Tejano music star Selena dies in motel shooting

Midland fans mourn singer's death

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Members of the Midland Hispanic community and other Tejano music lovers are feeling the emotional effects of the death of international vocalist Selena.

Selena Quintanilla Perez died more than an hour after being shot at a Corpus Christi motel shortly before noon Friday, according to news reports.

Word of the tragedy spread quickly through the Midland Hispanic community since she was a well-loved singer locally, said Charlene Romero-Wurtz of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

Selena and her band, Los Dinos, performed two ground-breaking

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Grammy-winning singer Selena, the Madonna to many Mexican-American teen-agers, was shot and killed Friday at a motel. She was 23.

Her father said the suspect was once president of Selena's fan club.

Selena was shot in the early afternoon in a room at a Days Inn motel, made her way to the lobby, and later died at Memorial Medical Center, Assistant Police Chief Ken Bung said.

The suspect, 32-year-old Yolanda Saldivar, held police at bay for 9 1/2 hours in the motel parking lot before surrendering. She had been sitting in a pickup truck with a gun to her head, Bung said.

Hundreds of onlookers cheered and applauded when police arrested the woman. No charges would be filed until today, police said.

Selena's father, Abraham Quintanilla, said Saldivar had been president of Selena's fan club before she was hired at one of Selena's stores.

Judge makes call; strikers ready to play

■ Clubs still have option of locking out athletes, but owners did not appear to have necessary 21 votes to do so.

NEW YORK — Baseball players agreed to end their 232-day strike Friday after a judge ruled against owners in the labor dispute, but the clubs still had the option of locking out the athletes before Sunday's start of the season.

"Absent a lockout by the clubs, we can get real baseball on the field in a short period of time," union chief Donald Fehr said.

The 28 team owners did not appear to have the necessary 21 votes Friday to lock out the players. If there was a lockout, replacement players would be used to open the season.

Owners plan to meet Sunday afternoon in Chicago to consider their next step.

The season is set to start with a Sunday night game in Miami between the replacement players who make up the New York Mets and Florida Marlins. A decision on whether to play that game will be made Saturday, said Rich Levin, a spokesman for acting commissioner Bud Selig.

In ruling against the owners, U.S. District Judge Sonia Sotomayor ordered them to restore free agent bidding, salary arbitration and the anti-collusion provisions of the ballplayers' old contract.

The National Labor Relations Board had requested the injunction last Sunday. Three days later, the union leadership voted unanimously to end the strike if Sotomayor issued the injunction.

If owners accept the players' unconditional offer to return to work, Opening Day probably would be pushed back to the week of April 24, team officials said.

During the court hearing, Sotomayor, who grew up three miles from Yankee Stadium, noted the public interest in the strike, the longest ever in U.S. sports his-

Steam-pipe rupture kills two workers

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Two Big Spring men are dead following an accident at the Big Spring State Hospital Friday.

Maintenance supervisors Jerry Pike and Jim Hoard were working at about 3:45 p.m. in a space below the ground floor of a building on the state hospital compound. The space contained various high-pressure steam junctions to which the men were making adjustments, according to Ed Meughon, a hospital administrator.

Both Pike and Hoard were described as knowledgeable with regard to the steam system. "Both men were 11-year veterans with us," Moughon said.

The men were in the vicinity of a high-pressure steam pipe that ruptured. The resulting explosion and "scorching" steam killed both men at the scene, according to a Howard County justice of the peace who pronounced both men dead at an inquest at Scenic Mountain Medical Center Emergency Room.

No patients at the institution were injured in the accident, although steam filled the building and patients were evacuated to another building, Moughon said.

A full investigation to determine the cause of the accident will be undertaken Monday, he said.

Allison cancer center to gain new management under lease

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center will come under new management next week under a 10-year lease agreement signed on Friday between the Midland County Hospital District and Dallas-based Physician Reliance Network (PRN) Inc.

PRN is the operating-management arm of Texas Oncology — a statewide group of oncologists — that has provided cancer treatment at the Allison center since it opened in the early 1980s.

The result of the cooperative agreement is that radiation therapy and medical therapy will be placed at the Allison center and the expertise of statewide oncologists will be available. Allison center will be able to provide all cancer-related services, which has been the center's goal since its inception.

"It will have a positive impact on the bottom line for the hospital and it will not negatively impact the district in any way," said Charles Coffman, MCHD board member. "The hospital will have a positive bottom-line effect."

The arrangement will "afford an overall better treatment for cancer because of the expertise these people are bringing in to us," Coffman said.

The three Texas Oncology physicians in Midland already serving patients at the Allison center are oncologists Dr. David Snyder and Dr. David Watkins and radiation oncologist Dr. James Corwin.

"It's our group that is providing the cancer care for this community," Snyder said. "I think we will do a good job (under the new structure). We are all concerned about cost more than anything. With the changes in medicine, we have to be streamlined and cost-effective."

PRN, a publicly held company recently formed by Texas Oncology, manages the practices of 150 physicians at 46 practice sites throughout the state and 11

Tallahassee, Fla., was soaked by 2.7 inches of rain in 24 hours. Mobile, Ala., and Biloxi, Miss., got more than an inch.

No major flooding was reported, but some roads and streets were under water Friday morning, from southeast Louisiana into the Florida panhandle.

Additional thunderstorms along the central and eastern Gulf Coast were expected to produce up to 2 more inches of rain through the region.

In the Northeast, a low pressure system in the St. Lawrence River Valley and a frontal system produced scattered showers, with some light snow reported in the northern Appalachians and across northern New England.

Showers and snow flurries were reported in Upper Michigan.

In Southern California, Santa Ana winds gusted to between 30 and 40 mph in some mountain passes and canyons.

A cold front was approaching the northern Pacific Coast, but forecasters expected much of the West to stay dry and warm.

A low pressure system moving onto the northern and central West Coast was expected to produce showers from northwest California to western Washington.

The highest temperature in the lower 48 states was an afternoon reading of 90 at West Palm Beach, Fla. The coldest spot was Kalispell, Mont., with an overnight low of 5.

tory.

"You can't grow up in the Bronx without knowing about baseball," she said.

Sotomayor rejected all the arguments of owners, who contend they can't afford to field teams under last year's contract provisions.

"Even though opening day is days away, the parties have time to salvage it," she said.

After the ruling, owners sought a stay of the injunction and an expedited appeal. A federal appeals court hearing was set for Tuesday.

Selig said the judge's decision was "disappointing and may represent a step backward in our negotiations for a meaningful agreement with the players' union."

Spring training games went on Friday as scheduled with replacement players, but the mood among the strike-breaking athletes was grim.

"This is bad for me but it's good for the game," said Mark Czarkowski, a replacement player for the Pittsburgh Pirates in Bradenton, Fla. "I'm still one of the people who believes the game is bigger than any player."

Despite Sotomayor's ruling, there still were several major issues to resolve:

- Owners and players are still attempting to negotiate an agreement, but the next session hasn't been scheduled;
- More than 800 players are unsigned by clubs and cannot take the field until they are, or until other arrangements are made;
- Major league umpires have been locked out since Jan. 1.

Owners initially declared an impasse in bargaining on Dec. 23, and implemented the salary cap they had been demanding for more than two years.

The NLRB told the teams Feb. 3 that it was inclined to issue an unfair labor practice charge accusing management of illegally implementing the cap. Owners then rescinded the cap.

But three days later, the owners unilaterally eliminated free-agent bidding and salary arbitration. The NLRB issued a complaint on March 15.

The main issue of contention is a proposal under which teams that spend above a certain amount on player salaries would be penalized by having to pay a "luxury tax." Owners want the tax as a means to hold down player salaries.

SELENA: Singer dies in afternoon motel shooting

(From 1A)

"There have been discrepancies with the fan club ... and they resulted in her shooting Selena," Quintanilla said at a news conference.

Ms. Saldivar lured the singer to the motel on the pretext of handing over some papers, he said.

"We suspected her of embezzling money, and we started closing in on her and she just went bananas," Quintanilla told The Dallas Morning News.

The Spanish-language network Telemundo reported that the suspect was about to be fired as manager of Selena's store — a combination boutique and salon — in Corpus Christi.

"Selena was a superstar on the rise," Jose Behar, president of Capitol-EMI Latin, said in a news release. "This is a total tragedy for all of us."

Across from the motel parking lot, hundreds of onlookers had stood in a light rain, staring at the pickup during the standoff. The exit to the motel from the interstate was closed by police, and bumper-to-bumper traffic crawled by the parking lot.

"She was a big celebrity, another Elvis Presley to me," onlooker Janie Perez said. "She was just a little girl when she first started. I remember hearing her first song. She started getting better and better."

Selena's song "Fotos y Recuerdos" ("Photographs and Memories") is No. 4 on Billboard's Latin chart this week.

As lead singer for the band Selena y Los Dinos, Selena was one of the most popular figures in the genre of Tejano, a modern, urban version of the Tex-Mex accordion-based music called conjunto.

"It's got polka in it, a little bit of country, a little bit of jazz," she said in a 1994 interview with the San Jose (Calif.) Mercury News. "Fuse all those types of music together — I think that's where you get Tejano."

She won a Grammy last year for best Mexican-American album for her "Selena Live" and had been nominated for another this year, for her song "Amor Prohibido" ("Forbidden Love"). The album "Amor Prohibido" sold more than 500,000 copies.

At the recent Tejano Music Awards, she won for female entertainer of the year, female vocalist of the year, best record of the year, best album and best Tejano crossover.

Like Madonna, Selena was known for sexy stage costumes, including high boots and bustiers. But she was also known for emphasizing family values and was married to band member Chris Perez.

Tejano radio stations and Mexican stations along the border were giving the news of Selena's death almost continuous coverage.

Pete Skaggs, program director for KBNA, a Tejano radio station in El Paso, said station phone lines were swamped.

"Fans are crying," he said. "They're devastated. They're in shock."

She was born Selena Quintanilla on April 16, 1971, in Lake Jackson, south of Houston. She began singing with Los Dinos, the Quintanilla family band, when she was 9.

"I was very shy — you can imagine how it was," she told the Mercury News. "But I would say I've broken out of that shell."

While she mainly sang in Spanish, she had hoped to reach a wider audience and had begun recording in English — her native language. In the 1994 interview, she joked that she still had trouble pronouncing Spanish R's properly.

concerts in Midland, Ms. Romero-Wurtz said.

In April 1993, Selena became the first Hispanic music star to perform at the Chaparral Center, and last summer a second Midland concert was sold out at Christensen Stadium.

Motorists in Midland and throughout Texas drove with their headlights on Friday afternoon in tribute to the singer's death.

The music of Selena y Los Dinos has been popular at Hispanic-oriented celebrations throughout the city in recent years. "I've seen children as young as 5 and 6 up at the microphone singing Selena songs," said Alma Montoya, a counselor with Alliance West Texas.

"Selena was one of the first to break the international barrier as far as the youth were concerned," said Midland educator Pat Garcia.

Her high-energy concerts and sexy stage costumes captured the attention of more than the young. Selena fans are of all ages, Ms. Garcia said. "She was even crossing over into the Anglo audience."

Selena's popularity has been compared to that of Madonna, but fans point out that she espoused very different personal values.

She was known for promoting family values and encouraging youth to get an education and challenge themselves to excel, Ms. Garcia said. Selena regularly spoke with groups of children around the country. "She would tell kids to 'believe in yourself' and to stay in school," she said.

Ms. Garcia said she hopes Selena's encouragement of young fans will not be lost with her death. "That's what I really hope, is that children will remember her message," she said.

Selena's sudden death will greatly affect many people in Midland, Ms. Montoya said. To her fans, Selena was associated with dreams, aspirations, pride and her loss will be a blow to many fans, she said.

Gays want to refocus debate on slaying to hate crimes

DETROIT (AP) — After the fatal shooting of a man who had gone on "The Jenny Jones Show" and revealed his crush on another man, much of the blame fell on talk shows — their topics, their ambush tactics.

But gay activists and others say the debate misses the point: It wasn't a talk show, but fear and revulsion toward gays, that got Scott Amedure killed.

A prosecutor said the man under arrest in the slaying, Jonathan Schmitz, had gone onto the show thinking the secret admirer he was about to meet was a woman, and he was so humiliated when Amedure stepped forward that he shot him three days after the taping.

"There's such a willingness to buy into the fact that a same-sex attraction is so repulsive" that people now consider it a defense against murder charges, said Lester Olmstead-Rose, executive director of San Francisco's Community United Against Violence.

Amedure, a 32-year-old bartender, was shot in his suburban Detroit home on March 9. Schmitz, a 24-year-old waiter in suburban Detroit, turned himself in the day of the slaying, and the show was never aired.

Police said Schmitz told them that the experience on "The Jenny Jones Show" had "eaten away" at him. And Schmitz's lawyer, Fred Gibson, said: "My client is not a homosexual and takes great offense to anyone who says he maintains such a lifestyle."

"It is a sad commentary in our society that homosexuality has such a negative stigma and it does so for so many people," said Bob Steele, director of the ethics program at the Poynter Institute for Media Studies in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Gay-rights activists also complained that Oakland County Prosecutor Richard Thompson only reinforced the notion that a heterosexual who finds himself the object of a gay man's affection might have reason to feel humiliated.

The day after Amedure was slain, Thompson said: "In my view, 'The Jenny Jones Show' ambushed this defendant with humiliation. ... Had this not occurred, I don't believe this defendant would be facing these charges."

In saying that, the prosecutor "assisted in building a defense," said Jeffrey Montgomery, president of the gay-rights Triangle Foundation.

But Thompson later said, "Regardless of how humiliated (Schmitz) was, nothing allows him to commit murder." And he said that calling the murder a hate crime would only help Schmitz use a "homosexual panic" defense to fight what Thompson wants to prosecute as a premeditated killing.

Last year, 59 slayings of gays nationwide were classified as hate-motivated, according to the New York City Gay and Lesbian Anti-Violence Project.

cancer centers, including the Allison center.

Dr. Harold Rubin, president of Memorial Hospital, said the oncologists "can more greatly coordinate the care of services" by working out of the same building instead of separate sites. "And there may be even some cost-containment aspects to that, because they don't have to duplicate services."

Under the lease agreement, the hospital will retain the property, but is selling the equipment to PRN for about $2.4 million.

PRN has agreed to treat all MCHD non-insured or under-insured patients, often referred to as indigents.

Rubin said the hospital and MCHD board of directors are pleased with the agreement with PRN and Texas Oncology.

"We have a longtime relationship with these physicians, and together, we have developed a first-rate cancer-care program for the people of West Texas and eastern New Mexico," Rubin said.

The cancer support groups and other programs will continue under the agreement.

Co-plaintiff's attorney files for implant case re-trial

HOUSTON (AP) — The lawyer for Jennifer Ladner, whose co-plaintiff was awarded $5.2 million in their breast implant trial, filed a motion Friday for a new trial after his client received nothing.

Earlier this week, a judge released Dow Chemical Co. from the February verdict. The initial award had stipulated that the company pay 20 percent of the damages to Gladys Laas of Bellville.

State District Judge Michael Schneider ruled Tuesday that Dow Corning Corp., co-owned by Dow Chemical and Corning Inc., must pay the entire amount to Mrs. Laas.

Dow Corning made silicone implants from 1964 to 1992.

The 11-juror panel awarded no damages to Dr. Ladner, an Army cardiologist from El Paso.

Her attorney, Richard Mithoff, said his motion for a new trial was based on two factors.

The first relates to the conduct of one of the jurors. Monica Rey lived with her mother, who worked in the Houston law firm of Richard Sheehy that defended Dow Corning in the 10-week trial, Mithoff said.

Ms. Rey and her mother, Medisue Rey, shared the same joint checking account, Mithoff said.

"There were a number of contacts between the juror and her mother," he said. "She and her mother shared a joint bank account into which the Dow Corning law firm check was deposited twice a month."

Monica Rey has no phone listing.

The second factor has to do with withheld evidence, Mithoff said. He alleges in his motion that Dow Corning failed to produce in discovery documents containing damaging information about the quality of the company's testing of silicone breast implant materials.

"Dow Corning withheld very significant evidence and failed to disclose the results of their own internal audit," he said. "They called into question the validity of their own tests."

Dow Chemical of Midland, Mich., and Corning Inc. of Corning, N.Y., each own 50 percent of Dow Corning, also based in Midland, Mich.

Dow Corning had said it would appeal the original decision calling for damages to be paid to Mrs. Laas.

County denies deputy sheriff's widow benefits after his death

HOUSTON (AP) — The widow of a deputy sheriff killed in a traffic mishap on his way to work says the decision by the Harris County attorney's office that denies her workers' compensation benefits is "cold and callous."

"He gave his life in the line of duty," said Charlotte Yates, 42.

The county attorney's office has ruled that 43-year-old Ricky Yates was not on duty when he was killed.

But Mrs. Yates said the accident report states that her husband was on duty. He also was given a funeral with full honors, she said.

"He was killed because he was on county business. He would not have been on that road at the time except for the fact that he was ordered to go to an assignment by his supervisor," she said.

Harris County Sheriff Johnny Klevenhagen agrees with her. He said Yates was considered on duty at the time even though he had not reached his assigned location.

"There was no question in my mind that he was on duty. He had signed on, he was en route to his assignment," Klevenhagen said.

Yates, who was riding a department motorcycle, was killed in a head-on collision with a pickup truck Jan. 25, 1994.

Sheriff's Lt. S.E. Conroy, Yates' immediate supervisor, said he also considers that Yates was on duty because he had called Yates the night before and told him to go to work early and to do some traffic control work in Humble before reporting to his assigned patrol area.

But Senior Assistant County Attorney A.B. Crowther contends that since Yates was not yet at his job site and was not engaged in county or law enforcement duties when he was killed, his widow and three children are not eligible for the benefits.

"It is a very unfortunate situation, but we have to follow the law," Crowther said Thursday.

The workers' compensation payments to Mrs. Yates would consist of lifetime monthly payments of $464 unless she remarries.

"This just makes me so angry. My children and I are getting a raw deal. He was struck down in the prime of his life," Mrs. Yates said. "The simple matter is that it all comes down to money. They do not want to pay it."

Mrs. Yates appealed the decision to the Texas Workers Compensation Commission, but the appeal was denied. She has now taken her case to a higher-level appeals panel in Austin.

The county's position is that Yates was simply on his way to a work site and was not engaged in his job when he was killed, Crowther said.

State panel OKs bond repayment for super collider

AUSTIN (AP) — A state commission overseeing the dismantling of the super collider Friday authorized the repayment of $250 million in bonds that had been issued for construction of the giant atom smasher.

Shelton Smith, chairman of the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission, said the action would save the state at least $300 million in future interest payments.

"It's a very good deal for the people of Texas," Smith said. "What we've done today is going to save the people of this state a lot of money."

The super collider, which was under construction in Waxahachie, fell victim to the federal budget ax in October 1993, when Congress voted to kill the project.

An ensuing agreement between the U.S. Energy Department and state officials resulted in a $210 million cash payment to Texas as well as $700 million worth of property.

Smith said the construction bonds would be paid with proceeds of the $210 million cash settlement. Without the payment, the state would have to pay interest on the bonds for another 26 years.

"The sooner we start doing this, the sooner we start saving money," Smith said.

After the bonds are repaid, the state still will have about $100 million available cash, Smith said. Of that, the commission plans to use $65 million to complete the collider's partially completed linear accelerator and use it to build a proton-beam cancer therapy center.

Smith said the state has recouped virtually all of its $539 million investment in the project. However, the project itself would have produced much more, he said.

"We lost a project that would have produced $30 billion worth of economic activity in Texas over the next 20 years and thousands of jobs. Technically, we have lost that," he said.

U.N. cuts back mission in Croatia, deploys troops to borders

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council voted Friday to scale down the U.N. peacekeeping force in Croatia and deploy troops on the country's borders.

But the mandate is vague and does not deal with crucial issues such as the number of troops to be deployed and their exact mission.

The council unanimously agreed to split the U.N. force in Yugoslavia into three parts: a reduced force in Croatia and missions in Bosnia and Macedonia that will remain essentially unchanged.

The mandate comes after Croatia gave in to Western pressure and dropped its threat to expel the 12,000 U.N. peacekeepers stationed in Croatia after their mandate expired Friday.

Croatia has demanded that the U.N. soldiers take control of the borders and halt arms shipments to Croatian Serb rebels from their ethnic brethren in Bosnia and Serbia. The Croatian Serbs have opposed any change in the mission.

The new force in Croatia will be called the United Nations Confidence Restoration Operation in Croatia. Croatia had demanded that its name be in the title so as to imply recognition of Croatian sovereignty over all its territory, including the one-third held by rebel Serbs.

Croatian Serb leader Milan Martic opposed any change to the U.N. mandate or its name, saying in a letter to U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali that the new name "signifies an essential change in the mandate."

Martic warned against disregarding Croatian Serb demands, saying: "It is needless to warn you how greatly peace in the region could be affected in such an event."

The new mandate defines the peacekeepers' role in Croatia as monitoring and controlling "military personnel, equipment supplies and weapons" that cross the border. It does not authorize peacekeepers to use force to stop shipments or say whether they will have fixed posts or mobile patrols.

About 1,000 peacekeepers are expected to be posted on the border as part of a total force of 7,000 to 8,000 troops, according to U.S. officials.

The mandate says the force is an "interim arrangement to create the conditions that will facilitate a negotiated settlement."

"A peaceful settlement in Croatia is only possible if this ... is strictly implemented," Croatian Ambassador Mario Nobilo said.

The resolution calls on Boutros-Ghali to report to the council by April 21 on implementing the mandate.

In his speech to the council, Nobilo warned that Croatia considers itself to have "an exclusive right of veto in the upcoming negotiations."

In its earlier threat to expel peacekeepers, Croatia said their presence only cemented rebel Serb control over parts of the country. A 1991 war between Croatian forces and rebel Serbs left about 10,000 people dead.

There are about 22,000 peacekeepers in Bosnia and about 1,000 U.N. troops in Macedonia.

The new mission in Macedonia is called the United Nations Preventive Deployment Force, the resolution says, and the mission in Bosnia retains its current name, the U.N. Protection Force.

Romanian plane crashes, kills 59

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — A Romanian airliner crashed in a sleet storm minutes after taking off from Bucharest's airport on Friday. All 59 people on board were killed, including three Americans.

The plane, an Airbus A310 flown by Tarom airlines, was headed for Brussels, Belgium with 49 passengers and 10 crew. It had just left Otopeni airport when it crashed near the village of Balotesti, 13 miles north of Bucharest.

The cause of the crash was not immediately known. One witness, who would not give his name, said the plane exploded before crashing. Airline and government officials refused to comment on that report.

Tarom also said it received an anonymous bomb threat on a plane flying the same route earlier this month. No bomb was found on that plane.

Thousands of Rwandans attempt to flee Burundi; border closes

NGOZI, Burundi (AP) — Balancing mattresses, suitcases, water bottles and sacks of food on their heads, 50,000 refugees tried to flee Burundi on Friday before being forced to halt when Tanzania closed the border.

Most of the refugees — who arrived from neighboring Rwanda only last year — were expected to spend the night along the road while waiting to see if the border reopens today .

U.N. officials suggested the Burundi government and its Tutsi-dominated army was partly to blame for their panicked flight.

The Rwandan Hutus sought refuge in Burundi last summer, fearful of reprisals following massacres of up to 500,000 people, mostly Tutsis, during a civil war in their homeland.

This week they began fleeing Burundi, fearing they would be killed in its increasing ethnic violence.

Rwanda and Burundi have roughly the same ethnic mix: about 85 percent Hutu and 15 percent Tutsi. The groups have been fighting each other for political supremacy since their countries won independence from Belgium in 1962. Hundreds of thousands have been killed over the years.

The latest mass exodus was prompted by an attack Monday by armed men in one of seven Rwandan refugee camps near the north-central Burundi town of Ngozi. Twelve Rwandan refugees were killed and 22 wounded by unknown attackers at the Majuri camp.

"It's my second time as a refugee," said a 26-year-old former Rwandan school teacher who would identify herself only as Marianne. "I don't know where I come from anymore."

She was one of thousands, loaded down with possessions, forming a steady column for miles along the main road leading to Tanzania. One small boy lay exhausted by the side of the road.

The former refugee camp of Magara was deserted. Refugees had even stripped the roofs off their flimsy stick huts, leaving behind rows upon rows of barren, deserted dwellings.

About 1,500 refugees crossed at Kobero, Tanzania, on Thursday and 1,700 on Friday before the government shut the crossing. It was not known how long the border closure would last.

Most of those remaining on the road stopped near Gashoho — a town halfway along the 50-mile route to Tanzania — where U.N. workers tried to persuade them to turn back, said Peter Kessler, U.N. refugee agency spokesman in Nairobi, Kenya.

"Our people are talking to them, giving them water, calling for calm and asking them to return," he said. "Already, some hundreds have turned back," while many would probably spend the night at Gashoho.

Refugees, meanwhile, were unsure of their next step.

"The Tanzanian border has been closed and we have to decide what to do," said Eric Kompanyi, who walked at the head of the stream of refugees and said he was a leader from the Magara camp.

Sadako Ogata, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, urged area governments — especially Burundi — to respect refugee rights to safe asylum.

Monday's attack was one of a half-dozen similar assaults in and around the camps in the past six months, according to the U.N. refugee agency.

Refugees, aid workers and international observers have charged that the Tutsi-dominated Burundi army carries out or at least condones the attacks because the refugees are ethnic Hutu.

Sex scandal forces monk to surrender robe

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thousands of abject followers packed the streets to bid farewell Friday to one of Thailand's most popular religious figures, who was forced to surrender his monk's robe in a sex scandal.

Yantra Ammarobhikkhu was accused of breaking his vow of chastity by having sex with prostitutes. He denies ever going to a "temptation place," but he agreed to leave the monkhood to stop the brawling within his church over his extraordinary case.

"I don't want to take off my robe," he told The Associated Press.

Then he did. As he walked out of the Royal Temple at 3 p.m., about 2,000 followers surged forward, chanting "excellent one" as riot police stood by.

Many burst into tears when they noticed the 44-year-old man who had led them for 21 years no longer wore the brown robe of the monkhood.

"When I saw him in that green robe I got so upset," said 48-year-old Srivan Vanavichai, as the tears welled up in her eyes. "I can't believe he did anything wrong. I just had to break down. Everyone is so sorry because everybody loves him."

The Supreme Council of Buddhist Monks ignored for more than a year charges that Yantra had made love to several followers and even fathered a child. It was only about a month ago, when Yantra was charged with cavorting with prostitutes in Australia and New Zealand, that the council agreed to rule on the case.

On Monday, after a brief one-day hearing at which Yantra was not allowed to testify, the council ordered Yantra defrocked by Friday. Police were under orders to forcibly take the monk's robe off him if he didn't do it himself.

Breaking the oath of celibacy is one of the gravest offenses a Buddhist monk can commit. Yet, as tales about Yantra unfolded, other charges of hanky-panky among the country's holy men hit the papers on a regular basis.

If the practice of Theravada Buddhism — the religion of more than 90 percent of Thailand's people — has one overriding theme, it is the renunciation of desire, sexual and material.

Thailand's tolerant society nonetheless allows monks considerable leeway.

"So many girls and women have been attracted to (Yantra)," Ravee Bhavilai, a scholar of religion, told the AP in an interview last year. "But these people do not know what Buddhism is. They have their own image of a saint in their mind ... some place that is a vacuum in their psyche, and that is maybe why they are so mad about him."

Hillary Clinton visits, encourages oppressed women in Nepal

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — In a remote Himalayan valley, Hillary Rodham Clinton swirled a black and gold woven scarf around her shoulders and grinned with delight at the traditional craftwork.

"What you are doing is what I am trying to encourage," Mrs. Clinton told the woman artisan who had given her the scarf and who markets the work of hundreds of Nepali women.

Midway through her 12-day tour of South Asia, Mrs. Clinton arrived in this isolated mountain nation Friday to continue her diplomatic-but-determined push for better opportunities for women and children.

Almost nowhere are the needs greater: Ten out of every 100 babies die in infancy in Nepal and the maternal mortality rate of 8.5 deaths per 1,000 births is one of the highest in the world.

Literacy for women is 18 percent, compared with 52 percent for men. Women in rural areas work longer hours than do men, and Nepal is one of the rare countries in the world where women die sooner than men, with a life expectancy of 53 years. In addition, trafficking in women is a significant problem, with an estimated 5,000 to 7,000 girls abducted each year, many of them winding up in brothels in India.

Mrs. Clinton's first stop in Nepal was a health clinic where women learn about the importance of safe childbirth practices in a country where they traditionally give birth at home.

The first lady closely examined a tiny "safe home delivery kit" that contained such basic supplies as a sheet of plastic, a piece of string, a razor blade and soap. "Something like this, as we know around the world, can make an enormous difference if it is available," the first lady said.

Mrs. Clinton next visited a women's craft exhibit with her 15-year-old daughter Chelsea to highlight a program where the poor learn to turn traditional skills into a source of income.

One woman told the first lady she used to stay home and do housework, unable to read or write, until volunteers taught her to transfer her talents for painting on walls into making paintings on paper that can be sold.

Now, Mangela Thakur knows how to read, is unafraid to travel outside her village and earns her own income.

"Your story is so exciting," Mrs. Clinton told the woman, who gave her a brightly decorated painting. "This is beautiful work. I'm so glad the world can see it and I can have this to take home."

Chechens withdraw to preserve forces; last urban base falls

MOSCOW — Russian forces fighting in secessionist Chechnya said Friday that the last urban center of resistance to Moscow had fallen, marking a new stage in a three-and-a-half-month war that has already left up to 20,000 dead and created 250,000 refugees.

In the last two days, Chechen fighters loyal to President Dzhokhar M. Dudayev have abandoned their last two urban bases — Gudermes, Chechnya's second largest city, 25 miles east of the capital, Grozny; and Shali, a city 15 miles southeast of Grozny that fell Friday.

In both cases, Chechen forces withdrew after heavy artillery and air bombardment from encircling Russian forces. By withdrawing, the Chechens have preserved what remains of their fighting forces, ammunition and other materiel.

Chechen fighters will now regroup in the Caucasus mountains to the south and try to fight a guerrilla war of harassment and terror against superior Russian forces.

In the mountains, the Russians will find it harder to maneuver and will be unable to use tanks and other heavily armored vehicles. The mountains, however, provide little ground cover against Russian aircraft, and the Chechens lack anti-aircraft weapons.

Russian commanders say they will seek to control the major towns and the roads and railways between them, while trying to convince Chechen villages to force out the fighters and submit to Russian authority.

New home sales fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of new homes fell in February to the lowest level in nearly three years, but analysts said the latest sign of economic slowdown exaggerated weakness in the housing industry.

"The new home sales numbers are correct and they are incorrect," economist John A. Tuccillo of the National Association of Realtors told a housing outlook forum Wednesday. "They are correct in direction ... but don't believe the magnitude."

The Commerce Department report released shortly before the forum showed sales declined throughout the country, including the steepest plunge in the West in more than 13 years.

Overall, sales plummeted 14 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 551,000, smallest since 546,000 in April 1992. The drop was the largest since a 22 percent decline in January 1994.

The report led to a midmorning surge in stocks and bonds as traders saw more evidence the economy is not growing at an inflationary rate that would lead the Federal Reserve to increase interest rates again.

Although stocks and bonds lost steam in early afternoon, the Dow Jones Industrial average still closed at a record 4,160.80, up 8.99, erasing Tuesday's 5.53-point loss.

David Lereah, an economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association, told the outlook forum that "housing definitely has weakened," but suggested a "modest pickup during the spring home-buying season."

Economist David F. Seiders of the National Association of Home Builders, which sponsored the forum, predicted the 551,000 sales rate would be revised up to about 600,000 next month.

The new home sales report is based on relatively small sample surveys and often is revised.

In fact, the government said Wednesday that sales in January rose 2.6 percent, weaker than the 3.8 percent advance in the original estimate. Analysts said the gain was an aberration.

The latest report also showed sales much softer in December than first thought. The government revised that month's initial 0.9 percent increase to a 2.6 percent drop.

The decline in new home sales followed reports of slack existing home sales and a drop in construction of new houses. In fact, the report suggested even fewer housing starts as builders try to reduce their inventories.

It estimated that a seasonally adjusted 350,000 new houses were for sale at the end of February, the biggest backlog since 353,000 in June 1990.

The inventory represented a supply of 7.7 months at the current sales rate, up from 4.9 months a year earlier and the biggest backlog since 7.9 months in February 1991.

Sales during the first two months of 1995 were 12.5 percent below the level of the same period a year ago.

Jim Irvine of Portland, Ore., the home builders' group's president, said much of the housing softness has been caused by mortgage rates that climbed with seven Fed-engineered short-term rate increases in the last 13 months to curb inflation.

Computer analysis: Murderer talked to victims as he killed them

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A computerized re-creation of how Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman may have been killed contends the killer picked Goldman up with the point of his knife and talked to his victim as he stabbed him.

The assailant then did the same with Ms. Simpson, according to the computerized images generated by Failure Analysis Associates Inc. and released Friday.

"It's clear again that the assailant is talking to Nicole Simpson," Roger McCarthy, the company's chief executive officer, says in his narration of the 3 1/2-minute re-creation. "Before the final, fatal cut of her throat, there are three other small cuts on her throat. ...

"It's clearly again torture."

The animation was based on crime details from police and medical examiner reports, such as bruises and knife wounds; testimony in O.J. Simpson's murder trial, and research by Failure Analysis engineers, who visited the scene, McCarthy said.

Failure Analysis examines accidents and disasters for manufacturers, insurance companies and attorneys. The company created computer animations of the 1981 Hyatt-Regency walkway collapse in Kansas City and the 1989 Exxon Valdez oil spill in Alaska. In 1993, its computer imagery helped uncover NBC's faked tests on GM pickup trucks with side-mounted gas tanks.

The company's murder re-creation makes its public debut this weekend on "c-net central," a new program on the USA and Sci-Fi cable channels.

It starts with Goldman arriving, then talking with Ms. Simpson on the steps outside her condominium. Suddenly, the assailant lunges at them from the walkway behind.

The assailant strikes Goldman in the face with his left hand, knocking him down the steps to the ground. An instant later, the assailant strikes Ms. Simpson on the left side of her head with his right fist, wrapped around the butt of a knife. She falls down the steps and ends up crumpled against the retaining wall.

The killer turns first to Goldman, bending over him and jamming the point of his knife into the base of Goldman's skull.

He "actually uses the knife like a fork" to raise Goldman to his feet as he stands behind the victim, McCarthy says in the narration. That wound alone would have been fatal, he notes.

The killer then makes five shallow cuts in Goldman's cheek, and two more on his neck.

"It's obvious from the medical evidence that the assailant has a hand over Mr. Goldman's mouth, is having a talk with Mr. Goldman, and is emphasizing his points with the knife," McCarthy says.

The next blow wounds Goldman right above his heart. He is struck several times more, then is pushed into the fence and drops to the ground, where he is later found dead. The murderer then returns to Ms. Simpson.

"The assailant then uses the same technique to lift her as he does Mr. Goldman," McCarthy says.

The final slash across her throat, so deep it nicks her spine, required great strength, he says.

There is no question the killer first talked to and tortured his victims, McCarthy told The Associated Press in an interview.

"The number of wounds and their character make no sense if they are just delivered silently," he said. McCarthy said that although this detail was not included in the animation, forensic evidence indicates the killer held Ms. Simpson's head back after slicing her throat to allow her blood to pour out and pool around her body in a particular way.

When he has finished the stabbings, the animated killer realizes he has dropped his knit cap. He walks down the steps through Ms. Simpson's blood to look for the cap but in the dark is forced to take off his gloves to search the ground near Goldman. The cap and one glove were later found near Goldman's body.

Something — perhaps the dog or a neighbor's voice — interrupts the search and the assailant flees back through the walkway, McCarthy says.

The re-creation differs from the crime scene in two major points, McCarthy notes — the figures act in bright light, rather than the shadows of night, and the animation is bloodless.

Spending cuts, tax breaks entangle Senate in dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican hopes of speeding $15 billion in budget cuts through the Senate were jarred Friday as angry lawmakers became entangled in disputes over social programs, taxes on the rich and the Mexican bailout.

As debate over the spending-cuts measure and another bill restoring a tax deduction for the self-employed evolved into a political streetfight, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., delayed further work until Monday. But first, he accused Democrats of offering amendments aimed merely at scoring points with voters, and he delivered a threat to President Clinton.

"We're not bringing up any more bills that the White House wants until we have some understanding on the legislation that we thought would go through here in a normal way," said a scowling Dole. "If the president doesn't care, that's good enough for me. If he doesn't want this legislation, we're not going to take it up. But neither are we going to take up legislation that he wants."

Democrats responded that Republicans had played politics of their own on Thursday.

Republicans had wanted to complete work Friday on the spending-cuts measure. The measure would trim billions from money already approved for housing, education, public broadcasting and scores of other programs as the GOP starts whittling away at federal deficits. The House already has approved its own version of the bill.

U.S. steps up pressure on Japan in trade dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — Turning up the pressure on Japan, the Clinton administration took the first step Friday in establishing a "hit list" of countries with the most harmful barriers against American companies.

Japan was one of 41 countries and four trading groups cited by the administration in its annual review of the most onerous trade barriers around the world.

The annual "Foreign Trade Barriers Report" is used as the basis for targeting countries in coming months for intensive negotiations aimed at removing the practices deemed objectionable by the United States.

If those negotiating sessions fail, the administration would have the power to impose trade sanctions equal to the damage being done to U.S. industries.

While countries from Argentina to Zimbabwe made this year's list, the potential negotiating targets will represent a far smaller group focused on areas where the United States is running the biggest trade deficits.

In that category, Japan led the list of citations, taking up 41 pages in this year's report. The 15-member European Union was next with 28 pages of U.S. criticism, followed by China with 19 pages of alleged trade abuses.

If negotiating sessions fail, the administration would have the power to impose trade sanctions equal to the damage being done to U.S. industries.

The administration this week resumed negotiations with Japan on the issue of autos and auto parts, which accounted for nearly 60 percent of the America's record $65.7 billion with Japan, and the report devoted a good deal of space to criticizing Japan in the automotive area.

"The U.S. government is strongly dissatisfied with the absence of progress in the auto and auto parts area," the report said. "Every effort will be made in the near future to encourage the government of Japan and Japanese companies to move forward" in renewing their voluntary purchase agreements for parts and lifting various barriers.

The administration's top negotiators made it clear Friday that the next few weeks would be critical in determining whether a deal can be reached to boost U.S. sales by expanding the dealer network carrying American cars and relaxing regulations that prevent use of American-made parts for repairs.

Ira Shapiro, the lead negotiator in the auto talks for the U.S. Trade Office, said that he expected the discussions to resume in mid-April in Washington. President Clinton's Cabinet recently approved moving up a Sept. 30 deadline for reaching a deal on replacement parts to sometime this spring.

The U.S. trade barrier report followed release earlier this week of a similar report by the Japanese government complaining about unfair American trade practices, including the repeated threat of sanctions against other countries.

Japan and other countries complain that America's threats represent unilateral bullying that is in violation of the dispute settlement processes established under world trade rules.

Shapiro, in releasing the report, said that the Japanese complaints did not change the administration's commitment to force open closed Japanese markets as a way of narrowing a overall trade deficit that hit a record $166.3 billion last year.

The American Automobile Manufacturers Association said that the new barriers report "confirms once again that although Japan demands free trade everywhere else in the world, it remains protectionist at home."

But William Duncan, Washington director of the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association, blasted the report as a "one-sided misrepresentation of Japan's auto markets and industry."

The new report has the formal title of the "1995 National Trade Estimate Report on Foreign Trade Barriers."

It will be used to designate "priority" negotiating countries in such areas as a failure to protect U.S. copyrights and patents, improper restrictions on government bidding procedures and a provision of law known as Super 301, reserved for what the administration deems as the most harmful barriers.

The administration noted that Sept. 30 will be the deadline for designating countries under Super 301. Last year, the administration used the Super 301 threat to force last-minute agreements on the part of Japan in several areas outside of autos.

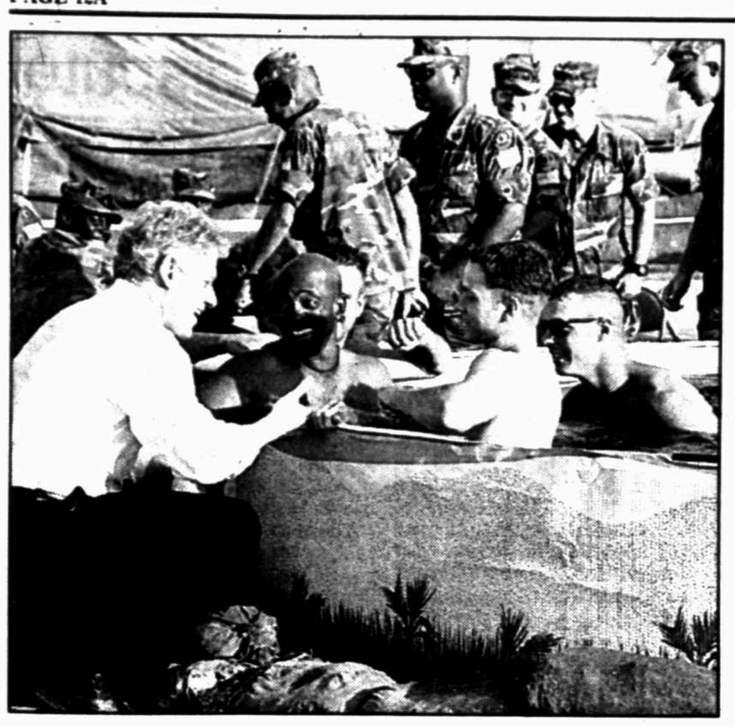
Clinton declares U.S. mission in Haiti success



AP Laserphoto

President Clinton visits with U.S. troops in a kiddie pool at the Warrior Base in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, Friday.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — With doves and balloons filling the air and Jean-Bertrand Aristide at his side, President Clinton declared the U.S. mission to Haiti a "remarkable success" Friday and turned over peacekeeping duties to the United Nations.

"We celebrate the restoration of democracy to your country," Clinton told thousands of cheering Haitians at the National Palace, six months after U.S. forces peacefully occupied the Caribbean nation to oust the military leaders. "Never again must it be stolen away."

In a nine-hour visit, Clinton also met with U.S. troops, many soon to return home, and pronounced the U.S.-led military mission to restore Aristide to power a success.

Clinton received a hero's welcome in the Haitian capital. The government pronounced the day a national holiday — Clinton Day — and thousands of Haitians thronged the palace grounds for Clinton's speech.

The festivities were clouded by new allegations suggesting a link between a senior member of Aristide's government and a political assassination plot.

But Clinton lavished praise on the 41-year-old Catholic priest-turned-politician who was elected in 1990, ousted by the Haitian military in 1991 and returned to power last Oct. 15.

"His strength in the face of great challenge reflects the unbreakable will of the Haitian people," Clinton said, speaking under a hot, hazy blue tropical sky.

For his part, Aristide — who has denied any wrongdoing by the Cabinet member — returned the praise, crediting Clinton for helping Haiti to move "from death to life." He also expressed gratitude to the U.S. troops "who helped restore democracy to our country."

Despite the reduced role of the United States, Clinton vowed to continue to help Haiti complete national recovery and help it prepare for its June 4 legislative elections.

But in a concession to the difficulties still faced in the impoverished nation with a long history of violence, Clinton conceded: "The path ahead will not be easy. ... Justice does not bloom overnight."

The visit — the first by a U.S. president since Franklin Roosevelt came here 60 years ago — gave Clinton a chance to savor the fruits of his boldest foreign policy gamble.

At "Warrior Base Haiti," a makeshift military encampment that houses 1,700 troops, Clinton stood against a backdrop of military equipment and camouflage netting and told American forces, many of them soon to be headed for home:

"Thank you for being democracy's warriors. Thank you for helping to bring back the promise of liberty to this long-troubled land."

Then, coatless under a broiling sun, he plunged into the crowd and pumped hands.

Research: Virtual reality treatment can reduce fears

NEW YORK (AP) — This is how terrified Christopher Klock was of heights: While friends enjoyed the view from a glass elevator that rose 72 stories to a restaurant, Klock trudged up the stairs.

"Anything over a story and I'd get sweaty palms ... and weak in the knees," the 21-year-old Atlanta college student recalled.

But that was before Klock entered a "virtual reality" world where he could get used to riding glass elevators, walking across bridges high above a canyon and gazing out from balconies — all without leaving the ground.

These realistic, computer-generated scenes can truly reduce a person's fear of heights, researchers report in the April issue of the American Journal of Psychiatry.

It's a high-tech twist on standard phobia treatment, which involves exposing people to frightening situations with support from a therapist so they can overcome their fears.

That can take a lot of costly therapist time if it means traveling from the office to high places. Some therapists won't do that. And doing such treatment in public places can compromise a patient's right to confidentiality, said psychologist Barbara Rothbaum of the Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta, one of the researchers.

The study participants receiving therapy by way of virtual reality wore high-tech helmets to experience the virtual world.

The technique's effectiveness with fear of heights suggests it is also worth studying for more complicated problems, Rothbaum said. Vietnam veterans with post-traumatic stress disorder, for example, might fly over the jungle in virtual Huey helicopters to help them come to terms with war memories.

In the study, 10 college students who feared heights went through seven weekly sessions of 35 to 45 minutes each. With supportive comments from a therapist, they experienced riding a 49-story glass elevator, gazing from progressively higher balconies leading up to one on the 20th floor, and making their way across three footbridges up to 260 feet above a canyon river.

"It was very realistic," Klock said. "Within about 20 or 30 seconds you felt like you were there."

The scenes made knees go weak, palms sweat and hearts race, said computer expert Larry Hodges of the Georgia Institute of Technology, another author of the study. The sessions were done in his lab.

Before the experiment started, the students filled out questionnaires that measured their distress about heights. After the last treatment session, they filled out the questionnaire again, and they showed significant improvement.

By that point, seven participants had gone to real-world high places on their own.

The idea of virtual reality therapy is "definitely interesting and it's worthwhile exploring more, because it could become quite useful in treatment," said Michelle Craske, associate professor of psychology and director of the anxiety disorders behavioral program at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Hodges said that with personal computers becoming increasingly powerful, the hardware will probably be available for $20,000 by next year. The unpatented software would be "somewhere between free and lots of money," he said.

As for Klock, he said he still has a "small fear" of heights but "I can get out and I can overcome it. ... It doesn't inhibit me from doing things anymore."

And he has conquered that 72-story glass elevator.

"I was able to go, take some of my friends with me and show them I could go all the way up to the top," he said.

Former flight attendant sues Dallas airlines for religious discrimination

DALLAS (AP) — A former Southwest Airlines flight attendant is threatening to sue the Dallas-based airline, alleging it provided a hostile workplace for Christians.

In a complaint filed with the federal Equal Opportunity Commission, Vanessa McCauley of Euless says she was effectively fired last fall after 12 years on the job. She says the airline forbade her to read the Bible while in uniform, to wear a small religious necklace or to discuss religion with other employees.

Ms. McCauley is an ordained minister affiliated with the non-denominational Stepping Stone Family Church of Burleson.

Southwest officials said the airline does not discriminate against people and that Ms. McCauley was not fired, disciplined or reprimanded. She was, however, "counseled" by supervisors after two other flight attendants complained in October that Ms. McCauley was reading the Bible while in uniform and wearing the necklace, company officials said.

"Southwest carries customers of all religious beliefs, and we don't desire to offend any of them either intentionally or inadvertently ," said spokeswoman Ginger Hardage.

Ms. McCauley, 37, said she never disputed Southwest's company policy prohibiting attendants from reading while working on a flight.

Operation Rescue moves next door to clinic

DALLAS (AP) — Taking up a literal front-line position in the battle over abortion, Operation Rescue is moving its headquarters next door to an abortion clinic — one that employs the woman who was at the center of Roe vs. Wade.

"It's a tremendous place. At the killing center, at the gates of hell, is where the church of Jesus Christ needs to be," said the Rev. Flip Benham, Operation Rescue's national director.

Employees at A Choice for Women, a clinic that has been offering abortions at 9222 Markville Dr. since 1991, looked on in horror Friday as the militant anti-abortion group known for blockading clinics moved in at 9224 Markville.

The two now sit in offices side by side — separated only by a wall — in the same two-story office building.

"I'm horrified. I'm sure it could escalate into a lot of violence," said Norma McCorvey, marketing director for the clinic. "My main concern is for our clinic and the safety of our doctor."

McCorvey was "Jane Roe," the woman whose demand for an abortion led to the 1973 Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court ruling establishing the right to one.

On the sidewalk, Benham beamed as he helped move furniture. He insisted it was a coincidence that Operation Rescue rented space next to the clinic when the lease on the group's national headquarters elsewhere in Dallas expired.

'We did not orchestrate this. We are not smart enough or shrewd enough. It was almighty God.'
— Flip Benham
Operation Rescue national director

"We did not orchestrate this," he said. "We are not smart enough or shrewd enough. It was almighty God."

Benham turned abruptly and grinned at McCorvey, who had come outside to watch. "Hey Norma! We're on for lunch today!" he shouted. "Don't forget!"

Benham admitted that being neighbors gives anti-abortion activists more access to clinic patrons. The group already talked one woman out of an abortion Friday morning, he said.

"We couldn't come on this property, and now we are tenants of the property. And believe me, that's God," Benham said.

McCorvey said she had asked the clinic's lawyers to see if Operation Rescue is violating the 1994 law that makes it a federal crime to interfere with abortion activities by means of force, the threat of force or physical obstruction.

The manager of the office complex, Warren Gilbert Jr., did not immediately return a call.

Meanwhile, McCorvey showed a letter she received from Gilbert's company Thursday nearly doubling the clinic's rent. The letter said Gilbert's insurance company "substantially increased our annual premium" because the clinic's real estate broker "did not accurately represent the nature of your business."

The letter says the clinic must pay an additional $35,600 in rent for 1995 to cover the premium increase. McCorvey said the clinic has been paying $3,500 a month, including insurance, or $42,000 a year.

Gilbert has been involved in recent years with scandals involving Texas A&M athletes and federal housing funds.

In 1993, Gilbert wrote off improper payments to Aggie football players as maintenance fees for some federally subsidized apartments. Last year, the Department of Housing and Urban Development said it would try to force Gilbert to repay more than $900,000 the agency said he misappropriated for federal housing projects.

Officials say man used AIDS virus as deadly weapon in sexual assaults

AUSTIN (AP) — A man charged with killing a Mexican teen-ager has been accused of using the AIDS virus as a deadly weapon in two sexual assaults on the girl.

Indictments accuse Jose Najera, who has the human immunodeficiency virus, of using a deadly weapon in sexual assaults on 16-year-old Maria Escalante. The alleged deadly weapon is "his penis and bodily fluids."

Prosecutors said Thursday the fact that the charge stems from the AIDS virus may be ground-breaking in Texas.

Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle said the unusual step was taken "because the facts warranted it."

"This little girl died a horrible death," he said. "She was abused sexually as well as physically in ways that have outraged and saddened all of us. The grand jury speaks for the whole community with these indictments."

Miss Escalante died of exposure Jan. 4 after Najera doused her with water and forced her to spend the night on the roof of his home in northern Travis County in near-freezing temperatures, authorities said.

Indictments returned Wednesday accuse Najera, 40, of murder and two counts each of aggravated sexual assault and indecency with a child. The allegation of a deadly weapon raised the sexual assault charges to an aggravated case.

Under Texas law, a deadly weapon is defined as anything "that in the manner of its use or intended use is capable of causing death or serious bodily injury," said Assistant District Attorney Mary Farrington.

Hands, feet, water, fire and cars have been found to be deadly weapons in previous cases, she said.

Some AIDS activists have charged that cases in which the AIDS virus is used as a deadly weapon often spring from bias and fear and are intended to prejudice the jury against the defendant.

Nevertheless, at least 25 states have laws that either prohibit the intentional transmission of the AIDS virus or allow transmission of the virus to be used against a defendant in cases such as sexual assault.

Najera also faces three counts of indecency with a child on charges of exposing himself to 15-year-old Oscar Pescador, who was living with him.

Pescador told authorities that Najera forced him and Miss Escalante to sleep outdoors in wet clothing in near-freezing temperatures as a form of punishment.

Pescador also told investigators he had witnessed Najera having sex with Miss Escalante and that Najera often beat them and refused to let them eat. The events that led to Miss Escalante's death began when the girl ate bread because she was hungry, investigators said.

Mexico residents have said Najera often brought young people across the border to work at his home or in his lawn-care business and that he controlled the youths to the point that they could have no contact with their relatives or others.

Echoes of Spencer Tracy

Hanks' modesty, gratitude a breath of fresh air

By Janet Weeks
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — With his second consecutive Best Actor award, Tom Hanks achieves a feat last accomplished in 1938 by Spencer Tracy, an actor to whom Hanks' easy style often is compared.

The Shrine Auditorium audience rose to its feet in a standing ovation as Hanks walked to the stage.

After accepting the Oscar from Holly Hunter, last year's Best Actress winner, Hanks, 38, thanked others in the "Forrest Gump" cast and, choking up, thanked his wife, actress Rita Wilson.

"I am standing here because the woman I share my life with has taught me and demonstrates for me every day just what love is."

He also said he was so excited that "I feel like I'm standing on magic legs in a special effect that is too unbelievable to imagine and far too costly to make a reality.

"The power and the pleasure and the emotion of this moment is a constant — the speed of light. It will nev-

Elton John returns to familiar territory with his latest release, "Made in England."

Elton resurfaces yellow brick road

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff Writer

We can thank Elton John's grandmother for this one.

The brilliant British singer-composer who in the last month has won both a Grammy and an Oscar, has capped off the month of March with "Made in England," a sterling collection of songs that amounts to his finest record since 1973's "Goodbye Yellow Brick Road."

■ Music

After Elton performed the Oscar-winning song "Can You Feel The Love Tonight" last week at the Academy Award ceremony, he dedicated his statuette to his grandmother, who had died two weeks earlier. John gave his grandmother credit for the success he still experiences 25 years after his career first began for first sitting him down at the piano when he was only three years old.

Well over 40 now, Elton John can still write powerful pop melodies. Listening critically to his albums through the years has been at times difficult since his writing partner, Bernie Taupin, is no Harry Chapin.

Despite the somewhat feeble lyrics on "Made in England,"

Is 'Ellen' trying to tell us something?

By Joyce Millman
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — When Ellen DeGeneres' ABC sitcom, "These Friends of Mine," debuted a year ago, it seemed like a pale imitation of "Seinfeld" riding on the coattails of one of TV's cushiest lead-ins, "Roseanne."

But several changes of cast and focus later, "Ellen" is a genuine hit, often landing in the Nielsen Top 10 and out-rating "Roseanne."

Not bad for a prime example of a don't-ask, don't-tell sitcom.

Like Jerry Seinfeld on "Seinfeld," "Ellen" has DeGeneres playing a version of her stand-up comedy self. DeGeneres is Ellen Morgan, an L.A. bookstore owner who hangs out with her two best friends, Adam (Arye Gross, a holdover from the original version) and Paige (Joely Fisher, a composite of the two actresses dumped from the original).

Kathy Bates stars in Stephen King's latest thriller, "Dolores Claiborne," a film about a successful New York journalist suddenly forced to confront her troubled past.

King targets mother-daughter relationships

By Bob Strauss
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — "Dolores Claiborne's" obvious mysteries — did the frowsy, plain-spoken New Englander kill her insufferable employer and/or, two decades earlier, her abusive husband? — are pretty easy to figure out.

But the film's unexpected, richer mysteries — those embedded deep in the souls of an unreadable mother and her resentful daughter — provide the real fascination. Never before has a movie derived from a Stephen King novel been so fundamentally concerned with the frightening ugliness of human nature; the only monsters in this picture are those inside people's heads.

At first, King queen Kathy Bates, who won a Best Actress Oscar for "Misery," looks like she may be trying to repeat the winning formula. The film opens with an unseen argument at the top of a staircase between Dolores and the crotchety old rich witch, Vera (Judy Parfitt), for whom she keeps house. Soon, Vera is tumbling down out of a wheelchair, almost to her death; the next thing we know, Dolores is frantically searching the kitchen for an object blunt enough to finish the job.

■ "Dolores Claiborne" is playing at the North Park Cinema.

But the similarities between long-suffering Dolores Claiborne and trash fiction-addled Annie Wilkes diverge from there. And Dolores takes us in much more interesting mental directions.

One long, boring parade of stuffed shirts

Q: What is almost as long as and equally boring to the O.J. Simpson trial?

A: The Academy Awards Show, of course.

Monday night, 31,000,500 — myself included — blindly devoted three hours, 31 minutes of our lives to watching Arthur Hiller and his glittery Hollywood populace of stuffed shirts and wonder bras pat itself on the back.

Patterson

Like millions of others, the only reason worth watching (or so we thought) was David Letterman. Seeing just how the caustic talk show host would handle the ever-proud screen stars made even a borderline cynic's mouth water. But even Letterman was largely a flop. He was his usual acerbic self, and quite funny at times; it's just that the Shrine Auditorium was not the perfect setting for his humor, considering the building's occupants on this night.

If you were lucky enough to have spent your time Monday night doing something more worthy (like removing the lint from between your toes, for instance) the high points of the evening came courtesy of Steve Martin, Jamie Lee Curtis, and a stinging jewel of a barb thrown from Letterman and aimed straight at Susan Sarandon and Tim Robbins.

Martin endeared himself to the crowd with an age-old joke, delivered with stunningly perfect timing, an element of comedy at which he has always been masterful.

"I still remember sitting in a darkened theater with my arm around 17-year-old Mary Jo Rasmussen, trying to get to first base," Martin said. "I can even remember the name of the film: 'The Lion King.' "

But it was the comedian's had-to-be-there poke at Hiller, president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences, that resonated longer.

Curtis survived a rather corny entrance, modeled after her helicopter-hanging moment in "True Lies," to stick it to the academy members, saying that her turn as hostess of the academy's Science and Technology Awards presentation two weeks earlier made for a better time because those involved in that segment of the industry were having "a lot more fun than you are."

And then there was Letterman, who completely derailed Sarandon and mate Tim Robbins as they approached the podium to present an award.

"Pay attention," Letterman warned. "I'm sure they're (...) off about something."

It seems that not a year goes by that Sarandon and Robbins don't hoist themselves atop a soapbox to speak on behalf of their chosen disenfranchised group or cause of the year. In 1994, it was the Haitians. There have been others.

And therein lies the root of the Oscar problem: These actors, these people who are supposed to merely entertain us, take themselves entirely too seriously. Their role in society is not to preach to us about morality, urban blight or other social cancers. Their role is to take a pie in the face, or to make us cry because they have been cast as a parent who is going through a particularly difficult divorce.

The podium from which they speak at their annual awards ceremony should also be devoted to entertaining us and to show us their modesty — if that's possible — upon receiving such a grand honor. Leave the politics at home, and just make me laugh or cry.

The other thing glaringly wrong with the Academy Awards is that the grandeur of it all overshadows the more modest winners, such as the immensely likable Tom Hanks.

Someone please explain to me why a costume designer feels it necessary to wear to the Oscar ceremony a dress designed of nothing but American Express Gold

ELLEN: Show sheds 'Seinfeld' image, develops own personality

(From 1B)

Ellen Morgan is a nice, intelligent klutz making fun of her own foibles and musing about the weirdities of modern urban life. Like DeGeneres, Ellen Morgan favors androgynous trouser outfits, minimal makeup and short, no-fuss hair. She's good-looking in a clean, sturdy, gym-teacherish way.

Every so often, Ellen Morgan takes a stab at a relationship. She and Adam, her pal since college, try making out to see if their erotic dreams about each other are worth acting on. Nope — no chemistry. She goes out with Nitro from "American Gladiators," but suddenly he calls it quits — no chemistry. She dates a guy who thinks the world of her and wants to get married, but she breaks it off — no chemistry.

Ellen Morgan isn't the first sitcom single woman who had trouble finding Mr. Right.

But Mary Richards and Rhoda Morganstern didn't throw off the, um, gender-neutral vibe that Ellen Morgan does. As a single-gal sitcom, "Ellen" doesn't make any sense at all, until you view it through the looking glass where the unspoken subtext becomes the main point.

Then "Ellen" is transformed into one of TV's savviest, funniest, slyest shows.

Ellen Morgan is a closet lesbian. That's why she gets no thrill from the guys she dates. That's why she's always dissing Paige for her man-chasing ways and boy-toy outfits.

Paige is some network busybody's idea of a sexy babe to counter Ellen's androgyny. Every time Ellen calls Paige a slut (it's their little running joke), she asserts her superiority as a woman who doesn't define herself through What Men Want.

"Ellen" has been tossing off frisky gay and lesbian jokes all season. The would-be fiance was played by the same actor who just a couple of weeks before had made an indelible impression on "Frasier" a gay radio station manager. Then there's Ellen's friend Peter (semi-regular Patrick Bristow), the queerest TV character not identified as gay since Felix Unger.

In the episode in which Ellen takes adult education ballet lessons, Peter turns up as her teacher. Determined to win the lead in the class production of "Giselle," Ellen invites him to dinner, except she's supposed to have dinner at her parents' that night, so she brings him along.

Ellen's parents, overjoyed that she has finally brought home a man, break out their best wine and fast forward to weddings and grandchildren. Ellen's father is impressed with Peter. "He reminds me a lot of myself at that age," he beams.

Is "Ellen's" subtle goofing on middle America's view of sexuality intentional? Maybe. Or maybe not — it (ital) is (end ital) a little strange how the characters on "Ellen" never talk about sexual orientation and how they never seem to interact with any out gay people.

It's hard to imagine "Ellen" doing an episode like "Seinfeld's" "The Outing," which addressed real-life tabloid speculation about Seinfeld's sexual orientation. It's even harder to imagine "Ellen" doing an episode like the famed Roseanne-kisses-a-lesbian installment of "Roseanne."

But, then, in the subtext-is-everything interpretation of "Ellen," Ellen and Peter don't have to declare their sexuality because they assume everybody is gay or lesbian the way hetero sitcom characters assume everybody is hetero.

"Ellen" is at its best when it lets DeGeneres show off her gift for physical comedy.

When Ellen flails around her living room on new roller blades, or smiles broadly in self-satisfaction when she masters a complex exercise machine, or decks Ice in a jousting match on "American Gladiators" and screams a victory-mad, "Who wants a piece of me now?" she's Lucille Ball reincarnate. An ordinary woman with extraordinary faith in herself, Ellen, like Lucy, believes that she can be anything.

And in "Ellen's" most endearing flip of the "I Love Lucy" formula, Adam is Ellen's Ethel. Ellen is strong and agile; Adam is a flabby weakling. Nervous Ellen can put on a convincing show of confidence; Adam is a hopeless wimp. Ellen is always crisply turned out; Adam is frumpy. Like all the best sidekicks, Adam makes Ellen look good.

But Adam has a few skeletons in his, er, closet that come in handy too. When Ellen has trouble with her ballet lessons, Adam reveals his boyhood passion for dance and coaches her into shape. And when the lead dancers are injured (by Ellen) right before show time, Adam and Ellen leap into the spotlight.

In the side-splitting climax of the ballet episode, Ellen Morgan was either a plucky scrapper overcoming the nay-sayers to make her dream come true, or a dyke in a tutu doing the best Lucy since Lucy. Either way, there was no more liberating sitcom moment all season.

CLAIBORNE: A grim foray into appalling

(From 1B)

Her mother's subsequent arrest draws driven journalist Selena St. George (Jennifer Jason Leigh) back home — a cloud-socked, offshore Maine island — for the first time in 15 years. Certain that Dolores killed her alcoholic father (David Strathairn) 22 years earlier, Selena had cut off contact with her mother. A regimen of scotch and prescriptions effectively has cut the seething Selena off from most other nurturing human contact, as well. Neither woman is in the best mood for such a crisis-driven reunion.

Also convinced that Dolores got away with murder those many years ago is state police detective John Mackey (Christopher Plummer). Like a typical King straw man, he's determined to nail her this time, thereby erasing the only blemish on his otherwise perfect conviction record.

But Mackey is the only thing like a two-dimensional plot device in "Dolores Claiborne." The three women prove to be constant sources of emotional surprise: crude, cussed Dolores covering up a beaten but still beating heart; venomous Selena hiding from a hurt even her crack reporter's skills haven't fathomed; vicious Vera insisting on the deepest, darkest acts of female bonding imaginable.

As you might expect, this grim foray into loathsomeness is an actress' paradise. Bates gets to play two characters, the younger, still hopeful Dolores in flashbacks and the wearied, 50-something version. She does an expert job of keeping both personas distinct while remembering what links them; it's a poignant portrait of how an individual life can be robbed of almost everything worth living for, yet thrive regardless. Kudos also to Luigi Rocchetti for the supplest old-age makeup we've seen in a dog's age.

Nobody plays devastated better than Leigh, and rarely has she looked and acted as persuasively ravaged as she does here. Although the root of Selena's troubles is as predictable as the murder investigation's outcome, Leigh plays it with such raw, wounded fury that its final revelation seems anything but pat.

For her part, British actress Parfitt ("The Jewel in the Crown") finds the fun and sympathy in her nasty character as well, providing some lip-smacking — and much-needed — comedy relief from the harrowing proceedings.

Those who've read King's novel realize by now that the movie takes substantial liberties with the material. The adult Selena is the invention of screenwriter Tony Gilroy, as is much of the film's complex, flashback/hallucinatory narrative structure.

King reportedly approves of Gilroy's ideas, as well he should; I can't imagine the story being half as engrossing without Selena and the shattered time frame. Director Taylor Hackford ("An Officer and a Gentleman") respects the script with some nice visual coding (gray and cold for contemporary scenes, sunnier and slightly surreal for the past), and by rather boldly allowing Dolores and Selena to just go at each other, as only a mother and daughter can, at length.

PATTERSON: These guys need to lighten up

(From 1B)

Cards? I know, I know, it's the outrageousness of it all. But in her attempts to be outlandish, designer Lizzy Gardiner further lends proof to the entirely credible notion that Hollywood is utterly and completely out of touch with mainstream America.

Hanks, on the other hand, is one of those rare beings who continues to make going to the movies fun. Further, his acceptance speeches at the Oscars are beautiful works of impromptu, heartfelt sincerity. He is a gifted actor and a throwback to the older days when motion picture stars at least seemed more genuine and more concerned with entertaining us than winning public accolades and millions of dollars.

Hanks notwithstanding, the Academy Awards show ... I'm sorry, the Academy Award presentation, or gala, or extravaganza, or whatever ... was yet another stodgy disaster; an endless parade of beautiful people more interested in winning a contest for who can create the grandest cleavage by wearing the smallest dress; an endless array of star after star strutting its stuffed shirts and basking in the glow of the moment.

For our sake and their own, can't these people just lighten up and have some fun — and let us in on it — next year?

RADIO NOTE: The first time I heard Julie Rich on the radio, it was a Saturday and I was on my way to Lubbock. I thought maybe I was picking up a Lubbock station when I first heard that delivery and that voice. Or I thought maybe some strange atmospheric condition had momentarily blessed me with reception of a Dallas station. I later learned Julie was a new voice on KNFM; a voice that would soon become one of the most recognizable in the local market.

Rich has always been a consummate professional with a crystal clean, smile-driven delivery who will land in whatever market she chooses. For now, she has selected KAJA-FM, a country station in San Antonio, where she started work last Thursday, the day after she left Midland-Odessa.

For almost five years, radio fans who listen to KNFM have no doubt counted Julie among their favorites. Her talents, abilities — and most of all her gracious nature — will be missed.

JOHN: Songwriter comes full circle with latest

(From 1B)

the big Elton John sound that was so apparent back in the 1970s and early 1980s returns in full force with "Made In England."

John recently told Time magazine that "Made In England" is his third — and best — album since achieving sobriety in 1990 after 16 years of drug and alcohol abuse.

Elton's 1992 album, "The One" was certainly no slouch, but with "Made In England," the master composer proves that age knows no boundaries when penning excellent pop music riffs.

From the hauntingly elegant strains of the leadoff single "Believe," with its climactic guitar riff resembling The Beatles' "I Want You," to the infectiously catchy "Pain," Elton shows he remains a top-flight popular composer. Few artists in this lifetime have written such brilliant melodies with the consistency Elton John has.

With "Made In England," Elton is joined again with Paul Buckmaster, the arranger responsible for such mid-70s classics as "Goodbye Yellow Brick Road" and "Captain Fantastic." Buckmaster's lavish orchestrations can be found on four songs, while ex-Beatles producer George Martin tinkers enough with the strings and brass in "Latitude" that the classy waltz conjures up distinct images of Elton's "Tumbleweed Connection" -era work.

Elton's career can be clearly divided into three main phases: pre-"Goodbye Yellow Brick Road," from the late '60s to 1974; the post-"Yellow Brick" period, which included works like "Caribou," "Captain Fantastic," "Rock of the Westies" and "Jump Up!," and the dreadful creative dry spell which followed "Too Low for Zero" and preceded "The One."

With Elton's contributions to "The Lion King" and with this latest album, the songwriter has come full circle and is once again making the most of what his creativity and prowess will allow.

"Made in England" doesn't rip off his own '70s style, but it does take us back to that bold sound that made Elton what he remains today.

The album contains only one brief lackluster spot in "Belfast" which, with Taupin's attempt to discuss Ireland's political problems, only falls flat with an equally tired melody.

Of the remaining 46-plus minutes, "Believe," "Pain," "Please," "Man," "Blessed," "Cold" and the title song stand among the finest songs Elton has ever written.

As for the remainder of the album, songs like "Lies," and "House" are still vintage Elton melodies that can be enjoyed over and over.

And we owe it all to Elton's grandma. Grade: A-

COUNTRY MUSIC MEMO

Brooks standing inside the fire

By Paulette Flowers and Otto Kitsinger

Garth Brooks went from playing a Fig Newton in his school play to becoming the biggest-selling country musician in history.

Garth Brooks played "a big Fig Newton" in the fourth grade, and his first guitar only had three strings. He was booed off the stage in a high-school talent contest because he sang a country song. He wanted to be a baseball player but "stank at baseball," so he attended Oklahoma State on a track scholarship and earned a degree in advertising.

He met his wife, Sandy, while working as a bouncer at the Tumbleweed Ballroom in Stillwater, Okla., when he helped her get her fist out of a stall door in the ladies room. He tried Nashville for 23 hours in 1985, gave up, went home, married Sandy and came back to Nashville in 1987. Mostly he and Sandy sold boots, and by 1988 he was ready to go back home again. Sandy said, "I'm not making this trip every year. Either we're digging in, or we're going home for good." Garth dug in.

In 1989 he had his first No. 1 hit, "If Tomorrow Never Comes." Now he's sold more albums than any other country artist ever, and has won every award a solo male country singer can win. Two of his albums, "No Fences" and "Ropin' The Wind," have sold over 11 million copies each. No other solo artist, not even Michael Jackson, has had two albums pass the 10 million mark. His latest album, "The Hits," has already sold 5 million (better get yours soon — no more will be manufactured after June 30).

Garth is, without question, the most successful country artist to come down the pike in a long time, and Music Row has spent the last five years trying to make their new acts "the next Garth Brooks." Maybe that's why they haven't.

Lynn Shults, the guy who signed Garth to Capitol (now Liberty) Records, says, "You have no control over if they are going to be successful. People who say, 'I made so-and-so a star' get out of my life — it came from within that artist."

From the beginning Garth was CEO of his own career. In some quarters that earned him the reputation of being a "control freak." But Garth says, "You have to be very picky. This is your life. This is forever with your name on it."

Garth, or "G.B." as he refers to his onstage persona, also took his daddy Ray's advice: "They can always get their money back, but they can't get the time they've spent back. The only thing you can replace time with is a memory, so you'd better make it a good one."

So far everything Garth's done has been worth the time and the money. While he may now have "more money than my grandchildren will ever spend," he earned it by standing in his own creative fire.

Petty rises to action-figure status

By Janet Weeks
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Sporting spiky, Sid Vicious hair, inch-long false eyelashes, a shredded suit jacket and silver-heeled combat boots, actress Lori Petty looks more looks more punk than fairy-tale princess.

Yet, Petty insists that her starring role in the new action-adventure-comedy "Tank Girl" is the topper to a life that has, so far, been charmed and magical.

"My whole life is like some queer fairy tale," said the early-thirtysomething actress, recounting her steady, easy rise from a Chattanooga, Tenn., trailer park to title role in a $26 million movie.

"It's been like a corny, movie-of-the week experience. You know, 'She's gonna make it after all....'"

In "Tank Girl," Petty plays a funny-yet-tough young woman out to save the post-apocalyptic planet from the clutches of a brutal villain named Kesslee (played by Malcolm McDowell).

Rescuing folks from the forces of evil is nothing new to Petty. The daughter of a Pentecostal minister, she spent her early years traveling the South with her family "saving people from going to hell."

"I just thought I'm going to heaven and everyone else is going to hell and it's my job to save them. I thought that until I was about 8. Then I went, 'Wait a minute...'"

Her faltering belief in the Pentecostal mission led her to playing hooky from church, she recalled. And that led to dreams of show business.

"I used to sneak out of Sunday school to watch the Jackson 5 cartoon. I loved the joy and the fun coming out of this television. Then I found out they were real people. Then I found out I could do this, too. It was putting two and two together."

At age 10, her parents divorced, and Petty moved with her mother to Iowa. It was there that her infatuation with the dramatic arts flourished.

"When I was in high school, I had a subscription to Interview magazine," she said. "I'm like 14! I thought 'I'm going to move to New York and Truman Capote is going to be my best friend.'"

After graduation, she moved to Omaha, Neb., where she worked briefly as a graphic artist. But the bright lights called, and she soon lit out for New York, where she lived at the YMCA behind the Waldorf Astoria. She got a job waitressing and spent her spare time auditioning.

Eventually, she came to Los Angeles and landed a role on the short-lived series "Booker" with Richard Grieco, an Aaron Spelling spinoff of "21 Jump Street."

Her first movie role soon followed — she played one of Robin Williams' girlfriends in 1990's "Cadillac Man," which also featured Tim Robbins and "The Nanny's" Fran Drescher.

"I never had a doubt that I was going to do well," she said. "Not that I was going to be queen of the world or anything like that. But I always knew I wasn't going to have to give up and become a shoe salesman. I knew it was going to work out."

Her best-known role was as Geena Davis' spunky sister in "A League of Their Own." She is proud of the movie because she played a strong woman that little girls can look up to, she said. She feels the same way about "Tank Girl."

"I've turned down a lot of movies" that demean and victimize women, she said. "I'm not going to be the one crossing and uncrossing my legs in front of the camera.

"Tank Girl is sexy without being a Barbie doll. She's intelligent, she's witty, she's ironic, she's funny, she's silly, she's strong."

And although "Tank Girl" is violent, Petty said the exploding bombs and futuristic torture devices are too cartoonish to really frighten anyone.

"Yeah, it's violent. But I didn't have a problem with it because it's a cartoon to me. It's not a serious, decapitating, cut-your-eyeballs kind of thing. It's fun. You blow up. I take my ankles and crack your neck. It's like Road Runner cartoons. An anvil falls on your head."

Although Petty said she felt a connection with "Tank Girl" from the moment she first saw a frame of the underground British comic book, she wasn't the producers' first choice for the role.

Emily Lloyd, the English actress who played the love interest in "A River Runs Through It," was originally hired for the part but dropped out about three weeks before filming began.

"We were in negotiations with Emily and had a falling out in the process," said producer Richard Lewis. "Lori had come in beforehand and really wanted the role so we hesitated and really pondered that.

"I had a leaning toward an English actress. When you're in a post-apocalyptic or science-fiction world, American audiences like hearing an English accent. It's ridiculous but it feels more realistic."

Once Petty was hired, Lewis said all thoughts of another "Tank Girl" faded.

"Nobody could argue with Lori's performance," he said. "She's in such great shape. She has a great sense of comic timing, too."

Whether "Tank Girl" will be the breakthrough movie that helps put a "happily ever after" tagline on Petty's fairy-tale life remains a question. She said she still has to audition for parts and doesn't always get what she wants.

"American white guys who run (the industry) and make most of the movies have never hired me," she said. "I've been hired by three women (including "Tank Girl" director Rachel Talalay), two African-American men and an Australian.

"So I think it's funny I've done so well without their help. I'm just not what they're trained to want. They don't hate you. They just don't think you're the one."

Most of all, Petty said she just wants to keep making movies.

"I've always done a movie a year, and it'll probably continue like that. There aren't that many good scripts that come my way. I hope it makes it easier for me to do movies."

'Tommy Boy': Another dumb movie with SNL-exes

By Caryn James
N.Y. Times News Service

■ "Tommy Boy" is playing at the UA Cine 4.

Dumb-guy jokes! Fat-guy jokes! Buddy routines!

"Tommy Boy," the latest in a relentless stream of movies cranked out by the "Saturday Night Live" machine, is the very poor cousin of a dopey Jim Carrey movie.

Chris Farley plays Tommy, who graduates after seven years of college and returns to Sandusky, Ohio, to save the family car-parts factory from going under.

How stupid is Tommy? He passes a history final by guessing that the founding fathers included Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and Herbie Hancock. How funny is he? Rarely as witty as that.

David Spade plays Richard, a supercilious management type assigned to take Tommy on the road and show him the ropes as a salesman. Playing off their trademark "Saturday Night" characters, Farley says "awesome" a lot and Spade acts like a weasel.

Their best moments are some throwaway routines; they weep in the car as they sing along to the Carpenters' "Superstar." More often, the movie goes for stale, obvious sight gags like Tommy's slow destruction of Richard's precious car. As mismatched-buddy teams go, Felix and Oscar have nothing to worry about here.

The most peculiar aspect of the movie is that some of it is played straight. After a funeral, the grieving Tommy looks sad while "Amazing Grace" plays in the background.

There is a scene in which Farley has to say: "The Callahan Factory has been in my family for 70 years. You can't just shut it down!" You'd think a line this bad would have a little satiric spin on it. That he says it to Dan Aykroyd, in a small role as the slimy mogul trying to buy Tommy out, is a blunt reminder of all the recent criticism "Saturday Night Live" has taken for having descended from its glory days into comedy limbo. Lorne Michaels, who created the television show and is the producer of this movie, isn't going to get any relief from "Tommy Boy."

Brian Dennehy is game in his brief role as Tommy's father. Bo Derek and Rob Lowe, wearing similar cropped haircuts, are Tommy's new stepmother and stepbrother. At the wedding, while everyone else sings and cracks bad jokes, Lowe looks pointedly at his watch. He's got the right idea.

HANKS: Award-winning actor's next film due in June

(From 1B)

er be diminished nor will my appreciation for the meaning of two simple words: thank you. God bless you in this room and God bless you all around the world."

Hanks was born in Concord, Calif., and grew up around the San Francisco East Bay. When his parents divorced in the early 1960s, Hanks lived with his father, a chef; his brother and sister; and several step-siblings.

His extended family moved around to keep up with his dad's changing jobs (Hanks has said they moved on average of every six months) and Hanks attended five different grammar schools. He has called his rootless childhood "the perfect upbringing" for acting, which also leads to a nomadic lifestyle.

After studying classical theater at California State University, Sacramento, and appearing at the Great Lakes Shakespeare Festival, Hanks headed to New York. There he caught the attention of an ABC talent scout who invited him to Los Angeles, where he was cast as Kip Wilson in the TV sitcom "Bosom Buddies."

The show lasted only two seasons (1980-82). After its cancellation, Hanks appeared in a guest spot on "Happy Days." His work impressed Ron Howard, who in 1984, gave Hanks a co-starring role in "Splash." The movie was a surprise hit and led to a variety of light comedies ("Bachelor Party," "Volunteers," "The Money Pit") in the '80s.

His breakthrough to full-fledged stardom came in 1988 with his portrayal of Josh Baskin in Penny Marshall's "Big." His wide-eyed, magical performance earned him his first Oscar nomination (he lost to "Rain Man's" Dustin Hoffman).

From there, his film career followed an uneven path until Hanks regained momentum with "A League of Their Own" in 1992 and "Sleepless in Seattle" in 1993.

He nabbed an Oscar the following year for "Philadelphia," a Jonathan Demme drama in which he played a lawyer with AIDS. His moving acceptance speech has been credited as the highlight of the Academy Awards show.

Hanks' next project is due in June: z A Ron Howard film that tells the story of the Apollo 13 astronauts and their mission.

Thoughtful Moments™

Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory forever. Amen

Major leaguers ready to return to diamond, but owners say 'not so fast'

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — "Real baseball" is real close.

After nearly eight months of no baseball and then replacement ball, major leaguers ended their strike Friday when a federal judge ruled against the owners in the labor dispute.

One big question remained: When will they return?

Players say they're ready to go — three weeks of spring training and opening day in late April.

Owners say: Not so fast.

The season is still scheduled to open Sunday night with replacement players. But that's uncertain, too. Owners also have the option of locking out major leaguers, but may not have the votes to do it. They'll probably meet this weekend to consider their next step.

In issuing the preliminary injunction against the owners, U.S. District Judge Sonia Sotomayor ordered them to restore free agent bidding, salary arbitration and the anti-collusion provisions of baseball's expired collective bargaining agreement.

"Absent a lockout by the clubs, we can get real baseball on the field in a short period of time," union chief Donald Fehr said. "We could put together a quick spring training, and opening day would be delayed a little bit. We'd hope that the players would play the maximum number of games possible."

■ Good weather doesn't keep the Midland Country Club from being the big winner in Friday's District 4-5A golf.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The District 4-5A boys golf tour picked a cool, windless day to attack the Midland Country Club golf course Friday, but the grand old lady layout was the overall winner.

Scores went up like a July 4 skyrocket, but there was little change in the team status since leaders San Angelo and Midland High fought to a dead even standoff with a round of 321, leaving the Bobcats with the same eight-stroke lead over the Bulldogs, 629-637.

■ District 4-5A Golf

"We really needed to make up some ground today because San Angelo plays their course very well and we end (the tour) there," said MHS golf coach Aubrey Culley. "Still, we are in second place and that's important."

The top two teams earn the right to advance to the Region I tournament in Lubbock later this month and MHS still holds a 14-stroke lead over Midland Lee II, which is now Lee's No. 1 team.

Lee II moved into third place with the best round of the day at 318 after Lee coach Bobby Dunn revamped his two squads.

"We just started over and had qualifying for the positions," Dunn said. "Our No. 2 team had a three-stroke lead over our No. 1 team last week, but it looks like we've got the right people in position now. We had only one better score on our No. 1 team this week. It still looks strange to see our No. 2 team with 48 strokes on the No. 1 team."

San Angelo coach Rick Harvey had a slight smile on his face after the round, knowing that he still has San Angelo Country Club waiting for the tour to arrive.

"We're just glad to get out of here alive," Harvey said. "We didn't lose any

Recent champions vie in second game

■ Arkansas has defied the odds by making it back to the Final Four with all five starters.

By Jim O'Connell
AP Basketball Writer

SEATTLE — One of the last two national champions will have a chance to be the next national champion.

Arkansas, looking to become the second team to repeat since the days of the UCLA dynasty, will meet North Carolina, the team that failed to do that last season, in the second of Saturday's Final Four games.

Arkansas' attempt join Duke in 1991 and 1992 as a recent repeater is one of the success stories of the NCAA tournament. Only Duke and UNLV the season before even reached the Final Four as defending champion. North Carolina was gone in the second round the year after winning it all.

"You have to congratulate them for getting back to this level," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said Friday. "It's remarkable they have done what they have done."

The Razorbacks (31-6) had all five starters back this season, the first defending champion to do that since UCLA in 1967. That made a rough task nearly impossible.

"The expectations were so high and so unreasonable," Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson said. "Not only were we supposed to be No. 1, we were supposed to go undefeated and also win every game by 20 points."

The expectations for both are now focused on reach-

UCLA-Oklahoma St. battle of 7-foot posts

■ The Cowboys' Bryant Reeves and the Bruins George Zidek make for a Final Four showdown of heavyweights.

By Beth Harris
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE — "Big Country" vs. "Foreign Country" sounds more like a United Nations debate than Saturday's matchup between centers Bryant Reeves of Oklahoma State and George Zidek of UCLA.

Expect no diplomacy, however.

These two 7-footers will be pushing and shoving for inside position at both ends and running each other into the ground to get there.

In this showdown of heavyweights, Reeves damages the scales at 292 pounds. Zidek is a slightly more delicate 268.

Reeves grew up in tiny Gans, Okla., where everybody knows your business, but not to the extent that the Communist regime kept track of Zidek's family in his native Prague in the former Czechoslovakia. Thus the Bruins came up with the "Foreign Country" moniker for their big man with the Terminator accent.

Reeves is unique for his ability to thoroughly dominate the post and then hit turnaround jumpers, Zidek said.

"He's going to get you in the block so that you cannot move and he gets the ball. You're out of position and cannot do anything," he said. "I know I'm going to need some help from my teammates because it's not possible to play him one-on-one."

Four Bulldogs on all-district soccer team

By Mike Butts

Midland High led all 5-5A schools with four selections on the 1995 all-district boys soccer team, voted by league coaches and released Friday. The Bulldogs, league winners for the second straight year, also placed a player on the second team while Midland Lee had three second-team players. The Odessa schools capped their best ever boys soccer showing this year with the offensive and defensive MVPs and the coach of the year.

Midland High senior forward Tyler Krueger, who tied Lee's Henrik Madsen for most district goals with 10, made first team forward. Bulldog seniors Jared "Hobie" Richardson (goal keeper) and defender Kiley Miller also made the first team as did junior midfielder J.D. Gar-

Ailing Rockets out of tonight's game

HOUSTON (AP) — The conditions of Hakeem Olajuwon and Vernon Maxwell, who are being treated for iron-deficiency anemia, are improving, Houston Rockets team doctor Jim Muntz said Friday.

But neither is likely to play against the Milwaukee Bucks Saturday night, Muntz said.

Both Olajuwon and Maxwell are up the equivalent of 1 1/2 units of blood, he said. "They're both coming up nicely — quicker than expected," Muntz said.

The two missed games against the Los Angeles Lakers and the Los Angeles Clippers this week after being diagnosed Tuesday. Both had complained of fatigue before being examined.

Muntz said the iron supplements Olajuwon and Maxwell are taking should correct the condition.

"I don't think they'll play (Saturday) night," Muntz said. "If they play or practice, it won't hurt them physically. It's just they'll still be tired."

Knicks beat Mavs to end win streak

The Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

NEW YORK — Derek Harper still has fond memories of his days in Dallas. The Mavericks still have harsh memories of the trade that sent him to New York.

Harper and John Starks hit two 3-pointers apiece as New York took control in the third period on the way to a 101-90 victory over Dallas on Friday night, ending the Mavericks' six-game winning streak.

"This was a strange game for me," said Harper, who was traded to the Knicks on Jan. 6, 1994. "I had a lot of emotions and found it tough to get prepared."

The Knicks made seven of eight 3-point attempts in the third quarter — while making only four of 15 from inside the arc — in taking a 77-58 lead.

.Spurs 118, Bucks 102

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson had 26 points and 10 rebounds to lead the streaking Spurs to their 10th straight victory.

San Antonio's victory, coupled with Orlando's win Friday night at Utah, pushed the Spurs a half-game ahead of the Jazz for the best record in the Western Conference. San Antonio trails Orlando by two victories for the league's best record, although both teams have 18 losses.

San Antonio's balanced attack featured six players in double figures, including Sean Elliott with 23 points and Avery Johnson with 19 points and 11 assists.

Cavaliers 98, Bullets 88

CLEVELAND — Chris Mills scored 24 points and Mark Price took control down the stretch Friday night as the Cleveland Cavaliers overcame a 19-point first-half deficit and beat Washington.

Magic 101, Jazz 98

SALT LAKE CITY — Dennis Scott's two free throws with 23.4 seconds left broke a tie, helping Orlando avenge a 12-point home loss to Utah.

Suns 106, Timberwolves 96

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley scored 13 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter, helping Phoenix come from behind to defeat Minnesota.

The Suns kept it close against the team with the NBA's third-worst record with poor free-throw shooting — 27 for 41 for the game.

Boston 100, Miami 99

BOSTON — Dino Radja took a pass from Sherman Douglas and scored on a dunk with 1.7 seconds remaining as the Boston Celtics outdueled Miami down the stretch.

Philadelphia 86, Portland 85

PHILADELPHIA — Clarence Weatherspoon hit a 17-foot jump shot with 3.3 seconds left to give Philadelphia a victory over Portland.

Nuggets 107, Pacers 92

INDIANAPOLIS — Dikembe Mutombo scored 13 of his 22 points in the first quarter, sending Denver ahead to stay Friday night as the Nuggets defeated Indiana 107-92 to snap the Pacers' five-game winning streak.

Sonics 126, Kings 95

TACOMA, Wash. — Gary Payton scored 27 points and Detlef Schrempf 26 Friday night as Seattle won its sixth straight game with a rout of Sacramento.

Huskies must contend with loaded Cardinal

The Associated Press

■ WOMEN'S FINAL FOUR: Tennessee vs. Georgia, 11:15 a.m., CBS Connecticut vs. Stanford, 30 minutes after end of first game, CBS

MINNEAPOLIS — What's happening here? The University of Connecticut gains its second Final Four appearance in five years and all of a sudden there is talk that the Tennessee Volunteers — and not the Huskies ... the undefeated (33-0) Huskies ... the top-seeded Huskies of the East Regional — are being considered as "the team to beat."

Well, what about it, coach?

"I agree," said UConn coach Geno Auriemma, whose team will face Stanford in Saturday's national semifinals for the right to meet the winner of the Southeastern Conference showdown between Tennessee and Georgia in Sunday's national championship at the Target Center. "I think they are the team to beat — for Georgia. The team for us to beat is Stanford, and we're going to try and do our best to beat Stanford and hopefully we'll get the opportunity to face Tennessee."

For that to happen, the Huskies will first have to contend with the Cardinal (30-2), whose lineup is loaded with talent, size and depth. In addition, they boast of having the only three players in the Final Four — seniors Anita Kaplan, Rachel Hemmer and Kate Paye — who three years ago actually experienced winning a national championship.

"When you have done something, you know you can do it," said Stanford coach Tara VanDerVeer, referring to her players with Final Four experience. "When you haven't done something, you think you can do it. But they know if things don't go well, they can dig down inside and tell themselves I have done it before and I can do it again."

And that's precisely what UConn had to do against Virginia in the East Regional Final last weekend at Storrs, Conn. The Huskies had to dig deep to rally from a 7-point halftime deficit for a pulsating 67-63 victory over the Cavaliers.

"Two things happened in that locker room at halftime," Auriemma said. "One, we were very upset for letting that happen to us (when UConn squandered a 19-point lead to trail by 7 at halftime) and, two, we were scared. We were scared we were going to lose."

Although the Huskies pulled it out with a gritty defensive effort in the second half — UConn scored just 1 point in the final 4:36 — it still exposed some glaring weaknesses.

"We saw a side of ourselves that we knew was there and we didn't want to see," Auriemma said.

It showed, first and foremost, that if junior guard Jen Rizzotti, All-America senior forward Rebecca Lobo or 6-foot-7-inch sophomore Kara Wolters get into any kind of foul trouble against Stanford's physical lineup, it puts the Huskies in a vulnerable position.

"They're still a very scary team," said Stanford's 6-2 freshman sensation Kristin Folkl, a two-sport star who guided Stanford's volleyball team to the national championship and is now trying to do the same for the basketball team.

Georgia coach has seen growth of women's game

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Andy Landers was among the coaches in the second NCAA women's Final Four in 1983. The Georgia coach is back for the third time, and he says it's clear to see how the women's game has grown.

Nearly 100 reporters attended a news conference Friday involving Landers and some of his top players. The coach reflected on the sparse media coverage his team received 12 years ago on the day before the national semifinals.

"I talked to three media people that day," Landers said.

"So suffice it to say, to me the greatest change in the Final Four atmosphere would be you folks, the attention that the media is now giving the event and the time that is required of the coaches and players to accomodate you folks," he said.

Don't misunderstand him. Landers and the other coaches are willing to do whatever it takes to help the women's game continue to grow. They have been promoters as much as coaches over the past decade, helping the game grab part of the national attention previously dominated by the men's game.

But the inevitable comparisons to the men's Final Four still bother some coaches. Stanford's Tara VanDerveer was asked to compare the events.

"I think the sooner we get away from comparing men's and women's basketball — whether it's their Final Four and our Final Four, their attendance and our attendance, they dunk, we dunk, whatever — I think the better off we'll be," she said.

VanDerveer, considered a leading candidate to coach the 1996 women's Olympic team, has been among the game's most successful coaches. She has taken Stanford to the Final Four three times before this year, winning championships in 1990 and 1992.

She said increased national exposure has helped get more girls interested in the game and helped increase the talent level.

POSTS: Zidek workmanlike in tournament

From 1C

Only Tim Duncan of Wake Forest has successfully contained Reeves in the NCAA tournament, holding him to 15 points and 9 rebounds in the East Regional semifinals.

But Reeves didn't stay down for long. He had 24 points and 10 rebounds in the regional final and limited Marcus Camby of Massachusetts to 6 points and 4 rebounds.

Zidek was workmanlike if unspectacular in UCLA's four previous games. Mississippi State's Erick Dampier had 11 points and 4 rebounds before fouling out against him in the West Regional semifinals.

He only played 12 minutes in the regional final with Connecticut because of foul trouble and he had no rebounds in UCLA's closest game, a 1-point victory over Missouri in the second round.

Reeves attracted attention by shattering a backboard on a dunk during Friday's practice in the Kingdome.

Asked if he would like to duplicate the feat, Zidek deadpanned, "It is my dream."

Zidek's greatest asset is his hook, which he learned from his father, Jiri, a former Czech Olympian and one of Europe's best shooters in the 1970s.

"It's a good weapon and hopefully I can get him forced out enough to where he doesn't have to use that hook shot," Reeves said. "I'm going to have to play great defense on him and not give him easy looks. At the offensive end, I'm going to have to try to push him down where I can get angles to the basket."

Not likely, Zidek countered.

"He's going to have to be concerned about my outside shot. If I'm going to be open on the outside, let's say 16- to 18-feet from the hoop, I have to shoot to make him guard me," he said. "If he's going to stay around the the hoop, I'm just going to be pump-faking him."

Reeves covers the court better than the slow-footed Zidek, whose lack of muscle definition makes him appear weaker than he is.

"I'm going to take it as a challenge because everybody's going to say Reeves is the key to beating UCLA," Zidek said. "I'm going to get psyched up on that."

Bruins coach Jim Harrick acknowledges Reeves cannot be denied room under the basket, yet he doesn't worry that Zidek will panic and go his own way.

"He'll play him exactly as I tell him and he won't deviate from the game plan. He'll do a decent job on Reeves. How well the team defense reacts will be the key, certainly not one guy," Harrick said. "When you tell him one time, it's like going into a computer. He remembers things I told him three years ago."

There's more at stake for both players than advancing to the championship game. They are seniors with dreams of making it in the NBA.

RECENT: Hogs travel different road

From 1C

ing the championship game. One very recent champion goes home, the other goes on to play the winner of the UCLA-Oklahoma State game on Monday night.

The Tar Heels (28-5) come in having won their four tournament games by an average of 13.7 points, the last a 74-61 victory over Kentucky in the Southeast Regional championship game.

Arkansas had a far different road, winning its four games by a total of 15 points, two in overtime and the last 68-61 over Virginia to win the Midwest Regional.

"After a game's over with I don't concern myself with that," Richardson said of the close games. "I don't worry about them when they're over. At 12 midnight forget what happened yesterday.

"It's a new day, a new game against new people. Playing those close games builds character and when you do win one you think you might not have had a chance to win with a few minutes left, it's the greatest feeling in the world."

Last year's title game wasn't decided until the final minute, when Scotty Thurman's 3-pointer gave the Razorbacks the lead for good as they beat Duke 76-72.

North Carolina's championship game two years ago wasn't decided until the final seconds, when Michigan's Chris Webber called a timeout the Wolverines didn't have and the Tar Heels went on to a 77-71 victory.

Smith, as usual, made it sound like it would take quite a lot for the Tar Heels to make this semifinal a close game.

"I think they're playing extremely well. They are athletic and active defensively," he said. "We didn't look good against the press of Kentucky and now we'll face theirs. They're a great rebounding team and we'll have to handle the ball and rebound to make it close."

North Carolina averages 85 points, three less than Arkansas. It might not seem like the Tar Heels would want to keep the pace quick, but they do.

"We hope they don't hit their average by six points, and then we'd win 85-82," Smith said. "We'd take it 38-36 or 29-20. We always look to fast break and if there's an easy one we'll take it."

The game also will match the last two Final Four MVPs, Donald Williams of North Carolina and the Razorbacks' Corliss Williamson.

"Just trying to stop me from scoring isn't going to stop this team," said Williamson, the leading scorer and rebounder at 19.9 and 7.5.

NOW: Owners may not get 21 votes for lockout

The union's executive board voted Wednesday to end the strike if Sotomayor issued the injunction, which was requested by the National Labor Relations Board.

Owners need 21 votes for a lockout, but several owners and management officials have said this week that they were unlikely to get the necessary total.

Acting commissioner Bud Selig said the judge's decision was "disappointing and may represent a step backward in our negotiations for a meaningful agreement with the players' union."

"Representatives of the 28 clubs will meet to discuss legal and practical options now available and will certainly give the players' union a timely answer to their offer to return to the field," Selig said.

"Major league baseball still needs a long-term solution to the serious economic problems confronting the game today," he said. "The two sides still have to settle their disagreements at the bargaining table. The economic uncertainty caused by delays in settlement could have further crippling effects on the industry."

St. Louis Cardinals president Mark Lamping said he didn't know if there were enough votes to lock out the players.

"I would guess it would be a very close vote," he said.

"Things will move now, I think, and it's going to be an interesting weekend," said Colorado Rockies chairman Jerry McMorris, talking to reporters at the first exhibition game at Coors Field in Denver. "I would like to get this thing resolved."

Fehr said a lockout "would not stun me. Anything is possible. ... I hope they don't go that route. I don't expect it to."

At a news conference, players seemed elated to be talking about getting back on the field again but also were wary of what the owners' next move would be.

"If you want to be technical, yeah, it (the strike) is off," said Tom Glavine of the Atlanta Braves. "We've offered to come back, and now they have to decide if they're going to lock us out."

"It's over in that we've offered to return to work," added union attorney Eugene Orza. "If they don't accept, that's a different story."

Later Friday, Judge Roger J. Miner of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals denied the owners' application for an immediate stay. The appellate court set a hearing for Tuesday on both the stay request and a motion for an expedited appeal. The case wasa assigned to Judges Ralph Winter, Jon O. Newman and J. Daniel Mahoney.

In the appellate brief, owners claimed the injunction was catastrophic for them.

"Major league baseball will likely suffer its second consecutive year of no playoffs, no World Series and, therefore, irreparable damage to the credibility of the institution in the eyes of its fans, advertisers, rights holders and other sources of economic lifeblood," the owners argued. "The damage caused by another disrupted season will likely drive some clubs out of business ... their teams would be lost for good."

Spring training games went on Friday as scheduled with replacement players, but the mood among the strike-breaking athletes was grim.

"This is bad for me but it's good for the game," said Mark Czarkowski, a replacement player for the Pittsburgh Pirates in Bradenton, Fla. "I'm still one of the people who believes the game is bigger than any player."

If there is a lockout, replacement players would be used to open the season, but owners would risk damages of more than $5 million per day — the amount of lost salary for all major leaguers.

Despite Sotomayor's ruling, there still were several major issues to resolve:

— Owners and players are still attempting to negotiate an agreement, but the next bargaining session hasn't been scheduled;

— There are 833 unsigned players on 40-man rosters are unsigned by clubs, as are more than 100 free agents, such as Orel Hershiser.

— Major league umpires have been locked out since Jan. 1.

"The loss of playing time to the players can't be more than adequately compensated by monetary damages," Sotomayor said in an oral opinion after a 90-minute hearing.

The season is set to start Sunday night with a game in Miami between the New York Mets and Florida Marlins. Selig spokesman Rich Levin said no decision on the fate of that game will be made until Saturday. Owners voted 26-2 Thursday to use replacement players who have been at spring training for the past seven weeks.

If owners accept the players' unconditional offer to return to work, management officials said opening day probably will be pushed back to the week of April 24.

"I hope the players will start reporting Saturday or Sunday," agent Randy Hendricks said.

The courtroom was standing room only as Sotomayor spent 45 minutes reading her decision. She took only about 15 minutes to deliberate, making clear the bulk of her decision was prepared before the start of the hearing.

"Even though opening day is days away, the parties have time to salvage it," she said.

Season start still unclear

NEW YORK (AP) — Will they lock out? Will they go back to the bargaining table? Will they go forward with replacement games?

Until the owners meet Sunday in Chicago, it's not clear what happens next in major league baseball.

It's unclear if Sunday night's season opener between the New York Mets and Florida Marlins will take place as scheduled at Joe Robbie Stadium.

It's unclear if and when the striking players will report to spring training.

"There are many things that could happen from there, including that we may be back in spring training for about three weeks in Tucson," Colorado Rockies owner Jerry McMorris said. "But we may not be. Do you play the temporary players while the regular players get ready? There are some relatively tricky issues to work through."

Players have made an unconditional offer to return to work, ending their 232-day strike, the longest work stoppage in the history of U.S. sports.

Management's first decision is whether to accept the offer. The second decision could be whether to impose a lockout. At least three-quarters of the owners would have to agree on a lockout, and owners and management officials have said the pro-lockout faction didn't appear to have the necessary 21 votes needed to continue the work stoppage.

Despite the predictions, even owners probably won't know the answer until they meet in Chicago.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You are determined to make your mark in a highly competitive field. Dedication to hard work will pay off handsomely in both your professional life and personal life. Romantic partner's needs will have considerable influence on your day-to-day actions and decisions. Business and financial matters will show tremendous progress by late fall. Settle in at home for a cozy winter holiday. The year 1996 brings wider public recognition.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Debbie Reynolds, actress Ali McGraw, basketball player Mark Jackson, author William Manchester.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Home improvements are high on your list of priorities. Do not take on too many tasks at one time. New acquaintances expand your intellectual horizons.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Remember, actions speak louder than words. Participating in a community campaign will reinforce your image as a respected leader. Some soul-searching is in order where romance is concerned. Have you really played fair?

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Refuse to let someone make a fool of you. Postpone signing a contract or hastily-written letter. Certain social plans go awry at the last minute. Be flexible. An impossible dream is best forgotten.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An optimistic approach works wonders! Good things happen wherever you go today. Meet an old friend for lunch if you can. A hobby could turn into a second source of income; consult experts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Insisting on having things your way could backfire. Remember, power often corrupts. Go with the flow. Do not let a restless mood undo all you have been trying to achieve.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You and loved one see eye-to-eye on the important issues. Settle back and enjoy a relaxing day at home. An intriguing new book could prompt you to think about changing your lifestyle.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Economic fluctuations, faulty information or contradictory trends make the investment scene confusing. This is no time to jeopardize your assets or credit. Postpone putting up any cash for short-term or long-term commitments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take nothing for granted today. Your hopes of continuing along a profitable trail may not be realized. Go easy on lending money. Someone's financial position may be weaker than you think.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Making new friends will help you move about in the social circles where prominent people gather. Wonderful developments may ensue. This evening, go along with your loved ones' recreational ideas.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent play over work this weekend. A love of sports and games comes to the fore. Make vacation plans in conjunction with your loved ones. Throwing your weight around will add insult to injury.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19): Emphasize emotional serenity. Become an amateur detective and find out what really makes you tick. Creative projects give you a chance to work magic with your hands. Visit a public library for inspiring ideas.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent joy while giving short shrift to any worry today. Reorganizing your environment will boost efficiency. Be clear when communicating your expectations to teen-agers; they will respond positively.

'French Chef' Julia Childs would break bank with 'last meal' choice

NEW YORK — If ever (heaven forbid!) they executed Julia Child, she would break the bank first.

For her last meal, she would order "foie gras, oysters and a little caviar to begin with," TV's "French Chef" told The New York Times Magazine in the April 2 issue.

Julia Childs reveals choice of 'last meal' in an interview.

She would follow that with pan-roasted duck "accompanied with little onions, chanterelle mushrooms and little potatoes, with a sauce made out of the carcass."

Her beverage of choice would be a 1962 Romanee-Conti, which sells for $700 a bottle.

With dessert — creme brulee from the Manhattan restaurant Le Cirque — "I'd have Chateau d'Yquem, 1975 or 1976. That's $450 a bottle. ... What would you have?"

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. — The local chapter of United Way wasn't interested, so the world's most famous houseguest will be raising money for United Cerebral Palsy of the Wabash Valley.

Brian "Kato" Kaelin, who ended five days of testimony in O.J. Simpson's murder trial earlier this week, will sign autographs and pose for pictures at the Honey Creek Mall on Saturday. Proceeds will benefit children with cerebral palsy.

The United Way of Wabash Valley turned down an offer to use the shaggy-haired part-time actor as a fund-raiser.

"Mr. Kaelin's status as a celebrity and public figure stems solely from notorious and tragic circumstances," said Don Jordan, executive director of the organization. "This United Way chooses not to be a beneficiary in these circumstances."

Kaelin lived in a guest house at Nicole Brown Simpson's home for one year, then lived at Simpson's estate for six months.

HOUSTON — George Bush doesn't want to make a big deal out of his trip to Vietnam this fall.

"It's a private visit to a private organization. There's no political ramifications to his visit," Bush spokesman Jim McGrath said Thursday, declining to elaborate.

The trip, tentatively set for September, will be sponsored by Citibank. McGrath didn't know whether or how much the former president will be paid.

The United States has not yet reestablished full diplomatic relations with Vietnam. The last current or former president to visit Vietnam was Richard Nixon in 1969.

ATHENS, Ohio — David McCullough knows Harry Truman. And he says Bill Clinton is no Truman.

Pulitzer Prize-winning author says Bill Clinton is no Truman.

The Democratic Truman, who was president from 1945 to 1953, had his two best years after the Republicans captured Congress in 1946, his biographer says.

But McCullough, whose book "Truman" won the 1993 Pulitzer Prize, does not think that Clinton will have the same success.

Nor does he see Clinton, who read McCullough's book during his 1992 run for the presidency, declaring war on the GOP in the style of "give-'em-hell" Harry.

If Truman were alive today, the writer said during a speech Wednesday at Ohio University, he'd offer Clinton this advice: Ignore the polls, and don't forget who you are, where you came from and where you're likely to go back to.

LOS ANGELES — The suicide of Carroll O'Connor's son touched a raw nerve for the star of ABC's "Coach": One of his children attempted suicide this week.

"I've been there," Craig T. Nelson said Thursday. "I've been the son and I've been the father. I mean, 11 years ago, I was a drug-addict alcoholic. Now, I'm a father that's sober."

On Tuesday, O'Connor's only son, 32-year-old Hugh O'Connor, killed himself after years of battling a drug addiction. The same day, Nelson learned that one of his three adult children had tried to commit suicide days earlier. He wouldn't say which one.

"We were in the middle of rehearsals so I kept rehearsing," he said. "It's the only thing I knew how to do, is put one foot ahead of the other and cried inside, you know?"

Deaf racing team readies for Can-Am competition

By Larry Ward
NYT News Service

PHOENIX, ARIZ — Before two-way radios, race drivers and crews communicated with hand signals and pit boards.

Most of the time, the usual response from the cockpit or behind the pit wall was, "Huh?"

Even today, the first piece of equipment that usually malfunctions on sophisticated race cars is the radio communications, and drivers are still gesturing, "Huh?"

Out of necessity, Can-Am race driver Russell Errigo and his crew have taken two-way race communications to a new level of technology.

Conventional radios won't work for the team entered in the first Can-Am race of the season at Phoenix International Raceway this weekend.

They're all deaf.

And, although they all use American Sign Language, Errigo explains, with some pride, the race car goes around the paved mile oval too fast to communicate with even the traditional racing signals.

Errigo was the 10th-fastest among 27 cars in practice Friday morning.

A native of California, Errigo has been deaf since birth, but speaks fluently and without hesitation. He learned to read lips and took speech therapy so he would be able to interact with the hearing world.

Errigo, his wife, Cindie, and one of their two daughters, 2-year-old Jenna, are deaf. A second daughter, 8-month-old Cylvia, is not.

Errigo and the Deaf Motorsports team have redesigned and engineered a computer digital-display system for single-seat race cars.

The crew types in messages to their driver that are relayed to a small computer screen in the cockpit of the race car. Errigo responds through a microphone in his helmet, and the message is typed onto a computer for the crew.

"It's like getting e-mail in the race car," Errigo said.

"Originally, they used it in stock cars, but, of course the space in our cars is limited, so we had to redesign everything to fit."

And, in a few years, with adaptions to everyday life, it could change how deaf people communicate.

Although Errigo can't hear the pitch of the racing engine change, he is more sensitive and aware than most to vibrations from the engine compartment, the steering and tires.

Computers on modern race cars record when a driver accelerates, brakes and changes gears. Errigo is working on a system that will record engine noises vital to mechanics.

Errigo has played football, golf, ridden mountain bikes and snow skis. Lately, he directed that energy into racing.

"When I was growing up, I had my role models, like Mario Andretti and Richard Petty," he said. "But, the difference was, they could also hear.

"I want to be a role model for kids who enjoy racing and might want to race, but don't have anyone they can relate to and looked up to. They don't have anybody like that now."

The most exposure, of course, would come on the PPG Indy Car World Series circuit, where Errigo would ideally like to be in two or three years.

"A big part of that, of course, is sponsorship," he said.

Errigo, 28, started racing in 1989, when he attended the Jim Russell racing school and joined the Paul Rossi Racing Performance team.

It's only coincidence that his crew is deaf.

"It wasn't something we put together just so we could get attention," Errigo said. "But we do communicate well because we are all deaf. It's not a requirement, but I think it would be critical that a crew chief who is not hearing-impaired be fluent in American Sign Language."

Geo Metro revamped with stylish yet economical sedan version

BY BOB PLUNKETT
SPECIAL TO THE MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM

The sea, colored like cobalt when reflected off a vivid blue sky, set this test-drive scene while zipping up the Pacific Coast Highway through that elite mecca of Malibu, home to movie stars, industry moguls and, with such apparent wealth, some of the most expensive cars on this planet.

So why, you may wonder, was I passing such fancy fenders in subcompact confines of an eensy-weensy econo-car?

Pepperdine University, perched high over Malibu Colony, happened to be the venue for "Metro University," Geo's site gimmick for auto writers to introduce the Geo Metro Sedan. This new cheap wheel set will no doubt become a hot ticket for students, as well as commuters, whose car budgets amount to something far less than that of Malibu's residents.

The new 4-door Metro, replacing last year's 5-door hatchback in a shapely format which includes a genuine trunk and conceals a 70 hp 4-in-line engine, ranks as that rare sedan whose base price slips below $9,500. Metro also generates superb fuel economy figures.

But my drive up the PCH in a "Scuba Blue" edition of the 4-door Metro confirmed that this Geo also stocks an asset I had not anticipated: Reasonable peddle power.

The first variation tested, with snappy 5-speed manual shifter, popped off the line at each of the PCH's infinite series of stop lights. In second and third gears, it still behaved aggressively when racking revs up to higher rpms.

By the time I shifted into fourth, that crisp response diminished somewhat, but by then — and subsequently into fifth overdrive gear — I had bumped the speed limit anyway.

The optional 3-speed automatic transmission dims this liveliness only slightly but takes a bite out of Metro's fuel economy figures.

Beyond the low base price and thrifty engine management, I liked the new sedan's cute styling cues.

The front hood slants sharply forward to a pair of corner-mounted aerodynamic headlamps which remind me of high-arching almond eyes dotting Metro's face with that below-bumper vent in a low oval of a mouth.

A high stance of glass ringing the entire passenger compartment gives Metro a tall appearance, but the new car's roof is actually higher — by 1.6 inches — than the predecessor hatchback.

It's also longer, due to the addition of that trunk compartment which extends beyond rear window glass in a flat decklid ledge before diving into body-colored back bumpers.

The trunk pares less than 0.2 cubic feet of storage space from the former hatchback's rear bay, and Metro's new rear seatback folds for additional cargo room.

Inside, in a layout with twin bucket seats up front and that rear bench, you won't feel squashed an crammed into a mobile sardine can because Metro's designers managed to deliver the impossible: Elbow room.

Measurements for people space inside this car enlarge headroom by a full inch, and rear seat legroom remains as fair as it was in the hatchback. The interior width increases by only fractions, but up front the buckets with firm side bolsters appear ideally placed to keep you from bumping against either a fellow rider or the door panel.

Some of the most important enhancements for Metro Sedan cannot be seen.

For instance, the structure of this subcompact gained front and rear crumple zones and a steel safety cage to encase the passenger compartment, plus new side door beams. Further, the A pillar now consists of a single strong and rigid piece, while B pillars were strengthened to impart rigidity and might to the overall structure.

Standard safety assets include dual airbags, front seat head restraints, firm anchors in the rear to secure a child's safety seat, laminated safety glass for the windshield and breakaway dual exterior side mirrors.

Anti-lock control for brakes, perhaps the most important of all safety items, is available for $565.

Mechanical hardware standard for both trim levels ranges from a 4-wheel independent suspension set- up featuring MacPherson strut design to front and rear stabilizer bars and crisp rack and pinion steering.

Navigating sharp canyon sweeps of S-curves across the Santa Monica Mountains just east of the coast highway provided a lesson in Metro's sporty ability to manage twisty road maneuvers. Never mind that a mega-bucks Ferrari tailed me with driver anxious to pass; I powered through these curves, hitting each apex as if I too steered an exotic.

Metro also stocks something novel for its low price: Daytime running lights. Mandated for all cars later in the decade, these lights remain on during daytime locomotion yet don't tax the electrical system the way full nighttime lights do. This becomes a bonus for safety, and the surprise is that daytime running lights, like dual airbags, show up as a regular item on an economy car.

Metro Sedan begins with a base unit listing for $9,375, including destination fee. The LSi version, containing a split-folding rear seatback and upgraded seat fabrics with vinyl trim added, comes to $9,795.

Metro lists for a thousand less dollars ($8,395) in 2-door hatchback coupe variation, Geo's ultimate economy car. Equipped with a minute 1.0-liter 3-in-line engine, which produces 55 hp. and a 5-speed manual transmission, this baby Metro earns fuel economy numbers that reach 43 mpg for city driving and 48 mpg on the road.

Metro's coupe in LSi trim for $8,695 permits upgrading to the aluminum-block 4-cylinder engine employed by the sedan. With Metro Coupe LSi, you may also specify the 3-speed automatic transmission.

Ford Windstar – quality, safety, functionality

Windstar is the next generation minivan—available today. It takes design, engineering, manufacturing and comfort standards to levels never before achieved by any minivan.

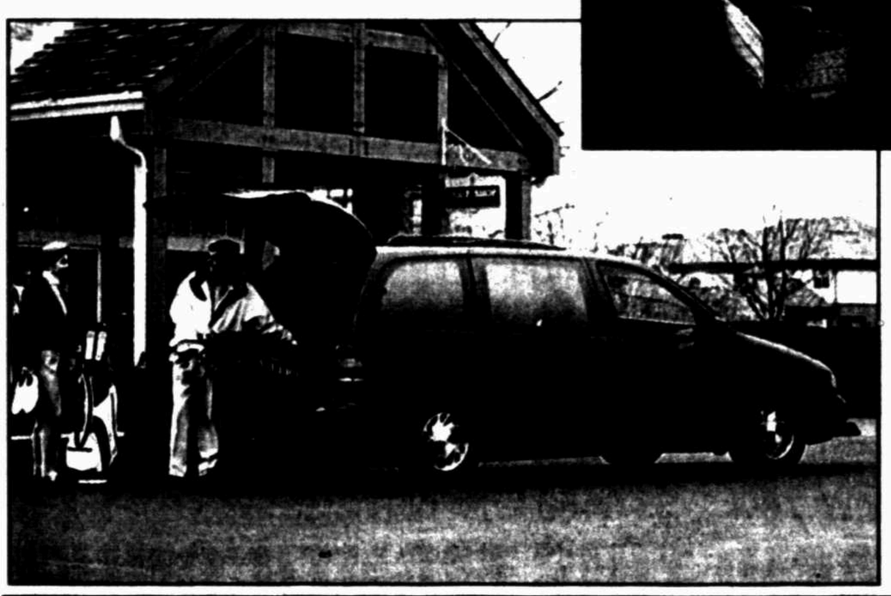
A major factor leading to this is the exceptional attention to tight specifications through Windstar's manufacturing process. Windstar applies a manufacturing discipline called "no adjust assembly" to improve fit, finish and quality.

Design, development, manufacturing and assembly of all critical panels, fixtures, trim and hardware have been executed with reference to a series of "master locator" holes; a system which ensures that these parts fit perfectly when brought together on the assembly line. Finessing by the assembly line installer—for many years a feature of the assembly system—is no longer required, resulting in a higher quality, better-finished vehicle.

A safer minivan

From a safety perspective, Windstar has the most safety features as standard including driver- and passenger-side air bags, anti-lock brakes, side impact beams, front knee bolsters, child safety lock (rear sliding door), brakeshift interlock, damage-resistant five-mph tested front and rear bumpers (a competitive advantage) and three-point safety belts for all outboard passengers. The second-row seat can be ordered with dual integrated child seats that are even designed to recline.

Along with its superior ride and handling, Windstar has other important car-like comfort and convenience features. For instance, not only is Windstar exceptionally quiet, but also provides an environment that has been specifically designed to facilitate conversations between the front and rear passengers via a measure known as "speech intelligibility". The entire Windstar interior was mapped into six-in. squares, each with its own sound monitor, and then subjected to in-city and highway travel. Sources of noise entrance were identified and corrective measures taken to lower sound transmission, while at the same time avoiding unnecessary deadness in the vocal spectrum. The result is a vehicle that's not only quiet, but also one in which it's unusually easy to hold a conversation.



Windstar provides an environment that has been specifically designed to facilitate conversations between the front and rear passengers via a measure known as "speech intelligibility".

Unsurpassed levels of comfort and functionality

Even entering Windstar is a pleasure, due to the lowest step-in height in the minivan field. And that is just the beginning of numerous details to which Ford has paid attention in making this the most user-friendly minivan around.

The rear liftgate is a very important part of any minivan, and Windstar's may be the easiest of all to operate. In the up position, the grab strap is low enough to be reached by shorter-than-average persons. For safety, the tailgate has double side latches and an outside release handle, separate from the central locking system and enabling tailgate release without a key. The elimination of the central latch found in other minivans also means a clear, unobstructed floor and sill area above the rear bumper, and no sill step, across which heavy objects easily slide without damage.

In addition, Windstar has a power door lock switch located on the left inside quarter panel, allowing easy locking or unlocking of all other doors from the rear of the vehicle before the liftgate is closed—a thoughtful feature not available on other minivans. Because Windstar is more than two inches wider than its major competition, there is more room between second- and third-row bucket seats for easier front-to-rear passenger movement as well as more room between the sliding door and the seats. Second- and third- row seats, buckets or bench, are removable and also fold flat.

Another functional feature of Windstar, new to this segment, is the availability of overhead air conditioning outlets which bring cool air up the rear "C" pillar to feed three overhead vents for the second and third row passengers. This system design, an industry first when introduced in 1991 on the Ford Econoline full-size van, provides exceptionally efficient ventilation throughout the Windstar's spacious interior.

Windstar is further proof that Ford has taken the long view—focusing on investments in new products and accelerating its drive towards a world-class product development and manufacturing process. Ford quality, together with being low-cost producer, will make Windstar an outstanding-value-purchase for virtually any vehicle shopper.

1928 INDIAN CYCLECAR ROADSTAR

The manufacturer of the Indian motorcycle had toyed with the idea of producing a lightweight car since the early 1900s. As a matter of fact, a few "Hendee" automobiles were built and registered by Hendee/Indian before the 1920s.

The era between 1913 and 1916 was one that saw the introduction of many brands of small "cycle cars"... lightweight, narrow roadsters with small (one- to four-cylinder) engines, and bicycle or motorcycle-type wire wheels. By 1927, the cycle-car craze was long forgotten, but the Indian Motorcycle Company got the idea once more to build a few such small cars. Between 1927 and 1929, a handful of pilot models were completed. These new cycle-car types were the brainchildren of Jack Bauer, son of the company's president.

Bodies for these Indian cars were built by Merrimac, and one had a Le Baron body. $66,000 was spent for the development of these small cars.

Earlier, Indian had built a special factory in Springfield, Mass., for the production of automobiles; but after it was completed it was sold, and American Rolls-Royces were assembled there. (Rolls-Royce operated an American branch factory from the early 1920s to the early 1930s, and the American-built Rolls-Royces were usually longer and more ostentatious than their British counterparts.)

In 1929, Charles A. Levine gained control of the Indian company and curtailed all "unprofitable" activities, ending Indian's plans for a possible automotive sideline.

The following year, Paul Du Pont acquired the Indian Motorcycle Company, and a few of the final Du Pont automobiles were built at that factory. Du Pont left the automobile business in 1932, but Indian motorcycles were manufactured for many more years.
