.

William Ellery Leonard and many others has been considerable.

I never knew when she started her first book. Barbara has a charming habit of giving presents to other members of the family. Instead of receiving them, on her birthdays.

Books Was a Gift
Three months before her ninth birthday, she started "The House Without Windows," for my birthday gift. She confided in her father, reading him the installments as they came off her typewriter. On her big days, she wrote four to five thousand words; the book was completed just a few days after her birthday.

We stress regularity, common sense and good health measures in her daily program. Barbara eats common-sense food, wears common-sense clothes and goes in for fresh air, sunshine and the out-of-doors. She is enthusiastic about sailing, and that solves the problem of keeping her out of doors. Any child with a real interest in life is easy to train, for he is anxious to do everything that will help attain his end most effectively.

organization rather than one of party principals. "I find in my travels over the state that there are lots of people who vote the democratic ticket while hoping and praying the republican will be elected," said the speaker. He declared it was the duty of every citizen to vote according to the dictates of his conscience rather than that of some party boss, and that citizens now days should form their own opinions as a result of their own thinking and investigation rather than because of the allegiance of their forefathers.

"Men and women of the Southern states are beginning to think for themselves," said the gentleman from San Antonio. "They are beginning to lose some of their sentiment and provincialism. There is no more north or south. The Spanish-American war wiped out Mexico and Dixie. The world might have been left was completely eradicated by the world war."

Talks on Tariffs.
The congressman then launched into a discussion of the tariff question, citing numerous instances of its benefit to American producers. He said if chaos begins at home protection should begin there, also it is the people who pay taxes and who respond to the call of war who deserve first consideration. A protective tariff means better homes, better wages, more pleasures and greater liberty, he declared.

"The people of the Southern states are largely the victims of their own conditions," said Mr. Wurzbach. "The south has always sold on a competitive market. We have the finest soil, the most magnificent climate, and as fine a class of people as may be found anywhere, but the citizens of the north have dollars to our doughnuts largely because they have espoused the cause of republicanism and have had protection for their products."

Talks About Texas.
Reverting to political conditions in Texas, the speaker insisted that the republican party in Texas was entitled to a severe chastisement. For the past seven or eight years he declared, the Texas organization has existed largely for the purpose of appointing postmasters, U. S. marshals, etc., and that is all it stands for it ought to be killed. At this point the speaker was interrupted by Postmaster John L. Vaughan, of this city, who stated that the organization was more than a "pie eating" one, and that Wurzbach had received money for his campaign through this organization. Wurzbach declared he had not, and proceeded to explain the collection and distribution of $1,000 in connection with one C. K. Mc-

Mr. Wurzbach condemned the regime of R. B. Crocker, republican national committeeman, and called the names of several republicans who were working with Crocker, condemning their actions and accusing them of insincerity and infidelity. He declared it was time for the republicans of this state to have higher aspirations than merely obtaining political pie. Discussing the presidential candidates, Mr. Wurzbach said practically all postmasters in Texas were for Hoover since Crocker had recently issued his pronouncement, though previous to that time few had expressed their preference. Postmaster Vaughan again interrupted to ask the speaker if he was for Hoover, whereupon the congressman answered with an emphatic "No."

Wants Uninstructed Delegation.
Mrs. Wurzbach closed his address by making a plea for an uninstructed delegation to both state and national conventions. Paid his respects to the progressive spirit of the west, expressed his great surprise at the marvelous growth of Lubbock, and in a final peroration urged the voters to stand by the principals of the party and vote their sentiments in behalf of better citizenship, better government and higher ideals.

Bremen

soon as he had snapped his pictures he climbed aboard and was in the air bound for New York. His plane took off four minutes after the Ford liner landed.

Miss Herta Junkers, daughter of the Bremen's builder, greeted the barmen and Capt. Koehl in German and shook hands with Fitzmaurice and Balchen.

Miss Junkers announced after a conference with the fliers, that, weather permitting, the Ford plane would take off at 4 a. m. tomorrow, and would fly direct to Washington, D. C. where she and the crew of the Bremen would attend funeral services for Floyd Bennett, who died of pneumonia at Quebec Wednesday after he and Balchen had flown the relief plane here from Detroit.

The Bremen has been temporarily abandoned, and will not be flown later to New York as had been suggested. The members of the crew, after a conference with Junkers officials, decided to leave the Transatlantic plane on Greenly Island until it could be taken off by steamer, and shipped to New York for regrading of the valves and other repairs. It was found that exposure had rendered the motor unfit for use.

Sessions are to continue through today, beginning at 9:30 o'clock this morning, and 200 delegates are expected although only a few had registered from out of town last evening. Rev. and Mrs. L. W. The suit, stated to involve more than $5,000,000 worth of property, contains the same allegations as to property claims as in the divorce suit. It was agreed that the property dispute would be settled in the suit filed Thursday.

Gladys Walker was cast as a missionary, carrying the flag of Christianity.

crossing. Franchise to cross the highway there has been held in abeyance pending further negotiations.

Mayer Woods brought out the point that there was a possibility of intervention from the state highway department.

"Only one half of Avenue H, at the point of the contemplated crossing, is within the city limits," he said. "The west side is under jurisdiction of the state highway department."

The Denver rally will reach Lubbock within a month, Mr. Clarity told Mayor Woods before leaving by his special car for Fort Worth last night. At present, track-laying crews are just south of Petersburg, in Hale county.

Placing of Additional Stop Signs Is Approved.

The commissioners accepted the dedication for the opening of 23rd street from Avenue L to Avenue P.

The dedication was accompanied by a petition from property owners along the street who gave property for the opening. Following the discussion and approval of the location of street crossings for the railroad into the city, the commissioners went into a short discussion with Park Board members, J. B. Maxey and K. N. Clapp, concerning the present park system for the city which will furnish recreation for the entire town.

The placing of 11 additional stop signs were approved by the group. The signs were placed at: two on Texas Avenue at 16th and Texas; one on J at 13th and J; one at L on 13th and L; one at L on Broadway and L; one at K on 13th and K; one at K on 10th and K; two at J on 10th and J and two at H on 10th and H.

The group made plans for the taking of an inventory of the city's entire properties which is to be used in the new accounting system contemplated.

Other routine matters such as approving warrants and bonds were disposed of during the meeting.

CHILD STUDY.

Child study club members, meeting Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Richard White, 1924 15th Street, heard an interesting talk by Mrs. H. T. Kimbro and several club members read papers.

Mrs. Kimbro's talk was on some noted women of America and papers, setting forth the advantages of a home and a public life for women, were read by Mesdames A. V. Weaver, laudie Hurbert and Hub Jones. Mrs. C. E. Maedgen talked on methods of exerting an influence in the home, school, church and community. Mrs. C. C. Lindsey presided at this meeting, which was attended by 10 members.

Batteries Yet Unannounced.

Just who will compose the batteries for the two teams had not been announced at a late hour last night but the balance of the two lineups was fixed. Managers Jim Maloney, of the Colts and Brownlew, of the locals, will throw the following lineups into the tilt:

Umpire Tongate will attend to the officiating.

As an added attraction, B. Sherrod, elongated president of the Board of City Development, will take the hillock and unlimber his soupbone with the opening pitch of the season. The ball will—or at least it is hoped that it will—plunk into a mitt on the hand of Mayor Harley D. Woods. Immediately after this performance the game will get under way.

Additional bleachers, capable of county democratic leaders, including M. M. Crane, Cullen F. Thomas, R. G. Storey and others. Governor Moody announced.

Neither disclosed the exact nature of the conferences, although Governor Moody gave out an interview on the program agreed upon for the precinct conventions of May 5 by Chairman Davidson and Chairman V. A. Collins of the constitutional democrats as Austin Tuesday.

Favors "Dry" Program.

"I believe the program declaring for a dry platform plank for the national convention and a dry candidate who is in favor of it and will support it will be adopted by a majority of democrats in the precinct conventions," Governor Moody said. "That is the program I have advocated since national politics became active in Texas this year and the program I am still advocating. To date I have seen nothing in the nature of an organization opposing this program assume any alarming proportions in the state."

There is no reason why all the men and women who are for a dry platform plank and a dry candidate should not get behind this program and put it over in Texas. The voters of Texas are overwhelmingly in favor of it, and I believe it will be adopted.

"The only hope of the Smith-Ritchie and Reed elements for carrying this state or getting control of the Texas delegation to Houston is by creating a split in the state convention at Beaumont over the prescribed party loyalty pledge and sending a contesting delegation to Houston in the expectation of having it seated by what they suppose will be a Smith majority there."

Outburst of Hitting On Behalf Of Colts, Coupled With Four Miscues From Hubbers Cause Topheavy Loss

Teams Return For Game In This City Today; Burris of Midland Is Star Of The Game.

(Special to The Avalanche.)

MIDLAND, April 26. (AP)—Home runs, two-baggers, triples, and frequent singles were mixed by the Midland colts with four errors on the part of the Lubbock Hubbers here this afternoon and in a cold, driving wind the Colts defeated the Plainsmen by a score of 18 to 3.

Burris, Midland's hurler, was the individual star of the game. Not only did he limit the Hubbers to six scattered hits but also he had a perfect day at bat.

Costly combinations of hits with Lubbock errors accounted for the overwhelming score. Three Lubbock hurlers failed to stop the colts. The victory gave Midland a sweep of the series. Tomorrow both teams journey to Lubbock.

San Angelo Fans Will Rally Back Of Snapper Club

Oil City Bugs Believe Vet Manager Will Lead Team To First Pennant In New West Texas League.

SAN ANGELO, April 26. (AP)—San Angelo will doff her bonnet to Earl (Red) Snapp here Friday afternoon with an attendance at the opening home-game in the West Texas League that backers of the club are hoping will smash first-day attendance records of Abilene, Lubbock, Midland, Hamlin and Coleman, and already local confidence in the ability of the skipper to tag the pennant is beginning to be heard. What Snapp has done with other teams during his career as a baseball man is expected to be duplicated with his West Texas League entry, and that would require bringing home the pennant. Ending in 1925, Snapp whose name has always carried the name of Snappers, and which name has been adopted for the San Angelo team displacing Bronchos, the name under which the city carried a West Texas League entry several years ago through two seasons, won six consecutive pennants in minor league baseball, establish an enviable record. Two of these pennants were won by the Snappers at Paris, Texas, one while Paris, a member of the Texas-Oklahoma league and the other as a member of the Western Association. At York, Nebraska, in the Nebraska state league, Snapp won two pennants, also winning a pennant at Ardmore, Oklahoma, and another at Okmulgee, Oklahoma, both in the Western Association.

T. C. U. Has High Hopes Victory Over Aggies

FORT WORTH, April 26. (AP)—The T. C. U. Horned Frogs are all set to meet the Texas Aggies Friday and Saturday in the first two games of a four-game series. The games will begin the second half of the Frogs' season. Southwest Conference schedule.

Comparing the records of the Frogs and Aggies this season it would seem that the teams are about evenly matched as far as fielding and hitting is concerned. There is little doubt but that the Aggies excel in the pitching department, and this one factor may prove the undoing of the Frogs.

Waco's Shipment Of Hits Arrives In Camp At Last

Cubs Go On Wild Swatting Spree to Trounce Beaumont, 18-4; Two Games Halted by Rain.

(By Associated Press.)

WACO, April 26. (AP)—Waco's shipment of hits, which have been delayed for some time, arrived today and the Cubs used 20 of them to defeat the Beaumont Exporters by the count of 18 to 4. Art Shires hit two home runs, one in the second and one in the third, the first over the left field wall and the second a mighty clout over the right field wall. Buzz Phillips started but the only time the ball was buzzing was when it was coming toward him or past him. Ace Elliott had the game well in hand for the Cubs all the way. Wayne Windle hit a homer on the first pitch in the first round.

Aggies Ready For 1928 Relay Games

Thirty High Schools To Be Represented In Contests On Kyle Field Today and Tomorrow.

COLLEGE STATION, April 26. (AP)—With a probable attendance of more than 150 high school athletes, representing more than 30 Texas high schools, the annual A. & M. high school relay carnival and track meet will be held at Kyle Field Friday and Saturday, April 27 and 28, promises to show one of the largest fields of athletes ever seen on the A. & M. track.

Notices have been received from many high schools all over the state signifying their intention to enter and it is expected that as soon as the results of the district meets are learned more will enter. Some of the schools are entering men in only special events while others are entering complete teams in the meet. Among the first schools to enter a team was the Main Avenue high school of San Antonio, winners of last year's meet. Oak Cliff high school, Dallas, teams of which won the relay last year, is also expected to be among the entries.

The opening day of the meet will be devoted to the relays, and on the second day the track and field meet will be held. The quarter, half and mile relays and the spring medley and distance medley make up the relay program while the track and field meet will consist of all of the usual events except the mile relay.

Just a tasteless dose of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in water. That is an alkali, effective, yet harmless. It has been the standard antacid for 50 years among physicians everywhere. One spoonful will neutralize at once many times its volume in acid. It is the right way, the quick, pleasant and efficient way to kill the excess acid. The stomach becomes sweet, the pain departs. You are happy again in five minutes. Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Don't depend on crude methods.

Hoppe ran out in 29 innings, with clusters of three and four runs. His high run was eight while Layton's best was four.

Matadors Get To Wells In Fourth To Put Over Pair

Peterson, Tech Third Sack-er and Howell Vie For Swatting Honors In Tilt Here Yesterday.

The Tech College Matadors, stinging under the thumb, to four drubbing administered to them Tuesday by the Canyon Normal Buffaloes, came back Friday behind the superb pitching of "Red" Howell to take the long end of a 4 to 1 count—tying the two-game series, one-all.

Howell, though invincible from the start, giving up but two hits, was in trouble for an inning or two, particularly the ninth, when the Buffaloes, true to form, attempted a rally that was cut short only after the bases were filled with one man out, on the shift of a ground-er by Taylor at first and two free passes issued by Howell.

The little right hander, tightened, however, and came out whole after a squally time.

Wells, southpaw, on the mound for the Buffaloes, pitched steadily and was never in danger from hits except in the fourth inning when Peterson, Taylor, Waller and Burnett jumped on him for four singles in succession to put over two runs. Wells delivered an excellent game, striking out ten men in the eight innings he worked.

Peterson, Matador third sacker, led in hitting honors with two singles and a triple out of four trips, but he was closely trailed by Howell, pitcher, who, after singling in the sixth to no avail, swatted one to deep right field in the eighth for the circuit, but was called out at third when he overran the bag. The Buffaloes go from here to Abilene, where they engage in a two game series, from where they go to Brownwood.

THE NUT CRACKER

by Joe Williams

(By Associated Press.)

In a recent Waco-Houston game in the Texas League two players suffered broken legs in the same inning. Mr. O'Goofy wants to know if that isn't the league in which they shoot a ball player when he breaks a leg.

One of the players ran into a fence trying to capture a drive. They're not used to fences in that country.

Dempsey has retired because there are things, he says, that mean more than money to him. If he means his health, he certainly can't hurt himself by returning to the ring these days.

If Dempsey fought again, he wouldn't battle for his health, anyway. Mr. Rickard would give him a little something.

Now the Hawaiians have gone wild over turtle racing. We'd think they would!

The name of one of the leaders in Pyle's cross-country stager is Payne. When he looks at his feet, he knows how he got that name.

Grover Cleveland Alexander won his first game from Pittsburgh, 5 to 0. We're glad to see the boy getting a good break at the beginning of his major league career.

POSTERITY PAYING

A great deal of objection is being expressed by some economic writers and economists who are not writers, that the country is going madly in debt issuing bonds for this purpose and for that purpose, and the general theory expressed by some of these is that we are placing a burden upon posterity. The truth of the matter is, we are planning and building for posterity and if we leave them a burden, we will likewise leave them a legacy. Whatever we have done to develop this country belongs to posterity and we could not rob them of it if we would. Bond issues, however large, if spent honestly and judiciously in the building of roads and by roads we mean hard surface roads; hospitals and by hospitals we mean charity hospitals; schools and by schools we mean free public schools; city halls, and other buildings like court houses, state capitols and the like, if built substantially and permanently, will be something we have left to posterity and it would be something that we could not give unless we gave it on the installment plan. No state, county or municipality is able or ever will be able to take out of current tax collections a sufficient amount to complete these improvements, nor could anyone of these levy a tax sufficiently large to provide for the needed things that must be built with the notes and bonds issues, and if these are honestly provided and the building of these improvements honestly accomplished, we have left no burden on posterity. Of course, public money whether it comes from a bond issue or from taxation, if squandered and used for graft and private advancement is a debt and a burden on posterity, but whatever is spent that builds for the future makes the roads easier for those who come after us and leaves the obligation partly discharged. This can never be called burdensome because we have left them an inheritance of far greater value than the cost will be to them. The only thing to be careful about is to plan well, build substantially and spend the money honestly. Then posterity has been properly treated and we have left our children a legacy in good roads, parks, public schools and the like that they could not provide better for themselves.

WHAT OF ENFORCEMENT?

The Mississippi Legislature has wisely refused to repeal the Stop-Look-and-Listen law, being convinced that it is a measure of merit, and has no doubt resulted in the saving of many lives since its enactment, even though it is not observed as faithfully as it should be. In a recent thoughtful article on the subject of accidents at crossings in Mississippi, President Larry Downs of the Illinois Central summarized the wisdom of this statute as follows: As a matter of fact, the motorist who fails to observe the Stop-Look-and-Listen law is taking a far greater risk than the man who recklessly drives by a red signal light at a street corner. The latter incurs danger of mashing up his fenders in a collision with another car, and perhaps getting a few cuts and bruises and a broken limb, but the motorist who plunges into a railroad train is usually picked up in pieces and carried to the undertaker. The Stop-Look-and-Listen law has saved many lives in the commonwealth. It will save many more if motorists will obey its provisions.

COOLIDGE STILL DISPLEASED

President Coolidge cannot reconcile himself to the idea of the Federal government paying the total price for flood control. He wants the poor, afflicted, impoverished flood sufferers who have been washed away to pay a part of it. If Mr. Coolidge had been president when the yellow fever plague struck this country and when eminent doctors and laymen were giving their services free in a solution of the problem, when men died experimenting with the yellow fever germ in order to find its origin, and the government appropriated large sums for the work of exterminating the yellow fever germ, Mr. Coolidge would have wanted the victims of yellow fever to contribute their part towards yellow fever control. Such a course would be just as consistent as his course is now, because the flood sufferers have already spent millions of dollars in protecting their land, they have spent more in protecting their land than their land is worth. This problem will never be met until it is directed and controlled by the Federal Government and that agency paying the price. Mr. Coolidge has never said anything about the people who have acquired land in the west paying the government back for the cost of irrigation. He never said anything about the farmers in West Texas paying back any money for the expenditure of several million dollars to exterminate the locusts, but if flood sufferers get any aid or protection through the Federal government the president wants them to pay for it. The president has a wonderful idea of agriculture anyway. We are reminded of a remark that Henry Grady made in his 1886 Boston speech, when he talked about the Southern farmer who was planning to make queen olives out of green plums, and take the laurels from the Vermont Yankee who had sold us wooden nutmegs. And we are afraid that the illustrious Grady was not a good prophet because we have made little progress with our plum olives, while the Vermont fellow is still disposing of his wooden nutmegs.

IT'S A BEAUTIFUL WORLD:

"It's a beautiful world." These were among the last words ever uttered by Charles Birger, famous gun man and killer of the old Heron feud fame. He was hanged on Tuesday morning for the murder of Mayor Adams of Illinois City. He claimed that he did not kill Adams but was an accessory after the fact. It is probable that no one knows whose bullet killed Adams, but Birger is responsible for many a death. He had a gang of terrorists and he and his gang thought no more of shooting a man down than they would of killing a hog or a dog. It may be true that gun men met gun men and with these sort, guns only are resorted to in the settlement of disputes. But it was a beautiful world to Birger after all, yet he failed to see its beauty until just before the black cap was adjusted and shut its beauty from his sight forever. It is improbable Birger ever thought the world was beautiful, and we wonder if he thought then it was beautiful to those whom he had slain or caused to be slain. "It is a beautiful world and those who see its beauty are nearly always humane, charitable and peaceful. It is a beautiful world and the time here is too short to spend in quarrelsome wrangling and feud fights. It surely is a beautiful world and its beauty is greatly augmented when men live decently. If Birger had known sooner that it was a beautiful world he would probably still be in it to enjoy its beauty. It was not a beautiful world to him when he was spreading blood and murder over a whole section of country in Illinois, and all for a purpose that he might render it less beautiful to others by selling moonshine liquor. It is a beautiful world but Charles Birger found it out only a few minutes before the end of the world for him.

ECONOMICAL PRODUCTION

Of John Burroughs was one of the world's greatest farmers. If a list of the world's greatest farmers should ever be compiled John Burroughs' name should lead the list. Not only because he had a mind that could appreciate the simple things of life—a personality that carried with it a little of the ruggedness of the mountain, a little of the sunset and the kiss of the breeze, but because in the final analysis John Burroughs was a real honest to goodness farmer. We have never thought of Burroughs as a farmer until the other evening. To us he had always been a naturalist of the first order, but in our reading we found that John Burroughs practiced a principle often neglected, that of economical production. On a little patch of lettuce scarcely larger than our ordinary back yard, old John Burroughs for years harvested $1000 worth of lettuce. He practiced the principle of more lettuce on fewer acres. He made his little lettuce patch earn him his livelihood. John Burroughs used to make as much off of his little lettuce patch as many southern farmers make off of from 10 to 20 acres of cotton. In this respect we are reminded of what a director of agricultural extension work in one of the corn belt states once said in addressing a meeting of county agents. "Today," he said "we are preaching production. We have always done that ever since extension work was started a quarter of a century ago. What we should carry through is not just production but economical production. What do we gain if we get every farmer in this state to produce 100 bushels of corn on every acre planted to corn if we produce that corn at such an added cost that we fail to make a profit. Those sage remarks should be adhered to by us all. We have been approaching this era of more profits per acre for many years. John Deere helped when he hampered out the first steel plow in his ramshackle blacksmith shop. The principles of industry have been gradually adopted by agriculture—the production of more corn or cotton per acre at less cost. Every year the farmers of America are using more fertilizers. This is an indication that we are realizing this principle is worth while. Some of the outstanding farmers in this country, many southern farmers have started the practice of planting less cotton and using more fertilizer, devoting more land to feed crops and to pasture and practicing the economical production of cotton and a more thorough utilization of land. They are practicing the principle of old John Burroughs—the making of more lettuce on fewer acres. We believe this is a fundamental law of good agriculture and a principle that more adhere to with good results whether it be, as in the case with Burroughs with his lettuce or the southern farmer with his cotton.

OUT OUR WAY—

SO THINK WE

We think that when a man undertakes to make a record speed of over two hundred miles a minute, he is certainly courting death, and it does not take long to get an answer to the question.

We think it a funny thing that when a man has an unlimited supply of oil that he can get all of it out of the ground that he can, but there seems to be a system of propping it in the big oil fields, and we are certain that it is the only correct thing.

We think that possibly the Midlanders kept the track for the Hubbers, and caused them to slip up on the first day's game.

We think it would be a good thing to show the local baseball association, for every citizen of Lubbock to attend the opening game of the baseball season of the West Texas league. The Hubbers will be at home at the Merrill Park today and the management would appreciate a full house.

We think that if the fire department needs more men and more equipment and more water pressure that they should be given it, and that without delay.

We think that a soft answer has often been the means of breaking a hard heart, and in doing so it does not cause any trouble to anyone except the fellow whose heart is broken, and that is merely the means of making a better man or a better woman.

We think that with the letting of the contract for the $75,000 Sunday school building by the Methodist congregation at this place and the building of a new Nazarene church on Avenue Q. The recent enlargement of the Episcopal church here, and the general forward movement of the churches of this city, that Lubbock possibly shows a greater church building campaign than any other town on the Plains.

We think that there should be no delay in necessary in the building of the underpasses on the street where the highways and the heavy traffic cross the railroad tracks, for it will simply mean that we are putting off what we know is our duty, and it will be our lot to hear of several fatal accidents on these crossings some of these days in the very near future if something is not done. True, we have been very fortunate so far, but after all Lubbock is getting to be a much larger city than ever before.

We think that Fort Worth will have the largest crowd that ever attended an annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, and possibly it will be one of the most important conventions that has ever been held. The territory that this convention will represent has seen many changes the past year, and several thousand more people are dwelling within the borders of this convention territory which means that more problems will have the attention of the convention than ever before, and then the people of this section will just naturally want to attend.

OPINIONS

HEALTH AND ACCIDENT

Mr. Barth, representing the Ohio State Industrial Commission, which is responsible for the inauguration of the safety movement to reduce preventable accidents—and the vast majority of industrial casualties are preventable—stated this Cincinnati evening the stigma of being highest on the percentage list of accidents and deaths from industrial accidents. There is no excuse for such a situation. In the private life of an individual of the community every resource available and possible will be exhausted to secure and save the lives of his children through their years of susceptibility to diseases peculiar to early childhood, and to guard them from the hazards of ignorance and defenselessness. So, also, the Health Departments of communities spend time, energy and money to conserve the general well being of the citizens through intensive activities with reference to food, sanitation and the observance of all requirements which experience has taught may tend to prevent sickness, the spread of contagion and the extension of dangerous infection. Why, then, is it that when the babe has passed the period of childhood and youth and has become a valuable community unit, that he must face hazard of loss of life or limb in the daily performance of his duty? There is in such a situation neither Christian charity nor economic sense. Quite the reverse—Cincinnati Enquirer

YOUR HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, The Health Magazine

Infections of the lungs and of the breathing tract are no new thing to human beings. They were carefully noted by physicians long before the Christian era. The changes that take place in the lungs in pneumonia were carefully recorded by an Bohemian pathologist named Reklitzsky at the beginning of the nineteenth century. Bronchitis, which is limited to the inflammation of the tubes that carry the air into the lung tissues was differentiated from pneumonia more than a hundred years ago. Today, pneumonia and the inflammations of the breathing tract are the second largest cause of death all over the temperate zone.

Climate Counts
Many scientific studies have been made to find out whether or not climatic conditions were responsible for the high incidence of this type of disorder. A well known British epidemiologist has recently concluded that a drop in the temperature below the normal for the season of the year is likely to be associated with an increased number of deaths from such diseases.

In London, studies have been made to find out just how the fogs may be associated with deaths from bronchitis and pneumonia. Lennox Hill, the noted British physiologist, is convinced that smoke and fog interfere with the passage of sunlight and are thus directly associated with increased mortality.

Records kept for hundreds of years of climatic changes and of the incidence of fog have been studied in relation to the number of deaths from respiratory diseases. There are so many factors involved that it is difficult to draw definite conclusions, but recent studies again seem to show that sudden changes in temperature are more certainly related to bronchitis and pneumonia than the incidence of smoke and fog.

Treatment
One of the main features of these diseases is that they are most fatal in old age and in youth. For this reason records of various kinds of treatment must always be studied in relationship to the ages of the persons treated. Nowadays the most important factor in recovery from pneumonia is skillful nursing. In London during 1920 as recorded by Epidemiologist Hilda Woods, only 18 per cent of 5315 deaths from pneumonia occurred in hospitals and nursing homes, and 22 per cent in a poor-law institutions, whereas 60 per cent of the deaths occurred in patients treated without special nursing at home.

BROWNFIELD A JUNCTION ON PROPOSED ROAD.

Col. Ed Kennedy and his party were here last Thursday in the interest of the new rail line to be built from Sinder, Texas, to Roswell, N. M. He was accompanied by two men who were said to be chief engineer and high freight official of the Katy railroad on leave of absence, and a gentleman who is said to have promoted several townships in the Rio Grande Valley section of Texas.

In his talk before the railroad committee of Brownfield and a few directors of the chamber of commerce, Mr. Kennedy informed them that he was no railroad builder, but a railroad promoter, but that he had found a construction company who would construct the road and turn it over to some company to operate.

The proposal as outlined here would be for one line to run from Snyder to Lamesa, and thence to this city. The other to come via Tahoka or O'Donnell and make a junction point and perhaps a division with railroad shops at Brownfield. Capt. Kennedy was of the opinion that the one from Snyder via Lamesa would be purchased and operated by the T. & P. and the other which would be extended back to Rotan and from Snyder, via Tahoka or O'Donnell, would be taken over by the M. & O. T. and use a joint track from here to Roswell, N. M.

The proposition put up to Brownfield was right of way through the county, 100 acres adjoining the town or terminals and other purposes, and a bonus of $35,000. The party left here for Plains, Tatum and Towell and later phoned back that everything connected with the proposition of the road was coming on nicely and the towns were signing up with them.

Of course, this railroad or railroads are only in the initial stage. They may never be built. They may be built in the next few years. But in the meantime, Brownfield had better keep its hat on to the ground, and at least the publicity derived from this proposition will not hurt us in the least—Terrell County Herald.

WHAT WILL IT BE—NEXT TIME

CHILDHOOD: THE NATION'S BASIC ASSET

That this Nation, through its Government, should embody into its articles of faith a pledge to education and develop its basic asset of childhood and should seek ways and means to apply on a broad scale the principles which have attended their worth on a small scale is the assertion of Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce in the forward to a report of work done by the American Child Health association in its five years of existence.

Dr. S. J. Crumrine, general executive of the association, of which Mr. Hoover is president, made public the report as a preliminary to the celebration of National Child Day on May 1, he said.

"Serving in a voluntary and unofficial capacity and working closely in co-operation with official groups the American Child Health association has, since the day of its formation, helped to discover facts and statistics about child health and to give them the widest possible dissemination.

"The organization has acted as advisor and aid to schools all over the country, and at the invitation of the Governor of Panama has sent staff members to work out a plan of health education for the children in the Canal Zone. It has helped to establish a health education plan into the schools of Belgium and has spread the doctrine of health through education into many countries of Europe, South America and the Far East.

"It has completed a survey and follow-up campaign of milk problems—source, distribution and consumption in over 600 small towns and cities regarded as representative—learning thereby that unsupervised milk-supplies constitute a serious menace to the health of more than 25,000,000 people.

"It has discovered through the study of infant mortality statistics that the high infant death rate, 74 deaths out of every 1,000 births could be cut in half if the care applied to favored children were spread to all.

"It has conducted in 36 cities, having populations from 45,000 to 70,000 a survey of organized facilities public and private for the protection and promotion of the health of children, determining that the children of these communities were getting only half the health-protection they should have.

"It has studied the midwife situation in the South, where the colored midwife, contributing largely to the high maternal mortality, and has worked out a model program which is being widely used.

"The Association has embarked upon a comprehensive nationwide inquiry into schools of the country. Three flying squadrons in the field will test groups of fifth and sixth grade children in seventy cities study in health activities and health instruction in the schools and attempt to determine the correlation between health practices and health results.

"The observance of May 1 as National Child Health Day, inaugurated by the association, has served to bring home the problems of child health to every community through the state boards of health, which are using May Day as a vital part of the official year-round program for children. In one state, 16,000 children were protected against diphtheria through National Child Health Day. In another, 3,773 children were vaccinated against smallpox and 560 unreported births were turned into the Bureau of Vital statistics.

"We believe, in short, that the association has pricked the public conscience and demand more effective protection for children, bringing nearer the day when, in the words of our president, Mr. Hoover, our democracy will finally prove itself by recognizing the rights of the child equally with the rights of the adult citizen."—American Child Health Association (New York).

Marines' Base Is Moved Nearer To Location of Raid

Intense Excitement Over Nicaragua On Report Of Latest Maneuvers By U. S. Forces There.

MANAGUA, Nic., April 26.—Intense excitement prevailed along the east coast of Nicaragua today as the marine base was moved some 150 miles further north nearer the scene of rebel operations.

Natives and employees who fled from the Pis Pis mining district in the face of the advance of rebel general Augusto Sandino brought with them reports of his depredations as he came eastward from Matagalpa. Tales were told by Nicaraguans arriving on the coast of murder and plunder by the insurgents especially of those who did not sympathize with Sandino's objective—driving the marines from Nicaragua.

Some Scoff at Reports
Brigade headquarters said these tales were exaggerated, scoffed at reports that Sandino had a large and well mounted force and announced the removal of the east coast base from Bluefields to Puerto Cabezas (Bramans Bluff).

Only one foreigner was definitely known to have escaped before the rebel advance into the mining region. Harry Amplett, British manager of the La Luz Y Los Angeles mine was safe at Puerto Cabezas.

The fate of all other foreigners in the region was in doubt but it was hoped that it might be cleared up somewhat with the return of marine planes sent on a scouting expedition over the region.

Brigade headquarters said the plane flew over the Pis Pis district, but that a small mechanical difficulty forced one of the men to alight at Jalapa in Nueva Segovia. The base from which the planes flew was kept secret for military reasons.

Reports in Conflict
Interest centered in the fate of George B. Marshall, assistant manager of La Luz. The customs collector at Puerto Cabezas reported to his chief at Managua on Tuesday that Marshall had been slain. The Associated Press correspondent at Bluefields, which is eighty miles further from the mining district than Puerto Cabezas, sent a dispatch yesterday saying:

"Assistant Manager Marshall is held by General Giron, who commands the raiders. All commissary supplies, mules and ore were taken. Marshall reports being well treated as long as Giron stays by him.

"The Bohemian mine was looted. An attempt is being made to work the same by the raiders. It is thought that Marshall is being held to await."

Brigade headquarters said it had a report that Marshall had been captured but no report that he had been released.

The Bluefield dispatch also said that First Lieutenant Tebbes of the marines had to retire after making contact with the rebels "due to overwhelming opposition."

Now Has Larger Patrol
"He is out again with a larger patrol," it continued. "All supplies the raiders couldn't take from both mines and natives were destroyed. The mine was made up of Honduras, Costa Rica and Nicaraguans and the raiders were well armed and mounted. The nature of the land makes operations difficult."

The Managua brigade headquarters denied that the marines were forced to retire and also that Sandino had 500 men with him. They believed that Sandino had no more than 150 men and scant ammunition.

Bus Driver Succumbs To Injuries Received When Brushed by Passing Automobile.

(By Associated Press)
DALLAS, April 26.—The L. Smith, 62, wealthy Collins county farmer, and Jack Rambo, 49, clerk in a dry goods store at McKinney, were released today on bond on charges of failing to stop and render aid in a fatal accident near here last night.

William Vernon Miller, 27, Wichita Falls bus driver, was killed and Miss Jessie Ragdale, 16, of Victoria, suffered injuries which caused amputation of her left leg above the knee.

Miller and Miss Ragdale were struck by an automobile which passed while they were standing in the road after Miss Ragdale's car and Miller's bus had been in collision, scraping the fenders. Miller's skull was fractured and he died at 3:30 a. m. today without regaining consciousness. Miss Ragdale was reported very weak from loss of blood at a hospital here tonight.

Smith said today that he was not aware that his car struck anything at the spot at which he was told Miller and Miss Ragdale were standing. He said that he remembered his car scraping against another machine, but so slightly that he did not dream that anyone could have been injured. His first knowledge of a serious accident came today when he learned that Dallas county officers were seeking him, he said.

Aged Pair Ruled To Stand Trial In Poisoning Charge

Witnesses Say Woman Purchased Poison; Others Declare She Chased Men From Premises.

(By Associated Press)
TEXARKANA, Ark., April 26.—A sister and a brother, wrinkled and gray from more than sixty years of hardships, must stand trial jointly here for assault with intent to kill by poisoning.

The woman, Mrs. Nancy Lynn, 63, and her brother, Robert Morris, 61, were held to the grand jury under bonds of $500 at the close of a preliminary hearing in municipal court here late today. The two were arraigned jointly in connection with the placing of a large quantity of arsenic in a community well at Fort Lynn, Ark., resulting in the illness of 25 persons on April 3.

During the morning the aged pair sat side by side in the courtroom and heard the state pile up circumstantial evidence. During the afternoon defense witnesses sought to prove that Mrs. Lynn and her brother had no connection with the poison plot, and both defendants took the stand to deny the charges.

Eight witnesses testified for the state. J. R. Goldman, owner of the lumber camp at Fort Lynn and one of the poison victims, told of having had considerable trouble with Mrs. Lynn over the sale of timber to him in her children. He testified that the aged woman had caused his arrest on charges of grand larceny in connection with the removal of timber from the land and said that on two occasions Mrs. Lynn used a shotgun to chase his workmen from the woods.

Physicians and chemists testified they found about a pound of poison in the well bucket from which the lumber camp employees drank. Major Duke, Fouke druggist, told of selling a pound of poison to Mrs. Lynn a few days before the community was stricken. Duke said that a day or two after the poisoning had been arrested Mrs. Lynn tried to return a package of poison to his store.

AFTERMATH OF MEET

Formation of Poultry Assn. Looks Easy

Two definite conclusions were evident as result of the meeting Wednesday night to secure the co-operation of South Plains towns and counties in a poultry products marketing organization. County Agent D. F. Eaton said yesterday.

The first is that the difficulty will be in finding a man capable and willing of assuming the duties of the organization rather than in securing the co-operation of poultry growers.

The other is that it will be a great deal easier to organize a poultry marketing association than an association to market any other product, such as cotton, Mr. Eaton said.

Quoting a remark of Dr. Harrington, made during the day, Mr. Jones said "Texas Tech needs and could wisely spend two million dollars right now."

"You have, at least, an embryo state here within your own territory," he said. Dr. Harrington paid special praise to the work of the school of Home Economics.

Lets Jones Hear Objections To Flood Measure As Amended In Changes Made By House.

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, April 26.—President Coolidge having expressed objection to day to some of the house amendments to the Mississippi river flood control bill, the measure must go to conference where efforts will be made to make such changes as will meet presidential views.

The president's objections were made known to Chairman Jones, of the senate commerce committee, author of the $225,000,000 measure, and will be outlined in more detail in a memorandum which Mr. Coolidge will send to the senator tomorrow.

Roy D. McKinney, classified advertising manager of the Avalanche Journal paid $5 yesterday to learn that his automobile wouldn't pull the east hill of the arroyo in high noon. It came about in this way. The local Hudson dealer, Harry Padillo told Roy that the only six-cylinder auto that would pull the hill in high noon, starting from a dead stop at the foot, was his own beloved product. Roy went out and was convinced of the Hudson's ability but remonstrated that any old automobile would do the same thing. Arroyo led to the more concrete proposition of a wager. Roy tied to home and produced his gasoline buggy. Since he's 53 years old, you can figure out the result for yourself.

Canyon Team Has Unique Method

A "flivver tour"—believed by team members to be unique in the annals of Texas intercollegiate athletics—is being started by the West Texas State Teachers College Buffaloes in order to keep their baseball schedule that spring.

Leaving here the team will "ferd" it to Abilene for a series with McMurry college.

Despite the transportation trials and tribulations of the Buffaloes they have a creditable team as shown by the record they have made to date.

Says Move For Equal Rights Leaps Ahead

PARIS, April 26.—The most significant step in the advancement of women since the first equal rights convention in Seneca Falls in 1848 drew up a declaration calling for the removal of all forms of the subordination of women comes 80 years later with the presentation of an equal rights treaty to the Pan-American conference in Havana in 1928.

As the first feminist convention put into definite form the demands of women for an equal status with men for which we today are still working, so the committee representing the National Woman's Party attending the conference of the 21 republics of the western hemisphere has first offered the question for international action.

The problem of full civil and political equality for women has been officially acknowledged as one demanding world consideration and a raised to the position of a world problem. The Pan-American conference has recommended the question as belonging to this class by granting our women a hearing before their plenary sessions—a privilege which had formerly been reserved for high officials like the president of the United States.

After hearing the appeal of the women from the National Woman's party the conference authorized by unanimous consent the appointment of a committee of 21 women to investigate and report back to the next conference, thus taking the same action on the question of equality for women as on other international affairs to be considered by the union of all the American states.

This second great advance toward the equality of women is, like the first, brought about by the initiative of the women of the United States. With the increased speed of the modern world we have not had to wait 50 years to see the first victory for the new policy. The appointment of the committee of women virtually concedes our contention. This advance made in the western hemisphere will moreover act as a spur to the older hemisphere of the east which cannot

RICH CITY FLOODED

Wealthy Alabama Town Is Under Water

BREWTON, Ala., April 26 (AP).—Brewton, said to be the wealthiest place per capita in the United States, was a city on boats today.

The inhabitants, their homes and places of business inundated by the waters from two swollen creeks, used every available craft to carry on business and relief.

The town has been without rail communication for two days and there was slim chance that service would be restored before another 24 hours.

With hundreds of persons driven from the partly submerged houses, many quartered in the court house and other high places, relief work well organized and there was no suffering.

No loss of life has been reported although many nearby rural settlements are under water and isolated.

A "POLITICAL VEHICLE"

This Is Allegation On McNary-Haugen Bill

WASHINGTON, April 26 (AP).—Debate on the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill was opened in the house today with a charge by a Southern democrat that the bill was being used as a political vehicle to carry Vice President Dawes to the White House.

Representative Arnold of Louisiana, ranking democratic member of the house agriculture committee, brought Mr. Dawes' name into the discussion. He said that an "open" lobby called the corn belt wanted the bill voted in an attempt to make it appear that efforts in the always difficult fight against fear and prejudice which form the greatest obstacles to woman's advancement.

Feminists in the other continents—Europe, Asia, and Africa—will know of our achievements and will follow by presenting before international conferences where their countries are represented demands similar to ours for an equal rights treaty.

ANNE AUSTIN "SAINT AND SINNER"

THIS HAS HAPPEND

Ward of the state orphanage since she was four, Sally Ford is "famed out" to Clem Carson, son of the summer she is 16. He also hires David Nash, athlete and student, for summer work. When Carson makes remarks about David's friendship for Sally, David deals him a terrific blow.

They run away and join a carnival. David as cook's helper and Sally as a sideshow disguised as "Princess Lalla," crystal gazer in Capital City, location of the orphanage. Sally is recognized when the orphans troop in, chaperoned by a beautiful "Lady Bountiful." Sally learns from Arthur Van Horne, a handsome easterner visiting in Capital City, that the "Lady Bountiful" is Enid Barr, wife of a wealthy New York man.

One night Sally goes to the show train to visit David and returns alone through the dark streets. A car draws up beside her and Van Horne helps her in and drives her to the show grounds. He tells her that Enid Barr believes her to be Sally Ford and is working to have her returned to the orphanage. As they near the show grounds, Van Horne leans forward and in flattering tones tells Sally she has a big future as a musical comedy actress and that he wants to take her to New York and give her a year in a dramatic and dancing school.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXV

As long as she lived, Sally Ford would remember with shame that for one moment she was tempted by Arthur Van Horne's offer to prepare her for a stage career in New York. She had "played-acted" all her life; her heart's desire before she had met David had been to become an actress, and in that one moment when she knew that realization of her ambition lay within her grasp she wanted to stretch out her hands and seize opportunity.

Her eyes glistened; she gasped involuntarily with delight. If Van Horne had not been nasty, if he had not snatched her to him with a strangled cry of triumph as his black eyes—mocking no longer, but wide and brilliant with desire—read the effect of his words, she might have committed herself, have promised him anything. But he did touch her, and her flesh instinctively recoiled, for every nerve in her body was still athrill with David's goodnight kiss.

"No, no! Don't touch me!" she shuddered. "I won't go! You know I love David!" she wailed, covering her face with her hands. "Why won't you let me alone?" Van laughed, started back in his seat and crossed his arms upon his breast. "I can wait until you have your little tummy full of carnival life and of hiding from the police," he told her in his old, nonchalant way. "Incidentally I have always dreamed the fact that conquest is so damnably easy. It is a new experience to me—this being refused, and I suspect that I'm enjoying it. Now—shall I say goodnight, since we've reached the carnival lot? It's not goodby, you know, Sally. I assure you I'm admirably persistent. And remember, if Enid tries to make a nuisance of herself, you can always tell her to Van. Good night, Sally, you adorable, ungrateful little wretch! No kiss? Perhaps it is better so. I'm afraid I should not care for the brand of lipstick that Princess Lalla uses."

Sally did not tell David of Van Horne's offer, for on Saturday, the last day of the carnival in Capital City, the day developed a temperate which caused Gus, who had acted as volunteer surgeon, to exclude all visitors, even Sally.

Apparently Enid Barr had been convinced of Bybee's gallant lies that little orphaned Betsy had been mistaken and that "Princess Lalla" was not "Sally Ford" playing-acting, but it was not until the show train was rolling out of the state in the small hours of Sunday morning that the girl dared breathe freely.

Sunday on the show train, was a happy day, the happiest that Sally had ever known in her life. Freaks and dancers, barkers and concessionaires, all the members of that weirdly assorted family the carnival mingled in a joyous freedom from work and worry, singing together, reminiscing, gambling, gossiping.

The last week, except for the storm, had been an excellent one, money was free, spirits high. Even Mrs. Bybee, hovering like a mother hen over David's good-natured, inclined to remonstrate and give advice. Sally, whose talent for exquisite darning had been discovered by the women and girls, sat on the edge of David's berth, her lap full of flesh and beige and grummet silk stockings, her needle flying busily her lips curved with a smile of pure delight, as she listened to the surge of laughter and song and talk. The midge, "Pitty Sings" perched on the window ledge of David's berth, a comical pair of spectacles across her infinitesimal nose, was reading aloud to David from one of her own tiny books, and David was listening, but his eyes were fixed worshipfully upon Sally and now and again his left hand reached out and patted her busy fingers or twirled the hanging braid of her hair.

Oh, it was a happy day, and Sally was sorry to have it end. But the show had to go on. The train wheels could not click forever over the rails. Monday, with its bustle and confusion and bathos and inevitable performances, lay ahead. But they were far out of the state which held Clem Carson, the orphanage, Enid Barr, Arthur Van Horne and all other enemies to freedom when the train did stop at last, on the outskirts of a town of 10,000 inhabitants.

Carnival routine had already become an old story to Sally; she no longer minded the curious customs of villagers, the crude advances of dressed-up young male "rubes." The glauco had worn off, but in its place had come a deep contentment and a sympathetic understanding, born on that happy 8. day when the relaxed carnival family had shown her its heart and hopes. She was glad to be one of them, to be earning her living by giving entertainment and happiness—fake though her crystal-gazing was—to thousands of people whose lives were blighted with monotony.

During their first week in the new territory business was even better than the Bybees had dared hope. Positively the only calamity that befell the carnival was the discovery that Babe, the fat girl, had lost five pounds, due to her loudly confessed but unrequited passion for the carnival's hero, David Nash.

On Wednesday David was permitted to get up, and that afternoon for the first time he witnessed Sally's performance as "Princess Lalla." She had become so proficient in her intuitions regarding those who sought knowledge of "past, present and future" that his smiling, amused attentiveness to her "readings" did not embarrass her.

When the show was over, she joined him proudly her little brown-painted hands clinging to his arm, her face upturned adoringly to his, as she patted at his side on a tour of the midway. It was then that her dream came true. At last she was "doing the carnival" with a "boy friend," like other girls. And David played up magnificently, buying her hot dogs, salt water taffy, red lemonade—the two of them drinking out of twin straws from the same glass.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday morning before show time the two wandered about the village to which the carnival had journeyed the night before. It was heavenly to be able to walk the streets unafraid. David walked with head high, shoulders squared, unafraid to look any man in the face, and Sally could have cried with joy that he was free again, for Bybee had assured them that there was not the slightest chance of extradition on the charges which still stood against the two in their native state.

Some day, somehow, the cloud against them would be lifted, and David could walk the streets of Capital City as proudly as he walked these village streets.

With money in their pockets, they could afford to buy all the necessities and little luxuries which their enforced flight from the Carson farm had deprived them of. Sally, her little face enchantingly grave and wise, chose ties and socks and shirts for David, and almost forgot to bother about her own needs. And David in another part of the village "general store," bought, blushing but undaunted, little pink silk brassieres and silk jersey knickers and silk stockings for the girl he loved. When she saw them she burst into tears, hugging them to her breast as if they were living, feeling things.

"Why, David, darling!" she sobbed and laughed. "I've never before in all my life had any silk underwear or a pair of silk stockings! I'm afraid to wear them!"

"Don't you see them then? Have to wash them. Oh, the dear things! The lovely, precious things!"

"And here's something else!"

David said to her that Saturday morning.

They were in the still-deserted Palace of Wonders, their purchases spread out on Sally's platform.

"Give me your hand and shut your eyes," David commanded gently, with a throb of excitement in his voice.

She obeyed, but when she felt a ring being slipped upon the third finger of her left hand her eyes flew open and found a sapphire in the light. For the ring which David had bought for her was a plain loop of white gold, with a deep-blue sapphire in an old-fashioned Tiffany mounting, such as tradition has made sacred to engagement rings.

"Oh, David!" She laid her hand against her cheek, pressing the stone so hard that it left its many-faceted imprint upon her flesh. Then she had to kiss it and David had to kiss it—and her.

"I wish it could have been a diamond," David deprecated. "I suppose all girls prefer diamond engagement rings. But—"

"Oh, David, it is an engagement ring!" she breathed, then flung herself upon his breast, her hands clinging to his shoulders.

"Of course it is, precious idiot!" he laughed. Very gently but insistently he forced her face upward, so that their eyes met and clung. His were boyishly ardent but solemn, hers were misted over with tears, but brighter and bluer than the stone upon her finger. "I don't know when we can be married, Sally, but—I wanted you to have a ring and to know that I'll always be thinking and planning, and—oh, I can't talk. You want to be engaged, don't you Sally? You love me—enough?"

"I adore you. I love you so that I feel I am not even half a person when you're not with me. I couldn't live without you, David," she said solemnly.

They were still sitting there, talking, planning, making love shyly, but ardently, when Gus, the barker, mounted the box outside the tent and began to ballyhoo for the first show of the morning.

"Eleven o'clock and I'm not in make-up yet and you've got to run the wheel for Eddie today," Sally cried in dismay, jumping to her feet and gathering up her scattered purchases and presents.

As the day wore on, with show after show drawing record crowds for a village of its size, "Princess Lalla" gazed more often into the shining blue depths of a small sapphire than into the magic depths of her crystal. But perhaps the sapphire had a magic of its own, for never had her audience been better pleased, never had quarters been thrust so thick and fast upon her.

At half-past nine that night Gus the barker, had not quite finished his "spiel" about the Princess Lalla when the girl, whose eyes had been fixed trance-like upon her ring, saw a woman suddenly begin to ascend the steps to the platform. Before her startled eyes had traveled upward to the woman's face Sally knew who it was. For 12 years that big, stiffly corseted, severely dressed body had been as familiar to her as her own. Instantly, though her blood had turned instantly to ice water in her veins, Sally's right hand closed over her left to conceal the sapphire. Thelma had not been permitted to keep even a bit of blue glass—
