Typewriter could link suspect to manifesto

■ In third day of searching Theodore Kaczynski's cabin, agents turn up manual typewriter that appears to be one Unabomber used to type letters.

Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. — A manual typewriter found in Theodore J. Kaczynski's shack appears to be the one the Unabomber used to type his letters and his grand manifesto about the evils of technology, a federal official said Friday.

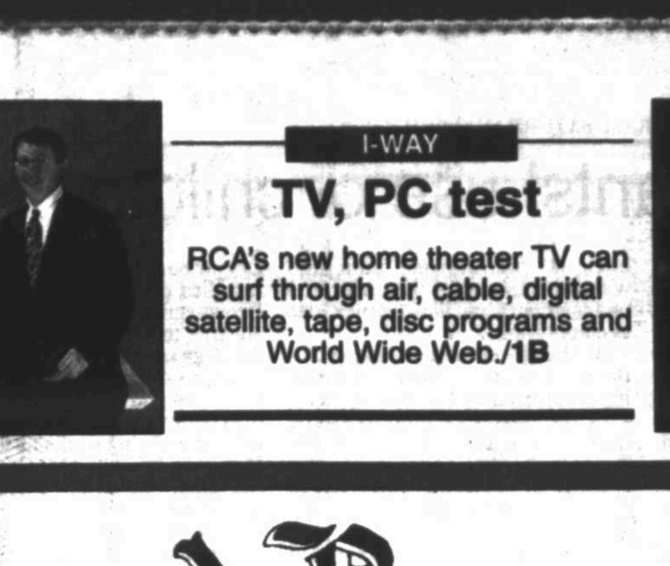

That apparent link between Kaczynski and the mastermind of the 18-year bombing spree came as federal agents spent a third day searching the tiny cabin and an outbuilding in the wilderness near Lincoln.

Kaczynski, 53, was charged Thursday with possessing bomb components found in his cabin. The former Berkeley math professor was held without bail in a Helena jail under a suicide watch and decided Friday he did not want a preliminary hearing or a bail hearing.

Michael Donahoe, Kaczynski's court-appointed lawyer, said his client will wait for the federal grand jury to convene April 17 and decide whether to indict him.

The charge filed Thursday made no mention of

A.M. BRIEFING

Spring forward

Daylight-saving time begins; remember to set your clock forward one hour Sunday morning.

Spring forward

WASHINGTON — America will postpone sunset starting Sunday. Daylight-saving time is returning, bringing that extra hour of light in the evening to spend on outdoor projects, enjoy sports and barbecues or just fritter idly away. The actual moment of change occurs at 2 a.m. Sunday for most of the nation.

Looking for cause

DUBROVNIK, Croatia — NATO helicopters carried the last body bags off a craggy hillside Friday where Commerce Secretary Ron Brown and 34 others died in a plane crash. Investigators focused their search for a cause on the Dubrovnik airport's landing guidance system. The Stars and Stripes newspaper reported in today's editions that the commander of the plane's squadron recently raised questions about flying that type of aircraft in foul weather in the former Yugoslavia, where navigational guidance equipment sometimes is missing.

Don't tell

RICHMOND, Va. — The first federal appeals court to rule on the Clinton administration's "don't ask, don't tell" policy upheld the measure Friday, saying openly gay service members can be banned from the military. The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said it's the job of elected leaders, not the judiciary, to set military policy. The court ruled 9-4 against former Lt. Paul Thomasson, who was discharged from the Navy last June after giving a letter to his commander stating, "I am gay."

Much-needed moisture surprises basin in form of record snowfall

DALLAS (AP) — Easter weekend may be a harbinger of spring, but the weather around much of Texas on Friday was more winter-like with record snows in Abilene and Midland as sleet and hail fell elsewhere.

Hazardous driving conditions were reported in 29 counties in northwest Texas.

In Midland, police were running from one auto accident to another Friday morning. The Texas Department of Public Safety reported more than 20 accidents because of weather conditions. The Midland Police Department reported nine. None had serious injuries.

Afternoon brought a brief respite from more expected accidents when wet roads turned icy. Forecasters said wind chills would drop Friday night temperatures into the single digits.

"I can't even tell how busy it's been today. I've been answering 300 phone calls an hour," said Jim Nance, DPS police communications operator.

No major delays or cancellations of flights were reported at Midland International Airport. However, airport officials were cautioning travelers to arrive an hour early and check with their airlines for flight information.

By 5 p.m., 8.2 inches of snow had fallen in Abilene, smashing the city's 24-hour snowfall record of 2.9 inches set in 1938.

In Nolan County, 18 inches of snow was reported with more expected, forecasters said the total could reach 2 feet.

Parents choose jail over testifying against their son, 25, in rape case

WILLISTON, Vt. (AP) — Arthur and Geneva Yandow have gone to jail in hopes of keeping their son out of one.

The couple refuse to testify at a prosecutor's inquest in a rape case in which the suspect is their 25-year-old son.

The Yandows claim "parent-child privilege" gives them the legal and moral authority to refuse. So far, the courts and the couple's church disagree.

"My clients are absolutely adamant that they will not testify," lawyer Paul Volk said Wednesday. "They believe morally and based on their religious values they will not destroy their family and betray their son."

Craig Yandow, who lives with his parents and works in his father's construction business, has not been charged in the Feb. 14 attack, in which a woman was raped, beaten and left in the cold, unconscious and half-naked.

A jacket identical to one the younger Yandow owns — blue, with "Saint John's Bay" on the back — was found at the scene. Also, Yandow had injuries "consistent

Some blame INS policy for immigrants' use of children to cross border

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Some illegal immigrants have borrowed or rented children as passports into the country to take advantage of a federal policy against incarcerating families caught crossing the border, officials said.

"It was a scam, that's what it amounted to," said Gus Garcia, assistant chief of the U.S. Border Patrol's McAllen sector.

One local immigration official contends the policy should be changed to deter what could become a growing trend.

However, a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Washington — while acknowledging the policy has been used to exploit children — said its purpose is humanitarian.

"We are very sensitive to the issues of incarceration of families, especially mothers and their children," said Russ Bergeron. "It is an issue of humane consideration."

The policy, in effect for more than a decade, allows illegal immigrants traveling with a minor son or daughter to be released rather than held over at an INS detention facility, Bergeron said.

The family provides an address and telephone number where it can be reached, then is released with the understanding that it will be notified of a court hearing to be held at its final destination. But many provide false information, Bergeron said.

"Frequently, individuals just abscond," he said. "When they do, the court then would issue a deportation order and, if they're ever encountered again, they would be deported."

There are exceptions to the release policy, such as if one parent has an outstanding warrant.

Bergeron said the policy is in effect because INS feels it is inappropriate to keep families, particularly juveniles and their mothers, at a detention compound.

The facilities are much like prisons, surrounded by barbed-wire fences and patrolled by guards. Detainees wear bright orange uniforms and sleep on metal frame beds in dormitories, men and women separated. Immigrants charged with various crimes also are held there.

But Bergeron acknowledged that the same policy aimed at protecting children may be hurting them.

In the past five months, some immigrants crossing the South Texas border have admitted to borrowing or renting children to bypass detention, INS and Border Patrol agents said.

Agents noticed the problem in December, when the number of families crossing the border into Brownsville skyrocketed to 88 in one month's time, Garcia said. The average usually is about 10 families, he said.

"When you start releasing families, word gets out that all you've got to do is bring someone with you, a juvenile or child, to get released," he said. "People realized that we were not doing anything with them."

In response, INS in late December began detaining families at its holding facility northwest of Brownsville. But the old policy went back into effect two weeks ago when family crossings ground to a halt after word got out that families were being held.

During the temporary change, about 100 children, ranging in age from a few months to 17 years old, were held at the detention center, said Roel Delgado, who oversees the facility. Most were from Central America.

Victims' advocates question castration effectiveness

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Child molester Larry Don McQuay may undergo castration at a state medical school in San Antonio, but victims' advocates Friday questioned the surgery's usefulness in preventing future sex assaults.

Once McQuay is released from prison, likely in San Antonio, close supervision, therapy and keeping him away from children are better ways to prevent him from attacking again, the advocates said.

"We don't feel that castration is a solution. There are no studies that prove castration might be effective, and it concerns me that we might be lulled into a false sense of security," said Ginger Eways, executive director of the Austin Rape Crisis Center.

Ron Aaron, executive director of the Rape Crisis Center in San Antonio, also said castration is not a cure for McQuay, though he is "certainly willing to let that happen" if McQuay chooses castration.

McQuay repeatedly has sought castration, saying it would help him avoid repeating his past crimes.

Texas Comptroller John Sharp ruled Friday the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio may use public funds to perform the elective surgery on McQuay, provided the operation "would contribute to training or research efforts." Sharp also said the school can accept donations to pay for the surgery.

Dr. John P. Howe III, president of the medical school, requested the ruling. UT Health Science Center spokeswoman Suzanne DuBeau said Friday afternoon she didn't know of any gift offers or surgery scheduled for McQuay.

A former school bus driver who claims to have molested children 240 times, McQuay is awaiting his mandatory release from the Skyview psychiatric prison unit near Rusk. He was convicted in San Antonio of assaulting a boy in 1989.

The Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles is formulating the terms of the 32-year-old molester's mandatory release. The board has schedule an announcement in Austin Monday, the day McQuay is expected to leave prison.

State parole chairman Victor Rodriguez said McQuay likely will be assigned to a San Antonio transition facility.

On Thursday, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales ruled the state may allow McQuay to be castrated if McQuay requests it.

Man wins $9 million verdict against five employees of IRS

HOUSTON (AP) — Each year, as April 15th draws near, the Internal Revenue Service floods the nation's media outlets with press releases, ballyhooing the doomed fates of those tax-owing scofflaws finally nabbed by the agency.

The IRS calls it "enforcement publicity."

But on Friday, the agency was tight-lipped after a federal jury in Houston found five IRS agents should pay former insurance executive E.E. "Johnny" Johnson $9 million for publicizing his 1981 plea bargain on tax evasion.

But Johnson can, and after 20 years, he's delighted even if he doesn't see a dime.

"I don't want anyone else to go through what I went through," said Johnson, now 74 and living in Springfield, Mo.

In 1981, Johnson earned $200,000-a-year as the No. 2 man for American National Insurance Co. in Galveston.

An IRS audit of his 1974 and 1975 tax returns found Johnson took too many businesses deductions that reduced his taxes by $3,500. The IRS wouldn't accept the deductions and after arguing back and forth, a criminal investigation began, Johnson said.

Finally, Johnson agreed to plead guilty on one felony count of tax evasion with one condition: that his case not be made public.

Midlander gets 5 years for his role in sexual assault

From Staff Reports

A Midland man will be going to prison for five years for his part in the May 1993 sexual assault of a 12-year-old girl.

A jury in the 238th District Court deliberated for several hours Thursday before handing down the sentence.

Reginald Omar Anders was 23 at the time of the assault, in which a 12-year-old was given alcohol.

Another man, Lit Anthoney Adams, was convicted last year of aggravated sexual assault after having sex with the girl. Adams was sentenced to 15 years in prison for the offense.

After a few days of testimony, the jury acquitted Anders of aggravated sexual assault, since there was room for reasonable doubt that Anders ever actually had intercourse with the girl, said court-appointed defense attorney John Cook.

Anders was found guilty, however, of the lesser offense of attempted aggravated sexual assault — a second-degree felony, said Assistant District Attorney Teresa Clingman.

The jury deliberated into the evening Thursday before delivering the five-year sentence.

It appeared that the defendant might receive a probated sentence when the jury asked Judge John Hyde a question concerning probation terms.

"I was pleasantly surprised," Ms. Clingman said about the eventual five-year prison sentence.

WEATHER WATCH

RECORD: Slight chance of more snow

Staff Report

(From 1A)

Police reported numerous accidents in and around the city.

"It's a mess," a police dispatcher said.

Two inches of snow had accumulated in Midland by late Friday morning, setting a record. The only previous April snows on record in Midland were in 1939 and 1983, when less than an inch fell.

The average snowfall for Midland is 4.4 inches a year. So far three inches has fallen, according to the National Weather Service.

Much needed precipitation fell across much of Texas.

Fueled by an upper-level low, rain and golfball-sized hail pelted Hill and Navarro counties and marble-sized hail six inches deep was reported in McLennan County, near Leroy. No damage was reported.

Numerous other reports of pea- to marble-sized hail were scattered over the central and north central Texas early Friday morning.

Snowfall accumulations Friday morning across the Rolling Plains ranged from a half-inch to nearly 3 inches. Snow mixed with rain and sleet was continuing Friday afternoon.

Heavier accumulations were reported along Interstate 20 between Big Spring and Eastland.

Colorado City authorities reported trucks jackknifed and several cars in ditches due to icy conditions across Mitchell County.

The Texas Department of Public Safety reported several traffic accidents along I-20 and U.S. 84.

In Nolan County, I-20 eastbound was closed Friday afternoon because of ice. Traffic was being diverted back into Sweetwater.

One driver who got through said it took her half an hour to drive half a mile, Nance said.

Snowfall amounts up to 4 inches were reported in the foothills of the Guadalupe Mountains. Accumulations of 4 to 8 inches were expected by Friday evening.

Heavy snow combined with strong winds of 30 to 40 mph through the mountain passes was expected to make driving hazardous, with visibility near zero.

A winter weather advisory was in effect for southern portions of the South Plains, the southern and western portions of the Permian Basin and much of the Concho Valley.

A heavy snow warning was in effect through Friday afternoon for the northern Permian Basin and western portions of the Rolling Plains.

A snow advisory was in effect for the Davis Mountains northward to the Guadalupes.

In the Coastal Plain, the Austin County sheriff's office reported golfball-size hail just north of Sealy about 3 p.m. Near Galveston, thunderstorms posed a variety of threats to boaters.

Rain and cold disrupted sports schedules over much of the state.

In Midland, the season opener of the Midland Angles was postponed, again, until today.

Schools were closed because of because of Good Friday. They also will be closed Monday because no snow days needed to be made up — ironic, for children who spent the day making Easter snow bunnies.

All sprint and discus finals scheduled for Friday evening at the Texas Relays in Austin were been postponed until today.

In Arlington, the game between the New York Yankees and Texas Rangers was postponed. The University of Texas at Arlington moved Friday's tennis match with Northwestern State University to Saturday. The school also postponed a Friday baseball game with Southwest Texas State.

In Fort Worth, a Baylor-Texas Christian baseball game was washed out.

Today's forecast calls for a 20 percent chance of snow becoming partly cloudy in the afternoon with a high in the mid-50s. Variable winds will be at 5-15 mph, according to the NWS.

Tonight's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a low in the mid-30s.

Sunday is expected to be mostly sunny with a high near 70.

The high for Friday was 43, compared to the record high for that date of 92, set in 1970. Friday's low was 32. The record low is 28, set in 1959.

NATION

Showers swept across Texas and Louisiana on Friday, dropping more than an inch in some areas. It also rained in the Northeast.

Elsewhere, showers dampened parts of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Massachusetts. Flurries fell in sections of New England.

Rain changed to snow in northwestern Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio. It was cloudy and windy in the Rockies.

An area of low pressure over the Southwest produced windy weather from New Mexico to southern California.

Clouds and a cold front along the mid-Atlantic coast was expected to bring lower temperatures, with highs expected to reach the 50s in most of the Southeast.

The midday high for the lower 48 states was 85 at Miami. The low was 1 below zero shared by Marquette, Minn., and Bismarck, N.D.

(From 1A)

attacks by the Unabomber, who has killed three people and injured 23 in nine states; the charge is intended simply to keep Kaczynski in custody while investigators build their case.

Kaczynski could get the death penalty if convicted under federal law of sending a mail bomb that kills.

Two manual typewriters were taken from the cabin and were being analyzed at FBI headquarters in Washington, but "it looks like the manifesto and the letters from the Unabomber were typed on" one of them, according to the official in Washington, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "We'll know for sure after the detailed lab analysis."

The Unabomber's 35,000-word manifesto and letters to newspapers "were all typed on the same machine," the official said. "We believe he did that intentionally as a way for us to know the communications were authentic."

Experts can trace a document to a specific typewriter by studying minute variations in the positioning and shapes of letters, which change over time as typewriters wear.

The Unabomber's treatise on the inhumanity of industrial society was published last year by The New York Times and The Washington Post in the Post. The Unabomber promised to stop trying to kill if the treatise was published. No bombings have occurred since.

Kaczynski was taken into custody Wednesday as federal agents searched his cabin 50 miles northwest of Helena. They staked out the cabin for several weeks after Kaczynski's mother and brother pointed authorities to him when they found old writings they believed were similar to the Unabomber's manifesto.

A federal agent speaking on condition of anonymity said the search of the hand-built 10-by-12-foot cabin was going slowly for fear of booby traps.

Federal agents already have found a bomb workshop in the cabin, including a partially assembled pipe bomb, chemicals and 10 three-ring notebooks filled with meticulous notes and sketches of explosives and electrical circuitry.

In jail, Kaczynski is watched constantly in his cell by a deputy looking through a large window, Sheriff Chuck O'Reilly said. O'Reilly said a suicide watch is normal in high-profile cases, and Kaczynski has shown no suicidal tendencies.

Kaczynski has been cooperative with jailers and spends much of his time pacing in his cell, O'Reilly said. He is kept apart from other inmates and is eating his meals, the sheriff said.

Investigators haven't said how Kaczynski, described by neighbors as going everywhere on foot or on an old bicycle, could have mailed bombs from locations including San Francisco, Oakland, Calif., Sacramento, Calif., and Chicago and gotten to other cities were bombs were left.

Another question is whether Kaczynski had the money to make such trips. Neighbor Butch Gehring said Kaczynski refused to say how he made a living, but he recalled him saying once that his cost of living had risen to $300 from $200 per year.

Gehring, who owns a lumber business in Lincoln, said he hired Kaczynski a decade ago to peel logs, but Kaczynski did not like the job and quit on his first day.

Kaczynski's only means of transportation was an old bicycle, and his cabin has no electricity or running water, a lifestyle that appears to match the Unabomber's aversion to modern society and technology described in the manifesto.

Records filed with the Lewis and Clark County appraiser's office indicated Kaczynski qualified for a property tax credit because he earned less than $15,000 a year. Officials would not allow reporters to look at the documents that list the amount and sources of his income.

California Gov. Pete Wilson, in whose state five of the bombs killed two people, said he wants any Unabomber trial in California. New Jersey has not pushed for a trial in that state, where one of the fatal bombs exploded, said a spokesman for Gov. Christie Whitman.

"We have not done that and we don't intend to do so," said Carl Golden. "This is a matter that will be decided by the federal prosecutor, and properly so."

Kaczynski graduated from Harvard when he was barely 20 and received a master's degree and doctorate from the University of Michigan several years later. Academic-oriented and obsessed with technology, he fits the FBI psychological profile of the suspect.

He was a math professor at the University of California at Berkeley from 1967 to 1969, then quit and lived in Utah, doing odd jobs and menial labor. The Montana cabin has been his home for about a dozen years.

The Unabomber sent his first bomb to Northwestern University in suburban Chicago in 1978. The most recent attack came April 24, 1995, when a timber industry executive was killed in Sacramento, Calif.

The investigation was codenamed Unabom because the bomber's early targets were universities and airlines.

Unabomber suspect has investigators scrambling

By Brian McGrory
N.Y. Times News Service

LINCOLN, Mont. — Four, maybe five times a year for the past 17 years, Theodore J. Kaczynski hitched rides into Helena with the local mail stage, spent a night at one of the city's least expensive hotels, then returned to his hand-built cabin, according to the man who drove him.

The trips take on importance as federal investigators try to answer a mind-boggling array of questions centered on how a reclusive former professor living without electricity, a car or a telephone in one of the remotest parts of America could track his intended bombing victims, gather ingredients to make sophisticated explosives, then shuttle them off in envelopes that generally bore West Coast postmarks.

They are questions that have left residents baffled and investigators scrambling to piece together answers.

On the trips to Helena, Kaczynski would talk about the weather, about his difficulties keeping his garden watered with his spring-fed hand pump, and about what he planned to do in Helena, such as paying taxes or running errands, Dick Lundberg, who delivered the mail between the communities, said Friday.

Only Kaczynski's neighbor and acquaintance, Irene Preston, recalls a long trip out of town, and that was in the 1970s when he said he was going "back East" to see his family, Preston said. Others said Kaczynski lived such a private life that he could have been gone periodically and no one would have noticed. Indeed, Karen Potter, owner of a local food store, said she would often ask where he had been when she had not seen him for a while.

"The first time, he seemed startled by it, but then he got used to it and thanked me for my concern," Potter said.

Though Kaczynski was without a car, locals said he could have taken the bus either to Missoula or Great Falls. No one interviewed, however, could recall his boarding the bus that comes through town twice a day, heading east in the morning and west in the afternoon.

Lundberg said Friday that when Kaczynski wanted a lift into Helena, he would appear without notice at the mailbox at the bottom of the dirt road that leads half a mile up to his cabin.

"It was four or five times a year," Lundberg said Friday. "Usually he had a small backpack but it didn't amount to nothing, like a kid would wear, like it would hold a small lunch." Lundberg said he always picked Kaczynski up for the ride back to Lincoln outside Buttrey Food and Drug in downtown Helena.

Lundberg's family runs the Lincoln Stage, a private company that has a contract with the US Postal Service to shuttle mail six days a week between Helena and Lincoln, about 60 miles apart as the car drives, with much of the road a curving mountain pass. Lundberg retired three years ago, and his son continues the mail runs, and sometimes gave Kaczynski rides.

Lundberg's wife, Eileen, said Friday that Kaczynski would have had no opportunity on those rides to place packages in the outgoing mail without a postmark.

"There was no way he was near our mail," she said.

In Helena, Kaczynski stayed at the Park Hotel, located above a karate studio and an office furniture store. He always arrived without a reservation and requested the least expensive room, currently $14 a night, according to the hotel's owner, J.R. McCabe. The rooms have no telephones, but sometimes Kaczynski would use the public phone in the lobby, McCabe said.

"He'd always put his backpack away in his room and go out," McCabe said. "He didn't drink or smoke. He'd leave an empty bottle of fruit juice or spring water behind, that's about all."

A local bookstore worker, Anna Haire, told the Independent Record of Helena that he often bought inexpensive, obscure books, including old textbooks, at her shop, Aunt Bonnie's Books, and was always asking about prices. "What he took out was very obscure stuff," she said, "stuff that people often don't bother with, stuff we would often toss."

In Lincoln, residents were perplexed how Kaczynski acquired the voluminous explosive-making materials that federal agents said they found in his 10-by-12-foot hillside cabin.

In an affidavit filed in federal court, an FBI agent said officials seized galvanized metal, copper and plastic pipes, tools, aluminum ingots and containers labeled as having zinc, aluminum, lead, silver oxide, potassium chlorate and sodium chlorate.

"I never sold any of that stuff to him, and I remember everything I sold to him," said Susan Mason, the owner of the Grizzly Home Center, the only hardware store in town. "And there's no place else in town to get it. He didn't buy anything but D batteries, in a two pack. The biggest thing he ever bought here was a bicycle tire."

Others, like Sherri Wood, the town's librarian, recall seeing him often at the local post office, a small A-frame on Route 200, the main road through town. But the postmaster, Dick Pearson, declined to say whether Kaczynski was in the habit of receiving mail-order deliveries in town.

"I can't say yes or no," he said. A Postal Service investigator, Jim Bordenet, said only that the issue is under investigation.

How he might have gotten boxes back to his cabin, which is a 4-mile drive up a hard-packed dirt road lined by towering pines, is another question. Kaczynski used a bicycle so rickety that residents could hear it coming dozens of yards away, and they said it would be difficult to transport much while riding it.

Even how he would have tracked victims remains puzzling to most here, remote from urban trappings. Wood said the local library does not carry any national newspapers like the New York Times or USA Today, and no store in town carries anything beyond local publications.

RAPE: Parents go to jail for refusing to testify with those a rapist would sustain from a struggling victim," prosecutors said in court papers.

District Judge Edward Cashman jailed the Yandows on March 28 for contempt of court after the couple refused his order to testify. There is no limit on how long they can be held. The judge set a hearing for April 27.

Once it becomes clear that jail won't change their minds, the judge will have to release them, Volk said.

Prosecutors have not said what they hope to learn from the couple.

Craig Yandow's attorney, Andrew Mikell, refused to answer questions about the case or say where his client is now. "He is concerned about his parents' situation," Mikell said. "Until he is charged, it's tough for me to do or say anything."

The state Supreme Court ruled 5-0 last month that, because Craig Yandow is a competent adult, his parents cannot claim parent-child privilege.

Similarly, the Rev. Walter Miller, a canon lawyer for the Roman Catholic Diocese of Burlington, which includes all of Vermont, said no church doctrine would allow the Yandows to refuse to help prosecutors.

If the couple were to ask their parish priest for advice, only one answer would be possible, he said: "You'd be telling them to cooperate. This son of theirs is not a child."

But Volk said the Supreme Court ignored a number of legal precedents to the contrary. And he pointed out a section of the Catholic Church's catechism that lays out family responsibilities: "The citizen is obliged in conscience not to follow the directives of civil authorities when they are contrary to the demands of the moral order."

Volk said legal precedents in his favor include a 1979 case in which a court in New York state suppressed grand jury testimony of the father of a 23-year-old vehicular homicide suspect, citing parent-child privilege.

But Vermont prosecutors said in court papers that it appeared New York's highest court overruled that decision in a separate 1994 case. They said courts nationwide "have overwhelmingly rejected the parent-child privilege."

"Nearly all have concluded that the legal system's demand for truth, especially in a criminal proceeding, should not yield to a family's momentary desire for loyalty or harmony," prosecutors told Vermont's high court.

Aside from the legal arguments, Volk said, compelling parents to testify against their children is "abhorrent."

"You're talking about truly using the power of the state to destroy a family," the lawyer said.

Michael Mello, a constitutional law professor at the Vermont Law School, said parent-child privilege is an unusual argument.

"It presents both dimensions of a fairly new, very interesting and extremely foundational question: the legitimacy of whether there is in fact parent-child privilege," Mello said. "Even if there is not, can a parent's refusal to become a police informant against her son (result in her being) incarcerated indefinitely? It's a family-values issue."

North Korea moves soldiers into neutral-zone; South Korea on alert

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A day after apparently dismissing the armistice with South Korea, North Korea moved armed soldiers into Panmunjom, the demilitarized-zone village where the enemies hold their uneasy meetings, the U.S. State Department said Friday.

South Korea put its military on its highest state of alert in 15 years Friday, following a North Korean statement Thursday indicating it no longer recognized the demilitarized zone that has separated the two sides since the 1953 truce in the Korean War.

The Defense Ministry said it was stepping up air, naval and ground patrols, and increasing the number of troops on emergency standby.

Both U.S. and South Korean forces have placed themselves on a "higher state of surveillance," State Department Glyn Davies in Washington said.

North Korea's deployment of armed troops in Panmunjom was a violation of the regulations for the joint security area, Davies said, although it was not unprecedented.

"It doesn't indicate that the threat of hostilities has increased," he said.

The heightened state of alert in South Korea primarily affects military intelligence and other units assigned to watch for any buildup of North Korean troops and arms along the demilitarized zone.

No major troop movements are involved, and most of the 37,000 American military personnel in South Korea would not be affected, said Jim Coles, a spokesman for both American and U.N. forces in Seoul.

The Defense Ministry said it was stepping up air, naval and ground patrols, and increasing the number of troops on emergency standby..

Beyond that, neither the Defense Ministry nor the U.S. military would comment on specific security measures.

The Defense Ministry said North Korea's latest action "is an almost complete abrogation of the armistice, and different from its previous moves to discredit it.

"It looks as if North Korea is looking for an excuse to step up military provocation," the ministry said in its statement announcing the security upgrade.

In Washington, Davies said, "It's very important that North Korea abide by its responsibilities under the armistice and avoid provocative actions."

North Korea announced Thursday that it would "give up its duty" of jointly controlling the 2.5-mile-wide demilitarized zone separating it from South Korea. North Korea did not explain what it meant.

It said the action was in response to South Korea moving personnel, tanks, artillery and other heavy arms into the demilitarized zone in violation of the armistice. South Korea denies that.

The two sides have never signed a permanent peace treaty and are still technically at war.

The United States led a U.N. force in defense of South Korea after the North invaded in 1950. The conflict ended in a stalemate with both sides dug in at more or less the same positions they occupied when it began.

Okinawan landowners seek to remove U.S. military

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese merchant struggling to evict the U.S. military from his small plot of land on Okinawa asked a court Friday for permission to at least visit the family property.

Shoichi Chibana is one of nearly 3,000 landowners trying to reclaim parcels on the southern Japanese island. His 2,500-square-foot plot, a bit smaller than a tennis court, is on the grounds of a sprawling U.S. Navy communications center.

The U.S. military has used land on Okinawa since the end of World War II in 1945, but the current lease expired Sunday. The government has asked a special committee to approve an emergency six-month extension, but until that happens the Navy is technically trespassing.

The government previously has rejected Chibana's request to visit the property. On Friday, an Okinawa court indicated it may reverse that decision if Chibana agreed to abide by certain conditions, his attorney, Masahide Ahagon, said by telephone in Naha, the state capital.

A Naha District Court judge asked the government's lawyers to draft a list of conditions for such a visit, Ahagon said.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Seiroku Kajiyama said the government might let Chibana onto the land if he agrees to bring only his family and not supporters or demonstrators, Kyodo News reported.

Coming only weeks after three American servicemen were convicted of raping a 12-year-old girl on Okinawa last fall, Chibana's anti-military rallying cry has struck a sympathetic chord with many Okinawans.

Of the the 47,000 U.S. troops stationed in this country, nearly 30,000 are based on Okinawa, which makes up less than 1 percent of Japan's total area but contains roughly 75 percent of the land in Japan reserved exclusively for the U.S. military.

One-fifth of Okinawa's crowded, coral-ringed main island — about half the size of Rhode Island — is, in effect, off-limits to Okinawans.

The dispute threatens to overshadow an April 16-18 visit by President Clinton.

Another dispute involving U.S. personnel on Okinawa arose Friday: A family filed a $580,000 lawsuit over the Jan. 7 deaths of a woman and two girls who were struck by a car driven by a U.S. Marine.

Rebels attack Sri Lankan police

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Tamil rebels attacked a police base in eastern Sri Lanka with machine guns, mortars and rocket fire Friday, killing 16 police commandos, military officials said.

The body of one rebel was recovered, officials said. It was not known how many other guerrillas may have died. Helicopter gunships were called in to defend the police base in Pulupunawa village. The attack came after Tamil rebels suffered heavy casualties in fighting in northern Sri Lanka on Wednesday and Thursday.

Military officials said 84 rebels were killed by government soldiers trying to flush out rebels from uncleared areas around Jaffna city. The rebel stronghold fell to the military Dec. 5 after a bloody 50-day siege.

The rebels are fighting for an independent homeland in the country's north and east for minority Tamils. They claim widespread discrimination by the majority Sinhalese, who control the government and the military.

More than 40,000 people have been killed in the 12-year ethnic war.

Terrorism fears keep many from visiting holy land

JERUSALEM (AP) — Amid fresh threats of suicide bombings, thousands of Christian pilgrims from around the world gathered in Jerusalem on Good Friday to retrace Jesus' last steps to his crucifixion.

Carrying wooden crosses and chanting hymns, the pilgrims trudged along the cobblestones of the Via Dolorosa — or Way of Sorrows — to the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, which occupies the site where many Christians believe Jesus was buried and resurrected.

The pilgrims followed robed priests through the maze of the Old City's outdoor market, bumping into Muslim women with bundles of vegetables on their heads.

A drama troupe from California re-enacted the procession.

"Make way for the king of the Jews!" shouted one actor, dressed as a Roman soldier in a red gown and a golden helmet.

Behind him came "Jesus," wearing a crown of thorns and bearing a large wooden cross. Fake blood covered his face and bare chest.

"It is very exciting," said Don Obendorf, a pilgrim from San Francisco. "The vibes and ambiance, it is nice. Jerusalem seems to be a special place."

Obendorf and his wife said they ignored warnings from friends to postpone their trip after four suicide attacks by Islamic militants killed 62 people, including the bombers, in February and March. Two of the bombs went off in Jerusalem.

Others seemed to have heeded the warnings. Fewer than 5,000 pilgrims took part in the procession Friday, compared with some 10,000 in calmer years.

"I think that because of the tensions that are existing now in Israel a lot of pilgrims have canceled their pilgrimages to the Holy Land," said Father Peter Vasko, a Roman Catholic priest who moved to Jerusalem from New York City 11 years ago.

"It is sad because usually this thing is packed," he added, gesturing at the half-filled courtyard before the 800-year-old Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

American actors portray the procession leading Jesus to the cross Friday in Jurusalem. Terrorist threats are keeping tourist numbers low for the Easter holiday.

Palestinian Christians from the West Bank could not attend the Good Friday procession because Israel has sealed off Palestinian areas in response to the bombings. The closure bars 2 million Palestinians from entering Israel.

Shlomo Dror, spokesman for the Israeli government's chief policy adviser on Palestinian affairs, said no exceptions would be made during Good Friday or Easter Sunday, which coincide with the eight-day Jewish holiday of Passover.

Dror said Israel had fresh warnings that Islamic militants would try to disrupt the Jewish holiday with more bombings.

"We know there is a decision to try to carry out some terrorist attacks," Dror said. "Because of security reasons there is no way we can let people come to Jerusalem or to any other place in Israel during the holiday."

Palestinian shopkeepers complained that business was bad. They said that many tourists who did come to the Old City had been warned not to enter stores.

Still, shop owner Ismail Dweidah anticipated better times.

"It is a holy day and we hope that people pray for peace in Jerusalem," Dweidah said.

Egypt gets new opposition party

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Police searched the Muslim activist's home for an hour, then found the evidence: a 127-page agenda for a political party that would condemn terrorism and support the rights of women and Egypt's Christian minority.

The would-be party's goals seem innocuous if not praiseworthy. But police say the Wasat party is a front for the fundamentalist Muslim Brotherhood, which they accuse of supporting Islamic terrorists.

The papers were confiscated. Founder Abu Elela Mady, 37, was jailed. Ten others, including two more founders of the party, were arrested in similar raids and accused of threatening national security.

Critics say the police got it wrong. They say the group, whose name means "center party," is a breakaway movement of young people trying to create a new, more secular political base.

"This is the stupidest security move possible. The Wasat party could have brought on a much more moderate Islamic movement," said Hisham Mubarak of the Center for Human Rights Legal Aid.

Mubarak — whose group defends a range of causes, not just Muslim activism — said the raids show just how nervous Egypt is about Islamic opposition.

"The government does not want any Islamic movement, whether it is moderate or not," he said.

The arrests Tuesday were a renewal of a crackdown on the Brotherhood during Parliament elections last fall. Hundreds were seized as the group's backers ran against the government party. Only one Brotherhood supporter won.

The Brotherhood, founded in the 1920s, is officially outlawed, but was tolerated for years as a counterpoint to the government's opponents, leftists in the 1970s and later Islamic radicals.

Since January 1995, however, the government has that claimed the Brotherhood supports militants who have waged a four-year campaign of violence to turn Egypt into an Islamic state. The Brotherhood wants an Islamic state but denies supporting violence.

Suspicion over the Wasat — which needs government approval before it can field candidates in elections — comes from the fact that many of its founders were among the Brotherhood's dynamic, young supporters.

But Mady, in an interview with The Associated Press days before his arrest, insisted the Wasat was independent of the Brotherhood and was meant to be "a secular party, not a religious party.

Investigators probe for grave sites

BRANJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — William Haglund walked through a Bosnian farm Friday, stopping where human bones protruded from the mud. Over and over, he inserted a five-foot steel pole into the earth, pulled it out and sniffed for death.

"You can smell it when it's there," said U.N. investigator Jean-Rene Ruez, explaining why his colleague was raising the probe to his nose.

Haglund, a U.N. consultant from Seattle who works with the Boston-based group Physicians for Human Rights, recorded his observations with a tape recorder, speaking too quietly for observers to hear him.

He and his six U.N. colleagues were searching for evidence of a mass grave believed to lie beneath the collective farm in the heart of Bosnian Serb territory.

Branjevo is about 30 miles northwest of Srebrenica, a Muslim enclave that fell to the Serbs last July. About 7,000 men disappeared when the town fell. Witnesses say Serb soldiers took the men away, executed them and buried them on farms.

Madeleine Albright, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, visited the site two weeks ago and said she believed as many as 1,000 people were buried under the farm.

The U.N. team searched Friday for evidence to back up that belief. They took photographs of mounds of dirt and of human remains that protruded from them. They tagged each bit of evidence with yellow markers.

Team members said it was only a preliminary investigation and declined to talk about what they found. There have been no major excavations since they arrived in the area Monday, and none are expected until May.

A Bosnian Serb told the Paris newspaper Le Figaro last month that he and fellow commandos were ordered on July 20 to execute about 1,200 men dressed in civilian clothing who were bused in to be shot.

Drazen Erdemovic, who has since been extradited to the U.N. war crimes tribunal in the Netherlands, said he personally shot 70 men during the killing spree.

"I tried to kill as few people as possible," he said. "At one point, I murmured to one of my comrades, 'God knows everything we've done today.' He snapped back at me, 'Shut up and shoot!'"

Branjevo is just one of several places near Srebrenica believed to hold mass graves. Investigators are spreading out to search them for evidence that can be used by the war crimes tribunal to prosecute those responsible for the slaughter.

On Thursday, the U.N. investigators found dozens of blindfolds and some human remains in the villa.

Serb officer's lawyer says trial would violate accord

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The lawyer for a Serb officer released by the U.N. war crimes tribunal said today that a trial in Sarajevo would violate the Bosnian peace agreement.

Col. Aleksa Krsmanovic was freed by the international tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, for lack of evidence, but the Bosnian government arrested him when he returned to Sarajevo Wednesday night.

"We are now determining whether he is guilty of the (war) crimes," Judge Izet Bazdarevic of the Sarajevo High Court said Thursday.

Igor Pantelic, Krsmanovic's lawyer, was quoted by the Bosnian Serb news agency SRNA as saying the tribunal's decision was binding, "whatever Muslim-Croat authorities may think — and The Hague has decided that Krsmanovic is not guilty."

"All signers of the Dayton agreement accepted a certain level of cooperation with The Hague tribunal and its priority over national law," the lawyer was quoted as saying.

Pantelic said Krsmanovic would not cooperate with the Sarajevo court, and would defend himself with silence.

"And low prices.
Guaranteed everyday low prices.
They were practically giving the stuff away."

Investigation into Bosnian plane accident centers on landing systems

By Tony Smith
Associated Press

DUBROVNIK, Croatia (AP) — NATO helicopters carried the last body bags off a craggy hillside Friday where Commerce Secretary Ron Brown and 34 others died in a plane crash. Investigators focused their search for a cause on the Dubrovnik airport's landing guidance system.

The Stars and Stripes newspaper reported in today's editions that the commander of the plane's squadron recently raised questions about flying that type of aircraft in foul weather in the former Yugoslavia, where navigational guidance equipment sometimes is missing.

The commander, Lt. Col. James Albright, was relieved of his post on March 29, five days before the crash. The paper quoted a pilot speaking on condition of anonymity as saying Albright was replaced because of the safety questions he raised.

A spokesman at Ramstein Air Base in Germany denied any link between the safety issues and Albright's replacement.

U.S. investigators refused to comment on possible reasons for the plane's crash Wednesday, and Croatian officials revealed few details as well as trucks hauled the victim's remains that were brought in by the NATO aircraft to a warehouse serving as a morgue.

Croatia observed a day of official mourning, with flags at half-staff. State radio played somber music, theater performances were canceled and sports events were ordered to observe a minute's silence.

Brown's T-43 plane, the military version of a Boeing 737, had been cleared to land at Dubrovnik airport when it veered off course and clipped the rocky hillside in a storm.

Sunshine broke through Friday after two days of high winds and heavy rains. The wreckage remained scattered above the seaside homes and blue green waters of the Adriatic Sea.

At Ramstein, where the plane was based, an Air Force team with representatives from the National Transportation Safety Board was searching the plane's maintenance records.

The team was expected to travel to Dubrovnik on Saturday, State Department spokesman Glyn Davies said in Washington.

Their efforts may be hampered by the lack of voice and data recorders, which are not required on military aircraft.

U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry said initial speculation was that faulty instrumentation caused the crash about two miles short of the airport.

No problems had been reported on the flight, which was cleared to land.

U.S. military personnel Friday were trying to determine the victims' identities, taking fingerprints where possible and logging personal belongings, said U.S. militar. spokesman Col. Mark Brzozowski.

Most of the bodies were intact but considerably disfigured, making identification difficult in some cases, said Simun Adjelinovic, a Croatian pathologist.

In most cases, relatives will be able to identify the victims through personal possessions, but DNA tests would be used in the United States in some cases, he said.

"The injuries suffered by most of them were so severe that not even the fast medical aid would have helped," he said.

Croatia's aviation inspector at the Ministry of Transport and Communications, Stanko Misetic, said all airport beacons and other navigational instruments were functioning normally at the time of the crash.

He refused to discuss details such as the plane's approach path or transcripts of conversations between the crew and the control tower, saying he was not fully informed.

U.S. and local officials said the airport was missing one piece of computerized precision landing equipment taken by the Yugoslav army in Croatia's 1991 war that allows planes to land in any weather.

In Washington, Gen. Howell Estes, director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said other aircraft landed at Dubrovnik "with no difficulties," including several earlier Wednesday.

The bodies of the 33 Americans aboard were expected at Dover Air Force Base in Delaware sometime Saturday, Brzozowski said.

A memorial service attended by Croatian President Franjo Tudjman and U.S. Ambassador Peter Galbraith would be held Saturday, he said.

Radical group gets OK to protest at Auschwitz site

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A skinhead group has won approval to march Saturday at the Auschwitz death camp to protest the halt in construction of a mini-mall there, a spokeswoman for the provincial governor said.

Plans to build the shopping center across the street from the camp built by German Nazis in World War II have drawn vehement protests from Auschwitz survivors, Jewish organizations and top Polish officials.

Some 1.5 million people, most of them Jews, were killed at Auschwitz.

"We are aware of the delicate nature of the problem and of the great emotional load connected with it," Alina Macher, the governor's spokeswoman, said by telephone Friday. "However, there are no regulations which can be used as a basis to stop such a protest."

The march will be peaceful, said organizer Jan Bartula, local leader of the skinhead group, the Polish National Community-Polish National Party, made up mostly of young skinheads who use the slogan "Poland for the Poles."

"We will not allow someone from the outside to try to impose decisions on our authorities about what can be built or what can't," Bartula said.

The group's national leader, Boleslaw Tejkowski, was given an eight-month suspended sentence last year for incitement after calling on Poles to fight Jews and Germans, whom he claimed were "buying out Poland."

After consulting with lawyers, Gov. Marek Trombski on Thursday overturned a decision by city authorities to ban the march, even though it comes during the Jewish holiday of Passover, aides said.

"According to the law, we have to give them a permit, like we gave one for the 'March of the Living' on April 16," Macher said. The April 16 march is being organized by Jewish youth groups.

Construction on the mall was suspended Tuesday while authorities determine whether it violates UNESCO guidelines to protect an area within 500 yards of the camp's museum.

Stanislaw Krajewski, co-chairman of the Polish Council of Christians and Jews and Polish consultant to the American Jewish Committee, said he understood the position the governor was in.

"The authorities had to follow the formal guidelines," he said.

Bartula denied he was anti-Semitic, arguing instead that the march was pro-Polish. He said he expected some 500 people Saturday.

"We do not want conflicts," he said. "On April 16, the Jews will march and they have the right to do so along with other nations which were killed there."

Tadeusz Kus, the governor's chief of staff, said the organizers had been asked to choose another date and they gave the authorities a choice between Saturday and April 16, the same day as the Jewish youth march.

The skinhead demonstration is to start with a wreath-laying at the Auschwitz "Death Wall," where Polish freedom fighters were executed by the Nazis. The participants then plan to march a mile to the former Birkenau camp, where the Nazis built gas chambers and crematories.

Tejkowski said they wanted to march "to honor Polish patriots murdered by German Nazis in Auschwitz and Birkenau camps. ... We want to stress that we respect the camp's museum as a place of the suffering of the Polish nation."

Defense attorneys attack prosecution witness Hale

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Defense attorneys in the Whitewater trial ripped into the prosecution's star witness Friday as a tax cheat, a thief and a liar who concocted allegations against President Clinton to save his skin.

"Do you have any idea what your story has done to this nation?" Sam Heuer, the lawyer for Clinton's Whitewater partner James McDougal, snapped at the witness, David Hale.

"I hope that it helps clean up some corruption" in Arkansas, Hale replied.

"You're to be commended," Heuer said sarcastically.

McDougal, his ex-wife, Susan, and Gov. Jim Guy Tucker are on trial on charges of conspiring to defraud the McDougals' savings and loan and Hale's Small Business Administration-backed lending company of some $3 million.

In a deal with prosecutors, Hale pleaded guilty to defrauding the SBA, got more than two years in prison and agreed to testify for the government.

Hale has insisted Clinton attended a meeting on one of the loans. Clinton has said he doesn't recall ever discussing money with Hale, and he denied Hale's central allegation — that Clinton pressured him to make an improper loan.

Under cross-examination Friday, Hale admitted, "I've done a lot of wrong things and I am sorry for it." But he insisted Clinton, the McDougals and Tucker were involved in illegal loans.

"You knew the only way you could sell your story was to create the Bill Clinton connection," Heuer said.

"No sir, the U.S. attorney did that" by investigating Whitewater, Hale said.

Heuer showed that Hale telephoned arch-conservative former Arkansas Supreme Court Justice Jim Johnson more than two dozen times in 1993.

"You knew that Justice Jim Johnson hated Bill Clinton," Heuer said.

"I did not know" about Johnson's views on Clinton, responded Hale, saying he was simply trying to find a lawyer because he was under indictment.

Testifying for a fifth straight day, Hale was forced by the defense to admit to a litany of crimes that have nothing to do with any of the defendants.

Tucker lawyer George Collins got Hale to admit he hasn't paid taxes on the $63,000 in cash living expenses Hale said he has been handed from FBI agents while cooperating in the Whitewater investigation.

Hale said he simply hadn't thought about the tax question until Collins brought it up.

Heuer depicted Hale as a thief, showing how Hale and two other prosecution witnesses in the Whitewater trial collected close to $1 million from Hale's lending company in 1986.

First lady pledges to help nun

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American nun who says she was tortured by Guatemalan military personnel said Friday that first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton promised efforts to have U.S. government documents on her case released soon.

Sister Dianna Ortiz, who has been conducting a vigil across the street from the White House, said in a press statement she received the assurance during a meeting Thursday with Mrs. Clinton.

"Mrs. Clinton said she would do everything in her power to help me obtain as much information as possible," Sister Ortiz said.

Since Monday, Sister Ortiz has been conducting a 20-hour-a-day vigil to protest the U.S. government's lack of response to her request for documents concerning her case.

The nun said Mrs. Clinton told her she would attempt to have the information released before a presidential panel completes its investigation.

Sister Ortiz said the target date for completion is June 30.

President Clinton last year asked his Intelligence Oversight Board to investigate the case and allegations that U.S. payments had been made to Guatemalan informants who might have been among those who tortured Sister Ortiz.

Sister Ortiz, 37, a member of the Mount St. Joseph Ursulines in western Kentucky, has testified that she was abducted, raped and tortured by Guatemalan soldiers in 1989. She says her back is scarred with 111 cigarette burns inflicted by her torturers who, she contends, appeared to be acting under the authority of an American with links to the U.S. government.

The U.S. Embassy in Guatemala has said it has no knowledge of any such person.

In her press statement, Sister Ortiz said Mrs. Clinton offered assistance in the release to her of any information contained in government documents about that person.

National Security Adviser Anthony Lake met earlier this week with Sister Ortiz, a New Mexico native who works for the Guatemalan Human Rights Commission.

New job growth hits financial markets

WASHINGTON (AP) — A second month of faster-than-expected growth in new jobs sent shivers through financial markets Friday even though the Clinton administration insisted that the economy was in no danger of overheating.

The Labor Department said payroll jobs increased by 140,000 last month as strength in service industries offset strike-related weakness in manufacturing.

Although the unemployment rate, which is based on a separate household survey, inched up to 5.6 percent in March from 5.5 percent, investors were still spooked by the surprisingly large jump in payroll jobs.

The Clinton administration insisted that the report depicted an economy growing at a moderate pace, but the bond market went into a tailspin as investors fretted that any hopes of further Federal Reserve interest rate reductions have now been eliminated.

Demand for the Treasury's benchmark 30-year bond plummeted, pushing the yield up to 6.82 percent, the highest level since last August. It marked the biggest one-day movement in bonds since the unemployment report last month triggered a similar sharp sell-off.

A month ago, the stock market had plunged as well, dropping by 171 points, the third worst point decline in history. The stock market was closed Friday for Good Friday observances, but analysts warned that stocks could face significant selling pressure when the markets open again Monday.

The administration and many private economists said investors were overreacting to the employment reports. They insisted that while the economy has recovered from its winter stall, it is not in danger of overheating.

"The Goldilocks recovery continues," said Labor Secretary Robert Reich. "Not too hot to create a danger of inflation and not too cold to suggest a recession."

Private economists said that the overall economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, probably only expanded at an annual rate of 1 percent in the first three months of the year, just half the weak 2 percent increase for all of 1995.

Already Sen. Bob Dole, President Clinton's all-but-certain GOP opponent, has begun to attack the administration's policies for dragging down economic growth.

"The economy has picked up a little bit, but it is certainly not booming," said Lawrence Chimerine of the Economic Strategy Institute in Washington. "We are looking for very modest growth this year."

In another hopeful sign that business activity was increasing after a weak period, the Federal Reserve said that Americans' installment debt grew in February at the fastest pace in eight months as each of the major debt categories posted sharp gains.

The Labor Department report said that 140,000 jobs were created in March following a revised 624,000 increase in February, the biggest one-month spurt in 12 years.

Dole tours Florida's Everglades on break from Spring vacation

MIAMI (AP) — Bob Dole took a helicopter tour over the Everglades Friday and underscored his opposition to a Clinton administration plan to raise funds for preserving the pollution-threatened ecosystem.

At the same time, the probable Republican presidential nominee said the federal government has a role to play in preserving the Everglades and the water it provides for millions of Floridians.

How that is to be done promises to be a big issue in November in this major battleground state.

The administration wants to cut Florida sugar farmers' price guarantees by one cent a pound to help raise enough money to double spending on the Everglades cleanup to about $1.5 billion over a seven-year period.

Environmentalists blame runoff from sugar cane fields for much of the Everglades' problems.

Dole rejected the administration's financing proposal but denied he's "an extremist" on federal participation.

"We want to see things happen. Not more studies. Not more regulation. Not more personnel," said the Senate majority leader. But "there is a federal responsibility."

"The water supply is very important to the people of Florida."

The Everglades is a slow-moving, 50-mile-wide river, only inches deep in some places, flowing from Lake Okeechobee south through vast grasslands and mangrove swamps to the end of the peninsula.

Years of real estate development and farming have eroded its size, reduced the amount of water flowing through it and polluted the ecosystem with fertilizer and chemicals.

Dole's aerial tour occurred a day after President Clinton signed a farm bill that includes a provision making $200 million available for restoring the wetlands and another $100 million if surplus federal land in Florida can be sold.

The Everglades amendment was supported by Dole and a bipartisan majority.

Dole's Everglades trip, during a low-key Florida vacation, was suggested by Rep. Mark Foley, R-Fla., of West Palm Beach. Both Dole and Foley said the administration's proposal to raise money from the sugar industry is probably unconstitutional.

"You can't pick out a single industry," Dole said.

Foley agreed: "You can't impose a tax on the Florida industry and not impose it nationally."

During the hour-long flyover, Foley showed Dole manmade reservoirs used to filter phosphorus and other pollutants out of the water before it flows through Everglades National Park to Florida Bay. They also saw a 50,000-acre tract of agricultural land in Palm Beach County that could be bought with federal money and restored to its natural state.

"I wanted him to see firsthand what we're doing," said Foley. "I don't want anybody to spend money and not see what our intentions are."

Dole aides said he made the Everglades flyover as Senate majority leader — not as presidential candidate.

Pesticide maker agrees to halt production

WASHINGTON (AP) — The maker of a widely used pesticide has agreed to halt its use on apples and nine other fruits and vegetables because of data showing a higher cancer risk than previously thought, the Environmental Protection Agency announced Friday.

The chemical propargite is being withdrawn immediately for use on these fruits and vegetables as part of a voluntary agreement reached between the EPA and Uniroyal Chemical Co., of Middlebury, Conn., the chemical's only producer. The action against the mite-killing chemical comes on the eve of the spring growing season.

The agency said the re-evaluation, which took into account a variety of factors not previously considered, including potential exposure to children, suggested a higher lifetime cancer risk than previously calculated.

Environmentalists generally praised the agreement, which is part of a broader reevaluation of older pesticides by the EPA, and said they expect similar withdrawals involving other chemicals to follow. Last August, the agency announced a phaseout of cyanizine, used on corn.

"It sends a rather clear message that the days are numbered for dozens of these known carcinogens," said Al Meyerhoff, attorney for the Natural Resources Defense Council.

The EPA said new studies show that long-term exposure from some uses of propargite posed "an unacceptable risk" of cancer to people who eat certain fruits and vegetables treated with the chemical. The risk is based on a lifetime of eating the foods.

The agency said the action should reduce propargite exposure to adults and children by more than 85 percent, and to infants by more than 98 percent.

The agency said it would be safe to keep eating foods that have already been treated.

The chemical is used on 29 percent of the apple acreage.

The ban covers not only apples, but also apricots, peaches, pears, plums, figs, cranberries, strawberries, green beans and lima beans. Other uses were allowed to continue, including on grapes and nectarines.

In determining health risks, EPA weighs how the pesticide is used on crops, how foods are prepared, and how much of the different foods people eat. The agency said the highest risk comes from eating apples, peaches and plums.

The agency also considers the benefits to growers from using the chemicals.

Many environmentalists generally praised the agreement, but some said the EPA did not go far enough.

The National Coalition Against the Misuse of Pesticides, said the action falls short of what is needed to protect the public. The group said the ban should be extended to cover grapes and nectarines as well.

Jay Feldman, the coalition's executive director, said that the EPA should toughen its standard to allow a maximum of one cancer death per million people over a lifetime, instead of the two deaths in this case.

Clinton marks bombing anniversary

By Laura Vozella
N.Y. Times Service

OKLAHOMA CITY — President Clinton returned to Oklahoma City on Friday to find half-staff flags marking a fresh tragedy.

Two days after Commerce Secretary Ron Brown and 34 others died in a plane crash, Clinton thanked Oklahomans for demonstrating the healing power of faith, courage and community after the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah federal building here a year ago.

"On this very difficult and painful day for me, when I have lost a great and good friend, and a lot of gifted employees of the federal government, some of them very young, and some wonderful members of the armed forces, and some of our nation's most able business leaders, the power of your example is very much with me," Clinton said. "And I thank you for that."

With Clinton scheduled to be overseas on the anniversary of the deadly blast, April 19, with summits in South Korea, Japan and Russia, the president and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton made the daylong visit to Oklahoma early to mark the first anniversary of the bombing.

Both dressed in dark suits, they laid a wreath at the now-demolished bomb site, dedicated a plaque and at a downtown convention center, addressed more than 3,000 people who survived or lost loved ones in the blast. For more than two hours, they shook hands with nearly all of them.

It was the president's first trip to the actual site where 168 people were killed and more than 600 injured.

He visited Oklahoma City shortly after the explosion last April, but he avoided the bomb site to keep from diverting the search and rescue efforts that were still ongoing.

Hillary Clinton left a teddy bear at the site.

Later Friday, at the University of Central Oklahoma in Edmond, Okla., Clinton pushed for anti-terrorism legislation before a spirited group of about 3,500 students, The Associated Press reported.

With his visit coming on Good Friday, two days before Easter, Clinton sprinkled his remarks at the Myriad Convention Center with references to rebirth.

"This Easter Sunday, all over the world the over 1.5 billion people who are Christians will be able to bear witness to our faith that the miracles of Jesus and the miracles of the human spirit in Oklahoma City only reflect the larger miracle of human nature: that there is something eternal within each of us; that we all have to die; and that no bomb can blow away even from the littlest child that eternity which is within each of us," Clinton said.

The religious references took some in the audience by pleasant surprise, even though Clinton has made religion a recurring theme of his presidency.

"In this day and age, for the president to use the name of Jesus, that makes Oklahomans proud, Christians proud, too," said Ellen Gobin, whose husband, Jack, 52, managed to escape his Department of Agriculture Office without physical injury.

In her remarks, Hillary Clinton compared the destruction still visible in downtown Oklahoma City to what she saw on a recent trip to Bosnia.

"Two weeks ago, when I was privileged to visit with our troops in Bosnia, I flew over land that had been ravaged by hatred and violence and war, and I saw houses and buildings that bore the same marks of evil and the destruction that had been wrought," she said.

"We don't know how well the people there will be able to overcome their own legacy of bitterness and hatred and violence. But we do know that here in Oklahoma City, the buildings may still stand half-destroyed, but the spirits are springing forth."

Clinton saw evidence of Oklahoma's recovery earlier in the day, when he happened across two children who had been hurt in the blast and later visited him at the White House.

"I asked them if they remembered meeting me. They said, 'Yes. How's Socks?' So I thought to myself, 'Things are maybe beginning to get back to normal in Oklahoma City. At least the children have their priorities in order."

At the university, Clinton met with members of a committee that has raised $9 million in scholarships for children who lost parents in the bombing.

Students gathered in a courtyard ringed by brownstone and brick academic buildings, listening to the university jazz band and hawking Clinton-Gore campaign buttons before the program began. They whooped and whistled when the Clintons appeared, but seemed to listen intently when the President spoke about the need for tougher anti-terrorism laws.

Clinton listed three objectives: requiring explosives to bear markers that would enable investigators to trace their source; giving the Attorney General explicit authority to punish domestic groups that raise money for terrorists; and providing officials with better technology to combat high-tech criminals.

Clinton said the legislation is the only way of "guaranteeing our young people the opportunity that they deserve to live out their God given dreams."

In an interesting twist yesterday, a lawyer battling for closed circuit television coverage of the bombing trial took her case directly to Clinton.

With a network television news crew recording the event, Karen Howick asked the president to do anything he can to ensure that Oklahomans will be able to watch the upcoming trial of bombing suspects Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols in Denver, The Associated Press reported.

The trial, which has not been scheduled but is expected to begin later this year, was moved to Denver from Oklahoma due to intense media coverage in the state.

"I'll see what I can do," Clinton told Howick. "I didn't know about it until recently."

Court upholds 'don't ask, don't tell'

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court today upheld the Clinton administration's "don't ask, don't tell" policy for gays in the military, saying it was not the court's job to shove elected leaders aside and set military policy by itself.

In a 9-4 decision, the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said courts "were not created to award by judicial decree what was not achievable by political consensus."

The court issued the ruling in the case of former Navy Lt. Paul Thomasson, who was dismissed from the Navy last June after giving a letter to his commanding admiral stating, "I am gay."

The ruling, which upholds a lower court ruling against Thomasson, is the first time a legal challenge to the administration's policy has reached the federal appeals level.

Thomasson's lawyer, Allan Baron Moore, said an appeal is likely. "We have long anticipated this is an issue the Supreme Court ultimately will have to decide," he said.

Moore said the appeals judges expressed "a rather novel view of deference to the military. They argue and hold, as a matter of law, that judicial power does not reach certain military decisions."

A three-judge panel of the 4th Circuit heard Thomasson's appeal in September, and took the highly unusual step of sending the case directly to the full 13-judge court for review. In most cases, one of the parties in an appeal must ask for the full-court hearing.

Judge J. Harvie Wilkinson III wrote in the majority opinion that the court could not accept Thomasson's claims that the policy is unconstitutional.

"To do so would not only overturn the efforts of the elected branches of government to resolve a significant question of national military policy. It would also violate much plain and settled Supreme Court precedent," Wilkinson wrote.

"In the end, the best service courts can render is to return this debate to where it all began — to the halls of democratic governments, where the many Americans affected by decisions such as these can participate directly in their resolution."

Judge Kenneth K. Hall wrote in a dissent that Thomasson was being punished for "nothing more than an expression of his state of mind. The expression was not illegal, and the fact admitted is not a ground for discharge."

State and federal courts around the nation have been grappling with the issue. Some federal courts have ruled against the Clinton policy.

Just last month, a federal judge in San Francisco ordered the reinstatement of a gay National Guard officer discharged under the military's "don't ask, don't tell" policy. And last year, a federal judge in New York blocked the discharge of six homosexuals who had challenged the policy.

Thomasson, who worked for the admiral administering the "don't ask, don't tell" policy, contended that the policy was unconstitutional because it equated the words "I am gay" with illegal sexual acts.

Hall and the other three dissenting judges agreed.

"Lt. Paul Thomasson's career is over because it is presumed that he will misbehave in a manner that is assumed to incite the prejudices of his colleagues, whom it is speculated will abandon their duties to defend the United States rather than tolerate him in their midst," Hall wrote.

Freemen give outside negotiators second chance; authorities hopeful

By David Foster
Associated Press

JORDAN, Mont. — Anti-government Freemen held their second meeting with outside negotiators this morning, a hopeful sign for those seeking a peaceful end to the 12-day siege.

Freemen drove a 35-foot mobile home to the meeting place on a dirt road about 200 yards from their farmhouse headquarters in eastern Montana. They waited for about 20 minutes until a white Chevrolet Suburban arrived with the outside negotiators.

The outside team shook hands with the Freemen, milled around outside the recreational vehicle for a few minutes, then went inside the vehicle.

The negotiators, apparently the same men as on Thursday, remained inside for about an hour. A Freemen sentry stood on a hilltop nearby; an FBI airplane circled overhead.

In Helena, Montana Attorney General Joe Mazurek said the negotiators were not FBI agents but "third-party intermediaries." He declined to identify them, citing security concerns.

"Nobody's suggesting that there's some big breakthrough," Mazurek said. "We're just hopeful, given the time of the year and the importance of Easter to those people, that maybe it would provide an opportunity."

On Thursday, the Freemen set up folding chairs on a blue tarp for the first open-air meeting. Thursday's talks, the first break in the standoff, lasted about an hour and a half, but authorities would not say if any progress was made.

One of the Freemen did most of the talking Thursday, occasionally standing, walking around and waving his arms. Reporters were kept about a mile away, but the negotiations could be seen clearly through binoculars and telephoto lenses.

Freemen in a pickup truck parked 100 yards away watched the meeting closely. Federal agents did the same from another vantage point. A surveillance plane circled above.

When the meeting ended, the Freemen packed up the chairs and went back to the ranch house on the 960-acre farm they call Justus Township. The negotiators drove past about a dozen TV crews and reporters without comment.

The FBI has had little to say about the standoff on the windswept plains of eastern Montana. The FBI has a direct phone line to the farm.

The dirt-road talks, however tentative, marked the first visible sign of negotiations to end that standoff that began March 25 after federal agents arrested two Freemen leaders, LeRoy Schweitzer, 57, and Daniel Petersen, 53. A third Freeman, Richard E. Clark, surrendered to FBI agents Saturday.

The Freemen renounced all established authority, set up their own shadow government, issued millions of dollars in bogus checks and threatened to kill those who stand in their way, authorities said.

Neighbors say the Freemen have stockpiled weapons and enough food and supplies to last months. About 22 men, women and children are believed to be barricaded on the farm.

Schweitzer, Petersen and others face federal charges of writing millions of dollars in bogus checks and money orders, and threatening to kidnap and murder the federal judge who was involved in the foreclosure of the farm that serves as their base.

Freemen also face state charges of criminal syndicalism, or advocating violence for political aims.

Juvenile splits time between school, jail

EVANSTON, Wyo. (AP) — When taking his son to school more than a decade ago, Thomas Mealey would often wave to a 16-year-old boy he had represented as a lawyer.

The boy wasn't going to class. The teen-ager, who had been expelled, would walk his friends to school and stake out houses to burglarize. Scores of crimes later, the teen-ager wound up in the Wyoming State Penitentiary.

"It's a broken record," Mealey said. "It's an old story in Wyoming and lots of other places."

When the right case came along, Mealey — now a Uinta County judge — saw a chance to write a new chapter to that old story. He thought a little hard time might make an impression on a tough kid and save a juvenile from the same fate as his former client.

When the case of a 14-year-old joyrider came into his courtroom, Mealey, instead of sentencing him to the typical probation, gave him six months in jail with time off each day to attend school. The plan is similar to work-release programs for adult convicts.

"This is unique," said Jack Greene, American Correctional Association's director of professional development. "I think it would be a model that every community and every jail would have to evaluate on their own."

The boy had borrowed a car on New Year's Eve and crashed it into a fence while drunk. Police also found a pipe with drug residue in his pocket. The unidentified juvenile pleaded guilty to joyriding.

Mealey gave the boy the option of getting out his jail cell long enough each day to go to class.

"Wisely, he elected to go to school," Mealey said.

For the teen-ager, it means a 6 a.m. wakeup, breakfast and a bus ride to school. The bus returns him to the jail at about 3 p.m., where he receives counseling or recreation time. He spends most of his remaining time in his 12-by-12-foot cell.

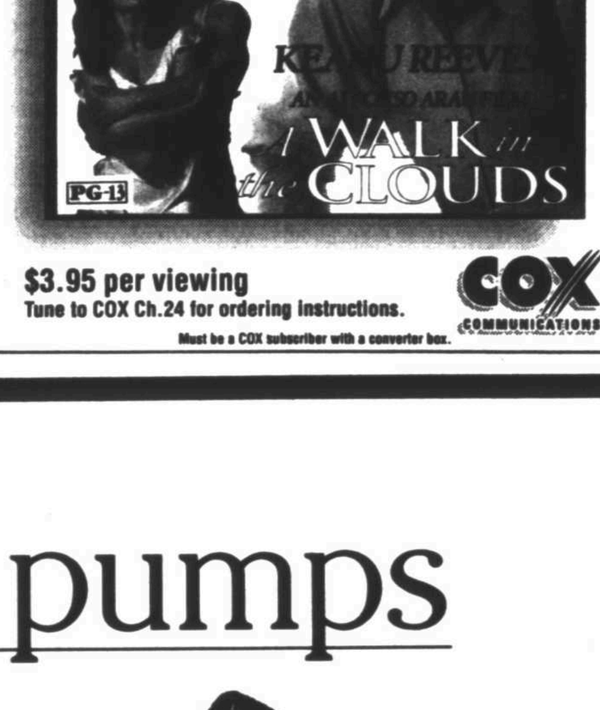

"He's got a lot of study time," Sheriff Forrest Bright said.

"When he first came in here, he had a very bad attitude, his behavior was very poor, his temper was violent, he wasn't very cooperative," Bright said. "Over a period of time his attitude has got a lot better, a lot more positive.

Hootie arrives

Atlantic Records successfully delivered the new Hootie and the Blowfish song, "Old Man and Me" to 1,000 radio stations nationwide Monday. The song was shipped via ISDN lines. One of the stations that received the song locally was KBAT, Midland-Odessa's album rock station.

From a quality standpoint, the song compares favorably with the more traditional CD version, according to Bob Gerhard, KBAT's program director.

"If you had taken a CD player and played the song on disc, unless you have a real critical ear you wouldn't be able to tell the difference," Gerhard said.

Gerhard said from the standpoint of the amount of work involved, technology is still a bit lacking.

"At this point, it's still easier to get the CD in and take care of it that way," he said. "Now, with the ISDN delivery method, you have to download it, then transfer it to tape."

The song itself, which precedes the April 23 release of the second Hootie and the Blowfish album, is very good in Gerhard's opinion.

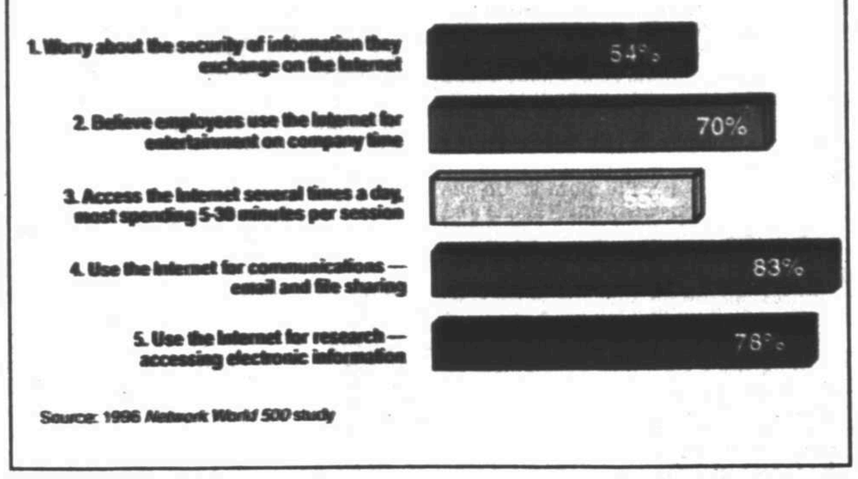

"I have a theory that goes way back," he said. "The bigger the deal that is made of a new song's release, the worse the song tends to be. I thought, 'This must be a really poor song,' but I was pleasantly surprised. They're not just resting on their laurels."

Gerhard said the first 24 hours after the song had begun receiving airplay the station fielded a few calls, noting that it takes up to 80 on-air mentions before public awareness is heightened.

Ironically, amid all the hoopla and hype of the technologically enhanced delivery method of the song to the radio stations, the song arrived by phone line only one hour before the FedEx trucks would have delivered it.

Internet delivers some uneasy — and unwanted — lessons

By Jon Auerbach
N.Y. Times News Service

An unassuming fifth-grader with sweet blue eyes and a mouth full of braces, Jennifer McCoy is at the vanguard of digital education.

Seated at an Apple computer on a recent day at the Boston Renaissance Charter School, the 10-year-old was deep in concentration as she dragged her mouse in circles, guiding the outside world onto her computer screen. McCoy, however, was not perusing books at a cyber library or exploiting other on-line study resources.

"I like to read and write e-mail," she crowed as a message asking "Who do you like?" scrolled across the screen. "You shouldn't ask that," came the reply.

In the computer heady 1990s, McCoy's experience is typical. As schools across the country plug into the Internet, some education experts are asking whether students are learning from their digital sojourns.

"Sure it's fun, but we're still not dealing with the basic problem...that we do so poorly compared to kids" in many other countries, said Diane Ravitch, an education historian and senior research scholar at New York University. "To

Sony says it has plans to move into OS business

By Andrew Pollack
N.Y. Times News Service

TOKYO — In what would be an audacious move for a Japanese company, Sony Corp. is planning to develop a new software operating system, officials said Wednesday. Such operating systems, the fundamental software controlling computers and some other electronic machines, have been dominated by U.S. companies.

The officials said Sony did not intend to compete directly with Microsoft Corp. in personal computer operating systems, but was aiming at the expected market for products that combine computing with audio, video and networking capabilities.

"We would like to develop an operating system that is ideally suited for audiovisual applications," Nobuyuki Idei, Sony's president, said at a news conference called to discuss changes in Sony's corporate structure announced in January.

Minoru Morio, Sony's executive deputy president and chief technology officer, said, "As the PC merges with traditional audiovisual products, the office-oriented operating system is not necessarily the best one." The Internet will also provide opportunities for new operating systems, executives said.

Sony is entering the personal computer market in the fall, with help from Intel Corp. Its first machines will be fairly standard and will use Microsoft's operating system, but the company hopes to introduce more innovative machines, with rich audio and video capabilities, early next year.

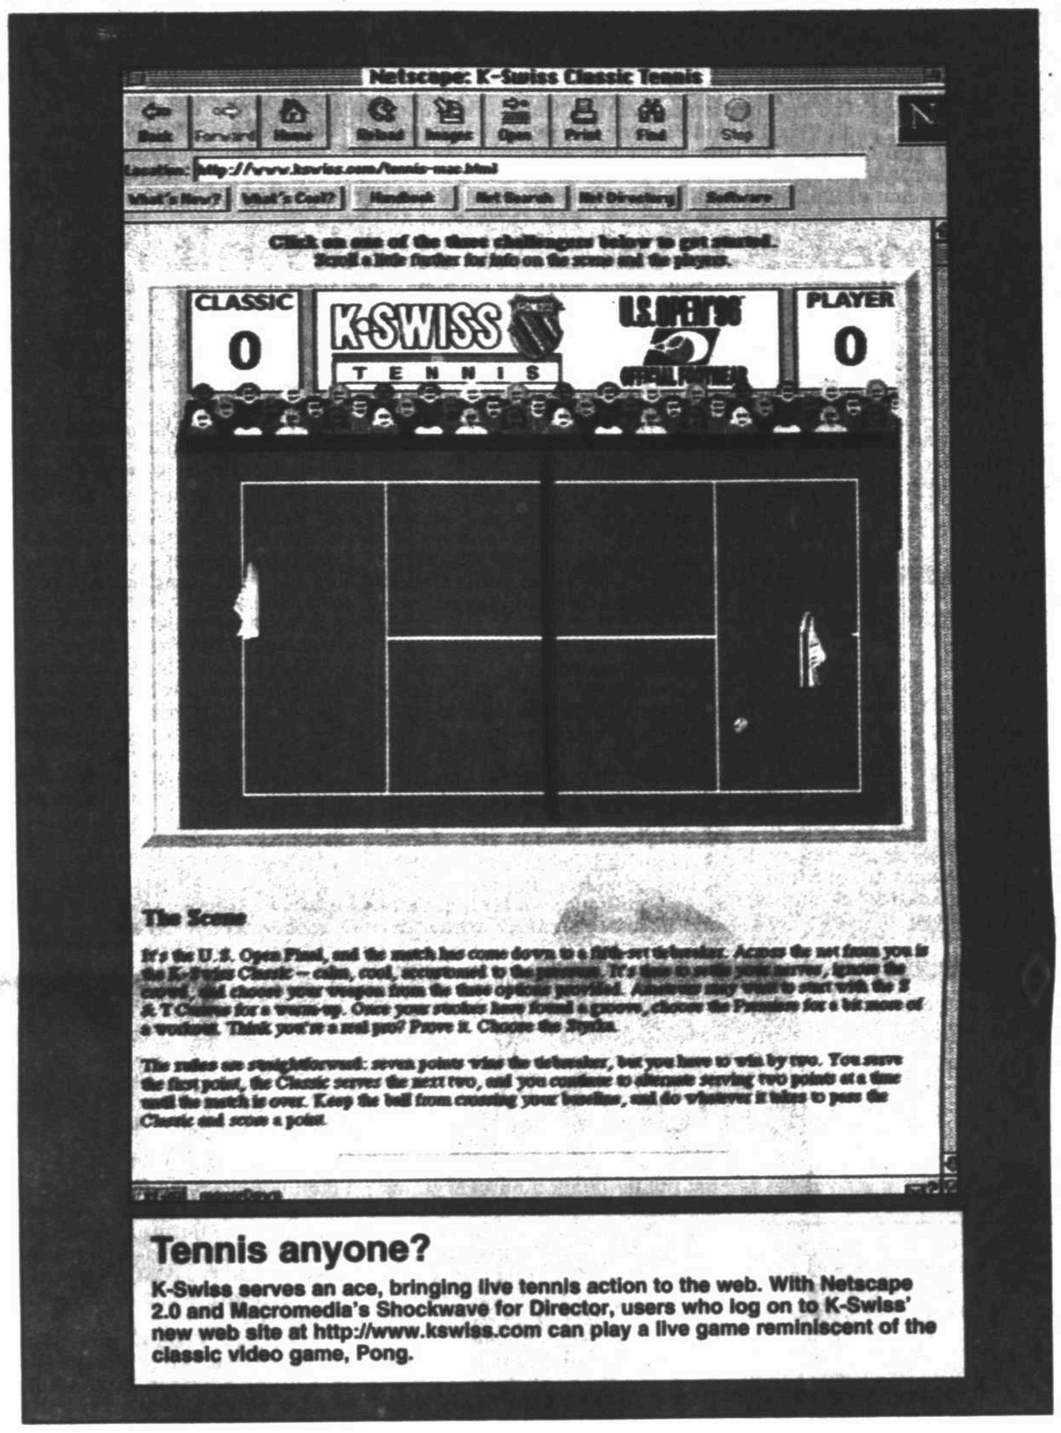

Sony officials did not give details of the operating system but it appeared that it might be based on Apertos, an operating system that Sony has been developing as a research project for several years.

Kunitake Ando, president of Sony's information technology company, said Sony wanted to market Apertos as quickly as possible and would make an announcement about that this year.

Apertos has a core that requires very little memory to store, which makes it suitable for consumer electronic devices. But other modules, known as objects, can be added over a network.

For instance, the basic software needed to reproduce

Credit card shopping relatively safe on 'Net

By Don Wittekind
N.Y. Times News Service

■ Computer Talk

Q: Is it safe to give out my credit card number over the Internet? Do merchants on the Net sell lists of credit card numbers to other merchants? A.B., Cleveland

A: This very valid question is probably the No. 1 roadblock companies face when setting up sales sites on the World Wide Web. It's no secret that most of us get an incredibly uncomfortable feeling when we consider typing in our credit card number and sending it into the depths of cyberspace.

Who's going to have access to the information? Can someone intercept it? Will it be sold? Will it be stolen? These questions generally are enough to force us out of our comfortable computer chairs for a trip to the nearest shopping mall.

Because I share these concerns (and thus have spent little money on the Internet myself), I enlisted an Internet security expert to shed a little light on the situation. His comments were reassuring — sort of.

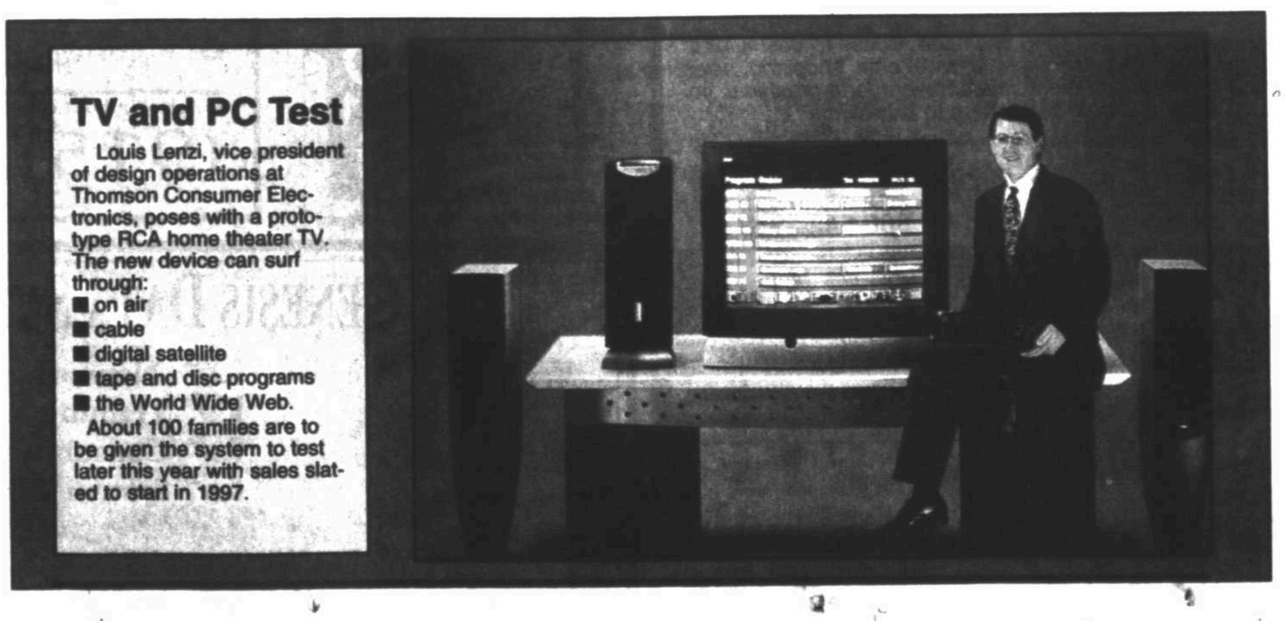

He was quick to note that we have no qualms about handing our credit cards to the 16-year- old clerk at any store in the mall. Think about it. You leave that person with a hard copy of all your information. We also love to order merchandise over the phone. Have you ever thought about how easily a phone call can be intercepted? If you have a cordless phone, you may already know.

But the point of all this is not to discredit these forms of shopping (or 16-year-old clerks, for that matter), but to put things into perspective. Safety is a relative thing, and in the case of shopping on the Internet, my expert says you're generally safer than if you shopped in person, and no less safe than if you shopped over the phone.

Your No. 1 protection, he says, is volume. There is so much information flying around out there that it would be difficult for someone to locate and grab your documents from among the rest. And, contrary to popular paranoia, your documents don't just float around out there. They follow a direct path to their destination, and that's it. Like a letter, they have been delivered.

If that's not enough to raise your comfort level, the new Netscape software offers a "secure" mode that allows you to encrypt your information at your computer, send it over the Internet and have it decoded when it arrives at its destination. This function must be supported by the vendor (it costs them a little extra), so you won't find it at every site. If you're nervous, stick with sites that offer it.

Have a question? Write to Don Wittekind, Atlanta Journal-Constitution, 72 Marietta St. N.W., Atlanta, Ga. 30303. E-mail: AJC Don on America Online; computertalk@ajc.com on the Internet.

LESSONS: Half of America's schools have partial access to Internet spend your childhood sitting in front of a blinking screen is not what we're after."

Questions about the use of the global computer network are an extension of the debate over computers in schools. A decade into that experiment, the jury is still out on whether PCs have improved education. Meanwhile, bringing the Internet to classrooms, especially for the elementary grades, raises many issues for educators to sort out.

Near the top of the list: Will the Internet hasten the growing gaps in education and access to technology that separates the country's haves and have-nots? For example, each student at the Renaissance school is given a free computer, which many are using to network with other high-tech schools. Yet in neighborhoods just a few blocks away, almost a third of residents have never even heard the word "e-mail," according to a recent study by the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

Internet proponents from Vice President Al Gore to education experts say the 'Net will do what PCs cannot. Gore envisages a day when any student can connect to the Library of Congress and gain access to millions of books, maps and other reference materials.

But even staunch computer advocates question whether the free-for-all Internet is good for children. The network is not only disorganized and often difficult to navigate, but also littered with pornography and other inappropriate material, including racy chat groups and sexually explicit sites.

"It's oversold, over-promoted and delivers far less than advertised," inveighed Clifford Stoll, author of "Silicon Snake Oil: Second Thoughts on the Information Highway" and a critic of the current hype surrounding the Internet. "It's just a distraction from real school work."

As with most red-hot technologies, there is little chance that Luddites will be able to turn back the tide as the Internet reaches into schools from Maine to Alaska.

Already, 50 percent of American schools have some access to the Internet, according to the US Department of Education. In the past year alone, the number of primary schools with classroom connections has tripled, to 9 percent.

In some areas, kindergarten toddlers are as comfortable with a computer mouse and Internet "browsers" as they are with morning naps. Students in the Southwest use the Internet to chart the migration of butterflies from South America. Elsewhere, kids go on-line to connect with "key-pals" in foreign countries. At the Renaissance school, many children no longer need to worry about handing in home work the old-fashioned way: they can file it by computer from home.

The Internet "allows students to get to someone beyond their own teacher as the expert," said Linda G. Roberts, director of the Office of Education Technology at the US Dept of Education. "They have gone literally beyond the confines of the textbook and have been able to reach out beyond their own school library."

Part of the explanation for all the excitement can be traced directly to the White House. President Clinton and his vice president are impassioned advocates of a wired educational world, arguing that it will transform teaching and learning by razing the economic barriers that separate the rich and poor. The information superhighway, they argue, will put learning tools at the fingertips of students, whether they're on Park Avenue or a dirt road in rural West Virginia.

In February Clinton issued a high-tech call to arms, proposing a plan that would provide $2 billion over five years to help every classroom in the United States get connected.

In Massachusetts, the momentum has taken hold. A program jointly sponsored by the state Department of Education and the Massachusetts Corp. for Education Telecommunications, a quasi-public organization, offers Internet access for educators.

Using the connection, teachers and administrators can swap information on curricula and teaching techniques. In coming months, the program hopes to extend into classrooms, according to Therese Perreault, its director of corporate outreach. She said about 80 percent of all district schools have already signed up for an account.

Wiring a school, however, is not as simple as plugging a telephone wire into the back of a PC. Though the lion's share of schools around the country have computers, many are outdated. Installing direct Internet connections can cost thousands of dollars, not to mention on-line charges.

Not surprisingly, some schools are being left in the digital dust. At the James P. Timilty Middle School in Boston's Roxbury neighborhood, only a few classrooms are equipped with computers, many of which are outmoded, said principal Richard Harris. Limited on-line connections allow students to use e-mail, but the school has yet to expand into broader cyberspace. "We're trying to write grants and develop resources so we can upgrade," Harris said.

The gap is perhaps most strikingly manifested by the dearth of wired homes in most city neighborhoods. The study conducted last year by the William Monroe Trotter Institute at UMass-Boston found 62.3 percent of respondents in Boston's Roxbury, Dorchester, Mattapan and Jamaica Plain sections had not even heard of the term "information superhighway." Thirty-four percent were not familiar with the word "Internet."

In this respect, the Internet is only accelerating pre-existing disparities in the country's schools, critics say. The advent of the computer age created a gap between suburban and city schools; but by allowing the schools with computers to connect with each other, the Internet is "crystallizing the existing inequities between rich schools and poor schools," said Larry Cuban, a professor of education at Stanford University and the author of a book on the effects of technology on classrooms.

To be sure, there are clearly some examples of how the Internet is bridging the gap. In many parts of the country, isolated rural schools that could not otherwise afford advanced materials, specialized teachers and information are using it to tap into global databases. "In that sense, it's leveling the playing field," said Frank Fukuyama, of the Washington office of Rand Corp., a think-tank.

But the days of digital bliss envisaged by Gore and others are far off. The number of books available on the Internet is relatively small, and many experts believe it will stay that way because of copyright laws and the sheer difficulty of scanning even a single volume into a computer. Even digital museums, one of the reasons many parents have decided to get their kids on-line, can be disappointing. "They show you three pictures, and they say they've given you a full tour of the museum," Ravitch said.

Perhaps realizing the limitations of cyberspace, many schools are taking a wait-and-see approach.

The Renaissance school has yet to provide Internet access for its students, preferring to stay in the protected world of a private computer network that links them with a handful of other schools around the country.

The school plans to integrate the Internet's World Wide Web section into the classroom in the coming weeks, but even that will be strictly controlled to ensure that children are not straying from appropriate sites.

"We just really feel that there's too much gray area out there," said Cathy Watson, the school's technical director.

Internet IPOs still a big hit on Wall Street

By Jon Swartz
N.Y. Times News Service

Internet companies are producing some of the hottest public stock offerings anywhere, but with AT&T Corp.'s decision to crash the celebration, is the party over?

Not now, at least. Lycos Inc. this week raised $87 million in a stock offering, and Excite Inc. is scheduled to follow suit later this week. Lycos shares went public at $16 and zoomed to 291/4 before closing at 21 15/16.

Yahoo! Inc. and CompuServe are fashioning a profitable climate with IPOs that are expected to gross more than $500 million between them. However, with the specter of AT&T moving into the Internet access business, others panning for Web gold may come up empty if they don't act fast.

"It's definitely reaching a saturation point," said Adam Schoenfeld, senior analyst at Jupiter Communications in New York. "Internet mania might happily go along and pour money into these issues. On the other hand, these are companies with very low revenues and almost no earnings.

"This (search engine) market is not for the faint of heart."

For now, however, the vitality of the technology — which allows users to find specific topics on the Net — is sending investors' hearts racing with a string of highly successful IPOs.

Although Yahoo!, a company that provides searching capability on the Internet, lost $634,000 on sales of $1.4 million in its first 10 months of operation, company cofounders David Filo and Jerry Yang are probably doing cartwheels and shouting, "Yippee!" That's because they stand to make an eye-popping $60 million each from an offering worth about $300 million.

Yahoo! is generating the most buzz in the investment community since Netscape Communications' IPO racked in $140 million last fall. And CompuServe plans to raise a jaw-dropping $432 million to $480 million in an IPO, according to a registration statement filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission in February.

"As long as John Q. Public is still tossing money in, the market will be strong," said John Robb, an analyst at Forrester Research in Cambridge, Mass.

But there are signs the financial well is drying up. Uunet Technology Inc. last month scrapped plans to sell 6.6 million shares in a secondary offering because its stock had skidded. A few days later, PsiNet Inc. withdrew its proposal to buy a 33-percent stake in NetVision Ltd., an Israeli-based company. Still others — including Netcom On-line Communication Services Inc., Infoseek Corp. and McKinley Group Inc. — are frantically pursuing IPOs while venture capital money is there or they are seeking strategic partners and mergers, sources said.

Digital Equipment Corp. is considering spinning off products from its wildly popular Alta Vista search site, although the service isn't likely to go public.

Worse yet, the Big Three services — America Online Inc., CompuServe and Prodigy Services Co. — are offering Internet-only services, just like thousands of tiny, local Internet access providers.

The rush to go public became frantic in February, when AT&T said it would offer low-cost consumer and business Internet services and directly compete with Internet access providers, as well as scores of smaller companies with less than 5,000 subscribers. MCI Communications Corp. followed AT&T's footsteps several weeks later, when it lowered prices on its consumer Internet service.

"The likelihood is that some Internet access providers won't survive unless they partner with a major company, like a regional Bell operating company or long-distance provider, that doesn't have the facilities already in place," Schoenfeld said.

Others, however, think AT&T could further legitimize the fledgling Internet market. "AT&T is seen as a horrible corporate monster, but in reality, it is making the Net a tremendous mass medium and it is creating incredible interest," said Peter Krasilovsky, senior analyst at Arlen Communications of Bethesda, Md. "It is validating the Internet."

SONY: Japanese companies long frustrated at American dominance high-quality sound can be downloaded to a computer or television set top box just when the consumer wants to receive a broadcast of a concert. Sony has said Apertos would be ideal for video on demand applications.

But Sony has its work cut out for it. Microsoft, Apple Computer and others are developing operating software for handling audio and video. Sun Microsystems' Java looks as if it will do what Sony hopes its system will do over networks.

Apertos was developed at Sony's Computer Science Laboratory, which is the company's attempt to duplicate, on a small scale, the free-wheeling atmosphere of Xerox Corp.'s Palo Alto Research Center, which originated many computer concepts. The Sony lab, with about 18 researchers, is free from many of the company's usual rules and hires people on a contract basis.

Japanese companies have long been frustrated that U.S. companies dominate two key pieces of computing — microprocessors and operating system. A project called TRON, started in the 1980s by Tokyo University and Japanese companies to develop microprocessors and operating systems, did not come up with successful products.

Online democracy: Yes, no or undecided?

By Reva Basch
N.Y. Times News Service

Now that the O. J. trial is well over, maybe the media can turn its attention to some other newsworthy events, such as campaign politics.

What better way to track the mood of the American people than on the Net, where everybody seems to have an opinion about everything and no hesitation about expressing it?

It turns out that while some of us were glued to our TVs waiting for that verdict to come down, a venture called Votelink was busy wiring the Web to take the nation's political pulse.

The Votelink Web site (http://www.votelink.com), named Best Interactive Site by GNN's Best of the Net, is a forum for public opinion on everything from global politics (Australia: Nuclear Testing Off-Shore?) to regional issues (Should the California State Assembly Pass the "Paddling Bill?") to whether Calvin, of the late, lamented Calvin and Hobbes comic strip, would grow up to be a hopeless psychopath.

Visitors to the site can cast their virtual ballots in upcoming presidential primaries, or express their views on national issues and immediately see where they stand compared to their fellow Net-Americans.

At press time, the leading question was whether Hillary's public image was hurting Bill's chances. Voting results turned up 45 percent yea, 51 percent nay and 4 percent undecided.

The Boulder, Colo.-based Votelink calls itself the "Voice of the Net." Backers of the venture feel that its real-time sampling of informed, plugged-in citizens could transform politics-as-usual into instantaneous electronic democracy.

To that end, Votelink is offering campaign organizers nationwide an Online Election Kit, which enables political workers to distribute information about candidates and issues, accept donations and volunteer support, and conduct straw polls and electronic town meetings on the World Wide Web. Votelink's national aspirations are supported in part by a strategic partnership with The WELL, one of the most opinionated and articulate cyber communities on the Net.

Will the Net turn out to be a key precinct as Campaign '96 gears up? It's still too early to call, but we'll see in the coming months as the returns start rolling in.

Microsoft to fill missing link, market new e-mail software

By Jim Erickson
N.Y. Times News Service

SEATTLE — Microsoft Corp. this week will plug a gap in its growing line of software for corporate computer networks when it starts selling the long-awaited Exchange e-mail and groupware program.

The company is having increasing success wooing large businesses over to its BackOffice line of products, an assortment of programs based on the advanced Windows NT Server operating system for running networks of desktop computers and PC databases.

But for the past several years, Microsoft has not had an up-to-date electronic-mail or "groupware" program for enhancing the productivity of office workers.

Microsoft Exchange Server "is the missing link in Backoffice," said Greg Lobdell, a Microsoft product manager. Among other features, the software allows workers to send electronic messages, collaborate online on projects, share documents electronically and link up easily with the Internet. Depending partly on computer hardware, Exchange can handle thousands of individual users.

Microsoft Chairman Bill Gates is expected to officially launch the product in a speech Tuesday at the Networld/Interop '96 industry conference in Las Vegas.

More than six years in development, Exchange is about two years behind its original delivery date. Although its absence has cost Microsoft revenue from the $1.5 billion corporate messaging market, "whatever harm that's been done is passed," said Mark Levitt, an electronic messaging analyst at IDC, a Framingham, Mass., research and consulting firm.

Levitt pointed out that two of Exchange's main competing groupware and messaging systems have also been delayed. Lotus Development Corp.'s newest version of its popular Notes groupware was late to market when it was released three months ago, and Novell's Groupwise XTD might not be out until fall, Levitt said.

Exchange originally was designed as a replacement for Microsoft's first e-mail program. But the market kept changing during development. Lotus' Notes showed there was a market for messaging products that simplified how people could work together over computer networks. Microsoft turned Exchange into a "Notes killer" by adding workgroup features.

But corporate America's adoption of the Internet as a cheap way of expanding and enhancing in-house computer networks forced Microsoft to adapt the product again.

The delays have given Microsoft a chance to extensively test Exchange and to "promote the heck out of it," Levitt said. The company also had a chance to respond to Lotus' deep price cuts in Notes in December. Lotus is a subsidiary of IBM Corp.

"Being a couple years late, people are pretty cynical about this product," Lobdell acknowledged.

But at the launch, Microsoft will be able to announce an impressive list of clients who already have committed to use Exchange. The Boeing Co., for example, is using Exchange as its primary messaging and work-group platform for 65,000 employees around the world.

"Although it's late, it will be very reliable and very robust," said Eric Brown, senior analyst for Forrester Research Inc. in Cambridge, Mass.

Lobdell said Exchange has some unique features, including easy network administration. The system can even dial the pagers of network technicians to alert them when memory banks are becoming full. Exchange also was designed to ensure that mail is delivered and data are not corrupted in transmission, he said.

Exchange's main weakness, analysts said, is that it can run only on Windows NT Server. While that product is making positive strides, versions of the Unix operating system are more prevalent in corporate America, so Microsoft may be shutting itself out of a portion of the market.

However, Lobdell said, "We found very few customers where the server platform was an issue."

"The fact that it only runs on NT is not a big deal in my mind," Brown said.

"Feature for feature, they (Lotus Notes and Microsoft Exchange) are pretty close," Levitt said. But the market for messaging and other groupware is already crowded with such companies as Hewlett-Packard and Banyon Systems, with more wading in. For example, America Online, the nation's largest computer online service, said last week that it has established a new division to cater to the e-mail and groupware needs of corporations.

Netscape Communications Corp. recently bought small companies with groupware and e-mail technology to add those features to its market-leading line of Internet software.

"No e-mail or groupware product today can avoid having Internet connectivity," Levitt said. "Every vendor today is acting like its product is designed for the Internet."

Microsoft is no exception. Code has been added to Exchange that allows one-click access to an Internet "browser," such as Microsoft Internet Explorer and Netscape Navigator.

Exchange also can send messages to branch offices over the Internet, Lobdell said.

St. Nicholas offers many special interest groups

St. Nicholas' Episcopal Church 2900 Princeton, offers a variety of programs that target people of all ages, ranging from the very young to the young at heart.

Sunday services are held at 8 a.m., 10:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. each week and healing service is conducted at 5:30 p.m. each Thursday. Sunday School starts at 9:15 a.m. with classes for children of all ages and adults. A nursery is provided for the morning services and during Sunday School for infants.

During the third Sunday of each month, the 10:30 a.m. service features "folk music" from the 1982 Hymnal and "Come Celebrate" and a variety of instruments, such as keyboard, guitar, flute and percussion.

Similar music is used also during the 5:30 p.m. service on the second and fourth Sundays of the month.

A prayer ministry also is conducted each Sunday during the morning services. People who want their special needs prayed for may visit the Prayer Ministry team in the chapel during communion.

And young children get a service geared to their level of understanding each week at the 10:30 session. Shortly after the service begins, the youngsters process to the chapel where they hear the same lessons as their parents are hearing, but in a format they can understand. The children join their parents in the sanctuary for communion.

St. Nicholas' Episcopal Church is located at 2900 Princeton. Sunday services are held at 8 a.m., 10:30 a.m., and 5:30 p.m.

Junior high and high school students build fellowship during special Sunday evening events.

Small groups continue the work of the church during the week. These give people a more intimate setting to focus on their specific interests needs. Small groups include: Crossways Class, meets at noon Mondays to study the Bible; Tuesday Evening Bible Study, meets at 7:30 p.m. in members' homes; Men's Morning Prayer, meets at 7 a.m. Wednesdays in the chapel; Wednesday Evening Bible Study at 7:30 p.m. for young adults; Discipleship Class, meets at noon Thursdays in the Parlor; Reading Group, meets second and fourth Thursdays at 7:30 p.m.; Breaking Bread Groups that meet for fellowship about four times a year; and Daughters of the King which is dedicated to prayer and service for Episcopal Women.

The Reading Group currently is viewing a video series on "The Bible and History," described by Archeology Magazine as "the best program of this type ever made." Classes are scheduled at 7:30 p.m. April 11 and 25, May 9 and 23 and June 13.

Special interest classes are held periodically. Fr. Allen Whitman will start a series on "Great Religions of the World" at 7 p.m. April 15 at the church. The first five-week session will focus on "Hinduism and Buddhism." Textbooks will be ordered and people interested in the class are asked to make a reservation by calling the church office at 694-8856

The spring luncheon sponsored by the Episcopal Church Women is planned for Saturday, April 13, and will feature speaker Billie Brooks of Dallas Prayer Ministry.

West Kentucky Baptist experiences growth

West Kentucky Baptist Church is located at 1507 West Kentucky. Sunday services begin at 10 a.m. for Sunday School followed by 11 a.m. worship services.

In the last year, West Kentucky Baptist Church has really grown. Our new addition to the building is beginning to fill up with new faces every week. Brother Bob Porterfield serves our church as a dedicated pastor. His family also actively participates in different areas of the church. His wife Delphi teaches our women's "65 years and older" Sunday School class, his son Steve is our pianist and also teaches our "teen" Sunday School class, and finally, his daughter Anne heads our Acteen class along with other special areas.

West Kentucky invites you to come to our Sunday School classes that begin at 10 a.m. followed by our 11 o'clock worship service. Children's Church also meets at this time. Our Sunday evening Bible study and our youth group meets at 5:45 followed by our evening worship service at 7 p.m.

We would also like you to join us at 7:00 Wednesday evening for our weekly prayer meeting and choir practice at 8 p.m.

Girls in Action (GA's) and Royal Ambassadors (RA's) also meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday evenings. We always welcome new faces to join in worshiping our Lord and Savior and to participate in the fellowship that we truly cherish at West Kentucky.

West Kentucky Baptist Church and our 22 member choir cordially invites you to join us on April 7 at 11 a.m. for our Easter cantata titled "Won by One". We hope to see you there.

Christian Church of Midland celebrates 30th anniversary

The Christian Church of Midland will celebrate its 30th anniversary on May 26th, 1996. Anniversary and homecoming activities are being planned with a picnic at Hogan Park for all members, former members, and friends on that day.

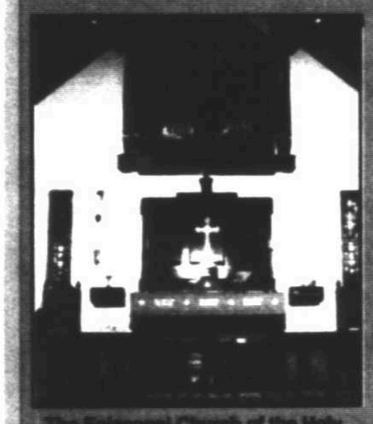

The church was started in 1966, and the congregation met at Rusk Elementary and Midland Christian School until 1968 when construction began on the first unit of the present facility.

The congregation built the first unit of the present sanctuary in 1973. In 1984 the house and lot next door were purchased and is occupied by the church preschool (Heritage Preschool).

Bobby C. Duncan accepted the position of senior minister in October 1990 after having served as Associate Minister since August 1981. Lee Graham began his ministry as Youth/Education minister in February 1996.

The church offers Sunday School classes for toddlers through adults at 9:45 a.m. on Sundays, and morning worship services at 10:45 a.m. Sunday evening services for the family are held at 6 p.m. and Wednesday evening services are held at 7 p.m.

Easter at Holy Trinity

The Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, located at 1400 W. Illinois, will begin their Easter celebration at 7 pm on Easter Eve.

The Easter Day celebration at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, 1400 W. Illinois, begins at 7pm on Easter Eve with The Great Vigil of Easter. The Easter Vigil developed in the first years of Christianity as the ancient Church's way to celebrate Jesus' resurrection. The service can be found in written form as early as the second century, and in those days lasted for many hours: from after sundown until the first light of dawn, when the Easter Eucharist was celebrated.

Since Paul teaches, in Romans 6, and elsewhere, that baptism is dying and rising with Christ, Easter was the time for baptisms in the early Church. As Jesus is the light of the world, driving away the darkness of evil, sin, and death, a nighttime celebration began with a blaze of fire that was spread to each worshiper's candle, affirming the light of Christ shining in every baptized member. Then the retelling of the salvation history from Scripture, always including the deliverance at the Red Sea, reminded the Christian community of its place and purpose in the stream of God's history and purposes, and of God's nature as loving savior. Finally, the bread and wine of the Eucharist sustained the Body of Christ in its ongoing mission in the service of God's reign on earth.

The Vigil at Holy Trinity begins as in the earliest days of Christianity, with the lighting of the New Fire, from which the Paschal (Passover) Candle is lit. At various points in the service, the Paschal Candle symbolizes the light God made at the beginning of creation, the pillar of fire and cloud that led the Israelites from Egypt into freedom, and the flame of the Holy Spirit.

Above all, however, the Paschal Candle represents the presence of the Risen Christ, and will continue to be lit during all the services throughout the Easter Season, the "Great Fifty Days of Easter," which end with the Day of Pentecost (Acts 2). The Candle serves as a reminder that Christ's light enlightens our dark lives, and that in Baptism we die with Christ and in Baptism we shall also rise with Christ. Thus, even after the Easter Season, we light the Paschal Candle for baptisms and for burials.

The Liturgy of the Word consists of Scripture readings, psalms, biblical canticles, and prayers, all of which recall God's great acts of creation/redemption throughout history. During the Liturgy of the Word, the Church remains in near-darkness.

The service of Baptism not only includes the baptism of new members of the family of God, the Body of Christ, it also provides an opportunity for all present to recall the event of their own baptisms and to renew their own baptismal covenant.

At Holy Trinity, we "recess" the service following the Baptisms, continuing our joyous celebration of the great victory of our resurrected Lord and Savior the following day in Eucharists ("thanksgivings") at 7:30am, 9am, 11:05am, and 5:15pm. Other festivities include an Easter Egg Hunt on the front lawn, and an Easter Party in the Parish Hall, both beginning around 10:15 am. Join us as we celebrate the Good News of Jesus' resurrection, and our resurrections in Him.

America's team in troubled time

■ Dallas Cowboys have gone through difficult times recently.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Amid drug suspensions and drug charges, suits and countersuits, one good thing did happen to the Dallas Cowboys this year. They won their third Super Bowl in four seasons.

It's become an almost forgotten accomplishment during this time of trouble for the franchise that likes to think of itself as "America's Team."

By itself, Michael Irvin's indictment on drug possession charges would have been bad enough. But it only capped a series of Cowboys lowlights over the past 18 months:

— Jerry Jones' war with the NFL over marketing and revenue sharing policies. It has resulted in suit and countersuit — $300 million by the league, $700 million by the Cowboys.

— A troubled 1995 regular season that included injuries and controversies, some over the coaching. "Bozo the Coach," blared one headline after a loss in Philadelphia for which Barry Switzer was blamed.

"I never had a game in which I had fun," quarterback Troy Aikman moaned during the playoffs.

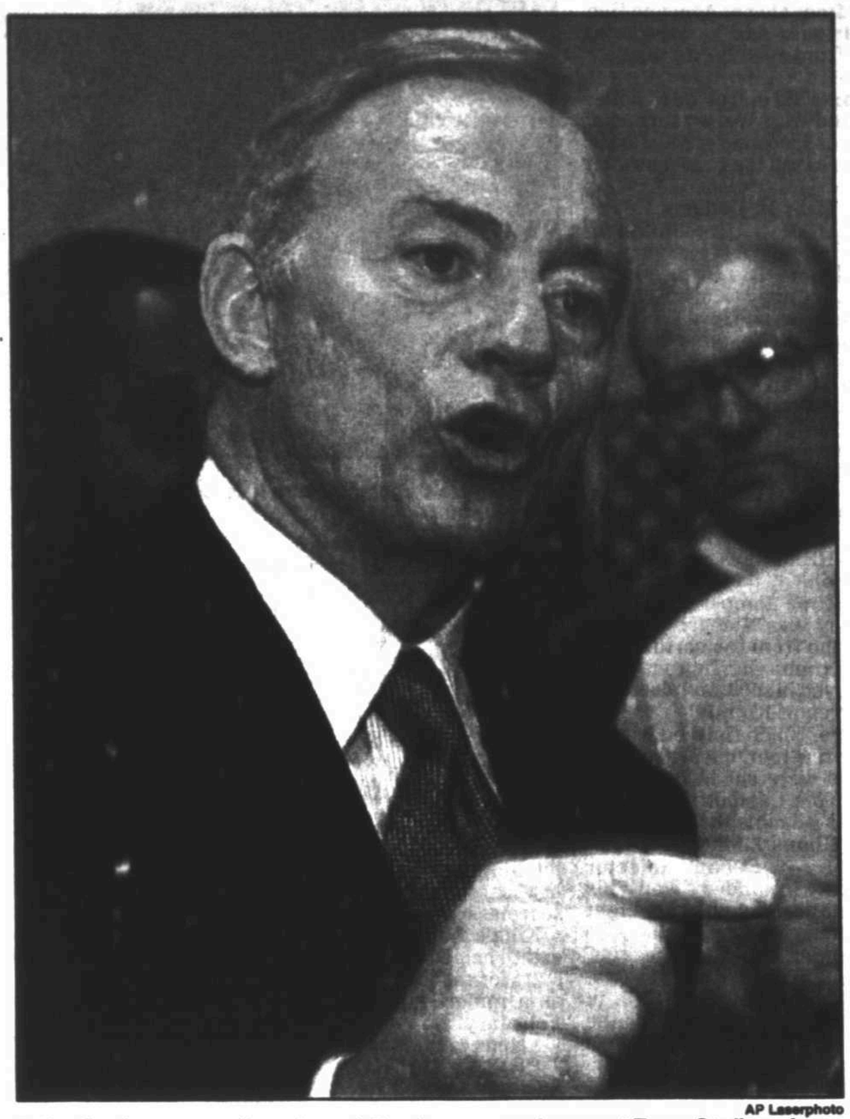

— Four defensive starters lost to free agency, eroding the last bit of depth on a team that once was two-deep at almost every position.

— Two players, Leon Lett and Clayton Holmes, suspended for testing positive for illegal substances. Erik Williams and Cory Fleming were convicted of driving while intoxicated, and Williams was charged with sexual assault on a 17-year-old.

It's an outlaw image, and to many Texans the head outlaws are Jones and Switzer.

Jones hasn't hidden his own fondness for late nights and living large, and

Jones critical of Irvin's judgement, thinks addiction to drugs unlikely

The Associated Press

IRVING — Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones says he is confident the All-Pro wide receiver Michael Irvin doesn't have a drug problem despite his indictment on cocaine and marijuana charges.

"Michael has been in the league since 1988 and has never had any positive tests while he has been under the scrutiny of the NFL, which has as stringent a standard as there is in our society," Jones told The Dallas Morning News.

Irvin is free on $5,500 bond after his indictment Monday on charges of cocaine and marijuana possession.

"I think it is very unfortunate that the circumstances of his bad judgment and subsequent indictment overshadow the fact he has never tested positive," Jones said Thursday.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram, quoting an unidentified source, reported that Irvin is risking suspension for his failure to respond to an NFL letter informing him of plans to enroll him in the first stage of the league's substance abuse program.

In an interview with The Morning News, Jones said he met Thursday with Irvin who promised to be cooperative and responsive to the league's requirement to submit to a medical evaluation of whether he has a chemical dependency.

The drugs were found in a motel room that police entered in the early morning hours of March 4. Irvin was

Angel opener will be one for record books

■ Season opener delayed yet again. This time due to snow, forcing today's doubleheader.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The 1996 Midland Angels haven't even played a game in the Texas League, but the team has already gone in the record book several times.

Thursday's home opener against the San Antonio Missions was postponed due to rain. Now Friday's rescheduled home opener between those same two teams has been postponed due to snow.

That was the record clincher. It was the first Texas League game in Midland ever postponed by snow.

The two teams are scheduled to play again today in Home Opener III and the Missions and Angels will double your pleasure with a twinbill, beginning at 5:30 p.m. Gates will open at 5 p.m.

That brings another record since the Texas League season has never been opened in Midland with a doubleheader.

On top of the home opening woes, the two teams will have to play another 5:30 p.m. doubleheader on Sunday with the gates opening at 4:30 p.m. That brings another record. It will be the first time for the season to start with back-to-back doubleheaders.

The unexpected winter blast will undoubtedly cause some problems for both the Missions and Angels in the first half Texas League West race. A drain on the pitching staffs of the two clubs will occur quickly. Usually, you play the first

1996 TEXAS RANGERS

Juan Gone-zalez returns to Ranger lineup

By Denne H. Freeman
Associated Press

ARLINGTON — After a lost 1995 season, Juan Gonzalez has found his game again both at the plate and in the field.

The Texas Rangers jumped to a 3-0 start for the first time in four years and Gonzalez showed what he can do with the bat when he is pain free.

He had seven RBI and a three-run homer in a recent series sweep of the Boston Red Sox. He also made some smart plays in right field, which is tough to play in The Ballpark at Arlington because of its many sharp angles.

"I think I'm ready to have a big season," Gonzalez said. "Everything is beginning to feel like it used to."

Gonzalez terrorized American League pitching until back and neck injuries brought him down. He hit 43 homers in 1992 and 46 the next season.

He was an early bird at spring training, determined to beat his bad luck.

Said Gonzalez: "I worked on my body, especially the back. I'm in great condition, and I'll be ready every day this year."

He was relegated to being the Rangers' designated hitter for 85 of the 90 games in which he played in last season.

"Last year was a bad time for me, because I played only five games in the field and the rest I was the DH," he said.

"It was tough. When the inning is over, you go inside and stretch; then you come back and hit, then you go back to the bench and then do it all over again. It's a hard time for a young player."

Gonzalez was moved from left to right field, where he'll be able to put his strong arm to good use. In the season opener against Boston, he put his speed and glove to use.

He moved quickly to the line to cut off

Parish ties NBA record for most games played

■ Robert Parish ties Kareem Abdul-Jabbar for the most games played in NBA history.

By Joe Macenka
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Robert Parish tied Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's record for the most games played in NBA history when he started the Charlotte Hornets' game Friday night against the Chicago Bulls.

■ NBA Roundup/4C

It was the 1,560th game for Parish, who is nearing the end of his 20th season in the league. Parish, at 42 the league's oldest player, is in his second season in Charlotte after spending four years with Golden State and 14 with Boston.

The 314th consecutive sellout crowd of 24,042 rose as one at the Charlotte Coliseum when Parish jogged onto the floor during the introduction of the starting lineups. Parish waved to the fans but fought back a smile.

Several banners graced the inside of the coliseum to commemorate the occasion, including one that said "HAIL TO THE CHIEF!"

Parish was given the nickname "Chief" by former Celtics teammate Cedric Maxwell, who said the stone-faced center reminded him of Chief Bromden in the movie, "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest."

The team planned a formal tribute to Parish at halftime, when he was to receive several gifts, including a grandfather clock. Parish earlier this year became a grandfather for the second time.

During timeouts, the team played videotaped messages to Parish on the coliseum's giant scoreboard monitors. The messages were from current and former players as well as NBA commissioner David Stern.

Parish, who will likely break the record Saturday night when the Hornets visit Cleveland, has said he would like to play one more season but that he will make a firm decision.

Coach Allan Bristow kept Parish busy as the record approached by making him a starter as part of a switch to a two-center lineup. Heading into Friday night's contest, Parish was averaging 30 minutes, 9.4 points, 9.7 rebounds and 2.9 blocks over his previous seven games.

J.C. Snead shoots good round on bad day, captures one-stroke lead at The Tradition

By Mel Reisner
Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — The weather took some shots away from J.C. Snead. Then it gave one back.

Snead hit a 403-yard drive on the 14th hole of the Cochise Course at Desert Mountain, beginning a string of three birdies in the last five holes, and went on to lead The Tradition at the midpoint by one shot over Raymond Floyd.

"I think I've hit it that far before, but it was a long time ago," Snead said about his wind-assisted drive on a hole which usually plays into the wind. "I hit it absolutely perfect for the conditions — down the left side, hit the hill just right, got a lot of roll."

His second straight 69 and total of 6-under-par 138 didn't look like much, but it was enough to bring him from four shots back in the year's first senior major. Considering the erratic gusts of 25-40 mph that whipped the 6,891-yard mountainside layout, it was a masterpiece.

By comparison, first-round co-leaders Ed Sneed and Hale Irwin shot 75 and 76, respectively.

Jack Nicklaus, who designed the course, carded a 74, and Jim Colbert had a 76. Only nine of 78 players broke par, and the wind badgered Ken Still into a 14-over 86.

Floyd showed remarkable steadiness in playing the last 10 holes in par for a 72.

Sneed, Butch Baird, DeWitt Weaver and Tom Weiskopf, whose 68 was the best round of the day, were grouped at 140.

Weiskopf, the winner at San Antonio last week, lives in nearby Paradise Valley. He said he wasn't surprised that Snead and Floyd were ahead.

"J.C. and Ray are good wind players," he said. "It was gusty, gale-like winds today. This is more of a Florida-type wind. It's unusual to have winds like this here."

Irwin, Bob Murphy, Larry Gilbert and Bob Dickson were three shots behind.

Nicklaus, who is trying to become the first senior player to win the same tournament four times, was at 142 with Colbert, Jay Sigel and Isao Aoki. Nicklaus won last year by beating Aoki in a three-hole playoff.

Floyd, the 1994 champion, said he had played in Florida gales conditions, but hadn't seen anything like it in the Tradition.

Tony Gwynn leads Padres over Astros

The Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

HOUSTON — Tony Gwynn kept up his quick start with three more hits, including a two-run double as the San Diego Padres beat the Houston Astros 10-4 Friday night.

Gwynn, a six-time NL batting champion, is 8-for-14 (.571) this season. Coming off the 27th four-hit game of his career Wednesday night, he went 3-for-6.

Rickey Henderson hit a bases-loaded triple, helping Bob Tewksbury win his debut for the Padres.

Gwynn's double tipped off the glove of center fielder Brian Hunter, keying a four-run burst in the fifth inning for a 5-0 lead. The hit made Gwynn a career .440 hitter against Darryl Kile (0-1).

Jeff Bagwell homered in the sixth for Houston and pinch-hitter Tony Eusebio's three-run homer off reliever Fernando Valenzuela in the eighth pulled the Astros to 5-4.

Henderson tripled off Mark Small for his second hit of the game, highlighting a five-run ninth.

Tewksbury shut out the Astros until Bagwell hit his second home run of the season. Tewksbury, who walked two and struck out two, had retired 10 batters in a row before the homer.

Expos 6, Rockies 4

MONTREAL — The Montreal Expos rallied for three runs in the sixth inniong against a shaky Colorado Rockies bullpen Friday to earn a 6-4 win in their home opener.

Trailing 4-3, the Expos bunched a bloop single by pinch hitter Sherman Obando, a fielder's choice and infield singles by Mark Grudzielanek and Rondell White to win their third straight.

Mike Munoz (0-1) relieved starter Armando Reynoso in the sixth and allowed a leadoff single to David Segui. After an out, Munoz hit Darrin Fletcher. Darren Holmes relieved and got Dave Silvestri to ground into a fielder's choice, moving Segui to third.

Obando pinch hit for reliever Mike Dyer and dropped a broken-bat single in front of center fielder Larry Walker, scoring Segui to make it 4-4. Grudzielanek's infield single scored Silvestri and Mike Lansing walked to load the bases. White followed with another infield single to make it 6-4.

Dyer (1-0), who started the fifth in relief of starter Rheal Cormier, pitched two innings, allowing Vinny Castilla's first home run.

Mel Rojas got the last four outs for his first save.

After Ellis Burks homered in the Rockies first, the Expos got RBI-singles from Moises Alou and Henry Rodriguez and a run-scoring double from Fletcher to take a 3-1 lead.

Reynoso led off the third with a single and Walt Weiss reached on Silvestri's throwing error. Burks' double cleared the bases, making it 3-3.

Cubs 11, Dodgers 1

CHICAGO — Jim Bullinger allowed five hits over eight innings and had two RBIs Friday as the Chicago Cubs scored seven unearned runs and beat Los Angeles, sending the wind-whipped Dodgers to their fourth straight loss.

Bullinger (1-0) walked three and matched a career-high with eight strikeouts before giving way to Mike Perez in the ninth.

Meanwhile, Mark Grace continued his hot hitting at cold Wrigley Field, going 3-for-3 with two walks and two RBIs. He is now 10-for-17 this season.

Game-time temperature on a sunny day was 36 degrees with a biting wind from the northeast at 13 to 20 mph. On Thursday the team played in snow and sleet with a 12-degree wind chill.

Chicago, which finished with 16 hits, scored four unearned runs after two were out in the fourth against Tom Candiotti (0-1) with Bullinger's double the key.

Giants 7, Marlins 1

MIAMI — Cuban defector Osvaldo Fernandez won his major-league debut with eight strong innings.

Fernandez allowed one run, struck out five and walked two. The right-hander was 22-0 in international competition for the Cuban national team before defecting last July while at a tournament in Millington, Tenn.

Stan Javier led off the game with a homer, and Barry Bonds hit a two-run homer and added an RBI triple for the Giants.

Gary Sheffield homered for the Marlins lone run.

The Giants won a bidding war among nine teams, including Florida, to sign Fernandez to a 3-year contract. It guarantees him $3.2 million and contains an additional $700,000 in incentives.

The 27-year-old was 0-2 with a 9.45 ERA during spring training, giving up 30 hits in 20 innings.

Philadelphia's Lenny Dykstra is forced on a double play by Cincinnati's Barry Larkin.

Pirates 7, Mets 5

NEW YORK — Al Martin homered twice and Zane Smith earned a victory in his return to the Pirates rotation.

Martin homered in the first inning, then capped a three-run seventh with a two-run shot off loser Dave Mlicki, making his first start. It was the first two-homer game in Martin's five-year career.

Jeff King also homered for the Pirates.

Smith, who spent parts of five seasons with the Pirates before pitching for the Boston Red Sox last season, allowed five hits in five scoreless innings.

King's homer leading off the eighth helped Smith win in his first start for the Pirates since signing as a minor-league free agent in February.

Reds 6, Phillies 5, 10 innings

PHILADELPHIA — Barry Larkin homered one pitch after being brushed back to lead off the 10th inning for the Reds.

Phillies reliever Toby Borland threw a high, inside pitch to Larkin, backing the 1995 National League MVP out of the batter's box. Larkin drove the next pitch over the left-field fence for his second homer. Pinch hitter Eric Owens's RBI single gave the Reds a 6-4 lead.

Jeff Shaw (1-1) picked up the win, allowing one hit — a game-tying homer to rookie Kevin Jordan in the ninth inning — in 2 1-3 innings. Marcus Moore gave up an RBI double to Benito Santiago in the 10th, but struck out Pete Incaviglia and Jordan with runners at first and second for his second save.

The Reds took a 4-3 lead into the ninth, but Jordan led off with his second big homer in as many nights. On Thursday, he put the Phillies ahead for good with a two-run shot Thursday against Colorado.

Cardinals 5, Braves 4, 14 innings

ATLANTA — Ron Gant walked on four pitches with the bases loaded in the 14th.

With one out, loser Mike Bielecki walked John Mabry, who moved up on a fielder's choice. Royce Clayton was walked intentionally and pinch hitter Ozzie Smith's hit loaded the bases. Gant, who homered earlier, walked on four pitches.

Rookie Corey Bailey, the fifth Cardinal reliever, worked 2 1-3 scoreless innings for his first major league win. Dennis Eckersley struck out David Justice and Fred McGriff before getting Javy Lopez on a grounder to end the four hour, 25-minute game.

Six St. Louis releivers combined to shut out the Braves on three hits over the final eight innings.

McGriff had four hits, including a homer, for the Braves. Marquis Grissom added a homer for Atlanta.

Atlanta Braves fans just not filling stadium

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — It was a beautiful night for baseball. The temperature at game time was a short-sleeve-wearing 68 degrees. The sky was clear, and a full moon hovered over Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

But when the World Series champion Atlanta Braves took the field, the stadium was no more than half filled. Even the private box of owner Ted Turner was mostly empty.

Is this any way for a city to react to its first championship team?

"It's only (three) games into the season," outfielder David Justice said. "It's a little early to be knocking the fans. They'll be back."

Even with a World Series-winning team, the Braves aren't the automatic sellout they were in the tomahawk-waving days of the early '90s, when they drew more than 3 million fans two years in a row.

Opening day against the San Francisco Giants was a sellout, but thousands of fans failed to show on a cold, windy day.

The crowds dropped sharply the next two games. Tickets sold amounted to 28,728 Wednesday and 30,271 Thursday, though the actual crowds were likely no more than 25,000 either night in the 49,000-seat stadium.

"There's still lingering resentment over the strike," said Sid McDonough, who was at Wednesday's game.

Atlanta's attendance, which reach a record of high of more than 3.8 million in 1993, dropped to 2.5 million in both 1994 and '95, seasons that were shortened by strikes.

The sports dollar in Atlanta is especially tight this year, with many people spending thousands of dollars on once-in-a-lifetime Olympic tickets.

"I think ticket sales may suffer a little in May and June," pitcher Mark Wohlers said. "Hotels are getting booked up for the Olympics. That could hurt our regional-type audience."

Plus, the euphoria that is going on in Cleveland — the Indians have sold out all of their homes games after their first pennant in four decades — has worn off in Atlanta. The Braves, a worst-to-first wonder in the early '90s, are expected to get back to the World Series for the fourth time in six years.

"When you look at what this ballclub is expected to do," pitcher Tom Glavine said, "not many people are going to come out here in April and May."

Especially with all the Olympic construction, which has turned the area around Atlanta Stadium into a sea of barricades, fences and "Do Not Enter" signs.

It will all seem worthwhile next year when the Braves move into the new stadium. Thirty-year-old Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium is scheduled for demolition, with the site used to bring parking capacity back to acceptable standards in this car-crazy city.

In the meantime, though, parking is especially tight and traffic can be a nightmare even on nights when there are thousands of empty seats.

a sharp drive by Mo Vaughn and hold him to a single instead of what would have been a sure triple.

"I'm still getting used to the tricks of playing in this stadium but I learn everyday I'm out there," Gonzalez said. "I'm feeling comfortable."

Gonzalez, a free swinger, also is trying to learn patience at the plate. In the Red Sox series, he walked three times in a game for the first time in his career.

"If he keeps doing that, he could have a monster year," coach Rudy Jaramillo said. "If Juan eliminates the bad pitches, look out."

Being a DH hurt Gonzalez last year.

"I felt he had too much time to think about each at-bat, plus he was trying to stay loose because his back would tighten up," Jaramillo said.

Despite a bad back, Gonzalez hit .295 and was second on the team with 27 home runs and 82 RBI.

"He's just coming into his own," Jaramillo said.

After seeing the "new" Gonzalez in a recent series, the Red Sox will attest to that.

"It looks like a new improved version of Juan Gonzalez is on the field," said Boston manager Kevin Kennedy, who used to manager Gonzalez with the Rangers. "He looks great out there. He could be a big force for the Rangers this year."

half with fresh arms. Those arms will be used often when play does finally resume and that will have a domino effect down the way.

Tonight, if Doubleheader I can be played, Midland's Pep Harris will face San Antonio starter Eric Weaver. In Game 2, Midland's Jason Dickson will take the mound against the Missions' Brandon Watts.

And without a game being played, the Angels already have a roster change. Outfielder Tracy Sanders, who played in Midland's exhibition game against Texas Tech, has been traded to the Texas Rangers.

Sanders will still be in the Texas League, however, moving to the Tulsa Drillers. Sanders will not be replaced on the Angel roster. Texas League rosters this year are 23 players per team. Midland had 24 players on the roster prior to the Sanders trade.

ANGEL DUST: The first 2,000 fans tonight will receive Angels' schedule magnets. A post-game fireworks display will follow the two games, which will be seven innings each... Guzman sharp, sends Indians reeling with third straight loss

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND (AP) — Juan Guzman sent the Cleveland Indians to a surprising third straight loss, pitching eight strong innings Friday night and leading the Toronto Blue Jays to a 7-1 victory.

Guzman, coming off an injury-plagued 1995, handed the defending AL champions their first three-game losing streak at Jacobs Field since June 24-27, 1994.

Cleveland, which led the majors in runs, home runs and batting average a year ago, has been outscored 19-3 in its three games. The Indians, whose 54-18 home record last season was the best in baseball, managed a total of six hits, including a home run by Julio Franco, against Toronto.

Ed Sprague homered and doubled for Toronto, which has scored 26 runs in going 3-0. Toronto, tied with Minnesota for the worst record in the majors last year, was 57 games into the 1995 season before it won three in a row.

Indians bench coach Jeff Newman served as acting manager because Mike Hargrove went home to Perryton, Texas, to be with his father following knee replacement surgery.

Guzman struck out four, walked two, and scattered Cleveland's six hits in six different innings. The Indians got just one runner to third base until Franco homered with one out in the eighth.

Guzman went 4-14 with a 6.32 ERA last year when he wasn't on the disabled list with shoulder problems.

Orel Hershiser took the loss, allowing five runs on seven hits, three walks and three wild pitches in 6 2-3 innings.

The Blue Jays loaded the bases with none out in the first on a single and two walks, and all three scored on a wild pitch, John Olerud's groundout and Carlos Delgado's single.

They added two in the sixth when Sprague doubled home a run, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored when Franco misplayed Delgado's grounder to first.

Sprague homered, his second, off Alan Embree leading off the eighth, and Otis Nixon drove in a run later in the inning with his third hit, a double off Eric Plunk.

Royals 5, Red Sox 4, 12 innings

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Patrick Lennon's two-out single in the 12th inning sent the Kansas City Royals to a win over the Boston Red Sox, who lost their fourth straight.

After Kansas City loaded the bases off loser Brad Pennington, the Red Sox moved in their outfielders. But Lennon singled sharply off Jeff Suppan over right fielder Troy O'Leary's head to give the Royals their first win this season.

Johnny Damon hit a two-run homer and drove in three runs for Kansas City. Jose Canseco homered for the Red Sox.

Terry Clark pitched two-thirds of an inning for the win.

Mike Macfarlane, in his second stint with the Royals after playing one season for the Red Sox, hit an RBI double in the ninth inning to tie it 4-4. Macfarlane's drive off Heathcliff Slocumb scored David Howard, who had singled, stolen second and taken third on a passed ball by Mike Stanley.

Canseco's first homer with two outs in the eighth had given Boston a 4-3 lead. Canseco homered to center off Kansas City starter Tim Belcher, who gave up eight hits and four runs in 7 2-3 innings.

The Red Sox had rallied to tie it 3-3 with two runs in the sixth. Mo Vaughn singled with one out, and Canseco shattered his bat while hitting a a ground-rule double to left.

Orioles 2, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Kent Mercker won his AL debut and the undefeated Baltimore Orioles won their fourth game, beating the Minnesota Twins.

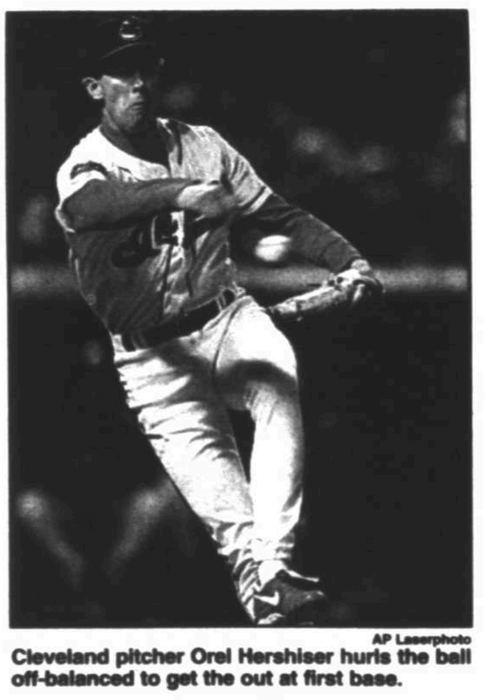

The Orioles are off to their best start since opening 4-0 in 1985. They can match their best start ever with a win Saturday night.

Mercker, acquired from Atlanta in the off-season, gave up four hits and a run in six innings. Randy Myers struck out the side in the ninth for his third save.

Jeffrey Hammonds homered in the sixth and Chris Hoiles hit a tiebreaking sacrifice fly in the seventh off Eddie Guardado (0-1). Shortstop Cal Ripken preserved the lead in the seventh with a diving stop up the middle.

Athletics 13, Tigers 2

LAS VEGAS — The Oakland Athletics finally came up a winner in Las Vegas.

Cleveland pitcher Orel Hershiser hurls the ball off-balanced to get the out at first base.

Scott Brosius homered for the third time in two days and the Oakland Athletics won their first game of the season, over the Detroit Tigers.

Oakland manager Art Howe got his first win as the A's halted a 12-game losing streak dating back to the final nine games of last season. Doug Johns (1-0) became the first A's starter to go past the fifth inning, allowing three hits in seven innings.

The biggest crowd yet — 11,149 — turned out to see the game at Cashman Field, where the A's moved their season-opening six-game homestand because of construction at the Oakland Coliseum. The park seats 9,353 and has two grassy hills beyond the right-field and left-field fences where people can sit.

Matt Stairs and Terry Steinbach hit consecutive homers in the Oakland eighth, producing four runs. There have been 16 home runs hit in the four games played at the cozy ballpark, the regular home of the Triple-A Las Vegas Stars.

Johns, aided by a defense that turned three double plays, kept the Tigers scoreless before giving up two runs on Mark Lewis' run-scoring triple and Cecil Fielder's RBI groundout in the sixth.

Inactivity frustrates Yankees' Kenny Rogers

■ Rogers leaves Texas for millions of dollars and finds himself on the Yankees bench.

NY Times News Service

ARLINGTON — It is only fitting that slate-gray clouds and chilly rain greeted Kenny Rogers for his homecoming to Texas.

The weather outside, which caused the postponement of the Rangers' game against Rogers and the New York Yankees yesterday, matched the gloom that has followed him for the past week.

Rogers left the Rangers' organization after 14 years in search of fame and fortune in New York.

He has the fortune after signing a four-year, $20 million contract. But the fame has been elusive.

"It didn't work out the way I thought it was going to work out," Rogers said.

Rogers thought he was going to be the Yankees' No.2 starter behind staff ace David Cone. It seemed a logical assumption. After all, Rogers was 17-7 with a 3.38 earned-run average for the Rangers last season, numbers that prompted the Yankees to sign him to the lucrative contract.

But in the past week, he was demoted to the bullpen, restored to the rotation because of injury to Melido Perez, and then skipped over for his first start.

"You just wonder why they wanted to sign you," Rogers said.

Manager Joe Torre began to rethink Rogers' role when the left-hander had an 8.40 ERA after 15 exhibition innings. Before Rogers' final start of the spring, Torre announced that his $20 million man was out of the rotation.

"My pitching coach (Mel Stottlemyre) and I can only concern ourselves with how can we be a better pitching staff," Torre said. "We can't concern ourselves with contracts. He was in the bullpen because he hadn't pitched enough games. With the personnel we had, that was the best way to go."

Rogers was not pleased. It wasn't as though he was the only Yankees starter to struggle. Dwight Gooden was even worse, with an 8.88 ERA. Moreover, Gooden didn't pitch last season while serving a one-year drug-related suspension.

"I'm totally confused as to the role that I'm supposed to be play," Rogers said at the time. "I never realized I had to win a job in spring training."

A frustrated Rogers offered to tear up his big contract and see if another team would offer him employment.

"If I don't pitch here, let me go somewhere else where I can pitch," he said yesterday, recalling how he felt at the time. "Even if we won here, if I didn't help I wouldn't feel good about that."

The demotion lasted for one day. Perez, who was announced as the fifth starter, was unable to throw his best fastball in an intrasquad game because of an injury to his right elbow, and needed arthroscopic surgery.

So Rogers, who pitched five shutout innings in his exhibition finale, was back in the rotation, albeit as the fifth starter. His first start was scheduled for today, in his old ballpark against his old team.

Two CART drivers plan to run Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — While most Championship Auto Racing Teams drivers are skipping this year's Indianapolis 500, at least two CART entries are expected at the speedway next month.

Mike Groff, a driver for Walker Racing, said Friday he will enter this year's Indy 500, and The Indianapolis Star reported today that Davy Jones also plans to run in the race for car owner Rick Galles.

"I've been at Indy before, but this is the best opportunity that I've had," Groff said. "To say the least, I'm excited. We're going to be swinging as hard as we can to bring home a win."

A war between Indianapolis Motor Speedway president Tony George and CART led to a CART boycott of the Indy 500. CART, which includes most of the best known drivers and teams, has scheduled the U.S. 500 race at Michigan International Speedway on May 26, the same day as the Indianapolis 500.

The new race was organized by CART in response to George's decision to reserve 25 spots of the 33-car Indy 500 field for his Indy Racing League teams. Most of the top names in Indy-Car racing will compete at Michigan.

The official entry list for the Indy 500 won't be made public until next week. Until Friday, the deadline day for entries, it was thought no CART drivers would be in Indianapolis.

But Galles and Derrick Walker, owner of Walker Racing, will run drivers at both Indianapolis and Michigan. Galles will have Jones at Indy and rookie Eddie Lawson at the U.S. 500. Walker will run Groff in Indianapolis and Robby Gordon in Michigan.

Galles, who said last December he would likely compete at Indy, said his primary sponsor, Kokomo-based Delco Electronics, didn't demand he field an entry at Indy.

"Delco didn't force me to do it, but they indicated it wouldn't hurt," Galles said Friday from his shop in Albuquerque, N.M. "They are going to have 6,000 people at the race."

Juwan Howard's 25 points paces Washington over San Antonio

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Juwan Howard scored 25 points and the Washington Bullets snapped San Antonio's 12-game home winning streak with a 104-84 victory over the Spurs on Friday night.

It was the most lopsided loss of the season for the Spurs and their first 20-point loss at home since April 11 of last season. Their previous worst loss this season was 106-87 at Chicago on Dec. 8.

The Bullets kept their slim playoff hopes alive as Howard was joined in double figures by Calbert Cheaney with 23 points and Brent Price with 18. Washington, which trailed only once in the game at 2-0, has won three straight games and seven of its last 11.

San Antonio, which lost for only the second time in the last 20 games, was led by David Robinson's 24 points. Vinny Del Negro added 19.

Leading 58-47 at halftime, the Bullets stretched the advantage to 65-51 as Price hit five free throws in the opening minutes of the third quarter.

After a 7-0 San Antonio run cut the lead to 68-58, Washington answered with a 12-2 streak of its own to take its largest lead at 77-60 with 5:11 to play.

The Bullets stretched the advantage to as many as 23 points in the fourth quarter as San Antonio could never make a run.

Washington seized control in the first quarter, jumping out to a 15-6 lead as Howard had six points. The Bullets led 34-24 at the end of the first quarter as Robinson almost single-handedly kept San Antonio in the game with 14 first-quarter points.

San Antonio closed the gap to 36-32 when Del Negro capped an 8-0 run with a layup with 8:07 left in the second quarter. But behind Cheaney's 16 points and 15 from Howard, Washington regained its composure to stretch the lead to 56-41 with 1:22 remaining and went on to lead 58-47 at halftime.

Bulls 126, Hornets 92

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Chicago scored the first 20 points of the game and beat Charlotte, giving the Hornets a sobering view of what their future could hold.

Michael Jordan, who played just 28 minutes, finished with 24 points, four assists and three steals as the Bulls moved closer to becoming the first team in NBA history to win 70 games. Chicago can reach the mark by going 5-4 the rest of the way.

Scottie Pippen had 28 points and Toni Kukoc 20 to help Chicago send the Hornets to their second-worst loss of the season.

Charlotte fell one-half game behind Miami in the race for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. The winner of that race will play the Bulls in the first round of the playoffs.

Larry Johnson and Darrin Hancock had 14 points apiece for the Hornets, who were outrebounded 47-29, had 19 turnovers and lost for the fourth time in six games. Leading scorer Glen Rice struggled to seven points on 2-of-8 shooting.

The loss put a damper on the Hornets' night of festivities to honor center Robert Parish, who tied Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's NBA record by playing in his 1,560th game. Parish will likely break the record Saturday night at Cleveland.

Chicago, which defeated the Hornets by an average of 19 points in their first two games this season, settled this one early by forcing five turnovers in the opening three minutes.

By the time Kukoc hit a 3-pointer to make it 20-0, Jordan already had nine points, three steals and an assist.

Chicago stretched its lead as high as 41 on the way to a 73-34 halftime edge. Charlotte got no closer than 29 in the second half.

Chicago's Dennis Rodman, in his third game since being suspended for head-butting a referee, was involved in a comparatively minor incident early in the second quarter. Rodman was fouled by Larry Johnson while attempting a layup, prompting both players to start yelling at each other and the referees. Rodman and Johnson were both assessed technicals.

But Rodman was on his best behavior the rest of the way, even when he was the target of some taunting by the Hornets' mascot, Hugo, during a timeout. Clad in a slinky bikini, Hugo went over to the Bulls' bench and performed a striptease to the music of Madonna, a routine that drew laughs from Rodman.

Timberwolves 103, Jazz 99

SALT LAKE CITY — Kevin Garnett scored 20 points, including two clinching free throws with 5.1 seconds left, as Minnesota handed slumping Utah its fourth straight loss.

Utah hadn't lost four in a row since March, 1994.

Isaiah Rider also scored 20 for the Timberwolves, who ended a three-game skid that included a loss at Vancouver on Wednesday that snapped the Grizzlies' 23-game losing streak. Tom Gugliotta added 18 points and 15 rebounds for Minnesota, which avoided a sweep of the four-game season series.

Karl Malone led Utah with 33 points. Chris Morris had 16 points and John Stockton had 17 assists and 14 points.

After blowing a 15-point halftime lead, Minnesota trailed 90-88 following Antoine Carr's two foul shots for the Jazz with 6:20 to play. But the Timberwolves regained the lead on Rider's alley-oop basket three minutes later and never trailed again.

Utah cut its deficit to 101-99 on Stockton's layup with 5.9 seconds to go, setting up Garnett's clinching foul shots.

Knicks 86, Bucks 79

MILWAUKEE — Patrick Ewing rebounded from one of the worst games of his career and had 24 points and 13 rebounds as New York beat Milwaukee and won its seventh in a row at the Bradley Center.

Ewing, who shot 1-for-14 Wednesday night, took a perfect no-look pass from Anthony Mason and dunked to give the Knicks a 82-77 lead with 1:07 left, stopping the Bucks' comeback.

A minute earlier, Ewing made a free throw to give New York an 80-77 lead after Milwaukee looked poised to take the lead.

Charles Oakley and Derek Harper each had 11 points for the Knicks. Vin Baker had 18 points and 11 rebounds for the Bucks.

The road team has won the last nine games in the series.

The Bucks trailed the entire second half, except for a tie at 55. Baskets by rookie Shawn Respert, who had a season-high 15 points, Terry Cummings and Glenn Robinson pulled Milwaukee to 79-77 with 3:01 left, but Ewing and the Knicks defense took over and protected the lead.

Hubert Davis hit a 3-pointer to give the Knicks a 79-71 lead with 7:17 left. It was New York's biggest lead of the second half.

■ NBA Roundup

After trailing 46-44 at the half, Ewing scored six points as the Knicks opened the third quarter with a 9-0 run and led 53-46. The Bucks answered with a 9-2 run and tied the game at 55 on Baker's basket.

Ewing, who finished with 11 points in the quarter, hit a 16-ft jumper to regain the lead for the Knicks.

Hawks 82, Nets 70

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Steve Smith shook off an early ankle injury to score 23 points and Atlanta held New Jersey to a season-low point total.

The game was a makeup of one postponed by a blizzard, and it had all the atmosphere of a snowstorm game — few people and little excitement.

Atlanta outscored New Jersey 24-11 in the first quarter and the Nets never got closer than six points the rest of the game.

The highlight came in the second quarter when referee Ed F. Rush called four technical fouls in 48 seconds. Nets guard Chris Childs got the first with 1:51 left for arguing a non-call. Shawn Bradley then picked up two and an automatic ejection for adding his thoughts.

The officials called a total of eight technicals. Ken Norman of Altanta was ejected in the fourth quarter.

Smith, who sprained his right ankle in the opening minutes, went 6-of-12 from the field and 8-of-10 from the free throw line. Mookie Blaylock and Stacey Augmon each added 13 points for Atlanta, while Blaylock also had 10 rebounds.

Childs had 17 points to lead the Nets, while Armon Gilliam was the only other New Jersey player in double figures with 10.

New Jersey outrebounded Atlanta 66-52, but hit just 28 of 95 shots, or 30 percent, a team record defensive effort for the Hawks. The Nets previous low this year was 74 points against Cleveland in February.

Atlanta, which was playing the second of three games in three days, shot only 31 percent (25 of 82) but went 26-of-34 from the free throw line while the Nets were just 14-of-20.

Pistons 108, 76ers 87

PHILADELPHIA — Grant Hill had 15 points, 10 assists and nine rebounds to barely miss his ninth triple-double and Detroit won on the road for the first time in a month with a victory over Philadelphia.

Lindsay Hunter scored 17 points to lead six Pistons in double figures. Detroit had lost five straight road games since beating Toronto on March 5 at SkyDome.

Jerry Stackhouse had 23 points for Philadelphia, which lost its fourth straight game and 12th of its last 13.

Leading 58-43 at the half, the Pistons went on a 19-9 run at the start of the third period, capped by two straight 3-point shots by Joe Dumars, to take a 77-52 advantage. The lead reached 87-61 on a 3-point shot by Terry Mills, and Detroit led 90-63 at the end of three quarters.

A jumper by Mills gave Detroit a 48-27 lead with 4:20 left in the second period before Philadelphia ran off 11 straight points to pull within 10.

After Allan Houston made two free throws, Vernon Maxwell, who had scored 12 points, was charged with two technical fouls and ejected with 1:07 left in the quarter.

Otis Thorpe scored 16 and Mills and Houston each had 13 points for the Pistons, who now defeated Philadelphia seven straight times.

Clarence Weatherspoon had 20 points and 12 rebounds for the 76ers.

Trail Blazers 97, Nuggets 91

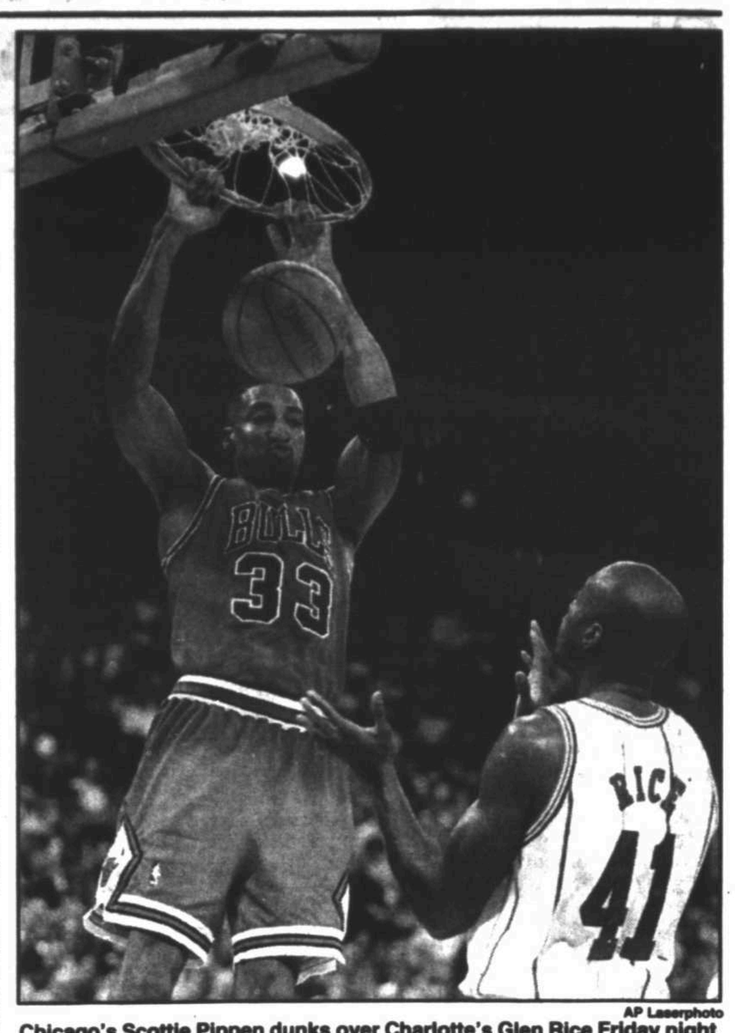

DENVER — Rod Strickland scored 29 points and Clifford Robinson added 24 as Portland completed a four-game season sweep of Denver.

It was the second time the Trail Blazers managed to sweep the Nuggets, the first time coming in 1990-91.

The win also gave Portland a six-game winning streak, matching its season-high.

Dale Ellis scored 18 points for the Nuggets, who lost for the second straight time and the seventh time in their last 11 games.

Portland outrebounded Denver 49-34. The Trail Blazers dominated the Nuggets on the boards in the season series, grabbing 213 rebounds to Denver's 138.

Sources: Allen Iverson ready to go to NBA

■ The Georgetown guard will go to the NBA where he is supposed to be a first-round pick.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — All-American guard Allen Iverson will make himself available for the NBA draft, the Georgetown sophomore's former AAU coach said Friday.

Boo Williams, who coached Iverson during the summers of his high school years, told the Daily Press of Newport News that Iverson would announce his decision this weekend, perhaps at Bethel High, the school he led to the 1993 Virginia state Group AAA championship.

Bill Shapland, Georgetown's director of basketball information, told The Associated Press the university was unaware of any decision. He said Georgetown coach John Thompson was unavailable for comment.

Iverson was a first-team All-America this season, improving dramatically from his freshman year. His average jumped from 20.4 points to 25.0 and his shooting accuracy from 39 percent to 49 percent.

He was selected the Big East Conference's Defensive Player of the Year for the second consecutive season and finished fourth in the voting for the Wooden Award as the best college player.

The Hoyas were 50-18 in Iverson's two seasons and advanced to the NCAA East Regional semifinals last season and the East Regional final this year.

Iverson, a football and basketball prep standout, nearly lost out on a college career.

In 1993, he and two friends were convicted in connection with a bowling alley brawl. Iverson was given a five-year sentence, of which he served four months before then-Gov. L. Douglas Wilder freed him on the condition he complete high school.

Walker makes himself eligible for NBA draft

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Louisville center Samaki Walker has sent a letter to the National Basketball Association making himself eligible for this summer's pro draft, a sports agent said Friday.

The letter was sent Wednesday from the offices of Russell & Fishkind, a New Brunswick, N.J.-based sports agency. Russell Fishkind, a sports agent, said that Walker has declared and that his partner, Erik Rudolph, would represent him.

Rudolph was in Portsmouth, Va. on a business trip, Fishkind said. Calls to Rudolph's hotel room went unanswered Friday afternoon. Walker also could not be reached for comment.

Walker, a 6-foot-9 sophomore, averaged 15.1 points and 7.5 rebounds per game last season. The Cardinals finished 22-12 and reached the Midwest Regional semifinals before losing to Wake Forest.

"I strongly feel that I am not only ready, but excited, to embark on this new challenge," Walker's letter said.

Stanley Cup champ might be absent from 1996 playoffs

The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — It's the ultimate fall from glory. Stanley Cup champions one year, onlookers the next — in a league in which almost every team makes the postseason.

With five games left in the regular season, the New Jersey Devils are in danger of becoming the first NHL champion in 27 years to miss the playoffs a year after winning the Cup.

"It's to the point now where there is no room for error," Devils captain Scott Stevens said. "That's definitely against us. In a playoff series, you can lose three games. If we lose one, we might be out."

Entering Friday's action, the Devils trailed Tampa Bay by two points (82-80) for the eighth and final berth in the Eastern Conference.

Making matters worse, New Jersey isn't playing well coming down the stretch, 0-3-1 in its last four and 2-6-1 in its last nine.

The big problem has been a lack of scoring. The NHL's second-worst offensive team has 18 goals in its last nine games.

The latest setback happened Thursday night when Hartford goalie Jason Muzzatti registered his first career shutout and fourth win overall in a 1-0 decision.

"Even before this one, we realized every game is a big game and every one can mean not making the playoffs," said goalie Martin Brodeur. "It's something everyone is afraid of."

Devils coach Jacques Lemaire, who played on that 1970 Montreal team that won the Cup and then went golfing early the following season, says there is no doubt his team is tense now.

"We have to feel a little looser than today," Lemaire said. "I could see in the dressing room the guys had built up a tension. If you don't control it, it's tough to play. Your mind doesn't work with your hands and feet."

Ironically, missing the playoffs was the last thing on the Devils' minds on March 15. They beat Tampa Bay 5-0 on that day to cap a franchise-record 10-game unbeaten streak that had players thinking about finishing in fourth place overall in the East and having home ice in the opening round of the playoffs.

But another goal-scoring drought has the team in serious trouble.

Even the late-season acquisitions of offensive-minded defenseman Phil Housley and proven goal scorer Dave Andreychuk haven't righted things.

Housley was supposed to give the Devils a quarterback for the league's fourth-worst power play. However, the puck still isn't going into the net. New Jersey has converted once in its last 19 extra-man chances in the last six games, including a colossal failure Thursday night against Hartford when it squandered a 1:54 two-man advantage at the start of the third period of a scoreless game.

"We have a way of making them (opposing goalies) look hot," Devils goaltender coach Jacques Caron said after New Jersey failed to beat Muzzatti once in 40 shots.

Scoring has been the Devils' downfall this season with 199 goals in 77 games. Only Ottawa has scored less.

The Devils have outshot opponents 2,433-2,021 in 57 games, but have only 15 more goals.

"I think it's more us than the goaltenders," center Bobby Holik said. "There is no other team that has as hard a time scoring as us. We get the shots, but we just don't score. People say if you don't shoot, you don't score. Well, we shoot, but we still don't score."

Last punch a winner for Sanchez

The Associated Press

OAKLAND — The last scoring blow of the fight made 18-year-old Augustine Sanchez the Olympic Trials 125-pound champion Friday night.

That right-hand punch gave Sanchez, the 1996 U.S. champion, a 12-11 victory over Floyd Mayweather, a 1995 U.S. champion.

Sanchez, of Las Vegas, leaped high and waved an arm when the verdict was announced at the Henry J. Kaiser Convention Center, while Mayweather, 19, of Grand Rapids, Mich., stared dejectedly at the canvas.

The victory puts Sanchez into the box-offs April 18-20 at Augusta, Ga., which will determine the 12-boxer Olympic team.

Mayweather now must fight Sunday in a final of the losers' bracket in this double elimination tournament. Sunday's winners go to the box-offs as challengers to the trials champion. A champion must win once in the box-offs, while a challenger must win twice to make the Olympic team.

"I'm through with this," Mayweather told his uncle, Roger, a former pro junior lightweight and lightweight champion. "I ain't fighting."

Mayweather led 8-5 after two rounds, but the dogged Sanchez landed some solid left hooks and rights to the head in the final round.

"He came in probably thinking he would stop me like he did those other guys," Sanchez said. "I have too much heart for that."

Mayweather had outpointed Sanchez in the semifinals of the 1995 U.S. tournament.

David Diaz, 19, of Chicago, the National Golden Gloves champion, also turned the tables on Zabdiel Judah, 18, of Philadelphia with 13-8 decision in the 139-pound final. Judah had outpointed Diaz in the 1995 Police Athletic League final.

Jauquin Gallardo, 17, of San Leandro, Calif., became the first trials champion. He scored effectively with left jabs and right leads for a 23-16 decision over Sean Johnson, 26, of Washington.

In a beautiful exhibition of boxing and power punching, Zahir Raheem, 19, of Philadelphis, won the 119-pound title with a 22-5 verdict over Steve Carter, 21, of the Navy at Norfolk, Va.

At 165 pounds, Rhoshii Wells, 19, of Riverdale, Calif., knocked down 32-year-old Ronald Simms of Langley AFB in Virginia, and scored a 6-2 victory. Simms is the oldest boxer in the competition and is boxing in his third Olympic trials.

Nate Jones, 23, of Chicago outpunched heavy-hitting Davarryl Williamson, 27, of Phoenix, and won the 201-pound title 12-4. Jones also outpointed Williamson in the PAL final last year.

The other six title bouts will be held Saturday afternoon.

IRVIN: Receiver could miss four games in the room with partner and former teammate Alfredo Roberts and two women who described themselves as self-employed models. The two women also were indicted on drug possession charges; Roberts was not.

Irvin spoke briefly to reporters at Valley Ranch, the Cowboys' practice facility, on Thursday concerning his purported failure to respond to the NFL's inquiry concerning a possible drug problem.

"I don't know anything about it. I need to start talking to you guys and refute some of the stuff that's coming out," Irvin said.

His agent said it was possible the NFL sent a letter that never reached Irvin.

"I think it's highly conceivable," said agent Steve Endicott. "Could it have gotten lost or misplaced? Conceivably, yes."

Stage 1 of the league's drug policy guidelines calls for "evaluation and treatment" of a player if his behavior indicates a drug problem.

The Star-Telegram said the NFL sent a representative to Irvin's home last week to inform him that failing to comply with the first stage may trigger immediate advancement to Stage 2, resulting in automatic four-game suspension without pay.

"If Michael doesn't get back to them right now, they can count that as if it's a positive test and boom, he's Stage 2," the source told the newspaper.

Under NFL guidelines, the first stage is certain to occur because of the charges.

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue has the power to suspend Irvin or any player who is convicted of, or pleads guilty to, a drug-related criminal offense for as many as four regular-season games without pay.

DALLAS: Team's image, future still in question

(From 1C)

Switzer's tenure at Oklahoma ended when several of his players had encounters with the law.

"Believe me, I'm extremely sensitive to this," Jones said in the midst of a damage control campaign last week. "I think about image every day, and I'm very aware of where some have said it all starts."

Where it starts, of course, is with Jones.

But there are some who think it starts in a small bar in a strip mall about a mile from the Cowboys' rambling facility at Valley Ranch. It's where many of the players go to unwind after practice, after games and even after road trips.

It was from that bar that Williams, considered the best young offensive tackle in the game, was returning home in the early morning of Oct. 24, 1994 when his car ran off the road. He tore up his right knee, missed the rest of that year and didn't return to form until late in 1995.

He was charged with DWI for that accident.

While he was recuperating last April, Williams was charged with sexual assault on a 17-year-old topless dancer. She later dropped the charges and settled with Williams out of court.

And it is at the same bar that many of the Cowboys encounter women like the two "self-employed models" who were found with Irvin and former Cowboy Alfredo Roberts in a motel room along with three ounces of marijuana, two ounces of cocaine and assorted drug paraphernalia. All but Roberts were indicted.

The Cowboys aren't the only team coping with off-the-field problems.

In the last month, Bam Morris of the Steelers has been indicted on cocaine possession charges and Quentin Coryatt of the Colts charged with threatening a motorist with a handgun. There's no shortage of similar incidents involving athletes in other sports.

Nor is it new to the Cowboys.

More than 20 years ago, the novel "North Dallas Forty," by former Cowboy Peter Gent, depicted drinking and drugging by thinly disguised football characters. In real life, ex-Cowboy Thomas Henderson has been imprisoned for drug-related crimes and now earns his living as a drug and alcohol counselor.

But it's a much bigger issue with the current Cowboys and with Jones, whose deals with Nike, American Express and Pepsi-Cola, in defiance of league marketing policies, set off the lawsuits.

"They pride themselves on being high profile," said Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association.

"Jones has marketed that club that way. He's going to get hurt. Think of the kind of image it projects. No company wants to be associated with this."

In his own way, Jones acknowledges the problems that his lifestyle and reputation create.

"I've made a lot of mistakes," he said. "And sometimes I probably have as much awareness of what not to do as anybody living. No one has a keener sense of what image means. No one understands how vulnerable you are from living in a glass house."

Then there's Switzer, whose coaching career was resurrected by Jones five years after he left the University of Oklahoma. Despite three national championships there, he ended up resigning after a series of incidents ranging from guns being fired in the football dorms to the arrest of his quarterback on drug dealing charges.

It's hard to blame Switzer for what's happening, although like Jones, his personal lifestyle is more flamboyant than your average 58-year-old's.

But his disagreements with Aikman stem from what Aikman perceives as a lack of discipline in the team. And one former Cowboy notes that Switzer's predecessor, Jimmy Johnson, instilled a fear of punishment even in stars like Irvin.

"Jimmy would cut guys for minor things that Barry ignored," said the player, who asked not to be identified. "Even if your position seemed secure, you got the message. With Jimmy, you don't fool around."

Is the Cowboys' new lawless image unfair?

To some extent, it is.

"The Cowboys get the attention because they're in the spotlight, but every team has its problems," said Upshaw, who played with the rambunctious Raiders from 1967 through 1982. "It's gone on for years, certainly when I was playing and with the team I played for. But nobody cares if a team is a loser."

Said Tex Schramm, who ran the Cowboys from their inception in 1960 until shortly after Jones bought the team in February 1989:

"We always knew that players liked to party. We all like to party. We tried to make sure that we had someone who'd let us know in every bar or club the players would frequent."

Jones acknowledged that one of the thing he learned from Schramm during the six months they overlapped with the Cowboys was the importance of image.

Irvin's image — and his future — will depend largely on what happens in the courts and what discipline, if any, is imposed by the NFL.

Jones is intent, however, on improving the image of his team.

"When we get burned," Jones said, "we work real hard to make sure we don't get burned again."

Westlake downs Kingwood, goes for another state title

The Associated Press

PFLUGERVILLE — Dallas Highland Park's Meredith Florance scored two goals as the Scots defeated El Paso Franklin 4-0 in a storm-shortened University Interscholastic League girls' soccer semifinal Friday.

Highland Park (23-4), the only Class 4A team at the state tournament, advances to play Austin Westlake (21-1-2) in Saturday's noon finals.

Earlier Friday, Westlake midfielder Marie Heijl scored the only goal to snap Humble Kingwood's 54-game winning streak in the Chaparrals 1-0 girls semifinal.

Florance, a member of both the U.S. National 16-and-under and 19-and-under girls' soccer teams, scored two goals in the final 15 minutes, making the Scots the only team this season to score more than three goals against Franklin (21-1).

■ UIL Soccer

Play was stopped twice because of lightning, including with 2:57 left as coaches from both teams decided not to play the remaining minutes.

Friday's weather included a wind chill of 22 degrees, freezing rain and a Northeasterly wind gusting up to 28 mph.

Franklin could not score with the wind at its back in the first half. Highland Park, which had 19 shots on goal to Franklin's 6, took advantage in the second half with three goals in less than 15 minutes.

Strock scored Highland Park's first goal after putting a loose ball in from 20 yards out with 29:17 left in the game. The Scots went ahead for good on Elizabeth Ball's penalty kick with 20:08 remaining.

In the earlier game, defending state champ Kingwood was making its fifth consecutive state appearance. But state tournament experience wasn't what counted against Austin Westlake.

Kingwood (25-1) played the first half with the wind at its back, but couldn't score. The Mustangs had 14 first-half shots and only allowed the ball in its own territory eight times in the half.

Lancaster, Sauers share lead at BellSouth Classic's halfway point

The Associated Press

MARIETTA, Ga. — Neal Lancaster got away with a lot of bad shots in the second round of the BellSouth Classic on Friday. British Open champion John Daly didn't get away with one horrible hole.

Lancaster survived with a 2-under-par 70 to share the 36-hole lead with Gene Sauers, but Daly missed the cut after using a dozen shots on the par-5 No. 8, his 17th hole of the day.

Sauers recorded a 68 to share the lead at 7-under-par 137 for two trips around the 7,018-yard Atlanta Country Club course.

Lancaster and Sauers held a one-shot lead over Nick Price and David Duval, following 70s for each.

Daly was three shots off the lead when he reached the eighth tee. The 1994 BellSouth champion declined to talk about his 12, but playing partner Brett Ogle said at one point Daly hit a tree and "took three quick whacks at it left-handed" before taking a drop.

He finished with a 77-148, missing the cut by one shot.

Tommy Tolles, who tied for second in The Players Championship last week, shot 70 and was tied at 139 with Paul Stankowski and Corey Pavin. Stankowski had a 71, Pavin a 70.

Pavin had shared the first-round lead with Jim Gallagher and John Wilson, with all dropping back in the swirling winds Friday afternoon. Wilson shot 74—140 and Gallagher 75—141.

Despite his erratic play, Lancaster didn't have a bogey, but he had two saves after duck hooks on two holes, also saved par from a trap on a par-3 hole and sank a 20-foot putt to save par on another.

Like Lancaster, Sauers had an early tee time in chilly, windy conditions.

Sauers scored birdies with putts of 15, 25 and 20 feet on the 12th, 15th and 17th holes, and went to the front side where he started with a 3-foot birdie putt. He got to 5-under with a 15-footer at the fifth, then caught a bunker on the par-3 sixth and two-putted from 15 feet for his only bogey.

Seventy-four players survived the cut which came at 3-under 147. Spain's Seve Ballesteros joined Daly among those who failed to survive. Ballesteros had 78s in each of the first two rounds.

Sorenstam takes lead

LINCOLN, Calif. — Reigning U.S. Open champion Annika Sorenstam took a one-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $500,000 Twelve Bridges LPGA Classic at Twelve Bridges Golf Club.

Sorenstam led Caroline Pierce and first-round leader Emilee Klein after finishing with a 5-under-par 66. Her two-day total stands at 135.

A lone bogey, on the final hole, marred Sorenstam's otherwise-flawless performance.

"I'm striking the ball better," she said. "I have positive thoughts about my game."

Pierce tied Sorenstam on the day with a 66. She recorded seven birdies and two bogeys.

"Keeping the ball in the fairway and hitting the right shot off the tee was the key to my round," Pierce said. "You have to think off the tee on this course; it's strategic placing."

Klein produced two birdies and two bogeys to remain where she started the day.

Val Skinner was two strokes back, Barb Mucha was at 138, and Cindy Schreyer at 139.

Sorenstam warmed to the calm, sunny day midway through her round on the 6,040-yard course. She started play on the No. 10 hole at 2-under, and birdied the 15th and 17th.

Consecutive birdies on the sixth and seventh holes moved Sorenstam into the lead at 8-under, one shot ahead of Klein.

But on her final hole, Sorenstam missed a 3-foot putt, momentarily sending her into a tie with Klein.

"Being out there for four hours and working really hard, it's a little bit of a letdown to get bogey on the last hole," Sorenstam said. "But I can't look at the bad shots."

El Paso Coronado dominates Klein Oak 5-1, Plano also in boys' finals

The Associated Press

PFLUGERVILLE — Ryan Walker and Matt Laster scored second-half goals to lead Plano past San Antonio MacArthur 6-0 Friday in the University Interscholastic League State Soccer boys' semifinal.

With the win, Plano (18-1-7) advances to the Saturday championship final against El Paso Coronado, which defeated Klein Oak 5-1 in a semifinal earlier in the day.

The Coronado Thunderbirds (23-0), the only undefeated team still alive in state tournament, are the only teams that could score against the 24-mph winds that swept Kuempel Stadium on Friday.

Laster headed in Walker's corner kick for Plano's first score with 24 minutes left in the game. Walker followed Laster's goal with one of his own less than a minute later when he dribbled past MacArthur defender Chris Money for a 2-0 Wildcats lead.

In the earlier game, Ryan Turnello's three first-half goals gave Coronado all it needed to prevail over Klein Oak.

In the second half, Coronado's Kirk Wilson and Steven Pena outraced the tired Klein Oak defenders to score two open-field goals, against the wind, in the game's final 11 minutes.

Klein Oak (18-4-3) scored its only goal in the second half when Carlos Chavez pushed the ball in with 27:30 left in the game.

Turnello, who scored all his goals with the wind at his back, scored quickly for the Thunderbirds. The senior fullback scored with a 20-yard bullet past Klein Oak goalie Brian Diamond. His other two goals came with Wilson's help.

Wilson, attempting to score from the far corner, bounced the ball off the crossbars, allowing Turnello to push the ball into the open net. His third goal, the most impressive of his hat trick, came with 43.8 seconds left when he bounced a Wilson pass off his chest and tucked it into the goal from five yards out.

GOLF: Snead had seven bridies

(From 1C)

"This golf course wasn't designed or constructed with strong winds in mind," Floyd said.

Snead had seven birdies, two bogeys and a double bogey-6 on the 358-yard sixth hole, when his tee shot landed next to a boulder. With an unplayable lie, Snead hit his approach shot over the green.

"It's a typical Nicklaus-type course," Snead said. "If you make a mistake in the right place, you can't even make a bogey."

The double bogey and a bogey on the next hole wiped out a spectacular start — birdie putts of 5, 12 and 6 feet on the first three holes. Snead was back where he started at 3-under when he made the turn, and he followed a birdie on No. 10 with a bogey on No. 11, two-putting from 18 inches.

But he finished with the birdie on No. 14, sinking a 15-foot putt after a chip of less than 50 yards, and birdies on Nos. 15 and 17.

Floyd bogeyed two of the first five holes, then birdied Nos. 7 and 8.

He said he was satisfied to shoot par.

"To me, this is not golf," Floyd said. "Yes, your skill level is tested to a certain degree, but there is too much luck involved."

Cruel conditions overshadow winners at 37th Texas Relays

Associated Press

AUSTIN — UCLA's Amy Acuff said she's only been in two meets with worse weather than what hit the Texas Relays on Friday.

Consider her lucky. Texas' Nicole Devonish had never competed in such wet, windy and cold conditions — and she's from Canada.

Acuff and Devonish were among a minority of competitors willing to brave the elements, and their persistence paid off. Acuff won her second Texas Relays high-jump title in four years with a record-low leap, and Devonish won her third straight long-jump title.

Another notable winner was Round Rock's Jennifer Koch, who sloshed to her third straight 3,200-meter high school girls title. She'll be after her third straight 1,600-meter crown Saturday.

But Friday's big story was the weather: 20 mph winds with nearly as much rain as the city had seen all year. And if those factors weren't enough to make people flock indoors.

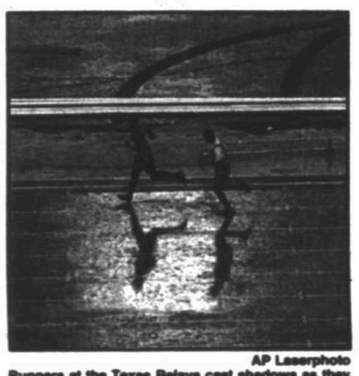

The rain was the big problem. It left puddles all over Memorial Stadium at the University of Texas and, by nightfall, rain had completely submerged nearby Clark Field, site of several field events. In all, the finals for 19 of 35 events were postponed until Saturday. The delays included all sprints.

The most striking example may have been the women's long jump, where 32 of 41 entrants found something better to do. The five flights of preliminaries were scrubbed, allowing the nine women who showed up to automatically advance to the finals.

Once Devonish decided to compete, everyone else was fighting for second. Her winning leap of 20 feet, 7 1/4 inches was more than a foot ahead of second-place Tonya Bailey, unattached.

Acuff, who cleared six feet in winning the event here in 1993, needed two tries to clear 5-7 ,then she hit her winning height of 5-8 in one try. She missed all three attempts at 6-0, quite a shock considering she holds the collegiate record of 6-6.

This was the 21st time the Texas Relays has held a women's high jump, and never had the winner cleared only 5-8.

Vacek upends Washington, U.S. tied in Davis Cup play

PRAGUE, Czech Republic — Todd Martin is no Pete Sampras — but he might have to be if the defending champion United States wants to beat the Czech Republic in the Davis Cup.

Daniel Vacek's 22 aces in a five-set win over MaliVai Washington gave the Czech's a split in Friday's singles after Martin beat Petr Korda 6-2, 6-4, 7-5.

Czech tennis player Daniel Vacek hits a ball during his Davis Cup win over MaliVai Washington.

Doubles is set for Saturday, with reverse singles on Sunday. Patrick McEnroe and Patrick Galbraith are set to go against Jiri Novak and Martin Damm, but U.S. captain Tom Gullikson could use Martin — his best doubles player.

In Moscow last year, Gullikson used Sampras in doubles in the final against Russia and the strategy worked.

"Of course, it's always better to be up 2-0 the first day," Gullikson added. "The worst thing is to be down 0-2. So I guess we're right in the middle. Once again, the doubles becomes the all important swing point."

The Americans are using their "third team" after Sampras, Andre Agassi, Michael Chang and Jim Courier all declined to play.

The Americans have won the Davis Cup 31 times and have beaten the Czechs in three previous Davis Cup ties. The Czechs have won the Davis Cup title once — in 1980.

The 19th-ranked Washington was off his game in the three-hour, 22-minute match indoors on carpet. The 25-year-old Vacek won 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4.

Vacek's 22 aces came in bunches — back to back and even several times on second serves — often saving him when he fell into slight trouble as the home crowd of 10,000 grew briefly quiet.

Martin, ranked No. 17, won his first two sets with ease, consistently scoring with first serves and capitalizing on the erratic play of left-handed Korda, ranked No. 41.

In other World Group matches, France leads Germany 2-0, Sweden leads India 2-0 and Italy and South Africa are tied 1-1.

In Limoges, France took advantage of the absence of ailing Boris Becker and Michael Stich to win both singles matches against Germany.

Family Circle Cup

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — Conchita Martinez and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario continued their expected and almost inevitable march to the Family Circle Cup finals with victories Friday.

Martinez, two-time defending champion and top seed, dumped Petra Begerow 6-2, 6-0 and second-seeded Sanchez Vicario eliminated Sabine Hack 6-2, 6-2.

Sanchez Vicario faces No. 6 Jana Novotna in Saturday's semifinals. Novotna came back from a disappointing first set and a 3-1 final set deficit to take out No. 3 Iva Majoli 1-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Martinez goes against the only unseeded player left, Barbara Paulus, a 6-2, 6-4 winner against Irina Spirlea. Paulus, ranked 24th in the world, won two European tournaments last year, but has not been to the semifinals of an American tournament since 1990 in San Francisco.

Martinez is unmatched at Sea Pines Racquet Club the past three years, winning 12 straight matches with only two of those going to three sets. Begerow provided little resistance for Martinez, who is ranked second in the world behind co-No. 1s Steffi Graf and Monica Seles.

MIDLAND BOWLING

CITY LEADERS

Some of the toughest shooting of the season was done by our bowlers last week with two-"300", 23 - "700" series and 25 - Honor Scores being shot. The cream certainly rose to the top with Glen Hildebrand and Rebecca Seltz taking first place honors. Glen shot a 276, 761 in the City Men's league at Midland Park Lanes while Becky celebrated her first perfect game with a 220, 226, "300" for a 746 series in the Scratch Doubles league at Basin Lanes.

MIDLAND PARK LANES HIGHLIGHTS

After laying off for a couple of years, both of our house leaders came back tough as ever to capture the men's and women's titles. Bill Theobald proved victorious over a strong field with his 758 series in the City Men's league. Krista Turner has been burning up the lanes ever since she came back. Her winning score was a 248, 689 series in the Midland Park Ladies League. High Seniors were Truman Broughton with a 219, 233, 643 series and steady pounder Betty Noyes with a 213, 575. He pounded out a 279, 258, 216 for an astounding 753 series in the Keglers league. Patti Hall proved to be no slouch as she tossed a 196, 237 and 266 for a hefty 699 series in that same league. SPECIAL RECOGNITION

MWBA history books added a new chapter last week as Rebecca Seltz became the second woman in Midland to shoot a perfect "300" game; the first one, of course, being Sandy Crenshaw in 1984 during the City Tournament. While bowling in the Scratch Doubles league at Basin Lanes,Rebecca rolled games of 220 and 226 before burying 12 in the pocket for her "300" game, 746 series. Amassing 16 strikes in a row, she tacked on a 181 game for a 927 four-game series, shattering every personal record she had previously set. Among other gifts from WIBC, Rebecca will receive the cherished "300" ring.

No background exacerbates MLS coaches' problems

Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Like all coaches who complain that they don't have enough time to prepare, Bruce Arena and Laurie Calloway are bemoaning a short training period.

Unlike other coaches, however, they really are flying blind.

With only five weeks of training, and not with all of their players, a handful of scrimmages and no pre-season games, Arena and Calloway take the Washington D.C. United and the San Jose Clash into Saturday's first-ever game of America's Major League Soccer admittedly under prepared.

"I feel a little naked," Calloway said. "I won't even feel comfortable going into Dallas next week. We haven't seen them either. It's a strange feeling. It's a feeling of frustration.

The 10 teams trained for the first season in two training camps, five from the Western Conference in Del Mar, Calif., and the five in the Eastern Conference in Boca Raton, Fla.

But since the players and coaches were meeting each other for the first time, lineups were experimented with constantly, not giving the other side, or even the coach making the changes, a true indication of his team's potential.

"We have no scouting. The camp in Del Mar was simply a camp," said Arena, who also shared time training the U.S. under-23 (Olympic) team. "It's not easy, we had a couple of problems: one, we have no real scouting information; two, it was difficult training on the east coast because of the weather, San Jose I guess has an edge there; and three it's relatively early. You can't put a whole lot into performance after the first game."

Those things considered, technical skill will probably overshadow and tactical planning by the coaches on Saturday.

That may put the onus on the star players, all-time U.S. leading scorer Eric Wynalda for the Clash, and for Washington, American midfielder John Harkes and Bolivian national team striker Marco Etcheverry.

"This game could come down to that," Calloway said.

NCAA: Northwestern's Autry can be in movie

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Darnell Autry will be in the movies, after all.

The NCAA decided Friday that Autry, Northwestern's star running back, ought to be in pictures — or at least have that right.

The administrative review panel granted the sophomore theater major a waiver of an NCAA rule prohibiting student athletes from appearing in commercial films.

Autry, 19, of Tempe, Ariz., could have been suspended or been stripped of his remaining two years of eligibility if he had appeared in the movie and the NCAA's rule had been upheld in court.

On Wednesday, a circuit judge in Chicago granted the 1995 Heisman Trophy finalist a temporary restraining order so he could accept the unpaid movie part this summer in Rome.

NCAA spokeswoman Kathryn Reith said from Overland Park, Kan., that the panel decided to waive the rule in Autry's case because he is a theater major and the role is not connected to his athletic ability. She also noted conflicting interpretations of NCAA rules, saying one interpretation lets student athletes appear in television productions but not in films.

Reith said she did not think this issue had ever come up before. "I think it certainly will lead to this rule being examined" again, she said.

In Chicago, Autry's attorney, Mike Abernathy, said, "We haven't seen the waiver yet, but it sounds like it's great news and it sounds like the NCAA did the right thing."

Autry, of Tempe, Ariz., has been offered an unpaid part in two scenes of a supernatural thriller called "The 18th Angel." The movie's director, William Bindley, planned to pay Autry's travel expenses and other costs, but would not pay him for acting.

Autry rushed for 100 yards or more in every game last season, and he led Northwestern, a perennial Big Ten doormat, to a 10-1 season and a berth in the Rose Bowl for the first time since 1949.

Sampson staying at OU; agrees to 10-year contract

Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — Oklahoma basketball coach Kelvin Sampson said Friday that he will stay with the Sooners, ending speculation that he would return to his home state to coach North Carolina State.

"I made a commitment when I came here," Sampson said. "There's a lot of unfinished business."

Sampson will be getting an extended contract. "We're ready for a 10-year partnership," university president David Boren said. Sampson is in the second year of a seven-year deal.

"Bottom line is, I was happy at the University of Oklahoma," Sampson said during a news conference as he stood between Boren and athletic director Donnie Duncan. Sampson wouldn't say whether he was actually offered the job at North Carolina State.

Sampson said he made the decision to stay on Thursday after talking with Duncan about the future of the program. Among the points discussed were possible changes to Lloyd Noble Arena.

Duncan said he thought that the university would be able to accommodate Sampson's concerns.

Although Sampson did not actively seek the N.C. State job, he said he was not surprised when athletic director Todd Turner called him after Les Robinson resigned in March. The Wolfpack finished 15-16 and in last place in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Sampson, 39, whose current contract gives him a reported $400,000 annually, told his team and supporters at Oklahoma's annual basketball banquet last week that he was not interested in seeking another job.

Sampson is 40-22 in two season since he came to Oklahoma from Washington State. Oklahoma was 17-13 this year, losing in the opening round of the NCAA tournament.

His career record in 13 seasons is 216-170.

Hospital releases Olympic medalist Flo Jo day after she suffered seizure

ST. LOUIS — Florence Griffith Joyner was released from a hospital Friday, a day after she suffered a seizure aboard an airplane.

Florence Griffith Joyner suffers seizure aboard airplane.

Sister-in-law and fellow track star Jackie Joyner-Kersee said the Olympic gold medalist suffered the seizure Thursday while on her way to the fourth annual Jackie Joyner-Kersee East St. Louis Relays.

"She's doing fine and I'd like for all of you to keep her in your prayers," Joyner-Kersee said.

Griffith Joyner was released at about midday Friday from Barnes-Jewish Hospital. Her family asked that no other details be released, hospital spokeswoman Kim Collins said.

Her husband, Al Joyner, told family members it was the first time his 36-year-old wife had suffered a seizure.

Griffith Joyner, known to fans as Flo Jo, is the current world-record holder in the 100 and 200 meter dashes. She won three gold medals and a silver medal in the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, South Korea.

BUCHAREST, Romania — She scored perfect 10s at the Olympics, but opponents of Romania's ruling party are finding plenty of fault with Nadia Comaneci's lavish wedding plans.

Comaneci and her fiance, U.S. gold medal gymnast Bart Conner, are to be married April 27 at a palace built by deposed dictator Nicolae Ceausescu. Some 1,500 people have been invited to the wedding.

Opposition figures complain the event will bolster the ruling party of President Ion Iliescu ahead of fall elections by cashing in on Comaneci's appeal in her native land.

Opposition media also have pointed to the contrast between the planned lavish feast and the general poverty in Romania.

Comaneci was 14 in 1976 when she became the first gymnast ever to score a perfect 10 at the Olympics. She fled Romania in November 1989, just one month before Ceausescu was ousted and executed in a violent revolution.

Conner, 38, won a gold medal at the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics.

ISTANBUL, Turkey — Arthur Miller pledged solidarity Friday with a Turkish novelist convicted for criticizing his country's treatment of its Kurdish minority.

Yasar Kemal was handed a 20-month suspended sentence in March for writing an article that a Turkish court claimed was "inciting hatred."

"In this age, when we send our thoughts anywhere at the touch of a button, you are forbidden, on pain of imprisonment, of letting certain thoughts past your lips," the American playwright wrote in a letter to Kemal. "What a painful absurdity!"

The letter was forwarded to Kemal by American PEN, a writers' group.

Turkey, sensitive about its Kurdish population's aspirations and weary of an 11-year-old war for autonomy by Kurdish rebels, prosecutes many writers and journalists who touch on the topic.

More than 100 people are currently jailed for their writings or speeches.

HONOLULU — The Honolulu Symphony is trying to continue its newly harmonious existence, appointing a new music director.

Samuel Wong, formerly the assistant conductor of the New York Philharmonic, signed a three-year, $300,000 contract on Thursday. Wong, a 33-year-old Canadian, becomes the symphony's first permanent director since Donald Johanos left in 1992.

Wong studied music at Harvard University and has directed orchestras in Montreal, Tokyo, Hong Kong, Singapore, New York, Brussels, Mexico City and Israel.

The 62-member symphony recently resumed operations after a two-year hiatus caused by a rift between musicians and symphony management.

DAYTON, Ohio — Mary Higgins Clark says there's no mystery about how to become a writer: Write.

"People always say I'll start writing 'as soon as' — as soon as the kids are grown, the dog dies, whatever," the mystery author said Thursday in a speech at Memorial Hall. "I say, 'Nope, it ain't gonna happen with that attitude.'"

It was difficult for Clark to find time to write after her husband died of a heart attack in 1964 and she was left to raise five small children alone. She said she made time by getting up two hours before the kids needed breakfast.

Clark has written 15 books since 1975, including the recently released "Moonlight Becomes You." Before that, she wrote short stories and spots for syndicated radio shows.
