City could see three percent tax hike

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Midlanders likely will see a three percent tax rate increase after tentative City Council action Wednesday, when council members accounted for most of a $2 million budgetary shortfall in next fiscal year's proposed $58 million budget.

The council is expected to put the final stamp of approval on the budget in August or September.

The proposed hike would add about $16.20 to taxes assessed a home valued at $50,000 both this year and next.

Under the proposal, the actual tax rate would jump from 39.88 cents per $100 valuation to 43.12 cents.

City budget planners have estimated that a 41.87 cent tax rate would bring in the same amount of dollars as last year, an estimation prompted by an average 5 percent drop in city property valuations.

■ Council opts to close two fire stations in cost-cutting effort — 1B

The 43.12 cent actual rate proposed Wednesday is 1.25 cents above the rate that would generate the same amount of funds as last year to the city treasury.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said Wednesday, "I wish we didn't have to increase the taxes, but to keep the city going and step up on economic development, it looks like it's going to require this slight increase.

The increase chipped $358,276 off the $2 million deficit. Most of the funding for the shortfall will come from the $12 million surplus fund, with the council deciding to withdraw $936,306.

The council Wednesday also decided to make personnel cuts amounting to 17.5 positions from city departments, making the total planned personnel loss 25.5 positions.

Originally, 13 positions were planned to be scrapped from the city's $27 million general fund, but reacting to a plea by Police Chief Richard Czech Wednesday, council members decided to reinstate two meter maids and three officers scheduled to be laid off.

Council member Robert Rendall said the council's combined actions of cuts, tax increases and siphoning from the surplus fund will make sense to most people.

"People will realize it's a reasonable solution to get to a point where our expenditures are equal to our income," Rendall said.

On Wednesday the council also cut deeper into funding for some community organizations.

Oil measures cut from trade bill

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted 55-41 Wednesday to remove from a pending trade bill Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's energy security measure requiring the president to keep oil imports below 50 percent of domestic consumption.

After the vote, the Texas Democrat, who is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and floor manager of the trade bill, said he is giving serious thought to modifying the measure and re-introducing it.

Bentsen's proposal would have required the president each year to submit a forecast of oil imports for the next three years. If imports reached a "peril point" of 50 percent in any of the three years, the president would have been required to send Congress a plan for preventing it.

The Senate recessed Wednesday night with out taking final action on the omnibus trade bill, which is designed to cut the growing U.S. trade deficit by a variety of sanctions and incentives.

The deletion of the energy security section was approved by what Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., described as "an unlikely coalition" that included Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Gramm complained that the proposal would have given the president too much authority and he objected to the two-thirds vote — 60 senators — required to overturn the president's plan.

The vote was seen as a victory for businesses and consumers who fear that holding down oil imports would result in higher oil prices or gasoline rationing.

Gramm said he has been meeting with Bentsen, Boren and other oil state representatives to re-write the measure to make it acceptable to him and others.

Bentsen called arguments that his proposal would expand presidential authority "a red herring." He said his legislation "doesn't give the president any authority he hasn't had for more than 30 years and it is just wrong to argue otherwise."

The real issue, Bentsen said, "is our growing dependence on oil from the Persian Gulf which is threatening to drag the United States into the war between Iran and Iraq."

After the vote against his proposal, Bentsen said it demonstrates "the problem of a democracy not facing up to a problem until it reaches a crisis.

"Unless we can get an energy policy out of the administration, we're going to become increasingly dependent on the Middle East, and you're going to have those little countries over there having an increasing influence on the foreign policy of our nation."

Democratic debate introduces players, not issues

HOUSTON (AP) — Seven Democratic presidential contenders, trying to emerge from a crowded field and establish an identity, ripped President Reagan's performance in office while breaking little new ground in the first nationally televised debate of an election year still six months away.

"The real winners are the American people," Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., said after the two-hour performance Wednesday night on the Public Broadcasting System "Firing Line" program. "And I don't mean that to be a political cliche."

"Everyone did well," added Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo. "Most of us are unknown and it was our first chance to get known."

Going in to the appearance at Houston's new Wortham Theater, the affair was seen as an opportunity for the seven to introduce themselves to the American voter.

"Many people who watched tonight may have seen many of these people articulate their point of view for the first time," the Rev. Jesse Jackson said. "What leaders must do is raise the comfort level of people."

Gore, Gephardt, Jackson, former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois took turns in what program host William F. Buckley described as "Reagan bashing."

■ Party lauches fundraising effort — 3B
■ Related stories — 2D

The seven fielded eight questions, with topics including arms control, energy policy, the economy and budget, trade policy, tax reform and Cuba and Central America.

In virtually each instance, the answers turned into a criticism of the Reagan administration and how they would offer better leadership.

"A lot of folks knew them only as the seven dwarfs," Jody Powell, a former aide to President Carter, said afterward. "I doubt folks would come away with that impression. But I got a sense they didn't want to spend much time beating up each other. And that's sort of a new departure for Democrats."

The candidates engaged in little conversation among themselves or the hosts, choosing for the most part to simply answer the questions.

Former Democratic National Committee Chairman Robert Strauss, who joined Buckley as host, said the program was better than he had expected.

"There were no losers," he said.

There also was no obvious winner, but neither did it produce the kind of blunder that could doom a candidacy before it begins.

At the opening of the two-hour program, the seven candidates and two co-hosts emerged before the crowd of some 2,000 from a trap door under the stage.

Bork's belief in 'judicial restraint' stirs some controversy

By DAN FREEDMAN
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's Supreme Court nominee, federal appeals court judge Robert Bork, is an intellectual conservative whose judicial record reflects his conviction that courts should interpret laws, not make them, Bork's friends and critics agree.

The 60-year-old judge is among the chief proponents of "judicial restraint," a sometimes vague term meaning that judges should stick to the specific language of laws and the Constitution.

Bork watchers also agree that his conservative views on abortion, the right of privacy and sex discrimination flow from this ideological foundation. Bork and other judicial conservatives reason the courts have no business creating rights or applying principles not specifically written in law or the Constitution.

In announcing Bork's nomination at a White House news conference Wednesday, President Reagan stressed that the appointee "shares my view that judges' personal preferences and values should not be part of their constitutional interpretations."

■ Nominee feels "conservative" label misleading; Related stories — 2D

On the opposite side of the Supreme Court are the liberal "judicial activists," such as Supreme Court Justices William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall, leading advocates of affirmative action, abortion rights and a broad interpretation of civil liberties. Brennan and Marshall have often been supported by Justices Harry Blackmun and John Paul Stevens in recent years.

Lewis Powell, who announced his retirement Friday after 15 years on the high court, was considered a swing vote, forming 5-4 majorities for either conservative or liberal positions. His departure allows Reagan another opportunity to reach his long-held goal of putting a conservative imprint on the high court.

Should Bork win Senate confirmation, he could join Justices Antonin Scalia and Sandra Day O'Connor — both Reagan appointees —as well as Chief Justice William Rehnquist and a conservative Democrat, Justice Byron White, in forming a five-vote majority for "judicial restraint."

If so, according to legal observers, the court no longer will be dominated by the liberal-to-moderate coalition formed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, Brennan and others in the 1950s and 1960s.

Without state increase, MISD would have to raise property taxes

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Without a state tax increase, Midland Independent School District would have to raise property taxes by 18 percent to maintain its current spending.

The numbers, prepared Wednesday by the Legislative Budget Board, show that almost all school districts in Texas would have to raise taxes substantially. Any increase above 8 percent is subject to a tax rollback election, which could cost districts even more money.

Currently, MISD receives $1,271 per student from the state, or $22.6 million for the district. Without a state tax increase, MISD would lose about $5.7 million out of the $22.6 million — a 25 percent cut.

The House overwhelmingly approved an amendment Tuesday that outlines what is cut if the Legislature doesn't pass a tax increase or if Gov. Bill Clements vetoes it. While lawmakers said they expect some tax increase, they wanted to show the public what no-new-taxes would mean.

Many state colleges, including the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, would shut down without a tax increase. State agencies would close or operate with few employees and little money without a tax hike.

Ector County Independent School District would face even higher local tax increases without a state tax hike. ECISD would have to raise property taxes 21 percent and would lose $8 million of its $34 million in state aid.

Greenwood Independent School District would lose half a million dollars from its $1.89 million in state money and would have to raise property taxes 17 percent.

"I don't know anyone that doesn't realize or recognize that we're going to have some type of tax increase, not to increase state spending but just to maintain state spending," House Speaker Gib Lewis said.

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter said people shouldn't be surprised at the numbers, designed to put the heat on Clements, who supports a tax increase about half the size of what lawmakers propose.

North's testimony could lead to surprises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators are building on a scant 25-minute sworn interview with fired White House aide Oliver L. North to lay the groundwork for a new and crucial phase of the Iran-Contra probe.

Their efforts are bolstered by the evidence of scores of previous witnesses and by leads that may be hidden in the thousands of pages of subpoenaed documents and notes surrendered by North on Tuesday.

But North's nationally televised testimony, scheduled to begin next Tuesday in the Senate Caucus Room, could lead to surprises.

That is the case because North and his lawyers succeeded in their bid to prevent extensive questioning in the private session, the first time North has broken his seven-month silence about the case.

Screening questions are a device committee lawyers use in advance of public testimony to determine the extent of the information a witness can provide and to shape the strategy for questioning him publicly.

So far, North has avoided extensive screening.

Wearing his olive-green Marine Corps uniform and six rows of decorations, North was almost jaunty Wednesday as he appeared for his scheduled interview.

He gave a thumbs-up sign to one bystander in the heavily guarded basement corridor of the Rayburn House Office Building. He shook the hand of another.

"What do you plan to tell them?" a reporter asked as North approached the small, green-carpeted room.

"The truth," North replied.

"Is there anything you'd like to say to us?"

"Have a nice day," he said with a wink and a smile.

On his way out, he tossed a salute at waiting photographers. He said nothing.

North was in the room for about an hour and forty minutes. But committee aides said much of that was consumed by preliminaries, a break for a Senate vote, and the formal granting of limited immunity from prosecution.

He was questioned under oath for just 25 minutes, they said.

The immunity grant compels North's testimony, ending his persistent refusal over the last seven months to answer all Iran-Contra questions by invoking his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination. He can still be prosecuted on evidence obtained independently of his congressional testimony.

North's questioning was limited to a single subject: What does he know of the extent of President Reagan's involvement in or knowlege of the diversion of the proceeds of secret arms sales?

None of his answers were disclosed.

Reagan has said repeatedly he knew nothing of any diversion until shortly before it was disclosed by Attorney General Edwin Meese III on Nov. 25, the same day North was fired.

The questions North will face next week go far beyond the limited area of what Reagan knew and did.

North has been portrayed by other witnesses as the cornerstone of an effort to build a private foreign policy network that shipped arms to Iran and diverted the proceeds to the Nicaraguan Contra insurgents.

Many questions are expected to focus on afforts to learn more about that enterprise and on who gave North authority to undertake it, especially since selling arms to Iran violated official U.S. policy.

North also will be questioned on the use of the Drug Enforcement Agency in an 18-month effort to ransom U.S. hostages in Lebanon, using millions of dollars in cash provided by Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot.

He will be quizzed, too, about testimony that he may have reaped financial rewards from his secret operations.

North is considered a principal target of a separate criminal investigation being conducted by independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh.

North's lawyers appeared in U.S. District Court on Wednesday to press their client's legal challenge to Walsh's authority. No immediate decision resulted.

Film planned for Alamo visitors

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A new movie about the siege of the Alamo will be shown on a huge screen that will give viewers the feeling of fighting alongside Jim Bowie, film producers said.

Production on "Alamo...The Price of Freedom" will begin on July 13 at Alamo Village in Brackettville, about 100 miles west of San Antonio.

About 50 films on the Texas shrine have been shot at the Alamo set, including the 1960 feature, "The Alamo," starring John Wayne.

The new movie will be shot in 70mm film and will be shown at an IMAX theater which has a screen measuring 61 feet by 84 feet, giving a panoramic effect, said Doug Beach, a spokesman for Texas Cavalcade Corp., developer-owner of the film and theater project.

The theater will open March 6, 1988, the 152nd anniversary of the start of the battle in which 189 defenders, including Bowie and Davy Crockett, died while trying to defend the mission from Mexican troops. The battle for the mission came during the revolution that led to Texas' freedom from Mexico.

The battle will be a focus of the film, which will be shown in the theater that will be located a few blocks from the Alamo.

"What this screen does is give you a panoramic view. It gives you a sense of being there. It creates a sense of participation," Beach said. "This is a great medium to tell the battle story. We want the audience to feel like they were there."

Beach said the 40-minute movie will start with the arrival of Col. William B. Travis at the mission and will culminate with battle scenes. In between, however, the defenders' personalities will be portrayed in vignettes.

AP Laserphoto

The screenplay was co-written by Kieth Merrill and George McAllister, a Texas rancher and historian who spent 12 years researching the project.

About 600 people will be involved in the six-week production, including 400 re-enactors, a group of historians who specialize in authentic re-enactments of the famous battle.

The re-enactors will be wearing authentic costumes of the era and also will double as Mexican troops invading the Alamo, Beach said.

"One of the things that is so fascinating about this project is that truth is more interesting that fiction," Beach said. "What this does is gives this film authenticity, unlike any other films that have been made about the Alamo."

The cost of the film is estimated at $2.8 million and the cost of the 430-seat theater is tagged at $3.7 million, Beach said.

Texas Cavalcade is the general partner of Rivertheatre Associates, Ltd., which is producing the film. The major investors are Pace Foods and Luby's Cafeterias, both based in San Antonio.

Developers hope to attract 350,000 in the first year and to add to the 3.5 million visitors who tour the Alamo annually, Beach said.

"We hope that people will go to the Alamo and then see the movie and then go back to the Alamo for a second time," he said. "This is a very, very moving story. You can't see it or read it without being moved."

BORK

"This position is pivotal," said David O'Brien, professor of government at the University of Virginia and author of a book on the Supreme Court. "Bork is not a New Right ideologue, but he is a profoundly conservative jurist who believes in an extremely limited role for the courts."

Bork does not look at a particular case with a view toward a specific result favorable to conservatism, O'Brien said, adding that the judge reaches conclusions based on conservative principles, regardless of political expediency.

"He'll come out where many of the new right ideologues want him to be," O'Brien said. "But he'll come out there because he has a well-thought-out judicial philosophy that he would be willing to apply whether Congress or the Presidency are in Republican or Democratic hands. He is not just going to vote the party line."

A former Bork law clerk, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said: "Sure, he's politically conservative and, like anyone, his political opinions will somewhat color his perceptions of arguments. But the question you have to ask is: does he try to be fair and open-minded, or does he only pay attention to the text when it fits a result popular with the right wing of the Republican Party? The more of his opinions you read, the less likely it is you will conclude he's result-oriented."

Robert Bork

An examination of Bork's public statements and court opinions, however, suggests that deliberately or not, he is close to the Reagan administration on most issues.

In a 1986 interview with conservative judicial activist Pat McGuigan, Bork said the idea of "judicial restraint" is "to understand the principle that the framers (of the Constitution) were trying to protect, and apply the principle in today's circumstances...to protect the value or the freedom that the framers were trying to protect — and not some new freedom."

Liberal "judicial activism" — applying new interpretations to constitutional issues — could result in "a small group of unelected, unrepresentative judges making the basic law of the nation, quite irrespective of the desires of the electorate, and quite irrespective of the meaning of the Constitution," Bork said in the same interview.

A judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia since 1982, Bork has not ruled specifically on abortion. However, in a 1982 speech before the Yale Federalist Society and in congressional testimony in 1980, he characterized the landmark, pro-abortion 1973 Roe Vs. Wade ruling as "an unconstitutional decision, a serious and wholly unjustifiable usurpation of state legislative authority."

Roe vs. Wade, by concluding that abortions were a matter of privacy deserving of constitutional protection, prohibited states from making most abortions a crime.

Bork indirectly addressed the abortion issue in a 1984 ruling against a Navy sailor who claimed his service dismissal for homosexual activity violated his right of privacy.

Bork wrote the privacy right "cannot be said to be absolute. In fact, it is not clear to us that the claim...that one has an unlimited right to do with one's body as one pleases has a close relationship to the right of privacy previously articulated in the (Supreme Court's abortion and privacy) decisions."

DEBATE

Gore gazed around in apparent awe while the others sat solemnly in their blue leather chairs. Babbitt and Gephardt wore gray suits while the others selected blue. In front of them, on small white tables, were pitchers of water. Jackson chose orange juice.

Although each had note pads, only Biden and Gore used them. Gore and Jackson, seated together, whispered to each other frequently while another candidate was speaking. Jackson, the only one of the seven who has formally not declared his candidacy, many times gazed out into the crowd, and on one occasion pointed and smiled at someone he recognized in the audience. He also was the only one of the candidates to stand while making his final statement.

In the opening question — in which a raspy-voiced Buckley asked whose presidential portraits should hang in the White House Cabinet room — Babbitt said he would include President James K. Polk as a reminder that a darkhorse candidate can win election to the presidency. Gore apparently intended to say the same thing, only he identified the man as James K. Knox.

Biden accused Reagan of failing to confront the difficulties posed by the AIDS epidemic and of planning to "nuclearize the heavens" with his Star Wars program, while Gore scored the president for permitting public officials to shred documents and steal public funds.

Simon termed Reagan's legacy grim, and Babbitt accused Reagan of talking about the budget deficit but never submitting a balanced budget.

Dukakis called the administration's policy in Central America doomed, while Gephardt noted he eight times led the House effort to cut off money for the Contras in Nicaragua.

Although they spared no criticism of the Republican president, their disagreements with one another were gentler. Simon noted proudly that he voted against last year's tax overhaul bill. Biden, who voted for it, said a few moments later, "With all due respect I think Sen. Simon is wrong."

They also differed on the imposition of an oil import fee, with Dukakis insisting the fee was nothing more than a tax.

Gephardt said the lack of a Reagan energy policy was as serious as the budget deficit and arms control problems and the import fee was needed to get the oil industry back in business.

"We have stuck our heads in the sand on energy," he said.

The questions were supplemented by 90-second autobiographical videotapes provided by each candidate and a 60-second example of the candidate in action on the campaign trail.

Main food concessionaire at the event will be Leisure Foods, a Fort Worth-based company that handles concessions at the Ector County Coliseum, Clark said.

Booths selling hot dogs, hamburgers, sausage sticks, cotton candy and snow cones will be manned by local civic groups, which will receive 10 percent of the proceeds from the sales, Clark said.

Booths selling beer and soft drinks also will tend to the needs of event-goers, he said.

ENERGY

In debate, some senators said Bentsen's proposal amounted to "a back door" oil import fee. Bentsen, however, had omitted any reference to an import fee in order to win Finance Committee approval for his legislation.

While admitting he supports an oil import fee, Bentsen said legislation imposing such a fee was doomed without the president's support. At the same time, he said the idea of limiting oil imports by legislation is gaining ground.

TAX

Teen Court funding was chopped from a $10,000 allocation proposed Tuesday to $9,500 Wednesday. The Hispanic Chamber of Commerce's $25,000 allocation was cut to $23,750 Wednesday.

However the council did not touch the $175,750 allocation approved for the Midland Chamber of Commerce to beef up its economic development department by two employees.

Defending chamber funding, Council member Kelly Fish said, "That's a new economic development program and I think we ought to keep it at $175,000."

From the hotel-motel tax the chamber also is set to receive $45,000 for ads and promotions and $150,000 to run their convention and visitors bureau, a organization charged with drawing conferences to the city.

Another $73,500 was allocated to fund the operation of a Port of Entry the city is hoping to open at the Midland Regional Airport, once an application is approved.

SCHOOL

"I've said along," said Schlueter, D-Killeen, "that we raise taxes a little up here or a whole lot back home."

Statewide, local school taxes would have to go up 24 percent without a state tax hike.

Indiana boy drowns

Associated Press

One boy was drowned and another died in an accident on a wet highway as storms washed across Indiana, while Baltimore officials today investigated whether a storm contributed to a house collapse that killed two people.

In Texas, severe thunderstorms spawned a tornado that overturned at least three tractor-trailer trucks and numerous cars on Interstate 40 near Amarillo.

The second storm in as many days to hit the Baltimore area knocked out power to 24,000 residents Wednesday night. Most had power back on today.

Congress delaying action on Persian Gulf policy

By TIM AHERN

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the Pentagon pushes ahead with President Reagan's plans to protect Kuwaiti tankers in the Persian Gulf, the Democratic-controlled Congress has put off for at least a week any possible action against the controversial policy.

The Senate debated the issue for an hour Wednesday, but the chamber decided to wait for next week before voting on a resolution calling on Reagan to put the plan "in abeyance." A House vote scheduled for Wednesday also was delayed for at least a week.

In both cases, the Democratic-backed proposals were put off after Republicans threatened to use parliamentary tactics that would halt consideration of other legislation and delay Congress' July Fourth recess. The U.S. plans are not expected to be put into effect before mid-July.

A dozen members of the House Armed Services Committee were heading for the Persian Gulf today on a trip designed to gather information about the U.S. policy.

"My own personal mission is to go over there and assure those Arab states that they can count on us," Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., said Wednesday. Hopkins, the senior Republican on the trip, said, "I'm not happy with the U.S. policy, but no one's come up with anything better."

In other developments:

— Administration sources said Pentagon experts have found up to a dozen Soviet-made mines they believe were sown by Iran in waters leading to Kuwaiti harbors. The Pentagon may send minesweeping helicopters to help in the effort, the sources said.

The mines were designed to float just under the surface until hit, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity. The mines were being taken out by an 18-member U.S. team, operating from small ships, according to the sources.

— A U.S. official who spoke on condition of anonymity said the Iranians would begin deployments of Chinese-made Silkworm anti-ship missiles within the next day or two. Other administration officials, however, said they had no information about Iran's intentions.

Administration officials claim Iran obtained about two dozen Silkworms and have contracts with Beijing for about two dozen others to be delivered at some unspecified date. China denies selling the missiles to Iran.

NBC News, quoting U.S. intelligence sources, reported Wednesday that two missile launchers have been assembled at the site along the Strait of Hormuz and that a Silkworm missile had been spotted nearby.

Reagan plans to have U.S. flags

The Senate resolution, sponsored by 11 Democrats, was decried by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., as a "bash Ronald Reagan effort."

Helms admitted that "I don't like" Reagan's plan, but "there's only one man who has responsibility for foreign policy" and that is the president.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., also agreed that "reflagging and captains put aboard 11 Kuwaiti tankers and have the ships escorted by U.S. Navy warships. Congressional critics fear the move will involve the United States in the Iran-Iraq war because Kuwait has aided Iraq during the 6½-year-old conflict. is not the best way to go."

He sided with Helms in charging that "this is an opportunity to embarrass the Reagan administration, pure and simple...There's nothing but pure partisanship involved here."

The resolution says "the proposed reflagging of Kuwaiti tankers should be placed in abeyance" until all diplomatic efforts are exhausted. Those efforts should include a conference of all major buyers and sellers of Persian Gulf oil, along with United Nations-sponsored efforts to end the Iran-Iraq war.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., described the U.S. plans as: "almost as if we're being told we have to prove our macho by putting a chip on our shoulder and sailing up and down the gulf."

Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., said the United States was being manipulated by Kuwait. "This is all an effort on the part of the Kuwaitis to bring us into the war on their side," he said.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., said Congress shouldn't "ratify bad policy, based on a bad decision."

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, another critic of Reagan's policy, said, "What we're trying to do here is preclude some additional lives being lost." His reference was to the Iraqi attack on the Navy frigate Stark, which killed 37 U.S. seamen.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., was another critic, but he argued that the resolution should be tougher.

We can make auto thefts difficult

EDITOR'S NOTE — The author, a former Associated Press writer and investigative producer for NBC-TV, is a veteran crime reporter. For this series, he talked with 400 or more people, victims and perpetrators, as well as experts in criminology.

On Your Guard

By BERNARD GAVZER
For The Associated Press

One of the main strategies in preventing automobile theft is to make the job too tough for a thief to attempt and "not worth it."

The thief has to feel it'll take a lot of hard work and time, and that increases his risk of being caught; or that there are alarms that raise the risk; or that the car has some hidden device to make it difficult to start or drive away.

While it is widely agreed that a determined professional probably can steal any car, given the right circumstances, there is much being done to make it difficult, especially for the run-of-the-mill, opportunist thief.

Auto manufacturers are turning to anti-theft alarms and systems, as well as new design, to thwart thieves. It's standard equipment on some of the top ticket designs, and optional with some makers.

There are all sorts of locks to be attached to the hood or fitted to the trunk. There are mechanical devices that connect the steering wheel to a brake pedal. There are hidden switches that shut off the gas supply or the electrical system.

But the big push is toward alarm systems with electronic control modules. You can have them installed by professional security installers or try to do it yourself.

For the do-it-yourselfer, the job isn't at all easy.

A man who sometimes works as an automobile repossessor says he's put together a lot of different systems in order to figure out ways of getting around them if he should run into them on the job. He says:

"Anything you might put into the car that isn't part of the original design might cause you some problems. Short circuits or blown fuses, to name a couple of them. In fact, you might drain the battery and compromise your whole system, unless there's a good backup battery. And you can't be too sure that won't go."

Yet, doing what you can to prevent theft of your car is well worth it. Otherwise, you might be joining more than one million people whose cars were stolen in 1985. (Almost half of those cars apparently disappeared forever.)

In deciding on car security, there is a trade-off of sorts: the more complicated the system, the less convenient it is to use it. In other words, with an active system, you have to either use a second key, or tap a code on a keypad or use a toggle switch. In a passive system, everything goes on and off automatically, either when you close the car door or turn the ignition switch.

The heart of the system is an electronic control module. It has different devices, each working to keep the thief out, or keep hood and trunk secure, or make the car inoperative.

These are an engine disabler, backup battery, siren, hood lock, motion detector or similar instrusion sensor, system status indicator, keypad or key or toggle switch, trunk switch and valet switch.

In deciding on an alarm, you may as well go for the loudest one. If it's loud enough, it may just scare the thief off. At the same time, it may bring help.

There are basic cautions for preventing auto theft. They really are simple and paying attention to them may help prevent theft of your car.

— Turn off the ignition and remove the keys.

— Make certain the windows are up and secure.

— Make sure the doors are locked.

— If parking on a street, find a lighted area, if possible.

— In a public parking lot, find one with a single entrance and exit. Park it and lock it.

— If you park in a lot with attendants, leave only the ignition key. Of course, get a claim check. And be vague about when you'll return. There are places where insiders can loot your car in such a way that you may not discover it for days.

— Even if you're parking in your own driveway or residential parking area, lock the car.

— If you have a garage with doors that operate with a remote control, raise and lower the door just as you arrive at night. If a thief is hiding in the garage, this may flush him out or scare him away.

— Always lock the garage door.

— Do not leave valuables on the seats or behind the driver's seat or anywhere they may be seen. Leaving things out is only inviting theft. Some new automobiles feature cubbyholes in which you can hide many things.

Dangerous trans-Atlantic crossing begins from Sugar Loaf Mountain

CARRABASSETT VALLEY, Maine (AP) — Two British adventurers lifted off today and headed out over the sea on a 3,400-mile trans-Atlantic flight in a huge hot-air balloon, a journey considered so dangerous that no one before has tried it.

As 200 people watched, tycoon Richard Branson, 36, and balloon designer Per Lindstrand, 38, took off in the black Virgin Atlantic Flyer at 4:10 a.m. EDT from the base of Sugar Loaf Mountain in western Maine.

"This is a magnificent moment in my life," Branson said as he and Lindstrand prepared to climb into a pressurized capsule hanging from the balloon. "I haven't had time to be scared. I want to enjoy every minute of this."

The balloon, as high as a 21-story building and said to be the largest ever built, ascended quickly and was out of sight in minutes, heading east toward the coast about 100 miles away.

By 5:30 a.m. EDT, the balloon was already over the sea, 26,000 feet up and moving at an average speed of 80 mph, flight spokesman Crispin Williams said from the expedition's Sugar Loaf headquarters.

Two of the balloon's 12 propane fuel tanks, snagged by a ground line, fell off the craft as it lifted off, but Williams said the balloon would probably have enough fuel to make it to England. He said the balloonists would probably have to fly higher to pick up faster winds to make up for the lost fuel.

Branson, chairman of the board of Virgin Atlantic Airways and the Virgin Group entertainment conglomerate, and the Swedish-born Lindstrand expected to reach England early Sunday EDT after 50-60 hours aloft.

Branson's father, Ted, and his mother, Eve, watched the takeoff, along with residents, reporters and safety officials.

Both parents said they would like to have been with their son on the balloon. "I can't imagine him not being adventurous," his mother said. "He's always been a bit mad."

The trip had been postponed three times in June because of weather.

The balloon and cabin, which cost an estimated $500,000 to build, is making its first flight because the balloon is designed to self-destruct upon landing. Only smaller prototypes have been tested.

The longest previous flight by a hot-air balloon was 907 miles, entirely over land, about the same distance Branson and Lindstrand would cover before leaving land south of St. Johns's, Newfoundland.

AIDS major topic at teacher's convention

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than 7,600 teachers gathered for today's opening of the largest U.S. teachers union's convention are grappling with what to teach children about the deadly AIDS epidemic.

The challenge of AIDS emerged as a major topic at the National Education Association's 125th annual meeting even before its president, Mary Hatwood Futrell, opened the conference.

The union plans to distribute to each of its 1.86 million members this October a detailed booklet on acquired immune deficiency syndrome prepared with advice from the U.S. Public Health Service.

One of the first items of business facing the delegates was a resolution by teachers from Hingham, Mass., to endorse U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop's call for making AIDS education part of public school curricula.

The Massachusetts Education Association, an NEA affiliate, recently called for distributing condoms to high school students in the state to help prevent the spread of AIDS. Futrell said that idea caught her by surprise.

An NEA resolutions committee is drafting a comprehensive AIDS policy that will go before delegates Saturday, the day before the convention ends.

The NEA also planned today to release a Gallup poll showing strong public support for spending on education and pay raises for teachers.

Four Democratic presidential hopefuls — former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois and Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri — were making the journey west after their first nationally televised debate in Houston on Wednesday to court the teachers' support.

None of the politicians will get a chance to address the full convention, planning instead to make the rounds of state caucuses. The NEA will not make any endorsements until December.

1787 Constitution Daybook

Associated Press

EDITOR'S NOTE — This day-by-day account of 1787, the year that the U.S. Constitution was written, blends the significant with the small, personal details that bring history to life. The authors spent three years in research and writing, drawing on letters and personal diaries as well as the better-known historical documents. The writers are David D.C. Dutcher, David A. Kimball, Robert K. Sutton and Anna Coxe Toogood, all of the Independence National Historical Park in Philadelphia, where the Constitution was created 200 years ago.

Monday, July 2, 1787

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

After a foggy morning, the day turned clear and hot.

Stablekeeper, farmer and man-about-town Jacob Hiltzheimer spent the afternoon at a meeting of his church vestry at the German Reformed schoolhouse. In the evening, he met with the fire company at Robert Erwin's Sign of the White Horse, in Market Street. Earlier in the day, Erwin's wife had delivered a son, and in the evening Erwin was elected a member of the fire company.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

Massachusetts, New York, Virginia and South Carolina attended in Congress.

Secretary Thompson sent identical letters to the chief executives of the 13 states, enclosing charts showing the attendance of their delegates for April, May and June, copies of two Acts of Congress, and two copies of the Journals of Congress for the period Nov. 6, 1786-May 10, 1787.

CONVENTION TODAY

On the question of allowing each state one vote in the Senate, the vote was 5 aye, 5 no, Georgia divided. Maryland's no was made possible by the absence of Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, leaving Luther Martin to cast the state's vote.

The Convention was deadlocked. The large states remained convinced that giving Delaware the same voting power as Virginia was unfair. The small states were convinced that giving Virginia 10 to Delaware's one would ensure Delaware's destruction.

Charles Pinckney suggested referral to a committee. The proposal passed, 9 aye, New Jersey and Delaware no. An 11-member committee was elected by ballot. Elbridge Gerry (Mass.), Oliver Ellsworth (Conn.), Robert Yates (N.Y.), William Paterson (N.J.), Benjamin Franklin (Pa.), Gunning Bedford (Del.), Luther Martin (Md.), George Mason (Va.), William Davie (N.C.), John Rutledge (S.C.) and Abraham Baldwin (Ga.).

DELEGATES TODAY

George Washington joined Chief Justice McKean in dining with the members of the Convention staying at the Indian Queen tavern, took tea at Mr. Bingham's, and then walked in the State House yard. Before the Convention session he sat "for Mr. Pine who wanted to correct his portrait of me."

This portrait is on display in the 1986-87 "Miracle at Philadelphia" exhibit at Independence National Historical Park.

LOOKING BACK

The Connecticut Compromise Committee

The Convention made some unusual choices as it elected today's committee. One of these may have been regarded by the Connecticut delegation as an error to be silently and tactfully corrected.

First, the Convention chose Oliver Ellsworth as Connecticut's representative. Ellsworth was a very able and experienced man, having served in various local and state offices, but he had fought hard for an equal vote in the Senate and he could be stubborn (Aaron Burr once said, "If Ellsworth had happened to spell the name of the deity with two 'd's', it would have taken the Senate three weeks to expunge the superfluous letter"). His colleague, Roger Sherman, was even more experienced, and regarded by his contemporaries as a consummate committee politician. When the committee met, Ellsworth was ill and, Sherman substituted. Was Ellsworth ill or "ill"?

Also, the Pennsylvania delegation had several young, vigorous and articulate members, notably Gouverneur Morris and James Wilson. Why was Franklin, old and ill, selected instead?

Finally, one looks in vain among the membership for any of the most active and impassioned advocates of proportional representation — King, Morris, Wilson, Madison, Williamson. However, one does find the most impassioned proponents of state equality — Ellsworth, Paterson, Bedford, Martin.

One may certainly speculate that a majority of the delegates had decided a concession to the small states was essential, had structured the committee to facilitate concession, and, in the one state in which the convention could have made a better choice, the delegation had rectified the error.

Charged embezzler shoots former employer, himself, tapes ordeal

CHICAGO (AP) — A man charged with embezzlement critically wounded himself after charging into his ex-boss' office, telling him, "You're gonna die," and fatally shooting him in a tape-recorded confrontation, authorities said.

John Ashley, 49, pumped 10 shots into 35-year-old Paul Vassilos, then turned to Vassilos' partner John Keyes and said he had one bullet left, adding: "Your time has not come. I have no reason to kill you, but I am going to kill myself," according to Keyes and police.

Ashley then fired the gun into his own mouth, police said. He was in critical condition early today at Loyola University Medical Center. Police said he had not regained consciousness.

Ashley was armed with a 9mm pistol and carried a small tape recorder when he burst into Vassilos' office Wednesday at Thermo Dyne Systems and Environmental Technologies Inc.

NATION IN BRIEF

Sentence reduction sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jonathan Jay Pollard, sentenced to life in prison after pleading guilty to conspiracy to commit espionage, is seeking a reduction in his sentence on grounds he didn't do great harm to national security.

Lawyers for Pollard, who sold thousands of pages of classified documents to Israel, on Wednesday asked a federal judge to reduce the sentence, disputing the government's assertion that Pollard had severely damaged national security.

Defense attorney Richard Hibey wrote that "notwithstanding the volume and nature of the classified information given to the Israeli government, the damage to the United States from his conduct was minimal."

Prosecutors said Pollard sold Israel enough classified documents to fill a large, walk-in closet and called the spy case one of the nation's worst. Pollard, 32, was sentenced March 4 by Chief U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr.

Reagan blamed on deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is getting a bigger share of the blame for the federal budget deficit than he used to, according to a new ABC News/Washington Post poll.

Forty-six percent of the respondents to a poll conducted June 25-29 say Reagan is primarily responsible for the budget deficit, compared with 41 percent blaming the Democrats. The poll results were announced Wednesday.

In 1984, the last time the pollsters asked "who is more to blame" for the deficit, Democrats were faulted by 41 percent of the respondents, and Reagan by 33 percent.

The network and newspaper interviewed 1,506 adults by telephone from June 25-29. The margin of error on sample percentages is plus or minus three percentage points. The poll results were announced Wednesday.

Bike child-carrier recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Certain bicycle carriers sold nationally by Sears, Roebuck and Co. are being recalled because children could fall out of the carriers if the shoulder harness buckle disengages.

FSLIC legislation in works

WASHINGTON (AP) — The insolvent Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. would be allowed to borrow $8.5 billion under legislation that is being sent to the full House and Senate after winning approved from congressional negotiators.

A House-Senate conference committee on Wednesday approved the compromise legislation. Earlier, the House had passed legislation giving FSLIC borrowing authority of $5 billion while the Senate's version would have allowed $7.5 billion.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, the ranking Republican on the Senate Banking Committee, warned that the compromise bill could be vetoed by President Reagan because the White House had proposed a $15 billion bailout.

Superconducting offers U.S. edge

The Japanese have no qualms about borrowing a good idea and making it better.

Take superconductors — the far-reaching physics phenomenon which hold great promise for applications in medicine, transportation, power generation, computers and other areas. Since a University of Houston researcher is credited with the major breakthrough, logic says that the United States immediately would have exploited this revolutionary scientific event.

Forget logic. The irony is that the Japanese government acted within 11 days to capitalize on this discovery, forming a research consortium of companies and universities to collectively determine how superconductivity can be marketed. Next, the Japanese government announced plans to subsidize private-sector research. Japan also will establish a center to test equipment made from superconducting materials.

Meanwhile, initial reaction in the United States outside the scientific community was that while the discovery had interesting implications, practical developments were many years away. Much of America's thinking was characterized by a retired chairman of AT&T Bell Laboratories who said: "Our government has the attitude that the lone inventor in an attic is going to be able to carry on in fine old colonial tradition in international competition. That's exactly backwards."

With the Japanese interest in superconductivity, however, Americans began looking over their shoulders. Presidential candidate and U.S. Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., even warned that the United States was in danger of losing its "competitive edge" to the Japanese in the race to the marketplace for superconductors.

We agree with Gore that the United States ought to use superconductivity "as a prototype for a national effort to secure American competitiveness in a revolutionary new field."

Lo and behold, that effort may be under way — albeit in somewhat uncoordinated, Chinese fire-drill fashion.

Private enterprise, universities and the federal government are busy studying conductivity. In Washington, D.C., several federal agencies are at work on the subject including searching for a home for a superconducting super collider. But no one knows how much federal money has been committed and by whom. Unfortunately, the left hand may not know what the right hand is doing, and duplicity almost certainly abounds.

Congress, in a sluggish stroke of unoriginal thinking, has even suggested a Japan-style commission of leaders from government, industry and academia to report on superconductivity. Others have suggested nothing less than a Manhattan-type project to give us leadership in this area. Meanwhile, the Reagan administration is willing to put up research money, but balks when a centralized federal role in research toward commercial production is advocated. Why? Don't we want to be able to compete as effectively as the Japanese?

We think a coordinated, national commitment at least equal to Japan's is in order to ensure that America doesn't forfeit its leadership role. Otherwise, we may find ourselves still at the starting gate while the Japanese are halfway around the superconductor track.

Another View:

Correcting subsidies

Is there no turning off the farm subsidy spigot? Yet another attempt to scale back agricultural payments has gone awry, resulting in larger government outlays for farming instead of smaller. Congress must start asking hard questions about how it spends Uncle Sam's money to prop up farming.

The largest embarrassment is the federal government's well-meaning effort to put ceilings on subsidies to the most profitable agricultural enterprises — the 1 percent of farmers whose annual sales exceed $500,000, but who reel in more than 13 percent of all subsidies. Of course such farmers should support themselves; they were never intended to be on the receiving end of the taxpayers' assistance.

Since Congress imposed restrictions in 1985 and 1986 on the amounts the agri-giants could collect, some have seen their profit margins shrink and decided to subdivide their acreage, selling off chunks to the highest bidders.

These buyers, generally professional investors who are anything but the family farmers that subsidies are intended to buoy, purchase enough land to take full advantage of government subsidies but not so much as to be subject to ceilings on the payments.

Thus, the government is doling out more to the multiple entrepreneurs than it would have paid to the mega-farmer, yet for the same amount of land. What a corruption of the subsidy system! The government is by no means entirely to blame; the agricultural entrepreneurs who view farm subsidies as growth stocks should feel some guilt at how shamelessly they have exploited the system.

Indeed, if the government handed out farm subsidies the way it does welfare, some equity would be restored to the agricultural economy. A means test could and should be applied, and only those farmers whose incomes qualified them for assistance would be eligible for subsidies. Many mega-farmers and hobby farmers presumably would be excluded, as well they ought.

But do members of Congress, particularly those representing farm states, have the legislative backbone to stand up to the exploiters, many of whom may be influential constituents? Do members of Congress have the political courage to apply the principles of welfare to the farm subsidy system?

If the answers are no, America will find it extraordinarily difficult to cut down the subsidy flow. The result will be an agricultural economy completely dependent on government handouts, instead of the marketplace. It is a sobering, and expensive, prospect.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, July 2, the 183rd day of 1987. There are 182 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on July 2, 1937, aviator Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, disappeared over the Pacific Ocean while attempting to make the first round-the-world flight at the equator. Their fate remains a mystery.

On this date:

In 1566, the French astrologer, physician and prophet Nostradamus died in Salon.

In 1776, the Continental Congress passed a resolution saying that "these United Colonies are, and of right, ought to be, Free and Independent States."

In 1881, President James A. Garfield was shot by Charles J. Guiteau, a disappointed office-seeker, at the Washington railroad station. Garfield died the following September.

In 1890, the Sherman Antitrust Act was passed.

In 1926, the United States Army Air Corps was created.

In 1955, the "Lawrence Welk Show" premiered on ABC television.

JACK ANDERSON

FDR may have known he was dying

WASHINGTON — There is growing evidence that President Franklin Delano Roosevelt was told he had inoperable stomach cancer before he ran for re-election in 1944, and picked his vice president accordingly.

Jack Anderson

We reported in December 1985 on the "Lahey memorandum" — a confidential document written by the late Dr. Frank Lahey, who examined FDR in the late spring of 1944. The memo, which has still not been made public, would settle once and for all the historical question of whether the president knew he was dying when he ran for a fourth term.

Our report rang a bell with Dr. Samuel Day of Jacksonville, Fla., a distinguished surgeon and former president of the Florida Medical Association. But the busy, 73-year-old surgeon didn't write us about it until this spring.

In his letter, Day recalled a visit in the late 1950s by an old friend and internationally known cancer surgeon, Dr. George Pack.

"One night," Day wrote us, "he related a story, which had been told to him by Dr. Frank Lahey (head of the famed Lahey Clinic in Boston). It seems that President Roosevelt and his entourage came to Boston by special train to see Dr. Lahey prior to his final race for re-election in 1944.

"After intensive studies at the Lahey Clinic it was found that he had advanced cancer of the stomach. I am sure that was the stated site, as I was surprised at never having heard of any of FDR's 'stomach ailments' before that.

"Dr. Lahey told Dr. Pack that he related the findings to the president and told him he was a very sick man and he could not advise him to run for office again.

"Mr. Roosevelt was said to have replied, 'Well, I AM running,' to which Dr. Lahey replied, 'Well, Mr. President, I would suggest that you take on a strong vice president.' It was apparently understood that this was TOP SECRET information and nothing was published detrimental to the president."

In 1965, Pack visited Florida again and Day asked if he had heard anything more about the FDR incident. Day quotes his friend as saying: "I spoke to Dick Cattell (Dr. Richard Cattell, Lahey's successor) and he seemed upset by my inquiry.

"He (Cattell) was quite short with me, saying that was confidential information and will not be released." Pack said he argued that since both FDR and Lahey were then dead, the information should be released. But he said Cattell "angrily dismissed the subject with, 'It will NOT be!' "

Our associate Les Whitten tried to get independent confirmation of Day's hearsay evidence. But Pack and Cattell are dead, and FDR's records at the Bethesda Naval Medical Center disappeared long ago.

The secret memo we wrote about is in the possession of Lahey's longtime aide, Linda Strand, now in her 90s. Her lawyers said she has ordered the memo released only after her death, when it will be given to the FDR Library in Hyde Park, N.Y.

In a 1977 article in the medical journal Surgery, Gynecology & Obstetrics, Dr. Harry Goldsmith, a New Hampshire physician, wrote that in 1963 Pack had told him much the same thing Day wrote to us, and that another doctor, Andrew Kiley, a California surgeon, told Goldsmith he had heard Pack make the same statement on two occasions. FDR was losing weight — a symptom of metastasizing abdominal cancer — had no appetite and suffered frequent, severe stomach aches. His death in April 1945, was officially attributed to a cerebral hemorrhage. There was no autopsy.

Footnote: Shortly before he died, Justice William O. Douglas told us that FDR had given Democratic National Chairman Robert Hannegan two choices to replace Vice President Henry Wallace in the 1944 election. Douglas was FDR's first choice. Sen. Harry Truman was his second. But because he knew Truman was more acceptable to the politicians, Hannegan reversed the order of the names when he passed them on to the national convention, which dutifully nominated Truman.

WATCH ON WASTE — The U.S. Mint is planning to spend $23 million to market about $77 million worth of gold and silver coins commemorating the Constitution's bicentennial. Yet it expects to sell $26.5 million worth with a direct-mail solicitation that will cost only $541,600. This means that almost one-third of the anticipated revenue will be raised by just 2.4 percent of the marketing budget.

Asked why, in light of the low cost of the mail-order marketing, the Mint decided it needed a total sales budget of $23 million, spokesman Michael Brown explained, "You build a budget knowing you've got to sell so many coins."

Brown was quick to point out that the marketing costs come from the sale of the commemorative coins. The implication is that the taxpayers lose nothing in the deal. But the net profit on the coins — about $54 million — will go to reduce the national debt, so there is an indirect loss to the taxpayers if the marketing costs are unnecessarily exorbitant.

MINI-EDITORIAL — We were puzzled by a report that Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., irritated the nation's mayors at their recent get-together by giving a 46-minute speech. "You just can't talk to a bunch of politicians for that long and expect them to like it," a mayor explained. We find that an astonishing claim. All these years, we've been under the impression that it was the politicians who liked long speeches and the public who suffered through them.

GEORGE F. WILL

Sen. Biden making Bork confirmation 'easy'

WASHINGTON — If Sen. Joseph Biden (D-Del.) had a reputation for seriousness, he forfeited it in the 24 hours after Justice Lewis Powell announced his departure from the Supreme Court. Biden did much to achieve the opposite of his two goals: He strengthened the President's case for nominating Judge Robert Bork and strengthened the Democrats' case for not nominating Biden as President.

George F. Will

Six months ago, Biden, whose mood swings carry him from Hamlet to hysteria, was given chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee, an example of history handing a man sufficient rope with which to hang himself. Now Biden, the incredible shrinking presidential candidate, has somersaulted over his flamboyantly advertised principles.

Hitherto, Biden has said Bork is the sort of qualified conservative he could support. Biden has said: "Say the administration sends up Bork and, after our investigations, he looks a lot like (Justice) Scalia. I'd have to vote for him, and if the (special-interest) groups tear me apart, that's the medicine I'll have to take."

That was before Biden heard from liberal groups like the Federation of Women Lawyers, whose director decreed concerning Biden's endorsement of Bork: "He should retract his endorsement." Suddenly Biden was allergic to medicine, and began to position himself to do as bidden. Either Biden changed his tune because groups were jerking his leash or, worse, to prepare for an act of preemptive capitulation.

He said that "in light of Powell's special role" as a swing vote (that often swung toward Biden's policy preferences) he, Biden, wants someone with "an open mind." Proof of openness would be, of course, opinions that coincide with Biden's preferences. Biden says he does not want "someone who has a predisposition on every one of the major issues." Imagine a Justice with no predisposition on major issues. And try to imagine Biden objecting to a nominee whose predispositions coincide with Biden's.

Senators who oppose Bork will be breaking fresh ground in the field of partisanship. Opposition to Bork (former professor at Yale Law School, former U.S. Solicitor General; judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals) must be on naked political grounds. Opposition must assert the principle that senators owe Presidents no deference in the selection of judicial nominees, that jurisprudential differences are always sufficient grounds for opposition, that result-oriented senators need have no compunctions about rejecting nominees whose reasoning might not lead to results the senators desire.

If Biden does oppose Bork, his behavior, and that of any senators who follow him, will mark a new stage in the descent of liberalism into cynicism, an attempt to fill a void of principle with a raw assertion of power. Prof. Laurence Tribe of Harvard offers a patina of principle for such assertion, arguing that the proper focus of confirmation hearings on an individual "is not fitness as an individual, but balance of the Court as a whole."

This new theory of "balance" holds not merely that once the Court has achieved a series of liberal results, its disposition should be preserved. Rather, the real theory is that there should never again be a balance to the right of whatever balance exists. Perhaps that expresses Harvard's understanding of history: There is a leftward-working ratchet, so social movement is to the left and is irreversible.

Continuity is a value that has its claims. But many of the Court rulings that liberals revere (e.g., school desegregation) were judicial discontinuities, reversing earlier decisions. Even if putting Bork on the bench produces a majority for flat reversal of the 14-year-old abortion ruling, restoring to the states their traditional rights to regulate abortion would reestablish the continuity of an American practice that has a history of many more than 14 years.

Besides, that restoration would result in only slight changes in the status of abortion. The consensus on that subject has moved. Some states might ban third-trimester abortions, or restore rights that the Court in its extremism has trampled, such as the right of a parent of a minor to be notified when the child seeks an abortion. But the basic right to an abortion probably would be affirmed by state laws.

Powell's resignation and Biden's performance as President manque have given Reagan two timely benefits. He has an occasion for showing that he still has the will to act on convictions, and that he has an opponent he can beat.

Biden says there should not be "six or seven or eight or even five Borks." The good news for Biden is that there is only one Bork. The bad news for Biden is that the one will be more than a match for Biden in a confirmation process that is going to be easy.

Raising dead's a money-making endeavor!

The Reverend Oral Roberts' statement that he has raised people from the dead brought snickers from some non-believers, but apparently he is not the only one who has been doing it.

Art Buchwald

Reverend Felix Doberman of the "TV Temple in the Shady Glen" claims to have raised souls from the dead long before Oral vowed to go to heaven if church members didn't send in their dues.

I asked Doberman how he raises people from the dead.

He said, "First I lay my hands on them, and then say "Everybody up!' "

"That's all it takes?"

"That and a hefty donation to the 'TV Temple in the Shady Glen.' I can't bring anyone back to life if he's not willing to support our electronic congregation."

"How many dead have you raised?"

"At least 1,000 in the live audience. There are a lot I've raised who were watching me on television, so all I can do is take their word for it — plus whatever donation they want to make. I've known of so many miracles you wouldn't believe it. I've heard of men and women stretched out in their coffins who rose and danced as soon as my son made his initial pitch for money."

"Where did you get the idea to use bringing back the dead as a fund raiser?"

"I'm always consulting God on how to get fresh funding. He told me there is nothing that excites people more than coming back to life."

"Do you think Oral Roberts really brought many parishioners back?"

"Oral is a good ol' Oklahoma boy, and the way he's been acting lately I believe anything he says. What worries me is that there are too many ministers claiming they can raise the dead. When they see there is money in it, all the TV evangelists are going to be claiming they can do it, and professionals like myself and Oral will be competing with frauds."

"Perhaps they should hand out licenses to trained faith healers like yourselves."

"That would mix church and state and restrict donations from secular humanists. Frankly I think Oral should have kept his mouth shut. He was raising a lot of dead and no one knew about it. Now it's a big story and you can't tell the ones who have the touch from those who don't."

"Are Jimmy and Tammy Bakker into dead raising?" I asked.

"Not that anyone remembers. Jimmy raised a lot of other things though, and there is some question as to where the money went. As for Tammy, she said if Jimmy did it she'll forgive him."

"Certainly the Reverend Jerry Falwell hasn't raised anyone from the dead."

"No, he hasn't, though he's trying to do it with the PTL Club."

"Any chance?"

"No, because with the PTL we're talking about something that is really dead, and there is no way of bringing it back."

"Has Jimmy Swaggart ever raised anyone from the dead?"

"No, but he's sent an awful lot of people to hell. Jimmy tells his audience to either give money or drop dead."

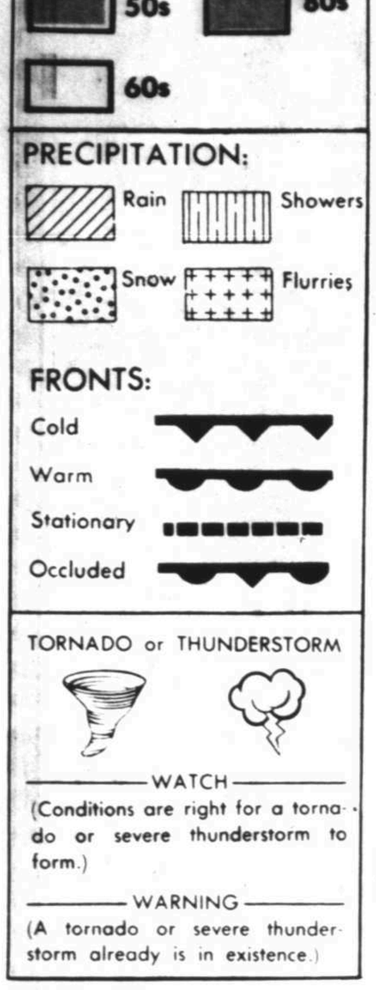
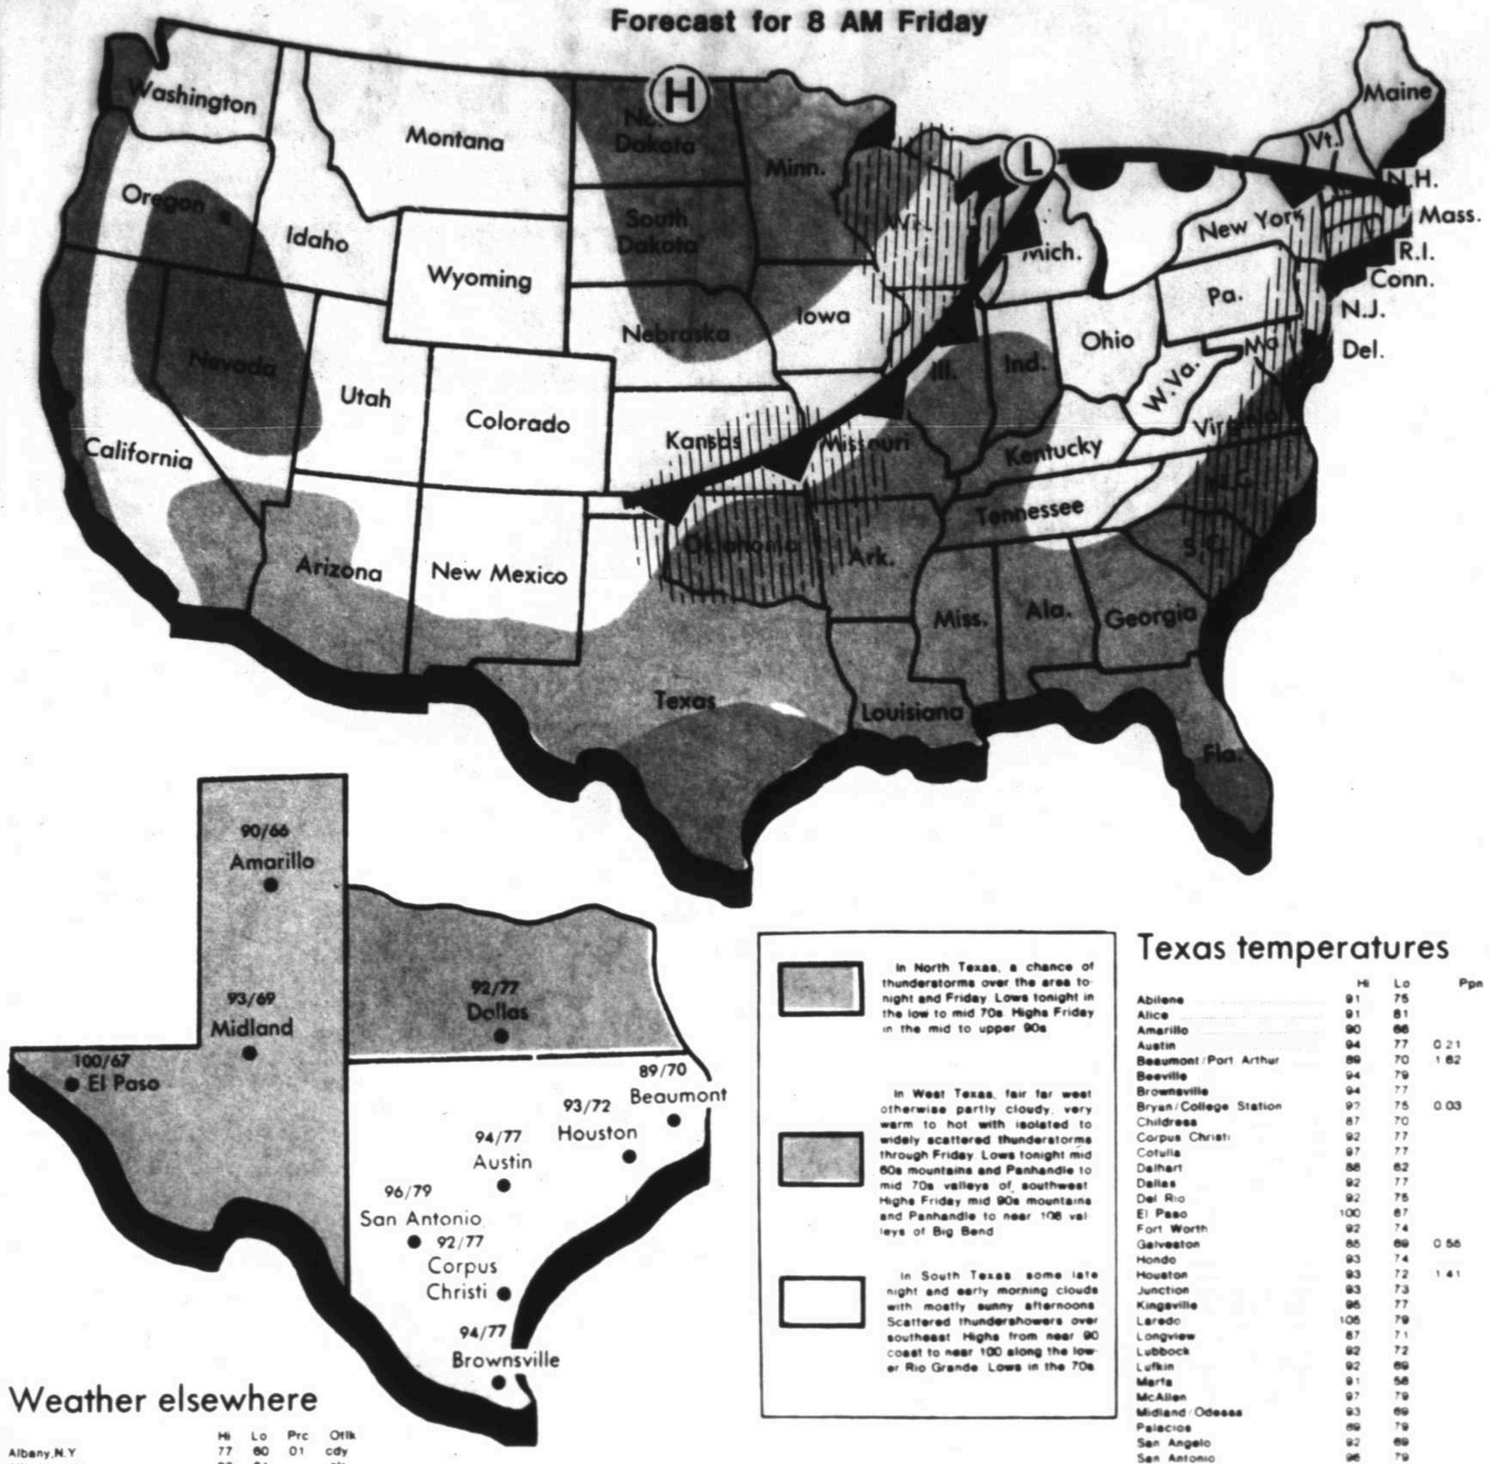
WEATHER SUMMARY





In North Texas, a chance of thunderstorms over the area tonight and Friday. Lows tonight in the low to mid 70s. Highs Friday in the mid to upper 90s.

In West Texas, fair far west otherwise partly cloudy, very warm to hot with isolated to widely scattered thunderstorms through Friday. Lows tonight mid 60s mountains and Panhandle to mid 70s valleys of southwest. Highs Friday mid 90s mountains and Panhandle to near 108 valleys of Big Bend.

In South Texas, some late night and early morning clouds with mostly sunny afternoons. Scattered thundershowers over southeast. Highs from near 90 coast to near 100 along the lower Rio Grande. Lows in the 70s.

Storms could mar holiday

From Staff and Wire Reports

Hot and ocasionally stormy weather is in store for Permian Basin-area residents for the Independence Day Weekend, according to forecasts given by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Highs in the upper 90s are expected, though the NWS says the mercury may rise to the 101-degree mark on Friday.

Isolated, widely scattered thunderstorms are also predicted. NWS forecasters say precipitation may vary from as little as a trace in some areas to as much as one inch where storms may be locally heavy.

Tonight, under partly cloudy skies, the low should be in the lower 70s. Winds will be out of the southwest at five to 10 mph, increasing slightly on Friday to five to 15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 93 was 12 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1964. Today's low was nine degrees above the record low of 60 set for this date in 1936.

STATE

Severe thunderstorms were possible through tonight across a vast area of Texas as ample moisture mixed with upper level disturbances, the National Weather Service said.

The thunderstorms were possible in North Texas, Southeast Texas and most of West Texas except extreme West Texas, forecasters said.

Severe thunderstorms, including one that spawned a tornado near Amarillo, were reported in the Panhandle during the night and early today.

At least three tractor-trailer trucks and numerous cars were overturned Wednesday night when a tornado struck a small area east of Amarillo on Interstate 40, officials said.

No serious injuries were reported, but the driver of one truck, whose name was not available, was taken to Northwest Texas Hospital at Amarillo by private vehicle, authorities said. The man was not believed to be seriously injured.

Carson County Sheriff Connie Reed said motorists along Interstate 40 about 22 miles east of Amarillo reported a tornado tore along the highway about 9:30 p.m.

In addition to the vehicles blown off the roadway and overturned, a water tank was torn from its moorings, carried across I-40 and into and over the Conway Restaurant, Reed said.

The restaurant was full of patrons at the time, but the tank and tornadic winds did not cause any injuries, the sheriff said.

Residents of the Panhandle town of Claude were without electricity for about two hours after winds downed some power lines

Witness: Ex-lawyer sold coke

By ED TODD

PECOS — Disbarred Austin lawyer John Webster Flanagan, who is on trial in Pecos for designing a cocaine-smuggling operation, was paid 5 percent of the multi-million-dollar loads of the drug which he allegedly had flown from Mexico to Texas, according to testimony in federal court on Wednesday.

"He sold it — turned it into money," testified S.E. Chastain, a 64-year-old former Waco and Austin lumber man and pest-control businessman. Chastain, who said he helped the 63-year-old Flanagan set up a landing strip for the cocaine operation on a ranch north of Fort Stockton, added that Flanagan sold the drug for $1,500 an ounce.

The alleged operation reportedly started falling apart on Oct. 24, 1986, when Chastain was arrested just west of Odessa, as he was transporting 706 pounds of cocaine in his pickup truck. A U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration special agent had observed a plane-load of bags transferred from a single-engine Cessna 206 aircraft to Chastain's pickup truck at the landing strip near Fort Stockton earlier that day and alerted other law-enforcement agents.

Chastain later pleaded guilty to delving into cocaine, agreed to become a government witness in prosecuting Flanagan, and was sentenced to six years in prison.

Chastain said he first became involved in smuggling cocaine in May 1986 when his old friend, Flanagan, had asked him to haul what Chastain assumed was marijuana from an airstrip near Waco to Oklahoma City, Okla.

"HE PAID ME as he sold it," said Chastain, who said Flanagan paid him either $15,000, $20,000 or $25,000 for hauling the load. Chastain said he hauled the contraband as a favor for his friend and not for profit. "I told him (Flanagan) I didn't do it for the money," he said. "I just did it to help a friend."

In focusing on a 259-kilogram haul of cocaine, DEA Special Agent Eino Hella testified that Flanagan's 5 percent cut of the load would be $686,000 at $1,500 an ounce. The underworld worth of the cocaine would between $12 million and $13 million, he said.

Courtroom testimony connected Chastain's son, Larry Chastain, with smuggling dope into the United States by aircraft. Larry Chastain, who, like Flanagan, was a pilot, was killed in Mexico in an airplane crash.

Flanagan, who has been disbarred for several years, had been using "aliases for quite awhile," Chastain said. "In fact, he got me one."

Courtroom testimony indicated that the gray-hair Flanagan had used fictitious names such as John Shields, Robert Byerly and Aron Minzenmeyer. He was using the latter name when he was arrested in a pizza shop by DEA Special Agent Mike Conway on Jan. 23 in Wichita, Kan. Flanagan has been jail since then.

Chastain was one of 14 government witnesses who testified Wednesday against Flanagan.

The defense called three witnesses on Wednesday. Today, Flanagan was to join with his attorney Melvyn Carson Bruder of Dallas in presenting closing arguments for the defense.

ON TRIAL IS Flanagan, who could received life imprisonment if he is convicted of criminal enterprise, and 29-year-old Jeffrey Glen Stephens, who is charged with conspiracy. Flanagan's son, John Morgan "Johnny" Flanagan, is under indictment but is a fugitive.

Versatility Fricke's trademark

Fricke

On tour, Janie Fricke has one driving concern.

"My main goal is to find food...I have to have breakfast. It really drives me crazy when I go to these hotels and restaurants and they will not serve you any breakfast after 10 a.m. because usually my breakfast is around noon."

Tours take her away from her farmhouse outside Dallas for four weeks at a time. Tuesday, she finished a combined tour — three weeks in Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe performing with Mac Davis and a week in Canada and the Dakotas. She plays Billy Bob's in Fort Worth late Friday night and Saturday night performs for the Live Again Midland free concert in the field north of Clay-Desta Then, in two weeks, she goes back out for another four-week tour.

"Every night, every schedule, every show is different so there's never any two that are the same," Miss Fricke says in a Wednesday telephone interview. She was calling from a pay phone at the local laundromat where she was washing her bedspread which is too big to fit into her washer at home.

The mid-'60s found Miss Fricke singing and playing the guitar in coffee houses and clubs during her high school and college years.

"I was an adventurer, and I was independent, and I wasn't scared of anything," she says. "I'm glad of that."

The summer between her sophomore and junior years in college at the University of Indiana she took a summer job in Memphis singing radio station call letters and jingles.

"We punched a time clock and sang radio identification jingles six hours a day, five days a week," she says. "It gave me tremendous experience in reading, in blending and with a microphone."

EPA ruling not likely to affect Basin

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

It's uncertain whether Environmental Protection Agency sanctions against Dallas-Fort Worth for failing to meet federal air-quality standards would boost economic development in West Texas, area chamber of commerce officials say.

"Probably the types of industries that Midland has concentrated on don't fall into the area of industries banned by the EPA sanctions," said Steve Davidson, vice president of economic development for the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

The EPA met Tuesday with officials from Dallas and Tarrant counties to discuss plans to ban construction of businesses that would be major sources of air pollution, according to the Associated Press.

The proposed sanctions are among penalties that can be imposed on metropolitan areas that have failed to meet standards ordered by the Clean Air Act of 1970.

Dallas-Fort Worth is one of 14 urban areas cited for failure to develop a plan that would enable them to meet a December 31 deadline for sufficiently reducing emissions of carbon monoxide or other chemicals that contribute to the formation of ozone.

About 80 areas nationwide are not in compliance, the EPA reported.

Ozone, a colorless gas that is a key component of smog, is created when industrial and vehicle emissions of nitrogen oxides and organic compounds such as hydrocarbons react with sunlight. It can cause breathing problems, impair plant growth and deteriorate rubber, textiles and paint.

Jim Flowers, executive director of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce, said, "I don't know that they (the sanctions) will have an effect on economic development in the Basin.

Fire Station No. 4, 405 E. Soloman Lane, will be one of two local stations to be closed following action by the City Council Wednesday during the third day of budget hearings.

Council votes to close down two fire stations

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Claiming the establishment of two north Midland fire stations was a mistake, Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas and his six-member council agreed to eliminate operation of the two fire houses during the third day of budget hearings Wednesday.

"I think the bottom line is these stations were opened by mistake," Thomas said Wednesday.

"It's not our fault we were trying to plan during the boom," the mayor added.

Seeking ways to close the gap on a $2 million shortfall of a proposed $58 million budget, the council decided Wednesday to close Fire Station #4, 405 E. Solomon Lane, and Station #9, 6005 N. Midland Drive. The stations were opened about 1½ years ago.

"I think...these stations were opened by mistake."
— Mayor Carroll Thomas

The council agreed that statistically the stations did not have enough work to stay open, but politically they would "feel the heat" for cutting a basic city service.

But the heat wasn't readily apparent Thursday night when the president of the Greentree Homeowners Association, Carolyn Henry said, "I think we can still be serviced by the station we were originally serviced by."

Station #8 at Midkiff Road and Haynes Avenue will fill in for Station #9, which serves the Greentree Country Club area.

Station #3 at Golf Course Road and Edwards Street will fill in for Station #4.

She added, "Our hope is that it would not increase our insurance rates."

According to Fire Chief James Roberts, the two stations were receiving between 80 to 100 calls a year, while the city's seven other fire houses run on about 250 calls a year.

Roberts said he was disappointed by the closure, but, "I understand the money is not there."

Supporting the station shut downs, Councilman Bill Williams, who is also a resident of Greentree, said, "It's very tough and very controversial, but it's a prudent business decision."

He added, "We're going to take ridicule for taking the fire department. We're going to take a lot of heat."

The closures will save the city about $460,000 by laying off 14 of the 18 fire employees involved and transferring four workers to other fire houses.

While supporting the decision Councilman Robert Rendall said, "I don't think this will be a permanent situation. We'll be looking at opening one or two of these within two to three years."

Thomas said the stations would probably be closed at the beginning of the city's budget year, Oct. 1, but "We haven't really pinned that down."

VIEWPOINT

Respondents think media invades officials' private lives

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

While several of 15 Midlanders interviewed Wednesday night felt increased press attention to the private lives of public officials was a necessary evil, most thought the media goes too far in reporting behind-the-scenes lifestyles.

The 15 addressed the issue while taking a break from bowling at the Dellwood Bowling Center.

Curtis Flournoy, 36, an oil revenue accountant thought private life news is important "if an official is having a little affair and if that affects his function as an official.

"But if it doesn't, it's his business," Flournoy said.

Ed Pittinger, a 29-year-old petroleum engineer, echoed those sentiments. "I think it's important — their private life — but I don't think it should overshadow their political views," said Pittinger. "It's important that they be someone moral, but I don't think it should be the only deciding factor."

Pittinger's 32-year-old wife, Karen, observed that the kind of facts reported in private life articles "is nothing new."

"Years and years ago, things went on that a lot of people wouldn't approve of, but didn't know about, so it didn't get a lot of play," she said.

What's new in recent times is "the fact that the press feels so free to go into their private lives and follow people around — they didn't used to do those types of things," she said.

She addressed specifically the recent case of former Colorado senator and presidential candidate Gary Hart, who pulled out of the Democratic race after "womanizing" allegations surfaced in a Miami Herald article.

Staking out of the senator's Washington D.C. home "was an invasion of privacy," she said. "I'm not so sure that a man's private life has any relation to how he would do in his job."

She added that if the press is going to delve into private life matters, it should apply that policy equally. "If you can't go for everyone, why focus on someone special," she said.

Rosie Rodruquez, 30, a receptionist, was even more unequivical. "What goes on in their private life is their business." She added that she reads private life news reports, "but

Flournoy Rodriquez Woods Cooper

I know I wouldn't want my private life publicized."

Said Hazel Harper, a teacher, "I mean, I want to hear good gossip as much as anyone, but I don't think a person's private life says anything about what he will or won't do in office."

Marilyn Shephard, 46, a housewife, focused her comments on the reporter who asks embarassing questions.

"I don't think any reporter has the right to stand up and ask a man whether he has committed adultery," she said. "That's between him and his wife — and if he has, then she probably knows it," she said, adding that "there are worse crimes than adultery."

At least one person interviewed, Newton Woods, a 62-year-old retired teacher, made the point that increased focus on private life may deter otherwise qualified candidates from running for office. "A lot of this invasion of privacy causes us not to get the best officials," he said.

And another, Irma House, 74, a retired nurse, seemed tired of the same reports coming from a variety of different media. "Sometimes I think you should get off of it after a while," she said. "They just go over it and over it and over it."

Probably the most unequivical comments in favor of the press came from Jay Billingsley, a 21-year-old restaurant manager. "We have a right to know what they're up to," Billingsley said.

"If they're people who we're supposed to look up to and if you can't trust them, who can you trust?" he said, adding that an official's integrity "concerns all of us."

Laneita Bingham, an executive secretary, agreed. "I think when they're in the limelight like that, we need to know more about them." The increased private life focus is "something they should be prepared for."

The Gary Hart case in particular came to Ms. Bingham's mind. Considering the "womanizing" allegations, "I wouldn't want someone like that leading our country," she said.

Juil Reid, 70, a retired farmer, agreed that increased private life focus should go hand in hand with a public life. "When they put themselves in that position, then they should forget their privacy," he said.

However, Reid thought the press in the Hart case had gone too far. "I don't think sneaking around behind somebody's house is right."

In general, however, the press "lets them (politicians) get away with a lot, really," he said.

Stacy Welborn, 26, an executive secretary, observed that "as far as local officials, I don't see much about their private lives."

But considering national news coverage, "I think it's on the level," she said. "I think they (reporters) do what they need to do."

Ms. Welborn said she'll read about private lives "when it becomes a joke...but I won't go out of my way to find it."

Greg Cooper, a 36-year-old chiropractor, took the perspective that newspapers are in the business to sell a product. "I think they write articles to sell papers, and if that's what sells, then they'll write about it.

"I think maybe they lost track somewhere along the line," he said. "Maybe with Nixon with Watergate."

Private life articles "do attract your attention," he added. "I take it with a grain of salt. They don't influence me that much."

Prosecutors 'glad' trial law struck down

From Staff and Wire Reports

Two local prosecutors said Thursday they were pleased with a Texas Court of Criminal Appeals decision striking down the state's Speedy Trial Act.

"We're glad to see it go," said Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre.

"It did not affect that many Midland County cases, because we were usually careful in our investigations, and usually ready to go (to trial).

"But statewide, it had been fairly significant," he said. "There were some aggravated cases where people got off on technicalities."

The appeals court ruled Wednesday that the law was unconstitutional because it violates the separation of powers doctrine.

The act, passed in 1977, generally says a person charged with a crime must be brought to trial within 120 days, unless the prosecutor can give "compelling" reasons for not going to court.

"It sounds like (the court) is saying the Legislature does not have the authority to control the court system in that kind of detail," Schorre said.

The prosecutor said the decision will affect no pending felony cases in the county.

But generally, the decision could have a "massive" effect on future criminal cases, predicted Mark Dettman, county attorney.

"In concept, I think the Speedy Trial Act is good," said Dettman. "Persons accused of crimes should not be made to wait with that burden on their shoulders for an unreasonable amount of time.

"But, it has been abused."

Dettman said he was pleased with the decision because it points to the problems prosecutors have had with the law.

For example, charges against a suspected hot check writer were dropped because the woman fled from Midland and could not be apprehended in time to satisfy the time constraints of the Speedy Trial Act, Dettman said.

"I agree with the concept I just don't agree with all of these technical aspects, which allows some of these people to be released," Dettman said.

Other attorneys had differing views on the decision.

Rider Scott, general counsel to Gov. Bill Clements and a former Dallas County prosecutor, said the decision eliminates an artificial time constraint to district attorneys without hurting defendants.

Peter Lesser, a criminal defense attorney who practices in Dallas, said the limitations on preparation time implied in the law gave extra protection to defendants in jail and unable to post bond.

"An accused who wanted a speedy trial could force the state's hand," Lesser said, predicting the court's ruling would be "a tremendous detriment to that class of people."

The case before the Court of Criminal Appeals involved Fred Meshell of Freestone County. After pleading guilty, Meshell was convicted of theft of a truckload of pipe and was given a probated five-year prison sentence.

On appeal, the 10th Court of Appeals at Waco affirmed the conviction.

Judge Charles Campbell said in the opinion announced Thursday that if the Speedy Trial Act were enforced against the Freestone County attorney, "he would be deprived of his exclusive prosecutorial discretion in preparing for trial without any consideration for the factors used."

The majority opinion said that "unless broad legislative authority for controlling the Freestone County attorney's discretion in preparing a case for trial can be found elsewhere, the Legislature has violated the separation of powers doctrine."

Judge Sam Houston Clinto said in a dissenting opinion that "the majority of the court demonstrates a will and determination to cast aside carefully drawn rules for orderly procedure ro reach a result that law and procedural circumstances have heretofore put beyond its reach."

"The Speedy Trial Act simply does not encroach upon any 'power' of the prosecutor to an impermissible extent," said Judge Chuck Miller in another dissent, which was joined by Judge M.P. Duncan and Judge Marvin Teague. "There is certainly no justification or cause to find that the act is unconstitutional of the separation of powers."

TRIAL

A 56-year-old Austin carpenter, Warren Eugene Hartgrove, was a defendant in the case until Wednesday afternoon, when U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton acquitted Hartgrove and dismissed him from the case on a motion of his court-appointed attorney, Richard Barajas of Fort Stockton. The judge ruled that the government had no evidence to link Hartgrove, who had been jailed for 95 days, to Flanagan's alleged cocaine operation.

"He's a firm believer in our (court) system," Barajas said of Hargrove, who was obviously delighted when the judge set him free. "He was adamant of his innocence. He has suffered through continuances and everything else."

Hartgrove's lawyer said Hartgrove had been "sucked into a situation that was impossible to get out of. It could happen to you or to me."

Hartgrove reportedly knew Flanagan by reputation but not personally.

"I don't take any credit for it (Hartgrove's release)," said Barajas. "The evidence just wasn't there."

The case's prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Mike McDonald of El Paso, said the government had a case against Hartgrove but that the government's witness did not show up.

"I did have evidence, but the witness folded on me," McDonald said.

OF THE SEVERAL men involved in the multi-million-dollar cocaine operation allegedly engineered by Flanagan, three have been convicted and are in prison: Chastain; James Goff Hazeltine, a pilot and ex-convict who is serving a 20-year sentence for his role in the operation, and Barrie James Wood, who also is imprisoned.

Hazeltine, who has been in and out of prison since 1959, testified Wednesday that Flanagan had nothing to do with the cocaine-smuggling operation. But at the time he was sentenced by Bunton, Hazeltine told the judge that the smuggling operation was set up by Flanagan. Hazeltine, who admitted he had lied to the judge, said he was telling the jurors the truth.

"I was trying to get my sentence down" when he told the judge one story and the jurors in Flanagan's trial another. Nevertheless, the judge sentenced Hazeltine to the 20-year maximum term allowed for Hazeltine's offense. In a subsequent letter to the judge, Hazeltine said that Flanagan had "arranged everything."

Hazeltine had testified that "my man" in Mexico City had supplied him with funds to an airplane to be used in smuggling cocaine and to make a $10,000 down payment on a 479-acre ranch, which was selling for $50,000, about 18 miles north of Fort Stockton.

Chastain's testimony, however, had linked both Hazeltine and Flanagan to the ranch and to the landing strip there.

Testimony also placed Flanagan near Oklahoma City, where he allegedly paid $50,000 for a hangar-house at an airfield.

Throughout the trial, there was no evidence of who in Mexico was supplying the cocaine, which apparently came from Colombia, or who in the United States was financing the smuggling operation.

At noon on Wednesday, armed law-enforcement officers, including DEA agents, had moved the 706 pounds of cocaine, which was worth about $17 million at $1,500 an ounce, from an evidence vault to the federal courthouse here. But the cocaine, which a DEA chemist said tested from 87 to 92 percent pure, was not presented as evidence to the 12 jurors. Both defense and prosecuting attorneys had stipulated that the white powder confiscated last Oct. 24 was cocaine.

Miss Fricke returned to Indiana, received her degree and a teaching certificate and moved to Nashville in 1975. In two years, she was the most sought after backup and jingle singer in Music City.

As a jingle vocalist, her voice has been featured on such national commercials as 7-Up, Coca-Cola, Coors, Pizza Hut, United Airlines and Red Lobster.

At recording sessions, friends would tease her and say, "Which of the 16 voices of Janie Fricke are you going to be tonight?"

Even Billy Sherrill, who collaborated with Miss Fricke on her first three albums, "Singer of Songs," "Love Notes" and "From the Heart," once said to her, "You can do so many styles I'm getting confused." He then issued instructions to give her a song, let her sing it whatever way she wanted, and said, "That will be her style."

"If they give me a song, I'm not going to think about how anybody else would interpret it, I'm going to interpret it my own way," she says.

Versatility has become a Fricke trademark.

"This has been 10 years of recording, and I've gone through so many different phases and changes. I've been through a lot of different producers, and it's just a constant change, and I guess that's the way it's supposed to be."

When she looks at her career, she has no regrets.

"I've played Vegas, I've sung for President Reagan, I've won awards and I've had a No. 1 album, and I've had No. 1 records. What more could a person ask for? I've got a great family and lots of good friends, so I think I've just about covered it all."

Her latest album, "After Midnight," has yielded two releases to date — "Are You Satisfied?" and "From Time to Time," a duet with Larry Gatlin. "Black and White," her album prior to "After Midnight" was her first No. 1 album and the album's single, "Always Have, Always Will," is her most recent No. 1 record.

"I'm really pretty happy with the way things are going. I just talked to the record label, and they're happy with the sales.

"I don't keep up with all the numbers and the figures. I just go out and sing and do my thing, and I just let them worry about all that. And the same with my husband, he's my manager. I let him worry about all the details, and I just try to go out and do a good show."

On numerous occasions, she's been asked what it's like to be married to her manager, Randy Jackson, who is also president of Charlie Pride's management and booking company.

"It's easy most of the time, and then parts of the time it's real difficult. Sometimes the pressures just get too much, and if we're on the road for a long period of time, we may stop at the nearest airport and drop him off and get rid of him and send him home." She laughs, then adds, "And he may do the same thing. He may be out on the road with us for a while, and then he'll say, 'I'm going home. I've had enough of this.'

"It's just like any other job I guess or any other marriage. You have to work at it the best you can, and then put up with the bad times and enjoy the good times."

Letter may help investigation

DALLAS (AP) — An anonymous letter may provide leads in the investigation into the brutal attack on a Methodist minister's wife, Dallas Police say.

Capt. John Holt said the letter, received Monday, may provide leads in their investigation into the attack on Margaret Railey, wife of the Rev. Walker Railey.

Railey was pastor of the First United Methodist Church of Dallas until he he took an overdose of pills.

The minister told police he came home April 22 and found his wife, 38, choked nearly to death. She has remained in a coma at Presbyterian Hospital since the attack.

It was revealed that Railey had received a number of threatening letters of a racial nature. But the FBI later determined that the letters had been written on a typewriter in a church office near the minister's office.

Holt said Wednesday the letter "appears to be relevant to the case."

Police have said they want to talk to the minister about inconsistencies in his account of his activities the night of the attack.

EPA

"If a firm from outside Texas is looking to expand, they do take these things into consideration. If they are alleged polluters, I don't know that they are the types of industries we would be interested in," Flowers said.

But Midland Chamber official Grant Billingsley said the recent sanctions could provide some new alternatives to diversifying the area economy, provided industries being recruited meet local EPA standards.

"The metroplex potentially not being available to (industry) of course would provide some alternatives to other parts of Texas," Billingsley said.

Another official Doug Henson said Midland-Odessa currently exceeds EPA's minimum standards for hydrocarbon emissions, meaning industries that produce those pollutants are prohibited.

But he added, "Any industry that is acceptable to the EPA would be acceptable and fair game for us. We have to follow EPA standards because we're not experts."

Under the terms of the Clean Air Act, cities were ordered to reduce their volatile emissions to reach an ozone standard of no more than 0.12 parts per million of air by Dec. 31, 1982.

In Texas, the state is charged with developing pollution-control plans for each of the major metropolitan areas and submitting them to the EPA for approval. The Texas Air Control Board's first plan for Dallas-Fort Worth was rejected in 1979, and the revisions submitted in 1985 and 1986 were also called unacceptable.

To meet the standard, emissions needed to be reduced by 52.8 percent in Dallas County and 52.5 percent in Tarrant County. The control board's plan projects a 23 percent reduction in Dallas County and a 26.4 percent reduction in Tarrant County.

New strain of leptospirosis found, lab says

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — A new strain of the bacterial disease leptospirosis spreading across the United States has been diagnosed in Texas for the first time, Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratory officials say.

The disease was recently identified in a swine herd suffering from severe infertility and abortion problems, a condition associated with the illness in animals, TVMDL executive director Dr. Konrad Eugster said Wednesday.

At least five other cases have been reported in domestic swine and at least one case has been reported in wild hogs since the first Texas case was diagnosed, he said.

In humans, leptospirosis is usually accompanied by nephritis, hepatitis and meningitis.

MC pre-registration up

From Staff Reports

Pre-registration for Midland College's second summer term was more than 50 percent higher than last year's, according to Dee Windsor, associate dean of students and registrar.

"We had 636 students sign up during the pre-registration period this year, compared with 410 last year," Windsor said. "The final registration count for the 1986 second summer session was 852 and that was an all-time record for the second summer term."

Official registration will be held Wednesday, July 8, in the Physical Education Building. Hours are 2-4 p.m. and 6-8 p.m. for those students who pre-registered. They received time permits allocating them a specific time period to report for registration. Those who didn't pre-register should come at 7 p.m. to be processed.

Second summer session classes begin Thursday, July 9. The session ends August 13.

Summer classes meet daily Monday through Thursday. Many of the classes are offered both daytime and evening.

Midland College will be closed Monday. Those who wish information about classes being offered during the second term may visit the Student Services office, Administration Building, on Tuesday or call 685-4501.

Shock victims improve

From Staff Reports

LUBBOCK — The conditions of two Midland men injured last week when they were shocked accidentally by a 7,200 volt power line have been upgraded, officials here said today.

Jesus Ramos, 21, was listed in stable condition in the burn intensive care unit at Lubbock General Hospital, said Gwen Stafford, hospital spokeswoman.

His brother Jose Ramos, 23, was listed in satisfactory condition. He has been moved from ICU to a regular room, Ms. Stafford said.

The two men were injured June 24 near an alley in the 700 block of West Scharbauer Drive. Authorities said the two men were working near a metal painting scaffold which apparently contacted the power line, owned by Texas Electric Service Company.

Both were treated at Midland Memorial Hospital before they were transferred to Lubbock, a MMH spokeswoman said.

Houstonian fundraiser for Democrats

HOUSTON (AP) — A key fundraiser from the terminated campaign of Gary Hart will head a general cash drive to be called the Democratic Party Victory Fund, according to Democratic Party Chairman Paul Kirk.

Jim Calaway, a Houston oil company executive, will be put in charge of raising more than $8 million to supplement the money the party's presidential candidate gets from the income tax checkoff, Kirk said Wednesday.

"This is an opportunity for our party to be truly competitive with the Republicans as we go into the very, very important election," Kirk said at a news conference.

"The reason we're going to be raising this $8-plus million is to give our nominee selected at the convention a better chance to be elected president," Calaway added. "I think we will present a program where all Democrats in this country will be wanting to support this effort."

Calaway, chairman of Edge Petroleum Corp., said Kirk and top party officials had been after him since former Sen. Hart pulled out of the presidential race several weeks ago.

C. Victor Raiser II, the party's national finance chairman, said the new fund is possible because Kirk and other party administrators have brought the party's costs under control.

"Our ability to raise money as a party has reached a point where we are essentially able to renew our funds and meet our obligations and it is possible to establish a victory fund into which we can sweep all excess funds," Raiser said.

Kirk also held out an olive branch to Houston officials, who have been miffed since earlier this year when he decided to take the party's convention next year to Atlanta rather than Houston.

"No one mistakes the importance of Houston, the importance of Texas, to the fortunes of Democratic Party," Kirk said. "I would hope we now would be able to unite on a number of things and move ahead."

He and other party officials held up a "Houston 1992" bumper sticker and said Calaway's role as the prime party fundraiser would provide clout in bringing the convention to the city.

"There are those who say it didn't work out for the 1988 convention," Kirk said. "If I forget, Jim Calaway will remind the Democatic Party. If we elect a Democratic president, and I expect we will, Jim will have enormous influence in seeing that president will be renominated here in Houston in 1992."

Kirk said the debate among seven Democratic presidential hopefuls, held later Wednesday in Houston, was the first step toward new leadership in the country.

"You can forget the seven drawfs," he said, referring to the nickname given to the White House aspirants. "Every time this crowd goes before the American audience, they'll grow in stature and respect. And I expect all seven candidates to be at the next event and at the starting gate when the actual delegate selection process starts."

Gore muffs lines during candidates' debate

HOUSTON (AP) — Sen. Albert Gore Jr., trying to praise two presidents who hailed from his home state of Tennessee, muffed his lines Wednesday night and mistakenly identified President James K. Polk as James K. Knox.

At the Democratic presidential debate here, the seven candidates were asked which portraits they would hang in the White House if they were elected.

Gore said he would add pictures of the two Tennesseans elected presidents. The first was Andrew Jackson. The other, according to Gore, was:

"James K. Knox, another Tennessean, the first dark horse nominee to get the nomination and be elected president. He got that nomination because he was the only candidate running who was willing to bring Texas into the Union. And a year later he showed tremendous political wisdom and foresight in bringing into the Union the state of Iowa."

It was up another candidate, former Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, to set the record straight.

"I think I'd move in Harry Truman, both Roosevelts and a Tennessean named James K. Polk, who would be a reminder to me that a dark horse can be elected president," Babbitt said.

'One-in-a-million' break leads to crack in drug ring

By TIMOTHY CARLSON
Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — A federal narcotics agent who sold his house in El Paso, Texas, returned to check on it and discovered it had been crammed by the new owners with 415 pounds of cocaine.

"This is a one-in-a-million break that I've never seen in 22 years in the agency." — DEA agent Phil Jordan

The "one in a million" break led to the arrest of members of a notorious Southwest drug ring, officials said.

"This is a one-in-a-million break that I've never seen in 22 years in the agency," said Phil Jordan, a Drug Enforcement Agency agent in Dallas. "We've had planes go down and the highway patrol catch loads in vehicles, but nothing ever like this."

"This arrest shows a definite Colombian-Mexican-Texas-California connection," Jordan said Tuesday.

DEA agent David M. Petz was making a last-minute check of his home before escrow closed when he discovered several plastic sacks tied with electrical tape and containing white powder in a closet, said Jordan.

"We made a field test of the material and it tested positive for cocaine," said Jordan.

The new owner of the house was apparently unaware that the seller was a federal drug agent, Jordan said.

Five men, including a former Mexican police agent and three Colombians who live in the Los Angeles area, were arrested in the house on Friday night with millions of dollars worth of cocaine, said El Paso DEA agent Ernie Perez.

Petz's home sold for about $75,000, said Jordan, while the wholesale value of the cocaine stored in it was about $8.5 million and the street value was 10 times that amount.

Petz discovered the cocaine last Tuesday, and the house was placed under surveillance. On Friday night, agents arrested the five men without incident.

Jordan said that the DEA had been watching the group for a while, and that they could be connected with the notorious Pablo Acosta ring. Acosta was killed three months ago in a shootout with Mexican federal police in the state of Chihuahua, Mexico, just across the border from Presidio, Texas.

The key to the house was found with Aurelio Arzola-Amaya, 40, of Anthony, N.M., said Jordan. Others arrested included Jesus Estrada Hernandez, 24, of Juarez, Mexico; and California residents Edison Alvarez, 22; Jorge Humberto Salazar, 31; and Santiago Rosas-Arzola, 36.

Family granted permission to join Romanian defector

AUSTIN (AP) — The family of a Romanian seaman who defected 1½ years ago has been granted permission to join him if money can be raised to pay their expenses, says a clergyman who has been helping the sailor.

The Rev. Thomas Wilson, pastor of the Central Assembly of God in Austin, said Wednesday that visas had been approved for the wife and daughter of Paul Firica, who left his Romanian ship during a stop in Houston in November 1985.

Firica was brought to Austin by the church and has been living and working in the city since.

"All we need is the money to buy the tickets to get them here," Wilson said.

Wilson said the church has started a fund drive to raise money to pay for passage and guarantee a year's support for Firica's wife, Joanna, and daughter Violetta, 18. Another daughter has married and will not be allowed to leave at this time, Wilson said.

He said about $10,000 is needed for travel expenses and about $15,000 in support must be guaranteed.

"The state (Romania) took his house. The state took their bank accounts, their cars. They do that to defectors," Wilson said.

The visas will expire Sept. 1 if the arrangements can't be made, he said.

Firica left his ship seeking religious freedom, telling authorities he had been persecuted by authorities in communist-run Romania.

Wilson had traveled extensively in that Eastern European nation, and members of his church had pledged to help refugees.

Since arriving in Austin, Firica has learned English and has been working as a diesel mechanic for an excavating company, Wilson said.

"He loves America. His only regret is that he didn't do it (defect) earlier," Wilson said.

School lab's brain left on porch

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — The "brain drain" from Texas schools took on new meaning here when law enforcement authorities learned that a human brain left on a family's front porch belonged to the local high school.

"We can't get it back until they (police officers) release it." — Burt Lauck

Police said teen-agers left the brain on the front porch of the Ronald Noack residence last week.

Wichita Falls High School principal Burt Lauck, upon returning from vacation, said Wednesday the brain belonged to the school.

Lauck said the brain and other biology specimens are kept in the school's greenhouse. The brain was the only thing stolen, he said, even though better-kept specimens were stored with it.

Anita Noack said four teen-age boys knocked on the door and asked to see her daughter. When she told them the girl wasn't home, they left. A plastic bag containing the brain and preserving fluid was found on the porch minutes later.

"We can't get it back until they (police officers) release it," said Lauck. The brain is now being kept by pathologists at Wichita Falls General Hosptial.

Police have no suspects in the prank.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You have everything going for you if you will just get up and get moving! Others can be relied on only up to a point. Get partner's OK before taking on new expenses.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A friend could make the headlines again. Your earning power gets a welcome boost. Romantic propositions may not be what they seem. Rely on your own good sense at all times.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An excellent day to communicate with people at a distance. New financial benefits are part of the picture. Handle mail and bills promptly. Your political views are best kept to yourself.

Opening lead: Ace of ♢

Give a dozen experts an opening lead problem and it is quite likely that you will get a variety of answers. But all will agree on the principle that, when you have length in the trump suit, a forcing defense could be the winning one. Here's an example from the recent trials to select the 1987 U.S international team.

In both rooms the final contract was four hearts, reached on similar auctions. For the eventual runners-up West chose the ace of diamonds as his opening lead, and continued with the queen. Declarer ruffed on the table, but the defenders were in command. If South did not draw trumps, West would ruff the third round of clubs and lead another diamond to assure himself of two more trump tricks. So declarer tried two rounds of trumps in the hope of finding a 3-2 break or, the hand with the long trumps also having three clubs. That was not the case—down one.

In the other room, West tried the lead of his top club. Declarer, David Berkowitz of New Jersey, made the most of his opportunity. He cashed just one high trump, then started to run clubs. On the third club he let go a diamond and West refused to ruff. On the next club, declarer parted with a spade as West still conserved his trumps.

Playing super-safely, declarer now led a diamond from dummy. West won and shifted to a spade. Declarer rose with dummy's ace and led another club, and the defenders could get no more than two trumps and a diamond.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Former Miss America to be married

Wells

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Miss America 1985, Sharlene Wells, plans to marry a fellow Brigham Young University student Monday at the Mormon Temple.

Miss Wells, 23, will wed Robert Allen Hawkes, a 25-year-old physical therapy student, her family announced Tuesday. The couple met in a Mormon Church congregation at BYU, family members said.

Miss Wells was crowned Miss America in one of the pageant's most controversial years. Miss America 1984, Vanessa Williams, had been dethroned after nude pictures of her appeared in Penthouse.

Some felt Miss Wells' selection was at least partially due to her Mormon background.

"I certainly hope so," she said at the time. "I live my religion seven days a week. I'm a Mormon from Utah; that should say it all. I've kept my life irreproachable."

Hanks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Hanks says "Dragnet" gave him a chance to "absolutely cut loose" after two films in which he had to compete with lowbrow gags and special effects.

"It was going back to working on my comic chops, which I haven't been able to do for a long, long time," said Hanks, who stars with Dan Aykroyd in the hit movie based on the TV series.

"'Bachelor Party' was nothing more than a rock 'n' roll sex comedy," Hanks said recently. "It was gunky, googly — dead donkey, agh! — that kind of stuff. 'The Money Pit' was essentially a special-effects, wogga-wogga kind of movie. So on down the line, I had been voluntarily restrained.

"So when this came along, it was like, 'Look, Dan's going to be doing this thing, so that means I'm really going to be able to make up this guy and absolutely cut loose.'"

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — Soul singer Wilson Pickett has been convicted of carrying a loaded shotgun in his Stutz Bearcat automobile, and could receive up to five years in prison.

A jury returned the verdict Wednesday against the 46-year-old singer of such hits as "Land of a Thousand Dances," "Mustang Sally" and "Midnight Hour."

Pickett, of Englewood, had testified he didn't know the shotgun was loaded when he returned with it to the scene of a fistfight he had had with another man outside a bar in 1984.

The singer testified he left after seeing someone give the man a knife. He said he drove back because a companion asked him for a ride there.

Pickett was arrested when police saw the shotgun on the seat.

Sentencing has been set for Sept. 18.

NEW YORK (AP) — Director and choreographer Michael Bennett, the mastermind behind "A Chorus Line," the longest-running musical in Broadway history, died today of lymphoma caused by AIDS, according to his lawyer. He was 44.

Attorney John F. Breglio said Bennett died at about 4:50 a.m. at his home in Tucson, Ariz.

Bennett was the ultimate Broadway "gypsy," a dancer in the chorus who went on to become a successful choreographer, director and producer, associated with such hit shows as "Promises, Promises," "Company," "Follies," "Dreamgirls" and, of course, "A Chorus Line."

It was Bennett's experience in the chorus that gave him the idea for "A Chorus Line," which won nine Tony awards and the 1976 Pulitzer Prize for drama and is still running at Broadway's Shubert Theater. It opened there on July 25, 1975.

Bennett was born Michael Bennett DiFiglia in Buffalo. His father was a machinist in an automobile plant, while his mother worked as a secretary. Their son started dance lessons as the age of 3. As a teenager, Bennett studied dance during the summer in New York with such professionals as Aubrey Hitchins and Matt Maddox.

At the age of 16, he dropped out of high school to tour Europe in a production of "West Side Story," directed by Jerome Robbins, one of Bennett's dance idols. Bennett made his Broadway debut in 1961, dancing in the chorus of the musical, "Subways Are for Sleeping." He followed that show with roles in other musicals such as "Here's Love" and "Bajour."

Bennett made his debut as a choreographer in 1966 with "A Joyful Noise." While the show, set against a background of country-western music, was not a hit, his dances were praised by the critics. So was his next job as choreographer for another short-running musical, "Henry, Sweet Henry," based on the Peter Sellers film "The World of Henry Orient."

Burger

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Chief Justice Warren Burger is returning to the bench, this time as a judge in a student essay contest on the Constitution.

"We are particularly flattered by his interest in our program since he has been forced to turn down hundreds of similar requests from across the country," City Councilman Peter Vallone said Wednesday.

Burger is head of the Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

A total of $4,000 in college scholarships will be presented to the six winners in the Council-sponsored contest on Sept. 17, the anniversary of the signing of the Constitution.

The contest is open to junior high and high school students in the city's public schools.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The country music group Alabama says it raised more than $1 million at its sixth annual June Jam concert in Fort Payne, Ala.

More than 56,000 attended the 11-hour outdoor show June 13, whose proceeds go to various charities in Alabama.

The concert lineup also included the Oak Ridge Boys, Restless Heart, Sawyer Brown, John Schneider, Carl Perkins, the Shooters, Percy Sledge and George "Goober" Lindsey.

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Dr. William von Stein, a Park Avenue physician who served as company doctor for The Associated Press for 35 years, died Tuesday. He was 84.

Von Stein graduated from the University of Buffalo Medical School before attending the New York Postgraduate Hospital and Teaching School. Upon graduation in 1932, he went into practice with the postgraduate school's head, Dr. Arthur Chase, in a Park Avenue office.

One of his patients was AP head Kent Cooper, who recruited von Stein for the company after World War II. He began working two days a week for the AP in 1948, and eventually relocated his practice to the AP headquarters in Rockefeller Center in 1973. Von Stein retired from the AP in 1983 at the age of 80.

Cutting cooling costs not difficult

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

Trying to stay cool this summer doesn't have to be as difficult as it sounds. There are many ways to beat the heat, and beat expensive energy costs.

Turning on the air conditioner isn't always the best way to try to keep cool, though it's the easiest. Tightening up a litle in other areas may be the 'coolest' thing to do.

Air conditioners remove heat and moisture from a room and blow it outside. Therefore, closing windows, doors and fireplace dampers tightly, and cutting long, steamy showers short will help the air conditioner run more efficiently.

turn up the thermostat a few degrees. The savings from this small sacrifice can add up over a long, hot summer.

Fans are regaining their popularity. Ceiling fans and portable fans keep air circulating around the room. This often makes a room feel much cooler than it actually is. They can effectively cool a room or a home, and are less expensive to run than air conditioners.

Whole house, or attic, fans were used to cool homes before the invention of air conditioning, and they are making a comeback. These fans are mounted in the attic to pull outside air through open windows and exhaust it through the attic. An attic fan increases air circulation through the house and carries out built-up heat, but shouldn't be run simultaneously with an air conditioner.

Cutting back on the use of major appliances will help too. Appliances, especially water heaters, dryers and ovens, give off a lot of heat, which works against cooling efforts.

Little things like closing shades and draperies to keep out direct sunlight and turning off unnecessary lights will also make for a cooler home.

Long-term cooling plans, such as planting large trees which will shade the house, are beneficial for those who are really cost conscious. Light-colored shingles on the roof also can aid cooling efforts.

These tips will keep the attic cooler and less heat will get into the house through the ceiling. Extra insulation in the attic also is a good idea. Check air conditioners periodically and make sure to clean the filters. Keeping the units running efficiently is another key to controlling cooling costs.

BETTER BUSINESS

Counterfeit merchandise no bargain

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

Paying a bargain price for top-quality, name brand merchandise may not always be the bargain it seems to be — especially when often this so-called name brand merchandise may be counterfeit.

Some individuals may think this alarming trend is an opportunity to purchase high quality merchandise at reduced prices. The fact is that, more often than not, the quality is reduced and the overall cost is incredibly high.

Counterfeiters are only interested in keeping their manufacturing prices as low as possible. They do not consider increasing their costs with concerns about quality, safety or even cleanliness. Their intent is to produce a product that appears to be the "real thing" while eliminating that which esteems the original product.

Counterfeit products generally fail quickly, therefore making the product less of a bargain — no matter how low the price was. Further, the lack of safety consciousness usually causes counterfeit industrial grade products, as well as children's toys or clothing, to be extremely hazardous.

The Better Business Bureau suggests:

- Know your merchant. Buy from someone you trust.
- If the price is too good to be true, consider the possibility that the product is counterfeit.
- Pay attention to labels, stitching or other trademark designs, as well as construction details. Be familiar enough with name brands so you can easily compare label sizes, colors and other distinctive manufacturing designs.
- Check packaging. Counterfeit product packaging often carries poor quality printing.
- When in doubt, do without. The "bargain" may be one you should pass up.

Along with Mom, baseball and apple pie, few things are more beloved than fried chicken. (Remember your grandmother's fried chicken? Nothing tasted better, not even your mother's.)

But frying chicken (or frying anything for that matter) is messy and time-consuming — that's why fried chicken fast-food restaurants are so popular.

Unfortunately, fried foods have gone from the frying pan into the fire recently, because of the well-publicized dangers of too much fat in the diet.

How can you have your fried chicken and eat it too? Kentucky Fried Chicken has recently introduced — with much fanfare, including musical press kits, buttons and cassette tapes with the song "Little Darlin'" — their "Chicken Littles," or tiny patties of fried chicken on buns. Designed for those in a hurry or those who only want to snack on "a little bite of something," Chicken Littles also give you a taste of fried chicken without too much guilt.

The small taste-testers and I recently checked out Chicken Littles for taste, price and advertising accuracy. We are all fried chicken lovers, but I rarely make it at home because I've been splattered by hot grease and cleaned up messy stoves too many times to want to try it again.

According to Kentucky Fried Chicken, Chicken Littles are "square, one-ounce all-meat chicken patties, breaded in the Colonel's secret blend of 11 herbs and spices, served on specially-made buns and priced at 39 cents."

Company information also states they are "a low-cost, high-quality, light menu item, according to Richard P. Mayer, chairman, Kentucky Fried Chicken Corp." and are "open fried (whatever that means) in vegetable oil and served with mayonnaise on a specially-made bun."

Nutrition information included by the company claims each Chicken Little sandwich contains 174 calories, 5.94 g protein, 18 g carbohydrates, 8.69 g fat, 19.6 g cholesterol and 403 mg sodium. (I don't know about you, but a "snack" that contains 174 calories seems like pretty heavy-duty snacking to me.)

The taste-testers and I bought a bag of five Chicken Littles. They are inexpensive — with tax the price was only $2.07 for five. (Price is 39 cents each, plus tax, at Kentucky Fried Chicken outlets.)

The open fried, one-ounce square of fried chicken appeared to be processed chicken similar to that found in most "chicken nuggets" at most fast-food outlets. (It may be 100 percent chicken, but it doesn't seem to be in the same form as it was when it was on the bone.)

The "specially-made bun" seemed suspiciously like ordinary rolls usually found in fried chicken dinners at fried chicken restaurants.

The Chicken Littles tasted alright, but they didn't seem worth all the hoopla with the singing press kits. I imagine a lot of people will appreciate their small size, small price and large convenience.

But the little taste-testers weren't impressed — they said they liked Chicken Littles, but they didn't make it through their first one, much less their second.

We did appreciate the cassette tape, though.

Business plan key to success

By CHRIS BARNETT
and ART GARCIA
Copley News Service

Owning your own home may be the American dream, but if some of the scare statistics are to be believed, owning your own business too often is the American nightmare.

Half the businesses that fail in this country are less than 5 years old. Fewer than 20 percent are more than 10 years old. Those are the oft-quoted body-count figures of the Small Business Administration, a capsule commentary likely to dampen the enthusiasm of almost anyone who's wanted to be his or her own boss.

Still, the desire to "do it myself" prompts those with an entrepreneurial bent and enough drive and desire to continue risking their money and assets — and often those of family and friends.

THE EMPHASIS seems to be on failure, but it shouldn't be. Small businesses are the backbone of the nation's economy. They create three out of five new jobs, employ nearly half the private work force, and are responsible for 38 percent of the gross national product.

Despite the familiar SBA and Dun & Bradstreet foreboding about high mortality rates, small businesses these days essentially are healthy. The failure rate is high, but that's largely because of a greater volume of small business activity in the 1980s. At the same time, there are more successes.

That's the story — contradictory to the decades of doom and gloom statistics — that hasn't been fully told. Now it's beginning to be. A recent study by Pacific Bell Directory, a subsidiary of Pacific Bell Telephone Co., uncovered some surprising facts about small business success.

Working with the Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) Pac Bell Directory kicked off a public service program to help 600,000 small businesses in Pac Bell's service areas of California and Nevada.

It's an informative program that offers small-business owners a free kit, including a management information guide titled, "Start Small, Think Big: Secrets To Small Business Success," plus a comprehensive resource directory. If you're thinking about going into business for yourself, or have just started your own business, you might find it helpful. For a copy, phone (800) 237-GROW.

HERE ARE some of the myth-truth findings turned up by the survey:

■ Myth: The biggest potential problem for small business is too much growth.

Truth: The real problem for small business isn't just growth, but growing "too fast."

■ Myth: In hiring people, experience is more important than personality.

Truth: While experience is good, having an open and friendly attitude is vital for customer-contact people.

■ Myth: Doing all the work yourself is the key to succeeding in a small business.

Truth: Being willing to work 60 hours a week is a given, but knowing how to delegate is essential.

■ Myth: Insufficient capital is the reason most businesses fail.

Truth: More than 80 percent of small businesses fail because of lack of experience and poor management.

■ Myth: Advertising is a waste of money. Word-of-mouth is all you need to sell yourself, your product or services.

Truth: Visibility and adverstsing are important.

The last, to be sure, is a plug for Pac Bell's Yellow Pages Directory. Still, there are many useful nuggets of wisdom Pac Bell culled from interviews with bankers, accountants, investment advisers, management consultants and small business operators. You may serve yourself well to check out the research before or as you proceed on your own.

A KEY point stressed over and over in the survey is the absolute importance of a business plan. Just as a builder wouldn't begin construction of a building without a blueprint, eager entrepreneurs shouldn't rush into new ventures without a business plan.

Too often, say the experts, entrepreneurs focus too much attention on developing the product or service and overlook this most important first step. It's rare that financing can be raised without a business plan — and it's also rare that an independent business succeeds without a business plan.

For small businesses, the plan should be kept simple. Many small operators shy away from drafting a business plan because they don't know how to draw one up, are confused about who to turn to for help or, too often, are convinced they can bull their way through to success without a formal plan.

While this straight-ahead and seat-of-the-pants confidence is admirable and part of the spirit that makes them entrepreneurs, it's risky business. To paraphrase: Whom the gods would destroy, they first make overconfident.

MOST BUSINESS failures don't stem from bad times. Rather, they come from poor management. Bad times just precipitate the crisis. It's during prosperous times when the seeds are sown for the next bumper crop of bankruptcies.

A lack of emphasis on long-range and capital investment planning was indicated in a survey sponsored several years ago by the international accounting firm of Peat, Marwick. Of the 430 small businesspeople responding to the survey, only 26 percent cited long-range planning as a chief concern. Only 15 percent said capital investment planning is important.

Small business operators should plan for success but allow for failure. If you're successful, what will be your additional needs in management, equipment and facilities? If you fail, how are you going to unravel yourself and get out of the fix you're in?

Take the optimistic and pessimistic views, as well as the realistic, advise the pros. Develop a contingency for all scenarios so you're well-protected. Know what the downside risk is, but also know how much more money you're going to have to commit to keep a business going.

If you're successful, it usually doesn't mean you've put a lot of money in your pocket. It means you've had to invest more money in the business. Where are you going to get it? Small business advisers caution that while most who go into business believe they're prepared, too often they're not.

THEY HAVEN'T done enough homework. That's probably the first commonly made mistake, not adequately researching the business they're entering — the marketing aspects, production, planning. Small businesses find financing hard to come by, mainly because they haven't laid out a well-thought-out business plan.

Having a plan that evolves with your business fortunes provides the blueprint, a compass, a road map for growth transitions. When success comes despite the lack of a business plan, promise the experts, the credit is due more to blind luck than the operator's determination and entrepreneurial ability.

DEAR ABBY

Survey: Faithfuls winning derby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I sent a postcard in response to your survey asking, "Have you ever cheated on your mate?" Please tell us how that survey is coming. — BOTH FAITHFUL IN JUNEAU, ALASKA

DEAR FAITHFUL: The response has been overwhelming! So far the results show that not everybody is cheating. Far from it! The scales are tipped in favor of the "faithfuls." Most "faithfuls" are over 40, and have been together for 25 years or longer. The eldest couple has been married for 72 years. He's 91 and she's 88. The youngest have been married 3 months. He's 21, she's 19.

More men than women admitted to cheating. (I've been asked, "Can it be that the women are lying and the men are bragging?" To which I respond: It's doubtful; there's no reason to lie in an anonymous voluntary survey.)

Last chance for those who would like to be a part of this survey. Send a letter or postcard to Abby's Survey, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Please indicate whether you are male or female, your age, and how long you've been together. You need not sign your name.

DEAR ABBY: Back in 1942, when I was 18 years old, I had an affair. He was 21. It lasted two years. World War II was raging. He went to war and we went our separate ways.

I never forgot him. I married someone else and had two children. He married and had four. Although we lived in the same town, we never saw each other until three years ago when we met by chance in a drugstore. We spoke briefly about what we had been doing in the past, said goodbye and never saw each other again, until nine months ago when out of the blue he called me and asked to see me again.

We met in a parking lot. That night, sitting in his car, he took me in his arms and we both knew that old feeling was still there. I know I still love him, and he said he still loves me. This has been going on for nine months — at least once a month. (No sex involved.) I've never done anything like this before and he said he never had either. We can't believe this is happening to us after 45 years. We've both been married for 41 years. I would never leave my husband for him and he would never leave his wife. All we want to do is meet occasionally and hold each other in our arms and experience that old feeling again. I am 63 and he is 66. — TRUE STORY, KEEP ME NAMELESS

DEAR TRUE STORY: Write again in a year and let me know if you're still in a "holding pattern." Personally, I think you're heading for trouble. But since you asked for no advice, I shall offer none.

DEAR ABBY: I have kept a diary — never missed a day — since Jan. 1, 1933. I'll be 69 this year and have been sorting my belongings and dividing them for my three children.

My problem is what to do with all these diaries. There are some things I wrote that could hurt some feelings, but it is also a record of my thoughts and the activities of my life and the lives of family members. Much of it could even be boring to them.

Should I burn them all? Or give them to my eldest? I am still writing every day — it's a habit. Now, what should be done with more than 50 diaries? — MRS. G. IN ST. JOSEPH, MO.

DEAR MRS. G.: Don't burn them! Regardless of what they contain, they are a part of history. But why should the eldest inherit them all? Perhaps the youngest or middle child would have more interest in them. Discuss it with all your children, and then decide.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Traditional fireworks can be dangerous

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In an average year more than 10,000 Americans are treated at hospital emergency rooms for injuries related to fireworks, and a major share of these accidents will occur in the next few weeks.

Across much of the nation the approach of Independence Day is attended by the appearance of fireworks sales — either legal or illegal, depending on local laws.

And while most pyrotechnics will result only in bright colors and loud noises in a fun-filled celebration, an unfortunate few will used them carelessly, resulting in injury.

"There is nothing we can do to replace a lost limb. Burns are painful, burns are difficult to care for, burns take a long time to heal," warned Dr. Carlos Silva of Washington.

The largest of the popular fireworks, such as cherry bombs, M-80s, M-100s and silver salutes, were banned more than a decade ago, the Consumer Product Safety Commission reports. Yet at this time of year they still manage to appear for sale.

One attempt to get around the law involves sales of fireworks kits, which contain the materials for people to make their own large fireworks. Federal officials warn that these can be very dangerous.

Just the friction of mixing the chemicals together can cause some of them to ignite, they warn. And some kits have been found which contain the equivalent of several sticks of dynamite.

Even the smaller, Class C, fireworks that are allowed in many areas can prove dangerous if misused, the safety agency warns.

One thing that is important to remember is that fireworks, while fun, are not toys and young children should not be allowed to play with them. Even the popular sparklers, which many people consider safe, burn at very high temperatures and can easily ignite clothing or burn skin. And children do not realize the danger.

Older children may be able to use fireworks safely if closely supervised and warned about using proper precautions. Do not allow running or horseplay while using fireworks.

Here are some fireworks safety precautions from the Consumer Product Safety Commission:

■ Before using any fireworks read and follow all warnings printed on the labels.

■ Light fireworks outdoors in a clear area away from houses and flammable materials.

■ Keep a bucket of water nearby for emergencies, and for dousing fireworks that don't go off.

■ Do not try to relight or handle malfunctioning fireworks. Soak them with water and throw them away.

■ Be sure other people are out of the way before lighting fireworks.

■ Never ignite fireworks in any container, but especially a glass or metal container.

Pool chemicals require care in handling

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Water treatment materials found in just about every swimming pool owner's garage or storage shed are potentially hazardous and must be handled with care, advises a major pool chemicals maker.

"If not stored and used properly, pool chemicals can burn the person handling them; they can give off dangerous gases, and can even lead to fire," says Ken Lee, product safety manager of PPG Industries, which supplies calcium hypochlorite-based pool sanitizers and also furnishes water testing systems.

In addition to the usual precautions, such as keeping chemicals out of children's reach, Lee recommends the following procedures to ensure pool chemicals safety:

■ Handling and using: Always read and follow label instructions.

Add chemicals to water, never water to chemicals.

Keep chemicals away from open flames, including cigarettes.

Don't mix pool chemicals. Use a clean, dry scoop for each chemical.

Close containers between usages. Use up all of one container before opening another.

When empty, rinse containers thoroughly with water before discarding.

■ Storing: Keep pool chemicals in closed containers, away from heat sources and fuels in a cool, dry, well-ventilated place.

Don't stack containers.

Keep various pool treatments (chlorinators, pH regulators, water clarifiers) apart and away from other chemical-type products, including soaps, detergents, paints, solvents, gasoline and anything labeled corrosive, flammable, combustible or hazardous.

■ Clean-up: Clean spills immediately.

Wear rubber gloves and use clean tools to place spilled material in a clean, dry container; never return it to the original container, and don't throw it into the trash.

After clean-up, flush area with large quantity of water.

Place container with spilled material in an isolated, well-ventilated area until it can be disposed of according to label directions, or dilute with large quantities of water and place in the sewer.

While not flammable by itself, calcium hypochlorite can ignite if contaminated by materials such as oil, glycerine, sweeping compounds, wet paint and carbonated beverages.

■ Emergencies: If calcium hypochlorite dust is inhaled, get to fresh air; it if gets on the skin or in eyes, flush with water; if it is swallowed, drink large quantities of water. Do not dust off clothes; flush with water.

In all cases, immediately seek medical attention.

The dust can severely burn respiratory and digestive tracts, eyes and skin.

Inhaling too much dust can be fatal.

■ Where to get help: Keep a list of local fire and rescue unit, physician and hospital telephone numbers and the PPG chemical emergency response number (304) 843-1300, next to your telephone.

Call the PPG number, which is answered 24 hours a day, for instructions on how to deal with any chemical-related emergency.

Weeds controlled

SOMERVILLE, N.J. (AP) — The two most prevalent weeds affecting American lawns are the dandelion and the less noticeable but far more destructive crabgrass.

"If left unchecked, crabgrass can take over 80 to 90 percent of your lawn," says Dr. Henry W. Indyk, an extension specialist in turfgrass management at Cook College-Rutgers University.

"A smart approach to controlling crabgrass is to specifically target the weed," he says. "Wait until the crabgrass starts coming up strong, usually in midsummer, and then use a post-emergence product to deal directly with the problem."

Indyk says post-emergence products are a good alternative for many bothersome weeds. Since they target specific problems, they often are less wasteful and more economical than their pre-emergence counterparts.

Martina claws past Evert, eyes sixth straight

By ANDREW WARSHAW

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Martina Navratilova mixed baseline steadiness with her usually strong serve-and-volley game to beat Chris Evert 6-2, 5-7, 6-4 to win a spot in the women's final at Wimbledon.

Navratilova has won every previous Wimbledon final she has reached. If she maintains that practice in Saturday's title match, the Czech-born, American-naturalized left-hander will have a record sixth consecutive championship and record-equalling eighth overall, as well as her first tournament victory of a relatively disappointing year.

Navratilova's opponent in her 23rd Grand Slam tournament final and sixth in a row will be the winner of Thursday's second semifinal between second-seeded Steffi Graf of West Germany and fifth-seeded Pam Shriver of the United States.

Navratilova's victory was her 39th in the 73-match rivalry that stretches back to 1973 in a first-round match in Akron, Ohio. The last time they met was on the clay courts of Paris, and Navratilova won that semifinal as well, 6-2, 6-2, to end Evert's two-year reign as French Open champion.

This one was much tougher, and when Navratilova saved break point and ended it with a cross-court volley, she skipped in joy.

It still was not the usual grass-court battle of exploding serves and charges to the net. Both players stayed back for the early going, with Evert, a three-time Wimbledon winner, using lobs to keep Navratilova out of volleying range.

But Navratilova had the bigger game from the baseline, too, and broke for a 4-2 lead in the first set with passing shots and occasional volley winners.

Evert appeared ready to break back in the seventh game but Navratilova held with the help of an acrobatic shot that would have made two-time men's champion Boris Becker proud.

Evert slammed a forehand volley toward the far corner on Navratilova's forehand. The shot was perfect, landing just inches inside the line and skidding away.

But Navratilova ran it down and, with a flick of her wrist, sent the ball back cross-court for a winner as she dove into a forward roll.

WEDNESDAY, IN a busy day of eight quarterfinals, Ivan Lendl moved closer to the two things in tennis he craves so much: respect and a Wimbledon championship.

Among those trying to keep him from the latter is Jimmy Connors, almost 35, who has attained both of Lendl's goals and is still going for more.

Lendl, the hungry Czechoslovak, and Connors, the American street-fighter, both advanced to the semifinals of the world's most prestigious grass-court tournament Wednesday.

Lendl, serving and volleying like a seasoned grass-courter, overpowered Henri Leconte of France, 7-6, 6-3, 7-6.

"That match is maybe the best I have ever played here," Lendl said. "I am a player who plays solid tennis without the spotlight on him, but I get the job done."

In his semifinal on Friday, Connors will play Australia's Pat Cash, aiming for his first Grand Slam title. He beat Mats Wilander, last month's beaten French Open finalist, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4, and has dropped only one set in the tournament.

Lendl takes on Sweden's Stefan Edberg, the No. 4 seed, who was a 4-6, 6-4, 6-1, 6-3 winner over compatriot Anders Jarryd.

SETTING UP the other women's semifinal, Graf beat the second leading teen-ager of the women's game, Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, for the eighth consecutive time.

And Shriver, in the semifinals for the first time since 1981, saved a match point against Helena Sukova before winning 4-6, 7-6, 10-8.

No. 4 hitter cleans up for still-alive Eastern

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Little League

When making out a lineup, a baseball coach wants a player in the No. 4 slot who can hit the ball, someone who can drive in runs. Preferably a player with power. Eastern coach Andy Madrid penned in such a player Wednesday in the Little League A playoffs at Henderson Park.

In the top of the first inning in a do-or-pack-it-up game for the Eastern Optimist, Mario Rodriquez came to the plate in a scoreless game with the bases loaded. His ensuing grand slam home run, the first of the playoffs, staked Eastern to a 4-0 lead over Mid-City Upstairs-Downstairs Angels and eventually to an 8-5 victory.

Rodriquez drove in a fifth run in Eastern's four-run fourth inning with a single. He later scored his second run of the game when Roy Robertson reached on an error.

Rodriquez will have another shot at Mid-City today when the two once-beaten teams meet in the double elimination city championship at 6 p.m. at Henderson Park. Rodriquez or Cory Watson will likely pitch for Eastern while Mid-City will probably counter with Kerry Doan.

STAKED TO an early four-run lead wasn't enough as Mid-City cut the margin in half in the next three innings. In the bottom of the first, Tony Galan hit a two-out double and was plated on Travis Baumgardner's single.

In the third, Mano Fuentes led off with a single and, two strikeouts later, scored on Baumgardner's second RBI single of the game. Like Rodriquez, Baumgardner is a No. 4 hitter.

Eastern picked up four insurance runs in the fourth on a single by Margorito Montez followed one out later with a walk to Joseph Bermea, a double to Noel Romero and a single to Rodriquez, who eventually scored on an error.

Mid-City still wasn't ready to call it quits. Galan crunched a two-out homer over the center field fence for an 8-3 ball game and the Angels mounted a near-miss rally in the sixth.

Sean Eschberger led off by reaching on an error and went to third on a double by Cory Emerson. After Eschberger Eschberger ended up stealing home and Emerson scored on a balk called on Romero, 8-5.

With two gone, Mano Fuentes singled and moved to second when Joseph Golding was hit by a pitch. Both advanced on stolen bases, bringing Galan to the plate as the tying run. Galan couldn't repeat his fifth inning homer, instead grounding out to shortstop Watson to end the game.

The final Mid-City rally gave Madrid quite a scare. In fact, he thought about walking Galan to get to Baumgardner, but changed his mind when he found out the true score.

"I tell you what, I thought we had a four-run lead but she (the scorekeeper) said it was only three," said Madrid. "I was thinking of walking Galan but decided not to because he could only tie it up."

"The kids (Mid-City) didn't quit," said Angels coach Joe Golding. "They (Eastern) won the game, we didn't lose it. We didn't give up.

"They outhit us the first time and we out hit them this time," said Madrid. "They're a very good ball team. I'm not taking anything away from them."

Both teams take 20-2 records into today's championship game.

Chisox sign LaMarr Hoyt

CHICAGO (AP) — LaMarr Hoyt, plagued by a series of drug problems in recent years, will return to the scene of his glory days with the Chicago White Sox.

Hoyt, 32, and winner of the Cy Young Award in 1983 when he helped pitch the White Sox to the American League West title, agreed in principal on Wednesday to terms of a new contract with his former team after clearing waivers following his release from the San Diego Padres.

Terms of the contract will be formalized this weekend when Hoyt will meet with White Sox officials. But Hoyt will be paid mainly through his $2.8 million contract with the Padres, which runs through 1989.

Chisox General Manager Larry Himes indicated Hoyt would not pitch for the White Sox this season.

"Hoyt's path to regain control of his life and career will not be easy, and the end result will be the sole responsibility of LaMarr Hoyt," Himes said. "He will report to Daytona, and there is no intention of bringing him back this season."

Hoyt became a free agent after being released by the Padres following a series of drug-related problems. He cleared waivers Friday.

The Padres' release of Hoyt was in keeping with the team's no second-chance policy for players with drug problems. Hoyt recently spent 30 days in jail because of a misdemeanor drug conviction.

Hoyt, who had a 24-10 record when he won the Cy Young in 1983, fell to 13-18 in 1984 and was traded to the Padres along with pitchers Todd Simmons and Kevin Kristan for infielders Ozzie Guillen and Luis Salazar and pitchers Bill Long and Tim Lollar.

He was in trouble over drugs three times in 1986. And last October, he pleaded guilty to smuggling about 500 pills of Valium and various painkillers from Mexico into the United States.

Angels hold on to first in 11th

From Staff and Wire Reports

Norm Carrasco singled home Bill Geivett with the winning run in the 11th inning as the Midland Angels took a 9-7 Texas League baseball victory over the San Antonio Dodgers to complete a comeback from a 7-0 deficit.

The win, combined with Wichita's 12-7 victory over El Paso, tied the Pilots and the Angels atop the West Division of the Texas League.

After Carrasco singled home Geivett to give Midland an 8-7 lead, another run scored on a wild pitch, capping a miraculous comeback and giving the Angels their sixth win in a row.

The Dodgers jumped on Midland starter Mike Romanovsky for 13 hits in 5⅔ innings of work and scored all seven runs in the first three innings. But in the fourth, Midland began to chip away.

Midland got back-to-back solo homers in the seventh inning from Doug Jennings, his 22nd of the season, and Stan Holmes, his 18th to pull within one.

But San Antonio still held a 7-6 lead until the eighth inning when the Angels finally tied the score when Carrasco doubled home a run to tie the game at 7-7.

Mike Devereaux had a solo homer for San Antonio in the first inning. It was his 13th of the season.

Bryan Harvey, 2-2, was the winning pitcher going 2⅔ innings to finish the game. The loser was Rob Rowen, 2-8.

In other Texas League games Wednesday night, Wichita defeated El Paso, 12-6, Jackson beat Shreveport, 6-2, and Tulsa and Arkansas split a doubleheader. Tulsa took the first, 4-2, and Arkansas won the nightcap, 10-3.

In Wichita, Brad Pounders went 5-5 and drove in three runs to lead the Wichita Pilots to a 12-6 victory over the El Paso Diablos. Pounders had four singles and a double to help Wichita break a four-game losing streak.

Chris Knabenshue hit a two-run homer in the first for Wichita and designated hitter Jeff Yurtin added a two-run homer in the fourth.

Reds wait out Astros for rain-soaked sweep

CINCINNATI (AP) — It's too early to calculate magic numbers, so Cincinnati Reds Manager Pete Rose is looking to other pennant-race indicators.

Rose measured the Reds' division lead in terms of time after they used a four-run sixth inning Wednesday night to beat the Houston Astros 6-4 in a game delayed two hours and 49 minutes by rain.

The win completed a two-game sweep of the Astros, pushing them 2½ games behind first-place Cincinnati in the National League West as the season nears its midpoint.

"We've got a little bit of a cushion now," Rose said. "It's going to take three days to lose the lead. With every win, you knock another day off the calendar."

The twin losses left the Astros with a 3-9 mark this season against the Reds, including a 1-5 record at Riverfront Stadium. Houston was 14-4 last year against Cincinnati.

Danny Darwin, 4-5, took the loss after starting brilliantly, only to fall victim to the first rain delay of the year at Riverfront.

Darwin gave up a lead-off double to Kal Daniels in the first inning, then retired 13 batters in order before a 28-minute rain delay in the bottom of the fifth. The Astros were leading 3-0 when the downpour began.

Darwin returned to give up a pair of singles in the fifth, then failed to retire a batter in the sixth.

Ron Oester's bases-loaded single off reliever Rocky Childress drove in two runs for a 4-3 Cincinnati lead in the sixth, and the Reds' bullpen made it stand up.

Rose had to go to his relievers early because starter Ted Power suffered neck and back spasms after giving up a pair of runs in the second inning. Jose Cruz doubled and Craig Reynolds had a sacrifice fly to drive in the runs.

Alan Ashby hit a solo homer, his seventh, to left field in the fourth off Cincinnati reliever Pat Pacillo, but the Astros didn't score again until Glenn Davis hit a solo homer, his 14th, in the ninth inning off John Franco.

The two-game sweep kept the Reds in the first-place spot they've held since May 29 and boosted their confidence against their closest contender.

Editor's Note: The Reporter-Telegram will preview three Texas League All Stars each day leading up to the July 7 All-Star game in Midland.

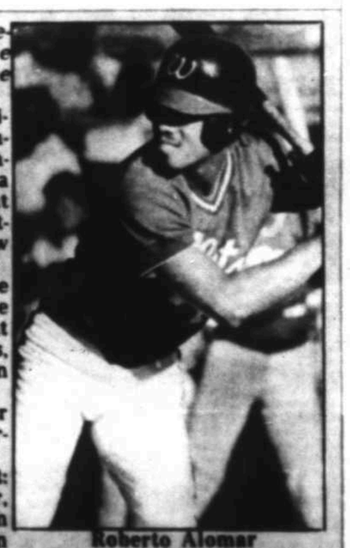
Roberto Alomar, shortstop, Wichita: Roberto is one of two Alomar brothers to make the All-Star team. His brother Sandy, also with Wichita, is a catcher. This is his first full year at shortstop and he is still making adjustments, primarily in the longer throw than from second base.

Alomar, just 19, has a .331 average and is among the TL hitting leaders. He signed with the Padres as a free agent in 1985 out of high school in Salinas, Puerto Rico. He is second in the TL in stolen bases with 24.

Roberto is the son of former Major Leaguer Sandy Alomar, Sr., who is currently a Padres coach.



Roberto Alomar

John Burkett, pitcher, Shreveport: Included on the Giants 40-man roster, Burkett, 22, was a sixth round choice in 1983. The righthander has really begun to blossom in his fifth year of pro ball after some disappointing early seasons.

Spent part of 1986 in Shreveport and was second in the TL in ERA with 2.66 and 10-6 record. Currently No. 8 in league at 3.39 and 8-5 mark. A fine bowler, Burkett rolled a perfect game last winter and could have chosen the PBA tour.

Michael Devereaux, outfielder, San Antonio: Two years removed from Arizona State, Devereaux has become one of the TL's top players, with a .339 average, 12 homers, 50 RBI and 20 stolen bases. He was chosen in the fifth round in the 1985 draft by the LA Dodgers.

One of the few Wyoming-born players in baseball, Devereaux also played at Mesa CC for two years. Made the jump from the Pioneer League to the TL last season and hit .302 and stole 31 bases. Also a steady glove man and at 24, a player to watch for in LA.

Rangers head on Eastern trip with guns a-blazing

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Since opening the season by losing 10 of their first 11, the Texas Rangers have been fighting an uphill battle for more than two months.

Now the going really gets tough.

By beating the Seattle Mariners 7-3 Wednesday night, the Rangers climbed to within 3 games of .500 for the first time since the fourth game of the season, and to within 5½ games of first-place Minnesota in the American League West.

Tonight they open a 4-game series against the Yankees in New York and follow that with three in Toronto.

"We're going East with our guns blazing," Rangers manager Bobby Valentine said after his club had won for the sixth time in its last seven games. "If we want to be a good team, we've got to beat the good teams."

The Rangers geared up for the eastern trek by getting 10 hits, including home runs by Pete O'Brien and Oddibe McDowell, and turning in several spectacular defensive plays.

McDowell's diving catch saved starter Charlie Hough a couple of runs in the first inning, and Pete Incaviglia's running catch with the bases loaded in the seventh also kept the Mariners at bay.

With the Rangers trailing 2-1 in the fourth, O'Brien hit his 18th homer of the season after Seattle starter Mike Morgan, 6-9, walked Ruben Sierra leading off.

The Rangers then added two in the fifth and two more in the sixth to raise Houth's record to 9-3.

AL Roundup

Angels 10, Indians 5

Jerry Reuss, the 38-year-old left-hander who had spent all of his career in the NL, kept his record perfect in the American League. He is 3-0 since signing with the Angels on June 19.

Reuss allowed four runs, three of them earned, on seven hits in five innings, walking none and striking out four. Former Midland Angel DeWayne Buice pitched four scoreless innings for his seventh save.

Another former Midlander, Devon White, singled twice, doubled and homered, scoring four times and driving in three runs for the Angels, who won for the ninth time in 10 games. Cleveland has lost nine of its last 10.

Brewers 13, Tigers 2

Greg Brock, B.J. Surhoff and Mike Felder drove in three runs each and Milwaukee scored eight times in the third inning. Brock had four of the Brewers' 18 hits, including a two-run single that sparked the third-inning rally that also included two-run triples by Surhoff and Felder.

Milwaukee's Bill Wegman, 7-7, pitched an eight-hitter and struck out seven in his third complete game of the season. Wegman lost a shutout in the ninth when he gave up a homer to Darrell Evans and walked Darnell Coles with the bases loaded.

Red Sox 6, Orioles 2

Roger Clemens pitched a six-hitter and rookie Todd Benzinger hit his first major league home run as Boston finished a sweep of the three-game series.

Clemens, 7-6, allowed only one baserunner, Lee Lacy on a one-out walk in the fourth, before Terry Kennedy broke up the no-hit bid with a two-out single in the fifth. Clemens was one out away from a shutout when he gave up a two-run single to Kennedy in the ninth.

White Sox 5, Athletics 3

Greg Walker's two-run homer in the 10th inning lifted Chicago over Oakland for a sweep of their three-game series.

Harold Baines singled with one out in the 10th and, one out later, Walker hit his 16th home run off reliever Dennis Eckersley. Jim Winn, 3-4, who had rescued Bob James in a bases-loaded situation in the top of the 10th, was the winner. Jay Howell, 2-2, was the loser.

Royals 4, Twins 3

Pinch-hitter Jim Eisenreich doubled to score Buddy Biancalana from first base with one out in the ninth and boost Kansas City over Minnesota. Biancalana was pinch running for Steve Balboni, who had reached on third baseman Gary Gaetti's throwing error.

It was Eisenreich's second hit since the Royals called him up June 17 from their Class AA farm club at Memphis. He has battled a nervous disorder, later diagnosed as Tourette Syndrome, in three seasons before the Twins put him on the retired list in 1984.

Yankees 6, Blue Jays 1

Wayne Tolleson's RBI single triggered a five-run rally in the 12th inning as New York beat Toronto to complete a three-game sweep. The victory gave the Yankees a three-game lead over the Blue Jays in the AL East.

Claudell Washington opened the 12th with a single off Toronto reliever Jeff Musselman, 6-2. Mark Salas then laid down a sacrifice bunt, but Washington beat the throw to second by catcher Charlie Moore. Washington moved to third on a sacrifice bunt by Paul Zuvella and scored on Tolleson's single.

East names Travs' Peters

LITTLE ROCK — Steve Peters, a left-handed relief pitcher with the Arkansas Travelers, will replace Shreveport pitcher Dennis Cook on the Texas League Eastern Division's All-Star squad, it was announced this week.

The TL All-Star game will be held for the first time in Midland on July 7. Reserved and general admission tickets are now on sale at the Midland Angels ticket office.

Cook, who had a league-leading 9-2 record, has been recalled to Phoenix, Ariz., of the Class AAA Pacific Coast League, the top minor league club of the San Francisco Giants.

Peters, 5-2, has an ERA of 0.59 and leads the Texas League in saves with 18. He is the only relief pitcher named to the East team.

Three Midland Angels will play for the Western Division, outfielder Doug Jennings, third baseman Joe Redfield and pitcher Marty Reed.

Jose Guzman has mono

ARLINGTON (AP) — Texas Rangers' pitcher Jose Guzman has been diagnosed as suffering from infectious mononucleosis.

The diagnosis was issued by Dr. Scott Hunter after Guzman was tested Saturday and again Tuesday. Hunter said Guzman has the symptoms of an enlarged spleen, swollen lymph nodes, nausea and a sore throat but he has not had the fatigue normally associated with the illness.

Guzman is listed as the starting pitcher for Friday night's game in New York pending an examination Thursday.

Guzman probably was suffering from the illness Sunday when he pitched 7-1/3 innings to a victory against Minnesota. He was ill between innings.

"I'll be ready Friday," Guzman said before Tuesday's 5-2 loss to Seattle. "I can be dying, but I'll come out and pitch."

Samuel leads Phillies to fifth straight win

Associated Press

While Juan Samuel isn't where he wants to be, the Philadelphia Phillies are moving closer to where they think should be.

Samuel hit two homers to drive in four runs Wednesday night and Philadelphia beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 11-4, the Phillies' fifth straight victory.

Since Lee Elia took over as manager of the Phillies two weeks ago, Samuel has been batting leadoff.

"I don't like it much," the second baseman said of his new spot in the batting order. "I'm really more comfortable hitting third."

After hitting two-run homers in the sixth and eighth innings, Samuel has 14 homers and leads the club with 49 runs batted in — one more than Mike Schmidt.

The Phillies swept the four-game series with the Pirates at Veterans Stadium and it was their first four-game sweep since 1982 against San Francisco — the first over Pittsburgh since 1977.

After John Felske was fired, Samuel said Elia called him in and said he would lead off.

"I told him I wanted him to lead off. He said he'd do anything for the ball club. He didn't say anything to me about not liking it," Elia said.

NL Roundup

Mets 9, Cardinals 6

Gary Carter hit two homers in a game for the 26th time in his career, rallying New York past St. Louis in the rain.

Carter's leadoff homer and pinch-hitter Len Dykstra's two-run single put the Mets ahead 6-5 in the sixth inning. Carter hit a two-run homer, his 11th of the season, in the seventh.

The start of the game was delayed 75 minutes by rain and a steady shower fell for the first five innings. St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog was ejected by umpire crew chief Doug Harvey for arguing about the field condition at Shea Stadium in the fourth.

Cubs 1, Expos 0

Jerry Mumphrey homered with one out in the ninth inning off Bob Sebra and Greg Maddux pitched a four-hitter as Chicago beat Montreal at Olympic Stadium.

"I give a lot of credit for that to (catcher) Jody (Davis)" Maddux said. "He called a great game."

Mumphrey hit a 3-1 pitch over the right-field fence for his sixth homer of the season. The hit was only the third allowed by Sebra, who struck out a career-high 14 batters. Maddux, 5-7, struck out two and walked one en route to his first career shutout.

Braves 8, Giants 3

Andres Thomas' single drove in two of Atlanta's five runs in the fourth inning and the Braves took advantage of sloppy defense by host San Francisco.

Rick Mahler, 5-8, allowed nine hits but gave up only one walk. Mahler's last victory on June 17 also was against the Giants, at Atlanta.

Atlanta scratched away at starter Mike LaCoss, 6-5, in the fourth inning, scoring five runs on a bloop double, three singles, an intentional walk, an error and a sacrifice. Only two of the runs were earned.

Padres 4, Dodgers 0

Eric Show pitched a four-hitter to shut out Los Angeles for the second time this season and Kevin Mitchell homered twice for visiting San Diego.

Show, who had lost eight of his 10 decisions since the end of April, struck out two and walked just one.

Mitchell gave the Padres a 2-0 lead when he hit a solo homer off the Dodgers' Rick Honeycutt with two outs in the fourth inning.

Dutchman wins opening stage of Tour

BERLIN (AP) — Nico Verhoeven of the Netherlands won the opening stage of the 74th Tour de France Thursday, a 105.5-kilometer (63-mile) race through the streets of West Berlin.

Lech Piasecki of Poland took over the overall leaders' yellow jersey because of a better time in Wednesday's prologue. Piasecki, the former amateur world champion from Poland, placed second in the prologue, three seconds behind the winner, Jelle Nijdam of the Netherlands.

Verhoeven edged Italy's Giovanni Bottora in a close sprint Thursday, winning in an unofficial time of two hours, 11.33 minutes.

Nijdam had clinched the yellow jersey to open the premier cycling event when he posted the fastest time in the prologue.

Nijdam was clocked in seven minutes, 6.803 seconds, averaging a blistering 51.453 kph on the 6.1-kilometer (3.8-mile) course through West Berlin's fashionable Kurfuerstendamm Boulevard.

Because of the strong performance, the 23-year-old cyclist wore the leader's yellow jersey in the 105.5 kilometer (63-mile) official opening stage.

Stephen Roche of Ireland, the winner of this year's Giro d'Italia and one of the favorites in the Tour de France, had the third fastest time in the prologue, seven seconds behind Nijdam. American Andy Hampsten, a surprising fourth in last year's Tour and a two-time winner of the Tour of Switzerland, was 26th.

Dollar recovering

LONDON (AP) — The dollar hit a three-month high against the Japanese yen and edged up against all major currencies except the British pound in early trading today. Gold bullion rose in Europe after edging lower in Hong Kong.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose to 146.93 Japanese yen, from 146.42 yen Wednesday. It was the dollar's highest level in Tokyo since April 2, when it was 147.05 yen.

In later London trading today, the dollar was quoted at 147.00 yen.

Other midmorning dollar rates in Europe compared with late Wednesday:

—1.8285 West German marks, up from 1.8260

—1.5180 Swiss francs, up from 1.5160

—6.0995 French francs, up from 6.0900

—2.0595 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0565

—1,324.00 Italian lire, up from 1,322.00

—1.3307 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3298

Against the trend, the British pound rose to $1.6190 from $1.6155. Dealers have said the pound has been helped this week by OPEC's weekend agreement to try to maintain oil prices at around $18 a barrel.

GOLD

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $447.40 a troy ounce, up from $446 late Wednesday. Trading was described as moderately active, with gold buoyed by rising silver prices.

Gold traded in Zurich at a bid of $447.30, up from $446.50.

The metal closed earlier in Hong Kong at a bid of $448.30, down from $449.91.

Silver bullion rose sharply in London, trading at a bid of $7.40 an ounce, up from $7.26 late Wednesday. Silver has gained nearly 50 cents this week.

FSLIC $8.5 billion fund injection approved

By NATHANIEL C. NASH
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON (NYT) — House and Senate conferees Wednesday agreed on a bill that will inject $8.5 billion into the depleted thrift deposit insurance fund, ban the hybrid banking institution known as the limited-service bank, and place a nine-month moratorium on banks' engaging in new areas of securities underwriting.

The conferees, finishing five days of negotiations on the most comprehensive banking legislation in seven years, voted to increase the rescue package for the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. by $1 billion over the $7.5 billion package agreed to on Tuesday. They also accepted a measure spearheaded by House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, that gives years of regulatory leniency to weakened savings and loans in economically depressed areas, to allow them to work out their problems.

The legislation represents an emergency attempt to deal with the vast problems of the thrift industry, where losses at more than 400 insolvent savings and loan associations have drained the industry's deposit insurance funds. The measure is a setback for the deregulatory policies of the Reagan administration, which has supported creation of limited-service banks as well as opening new securities businesses to the banking industry.

The conference committee report must now go back to the House Rules Committee, because the bill exceeded the scope of both the Senate and House bills. Though there is some opposition in the Rules Committee to the permanent ban on the so-called non-bank banks, lobbyists and Congressional aides doubt this opposition could do much more than delay final passage by the House and Senate, which is expected.

But President Reagan has threatened to veto the bill. The White House has vigorously supported not only the limited-service banks but a much larger FSLIC rescue package of $15 billion.

"But I would think that Howard Baker would be pragmatic enough to counsel the president not to veto this bill," said Kenneth Guenther, executive vice president of the Independent Bankers Association, referring to the White House chief of staff.

Guenther noted that in its final form the conference committee report has wide support among lobbyists representing some of the most influential constituencies on Capitol Hill, including the nation's home builders, Realtors, thrift institutions, securities firms, insurance companies, most commercial banks and many small businesses.

The FSLIC rescue plan permits the deposit insurance fund to issue long-term bonds to the public and use the borrowed money to shut down hopelessly insolvent thrift institutions. Those institutions pose the threat of potential losses estimated at $25 billion to $50 billion. The FSLIC has about $500 million in usable cash, but its liabilities are already so large that it has an overall deficit of $6 billion.

In addition to increasing the amount the FSLIC can borrow to $8.5 billion, the conferees permitted thrift institutions to restore to their books as assets $823 million in so-called secondary reserves that they had on deposit with the FSLIC. The agency had contended earlier this year that those institutions would have to write off those reserves because of excessive losses incurred by shutting down insolvent institutions.

The regulatory forbearance measures, though controversial, had relatively little trouble winning approval of the conferees. In their final form, the provisions permit the net worth of a thrift institution in an economically depressed region such as Texas to drop below the current requirement that it equal at least 3 percent of total assets.

If the institution's net worth is no less than half of 1 percent of its total assets, and if it has not been imprudent in its lending, and if it presents a business plan to work its way out of its troubles, regulators cannot take action against the institution. But if net worth falls below five-tenths of 1 percent of assets, regulators can close the institution.

The forbearance provisions also permit institution executives who think they have been unfairly disciplined by their primary regulators to appeal to an arbitration panel. However, the decision of the arbiter is not binding on the regulator.

Wright had strongly lobbied for some form of these provisions, citing numerous calls to his office by Texas thrift managers about unduly harsh disciplinary actions by bank board examiners. Many members of Congress have not disputed Wright's good intentions. But since last fall he has intervened at times on behalf of two thrift executives charged by the bank board with numerous improper lending practices.

Other provisions of the bill include one that permits commercial banks to write off losses on agricultural loans over seven years, as opposed to all at once, and a joint resolution that affirms a commitment by Congress to stand behind the liabilities of the FSLIC.

Chrysler Corp. chairman Lee Iacocca outlined a plan of repairing the automaker's tainted image in the wake of federal indictments for odometer tampering. Included in the plan are newspaper ads setting "the record straight" and detailing remedies the company will offer.

Iacocca apologizes for 'lousy idea'

By JANET BRAUNSTEIN
AP Auto Writer

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler promised in newspaper ads today to improve warranties on 60,000 vehicles test-driven with odometers unhooked and sold as new in what chairman Lee Iacocca called a "dumb" practice.

Iacocca, in a news conference Wednesday and in the ads, also promised to replace, free of charge, any vehicle damaged in testing but sold as new.

The Chrysler Corp. chairman's admissions came a week after a subsidiary and two executives were indicted in St. Louis on federal charges of odometer fraud for test-driving the vehicles with disconnected odometers in the 18 months ending in January 1987.

Iacocca said the charges will be dealt with in court, but the damage to Chrysler's image must be dealt with immediately because the nation's third-largest automaker was being tried first in the "court of public opinion."

He called test-driving cars with disconnected odometers "dumb" and said selling some damaged cars as new "reaches beyond dumb to stupid."

U.S. Attorney Thomas E. Dittmeier said in St. Louis that he would not have any direct comment about the announcement, but added, "this office is always happy to see compensation for victims."

An industry analyst said Iacocca's action was a good move.

"For Lee Iacocca it was the right way to go. It is a very positive and wise move," said Chris Cedergren of J.D. Power & Associates in Westlake Village, Calif.

Cedergren said he would have advised Chrysler to "admit they made a mistake, don't try to cover it up, immediately resolve it and get it past them. Clearly that's what Iacocca did."

In fact, Cedergren said, Iacocca could turn the issue into a marketing coup. "People will say, I like this guy even better now. He admits he makes mistakes."

Unemployment rate at lowest level of decade

By MATT YANCEY
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment fell to 6.1 percent last month, the lowest rate of the decade, as fewer teen-agers than expected sought summer jobs, the government said today.

Total employment actually fell by 198,000 last month, the Labor Department said, but the losses were more than offset by a seasonally adjusted decline of nearly 500,000 in the labor force.

The drop in the labor force — all those at work or actively seeking a job — was expected following a May gain of 612,000, which analysts had said was "probably somewhat exaggerated."

The number of people listed as officially unemployed also fell last month, down 286,000 to 7,280,000, the lowest since March 1980.

And the department said the number of "discouraged workers," those who have given up the search for work in the belief a job cannot be found, dropped 130,000 to 1,000,000 in the period of April through June. That is the lowest that number has been since the onset of the 1981-82 recession.

The number of discouraged workers had reached a high of 1.8 million at the end of 1982.

Over the last 12 months, the overall unemployment rate has dropped a full percentage point from 7.1 percent to 6.1 percent.

Several economists had predicted a slight gain in the unemployment rate last month following a 6.3 percent jobless rate in April and May. Further drops are predicted later in the year.

The department attributed virtually all of June's 0.2 percent percentage point drop to the relatively low number of teen-agers entering the job market at the end of the school year.

Teenagers accounted for more than two-thirds of the 484,000 drop in the labor force and their jobless rate fell almost 2 percentage points to 15.9 percent from 17.7 percent.

Unemployment among black teenagers dropped a whopping 5.7 percentage points to 33.3 percent.

The jobless rate among women was also down, off 0.2 percentage point to 5.2 percent, its lowest in 13 years.

Among men, the rate was unchanged at 5.5 percent, still well below the 6 percent that prevailed at the end of 1986.

The labor market experience of adult men during the summer months is far less volatile than for

Boesky shielded $160 million

BOSTON (AP) — Fallen Wall Street trader Ivan Boesky has shielded more than $160 million of his wealth from government confiscation by a series of legal and financial maneuvers, a newspaper reported today.

Some of Boesky's money now beyond the reach of the prosecution in Wall Street's insider trading scandal may include profits that came from his illegal trading activities, according to The Boston Globe, which quoted SEC officials it did not identify.

About $65 million, now held in the name of his wife and children, were stock profits Boesky made before he was implicated in the scandal, the Globe reported.

According to the newspaper, the Securities and Exchange Commission acknowledged that some of the $65 million may have resulted from insider tips from Martin Siegel, the investment banker who pleaded guilty to providing Boesky with information on takeovers he handled.

The Globe said Boesky's ability to shield some of his wealth appears to stem from the agreement he made in September 1986 with the SEC and the U.S. attorney that the government

Texas' jobless rate flat for third month

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas jobless rate held steady at 8.6 percent for the third consecutive month while unemployment nationwide fell to the lowest rate of the decade, the government said today.

The number of unemployed in the state in June was 716,000, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics said. Unemployment fell nationally to 6.1 percent last month as fewer teenagers than expected sought summer jobs.

But the state jobless rate held steady for the third month because there was not enough summer work for applicants.

"There has been some speculation for months that summer jobs would not be as plentiful as in the past," said Bryan Richey, Labor Department regional commissioner in Dallas. "There's a budget crunch in nearly every level of government and these state figures support that view."

The jobless rate in June 1986 was 10 percent. The lack of capital investment continues to suppress an economic recovery in the state, he said.

While the Texas economy is poised on the spring board for recovery, there is still a great deal of weakness and the weakness is widespread," said Richey.

Six of the eight major industry divisions that comprise the Texas economy are continuing to reflect job losses over the year, ranging from 13 percent in construction to a little under 1 percent in finance, insurance and real estate," he said.

Richey said 7,656,000 people were on employment rolls in Texas last month.

If we look at some developments in recent months, it is beginning to look up, but so far the gains are insufficient to significantly offset the rate," he said. "What we need is a return of capital investment, that is what creates new jobs. We need to have the confidence return to the Texas economy."

Serving up dwindling revenues is tennis' fault

Howland

Sunday marks the end of two of the greatest weeks of the year for a tennis nut — the Gentlemen's Final of the Wimbledon Championships will be played.

As a sometime tennis player and full-time tennis fan, I take my share of ribbing around the newspaper for keeping closer track of the progress of the major championships — from the first round on — than most anyone else, including some of the sports staff.

"And another thing, what does tennis of any kind — or Wimbledon specifically — have to do with business, anyway?" is another of the comments I hear.

Well, as unlikely as it may sound at first blush, there are some sizeable business implications based on who wins the fortnight on the English grass and other Grand Slam events.

In the sport's heyday of the mid- to late-'70s more than 5 million tennis racquets were sold per year. Riding the crest of a popularity wave generated by Billie Jean King and Bobby Riggs "Battle of the Sexes" hype extravaganza, tennis was enjoying wider exposure to the public and was turning that familiarity into new players.

With prices ranging from a few dollars to a few hundred, racquet sales alone could have accounted for nearly a quarter of a billion dollars. Add balls, shoes, clothing and other accoutrements necessary and/or fashionable to play the game and $1 billion sales are easy to imagine. That's a major economic force at both the manufacturing and retail levels.

Lending additional momentum to the growing popularity of the sport last decade was the appeal of the pro tennis personalities of the day. Coming to the fore were the immensely likable Chris Evert, Tracy Austin, Bjorn Borg and Jimmy Connors, among others along with the continuing appeal of legendary players like Billie Jean, Rod Laver, Ken Rosewall and Arthur Ashe.

In what I think is not wholly a coincidence, when players like John McEnroe came along whining about this and berating linesmen about that, fewer players — adults and juniors — flocked to the courts to play what less resembled a relaxed, sociable game and was looking more like ice hockey without the skates.

McEnroe now says that his successors at the top of the sport have damaged the game's appeal even more. He told Esquire magazine this month that Czechoslovakian-born Ivan Lendl, the current number one player "hasn't been good for tennis.

"He's been so selfish. And he's certainly not the kind of guy who brings out the best in others. He's hurt the popularity of the game so much," McEnroe said.

The fact that the top six male players in the world are Europeans — not Americans — has further turned off widespread domestic interest. Likewise with the two fastest emerging women's players, West German Steffi Graf and Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina.

The enduring charisma of Chrissie and naturalized U.S. citizen Martina Navratilova has sustained some popularity in the women's game, but both are seriously contemplating retirement. The amazing performance of 34-year-old Jimbo Connors at this year's Wimbledon has rekindled sparks of interest in his game, but McEnroe's sluggish return to form has overall American rooting interests at a modern-day low ebb.

Deteriorating fan interest has been reflected in decreased playing interest as well. A study by a Massachusetts consulting group, Game Plan Inc., says the number of active players has fallen 40 percent to 11 million and equipment sales figures are down a like amount. The U.S. Tennis Association is spending more than $1 million on a program aimed at school-age players — getting them involved for life, the USTA says.

The group also contributed, along with World Tennis magazine, to funding the Game Plan study which served up some serious statistics — like that more than 60 percent of all players are playing less and that the 11 million player figure is steadily shrinking.

"Tennis has been like a leaky bucket, with more people leaving the game each year than we are pouring in," concludes Ed Volkwein, vice president of marketing for racquetmaker Prince Manufacturing Co.

Don't expect much help from this weekend's climax to the Wimbledon festivities. For what it's worth (not much, just between you and me) I predict we'll be watching Martina Navratilova beat Steffi Graf on Saturday and Sweden's Stefan Edberg taking out Aussie Pat Cash on Sunday.

The first component of the world's deepest oil production platform awaits a plunge into the Gulf of Mexico. Conoco positioned the drilling template in 1,760 feet of water.

Conoco readies new Gulf field

HOUSTON — The first component of the world's deepest oil production platform has been positioned by Conoco in 1,760 feet of water in the Gulf of Mexico.

A 312-ton drilling template, measuring 50 feet by 75 feet, has been set on the seafloor at a position about 170 miles southwest of New Orleans. The template will be used as a guide by Conoco, a Du Pont subsidiary, to drill 16 production wells in the Joliet oil field located in Green Canyon Block 184.

Earlier this year, Conoco announced it would bring the new field into production using a tension leg well platform. The TLWP is a buoyant structure held in place by tethers made of steel pipe. The concept eliminates the need for a rigid, underwater support structure, substantially reducing the cost of developing deep-water oil reserves.

Installation of the template is expected to take about three weeks. Following installation, a semi-submersible drilling rig will begin drilling wells. Drilling will continue while the TLWP is being constructed at a still undetermined location.

Mobil begins remodeling work on refinery

NEW YORK (SWN) — A modernization, conversion and debottlenecking program is now under way at the Mobil Oil A.G. refinery in Woerth, Germany, Mobil Oil Corp. said.

The program will cost approximately 70 million Deutsch marks, or about $39.5 million at current conversion rates. The project is scheduled to be completed by year-end with only 34 days of lost production, since much of the work was done during a scheduled maintenance "turnaround" when the refinery was down.

Anadarko, Panhandle can't agree on price

HOUSTON (SWN) — Anadarko Petroleum Corp. announced that it was unable to reach agreement with Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. on the price to be paid for natural gas sold under contracts covering about half of Anadarko's proved reserves. As a result, PEPL has advised Anadarko that these gas contracts will be terminated effective August 12, 1987.

Pan Eastern Exploration (a wholly owned subsidiary of Anadarko) and PEPL were engaged in price renegotiations concerning certain "old" gas contracts since March 18, 1987 pursuant to the provisions of Order 451 of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC).

The terminated contracts cover about one trillion cubic feet (Tcf) of proved natural gas reserves; on December 31, 1986 Anadarko's total proved reserves of natural gas were 1.76 Tcf. Anadarko's net interest in these reserves is about 850 Bcf. Daily deliverability from these reserves is about 250 Million cubic feet (MMcf), and the current average wellhead price for the gas is about $0.70 per million British Thermal Units (Btus).

Mobil makes promising North Sea gas find

NEW YORK (SWN) — Mobil North Sea Limited, an affiliate of Mobil Oil Corp., has concluded a favorable test of an exploratory well in the Southern Gas Basin of the U.K. North Sea.

It is close to the 53/1-1 discovery well.

Located 27 miles Northeast of Great Yarmouth, well 53/1A-5 was drilled to a depth of 8,000 feet. A single test on one formation flowed at a maximum rate of 36.9 million cubic feet of gas per day through a one-inch choke. The well also produced 120 barrels of condensate per day.

Well 53/1A-5 spudded on May 10, 1987. Block 53/1A is held 100 percent by Mobil North Sea Limited.

Marathon agrees to sell German refinery

Marathon Petroleum Co. has agreed to sell its West German refining and marketing subsidiary, Deutsche Marathon Petroleum CmbH, to OMV AG, the Austrian national oil company. Completion of the transaction depends primarily upon approval of the West German anti-trust office. Terms of the sale were not disclosed.

The principal property involved int he transaction is DMP's 70,000 barrel per day petrochemical refinery located at Burghausen, West Germany. Also included are DMP's products terminals in West Germany and Marathon's and DMP's respective interests int he Transalpine Pipeline system which links the refinery witht he port of Trieste, Italy.

Tennessee gas now open access transporter

HOUSTON — Tennessee Gas Pipeline Co., the largest of Tenneco Inc.'s intersate natural gas pipeline systems, has accepted a blanket certificate from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission authorizing the company to provide transportation services for all shippers without undue discrimination under terms and conditions of the FERC's Order 436.

Tennessee Gas has been transporting gas for local distribution companies and intrastate pipelines since Dec. 10, when the company filed for an open access certificate. Under terms of the certificate accepted, Tennessee Gas may now add interstate pipelines and others to its list of eligible transportation customers.

AGA presses for alternate fuels incentives bill

WASHINGTON — The American Gas Assoc. is urging a House subcommittee to include incentives for a variety of alternate transportation fuels, including natural gas, in legislation it approves.

Testifying on behalf of AGA, Wallace P. Parker, manager of marketing and advertising for Brooklyn Union Gas Co., told the subcommittee that legislation to foster alternate vehicle fuels should include natural gas.

Parker urged the House Energy and Power subcommittee to amend the draft Methanol Energy Policy Act of 1987 — which they are considering — to include other alternate fuels because other non-petroleum fuels can also promote energy security, improve the nation's air quality and contribute to the displacement of imported oil.

Mobil makes four Austrian gas discoveries

NEW YORK (SWN) — Mobil Oil Corp. reports that its Austrian affiliate, Rohoel-Aufsuchungs GmbH (RAG), a 50-50 joint venture with Shell, has made four wildcat gas discoveries so far this year in the Molasse Basin of Upper Austria.

The wells are part a five-well exploration program in Upper Austria's Molasse Basin, some 20 to 25 miles north of Salzburg. The fifth well will be drilled later this year.

Two of the wells — the Astaett 1 and Gilgenberg 1 — are Miocene Formation discoveries. The Astaett 1 was drilled to a depth of 6,101 feet and flowed at a rate of 1.45 million cubic feet a day (MMCFD) on a 24/64-inch choke. The Gilgenberg 1 was drilled to a depth of 4,650 feet and flowed at a rate of 2.44 MMCFD on a 24/64-inch choke.

El Paso: Jean laundering capital

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — About 2,000 El Pasoans wash blue jeans for a living.

That makes El Paso the jeans-washing capital of the country, the city's launderers say. El Paso's jean-washing laundries already employ almost 1 percent of the city's work force.

Many El Paso launderers, knowing a good deal when they see one, are planning to expand their plants and hire more people.

El Paso is benefiting from a boom in prewashed jeans. Jeanswear Communications reports that 400 million pairs of jeans were sold in 1986. John Troeger, Levi Straus' El Paso area manager, estimates that 70 percent, or 280 million pairs, were prewashed.

Troeger said he expects jeans manufacturers to prewash 85 percent of all jeans made this year. Within five years, Troeger said, 95 percent of all jeans will be prewashed.

That will mean business to El Paso laundries that do contract work. Desert Cleaners, for one, employs between 75 and 100 people to wash jeans for Levi Straus. Desert Cleaners now washes between 50,000 and 55,000 pairs of blue jeans a week.

It's hard to get exact figures on how many jeans are washed in El Paso each year. Levi doesn't release figures but said its El Paso plant can wash more than 12 million pairs a year. Lee Co. — the other large jean manufacturer in El Paso — says the number it washes depends on what kind of treatment the jeans get. El Paso laundries claim to wash between 50,000 and 300,000 pairs of jeans a week with less employees than either Levi or Lee.

El Paso laundries are getting ready to expand to handle the rising business. James Viola Jr., owner of Viola Sportswear, has reopened a downtown laundry in addition to his already functioning laundry in south El Paso. Viola, who got out of the jean-manufacturing business last year, has 250 employees and will add to that number.

Desert Cleaners is getting ready to build a new building, which will double its production. Greater Texas Finishing Corp. is studying expansion.

"It's the main part of our business," Viola said. "And it gets bigger every year."

People don't want the old-fashioned blue jeans — the kind that were put on a store shelf as stiff as a board, the kind that had to be washed repeatedly before becoming soft enough to wear, the kind that might shrink to the right size or might not. Instead, customers want jeans already softened and shrunk to the right size.

That's spelled the end for the traditional blue jeans.

"They're history," said Joudi Joudi, owner of Today's Man, a retail store in El Paso's Basset Center.

AP LaserPhoto

Washers like this one at the Levi Strauss & Co. finishing center in El Paso can handle 500 pairs of jeans at a time.

Joudi still has some stiff jeans in stock.

"We're not ordering any more," he said. "We can't give them away."

Manufacturers have had to respond quickly to this change in consumer tastes. Levi now has 1,000 people washing jeans, checking the results and mending problems at its plant on Pellicano Drive. All Lee jeans made in El Paso are washed, either at its plant or at laundries. Levi contracts with laundries to handle the rest of the demand.

"It's strange," Troeger said. "We opened our laundry in September. We're doing more jeans here and we're sending more work out than ever before."

Levi won't disclose how many jeans it produces — or washes — a week. It also won't say how it washes its jeans, except to say that Levi's washing is unlike anything you can do at home.

The washing machines are things you probably won't buy at home. They are large, about the length of a Lincoln Continental.

"These are the kind you put in your garage instead of your car," said Jim King, Lee's El Paso plant manager.

Lee washes all the jeans it makes in its El Paso plant. Some are washed only in hot water — at least 168 degrees Fahrenheit — to soften them; others face more rigorous washes.

One is the stone wash, a process that uses pumice stones to fade the jeans. This requires putting the right-sized stone in the washing machine. A stone that is too large can damage the jeans; one too small won't get the desired effect. Pumice also hurts washers more than jeans, and King said stone-washing machines need maintenance work every six months. Washing machine manufacturers are now doubling the thickness on the drums that hold the jeans and pumice to make washers last longer.

Stones aren't the only device used. The boom in washed jeans has attracted chemical companies.

"This is a new and emerging market," said Ernest Eissele, director of commercial development for Carus Chemical Co. near Philadelphia. Carus is selling potassium permanganate, something normally used to treat drinking water. Potassium permanganate bleaches the jeans' indigo dye to a faded, white look. Eissele said other chemicals will do the same thing, but potassium permanganate doesn't hurt the fabric.

Carus is selling potassium permanganate to some El Paso laundries, but won't say which is buying it.

"Companies are very secretive," he said. "There are different processes being used and each has a different twist."

The independent laundries are also caught in fierce competion. Cesar Viramontes, owner of El Paso's Economy Laundry, said any new development in jean washing — no matter how jealously protected — is common knowledge through the industry within three months.

JOBLESS

youngsters," Janet L. Norwood, the commissioner of labor statistics, said in her monthly appearance before the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

In contrast, she said, the rate can be quite explosive for those aged 16-24. "From April to June, the labor force for this group has risen about 2.6 million before seasonal adjustment — considerably less than last year," she said in explaining the large teenage jobless drop.

While the overall rate was down as measured by the household survey, a separate survey of business payrolls recorded a meager increase of only 116,000 jobs in June, the lowest of the year.

For other population groups, the department reported these unemployment statistics:

—Whites, 5.2 percent, down from 5.3.

—Blacks, 12.7 percent, down from 13.8.

—Hispanics, 8.5 percent, down from 8.7.

An alternate unemployment rate, taking into account the 1.7 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States, stood at 6.0 percent, also a decline of 0.2 percentage point.

Total civilian employment was 112,257,000 last month, a drop of 190,000 from May. At 6.1 percent, the civilian rate has not been so low since December 1979, when it was 6.0 percent.

Norwood said that employment growth in the service sectors of the economy over the last two months has slowed to just half the rate recorded earlier in the year.

Health services accounted for the biggest share of that increase, 26,000 jobs in June. Retail trade produced 15,000 new jobs; construction, 13,000, and manufacturing, 4,000.

Economists had expected the slowdown in service job growth, particularly after payroll gains in May of only 123,000 jobs. More than 2 million service jobs were created in the last 12 months.

"Job growth, especially with the weakness of past months in manufacturing, has been extraordinary," Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers, said in predicting that the increases would "settle down."

"Most likely ... workers are taking on extra positions, probably to generate income lost in the higher-paying goods employment and sustain their previous standard of living," Sinai said. "In any case, greater incentives to work exist with the new lower marginal tax rates."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Pre-paying mortgage makes sense

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have had a 30-year, $60,000 mortgage at a fixed rate of 9.75 percent on my home for about one year. I would like to pay off the mortgage early by sending additional money to the bank each month, thereby reducing the mortgage principal. I would hope to retire the mortgage in five years.

Many people tell me this is not a good idea. They say I should borrow as much as I can for as long as I can in order to have a tax shelter. I don't understand why I should pay the bank almost $6,000 per year interest just to save $3,000 per year on my income tax. What is your feeling about this?

Doyle

A. You and I are in absolute agreement. If you can pay off your mortgage early, do it. You'll save a bundle of interest. Just make sure the bank applies the extra money you send toward reducing the mortgage principal and that there is no prepayment penalty clause in your mortgage contract.

Actually, if you pay $6,000 a year in mortgage interest, you won't save even $3,000 in income taxes. For 1987, the highest federal income tax bracket is 38.5 percent. The $6,000 mortgage interest deduction would cut your federal income tax bill by $2,310 — at the very most.

If you're in a lower tax bracket, as most folks are, mortgage interest payments cut your tax bill by proportionately less. Assuming you're married and file a joint return, you must have "taxable income" — after all deductions — of more than $90,000 to be in the 38.5 percent bracket.

The only time you come out ahead by paying interest is when funds you have available earn more than you are paying in interest. Let's say you have $1,000 spare cash which you could use to reduce the principal on your mortgage. Let's also say you can invest that money where it will return 10 percent. You'll do better investing at 10 percent than by paying down your mortgage on which the interest is 9.75 percent.

Of course, if your available money earns less than the interest rate on your mortgage or any other debt, you should reduce your debts.

Here, again, we're back to basics. Nonetheless, some people continue to perpetuate the myth that it's smart to be up to your eyeballs in debt. More often than not, it's dumb.

Q. Under the new federal tax law, interest on a second mortgage is deductible if the total mortgage debt is no more than the purchase price of the home plus cost of improvements.

If I have a first and second mortgage totaling more than that, does this disqualify me from deducting all the interest I pay on the second mortgage? Or can I deduct the interest on the portion of the second mortgage which make the total debt equal to my original cost plus improvements?

A. The quickest answer is "yes" to your second question.

Let's say you paid $80,000 for the house some years ago and have made $20,000 in improvements. Let's say your first mortgage is for $40,000 and you can obtain an $80,000 second mortgage because the house now has a market value of $160,000.

You can continue to deduct all the interest on the $40,000 first mortgage and the interest on $60,000 of the second mortgage. The $40,000 plus $60,000 equals $100,000 — your $80,000 home purchase price plus $20,000 cost of improvements.

Q. How will the Internal Revenue Service know if I take a deduction for interest on a mortgage or mortgages which exceed my home's original cost and improvements?

A. The IRS will have no quick and easy way of spotting your excess deduction. There is no way the revenooers' computers can be programmed to flag something such as that. There is no central source of information on what people paid for their homes and the cost of improvements they made.

However, if your return is audited, you could be asked to prove that the total mortgage debt on which you claimed the deduction was within the guidelines of the new tax law.

Introducing the First City Advantage CD.™

No penalty for early withdrawal and a bonus rate at maturity.

Take advantage of one of the most unique investments ever. The First City Advantage CD. It's the CD that gives you access to your money when you need it, without penalty. When you invest $1,000 or more in a 2-year to 5-year CD, you'll get a high opening rate for your term and a bonus rate at maturity. Look at all the advantages of the First City Advantage CD.

Advantage 1: No early withdrawal penalty. The First City Advantage CD lets you withdraw money when you need it, as often as once every 90 days, with no interest penalty at all. You don't even have to give prior notice. And you have peace of mind because your funds aren't tied up when you need them for things like medical emergencies, education or a lower payment on a home.

5-year Advantage CD

Annual Rate		Bonus Rate*
6.50%	&	2.35%

Advantage 2: High bonus rate at maturity. The money that stays for the full term of your First City Advantage CD will get a bonus rate on top of your opening rate at maturity.

So the bigger your balance at maturity, the more you maximize your advantages.

Advantage 3: High opening rate. With the First City Advantage CD, you get a high opening interest rate from the day of deposit all the way to maturity or withdrawal. So you don't have to sacrifice earnings to get to your money.

Here are a few more advantages. With the First City Advantage CD, you also get the security of FDIC insurance. Your interest is paid to you quarterly, semiannually or annual interest if you like. And friendly, helpful bankers to serve you.

Call First City or come in today for full details on the First City Advantage CD. Compare it with other investments. You'll see why banking at First City is always to your advantage.

Morgan recreates role in 'Dragnet'

ENTERTAINMENT

By RICK DU BROW
Hearst News Service

Harry Morgan has become a superstar among character actors mainly because of two TV roles — police officer Bill Gannon in "Dragnet" and Army Col. Sherman Potter in "M*A*S*H."

Thus his value in the movie comedy "Dragnet," based on the NBC police series in which he starred with Jack Webb, is clear. Webb, who created "Dragnet" and played the legendary Sgt. Joe Friday, is dead. Morgan, 72, is the major living link to the show that inspired the new Dan Aykroyd-Tom Hanks film.

Morgan said he didn't have any qualms about appearing in a comedy version of the TV drama in which he and Webb played by-the-book cops?

"The movie's played for comedy, but it's a reverent treatment — at least in regard to Jack and me."

Aykroyd portrays a cop who's the nephew of Joe Friday and just happens to have the same name.

Morgan reprises his role of Gannon. "But now I've risen to captain, and I'm sort of a surrogate uncle to Dan in the picture. I try to play it just like that. I think this is a good movie all by itself, even if there hadn't been a TV show named 'Dragnet.' And it isn't dependent on your knowing that there was a 'Dragnet' before."

> "The movie's played for comedy, but it's a reverent treatment — at least in regard to Jack and me."
> — Harry Morgan

Still, comparisons are part of the attraction, even to young kids who know the TV "Dragnet" only through reruns. And Morgan himself can't help comparing the way Webb and Aykroyd handled their portrayals of Joe Friday.

"Jack," says Morgan, "used to do what he called his Jesus speech when he reamed out a particularly bad crumb or an officer who didn't do police work as it should be. It'd be a page or a page-and-a-half long, and he read it like a bullet, but off a TelePrompTer.

"I used to think, 'Thank God he has a TelePrompTer because nobody could do that otherwise.' But Aykroyd has speeches that are just as long as Jack's and he didn't read them. He had them memorized, and I was mesmerized."

Whether Webb would take as kindly to a comedy treatment of "Dragnet" is questionable. He took his show and his famous staccato-voiced character seriously.

Morgan remembers when comedy writer Hal Kanter, "who was a friend of Jack's, wrote for 'Dragnet' under an assumed name, and Jack would take all the scripts and take out all the comedy. It amused Hal, and still does."

Kanter is the producer of Morgan's new syndicated TV comedy series, "You Can't Take It With You," the latest adaptation of the famous play about an eccentric family.

While Webb was best known for drama, Morgan's well-rounded career — now in its fifth decade — has showcased him in several TV comedy hits such as "December Bride" and, of course, "M*A*S*H." His eight years on "M*A*S*H" certainly sharpened his skills and his appreciation of comedy.

"It's the best part I ever had. I never enjoyed anything more. Shows like 'December Bride' were joke comedies. But 'M*A*S*H' was character comedy — much higher caliber."

He was, therefore, ready for "Dragnet" as a movie comedy.

"They called up and said, 'Would you like to be in it?' And I said, 'Of course I'd like to be in it.' It was for 10 weeks. We used to spend two days making an episode of 'Dragnet.' We could've made 25 episodes in that time. Dan and (director) Tom Mankiewicz both discussed the old show with me. When I told Dan that we used to do these things in two days, sometimes one, he couldn't believe it."

Morgan said the most important factor in his working relationship with Webb was "respect and affection. There wasn't much kidding around."

Fungus may be secret to sound of Stradivarious

Associated Press

Texas A&M University scientists may have unraveled the mystery behind the time-honored tone of Stradivarious violins.

Microscopic inspections of wood taken from these famous instruments and those of other noted Italian luthiers revealed a fungus alive and well in the cellulose cells, according to Wood magazine.

These famous violin makers of the 17th and 18th centuries used wood that they first soaked in water, rather than dry wood, scientists theorize. Fungus in the water changed the shape of the wood's cellular structure. Thus, the violins of that particular period have a special, full-bodied sound.

Davis agrees to settle out of court

FORT WORTH (AP) — Cullen Davis will settle out of court to resolve civil suits accusing him of a shooting rampage at his Fort Worth mansion that left two dead and two injured, said his attorney.

But the lawyer, Steve Sumner, said Davis would not do so if the settlement was considered an admission.

"I know Cullen, and that's the last thing he would ever do if it was considered an admission of guilt," Sumner said.

But such an admission is a key point in ex-wife Priscilla Davis' new offer to settle her multi-million-dollar claim that Davis shot her and killed her 12-year-old daughter.

"It simply gets down to resolving the matter without having to go to the expense of another trial," Sumner said. "I have said if there is any way these cases could be settled, then they should be settled."

Mrs. Davis' new attorney, David Burrows of Dallas, said Monday that he would seek an out-of-court settlement as a sufficient admission of guilt for the slayings of Priscilla's daughter, Andrea Wilborn, and boyfriend, Stan Farr.

Mrs. Davis and a mansion guest, Gus "Bubba" Gavrel Jr., were wounded in the shootings around midnight Aug. 2, 1976. Gavrel's suit against Davis was settled out of court, and its terms were not revealed.

A $16.5 million wrongful-death and personal injury suit filed against Davis by Mrs. Davis and her former husband, Jack Wilborn, ended in a mistrial June 22 in a Fort Worth courtroom.

A jury deadlocked 8-4 in Mrs. Davis' favor. Agreement by at least 10 jurors is required to reach a verdict.

Visiting State District Judge Claude Williams, who presided over the trial, said numerous attempts were made to settle out of court until the last week of the trial.

"I encouraged them to settle all the way through," Williams said.

"We made what we believed to be a reasonable offer to the plaintiffs, and they rejected it," Sumner said.

Attorneys for Wilborn, meanwhile, said they may have new evidence to bolster their case if it goes back to court.

"You're always looking and evaluating evidence, but it's really not anything we can talk about," attorney Hal Monk said. "I've interviewed folks who we might use as witnesses — a couple who we didn't know about before."

Clouding the issue of any potential settlement is a federal bankruptcy ruling that took control of the troubled Kendavis Industries International Inc away from Davis and one of his brothers, Kenneth Davis.

Cullen Davis once was estimated to be worth $106 million, but he said recently that he probably has less than $1 million. The bankruptcy court could put a hold on all civil suits, Sumner said.

Davis' legal troubles continued Monday when Galveston Judge Ed Harris found the oil heir in contempt of court and ordered him to turn over a list of certain assets by July 16 or face three days in jail and a $500 fine.

Man fired because employers did not believe he was serving on jury

FORT WORTH (AP) — A juror in the wrongful death civil suit against T. Cullen Davis says he was fired from his job with a construction company because of his jury service, Tarrant County authorities report.

Luther Laster, 38, said he was told June 23, the day after the trial ended, that he had been fired two weeks earlier from his job at Combustion Engineering.

Laster said his foreman claimed that no one knew he had been serving on a jury.

Combustion Engineering officials declined to comment, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

"I think they (his superiors) didn't think I was telling the truth because jury duty lasted so long," Laster said. "They said I didn't tell them I was on jury duty, but I did."

The firing is "horrible," said District Court Judge Claude Williams, who presided at the trial.

"I'm outraged, because jurors don't ask to come here," Williams said. "They're doing their civic duty and they ought not to be penalized.

Laster was part of the jury that deadlocked 8-4 against Davis in the recent $16.5 million damage suit filed against Davis in connection with the shooting death 11 years ago of Andrea Wilborn, 12, The girl was the daughter of Priscilla Davis, then the estranged wife of the Fort Worth millionaire businessman.

The former juror says he has discussed his firing with the Tarrant County district attorney's office and has hired a lawyer to handle a possible civil suit.

Assistant District Attorney Alan Levy said Laster's best move would be a civil suit as any criminal charges would be hard to prove.

"There are some criminal statutes that theoretically may cover it, but they are going to require criminal intent," Levy said. "A civil suit will get their (employers) attention, by making them aware it will cost them a lot of money."

There is a civil provision in Texas law, Levy said, that allows a discharged employee to sue his employer for six months' wages, plus attorney fees, if fired while serving on a jury. He said the law would not require Laster to prove that he informed his employer that he would miss work because of jury duty.

"Once he reports back to work and said he was on jury duty, then the employer is obligated to reinstate him," Levy said.

The judge, however, says he wants to push for criminal action against the employer.

"I'm really upset about it," he said.

House defeats amendment to lottery bill

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In an early test vote on the lottery, the House Wednesday rejected an amendment to its appropriations bill that would have directed proceeds from the game to help local school districts cut property taxes.

The amendment, which the House defeated on a voice vote, would have dedicated as much as $600 million in lottery proceeds to the Foundation School Program over the next two years, said Houston Rep. Ron Wilson, sponsor of a lottery bill.

The state program pays about two-thirds of a school district's costs, while local property taxes make up the rest.

The amendment would have been contingent on lawmakers' approval of a lottery bill, which also would require voter approval in the fall. If passed, state Comptroller Bob Bullock says, a lottery would actually generate about $400 million in 1988 and 1989.

A House committee on Monday approved two separate proposals to create a state lottery, but opponents claim they have the votes to defeat any lottery proposal on the House floor.

A lottery bill was soundly defeated in the House in May, during the regular legislation session, and a similar proposal died during last summer's special session.

On the Senate side, the State Affairs Committee on Wednesday heard testimony on a lottery proposal, but took no action.

Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville and sponsor of the bill, said he plans to wait for the House to vote on one of the proposals before trying to move his bill through the Senate.

Uribe, Wilson and other supporters of a state lottery say the game may be the best alternative to a major tax increase many say is needed to meet billions of dollars in revenue shortfalls.

But the lottery appears to be losing momentum as the House today will consider a $5.7 billion tax bill to pay for state services.

Testifying before the Senate committee, representatives of religious and consumer groups said a lottery "creates false hope for the people" and puts state government in the position of "benefiting from misfortune."

The amendment...would have dedicated as much as $600 million in lottery proceeds to the Foundation School Program over the next two years...

STATE IN BRIEF

Proposed DART lines near site of JFK assassination protested

DALLAS (AP) — Proposed rail lines near the site where President John F. Kennedy was assassinated are drawing protest from the Dallas County Historical Association.

"Events of such magnitude must be treated with care, for Dallas — willingly or not — is the keeper of the historic record," the association said in a report.

The proposed Dallas Area Rapid Transit lines could affect the character and setting of the site and the surrounding area, association officials said in the report submitted recently to DART.

The lines would be near the former Texas School Book Depository building from which shots were fired in the Nov. 22, 1963, assassination.

Bus rules to ease during papal visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole on Wednesday agreed to ease bus chartering regulations during the Pope's visit to San Antonio to accommodate the crowd in response to a request earlier this week by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

"The federal regulations are too much overdrawn," Bentsen said in a prepared statement. "See we have the Pope — Pope John Paull II — visiting San Antonio in September. Anticipate you have half a million people there, and what you need is a lot of buses to transport those folks."

Current law, which was written to protect the private bus operator, precludes the hiring of any mass transit buses if a private operator with only one bus offers to provide that bus.

Jury awards daughter $775,000

MIAMI (AP) — A federal jury deliberated only 30 minutes Wednesday before awarding $775,000 to a college freshman whose father was killed in the crash of Delta Air Lines Flight 191 at the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport in 1985.

Michele Miller, 18, who now lives in Miami and attends Florida State University, had asked for $10 million, while Delta had recommended $500,000. The airline had already admitted liability in the case and the civil trial was only to set damages.

The verdict by the six-member jury followed a two-day trial before U.S. District Judge C. Clyde Atkins.

Ms. Miller's father, a 38-year-old Hialeah policeman, was among the 137 people killed Aug. 2, 1985 when wind shear sent the Delta jetliner plunging to the ground.

Democratic hopefuls take swings at Reagan, crack at jokes

By EVANS WITT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Hope can relax. None of the Democrats running for president in 1988 is going to make it as a comedian.

All joking aside, Americans got a good, intense look at seven presidential hopefuls in the first full-bore debate of the 1988 campaign season Wednesday night.

For two hours from a stage in Houston, the candidates took their swings at President Reagan and his policies. And they also took the occasion to tell the national television audience over the Public Broadcasting Service what they would do differently.

There was lots of talk of "strong leadership," and there were denunciations of the budget and trade deficits and spending $1 trillion on Reagan's "Star Wars" anti-missile defense.

The special edition of William F. Buckley's "Firing Line" was spiced by the innovative use of prerecorded segments in which each candidate got a chance to talk about himself and to present one minute of a stump speech.

Some told jokes in the stump speech portion; some talked about their wives; some told jokes of their wives making fun of their husbands. None registered more than a 3 on the laugh meter.

The 120 minutes were a lot like the first day at school — no fights, just a start to the process of sorting out the class of 1988.

And there were no big winners, no losers on stage.

Each of the little-known candidates needed a chance to introduce himself to the Democratic voters. And each got it. From the biographical clips to the issue answers and the closing statements, each of the candidates gave the viewers an outline of his stands on specifics and approaches in general.

There was at least one minor mistake — Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee misidentified one of the three presidents from his home state, saying James K. Knox, instead of James Knox Polk.

Mostly there was agreement on the issues; all denounced covert aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

But there were some disagreement on the issues and an occasional dig at one another.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson referred to Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware as "Vice President Biden," a reference to Biden's flat statement that the black preacher would not be his running mate.

Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois said the tax reform bill of 1986 was a bad bill. Biden and Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri respectfully disagreed.

Biden and Gephardt parted company on trade legislation, although Biden said his disagreement was with "an amendment I won't mention right now," whose author certainly is Gephardt.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis declared that "why an oil import fee makes sense is beyond me." Gephardt tried to explain.

The two-minute closing statements from each of the candidates were essentially classic outlines of their stands and styles.

Simon repeated his litany that advisers had suggested he change his bow-tie, his horn-rim glasses and his traditional Democratic views.

"I don't run away from those things," he said. "If you want a slick, packaged product, I'm not your candidate."

Babbitt repeated a litany of seven specific issue positions.

Gephardt talked of the next president getting "the Congress moving in the right direction," an appeal based on his reputation as an effective leader on Capitol Hill.

Dukakis talked of how "my folks came to this country 75 years ago seeking the American dream. They found it."

Gore spoke of his service in Vietnam and his declaration, "There are better ways than war to resolve our disputes."

Biden, a reputation for eloquence on the line, talked of the "leaders who inspired our sense of optimism, who fired our sense of justice. I believe my generation's time has come to pick up where we left off in the '60s to make this country what it can be."

Jackson, the fiery preacher, talked of new directions and new priorities. And the black man who ran as an outsider in 1984 was gracious: "I'm delighted to have a chance to be a part of this debate, this dialogue."

At the end, a winner was the format, as uneven as it sometimes was.

The film clips broke up what would have been a boring drumbeat of questions and answers. And having two moderators, Republican Buckley and Democratic Robert Strauss, added still more variation to the conversation that could have dragged on painfully without commercial breaks.

But the Houston debate was just the start.

There are two dozen more debates already scheduled in the next nine months, plenty of time for the voters to get to know the Democratic and Republican candidates of 1988.

An Analysis

Bork says conservative label 'misses mark'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Judge Robert H. Bork's guiding philosophy that jurists should interpret the law rather than create it has made him the subject of interpretation himself, earning him a conservative label.

But Bork, a U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals judge who is President Reagan's choice to replace retiring Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell, says the label misses the mark.

"Most people would probably say I am a conservative," Bork said in a 1985 interview with Conservative Digest. "But political outlook has little to do with judicial philosophy. ...There are conservatives who favor judicial activism, and I know 'liberals' who favor judicial restraint."

Nevertheless, Bork's nomination Wednesday was hailed by conservatives and denounced by liberals.

"Bork is a staunch conservative, a strict constructionist who will make the court more representative of the values of the founding fathers and the majority of Americans," said L. Brent Bozell, president of the National Conservative Political Action Committee.

People for the American Way, a liberal lobbying group, said it was opposed to Bork's nomination.

"Mr. Bork's record on constitutional and civil liberties suggests that he would move us into the next century by repealing many of the gains in rights and liberties won in this century," John H. Buchanan, president of the liberal group, said in a statement.

The National Right to Life Committee issued a statement praising Bork as "highly qualified." However, the statement largely was an attack on those who opposed Bork, and it did not mention his views on abortion.

Bork himself does not appear to have spoken directly on the subject, but he has discussed the idea of a constitutional right to privacy, which forms the basis for court decisions permitting abortion. The privacy doctrine was established in the Supreme Court case of Griswold vs. Connecticut.

"I don't think there is a supportable method of constitutional reasoning underlying the Griswold decision," Bork said in the Conservative Digest interview. "As I said years ago, I thought the 'privacy' notion had little to do with the intent of the framers."

James L. Dronenburg raised the issue of privacy before Bork's court in 1983, when he argued that the Navy violated his constitutional rights by discharging him for being a homosexual.

Bork, who wrote the 1984 opinion for the appeals court, said he could find no constitutional basis to support Dronenburg's claim.

"We would find it impossible to conclude that a right to homosexual conduct is 'fundamental' or 'implicit in the concept of ordered liberty' unless any and all private sexual behavior falls within those categories, a conclusion we are unwilling to draw," Bork wrote. "We have no guidance from the Constitution...or from articulated Supreme Court principle."

Bork in 1983 concurred with the appeals court's decision that the Department of Health and Human Services erred in regulations that would have required parental notification of minors receiving prescriptions for contraceptives. However, he dissented from the decision striking down the regulations, arguing instead that they should be sent back to the agency for a rewrite.

In 1985 Bork was in the minority, voting to reconsider the court's decision holding a savings and loan liable for sexual harassment of an employee even though the institution was unaware of the problem.

Mechele Vinson said she yielded to the sexual advances of her branch manager because she feared refusal would jeopardize her employment. Bork wrote that the decision was wrong because it means "that sexual dalliance, however voluntarily engaged in, becomes harassment whenever an employee sees fit, after the fact, so to characterize it."

The appeals court's decision later was upheld unanimously by the Supreme Court.

Candidates have doubts about Bork nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr. led the Democratic presidential candidates Wednesday in saying there are serious doubts about President Reagan's nomination of Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court.

The Delaware Democrat said he "will not now take a formal position" on the Bork nomination, but Biden said he is troubled by Bork's apparently unyielding views on many issues.

"Unless Judge Bork can demonstrate to me that he comes to the court, with more of an open mind than I think he has, I will have some difficulties," Biden said at a Houston news conference just before the first candidates' debate of the 1988 presidential campaign.

He said he has "serious doubts" about Bork and suggested there would be a fight over the nomination in the Senate.

Biden said he told Reagan aides earlier this week that he wanted a nominee in the same mold as the man retiring from the high court — Justice Lewis Powell — "conservative, with an open-mind ... who in fact did not come to the court with a brief on how he wanted to see the agenda move."

"Quite frankly, I told them I wasn't all certain that Bork fit that mold," Biden said.

All the other Democratic hopefuls except the Rev. Jesse Jackson issued statements on the Bork choice.

Several of them were most troubled by Bork's role in the Saturday Night Massacre, when Bork fired Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox in 1973 at President Nixon's insistence. Bork's two superiors at the Justice Department resigned rather than follow Nixon's orders.

Bork may get chance at stunting protected rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Circuit Court Judge Robert Heron Bork once said he hoped President Reagan's appointees to the Supreme Court might slow the expansion of constitutionally protected rights.

Bork, the president's third appointment to the high court, may get that chance.

"Judge Bork, widely regarded as the most prominent and intellectually powerful advocate of judicial restraint, shares my view that judges' personal preferences and values should not be part of their constitutional interpretations," Reagan said Wednesday in announcing his intention to nominate Bork to replace retiring Justice Lewis F. Powell.

"The guiding principle of judicial restraint recognizes that under the Constitution it is the exclusive province of the legislatures to enact laws and the role of the courts to interpret them," the president said.

In 1982, Bork said Reagan's appointments to the Supreme Court could have an important effect on slowing the expansion of constitutionally protected rights, although it was impossible to tell how permanent the impact would be.

Reagan appointed Bork, a legal scholar, author and former Marine, to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in 1981 and he was confirmed in 1982.

He has criticized the courts for extending constitutional rights and federal authority. The former professor at Yale University's School of Law also has assailed high court decisions on abortion, sexual freedom and many types of free expression, charging that "when the court nationalizes morality, it strikes at federalism in a central way."

In 1985, Bork was in the minority voting to reconsider a case in which the appeals court held a savings and loan liable for sexual harassment of an employee even though the institution was unaware of the problem.

The ruling with which Bork disagreed later was upheld unanimously by the Supreme Court. Bork joined in a decision this year saying there was evidence the State Department had discriminated against female employees.

In a 1984 opinion for the court, Bork upheld the Navy's decision to discharge James L. Dronenburg on grounds of homosexuality, ruling that homosexual conduct is not constitutionally protected.

In April 1982, Bork said Roe vs. Wade, the Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion, was "a classic instance" of the court imposing its morality on local jurisdictions.

He contended that abortion should be a matter for local control.

Bork, 60, is best known for his actions during the so-called "Saturday Night Massacre" at the height of the Watergate scandal in 1973, when he obeyed President Nixon's order to fire special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox after the Attorney General Elliot Richardson and another top Justice Department official resigned rather than do Nixon's bidding.

After the resignations, Bork assumed the attorney general's position because his job as solicitor general made him third in the line of succession at the Justice Department.

Richardson, who now practices law, said Tuesday in an interview with The New York Times that Bork acted honorably in the incident by obeying Nixon's order and then calling for a new special prosecutor.

"I had asked the legal counsel to check whether Nixon had the right to fire Cox," said Richardson, who had made a commitment to the Senate not to fire the special prosecutor.

"The legal counsel concluded that he did. Therefore, we thought Bork could do the right thing and deliver that message. Bork deserves a lot of credit for standing up to Nixon and telling him to appoint another special prosecutor."

Leon Jaworski was named Cox's successor.

Born in Pittsburgh on March 1, 1927, Bork received his bachelor's degree from the University of Chicago in 1948 and his doctorate of law there in 1953. He then served as a research associate on a law and economics project at the university.

Bork served in the Marine Corps Reserve from 1945 to 1946 and from 1950 to 1952.

He practiced law briefly in New York, then returned to Chicago where he worked from 1955 to 1962 for the law firm of Kirkland, Ellis, Hodson, Chaffetz & Masters.

Bork Reagan's first choice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Judge Robert H. Bork, after waiting in the wings for a year for a seat on the Supreme Court, immediately became the White House's first choice for the bench when Justice Lewis Powell announced his surprise resignation, administration sources say.

"I think it would be probably fair to say that it was always Bork," a senior White House official said Wednesday. "Fact is, he was at the top of everybody's list."

Bork, a hardline conservative who since 1982 has been a U.S. Appeals Court judge in Washington, was one of only two finalists last year when Reagan filled the vacancy caused by Chief Justice Warren Burger's retirement.

In that case, Reagan chose Antonin Scalia for the court, putting Bork first in line for the next vacancy.

"He's a known quantity," one White House official said. "He's known to the president, known to the judicial figures, known to the city, so he was the obvious candidate from the beginning.

"There were other candidates being pushed by people outside the administration, but Bork was clearly the candidate of the administration," the official added, speaking on condition he not be identified.

Some conservatives had feared that Reagan, preoccupied by budget battles, wounded by the Iran-Contra affair and moving toward the end of his presidency, would not want to take on another bruising fight with the Democratic-ruled Senate to get Bork confirmed.

Conservatives' concerns were heightened when the White House made a concerted effort this week to declare that a Supreme Court nominee would not be picked on ideological grounds and that no issue, including abortion, would be used as a litmus test in the selection process.

Kim seeks amnesty for political prisoners

WORLD

AP Laserphoto

Opposition party president Kim Young-sam, left, greets ruling party chairman Roh Taw-woo at opposition headquarters in Seoul, South Korea, today. It is their first meeting sing Roh bowed to oppostion demands and proposed sweeping political changes in an effort to stop nationwide anti-government protests.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Opposition leader Kim Young-sam told the governing party chief today that President Chun Doo-hwan must enact a "total amnesty" of political prisoners to prove he is sincere in promising democratic reform.

Police said today they arrested 30 radical students who staged a violent demonstration near an industrial complex in southern Seoul on Wednesday. The protest was the first reported anti-government demonstration since Chun announced Wednesday that he would accept opposition demands for wide-ranging democratic reforms. No injuries were reported.

Newspapers reported today that the government was considering moves, including a memorial or compensation, to heal wounds from the bloody military repression of a 1980 uprising in the southern city of Kwangju. In the eyes of many South Koreans, that military action cost Chun's government its legitimacy.

Meanwhile, the nation's two main opposition leaders pledged to remain united in the drive for democracy.

Justice Ministry officials said Wednesday that about 1,100 political prisoners would be released in coming days, 100 of them this weekend. The move was part of reforms Chun agreed to following 18 days of widespread protest.

Kim Young-sam, leader of the main opposition Reunification Democratic Party, brought up the subject of political prisoners today when he received a surprise visit from Roh Tae-woo, head of Chun's Democratic Justice Party.

Kim Tae-ryong, a spokesman for the opposition, said Kim Young-sam congratulated Roh on the government's decision to back democratic changes, but added that "it is a fact that some of them (the people) still do not trust 100 percent the government and ruling party."

"So, the government must carry out a total release of political prisoners, total amnesty ... Those professors dismissed must be allowed to return to campuses, those dismissed journalists to newspapers and students to schools without delay."

Roh's responded, "I understand you well," the spokesman said. He did not provide any other details of the talks, which lasted 20 minutes.

On Wednesday, Kim Dae-jung, another top opposition leader, said there were 3,000 political prisoners, and demanded all but declared Communists be freed.

Justice Ministry officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said apart from the 1,100 prisoners to be released, there were only a few political prisoners, who were not being freed because they were convicted of treason or serious crimes.

The students arrested Wednesday were among 60-70 radicals who took part in an anti-government protest and hurled firebombs and stones at police, authorities said.

Radical college students advocate the overthrow of the government and establishment of a government dominated by workers and the poor. They say other dissident groups and opposition politicians are opportunists who are not working for real change. The protest appeared to be an isolated incident.

Nationwide demonstrations broke out on June 10, to coincide with the governing party's nomination of Roh, a close Chun ally and fellow former general, to succeed the president in February. Chun became president in 1980.

For 2½ weeks, hundreds of thousands of people, including the previously passive middle-class, poured into the streets to demand the ouster of Chun's government and direct presidential elections.

Startled by the popular outcry, Chun announced that he would reverse his opposition to direct elections and allow democratic reforms such as freedom of the press.

South Korean opposition leaders stand together

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The two Kims who head the South Korean political opposition have declared they will not repeat their mistakes of the past, and instead stand together in their struggle for democratic reform.

But their resolve will be tested by the government's sudden about-face this week, which brought official agreement to opposition demands for direct presidential elections and other changes.

Kim Young-sam, 58, and Kim Dae-jung, 61, long have led the opposition fight for what they call "democratization." At times they also have competed with each other.

They split in the race for power following the assassination of President Park Chung-hee in October 1979.

Many South Koreans felt that if they had remained united then, the opposition might have been able to mount an orderly campaign that would have prevented the military crackdown that helped President Chun Doo-hwan come to power.

In 1970, Kim Dae-jung was nominated for president by the New Democratic Party, then the major opposition group. He lost narrowly to Park Chung-hee, a defeat many South Koreans blamed on election fraud.

After Park's death, Kim was again considered a prime presidential candidate. But in May 1980, he was charged with sedition for his part in an uprising in the southern city of Kwangju, and sentenced to death by a military tribunal.

Chun later commuted the sentence to life, and then to 20 years in prison. In 1982, Kim Dae-jung went into self-imposed exile in the United States.

Since Kim Dae-jung returned home in February 1985, the two Kims have clasped hands and proclaimed unity at every opportunity. They have said they will not be divided again, and each has said he would support the other for the presidency.

Panamanians protest as state of emergency ends

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panamanians staged violent demonstrations for and against the military-controlled government one day after a state of emergency was lifted. The opposition said it would call a general strike.

Windows and equipment were smashed and fires set Wednesday at the headquarters of the main government party and that of an opposition party.

The opposition newspaper La Prensa reported that three bystanders were wounded by gunfire when men shot at anti-government protesters in different parts of the city. The men who fired wore civilian clothes, but the paper said reporters at the scene of one incident recognized them as members of the Presidential Guard.

Army commander Gen. Manuel Noriega, the power behind the administration of President Eric Delvalle, accused the United States of helping to foment unrest in an effort to undermine the Panama Canal treaties.

The anti-government disturbances Wednesday were the worst since Delvalle imposed a state of emergency June 11 after two days of violent demonstrations against Noriega and the military high command. The measure was lifted Tuesday. A statue of former U.S. President Franklin D. Roosevelt on the highway leading to the international airport was toppled Wednesday night by pro-government demonstrators, La Prensa said.

Earlier, U.S. Ambassador Arthur Davis delivered a protest note to the Foreign Ministry over damage done Tuesday by a rock-throwing crowd at the U.S. Embassy's consular building and the library of the U.S. Information Service.

The pro-government, anti-U.S. demonstrations were prompted by a non-binding resolution passed last week by the U.S. Senate calling for the Panamanian military to quit meddling in politics. The resolution also called on Noriega to step down pending an independent investigation of charges linking him to murder, election fraud and corruption.

Noriega appeared Wednesday at a rally in his behalf organized by military and government leaders.

He claimed the charges against him and the armed forces were "neither accidental nor casual," but part of the U.S. government's intention to undermine treaties that will turn the Panama Canal over to Panama in the year 2000.

U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams on Tuesday renewed Washington's pledge to carry out the treaties.

A high-ranking army officer who retired last month accused Noriega of being involved in election fraud in 1984, the 1985 slaying of a political opponent and the death of former Panamanian leader Gen. Omar Torrijos in a 1981 plane crash.

A coalition of business, religious and political leaders calling itself the National Civic Crusade called for a renewal of peaceful disobedience measures joined by thousands of citizens earlier this month. The group urged people to honk horns, bang on pots and pans, extinguish all lights and wave white handkerchiefs at pre-arranged hours.

Civic Crusade said it would announce soon the hour for a two-hour national work stoppage, which it said would be followed the next day by a nationwide general strike.

Riot squads appeared on the streets Wednesday afternoon for the first time in more than two weeks to watch the protests, most of them called by high school and university students.

About 3,000 protesters from the public Arts and Trade High School wound through streets near the downtown banking district, blocking traffic on several main arteries.

Some attacked the headquarters of the Democratic Revolutionary Party, the main element of the ruling coalition. La Prensa said some of the people inside the building emerged firing guns, striking a high school boy watching the protest.

Protesters spray-painted slogans on the walls of the building while others smashed windows, destroyed typewriters and other equipment inside and set fire to furniture and files.

A few hours later, a unidentified group of men arrived at the headquarters of the opposition Christian Democratic Party and began shooting, hitting a worker at an adjacent construction site.

The men smashed windows and equipment and started a fire that was quickly extinguished by firefighters.

La Prensa said a pregnant woman named Rosa Saenz was struck by gunfire in her home near the presidential palace when nearby demonstrators were fired upon. It said reporters and photographers recognized the gunmen as members of the Presidential Guard.

The newspaper was one of three that suspended publication when Delvalle imposed the state of emergency, suspending eight articles of the constitution guaranteeing such rights as freedom of the press and free assembly. La Prensa and one other newspaper resumed publishing during the emergency.

The National Assembly ended the state of emergency Tuesday, saying the conditions that prompted it had died down.

Mexico appears ready to support Central American peace initiative

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico seems determined to support attempts by Central American presidents to bring peace to the region despite strong U.S. opposition to any agreement that does not take American security interests into account.

"The security interests of the Central American countries and those of the United States are not perceived as the same," a high-ranking Mexican government source said in an interview.

The presidents of Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Costa Rica and Nicaragua tentatively will meet in Guatemala City next month to discuss, among other things, a regional peace plan proposed by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias.

The definition of security interests centers on the question of the U.S.-supported Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, according to the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"There was a time when Honduras and Costa Rica felt it was only natural for them to allow the U.S.-backed Contras to be established on their territory to launch attacks against Nicaragua's leftist government," said another Mexican diplomat, who also spoke on condition he not be further identified.

Yet now, Mexican officials say, there is concern in those countries about the threat the Nicaraguan rebels could pose if the United States cuts off aid to the Contras.

Mexico has made it clear that it believes U.S. policy in Central America to be wrong. It has been one of the most persistent causes of tension in Mexican-U.S. relations.

Mexico along with Venezuela, Panama and Colombia form the Contadora Group that since 1983 has been trying to bring peace to Central America. A final treaty has been blocked every time by one or another of the Central American countries.

There is a strong belief here that many of the objections of El Salvador and Honduras in the past were really objections presented through those countries by the U.S. State Department.

Contadora had injected into the treaty draft some of the suggestions from El Salvador and Honduras dealing with democratic procedures in Nicaragua.

The Arias plan aims more at a quick solution of armed conflicts.

"There is a great concern now over peace and security and less emphasis on someone's notion of democracy," the top-level source told The Associated Press. "There is battle fatigue after seven years of armed conflicts in the region and the leaders want a compromise solution."

The meeting was first suggested by Guatemalan President Vinicio Cerezo and a date was set for June.

Then, after a meeting with U.S. envoy Philip Habib, Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte announced he would not attend the meeting and asked for a postponment.

President Reagan expressed reservations about the plan to Arias in a meeting last month in Washington.

"There have been pressures on Guatemala and Costa Rica," the source said here.

In a speech this week Mexican Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Ricardo Valero said "messianic and interventionist projects" nullify the desires for peace in Central America.

This is the usual way Mexican officials refer to what they view as U.S. intervention in Central America.

Meanwhile, Mexico is discussing with Nicaragua a resumption of oil sales.

Klaus Barbie's trial offers few surprises

An Analysis

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
European Correspondent
The Hearst Newspapers

PARIS — The big surprise of the war crimes trial of Nazi Klaus Barbie is that there have been no surprises at all.

The six-weeks-long case, possibly the last major trial of a Nazi official that will ever be held, has entered its last hours in the French city of Lyons. That is where Barbie, a captain in the SS, spent the war years in charge of hunting down Jews and members of the Resistance underground.

The trial began amid widespread expectations that Barbie's lawyer would spring a series of dramatic and embarassing revelations of betrayals within the French Resistance.

Lawyer Jacques Verges threatened to "reveal" the identity of double agents in the underground who had worked for Barbie and subsequently risen to prominence in post-war France.

In pre-trial interviews with reporters, Verges hinted that Barbie knew dark secrets about the true extent of French collaboration with the German occupation authorities in persecuting and deporting thousands of Jews to the death camps between 1941 and 1944.

Many French observers frankly feared the trial would re-open old national wounds and cause new ones. Some even argued that Barbie, now 74, should never have been brought from Bolivia where he hid under an assumed name for 30 years.

But, in the end, the only "revelation" was that Verges' menaces were a bluff.

If Barbie possesses any secrets, it now seems likely he will carry them to his grave.

On the third day of the hugely publicized trial, the old Nazi, a shrunken, frail figure in an outsized gray suit, quit the courtroom proclaiming the "illegality" of the extradition process which had brought him there.

Compelled by the presiding judge to return just once and then only briefly, his absence turned the rest of the proceedings into an anticlimax.

Several of the prosecution's witnesses, now elderly men and women, bore the terrible scars of their sufferings at the hands of Barbie and his underlings.

One woman, in her eighties, related how the beatings she received as a suspected Resistance member had left her forever crippled and her face permanently deformed.

But not even such horrific tales of Barbie's reign of torture, brutality and death in wartime Lyons could quite bring the trial to life without him present to be confronted by his victims.

As became steadily clearer from the hours of testimony, Barbie, although a minor cog in the Nazi machine, was an especially zealous executant, going beyond even the demands of his masters in Berlin.

It was hard to relate the hobbling old man brought into the courtroom in handcuffs to the bloodthirsty fanatic who, according to witnesses, had ordered a trainload of Jews to be deported from Lyons to the extermination camps as late as August 1944.

The allied armies had already invaded France and the Germans were in full retreat. It was obvious to everyone that the war was lost. But, according to testimony and documents produced in the court, SS Untersturmfuhrer Barbie kept the wheels of death grinding right up to the moment he himself had to flee the advancing Allies.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Suspected Nazi Karl Linnas dies

MOSCOW (AP) — Accused Nazi war criminal Karl Linnas, deported from the United States in April, died today of heart failure, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Linnas, 67, had been imprisoned in his native Estonia and was transferred to a Leningrad hospital last Thursday for treatment of a peptic ulcer and other unspecified illnesses, Tass said.

"The illness developed and to render him more qualified medical assistance, Karl Linnas was transferred to Leningrad," Tass said.

Family members had been notified his condition had deteriorated and had come to the Soviet Union to be with him, Tass said.

Linnas, of Greenlawn, N.Y., was convicted in absentia in 1962 in an Estonian court of taking part in mass killings of Soviet nationals imprisoned at the Tartu concentration camp in Estonia. The area was then occupied by the Germans.

Linnas, who has been identified in official Soviet accounts as the chief of the Tartu camp, was sentenced to death. He was deported from the United States April 20 after the Supreme Court rejected an appeal from his daughter.

Lump of cheese found

TIPPERARY, Ireland (AP) — A hundred-pound lump of cheese discovered by workmen digging in a bog may still be edible some 1,400 years after it was buried, an archaeologist says.

Tony Candon said the cheese was discovered under five feet of bog on farmland in County Tipperary by workers Paddy Coughlan and Dan O'Connor as they were digging peat on Monday.

He said the lump was either cheese or butter, weighed "about one hundredweight (100 pounds)" and was preserved by the moist conditions.

"We think it would still be edible but we're not keen on trying it as it seems from the depth at which it was found to have been buried in the 5th or 6th century A.D.," he said.

Coughlan and O'Connor unearthed the find at Glenahilty, near Cloughjordan.

Island honors Earhart

LAE, Papua New Guinea (AP) — An American astronaut and a woman who helped run the hotel where Amelia Earhart spent her last night were among those who today paid tribute to the famed aviatrix on the 50th anniversary of her disappearance.

Memorial ceremonies began at 10 a.m., the hour on July 2, 1937, when Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, took off from the Lae airstrip in a Lockheed Electra for Howland Island in the central Pacific in their bid to be the first people to fly around the world.

The remains of the plane were never found, but it was presumed that it had crashed into the ocean.

Italian parliament meets

ROME (AP) — The new Parliament holds its first session today as members, including a pornographic movie star and environmentalist Greens for the first time, try to come up with a new government.

Among the items on the first day's agenda are the election of the presidents of both houses, the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies. Those elections could bring about a solution of Italy's governmental crisis.

The crisis began in March when then-Prime Minister Bettino Craxi, a Socialist, resigned from the post he held for 3½ years.

Italians voted in parliamentary elections June 14-15, a year ahead of schedule, after the Socialists and the leading party, the Christian Democrats, failed to agree on the formation of the nation's 47th post-war government.

More radiation tolerated

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A bone-marrow specialist said Wednesday his studies of the Chernobyl nuclear accident indicate humans can survive nearly twice as much radiation as previously thought.

Dr. Robert P. Gale, the American doctor who rushed to the Soviet Union to help treat survivors of the April 1986 disaster, also said 90 percent of the 300 patients he helped treat had survived, apparently with no ill effects.

"Most of the people who didn't die in the first few months are back home and functioning normally. There were only 26 deaths," Gale told The Associated Press after a weeklong trip to Moscow.

He was in Israel for a day to take part in a cancer conference before returning to his home in Los Angeles.

Sweden routs submarine

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A Swedish navy helicopter dropped depth charges and fired antisubmarine grenades Wednesday at what appeared to be a foreign submarine detected in coastal waters, the military said.

The weapons were used after several days of indications of "unidentified alien submarine activity" in Tore Bay at the northern end of the Bothnia Gulf that divides much of Sweden and Finland, defense staff chief spokesman Jan Tuninger told The Associated Press.

There was no indication that anything was hit, he said, and the search continued into early Thursday.

Tuninger did not say what country was suspected of being responsible for the intrusion.

Body found on moor

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Police said today they found a body buried on Saddleworth Moor, and British media said it apparently was that of a victim of the "Moors Murderers," a couple convicted in the serial slayings of children in the 1960s.

Greater Manchester police said in a statement that detectives found the body on Wednesday in a grave on the bleak moor near the town of Oldham in northern England. The statement did not identify the body or say what sex it was.

An autopsy was scheduled for later today, the police statement said. It gave no other details.

Marchers reach Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet and American peace marchers completing the final leg of a 450-mile trek from Leningrad arrived in the Soviet capital aboard a boat, the state-run media said.

A television report showed the 400 marchers arriving Wednesday at a terminal on the Moscow River and said they were tired but content.

The Tass news agency said the marchers had walked only about half the distance between the two Soviet cities and had finished the trip with a four-hour cruise on the Moscow River.

The march, which began June 15, was an extension of a 3,700-mile walk held last year from Los Angeles to Washington, D.C., to dramatize the need for disarmament and trust between the superpowers.

Haitian crisis continues

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (NYT) — Haiti remained in the grip of a political crisis Wednesday, but the drama shifted from the streets to a series of meetings as some civilian leaders began to call for the ouster of the military government.

After calling a rest Wednesday, many political leaders urged a resumption Thursday of the nationwide strikes that paralyzed Haiti on Monday and Tuesday.

The strikes, which the political leaders say were intended to be peaceful, have included outbreaks of violence as people building barricades on roads have clashed with soldiers. Gunfire echoed through the capital on Tuesday, with witnesses reporting soldiers firing point blank at some demonstrators, killing six and wounding more than two dozen, including several children.
