Social studies class casts its own ballots

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Vice President George Bush, in what he surely hopes is an early indication of today's eventual results, scored a substantial victories in a mock Super Tuesday election held during a Travis Elementary School social studies class Monday.

The idea for the mock election was social studies educator Chrissie Mee's. Earlier this summer Mrs. Mee had students write opinion pieces on Lt. Col. Oliver North's role in the Iran-Contra affair.

The election Monday covered four races — the presidential, the 142nd judicial district, the U.S. senatorial and the State Board of Education.

While 26 class members cast ballots, only 21 were present for Monday's interview an "exit poll." Not every student voted in every race.

Fifteen of the students Monday dubbed themselves a Republican, none said they were a Democrat and six said they were neither.

Bush defeated Sen. Robert Dole 15-4 in the presidential race. Though not a candidate any longer, former Secretary of State Alexander Haig garnered one vote.

Democratic hopefuls Michael Dukakis and Richard Gephardt got two and one votes respectively.

"My mom voted for Dukakis, though I don't know why," said Elizabeth Friday, 12. "I don't know anything about him," said the girl who cast her vote for Bush.

"He's 63, the vice president and wise. He knows about the (oil) crisis in Texas right now," continued Elizabeth on her choice.

Allen Champion, 11, said he though the candidate with the most name recognition usually comes out on top, and that's why he voted for Bush.

Near-record vote possible in Texas

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A near-record number of Texans may go to the polls today to select delegates to the Republican and Democratic national conventions and their parties' nominees for hundreds of statewide, regional and local offices.

Polls are open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., with Democratic precinct caucuses scheduled to begin at 7:15 p.m. and Repbulican precinct conventions slated at 8:30 p.m.

Texas' first-time participation in the Super Tuesday presidential sweepstakes moves all the primaries from the first Saturday in May to today. There are no May primaries.

Polls released over the weekend show Vice President George Bush leading in the Republican race in his adoptive home state with support from roughly 60 percent of those surveyed. Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas is running second with about 15 percent, followed by former televangelist Pat Robertson and Congressman Jack Kemp of New York. The names of former Delaware Gov. Pierre du Pont and former Secretary of State Alexander Haig — both of whom dropped out of the race in February — remain on the ballot.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis leads the weekend polls of Democrats, with 25 to 30 percent. Civil rights activist Jesse Jackson and Congressman Richard Gephardt of Missouri are running second and third, followed by Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee at about 12 percent.

The polls show single-digit support for former Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon. Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, who dropped out after the New Hampshire primary, remains on the ballot along with right-wing extremists Lyndon LaRouche Jr. and David Duke, Dallas oilman William A. Williams and Ohio educator Norbert Dennerll Jr.

Secretary of State Jack Rains says today's turnout could pass the record combined primary turnout of 2.3 million set in 1972. "We'll exceed the 1.6 million turnout we had in 1986," Rains predicts. "I also feel confident we will suprass the 1.8 million turnout in the 1984 primaries."

For the first time since 1976 and only the second time in history, the Democrats are using a secret-ballot primary, based on results in each of the 31 state Senate districts, to choose 119 of their 197 to 214 delegates to the July 18 national convention in Atlanta. Precinct caucuses this evening will begin the long process of selecting 64 of the Democratic delegates.

The primary results will determine all 111 of the Republican delegates to the August national convention in New Orleans. Each candidate may win delegates based on his showing statewide and in each of the state's 27 congressional districts.

Democrats in 19 other states and Republicans in 16 others — most of them in the South — will also choose their delegates today. All told, Super Tuesday will decide about 35 percent of the delegates to the national conventions.

In the race for U.S. senator from Texas, three-term incumbent Lloyd Bentsen faces San Antonio professor Joe Sullivan in the Democratic primary.

Lebanese kidnappers free British relief worker, Syrian aide

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A British relief worker and his Syrian aide were freed today, five days after being taken captive in south Lebanon, a Sunni Moslem leader said.

"They have been delivered to me. They are in my house now and they're in good health," said Mustafa Saad, the Sunni leader whose Nasserite militia controls the southern port city of Sidon.

He referred to Briton Peter Coleridge, 44, Middle East coordinator of the British Oxfam relief agency, and Omar Traboulsi, a 31-year-old Syrian who is the agency's representative in Lebanon. They were abducted Thursday at Sidon's Ein el-Hilweh Palestinian refugee camp.

Saad told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that representatives of Fatah-Revolutionary Council, the radical faction headed by Abu Nidal, turned the two captives over to him at his house in Sidon at 3:50 p.m.

The release of Coleridge and Traboulsi leaves 22 foreigners missing and presumed kidnapped in Lebanon. They are nine Americans, four Frenchmen, three Britons, one Irishman, one Italian, one West German, one Indian, and two unidentified men. The longest held is Terry A. Anderson, 40, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, who was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Lebanese security sources have said Abu Nidal's guerrillas seized the two Oxfam officials when they saw Coleridge taking pictures of parts of Ein el-Hilweh.

The two men were taken captive after attending a 30-minute meeting at the office in Ein el-Hilweh of the Ghassan Kanafani foundation, a Palestinian charity that receives aid from Oxfam.

Saad promised Thursday that Coleridge and Traboulsi would be released "within hours." On Friday, the two men were still in captivity, and Saad said his militia might have to consider breaking its alliance with Palestinian factions.

Saad also called on "all foreigners, Easterners and Westerners alike, to leave Lebanese because the Lebanese parties, the security systems and the Palestinian people in the camps cannot protect the foreigners who provide them with humanitarian assistance."

Most Palestinians are Sunni Moslems. Most of the foreign hostages in Lebanon are believed held by Shiite Moslems.

Arab policeman slain, wrapped in flag

JERICHO, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Palestinians stabbed to death an Arab policeman suspected of aiding Israel and wrapped his body in a Palestinian flag, and another Arab was killed today by Israeli gunfire, hospital officials and witnesses said.

The suspected collaborator was slain in a refugee camp near Jericho, the reports said, the second killing of a suspected collaborator in the occupied territories since Palestinian unrest began Dec. 8.

The army confirmed that the body of Nabil Juma Farah, 30, had been found in the Aqbat Jaber refugee camp, but said it was investigating the cause of his death.

According to U.N. figures, 83 Arabs have been killed by Israelis since the riots began in the lands Israel captured during the 1967 Middle East war.

Elsewhere in the West Bank, doctors said three male protesters were wounded today by Israeli gunfire and Arab women heeded underground calls to demonstrate.

Also today, the military said four army officers who were unarmed when three PLO guerrillas commandeered their car and went on to hijack a bus Monday were sentenced to 35 days in jail for not carrying weapons.

The major and three lieutenants were on their way to an army sporting event and were in track suits. The four fled when the guerrillas opened fire on their car, the army reported.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said the bus hijacking in which the guerrillas and three Israeli hostages were killed was initiated by the same element that is behind three months of Arab rioting in the occupied lands.

"These are the same people who incite violence in the territories," Shamir said on Israel radio after the attack in southern Israel. "We shall not tire fighting them."

Also today in the West Bank village of Mazraa Sharqiya, 10 miles northwest of Ramallah, family members and the Arab-owned Palestine Press Service blamed Jewish settlers for the shooting death of Khader Mohammed Hamideh.

Hamideh, a 45-year-old coffee shop owner, died of a gunshot wound to the heart, said Dr. Yasser Obeid, director of Ramallah Hospital.

A man who identified himself as Hamideh's nephew and spoke on condition of anonymity said Israeli settlers entered the village today and shot his uncle without provocation as he stood outside his home.

Hospital officials in Jericho said the Arab police officer, of the nearby Aqbat Jaber refugee camp died Monday night of three stab wounds to the chest and stomach.

Local residents, who demanded anonymity, said Farah's body was wrapped in the outlawed Palestinian flag and dropped at his mother's doorstep inside the refugee camp, where 2,600 Palestinians live.

They said the army detained seven camp residents in connection with the slaying.

West Virginia tourists injured

JERUSALEM (AP) — A bus carrying American tourists from Israel to Egypt today skidded on a wet highway east of the occupied Gaza Strip and flipped over, injuring all 56 people on board, hospital officials and radio reports said.

The bus was taking members of the United Methodist Church, West Virginia Conference, on a tour of the Middle East, said a church spokeswoman in Charleston, W.Va.

Debbie McGraw, a church secretary, said the accident injured 55 tour members and the bus driver.

The bus was carrying lay people and clergy from various parts of West Virginia as well as relatives from Virginia and possibly other states, McGraw said.

The U.S. Embassy initially said all the passengers were from West Virginia. It refused to identify any of the tourists.

Latest AIDS book criticized

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK — AIDS experts have sharply criticised a book by the sex experts Dr. William Masters and Virginia Johnson that claims to find wide spread of AIDS among heterosexuals.

"They have not done even the most rudimentary things to establish any representativeness of their results," says Dr. June Osborn, a virologist, pediatrician and dean of the school of public health at the University of Michigan.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Warming trend anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Tonight should be chilly, but Wednesday will bring warmer trends, forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport said.

Cloudiness should be decreasing tonight and the low will dip into the lower 30s. Winds will be from the south at 5-15 mph.

Wednesday will see more sun and warmer temperatures with a possible high in the mid 60s. Winds should be from the northwest at 5-15 mph.

The record high for Monday was set 16 years ago when it hit 89. The record low for this morning was set in 1932 when it dropped to 18.

STATE

A cold front and some upper level disturbances produced showers and thunderstorms across a vast area of Texas today with most of the state expected to get rainfall.

The showers and thunderstorms will linger across eastern portions of the state tonight although clouds will be decreasing from the west tonight and Wednesday.

A cold front stretched from North Central Texas into the Lower Pecos Valley and was combining with the upper level disturbances to produce light snow of the Panhandle and northern portions of the South Plains and showers and thunderstorms in North Texas and Southeast Texas and scattered showers in South Texas and Southwest Texas.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 30s and 40s, ranging from the 20s in the Panhandle to the 50s in extreme South Texas.

Highs Wednesday will be in the 50s and 60s over most of West Texas except in the Big Bend area where readings will climb into the upper 70s, in the 50s and 60s across North Texas and in the 60s in South Texas.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 40s and 50s, ranging from the 30s in Northwest Texas to the upper 60s in South Texas. Extremes ranged from 33 at Amarillo and Guadalupe Pass to 69 at Victoria.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 48 at Wichita Falls, 57 at Fort Worth, 61 at Waco, 68 at Austin, 67 at San Antonio, 68 at Houston, 67 at Corpus Christi and Brownsville, 49 at San angelo, 35 at Lubbock, 41 at Midland and 46 at El Paso.

NATION

The weather seemed springlike across much of the nation early today, with mild temperatures and rainshowers common.

But on Monday, a severe thunderstorm struck north-central Texas, producing hail an inch in diameter in some places. Lightning sparked numerous grass fires.

Milder, springlike thunderstorms developed across parts of northern Texas and Oklahoma, while showers extended across western Missouri, western Iowa, parts of Kansas, northwest Oklahoma, the Texas Panhandle, western Louisiana and southeast Texas. Light rain covered much of southern Minnesota, Wisconsin and parts of lower Michigan.

Rain mixed with sleet and wet snow fell in northern Wisconsin, while snowfall in the northern Plains diminished late Monday. Some light snow extended from western Nebraska across parts of the Dakotas to northern Minnesota. An inch of wet snow was reported at Duluth, Minn., early today.

Windy conditions covered portions of the northern and central high Plains. Winds gusted to between 40 and 50 mph throughout Monday evening and early today at Rapid City, S.D.

Other than scattered light rain in western Washington, the western third of the nation was dry, as was the East Coast and much of the Southeast.

Mild temperatures prevailed over much of the nation, and even the colder air in the Rockies and northern Plains lacked a wintry punch.

The high for the nation Monday was 88 at Thermal, Calif.

The forecast for today called for showers and thunderstorms from southern and eastern Texas across eastern Oklahoma to the lower and middle Mississippi Valley; scattered showers from lower Michigan to Alabama late in the day; rain or snow from northeast New Mexico and northwest Texas to upper Michigan, with snow likely over Minnesota and the eastern Dakotas; sunny skies over the Atlantic Coast states and west of the Rockies, except for light rain spreading into western Washington state; strong winds over south Texas and the northern high Plains.

Much the nation is expected to have highs in the 50s or 60s. Highs will be in the 30s and 40s from the central Rockies across the central and northern Plains, from the upper Mississippi Valley to upper Michigan, and from upstate New York to northern and central New England; 40s from northern New Mexico to central Oklahoma; and 70s and lower 80s in California, the desert Southwest and from southern Texas to the southern Atlantic Coast.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from zero at Yellowstone, Wyo., to 73 at Key West, Fla.

Rain and a few thunderstorms will be ending over the west and north Wednesday. Lows tonight lower 60s north to mid 60s in the southeast. Highs Wednesday mostly in the 80s.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight, decreasing cloudiness and cold with lows in lower 30s. North wind 5 to 10 mph. Wednesday, sunny and warmer with highs in mid 60s. Wind northwest 5 to 15 mph.

'Products of future' in design show

CHICAGO (AP) — Interested in a staple gun that joins broken bones? How about a ceramic sushi knife that leaves no trace of that unpleasant metallic aftertaste? Or maybe a robot caddy for golfing?

These and other innovations are on display at this year's National Design and Engineering Show, intended to give engineers a vision of "products of the future," said Jim Greif, a show spokesman.

The theme of the maze of exhibits at the McCormick Place exposition center is "the impact of product design on global competitiveness," Greif said.

"Although our exports have gone up since the dollar's decline, they haven't gone up nearly as much as people had predicted," Greif said. "Most American companies are not geared for selling abroad."

Take refrigerator exports, for example.

"The American refrigerator market was basically killed off" because an 18-cubic-foot fridge won't fit in a typical kitchen in developing countries, said another show spokesman, Dave Dasgupta.

"If you send these bulky things abroad, you don't have a market for it," he said. By contrast, when the Japanese began selling cars in the United States, they totally redesigned the interiors to suit Americans' larger physiques and longer legs.

The four-day show, which began Monday and is sponsored by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, features exhibits by 763 companies from 40 states, Japan, Canada, Austria and Britain.

Among the more unusual products featured is the Japanese-made ceramic knife.

Developed by Kyocera Corp. of Kyoto, the knife is used by restaurants in Japan but has not been marketed to consumers in this country, said Joe Lewis, a district sales manager for Kyocera's American subsidiary.

The $35 knife is made of zirconia, a ceramic material that is tougher than ordinary ceramics, lighter than steel, sharp enough to slice flesh and cuts a smoother, less jagged line than ordinary knives, Lewis said.

The Staplizer surgical staple gun, introduced about a year ago, is being used by scores of hospitals in the United States and abroad, said design engineer Edward P. Skwor, who developed it for the Orthopedic Products Division of 3M in St. Paul, Minn.

With the press of a trigger, the hand-held gun punches office-sized staples into a broken bone, helping it heal in place, Skwor said. The staples aren't removed.

"Staples allow the surgeon to do his job quicker and easier," Skwor said. When those patients are back on their feet, and if their budgets aren't quite depleted, they might find use for the $2,350 robot golf caddy, a remote-controlled device resembling a grown-up tricycle.

The golfer simply attaches a small electronic transmitter to his waistband, and the caddy follows him around the course, carrying golf clubs, balls and even highballs while keeping a proper 3½ feet to 4 feet behind, said Bill Reilly, chief electronic engineer at Gettig Engineering in Spring Mills, Pa.

MOCK

"Well Dole is wise too," pledged Meg McMurry, 11. "He knows about the world and I like him during speeches."

"Like Meg said, Dole shows courage in his speeches," 11-year-old Diana Rodriguez said. "I think most people voted for Bush because they knew him better."

On an issue closer to home, children pledged their votes for Pat Baskin 18-8 in the 142nd District judicial race.

Logic for voting for either Baskin or contender Nick Taylor in the judicial race was sometimes offbeat.

Diana, for example, liked Baskin because he reminded her of Baskin-Robbins ice cream, "her favorite place," she said.

Justin Overstreet, 12, admitted he voted for Taylor because he used to have a crush on Katy Taylor, the contender's daughter, when the two went to school at Hillander two years ago.

"Well, she liked me, too, but I had to go to another school and she had to go to San Jacinto...," Justin said.

Students who voted for Taylor agreed almost unanimously that he deserved a chance to serve on the bench.

Those in the Taylor camp questioned how Taylor was expected to get experience without having a chance to serve on the bench.

Baskin supporters countered with the fact that Baskin has the experience and should continue to serve as judge of the court.

"He sounds like he knows more about things. He's been around for awhile," said Doug Davis, 11, on why he voted for Baskin.

"I voted for Taylor because Baskin's had a chance. Give Taylor a chance now," Meg countered.

Jennifer Miller, 11, said she voted for Baskin, but thought Taylor should have a chance at the spot. Jennifer Brockett, 11, said on the advice of her attorney — and father — she voted for Baskin and his experience.

In the U.S. Senate race, the sixth graders sought to oust incumbent Lloyd Bentsen and give it to Republican contender Milton E. Fox, with eight votes.

Bentsen scored one vote as did his Republican contender Beau Bolter.

Other Republicans seeking to defeat Bentsen — Wes Gilbreath and Ned Snead — got three and five votes respectfvely; while Democrat Joe Sullivan got two votes.

As many adults likely find themselves, the sixth graders said they know little of those trying to gain Bensten's senatorial seat.

They knew Bentsen was the incumbent, but a large group of the class attributed Fox's victory to the fact his name sounds like that of teen idol, Michael J. Fox.

As far as the SBOE race went, Republican Don Dorsett beat out fellow party-man Peter Micale 6-4, while Democrat Bill Hudson beat his party-mate Jim Wilks 2-1.

The lunch bell rang Monday before the children were able to discuss that race.

The children said much of their reasoning was simply a rehash of that of their parents'.

About half of the class wanted to keep President Ronald Reagan in office, though Justin said it was because he liked to do imitations of the president's oft-heard "Welllll..."

"This is kind of mean, but I think he's getting too old to be president anymore. Maybe he should just go live in a condo on the beach," Jennifer Brockett and Meg decided.

The class was split on whether the media has served to "burn out" the public on the elections today.

Amy Yarbrough, 12, summed up both sides' of election coverage: "I kind of like them being on. They educate the people. But I just don't like it when they cut into Kirk Cameron (teen star of TV's "Growing Pains") on Tuesday nights."

The GOP race features U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter of Amarillo, former state Rep. Milton Fox of Austin, Houston businessman Wesley Gilbreath and Georgetown engineer Ned Snead.

All 27 of the state's congressional seats are on the ballot, with four contested races on the Republican side and five among the Democrats. District 21 incumbent Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, faces opposition from neither party.

Voters will decide the nominees in two Railroad Commission races, although one — in which Republican Commissioner Kent Hance is seeking to hold the final two years of a seat he obtained through an appointment — involves just Hance and Democratic state Rep. Clint Hackney of Houston. In the second race, incumbent Chairman Jim Nugent faces Midland oilman Jerry Langdon and perennial candidate John Thomas Henderson of Austin in the Democratic primary. Former state Rep. Ed Emmett now of Round Rock, P.S. (Sam) Ervin of Dallas, Miles rancher Ralph Hoelscher and Houston businessman Dale Steffes are battling for the GOP nomination.

A record five seats on the nine-member Supreme Court of Texas are up for grabs this year. Democratic voters may choose among Justice Ted Robertson and Dallas lawyer John Humphreys in the chief justice race, Houston District Judge Marsha Anthony and former state Sen. Lloyd Doggett of Austin in Place 1, incumbent Justice William Kilgarlin and District Judge Carol Haberman of San Antonio in Place 2 and incumbent Justice Raul Gonzalez and San Antonio lawyer Art Vega in Place 3.

Republicans may select between Dallas lawyer George Barbary and Houston Court of Appeals Judge Paul Murphy in Place 1. Missouri City lawyer Ronald Block, Houston Court of Appeals Judge D. Camille Dunn and Dallas Court of Appeals Judge Nathan Hecht are battling for the Republican nomination in Place 2.

The only contested race for the Court of Criminal Appeals comes at the top, where Associate Judge Mike McCormick and Dallas District Judge Ron Chapman are fighting for the Democratic nomination for presiding judge. Among the 14 state Courts of Appeals, Democrats may chose in seven races and Republicans in four.

For the first time since 1982, Texas voters may select candidates for the 15-member State Board of Education. Thirty-five Democrats are vying for the nomination in 11 contested races, while 23 Republicans face off in seven contested races. Voters in Place 14, which stretches from Waco to Midland to the Oklahoma border, may choose among four Democrats and two Republicans.

Fifteen of the 31 state Senate races come up this year, with four contested Democratic fights and two-man GOP race. All 150 state House of Representatives terms expire this year. Voters today may chose candidates in 36 contested Democratic races and 23 Republican contests.

The only contested legislative race in the Midland area comes in District 69, where incumbent Rep. Larry Don Shaw of Big Spring faces Cecil Gilstrap of Big Spring for the Democratic nomination in the 13-county district.

In any race with three or more candidates where the winner does not pull a clear majority, the top two finishers will face off in the April 12 runoffs. Voter registration deadline for the runoffs is March 13.

AIDS

In the book, released Monday and titled "Crisis: Heterosexual Behavior in the Age of AIDS," Masters and Johnson reported finding a 5 percent AIDS infection rate in men who said they had at least six sexual partners a year for five years, and a 7 percent infection rate in similarly active women.

By comparison, federal figures released in February that cover the period from 1986 to Sept. 30 show that 5,990 of 3.96 million military recruits tested positive, a rate of 1.5 cases of AIDS infection for every 1,000 people tested.

Based on their study of 800 people, Masters and Johnson concluded: "The AIDS virus has certainly established a beachhead in the ranks of heterosexuals, and...the odds are that the rate of spread among heterosexuals will now begin to escalate at a frightening pace."

Osborn contended that no such conclusion can be reached because the 800, including some people recruited with sign-up sheets on bulletin boards, were not chosen to be representative.

Late Monday on ABC-TV's "Nightline," Masters defended the unscientific sample as a preliminary step, "raising an alarm" about the possibility there are heterosexuals outside the known risk groups who are in danger from the AIDS epidemic.

"What we haven't realized is that there is another group of those heterosexuals who have a very multiplicity-of-partners type of sex life, and that is all that the experiments demonstrated," Masters said.

Rose Hill makes way for airport

AUSTIN (AP) — The remains of the tiny German community of Rose Hill, which died a generation or so ago, will soon disappear in the name of progress.

Austin needs a new airport, so the Rose Hill cemetery and the foundation of the community's school must go.

"Nothing stands still," said Anna Herzer, a descendent of Rose Hill settler Christian Herzer. "Austin has needs, and something has to be hurt when there is progress. Unfortunately, Rose Hill is part of that hurt."

Officials say the 28 unmarked and 16 marked graves will be moved to other cemeteries. Austin voters last year approved the purchase of an eastern Travis County site near Manor, including Rose Hill, for their new airport.

Records show Rose Hill existed from the 1870s until World War II. It was founded by George Henry Nelle, a Confederate Army veteran. At its peak, Rose Hill was home for 18 families with more than 100 people. All were German and all were farmers.

"This was a real good community," said Georgia Nelle. "There were farm houses everywhere. Every family had kids in school."

Mrs. Nelle, 84, knows what it was like because she was there. She cries now when she thinks of the fate of the remains of the community she lived in years ago. But she is grateful that Austin is doing all it can for Rose Hill.

Mrs. Nelle moved to Rose Hill in 1921 to teach the first through fourth grades. In 1924, she married the grandson of the community's founder. She moved away in 1939, when Rose Hill began to fade.

"When this airport is built, it will just destroy what's left of the Rose Hill community," she said. "When the first settlers came here they broke the land with oxen. I would like to see this place taken care of forever, but I know it is one of those things."

The decline of Rose Hill began just before World War I, when cotton prices dropped. The community struggled along until World War II. But afterward, most of Rose Hill's soldiers decided against returning to the local farms.

"Most of the time, we take for granted the foundations from which we sprang," said Alton Briggs, an archaeologist and principal investigator for Lone Star Archaeological Services, which investigated the town's history.

Correction

In Monday's Reporter-Telegram, the description of an accident which critically injured a 22-year-old Midland man Sunday evening was incorrectly stated.

It should have read that the accident occurred after the injured man's motorcycle struck a pickup truck from behind on a shoulder of State Highway 191, according to DPS reports. Scott Leslie Allmand of Midland suffered head injuries in the 6 p.m. accident and today was still listed in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Catholic youths riot after unarmed IRA rebels gunned down

LONDON (AP) — Roman Catholic youths rioted in Northern Ireland after the British government announced its soldiers had killed three unarmed IRA guerrillas it said were preparing a terrorist attack in Gibraltar.

Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe said Monday that a "dreadful terrorist act has been averted" by the slayings in the fortress colony on Spain's southern coast. "The three people killed were actively involved in the planning and attempted execution of that act," he told the House of Commons.

Afterward, youths in Belfast, Northern Ireland, began pelting police with gasoline bombs and set ablaze several dozen automobiles. The rioting did not end until early today. No injuries were immediately reported.

Police in Gibraltar said they believed the three guerrillas slain Sunday were involved in an Irish Republican Army plan to detonate a car bomb at the governor's residence during today's ceremonial changing of the guard, which hundreds of spectators attend.

Fifty members of the Royal Anglian Regiment, just transferred from duty in Northern Ireland, were to take part in the ceremony.

The IRA, which is fighting a guerrilla war to drive the British from Northern Ireland, acknowledged that the three guerrillas were on a mission.

Howe said the soldiers opened fire after the guerrillas — two men and a woman — parked a Renault-5 with Spanish license plates near the governor's residence and headed on foot for the Spanish border 800 yards away.

Howe said the three guerrillas "made movements which led security personnel to believe their lives were in danger."

Police searched Gibraltar and adjacent Spanish territory Monday for another car believed connected with the three. The theory is the Renault-5 was reserving a space for a car bomb.

Howe said Spanish police tipped off the British after a fourth IRA guerrilla they were watching crossed into Gibraltar, apparently to carry out "reconnaissance for an act of terrorism." He said the movements of the fourth suggested the changing of the guard was to be the IRA's target.

The London newspaper the Daily Mail said Spanish police believe the fourth may be Evelyn Glenholmes, who has been linked with several IRA attacks in past years. It quoted them as saying a women of her description was seen visiting the other three at an apartment in Malaga, two hours' drive from Gibraltar.

Howe said a car for which the three slain guerrillas had keys was found parked on the Spanish side of the gate separating this 2.25-square-mile limestone rock from the Spanish mainland. He said it contained keys to a third car, three false passports and equipment including an alarm clock, insulating tape and wire that could be used to detonate a bomb.

Howe did not identify the British unit involved, but there was speculation they were from the elite Special Air Services Regiment, whose movements are closely guarded secrets. Witnesses said they wore jeans.

Howe's statement won broad backing from most legislators and several newspapers. But The Daily Telegraph, which generally supports Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government, said:

"The 'neutralizing' of three known Irish terrorists is a victory for the intelligence and security services ... But...the government...should explain why it is necessary to shoot dead all three terrorists in the street, rather than apprehend them."

The outlawed IRA, in a statement from Belfast, said the three were "on active service" but "were unarmed...and this would have been apparent to their executioners."

The IRA identified them as: Mairead Farrell, 31, who had served 10 years jail for blowing up a hotel; Sean Savage, 24, and Daniel McCann, 30, both of whom have been arrested on explosive charges.

All three were from Catholic West Belfast, where the rioting broke out after Howe's statement.

Police fired plastic bullets to disperse gangs of youths who hurled gasoline bombs and set fire to 30 vehicles including buses, vans and trucks. Gunmen launched at least two sniper attacks on police and troops, police said.

The mainly Catholic IRA seeks to drive the British from Northern Ireland and unite the predominantly Protestant province with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic under socialist rule.

Panamanian banks closed for fifth day

United opposition backs transitional government

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A newly united opposition called for the removal of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega and the formation of a transitional government, while pro-Noriega diplomats seized Panama's London consulate from rivals.

The nation's banks were shuttered for a fifth day on Monday. Outside, retired people unable to cash pension checks blocked traffic and shouted "Where's my money!"

In another development, a U.S. judge extended a freeze on Panamanian government funds in American banks.

Opposition organizations and ousted president Eric Arturo Delvalle joined forces after 10 days of turmoil triggered by Delvalle's attempt to fire Noriega and the resulting dismissal of the president, who remains in hiding.

Virtually all the nation's civilian political forces not directly linked to the armed forces or to the Noriega regime joined in the alliance.

In London Monday night, Panamanian Embassy workers and private security men used a Land Rover to smash into and seize the consulate, whose top diplomat had remained loyal to Delvalle.

Police reported no injuries, though some consulate workers said they were threatened with hammers, and left the building in control of Panamanian Ambassador Guillermo Vega.

Consul Eduardo Arango acknowledged he had been fired for remaining loyal to Delvalle, who the United States still considers Panama's president.

In a declaration issued in Panama Monday, the opposition alliance said "our principal objective" is "the establishment of a government of national reconciliation that guarantees justice, a state of law, liberty, reconstruction of democratic institutions, fiscal order, economic development, conditions for authentic democracy and the celebration of free, open and honest elections."

Elections are scheduled for May 1989.

Among those signing the document were Arnulfo Arias of the Panamanian Authentic Party, the country's largest opposition party. Arias has been president three times and was ousted by the military each time. His supporters claimed he was robbed of victory in the 1984 election.

Also signing were representatives of the two other opposition parties and the National Civic Crusade, an alliance of 200 professional, business, labor and political organizations that has led anti-Noriega protests since June.

The declaration recognizes Delvalle "as he who now exercises the office of president." It praised his attempt to fire Noriega Feb. 25, saying he "demonstrated he has committed himself to the changes necessary for establishment of a legitimate democracy."

Delvalle moved up from the vice presidency when the military pressured then-president Nicolas Ardito Barletta, who was declared winner in the 1984 election, to resign in September 1985.

The alliance said a national reconciliation government would include "representatives of political parties and other forces dedicated to the reestablishment in Panama of a democratic order."

It said the government "will pursue an understanding with the Defense Forces in order to define their legitimate function."

With the declaration, Delvalle and his vice president, Roderick Esquivel, who also was deposed, issued a statement calling for respect for individual rights, subordination of the military to civilian authority, the naming of a new Cabinet, a new Supreme Court and new electoral magistrates.

The Reagan administration has called for Noriega's ouster since he was indicted in Florida in February on federal drug trafficking charges.

In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater on Monday said the Reagan administration was considering economic and trade sanctions against Panama, including withholding monthly payments for the Panama Canal and putting the money into escrow.

On March 15, the United States is due to pay $6.5 million to the Panama Canal Commission, a monthly installment on the $75 million to $80 million Washington provides Panama each year under the canal treaty.

The Panama Canal Commission spokeswoman, Willie Friar, Monday denied media reports that port authorities were requiring cash payments from ships traveling through the canal. She said the flow of traffic was "completely normal."

In New York, U.S. District Judge Lloyd F. MacMahon Monday extended for 10 days a temporary restraining order issued Thursday preventing two U.S. banks from transferring an estimated $50 million to the National Bank of Panama.

Panama uses the U.S. dollar for its currency and calls it the balboa. The government periodically receives tender from the U.S. banks where it keeps an estimated $50 million on deposit.

A request for such a transfer last week was denied because of legal action, backed by Washington, taken on behalf of Delvalle.

Local banks in Panama closed last week, fearing a run on deposits because of political instability. On Friday, foreign banks also closed, and businesses stopped taking checks or credit cards.

The government promised to set up payment centers for the country's 60,000 pensioners, but they were not in operation Monday when most picked social security checks for the first two weeks of March, ranging from $60 to $250.

Organized workers headed by the pro-Communist CNTP, organized under the umbrella organization Conato, held a protest march and rally in front of the American Embassy in Panama City Monday. About 500 workers participated; it was the first time that civil servants joined other workers in a protest rally.

Noriega supporters seize consulate in London

LONDON (AP) — Panamanian Embassy workers and private security men used a Land Rover to smash into and seize the Panamanian Consulate, whose top diplomat had remained loyal to deposed President Eric Arturo Delvalle.

Police said they believed the six assailants, including two representatives of Panamanian Ambassador Guillermo Vega, entered the building Monday night after using the jeep to break through its reinforced plate glass door.

The consul, Eduardo Arango, had refused to give up his post despite being fired for still recognizing Delvalle.

The British Broadcasting Corp. said the consulate staff had also remained loyal to Delvalle, who was ousted Feb. 26 after trying to dismiss Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, Panama's military leader and de facto ruler.

Control of Panama's Embassy in Washington is also in dispute.

The Reagan administration has been trying to force Noriega to step down since the general was indicted on federal drug trafficking charges in Florida last month.

The Land Rover, driven by one of the British security men, mounted the sidewalk, smashed through the door into the lobby of the consulate, which is about a mile from the Panamanian Embassy.

"Shortly after this several people left the building, including three women believed to be secretaries, and a number of security staff. One glass-paneled front door was damaged. No one was injured," police said in a statement.

Arango was at his London home at the time and was told about it by one of the consulate staff.

One consular official who was forced out, Tourism Commissioner Rolando Domingo, 24, said: "We were just working in there and then suddenly we heard a crash." He said the jeep came through the glass door and then a group of men entered the building carrying large hammers.

"They threatened us with hammers and one tried to hit my face. They took my passport and documents. Then they pushed me down the stairs and out of the building," Domingo said.

Police sealed off the area around the consulate in Tudor Street in the City, London's financial district.

Police said they entered the consulate after negotiations with Panamanian government representatives they did not identify, and left the building in the control of the ambassador and his security staff.

Arango, in a BBC interview, condemned the forced entry as "a thuggish way of behaving and an unbelievable way of doing things in a civilized country."

He was quoted by the British domestic news agency Press Association as saying he was prevented from entering the consulate after the seizure and that one of the men involved told him they were working for Vega and carrying out orders from Panama.

The agency also quoted Arango as saying he had received letters from Panama saying he was dismissed but ignored them. British government officials said they were told on Friday that Arango was being fired as consul.

The BBC said Arango was in Panama at the time of Delvalle's ouster and has said he helped smuggle Delvalle from his residence to a hiding place in the Central American country.

Arango said he would protest to the British Foreign Office and said the British driver of the Land Rover ought to be prosecuted.

The security guards involved work for GB Security, a private company based at Sutton in south London.

A spokesman at the British Foreign Office, who in accordance with British practice declined to be named, said it was too early to say what action, if any, Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe might take over the incident.

Israelis tried to stay calm during hijacking of bus

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israelis who spent nearly an hour on a bus with three armed guerrillas said they tried to stay calm, even offering one captor some milk, but finally became convinced "we're not getting out of this alive."

One wrote a final note to her three children. Another laid down and thought: "That's it, goodbye."

Three Israelis — two women and a man — were killed Monday during the incident in southern Israel along with the three PLO guerrillas.

The bus' other eight passengers, workers on the way to their jobs at the Dimona nuclear plant, were all injured during the ordeal.

The Palestine Liberation Organization claimed responsibility for the attack. The army said the guerrillas infiltrated from Egypt.

While Israeli officials were negotiating with the three guerrillas to try to end the standoff, "we tried to create a calm atmosphere," Stella Bechar, 46, who was hospitalized with multiple shrapnel and gunshot wounds, told the daily Jerusalem Post. "Each one had a gun, a Kalashnikov, ready to shoot."

Some of the Israelis aboard the bus spoke some Arabic.

Noriega exploits race, class to keep power

By DOUGLAS GRANT MINE

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panama's strongman, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, is emphasizing class and racial distinctions in what appears to be an effort to rally support by polarizing society.

"The humble, the poor, the blacks, they are the utmost authority of this people," Noriega, commander of the country's 15,000-strong Defense Forces, told a crowd Friday in the provincial town of Carriazo.

His regime, under mounting economic pressure from the United States, has tried to characterize domestic opposition as rich and white. In government newspapers and on official radio and TV stations, Noriega's opponents are termed "oligarchs" and "sellouts."

"Whiteys, to the firing squad," says graffiti scrawled on walls in some of this capital's more affluent neighborhoods. The message is signed VT, for Victoria Torrijista, a populist organization that reveres the late strongman Omar Torrijos.

In speeches, Noriega repeatedly invokes Torrijos — killed in a 1981 airplane crash — as inspiration for his defiance of Washington.

VT, like all groups supportive of the Defense Forces' de facto rule, is subsidized by the government, according to former government officials now at odds with Noriega.

Panama, with 2.2 million people, is a racially mixed nation with African, Indian and European heritage. As is the case throughout Latin America, people of European or predominantly European heritage are generally better off than descendants of those their forefathers conquered or enslaved.

Compared with the rest of the region, there is a relatively large middle class. But there is also a big gap between rich and poor.

The National Civic Crusade — an opposition alliance of about 200 business, professional, political and labor groups — has struggled to overcome the popular perception of it as representative of limited and privileged interests.

In the dining room of the opulent Marriott Hotel, Ernesto Gonzalez de la Lastra, a leader of the Crusade, rose in response to a question about the government claim it is "oligarchic."

Gonzalez de la Lastra, in stylish clothes, a Rolex watch gleaming on his wrist and gold chain around his neck, escorted Foodworkers' Union official Martin Gonzalez, in humbler garb, to the table.

"I'll let Don Martin answer that," said the president of the Association of Panamanian Executives.

"Oligarchy means government by the few," said the union man from a working-class district just outside the capital of Panama City. "So the Defense Forces and their government is the real oligarchy."

Noriega does not hold pro-government demonstrations at the Marriott, and those who attend rallies supporting him are poorer than the drivers of the cars that join the Crusade's occasional protest caravans through town. But the opposition has significantly broadened its appeal.

"Noriega tries to represent himself as the standard-bearer of the poor," said Dedys Ramos, saleswoman at a clothing store in the downtown area. "But it is the poor who suffer more than anyone because of him."

From a lower-class neighborhood, Mrs. Ramos earns just above the minimum wage of $150 a month and is an adamant opponent of the regime.

Referring to the beginnings of hardship — including the closure of banks last week — resulting from U.S. economic pressure on Panama, she said:

"He (Noriega) is not going to go without. He has food and a roof. But what about those abuelitos (little grandfathers) who can't cash their paltry pension checks? That's why you can see me out there waving my white hankie with the civilistas (Civic Crusade backers)."

Supporters of the Civic Crusade, which has spearheaded opposition to Noriega since its formation in June, wave white handkerchiefs at their demonstrations.

A Gallup poll taken in August indicated that nearly 75 percent of Panamanians would like to see Noriega out.

A power struggle earlier this month between Noriega and ousted President Eric Arturo Delvalle sparked the current crisis.

Noriega loyalists in the National Assembly dismissed Delvalle Feb. 26, a day after Delvalle had tried to fire Noriega.

Noriega was indicted last month in Florida on federal drug trafficking charges. He has denied those accusations.

De la Madrid prepares to outline new economic plan

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid prepared Monday to outline the achievements of his new inflation-fighting program, which top economic officials claimed has been successful in its first two months.

Budget Secretary Pedro Aspe told a meeting of state financial officials on Sunday that the stabilization of the economy now was "within reach."

But he cautioned that to achieve such a result "requires the maintenance of discipline, order, coordination and much work by all."

Letting up on the inflation fight, he said, would mean a reversal of the gains achieved so far.

Another government official, Treasury Secretary Gustavo Petricioli, told the meeting that the new program has given Mexicans a chance to show "we can achieve important objectives through agreement."

The program, he said, "should continue having success."

De la Madrid was scheduled to deliver a speech Monday night on the program, called the Economic Solidarity Pact, which he unveiled in mid-December.

Government officials have been encouraged by inflation figures that, they said, showed an easing.

Waldheim admits knowing of killings of Allied soldiers

By HOWELL RAINES
New York Times News Service

LONDON — President Kurt Waldheim of Austria has admitted that he knew that Allied commandos were being interrogated by his German army unit and that some were sent off for execution in violation of the Geneva Convention on treatment of prisoners of war.

But Waldheim contended in a television interview broadcast here Sunday that he would be exonerated of direct personal involvement in the deaths of six British commandos executed in Greece in 1944 after being turned over to his unit.

His role in the case is the subject of a renewed inquiry authorized last month by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in response to pressure from legislators who say they believe that Waldheim was implicated in the killing of British prisoners of war in the Balkans.

In the interview on "The World This Week," Waldheim depicted himself as a passive observer in the case of the commandos.

"Well, I think you cannot construct guilt by knowing about something," he said. "If you work in an intelligence service, in any country of the world, of course you know certain things, but this does not constitute guilt."

The Foreign Office and Defense Ministry have assigned senior ministers and large staffs to the inquiry. In addition, related allegations that Waldheim may have allowed Soviet spying while serving as secretary general of the United Nations from 1972 to 1982 are receiving serious attention.

Greville Janner, a Labor member of parliament and a leader of the All-Party Parliamentary War Crimes Group, and Robert Rhodes James, a Conservative MP, have played key roles in the British investigation.

Behind Rhodes James' crusade lies a remarkable tale of betrayal and pursuit. From 1972 to 1976, Rhodes James was Waldheim's personal assistant at the United Nations. Rhodes James said he was assured that Waldheim had an "absolutely honorable" record of German army service, being wounded on the Russian front and then spending the rest of the war in law school in Vienna.

"In 1986, when the World Jewish Congress started putting things out, I didn't believe them and wouldn't believe them," Rhodes James said, referring to the organization that first publicized Waldheim's service in the Balkans in a German army unit that, among other things, deported 42,000 Greek Jews to the concentration camps.

Rhodes James said he remained skeptical until a fellow historian sent him photocopies of the documents detailing Waldheim's service near Salonika.

"It became very obvious that his memoirs were a pack of lies," he said, "and the moment I realized that and I realized we were dealing with a liar on a very formidable scale who must have something very substantial to hide, that really began the paper chase."

Another Briton, Gerald Fleming, has had a major role in the "paper chase." Fleming, a member of the commission of historians assembled last year by the Austrian government to look into Waldheim's past, assembled documents undercutting Waldheim's claim that he served as an interpreter and "supply officer" who had nothing to do with prisoners.

Fleming and the other historians found no evidence of direct participation in war crimes by Waldheim. But in his report to the Austrians last month, Fleming said the evidence "shows that Waldheim knew exactly about commando matters, for a number of the papers that have survived dealing with commando-prisoners, interrogations and the handing over of such prisoners to the SD passed across his desk. By initialing such documents, Lt. Waldheim was involved in the knowledge and course of action."

In a letter to Rhodes James in 1986, Waldheim denied any role in handling captured commandos. But in the television interview, he admitted that he knew that Hitler's "special treatment" policy for captured Allied commandos — which meant that the commandos were interrogated and executed by the German security service — was being carried out in his area.

The current British inquiry is looking for links between Waldheim and six British commandos from the Special Boat Squadron. They were captured in uniform on April 7, 1944, during a reconnaissance mission on the Greek island of Alimnia and never seen alive again after being taken to the place where Lieutenant Waldheim was stationed just outside Salonika. They are believed to have been executed sometime after April 27.

The British government mysteriously shredded some of its own documents on the commandos' case in 1978, raising suspicions that Soviet moles in the British intelligence services were trying to cover for Waldheim while the Soviet government was blackmailing him, threatening to expose his war record unless he allowed them a free hand in espionage at the United Nations.

Solving the riddle

Syria still suspicious of goals of U.S. peace proposals

By MONA ZIADE

An Analysis

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria, the strongest critic of U.S. Middle East policy, has found "positive elements" in American efforts to reactivate the stalled process but remains suspicious of the initiative's goals, sources say. Syria's leaders are consulting with Jordan and studying proposals handed last week to President Hafez Assad by Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa is expected to fly to Amman this week to discuss the plan after weekend contacts between Assad and King Hussein, said the knowledgeable Syrian sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

But they question whether the United States is serious about finding a comprehensive settlement to the Arab-Israeli conflict or is simply trying to end Palestinian rioting in Israeli-occupied lands through promises of peace.

Like all Arab governments, Damascus supports the Palestinian rebellion in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, unprecedented in the 40-year-old conflict, that threatens Washington's Middle East ally with a prolonged civil war.

More than 80 Palestinians have been killed in the violence that has plagued the occupied territories since Dec. 8 in what Arabs hail as the "intafada," or uprising. There have been no Israeli fatalities in the rioting.

Syria, Moscow's main Arab ally and a key player in the Middle East, remains suspicious of attempts to isolate issues involved in the quest for a settlement into separate negotiations, a strategy it believes favors Israel.

Syria believes it has a better chance of regaining the strategic Golan Heights, captured by Israel in 1967, through a comprehensive settlement. Unlike the other occupied territories, Israel annexed the heights in 1981.

Charles Snow, a veteran Middle East analyst, wrote in the respected Middle East Economic Survey: "There is one major problem which clearly has the potential to derail the entire process — the Golan Heights.

"Syria has always been deeply suspicious that attempts to separate the issues in the Arab-Israeli conflict are merely camouflage for a partial settlement which will leave Israel in-...possession of the Golan."

The U.S. plan would convene an international conference within a few weeks. By May 1, Israel and a joint delegation of Jordanians and Palestinians would discuss limited self-rule for the 1.5 million Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza for an interim three-year period. Later in the year, a wider international conference would bring in other parties to debate the ultimate future of the occupied Arab land captured by Israel in the 1967 war.

A Syrian source said the main question is how much pressure Washington is prepared to exert on Israel to accept a "land for peace" exchange.

The Arabs, including Syria, spearhead of Arab radicalism, have accepted this principle. But Israeli hardliners reject withdrawal from lands it seized in 1967 and are at odds with moderates over the way to go. Arabs fear the Israeli impasse could block any progress.

Some Syrian officials question the sincerity of an initiative launched by the Reagan administration, which they say has done little to rein in Israel.

Since Reagan was elected in 1980, Israel attacked Iraq's nuclear plant in 1981, annexed the Golan Heights later that year, invaded Lebanon in 1982, bombed the PLO's headquarters in Tunisia in 1984 and continued to build settlements in the occupied territories.

Israel also has defied a series of U.N. resolutions condemning its repeated air raids on Palestinian bases in Lebanon.

At least 300 police hurt in Tibet, Chinese agency says

CHENGDU, China (AP) — Westerners in Lhasa today said security forces had withdrawn from around the Tibetan capital's main temple, where monks led a violent weekend protest that Beijing said left hundreds of police injured.

In the fullest official account yet of the rioting against Chinese rule, the Chinese News Service today said more than 300 police were injured in the rioting Saturday and Sunday in Lhasa. Previous official reports had said that one policeman was killed and 28 injured in a single day of rioting.

The fighting occurred in Lhasa at the Jokhang, Tibet's holiest temple.

One Westerner in Lhasa, a Tibetan-speaking traveler, said Tibetans told him five Tibetans and three Chinese police were killed in daylong violence Saturday, the last day of a major prayer festival.

Another traveler, who arrived today Chengdu, 750 miles east of Lhasa, said officials told him two people were killed — a Chinese policeman who was pushed off a roof and a Tibetan. Both travelers spoke on condition of anonymity.

The China News Service said 30 police officers were hospitalized with serious injuries and "numerous" civilians were hurt in the violence — the second nationalist riots in Lhasa since October.

In an eyewitness report seen in Hong Kong, the agency claimed the disturbances were plotted by unidentified Tibetans who had bags of rocks placed on top of buildings around the central Barkhor market place.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Iran, Iraq again launch missile attacks on capitals

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran and Iraq today fired more missiles at each other's capitals, and Iran accused the United States and France of helping Iraq refit Soviet-designed missiles to give them enough range to hit Tehran.

The charge was made by Iranian Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani.

Before the latest round of the so-called "war of the cities" began Feb. 29, Iraq had been unable to hit Tehran with surface-to-surface missiles because the city is nearly 300 miles from the Iraqi border.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported that an Iraqi missile crashed into a residential neighborhood of Tehran early today, killing or wounding "several" civilians and damaging a church.

State-run Baghdad Radio reported that Iraqi gunners fired the missile into Tehran, a city of 6 million people, less than an hour after Iran claimed it had lobbed a projectile into Baghdad.

Iraq's news agency confirmed the latest Iranian missile strike on a residential area in Baghdad, saying civilians, including women, children and elderly people, were killed. No figures were given.

U.N. calls for sanctions

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A Security Council draft resolution circulated Monday calls for mandatory economic sanctions, including an oil embargo, against South Africa to force the government to abolish apartheid within a year.

The draft resolution, to be discussed when the council meets today, expresses outrage at the banning of anti-apartheid activities and concern for the "worsening of the human suffering resulting from the apartheid system" of racial segregation.

The resolution says South Africa's intransigence "compels the international community to impose, as a first step, selective mandatory sanctions."

Under South Africa's system of apartheid, the 26 million blacks have no voice in national affairs and the 5 million whites control the economy and maintain separate schools and districts.

The resolution, circulated after three days of debate, calls for a halt to export and sale of oil to South Africa; an end to further investment and loans; a ban on imports of iron and steel; a halt of all trade promotion and support for trade; prohibition of sale of Kruggerands and all coins minted in South Africa; and cessation of all forms of military, policy or intelligence cooperation, especially the sale of computer equipment.

Afghanistan talks critical

GENEVA (AP) — With a Soviet deadline drawing closer, pressure is mounting on negotiators seeking a settlement to end the 9-year-old war in Afghanistan.

It remained uncertain Monday whether Pakistan, which is representing the Afghan guerrillas and does not recognize the Soviet-backed Afghan government, will drop its demand for a broad-based transitional government to replace the existing regime after Soviet troops withdraw.

Can Jackson break 'ancient cultural barrier' in South?

By RITA BEAMISH

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Leonore Sarabia, clutching her sweater against the morning chill, awaited Jesse Jackson's arrival at the Mirasol housing project, a heavily Hispanic neighborhood where the presidential hopeful was searching out votes for today's election.

She had come "to check him out," she said, even though she already knew she would vote for him. She didn't really know anything about the other five Democratic contenders, but Jackson "is more for the people," she explained as the candidate emerged from a limousine.

Two days earlier, it was Tom Trantham's dairy farm in the South Carolina county where Jackson grew up. There, he talked farm policy and shared a breakfast of grits and eggs with Trantham and a few neighbors as cameras and reporters jostled around the table.

The white farmers said they were grateful for Jackson's support during the 1986 drought, when he helped unload trucked-in hay. But they were noncommittal about whether they would vote for him.

"I haven't made a decision," said Bertha Tinsley. Her husband Doug Tinsley, fetching coffee refills for the Jackson group, said he was a Republican and would probably vote GOP.

The two campaign stops illustrate the challenge and the success Jackson has had as he tries to expand his base beyond his core of black supporters.

In the South, voters today are deciding if he can overcome what he describes as an "ancient cultural barrier," and pull white support here as he did in five northern states with fractional black populations.

Today's Super Tuesday election, with 14 Southern states among the 20 where voters are going to the polls, has shaped up as the day when Jackson's presidential bid will shine.

It is virtually certain he will be picking up more non-black votes than he did in his 1984 race. And he hopes to do well enough to lay to rest the notion that he can't be elected because he is black.

Casual interviews along the campaign trail indicate Jackson has engendered considerable respect among Southern whites. Although some say the racial issue is not as much a factor as it was in 1984, they acknowledge it still remains for many.

"The older group, they won't change," Jackson supporter Thomas DeLong, a 57-year-old white student at Mississippi State College, said of Mississippi voters. He and others interviewed, said that among students, a group the campaign is targeting, Jackson has considerable support.

Jackson's campus rallies are a big draw, and the enthusiastic audiences are sprinkled with whites, including Republicans, who seem to come as much out of curiosity as anything.

At the University of Arkansas, white economics student Tony Green was impressed by Jackson's powerful delivery, commenting, "Wow, quite a speech."

He said race is not an issue for him but Jackson "is just too liberal." He may even vote Republican if Vice President George Bush wins the GOP nomination, he said.

Jackson has touted the endorsements of a handful of prominent white Southern politicians including Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, Oklahoma State Sen. Gene Stipe, and Tennessean John J. Hooker, a former gubernatorial candidate with close ties to former Sen. Albert Gore Sr., the father of one of Jackson's rivals.

In Texas, with its large Hispanic population, he was joined on the campaign trail by New Mexico Gov. Toney Anaya, a prominent Hispanic leader.

And Selma, Ala., last week saw a historically dramatic moment. The white mayor who had had Dr. Martin Luther King and other civil rights activist arrested more than two decades ago welcomed Jackson, a King protege and longtime civil rights activist, giving him the key to the city.

Mayor Joe Smitherman then joined Jackson for a stroll through streets that saw some of the most tense moments of the civil rights struggle.

The mayor said he was wrong to oppose the civil rights movement and while he's not officially endorsing Jackson, he supports his message. The message, powerfully hammered home in Jackson's stump speech, is:

— That "the new South" is one of equal civil rights but economic inequity.

— That greater efforts are needed to fight the drug influx, the No. 1 national security threat.

— That multinational corporations are to blame for loss of U.S. jobs because they take their business to cheap labor markets overseas.

Students vow to keep Gallaudet closed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Students at Gallaudet University, the nation's only liberal arts college for the deaf, promise to keep the campus closed until the board of trustees selects a deaf president for the school.

Students planned to continue boycotting classes to protest the appointment of Elisabeth Ann Zinser as president. Zinser, who is not hearing impaired, was chosen Sunday by the Gallaudet board of trustees to head the 124-year-old institution.

Zinser, an administrator at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, was selected over two deaf finalists. After her appointment, hundreds of chanting students marched through downtown Washington, with stops at the White House and the Capitol, to protest the decision.

Monday, students swarmed at the gates of the campus before dawn and refused to let professors and administrators in, forcing officials to cancel classes for the day. In the afternoon, about 1,800 of the school's 2,200 students again protested at the Capitol.

"We're going to keep the school closed," said student leader Jerry Covell. "We will stop when we get a deaf president."

Trustees including board chairwoman Jane Bassett Spilman met with a group of students, faculty and staff for three hours Monday, but emerged from the meeting sticking by their original decision to hire Zinser.

Students had demanded the replacement of Zinser with a deaf leader, Spilman's resignation, and moves to make deaf persons a majority on the school's 20-member board of trustees. The board now has only four deaf members.

Spilman told a gathering of about 2,000 students that the board's decision had followed a "careful, reasoned" search process.

"A lawful, proper and final decision was made," Spilman said. She left a short while later without taking questions from reporters.

Zinser, who does not speak sign language but has promised to learn, said in a telephone interview from Greensboro that she understands the students' desire for a deaf president but that she believes they will eventually come to accept her. She also said she will maintain some "distance" from the school until emotions subside.

Students at Gallaudet University, a school for the deaf and hearing-impaired, hold a demonstration Monday in Washington, D.C., to protest the choice of a hearing person for their next president.

Covell said students are concentrating their protests on Capitol Hill, since Gallaudet, created by an act of Congress, receives most of its operating budget from the federal government. In fiscal 1988, Gallaudet is receiving $62 million from Congress.

"We're trying to put some pressure on Congress, to get them to put some pressure on our board," said Covell.

"She doesn't even sign. What does that tell you?" said student Dean Prentice, 21, of Garden City, Kan. "We need a deaf person as a role model."

Zinser said that despite the controversy, she was still looking forward to coming to Gallaudet.

"I consider it an enormous privilege to be selected to lead Gallaudet," she said. "I feel considerable empathy and compassion for the students. I believe their intense reaction is a reflection of their deep concern for the university."

Courses, income determining factors in Hispanic scores

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A 12-state study found that advanced math and science courses and family income were more important factors than ethnicity in how Hispanic high school students scored on college entrance tests.

The study of 1,928 Hispanic and non-Hispanic white students, presented Monday to the National Association of Secondary School Principals, also found that scores of both groups increased with the size of schools they attended.

George A. Chambers, professor of educational administration at the University of Iowa, and researcher Phyllis S. Peterson studied 1987 scores on the American College Test, the predominant college admission test in 28 states.

"The purpose of the study was to compare how Hispanic students and Caucasian students score when the two groups are similarly situated," Chambers said.

Students in the study were from Arizona, California, Colorado, Florida, Illinois, Kansas, Louisiana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas and Utah.

The students were divided equally among two groups identified as Caucasian and Hispanic, which included two subdivisions of Mexican-Americans and Puerto Ricans, Cubans and others.

The study created 964 pairs of one Hispanic and one non-Hispanic white student matched on the basis of 13 common attributes: high school, family income range, mathematics courses (algebra 1, algebra 2, geometry, trigonometry, calculus), science courses (general science, biology, chemistry, physics), gender and number of siblings.

According to the study, the U.S. average composite ACT score is 15.2 for Mexican-Americans, 16.6 for the Puerto-Rican-Cuban group, and 19.6 for non-Hispanic whites. The ACT is scored on a scale of one to 36 and is taken annually by more than 1 million students.

When matched, or "similarly situated," the non-Hispanics had a mean score of 18.7 compared with 16.7 for the Mexican-American group, a difference of just two points instead of the national difference of 4.4 points.

The non-Hispanics scored 19.8 and Puerto Rican-Cuban students scored 18.9 when similarly situated, a difference in composite score points of just 0.9 rather than the three points in the U.S. average.

In addition, Chambers said, the statistical analysis found that course work is more important than the level of income in determining scores.

He said, however, that the higher the income level, the greater the tendency for a student to take advanced courses. That is probably because of factors such as the expectations of parents who have college educations, he said.

"It's not income necessarily in and of itself that makes the difference. Rather, it's the things that result from income," Chambers said.

"So we need to find a way to raise the expectations. We must overcome this force of income."

FAA announces year-long probe of commuter airlines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration, worried about a rash of commuter airline accidents that claimed 56 lives over a recent five-month period, today announced a year-long inspection of the commuter industry.

FAA Administrator Allan McArtor said the inspection will cover 173 commuter airlines. Agency inspectors are planning to focus on about 20 percent of those carriers.

McArtor said FAA officials already are reviewing "major problem areas" in the industry, which last year carried 30 million passengers, and plan within 60 days to begin inspections.

Teams of FAA inspectors will focus on such areas as airline management, training programs, record keeping and aircraft condition.

McArtor said the commuter airlines' safety record in recent months has sharply reversed from the trends seen in recent years. The FAA cited seven commuter accidents from November through February in which 56 people were killed.

The worst accident was that of a Ryan Air commuter Nov. 13 near Homer, Alaska, in which 18 people died.

Commuter airlines have played an increasingly important role in the nation's aviation system because they often are used as feeder airlines for the major jet carriers at large airports around the country. Last year the commuters carried nearly 30 million passengers, according to the Regional Airline Association, and that number is expected to continue to climb.

"We want a return to the 1986 environment when commuters had the safest year in their history," McArtor told a news conference. In 1986, commuter airlines had just two fatal accidents in which four people were killed.

FAA officials said they expect the initial inspection phase of the commuters to be completed by the end of September. The agency then will prepare a final report on the findings, which would be used by inspectors responsible for the individual airlines in having corrective action taken.

Politics, religion still lumpy mixture

The presence in both the Republican and Democratic camps of an ordained Protestant clergyman among the candidates competing in the Presidential primaries has again brought into focus the possible influence of religious preferences on the ballot box.

In an examination of this question, the Williamsburg Charter Foundation, a group dedicated to the preservation of Constitutionally guaranteed religious freedom, has conducted a limited survey. The surprising finding from the random sampling is that a candidate's religious persuasion is still a major factor in the voter's mind, but denominational lines are blurred.

For example, 62 percent of the close to 2,000 persons polled said they would not vote for an atheist. But in the breakdown by denomination, about 13 percent curiously maintained they could not support a Greek Orthodox candidate. On the other hand, an equal number was just as opposed to a so-called "born again Baptist." The only Greek Orthodox candidate in the field is Democrat Michael Dukakis.

Ten percent indicated they would not vote for a Jewish candidate and eight percent said they would spurn a Roman Catholic on the basis of religion. None of the present candidates is Jewish and the two Catholics who entered the race have since dropped out.

In the 1928 Presidential election, the defeat of Democrat Alfred E. Smith was widely blamed on the fact that he was Catholic. Anti-Catholic bias was finally put to flight with the election of Democrat John F. Kennedy in 1960.

Americans are not out of the woods of religious intolerance yet, but they have come a considerable distance in accepting the paths of faith chosen by their leaders.

Another View:

Siegan's extremism

In its twilight months, the Reagan administration has nominated for the prestigious U.S. Court of Appeals on the West Coast a California lawyer named Bernard Siegan, a man distinguished for his extreme conservatism. Legally speaking, he is so far out that Robert Bork, who was rejected for the Supreme Court for being out of the mainstream, calls some of his ideas "revolutionary." Senate Democrats are right to subject the Siegan nomination to exacting scrutiny.

The title of Siegan's book published last year, "The Supreme Court's Constitution," sums up his scholarly career. Like Attorney General Edwin Meese, his friend and former colleague on the law faculty at the University of San Diego, Siegan never tires of distinguishing between the Constitution and the Constitution as interpreted by the high court: "The Court has frequently ruled either contrary to, or without guidance from, constitutional meaning and purpose."

Siegan doesn't contend that judicial mistakes all started with the Warren Court. He attacks McCulloch v. Maryland, Chief Justice John Marshall's 1819 landmark, as the seed of excessive federal power. Like Robert Bork, he has only sarcasm for the First Amendment views of Oliver Wendell Holmes. He even denounces the Court headed by former Chief Justice Warren Burger for applying the 14th Amendment against sex discrimination.

He nominally accepts Brown v. Board of Education, the 1954 school desegregation decision, but not for the reason that almost everyone else does — because blacks were denied equal protection of the laws. No, to him, they were denied their "right to travel" to white public schools. That leaves him free to reject court enforcement of educational equality.

This is no apostle of judicial restraint but rather of selective activism: "Because of its limitations and infirmities, the legislature should not be the final authority in socioeconomic matters." Courts should stand ready to cure legislative excesses that favor personal rights over property rights. That idea brought Judge Bork up short: "Such a revolutionary alteration in our constitutional arrangements ought to be more clearly shown to have been intended before it is accepted."

Siegan contends that the Supreme Court has refused to be guided by the Constitution, yet he pledges to be guided by the Supreme Court. His own views are irrelevant, he told the Senate Judiciary Committee last week. So is his nomination. The Senate would be wise to reject it. The courts are the wrong place for such extreme views.

Federal blacklist could become law

WASHINGTON — No one who wants a government loan, from students to farmers, may be safe from a sweeping federal blacklist that the Reagan administration is pushing into law.

Jack Anderson

Unless Congress stops the proposed regulations, people will be banned from receiving government grants and loans if their records show they lack "business integrity" or have broken a "public agreement." Those vague qualifiers come from the Office of Management and Budget, which supervises the way the federal government spends its money.

OMB wrote the proposed regulations with the laudable pretense of fighting fraud and abuse by keeping taxpayers' money out of the hands of the unscrupulous. But some members of Congress fear the regulations will result in a blacklist that unfairly disqualifies people who need federal assistance.

The regulations are vague, leaving weighty decisions about a person's integrity in the hands of the bureaucracy. The rules finger for punishment even those who unwittingly do business with people on the blacklist. Opponents of the rules fear that OMB has created a tool that can be used by people in power to manipulate the fortunes of others.

"Every citizen of this nation is at serious risk of being officially labeled a deadbeat and banned from access to virtually every type of federal assistance," Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, told our associate Jim Lynch. Brooks has written to the OMB to ask that enforcement of the regulations be postponed until the Government Operations Committee, which he chairs, has time to review them.

The proposed regulations were born in 1986 as a presidential directive. The public and most lawmakers did not examine them too closely, probably because the idea of weeding out abusers makes sense.

The OMB unveiled the fine print behind that noble idea last May — 10 pages of suspension guidelines that go far beyond punishing chronic abusers of federal aid. The 28 agencies overseen by OMB are prepared to implement the regulations, beginning in May of this year.

The rules would exile offenders from federal assistance for as much as three years. Only personal entitlements such as Social Security and welfare payments would be protected.

The blacklist could be about as secretive as a public spanking; OMB has suggested that the list be accessible via a toll-free number.

Even those who "do business" with someone on the list would be subject to blacklisting themselves, whether or not they knew the offending party was on the list.

When members of Congress began reacting to the 10-page set of regulations, OMB officials seemed surprised about the fuss. In a letter to Brooks, one OMB official explained that the rules for suspending private citizens from federal aid were simply modeled after existing rules imposed on contractors who regularly do business with the federal government.

But a side-by-side analysis of the two sets of rules shows that contractors dealing with huge sums of money get less scrutiny than that proposed for the farmer or the student seeking a federal loan.

A contractor has to willfully fail to perform his job to be barred from future government work. But a citizen can be blacklisted for something that could be out of his hands. Contractors can be punished only for their dealings with the federal government; individuals could be scrutinized for their dealings with state and local agencies.

There is still time to make changes before the regulations take effect, according to Joseph Wright, deputy director of the OMB. He thinks only "the most serious violators" will end up on the list — a number he estimates at about 3,500.

But consumer groups are not so sure. Gary Bass, director of OMB Watch, a non-profit group critical of the agency, says OMB "wants to play God," and he fears the list will be used by the powerful for political leverage.

The beleaguered farmers may have the most to lose from the new rules. Howard Lyman, a legislative analyst for the National Farmers Union, estimates that the rules would force 65,000 family farmers out of business. Farmers now get about 30 percent of their livelihood through federally backed programs. "Being on the blacklist, you'd be born dead," Lyman said.

We asked the inspector general's office in the Department of Agriculture how the regulations would affect farmers. A spokesman declined comment, saying the subject was "too raw" and that the OMB didn't want it bandied about in the press.

MINI-EDITORIAL — We are confounded by the economic wizards in the White House and on Capitol Hill who whine about every dollar they have to squeeze out of the federal budget, but who manage somehow to maintain a fleet of non-military planes — 1,100 to be exact, costing $650 million a year — for the purpose of sparing public servants the inconvenience of scheduled airline flights.

Dole trying to break down Bush 'firewall'

MIAMI — Facing the possibility that his candidacy has but two weeks to live, Sen. Robert Dole's advisors are desperately trying to draw distinctions, based mainly on personality, with front-running Vice President George Bush.

It is a daunting task for the Senate minority leader. Short on money and organization, his high command is divided on strategy. In trying to break down Bush's Southern "firewall," Dole propounds no great philosophical positions. He calls on the Republican faithful to abandon their heir apparent because — says the tagline on Dole television commercials — "the difference is leadership." More than disagreeing with Bush, Dole dislikes him at the level of contempt.

Bush's handlers laugh it off, reinserting their candidate in a vice presidential bubble. Television and radio spots respond to Dole's attacks while Bush sticks to generalities and avoids self-damaging remarks. It is an undemanding campaign, hardly preparing the vice president for opposing the Democrats.

Of 840 delegates up for grabs in the 21 states involved in South Carolina's primary and Super Tuesday, Dole will be happy to limit Bush to around 500 delegates. That is the price of Dole's fateful loss in New Hampshire, Pat Robertson's underachievement in the South and the virtual end of Rep. Jack Kemp's candidacy. Dole seeks an upset in Illinois a week later, to be followed by other Midwestern wins (Wisconsin on April 5; Ohio and Indiana, May 3), making it close enough for California to become the showdown primary June 7.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

It is a very long shot, partly because there is no strategy consensus in Dole's campaign. He began the week in Atlanta addressing the Georgia Legislature, traveled to Jackson, Miss., for a midday rally in purposely cramped quarters where the news media outnumbered supporters; and doubleback East for a sparsely attended rush hour rally in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

In those states and everywhere else in the Super Tuesday South, Bush's leads are immense. His 2-to-1 Florida margin could sweep all 82 delegates. That leads to advice inside the Dole campaign to abandon Dixie forthwith and take a life-or-death stand in Illinois. But campaign manager William Brock, operating from the plane, wants to nickel-and-dime Super Tuesday delegates in North Carolina, Missouri, Oklahoma and, maybe, Alabama.

No less difficult than deciding where Dole goes is determining what he says. In the South, he sounds more like a conservative. At that dreary Ft. Lauderdale rally, he derided Bush's plea to "give peace a chance" by saying Gorbachev, Castro and Ortega only understand "the point of a gun." He pledged to veto any bill that "tries to balance the budget on the backs of the taxpayer."

But Bush, too, has turned right here, so Dole's distinctions mainly claim he is a self-made man, tougher and more effective. Commercials showing Bush as an ineffective waffler are appearing throughout the South. To portray the vice president as effete, one spot which started airing Thursday in South Carolina began, "Here's another reason to vote for George Bush. He speaks French." He was then quoted as saying "C'est la vie" when "asked about his disagreement with South Carolinians on textiles."

But again, Brock strategy is not set. Should scarce money be spent to cut losses in the South or hoarded for the Midwestern showdown? Dole strategists hope these spots will prompt Bush campaign manager Lee Atwater to follow his instincts and open his warchest for counterattacks.

He has done just that. In South Carolina, Gov. Carroll Campbell complains in a radio spot that ex-U.S. Trade Representative Brock "wouldn't get tough" enforcing textile agreements. Another South Carolina spot claims Minority Leader Dole defected from President Reagan 30 percent last year and charges "Under Bob Dole's leadership, we lost the Bork nomination." The same "straddle" spot that caused Dole to call Bush a liar over NBC in New Hampshire is repeated throughout the South.

It will take lots more than that to break Bush's campaign bank. The vice president himself is kept clear of nasty talk. In two days on the road beginning the week, he had scant contact with reporters. When they shouted at him to comment on a Dole commercial saying Bush "supported the arms-for-hostage deal," the vice president responded: "I support the president, and I have nothing to say about Dole's charges — absolutely nothing."

In rally speeches, he does not have much to say about anything. He is back in his pre-Iowa bubble. A campaign with Air Force Two, long, black limousines, endless caravans, squadrons of motorcycle police and Secret Service platoons seems a different breed from Bob Dole's frantic, hastily arranged travels.

The vice president's men predict that the last intra-Republican debate has been held. That is in keeping with a campaign geared to prevention of some untoward event enabling Dole to recover from his New Hampshire fiasco. Whether it has the right stuff for the fall campaign could be quite another matter.

Raising speed limit kills driving ambition

I don't think it was such a good idea to raise the speed limit on stretches of interstate and rural areas to 65.

The reason is when people get behind the wheel of a car, they immediately develop a criminal mind.

Grizzard

Most of us won't steal, kill, deal in drugs or make a tape of a movie we rented, which would get us on the FBI most wanted list.

But when we get into our cars, we might as well be Bonnie or Clyde.

In the first place, I'd guess 90 percent of the nation's drivers speed, which is against the law.

If the speed limit signs say "55," hardly anybody goes 55. We figure we've got a cushion there someplace and if we push it up to, say, 65, the cops aren't going to bother us.

So we drive 65. When we're really feeling our wild oats, we go up to 70.

Others, of course, go even faster if they have one of those machines that makes chirping noises when there is police radar around.

They call these things "fuzzbusters." You can go 120 if you want to if you own one of those things. When the chirping starts, you simply slow down.

It doesn't take a criminal mind to operate one of those things? Of course it does.

What's the difference between a fuzzbuster and a lookout?

"I'll go in the bank and take the money and shoot the security guard," criminal No. 1 says, "and you look out for the cops."

"What should I do if I see one?" criminal No. 2 asks.

"Make a chirping noise."

There are all sorts of other ways people can break the law when they drive.

For instance, nobody really comes to a full stop at a stop sign if they're in a hurry and there are no other cars around.

Stopping completely at a stop sign could cost you a half second. With that precious amount of time saved, maybe you could learn to speak French.

Other drivers don't wait their turn at four-way stops. They also make illegal lane changes, neglect to flip on their turn signals, speed up through yellow caution lights, tailgate, and put obscene stickers on their bumpers.

Throw in those who still drink and drive, and we've got a nation full of people who make driving terribly risky to your well-being as well as to your sanity.

And now, we go and make driving even more of a crap shoot by raising the speed limit to 65 on rural interstates.

Nobody will go 65, of course. They'll go 75 and 80 through the boonies and we'll soon get the automobile death rate back up there where it belongs.

Also, Farmer Brown will never know the answer to that ageless question: Why did the chicken cross the road?

Some fool who thought he was Richard Petty ran over it.

Arizona lawman testifies Mecham obstructed justice

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona's ranking lawman insisted during a long interrogation by Gov. Evan Mecham's lawyer that the impeached governor obstructed justice in the investigation of an alleged death threat.

Attorney Fred Craft said he wanted to continue questioning Col. Ralph Milstead, director of the state Department of Public Safety, today. Senators who are sitting as a jury at Mecham's impeachment trial expressed a desire to move on to testimony from the target of the alleged threat, Donna Carlson.

During his five hours of testimony Monday, Milstead portrayed Mecham as a frightened, angry leader who told him: "I don't want you to help the attorney general hang me. Don't tell him anything."

The first-term Republican governor is accused of trying to thwart an investigation into whether an associate, Lee Watkins, threatened last Nov. 12 to send Ms. Carlson on "a long boat ride" if she testified before a grand jury investigating Mecham's campaign finances. Watkins has denied threatening Ms. Carlson, a former Mecham aide.

Milstead testified that he considered the alleged threat serious because Watkins had a criminal record. Watkins resigned as state prison construction chief after a past assault conviction was disclosed.

Milstead, 49, said he phoned Mecham on Nov. 15 to alert him to the possible death threat. "I think my words to the governor were, 'I don't want you to be blindsided,'" said Milstead.

Milstead said when Mecham told him not to cooperate with the attorney general, "I was in shock over what he was saying, taken aback, speechless."

Craft asked Milstead why he had not included his own part of the conversation in a report he wrote on his talk with Mecham.

"Because I'm not committing a crime," said Milstead. "I'm not obstructing justice."

"When did you conclude that the governor's words constituted a crime?" asked Craft.

"As I'm hearing them and reflecting on them," said Milstead, adding it took him "about two seconds" after hanging up the phone.

Craft asked if Milstead was surprised that his staff didn't tell him the governor had assigned cabinet member Max Hawkins, then-head of the department of administration, to investigate the death threat allegation.

"No, it didn't surprise me," said Milstead. "Max Hawkins is not a law enforcement officer. He's not competent to investigate it. Lee Watkins works for him, and Max Hawkins wouldn't be taken seriously anywhere on Earth that I know of."

The senators decided Monday to forego hearing from Watkins because it meant granting him immunity from prosecution. Watkins invoked Fifth Amendment protection against self incrimination.

Senators also expressed impatience with Craft's long interrogation, which Minority Leader Alan Stephens, a Democrat, called wearing and repetitious.

"If that's what they do in a court of law," said Stephens, "I'm glad I'm not a lawyer."

Mecham, 63, the first U.S. governor to be impeached in six decades, is not attending his trial and did not comment on Milstead's testimony. In January, he testified before a House impeachment committee.

Woman wants more time to move ark

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A woman who built an 80-ton wooden ark from salvaged timber is dismantling part of the vessel in an effort to beat a court deadline ordering it off a church's property.

But Kea Tawana, who calls the ark her "life's sweat and blood," says she needs more time to move the 86-foot-long craft, which has been termed a work of art by the American Museum of Folk Art but an eyesore by the city.

"It's consumed 20 years of my life. Short of a miracle...the ark is doomed," Tawana said.

Tawana had been working under a March 31 court deadline to move the ark from the parking lot of the Humanity Baptist Church to Newark Bay, three-quarters of a mile away. Superior Court Judge Harry A. Margolis recently extended the deadline until April 15.

But Tawana, who says she built the ark from oak, hemlock and pine to live in, not for religious reasons, says she needs more time to dismantle part of it for the move and obtain Coast Guard approval of the ship's seaworthiness.

"Bad weather this winter prevented work on the ship from continuing," Tawana said, adding that she will ask Margolis at a March 22 hearing for a 90-day extension. "April 15 does not give me enough time to render the ship floatable."

Tawana said she plans to sail the ark to the Great Lakes region and live there, although she did not say where.

Newark officials have long wanted the ark torn down. The city went to court over the issue, saying it was an eyesore and health hazard and violated zoning laws.

However, Margolis last spring prohibited the city from destroying it after the American Museum of Folk Art in New York City wrote to Mayor Sharpe James and Gov. Thomas H. Kean, urging them to preserve the structure.

"The ark is a very important and very rare example of urban folk art expression," said Didi Barrett, the museum's director of publications.

The Humanity Baptist Church had allowed Tawana to live on the property as a caretaker in a ramshackle house next to the ark until last year, when it ended the relationship, saying that the court battle over the ark cost too much.

"The city wants to drive me out and turn this over to developers for condominiums," Tawana said.

But Audrey Davidson, assistant corporate counsel for Newark, said zoning laws are the issue.

"I have no idea whether the city is trying to build something there. All I know is that the structure there is illegal," Ms. Davidson said.

Tawana said she will cut 4 feet off beams in the ark to reduce the vessel's height to 17 feet from 21 feet so it will not get snagged on cables running over streets on the trip to Newark Bay.

High Court again takes up sex discrimination in workplace

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is beginning another examination of sex discrimination in the American workplace, agreeing to decide how difficult it should be for employers to disprove charges of sexist stereotyping.

Setting the stage for an important ruling likely to be announced in 1989, the justices on Monday said they will hear an appeal by Price Waterhouse, one of the nation's leading accounting firms.

The company is accused of allowing sexism, some of it perhaps unconscious, to play a key role in denying a woman a partnership in the firm.

A federal appeals court placed a heavy burden on the firm to disprove the sex bias charges.

Price Waterhouse, one of the nation's so-called "big eight" accounting firms, is accused of discriminating unlawfully against Ann Hopkins. She quit the firm's office here after she was denied promotion to partnership, a move that would have made her a part owner.

Ms. Hopkins joined the firm in 1978 and was nominated for partnership in 1982, the only woman among 88 candidates for partnership that year. At the time, the company had more than 660 partners in 90 offices nationwide.

Ms. Hopkins had been very successful in getting business for the company, winning government contracts worth an estimated $34 million to $44 million.

Of the 88 candidates in 1978, 47 were invited to become partners; 21 were rejected outright; and 20 including Ms. Hopkins were placed on hold.

The following year she was told she would not become a partner and she resigned in 1984 to set up her own consulting firm.

Both her critics and supporters at Price Waterhouse said she sometimes was overly aggressive, too harsh, impatient with her staff and very demanding.

One critic suggested she needed to take a "course at charm school."

A partner in the firm who urged her promotion told her she would stand a better chance of becoming a partner if she would "walk more femininely, talk more femininely, dress more femininely, wear makeup, have her hair styled and wear jewelry."

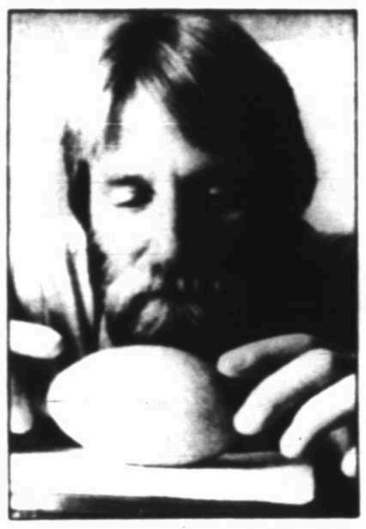

Others said her use of profanity was a black mark against her.

Ms. Hopkins then sued Price Waterhouse, accusing the company of violating Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act prohibiting on-the-job sex discrimination. She said that sex stereotyping, unconscious or otherwise, barred her from being named partner.

The Supreme Court ruled in 1984, in the case of a woman denied partnership in a law firm, that professional partnerships are covered by the 1964 law.

A federal judge ruled Price Waterhouse must prove "by clear and convincing evidence" it would not have made her a partner.

California condor egg fertile, officials say

AP Laserphoto

Don Sterner, the condor keeper at the San Diego Wild Animal Park, weighs the California condor egg laid last Thursday at the park.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The first California condor egg produced by captive breeding is fertile and contains the makings of a chick, San Diego Wild Animal Park officials said Monday.

"You can't actually see an embryo yet, but what you can see is the beginnings of circulatory development, which appears as a dark dime-sized dot toward the top of the yolk," park spokesman Tom Hanscom said.

The egg was laid Thursday, the product of a male condor known as AC-4 and a female condor called UN-1. It was removed immediately from its nest in the park's "condorminium" and placed in an incubator.

Keepers peeked inside the egg by holding it up to a high-intensity lamp in a process known as "candling." The egg then was returned to its incubator, where it will be kept until the hatching expected between April 28 and May 3, Hanscom said.

"Now, we incubate the egg according to the parameters that have worked so well in the past and hope...we can hatch a healthy condor chick," he said.

All 27 living California condors are in captivity. Fourteen are kept at the Wild Animal Park and 13 at the Los Angeles Zoo.

Thirteen of the 27 birds were hatched in captivity in an effort to build a breeding flock to save the rare birds from extinction. Each of those eggs were taken from nests in the wild.

The breeding program has been conducted at the San Diego Zoo and its affiliate, the Wild Animal Park, since 1983 in cooperation with state and federal wildlife officials.

The last known wild condor was captured in April 1987 by government biologists after it was determined the carrion-eating birds' existence was threatened by lead poisoning in their food supply and human encroachment upon their central California habitat.

"Our success or failure has pivoted on the captive production of a fertile egg and that's what we've got," Hanscom said of the 4-day-old egg.

Meanwhile, the parents of the egg were said to be doing well. Keepers removed the shell from its nest soon after it was laid to stimulate more breeding activity by the pair, which Hanscom said has begun.

"That's real positive," he said. "That would lead us to hope for the production of a second egg, which could come as early as 30 days after the first egg.

9,800 identified as former concentration camp guards

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department's Nazi-hunting unit has identified 9,800 people as former concentration camp guards and said Monday it will have them placed on the immigration watch list of individuals to be barred from the United States.

The Office of Special Investigations compiled the names with the assistance of a sophisticated new computer database.

Names of suspected criminals and Nazi persecutors are systematically checked against immigration records to determine if they are in the United States.

The names of individuals not found to be in this country are included in the watch list to prevent them from entering.

OSI has listed thousands of such people in the past few years. But the 9,800 now to be placed on the watch list of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service "for serving as concentration and death camp guards is probably the greatest number" to be added at one time, said the office's chief, Neal Sher.

The watch list includes people who are prohibited from entering the United States under a federal law barring individuals who assisted or otherwise participated in Nazi-sponsored persecution.

Postage rates still debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher postage rates will not take effect before Easter, Chairman John Griesemer of the board of governors of the Postal Service said today.

The independent Postal Rate Commission recommended on Friday a sweeping series of postage rate changes, including a new 25-cent first class rate. The hikes are currently being discussed by the agency's governing board.

Griesemer said that while he is aware that both businesses and consumers are anxious to know the effective date of the new rates, deliberations are still underway.

But, he added, the new rates will not take effect until at least April 3, which is Easter this year.

The Postal Service announced today that it will begin offering telephone sales of stamps nationwide.

Callers will be able starting today to use Visa and MasterCard credit cards to order the new undenominated "E" stamps, with the stamps to be mailed out once the final decision is made on the new rate.

Court rules in favor of GM

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court today upheld a 1987 ruling that there was no evidence General Motors Corp. sold 1.1 million 1980 X-cars knowing they had defective brakes.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here affirmed a decision by U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson rejecting goverment claims that GM deliberately sold cars with brakes that locked prematurely, causing the cars to spin out of control under certain circumstances.

The case resulted from an investigation by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration into owners' complaints. The company voluntarily agreed in 1981 to recall 47,371 X-cars with manual transmissions to replace a brake valve.

In 1984, the agency charged in a civil complaint that GM knew or should have determined that the brake system was defective and filed suit for $4 million in penalties.

Judge halts strip searches

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Routine strip searches of children awaiting deportation are unconstitutional, a federal judge ruled Monday, saying immigration agents must first have a reasonable suspicion that drugs or weapons have been hidden.

U.S. District Judge Robert Keleher rejected an Immigration and Naturalization Service argument that the body-cavity searches are needed because adults will use children as couriers if agents cannot search them.

"Children confined by the INS are not charged with any criminal offense, let alone an offense that might indicate a propensity to conceal weapons or contraband on their persons," Keleher ruled.

Peace activist's widow endows college in husband's name

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — The widow of a man whose dream was world peace has found a way to further his ideas more than 40 years after his international best seller on the subject was published.

Wendy Reves, a native of Texas now living in France, has honored her late husband, Emery Reves, by committing $3 million to endow the Center for International Studies at the College of William and Mary here, to insure that vital issues on world peace are studied and perpetuated.

"When I read Reves' book, 'The Anatomy of Peace,' I am struck by the provocative and penetrating nature of his ideas," says Dr. James A. Bill, a noted authority on the Middle East and director of the center.

The major premise of "The Anatomy of Peace" is that as long as there are nation-states with geographical boundaries and competing interests, then war is inevitable.

"His predictions on nation-states have been borne out a half century later," says Bill. "We continue to live in a violent world of war and international conflict."

Since the book was published in 1945, "Nations have continually been in conflict with each other," Bill points out. Reves proposed an international federal system whereby a higher rule by law would wield ultimate authority.

"This international structure must have the force of law and the agreement of the great powers behind it to be effective," explains Bill, who notes that Reves was critical of both the League of Nations and the United Nations, which he believed were not equal to peacekeeping.

"It may be time to go back and look at Reves' ideas," says Bill. "Perhaps we should re-examine his perceptive diagnosis and then work from there. With nuclear arsenals ever-present, the stakes involved in this enterprise could be no less than human survival."

The Reves gift will endow virtually all of the William and Mary center's activities. It will be used to establish a distinguished visiting scholar-in-residence program and to fund academic conferences, library acquisitions, multimedia resources, academic research and scholarships.

The endowment also will be used to establish a peace prize recognizing an individual who embodies Emery Reves' commitment to international peace.

"This endowment provides a gigantic and generous boost to our program," says Bill. "Our concerns in international studies are basic; they deal with survival.

"We're interested in studying whether violent conflict is inevitable to mankind," he says. "We're concerned with the issues of war, peace, world order, international justice and U.S. foreign policy. International studies are designed to enable us to confront sensitively and realistically these kinds of problems."

A very basic way of promoting international problem-solving is through the study of foreign languages, says Bill. "William and Mary already has the foundation of a strong international studies program because of its longstanding emphasis on foreign language study," he points out.

Unlike many universities, William and Mary over the years has maintained its foreign language requirement for graduation.

The Center for International Studies coordinates William and Mary undergraduates majoring in international studies; this includes East Asian, Latin American and Soviet-Russian studies as well as international relations. A minor is offered in African studies.

The center also oversees the operation of the university's 13 study-abroad programs in locations ranging from Europe and the Caribbean to the People's Republic of China.

Mrs. Reves became interested in supporting international studies at William and Mary through her contact with friends in Williamsburg who share her late husband's commitment to world peace.

Frank Shatz, a local newspaper columnist, told Mrs. Reves of the university's plans for the center. Shatz, an emigre from Czechoslovakia, had read "Anatomy of Peace" before fleeing the Communist takeover of his country.

"It became my bible," says Shatz, "transforming me into a faithful disciple of Emery Reves." During Shatz' first return to Europe, he decided to visit Reves, "to pay my respects to the man who had so profoundly influenced my outlook on world events."

Reves was born in Hungary but later became a British citizen. He died in 1981.

Bums: Just another word for people

By PHIL LATHAM

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — He was just a bum. A bum.

He sidled up to my car like a man both proud and ashamed.

"Do you have any change so that a fella might eat?" he asked me.

I moved my son closer to the car door. Somehow, I felt threatened by the bum's presence.

"Sorry," I said. "I don't have a dime."

It was a lie, of course. I had change in my pocket. I even had dollar bills in my billfold. What's more, the bum knew it was a lie. Bums must hear the same lie every day from people wearing suits and driving late-model cars.

Truth to tell, I didn't have much money and it was certainly easy to convince myself that I really needed all I had. In situations like this, you can believe even the lies you tell yourself.

What was this bum doing anyway, accosting me and the world in front of the grocery store? I had a child with me. Everybody knows bums can be dangerous.

I quickly got in my car and locked the door, safe from the bum and the world.

Looking back on it all, I have this feeling that the bum wasn't very dangerous, he was just very hungry.

What must push a man to beg in the street? It must give you an empty stomach no amount of food will fill.

It is quite likely, of course, that the bum was less interested in tuna than Thunderbird. I didn't, and don't, know that. I don't know if anyone gave him any money. Somehow, not knowing gives me an empty feeling, too.

My father once told me that you only deserve the things you earn. I believe that, but I wonder if we're looking from the wrong point of view. It is not how much we deserve that is important, but how much we owe.

In my state of mind that day, I thought about even going inside and complaining to the manager to get the bum away, out of sight, out of mind. I didn't do that, but I'm confident that, seeing the reactions of others he approached, someone told somebody who told the bum to leave.

I suppose he went where bums go and I suppose he went hungry.

Inside the car my 5-year-old son, sitting next to a sack of groceries we had just purchased, asked me why I didn't give the man any money.

"He's just a bum," I told him, somewhat gruffly. "He's not a bum, daddy," he said. "He's just a man."

I told him then to hush, that he didn't know. But now I wonder.

Maybe we should come up with another name for bums. Maybe we should call them people.

BEE SMART

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1988 Regional Spelling Bee March 26 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 25. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

lir-ə-sist

lyricist — (noun) Madonna, Paul McCartney, Irving Berlin and George M. Cohan are "lyricists," or writers of "lyrics," the words that can be set to music and sung. The word "lyrics" is derived from the ancient Greek word "lyrikos," which related to a "lyre," a stringed harp-like instrument used by the Greeks to accompany singing. The "ist" suffix is attached to several other occupations or callings. A "publicist" works at getting information to the public; a "dentist" is a doctor specializing in dental care; a "philanthropist" supports worthy causes. What does a "cartoonist" do?

ECISD trustees to seek support for bond issue

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County school trustees on Wednesday night will sound out Friends of Education for support of a planned $9.8 million bond issue proposal with a 2.5 cents tax rate increase to pay for it. The bond issue would be submitted to voters May 7.

Late Monday morning, ECISD trustees met in special session and approved the proposed bond package after hearing several financing options explained by Dr. Bill Walker, associate superintendent for business affairs.

According to Walker, the tax rate increase for the average Ector County homeowner will amount to 56 cents per month, or $6.75 a year.

Figures presented by Walker show the "average value" of a residential homestead in Ector County is $40,000. With all allowable exemptions, the taxable value would be reduced to $27,000.

Based on the 1987-88 debt service rate, the 2.5 cents would increase the total rate to 8.4 cents for the 1988-89 tax year, which would increase the debt service portion of school district taxes from this year's $15.93 (on the average $40,000 home) to $22.68 for the coming year.

If trustees continue the maintenance-operating fund tax rate of 85.7 cents for the coming year, that would mean the total tax rate would increase from 91.6 cents per $100 of taxable value to 94.1 cents.

Based on those figures, the 1988-89 taxes due on an average $40,000 home, with all allowable exemptions, would be about $254.07, compared to $247.32 for the 1987-88 tax year.

The increase would not affect taxpayers 65 or older because their school tax rates are frozen at 1979 levels, or whatever level tax rates are at when a taxpayer turns 65.

ECISD trustees rejected a proposal that would not have increased the debt service tax rate. Walker explained the "zero increase" approach would extend repayment of the $9.8 million bond issue farther into the future and significantly increase interest costs.

The 2.5 cent rate would allow repayment of bonds in about 15 years.

As proposed, the $9.8 million bond proposal would build three new elementary schools and 17 new classrooms at existing schools.

The expansion is necessary, Walker said, for the district to comply with state-mandated pupil-teacher classroom ratios.

This problem is being compounded, he said, by the fact that the state has mandated a prekindergarten program that adds an entire new grade level to the ECISD system.

Additionally, the pupil-teacher ratio must be extended by fall 1988 to include classrooms through Grade 4.

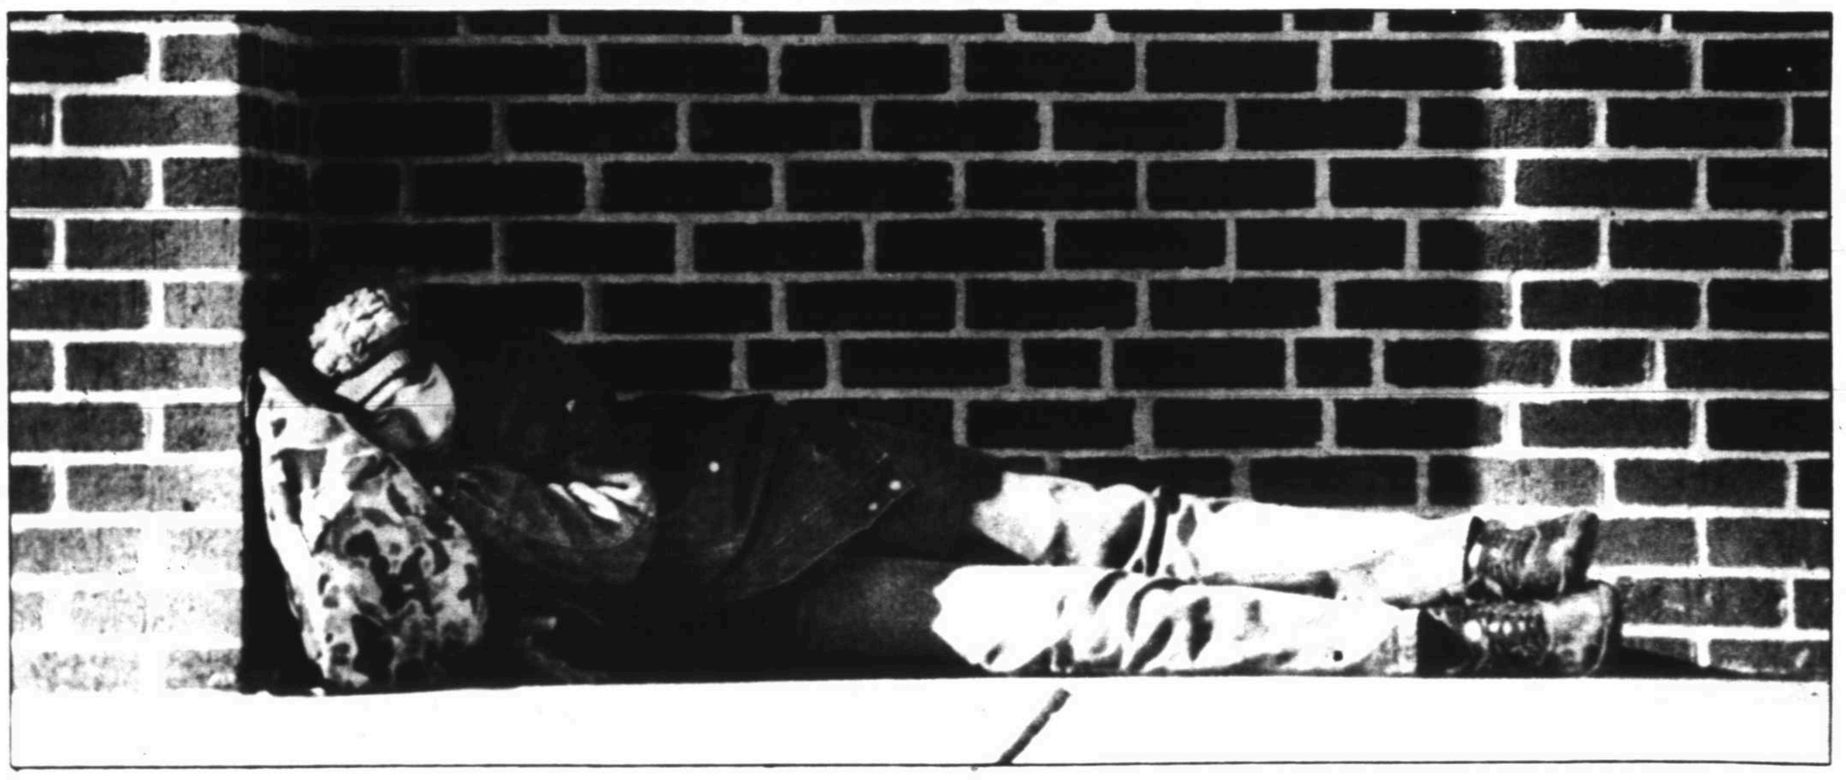

Midland Independent School District officials also are considering a bond issue that would result in new classrooms.

Walker observed that, in the 1987-88 school year, "every available school classroom is being utilized...including 788 full-size classrooms, 61 undersize classrooms, 39 portable classrooms and one small house."

He added that in a few instances classroom shortages have created a need to use a music room, library, workroom, office, or stage for instructional purposes.

In addition to meeting with Friends of Education Wednesday night at Bonham Junior High School Auditorium, trustees will hold a special session Monday to name a steering committee to guide the bond election campaign.

Next Tuesday, trustees will meet in regular session and formally set May 7 as the bond election date.

Counties association asks judge to reactivate prison beds

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Asking a federal judge to let the state reactivate prison beds that were ordered out of service in 1987 would help Texas relieve prison crowding, says the Texas Association of Counties.

Citing mounting county expenses for housing felons awaiting space in state prison, the association has sent Gov. Bill Clements a list of recommendations.

Midland County Commissioner Guy McCrary said he believed the association was justified in asking the question of U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler, but that a favorable answer would be unrealistic.

The association said Texas counties could spend $70.2 million a year to house felons awaiting space in state prison.

"We know that you do not favor a state policy that forces local governments and ad valorem taxpayers to shoulder a burden that legally and equitably belongs to state agencies," said the letter signed by the association's task force on jail overcrowding.

According to a Criminal Justice Policy Council projection, at least 5,492 felons who should be in state prison will be held in county jails by Sept. 1.

Midland County is presently building a new $3.8 million facility to combat the same problem facing other counties and the Texas Department of Corrections — orders limiting the inmate population.

"Given the overall analysis, I'm very gratified that Midland Coutny is going to be prepared to avoid the problem that is facing so many Texas counties," McCrary said.

The group said Clements, working with Attorney General Jim Mattox, should ask Justice for authorization to "reactivate as many as possible of the beds that were eliminated in 1987 as part of the depopulation order, but remain operational."

Those beds could be used until at least the end of 1990, when additional new prison space will be available, the county officials said.

The association also asked Clements to "take all steps necessary" to use bonds and available funds to build, buy or contract for additional prison space. TDC has an ambitious construction plan under way, but the county officials called for 2,000 beds in addition to those now planned.

Also requested was more money for intensive supervision of probationers.

The county association said, "The ultimate solution to overcrowding of the state prison system must come through a comprehensive look at the criminal justice system."

Midlander charged in shooting at park

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 21-year-old Midland man was charged Monday in the Sunday evening shooting of another man in a neighborhood park, according to police.

Jimmy Lee Reed, 2600 Loop 250, was charged with aggravated assault causing serious bodily injury. Bond was set at $50,000 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, according to reports.

Reed was among dozens of people gathered at Washington Park about 6:20 p.m. Sunday, near the intersection of Indiana Avenue and Adams Street, when Anthony Anderson, 28, was shot once in the abdomen.

Anderson remained in critical condition today at Midland Memorial Hospital, according to hospital spokeswoman Sue Ristom.

Reed was arrested at the scene and a .22-caliber handgun was confiscated from him, according to police.

The suspect had "an ongoing dispute with several people" in town, but apparently not with the victim, according to police spokesman Cpl. Jim White.

Police believe Anderson was an innocent bystander and was not the intended victim, White said.

In other reports, a 21-year-old Midland man was charged Monday with aggravated sexual assault in connection with the injury of an 11-month old girl late Friday.

Earl Brock Kline, 4410 Lanham, was charged and bond set at $50,000 by Pine. He was still being held at city jail today, White said.

Investigators have released little information about the assault, but the attack occurred Friday night, after the girl's mother had left to go to her job at a fast food restaurant. The girl was assaulted at the north Midland apartment where she lived with her mother.

After the injuries to the girl were discovered, she was taken to the emergency room at Midland Memorial Hospital. There she was treated for injuries received in the assault and released to her mother, according to White.

Sculptor can make a living with his art

By SUSANNAH KENNEDY

DALLAS (AP) — One day recently, the resident of a white board house in East Dallas looked out the window to find people crawling all over the cow in the front yard.

Harold F. Clayton says it's not unusual to look out his window and see strangers in his yard. It is unusual to see a big white marble cow in an East Dallas front yard.

The cow is one of Clayton's more popular creations. Duplicates can be found in front of the Austin Arboretum, in the Trinity River bottoms and at Las Colinas.

A sculptor since he graduated from college, the Dallas native has garnered enough of a following to afford trips to sculpting studios in Italy, a high-tech kitchen, and best of all, time to do what he wants to do.

On a sunny, warm day, Clayton can be found in his back yard, wearing faded Levis rolled up over bare feet, his blondish-red hair thinning, hands rough from years of working with air chisels that jump and jigger as they carve stone.

This day, Clayton moves the pieces of a just-finished wall piece back and forth over a white platform flat on the dry grass. "I love seeing forms emerge, seeing the shapes come out of the stone," he says, as he surveys the brown-marble sea life.

Although he says he sometimes dreads the moment when he hands over his sculpture in exchange for a check, he says in general "things look better where they're finally intended to be."

A lean man with wary blue eyes and an engaging smile, Clayton, 33, says he wants to become a household name and doesn't like to be categorized. He is an artist and has been since he started as a kid with crayons.

Fire that killed boy being probed

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Fire and police investigators continue to probe a Monday afternoon fire of undetermined cause that claimed the life of a 2-year-old boy in Odessa.

Fire Marshal Rick Cates said firefighters responding to a house fire call at 805 E. 25th Street found the body of Steven Eric Aguilar in a small storage building that was heavily damaged by fire.

Firefighters arriving on the scene shortly after 3:35 p.m. were told by onlookers that they believed a small child was inside the building at the rear of the residence. Firefighters were unable to approach the structure until they extinguished the flames, which also damaged an adjacent fence.

Police Sgt. Frank Beam said detectives from the department's Crimes Against Persons Division and Peace Justice R.G. Hungerford were summoned to the scene moments after the body of the youngster was found. Hungerford prounounced the child dead at the scene at 4:05 p.m. ordered an autopsy.

Request to redirect funds for SSC denied

DALLAS (AP) — Two congressional subcommittees have denied an Energy Department request to redirect $8 million from other programs to fund site evaluation for the proposed "super collider" project this year.

The decision could slow progress on the federal atom-smasher project, which is being considered for an Ellis County site near Waxahachie.

Energy Department controller Elizabeth E. Smedley made the funding request to Congress Feb. 24, after officials discovered they had not budgeted sufficient funds to complete site evaluations.

But the request was denied last week by U.S. Sen. J. Bennet Johnston, chairman of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on energy and water development, and U.S. Rep. Tom Bevill, D-Ala., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommmitte on energy and water use.

Energy Department officials now say they are considering other methods of funding final site selection among seven possible locations, including the one south of Dallas, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

The department has said it wants to complede environmental reviews and select a single preferred site for the $4.4 billion physics facility by late November. Under that schedule, a final site would be selected before President Reagan leaves office in January.

Sources told the newspaper, however, that the $8 million will be taken from the $25 million in reserach and development given to the Central Design Group, which is developing magnets for the super collider.

The newspaper reported that it is also possible, but less likely, that the Energy Department will slow down its environmental review of the finalist sites, a step department officials said may delay site selection.

One problem, officials said, is the unexpectedly high costs of reviewing potential sites for the project.

"In the beginning, our initial figuring was just that — rough figuring," said Regina Borchard, executive director of super collider coordination for the Energy Department.

"We did not know how many sites would be on the short list, nor how many would compete," she said. "Obviously, the more that compete throughout the prosess, the more expenseive it is."

Fort Worth man keeps adding to collection of 700 kites

By JERRY COFFEY

FORT WORTH (AP) — Don't tell John E. Young to go fly a kite unless you really mean it.

Young could put 700 of the colorful fliers in the air over Fort Worth — from his own collection.

The Water Department employee is the premier kite enthusiast in these parts — not just a collector and flier but a kite maker, teacher, lecturer, exhibitor and contest and festival director.

Some 160 of Young's kites are on display this month at Fort Worth's Central Library downtown. He calls the exhibiton "Tethered Flight."

Young's collection, which long ago overflowed his home into three storage buildings, comes in all shapes and sizes — with wingspans from a few inches to 13 feet — and from all over the world.

There are historic kites, fighter kites, stunt kites, theme kites — even a World War II hero kite, a "Gibson Girl" box kite that took a radio aerial aloft and helped rescuers locate a Navy plane downed in the ocean.

But Young has a special feeling for the dime store kites that have introduced several generations of youngsters to the joys of kite flying.

Young's own introduction to kiting came much later than one would think. "I didn't start until I was an adult," he says. "I was in the Air Force at Tucson, Ariz., and one Sunday afternoon I went with a friend down to Fort Lowell Park to watch him fly his kites.

"He put up a train of three French military box kites he had made himself, and I watched them dance in the air against Mount Lemmon and thought how pretty that was. Then he asked if I wanted to hold the string, and I said of course I did. And, well, from that time on, I was hooked. Built my first kite the next day.

"It wasn't a large kite," Young recalled. "I built a miniature — an 8-inch hexagon — because model airplane building was what I was used to."

"If this thing goes like I want it to, I'll have a museum some day, and a person can come in and find not only the kind of kite he has flown but the kind his father and grandfather flew."

— Kite collector John E. Young

That kite, unfortunately, is no longer in Young's collecton. "I was flying it down on South Padre Island," he says. "Had it up about 1,000 feet, and the string parted for some reason and it fell in the Gulf."

In Young's early days as a kite enthusiast, making them was the thing. He'd spend missile-alert time copying patterns from his friend's book on kite craft. But an experience with a contraption that was half-kite, half-balloon introduced him to the remarkable variety of kites available for purchase, and his interest shifted.

Now his collection is largely composed of ready-made kites, and he's still buying.

"One of my favorite things to do is go to a small town where they have a dime store and rummage sale around. Sometimes you find these old paper kites that didn't sell thrown in the back," Young says. "Some of them have been there for years and years, and I buy them for a nickle apiece and they go into my collection.

"I have a lot of kites that probably are the last surviving examples of their species," he says.

Young sees his collection as bridging the gap between the two kite cultures — the made kite of earlier generations and the bought kite of recent ones. "If this thing goes like I want it to, I'll have a museum some day, and a person can come in and find not only the kind of kite he has flown but the kind his father and grandfather flew," he says.

Stunt kiting is popular nowadays, and some kite enthusiasts have impressive collections of expensive kites costing around $100, he says, but Young knows of no one who has as many kites or as varied a collection as he does.

"You can buy a lot of my kind of kites for $100, although I do have some of the fancy ones," he says. "I think the public can identify more with the American Beauty and the Folly Roger and the Man in the Moon (early inexpensive models) and stuff like that than with the expensive kites. You have to be pretty serious to lay out $100 for something — especially if you have a wife."

Young's wife, Barbara, advises and helps on displays but "would rather read a book," he says. Teen-age sons Christopher and John don't share their father's kite enthusiasm, either. "They associate kites with work," Young says, because for much of their lives they have helped dad put kites together for displays.

Young, who also collects greeting cards with kite themes, says the kite was invented some 4,000 years ago, probably by an astute Oriental who had observed a leaf in flight. The first kites were in fact leaves modified with bamboo, he notes.

The Orient was particularly well-suited to develop the kite because it had the right ingredients — rice paper, bamboo and silk for the string. The kite came to the western world with China traveler Marco Polo in the 13th century.

DEATHS

Delphia Turner

Turner

Delphia Lynn Turner of Midland died in a Stanton hospital last Friday following a brief illness.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday at the Northside Church of Christ with Dan Johnson, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery, with Thomas Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

She was born Dec. 26, 1960 in Midland and had lived here all her life.

She is survived by one son, Gwandoya Turner; her mother, Beatrice Turner of Midland; one sister, Veronica Turner of Midland; one brother, Joseph Young of Midland; and two nieces.

Anton Theis

Services for Anton Theis of Midland will be at 1 p.m. Wednesday in the sanctuary of First Baptist Church with Dr. Daniel Vestal officiating.

Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Theis died Sunday afternoon.

He was born Oct. 4, 1898, in Ozona, the son of Rudolph and Anna Theis. He was reared in Ozona, San Angelo and Big Lake. He served during World War I, then returned to Big Lake.

Theis was a charter member of the First Baptist Church in Big Lake and had served on the school board. He graduated from Howard Payne College in Brownwood in 1922.

He married Olga Wanda Leggett on May 24, 1922.

They resided in Big Lake and Texon from 1922 to 1932 where he and his father operated general stores. He was present at the discovery of the Santa Rita #1 and photographed the scene and his pictures have been used numerous times in various oil-related publications.

Mr. and Mrs. Theis also resided in Haskell and then Menard where he operated dry goods stores. They moved to Midland in 1939 where he was for many years Mobil consignee. He retired from this in 1964.

He was a member and a deacon of the First Baptist Church, a 32nd degree Mason, and a former member of the Lion's Club.

He was preceded in death by his wife in 1983, and a daughter, Jacqueline Pierce died Jan. 5, of this year.

Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Jack Nobels and Mrs. H.E. Lindsey, both of Midland; one sister, Mrs. Flora Miller, of Dallas; six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Charles Tom

LAWTON, Okla. — Funeral services for Charles Alfred Tom, 57, of Lawton, Okla., formerly of Midland, will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday at St. Andrews Episcopal Church in Lawton. Burial will follow in Lawton.

He died Sunday at his residence following a lengthy illness.

Tom was born Oct. 16, 1930, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Alfred Tom. His relatives were early ranching pioneers in Midland and Martin County, Charlie and Zora Tom and Frank and Sallie Orson.

In 1951, he married Valerie Venable of Temple and graduated in 1952 from the University of Texas at Austin. He served four years as an officer in the U.S. Army, including service in Korea.

After working with Tennessee Gas Transmission, Spartan Aircraft and Page Aircraft, he went to work for Northrup Aviation, where he remained for 20 years and spent time in Scotland, England, Holland and Iran. He was vice president of the company at the time of his death.

Survivors include his wife, Valerie Tom of Lawton, Okla.; two sons, Marvin Alfred Tom of Tulsa, Okla. and Niles Andrew Tom of Lawton, Okla.; a daughter, Christi Tom of Houston; his mother, Rosalie Tom of New Orleans, La.; a sister, Joan McKnight of New Orleans, La.; and three grandchildren.

Beatrice Davis

ABILENE — Beatrice Davis, 74, of Lamesa, died Sunday following a brief illness at an Abilene hospital.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at the Johnson Memorial Church of God and Christ in Lamesa with the Rev. Henry Johnson, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in Lamesa Memorial Park under the direction of Branon Funeral Home.

She was born Sept. 14, 1913, in Harrison County. She married James Davis in 1938 in Harrison County and came to Lamesa in 1945.

Mrs. Davis was a homemaker and a member of the Johnson Memorial Church of God and Christ.

Survivors include her husband, James Davis, of Lamesa; four sons, Lee Edward Spencer of Lamesa, Ernest Mayfield and James Davis, both of Midland, and Cecil Davis of Lubbock; three daughters, Louise Corn of Abilene, Betty Tolbert of Fort Worth, and Emma Lane of Irving; three sisters, Lula Mae Thompson, Nancy Patrick and Fannie Frazier, all of Dallas; three brothers, William Ray King of Houston, and Alysha Faggans and Needham Faggans, both of Richardson, Calif.; 34 grandchildren and 22 great grandchildren.

Douglas Locke

Services for Douglas (Doug) Locke of Midland will be Wednesday at 11 a.m. in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. John W. Setzer Jr. officiating.

Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Locke died at a Midland hospital Monday evening.

He was born Oct. 17, 1910, in Crossett, Ark., where he was reared. He attended St. Mary's University at San Antonio, playing football and was a Little All-American.

In 1938 and 1939 he played professional football with the New York Giants.

He then entered the U.S. Navy and served in the South Pacific. Following his discharge he became coach at Arkansas A&M. In 1941, he married the former Thelma Reed of Abilene. They moved to Midland in 1953 from Abilene. Locke was co-owner of Taylor and Stadium Sports Centers, retiring in 1976.

Locke's jersey was retired at St. Mary's and he was inducted into the Football Hall of Fame in 1984.

He was preceded in death by his wife in 1985.

Survivors include his daughter, Mrs. Frances Harper of Lake Conroe; two grandchildren; five great-grandchildren and three great-great-grandchildren.

Josephine Czerniak

Graveside services for Mrs. Josephine Czerniak of Midland will be Wednesday at 10 a.m. in Resthaven Memorial Park with Father Robert Kelly officiating.

Ellis Funeral Home is handling the arrangements.

She died Sunday evening in a Midland nursing home.

Mrs. Czerniak was born Dec. 22, 1897, in Chicago, Ill., where she was reared. She met Louis Czerniak there in the early 1920s and they were married in 1925.

They continued to reside in Chicago until 1980 when they moved to Midland to be close to family. Her husband preceded her in death in November 1980.

She was a member of the Catholic Church.

Survivors include one brother, Eddie Jasinski, of Phoenix, Ariz.; two sisters, Mrs. Walter Petterson of Northfield, Ill. and Mrs. Clem Pagnosis, of Bradenton, Fla.; and four grandchildren.

Eva Barrientes

Services for Mrs. Eva G. Barrientes of Hobbs, N.M., are pending with Griffin Funeral Home in Hobbs. Ellis Funeral Home is handling Midland arrangements.

Mrs. Barrientes died in a Midland hospital early this morning.

SCULPTOR

"I don't see myself out there carving stone at 85. But maybe I will," he said.

At least once a year, Clayton travels to the sculpting studios in a small town on the western coast of Italy to work in the same area and with the same marble used by Michelangelo. His best-known sculpture — a herd of 21 marble cows commissioned by developer Trammell Crow in 1985 — was completed there.

A page of typed names of clients, as well as a page of Clayton's shows and exhibits on his resume are testament to the fact that he is a rarity: an artist who can make a living doing art. Discipline is the key to success in art, he says.

"It's getting out there and doing it. Nobody's gonna do it for ya. You gotta do it yourself," he says. "It's showing your work to as many people as possible. It's also not having to go out and work. If you're in a routine when you have to work a hard eight-hour day, then come home and (sculpt) afterward it is damn hard," he said.

Clayton says he varies his tasks, spending a couple of months carving, then another month exclusively working on models for the big projects, then another going out and selling his sculpture.

Many of the steps in sculpting nowadays is done with power tools — grinders and air hammers — but he said he still goes over everything by hand. "Even doing it with a big machine, if the hands aren't doing the right thing you could cut too deep or burn the stone," he says.

"It takes a toll on your body and you have to be aware of it and not abuse (your body)" he said, then motioned to the Marlboro Light cigarette resting between his fingers.

"I do all my noise work during the day. Evenings I'll paint or draw or sand or sometimes do nothing."

When he's doing nothing, you might catch him on a walk around the neighborhood. He's the guy strolling along with two big black Labadors and three big black cats.

DA says baby pageant actually illegal lottery

BEAUMONT (AP) — A Jefferson County prosecutor said that the so-called Golden Triangle Area Baby Pageant was actually an illegal lottery.

Hundreds of area families are still waiting for a winner.

"It was a lottery," Jefferson County District Attorney Tom Maness said Monday.

The families, encouraged by television commercials, had entered babies in the contest to become king or queen of their age group. The contest, organized by a 41-year-old El Paso woman, required parents to sell raffle tickets in their child's name, authorities said. Each $1 ticket sold won the child 100 votes in the contest.

The raffle was for a trip for two to Las Vegas, authorities said.

Investigator Wayne Wallace said the woman left town. No queens or kings were crowned and no raffle winners announced. A warrant has been issued for the woman's arrest.

Lotteries, even under the guise of baby contests, are illegal in Texas.

The woman came to Beaumont in January and rented an office and an apartment.

She then arranged for advertisements on a local television station urging parents to call or mail in photographs of babies for the contest.

Parents who responded later received form letters telling them that their child or grandchild was in second, third or fourth place.

"All they needed was a few more votes to win," Wallace said.

When parents submitted their money and ticket stubs, they were issued more tickets and urged to keep selling, investigators said.

Each book of 20 tickets had a slip to be filled out with the baby's name. Investigators say there was no evidence, however, that the promoter was keeping a tally of who had sold the most tickets.

"We found hundreds of those slips in the garbage," Wallace said.

The woman promised to announce the winning babies March 17 and to crown the winners on March 20. The tickets said the crowning would be at Montangue Center at Lamar University.

Records indicate the woman had paid $600 to rent the center and also had paid a travel agency $775 to arrange the prize trip for two to Las Vegas, Wallace said.

The baby pageant began to fall apart last week when some parents compared letters and found out their children apparently were all placing in the same spot in the contest.

About the same time Wallace discovered that several courthouse employees held raffle tickets purchased to help out relatives entered in the contest.

Many parents had sold $200 to $300 worth of tickets, and one may have sold up to $4,000, Wallace said.

Proceeds were to have gone to a wheelchair bowling association, Wallace said. It has not been determined whether the association exists and whether it received any money from the pageant.

Parents are complaining about the scheme, Wallace said, but not because they are upset about the money they lost.

"They wanted to know if their baby won the pageant," Wallace said. "I told them that there's no way anybody will ever know that," he said.

Authorities looking for reason man would disappear

DUNCANVILLE (AP) — The disappearance of a printer, who went out to buy dinner but never came back, has investigators in southern Dallas County looking for a motive.

Morris Whitfield, 51, has been missing for a week. He disappeared Feb. 29 and has not been seen since. Police found his car two days later near the spillway at Joe Pool Lake.

Officers found no clues in a search of the marshy, deserted area where the car was found.

Sylvia Whitfield said she believes her husband must have been kidnapped or suffered a stroke and lost his memory. She is convinced that Whitfield wouldn't have driven to the lake.

"I see no reason for him to even be test driving that car at 7 at night after he'd been working 12 hours," said Mrs. Whitfield, his wife of 32 years.

"This is the most mysterious case I've ever worked," investigator Andy Ainley said.

Council to be presenting workshop on alcoholism

From Staff Reports

A workshop which presents "An Overview of Alcoholism, Family Issues and Co-Dependency" will be held from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday in the downtown Midland Center, according to John Reed, executive director of the Midland Council on Alcoholism/Drug Abuse.

"This workshop will provide an accurate overview of the disease concept of alcoholism and drug abuse," Reed said.

The workshop will address family issues, symptoms of the disease and how it affects the family and the work place, and the effects of co-dependency, Reed said.

The workshop is to heighten a person's ability to recognize symptoms of alcoholism and drug abuse, to address family issues, to discuss co-dependency, and to recognize substance abuse in the work place.

Conducting the workshop will be Karolyn Hendrix, a board member of the Midland Council on Alcoholism/Drug Abuse, Marilyn Oldham, regional director of the Texas Workers Assistance Programs in Austin, and Barbara Harney, a San Antonio family therapist and certified counselor in alcoholism and drug abuse.

Ms. Hendrix, who has been involved in the study of alcoholism, is on the advisory council of Midland College's academic program on alcoholism and drug abuse.

Ms. Oldham counsels both workers and employers on substance abuse in the work place.

Ms. Harney is a family therapist with the Charter Real Treatment Center in San Antonio.

The workshop's registration fee is $15 per person.

Those who wish to attend the workshop may register between 8:30 a.m. and 9 a.m. Saturday at the Midland Center, 105 N. Main St., or they may pre-register at the Midland Council on Alcoholism/Drug Abuse, 1509 W. Wall Ave., Suite 223, Midland. Additional information on the workshop may be obtained by contacting Reed at the Council's office at 682-4721.

Railey faces judgment of default

DALLAS (AP) — Former Methodist minister Walker Railey could face a default judgment if he doesn't respond by next Monday to a damage suit filed by his mother-in-law, her lawyer said.

Bill Arnold, who represents the mother of Railey's comatose wife, said Monday he would wait another week before seeking a default judgment, in which a judge could rule against Railey and award damages in his absence.

Billie Jo Nicolai, the mother of Margaret "Peggy" Railey, asked for an unspecified amount of damages in her suit against Railey, accusing him of the April 21, 1987, near-fatal choking attack on his wife.

Railey may have been served in California on Feb. 16 with a copy of the lawsuit filed Feb. 2 by his mother-in-law, Billie Jo Nicolai, which would mean he had until Monday to respond.

But Railey's attorney, Doug Mulder, said that service was not proper. And Arnold, said he would wait until Monday to seek the default judgment based on a separate notice served through the Texas secretary of state's office.

"If he's not going to respond to either of them, I'll just do one motion for default judgment," Arnold said, referring to a judgment in which a judge could rule against Railey and award damages.

Big Spring man killed in car accident

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — A 34-year-old Big Spring man was killed in an automobile accident Monday evening, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

Elton Scott Franklin of Big Spring was pronounced dead at 8:20 p.m. Monday by Justice of the Peace China Long, according to DPS reports. His body was taken to Myers-Smith Funeral Home.

Franklin was driving a 1979 Cadillac four-door sedan about a mile south of Interstate 20 on McGregor Road when the accident occurred. According to reports, he was traveling north, veered onto the wrong side of the road, then overcorrected and went into a skid. The car slid off the road, and overturned, and Franklin was partially ejected through the drivers' side window.

He suffered head and neck injuries when the car rolled over, DPS reports said.

Crime Stoppers seeks burglary information

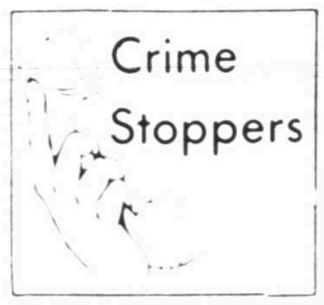

Odessa Crime Stoppers is asking for the public's help in solving the burglary of Nahoyo Sporting Goods, 1800 E. 7th St.

When officers arrived at the business on Feb. 23, they found a window had been broken out in the northeast corner of the building. The alarm system was bypassed, allowing the burglars access to the second floor, where firearms are stored. A large number of guns, ammunition and other items were taken, according to investigators. The burglars left through the same window.

The burglary occurred between 6 p.m. Feb. 22 and 8 a.m. Feb. 23, reports said.

Six days later, evidence of a second burglary was discovered by an Odessa police officer on patrol. Investigators found the same window broken out, the alar. system was again bypassed, and guns and ammunition again stolen.

The items stolen were valued at more than $60,000, and included 53 pistols, 15 rifles, 21 scopes, five shotguns, and ammunition of several different calibers. Other items, including leather holsters and belts, flashlights, loaders, clips and knives were stolen.

Information which leads to the arrest and indictment of the burglars could be worth up to $1,000 cash, this week only. Crime Stoppers pays cash rewards for information about other felony crimes. Callers do not have to reveal their identity.

Crime Stoppers in Odessa can be reached at 333-TIPS, and in Midland at 694-TIPS.

Courtroom videotape becomes hot issue in district judge race

EL PASO (AP) — What started out as a videotaped farce for the amusement of El Paso Bar Association members has turned into a hot campaign issue in the race for 41st District Judge.

District Judge John McKellips said Monday he plans to investigate the videotaping and possibly refer the matter to the county attorney's office.

The incumbent judge said he was enraged at scenes taped in his courtroom without his permission, and said the bar association members who produced the tape violated ethical canons.

Meanwhile, McKellips' opponent, assistant county attorney Mary Anne Bramblett, bristled at a McKellips radio advertisement that she said implied she took part in producing the video skit.

The tape was shown in January at the bar association's annual banquet. McKellips was not present and has not seen the tape, but he said several lawyers who saw it described it to him.

Parts of the tape reportedly poke fun at McKellips' personal life, which has been characterized by six marriages.

The videotape shows a judge and his wife arguing and throwing things in the courthouse.

The video's final scene shows various people's reactions to the fictional news that McKellips has been named to the state Supreme Court. In that scene, Ms. Bramblett is seen smiling and winking at the camera.

Last weekend, McKellips produced a radio advertisement that described some of the scenes. Then the narrator said: "Judge McKellips' opponent, Mary Anne Bramblett, was an actress in this film, smiling, winking and gesturing at the camera."

McKellips said he asked to see the tape, but that the bar association refused to lend it to him.

Members of the bar association and Ms. Bramblett denied that she had anything to do with the video besides consenting to make the cameo appearance.

"I was not involved in that videotape," Ms. Bramblett said. "It was done by the El Paso Bar Association. I'm not even a member of the El Paso Bar Association."

McKellips said he asked the association to investigate whether Ms. Bramblett had any involvement, and to punish members who took part in taping the courthouse scenes.

The judge said he decided to complain publicly because of little action on the part of the bar association, whose members told him the skit was done as a spoof and in good fun.

"I decided to let the people decide if it was a spoof and in good fun," McKellips said. "This involved the courtroom — a horrible violation of ethics, as far as I'm concerned."

The bar association endorsed Ms. Bramblett last month, 374-120.

'Miracle' drug saves woman's life

PLANO (AP) — The paramedics who loaded 34-year-old Linda May into an ambulance two months ago never thought she'd make it, but they never considered a drug called t-PA — the drug that saved her life.

Two months ago when she was rushed to HCA Medical Center in this Dallas suburb Ms. May had no pulse, no heartbeat. Now she's back taking care of her two daughters, attending exercise class and walking three miles each day.

"We don't often see people with this condition at the hospital," says Dr. David A. Schwartz, the cardiologist who treated Ms. May. "Most of them die before they get here."

Ms. May suffered a massive pulmonary embolism — a blood clot lodged in the arteries that supply blood to the lungs.

The doctors had fought to help Ms. May and had already told the family there was nothing else they could do to help when Schwartz thought of t-PA.

"When it came, we were just about to call a code and pronounce her dead," Schwartz said.

Tissue plasminogen activator, known as t-PA, was approved in November by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for use in treating heart attacks.

Medical experts say t-PA breaks up blood clots more quickly and effectively than any other known drug. Many predict it will save thousands of lives annually by restoring heart function rapidly, thereby preventing damage to the heart, brain and other parts of the body that suffer when blood flow is cut off.

But cost is a problem. The drug sells under the brand name Activase for $2,200 per dose. The cost to patients is as much as $3,500.

Schwartz said there is no precedent for its use on a pulmonary embolism.

"We gave her the medication, and within a few minutes she had a blood pressure and a rhythm on the monitor," Schwartz says. "For those of us who have had experience with this type of thing, this was certainly a miraculous thing."

AIDS drug leading to loss of memory

DALLAS (AP) — New drugs to combat the deadly AIDS virus are helping patients live longer, but victims may still face a loss of mental ability, or dementia, doctors say.

About two-thirds of patients with acquired immune deficiency syndrome who survive through drug treatments later experience loss of mental faculties, experts say.

"There's a definite increase in dementia in the last two years," Dr. Daniel Barbaro, director of Parkland Memorial Hospital's AIDS clinic, said Sunday.

Barbaro said dementia is severe in about 10 percent of AIDS patients. Increasing numbers of AIDS patients are living longer with the drug AZT and more effective treatment for infections.

But Don Flaigg, 40, who was diagnosed with AIDS a year ago, said he would rather die than lose control of his mind. Flaigg said his mind has not yet been affected but he was still worried by ordinary memory lapses.

Flaigg panicked when he realized he had scheduled two dinner engagements for the same evening.

"I thought it was starting. I was going downhill," said Flaigg, former assistant director of nursing at Methodist Medical Center. "You just can't dwell on the possibility or it would just engulf you."

Dementia includes a range of symptoms, such as apathy, memory loss and difficulty concentrating. But the condition, associated with brain lesions, can also cause paralysis, muteness, blindness, incontinence and spasms.

In most cases, death results within six months, said Dr. Richard Johnson, professor of neurology, microbiology and neurosciences at John Hopkins University School of Medicine.

But studies suggest mental deterioration can sometimes be slowed if AZT, an anti-viral drug also called zidovudine, is administered soon after diagnosis.

San Antonio voters say local races more important to them

By JOHN MARELIUS
Copley News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Betty Spears was watering her front yard, taking care to avoid the political lawn signs and the ceramic flamingos.

She was eager to talk about the signs when a reporter inquired about them over the chain-link fence.

Gilberto Rodriguez was running for justice of the peace. "We all call him 'Gibby,'" she said. And, of course, she said, everybody likes Sheriff Harlon Copeland and wants him re-elected.

Spears wasn't so sure about the third sign, the one that simply said "Gore." Her husband Ray, who runs a local auto parts store, had put up that one and she had been meaning to ask him about it.

In the racially mixed working-class Woodlawn neighborhood of San Antonio, presidential politics seem pretty remote.

For every Gore or Dukakis sign in front of houses or small businesses, there are a dozen for Rodriguez, Copeland, Ybarra, Campos, Gaines and Guerra.

To the country it may be Super Tuesday. But "what's more important to people here than the presidential election is the massive number of local elections," said Willie Velasquez, president of the Southwest Voter Registration and Education Project. "They're the ones," he said of the local elected officials "that people know and deal with all the time that affect their daily lives."

Two peculiarities of Texas politics conspire to push presidential politics from the public consciousness.

First, Texas has an "open primary" where voters can ask for either a Democratic or Republican ballot at the polling place. Also, most people in local government — constables, sheriffs, county clerks and judges — are partisan elected officials.

Jessie Salinas, standing in a friend's Craig Street driveway, explained the dilemma faced by her and many others. She said she didn't particularly like any of the Democratic presidential candidates and would probably vote for Vice President George Bush if he wins the Republican nomination.

But in the primary the local races are more important, she said, and most of the candidates she likes are Democrats. Her friend, Violanda Rodriguez, agreed. She said she could only support a presidential candidate who's "against abortion and homosexuals" and that meant Republican Pat Robertson. "But I want to vote in the Democratic primary to vote in the local elections. I don't think I'll vote for anybody for president," she said.

Increase seen in cases of gonorrhea

DALLAS (AP) — Nearly eight times as many people were infected with a penicillin-resistant strain of gonorrhea in Dallas County during 1987 than in the previous year, health officials say.

Officials say this is a reversal of the national trend with cases of gonorrhea declining.

Health officials said Monday that there were 78 people diagnosed with the penicilling-resistant gonorrhea in Dallas County in 1987, compared with only 10 in 1986.

Reports of the penicillin-resistant strain have increased from 408 cases to 495 cases in Texas and from 16,255 to 23,800 nationwide during the same period, health officials said.

The total number of gonorrhea cases has declined nationwide, from 900,856 cases reported in 1986 to 762,124 cases reported so far for 1987, according to statistics from the national Centers for Disease Control, which is still tallying 1987 figures.

"We've been seeing the increase in the resistant strain nationwide, and we feel fortunate that it's taken so long to reach Dallas," said Dr. J.R. Farris, director of the Dallas County Health Department's Sexually Transmitted Disease clinic.

Though the new resistant strains make up less than 1 percent of the state and county's gonorrhea cases, health officials said they believe the number of resistant strains will continue to grow.

"Gonorrhea is a tough bug, and it has mutated to survive," Miles Kaltenbaugh, assistant director of the Texas Health Department's Sexually Transmitted Disease Control Division, said.

Doctors once administered 240,000 units of penicillin to treat the disease, but because the bacteria have become resistant to the treatment, physicians now must use 2.4 million units of the drug, he said.

Physicians have an arsenal of other medications to combat the penicillin-resistant strains, Farris said, but the cost of treatment is about double that of penicillin.

Public health agencies can buy penicillin in bulk for about $2 per dose, with the cost for patients treated by private physicians generally higher, officials said.

To slow the spread of the disease and the resistant strains, health officials monitor those who have the disease and contact their sexual partners, Farris said.

"If it's caught early and treated properly, the disease is going to be a minor inconvenience to the patient," Kaltenbaugh said.

Rains says Super Tuesday captures state's attention

AUSTIN (AP) — Absentee voting by Texas for the Super Tuesday primary is up, and Secretary of State Jack Rains said Monday that shows the considerable interest the regional presidential primary has generated.

"There's no doubt about it, Super Tuesday has had an impact. Super Tuesday has caused the national parties and the candidates to come to Texas and speak to issues of concern to Texans," Rains said. "Super Tuesday has captured the attention of Texans."

Rains revised his election day projection figures Monday, saying he no longer expects Republican turnout to match Democratic turnout.

"(Vice President George) Bush is so far in the lead, it's probably going to hold down Republican turnout," he said.

However, Rains said he expected turnout to be the highest for a primary this decade, although below the 2.3 million total in the 1972 primary, which followed the Sharpstown scandal. Turnout that year equaled about 70 percent of registered voters, he said.

Besides interest in the election, Rains also noted that changes in election law have made it easier to cast an absentee ballot this year.

In the six largest counties, Rains said, more than 80,000 people cast absentee ballots in person, and about 30,000 more are expected from elsewhere in the state.

In Bexar County, Rains said absentee voting was 8,200 in the 1984 priamry, 11,000 in 1986 and about 41,000 this year.

Richard English, director of the elections divison of the secretary of state's office, gave absentee voting totals so far for the five other largest counties.

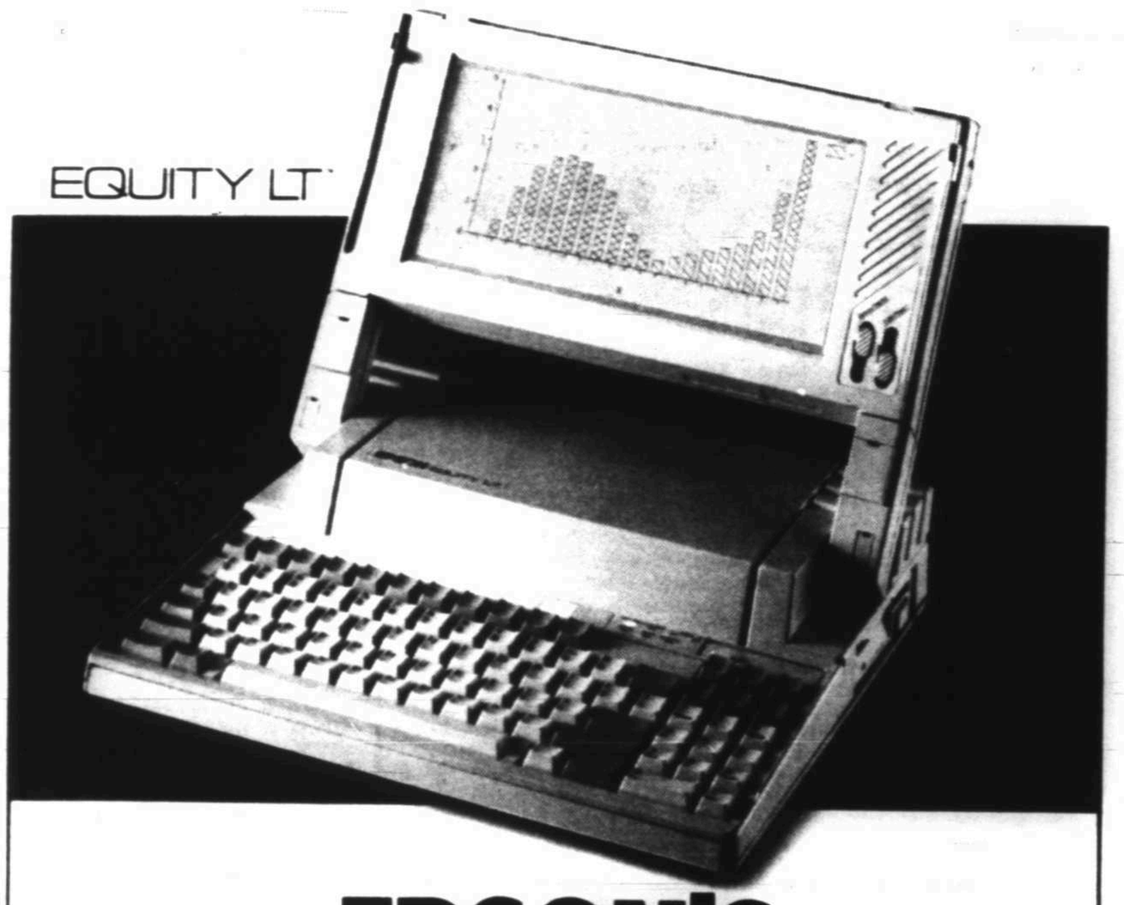

According to English, those are: Dallas, 9,571 this year, up from 4,287 in 1986; El Paso, 8,738, up from 2,699; Harris, 7,082, up from 4,753; Tarrant, 8,822, up from 2,273, and Travis, 7,296, up from 2,963.

$700,000 pledged for Kennedy exhibit

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas County Historical Foundation officials say about $700,000 in private donations were pledged for an exhibit on events surrounding the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Officials also received promises of an additional $100,000 toward the $1.5 million needed for the museum on the sixth floor of the former Texas School Book Depository building.

Former Dallas County Judge David Fox, a co-chairman of the fund drive, said officials expect to raise the remaining money needed within the next four months.

Cosmetics, beauty products travel-sized

By LISA LEBOWITZ
Copley News Service

Even those women who have a tried-and-true beauty routine feel the urge to experiment from time to time.

Travel-size cosmetics and treatment products allow you to sample a new blush, foundation or powder in a cost-efficient manner with the added perks that makeup you like is scaled-down to travel well, and products you don't find flattering are easily discarded.

It's particularly good to apply new makeup in your own home without uncertain department store lighting. You get a better reading of how the cosmetic really looks and have the luxury of time and free hands to use the makeup correctly.

Coty introduces trial- and travel-size Mini Basics in early spring. There are eight shades of Airspun Powderessence Foundation, a base that comes in a liquid or cream form and dries into a matte powder finish.

For loose powder aficionados, there are six loose face powders in translucent and tinted shades. The powders are microspun for a refined makeup finish.

And to top perfectly primed cheeks, look for four shade combinations of dual blushers in pink, coral, red and rose shades. All Coty minis are $1.99 each.

■ TRAVEL IS the inspiration for Lancome Voyage Romantique spring colors. These colors that make "daring departures and vivid arrivals" present a palette of rich blue, green, peach and pink cremepowder eye colors and a stunning range of blue and purple mascaras and eye pencils.

Orchid, apricot, peach and coral shades dress lips and cheeks for color drama you'll love, both here and abroad, and nails keep pace in rose, melon, violet and diamond pink hues.

■ WHAT'S THE basis for any flattering beauty look? Perfectly applied foundation. For flawless coverage that's sheer or full, Elizabeth Arden has created Simply Perfect Mousse Makeup.

It's a light-textured, airy formula that lets skin breathe, but there's enough makeup substance to smooth imperfections and correct color unevenness.

Shades range from light to dark, and there are choices for both pale and black skin tones.

The mousse comes in a lightweight aerosol container that won't weigh down travel bags. Companion blushers and concealers that utilize the same moisture-rich mousse formulation also are available.

All three products dispense the perfect pre-measured amount, so there's no waste, no mistake that arises from excess application.

■ ONE WAY to be certain that your own eye color stands out is to apply a single color family to lids. Tone liner to shadow for color that emphasizes rather than overpowers.

Maybelline has removed the hassle from matching eye products. The new Colour Wand II gives you an eyeliner pencil and silky eye shadow in one stick, one product at each end. The powder part has a capped sponge tip applicator; at the other end there's a capped pencil that glides on evenly. Tonal combinations include teal/aquamarine, plum/violet, navy/royal blue and brown/topaz.

Mascara is another product that defines eyes without distracting. Thanks to the development of great waterproof products, you can even wear mascara when you play sports or swim.

Maybelline's Ultra-Thick Ultra-Lash mascara thickens lashes for a full look that won't smear even when you swim. Colors range from midnight black, chocolate brown and sapphire blue to ultraviolet and uptown teal.

From Allercreme, there's a great Hypo-Allergenic Waterproof Mascara for women with sensitive eyes. It's also perfect for contact lens wearers. Look for navy, black, brown and black/brown shades. And when removing any waterproof mascara, be sure to use a gentle remover that won't irritate eyes or pull on delicate eye-area skin. Both Maybelline and Allercreme have time-tested products.

■ SAVVY WOMEN can parlay one pair of shoes into four with shoe accessories from Riviera. Shoetooz are bows, rosettes, tassels and medallions that clip onto pumps. They are handmade and European in feel, and they come in a diverse range of materials.

There are satin and faille rosettes, grosgrain bows graced with leather-covered buttons, gold- and silver-plated medallions that make shoes look Old World luxe and bold geometric shapes made from Italian plastics. Look for Shoetooz in department and specialty stores, in or near the shoe section.

■ WHETHER YOU live in a warm climate, vacation in one or are simply readying for warm weather, shaving can be a major beauty headache. Rashes and razor burns crop up on the smoothest legs, underarms and bikini lines, making shaving a dreaded activity.

To minimize nicks and cuts and to maximize smooth shaves, Schick has introduced a new Personal Touch Razor for Women. The razor cartridge now features a "comfort strip" that releases a lubricant to cut down on shaving friction.

Be sure to shave on skin that is adequately prepared. Skin should be wet for at least two to three minutes before shaving, and use an emolliant shave cream or super-fatted soap. Apply a water-base, alcohol-free moisturizer immediately after shaving.

■ PREGNANCY, GAINING and losing weight and the natural process of aging can contribute to slackening skin in the stomach area. Biotherm solves this problem with Actif Ventre Ferme Stomach Firming Treatment. Skin tends to lose tone when the cellular network begins to weaken, and the skin's repair center begins to replace cells at a slower rate.

Biotherm's Stomach Firming Treatment, a formula containing natural botanical ingredients and thermal plankton, a substance discovered at a spa in the French Pyrenees, renews stomach firmness and tone by improving hydration and restoring tightness to skin. The cream is particularly effective when used daily, in conjunction with an exercise or weight-loss program.

Regular care maintains quality of fine jewelry

New York Times News Service

A little bit of jewelry care goes a long way toward enhancing the brilliance of gemstones, pearls and precious metals. It also safeguards their worth.

Diamonds look larger after cleaning, because they reflect more light. And storing pearls and gemstones in individual soft pouches, plastic bags or compartments of a lined case spares them and the jewelry around them from being scratched.

How to clean and care for jewelry depends on the metal, the stones and the condition of the piece. Because stones' durability varies greatly, an appropriate treatment for one stone might crack and destroy another.

Simple gold jewelry, without stones, should be cleaned every few days, according to the Gold Information Center, an industry group in New York. Use a commercial jewelry cleaner or make one by adding a drop of ammonia to a mild, lukewarm solution of liquid soap. Dip the gold in the solution, brush with a soft brush or toothbrush, and rinse away the residue with rubbing alcohol. Pat dry with a lint-free cloth or chamois.

Chlorine can pit and discolor gold and erode alloys used in 14- and 18-karat gold, so don't wear gold in a swimming pool. Since vigorous activity can loosen settings, wear only simple jewelry for sports.

To clean silver, wipe with a soft, damp cloth and silver polish. Rinse with cool water, and then dry and buff with a soft cloth.

Alan Macnow, information officer for the Cultured Pearl Association in New York, said that pearls should be wiped with a soft, damp cloth or sponge after each wearing to remove acids left by perspiration. Put them on after applying perfume or hair spray; cosmetics can dull pearls.

Keep pearls away from household and commercial cleaners. To clean, dip them in a bath of mild nondetergent soap and warm water. Rinse with clear water and pat dry. Keep pearls away from jewelry with sharp stones. Macnow recommended that pearls and other beaded necklaces be restrung yearly, since the nylon strings weaken and discolor. Knots between the pearls prevent the whole strand from spilling if the string breaks, and keep pearls from scratching each other.

Diamonds, the hardest gems, can be cleaned in commercial jewelry cleansers or by soaking in warm sudsy water or in a mixture of half cold water and half ammonia for 30 minutes. After soaking, clean the diamonds and the setting — particularly the back, where dirt collects — by rubbing with a soft brush. Rinse in clear water and pat dry. Have a jeweler check the mountings of frequently worn pieces every six months.

The American Gem Trade Association in Dallas, which represents the colored-gem industry, said that rubies, sapphires, quartz, citrines and amethysts, as well as diamonds, can withstand overnight soaking in commercial cleaning solutions or mixtures of water, mild detergent and one tablespoon of ammonia or rubbing alcohol. The same cleaners, however, will destroy such organic gemstones as coral and amber, as well as lapis lazuli. Wipe these stones with a soft cloth after wearing.

The opal, one of the most fragile gems, will lose moisture and crack in a harsh cleaning. To restore moisture, rub a finger gently over the surface to contribute natural skin oil. Opals can also be rubbed with a bit of baby or mineral oil on a cotton swab. The stones crack easily when exposed to dramatic temperature changes, so it is best to avoid wearing them when going outdoors from heated buildings on very cold days.

Jewelers often use ultrasonic machines to clean jewelry. According to the gem trade group, diamond, ruby, sapphire, quartz, citrine, amethyst, aquamarine, garnet, spinel and tourmaline may be so treated. Before cleaning, however, settings should be checked and the condition of stones assessed; ultrasonic cleaning might enlarge internal fractures.

Right dress can replace tailored suit in board room

By ANNE-MARIE SCHIRO
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The dress is back. Oh, some women have always worn them. But not since the ubiquitous Courreges shift of the 60s has the dress made such a strong fashion statement.

In the 1970s the popularity of the pants suit led to the dominance of sportswear, and then to the suit for women aspiring to a businesslike image. Now those same women have discovered that the right dress can go from board room to dinner date.

One sure sign of the new importance of dresses is that sportswear companies are setting up dress divisions. Count among these Liz Claiborne, Adrienne Vittadini, Ellen Tracy, Cathy Hardwick, Mary Ann Restivo and Anne Klein. All have shown a few dresses for years, but not enough to meet the new demand.

"We've always done well with dresses in our sportswear line," Restivo said, "and people kept asking us for more." Those in department stores "tended to be doctored up with everything in the world," she said, adding: "Ours are more understated. They're simple, so they can be worn for a lot of occasions."

While coat dresses are selling well, Restivo said, the best-selling style in her first dress collection, which was shipped to stores a few weeks ago, is a simple black silk shift adorned only with two bows at the back of the neck. It is $370.

Restivo's idea is for dresses to be shown in the stores as a collection, the way sportswear is. "It looks better for the customers if they see fabrics and colors that work together," she said. At Saks Fifth Avenue the Restivo dress collection will be housed in a special area of the designer dress department.

Louis Dell'Olio, the designer for Anne Klein, also wants his dress line, which will have its debut for the next resort season, to be sold in separate boutiques in stores.

"We're building an entire collection from day to evening," explained Van Isaacs, president of Anne Klein Dresses. "Louis will be using the same fabrics he uses in sportswear, and the same styling."

"Although stores have been asking us for more dresses for the last couple of years," he added, "we feel this is the right time."

Lord & Taylor agrees. Starting March 14 the store will hold a two-week promotion called "Lord & Taylor and the Dress: an American Love Affair." It will feature dresses in windows and advertisements, and a retrospective exhibition of dress silhouettes from the 1920s to the present.

"We've always been a store involved with dresses," said Gerald Blum, executive vice president for marketing and research, "even when a lot of stores gave up on them. Now they're coming back, and an important part of the whole thing is American designers. A lot of designers are doing exclusives for us, including Scaasi, Oscar de la Renta, Victor Costa, Mary Ann Restivo, Kay Unger and Chetta B."

Kay Unger founded her dress concern, St. Gillian, 16 years ago, when the dress business was really bad. One reason for her longevity, she said, is that she always designed for the sportswear customer who, she said, "wants the comfort of sportswear and the look of sportswear without having to put all the pieces together."

One of her best sellers for spring doesn't look like a dress at all, but like a jacket, blouse and culotte. In reality, the blouse and culotte are one piece. It's $280.

Cathy Hardwick, who added a dress division to her sportswear line last year, also thinks simplicity is the key. "Clothing became so complicated," she said. "You had to plan tops, bottoms, belts. Most businesswomen don't have as much imagination as designers. They want to just put on a dress and zip it up."

Although Hardwick concentrates on day clothes, she has found that her best-selling dress for spring is a puckered cotton print with a flirty flounce and a low back that costs $155. "I wouldn't recommend anyone go to the office in that," she said, "but that's what's selling."

Kathryn Conover, whose dress business is seven years old, said American women are entering a period of, well, dressing up. "I see a downtrend of the casual, easy pull on skirts and big sloppy tops," she said. "There's a new look about, more polished, more structured. And I think dresses can carry that polished attitude."

'Minimum' jewelry adds impact to wardrobe

Associated Press

Minimum pieces with maximum versatility are the key to an always appropriate costume jewelry wardrobe.

Here are some jewelry box essentials that offer an up-to-date look for an occasion, be it a business meeting, an after-work dinner or a casual day with friends.

■ Gold-tone baubles complement most complexions, but silvery ones are especially flattering for a woman with blue eyes or silvery highlights in her hair, according to Ladies Home Journal.

■ Cuffs that count can be shiny or matte, studded with gems or, newest of all, engraved. Before buying, make sure the cuff sits comfortably on the wrist and doesn't pinch. For extra impact, get two identical cuffs and wear one on each wrist.

■ An important pin must be able to stand on its own and not get lost on a collar or sweater. Large bows are sellouts now. For special effects, attach a pin to a coat lapel or a favorite hat or use instead of a belt buckle.

■ Oversize hoops go with everything in the wardrobe, from jeans to cashmere. For a more dramatic look, choose drop-hoops and clip-ons in hammered or matte gold. Choose a size to suit features. Delicate faces need less weighty hoops. With a strong jaw, go bold.

Name's not same

NEW YORK (AP) — Celebrities often change their names, either because they are too long, difficult to spell or they don't fit a star's image. So, Frances Gumm became Judy Garland, and Frederick Austerlitz became Fred Astaire.

Other stars' names are: Roy Roger (Leonard Slye); Peggy Lee (Norma Egstrom); Bob Dylan (Robert Zimmerman); Michael Caine (Maurice Micklewhite); Bernadette Peters (Bernadette Lazaro), and Charles Bronson (Charles Buchinski).

DEAR ABBY

Pamphlet lists regulations for overseas purchases

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: As secretary of the interior, I am aware of your long-standing concern for animals, so I'm seeking your help in persuading American tourists to refrain from buying products made from the world's endangered wildlife.

Each year, more than 10 million Americans travel abroad and spend an estimated $14 billion — some of it for items made from sea turtles, reptile skins, spotted animals and other imperiled animal and plant species.

Because these items cannot be brought into the United States legally, they are confiscated by U.S. Customs authorities.

Our problem: Most people are unaware of the U.S. laws prohibiting importation of products made from endangered species, so we need to reach people like your readers, many of whom may be contemplating trips to foreign countries where they will spend hundreds — some thousands — of dollars on articles that will be seized!

The regulations are complex. For example, it's illegal to import articles made from Asian ivory, but articles made from African ivory are legal.

People who anticipate trips abroad need to know what items may be confiscated, so we have a new pamphlet titled "Buyer Beware," available free to anyone who sends a long, self-addressed, stamped (22 cents) envelope. It would be enormously helpful if you would publish this letter along with our address. My personal thanks, Abby, for publicizing this important pamphlet. — DONALD P. HODEL, SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

DEAR SECRETARY HODEL: You can count on me to spread the word. Readers, write to "Buyer Beware," c/o World Wildlife Fund — U.S., 1250 24th St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20037. And don't forget to enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (22 cents) envelope.

Now a word to my Canadian readers: Canada, too, is concerned about animals and plants now facing extinction, so, before you set off on trips to regions of the globe that support a flourishing trade in exotic birds and animals, fashionable jewelry, furs and unique tropical plants, write to:

Administrator, CITES, Canadian Wildlife Service, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, K1A OH3. Ask for the free pamphlet titled "Noah Didn't Need a Permit, What About You?" No self-addressed envelope is necessary.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the article about the churchgoing woman whose minister asked her (loudly) every Sunday morning, "Where is your husband today?" I was reminded of the following:

My mother-in-law was also a churchgoing woman, but my father-in-law seldom accompanied her. One day the minister visited their home, and "Pop" couldn't hide fast enough. Sure enough, the minister cornered him and asked, "Why don't you ever come to church?"

Pop replied, "Because the seats are too hard and you talk too long!" That's the last time the minister mentioned Pop's absence. This is a true story. — LILLIAN LANG, CHICAGO

DEAR LILLIAN: Pop was a righteous man. ("He that speaketh truth sheweth forth righteousness." Proverbs 12:17.) Your father-in-law rates an "A" for honesty, but he flunked diplomacy.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054 (postage and handling included).

Expanding waist can be fashionable

By BETH BALES
Copley News Service

When cover girl Christie Brinkley was expecting her daughter, she switched modeling categories. Instead of extolling the virtues of blush and mascara, she was featured on magazine stands everywhere, glowing about motherhood and insisting, in every article, that being pregnant didn't mean an end to high fashion.

Well, Christie is an uptown girl — with an income to match. Most of the rest of us have to make do with a wardrobe considerably less extensive and expensive than one funded by the Christie Brinkley-Billy Joel merger. But how much is enough? And, more important, how much is too much? How much does the "normal" pregnant person spend on a maternity wardrobe?

The answer, I discovered in talking with representatives from several stores and pregnant friends, is an elusive "it depends."

The replies I sought were ones I had begun to search for in September, shortly after my husband Steve and I discovered we were expecting our first child. Keep in mind, I told my husband, that before the nine months are out a woman will have had to outfit herself completely in new clothing for work and play — "from her head to her feet," as one store says.

CNS Photo

Mothers-to-be look casually fashionable in coordinated stretch slacks and top, left, and a denim jumpsuit.

WE'RE NOT talking about updating a wardrobe, we're talking about, at least in the case of those pregnant for the first time, starting almost from scratch. Only your socks may still fit by the time you deliver.

Expectant mothers have to buy everything — bras, panties, nylons, as well as clothing.

One store owner estimated that non-working expectant mothers will spend about $300, with first purchases being jeans or shorts and tops. A working woman, on the other hand, will spend anywhere from $500 to $1,500 to $2,000.

I gleefully reported this information to Steve, pointing out I had spent far, far less than even the middle range. He rolled his eyes and mumbled something I didn't catch, but which seemed to include the words, "mumble, grumble, my dead body."

In a March 1986 article on "American Baby Basics," outlining what expectant parents need to know about family finances before the stork arrives, American Baby magazine created a maternity clothing budget of $307.

Even the magazine admitted this list was very basic.

The prices assumed the woman shopped at a national chain store or a medium-price maternity boutique. Included were the following: dress, $35; jumper, $30; slacks, $25; jeans, $25; blouse, $20; T-shirt, $15; sweater, $25; nightgown, $20; bra, $10; panties, $5; slip, $12; support hose, $5; bathing suit, $30.

Basic is an understatement. One dress? One jumper? Only one sweater and one pair of pants? And for that matter, only one pair of nylons? Who are they kidding?

A FRIEND estimated she spent a modest $345 on her maternity wardrobe. She ended up with three pairs of pants, one pair of jeans, a jumper, four dresses, one cardigan with matching skirt, two blouses, two knit tops, two pairs of shorts, lingerie and a hooded poncho. She also bought non-maternity clothes, including a hooded sweatshirt and some oversize sweaters, and used her pre-pregnancy blouses under jumpers.

And, a whiz with a needle, she made several of her outfits. That, as well as buying everything on sale except for the fabric, saved her money, she said.

She also said she probably saved money by not purchasing any interim clothes. When she no longer fit into her regular clothes, she said, she simply started wearing maternity clothing. "Some people are bothered by that, but I wasn't," she said.

And, she said, she considers that her wardrobe has been adequate for her needs.

Well, I hate to admit it, and didn't even realize it until I added it up, but I spent much more, about $650. About $175 of that, however, was for interim clothing — which I did need, wore for several months and which will be very suitable again come this spring.

My purchases included three pairs of cords, two sweaters, two turtlenecks, a couple casual shirts, a swimming suit so I could continue swimming laps, a blue jean jumpsuit, lingerie and nylons, a blue jean jumper, a pleated skirt and two tops.

Interim clothing included two pairs of elastic-waist pants (including one pair I virtually lived in well into the fourth month), two shirts, a knit pants outfit and a sweater I wore throughout about month five. I also purchased fabric for two jumpers, a dress, a pair of pants and a shirt. I'm not nearly as handy with a sewing machine as my friend, but my mother-in-law is; she helped out immensely.

I ALSO received some clothing friends had worn when they were pregnant.

I'm the first to admit I made a few mistakes. I have a pair of gray cords I've worn probably twice and there are a few other items that, looking back, I shouldn't have bought at all. Oh well, live and learn.

According to most maternity store owners, the hardest customer to satisfy is a woman with a "high-profile" professional job such as doctor, lawyer, business executive.

However, they added, such a woman also spends the most. One owner estimated that a professional working woman will need at least eight outfits — just for work. She said some women will buy several outfits at once, while others come in, buy one top and then come back. The norm, she said, is to buy at least one complete outfit at a time.

Yes, the old tried-and-true standbys of stretch-panel pants and flowing tops — even the traditional jumper — can still be found, in stores and on expectant mothers everywhere. But, say owners and managers of maternity stores, those fashions are crowded on store racks by suits and stylish dresses.

THE STYLE of maternity clothes no longer is far off from regular ready-to-wear.

A recent telecast featuring upcoming styles in maternity wear showed a lot of dropped waist outfits, with the waist almost at the hip line. It also featured the menswear plaid used in regular sportswear and in career-oriented dresses.

A generation that grew up in blue jeans hasn't traded them in just because their Levis or Lees don't fit anymore. All store owners interviewed reported brisk sales of denim in traditional styles, the newer bib overall and the same acid-wash denims that clothe the legs of teens everywhere.

For special occasions, however, pregnant women want to look just as dressed up and in-the-party-mood as their non-maternal counterparts, with plenty of frilly blouses and dresses on the racks to comply.

AT WIT'S END

Today's conveniences catch up with dinner hour

By ERMA BOMBECK

What are you making for dinner tonight? If you are like one-third of the women in this country, you are making reservations. If you belong to another one-third, you're making tracks to the nearest fast-food carry-out.

Less than the remaining third of you will tear along a dotted line and add water to something, leaving a few traditional cooks who view their ovens as something more than an elaborate clock.

There is probably no social custom that has changed so dramatically in this country over the last 10 years as how we eat, what we eat and who cooks it.

Ask a woman for her recipe anymore and she'll slip you an empty carton. Some of the women who still make crackers from scratch deplore these time-savers. They'll tell you frozen pie crust was invented by daughters-in-law who don't want to get dough under their fingernails.

You know what I think? I think women found something better to do than serve up 1,260 meals a year to kids who held their breath when they ate it, husbands who had it for lunch, and dogs who sniffed at it and went back to sleep. Given a choice between climbing the corporate ladder and straining chicken broth through a piece of cheesecloth to make chicken soup, they chose the former. They found a way to cut corners and there were a lot of people to help them. Sara Lee at the ovens, Orville Redenbacher at the microwave, and Juan Valdez picking those little coffee beans one at a time for instant coffee.

Today, there isn't anything technology can't do for us. Recently, I picked up a large, flat piece of frozen icing the size of a pizza. All you had to do was slip it out of the package and plop it on top of a cake like a record on a phonograph. You didn't even have to spread it.

You say you miss the good old days when you sifted the flour three times and it took longer for your pizza dough to rise than it does to have one delivered now? Then you should have been the mother of a reader whose daughter had her "baby-sit" her starter dough for bread when she went out of town.

All Mama had to do was feed the starter at 6 a.m. on Friday with sugar, instant potatoes and warm water, add a cup of the starter to a bowl of dry and liquid ingredients that had been combined, and let sit. Then at 6 a.m. on Saturday, punch it down, knead it, divide it into three equal parts, flour and put in well-greased loaf pans and put back into the oven for 12 hours. Remove, preheat oven to 350 and bake for 30 minutes before removing to brush butter on top.

Frankly, I'm ready for yet another breakthrough. How about boxes of pre-mix that come with a large fake fingernail attached so you don't have to chip your polish tearing along the dotted line?

Newest spring fashions more 'dressy' than in past

By LINDA GILLAN GRIFFIN
Hearst News Service

Come spring, the line between ladies who lunch and ladies who party will blur as "dressy" gets a lot dressier.

From patterns and prints to lace and bared skin, from bows and silk flowers to hats and gloves, every detail is carried to the max in this spring's new designs. Are polka dots enough on a dress? Of course not, add lace. Buying a new plaid jacket? Mix it with a print skirt of the same color. Choosing a cropped jacket and city shorts for lunch? Don't forget the crocheted gloves and a hat.

Even would-be casual clothes are being spiffed up for spring. Cropped tops, shorts and minis are turning up not just in cotton poplins, ducks and knits; now they appear in washable silks with glorious sheens.

Raincoats, those staples of spring wardrobes, are snappy in swing styles and short lengths. From pastel stripes to hot solid colors, they can brighten a gloomy, gray day — especially tossed on over purple silk shorts.

Silk dresses, for a long time the luncheon uniform, have a lot of competition now. If you still love the look and feel of pure silk, choose the 1988 versions, which feature small white collars, starched or silk flowers, beautiful bows and perhaps cascades of ruffles at their hems.

Look for a return of little linen dresses for mornings and afternoons. Some of the strongest are blacks or whites emboldened with architectural yokes of bright contrast — white on black, sky blue or cherise on shimmering white.

Linen also is used in combination with other fabrics, such as silk or rayon. Try a softly tailored black, white or navy jacket over a printed silk skirt. Many stores have bought these looks with the longer skirts of seasons past, leaving it to the customer to shorten her hemlines if she wishes. Long or short, these are romantic looks for spring that stay cool in summer.

Knits are at their best in navy and white combinations for spring. Red sparks the mood in most cases. Dress 'em up with sharply cobbled shoes and bags, cotton or crocheted gloves and straw boaters for important daytime functions.

Suits and separates are more important than ever for daytime dressing. A tailored duo of a black or navy checked or plaid jacket and a solid color skirt can go to lunch with a hot pink top and a silk flower accent. Red, blue, yellow and citron green are other good choices for blouses. Bared necklines are the best choice for wow-power and coolness.

Dressmaker suits, Jackie O suits and sophisticated suits with high waisted skirts and bra tops are among the eye openers to see at spring outings. These are suits that require attention to the body beneath the fabric. Most jackets are nipped in at their waists, even cropped jackets. Shoulders are still padded but not as exaggerated as a year ago, and the shoulders are generally more rounded.

Lots of suits are showing up in linens, but cotton, woven plaids and checks are making inroads as fashion statements. Colors can go from the white and the palest taupes and grays to lush pastels and island colors of pistachio, mango, melon and lavender. For the most impact, stick to black and white; sparked with a hot color like red, it can't be beat.

Brilliant florals, for so long either strictly daytime in short versions or strictly evening on long gowns, are breaking the barriers. This spring, a floral jacket over a companion striped skirt can go from a lunch or a garden party to cocktails or an informal black tie event.

Just like stripes and giant florals, polka dots and lace are playing both sides of the 5 o'clock line. Make sure the lace is white cotton, however; black Chantilly does not translate to the daytime scene except in very small doses as trims and petticoat edging.

On expensive men's shirts, monogram is message

Associated Press

A shirt monogram is more than fancy set of initials — it sends out a complicated message about a shirt and its wearer.

The monogram proclaims the shirt is expensive and the wearer is important, according to an article in the current issue of Esquire, but first of all it states who the shirt belongs to — and who it does not.

Dave Powers, formerly an aide to President John F. Kennedy and now curator of the Kennedy Library and Museum in Boston, provided an illustration.

Powers wore the same shirt size as Kennedy and sometimes in the rush of campaigning he would grab one of Kennedy's shirts.

"One time Jack told me, 'Dave, you've got one of my shirts on,'" Powers recalled. "I tried to bluff it, but he pointed to the pocket, and there it was — a blue JFK.

"Another time we were on his plane and he turned to me again and said, 'Dave, you're wearing another one of my shirts. I said, 'No, I'm not,' and I showed him there was nothing on the pocket. This time he pointed to my sleeve and by God there it was again, an inch below the cuff."

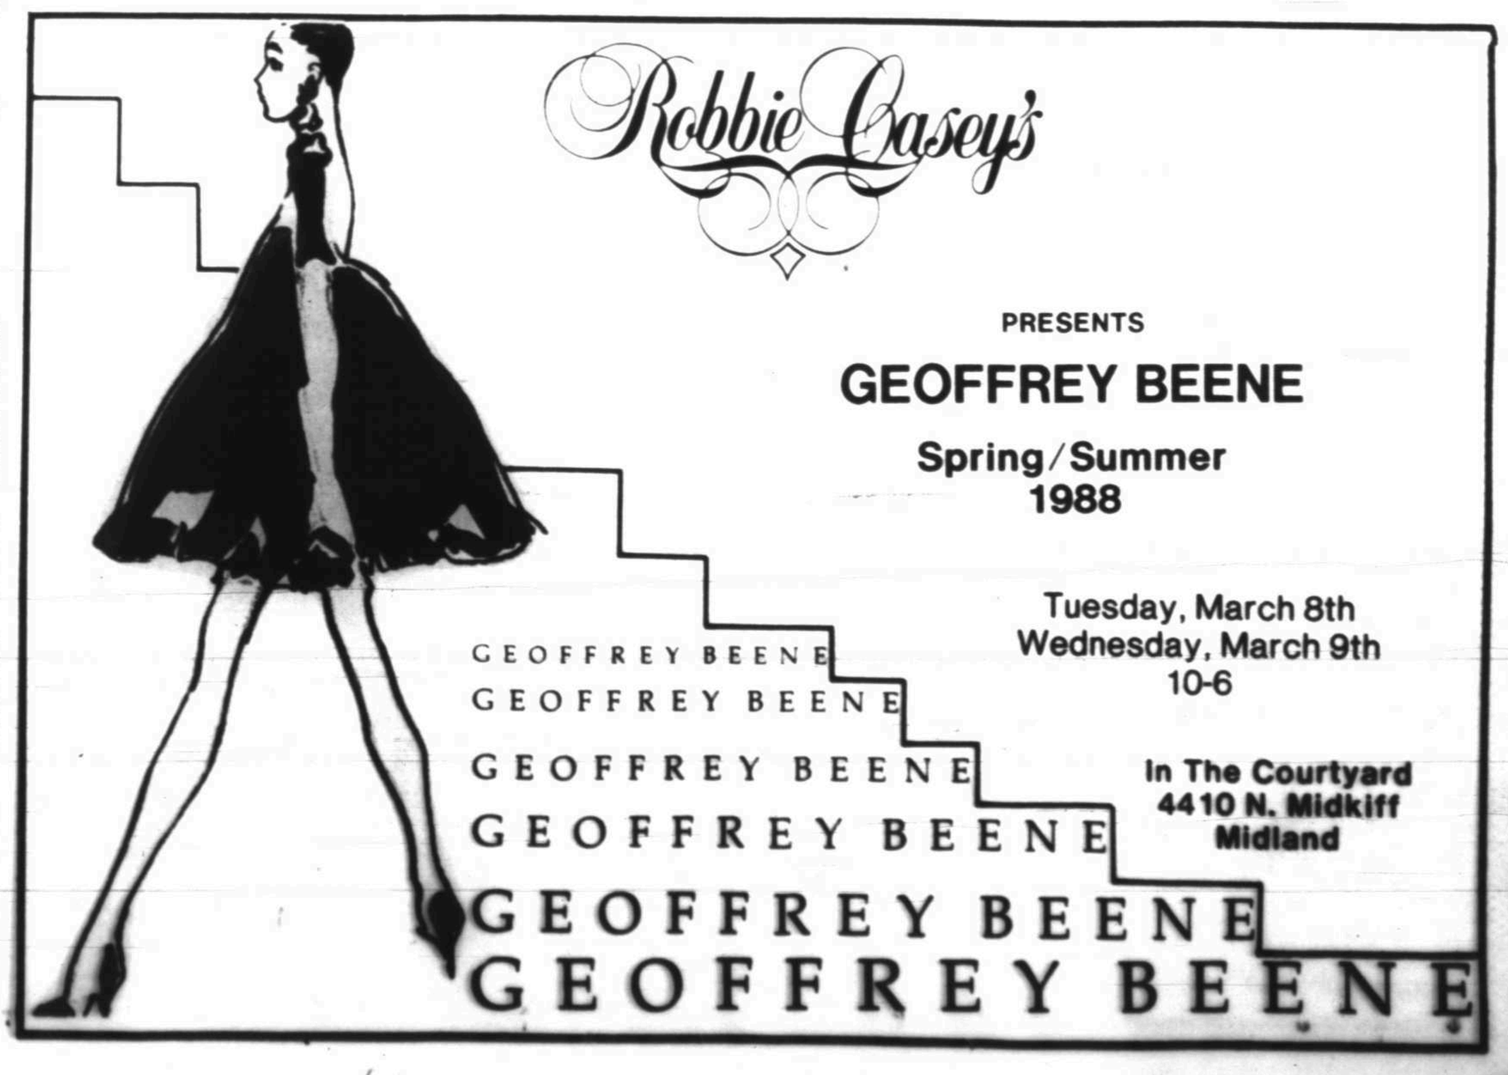

The practice of monogramming began in the 17th century as a way to put the family mark on valuable linens. Shirt monograms were invisible underneath the long jackets or doublets of the day. It wasn't until the 20th century that shirts came out from under jackets and vests and monograms could be seen.

While the monogram still denotes ownership, it also carries the message that the shirt is expensive. Monograms more often decorate custom-made than ready-made shirts.

The monogram's ultimate message is, "I am an important person." The message is contradicted if the monogramming is too insistent — if there is more than one monogram on a shirt or if the monogram is more than a quarter-inch high.

Not everyone approves of monograms. David Denny of London's Ashley & Blake, shirtmaker by appointment to Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh, said:

"I've been in the top end of the shirt business for 25 years and in England gentlemen do not wear monogrammed shirts. There is a difference, I might add, between a gentleman and a man with a lot of money, if you take my meaning."

A two-headed shrimp found by Howard Fraley last May on a fishing trip near Galveston has been forwared to the Smithsonian Institution where a scientific paper has been written about it. Fraley was about to the use the "Siamese shrimp" as fish bait when he noticed the oddity.

'Siamese shrimp' headed for a record

GALVESTON (AP) — Howard Fraley was about to use a shrimp for bait when he found the animal had two heads.

The shrimp, now at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington D.C., is believed to be the first on record.

Austin B. Williams, curator of invertebrates at the Smithsonian National Museum of Natural History who has dissected the find, refers to the animal as a "Siamese shrimp."

"The pieces are all there and it's in the research collection," Williams said. "It's been catalogued as a specimen."

Williams said he has searched scientific literature back to the late 1800s, but has found no mention of a similar case.

Fraley, 37, found the double-headed shrimp in his bait bucket while on a fishing trip near Galveston last May.

"I came up with this shrimp and I was about to tear the head off," Fraley said. "I pulled on it and it was attached."

"I said: 'Why, this thing's got two heads!' " said Fraley, a Galveston Housing Authority employee.

Fraley and his wife, C.J., photographed the shrimp, and then took it home and placed it in their home freezer. Mrs. Fraley, who works as a barber, mentioned the find to Neal Baxter, chief of the National Marine Fisheries Service ecology division in Galveston.

"We're dealing with a first occurrence here, I guess, to the best of our knowledge," said Baxter, who in turn notified Williams.

"It's a curiosity," Williams said. "It was as curious to me as it was to the folks who found it."

Fraley just feels lucky to have found the two-headed creature.

"I was excited," he said. "And to think I nearly tore the head off."

Challenger settlement announced

Lawyer says amount 'woefully inadequate'

WASHINGTON (AP) — An attorney for five relatives of Challenger astronauts says that other families who settled with the government and with rocket maker Morton Thiokol for $7.7 million were shortchanged.

"That settlement is woefully inadequate," said Ronald D. Krist, a Houston attorney who represented astronauts' survivors from the Apollo spacecraft fire in 1967 as well as three families from the 1986 space shuttle disaster.

Krist said the four Challenger families in the government-company settlement should have and "would have netted more money" if they had hired lawyers.

The cost of the four-family settlement, which came in cash and annuities, was disclosed in government documents released Monday.

The documents show that Morton Thiokol, which produced the faulty booster rocket blamed for the Jan. 28, 1986, explosion of the space shuttle Challenger, paid $4,641,000, or 60 percent. The government's share of the settlements was $3,094,000, or 40 percent.

The documents were released by the Justice Department to settle a civil suit brought under the Freedom of Information Act by The Associated Press and six other news organizations.

In court papers, the government acknowledged that the four settling families did not hire lawyers, relying instead on informal advice from Leo B. Lind Jr., executor of the estate of Christa McAuliffe, a 37-year-old Concord, N.H., high school teacher killed in the explosion. Lind is the law partner of McAuliffe's husband, Steven.

Michael D. Oldak, an attorney and ex-husband of mission specialist Judith A. Resnik, represented her father, Marvin, in settlement talks with the Justice Department.

"I think it was a big mistake" for the four settling families not to hire lawyers, Oldak said Monday. "I think if I hadn't been involved, they probably may have coerced the Resniks into accepting their original offer. These are people in the midst of their grief."

Oldak said the original government-company offer was "a few hundred thousand," and "I told them nicely what they could do with it." He rebuffed them again when "nearly a year later, they doubled the offer."

Instead, Marvin Resnik settled with Morton Thiokol last month for an amount he put at between $2 million and $3.5 million. The government refused to contribute to the settlement.

The government's treatment of the four families was viewed differently by Betty Grissom, whose husband Gus died in the Apollo fire.

Mrs. Grissom said she received only $350,000, and had to sue North American Rockwell on her own for that.

"I never heard from the Justice Department," she said. "I thought we got an injustice done to us. They act like they care now, but they didn't back then.

"It kinda hurts," she added. "It stings that...we never got treated like that. It hurts when I think that they're getting that much money."

The settlements were reached Dec. 29, 1986, with the immediate survivors of spacecraft commander Dick Scobee, 46, a retired Air Force officer employed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration; mission specialist Ellison S. Onizuka, 39, an Air Force lieutenant colonel; payload specialist Gregory Jarvis, 41, an employee of Hughes Aircraft Co.; and McAuliffe.

The surviving four spouses and six children will receive more than $7,735,000, because each was given an annuity, which pays benefits larger than its cost but over a period of many years.

The total dollar amounts they will receive over time and the breakdown by family were not released.

Among the disclosures:

— The Justice Department did all the negotiating for Morton Thiokol as well as the government. The families never spoke to company officials.

— The rocket maker tried to have the settlements cover any property damage Morton Thiokol might have caused, such as destruction of the orbiter and payload, but the government refused.

— Although the Justice Department claims it cannot legally be sued by the families of military or federal civilian employees who die on duty, it contributed 40 percent to each of the settlements. Only the Jarvis and McAuliffe relatives had a right to sue the government directly; all the astronaut families could sue the company.

Morton Thiokol attorney John W. Adler said the government was being unfair to the parents of Resnik, a 36-year-old civilian NASA employee, because of "the government's refusal to participate to any degree at all" in a settlement the company considered acceptable.

Resnik's mother, Sarah Resnik Belfer, and Jarvis' father, Bruce, settled with Morton, Thiokol but the government did not contribute. So did Cheryl McNair, wife of mission specialist Ronald E. McNair, 35, a civilian NASA employee who had two infant children. All five were represented by Krist.

Jane Smith, wife of pilot Michael J. Smith, 40, a Navy commander, has a suit pending in federal court against the company. The government last month got itself dismissed as a defendant, because military personnel may not sue the government for wrongful death.

Justice spokeswoman Amy Brown said the government made settlement offers to attorneys for the Resniks, Smiths and McNairs based on the same formula used for the other families, but they were rejected. She said the government would not offer them settlements which exceeded the guidelines used for the other families or which were separate from settlements with Morton Thiokol.

Murder victim's family files suit against store where gun was bought

FORT WORTH (AP) — A case that a lawyer says could have a lasting effect on policies used by retailers in the sale of deadly weapons has started with the family of a murder victim seeking $12 million from a sporting goods store.

The family of Jimmy Glenn Wilson went to court Monday to press a $12 million wrongful-death claim against Oshman's Sporting Goods, the store that sold the murder weapon to the assailant.

Wilson, a restaurant manager, was shot on Sept. 24, 1984, when a gunman later identified as Barry Wayne Shaw sprayed the front door and window of a Fort Worth karate studio with 14 bullets from an Uzi 9mm semi-automatic pistol. The gunfire also wounded the studio's owner, a man against whom Shaw reportedly bore a grudge for discontinuing his karate lessons.

Shaw, 21 at the time, also was accused of bursting into a North Richland Hills high school four days later and firing several shots during a pep rally, reportedly to frighten a cheerleader who had spurned his advances.

Shaw was convicted in the slaying of Wilson and is serving a 44-year prison term.

But Wilson's family says that Houston-based Oshman's is partly to blame for their son's death because of what they say were lax practices surrounding the sale of the gun to Shaw two days before the karate-studio shooting.

"The evidence will show that no questions were asked" when Shaw purchased the gun from the Northeast Mall sporting goods retailer, Dallas attorney Mark Siegel said during opening statements Monday.

The store's clerks violated federal laws by failing to notice that Shaw didn't sign a registration form required for the sale of all firearms, Siegel said. He also said Shaw lied on the form, saying he was not under any indictment when he was serving a probated sentence for felony theft.

Lawyers for the sporting goods firm successfully blocked Siegel on Monday from telling the jury that its decision could affect gun-control legislation.

"You may be concerned that legislation passed by Congress is ineffectual," defense attorney Ed Fowler told jurors. "But the store personnel in Oshman's are no more responsible than you are for what the federal law is supposed to be..."

STATE IN BRIEF

Agents seize cocaine valued at $24 million

EL PASO (AP) — U.S. Customs agents seized 93.5 pounds of cocaine worth an estimated $24 million from a car attempting to cross an international bridge, a Customs official said today.

The driver, a Mexico resident was arrested and expected to be charged later today, said Charles Conroy, Customs spokesman.

The agency delayed announcing the 8 p.m. Saturday bust because they wanted to investigate further, Conroy said.

"It's interesting to note that he tried to sneak across during the peak weekend hours," Conroy said. "It may have been an attempt to reduce the possibility of being inspected."

For the second weekend in a row, lines at the bridges linking Juarez and El Paso were longer than normal as Border Patrol and Customs agents inspected cars more carefully than usual. On Sunday afternoon, people trying to cross the Zaragoza Bridge and the free Bridge of the Americas had to wait more than an hour.

Customs agents on the Bridge of the Americas decided to do a thorough inspection of the Mexican-registered 1979 Chrysler Cordoba that the suspect was driving after he told them he had nothing to declare.

They found 40 packages of cocaine behind and under the back seat, Conroy said.

The man was being held in El Paso County Jail without bail pending his arraignment before a federal magistrate later today, Conroy said.

EPA to clean up site

DALLAS (AP) — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said Monday it will spend more than $500,000 to clean up a potentially hazardous abandoned waste site in Hutchins.

Work at the Best Plate Co., a metal plating and fabrication plant, is expected to begin today, officials said. The site is on the east service road of Interstate 45, about 10 miles south of Dallas.

"Our cleanup will prevent the risk of direct contact with caustic and acidic solutions left at the plant," said EPA regional administrator Robert E. Layton Jr. "If not taken care of, the plating chemicals could mix and form toxic gas."

Layton said the hazardous chemicals were left in deteriorating 55-gallon drums. The nearest residences are 300 feet away.

During a 10- to 15-day cleanup, the EPA will oversee cleanup crews using vacuum trucks to remove the chemicals, seal them in protective steel drums and deliver them to an EPA-approved disposal site.

Officials said about 132 of the drums, 21 platings baths in site buildings and five 200- to 500-gallon tanks of chemicals were left on site. Sludge samples revealed concentrations of nickel and chromium.

Pilot lands on softball field

ARLINGTON (AP) — The pilot of a vintage training plane suffered only minor injuries when his craft crash-landed on an empty athletic field at the University of Texas at Arlington.

James Goad, 52, of North Richland Hills, was flying from Summers Airport in Saginaw to Grand Prairie in a PT-23, a two-seat plane, when the engine began to malfunction over Arlington Sunday.

Goad, a 35-year veteran pilot, avoided a neighborhood in central Arlington, landing on a softball field. The plane tumbled once after landing, coming to rest with its wheels in the air.

Goad,the plane's only occupant was treated for minor cuts and bruises.

The engine of the plane, built in 1943, apparently stopped during the flight, but investigators at the site did not know why, said Tommy McFall of Arlington, a supervising accident investigator for the National Transportation Safety board.

Sailors killed in accident

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Three Beeville Naval Air Station sailors died last weekend in an automobile accident, officials said.

The three sailors were killed when the Honda Prelude they were in collided with a van that was towing two vehicles near Skidmore, about 40 northwest of Corpus Christi along the Texas Gulf Coast.

The dead were identified as: Delinda Hoening, 25, of Milton, Vt., David Tiegdon, 22, of Camillus, N.Y., and William J. Jordan Jr., 26, of Nashville, Tenn., a Department of Public Safety spokesman said.

The van's driver, Jose R. De La Paz, 28, of Mexico, was treated for facial cuts at Beeville Memorial Hospital and released.

The Honda was traveling eastbound on Texas 359 when it drifted into the westbound lane, DPS trooper Jimmy Moore said.

Faculty reportedly unpaid

DALLAS (AP) — Financial reports filed by Bishop College officials with a federal bankruptcy court show some administrators continued to be paid while faculty members went without paychecks.

Records show that $13,758 in administrative salaries and only $598 in salaries to faculty have been paid since Jan. 22, the last time the entire Bishop staff was reimbursed.

But financial reports do not say which administrators have been paid, the Dallas Morning News reported today. The latest tally shows the college owes $129,327.02 in back wages.

SMU, Baylor dominate All-SWC basketball team

DALLAS (AP) — Champion Southern Methodist placed two players on The Associated Press 1987-1988 All-Southwest Conference basketball first team and Dave Bliss was honored by his peers as Coach of the Year.

Kato Armstrong and Carlton McKinney, the Mustangs' high-scoring seniors, were named to first-place berths.

Other first teamers picked by the coaches included Baylor's inside-outside, one-two punch of center Darryl Middleton and guard Michael Williams, both seniors, and sophomore Ron Huery of the Arkansas Razorbacks.

Middleton, who became the first player since 1975 to win scoring and rebounding titles, is the AP All-Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Year.

"He is one of the best inside players we faced," said Illinois Coach Lou Henson. "His strength and aggressiveness on the boards make him an outstanding offensive player. He is also a tremendous defensive threat inside. He is no doubt one of the top post people in the country."

Defensive Player of the Year was also off Coach Gene Iba's second seeded tournament team, Robert McLemore, a tenacious competitor who usually guards the shooting star on the opposing teams.

Baylor had its finest regular season in 40 years with 21 victories.

Newcomer of the Year is SMU's Todd Alexander, the most valuable sixth man in the SWC. Alexander, a transfer from Minnesota, gave the Mustangs a lift with his solid outside shooting.

Middleton averaged 19.5 points and nine rebounds per game. Rick Bullock averaged 20 points and 11 rebounds for Texas Tech in 1975.

Williams moved into the top 15 all-time SWC and broke Baylor's single season assists record of 159 set by Vinnie Johnson during the 1978-79 season. Williams averaged 18 points per game.

For the SMU Mustangs it was their first SWC title since 1967.

It was the first time for Bliss to win Coach of the Year honors in his eight years at SMU.

Armstrong and McKinney each averaged 15 points for the Mustangs and Alexander averaged 14 points coming off the bench as the Mustangs won 24 of 30 regular season games.

Huery, a sophomore, averaged 13 points for the Razorbacks, who finished in third place after being the preseason favorites.

The second team included Texas Longhorns' Alvin Heggs and Travis Mays, Alexander, Andrew Lang of Arkansas, and a tie between Darryl McDonald of Texas A&M and Sean Gay of Texas Tech.

DALLAS (AP) — Here is The Associated Press 1987-1988 All-Southwest Conference basketball team:

FIRST TEAM

Darryl Middleton, Baylor, 6-9, 230, senior, Queens, N.Y.; Michael Williams, Baylor, 6-3, 175, senior, Dallas; Kato Armstrong, SMU, 5-11, 160, junior, Dallas; Carlton McKinney, SMU, 6-5, 190, senior, Nixon, Texas; Ron Huery, Arkansas, 6-6, 190, sophomore, Memphis, Tenn.

SECOND TEAM

Alvin Heggs, Texas; Andrew Lang, Arkansas; Travis Mays, Texas; Todd Alexander, SMU; (tie) Darryl McDonald, Texas A&M, and Sean Gay, Texas Tech.

Coach of the Year — Dave Bliss, SMU.

Offensive Player of the Year — Middleton.

Defensive Player of the Year — Robert McLemore, Baylor.

Newcomer of the Year — Todd Alexander, SMU.

All Newcomer Team — Alexander, SMU; Richard Hollis, Houston; Craig Upchurch, Houston; Alvin Heggs, Texas; David Willis, Rice.

All Defensive Team — McLemore, Baylor; Lang, Arkansas; Middleton, Baylor; John Lewis, TCU; Keith Wilson, Arkansas.

Hough balks nine times

Associated Press

Dwight Gooden's first start of the 1988 exhibition season was a shaky one, but not as balky as Charlie Hough's for Texas.

Gooden gave up eight hits and five runs in three innings Monday as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the New York Mets 5-1. Last year, he suffered through a nine-run, first-inning against the St. Louis Cardinals.

"This was nothing like the first game last spring," Gooden said.

Hough was called for nine balks in four innings, including seven balks in one inning against Toronto.

The knuckleball specialist balked seven times in the second inning, when he gave up three runs. Despite the balks, the Rangers took advantage of a fielding error to beat Toronto 6-5.

"Apparently there is a different rule," Hough said. I don't quite understand it. Balk rules are so vague anyway. The way I pitch, I'm not trying to deceive anyone. They said I didn't stop with my feet. It's difficult to interpret."

Gooden said he had a poor curveball and erratic fastball against the Dodgers.

"I wasn't happy with my breaking ball, but it's still early," he said. "I thought I had a good fastball early. The main thing is to get the work in and get ready for the season."

Tigers 8, Astros 0

Scott Lusader hit a two-run homer and four Detroit pitchers combined on a five-hitter as the Tigers shut out the Astros.

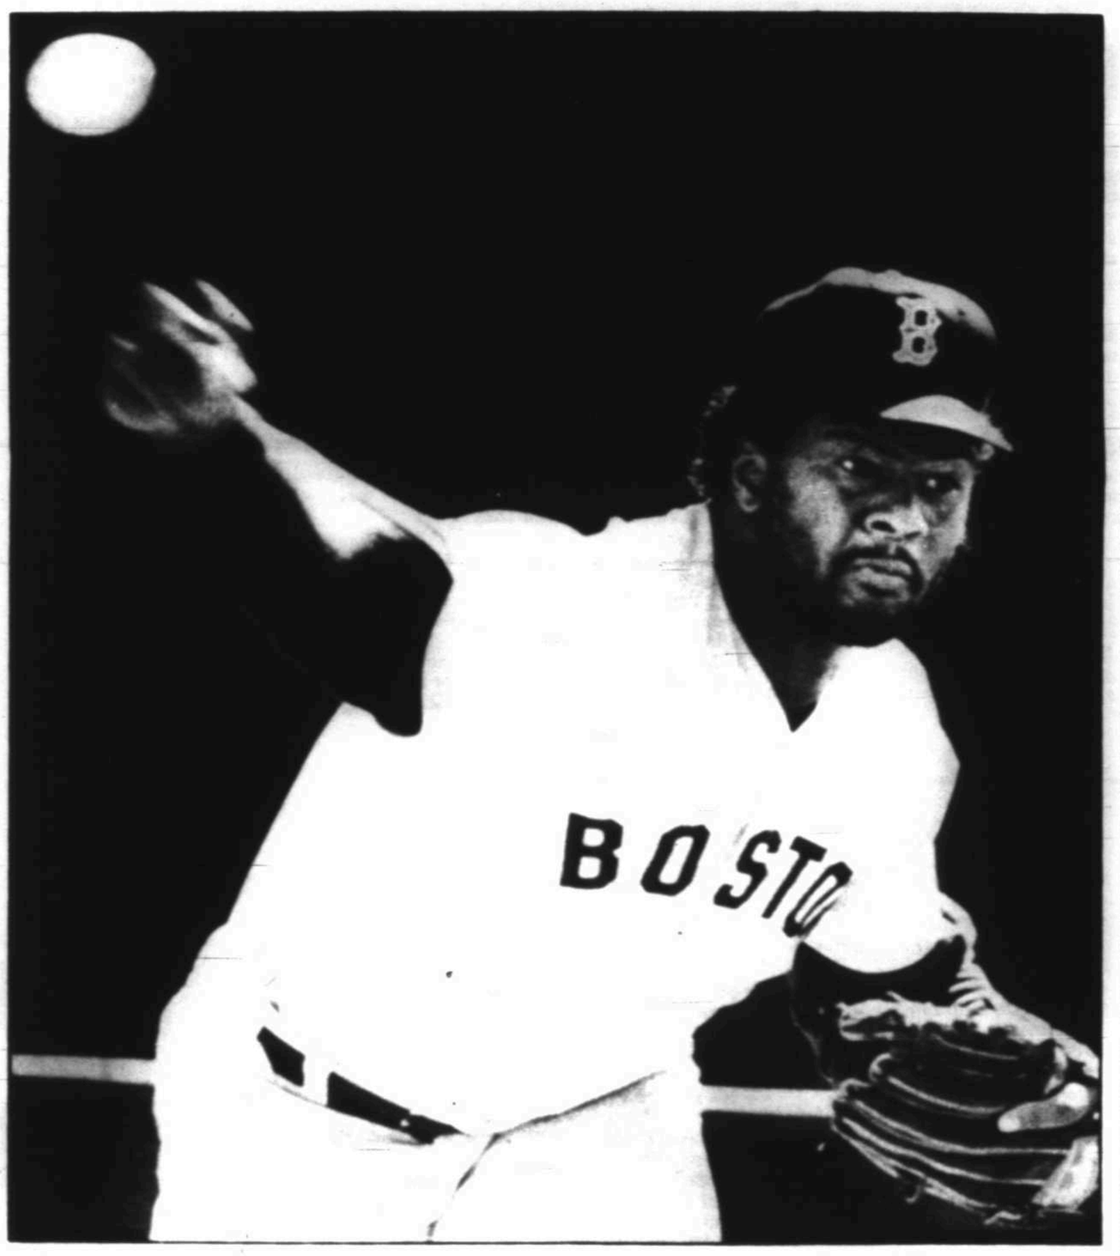

Doyle Alexander, who was 9-0 after being traded to Detroit last season, gave up two hits and struck out two in two innings. Alexander was followed by Dave Cooper, Steve Searcy and Carl Best, each of whom gave up one hit.

Houston starter Danny Darwin gave up six runs on seven hits in three innings.

A's 3, Angels 2

American League rookie-of-the-year Mark McGwire hit his first home run of the spring, a two-run shot in the seventh inning, to lead Oakland over California.

The homer, off losing right-hander Stu Cliburn, was McGwire's first hit in nine at bats, and the Athletics' first homer of the spring. It also provided Oakland with its first victory in four games.

Former Midland and Chicago Cub Lee Smith picks up a 2-1 exhibition win over Cincinnati.

Padres 5, Cubs 3

Tim Flannery went 2-for-2 and drove in a run and Ed Whitson gained the victory despite allowing two runs and six hits in three innings.

Flannery's leadoff double keyed a two-run third inning that gave San Diego a 3-2 lead. He squeezed in a run in the fourth as San Diego went ahead 5-2.

Keith Comstock, Mark Davis and Dave Leiper combined to hold the Cubs to one run over the final six innings, with Leiper gaining the save.

Red Sox 2, Reds 1

John Marzano singled home Brady Anderson with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning to give Boston the victory.

Bill Russell fired after 17-41 mark

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The catcalls and boos for Coach Bill Russell, a rarity in this sports-happy town which never had a major professional team until the NBA Kings arrived, began last December and grew steadily.

On Monday, the team's owners made their own views known by firing Russell and moving him into the club's front office.

With 17 victories and 41 losses, the Kings have the fourth-worst record in the NBA. That prompted managing general partner Gregg Lukenbill to make several changes, including relieving Russell of the coaching duties.

Lukenbill said the Kings "need a new direction. ... Our success rate hasn't been exactly stirling."

RUSSELL, A basketball legend who was seen as something of a savior of the lackluster Sacramento Kings, will become vice president in charge of basketball operations. He'll be a sort of talent consultant, hunting down prospects among NBA competitors and the colleges.

Russell was replaced by assistant Jerry Reynolds, the self-described "Little Buckaroo," who was interim head coach last year when Coach Phil Johnson was fired.

In an unusual move Monday, the Kings named Johnson as Reynolds' assistant.

In another change in the Kings' top management, team president Joe Axelson was named vice president for business operations, a move that Lukenbill said represented a demotion.

"This is a reorganization of the responsibilities and the roles of the people of this organization ... to change the chemistry and move this organization around," Lukenbill said.

Lukenbill also predicted major changes among the players.

"There isn't one player on this team who is safe (from trading)," Lukenbill said. "Being 22nd or 23rd in defense speaks for itself, as far as I'm concerned."

For Russell, 54, it was a grinding season, punctuated by boos from capacity crowds in the hastily built, 10,333-seat Arco Arena that once provided the Kings with only cheers.

Originally targeted against the team, the booing became more personal, deliberately directed at Russeel as he paced the sidelines in the small arena.

"Every time we lost a game, it was a real hard kick in the stomach," Russell said. "I don't sleep after we lose and, you know, I've had a lot of sleepless nights," he added, his voice quivering and his eyes appearing moist. "The losses, I haven't been able to handle that."

HE WON the season opener and, in formal attire with a flower in his buttonhole, appeared to be the answer for fans discouraged by the previous season, when the Kings finished next-to-last in the Midwest Division.

But the good will steadily evaporated, Russell said, as the losses mounted and media coverage became more critical.

Reporters would say, "Who the hell are you to be getting a job like this?" Russell said at an Arco Arena press conference. "If you (reporters) are going to say whether a guy is doing a good job or not, take a guy in a similar situation. What are they doing?"

Last year under Reynolds, 44, a silver-haired man with a penchant for gallows humor, the team won 15 games and lost 21. Lukenbill said there would be no "interim" on Reynolds title this time, declaring he "is the permanent head coach for at least two years after this year."

The Kings came to Sacramento three years ago from Kansas City as the first of what Lukenbill and his associates hope is a progression of major league professional teams for the city. A 17,000-seat arena is currently under construction to house the Kings, and Lukenbill hopes to eventually attract major-league baseball and football teams to Sacramento, a city of about 350,000.

Russell, who did not complete a full season as Kings coach, was five times the NBA's most valuable player and a player-coach of the world champion Boston Celtics in the 1960s and 1960s. He was hired last April at an undisclosed salary to boost the sagging franchise.

MHS junior lands All-District berth

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ABILENE — Greg Lewis, Midland High's 6-4 junior, was the only Tall City player to earn a berth on the District 4-5A All-District 11-player first team picked here by league coaches following district play.

Lewis, one of three juniors to land a berth on the elite squad, led 4-5A in scoring with 222 points for a district average of 18.5 points per game. Lewis will return to Coach Jack Stephenson's Bulldog stable for the 1989 season.

Odessa High's Lester White, a 6-5 senior was named as the league's Most Valuable Player, averaging 17.9 points in loop action and the loop's leading rebounder. White ranked third overall in scoring average and helped the Bronchos land a runnerup playoff berth. OHS lost to Amarillo Tascosa in bi-district play.

Abilene Cooper's 6-1 Mitch Royals earned special recognition as Sophomore of the Year, ranking eighth in scoring with a 13.2 average.

Midland High's Greg Lewis

League champion Abilene High landed three players on the first team, including two juniors in 6-8 Cory Lockridge and 6-8 Greg Denman. Lockridge averaged 10.8 points per game and Denman 12.1. The other Abilene High player was 6-7 senior Doug Brown, who averaged 12.4.

Abilene High's Gerald Coppedge was also named as Coach of the Year. AHS was the first 4-5A team to reach the Region I tournament in Midland since 1981 when Midland High turned the trick. Both Abilene High and Midland High were eliminated in the Region I tournament by Fort Worth Dunbar.

In addition to White, Odessa High placed 6-0 senior Victor Dancer (9.9) and 6-0 senior Ed Rheams (9.6) on the first team.

Third place San Angelo landed two players on the squad in 6-2 senior Scott Marschall and 6-1 senior Collin Burdine (12.3). Marschall averaged 18.1 points per game and lost the district scoring title to Lewis on the last night of the district season.

Odessa Permian 6-2 senior Chris Enriquez (12.3) was the only Panther to make the team.

The other first team selection was 5-7 senior Tom Toney (17.3) of Abilene Cooper. Toney led the league in three-point goals with 23, seven more than Burdine of San Angelo.

Midland Lee was the only team that was not honored with a first team selection despite the fact that the Rebels had the sixth and seventh leading scorers in the district in Darren Dortch and Jared Edwards, both juniors.

Dortch and Edwards both where named to the honorable mention list.

Midland High placed three on the honorable mention list with Eric Boyt, Clyde Govan and Kyle Lusby.

District MVP: Lester White, 6-5, Sr., Odessa High.
Sophomore of the Year: Mitch Royals, 6-1, Soph., Abilene Cooper.
Coach of Year: Gerald Coppedge, Abilene High.

First Team

Greg Lewis, 6-4, Jr., Midland High; Doug Brown, 6-7, Sr., Abilene High; Cory Lockridge, 6-8, Jr., Abilene High; Greg Denman, 6-8, Jr., Abilene High; Victor Dancer, 6-0, Sr., Odessa High; Ed Rheams, 6-0, Sr., Odessa High; Scott Marschall, 6-2, Sr., San Angelo; Collin Burdine, 6-1, Sr., San Angelo; Chris Enriquez, 6-2, Sr., Odessa Permian; Tom Toney, 6-7, Sr., Abilene Cooper.

Honorable Mention

Knicks' rookie Jackson even impresses Bulls' Jordan

Associated Press

When the New York Knicks picked Mark Jackson in the NBA's first round, they were looking for a point guard.

Monday night, the rookie pointed the way to the Knicks' 13th consecutive home victory with an season-high 33 points as New York defeated the Chicago Bulls 110-96. The Knicks now have their longest home winning streak since they won 20 straight in 1972-73.

"My job on offense is to make things happen," Jackson said. "I'll shoot or pass depending on what the defense gives me."

It wasn't just the defense that created the chances for Jackson's 10 of 20 shooting from the field and 12-for-12 from the foul line. Jackson said he knew he had to respond when the Knicks made only eight of 25 shots in the first period.

"When we started slow, I didn't consciously try to score, but I was aware that I had to try to get the offense moving," Jackson said. "I have a lot of confidence in my shooting."

"He was brilliant," Knicks Coach Rick Pitino said of Jackson, who is fourth in the NBA in assists with 9.9 per game. "It's great being on the sidelines knowing he has the ball."

NBA Roundup

Even Michael Jordan, who led Chicago with 38 points, was impressed.

"He is turning into a good player," Jordan said. "The Knicks gave him the opportunity to step in, and he's done that. He's going to get better and better. He's already looking like a veteran."

Jackson, whose previous scoring high was 22 points, scored 13 in the second second period as New York outscored the Bulls 33-19 to turn a seven-point deficit into a 54-47 halftime lead. He scored all of his 12 fourth-quarter points in the final 8:32 as the Knicks held on after the Bulls cut an 80-66 deficit to 85-81.

Jordan, the NBA's leading scorer with an average of 33.9 per game, was held to seven points in the fourth quarter.

Lakers 110, 76ers 104

Magic Johnson had 22 points, 17 assists and 11 rebounds to pace the Los Angeles Lakers past Philadelphia.

Philadelphia went on an 11-1 run at the start of the fourth period to close within one point on a jumper by Cliff Robinson with 7:45 to play. But six straight points by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar gave the Lakers a 103-96 lead with 4:08 remaining.

Robinson's jumper made it 105-102 with 1:48 to go, but Byron Scott made a technical foul charged to Charles Barkley and Johnson sank two foul shots to give Los Angeles an insurmountable 108-102 lead.

"We're playing pretty good right now," said Johnson, who had his second triple-double in as many games. "But there's a lot of room for improvement."

Forward James Worthy, who had 18 points, agreed.

"We're playing very well together, but I still don't think we're playing at our best," he said.

Jazz 105, Nets 81

Thurl Bailey and Karl Malone scored 21 points each and Bobby Hansen added 20 to give Utah its fifth straight victory.

John Stockton added 15 points and nine assists and Malone grabbed 19 rebounds as the Jazz snapped New Jersey's three-game winning streak and handed Willis Reed his first loss in four games as Nets coach.

"I felt really good tonight. It's great to have the shots go down," said Hansen, who was 9-for-11 in Monday's game, boosting his totals for his last three games to 27-for-32, or 84.4 percent. "Things are really coming together for the team and for myself. I score a lot of points by getting out on the fast breaks, and our running game got going tonight."

Tim McCormick led the losers with a season-high 25 points.

Utah led 53-49 at the half, then went on a 15-4 run in the third quarter to take a 68-53 advantage. In the final priod, the closest the Nets could get was 89-76.

Kings 116, Nuggets 114, OT

Reggie Theus scored 33 points, including two free throws with two seconds left in regulation to tie the game and three more foul shots in the final eight seconds of overtime, to lead Sacramento over Denver and snap the Kings' four-game home losing streak.

The victory made Jerry Reynolds' debut as an NBA head coach a success. Reynolds was named earlier in the day to replace Bill Russell, who was reassigned as the Kings' vice president of basketball operations.

Lafayette Lever and Jay Vincent scored 23 points each and Michael Adams had 20 for the Nuggets.

Kenny Smith added 21 and Derek Smith 17 points for the Kings.

Loyola wins NCAA berth

Associated Press

Now that Loyola Marymount has run through the West Coast Athletic Conference, the Lions expect to run over some more prestigious opponents in the NCAA tournament.

Loyola, the nation's top-scoring team with an average of 110 points, passed 100 for the 22nd time in 30 games and beat Santa Clara 104-96. The Lions were one of four teams that clinched NCAA berths Monday night.

La Salle beat Fordham 79-70 for the Metro Atlantic title, North Carolina-Charlotte took the Sun Belt by beating Virginia Commonwealth 81-79 and Richmond downed George Mason 74-71 for the Colonial Athletic Association crown.

After a slow start, the Lions had few problems on Santa Clara's court. They are confident enough to think they won't be running into trouble on NCAA tournament courts, either.

"We're going to surprise some people," tournament MVP Hank Gathers said. "We're gonna tear some teams up.

"The pace was great tonight. We feel better tonight than the other games. It hurts us to have a day off. We have no problems running every day."

Loyola, which extended the nation's longest winning streak to 24 games, went in front for the first time on Jeff Fryer's shot at the buzzer for a 51-49 halftime edge. Then Bo Kimble's 13 points triggered a 22-9 burst at the start of the second half.

Kimble made only two of 15 attempts from the field in the first half but began finding the range after halftime.

Gathers led Loyola, 27-3, with 24 points, 16 in the second half. Mike Yoest scored 23, Kimble finished with 20 and Corey Gaines 19 for the Lions.

"We needed to keep our style," Coach Paul Westhead said. "We didn't back down. We were able to keep our pace and our approach. Of course, we only have one approach."

And they're unapproachable when they stick to their style.

"It's hard to stay in the game when you can't get the ball past half court," Santa Clara Coach Carroll Williams said after his team made 25 turnovers. "When we got the ball upcourt, we ran the offense well. But we didn't get past half court enough."

Tournament Finals

La Salle, which dominated the MAAC all season, won a school record-tying 15th straight game to earn its first NCAA bid in five years. The Explorers, winners of all 17 conference games and 24-9 overall, got six 3-point goals and a career-high 24 points from Rich Tarr. He was helped by Lionel Simmons, the MAAC player of the year, whose 23 points pushed him past Tom Gola for the Explorers' single-season scoring mark.

Simmons has scored 772 points, breaking Gola's record 750, set in 1954-55.

"Rich usually looks for the assists," Simmons said. "Tonight they did a good job on (Tim) Legler, so we really needed his scoring. He is a very underrated player."

College Basketball

Greg Pedro led the Rams with 32 points, including a Byrne Arena record eight 3-point goals.

UNC-Charlotte won its first Sun Belt crown since 1977 as conference player of the year Byron Dinkins scored 26 points. The 49ers, 22-8, beat Virginia Commonwealth for the first time in 11 tries at Richmond Coliseum.

VCU's Phil Stinnie, who finished second in the top player voting, had 25 points for the Rams, 21-11.

UNC-Charlotte was leading 80-79 and running the clock in the final minute when the Rams' Martin Henlan forced a jump ball with 30 seconds to play. The possession arrow was pointing in Virginia Commonwealth's favor, but they couldn't hit the winning shot.

At Hampton, Va., the Richmond Spiders improved their record to 24-6. But they had to overcome a streak of poor foul shooting to clinch the NCAA invitation.

Benjy Taylor came off the bench to hit for straight free throws after his teammates had missed five in a row.

"It's a tribute to him that he iced those final four free throws because he was not in the flow of the game," Coach Dick Tarrant said. "He's won games at the end with free throws at least three or four times."

The lead changed hands 12 times in the final eight minutes.

George Mason finished 20-10.

Other Tournaments

Ivan Brown, who had 24 points, hit a three-point play six seconds into overtime to start a 10-0 run that led St. Joseph's over Penn State 85-78 in the quarterfinals of the Atlantic 10 tournament. That streak put away the Nittany Lions, who had been down 44-22 with 18 minutes left in regulation.

The victory moved the Hawks, 15-13, into a semifinal tonight against No. 1 Temple. Penn State finished the season 13-14.

In the other Atlantic 10 quarterfinal, second-seeded Rhode Island defeated Rutgers 104-73 and will meet host West Virginia tonight.

Tom Garrick scored a record-breaking 50 points, including 32 in the first half for Rhode Island, 25-5. Garrick's offensive performance was the best in tournament history. The senior guard also broke tournament records for the most points scored by a player in one half, field goals in a game with 19 and 3-point baskets with five.

Regular Season

David Rivers had 22 points and became only the third Notre Dame player with more than 2,000 points as the Irish beat Hardin-Simmons 100-71. He trails only Austin Carr and Adrian Dantley.

"I can't say enough about David," Phelps said. "Rivers is once in a lifetime, only because he is so diverse. David makes other people score."

Myers posts worst season

LUBBOCK (AP) — A season's worth of frustration showed when Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers was slapped with two technical fouls within seconds of one another.

For several minutes during the season-ending game Sunday against Arkansas, Myers protested vociferously a charging call against senior forward Greg Crowe. Arkansas scored four points off the resulting foul shots en route to putting a dismal ending on a disasterous regular season for the Red Raiders.

With an overall record of 9-18, Tech posted its worst record since 1962-63, when the Raiders went 6-17.

Tech's 4-12 seventh-place conference finish was another worst-ever milestone: its poorest SWC mark since the Red Raiders joined the league in 1957.

AND FOR the first time ever, the Raiders failed to win a single game on an opponent's home court.

After such a forgettable season, Myers said Monday he knows what ails his program. "I figured that out a long time ago. We've just got to work on recruiting."

Under Myers, Tech has had only one other losing season, an 11-20 year in which just eight players finished the season.

Myers became the third-winningest coach in conference history this season, winning his 300th. But it took him five games to get from No. 299 to No. 300, which came Feb. 20 in a 68-58 victory over Texas Christian.

The Raiders made four more outings after that, but failed to add to Myers' win column.

"They're down but they don't get down as far as just quitting and giving up," Myers said of his team, which had only one senior.

The season isn't likely to end on an upbeat note as the Raiders face 21-9 Baylor, which beat Tech by 60 points in two meetings this season, in the first round of the SWC tournament Friday.

"We're probably playing the toughest team we could draw in Baylor as far as us matching up with Baylor," Myers said.

Illinois breaks into AP's Top 20

Associated Press

Now that they've made the Top Twenty, the Fighting Illini of Illinois have their sights set on the Top 16.

Illinois, almost given up for dead after a four-game losing streak midway through the brutal Big Ten Conference season, has righted itself smartly. Illinois has won six of its last seven games — the only loss was to No. 2 Purdue — and at 20-9 appears a shoo-in for an NCAA Tournament berth. The resurgence was capped this week when Illinois checked in at No. 19 in the Associated Press college basketball poll.

A couple of weeks ago, there was concern among Illini fans about whether their club would miss the NCAA's glamor show for the first time since 1982. Now, with two games left in the regular season, Illinois is thinking about gaining one of the 16 seeds for the 64 team tournament.

"We've improved in the last few weeks. Right now, we're playing the best ball we've played this season," Illinois Coach Lou Henson said. "We've beaten some good people in Indiana and Iowa.

"We were a young team. I think that's probably one of the reasons we struggled earlier in the year," Henson said. "We've played what I think is a tough schedule. We went through a four-game losing streak earlier ... but we've come back."

ADDED ILLINOIS sports information director Dick Barnes, "In my opinion, if Illinois wins the last two games (against Michigan and Northwestern), we have an excellent chance of being seeded in the tournament. That's a good goal for us this week."

Illinois had been in the rankings for five straight weeks before falling out for the past four. The Fighting Illini had been ranked as high as 13th before losing four in a row.

The top four in the poll remained unchanged for the fifth consecutive week. Temple, 27-1, led the way, followed by Big Ten champion Purdue, 26-2, Pacific 10 regular-season champ Arizona, 28-2, and Big Eight regular season titleist Oklahoma, 27-3. All four are cinches to be invited to the NCAA Tournament, with the only question being their relative seedings.

Temple received 42 first-place votes and 1,232 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters, while Purdue was first on 17 ballots and had 1,205 points.

Arizona was the only other team to receive first-place votes, getting four and 1,148 points. Oklahoma had 1,019 points.

Pittsburgh, the Big East regular season champion, jumped from seventh to fifth and Kentucky moved from eighth to sixth this week. Pittsburgh, 22-5, received 924 points after beating then-No. 12 Syracuse in the Carrier Dome for its first conference title. The Panthers had lost their previous game to Seton Hall and needed the victory for the No. 1 seeding in the conference tournament.

Kentucky, 22-5 after beating Georgia and Mississippi to win its 37th Southeastern Conference title, received 886 points, 66 more than Nevada-Las Vegas.

UNLV, No. 5 last week, dropped to 26-4 by losing its third home game of the season, 79-77, to Long Beach State.

The Top Twenty

The Top Twenty teams in the Associated Press college basketball poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, total points based on 20 for a first-place vote, 19 for second, 18 for third, etc., records through March 6 and last week's ranking:

SPRING

In their first preseason appearances, Roger Clemens and Bruce Hurst each pitched three shutout innings for the Red Sox.

Clemens, who has won the American League Cy Young Award the last two years, allowed three singles, struck out two and didn't walk a batter. Hurst then retired nine batters in order, striking out four. Newly acquired Lee Smith, a former Midland Cub, picked up the victory in the ninth.

Pirates 3, White Sox 2

Pittsburgh won the game on Sid Bream's run-scoring single in the bottom of the ninth.

Bream's hit came after Chicago botched a chance for an inning-ending double play. With one out, Al Pedrique reached on a bunt single against Carl Willis, the White Sox' sixth pitcher. Reynolds then bounced a grounder to second baseman Santiago Garcia, whose throw drew shortstop Fred Manrique off the bag.

Bream's single was fielded cleanly by right fielder Dan Pasqua, whose throw to the plate appeared to beat Pedrique. But catcher Eric Milholland couldn't come up with the ball.

Royals 9, Twins 4

Thad Bosley's two-run triple in the fifth inning sparked the Royals, who had 13 hits off six Minnesota pitchers.

Steve Balboni had three hits for the Royals, including a tie-breaking RBI single in the fifth.

Ted Power and Don Welchel combined to pitch three shutout innings for Kansas City. Starter Floyd Bannister gave up one run in three innings to earn the victory.

Phillies 2, Cardinals 1

Pinch-hitter Phil Bradley lined a two-out single in the bottom of the ninth to lift the Phillies.

Loser Jeff Fassero, the sixth St. Louis pitcher, retired the first batter before rookies Trey McCall and Ken Jackson singled. Bradley then singled to left, scoring pinch-runner Jim Olander with the winning run.

Expos 8, Orioles 4

Tim Raines had three hits, including a pair of doubles, and scored twice and Jeff Reed hit a two-run homer for Montreal.

Hubie Brooks contributed two RBI singles to a 14-hit Montreal attack as the Expos ran improved their exhibition record to 3-0.

Floyd Youmans went three scoreless innings to get the victory.

Braves 7, Yankees 0

Derek Lilliquist, Pete Smith, Charlie Puleo and Chuck Cary combined on a four-hitter and Ted Simmons drove in two runs as Atlanta beat New York in a night game at Fort Lauderdale.

Smith, 1-1, worked two innings in relief of starter Lilliquist and gained the victory. Puleo followed with three innings of hitless ball. Cary went the final two innings.

Brewers 9, Giants 7

Tim Pyznarski's two-run single capped a four-run seventh inning that lifted the Brewers over the Giants.

The Giants had taken a 7-5 lead with a three-run fifth inning highlighted by Mike Aldrete's two-run triple.

Paul Molitor had two hits for the Brewers, including a solo homer in the fifth inning. Greg Brock and Jim Adduci also had two hits for Milwaukee.

Indians 4, Mariners 3

Milt Harper's two-out single in the bottom of the 10th inning drove home pinch runner Junior Noboa with the winning for Cleveland. Harper, pinch hitting for Randy Washington, drove a pitch from Rich Monteleone into right field, scoring Noboa.

Two earn first ace

From Staff Reports

Two holes-in-one were recorded at two different courses in Midland Sunday.

Barry Levin recorded his first hole-in-one, acing Midland Country Club's 162-yard No. 3 hole with a 7-iron. Levin was playing with John Nichols, Kip Agar Jr. and Craig McDonald.

Tommy Hawthorne aced Green Tree's No. 8 West, playing at 191 yards, with a 2-iron for his first career ace while playing with Jim Harrison, Jerry Pawelek, Jerry Hancock and Chuck Cowell.

Dallas launches Cotton Bowl push

DALLAS (AP) — City officials have launched an aggressive marketing campaign to lure new events to the nationally known Cotton Bowl, and say the drive was prompted by the need for additional revenue.

"We want to see the Cotton Bowl used every week, if we can," said Sandra Matney, contract services manager for the stadium.

"We're brand new at this," she said. "We know it will take time before we can start reaching out and soliciting major activities. But there's lots of potential there. There are a lot of teams and events to lure to the Cotton Bowl."

Officials also plan to seek more concerts and will ask Southern Methodist University to play its home games at the stadium when it resumes football competition in 1989, the Dallas Times Herald reported Monday.

Dallas Parks and Recreation Department officials said they want the stadium used often to generate revenue for renovation and upkeep of Fair Park and the stadium.

The city in January took over management of the Cotton Bowl and Fair Park from the State Fair of Texas in a move to let the Fair concentrate on its own events and the parks department on marketing the facilities.

Currently, the 80,000-seat stadium is used only for the New Year's Day Cotton Bowl football game, the Texas-Oklahoma and Grambling-Prairie View A&M football games in October, and the Texxas Jam rock music festival in the summer.

Dallas high school football should return to the Cotton Bowl, said parks officials, who may ask Texas Tech and Texas A&M universities to play a non-conference opponent at the stadium every year.

"After the State Fair and the Cotton Bowl, the perception of the general public is that Fair Park and the Cotton Bowl just die, and that isn't true anymore," said Gerald Fricks, the stadium's marketing manager.

"The market is there," he said, "it just hasn't been opened."

Angelo St. Rams earns first berth

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Angelo State rebounded from a 2-6 start to win the Lone Star Conference championship and has now received its first-ever invitation to the NCAA Division II basketball tournament.

Bids were passed out Sunday to the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament.

The Rams will play this weekend in the South Central Regional Tournament in Cape Girardeau, Mo., along with Southeast Missouri State, Missouri-St. Louis and South Dakota State.

Angelo State, 22-9 and seeded fourth in the regional tournament field, will face top-seeded Southeast Missouri, 26-3, in the first round at 8 p.m. Friday.

The Rams won the Lone Star Conference regular-season title and punctuated their playoff hopes by defeating West Texas State 94-73 in the championship game of the LSC tournament Saturday. It is Angelo State's first-ever NCAA playoff berth in basketball.

The Rams have a 20-3 record since Dec. 1.

Second-seeded Missouri-St. Louis will meet third-seeded South Dakota State in the other first-round game at 6 p.m. Friday.

A third-place contest and championship game will be played Saturday at 6 and 8 p.m., respectively.

The South Central Regional Tournament will be played on the campus of Southeast Missouri in the 7,500-seat Show-Me Center.

Southeast Missouri, ranked in the NCAA II top 10 all season, received an early bid last week, and Missouri-St. Louis earned an automatic bid for winning the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association tournament Saturday.

South Dakota State was brought over from the North Central Region.

Sherrard breaks leg again

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Cowboys officials say they'll have to re-evaluate their lineup after Mike Sherrard refractured his right leg while running on a beach in the Los Angeles area.

"The coaches are going to have to do some additional rethinking of the role of wide receiver," said Cowboys Vice President Joe Bailey.

Sherrard, the Cowboys' top draft pick out of UCLA in 1987, suffered a compound fracture of the tibia and fibula in training camp last summer. He rebroke the larger weight-bearing bone, the tibia, on Friday, officials said.

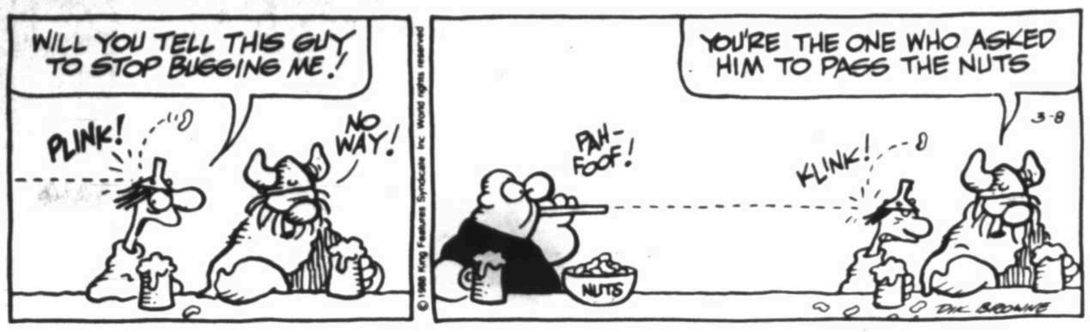

"I've spoken to Mike and he's very upset," said Leigh Steinberg, Sherrard's agent. "The break was basically in the same place. He was running on the beach and it just gave. By the time it happened Friday, the Cowboys offices were closed. We decided to wait until Monday."

Dr. Robert D. Vandermeer, Cowboys' team physician, said Sherrard will be in a full leg cast for at least the next six weeks

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Be strong and forthright and there will be no hurdles you cannot get over. Financial backing is easier to obtain. Cultivate new friends; they may help you hatch a golden egg of opportunity. You will attract influential types in April and again in November. Marriage is one commitment that is easily agreed upon. Be realistic in your expectations. Finish what you start. Vacation travel is a must! Save your money.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Carl Betz, fashion designer Andre Courreges, author Mickey Spillane, actress Trish Van Devere, actor-starmaker Marty Ingels, baseball great Arky Vaughan.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your determination grows and so does your productivity! There are no shortcuts to the top. Give moral support to someone who is under the weather. Any favors you do will be richly repaid.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A great day for negotiations. You could hit the jackpot! Deal fairly with your subordinates. Your thoughts on politics could change. Surprise your mate or a child with a small gift. Love deepens.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Lady Luck favors those who take some risks. Just be careful not to go overboard. Know your strengths and weaknesses and act in your own best interest. Personal commitment is more important than ever.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your knowledge of the arts comes in handy today. You are able to make a better employment deal. Travel is best postponed. Do whatever you must to get a relationship question answered.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Take care of business before making any social plans. Be more affectionate with those closest to your heart. Try to see things from more than one side.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be alert to other people's motives. A sad story could turn out to be a tall tale. Save your sympathy for the deserving. Look harder for a romantic partner who shares your values.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) A friend tells you of an important career or business opportunity. Show appreciation. Choose your confidants more carefully. You may need help dealing with a personal problem. Take a realistic approach.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Assertiveness pays off in both romantic and business situations. Travel could be involved. An older person offers sound advice regarding a personnel matter. A promotion or raise is in the offing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) A spur-of-the-moment visit could be part of today's scenario. At work, keep original ideas to yourself until you have the right opportunity to present them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Employment affairs continue to improve. Careful maneuvers advance your career interests. Some travel will be helpful in reaching a decision. Keep your valuables in a safe place and check your insurance coverage.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) A highly productive day for writers and artists. A frank talk with mate or partner yields some fascinating disclosures. Speak straight from the heart when discussing your goals. New rapport is possible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Your hard work begins to pay off in the marketplace. A close relative could attempt to meddle in your affairs. Make it clear that any interference is unwelcomed.

Good defenders are a devious bunch. If one of them goes out of the way to paint you a picture of the hand, make sure it is not a blindfold he is drawing. This hand from the recent Bermuda Regional, held at the Southampton Princess, shows what can happen if you're too trusting.

North's rebid of two hearts was simply forcing, and said nothing about the heart suit. When North then supported diamonds, a game force was in effect. However, South had no slam ambitions—too many of his partner's values rated to be wasted. Indeed, North's top clubs had no role in the play!

West led the ten of hearts, covered by the jack. East won the ace, cashed the ace of spades and then shifted to the eight of diamonds. Having already seen two aces in East's hand, declarer decided to trust the pleasant-looking gentleman at his right, especially since he had passed in first seat. He selected the anti-percentage play of rising with the ace of diamonds—down one.

There are several reasons why we think declarer should not have let himself be fooled by East's bit of duplicity. First, he should have asked himself why East went out of his way to cash his second ace before leading a trump. Obviously, he was trying to show declarer a hand where, with the king of diamonds as well, he might have opened the bidding. Secondly, the chances of dropping a singleton king are so slight that they could be ignored. Initially, the odds favored a finesse, and that was still the case. And lastly, if East indeed had started with three trumps to the jack, he could simply have returned a heart at trick two and left declarer to take the finesse in peace and quiet and go down.

Only Lone Ranger to shed mask dies at age 83 of emphysema

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Robert Livingston, who rode the range in dozens of movies and was the only Lone Ranger to remove his mask, died Monday of emphysema. He was 83.

Livingston

When Livingston appeared in the 1939 movie "The Lone Ranger Rides Again," Republic Pictures had him remove the mask briefly so that he would become the Lone Ranger in the public's mind, making it difficult for other film companies to duplicate the popular character, said his son, Addison Randall.

As Stoney Brooke, one of the "Three Mesquiteers," Livingston rode the range with two cowboy pals through 29 of the Republic Pictures films.

ROHN, Alaska (AP) — Fresh snow on the trail continued to slow the pace of the 1,150-mile Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race as mushers slogged their way down from the frosted peaks of the Alaska Range.

Masek

On Monday, Jan Masek of Anchorage led a tightly grouped caravan of more than 20 mushers to Rohn Roadhouse, a remote log-cabin checkpoint 271 miles from the start in Anchorage.

Masek arrived at 3:10 p.m., followed eight minutes later by Lavon Barve of Wasilla. Defending champion Susan Butcher arrived at 3:20 p.m., followed closely by Jerry Austin of St. Michael and Jacques Philip of Thomery, France.

By 8:30 p.m., half the 52 mushers in the race had made it to Rohn. The rest were spread the 78 miles back to Finger Lake.

Racers were slowed by up to 6 inches of new snow as they mushed down to Rohn from Rainy Pass, at 3,400 feet the highest point along the trail.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Harris Glenn Milstead, the outrageous 300-pound transvestite star Divine in cult classics, died at age 42 on the verge of long-sought recognition as a legitimate character actor, his manager said.

The Divine character, garishly made up, loud and foul-mouthed, was introduced as "the filthiest person alive" in the 1972 adult film "Pink Flamingos." Milstead made the same campy character suitable for a wider audience in the current movie "Hairspray."

Milstead, found in his bed at the Hollywood Regency Plaza Hotel on Monday, apparently died of asphyxiation in his sleep, said publicist John West of PMK.

West said Milstead was in Los Angeles to appear in an episode of the Fox Television Network series "Married With Children."

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — A squirrel that somehow scampered into the Oklahoma Museum of Natural History broke two pieces of pottery dating to the year 1200 and chipped a vase, a museum spokeswoman said.

Workers searched unsuccessfully Monday for the bushy-tailed marauder and tried to block entry points for animals.

"We've taped up, we've nailed up," said collections manager Julie Droke. "We're hoping that he left."

The two pots, found in Oklahoma and had an estimated value of $200 to $500, were broken Sunday, she said.

A 2½ foot vase, found in LeFlore County and reconstructed, also was knocked over and chipped, she said.

Spielberg

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steven Spielberg was honored by fellow film makers when the American Society of Cinematographers gave his "Empire of the Sun" the outstanding achievement in cinematography award.

Allen Daviau, a society member who was the cinematographer on "Empire," also received the award Sunday for best cinematography in a motion picture of theatrical length.

Philip Lathrop won for the best television miniseries or special for his work on "Christmas Snow." Woody Omens won for best single episode of a television series for the pilot of "Heart of the City."

Honored for lifetime achievement was George Folsey, who has worked on "Adam's Rib," "Green Dolphin Street" and "Forbidden Planet," and has earned 13 Oscar nominations in his 50-year career. He was director of photography on more than 150 films.

ATLANTA (AP) — Hosea Williams, a city councilman and civil rights activist, was charged with toting an unlicensed pistol when security officers at Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport discovered a gun in his briefcase.

The .38-caliber revolver was confiscated when Williams was charged Sunday, but the councilman was allowed to continue to his plane, said Sgt. Charles Hyndman.

Williams "said he had been cleaning his car out and took it out of his car and put it in his briefcase but forgot to leave it in his house," Hyndman said.

Police reports did not say whether the gun was loaded. It was discovered at an airport checkpoint. The charge is a misdemeanor, and Williams could be fined up to $1,000.

Iacocca

NEW YORK (AP) — Publishers of automobile maverick Lee Iacocca's second book aren't putting the brakes on the printing press; in fact, they're accelerating the operation.

Officials at Bantam Books said the book is being rushed into publication to be released June 1 — just in time for Father's Day fanfare.

Iacocca has been working on "Talking Straight" since October 1986. It was completed last month. Usually, nine months to a year pass between the completion of a manuscript and its publication.

Officials at Bantam denied Iacocca's rumored political ambitions had anything to do with the decision to speed publication of the book.

GARY, Ind. (AP) — More than $120,000 has been donated to help Dariwin Carlisle, the 9-year-old girl who lost her lower legs to frostbite.

Ganier Bank officials and the Lake County Welfare Department will handle Carlisle's trust fund for the rest of her life.

Carlisle, who was found abandoned Jan. 17 in a dirty, unheated apartment, may be out of the hospital soon and a custody decision may be made within a few weeks.

Fears recede, consumers owe more

By PETER T. KILBORN
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Consumers took on more installment debt in January than in any month since September, the Federal Reserve reported Monday.

The increase of $5.42 billion in January, up 36 percent from the $3.98 billion in new loans in December, reinforced a growing perception that Americans have recovered from whatever fears were raised by the October stock market collapse. The worry now, some economists said, is overspending, inflation, and rising interest rates rather than retrenchment and recession.

"The consumer is showing signs of stirring again," said Stephen S. Roach, an economist at Morgan Stanley & Co. He said the installment credit report was consistent with surveys showing rising consumer confidence and with the report of a 5.6 percent unemployment rate in February, the lowest level in eight and a half years.

The Conference Board, a business research organization, reported on Monday in New York that its index of consumer confidence climbed to 113.9 last month, from 109.9 in January. The index had plunged from 115.1 in October to 100.8 in November, reflecting consumers' fright in the weeks after the market crash.

The $5.42 billion installment loan figure represents the debt that consumers assumed above the amount that they paid off. It covers nearly all types of borrowing except for home mortgages. The figure was the largest since $6.43 billion was reported in September, which in turn was the largest since the previous September's $7.62 billion.

The Fed said such borrowing grew at an annual rate of 10.6 percent in January, far above the 5.9 percent rise for all of 1987 and an acceleration from the December pace of 7.9 percent. By the end of January, the total amount of Americans' outstanding debt stood at $617.7 billion.

From $1 billion in February last year, the rise in installment credit dipped to $322 million in March, then bounded to $3.68 billion in April. In May the figure was a negative $319 million, meaning people paid off more debt than they took on.

The Fed breaks down installment lending into three categories, and the two that are usually viewed as the more revealing actually showed some slowing in borrowing.

Net lending for the largest category, automobiles, increased by $1.55 billion, compared with an increase of $2.32 billion in December. A second large category, revolving credit provided by credit card issuers and retailers, declined to $2 billion, from $2.31 billion in December. The tiny category of mobile-home lending increased from a negative $122 million in December to a positive $142 million.

The big change came in the remaining category, a catchall that the Fed calls "other," with no

Weakness plagues crude futures

From Staff and Wire Reports

Crude oil futures began Tuesday slightly on the upside, on the heels of a 22-cent decline Monday.

The posted price for West Texas Intermediate remains at $15.50 despite the fact that cash market prices have been below that level for two or three days.

One local buyer said he anticipated a downward move in postings unless the spot market rebounds soon, "But I hope I'm wrong," he said.

Monday's price retreat followed a slight advance on Friday.

Analysts attributed the decline to speculation that some member nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were selling oil at a discount.

Rumors that OPEC might push for more production controls had helped prices on Friday.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for April delivery of West Texas Intermediate crude oil settled at $15.37 per gallon barrel, down 22 cents from Friday's close of $15.59.

"I think the catalyst behind today's decline is additional rumors about OPEC individual nations offering discounts to customers," said William Byers, an oil analyst with Bear, Stearns & Co.

Byers said those rumors partly grew out of reports that a delegation from the United Arab Emirates was visiting Tokyo this week.

"The rumors are really all over the map," he said.

Strong pound subdues dollar, gold

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell against nearly all major currencies in active European trading early today, partly depressed by a surge in the British pound, dealers said. Gold bullion also fell.

The pound was boosted by strong economic growth and relatively high interest rates in Britain, dealers said. Sterling rose to $1.8270 from $1.8135 late Monday, more than 5 cents higher than Monday's opening.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to a closing 127.80 Japanese yen from 128.87 yen at Monday's close. But later in London, the dollar edged back up to 128.35 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday:

—1.6755 West German marks, down from 1.6765.

—1.3825 Swiss francs, down from 1.3870.

—5.6730 French francs, down from 5.6880.

—1.8790 Dutch guilders, down from 1.8840.

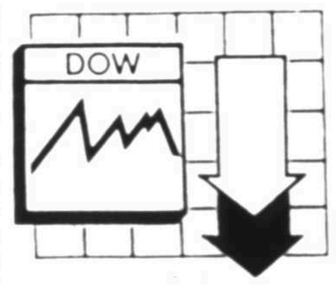

—1,236.75 Italian lire, down from 1,239.75.

—1.2542 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2562.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $435.60 a troy ounce, down from $437.20 bid late Monday. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $435.70.

Silver bullion fell in London to a bid price of $6.38 a troy ounce, down from $6.42 late Monday.

Dow drops 1.5 points in mixed session

NEW YORK (AP) — Takeover news and speculation provided most of the excitement in an otherwise quiet, drifting stock market session Monday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.49 to 2,056.37.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 8 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 847 up, 725 down and 417 unchanged.

Big Board volume came to 152.58 million shares, down from 201.41 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index edged up .10 to 150.53.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $2.48 billion, or 0.09 percent, in value.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Homestake rejects Pickens' takeover offer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Homestake Mining Co. rejected as inadequate an unsolicited $1.88 billion buyout offer from the partnership led by T. Boone Pickens on Monday and said it wished to remain independent.

The board of directors of Homestake unanimously rejected the $20 a share buyout offer made last month by Pickens' Mesa Limited Partnership.

Homestake stock closed at $17 12½ a share Monday on the New York Stock Exchange, unchanged from Friday's close.

Homestake, the nation's biggest gold producer, owns the Homestake gold mine in South Dakota and the McLaughlin mine in Northern California. The company also has a one-quarter interest in the Round Mountain mine in Nevada.

S&L depositors vote to support fraud suit

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Depositors of the state's only uninsured savings and loan voted Monday to file a lawsuit against a Houston-based thrift they claim defrauded the failed Rio Grande Savings & Loan.

More than 1,000 depositors met at Harlingen's Municipal Auditorium and voted overwhelmingly in favor of proceeding with a lawsuit in an attempt to recover some of their assets and damages from Houston-based Champion Savings Association, formerly First Savings Association of Orange.

Officials at Champion could not be reached for comment Monday.

About $75 million in deposits has been frozen since last May 12, when the state took over Rio Grande. Many of the 6,249 depositors are retired people who had their life savings in uninsured accounts.

Their lawsuit against the Houston thrift would seek about $18 million of those assets.

Pirelli enters bidding fray for Firestone

NEW YORK (NYT) — Heating up the competition to acquire the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., Pirelli SpA, the giant Italian tire maker, announced a $58-a-share, $1.86 billion tender offer Monday.

In making the offer, Pirelli seeks to derail an agreement reached three weeks ago under which Firestone, the nation's third-largest tire producer, would sell a 75 percent interest in its manufacturing operations to the Bridgestone Corp., the Japanese tire maker, for $1.25 billion.

The Pirelli bid comes after two rounds of talks with Firestone. In late 1986 Pirelli officials entered into negotiations with Firestone on establishing a joint venture. The talks collapsed in March 1987.

Mercedes hikes average price 1.6 percent

DETROIT (AP) — Mercedes-Benz of North America has announced its fourth price increase since March 1987 because of the continuing weakness of the dollar against the West German mark.

Mercedes said Monday prices on nine of its 13 models will increase an average 1.6 percent on cars delivered to dealers starting April 18.

The three least expensive Mercedes models, the 190Es, will not be affected by the increases, which will boost the price of the next model, the 260 E sedan, to $37,845 from $37,260.

At the other extreme, the price of 560SEC will jump to $77,065 from $75,850, said Mercedes spokesman A.B. Shuman.

Icahn says he will back Texaco reorganization

NEW YORK (AP) — Takeover strategist Carl C. Icahn says he will keep pressuring Texaco Inc. to put itself up for sale, but also will support the company's plan for emerging from bankruptcy reorganization.

Icahn, Texaco's largest shareholder, said Monday he would drop his attempt to win five seats on Texaco's board of directors if the oil giant voluntarily puts itself up for sale at $55 a share.

"I'm not looking to run Texaco. I am looking to enhance all shareholders' value," said Icahn, who owns 14.8 percent of Texaco's stock.

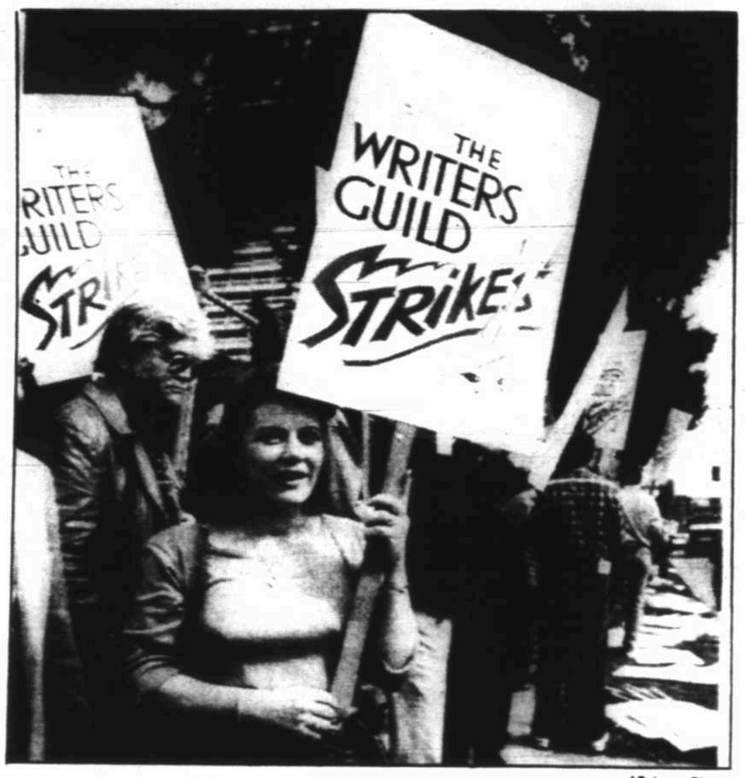

Icahn is believed to have purchased his stake at prices averaging in the mid- to high- $30 per share range. The stock closed Monday at $44.37½, unchanged from Friday.

Icahn met with reporters Monday after appearing before a closed meeting of the Council of Institutional Investors, which includes representatives of more than 50 pension funds.

Among others appearing before the group was Texaco's president, James W. Kinnear, who said takeover talk stirred by the activities of Icahn and others was hampering the company's efforts to restructure itself and prepare for its emergence from Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

Kinnear said Texaco is continuing its efforts to sell unprofitable assets and negotiate partnership agreements on other properties. In addition, the company is seeking short-term loans to help pay creditors when it emerges from bankruptcy protection, which it expects to do in April.

"We have found that as we go to these negotiations and go to get bank loans, the very presence of corporate raiders makes it very difficult to get the job done," Kinnear said. "The banks are terrified. The co-venture partners are concerned."

Screen Actors' Guild president Patty Duke picketed in support of the walkout by 9,600 television and movie screenwriters on Monday.

Writers vow to continue TV, movie work action

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television and movie producers scrambled to hire replacement scriptwriters and urged strikers to cross picket lines today in an effort to keep Hollywood game shows and soap operas on the air.

But the scriptwriters vowed to wait out the struggle as nearly 2,000 of them marched five abreast in front of 20th Century Fox studios Monday, the first day of a walkout over demands for higher fees and more creative control.

"Hollywood has treated writers like bean-field workers for years," said screenwriter and science-fiction author Harlan Ellison. "It begins with the dream. Without the dream on paper there is nothing."

The Writers Guild of America rejected Sunday's final offer by the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers and a strike was ordered for 9,000 members.

The WGA strike is the fourth since a 17-week walkout in 1973. The longest, in 1981, lasted three months.

Nick Counter, the alliance's president and chief negotiator, predicted the walkout may be a long one. "It's the same kind of feeling as we had in 1981," he said. "This could go on even longer than that."

Issues include demands by writers for a higher percentage of foreign market distribution fees and more control over scripts, and a producers' demand to scale back syndication fees for one-hour television shows. Producers say new shows made for independent stations have dried up the rerun syndication market.

For some pickets like James L. Brooks, whose writing credits include the films "Broadcast News" and "Terms of Endearment" and television's "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," a key battle was for creative control.

"If you take creative rights from enough different groups, you end up without a creation, you end up with something else. You end up with an exercise in marketing," Brooks said.

Black chamber to boost JA program involvement

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

The Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs has joined with Junior Achievement on two programs to equip young people for the business world, it was announced Monday at the group's regular meeting.

Robert Smith, manager of the Midland JA office, told members at Monday's meeting, that JA helps high school seniors learn business by simulation.

"We go through marketing, setting the price, which manufacturing method to use, how much to invest in a plant, research and developing a new product, things like that," he explained, adding that this program is in its third year. Local businesses are also recruited to give presentations to the high school seniors, allowing them to serve as role models.

Smith also described a night-time program JA has for junior high students in which they run a business. "A lot of kids don't make it through 12th grade," he noted. "This way, they know how to start a business."

JA also has an elementary school problem, available in all Midland schools but De Zavala, teaching fifth and sixth graders about organization, getting financing, producing a product, and marketing that product. "In one class, you'd be surprised what kids can come up with," Smith commented.

He and Robbyne Fuller, president agreed that the program not only teaches students about business, but provides them with role models.

Members of the Black Chamber are expected to become role models and and instructors for minority students in the program.

Airport posts hefty gain

From Staff Reports

Midland International Airport recorded 39,274 boardings in January, a 5.1 percent increase over January 1987, the City of Midland Department of Airports reported.

Among Texas airports, the increase is second only to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, which recorded a 7.2 percent rise for the same period. The total number of airline passengers at Midland International was 77,336 for January, up 3.4 percent from last year.

The two airports are the only large airports in the state to show boaring increases for 10 consecutive months. Since April 1987, boardings at Midland Internatinal have increased an average of 7.7 percent.

Seven of the remaining 10 Texas airports showed decreases in passenger boardings, the city said, ranging from a 0.6 percent dip at Austin to a 9.5 percent decline at Dallas Love Field. One airport's activity was flat during the month and the other two saw nominal increases.

During December, Midland International recorded the state's largest increase in boardings with a 4.1 percent rise. D/FW was second with a 3.5 percent rise. During December, 48,706 people boarded flights at Midland International.

Engineers prepared for oil recovery conference

From Staff Reports

Members of the Society of Petroleum Engineers' local sections are preparing for this year's Permian Basin Oil & Gas Recovery Conference, whose theme is "Technology and Efficiency: Moving Forward Together." The two-day program begins Thursday morning at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

Thursday morning's welcoming address will be given by Richard M. Morrow, chairman of Amoco Corp., who will discuss "Technology in the Oil Industry: The Future is Now." Friday morning, the chairman of Phillips Petroleum Co., C.J. Silas, will give a speech entitled "Rebuilding America's Oil Industry — The Power of Greater Efficiency."

Other speakers at the conference will be Carroll Thomas, Mayor of Midland, and George Sawyer, president-elect of the SPE.

Technical sessions will begin after the opening addresses. Approximately 50 papers will be presented on such subjects as carbon dioxide flooding, stimulation and completion, production operations, case histories, gas technology, automation, and formation testing and evaluation.

The conference has been held every other year for the past 28 years, and is hosted by the Permian Basin section and the Trans-Pecos section of the SPE. Proceeds from the conference will be used for college scholarships awarded local students.

Tax relief helps limping race business

AUSTIN (AP) — Declining attendance and reduced betting at horse racing tracks around the country have prompted track owners to seek reductions in pari-mutuel taxes, and experts predict Texas will see similar results.

"I would wager that whoever builds a track in Texas within two years will be before the Legislature asking for a reduction in the state share of the pari-mutuel pool," Don Price, director of the Minnesota Racing Commission, told The Dallas Morning News.

That prediction comes months before the first legal on-track bets are expected in the Lone Star State, which approved racetrack gambling last November.

The racing industry has run into difficulty in recent years because of stiff competition from lotteries, casino gambling and other sports activities, said Tony Chamblin, executive vice president of the National Association of State Racing Commissioners.

"During the past 15 years, race tracks throughout the country have lobbied for tax relief in the face of increased competition from other sports and forms of entertainment, from off-track betting, lotteries and casino gambling," said Chamblin.

However, sponsors of the Texas pari-mutuel betting bill said they don't expect to see any cuts in the state's 5 percent tax, the newspaper reported Monday.

"I sure don't want us to, and I don't think we will have to," said state Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, the Dallas Republican who co-sponsored the bill.

But Harris said there already was talk about lowering the tax in the "start-up years" and allocating the difference to the tracks in an effort to encourage investors.

"They say they cannot build a track" because of the expense, said Harris. "It's going to be tough. But I say that they don't have to build a $75 million track. They can build something less expensive and allow for expansion."

Texas betting advocates last November relied heavily on the pitch of new jobs and new state revenues to win voter approval of the proposal to legalize on-tracking betting on dog and horse races for the first time in 50 years in Texas.

Horsemen displayed one favorite bumper sticker, "Race Horses, Don't Raise Taxes."

Texas voters overwhelmingly approved the measure amid the state's worst economic slump in decades.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock predicted the pari-mutuel tax would bring $110 million into state coffers five years after betting begins. That is how long it is expected to take to build three big tracks near Houston, San Antonio and the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Texas law gives 5 cents of every $1 bet at a horse track to the state. Five cents goes for purses and either 8 or 10 cents to the track, depending on the type of wagering. The balance is divided among the winning bettors.

The state gets a 6 percent cut on greyhound races.

But in Oklahoma, lawmakers cut that state's share of the amount bet on each race from 6 percent to a sliding scale starting at 2 percent. They raised the track operators' take on the first $50 million bet.

Oaklawn Park owner Charles Cella, who last winter persuaded Arkansas lawmakers to reduce the state's share, served notice that he will be back lobbying for even further cuts when the Legislature reconvenes next winter.

The Texas formula was part of a delicate compromise aimed at winning enough support in the Legislature, which was assured that the state would reap the financial benefits of its share.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Unocal records 259 barrel well

From Staff Reports

New Canyon production has been added to the B.C. field of Howard County.

UNION OIL CO. OF CALIFORNIA, Midland, potentialed the No. 1 Goodman to flow 259 barrels of 46.5 gravity crude, 487 Mcfd and 24 barrels of water on a 14/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,000 psi. The well flowed from perforations 9,063 to 9,150 ft., no treatment reported. Gas-oil ratio is 1,880:1.

Total depth was 9,194 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,853 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,602.8 ft., include the Canyon A at 8,964 ft., Canyon B at 9,007, Canyon C at 9,044, and the Canyon D at 9,142 ft. Pay was topped at 9,063 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and 1,200 ft. from west lines of Section 11, Block 33, T-1-N, T&P survey, six miles north of Big Spring.

★ Canyon producer

Unocal added Canyon production to the B.C. field of Howard County with completion of the No. 1 Goodman to flow 259 barrels of oil.

San Andres producer pumps 16 barrels oil

ABRAXAS PETROLEUM CORP., San Antonio, has added San Andres production to the Hartley field of Yoakum County, extending the pay southwest.

On potential test, the No. 1 Heist pumped 16 barrels of 32 gravity crude and no water from perforations 5,372 to 5,382 ft.

Permitted as a 5,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 5,450 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 5,449 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and east lines of Section 329, Block D, J.H. Gibson survey, five miles northeast of Plains.

McCulloch plugback nets Strawn producer

A recompletion project in McCulloch County has yielded a seventh Strawn producer in the Hall field for MICHAEL D. LILLIS, Midland.

Lillis recompleted the No. 1 James Samuelson for a calculated absolute open flow of 230 Mcfd from perforations 628 to 638 ft. The interval was acidized with 500 gallons of acid and fractured with 5,000 gallons of gel and 15,000 lbs. sand.

Originally drilled to 879 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 700 ft.

Location is 330 ft. from north and west lines of Section 192, J.H. Blackwell survey, Abst. 2161, 10 miles north of Brady.

Halliburton buys 60 percent of GSI from TI

DALLAS — Pursuant to a letter of interest signed in December, 1987, Halliburton Co. has purchased a 60 percent equity interest in Geophysical Service, Inc. from Texas Instruments Inc.

Halliburton paid approximately $50 million in cash and expects to make an additional payment in mid-1991. The amount will be determined at that time, based primarily upon GSI's financial performance.

The two companies also signed an agreement whereby Halliburton may eventually acquire the remaining 40 percent interest in GSI, at the option of either Halliburton or TI. The option may be exercised beginning in mid-1991, with the price to be determined at the time the option is exercised, based largely on the financial performance of GSI up to that time.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Interest payments can stop when CD matures

By BILL DOYLE

Q. The maturity date of my three-month certificate of deposit was Feb. 3. On that date, the accrued interest was added to the principal, making the CD's total value $49,000.36.

I withdrew the entire $49,000.36 on Feb. 11, which was within the 10-day grace period. The bank did not pay me any interest for the eight days following the CD's maturity date. When I asked why, I was told, "We don't do that."

Do banks have the option of paying or not paying interest in cases such as this?

Doyle

A. Yes. Once your CD matured, the bank did not have to pay any interest on your money. During the time the CD was in force, the bank paid an agreed-upon rate of interest. A CD is a contract. You agreed to leave money with the bank for three months and the bank agreed to pay a specified interest rate on your money for those three months.

After the CD's maturity date passed, the bank was not obligated to pay interest. After CDs mature and are not renewed, some banks and savings and loan associations pay interest on the money at their savings account rates. Other banks and S&Ls just stop paying interest on that money.

Many banks and S&Ls give holders of maturing CDs a period of time — typically 10 days — to decide whether or not to renew the CDs. If the money is rolled over into new CDs, there are no lost interest days.

The 10-day grace period for rolling over maturing CDs was used by virtually all banks and S&Ls until a couple of years ago. Then, deregulation took hold — culminating in the removal of all federal regulations on bank and S&L interest rates.

Now, each depository institution is free to decide not only what interest rates it will pay on various types of deposits but also under what circumstances it will pay interest.

Q. I have $90,000 in a CD now paying 9.25 percent interest. But that will end in September and the CD's interest rate will go back to its original 8 percent.

Should I keep my money in the CD when it comes due, or should I do something else? I am a 70-year-old widow and live on a small Social Security check and the interest from the CD.

A. If your CD does have a provision stating that it will begin paying 8 percent interest in September 1988, you'll probably be very wise to lock in that rate — unless it's a very long-term CD. By shopping around, you can get better than 8 percent on five-year CDs in some cities.

Of course, no one can accurately predict where interest rates will be six months from now or at any other future time. Are you sure you'll be able to do what you say? Different banks and S&Ls have CDs with unusual provisions, but the way you describe yours makes it very strange indeed.

If it is similar to other CDs and is going to "come due" in September, that means the 9.25 percent interest now being paid will stop. It's difficult to believe that it will automatically start paying 8 percent.

My first recommendation to you is to contact the bank or S&L where you have that CD and have all its details explained. The second is that your keep your nest egg in the safety of a CD. There's no real reason why you should put your money elsewhere.

Q. I have enclosed photocopies of literature I received from a big bank offering an "opening" money market deposit account paying 9 percent interest. What's the catch? I have a similar account now paying a much lower rate.

A. If you read that literature you will see the 9 percent interest rate is guaranteed for only a month and a half. The small print explains, "...after the premium rate period, the rate is set weekly and will change from time to time." That means the interest rate will drop, no doubt bringing it in line with similar accounts.

The temporarily high rate is a merchandising tool, better known as a "come on," to entice people to open accounts at that bank.

Skin Institute experience in luxury

The ultimate in luxury and good skin care is now available in the Permian Basin at The Skin Institute.

Give your complexion the glow that comes from healthy skin and a conscientious cleaning routine by treating yourself to a facial performed by one of the Skin Institute's experienced aestheticians.

Having recently had the treat of a complete facial, this writer can personally attest to the sense of luxury this service affords.

Pat jackson, with more than 25 years of experience, possesses fingers that will lull you to sleep, but wake up your face to a more beautiful you.

And the good new doesn't stop there. The Skin Institute, located in The Fountain Shopping Center, 2706 W. Cuthbert in Midland and Sheets Eye Clinic, 155 East Loop 338 in Odessa, offers a complete line of services at more than competitive prices. These include facials, hair removal by waxing and electrolysis, pedicures and manicures.

"Look your best for the coming Easter season with a facial," Pat said. "And don't forget a pedicure and to get your feet ready for sandal weather and waxing and electrolysis for the bikini season."

The Skin Institute has a variety of specials going on now for the Easter season. Call Pat at 697-8206 and find out the details.

The Skin Institute also stocks a complete line of Mario e' Raquel cosmetics. Dr. Sheets of Sheets & Associates Eye Centers first began advising his patients about this line of skin care products and cosmetics after he discovered that many eye infections are caused by abrasive cosmetics. Mario e' Raquel make-up has no alcohol to dry your skin or mineral oil to clog the pores.

"I have used a variety of different cosmetics in my years as a cosmotologist and aesthetician," Pat said. "But I truly think that our cosmetics are the best. They are hypo-allergenic and almost everyone can use them. I have many clients who could afford to use the most expensive cosmetics made, but they use ours instead because it is unabrasive and looks beautiful."

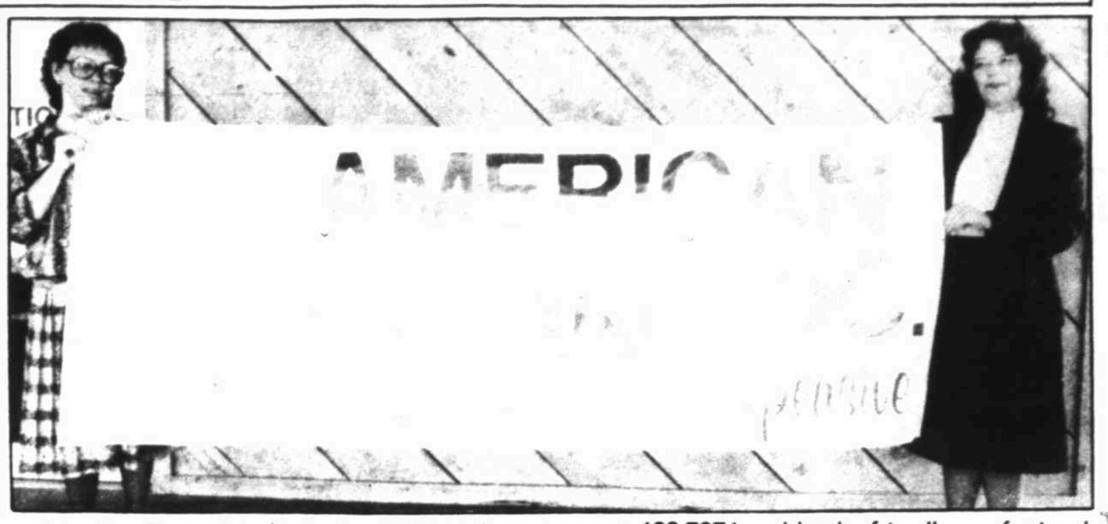

The Skin Institute also features a skin cleansing routine especially for teenagers. The Teen Skin Care Cleaning can help keep the skin clear and blemish-free, even at an age when complexion problems are more frequent.

"Proper care of the skin is the most important step to a beautiful complexion," Pat reminded.

Call 697-8206 and set up your appointment today. Once you've felt the luxury and seen the results, you're sure to become a regular.

Pat Jackson, aesthetician at The Skin Institute, gives a facial that will lull you to sleep, but wake your face up to a more beautiful you. Call 697-8206 for an appointment to pamper yourself.

American Forms, Inc., located at 1115 Andrews Hwy., specializes in printing business forms, including computer and multi-part forms. Call Sue Monroe at 699-7876 and let the friendly, professional staff help you with all your printing needs. Let American Forms help you get the job done.

American Forms can get the job done

The motto at American Forms, Inc., "Quality Need Not Be Expensive," expresses the philosophy Sue Monroe utilizes every day in her business.

"When a client comes in here, we go over the form they are using and make sure it meets their needs," Monroe explained. "We look at every form in a practical manner and help our customers economize, while still getting the job done. If there is something on the form they don't need, we take it out. If something is missing that will make their job easier, we add that."

American Forms, Inc., located at 1115 Andrews Hwy., specializes in printing business forms, including computer and multi-part forms.

"We also stock a variety of tax forms, including W-2s, 1099s and 6248s (windfall profit tax forms)," Monroe added.

This home-owned and operated enterprise has been printing top-quality office forms for the Permian Basin for five years. Free delivery is available in the Midland/Odessa area and American Forms, Inc., will even keep track of your paperwork inventory and reorder forms for you, at no extra charge.

"Some businesses may not realize that we carry a complete line of computer paper and forms, including checks," Monroe stated. Rather than using a mail-order firm that may, or may not, get your order straight, you can get everything you need in the way of business forms from American Forms, Inc. Call 699-7876 and let one of the friendly, professional sales representatives introduce you to the complete line of merchandise and services available from American Forms.

Through the end of March, American Forms is offering a fantastic special on thermographic business cards! Get 1,000 cards for only $19.95 (black and white only).

"You'll find our prices are very competitive," Monroe pointed out. "We are willing to go that extra mile to make sure you get what will work for you."

American Forms is in contact with a variety of manufacturers, giving you an outstanding variety of forms to choose from. Top-quality printing capabilities include continuous checks, carbonless and carbon forms, photograph and four-color capabilities and binding facilities.

American Forms also stocks a complete line of wedding invitations, including napkins, graduation announcements and even rubber stamps.

Office hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday at American Forms, Inc., 1115 Andrews Hwy. For more information or to place your order, call 699-7876.

Barbara Gordon (left) has recently joined Jodi McGee at Advanced Electrolysis. Call 689-7200 and let these two professionals begin you on the road to good looks and self-confidence.

Advanced Electrolysis can help you feel confident about your appearance

The 80's has brought forward a new concept for the American people: Being our best gives us a self-confidence to be comfortable anytime and any place.

Exercise and health are the number one priority now. To be totally at our best there are other obstacles we must overcome. We can eat the right foods, exercise and have a healthy body, have appropriate clothing and a good life blessed with a loving family and friends. But one of life's obstacles for eight out of ten women is superfluous facial hair.

Becoming aware of this problem and how to cope with it is most important. Electrolysis is the only way to permanently remove unwanted-hair. Temporary methods are exactly what the word means - temporary. Tweezing stimulates the area and hair growth spreads. Pitting of the skin also develops. Waxing also stimulates and makes soft normal hair return stronger.

Depilatories contain strong chemicals that irritate the skin and only helps for a few days.

Unwanted hair can usually be traced to heredity, glandular or hormonal causes or medication. Stress is also one of the related causes for hair growth.

Why should you prolong getting help with such a problem? There is a professional, private service available right here in Midland. Advanced Electrolysis has two skilled electrologists to serve you six days a week. Jodi and Barbara will work with you to overcome your problem. You will be welcomed, cared for and your hair problem solved.

Consultations at Advanced Electrolysis are complimentary and can be made by calling 689-7200. These offices are private and treatments are as comfortable as possible. Advanced Electrolysis opens at 9 a.m. Monday through Saturday.

Here is what one satisfied customer had to say about his treatments:

"I have been receiving electrolysis treatments for over 10 years, and I have had better results with Jodi McGee and Advanced Electrolysis than anyone else. I have had less regrowth and the treatments are much less painful than with anyone else I have tried. I would recommend Jodi to anyone who has a hair problem."

It is Jodi's pleasure to welcome Barbara Gordon to her staff. Barbara is a graduate of Kay Rhea Electrolysis in Lubbock and a certified aestheticiian.

Jodi and Barbara are constantly working to further their knowledge and skills and bring to you the best service and products. One product that has really served a need is the new NON SCENTS. This volcanic mineral is an absorbant for odor, smoke and bacteria. It works in offices, homes, carpets, cars, litter boxes and ashtrays.

If you are ready to get rid of your unwanted hair problem, call Advanced Electrolysis at 689-7200. Feeling better about yourself so you can be at your best is a goal you owe yourself.

Lem and Kim Yee, owners of The Location, invite you to come in for lunch or dinner at 401 Andrews Highway. The Location is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

The Location is the place to be for lunch or dinner, dine in or drive thru

Looking for a quick place to have a delicious meal? Try The Location at 401 Andrews Highway.

Owners Lem and Kim Yee whip up some of the best burgers, sandwiches, and chicken fired steak in town.

Or try a dinner combination of boneless white fish, shrimp or chicken strips with cole slaw and fries for only $2.99.

Chinese items on the menu include sweet and sour shrimp, cantonese shrimp, sweet and sour pork, Hawaiian chicken or chicken strips with rice or French fries.

A specialty of the house is Cream cheese Stars. Get half a dozen of these delicious stars made of cream cheese, wrapped in eggroll skin and golden fried for only $1.50.

And don't forget the large selection of sandwiches available at The Location. Fresh ingredients on your choice of white, wheat or rye bread will make your lunchtime a pleasure.

The Location is located near the downtown area on Andrews Highway across from Midland Memorial Hospital. Stop in for lunch and you're sure to be back to work on time. The casual dining room includes a television set so you won't miss your favorite soap opera, or you can call ahead and have your meal ready to take with you.

The Location's drive-thru window gives you the convenience of not even having to get out of yhour car. Looking for a snack after the big game or a movie? Try The Location.

The only place with more sports is Dimension Cable.
The Olympic Games is the most important sporting event in the world. And it's a great place to watch lots of sports. But there's one place that's even better.
Dimension Cable.
On Dimension Cable you'll find hundreds and hundreds of sporting events. Every month of the year. And there's something to watch 24 hours a day.
Including many cable exclusives like NFL football games on ESPN, NBA basketball games on Superstation TBS, and championship boxing matches on Showtime and HBO. You can also find the kind of sporting events the networks ignore.
Quite simply, Dimension Cable is the best home entertainment value around.
After all, with Dimension Cable, you can enjoy almost any sporting event in the world without ever leaving your easy chair.
