WATER REPORT MADE BY STATE BOARD OF HEALTH

"Report on Bacteriological examination of water sample. Laboratory No. 243, collected October 3, 1926, by J. Fred Burt, town of Junction, examined October 4, 1926, by D. source hydrant, Jim McDonough; confirmation on Endos—24 hours, Negative; confirmation Gas Formation in Lactose Broth—24 hours; Negative. Laboratory No. 244, same as No 243, source from Tourist Camp."

"Results of bacteriological analyses of water specimens submitted as indicated on the forms attached, gave no evidence of the presence of organisms of the B. Coli group. The sources from which the samples were taken, may therefore be considered as reasonably safe for drinking purposes at the time of collection of specimens."

(Signed)

"Livingston Anderson, M. D."

The foregoing is a report of the analysis of specimens of water taken from the mains of our local water system by County Health Officer J. Fred Burt. Both samples submitted were absolutely pure.

There has, in the past, been varied comments on the purity of water taken from the Llano rivers and in some instances conjectures were made that some danger existed by reason of supposed impure water taken into the local water system. Several specimens of water have been regularly submitted to the State Board of Health and in nearly every instance the analysis has been negative. From the report of these expert bacteriologists, we feel sure that the town need feel no uneasiness about the local supply, in fact Junction has always been fortunate in not having a general epidemic of any nature that could have been caused by bad water.

WEST TEXAS UTILITIES CO. HELD SAFETY MEETING

In order to properly safeguard the lives and property of its employees and the public as well, the West Texas Utilities Company has an organization composed of the employees known as the Safety League, and the league is divided into groups; group "F" being composed of Eden, Melvin, Menard, Mason, and Junction, of which Mr. H. Pippin, local manager here, is chairman.

Mr. Pippin was in Menard Tuesday to attend the regular meeting of the league, and reports a splendid attendance, and unusual interest manifested by the members.

These meetings are held regularly each month, and the members are instructed in the art and manner for the safe handling of their respective positions, and once every three months the general public is invited to these meetings, that they may become familiar with the methods of the Safety League and lend their assistance in avoiding accidents.

The Utilities Company is alive to the interests of its employees and to the public.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Morris and baby are moving from Junction this week to College Station, Texas, where Mr. Morris will re-enter A. & M. College to enroll in the course of horticulture. Mr. and Mrs. Morris have lived in Junction about a year and their many friends regret their going, but wish them success in their new home.

BRADY HIGH WON FOOTBALL GAME OCTOBER 9

In their fourth football game of the season, the local high school boys lost to the larger Brady team by the score of 20 to 7. However, the Schreiner High boys put up a tough fight and it was not until the last of the game that Brady could be sure of coming out as the winner. Brady scored the first touchdown in the second quarter of the game, and kicked goal for the extra point.

On the first play after the kick-off the Schreiner boys came back for a touchdown when Ned Maddox caught a pass and ran 50 yards and across the goal line. The extra point was given to them when Brady was off-side.

The game stood 7 to 7 at the end of the half. And it was not until late in the third quarter that Brady scored again, when Holland got loose with a pass and ran 20 yards for a touchdown; the try for point was a failure.

Foley got loose and ran to within 15 yards of goal line when he was tackled from behind and the ball was knocked out of his hand. Late in the fourth quarter Brady intercepted a pass and returned it to the one-yard line from where it was carried over for the third counter of the game for Brady. Holland kicked goal for the extra point. The game ended with the ball in mid-field.

The Schreiner High boys will play Mason in Junction Friday, October 15. Mason was defeated by Brady only the week before the above game, by practically the same score. The game tomorrow is expected to be evenly matched, and the team with the most fight is due to win.

Rev. and Mrs. Olen Reid and children of Brownwood visited Junction last week. The Reids have bought a home in Brownwood and are having their furniture shipped from Junction this week.

KIMBLE COUNTY COTTON ABOUT ALL GATHERED

From unofficial sources we learn that the Kimble County cotton crop for this year is about gathered. The two gins in the county report approximately 900 bales ginned to date, with few, probably 200, more in sight.

With the price ranging around 12 to 14 cents, it is rather discouraging to the cotton farmer, and many in this immediate section will refuse to plant their land to cotton another year.

There has been much said, and considerably more written, in regard to the cotton situation in the South, and as yet nothing has been done, to relieve the farmer of the burden he is now forced to bear, owing to the manipulation of the cotton market by those who have the power to do so.

Kimble County is very fortunate in the fact that it is not dependent upon cotton or any other one crop, for that matter, as is many other counties in the State. Kimble is blessed with good ranges for sheep and goats, and while the prices on wool and mohair are not all that could be desired, yet are better proportionately than on cotton. Again, this county is blessed with the native pecan orchards. And while the crop this year is not up to normal, owing to some insect pests that have caused the nuts to drop before maturing, yet taken all in all, this year's crop of pecans will go far towards keeping the farmer and ranchman out of debt.

With these conditions, Kimble County should rejoice and be exceedingly glad, for verily, ours is a land of milk and honey, when compared with many other sections of this fair State.

Mr. B. C. Camp of Corpus Christi arrived Tuesday to accompany his wife and baby home. Mrs. Camp has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. McWright.

FOOTBALL GAME TOMORROW WILL BE GOOD

The Schreiner High School of this city and Mason High football teams are scheduled to lock horns on the local grid-iron tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, and it promises to be a "fight to the finish," as both teams are in excellent condition and will put their best efforts into the game.

It is only fair to the local boys to urge all who possibly can to turn out and at least give your moral support to them. They have worked hard this year and have lost only one game out of four games played, and that one game was lost to a team that outweighed them several pounds, and the boys are not at all discouraged over that defeat.

Coach Blackburn states that his boys are doing some hard work, and with a little encouragement from the business men and others who enjoy a good game, they will fight all the harder. Go out tomorrow and witness a good game.

Mr. Les French, superintendent of the Texas Fish Hatcheries, was in Junction Tuesday of this week. He states that the propagation of the channel catfish had been tested at Kerrville Hatchery, and it was found that the test was entirely satisfactory, as from the small supply of breeders placed in the pond a short time ago had produced prolifically, and that literally thousands of small fish were found a few days ago when the pond was drained. The streams of Kimble County are being stocked with these young channel cat, and as time goes on and the now low streams will be stocked also.

Saturday afternoon Nat Sandherr invited a number of his friends to a birthday party. Games and contests were enjoyed until a late hour, when the birthday cake was cut and delicious refreshments were served to the small guests.

SPLENDID PROGRAM AT LOCAL BAPTIST CHURCH

Last Sunday night at the Baptist Church as was announced in this paper, the program rendered was exceptionally fine and very much enjoyed by some 200 or more people. The weather conditions were rather unfavorable, as clouds gathered and rain threatened before the hour announced for the beginning of the program, and quite a hard rain fell during the rendition of the program. Had the weather been more suitable the church would not have held the crowd.

The first number was a song, "Come Thou Almighty King," by the congregation, which was thoroughly enjoyed, as was the second number, "I'm Praying for You."

The next was prayer by Rev. Dekle, and then the reading of Psalms 150.

The fourth number was a whistling solo (selected) by Mrs. Otto Herrmann, who is in the city on a visit to her mother, Mrs. T. M. Hodges, Jr., and whose gift of whistling is really marvelous. She was on the program for another number in which she imitated the mocking bird in all its high notes, thrills and warbling, in mimicking other birds and noises. One who has listened intently to the mocking bird in his song in the dead of night, could truthfully say that the little lady's imitation was absolutely perfect. Mrs. A. W. Loeffler presided at the piano, and this rendition was very much enjoyed.

Mrs. Weaver H. Baker was the fifth number with a solo, "Dreaming," with Miss Louise Sheppard at the piano. This was well rendered and highly appreciated by the congregation, as every one is always pleased to hear Mrs. Baker in solo.

The sixth number was chorus by the choir and was enjoyed. Number seven, piano/duet, "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" by Mrs. Olney Patterson, with Mrs. Baker at the piano, was a rendition of the old familiar song and portrayed the ability of Mrs. Patterson as an expressionist.

Following this was number eight, which was a quartette, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," by Miss Lois Pippin, Mrs. Patterson, Weaver Baker, and L. H. Scarborough. This number was well rendered and the parts of each well carried.

Number nine was a solo, "Only a Sinner Saved by Grace," by Miss Lois Pippin, with Mrs. Baker at the piano, Miss Pippin is the daughter of H. Pippin, manager for West Texas Utilities Co. Miss Pippin is an evangelistic singer of some note, and until recently has been following her profession in Oregon. This solo made quite an impression on the congregation, as the singer renders her numbers with much spiritual feeling which never fails to reach her hearers.

The next, number ten, song, "Saved, Saved, Saved," by the congregation.

Number eleven, duet, "Nailed to the Cross," by Misses Louise Sheppard and Ruth Brown, with Mrs. Baker at the piano, was exceptionally well received, and the young ladies will be pleased to know that many complimentary remarks were heard concerning this duet.

Number twelve was to have been a saxophone solo by Kittrell Durst, "Tell Mother I'll Be There," but owing to the (Continued on Page Eight.)

REUNION

"Well, I've found a house for you," was Curtiss' first announcement when he met me at the station.

"You mean you already have it?" I questioned, trying to conceal the doubt I felt over a man's ability to select the kind of house a woman wanted.

"Yes, and it's a corker! You'll just love it, Sallie, all we need now for a real love-nest is some furniture, which of course, I shall leave entirely to your selection."

"Let's go see it now, right this minute!" I suggested, eager to know the worst and be through with any unpleasant situation, for my heart was filled with misgiving.

The house Curtiss had found far exceeded my expectations. An interesting cottage of simple English type, it nestled on a hill top, in a little grove of slender pine sapplings, which even now, were holding aloft their tiny green candles. Built sturdily of soft-grey stucco it was gaily trimmed in apple green shutters. The feature, however, which pleased me most was the view of Shades Mountain which lifted one's vision to vistas of violet-blue peaks, the far ones melting harmoniously into the intense blue of Southern skies in the distance.

"Oh, I just adore it, dearest!" I exclaimed, as we stood on the unroofed, sunshiny verandah, with its rose-colored tiles and bright flowing boxes.

"How on earth did you get it? It seems to be absolutely new and unloved in."

"The owner built it for a home to live in but later found that he had put too much in the investment and so he has consented to let us have it with an option to buy later. Wait 'till you see the inside, honey."

Curtiss was like a child proudly displaying a new possession. As he conducted me from one room to another of the thoroughly compact little cottage he eagerly watched for an expression of approval.

"It isn't any bigger than a minute," he said laughingly, "but it's large enough for us—at present." We stood in the doorway of a cozy little room that was flooded with the sunshine of a brilliant spring morning.

"And what will we use this for?" I inquired, "it's scarcely large enough for a bedroom, is it?"

I noticed he was slightly embarrassed.

"The owner told me he planned it for a nursery," he said softly. Then followed an intense silence during which my gaze wandered out to the unbounded blue of the mountains which could be seen clearly through the casement windows. It would be perfect, I was thinking, to have a son for Curtiss. All the subtle, mysterious yearning for Motherhood, that is hidden away in the heart of even the most frivolous woman, came surging. Besides, my thought continued, babies weren't so much trouble in this new generation. I remembered conversations of my friends who discussed children in a modern language. There was no more unscientific joggling and humoring of infants. They were put to bed at a certain time and if they showed their resentment or displeasure at the first few times they were allowed to do so unmolested and later, it was said, the effect of the discipline was automatic. They behaved under the new order like little angels, sleeping peacefully until it was time to awaken. Scientifically prepared food had annihilated the usual annoying ills that old-fashioned babies were wont to indulge in. Indeed, I thought, it must be an easy matter rearing a child under the new rules and regulations! Besides, there was the wonder that filled my heart when I thought of being a mother. My thoughts ran on and on until finally they were blotted out by an overwhelming realization which I immediately voiced to Curtiss.

"We can't possibly afford a baby so we'll have to use this room for a study."

The reason advanced was apparently a new one to Curtiss but except for a look of disappointment that swept over his features, he might not even have heard my terse conclusion.

Going back to the hotel, I asked Curtiss more of the details of having secured the house for a reasonable rental, a house, which though small, was undeniably attractive.

"I went into Louie Bradley's real estate office to see what he could get for us and ran into Letitia Evans."

"Who is she?" I interrupted. "Oh, didn't I ever tell you about Letitia? She and my sister were at Ogontz together. She spent one summer with us out on the Pacific. That was their first year at school and she was nothing but an infant. I haven't seen her since. She was an incorrigible flapper at that time, but the family fell for what they called her 'original enthusiasm.' She was original all right!" he smiled in remembrance, "I reminded her the other day of her bad manners."

"She sounds rather impossible."

"No, no, not at all. You'll like her. She wins everybody, children and old men included. My father thought she was a wonder."

"How old is she now?"

"About twenty-two or so, I should imagine. And still flapping," he added.

"But I still can't understand what she had to do with getting this house for us."

"Oh, yes," he returned to my first question, "you see she was in Louie Bradley's place and recognized me immediately. She was very cordial," he hesitated as if he were about to tell me something and then reconsidered. "Anyway," he went on, "when she heard what I wanted she said she knew exactly the place and insisted on taking me out to see it."

"What was she doing in a real estate office?"

"She has gone in for the interior decorating business and has a department of her own in Bradley's."

"But you said she went to Ogontz—"

"Oh, her dad's quite wealthy—in fact he's probably the richest man in the State—ought to be because he still has his first dollar—but Letitia craves luxury—has to have it and so she hit on this scheme to play with and amuse herself and incidentally to make money. I hear she's done quite well with it, but she's that type—she would have succeeded, in a way, in any line of endeavor. She could sell icicles to an Eskimo and have him pleased with the transaction. Wait 'till you see her, Sallie."

I was consumed with curiosity. I think there was a tiny bit of jealousy brewing because, in spite of Curtiss' avowed disapproval of Letitia Evans she now sounded alarmingly attractive.

"When will I have that pleasure?" I asked, feigning indifference. "I'm interested in meeting all your old, er—friends, you know, Curtiss."

"She says she's having us over tonight for dinner. I accepted because I couldn't plead another engagement when you weren't even here you see, dearest."

OUR GAME LAWS

In view of the fact that the trapping season will soon open and some of our patrons are interested in knowing the law, we are herewith printing for their information the laws of Texas applicable thereto:

Article 923m, Penal Code: All the fur-bearing animals of this State are hereby declared to be the property of the people of this State. For the purposes of this act, wild beaver, wild otter, wild mink, wild ring-tail cat, wild badger, wild polecat or skunk, wild raccoon, wild muskrat, wild opossum, wild civet cat are hereby declared to be fur-bearing animals.

Article 923mm, Penal Code: The term trapper as used under the provisions of this act is any person who traps, kills or takes any of the animals for pelts, hereinafter mentioned, for the purpose of sale or barter.

Article 923n, Penal Code: This article requires that all residents, non-residents, and alien trappers desiring to trap fur-bearing animals shall procure a license to do so, which expires February 15th of each year after date of issuance. The fee for residents shall be $1.00 and for non-residents and aliens $50.00.

Article 923o, Penal Code: Owners and tenants and their children, who have lived as bona fide residents of this State for a period of 12 months continuously and immediately before applying for a trapper's license, shall have the right to kill or take from their premises any fur-bearing animal for sale or barter during the open season.

Article 923pp, Penal Code: This article makes it unlawful to take a beaver, otter, or fox into possession for the purpose of barter or sale for ten years from 1925.

Article 923q, Penal Code: This article provides that the closed season is from February 15th to November 13th each year, making the open season from November 13th to February 15th each year.

Article 923r, Penal Code: It shall be unlawful for any person to set any trap or deadfall on the inclosed lands of another without the consent or permission of the owner of said land.

Some of the statutes are not quoted in full, but the meaning given only, as it requires too much space to set out in detail every statute.

We have doubted the propriety of the enactment of the above statutes, more especially with reference to their application to the people of this county. Fur-bearing animals have provided a source of revenue in the winter time, open to many people that are in many instances unable to do anything else. The old trapper and school boy alike have suffered from the operation of these laws.

When we come to consider that Kimble County was among the leaders of the State in marketing the hides of fur-bearing animals at times shipping better than $25,000 worth of furs, we can see what it means in dollars and cents to our people to have the season cut more than half when there is a demand for the pelts of fur-bearing animals.

Another vice of the statute, as we view it, is the protection of the fox, from trappers. This animal is regarded by many ranchmen as a greater menace to the live stock industry than the wild cat or wolf, the latter two animals making most of his depredations in the night time, while the fox operates as much in the day as night. As the law now stands, the pelt of this animal cannot be marketed at any time and a trapper will, of course make no effort to kill them, with the result that they will multiply and become even a greater menace than in the past.

The ranchman has the legal right to protect his stock against the depredations of any animal, but he could have been materially assisted in his work by an open season on the fox.

Those of us who have been reared in the hills of the west, know that the civet cat, the skunk, and ring-tail cat and pole cat are worse in their inroads on chicken roosts during the closed season prescribed by the law than during the open season. During the spring and summer these animals often kill the entire hatch of chicks and turkeys and with only three months of the year open in which there is any inducement to kill them, and the further fact that they are by nature very prolific, we do not believe the best interests of the farmer and ranchmen are served by the law. Then, too, many of our people believe that the activities of trappers in previous years largely account for the fact that we now have more wild turkey on the ranges than in times past. The farmer and ranchman can, to some extent, protect his domesticated fowls, but the turkey and quail are at the mercy of the animals named by the law during their breeding season. It looks as though a rigid enforcement of this statute may work at cross purposes with the laws protecting our wild fowl.

This comment is not meant to be understood that the laws herein set out should not be obeyed as written. It is our duty to obey the law and in the event their operation is not for the best interests of the people, ask for remedial legislation at the first opportunity. Some of the statutes enacted were very good, more especially the one prohibiting trapping without permission. In times past many goats and sheep have been caught in traps set by inexperienced trappers and were left crippled for life or subsequently died, and the owner of the premises had very little protection. As the law now stands he can protect his live stock from the depredations of men who do not know how to trap.

IN MISSOURI RECENTLYHouston (Missouri) Herald, September 23: The news of the death of Martin G. Coyle came as a shock to our people last Saturday night, although it was known that he had been very low for the past week or more, but when the news that this good and popular citizen had passed away then our people realized that the loss to our community was indeed great.
Mr. Coyle was sick for near two weeks, but was confined to his bed for only a little more than a week. The nature of his sickness was hardening of the arteries and caused a weakening of the heart. He gradually became worse as the days went by, seemed to suffer a great deal until he passed into an almost unconscious state. Death came a few minutes after 9 o'clock Saturday night, and closed a useful and eventful life.Martin G. Coyle was born in Madison County, Kentucky, May 10, 1856, making his age at death September 18, 1926, 70 years, five months and eight days. He was a son of Marion and Telitha Coyle. He came to Missouri early in the 70's, located first in Henry County,
and later in Vernon County.
Came to Texas County in 1855.
From 1877 to 1880 Mr. Coyle served as a member of the Texas Rangers, and this was at a time when he had to deal with the Indians, Mexican Greasers and desperadoes. Only last winter when Mr. and Mrs.
Coyle made their last trip to Texas, he met up with some ofthe Ranger Service, men now 84 years of age, and they exchanged many reminiscences.Mr. Coyle was married to Jenetta Conley January 28, 1889. To this union one child was born, Grover, who died in 1902. He is survived by his loving wife, one brother, I. B.
Coyle; two sisters, Mrs. W. N.
Brown, of Pryor, Okla., and Mrs. C. L. Bender, of Kansas City, Kans., and several nephews, nieces and other relatives.Funeral services were held at the family home Tuesday afternoon, conducted by Rev. J. J.
Carty, an old time friend, and burial followed in Houston cemetery.The above is an excerpt of a notice of the death of Mart Coyle contained in the paper credited above. Mr. Coyle was well known by the early settlers of this county, having been stationed here as a Ranger under Major Jones in the days when Kimble County was a rendezvous for cattle rustlers and other social outcasts.There are very few of the men alive who blazed the way of civilization in Southwest Texas in an early day, and ere long they will have all answer-whence no traveller ever returns. We could all do well to emulate the examples of rug-

Broken UmbrellaOne rainy day as I was going to work my wife gave me an umbrella which was broken. It would open without pressing the button. Thinking it was better than nothing on a rainy day I took it. When I got on the street car it was crowded so I had to stand. Suddenly the umbrella opened up and with it lifted the dresses of the women around. I was never so em-

STATE LIBRARY TO LOAN BIOGRAPHIES

Rural and small town residents may borrow about 500 biographies from the State Library, Austin, for payment only of transportation postage.

"Some Notable Men and Women" is the title of a mimeographed list, which is now being distributed by the State Library, giving the surname of the subject of the biography, the author, and the dates of nearly 500 biographies in the State Library.

The purpose of this list, Miss Octavia F. Rogan, State Librarian, said, is to let residents of the State know definitely what biographies may be borrowed. In the past inquiries have had to be told that the Library either did not have the requested titles or that they were too rare to be circulated.

A copy of the list "Some Notable Men and Women," with rules for borrowing the books listed may be obtained gratis by writing the Texas State Library, Austin, Texas.

Fish That Cries

In a fishing harbor, a strange fish, of the size and appearance of a baby's doll, has been caught. It is like a dog, with eyes, mouth, nose, ears and two small uncommon-looking fins. This curious creature, resembling what the Chinese describe as a "kwa" fish, is popularly known as a mermaid's child, and utters a sound like the cry of a baby. The possession of this fish is said to bring good luck.

Laws Against Profanity

In 1794 the Pennsylvania legislature passed an act providing that any person, over sixteen years of age, blaspheming, cursing, or profaning the name of Almighty God should be fined the sum of 67 cents or be confined in the house of correction 24 hours. In 1804 it was amended that the perpetration of a curse or oath involved a penalty of 40 cents or detention for 12 hours in the house of correction.

Synthetic Women

It is a world to see how commonly we are blinded with the collusions of women, and more enticed by their ornaments being artificial than their proportion being natural. I loathe almost to think on their ointments and apothecary drugs, the sleeking of their faces and all their slobber sauces.

TEXAS AND TEXANS.

(By Will H. Mayes.)

Cotton Holding Essential

The cotton price situation is the most important problem now confronting the entire South. All agree that present prices are much below the cost of production and that if prices do not advance while the present crop is still largely in the hands of the producers many will have to face bankruptcy. The farmers will not be the only sufferers, for industry and trade, in the South at least, are inseparable from farm prosperity. Being the largest cotton producers, Texans will suffer most. The banks cannot carry all the financial load of the cotton crop and this should not be expected. Merchants can carry some of it, but not all or even a greater part. Business interests should help as far as possible and the farmers themselves will have to carry the rest of the burden if they bring prices up. It is a case in which the whole country should stand patriotically together for the common good.

How All May Help

First of all, every farmer who can possibly do so should take his entire cotton crop, after it is baled, back to his home and store it and insure it there, or else place it in a warehouse and hold it for a price of not less than 20 cents or whatever price may be generally agreed should be received. Then, every farmer should agree to reduce his cotton acreage 20 or 25 per cent as may be generally determined. Farmers who are compelled to sell some of their cotton should sell as little as possible, and this should be bought by bankers, merchants, and capitalists, who should agree to hold it for the stipulated price. It would be better for farmers to hold their cotton themselves where they can borrow enough money on it at a reasonable interest. Mass meetings should be held in every county and definite holding and planting plans should be worked out by farmers and business men together along lines outlined by some co-operative central organization, and adherence to plans adopted should be a test of one's loyalty to his fellowmen. No half-hearted, poorly organized and poorly supported plan will be effective. All must help or all must suffer.

Inconsistency Largely to Blame

I am not enough of a dreamer to hope that any great change in the practices or habits of a people can be brought about overnight or even in a year, but I do believe that if the right kind of concerted effort should be made and kept up, the people of the South would in time adopt a more consistent attitude toward the use of cotton goods. It would appear to be to the interest of industry and trade in the cotton-growing States to do something to stimulate a pride in the home consumption of the principal home-grown crop of these States, but so far as I know no effort has ever been made to kindly such a pride in any of our own products. It is true that at one time we had under way a poorly supported "Made-In-Texas" movement, but what is needed is a universally supported "Grow-in-the-South" movement to be especially applied to cotton and as clearly defined as the California-grown brands of products. "Grow it and use it" would be a consistent motto for the cotton-growing States.

Pecan Crop Market

While pecan prices have not yet been fixed, the crop reports indicate that the yield will be larger than last year and enough to cause buyers to feel justified in offering a low price. Although the demand for pecans is constantly increasing, prices are not making a corresponding advance. The Southern States grow practically all the pecans, and like cotton, they are rushed on the market in a few months. Pecan growers are going to have to get together and organize a marketing system that will stabilize prices. Until this is done, they will be at the mercy of the buyers. When it is done, they, and not the buyers will fix the prices. Pecans can be placed on cold storage and kept in good condition almost indefinitely. Some day those who produce the food and clothing for the rest of the world will learn that marketing is just as essential as production and should be given as careful attention.

Suggest Uses of Pecans

Now that pecans are becoming a staple product in Texas, why is more not done to get them more generally used as food? It is generally admitted by dieticians that they are more nourishing than meats of any kind and have greater food values. They are certainly more appetizing, and may be used in many ways that meats cannot be used. They improve both vegetable and fruit salads and may be advantageously cooked with many other kinds of foods. Pecan growers need an "educational bureau" to acquaint the public with the hundreds of ways in which these nuts may be used. No good reason can be given for pecans being sold at a lower price than is paid for bacon or other high priced meats.

The Stray Cat
(By Wesley Peacock, Ph. B.)

The other morning when I opened the kitchen door for the bottle of frozen milk somebody's rejected cat slipped into the house. She was unafraid, for her back was bowed, her tail erect, and she was purring in recognition of a generous welcome out of the cold.

When she had lapped her meal of milk, she rubbed her side against my trousers before seeking a warm place against the kitchen stove, where she coiled up and lay forgiving and forgetting; forgiving the cruel master through whose superstition she had been cast into our alley by the kitchen door, rather than into the nearest pond; and forgetting the heartless manner of her abandonment, but not forgetting the tender heart of the baby girl mistress whose life had been saddened by the enforced separation from her only pet and friend.

We christened this little intruder the "brat," and as such our children knew her and called her; merely a cast-away left on the steps of the back door, not even wrapped in swaddling clothes.

When the neighbors' children came to play they learned the story of the "brat" and they all wondered if we were going to let it stay at our house, and if our nice cats in the front room would be allowed to stay with it; and the bad news spread quickly in the neighborhood. Our nice cats resented this intrusion, and bowed their backs and looked askance when they entered the kitchen for breakfast. And our cats also told the neighbors' cats, and all agreed that it was a scandal and a shame and that the strange cat should be stoned, steadfastly refusing to accept her as their equal in a social way.

But all agreed to put up with the alley cat, and to call her "brat," if she would only stay in the kitchen and work, and chase the cock-roaches away at night, but she must eat in the kitchen, too, and not go out at night without a chaperone.

So the life of the founding was doomed to sadness and to work, and to the ways of the kitchen for the rest of her days. But when I enter the kitchen to make the fire for breakfast, there is one cat that never fails to purr and to rub her sides against my trousers, and to mew for her meal of milk.

KNOW TEXAS

Texas has eighteen members of the Lower House of Congress. The Eighteenth Texas District contains 53 counties.

There are thirty cities of more than 10,000 population in Texas.

Texas is second among the States in value of live stock.

The value of farm crops produced in Texas is approximately one-tenth of all crop values in the United States. It amounts to about a billion dollars a year.

The cotton crop of Texas is equal to that of India and exceeds that of any other nation in the world. It is one-third the total for the United States.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris. Schraub left Sunday for Dallas.

II. Blackbeard Takes to Piracy

IN 1716 a certain Captain Teach, who had served an apprenticeship in lawlessness as a privateer out of Jamaica, "went on account." He was put in command of a sloop by the pirate, Benjamin Hornigold, and the two leaders set out from Providence for the American coast. In the West Indies they took their first prizes, then continued on to the coast of Virginia, where they captured a fine French vessel engaged in the Guinea trade. On this Teach mounted 40 guns and renamed it the Queen Anne's Revenge.

His first capture was a big ship named the Great Allen, which he plundered and burned. Attacked by H. M. S. Scarborough, the pirate drove off the man-of-war after a sharp engagement and continued on his way. His next victim was the sloop of the pirate leader, Maj. Stede Bonnet, whom Teach, in a high-handed manner, deprived of his vessel and put one of his own men in command.

Blackbeard's captures were numberless. One of them was a ship bearing the curious name of the Protestant Caesar which Teach burned, not because of her name but because she was from Boston where a number of pirates had lately been hanged. He now turned to the Carolina coast, which had just been suffering from ravages of Capt. Charles Vane.

He capped the climax by sailing his fleet—he had three ships by this time—outside the port of Charleston, S. C., and capturing every vessel that tried to enter or leave port. On one of these were several prominent citizens of the colony, whom Blackbeard held as hostages. Then he sent word to the governor of South Carolina that he was in need of medicines, and unless they were sent forthwith, every one of his prisoners would be killed. There was some delay in according to his demands, and the pirates set about to put his threat into execution. Fortunately, however, the medicine chest arrived in time to save their lives.

Despite his many successes, Teach's life was not a bed of roses. He had unruly men for his crew, and he had to rule them with an iron hand. There has been preserved from his journal the following literary entries: "1718—Such a Day. Rime all day. Our Company somewhat sober. A 4 d confusion amongst us. —Rogues plotting a great Talk of Separation. —so I took'd Sharp for a Prize. 1718—Such a Day. Took one with a Great deal of Liquor on Board; so kept the Company hot, d. d. hot, then all things went well again. —Such a day, indeed! And these only two of many in his infamous career. Quality Pork Sausage

IS DELICIOUS

Butchers and sausage manufacturers throughout the country are coming to a point where they realize, more thoroughly than ever before, that an exceptionally fine grade of pork sausage will act as an advertising medium for their business. In fact, many concerns are now specializing on this item. If they were figuring only on the extra business that they might obtain on pork sausage, alone, they probably would not be so much inclined to give special attention to that one item.

However, knowing, as they do, that they can build their business on all other kinds of sausage and meat, by turning out tasty and delicious pork sausage, they are not overlooking any opportunity to improve upon it. One of the most important things to be given consideration, when aiming to produce the kind of pork sausage that will build business, is the seasoning. It has often been said, as you of course know, that a sausage maker might use the finest meat that he could obtain, but, if he were to flavor his finished goods with the wrong kind of seasoning, he would not be likely to command a big share of the business in his section. On the other hand, the sausage maker who might be inclined to use meat that would be more economical, but who would give special attention to the seasoning, would be likely to enjoy a big share of the business.

In other words, the seasoning used is, as stated above, without doubt one of the most important items entering into the manufacture of sausage.

And that's our reason for using B. Heller & Company's famous Zan Zibar Brand Seasonings, because it's the very highest in Quality. Try some, if you don't like them we'll refund your money, and never ask what you did with the uneaten portion.

BRIDGE PARTY

The Merry Wives Club and a number of friends were entertained by Mrs. Van Martin at her home Friday afternoon with a Bridge Party in honor of Mrs. Ben Wheat, of Sonora.

Decorations of black cats, jack-o-lanterns, pumpkins and witches were used in profusion, while the orange and black shaded lights added to the Halloween atmosphere.

After several games of bridge Mrs. Guy Wynne received a pair of black silk hose, wrapped in orange paper, for high club score, while a similar guest prize went to Mrs. C. R. Stevenson. Mrs. Clarence Jettison was consoled with a miniature Halloween favor.

Orange ice and mahogany cake were served to about 25 guests.

LONDON LADY ENTERTAINS VISITORS

Mrs. George May of London entertained Friday night at her home, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Adams, Jr. Mrs. Adams was Miss Selma May, niece of Mrs. May, before her marriage.

The guests were entertained with music and singing in the early part of the evening. Contests between couples and sides followed the music.

Refreshments of ice cream and angel food cake were served.

Among those attending the affair were: Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Furr, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Weaver, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Amaon, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Amaon, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Hensley; Misses Winnie Cooper, Nellie May Cummings, Capitola Ellis; Messrs. French Cummings, William Gebhart, Edgar Furr, Walton and Goodall Kothman, and the honorees.

CITY MEAT MARKET
CHANGES OWNERSHIP

A deal was closed this week in which H. I. Taylor and Fred Taylor became the owners of the City Market, formerly owned by F. S. Bissett. The new proprietors will take charge on November 1.

The many friends of Frank will regret that he is not to be one of our business men for some time at least. He states that he is selling his business because of his health and that of his wife. He has enjoyed a fine business for the time he has been with us, and we wish for him continued success in whatever endeavor he may undertake in the future. He retains title to the building in which he has been doing business, but has leased it to the purchasers of his business, who will continue to serve their trade at the same business stand.

The Taylor Brothers are well versed in the live stock business and will use their best efforts to serve their patrons after November 1.

The KITCHEN
CABINET

It's the way you hold out against odds that are great
That proves what your courage is worth.
It's the way that you stand to the brims of fate
That shows up your stature and worth.

And victory is nothing but proof of your skill.
Venerated with a glory that's true.
Unless it is proof of unflinching will.
And unless you have suffered to win.

—Edgar Guest.

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

Those who are fond of sweet potatoes will like this recipe.

Sugared Sweet Potatoes.—Select medium sized sweet potatoes, pare and slice. Place these in a buttered dish. A casserole is best; add one and one half cupsful of water (boiling hot) and sprinkle with one teaspoonful of salt and four tablespoonfuls of maple sugar; dot with bits of butter, using four tablespoonfuls. Bake 30 minutes and then set into a pan of hot water to wait for serving time.

Eggs in Spinach Nests.—Prepare six rounds of toast, butter well and cover each round with cooked and seasoned spinach, making a hollow in the center. Drop an egg into the hollow of each nest and place the dish in the oven until the eggs are cooked. Sprinkle with paprika, dot with butter and sprinkle with chopped ham.

Cheese Sandwich Filling.—Prepare a white sauce, using two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour and one-half cupful of milk. Put one-half of a can of pineapples, two hard-cooked eggs, and one-half pound of cheese through the meat grinder; add one raw egg, one tablespoonful each of sugar and one teaspoonful of salt, with one-half cupful of vinegar. Cook over water until smooth and thick, after combining mixtures. Cool and use as sandwich filling for white bread.

Betrothal Sandwiches.—Cut white bread into one-fourth inch slices. Shape with a heart cutter, spread with pineapple butter, put together in pairs, press edges lightly and decorate with small hearts cut from pineapples, using the small vegetable cutter for this purpose.

SPLENDID PROGRAM AT LOCAL BAPTIST CHURCH

weather condition he was unable to be present, and Mrs. A. W. Loeffler substituted, and rendered this number in solo, with Mrs. Baker at the piano. The song was given with much feeling and caused considerable favorable comment.

Number thirteen was the whistling imitation of the mocking bird by Mrs. Otto Herrmann, as was mentioned above.

The fourteenth number was song, "Trust and Obey," by the congregation.

Then the benediction was pronounced by Mrs. Williams.

Rev. Dekle deserves much praise and commendation for this delightfully entertaining program, in which he eliminated his regular sermon, and it is the opinion of the writer that if other ministers and pastors would devote more time to this kind of worship they would find the results most gratifying. This program was indeed a treat to all.

Basis of All Art

A great deal of the joy of life consists in doing perfectly—or at least to the best of one's ability—everything he attempts to do. It is this conscientious completeness which turns work into art. The smallest thing well done becomes artistic.—William Matthews.

Fruit-Fed Puppies

Fruit-fed puppies are the latest, a British veterinarian having proved, to his own satisfaction at least, that puppies brought up on a diet of fruit—includes oranges, apples and bananas—make better and bigger dogs than those that have known only the usual dog foods.
