Proposal could strengthen minority voting

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The gerrymandering of the old political machine may be passe, but "packing" the Midland County commissioner precincts to strengthen the potential voting power of minority ethnic groups may be legally looming in Midland County.

Such seemed to be in the making Monday, when Evelyn Gould, spokesman for the Midland County re-districting committee, proposed a realignment of commissioner precincts. The proposal theoretically would give the black and Mexican-American community in east Midland the voting power to elect a minority candidate to Precinct 2 on the Midland County Commissioners' Court.

The proposal, unanimously endorsed by the nine-member committee, is subject to public hearings and approval by the Commissioners' Court and the U.S. Department of Justice. The county population figure — 82,636 — used to re-align the four commissioner precinct lines is based on the 1980 census count. As proposed, the widest population variance among the precincts is 3.2 percent.

"I don't think anyone in any city could come that close," said Mrs. Gould, who has worked with the Midland League of Women Voters in trying to enlighten potential voters on issues and political candidates.

FOLLOWING IS the proposal for each commissioner precinct and includes the population, percent of minority people in each and the general geographical area of each precinct.

—Precinct 1: Proposed: 20,293 population; 4.9 percent minority. Black count, 164 persons for 0.8 percent; Mexican-American count, 833 persons for 4.1 percent. (Under existing lines, the precinct has 8 percent minority population.)

The area would take in that portion of northwest Midland which is west of Midkiff Road, north of Illinois Avenue, and runs south along Midland Drive until it reaches U.S. Highway 80. The proposed precinct would form a P-shaped portion in west Midland County and would, as Precinct 1 does now, encompass Midland Regional Airport. Commissioner is Durward Wright, Democrat.

Precinct 1 currently takes in much of west central Midland and southwest Midland County.

—Precinct 2: Proposed: 20,511 population; 71.5 percent minority. Black count is 6,529 for 31.8 percent; Mexican-American count is 8,139 for 39.7 percent. (Under existing lines, the precinct has 34 percent minority population.)

The area takes in that portion of Midland which is east of Big Spring Street, and takes in virtually all of southeast Midland County east of Big Spring Street and the Valley View community. Commissioner is Charlie Welch, Democrat.

Precinct 2 currently takes in northeast Midland, the Greenwood community and less of a chunk of southeast Midland County than is proposed by the committee.

—Precinct 3: Proposed: 20,964 population; 14.8 percent minority. Black count is 313 persons for 1.5 percent; Mexican-American count is 2,

780 for 13.3 percent. (Under existing lines, the precinct has 49 percent minority.)

The proposed area would take in a lion's share of west central and southwest Midland west of Big Spring Street and would incorporate much of what is now Precinct 1's territory. It also takes in about a 160-square-mile strip of Midland County between State Highway 349 and Farm Road 1788 and south of U.S. Highway 80. Commissioner is C. DeWayne Davis, Democrat.

Precinct 3 currently takes in much of east and southeast Midland and Construction work resumed in Midland today after the carpenters' strike was settled Monday afternoon in the fifth negotiating period. Here, workers align support beams for the new parking garage at The Midland National Bank. Construction work had virtually stopped on all construction sites in Midland and Odessa when contractors walked off their jobs last Wednesday.

Area carpenters return to work

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland-Odessa area carpenters who had gone on strike last Wednesday for higher wages and benefits were back at work today but not at the wages they had sought.

The strike, which was the carpenters' first since 1955, was settled Monday afternoon in the fifth negotiating period but not at the $4 hourly increase which the journeyman carpenters were at one time seeking.

They settled for a $2.90 hourly increase over a two-year period. The hike amounts to about 12 percent per year and in straight time the carpenters will gross about $30,000 each a year.

"It's not what we were after," said Charles Morris, business manager of the 350-member Carpenters Union 1428 in Midland, "but we'll hang in there."

Odessa contractor J.W. Cooper, chairman of the Associated General Contractors' labor relations committee for West Texas, this morning said the carpenters had "made a lot out of nothing" but was glad that commercial construction work again was under way in force. He termed the carpenters' initial bid for a $4 hourly increase "out of sight."

"We're ready to get (back) to work," Cooper said.

The carpenters, who conducted the peaceable and orderly picketing which they had pledged, were making $11.55 an hour, which came in an 8 percent wage increase two years ago. Their picket lines were honored by other union craftsmen — iron workers, plumbers and electricians.

The benefits — health insurance and pension plans — were not directly included in the wage increase. Those benefits will be financed by the carpenters from their wage hike and will be administered by the Carpenters Union, Morris said.

Not all carpenters view the settlement equally.

"The guys who are realistic realize that we got down to hard work (on the negotiating), and they can live with it," Morris said. "The guys who live in a dream world may think that we should have gotten more of an increase."

"I was proud of the men and the way they behaved themselves," Morris said. "By and large, they did an excellent job."

The $2.90 hourly increase will come in four increments, beginning with a 10-cent hourly increase this month, Cooper said. The formal contract on the settlement had not been signed this morning, but will take place soon, Cooper said.

In their first negotiating sessions, carpenters had asked for a $3.08 hourly pay increase over two years, but went up to $4 in the next session, and then dropped to $3.85, Cooper said. The AGC was offering a $2.40 wage increase.

Last week, the AGC upped its offer to $2.80, and the carpenters were holding out for their reduced hike of $3.40.

Cooper estimated that one-half to three-fourths of the thousands of craftsmen on commercial construction in the area are union workers. Craftsmen on residential work are, for the most part, non-union, he said.

Woman nominated to be justice

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today chose Arizona Judge Sandra D. O'Connor to become the first woman justice in the history of the Supreme Court, calling her "truly a person for all seasons," and fulfilling a promise he made on the way to the White House.

Reagan said he did not name a woman to succeed retiring Justice Potter Stewart "merely to do so," but because Mrs. O'Connor has the qualities needed on the high court.

"She is truly a person for all seasons, possessing those unique qualities of temperament, fairness, intellectual capacity and devotion to the public good which had characterized the 101 brethren who have preceded her," the president said in his nationally broadcast and televised announcement.

"I commend you to her, and I urge the Senate's swift bipartisan confirmation, so that as soon as possible she may take her seat on the court and her place in history," Reagan said.

He said her nomination will be sent to the Senate as soon as FBI background investigations have been completed. The court is in recess until next autumn.

"We're satisfied that she will have no problem as far as confirmation is concerned," said Attorney General William French Smith.

There remained the prospect that ardent conservatives would challenge her for past support of a constitutional amendment on the rights of women, and on abortion. Smith said he was confident that no single issue would dominate the confirmation proceedings.

Strong opposition came immediately from the National Right to Life Committee, the nation's largest anti-abortion group.

"We feel this is directly contrary to the Republican platform and to Mr. Reagan's previously stated position," said Dr. J.C. Wilkie, president of the organization.

Reagan said he was completely satisfied with Mrs. O'Connor's record on right to life issues.

As majority leader of the Arizona Senate, Mrs. O'Connor backed the Equal Rights Amendment resolution introduced in 1972. But she backed away from the resolution after learning that Arizona's two Republican senators at that time, Barry Goldwater and Paul Fannin, were among eight U.S. senators who voted against it.

In 1974, she sponsored a conservative alternative to ERA, an advisory resolution referring the issue to voters. She also strongly supported Arizona's first spending limit resolution.

Reagan described the selection of a justice as "the most awesome appointment" that presidents make because justices leave "footprints on the sands of time."

Justice Stewart's decision to leave the high court opened the first vacancy there in six years. Reagan's predecessor, Jimmy Carter, never was able to nominate a justice.

Reagan's choice of a woman justice fulfilled a campaign promise made last Oct. 14, when candidate Reagan said "one of the first Supreme Court vacancies in my administration will be filled by the most qualified woman I can find."

Reagan repeated that campaign pledge as he announced the choice of Mrs. O'Connor and urged swift Senate confirmation so that she can take her seat on the court "and her place in history."

Mrs. O'Connor, 51, was graduated from Stanford University law school in 1952, with the Order of the Coif. Among her law school classmates was Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist.

She was a member of the board of editors of the Stanford Law Review.

Same man suspected in Midland-Odessa holdups

Police in Midland and Odessa were searching for the same armed robber who apparently held up two stores in Odessa and one in Midland within two hours early this morning.

The first robbery occurred at 3:15 a.m. at Winchell's Donut Store on East Eighth Street in Odessa. A clerk told police a man entered the store, ordered some donuts, then brandished a small revolver and demanded the money from a cash register. He escaped on foot after being handed a small amount of cash.

An hour later, a man matching the description of the first bandit held up the 7-Eleven Store at 3527 Oakwood in Odessa. He also escaped on foot after obtaining a small amount of cash.

About 5:20 a.m., the Winchell's Store in Dellwood Plaza in Midland was held up. Details were sketchy, and it wasn't immediately known if any money was taken.

The man was described as black, in his early 20s, wearing jogging shorts and a red and white tank-top shirt.

Key Senate Republicans rule out SS tax hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two key Senate Republicans are ruling out further Social Security tax increases, despite a fresh warning that the retirement fund will be bankrupt by the end of 1982 unless taxes are raised or benefits are slashed.

On the eve of Senate hearings today, Sens. William L. Armstrong of Colorado and Bob Dole of Kansas stopped short of endorsing President Reagan's proposals for major reductions in benefits, including a hefty penalty for early retirement.

Armstrong compared Monday's annual assessment of Social Security's solvency to "a slow-motion fall off a cliff."

"We can see the end coming but still have a little time to consider saving alternatives," he said. But he and Dole also ruled out another alternative — using general revenue funds in an effort to make the retirement fund solvent.

Health and Human Services Secretary Richard Schweiker and John Svahn, head of the Social Security Administration, were called before Armstrong's Senate Finance subcommittee today to testify on the administration's plans for rescuing the retirement fund.

The system's trustees reported Monday that the retirement fund will go broke by the end of next year and the related Medicare program could fall within the decade unless taxes are raised or benefits are slashed.

The report, compiled by Schweiker, Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan and Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, urged Congress to act quickly to adopt the Reagan plan or one "which will accomplish the same objectives."

"I don't expect we will raise payroll taxes — they are already a back-breaking burden — and I don't think we will go into the general revenue fund," Armstrong said. "That's sort of like asking Amtrak to bail out Chrysler. The rest is completely negotiable."

Dole, the Senate Finance chairman, said the trustees' projections "underscore the need for Congress to move quickly to restore the soundness of the Social Security system."

He noted that a series of increasingly gloomy trustees' reports in the mid-1970s led to the enactment in 1977 of the largest peacetime tax increase in U.S. history.

"Taxpayers, who have already experienced two of the tax increases enacted then, face another four increases by 1990," he said. "And yet, the reports today confirm that these added taxes will be insufficient to keep the system solvent."

"Any further increase in the tax burden — whether directly through the payroll tax or indirectly through general revenues — is obviously out of the question," Dole said.

About 115 million workers pay payroll taxes. Some 35 million people receive benefits from the old age and disability funds and nearly 25 million are enrolled in the Medicare program.

The current payroll deduction rate is 6.65 percent on incomes up to $29,700. It is scheduled to rise to 7.65 percent over the next decade, and the income ceiling will go up as well.

The administration earlier this year proposed a comprehensive package of ideas for saving the system. The president wants to penalize persons retiring before age 65 by reducing the benefits available to them from 80 percent to 55 percent beginning next year.

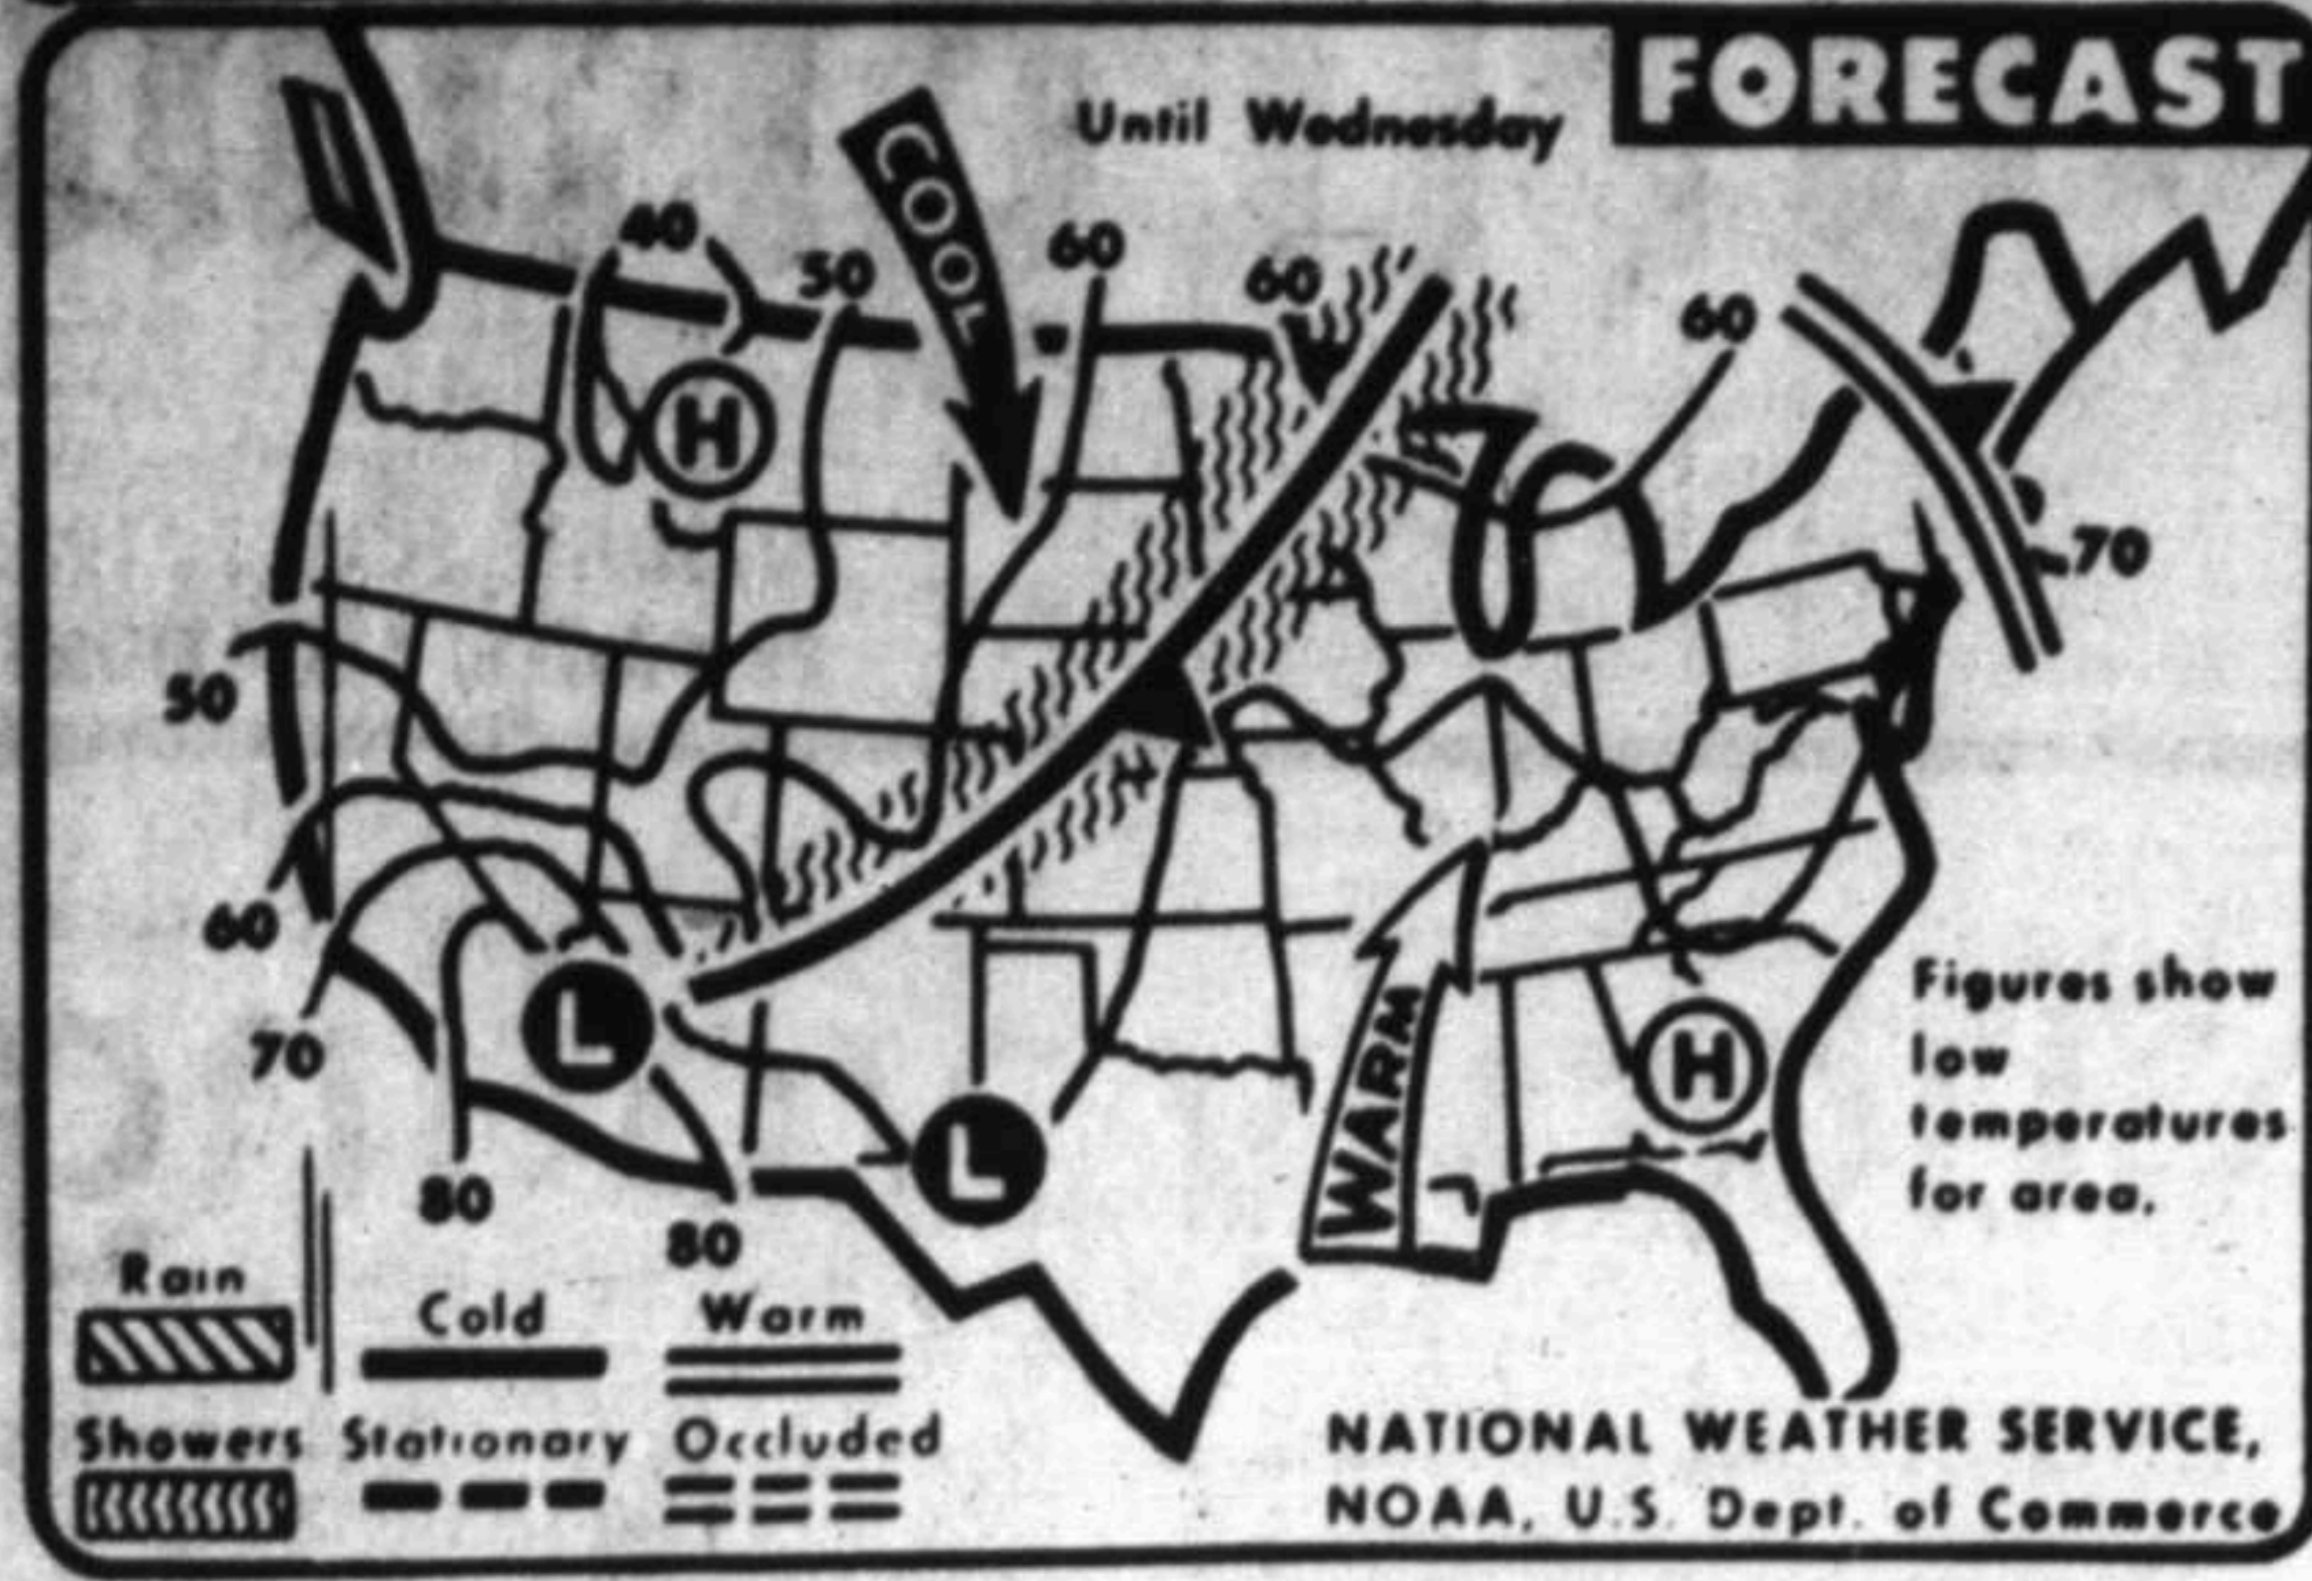

He also would reduce future benefits for all by lesser amounts, cut the disability rolls and, at the same time, hold down future Social Security tax increases. Overall, the administration acknowledges, those measures would save billions more than is necessary to keep the system solvent.

Svahn said Monday that the system will experience a shortfall of from $10 billion to $111 billion over the next five years, depending upon which economic forecasts are used.

The administration is willing to compromise in pursuit of a bipartisan solution, he added, but "our last area ... is any infusion of general revenue. Anything above that is a negotiable item."

The Social Security trustees said particular urgency surrounds the old-age and retirement trust fund, which "would become unable to pay timely benefits by late 1982" without major help from Congress.

New York's Mayor Edward Koch poses with three contestants for the Miss Universe beauty contest in New York Monday. The women were in town for the contest which will be held July 20. They are, from left: Miss Iceland, Elisabet Traustadottir; Miss Austria, Gudrun Gollop; and Miss U.S.A., Kim Seelbrede.

Proposal may aid minority voters

that portion of the city south of Highway 80 (Wall Avenue).

—Precinct 4: Proposed: 20,868; 0.3 percent minority. Black count is 113 for 0.5 percent; Mexican-American count is 571 for 2.8 percent. (Under existing lines, the precinct has 4 percent minority population.)

The proposed area would take in a north central section of Midland flanked by Big Spring Street and Midkiff Road and roughly bordered by Cuthbert Avenue and the Midland-Martin County line. The precinct would take in Midland Air Park, northeast Midland and the Greenwood community. Commissioner is Win Brown, Republican.

Precinct 4 currently takes in northwest Midland and northwest Midland County.

IN DRAWING UP the proposed lines, the committee was largely concerned with distribution of minority population.

"I think the big consensus was the concern of minority distribution," Mrs. Gould told the commissioners and County Judge Bill Ahders. "This plan does strengthen the minority position."

The proposal, which would give Precinct 2 a 71.5 percent of minority population instead of the present 34 percent, apparently would not be viewed in disfavor by the federal government.

"The Department of Justice will not proportion in favor of a race," said Jerry Tschauner, director of planning for the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, "but they will not fence out a race." Tschauner said the Justice Department will permit the "strengthening" of "the minority — not 'a' minority — to have say in the political arena.

"In order to give the minority an opportunity, you have not screened out the majority," Tschauner said.

Under the proposal, three of the four precincts would have white majority populations. Only one — Charlie Welch's Precinct 2 — would have a majority of minority residents.

"I would like to stay as we are," Welch said after the meeting.

PUBLIC HEARINGS on the proposed re-districting will be held prior to any action by the commissioners, who, like others at the morning meeting, held contrasting views on the plan.

Kipberly Modisett, Human Relations Council executive director who served on the committee, said she was "pleased" that the re-districting proposal will help the "south and east sides of Midland collectively to make a decision" in elections.

"They don't have the prerogative in the current system?" Wright asked her.

"No, sir, they don't," she replied tersely.

Commissioner Davis initially had expressed some reservations about the proposal, but later took a somewhat different stand.

"I don't have any misgivings if the minorities don't," he said. One purpose of the public precinct-by-precinct meetings is to ascertain the minority's and the majority's views of the proposed lines.

Dallas "Dally" Willis, who was among the few of "the public" at the meeting, said he is for the democratic form of government.

"I believe in the right of people to have a say in government," Willis said. "I'm a strong believer in the one-man, one-vote concept."

However, Willis said he suspects that the minority bloc in the proposed re-districting "could be subject to (federal) challenging on the basic of packing...."

"I think the minority haven't had a voice for too long in Midland," Willis said. Later in the meeting, Willis seemed resigned that however the precinct lines are re-drawn, "I think eventually we will pack one way or another on the thing."

Another concerned citizen, Tom Mitchell, said the re-districting of Precinct 2 would tend to disfavor the white.

"The Anglo will be the minority in this group," he said. "Have you given any thought to that?" he asked Mrs. Gould. "We (Anglos) will be a minority in this Precinct 2."

"Yes, sir," Mrs. Gould said.

UNDER THE EXISTING setup, Precinct 3 has a 49 percent minority population; the committee proposed to re-district that precinct to drop the black and Mexican-American population to almost 15 percent.

"Precinct 3 is a 50-50 split," said Wright. "Why do you say they (minority) have no rights?"

Traditionally, the minorities have lagged in turning out on election day. In Midland, more than 44,000 citizens are registered to vote, but re-alignment of precinct lines precludes the use of the breakdown of registered voters to draw precinct lines.

Davis, who seemed to lean toward the re-districting proposal, suggested that if the black and Mexican-American minorities were to unite at the election polls and put minority candidates on the Commissioners' Court, then that action might give impetus to minority representation on the Midland City Council.

"This, then, will put the east side of town in better position to have a voice in city government," Davis said.

However, James Bradford, a black government teacher who serves on the re-districting committee, opined that one minority voice, possibly through Precinct 2, on the Commissioners' Court would not be effective.

"That one vote is just like whistling 'Dixie,'" Bradford said.

"But the opportunity, James," Mrs. Gould tendered, "for one vote is better than no vote."

MIKE WILLIAMS, a leader in the black community, said the re-districting proposal would be a "real opportunity for minority folk to get involved" in politics, even though the tentative plan offers the opportunity for one minority seat (out of five on the Commissioners' Court) "instead of two in five."

"We've got to register voters," Williams said of the minorities. "We've got to vote."

Moments later, Mrs. Gould, who has worked in the League of Women Voters to get people registered, had no answer on how to effect a higher voter turnout.

"What can you do to get bodies out to vote?" she asked rhetorically.

The nine members on the re-districting committee included four Anglos, two blacks and two Mexican-Americans who tried to draw fair and equitable precinct lines, Mrs. Gould said.

"I was very impressed (by the lack of partisanship)," she said, "being apolitical as I am."

Cash taken from local store

In theft and burglary complaints to city police during the past 24 hours, an employee of the Webb Davis Fruit Co., 629 Pliska, said someone entered the establishment through a south door and stole $600 in cash.

Five guns were reported taken in a burglary of the Berry D. Reece residence at 1000 W. Marlin St. No value was listed on the weapons.

And an employee at the Kent Oil Station, 810 E. Florida St., said $185 was taken from the cash register.

A child playing with matches was listed as the cause of a blaze that did heavy damage to a mobile home owned by Harold Eatmon Sr. of Airline Mobile Home Park on West Highway 80. The fire broke out shortly after 11 a.m. Monday and also caused smoke damage throughout the trailer.

DON'T KILL YOURSELF: THERE'S A WAY OUT!

Trembling with fear, the jailer called for lights and ran to the dungeon and fell down before Paul and Silas. He brought them out and begged them, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?"

They replied, "Believe on the Lord Jesus and you will be saved, and your entire household." Then they told him and all his household the Good News from the Lord.

That same hour he washed their stripes and he and all his family were baptized. Then he brought them up into his house and set a meal before them. He and his household rejoiced because all were now believers!

The next morning the judges sent police officers over to tell the jailer, "Let those men go!" So the jailer told Paul they were free to leave.

But Paul replied, "Oh no they don't! They have publicly beaten us without trial and jailed us -- and we are Roman citizens! So now they want us to leave secretly? Never! Let them come themselves and release us!"

The police officers reported to the judges, who feared for their lives when they heard Paul and Silas were Roman citizens. So they came to the jail and begged them to go, and brought them out and pled with them to leave the city. Paul and Silas then returned to the home of Lydia where they met with the believers and preached to them once more before leaving town.

Supreme Court nominee rates superlatives

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — State Appeals Court Judge Sandra D. O'Connor, nominated by President Reagan to the Supreme Court, has a long background in the law and politics, and she rates superlatives from her colleagues in both arenas.

"An excellent legal scholar," said Arizona Supreme Court Justice Jack D.H. Hays, adding: "She tends to the conservative area, but she is sound legally and could surprise a lot of people."

"She's exceptionally well qualified with a tremendous background in politics," said Arizona Supreme Court Justice Frank X. Gordon.

Gordon said Mrs. O'Connor has "philosophical leanings that a lot of us as well as the president would like to see."

Gordon was one of Mrs. O'Connor's classmates at Stanford University law school. Another classmate was Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist.

Mrs. O'Connor, 51, was graduated from the law school in 1952, with the Order of the Coif. She was a member of the board of editors of the Stanford Law Review.

Mrs. O'Connor married another classmate, John Jay O'Connor III, now a Phoenix lawyer. They have three sons.

Her first job was as deputy county attorney for San Mateo County, Calif. She spent six years in private practice and served as assistant attorney general in Arizona from 1965 to 1969 when she was appointed to fill a vacancy in the Arizona Senate.

Mrs. O'Connor became the majority leader of the senate in 1973 — the first and only woman to hold the job in either house of the state legislature.

"She was a super floor leader for lots of reasons," said Republican William Jacquin, president of the Arizona chamber of Commerce and president of the senate when Mrs. O'Connor was majority leader.

"She was devoted to the law by the nature of her own professionalism and was extraordinarily thorough in drafting legislation," said Jacquin.

As majority leader, Mrs. O'Connor backed the first Equal Rights Amendment resolution introduced in 1972 in the Arizona Senate. But she backed away from the resolution after learning that Arizona's two Republican senators at that time, Barry Goldwater and Paul Fannin, were among eight U.S. senators who voted against it.

In 1974, she sponsored a conservative alternative to ERA, an advisory resolution referring the issue to voters. She also strongly supported Arizona's first spending limit resolution.

Mrs. O'Connor also teamed with the Republican House majority leader in 1974 to enact a Medicaid program. But the legislature refused to provide money for the program, leaving Arizona as the only one of the 50 states outside the federal Medicaid Act.

Mrs. O'Connor left the legislature late in 1974 to run for the Superior Court. In the 1980 State Bar of Arizona poll, she was recommended for retention on the appellate court by 90 percent of responding attorneys, up from 85 percent in 1978 when she was still a trial court judge.

In the 1980 poll, 53 percent of the lawyers scored her "excellent" in integrity, 33 percent good, 10 percent satisfactory, 4 percent poor and 1 percent, very poor.

Ties with Taiwan

Creating and maintaining normal ties with the People's Republic of China without severing ties completely with Taiwan has been one of Washington's most difficult diplomatic balancing acts in recent years.

President Carter did not keep his balance very well; he treated the Taiwanese with the utmost rudeness. He gave Taipei scarcely any warning of the return to normalcy in Peking, and then acted as though the Nationalist Chinese were nothing but poor diplomatic relations.

The Reagan administration is trying to do better. Although faced with the same tight-rope walk as the previous administration, an attempt is being made to recognize the rights of the Taiwanese and to understand their problems.

Secretary of State Haig said as much on his return from Peking the other day. When asked if Taiwan was mentioned in his three days of conversations with Chinese officials, he answered in the affirmative. More than that, he added that Taiwan's problems had been discussed in all conferences with Peking in recent years.

In Chiang Kai-shek's day there was always talk of invading the mainland. That is ancient history now. The Taiwanese have been busy in recent years turning their lush island into a modern and industrialized land.

A measure of their success is that when the Nationalist Chinese came over from the mainland in 1949, more than 60 percent of the country's labor force worked on farms, mostly with primitive tools. Industrialization has brought that figure down to 21 percent, and it is going lower.

President Reagan gave the islanders another boost this week by ordering an end to quotas on shoes imported from Taiwan. Naturally the move received bad reviews from the American shoe industry, which cannot be expected to welcome additional competition from outsiders. In the long run, however, the ban on Taiwan's quotas could bring prices down in this country, and certainly it is a plus for Taipei's economy. Taiwan's leaders demonstrated a spirit of cooperation by quickly announcing they would put limits on the amount of shoe exports to the United States, a total of 130 million pairs last year.

What all these figures and facts tell us is that Taiwan is a modern miracle. Taiwanese earned their prosperity through hard work and a genius for long-range technological planning. They deserve the respect and help they are getting from the Reagan administration.

An important step

The Federal Aviation Administration has made an abrupt turnabout in announcing acceptance of an aircraft collision avoidance system that would not be dependent on ground equipment.

Heretofore, the FAA wanted such a system under the direct control of its operators and not in the hands of pilots.

The new equipment — called the Threat Alert and Collision Avoidance System — was announced by FAA administrator J. Lynn Helms. He personally tested it in a light aircraft maneuvering with a 727 jetliner.

Helms intends to have the system in regular operation by the end of 1984. That's none too soon. Airspace is becoming more crowded each day and the danger of collision more pronounced.

Work on anti-collision systems has been going on for years. But this is the first time the FAA has moved to put one into operation. We hope the system is accepted readily in both private and commercial aircraft.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Cultural ambassador thrives despite cuts

WASHINGTON — The cultural community was horrified when David Stockman, the Reagan administration's Robespierre, put the National Endowment for the Arts in his tumbrel for a ride to the budgetary guillotine. The president was anti-culture, they cried.

It's a bum rap. The White House has given culture a status it never had before — its very own ambassador.

The new post is "ambassador-at-large for cultural affairs," and the first person to hold the position is already hard at work. He is Daniel Terra, a successful businessman who served as national finance chairman of the Reagan-Bush campaign. He was also a heavy contributor to the Reagan campaign and other Republican causes.

In a nutshell, Terra's mandate is to make the world safe for American art. He will not only advise the president and the secretary of state on "broad cultural policies and activities of the United States Government," according to his official job description; he will also "serve as a liaison point between the Department of State and the International Communication Agency to plan cultural programs abroad and to ensure harmonization (sic) with foreign policy objectives and priorities."

Ambassador Terra will also apparently be an arbiter of taste and patriotism for other American ambassadors who may be artistically ignorant or unreliable. "He will provide guidance to the Art in Embassies Program," the official job description states, "to ensure that American art displayed in ambassadorial residences abroad is representative of our national cultural heritage and in concert with the president's goals and international policies of the Department of State."

Woe betide the ambassador who hangs an un-American nude in his bedroom when he could have put up a print of Washington crossing the Delaware.

The censorial duties of the new ambassadorship provoked a possibly sarcastic comment from Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., at Terra's confirmation hearing. "Mr. Chairman," he told Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Charles Percy, R-Ill., "I pledge to you that as I visit some of the American embassies throughout the world and I see an abuse of American art, I will contact Mr. Terra."

Terra wasted no time getting down to work. The day after his confirmation last month, he embarked on a five-day trip to Paris, Vienna and London, accompanied by his wife. He attended a conference in London and had high-level "consultations" in Paris and Vienna, his secretary told my associate Lucette Lagnado. Nothing was said about "harmonization," and if the roving culture czar found any subversive paintings or sculptures in our ambassadors' homes, he didn't report it.

Terra, who just turned 70, knows what he likes. The Terra Museum of American Art, which he opened last year in the Chicago suburb of Evanston, is devoted almost exclusively to representational works painted between 1840 and 1940 — including the famous George Caleb Bingham work, "The Jolly Flatboatmen," and several outstanding canvases by American Impressionists.

Oddly enough, the creation of Terra's ambassadorship for culture comes just three years after the State Department's bureau of cultural affairs was abolished. And it was created despite the testimony of Secretary of State Alexander Haig at his confirmation hearing that he favored "eliminating" ambassador-at-large positions.

The ambassadorship carries a salary of $50,000 to $60,000 and a modest staff — a secretary and a legal counsel, and possibly two other assistants.

MORE THAN BUBBLEGUM: Los Angeles area moviegoers may be literally sitting on a fortune: One of the favorite "drops" for dope wholesalers and pushers is the bottom of a theater seat. The stash is taped under the seat by the delivery man, and the retailer is given the exact row and seat number in a coded telephone call.

That's just one of the tricks being used by dope traffickers in the endless cat-and-mouse game with law enforcement agents.

Here's another, employed by East Coast smugglers: The illicit cargo is wrapped in waterproof packaging and dumped overboard from the mother ship off the Georgia coast, with a location beeper attached. The drug shipment is later "harvested" by another vessel, like a shrimp boat or trawler, which hooks the underwater bundle and tows it to shore. There it is quickly hauled up and transferred to a waiting truck.

In a variation of this method, sources told my associate Mark Kirkham, the tow boat leaves the water-proofed bundle on the bottom of a small inlet. There it is located by dealers' agents, sometimes elderly men supposedly going out for a day's fishing in small boats. The bundle, weighing up to 100 pounds, is brought aboard and repackaged into smaller caches. Then it is stuffed into innocent-looking beer coolers or iceboxes for the trip to shore.

Airborne package delivery services are a favorite means of shipping the narcotics, disguised as ordinary parcels, to distribution points across the country. In a matter of days — or even hours — a packet of cocaine or other dope can go from the ocean floor off Georgia to the bottom of a theater seat in Los Angeles.

WATCH ON WASTE: Department of Energy investigators recently ran a routine check of the agency's central administrative computer in Germantown, Md. They found that almost 20 percent of the 740 persons with access to the computer were using it for football pools, schoolwork, games and personal data.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, July 7, the 188th day of 1981. There are 177 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On July 7, 1846, the U.S. annexation of California was proclaimed when a flag was raised at Monterey, following the surrender of the Mexican garrison.

On this date: In 1801, the black general — Toussaint l'Ouverture — proclaimed Haiti's independence from France.

In 1865, four people were hanged after being named as accomplices of John Wilkes Booth in the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln.

In 1898, the United States annexed Hawaii.

Thought for today: Nothing in life is to be feared. It is only to be understood — Marie Curie, Polish-born physicist (1867-1934).

INSIDE REPORT:

Begin's planned office move may force Reagan 'to the mat'

WASHINGTON — President Reagan may be forced to the mat soon again against Menahem Begin, Israel's apparently re-elected prime minister, whether he likes it or not.

U.S. diplomats expect Begin to keep pushing his nationalistic policies with a possible move of his formal office from West Jerusalem to Arab-occupied East Jerusalem, claimed by Israel ever since the six-day war of 1967. The claim violates international law and is opposed by the United Nations, the U.S. and other nations. Diplomatic officials here held their breath during the campaign in trepidation that Begin would promise to make the move to East Jerusalem as an added political inducement for his hard-line backers. Although he avoided the subject, U.S. officials fear he will in fact move his office within six months. Few if any foreign countries would allow their diplomats to see Begin in East Jerusalem, including the U.S. But the move would further exacerbate relations between Reagan and Begin and hurt Reagan's Persian Gulf defense plan with the Arab states.

Rowland Evans

tion's strategic arms program by the prestigious, right-wing Heritage Foundation brought an immediate telephone call to foundation President Edwin Fuelner from an unhappy Edwin Meese III, the president's counselor and most powerful adviser.

The report published in the June issue of National Security Review, an organ of the foundation, charged that "so far, the new administration has shown few signs of generating new strategic policies upon which programs and spending can be based." The president will soon receive recommendations from Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger on whether to build the B-1 bomber and what to do about the mobile MX missile system approved by President Carter.

When Meese read a story in the Washington Post about the charge against Reagan, he was upset. He immediately called Fuelner and asked for a copy of the article, titled: "The Need For a Reagan Strategic Nuclear Policy." Meese oversees Reagan's National Security Council apparatus, headed by Richard V. Allen.

OTTAWA MOOD: BAD

President Reagan is being warned to expect diplomatic fireworks at the July 19 Western summit in Ottawa when no fewer than four heads of government will be attending their first conference at the top: Ronald Reagan, French President Francois Mitterrand, Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini.

The fireworks will be aimed at Reagan but cloaked, of course, in diplomatic niceties. The Japanese are still smoldering over Reagan's decision to end the anti-Soviet grain embargo without giving them the word in advance; Mitterrand did not like the State Department's relatively strong criticism of communists being invited into his government, and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, now the old pro of the alliance of industrial democracies, wants much faster motion from Reagan on nuclear arms talks with the Russians.

In addition, Reagan will get heat for record-high interest rates in the U.S. and the rising value of the dollar, which is causing economic pain throughout Western Europe. One other likely problem: Reagan will produce a tough, new U.S. position on technological and strategic trade with the Soviet Union he wants U.S. allies to adhere to. They are certain to rebel.

DAN TO DON TO DAN

A barbed exchange of letters between Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Secretary of the Treasury Don Regan seems to have nailed down a July date for House passage of the tax-cut bill.

Taking strong exception to Regan's warning to the American Stock Exchange on June 22 that Rostenkowski's committee might not report a tax bill to the floor until October, the chairman called that "a misrepresentation." He predicted in his June 23 letter "the largest tax bill in our history" would almost surely pass the House "during the month of July" and got in this dig at Regan: "I hope over time you will learn the details of the process by which we must all work."

Regan's June 24 reply was brief. Rostenkowski's timetable, he said, "ensures that the schedule for having the bill to the President by Aug. 1 can be met." After House passage, the bill goes to conference with the Senate, which will already have passed its version.

PUSHING THE DEMOCRATS

Despite all the cloakroom gossip about punitive action against "boll weevil" conservative Democrats fighting for President Reagan's budget and tax programs, a small panel of Democrats to be named by the liberal Democratic Study Group (DSG) to recommend disciplinary measures will proceed with caution.

One reason is that DSG Chairman Rep. William Brodhead will put shrewd Rep. Phil Burton in charge of the panel. Burton tells intimates that promoting punitive action "when everyone is angry" is the wrong time; better to wait till passions cool. If that view prevails on the Brodhead panel, nothing in the way of quick revenge is likely.

The most probable resort to punishment in a party long notorious — and celebrated — for diversity is at the start of the next Congress after the 1982 election when committee chairmen are elected and committee assignments made.

CHARLEY REESE

'Dry spell' now plaguing news industry

I will let you in on a trade secret. We are in the news doldrums when nothing of great importance is happening. In our business, we have to pretend that several important things happen every day, but in the real world, weeks sometimes go by before anything truly significant occurs.

You can always tell when we are in one of these spells. You will begin to see a lot of features, analyses, profiles, speculation stories, and a sharp increase in crime and bizarre accidents.

Charley Reese

Hong Kong ferry sinkings and Bolivian mine disasters suddenly become news. We used to call this practice of reaching out for far-away stories "Afghanism," but the Soviet invasion ruined it by making Afghanistan a legitimate source of news.

The important domestic story is the Congressional action on President Reagan's budget and tax cuts, but this is still in the jockeying, maneuvering and posturing phase. It will probably drag on at least through the summer.

In Western Europe, the big story is the socialist victory in France, but at this time, nobody — including the French socialists — really knows what the long-term effects will be. Everyone is speculating, but speculation and 50 cents will get you a cup of bad coffee.

In the Soviet Union, the leaders are still squirming on the horns of a dilemma created by the Polish people. The rise of Solidarity, an independent union, was bad enough, but it still appears the Polish Communist Party may adopt some democratic reforms and this, in Soviet eyes, is an unforgivable sin. Unfortunately for the Kremlin, their intelligence tells them that if they send in the tanks, all the Prague Spring, the Poles are likely to fight. What the Kremlin doesn't know is how many and how hard. It also doesn't know what effect a drawn-out and bloody repression would have on other East Europeans, not to mention Soviet dissidents and workers. About the only thing the Kremlin knows for sure is that the West would not intervene militarily.

In the Middle East, Arab leaders are still discussing ways to punish Israel for blowing up the nuclear reactor in Iraq. Chances are these discussions will be prolonged. For one thing, many of the Arab leaders view Saddam Hussein, Iraq's dictator, as a menace to them. Therefore while they curse Israel publicly, privately they are laughing over Hussein's misfortune. In the end, they will probably do nothing but make speeches and maneuver at the United Nations. Meanwhile, the Israelis are preoccupied with their elections and with patching up relations with the Reagan administration.

I don't know of any big events about to break in Africa, Latin America or Asia. A lot of plots are cooking in those areas, but most of the leaders are still waiting to discover what, if any, President Reagan's foreign policy will be. The State Department has lacked a coherent foreign policy for so long, it may be incapable of developing one.

Of course the interesting thing about our times is that the world can turn upside down overnight. By the time you read this, the biggest news since the birth of Christ may have broken. As we have seen twice this year, we are only one pistol shot away from a major event on any given day.

Still, I wouldn't count on Armageddon this summer. An invasion of Poland, maybe; possibly an assassination or two; but I think you can safely count on the world surviving at least through Labor Day.

Prosecutors to ask grand jury to indict Williams

ATLANTA (AP) — A new Fulton County grand jury that convenes today will be asked during its two-month term to indict Wayne B. Williams for the murder of the most recent victim in the string of 28 slayings of young blacks here, prosecutors say.

The 23-year-old free-lance cameraman has been jailed in isolation here since June 21 when he became the first and only person charged with any of the murders.

Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton said Monday he would not present the state's case against Williams to the grand jury during its first session today. Beyond that, he had no comment.

Williams was arrested in connection with the strangulation of Nathaniel Cater, a 27-year-old day laborer whose body was found floating in the Chattahoochee River on May 24. Two police officers testified that Williams was stopped about 3 a.m. May 22 after a stakeout officer near a bridge on the river heard a loud splash in the water.

The officers said Williams' car was spotted going slowly over the bridge when the splash was heard. He was brought in for questioning June 3 and released 12 hours later without being charged. Williams was put under surveillance and eventually arrested at his house in northwestern Atlanta.

San Jose equal pay strike disrupts service for third day

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Municipal workers demanding equal pay for women moved their strike into a third day today, but it was unclear just how effective the walkout has been in disrupting service in the nation's 17th largest city.

The strike was pronounced "very effective" by William Callahan, spokesman for the 2,000-member American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Local 1.

Callahan disputed a claim by City Manager Francis T. Fox that only 350 workers failed to report to duty, but said he did not know just how many crossed picket lines.

The strike was endorsed by the Coalition of Labor Union Women, a national organization of labor union members opposed to discrimination in the work place.

The coalition urged the city to conform with the results of a $500,000 study it commissioned that found inequities in salaries for women who do work comparable to men's work, although it may not be exactly the same kind of work.

Fox denounced union leaders Monday, saying they failed to tell their members about a city proposal made before the union struck Sunday.

Fox said the city added about $200,000 to the amount of money available to help correct pay differences between men's and women's work, providing a total of $1.5 million over two years.

Even so, the two sides appeared to be far apart on the issue. The union demanded $3.2 million to correct the problem over four years.

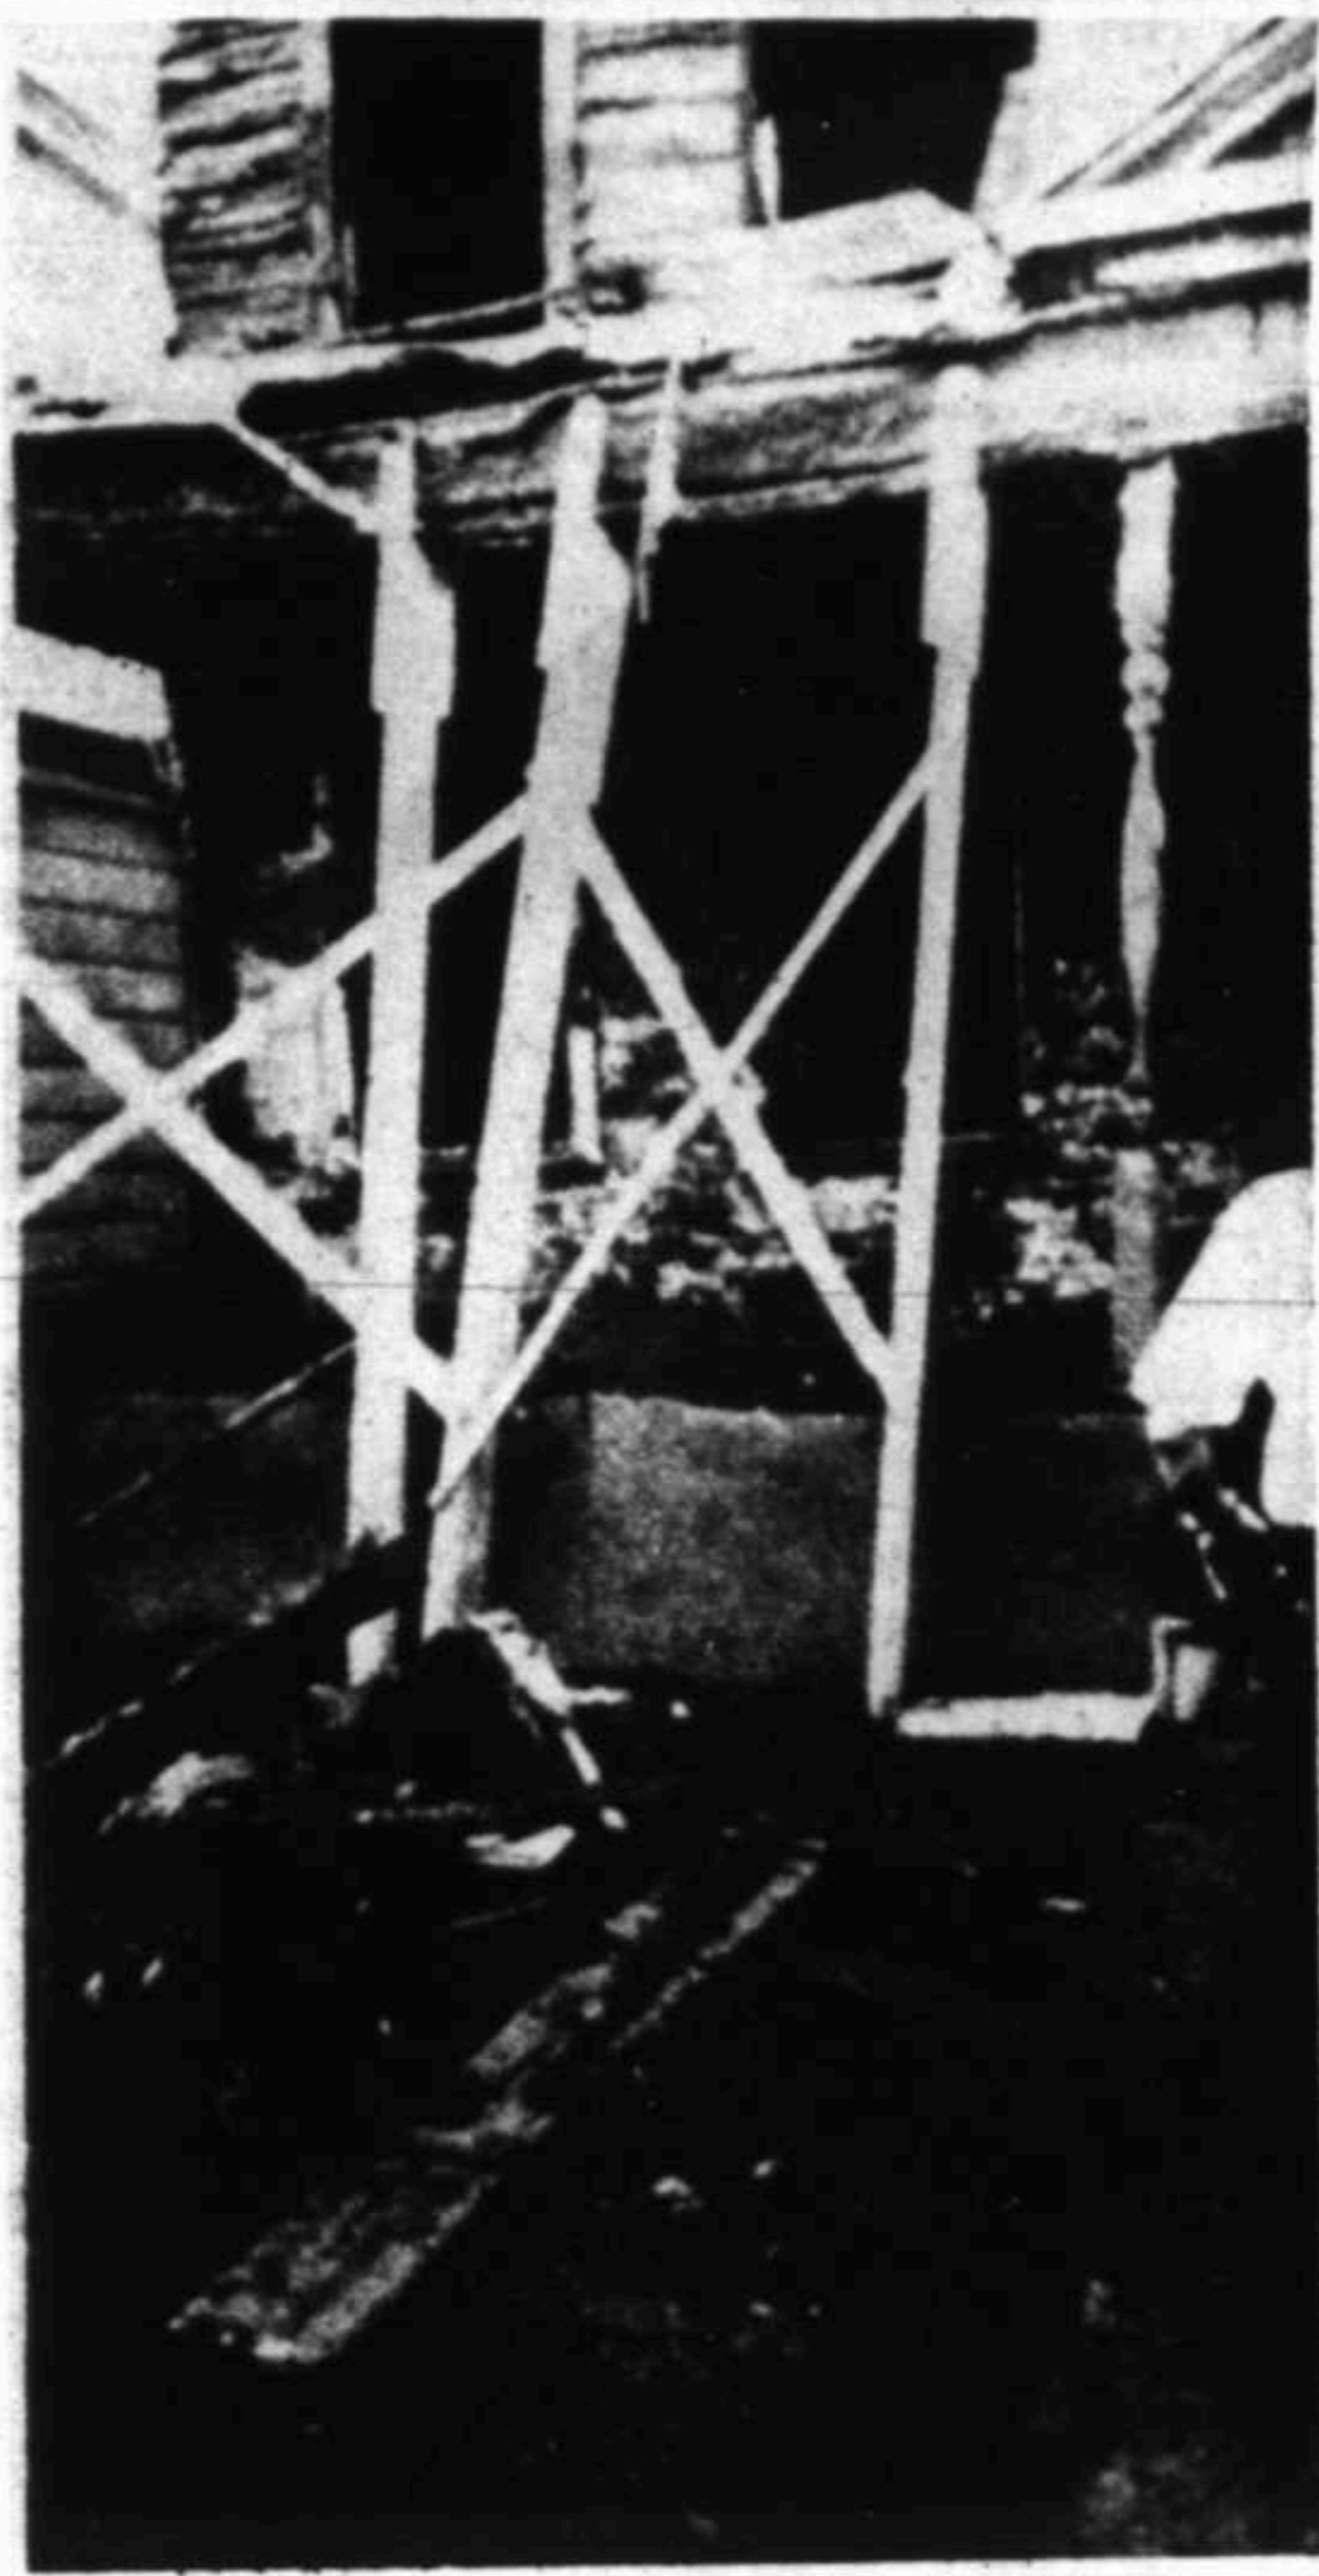

No negotiations were scheduled.

Fox said the strike had forced the closing of one of the city's 16 branch libraries and halted services at one park.

One striking librarian, Linda Dydo, said she gets 27 percent less pay for her work than a senior chemist, although her job requires her to have a master's degree. The coalition's study considered the jobs comparable.

David Heinrichsen, a striking electrician who has worked for the city for 14 years, said, "I'd go on strike even if equal pay for women was the only issue being considered."

In addition to the equal pay issue, the union wants a 10 percent general wage increase. The city has offered 6 percent.

Neighbors say perished family fought constantly

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Lee Hanks, accused of the arson slaying of his pregnant wife and her family, "fought constantly" with his in-laws, says neighbor Scott Trudell. "It was a non-stop battle. I don't know why anyone would do that."

Hanks, 21, allegedly set fire to a mattress with a cigarette lighter, fleeing the two-story, wood-frame house the families shared as it went up in flames, killing his pregnant wife and six of his in-laws. He was described by police as an unemployed high school dropout who had not worked for at least two years.

Hanks was arraigned Monday, the same day as the blaze, on murder charges and one count of arson, and City Court Judge Leo Fahey ordered him to undergo psychiatric examination.

Police Chief Thomas Sardino said his department had never arrested a suspect on that many murder charges in his 28 years on the force.

Mrs. Hanks, 23, was in the last month of pregnancy for their first child. Also killed were Mrs. Hanks' parents, Walter Allen, 63, and Martha Allen, 55; two of the Allen's other children, Leonard, 31, and Nancy, 12; the Allen's grandson, Frankie Allen, 5, who was visiting for one night; and Charles Nitzke, father-in-law to one of the Allen's other daughters.

Police would not elaborate on their evidence or a motive, but Trudell, who lives five houses down the street from the burned-out house, said the home was the scene of frequent family arguments.

The discovery of a cigarette lighter in the remains of a stuffed mattress prompted fire investigators initially to suspect a smoking accident. But police said they changed their minds after questioning Hanks for hours and investigating the scene.

Hanks was standing across the street from the burning house when police and firefighters arrived at 2:30 a.m. He said he had been with his mother and found the house in flames when he came home.

"We can't say much more relative to the motive and evidence we have gathered," Sardino said.

The bodies were found on the second floor. One was found in the front bedroom, three were huddled together near a stairway, two were in a rear bedroom and one was in a bathroom, said Fire Chief Thomas Hanlon.

Sardino asked the district attorney to present the evidence to a grand jury quickly. But Norman Mordue, an assistant district attorney, said that cannot be done because a medical examiner must determine the cause of death of each victim before the case is turned over to a grand jury.

Eastern provokes new air fare battle

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines has started a new air fare war, bringing back discount coupons on the busy New York-California route in hopes of overcoming a summer travel slump.

Soon after Eastern's announcement Monday that the lowest one-way price between New York and Los Angeles would drop to $134, competing American Airlines and Pan American World Airways said they would match the new fares.

Trans World Airline said it would match the fares only on runs that leave about the same times as Eastern flights.

"We have and we always will remain competitive," said Pan Am spokesman Harvey Berman in New York. "Anything we can do to remain competitive, we will do."

Added American Airlines spokesman Al Becker: "It's fair to say that we're going to be there with a program of our own. We simply must and will be competitive."

Sally McElwreath of TWA said the carrier will accept coupons "on the flights that are essentially at the same time as Eastern's."

Eastern plans to give $50 discount coupons for flights between New York and Los Angeles or San Francisco to each passenger flying the popular Boston-New York-Washington Air Shuttle or non-stop flights between Newark and Boston or Washington.

The coupons, to be distributed Wednesday through July 31, also are worth a $25 discount on promotional fares in the market. The reductions also will be available for Philadelphia-California passengers using Eastern's non-stop service from New York.

In January, Eastern used a similar plan in an attempt to increase traffic between New York and California. The plan had mixed results — fares dropped but traffic did not increase dramatically.

13 illegal aliens found in car

EMPORIA, Kan. (AP) — Thirteen illegal Mexican aliens stuffed into a 1973 auto were arrested Monday after the vehicle was involved in a minor accident on the Kansas Turnpike, authorities said.

Lyon County Sheriff Daniel Andrews said a Kansas Highway Patrol trooper, responding to the accident scene, found eight of the aliens and ordered their car impounded. Andrews said there were three men, two women and three small boys — two 2-year-olds and a 1-year-old — inside the car's passenger compartment.

About an hour after the car was towed to a parking lot at the Lyon County Jail, an officer leaving the jail heard noises coming from the trunk of the auto. He opened the trunk and found five more men crammed inside.

"If we hadn't heard them knocking, they'd have been in there all morning," Andrews said. "There's a good chance they could have been killed."

The sheriff said the five men in the trunk apparently became restless and began banging to gain the attention of others in their group.

"I don't think they had any idea where they were," he said.

Andrews said the 13 aliens were turned over to officers from the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Kansas City. INS officials indicated the aliens would be returned today to Mexico.

The sheriff said the aliens spoke only broken English and indicated they were headed for Chicago. Their car carried New Mexico license plates.

Two test pilots eject from jet

CALVERTON, N.Y. (AP) — An investigation is under way to determine what caused two crew members of a Grumman F-14 "Tomcat" jet fighter to eject in the Atlantic Ocean south of eastern Long Island.

The fighter crashed Monday about 4:20 p.m., but both crew members, test pilots employed by Grumman, ejected and parachuted to safety without injury, authorities said.

The men, identified as pilot Chuck Sewell of Setauket, N.Y., and Paul Merana, a weapons-system operator from Riverhead, N.Y., were rescued by a Grumman helicopter.

The Coast Guard said someone in a civilian boat had heard "something like an explosion" before the plane hit the water, but Grumman spokesman Robert Harwood said it was not known whether the plane exploded before it crashed.

He said the company also did not know why the crewmembers had to eject, but added the jet had been on a routine test flight.

The Coast Guard said the rescue took place about 18 miles south of Shinnecock Inlet, and Harwood said the plane went into the water 12 miles offshore, 31 miles southeast of Grumman's flight test facility at Calverton, where the flight began.

Harwood said there were two previous crashes of F-14s being tested by Grumman pilots. The first F-14 ever built crashed on its second test flight at Calverton in 1971, but neither crew member was hurt. A Grumman employee was killed in a later crash at Patuxent River Naval Air Station in Maryland.

declarer held the ten and did not realize the necessity of playing it. Declarer won the queen, drew trumps and led the queen of clubs, but East was one step ahead of declarer. He won the king of clubs and continued with the king of spades to force out the ace. When he regained the lead with the ace of clubs, he was able to cash the jack of spades for down one.

This was fine defense by any standards. But did you notice that declarer made a tiny error which permitted this defense? Observe what would have happened had declarer won the ace of diamonds at trick one and then tackled clubs immediately.

Now it would have been declarer who was a tempo ahead in establishing his suit. By the time East had his spade trick established, declarer would already have been able to take two spade sluffs on the good clubs. So the defenders would have to be satisfied with two club tricks and a diamond, and the topic of this column would have been declarer's careful play rather than East's sparkling defense.

The only investment account that automatically puts idle funds to work
earning high money market income for you and still gives you constant and immediate access to your money.

The Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account®
Financial Service.

How often have you discovered—after the fact—that hundreds, even thousands of dollars have been sitting idly in your brokerage account, when the very least they should have been doing is earning income for you? Chances are, you sold securities, or earned interest or dividends and forgot to instruct your Account Executive on what to do with the money.

This wouldn't happen in the Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account financial service. This highly computerized service does the thinking for you. It automatically screens your brokerage account for dividends, interest, proceeds from security sales, etc., and invests them in a high-yield CMA™ Money Trust—or, if you prefer, in our CMA Tax-Exempt Trust. Proceeds from security sales are invested on settlement date and deposits of $1,000 or more are invested the next business day. Credits of under $1,000 are automatically invested the following Monday. Money market trust dividends are declared and reinvested daily for rapid compounding.

That's one reason that a recent article in Fortune Magazine, stated that the "Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account... may be the most important financial innovation in years."

Check Writing Privileges

Another reason is the immediate access to your cash and invested capital. Even to the extent that you can write checks against the assets in your CMA account. Though Merrill Lynch is not a bank, checks are provided by Bank One of Columbus, N.A. Checks are repaid in whatever way is least costly to you. The first money drawn upon is cash in your CMA account which has not yet been automatically invested. Then, if necessary, a sufficient number of shares are liquidated from your money market trust. Lastly, a loan is extended to you based on the margin value of your securities, if needed. No money is deducted until your check clears. Your money is kept working full-time until the last possible minute.

A CMA account is not a substitute for a bank checking account. However, this checking service makes it easier for you on those occasions when you want to use money in your brokerage account or money market fund to pay a bill.

Special Worldwide VISA® Card

Access to your assets is also available through a special VISA card you receive as part of your CMA account. In addition to being honored at over 3,000,000 establishments, it can be used to obtain instant cash at 80,000 banks worldwide. The only limit on your VISA charges and check writing privileges is the limit on the total value of your assets plus the loan value of your securities.*

Automatic Loans

If, after drawing against whatever cash may temporarily be in your brokerage account and liquidating all the shares of your money market trust, there is still not enough money to cover all your checks and VISA charges, a loan is extended—at regular margin loan rates—up to the margin limits of your securities portfolio. A loan for the exact amount required—it's a loan you may pay off whenever you wish. There is no time limit and there are no required monthly payments. The cash that flows into your brokerage account from dividends, interest, sales proceeds, etc. is automatically used to reduce the principal amount of your loan.

All Inclusive Statement

Even with the possibility of all this account activity, there's no bookkeeping for you. Everything is brought together for your convenience. Once a month, you receive a comprehensive statement listing all security transactions, interest and dividends, check-writing and VISA transactions and a reconciliation of your account day by day. The benefit to you: lower interest costs. If, at any time, you want to know how much money is available to you, all you do is call our toll-free number.

Send for Additional Information

These days, you need all your money working for you all the time, as hard as it can. Any day it isn't is a day you fall further behind inflation. That's the reason for the Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account. It offers you a unique opportunity to keep your money working as productively as possible while maintaining immediate access to it all the time. It's available only through Merrill Lynch to anyone with investments and/or cash totalling $20,000 or more. Why not send for more information now? Just call toll-free or mail the coupon.

* Some banks may impose a $5000 per day limit on these cash advances.

6 reasons to switch to the Merrill Lynch Cash Management Account

1. Your "idle" funds are invested automatically, assuring you of daily dividends at current high-yielding or tax-free money-market rates.
2. World-wide access to your assets.
3. Your invested cash earns dividends compounded daily.
4. A special VISA card accepted in 152 countries with a charge limit equal to the value of your money market trust shares plus the loan value of your securities. You can use this card for instant cash at 80,000 banks world-wide.
5. A standing line of credit based on the loan value of your securities. Just write a check or use your VISA card.
6. One easy-to-read monthly statement from one source, with a daily running balance summarizing your various activities at a glance: securities transactions, checks, VISA card charges, as well as money market trust activities.

Life support withdrawn from teen coma victim

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Tarrant County Medical Examiner's office is investigating the death of an 18-year-old honor student removed from life support systems Monday, almost two weeks after lapsing into a coma while undergoing routine dental surgery.

The decision to remove Vikram-Jeet Bajaj from life support systems at Arlington Memorial Hospital was made by the youth's family, said hospital spokeswoman Carlene Ness.

Bajaj suffered cardiac arrest or respiratory failure June 26 after being given an anesthetic intravenously at the office of oral surgeon Dr. Edward Menton, according to Darrell Keith, a lawyer hired by the family.

Keith declined to comment Monday on the family's decision to end life support for young Bajaj or on possible resulting legal action.

The medical examiner's office declared that the youth's brain activity ceased at 11:52 Monday morning, according to assistant medical examiner Dr. Mark Crouse. Bajaj was pronounced dead at 12:07 p.m.

Crouse said the office will conduct an investigation into the circumstances surrounding Bajaj's death but that the inquiry probably won't start until after toxicology tests are completed later this month.

"It just became our case," Crouse said.

A spokesman for the youth's parents, Prem Mehendroo, issued a statement Monday in which Bhusan Bajaj and his wife asked that the family's "privacy be respected."

"We deeply appreciate the many prayers and expressions of concern for Vikram and support for us," the couple added.

The youth was in a coma by the time he reached the hospital on June 26 and had only "minimal brain activity," Keith said.

The boy's parents had been in Menton's office about an hour on a half "when they overheard some commotion in the office by the doctor's staff," Keith said. "They were told their son had experienced a cardiac arrest and had been transferred to Arlington Memorial Hospital."

The boy's father said last week that Menton had been out of the room when his son arrested and was called back in by a nurse.

The family, natives of India, moved to the United States about 18 years ago and young Bajaj, an honor student, had been to Menton once before. He was to have had four back teeth removed.

Bajaj was the second teen-ager in six weeks to die after undergoing anesthesia for dental surgery in Tarrant County.

Seventeen-year-old Shonia Crumpton died June 2 in a Fort Worth Hospital. Her mother, a registered nurse, said she was told that a tube inserted into her daughter's mouth to keep her breathing became dislodged or was inserted improperly during oral surgery May 27 to remove her wisdom teeth.

Miss Crumpton was to have begun a special college program for gifted minority students at Texas Christian University shortly after the surgery.

Things are never dull at hospital

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — It took a power outage to show the human side of John Peter Smith Hospital, where heroes and heroines battled the forces of death and where a mental patient provided sanity in the midst of chaos.

"Only at John Peter Smith," sighed hospital spokeswoman Jane Woolf Monday. "It is never dull. Never ever."

The July 4 power outage, which knocked out the hospital's air conditioning system, rendered laboratories inoperable when floodwaters shorted electrical equipment in a basement control room. Officials say they hope to have the air conditioning system back in operation by Wednesday.

However, on Monday the air conditioning was still off. But an element of classic comedy had entered the hospital's struggle against Texas' hot and humid summer weather.

With primary power sources flooded out, and portions of Peter Smith plunged into darkness, a psychiatric patient Saturday night simply "took matters into his own hands."

Masking as a medical authority, the patient spent several hours issuing directives to the employees and volunteers.

Among other things, he dispatched his temporary charges on a midnight foray for ice.

"So we wound up with 2,000 pounds of ice in the lobby," said Mrs. Woolf dryly. "He was quite a folk hero."

"He did a superb job," conceded hospital administrator Tim Philpot. "He was dressed in a scrubsuit, which made him look authoritative. If you had seen him standing by our interns, you would have thought he was one of them.

Security guards put an end to the sham about 2 a.m. Sunday after an "extensive" telephone conversation between Philpot and the patient, described as in his mid 20s. He had been released for the weekend from the hospital's psychiatric ward.

The patient succeeded in conferring with a county commissioner who helps control the pursestrings for the county-owned facility.

U.S. official contends Chinese understand arms commitment

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Officials in the People's Republic of China "understand" that the United States is committed to supplying arms to Taiwan, according to a State Department official.

"They understand that we will abide by the terms of the Taiwan Relations Act," Henry H. "Hunt" Janin says. "One of the provisions of that act is that we provide some types of weapons to Taiwan."

Janin, chief of the Northeast Asia Division of the Bureau of Intelligence and Research, said despite problems like the Taiwan agreement, China is eager to join the United States, Japan and Western European countries in a "united front" against the Soviet Union.

Janin said the goal of creating an anti-Soviet coalition "is coming along in a de facto way."

He said most of the countries, however, are "unwilling to get out publicly on an anti-Soviet platform."

Janin made the statements Monday in El Paso, where he addressed the Sergeant Majors Academy at Fort Bliss.

He would not comment on recent news reports that the United States and China are operating a joint surveillance operation near the China-Soviet Union border. He also would not say whether Americans are directly involved in the project.

Janin said it has been calm along the border recently and added that China and the Soviet Union "take pains to make sure that the firefights or whatever are not blown out of proportion."

In more general terms, Janin said he expects China to play an important role in the future of what he called "the East-West struggle" between the United States and the Soviets.

Although he said relations with the Soviets must continue to be improved, he said the United States needs to build up its military and economic strength to "make it more risky for the Soviets to intervene in the world."

The Chinese role in defense will increase as relations with the country become closer, Janin said. He said Secretary of State Alexander Haig's recent trip to the country may have opened more doors in that direction.

Recent changes in China's hierarchy will solidify the more moderate elements in the government, he added.

For example, the government recently acknowledged mistakes made by the late Chairman Mao Tse Tung during the wane of the Cultural Revolution, Janin said.

"Before, it was impossible to imagine the Chinese criticizing Chairman Mao," he said. "The Chinese now are admitting these mistakes were made."

Ex-mayor wants to be governor

DELL CITY, Texas (AP) — Behind the wheel of a motor home dubbed the "Govmobile," former El Paso Mayor Tom Westfall rolled into the West Texas community of Dell City — the first stop on his quest for the Texas governorship.

Westfall, who said he chose the town of 526 people because it "might be lucky," opened his campaign with a series of barbs at Republican Gov. Bill Clements.

The former FBI agent called Clements "a representative of big money" during his first speech en route to the May Democratic primary.

Westfall, 53, said he will focus criticism on Clements instead of other Democrats to keep his party from fracturing after the primary.

Westfall urged residents here to reject Austin millionaire politicians like Clements, who spent about $6.5 million to win the governorship in 1978.

Isabel Peron free, returning to Spain

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - Former President Isabel Peron, who succeeded the legendary Evita as Juan Peron's wife but could not replace her in the hearts of the Argentine masses, has been freed after five years and three months of house arrest. She is returning to Spain, where she and Peron lived in exile for 13 years.

Federal Judge Pedro Narvaiz ordered the release of the 50-year-old ex-president on Monday "in accord with the procedural norms applicable in her situation." She was eligible for parole because she had served more than two-thirds of her sentences.

"She is going to take a rest outside the country, ... somewhere along the coast of Spain," said Angel Robledo, one of her lawyers.

Robledo said she would leave for Europe in two or three days. Pilar Franco, a sister of the late Spanish dictator, Generalissimo Francisco Franco, arrived in Argentina last week and said she had come "to take Isabel to Spain."

Mrs. Peron, who was ousted and arrested in a military coup March 24, 1976, is still the titular head of the Peronist Justicialist Party, Argentina's largest political party. But normal political activity is banned by the military government, and she is barred from holding public office or engaging in political activity for the rest of her life. Robledo said she would not resume active leadership of the party.

Her husband, Juan D. Peron, was an army general who was elected president in 1946 after a military coup and with the help and guidance of his dynamic blonde wife, Eva Duarte, made himself the country's dictator. Adored by the masses because of the social welfare programs she sponsored, she was a virtual co-president until her death of cancer in 1952 at the age of 33, but the military in 1951 denied her the vice presidency which was her successor's stepping stone to the presidency two decades later.

Peron was overthrown in 1955 and fled to Panama, where he met Isabel Martinez, an Argentine night club dancer. She became his secretary, accompanied him to Spain in 1960 and married him the next year. Before his return from exile in 1973, she made several trips to Argentina to help keep his millions of followers faithful to him.

Despite opposition from other Peronist leaders, Peron made her running mate in the 1973 election. She succeeded to the presidency when he died on July 1, 1974, becoming the first woman to head a government in the Western Hemisphere.

But Isabelita, as the masses called her, had neither the charisma, the political skill nor the organizational ability of Evita, and her administration was a disaster. After 20 months of economic crisis, governmental mismanagement and political violence in which hundreds were assassinated, the military packed her off to a remote but luxurious government estate in the foothills of the Andes.

Later she was confined at a naval base in Buenos Aires Province and since August 1978 had been living under guard at Peron's country villa 20 miles southwest of Buenos Aires.

Mrs. Peron's progress to freedom began in March, when she was convicted of diverting $700,000 of flood relief money to her personal use, sentenced to seven years confinement and given credit for the five years she had already spent under house arrest. She had already served four months more than the two-thirds necessary for parole, but other charges were pending against her.

On June 24, she was acquitted of a charge of misusing presidential funds. And on Monday, she was flown by helicopter to the Palace of Justice in Buenos Aires for possibly her final court appearance.

Judge Narvaiz declared her guilty of the final charge pending against her, illegally transferring a government building to the Justicialist Party, and sentenced her to 18 months confinement. That was "unified" with her seven-year term, making her total sentence seven years and 11 months. And that made her eligible for parole after 63 months of confinement, which she completed on June 24.

A federal prosecutor could appeal Narvaiz' ruling, but Justice Ministry sources who asked not to be named agreed there was little chance of that.

Also, the judge who acquitted her in June specified that the case could be reopened if new evidence turned up.

Protesting prisoners reportedly OK proposals

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) - Catholic mediators trying to end the IRA hunger strike in Belfast's Maze Prison have presented the British government with a package of proposals approved by the protesting prisoners, the Irish Times reported today.

Britain's Northern Ireland Office and Sinn Fein, political front of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, both declined comment on the report.

But well-informed Catholic sources, who declined to be identified, told The Associated Press that the chief remaining problem was to find a means to present the package in a way that neither side would be seen to be climbing down and losing face politically.

The Irish Times, Ireland's most respected daily, said the proposals include construction of covered walkways where the convicted guerrillas can associate among themselves, a definition of prison work - which the IRA members have refused to do - as making handicrafts for Catholic charities, and compromises on three other issues.

The report came when the committee's attempt to negotiate an end to the hunger strike before a fifth prisoner starves himself to death appeared to have come to a standstill.

Spokesmen for the outlawed Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing said the deadlock was caused by the British government's refusal to negotiate directly with the eight fasting guerrillas.

Other reliable sources close to the IRA said the hunger strikers would not call off their action until the government "gives cast-iron guarantees" that significant concessions or prison reforms will be made.

But the government refused to make any concessions until the IRA men abandoned their fast, government sources reported.

"Nothing is going to happen until they call off the hunger strike," said one British source who declined to be identified. "Ending the fast must come first."

One of the hunger strikers, 30-year-old Joe McDonnell, was reported "at death's door" as he began his 60th day without food.

"He only has a few days to live at most," said a spokesman for Sinn Fein, the IRA's legal political front.

McDonnell's wife visited him Monday and said he is a "barely living skeleton." She reported last week that his weight had dropped from 210 pounds to 112.

The IRA launched the hunger strike March 1 to force the British government to accord jailed guerrillas the status of political prisoners rather than classify them as criminals.

Four of the strikers died in May, setting off rioting in Roman Catholic districts of Northern Ireland's cities and anti-British comment in the United States and Western Europe.

But Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government and the opposition Labor Party repeatedly rejected the IRA's demand, contending that concessions would in effect legitimize the IRA's terrorist campaign to take Northern Ireland and its Protestant majority out of the United Kingdom and merge it with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic.

The Irish Commission for Justice and Peace, a body of Catholic laymen and priests that advises their bishops on social issues, began shuttling between the Maze and the government last week in an attempt to mediate an end to the fast and head off a new surge of violence.

Five members of the commission met with the hunger strikers for a total of 14 hours in the past three days, then submitted undisclosed proposals to senior British officials in a four-hour meeting Monday night. But IRA and British sources said there was no progress toward breaking the deadlock.

Man sought in Iran bombings

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Iran's revolutionary regime is hunting a 23-year-old student it says planted two bombs that blew up the ruling party's headquarters and killed 72 political leaders.

The suspect was identified Monday as Mohammad Reza Kolahi, who attended the University of Science and Industry and worked at the Islamic Republican Party's Tehran hall. He vanished after the June 28 blast, authorities said.

"He planted one bomb underneath the conference hall rostrum and the other close to a pillar at one side of the hall," an unnamed spokesman for the revolutionary guard militia said in a Tehran Radio broadcast.

The spokesman said Kolahi belonged to the Islamic-Marxist Mujahedeen Khalq, a leftist guerrilla group opposed to the fundamentalist Islamic clerics who control the Islamic Republican Party and dominate the revolutionary regime.

It was the first time officials said two bombs were planted in the blast that collapsed the roof of the two-story building and killed Chief Justice Ayatollah Mohammad Hussein Beheshti, four Cabinet ministers, eight deputy ministers and 27 Parliament members.

Tehran Radio said 27 more "counter-revolutionaries" were put to death Sunday, raising to more than 130 the number of anti-government executions since the leaders of the Islamic Republican Party engineered the ouster of fugitive President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr on June 22. Authorities say 1,500 leftists have been jailed.

Those executed Sunday included 21 men and two women at the Tehran's Evin Prison, three men in the northern city of Sari and one man in Tabriz, Tehran Radio said. All were found guilty of armed revolt and staging anti-government riots to protest Bani-Sadr's removal, the broadcast reported.

Tehran's chief prosecutor said they belonged to the Mujahedeen Khalq, Peykar, Fedayeen Khalq and Kurdish Democratic Party, the four major groups blamed by the government for "armed counter-revolution," the official Pars news agency said.

Peykar and Fedayeen Khalq are leftist groups. The Kurdish party is fighting for autonomy for Kurdistan province, in northwest Iran, the home of the non-Persian Kurds of the minority Sunni Moslem sect.

"Bani-Sadr deserves execution," Tehran Revolutionary Court Chairman Hojatolislam Mohammad Gilani said in a Tehran television broadcast.

THANKS TO ELK PRESTIQUE SHINGLES, RE-ROOFING DOESN'T HAVE TO BE A RIP-OFF

Until recently, if you had an old wood shingle roof and you wanted to change, you literally had to "rip-off" the wood shingles first. If you didn't, you'd wind up with a lumpy, bumpy roof that wasn't very attractive. Now there's Elk Prestique laminated fiberglass shingles. Because Prestique has a thicker dimension than ordinary shingles, and a random overlay pattern like wood shingles, you can have it installed right on top of your old wood shingles and save the expense of the "rip-off."

And, in case you thought you still had to replace wood with wood, you should know that a recent state law changed all that. Now you don't have to replace one fire hazard with another fire hazard!

With Elk Prestique, you can replace wood with the look of wood, and get a Class "A" rating for fire resistance from the U.L.

too, Elk Prestique also has the only 30 year limited warranty in the industry, and that says a lot about how we make them!

You can get a free, no obligation, estimate on re-roofing your home with Elk Prestique just by calling this toll-free number:

Police report less violence in riot-torn city in England

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Liverpool police got the upper hand on youths rioting and looting for the third night in the port city's Toxteth slum district and reported much less violence than on the two previous nights.

At daybreak, the police said only one of their men had been injured slightly and 62 youths had been arrested, compared with 259 officers injured and 69 rioters arrested Saturday and Sunday nights.

"We were better prepared, mentally as well as physically, and we had a much greater police presence," said a police spokesman.

Squads of officers pounded their nightsticks on riot shields as they marched shoulder-to-shoulder, sweeping makeshift barricades aside and clearing the streets. Reinforcements from other districts boosted police strength to 1,500.

Witnesses said the youths stoning police and looting shops were white, and some were not yet in their teens. Mixed gangs of blacks and whites hurled gasoline bombs and bricks the two previous nights.

Property damage also was considerably less Monday night. The mobs gutted 150 buildings Saturday and Sunday, but Monday night the chief casualties were a jewelry shop, a hardware store and a supermarket looted, and a warehouse and a bookstore set afire.

"There were kids there no more than 7 years old," press photographer Neil Jones reported after the sacking of the hardware store.

During the night, three clergymen from an inter-denominational Christian center toured one trouble spot, pleading with the youths. The mob stoned their van and smashed its windows.

One of the three clergymen, the Rev. David Valentine, 23, said: "There were no black youths involved tonight. But among the 300 youngsters I saw on the streets were boys and girls as young as 11 and 12."

At police request, filling stations halted gasoline sales for the night so rioters could not obtain fuel for their bombs. Autos leaving the city were searched for riot weapons and looted goods.

Although Toxteth is a racially mixed neighborhood, many of its residents are West Indian immigrants, and black adults with bullhorns pleaded with the youths to go home.

"We are disgusted, shocked and ashamed at what has happened," said one 28-year-old man. "This is why we have formed the peace patrol to reason with the kids and show them that grown-ups care what happens to them."

The Toxteth riots were the third major eruption of violence in England in three months. Home Secretary William Whitelaw told other lawmakers of the Conservative Party Monday night that it was "probably the most worrying situation of its kind this country has ever seen."

Although the riots in Brixton in April and in West London's Southall district Friday night were racially motivated, blacks and whites joined forces in Toxteth to make war on the police.

"It's not a question of blacks versus the police," said Police Chief Ken Oxford. "It's a question of the community — the people — versus authority."

The Liverpool police used tear gas in Toxteth for the first time in Britain, and Whitelaw said the government was considering the use of plastic bullets against rioters.

A bicyclist and other passersby make their way down a street littered with debris in Liverpool, England, Monday after riots described as the worst ever seen in England.

This was a shopping center on Lodge Lane in the Toxteth immigrant section of Liverpool.

Dayan said pushing Palestinian autonomy

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Moshe Dayan has told Prime Minister Menachem Begin he'll have to modify his stand on Palestinian autonomy to get Dayan's two votes for the majority he needs to keep him in office.

Dayan, who resigned as Begin's foreign minister in 1979 because of the prime minister's policy toward the occupied territories, met Monday with his former leader.

Begin's spokesman, Uri Porat, said the terms of Israel's occupation of the Gaza Strip and the West Bank of the Jordan River were a sticking point.

"Dayan made some difficulties, disagreeing with the prime minister on Palestinian autonomy," Porat said.

While campaigning for the June 30 parliamentary election, Dayan called for imposing administrative autonomy unilaterally on the 1.2 million Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza. Begin opposes this.

Nearly complete results from the election gave Begin's Likud bloc 48 seats to 47 for the opposition Labor Party of Shimon Peres. Begin is negotiating to retain the support of the two religious parties in his last coalition, the National Religious Party with six seats and Agudat Israel with four. But he needs three more to give him 61 and a majority of two in the 120-seat Knesset, the Israeli parliament.

Another prospective partner for BEGIN is TAMI, an NRP offshoot that appears to be winning two or three seats. But NRP leaders annoyed by the defection asked Begin to open talks with Dayan instead.

The daily newspaper

Davar reported that Begin asked Interior Minister Yosef Burg, leader of the National Religious Party, if he would accept a vice-premiership and yield to Dayan his role as Israeli negotiator in the Palestinian autonomy talks with Egypt and the United States.

Israel Radio said discussion of such an arrangement alarmed an NRP hard-liner, Rabbi Haim Druckman. The radio said Druckman telephoned Begin to protest and was told that there had been no promises made.

The National Religious Party, which has been a member of every government in Israel's

Charges may be dropped in strangler case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An exasperated prosecutor in the "hillside stranglings" says his star witness is "dishonest" and says he may be forced to drop charges against a second man charged in the killings.

The case against Angelo Buono was thrown into doubt Monday as Buono's cousin, confessed "hillside strangler" Kenneth Bianchi, delivered his first public testimony.

Bianchi, who has implicated Buono in the slayings of young women in 1977 and 1978, gave two utterly different stories in a full day on the witness stand at a pre-trial hearing, which was held at the request of the defense to show why the charges against Buono should be dropped.

Buono is charged with 10 counts of murder. Bianchi confessed to the murders of five young women whose bodies were found on hillsides, in a deal with prosecutors in which he agreed to testify against Buono in exchange for avoiding the death penalty himself.

On Monday, Bianchi first said that neither he nor Buono was involved in the killings. Then he said he had changed his mind and described in a monotone the grisly tortures and strangulations, insisting that Buono was his partner in murder.

"I would regard Mr. Bianchi as dishonest and unable to come to terms with his own guilt," said Deputy District Attorney Roger Kelly, who has based his prosecution of Buono almost entirely on Bianchi's account of the killings.

"He simply does not want to believe he is guilty," Kelly said. Bianchi has repeatedly recanted his confession and then insisted he told the truth.

Kelly said he would meet with District Attorney John Van de Kamp later this week to discuss dismissing the case against Buono because of Bianchi's lack of credibility.

"I would say that the major portion of his value as a witness, if not all value, has been lost," Kelly said. "The ability to call him and vouch for him as a witness would be greatly diminished on my part."

But Buono still faces trial on prostitution-related charges, and Kelly said the investigation of Buono in the stranglings would continue.

Buono, 46, an upholsterer, faces trial Sept. 15 with prosecutors seeking the death penalty. As Bianchi spoke, he stared grimly across the courtroom at his cousin on the witness stand.

Bianchi, 30, whose dark good looks reportedly lured the young girls he killed, appeared in court carefully groomed. His voice was soft and he spoke calmly as he explained: "I want to testify to the truth as best I possibly can. I can't explain the changes that take place, what happens in my mind."

Describing what he remembered about the killings that threw Los Angeles into terror in late 1977 and 1978, he recalled the 10 victims by name:

Yolanda Washington, 19, was "picked up" and driven around with him and Buono. Bianchi said he had no clear memory of the killing but remembered dumping her body in Griffith Park later and placing a log over it: "She was alive when Angelo picked her up at a gas station and then she was dead."

Judy Miller, 15, was picked up on Sunset Boulevard, he said, and taken to Buono's house. "Judy Miller on the spare room bed, bound, gagged, the strangulation of Judy Miller on the floor," Bianchi said. He claimed Buono strangled her "and I assisted."

Bianchi spoke in disjointed phrases about each of the others, too: Lisa Kastin, 21; Jane King, 28; Dolores Cepeda, 12; Sonja Johnson, 14; Kristina Weckler, 20; Kimberly Martin, 17; and Lauren Rae Wagner, 18, whose hands were taped to an electrical wire that was plugged into the wall. He was vague on who killed her, explaining, "There are 10 homicides. It's not easy."

Of the 10th victim, Cindy Hudspeth, 20, Bianchi could remember little except "pushing her car off a cliff and she was in the trunk, and Angelo wiping finger prints off the car."

Four other deaths were investigated in connection with the hillside stranglings, but no one was ever charged.

Jailed witness in Wood case sent to Fort Worth

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A witness jailed for contempt of court in the U.S. District Judge John Wood murder investigation has been transferred from Uvalde to the Federal Correctional Institute in Fort Worth.

U.S. Marshal Rudy Garza confirmed Monday that Teresa Starr Jasper, 23, was moved to the Fort Worth facility for "medical reasons" during the long July Fourth holiday.

Mrs. Jasper, stepdaughter of convicted hired killer Charles V. Harrelson, has been jailed for contempt of court since March 27.

Judge to hear redistricting challenge

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State District Judge Harley Clark hears a challenge today against the bill dividing Texas into new state representative districts.

A group of Mexican-American representatives, joined by six private citizens, filed the suit, claiming it splits 24 counties in violation of the Texas Constitution.

A lawyer for the plaintiffs, David Richards of Austin, took a deposition Monday afternoon from Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, chairman of the House Committee on Regions, Compact and Districts. The bill that passed was essentially the same as the one written by Von Dohlen's committee.

During House debate on the bill, Mexican-Americans contended it denied Hispanics the full representation to which their numbers and concentrations entitled them.

Speaker Bill Clayton says Texas would have run afoul of the federal Voting Rights Act if population equality had not been maintained by cutting counties where necessary.

A court decision throwing out the districts drawn by the Legislature would place the matter before the Legislative Redistricting Board, which already has the task of drawing new Senate lines.

Gov. Bill Clements vetoed the Senate redistricting bill, saying it failed to give Dallas blacks adequate representation.

Stenciling offers endless decorative possibilities: Here, rough wood boxes from Vermont cheese wheels were stenciled with bright colors to make great kitchen containers. The wood cabinet doors behind them were stenciled, too—in a Delft tile pattern.

High-style crafts you can do yourself

NEW YORK — If you love the personal beauty of today's fine crafts, why not double the enjoyment by doing your own? The high-style, hand-crafted look makes all the difference in a room, and it's surprisingly easy to achieve. Here are four projects from July's House Beautiful magazine that are long on imagination, short on work time—and perfect for busy people:

Make magic with stenciling — with beautiful paints and minimal expense, anyone can create decorating magic. "work your design out on paper first, stencil artist Adele Bishop said. "Then tape it on the wall and see how it looks. That way, you won't overdo—and with less stenciling, less is usually much more dramatic." Stenciling not only brightens walls—it's perfect for making a simple window glorious or a plain chest exciting. One project that's great for beginners; stencil bright colors on rough wood boxes from Vermont cheese wheels—they make terrific kitchen containers.

Revive the quilting bee — This old-time idea is getting new life—and no wonder. Busy women are finding that it's a perfect way to make a group project on limited time. The secret: designing a quilt in squares so each quilter can work on her piece alone. It's a good fund-raising project for clubs.

Make a one-of-a-kind screen — All you need for a wonderful screen is canvas stapled to a wood frame and water-based house paint. "Think about using colors that will really set off your room," says New York City graphic designer Cheryl Lewin. Sketch and paint a sample version of your design on paper first. Then give the screen a coat of white paint before you pencil on the design and color it in.

Knit a luxurious throw — You don't need a pattern to make the throw in July's House Beautiful — just pick a terrific color mix of the latest yarns and knit each row (no purling), just knit the throw to size, using two or three colors at a time.

AT WIT'S END

Digital watches their downfall

By ERMA BOMBECK

For years, parents have been trying to figure out where they went wrong with their children.

Did we nag too much? Love too little? Hold the reins too tight? Give in to social pressure?

When I think back on it, everything started to go downhill when digital watches came into being. Teaching a child to tell time is the only thing a mother ever does that a child believes in and has respect for.

My mother couldn't do anything. She couldn't spit through her teeth without dribbling on her chin. She couldn't put two fingers in her mouth and whistle. She couldn't ride a two-wheel bicycle without hands. She couldn't pick up eight jacks at a time. She couldn't hold her breath and count to a hundred without fainting. The woman was useless.

But one day I discovered she could glance at a clock and tell you exactly the hour and the minutes you had to play, come to dinner, go to bed or take your bath. She was a mathematical genius.

I figured out that if I had a watch of my own I'd soon have control over my own life. When I asked her for one, she laughed her little remember-who-is-nearer-the-floor laugh and said, "We'll see."

It took me three years to learn how to tell time. Every morning we sat at the dining room table and mother would point out how the big hand, within the next 60 minutes, would travel toward the china cabinet, then to the bay windows, to the kitchen and the door to the basement before the small hand would move toward the fireplace.

I caught on quickly. Then we moved.

This time, the big hand would begin its clockwise descent toward the refrigerator, then the sink, the back yard and eventually the sewing closet.

I learned things about my mother during those years that I had never known before. Her ring finger was skinnier than the rest of them. She was pretty when she smiled. She didn't have to run alongside a bicycle balancing me to gain my respect. She was patient.

Then watches came out that beeped, lit up in the dark, went right on ticking after they'd been tied to a motor boat, and had little buttons that you pushed and flashed the time. And mothers had made such a big deal out of it.

Something interesting is happening, though. There's a new watch just out with a voice on it that not only announces the time, but if the alarm isn't reset in five minutes the voice nags, "Attention, please! Please hurry!"

Mothers don't give up easily, do they?

Show or send home

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: What do you do about people who are invited to your home for the first time, rave about how beautiful the room in which they are being entertained is, then ask to have a "grand tour" of the rest of the house?

Sometimes I don't even have time to make the beds because I work outside the home. (I'm lucky to get the living room area cleaned up in time for company, let alone the bedrooms and baths.)

This is very embarrassing for me, Abby. I could never do this to someone else. But what should I do when this happens to me? — EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: There are two solutions. Anticipate the request for a grand tour and 1) have the place reasonably picked up to minimize the embarrassment; 2) counter emphatically with, "Sorry, another time; the other rooms aren't ready for the grand tour just yet."

DEAR ABBY: Why would a man check up on his wife to be sure he knows exactly where she is every minute? Do you think he suspects that she's playing around? — CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Not necessarily. Maybe he just wants to know where SHE is while HE's playing around.

Insightful program integrates blind Indonesian children

BANDUNG, West Java (AP) — A pioneering education program is making it possible for blind children in Indonesia to attend school along with sighted students.

"To be blind, at any age, in any country, creates severe hardships," says John H. Costello, associate director of Helen Keller International (HKI), which is assisting the government of Indonesia in the project.

"But in developing areas of the world, where mere survival often means hanging on by the barest of threads, the fate of blind children can be especially cruel," he adds.

"Many are doomed to grim lives as beggars, or to lives shortened by disease and malnutrition."

Only about a thousand of an estimated 250,000 blind children in the country receive any formal education, Costello says, and most have been forced to go to special schools for the handicapped.

Now, youngsters like Yeyep Erwin, 14, and his younger brother, Dandang, 9, both blind, walk five miles back and forth to school each day from their small farming village outside of Bandung, to learn along with their sighted peers.

"Before I went to school, I felt very sad," recalls Yeyep. "I was always wondering what I would be when I have become adult. How could I live without knowledge and experience? I felt that the world was in darkness in which there was no light at all."

HINTS FROM HELOISE Cutting utility bills by conserving hot water

DEAR HELOISE: Needing to always conserve energy, with summer upon us here is one way to help cut down utility bills.

After the family is out of the bathroom in the mornings and after I have cleaned it, I place a clean, half-pound size margarine tub over the hot water faucet.

This is a reminder to all of us to use the cold water faucet for quick washups, which are frequent throughout the summer.

Usually, the hot water doesn't even reach the faucet before the kids' hands are washed up and they are gone, leaving the faucet to drip, drip, drip...

So, why use it in the first place? Now, if I can just get them to turn the faucet completely off, I'm well on my way to curbing the cost of the energy we use, thus helping to beat inflation! — Flo

ZZ Top back together, touring for summer

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Writer

ZZ Top, the Texas rock 'n' roll trio, went back to work in 1980 and continues to work, touring this summer.

Most tours coincide with the release of a recording, the groups performing the new songs to inspire the live audience to buy it the next day. ZZ Top's early summer audiences can't buy it the next day; "El Loco" is scheduled for release by Warner Brothers at the end of July.

When last year's tour began, promoting the "Deguello" album, ZZ Top was reappearing after a three-year vacation. Rumors had it that they had died, broken up the group or joined a religion in Tibet. None of the above, say Texas natives Billy Gibbons, who plays guitar and sings, Dusty Hill, who plays bass and sings, and Frank Beard, who plays drums.

They got together in 1970, toured and made records. At first the touring was to small places, around Texas. Popularity brought bigger places and farther reaches. But you get just as tired one way as the other, they say.

Gibbons says, "It was unsaddle the horse or shoot it. We didn't want to ride it into the ground. We took an extended holiday. We got out and enjoyed the places we had been, without the rigors of a tour."

Hill adds, "On tour, you don't get to see towns you play. You play them back to back, one nighters." He says they didn't plan to take a vacation lasting three years. They didn't plan anything, it just ended up that way.

Hill went to Mexico and the Bahamas. Beard went to the Caribbean for eight months on a one-week cruise. He says, "I found out when they stop at these ports, if for some reason you don't make it back to the ship, they're obligated to pick you up."

the next week. When I found that out, I'd drag all my bags off. I'd cable home every once in a while for some money. I spent three months in St. Thomas."

Gibbons went to Europe. He says, "I was hanging out with a fairly arty bunch. It finally came time to say goodbye to art and say let's dance."

Hill says, "We knew we'd get back together, it was just a matter of when. Like most of the things we do, it's just kind of happened."

Billed as the Fourth of July picnic to take the place of the Willie Nelson picnics of the past, the Mickey Gilley weekend picnic was a bust. More people crowded into his giant honky-tonk for an evening of western dancing and mechanical bull riding. The picnic crowd peaked at about 1,000, but most of the time there were a lot fewer in the audience.

Mickey Gilley's bash a bust

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — The bash was billed as the Fourth of July picnic to take the place of the Willie Nelson picnics of years past. Residents of this Houston suburb were up in arms over estimates of 5,000 to 20,000 people bent on "drinks, drugs and animal sex" and complained to the City Council.

But as it turned out, fears of such an orgy were somewhat exaggerated.

For one thing, fewer people turned out for Mickey Gilley's much-ballyhooped Fourth of July picnic over the weekend than often crowd into his giant honky-tonk for an evening of western dancing and mechanical bull riding.

The crowd peaked at about 1,000. Most of the time nowhere near that many were present.

Gilley postponed his opening act when only 10 people had arrived by 11 a.m. Friday. Rain Saturday and Sunday helped keep the crowds down.

Despite it all, the veteran country singer says he'll try again next year.

Pasadena residents alarmed by crowd forecasts last month pressured the City Council until Gilley's Club owner Sherwood Cryer agreed to have the party at the town's rodeo grounds instead of the nightclub.

One woman told council members that "drinks, drugs and animal sex" were the inevitable result of the bash.

Gilley, whose club gained nationwide fame when it served as the setting for the movie "Urban Cowboy," hoped his first Fourth of July picnic would fill a gap left when Willie Nelson gave up the outdoor July Fourth concert business last year.

Nelson's picnics, usually held in the Hill Country around Austin, drew throngs of thousands during the '70s.

"We had a lot of things against us," Gilley said after only a few dozen die-hards came to Sunday's session, which was cut short by drenching rain. "For one thing, we had to move the site."

Gilley also admitted ticket prices might have been too high at $15 a day and said he probably needed more advertising.

Surprised performers like Ricky Skaggs, Joe Ely, Ernest Tubb and Shirley West played gamely despite the lack of an audience.

"Y'all ought to go over to Gilley's Club," Gilley's wife Vivian said ruefully to workers as they tried to sell the club's magazine at the concert Saturday.

"There's probably 2,000 people over there."

Mrs. Gilley traded a hat pin that said "Gilley's" for one of the magazines.

Nonetheless, enthusiasm for some things were as high as they ever are among Gilley's fans despite the small crowd.

"Ooh, hey," one man yelled, sloshing his beer as he sprinted up to an exceedingly fit blond woman named Thelma.

"Hey, babe, I just had to come meet you because you're so pretty."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Product safe, but doesn't grow hair

Dear Dr. Solomon: I agree with your comment that just because something is available for sale doesn't mean that it's safe. You used cigarettes as an example of this. But I've also been under the impression that a manufacturer could not claim that a product accomplishes something if, in fact, it doesn't. If this is so, how do you account for the number of products available in neighborhood drugstores that claim to grow hair? Is this really possible? And if it is not, why are they permitted on the market? — Bruce

Dear Bruce: As to your question about whether any of these products is effective in growing hair, an advisory panel of seven medical scientists, which included two dermatologists, has reported to the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) that preparations claiming to grow hair or stop the loss of hair simply don't work. The panel did not say they were unsafe if used as directed, only that they did not do what they claimed to do.

Several months ago, the FDA followed up on the report by submitting a proposal to remove such products from the market, and the agency should soon be arriving at a final decision. Meanwhile, men confronting the problem of "hair today, gone tomorrow" might do well to save their money even if they can't save their hair.

Products that advertise that they will either prevent the loss of hair or grow new hair are classified as over-the-counter preparations — that is, available without a doctor's prescription. They are subject to FDA regulation as drug products since they are supposed to have a biological effect — stimulating the growth of hair. The usual male-pattern baldness, which is inherited, should not be confused with hair loss resulting from other causes. Both men and women may be subject to loss of hair, for example, as a result of treatment with drugs. One of the side effects of chemotherapy for cancer patients is loss of hair. Other conditions that produce the same effect include fever, a variety of illnesses, radiation, iron deficiency, and hormonal thyroid imbalance. I have even seen substantial hair loss in patients referred to me for treatment following an ill-advised attempt at crash dieting. But hair loss resulting from any of these conditions is usually a temporary phenomenon. In the patients I treated, for example, their hair started growing back after they were placed on a nutritionally sound, well-balanced diet.

Oil companies join opposition to plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oil companies are closing a circle of opposition to Interior Secretary James Watt's plan to lease 1 billion acres of offshore oil and gas reserves over five years. They say it goes too far, too fast.

Environmentalists and coastal state governors already were against the program, and the oil industry was an unexpected ally.

Watt proposed the accelerated leasing schedule in April, saying it would fulfill President Reagan's campaign pledge to spur increased energy production on government-controlled lands.

The plan would offer 200 million to 300 million acres off the U.S. mainland and Alaska for drilling each year, compared with 2.6 million acres in 1980.

The American Petroleum Institute and many of its members, however, say the speedup is too ambitious and would strain their resources.

"We do not believe that the industry can respond effectively and efficiently year after year to such extensive offerings," Atlantic Richfield said. "Several factors are likely to limit the industry's ability to participate — inadequate capital, unavailability of rigs, limited technical manpower and limited geophysical data on offered areas."

Exxon said it felt the most promising areas could be leased more easily by "offering much less acreage in each sale."

Environmentalists have charged that the plan would destroy valuable fishing grounds and threaten the country's most scenic coastlines.

Most of the 16 coastal states which commented on Watt's plan objected to parts of it.

Alaska Gov. Jay Hammond said his state, which would be the site of more than one-third of the 47 proposed sales, was "firmly opposed to both the magnitude and pace of leasing."

The large amount of criticism has prompted reports that Watt plans a retreat — reports denied Monday by Interior Department officials.

The Wall Street Journal, quoting unidentified department officials, said no more than 50 million acres would be offered for leasing each year under the plan Watt now is considering.

But Watt's spokesman, Douglas Baldwin, says the Interior secretary remains committed to the 200 million figure and plans to leave it up to the oil companies to decide which tracts to bid on.

"We have not scaled down or revised the secretary's proposed 1 billion-acre plan one iota," Baldwin said Monday. The plan to be issued in a week to 10 days will be basically the program Watt outlined in April, he said.

That would eliminate the current process in which the Interior Department first asks companies to nominate areas they are interested in leasing and then picks the tracts to be put on the auction block.

The Coast Alliance, a coalition of environmental groups, said Watt's approach would make it impossible for the government to adequately assess the environmental impacts of drilling over such large areas.

Conoco Inc. accepts Du Pont offer

NEW YORK (AP) — Du Pont Co. is launching a major invasion of the energy business with its plan to buy Conoco Inc., giving the giant chemical and plastics company guaranteed access to the petroleum that is the raw material for many Du Pont products.

The merger deal, which would be the largest corporate takeover ever, has won the endorsement of the beleaguered management of Conoco, which was scrambling for a merger partner to avoid an unfriendly takeover offer. But the deal, announced Monday, wasn't as enthusiastically received by Du Pont stockholders.

The merger would create the seventh-largest industrial company in the nation. Conoco ranks 14th on the list, based on sales, one place ahead of Du Pont, which ranks first in the chemical field.

The current takeover record is held by Shell Oil Co., which paid $3.6 billion for Beiridge Oil Co. in 1979.

Conoco, a major oil company and owner of Consolidation Coal, the nation's second-largest coal company, has been fighting an unwelcome $2.55-billion offer from Seagram Co. Ltd. of Canada for 41 percent of its stock. Seagram, which is offering $73 a share, declined comment Monday on the Du Pont offer.

Du Pont stock fell $4.875 a share, to $46.375, in active trading on the New York Stock Exchange Monday after the deal was announced. At the same time, Conoco stock rose $7.375, to $77.

The drop in Du Pont stock cut the value of the deal to $6.8 billion from the $7.3 billion price tag originally put on the acquisition based on the price of Du Pont stock last week.

Du Pont proposes to acquire 40 percent of all Conoco stock for $3 billion in cash, at $87.50 a share, and to acquire the rest at an exchange rate of 1.6 Du Pont shares for each Conoco share. The value of 1.6 Du Pont shares fell Monday to $74.20 from $82.

Jack Henry, an analyst with E.F. Hutton & Co., said some investors have been enthusiastic about Du Pont's growing ventures in health care and electronics products, which would be proportionately less important after Du Pont swallows the larger Conoco.

Like most oil companies, Conoco is already involved in chemicals. Last year, it reported $1 billion in revenue and $44.3 million in profits from chemical operations, which included a joint venture with Monsanto, a major Du Pont competitor.

But the deal could escape opposition from Washington on antitrust grounds because Du Pont is not heavily involved in petrochemicals and because the Reagan administration is more sympathetic to large mergers than was the Carter administration. The Justice Department did not comment.

Du Pont Chairman Edward Jefferson said the merger "will further diversify our business and give us a strong base in natural resources." Besides chemicals, Du Pont is involved in plastics, fibers, electronics and agricultural and health-care products.

Jefferson said the merger "will tend to reduce the exposure of the combined companies to fluctuations in the price of energy." He said Conoco has "a unique position in energy resources including oil, gas, coal, heavy oil, shale oil and uranium reserves and a reputation for innovative leadership in exploration, production and marketing."

Du Pont has wanted to get into the oil business for some time. In 1976, it attempted to acquire the much smaller Shenandoah Oil Co.

Power outage blacks out downtown Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — About 100 office workers were trapped briefly in high rise elevators when a flash electrical fire cut off power to a large section of downtown Dallas.

The fire was touched off when heavy rains caused flooding in an underground electrical vault, resulting in a series of explosions that sent flames shooting through manhole covers at the north end of the downtown area, a spokesman for Dallas Power & Light Co. said. No injuries were reported.

A fire department spokesman said power to most elevators was restored a few minutes later with backup generators. DP&L turned off power to the north-eastern quarter of downtown at about 10:30 a.m. after the fire broke out, said Terry Griffin, community service manager.

"Heavy rains over the weekend" flooded the electrical vault, where equipment is stored, causing an underground cable to short out, Griffin said. The utility said most service was restored by 11:27 a.m.

Ida Andrews was on the 15th floor of the Fidelity Union Tower building at 10:30 a.m. when "the lights began to flicker and they just went out."

Solar plane attempts English channel crossing

CORMELLES-EN-VEVEXIN, France (AP) — Solar Challenger, an American-built sun-powered aircraft, took off today on its second attempt to cross the English Channel.

After several false starts, the 216-pound plane lifted off from Cormelies and headed north for England with plans to land at the Royal Air Force base at Manston, about 20 miles north of Dover.

The flight began at 11:30 a.m. — 5:30 a.m. EDT — and was expected to take about six hours if all went according to plan.

The plane, piloted by American Stephen Pateck, 28, made its first attempt at crossing the Channel on June 14, but was hampered by hazy skies and forced to return.

The weather today was generally sunny with scattered clouds.

The Solar Challenger is powered by more than 16,000 solar cells on movable panels on top of the wings. It can reach 42 mph. The glider-like plane was designed by Dr. Paul McCready, who built the Gossamer Albatross, a man-powered plane that American Bryan Allen pedaled across the Channel from Britain last year.

Pateck was to have headed for the French coast, about two hours away, where the decision would be made on whether or not to head out across the water for England and complete the 185-mile journey.

The plane was brought to France on June 10, but after more than 10 days of unfavorable weather and one failed attempt, the team decided to try the Channel crossing in the other direction to take advantage of the wind from the north.

The Solar Challenger was dismantled and taken to England, but their luck was no better there.

The plane was brought back to France on Sunday night and final preparations made for the flight.

Increase in taxes is only response

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White says an increase in Texas' oil and gas production taxes is "the only response" to a U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding Montana's 30 percent tax on coal.

He issued a public statement Monday urging Gov. Bill Clements to open the July 13 special legislative session to bills raising the oil and gas taxes and offsetting the increases with cuts in other state levies.

Alternatively, he said, Clements could call a separate session dealing exclusively with severance taxes.

"We must act now so that Texans will not continue to be victimized by a state which its hand around our economic throat," White said in a statement.

Texas electrical generating plants, including some operated by Austin, the Lower Colorado River Authority and San Antonio, burn Montana coal. The court's decision will cost Texas utility customers millions of dollars.

"The best protection is to provide tax relief measures which would allow the results of this ruling to be shared nationally instead of having it fall largely on Texas," White said.

Texas' tax on crude oil has been 4.6 percent of value since 1951, and the 7.5 percent natural gas tax rate was set in 1969.

U.A.E. oil minister warns western oil companies

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) —

Western oil companies, already pressing the oil producers for lower prices, will be put on an oil cartel blacklist and will get no oil if they fail to honor current contracts with OPEC countries, Oil Minister Mana Seed Oteiba was quoted today.

The newspaper Al-Bayan said Oteiba was reacting to press reports about certain companies insisting that the United Arab Emirates should reduce its oil prices before the current contracts come up for renewal.

According to Al-Bayan, some companies have refused to renew their contracts with the U.A.E. and have been insisting on lower prices because of the current world oil glut.

"I caution these companies that members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will not sit idle if these companies are bent on inflicting any harm on any member of the organization," Oteiba was quoted as saying.

"OPEC would black list any Western company that fails to honor its contracts with any of the (OPEC) member countries," he added.

The report gave no other details and it was not immediately known if any Western oil companies have threatened to break existing oil contracts.

Wife blocks Fedorenko's return

By DAN HALL
Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Feodor Fedorenko's long lost wife refuses to support him in his native Ukraine, apparently blocking his return to the Soviet Union if he is deported as a Nazi war criminal, his lawyer says.

Facing deportation after more than three decades in the United States and now uncertain of his destination, Fedorenko was expected to ask today for a further delay.

The 74-year-old retired mill worker, who lives in Waterbury, had asked the Soviet Union to admit him to the Ukraine, in Soviet eastern Europe, while hearings continue on the U.S. government's efforts to deport him.

Federal authorities charge that he lied to immigration officials in 1949 by denying that he served as a guard at the Nazi death camp in Treblinka, Poland. He allegedly killed and tortured Jews at the camp.

ALREADY STRIPPED of his U.S. citizenship, Fedorenko planned to ask an immigration judge today in New Haven for more time before issuance of a final ruling.

"His wife refused to accept responsibility for his support, which is a requirement by the Soviet government, so he's pretty much given up hope of returning home," Fedorenko's attorney, Brian Gildea of New Haven, said Monday.

Fedorenko's wife still lives in the Ukraine. He claims he believed she was dead at the end of World War II, but learned later that she was alive. Fedorenko visited her in the Soviet Union in the early 1970s.

Gildea said he would ask Immigration Judge Gordon Sacks for a stay of the deportation order on grounds of hardship, based on the fact that Fedorenko would lose his Social Security assistance if he is deported.

Sacks ruled in May that there is enough evidence to deport Fedorenko, but he delayed action to allow an appeal asking for special consideration.

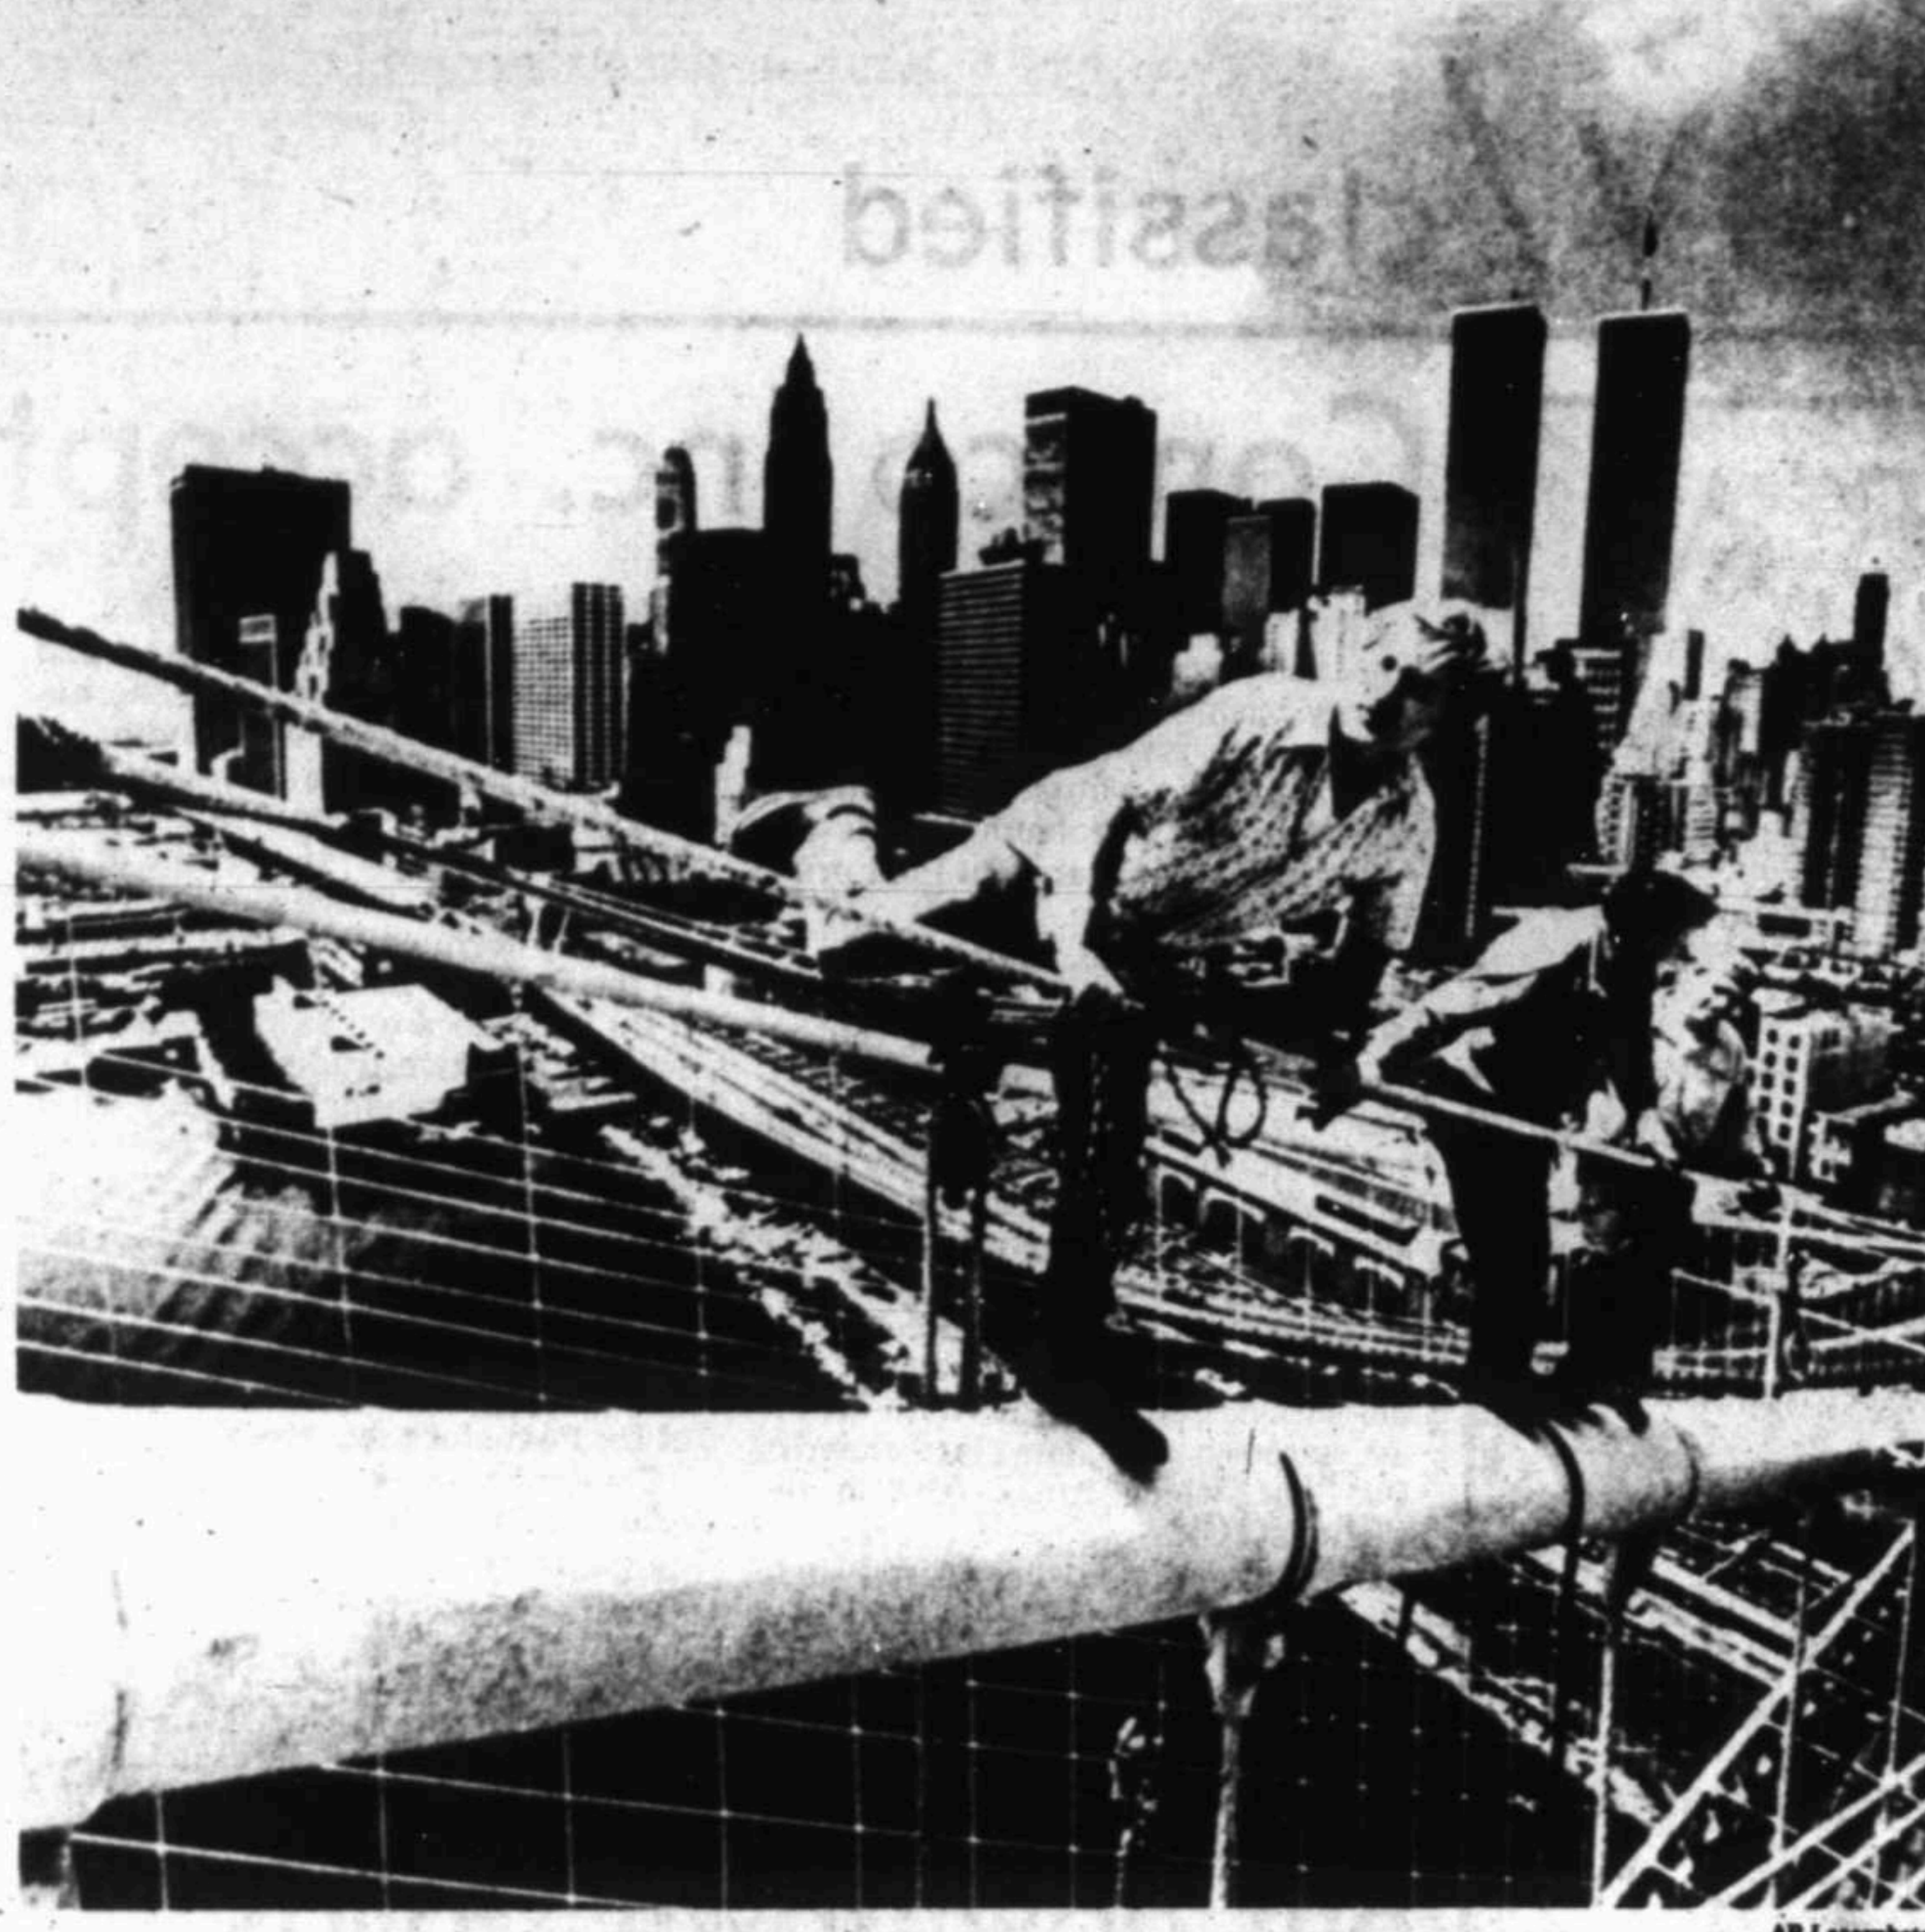

Gildea said he didn't plan to present any further defense evidence.

Fedorenko has been living with friends in the Waterbury area since the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the government could deport him.

HE HAS DENIED claims by survivors of Treblinka that he killed and tortured Jewish prisoners at the camp, where an estimated 800,000 Jews were exterminated during World War II.

He admitted standing guard with a rifle, but maintained he would have been killed if he had refused.

A federal judge ruled in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in 1978 that there was insufficient evidence to revoke Fedorenko's citizenship, but the U.S. Supreme Court reversed the ruling on grounds of his failure to tell U.S. authorities about his guard duty and his lie that he was born in Poland.

Unions considering wage concessions to airline

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor unions are coupling an offer of wage concessions to Pan American World Airways with a demand for greater employee input in management of the financially ailing airline.

In a letter to airline Chairman William T. Seawell, The Pam Am Joint Labor Council broached the possibility of making wage concessions similar to those that the United Auto Workers union granted Chrysler Corp.

Although the letter did not specify the four unions were ready to accept wage rollbacks, Allen Widdicombe, a member of the board of directors of the U.S.

American chapter of the Flight Engineers' International Union, acknowledged Monday that was the gist of the letter.

Representatives of the Teamsters, Transportation Workers, Flight Engineers and Air Line Pilots Association, are scheduled to discuss the idea with Seawell in New York on Wednesday, following a meeting of Pan Am's board of directors.

UAW members at Chrysler voted in early February to take a $46-a-week pay cut, thus removing a major obstacle to approval of additional government loan guarantees for the beleaguered automaker.

Since then, executives of General Motors and Ford have suggested that their employees make similar concessions. But leaders of the 1.2-million-member UAW refused to consider opening the current contract for discussion of wage rollbacks. The contracts expire in September 1982.

The leaders of about a dozen railway unions agreed in May to make $200 million in wage concessions to save Conrail, the federally subsidized Northeastern and Midwestern freight service that is facing budget cutbacks.

At Pan American, Widdicombe said, the union leaders are likely to insist on a greater say in the airline's operations. Pan Am lost $87.8 million last year, the largest deficit in the country's history. And its losses mounted to $114.5 million in the first quarter of 1981.

In its letter to Seawell, the Pam Am Joint Labor Council said it recognizes "the urgency of the corporation's economic situation and will do whatever is necessary to make it survive."

But in a telephone interview, Widdicombe added that "we're not willing to give them a blank check."

He said his union and the local chapter of the Air Line Pilots Association sacrificed 10 percent of their wages in 1974 to help Pan Am surmount financial difficulties at the time and wasn't happy with the results.

This time, Widdicombe said, members of the four unions will be "concerned about what happens to the money" that might be turned over to the company.

He said union leaders have "expressed the feeling they're not satisfied with the corporate" leadership of Pan Am.

In addition to financial aid, the unions said in the letter to Seawell that they envision a plan that "would involve employee input into the decision-making process in developing a long-range corporate philosophy and strategic operating plan."

U.S. importing more pistol parts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States appears to be importing an increasing number of parts to be assembled into the small handguns that gun-control advocates blame for much of the crime in the country.

Last year U.S. imports of pistol and revolver parts were valued at $6.2 million, up more than a third since 1978 and 16 percent ahead of the 1979 value, according to a report from the U.S. International Trade Commission.

The largest 1980 shipments, $2.61 million worth, came from West Germany. Italy was a fast-rising second with $2.2 million. Brazil shipped $799,000 worth, more than twice as much as the year before.

The report gave no figures that would permit a calculation of the number of weapons that could be made from foreign parts.

But the ITC study did say, "Approximately 10 percent of domestic production consists of pistols and revolvers assembled from foreign parts on a domestic frame or receiver, primarily in Florida. These assembly operations exist, in effect, to circumvent the import restrictions on small finished pistols and revolvers under the Gun Control Act of 1968. The recent production increases in pistols and revolvers are at least partially due to the growing demand for these weapons for use in personal protection."

U.S. civilian handgun production rose from 1.89 million in 1976 to 2.17 million in 1979 and 1.8 million in the first nine months of 1980, the report said. The 1980 figure represented an increase of 16 percent from the comparable period of 1979.

The 1968 law requires that imported revolvers have a barrel at least 7.5 centimeters — a little less than 3 inches — long, to make them harder to hide. But it does not restrict imports of the parts to build revolvers, however small.

These parts will become cheaper because duties on them are declining under an international agreement to 8.4 percent in 1987 from 21 percent in 1979.

"Parts from West Germany are usually assembled into inexpensive handguns," the report said.

After dangling by his arms for several seconds, a 29-year-old Seattle man was talked into climbing back up on the Aurora Bridge Monday afternoon. Police said the man appeared depressed and had not been able to find a job. Police said the man seemed to change his mind after looking at the water 175 feet below.

Labor board wants owners to open books

Judge asks Boone, Belanger for autographs

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Labor Relations Board resumed its case against major league baseball today before an administrative law judge who asked Mark Belanger and Bob Boone for their autographs after the first day of hearings.

Boone sought to force management to open its books to the union. "I am a baseball fan," the judge said. "Most of us are. I root for the Yankees. When Washington had a team I saw 30 games a year. Now I see 10 or 12, almost all of them in Baltimore."

presence of Belanger, the Orioles' shortstop, who was called to testify for the union. "It was interesting to have Belanger," Welles said. "He takes so many hits away from Yankee batters. I like the fact that he bats about .200 against us, though."

against the owners. "I assigned this one to myself, because it sounded interesting. It will be more fun for me" Acting on behalf of the union, the NLRB is seeking to prove management has bargained in bad faith by refusing to open its financial books in negotiations while, at the same time, various club owners and Commissioner Bowie Kuhn have bemoaned the game's financial condition.

since the walkout began June 12. On Thursday, the 26 club owners will meet in New York for a briefing from chief negotiator Ray Grebey and the Player Relations Committee.

THE OWNERS' meeting came about after eight teams reportedly asked league presidents Lee MacPhail of the American League and Chub Feeney of the National by telegram to set it up.

The New York Times said that the New York Yankees and Mets, Houston Astros, Cleveland Indians, Chicago White Sox, San Diego Padres, Texas Rangers and Baltimore Orioles had requested the meeting, the first by the owners since the strike began. The Times also said that two of the owners of those teams identified Edward Bennett Williams, owner of the Orioles, as the main force behind the request.

Most of the opening day of the NLRB hearing was devoted to testimony from Marvin Miller, executive director of the union, who traced relations between the players and management which led to the strike. Miller spent more than two hours on the stand, testifying under questioning from Mary Schuette, the NLRB attorney, and David Silberman, representing the union.

When they were through, management counsel Louis Hoynes asked only that Miller confirm two bits of testimony he had offered last month in Rochester, N.Y., before federal judge Henry Werker. Both involved quotes attributed to Miller regarding poverty reports of management.

Hoynes quoted Miller as having said, "Why should I believe Bowie's annual poemouth speech?" and "All I hear is more and more losses and all I see is more and more capital gains."

Representatives for striking baseball players, Bob Boone, right, of the Philadelphia Phillies, and Baltimore Orioles Doug DeCinces are making their daily report to reporters following Monday's courts appearance. The players went to court to force the owners to open their financial books.

Count likes weather

His VDS racing team based in Midland

By MIKE CRUVER Sports Writer

One of Midland's newest home owners thinks the climate is great. "I like the weather. It's dry; not too damp and it never gets too hot. After living in Africa for 14 years I got accustomed to the heat. That's one reason I left Europe — I hated the winters."

Count Rudy Van der Straten didn't buy a house entirely for the climate. He is the owner of the successful VDS racing team that has an engine shop in Midland and is building additional space in which to house the whole racing operation. Currently, the race car shop and its nine employees are located in Santa Anna, Calif., but the count hopes to have the entire operation in Midland by the end of October.

Van der Straten added, "I bought a house in Midland because it's better than living out of a hotel while I'm here on business." The count also said that with the whole operation here in Midland "it will be easier to keep an eye on things." The count noted that he would still be spending considerable amounts of time in Europe on business and with his children — two live in France, one in Brussels and one works for VDS in Santa Anna but will probably relocate to Midland.

How did Van der Straten get started in the racing business? According to Van der Straten, he was in Africa right after World War II and became the owner of several coffee plantations. But, some problems developed in Africa and he lost his holdings and returned to Europe.

The count said, "I wanted to do something that interested me and road racing did." He started his racing career by running, from Brussels, a team of Minis, primarily for National events. However, Van der Straten said, "I got more and more interested and the team just grew and grew."

He very soon bought his first sports car, a Alfa Romeo GTA. With this car he entered such prestigious races as the Sap-Francochamps 24 hours.

After the Alfa GTA's experience for two seasons, he then went and purchased for 1968, two Alfa Romeo T33 sports racing cars. He ran these cars throughout the year and managed to finish first on seven occasions; this achievement being more successful than the Alfa Romeo works cars themselves. The following year he continued to win with the cars, including the prestigious Martini Trophy at Silverstone in England.

In 1970, Van der Straten purchased a five litre Lola GT70 and raced this car with mixed results for two seasons.

In 1971 he ran, not only the Lola

T70, but also a single seater race car that he entered into the Formula 5000 McLearn series. Although not very successful, this race got the count more interested in single seaters.

The count and his racing team ran in the Formula 5000 racing series until this type of racing stopped in Europe in 1975. The count noted that, "The races in Europe were getting worse and worse and I had to find something else. And America was waiting."

At that time, 1976, the count decided to take on the racing challenge in the United States. They ran in the Formula 5000 series races for one year before deciding to take part in the new versions of what was probably one of the most popular road racing programs ever in North America and Canada — Can-Am — which had last ran in 1971.

Since joining the Can-Am circuit, VDS has had fairly good success. Although VDS has failed to win the championship, the team has pocketed a couple of second and third place finishes.

Despite the Can-Am popularity, Van der Straten foresees some problems on the circuit. The count feels, "Can-Am doesn't promote enough. They have large crowds but I think they could have larger ones if they would only advertise. Many times, people don't even know there is going to be a race."

The count is also distressed because the Sports Club of America, the governing body of Can-Am, has not gained a sponsor for next year. And without a sponsor, the future of the Can-Am races look bleak.

If the Can-Am circuit should fold, Van der Straten is not sure what he would do, "I like road racing but don't care for oval racing. We will just have to wait and see if we would get involved in Indy type cars."

The count was adamant about not racing in Formula One racing. He said, "I hate Formula One racing. It is too political — you had better not even throw your eyes on the car next door. Formula Two (Can-Am) racing is friendlier. Everyone knows everyone else and they are willing to help the other guy."

Right now, the VDS racing team is counting heavily on Can-Am racing continuing. They are second to the Budweiser team after the first two races. VDS plans on moving up, and hopes to reveal a new car in time for the Elkhart Lake, Ill. race July 25. The count noted, "We had hoped to have it ready earlier, but ran into some delays."

VDS runs only one car on the circuit and the count says that is the only way to do it. "Two cars create problems. If one car is running better, you get the drivers and mechanics upset at one another."

Driving for the VDS team is Geoff Brabham, the son of Jack Brabham who won world drivers championships in 1959 and 1960. The count noted, "Whenever Brabham isn't driving for us, he is driving Indy type cars for the Paschie Team."

Van der Straten went on to add that it didn't cause any problems to have Brabham drive for two teams. If he should crash and be unable to drive for VDS, the count said, "You can always find a driver for a race or two. It just isn't any good to have a spare pilot just sitting around."

Perhaps, the count is most proud of the fact that "I am one of the last independent teams in the world. Yes, I would accept a sponsor. But, it would have to be a big one that would give a good amount of money."

Cubs trip San Antonio, 5-3

SAN ANTONIO—Midland's Cubs erupted for two runs in the eighth inning to snap a 3-3 tie and beat the San Antonio Dodgers, 5-3, here Monday in a Texas League baseball game. The victory ended a string of seven-straight losses for the Cubs in the Alamo City.

Carmelo Martinez opened the eighth with a double and when Mike Diaz' grounder scooted through the legs of third baseman Leo Hernandez for an error, Martinez scored. David Pagel singled, which brought Oral Herschiser out of the bullpen to replace San Antonio starter Butch Wickensheimer.

Herschiser got Javier Fierro on strikes, but Mel Hall singled home another the second run.

LEFTHANDER Mike King pitched five-hit ball over seven innings to hang up his third win without a defeat. Rob Blyth finished up to record his eighth save of the season. Wickensheimer, 3-3, was tagged with the loss.

Midland jumped in front 2-0 in the second when Fritz Connally was hit by a pitch and Joe Carter followed with a 400-foot home run to left, his second as a Cub and 26th of the year. Carter, Chicago's No. 1 draft choice last month, hit 24 at Wichita State.

In the third the Cubs made it 3-0 when Diaz doubled, took third on a wild pitch and scored on Fierro's single up the middle.

SAN ANTONIO retaliated in the fourth when Hernandez walked, raced to third on a wild pickoff throw by King and came home on a sacrifice fly by Mike Zouras. The Dodgers tied it in the fifth with two runs. Dale Holman singled, Mark Bradley walked and when Pagel fumbled Zouras' grounder at short a run scored. Greg Schultz then delivered an RBI single up the middle to make it 3-3.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—A 6:30 p.m. doubleheader is scheduled tonight with Jon Perlman, 0-0, making his 1981 Cub debut in the opener and lefthander Mike Thompson, 4-1, going in the second game. Chris Madden and Mike Gintasis will pitch for San Antonio...Pagel, brought up from Quad Cities when second baseman Craig Kornfeld went on the disabled list, was listed as a catcher on the Cubs' spring roster, but was a All Mid-American shortstop at Central Michigan University. He is no relation to Karl...Hall, who just finished an 11-game bat streak, is at nine again...Cubs return home again Saturday to open a 10-game homestand against Jackson and Arkansas of the East Division...

Jury deliberating Ellenberger's fate

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A jury began deliberating Monday the fate of former University of New Mexico basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger, who is accused of 22 counts of fraud and making false public vouchers.

The eight-man, four-woman jury was handed the case early in the afternoon after hearing closing arguments by attorneys for the state and for Ellenberger.

ELLENBERGER, WHO has maintained he did not cheat the university or a former assistant coach of any money, said outside the courtroom after the jury had retired that "I've got confidence."

Ellenberger was indicted last year on 12 counts of making false public vouchers, one count of fraud in excess of $2,500 and nine counts of fraud in excess of $100.

The charges stem from an investigation into the New Mexico basketball program, triggered by a recruiting scandal that eventually led to the firing of Ellenberger at the start of the 1979-80 season. The scandal ripped apart what had been considered one of the nation's strongest basketball programs.

Ellenberger's trial began June 29 before District Judge Phillip Bala-monte. The defense rested its case after calling only two witnesses — Ellenberger and former New Mexico Athletic Director Lavon McDonald.

Ellenberger was on the stand for 3 1/2 hours and repeatedly denied he had illegally taken money from the university or that he had cheated former assistant coach Charlie Harrison or the booster club.

IN HIS closing statement to the jury Monday, Ellenberger's defense attorney, Leon Taylor, said, "If Norm Ellenberger really wanted to cheat the university, if that was his intent, all he would have had to do was go to those tickets, go to the airport, cash them in, take the passenger coupons and go to UNM and turn in the passenger coupons and get refunds from UNM too."

Taylor said Ellenberger "could have done that by the handful" for five years if he had "any intent to defraud or cheat."

Taylor told the jury that "everyone knew money was being funneled at UNM against NCAA regulations." He pointed out, however, that violations of NCAA regulations are not against state law.

In rebuttal, assistant attorney general Fred Smith, said, "There were things done in the dark in this case. They were discovered in the course of an investigation."

SMITH URGED the jury to consider each of the 22 counts against Ellenberger separately. "You're going to find in every one of these charges, evidence of intent."

Taylor told the jury that Harrison testified he was promised $1,000 and got $1,000, and that former New Mexico Lobo Club executive secretary Bill Byrnes testified he was not defrauded in an incident in which Ellenberger was given $4,000 by the Lobo Club.

All-Star game to be or not to be?

CLEVELAND (AP) — As the strike by baseball players nears its one-month anniversary, the chore of preparing for an All-Star Game that may never happen has become increasingly frustrating.

BASEBALL COMMISSIONER Bowie Kuhn, so far has declined to cancel the game, which is scheduled for Cleveland Stadium next Tuesday.

"There's no change in plans," said Cleveland Indians President Gabe Paul. "We're going full steam ahead and will until the last possible minute."

Thousands of souvenir T-shirts, mugs and pennants are locked away, 5,000 pounds of hot dogs are stored in the stadium's freezers, 50,000 programs are printed and 1,600 hotel rooms are reserved for incoming media and baseball officials.

"I'm still processing credentials. We're still getting requests," Indians spokesman Bob DiBasio said. More than 500 media representatives planned to cover the event.

BUT NO one seems optimistic that the players' strike will be settled in time to allow the game to be played on its scheduled date.

"The game hasn't been canceled," said Chuck Adams, a spokesman for Kuhn. "We're continuing to re-evaluate it day by day. But obviously, a decision has to be made soon. We're rapidly running out of time."

If it is not played next Tuesday, the game could be rescheduled, with July 30, its second rain date, as the most logical choice. July 15 is the primary rain date.

National putting to benefit juniors

By REX WORRELL

Professional Golf Association President Joe Black announced the P.G.A. is endorsing a National Open Putting Championship for the benefit of junior golf throughout the United States. He said the P.G.A. National Open Putting Championship is open to every category of golfer — amateur, professional, junior, senior, men and women. Fifty percent of each entry will be distributed to the PGA of American and the 40 PGA sections for the development of junior golf in this country.

MORE THAN 30,000 entries are anticipated for this year's $25,000 competition which will include local and sectional qualifying conducted by PGA sections across the nation. Entry fee is $10 for professionals and amateurs, and $5 for juniors (17 and under) and seniors (60 and above). The PGA's share will be turned over to its National Junior Golf Foundation, while PGA sections may use their share to develop their specific junior golf programs.

THERE WILL BE competition in three divisions — professional, amateur and junior, with a $10,000 cash prize going to the professional champion.

Amateur prizes will be limited to an amount prescribed by the United States Golf Association for a player to maintain amateur status.

Eighteen-hole local qualifying events will be conducted between July 22 and September 6. Hogan Park Golf Course will hold their qualifying on August 28 during the Boy Scouts Pro Am. Putters surviving local qualifying, advance to a 36-hole sectional championship scheduled from September 9 through October 24.

A DOUBLE-eagle was reported at Hogan Park Golf Course this past week.

Steve Hammel scored his double-eagle two on the 490-yard, par 5 hole #20, using a #4 wood and a #9 iron. His playing partners for the round were Puddin' Wilks, Joel Jackson, Charles Roberts and Jesse Madrid. Congratulations, Steve.

During the Hogan Park Women's Golf Association playday this past Thursday, Pat Walter shot a fine net score of 67 to win the trophy for the 18-hole division.

Second in the division was Jo Ladaga with a net 68, while Ella Heath won third with a scorecard playoff with Margaret Strickler.

Golf association looks for new site

FAR HILLS, N.J. (AP) — The U.S. Golf Association, with a staff that has nearly doubled in 10 years, is exploring Greensboro, N.C., as a new site for its now-crowded headquarters.

No decision has been made to move from the 62-acre estate in this secluded northern New Jersey suburb, USGA spokesman John Morris said Monday. Alternatives include constructing a new 25,000-square foot structure on land the association already owns.

IF THE ASSOCIATION nixes new construction here, it can take up an attractive offer from a North Carolina philanthropist Joseph Bryan, who is willing to donate land in Greensboro and an undisclosed amount of cash, Morris said.
Currently, the organization is leasing three nearby buildings to house a staff of 78 and facilities for equipment testing, computerized handicapping and other services.

"All of our services have greatly expanded," Morris said. "When we moved here in 1972, we had 41 staff members and since then we've overflowed into three other buildings."

"We like where we are now," Morris added. "We like the people and the community. The first decision we have to make is whether or not we want to move."
"Either way, the decision is not imminent. We've been offered a parcel of land and financial assistance. We have not explored other locations (besides Greensboro), but we will."

USGA NOW maintains headquarters in the Golf House, a 19-room Georgian-style mansion built in 1919. Some organization officials say the structure should be preserved.

"If the USGA stays in Far Hills, Golf House should be renovated and devoted entirely to its museum and library," said USGA President Will F. Nicholson, Jr. "A new office building should be constructed on the (Far Hills) site which meets our needs."

If the USGA moved, Nicholson said, it would need a total of 45,000 square feet for an office building, museum and test facility.

"The USGA will have to raise substantial funds to finance construction of new facilities in Far Hills or elsewhere," Nicholson said.

Association officials say the decision to move or expand will be based on several criteria. They include location in a strong golfing area, an attractive setting in an area with ample cultural, educational and recreational activities for the staff, a reasonable cost and standard of living and proximity to a major airport.

"GOLF HOUSE at Far Hills meets a number of these criteria, but not all," Nicholson said.
"It is located in an area where it must compete with large corporations for secretarial and clerical employees, and it must compensate its staff to cope with the high cost of living in the area. In addition, it is not as accessible to the golfing public as the USGA would like," he said.

"Yet, it would be difficult for the USGA to find a location which meets all its criteria as well as Golf House."
Bryan is well known for his philanthropic activities in North Carolina. Duke University currently is constructing a student center to be named after Bryan and his wife, Kathleen.

Greensboro's city-operated golf course was donated by Bryan and also is named in his honor. It is that facility, Bryan Park, that the businessman first offered to donate.

But USGA officials told him it would be too small, and Bryan offered another, undisclosed parcel.
BRYAN, ONE of the original 12 sponsors of the Greater Greensboro Open, has not played golf in 20 years due to poor health, according to his personal secretary.

Bryan was out of the country Monday and unavailable for comment.
However, in a recent interview with the Greensboro Daily News-Record, Bryan said the USGA's relocation to North Carolina would be "the realization of an almost impossible dream."

INVESTORS GUIDE Capital gain tax not paid on gifts

By BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q. I would like to make gifts of some of the stocks I now own to young relatives, in each case naming a child's parent as custodian under the gift to minors act. Will I be liable for tax on any capital gains? If stock is sold in later years, what will be the tax consequences? And can I do this, without going through a broker?

A. Don't let worries about paying capital gains taxes dampen your generosity. You won't have to pay any. When you make gifts of stocks or any other "capital assets," no capital gains tax is due.

If the stock is sold, after you give it away, that's a different story. When you give the stock to each child and turn the certificate over to the custodian, make sure you let them know the price you paid or whatever other "basis" you have on the stock.

When gift stock is sold at a profit, the capital gain or capital loss is the difference between the proceeds from the sale and the donor's basis.

When gift stock is sold at a loss, the capital gain or capital loss is the difference between the proceeds from the sale and either the donor's basis or the market value on the date of the gift — whichever is lower.

The fortunate recipients of your planned gifts will have to know your basis on those stocks, so that they can report their capital gains or losses correctly — when and if those stocks are ever sold.

Yes, you can make the gifts without a broker. Endorse each stock certificate. Have your signature guaranteed by your bank. Send it to the transfer agent, by registered or certified mail, with instructions to issue a new certificate in the parent's name, as custodian for the child's name, under your state's gift to minors act.

The exact wording of gift to minors act registration form differs a bit in some states. You can check that out by making a quick phone call to the transfer agent — usually a big bank.

In June, 1977, I bought a ticket in a state lottery. In October, 1978, I was awarded a prize of $8,000. That was 16 months later. I say that this is no different than buying and selling a stock and my $7,999 profit should be counted as a long-term capital gain, on which the tax is much lower than on other income.

Q. Because the Internal Revenue Code says otherwise and clearly states that winnings from wagers — including lotteries — are fully taxable. You are required to report them as "other income" on Line 21, in recent years' federal income tax returns. If you have any wagering losses, you can deduct them — only to the extent of your winnings and only if you itemize deductions on Schedule A.

Don't get mad at me. Vent your spleen on the members of Congress who write the code. What happened? Was your 1978 return audited by the Internal Revenue Service? If so, you don't have much choice, other than to throw yourself on the reventor's mercy.

Q. I invested $10,000 in an oil and gas exploration drilling program in 1972 and 1973. Little or no oil or gas was found. My investments have since been merged into a company in oil, gas and other businesses. I received common stock of that company, as a result of the merger.

I get no dividends and the reports I get from the company are over my head. How can I dispose of this stock?

A. By selling it. The stock you named in your letter is currently trading around "7/4" — $7.25 a share. So, you'll realize a big loss on the sale. Oil and gas exploration programs are always risky. You went wildcating and got stuck with one of the stock market's cats and dogs.

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — A deeply indebted North Texas church has tentatively agreed not to sell more construction bonds without the express approval of the Texas Securities Board, a lawyer for the church says.

Frank Arnold said the tentative agreement between the state board and Northwest Christian Center Assemblies of God Church of Wichita Falls will probably be signed by Thursday.

"I think things look fairly positive," Arnold said of the controversy that has surrounded the church's recent attempt to sell $300,000 in construction bonds. The church already is indebted for $2.7 million dollars in outstanding bonds.

Texas Securities Board members moved to block the sale of more securities, claiming the church's financial position was precarious and that further bond sales would constitute fraud toward potential investors.

"The bottom line (of the agreement) will be that the church will not be able to sell any more securities, but can come back at some future date and seek an amendment to the order," Arnold said.

"In fact," he said, "(the church) agreed back in April to stop selling any more in that ($300,000) series of bonds."

The church is exempt from state bond laws except for statutes on fraudulent sales.

Arnold and members of the state board met for two days last week, when the proposed agreement was hammered out, the lawyer said.

The agreement isn't binding unless it is signed by four or five parties, including church authorities, securities board staff members and the securities board commissioner, Arnold said.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices gained ground today, rebounding from the slide of the past eight sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 57.36 points since June 23, climbed 5.13 to 954.43 by noon today.

Gainers held a 3-2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Late Monday the Federal Reserve issued figures showing no change in the basic measures of the money supply for the latest reporting week.

The data, which surprised some analysts who had been looking for a moderate increase, were taken as encouraging news for the interest-rate outlook.

And brokers said they seemed to provide the spark needed for the market to halt its early-session decline.

Also in the economic news, the government reported that the producer price index rose 0.6 percent in June, maintaining the single-digit pace of recent months.

Texasgulf topped the active list, up 7 1/4 at 54 1/4. Elf Aquitaine of France raised the price tag on its takeover bid for the company from $50 to $56 a share, and Texasgulf said it wouldn't fight the offer.

The NYSE's composite index rose .53 to 74.52. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained 1.33 to 361.53.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 21.41 million shares at noon, against 18.70 million at the same point Monday.
