Rail talks fail

WASHINGTON — Last-ditch contract talks between freight railroads and their unions broke up Tuesday evening, all but assuring a coast-to-coast strike that could strand rail passengers and stop the flow of one-third of the nation's goods. The nation's 235,000 freight workers had vowed to go on strike early Wednesday if a settlement was not reached by the midnight deadline. Several unions set the strike for 6 a.m. CDT, although under federal law, workers were free to walk off their jobs anytime after midnight. The deadline passed with no talks under way, no new bargaining sessions scheduled and no visible signs of strikes.

Director Lean dies

LONDON — Sir David Lean, the Academy Award-winning director of "Lawrence of Arabia" and "Bridge on the River Kwai," died Tuesday with one last epic production beyond his reach. Lean, 83, fell ill in January after announcing a date for the filming of "Nostromo," based on Joseph Conrad's novel. The project absorbed his final years. He died Tuesday at his home in London, said his attorney, Tony Reeves. The cause of death was not immediately made public. "He worked right up to the end, didn't he, and what an achievement that was," said Dame Peggy Ashcroft, who won an Oscar in Lean's "A Passage to India" and remembered the director as "a perfectionist."

Bowing, scrapping

TOKYO — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev chided Japan Tuesday for lagging behind the rest of the world in adapting to the dramatic changes sweeping his country, and he challenged Tokyo to embrace the new face of Moscow. Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu responded by saying its about time Gorbachev showed the political courage to resolve the territorial dispute that has divided the two Pacific neighbors since World War II. The stark diplomatic battle lines were drawn during three hours of talks kicking off a four-day summit here, where both sides are seeking a breakthrough in relations stunted by centuries of rivalry, distrust and mutual condescension.

UTPB expansion rolls

Four-year status gains legislative momentum

■ House gives tentative approval, Senate expected to follow.

By John Powers

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — This time around, it appears the University of Texas at the Permian Basin will make it to full four-year status.

The House tentatively approved a bill expanding UTPB to a four-year institution on Tuesday by a vote of 102-40, with three voting "present" and five absent.

The margin of victory for the bill, which is sponsored by Gary Watkins, D-Odessa, was larger than expected and came despite opposition from Midland Republican Tom Craddock. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, voted for the measure. Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring, was absent.

Approval came on second reading, which is where most debate on bills occurs, and the measure likely will pass in a routine voice vote today.

A companion bill in the Senate, sponsored by John Montford, D-Lubbock, is pending in the Senate Education Committee. The Senate is expected to endorse the expansion by a wide margin.

The Legislature approved a similar bill in its last regular session, but then Gov. Bill Clements vetoed it. Rep. Watkins said he expects Gov. Ann Richards to sign the bill if the Senate approves it.

"This is good for higher education in the state of Texas," Watkins said. "This area, the Permian Basin, is the largest area in the state, with approximately 300,000 people, that does not have a four-year public or private institution."

With the current situation in education, Watkins said, the state cannot continue to place students at the University of Texas in Austin and Texas A&M in Col-

High court limits death row appeals

■ Ruling likely to shorten time between murder trials, executions.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Upholding a 1978 Georgia murder conviction on Tuesday, an increasingly conservative Supreme Court curtailed the rights of death row inmates to repeatedly appeal their cases.

The 6-3 ruling, which is likely to shorten the time between murder trials and executions, imposes tough new limits on filing habeas corpus claims that a convicted criminal's constitutional rights were violated.

"It's another step in the slamming of the courthouse door to death row litigants," said Alan Ellis, president of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers.

Prosecutors said the decision will help stem abuse of the appeals system by convicted killers and by opponents of capital punishment who seek to indefinitely delay executions.

"This is a hell of a big win," said Georgia Attorney General Michael J. Bowers.

A 'crackdown' on intoxication draws criticism

By Brian Pearson

Staff Writer

Two Midland City Council members complained Tuesday that too much police time has been spent doing the Texas Alcohol and Beverage Commission's dirty work.

Midland bar owners, meanwhile, claimed that TABC investigators have been harassing customers by singling them out and charging them with public intoxication.

At-large Councilman John Castro said has received numerous calls from people complaining about an apparent TABC crackdown about a month ago.

The callers said they had been drinking in local nightclubs when investigators invited them outside, where Midland police officers promptly arrested them, Castro said.

Bush: Allies will create Iraqi camps for Kurds

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush said Tuesday that American, French and British troops would set up secure camps in northern Iraq that could shelter more than half a million Kurdish refugees until they could be coaxed back to their homes.

Outlining what he described as "a greatly expanded and more ambitious relief effort," Bush said five or six encampments would be built as "temporary" relief stations to encourage Iraqi Kurds to move to areas where they could be provided with food, clothing and medicine.

Last week, the United States announced that American troops would go back and forth into northern Iraq by helicopter in small numbers to try to feed the refugees congregating near the Iraqi-Turkish border. Tuesday's announcement goes beyond that and seems to envisage the construction of camps able to handle tens of thousands of people each.

At a hastily called news conference after a day of consultations with his major allies and top advisers, Bush called the effort a "purely humanitarian" operation by a relatively small number of American troops. He insisted that his decision was not the first step toward a large-scale occupation of Iraqi territory.

Iraq asks U.N. to ease trade embargo

■ Baghdad seeks to raise $942.5 million to finance essential goods.

N.Y. Times News Service

UNITED NATIONS — Iraq asked the Security Council on Tuesday to ease the United Nations trade embargo by giving Baghdad permission to sell almost $1 billion worth of oil on world markets over the next four months to pay for emergency imports of food and other essential humanitarian items.

The Iraqi request was contained in a letter to Austria's United Nations representative, Peter Hohenfellner, who heads the Security Council committee monitoring the economic blockade of Iraq. It said Baghdad wants to raise $942.5 million through such oil sales to finance a list of essential goods it needs.

"The situation with regard to food and basic humanitarian needs in Iraq is extremely critical," said the letter, "and exceeds the resources available to the Iraqi government and to international humanitarian organizations."

In the letter, Iraq's United Nations representative, Abdul Amir al-Anbari, said his country needs to buy 1.24 million tons of wheat over the next four months as well as 240,000 tons of rice, 80,000 tons of cooking oil and 40,000 tons of meat, as well as coffee, soap, razor blades and spare parts for flour mills and bakeries.

American diplomats and those from several other Western Council members said their reaction to the request is likely to be influenced by how well Baghdad cooperates with the international efforts now under way to help the Kurdish refugees in the north of the country as well as with the Security Council's plan for destroying Iraq's weapons of mass destruction.

The peace plan the Security Council imposed on Iraq earlier this month allows its sanctions committee to let Iraq sell some oil to pay for essential imports before Baghdad has met all the conditions set for lifting the export ban entirely. But the sanctions com-

Family legacy, drinking, rumor shadow Kennedy

By Robin Toner

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — After two weeks of tabloid headlines, "Gerald" shows and dark gossip, all stemming from an allegation of rape at the Kennedy compound in Palm Beach, Fla., Sen. Edward M. Kennedy went to American University on Tuesday to recall the glory days of the Kennedy family.

Most of his speech was a smoothly delivered, impassioned appeal for a comprehensive new effort to aid children. But because the event was organized by the university to recall a major address delivered there 28 years ago by President John F. Kennedy, the senator looked back as well. When he did, he struggled several times for composure.

It was one more scene in the familiar morality play that has played out in Washington in recent days, on the two images of Edward Kennedy: the powerful senator who is caretaker of the family legacy and the hard-

Border, immigration policy out of control, group says

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a blinking, 25-foot electronic model of the U.S.-Mexico border behind them Tuesday, officials of the Federation for American Immigration Reform declared the country is on the verge of an "immigration emergency."

Dan Stein, FAIR's executive director, and Alan Nelson, former chief of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, called on Congress to strengthen control of the border with additional ditches, fences, sensors, and low-light television cameras.

FAIR's wish-list also includes more Border Patrol agents and stations on the 2,000-mile border, more detention centers, quicker deportations, a $2 border crossing fee, tougher enforcement of sanctions against hiring illegal aliens, and a ceiling on annual legal immigration, refugees and asylum-seekers.

Stein also urged that a free-trade agreement with Mexico include pro-

WEATHER SUMMARY

Look for partly cloudy skies

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the upper 80s and south to southwest winds 10 to 20 mph and gusty, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be partly cloudy to cloudy with a low in the upper 50s and a less than 20 percent chance of rain.

Thursday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high in the lower 80s.

After an overnight low of 49, Tuesday's high was 89 compared with the record high for that date of 96 in 1937. The record low for today's date was 27 set in 1947.

STATE

Low pressure was replacing high pressure in Texas on Tuesday, meaning a slow return of Gulf moisture into the state.

As clouds increased, thunderstorms kicked up in Southeast Texas. Dime-size hail was reported with a thunderstorm near Hobby Field in Houston.

Southern North Texas, the Coastal Plains and Lower Rio Grande Valley were mostly cloudy. It was partly cloudy over the rest of North and South Texas, mostly sunny over West Texas and high scattered clouds prevailed over the High Plains to Concho Valley.

Winds were generally from the south and southeast at 5 to 15 mph with gusts over 20 in West Central and Northwest Texas.

Temperatures were seasonally warm with highs in the upper 70s and low 80s. The extremes across the state at late afternoon ranged from 71 degrees in the rain-cooled area around Beaumont and Port Arthur to 89 degrees at Laredo.

Forecasters expected today would be partly cloudy with increasing clouds and a growing chance of thunderstorms in the North and West. Highs in the 70s and 80s with 90s in the Big Bend region of Southwest Texas also were expected.

NATION

Rain was scattered Tuesday across the South as storms developed along the Gulf Coast. Rain also fell in the Northwest with snow in Montana.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended from the upper Texas Gulf Coast across southern Louisiana and over much of Florida. Showers and thunderstorms developed over the central Gulf Coast and three-quarter-inch hail fell near Houston.

Rain extended over central Oregon and southwestern Idaho.

Rain over north-central Montana became snow across south-central Montana. As much as 2 feet of snow was possible in the mountains with 4 to 8 inches in the valleys, the National Weather Service said.

Showers and thunderstorms also were scattered from east-central Iowa into northwestern Illinois. Rain also fell over Upper Michigan.

Elsewhere, showers stretched across northwestern Pennsylvania. Snow over northern Maine changed to rain across the central coast of Maine.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

visions that would allow better management of increased traffic, U.S.-Mexico immigration inspections and border enforcement, and a machine-readable border crossing card.

He said he also would oppose any additional industrial growth along the border and at ports of entry.

"They're talking about a free-trade agreement, building more maquiladoras, without any discussion of border security in the course of the deliberations," Stein said.

Stein said the various measures are urgently needed because the border is out of control and "America's immigration policy is in a state of chaos at the worst possible time.... The whole process is completely out of control."

But INS spokesman Verne Jervis questioned claims the border was out of control because "we do have a presence there and we are apprehending people."

He agreed, however, that some of the measures sought by FAIR would be helpful, such as, more sensors, more lighting and more barriers.

"Our sense is that we're probably doing somewhat of a better job, although it's awfully difficult to measure," Jervis said. "We think that the percentage of people who are avoiding us is probably less than it was previously."

Nelson, however, complained that there may be between 1 million and 2 million illegal aliens in the country taking jobs that legal workers are entitled to and would be interested in holding, particularly now that the economy is in a recession.

Stein also warned that unless the United States gets a handle on immigrant admissions, "we will be virtually overwhelmed by immigrants and putative refugees in the next decade," Stein said.

Stein cited increased costs to states for educating or providing health care to illegal immigrants, overcrowding in schools, sweatshop-like labor conditions in cities, and increased lawlessness along the border in declaring the United States on the verge of an "immigration emergency."

EXPANSION: Measure likely will pass today

lege Station, "when the whole purpose of the UT system is to funnel some students out to El Paso, to Arlington, to San Antonio and other regions, and still have the flagship computers and other assets that they could draw from."

He said the main reason he was pleased with the bill is that it would allow students who live in the Permian Basin area to attend school much cheaper and get a four-year education.

Opponents of expanding UTPB are concerned that it will hurt enrollment at local junior colleges. Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, said the bill would hurt community colleges in the area that are designed to prepare students for UT-Permian Basin.

"I don't think this is what we need in our area of the state," he said.

"I have Odessa Community College in my district," Watkins said, "and I never would have introduced this bill if I thought for one minute it would hurt that community college."

He said that if the junior colleges follow the pattern that has taken place in Florida and elsewhere, "there might be somewhat of a holding pattern the first two years, and then at the end of five years the community colleges probably will have more of a growth than they would have without the four-year institution."

If UTPB becomes a four-year school, it will be allowed to enroll only 500 freshmen and no sophomores during the first year. In the second year, freshmen enrollment still would be limited to 500, but an unlimited number of sophomores could attend. Limits would be removed after the second year.

Supporters of the plan said the enrollment limits would help reduce any adverse effects on Midland College, Odessa College and Howard County College.

Supporters also said the expansion will not cost the state any money, and in fact would save about $350,000 after the transition period because two-year schools receive state money based on a higher funding formula than four-year schools. Also, the university has about 2,200 students in facilities designed for about 4,500, so expansion would be cost-effective.

Opponents, however, contend that expansion would require additional money from the state in the future.

But some lawmakers questioned a cost estimate for the expansion that shows it would not require any additional state money over the next two years. Some who opposed the bill said it would place more demands on the state's higher education budget.

"I don't have to tell you, members, the budget problems we have," said Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City. "Let's be responsible."

CAMPS: Bush calls the operation 'humanitarian' expansion of American military involvement in Iraq at a time when Bush has been eager to fulfill his declaration to the American people that American troops would come home quickly.

Tuesday's decision also opens up the possibility of military clashes between Iraqi military forces and American units operating the camps inside northern Iraq.

Bush said he did not think Iraq would attack the camps or the Western troops deployed around them. He said the troops would provide "adequate security" for the Kurds, and he warned Iraq that his ban on all air activity in northern Iraq was still in effect.

"They should not respond militarily," Bush said. "They've underestimated the United States once before on that, and they shouldn't do it again, and I don't think they will."

Although Bush repeatedly denied having any desire to become involved in Iraq's internal affairs, his decision to send troops, however, into Iraq risks doing just that.

Administration officials said the shift had been prompted by three considerations: the intense pressure on the president to aid the Kurds after urging the Iraqi people to rise up against President Saddam Hussein, the difficulty of getting relief to Kurds in remote mountains where they have fled to escape reprisals by Iraqi troops, and concern that the United Nations was slow to respond to the refugee problem.

But Bush said in a statement that he was not changing "basic policy." He said: "All along I have said that the United States is not going to intervene militarily in Iraq's internal affairs and risk being drawn into a Vietnam-style quagmire. This remains the case."

Bush offered no details on how the camps would be set up, how many troops would be involved, how the troops would guarantee security in the camps or how long the troops would stay.

EMBARGO: Iraq has changed its tone recently

mittee's decision must be unanimous.

As a result, diplomats say that Western members of the Security Council are likely to wait to see what kind of a reception Iraq gives the two high United Nations officials currently in Baghdad to discuss plans for a United Nations-protected security zone for Kurdish refugees in the north of the country.

After first denouncing the security zone proposal as an unacceptable infringement of its sovereignty, Iraq has changed tone in the last few days and begun taking a more cooperative approach, apparently because it hopes the council will start easing sanctions and reduce the hardships its people are suffering.

Anbari has told Belgium, which holds the Security Council presidency this month, that his government now appreciates that the proposal is motivated by humanitarian concerns.

Last week Iraq sent a letter to the International Committee of the Red Cross promising access to Kurdish and other refugees and saying they may be supplemented by United Nations personnel. It has also opened airfields in the north to Red Cross mercy flights.

Still to be tested are Iraqi intentions toward some 30,000 refugees in southern Iraq, many of whom supported an unsuccessful Shiite Muslim uprising there and will soon lose protection.

COURT: 6-3 ruling imposes tough new limits

(From 1A)

In the ruling, the conservative majority of the justices rejected the claims of Georgia death row inmate Warren McCleskey, noting the condemned cop killer had already had another appeal quashed by the high court.

Justice Anthony Kennedy, writing the majority opinion, set new judicial guidelines requiring a prisoner seeking a second round of appeals to justify why the new claim was not made initially and to prove that it involved a miscarriage of justice.

An unlimited review system would "give litigants incentives to withhold claims for manipulative purposes and may establish disincentives to present claims when evidence is fresh," wrote Kennedy.

However, in a sharply worded minority dissent, Justice Thurgood Marshall said the decision was an "unjustifiable assault" on defendant rights.

The ruling "tosses aside established precedents without explanation, disregards the will of Congress, fashions rules that defy the reasonable expectations of the persons who must conform their conduct to the law's dictates, and applies those rules in a way that rewards state misconduct and deceit," wrote Marshall.

KENNEDY: Senator struggled for composure

drinking rouse.

While the accusation of rape was leveled against William Kennedy Smith, the senator's nephew, the senator was quickly engulfed in the furor, particularly in the first few days after the March 30 incident.

Critics, noting the episode occurred after the 59-year-old senator had spent the evening at a bar with his nephew and son, cited the episode as an example of Kennedy's recklessness. Many cited the memory of Chappaquiddick, and some raised the possibility of a cover-up.

Old Kennedy loyalists rose to his defense and rallied at what they saw as the unfairness of the news coverage. "I've taken my nephew out and had beers with him, and I don't think it's an offense," said Bob Shrum, a former Kennedy speech writer and Democratic political consultant. "I don't think anybody else does either."

In the halls of Congress, some of Kennedy's colleagues in the Senate shook their heads and marveled at how, as one Democratic senator put it, "The guy just can't seem to get out from under a black cloud."

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, the conservative Republican from Utah who is Kennedy's friend, said, "I did tell him, if I hear of any more of these things, I'm going to send the Mormon missionaries to him. He said, 'I'm about ready.'"

But attempts at humor were faltering. "I feel sorry for all the Kennedys," said Hatch. Then he added, "I certainly feel sorry for the young woman, too."

The reaction, as is so often the case with the Kennedys, was fiercely polarized. A column in The Boston Globe by Mike Barnicle declared: "Surrounded by sycophants, Edward Kennedy thinks his name and title are license to do whatever he wants, and apparently the only voice he hears in that dark lonely time before danger calls is the drink saying, 'Go ahead, you can get away with anything.'"

Barnicle asserted that Kennedy, who is not up for re-election until 1994, was finished in politics.

That same day, The Globe ran another column, by Dave Nyhan, headlined, "Flaws, yes — but Kennedy still champions the little guy."

Kennedy, meanwhile, went about his duties. His press secretary said he was "concerned but not distracted from his work," and his schedule seemed intended to underscore that.

He voted against the nomination of Judge Kenneth L. Ryskamp, a federal district judge in Miami, to an appellate court seat; held a hearing on the Kurdish refugees; conducted a news conference about military-base closings; delivered Tuesday's speech at American University.

Even many of his critics acknowledge Kennedy is one of the most influential senators on Capitol Hill, perhaps the most visible standard-bearer for liberal causes. Thomas E. Mann, director of governmental studies at the Brookings Institution, a Washington research organization, said

Kennedy's occasional appearances in the tabloids are unlikely to change that.

"It's happened again and again, and I think it's discounted inside the chamber," said Mann.

"What it does is sort of underscore the limits of Ted Kennedy's role in national politics," Mann added. Controversies involving Kennedy and his family are no longer viewed through the prism of a possible presidential campaign, the Brookings analyst said.

As the days have passed, Kennedy's allies have noted that the focus of Palm Beach controversy has moved away from the senator. His speech Tuesday at American University was planned well before the Palm Beach episode occurred, but offered him an opportunity to talk of issues.

The university was commemorating a commencement address delivered there on June 10, 1963, in which President Kennedy announced that the United States, British and Soviet governments had agreed to convene new negotiations to ban nuclear-weapons.

"Our procedure hasn't changed, ever," Flynn said. "We're still doing what we've always done. We go to the taverns and if there's intoxicated people there we arrest them."

Flynn said the TABC often responds to complaints about an establishment.

"We're doing what we've always done," he said. "There hasn't been any more arrests than usual."

Midland Police Department figures on public intoxication arrests since February have not been tabulated yet, a department official said.

Castro said the so-called crackdown has been anything but typical.

"They think it's routine, but that's not right," he said. "I can see it if the customers were being obnoxious, but a lot of people got arrested who weren't getting out of hand."

Bruce Riley, owner of Riley's nightclub, 3421 W. Wall Ave., said his establishment was hit hard by the TABC, causing business to suffer.

trying to put me out of business."

He claimed that the situation became worse after he complained to the police department. Police officers now wait in squad cars outside his bar and wait for customers to leave, he said, so they can be checked for driving while intoxicated.

"I'm afraid to even drive," Riley said. "If I have one drink, I won't drive."

At-large councilmen J.D. Faircloth also said he disapproves of the alleged TABC tactics.

"I'm not sure our police ought to be pulled off the streets for TABC inspections," Faircloth said. "They ought to be out patrolling the streets instead of doing the work of the TABC."

He said the busts could result in an image problem for the department.

"It does appear to be harassment," Faircloth said. "It's almost like Gestapo tactics and I think there are better things for police to do."

Gorbachev, Kaifu seek warmer ties, end to island dispute

TOKYO (NYT) — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev chided Japan Tuesday for lagging behind the rest of the world in adapting to the dramatic changes sweeping his country, and he challenged Tokyo to embrace the new face of Moscow.

Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu responded by saying its about time Gorbachev showed the political courage to resolve the territorial dispute that has divided the two Pacific neighbors since World War II.

The stark diplomatic battle lines were drawn during three hours of talks kicking off a four-day summit here, where both sides are seeking a breakthrough in relations stunted by centuries of rivalry, distrust and mutual condescension.

Gorbachev, the first Soviet or Russian head of state ever to visit Japan, said relations "absolutely do not correspond to the weight and the prestige" of the two countries, one a military superpower fighting to keep its ailing economy afloat, the other an economic giant unsure of its global political role.

"We are prepared to see new dynamics in our relationship," Gorbachev told Kaifu, according to Kremlin spokesman Vitaly Ignatenko.

Gorbachev went on to list for Kaifu the other world powers — including China — that have overhauled their relations with Moscow since his perestroika movement helped to bring about the end of the U.S.-Soviet cold war two years ago.

"(Gorbachev) said it was only our relations with Japan that are absolutely not adequate to these changes that are taking place in the world," Ignatenko told reporters. "In certain areas they're in kind of a frozen state and in some of the contacts life can hardly be seen."

An official with Japan's Foreign Ministry sought to downplay any suggestion that Gorbachev was issuing a reprimand.

"I thought those comments were made in a rather matter-of-fact manner," the official said. "There was no pounding on the table. There were smiles."

He said Gorbachev merely noted that "although the Cold War has become an anachronism, there do not seem to be corresponding changes, or moves, in the Soviet-Japan relationship."

Trade relations, in particular, have been frosty.

The Soviet Union accounts for less than 2 percent of Japan's total trade. Few of Japan's wealthy corporations have included the Soviet Union in their heavy investments abroad, and Japan's government has been loathe to move beyond minimal levels in foreign aid.

Kaifu sent the signal that much of this could change, pending the return of four islands seized from Japan by Soviet troops in the final days of World War II.

"We indeed feel that the time for a political decision at the level of the leaders is now before us," Kaifu said.

The two men then discussed the territorial dispute for an hour and a half. Both sides agreed to a news blackout on that issue.

Seoul retracts talk of strike on Pyongyang

TOKYO (NYT) — South Korea's defense minister said last week that his country might be forced to mount a commando raid against a nuclear installation near Pyongyang that experts believe could produce crude atomic weapons within five years. In response, North Korea accused the South today of issuing "virtually a declaration of war."

The South Korean defense minister, Lee Jong-koo, made his comments about the installation on Friday at a meeting with Korean editors, but retracted them that evening after they were reported by the South Korean press. It was the first time that any South Korean official had publicly suggested that a pre-emptive strike might be the best way to prevent North Korea from making nuclear weapons.

North Korea's leader, Kim Il-sung, who turned 79 on Monday, has repeatedly denied that the nuclear installation is designed to produce weapons. But he has said he will not let inspectors from the International Atomic Energy Agency visit the plant until the United States removes all nuclear weapons from the South.

The nuclear plant at Yongbyon, 60 miles from the North Korean capital and about 100 miles from the demilitarized zone, has become the focus of increasing concern throughout Asia.

Japan has said that it will not provide badly needed economic aid to the North until it accedes to international inspection of its nuclear sites. Satellite photographs of Yongbyon show two nuclear reactors on the site, including one still under construction, and a nearby plant that appears designed to separate plutonium from spent uranium fuel.

Japanese and American experts say that the plutonium output of the plant should be great enough by the mid-1990s to produce a half-dozen simple nuclear devices a year. North Korea already has advanced Scud missiles in its arsenal, and officials in Seoul fear they could be fitted with nuclear warheads.

Roh Tae-woo, South Korea's president, is expected to raise the North's weapons capability on Friday, when he meets with President Mikhail S. Gorbachev for the first visit of a Soviet leader to South Korea. Gorbachev is scheduled to stop on Cheju, a resort island off the southern tip of South Korea, after a three-day visit to Japan.

Israeli settlers move on eve of U.S. talks

JERUSALEM (NYT) — A handful of Jewish settlers moved into a cluster of mobile homes in the West Bank on Monday night, opening the first new Jewish settlement to be established in the occupied territories under the current rightist coalition government.

The new settlement had been planned for years, but its timing, three days before Secretary of State James A. Baker III is to arrive from Washington for a new round of discussions on convening a regional Arab-Israeli peace conference, is being seen on both the Israeli left and the right as symbolic defiance toward the United States.

The White House spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, criticized the Israeli action. "Settlements are an obstacle to peace," he said, "and their continuation does not contribute to the development of a peace process which we have all been working toward."

The Bush administration opposes any more settlement activity in the occupied territories, and Baker has been trying to get both the Arabs and Israelis to show good will to create a favorable atmosphere for peace talks.

But the Israeli government supports continued building in the territories, and at least 120,000 Jewish settlers live in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Housing Minister Ariel Sharon has plans to build 13,000 units in the West Bank and Gaza, and he had also been accelerating the expansion of Jewish settlement in East Jerusalem.

Sharon continues to be a forceful supporter of building in the territories, but other officials in the government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir expressed some discomfort with the new settlement.

Foreign Minister David Levy said that the building should be conducted quietly, without any "unnecessary declarations that will only bring pressure on Israel."

And Health Minister Ehud Olmert said it might have been better to delay the settlement for a couple of days because of the arrival of Baker and the current peace process.

"There was something in the way they set up the settlement which raises a question," Olmert said to Israel radio. He referred to the rush to move into the settlement, Revava, about 15 miles northeast of Tel Aviv, in the middle of the night.

"If we believe that there's a need to establish settlements," Olmert said, "it's better if we do it openly, in public, so that it is clear what we think, because the worst thing is to create an impression of deception."

The Associated Press quoted Daniella Weiss, a leader of a government-aided settler group called Amana, as saying that Gush Emunim, the organization behind the Revava settlement, had expedited the move "because of Baker's visits to the Middle East."

Meir Indor, a leader in Gush Emunim, which is a Jewish nationalist group, described Revava as "a gift to the country for Independence Day tomorrow."

Officials of the movement said that permits for the settlement were acquired seven years ago and that the land was legally purchased from Arab families, with government approval.

"Whoever had to know that people were coming to live here knew, and it was coordinated with them to the last detail," said Uri Ariel, secretary of the Council of Jewish Settlements in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

But the military administration in the West Bank said it had no notice of the settlers' move, and senior officials of the settlement division of the World Zionist Organization, which assists new settlements in Israel and the territories, were divided on whether the necessary papers had been obtained.

Italians scoop up spill; Cousteau urges sea law

GENOA, Italy (AP) — Squads of soldiers scooped up gobs of tar from Italian Riviera beaches as more oil seeped Tuesday from a submerged supertanker about 1½ miles offshore.

Officials said the Haven appeared to be holding together three days after it sank to the bottom of Mediterranean.

But towns along the northwest coast were beginning to feel the ecological and economic impact of the spill. Tourist offices in several towns reported a wave of cancellations, especially from Germany.

Italy's eastern coast suffered a tourist dropoff two years ago when an algae overgrowth caused by Adriatic pollution fouled the water.

Hundreds of soldiers were cleaning up tar from beaches stretching west 15 miles from Arenzano to Celle Ligure. Arenzano is just west of Genoa. Tar and oil had made it past floating barriers laid down Friday to try to keep the pollution from moving ashore.

Anti-pollution teams and soldiers dug pits at some beaches to store the goo until it could be carted away.

Port officials Tuesday banned fishing indefinitely off the coast from Arenzano to Noli, a 20-mile stretch. Fishermen net mostly anchovies and mackerel at this time of year.

An explosion on Thursday aboard the Haven, off Genoa, triggered fires that burned until shortly before the vessel Saturday. The Haven, carrying 41 million gallons of crude when it exploded, had been towed to shallower waters off the coast at Arenzano before going under.

The Genoa-based Medov agency, which represents the owners of the Cyprus-based Haven, said about 1.5 million gallons of crude had poured into the sea.

But the Civil Defense ministry said about 3 million gallons had spilled and that more than 40 percent of the original load had burned away.

The port authority said Tuesday that navy robot cameras that examined about 25 percent of the sunken tanker showed only a slight seepage of oil from its hull.

Capt. Mauro Croce of the port authority said most of the oil in the ship appeared to have solidified, but there was still no estimate of how much was inside.

Experts say oil solidified by the intense heat of the fires would probably be easier to remove than liquid oil.

The fringe of the tar and oil sheen reached as far west as Savona on Tuesday, about 62 miles from France's coast. The French have deployed four vessels to help fight the spill and keep it from creeping toward their beaches.

Cmdr. Jacques Cousteau, the famed French underwater explorer, urged governments Tuesday to press for laws to protect the sea.

"We need rules to codify the transport of dangerous materials, include oil," Cousteau told reporters following a meeting with French Premier Michel Rocard to discuss the risks of the spill to France's Mediterranean coast.

"I am scandalized by the fact that no one talks about the oil spills that torment us," Cousteau said.

"Every week, there is a supertanker that explodes ... or spits out its oil."

He urged the French government to seek U.N. efforts toward a "definitive international law on the protection of the sea."

Four Colombian women dressed in nun's habits and holding what police said were 22 pounds of cocaine stand outside police headquarters in Quito, Ecuador, Tuesday.

Police nab former nuns with cocaine in Ecuador

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Four former nuns with 22 pounds of cocaine hidden under their habits were arrested by airport authorities who noticed the women were having trouble walking, police said Tuesday.

The women, who left the Sacred Heart of Colombia order last year, strapped the cocaine packets to the legs and were walking "like ducks" through Quito's international airport, a police report said.

The former nuns, Colombian women whose ages ranged from 21 to 32, were arrested Sunday when they attempted to board a flight to Madrid. They were jailed on drug trafficking charges.

The cocaine they were carrying was worth $1.2 million.

The women said they were contacted by a dealer in Bogota, Colombia, who offered them $3,000 for every pound carried from Quito to Madrid, according to local news reports.

Police reported the former nuns said they left the Roman Catholic order because of the hard work and low salaries.

Cholera death toll reaches 1,000 in Peru

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The death toll from Peru's cholera epidemic has passed 1,000, and officials in neighboring Brazil and Chile confirmed Tuesday the disease has spread across their borders.

Cholera has already killed at least 59 people in Ecuador and has spread along Colombia's Pacific coast.

Health officials in Miami, meanwhile, plan cholera tests on two recent visitors to Peru and Ecuador who showed symptoms of the disease. State epidemiologist Dr. Richard Hopkins said it could be two weeks before the results of the tests are known.

The Geneva-based World Health Organization has predicted the epidemic could spread through most of Latin America. Miami is the first U.S. stop for many flights from the region.

Peru's Health Ministry said Tuesday cholera has killed 1,088 people and infected nearly 148,000. About 20 people a day are dying from the disease, first reported in Peruvian port cities in late January.

"There has been a slight drop in the number of cases per day," ministry spokesman Raul Fernandez said. "But, basically, cholera is spreading as quickly as ever."

Fernandez said a strike by municipal workers has slowed record-keeping in the Health Ministry, and the actual number of cholera cases may be higher than reported Tuesday.

Cholera is a bacteria transmitted mainly by food and water contaminated by the feces of victims. It causes diarrhea and severe dehydration.

Brazil's acting health minister,

Luiz Romero Farias, said Tuesday that two cholera victims were hospitalized in Tabatinga, on the border with Colombia. Two other Brazilians had been reported hospitalized Monday across the border in the town of Leticia.

A study by the Brazilian Health Ministry said cholera could strike up to 3 million Brazilians, about 3 percent of the total population.

In Chile, the first confirmed case of cholera was reported Tuesday near Santiago.

Bush call late, but on target

The United States would not stand for Iraq holding the industrial world hostage while unleashing troops on his neighboring lands; now President George Bush has told Iraqi President Saddam Hussein that the free world will not sit idly by while he carries out a program of genocide against the Kurds who have been fleeing Iraq in recent days.

The mass exodus of the Kurds from Iraq and brutality directed at them by Saddam's troops caught Bush in a delicate position. On the one hand he did not want to break his promise not to become embroiled in Iraq's internal fighting; on the other, he was being justifiably criticized for doing nothing while Saddam's men brutalized the Kurds who were rebelling against his rule.

Bush's concern was expressed late, but it was expressed plainly at least, mirroring a horror other Americans have condemned.

"We will not tolerate any interference in this massive international relief effort," the president promised, implying that such a move would bring action from the United States.

At the same time, Bush asserted that "I do not want one single soldier or airman shoved into a civil war in Iraq that's been going on for ages."

Bush was caught between two conflicting elements: Not wanting to stumble into a prolonged internal conflict, but also not wanting to be blamed for the killings and starvation broadcast to American homes on the nightly news with relentless regularity.

In telling Saddam that any interference with the international relief effort directed at the Kurds would bring action by the allied force, Bush was acknowledging that the internal disputes that rage after conclusion of a wartime effort may be as significant as the war itself. After all, was protecting the rights of the Kuwaitis overrun by Saddam's forces in August 1990 any more important than protecting the Kurds from annihilation by his troops? Was not the Persian Gulf War all about basic human rights and dignity? When those rights are violated who will stand up for justice? Does not the American president have an obligation to do that since this country was founded on the very rights at issue in Iraq today?

President Bush has taken the first critical step along that path. Now he must follow through if Saddam does not heed his call to respect our rights by stopping this brutalizing of the Kurds.

ANOTHER VIEW

Bush must devise solution for Kurds

As an observer of the tide of suffering on the Turkish border said the other day, 30,000 refugees are a humanitarian problem but a million are a political problem.

The sheer scale and desperation of the Kurdish exodus from Iraq has qualitatively changed the nature of the challenge.

It is a matter of saving lives, yes, and the White House now finally accepts a leadership responsibility for providing emergency aid to the Kurds and other Iraqi refugees from mountain villages in northern Iraq. But allaying the cause of their flight will demand more inspired statecraft.

President Bush is still playing catch-up ball. Having misread the horror and scope of this human upheaval, he initially pledged a meager $11 million in emergency aid last Friday.

His aides now talk of a more realistic request for $158 million, and providing food for 300,000 people a month.

But even so, the president has yet to utter an urgent or inspiring word in behalf of victims, in quest of aid from America's partners in the war — or for an enduring outcome.

Moving creditably to fill the void have been leaders of the European Community, notably Prime Minister John Major of Britain. He has won the backing of the 12-member Community for creation of an enclave where refugees could be sheltered under United Nations protection.

At first glance, that seems a sound way to provide a haven.

But as the world has learned elsewhere, such enclaves tend to perpetuate homelessness. They quickly become centers of discontent and insurgency, requiring an ambitious military presence to keep the peace. And since the enclave would be on Iraqi soil, its U.N. managers would be challenged as illegal intruders by Baghdad.

A preferable way to help Kurds and other dissidents would be to secure Baghdad's agreement to end attacks on refugees and to permit distribution of emergency aid.

Fear has driven them from their homes; only when fear abates will they risk going back.

A permanent U.N. presence in Kurdish communities would provide a safeguard that even Saddam Hussein would find hard to ignore. The U.N. representatives would in effect serve as warning canaries in the mine.

Perhaps he would never agree to any such arrangement, and is determined, as Kurds charge, to force them into permanent exile. But Saddam Hussein now bargains from weakness, as evidenced by Iraq's sudden change of heart in agreeing to help distribute international food aid.

A U.N. envoy is now in Baghdad to discuss immediate trucking of food and longer-term ways of assuring a "zone of tranquility." It won't hurt at all if Bush makes plain that he is giving serious thought to Major's enclave proposal, if other approaches fail.

Should Saddam Hussein reject any improvement in conditions for Kurds, then Bush would be right to look seriously at establishment of a Kurdish enclave in Iraq — whatever the howls of Iraqi protest that would elicit and whatever force that should require.

IRS conducts ethics seminar at resort

WASHINGTON — When the Internal Revenue Service decided to teach its employees how to earn the public trust, it sent them to a posh mountain retreat at taxpayers' expense. For $1,850 per person, plus travel expenses, 53 IRS employees from around the country learned about ethics.

If what they learned will save them from ripping off the taxpayers at their next ethics seminar, it may have been $124,500 well spent. But we doubt it.

The two four-day ethics seminars were held in February and March at the Coflont Resort and Conference Center in the eastern panhandle of West Virginia. The resort features a fitness center, swimming pool, sauna, hot tubs, massages, facials, an outdoor jogging course, a croquet court and a horseshoe pit. The resort brochure calls it, "a setting for those seeking a place to enjoy leisure time, have a conference, or to live." Not to mention a grand place to sit around and jaw about the difference between right and wrong.

Hired to conduct the seminars was the staff of the Joseph and Edna Josephson Institute of Ethics. A spokeswoman for the institute said the seminar participants were kept too busy to enjoy the luxuries of the resort. What a shame. That means the expense was a waste in more ways than one. At the very least, the IRS employees should have been allowed to soak in the hot tubs while checking 1040 forms. That way the taxpayers could have felt they were getting their money's worth.

Our associate Scott Sleek learned that the IRS could have arranged the ethics training in-house — albeit, a house with no spa. The Justice Department provides a variety of ethics courses to all federal employees, free of charge. The IRS said that the Justice Department program didn't meet their needs.

While the IRS's choice of a setting is questionable, the subject matter was necessary. The agency's reputation has been marred by a variety of misdeeds exposed over the last two years. For example, an IRS staffer, angry at someone who sued him, retaliated by launching a tax investigation of his enemy. Another used inside information to tip off a friend who happened to be a drug dealer whom the IRS was investigating. In Los Angeles, a group of businessmen apparently talked an IRS employee into investigating their enemies, when coincidentally, the IRS employee was applying for a job with the businessmen. And three IRS managers in Cleveland, claiming to be on an undercover mission, misspent federal funds by joyriding on a government boat during working hours.

The Josephson Institute conducted a survey of top IRS managers and nearly half said they would use their positions to intimidate personal enemies. A majority said they would look the other way if they saw wrongdoing and many condoned lying to the press and other government officials to protect themselves.

Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, saw a copy of that survey, which had been leaked to a group called the National Coalition of IRS Whistleblowers. After reviewing the survey, Symms promised he would look into the ethical climate at the IRS.

We advise Symms to begin his search pool-side at a resort in West Virginia.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The burning Kuwaiti oil wells may end up to be the most massive environmental disaster in recorded history — more dangerous than the Chernobyl nuclear accident and worse than any oil spill to date. Some environmentalists are speculating that the cloud cover from the burning oil could cause conditions similar to a nuclear winter. The catastrophe is much more grim than the Bush administration is letting on, perhaps because many of the wells were inadvertently set afire by allied bombing.

Free trade pact sold under false pretenses

I'm opposed to the proposed free trade agreement with Mexico. It will hurt American workers and not help Mexicans.

The only thing it will be is an extension of the existing program, which has already cost the United States about 370,000 good manufacturing jobs. That program, like the free trade agreement, was sold under false pretenses.

Originally, it was supposed to be a twin-plants program — one plant on the Mexican side and one on the U.S. side. Products made on the Mexican side would come across the border and pay import duties only on the value-added. It was claimed that the program would provide good jobs to both Americans and Mexicans. Thus the Mexicans would not have to cross the border illegally in search of work.

Every new program has a sales pitch and very few of them live up to them. This one didn't. The jobs are all on the Mexican side while on the U.S. side there is virtually just a front operation. Jobs which used to pay Americans $8 or $9 an hour are being done by Mexicans, mostly young women and even some children, for 50 cents to 90 cents an hour.

Since the plants on the Mexican side pay little or no taxes, the Mexican municipalities have not been able to provide the infrastructure — decent housing, sewers, and schools. The workers mostly live in slums. They have little or no protection from toxic chemicals and face hazardous working conditions.

In the meantime, the corporations make higher profits on the products while Americans are thrown out of work and their communities are devastated. Some 2,400 workers in Radford, Va., for example, lost their jobs when AT&T moved them south of the border.

So what I expect that this free trade agreement — which the Bush administration is trying to ram through Congress — will do is just more of the same. You don't need a fancy degree to figure that out.

Poor Mexico is broke. The people are impoverished. What are they going to buy that they are not buying now? What are they going to sell that they are not selling now? The answer is quite simple: cheap labor.

What will happen is that plants will close in the United States and open in Mexico, and the products will be shipped back here duty free so unemployed Americans can buy them with their welfare checks.

Farm produce, doused with all the dangerous chemicals we don't allow our farmers to use, will flood American supermarkets. In the meantime, the Mexican workers will likely be exploited just as they are being exploited now in the present trade program, and Mexico's environment will probably be further polluted. If the Mexicans are not careful, Mexico could become the toxic dump for North America.

Congress should not trust the Bush administration or the present Mexican government on this matter. The Constitution gives Congress the authority to handle trade matters. What Congress ought to do is first of all knock the Bush plan off the fast track.

Then Congress should sit down with the AFL-CIO, with American environmentalists, with American farmers, with Mexican labor and environmental people, and craft together an agreement that will improve the lives and the environments of both countries.

You can't trust free trade ideologues. You can't trust corporate promises. You can't trust the Bush administration. You can check the promises of the existing program against the reality along the border. The promoters of the program either lied or, to put it charitably, were greatly surprised by how differently it worked out. Take your choice.

This is one case where the American people are about to get gored but there is still time to avoid it. Communicate with those $125,000-a-year servants in Washington.

Bush has a duty to intervene for the Kurds

WASHINGTON — George Bush's answer to genocide is to insist angrily that "our kids" — his new term of juvenile vulnerability for what he used to call America's armed forces — will not be "sucked" or "shoved" by some sinister outside pressure into anybody else's civil war.

That's the old straw man trick. Three weeks ago, when urged to order Saddam Hussein to freeze all movement of aircraft and armor — which could have saved thousands of innocent lives without a single U.S. casualty — Bush chose instead to go fishing.

Now the bloody consequences of his moral failure are on view: Americans watch in dismay as helpless and terrified millions are driven into exile, babies dying on the way. Perhaps to assuage his guilt, the U.S. president now creates a straw man: he accuses those who urged a freeze three weeks ago of having wanted to send our ground troops into an endless, millennium-old battle to end Arab tyranny.

Fortunately, his CYA rhetoric is accompanied by a tacit admission of terrible error. He has finally ordered Baghdad to cease killing refugees on pain of U.S. air retaliation. He has begrudgingly followed the lead of the British and French into a "duty to intervene," designating a portion of Iraqi Kurdistan off-limits to Saddam's vengeance; mass murder is no longer "an external affair."

Equally important, the president has directed our armed forces to take over the logistics of the refugee salvation from overwhelmed humanitarian.

If Bush finds political cover in castigating those who urged him to do three weeks ago what he is doing belatedly, fine — so long as he now moves resolutely to protect the persecuted Kurdish people. But if he blames the victims for "spoiling the victory" by inconveniently striving for freedom, that will compound his blunder.

The Kurds are not being unreasonably fearful in their exodus. They risk freezing and starvation not out of panic but to flee from certain extermination. Don't tell Massoud Barzani about amnesty: two of his brothers accepted such Iraqi offers in the past decade, to be executed — burial alive — by Saddam Hussein's sadistic thugs.

What's to be done with more than a million refugees? First, intervene without apology to provide emergency food and shelter. Next, set a global example by taking 25,000 Kurds into the United States as political refugees. Then give other Kurds and Christian Iraqis who fled an incentive of security — guaranteed by the coalition — to return to their villages in Iraq.

Ah, say the White House victim-blamers, but that would create a new Gaza Strip, where resentment would fester and warriors would breed; better to let Saddam Hussein succeed in his final solution to the Iraqi Kurdish problem, and let us humanely drop sandwiches forever on homeless Kurds in camps in Turkey and Iran. (I can build a straw man, too.)

The way to give the Kurdish people the freedom they deserve is the same way to give Palestinian Arabs, including those driven from Kuwait, the freedom they deserve: create a new category of sovereignty.

The word bandied about is "sovereignty," which allows the encompassing state a sovereignty limited to defense and central banking, while providing the inhabitants of a region with real autonomy and ethnic identity short of total independence.

Accommodationists, arise! Are diplomats so frozen, uprisers so blindered and international lawyers so hidebound that they cannot create new forms of national association to meet the demands of the times?

Police want to know why Kennedys weren't available after incident

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Police said Tuesday they want to know why detectives were unable to talk to the Kennedy family soon after an alleged sexual assault at their beachfront estate.

Also Tuesday, NBC-TV identified the alleged victim by name and showed her photograph on the "NBC Nightly News."

Detectives made "a number of visits," including one soon after they first received the rape report about 2 p.m. on March 30, police spokesman Craig Gunkel said.

Each time, they were told members of the Kennedy family weren't there.

"The detective bureau did go up to the Kennedy mansion a short time after we got the report of the alleged sexual battery," Gunkel said. "The police department is looking into why residents of the Kennedy home did not make themselves available to police detectives at that time."

Gunkel wouldn't confirm or deny any Kennedys were there.

"We did speak to someone at the address but I'm not going to elaborate," he said, noting it was not a member of the Kennedy family.

A 29-year-old Jupiter woman claimed she was raped by William Kennedy Smith, the nephew of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., on the grounds of the estate. Smith, 30, a Georgetown University medical student, denied he assaulted the woman. No one has been charged.

Members of the Kennedy family left that weekend without talking to police. Palm Beach detectives went to the Washington area the following week to interview family members and obtain blood and hair samples from Smith, who refused to be interviewed.

Attorney Mark Schnapp was not in his office Tuesday afternoon to discuss when his client might be made available.

Jack Freese, a state attorney's spokesman, would not comment Tuesday on whether the difficulty in interviewing the Kennedys was considered an obstruction of justice.

Police were studying the results of forensic lab tests received Monday on specimens taken from the woman and from Smith.

Police Chief Joseph Terlizze said Tuesday he has not seen the results and they won't be made public immediately.

The chief confirmed there were new witnesses in the case, but wouldn't say how they came to police attention. He said investigators were trying to avoid extensive comment on the case, but promised that all details eventually will be made public.

"Everybody in the world who wants to read about it can," Terlizze said.

Gunkel said police were investigating claims by lawyer David Roth, the alleged victim's attorney, that detectives employed by the Kennedy family have tried to intimidate witnesses.

NBC noted on the air that the alleged victim "is well known in Palm Beach County" and that disclosing her identity should help make viewers more well informed.

It is the practice of daily newspapers in the United States not to identify sexual assault victims.

The Globe, a supermarket tabloid based in nearby Boca Raton, named the woman Monday and ran a photo.

$10 billion children's social program unveiled by Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., proposed creating a mandatory spending program for children in a speech Tuesday.

Kennedy unveiled a $10 billion proposal to provide prenatal care, early childhood education, immunizations, nutritional and health care, and day care services. The proposals, he said, are an attempt to redress an imbalance in federal social programs toward the elderly.

The proposals "deserve to be enacted into law in the same kind of binding entitlement that our basic social programs for the elderly already have," Kennedy said.

The federal government would contribute $5 billion per year, or about half the total cost of the program. State and local governments would provide the rest.

Kennedy's proposal is bound to draw fire from fiscal conservatives on Capitol Hill who have been railing against entitlement programs for years. Entitlements, such as Social Security and Medicare, are benefits that qualified individuals receive automatically. By passing an entitlement, the government is required to spend that money for beneficiaries.

Chamorro says more aid needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaragua needs more U.S. aid as it faces an "almost impossible" task in building a democracy from the ruins of civil war and economic collapse, President Violeta Chamorro told Congress Tuesday.

"We need steadfast financial assistance from the United States throughout this entire decade to reconstruct our economy, following the terrible damage incurred during the past decade," Mrs. Chamorro told a joint meeting of the House and Senate where she was warmly welcomed.

But congressional leaders said the United States will be unable to offer substantial increases because of its own economic problems and competing demands for aid around the globe.

"Obviously it's difficult for us to do as much as we would like to do in many parts of the world," said House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash.

Foley said it is more likely that Congress will urge the administration to expedite aid dollars already allocated for Nicaragua, but which have been trickled out relatively slowly by the Bush administration.

Rep. Robert Torricelli, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Western Hemisphere subcommittee, said he believed that represented intentional foot-dragging by the White House, which resents Mrs. Chamorro's efforts to accommodate leftist Sandinista elements in her country.

"The administration is adapting more slowly to the democratic process than some elements in Nicaragua," said Torricelli, D-N.J. "We need to understand that if some economic progress is not made soon, this is a democratic opportunity that could be lost."

A senior administration official, who briefed reporters on condition that he not be identified, had enthusiastic praise for Mrs. Chamorro's government and expressed no reservations about her policy toward the Sandinistas.

"We believe Mrs. Chamorro has achieved a lot in a short time," he said.

The official also denied there was any foot-dragging on aid disbursements, asserting that assistance is flowing to Nicaragua at the rate of about $20 million a month.

The United States has earmarked $537 million for Nicaragua since Mrs. Chamorro defeated the Sandinista government of Daniel Ortega in February 1990. Of that amount, according to a State Department official, some $207 million has been disbursed.

The aid declined from $335 million allocated in fiscal 1990 to $202 million this year. The administration is seeking $179 million for Nicaragua in fiscal 1992, which begins Oct. 1. Nicaragua's $350-a-year per capita income ranks it as among the poorest countries in the hemisphere.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said he was sympathetic with Chamorro's request because it was the United States that supported the anti-government Contra rebels during the 1980s and contributed to the devastating civil war.

"If we were honest and consistent, we'd try to build them up again," said Leahy, chairman of the Senate foreign aid subcommittee. But he added: "I don't know that there's any room in the foreign aid budget to do anything for them this year. At least nobody's talked to me about it."

"We cannot bail out every country that is in trouble," said Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M. "We are not a candy store. ... We have a crisis here at home."

Just over 100 of the 535 members of Congress attended the speech, a relatively low turnout for such events. Empty seats in the chamber were filled in with congressional staff members and pages, a sign that U.S. attention — so heavily focused on Nicaragua during the 1980s — has been distracted by crises in the Middle East and in Europe.

"That ... is the attitude of many prominent Nicaraguans," Foley said. "There are many countries in the world ... that feel that the attention and focus of their relationships to the United States have been blurred, compared to the intense focus on the Middle East."

Mrs. Chamorro sought to impress upon lawmakers the difficulties she faces.

"If a democratic system is being built from the ruins of a dictatorship, and a civil war, from the ruins of an economic disaster, the feat is not only difficult, it is almost impossible," she said.

She pledged to continue slashing government bureaucracy and paring down the military, to strengthen the country's judicial system, to "religiously" respect human rights and to prosecute anyone caught exporting weapons to leftist rebels in neighboring El Salvador.

"It is important to note," she said, "that our efforts to strengthen freedom, establish democracy and set up a 'state of law' have to be accompanied by economic prosperity."

The speech was the public highlight of a three-day visit during which the Nicaraguan president also was meeting with officials to work out a way to pay off the $360 million in arrears on her country's $9.5 billion foreign debt.

Shuttle piggyback ride starts late

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The space shuttle Atlantis started its piggyback jet ride to Florida on Tuesday, leaving California four hours late because workers had difficulty securing the orbiter atop the plane.

"They had some problems with one of the fittings between the 747 (jumbo jetliner) and the orbiter," said Nancy Lovato, spokeswoman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "They were using a new tool and ... the tool didn't properly torque at first."

The modified Boeing 747, carrying the shuttle piggyback, finally took off from this Mojave Desert military base at 10:07 a.m. PDT, she said.

Atlantis had been scheduled to make a one-day flight to Cape Canaveral, Fla., with a refueling stop at Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio.

But Lovato said the delayed departure probably would extend the trip to at least two days, with an overnight stop either at Kelly Air Force Base or at Columbus Air Force Base in Mississippi.

The shuttle and five astronauts landed here last Thursday after a six-day mission that featured the first American spacewalks in five years and deployment of the $617 million Gamma Ray Observatory to study black holes, active galaxies and other violent phenomena in space.

High winds at Edwards Air Force Base delayed the shuttle's landing by one day.

The next space shuttle flight will be by Discovery, scheduled to take off April 23 on an eight-day mission to conduct experiments related to a "Star Wars" antimissile defense system. If it takes off as planned, Discovery is scheduled to land in California on May 1.

NATION IN BRIEF

Doctors adopt execution policy

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois' State Medical Society has declared it unethical for doctors to help in capital punishment, including pronouncing inmates dead.

Under the American Medical Association's policy, it is considered unethical for doctors to assist in executing inmates — a stance supported by the Boston-based Physicians for Human Rights.

But the Illinois group's policy goes one step further to condemn any participation in the execution process, "except acting as a source of support and solace to a patient facing death."

The medical society, part of the AMA, adopted the new guidelines at the annual meeting of its house of delegates over the weekend, Dr. Robert M. Reardon, society president, said Tuesday.

Violators could lose their licenses or face other disciplinary action.

Under the new guidelines, a physician may still certify that a prisoner died from a lethal injection after someone else has declared the inmate dead.

Landlord penalized

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The City Council ordered a landlord who was warned about drug dealing to pay the cost of a second drug raid on his property, and closed his rental house for 60 days.

The council on Monday declared a house owned by John Campanile a public nuisance, ordering it boarded up for two months. It also assessed him $1,475, the cost of a second drug raid on the house.

The council passed an ordinance last summer that allows penalties for landlords whose tenants repeatedly sell drugs. Monday's case was the first enforcement action.

Police raided the house Dec. 6, seized an undisclosed amount of crack cocaine and arrested tenant Victoria Brown on a charge of frequenting a drug house.

Campanile, 72, said he had prepared to evict her but relented when she told him she and her children had no place to go. On Feb. 26, police again raided the house, seized cocaine and arrested Brown on the same charge.

Charles Leap, president of the Landlords of Mid-Michigan, said the Michigan Rental Housing Association is raising money to fight the ordinance.

Gun owner's sentenced

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The first person convicted under a 1989 state law designed to prevent accidental shootings of children has been sentenced to six months probation and community service.

James Kallok was convicted two months ago on a misdemeanor charge of leaving a loaded firearm within easy access of a minor. His teen-age son accidentally shot a friend last year while playing with a gun he had found in a closet.

Kallok, 44, was sentenced Monday and ordered to give six speeches to community groups of adults and children about keeping guns away from young people.

Circuit Judge James Hauser said he hopes the speeches will "convince people of the ultimate need" for gun safety and to force Kallok to "relive and renew the horror of this incident."

Kallok's then-14-year-old son, John, found a loaded .32-caliber pistol and accidentally wounded Matthew Hyland, then 13, in the head. Hyland was blinded in one eye.

Kallok had faced a maximum of 60 days in jail, six months probation and a $500 fine.

Guard, Reserve to be cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon plans to cut the National Guard and Reserve force by 187,300 people over the next two years as part of its overall force reduction, a senior official said Tuesday.

Stephen Duncan, assistant defense secretary for reserve affairs, told Congress that by the end of 1993 the ranks of the Guard and Reserve would dip below the one-million mark for the first time since 1982.

The Army will take the biggest Guard and Reserve cuts in the coming two years, Duncan told the House Appropriations defense subcommittee. The Guard will shrink by 91,000, to 366,300 members by the end of 1993, and the Reserve will drop by 64,200, to 254,500.

The Naval Reserve will lose 26,300 positions, to 127,100; the Marine Corps Reserve will drop 5,000 slots to 38,900.

Only the Air National Guard will grow. It will have 119,400 members by 1993, a gain of 2,400, while the Air Force Reserve will slip to 82,400 members, a loss of 3,200.

Wrong man welcomed

NORTH PLATTE, Neb. (AP) — Troops are returning from the Persian Gulf at such a steady pace that it's sometimes hard to keep things straight.

Gov. Ben Nelson and Mayor Jim Kirkman were at the North Platte airport for a news conference Monday when a soldier was scheduled to arrive home.

Army Spc. Keith Howell's family and friends were decked out with balloons and yellow ribbons to welcome him home. The plane landed and in walked a young man with closely cropped hair and a military bearing.

Nelson and Kirkman moved forward and shook his hand, thanking him for his service and welcoming him home. But his perplexed look showed that he was not Howell and was not returning from the gulf.

Kirkman and Nelson recovered quickly, and soon were welcoming the real soldier home.

"It's good to be back. The support was great," Howell told them.

Kirkman laughed about the misunderstanding: "We welcomed the wrong guy. He looked like he was in the service ... Oh well, we're glad he's here, too."

Drug grant may provide prosecutor

■ Salary, rented office space and supplies would be provided.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A federal grant may enable Midland County to hire an additional prosecutor to handle its drug cases, officials said Tuesday.

The district attorney's office applied for the grant, administered by the governor's office, last month under the auspices of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

The $64,165 grant — to be supplemented with a $21,389 local contribution — would pay the salary and administrative expenses for an eighth county prosecutor, District Attorney Al Schorre said. "It would basically match the pay for an assistant district attorney with five years of experience," Schorre said. The salary for a fifth-year prosecutor is about $42,000.

The rest of the grant would go to provide the prosecutor with rented office space and supplies. "Frankly, you never expect them to fund all that," Schorre said. "But you put in (the application) in the hope that there's a surplus of funding designated for that area."

The prosecutor would be charged with handling cases involving drug deliveries, defendants with prior drug convictions, and drug-related violent crimes. The prosecutor also would be responsible for large-scale possession cases, Schorre said.

"The application is really due to the increase in the volume of cases that are being filed with us," he said.

According to state figures, there were 37 drug sale or manufacturing cases filed in Midland County in fiscal year 1987, compared with 119 in FY 1990. There were 78 drug sale or manufacturing cases filed locally in 1988 and 187 in FY 1989, figures show.

Schorre said the increase eventually will force the county to hire an additional prosecutor whether or not the grant is approved.

If the grant comes through, it will be for one year only, Schorre said. The county will be able to reapply for the money, but there is no guarantee that the governor's office will approve the grant a second time.

"It would give us temporary relief," Schorre said. "We will make arrangements to let that person (the drug prosecutor) know that it's a one-year grant." Schorre said he expects the governor's office to make a decision on the grant by June. If the money is approved, Schorre said, a new prosecutor should be in place by late July.

Schorre said Assistant District Attorney Robin Sams would be the likely candidate for the newly created position. Her old spot would then be filled by a new assistant, bringing the number of assistant district attorneys to eight.

Ms. Sams said having a prosecutor to specialize exclusively on drug cases would improve the efficiency of the entire district attorney's office.

"It will take the burden of the big drug cases that often take a lot of time off the rest of the prosecutors in the office," she said, leaving them free to deal with other types of cases.

Decision by court alters information required by DPS

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Department of Public Safety officers are asking motorists different questions about liability insurance because of a recent court decision on proof of financial responsibility in case of an accident, a DPS spokesman said Tuesday.

Mike Cox, who would not reveal the new questions, emphasized that the state law requiring motorists to have liability insurance still is in effect, and DPS officers are enforcing that law.

Cox said the DPS is seeking new legislation to correct the situation.

The Court of Criminal Appeals said April 10 that the state law requiring proof of financial responsibility for operating a vehicle does not define financial responsibility or mention liability insurance.

The ruling came in response to a 1983 case in Travis County where a woman was ticketed for not having proof of liability insurance after she was charged with speeding.

The court said other ways exist to show proof of financial ability to respond to liability damages, and the testimony of a DPS officer that the driver did not furnish proof of insurance alone does not prove guilt.

The ruling said only one witness, DPS officer Juan Soliz, testified at the trial of Wendy Lee Coit and "... that he asked appellant for her driver's license and proof of automobile insurance; that she produced only her driver's license; and that he could not remember anything appellant said at the time of the incident."

"... because appellant could have maintained the requisite ability to respond in damages in several ways reasonably available to her, no rational factfinder could have found her guilty beyond a reasonable doubt based solely on Soliz' testimony," the court said.

State law exempts vehicles from the liability insurance requirement if the driver files a $55,000 bond with the DPS; obtains a certificate from the state Treasurer saying the owner or driver has deposited $55,000 in cash or securities with the Treasurer; or files a certificate with the DPS showing the driver has deposited $55,000 in cash or cashier's check with the county judge in the county where the vehicle is registered.

Odessa to issue Midland warrants

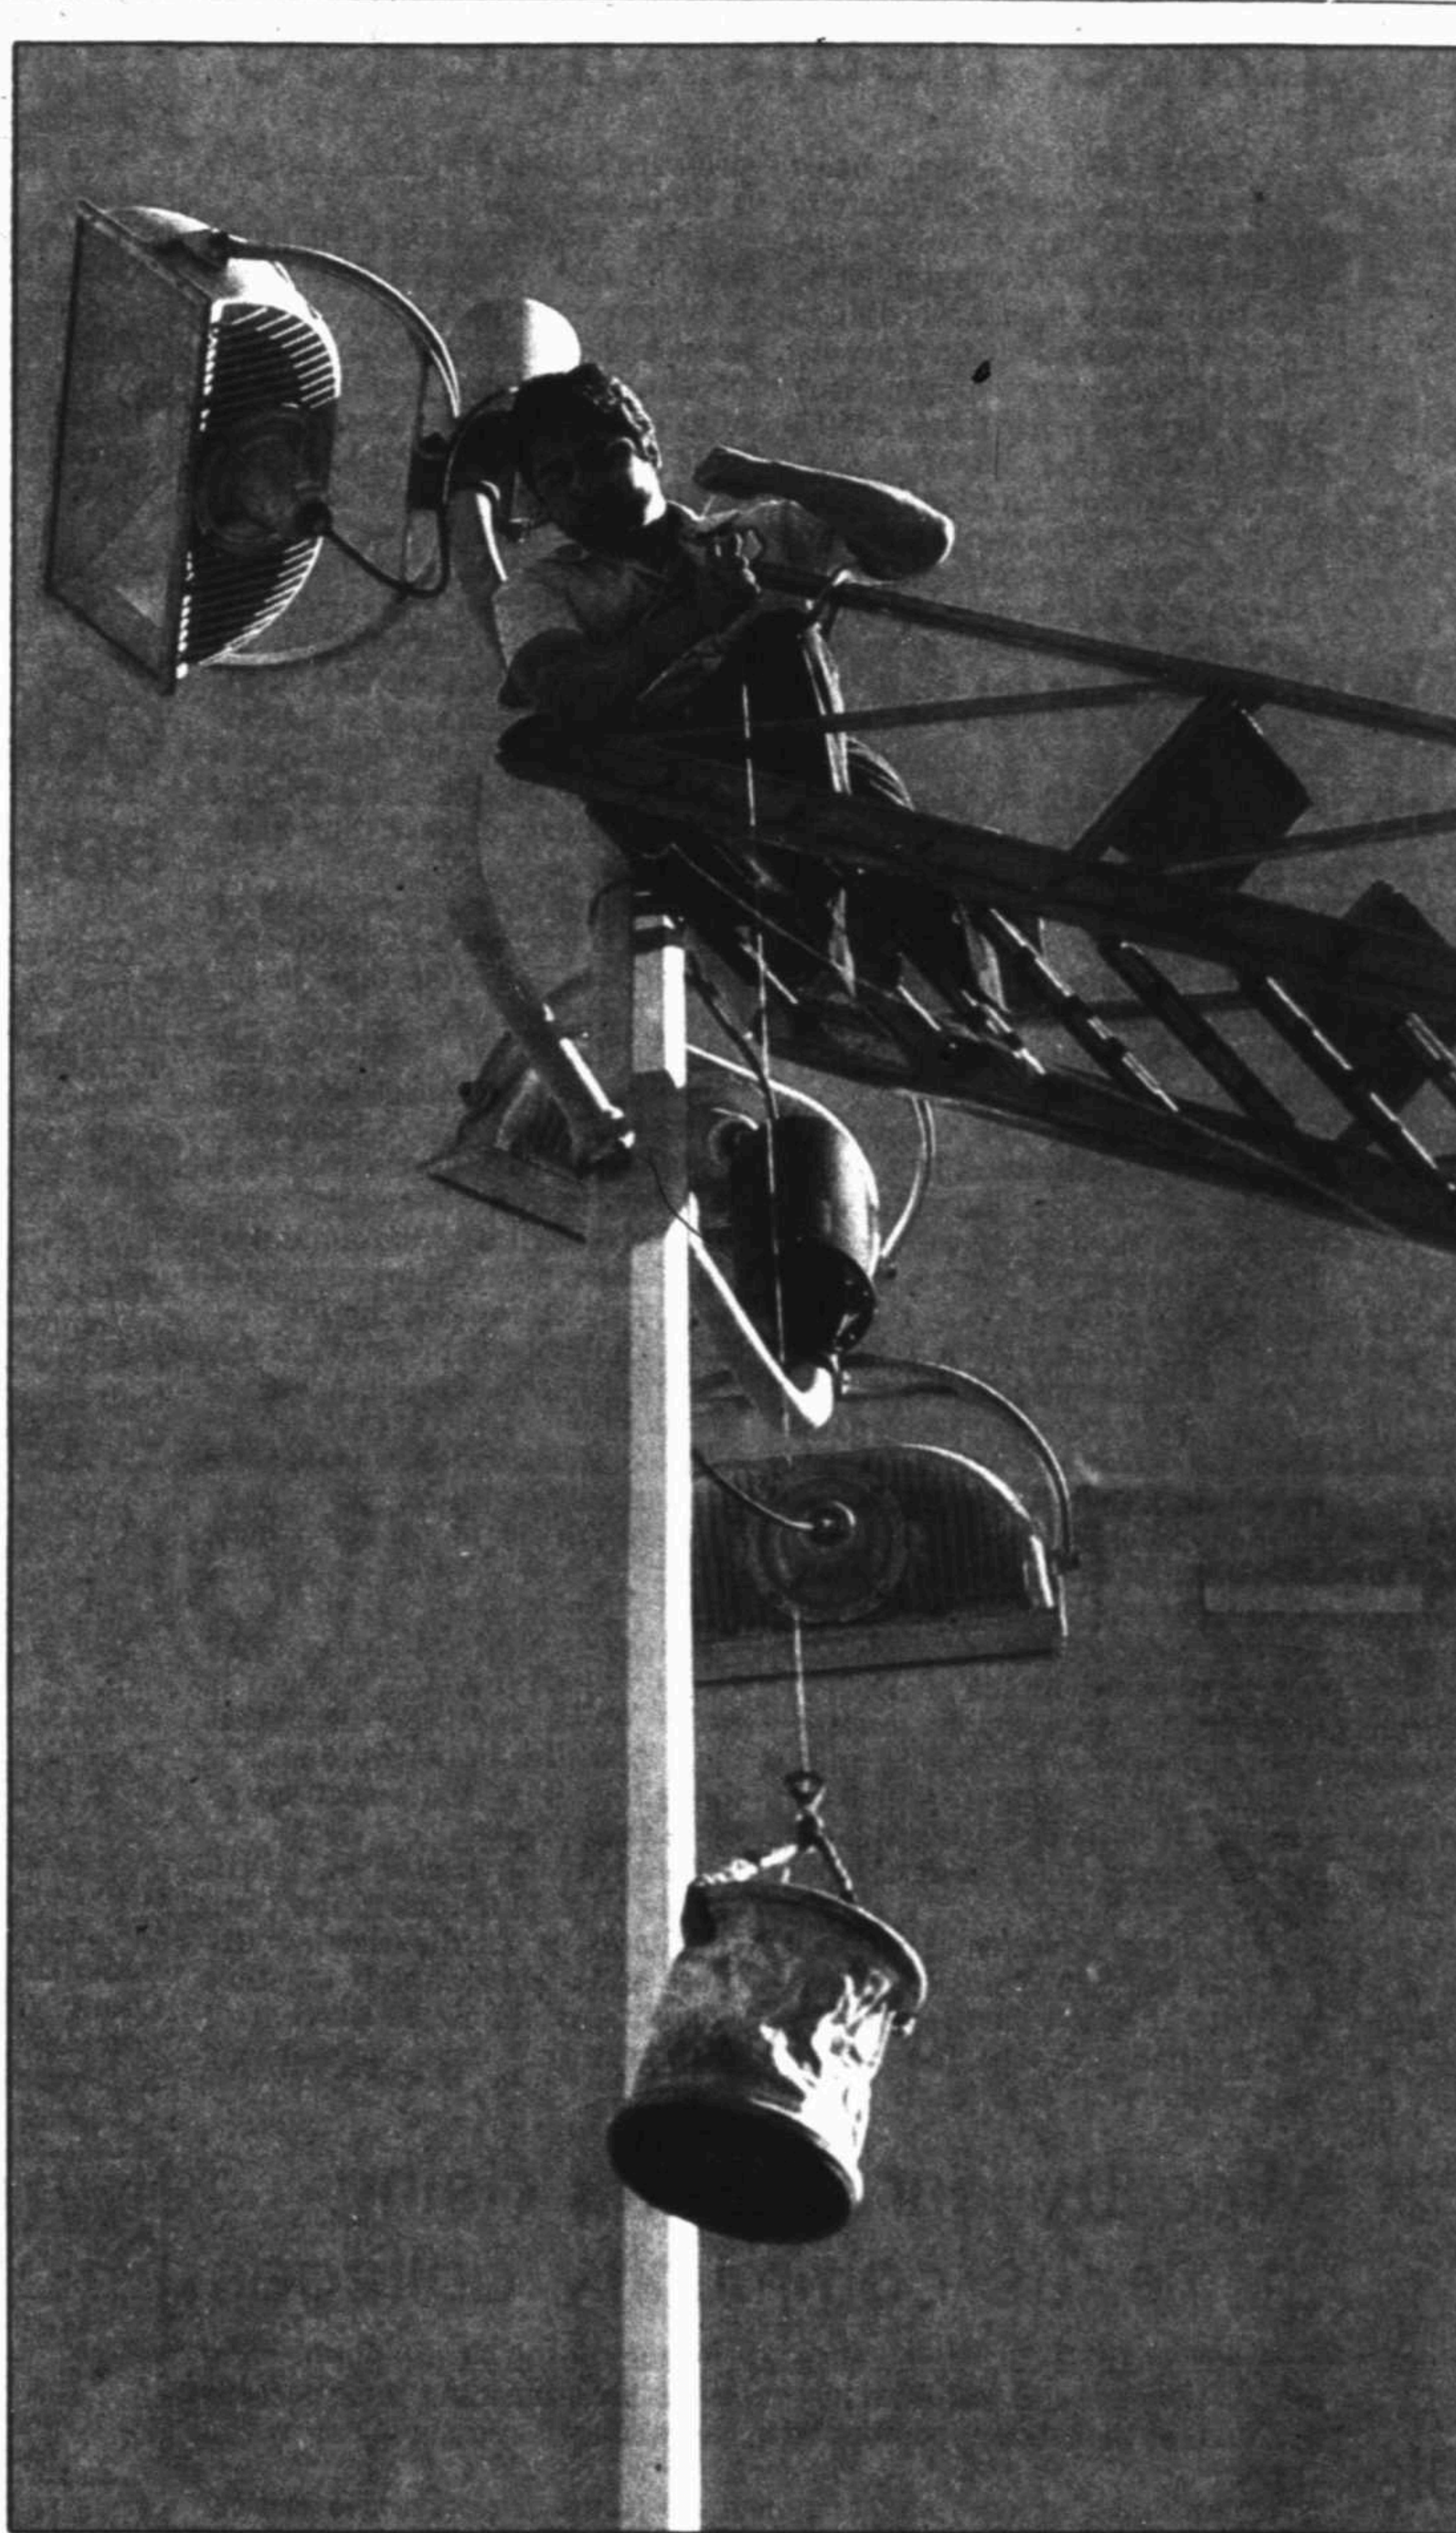

Staff Report

ODESSA — Midlanders with outstanding Odessa traffic citations will be the target of a warrant task force sweep beginning Monday, Odessa police officials said.

About 815 warrants are expected to be served in Midland to people who have neglected traffic citations issued while in Odessa. The Odessa Police Department's warrant task force and the Midland Warrant Division will combine efforts in the crackdown.

People with multiple warrants will be the primary target, police said.

Midlanders, who are subject to arrest, may avoid possible embarrassment, money and jail time by contacting the Odessa Municipal Court, police said.

Substance-free graduation party plans progress

■ Project Graduation is a growing nationwide movement by parents.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Some of the top reasons graduating seniors should attend Project Graduation 1991:

- My parents made me come.
- I get to spend the night with 400 members of the opposite sex.
- The mall was closed.
- I took a wrong turn.
- Money. Money. Money.
- At least I'll remember this one.

In addition, everyone who attends the celebration will receive a T-shirt listing those and other reasons to spend a drug- and alcohol-free night at Project Graduation.

"Project Graduation is a growing nationwide movement of parents to provide a chemical-free place for students to celebrate graduation," said Brenda Sorrells, a parent on the project committee.

"The need for this type of event grew out of numerous tragedies... seniors killed from automobile accidents on graduation night," Ms. Sorrells said.

About 800 graduating seniors from Midland High and Lee High schools are expected to attend this year's celebration, Midland's third, Ms. Sorrells said.

"We would love to have every senior come," said Penny Angelo, parent of a senior and chairman of the committee.

"It is a way for them to have fun, be with their friends and be safe," Mrs. Angelo said.

"We are having a tremendous response this year from parents and students. I think this is the place to be on that night," she added.

About $20,000 in cash and prizes will be given away to seniors at this year's party. Prizes will be given out at the end of the celebration, and students who leave the party are ineligible.

Those who attend will have plenty to do until prizes are awarded though.

The party, which begins at midnight graduation night, May 30, and ends at 5 a.m., will be held at the Midlander athletic club.

All the club's amenities — including the pool, tennis and racquetball courts — as well as live music, food and beverages, and a casino will be available for the youngsters' enjoyment.

"There will be something for everybody," Ms. Angelo said.

And it is all free of charge to graduating seniors. Each senior may bring a guest, who will be charged $5. Only seniors will be eligible for prizes.

Trey Morrison, 17, a senior at Lee High and a member of the project's student committee, said he anticipates the party will be well-received by students.

"It gives seniors something to do with other seniors a last time. After this, you may not see some of these friends again," Morrison said.

Sponsors of the project include American Airlines, the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Midland Independent School District and the Parent Committee of 1991 Graduates, Ms. Sorrells said.

Confederate Air Force founder dies

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Lloyd Nolen, the "dynamic" founder of the Confederate Air Force and a leading force in the campaign to move the CAF to Midland from Harlingen in the Rio Grande Valley, died Tuesday in a Harlingen hospital following an illness.

Memorial services for Nolen, 68, are set for 2 p.m. Saturday in his aircraft hangar at the Old Rebel Field near Mercedes. Following the service, a "missing-man" formation of CAF aircraft will fly over the field. Survivors include two brothers, R. Doyal Nolen and George Howell Nolen, both of Colorado; one sister, Mary Ann Eubank of Pottsboro, and a stepson, Bobby Jack Nolen of Austin.

"His whole life and soul was wrapped up in the building of the Confederate Air Force," said CAF Chief of Staff Joe Mabey of Midland. "He lived and breathed it."

Though he lived in the Valley where he operated a crop-dusting business and in 1957 inspired the founding of the CAF, Nolen had "wholehearted" supported the CAF's move to West Texas, Mabey said.

The CAF's new Midland center of operations for its World War II aircraft "Ghost Squadron," its administrative headquarters, and the American Airpower Heritage Museum will be dedicated in December, commemorating the United States' entry into the War on Dec. 7, 1941, after the attack of Japanese forces at Pearl Harbor.

Nolen, joined by a corps of flying enthusiasts, started what became the CAF in 1957 at Nolen's hangar where he maintained his crop-dusting service.

From the first CAF airplane, the North American P-51 Mustang affectionately called "Old Red Nose" because of its red spinner, the CAF today has grown to 145 WWII-era aircraft. Today, the airplanes, which are maintained and flown by CAF volunteers, are assigned to the CAF's American Airpower Heritage Flying Museum.

"I always wanted to fly the high-powered fighters," Nolen said last year.

Gardner, who also operated an aerial-spraying business, piloted bombers — B-17 Flying Fortresses and B-24 Liberators — over Europe during the war.

Both had wanted to be fighter pilots.

That yearning led the men to spearhead the CAF's quest to find, restore and fly the increasingly rare "warbirds" — fighters, bombers, trainers, transports, liaison aircraft.

The CAF was built and is sustained by a spirit of volunteerism and camaraderie among its 8,000 members in 29 nations.

And it was Nolen's organizational and motivational abilities and Gardner's talents as a pilot, troubleshooter, mechanic and goodwill ambassador that served as foundations for the Confederate Air Force.

Nolen was 18, and Gardner 20 when the U.S. entered the war.

They weren't to meet up until long after the war, in the 1950s, when both were crop-dusters in old Stearman biplanes.

At 18, Nolen, a doctor's son, already had been flying for more than two years. He earned flying money by washing dishes for 15 cents an hour in a Denton cafe.

Born March 13, 1923, in Kansas City, Mo., Nolen grew up in Texarkana and Denton. After the war, he established Mercedes Flying Service. In 1957, Nolen and a few friends bought that first CAF airplane, the P-51, for $2,500.

"One of the wonderful things about the Confederate Air Force is the great camaraderie that has developed," Nolen said last year. "There have been some real great friendships developed out of that."

As the group grew, so did the demand for airplanes.

"And I started to round up these guys to help pay for (them)," Nolen recalled. "We worked out a scheme to pay for them. We'd found out what they were going to cost, and we'd get enough guys together to come up with that much money."

He died Tuesday at a nursing facility in Hurst.

Jasper Henley

Services for Jasper Henley are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Tuesday at his Midland residence.

House approves legislation on family violence, animals

AUSTIN (AP) — The House tentatively approved a bill Tuesday to allow expert testimony about family violence at the trial of a person accused of murder or manslaughter.

A defendant who was the victim of family violence committed by the person who was killed could offer evidence on the situation, and expert testimony also would be permitted under the bill.

Currently, testimony about "battered wife syndrome" is not admitted in some cases, according to a written bill analysis.

The measure already has passed the Senate. If approved by the House in another vote, it will go to Gov. Ann Richards.

Also Tuesday, the House gave preliminary approval to bills that would:

— Require the sterilization of dogs or cats adopted from animal shelters in cities with populations over 25,000.

The shelter could sterilize the animal, or the new owner could agree in writing to have it done. If the owner did not later notify the shelter that the animal had been sterilized, the shelter could reclaim the animal.

The bill would not apply to animals that shelters return to their owners, or to universities that acquire animals for biomedical research, testing or teaching.

"This helps to control the burgeoning population of animals," said the bill's sponsor, Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston.

According to the U.S. Humane Society, one female dog and its offspring can be the source of 67,000 puppies in six years, and a female cat and its offspring can produce 420,000 cats.

A similar bill previously passed the Legislature but was vetoed by then-Gov. Bill Clements.

— Protect anyone who is justified in using deadly force in self defense from civil liability for a death or injury.

The bill also was meant to remove a legal requirement that deadly force is justified only if a reasonable person would not have retreated under the same circumstances.

But Rep. Glenn Repp, R-Duncanville, said that provision was mistakenly removed through an amendment. He said he would work to restore the provision.

The House turned down an amendment to the bill proposed by Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, to allow the carrying and licensing of concealed handguns.

— Make it a felony punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine for a prison inmate to have a potentially deadly weapon. Current law applies only to deadly weapons.

— Automatically expunge arrest records of a person who has been acquitted.

If approved again by the House in another vote, the bills go to the Senate for consideration.

The House also tentatively approved a Senate bill making it a defense to prosecution for owning or making gambling equipment, if the equipment is solely for use in other states.

If passed again by the House, the bill would go to the governor.

The House gave its final approval to a bill continuing the State Bar of Texas, sending the measure to the Senate for consideration.

Hospital told to tighten controls

AUSTIN (AP) — State auditors said the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston and University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center need to tighten property security.

The audit for the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1990, said there was $7.1 million worth of missing equipment and furniture at the Health Science Center, and $4 million in equipment and furniture reported missing or stolen at M.D. Anderson.

The missing assets at the Health Science Center represent 7 percent of its equipment total, according to the audit report released Tuesday.

In both audits, school management noted the problems and stated more controls were being placed on inventories.

NOLEN: CAF founder dies in Harlingen their wish to fly fighters in the war II, the founding of the CAF likely would not be a part of aviation history.

"If I had spent the war flying a Mustang, a P-38 or something in a war zone," Nolen surmised, "I would have had that experience, and there wouldn't have been any desire to go out and buy my own P-40, or Mustang or Bearcat and fly."

"Flying was our life," Gardner recalled in a 1990 interview. "I was crop-dusting, too," after the war. "Because we didn't get to fly (fighters), that's what motivated us" to establish the CAF. "We were having fun."

"We were spending most everyday in the crop-dusters all day and dreaming about the day we could fly something like a P-51 or a P-38," Gardner said. "That's the way it was."

Midland's Joe Mabey noted that Nolen was "recognized worldwide" as the force behind the CAF.

"He was a very dynamic individual. He was a very quiet person; he was a very private person."

Mabey said that his "biggest personal disappointment" is that Nolen will not be here for the opening of the CAF headquarters in Midland this December.

Bill Connell, a retired member of the CAF's administrative staff in Harlingen, called Nolen "probably one of the most visionary people I've ever had the opportunity to work with."

In flight, Nolen was "almost like a ballerina," Connell recalled of Nolen's flying ability.

Richard Ingram, director of joint development of the CAF and the American Airpower Heritage Foundation in Midland, cited Nolen's lasting influence on the CAF.

"He was a historian. He was a leader. He was an inspiration. He was a mentor and a friend," Ingram said. "I don't think he ever met anyone that he didn't like. He's just a tremendous person."

Nolen, who was reserved in public, was "really never was a big 'I' guy," Ingram said. "He like to give the credit elsewhere."

And Nolen was "the guy who came on-line" and encouraged the CAF to move to Midland.

"Here's a guy who's going against his neighbor and the political powers in the Valley, where he had to do business," Ingram said.

But Nolen figured that the CAF belonged in Midland because of West Texans' flair for flying and aviation.

"The enthusiasm of West Texans was the driving force behind his motivation to send it out here," Ingram said.

In a recent CAF General Staff meeting, Ingram recalled, Nolen exhorted the CAF leadership "to get organized" for the "next phase of construction" of the CAF in Midland.

"He gave us enough to keep us busy for quite awhile," Ingram said. Nolen, he said, was a "very inspirational guy and a real good friend" who "left an outfit that's not going to roll over."

Report: More white men, black women have heart disease

DALLAS (AP) — Coronary heart disease occurs more frequently in black women than in white women, but occurs more often in white men than black men, according to a report in two scientific journals.

In a special report on minorities appearing in the April issues of the Dallas-based American Heart Association journals Circulation and Stroke, the AHA says blacks in the United States are suffering from "alarmingly high" rates of certain heart and blood vessel diseases.

Those include the high incidence of stroke other disorders that are the direct consequence of uncontrolled high blood pressure.

"Coronary heart disease is greater in black females than white females because of hypertension, or high blood pressure, is much greater in black women than white women," said Dr. Edward S. Cooper, chairman of the committee that wrote the report.

"Black women are frequently more overweight, and black women have almost two times the cases of diabetes than white women. All are risk factors for coronary heart disease and no doubt play a role in the higher frequency of heart attacks in black women."

The report, "Cardiovascular Diseases and Stroke in African-Americans and Other Racial Minorities in the United States: A Statement for Health Professionals," was written by experts who have performed much of the research that has been done on the topic. It is designed to be "a concise summary of scientific and medical information" and to suggest which areas of research will be most productive in the future, Cooper said.

Dr. Colman Ryan, chief of cardiology at the San Francisco Heart Institute at Seton Medical Center, said he had not seen the report, but concurred that high blood pressure in black women could be a significant link.

"The findings don't surprise me," he said. "I work with a lot of hypertension and it is much higher in black females. More than 50 percent of black females have high blood pressure, compared to 28 to 30 percent of white females."

"Black women have a much higher risk factor," said Ryan.

Cooper, who is a professor of medicine at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine in Philadelphia, added that hospital discharge summaries indicate that white men have "slightly but definitely" higher instances of coronary heart disease than black males.

"But black men are catching up fast and it may be because the statistical data is better than in the past," Cooper said.

Elijah Saunders, author of the report's section on high blood pressure in blacks, says "alarmingly high frequencies" of stroke, kidney disease and congestive heart failure, as well as enlargement of the heart's main pumping chamber occur in blacks, mainly because high blood pressure or hypertension is so common among blacks.

Stroke death rates in blacks are almost double those of whites. And in the 35 to 54 age range, blacks' rates are about four times higher, the scientists said.

End-stage kidney failure caused by high blood pressure is about 10 times more common in blacks than in whites nationwide and 17 times higher in some sections of the United States.

The leading cause of death among all populations in the United States is cardiovascular diseases and stroke, which together account for almost 50 percent of all mortality, Cooper said in the report.

Minority enrollments rising at Texas community colleges

AUSTIN (AP) — Black and Hispanic enrollment in Texas' public community colleges and technical institutes has increased, but their percent as a total of the student population in those schools remained nearly the same.

"Community colleges and technical institutes are playing a critical role in providing minority access to higher education in this state," Kenneth Ashworth, commissioner of higher education, said Tuesday. Black enrollment increased from 34,718 students in 1989 to 35,941 in 1990, a gain of 1,223 students, according to the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board. The number of blacks represented 9.5 percent of the total student enrollment of 379,514, which is the same percentage as in 1989.

Hispanic enrollment grew from 72,237 to 77,343, an increase of 5,106 students, the board said. The number of Hispanics represents 20.4 percent of the total student population, an increase of one-half of one percent from 1989.

Homicide

Staff reports

ODESSA — An autopsy performed on a man who was found dead in a car at a lounge Sunday evening revealed he was the victim of a homicide, police said.

Autopsy results indicate that Demetrio Hernandez, 22, of Odessa died from trauma to the head, police said.

Hernandez was found unconscious in a car at the El Rancho Grande Lounge, 509 W. Clements St., after police arrived at the scene in reference to a fight.

Police are investigating the homicide.

House fire

ODESSA — Firefighters responded to a house fire Tuesday morning that caused extensive fire damage to a living room and severe heat and smoke damage to the remainder of the home, fire officials said.

No one was home at the blaze which occurred at 1314 Bluebonnet about 8:34 a.m., fire officials said.

Cause of the fire was under investigation Tuesday but may have been arson, fire officials said.

Odessa Crime Stoppers seeks tip on homicide

ODESSA — This week Odessa Crime Stoppers is seeking information that could help solve a homicide.

On the evening of Dec. 30, the Ector County Sheriff's Office was called in reference to a deceased person who had been found at 1000 Clendenen Road in West Odessa.

Deputies found the victim, Mary Kathleen Rodriguez, in the middle bedroom of the house. It was later determined that she died from several blows to the head.

Rodriguez was last seen alive the afternoon of Dec. 28 and deputies believe she may have known her attacker as there were no signs of forced entry into the house.

Crime Stoppers

If anyone has information that leads to the arrest and indictment of those involved in this murder, it could be worth up to $1,000 cash reward to the first caller this week only. Call Odessa Crime Stoppers at 333-TIPS or Midland Crime Stoppers at 694-TIPS.

Collider critics say it will deprive other endeavors

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the Senate subcommittee that oversees the Superconducting Super Collider said Tuesday that the $8.2 billion project has failed to live up to early promises, and is getting more costly every year.

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., chairman of the Senate Energy Research and Development Subcommittee, also accused the Bush administration of stonewalling attempts by Congress to find out whether the collider's huge cost is squeezing out other federal scientific research.

"If the administration stonewalls me, I'm going to start chop-pin' away at a few bricks," Ford told White House science adviser Allan Bromley at a hearing on the super collider project.

Ford repeatedly asked Bromley to provide a list of the administration's top scientific projects, in order of importance, so that Congress could use it as a guide in dividing up a limited amount of research money this year.

Bromley said the White House considers the collider on equal footing with other costly projects, including the human genome genetic mapping program of the National Institutes of Health, NASA's manned space station and the Pentagon's Strategic Defense Initiative, or Star Wars, project.

The collider is the largest physics instrument ever undertaken. If built as planned — just south of Dallas-Fort Worth — it would be the world's most powerful particle accelerator, allowing scientists to break apart subatomic particles into their most basic constituent parts as they probe for new information about the origins of the universe.

Ford accused the White House of ducking the hard decisions of how to pay for the collider and the rest of the expensive research projects it supports.

"You won't make a choice, and you won't say where the money is coming from," Ford said. "How much new tax money is the administration going to propose to pay for it?"

The collider is going to cost a lot more than the Energy Department promised it would, Ford said, at a time when foreign governments are showing little interest in participating and sharing in the cost.

The department has said $1.7 billion would be contributed by other nations. But to date, countries such as Japan, the Soviet Union and South Korea have rebuffed efforts by top energy officials to get financial commitments to the collider.

"It is clear that other programs will help pay for this project," Ford said. "There is no other way to do it."

"Three years ago, the (Energy) department said the SSC would be built for $6 billion, or it would not be built," he said. "Today, the department says the SSC will cost over $8 billion. One other estimate has placed the cost as high as $11 billion."

Environmental groups select best, worst legislation

AUSTIN (AP) — Environmental groups Tuesday unveiled their picks and pans for the legislative session, touting four proposals as "some of the best environmental bills that have ever been debated by the Texas Legislature."

The bills praised by the groups include measures that would increase criminal penalties for polluting; require companies to draft plans on reducing their wastes; and streamline the state's environmental regulation by creating the Department of Natural Resources.

All three of those measures are in committee in both houses, except the natural resources department bill, which has been approved for consideration by the full Senate.

Also vaunted was a bill that would impose a one-year moratorium on new hazardous waste disposal sites in Texas. That bill passed the Senate last week and has been referred to a House committee.

"We really think that these four major bills represent probably some of the best environmental protection legislation that the state of Texas has ever seen," said Brigid Shea of Texas Clean Water Action.

The groups, including the Sierra Club, Public Citizen and the Environmental Defense Fund, also slammed eight bills as bad and worse for the environment.

Among those were a products liability bill already passed by the House, which the groups said grants immunity to manufacturers of toxic chemicals; a bill that would allow the creation of a low-level radioactive waste site in Hudspeth County; and a measure that would create conservation districts along the Texas coast.

The Senate sponsor of the third bill, Sen. Eddie Lucio, D-Brownsville, has said it would help regulate development that inevitably will occur along the coast. The environmental groups said it would allow development of sensitive lands with public funds, and would boost a large resort planned on South Padre Island by a Houston insurance firm, American General Corp.

Also criticized was legislation that could allow developers to build in Austin's Barton Creek watershed.

An apparently conflicting bill was passed by the Senate Tuesday. It would prevent developers who have been denied planned unit developments by the local city council to appeal to the Texas Water Commission. The bill was a result of an appeal to the Water Commission of an Austin city council decision to reject the massive development.

All of those bills also are in committee, except the House-passed products liability bill and the coastal development bill, which is set for debate by the Senate.

The groups also outlined plans for rallies and lobbying at the Capitol on Monday, Earth Day 1991.

Senate approves sex criminal bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Persons who have been convicted of sexual violence would have to register with their local law enforcement officials under a bill passed by the Texas Senate.

Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, said the measure would serve as a crime deterrent by helping police monitor these people, who she said often commit repeat offenses. The bill was approved Tuesday on a voice vote and sent to the House.

The proposal would apply to those convicted of indecency with a child, sexual assault, aggravated sexual assault and incest.

After release from prison, they would have to register with local law officials where they reside or intend to reside for more than seven days.

Supreme Court hears accusations in water fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorneys for Texas and Oklahoma told the Supreme Court Tuesday that New Mexico is illegally hoarding water that communities in the High Plains desperately need for agriculture and municipal use.

Texas and Oklahoma contend New Mexico is violating the terms of a 1952 agreement involving the storage and use of waters from the Canadian River, which flows from northeastern New Mexico into Texas and Oklahoma.

At issue is whether New Mexico is allowed to store waters originating north of Conchas Dam in the Ute Reservoir near Tucumcari, N.M., in excess of 200,000 acre feet.

Texas and Oklahoma contend the 1952 agreement restricts storage in the Ute Reservoir to 200,000 acre feet. But New Mexico argues that it can exceed the limit if the waters originate north of the Conchas Dam, because the use of those waters is not restricted in the compact.

In a brief submitted to the court, Texas said New Mexico has maintained over 246,000 acre feet in Ute Reservoir. And while New Mexico is largely using the reservoir for recreation, communities downstream rely on those water supplies for farming, municipal and industrial needs, Texas attorneys say.

Because the Ogallala aquifer beneath portions of the three states is being pumped faster than it can be recharged, the Canadian River is increasingly important to nearly half a million people on the Texas High Plains, Paul Elliott, an assistant attorney general of Texas, told the court.

Lake Meredith, the major reservoir in Texas to capture the Canadian River waters, supplies drinking water to approximately 460,000 people in Texas, including Amarillo, Lubbock and Plainview.

"The cities that receive water from Lake Meredith can't rely on the Ogallala; it is being depleted and they're got to have this Canadian River water," Elliott said after the hearing.

According to Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, the Ogallala is being pumped at a rate 10 times faster than its recharge and will be reduced by two-thirds by the year 2030.

"Already, shallow wells in the High Plains are going dry," Morales said in a statement.

Yet New Mexico's position, said Elliott, could really hurt Texas, and "the irony is that they're not even using it. It's sitting in a reservoir and evaporating. ... There are a lot of thirsty Texans who want that water and can't get it."

But Marian Matthews, deputy attorney general of New Mexico, told the court that while New Mexico may not be using the water much now, it may be needed in the future.

"There is the potential for some very serious water problems," she said, also citing the drain on the Ogallala.

Ms. Matthews told the court there are ways of determining how much water in the Ute Reservoir originated north of the Conchas Dam.

And Texas, she said, only won the federal funding to build Lake Meredith after the compact was reached to protect New Mexico's water supply, at the insistence of New Mexico's then-powerful senators.

Appeals court stay allows Continental to keep planes

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A federal appeals court Tuesday granted Continental Airlines Inc. an emergency stay to a lower court order that would have allowed a leasing company to take its planes away from the airline.

Involved are 47 aircraft out of some 350 Houston-based Continental now flies around the United States and the world and which it contends, contrary to a lower court ruling, aren't subject to lease payments during bankruptcy proceedings.

Chief Judge Dolores Sloviter and Judge Anthony Sirica of the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court heard arguments on the stay request on a decision issued by a federal District Court in Delaware.

They granted the stay and ordered it to remain in effect until the outcome is decided at an expedited hearing scheduled for May 1 on whether payment is required despite Continental's Chapter 11 filing.

Without the stay, Continental lawyer Zack Clement told the circuit judges, "continued operations will be subject to substantial risk."

"Any successful repossession attempt, even if subsequently reversed, would likely generate a great deal of publicity, shattering the confidence that Continental has so far maintained with travel agents and the traveling public, despite its Chapter 11 (bankruptcy) filing."

filing," Clement said in his legal brief.

"Put simply, on the first repossession of an aircraft, perhaps even the first attempted repossession, travel agents may begin booking away from Continental and toward other airlines. This would have an immediate, and quite possibly catastrophic, effect on (Continental's) revenues. An airline simply cannot stand this sort of uncertainty."

Attorney Steven Reisberg, representing Whirlpool Financial Corp., which owns some of the affected planes, wanted the stay denied because Continental only seeks to delay action.

"To Continental, delay is victory as it allows Continental continued use of the equipment at no cost," Reisberg said.

The attorney said the loss is actually double because Continental is using planes it may not pay for and his client is losing lease money from another airline that is able to pay.

"There are only limited opportunities available in the world market at any given time for aircraft and the longer WFC is denied recovery of the equipment, the greater the number of these opportunities that will be lost," he said.

Reisberg also wanted the court to order Continental to post a bond or place other security in escrow that would guarantee future payment in case, as he believed, the appeal ultimately fails.

The judges issued no such restriction.

"It is using our planes, it is generating revenue from them, and it should pay the lease requirements," Reisberg said.

Border Patrol agents accused of abuse

HARLINGEN (AP) — Overworked Border Patrol agents often mistreat aliens along the southern border, said immigrant rights activists, who called for improving federal officers' accountability.

"There is a pattern and practice of abusive and, at the least, aggressive behavior on the part of some Border Patrol personnel here in the (Lower Rio Grande) Valley," Jonathan Jones, a spokesman for the Harlingen-based Proyecto Libertad legal office for Central American immigrants, said Tuesday. "This behavior has been ongoing for years."

Jones and representatives of two other immigrant rights groups held a news conference in Harlingen to call for reform of the way the government investigates complaints against Border Patrol agents. Jones said those investigating the complaints often are former immigration agents who are biased in favor of the Border Patrol.

"There does not exist a process whereby we can file complaints and expect to get some sort of acknowledgement, expect to get some sort of impartial investigation," Jones said.

Don Nielson, a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service's Southern District office in Dallas, said all formal complaints are handled impartially by the Office of Inspector General.

Interpretation may affect gambling ships

HOUSTON (AP) — Cruise ship operators offering gambling aboard short trips have three months to comply with a 1947 federal law or risk stiff fines, jail terms and even losing their vessels, two U.S. attorneys said Tuesday.

The law, as recently interpreted by Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, requires a ship with a gaming establishment to remain at sea for at least 24 hours or dock at a foreign port on every trip.

A ship also must provide meals and lodging to all passengers unless it docks at a foreign port.

"We're giving them a reasonable time ... to look at their operations and bring their operations into compliance," said U.S. Attorney Ron Woods of Texas' Southern District, who made the announcement Tuesday with U.S. Attorney Bob Wortham of Texas' Eastern District.

Thornburgh's definition could effect cruise ship lines in Galveston, Freeport, Port Isabel and similar operations in several other coastal states.

Joint committee studies parole system

AUSTIN (AP) — Two people reappointed to the state Board of Pardons and Paroles were warned by a senator Tuesday not to parole inmates serving time for murder if they want his vote to stay on the job.

Peggy McAdams and Kenneth Coleman, both of Huntsville, were questioned for two hours at a joint meeting of the Senate Nominations and Criminal Justice committees.

Nominations, which votes on appointments by the governor, recessed without taking a vote. Chairman Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, said the seven-member committee would vote next week.

Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, told the nominees he could not prohibit them from paroling someone convicted of murder.

But he had this warning: "I'm not saying you can't do it, I'm saying I am pressuring you not to do that. And if I vote for you, it'll be because I think you felt that pressure. And if I think you didn't feel it — that's just one vote — but you won't get this one."

Teamsters ordered not to disrupt filming

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A judge has ordered members of the Teamsters union not to disrupt production of a television movie being filmed here.

The labor dispute is over the hiring of all non-union truck drivers for the NBC movie "Force 2000," based on the 1980s TV series "Knight Rider" starring David Hasselhoff and his talking computerized car, KITT.

State District Judge Carleton Spears issued an injunction Monday ordering pickets to stay at least 300 feet from any person, vehicle or trailer involved in the making of the movie.

The judge said the protesters can use cowbells, megaphones and flash cameras, but must be silent when filming is under way and stay out of the background of scenes being filmed.

Wife scores in sports card empire divorce

FORT WORTH (AP) — The couple that started SCORE baseball, football and hockey cards is separating, and Ann Flavin has scored a victory in the multimillion-dollar, marathon divorce suit.

After eight weeks of testimony and seven days of deliberation, jurors ruled Monday that Optigraphics, the Grand Prairie-based manufacture of SCORE cards, is worth $63 million.

That's $28 million above Mrs. Flavin's estimate, but $106 million less than what her husband, John Flavin, 56, was pitching for.

Because there is a strong likelihood that Mrs. Flavin, 36, will continue running the sports card empire, under the final divorce settlement she may be ordered to buy her spouse's half of the business, making a lower value to her advantage.

Indictments target adult bookstores

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal pornography indictments were unsealed Tuesday against seven people allegedly involved in operating 17 adult bookstores in four states, authorities said.

The 12-count indictment charges suspects in Texas, Louisiana, Tennessee and Alabama with racketeering, interstate transportation of obscene materials and conspiracy to defraud the United States and obstruct justice.

The Southern District of Texas issued the sealed indictments April 9 after a lengthy investigation by a Houston-based task force that included the FBI, Internal Revenue Service and Houston Police Department's vice division.

The indictment alleges Mary Jane Jenkins, also known as Linda Ivey Entratter of Canton, Ga., ran the bookstores in cooperation with Phoenix and Associates Management Ltd., a Nevada-based corporation.

Phoenix is named as a co-conspirator in the distribution of obscene magazines and video cassette tapes. The company has not been indicted.

Besides Ms. Jenkins, 57, others named in the indictment include

Evan Peter Pigman, 34, of Creve Couer, Mo.; Jo Ann Rochelli, 33, of Roswell, Ga.; David Carl Stubbs, 56, of Marietta, Ga.; Rickie Herbert Ranney, 37, of Palmyra, N.Y.; and Larry Wayne Malady, 33, of Roswell, Ga.

If convicted, Ms. Jenkins faces 85 years in prison and a $2.75 million fine. Other defendants face from five years to 75 years in prison and between $250,000 and $2.5 million in fines if convicted.

Also named in conspiracy counts are attorneys Robert Eugene Smith, no age available, of San Pedro, Calif., and Charles William Boyle, 38, of Atlanta. The indictment alleges that while representing Ms. Jenkins and others, Boyle and Smith concealed the identities of company owners.

Prosecutors alleged that the defendants used Phoenix, Saxet Management Inc. (Texas), Saxet Inc. (Georgia), and LaGrange Trading (California) to distribute the pornography. In addition, the indictment alleges defendants used United Parcel Service to transport obscene video cassette tapes from Cleveland to Houston and other cities.

Doctors with AIDS bill gains approval

AUSTIN (AP) — A House committee approved a bill to require doctors, dentists or patients infected with the virus that causes AIDS to disclose that fact before surgery is performed.

A person found in a civil lawsuit to have violated the requirement would be liable for actual and punitive damages, court costs and attorney fees.

The national Centers for Disease Control estimated that as many as 100 people in the United States may have been infected by dentists or surgeons. It recommends that infected health care workers not perform surgery.

The bill by Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, would forbid a physician or dentist infected with the human immunodeficiency virus to perform surgery unless the patient was informed and signed a document consenting to the surgery.

Governor meets county officials on jail problems

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards and officials from several counties suing the state for the cost of housing prison inmates in their county jails agreed to form a committee to try and solve the problem.

"We had an open, meaningful exchange about problems that are central to both county and state officials," Richards said after the 1½-hour meeting Tuesday.

Officials from Harris, Dallas, Travis, Nueces, Bell, and Galveston counties attended the meeting and will become members of the informal committee, the governor's office said.

Approximately 10,000 prison inmates are backed up in county jails because of overcrowded state prison conditions. Harris County and a group of 13 other counties are suing the state in separate lawsuits for the costs of holding these inmates.

Richards has criticized Harris County officials, saying they are sending too many people to prison, instead of using alternatives to incarceration.

But on Tuesday, she said, "We are talking about the same citizens, the same taxpayers, and if we act in good faith, I believe we can solve our common problem."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your hopes will rise along with your productivity. Look for big gains where your finances are concerned. You acquire new confidence when you see what you can accomplish on your own. Discretion is the key to happy romance in November and December. A loved one will help you make an important, far-reaching decision in early 1992. Look for more than just physical attraction when choosing a mate.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: music publisher Don Kirshner, journalist Harry Reasoner, playwright Thornton Wilder, actor William Holden.
ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be willing to try someone else's methods. They may be more effective than you expect. Welcome new responsibilities; a nice raise or bonus is in the works. Keep an eye on legal affairs.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A financial goal may be difficult to achieve right now. Your timing could be off. Exercise patience. Arguments could mean you have to work late. Handle routine matters as efficiently as possible.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): It is up to you to launch a pet project. Other people are too wrapped up in their own affairs to really care. Seek their cooperation and suggestions at a later date.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 17, 1991

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An opportune time to engage in confidential talks, write letters or conduct research. You are able to promote your plans without arousing opposition. Give a key partnership extra attention now.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can communicate with strength and sensitivity today. Discuss your professional aims with someone who has an impressive track record. Expense incurred cultivating a new friendship will be worth it.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An exchange of ideas with your colleagues could spawn a brilliant financial concept. A great day for fundraising. Show more initiative. A special campaign will produce wonderful results.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Patience is your strongest ally if you are faced with constant interruptions. Isolate yourself to complete difficult paperwork. Welcome a candid discussion with your loved ones.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are the catalyst that brings people and ideas together. An introduction will light up your life. Avoid getting involved in office squabbles. Preserve your reputation for objectivity!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An alliance is very fragile now. Adopting a playful approach could get everyone back on track. Do not allow an impulsive mood to jeopardize a romantic bond.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It may be difficult to concentrate today. Reconsider your plans to start a new project. Get caught up on paperwork. A platonic relationship intensifies.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The tides of friendship shift in your favor. Adaptability is your biggest asset. Sign agreements. Do not let obstacles deter you. Your mate makes a special request. Try to oblige.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Channeling money into shopping or socializing boosts your spirits. You are a welcome addition to any gathering. Wear something elegant and dine somewhere special. Romance sizzles.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are outgoing, confident and very appealing! Life is never dull around these adventurous Aries. Born leaders, they show their leadership skills first on the playground, later in the boardroom. History buffs, they love to read about bloody conflicts like the Indian Wars and the French Revolution! Encourage these imaginative children to write down some of the wild tales they invent. They are natural storytellers, more convincing than they realize.

In response to partner's takeout double, South's jump to two no trump was classic—no four-card major, 11 points in a balanced hand and a double stopper in the enemy suit. Since North had a rather better than minimum double at any vulnerability, the raise to three no trump was automatic.
West led a fourth-best heart and declarer seized the opportunity for a "free" finesse for the jack of hearts.

The operation was a success, but the patient died. After winning with the ten, declarer started on diamonds. When West won the ace of diamonds, that defender continued with the ace of hearts, felling the king, and the jack to drive out declarer's queen. Declarer had only eight tricks and tried to steal a ninth by leading a spade, but West alertly stepped in with the ace and cashed two more heart tricks to inflict a one-trick set on the enemy.
Had declarer taken some time before committing to the first trick, it might have become obvious that the finesse in hearts was illusory. West had to have all the missing aces to open the bidding, so the heart suit was safe from attack if declarer played the king from dummy at the first trick.

That would win, and declarer can then start on diamonds. If West wins and continues hearts, South's Q-10 constitutes two additional stoppers in the suit and the defenders are limited to their three aces. Any shift would permit declarer to then force out the ace of spades, and North-South garnered 10 tricks. The urge to win an extra trick proved expensive indeed.

Judge says singer Wahlberg's not accepting 'responsibility'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — A judge who agreed to let New Kids on the Block singer Donnie Wahlberg make public-service announcements instead of facing an arson charge said he was disappointed by recent statements by the pop star.

"I would have hoped he acted like he accepted a little more responsibility for the situation," Jefferson District Judge Jim Green said Monday after seeing Wahlberg interviewed on national television.

Wahlberg, the 21-year-old lead singer for the pop group, was arrested March 27 after an early-morning fire that burned a small patch of carpet at a downtown hotel.

He was originally charged with arson, a felony. The charge was later reduced to misdemeanor criminal mischief, and he was placed in a diversion program for first-time offenders and ordered to make public service videos on fire safety, drug abuse and drunken driving.

"The only thing I did do in the hotel was shoot off a fire extinguisher, which was kind of a prank," the teen idol said Monday on ABC's "Good Morning America" program.

But authorities had accused the singer of pouring vodka on the carpet and setting it ablaze.

"We never charged him with setting off a fire extinguisher," Fire Chief Russell Sanders said. "At no time have we changed our position. We have eyewitnesses and physical evidence on the arson."

New Kids on the Block was named favorite pop-rock group at the 1990 American Music Awards and won the favorite pop-rock album award for "Hangin' Tough."

LOS ANGELES — Roseanne Barr's television son, 9-year-old Michael Fishman, finds acting a simple occupation.

"Acting is easier than I thought it would be," said Fishman, who plays D.J. on ABC's "Roseanne." "The only time it's hard is when you have to walk around the room without saying anything. You start bouncing off the walls and don't know where you are."

He is a third-grader at Arnold Elementary School in suburban Cypress when he's not being tutored on the "Roseanne" set. "Roseanne" was his first acting job.

After three seasons on "Roseanne," Fishman admits it's "kind of neat" when strangers begin whispering when they spot him in public.

"I can't even go to the supermarket anymore. Everybody comes up and asks me questions," he said in a recent interview.

"They want to know if Roseanne is nice (he says 'Yes'), if I like being an actor ('Yep'), and all that stuff."

LOS ANGELES — Actor Sean Penn and his girlfriend, actress Robin Wright, are the parents of a girl.

Dylan Frances Penn was born Saturday at 10:49 p.m. at UCLA Medical Center, Penn publicist Lois Smith said Tuesday. The baby weighed 8 pounds, 11 ounces, and mother and child were doing well, the spokeswoman said.

Penn, who was married previously to Madonna, met Miss Wright while filming the movie "State of Grace." Smith said no wedding plans have been scheduled.

NEW YORK — Gen. Colin Powell wound up a triumphal return to his hometown Tuesday by telling New York's movers and shakers that schools would work better if educators taught students the way the Army trains recruits.

"I know schools can't be run like an infantry platoon, but it seems to me it was kind of like one when I went to school," the joint chiefs chairman told 800 political, business and labor leaders.

He also said the situation in Iraq would not have been changed by continuing to shoot down Iraqi helicopters.

In a speech to the Association for a Better New York, Powell said the internal struggle in Iraq, "however painful to watch, will have to be resolved by the Iraqi people, and not by coalition forces."

On Monday, Powell revisited his old high school and the South Bronx neighborhood where he grew up, calling the day one of "homecoming, remembrance, nostalgia" that he would never forget.

At Morris High School, from which he graduated in 1954 and went on to City College of New York and then to the Army, Powell began his remarks with a small tease.

He told the students he would be throwing out the first ball at Yankee Stadium and asked: "Who'd like to go with me?"

As hands shot up, Powell shook his head and said: "Wrong answer — I want you to stay right here where you belong."

"You get that diploma and you are on your way to somewhere, even though you don't know where that somewhere may be," he said. "If you don't get that diploma, you're on your way to nowhere."

Luis Delgado, head of The Association for Victims of Terrorism, gestures as he describes the events of Nov. 22, 1988, when a car bomb exploded in Madrid, killing his 2-year-old son.

Victims of terrorism seek compensation

By Richard Lrant
Associated Press writer

MADRID, Spain — On Nov. 22, 1988, a car bomb killed Luis Delgado's 2-year-old son, disabled his wife and wounded him. Every day since, he has asked himself: "What if I had gone by a second earlier?"

"Maybe nothing would have happened" if they had driven past the Civil Guard headquarters sooner, he said, and "a second later, maybe we'd all be dead."

Few other people remember little Luis, one of 17 children and 786 adults killed by terrorist acts in Spain since 1968, even though his death was front-page news for a day.

That is more attention than most victims get in a country accustomed to politically motivated terrorism that often claims innocents.

The father cannot forget, and has dedicated himself to making sure the government at least takes care of innocent civilian victims — the maimed, widows and orphans terrorism leaves behind.

As head of the Association for Victims of Terrorism, the 34-year-old physician leads a public campaign to increase pensions and other benefits for those whose cases have fallen through the cracks of government bureaucracy.

"The bad guys here are not the victims," he said in an interview. "The bad guys are the terrorists and the government has to protect the victims' rights better than it does now."

Official statistics indicate terrorism is declining in Spain: 28 people killed and 173 wounded last year, compared to a peak death toll of 124 in 1980.

Cross-border arrests by Spanish and French police have crippled the leadership of ETA, whose violent campaign for the independence of Spain's three Basque provinces accounts for 80 percent of the deaths.

ETA responded by shifting its weapons of choice from pistols at close range to booby-trapped cars and remote-controlled bombs.

A generation after Civil Guard officer Jose Pardini became the first ETA victim in June 1968, most of the casualties are unlucky civilians like Delgado's son and Diego Montes, 12, who played soccer at the wrong time and place.

On March 16 in San Sebastian, Diego was walking home with his father when a car bomb exploded nearby, killing a member of the paramilitary Civil Guard. The boy was seriously wounded and taken to a hospital with four other passers-by.

Diego is covered by a law providing special payments and pensions to direct and indirect victims of terrorism, but it applies only to deaths or injuries since Jan. 1, 1987. Survivors of civilians killed before that receive pensions based on how much money the victim had paid into Spain's social security system.

Sonsolés Alvarez, who joined with other widows to found the victims' association, said Spain needs "a single law that treats everyone equally and deals with indemnities, pensions, hospital bills — complete coverage by the state."

Britain pays compensation for injury or death caused to civilians by violent offenses, including terrorism connected with Northern Ireland, and has a special office to review the claims. In Germany, benefits are automatic for widows or other heirs of terror victims.

Mrs. Alvarez, who has six children, was widowed when an explosion at a Zaragoza hotel killed her husband, a cavalry officer, and 37 other people in 1979. She and her sister were wounded.

As the widow of a military officer, she was fully covered, but civilian victims have been unable to claim special compensation because the cause of the explosion never was determined.

With financial help from the Interior Ministry, Mrs. Alvarez and other widows formed the association as a means of dealing with the government bureaucracy.

It now has a six full-time employees, several consulting lawyers and an annual budget of nearly $300,000 to pay for scholarships and supplemental aid to victims.

"What the association does is cover those things the state fails to," said Juan Antonio Corredor said.

Corredor, a former Civil Guard, lost the use of his right arm in a 1985 bombing that killed an American passer-by in 1985. He was 22.

Augustin Valladolid, an Interior Ministry spokesman, acknowledged some civilian victims and their families have had problems getting compensation, but said legislation was being prepared to fill the gaps.

Everest conqueror Hillary suffers altitude sickness on latest climb

By Binaya Guruacharya
Associated Press writer

KATMANDU, Nepal — Sir Edmund Hillary, the conqueror of Everest, says heights bother him more as he gets older. At 71, he had to be flown off a mountain last week after suffering altitude sickness.

"I find it more difficult to acclimatize to high altitude. But that does not stop me from going back. Only I think I will have to be more careful," Hillary said Saturday, back in his Katmandu office.

Now retired as mountain climber, adventurer, diplomat and beekeeper, his first profession, Hillary runs the Himalayan Trust, an organization he founded in 1961 to help the Sherpas.

He returns every year to the villages at the foot of the world's highest mountain, which he and Sherpa guide Tenzing Norgay were the first to climb in 1953.

Mount Everest is 29,028 feet high.

Hillary cut short a visit to the Sherpa village of Kunde on Wednesday when the sickness refused to go away.

He was in the village with friends from Canada, New Zealand and the United States to rebuild a water tank for the Kunde Hospital and replace a roof on a monastery.

"I had a slight dose of high altitude sickness up at Kunde at an altitude of 13,000 feet. So I came out one day early because there was no change in the sickness," he said.

"I had been feeling off-color three days before that. I had a little difficulty in breathing, certain physical discomfort and it was quite a long night before the next day when I was able to fly out," he said.

He flew out by helicopter on a windy and cloudy day, which can be treacherous in the Himalaya-

s. "It was nice to fly back to Katmandu," he said.

Hillary said he has been increasingly troubled by pulmonary edema, which fills the lungs with fluids. He has been sick several times before.

Hillary began the Himalayan Trust with a school for the Sherpa children under a project called "school in the sky." Since then he has helped build 25 more schools, two hospitals and 12 medical clinics in the Solukhumbu region on the southern slopes of Everest.

He also has funded construction of several bridges and the installation of pipelines to bring drinking water to the Nepalese highlanders.

"My heat pump's so efficient it saves money. And it's a clean system. I like what it means for the environment."

—Elta Chandler Park Board Member

Elta Chandler cools and heats her home with a heat pump because it saves money and energy. And since it's electric, it's "wonderfully clean."

A heat pump uses the energy in the air to keep her home comfortable all year. Even on cold winter days there's heat in the air. A heat pump captures that heat and uses it.

And it costs less to operate than a gas furnace. It's so efficient that for each unit of energy it uses, it creates two to three units of heat.

In the summer a heat pump becomes a high-efficiency air conditioner, capturing the heat inside the home and removing it.

For more information, call a heat pump dealer or TU Electric. It's your chance to save more than money.

Wranglers dump Angels

■ The Wichita Wranglers take a 3-2 lead in the season series, as the Angels prepare for tonight's game against El Paso.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Wichita right fielder Charlie Hilleman's favorite sport is ice hockey, but no slap shot would have cleared the fence like the ball he hit during the seventh inning Tuesday night at Angels Stadium.

Hilleman's three-run blast off Midland reliever Clemente Acosta helped propel the Wranglers to a 6-2 win over the Angels in the rubber game of their five-game set, abruptly halting the Angels' winning streak at two games.

"When you're battling all day and you're trying to get a hit every time, then you're putting a lot of pressure on yourself," said Hilleman, who was 0-for-3 when he came to bat in the seventh.

"I'm hitting in the No. 3 hole, and I've never done that before. I just get up there and try to do as well as I can.

Fortunately I got a home run, and I go 1-for-4 instead of 0-for-4," he said.

And the Wranglers go 3-2 for the series and the season.
Midland falls back to 2-3 after recovering from an 0-2 start and evening its record at 2-2.

The Wranglers, who out-hit the Angels 10-5, made a loser of Midland starter Steve King, who was making his Double A debut. King allowed seven hits and three runs, and the Angels trailed 3-1 when the right-hander gave way to Acosta, a lefty, at the start of the seventh inning.

Acosta walked Darrell Sherman to start the seventh, and the Wranglers' leadoff hitter promptly stole second base. Brian Cisarik singled Sherman to third, and Hilleman followed with

Wichita took the lead with a run in the top of the first inning
when clean-up man Guillermo Velasquez singled in Cisarik, who drew a one-out walk off King.

Chaps dominate OC again

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — There was no lineup shuf-fling Tuesday amongst the Midland College men's tennis team this week, but it made little difference.

The top-ranked Chaps defeated the OC men, 8-1, in dual match action, with the only MC loss coming in a grueling, three-set match at the No. 4 spot.

Last Tuesday, with a revamped lineup in which No. 1 singles player Tonney Van de Pieterman, and No. 2 Greg Muller were rested, the Chaps scored a 9-0 shutout. Every player in the MC lineup was moved up two spots to compete with the higher positioned Wranglers.

The latest win improved the Chaps' overall record to a perfect 17-0 on the season.

"I think (OC) just played tougher," MC tennis coach Joe Williams said. "They have a little more to prove after their last match."

Odesa tennis coach Jay Box agreed with Williams after seeing a number of his players put up a tougher challenge to the Chaps.

"They were coming off that tournament (ITCA National Western Team Championship) pretty high," Box said of MC's overwhelming victory last week.
"They could've played Stanford and beat them."

"I know we played better this week.
You talk about motivational factors, we had a lot more to play for than they did (Tuesday). They come in and kill ya, kill ya, kill ya. We play to make ourselves better."

One spot in which the Wranglers did make themselves better was at No. 1 singles. Although Arturo Martinez, ranked
No. 10 in the country, eventually lost to Midland's Van de Pieterman, the nation's No. 1 junior college player, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, he did improve over his last effort.

After losing to Van de Pieterman, 6-0, 6-0, in the ITCA National Junior College
Indoor Invitational in February, Martinez managed to drag Van de Pieterman into a three setter Tuesday.

"He played a good match," Van de Pieterman said of Martinez. "I wasn't prepared, but I picked up my intensity in the third set. By the end of the second (set), I felt I could be more aggressive."

Williams said that after Van de Pieterman lost the second set, he came to the sideline and told him "The third set's mine."

Williams said Van de Pieterman lost the second set and other games early on because "the ball was flying on him."

"You have to beat Arturo," Williams said. "I told Tonney if you make some loose errors, you're going to put him in the match."

"Arturo played his normal game. He played sound, solid tennis."

"Arturo's a Top 10 player," Box said of his student. "He can play with anybody on any given day."

The only MC loss came when unranked Mark Wagner defeated No. 34
Toby Curtis, 4-6, 7-6, 6-4.

Berhe Serekebhran, the Chaps' everyday No. 4 player, was sidelined while resting a strained knee.

MC hosts New Mexico Military next Tuesday. The match will be the Chaps' last before the Region V tournament,
April 26-27, in Waco.

Litany the same as fight nears

Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Well, it seems Webster's is wrong.

"What is a miracle?" asked George Foreman at a Tuesday news conference.
"A miracle is someone who eats too much" and fights for the heavyweight championship at the age of 42.

That was what the self-proclaimed, 250-pound cheeseburger champion predicts will happen Friday night when he challenges Evander Holyfield for boxing's most important title.

Foreman, an evangelist, sees the unbeaten Holyfield's role in the fight as destiny.

"He was born so I could get my chance to become heavyweight champion of the world," said Foreman, who won the title with a second-round knockout of Joe Frazier in 1973. He lost it on an eight-round knockout to Muhammad Ali in 1974 and then retired from 1977 to 1987.

"My knees were shaking when I fought Joe Frazier," Foreman recalled.
"Holyfield is not the kind of guy who makes your knees shake."

"He hits you with a combination, and if you don't go down, he says, 'OK, I'll win on points.'"

Foreman predicted he would knock out Holyfield in two rounds.

Holyfield, who was 10 at the time,

"Joe Frazier's style was just cut out for Foreman," the 28-year-old Holyfield said.
"He was like a man running into a wall."

Walker, Dickey named MC assistants

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

George Walker and Randall Dickey have been named as Midland College assistant basketball coaches for the upcoming season.

The announcement was made Monday night at a Chaparral Booster Club meeting by recently named head basketball coach Steve Green.

Walker has been an assistant at MC for five seasons, the past four under former head coach Reggie Franklin.

Dickey served as an assistant under Green at Howard College last season. Prior to then, Dickey worked as an assistant at Morrilton High School in his home state of Arkansas.

"I think George has a lot of connections throughout the state, he gets along with everybody on campus and everybody associated with the Midland program in a tremendous way," Green said.

"Everybody has a lot of respect for him and trusts him and totally likes him."

"And I think (Dickey) was very instrumental in our success (at Howard) this year. He had a hand in everything we did."

"I have nothing but great things to say about both of them. We're trying to get MC to where Coach (Joe) Williams and Coach (Dennor) Poss have the tennis and golf programs."

Walker, a graduate of the University of Houston and an assistant to former UH head coach Guy Lewis, said he is glad to be staying on in Midland.

"It's like I told Steve," Walker said, "I can work with just about anybody. I feel like he's a good coach and I'm looking forward to next year."

The 30-year-old Dickey, younger brother of newly named Texas Tech head coach
James Dickey, said the basketball program's future at MC is dependent upon what he and Walker do in the near future.

"The leg work's gonna be the next two or three months in recruiting," Dickey said. "What we get done then will pay off later in the season."

"I'm very fortunate to have the opportunity; there's great opportunity to upgrade the program and we hope we can do this immediately."

Dickey, who attended Valley Springs (Ark.) High School, received his bachelors degree in 1983 from Ouachita Baptist University, in Arkadelphia, Ark.

Downing sparks Rangers

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Brian Downing was packing for a motorcycle trip to Nevada when the Texas Rangers dialed his number in late March.

"I had shut down training a couple weeks before that. When everybody in baseball turns you down, what else can you do?" Downing said Tuesday after getting four hits in the Rangers' 3-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Downing went 4-for-5 with a double, three singles and an RBI to continue his torrid start. He is 8-for-11 since being activated Saturday after missing the start of the season with a fractured bone in his right hand.

The numbers are particularly gratifying because Downing was shunned by his old team, the California Angels, after last season. The Angels declined to let him go to salary arbitration, instead letting him become a free agent, and no one else seemed interested in the 40-year-old Downing.

"All we asked of anybody was to invite me to spring training. If I couldn't play, I would have left, no strings attached," he said.

The Rangers belatedly took him up on the offer. "I'm so happy somebody gave me the opportunity," Downing said. "Even if I was going 0-for-5, it's a great feeling to be wearing a big-league uniform again."

Texas starter Kevin Brown got his first victory since last July, allowing three hits in seven-plus innings. Brown (1-1) had a no-hitter until Albert Belle singled with two outs in the sixth inning.

Brown, winless in his seven previous starts, was lifted after giving up a leadoff triple to Mike Huff in the eighth. Jerry Browne then hit a sacrifice fly off reliever Jeff Russell to score the Indians' only run.

Red Sox 5, Royals 2

BOSTON — Tom Brunansky, Wade Boggs and Mike Marshall hit solo homers as Boston ended a 22-inning scoring drought.

Danny Darwin (1-1) got his first American League victory in five years. He allowed five hits, including Kurt Stillwell's two-run homer in the eighth, struck out seven and walked one in 7 2/3 innings.

Darwin, signed as a free agent for $11.8 million over four years, retired 16 straight batters after walking Kurt Stillwell with two outs in the second inning.

Mike MacFarlane ended the streak with a single off the left-field wall to start the eighth. Stillwell then hit his first homer into the Boston bullpen in right-center.

Tigers 6, Blue Jays 2

DETROIT — Travis Fryman hit a three-run homer and Rob Deer, moved up to third in the batting order, broke a 1-for-18 slump with a triple and double as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Toronto Blue Jays.

Bill Gullickson (1-0) gave up two runs on four hits before leaving the game after 6 2/3 innings when he was hit on the pitching hand by Mark Whiten's line drive. Mike Henneman went 1 1/3 innings for his second save.

The Tigers scored three runs in the fifth against David Wells (1-1) to overcome a 2-0 deficit.

White Sox 4, Yankees 3

NEW YORK — Chicago remained baseball's only unbeaten team as Robin Ventura delivered a run-scoring double with two outs in the 10th inning to give the White Sox a victory over the New York Yankees.

At 6-0, the White Sox are off to their best start since winning the first eight games in 1982. All of Chicago's victories have been on the road — the White Sox don't play at the new Comiskey Park until Thursday, the latest home opener in the majors.

With two outs in the 10th, Lance Johnson singled off Steve Farr (0-1) and Ventura hit an opposite-field double to left.

The White Sox have won six straight at Yankee Stadium.

Triple play can't help Astros

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Terry Pendleton's three-run double keyed a seven-run eighth inning Tuesday night as the Atlanta Braves won at home for the first time this season, 10-4 over the Houston Astros.

Pendleton's hit to the gap in left-center field off reliever Curt Schilling gave the Braves their first home victory after three consecutive losses.

The Braves scored their first run off starter Pete Harnisch in the fifth on a run-scoring single by Sanders, his first National League RBI. Sanders drove in Mike Heath, who earlier hit into a triple play.

Reliever Xavier Hernandez (0-1) was the loser, facing three hitters in the inning and failing to retire any. Doug Sisk (1-0) picked up the victory with one scoreless inning of relief.

The Astros pulled off the triple play after Bream and Mark Lemke singled, putting runners at first and second. Heath grounded to third baseman Ken Caminiti, who stepped on third, threw to Candaele at second for the forceout, and his relay to first got Heath by a step.

Cubs 4, Phillies 3

CHICAGO — Damon Berryhill singled home the winning run with two outs in the 13th inning as the Chicago Cubs beat the Philadelphia Phillies.

It was the fourth straight victory for the Cubs and the third straight loss for Philadelphia.

NL Roundup

Mitch Williams (0-1) hit lead-off batter Shawn Dunston with a pitch to open the 13th. Dunston went to second on a sacrifice by winning pitcher Mike Bielecki (2-0), took third as Jose Vizcaino grounded out and scored the winning run on Berryhill's line single to left.

Darren Daulton of the Phillies struck out five times, one short of the major league record for an extra inning game.

The Cubs threatened in the ninth when Doug Descenzo lead off with a double and moved to third on an infield out. Mark Grace was walked intentionally, but George Bell hit into an inning-ending double play.

Expos 4, Cardinals 1

MONTREAL — Rick Mahler pitched six strong innings for his first victory with Montreal and Spike Owen had three hits as the Expos snapped a three-game losing streak with a win over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The 37-year-old Mahler, 1-1, who made the club after being a non-roster invitee to spring training, allowed four hits and walked just on the way to his first victory since last Sept. 1 with the Reds. Tim Burke, who failed to get anyone out in losing the previous night to St. Louis, pitched the last three innings for his first save, allowing two hits.

Ken Hill, 1-1, turned in an effective five innings for St. Louis before Montreal chased him with three runs in the sixth.

Ivan Calderon drew a leadoff walk, stole second and went to third on Tim Wallach's single before coming home on Larry Walker's sacrifice fly. Wallach scored on a double by Andres Galarraga before Owen's triple knocked in Gilberto Reyes with the inning's final run.

Pirates 4, Mets 2

PITTSBURGH — Andy Van Slyke hit a tie-breaking two-run homer in the sixth inning and the Pittsburgh Pirates ended a three-game losing streak by beating the New York Mets.

Randy Tomlin, making his first start of the season, survived solo homers by Hubie Brooks in the fifth inning and pinch-hitter Mark Carreon in the seventh to pitch seven innings for the victory.

Tomlin allowed five hits, struck out three and walked three, thereby shutting off one of the Mets' biggest weapons. The National League East-leading Mets walked 59 times in their first eight games and have the top five men in walks in the league.

Stan Belinda pitched two innings for his second save.

With the score 1-1 in the sixth, Jay Bell singled off Wally Whitehurst (1-1) and Van Slyke homered over the right-center field wall, his first of the season. Van Slyke also knocked in a run in the eighth with a sacrifice fly.

ANGELS: Salmon hits third home run in losing cause

as Darrell Sherman singled to center and Jose Valentin tried to score from second base. Valentin beat Tim Salmon's throw home, but he missed the plate and Angel catcher Larry Gonzales tracked him down for the tag.

Wichita put its second run on the board in the fourth on Luis Lopez' bases-loaded infield single. But with the bases still full, King got Sherman to hit into an inning-ending 6-4-3 double play.

It was the second pretty play of the inning started by Halo shortstop Damion Easley. Easley scooped up a bouncer behind second base and his submarine throw gunned down Wichita designated hitter Greg David to start the frame.

Pitcher Darrin Reichle, who started and earned the win for Wichita, zipped through the first three innings without giving up a hit. But Angel leadoff hitter Ramon Sambo greeted the 6-5, 215-pound righthander with a triple down the right-field line to start the bottom of the fourth.

The Wranglers went up 3-1 on Valentin's RBI single in the fifth, and they put the game out of reach on Hilleman's homer in the seventh.

Salmon, playing center field for the season off Wichita reliever Doug Brocail to lead off the bottom of the seventh, but that's all that Midland could muster as Brocail earned his first save.

The Angels entertain undefeated El Paso in a five-game series beginning at 7 p.m. tonight. El Paso, which scored 15 runs in winning its opener and 13 runs in a subsequent game, tallied nine first-inning runs Tuesday en route to a five-game sweep over visiting San Antonio.

San Antonio's Willie Anderson goes to the basket.

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson had 24 points, 13 rebounds and seven blocked shots as the San Antonio Spurs moved another game closer to their second straight Midwest Division title with a 128-98 rout of the Los Angeles Clippers on Tuesday night.

Robinson had 13 points in the game's first 10 minutes — matching the Clippers' team total to that point. He did not play in the fourth quarter. Sean Elliott added 17 points and Terry Cummings, David Greenwood and Sean Higgins had 15 apiece for the Spurs.

Loy Vaught paced Los Angeles with 17 points, 15 in the final quarter. Jeff Martin added 15 and Charles Smith was the top-scoring starter with 10 points. The victory also kept alive San Antonio's chance of matching its franchise mark of 56 victories alive. San Antonio (53-26) visits Houston on Thursday and Denver on Friday and closes out the season against Dallas at home on Sunday.

The Spurs, who began the night one game ahead of Utah and Houston, dominated the Clippers from the onset.

NBA Roundup

Pistons 118, Celtics 90
AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Isiah Thomas scored 22 of his 25 points in the first half, sparking the Detroit Pistons to a big early lead on the way to a rout of the Boston Celtics.

Detroit jumped out to a 15-2 lead after just 3:23 and was never challenged in cruising to a surprisingly easy victory against the team with the second-best record in the Eastern Conference.

Hornets 92, Heat 87
CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Dell Curry led four Charlotte reserves in double figures with 19 points as the Hornets rallied behind its backups in the fourth quarter to beat the Miami Heat. Charlotte's reserves provided all of the Hornets' 27 points in the final period and outscored Miami's non-starters 52-13.

Rex Chapman was the only Hornets' starter in double figures with 14 points. Reserve Kelly Tripucka had 11 and Kenny Gattison and Muggsy Bogues had 10 apiece. Sherman Douglas had 23 points for Miami.

Magic 113, Hawks 106
ORLANDO, Fla. — Scott Skiles and Otis Smith each scored 25 points to lead Orlando to a victory over Atlanta, damaging the Hawks' hopes of finishing fifth in the Eastern Conference.

Atlanta trailed Philadelphia by one game for the fifth position in the playoffs before the loss. The fifth-place team will play the fourth-place team, likely Milwaukee.

Pacers 132, Nets 126
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Chuck Person scored 18 of his 24 points in Indiana's 78-point first half and the Pacers inched closer to wrapping up the seventh seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs with a victory over the New Jersey Nets.

The Pacers (40-40) need one win in their last two games or a loss by the New York Knicks to assure themselves of the No. 7 seed.

Bullets 112, Bucks 106
LANDOVER, Md. — John Williams forced overtime with a last-second layup, then scored eight of his 22 points in the extra session as Washington beat Milwaukee, the Bullets' first victory over the Bucks since November 1989.

Jazz 111, Kings 101
SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 28 points and Jeff Malone 26 on as the Utah Jazz extended the Sacramento Kings NBA-record losing streak to 36 with a victory.

John Stockton had 21 points and 16 assists and Thurl Bailey scored 18 points for the Jazz, who stayed a game behind the first-place San Antonio Spurs in the Midwest Division.

Knicks 108, 76ers 99
NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing scored 38 points as the New York Knicks survived 25-percent shooting in the second half to beat Philadelphia in the 76ers' NBA-record 14th overtime game.

Ewing scored eight of the Knicks' 13 points in overtime as they finished with one more point in the extra period than they managed in all of the fourth quarter.

Suns 153, Nuggets 118
DENVER — Kevin Johnson made four baskets as Phoenix opened the game by hitting its first 13 shots, and the Suns rolled to a victory over the Denver Nuggets.

Hull gives Blues series-winning goal

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Brett Hull's breakaway goal snapped a tie late in the second period as the St. Louis Blues completed a remarkable comeback to beat the Detroit Red Wings 3-2 in Game 7 of their opening-round playoff series Tuesday night.

In addition to Hull's league-leading eighth goal of the playoffs, Dan Quinn and Rich Sutter also scored and Adam Oates had two assists as the Blues became the eighth team in NHL history to come back from a 3-1 deficit to win a playoff series. A crowd of 18,635, the largest of the season at the St. Louis Arena, was watching.

The last team to come back from a 3-1 deficit was last year's Edmonton Oilers, who defeated Winnipeg en route to their fifth Stanley Cup in seven years. Others to accomplish the feat were Los Angeles (1989), Washington (1988), Detroit and the New York Islanders (1987), the Islanders in 1975 and Toronto in 1942.

It was also the second time Detroit coach Bryan Murray squandered a 3-1 lead to lose a series. Jimmy Carson scored an unassisted goal with 7:33 left when defenseman Garth Butcher fell down and lost the puck to make the finish interesting after the Blues had taken a 3-1 lead.

A delayed offside call also nullified an apparent game-tying goal by Detroit center Steve Yzerman with 44 seconds to go. The game finished dramatically with the Red Wings swarming the net with six skaters in the final minute. For a while, things were held up by a defect in the clock that resulted in the loss of a precious nine seconds. But the clock was rewound and the Blues held off the charging

Red Wings at the end.

It was the second time in their history that the Red Wings had lost a 3-1 lead in the playoffs.

The Blues advanced to the Norris Division finals against Minnesota, which upset Chicago in six games. The first game of the series is Thursday night in St. Louis.

Washington still likes its chances for baseball team

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The head of the local group seeking to bring major league baseball back to Washington on Tuesday discounted reports that the effort may be undermined by unanswered questions concerning the team's potential ownership.

"We are in the process of formulating ownership questions and will forward that to the committee," said John Akridge, president of Metropolitan Washington Baseball.

Akridge has tried to bring a major investor into the group for several months. John MacAniff, senior vice president of New York-based Ogden Entertainment Services, said last week he has talked with Akridge but hasn't decided whether to join. Sources also have said Robert Haft, president of Crown Books, also has been approached.

"We have had our commitment for equity for some time," Akridge said. "We've been trying to add icing to the cake ... someone with name recognition (to the ownership team)."

Washington is competing with Buffalo, Denver, Miami, Orlando and Tampa-St. Petersburg for two National League teams which will begin play in 1993. The NL expansion committee is expected to reach a decision in June.

The committee also has asked Akridge for more details about the departure of two American League franchises from Washington. He said the other questions asked by the committee deal with a National League franchise's ability to coexist with the American League's Baltimore Orioles, 40 miles to the north, and the proposed skyboxes for RFK Stadium.

MBW officials said they are trying to meet with Orioles officials. The Orioles have said they would be neutral toward Washington's bid.

Akridge said he did not consider the questions a sign that the organization is not a top contender, adding that he believed many cities have had to answer additional questions about their proposed operations.

Meanwhile, officials said the group said it has reached half its goal of 30,000 deposits on season tickets in the first three days of a month-long ticket campaign.

"The numbers we will announce today are proof that the nation's favorite pastime belongs in the nation's capital," Akridge said.

NIE NEWSPAPER IN EDUCATION

Newspaper in Education is a wonderful enrichment activity for my first grade class.

My class has enjoyed using the Garfield Activity cards. The activity cards are used with the newspaper to incorporate different concepts that make learning an enjoyable experience.

My students also enjoyed learning about the war. They were especially interested in the pictures and military maps and diagrams.

We would like to thank our sponsors - Need to Read and PDI for giving our Class a chance to broaden our learning experience.

Stocks surge

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market surged Tuesday in a flurry of buying spurred by new confidence that the economy is on the verge of recovery.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 53.71 points to close at 2,986.88, the third-highest close ever for the key barometer.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar, stymied by uncertainty over the direction of U.S. interest rates, turned in a mixed performance against other major currencies Tuesday.

The dollar gained ground against the British pound. In New York, sterling fell to $1.7905 from late Monday's $1.7910.

The U.S. currency also picked up some ground against the Japanese yen. The dollar rose to 134.60 yen in New York from 134.25.

The dollar declined against most other currencies in New York trading. Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday's prices, included: 1.6648 German marks, down from 1.6710; 1.4170 Swiss francs, down from 1.4185; 5.6265 French francs, down from 5.6385; 1,234.00 Italian lire, down from 1,237.25; and 1.14905 Canadian dollars, up from 1.14815.

In New York, gold fell 20 cents to close at $361.40 a troy ounce on the Commodity Exchange.

Silver rose 3 cents on the Commodity Exchange to close at $4.011 a troy ounce.

Prices fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil futures retreated modestly Tuesday after two strong run-ups based on fears that the nation's gasoline supply was nearing what the government considers the bare minimum.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in May settled at $21.64 per barrel, down 27 cents.

Once the oil market was closed for the evening, the American Petroleum Institute reported the supply of gasoline had fallen below 205 million barrels, considered by the Department of Energy to be the minimum necessary stockpile, to 204.2 million barrels.

Gasoline prices began moving higher in after-hours trading off the exchange floors.

Oil traders were concerned that even as the supply of gasoline fell further, production of gasoline also dropped from 6.7 million barrels a day to 6.5 million barrels a day for the week that ended Friday, she said.

Chase, First Fidelity post gains

Conditions for banking industry show improvement

NEW YORK (NYT) — Chase Manhattan Corp. on Monday announced a first-quarter profit of $117 million, a sharp improvement from a year earlier. The news was a sign that conditions for the banking industry are improving, even though problems with bad loans remain severe.

First Fidelity Bancorporation, the largest banking company in New Jersey, also announced an increase in profits.

Like many other banking companies, Chase and First Fidelity benefited from a wider spread between the interest rates they paid for deposits and the rates they collected on loans; a cutback in low-profit corporate lending and an expansion of higher-profit consumer lending, and reductions in payroll and other expenses.

At Chase, the nation's third-largest banking company after Citicorp and BankAmerica, first-quarter profits were more than double the $44 million earned a year earlier, and earnings per share improved to 73 cents, from 20 cents.

After losses totaling $999 million in 1989 and 1990, analysts have been predicting a return to profitability at Chase.

Profits at First Fidelity more than doubled, to $56.1 million, from $21.1 million a year earlier. First Fidelity's earnings improved to 87 cents a share in the first quarter, from 30 cents a year earlier.

Monday's announcement by Chase was better than expected and helped raise the company's stock price $1.375, to $19 a share, its highest level of the year. As recently as October 1989, Chase's stock had traded at $4.875. That was before the company began announcing a rapid increase in losses on bad loans, and declining activity in corporate lending, an area of traditional strength for the company.

"They are still not operating at a level of profitability the company needs over the long term, but the improvement gives hope that management is executing the turnaround plan," said Norman Jaffe, a banking analyst at Fox-Pitt Kelton, a securities firm.

The most glaring sign of trouble at Chase was an increase in domestic loans labeled as non-accrual because they are either badly delinquent or in such trouble that management does not expect repayment in full.

Non-accrual loans backed by commercial real estate projects increased $294 million, or 16.5 percent, to $2.074 billion, and now account for 23.6 percent of all such loans.

Other kinds of domestic loans in enough trouble to be labeled non-accrual rose $38 million, to $761 million.

Despite the increase in non-accrual loans, Chase did not increase the size of its reserve for loan losses.

Southwestern Bell reports drop in profits

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Southwestern Bell Corp., stung by a rate reduction in Texas late last year, reported Tuesday that first-quarter profits fell 9.7 percent compared with the same period a year earlier.

For the quarter, which ended March 31, the company had net income of $223.9 million, or 75 cents a share, compared with $247.8 million, or 82 cents a share, for the first quarter of 1990 when profits were swollen by a one-time $26 million gain because of a favorable change in interstate access rates.

Without that gain, the company's profits would have been flat.

Edward Whitacre Jr., chairman and chief executive officer, said the corporation's largest subsidiary, Southwestern Bell Telephone Corp., sustained a $37 million drop in profits in the quarter.

Although the phone company added 90,000 new access lines, the company was hit by the federal changes that cost $23 million in the quarter and by the Texas rate decision that cost another $15 million.

Sales for the three-month period were $2.143 million compared with $2.129 million in 1990, Whitacre said.

"Although we felt the impact of rate reductions in the first quarter, we're encouraged by continuing growth in operations," he said.

Home-building signs suggest recovery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing starts fell 9.3 percent in March, the government reported Tuesday, but analysts said a second straight increase in building permit applications signaled a mild recovery ahead for the nation's construction industry.

A separate government report said industrial production dropped 0.3 percent in March, the sixth decline in a row and an indication that America's factories remained mired in recession.

Economist Evalina Tainer of the First National Bank of Chicago said the Commerce Department statistics on housing suggested the industry had reached its low point in January. But, she added, "it's hard to make that same case for industrial production."

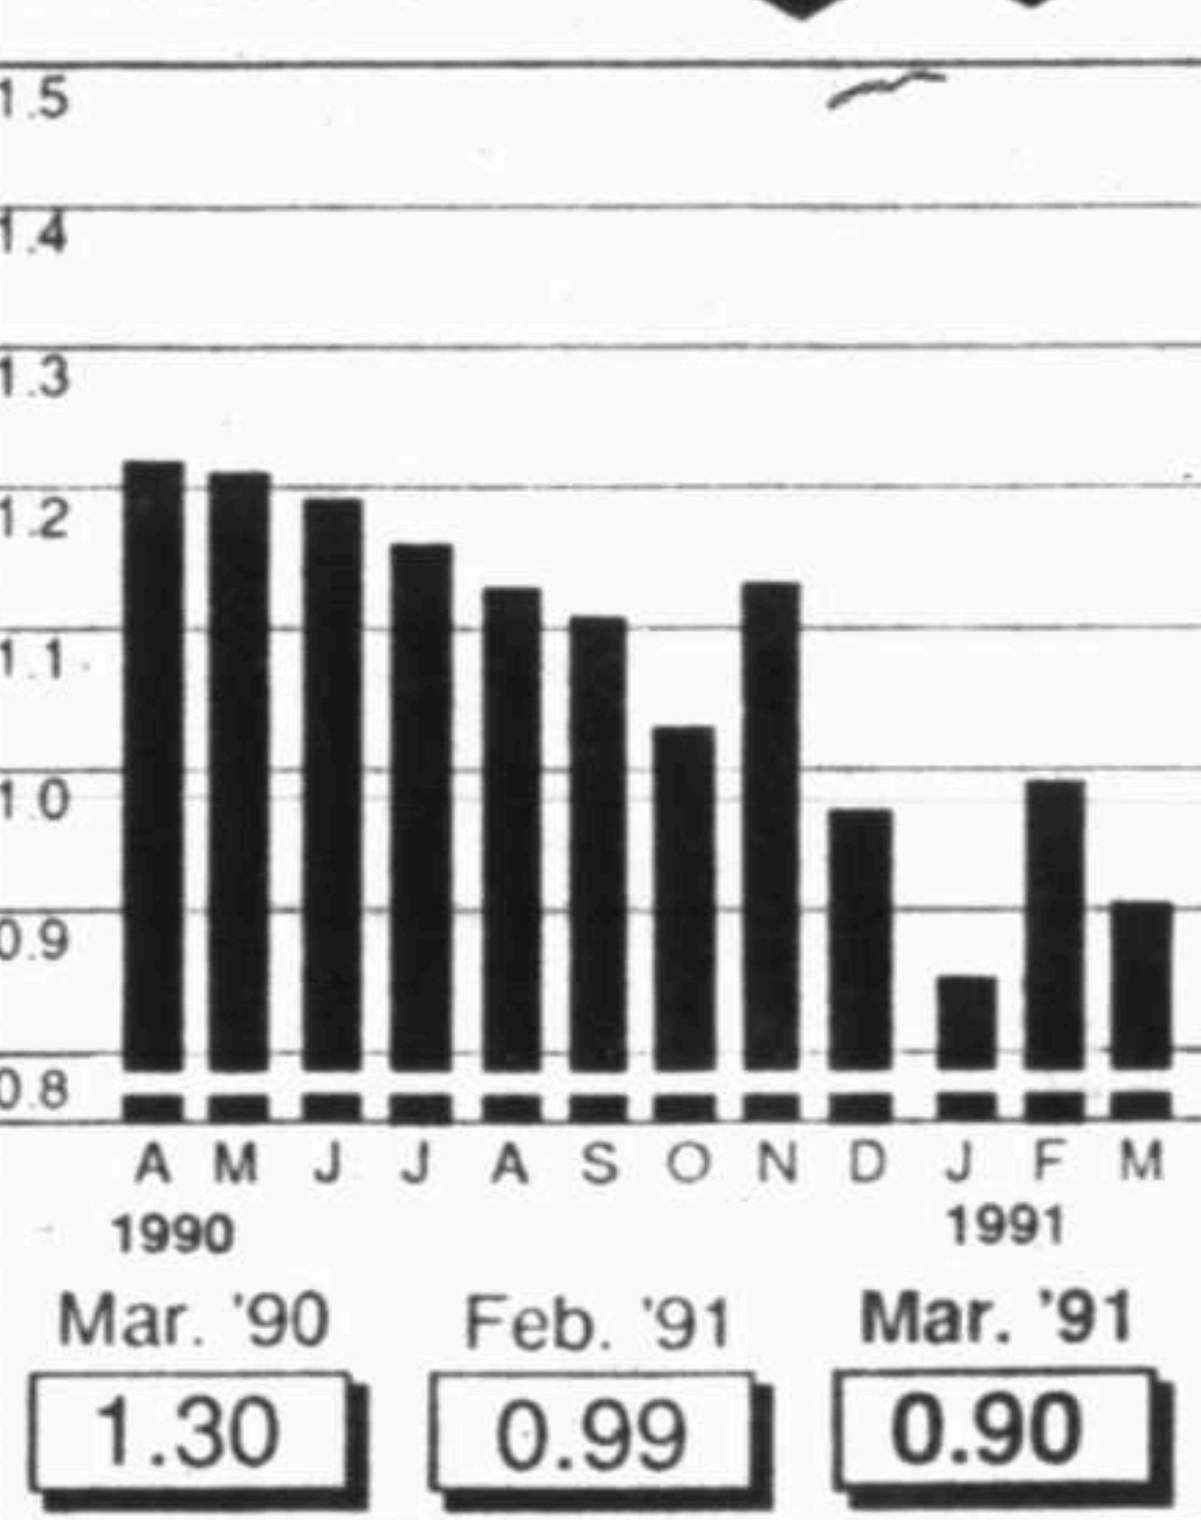

The Federal Reserve said the drop in manufacturing output was broad based and resulted in a 9.25 percent first-quarter plunge at an annual rate following a 7 percent rate of decline in the final three months of 1990.

The nation's factories, mines and utilities operated at 78.7 percent of capacity in March, down 0.4 percentage point

McDonald's plan to cut garbage by 80 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — McDonald's Corp. announced on Tuesday a plan aimed at eliminating 80 percent or more of the garbage created by its 8,500 fast-food restaurants across the nation.

The initiatives include the use of brown bags made of recycled paper, smaller paper napkins, recycling of behind-the-counter cardboard boxes, and the elimination of plastic cutlery wrappers where allowed by local health codes. And the company is trying out reusable coffee mugs, reusable coffee filters, and pump-style bulk condiment dispensers.

McDonald's, the world's largest food service organization, said also it is looking into replacing the plastic forks, spoons and knives with starch-based cutlery that could be composted. It also plans large-scale, soil-enriching composting of food and paper wastes on an experimental basis.

Parts of the plan already have been put implemented, such as the switch last fall from polystyrene sandwich boxes to a thin-layered wrap. Before the changes were begun, McDonald's outlets sent 2 million pounds of garbage per day to incinerators and landfills in the United States.

The initiative was developed in collaboration with the Environmental Defense Fund, an environmental advocacy group, which set up a joint task force with McDonald's to

Golf World prepares to tee off in Midland Plaza

By Mella McEwen

Getting set to open in the very near future is GOLF WORLD, located near Mervyn's in the former MIDA Computer location, Midland Plaza shopping center.

Midlander Clay McDonald is general manager of the store and Mark Gonzales is store manager. Golf World will sell and repair golf equipment.

The store will carry such lines of clubs like Wilson and McGregor; golf shoes from Nike, Footjoy and Dexter golf shoes; Miller golf bags, as well as different lines of golf balls, McDonald said. The store also will carry a line of golf clothing, and McDonald said he is considering adding, some women's tennis wear.

He said there will be a complete golf-

McDonald, who grew up in Midland, got into the golf business at Hogan Park Golf Course. He had been involved in the oil business until 1986. He has been an assistant golf pro in Dallas, Tucson and Pinetop — returning to Midland in November.

A grand opening is planned for early May.

CAKES GALORE has opened in the Town & Country shopping center, Midkiff and Cuthbert.

Owner Cindy Feierabend makes custom-order cakes and says her specialty is duplicating invitations — on the cake. She also does character cakes and wedding cakes.

Cakes can be ordered in quarter-, half- or full-sheet sizes. Feierabend also has some recipes for customers on restricted diets.

She got into cake decorating after taking some classes. This is her first cake shop.

Hours are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and from noon to 4 p.m. on Saturdays.

Texas Coca-Cola bottlers have joined the "Don't Mess with Texas" campaign conducted by the Texas Department of Highways.

Coca-Cola USA and Texas bottlers have made a three-year commitment to be the major corporate sponsor of the campaign and the "Great Texas Trash-Off" which will be held this year on June 1.

Coca-Cola will contribute 50,000 33-gallon trash bags to the Trash-Off, the massive volunteer cleanup effort.

Coca-Cola also plans to contribute half a million automobile litterbags free at Coca-Cola displays in Texas retail stores and will provide aluminum can recycling bins and one million book covers with an anti-litter message to schools this fall.

The Fielders, Midland dealers for HOT SPRING SPAS PLUS, recently returned from an all-expense-paid trip to Casa de Campo in the Dominican Republic. The trip was a sales incentive given dealers who meet or surpass their sales objective for the year. This year, more than 100 dealers qualified for the trip.

RED LOBSTER, with a restaurant at Loop 250 and Garfield, has implemented a nationwide recycling program. Recyclable items will be collected and sorted at each of the chain's restaurants, then picked up by local recycling organizations or trash haulers.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market overcame a shaky opening and climbed steadily higher. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial was up 20.30 at 2,953.47 at the afternoon. Volume on the Big Board amounted to 138.60 million shares as of 2 p.m. on Wall Street. Advancing issued led Decline about 7 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange listed stocks, with 883 up, 622 down and 530 unchanged. The market opened lower as the Dow marked its lowest territory. Some market watchers had expected a stronger showing given the release of fresh data favoring lower interest rates. The government reported that in March, housing starts declined 9.3 percent and industrial production fell 0.3 percent, further evidence that recession retains a grip on the economy.

Stock prices started to turn around at about midday as investors continued to review the steady stream of first-quarter corporate earnings reports.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained 1.20 to 209.79. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index advanced 1.24 to 368.11.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Yes, you can move your 401(k) account

By Bill Doyle

Q. I have both a 401(k) retirement plan at work and my own individual retirement account at a bank. Presently, my 401(k) account is up to approximately $13,000. I soon will leave my present employer and go with a small company that has no 401(k) or any other retirement plan.

Doyle

Am I allowed to move the $13,000 from my 401(k) account into my IRA?

A. Yes. The move you are contemplating is done frequently. The rules permit assets from a 401(k) or other qualified retirement plan to be placed in an IRA as a tax-free rollover.

Just make sure to get the money into your IRA within 60 days after receiving the check from the other retirement plan. Otherwise, you'll be socked with income tax on the entire amount and, if you are under age 59 1/2, an additional 10 percent penalty.

You'll have your choice of putting the 401(k) money into either your existing IRA or a new rollover IRA created specifically to receive that money. For most folks, it's wise to set up the separate rollover IRA. That will be necessary if you want to move that money into some employer's retirement plan at some future date.

Q. My husband is in the process of changing jobs. He has more than $100,000 in the retirement account at his present job and will receive it in a lump sum when he leaves. We want to put that money into his new employer's retirement plan. We inquired and learned this can be done.

However, we would like to use about $15,000 of that money to buy a new car — our first in 18 years of marriage. Can we do that and put the rest in the new retirement plan — without adverse tax consequences?

A. Indeed, you can. The money transferred from your husband's previous retirement plan to the plan at his new place of employment will remain tax-deferred until it is withdrawn.

The money taken out of the retirement plan and used to purchase an auto — or anything else for that matter — will be subject to income tax. You can't call that an "adverse tax consequence," for the simple reason that, sooner or later, money must come out of all retirement plans and be taxed.

Q. I'm in my early 30s and have been saving for retirement, first in an IRA and more recently in a 401(k) plan at work. My company does not match my 401(k) contributions.

My job is not highly paid and I am in the 15 percent federal income tax bracket. I realize, if I am to retire, I must plan well in advance.

Recently, I heard that retirement income, including money withdrawn from IRAs and other plans, is taxed based on the total income a person then receives — not on the amount of earnings he or she had when the money was made and put into the retirement plans.

Is this true? If so, the money I earned while in the 15 percent bracket could be taxed at 18 or 31 percent, because I had the foresight to save? If both answers are "yes," are tax-deferred retirement plans like IRAs and 401(k)s wise choices for people like me?

A. All three answers are "yes." And the second reply has to be hedged, because there's no way to predict what the "marginal tax rates" — better known as income tax brackets — will be when you retire.

You are absolutely correct in saying you must save in order to retire. And tax-deferred retirement plans are smart ways to go. By making $2,000 IRA contributions annually, in 30 years your nest egg will grow to $167,603 if the account is earning 6 percent interest, $244,692 at 8 percent or $361,887 at 10 percent.

This illustrates the beauty of tax-free compounding. The results would not be nearly as great if taxes took bites out of the interest accumulation.

After you retire and make withdrawals from the account, you might have to pay somewhat higher taxes. But that will be better than having lower income.

HOUSING: Analysts predict mild recovery

the previous month and the lowest rate since the 78.6 percent of September 1986, the Federal Reserve said.

In its separate report, the Commerce Department said construction of new homes and apartments, which had soared 17.2 percent in February, dropped in March to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 901,000.

Housing starts had risen to a rate of 993,000 in February from January's 847,000, which was the lowest in nine years.

Applications for building permits, often a barometer of future construction activity, rose 2.4 percent to an 884,000 annual rate in March after an 8.3 percent gain a month earlier.

"It suggests that builders believe the market for their product is improving," said Richard Peach, an economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association.

Chief economist David F. Seiders of the National Association of Home Builders concurred, saying "we think a gradual upswing is in the offing."

Earlier reports had said sales of both new and existing homes had picked up strongly in February, too.

But despite the advances in permits and sales, many analysts fear the effect of a national "credit crunch" on the housing recovery.

Both Seiders and economist Robert Sheehan of the National Apartment Association noted that Chairman L. William Seidman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. suggested last week that banks should further tighten their real estate loan standards.

Construction of new single-family houses slipped 5.9 percent in March to a 732,000 rate after jumping 20.1 percent a month earlier. The single-family sector represents about 75 percent of the housing industry.

PLAN: Chain to use brown paper bag

scrutinize the company's trash.

Keith Magnuson, McDonald's director of operations development, said he was "somewhere between surprised and shocked," when he realized how much of the garbage produced at McDonald's restaurants could be reduced, reused, recycled or composted.

"It's entirely possible that we can divert more than 80 percent of our on-premises solid waste," Magnuson said in an interview. "That came as a great surprise."

The plan also has environmental goals other than waste reduction, such as converting to unbleached brown paper when possible, or to paper bleached with processes that don't use harmful chlorine.

Robert Langert, director of environmental affairs for the Per-seco Co., the exclusive packaging purchaser for McDonald's, said it wasn't easy to abandon white carry-out bags.

"The decision to go to a brown bag was very difficult," said Langert, one of four company representatives on the task force. "In focus groups we got more negatives than positives," he said, with people saying the brown bags seemed cheap and not as clean as they expected from McDonald's.

But once the bags were introduced in stores, along with an explanation of the environmental benefits, "what came out of the real customer opinions was 100 percent positive," Langert said.

Richard Denison, a senior scientist for EDF, said the McDonald's initiative could set a trend for the food service industry.

"They have a major role to play. They can serve as a catalyst," Denison said. "We felt if we could find solutions that would work for McDonald's, it would work for others."

Corporate, Banking & Business

Q. What is a trademark and what does a trademark do?

A. In Texas, a trademark includes both the term "trademark", which is a mark used to identify tangible goods, and "service marks", which are marks used to identify intangible services. A trademark must be printed in such a way that attracts attention. It must not simply appear as a company's name (its "tradenam") where it would not draw any attention when printed next to an address or a phone number. Still, a company's emblem can serve as both a tradename and a trademark.

A trademark, once granted, gives a company the exclusive right to use that trademark in conjunction with the goods the company manufactures or the services the company provides.

Family Law

Q. In 1975 I was involved in a common law marriage from which two children were born. My spouse now lives in another state. Am I still married? Do I need a divorce?

A. Texas is one of the few states that still recognizes common law marriages. Common law marriages or informal marriages result from the actions of the parties, without a marriage license and marriage ceremony (ceremonial marriage). Although Texas law clearly sets out the requirements for the forming of a common law marriage, there are many misconceptions on the part of the public in this area. I would advise you to consult with an attorney to determine if in fact this was a common law marriage. If so, then it would in fact be necessary to file for divorce in order to legally terminate the marriage.

Estate Planning And Probate

Q. My father owned a small place in East Texas at the time of his death, and the property needs to be sold. As of yet, his will has not been probated. Can I sell the property if I do not probate his will? Where does the will need to be probated?

A. You cannot sell property in your father's estate without authority to do so. The authority to sell property comes from probating your father's will. Once the will is probated, the executor named in the will has the authority to either distribute the estate property to those named in the will or to sell the estate assets and distribute the proceeds.

You will need to probate the will in the county where your father had a fixed place of residence at the time of his death.

Canned coffee cake disappears rapidly

By Linda Anderson

Let's face it, no matter how much you like to prepare tasty foods, if you are earning a paycheck, you often don't have time to cook anything.

But remember how wonderful cinnamon breads smell when they are baking? Remember that first taste of warm coffee cake, fresh out of the oven? Remember how much time it takes to bake from scratch?

Well, Pillsbury is willing to do its share in helping out. The company's Streusel Coffee Cake combines the warm smell of baking cinnamon bread with the quickness of canned bread.

Several of my co-workers joined in this taste test — at least the tasting part. I took care of price and advertising accuracy (they were too busy helping themselves to seconds).

A 12.5-ounce can of Streusel Coffee Cake Cinnamon Swirl costs $1.29 and makes one coffee cake.

Label advertising is almost non-existent — I guess Pillsbury has been around long enough that much label rhetoric isn't necessary. About all I could find was that the container was an "easy open can" with a "peel off label, can pops open." Of course, we've known that about canned breads for years now.

The label does contain nutrition information, however, that lists a one-slice serving (I know, that's a little vague, but each loaf is supposed to make eight servings, so I guess each serving is just a little more than 1 1/4 ounces.) as containing 180 calories, 2 grams protein, 22 grams carbohydrate and 9 grams fat, as well as 70 percent of the thiamine (vitamin B1) suggested in the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance.

As previously implied, the taste-testers enjoyed themselves immensely. In fact, we ended up baking two of the cinnamon swirl coffee cakes — one a co-worker brought to the office and one I brought. Both coffee cakes disappeared in record time. In fact, they vanished long before noon — and with most of the newsroom staffers not even at work yet (most of them work later shifts than 8 a.m.-5 p.m.), that's amazing.

In our office, you can tell how successful a baked good is by the number of people who come by and peek through the office door after the food is gone, hoping we've miraculously produced another one. This time a steady stream of people paused at the door, hoping the cake pan was full again.

Well, in this case it worked and a few days after the first coffee cake arrived, the second one did too. And the campers were happy again.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Texas chef draws on military career

By Scott Fitzgerald

SPUR, Texas (AP) — C.W. "Tex" Finney doesn't run short on modesty when he talks about what he can do best.

"I'll put my cooking up against anyone. I'm the best cook the government ever had," said the 55-year-old owner of the Hot Iron Cafe located on Texas Highway 70.

The cafe will celebrate its first anniversary on April 1. Finney offers pizza entrees, Mexican dishes, fish and a West Texas staple — chicken fried steak.

A portrait of his hero — John Wayne — is mounted on a paneled wall of the cafe and blends well with the ranch decor. A packed house can accommodate 65 hungry customers.

If the traffic is slow on a weekday afternoon and Finney has a few moments to spare, he'll spin a yarn or two. The Adrian native relishes his memories of the military and his international culinary education.

"My mom was a hell of a cook," Finney said about his first exposure to cooking. "We'd take turns cooking on an open fire set in a pit. We fed lots of hands."

The rancher enlisted with the U.S. Marine Corps during the 1950s and it wasn't too long before the commissioned officers of the Marine Corps noticed they had a potential chef within their ranks.

"The government flew me around," Finney claimed, noting that he was ordered to cook at special functions hosted by U.S. ambassadors for foreign dignitaries from the Dwight D. Eisenhower administration through Jimmy Carter's term.

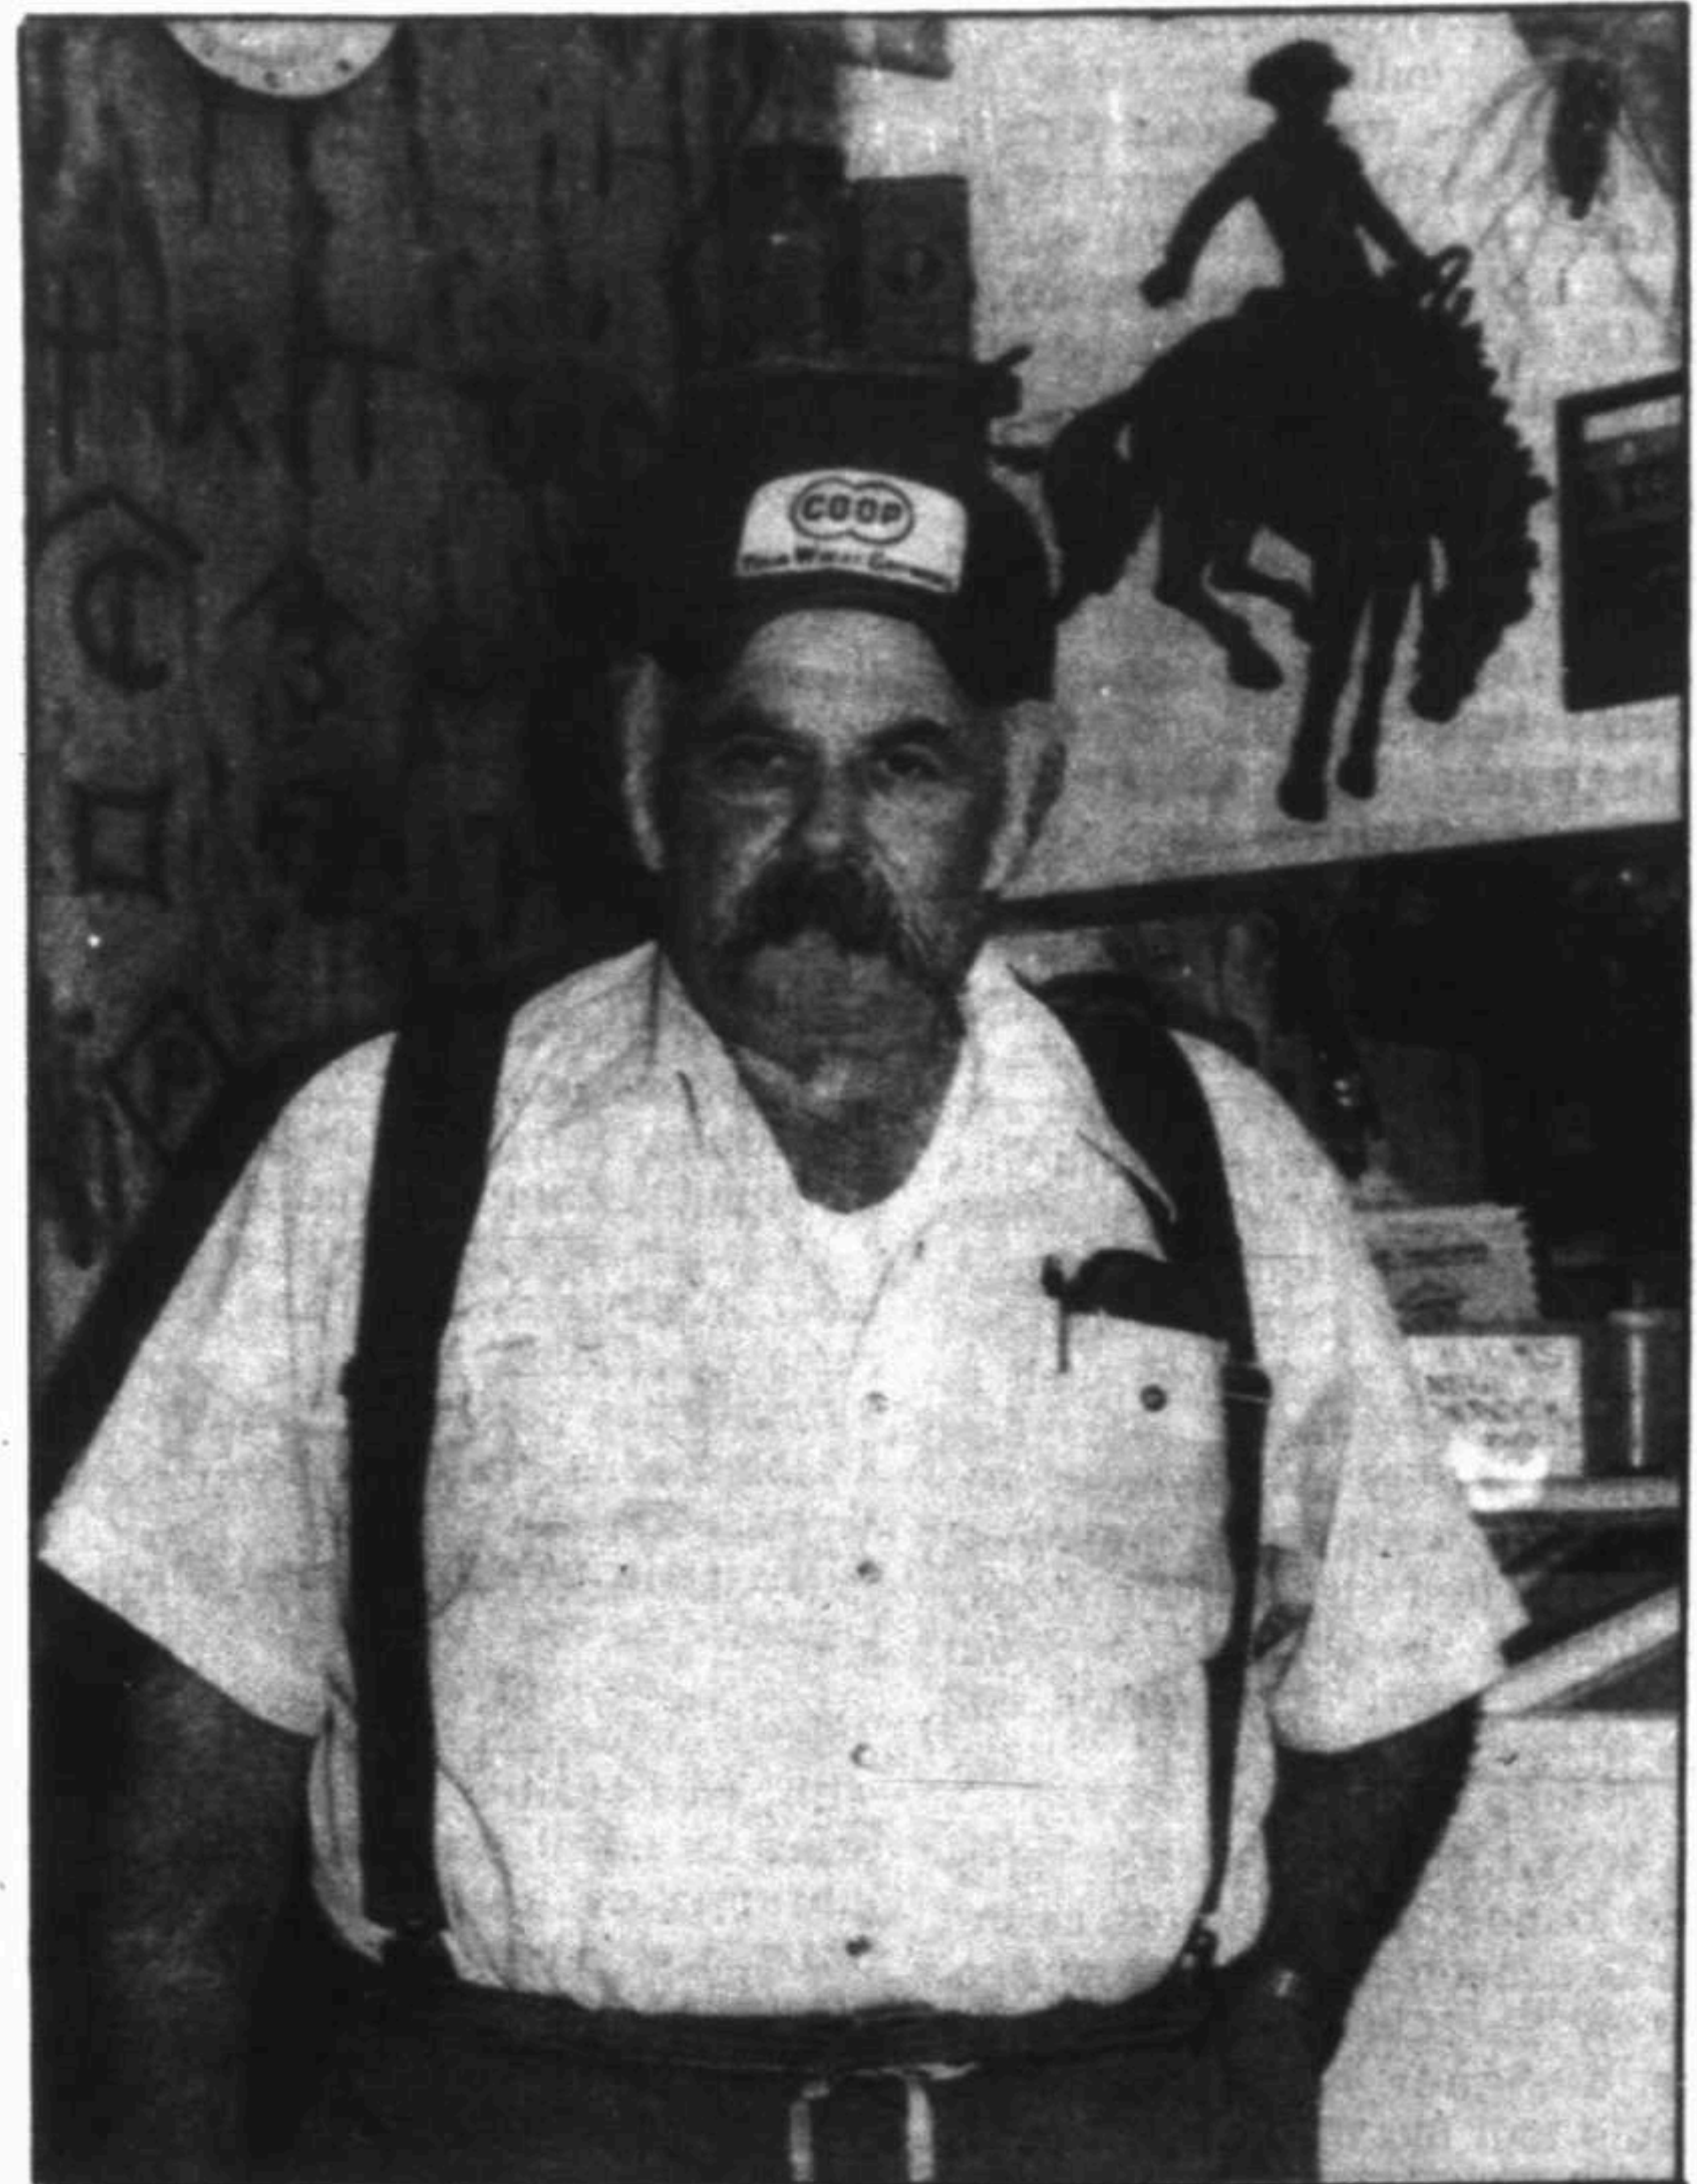

He says he learned how to use spices after attending a culinary school in France noted for the fine art of cuisine — especially for its soups, sauces and gravies.

"We'd chew up our spices, sample taste them and get pretty sick, too," Finney said. "Most people draw back on their seasonings. Garlic for example is one hell of a spice that everyone is scared to use. You can't go wrong with it."

During his military career, Finney learned to make numerous foreign dishes. He says Oriental cuisine presents the most problems for American chefs.

"They (Americans) don't have the patience for it," Finney said, noting that the secret to most Oriental dishes is that all ingredients are cooked separately and briefly stir-fried before being served. The preparation and processing of vegetables — such as cutting celery diagonally instead of straight across — enhances flavor, he added.

"We (Americans) cook our food to death," Finney said.

C.W. "Tex" Finney, who owns the Hot Iron Cafe in Spur, is a well traveled former Marine Corps cook who claims his military career helped make him "the best cook the government ever had."

Abuse prevention campaign announced

Staff Report

South Elementary School and the Midland County Child Welfare Board are preparing an awareness campaign for April, which is Child Abuse Prevention Month.

The children are developing poems, rap songs, posters, bumper stickers and flyers to send a message to all parents what the students think would help build a better family. "It is a great way to involve the students in a project we hope will educate the whole community," said Rae Wright, principal of South Elementary School in Midland.

The campaign will be unveiled 1:30 p.m. April 22. In 1990, 167 children in the area needed the protection of foster homes. Last year, Texas had over 5,000 foster children in care.

"It is our hope to raise the awareness about helping families stay together. Maybe, through this ad campaign, we can build a better family, together," Ms. Wright said.

Garlic Festival lures chefs

Staff Report

Amateur chefs will compete for top honors at the Gilroy Garlic Festival July 26-28 in Gilroy, Calif.

Deadline for entries for the Great Garlic Recipe Contest is June 25. The cook-off is noon July 27. To enter, recipes should be typed or printed on an 8 1/2 x 11-inch paper and sent to: Recipe Contest 1991, Gilroy Garlic Festival, P.O. Box 2311, Gilroy, Calif., 95020. Entrants should include their name, address and phone number.

Entrants may submit as many recipes as desired, but each must be original, or an original variation of a classic recipe, containing at least three cloves of fresh garlic or its equivalent in processed garlic.

Eight finalists (who come to the Cook-off in Gilroy at their own expense and bring ingredients needed to prepare their dishes) will be selected. Greeting all contestants will be "The Frugal Gourmet," TV personality Jeff Smith.

The first place winner will receive $1,000; second prize, $500; and third prize $300. An additional $100 prize will be awarded for the best recipe using the most garlic. Finalist will be reimbursed for cost of ingredients and one night's lodging.

Entrants unable to come to Gilroy for the Cook-off are eligible to win one of four $75 prizes. These entries should be marked "Regional Competition Only." All recipes become the property of the Garlic Festival Association.

Recipes take 'boring' out of breakfast, brunch

NEW YORK (AP) — Bored with breakfast?

Eating Well magazine's Richard Sax has two entertaining and healthful ideas for breakfasts and brunches: Potato and Smoked Fish Frittata and Toasted Cornmeal-Apple Muffin Wedges.

In the frittata recipe, whole eggs and egg whites replace the traditional egg mixture. It's especially important to cook this pancake-style omelet slowly and to avoid overcooking, since protein-rich egg white coagulates at a lower temperature than yolks or whole eggs.

For the Toasted Cornmeal-Apple Muffin Wedges, use one tart Granny Smith apple and one sweet McIntosh apple. You can also use berries or chunks of pears.

POTATO AND SMOKED FISH FRITTATA

4 new potatoes (about 12 ounces), unpeeled and scrubbed
2 teaspoons olive oil
1 medium onion, cut in slivers
3 scallions, trimmed and sliced
6 ounces smoked fish (sturgeon, trout or whitefish), skin and bones removed, flaked
3 large eggs plus 3 egg whites
3 tablespoons low-fat milk
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

In a saucepan, cover potatoes with cold, salted water. Cover, bring to a boil, and boil 15 to 20 minutes, or until just tender. Drain, cool in cold water, peel and slice.

Heat 1 teaspoon oil in a 10-inch non-stick ovenproof skillet over medium heat. Add onion and scallions; cook, stirring occasionally, until the onions begin to soften, about 5 to 6 minutes.

Add the potatoes to the skillet, spreading them gently to cover the bottom of the pan. Add remaining 1 teaspoon oil. Toss briefly and saute on medium heat for 3 to 5 minutes, or until they are lightly browned and crisp. Scatter the smoked fish over the potatoes.

Preheat the broiler and place the rack so that the top of the skillet will be about 1 inch from the flame.

Meanwhile, in a mixing bowl, whisk together eggs, egg whites, milk, salt and pepper. Reduce the heat to low. Carefully pour the egg mixture over the potatoes and fish, covering them evenly. Cover the pan and cook until the egg mixture has set around the edges but the center is still fairly liquid, usually 6 to 10 minutes. (Adjust the heat if necessary; the mixture should sizzle gently but steadily as the egg cooks.)

Place the skillet under the preheated broiler and cook just until the surface is lightly golden, about 1 to 2 minutes. Watch carefully to prevent overcooking, or the egg mixture will toughen. Cut the frittata into 6 wedges and serve hot or warm, passing the pepper mill at the table. Makes 6 servings.

(Recipe from: Eating Well magazine)

TOASTED CORNMEAL-APPLE MUFFIN WEDGES

1½ cups unbleached all-purpose flour
¾ cup light brown sugar
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup non-fat or low-fat yogurt
¼ cup low-fat milk
2 large eggs plus 1 egg white
2 tablespoons vegetable oil plus extra for greasing pan
2 large apples, peeled, cored and cut into chunks
½ cup currants or raisins
1¼ teaspoons cinnamon
Pinch nutmeg

Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Lightly oil a 9-inch round cake pan; set aside. Place dry ingredients in a large mixing bowl and whisk to combine. In a small bowl, combine yogurt and milk. Whisk in eggs, egg white and oil and set aside.

Toss apples with currants or raisins, cinnamon and nutmeg. Add to the dry ingredients and toss to coat the fruit. Make a well in the center of the mixture and pour in the yogurt mixture all at once. With a rubber spatula, mix until moistened but still lumpy; do not overmix. Scrape into the cake pan and spread gently out to the edges, leaving the top lumpy.

Bake in a 375-degree F oven until the cake is golden brown and a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean, about 40 to 45 minutes. Cool in the pan on a rack.

Using a serrated knife, cut the cake into 6 large wedges. Split each wedge in half horizontally. Toast in a toaster oven or under a preheated broiler, cut side up. Serve hot. Makes 6 servings.

Note: The cake can be stored, wrapped in plastic, at room temperature for up to 24 hours or in the freezer for up to one month.

DEAR ABBY

Angry man wants ex-wife's lovers to know family's pain

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: After 20 years of what started out as a perfect marriage, my wife and I were divorced several years ago. The reason: My wife's rather open adulterous relationships — there were five of them that I know about. The final blow was our teenage daughter walking in on her mother and lover in our bed.

My ex has remarried and lives a thousand miles away. While the divorce was painful for me, fortunately my own life is about back to normal. However, the men involved are walking around unbruised from their part in the destruction of our marriage.

Although my religion teaches to forgive trespasses against us, I'm still torn up over it all and feel that in order to achieve complete recovery, I should write all five men a letter (signed, of course) and let them know what their part in the affairs did to me and my children. What do you think, Abby? Sign me ... SEETHING

DEAR SEETHING: I wholeheartedly agree that expressing your feelings of anger and hostility is necessary to achieve complete recovery. And while you're in a letter-writing mood, it wouldn't hurt to write a similar letter to your ex-wife.

But now that your life is "about back to normal," the wisest way to achieve complete recovery might be to destroy the letters — unless you can also say "I forgive you," in which case you may qualify for sainthood.

DEAR ABBY: I retired at the age of 62, and at that time, I budgeted my pensions and Social Security. After taking a little out for miscellaneous expenses, I divided what was left between me and my wife right down the middle.

Five years later, when my wife of 55 years applied for her Social Security, she decided that it was all "hers."

I don't want to go into details because it would make this letter too long, but to my way of thinking, my wife's Social Security should have been thrown into the common pot.

I think my wife is being selfish. What do you think? It will probably not make any difference to my wife if you agree with me, but I would like to know for my own satisfaction because I have always respected your advice. — BROWNBEATEN IN POMPANO BEACH

DEAR BROWNBEATEN: After 55 years of togetherness, I think you are being more than fair to your wife. And yes, I agree with you — your wife is selfish. (I hope this letter doesn't start World War III at your house.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO SALLY McC. IN DETROIT: The best advice I can give you is in my booklet titled "How to Have a Lovely Wedding":

"See your doctor (preferably a gynecologist) for a physical check-up and authoritative answers to all your questions before marriage."

"If birth control is desired, it should be planned BEFORE the wedding. This includes Catholic girls, too, as the rhythm method should be clearly understood to be successfully practiced. (Too many young wives, who had planned on working for a few years, discover to their horror that they got pregnant on their honeymoon.)"

"Many couples experience shock and grief on learning that they are unable to consummate the marriage due to some slight physical abnormality that could have been easily corrected by minor surgery."

"Motherly advice from Aunt Liz or 'tips' from one of the girls is fine, but before a bride keeps her date with the preacher, she should keep one with her doctor."

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Impasse in negotiations leads to national rail strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Last-ditch contract talks between freight railroads and their unions broke up Tuesday evening, clearing the way for a coast-to-coast strike after midnight that could strand rail passengers and stop the flow of one-third of the nation's goods.

"I assume there was just no reason to go on," Jim Reiter, a spokesman for the Association of American Railroads, said about three hours before a federally imposed "cooling off" period was set to expire at midnight, EDT.

The nation's 235,000 freight workers had vowed to go on strike early Wednesday if a settlement was not reached by the midnight deadline. Union officials declined to immediately comment on the early breakdown of talks, but earlier they said a strike was set for 7 a.m. Wednesday, local time.

As the hours wound toward the deadline, Larry McFather, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said "we feel we have no choice" but to strike. "We'll probably shut the whole system down," said William Fairchild of the Transportation Communication Workers' carmen's division.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the Bush administration was prepared to work with Congress on speedy legislation "to impose a settlement and end the strike."

House Speaker Thomas Foley said there would be no action before a strike began. But congressional leaders, meeting behind closed doors, said that if a walkout occurred, they would hurry legislation to resolve the dispute.

"My feeling is that, given the nature of the economy, it is important to act in a timely fashion," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the Senate Education and Labor Committee.

A House panel had already scheduled a hearing for early Wednesday, with both labor, management and Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner set to testify on the impasse.

At issue is a three-year-old dispute over wages, work rules and health care costs.

Unions contend the railroads have not offered high enough pay increases to make up for wage freezes of the past. Management argues that railroad workers' salaries are already higher than most other industrial employees.

Work rules determining crew sizes and miles traveled in an 8-hour shift are other stumbling blocks. In addition, management wants workers to start paying part of their health care premiums.

Three of the 11 unions involved had reached tentative settlements, but all 235,000 freight employees were expected to honor picket lines, even if more agreements were reached and just one union wanted to strike over the impasse.

Bargainers met virtually around-the-clock on Monday and continued marathon sessions on Tuesday. The United Transportation Union, which represents 70,000 conductors, brakemen and firemen and had not talked to management in weeks, was back at the table for the final hours.

Unions had two strike options — targeting all carriers simultaneously or beginning selective strikes in which workers would try to shut down one carrier in one region of the country on a specific day and another the next.

A four-day rail strike in 1982 effectively shut down the nation's rail system and stalled passenger trains around the country. At the time, officials estimated the walk-out cost the U.S. economy up to $1 billion a day.

"We've got a very, very precarious economy that's just on its way coming back. We cannot afford to have that recovery interrupted by an unnecessary strike," Skinner said Tuesday.

McFather said a strike would be designed to bring the carriers back to the bargaining table.

If a nationwide strike occurred, it was expected to immediately choke the flow of one-third of the nation's goods and idle as many as 550,000 other American workers who depend on train-delivered goods to complete their jobs.

Chrysler Corp. said in a statement, "Obviously, a rail strike of any length could result in massive closings. Our industry is already facing tough times, and this would be another blow which would slow our recovery."

Production and employment levels in auto, paper, lumber, steel, coal mining, glass production, plastics and chemical industries were expected to be hardest hit, administration officials said.

Thousands of train-riding commuters and Amtrak passengers could be stranded, too. Though the unions involved work on freight lines, most Amtrak trains, and many commuter trains such as those in the Chicago area, share tracks with freight lines and therefore service would be disrupted.

A key issue in the negotiations is how closely railroad workers' contracts should mirror a presidential emergency board's report issued in January. That study recommended yearly pay boosts for workers, but also said they should start paying part of their health cost premiums.

The two sides disagree on what figures to use when discussing wages. Management contends rail workers receive an average total compensation package worth about $56,000 a year and says that's far out of line with other industrial workers. The union says a typical rail worker makes between $30,000 and $40,000 a year.

Award-winning film director Sir David Lean dies at age 83

LONDON (AP) — Sir David Lean, the Academy Award-winning director of "Lawrence of Arabia" and "Bridge on the River Kwai," died Tuesday with one last epic production beyond his reach.

Lean, 83, fell ill in January after announcing a date for the filming of "Nostromo," based on Joseph Conrad's novel. The project absorbed his final years.

"When you get over 80 the pressures are worse than they ever were," Lean said in an interview with The Associated Press last year.

He died Tuesday at his home in London, said his attorney, Tony Reeves. The cause of death was not immediately made public.

"He wasn't a man to rest on his laurels," said Christopher Hampton, who wrote half a dozen versions of "Nostromo" that fell short of Lean's exacting standards.

"He worked right up to the end, didn't he, and what an achievement that was," said Dame Peggy Ashcroft, who won an Oscar in Lean's "A Passage to India" and remembered the director as "an absolute perfectionist."

"He was Britain's master filmmaker, no question about it," said actor-director Sir Richard Attenborough, who made his first film performance in "In Which We Serve," which Lean co-directed with Noel Coward.

Lean was born March 25, 1908 in Croydon, south of London, and got into the movie business in 1928 at Gaumont studios.

He displayed an aptitude for editing, and was put in charge of Gaumont Sound News, for which he also wrote scripts and provided narration.

Lean edited Gabriel Pascal's production of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" in 1938, and Shaw's "Major Barbara" three years later.

In 1942, his reputation as a technician led to his partnership with Coward directing "In Which We Serve," an award-winning drama of the Royal Navy in World War II.

Coward was so pleased that he gave Lean permission to film his plays. "This Happy Breed" was filmed in 1944, followed a year later by "Blithe Spirit" and "Brief Encounter."

Lean's film of Charles Dickens' "Great Expectations," released in 1946, won three Academy Awards, plus Lean's first nomination as best director.

"The Bridge on the River Kwai" in 1957 was Lean's first great success. The film won seven Academy Awards, including best director.

"Lawrence of Arabia," in 1962, won seven Oscars, including best director, and made Peter O'Toole a film star. But his greatest commercial success came three years later with "Dr. Zhivago," based on Boris Pasternak's novel.

Accountants expect Congress to enact tax simplification law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The experts offered hope Tuesday to the 100 million-plus couples and individuals who recently filed their 1990 tax returns: Some simplification may be on the way.

But don't expect miracles. "I don't know anyone who thinks we will ever have a simple tax system," lawyer-accountant Robert M. Brown told a news conference. "The goal is to make it simpler."

"The burden (of complexity) on the taxpayers of this country is too much," said Michael Murphy, deputy commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service. "There are tremendous opportunities to improve on the system."

Brown and other officials of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants who spoke at a briefing on simplification said they have sensed increasing support in Congress to make a serious effort to reducing complexity.

"The (House) Ways and Means Committee is likely to propose tax simplification legislation this year," said Leonard Podolin, who heads the accountants' tax executive committee.

How complex is the system? Podolin cited estimates that individuals spent 3 billion hours working on their tax returns in 1989 — a 50 percent increase since 1982. The number of taxpayers rose by less than 15 percent during the same period.

David J. Kautter, the accounting group's chief authority on employee benefits, said pension tax laws have undergone eight major changes in the last nine years. That area of tax law is so complicated, he said, that "the rules are diverting money to plan administration and away from benefits."

"Even the smartest professionals don't understand some of the rules that come out," Brown said. He cited the earned-income credit, a provision designed solely to benefit low-income working families with children, as one of the most complex areas of tax law.

"It has 12 subsections with all kinds of definitions," said Brown, a former Treasury Department lawyer. "One provision in there I had to read five times before I understood what they meant."

Murphy, a career IRS official, said half of all taxpayers now feel it necessary to pay a professional to fill out their tax returns.

DOES YOUR TEACHER DESERVE AN "A"?

Teacher Appreciation Week is the perfect time to tell your teacher he or she deserves an "A" grade. Your teacher's "A" grade printed in The Midland Reporter-Telegram is the perfect way to let them know how much you appreciate him or her!

All entries will be printed on a special page honoring the grade "A" teachers on Sunday, May 5.

The teacher receiving the most "A's" will receive a dozen red roses and a complimentary dinner for two. In case of a tie, we will conduct a drawing.

The cost $1
is only per entry

To give your "A" grade, complete the form below, using 15 words or less to tell why your teacher deserves an "A". Mail or bring your entry to The Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Department by 4 p.m. Friday, April 26, and include your $1 per entry.

Drive Down the Cost of Buying and Owning a Car!

Emergency road and towing service, trip routing, and many more auto club benefits.

Vehicle fleet pricing program: Buy new domestic cars and light-duty trucks from a participating dealer for not more than $50 over factory invoice.

Free estimates on Ford, GM and Chrysler extended service contracts. Join One of the Most Comprehensive Auto Clubs on the Market Today!

Subject to availability, vehicle price prohibited. Dealer's net cost for the vehicle may be less than the factory invoice price due to special factory incentives or promotions. The Maaco Painting Plan does not sell, lease or finance vehicles. You need to see a participating dealer to make arrangements to purchase or lease a vehicle. The Maaco Painting Plan is not intended to persuade, induce, or attempt to induce, influence, or aid any member's purchase or financing of a vehicle from any dealer.
