Lawmakers' assets

WASHINGTON — Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, whose district includes part of Midland, is easily the wealthiest lawmaker in Bexar County's three-member U.S. House delegation, according to 1991 financial statements released Thursday. Smith listed assets ranging in value between $518,006 and $1,096,000, with the largest asset by far the congressman's mineral interests in the family ranch in Premont. San Antonio Democrat Albert Bustamante, who also represents part of Midland, released his 1991 financial statement on Wednesday and earned between $137,708 and $158,100 last year.

'Juris impudence'

CHICAGO — The halls of justice echo with juris impudence, says a federal court panel that prescribes civility training for older attorneys and a pledge of good conduct for new members of the bar. But one prominent lawyer says the prescription is futile, "like going out in the jungle and teaching orangutans to use a knife and fork." The report for the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said rudeness is especially troublesome before trials begin, when attorneys engage in "Rambo-style" discovery efforts to determine just what the other side knows.

Rap riles police

ARLINGTON — Police officers from 20 jurisdictions across Texas denounce rap star Ice-T's song "Cop Killer" and have organized a plan to try and get the record off the market. The officers met Thursday and decided to direct their protest toward the owner of the record company, Time Warner. Earlier this week, the Combined Law Enforcement Association of Texas, opted to make Six Flags Over Texas, a Time Warner affiliate since December, its focus for protests.

House narrowly rejects balanced-budget plan

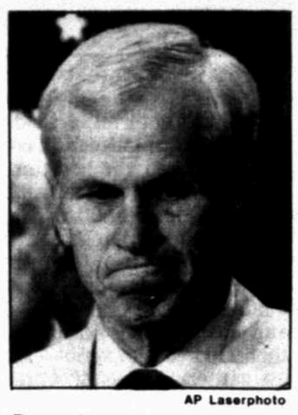

By Jackie Koszczuk
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Texas boll weevils suffered a humbling blow Thursday when the House failed to pass a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, an idea that seemed unstoppable just a few weeks ago.

The House voted 279-153 in favor of the measure, falling nine votes short of the two-thirds majority required for passage of a constitutional amendment.

An intense campaign by the Democratic leadership in the House over the last two weeks was credited with defeating the amendment. Several legis-

Phoenix police kill gunman after city office shooting

PHOENIX (AP) — A man wearing a bulletproof vest and armed with a .45 caliber pistol opened fire in a city office building Thursday, killing one employee and wounding two others before police shot him dead.

The gunman walked into the sixth-floor office, which houses the city's personnel and computer departments, and asked for some information, said police Detective Leo Speliopoulos. When he was turned down because of confidentiality regulations he began firing at people indiscriminately, police said.

He was killed as he turned toward two officers in shorts and polo shirts who were on bicycle patrol in the area and were the first to arrive at the office. The vest stopped at least three bullets, said fire Capt. Erik Hoyer, a witness.

Shots, tear gas disrupt Bush stop

■ Surrounded by Secret Service agents, dabbing tears from their eyes, the president, Barbara make hasty exit from rally.

N.Y. Times News Service

PANAMA — President Bush's journey to Brazil and the Earth Summit took a harrowing turn in Panama on Thursday as gunshots and tear gas were fired at a nearby protest, forcing Bush to make a hasty exit before he could speak at a rally.

Bush and his wife, Barbara, were not injured in the incident, which occurred at midafternoon in downtown Panama City. The gunfire and the tear gas, which drifted into a crowd of more than 15,000 Panamanians who had gathered to hear Bush, created a panic that briefly threatened to envelop the platform on which the president sat.

Surrounded by Secret Service agents and dabbing tears from their eyes, Bush and his wife walked to their motorcade and sped away, abandoning a rally that was to have recalled the glories of the U.S. invasion of Panama in 1989.

The authorities later said that the gunshots had been warning shots fired by police to dispel protesters, but that could not be confirmed.

Perhaps a score of Bush's Secret Service agents could be seen with their guns and rifles drawn during the incident, but officials later said that their guns were

New initiative may take heat off U.S. in Rio

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The United States on Thursday announced a $1.4 billion fund to monitor climate change and a plan to assess the world's plant and animal species. Both initiatives appeared designed to blunt severe criticism of the United States at the Earth Summit.

EARTH SUMMIT '92

William Reilly, the chief U.S. delegate and head of the Environmental Protection Agency, said the United States will move quickly to ratify a treaty to curb global warming.

He called the treaty "one of the main achievements" of the summit — even though the United States was responsible for weakening the pact.

He announced a plan to immediately begin collecting information on the world's plant and animal species, although the United States remains steadfastly opposed to signing

Perot provides glimpses of how he would govern

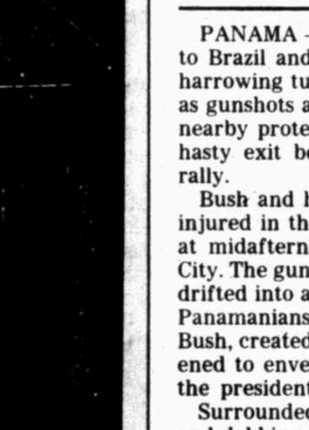

By Steven A. Holmes
N.Y. Times News Service

Ross Perot, whose position on raising taxes has shifted in recent years, said Thursday that, as president, he would "absolutely not" raise taxes, except in the case of "an incredible emergency."

Perot went on to pledge not to raise taxes in any event without some form of advance "clearance" from the American people.

At the same time that he promised to hold the line on taxes, Perot also said during a two-hour television appearance that while he opposed the balanced budget amendment defeated Thursday in the House of Representatives, he

Direct-mail search yields few clues of missing teen

The nationwide direct-mail campaign describing missing Midland teen-ager Elizabeth Henry has resulted in a deluge of tips to the National Center for Exploited Children but little solid evidence that might help solve the case, Midland police Sgt. John Ingram said Thursday.

"We've had calls reporting sightings all over the country — from California to Washington, D.C., to Montana to Florida," Ingram said. "We'll just have to go through each one of them at a time and check each one out."

Ms. Henry's photograph was mailed out last week to three million Texas homes and 52 million across the nation.

State validates Fuller's view on watered-down courses

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Just days after school-board trustee James Fuller decried the ability of basic courses to prepare students for the real world, the state validated his assertion.

At Tuesday's school-board meeting, following a reading demonstration by kindergarteners, Fuller applauded the motivation demonstrated by pupils in the primary grades. "If students are bright and motivated in kindergarten through third grade, we need to make sure we continue to challenge them," he said.

Fuller also asked if basic courses — which are designed to remediate students lacking basic skills — "shelter students."

The state says they do, and a State Board of Education committee voted Thursday to prevent four courses from being used for high school credit in the 1992-'93 school year.

Under the proposal approved by the SBOE committee, school districts can't offer Correlated Language Arts (CLA) I, Fundamentals of Mathematics, Consumer Mathematics or Introductory Physical Science for credit beginning next year.

Students who have already earned credits in these courses will not lose them.

The full state board is scheduled to consider the change today for below-level English, mathematics and science courses, which Texas Education Agency spokesman Joey Lozano said have been used for students having difficulty with traditional courses.

Putting weaker students into regular classes, rather than keeping them in below-level courses, will tend to improve their performance "by providing them with models of expert behavior," said Stephenie Yearwood of the Texas Council of Teachers of English, which supports the change.

But she cautioned board members that to succeed, the move must be tied to staff development and availability of appropriate textbooks.

"It is a fallacy to expect that simply putting weaker students in an average classroom will automatically produce improved student achievement; it is just as likely to produce frustrated dropouts," Ms. Yearwood told the Committee on Students.

Maridell Fryar, executive director of instructional services for Midland Independent School District, agreed.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Severe weather skirts city

Staff report

Severe weather struck much of West Texas Thursday night but skirted Midland by late Thursday.

A tornado touched down in a field three miles south of Lenorah in Martin County at 8:20 p.m. and Lamesa reported baseball-sized hail around the same time, according to the National Weather Service.

Two main storm "cells" generated most of the severe storm activity but both had weakened as the passed southeast of Midland by 10 p.m.

"The two cells brought funnel clouds all the way through but is moving by us," an NWS observer said.

Borden County reported golf ball-sized hail at 10 p.m. and tornado and severe thunderstorm warnings were issued throughout the evening to several surrounding counties including Glasscock, Dawson, Martin and Borden.

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms with a high in the mid-90s and southeast wind at five to 15 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low in the mid-60s.

Saturday's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with isolated thunderstorms and a high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 63, Thursday's high reached 91 compared with the record high for that date of 104 set in 1959. The record low for that date is 55 set in 1979.

STATE

Funnel clouds touched down in northwest Hale County near Abernathy knocking out power lines across the area Thursday night.

"There were about four tornadoes," said Hale County Deputy Sheriff Monty Phipps.

Phipps said he expected extensive damage from the storms' winds, although he had no details except area-wide power outages. No injuries were reported, Phipps said.

Most of Texas was partly cloudy and warm Thursday, but afternoon thunderstorms deluged parts of South Texas and the Panhandle.

Flooding warnings were issued for Amarillo and San Antonio and a tornado also touched down west of Canyon in the Panhandle. No damage was reported from the twister, the Randall County Sheriff's Department said.

Twenty to 30 mph winds were reported near West Amarillo, but no injuries or damages were immediately reported, according to Potter County Officer Larry Wallis.

Temperatures climbed into the 80s and 90s and winds were northerly at 5 to 15 miles an hour.

The forecast for South Texas was partly cloudy to mostly cloudy skies through Saturday. Scattered afternoon and evening showers or thunderstorms were expected over Southeast Texas today and over all of the north by Saturday. Highs were to be in the 90s except for upper 80s along the coast. Lows were to be in the 70s except for upper 60s in the Hill Country.

The North Texas forecast was for partly cloudy skies through Saturday with scattered mainly afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Highs today and Saturday were to be 85 to 92. Lows tonight were expected to be 63 to 70.

Forecasters said West Texas would have mostly fair nights and mornings with partly cloudy afternoons and evenings through Saturday. Isolated to widely scattered mainly late afternoon and evening thunderstorms were expected each day. Highs today and Saturday were to range from the lower 80s in the north and mountains to mostly 90s elsewhere except around 104 in the Big Bend river valleys. Lows tonight were to range from the upper 50s in the north and mountains to 60s elsewhere.

BUSH: Shots disrupt president's pre-summit stop not used. There were no reports that anyone was hit by the gunfire.

Neither of the Bushes appeared to be more than mildly affected by the tear gas. But the incident was a rocky beginning to Bush's three-day trip to Brazil and a clear source of frustration among White House aides, who had planned to use the Panama stop to remind Americans at home of an administration success story.

Before leaving Panama for Rio, Bush told American military personnel and Panamanian onlookers at Albrook Air Base that the incident was "a little ripple" on an otherwise successful visit.

"No tiny little left-wing demonstration is going to set your democracy back," he told the cheering Panamanians in the crowd.

Even before the president's arrival, the atmosphere in Panama had been soured by violent demonstrations to protest the visit. An attack by gunmen Wednesday on a military vehicle outside the capital left a U.S. soldier dead and another wounded.

Anti-American feelings in Panama are still high among those resenting the killings and destruction associated with the American invasion in 1989 that ousted Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega from power.

The rally for Bush on Thursday was planned for the area in and around Plaza Porras, a city square where some Panamanians gathered to cheer the president.

The crowd had just finished serenading him with "Happy Birthday" in honor of his 68th birthday today when loud noises erupted and clouds of tear gas wafted in.

Secret Service agents surrounded Bush, and soon hurried him away, along with President Guillermo Endara of Panama, who was also at the speaker's platform.

The chief of the Secret Service detail accompanying Bush, John McGaw, said later that agents had begun moving to evacuate the president from the plaza after Panamanian authorities were seen drawing their weapons at a location he did not identify.

"There was no indication of our agents firing," he said. "There was some local authority gunfire and other gunfire we have not identified."

After the rally, Bush's physician, Dr. Burton Lee, said that the president was "OK, absolutely fine." But he said Bush, whose eyes appeared to be red and swollen during the incident, had suffered minor ill effects from the tear gas.

SUMMIT: U.S. announces $1.4 billion fund, plan a treaty to protect biological diversity.

"We are entering a field of action and commitment, a period that will test whether the promises of this conference will in fact be realized," he said. Meanwhile, world leaders began arriving Thursday in Rio to culminate work on documents that will guide nations on how to protect and clean up their resources. More than 110 heads of state — the largest gathering ever of world leaders — are expected for the summit's closing on Sunday.

Premier Li Peng of China arrived Thursday, along with leaders from Turkey, Estonia, Guatemala and Cape Verde. President Bush was scheduled to arrive late Thursday and to speak before the assembly today.

U.S. delegation sources said Bush may announce a new scientific initiative to assess the world's plant and animal species, but it was not clear if that would be a separate initiative from the one Reilly announced.

More than 35,000 troops and police were called out to protect the leaders. On Thursday, soldiers armed with automatic weapons stood guard, and helicopters whirred overhead as security measures were tightened.

Two key summit documents — a blueprint for environmental protection called Agenda 21, and a statement of principles on forestry — remain unfinished, with funding and other issues still outstanding.

But a Rio Declaration on environmental rights and responsibilities was completed Thursday after Israel dropped its objection to language referring to the rights of people living under occupation — on the condition that the clause not be included Agenda 21.

Treaties to protect plant and animal species and to curb global warming have been open for signing since last week. The United States has been broadly criticized for opposing the so-called biodiversity treaty and weakening the climate control pact.

On Thursday, an invited group of 30 students from several nations criticized the United States in a summit address. But the television broadcast of their remarks, translated into Spanish, was cut.

VOTE: House fails to pass budget amendment

lators who orginally were co-sponsors of the bill voted against it Thursday.

"A number of people we were counting on buckled," said Rep. Jim Moody, D-Wis., an amendment supporter. "Their knees were shaking. They knew what the right thing to do was, but they could not quite bring themselves to do it."

The vote was a big disappointment for conservative Democrats from Texas, who were instrumental in forcing the amendment to the top of Congress' agenda this spring.

"I think we fought as good a fight as we could possibly fight," said chief sponsor Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, longtime leader of the congressional boll weevils, as the conservative Democrats are called.

Stenholm joined with a band of junior House members, including Rep. Pete Geren, D-Texas, and Rep. Chet Edwards, D-Texas, in an effort to force the federal government to balance its books with a constitutional amendment requiring agreement by a three-fifths majority of both houses of Congress for the government to run a deficit.

Stenholm's measure would have required the president and Congress each year to agree on a set level of spending that could not exceed tax revenues.

When they introduced the bill earlier this spring, the House was embroiled in the check-kiting scandal and many legislators, already in trouble with their constituents, were afraid to oppose it. It was widely believed the amendment would pass both the House and Senate and be sent to the states for ratification as the 28th amendment to the Constitution.

"There was tremendous pressure from the leadership. That's what did it," Geren said Thursday.

He said that a major obstacle was the unusually large number of seats that are expected to open up on two powerful committees after the November general election — the Appropriations and the Ways and Means committees. The turnover has taken place as incumbents across the country have lost their seats in primary elections and through redistricting, or have resigned from Congress as a result of the House bank scandal.

Many politically safe incumbents were seeking commitments from House leaders for appointments to the two career-enhancing committees at the same time the leadership was asking them to oppose the amendment.

"There are so many seats opening up, and there is so much angling for them going on," Geren said. "I think that played a big role."

Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-Texas, was among the legislators who co-sponsored the bill but voted against it Thursday. He said pressure from House leaders had nothing to do with his decision, and that he switched his support after the bill was changed so that the amendment would not become effective until 1998.

SHOOTING: Gunman opens fire in office building

(From 1A)

Speliopoulos said he was killed by shots to the head when it appeared he was going to fire on the officers.

"It appears he doesn't know anyone in this office and it appears as though the shooting was indiscriminate," the detective said.

The 36-year-old gunman's name was not immediately released.

The woman he killed was identified as Anne Moerder, 56, a city employee, who died of multiple gunshot wounds.

City employees Paula Carroll, 43, and Lora Cash, 35, were listed in serious but stable condition after undergoing surgery for multiple gunshot wounds. A witness to the shootings, Mary Pardue, was treated at a hospital for stress and released. Pardue, 42, also is a city employee.

It wasn't immediately known who the gunman was trying to gather information on, but he apparently had never worked for the city, Speliopoulos said.

The man, dressed in slacks, wore the bulletproof vest under a sports jacket, police said. They refused to say if the gun was concealed as he walked into the office or how many shots he fired before he was killed.

The sixth-story building was closed to reporters after the shooting as counselors met with many of the 80 people who work there.

"Everyone in the building's traumatized," said Steve Jensen, a Fire Department spokesman.

The shooting was the fourth such violent outbreak in the Phoenix area in the past three months.

On March 15, a gunman killed a convenience store clerk and three residents of a mobile home park. Peter Rogovich, described by authorities as troubled and a drinker, is awaiting trial on murder charges.

On April 16, Richard Griffin, 33, allegedly shot his wife and a friend to death, then went to the Phoenix department store where he worked and held a woman manager hostage for four hours before surrendering to police.

EDUCATION: State votes to ax easy courses

(From 1A)

She said eliminating some basic courses "is reflective of the growing body of research across the nation which shows putting low performing students in isolation does not give them motivation, self-esteem or the belief that they can learn."

Ms. Fryar also said that, over time, teachers lower their expectations of students in lower-level courses.

"The classes started out focusing on the needs of students to accelerate their learning and has had an opposite effect," she said. "Educators believe you should not have those kinds of classes, but teachers will need to tutor some students and give them individual attention or they will fail. Just putting them into a class with students of different (ability) levels is not magic."

Ms. Fryar said Texas school districts were mandated by the state in the early 1980s to offer basic classes.

"Philosophically, the creation of these basic tier classes was contrary to the thinking of most (MISD) members of the division of instruction and of the teachers," she said.

The director of instruction said Midland ISD had "modified" courses similar to basic classes in the late 1950s and early 1960s.

"Teachers and educators prevailed upon administrators to do away with them," she said, noting that the district had an honors or gifted tier and a general tier. The state then created basic courses (giving the district three tiers or ability levels) and parent pressure created advanced courses (a level between general and gifted levels).

Ms. Fryar said students who are struggling with basic skills will also need parental support to succeed in school. "The school only has that child six hours a day. It's not enough. They will need to have support at home, too."

Thousands of students statewide took basic courses last year, according to the TEA.

The number of students enrolled in each of the nine courses statewide ranged from about 40,000 to about 130,000 in 1990-'91, the last year for which figures are available, according to Lozano. That's out of total enrollment in grades nine through 12 of 871,051.

TEA spokesman Lozano said that in 1990-'91, there were 51,173 students enrolled in CLA I; 46,753 in Fundamentals of Math; 45,584 in Consumer Math; and 40,528 in Introductory Physical Science.

Under the SBOE committee plan Correlated Language Arts II-IV and Applied Biology courses could not be offered for credit after the 1992-93 school year. After the 1995-96 school year, school districts could not offer Pre-Algebra for credit.

The State Board of Education discussed raising performance standards for students in May, when they also were told that 8,138 seniors — after four tries — had failed a new, more challenging skills test required for graduation. That's 4.7 percent of the 174,871 students who originally took the test as juniors.

Board members and others expressed concern that students' courses had not prepared them for the test.

SEARCH: Direct-mail appeal yields tips, but little evidence

United States, have attracted numerous letters about her possible whereabouts as well, Ingram said.

"It's going to be a time-consuming process because we have to contact the agencies from all of these towns and see if they'll follow up on the tips," Ingram said.

Ms. Henry was 17 when she disappeared on the afternoon of Aug. 19, 1991. A police dispatcher received an emergency call from her home shortly after 2 p.m. that day. She said she needed help, screamed and the phone line went dead, police said.

Police found no signs of a struggle at the home.

Her vehicle, a 1987 Ford Bronco II, was found the next day parked and locked at Midland International Airport.

More than 200 people, including classmates and close friends, were interviewed in the weeks after her disappearance.

would favor laws that outlaw deficit spending and require a balanced budget.

Perot said it would be possible both to cut taxes and reduce the deficit — a goal that eluded President Ronald Reagan — by forming a national "consensus" about targeting waste and cutting spending.

"Then we'll work our way down to where the big money is," he said, "and there is a huge amount of waste in the way the system works now."

With his broad-brush proposals on taxes and a wide range of economic and social issues on the NBC "Today" show, Perot provided the most far-reaching plan to date for how he would govern as president.

But he offered no clues on what his ideas would cost, how much they might save or how he would secure congressional approval of them.

Those proposals, ranging from continued support for legal abortion to the prevention of foreclosure on the farm mortgages of Persian Gulf veterans, amounted to a prescription for radical changes in how the government operates.

The undeclared presidential candidate followed his usual practice of omitting details about budget and tax proposals or how he would draft legislation. Instead, he offered the kind of sweeping overview normally associated with party platforms.

But taken together, the outline sketched by the Texas businessman showed that he is proposing a heterogenous mix of Democratic and Republican proposals that would inject the federal government into the center of managing the economy and the practices of American business.

On social policy, Perot would depart strikingly from current Republican policy on abortion, which he said must be "a woman's choice."

On guns, he repeated his usual opposition to gun control measures. "But I will go day and night to get the guns out of the hands of violent people," he said, again adding that he would "build a consensus" on how to do this.

On the economic side, Perot called for something akin to the Democratic proposal for an industrial policy that would provide freer credit and tax breaks for small businesses and involve the government in long-range planning with major corporations.

Perot saved his sharpest partisan shots for President Bush and the Republicans. He said he would outlaw lobbying for foreign governments by former government officials, contending that the Bush campaign was rife with such lobbyists.

He also accused Bush of encouraging the growth of Iraqi military power and then hiding the details of American relations with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein under a false cloak of national security.

The attacks on Bush drew a sharp retort from the Bush campaign, whose spokeswoman zeroed in on Perot's lack of detail and his changing tax position.

Torie Clarke, press secretary for the Bush campaign, said of Perot: "The guy is full of ambiguities and hypocricies and delusionary tactics. He's trying to make people believe things are happening that are just not true.

"The stuff about farmers being pulled off their farms because of the war and losing their farms when they got back, that's just not true. They're apocryphal anecdotes.

"A couple of years ago, he was saying tax increases are the only way to go. Now you can't tell where he is. He's against the balanced budget amendment, but 70 percent of the people in this county are for it."

Ms. Clarke charged that there were "no specifics" in what Perot has to say.

"It's very hard to react to Ross Perot because you can't figure out where he is on anything," she said. "Let's have Ross Perot deliver a budget like the president's, of comparable size, with comparable specifics and then we'll talk. Let's see if he has any clue how to run this country and address the tough issues."

In 1987, Perot wrote in an op-ed article for The Washington Post: "We must cut spending and raise taxes to pay our bills. We all know it."

Thursday, he said he would only support a tax increase during wartime. "You've got to stop raising taxes," he said. "You've got to bring discipline. So, unless there's some kind of incredible emergency that I can't envision, absolutely not."

Perot also said that as president he would end the "gridlock" with Congress. He said he would "get rid of" political action committees of the kind he and his employees have supported with large contributions dating back to the Nixon administration. He linked such reforms to controlling spending.

Aides to Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, who appeared on the "Today" show on Tuesday, said the Democrat was working Thursday morning and did not see Perot. But these staff members said the Dallas businessman's lack of specificity showed the weakness of his candidacy.

"He's Ronald Reagan without the substance," said Paul Begala, a senior strategist for Clinton. "There's just no there there."

Perot has made many of these same policy recomendations in other forums. But in sitting down for two hours and answering questions from viewers and from the co-host of "Today," Katherine Couric, Perot gave what may have been his largest audience ever its most detailed look at his economic plans.

At the same time, the Texas billionaire, who at times appeared uncharacteristically nervous, verbally dodged and weaved when it came to issues in which his views seemed less well-formed or areas he deemed less important.

For instance, when a viewer from Vero Beach, Fla., asked whether his plan to save $20 billion in Social Security payments meant cutting off benefits for retirees earning more than $60,000, Perot spent several minutes rambling about the generosity of Americans, the people who fought in World War II and Korea and the preoccupation of people with their grandchildren. He even recited a few lyrics from "Tommorrow," a song from the musical "Annie."

"Are you satisfied with that answer?" Ms. Couric asked the caller after Perot finished.

"Well, he didn't really answer the question," the caller replied, forcing Perot to say that he might ask elderly people making over $60,000 to give up their benefits voluntarily.

On at least one occasion, Perot made a statement that was factually incorrect. He told Ms. Couric that as chairman of Electronic Data Systems he did not prohibit employees from wearing beards.

In 1983, however, a federal district court judge in Seattle, ordered the company to reinstate an employee who was dismissed for growing a beard in violation of company policy. The worker, Reginald Dallaire, a computer programer, grew his beard after converting to Orthodox Judaism.

U.S. troops could render aid in Bosnia

N.Y. Times News Service

The United States is prepared to send troops to help supply and safeguard humanitarian aid to Bosnia and Herzegovina but has ruled out using troops in combat, officials said Thursday.

While President Bush said "there's no commitment" on sending troops, other officials said troops might go, but only in humanitarian roles.

"We will do what we should do, but I'm not going to go into the fact of using United States troops," Bush said Thursday before leaving for Panama and Brazil. "We're not the world's policemen."

Administration officials have said in recent days that Washington was willing to assist the relief effort led by the United Nations. Statements Thursday by officials at the Pentagon and the State Department brought into sharper focus the preparations being made and the conditions under which assistance would be sent.

The Defense Department spokesman, Pete Williams, said U.S. military assistance hinged on securing a cease-fire at the airport in Sarajevo and on receiving a specific request from the United Nations.

Williams said the United States had already provided aid to other former Yugoslav republics. Two U.S. Air Force C-5 cargo planes had delivered 40 tons of food to Zagreb, the Croatian capital, on May 16 for delivery to Sarajevo. Because of the fighting, the delivery has been redirected to the area around Split, Croatia, he said.

Later this month, Williams said, 155 bulk containers of food are to be shipped to Zagreb for distribution by the Red Cross and the United Nations; the food is being sent from Rotterdam, the Netherlands, and Pisa, Italy.

Meanwhile, in what looked increasingly like a last-ditch effort to head off a major human disaster in the besieged city of Sarajevo, a U.N. negotiating team arrived here Thursday to resume efforts to open Sarajevo Airport to relief flights that would carry food, medicine and other emergency supplies to nearly 400,000 desperate people.

The almost non-stop bombardment that Serbian besiegers have directed at this city for a week halted briefly when Brig. Gen. Lewis MacKenzie, the head of the U.N. contingent in Bosnia and Herzegovina, arrived at the Presidency Building in central Sarajevo. But the cannonade resumed again after the 49-year-old Canadian officer left again for the U.N. headquarters across a vista of urban devastation three miles away.

The general is seeking to put into effect a U.N. Security Council plan to reopen Butmir Airport on Sarajevo's outskirts, closed for weeks by the battle for the city. The Security Council plan would require Serbian forces to surrender control of the airport to a 1,000-man U.N. force and to open corridors for relief convoys into the city.

After preliminary talks with the Serbian forces and with the Bosnian government this evening, MacKenzie said that he had been "very encouraged." But few Sarajevo residents seemed ready to believe that the Serbian commanders, who have been relentless in their attacks on civilian targets and in refusing to permit any non-Serbian residents to pass through roadblocks guarding all exits from the city, have finally resolved to allow relief supplies through.

"I haven't hardly food, I haven't water, I haven't electricity, I haven't gas, I haven't candles, I haven't anything," said Sakir Dzirlo, 43, an electrical engineer, despairing that relief would be coming via the airport or any other route. "What will I do?"

Dzirlo's family of five lives in the central district of Sarajevo amid a scene of appalling destruction, with every building for blocks blasted by artillery and mortar fire.

Dzirlo's skepticism was echoed among Bosnian government officials, who have spoken with anger and disbelief at what they regard as the duplicity of the Security Council resolution passed earlier this week that mandated the effort to reopen the airport.

One reason why many in Sarajevo doubt that the airport plan will help them much, even if both sides accept it, is that it does not require the Serbian forces to stop attacking the city.

As U.N. officials in Sarajevo explained it, the plan would require the Serbian forces to remove from the hillsides above the city powerful anti-aircraft guns that have been used to fire 20-millimeter incendiary shells at buildings all over the city. It would also involve the gathering of other heavy guns at centralized positions on the hills so that U.N. observers can insure that they do not fire at the airport or at the relief routes into the city. But it does not necessarily require a general cease-fire.

One U.N. official said that while the organization's negotiators hoped that the Serbians would agree to stop their attacks, it could be that the movement of relief supplies into the city would have to begin while the shelling was continuing, with efforts later to broaden the cease-fire around the airport to cover the entire city.

Last hostages to be freed, paper reports

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) — The last two Western hostages in Lebanon will be freed next week after more than three years held captive, a newspaper reported Friday.

The weekly Bild newspaper said State Secretary Bernd Schmidbauer would fly to the Middle East to escort the hostages home to Germany on Monday.

A government spokesman in Bonn, Karl-Heinz Lamberty, said the Bild report "is not correct." Lamberty said he did not want to comment further "in the interest of the hostages."

Bild reported Bernd Schmidbauer completed 60 days of negotiations to gain the release of hostages Heinrich Struebig, 50, and Thomas Kemptner, 30, who were captured in May 1989.

According to the report, Chancellor Helmut Kohl held final talks about the hostages' release with Iranian Vice President Hassan Ibrahim Habibi in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, where they are attending the Earth Summit.

Yeltsin to lift privatization barriers

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — President Boris N. Yeltsin said Thursday that he would soon issue decrees lifting some of the major barriers to privatization. But at the same time he declared he would not permit the West to dictate economic policy to Russia, even if this meant delays in Western aid.

Yeltsin made the statements in an interview four days before he leaves for a state visit to the United States in which money and arms will be the central issues.

He spoke on the eve of the first anniversary of his election as Russia's president — a day he has proclaimed a national holiday and Russian Independence Day.

The combination of a Russian's native pride and Yeltsin's yearning to bring democracy and economic freedom to his country surfaced repeatedly in an 85-minute meeting with representatives of five foreign news organizations.

Yeltsin spoke with satisfaction of his invitation to address a joint session of Congress, and he declared that his relationship with President Bush "will be at least not worse, and I believe better" than Bush had with Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the last president of the defunct Soviet Union.

He indicated that he could use the American visit to issue decrees on private ownership of property, whose blockage by the Russian Parliament has been a major obstacle to large-scale privatization of state industries.

Asked whether he was ready to use his presidential powers to override the Parliament, Yeltsin said he was, and added, "I think I will bring a surprise to the U.S."

At the same time, when asked about reports that an agreement with the International Monetary Fund over a $24-billion aid package was being delayed because of questions in Washington over the progress of economic reforms — and especially delays in freeing the price of oil — Yeltsin became curt.

"I believe an agreement will be signed, and any delay in signing is linked only to this: that we will not sign any agreement under the diktat of the IMF," he said.

The IMF package is regarded as a key element in establishing a convertible ruble and in encouraging Western investment. Yeltsin acknowledged that an agreement could open the way to large-scale investment, but he argued that Russia and its reforms were unique, and that misguided IMF proposals could prove disastrous.

"We have a Russia that the IMF does not know, and a Russian people that the IMF does not know," he said. "Therefore there is a process on this agreement. But once again, I declare that if the IMF insists that we immediately release prices on fuel, we will not agree. We know cases in the world when some countries suffered a fiasco from the recommendations of the IMF."

Yeltsin said his main concern was that farm workers would have trouble with their harvests if fuel prices rose. "I can tell you today they would not cope," he said.

"We should not think that $24 billion will save the situation in Russia," he said. "Essentially these are our concerns, our difficulties, our problems, they are for us to resolve — for the leadership, the president and the people."

But ne agreed that if Russia did receive IMF support, the reforms "would go faster, with less risk." Approval of the IMF package, he said further, would open the gates "to a powerful flow of private capital." Yeltsin also said that he expected to sign with Bush what he called a "framework agreement on principles of deeper cuts in nuclear weapons."

He said work was continuing on this document, and that final issues could be resolved when he meets with Bush on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Walesa denies secret police collaboration

By Stephen Engleberg
N.Y. Times News Service

WARSAW, Poland — His eyes blazing, his voice rising in anger, President Lech Walesa emphatically denied on Thursday that he had collaborated with the Communist secret police, and accused the recently ousted government of trying to blackmail him.

The allegation about Walesa, who founded the Solidarity movement in 1980 and has a solid anti-Communist reputation, first came to light last week when the government of Prime Minister Jan Olszewski published a list of supposed informers, including Walesa.

The president replied by engineering the fall of Olszewski and the immediate dismissal of the interior minister, who had led the hunt for Communists.

"Nobody, not even my own wife, is going to blackmail me," Walesa said at a news conference on Thursday in which his mood swung rapidly from jovial to combative.

Characteristically, Walesa chose to counterattack, directing his fire at the former interior minister, Antoni Macierewicz. He added: "I still have some aces in my sleeve, and when I show these aces, you'll be in the hospital. Hundred percent. For sure."

It was not clear precisely what Walesa was referring to, although later he alluded to the fact that many missing secret police files were still in the hands of the Russians, and could be retrieved soon. The Communist Party controlled the Interior Ministry for nearly a year after the party lost the June 1989 elections, and files were shredded and falsified by the departing secret policemen.

At his own news conference on Thursday, Olszewski denied trying to blackmail the president. He also rejected suggestions that his government had considered a coup to stay in power.

Walesa and his allies in Parliament had hoped to put to rest the potentially divisive search for hidden Communists by removing Olszewski. But newspapers friendly to Olszewski have continued to hint about dark secrets regarding Walesa and other prominent Poles.

One newspaper has suggested that the former Solidarity leader might have links to a mysterious agent named "Bolek," who was mentioned in secret police files from Gdansk, Walesa's hometown.

Walesa insisted he was not Bolek. He repeated a story, recounted in his 1989 book "The Road of Hope," about a 1970 meeting with the police in Gdansk at which he signed several documents. In the book, Walesa acknowledged that he emerged from this session not "completely clean."

Parliamentary panel OKs sending troops from Japan abroad

TOKYO (AP) — A bill to dispatch Japanese troops abroad for the first time since World War II cleared a key parliamentary panel Thursday over the shouts of opposition lawmakers.

The bill now goes to the full lower house, where the governing Liberal Democrats hold a commanding majority. The legislation has already passed the upper house. While passage now seems inevitable, opposition lawmakers said they will not retreat, leaving open the possibility that they will again use delay tactics to postpone the final vote.

"It is unforgivable to pass such an important bill in a one-sided way," Makoto Tanabe, chairman of the Socialist party, told reporters after the boisterous session of the Lower House Special Committee on International Peace Cooperation. "We will strongly protest this."

Critics say the bill violates Japan's postwar constitution, which renounces the use of force in settling international disputes.

The legislation is Japan's response to critics who faulted Tokyo for not sending troops to help oust Iraqi soldiers from Kuwait in the Persian Gulf War.

During the televised session, opposition lawmakers crowded around committee chairman Yoshiro Hayashi after he ended debate and prepared to call a vote.

They shouted and waved signs reading "Continue the Questioning," and some lawmakers pounded on desks.

Socialists and other opponents refused to sit down, then stalked out of the room after the vote.

After they left, committee members of the governing Liberal Democratic Party raised their fists in the traditional "banzai" cheer, often associated with Japanese militarism.

The prospect of a resurgence of Japanese militarism has aroused concern in Japan as well as neighboring countries that suffered under Japanese occupation before and during World War II.

In Seoul, South Korea, dissidents struck the car of the Japanese ambassador with wood placards demanding nullification of the bill. Protesters also have turned out at the Japanese embassy in Manila, the Philippines, this week.

In China, a spokesman for the Foreign Ministry urged Japan to be "prudent" in sending troops abroad, but he refused to specify what Beijing meant by this.

Japan's prime minister, Kiichi Miyazawa, has made the passage of the bill a main goal of his tenure. A smile cracked across his face after the committee passed the bill.

Deliberations have prevented Miyazawa from attending the Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro, and it is still not clear whether he will be able to go.

The only overseas deployment of Japanese troops since World War II was a mine-sweeping task force sent to the Persian Gulf last year.

The proposed legislation would allow up to 2,000 troops to go overseas on U.N. peacekeeping missions.

An editorial in the Friday edition of the independent Asahi newspaper denounced the bill's supporters for rushing it through the committee.

"In their attempt to pass this important piece of legislation after only a few days in the Lower House, we cannot help but say that the (bill's supporters) have failed to maintain the spirit of dialogue that is the basis of parliamentary politics."

The legislation passed the less powerful upper house Monday after opposition lawmakers delayed the vote for four days.

They used a filibuster-like technique called "cow-walking," in which the lawmakers inch their way to the podium to vote, sometimes taking up to 30 minutes to cover the 20-yard distance.

Muslims mark Feast of Sacrifice

MECCA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — About 2 million Muslim pilgrims prayed and slaughtered sheep at dawn Thursday to mark the start of the three-day Eid al-Adha, or Feast of Sacrifice.

Throughout the world, the estimated 1.3 billion Muslims also began the feast commemorating the Prophet Abraham's willingness to offer his son's life to God.

Elsewhere in Saudi Arabia and neighboring Persian Gulf countries, the rulers rose for dawn prayers, then stood in their palaces to receive lines of well-wishers.

Muslim leaders also exchanged greetings. Sultan Qaboos of Oman reportedly sent one to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, an outcast in the gulf since he invaded Kuwait in August 1990.

Saudi King Fahd vowed continued pursuit of the "sacred duty of serving the holy shrines and fostering the guests (pilgrims) of the merciful God."

He has dropped the title "majesty" in favor of "custodian of the two holy shrines" — Islam's holiest at Mecca and Medina.

Iraq warned Saudi Arabia not to engage in any "treacherous action" against Iraqis in Mecca, said a statement carried by official Iraqi News Agency, monitored in Cyprus. The Saudi government dismissed as "gibbering falsehoods" Baghdad's earlier claims that 10 Iraqi pilgrims had been killed during the hajj.

Two unidentified residents of the occupied Gaza Strip mourn a family member killed during clashes with Israeli forces last year. Thursday was Feast of the Sacrifice, a traditional holiday in which Muslims gather and pray for lost relatives.

Iraq warned Saudi Arabia not to engage in any 'treacherous action' against Iraqis in Mecca.

In Israel, the army ordered the release of about 70 Palestinian detainees and reopened 20 roadways in the occupied West Bank as goodwill gestures for the Muslim feast. Hundreds of roads and alleys have been sealed to try to prevent stone-throwing attacks on soldiers.

The prayers of the white-robed pilgrims or hajjis, at Mecca's Grand Mosque were relayed by Saudi television to almost all Islamic countries. The pilgrims are carrying out a requirement of their faith by coming to Mecca.

The preacher who delivered the leading sermon, Sheik Abd-el-Rahman al-Sedis, warned Muslims to guard against "the anti-Islamic concentrated intellectual and moral invasions" of other cultures.

The hajj climaxed Wednesday when the pilgrims ascended the hills of Mount Arafat overlooking Mecca for prayers.

Following the steps of the Prophet Mohammed 14 centuries ago, they descended from Arafat after sunset, collecting pebbles from a place called Muzdalifa to stone the devil, represented by three pillars in a cavern between the Mina valley and Mecca.

Many performed the Eid dawn prayers at Muzdalifa and Mina, but the majority preferred to throng the Grand Mosque for the celebration.

Under Fahd's multibillion-dollar expansion of the holy sites, the Grand Mosque can now hold 750,000 people at one time.

Pilgrims also walk around the Kaaba, Islam's holiest shrine in the courtyard of the mosque, kissing the "black stone" within as Mohammed did.

Muslims around the world must turn in the direction of the Kaaba when they perform their five daily prayers, another pillar of Islam.

Program makes dream come true

It's a tragedy when a homeowner's dwelling suffers from a lack of maintenance because the resident cannot afford to make repairs. The home can become a virtual death-trap if particular repairs are not made.

That was the danger that led to formation of Christmas in April, a volunteer housing repair project started in Midland nearly two decades ago to ensure safe housing for elderly or handicapped residents.

There's even a greater tragedy when families or individuals have no hope of ever owning their own home. That situation has existed in Midland, but on Saturday, ground was broken for yet another housing project — one that will make the dream of home ownership come true for some Midlanders. Called Habitat for Humanity International, the Christian organization's goal is to eliminate poverty housing from the world and to make decent shelter a matter of conscience and action.

Don Hellinghausen, who was instrumental in bringing the organization to Midland, called the Habitat for Humanity "one of the things that will help people to get out of shacks."

Funded by tax-deductible contributions or no-interest loans, volunteers build and rehabilitate homes with the help of homeowners. Houses are sold at no profit to partner families and no-interest mortgages are issued over a fixed period. Small monthly mortgage payments, including taxes and insurance, are repaid over an average of 20 years and deposited into a revolving "Fund for Humanity," which supports the construction of more houses. Worldwide, Habitat for Humanity has built more than 15,000 homes. That's a fine testament in terms of providing shelter for those who cannot afford it themselves.

A local board of directors, headed by Joan Love Davis, oversees the Midland Habitat program.

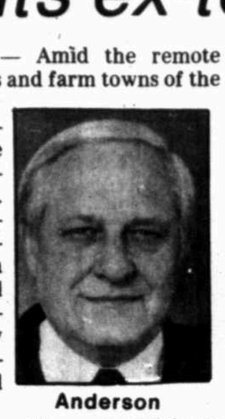

Mayor J.D. Faircloth has called Habitat for Humanity "an excellent example of people helping people."

It is that and with Midland's proud tradition of doing exactly that, Habitat for Humanity should go a long way toward making the dream of home ownership a reality for many local residents.

Race pits ex-teacher vs. ex-basketball star

WASHINGTON — Amid the remote fishing villages and farm towns of the Chesapeake Bay, one of the more intriguing races for the House of Representatives has just tipped off. It pits a former high-school teacher, itinerant house painter and a man whose personal story sounds like something akin to Grizzly Adams against a 6-foot-11 basketball star and Rhodes scholar.

Anderson

This race features Rep. Wayne T. Gilchrest R-Md., a free spirit who got into politics because he needed a job, against Tom McMillen, D-Md., a professional basketball player-turned-politician who has his eye on bigger political trophies.

If home-court advantage means anything, then Gilchrest has the edge as the one-term incumbent from Maryland's 1st District. On the other hand, McMillen enjoys a lopsided financial advantage. At the end of March, McMillen had $324,831 on hand to Gilchrest's $7,634 — 42 times as much.

Neither man is very ideological nor did either bounce a check. There are no sex scandals or sleazy allegations animating this contest. Nor is there any great "wedge" issue defining the election such as abortion or gun control.

McMillen has been his own man, refusing to tow the party line on critical issues. He backed aid to the Nicaraguan Contras and an amendment to the Constitution to ban desecration of the flag, views that will sit well with the largely conservative district. He also has supported the 1990 budget-summit agreement, a raise in the minimum wage and voted for giving Congress a pay raise and revising its ethics rules.

Gilchrest has deviated from the GOP on issues ranging from the environment to family planning and McMillen is looking to capitalize on Gilcrest's inexperience and his own effectiveness.

If Gilchrest wins, he will serve his second term. If he loses, life starts getting interesting for him and his family, if their past serves as prologue.

In 1986, Gilchrest celebrated his 40th birthday and panicked that the second 40 years of his life would zoom by as quickly as had the first. He handled his mid-life crisis by writing the U.S. Forest Service and asking them to find him a home in the middle of the wilderness.

They accommodated with six possibilities and Gilchrest chose one in the mountains of Northern Idaho, on the Montana border. He was a tenured history teacher in a Maryland high school and tried to get a year's leave of absence. When he was laughed at, he simply quit. Skeptics also included his own mother (who thought he was losing his mind) and his father-in-law (who counseled his daughter to get a divorce).

Undaunted, Gilchrest loaded up his pick-up and went West. He was 80 miles from civilization, and 20 miles from the nearest road. His job was to be in charge of an area of wilderness the size of Massachusetts. There were about 250 moose that roamed the area surrounding his cabin and his task was to estimate how many moose had been shot by hunters, and then call rangers with the tally.

In the meantime, he says he educated his two sons in everything from math and science to history and grammar.

He told us he would still be counting moose but a broken jaw forced his return to Maryland. He was unemployed and his mouth was wired. So he went to work in a sawmill and as a house painter and eeked out a living until the morning he read in his local newspaper what must be counted as the most unusual help-wanted ad in political history.

Gilchrest read about how the Republicans couldn't field a candidate against former Democratic Congressman Roy Dyson in the 1988 campaign. So Gilchrest threw his hat in the ring, drained his savings to wage a $300 victory in the Republican primary and gave Dyson and his own party the scare of their life.

GOP officials watched with amusement-turned-panic as Gilchrest went from a sideshow to a serious candidate against the scandal-plagued Dyson. When party officials wanted to replace him with a more "serious" candidate, Gilchrest would not bow out. He lost by 1,540 votes.

The 1988 effort took such a financial toll on him that he was forced to file for unemployment benefits. He also worked in a sawmill until returning to teaching. But he ran again in 1990 and this time won.

ANOTHER VIEW

Perot name puns aren't 'Perotnoia'

Ross Perot may be a sudden breath of political fresh air or a blowhard offering more bull than beef, but either way he provides an irresistible target for name puns. An article in The New Republic last week describing him as paranoid was entitled "Perotnoia." On television last week, Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York warned likewise against "Perotanoia." Another commentator referred with Shakespearean sarcasm to the idyllic world of Pros-Perot.

Puns need not be scorned as low humor, not when they make sense at each level of meaning, as in John Leonard's gibe at economists preoccupied with anti-recession models: "Brother, can you paradigm?" But making puns on people's names invites endless, tasteless imitation, and so it might be worth the effort — all together now — to get every conceivable Perot pun out of our systems.

Let it be conceded, once and for all, that if he was elected president he would offer economists, and Bush administration theorists, a new Perotdigm. Even if his Latin American policy made him sound like a Perotnista, his concern for global nuclear safety would remain Perotmount.

In terms of domestic policy, he would surely be attentive to Perotchial schools. His concern for the handicapped would extend to Perotplegics, and his health care reform would have to cover Perotinitis and Perotdontia.

But his opponents can be depended on, before long, to ridicule any claim that he's a Perotgon of virtue who could lead America to political Perotdise. They are more likely to prefer a sentence of life without Perotle, while the rest of us wish for, at least, no more name puns. While there's life there's hope, Caesar might have said. Dum spiro sperot.

Getting used to teen-ager hasn't been easy

Fourteen years old! 14! XIV! Let us stroll around this chronological promontory, admiring the scenery, drinking in the possibilities.

You will have noted by now your father's penchant for shaking his head on these anniversary occasions. Somehow he never can believe you have achieved X age, whatever X may signify. This goes for your mother also. We remember too well the Will of 14 years ago: so small, so vulnerable. This new Will — tall, rangy, guitar-plunking, telephone-hogging, girl-watching, late-sleeping, high school-pointed — is to the old one as an acorn is to an oak sapling.

Murchison

We have had a year — your mother , younger brother and I — to get used to this teenage business. I confess it hasn't been easy. Teen-agers, it is scientifically reported, are people. On the other hand, this is not a proposition one receives on blind faith. All one knows for sure is that teen-agers used to be people.

Your father has personal knowledge of this. More than three decades ago, when he turned 14, teen-agers leaped out of bed in the morning, hungry for an education; ate gratefully all the food placed before them, including squash; said "yes, sir" and "thank you, ma'am" 50 times a day.

Some process of mutation, doubtless traceable to the atomic bomb, has rendered teen-agers utterly different from the admirable beings of yore. But I digress. We are talking of one certain teen-ager as he marks yet another birthday.

In days of old, best beloved, your parents called you a handful. You are now at the very least an armload — not many inches short of your old man's six feet, and gaining all the time. Slinging you around by the wrists — an old diversion — until the both of us grow dizzy and collapse, laughing, would be as likely today as scaling Mt. Rushmore with a toothpick. And what is this talk of the need for your own razor? Upper-lip fuzz at your tender age?

But it is The Voice that astounds: the comparative depth, the relative resonance after all these years of soprano communication. The Voice came upon us almost before we were aware it was rumbling up from below.

It tells us more truly than anything else, I think — peach fuzz included — that past relationships are moving slowly, subtly to a new plane. As Bob Dylan used to say, the times they are a-changing.

Dylan — you know. Flourished around the time of Pink Floyd and John Lennon? Now we're talking your language, aren't we, the language of, as they say nowadays, "classic rock." Ours is, broadly speaking, a musical family, to which you rightly belong by inheritance. Your mother and I have watched with some satisfaction as guitars, the buying and playing of them, took a central place in your life. We have seen (heard?) your skill and confidence as a performer increase, though where all this is taking you/us — Juilliard or the Greasy Tangerine Coffee House — none can say. Anyway, it's fun.

None of this I pronounce on with the certainty of old, when our handful, not having attained armload status, was under our thumbs. Best beloved, it grieves and gratifies me at the same time to acknowledge that you have entered part way into a life of your very own. Parents like us can watch such a life develop — indeed, they'd better! — but, increasingly, what they see is the back of adolescent heads.

Oh, we talk, laugh, dine, travel, go to church as one family; but there is now the telephone, there are the friends, the parties, retreats, and outings that partly remain, for the rest of us, hearsay. "What did you do?" we inquire, encouragingly. "Not much," you respond, in teen-age-speak. When the telephone rings and a female voice chirps our older son's name, we know vacation church school is over. Someone we know and love is growing up.

There is mingled joy and sadness in this, and no one knows which part is the greater. Still, your parents rejoice in your growth, in the development of your talents, the broadening of your outlook, the deepening of your character. I know one thing that's better than 14 years ago: One can talk, reason, listen, laugh with a 14-year-old armload. When he can be drawn beyond "not much," that is! The happiest of birthdays.

With love,
Dad

Palestinians don't deserve Israel's treatment

If you're curious about the 70-year-old conflict that has cost Americans billions of dollars and some lives and cost Israelis and Palestinians even more lives and more pain, get to know some of the Arab-Americans in your community.

Reese

The Palestinian-Israeli problem isn't going to go away and our involvement in it isn't going to stop.

So the choice is: do we want to work for peace and reconciliation or do we want to choose one side and beat up on the other? Unfortunately, too many partisans of Israel choose the latter course. I did so myself at one time, until I came to my senses.

The problem with beating up on the Palestinians is that first of all, they don't deserve it. They are a peaceful, industrious and intelligent people who were run down by an 18-wheeler of history toward the end of World War I — a combination of a new secular Zionist movement and the cynical decision of Great Britain to give away another people's country.

But the second problem with rejecting peace and reconciliation is that the 18-wheeler that hit the Palestinians didn't destroy them. It deprived many of them of their homes and businesses and wealth. It split families. It killed some and maimed some. It drove some into exile. It put others into second-class status in their own land and still others under what some Israelis apparently intend will be indefinite military rule.

But for all that, it made them stronger, gave them an even stronger sense of identity, taught them to organize, to work hard, and to value education and most of all to most intensely identify with their homeland. Whether the government of Israel chooses to recognize it or not, there is an independent Palestine.

It can either be given finite borders with peace and mutual security and recognition or it can go on existing in the hearts and minds of Palestinians and, like an inexhaustible source of energy, fuel a struggle that will never cease.

Israel, if it rejects peace, will eventually fall despite its massive armaments and military record. Some of the best Israeli analysts, like Col. Y. Harkabi, former head of military intelligence, are saying this. It will fall for the same reason the Soviet Union collapsed and the United States is on the edge of financial collapse. No nation can endure indefinitely in a state of siege, least of all a small nation with slim resources that placed itself in the middle of 130 million people it chooses to remain at odds with.

But it need not fall and more people need not die if enough who care about peace will speak louder than those who are blinded by hatred and bigotry. As in any conflict, one finds those on both sides. Abu Nidal, for example, is a renegade terrorist who has assassinated almost as many Palestine Liberation Organization leaders as have the Israelis. And he has always killed those in the forefront of seeking peace.

The really sad thing about the current Israeli government, aside from its unreasonable and insatiable demands on the U.S. treasury, is that its unjust treatment of Palestinians is building up a bank account of hatred. Whenever any of us treat another person unjustly, we are just investing in hatred whose dividends will be poison.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, June 12, the 164th day of 1992. There are 202 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 12, 1939, the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum was dedicated in Cooperstown, N.Y. — 100 years to the day on which Abner Doubleday supposedly invented the sport. (Most sports historians doubt, however, that Doubleday was the true inventor of baseball.)

On this date:

In 1665, England installed a municipal government in New York, formerly the Dutch settlement of New Amsterdam.

In 1776, Virginia's colonial Legislature became the first to adopt a Bill of Rights.

In 1838, the Iowa Territory was organized.

In 1898, Philippine nationalists declared independence from Spain.

In 1937, the Soviet Union executed eight army leaders as a purge under Josef Stalin continued.

In 1963, civil rights leader Medgar Evers was fatally shot in front of his home in Jackson, Miss.

In 1963, one of Hollywood's costliest failures, "Cleopatra," starring Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton and Rex Harrison, premiered in New York.

In 1967, 25 years ago, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down state laws prohibiting interracial marriages.

In 1971, Tricia Nixon and Edward F. Cox were married in a ceremony in the White House Rose Garden.

In 1978, David Berkowitz was sentenced to 25 years to life in prison for each of the six "Son of Sam" .44-caliber killings that had terrified New Yorkers.

Financial report discloses lawmaker's economic tales

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas S. Foley rolled a perfect strike last year on a stock merger involving two bowling alleys, according to one of the hundreds of House financial disclosure forms released Thursday.

Financial dealings did not go as well for Rep. Bart Gordon, D-Tenn., who reported "less than desirable results" from three failed real estate investments. He did get to appear on the Oprah Winfrey show, receiving free air fare, food and lodging, his report showed.

The economic tales of Foley and Gordon were just two to emerge from the 1991 reports that provide insight into the lives, earnings and liabilities of 435 lawmakers. The forms also recount thousands of gifts they received, from a jar of tomato sauce to a $2,500 crystal castle.

Senate forms are due out Friday.

The salary in the House last year was $125,100, which for many constitutes the bulk of all earnings. But for Rep. Amory Houghton, R-N.Y., heir to the Corning Glass fortune, salary is just a small fraction.

Houghton said his earned income last year included more than $140,000 from 34 family trusts. He also listed assets of more than $1 million in Corning Inc. stock and a house in the District of Columbia valued at more than $1 million.

■ More national news/8B

Among the poorest members is Rep. Bob Davis, R-Mich., who listed assets of less than $1,000 and liabilities of $40,000 to $115,000. Davis wrote 878 bad checks at the defunct House bank and has decided not to seek an eighth term.

The forms show that speechmaking outside the nation's capital has dropped off sharply, now that lawmakers can no longer accept up to $2,000 per speech as they used to. All proceeds from paid speeches must now be given to charity.

Reps. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., and Willis Gradison, R-Ohio, bucked the trend. Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, accumulated $110,000 in speaking fees while Gradison collected $46,700. All were donated to charity.

House Speaker Foley, whose total assets are listed at between $446,000 and $1.1 million, added between $15,001 and $50,000 when East Bowl Inc. merged with Atomic Lanes, located near the Hanford Nuclear Reservation in his home state of Washington.

Foley had 728 shares in East Bowl Inc., which split nine for one.

The speaker, whose annual salary is $160,000, reported that between $250,000 and $500,000 of his money came from an inheritance in his mother's trust.

Sports and entertainment proved to be monetarily beneficial to two other members.

Rep. Jim Bunning, R-Ky., a former major league pitcher collected $1,100 for appearing in an Old Timers baseball game.

Rep. J. Alex McMillan, R-N.C., took top honors for diligence in describing the gifts he received during the year, attaching a 25-page list with 500 or more items to his financial disclosure form.

The items ranged from a jar of Ragu tomato sauce from Unilever and a bag of Vidalia onions from the Piggly-Wiggly stores to an Operation Desert Storm crystal paperweight.

McMillan also received a collection of sayings, "Things Your Dad Always Told You But You Didn't Want to Hear," from constituent Ruth Hill and a book difficult to find on the latest best-seller list, "Natural Gas as a Second Language," from Mobil Natural Gas, Inc.

Nasty lawyers should be nicer, court panel says

CHICAGO (AP) — The halls of justice echo with juris impudence, says a federal court panel that prescribes civility training for older attorneys and a pledge of good conduct for new members of the bar.

But one prominent lawyer says the prescription is futile, "like going out in the jungle and teaching orangutans to use a knife and fork."

The report for the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said rudeness is especially troublesome before trials begin, when attorneys engage in "Rambo-style" discovery efforts to determine just what the other side knows.

The practice harms clients and the court system and must be changed, the "Committee on Civility" said in a report Wednesday.

"We are brothers and sisters in a profession, not in a gang fight," Chief Judge William Bauer of the 7th Circuit said Thursday. "It is not necessary to set aside gentlemanly or womanly assets to be a good lawyer."

Formed in the fall of 1989 at Bauer's request, the nine-member committee came up with several recommendations, including a requirement that new attorneys read and abide by a 38-step code of professional conduct developed by the panel.

The committee, led by U.S. District Judge Marvin E. Aspen and composed of judges and lawyers from the court's three-state jurisdiction, also pushed for civility training for more experienced attorneys.

The report included a 1991 survey of 1,500 attorneys and judges practicing in the 7th Circuit, which covers Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana. The report found that 61 percent of attorneys practicing in the Northern District of Illinois believed lack of civility was a problem.

Prostate cancer deaths increase, officials report

ATLANTA (AP) — Deaths from prostate cancer are increasing, particularly among black men, despite improved methods of early detection, federal health officials reported Thursday.

The increased death rate raises questions about the benefits of newer and more expensive tests to detect the disease, said Ron Aubert, an epidemiologist for the Centers for Disease Control.

"There is clearly something going on. It's becoming a growing public health problem," Aubert said. "But there are studies that are needed to evaluate the benefit of screening and early detection.

"We're not to the point that organizations feel comfortable making recommendations that people get these early screenings, as they have with breast and cervical cancer."

The Atlanta-based CDC reported Thursday that deaths from prostate cancer increased 2.5 percent among white men and 5.7 percent among black men from 1980 to 1988, the latest year for which figures were available.

Aubert attributes the higher black mortality rates to fewer cancer screenings among blacks and less access to more expensive and sophisticated tests and treatment.

"It may not be so much of a racial difference as a socioeconomic one," he said. "If we were to compare blacks and poor whites, I'm not sure what we would see."

There is also a higher rate of blacks being diagnosed as having prostate cancer, the CDC said, but the diagnosis rate for whites increased faster.

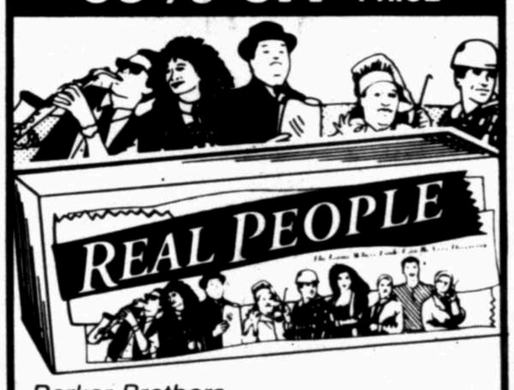

The American Cancer Society predicts 34,000 deaths in the United States this year from prostate cancer.

Prostate cancer generally occurs in men over age 50. The risk increases with age.

Doctors generally check for tumors with a rectal examination, which is included in the price of a routine physical.

EARNEST KIKER
Seminar deals with cotton management

An update on cotton management is being offered Wednesday by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The meeting will be held at the Midland County Extension Office beginning at 8 a.m.

Kiker

The session will feature discussions on identifying, field scouting and decision-making about insecticides. Also to be discussed are cotton plant growth and development, plant mapping and the use of PIX cotton plant growth regulator.

After lunch, participants will attend a demonstration on the use of chemigation. The program will end with a field workshop on how to scout cotton.

This program will allow participants to qualify for 6.5 hours of Continuing Education Credits for their Texas Department of Agriculture Pesticide Applicator Licenses.

The program's discussions are:

Cotton Plant Growth; Plant Mapping: What Can I Learn From It; Managing Cotton Growth with PIX — Charles Stichler, Extension Agronomist.

Natural Enemies of Cotton Pests; Insecticide Choice: Controlling Pests & Managing Resistance — Charles Allen, Extension Entomologist.

Cotton Pests: Identification, Biology & Damage — Victor Lucero, Midland/Martin County Extension Agent, Entomology.

How to Scout and When to Spray — Warren Multer, Glasscock/Reagan/Upton County Extension Agent, Entomology.

For more information, contact the Midland Extension office at 687-1351 or Martin Extension office at 756-3316.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

City decides to keep cleanup plans local

■ Council members refuse participation in state program to handle leakage from fuel storage tanks.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff writer

The city of Midland will take responsibility for the cleanup of leakage from one of its underground fuel storage tanks, officials said.

But, several months after proposing a plan, local officials continue to wait for instructions from Austin's Texas Water Commission to begin the process.

Leakage from the tanks, located at the city garage, 600 N. Carver, is contained on city property. It was discovered in 1990 when one tank was removed to be replaced.

Although petroleum has entered the groundwater at the site, a TWC official said there is not considered to be any danger at present.

"They do need to clean it up," said Chris Hammit, petroleum storage tank coordinator for the TWC in Odessa. "But they're not out of compliance on anything. They've defined the extent (of the contamination) and know exactly where it is."

City Council members considered participating in a state-sponsored program to clean the leakage but determined handling it locally would be wiser.

Ms. Hammit described the state cleanup program as "like an insurance policy" for communities with contamination. It allows them to pay a deductible (in Midland's case, about $2,500 for the fuel tank leak) and leave the arrangements to the state.

The state could delay the cleanup plans, however.

Ms. Hammit said Midland's spill might not get a high priority because harmful vapors or other problems have not been detected. Contaminations that threaten drinking water sources or pose other dangers would be confronted first, she said.

But the cost was a major factor in at least one councilman's decision to keep the work local. Buddy Sipes, District 3 representative, said he's not willing to pay $2,500 without being certain what the city would get in return.

"That money's just lost," Sipes said. "We have no idea whether we'll end up doing more than we're doing now or not.

"If you keep local control, you're going to end up with less total cost."

So the staff will continue working with Petro-Global Consultants for supervising the cleaning.

Safety-risk manager Beverly Wingo said the city had to remove the tank, which had stored diesel, when it was replaced. The process toward cleanup has been ongoing since the contamination was discovered, she said.

"There are a lot of steps, so it's a long, drawn-out process," Ms. Wingo said. The city had to arrange for testing of the site, drill monitoring wells and keep close tabs on the contaminated soil during the last 18 months.

Sipes said he'd rather the city keep a hand in the process through its completion, not leave it to the state.

"I don't want to throw our problems in a big heap ... and then ultimately, get a bigger mess than we started with," he said.

The city, with Petro-Global, submitted its cleanup proposal to the TWC in January. So far, there has not been a response telling the city how to proceed.

Summer day camps take heat off parents

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

On Thursday, the dessert was on Anna-Margaret Ray. It covered her hair and dripped into her face, in fact.

Anna-Margaret became a human ice cream sundae when a half a gallon of vanilla ice cream, chocolate syrup, whipped cream and candied sprinkles were unceremoniously dumped on her head by delighted youngsters.

The college student was crowned Queen of Super Summer Day Camp during Lee Youth Center's wild festivities. The event culminated the first one-week session of four sessions of day camp for grade-school children.

"We have regular activities during the week — tennis, cheerleading, dance, soccer, basketball, baseball, volleyball, arts and crafts — but sometimes, after lunch, the activities get a little wild and wacky and off the wall," said Janet Swallow, executive director of the Midland and Lee Youth Centers.

'We have regular activities during the week — tennis, cheerleading, dance, soccer, basketball, baseball, volleyball, arts and crafts — but sometimes, after lunch, the activities get a little wild and wacky and off the wall.'

— Janet Swallow, executive director of the Midland and Lee Youth Centers

"The whole week has been fun," said Anna-Margaret, a student and cheerleader at Texas Christian University who is in Midland for summer vacation. She and several high school students served as counselors for the day camp.

"It gave me a chance to be a kid again," she said. "It also gave me a numb head."

"Being a good sport is a prerequisite of being a counselor here," Ms. Swallow said, and noted that Anna-Margaret was a better sport than most to allow a gaggle of youngsters to ply her head with ice cream and toppings.

While the ice cream "queen" rinsed out her hair in the sink, dozens of "happy campers" converged on the basketball courts outside for a relay shooting water guns to clean shaving cream "beards" off of some of their peers.

The younger set danced in place and squealed at the antics of their fellow campers. Even the high school students laughed and cavorted in the games.

Ms. Swallow said the youth center directors aren't immune from being the targets of food or water.

"I was a birthday cake on Monday," boasted Mark Smith, director of the Lee Youth Center.

Anna-Margaret said the messy games keep the campers entertained. "It's torture, but it's really fun," she said. "At least next session I'll be broken in, and I won't have to be initiated."

The college student suggested the executive director star as the willing "victim" of the next session's wacky games.

"It's happened before, believe me," Ms. Swallow said.

The next session of Super Summer Day Camp begins Monday. Sessions are offered 9 a.m.-1 p.m. Monday through Friday next week, July 6-10, and July 13-17.

The day camp is open to youngsters who have completed the first grade but have not yet entered the seventh grade. Sessions are $30 per child and $25 for more than one session. When a child is registered, a sibling will pay $25. Ms. Swallow said scholarships are available for children who are economically disadvantaged.

Campers need to bring a sack lunch and wear comfortable clothes. Ms. Swallow said that although some activities are unstructured, the camp is well chaperoned. The Lee Youth Center is located at 3500 Neely.

Although places are available, enrollment is limited. For more information call 689-1175 or 689-1675.

Jurors award family $18,000 in burial case

■ Jury rules county, funeral home negligent in lowering coffin into grave and burying body outside the casket.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

The brother and two sisters of a 33-year-old Midland woman whose body allegedly fell out of a cardboard-cloth coffin and into a "watery grave" in a pauper's burial in 1988 each were awarded $6,000 by a Midland jury on Thursday.

The woman, Blaudina Lopez Jasso, who died in June 1988 from accidental causes, was buried on June 27 of that year in the county-owned Fairview Cemetery.

The jury ruled Midland County and Thomas Funeral Home, defendants in the lawsuit, were negligent in lowering the coffin into the grave, which had collected rainwater, and in burying the body outside the casket.

The body came out of the coffin after it was tilted during burial, and the latched lid opened, testimony indicated.

The case was tried in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd Texas District Court in Midland.

Thomas Funeral Home had embalmed the body in preparing it for burial, furnished the coffin and arranged the graveside service.

Midland County took care of the grave-digging and burial through Fairview Cemetery workers.

Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman said Thursday he was disappointed with the jury's verdict. The jury faulted the county for 45 percent of the negligence and Thomas Funeral Home with 55 percent of the negligence.

The jury awarded $6,000 each to Ms. Jasso's brother, Jimmy Lopez, and her sisters, Diana Rios and Dominga Benitez, for the "mental anguish" they suffered over their sister's burial. They had sought $100,000 in damages.

"They (jurors) did their job," Dettman said, "and I think the jury was wrong. They were hoodwinked (by testimony and by lawyer H. Thomas Hirsch's arguments). But I respect their verdict. I can't fault them. They did what they thought was right. If they were hoodwinked, then they were hoodwinked."

Hirsch, an Odessa lawyer, could not be reached for comment following the verdict.

Bill Thomas, owner of Thomas Funeral Home, said he was not present at the 1988 burial because he had been paged to make a death call about the time the Catholic priest was conducting the graveside rites.

"I wasn't there when the body was lowered into the ground or buried," Thomas said Thursday night. An assistant to Thomas stayed for the burial, he said.

"As far as I know, it was a prop-

Court of inquiry to study Lubbock pathologist

LUBBOCK (AP) — The attorney leading an investigation into the work of indicted Lubbock pathologist Ralph Erdmann says the doctor's sloppy bookkeeping is no excuse for autopsy discrepancies.

Erdmann

Tommy Turner, who was appointed in April to check Erdmann's work for any possible criminal wrongdoing, said he has found many cases where the pathologist's bookkeeping and autopsies do not match up.

The discrepancies have shown Erdmann never performed several autopsies he claimed to have completed in official reports, Turner said.

"When you see a pattern emerging, you begin to wonder. ... It goes beyond being a mistake," he said.

Of Turner's statements, Erdmann told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal Wednesday, "I can't comment on that because I don't know what he's (Turner) talking about. That's his opinion."

District Judge John McFall and Turner intend to begin a hearing for the court of inquiry on June 29 in state district court.

Erdmann has come under fire since being indicted in February by a Hockley County grand jury. He is accused of billing Hockley County $650 for an autopsy he never performed.

Recently, police officials and colleagues have accused Erdmann of everything from sloppiness to performing tailor-made autopsies for prosecutors.

Turner also said he has conducted an investigation into money

Creatures, critters can teach humans about life, living

The more creatures and critters I run into, the more I'm convinced that there is more to them than instinct — the inner mystery which tells them what and when to do to survive.

Todd

And there is no such thing as a categorically "dumb" animal or species.

If any species of animal, be it flier, runner, crawler, digger or swimmer, were so dumb, then why, pray tell, has that species survived all of these years?

You ask a muleteer if a mule is smart, and he will tell you how many doctoral degrees a horse or human would need to match the smartness of a long-eared, drooped nosed, sure-footed mule long on the independence. Muleteers say the mule, like thinking people, prefer credible reasons for doing or not doing anything — work or rest.

Of course, a horse fancier figures that his pride is strong on class, grace, speed and beauty.

Now, take the dog.

The dog I'm most familiar with is Herd, the mostly Irish terrier who patrols the back pasture. It's her territory, and she controls it and all things, including the caretaker, who trod on her turf. She makes herself at home, which is where she is.

In the year since I've been fortunate enough to know her, I am drawn to her sensitivities and perceptions. She can read feelings, I suspect, better than most Ph.D. psychologists and M.D. psychiatrists. And her vocabulary is not cluttered with psychological and medical jargon. She speaks her mind.

Virtually nothing, except microscopic things, the cat, Aroma, and most birds, escapes her.

Turtles that I have known know what is going on too.

Wisely, they just don't want any part of modern civilization and had rather not be treated like Pavlov's dog.

Birds, like old, wise and independent cowboys and aviators and sailors who like to ride, fly and sail without being shackled, do what they do quite well. They enjoy life, work at it, play at it, and survive.

Bugs and other mighty small creatures are fascinating to watch.

There is reason, pattern and thought to what they do.

Behold the spider and the spider's clever ways and be so amazed.

The cockroach, the dread of many tidy housekeepers, has survived the eons and the exterminators.

Creatures — coyotes, lions or deer — in the wild, and critters — horses, cattle, or goats — in the pasture know how to survive and obviously do it well.

They are still around.

And so are myriad other species. And there would be more if it weren't for some of the "dumb" manipulations and exploitations of civilized mankind and womankind. Undisciplined humankind, outside of erasing some species and endangering others in the quest for survival and riches, unwittingly seems to be trying to drive all life into extinction by polluting and exploiting the Earth and ignoring the pursuits of life entitled to all creatures great and small.

The critters and the creatures can show humankind a lot about life and living.

DEATHS

Kenneth Carter

Services for Kenneth "K.C." Carter, 32, of Denver, are set for 3 p.m. today at Greater Ideal Baptist Church with the Rev. Larry L. Polk officiating. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

Carter

Carter died Friday in Denver following a sudden illness.

He was born Feb. 16, 1960, in Midland. He graduated from Lee High School in 1978 and graduated with honors from Arizona Tech in Phoenix with a degree in electrical engineering in 1982.

He worked for Dixon Valve Co. and had lived in Denver for five years.

Survivors include his parents, Richard and Gwen Carter of Midland; three children, Lakendra, Anthony and Kenny; one brother, Randall Carter of Denver; one sister, Gayla Carter of Houston; and grandparents Lula Mae Carter of Midland and Floyd Brooks of Teague.

Pallbearers will be Derrold Lynn Hunt, Willie Wilson Jr., George Mitchell, R.B. Webster, Gary Dickens, Miguel Hines, Ernest Mayfield and Charles Roseberry. Honorary pallbearers will be Michael Webb, Wayne Bess, Wayne Brooks, Deneill Robinson, Manuel Andrew, Billy Coleman, Dameyon Brooks, Vandares Clark, Fred Carter III, Felton Clark, Stanley Watson, Darwin Bess, Jerriate Brooks, Darryl Brooks, Lynn Carr, Alvin Burrell, Michael Ned, Carl E. Nelson, Michael Adams and James Taylor.

Lillian Sikes

Services for Lillian Sikes are set for 11 a.m. Saturday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel in Midland with the Rev. Shell Denison, pastor of Wesley Methodist Church in Big Spring, officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Sikes died Thursday at her Big Spring home.

She was born Jan. 17, 1910, in Barstow where she grew up. In 1921, she moved to Midland with her family.

She married Oscar Andrew Hardin in 1927. She later married Chester Sikes in March of 1945 in Alpine. They lived in Goldsmith for several years and later moved to Crane, Hico and then to Corsicana where they resided for 17 years.

She later moved to Big Spring where she resided for the last 13 years.

She was a member of Wesley Methodist Church and was a past member of the Rebekah Lodge.

She was preceded in death by her husband and one brother, Woodrow Stewart.

Survivors include three sons, Clarence L. Hardin of Hobbs, N.M., Oscar L. Hardin of Big Spring and Larence O. Hardin of Jal, N.M.; one daughter, Lillian Jeanean Johnson of Big Spring; one stepson, Dan Sikes of Knox City; one stepdaughter, Johnnie Williams of Odessa; one brother, Albert L. Stewart of Midland; six sisters, Helen Estes and Johnnie Thompson, both of Midland, Tennie Anderson, Martha Wilkerson and Jeannette Ramsey, all of Alpine, and Mable Haling of Buckland, Kan.; seven grandchildren, 17 great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews.

Willie Ludwig

Services for former longtime Midlander Willie Ludwig were Thursday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield of West Kentucky Baptist Church officiating. Burial followed in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Ludwig died Tuesday at a Winters hospital.

She was born July 4, 1915, in Morristown, Tenn., where she grew up. She married Arnold Ludwig in 1932, and they moved to Valley Mills in 1935. They moved to Roscoe in 1943 and lived there several years before moving to Meridian and then to Midland in 1949.

Mrs. Ludwig worked in several nursing homes in Midland.

She was preceded in death by her husband in 1970; and three sons, Norbert Ludwig in 1954, and Bobby and Arnold Ludwig, Jr., both in 1966.

Mrs. Ludwig moved to Winters in 1980.

Survivors include two daughters, Lois Posey of Graham and Edna Gollihar of Midland; one sister, Betty Watts of Morristown; 11 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren.

Memorials should be directed to a charity of choice.

Hope Schuelke

STANTON — Services for Hope Schuelke, 67, are set for 2 p.m. today at the Church of Christ. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park in Midland, under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Mrs. Schuelke died Wednesday at her Stanton home following a lengthy illness.

She was born Jan. 14, 1925, in Throckmorton. She married Clarence L. Schuelke July 24, 1943, and he preceded her in death May 17, 1984.

She moved to Stanton more than seven years ago from Houston. Mrs. Schuelke was a homemaker and a member of the Church of Christ of Stanton.

Survivors include two daughters, Karen Emily Schuelke of Stanton and Rhonda Ellen Schuelke of Amarillo; and three sisters, Winona Foster, Ellen Morgan and Judy Reed, all of Stanton.

Pallbearers will be Kenneth Schuelke, Wayne Pinkerton, H.A. Schuelke, Spencer Blocker, Jimmy Schuelke, Charlie Pinkerton, Kay Pinkerton and Albert Johnson.

Memorials should be directed to the Martin County Museum.

Maggie Boyd

BIG SPRING — Services for Maggie Belle Boyd, 77, of Big Spring are set for 2 p.m. Saturday at the Nalley-Pickle & Welch Rosewood Chapel with the Rev. H.A. Hanks, pastor of First Baptist Church in Andrews, officiating.

Mrs. Boyd died Wednesday at a Big Spring nursing home.

She was born April 14, 1915, in Nacogdoches.

She married Jack C. Boyd on Dec. 24, 1934, in Crane. The couple moved from Crane to Midland in 1952 and later to Big Spring.

She was a Methodist and a homemaker.

She was preceded in death by one sister, Elaine Gray and one brother, Les Fulmer.

Survivors include her husband; one daughter, Becky Boyd of Big Spring; two sisters, Inez Williams of Lubbock and Leona Brentz of San Diego, Calif.; and several nieces and nephews.

Charlie Martin

Services for Charlie May Martin are set for 2 p.m. today at the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. G.A. Magee of Bellview Baptist Church officiating. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Gardens, east of Odessa, under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Martin died Tuesday in Midland following a brief illness.

Pallbearers will be Randy Moore, Doug Moore, Jim Lowrance, Michael Cottrill, Kenny Martin, Larry Martin, Terry Martin and Berry Martin.

Grace Nelson

DALLAS — Graveside services for Grace Nelson of Midland are set for 2 p.m. today at Restland Cemetery in Dallas.

Services were Thursday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. A.E. Burns, interim pastor of Wilshire Park Baptist Church, officiating. Arrangements are with Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Nelson died Monday at a local hospital.

Charles Keegan

Memorial services for Charles R. "Chuck" Keegan of Midland are set for 1 p.m. Saturday at the Ellis Chapel North, 1002 Loop 250 West, with Frank McFarlin officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Keegan died Wednesday at his Midland residence.

Robert Reeves

HOUSTON — Former longtime Midlander Robert Harley "Bob" Reeves died Tuesday in Houston. There were no services.

He was an Army Air Corps veteran of World War II, serving with the 5th Bomber Group of the 13th Air Force's 72nd Squadron.

He was a member of the First Christian Church of Midland.

Survivors include his wife, Glenna Reeves of Houston; three daughters, Sherry, Robin and Betty; and three grandchildren.

Lawmaker supports seniors test

AUSTIN (AP) — State Rep. John Carona, R-Dallas, says Texans over age 75 ought to be required to take the driving test to stay on the road.

Carona said a bill he has written would require motorists over age 75 to take the test every four years to keep their licenses valid.

He said a similar bill won committee approval in the last Legislature but failed to clear the full House. "We are optimistic about it being passed next session," he told The Daily Texan.

Carona is a member of a state task force that is expected to submit a report on elderly drivers to the governor's office in September.

Dorothy Randoll, a spokeswoman for the American Association of Retired Persons, said such a law would be discriminatory.

"A lot of people are bad drivers at all ages. To use an arbitrary age is discriminatory," she said.

TRIAL: Jury awards family $18,000 in burial case

er burial," Thomas said. "And I still stand by that. The Texas Funeral Commission came to Midland and did a complete and expensive investigation and interviewed everybody concerned" with the Ms. Jasso burial.

The commission determined Thomas had "not done anything wrong" in handling the funeral.

Thomas said it was a "sad day when an Odessa attorney can come over to Midland and confuse facts with fiction and prey on the sympathy of a jury."

Thomas was not present for the trial.

Dettman, who was assisted by Marvin Moore in defending Midland County in the lawsuit, said he was "extremely disappointed that the jury cannot see the truth. But, unfortunately, that's the way the system works sometimes."

Midland County conducted a proper burial, Dettman said.

Dettman said Charles Sizemore, a former Midland funeral director who said Midland justices of the peace did not award him his "fair share of dead bodies" for pauper burials, was disgruntled when he questioned the propriety of the Ms. Jasso burial and "helped dig up the body," in 1989.

For the 1991-'92 fiscal year, the Midland County Commissioners' Court allocated $8,000 for indigent burials in Fairview Cemetery.

The county pays funeral homes $250 in the burial of adults and $150 each in the burial of children. Midland's three funeral homes, Ellis, Thomas and Baker-Jackson, help conduct those burials.

So far this year, Midland County has paid for 18 burials, said Wanda Colburn, Midland County's welfare director. In 1991, the county paid for the burials of 19 adults and 10 children.

"It's up to the funeral homes," Ms. Colburn said, "as to what they want to provide (in services) for that kind of money."

HEARING: Attorney investigates Lubbock pathologist

(From 1B)

Erdmann's wife, Joan, may have received for referring potential tissue donors.

Mrs. Erdmann has gotten at least $17,000 over the past two years for bone and tissue from bodies examined by Erdmann, according to court records.

"At the least, that appears to be a conflict of interest," Turner said.

McFall said Turner would present some background information at the court of inquiry but would generally limit his presentation to indictable offenses.

"We're not going to go into everything he's (Turner) found. Some of it is immoral but not illegal," McFall said.

Erdmann resigned a $140,000-a-year job as pathologist for Lubbock County three weeks after his indictment, claiming overwork. Erdmann has performed autopsies for 41 West Texas counties over the past nine years.

Turner refused to specify how many autopsies in question are county cases.

The only case Turner would specify involved the Lubbock County death of Trent Joseph Schilling, 19. His body was found in August in his apartment with a single gunshot wound to the head.

Erdmann reported performing an autopsy on Schilling's body, but funeral home workers said that they found no evidence that an autopsy was performed.

"Have you talked to the family? Not only was that body opened, that body was used for organ donation," Erdmann said Wednesday.

Darris Linder, Schilling's uncle, confirmed that bone and skin tissue had been removed from the body. Linder said he believes an autopsy was performed.

Three workmen die in manhole near sewage plant

MOUNT PLEASANT (AP) — The bodies of three workmen were recovered Thursday afternoon from a pipeline manhole near a new sewage plant, authorities said.

The men, who were not identified pending notification of relatives, were employed by Onco Enterprises Inc., a Round Rock construction company. The men were working on a subcontract for Conex Construction Inc., also of Round Rock north of Austin, said Mike Bishop, Conex president.

Bishop said the men were finishing up a yearlong contract for his firm, installing wastewater lines for Mount Pleasant. He said a safety investigator from the firm was on his way Thursday evening to Mount Pleasant, 110 miles east of Dallas.

Bishop said he did not know the names of the victims. No one answered phones at the Onco offices Thursday evening.

Mount Pleasant Fire Chief Larry McRae said there was no oxygen in the hole.

Firefighters wearing self-contained breathing apparatus used ropes to recover the bodies from the bottom of the pipe, which was about 15 feet deep, McRae said.

The men were the only workers at the site and had been trapped in the sewer for about 20 minutes before they were discovered, the Longview News Journal reported.

It took firefighters about 30 minutes to remove the bodies from the shaft, McRae said.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Hospital receives bomb threat call

Staff report

An anonymous bomb threat to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center Thursday morning proved unfounded after hospital security and Midland police searched the entire building twice, hospital officials said.

Visitors in the hospital when the call was received at 10:15 a.m. were asked to "step outside the building" during the search.

No employees or patients were evacuated. Officials completed the second search at 1 p.m.

"I think someone has a sick sense of humor to pull a prank like this," said Frances Miller, 62. "I guess we'll try to visit again later. What a nuisance."

Burglars take $20,000 in property from van

Approximately $20,000 of merchandise was stolen Wednesday afternoon from a van sitting in the parking lot of the Petroleum Museum at 1500 W. Interstate 20, police reports said.

Robert Hutchinson, of Houston, discovered the right side door open after he returned to the parking lot. According to reports, Hutchinson locked the door before entering the museum. There was no sign of forced entry.

Four computers, five guns and three ham radios were reported stolen.

Monthly Pulse of America poll shows Texans lean toward Perot

By Chip Brown
Associated Press writer

LUBBOCK — President Bush called friends in this West Texas city three years ago to find out how his presidency was doing.

They backed him then.

These days, he doesn't want to know.

According to the latest Pulse of America poll, a monthly survey of 400 residents picked at random, the folks in Lubbock are leaning toward the other Texan, likely independent candidate Ross Perot.

The pulse polls are conducted by Southwest Research Associates of Lubbock, which sends the results to the White House, said Southwest spokeswoman Jane Anne Stinnett.

When asked who they would vote for if the presidential election were held today, 35 percent of those surveyed said Perot; 34 percent said Bush; 16 percent said Democratic candidate Bill Clinton and 15 percent were undecided.

When asked if their minds were pretty well made up, 56 percent said yes; 34 percent said they may change their mind and 10 percent didn't know.

It's always been a pretty safe bet that Lubbockites were behind Bush.

This windswept plains city in Bush's adopted home state has more than 150 churches, many of them large and conservative. Residents of Lubbock County gave the GOP presidential ticket 69 percent of the vote in 1988.

But Perot appears to be hurting Bush more than Clinton, according to Lubbockites.

When asked who they would vote for if Perot was not on the ballot, 53 percent said Bush; 26 percent said Clinton; 9 percent wouldn't vote and 1 percent had no answer.

Those leaning toward Perot will likely demand specifics on issues as the election nears, according to the survey.

Fifty-nine percent of those polled say their vote for president will be influenced more by specific issues rather than a candidate's ability to project leadership.

Twenty-seven percent say the candidate's image as a leader is more important and 14 percent had no answer.

Perot's potential independent candidacy has apparently sparked interest in third party politics. Forty percent of those surveyed say a strong third party would improve American politics.

Thirty-six percent said another party would make no difference, while 15 percent say three is a crowd and would only make things worse.

The Pulse of America poll was born shortly after March 1989, when Bush mentioned a phone conversation with friend and independent oil investor Robert W. Blake of Lubbock.

In response to reporters questioning the direction of his candidacy, Bush said, "I talked to a fellow from Lubbock, Texas, the other day which was the best phone call I've made. And he said, 'All the people in Lubbock think things are going just great.'"

The pulse polls have a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percent.

Police organize plan to get rap song off market

ARLINGTON (AP) — Police officers from 20 jurisdictions across Texas denounce rap star Ice-T's song "Cop Killer" and have organized a plan to try to get the record off the market.

The officers met Thursday and decided to direct their protest toward the owner of the record company, Time Warner.

Earlier this week, the Combined Law Enforcement Association of Texas, opted to make Six Flags Over Texas, a Time Warner affiliate since December, its focus for protests. But officials of the amusement park said they were unfairly targeted.

Austin-based CLEAT wants Time Warner, the parent company of Warner Records, to apologize for the song and pull it off shelves.

"It's obviously their position as a corporation that police officers don't deserve the common courtesy that they should not be the subject of hate crimes, and being targeted that they and their wives and children be targets of hate crimes and murder," Ron DeLord, CLEAT president, told the gathered officers on Thursday.

Lyrics of "Cop Killer" include, "Die, die, die pig, die — the police" and "I'm 'bout to dust some cops off." It was included in the album "Body Count" by Ice-T and the group BodyCount, released by Warner on March 27.

Warner Thursday issued a statement saying that the song is a matter of principle, not profit, adding that banning the song will not make violence and rage disappear.

The National Black Police Officers Association told WFAA-TV of Dallas that the protest may make tensions worse.

"What it's going to do is polarize the community even more by seeing these officers out here protesting this song," said spokesman Calvin Howard.

FAMILY MATTERS

Focusing on good times could help improve marriage

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I have been married 18 years and have three children (18, 12 and 9). As you can tell by my first-born's age, I was pregnant when we got married. We got married right out of high school and that was fine with me at the time. We both wanted to do the "right thing," so we got married as soon as we told our parents.

May

It was a struggle for both of us and there were many hard times. We somehow managed for him to get through college and go to work. Then I went to college, got pregnant again, had the baby and then finished my degree. My last child was the only one who was actually planned.

The problem that I have now is that I don't think that I have ever loved my husband. He is a good person and an average father, but there is just nothing between us. He has his "things" and I have mine and we just aren't involved with each other. There's nothing really wrong with our marriage, but there's nothing really right. I "love" my husband, but I'm not "in love" with him, if you know what I mean.

I think that we married for the wrong reason although we had to do it at the time. I just really don't know what to do. I've been married my entire adult life! I've never been single or on my own. No one really knows how unhappy I am. Because of my husband's position, I don't feel like I can discuss my feelings with anyone. Do you have any ideas on what I might do? I'm getting real depressed just thinking about spending the rest of my life like this. UNHAPPY

DEAR UNHAPPY: You and your husband got married under less than ideal circumstances, but look at what the two of you have accomplished. You both got through college, had three children and are blessed in many ways. Unfortunately, often our present mood affects what we remember. If we are unhappy now, our happy memories are filtered out and all we remember are the difficult times.

Take the time to make a list of the happy times in your marriage. Get out the old photographs and review them. Jot down notes about the good times and how you felt then. Allow yourself to reminisce and to feel.

Follow up this process with a goal-setting exercise. Ask yourself what is the first sign that your marriage is starting on the right track. Try to state specific action goals instead of vague ideas. In her book, "Divorce Busting," Michele Weiner-Davis offers some examples:

■ Vague: Be respectful.

Action: You will ask me about my day. I will compliment you on your work.

■ Vague: Be more loving.

Action: You will tell me you love me at least once a week. We will make love twice a week. I will volunteer to watch the kids so you can go out.

■ Vague: Be more sexual.

Action: I will initiate sex once a week. I will suggest we try something different. You will be more verbal when we make love.

■ Vague: Be less selfish.

Action: You will ask what I want to do on weekends. I will check with you before making plans. I will clean up if you cook dinner.

These are examples of a place to start. After you have formed your list, share your goals with our husband and ask him to create his action goals. Meet again, agree on at least one action goal and do it. Keep it simple. Often we need to experience each other in a more positive way. Relationships change one small step at a time. I encourage you to go take that first step.

I strongly believe in marriage and in working as hard as you can to preserve the marriage. Some marriages do not work. However, as Dr. Scott Peck writes in "The Road Less Traveled:" "love is the will to extend oneself for the purpose of nuturing one's own or another's spiritual growth." He goes on to say: "True love is not a feeling by which we are overwhelmed. It is a committed, thoughtful decision." I encourage you to begin the "work of love" by taking action.

You may want to consider talking to your minister about your feelings. It is very important to find someone safe to discuss feelings with. Another person having marital problems would not be a "safe" person. You are on an important journey. Do not be detoured by quick fixes.

Elize Laurenzi, 63, is seen last month tending to her garden at her Wayland, Mass., home. Laurenzi, who is passionate about her gardening, now teaches landscape design at Radcliffe College, after she decideed to get her landscape design certificate from Radcliffe four years ago. Laurenzi is one of the growing number of women in her age group who have started new careers.

Women over 50 are finding new careers

By Elinor Mills

BOSTON (AP) — Elize Laurenzi often gets up around sunrise to indulge in one of her passions — gardening. Then she's off to Radcliffe College to indulge in another — teaching landscape design. Then she tends to a third passion — family.

This schedule came to Laurenzi, 63, after she decided to get her landscape design certificate from Radcliffe four years ago. She is one of a growing number of women who have started new careers after 50.

"This age group is the red hot center of the revolution," feminist writer Gloria Steinem said at a recent symposium on older women. "The increased longevity and health is making this age group, over 50, the critical mass of the changes to come."

Laurenzi, who lives in the western Boston suburb of Wayland, said going to work after raising two children makes her feel better, younger.

"I still have this that I can do until I get into the wheelchair — photographing, teaching, I write a little bit," Laurenzi said. "There will always be something there for me."

Reva Paisner, another woman who returned to school after 50, graduated with a master's degree in social work from Simmons College in Boston at 53. Paisner, of Providence, R.I., was a social worker at Rhode Island Hospital until she retired six years ago.

"The only time I felt I was a little bit older was the day I turned 40," said Paisner, now 75. "I think it's because I'm, well, I'm not ready for the rocking chair either mentally or physically. I hope to go on independently for many years. I don't want to be dependent on anyone. That would hurt me."

Not every woman enters her later years with such enthusiasm.

Steinem, 58, said she began her 50s with a bad attitude about aging.

"We're beginning to realize that developmental so-called thinking which has stopped the good life, really has been stopped artificially at midlife. That, in fact, it's just exciting," she said. "It took me a while personally to even begin to think this way. I at first looked at age with defiance.

"Gradually, over a period of three or four years, I began to realize another stage — adventure and learning," she told a group of women participating in a recent conference sponsored by Radcliffe College on Women over 50.

Society programs women to fit into roles as daughter, wife and mother, Steinem said. However, she said older women can break out of this pattern.

"Age is not a deprivation, age is a brand-new country, and I think it's a country in which, finally, women can be ourselves."

Women can be left with immense burdens at the death of husbands, but they also can suffer debilitating conditions such as arthritis and osteoporosis.

Paisner, the retired social worker, said her husband's death in 1989 made her feel old for the first time in her life.

"Prior to that I never felt old. I couldn't find myself, she said. "I guess I gave myself a good talking to and said this can't go on."

Since then, she has learned Hebrew and traveled to Israel where she volunteered in a hospital sorting surgical instruments during the Gulf War.

Baby's teeth need attention much sooner than many think

By Brett Pauly
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Out of the mouth of babes... eventually come teeth.

And when those first choppers pop up, it's time for parents to think about seeing a dentist.

"It's never too early to schedule your child's first appointment," said Dr. Steve Blain, associate clinical professor of pediatric dentistry at the UCLA School of Dentistry. "We're seeing a tremendous increase in preventive dentistry for children."

The first exam is critical, Blain said. Apart from looking at teeth, the dentist checks the child's head, neck, jaws, palate, gums and tongue for irregularities and abnormal growth.

Parents are advised about the child's need for fluoride, a healthy diet and proper hygiene, as well as preventable problems like thumb-sucking and reducing cavity-inducing foods.

"For example, many people don't realize that breast milk can cause cavities," Blain said. "When babies are breast fed too often at night, the milk tends to concentrate around the teeth and causes decay. The same thing happens when parents give their babies sweet juices at bedtime.

"We advise parents to wean their babies to water at night by the seventh month — when their teeth start coming in."

The UCLA School of Dentistry also recommends these tips for parents:

Schedule the first dental appointment near the child's first birthday. Most of the baby teeth will be in, and virtually all dental woes still are preventable at that point. The cost of the first visit ranges from about $30 to $45, Blain said.

If the family has a history of excessive cavities or orthodontic problems, make the appointment when the child's teeth start to appear, usually at seven months.

Don't worry about X-rays. The radiation released in modern dental X-ray machines is equivalent to what the child absorbs naturally in a week.

Commit to regular checkups. Routine teeth cleaning every six months is the best way to prevent tooth decay and other problems. The cost of follow-up exams runs $40 and higher, depending on the extent of the dental work, Blain said.

Practice good dental hygiene at home. Let your child see you brush and floss on a daily basis. Children learn by example and imitate what they see.

Training device made for golfers

By Barbara Lloyd
N.Y. Times News Service

Learning how to play golf comes largely with knowing how to hit the ball properly. While a teacher can explain how to swing a golf club, mastering the technique requires practice. A training device invented by Robert Fitch, a former golf coach at Indiana University, recently became available as a swing aid for use at home.

The device, the Coach, produced by Golf Training Systems Inc., controls the way a person swings a golf club by guiding movements through an imaginary arc.

Designed to develop the muscles needed for hitting a ball with power and accuracy, the Coach puts resistance into the swing motion. Instead of an instructor's telling a player how to hit a ball right, the machine lets a player feel what it's like.

"It is a fitness machine as well as a swing training device," said Trey Lee, the vice president of Golf Training Systems, in Atlanta. The company was founded last year by Wayne McDonald, a professional golfer in Indiana who had helped Fitch test the training concept in the late 1960s. McDonald subsequently obtained rights from Fitch, who retired in 1988. The company began marketing the device for home and commercial use late last year.

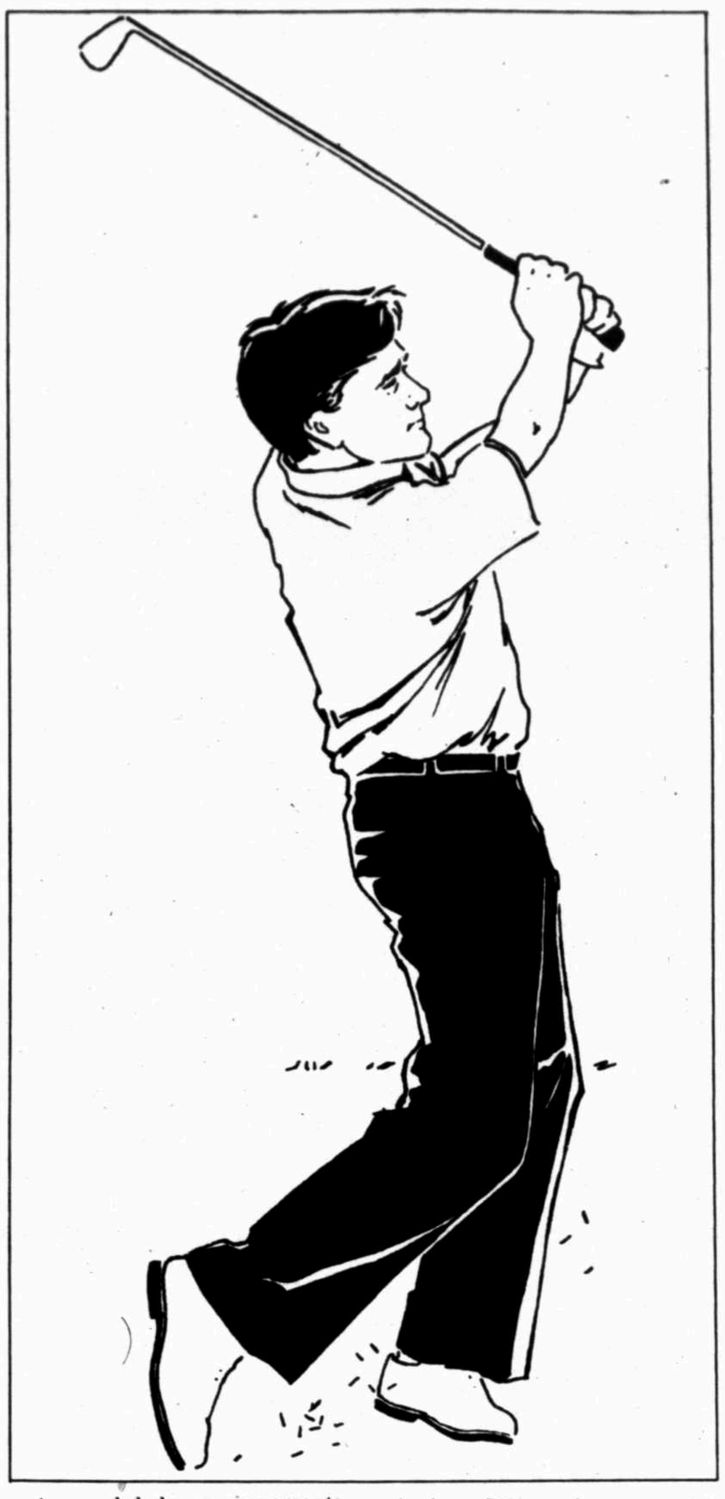

To practice with the Coach, a player stands on its platform and grasps a dummy golf club handle attached to a movable steel arm. The mechanical arm rotates in an arc to simulate the direction in which an actual club swings. Spring-loaded from within the Coach's vertical support, the steel arm offers resistance as the club handle is moved.

One of the company's partners is David Leadbetter, a prominent golf instructor in the United States. As the training director at the Lake Nona Golf Club in Orlando, Fla., Leadbetter uses the Coach to develop muscle memory in teaching his students to swing a golf club.

The big muscles in the torso control the swing, Leadbetter said, not the small muscles in the limbs. The Coach forces you to "get your body in charge of your hands and arms," Leadbetter said.

The Coach comes with an instruction manual that describes eight basic drills, including a warm-up exercise and various golf swing and balance movements. Also included is a training video and a copy of Leadbetter's teaching book, "The Golf Swing."

The company makes the Coach in two versions: for home use, priced at $489, and commercial use, at $689. It can be bought through a Professional Golf Association instructor, or by calling Golf Training Systems at (800) 772-3813.

Books perfect for giving on Father's Day

By Ron Berthel

NEW YORK (AP) — June is the month in which we celebrate brides and honor graduates, but we mustn't forget the guy who most likely footed those wedding bills and paid that tuition — dear ol' Dad.

The people who write and publish books certainly haven't forgotten him. With the approach of Father's Day, June 21, comes a number of new books with fatherhood as their theme.

After writing out all those checks to the catering hall and the college bursar, Dad would probably be the first one to tell you that "Money doesn't grow on trees." This is just one of dozens of wise observations, advice and other quotes, from Dad's mouth to the pages of "Papa-tudes" (Perigee) by Robert Masello.

A variety of thoughts on fatherhood from such oft-read sources as Shakespeare, the Bible and Emily Post can be found between the paisley endpapers of "One Swell Dad" (Viking Studio), Pat Ross' little volume that celebrates fathers with appropriate quotations and nostalgic artwork.

"This is for you, for the father I love," writes Adrian Rogers in one of the poems collected in "To My Father With Love" (Warner), edited by Susan Polis Schutz. In this paperback, sort of a 64-page Father's Day card, poems by Schutz and other writers can help grateful children of any age tell Pop how much he's loved and appreciated.

A dad's-eye view of fatherhood is offered by Rick Epstein in "Rookie Dad" (Hyperion). Through this light-hearted chronicle of his "Adventures in Fatherhood," Epstein, the father of three girls, offers advice and a sense of familiarity for fathers, grandfathers and fathers-to-be.

For men who want to sharpen their fathering skills, "Finding Time for Fathering" (Fawcett Columbine) offers a guide to the father-child relationship, from prebirth to adolescence. Authors Mitch Golant and Susan Golant, parents of two grown daughters, examine the father's role in areas of his offspring's life including discipline, self-esteem, and social and intellectual development.

Men write about the father-son relationship in two new anthologies, both with the same title, "Fathers and Sons." The volume edited by David Seybold (published by Grove Weidenfeld) includes fiction and nonfiction; the collecttion edited by John Hoyland (published by Serpent's Tail) has reminiscences written especially for this paperback original.

And daughters get equal time in "Women and Their Fathers" (Delacorte), Victoria Secunda's study of the father-daughter relationship and its effects on the formation of a woman's sense of identity, on our culture, and on government policies regarding women and families.

It also examines how a little girl's future romantic relationships and choices are influenced by Dad — "the first man in your life."

DEAR ABBY

Pet owner disgusted about rejection of dog

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been in the United States a little over a year, and I cannot understand the hypocrisy of you Americans.

Van Buren

I am not here by choice — my husband was transferred here for two years by his company. We are both French-born.

Before arriving here, I read up on America, and was surprised to learn that you spend billions of dollars a year on your pets, which made me very happy because we had to bring our dog with us.

Since I've been here, I've discovered that Americans actually hate dogs! Why, then, do you spend so much money on them? While traveling with my husband, we have not been able to eat in any restaurant because they won't let our dog in with us, and we can't leave him in the car because a locked car gets too hot.

I decided to go into one of your supermarkets to buy food to eat in the car, but they wouldn't let me in with our dog. Then to make matters worse, one of your states (North Carolina, to be exact) would not let us stay in a motel with our dog. We had to sleep in our car! People we met from that state told us they had smuggled their dog into a motel room. (How do you smuggle in a full-grown standard poodle?)

I was told to write to you because many Americans read your column, but I'm withholding my name, because my husband's company might not appreciate my outspokenness. — NAME WITHHELD

DEAR NAME WITHHELD: The question you raise is basically one of cultural difference. Dogs are allowed in more public places in France than in the United States. You're wasting your energy trying to fight it.

A full-grown standard poodle is approximately the size of a small pony, so it's understandable why its difficult to accommodate dogs of that size. However, some American motels welcome pets. The AAA Auto Club can tell you which motels accept pets. They are listed in AAA tour books — available at local offices.

The Quaker Oats Co. also offers a handy directory titled "Touring With Towser" (cost: $3). Send check or money order to: Quaker Professional Services, 585 Hawthorne Court, Galesburg, Ill. 61401.

DEAR ABBY: Ever since TV stations began showing that ad for a security system designed for elderly people who live alone and may need assistance because they have "fallen and can't get up," there has been a veritable deluge of jokes based on that theme.

Recently, the cable comedy channel ran a whole string of excerpts from various comedians' routines that treated this misfortune as a joke — and everyone laughed and laughed! I am simply astounded at the ignorance and insensitivity of these so-called "comics."

A few weeks ago, my father, who is in his 80s and a semi-invalid, fell in the bathtub and couldn't pull himself up. My mother, who is also in her 80s and very frail, couldn't help him. Finally, they called 911 for help. The paramedics who came were very compassionate and tactful, but can you imagine how embarrassing it must have been for a once strong and independent man to be reduced to this?

One day, when these thoughtless young people are no longer young and strong, something like this may happen to them. I hope they remember their words, and have the decency to be ashamed.

You can sign me ... T'AINT FUNNY, MC GEE, IN PHOENIX

DEAR T'AINT FUNNY: Goethe, German poet, novelist and playwright (1749-1832), said, "Men show their characters in nothing more clearly than in what they think laughable."

No hassles, no exams at unusual academy

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — The Academy of Lifelong Learning is a student's dream. There are no hassles, no exams and homework is optional.

"We've had no smoking in the bathrooms, no expulsions, no parental visits," said Robert Robinson, assistant coordinator.

The academy opened 12 years ago to provide college-level courses in a relaxed atmosphere, where your neighbor could be your instructor.

Everybody pays, even instructors, and everyone is referred to as a member. The only prerequisite for membership is to be at least 55 years old and want to learn.

"You can't flunk. You get as much as you are willing to expend in your own intellect," said Roxana C. Arsht, 76, a retired Family Court judge who's been a student since 1983.

'You can't flunk. You get as much as you are willing to expend in your own intellect.'

— Roxana C. Arsht
retired Family Court judge and student

"We can say what we think. We're less inhibited in exploring ideas. ... We want to learn. We're alive and we don't want to get stale."

Members "have survived the middle age of life and instead of going to a nursing home ... these people have decided to pursue learning and cultural aggrandizement in their later years of life," Robinson said.

"In other words, they refuse to grow old," said Bertha Tuminello, staff assistant, who has worked with the academy since its inception.

The academy is patterned in part on the Institute for Retired Professionals at the New School in New York City and has been a catalyst for similar programs, like one at the Rochester Institute of Technology in Rochester, N.Y.

More than 100 classes are offered once a week, covering a range of topics, from the chamber music of Beethoven to world mythologies and understanding the legal system.

The members set criteria for curriculum and faculty. The academy opened with 90 members and now has 1,400 in Wilmington and 100 in the southern Delaware community of Milford.

The academy has a chamber music group and a chorus. Members often take trips to Washington and New York for plays and other cultural events, and some have taken group trips to Europe.

The instructors are doctors, retired scientists, and schoolteachers, to name a few. The students run the gamut from bank executives and college professors to librarians and office administrators.

"I just enjoy using my mind. I retired six years ago and I've been coming here ever since," said Helen Carnell, 72, a retired newspaper librarian.

She and Judy Ehrenfeld were among members testing their writing skills in a haiku class. The course description says "no critiques, only support and camaraderie."

"I come because the interaction among the people is very stimulating. It adds structure and interest to my life," Mrs. Ehrenfeld, 75, said.

Their instructor, Fred Echelmeyer, 81, also teaches ethnic folk dancing with his wife Eleanor, 80.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Myths can influence beliefs about aging

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: I know how a belief, even if it's not true, can still infect and dominate a human life. What are some of the myths that younger persons have concerning life after 60 plus?

Edwards

ANSWER: Myth #1: Old age is like a desert — dry, lifeless and dangerous — something to be feared.

Regarding Myth #1, old age is feared primarily by those who have not yet experienced it. The unknown has frightened humans since the dawn of time. We are still frightened by what we do not know. Too often, we carry this fear with us into old age and it dampens our ability to live this time period of our lives to the fullest.

Myth #2: When you get old, you go senile and loose your mind.

Regarding Myth #2, it's true that senility is found principally among older persons. However, given the right circumstances, it can affect young people as well. Further, as a group, older people have no more incidence of mental illness than do other groups. Given the amount of stress and change that the elderly have endured, they are probably healthier in mind than many others of various ages.

Myth #3: Aging does not begin until after age 60 plus. Then it is a rapid descent into uselessness.

Regarding Myth #3, this is almost comical. Aging begins at birth, although as adults we seem to mark it as beginning in our 20's. Fact of the matter, evidence gathered by medical science speaks of aging as a gradual process with many reversible and avoidable illnesses. Rapid descents are connected with sudden major upsets, as in any other age group.

Myth #4: Older persons are monopolizing all the medical care and other benefits like single-family housing. Even worse, older people don't even need all of this because they have so much money around.

Myth #4 is a real bond of contention and is dividing the people of our country. Today's elderly have paid into Social Security as a part of their taxes for over 50 years. They've bought and paid for their own homes. Yet in counties throughout America, many older person's incomes rest only slightly above what is considered "poverty level." So, is the problem with the elderly or with the way the business of medicine is conducted? There are strong opinions that the problem is in the Medicare system and in the management of the health industry in general. Or, is ownership of private property interfering with the common good? If so, by whom? If the elderly can live affluently on a poverty level income, then are others being grossly overpaid?

There are two truths in all of this: first, there are major problems, which will require the cooperation of everyone concerned to reach solutions; second, anger, fear, envy and denial will not solve anything. In essence, we've got to do a better job of learning how to live together and solving problems both as a nation and as wise family communities.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and consultant for the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

Dr. Henry F. Page

Spring — that glorious time of the year when one yearns to lie in the sun when there is work to be done, harkening to both the sonority of grass growing and the gentle frying sound of photoaging. Photoaging is that insidious culprit hidden in sunlight that causes skin changes such as dryness, wrinkles, blemishes, benign tumors and skin cancers.

Page

Today's focus centers on the worst of the latter group, namely melanomas. These are flat, varicolored (black, brown, red, white), irregularly bordered, small skin blemishes occurring predominantly on the sun-exposed areas of the body. Aside from frequent itching, they are symptom free. According to a recent release from the M.D. Anderson Cancer Center, about 32,000 new cases will occur in the U.S. in 1992 — a 75 percent increase in incidence since 1973.

If recognized early enough, the cure rate by surgical extirpation is about 100 percent, but if the lesions are allowed to deepen and spread, the five year survival rate falls to 86 percent for women and 76 percent for men because of metastases to all body areas with deadly effect.

It is interesting to note that Hispanics and blacks rarely develop this condition. Since with the present state of the art it remains difficult to change one's forebears, the main treatment consists of prevention, commencing with the avoidance of excessive sunlight even in childhood and subsequently through one's eighth decade. Chemical sunscreens with a "Sun Protective Factor" (SPF) of 15 or greater, plus the wearing of hats and sunglasses attenuate but do not eliminate the effects of exposure.

Recently, it became fashionable to blame much of the problem on a conjectured hole in the ozone layer, but alas, recent knowledge indicates this to be a minor factor if at all. Therefore, for better or fore worse, prevention rests on one's own shoulders. Don't emulate the Englishman going out in the mid-day sun and don't attempt to indulge an avant-garde lifestyle by trying to be something nude under the sun.

Henry F. Page, M.D., F.A.C.P., is health and safety consultant to Midland Presbyterian Homes.

Death of balanced-budget plan disappoints Texans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texans at the forefront of the battle to push a balanced-budget constitutional amendment through the House reacted Thursday with disappointment to its death.

"Obviously, I'm disappointed," said Rep. Charles Stenholm, architect of the leading plan considered by the House. "The big losers were our children and grandchildren today."

The Stamford Democrat's plan — touted by supporters as the last, best hope for reigning in an ever-spiraling federal deficit — was voted down 280-153. A two-thirds majority, or 290 votes, was necessary for passage.

The Texas delegation was firmly united behind Stenholm's amendment, with only five of the 27 members voting against it.

Thursday's vote capped weeks of lobbying both in the halls of Congress and outside, with the House leadership working hard to defeat the amendment. Special interests as diverse as the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the AFL-CIO also weighed in against the plan.

"This was a banner day for special interest politics and politics as usual. The lobbies and the leadership put together a potent team, and unfortunately the children who will pay this deficit didn't have a voice in the process," said Rep. Chet Edwards, D-Waco.

"Lobbyists were littering the hallways over the past week and the leadership exerted some pretty strong arm-twisting," he said.

Edwards and Rep. Pete Geren, D-Fort Worth, were two of the lawmakers known as the Gang of Six who helped Stenholm renew debate about the amendment and push it to the floor for a vote.

Democratic leaders fighting the measure lobbied it so intensely that 11 lawmakers, all Democrats, who sponsored the amendment ended up voting against it.

"The pressure was tremendous and there were just too many people already running for committee changes next year — and this happened to come in the middle of a lot of those campaigns," said Geren.

Despite the loss, the three Texans said the debate had served to bring the deficit to the attention of the American people and re-emphasize for lawmakers the need to tighten the purse strings.

"I don't think the American people are going to let Congress forget about a $4 trillion debt," Edwards said.

The defeated measure would have required a balanced budget as soon as 1998, a contrast to red ink that now runs to about $400 billion a year. But opponents noted that it did nothing to reduce the deficit, simply leaving decisions about tax increases and spending cuts for the future.

Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, who sponsored a differing version that would have required three-fifths majorities in Congress for tax increases, also decried failure of passage. His amendment was voted down 227-200.

"I'm disappointed overall," he said. "The problem on the next go-around is if it's the next Congress, it's two, three 400 billion more debt."

Stenholm, a leader of conservative Democrats, said he wouldn't bring the amendment up again this year. "We'll certainly take a look at it for another session if things haven't changed," he said.

"The burden now is on those who said we didn't need it," he said. "The burden is on them to come up with their plan; and certainly, if it's a good one, we'll work as hard for their plan as for the amendment today."

Abortion foes announce protests to coincide with GOP convention

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston-based anti-abortion group "Rescue America" said Thursday its summer protest activities would climax with a "major offensive" during the Republican National Convention in August.

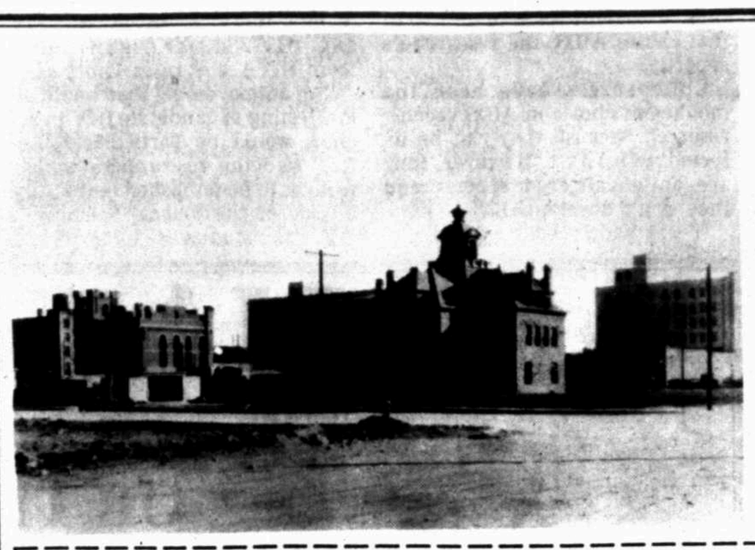

"The Republican Convention in Houston will be the last, and indications are, the strongest campaign against the abortion industry during the summer," the group said in a statement promoting planned seminars and daily rallies for the week beginning Aug. 15.

Similar activities are planned for Houston by another anti-abortion organization, Operation Rescue, based in California, Rescue America said.

"This offensive will be unique in that for the first time two large resuce groups will be working in the same city," Don Treshman, director of Rescue America, said.

"The strategy is to create two separate fronts and thus make it more difficult for the police department and the pro-aborts to monitor our plans."

The Republican Convention is scheduled for Aug. 17-20 at the Houston Astrodome.

N.M. governor could allow WIPP to open, official says

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — Energy Secretary James Watkins said Thursday it could be up to New Mexico Gov. Bruce King to clear the way for the opening of the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant.

Watkins said that by issuing an interim permit to the Department of Energy that would allow it to ship mixed waste to the still-unopened nuclear waste repository, King could help the agency avoid two years of delay and staff cutbacks.

Watkins' comments came during a whirlwind tour of the $1 billion plant with governors from four of 10 states that would ship their waste to the plant.

He was joined by Nevada Gov. Bob Miller, Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus, Colorado Gov. Roy Romer and King.

The state of New Mexico has said the Department of Energy must have a mixed waste permit to open the plant, which was scheduled to begin accepting waste for testing in October 1991.

But Watkins urged King to grant WIPP an interim permit.

"We believe again the governor of this state has it within his authority to grant an interim permit," Watkins said in a speech to WIPP employees. "We believe it is up to him."

King angrily refused to respond to Watkins' comments, saying he would hold a news conference in Santa Fe today to answer reporters' questions then.

But he did say during the joint news conference: "Once we have determined that it (WIPP) is not detrimental to the well-being of New Mexico, we should get on with the storage."

The Energy Department proposes to bury plutonium-contaminated waste from the nation's defense industry 2,150 feet below the surface in salt beds 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad.

But a federal judge ruled the DOE must have congressional approval before it can begin shipping waste to WIPP. The Senate has passed a bill but several bills are pending in the House.

Watkins said legislation that would remove the WIPP site land from public access and transfer it to the Energy Department may be passed by the House within two weeks.

"If the bill is a roadblock to the opening of the facility, I have no choice but to begin downsizing this facility," Watkins said. "This is not a threat; this is reality."

The plant, which costs $14 million a month, has run up a $100 million tab just since October, he said Thursday.

Meanwhile, negotiations on the House bill have gone on behind closed doors, making it difficult to determine what sort of bill will emerge.

■ Quayle continues attacks on 'cultural elite'

WASHINGTON — Vice President Quayle took his campaign for traditional values to the nation's largest anti-abortion group Thursday.

Greeted by chants of "Four More Years!" and posters that declared, "Murphy Brown Doesn't Speak for Me," Quayle asserted that he would press his case even though the "cultural elites" in "some of our newsrooms, sitcom studios and faculty lounges" may not like it. "We're going to speak up for life," he declared. "We're going to speak up for family values. We're going to speak up for America."

In a series of hot-blooded speeches in recent weeks, Quayle has fired the opening round in a new politics of values, 1992-style, which many conservatives hope will revitalize the ailing Republican coalition. "It resonates with the core beliefs of most Americans," argues Rep. Newt Gingrich, the Republican whip in the House and one of several conservatives pushing the emphasis on values. "Think of it as a Reader's Digest versus the Village Voice campaign."

■ House reports drop in speaking fee profits

WASHINGTON — Members of the House of Representatives reported a dramatic decline in the money they raised from speaking engagements last year after a new rule took effect that prevents the lawmakers from keeping the income.

The annual disclosure reports made public Thursday showed that they collected about $1.2 million in speaking fees last year, which were turned over to charities. In 1990, the members took in $5.6 million, and in 1989 they collected a record of more than $6 million.

By donating the fees to charity, members are able to generate good will in their districts and also deduct the contributions from their taxes, but the latest disclosures made clear that even their charitable donations had plummeted.

■ Senate panel approves jobless aid plan

WASHINGTON — The Senate Finance Committee voted Thursday to offer the long-term unemployed automatically renewable benefits, but the measure fell short of the sweeping changes in the unemployment insurance system passed by the House on Tuesday.

By giving the states wide discretion in deciding whether to grant the benefits, the Senate version could attract some Republican support and offer President Bush an opportunity to avert a politically difficult veto. Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, the ranking Republican on the committee, said he supported the measure, although other Republican members criticized its financing provisions.

Bush would like to enact another one-time extension of unemployment benefits, which are scheduled to lapse July 4, for at least 13 more weeks. But the House voted 261 to 150 on Tuesday night to replace the current system of irregular extensions of benefits with one that would automatically grant at least 13 extra weeks of benefits in states where the unemployment rate was 6 percent or higher.

■ Details about Vareen's accidents emerge

LOS ANGELES — Entertainer Ben Vereen was walking in the middle of Pacific Coast Highway — apparently going home from his manager's house — when he was struck by a car and thrown 130 feet, authorities said Thursday.

Vereen, who was hit by Grammy-winning record producer David Foster, remained in critical condition at the University of California, Los Angeles, Medical Center.

Hospital officials said he was still too weak to talk to sheriff's deputies about that accident and possible links to a crash he had in his car six hours earlier.

Six hours before the accident, Vereen was driving his new $78,000 Corvette when it hit a tree in front of a beachfront mansion owned by director Blake Edwards and his wife, actress Julie Andrews.

"He said he only had four hours sleep in the previous 48," said Evans. "It was typical of a fall-asleep: He had to go through about 40 feet of ground cover and shrubs to hit this tree. It was big enough that he couldn't mow it down."

Different monkey could speed AIDs research

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers at the University of Washington in Seattle have found a monkey more plentiful than ones now used to test AIDS vaccines, and that could accelerate research, they said Thursday.

The monkey, called the pigtail macaque, has an immune system very similar to that in humans and can be infected with HIV-1, the most prevalent form of the virus that causes AIDS, the researchers reported.

Chimpanzees have been the monkey of choice in AIDS vaccine research because they can be infected with HIV-1. However, they are an endangered species and they don't develop AIDS.

It was widely believed the gibbon ape, also endangered, was the only other nonhuman primate susceptible to HIV-1. Rhesus monkeys can be infected with the simian immunodeficiency virus, SIV, and HIV-2, both closely related to HIV-1.

Pigtail macaques infected with SIV or HIV-2 have been used to study AIDS, which "has contributed greatly to our understanding" of how the virus works. But SIV and HIV-2 differ significantly from HIV-1, the researchers said.

"An animal model that would allow testing of candidate HIV-1 vaccines would be particularly useful," said the researchers, whose study is to be published in the July 3 issue of the journal Science.

Further studies are underway to determine, among other things, the dose of HIV-1 needed to challenge a candidate vaccine.

"If it (the finding) continues to pan out as it has, it will expedite things. With more animals, more things could be studied faster than if the chimp is the only animal that can be tested," said Michael Agy, a researcher at the university's Regional Primate Research Center and an author of the study.

However, researchers said it was too soon to tell whether the pigtail macaques develop AIDS. Ordinarily it takes a year or more for the disease to appear, and the test macaques were infected less than a year ago, they said.

Douglas Bowden, director of the research center, said the pigtail macaque reproduces easily in captivity. About 200 to 300 are produced in breeding colonies in the United States each year, he said, but he estimated that 500 to 1,000 a year would be needed to meet AIDS research demands.

He said plans are being developed to establish more breeding facilities. It would take at least two years to produce the number of test macaques needed, he said.

"Given there are literally dozens of potential vaccine constructs, it just hasn't been possible to test them" because the supply of chimps is so limited, he said.

Fewer than 150 chimps are being used in AIDS research now, and they are far more expensive than pigtail macaques.

Astronomers find evidence of young planetary systems

All the stars are too young to have planets with life, at least by the standards that life took to evolve on Earth.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (NYT) — Evidence that planetary systems resembling the young solar system may exist in nearby parts of our galaxy was reported Thursday by four teams of astronomers working independently.

Three of the research papers they presented at a meeting of the American Astronomical Society focused on a star called beta Pictoris, which is visible from the Southern Hemisphere. All three investigations found chemical substances in a disk around the star identical to substances believed to have made up a similar disk of dust and debris that once encircled the Sun.

A fourth study found evidence of gaps in the dust disks surrounding eight other, more distant stars. These stars, all of them relatively young, are in a giant gas cloud that spans the constellations Taurus and Auriga.

Such ring-like gaps in circumstellar disks are probably created by small companion stars or planets whose gravitational attraction sweeps up the dust along a circular path around the disk. Similar gaps on a much smaller scale were swept clean in the disk surrounding the planet Saturn by small orbiting moons and moonlets, thus creating the planet's familiar rings.

All the stars are too young to have planets with life, at least by the standards that life took to evolve on Earth. But the findings are expected to strengthen the argument of those who contend that planetary systems resembling Earth's may be reasonably abundant in the universe.

The planets of the solar system are believed to have created gaps in a huge solar disk that existed when the Sun was young. Later, as more and more of the dust and fragments in the disk was trapped by the gravitational fields of the new planets, the disk around the Sun disappeared almost completely.

The presence of a gap in a circumstellar disk girdling another star is therefore regarded as evidence that objects whose size may range from a cluster of comets or baby planets to a small companion star may be orbiting the central star.

Compared with planets, even small stars are relatively easy to detect by their radiation. In cases where no star is found in a gap in a circumstellar disk, it is possible to infer that one of more planets may be there instead, the astronomers believe.

All the stars in the four studies are much too distant from Earth to detect planets directly, even using the largest telescopes. No planet has ever been detected orbiting any Sun-like star, despite some false alarms. Last January astronomers from the National Radio Astronomy Observatories as Arecibo, P.R., and Soccoro, N.M., reported evidence that several planets may be circling the dense neutron star remnant of a supernova explosion, but the chances that planets of such a bizarre star could resemble Earth are small.

By contrast, beta Pictoris and the Taurus-Auriga stars are all normal stars of about the same mass and type as the Sun.

Tarpley may play

DALLAS (AP) — Roy Tarpley's turbulent career may be on the rise again, according to a newspaper report Thursday that said the troubled player is likely headed overseas to play for the Greek team Aris.

Tarpley

George Andrews, Tarpley's agent, told The Dallas Morning News the $800,000 deal won't be finalized until he and the former Dallas Mavericks' star visit Greece later this month.

"Nothing is signed or binding, and there are still a lot of things to work out," Andrews said. "But this has emerged as the most advanced offer. It's something we're seriously considering, and I'm encouraged that something will happen."

NHL loses boss

TORONTO (AP) — John Ziegler is leaving as NHL president after 15 years of running a league that has been ridiculed for its failures rather than praised for any success.

Ziegler

Alan Eagleson, former executive director of the NHL Players' Association and now Hockey Canada's chief international negotiator, said Thursday he had spoken with Ziegler and that the league boss had told him "he's relieved to be going, and he's going with dignity."

NHL governors will hold a conference call Friday to ratify terms of a settlement agreement, a league governor said.

'We're mad at ourselves'

After blowing Game 4, the Bulls are in a blazing rage

By Bill Barnard
AP Basketball Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — The Chicago Bulls believe they should be back home, NBA championship trophy safely in hand, preparing for a victory celebration.

Instead, they're still in Portland, locked in a tie in the NBA Finals and facing yet another critical Game 5.

They're plenty upset about it, too.

"We're (ticked) off," coach Phil Jackson said Thursday. "We've been in a position to win the two games we lost, but we didn't execute down the stretch."

"We're mad at ourselves that we gave the game away," forward Horace Grant said. "But we're the champions and we're not about to start doubting ourselves."

The Bulls led 77-70 with nine minutes left in Game 4 Wednesday night, but scored three points in the final 2:35 and lost to Portland 93-88.

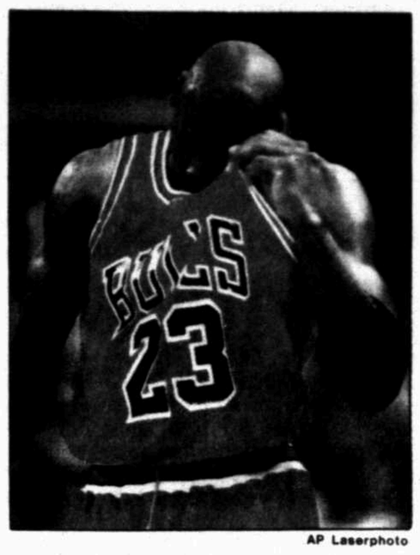

It was the third straight time in this year's playoffs that Chicago lost Game 4. Previously, the Bulls were tied 2-2 with Cleveland and New York, and in both of those cases, Chicago won Game 5 at home and went on to capture the series.

On Friday night, however, Game 5 will be at Memorial Coliseum.

"We haven't played well in Game 4s, but we've been able to focus on winning Game 5s," Michael Jordan said. "It won't be easy because we're on the road this time. We have to take the attitude that we're upset with losing two games we should've won and use that attitude the right way. The crowd will be trying to inspire them, so we have to inspire

Pickers end run for Big Spring

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Gilbert Olivares hit a two-run homer and scored twice Thursday to send defending Class 4A champion Robstown to the finals for the third consecutive year with an 8-4 victory over Big Spring.

Olivares

The Cotton Pickers, who reached the 44th annual University Interscholastic League tournament for the fifth time in six years, survived a late Steers rally to set up a championship meeting Friday with Bridge City.

Robstown lost its first finals appearance in 1990, but returned last year and defeated West Mesquite 7-6. They were semifinal losers in 1987 and 1988.

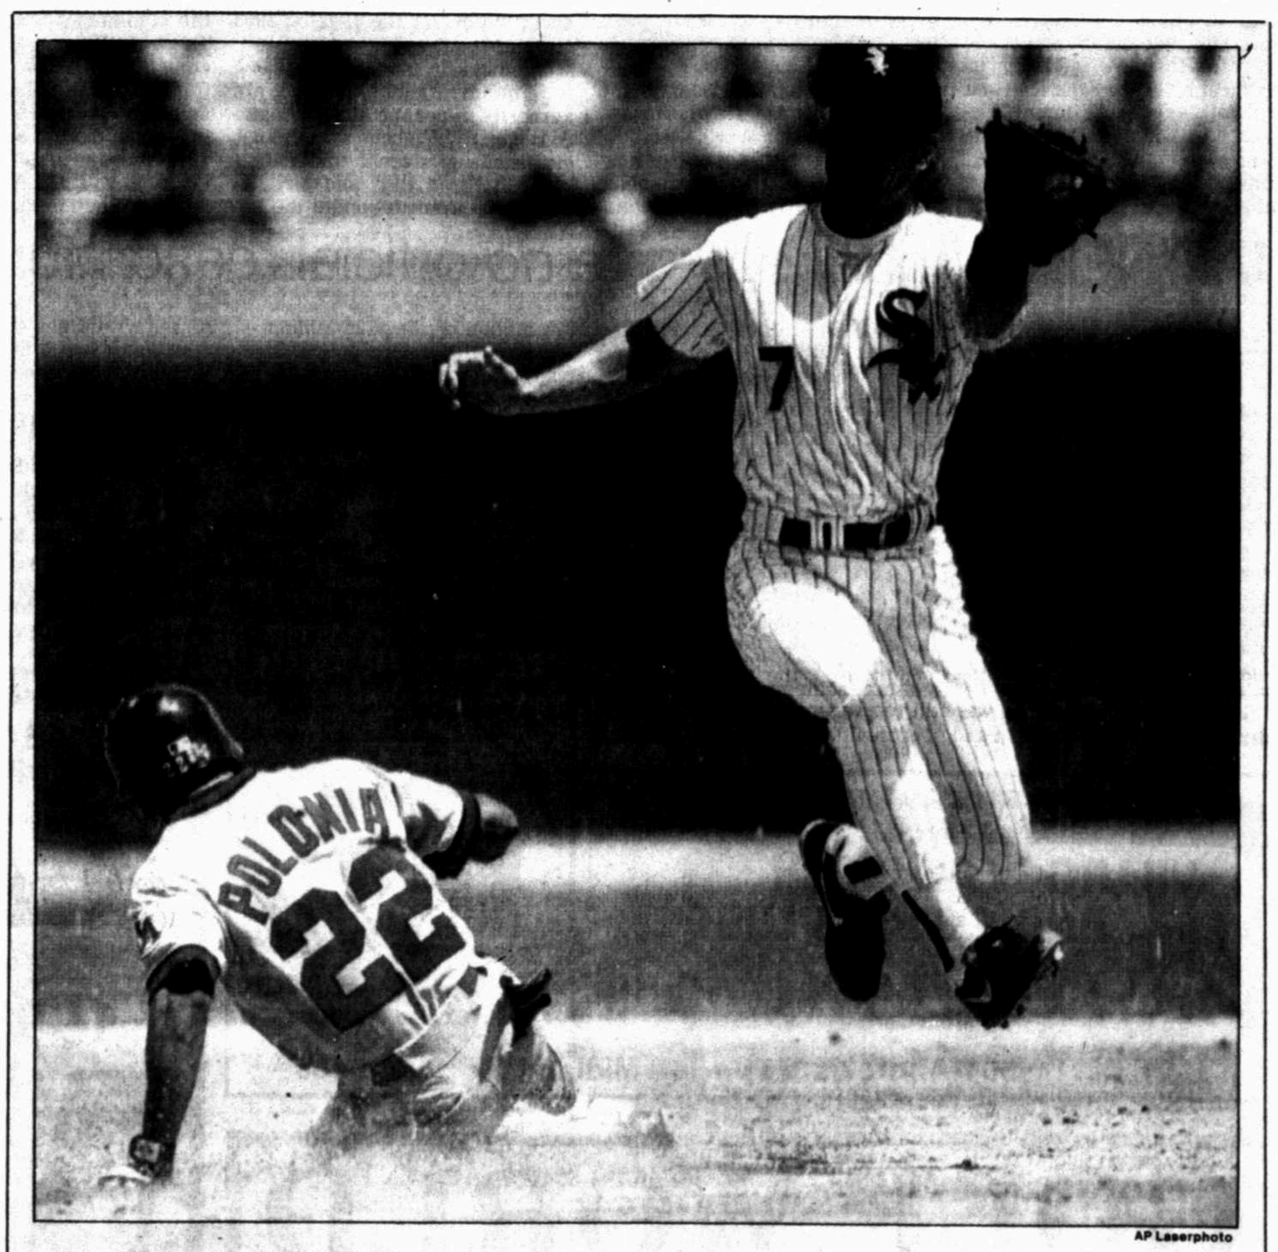

Big Spring, which ended the year 15-14-1, was making its tournament debut.

Ignacio Gonzalez allowed only two hits in five innings to improve to 12-1. Big Spring starter Gerald Cobos fell to 4-5.

The Steers did not go quietly, though. They scored all four runs in the seventh inning including two with two outs.

Big Spring touched reliever Rolando Huape for five hits and were aided by one error in the seventh. The game ended with runners on first and third.

Baseball commissioner Faye Vincent called the Mariners' sale "a happy result."

■ The Cleveland Indians cast the lone dissenting vote in Seattle's purchase by a Japanese-led group.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Major league owners on Thursday approved the sale of the Seattle Mariners to a Japanese-led group by a 25-1 margin with only the Cleveland Indians voting against the deal.

Although the group buying the club from Jeff Smulyan is headed by Hiroshi Yamauchi, president of Nintendo Co. Ltd. of Kyoto, the team will be controlled by John Ellis, the outgoing chairman of Puget Sound Power & Light Co.

"As much as anything, this is a vote of confidence in Seattle as a major league city," Ellis said in a statement released in Seattle. "Now we all have the challenge of making this venture succeed."

The Mariners become the first major league team in the United States with foreign owners having the largest share. The NHL's Quebec Nordiques are 15 percent-owned by Japanese investors and hockey's Tampa Bay Lightning, which begins play this fall, has an unconfirmed percentage of Japanese ownership, by some reports up to 60 percent.

Approval of the Mariners' sale was expected after the major league ownership committee recommended the deal Tues-

Chaps bolt into second

Staff report

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Midland College mounted a third-round surge that produced the day's best round and the Chaparrals vaulted five places in the team standings to hover just two strokes behind tournament leader Florida Community College at the National Junior College golf championships here Thursday.

The Chaps, looking for their first-ever national golf championship, stood in seventh place in the team standings following both the first and second rounds over the par 72 McCormick Ranch Country Club links. But Thursday's 296-stroke effort gives MC an 893 total, just two shots off Florida's 891 total and a stoke ahead of Odessa College (894), which held down second place entering the third round.

With George Wallace College of Hanceville, Ala. sitting just seven strokes off the pace at 898 and early tourney favorite and host team Scottsdale Community College at 899, today's fourth and final round stacks up as a humdinger.

"We've never been within two strokes of the lead entering the final round," MC golf coach Delnor Poss

Blyleven sharp again against Sox

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Bert Blyleven, coming off shoulder surgery that sidelined him for all of last season, offers his 281st career victory as another answer to those that doubted he could make it back.

"Because of my age, a lot of people said I couldn't comeback, but they don't know Bert Blyleven," he said. "My goal is to be consistent everytime out. That's the driving force."

Blyleven allowed only four hits in six innings Thursday as the California Angels snapped their six-game losing streak with a 4-0 victory against Chicago. The White Sox lost for the first time in five games.

Count White Sox skipper Gene Lamont among those surprised by Blyleven.

"He was popping the ball decently, especially since he's coming up in age and with his arm problems," Lamont said of the 41-year-old.

Luis Polonia scored twice and Lee Stevens hit a two-run double to give the Angels all the offense they needed, and Joe Grahe worked the final 2 2-3 innings to pick up his first major league save.

"The Dutchmaster was outstanding again," said Angels interim manager John Wathan. "That is three good starts. He is tremendous. If you put a name next to the word pitcher, it is Bert."

AL Roundup

Blue Jays 4, Red Sox 0

TORONTO — Jack Morris outpitched Roger Clemens and the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Boston ace for the first time in 10 decisions, stopping the Red Sox.

Hot-hitting Joe Carter, Dave Winfield and Pat Borders homered to account for all the runs off Clemens (9-4). Morris (7-3) won with a four-hitter and his first shutout since Game 7 of the World Series last October.

Clemens had won nine straight decisions against the Blue Jays since June 4, 1988.

Orioles 7, Tigers 5

DETROIT — Joe Orsulak's first homer of the season capped a four-run first inning and led the Baltimore Orioles over the Detroit Tigers.

Baltimore won for the fourth time in five games. Rob Deer homered onto the left-field roof and Travis Fryman also connected for the Tigers, who have lost four of five.

The Orioles pounded Bill Gullickson (7-4) for six runs on seven hits in seven innings. Gullickson, averaging just 1½ walks per nine innings, walked four.

Diablos nip Angels, 1-0

Staff report

EL PASO — The Diablos got a lone run in the bottom of the seventh inning and Rafael Novoa and Jim Czajkowski combined on a three hitter as El Paso captured a 1-0 win over the Midland Angels Thursday night.

The loss was the fourth straight here for the Angels, who dropped to 10½ games behind the Diablos in the Texas League West with just eight games left to play in the first half.

Mark Holzemer was victimized by the defeat. Holzemer went the distance for Midland, scattering eight hits in eight innings before falling to 2-5 thanks to a sacrifice fly by Troy O'Leary in the seventh inning that plated Edgar Caceras.

Novoa lifted his record to 4-2, allowing just three hits in eight complete innings.

Czajkowski gave up two hits in the ninth before registering his fifth save.

El Paso's run came after Bo Dodson led off the seventh with a single to shallow left field and Caceras and Charlie Hilliman followed with bunt single that loaded the bases.

Vincent scolds owners for their bickering

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Commissioner Fay Vincent responded to an attempt to strip him of authority in labor relations by admonishing owners Thursday to stop their "discord and bickering and relatively undistinguished behavior."

In a speech to owners that Vincent called a major event, he tried to heal wounds opened by an attempted power grab last week by American League members of the Player Relations Committee.

Although the speech was made in private during the joint quarterly meeting of the American and National leagues, Vincent discussed it at length during a news conference in which he scolded owners with the most forceful public language of his three-year administration.

"I guess the tenor of my talk," Vincent said, "was to tell baseball owners that they are in serious adversity, some of which is of their own making, some of which is not; that baseball has no chance without cohesion and unity, and it seemed to me ownership has the most at stake; that I was committed to being a useful participant in the process but was not alone, and without their support, and especially without their unity, progress to address the serious problems in baseball was not going to be achieved."

PRC chairman Bud Selig of the Milwaukee Brewers and Chicago White Sox owner Jerry Reinsdorf asked Vincent last Thursday in Chicago to relinquish the commissioner's authority in labor matters, a move that also was supported by Minnesota Twins owner Carl Pohlad. However, the move was rebuffed by two NL members of the PRC, Fred Wilpon of the New York Mets and John McMullen of the Houston Astros.

Selig hired former New York City transit head Richard Ravitch last fall as management's chief negotiator, and Ravitch suggested the change as a way to strengthen the owners' side in the next round of labor negotiations, which will occur following the 1992 or 1993 season.

"I obviously made clear that I have no intention of changing my authority under the Major League Agreement," Vincent said. "But I also made it clear I understand baseball has a PRC and Mr. Ravitch was hired to handle the negotiations. I've said many times I know my role, but I also know under the Major League Agreement I have authority and I am not going to surrender it during my commissionership."

Under the Major League Agreement, the commissioner may act in the best interests of baseball, a clause that gives him the power to intervene in any dispute.

"I don't think it was personal," Vincent said. "I think there is in baseball a major concern about the commissioner's role in labor. There is concern the commissioner, whoever he is, will do something out of the blue like a bolt of lightning in the night and that that could disrupt an orderly, seriously managed labor negotiations. I can tell you, as I can tell owners, I do not function that way."

MARINERS: Tribe reps give no official reason for vote

day by a 7-0 vote. The deal needed 11 of 14 votes in the American League and seven of 12 in the National League, and both totals were easily achieved Wednesday when the leagues voted unofficially in separate meetings.

"What happened, in my view, is a happy result," commissioner Fay Vincent said.

Indians spokesman Bob DiBiasio said he could not comment on the team's negative vote because he had not yet spoken with Cleveland chairman Richard Jacobs or Indians president Rick Bay. Other baseball officials speculated the Indians voted against the deal because they felt they had not been given sufficient time to study the documents.

As in most important baseball issues, the sale was put to a formal vote only after it already had been decided in informal talks.

"There was no discussion," Vincent said. "The discussion, to the extent it occured, took place within the leagues. The Seattle event on our agenda did not occupy a substantial amount of time, which doesn't suggest it's not important."

Although Yamauchi is financing $75 million of the $125 million — of which $106 million goes to Smulyan's group and the remainder toward operations — he agreed during the negotiations to lower his percentage of the voting stock from 60 percent to below 50 percent.

Ellis increased his investment substantially from the $10,000 envisioned in the original plan, and was given complete authority to run the team, with Yamauchi's power limited to decisions involving the club's relocation or sale, or the dissolution of the partnership buying the team.

"To call it the Nintendo Group (unfairly) defines the issue," Vincent said. "It is a Seattle group of investors with enormous strength locally. It is a group of wise, successful and powerful people, who made a judgment they have the capacity, talent and financial clout to make this franchise successful."

The local group includes Christopher Larson of Microsoft Corp. and John McCaw, a director of McCaw Communications Cos. Frank Shrontz, chairman of The Boeing Co., is making a token investment.

Women officiate USBL game

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Two women wore striped shirts and whistles at the USBL game between Atlanta and Philadelphia on Thurday night, the first time an all-female officiating crew has handled a men's professional basketball game.

Sandhi Ortiz DelValle of East Orange, N.J., and Bonita Spence of Edison, N.J., were the groundbreaking pair.

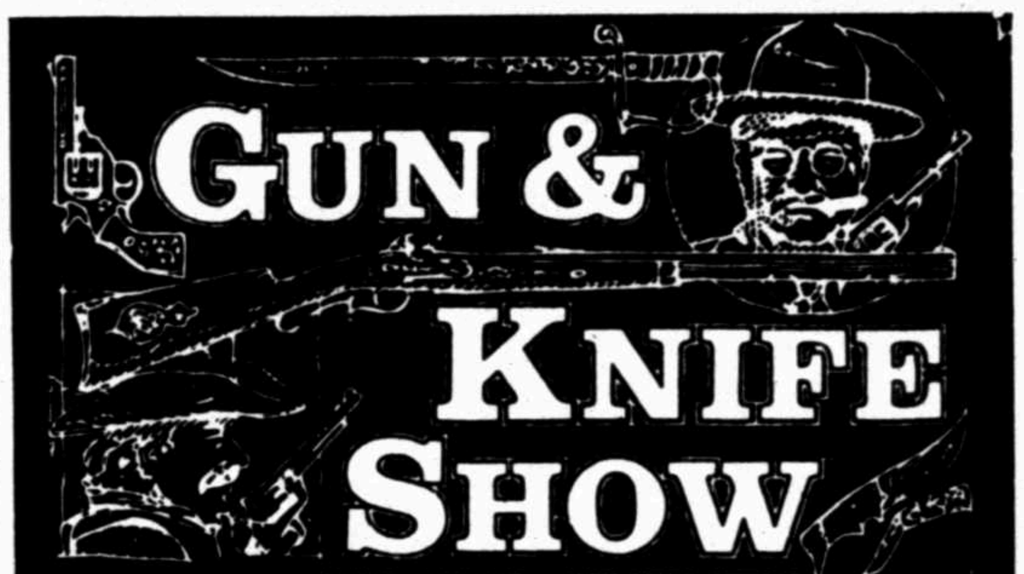

"The basic goal that Bonita and I want to strive for is for us to be out on the court and not be judged because we're women but rather be judged on our qualifications," said DelValle, who joined the USBL last year and was the first woman to officiate a game.

Spence said the milestone was easier for them than for the players.

"It was another game for us," she said.

NBA: Blazers confident they can win title

ourselves."

"We've been in this situation before and handled it well," Jackson said. "You don't sleep well after a loss like this. But then you get up and face the next game."

Jordan said winning 67 regular-season games gives the Bulls a sense of security, but losing two games they were leading late in the fourth quarter "is a bad sign, a sign that should open our eyes and change us."

Jordan measured his answer carefully when he was asked if Portland was fortunate to be even in the series.

"Let's say we're unfortunate to be where we are," Jordan said.

Chicago breezed to its first NBA title a year ago by winning 15 of 17 postseason games. They are 13-7 this season.

"We would have loved to go 15-2 like last year, but it hasn't been that easy," Jordan said. "I just want to win 15 games again."

Portland reacted to reports that the Bulls are angry with some amusement.

"They are (mad)?" Terry Porter asked. "I hope we can keep them that way."

Referring to the Trail Blazers' seesaw season in which they were accused of being a dumb team, Porter added, "If they think the season has been hard on them, they should take a joyride on our vehicle and see how it is."

The Trail Blazers didn't take the lead for the first time in Game 4 until there was just 3:35 remaining. But they held Jordan scoreless the last 10 minutes and forced five Chicago turnovers in the fourth quarter.

"As far as I know, they haven't changed the rules for the Finals," Portland coach Rick Adelman said. "The games are still 48 minutes long. If the Bulls only play for 42, that's not our problem."

The Trail Blazers, who averaged 115 points in the first three rounds of the playoffs, have been held under 100 points in three of the first four games in the Finals. When they won Game 2 115-104, they needed overtime to pass the 100 mark.

"It's 2-2 and we don't even feel like we've played well yet," Danny Ainge said. "Chicago is mad about it being 2-2 and they've played better than us."

Drexler said Portland's Game 4 victory "let us know we have a chance to win this thing."

Persons' 63 leads field at St. Jude

Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Peter Persons, who missed the cut in his last two tournaments, had eight birdies in a round of 63 Thursday for a one-stroke lead over Gil Morgan and Dan Forsman in the opening round of the $1.1 million Federal Express St. Jude Classic.

Persons birdied four holes on each side of the 7,006-yard, par-71 Tournament Players Course at Southwind.

A 10-foot birdie putt at the 169-yard eighth hole pushed Persons, who started on the back nine, to eight under.

Morgan, who birdied six of his last 10 holes, also had eight birdies, but seven-time PGA Tour champion bogeyed the par-4 13th. Forsman birdied three of his last four holes to earn his share of second place.

Bunched at 65 were Japan's Joe Ozaki, South Africa's Nick Price and Chris Tucker, while 13 players are another stroke off the pace.

said. "This is the tightest race for the national championship I've ever seen.

"And I think if we put together a good round we can win it."

Shaun Bishop led the Chaps Thursday with a one-under-par 71. Steve Armstrong and Grant Thomson scored 73 and 74, respectively, and Darren Griff (78) and Guy Redford (79) kept their scores under 80.

"Our guys' attitude has been exceptionally good," Poss said. "The weather has been really hot out there and today's pin placements were extremely tough, but we turned in our best round so far.

"Shaun Bishop had a sensational round, and Grant (Thomson) and Steve (Armstrong) played especially well."

Bishop and Thomson are tied for sixth place in the medalist chase with three-day totals of 221. Jimmy Bell of Florida C.C. leads the individual race at 218.

Defending national champion Brevard Community College posted a 302 Thursday and stands in at 909, eighth overall. MC finished a distant second to Brevard last year when the national championship was played in Midland.

Florida C.C. took third place a year ago.

Course record 65 gives Snead lead

Associated Press

DEARBORN, Mich. — J.C. Snead outdueled playing partner Tommy Aaron on his way to a course-record 65 and a one-shot lead Thursday in the opening round of the Senior Players Championship.

Snead and Aaron blistered the front nine at the par-72 TPC of Michigan course. Both shot 5-under 31, matching birdies on Nos. 6, 7 and 8.

They cooled off on the back nine but continued to battle as Bob Charles and Jim Ferree applied pressure.

Aaron finished at 66, equaling the course record set last year by Don Bies and Jim Albus, the 1991 Senior Players champion.

Charles, who birdied five straight holes in the middle of his round, Ferree and Kermit Zarley were at 67.

Jim Colbert, Rives McBee, Dale Douglas and Butch Baird were at 69, while four players, including Albus and Lee Trevino, finished at 70.

"I hit a couple of 'yutsy' shots, but the ball turned in the direction I wanted it to and I kind of got some breaks," said Snead, who hasn't won since joining the Senior PGA Tour in 1990.

"It's not how well you hit it, it's how well you miss it. Most of my misses today were not too bad."

Snead's last win on the PGA Tour was the 1987 Westchester Classic.

Aaron quickly fell behind on the back nine, bogeying No. 10.

Gibby Gilbert, who played with the leaders and was three under on the front, birdied the 10th to pull within one shot of Snead.

But Gilbert bogeyed four of the last eight holes and finished at 72.

Snead and Aaron each birdied the par-3 12th. Aaron pulled even with a birdie at the par-5 13th, narrowly missing a 25-foot putt for eagle. He took a one-shot lead with a 20-foot birdie putt at the par-3 15th.

Aaron held the lead until his second shot found the lake on the par-5 17th. The bogey dropped him into a tie with Snead at six under. Snead, who didn't bogey a hole, moved in front with a birdie on 18, hitting a 3-iron within five feet of the pin.

Meanwhile, Charles put together the longest birdie string on the Senior Tour this season and moved into a tie with the leaders with a birdie at No. 16 to go six under.

Charles, who finished in a three-way tie for second last year, started his charge at No. 9.

Millers vaults to lead at gymnastics trials

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Shannon Miller, who missed the U.S. Championships last month because of an elbow injury, made up for lost time Thursday by taking the lead in the Olympic gymnastics trials.

Miller, 15, had a 57.057 score after the compulsory events — the vault, balance beam, uneven bars and floor excercise. Three-time U.S. champion Kim Zmeskal was second with 56.797 and Kerri Strug registered 56.385.

The competitors are vying to make the eight-member Olympic training squad, which will meet in France in July. Six will compete in the Summer Olympics Barcelona and one will remain an alternate.

The compulsories count for 60 percent of the trials score and Saturday's optionals will comprise 40 percent.

With the exception of Miller, Thursday's scores included results of last month's U.S. Championships in Columbus, Ohio. The trials count for 70 percent of the score and the nationals account for the other 30 percent.

Michelle Campi did not compete on Thursday, so her scores will be taken entirely from the nationals. She was fourth with 56.202, followed by Dominque Dawes (55.950), Kim Kelly (55.906), Wendy Bruce (55.654), Hilary Grivich (55.626) and Kristen McDermott (55.435).

Miller's scores at the trials count for 100 percent. The 4-foot-6, 69-pound Miller had finally returned to form last month after elbow surgery as the nationals were to be held. She went through the compulsory events there, but the scores were not counted and she did not participate in the optionals.

"I would have done the optionals, too, but I didn't have time to train properly," she said.

On Thursday, the Oklahoma product scored 9.937 on the vault, 9.925 on the beam, 9.850 on the bars and 9.912 on the floor.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JUNE 12, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You can look forward to realizing a secret desire by the end of summer. Facing the facts about a business or romantic relationship will help you put it on a sounder footing. Welcome a newcomer to your turf in November. Together, the two of you can make record financial gains. Be persistent in pursuing your career goals. An alliance you engineer in early 1993 could succeed beyond your wildest expectations. Set a good example for younger relatives.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: President George Bush, jazz musician Chick Corea, singer Vic Damone, sportscaster Marv Albert.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Work may pile up faster than expected. You can handle it but will probably feel the strain. Have lunch alone if a friend's gossip will only put you more on edge.

TAURUS (April 20 May 20): Do everything you can to avoid arguments with family members today. Words said in anger may never be forgotten. Seeing a movie tonight will lift your spirits.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Opposing viewpoints should be moderated before you set off an unfortunate chain of events. Try to mollify an attractive member of the opposite sex. Ride the romantic roller coaster at your own risk.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day to cultivate your ties with people at a distance. This evening and tomorrow morning look particularly promising for romantic ties and recreational pleasures.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An associate's constant questions could prove aggravating. Nevertheless, be conscientious regarding shared financial responsibilities. Make a thorough review of recent changes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The weekend looks golden. An invitation may come from out of the blue. Go slow if presented with an unexpected romantic opportunity. Accent literary and educational pursuits later in the day.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Today's events make the outlook for your weekend very exciting. Travel enjoys highly favorable influences. Stabilize your finances by saying "no" to risky deals.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Continue to be cautious regarding your business interests or public standing. You are still making headway with influential people. Maintain your sense of humor if you encounter red tape.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Allowing a friend to meddle in your financial affairs could cause a rift with a third party — perhaps your mate or another close ally. Be realistic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Leaping before you look could prove costly. Someone warns you about a friend; do not be too trusting if money is involved. Someone who has failed you before could do so again.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Business or other obligations will keep you on the go today. Certain activities will be much more enjoyable than you anticipated. Live up to your high ideals.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Although your thoughts are on faraway places or people, get into the routine of the business day. Refuse to let distractions mar the conclusion of an excellent work week.

TODAY'S CHILDREN possess a mercurial nature and many terrific ideas. They are happiest when they can harness their brain power rather than their brawn. These Geminis' dual personalities allow them to successfully tackle more than one work project at a time. In fact, they thrive on having a lot of irons in the fire. Sentimental by nature, these Geminis will go all-out to woo the object of their affection.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 NT	3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣

In the Old Country they had a saying: If you drink the water you die, and if you don't drink the water you die. East never realized what that meant until this hand came along.

East-West were playing weak no-trump opening bids. South's jump showed a good hand and a suit of substance, so North's raise to game was certainly reasonable.

With routine defense South would have coasted home at his contract of four hearts. Suppose that East took the ace and returned a club. Declarer would win, draw trumps and force out the ace of diamonds, then get back to dummy with a spade to take a spade discard on a high diamond.

East scotched those ideas by winning the ace of clubs and shifting to the ten of spades. Since East was marked with the ace of spades, that meant there was no side entry to the diamonds. However, South found an elegant riposte.

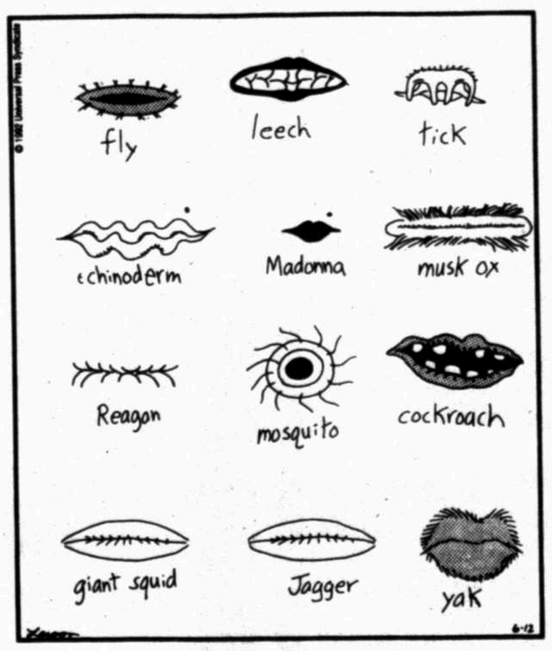

Declarer drew four rounds of trumps, discarding two diamonds from the table, and cashed the king of clubs. Next came a diamond to the king, which East ducked as a matter of course. Declarer now ruffed a club in hand and then led another diamond to the queen.

East won the ace, but was trapped in an endplay. Left with nothing but cards in the pointed suits, East either could cash the ace of spades, which would limit declarer to only one loser in that suit, or else lead a diamond, thereby permitting declarer to discard a spade. Either way, declarer would lose only one trick in each side suit.

Barbara Bush chats with 'Lt. Frank Drebin' — and survives

NEW YORK — Lt. Frank Drebin has visited the White House — and Barbara Bush lived to tell about it.

The first lady recently greeted Leslie Nielsen, who plays the incompetent investigator in the "Naked Gun" movies, at a Washington reception for Czechoslovakia President Vaclav Havel. In "Naked Gun 2½," Drebin works a bogus Barbara over before shoving her off a balcony.

"How did it go?" Nielsen was asked of the real-life meeting. "Barbara was in the receiving line, and when she saw me, she rolled her eyes. Later, she told me that her granddaughter had been rehearsing all day so Mrs. Bush wouldn't say anything to upset me."

Nielsen, interviewed in this Sunday's Parade magazine, said script work is already under way for the third installment of the series. It's untitled now, but Nielsen has a suggestion:

"'Naked Gun 4: The Second Final Insult,' because then everyone will be asking what the first final insult was," he explained.

TULSA, Okla. — A family is suing the rock group Van Halen and its record company for more than $2 million because their telephone number was included in a scrawl of graffiti on a 1991 album cover.

Van Halen

Members of the McNutt family, formerly of Tulsa, say they were subjected to obscene and threatening telephone calls and that their home and cars were vandalized after they complained to the media.

The McNutts filed an invasion of privacy lawsuit Wednesday in U.S. district court. The lawsuit seeks $2.068 million for emotional distress.

The McNutts, who describe themselves in the lawsuit as "an ordinary Midwest Christian family," say their telephone number was in a photograph on the liner notes of Van Halen's "For Unlawful Carnal Knowledge" album.

Steve Ripley, a Tulsa musician, said the telephone number on the album actually was his. He said he had collaborated with Eddie Van Halen and the number was on the board in Van Halen's studio when the photo was taken.

Ripley said anyone who called the McNutts misread the number.

Van Halen spokeswoman Maureen O'Connor didn't immediately return a call Thursday seeking comment.

PARIS — Reporters covering Queen Elizabeth's first state visit to France in 20 years got sidetracked Thursday trying to describe the color of a suit worn by one of her hosts.

The queen, on the third day of her visit, was escorted through the Orsay art museum by Culture Minister Jack Lang.

For the occasion, Lang sported a new suit designed by Thierry Mugler, one of the hot stars of the Paris fashion world. The suit blended colorfully with the queen's raspberry pink outfit, but exactly what color was it?

Agence France-Presse called it "emerald green." Press Association, the British domestic news agency, called it pistachio, but said other observers considered it turquoise or robin's-egg blue.

FORT PAYNE, Ala. — The band Alabama has its annual homecoming celebration Saturday with the June Jam charity concert, which is expected to draw nearly 70,000 people.

The outdoor concert also is to feature Travis Tritt, Wayne Newton, Vince Gill, Restless Heart, Ricky Van Shelton, Marty Stuart, Trisha Yearwood, Aaron Tippin, Joe Diffie and Billy Ray Cyrus, among others.

Since June Jam began a decade ago, it has generated $2 million for charities, schools and other organizations in northeast Alabama.

Although June Jam is billed as a homecoming, Fort Payne actually is Alabama's yearlong home. Members Randy Owen, Jeff Cook, Teddy Gentry and Mark Herndon have businesses and farms in Fort Payne and send their children to public schools here.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country music singer Travis Tritt says he doesn't like the No. 1 country hit "Achy Breaky Heart" by Billy Ray Cyrus — or the music video that's helped make the tune a sensation.

"I'll be honest — I don't think 'Achy Breaky Heart' makes much of a statement," Tritt said Tuesday. "I just don't care much for the song."

"I didn't care for the way the video was presented — as if he were drawing 15,000 people into a concert hall," Tritt said. "He's stepping out of a limousine and being mobbed as he goes into a concert. This is a guy that's not even been recognized yet; this is his first single."

The song, about a man getting his heart broken, tops the country music singles charts and is a hit on the pop charts. Cyrus' album "Some Gave All," is No. 1 on both charts.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Prices slump

NEW YORK — A sell-off in the gasoline pit pulled energy futures lower Thursday in a session dominated by technical trading.

West Texas Intermediate for July delivery settled at $22.35 per barrel, down 16 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange, where oil had risen 19 cents a barrel on Wednesday.

Wholesale unleaded gasoline for July delivery fell 1.06 cents a gallon to settle at 66.10 cents.

Natural gas for July delivery settled at $1.592 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 2.7 cents.

Futures prices crumbled after putting in a strong performance on Wednesday. When contracts were unable to extend those gains, the market was hit with selling.

Gasoline prices led other oil futures lower. They weakened after the American Petroleum Institute reported Tuesday night that U.S. gasoline inventories have been building.

Junk bond fine

NEW YORK — First Investors Corp. agreed to pay $24.7 million — the largest fine of its kind ever — to settle federal charges that it misled customers about the risks involved in its two junk-bond mutual funds.

Aggressive First Investors sales reps also pushed shares in the highly volatile funds on people with low incomes, elderly people and those with limited financial knowledge, the Securities and Exchange Commission charged.

The settlement Thursday was signed by U.S. District Judge Morris Lasker in Manhattan federal court.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar fell sharply against key foreign currencies Thursday, hurt by unexpectedly weak domestic economic news.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 127.38 yen, down 0.04 yen from Wednesday's close.

The British pound fetched $1.8475 in London, up from $1.8335 late Wednesday.

Stocks recover

NEW YORK — A late round of buying in blue chips enabled the stock market to finish mixed Thursday after an early drop on what analysts described as uninspiring economic news.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down more than 15 points at its midday low, closed with a gain of 8.29 at 3,351.51.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 11 to 10 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Mitchell, Conoco announce venture

■ Two producers to jointly buy interests in 14 gas processing plants in Texas and Oklahoma owned by Oryx Energy.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. and Conoco Inc. on Thursday announced a joint venture formed to buy interests in 14 natural gas processing plants in Texas and Oklahoma owned by financially troubled Oryx Energy Co.

Stock in the Dallas-based Oryx plunged a week ago after the firm announced plans to slash its dividends by two-thirds, issue $300 million in new stock and sell another $100 million in assets.

The company already had put $400 million in properties up for sale and had closed about $172 million of those deals. The Mitchell-Conoco 50-50 venture reportedly involves some of those remaining assets.

Terms of that deal, which is expected to be complete in August, will be at closing. Funding for the acquisition will be provided primarily through project financing to be obtained by the partnership, officials said.

The venture includes Conoco and Mitchell's subsidiary, Liquid Energy Corp. The acquired interests will boost each company's natural gas liquids production by about 10,000 barrels a day.

For Mitchell's, production would improve to between 55,000 and 60,000 barrels a day and put the company among the nation's top 10 natural gas liquids producers.

Allen J. Tarbutto Jr., Mitchell's transmission and processing division president, said the purchase will put The Woodlands-based producer "on par with such majors as Exxon, Shell, Mobil Oil and, of course, Conoco."

Conoco, already among the top 10, expects to increase its production to nearly 70,000 barrels a day.

Conoco's David W. Branch, vice president and general manager for natural gas and gas products, said their acquisition would bring to 21 the number of processing plants Conoco operates in the United States. Conoco has interests in another 28 U.S. plants.

Conoco will operate three of the 12 plants located in Oklahoma; Mitchell will operate one of the two plants in Texas. The remaining facilities will continue to be operated by other companies currently running those plants.

Branch said the Texas plants are located east of Conoco's core gas processing areas in San Angelo, while the Oklahoma plants are adjacent to Conoco facilities in the central part of the state.

French firm did not realize LTV controversy, executive says

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The top U.S. executive for Thomson-CSF said Thursday that the French company would never have tried to buy LTV's missile division if corporate officials had realized how controversial the sale would become.

James Bell, who oversees Thomson's U.S. operations, said LTV's potential buyers had little warning that their $300 million bid for the Texas company would meet such strong resistance.

Critics hope to block the sale in Congress if the Bush administration approves the transaction. The proposed sale, which is part of a larger bid for the entire LTV Aerospace and Defense Co., is under review by a multiagency panel that includes Defense Department officials.

In defending the $300 million deal, Bell said Thomson's attempt to purchase a key segment of the U.S. defense industry is part of a trend toward international free trade. The French government has a 58 percent stake in the Paris-based company.

"This is not a wave of the future. It is a ripple on the wave that is taking place," Bell said. "It should not be nearly as controversial."

Reacting to the growing criticism, Thomson has stepped up efforts to ease fears that the sale threatens national security. Bell and former Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci told reporters Wednesday that Thomson's investment in LTV would strengthen the U.S. industrial base for defense products.

Carlucci, who served in the Pentagon under President Ronald Reagan, is managing director of The Carlyle Group, an investment firm that joined Thomson in bidding for LTV Aerospace and Defense.

The Carlyle Group offered $150 million in cash, stock and notes for LTV's aerospace division, the other unit in the company. The two LTV divisions provide about 13,000 jobs in far west Dallas and Grand Prairie.

The potential buyers said Thomson's investment in LTV would strengthen the missile division's research capability, enhance its product line and open new markets overseas. Company officials have promised lawmakers that they would not transfer LTV jobs to France.

Bell said Thomson executives are nearing an agreement with Pentagon officials on procedures for avoiding security breaches at LTV's top-secret government projects.

Two toy retailers discuss merger

N.Y. Times News Service

Two toy retailers operating under Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection, Child World Inc. and Lionel Corp., said Thursday they were discussing combining their operations.

If completed, the merger would create a chain of roughly 140 stores, and enable each retailer to achieve some economies of scale, according to company officials.

But toy industry analysts were skeptical that such a deal could be reached, especially on such short notice.

The two companies must secure financing within two weeks or Child World will be forced to liquidate its remaining 71 stores. And analysts said that some toy manufacturers had already written off losses from Child World, and harbored little interest in seeing Child World resuscitated.

"Toy manufacturers have been extremely patient with the two companies, and they've just about run out of patience," said Gary Jacobson, an analyst at Kidder, Peabody.

A spokesman for Mattel Inc., however, said the company had not fully written off the money it is owed by Child World, and he predicted Mattel would lose up to $10 million if Child World went out of business.

For Mattel, the combination of Child World and Lionel would be a positive step. "We believe Child World is a viable entity," said Glenn Bozarth, the spokesman.

Higher clothing, gasoline costs spur prices on wholesale level

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, propelled by higher costs for gasoline, tobacco and clothing, rose at their fastest clip in 19 months in May as consumers managed only a tiny 0.2 percent increase in retail purchases, the government said Thursday.

Economists termed both developments disturbing, suggesting to some that this year's weak recovery may run out of gas just as a similar upturn did last year.

"I'm starting to get a little worried about this recovery," said David Wyss, an economist at DRI-McGraw Hill.

The Labor Department said the 0.4 percent increase in its Producer Price Index, which measures inflationary pressures before they reach the consumer, was the biggest advance since a 1.1 percent surge in October 1990 as world oil prices took off following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department said that retail sales edged up a barely noticeable 0.2 percent in May as declines at clothing and hardware stores blunted a pickup in auto sales. In addition, the government slashed its estimate of April sales by more than half, now saying the increase was just 0.4 percent.

Since consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of total economic activity, continuing weakness in this area would be enough to abort any economic upturn.

While the disappointing sales performance would normally spur the Federal Reserve to cut interest rates, analysts said the Fed's hands were now tied because of the higher inflation rate.

They said the spurt in wholesale prices likely meant that consumer prices rose at an uncomfortably fast pace of probably around 0.4 percent. The government will release the Consumer Price Index on Friday.

A year ago, economists insisted that a sustained recovery was underway only to watch it fizzle in the second half of the year as consumers worried about mounting job losses cut back on spending. Analysts said job growth will be the key to determining whether this year's rebound will last or not.

On that front, the Labor Department said Thursday that the number of Americans filing claims for unemployment insurance remained stuck at 407,000 for the week ending May 30, a disappointment to economists who had hoped the jobless number might finally be below 400,000.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

No-load mutual funds have no back-end fees

By Bill Doyle

Q: We sold our house and asked a broker to invest the money. He sold us some stocks and shares in a number of mutual funds. We had stipulated that the mutual funds were to be no-load funds. Later, much to our surprise, we learned there is a 5 percent redemption fee on each fund. When we asked about that, he claimed to have told us. Neither my wife nor I remember that.

Doyle

I believe that the broker's action was unethical but that we have no recourse other than to wait out the five years for the redemption fee to be eliminated. Am I correct?

A: Maybe not. If the broker touted them as no-load mutual funds, he misrepresented the shares he sold to you. Or, if he did not give you each fund's prospectus providing detailed information — especially about costs — he fractured the rules. In either case, you could press your case in National Association of Securities Dealers arbitration proceedings.

The redemption fee you describe is known as a contingent deferred sales charge, starting at 5 percent and declining one percentage point annually.

The Securities and Exchange Commission prohibits mutual funds with contingent deferred sales charges or 12b-1 distribution plans from billing themselves as no-load funds. That rule has been in effect since May 1988. The requirement for delivery of the effective mutual fund prospectus at or before the initial sales effort was written into the Investment Company Act of 1940.

Assuming you are as ticked off at that broker and his firm as your letter indicates, contact NASD's arbitration department, 33 Whitehall St., New York, NY 10004.

Q: According to a recent newspaper story, investors will be able to buy mutual fund shares by sending their checks along with coupons from advertisements. Won't that undercut the full-disclosure requirement for delivery of a fund's prospectus?

A: It would, if it ever becomes law. Don't hold your breath on that.

Doing away with the prospectus-delivery requirement is one of many proposals in a 560-page SEC report on laws governing mutual funds. Some of the proposals are good; some are so-so. And some, including the one you cite, are so far out in right field it would take a long-distance phone call to reach them.

Besides being part of the Investment Company Act of 1940, the roots of the prospectus delivery rule can be traced back to the Securities Act of 1933. It would take an Act of Congress to change that. Count it unlikely that will happen or that many other parts of the fat SEC report will be adopted.

Word from Endsville-on-the-Potomac is that the 560-page tome is considered a make-work project for the SEC staff.

Q: You advise investors to stay away from mutual funds with 12b-1 plans. Why? I'm ashamed to admit I don't know what it is all about.

A: It's about the biggest rip-off the Securities and Exchange Commission has ever allowed to be imposed on mutual fund shareholders.

In 1980, the SEC passed its rule 12b-1, allowing a mutual fund's management to use part of the fund's assets to pay "distribution costs." So, the distribution plans adopted by many funds are called 12b-1 plans.

When a fund has such a plan, management can constantly dip into the fund's assets to pay commissions to brokers and pay for virtually anything else that promotes the sale of fund shares.

Increasing the number of fund shares owned by investors increases the fund's total assets. In turn, that raises the fees collected by management. But there is no evidence it helps established shareholders — the fund's owners. In fact, small funds often turn in a better investment performance than large funds.

There is no justification for forcing mutual fund investors to bear the expense of bringing in new shareholders.

It's a Buyers' Market

...and Classified is the Buyers' Marketplace

Times like these make many of us think twice about buying anything—a new washer and dryer, a used television set, a computer. Anything. But if you look closely, you'll see there's rarely been a better time to buy. Consumers want more cash, and businesses want less inventory. And that means prices and selection among both new and pre-owned merchandise have rarely been better. So, take advantage of this buyers' market—and look to [Journal Classified], the buyers' marketplace, for all the information needed to make a sound decision. Because, sometimes, good things come to those who don't wait.

BUY IT. SELL IT. FIND IT. CLASSIFIED.
