Safe-Crackers To Take Part In Film For Law Officers

Some Texas burglars are going to be asked to crack a safe under the eyes of the law—but there'll be no punishment for it.

The yeggs have signified their willingness to cooperate with Texas Ranger Frank Probst, Amarillo, in demonstrating their methods of "knob-knocking," "peeling," "shelling," and other illegal safe opening methods under the eyes of movie cameras.

A series of movies are to be made, with four Panhandle Counties chipping in to foot the estimated $3,500 cost for equipment, film, repair and replacement of the safes which will be damaged in the process.

Probst, accompanied by Sheriff R. H. Jordan, told the county commissioners yesterday every burglar has his set way of opening a safe—he just can't help himself—and when he tries to fool you the addition or subtraction he places there is just as if he had hung a sign pointing to himself, Probst told the commissioners.

The movies are to be used as an educational film for law enforcement officers of the Panhandle, the rest of Texas, and neighboring states.

Expert Says Women Run This Country

LONDON, Aug. 11 — UP—The United States is a nation run by women, and they are women different from those anywhere else in the world.

That, at any rate, is the opinion of Dr. E. J. Dingwall, noted British psychologist and author.

So, he warned, the forthcoming Kinsey report on the sex behavior of women will apply only to the females of the United States. And whatever conclusions are drawn won't have much bearing on the women of the rest of the world.

According to Dr. Dingwall, American women began moving away from other women as far back as the days of the Pilgrims. It was then the hardships of settling the New World made them equal partners of their menfolk centuries ahead of the rest of the world.

Dr. Dingwall presently is busy revising a manuscript on American womanhood which in its first draft was so critical that publishers—possibly because they are mostly married men—did not dare handle it.

It represents a generation of study of American women and their environment, and the preliminary outline predicted years ago the bust would become an American cult.

The major factor of American life, in Dr. Dingwall's view, is that the women have become so dominant. They live so much longer than men that they gradually are inheriting the national wealth in the process. This has made the United States practically a matriarchy.

Dr. Dingwall received lots of comment and piles of angry letters some years ago when he announced 20 years of research convinced him European women led happier sex lives than American women.

He said American women had become dominant in many fields in the United States and had committed the biological error of taking that dominance into the bedroom. The result had been a deluge of wrecked marriages, complexes and rich psychiatrists.

Rogers Sees No Special Congress Meet

Rep. Walter Rogers expressed doubt that a special session of Congress would be called this fall by President Eisenhower.

"Presidents do not like special sessions, and it is one of the reasons that the raise of the statutory debt limit was proposed before adjournment," Rogers said.

The Pampa congressman added he believed the chances are that the debt increase will not be needed.

Th hard core of anti-spenders will have to be shown that an absolute necessity exists for increasing the public debt limit before they will go along with the move, Rogers said, adding, it was this same hard core which prevented the debt increase from going through Congress this session.

Two important pieces of legislation bypassed this year by Congress are by no means dead, Rogers said, referring to broadening the Social Security program and revision of the Taft-Hartley law.

The proposals on revising the Taft-Hartley law, Rogers continued, are so contrary to the late Sen. Taft's philosophies that action on it was put off due to his "untimely death."

Many who would be included under the broadened social security laws do not want to be in the program, Rogers added. It is likely it will be high on the list for congressional deliberation early in 1954.

MATURE PARENT

By MURIEL LAWRENCE

Brick is eight years old. He is proud of the fact that he lives next door to St. Lapham, star quarterback of their town's high school football team.

When St and the big boys have an afternoon workout, Brick sits against the fence, beside the water pit, nibbling grass blades as he watches his hero play. After the game, St lets Brick and his other youthful fans escort him home.

One Saturday, when big, handsome St had floored the opposing team with two touchdowns, Brick asked for and was given permission to carry home his helmet and sweater. At his house, St took his belongings, grinned and balled his fist, "ma, a player like me, your adorer's jaw."

"Me and Red Grange, huh, Brick?" St said.

Brick beamed. "When I'm big, St," he said, "I'm going to play even better football than you do."

As St ran up his porch steps, a boy Brick didn't know very well gave him a shove. "Yah, you dope," he jeered. "I bet this was the last time you get to carry St Lapham's helmet home. I bet your good and sore at you for saying you're going to play better than him when you're big."

That evening Brick didn't have much appetite. When his mother came to say goodnight to him, she asked if he felt sick anywhere, but instead of answering her, he began to cry.

After he had told her his fear, his mother got him a wet washcloth and sat down on his bed. "Did you tell St what you would play better ball than he does some day to hurt him?" she asked.

"No, ma," Brick said. "I think he's swell. That's why..."

The tears were choking him again, so his mother gave him back to washcloth. Then she gave him an important rule for protecting the self-confidence of little boys and girls.

Brick's mother said, "If you did not mean to hurt St by what you said, then what you said cannot hurt you. If you didn't mean to take anything away from St that belongs to him, then nothing that belongs to you can be taken away."

Ten minutes later Brick was fast asleep.

It is our business to know when a child has been frightened by someone who has an interest in disturbing his motives. Little boys and girls are not advised in precise self-expression and this awkwardness can put them at a disadvantage among other children as well as grownups.

Train them in self-defense. You and I both know people who live in constant torment of anxiety over whether they said the wrong thing there or did the wrong thing here. This terror of what others will think of them is due to the fact that they have not been trained to know why they say and do things themselves, so that they have become accustomed to letting others assign motives to them.

Their self-confidence therefore becomes dependent upon other people and if the other people don't want to give them any confidence, they don't have any. This is so discouraging that such foolishly people go right out and make bigger and better mistakes.

We don't want any nonsense like that for the children we love.

RUTH MILLETT

I received this letter from a troubled farm boy:

"Since you help others, maybe you could help me. I live on a farm and my Dad works in a plant. The whole trouble is he doesn't want to do any work on the farm. He says he does his share by working in the plant."

"It was his idea that we move to a farm, but he expects my mother, my brother and sister, and myself to do all of the work."

"I am 14 years old. My brother is 12, and my sister is eight."

"The three of us and Mother have to milk the cows, clean the barn, feed the hogs, take care of the chickens, and even do the plowing."

"My Dad gets a day off a week but none of the rest of us do. Do you think he is being fair?"

"Whether he is being fair or not is a question only your Mother and Dad can answer. It won't do any good for you to worry about it. You might remember this, however. In a great many families today it is necessary for the man of the family to have help in earning a living."

"That often means that the wife takes a job and the children are left to shift for themselves."

"Your Dad has worked things out so that at least your Mother is at home with you. She may have to work hard. But she is there when you get home from school, and the children are left to shift for themselves."

"You say it was your Dad's idea that the family move to a farm. But did it ever occur to you that perhaps he thought it was the only way he could give the five of you a good home and good food?"

"He must also provide a little security for his old age so that you kids won't have to take care of him when he is too old to work in the plant."

"If the five of you can pull together for a few years you'll be a

MRS. LILLIAN KEAHAY ZAMORA

Mother, Piano Teacher Finds Time To Write Honorable Mention Short Story

"When you want to write you find time some how," reported Mrs. Lillian Keahay Zamora, 29 Yeager. Besides being employed at the Texas Railroad Commission, a piano teacher and a mother of two active children she found time to write "There's So Much Good In The Worst Of Us," which won an honorable mention in a recent conference.

Mrs. Zamora has just returned from the Southwest Writers Conference in Corpus Christi where she received honorable mention on a short story. She commented that her short stories received very constructive criticism with the plots classified as extremely good. Her notices also gave her credit for the good choice of words. One criticism on a short story reported that the material was too short while another analysis said that another story was too long.

The mild mannered writer remarked that she was impressed with the criticism as she and other amateurs ranked with big name professionals attending the annual conference. At least two conference staff members read each entry and in many cases four members looked over each manuscript.

Mrs. Zamora is a member of Pampa Writers Club and likes to discuss her writing efforts with others interested in that pastime. She finds most constructive criticism comes from people who are trying to sell material because they are interested in the characters, choice of words and technique as well as plot.

Zamora, a very soft spoken woman, remarked that there were several top notch writers who lectured at the convention including J. Frank Dobie.

The writer, who uses her maiden name, Lillian Keahay, as her pen name, has had no formal writing training although her English teacher at Texas State College for Women encouraged her to write.

Her favorite work is writing short-short stories.

Mrs. Zamora who has lived in Pampa about 20 years, is the mother of a daughter, Kay, 17, and a son, Phil, age 9.

The energetic short story writer says that she has also planned to start something new in music in kindergarten this fall. She plans to have a musical kindergarten for children who are too young for private music lessons but who are just old enough to learn the piano notes.

Grace Friend

Dear Grace Friend,

I am only 18 and I have noticed little wrinkles under my eyes. It looks like I'm an old woman already! This really bothers me. Do you know what it is from or what I can do to get rid of them? I get at least 8 hours sleep a night and try and eat all the right vegetables etc. My skin is kind of oily but I wash my face every night and put night cream on it. What shall I do?

Sincerely yours,
Very Worried

Dear Very Worried

It may be that you are squinting in this bright summer sun. If the light seems to be bothering your eyes when you are out of doors, perhaps you will need dark glasses. We all have a few wrinkles around our eyes regardless of our age. Almost every emotion causes a change of expression around the eyes and of course character wrinkles result. At your age they usually are very faint and certainly aren't noticeable under makeup.

If you feel that yours are worse than wrinkles you observe around your friends' eyes, it might be due to eye strain in which case you should have your eyes examined.

ANTIQUE TEASPOONS

Dear Grace Friend

I have three silver teaspoons my grandfather bought in California during the gold Rush days in 1849. I am anxious to sell them. Do you think they would have a very value? They are in good condition. I would rather not sell them to a shop as I think I could get more otherwise.

May

Dear May

I am sure that the spoons will be of value to a collector of such articles but I have no idea what it would be. It would depend on many factors.

Show the spoons to a dealer and have them valued before you try to dispose of them. Thus you will know about what to expect and can make a better bargain.

War Without Victor Ended In Strange Truce Program

By PHIL NEWSOM

United Press Foreign Analyst

The United States is learning the facts of life about the Korean truce.

One of the harshest facts so far is Gen. Mark Clark's estimate the Chinese Communists may be holding as many as twice the number of American war prisoners—they have admitted.

This not to imply that the truce should be regretted.

It was halted, temporarily at least, slaughter on the battlefield and it is bringing home 3,313 American war prisoners.

But subsequent events have pointed up the warning of military commanders a truce simply marks a suspension of hostilities, not the end.

Truce Without Victor

Further complicating the situation are the rules under which the Korean war was fought, wherein commanders in the field were governed not by military but by diplomatic necessities.

So this strangest of all wars ended in the strangest of all truces.

This is a truce without a victor and without a vanquished—in which neither side can impress its will except behind its own lines.

Hence the enormity of the problem raised by General Clark.

Clark says after the present exchange is completed demands will be made through the armistice commission for an accounting of all prisoners.

What kind of retaliation if satisfaction is not gained there, then the problem will be taken before the international conference which will try to settle Korea's political future this fall.

Secretary of State Dulles threatened United States retaliation against the Reds.

But what kind of retaliation? To the people of the United States, the holding of some 3,000 Reds for a like number of Americans taken prisoner, the number who trade—nor would it even be likely to impress the Chinese.

Another very great difficulty is the fact it will be many months, if ever, before registration teams are able to learn anywhere near accurately the number of Americans taken prisoner, the number who died in Red prison camps and those who simply are missing and presumed dead.

Pampa Scouters To Council Meet

Four Pampa Scouters are expected to be on hand for this week's Adobe Walls Council round-up organizational meeting.

Get-together has been slated for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the city commission room, according to Ray Evans, council round-up chairman.

Purpose of the session will be to organize the methods to be used this fall in recruiting additional boys and leaders into the Boy Scout program, Evans said.

Among those present will be E. L. (Smiley) Henderson, Santa Fe District round-up chairman; Fred Brook, district survey chairman; Malcolm Hinkle, district chairman of "Maverick Nights"; and Kay Fancher, district chairman of the climax event.

Emphasizing that there will be representatives in Pampa from the 12 Texas counties and three Oklahoma counties in the council, Paul Beisenherz, council Scout executive, explained how the round-up works.

Immediately after the opening of school, a survey is made in each Pampa school of all boys, between the ages of 8 and 16, who are not registered in Scouting. Each boy is given a chance to fill out an application card which is turned over to Scout officials who, in turn, call on the boy in his home.

The Good And Bad

Taxpayer's Dollar, a publication of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, recently summarized the government's present financial situation and speculated on what may be expected in the near future. Some of the facts involved are depressing — others give grounds for optimism.

First of all, during the fiscal year which ended on the last day of June, the U. S. Treasury took in more money in taxes than in any year in our history. Yet when the books were closed, the deficit was the largest in history, save for when we were engaged in world wars. One reason for this was that revenues, great as they were, did not reach the estimates. A second is that even though a new administration was in power for five months of the fiscal year, the spending was a reflection of the programs and policies established by the preceding administration.

June is always a big spending month, and this June lived up to past precedent with a vengeance. According to Taxpayer's Dollar, of 59 budgets carried in the Daily Treasury Statement, 32 were higher this June than last. It is a matter of interest that 25 of these 32 concerned non-defense activities. Spending actually declined on some defense projects, including the atomic energy program. The biggest jump of all was registered by the Commodity Credit Corporation — up 1109 per cent over June, 1952. Second was the Production and Marketing Administration, up 634 per cent. Other rises included the Forest Service, 68 per cent; Office of Education, 43 per cent; and the Legislative Branch, 28 per cent. By contrast, spending increases by the military services were smaller, ranging from 13 per cent to 18 per cent.

So much for the past. What of the fiscal year that began July 1st?

To quote Taxpayer's Dollar again, "Budget cuts now being made for fiscal 1954 offer more than a little hope for real economy within a very short time." The publication then went into what has been done so far, and what can be anticipated.

On the first 10 appropriation bills passed by the house, the handsome sum of $2,987,000,000 was cut from the request made in the budget submitted by President Truman just before he left office. Many of the cuts were suggested by President Eisenhower — others originated in the House.

The House Appropriations Committee has approved an appropriation for the Defense Department which is $6,286,000,000 under the Truman request. Moreover, the appropriation includes more than $2,000,000,000 for the Korean War, which was taken care of in a separate measure up to now. So that $2,000,000,000 should be added to the reduction.

Mr. Truman proposed $7,600,000,000 for foreign aid for the current year. It looks as if the actual appropriation will be around $4,500,000,000. If that turns out to be the case, the slash here will be $3,100,000,000.

So, summing up, there is a possibility that the total cut from the Truman budget may exceed the tremendous figure of $14,373,000,000.

Bold Inconsistency

In one of his Newsweek columns, Raymond Moley praised the Administration for its policy of curtailing public power development, and in encouraging development by taxing private enterprise. Then he wrote: "There is a bold inconsistency in the appeals of advocates of socialized power, because in one breath they claim the virtues of bringing new private industries into a region by giving them below cost power, while they denounce the private power companies. Are we to believe that private people engaged in selling electricity are all bad, while people selling other things are all good? Such a subsidy to favored industries is as unfair as were the fat preferences given by the tariff in days of old.

"Such considerations no doubt weight heavily in these days of crushing taxation and vast federal expenditures." The old claim that only the government is capable of undertaking major power projects has been blasted to bits — there is no needed project which the power industry is unable or unwilling to build. The debate over huge pending projects on the Snake River in Idaho and the Niagara River in New York are dramatic proof of that.

We could take a long step toward the universally desired goals of a balanced budget, a reduced national debt, and eventual tax reduction by getting the government out of the power business as soon as possible — and, in the meantime, refusing to spend a nickel of the taxpayer's money on any project which private enterprise is willing to take on.

Best Salesman

Retailers "can't get along" without newspaper advertising "and they'd better not try." Those words didn't emanate from an advertising solicitor, but from a retailer, J. C. Penney, chairman of the board of the company that bears his name, and a man who knows how to sell merchandise.

"We can't do business without newspaper advertising," said Mr. Penney. "The newspapers are our market place where we come to cry our wares."

In thousands of communities the local newspapers reach millions of readers regularly with a visual record of news and advertising that is not matched by any other means of communication.

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES

More and Better Jobs Under Laissez Faire

A reader asks me to prove that laissez-faire would prevent long periods of deflation and unemployment, and production would increase and increase and increase.

Since nowadays very few people believe in laissez-faire or understand what it means, I think it would be a good idea to try to explain laissez-faire and the results that it would help produce.

Laissez-faire originally meant, and that is the way I use it, that the government should respect the human initiative of every individual. I believe it originated when France was in serious condition and the Prime Minister Colbert asked an industrialist what he could do for industry. The answer of the industrialist Legendre was "Laissez-nous faire (Let us alone)." Literally that meant let people do or make what they choose, non-interference, a phrase used in economics, especially by the Physiocrats repudiating government interference intended to foster and regulate labor, commerce, manufacturing, etc. It does not mean that the man who believes in laissez-faire rejects industry, unity, organization, association or charity and love. It only means that the government does not plan production or interfere with human initiative.

Inductive Reasoning If we are to prove that laissez-faire will result in more and better jobs, we will have to do it by inductive reasoning. And inductive reasoning simply means drawing conclusions from specific instances. Where every instance complies to a rule, then we have a rule. It is a common statement that "It takes the exception to prove the rule." That is pure fallacy. "That came from the statement 'It takes the exception to test the rule.' If you have an exception, you have no rule. That is the inductive way of establishing rules of reasoning.

Now I can think of no exceptions to the rule or axiom that the whole is greater than part of a whole. And if this be an axiom, then it seems logical to conclude that all people having the right to use all their initiative and energy to create will create more than part of the people using part of their initiative and energy to create wealth. If the government in any way interferes with human initiative, we do not have the total use of all the creative energy of all the individuals. Therefore, it seems logical to conclude that laissez-faire is essential to increase production. It also seems logical to conclude that all the people are better able to plan production than the majority, or those representing the majority. It also seems logical to conclude that men will work harder and have more interest in producing when they get all they produce as, is the case when laissez-faire is practiced and the government uses its powers to protect free competition.

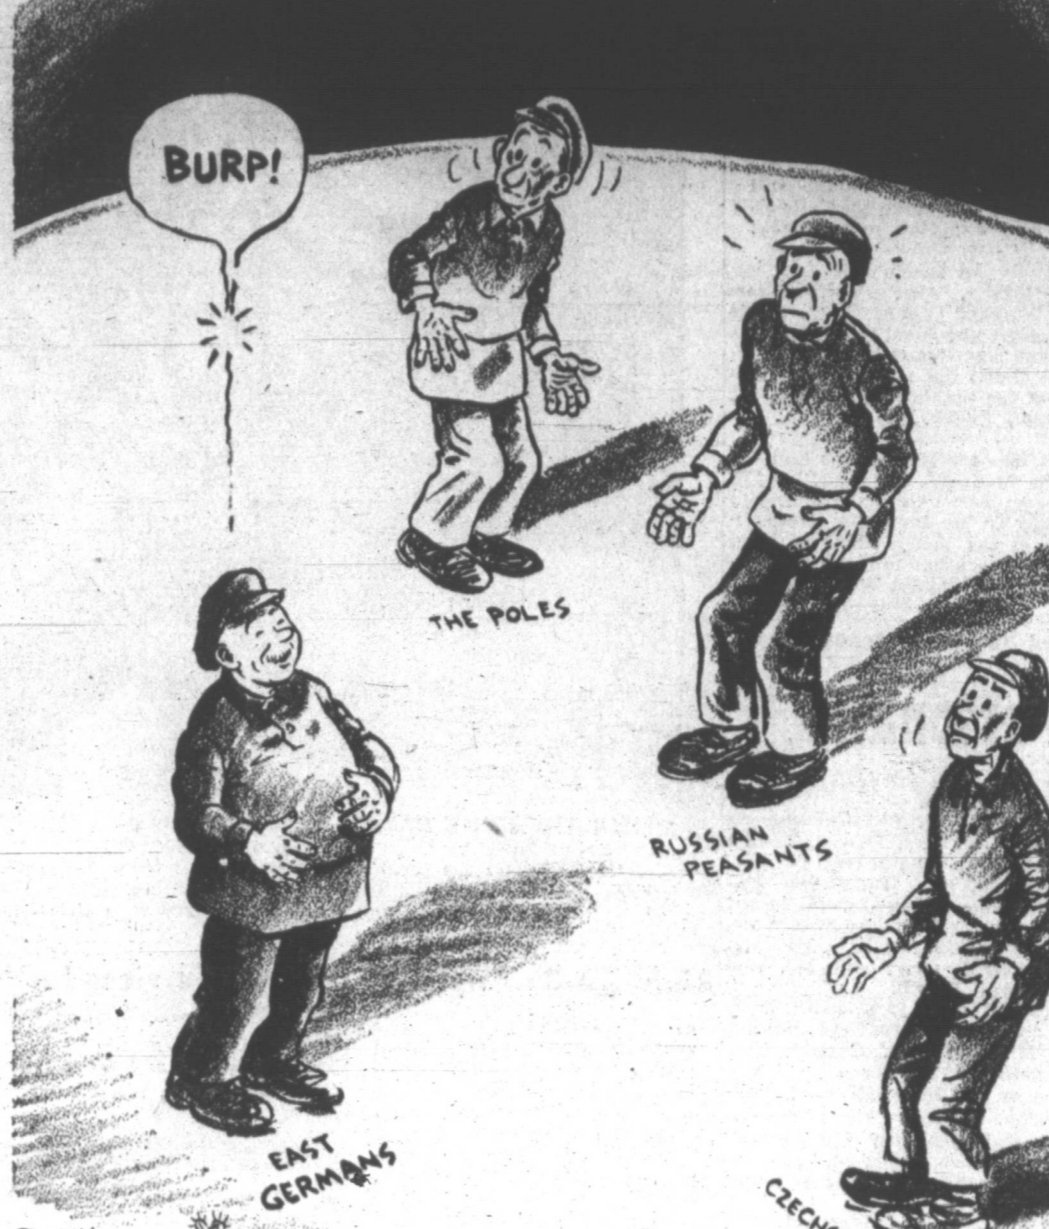

Not A Substitute For Love No person who understands laissez-faire believes that laissez-faire is a substitute for love or for assistance. It simply means that love and assistance must be voluntary instead of being managed and controlled by the initiation of force by way of the government. As Bastiat said: "We (the laissez-faire advocates) repudiate the forms of association that are forced upon us, not free association. We repudiate forced fraternity, not true fraternity. We repudiate the artificial unity that does nothing more than derive persons of individual responsibility. We do not repudiate the natural unity of mankind under Providence."

So laissez-faire is not a complete law of human relations, but it is an essential part of human relations because initiating force by way of the government and using compulsion is a complete violation of love and voluntary assistance. It is a violation of the Golden Rule and the Coveting Commandment. If one man does not want another man to interfere with his creative ability, then he should not want to join with others to interfere with other persons' creative ability.

Evidence From History And if we look at those nations that more nearly practice laissez-faire than other nations, we invariably find that the standard of living of the citizens of those nations are higher than in those nations where laissez-faire is less nearly approached.

Slavery, of course, was a complete violation of laissez-faire. In 1857 Hinton Rowan Helper wrote a book called "The Impending Crisis of the South and How to Meet It." In this book he pointed out that when the Constitution was formed, the South was equally rich as the North, but 76 years later when the book was written, the North had 2 1/2 times as much wealth as the South. His explanation was that men will produce more when they are free than they will when they are slaves. All history gives evidence of this fact. The United States after we freed the slaves up until we passed the 15th Amendment and the Federal Reserve Act and other government laws that interfere with human initiative, increased her standard of living for all the people faster than any other nation in the world. And when the government began to more seriously regulate credit and thus violate laissez-faire, we commenced to have long periods of unemployment and one war after another. And certainly no one will contend that real consumable production can increase and increase and increase when a great part of it is used for war, as rapidly as it would when it is used to satisfy the wants of man.

The Voice Of America

National Whirligig... Post-Stalin Shifts Confuse, Demoralize American Reds

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—American Communists have become completely bewildered by the bewildering post-Stalin shifts of policies and personalities in the Kremlin.

The operators of the Red apparatus in the United States — the front executives and organizers, newspaper editors and propagandists, legal advisers and underground agents — have been caught with their ideologies down. They have had to halt all activities, charged with "keeping them under surveillance, pending the emergence of a new Soviet ruler."

They are in a quandary. Like Sec. Dulles, they cannot make out whether Georgi Malenkov, sincere or merely Machiavellian in his recent past gestures, including his acceptance of the West's invitation to a high-level conference.

The American Reds' present predicament recalls their confusion of August, 1939, when Stalin negotiated a friendship pact with Hitler, thus precipitating World War II. On the very day that Der Fuehrer became a Russian ally, as the New York Daily Worker was denouncing him as a "Fascist brute."

The Red New York editors today have no idea what the "party" will be tomorrow, or who will be their big-boss—Malenkov, Molotov, Zhukov, Sokolovsky or the Russian equivalent of Joe Doakes.

Muddled minds — Their confused state is illustrated most graphically in current hearings before the Subversive Activities Control Board. That semi-judicial body is now listening to appeals by 12 alleged front groups from Attorney General Brownell's ruling that they are Moscow directed. If SACB upholds Brownell, they must register and file periodical reports on finances and activities.

The conduct of the appellant's legal and propaganda staffs would shame a first-year law student or a cub reporter. Charging "bias and prejudice," they are seeking to disqualify ex-Senator Harry P. Cain of Washington and Watson Miller, former Immigration Commissioner, and American Legion official. But the evidence they advance tends only to convict them of serving Russian rather than American interests.

Strange Defense Tactics Cain was accused of prejudice on the ground that, while Senator, he supported NATO, which made him a "vehement promoter of enmity and war" between Russia and the United States, according to the Reds' counsel. Since NATO forms one basis of our foreign policy, it is obvious that only an emotionally and ideologically upset lawyer would rely on such evidence.

Fair Enough? Pegler Includes McCarthy On List Of Reliable GOPs

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Regardless of the partisan division of strength in the Senate, the Republicans of the strictly constitutional persuasion are only about one-third of the membership. It is impossible, of course, to draw a firm straight line separating the deviationists, as the Communists would call such republicans, from the river-to-river Republicans. For example, even Joe McCarthy, who is damned as an "isolationist" and "reactionary," is not an unconditional hard-core man. On foreign policy and foreign expenditures, he runs with President Eisenhower and thus with his worst enemy, Lehman, of New York. Yet, as a fighting Anti-Red and a political heavyweight who has warned Eisenhower not to push him around, he is an acceptable Republican.

On the eastern seaboard, including New England, most of the ostensible Republicans must be written off or heavily discounted. Margaret Smith, of Maine, would be an acceptable Democrat. She would not have to drop any present principle or adopt any new one. Ives, of New York, and Sallonstall, of Massachusetts, are about the same. The two Connecticut pebbles, Prescott Bush and William Furey, will give no sign of meeting the minimum general requirements of hard-core men. They probably should be written off. John Williams, of Delaware, and John Bricker, of Ohio, are, if not the two best, then certainly two of the best unconditional Republicans. The definition of this type of Republican is one who is Pro-American in all things, including American sovereignty, foreign policy and foreign spending, economy of government, the United Nations, taxation and government in the private lives of the citizens through agencies and laws which were unthinkable before the brain-washing process of the New Deal began in 1933.

Many serious impairments of the constitutional rights of the people are carried on through the unions. These include denial of due process through the mock-trials of the labor union courts, denial of the right to work, and confiscation of money by fines and assessments. Such invasions of the personal life of the citizen are the policy and the actual acts of the federal government. The unions count on these things, except by governmental desire.

A canvass of these Republicans would require a dull analysis of the conduct of each in minute instances. Some are flabby. Dirksen of Illinois who had momentary illusions of grandeur at the 1952 convention and even aroused some hopes in other Republicans, is a weak one. On foreign policy and expenditures, he threw in with "Mr. President," accepting not Ike's leadership, but the ill-disguised dictation of a political force of eastern manipulators. Dirksen knows that the President gets his policies in these matters from the same operators who engineered his nomination in Chicago. Dirksen is not as far gone as Smith, Sallonstall and Ives, but he is vacillating.

Who are the reliable, then? I would include McCarthy because he has developed into a power opposed to the worst of Ike's backing. That he has included strange names, Lehman, the New York Democrat, who has been appeased by Ike at every turn on the admission of unqualified and highly questionable European refugees and on foreign relations. It is ironic and baffling that a president who is nominally Republican should run with a senator who is so radically Democratic and repudiate the most authentic Republicans. But there you are. These strange facts cannot be simplified nor shrugged off. That is the obvious problem from the drawing board onward. Then what? They had to plow up half of Elizabeth N. J., twice before they discovered the right way to keep reversibles disciplined. My memory is that maybe 86 people are in graves because props reversed when they shouldn't. Mops, all of them. Those 86 cooled off passengers can't testify, but I would think they were not in awe of scientists.

"A point," I said. "Then some real four-eyed mops got up in Chicago or somewhere and said man would never break the speed of sound in a plane. They gave reasons. Scientific reasons. It looked tough. Now they say we can't break loose from our earth. We would incinerate passing through the atmosphere. The wings would burn off, they say. One of us will do it before too long and leave those mops with eggs on their vests. I don't say the moon or Venus, that's for those real gone magazines. But out there maybe 1,000 miles away. What's so hard about it? Or impossible? The trigger-happy lads will be squirting at each other out there in less than 20 years."

LOOKING SIDWAYS

By WHITNEY BOLTON

WASHINGTON, D. C.: This boy was handling it nice and easy and the plane was going real fine. It moved. Right down the Eastern seaboard with the land unfolding in the heat haze on the right and the sea rippling like blue silk on the left. He didn't grab at his knobs or twist his rim dials as though wrenching a coffee can open. His long, thin fingers moved along the instruments like a concert pianist feeling out a strange baby grand before digging Gramms out of it.

If he had to move a knob, his fingers touched it lightly and moved it just enough and he sat there holding a quarter of million dollars of hot flying machinery as though it were a bowl of cereal. That easy and casual.

The Chesapeake Bay Bridge shot out under us in links and we saw Washington ahead under a fog of heat. The nose was cutting through the air at a speed not credible to describe and all seemed friendly and safe as he let it respond to his finger-tip touches. It wasn't risky or exciting or odd. It seemed right to be doing this. The air beneath seemed as solid as a warehouse floor.

"I don't buy scientists," he said. "I don't buy even five cents worth of them. They are enrolled in the mophed division. Reel gone mops, most of them."

"They put you up here," I said. "Distantly," he said. "Only distantly. Mostly it was a lot of guys who aren't alive any more. Guys willing to put their hands on a piece of paper design and see if it would do what the paper said it should. Sometimes it didn't. In the beginning, mainly, it didn't. They weren't around to testify when the mopheds looked at the broken pieces."

"Examples?" I said. "Reversible props," he said. "Hughes had to butter himself over half of Beverly Hills on a Sunday afternoon before they found out their amazement that if you didn't pin them down good the reversibles would walk on you while in flight. That took brains? Seems to me it was an obvious problem from the drawing board onward. Then what? They had to plow up half of Elizabeth N. J., twice before they discovered the right way to keep reversibles disciplined. My memory is that maybe 86 people are in graves because props reversed when they shouldn't. Mops, all of them. The old couple had just celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Now the wife was blind and they sat by the open fireplace, hand in hand, with her head on his shoulder, and reminisced.

He — (tenderly) Mary, you're still my sweetheart, in fact, I've never had another sweetheart because I never found anyone as sweet and beautiful as you.

She — Henry, you're as big a liar as I am, and I believe you just the same.

Oilers Trump B-Sox To Complete Best Homestand of Season

Hughes To Hurl 1st Road Game Tonight

The Oilers completed their most successful homestand of the season last night, defeating the Abilene Blue Sox for their fifth win in six starts on the stand, and today the Pampana will embark on a four-day road tour to Borger and Amarillo.

Big Jake Henson was in rare form for the Oilers last night, setting the cellar dwellers down on nine hits and shutting them out from the fourth inning on. Henson thus won his seventh game of the year against four losses, 10-3.

Eddie Hughes will open on the road for the Oilers tonight at Borger. Hughes will be in quest of his ninth win of the season. The crafty left-hander has won his only two starts since being recalled from Baton Rouge where he was optioned to midway through this season.

The Oilers picked up ground on only one of the four teams above them in the standings with last night's win. Pampana remained two games out of fourth place but are only 2 1/2 games behind third place Plainview and 3 1/2 behind first place Lubbock. Plainview was the only team the Oilers gained on last night, the Ponies bowing to Lubbock in a marathon, 21-3.

Henson aided his own cause last night with a two-run homer in the sixth frame that climaxed a five-run rally.

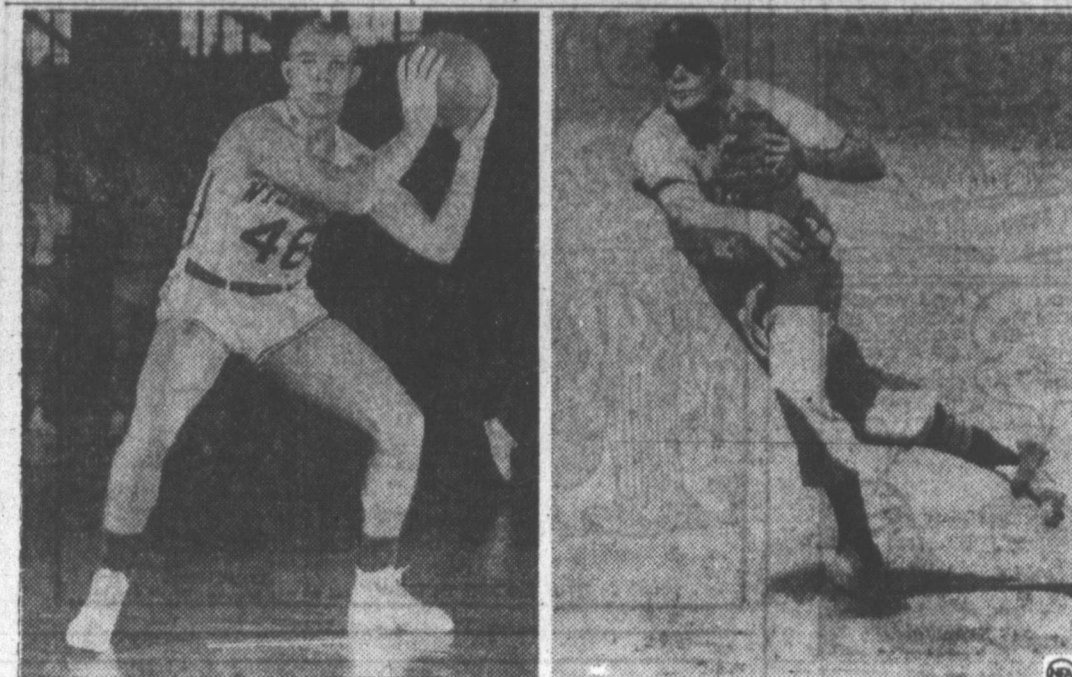

Only one of the three Sox runs was earned. The Oilers garnered 12 safeties off Newt Scrist, a Pampana pitcher his first game for the Sox. The Oilers had five earned runs for the night and five unearned as the Sox came up with five miscues.

Henson, after a shaky start, finished strong for the Oilers last night, retiring 13 of the last 14 batters to face him. Jerry Webster's double with one away in the seventh was the only Sox to get on base in the last 5 1/2 innings.

Manny Temes and Manager Porky Pawelek led the Oiler attack, each collecting three safeties. Temes had two singles and double while Pawelek rapped out three singles and was credited with as many runs-batted-in.

The Oilers opened the night's scoring in the second inning on a walk to Deck Woldt who stole second and later scored on Pawelek's single.

The Sox tied it up in the third with an unearned run. With one away, Larry Kelcher singled and scored all the way around on Oiler shortstop Dub Woolbright

Blanks Bosox On One Hit Porterfield Gets 8th 1953 Shutout

NEW YORK, Aug. 11—UP—Washington fans, who don't have much else to cheer about, were wondering Tuesday if perhaps Bob Porterfield is their best pitcher since the days of the immortal Walter Johnson.

Porterfield has a long way to go to earn that reputation but his 2-0 victory over the White Sox Monday night gave him eight shutouts for the season—the most by a Washington hurler since Johnson hurled that many 30 years ago in 1924.

The one big thrill in his big night came with nobody out in the ninth after he walked Jimmy Piersall, who had spoiled his chance for a no-hitter with a single in the third.

Up came Ted Williams as a pinch hitter but the Red Sox slugger, who honored in a similar role Sunday, struck out.

Porterfield threw Terrible Teddy four fly pitches.

"The last one was a curve that broke over the plate and he went for it," Porterfield said.

In the only other major league game, the Braves cut Boston's lead to 6 1/2 games when they topped the Cardinals, 8 to 2, on a seventh-inning homer by Warren Spahn, who won his 15th game.

It was Milwaukee's sixth consecutive victory and it was achieved quickly when the Braves batted around in the second inning to score five runs. Johnny Lgan, Andy Patko, Del Crandall, and Sid Gordon made two hits apiece as the Braves collected 11, but got only one in the four final innings off reliever Cliff Chambers. Spahn struck out five and walked only one man, one of the St. Louis runs was unearned.

In exhibition competition the Indians topped the Dodgers, 8 to 6, at Cleveland while the Browns beat Cincinnati, 9 to 5, at St. Louis.

The time of the feed has been set for 8 p.m. Sammy Baugh, former All-American for TCU and who later won All-Pro honors for Washington Redskins several years, will be the main speaker. Other distinguished guests will be Abe Martin, head coach at TCU; Wade Walker of the Texas Tech coaching staff; Larry Cunningham of the Hardin-Simmons staff; and Blaine Rideout, one of the nation's most noted trainers.

All fans of the Panhandle are cordially invited to attend the affair. The price is $1.00 which will include as many helpings as the person so desires.

Nellie Clears Up Locker Falling Incident Recently

NEW YORK, Aug. 11—UP—Once and for all, he hopes, Nellie Fox of the White Sox finally cleared up the "mystery" Tuesday of how the lockers happened to fall on him.

"I've heard a hundred rumors about how I got hurt," declared the Chicago second baseman, "so I guess I might as well set the record straight."

"First of all," he said, referring to the accident which occurred in Washington, Aug. 2, after the Senators nipped the White Sox, 1 to 0, "I didn't have a fight with Ferris Fain or anyone else on the club. I don't know how that story got started but I've been hearing it everywhere I go."

"Then there was another rumor that the lockers fell on me because I blew my top and kicked them in disgust after we lost that 1 to 0 ball game to the Senators."

"That's a pretty good theory but it didn't happen that way at all. I'll tell you what really happened but I don't know if it'll do any good because everyone seems to have their own idea."

"Anyway we had just gotten through playing the Senators and I thought I'd go home. (Nellie's home, St. Thomas, Pa., isn't far from Washington). I had taken off my uniform and was reaching into the locker for my toothbrush to take home with me when suddenly I heard Gene Bearden yell, 'look out!'"

"Luckily for me, I started back when I heard Gene's warning. If he hadn't yelled the four lockers probably would have come down on my head and I might have been hurt much more seriously."

As it was though, Fox suffered a severe sprain of his left instep and was forced to miss the next two games, both of which Chicago won, anyway.

Charles Favored To Whip Valdes

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 11—UP—Former Heavyweight Champion Ernie Charles was a 1 to 3 favorite to defeat Nino Valdes of Cuba in their scheduled 10-round bout Tuesday night and score the sixth consecutive victory of his "comeback" campaign.

Charles, who hopes to be matched with the winner of the Rocky Marciano-Roland LaStarza heavyweight title bout Sept. 24, expected to scale about 190 pounds and give away some 21 pounds to his six-foot, three-inch opponent. Charles will enter the ring with a string of five straight victories, including three knockouts.

A crowd of 3,500 was expected to contribute a gross gate of $14,000 to see a bout which Charles' manager, Jake Mintz, says will prove Ernard now "is a veritable tiger in the ring."

Wanted: A Solution To Crash Top Four In WT-NM League; Signed, Pampa Oilers

THE OILERS JUST COMPLETED their most successful homestand and yet they are only one game closer to the first division than they were when they came home from the last road jaunt.

It's a cinch the Oilers can't win at the pace they set on the just completed homestand, five wins in six starts, for the remainder of the season and if we can't gain ground by winning, then how in the heck are we going to crash the first division.

THE ONLY HOPE, of course, is for some of the teams above us in the standings to start losing a few. Plainview has set a terrific pace the past week or two. The Ponies have won seven of their last eight games.

Plainview has strengthened its pitching staff with the addition of Joe Borrego. The Ponies purchased the veteran left-hander from the Borger Gassers yesterday. "Guess we've better start concentrating on trying to overtake some of the other teams in the WT-NM first division as Borrego will give the Ponies just what they need to stay in the top rung."

IN A DRAMATIC CEREMONY yesterday, Eddie Hughes has been reinstated to the Oiler mound staff. Hughes was suspended over the

College Stars' Unknown Style Vexes Parker

DETROIT, Aug. 11—UP—Coach Buddy Parker admitted Tuesday he was a bit jittery over not knowing what kind of an attack the College All-Stars will spring on his Detroit Lions at Soldier's Field in Chicago Friday night.

The 38-year-old Texan was optimistic about his Lions' chances during the regular National Football League season but said he was worried about the Collegians because his staff knew so little about them.

"About the only thing we're certain of is that Bobby Dodd is coaching them," Parker said. "It's difficult to get ready for any game when you don't know what kind of offense the opposition will use. We have tried in the past few weeks to get as much information as we could on Dodd's style of play at Georgia Tech."

Parker said his charges were in good shape but feared the Collegians would be in better condition.

"Those boys are younger and can condition themselves more rapidly than most of the pros," he said. "We're planning on a close game."

Aside from his "close game" comment, Parker would not speculate on the outcome of the game. "But I'll tell you this," he said, "we aren't taking the All-Stars lightly."

No more scrimmages were on the Lions' practice schedule for the week and drills will taper off with light workouts Thursday morning.

"None of the boys was hurt during the previous scrimmage sessions and there won't be any more contact work before the game," Parker said. "Right now we're trying to sharpen up our offense and also work on defense."

McLean was highly pleased to see Jake Henson, who was with Oklahoma City most of this season, hurl last night's game. Henson gave one of his better performances of the season after getting off to a shaky start.

McLean as is the case with most scouts didn't commit himself on what prospects he saw on the field, but said that there were several prospects on the field last night.

TWO CLUBS IN THIS LEAGUE, Abilene and Borger, have just about disposed of all players that we started the season with them.

Abilene and Borger, have just about disposed of all players that we started the season with them. Both the Blue Sox and Gassers have only two players on their squad that started the season with their respective teams.

Manager I. B. Palmer and Chuck Steele are the only Blue Sox players who have been with the club all season while Windy Eldridge and Pat Lorenzo are the two full season players at Borger.

In comparison the Oilers have eight players who have been with us all season. They are Manager Porky Pawelek, Doug Lewis, Bert Felder, Manny Temes, Deck Woldt, Sad Sam Williams, Eddie Hughes and Max Molberg.

And still two others, Quincy Barbee and Eddie Kreller have been around most of the season. Barbee joined the club May 7 and Kreller May 26.

John Sanderson, now on the inactive list, is the ninth Oiler that was on hand for the opening date who is still around.

How To Play Par Golf

Hit Ball Straight On An Uphill Lie

Thirty-second of a series
By JULIUS BOROS
U. S. Open Champion
An uphill lie is as difficult as a downhill or level lie.
The left foot being higher than the right, there is a tendency to throw the weight back on the latter. It is necessary to compensate for this.
With the weight on the right foot, there is a tendency to hook or pull the shot to the left. To offset this, open the stance slightly and aim somewhat more to the right.
You may be faced with the problem of clearing the rise right in front of where you are standing. This is not difficult if the ball is hit properly.
Keep the head down and hit the ball squarely. The shot will come up. The natural slope helps get the ball in the air if it is hit squarely.
If you develop a tendency to hit the ball too high in the air because of the slope, take a less lofted club or even shorten the swing.
A shorter swing will aid your balance. It requires less pivot, thus gives you a better chance to control the shot.
The object is to hit the ball straight, so don't worry about a little loss of distance. Swing the club easily and try to meet the ball squarely.
You may further compensate for the unnatural weight distribution by bending the left knee a little.

TILT—Julius Boros opens his stance slightly, bends the left knee a little to maintain balance. (NEA)

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

Can You Find This Real Bridge Boner?

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

One of the troubles with Hard Luck Joe is that his feet are far too big for any normal human being. As a result, his feet are always getting in his own way, his partner's way or into his own mouth. In today's hand, for example, Joe held the South cards and managed to get himself beautifully tangled up.

There was nothing much to the play. West opened a trump, and Joe exhausted trumps in two rounds. He took a successful club finesse on the way back. He was then able to claim twelve tricks, giving up only one spade.

North looked daggers at his partner, and Joe looked apologetic. "I don't see how we could bid that slam," muttered Joe. "After all, we couldn't make the slam unless both the heart and the club finesse worked."

Joe still hasn't seen what crime he had committed. See if you can spot it for yourself before you read on.

South's crime occurred in the bidding. There was no need for him to bid four diamonds. He had already made an opening bid on a slightly doubtful hand, and there was no need to make a second bid on the same doubtful cards.

If South passed instead of bidding, North would have the chance to continue in diamonds if he chose to do so. Hence South would lose nothing by this pass.

Actually there would have been a great gain. North would not have continued the bidding in diamonds, North would have doubled the ridiculous bid of three spades with speed, delight, and gusto.

Almost any reasonable defense would strip West of his eight cards in the side suits. He would still have to lose two trump tricks, and therefore would be set six for a loss of 1700 points! No wonder North was annoyed at Joe.

Stowaway Girl Goes On Trial

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 11—UP—An 18-year-old girl stowaway, who sneaked aboard a Navy cruiser and sailed out to sea, was to appear in court Tuesday on charges of illegally wearing a Navy uniform.

Scheduled to appear in federal court was Miss Joan Garrison, a waitress, who was sneaked aboard the U. S. S. Los Angeles July 13 by two sailors who loaned her a uniform and a liberty card.

The girl was discovered and apprehended aboard the cruiser hours after it had sailed from Los Angeles Harbor.

The Navy still is deciding what punishment to inflict upon the two sailors, Seamen Edward J. Crawford and James N. Conwell, who said they did it because they thought it would be "a great joke."

McLemore Skeptical On New Mortality Theory Of Doctors

By HENRY McLEMORE
Better get this straight, right at the start.

I admire medical men. They are the first I turn to when my appendix bursts every now and then, or a bee flies in my ear and sets up an infernal racket at being trapped in such a lonely place as my head, or I am gored by a bull when crossing a pasture, or I grow faint when the milkman mistakenly leaves a container of yogurt on my stoop.

But there is no denying that doctors annoy me once in a while—annoy me plenty.

So many of them won't stick to what they know—croup, thrush, shingles, etc.—but are always wandering off into the field of speculation and guesswork, pitting their minds against the cosmic scheme of things, and coming up with the confoundest opinions since college freshmen started expressing their minds.

Just the other day I read where a batch of doctors, after working as industriously as if they had been holding their thumbs in a breached dike, had come up with the flat statement that men with short legs lived longer than men with long legs.

I should have been happy with this finding, because I have two of the shortest legs in captivity and have often been handed a tilt by people who, not stopping to look more carefully, mistook me for a dachshund. I remember well the Christmas I got a leash and a ball with a bell in it. On reading what the doctors said I should have waddled around the corner to see what the boys in the back room would have.

But I didn't. I don't trust any such statement. No one will ever convince me that these doctors, even if their legs are only one inch long, and all of them live long enough to see the St. Louis Browns win another pennant, will ever get around to checking on the leg lengths and longevity of all the people, past and present, in the world.

And that's what they would have to do to prove definitely their case. They'd need billions and billions of skeletons and live people all lined up.

A statement such as these doctors made isn't calculated to bring any happiness to the world, either. Think of how college basketball players must feel. And what it does to girls in love. Girls just naturally like tall men better than they do short men, but you couldn't blame them for going for a saved-off masculine number rather than learn to cook and sew and make slipcovers for a towering sweetheart who didn't figure to be around long enough to praise her for her accomplishments. Now, for a slight change of pace, take what a batch of London doctors recently announced. They said baldheaded men are the real men, much more so than men with thick thatches of hair, and figure to live longer, too.

Again I should have been deliriously happy, because if thinning hair and short legs are a guarantee of long life, then I figure to outlive even a snake with dandruff—plus being as virile and cut-upish at 600 years of age as Casanova was at 21.

But again I wasn't happy. I would rather be a wavy-haired coward and aisy than a bald-headed hero. The average mink-stole is happier than the average cantaloup or billiard ball.

Findelas and Sons Tannery Monday as the company announced the discontinuance of the making of harness leather operation with the manufacture of double rough shoulders, a type of leather used to make men's belts and shoe welts.

Besides, think of the money I have invested trying to get my hair to grow. In the hundreds of dollars, I'll guarantee you. If I get my hair back I may be too afraid to investigate a strange noise in the kitchen at night and be forced to send Mary, but I'll have something to part with I get up in the morning, and not have to fix my hair as if I were taking a lesson in Japanese flower arranging.

PUMPS TO KEEP "BUDDY" ALIVE—Gerald J. Lonzo, stationed with the Air Force in Japan, doesn't falter in his pumping even as the iron lung he's feeding air into is taken off a plane by a fork-lift truck. Inside the lung, A/3C Warren Beatty's life depends on Lonzo supplying him with oxygen. Beatty was stricken with a lung ailment in Korea and was airlifted to Japan. Four Air Force medics kept him breathing on the flight with continuous hand pumping of the respirator.
