Ask Us

Q—Was $395,000 allocated to Cogdell Memorial Hospital's budget for 1995, or $12.6 million as published in the paper?

A—The figures relate to the 1994 budget, since the 1995 budget hasn't been formulated. The $12.6 million is the hospital's current operating budget. The $395,000 is the amount of county tax dollars that goes to the hospital. The balance of the budget comes from charges for services rendered.

In Brief

Talks held

SOUTH SHUNEH, Jordan (AP) — With strong U.S. support, Israel and Jordan today held landmark talks on developing economic ties as the two old adversaries moved methodically toward an eventual peace treaty.

Meeting on the Jordanian side of the Dead Sea, Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Jordanian Prime Minister Abdul Salam Majali forged publicly a commitment to hasten peace between their two countries by developing a highway, a park and other marks of commerce and joint endeavors that could result in a sharing of scare water resources and technology.

Haiti ruler may be flexible, Rep. Richardson says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Democratic congressman just back from Haiti said today Haiti's military ruler "is not totally intransigent" and may be ready to "make a move" to avoid a U.S. invasion.

Rep. Bill Richardson said he met for five hours Monday with Haiti's military leaders and told Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras "he had to make the next move, that U.S. resolve was very strong, that Congress was backing the president, that he had to make the next move."

President Clinton, in an interview with The Boston Globe published today, said, "I don't think it is inevitable" that U.S. forces would invade Haiti. But, Clinton said of the Haitian dictators, "They've made me more determined than ever to see that we have a change in the leadership down there. ..."

Richardson, D-N.M., said he didn't go to Haiti as a negotiator carrying a message from the Clinton administration. "I didn't issue any ultimatum," he said on NBC, and told Fox TV that Cedras "gave me a framework of concerns that he has, that I'm going to take back, and that maybe there's some flexibility." He declined to discuss them until he briefs the White House.

"This doesn't mean a negotiation where the terms of the administration's policy might change. But all I'm saying is, if he makes a move, we shouldn't totally close it off and say that the guy is totally inflexible, because I detected a little bit of opening. He's not totally intransigent," he said.

While the goal remains restoration of democracy in Haiti, Richardson said, "if he sends a signal that he wants to discuss a way to resolve this issue peacefully, we should take it."

"It's building to a point where Cedras may make a move. I think he's a realistic person," he added.

Vice President Al Gore said he had not been briefed by Richardson yet, but said on CBS that "we're moving toward a resolution of this matter and the coup leaders ought to understand that. ... They will step down one way or another. The time is coming."

USA Today reported today that William Gray, the White House's top aide on Haiti, said Tuesday that the administration has pushed up to October the deadline for Haiti's military rulers to step down or face a possible U.S. invasion.

Gray told USA Today, "Our expectations are the 'three stooges' will not be in power" by Oct. 1, the newspaper said. The administration earlier had said they wanted the military rulers out by the end of the year.

Meanwhile, Panama's next leader was getting a friendly reception at the White House after giving assurances his government will provide a safe haven for Haitian boat people once he takes office, Sept. 1.

DA's budget, EMS needs are reviewed

Ambulance service and expense requests from the district clerk and district attorney's offices were reviewed Tuesday afternoon as Scurry County commissioners continued their budget process.

Perry Westmoreland, director of Snyder EMS, Inc., met with commissioners to request the purchase of a new ambulance, estimated to cost about $49,000.

Westmoreland said the new vehicle would replace one purchased in 1981, which has some 186,000 miles on it. He said the old ambulance is currently used to transfer patients, and could be used in an emergency only as a last resort.

The replacement vehicle he is asking the county to purchase features a "module" which is expected to last the life of three vehicles, meaning that when the new ambulance is eventually replaced, only a chassis will have to be purchased, Westmoreland said.

Commissioners told Westmoreland to draw up bid specifications. It is anticipated that the vehicle will be purchased at the end of the year, providing bids are acceptable.

Scurry County took over ambulance service from the City of Snyder last year. Under the contract, the county subsidizes Snyder EMS by $61,456 a year in addition to making repairs over a certain amount, and purchasing ambulances.

Commissioners also reviewed the district clerk's budget, which is currently $116,757 and is proposed at $115,824 — a decrease of $933. However, County Auditor Eddie McHaney noted that there is no item in the budget for postage currently, and that the clerk's budget may go up slightly.

The district attorney's budget request is $54,983, up $1,833 from the current budget of $53,158.

Commissioners have adjourned until Monday.

Commissioner C.D. Gray Jr. presided Tuesday in the absence of County Judge Bob Doolittle. Also present were commissioners Jerry Gannaway, Ralph Trevey and Roy Idom.

Heath care...

Willingness to compromise is limited, Clinton contends

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton insisted today he still supports national health care for everybody and that his willingness to compromise may have been overstated. He said he would never accept a law that spells out coverage of 95 percent as equivalent to "universal coverage."

Clinton sought to clarify comments from Tuesday, when he told the nation's governors in Boston that coverage of "95 (percent) or upwards" might be satisfactory.

The remarks sowed confusion on Capitol Hill, with opponents of mandatory health coverage calling it a major concession to their side, liberal lawmakers expressing irritation and White House allies insisting nothing had changed.

A team of administration officials insisted Tuesday that Clinton had not really changed his position. Today, the administration stepped up what was turning into a major damage-control operation, with both Clinton and Vice President Al Gore weighing in.

"Nothing has changed when it comes to the commitment to ensure that all Americans have health care coverage that can never be taken away," Gore said today.

He appeared on network news shows this morning to insist that Clinton was only agreeing to compromise on the process. "What the president said yesterday was, if someone has a better idea about how to reach that goal, we are willing to talk about the best way to get to that goal. But every American must have health care coverage."

"What the debate is not about is whether all Americans will have health care coverage that can never be taken away," Gore said.

As Clinton began a meeting with congressional leaders at the White House today, he said: "I'm sorry that after all my skills and efforts at communicating, the point I really made yesterday somehow didn't get through."

That point, he said, was that alternative bills that do not require universal coverage "will not work. That is the issue. We must do something that works."

As to the 95 percent figure, "no one ever talked about a law which would set that as a goal," Clinton said.

Instead, he said he was using it in a statistical sense — suggesting that Social Security and mandatory school-attendance laws also call for full coverage, but that some people fall through the cracks.

Legislation passed by the Senate Finance Committee does not require employers to furnish workers with insurance — but sets a goal of 95 percent coverage by the year 2,000.

White House aides said that Clinton used the 95 percent figure because it was the "trigger" in that bill.

Clinton said he had always been flexible on how to get to universal coverage.

Howard and Carolyn Limmer of Snyder have such a generous son in 21-year-old Jayson that he's willing to share a good friend with them for several days — as a house guest of his parents.

The house guest, Chris Ford, 24, an instructor and colleague of Jayson's in the rural Camp Olympia summer program near Houston, arrived alone in Snyder about noon on Tuesday.

Having journeyed here by bicycle on a trip that began June 30, Ford is all the more appreciative of the comforts of home sweet home with the Limmers. "I think they typify Texas hospitality — very open-hearted," Ford observed.

The Limmers were so delighted by the friend-sharing that Mrs. Limmer immediately called Jayson Limmer at Camp Olympia to share the good news. Jayson, a radio-television-film major at the University of North Texas in Denton, will be a senior at UNT in the fall.

"Any friend of our son is a friend of ours, so we're just happy to have (Chris Ford)," Howard Limmer said cheerfully.

Limmer, who took Ford with him to a Snyder Lions Club luncheon on Tuesday, expressed admiration for the powers of endurance exhibited by the 24-year-old. "The adventure is really exciting to me," the Snyder man commented.

Ford, who plans to reach Durango, Colo., before returning to Camp Olympia, praised the physical appearance of Snyder. "I really enjoy the architecture of places (I visit) in general, and particularly in Snyder," he said. "It seems to me that a lot of the Old West appearance is still here."

To be sure, Ford observed that the scenery isn't as lovely as that of the Central Texas Hill Country. "But I've got to say that the nights out here are more spectacular," he added. "The horizon is just incredible."

The bicycle journey has been marked by hardship as well as beauty, Ford pointed out. Not only was he shot at in the middle of the night as he attempted to camp on private property elsewhere in West Texas — the shots went astray, fortunately — but Ford encountered a few motorists on his journey who drove onto the shoulder of the road, he said.

Ford, a trim five-foot, seven-inches, spoke optimistically about the ability of anyone — no matter what their age or physical condition — to successfully undertake a long bicycle journey. "...It's all in the attitude," he said.

Limmer, for his part, appears not the least bit tempted by the prospect of such a journey. "No way," he said with a smile, is he physically fit enough to embark on a long bicycle journey.

Tom Hochwalt, who in 1988 took over Cogdell Memorial Hospital and guided it through some crucial times, has announced that he will take on a new challenge.

Since leaving Cogdell in 1990, Hochwalt has been a vice president for Cogdell's affiliate, St. Mary of the Plains Hospital in Lubbock.

Hochwalt learned last week that he was selected to become chief executive officer of St. James Community Hospital in Butte, Mont.

Hochwalt will be in charge of a 174-bed acute care regional hospital in a town of approximately 45,000.

Hochwalt's management skills earned the respect of Scurry County residents. He guided the hospital through a difficult down-sizing, accelerated efforts to recruit doctors and began to establish speciality clinics.

In our opinion, one of Tom's major accomplishments was working with the board and others in the community to develop the first contract for privitized delivery of care to inmates.

The hospital's relationship with the Texas Department of Criminal Justice was a literal hospital life-saver. The TDCJ relationship signaled the financial turnaround of the county-owned hospital.

When the contract was being developed and new ground was being plowed, it was Hochwalt who came up with supporting data on which to base charges. It has been good for the TDCJ and it has been good for Cogdell.

In other "former resident" notes, we learned that former Price Daniel assistant warden Charlie Streetman has been named assistant warden at the Hilltop unit in Gatesville. Hilltop is a women's unit, and Streetman is moving from the Hughes, also in Gatesville.

Also Phillip Cockerell, former Lone Star Gas manager in Snyder, will be coming back west. In the company's restructuring last year, Cockerell was assigned to Round Rock near Austin. His company has now assigned Cockerell to Brownwood.

Columbia's commander dreamed of making same trip as Apollo 11

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Columbia commander Robert Cabana dreamed of retracing Apollo 11's path to the moon, perhaps even piloting a spaceship to Mars, when he became an astronaut nine years ago.

Instead, the three-time space flier is stuck going around and around the Earth — some 220 times over two weeks — helping to conduct basic space research. If he's disappointed, Cabana doesn't show it.

"I'll be honest," Cabana said during a space-to-ground news conference today. "When I was selected back in 1985, we did have a vision that maybe in our careers at NASA we'd have a chance to go back to the moon and Mars.

"I'm sure we will. Maybe not in my career, but in the near future," Cabana, 45, said.

Columbia's seven-member crew is nearing the end of its marathon laboratory mission. The shuttle is set to land early Friday at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

The astronauts have worked around the clock since July 8, studying fish, newts, toad eggs and fruit flies to see how they do in weightlessness. The crew also has watched plants grow and wax melt, and made organisms spin in a centrifuge.

It's not exactly space exploration in terms of Apollo 11, which landed on the moon 25 years ago today, but Cabana said Columbia's work is important in its own right — as a foundation for the planned space station project.

"I don't find this frustrating. I think what we're doing is extremely important," Cabana said. "This is a mini space station, and what we need to do is build the international space station so we can do this on a continuing basis."

Richard Hieb, the astronaut in charge of Columbia's scientific payload, said the current mission can't be compared to the feat of Neil Armstrong, Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin and Michael Collins a quarter century ago.

Most of Columbia's astronauts were just kids when Armstrong stepped on the lunar surface. They all say the feat inspired them to study harder, aim higher, fly in space.

Mistake was embarrassing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Somebody forgot to sort the laundry at Sen. Howell Heflin's house.

The Alabama Democrat was fishing in his pockets for a handkerchief Monday at the Senate cafeteria. He came up with a pair of women's underwear.

"I mistakenly picked up a pair of my wife's white panties and put them in my pocket while rushing out the door to go to work," Heflin said Tuesday.

"Rather than take a chance of being embarrassed again, I'm going to start buying colored handkerchiefs."

Calling all women: town has bumper crop of bachelors

HERMAN, Minn. (AP) — Betty Harrigill doesn't harbor illusions of bagging a bachelor during a short visit to the Minnesota prairie — but it can't hurt to look.

And Herman, population 474, is expecting plenty of women to start looking today at the Grant County Fair.

The town 150 miles northwest of Minneapolis is showcasing itself as a good place for female entrepreneurs — partly because of its bumper crop of bachelor farmers and agribusinessmen.

Herman has 78 single men between 20 to 50, and only about 10 eligible women in the same age range.

Women from every state and several countries have asked for information since the town's advertisement in a weekly paper got noticed by television talk shows. Nobody knows how many will make the trek here this week.

Some, like Ms. Harrigill, are coming on a lark.

"I'm just really going for the vacation, to get away," said Ms. Harrigill, a 40ish bookkeeper and divorced mother of two from the Fort Worth, Texas suburb of Hurst. "How can you build a relationship in two days, unless there's a miracle?"

Town leaders decided to take action after all 20 girls in the high school's class of 1995 said they would have to leave town to find jobs.

"We didn't from the beginning promote this as a dating service or matchmaking service," said Herman's housing director, Skip DeLong. "We're trying to create career opportunities for women."

The town could use a lawyer, an accountant, a construction contractor, a computer technician and a plumber, among other occupations. Officials say there's loan money available, and office space in the former hardware store.

The fair, which runs through Sunday, usually draws about 2,000 people each day. But Jon Olson, who works for the Herman Development Corp., said the state tourism office said to expect up to 30,000 people a day.

A radio station more than 200 miles away in Hibbing helped some single women get a jump on the competition, bringing in a busload for a street dance last month and planning to return with "Love Bus II" this week.

Tina Didreckson arrived in June from Santa Ana, Calif., to consider possibilities for her fuel additives and janitorial supply business. She didn't know about the bachelor surplus.

"They really do have some good-looking guys here," she said. "I'm 33, most of them are younger, but I'll keep an eye out."

Organizers are trying to make it easy this week for the shy types. No "Dating Game" or "Studs" shows are planned, just genteel mixers including an ice cream social and a taffy pull.

But some bachelors are acting like Herman's hermits, raising fears that courting in the spotlight is the last thing they'll want to do.

"Some of the ones who are shy are saying, 'In a pig's eye. I'm locking myself out on the farm,'" said Rebecca Helgesen, a state tourism spokeswoman.

Governors are worried about voters

BOSTON (AP) — President Clinton was talking about state health care reform and California's efforts to lower insurance costs when he peered around the roomful of governors and asked: "Is Governor Wilson here?"

No, sir. Absent also: Texas Gov. Ann Richards, Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles and New York Gov. Mario Cuomo. "The big four," as a White House official put it, "have a lot more to worry about than this." Like getting re-elected.

There are 36 gubernatorial elections this fall, 23 of them featuring incumbents seeking re-election. So, as the National Governors Association held its summer meeting over the past four days, the official business might have been health care and welfare reform and how to improve schools, but much of the corridor talk was about who might be involuntarily retired by the time the governors convene their winter meeting next year.

"Any incumbent has got trouble this year," said Colorado Gov. Roy Romer, who is seeking a third term and, while favored, finds himself in a tough contest. "Democrats have got a series of events out there that combine to create a not very favorable environment."

On that point, he gets no argument from the Republicans, who currently control 20 of the 50 statehouses, thanks to Alaska Gov. Walter Hickel's recent switch from independent back to the GOP.

"We have all sorts of wonderful opportunities," said Maine Gov. John McKernan, the Republican Governors Association chairman. "It's a combination of things but mostly that Clinton had a tough 1993 and that helped us get great candidates."

Your Birthday

Thursday, July 21, 1994

Periodically in the year ahead, you might be privy to some inside information that could be profitable for you. Even if the returns are minimal, they'll still be worthy of consideration.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't let it be said of your attitude today that if an idea didn't originate with you, it's bound to be of little consequence. Associates might not share your opinion. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Critical responsibilities should be given priority today, because you could lose your zest for tackling problems early and end up doing a half-baked job.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There is a possibility you might yield to pressure today and do something to please another that opposes your best interests. If you take this route, neither person is likely to benefit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today your problem is not likely to be one of having an enlarged ego. On the contrary, it could be a lack of self-assurance, which might be more defeating than its opposite.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be on guard today if you participate in some type of friendly competition, because the person you may be pitted against could be someone who can't bear losing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Financial trends might be a series of ups and downs for you today. Your ability to generate income looks good. Your tendency to extravagance looks bad.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) An endeavor in which you're presently involved has potential, provided the right people run it. You fill the bill, but two associates might not.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't get involved in a project today that can produce only nominal rewards regardless of how smart you are and how willing you are to work.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If there is something about which you are enthusiastic and hopeful, don't waste your time today trying to sell a friend on it who always looks at life through a negative lens.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In order to be successful today, you must be flexible and open-minded. One particular procedure might not work, but a combination may.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Persons who are in accord with your ideas and opinions will be treated with consideration and respect today. Those who disagree with you, however, might not receive this treatment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In your commercial affairs today, conditions aren't likely to be optimum. However, they could still be advantageous, because the benefits will outweigh the negatives.

Johns Hopkins Study predicting a surplus supply of specialists

BALTIMORE (AP) — A study that found 40 percent of all U.S. medical specialists could be unnecessary by the year 2000 underscores the need for medical schools to push students into family and community medicine, the author said.

"Many medical students, given the choice of high-paying specialties with salaries two to three times that of primary care, make the obvious choice," said Jonathan Weiner, associate professor of health policy and management at Johns Hopkins School of Public Health.

Medical schools should "train future generations of physicians to meet society's needs," he said.

Weiner's study was published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association. It said that even if the government doesn't enact health care reform, by the end of the century there will be 550,400 doctors — 165,000 more than the country will need.

The country's doctors will include 376,000 specialists, but only 225,000 will be needed, making for a surplus of 151,000 specialists, the study said.

The study was commissioned by the federal Bureau of Health Professions. The predictions were based on the assumption that 40 percent to 65 percent of Americans will get their care from health maintenance organizations or other managed care programs by the end of century, up from the current 30 percent.

It also assumed the existence of universal coverage, which means the doctor surplus could be even greater if health care reform does not result in guaranteed health insurance for everyone, it said.

"People with health insurance make about twice as many visits to doctors as patients without insurance," he said.

In an editorial in the same issue of JAMA, Dr. Steven Schroeder, president of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, which deals with health care issues, said managing the supply of doctors should be a national priority.

"Faced with surpluses of the magnitude projected by Weiner and others, the nation is faced with two choices," he wrote. "It can look to the market to recalibrate the work force, or we can attempt to manage it more directly."

At the University of Washington in Seattle, students are already being prodded to take a serious look at general practice.

"What we're reduced to is trying to persuade young medical students that primary care is a good area," Dr. Thomas Greer said. "Family medicine is respected here. We're not trying to put down the subspecialists, we just don't need as many of them as we have produced, as a country."

In their third year, all medical students are required to take part in a six-week family medicine program, often working at clinics in the rural Northwest and Alaska.

Mistakes are made, unavoidably

By Phillip Alder

Lewis Thomas wrote, "Mistakes are at the very base of human thought ... feeding the structure like root nodules. If we were not provided with the knack of being wrong, we could never get anything useful done."

Before you debate that with someone, see how many mistakes you can spot in the play of today's deal.

Declaring four hearts, South won West's spade lead with his ace and took two top trumps, East shedding a low spade on the second. South cashed his spade king before leading a low club, scooping up West's singleton king with dummy's ace. Now declarer exited from the dummy with the ace and another diamond. After winning with his king, East continued with a diamond to his partner's queen. Endplayed, West exited with a spade. Declarer ruffed in the dummy, discarded his club loser and conceded three tricks: one heart and two diamonds.

The errors? First, East should play the diamond jack, not the king, at trick seven. Secondly, West should have dropped the diamond queen under his partner's king. East wouldn't rise with the king unless holding the jack as well. In both cases, West can receive two club ruffs to defeat the contract.

Lastly, South should have exited from the dummy with a low diamond, not with the ace and another. If East wins and gives his partner a club ruff, South wins West's diamond exit with dummy's ace, draws the last trump and concedes a second diamond trick. If instead the defenders persist with diamonds, declarer wins with dummy's ace and plays a third round, endplaying whoever wins the trick.

CBS not for sale

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — CBS Inc. Chairman Laurence Tisch made a rare public appearance to say his company is not for sale.

The recently derailed merger with QVC Inc. has not left CBS eager to strike a new deal, Tisch said Tuesday at a Television Critics Association meeting.

"I'm just tired of the rumors. I wanted to appear before you face-to-face to tell you CBS is not for sale," Tisch said.

Since the CBS-QVC merger collapsed last week, financial markets have been buzzing with rumored CBS takeover attempts by such companies as Walt Disney and cable's Tele-Communications Inc.

Positive HIV Test May Prove Positively False

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1994 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: A few weeks ago, I published a letter from a reader who said he had received a positive result from an HIV test, and was advised to be retested in six months. The writer was so frightened that he decided he couldn't wait, so he sought a second opinion immediately.

The specialist he consulted told him that because he had no real risk factors, the HIV-positive result was probably a false positive — and repeated the tests. This time, the results were negative. His purpose in writing was to alert others to the fact that false positives on AIDS tests can be due to several factors, including flu shots and pregnancy.

His letter generated more responses — two of which I would like to share:

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letter in which a reader urged you to alert people to the possibility of false positives on HIV tests:

The large number of false positives from the ELISA HIV screening test (the most commonly used test) caused the Florida Legislature in 1988 to specify that a positive result may not be disclosed until the more accurate Western Blot test has also been done.

You should be aware, however, that the ELISA screening test also generates a number of false negatives, some of which are a result of the so-called "window period" — the time shortly after infection when a person is capable of transmitting HIV, although tests cannot detect the antibodies.

The public needs to understand that a positive test result is not an immediate death sentence, nor is a negative result a license for reckless behavior.

ALAN H. TERL, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: From 1985 to 1987 I was director of the world's first and largest licensed laboratory for confirming HIV blood tests. We confirmed the ELISA tests by using the more accurate Western Blot test.

Those who are told that they have been tested positive for HIV should immediately ask if the Western Blot test was done, and if it wasn't, they should request it. If the Western Blot test is also positive, the patient should not panic because even this test can be in error. The patient should request that the test be repeated and interpreted at a different laboratory.

Abby, because our laboratory recognized the limitations of both tests, we coined the term "Western Blot Indeterminate" to indicate that some tests could not be interpreted as either positive or negative. Thus, healthy blood donors with initially positive ELISA tests are spared being confirmed HIV-positive until the results are definitely positive.

DONALD E. SENN, PH.D., LAGUNA NIGUEL, CALIF.

DEAR MR. TERL AND DR. SENN: Your letters underscore the fact that no laboratory test is 100 percent perfect, and that patients should not panic on initially learning that a test was interpreted as positive for HIV. By the same token, those whose test results are negative should not behave recklessly, because their tests could also be in error. In addition, as an extra precaution, those with negative tests who are in high-risk groups should be retested after the window period has elapsed.

Houston blanked by Palacios, 10-0

HOUSTON (AP) — There was no doubt that the St. Louis Cardinals needed a big lift from Vicente Palacios. And no doubt that Palacios needed the same from his team.

Both of them got what they needed Tuesday night.

Palacios pitched a one-hitter as the Cardinals blew out the Houston Astros, 10-0. With the loss, Houston slipped another full game in the Central Division standings and now trails the Reds by 31/2.

The Cards needed a boost because they were the only team in the majors that hadn't won since the All-Star break, a streak that had reached five games.

To make matters worse, the night before in this same park, St. Louis had the largest blown lead in National League history, as Houston rallied from a 11-0 deficit to win 15-12.

In that game, the Cards wore out five pitchers, including four in the Astros's 11-run sixth inning when St. Louis pitchers threw a total of 68 pitches.

With that in mind, Palacios went to Cardinals pitching coach Jose Cardenal and told him not to worry before Tuesday's game.

"He told me it was time for him to win a game," Cardenal said. "He told me not to worry, he could go nine and we needed that."

Palacios needed it, too. He was 1-7 with a 4.60 ERA this season and hadn't won in his last eight starts. But Palacios had thrown well in his last several outings and he felt he was due.

Besides, it was his birthday.

"I got an early lead and I was thinking they gave me a good birthday gift," Palacios, 31, said. "They also made some good defensive plays. Even after the lead, I was pitching like it was 0-0. This is my best game in the big leagues."

Palacios was a combined 13-15 in his spotty career, one that appeared ended last year when the Padres cut him before the season after he developed a shoulder injury. He then went to the Mexican League, where he played for the Yucatan Lions and the Aguascalientes Railroadmen.

"He had a bad arm but we liked him in the Mexican League," manager Joe Torre said. "I'd still have to say he has been a pleasant surprise this year.

"Tonight (Palacios) couldn't have been more perfect. One hit, one walk and he retired 21 in a row."

Tribe powers past Rangers

CLEVELAND (AP) — Albert Belle, facing a 10-day suspension for using a corked bat, hit one of Cleveland's five home runs and also tripled Tuesday night as the Indians beat the Texas Rangers 12-3.

Paul Sorrento homered twice and drove in a career-high five runs, and Jim Thome and Wayne Kirby also homered for Cleveland, which is 25-5 over its last 30 games at Jacobs Field.

The Indians received a couple of scares in the game. Second baseman Carlos Baerga twisted his right ankle on a pickoff attempt in the third inning, and starter Charles Nagy fell to the ground in pain after Rusty Greer lined a ball off his left knee in the eighth. Nagy finished out the eighth before leaving; Baerga left in the fifth.

Belle's fifth-inning home run, his 27th, was his first homer and only his fourth hit in 19 at-bats since his bat was seized Friday night in Chicago.

Nagy (8-6) allowed three runs and seven hits, walked one and struck out six. Rookie Hector Fajardo (5-6) gave up seven runs and seven hits in five innings.

Buffs nab spot in JTL final

Snyder ousts Winters after falling to tourney host S'water

SWEETWATER — Snyder took the hard road into today's championship of the District Junior Teenage League Baseball Tournament.

The Buffs [illegible] Winters, 5-4, in Tuesday's nightcap, right after falling to tourney host Sweetwater, 10-1.

Snyder and Sweetwater will battle today for the tournament crown. Action begins at 6 p.m. at Mustang Field. A win by Snyder in the 6 o'clock game would force a second and deciding contest at 8 p.m.

Snyder scored a pair of runs in the first inning and three in the second to get past Winters in Tuesday's late game.

The Buffs opened a 2-0 lead after Jeremiah Johnson and Scott Sanders each reached on errors and scored in the top of the first frame.

Matthew Melton hammered a single and tagged the dish in the second on a fielder's choice that put John Border on base. Border scored after two consecutive Winters miscues that also allowed Johnson to come home.

Kyle Beck was the winner, striking out 13 and limiting Winters to just three hits.

Winters' Steve Powell was the losing pitcher. Powell gave up five hits and fanned 11.

Winters was eliminated with the loss.

The Buffs were able to get just one hit off Sweetwater pitcher Kris Warner, a leadoff single from Johnson to start the first in Tuesday's late game.

Sweetwater drove in four runs in the last of the opening stanza, two each on doubles from Tim Bell and Jason Gomez.

The host squad added four in the second and two in the third.

The Buffs' lone run came in the fifth when Melton reached on an error and scored on a sacrifice fly from Eric Gard.

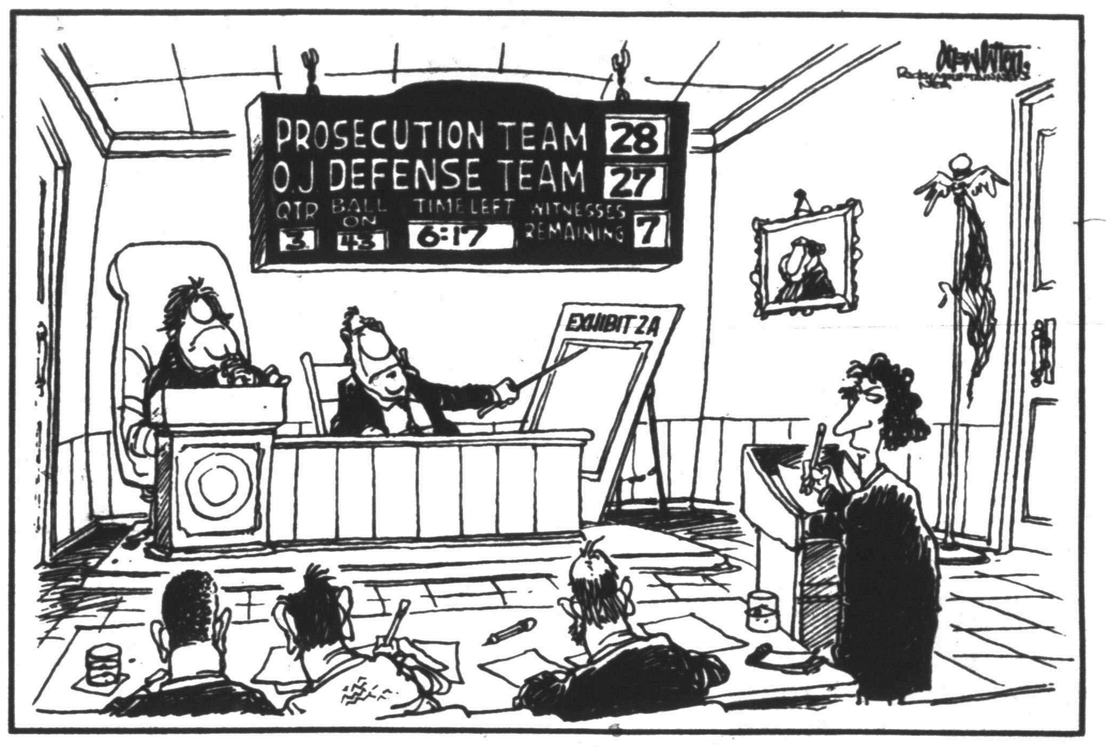

Warner earned the win with eight strikeouts and just one walk in a complete-game appearance.

The Buffs used three pitchers. Sweetwater accumulated six hits and six walks against Beck, Gene Pollard and Jason Sealy.

Beck, who worked the first, was the loser.

'Pokes invite White, Dorsett to join team's Ring of Honor

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have invited Tony Dorsett and Randy White to be inducted this year into the team's Ring of Honor, a newspaper reported today, quoting sources close to the players.

Both have accepted, and indications are they will travel to Austin this week, perhaps Friday, for the formal announcement, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

Induction during the regular upcoming season would make theirs the ninth and tenth names immortalized on the facade of Texas Stadium.

Club owner Jerry Jones, the one-man selection committee for the Ring of Honor, said Tuesday he has decided on this year's inductees, but would not confirm the names of Dorsett and White.

However, he noted the two are to be inducted on July 30 into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, and said that makes their selection into the Ring of Honor a logical one.

Both players have an agreement with the Cowboys to avoid talking about their Ring induction until this week's news conference, the newspaper said.

White, a nine-time Pro Bowler, is recognized as one of the greatest defenders in NFL history. He played 209 games in 14 Cowboys seasons, both the second-longest marks in franchise history. The defensive tackle, a No.1 pick from Maryland in 1975, recorded 111 sacks during a career that ended in 1988.

Dorsett is the team's all-time leading rusher with 12,036 yards, a figure that places him fourth in National Football League history.

The club's No.1 draft pick out of Pittsburgh in 1977, Dorsett is among the club leaders in touchdowns (first), scoring (second) and receptions (third). A four-time Pro Bowler who was featured in Super Bowls in his first two seasons, he led the team in rushing nine times during the 10 years he spent with the Cowboys.

Already in the Ring of Honor are defensive lineman Bob Lilly (inducted in 1975), quarterback Don Meredith (1976), running back Don Perkins (1976), linebacker Chuck Howley (1977), defensive back Mel Renfro (1981), quarterback Roger Staubach (1983), linebacker Lee Roy Jordan (1989) and coach Tom Landry (1993).

Clemmer hurls Snyder to extra-inning victory

PALESTINE — Terry Clemmer got just enough offensive support to come out on the winning side of a pitchers' duel with Bangs' Jamie Cole as Snyder Gold posted a 7-4 extra-inning win in first-round action at the Senior Teenage League State Baseball Tournament Tuesday.

Clemmer fanned 19 and scattered four hits to claim the nine-inning victory. Cole was the loser in spite of his 13 strikeouts and limiting Snyder Gold to just three hits.

John Clinkinbeard slammed a 2-RBI double in the top of the ninth, scoring Chris Mitchell and Jeremy House. Clinkinbeard came home on a Bangs error to wind up the scoring.

Curt Rinehart scored on a Trent Owen sacrifice and House tagged home on a fielder's choice in the second.

Snyder pushed two more over in the third. Clemmer singled and scored on an error, and Rinehart got aboard then came in on miscues.

Gold will take on Corsicana, a 10-3 winner over Comanche on Tuesday, at 5 p.m. Thursday.

In other opening-day action, defending state champion Crockett hammered New Boston 20-3.

Today's contests feature Corrigan versus Crockett in a 5 p.m. winners' bracket game, and New Boston against Comanche in an elimination battle, also at 5 p.m.

The New Boston-Comanche winner will face Bangs and the Corrigan-Crockett loser will square off against Brownwood in today's 8 p.m. games.

The tournament winds up with Saturday's championship final.

Mavs start mini-camp minus first draft pick

DALLAS (AP) — First-round draft pick Jason Kidd is already in the doghouse of Dallas Mavericks coach Dick Motta, who is upset that the second pick overall in this year's NBA draft is sitting out the team's mini-camp this week.

"Jason looked me in the eye after the draft and said, 'If I have to crawl on my belly for free to get there (mini-camp), I'll be there. I took it as a point guard's word. I don't want this to affect our relationship, but I'm very upset," Motta said before a team dinner Tuesday night.

Kidd is still unsigned, but the Mavericks offered him a $36 million insurance policy to attend the four-day camp. But Aaron Goodwin, Kidd's agent, said the Mavericks' offer was unacceptable.

Every other Mavericks' rookie, veteran and free agent, with the exception of forward Lorenzo Williams, who had an illness in the family, reported to the voluntary camp. Two-a-days began today.

"We had talked about this. We told Kidd if he was really interested in polishing up his tarnished image, he should do blank and blank and blank. One of those things was to come to mini-camp. That idea was endorsed by him, his family and his agent," Motta said.

"I can honestly look anyone in the eye and say him not being here will have no bearing on how he's treated once he does get here. But what a great opportunity to get a jump start on next season. Now, he's deprived himself of that."

Dixie claims District V crown

ABILENE — Underdog Abilene Dixie completed a 2-game sweep of Abilene Eastern Tuesday to claim the District V Little League Baseball championship.

Dixie, which eliminated Snyder on Saturday, downed Eastern 20-10 in Tuesday's final, after posting a 7-4 win in the series opener on Monday.

Dixie advances to the 8-team regional tournament in Iowa Park with the victory. The regional winner will play in the state tourney in Waco.

AL players draw suspensions

NEW YORK (AP) — Chicago catcher Ron Karkovice, Detroit infielder Tony Phillips and Kansas City infielder Bob Hamelin were suspended by the American League on Tuesday for separate incidents.

Hamelin was suspended for five games for charging Detroit pitcher Greg Cadaret on July 15 and starting a brawl.

Karkovice and Phillips each was suspended three games for making physical contact with umpires. Karkovice had a run-in with umpire Brian O'Nora on July 8, and Phillips touched umpire Tim Tschida on July 9.

All three players have appealed their suspensions, which can't begin until hearings are held.

O.J. offers award for real killer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson will offer a $250,000 reward to help police locate "the real killer" of his ex-wife and her friend, according to TV reports.

The reward will be offered for information leading to an arrest and conviction in the killings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman, KNBC and NBC News reported Tuesday.

The Associated Press' repeated calls to the offices, homes and cars of Simpson's lawyers were not returned.

KNBC also reported that Goldman's family has hired a lawyer to prepare a wrongful death lawsuit against Simpson, 47, who has pleaded innocent to murder and is being held without bail.

Meanwhile Tuesday, 15 leaders from the city's black community met with District Attorney Gil Garcetti to quell racial tensions arising from the case and urge Garcetti not to seek the death penalty if Simpson is convicted.

"We don't need to add another human being to that already overcrowded (Death Row) line that is clearly a product of racism in this country and a product of classism in this country," said John Mack, president of the Urban League's Los Angeles chapter.

Garcetti is expected to announce sometime before the trial whether he'll ask the jury to recommend a death sentence if Simpson is convicted.

He assured the leaders that Simpson would get a fair trial.

"I am hopeful, I am confident, that we can indeed find white, black, brown, every color jury there is, who will indeed be fair and impartial," Garcetti said.

Media reports over the weekend said the defense team was considering a claim that racism prompted Detective Mark Fuhrman — who like the victims is white — to plant a bloody glove at Simpson's mansion. Police say the glove matches another found near the bodies.

Fuhrman denied planting the glove. Lead defense lawyer Robert Shapiro said he may argue that evidence was planted, but would not say racism was a motive.

Questions about Fuhrman's racial attitudes are pertinent, said celebrity lawyer Johnnie Cochran Jr., who attended the meeting with Garcetti.

"As much as I don't want to see race brought into this case, if this person has a feeling against minorities, his credibility becomes very much at issue," he said.

A new poll shows that Californians are divided along racial lines on the question of Simpson's guilt or innocence.

Fifty-eight percent of adults of all races questioned by the Field Poll say it is "very likely or somewhat likely" that Simpson committed the slayings compared with 17 percent who feel it is "not too likely or not likely at all."

But just 38 percent of blacks believe it is likely he committed the crimes compared to 62 percent of whites.

Additionally, 55 percent of whites believe it is likely Simpson can get a fair trial compared to 35 percent of blacks.

The poll of 847 adults, conducted between July 12 and Sunday, has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

Blunt trauma caused death

LUBBOCK (AP) — A toddler found dead in a Lubbock County pasture suffered blunt trauma to the head and abdomen, autopsy results show.

Leon Rivera's death is considered a homicide, police Spokesman Bill Morgan said Tuesday. No arrests have been made.

Leon, who would have turned 2 this weekend, disappeared while playing Friday in the front yard of a family friend. A volunteer from the Civil Air Patrol found his body Monday evening in tall weeds about 8 miles north of Idalou.

He was wearing the clothes he wore when he disappeared: T-shirt, shorts and sandals decorated with Sesame Street characters.

Morgan said the toddler suffered trauma to the back of the skull and the abdomen, where major vessels were ruptured.

"Knowing now the cause of death presents us with a new set of questions to put to several people," he said.

Explosion in Argentina...

More bodies pulled from site

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — More bodies were pulled from the rubble today as rescuers searched with diminishing hopes for dozens believed buried by a deadly blast that flattened the offices of two Jewish groups.

Dr. Alberto Crescenti, head of the Emergency Medical System, said at least 32 people died in Monday's explosion. At least 127 people were injured, and Jewish leaders on Tuesday released a list of 74 people feared buried in the ruins.

Workers no longer heard voices under the pile of jagged glass, steel and concrete, but were continuing the search anyway, Crescenti said. Israeli experts arrived late Tuesday and immediately began going over the debris with sophisticated listening devices and German shepherds.

Federal police, who have cordoned off the scene since the explosion Monday, demanded silence from onlookers to aid the Israelis.

Earlier Tuesday, a man trapped for 31 hours was pulled from the shambles of the building that once housed the Delegation of Argentine Israeli Associations and the Argentine Israelite Mutual Association.

Jacobo Echemanuel, 56, opened his eyes and smiled as he was carried out on a stretcher to the cheers of doctors and rescue workers. He had been trapped beneath a steel beam and masonry.

At least nine people have been taken from the rubble alive.

Police kept silent on leads in the investigation, but officials from President Carlos Menem on down called the explosion an attack. Menem said it was planned "from abroad and helped by people here."

Israel blamed Muslim fundamentalists backed by Iran for the attack, but Iran denied the charge.

Authorities speculated the explosion may have been caused by a car bomb similar to one that destroyed the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires in 1992, killing at least 28 people. Israel blamed Muslim fundamentalists for that attack.

Iran's spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, today sharply attacked Israel for blaming the explosion on Tehran.

"The Zionist regime is the clearest example of state terrorism in the world," Khamenei said on Tehran radio. "Because of their filthy nature, the Zionists have no right to adjudicate on Islamic Iran."

At 250,000, Argentina's Jewish population is the largest in Latin America.

Peace officers note arrests, burglaries

Area law enforcement officers made two arrests and investigated complaints of burglary, theft and criminal mischief Tuesday.

Snyder police arrested a 32-year-old man and a 33-year-old woman in the 3200 block of Avenue B at 8:17 p.m. on Class A misdemeanor charges of possession of marijuana.

At 8:39 a.m. Tuesday, Tammy Maxfield contacted sheriff's deputies in reference to a break-in at Snyder Iron & Metal. A report for burglary of a business was filed.

At 1:05 p.m., Becca Flynn contacted deputies in reference to a break-in at her cabin at Lake Thomas. A report was filed.

Howard Gray of Howard Gray Motors contacted deputies at 3 p.m. in reference to a theft by check. A report for Class A theft was filed.

Peggy Vernon contacted police at 9:25 p.m. Tuesday to report damage to the Girl Scout Hut. A report for Class B criminal mischief was filed.

A woman contacted police at 12:30 this morning in reference to a 15-year-old boy attempting suicide in the 2900 block of Avenue F. The juvenile was transported to the police department, where MHMR was contacted. The boy was later released to the probation officer.

Harsh conditions

GOMA, Zaire (AP) — Officials oversaw the first mass burial of victims of the world's largest exodus today and prepared for more as a cholera epidemic took hold in this town overwhelmed by Rwandan refugees.

Despite assurances of safety from Rwanda's new government, tens of thousands more Rwandans fled across the border today. In the past week, some 1.7 million people have left Rwanda, fearing retribution from victorious rebels.

On the road to Goma's airport, bodies filled a mass grave at the edge of a banana plantation.

'Melrose' star likes athletics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What's more fun for Andrew Shue: starring in one of television's hottest new shows, "Melrose Place," or getting sweaty and dirty on a soccer field?

"Definitely, being an athlete," he says. "There's nothing inherently good in being famous."

Higher interest rates?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan warned Congress today that interest rates may need to [illegible] tion remains in check.

In May, the last time the central bank pushed rates up, it said it had substantially finished its course of monetary tightening.

But, since then, it's become clear that economic growth has raced ahead at a pace appreciably faster than it can maintain without worsening inflation, Greenspan said in testimony prepared for the Senate Banking Committee.

"It is an open question whether our actions to date have been sufficient to head off inflationary pressures and thus maintain favorable trends in the economy," he said.

Greenspan carefully avoided saying rates definitely would rise, or when the move would occur.

Andrew Griggs

1916-1994

STAMFORD — Graveside services were set for 10 a.m. today in the Highland Memorial Cemetery for Andrew Kelon Griggs, 78, who died Saturday at his home.

He was the brother of Saundra Fletcher of Snyder.

Born in Stamford, he was a U.S. Army veteran of World War II and had worked for the Social Security Administration in Baltimore before retiring in 1974 when he returned to Stamford.

Survivors include a son, Kennth Andrew Griggs of Tucson; two brothers, Billie Joe Griggs of Aspermont and Johnny Mack Griggs of Garland; and another sister, Dorothy Ann Anders of Midland.

L.C. Hardy

1915-1994

ANSON — Services were set for 2 p.m. today in the First Baptist Church for L.C. Hardy, 79, who died Monday in an Anson hospital. Burial will follow in the Mount Hope Cemetery.

He was the brother of Jimmy Hardy of Snyder.

Born in Jones County, he attended school in Anson, was a U.S. Army veteran of World War II and a member of the First Baptist Church. He married Maxie Dean in Stamford in 1950 and worked for the Texas Highway Department. After retirement in 1979, Mr. Hardy was a self-employed electrician.

Survivors also include his wife, Maxie Hardy of Anson; two sons, Mike Hardy and Pat Hardy, both of Anson; and five grandchildren.

Death ruled heart attack

An 84-year-old Snyder man involved in a one-vehicle collision Tuesday apparently died as a result of a heart attack immediately prior to the wreck.

Floyd James Jennings was pronounced dead at 12:14 p.m. by Dr. B.R. Respess in the emergency room at Cogdell Memorial Hospital. Dr. Respess ruled the cause of death as a heart attack prior to the collision.

Jennings was the driver of a 1975 Dodge Dart which struck a traffic light pole in the 4200 block of College Avenue about 11:26 a.m. Witnesses said the Dart was southbound in the 4100 block when it accelerated through through a red light and veered to the right, leaving the road and striking a traffic pole on the southwest corner of the intersection of College and 42nd Street.

Firemen battle three grass fires

Snyder Fire Department responded to three grass fires Tuesday, including a large one along the Santa Fe Railroad right-of-way.

Firemen were dispatched at 1:20 p.m. to battle a grass fire which extended from FM 612 to the Garza County line along the railroad right-of-way. The fire is believed to have been started by a train.

At 3:43 p.m., firemen were sent to the 900 block of 35th Street to put out a grass fire. Firefighters were sent back to the vicinity at 4:32 p.m. to extinguish a separate grass fire. The cause of those two fires is still under investigation.

Woman files suit against J. Caan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman who claims she dated James Caan has accused him of beating and choking her.

In a lawsuit filed Tuesday in Santa Monica Superior Court, Leesa Anne Roland claims Caan attacked her May 15 at the Century City Inn. Police are investigating her allegation, said Lt. John Dunkin.

Caan's publicist, Michelle Bega, had no comment.

Roland, who says she began dating Caan in early 1993, claims in her lawsuit that Caan became upset when she refused to tell him who she was speaking with on the telephone. He allegedly punched her several times, "picked her up by the neck with both of his hands, choking her ... and threw her into the hallway."

In March, Caan was booked for investigation of brandishing a weapon during an argument. He hasn't been charged pending a city attorney's hearing next week.

Mitchell JP resigns amid investigation

COLORADO CITY — A justice of the peace facing a grand jury investigation resigned here Tuesday morning.

Keith Ruddick, peace justice for Precincts 2 and 3, submitted his letter of resignation during Tuesday's commissioners court meeting.

Ruddick had come under fire earlier this year when an external audit criticized him for not filing monthly reports or making timely deposits. District Attorney Frank Conard said fines paid in cash to the Mitchell County Sheriff's Office were turned over to Ruddick's office. Those funds can't be accounted for now, said Conard, who has subpoenaed records from the peace justice's office.

County Judge Ray Mayo said commissioners won't be able to appoint Ruddick's replacement until external and internal audits are completed. The audits can't begin while the records are subpoenaed. Mayo said that the peace justice for Precincts 1 and 4, Glenda Haltom, will handle all cases until an appointment is made.

Ruddick, a Democrat, is running unopposed for re-election in November.

Entomology Report

By Mark Logan, County Entomologist

Scattered rain showers have left from 0.3 inches of rain to over 1.5 inches of rain, and then there are some areas that remain dry. This rainfall will give the cotton an extra boost but in most cases will not be sufficient to dramatically increase yields. We are starting to see some insect activity in some of the lusher fields. Bollworm eggs are appearing, with the most activity in lake bottoms and fields with sufficient rainfall. Boll weevil trap counts have crashed, which means the weevils have moved to the cotton fields. We should see an increase in boll weevil punctured squares. Some fields are beginning to bloom, and will soon reach cutout without moisture. There is an occasional field that for some unknown reason is blooming and has 6 to 7 nodes above the first position white flower, which means that plant has sufficient horsepower to produce good yields.

With bollworms and bollworm eggs beginning to appear in some fields, producers will need to determine if control is justified and if the crop is worth protecting. Producers need to keep from using pyrethroids for bollworm control until August. Other products such as Larvin or Ovasyn can be mixed with Bt's. This strategy will work if the applications are targeted at the proper worm size. Fields need to be scouted at least twice a week to make control decisions. The use of pyrethroids has spoiled us by controlling up to 5 day old bollworms.

With the side effects we see when using pyrethroids, such as aphid flareups, we have to keep from using these insecticides early in the season. Thus, fields should be scouted twice a week to use the more "environmentally friendly insecticides." Or as one farmer puts it, we're trying to save as many "friendlies" as possible.

To determine the need to control inseason boll weevils, 100 squares should be pulled in each field and percent punctured squares need to be determined. If 25 to 30 punctured squares are present, boll weevil control may be justified. Several good insecticides are available for boll weevil control. Boll weevils should also be present in the fields along with the punctured squares to justify control.

AGRIFACTS

WHEAT

About half of the state's wheat acreage is grown on the Texas High Plains, where more than a third is irrigated. Most of the wheat grown in Texas is of the hard red winter varieties, planted in September and October. Producers in 1993 harvested 118 million bushels, down about 10 percent from the previous year.

Rains still needed for cotton crop

LUBBOCK — Scattered mid-July showers have been welcomed by area cotton farmers of the Texas High and Rolling Plains even though most places have gotten only a trace of rain.

County extension agents around the area said that most of their counties had not seen rain since May and that with the recent showers there has been high wind and some hail.

"Hardeman County in the past couple of weeks received two to three inches of rain, except with the rain was lots of high winds which burned some cotton," said Douglas Wilson, county agent.

"The survival instinct of High Plains dryland cotton has astounded everybody," said Kater Hake, cotton agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "Cotton plants are still alive two months after planting into dust dry soil with only two inches of rain."

"However, at this time of year the plant needs to do more than just stay alive, it needs to retain squares, blooms and bolls. Without additional rain during July, yield prospects on dryland cotton are slim."

"The dryland cotton is in pretty bad shape because we have not had a rain since May," said Richard Spencer, Fisher County extension agent.

"We need some good timely rains within the next two weeks so the dryland cotton can make it," added John Farris, Dawson County extension agent.

How well the cotton is doing depends on where you are. Most of the cotton that was in a four- to five-leaf stage is probably gone due to the severe winds that have been blowing over the past few weeks. Some of the dryland cotton rececived some rain and it has helped it begin to recover. Most of the cotton is anywhere between a seven-leaf stage to beginning to bloom. These 100-plus-degree days have put a lot of heat stress on the dryland and irrigated cotton. The irrigated cotton is progressing well and beginning to catch up in growth. Most of the irrigated fields are in good shape now with 93 pecent square set, Height-to-Node Ratio near an inch and entering blooms.

"Subsoil moisture is lacking, and without July rains, these fields could suffer water stress during peak bloom," said Hake.

"During the next month irrigated cotton will pass through the most critical stage for moisture, because two factors collide during this period; the plant's greatest sensitivity to fruit shedding water stress and the plant's greatest daily water use," Hake said.

"The sixth-tenths of an inch I got last week helped cool things down and let my cotton recuperate," said Mike Hughes, a farmer in Dawson County who irrigates cotton.

"If water stress can be avoided until five weeks after first bloom, there will be sufficient time for four weeks of boll retention and a week for the youngest boll to grow and stick on the plant," said Hake.

"Checking the depth of moisture is an easy gauge of when pivot irrigated cotton will enter stress. Keep track on a weekly basis of the soil moisture depth in the drill row and in the furrow bottom," said Hake. "Checking the moisture, one to two days behind the pivot should allow time for the wetting front to reach its maximum depth."

Where moisture is eight to 12 inches deep, additional inputs of fertilizer and Pix may not provide an economic return but where moisture is 18 to 24 inches deep the yield prospects look good.

The 100-degree days are rough on the cotton but have slowed things down with insects which prey on the plants.

"There are two factors affecting the insects: first, it has been too hot and second, there was nothing for them to eat," said Dr. Jim Leser, extension entomologist.

The boll weevils have not been bad in most counties. Some counties had to spray earlier for the boll weevils that over-wintered.

"There was a strong peak of boll weevils earlier when the cotton was planted but the timing was just right so the boll weevils died out because of nothing to eat," said Nathan Anderson, extension agent in Jones County.

"There has been some egg laying but nothing major right now in my cotton. I did have a few boll weevils earlier in the season," said Hughes.

"The southern High Plains will have some boll weevils if it rains and there has been some treatments in Gaines and Dawson counties on full pivot circles," added Leser.

Researchers sniff out a solution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following their noses, Agriculture Department researchers think they may have sniffed out a solution to insect pests by using their own scents against them.

To attract mates, female insects will often release pheromones — distinct perfume-like chemicals — that help the males find them.

Now, entomologists have designed a system that floods a crop field with the enticing aromas, making it difficult for the males to stay on any particular female's trail, according to USDA's Agricultural Research magazine.

"Normally the male would follow a pheromone trail and find the female," Agricultural Research Service entomologist Everett Mitchell said. "But in our test plots, we put out pheromone dispensers that make it seem like there are thousands of females everywhere. The males are overwhelmed, confused and don't know where to go."

The bombardment of pheromones can result in desensitization of the males to the point that the insects fail to recognize the pheromone as a sign of a female.

The research by Mitchell and fellow entomologist John McLaughlin has been done at an Environmental Protection Agency laboratory that specializes in seeking alternatives to insecticide-based pest control. Besides the environmental concerns surrounding insecticides, pheromones may also help circumvent the pests' growing resistance to such chemicals.

Mitchell and McLaughlin first tested the use of pheromones in 1990-91 against the diamondback moth, which was plaguing Florida cabbage growers.

Crop report

The following specific livestock, crop and weather conditions were reported by district Extension directors:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture adequate to short. Pastures, ranges in good condition. Corn tasseling, some disease problems. Sorghum benefitting from rain. Harvesting onions, potatoes. Cattle in good condition.

SOUTH PLAINS: Soil moisture short to very short. Dry, hot conditions damaged pastures, ranges. Irrigated cotton, corn, sorghum, peanuts, vegetables in good condition. Cattle in good condition.

ROLLING PLAINS: Soil moisture adequate. Pastures, ranges improved with rains. Cotton squaring, setting bolls. Peanuts, sorghum progressing. Livestock in good condition.

NORTH TEXAS: Soil moisture surplus to short. Pastures, ranges benefited from rain. Cotton 75 percent squaring. Sorghum heading. 10 percent turning color. Harvesting wheat, watermelons, cantaloupes, tomatoes. Peach harvest completed.

EAST TEXAS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges in fair condition. Cutting hay. Harvesting peaches, vegetables. Corn denting. Spraying for pecan pests.

FAR WEST TEXAS: Soil moisture very short to adequate. Pastures, ranges in fair condition. Cotton, sorghum need rain. Cultivating crops. Harvesting onions, cantaloupes, peaches. Baling hay. Gardens progressing. Livestock fair to good.

WEST CENTRAL TEXAS: Soil moisture very short to adequate. Pastures, ranges improved with rains. Oats, dryland peanuts in poor condition. Sorghum needs moisture. Harvesting peaches. Livestock in good condition.

CENTRAL TEXAS: Soil moisture short. Pastures, ranges in good condition. Harvesting sorghum. Cotton blooming, good fruit load. Spraying for pecan pests. Cattle in fair condition, losing weight.

SOUTHEAST TEXAS: Soil moisture adequate to very short. Pastures, ranges need moisture. Harvesting watermelons, corn, vegetables, sorghum, hay. Irrigating cotton. Gardens showing drought stress. Spraying pecans for pests.

SOUTHWEST TEXAS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges in good condition. Harvesting hay, sorghum. Corn in fair condition. Cotton progressing.

Every week you make dozens of decisions that directly affect the environment of this planet. At work, at home and at play, the choices you make are a never-ending series of votes for or against the environment. To become personally involved in waste reduction, you must be willing to make some lifestyle and attitude changes. You must:

•Become better informed about services available in your community, then you can avoid duplication.

•Get to know other citizens with similar ideas and goals. It increases your strengths and generates new ideas.

•Analyze your household and your personal habits. Reduce your own consumpton of products that generate waste. Overhaul your own attitudes. Get the one person involved that you know you can control — YOU.

As a wise man once said, "Nobody made a greater mistake than he who did nothing because he could only do a little." Become a conscientious consumer. It's the right thing to do.

When kids' play becomes abuse

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is it safe to throw a baby in the air and catch it? My son-in-law does it constantly and I'm always afraid he will drop my grandchild.

DEAR READER: I suspect that for eons fathers have tossed their babies into the air and caught them. This is probably as much a rite of passage for new fathers as it has been for infants. Nonetheless, on occasion, babies have been dropped during this playful activity, leading to tragedy.

Therefore, I agree with you: The practice carries risk and you are right to be concerned. However, your son-in-law is unlikely to acknowledge your opinion (or mine) on this subject. So my advice is to back off and hope that he will exercise prudence and moderation. An occasional gentle toss (with suitable safety allowances) is OK.

Repeated, high throws — especially if the baby seems unduly uncomfortable — are inappropriate and can lead to serious neck and head injuries — in short, a form of child abuse. Therefore, like so many other things in life, it's a question of degree.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My mother is 86 and quite thin. Angioplasty revealed her main coronary artery is totally blocked and the other two are 95 percent blocked. She was very active in her younger years, yet now finds she's unable to do much. Her doctor says she's not a candidate for bypass surgery or the new reaming procedure because of what he calls highly convoluted arteries. What about chelation? Can it do harm?

DEAR READER: No, it probably won't harm her. But it won't help either.

Your mother's condition is not unique. The elderly often suffer from blocked coronary arteries and the affliction may not, for a variety of reasons, be amenable to bypass surgery, angioplasty (the balloon treatment) or laser therapy.

In such instances, the judicious use of medication — such as nitroglycerine, beta-blockers, calcium channel blockers, or ACE inhibitors — may relieve symptoms and allow patients a new lease on life.

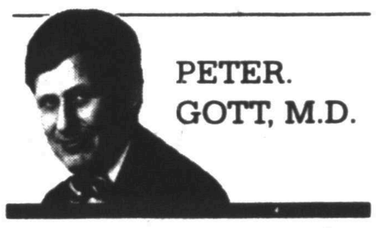

Your mother should see a cardiologist, who should be able to prescribe appropriate drugs, after examining her and reviewing her previous laboratory work.

In my opinion (and those of experts), chelation therapy — the use of a metal-binding compound administered intravenously — is not suitable treatment for coronary blockages due to arteriosclerosis. Follow the cardiologist's advice.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Understanding Heart Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

Three recent mountain lion attacks reported in Arizona

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Wildlife officials say fires and hot, dry weather in southern Arizona may be why people have been seeing more mountain lions, including one that attacked and nearly dragged off a 2-year-old.

Another mountain lion wandered through a Tucson neighborhood Tuesday and pawed at the window of a home before heading back into the desert. And a lion seized a pet goat from within a few feet of its 5-year-old owner last week at Fort Huachuca, about 80 miles southeast of Tucson.

The child was unharmed. Military police scared off the cougar with a shotgun. The goat had to be killed.

The 2-year-old, Jesse Humphreys, was attacked Sunday as he camped with his parents in the Tonto National Forest about 60 miles east of Phoenix. Joey Day said he grabbed his son as the cat tried to drag off the mat where the boy was sleeping.

Jesse's only injuries were scratches and a gash in his ear that required 10 stitches. The mountain lion continued to stalk the family for 20 minutes until it disappeared.

"I thought he was going to be breakfast," said Jesse's mother, Suzi Humphreys.

Rory Aikens of the Arizona Game and Fish Department said the boy was lucky to be alive.

"Mountain lion attacks are rare," Aikens said. "But quite often, when they do happen, they attack small kids. A small critter moving in a bush is a critter moving in a bush. Just because it's dinner on two legs rather than four doesn't matter."

He said the mountain lion that attacked the boy had not been found.

Arizona Game and Fish Department officials said wildfires and extremely arid weather may have forced the animals into inhabited areas to search for food and water.

Actor recovering

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Richard Mulligan, star of the NBC situation comedy "Empty Nest," was doing well after surgery to remove a polyp from his intestines.

The growth was removed Monday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, said hospital spokesman Ron Wise.

Doctors were examining the tissue to determine what caused it, he said. Wise did not know when Mulligan might be released.

Flood damage in one Georgia county exceeds $500 million

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — Officials say it will cost more than $500 million to repair flood damage to roads, bridges, sewers and public buildings in just one hard-hit county.

Dougherty County, where more than 20,000 Albany residents were forced from their homes, was the first in the state since flooding began two weeks ago.

The Southwest Georgia Regional Development Center, in a report to the federal Economic Development Administration, said its estimate does not include damage to about 8,500 private dwellings. Areas southwest of Albany that are still inundated have not been assessed.

Georgia must contribute 25 percent of the cleanup and infrastructure repairs in disaster areas; 75 percent will come from the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Meanwhile, the water was back on today in Macon area, where about 150,000 people had gone dry for two weeks since the Ocmulgee River flooded the water plant.

Officials warned residents to boil the water before using it.

"It's still kind of brown. I won't do the dishes, but I plan on taking a bath tonight," resident Joe Owens said Tuesday.

In Missouri, the Salvation Army began a drive in the St. Louis area to collect money, food, paper products, cleaning supplies and baby items for flood victims in Georgia, Alabama and Florida.

"We want to return the favor to our friends in the Southeast who helped us during our time of need," said Lt. Col. Gordon Spicer, noting that Georgia residents donated $249,925 for flood relief in Missouri and southern Illinois last year.

Zookeepers play cupid for rhino

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — How do you sweep a rhinoceros off her feet?

Keepers at the Toledo Zoo hope the answer is a more romantic rhino.

White rhinos Lulu and Sam have shared space at the zoo since November 1988. In all that time, they haven't managed to mate.

"We felt maybe Sam was inexperienced, because he didn't know quite how to do it," said zoo registrar Glenous Favata. "He has made an effort, but it never worked out."

So the zoo is paying $2,000 to bring in Rufus, a 5,000-pounder who has been on display at Kings Dominion, an amusement park outside Richmond, Va.

"Rufus is a proven breeder," said Scott Shoemaker, zoology manager for Kings Dominion.

Rufus was recommended to the zoo by the Species Survival Program of Fort Worth, Texas, which tries to breed endangered or threatened animals in zoos. He has fathered at least one offspring, Shoemaker said.

Only 150 white rhinoceros are in captivity in the United States.

Rufus is expected to arrive next week, and will spend three months with Lulu — sans Sam — in the African Savannah exhibit. Keepers hope the pair will produce the Toledo Zoo's first rhinoceros baby.

"We just hope she'll be in a receptive mood, and he's virile enough," said Tim French, the zoo's curator of mammals.
