Rains Dent Dry Spell

Rains put a dent in a long dry spell in the Snyder area this morning as thunderstorms moved across much of the northern half of the state.

Several counties were under severe thunderstorm warnings and a small tornado was reported in a sparsely-settled area near Crane, but it did no damage.

Rainfall measuring 1.25 inches was reported in and around Snyder. About .60 to .70 had been reported at the Lake J.B. Thomas dam, but there was no report of any runoff into the lake. The Colorado River Municipal District had discontinued service to oilfield repressuring units as of May 1 due to the low level of Lake Thomas.

A light drizzle with occasionally heavier showers peppered the Snyder area for most of the morning and there was a sprinkling of light hail between 8:30 a.m. and 9 a.m. It apparently did little, if any damage, however.

Marble-sized hail was reported near Monahans as a thunderstorm moved northeastward in that area and the Dallas-Fort Worth area was under a tornonado warning from 2 a.m. to 3 p.m. today.

National Weather Service radar indicated a possible tornado in the Hurst Euless-Bedford area at 2 a.m. as a thunderstorm moved eastward across the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

Pea-sized hail, heavy rains and some street flooding was reported in the Fort Worth area early today but rainfall amounts received were generally less than a half inch.

More rain was forecast for today. The weatherman said probability of rain would range between 80 and 100 percent for most of North Texas, with likely precipitation totals of from 1 to 2 inches.

Mondale In Manila

MANILA, Philippines (AP) - Vice President Walter F. Mondale arrived in Manila today to begin a five-nation tour demonstrating the Carter administration's commitment to Southeast Asia and to human rights.

"Where there are values and traditions that both our peoples cherish - freedom, individual liberty, human justice, democracy and national independence - I hope my visit can contribute to their greater fulfillment," Mondale told President Ferdinand E. Marcos of his arrival from Honolulu.

Marcos, in his welcoming remarks, referred to irritations between their governments, including lack of progress in negotiating new military and economic treaties and U.S. criticisms of human rights violations by the authoritarian Marcos government.

Market Turns Down

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market turned downward in another busy session today, apparently yielding to an accumulation of bad economic news over the past several days.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which closed Monday at its highest level in more than five months, pulled back 6.15 to 838.18 by noontime today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Snyder High FF[illegible] Dairy Team Take[illegible] State Title

The Snyder High School Future Farmers of America dairy cattle judging team will represent Texas at the national contest next fall in Kansas City.

The SHS dairy cattle judgers placed first in the state contest at Texas A&M University. Members of the team are Dusty Williams, Robert Early and Ricky Williams. Their advisor is Billy Bob McMullan, vocational agriculture instructor at Sny[illegible] High School.

Dusty Williams was the sixth high individual in the dairy cattle judging contest as the Snyder FFA team took over-all honors.

Meanwhile, the Snyder FFA livestock judging team was placing second in its state contest, and the local poultry judging team placed seventh in the state.

Members of the livestock team are Billy Rollins, Keith Early, and Ray Hill, who was third high individual.

Members of the poultry judging team from Snyder High are Jeffery Pylant, Melanie Jarrell and Dwain Hicks.

Area residents who are paying attention to proceedings are getting a first-hand look at some of the seemingly strange quirks of Texas election laws.

Snyder residents have two elections coming up within a week from now---the primaries and a liquor election on Saturday and Monday, respectively.

Our neighbors over at Abilene may vote on two liquor proposals simultaneously in the near future. They have two petitions out requesting elections to legalize the sale of alcoholic beverages. One would legalize sale for off-premises consumption, while another would throw Abilene wide open, including mixed drinks in public places. They had to check with Austin to see whether the two issues could be listed on the same ballot. They can, and if both of them are approved, the one with the least restrictions will prevail.

Snyder's liquor election is limited to the corporate limits of the city. But the county must hold all liquor elections. So, come Monday the five voting boxes in the city used in the general election will be in operation and they will be staffed by the county's precinct judges and clerks, even though some of them may not live in the city. Thus, it is possible for a person to help hold the city liquor election but not be qualified to vote in it. It's just the Texas way of holding a liquor election.

Voters in the liquor election will cast their ballots in the same polling places used in the Democratic Primary election on Saturday---with one exception. The Precinct 18 polling place is officially the El Paso Avenue Fire Station. That is where Box 18 voters will cast ballots in the liquor election.

The Democrats in that voting precinct will cast their ballots across the street at the junior high school. County Democratic Chairman Hilton Lambert took advantage of the fact that school will not be in session Saturday and moved the party primary voting there from the smaller fire station facilities. However, he had to get clearance all the way to Washington, D.C., to make the move.

And, the county has not moved its Box 18 polling place from the El Paso Avenue Fire Station, which means those voting in the liquor election Monday will cast their ballots there. The other four polling places will be at the School Administration Building for Box 15, the city hall for Box 17, the north side of the coliseum for Box 1 and the south side of the coliseum for Box 20.

Are you confused? Well, if you vote in the Democratic primary on Saturday, go back to the same place Monday to vote in the liquor election---unless you vote Saturday at the junior high school, in which case you will vote at the El Paso Avenue Fire Station on Monday.

2 Annexations Are Completed

The Snyder City Council last night completed annexation of two pieces of property and accepted a bid of $24,120 for a lot on Avenue R at 23rd Street.

James Rosser submitted the bid for the lot and City Manager George Patterson said that he understood that Rosser submitted the bid in behalf of a client.

The council also approved a $3,000 exemption in tax valuation for homesteads owned by persons 65 years and older. Those who qualify must request the exemption on forms available at the city tax office by June 1 this year and by May 1 hereafter. Requests must be renewed each year and forms will be mailed with tax statements each year beginning this fall.

Annexation was completed on a tract in southeast Snyder between the Brick Plant Road and Colorado City Highway, as requested by Rogers and Rogers who announced earlier that the firm planned a housing development there. Also, annexation of 5.1 acres in the 100 block of 23rd Street was approved on second and final reading. It was requested by Billy E. Grimmett.

Passed on first reading was an ordinance closing a portion of 26th St. at its intersection with U.S. Highway 180 (East Highway). The action was requested by Walter Cox on behalf of the Minute Market. The land is not used as a street at this time. It joins the property of the Minute Market on the north.

The bid of Snyder Truck and Tractor, Inc., was accepted for the purchase of a combination tractor-backhoe and bucket loader to be used by the city's utility construction crew. The bid of $13,280.27, including a trade-in, was the lowest of the three received.

The Rohan Co., with a bid of $3,718.36, was the successful bidder for the purchase of brass goods for the water department. Its bid was the lowest of four received.

The city manager was authorized to seek bids for the sale of a 1971 ambulance and some used police radio equipment.

Jimmy Moore was authorized to use a mobile home temporarily as a field office while developing a residential project in Park Place Addition.

Councilman Milton Ham was re-elected to serve as mayor pro tem for a year.

Passed on second and final reading was an ordinance increasing rates of Snyder Community Antenna Television. The new ordinance increases residential connection charges from $7.50 to $8 per month.

In a brief executive session, the council discussed some proposals for making a portion of city land at 37th Street east of Deep Creek available for industrial development. No official action was taken.

Pullout Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) President Carter's decision to pull U.S. combat troops out of South Korea has drawn new fire from Congress amid indications that he overruled an early recommendation by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Monday disclosed that the Joint Chiefs initially recommended against any withdrawals until Congress had approved an $800 million arms package for South Korea.

Expenses Are Increasing In Local Political Races

As the May 6 Democratic primary draws nearer, the political races in Scurry County heat up and the campaigns become more expensive.

Of the five contested spots on the ballot, the race between county judge candidates Preston Wilson and Bobby Goodwin has emerged as the most expensive.

According to campaign reports filed by the candidates themselves, Wilson, the incumbent, lists his expenses at $1,019.57, while Goodwin, the challenger, shows $1,177.35 in expenses.

During the first reporting period, covering the time up to April 6, Wilson spent his $1,019.57 in one lump sum. During the second reporting period, covering the time from April 6 to April 28, Wilson's reports indicate he spent nothing.

Goodwin spent $637.08 during the first period and $540.27 during the second period.

In the initial reporting period, the filing fee was the single greatest expense listed by the candidates. The bulk of the other expenses went to pay for advertising. A few of the candidates listed small postal and gasoline expenses.

A difference of about $10 separates the two candidates for county treasurer in what they have spent.

Billy Wayne Thompson, the incumbent, has spent a total of $713.86 in his campaign to retain his seat. Some $485.15 was spent during the first reporting period, and $227.91 was spent during the second reporting period.

Florine Merritt, the challenger, has spent $703.04 in her campaign. That figure is broken down to the $499.40 she spent in the first period, and to $203.64 she spent during the second reporting period.

In the three-way race for Precinct 1 justice of the peace, the expenses ranged from a low of $435.51 spent by Lesley Shelburne, to a high of $742.42 spent by Janet Hall.

Falling in between was Dan Callaway who spent $648.58 in his campaign.

In the three-way race for Precinct 2 county commissioner, the greatest expense was listed by Buck Woolever, who spent $755.14, and the least by Ernest Shifflett, who spent $409.12.

The $625.57 spent by Hassie Sneed fell between the other two expenses.

Shifflett spent the $409.12 during the first reporting period, and nothing during the second period.

Sneed spent $119.57 of his expenses during the period from April 6 to April 28, while Woolever spent $125.69 during the same time span.

The competition for Precinct 4 county commissioner is marked by a four-man race. Running in that race are Ted Billingsley, Hollis Ward, Roy Cole, and Rudolph H. Norwood.

Billingsley lists $499.87 in campaign expenses, and Ward showed a total of $570.

Cole, who did not file a report the first time, filed one the second time listing his expenses at $541.12 up to April 24, and nothing from the 24th to the 29th of April.

Norwood also did not file a report for the first period, but filed during the second period listing a total expense of $487.45 for the time up to April 28.

Meaning of terms as they are employed in political campaigns and Presidential press conferences is a subject worthy of attention by experts in such intangible values or sciences as terminology and psychology. Stripped to their essential elements these terms involve the meaning of words and explanations of why people behave as they do in certain situations.

All this is by way of trying to arrive at some reasonably logical conclusion of what is meant by the frequently used term, middle class. It is supposed to identify families which have a gross annual income from earnings of one or more employed members of anywhere from $15,000 to $30,000, own an average of two and half motor cars, belong to the country club and bewilder political pundits by refusing to vote straight party tickets in general elections.

The general assumption, in analyzing returns from the 1976 Presidential election, was that Carter got just enough of those who normally vote Republican in Presidential races to win a razor-thin victory over incumbent Gerald Ford. The President encouraged that idea and sought to reassure middle class voters who presumably put him in office with one of his famous "you-can-depend-on-that" conclusions to a statement that he wasn't going to forget them when he took up residence at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D.C.

The recent sharp decline in an already low public opinion rating to its lowest point since the 20th day of January, 1977, can be construed either of two ways. That the President forgot, or that he remembered, the middle segment of the nation's voting population.

The meteoric increase in Social Security taxes scheduled to become effective in January, 1979, had a devastating effect on voter sentiment as soon as word got around as to just how much bite it would be taking out of pay checks to middle class earners. A promised reduction in income taxes was advertised as the Administration's plan to offset higher Social Security taxes.

But analysis shows it will do nothing of the kind. Social Security taxes are on gross income, every dollar of it. There are no credits of any kind in computing it, as there are in determining the amount of income tax liability. It has been said that President Carter hasn't forgotten the great middle class in our population, but its members are beginning to wish he had.

a plastic economy

The individual consumer these days is not on a gold but what might be collected a plastic standard - the plastic in the average 5.2 credit cards he or she carries.

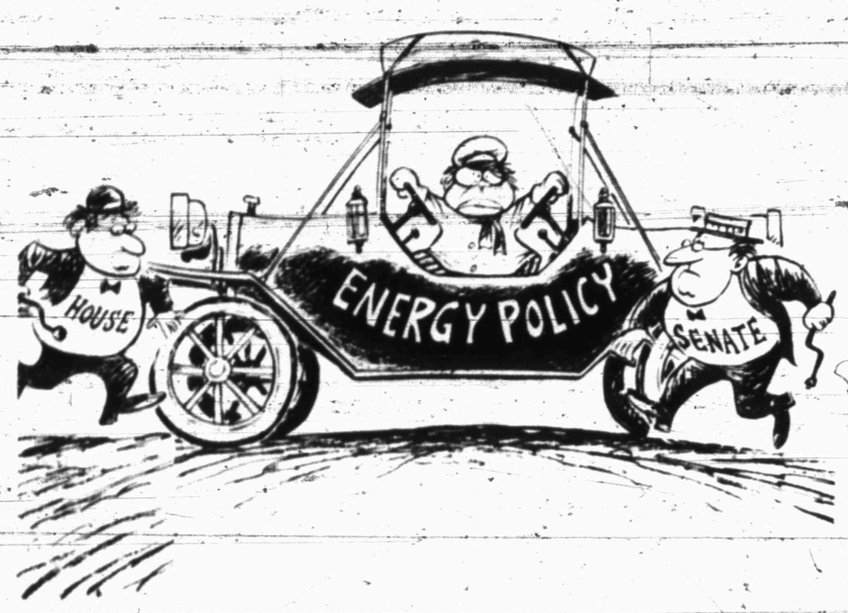

More than 700 million ships of plastic credit certification are in use worldwide and more than 80 percent of these - in excess of half a billion - are stuffed into American wallets, according to a survey reported in the Christian Science Monitor.

In second place in the world standings are Canadians, with more than 34 million cards.

The majority of cards are issued by retail firms, with department stores the largest category, followed by oil companies. The single firm championship is held by Sears, Roebuck with 47 million cards in customer hands. Bank cards total some 92 million.

The survey, conducted by Spencer Nilson of Santa Monica, Calif, publisher of a credit card newsletter, covered 49 countries and suggests that on a world basis the card market has just begun to be tapped.

North America and Europe may be approaching saturation, but there are less than four million cards in all of South American and a miniscule 12,500 to assist all those Middle Easterners in disposing of their oil riches.

more room at the top

My travels take me to a somewhere else campus at least once a week. I am encouraged by much of what today's young people stand for - and some of the things they are refusing to stand for.

But I am not blind to the unprecedented intrusion of drugs and related depravity into the ranks of what we used to call "chicken."

If there is any "bright side" to the numbers I am about to relate it is this: All those youngsters on the way down are leaving a lot of room at the top for the others.

Half of all high school students now have experimented with drugs and more than one-third consider themselves "regular users."

That is one-third of 37 million!

And yet for every schoolager popping pills or on the needle, others are on the bottle.

Nearly 8,000 young Americans die each year in accidents involving alcohol. 40,000 are crippled or disfigured.

Dependency on drugs or drink spawns related crimes to support those habits. Los Angeles police guesstimate that 3,000 boys and girls under the age of 14 are prostitutes.

Three thousand in just that one city.

More than half of what the FBI calls "serious crimes" - rape, robbery, murder - are now committed by boys and girls between 10 and 17.

Last year in our schools there were 9,000 reported rapes, 12,000 armed robberies and 70,000 assaults on teachers; more than $600 million lost to vandalism.

This year one million desperate youngsters will run away from home; it's indicated that 40 percent to 60 percent of those flee child abuse and incest. The average age of the runaways is 14.

Perhaps the most tragic toll is the loss of so many youngsters to depression, emotional stress, loneliness. Last year 4,000 school-agers killed themselves and 80,000 tried. Among Americans between the ages of 15 and 19, accidents are still the leading cause of death but second is suicide.

There is no way to prove that our Supreme Court's determination to disassociate religion and education has contributed to this mass frustration, but it can be proved that when Christianity was ordered out of the classroom a whole bunch of substitute religions rushed in to satisfy the inevitable hunger of all young people for a sense of rightness and wrongness. This appetite has spawned 5,000 substitue religions - cult and occult - with some three million members, mostly young.

An unprecedented proliferation of "church schools" is now offering an alternative to the barrenness of public education.

And again - if there is any compensation for the degeneration of so many of this oncoming generation it is that - for the disciplined others - they are leaving a lot of room at the top.

There has been much discussion lately about alternative energy sources with solar power getting most of the attention. I read an article recently that mentioned the wonders of the plant world. This was a source that I had never thought of but experts claim this is merely an extension of solar energy.

Plants are being considered for many things today...like a better chicken feed, a supplier of protein and "gasoline" Can you imagine "gasoline trees?"

C.O. Foerster, a native of Texas and a horticulturist, says there is no reason to depend on the Arabs for gas when we can grow it in an area about half the size of Texas. He has a few gasoline tree seedlings sprouting near his home in the Rio Grande Valley. Some of the seedlings are just coming up and larger plants are also sprouting. He got the seeds from a Nobel prize-winning California scientist who has been working with various strains of the Euphorbia plant.

The Euphorbia does not produce the same type of oil drilled from the ground but a mixture of hydrocarbons suited for fuel uses can be obtained from the plant.

A chemist in the lab at the University of California says no one is sure of the potential of the Euphorbia but they do know that on a small scale they can produce about 10 barrels of crude oil per acre.

The plants grow wild in parts of California and Brazil. It is thought that they could be grown in the Valley too.

The bushes grow to about five feet in height and when pricked or cut ooze a pure white liquid, called latex. Latex is the key to the plant's potential value, since latex is mostly composed of hydrocarbons-something thought of as processable through a refinery. The cost of this complex mixture of hydrocarbons is set at $10-15 per barrel in the fields and another $10 would be required to take the oil from the plants and put it in the barrel. Thus the price of the "plant" crude oil would be about $20 per barrel, which is much higher than that produced today.

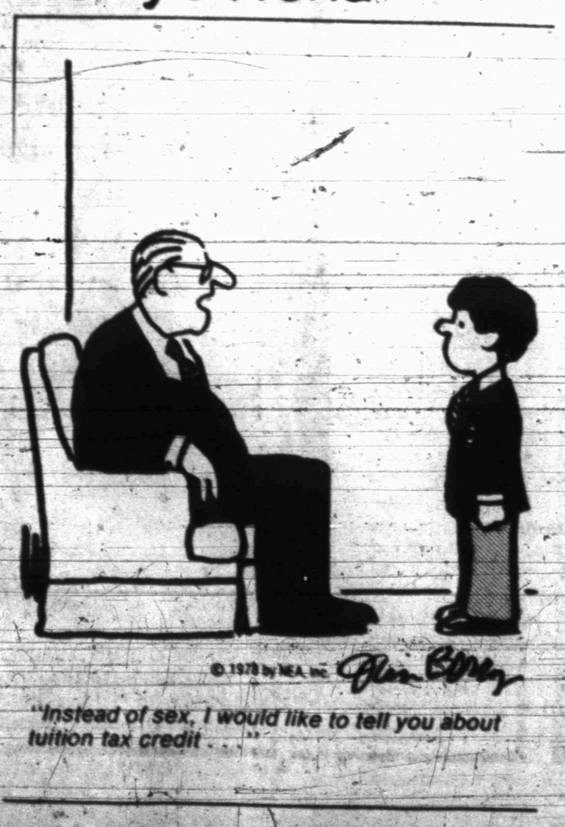

The processing of the plant is still in the research stages but it involves crushing the stem and extracting the oil through a chemical process.

The potential value of the Euphorbia plant is not news to scientists since Thomas Alva Edison worked with the plants in his later years, but his research failed. He found the oil in the plant but he was looking for rubber.

I'm banking on man's ingenuity to provide our future needs...they always have in the past. I might want some of those gasoline trees and when they perfect a money tree, I sure want a bunch of those seedlings.

The metric equivalent of one bushel is 35.238 liters.

WASHINGTON (NEA) - No federal agency surpasses the General Accounting Office in its dedication to ferreting out waste, mismanagement and inefficiency in government. But the GAO ought to heed the biblical injunction: "Physician, heal thyself."

Widely acclaimed as the "watchdog" of the bureaucracy, the GAO is the investigative arm of Congress with an annual budget of $176 million and the wide-reaching authority to audit and investigate virtually every government program.

It produces about 1,000 reports every year, on subjects ranging from "the federal government's bill payment performance is good but should be better" to "the Secretary of Defense is becoming too involved in the day-to-day management process."

Every major federal department and agency has been criticized by GAO, for spending money too fast or too slow, for having too few or too many employees and for every other imaginable managerial inadequacy.

No area of government endeavor is too obscure to escape GAO's attention including Guam's inadequate budgeting and accounting system, overpriced contracts for elevator maintenance at Veterans Administration hospitals and poor planning within the District of Columbia school system.

The results of almost all the work of GAO's 5,200 employees including 3,100 auditors, investigators and other professionals are presented to Congress, the press and the public in the form of blue-covered reports.

But those documents are distributed under a slipshod, inefficient and archaic system. The result is that much of GAO's valuable work in clogged in a bottleneck of massive proportions.

The system is inefficient and I know it," admits Cynthia A. Schwartz, acting manager of GAO's distribution branch, which is supposed to respond to 96,000 requests each year for copies of 480,000 GAO reports.

To handle the requests that come pouring in by mail, telephone and from people who personally visit the agency's headquarters here, GAO employs exactly three permanent clerks.

Although agency officials have limited the number of permanent employees, Ms. Schwartz is allowed to hire temporary workers for six months. Their term of service can be extended for an additional six months, but after a year they must be dismissed.

So GAO has a constantly rotating group of 25 temporary workers who know they'll be laid off not long after they learn their jobs. Many of them actively seek permanent employment elsewhere during the six-month extension and quit in the middle of that period rather than wait around for the honor of being fired after a year.

Ms. Schwartz places much of the blame on the Civil Service Commission, which allows her to pay only $7,000 a year to those working in the distribution office. At that salary, she says, competent workers probably couldn't be recruited and retained even with a higher personnel ceiling.

Automated equipment soon to be installed ought to reduce the processing time and Ms. Schwartz has long-range plans to seek authority for more permanent employees.

When she assumed the post of acting distribution manager a year ago, Mrs. Schwartz explains with a smile, there was a delay of 60-to-90 days in filing requests for reports. But that now has been reduced to a mere 30 to 45 days.

The prospects for further improvement are bleak, however. When GAO recently submitted its budget request to Congress for the 1979 fiscal year, it sought no additional employees to handle management tasks such as report distribution.

The situation demands an investigation by an independent government "watchdog" agency that could provide a tough critique of an office held together by little more than chewing gum and bailing wire. But only one federal agency performs that function-and it isn't especially interested.

Letters To Editor

To The Daily News:

Our world is in conflict. First it was the elements vs. elements, the never-ending struggle between the desert and the monsoons. Next it was man vs. the elements. As long as he lived as a nomad, he moved to greener pastures. When his numbers increased, it became man vs. man. No less than a dozen great empires arose under man's ingenuity, only under conflicts to fall in decay.

In 1775, a young nation put a most perfect government together. It was a democracy form of government. A bare 200 years went by and conflicts have been creeping in.

It will be impossible to maintain a democracy form of government as long as each segment of the society (coal miners, farmers, steelworkers, ect.) demand their part to be administered as a dictator.

The only alternative to the conflicts is to put all segments of the society under one owner and one boss.

few turnaround managers

NEW YORK (AP) - One of corporate America's big weaknesses, said the management analyst, is that it has a lot of problem solvers but few turnaround managers.

The latter, said Eugene Jennings, can restructure a sick company and build a lasting organization - new image, new direction, sound financing, strong executive staff.

The former, capable in their own right, handle one problem at a time, a performance that can prove disastrous for crisis-ridden companies with fundamental, multiple, interrelated difficulties.

Jennings, managemant professor at Michigan State University, author and confidential adviser to top corporate executives, distinguishes between problems and crises in this manner:

"To managers, a problem to be solved is the choice between a current condition and a more desireable condition.

"A crisis is where a current condition is untenable if not intolerable, and the alleviation of it does not appear to be at hand."

Quite understandably, he observes, the crisis manager is very exceptional, very much in demand, and very much in short supply. There is no training ground for the crisis manager; he acts as he learns.

"Very few chief executives have a bullpen of turnaround managers in whom they have confidence to move a sick division or company efficiently and effectively," he comments. But many need such people.

Put a problem-solver in the job and he often turns too far or liquidates the management and assets, said Jennings, leaving the company without the energy it needs for the long haul.

"We have executives in great numbers who can clear up the balance sheet and the profit-loss statement, but we don't have as many who can rebuild the foundation," he said in an interview.

A consequence of this shows up in the nature of today's mergers and acquistions, in which high-cost but quality companies are sought in preference to less costly but troubled concerns.

The latter, Jennings points out, might in the long run represent the better acquisition, but the absence of turnaround managers prevents the acquirer from taking the risk involved.

Probably one of the best crisis executives ever produced, Jennings believes, was Ernest Breech, who helped turn around a sick Ford Motor Co. Currently, he believes, Robert Wilson of Memorex Corp. is developing a turnaround reputation, which began at Collins Radio.

Meanwhile, the absence of crisis managers is forcing cashrich, acquisition-minded, companies to choose already well-managed concerns that can give them a quick earnings fix, said Jennings.

Because they cannot manage them, acquirers are reluctant to seek poorly managed concerns that, with defects eliminated, might be more desirable acquisitions in the long run.

Sometimes the standard expert play turns out to be a loser. Today's slam hand is a good example of what can heppen when the play that offers the best chance for success turns out to be a loser.

The six-spade contract is slightly optimistic, but the sort of contract that is reached all the time.

The expert declarer wins the heart in dummy, leads the nine of trumps and lets it ride. West is delighted to win the trick with his singleton queen of trumps. If his feeling of delight has not interfered with his reasoning powers and if East had been smart enough to play the deuce of hearts at trick one, West will shift to a club and South will be short one slam. If West fails to lead a club, South will be able to get rid of his clubs on dummy's diamonds.

The ordinary declarer wins the heart in his hand, cashes one high trump, drops the queen and makes all the tricks. But he has taken the wrong line of play.

The reason is that the expert loses to the singleton queen, but the average player would lose if West held the singleton 6, 5, 4 or 2.

Ask the Experts

A Mississippi reader wants to know if it is true that you should pick up a hand with 4-4-3-2 distribution over one fifth of the time.

Yes, it is true. You should have 4-4-3-2 distribution 21.55 percent of the time and 20 percent is a one-fifth chance.

Savory Grits, Onions Featured

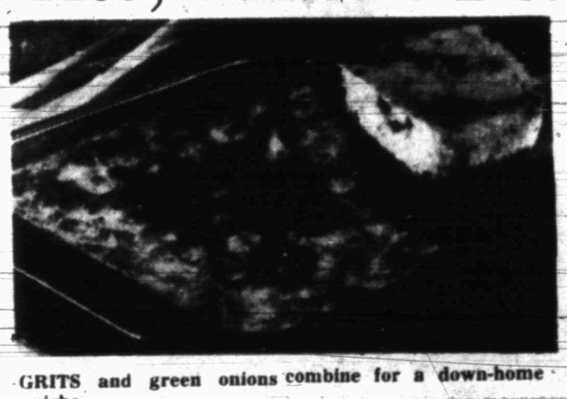

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

A casserole of grits and green onions is a savory way to serve enriched grain food to your family.

Southerners for generations have enjoyed grits as a side dish for any meal. Most northerners had never heard of grits — let alone tasted them — until President Jimmy Carter brought them into the White House dining room. Grits are truly an American dish; the first English settlers learned of them from our native Indian population.

For the uninitiated, grits are ground hominy — or dried, processed kernels of corn. This particular grits dish may be likened to a quiche without a crust.

For added flavor and color, top with shredded Swiss cheese and crumbled cooked bacon. Serve with a salad as an entree or as a side dish with a favorite meat such as ham.

GRITS and green onions combine for a down-home quiche.

GRITS 'N' GREEN ONION BAKE

- 1 cup enriched white hominy quick grits
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 4 cups boiling water
- 2 cups (8 oz.) shredded natural Swiss cheese
- ½ cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup milk
- 8 crispy cooked bacon slices, crumbled
- ⅓ cup green onion slices
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard

Stir grits slowly into salted boiling water in large heavy saucepan. Cook over low heat about 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir in remaining ingredients. Continue cooking over low heat until cheese is melted.

Pour into greased 8-inch square baking dish. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven about 50 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes; cut into squares. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

VARIATION: Substitute 1 cup enriched white hominy grits for enriched white hominy quick grits. Cook in 5 cups salted boiling water 25 to 30 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Ira Sports Banquet Set

IRA - The Annual Ira Sports Banquet - honoring athletes from tennis, golf, track, basketball and football - is to be held here at 7:30 p.m. today in the old gymnasium.

A barbecue dinner will be served, and tickets may be obtained for $3.

Milton Ham is master of ceremonies for the occasion.

Baseball Game Postponed

Today's scheduled 4 p.m. baseball game pitting Snyder High School against Lamesa here has been postponed, according to Coach Albert Lewis.

Early-morning rains and hail, with the prospect of more adverse weather this afternoon, caused the District 3-AAA contest to be changed to Thursday. Time and place, Mott2tt Field, will remain the same.

In another change, a scheduled game between Snyder and Lamesa on May 13 has been moved up to May 8. The game will mark Snyder's final with Lamesa this season, and will be held in Lamesa at 2:30 p.m. Conflicts - which included the annual prom - caused the change.

Left-hander Mitch Mackey will start on the mount for the 21-5 Tigers Thursday. Mackey, with an ERA of 2.17, sports a win-loss record of 8-1.

In other news from the Tiger bullpen, Coach Lewis reported that freshmen pitcher Tony Degrate is out for the season. Degrate, who had mounted a 5-2 record, apparently has a ligament problem in his throwing arm.

Powder-Puffers Ready

No final word had been received this morning as to whether tonight's scheduled Powder-Puff Football game would go on as planned.

Adverse weather threatened the annual event - scheduled for 7 p.m. at Tiger Stadium - in the form of rain and hail this morning.

The game, switching the roles of male and female as players and cheerleaders, is designed to raise funds for senior class activities at the end of the year.

Tickets for the game may be purchased at the gate.

ABC To Screen Ali-Spinks

NEW YORK (AP)-Top Rank Inc., promoters of the Muhammad Ali-Leon Spinks rematch, have announced the fight would be televised live by ABC Sports Sept. 15 from the Louisiana Superdome.

Spinks, who wrested the title from Ali on Feb. 15 with a 15-round decision in Las Vegas, appeared at a news conference but refused to answer any questions about his recent arrest in St. Louis.

Promoter Bob Arum would disclose neither the amount that ABC bid for the fight nor the purses the fighters will receive. However, bidding for the television rights was known to have started at $7 million, and the live gate at the Superdome is expected to reach $5 million from the sale of 85,000 seats.

Cy Young Winner Bobmed By Phillies...

Seaver Slammed A Sixth Time

By The Associated Press

What did they say in 1908, when Cy Young won 13, games and lost 21? Was there no hope at all in 1911, when he finished 7-10?

Did everyone then ask, "What's wrong with Cy Young?" the way everyone now is asking, "What's wrong with Tom Seaver?"

Six starts into the 1978 baseball season, Seaver is winless. His earned run average is 6.52. He is, in his own words, "embarrassed and extremely frustrated."

Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson yanked Seaver in front of a national television audience Monday night after the right-hander, a three-time Young Award winner, gave up seven hits and seven runs - six of them earned - in less than three innings against the Philadelphia Phillies.

Worse, almost, was the six walks he handed out.

After eating Seaver alive in three innings, the Phillies picked their teeth the rest of the way. They finished with a 12-1 victory, leaving Cincinnati with the scraps and leaving everyone asking Tom Seaver what's wrong.

He answered the only way he could: "I wish I knew what it was. If I did, I wouldn't be in this situation."

In the other National League games, the San Francisco Giants trimmed the St. Louis Cardinals 2-1, the Pittsburgh Pirates bested the San Deigo Padres 7-4 and the Atlanta Braves edged the New York Mets 6-5.

In the only American League games, the Boston Red Sox held on for a 9-6 triumph over the Baltimore Orioles and the New York Yankees topped the Kansas City Royals 8-4.

Giants 2, Cardinals 1

Terry Whitfield doubled and scored from second base on Mark Littell's wild pitch in the eighth inning for the winning run in San Francisco's victory over St. Louis.

The game was spiced by a ninth-inning argument between the Giants' Bill Madlock and rookie umpire Charlie Williams, who was behind the plate for the first time in a major league game.

Madlock, who has struck out twice, stepped out of the batter's box after the count went to two strikes against Cardinals reliever Pete Vuckovich. Williams ordered Madlock back into the box, then signaled for Vuckovich to throw when his directive was ignored.

Madlock, who had his back to the plate when the pitch was thrown, had to be restrained from going after Williams when the umpire cried, "Strike Three."

Seattle 'In The Groove Again'...

Sonics Extinguish Blazers

SEATTLE (AP) - Suddenly, it becomes a question of how far the Seattle SuperSonics can go.

Playing with the confidence and poise that got them through the rugged times early in the regular season, the surprising Sonics dispatched the beleaguered defending world champion Portland Trail Blazers from the National Basketball Association playoffs with a 105-94 victory Monday night.

The triumph before a wild Coliseum sellout crowd of 14,098 gave the sonics a 4-2 margin in the best-of-seven series and sends them into the Western Conference finals against the winner of the Denver-Milwaukee series.

"It looks like we're in the groove again. If we are, there's no telling how far this team can go," said a smiling Lenny Wilkens, who took over as Seattle's head coach Nov. 30 with the team mired in the Pacific Division cellar with a 5-17 record.

For Portland, a city that went bananas over its Blazers last year as the club fashioned upset after upset en route to the NBA title, injuries - and the Sonics - finally took their toll in the end.

"This is one of the greatest group of individuals I've ever been around. They've never quit," said Portland Coach Jack Ramsay.

A streak in the final three minutes of the second period in which Seattle outscored Portland 12-0 to take a 55-49 half-time lead gave the Sonics momentum going into the second half.

Pokes Looking For Offensive Linemen

DALLAS (AP)-Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry, faced with the retirement of Ralph Neely and Rayfield Wright's injury problems, says he wants some good offensive linemen from the National Football League draft.

The 1978 NFL draft gets under way today, with the Houston Oilers grabbing Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell via a trade with Tampa Bay.

Last year, it was Dallas that traded for Seattle's No. 1 choice to draft Tony Dorsett. But the Cowboys are at the other extreme today, getting the 28th pick by virtue of their Super Bowl triumph.

"Our major concern is the offensive line because left tackle Ralph Neely retired," said Landry. "If Rayfield Wright comes back strong enough we don't have a problem. If he doesn't, we want to be sure we have enough depth there."

Wright, an offensive tackle, returned to action late last season after knee problems.

Because of the Cowboys' computerized system of ranking collegiate players in advance, the draft has become an almost automatic affair for them. They pick the highest rated athlete available regardless of position.

In cases where three or four players are rated practically the same, Landry said the team will draft on the basis of need.

This year's collegiate crop is considered below average by NFL scouts, so the "can't miss" prospects will go before the first round is completed.

Indy Notes Record 92 Entries To Date

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - A record 92 entries pose a logistical problem at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, especially for the owners and drivers of 10 cars which still are without assigned garages in Gasoline Alley.

It's a common practice for some car owners to submit entries for so-called ghost vehicles, race cars which exist on paper only, in order to obtain two or more adjacent garages for extra working space.

But the Speedway can't do a thing about it until after qualifications, when the field has been trimmed to the 33 starters for the Indy 500.

Before that, however, each entry, whether the car shows up or not, is guaranteed garage space as long as there are garages still available. And a garage will be vacated only "when it becomes apparent that the car does not exist," says Al Bloemker, the Speedway's director of publicity.

As long as the owner has submitted an entry, no one can say he won't bring in a car at the last minute before qualifications, Bloemker said. "We're not mindreaders."

The legitimate entries so far without garages include cars for Janet Guthrie, Salt Walther, Eldon Rasmussen and rookies Larry Rice, Ed Finley and Phil Threshie.

Garlits Grabs Dragster Title

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP)--Don Garlits roared to the Pro Dragsters title in the $150,000 Pro-Am National Drug Racing Championships at Championships at Rockingham International Dragway, edging Lee Weller.

Lee Edwards won the Pro Stock division and Kenny Savage took the honors in the Funny Car competition.

Alydar Kentucky Derby Top Pick

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - Laz Barrera, trainer of Affirmed, says his colt not only faces a tough rival in Alydar for Saturday's 104th Kentucky Derby, but he's bucking sentiment for the Calumet Farm colt.

Not even the presence of Kentucky-born-and-bred Steve Cauthen aboard Affirmed is expected to sway the favorite's role from Alydar, winner of the Flamingo, Florida Derby and Blue Grass Stakes.

"Logic says we should be the favorite," said Barrera on a chilly Monday morning at Churchill Downs. "We beat him four of six races. If this race was in California, Affirmed would be favorite, but it's Kentucky, so Alydar will be favored."

Alydar's status as favorite will be built a great deal on the fact that Calumet Farm, winner of a record eight derbies, is a legend among racing fans, especially in Kentucky.

Oh's Income Quadruples

TOKYO (AP) - Home run slugger Sadaharu Oh's income has more than quadrupled since he set the world homer record of 756 last Sept. 3, the Yomiuri Giants say.

His annual income for the fiscal year ending March 31 totaled $1.1 million, a four-fold increase over the previous year's $284,444, the Japanese Central League's leading team said.

NFL College Draft...

Campbell's An Oiler

NEW YORK (AP) - The Houston Oilers, to the surprise of absolutely no one, officially made Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell their No. 1 choice in the opening round of the National Football League's college draft today.

The University of Texas running back, who gained 1,744 yards and was the fifth leading ground-gainer in major college history, was the man the Oilers wanted as the Houston equivalent of Tony Dorsett, the sensational runner of solidified the Dallas Cowboys' offense last season.

To get the shot at the 6-foot-200-pound Campbell, the Oilers gave Tampa Bay, which owned the No. 1 overall selection, four draft choices (two this season and two next year) and tight end Jimmy Giles.

The Kansas City Chiefs, with a defense that ranked dead last among the NFL's 28 teams last year, had the second choice and selected Art Still, a 6-foot-7 defensive end from the University of Kentucky.

The New Orleans Saints, picking third, took Wes Chandler, a brilliant wide receiver from the University of Florida. They were followed instantly by the New York Jets, who grabbed Chris Ward, a 272-pound offensive tackle from Ohio State.

The Buffalo Bills, looking to replace the traded O.J. Simpson, took Oklahoma State running back Terry Miller, the most prolific ground-gainer in the history of the Big Eight Conference.

In rapid-fire succession, the Green Bay Packers selected Stanford wide receiver James Lofton, the outstanding performer in the highly respected Senior Bowl all-star game.

The No. 7 pick belonged to San Francisco and the 49ers went for Ken MacAfee, the bruising 249-pound tight end from national champion Notre Dame.

The selection of MacAfee was followed by another Notre Dame star when the Cincinnati Bengals, using a pick acquired from Philadelphia four years ago in the Bill Bergey deal, took defensive end Ross Browner, the 1976 Outland Tropht winner as the nation's best lineman.

The Seattle Seahawks selected Keith Simpson, a defensive back from Memphis State with blazing speed.

They were quickly followed by the New York Giants, who picked Gordon King, a 272-pound offensive tackle from Stanford. The selection was greeted by a roar of approval from hundreds of spectators in the balcony of the Roosevelt Hotel's grand ballroom.

A third Notre Damer was the No. 11 pick when the Detroit Lions took defensive back Luther Bradley.

The Cleveland Browns then selected Clay Matthews, a 232-pound linebacker from Southern California.

The Atlanta Falcons chose Mike Kenn, a 245-pound offensive tackle from Michigan and the San Diego Chargers completed the midway point of the opening round by making acrobatic wide receiver John Jefferson of Arizona State the No. 14 pick.

Although he was the major league home run king when he played for the New York Yankees, Babe Ruth still pitched five games and won them all.

Meeting Set By Producers

A meeting of the Scurry County Producers Association has been set for 8 a.m. Thursday at the Chamber of Commerce-BCD Building.

Milton Stephens, president of the organization of cotton growers, said the purpose of the meeting is to review the pest management program and discuss placement of boll weevil traps on county farms. All cotton growers have been asked to attend the session.

Walls Industries Sale Is Completed

Walls Industries, Inc. has announced that it has completed the sale of its assets to a corporation owned by Oppenheimer & Co., for cash equivalent to $14.125 for each outstanding share of Walls' common stock. The business of Walls Industries will continue to be run under the same corporate name and by the same management team. The asset sale was approved by the company's shareholders at their annual meeting held on April 25, 1978.

Immediately following the sale the company changed its corporate name to Samarnan Investment Corporation and changed its corporate purposes to become an investment company. Walls stated that it will mail to its shareholders about May 1, 1978, an offer to purchase all of its outstanding shares for $14.125 cash per share. The offer will terminate at the close of business on May 31, 1978, at which time all payments for tendered shares accepted by the company will be made.

Walls also announced net sales and earnings for the three months ended March 31, 1978, of $7,259,275 and $464,425 ($0.29 per share), respectively, compared to net sales of $6,061,587 and net earnings of $562,784 ($0.36 per share) for the comparable period in 1976.

Two Facing Felony Counts

Felony charges have been filed against two men by the district attorney's office.

Named in a burglary complaint is James W. Davis, 17, and named in a drunken driving complaint is D.W. Lynch, 39.

Davis is alleged to have burglarized Hoyt Furniture Co. on April 24. Reports filed at the time of the alleged break-in indicate nothing was taken from the store.

Lynch's driving while intoxicated charge stems from an April 30 traffic accident in which a car he was driving was in collision with a fence at the city barn. While no injuries were listed in police reports and only minor damage reported to the car, damage to the fence was estimated at $2,000.

Both men have been released from custody after posting $1,500 bonds.

Man Left To Die Is Asking People Why

EDITOR's NOTE: Stephen O'Ryan, 27, was accosted and stabbed on a Seattle street Dec. 16. Badly wounded, he crawled away, observed but ignored by people in the neighborhood.

O'Ryan, the son of a Seattle Post-Intelligencer reporter, has recovered from his wound and plans to enter law school. No one has been arrested for the crime. Here is his story.

By STEPHEN O'RYAN
Seattle Post-Intelligencer

SEATTLE (AP)-One afternoon I was knocked down on a Seattle street, stabbed in the back and left for dead while both my attackers walked away. The wounds are almost healed, but I want an answer from the people of this city.

Why did you leave me there to die?

I had gotten off the bus that afternoon at Boren and Yesler to visit a friend. If it hadn't been raining, I would have waited for the transfer, and there wouldn't be this six-inch scar up the middle of my stomach and a knife wound in my back. But that's all hindsight. I decided to walk, and two blocks later landed on the pavement, gasping for one deep breath.

I first saw them when they rounded the corner in front of me. One of them had on a greasy white raincoat, the other a shabby tweed. The one in white had his head thrown back, shouting incoherently. I figured he was high, and moved over to give them plenty of room. It wasn't room enough.

"Well now, don't this look just like one of 'em," shouted the one in the white raincoat.

He was short, thin, wore his hair in a wedge-like afro, and had that wild look in his eyes, like a horse gets when it's scared.

"A honky, a honky, a honky. I swear you can't go nowhere but there ain't a hundred of 'em. Jumpin' outa the sidewalks, tellin' you when and what to do. Look out for me boy, look out!"

"Just let me by," I said. "Let you by, by, by!" he laughed, nudging his partner as the two closed in. "Oh yes, sir, so mighty powerful and strong. Ain't gonna let nobody by, by, by, not till they do some shutin' up. Now move!"

He shoved me off the sidewalk, and I should have moved. Instead I swung for his stomach, turned on his partner and was stopped short by an incredible jolt of pain on my left side. There was a knife in my back. I staggered once before one of them kicked me in the groin, then I fell.

The wound was bad. I could feel that cold blade all the way to my chest. Later the doctors told me it tore open my left lung, but I guess I was lucky. It almost pierced my heart.

"Should've done what you was told," his partner said as he leaned over to take my wallet. When he pulled out the knife, I felt something give deep inside.

I looked across the street as they walked away and saw a middle-aged man walking his dog in the rain. He must have seen the whole thing. I tried to shout, but the pain was so bad I couldn't even catch my breath. All I managed was a drawn-out moan. He didn't see me.

I moved my head and saw a woman standing at her window. For several seconds I stared at her face, then she moved away and the window was empty. She didn't see me either.

I must have blacked out for a while. When I woke up, I was drenched with rain, and blood was dripping on the sidewalk. It wasn't until then I understood what had happened.

I'm dying. The realization bewildered me. People don't get stabbed to death in decent neighborhoods, not in plain view and the middle of the afternoon.

Yesler Way was two blocks off and crowded with traffic. Unable to stand, I rolled slowly to my side, pulled my legs up one at a time, then started crawling down the sidewalk. Every move made me sick to my stomach with pain.

Maybe they thought I was drunk, but that whole neighborhood watched me as I struggled in the rain. All the doors were closed, but they knew I was out there. The appearance and disappearance of a face in a window, the movement of curtains-they were there, being careful.

By the time I got to Yesler my arms and legs were quivering like those of an old man. I waved at the first car, smearing my hand with blood so they could see I was wounded, and I waited with relief.

It didn't stop.

I waved at the next car, and the next one, and the next. Some of them pointed or stared, a back-seat full of kids laughed, but to most I was invisible.

A city bus pulled over a block away and an elderly lady stepped out. "Help," I shouted. "I've been stabbed. I need an ambulance."

She didn't answer, but the look on her face told me how disgusting she thought I was.

When she turned away I felt only one thing, and it wasn't panic or fear or pain. It was anger, anger that people could turn their back on a wounded man, anger at indifference, and at the fact that nothing would ever change it.

I shouted again, but I knew she wouldn't turn around.

"I'm dying. Doesn't that make one damn bit of difference to you?"

Later I found out it was an attendant at Lloyd's Rocket service station who finally spotted me from across the street and called the ambulance. Welcome to the human race.

For those who like to keep notes on the incidence of black crime, note this. If it was a black who shoved that knife in, it was also a black man who saved me.

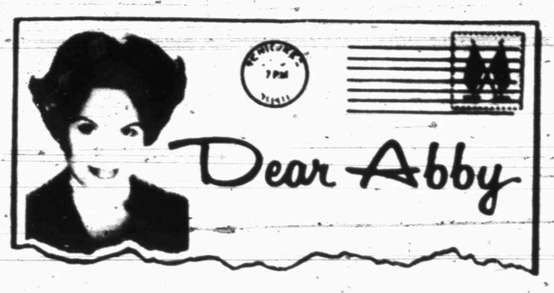

You might not think my story all that horrifying, but you weren't out there in the rain. You don't know about the surgery and the scar it left, the nights I couldn't sleep because of the pain.

I could cite you statistics on the increase of violent crime, or quote authorities on how to avoid being victimized, but you've already heard that. Besides, that's not what troubles me.

What troubles me is the man with the cocker spaniel, the woman in the window, the neighborhood that watched me crawl, the people in those cars, and the woman who turned her back on me.

This doesn't have a moral, only a question. And I want an answer.

Why did you leave me there to die?

Must She Share Mother's Day?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc

DEAR ABBY: If my feelings are childish and unjustified, please let me have it. I am dreading Mother's Day for the following reason: My only child (a daughter, now married) has always been very close to an aunt who has never married. I think it's lovely of my daughter to remember this aunt with a gift at Christmastime, but when she gives her a gift on Mother's Day with a card which says, "You've been like a mother to me," I resent it.

I once told my daughter that I was hurt to have to share that special day with someone else, and she said, "So what? I only gave her a box of candy!"

Abby, it doesn't matter what the gift was, I am her mother and her aunt is not. What do you think?

HURTING

DEAR HURTING: Although your feelings of resentment are understandable, try to empathize with one who will never know the joys of motherhood; don't begrudge her one small thrill once a year.

DEAR ABBY: First I read the letter signed, 36 AND STILL A VIRGIN, and then the one from 60 AND STILL A VIRGIN, which moves me to suggest this epitaph for both:

"Here lies the bones
Of Betty Jones
For her life held no terrors.
A virgin born
A virgin died
No hits, no runs, no errors."

CARL IN MURRYSVILLE, PA.

DEAR ABBY: We were three girls brought up in a strictly Jewish home, so we never had ham, bacon or pork in our house. Now that we are all grown up and married, none of us observes the dietary customs, but our parents still do.

My oldest sister has a beautiful home, and when she has mama and papa over, she serves them a dairy dinner, but she always puts a big pork roast on the table for everyone else.

Mama and papa have never said anything, but I know they are hurt.

I once told my sister I thought she was out of line to put pork on the table with the folks here, and she said, "We have pork in this house, and they know it, so why be a hypocrite? Besides, in MY home I'll serve whatever I like."

I still think my sister is wrong. Or am I?

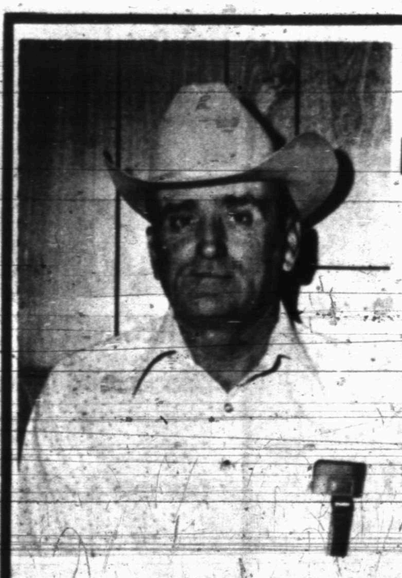

BEA IN THE BRONX

DEAR BEA: Your sister is not only wrong, she's childish, disrespectful and mean. She's trying to show contempt for the old traditions and at the same time let mama and papa know that she's her own boss now and can do as she pleases. (It's true that she can, but she doesn't have to hit them over the head with a pork roast to make her point.)

Get Passport Now For Summer Trip

Persons wishing to vacation abroad this summer are urged to apply now for their passports, said District Clerk Polly Underwood, who is in charge local arrangements.

"If a person has never had a passport and wants to travel abroad," Mrs. Underwood explained, "he will need to pick up the application forms here, get a certified copy of his birth certificate, and get two passport photos."

Once the other formalities are met, the applicant must sign the necessary papers in front of the district clerk and the papers must then be officially marked with the court seal, she continued.

The application is then sent to New Orleans. From there the application is mailed directly back to the applicant. The process takes from two to four weeks, said Mrs. Underwood.

The passport itself costs $10. An addition $3 goes to cover an execution fee. The $10 fee should be written in the form of a money order or a cashier's check, advised Mrs. Underwood.

If a person already has an old passport, but needs to update it, then a new photograph of the applicant is needed as well as the completion of a new set of application papers.

The district clerk's office is located on the fourth floor of the Scurry County Courthouse.

The Romanian city of Radauti, once the seat of a Greek bishopric, has a cathedral that was constructed in 1402 which contains the tombs of Moldavian princes.

Highest Award To Local Fina Dealer

DALLAS - Bill Bailey, Fina dealer in Snyder, has been selected to receive American Petrofina's highest dealer award. The Fina Shield Customer Award places Bailey's among the top one per cent of all Fina dealers in the United States who receive the award each year.

Bailey, who operates Bailey's Truck Stop at U.S. 84 by-pass and Huffman, receives a plaque, jacket and a cash award to recognize outstanding service to his customers and his proven ability as a service station manager.

The Snyder Fina dealer was nominated for the top award by his Fina distributor, Autry Oil Company of Snyder, and by his Fina sales representative.

Fina gasolines, diesel and motor oils are sold through some 4,500 Fina service stations in 22 states of the Southeast, Southwest and Midwest regions.

American Petrofina also engages in exploration, production, transportation, and marketing activities and operates three refineries in Texas. A wholly owned subsidiary, Cosden Oil & Chemical Company, operates petrochemical complexes in Texas, Louisiana, Illinois, California and New Jersey.

Coffee Session Set For Rhodes

Three Caches Of Liquor Uncovered

The liquor caches of three alleged bootleggers were uncovered Thursday by deputies of the Scurry County Sheriff's Office and agents of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

The raids were the culmination of the April 15 liquor buys made by an undercover agent, deputies reported this morning, deputies said that three suspects were expected to be taken into custody.

Placed in evidence were a total of about 95 bottles of beer, wine, and liquor seized in the raids.

Once arrested, the suspects are expected to be charged with possession of alcoholic beverages with intent to sell them in a dry area, a misdemeanor offense, deputies reported.

A licensed taxpaying local merchant under strict local and state control would not sell beer to a 13-year-old. A bootlegger would.

LEGAL SALES will...

...Keep local money "at home" while bringing in new shoppers to be shared by all local merchants.

...Reduce needless and dangerous driving to Big Spring, Sweetwater, Lubbock and Post.

...Increase tax revenue to the city, create new jobs and reduce the ever-mounting ad valorem tax burden.

...Allow beverages to be sold by local, licensed, taxpaying merchants under strict local and state control.

TO MAKE A GREAT CITY GREATER,
VOTE FOR "LEGAL" SALES MONDAY, MAY 8th

If you'll be out of town May 8th, vote "absentee" at the County Clerk's Office today.
Absentee voting ends Thursday.

Neighbors Help Olsons Get Ready for Carter

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - Neighbors armed with dustmops and brooms are pitching in to help Paul and Janet Olson spruce up their house for an overnight visit by President Carter.

"We're very proud and excited," Olson said Monday after the White House announced that his family would be host to the president.

The Olsons said their 5-year-old daughter, Kristen, and 3-year-old son, Ehrin, were having trouble understanding the excitement.

The president has spent similar overnight stays with families in Clinton, Mass.; Yazoo City, Miss.; Des Moines, Iowa; and Bangor, Maine. Carter's visit Thursday with the Olsons will be the first at a private home in the West.

The Olsons' three-story, butterscotch colored house has four bedrooms and a separate apartment on the top floor which is rented. Rhododendron, irises and geraniums in full purple and pink bloom line the small front yard and a tangle of green plants is visible behind the front picture window.

They live in Portland's Irvington neighborhood, considered a showcase of inner city revitalization.

"This neighborhood has had a real stigma," said Lynn Gerber, who lives across the street from the Olsons. "We had a high crime rate for a while and people would say, 'How can you live in that horrible part of town.' Now they'll say it can't be that bad if the president stays there."

Olson, 34, is manager of the energy conservation division of the Neil Kelly Co., a Portland firm which designs and remodels buildings and homes. Mrs. Olson, 33, is a former high school teacher. She is expecting a baby in August.

The Olsons' next door neighbor is Lyle Burnharm, a 72-year-old retired engineer who called himself a Texas Republican.

He said Secret Service agents "asked if they could park a mobile home in our driveway to house their agents. We said, 'Sure, I didn't vote for him, but he's my president for a few years.'"

VISITORS APPROACHING Mount Rushmore from the west are often surprised at the sudden appearance of George Washington above South Dakota Highway 244. Two million people view Gutzon Borglum's granite sculptures of Presidents Washington, Lincoln, Jefferson and Theodore Roosevelt annually. The 60-foot-tall head of Washington was the first of the four to be completed; it was dedicated on July 4, 1930.

Divorce Party Held

SURREY, British Columbia (AP) - Cathy Lenz got a divorce, then immediately held a party, complete with decorated cake and disco music.

More than 200 guests showed up. Single men among the crowd identified themselves with garter-like armbands; single women wore carnations in their hair.

Cathy, whose last name was Tomlinson, but now uses her maiden name, said her ex-husband, whom she married in 1975, would have been welcome had he decided to show up.

"It wasn't a nasty split-up, so that's why I don't think this party is a mockery on marriage or anything like that," she said. "As a matter of fact, the reason I got the divorce is so that he could get married again."

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Federal Reserve Board wants to make it harder for you to bounce a check by letting banks automatically move money from savings to checking accounts in case of overdrafts.

That also means a bank customer could keep funds in both checking and savings accounts with most of it lying in the interest bearing savings account.

The United States League of Savings Associations, whose members cannot provide checking services, promised to sue the Fed. The league said current law forbids the move.

Norman Strunk, vice president of the league, said the rule could "dry up the supply of mortgage credit, devastate the values of homes and make the purchase of a home impossible for millions of other families."

The Federal Reserve's action also was criticized by Robert McKinney, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which regulates savings and loans institutions.

"By making the commercial bank checking account even more attractive to the consuming public, the Federal Reserve's action puts greater pressure on dwindling savings flows into associations," he said.

"This tourniquet on the supply of savings translates into reduced mortgage availability at higher mortgage interest costs," he said.

But Federal Reserve attorneys said the action is legal because the banks are not paying interest on the checking accounts but are simply transferring money from one account to another.

The board may look for support for its proposal in a court decision last year in which a federal judge ruled that nationally chartered credit unions may provide interest-bearing checking accounts.

At its meeting Monday, the Federal Reserve rejected suggestions that customers lose interest when they overdraw accounts or that they be charged for each overdraft.

Federal Reserve Chairman G. William Miller said small depositors would be penalized and that it should be up to the banks to decide about the charges.

The move, which would take effect Nov. 1, technically affects the 5,700 state-chartered and national banks which are members of the federal reserve system. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which controls about 9,000 banks, will act on a similar proposal Friday.

The federal reserve's decision puts pressure on Congress to give savings and loan institutions the same privileges that banks would have.

The Senate Banking Committee has approved a bill to let both banks and thrift institutions pay interest directly on checking accounts. The system, called Negotiable Order of Withdrawal, or NOW accounts, is being tested in six New England states.

Triglycerides are fat

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I had some blood tests and was reported to have very high triglycerides. I know this has something to do with cholesterol but would you please tell me exactly what this means and what kind of diet I should be on.

DEAR READER — When you hear triglyceride think fat. Triglycerides are fat. Your body fat is chemically called triglycerides. The triglyceride test you had done is simply a measurement of the fat in your blood.

Fat and cholesterol are two different things. Fatty particles may be combined with cholesterol and even a blood protein to form fatty-cholesterol particles (lipoproteins). We think the cholesterol content or the number and size of the fatty-cholesterol particles is more important than the triglyceride measurement.

Even so, if it is high you should try to improve it. The best way is to lose excess body fat. Adequate exercise at least every other day also helps to lower the triglyceride level. So get on a diet that helps you control your weight and start exercising at least every other day. To give you a better idea of triglycerides and related measurements, I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-2, Cholesterol, Triglycerides, Blood Fats, Atherosclerosis. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please advise in regard to thoracic outlet syndrome? I have been told this is what I have but am not too certain about having my top rib removed. I am left-handed, and my left arm bothers me a lot but I am also concerned with whether or not my arm hurts as a symptom of heart trouble.

I am a 30-year-old female, the only thing I have is an ulcer. My arm seems to flare up when my ulcer does and also in cooler weather. I have wondered about nerves.

DEAR READER — The artery, vein and nerves to the arm come out of the chest (thorax) at the top of the rib cage and pass along under the clavicle (collar bone). They can be compressed by the clavicle, muscles in the neck area or even an extra rib.

The pressure on the artery, vein or nerve can cause changes in the arm and hand. Even the meaty palm prominence at the base of the thumb may atrophy.

How much of a problem it really is can only be determined by the doctor's examination and the changes that result from such a condition. The treatment, if any is needed, is to relieve the pressure. If it is a muscle it may need to be severed to release the artery or nerve that is being compressed. If it is the rib a section of it may need to be removed.

Sometimes personal habits contribute to the problem. The habit of putting the hands above the head while sleeping may obstruct the circulation too much during the night. In these cases correction of such habits may be sufficient.

It is very rare for a 30-year-old healthy female to have the type of heart disease that causes pain in the arm and I would think you can stop worrying about that. I don't think your ulcer has anything to do with your arm discomfort from the "thoracic outlet syndrome" but it is true that digestive disorders, including spasm of the esophagus, or trapped gas in the colon under the spleen can cause referred pain to the arm — not associated with heart disease.

A dollar earned is a dollar saved

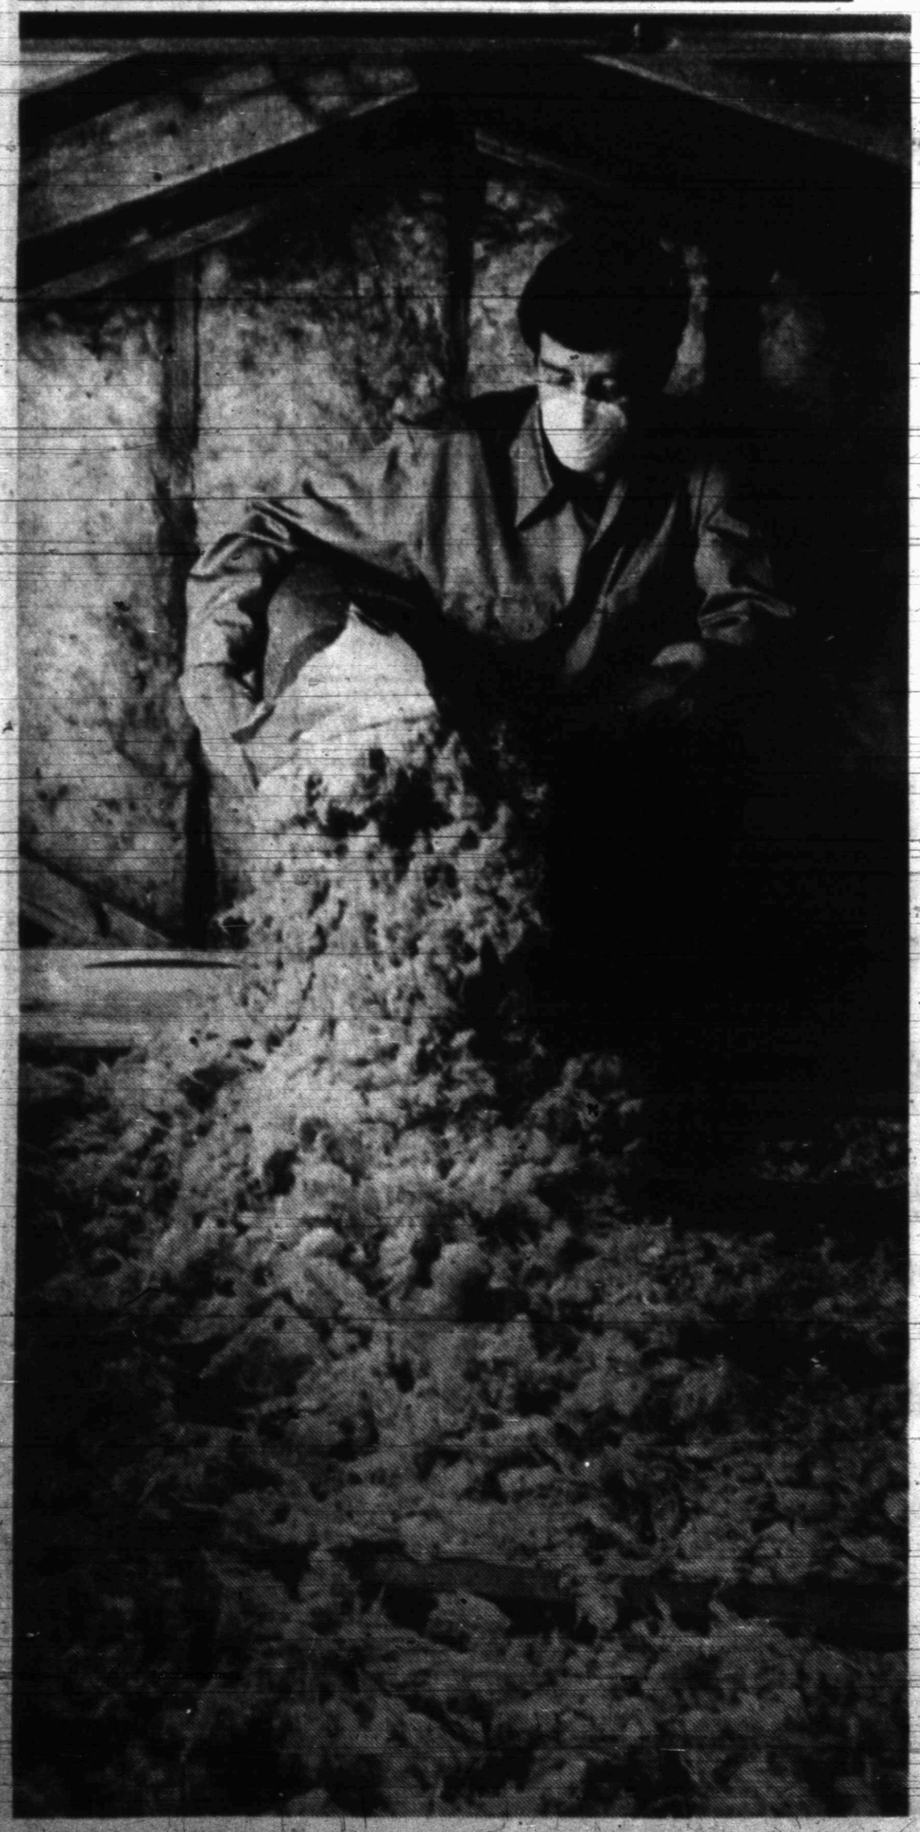

As State Treasurer, Warren G. Harding has increased earnings from the investment of state funds. These earnings represent savings to Texans by reducing the need for tax increases.

- $1.8 billion in state funds invested in interest bearing accounts in over 1,300 Texas banks
- 90.4 percent of available funds invested at the end of March—the highest monthly average in Texas history
- 24 percent increase in earnings from October through March compared to same period in previous year
- $126 million estimated interest earnings for Texas this year—highest in history of state.

Freed Spy Proof His Kind Not Forgotten

By HUBERT J. ERB
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)-Robert Glenn Thompson, key in the latest East-West spy swap, knows now it's true that his kind are not left to rot in prison.

In spy-filled Germany, intelligence agents say privately that a promise to be taken care of is part of the contract. Both sides, the agents say, try to honor the code.

In Thompson's case the catalyst was Israel's eagerness to have a young, injured pilot freed from communist Mozambique.

Thompson's freedom was demanded by the other side as the price for the return of 24-year-old Miron Marcus. Thompson has been in a U.S. prison for the last 13 years after his conviction as a Russian spy.

East Germany, of all the communist bloc countries in Eastern Europe, has perhaps the greatest influence on the regime that succeeded Portuguese rule in Mozambique. From the start, East Germany recognized and supported rebel forces there.

Enter Wolfgang Vogel, the East German attorney and master dealer in prisoners and spies.

The Israelis approached Vogel directly, asking what could be done.

According to a source, who asked not to be identified, Vogel said Mareus would be freed, but that Thompson must be part of the bargain.

The source said the American government did not object but wondered what it would get in return. It was then, the source said, that Vogel sweetened the pot with 23-year-old Alan Van Norman of Windom, Minn., who was serving a 30-month prison term in East Germany.

Van Norman was arrested last August while trying to smuggle an East German family to the West. He was released through the Berlin wall on Monday, just after Thompson, accompanied by Vogel, crossed the barrier back to obscurity in East Berlin.

Thompson had been released 24 hours earlier from the federal penitentiary in Lewisburg, Pa., where he had served 13 years of a 30-year sentence.

Mareus had been released a week before that.

Thompson, as he walked out of Lewisburg, acknowledged that he is a Soviet agent and that the name "Thompson" was part of his cover. He indicated he was born in what is now East Germany, not in Detroit as was previously believed.

As he left for East Germany, or the Russia he admits trained and employed him, the onetime U.S. Air Force clerk said he will retire.

He had the bad luck to get caught but said he accepted that risk as part of his job getting him freed, his Russian employers showed he had not been forgotten.

Vogel has been involved in this kind of swap since he helped arrange the 1962 Berlin exchange of downed American U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers. The Soviets got master spy Rudolf Abel in return.

But this latest deal was the first to span three continents and involve four countries.

HAVE EVIL SPIRITS been pursuing you recently? Perhaps you should invest in a cult piece like this one, which earlier in this century was used by priests of Nigeria's Edan Ogboni sect to ward off evil. Today, this piece is part of a collection of Nigerian artifacts being displayed for the first time in museums across the United States.

But Not Elvis Jet Tours...

Order Bars Additive Sales

DALLAS (AP) - Citing the state's deceptive trade act, lawyers from the attorney general's office successfully argued Monday for a restraining order barring sales of an auto engine additive in conjunction with church-sponsored tours of the late Elvis Presley's private jet.

State District Judge Fred Harless issued the order against Robert Dean Philpot of Superior Lubricant Co., an Addison petroleum products firm.

Philpot had signed an agreement with the First Church of God in Benton, Ill., to present a 100-day, 50-city tour of Presley's $3 million jet.

Promoters advertised that for a $300 contribution to the church's building program, a couple could tour the jet and would receive a case of the additive, with instructions on how to obtain a distributorship for the material.

The tours were to have begun Monday night in Texas Stadium, but bad weather postponed the event.

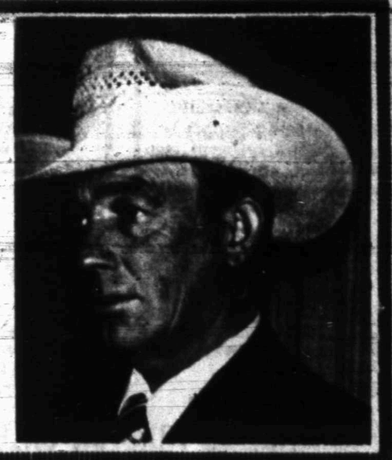

Harless' order does not prevent paid tours of the airplane.

State attorneys say the additive promotion constitutes a lottery because employees prosper by bringing more people into the company rather than by the amount of additive they sell. They also claimed consumers have been falsely told that money paid to Superior can be claimed as a charitable contribution for tax purposes.

A hearing on a permanent injunction was scheduled for Friday.

Tower Climber Is Charged

CHICAGO (AP) - A Chicago mountain climber who scaled 20 stories of the world's tallest building to protest the killing of whales has been charged with disorderly conduct and improper display of a sign.

After descending from the 21th floor, Joseph E. Healy, 25, attached a white banner with red lettering in Russian and Japanese on the front of the 110-story, steel and glass Sears Tower early Monday. He worked in 34 mph winds and near-freezing temperatures and descended safely to his arrest after four hours.

FORMER PRESIDENT RICHARD M. NIXON looked much like his pre-Watergate self recently as he raised his arm in a characteristic salute. With his memoirs and first grandchild due later this year, Nixon has more reason than usual to smile. And he finally won a round in the courts when the Supreme Court delayed access of broadcasting and record companies to portions of his White House tapes.

The banner said, in Japanese, "Japan, stop whaling" and "Do not kill the whales" in Russian. It carried the figure of a whale in red and the name of the anti-whaling organization "Green Peace." The banner stretched from about the fifth to the eighth floors and flapped in the wind until Sears maintenance workers removed it.

"My only fear was that the banner would be torn by the wind," Healy told a group of reporters as he was released from jail on $35 bail.

Authorities said the free-lance photographer began his climb before sunrise at about 4 a.m. and descended at about 8:20 a.m. before the eyes of hundreds of rush-hour train commuters coming out of Union Station.

Healy wore green jeans, a blue stocking cap and a dark coat.

Police said Healy is an experienced mountain climber and a member of the Greenpeace Foundation of San Francisco, which opposes what it says is the excessive killing of whales. They said he told them he came to love whales while he was in the Navy.

Healy scaled the building by inserting specially built T-bars into grooves that run the height of the building and are used to hold scaffolding for window washers. He then hoisted himself from one bar to the next with loops of nylon mountain climbing rope.

Bell Ad Backfires

OTTAWA (AP)-"It has backfired," a Bell Canada operator says with a chuckle of a company television advertisement.

The ad showed a Bell operator telling about the time she helped out a caller by providing advice on how to cook a chicken. It was part of an $800,000 "Bell commitment" promotional campaign that ended Saturday.

But the campaign started in early March and Bell operators say they were deluged by callers who poked fun at the ad by requesting cooking instructions.

The company should never have run the ad, one Ottawa director assistance operator said. It certainly backfired, said another. "It got to be a bit of a hassle," said a third.

Richard Martin, who coordinated the ad campaign, disagreed.

The chicken-cooking ad was not meant to be taken literally and most of the public seemed to understand that, Martin said. The company didn't keep a running tally on the number of troublesome phone calls or complaints the ad prompted, he said.

Amin Joins In Festivities

KITGUM, Uganda (AP)-President Idi Amin, sporting a blue safari suit and ascot, delighted a crowd of local tribes-men by taking up a spear and shield and joining traditional dances to the beat of drums.

At one point during the May Day celebration Monday, Amin also jumped on a bicycle pulling a sickbed on wheels and pedaled around a grassy field.

Egg Is Tribute To Dance

BARABOO, Wis. (AP) - Tex has laid an egg. And that, in a way, is a tribute to the fancy dancing of Dr. George Archibald, an ornithologist.

Tex is an 11-year-old whooping crane who was raised in the living room of Fred Stark of the San Antonio, Texas, Zoo. She did not meet another crane until after her second birthday. By then she was fonder of humans than birds.

Enter Archibald. The dancing he does is a mating dance, weird and awkward steps which he says help bring out the maternal urges of the whooping crane, an endangered species.

The International Crane Foundation here, which cares for and studies dozens of rare birds in an effort to prevent their extinction, received recent notoriety for Archibald's mating dance with Tex.

Tex was impregnated by artificial insemination. Sperm was obtained from Tony and Angus, two male whooping cranes on loan from the Audubon Zoo in New Orleans.

"Archibald was with the crane during her egg laying ordeal," foundation spokesman Norris Klesman said.

Tex has laid eggs before, but all were infertile. Archibald said he believes the latest egg is fertile, but we won't be sure until he performs tests in a couple of weeks.

If the results are positive, the chick will hatch around Memorial Day weekend, he said. Archibald said there are only an estimated 105 whooping cranes in the world.

"Archibald and Tex continue to dance several times daily in an attempt to secure additional eggs, Klesman said.

Nixon Plans Publishing Party May 21

NEW YORK (AP)-Former President Richard Nixon, who until recently kept himself secluded in California, is planning a May 21 publishing party at his San Clemente estate.

The guests will include the editor of Nixon's memoirs, Robert Markel of Grosset & Dunlap; publisher Harold Roth, and two executives of Warner Books.

Warner paid Nixon a reported $2 million for rights to "RN: The Memoirs of Richard Nixon." The $19.95 book will be published May 15.

Nixon also has invited former U.S. prisoners of war to his home May 27 during the commemoration in nearby Los Angeles of their release from North Vietnam five years ago.

I&R Meter: Quality Electricians, Major Brand Motors

The Electrical Shop of I&R Meter Service, Inc. is the stocking distributor for five major motor brands, Toshiba, Lewis-Allis, Baldor, Allis-Chalmers and Marathon. I&R's electrical crews and pump and meter repair crews are available 24 hours a day.

I&R also features Seimens-Allis pump panels, all of which come with single phase, unbalanced local protection at no additional cost to the customer. A full line of Woods belts and sheaves are now in stock as are 950 electric motors along with stablizers, belts and sheaves.

The I&R Electrical Shop has also recently added two electricians to its staff of professionals who are well trained and experienced in their field.

A primary Allis-Chalmers product sold and serviced at I&R is the Marque 21 thermal overload relays, known as RQ 21. These relays are compact in design and in addition to offering a high degree of quality, they are space savers. Features of the RQ 21 from Allis-Chalmers include its capability to handle efficient motor loads without requiring a change in heaters and positive protection against overheating in the event of overload or unbalanced load conditions such as single phasing.

The availability of the RQ 21 is another example of why I&R Meter Service Inc. has earned the respect of the oil and gas industry. The Electrical shop is just one part of I&R's capability to serve this vital industry. Also ranked second to none are the Machine Shop where many speciality items for the oilfield are produced, the vessel fabrication shop where unfired pressure vessels are constructed in accordance with the ASME code, the Sndyer sales and service department, the Odessa sales store and a wide selection of motor controls.

I&R was organized in 1967 by Irvin Townsend and Ray Durham as a meter and service shop operating in a small rented building on the Clairemont Highway with an employment of three.

Don Wolf, president, said that the company's sales have multiplied 32 times during the past decade and predicted continued growth over the next ten years. Wolf said, "Behind all I&R products and services stands a well equipped and well staffed machine shop, fabrication shop, electrical shop, with related, engineering, accounting and sales personnel to guarantee satisfaction for our valued customers."

In addition to Wolf, the other officers of I&R Meter Service Inc. are Don Osborn, vice president and general manger, Rod Waller, vice president, Greg Williams, regional manager, Don Pummill, Odessa Sales Manager and Alice Daniels, secretary-treasurer.

Divorce Profitable For Both Attorneys, Do-It-Yourselfers

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Divorce, once a social stigma and a word only whispered in polite society, has become a way of life during recent years and profitable for both attorneys and do-it-yourself organizations.

As more and more states approve uncontested divorce laws, attorneys and those firms offering cheap, non-legal advice have become financial and legal enemies.

The Divorce Services of Texas, a segment of an organization that has extensive operations in California, Colorado, Florida, and Texas, is being challenged by the State Bar of Texas. The Bar has been granted a temporary injunction in state district court stopping the offer of a do-it-yourself divorce for $95.

Van Royce Vibber, president of the organization, said the State Bar is a "monopoly and they are acting like one. The public knows the primary function of the Bar is to protect the astronomically high income of lawyers. The Bar Association is nothing more than a high-priced, feather-bedding union."

John Graml, who represented the Bar Association in the case, told The Associated Press, "the divorce services, which advertise in the news media, are not hurting the lawyers of Texas. It is simply a fact that the public is being had. This service answers to nobody. It is like buying a car for $50 and the damn thing doesn't run, It isn't worth anything."

Graml said some of the work on the divorce cases "are so sloppy that the judges are getting irritated. There are divorces prepared by this service being rejected. There are people who don't know whether they are really divorced or not."

James Greenwood, a prominent Houston attorney, told The AP, "The service is giving legal advice without a license. I'm not against them, but it is like writing your own will or preparing your own income tax.

"You can make a mistake without an expert there to help you and you can be in trouble," he said.

Vibber answered, "Look at it this way. We are not going to charge someone $300 to $350 just to hold their hands. We don't offer legal help, but in an uncontested divorce, our work is guaranteed. We don't deny people have the right to an attorney, but we don't think the Bar Association should deny the public their right to low-cost divorces."

Vibber said the State Bar of Texas was attempting to put him in jail for his divorce service activities and, "I find it incredible that I could be put in jail for offering low-cost divorces, while the white-collar corporate crime is bilking the people of Texas out of hundreds of millions of dollars every year.

"The justice system is royally screwed up, and the State Bar is one of the many contributing factors," he said.

Robert E. Gardner, a young Houston attorney who is still building his practice, said, "The divorce services are a danger to those people who think they are getting something for a cut-rate price. They are not getting the legal service they need. They are not being told about the division of property. All they are getting is a typing service.

"And when those divorce services say attorneys charge $350 for an uncontested divorce, they are not telling the truth. We know what our time is worth, but also consider what a person can pay."

Vibber, in the telephone interview from his office in Santa Monica, Calif., said, "The Bar's main concern is that we are cutting into their fat incomes. They are scared because they don't want to compete with our low prices."

Self Service Gas Would Save States

TRENTON, N.J. (AP)-- State Consumer Affairs Director Adam Levin says New Jersey motorists could save between $25 and $40 a year if they were allowed to pump their gasoline at service stations.

Levin told the Senate Law and Public Safety Committee that New Jersey and Oregon are the only two states in the nation that still prohibit self-service gasoline stations.

Gov. Briscoe 'Absolutely' Sure Of Victory Saturday

By The Associated Press

After shaking at least a thousand hands on the sidewalks of downtown Dallas, Gov. Dolph Briscoe says he "absolutely" will win Saturday's Democratic primary against Attorney General John Hill and former Gov. Preston Smith.

"I've never been more encouraged about carrying Dallas County," Briscoe told those who walked with him Monday.

Hill also was in Dallas Monday. He again displayed a new rubber stamp, with "VETO" in four-inch-tall letters to indicate what he would do with any bill to create a state income tax for Texas.

Hill accused Briscoe of stooping low in the governor's newspaper advertisements portraying a hangmans noose and saying Hill had promised voters so much it would take a state income tax to finance them.

Briscoe said he would announce figures today showing that Hill's promises would lead Texas to a state income tax, regardless of Hill's veto pledge.

"I'm not going to promise more than can be done," Briscoe said.

Briscoe began his day with a breakfast attended by 150 key supporters in the plush 2001 Club in Dallas.

"I think we've got the opponent on the run, on the defensive, there's no question, and I intend to keep him there," Briscoe said.

Campaign finance statements filed Monday in the Secretary of State's office showed Briscoe is outspending Hill by a 2-to-1 and is borrowing heavily to finance his campaign.

Briscoe has spent $2.4 million, including $300,000 for a media blitz the last few weeks of the campaign. Briscoe reported $873,500 in loans and $1.2 million in contributions.

Hill reported $1.4 million in contributions and $1.3 million in expenditures. Hill spent $184,778 for media expenses.

Dallas oilman Bill Clements has outspend his rival, former state GOP chairman Ray Hutchison, by a 10-to-1 ratio in the campaign for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. Clements has spent $1.7 million compared to $161,105 for Hutchison.

Clements has raised $304,885 in contributions compared to $138,616 for Hutchinson.

Briscoe's major contributions were $1,000 from Mike G. Rutherford of Houston, $2,500 from the Texas Good Government Fund of Houston, $1,000 from the Political Action Committee of Enserch employes, $1,400 from the Texas Restaurant Association, $1,000 from Texas hospital, $5,000 from Certified Accounts, $1,000 from Lone Star Steel employes, $5,000 from Texas Nursing Homes, $2,000 from Lawyers for Briscoe, and $1,000 from the wife of Texas cafeteria magnate Roy K. Furr of Lubbock.

Hill received $10,000 from Austin geologist Hiram Moore, $10,000 from Houston investor Morton Cohn, $15,000 from an Austin-based group known as the 200 Women, 5,000 from Victoria furniture store chain owner David Lack, $3,500 from Charles Whynot, $2,000 from former Austin mayor Roy Butler.

Endangered Species May Lose Guarantee

WASHINGTON (AP)—Five years ago, Congress approved legislation guaranteeing protection to endangered species threatened by construction of dams and other federal projects.

But now a Senate natural resources subcommittee, to the concern of environmental groups, is considering whether to take back the guarantee.

The panel was to vote today on a proposal to give a new government board authority under certain circumstances to allow a project to be completed if its benefits "clearly outweigh" the value of a threatened species.

Subcommittee approval was considered likely, despite unanimous opposition from environmental organizations, who promise to fight the change.

"There's no reason to believe we can't win it on the floor of the Senate said Martha Pope of the National Wildlife Federation.

The change was introduced by the subcommittee chairman, Sen. John Culber, D-Iowa, and three of the panel's five other members.

The measure is expected to face a vote in the full Environment and Public Works committee on Friday. A House committee intends to hold hearings on a similar bill later this year.

The impetus for a change came in part from the most widely publicized case arising from the 1973 law, one involving the Tellico Dam, a $119 million Tennessee Valley Authority project on the Little Tennessee River.

A federal appeals court has ordered construction stopped on the project because of evidence that its completion poses a threat to the habitat of the snail darter, a small fish.

The U.S. Supreme Court heard arguments in the case last month.

Under current law, federal agencies must make sure their actions have no adverse effect on endangered species or their critical habitat. If a problem arises, the agency is required to begin a formal consultation process with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

But under the law, so-called "irreconciliable" conflicts are to be resolved on the side of the endangered species.

Snyderite Gets Award In Agronomy

Sid Perry of Snyder was recognized as the highest ranking junior student in the agronomy department of Texas Tech University at the annual awards day on April 28.

He was among 23 students at Tech and Lubbock Christian College receiving scholarships from the Lubbock chapter of the Achievement Rewards for College Scientists Foundation, Inc., recently. An aggregate of $11,500 was distributed to the students this year.

Perry had previously received the Tech Agronomy Faculty Award for highest achievement in the sophomore class and the Faculty Award for highest achievement in the department. He plans to attend graduate school at Tech after earning his bachelor's degree, studying plant breeding and genetics. He hopes to later earn a Ph.D and ultimately settle in West Texas to work for a seed company or the state or federal government.

Perry received an academic scholarship to Western Texas College upon graduation from Snyder High School and attended WTC in his freshman year. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Perry, and assists his father on the family farm on weekends. His wife, Paula, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Falls. She is a junior student in the Tech school of education.

Spring Fling Set At WTC

Western Texas College students will have a Spring Fling in Towle Memorial Park on Thursday as the college year draws to a close.

Students are invited to participate in sports ranging from tennis to Frisbee throwing starting at 2:30 p.m. Supper for dorm students will be barbecue and all the trimmings served in the pavilion starting 5 p.m. Students who do not live in the dorm are invited to buy tickets for the meal and join the group. Students who play guitars or other instruments are asked to bring them and enjoy a musical get-together as the last activity of the day.

Graduation at WTC is set for 8 p.m. on May 11.

Fire Damages Vehicle Motor

Extensive damage was reported to the motor of a Suburban vehicle in a fire that occurred west of the city Monday afternoon.

The Suburban, a passenger-type vehicle, was owned by the Borden County School District, according to reports filed by firefighters. The reports do not list any injuries.

The fire took place about 11 miles west of Snyder Highway 180 and was reported about 4:08 p.m.

Two grass fires were also doused Monday.

The first report was made at 3:45 p.m. and told firefighters of a fire about four miles east of Hermleigh.

The second report was made at 9:10 p.m. and alerted firefighters of a fire at the intersection of 30th St. and Houston Ave.

Pyron Cemetery Assn. To Meet

Pyron Cemetery Association will hold its semi-annual meeting at 10 a.m. Friday, May 5 at the Pyron Cemetery. Lunch will be served. All interested persons are urged to attend.

Glass Is Broken

In a criminal mischief complaint reported to police yesterday, J.H. Martin told officers that two glass panes at his 1408 Ave. K. residence had been shot out with a pellet gun.

Damage in the incident was set at $80 in police reports.

Mrs. Rambin Heads TSTA Area Drive

A Snyder educator, LaNelle Rambin, will have a key role in the 1978-79 membership campaign of the Texas State Teachers Association.

Mrs. Rambin, of 4001 Irving, is the membership chairperson for the coming year in TSTA District XIV, which covers 12 West Texas counties.

She is a teacher at East Elementary School in the Snyder Independent School District.

Mrs. Rambin has been invited to participate as a leader in the third annual TSTA membership training conference May 12-13 at the Baker Hotel in Dallas.

The TSTA state membership committee is composed of Mrs. Rambin and the district chairpersons from 19 other districts in Texas. This committee will meet at 3 p.m. Thursday, May 11, in Dallas to plan the statewide membership drive.

Their goal is to secure 142,850 members for TSTA in 1978-79. This would be an increase over the present statewide membership of nearly 138,000.

The conference for an expected 200 district and local membership chairpersons and faculty representative coordinators will begin with registration at 11 a.m. May 12 in the Dallas Baker Hotel.

Customers Write Own Check

SANGER (AP)-The food is good, the entertainment is stimulating and the prices can't be beat. On top of that, an evening at The Fatted Calf is designed to sooth the soul.

Dr. Ron Thomas, who is both a doctor and a nondenominational minister, his wife, mother-in-law and a host of volunteers serve the Lord while they serve fancy Texas-size steaks to customers who write their own checks.

The left side of the restaurant's menu reads:

"We are here to serve you. However, there is no price on our service. So when you have finished your meal, put whatever you desire in the jar on your table. And if you cannot pay, please take what you need."

Some patrons haven't paid a thing and some have taken money from the jar, says Thomas' mother-in-law, Wanda Ragsdale.

"But generally, people pay what is fair. In fact, often patrons pay more than their share," she said. "We've found that people love to be trusted. So far, we've had no reason not to show trust."

Mrs. Ragsdale says most of the customers know what to expect when they walk through the doors of The Fatted Calf, but "it's a joy to see the faces of tourists who just happen in and find out they are in what we consider our house of worship."

And what kind of religious faith is it that offers 12-ounce sirloin strips for nothing?

"We're simply believers," Mrs. Ragsdale says. "We believe Christ is the son of God and that he died for our sins. This is our way of demonstrating our faith that the Lord will take care of us."

There is no preaching during a meal at The Fatted Calf-located in Sanger, just north of the Dallas-Fort Worth area - but all of the songs are religious in nature.

Mrs. Ragsdale says her family eventually hopes to establish a ranch for wayward boys on land that adjoins the restaurant.

Wayne Claims Welcome Helped

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP)-Actor John Wayne says he feels he is a month ahead of his recovery schedule because of the warm welcome he has received while recuperating at home from open-heart surgery.

Wayne, 70, was relaxing on his bay-front patio when a flotilla of Newport-Balboa area yachtsmen sailed by Sunday to wish him well.

"The medical profession tells me that when they saw you down the middle, carve out new things for your heart, that it takes about three months to get feeling well again," Wayne said Monday in a prepared statement. "Well' is a wonderful word, and I think your welcome put me a month closer to it. Thank you."

NO, THIS ISN'T an old snapshot of grandma and grandpa enjoying the Coney Island surf during their long-ago honeymoon. These are two members of a troupe of young singers and dancers who present a nostalgic musical tribute to New York at Ohio's Kings Island amusement park.

Winter Visitors To Valley Are Fickle

By KEN HERMAN
Associated press Writer

EDINBURG (AP)-He's 65 and she's a few months younger. They came to the Rio Grande Valley from Iowa in November and headed back north in April.

The retired couple owns a travel trailer and spent $106 a week in the valley. They enjoyed their winter stay and plan a return visit next year. They are, according to a Pan American University study, the quintessential Winter Texans.

"The main use of the data is for the description of the winter visitor. It tells us something about where to direct promotional efforts," said Dr. Carl H. Rush Jr., director of Pan Am's Bureau of Business and Economic Research.

The survey, compiled by distributing forms at area trailer parks, does not represent questioning of a random sample. Nevertheless, several interesting aspects of the Winter Texan developed.

For one thing, they are fickle.

When asked what they liked most about the valley, 57.8 percent said the weather was the best feature.

When asked what they didn't like about the valley, the weather was again the most popular answer-42.5 percent said it was the worst thing about the region.

"The survey was conducted during some of the worst weather of the 1977-78 season and newcomers responded to this much more frequently than longtimers who are apparently more tolerant of what they have learned to be temporary weather conditions," the introduction to the survey states.

The survey also proved what every valley resident ever caught in Winter Texan traffic already knew - the visitors come from just about everywhere.

Included among the 2,842 persons responding were representatives from 46 states only Alaska, Hawaii, Arizona and Rhode Island were not represented and six Canadian provinces.

Iowa was the champion provider of Winter Texans with 12.5 percent of those responding. Minnesota was half a percentage point behind. Almost 4 percent of the sample group was from elsewhere in Texas. The "most liked" category includes varying answers with "friendly people" second to the weather. In the "liked least" category, "stores raise prices" was second to the weather. A small group of the visitors nine percent complained about litter in the border area.

And 5.7 percent complained about the language barrier. They don't like it when local folks speak Spanish in front of them.

"Some part of this is undoubtedly the paranoia of the elderly," the survey introduction says.

Other assorted data collected potray a picture of hapy senior citizens enjoying their visits. More than 83 percent said they'll be back next year, and more than 75 percent said the valley is the best place or better than most places they've visited.

There was, however, one statistic that might upset the Pan Am people who conducted the study.

"Relatively few winter visitors have visited Pan American University for any reason," the introduction states.

And the numbers show that about half of those who did visit the campus came to eat in the cafeteria.

Firm May Try To Block Royalties

The firm, Berney & Cousins, currently represents Debra Jenkins.
