Rain Puts Damper On T-O Fair Sunday

Kay Takes 'Shot' At Newspapers

Sunday School Lecturer Adds Criticism To His Praise of News Reporting Achievements of Great News Agency.

The newspapers of the world, in many instances, have deteriorated in quality in the last 20 years and, in the main, are feeding readers considerable trash they would be better off without.

Such was the opinion of Judge John C. Kay who, in his Sunday morning Bible class lecture yesterday devoted his entire time to a discussion of the public press, the Associated Press, books and literature of the age. He tempered his charges, so far as the papers were concerned, with an admission that they probably were giving the public just what the public wanted, but added to this an assertion that the people of Wichita Falls and of the world ought to demand of publishers not only the truth, but clean truth.

He Praises A. P.

The Associated Press was praised by the speaker as a great, fearless and impartial news gathering agency, which, however, now and then feeds to the public some unadulterated bunk simply to please all the classes. For instance, he said, the Associated Press knows that nobody in the United States ever lived to be 110 years old, but about once a month the Associated Press comes along with announcement of some age-old individual who has just died.

"It's always some colored brother or some Mexican or an Indian way off where nobody can check up," he said.

His address in full was as follows:

Address In Full.

"For a topical subject this morning, I am going to talk to you for a little while, if I may, about that great American institution, the Associated Press.

"The Associated Press is an organization of newspapers associated among themselves for the interchange of news, as I understand it. Now, it is a wonderful institution. It is accurate and truthful about important things. In other words, if they are going to print something that they know is going to be read by intelligent people, then the news is accurate. They send men to the wars, to the scenes of calamities and disasters, to political meetings, to church gatherings, to all kinds of meetings, to obtain accurate information. Their election news is accurate. You have to give the palm to these people when it comes to the diligence with which they seek the news and the accuracy with which they print it. But, that is not true of all the stuff they print.

Example of Sensation.

"They feel that they have got to print something for the ignorant man, for the careless man, for the sensational man, for the gossipy man, well knowing that he never checks his news. So, about once a year, you will see a big headline that the great volcano of Stromboli in the Mediterranean is in eruption. And, it is true, but not news. The reason I know it is true is because Stromboli has been in eruption every minute since the dawn of history.

"And, at least once a month, you will see where some fellow died that was 116 years old, or 120 years old, or 110. Now, nobody ever lived in the United States to be 110 years old, and the Associated Press knows that, and, when you come to read about it it is always some colored brother, or some Mexican, or some Indian, away off somewhere whom nobody can check up and nobody can trace. People don't live always.

He Makes Dare.

"I know the Associated Press is not going to hear what I say, this morning, but I challenge them to produce authentic records showing that any man in the United States ever lived to be 105 years old.

"They feel that they have got to do something for the sensational man, and that is the reason that there is poured on you all this indecent hog-wash that is now coming out of California, and many other cases which you will remember. Much of that stuff, and I say it reluctantly, is not fit to go into a gentleman's home. But you say, as they will say, "well, you read it." Not much of it, but I have been reading some of it lately with a view of making a few remarks here.

"It is a curious fact, well worth the attention of every newspaper man, and everybody else, I think, that the cleanest papers in the United States have been generally the most successful. And, it is a curious thing that the paper with the smallest headlines can borrow the most money at the bank. Now, if you think that is not true, you can find it out. I am not talking about our local papers, this morning, I am talking about conditions throughout the country.

The Fourth Estate.

"I never quite understood the functions of a newspaper. I don't concede all that they claim. They are properly called the fourth estate, and it is supposed, among the newspapers, that they perform a public function, and that they are a public servant, and do a public good. That, I think is true, but it is not wholly true. I do not know of any newspaper that isn't run for

AUTO LICENSE CUT OPPOSED

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 3 (AP).—The senate will not pass the Dale house bills calling for reduction in motor license fees and for the raising of the gasoline tax to three cents per gallon, and will postpone consideration until the 40th legislature appeared sure today. It will precipitate a fight between the two houses and may result in the calling of a secona extra session by the governor.

A resolution will be introduced in the senate Monday by Senators R. A. Stuart, of Fort Worth, John Davis, of Dalls, and Charles Floyd, of Paris, calling upon the senate to postpone consideration of these recognized administration measure until the 40th legislature.

The prepared resolution recites that the senate has passed a bill appropriating $2,700,000 to the available school fund to raise the per capita appropriation from $11.50 and states that the 40th legislature can raise the remainder of the fund needed to bring the apportionment to $15. It advocates postponement of consideration on all revenue raising measures. It says that the motor fee bill and the gasoline tax bill involve the entire highway subject motor vehicle transportation and public school system of Texas, and that until the house committee has investigated the highway department that the senate cannot act intelligently upon the needs of this department until the conditions are reported to the 40th legislature.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3. (AP)—Florida officials no longer believe that their state can take care of its hurricane sufferers without outside aid in the opinion of James L. Fieser, vice chairman of the American Red Cross who returned to headquarters today after spending two weeks in the storm swept area.

He attributed to local pride the early dissemination of statements that southern Florida was not so bad off as people had been led to believe.

PASTOR FLAYS OPERATION OF FAIR SUNDAYS

Rev. S. A. Barnes Denounces T.-O. Fair As "Two-Bit" Exposition

A fair which runs on Sunday is an open affront to Christainity and a disgrace to the city, while at the same time some "two-bit newspapers and two-bit fairs in Wichita Falls ought to be sued for slander for announcing a Methodist minister would deliver a sermon on the fair grounds Sunday morning."

Such, at least, are the ideas of Rev. S. A. Barnes, pastor of the Floral Heights Methodist church who from his pulpit Sunday morning delivered a scathing broadside against the operation of the Texas-Oklahoma fair on the sabbath.

Scores Newspapers

In a brief talk preceding in a communion service, Dr. Barnes remarked that "when I saw in the papers last week that Dr. Richardson (Dr. F. M. Richardson, presiding elder of this Methodist district) would deliver a sermon at the fair grounds Sunday morning I could hardly believe my eyes.

"I haven't been disappointed in but two or three Methodist preachers in my life," he continued, "and I didn't think I was going to be this time. I couldn't conceive of a Methodist minister of sincerity who would do a thing like that. But yesterday just to satisfy myself I called Dr. Richardson's home and was told he was in Magargle and wouldn't be back until late Sunday night.

"I asked about the report that he would talk at the fair grounds Sunday and learned that Dr. Richardson told those fellows two weeks ago that he would NOT speak there.

Dollar Chasing

"I want to come out right here, four square and flat footed against this thing of running fairs on Sundays, and if I was Dr. Richardson I'd sue some of these two-bit fairs and two-bit newspapers for publishing such things. I'd consider it a shame and a disgrace to me if they would say such things about me, and I consider it a shame and a disgrace to Wichita Falls that such a thing is allowed to be.

"The fault lies, I think, in the ceaseless chase for the dollar which is going on and on and submerging further and further our regard for the sanctity of Sunday."

BANDIT OPENS PENNEY STORE

Man Escapes In His Auto When Discovered In Building

Police Sunday night were trying to locate the driver of a Ford coupe who earlier broke into the J. C. Penney company's store, 713-715 Eighth street. Presence of the man in the store was discovered by Manager W. H. Lawson when the latter entered the building late Sunday, but the burglar escaped when he found himself discovered and fled in his car, a Ford coupe. He made his exit through the back door with Lawson in pursuit. The latter gave chase in another car and obtained a license number which he turned over to the police before the alleged burglar outdistanced him.

Manager Lawson could not be located last night for a statement as to his probable loss but at police headquarters it was stated that it is believed some goods had been removed from the building before the man was discovered.

At a late hour last night no arrest had been made by the police. At headquarters it was stated a check of the license number provided by Lawson was being made.

AIMEE STAGES BIG TABLEAUX

Accused Woman Evangelist Draws Big Crowd To Temple

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Oct. 3. (AP)—Thousands of members of Aimee Semple McPherson's flock gathered at Angelus temple today to witness "the march of the martyrs," a tableaux portraying famous Biblical scenes and depicting the "history of persecution."

The spectacle, staging of which was interpreted by her followers as drawing a parallel between the suffering of Biblical characters and what the evangelist has termed her own "persecution," followed a communion service in the morning which was heralded by Mrs. McPherson's announcement that it was to be the largest communion ever held.

The pastor selected "the great coronatino day" for the text of her sermon tonight which will be her last gesture from the pulpit before she appears in municipal court tomorrow morning for the second week of her hearing on a felony charge.

The first scene in the tableaux was the crucifixion of Christ at Calvary. Then followed a tableaux portraying the suffering of the martyred Stephen the beheading of St. Paul, the persecution of the christians by Nero of Rome, the burning of thre persons at the stake for printing the Bible and the burning as a witch of Joan of Arc.

The stated purpose of the company is to store, transfer and sell oil and natural gas.

El Jardin Open Later

El Jardin de los Suenos, The Record News Garden of Dreams, was a victim of the weather man Sunday as was the fair, the public and various other entities hereabouts.

Driving rains starting at noon ruined plans for another big opening in the afternoon, and accordingly the public was barred until weather conditions become more favorable. The gorgeous new residence, furnished with the best that can be had, will be opened again this week as soon as the ground dries up and incoming throngs can be accommodated without danger to the place.

Further announcement of the openings for the coming week will be made Tuesday morning.

FAIR MAY RUN THROUGH NEXT SUNDAY NIGHT

Fair Will Collect Loss In Crowds Sunday Through Insurance

When officials of the Texas-Oklahoma fair association announced Saturday night that they "guaranteed no dust on the race track Sunday afternoon" they spoke the gospel.

Rain stepped in shortly before noon and by 1 o'clock had effectually washed away most of the features of the second day's scheduled activities at the grounds. The exhibit halls remained open throughout the day and attracted surprisingly large crowds in view of the downpour. However, automobile races carded for the track in the afternoon were flooded out, as was Foghorn Clancy's rodeo which was to have been staged in the evening.

May Extend Date

Plans were being made by fair officials last night to continue the exposition on through next Sunday in an effort to swell the attendance figure in the end. Whether this will be done had not been definitely decided at a late hour, but it was believed that such a plan would be adopted.

It was announced yesterday that rain insurance carried on Sunday's exposition would offset most of the financial loss incurred by the small attendance.

While the clouds opened and rain came down in torrents in the early afternoon, carnival attractions and the various exhibit buildings carried on with a vim. The exhibit halls, of course, offered immunity from the elements and while the storm was at its worst, hundreds ambled leisurely around through the hangars, making detailed inspections of the numerous attractions there. The tented carnival closed a few of its attractions, but it, too, issued a hefty defy to the clouds and sought with din and uproar to lure in a few adventurous stragglers.

Big Program Monday

Monday brings another day and a full program is on the books. All school children will be admitted free, a fact that is expected to bring out the biggest attendance of the fair now that the Sunday possibilities have passed. At 1 o'clock Dr. J. W. Cantwell, superintendent of the public school system, will deliver an address of welcome to the youngsters, using the new loud speaker system that has been installed on the grounds and which can carry an address or music from a central broadcasting point to all quarters.

The Chicago cadet band will have a concert at 2 o'clock in front of the grandstand and this will be followed at 2:30 by Foghorn Clancy's rodeo. A musical program will be given in the afternoon from 5 to 7, while at 7:30 in the evening the Cadets will play again. Five acts of Vaudeville and a huge fireworks demonstration will conclude the feature event of the day.

Judging Today

Judging in the various departments will begin at 9 o'clock this morning and as fast as this work is completed, awards will be announced. Several delayed entrees in the cattle, swine and poultry departments were received yesterday. Judging in the poultry building has almost been completed but these awards cannot be announced until Monday afternoon.

Cardinals Square Up Series With N. Y. Yankees In 6-2 Win On Sunday

Grover Alexander's Masterful Work In Box and Bill Southworth's Homer Responsible For Sunday's Win.

(BY ALLAN GOULD)

NEW YORK, Oct. 3. (AP)—Grover Cleveland Alexander one of baseball's old masters, unfurled the mighty power in his ancient right arm to pitch the Cardinals to victory over the Yanks today in the second game of the world's series before the greatest crowd that ever saw a baseball game.

The mammoth Yankee stadium rocked with the roar of a vast and record gathering of 62,500 fans as the 39 year old veteran of the Cardinal staff checked the impetuous rush of the Yankees while his teammates clouted Urban Shocker, Yankee spit-ball ace from the box and battered their way to triumph by the decisive margin of 6 to 2.

It was a rousing victory for the Cardinals, one that found them turning the tables on their rivals in convincing fashion and leaving the series deadlocked as the teams entrained early this evening for a baseball-mad St. Louis where the battle will be resumed Tuesday.

Grover Stronger

For six innings, the gray thatched, raw-boned Alexander—the man who was "sold down the river" late in the season as a Cub discard—was given an even battle by his veteran rival, Shocker, but in the seventh another Cardinal hero Bill Southworth, stepped to the fore with a towering home run into the right field bleachers, a blow that came with two men on base, ended a 2-2 deadlock and clinched game. The Cardinals applied a finishing touch to their victory in ninth when Tommy Thevenow got a freak home run on a high fly inside the park that Ruth "mislaid" but they didn't need it. One run would have been enough to settle the issue for Alexander was invincible after the third inning, holding the slugging Yankees hitless over the last six innings, permitting only four safe blows all together and striking out ten men with baffling speed, amazing control and a deceptive change of pace.

This was the world's series drama of the most thrilling sort, a game that kept the great crowd keenly on edge or in uproarious excitement. In color it was a marked contrast to an unemotional opening game in which Herb Pennock's masterful pitching was the dominant note. Today, too, the skies were bright and sunshine colored the scene that had been drab and hazy yesterday. It was a fitting climax to such a game to have it watched by a crowd of unprecedented proportions, a jam that filled every nook and cranny of the big stadium, while close to 20,000 more fans sought in vain to gain admission.

The attendance of 62,600 not only eclipsed the former record gathering of 662,817 set in the 1923 series between the Giants and Yankees, but the total receipts today, $201,738, also established a new record, exceeding the mark of $201,415 paid by the previous record crowd.

Crowd For Cards.

It was a Cardinal throng, too, regardless of any home town sympathy for the American league champions. These battling St. Louis players, bidding for the Missouri city's first world's series glory, have caught the fancy of New York fickle fandom. Their leader, Rogers Hornsby was cheered today even more vociferously than New York's own idol, Babe Ruth, and Southworth's winning home run provoked an outburst that has had few equals in baseball history here. Vital as was Southworth's blow, however, Alexander was the hero of the crowd and of the day. Now in his sixteenth major league season, this veteran, appearing in his first world's series since 1915 when he twirled for the Phillies, staged an astonishing come-back. To judge by his performance today, the years have taken little or nothing from the cunning and strength of his right arm. The man who was known throughout the breadth of the land a dozen years ago as Alex the Great, as he set the pitching pace season after season, was "Alex the Great tonight."

Unsteady at Start.

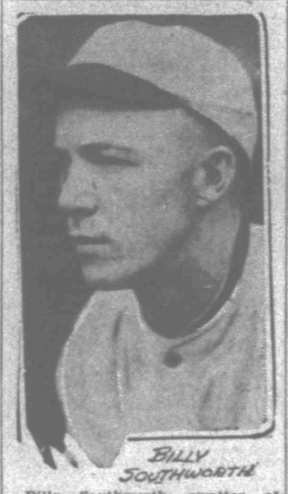

The veteran Nebraskan was a bit unsteady at the start, yielding three hits and two runs in the second inning while also contributing to one of the tallies with a wild throw. After that, however, he permitted only one safe blow, a single by Combs in the third inning. From the fourth inning on, Alexander was complete master of the situation. Not a single Yankee got safely to first and few of them even made a threatening gesture.

Inning after inning, six in a row, Alexander mowed down his foeman with machine-like regularity. In every frame but the seventh and ninth at least one was retired on strikes, while in the fourth Gehrig, Lazeri and Dugan struck out in a row as they swung in vain at the veteran's puzzling offerings. Ruth, like the rest was impotent. The Babe saw a third strike whistle by the first inning and was retired on all of his other attempts.

The Cardinals played like champions behind this flawless exhibition of twirling. There was a snap and dash to their work missing in yesterday's game. Thevenow, young short stop, cut down everything that came his way and started a pretty double play in the first inning after Combs had walked. Bell, at third base, made a spectacular stop and threw-out on Dugan's smash in the seventh, while Hornsby robbed Ruth of a hit with a great stab of the Babe's

Star of Victory

Billy Southworth, swatter of parts, engraved his name in the 1926 world series hall of fame by clouting a homer in the seventh inning with two on base, putting the Cardinals in the victory column.

OKLAHOMA HAS HEAVY DAMAGE IN OVERFLOWS

North Texas Points Also Report Heavy Rain On Sunday

Southwestern Oklahoma and, to lesser degree, north Texas, were in the grip of driving rains, roaring streams, many at flood stage, interrupted transportation and impassable roads Sunday night as a result of heavy and constant rains throughout this section. Torrential downpours of Sunday, added to persistent falls of the day before, were boosting rivers and creeks, notably the Red river, to points where danger was threatening.

Red Bridge Out.

Several bridges across the Red river, included in which were railway structures at Quanah and Chillicothe, had been washed away at an early hour Sunday evening. Reports obtained by The Record News indicated railway transportation between Vernon and Childress north into Oklahoma was virtually paralyzed and that highway traffic across the river, also, was interrupted at some points.

The Red river last night was approaching flood stage at Burkburnett. Continued rains over Oklahoma and in the upper watersheds of the stream in the Texas Panhandle have raised it steadily for three days. Fear was expressed that with a continuation of the downpours, a serious condition would confront this section by Monday night.

Acute In Oklahoma.

Southern Oklahoma was facing a condition more acute than north Texas, although in the latter section, unpaved roads in all directions were impassable.

The Orient railroad bridge across Red river north of Chillicothe was partially washed away Sunday, and it was reported the Frisco bridge north of Vernon was endangered. This report, however, could not be confirmed.

In Wichita Falls Sunday the rain started just before noon and reached its greatest intensity early in the afternoon. The showers continued with varying degree throughout the afternoon and evening with little prospect of clearing skies before morning, at least. Just before dusk, the cloudes broke in the west and the sun peeped through for a short time. It thickened up again in a short time, however, and rain began falling with renewed vigor before 9 o'clock.

MANY OKLAHOMANS FLEE FOR SAFETY

BLACKWELL, Okla., Oct. 3. (AP)—Many residents of Blackwell who live along the banks of the Chikaskia river abandoned their homes late today and took refuge at the fair grounds when the stream suddenly overflowed its banks.

Santa Fe branch line train service between Blackwell and Wellington was cancelled today because of a washout on Slat creek.

BARTLESVILLE REPORTS MANY HOMES SUBMERGED

BARTLESVILLE Okla., Oct. 3. (AP)—Flood waters of the Caney river, swollen by two days of torrential rain, today deluged the lowlands of Bartlesville submerging scores of homes after approximately 1,500 residents had fled to high ground for safety. Many inhabitants of the flood swept district took refuge in trees early today when the water rapidly engulfed their flimsy abodes and they were rescued in boats. Two persons had been drowned and reports that several others were drowned were not verified tonight.

Bartlesville was an island city without water or electricity. The Caney flowed over its banks at midnight and steadily crept into the yards of the lowland residential district, while the river continued to rise about twelve inches an hour early today. Crops along the river bottoms were inundated and much livestock was lost.

Two Fatalities.

William Clark died of fright when the flood water crept into his home and Ike Ingles was drowned in the raging stream. Two motor cars and their passengers were reported swept away by the waters from the highway south of here but there was no verification.

Heavy rains fell in other parts of Oklahoma last night.

The Caney river fell two feet today at Caney, Kansas, where

For instance, he said, the Associated Press knows that nobody in the United States ever lived to be 110 years old, but about once a month the Associated Press comes along with announcement of some age-old individual who has just died.

"It's always some colored brother or some Mexican or an Indian way off where nobody can check up," he said.

His address in full was as follows:

Address In Full.

"For a topical subject this morning, I am going to talk to you for a little while, if I may, about that great American institution, the Associated Press.

"The Associated Press is an organization of newspapers associated among themselves for the interchange of news, as I understand it. Now, it is a wonderful institution. It is accurate and truthful about important things. In other words, if they are going to print something that they know is going to be read by intelligent people, then the news is accurate. They send men to the wars, to the scenes of calamities and disasters, to political meetings, to church gatherings, to all kinds of meetings, to obtain accurate information. Their election news is accurate. You have to give the palm to these people when it comes to the diligence with which they seek the news and the accuracy with which they print it. But, that is not true of all the stuff they print.

Example of Sensation.

"They feel that they have got to print something for the ignorant man, for the careless man, for the sensational man, for the gossipy man, well knowing that he never checks his news. So, about once a year, you will see a big headline that the great volcano of Stromboli in the Mediterranean is in eruption. And, it is true, but not news. The reason I know it is true is because Stromboli has been in eruption every minute since the dawn of history.

"And, at least once a month, you will see where some fellow died that was 116 years old, or 120 years old, or 110. Now, nobody ever lived in the United States to be 110 years old, and the Associated Press knows that, and, when you come to read about it, it is always some colored brother, or some Mexican, or some Indian, away off somewhere whom nobody can check up and nobody can trace. People don't live always.

He Makes Dare.

"I know the Associated Press is not going to hear what I say, this morning, but I challenge them to produce authentic records showing that any man in the United States ever lived to be 105 years old.

"They feel that they have got to do something for the sensational man, and that is the reason that there is poured on you all this indecent hog-wash that is now coming out of California, and many other cases which you will remember. Much of that stuff, and I say it reluctantly, is not fit to go into a gentleman's home. But you say, as they will say, "well, you read it." Not much of it, but I have been reading some of it lately with a view of making a few remarks here.

"It is a curious fact, well worth the attention of every newspaper man, and everybody else, I think, that the cleanest papers in the United States have been generally the most successful. And, it is a curious thing that the paper with the smallest headlines can borrow the most money at the bank. Now, if you think that is not true, you can find it out. I am not talking about our local papers, this morning, I am talking about conditions throughout the country.

The Fourth Estate.

"I never quite understood the functions of a newspaper. I don't concede all that they claim. They are properly called the fourth estate, and it is supposed, among the newspapers, that they perform a public function, and that they are a public servant, and do a public good. That, I think, is true, but it is not wholly true. I do not know of any newspaper that isn't run for

AUTO LICENSE CUT OPPOSED

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 3 (AP).—The senate will not pass the Dale house bills calling for reduction in motor license fees and for the raising of the gasoline tax to three cents per gallon, and will postpone consideration until the 40th legislature appeared sure today. It will precipitate a fight between the two houses and may result in the calling of a second extra session by the governor.

A resolution will be introduced in the senate Monday by Senators R. A. Stuart, of Fort Worth, John Davis, of Dalls, and Charles Floyd, of Paris, calling upon the senate to postpone consideration of these recognized administration measure until the 40th legislature.

The prepared resolution recites that the senate has passed a bill appropriating $2,700,000 to the available school fund to raise the per capita appropriation from $11.50 and states that the 40th legislature can raise the remainder of the fund needed to bring the apportionment to $15. It advocates postponement of consideration on all revenue raising measures. It says that the motor fee bill and the gasoline tax bill involve the entire highway subject motor vehicle transportation and public school system of Texas, and that until the house committee has investigated the highway department that the senate cannot act intelligently upon the needs of this department until the conditions are reported to the 40th legislature.

Fieser, vice chairman of the American Red Cross who returned to headquarters today after spending two weeks in the storm swept area.

He attributed to local pride the early dissemination of statements that southern Florida was not so bad off as people had been led to believe.

PASTOR FLAYS OPERATION OF FAIR SUNDAYS

A fair which runs on Sunday is an open affront to Christainity and a disgrace to the city, while at the same time some "two-bit newspapers and two-bit fairs in Wichita Falls ought to be sued for slander for announcing a Methodist minister would deliver a sermon on the fair grounds Sunday morning."

Such, at least, are the ideas of Rev. S. A. Barnes, pastor of the Floral Heights Methodist church who from his pulpit Sunday morning delivered a scathing broadside against the operation of the Texas-Oklahoma fair on the sabbath.

Scores Newspapers

In a brief talk preceding in a communion service, Dr. Barnes remarked that "when I saw in the papers last week that Dr. Richardson (Dr. F. M. Richardson, presiding elder of this Methodist district) would deliver a sermon at the fair grounds Sunday morning I could hardly believe my eyes.

"I haven't been disappointed in but two or three Methodist preachers in my life," he continued, "and I didn't think I was going to be this time. I couldn't conceive of a Methodist minister of sincerity who would do a thing like that. But yesterday just to satisfy myself I called Dr. Richardson's home and was told he was in Magargle and wouldn't be back until late Sunday night.

"I asked about the report that he would talk at the fair grounds Sunday and learned that Dr. Richardson told those fellows two weeks ago that he would NOT speak there.

Dollar Chasing

"I want to come out right here, four square and flat footed against this thing of running fairs on Sundays, and if I was Dr. Richardson I'd sue some of these two-bit fairs and two-bit newspapers for publishing such things. I'd consider it a shame and a disgrace to me if they would say such things about me, and I consider it a shame and a disgrace to Wichita Falls that such a thing is allowed to be.

"The fault lies, I think, in this ceaseless chase for the dollar which is going on and on and submerging further and further our regard for the sanctity of Sunday."

BANDIT OPENS PENNEY STORE

Man Escapes In His Auto When Discovered In Building

Police Sunday night were trying to locate the driver of a Ford coupe who earlier broke into the J. C. Penney company's store, 713-715 Eighth street. Presence of the man in the store was discovered by Manager W. H. Lawson when the latter entered the building late Sunday, but the burglar escaped when he found himself discovered and fled in his car, a Ford coupe. He made his exit through the back door with Lawson in pursuit. The latter gave chase in another car and obtained a license number which he turned over to the police before the alleged burglar outdistanced him.

Manager Lawson could not be located last night for a statement as to his probable loss but at police headquarters it was stated that it is believed some goods had been removed from the building before the man was discovered.

At a late hour last night no arrest had been made by the police. At headquarters it was stated a check of the license number provided by Lawson was being made.

AIMEE STAGES BIG TABLEAUX

Accused Woman Evangelist Draws Big Crowd To Temple

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Oct. 3. (AP)—Thousands of members of Aimee Semple McPherson's flock gathered at Angelus temple today to witness "the march of the martyrs," a tableaux portraying famous Biblical scenes and depicting the "history of persecution."

The spectacle, staging of which was interpreted by her followers as drawing a parallel between the suffering of Biblical characters and what the evangelist has termed her own "persecution," followed a communion service in the morning which was heralded by Mrs. McPherson's announcement that it was to be the largest communion ever held.

The pastor selected "the great coronatino day" for the text of her sermon tonight which will be her last gesture from the pulpit before she appears in municipal court tomorrow morning for the second week of her hearing on a felony charge.

The first scene in the tableaux was the crucifixion of Christ at Calvary. Then followed a tableaux portraying the suffering of the martyred Stephen the beheading of St. Paul, the persecution of the christians by Nero of Rome, the burning of thre persons at the stake for printing the Bible and the burning as a witch of Joan of Arc.

BLOWN THROUGH DOOR

El Jardin Open Later

El Jardin de los Suenos, The Record News Garden of Dreams, was a victim of the weather man Sunday as was the fair, the public and various other entities hereabouts.

Driving rains starting at noon ruined plans for another big opening in the afternoon, and accordingly the public was barred until weather conditions become more favorable. The gorgeous new residence, furnished with the best that can be had, will be opened again this week as soon as the ground dries up and incoming throngs can be accommodated without danger to the place.

Further announcement of the openings for the coming week will be made Tuesday morning.

FAIR MAY RUN THROUGH NEXT SUNDAY NIGHT

Fair Will Collect Loss In Crowds Sunday Through Insurance

When officials of the Texas-Oklahoma fair association announced Saturday night that they "guaranteed no dust on the race track Sunday afternoon' they spoke the gospel.

Rain stepped in shortly before noon and by 1 o'clock had effectually washed away most of the features of the second day's scheduled activities at the grounds. The exhibit halls remained open throughout the day and attracted surprisingly large crowds in view of the downpour. However, automobile races carded for the track in the afternoon were flooded out, as was Foghorn Clancy's rodeo which was to have been staged in the evening.

May Extend Date

Plans were being made by fair officials last night to continue the exposition on through next Sunday in an effort to swell the attendance figure in the end. Whether this will be done had not been deffnitely decided at a late hour, but it was believed that such a plan would be adopted.

It was announced yesterday that rain insurance carried on Sunday's exposition would offset most of the financial loss incurred by the small attendance.

While the clouds opened and rain came down in torrents in the early afternoon, carnival attractions and the various exhibit buildings carried on with a vim. The exhibit halls, of course, offered immunity from the elements and while the storm was at its worst, hundreds ambled leisurely around through the hangars, making detailed inspections of the numerous attractions there. The tented carnival closed a few of its attractions, but it, too, issued a hefty defy to the clouds and sought with din and uproar to lure in a few adventurous stragglers.

Big Program Monday

Monday brings another day and a full program is on the books. All school children will be admitted free, a fact that is expected to bring out the biggest attendance of the fair now that the Sunday possibilities have passed. At 1 o'clock Dr. J. W. Cantwell, superintendent of the public school system, will deliver an address of welcome to the youngsters, using the new loud speaker system that has been installed on the grounds and which can carry an address or music from a central broadcasting point to all quarters.

The Chicago cadet band will have a concert at 2 o'clock in front of the grandstand and this will be followed at 2:30 by Foghorn Clancy's rodeo. A musical program will be given in the afternoon from 5 to 7, while at 7:30 in the evening the Cadets will play again. Five acts of Vaudeville and a huge fireworks demonstration will conclude the feature event of the day.

Judging Today

Judging in the various departments will begin at 9 o'clock this morning and as fast as this work is completed, awards will be announced. Several delayed entrees in the cattle, swine and poultry departments were received yesterday. Judging in the poultry building has almost been completed but these awards cannot be announced until Monday afternoon.

Cardinals Square Up Series With N. Y. Yankees In 6-2 Win On Sunday

(BY ALLAN GOULD)

NEW YORK, Oct. 3. (AP)—Grover Cleveland Alexander one of baseball's old masters, unfuried the mighty power in his ancient right arm to pitch the Cardinals to victory over the Yanks today in the second game of the world's series before the greatest crowd that ever saw a baseball game.

The mammoth Yankee stadium rocked with the roar of a vast and record gathering of 62,600 fans as the 39 year old veteran of the Cardinal staff checked the impetuous rush of the Yankees while his teammates clouted Urban Shocker, Yankee spit-ball ace from the box and battered their way to triumph by the decisive margin of 6 to 2.

It was a rousing victory for the Cardinals, one that found them turning the tables on their rivals in convincing fashion and leaving the series deadlocked as the teams entrained early this evening for a baseball-mad St. Louis where the battle will be resumed Tuesday.

Grover Stronger

For six innings, the gray thatched, raw-boned Alexander—the man who was "sold down the river" late in the season as a Cub discard—was given an even battle by his veteran rival, Shocker, but in the seventh another Cardinal hero Bill Southworth, stepped to the fore with a towering home run into the right field bleachers, a blow that came with two men on base, ended a 2-2 deadlock and clinched game. The Cardinals applied a finishing touch to their victory in ninth when Tommy Thevenow got a freak home run on a high fly inside the park that Ruth "mislaid" but they didn't need it. One run would have been enough to settle the issue for Alexander was invincible after the third inning, holding the slugging Yankees hitless over the last six innings, permitting only four sale blows all together and striking out ten men with baffling speed, amazing control and a deceptive change of pace.

This was the world's series drama of the most thrilling sort, a game that kept the great crowd keenly on edge or in uproarious excitement. In color it was a marked contrast to an unemotional opening game in which Herb Pennock's masterful pitching was the dominant note. Today, too, the skies were bright and sunshine colored the scene that had been drab and hazy yesterday. It was a fitting climax to such a game to have it watched by a crowd of unprecedented proportions, a jam that filled every nook and cranny of the big stadium, while close to 30,000 more fans sought in vain to gain admission.

The attendance of 62,600 not only eclipsed the former record gathering of 662,817 set in the 1923 series between the Giants and Yankees, but the total receipts today, $201,736, also established a new record, exceeding the mark of $201,415 paid by the previous record crowd.

Crowd For Cards.

It was a Cardinal throng, too, regardless of any home town sympathy for the American league champions. These battling St. Louis players, bidding for the Missouri city's first world's series glory, have caught the fancy of New York fickle fandom. Their leader, Rogers Hornsby was cheered today even more vociferously than New York's own idol, Babe Ruth, and Southworth's winning home run provoked an outburst that has had few equals in baseball history here. Vital as was Southworth's blow, however, Alexander was the hero of the crowd and of the day. Now in his sixteenth major league season, this veteran, appearing in his first world's series since 1915 when he twirled for the Phillies, staged an astonishing come-back. To judge by his performance today, the years have taken little or nothing from the cunning and strength of his right arm. The man who was known throughout the breadth of the land a dozen years ago as Alex the Great, as he set the pitching pace season after season, was "Alex the Great tonight."

Unsteady at Start.

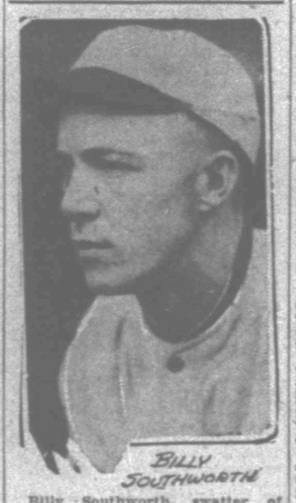

The veteran Nebraskan was a bit unsteady at the start, yielding three hits and two runs in the second inning while also contributing to one of the tallies with a wild throw. After that, however, he permitted only one safe blow, a single by Combs in the third inning. From the fourth inning on, Alexander was complete master of the situation. Not a single Yankee got safely to first and few of them even made a threatening gesture.

Inning after inning, six in a row, Alexander mowed down his foeman with machine-like regularity. In every frame but the seventh and ninth at least one was retired on strikes, while in the fourth Gehrig, Lazeri and Dugan struck out in a row as they swung in vain at the veteran's puzzling offerings. Ruth, like the rest was impotent. The Babe saw a third strike whistle by the first inning and was retired on all of his other attempts.

The Cardinals played like champions behind this flawless exhibition of twirling. There was a snap and dash to their work missing in yesterday's game. Thevenow, young short stop, cut down everything that came his way and started a pretty double play in the first inning after Combs had walked. Bell, at third base, made a spectacular stop and threw out on Dugan's smash in the seventh, while Hornsby robbed Ruth of a hit with a great stab of the Babe's

Star of Victory

Billy Southworth, swatter of parts, engraved his name in the 1926 world series hall of fame by clouding a homer in the seventh inning with two on base, putting the Cardinals in the victory column.

Included among the checks were several made out to Mrs. Boone by Mrs. Oates, Mrs. W. L. Dillard of Long Beach, Calif. and Mrs. R. C. Cato of Wichita Falls.

OKLAHOMA HAS HEAVY DAMAGE IN OVERFLOWS

North Texas Points Also Report Heavy Rain On Sunday

Southwestern Oklahoma and, to lesser degree, north Texas, were in the grip of driving rains, roaring streams, many at flood stage, interrupted transportation and impassable roads Sunday night as a result of heavy and constant rains throughout this section. Torrential downpours of Sunday, added to persistent falls of the day before, were boosting rivers and creeks, notably the Red river, to points where danger was threatening.

Red Bridge Out.

Several bridges across the Red river, included in which were railway structures at Quanah and Chillicothe, had been washed away at an early hour Sunday evening. Reports obtained by The Record News indicated railway transportation between Vernon and Childress north into Oklahoma was virtually paralyzed and that highway traffic across the river, also, was interrupted at some points.

The Red river last night was approaching flood stage at Burkburnett. Continued rains over Oklahoma and in the upper watersheds of the stream in the Texas Panhandle have raised it steadily for three days. Fear was expressed that with a continuation of the downpours, a serious condition would confront this section by Monday night.

Acute In Oklahoma.

Southern Oklahoma was facing a condition more acute than north Texas, although in the latter sections, unpaved roads in all directions were impassable.

The Orient railroad bridge across Red river north of Chillicothe was partially washed away Sunday, and it was reported the Frisco bridge north of Vernon was endangered. This report, however, could not be confirmed.

In Wichita Falls Sunday the rain started just before noon and reached its greatest intensity early in the afternoon. The showers continued with varying degree throughout the afternoon and evening with little prospect of clearing skies before morning, at least. Just before dusk, the cloudes broke in the west and the sun peeped through for a short time. It thickened up again in a short time, however, and rain began falling with renewed vigor before 8 o'clock.

MANY OKLAHOMANS FLEE FOR SAFETY

BLACKWELL, Okla., Oct. 3. (AP)—Many residents of Blackwell who live along the banks of the Chikashia river abandoned their homes late today and took refuge at the fair grounds when the stream suddenly overflowed its banks.

Santa Fe branch line train service between Blackwell and Wellington was cancelled today because of a washout on Slat creek.

BARTLESVILLE REPORTS MANY HOMES SUBMERGED

BARTLESVILLE Okla., Oct. 3. (AP)—Flood waters of the Caney river, swollen by two days of torrential rain, today deluged the lowlands of Bartlesville submerging scores of homes after approximately 1,500 residents had fled to high ground for safety. Many inhabitants of the flood swept district took refuge in trees early today when the water rapidly engulfed their flimsy abodes and they were rescued in boats. Two persons had been drowned and reports that several others were drowned were not verified tonight.

Bartlesville was an island city without water or electricity. The Caney flowed over its banks at midnight and steadily crept into the yards of the lowland residential district, while the river continued to rise about twelve inches an hour early today. Crops along the river bottoms were inundated and much livestock was lost.

Two Fatalities.

William Clark died of fright when the flood water crept into his home and Ike Ingles was drowned in the raging stream. Two motor cars and their passengers were reported swept away by the waters from the highway south of here but there was no verification.

Heavy rains fell in other parts of Oklahoma last night.

The Caney river fell two feet today at Caney, Kansas, where

READ THIS FIRST:

Merry Locke, gay and pretty as her name, is the kind of girl who has no ambition beyond having a good time and plenty of beaux. At 20 she fails in her business course because she won't study. To the disappointment of Moms, her ambition mother, she takes a job in Lillie Dale's beauty shop.

At that time she is having the one real love affair of her life—with Tony Gaines, a serious young lawyer who wants to marry her. Their engagement ends when Marry, in a jealous rage, admits that she lets other men make love to her. Later a letter comes from him, but it is "lost" in the house before she has a chance to read it. Then she hears that Tony has left town, and gone to Montana to live. After a year Merry learns that he is going to marry a girl there.

Cassie, her sister, marries her rich employer, Morley Kaufman, but is not happy with him. Through Cassie Merry meets Bill Erskine and becomes engaged to him. But when she gets mixed up in the divorce case of Les Purcell and his wife, Bill drops her and marries another girl.

Moms marries a Mr. Heffinger. Then Jinny, the youngest sister, elopes with Derrick Jones; and home is no longer home to Merry. She drifts along for years, having one suitor after another; but finally she is left with one, George Leet.

Tony gains fame when he becomes a criminal lawyer, and wins a celebrated case. One day while she and Moms are cleaning house, Merry finds the long-lost letter from him—a love letter.

Cassie cheerfully admits having hidden it because she wanted Merry to marry Bill Erskine. That night Merry breaks with George Leet, and a few days afterward when Les Purcell wants to take her out, she refuses to have anything to do with him.

Realizing how Tony has succeeded while she has done nothing with her life, she leaves the shop and plans to go on with her secretarial course. Merely Kaufman promises her a job, because Cassie is so jealous of every girl who works for him, he says. Cassie leaves him, after a quarrel and comes home to Moms. She quarrels constantly with Jinny who is spending a week at home with her twin babies. Tony's mother dies, and Tony comes back to town to the funeral. Merry sees him, but does not speak to him. She wonders if he has brought his wife along with him.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER LXIV

But Merry did not answer him. She was halfway back to the house when he spoke to her.

Moms was standing in the gloom of the vine-covered porch watching the whole proceeding. There wasn't much that Moms missed, ever.

"Tell him I'm sick! Merry said to her as she came up the sagging steps. "Tell him I've got a headache! Tell him anything you can think of! Only get rid of him! Get rid of him—" Her voice broke on something that sounded very like a sob to Moms' sharp ears and she ran past her and into the house.

She took a crumpled bit of newspaper from the blue satin handkerchief box, when she was back in her bedroom, and smoothed out its creases with her fingers.

A line of romantic verse that she had heard somewhere, flashed into her brain as she looked at it.

"I have been faithful to thee, in my own fashion."

And she had been faithful, too—to Tony Gaines—in her own way, that night.

On Friday morning Cassie came down stairs dressed for the street. The air of dejection was gone, and she was bright-eyed and alert. A small smile hovered on her thin red mouth and shone in her eyes.

"Where are you going?" Moms asked her in surprise when she opened the dining room door at half past eight.

"I'm going job hunting, Moms, she said. Cassie misquoted glibly, and took her place at the table.

Merry almost dropped her coffee cup in sheer astonishment. "Job hunting?" she echoed, and Cassie nodde her head in its smart satin hat that cost more than many a good stenographer earns in a week.

"Wheelright and Sukey have advertised for a secretary—and I'm it. That is, if some other girl doesn't beat me to it," she said calmly.

Now, Wheelright and Sukey were keen competitors of Morley Kaufman's.

And not only that, but Mrs. Enos Wheelright and Mrs. Everard Sukey were two of Cassie's bosom friends.

Merry saw at once why Cassie was going to get a job at Wheelright's establishment, simply to humiliate Morley. To advertise to his friends that his wife had left him, and that he was not supporting her. When Cassie set out to humiliate anybody she certainly put her heart and soul into her work.

"Oh, Cassie, I wouldn't do that" Merry told her anxiously. "Think how rotten Morley's going to feel about you doing such a thing"

Cassie's green eyes narrowed into a single gleaming line. "I am thinking of how rotten he'll feel" she snapped. "That's why I'm doing it— to make him feel the way he's made me feel many a time and oft Get me?"

But she did not go downtown to Wheelright's office, after all. For just as she was leaving the house, Maude Wheelright herself called up.

By one of the mysterious flings of fate, Maude was giving an impromptu luncheon party that very noon for a guest who had dropped into town unexpectedly.

Cassie's face had lost part of its ill-tempered look by the time she turned away from the telephone.

"Maudie Wheelright's having a luncheon at one," she murmured, with eyes on the clock. "Les's see—it's after nine now. Do you suppose that Lillie could give a marcel wave now, if I dashed down to her shop, Merry?"

"Yes, but you'd better make it snappy," Merry replied. "She's usually all dated up after ten o'clock."

Cassie made it very snappy, indeed, and came home at eleven with a glossy new wave, and fingernails that shone like little suns.

She hunted through her trunks until she found a cream and gold afternoon dress with slippers and hat to match.

Then she visited the twins in the little room where they were playing in the tub, and took a belated bath.

At half past twelve she came downstairs looking like a magazine ad, a cloud of perfume and fragrant as a Persian garden.

"Do you like this new perfume of mine?" she asked Merry and Moms and Jinny, her eyes darting from one to the other of them. "I've never used it before. Morley ordered it for me from Paris."

Moms, who was puritanical about everything else, had a weakness for perfumes. "It's wonderful, Cassie," she said. "You might put a little of it in that atomizer on my dresser."

"Merry, will you call a taxi for me, please?" Cassie asked. "This hat covers my ears, and if I telephone I'll get it out of place. My stars! It's one o'clock! I'll be terribly late, won't I?"

Jinny gave a bark of laughter. "You'd make a wonderful business woman, wouldn't you?" she chaffed her sister. "Can't talk over the telephone because you're afraid of messing up your hair and your hat. Half an hour late for a one o'clock luncheon! What time do you think you'd walk into an office every morning at that rate?"

Cassie's face did not show that she was listening to Jinny. It remained perfectly calm.

But Jinny knew that she heard her, and went on.

"You'd better pass up the 'poor dishonest working girl' stuff, and stick to your husband who can support you in a style you've never been accustomed to!" she said. "That's my advice to you."

Cassie looked at her as if she were the lowest of the low.

"Did I ask for your advice?" she drawled, lifting her chin.

"No, but you're getting it anyway," returned Jinny. "Running out and leaving your husband just because you've got it into your head that he's in love with his office girl. Not that I'd blame him if he were—"

"Jinny!" boomed Moms, "Jinny, stop talking about things that don't concern you, please. I declare, you girls still quarrel just the way you used to, when you were children!"

There was silence then until the taxicab squawked in front of the house. Cassie got up and strolled languidly out to it, leaving a trail of perfume behind her on the air.

Jinny watched her with half-scornful, half-amused eyes. "And the queen drove off!" she said, as Cassie vanished into the yellow cab.

She returned at six o'clock with the first prize—a large yellow satin cushion fairly bristling with gold lace.

"I couldn't eat a bite of supper," she said, when she came into the kitchen. "I had such a lunch! Cold jellied soup, and fried chicken with fresh peas and frozen fruit salad, and hot rolls and desert. And then sandwiches and iced tea, just a half hour ago—" She heaved a sigh at the remembrance.

"I don't know how I keep my boyish figure," she added.

"And your girlish laughter," Jinny flung at her, coming in through the back door. "Don't forget your girlish laughter, Cassie! Remember you're Morley's Little Sunbeam, dearie!"

Cassie ignored her completely.

"Moms is lying down with a headache, and I'll get whatever we do have to eat," Merry cut in on the conversation. "A salad and some bread and butter is all I want."

"I'll make the French dressing," Cassie offered. "It's the one and only thing in the world that I know how to make. Where do you keep your kitchen aprons, Merry?"

Merry found one for her, and she put it on and went to work.

"Has anyone met Tony Gaines' wife since she's been in town?" Merry asked timidly. She thought that perhaps some of Cassie's fashionable friends had met Mrs. Tony Gaines.

"I guess not. No one mentioned her this afternoon, anyhow," Cassie answered as she measured olive oil into a mixing bowl.

"His wife?" Jinny asked. "What makes you think Tony Gaines has a wife? Did you ever hear that he was married, Merry?"

"It was Cassie who answered her. "Why, of course, we've known for years that he was married," she said. "Some friend of his came here to see Merry once, and told her he was married. Didn't he, Merry? What was the man's name? Benson"

Merry nodded. "Yes that was his name," she replied. "Tony was only engaged to Katherine Bannerman at that time. But, of course, he's married her since. That was ages and ages ago."

"Why, of course he has," agreed Cassie. "Without doubt, Tony's married."

Jinny gave her a withering look. "Well, for once in your life, you're wrong, Perfect!" she said. "He certainly is not married, and I'm the guy wot knows it!"

Merry turned around from the sink, where she was washing lettuce leaves and tomatoes.

A curious tight feeling had come around her heart. She tried to ask a question, and couldn't summon her voice.

But Cassie asked the question for her. "How do you know he's not?"

"Because he told me so."

Merry found her voice then. "Whatever did he tell—you that?" she asked haltingly.

"This afternoon," Jinny replied, "not more than an hour ago, while I had the twins out for a ride in their buggy. I hurried home to tell you about it, Merry."

Merry blinked her eyes like a sleepwalker who is suddenly awakened.

"I met him at the corner of Elm street where it turns toward Forest road," Jinny told her story. "He was coming along in his car, and I yelled at him."

Cassie laughed. "You would," she sneered, "with your manners!"

Jinny blushed under her freckles. She turned her back on Cassie.

"I had a long talk with him, Merry," she said. "He asked me all about you, and I told him everything he wanted to know."

"What did he want to know," asked Merry.

BURKBURNETT

YOUNG COUPLE HONORED

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lewallen on East Fourth street was the center of a happy gathering Tuesday evening in honor of Julian J. Englemann, city manager and his bride who had just returned from their honeymoon trip to Colorado, following their marriage in the bride's home in Amarillo on September 15.

Miss Eolynne Word, of the chamber of commerce office was joint hostess with Mrs. Lewollen who is secretary to the city manager, in dispehcing the hospitalities of the evening.

The guests included the city employees, chamber of commerce officials and the city commissioners, together with a few special friends of the honoree couple.

On arrival there was a registration of guests in the bride's book, a dainty folder beautifully handpainted by a local artist, Miss Hazel Stephenson of the school faculty. Then came a program of galety and merriment in which all had a part. The feature number was a kangaroo court trial of the groom in which he was charged with a breach of promise by Miss Ward one of the hostesses, and after a spirited burlesque trial scene, he was sentenced to go forth and bear a heavy burden, a large loaded basket from the front porch to the court room. But this done he was consoled by being presented with the contents of his heavy load, a silver shower from the friends assembled. All were beautiful and the collection was featured by a choice set of silver given by the officials and employes of the city of Burkburnett.

Other gay contents included, "Matrimonial Blunders"; "The Bride's First Shopping Day," and a "Story and Transportation of a Bean," the story being cleverly told by Paul Browning.

At the conclusion of the happy occasion the hostesses served a refreshment of sandwiches, fruit salad, cocoa and cake.

Those present were the following: Mayor and Mrs. G. R. Kincaid, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Browning, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Duvall, Mr. and Mrs. E. Wyatt, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Cowles, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. FINE PICTURES SEEN AT FAIR

Paintings Sent Here From New York City For Exhibition

FRIEDA VAN EMDEN

An annual event of great educational value is the collection of paintings that is loaned yearly to the art exhibit at the fair by the Decorator company.

Not only is every painting the masterpiece of each individual painter, but each artist is the recognized leader of the particular type of painting that he represents.

To have such a collection of paintings here every fall is the greatest stimulus and incentive to our own artists, both professional and amateur, because it set them an example. It shows them clearly what heights can be attained, how to strive for perfection, and when they learn at what figures some of these paintings are held, it will encourage them in the hope that their are some day will be as remunerative to them as to these masters.

Several of the painters need no introduction to the art-loving public, as their work may be easily recignized by those remembering the paintings shown at the last fair.

There is Gustave Wiegand for example, whose "Blue Mountain Lake" and "Aspens by the Lake" are landscapes that one would like to live with. There is a blue sky, a wealth of foliage and a quality of sunshine in them that makes for a happy world.

Joseph Boston also will be remembered, but this year's entry is of an arresting and breathtaking beauty. It is a moonlight scene with a mountain background of marvelous perepective, rightly called "Luna's Reign."

Bruce Crane is one of our national known artists. This simple little picture "Meadow Lake on Long Island" is chiefly of interest on account of it being a painting of his early days. His work now hangs in nearly every big museum in the states.

Frank de Haven, a national academy man, has a great following in the east. His "A Trout Stream," which is shown here, was favorably mention in both the New York and London edition of the International Studio and we quote as follows:

"A Trout Stream, in the late afternoon by F. De Haven, entitled "November" is the best De Haven we have ever seen and has that particular quality of importance, which should entitle it to a place in one of the museums. The tourquois of the sky reflects in the brooks. The air is crisp and clear and the white birches in the background are particularly effective in conjunction with the pines in the near distance. The rendering of the woodland traversed by the stream is excelelnt."

W. S. Bucklin is a new comer to our art exhibits, though he is well known in New York. His "Summer Afternoon at the Pool" is the type of sane and beautiful landscape, that has made our American landscape painters famous the world over."

Frank A. Barney in his "October" shows a woodland, that one longs to roam in, with a deep view and wonderfully detailed foreground.

"A most arresting and versatile newcomer is Robert Wesley Amick, a westerner, with a great following in the east. "The Great Divide," with the three Indian horsemen is his best known painting and we are fortunate to have the original here. He paints the west and we of the southwest understand his colorings of earth and sky and the enormous space of which it giveh the impression. His "Twixt the Devil and a White Horse," will no doubt be the most discussed and admired picture at the exhibit for its action and the note of suspense. One may critisize his horse, but one cannot but admire his buffalo, it is so awe-inspiring, that we hope never to meet one in reality. His "Teammates," with the well drawn Percherons at the limpid waterhole shows that he does not confine himself to Indians.

Then there is "Kittens at Play" by Leon Huber. Whatever one may think of cats, most every one likes kittens and these Persian kittens certainly are graceful and lifelike. He is a Frenchman, one of their best known animal painters and belongs to the older school. Many prefer the smoothness of execution and the wealth of detail typical of the period. This type of painting is an clearly seen from close as from a distance, it is photographically realistic. All the other paintings shown have to be viewed from a distance to get the true perspective and the value, as they are executed in the manner of the more modern impressionistic school.

A. M. Gorter's "Thatched Cottage," nesting amongst its blossoming fruit trees must be the ideal cottage where love and happiness reside. It is a lovely scene, lovingly put on the canvas.

By ED WYNN

"THE PERFECT FOOL"

He Knows All—He Sees All

BY ED WYNN
The Perfect Fool.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I am very fond of riding but most of my pleasure is spoiled because I am pestered with tire trouble, punctures, etc. Can you tell me how I could enjoy a long ride without having tire trouble?
Yours truly,
MAG. NETOW.

Answer: Get on a train.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
There is a man living next door to me who has a very red nose. In fact if you see him walking along and the sun is shining on his nose, it looks like a red light on the back of a car. He told me his nose got red from glasses. Is it possible for a man's nose to get red from glasses?

Truly yours,
M. T. HEAD.

Answer: Glasses of what?

Dear Mr. Wynn.
It has often been said that women talk less during the month of February than any other month in the year. Do you believe that, and if so, how do you account for it?
Sincerely,
ANN SIRMEE.

Answer: I not only believe it, but I know it is a fact. The reason for it is that February is the shortest month.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
During my two weeks vacation I spent three days on a country farm. One day I asked a farmer how he could tell the age of a chicken and he said he could tell the age of a chicken by his teeth. Now how in the world could that farmer say he could tell a chicken's age by his teeth. A chicken hasn't any teeth, has it?
Yours truly,
PEEDEE KUEW.

Answer: That is very simple. It is true that a chicken hasn't any teeth but the farmer has.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I went to my first baseball game yesterday and enjoyed it very much. One thing puzzled me though, why does the catcher wear a muzzle?
Truly yours,
A. BRAHAM.

Answer: The catcher of a baseball team wears a muzzle so he can't bite the man who is batting.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
My son, who is quite a joker, told me he had a dream where went to bed in a broken down wooden shack and he woke up in a beautiful stone house. What is he trying to put over on me?
Sincerely,
I. CHUGUM.

Answer: What your son told your could really happen. He went to sleep in a wooden building and awakened in a stone. One. Very easily explained: While he was sleeping a severe wind storm came up and made the building rock.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I have just received a circular from a real estate broker advertising some farm land on Long Island near Montauk Point. The circular claims that you can get two crops a year, on every acre of ground. Is that possible?
Truly yours,
WILL I. N. VEST.

Answer: I know the farm land out there, and the only way you could get two crops the same year would be to stand the acre of ground on its end and plant on each side of it.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
A young man has been annoying me for some time because I refuse to marry him. Wherever I go, he follows me and asks me time and time again to marry him. I do not love him and have told him so. Last night, he said he would never give up and would follow me to the end of the earth. Please tell me how to get rid of him?
Sincerely,
IVY POISEN.

Answer: Let him follow you to the end of the earth and when you get him there just push him off.

'When you get him there, just push him off.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I met a man yesterday, who says he knows another man who was married for twenty-three years and then shock his wife when she was forty-five years old. What do you think of that?
Truly yours,
GOODE N. CLEVER.

Answer: That's not a bad shake.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
They say that love can be encouraged with music. It sounds silly to me. For instance: Could any one make love in "B" sharp?
Sincerely,
BARRY TONE.

Answer: No, but lots of people can make love in "A Flat."

Lots of people make love in "A Flat."

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I have just hired a new cook and she is very tall. Does that mean that she will stay long?
Yours truly,
MISS CAL. Q. LATE.

Answer next week.

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 3.—M. A. Decherd, former state senator is on his way to Texas prison, unaccompanied, to surrender and begin serving a term on the two convictions growing out of swindling charges.

Between 1919 and March 31, 1926, air transport flying under British control covered a total of 4,563,000 miles with only four accidents, causing thirteen deaths. This is equivalent to one accident in every forty-six trips around the world.

WINE 200 YEARS OLD SERVED.

In Bremen, Germany, there is a ratskeller that is famous among tourists. It has been in existence since the fourteenth century and for forty-two cents a glass of wine of the vintage of 1726 is still available though it tastes strongly of wood.

During a recent band concert in London a swarm of mosquitoes routed some of the musicians and caused a rush to shelter by the audience in which two women fainted.

Buenos Aires is to have a new six-story department store.

Big Alexander Too Speedy For Yankee Batters

The Yankees fashioned their brace of runs in the second inning on hits by Meusel, Lazzeri and Dugan, mixed with Alexander's wild throw. Meusel tallied on Lazzeri's hit and Lazzeri trapped at third on an attempted double steal with Dugan raced across the plate as Alexander threw wild in the run-down scramble. The Cardinals were not long in making up this deficit, however, singles by Douthit and Southworth and a sacrifice by Hornsby paving the way for "Sunny Jim" Bottomley to bring in a pair of tallies with a booming single to Ruth's territory.

This was in the third inning and after that Shocker matched his spit ball with Alexander's best until the seventh. Retired in order for three straight frames the Cardinals opened their attack in the seventh with a double by O'Farrell, followed by Thevenow's single to left. The threat of Meusel's great throwing arm held O'Farrell at third and when Alex and Douthit popped out the St. Louis attack seemed checked. Southworth, however, caught a curve and lofted it high into the right field bleacher crowd.

It was fitting role for Southworth to provide this winning punch, for it was his home run, about a fortnight ago that beat the Giant's at the Polo Grounds in a game which cinched the first National league pennant for St. Louis.

Shawkey Is Next.

Shocker weathered this seventh inning storm to retire Hornsby for the third out but he gave way to Bob Shawkey in the eighth after Bottomley had opened the inning with a single. "Bob the Gob" checked the Cards in this frame but Sam Jones on the hill in the ninth, had trouble escaping with but one run being scored against him. The first man to face him, Thevenow, hit a towering fly to right which fell through Ruth's hands. The Babe then lost sight of the ball for a few moments and before he recovered it Thevenow had galloped around the bases. Passes to Douthit and Hornsby sandwiching a single by Southworth, filled the bases, but Jones retired the side without further damage.

The Yankees rushed in reserves in the eighth, Pascal batting for Severeid and Ruether for Shawkey, but they found Alexander invincible here, as well as in the ninth.

Hornsby Doubles.

Only threats marked the first inning's offensive of the second world series game. Hornsby doubled after Douthit had looked at a third strike and Southworth fouled to Severeid but was left when Koenig threw out Bottomley. Hornsby's hit rolled up the distant right field terrace.

Combs walked to open the Yankee's half. Thevenow took Koenig's grounder, touched second and completed a double play at first. Alexander fanned Ruth by slipping a fast ball by him for the third strike.

Alexander had a chance to hit in the second but popped out. Then filed to Meusel and Hafey Bell rolled to Lazzeri. Then O'Farrell singled to left. Shocker deflected Thevenow's smash through the box into right field, O'Farrell taking third under wraps. Then Koenig took Alexander's loft.

The Yankees earned one run and were presented with another in their second turn. Meusel singled. Alexander threw out Gehrig while Meusel took second. Lazzeri's single sent Meusel over with the first run. Dugan dropped a Texas leaguer into right and Lazzeri sprinted to third. Severeid missed a third strike. With Shocker up, a double steal was attempted. Thevenow took O'Farrell's throw and caught Lazzeri between third and the plate. A chase ensued but Lazzeri escaped the network of Cardinal players when Alexander made a weird throw.

Cards Tie Score.

The Cards promptly tied the score by solid hitting in the third. Douthit beat out a hit to deep short and Southworth singled to left, Meusel making a remarkable play when he trapped the ball and threw to second so quickly that Douthit had to slide to make it. Hornsby moved them both up with a sacrifice and Bottomley sent them home with a long single to right. Bell fouled to Severeid and Hafey filed to Meusel.

Combs opened the Yankee third with a hit. Alexander got his curve in order then and Koenig fanned, while Ruth popped to Thevenow. Bell fumbled Meusel's hard hit grounder but caught it on the rebound and threw to first for the third out.

After O'Farrell, Thevenow and Alexander failed to get the ball out of the infield in the fourth. Alexander electrified the huge crowd by striking out Gehrig, Lazzeri and Dugan in order. All took healthy swings at the important third strikes.

The Cardinal fifth was uneventful, Douthit flying to Ruth, Southworth rolling to Shocker and Hornsby following suit to Dugan. The Yankees did nothing in their half. When Shocker fanned for the second time Alexander's strike outs were increased to eight. Bell threw out Severeid and Hornsby took care of Combs' roller. Shocker continued to baffle the Cards in the sixth. Bottomley's roller went to Gehrig, Koenig threw out Bell and Hafey fouled to Gehrig.

Hornsby Helps Out.

Hornsby took care of rollers from Koenig and Ruth, and Meusel was called out on strikes in the Yankees' sixth.

It was a "lucky seventh" for the Cards. O'Farrell opened with a double to center and ran to third on Thevenow's single to left. Alexander popped to Lazzeri and Douthit lifted a short fly to Meusel. Southworth drove the ball high and far into the right field bleachers for the first home run of the series. Hornsby rolled to Koenig.

Alexander tossed out Gehrig and Thevenow took care of Lazzeri's grounder. Bell robbed Dugan of a hit when he took the smash on the run and threw perfectly to first to end the seventh.

Bottomley opened the eighth with a single and Shawkey was called to replace Shocker. The arm enclosed in the red pitching shirt struck out both Bell and Hafey and Bottomley went out trying to steal second.

Paschal batted for Severeid and fanned on three pitched balls Ruether was called to the plate to take Shawkey's turn. The hard-hitting pitcher dribbled one to Alexander and was thrown out. Hafey was directly in the path of Combs' drive.

Thevenow Is Fast.

After O'Farrell had been retired by Lazzeri and Gehrig in the ninth Thevenow got a home run inside the grounds. Ruth barely reached the Card shortstop's drive and could not hold the ball. Thevenow showed a great exhibition of speed in circling the base. Alexander fanned. Douthit walked and ran to third on Southworth's single. A pass to Hornsby filled the bases. Bottomley ended it with a fly to Hornsby tossed out Koenig and then made a sensational stab of Ruth's liner. The game was over when Thevenow threw out Meusel.

63,600 CHEER CARDS IN WIN

World's Record Set Sunday For Baseball Crowd, $201,828 Gate

YANKEE STADIUM, NEW YORK, Oct. 3. (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals settled the New York Yankees in the second game of the world's series today by a score of 6 to 2 before the largest crowd that ever saw a ball game—62,000—who witnessed the the triumph of the National leaguers, in which Bill Southworth won the game with a home run with two men on in the seventh inning. The ancient Alexander, recently acquired by the Cardinals for the waiver price of $4,000 held the Yankees helpless. He allowed but four hits and after the third inning the American leaguers were unable to make a hit. Alexander's pitching may be summed up in one word—control—he kept his fast ball on the corner of the plate and his famous hook swept the Yankees' bats. Alexander struck out 10 Yankees.

The official attendance and receipts figures follow:

Totals attendance 62,600.
Total receipts $201,828.
Commissioners' share $30,274.20.
Players share $102,937.28.
Clubs' share $68,621.52.

Severeid went over towards third and took Southworth's foul. Hornsby got a double to right for his first hit of the series. The big batsman was on the dash into second. Koenig threw out Bottomley at first, coming in fast to take Bottomley's roller. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Yankees: Meusel got a single into center field. Alexander threw out Gehrig at first, Meusel going to second. It was the hit and run play. Meusel scored on Lazzeri's single into left. No runs, two hits, no errors. On a double steal, Lazzeri scored, the play being O'Farrell to Thevenow to Bell to Alexander who dropped the ball. Dugan went to second. The official scorer ruled there was no stolen base. Shocker fanned. Two runs, three hits, one error.

THIRD INNING.

The crowd cheered madly, and was rooting for St. Louis. Alexander popped to Lazzeri. The Yankee infield played in on the grass. Douthit filed out to Meusel, O'Farrell holding third as the fly was short. Southworth hit a home run into the right field stand scoring O'Farrell and Thevenow ahead of him. The St. Louis players ran out to greet Southworth as he came over the plate. Koenig threw out Hornsby at first. Three runs, three hits, no errors.

Yankees: The bleachers gave Southworth a big hand when he came out to his position in right field. Alex took Gehrig's weak roller and threw him out. Lazzeri went out, Thevenow to Bottomley. Bell made a beautiful play to Dugan's mean roller and with a rifle shot throw, threw him out. No runs, no hits, no errors.

EIGHTH INNING.

Rice Owls After Conference Flag

Heilman's Men Have High Hopes Of Leading Southwest

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 3. (AP)—"Maybe Coach Heisman has not a southwestern champion under his tuleage, but the eleven which beats the Owls will win the conference title." This is the opinion of observers who have witnessed the play of the Owls in the first two preliminary games.

Led by Heavy Underwood, the greatest lineman that Rice has ever known, neither Stephen F. Austin nor Sam Houston Teachers have been able to gain an earned first down on the Owl defense. The Nacogoches eleven recorded a first down by virtue of a 15 yard penalty, but the formidable Huntsville was unable to advance ten yards in a bracket against the line which Joe Bedenk has developed.

Enexperience may cost the Heisman a pennant in 1926, but the Owls have definitely arrived as conference contenders, in the opinion of Houston observers.

SISLER, FOHL FOR DISCARD

Bancroft, Robbie, Fletcher May Quit Posts As Leaders

(Copyright, 1926, by the Consolidated Press Assn.

BY GEORGE CHADWICK
Special Correspondent, the Record News.

NEW YORK, Oct. —While two managers are struggling with this old world series — both of these managers being as sure of their jobs next season as there is surety in the calendar—there are other managers who are less optimistic as to the future.

Huggins can manage the New York Americans as long as he wishes. Col. Ruppert said as much today and he has said it before. Why should Ruppert wish to change? Here is a man who has brought money into the coffer of the New York Americans and four championships. Nobody else ever did that.

Hornsby can go along with Sam Breadon at St. Louis as long as he wishes. Hornsby's great ambition in baseball used to be to play with the New York Giants. He did not get there and he is better off than if he had, because he would have disagreed in time with McGraw and he never would have been manager for the Giants.

Joe All Set In Chi.

Joe McCarthy is all right in Chicago. He made the Chicagos a fourth place team with nothing upon which to work except two catchers, good pitchers and Hack Wilson. In many respects the success of the Chicago National league club is the best thing that McCarthy ever achieved, and he has done some mighty good things in his time.

Jack Hendricks signed up for two years more with Cincinnati, and he is now on easy street. Yet when a prominent player of the National league heard that Hendricks had two years more, he blurted out "I'll be darned if I can see how Hendricks gets by with it."

Bill McKechnie may manage the Pittsburgh team again and he may not. The Pittsburgh team must have a big boss with a big stick or it will have its trouble trying to plod its way to the top in 1927. There will be more than internal trouble which ruined the Pittsburgh team in 1926.

Fletcher Moving On.

It has been said that Fletch will not be with the Phillies. It has been said also that he is tired of carrying on with a team which begins the season marked class double tail-enders. It is some job to wallow through that ditch all of the year.

There are rumors that "Uncle Robby" won't manage in 1927. The Brooklyn team is in an awful mess and hasn't much left to bank on when its 'big pitching staff has dried up on its hands.

Brooklyn fans feel that Vance threw them down, because he pitched at the end of the year as he should have pitched at the beginning. The fans are mad at Vance and twice mad at Robinson.

Dave Bancroft may not remain at Boston. Owner Fuchs was reported to have said while attending to business he might make a change.

Ty Cobb will be back, because he has said so, and when he says he is coming back rest assured that he will. Tris Speaker can manage Cleveland as long as he wishes. There is a nice feather in his cap this year because he has made money for Cleveland.

Sisler May Go.

Sisler isn't likely to be chosen to lead St. Louis again. George is a splendid gentleman but his team has got away from him and he has brooded over his ill luck until it has affected him. Who will go into St. Louis? George Moriarity, the umpire, if he wishes. The place was offered him long ago.

Bucky Harris can stay in Washington until he quarrels with Griff and Griff won't quarrel with Bucky as long as the coin comes in to pay expenses.

Connie Mack will manage the Athletics until he is tired of baseball. There's no use of going any farther in that direction. And when he is tired of managing the chances are that his son will take the job and consult daily with Dad for advice.

At Boston it has been rumored that Lee Fohl will be supplanted by another. Fohl is a fatalist. What happens, is. That's his baseball philosophy and always has been. If his team is phlegmatic it will be more phlegmatic under him and he can't be induced to worry.

McGraw will be with the Giants again. He has a three year contract which has two years to run and next year if the veteran is as spirited as he has been in the past, he will take that team of his and strip it into segments and slivers and start out with something new which will give the league a shock.

Eddie Collins is likely to stick long in Chicago if he wishes to do so. Ill luck knocked him this year. But he gets on well with Comiskey and the Old Roman is smart enough to know when he has a good manager.

Indians Lose A Fall to Weather

Members of the Wichita Falls Junior college football team are on their way home from Cordell, Okla., and are scheduled to arrive—eventually.

The Indians, after their triumph over Oklahoma Christian college Saturday afternoon, found the weather man's line to heavy to pierce. Torrential rains throughout southern Oklahoma have made roads virtually impassable; railroad bridges are washed out and consequently the time of theis return is a matter of doubt.

A telegram received yesterday by E. H. Rider, dean of the college from the team stated the boys were starting home in automobiles and might get here by 8 o'clock Monday night.

OLD GUARD OF LINKS ON TOP

"The Hage" Does 'Em One Better By Copping Pro Crown

By RAY M'CARTHY
Special Correspondent, The Record News

Copyright 1926 by the Consolidated Press Association

NEW YORK, Oct. —The "old guard" of golf is holding up very well this season, thank you. It has been a disquieting year for defenders of championships in various lines of sport endeavor, but in golf the oldsters seem to be moving along with their old grace and success.

Walter Hagen is a case in point. True the Hage is comparatively young in years, but he is a seasoned veteran of the links. And his latest achievement in winning the American professional championship for the third year in succession, stamps him as one of the game's greatest. Bill Tilden fell; Bobby Jones was dethroned as amateur king; Jack Dempsey got his'n and Glenna was temporarily shunted to the side lines the other day—But Walter Hagen "came through."

Sandy Makes Grade

But the Hage is not the only notable of the niblick to reach the heights again this season. Remember ol' Sandy Herd, the hardy Britisher? Sandy will admit to being 58 years old, yet a few days ago he had sufficient golf left to win the British professional championship of 1926, defeating among others such universally known younger golfers as Abe Mitchell, Archie Compston, George Duncan, George Gadd and Arthur Havers.

While mentioning Herd, it might be well to add that this old-timer holds the world's record for making holes in one. Sandy has experienced this rare thrill no less than 17 times and when he bags his 18th hole in one, a number of his admirers have promised him a gift of a golden putter.

Mac Cops Titles

And then there is MacDonald Smith. Here is the greatest golfer that never won a national championship. Last season "Mac" gathered a half dozen minor titles. This season he failed to win one of these again but he carried off six other sectional championships. And now for the women golfers. The two finalists for the national championship, played today had both seen long service on the links, Mrs. G. Henry Stetson of Philadelphia, is about 45 years old, although she appears much younger, and her opponent for the title, Mrs. Courtland Smith of Glen Ridge, N. J., is the mother of three children.

LOOKING FORWARD AT DOHENY

"LOOKING BACKWARD" is a story of mile posts and the lessons that the mile post tells to the keen interpreters of the period or the age in which they live and move on the stage of action. An impartial observer, a man who makes a background of history to the political study of men and measures from the signs of the time as it deals with the party of Jefferson and the men who may be in the public eye as presidential possibilities in 1928.

Now the west, deep down in its heart, is jealous of the east. As for the south, it has been voting a democratic ticket since the days when reconstruction ended in the long ago. There were two outstanding candidates at San Francisco in 1920. William Gibbs McAdoo was one and the favorite son of many states was the other. McAdoo went down and James M. Cox of Ohio was the nominee for the slaughter house.

Bryan, William Jennings, now sleeping with heroes of warlike mould at Arlington, was responsible for the defeat of McAdoo and the nomination of Cox. Four years passed on and were recorded on the dial plate of passing time. Madison Square Garden in the city of New York was the stage and the setting. McAdoo, born in the south and Smith, born in the east, were the rival candidates. McAdoo had the backing of the invisible empire. Smith had the backing of men who did not believe in the invisible empire and would never stand for its supremacy.

There was a riot, a wreckage of the party of Jefferson and one of the ablest democrats in the United States, John W. Davis, was made the sacrificial offering on the altar of political insanity and creed bigotry. All the time the republicans were wise in their ways and and their methods and they profited by the mistakes made of all these leaders who claimed to be isolators of Jefferson and the party which he had given to this republica.

There is another campaign coming in 1928. In the east Alfred E. Smith is the standard bearer of the New York democracy for the fifth time. In California, the adopted home of William Gibbs McAdoo, the followers of McAdoo and the followers of Smith have indulged in a series of skirmishes which resulted in a drawn battle.

There is a general election coming in November. Ohio has been called the stepmother of presidents as in the earlier years of this republic Virginia was known as the mother of the presidents. Now this keen observer of events and conditions, this student of men and measure as they appear on the political stage of action today, is of the opinion that Governor Vic Doheny of Ohio may prove to be the outstanding figure among the democratic presidential possibilities in 1928.

As has been said, the west is jealous of the east, and the south votes the democratic ticket with the exception of the border states which have shown a disposition in recent years to go republican in presidential election years. Doheny was elected governor by the democrats of Ohio in 1922 when all the democrats on the ticket with him in defeat. In 1924 when the great republican landslide swept Coolidge into power as a real president, Vic Doheny, the democratic nominee for governor in Ohio, was the sole survivor of the wreck of the party of Jefferson in that state. He has been renominated by the democrats in Ohio who may not love Donehey, they may be jealous of Donehey. One is James H. Cox, who was a democratic governor and later a presidential standard bearer who went down in defeat. Another is Newton D. Baker, the secretary of war in the cabinet of Woodrow Wilson and today the outstanding champion of the league of nations and the cancellation of all war loans. He is practicing law in the city of Cleveland.

He is the legal advisor of tremendous financial interests. He may hope to be the presidential standard bearer in 1932, for mind you, the leaders of the national democratic party, if there is a national democratic party, do not hope for a success in 1928. There is another outstanding Ohio democrat, former Senator Atlee Pomerene, now the nominee for United States senator and the winner of the suit on the part of the government which led to the circuit court of appeals cancelling the leases held by Harry F. Sinclair and associates of the tea pot dome oil fields.

This is the way this observer referred to in the foreword prognosticata. Vic Donahey will be elected governor of Ohio in November. He has 11 children. He is a dry dry democrat. He has the backing of farmers and organized labor. He is of huge stature and the best mixer in Ohio. Baker isn't a mixer; Pomerene isn't a mixer. Neither Pomerene nor Baker are glad hand shakers. In other campaigns the wet democratic organizations in the big cities of Ohio fought for their local tickets and gave their knives to Donehey.

Notwithstanding this, Donehey won. Now the wet organizations of the democratic party appear to be giving Donehey their support. They have been taught a lesson in the past. Pomerene is listed for defeat. All the drys are against him; organized labor is against him; railway employes are against him. Thus it is that one of the political signs of the time is that Vic Donehey stands fair to be re-elected governor of Ohio and regardless of the plans or the programs or the wishes of Cox or Baker or Pomerene, the Ohio democrats, may present him as their candidate for president in 1928.

They will present him as a compromise candidate, a man of the west, a man of the people, a man who should be satisfactory to the wets and the drys as he is a dry dry who doesn't talk much about it and he is close to the farmers and organized labor. Of course, the result in November will tell the story.

If Donehey wins and Pomerene goes down, then Vic will be an outstanding figure on the national stage of political action and a most alluring possibility in the field of presidential faces in the political picture galleries. November balloting will wreck the fortunes of many democratic aspirants for high honor and November balloting may introduce many strangers to a bewildered democracy.

SWIFTER JUSTICES AND FEWER TECHNICALITIES

THIS is a merry old world for some and a weary old world for others. A great many men do their talking without thinking and a great many men never think at all. For this reason intelligent publicity is a power factor in lifting the mists of doubt and driving away the clouds of ignorance. All voters should be well informed, all taxpayers should be well informed, all lawmakers should be well informed, and all writers for the newspapers should be well informed.

Hence, "let the light shine." A statement prepared and furnished the press by Olin W. Finger, clerk of the court of criminal appeals, shows that during the 10-year period ending August 31, 1926, 27,012 criminal cases were tried in Texas, resulting in 23,002 convictions and of the cases appealed there were reversals in only 1,308 cases.

These figures were compiled from reports of district clerks as the law requires such reports and the law also requires that the attorney general embrace the data in his bi-annual report to the governor. It is to be regretted that the reports are not complete in that only part of the clerks made reports to the attorney general.

Now why should a district clerk ignore the law in the case? Why should he be permitted to ignore law? Why should he neglect to send in to the attorney general this valuable statistical information?

According to the announcement made by the clerk of the court of criminal appeals, the counties embraced in the reports and from which the figures were obtained are as follows: Two-year period ending August 1918, 208 counties; two-year period ending August 1920, 221 counties; two-year period ending August 1922, 147 counties; two-year period ending August 1924, 80 counties; two-year period ending August 1926, 166 counties.

These are the larger counties of the state, the counties containing large cities and towns. From the figures given, it appears that of each 100 cases tried, the result is approximately as follows: convictions, 85; acquittals, 15; appeals, 13; reversals, 5. Other information is obtainable from the reports mentioned, submitted to the attorney general, such as the number of indictments, dismissals and the nature of the offenses.

Now the reader should bear in mind that these figures relate to felony cases only. Data at present available relating to misdemeanors, covers but four years, namely: 1916 to 1918, 181 counties; 1918 to 1920, 161 counties and discloses the following: Trials, 32,090; convictions, 28,046; reversals, 184.

This record shows that the jurors of Texas are prone to convict or rather return verdicts that the percentage of reversals is amazingly small. It demonstrates something else. There has been a remarkable change in Texas in public sentiment in the last decade and the criminal statutes are enforced.

As for the slogan, "swifter justice and fewer technicalities," it is not based on facts or sound logic if the report submitted to the press and the public by the clerk of the court of criminal appeals is as accurate as it is authoritive. If there is another side to it, then those who clamor for swifter justice and fewer technicalities should brief their case and submit it to the reading public.

There are very few reversals in the 10-year period embraced in the story but in the 10-year period there have been thousands of pardons and paroles granted by the pardon board or rather the governors of the commonwealth of Texas.

The Powerful Katrinka's Little Brother

BLUE STEEL

BY OCTAVUS ROY COHEN

"Shut up! Listen to me. Are you fellows idiots enough to think you can get away with this kind of stuff? Double-cross me, and then play Rariden for a sucker? Don't you know Dan has got you spotted—every last one of you? Why you ain't got a chance on earth. Try to beat it, and it's all off; and every one of you are guilty of killin' Blood Morene as the man that croaked him. You're in for a stretch apiece, but if you come clean with me, I can just about promise that this murder stuff will be dropped. Now what's the answer? Do you act wise, or shall I make you?"

They decided to act wise. One hour later the spoils were delivered to Flash Morgan. Immediately Mr. Morgan repaired to the Fifth Precinct police station and delivered the money to his friend Dan Rariden. Dan smiled. "Much obliged, Flash. This helps."

"Just one thing, Dan—the bunch didn't have a thing to do with bumping Moreno off."

"I know it."

"And there ain't to be any murder charge against 'em. Burglary, all right; but nix on the murder."

"That's all right—I'll look after that end of it."

"Good!—and now—about me?"

"I guess you don't have to ask, do you, Flash?"

"I reckon not. 'spose I might just as well hang up my hat an' make myself at home eh?"

"Uh-huh!"

And so Police Lieutenant Daniel Boone Rariden arrested his friend. There was pain in that little office—pain and suffering—and a considerable puzzlement in the glance Rariden bestowed upon Flash Morgan. As for Morgan, he was too proud to explain; he felt that Dan should know, should understand without words, that he had not been untrue to the trust of their friendship.

Flash went to a cell. It was a very nice cell, more of a room, in fact—a place reserved usually for indiscreet ladies; but it was nevertheless a cell. Mr. Morgan was not happy, he was too fond of life, liberty and the pursuit of other people's money.

Dan Rariden threw out a dragnet. One by one the members-in-good-standing of the Greyhounds were brought in. They were worried, they were quite willing to do a burglary stretch, provided their chief did not throw them down on his promise that no charge of murder would be chalked against them. It was a blue day for the Greyhounds. Flash was permitted to visit them. He smiled sardonically: "You're a fine mess of tripe, you are. I guess when you get out, you'll run around with bad boys like Blood Moreno again."

"Ah, Flash, he told us—"

"Sure, I know what he told you — that Dan Rariden would think I was mixed up in it, and he would lay off you because I and he is good friends. Well, I'm here with you, and you know how much I had to do with souping that box."

Back to his private cell went Flash Morgan. A turnkey who had eavesdropped the interview delivered an interesting report to Police Lieutenant Daniel Boone Rariden. Lieutenant Rariden left the precinct station and made for the county courthouse. Two hours later he returned to the fifth. He went straight to the private room of his friend, flung open the door.

"C'mon, Flash."

"Where?"

"We're goin' for a walk."

Flash knew that Dan was happy. He did not ask the reason. He followed the police lieutenant into the sunlight and shoulder to shoulder, they strolled toward the narrow avenue which divided the Fourth and Fifth precincts. It was Rariden who broke the silence.

"Flash," he said, "you done me an awful dirty trick."

"How?"

"Lettin' me think you was in on that Neighborhood Trust job."

"Well," bitterly — "who says I wasn't?"

"The Greyhounds."

Questions from the World of Love Answered by a Noted Authority

A woman correspondent says: "I want to know why, at 40 years of age, I am called an 'old maid,' while a woman of 40 who has lost her husband is spoken of as 'young widow'? I want to know why a woman who has reached the age of 40 or 45 without having married has virtually no chance whatever to marry, while a widow of the same age has no difficulty in getting another husband?

"Why can the widow out-marry the old maid every time?"

The answer to the question of why the widow can out-marry the old maid (age, looks and general eligibility being equal) is that men are like sheep so far as women are concerned. They follow the leader, and the mere fact that some man has thought well enough of a woman to marry her puts the O. K. stamp on her for the remainder of the masculine sex.

If you will observe a girl at a party you will see that she has either many partners or none. Men flock around her like bees around a honey-pot and put her dances into mincemeat or else she is left to paper the wall.

Nothing succeeds like success with a woman. The more popular she is the more men run after her. The greater the number of her suitors the more men wish to marry her.

On the contrary, the mere fact that a girl never has a date keeps any man from going to see her. The old legend that men seek out the modest violet that every other man passed by has no foundation in fact. It is the gaudy sunflower that flaunts herself in every man's face that they want to be seen wearing in public.

Somehow, men seem to mistrust their individual judgement of a woman, and before they commit themselves to admiring her they want her to have the general approval of other men.

So it is literally true that to the girl who hath beaux other beaux shall be added, even more abundantly unto her, while from her who hath not shall be taken away even the one poor little steady that she hath.

The old maid may be, and often is, a golden matrimonial proposition, but men pass her by in favor of the widow because they have a general idea that if she had been highly desirable some other man would have married her long ago. It doesn't occur to them that in all probability the unmarried woman has been choosy and may have had a dozen offers that she refused because she didn't think them good enough.

The widow can out-marry the old maid because she has the inestimable advantage of having had experience in handling men. She has had a husband and she learned about men from him. She is a skilful professional, whereas the old maid is a bungling amateur.

The widow knows how to play upon a man's weakness as upon a harp of a thousand strings and how to tole him so artfully and subtly into the matrimonial fold that he never suspicions that he is even near it until he hears its gate clang behind him.

It is the widow who knows how to sell matrimony to the poor, hungry widower, sick and tired of restaurant food and club chefs, by spreading her table with good home cooking and putting him down in a comfortable chair by her fireside instead of making him take her out to places of amusement of an evening.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

PICK YOUR HILL

Go pick your hill. The easy climb
A man can clamber any time,
And it's a rather pretty place
With sassafras, and Queen Anne's lace,
It's there, just at the edge of town,
And one's soon up, and one's soon down,
A climb a man won't mind at all,
And one without a chance to fall.

So pick you hill. Around they rise,
Some close to earth, some close to skies,
And one where earth and heaven meet
And all the world lies at one's feet.
But that's a long and stony trail,
With many a hurt and many a gale,
And streams to wade, and rocks to climb,
And vales to cross, and that takes time.

So pick your hill, and not complain
If some choose wind and snow and rain
And come at last to some high place,
For so it is in life's hard race,
A man, with all our calling names,
Will climb about the heights he aims,
Some men choose toil, for some men will,
And some choose ease. Now pick your hill.

For tomorrow—Etiquette.

RAIN-MAKING

Rain makers have been plying their trade from itme immemorial. One method, used by the Indians, is to get out and do a wild dance, and shake rattles, and say magic words. It is very frequently successful; as often, probably, as the methods of most white men. Cannons are sometimes fired at clouds to make them drop their rain, and sometimes they do drop it, though not necessarily because cannons were fired at them. People believe that the reason it rained so in northern France in the war was because of the shooting. The real answer was that Americans came from a drier country. It rains most of the time in parts of western Europe, in war or peace. The best rain-making method so far tried is that used by aviators. Electrified sand when scattered through a cloud by an aviator causes precipitation (why is not clearly understood). This will often dispel a cloud dangerous to aviation, but will not cause enough rain to fall to help agriculture much.

Now what do you know about that?

PRODUCTION RECORD

Gulf Wells on Six-Acre Tract Have Record Output.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3. (AP)—Gulf Oil corporation is assumed to have established a record in production of crude oil per acre for the country during the period from June 29 to Oct. 1 from its six acres of producing territory in the Spindle Top field. Estimated output 2,000,000 barrels, production about 334,000 barrels per acre for the period. The acreage is still producing at the rate of 25,000 barrels daily.

APPEAL TO FARMERS

Reduction of Cotton Acreage Urged As Imperative.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3. (AP) An appeal to southern cotton planters to reduce their crops next season by at least twenty-five per cent was issued today by Representative Black, democrat of Texas. He declared that he expected to reduce his own crop at least that much next season and urged farmers to diversify their crops and thus make the mills "hungry for cotton."

Because of unseasonal rains Greece's current crop has been greatly damaged this season.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

Today's planetary aspects are adverse until noon. They then undergo a very decided change, and become exceedingly favorable, remaining so for the balance of the day. It would be unwise to attempt any new task during the early hours, although thought and meditation about same can only be productive of good results, save for this, routine work should occupy your attention. Afternoon, you can go "full steam ahead" and the influences will engender courage and clearness of vision, combined with resiliency of thought. There is no special field of endeavor that is more favored than others, and all work, demanding energy and a plumb, will prove successful.

Children born today are destined during infancy to be subjected to the usual "ups and downs" of childhood. They will, however, possess great recuperative powers, and promise to attain, long before reaching their 'teens, normal health. They should be counseled to exercise some care immediately prior to adulthood, as the signs denote at that time, a menace. In disposition, they will be bold and venturesome, avid for knowledge and ambitious of success. They will be impatient of all delay and will on more than one occasion "lose out," through their inability to wait and watch. They will possess pleasing personalitines, and are bound to be successful.

If today is your birthday, you are meticulous and painstaking, and these virtues, combined with perseverance and foresight, assure you a fair degree of material reward for your efforts. You also possess courage—both mental and physical—and are never afraid to assume responsibilities, or to shoulder any task, although the nature of the duties involved may be foreign to you. Although selfconfidence is necessary in life's fight it can be overdone, and the wise one is he or she, who without any false modesty, can recognize his or her limitations. You have a great love for "out of doors," and can always think better when unrestrained by the presence of others, or when "closed in by walls." You excel in all sorts of athletic sports, as you are vigorous and energetic, and your ambition to win embraces everything in which you take part. You are peculiarly sensitive to your surroundings, and are never happy when they are of a sordid or an unpalatable nature. Your love is deep and strong and you are constant and loyal.

BANDIT GIVES UP TO POLICE

Jimmy Frazier, San Antonio Fugitive, Tires Of Stolen Liberty

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 2. (AP)—Jimmy Frazier, sentenced to five years in the state penitentiary by a jury in the 94th district court last year as an alleged participant in a series of highway robberies walked into the sheriff's office here Sunday and asked that he be arrested. He said he escaped from Imperial farm number two in March of this year. He was placed in the county jail.

Frazier was jointly indicted with three confederates on a large number of counts alleging robbery and assault on almost a score of motorists, principally on roads east of San Antonio.

He was first arrested on December 5, 1925, while a member of the second ammunition train at Camp Travis. He was charged at that time with robbery with fire-arms in connection with the hold-up of Clarence Fordhaus, who lost about $24 to bandits the night of December 2.

He was later charged with complicity in the attempted robbery of E. M. Gaughler, the night of December 4. One of the alleged bandits was shot in the abdomen by Gaughler, leading to arrest the next day of five youths, one of which turned state's evidence and implicated the lads in a long series of holdups.

DAUGHERTY DEFENSE

Important Problems Confront Defendant's Counsel.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3. (AP)—The defense in the Daugherty-Miller trial is expected to face its most important problem of the trial in federal court this week.

The chief task will be an attempt to explain away the presence of allegedly incriminating liberty bonds which the government has traced to the accounts of the defendants, Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general under the Harding administration and Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian at the same time. They are alleged to have accepted these bonds as their share of the $441,000 which the government has proved was paid for the transfer to allegedly German owners of $7,000,000 realized from the sale of American Metal company stock seized as enemy property during the war.

The case is unusual in that the former high public officials are not charged directly with accepting bribes, but with having conspired to defraud the government of their fair and unprejudiced services in the $7,000,000 transfer.

Belgian Titan of Finance

Albert Loewenstein and his far-flung enterprises.

Europe's greatest banker—at least, its most sensational demi-god of finance—is the Belgian, Albert Loewenstein. He maintains palatial quarters in every important European city, travels with an entourage of 130, utilizes a fleet of planes and motor cars and demands the attention of monarchs and premiers.

HILL HELD ON BOOZE CHARGE

City Officer Makes Raid On Eighth Street Garage Sunday

Charges of transportation and possession of whiskey for sale will be filed in federal court this morning against Jack Hill, who was arrested shortly before noon Sunday by City Detective Carmichael. Hill was taken in a garage in the 100 block on Eighth street and approximately 20 gallons of whiskey seized.

Carmichael, who made the raid single handed, found 24 pints of bonded whiskey, 28 pints of corn liquor, six pints of Scotch bonded liquor and 21 half-gallon jars full of corn. A Chevrolet touring car with a false bottom in which was found a 10-gallon jug was confiscated.

Hill was in the city jail last night and will be transferred to federal authorities this morning, Chief of Police George Hodgins said.

Hill, who has been arrested numerous times on whiskey charges, was heavily fined and scathingly denounced by Federal Judge William H. Atwell in the last term of federal court when he was arraigned on a liquor charge. Judge Atwell imposed the most severe sentence permitted by statute, and warned Hill he would receive drastic treatment if he was caught again.

KAY FLAYS

profit, except the Congressional Record at Washington, and it may profit somebody, for all that I know. The function of the newspaper, according to the courts, is to tell the truth, in the light of the slogan of a great newspaper in New York, which said: "All the news that is fit to print." And, that's my idea."

"I think most everybody, now-a-days, reads the sport news, at least, some of it, and some of the political news, and the news of disasters and wrecks, and things like that. But, do you read this stuff that is primarily fitted for the pervert, the degenerate, the morally unfit? Do you enjoy that?

Paper Depreciate.

"It seems to me that the newspapers have, in many instances, depreciated in the last thirty years, or, in the last twenty years. Now, if that is true, what does it mean? Tha is not a charge you could bring against the newspapers alone. If they have depreciated, it is because the people, as a whole, have depreciated, because the editor sits up all night trying to find out what you want printed, and what you like to read. He puts out his eye, metaphorically speaking, trying to find the wants of his constituency. But, I don't despair of humanity. I don't believe that there are a great number of people that want to read this filthy and sensational stuff. I don't believe that. I refuse to believe it. I have a little bit too much faith in humanity. It is no compliment to you that it is printed, or to me, or to any of us.

"We ought to have people in Wichita Falls, and in Texas, and in the United States, that would demand of publishers not only the truth, but a clean truth.

Read Good Books.

"I don't know how you are about books. They advertise, these days, the 'best sellers,' and I buy, like you do, a god many of these best sellers. They don't last long. You know, I think I would be accomplishing a great thing if I could have my sales here develop a taste for good literature. You know, if you can get a fellow to read one real book—I am not talking about religious books now, for the reason I have got down below where the religious people are this morning; I am just talking about folks—if you can get a fellow, an intelligent man—to read god books—Now, there is a lot of difference between an intelligent man and an educated man or a scholar. There were 12 scholars and one ignorant fellow who was intelligent, camped in a vallew, and they say a flood coming, and they said: 'What are we to do?' All these scholars made a speech, and then tourned to Bill to see what he thought, but Bill was not there, and they said. 'Where is Bill-' 'He's already climbed a tree,' they said.

"He wasn't a scholar, but he was intelligent. If you can get an intelligent man, I say, to read one good book, it spalls his taste for all kinds of bad literature.

Cites the Classics.

"Hoy many of you ever read, Kingsley's 'Water Babies?' If you will read that, you will find what a writer is, and what it takes to make one, and what he writes about. Or Dickens' "Copperfield," many of you have read that. It is a fashion, now, to laugh when they speak about Dickens, but they sold more of his books last year than they did the year before, and son on, and on, back. Good literature spoils the taste for bad, just like good company spoils the taste for bad. And, the reverse of that proposition is true, that bad literature spoils the taste for good. You can't read all kinds and get away with it.

"Now, why am I talking about these things here, this morning? I haven't always read good literature, haven't always read bad, but a little of all kinds. But, I have made up my mind to try to read better books, and I have pretty nearly made up my mind never to read a new book. A book ought to last three or four years, anyhow, before you try to read it. Some of these books that you see so much about have gone in less than three years, gone into the limbo of forgotten things.

"How many men here will say to themselves, "I am going to seek out one good book and read it, and study it?" One will give you a taste for others, and so on.

Ought to Study.

"Now, I come to a obsiques thing. Unless you do read the writing of great men, and of decent men, you are incapable of judging that that is good and that that is evil in a newspaper or in a book. We ought to all be students. We are entitled to know that Stromboli is always in eruption. We should all know that people don't live to be 120 years old. So, I am saying to you this morning, that one of the most intelligent things to do is to learn to discriminate, and pick, and choose among books, periodicals, and newspapers. If you will learn to do that, you will have learned much. Some of you, I know, are already quite capable of doing it, all of you are capable of learning how and do make an effort to find out.

"You know, a newspaper—getting back to my mutton—a newspaper does a lot of harm away off from home, if it is the wrong kind of paper. A man a thousand miles from us, if he reads a filthy, sensational newspaper, says: "That paper is but a picture of that people." And, he is right about it, because, that kind of a paper couldn't live except among that kind of a people. That is the truth.

"So let us try to be like this fellow that climbed a tree. Let's be at least intelligent, if we are not all scholars. Let us be able to pick our own way, and not to buy or countenance bad literature."

FLOODS RAGE

flood conditions prevailed yesterday, but there was another heavy rain last night.

Many stories of difficult rescues were told today. Police and firemen, assisted by members of the local post of the American legion worked all night bringing persons to safety.

Refugees from the flooded districts were cared for in private homes.

SCORES HOMELESS IN ARKANSAS FLOODS

ARKANSAS CITY, Kansas, Oct. 3.(AP)—With scores homeless tonight as the Arkansas river rose at the rate of a foot an hour, deputized American legionaries and members of the local national guard battery patrolled the streets of the inundated areas in boats, rescuing the marooned and preventing vandalism. Fears that this flood will equal that of 1922 when 1,500 were rendered homeless was expressed by city officials.

FLOODS SUBMERGE CENTRAL WEST LANDS

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.(AP)—Level low lands of the central west where torrential rains swept away many lives and millions in property a fortnight ago lay at the mercy of floods again tonight.

Thousands left homeless unable to tarry, and attempt to stay the advance of the waters farther back from submerged banks of swollen streams. Along the Kansas-Oklahoma line and in lower Illinois where conditions were more acute farmers abandoned their fields and fleets of small boats carried to higher ground families marooned in villages and towns threatened with complete inundation.

Mississippi Choked.

The Mississippi river, which had been able to bear away the record breaking September cloud bursts was choked with the rains that ushered in October in western Illinois and tried miles of levees with muddy water several feet above flood stage.

Utilities plants went out of commission with the influx of the intermittent downpours since Friday. Rail transportation was halted in many sections and in northwestern Oklahoma more than a score of the tri-state lead region mines were flooded out of operation.

The Neosho, Verdigris and Caney rivers passed flood limits, a village of 2,000 in Chautauqua county, Kansas, was completely surrounded by water and in the Caney bottoms in Oklahoma people were rescued from trees. To the east, Missouri also had suffering areas. There were a growing toll in life and property and in some areas it appeared that doubling of the damage to crops from the previous floods running well into the millions of dollars was probable.

Today brought leaden skies and more rain and the forecast was for unsettled weather and occasional showers Monday over most of the middle west.

OKLAHOMA CITY GETS REPORTS OF FLOODS

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 3. (AP)—A half dozen rivers in widely separated sections of Oklahoma, gorged by torrential rain falls tonight were on the rampage, driving thousands of lowland dwellers to higher and safer spots.

The flooded streams were the Caney, Verdigris and Neosho rivers in Northeastern Oklahoma; the Chikaskia and Salt Fork in the north central part and the Washita in the southwestern portion of the state.

Perhaps the most damaging flood was on the Caney river at Bartlesville which was a vertible penninsula with water racing the streets on three sides. Two deaths—one drowning and one from fright, were reported there. About 1,500 refugees, driven from their homes by angry waters, were quartered tonight in Bartlesville churches, schools and private homes.

Although the Verdigris and Neosho rivers had receded from the highest stages reached several days ago, when the effects of floods originating in Kansas were felt, fresh downpours in northern Oklahoma were expected to swell them again. Nowata county farmers, living along the Verdigris, not to be taken unaware, tonight were removing to higher grounds.

The Chikaskia river went out of its banks today in the vicinity of Blackwell and chased hundreds of residents in the river section of the city to drier quarters at the fair ground. The Salt Fork of the Arkansas river, of which the Chikaskia is a tributary, was reported out of its banks near Tonkawa. The Salt Fork runs through the Miller Brothers' 101 ranch, and caused a disastrous flood there several years ago.

The Washita river was reported rising rapidly tonight following general heavy rains along its course.

Drenching rains were reported to have fallen today in the north Canadian valley of Northwestern Oklahoma. The north Canadian runs through the southern edge of Oklahoma City and caused a serious flood here in the fall of 1923. A repetition is not feared, however, by city technical experts, who expected that the greater part of the water will be absorbed before it reaches here since the northwesern section has had little rain fall this season.

The club lounge was transferred into a fairyland of lovliness for the occasion with a profusion of cut flowers including huge yellow plume chrysanthemums, tea roses and ferns, and a lareg tea table was surrounded with smaller ones. Baskets of yellow chrysanthemums and roses, the handles tied with tulle formed the centerpieces, while on the larger table, the flowers were fairly banked around the basket. The cloths were of exquisite Chinese grass linen hand embroidered.

Katy Will Maintain All Branch Lines

DALLAS, Oct. 3.(AP)—The Missouri-Kansas-Texas railroad intends to maintain all of its branch lines in Texas, Pres. C. N. Whitehead of the road said here today in explaining away what he termed "misapprehension of the railroad's plans." This misapprehension he said may have resulted from discussion of general railroad principles in connection with the interstate commerce commission hearing in progress here on the proposal to consolidate the Katy, the Cotton Belt and the Kansas City Southern roads.

Learn the Value of Occasional Use.
EVERYONE knows a laxative stimulates the bowels. A diuretic performs a similar function to the kidneys. Under the strain of modern life, our organs are apt to become sluggish. Functional inactivity of the kidneys permits a retention of waste poisons in the blood. For good elimination there must be proper kidney action. More and more people are learning to use Doan's Pills—stimulant diuretic to the kidneys occasionally, to insure good elimination so essential to good health. Doan's act on the kidneys only. LOOKING FORWARD AT DOHENY

"LOOKING BACKWARD" is a story of mile posts and the lessons that the mile post tells to the keen interpreters of the period or the age in which they live and move on the stage of action. An impartial observer, a man who makes a background of history to the political study of men and measures from the signs of the time as it deals with the party of Jefferson and the men who may be in the public eye as presidential possibilities in 1928.

Now the west, deep down in its heart, is jealous of the east. As for the south, it has been voting a democratic ticket since the days when reconstruction ended in the long ago. There were two outstanding candidates at San Francisco in 1920. William Gibbs McAdoo was one and the favorite son of many states was the other. McAdoo went down and James M. Cox of Ohio was the nominee for the slaughter house.

Bryan, William Jennings, now sleeping with heroes of warlike mould at Arlington, was responsible for the defeat of McAdoo and the nomination of Cox. Four years passed on and were recorded on the dial plate of passing time. Madison Square Garden in the city of New York was the stage and the setting. McAdoo, born in the south and Smith, born in the east, were the rival candidates. McAdoo had the backing of the invisible empire. Smith had the backing of men who did not believe in the invisible empire and would never stand for its supremacy.

There was a riot, a wreckage of the party of Jefferson and one of the ablest democrats in the United States, John W. Davis, was made the sacrificial offering on the altar of political insanity and creed bigotry. All the time the republicans were wise in their ways and and their methods and they profited by the mistakes made of all these leaders who claimed to be isolators of Jefferson and the party which he had given to this republica.

There is another campaign coming in 1928. In the east Alfred E. Smith is the standard bearer of the New York democracy for the fifth time. In California, the adopted home of William Gibbs McAdoo, the followers of McAdoo and the followers of Smith have indulged in a series of skirmishes which resulted in a drawn battle.

There is a general election coming in November. Ohio has been called the stepmother of presidents as in the earlier years of this republic Virginia was known as the mother of the presidents. Now this keen observer of events and conditions, this student of men and measure as they appear on the political stage of action today, is of the opinion that Governor Vic Doheny of Ohio may prove to be the outstanding figure among the democratic presidential possibilities in 1928.

As has been said, the west is jealous of the east, and the south votes the democratic ticket with the exception of the border states which have shown a disposition in recent years to go republican in presidential election years. Doheny was elected governor by the democrats of Ohio in 1922 when all the democrats on the ticket with him in defeat. In 1924 when the great republican landslide swept Coolidge into power as a real president, Vic Doheny, the democratic nominee for governor in Ohio, was the sole survivor of the wreck of the party of Jefferson in that state. He has been renominated by the democrats in Ohio who may not love Donehey, they may be jealous of Donehey. One is James H. Cox, who was a democratic governor and later a presidential standard bearer who went down in defeat. Another is Newton D. Baker, the secretary of war in the cabinet of Woodrow Wilson and today the outstanding champion of the league of nations and the cancellation of all war loans. He is practicing law in the city of Cleveland.

He is the legal advisor of tremendous financial interests. He may hope to be the presidential standard bearer in 1932, for mind you, the leaders of the national democratic party, if there is a national democratic party, do not hope for a success in 1928. There is another outstanding Ohio democrat former Senator Atlee Pomerene, now the nominee for United States senator and the winner of the suit on the part of the government which led to the circuit court of appeals cancelling the leases held by Harry F. Sinclair and associates of the tea pot dome oil fields.

This is the way this observer referred to in the foreword prognosticats. 'Vic Donehey will be elected governor of Ohio in November. He has 11 children. He is a dry dry democrat. He has the backing of farmers and organized labor. He is of huge stature and the best orator in Ohio. Baker isn't a mixer; Pomerene isn't a mixer. Neither Pomerene nor Baker are glad hand shakers. In other campaigns the wet democratic organizations in the big cities of Ohio fought for their local tickets and gave their knives to Donehey.

Notwithstanding this, Donehey won. Now the wet organizations of the democratic party appear to be giving Donehey their support. They have been taught a lesson in the past. Pomerene is listed for defeat. All the drys are against him; organized labor is against him; railway employes are against him. Thus it is that one of the political signs of the time is that Vic Donehey stands fair to be re-elected governor of Ohio and regardless of the plans or the programs or the wishes of Cox or Baker or Pomerene, the Ohio democrats, may present him as their candidate for president in 1928.

They will present him as a compromise candidate, a man of the west, a man of the people, a man who should be satisfactory to the wets and the drys as he is a dry dry who doesn't talk much about it and he is close to the farmers and organized labor. Of course, the result in November will tell the story.

If Donehey wins and Pomerene goes down, then Vic will be an outstanding figure on the national stage of political action and a most alluring possibility in the field of presidential faces in the political picture galleries. November balloting will wreck the fortunes of many democratic aspirants for high honor and November balloting may introduce many strangers to a bewildered democracy.

SWIFTER JUSTICES AND FEWER TECHNICALITIES

THIS is a merry old world for some and a weary old world for others. A great many men do their talking without thinking and a great many men never think at all. For this reason intelligent publicity is a power factor in lifting the mists of doubt and driving away the clouds of ignorance. All voters should be well informed, all taxpayers should be well informed, all lawmakers should be well informed, and all writers for the newspapers should be well informed.

Hence, "let the light shine." A statement prepared and furnished the press by Olin W. Finger, clerk of the court of criminal appeals, shows that during the 10-year period ending August 31, 1926, 27,012 criminal cases were tried in Texas, resulting in 23,002 convictions and of the cases appealed there were reversals in only 1,308 cases.

These figures were compiled from reports of district clerks as the law requires such reports and the law also requires that the attorney general embrace the data in his bi-annual report to the governor. It is to be regretted that the reports are not complete in that only part of the clerks made reports to the attorney general.

Now why should a district clerk ignore the law in the case? Why should he be permitted to ignore law? Why should he neglect to send in to the attorney general this valuable statistical information?

According to the announcement made by the clerk of the court of criminal appeals, the counties embraced in the reports and from which the figures were obtained are as follows: Two-year period ending August 1918, 208 counties; two-year period ending August 1920, 221 counties; two-year period ending August 1922, 147 counties; two-year period ending August 1924, 80 counties; two-year period ending August 1926, 166 counties.

These are the larger counties of the state, the counties containing large cities and towns. From the figures given, it appears that of each 100 cases tried, the result is approximately as follows: convictions, 85; acquittals, 15; appeals, 13; reversals, 5. Other information is obtainable from the reports mentioned, submitted to the attorney general, such as the number of indictments, dismissals and the nature of the offenses.

Now the reader should bear in mind that these figures relate to felony cases only. Data at present available relating to misdemeanors, covers but four years, namely: 1916 to 1918, 181 counties; 1918 to 1920 161 counties and discloses the following: Trials, 32,090; convictions, 28,046; reversals, 184.

This record shows that the jurors of Texas are prone to convict or rather return verdicts that the percentage of reversals is amazingly small. It demonstrates something else. There has been a remarkable change in Texas in public sentiment in the last decade and the criminal statutes are enforced.

As for the slogan, "swifter justice and fewer technicalities," it is not based on facts or sound logic if the report submitted to the press and the public by the clerk of the court of criminal appeals is as accurate as it is authoritive. If there is another side to it, then those who clamor for swifter justice and fewer technicalities should brief their case and submit it to the reading public.

There are very few reversals in the 10-year period embraced in the story but in the 10-year period there have been thousands of pardons and paroles granted by the pardon board or rather the governors of the commonwealth of Texas.

The Powerful Katrinka's Little Brother

BLUE STEEL

BY OCTAVUS ROY COHEN

"Shut up! Listen to me. Are you fellows idiots enough to think you can get away with this kind of stuff? Double-cross me, and then play Rariden for a sucker? Don't you know Dan has got you spotted—every last one of you? Why, you ain't got a chance on earth. Try to beat it, and it's all off; and every one of you are guilty of killin' Blood Moreno as the man that croaked him. You're in for a stretch apiece, but if you come clean with me, I can just about promise that this murder stuff will be dropped. Now what's the answer? Do you act wise, or shall I make you?"

They decided to act wise. One hour later the spoils were delivered to Flash Morgan. Immediately Mr. Morgan repaired to the Fifth Precinct police station and delivered the money to his friend Dan Rariden. Dan smiled. "Much obliged, Flash. This helps."

"I know it."

"And there ain't to be any murder charge against 'em. Burglary, all right; but nix on the murder."

"That's all right—I'll look after that end of it."

"Good!—and now—about me?"

"I guess you don't have to ask, do you, Flash?"

"I reckon not. 'spose I might just as well hang up my hat an' make myself at home eh?"

"Uh-huh!"

And so Police Lieutenant Daniel Boone Rariden arrested his friend. There was pain in that little office—pain and suffering—and a considerable puzzlement in the glance Rariden bestowed upon Flash Morgan. As for Morgan, he was too proud to explain; he felt that Dan should know, should understand without words, that he had not been untrue to the trust of their friendship.

Flash went to a cell. It was a very nice cell, more of a room, in fact—a place reserved usually for indiscreet ladies; but it was nevertheless a cell. Mr. Morgan was not happy, he was too fond of life, liberty and the pursuit of other people's money.

Dan Rariden threw out a dragnet. One by one the members-in-good-standing of the Greyhounds were brought in. They were worried, they were quite willing to do a burglary stretch, provided their chief did not throw them down on his promise that no charge of murder would be chalked against them. It was a blue day for the Greyhounds. Flash was permitted to visit them. He smiled sardonically: "You're a fine mess of tripe, you are. I guess when you get out, you'll run around with bad boys like Blood Moreno again."

"Ah, Flash, he told us—"

"Sure. I know what he told you — that Dan Rariden would think I was mixed up in it, and he would lay off you because I and he is good friends. Well, I'm here with you, and you know how much I had to do with souping that box."

Back to his private cell went Flash Morgan. A turnkey who had eavesdropped the interview delivered an interesting report to Police Lieutenant Daniel Boone Rariden. Lieutenant Rariden left the precinct station and made for the county courthouse. Two hours later he returned to the fifth. He went straight to the private room of his friend, flung open the door.

"C'mon, Flash."

"Where?"

"We're goin' for a walk."

Flash knew that Dan was happy. He did not ask the reason. He followed the police lieutenant into the sunlight and shoulder to shoulder, they strolled toward the narrow avenue which divided the Fourth and Fifth precincts. It was Rariden who broke the silence.

"Flash," he said, "you done me an awful dirty trick."

"How?"

"Lettin' me think you was in on that Neighborhood Trust job."

"Well," bitterly — "who says I wasn't?"

"The Greyhounds."

A woman correspondent says: "I want to know why, at 40 years of age, I am called an 'old maid,' while a woman of 40 who has lost her husband is spoken of as 'young widow'? I want to know why a woman who has reached the age of 40 or 45 without having married has virtually no chance whatever to marry, while a widow of the same age has no difficulty in getting another husband?

The answer to the question of why the widow can out-marry the old maid (age, looks and general eligibility being equal) is that men are like sheep so far as women are concerned. They follow the leader, and the mere fact that some man has thought well enough of a woman to marry her puts the O. K. stamp on her for the remainder of the masculine sex.

If you will observe a girl at a party you will see that she has either many partners or none. Men flock around her like bees around a honey-pot and cut her dances into mincemeat or else she is left to paper the wall.

Nothing succeeds like success with a woman. The more popular she is the more men run after her. The greater the number of her suitors the more men wish to marry her.

On the contrary, the mere fact that a girl never has a date keeps any man from going to see her. The old legend that men seek out the modest violet that every other man passed by has no foundation in fact. It is the gaudy sunflower that flaunts herself in every man's face that they want to be seen wearing in public.

Somehow, men seem to mistrust their individual judgement of a woman, and before they commit themselves to admiring her they want her to have the general approval of other men.

So it is literally true that to the girl who hath beaux other beaux shall be added even more abundantly unto her, while from her who hath not shall be taken away even the one poor little steady that she hath.

The old maid may be, and often is, a golden matrimonial proposition, but men pass her by in favor of the widow because they have a general idea that if she had been highly desirable some other man would have married her long ago. It doesn't occur to them that in all probability the unmarried woman has been choosy and may have had a dozen offers that she refused because she didn't think them good enough.

The widow can out-marry the old maid because she has the inestimable advantage of having had experience in handling men. She has had a husband and she learned about men from him. She is a skilful professional, whereas the old maid is a bungling amateur.

The widow knows how to play upon a man's weakness as upon a harp of a thousand strings and how to lole him so artfully and subtly into the matrimonial fold that he never suspicions that he is even near it until he hears its gate clang behind him.

It is the widow who knows how to sell matrimony to the poor, hungry widower, sick and tired of restaurant food and club chefs, by spreading her table with good home cooking and putting him down in a comfortable chair by her fireside instead of making him take her out to places of amusement of an evening.

APPEAL TO FARMERS

Reduction of Cotton Acreage Urged As Imperative.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3. (AP) An appeal to southern cotton planters to reduce their crops next season by at least twenty-five per cent was issued today by Representative Black, democrat of Texas. He declared that he expected to reduce his own crop at least that much next season and urged farmers to diversify their crops and thus make the mills "hungry for cotton."

Because of unseasonal rains Greece's current crop has been greatly damaged this season.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

PICK YOUR HILL

Go pick your hill. The easy climb
A man can clamber any time,
And it's a rather pretty place
With sassafras, and Queen Anne's lace,
It's there, just at the edge of town,
And one's soon up, and one's soon down,
A climb a man won't mind at all,
And one without a chance to fall.

So pick you hill. Around they rise,
Some close to earth, some close to skies,
And one where earth and heaven meet
And all the world lies at one's feet,
But that's a long and stony trail,
With many a hurt and many a gale,
And streams to wade, and rocks to climb,
And vales to cross, and that takes time.

So pick your hill, and not complain
If some choose wind and snow and rain
And come at last to some high place,
For so it is in life's hard race,
A man, with al lour calling names,
Will climb about the heights he aims,
Some men choose toil, for some men will,
And some choose ease. Now pick your hill.

For tomorrow—Etiquette.

What Do You Know About It?

DAILY SCIENCE SIX

1. What trees are most commonly used for windbreaks in the United States?
2. Does a windbreak really help in protecting an orchard?
3. Do forests increase the rainfall, or draw rain clouds?
4. Why are floods less common in forest regions?
5. Why are drouths uncommon in temperate forest regions?
6. Is there less snow than there used to be?

Answers to these questions in tomorrow's Record News.

RAIN-MAKING

Rain makers have been plying their trade from itms immemorial. One method, used by the Indians, is to get out and do a wild dance, and shake rattles, and say magic words. It is very frequently successful; as often, probably, as the methods of most white men. Cannons are sometimes fired at clouds to make them drop their rain, and sometimes they do drop it, though not necessarily because cannons were fired at them. People believe that the reason it rained so in northern France in the war was because of the shooting. The real answer was that Americans came from a drier country. It rains most of the time in parts of western Europe, in war or peace. The best rain-making method so far tried is that used by aviators. Electrified sand when scattered through a cloud by an aviator causes precipitation (why is not clearly understood). This will often dispel a cloud dangerous to aviation, but will not cause enough rain to fall to help agriculture much.

Now what do you know about that?

Answers to Saturday's questions:
1. Aristotle was a biologist.
2. Archimedes was an engineer.
3. Descartes was a mathematician.
4. Galton was a geneticist.
5. Koch was a bacteriologist.
6. Pasteur was a chemist, not a doctor, but his chemical work led him into a study of diseases.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

Today's planetary aspects are adverse until noon. They then undergo a very decided change, and become exceedingly favorable, remaining so for the balance of the day. It would be unwise to attempt any new task during the early hours, although thought and meditation about same can only be productive of good results, save for this, routine work should occupy your attention. Afternoon, you can go "full steam ahead" and the influences will engender courage and clearness of vision, combined with resiliency of thought. There is no special field of endeavor that is more favored than others, and all work, demanding energy and a plumb, will prove successful.

Children born today are destined during infancy to be subjected to the usual "ups and downs" of childhood. They will, however, possess great recuperative powers, and promise to attain, long before reaching their 'teens, normal health. They should be counseled to exercise some care immediately prior to adulthood, as the signs denote at that time, a menace. In disposition, they will be bold and venturesome, avid for knowledge and ambitious of success. They will be impatient of all delay and will on more than one occasion "lose out," though their inability to wait and watch. They will possess pleasing personalitines, and are bound to be successful.

If today is your birthday, you are meticulous and painstaking, and these virtues, combined with perseverance and foresight, assure you a fair degree of material reward for your efforts. You also possess courage—both mental and physical—and are never afraid to assume responsibilities, or to shoulder any task, although the nature of the duties involved may be foreign to you. Although selfconfidence is necessary in life's fight it can be overdone, and the wise one is he or she, who without any false modesty, can recognize his or her limitations. You have a great love for "out of doors," and can always think better when unrestrained by the presence of others, or when "closed in by walls." You excel in all sorts of athletic sports, as you are vigorous and energetic, and your ambition to win embraces everything in which you take part. You are peculiarly sensitive to your surroundings, and are never happy when they are of a sordid or an unpalatable nature. Your love is deep and strong and you are constant and loyal.

BANDIT GIVES UP TO POLICE

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 3. (AP)—Jimmy Frazier, sentenced to five years in the state penitentiary by a jury in the 94th district court last year as an alleged participant in a series of highway robberies walked into the sheriff's office here Sunday and asked that he be arrested. He said he escaped from Imperial farm number two in March of this year. He was placed in the county jail.

Frazier was jointly indicted with three confederates on a large number of counts alleging robbery and assault on almost a score of motorists, principally on roads east of San Antonio.

He was first arrested on December 5, 1923, while a member of the second ammunition train at Camp Travis. He was charged at that time with robbery with firearms in connection with the hold-up of Clarence Fordhaus, who lost about $24 to bandits the night of December 2.

He was later charged with complicity in the attempted robbery of E. M. Gaughler, the night of December 4. One of the alleged bandits was shot in the abdomen by Gaughler, leading to arrest the next day of five youths, one of which turned state's evidence and implicated the lads in a long series of holdups.

DAUGHERTY DEFENSE

Important Problems Confront Defendant's Counsel.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3. (AP)—The defense in the Daugherty-Miller trial is expected to face its most important problem of the trial in federal court this week.

The chief task will be an attempt to explain away the presence of allegedly incriminating liberty bonds which the government has traced to the accounts of the defendants, Harry H. Daugherty, attorney general under the Harding administration and Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian at the same time. They are alleged to have accepted these bonds as their share of the $441,000 which the government has proved was paid for the transfer to allegedly German owners of $7,000,000 realized from the sale of American Metal company stock seized as enemy property during the war.

The case is unusual in that the former high public officials are not charged directly with accepting bribes, but with having conspired to defraud the government of their fair and unprejudiced services in the $7,000,000 transfer.

HILL HELD ON BOOZE CHARGE

Charges of transportation and possession of whiskey for sale will be filed in federal court this morning against Jack Hill, who was arrested shortly before noon Sunday by City Detective Carmichael. Hill was taken in a garage in the 100 block on Eighth street and approximately 30 gallons of whiskey seised.

Carmichael, who made the raid single handed, found 34 pints of bonded whiskey, 28 pints of corn liquor, six pints of Scotch bonded liquor and 21 half-gallon jars full of corn. A Chevrolet touring car with a false bottom in which was found a 10-gallon jug was confiscated.

Hill was in the city jail last night and will be transferred to federal authorities this morning, Chief of Police George Hodgins said.

Hill, who has been arrested numerous times on whiskey charges, was heavily fined and scathingly denounced by Federal Judge William H. Atwell in the last term of federal court when he was arraigned on a liquor charge. Judge Atwell imposed the most severe sentence permitted by statute, and warned Hill he would receive drastic treatment if he was caught again.

profit, except the Congressional Record at Washington, and it may profit somebody, for all that I know. The function of the newspaper, according to the courts, is to tell the truth, in the light of the slogan of a great newspaper in New York, which said: "All the news that is fit to print." And, that's my idea."

"I think most everybody, now-a-days, reads the sport news, at least, some of it, and some of the political news, and the news of disasters, and wrecks, and things like that. But, do you read this stuff that is primarily fitted for the pervert, the degenerate, the morally unfit? Do you enjoy that?

Paper Depreciate.

"It seems to me that the newspapers have, in many instances, depreciated in the last thirty years, or, in the last twenty years. Now, if that is true, what does it mean? Tha is not a charge you could bring against the newspapers alone. If they have depreciated, it is because the people, as a whole, have depreciated, because the editor sits up all night trying to find out what you want printed, and what you like to read. He puts out his eye, metaphorically speaking, trying to find the wants of his constituancy. But, I don't despair of humanity. I don't believe that there are a great number of people that want to read this filthy and sensational stuff. I don't believe that. I refuse to believe it. I have a little bit too much faith in humanity. It is no compilment to you that it is printed, or to me, or to any of us.

"We ought to have people in Wichita Falls, and in Texas, and in the United States, that would demand of publishers not only the truth, but a clean truth.

Read Good Books.

"I don't know how you are about books. They advertise, these days, the 'best sellers,' and I buy, like you do, a good many of these best sellers. They don't last long. You know, I think I would be accomplishing a great thing if I could have my sales here develop a taste for good literature. You know, if you can get a fellow to read one real book—I am not talking about religious books now, for the reason I have got down below where the religious people are this morning; I am just talking about folks—if you can get a fellow, an intelligent man—to read god books—Now, there is a lot of difference between an intelligent man and an educated man or a scholar. There were 12 scholars and one ignorant fellow who was intelligent, camped in a vallew, and they say a flood coming, and they said: 'What are we to do?' All these scholars made a speech, and then tourned to Bill to see what he thought, but Bill was not there, and they said. 'Where is Bill-' 'He's already climbed a tree,' they said.

"He wasn't a scholar, but he was intelligent. If you can get an intelligent man, I say, to read one good book, it spalls his taste for all kinds of bad literature.

Cites the Classics.

"Hey many of you ever read, Kingsley's 'Water Babies?' If you will read that, you will find what a writer is, and what it takes to make one, and what he writes about. Or Dickens' "Copperfield," many of you have read that. It is a fashion, now, to laugh when they speak about Dickens, but they sold more of his books last year than they did the year before, and son on, and on, back. Good literature spoils the taste for bad, just like good company spoils the taste for bad. And, the reverse of that proposition is true, that bad literature spoils the taste for good. You can't read all kinds and get away with it.

"Now, why am I talking about these things here, this morning? I haven't always read good literature, haven't always read bad, but a little of all kinds. But, I have made up my mind to try to read better books, and I have pretty nearly made up my mind never to read a new book. A book ought to last three or four years, anyhow before you try to read it. Some of these books that you see so much about have gone in less than three years, gone into the limbo of forgotten things.

"How many men here will say to themselves, 'I am going to seek out one good book and read it, and study it?" One will give you a taste for others, and so on.

Ought to Study.

"Now, I come to a obsiquess thing. Unless you do read the writing of great men, and of decent men, you are incapable of judging that that is good and that that is evil in a newspaper or in a book. We ought to all be students. We are entitled to know that Stromboli is always in eruption. We should all know that people don't live to be 120 years old. So, I am saying to you this morning, that one of the most intelligent things to do is to learn to discriminate, and pick, and choose among books, periodicals, and newspapers. If you will learn to do that, you will have learned much. Some of you, I know, are already quite capable of doing it, all of you are capable of learning how and do make an effort to find out.

"You know, a newspaper—getting back to my mutton—a newspaper does a lot of harm away off from home, if it is the wrong kind of paper. A man a thousand miles from us, if he reads a filthy, sensational newspaper, says: "That paper is but a picture of that people." And, he is right about it, because, that kind of a paper couldn't live except among that kind of a people. That is the truth.

"So let us try to be like this fellow that climbed a tree. Let's be at least intelligent, if we are not all scholars. Let us be able to pick our own way, and not to buy or countenance bad literature."

flood conditions prevailed yesterday, but there was another heavy rain last night.

Many stories of difficult rescues were told today. Police and firemen, assisted by members of the local post of the American legion worked all night bringing persons to safety.

Refugees from the flooded districts were cared for in private homes.

SCORES HOMELESS IN ARKANSAS FLOODS

ARKANSAS CITY, Kansas, Oct. 3.(AP)—With scores homeless tonight as the Arkansas river rose at the rate of a foot an hour, deputized American legionaries and members of the local national guard battery patrolled the streets of the inundated areas in boats, rescuing the marooned and preventing vandalism. Fears that this flood will equal that of 1923 when 1,500 were rendered homeless was expressed by city officials.

FLOODS SUBMERGE CENTRAL WEST LANDS

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.(AP)—Level low lands of the central west where torrential rains swept away many lives and millions in property a fortnight ago lay at the mercy of floods again tonight.

Thousands left homeless unable to tarry, and attempt to stay the advance of the waters farther back from submerged banks of swollen streams. Along the Kansas-Oklahoma line and in lower Illinois where conditions were more acute farmers abandoned their fields and fleets of small boats carried to higher ground families marooned in villages and towns threatened with complete inundation.

Mississippi Choked.

The Mississippi river, which had been able to bear away the record breaking September cloud burtsts was choked with the rains that ushered in October in western Illinois and tried miles of levees with muddy water several feet above flood stage.

Utilities plants went out of commission with the influx of the intermittent downpours since Friday. Rail transportation was halted in many sections and in northwestern Oklahoma more than a score of the tri-state lead region mines were flooded out of operation.

The Neosho, Verdigris and Caney rivers passed flood limits, a village of 2,000 in Chautauqua county, Kansas, was completely surrounded by water and in the Caney bottoms in Oklahoma people were rescued from trees. To the east, Missouri also had suffering areas. There were a growing toll in life and property and in some areas it appeared that doubling of the damage to crops from the previous floods running well into the millions of dollars was probable.

Today brought leaden skies and more rain and the forecast was for unsettled weather and occasional showers Monday over most of the middle west.

OKLAHOMA CITY GETS REPORTS OF FLOODS

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 3. (AP)—A half dozen rivers in widely separated sections of Oklahoma, gorged by torrential rain falls tonight were on the rampage, driving thousands of lowland dwellers to higher and safer spots.

The flooded streams were the Caney, Verdigris and Neosho rivers in Northeastern Oklahoma; the Chikaskia and Salt Fork in the north central part and the Washita in the southwestern portion of the state.

Perhaps the most damaging flood was on the Caney river at Bartlesville which was a vertible penninsula with water racing the streets on three sides. Two deaths —one drowning and one from fright, were reported there. About 1,500 refugees, driven from their homes by angry waters, were quartered tonight in Bartlesville churches, schools and private homes.

Although the Verdigris and Neosho rivers had receded from the highest stages reached several days ago, when the effects of floods originating in Kansas were felt, fresh downpours in northern Oklahoma were expected to swell them again. Nowata county farmers, living along the Verdigris, not to be taken unaware, tonight were removing to higher grounds.

The Chikaskia river went out of its banks today in the vicinity of Blackwell and chased hundreds of residents in the river section of the city to drier quarters at the fair ground. The Salt Fork of the Arkansas river, of which the Chikaskia is a tributary, was reported out of its banks near Tonkawa. The Salt Fork runs through the Miller Brothers' 101 ranch, and caused a disastrous flood there several years ago.

The Washita river was reported rising rapidly tonight following general heavy rains along its course.

Drenching rains were reported to have fallen today in the north Canadian valley of Northwestern Oklahoma. The north Canadian runs through the southern edge of Oklahoma City and caused a serious flood here in the fall of 1923. A repetition is not feared, however, by city technical experts, who expected that the greater part of the water will be absorbed before it reaches here since the northwesern section has had little rain fall this season.

Baskets of yellow chrysanthemmus and roses, the handles tied with tulle formed the centerpieces, while on the larger table, the flowers were fairly banked around the basket. The cloths were of exquisite Chinese grass linen hand embroidered.

Whitehead of the road said here today in explaining away what he termed "misapprehension of the railroad's plans." This misapprehension he said may have resulted from discussion of general railroad principles in connection with the interstate commerce commission hearing in progress here on the proposed to consolidate the Katy, the Cotton Belt and the Kansas City Southern roads.

What Is a Diuretic?
Learn the Value of Occasional Use.
EVERYONE knows a laxative stimulates the bowels. A diuretic performs a similar function to the kidneys. Under the strain of modern life, our organs are apt to become sluggish. Functional inactivity of the kidneys permits a retention of waste poisons in the blood. For good elimination there must be proper kidney action. More and more people are learning to use Doan's Pills—stimulant diuretic to the kidneys occasionally, to insure good elimination so essential to good health. Doan's act on the kidneys only. Users everywhere endorse them. Ask your neighbor!

The Difference That Money Made.

In the old boom days at Virginia City James Fair, the famous Silver Magnate, was sitting one day in a barroom. It will be recalled that Mr. Fair, despite his lack of book-learning, ammassed a great many millions of dollars and became a leader in several lines of endeavor.

As he sat there the bar-keeper, who was writing a letter, called out to him, asking how to spell the word "bird."

"B-U-R-D," answered Mr. Fair.

"That's the way I thought it was," said the letter-writer.

An educated gambler, who had overheard this conversation bided his time. On the following day, finding Mr. Fair in company of a group of mining men, the gambler offered to bet him a hundred dollars that he could not correctly spell the word bird.

"B-I-R-D," said Mr. Fair, reaching for the stakes.

"My Lord!" exclaimed the loser, "You didn't spell it that way yesterday."

"Son," said Mr. Fair, softly, "there wasn't any money up on it yesterday."

SWINDLERS GET INSURANCE FOR "WIVES" OF BACHELORS

LONDON.—Amazing swindles under the National Health Insurance act have been revealed by an investigation. By means of imaginary marriages and forged certificates large sums have been paid out in maternity benefits. Spurious records of sickness and disablement helped the swindlers and it is believed the frauds may total more than $1,000,000 when the investigation is complete. In many cases maternity benefits were paid out for the "wives" of men who had never been married. Such "wives," of course, were nonexistent and the insurance allotted to them went into the pockets of the swindlers.

MOVIES LURE TEXAS 'HANDS'

Cowboys Join Ranks of Film Company Now Located At San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 4. (AP)—Contest hands from all parts of Texas who are "game" to ride anything from a mad bull to a streak of chained lightning have gone into the movies here, though temporarily, on a glorified rodeo that perhaps eclipses any mass struggle over staged between men and bad horses.

The cowboys were picked for their skill and the professional contest horses for their viciousness to participate in a regimental melee of "The Rough Riders," which is being filmed here by Famous Players-Lasky corporation on the original training grounds of Roosevelt's horsemen.

In the opening sequence where bucking horses were used to disrupt the mounted review of 1,200 Rough Riders, four men were hurt and a dozen others took bad spills from their ponies, crawling from under the onrush of trampling hoofs to avoid more serious consequences.

E. O. Acree of Uvalde required hospital treatment after a fracas with a mean horse. Riley Mayo, contest rider from Hondo, was kicked and bruised by a pitching pony known to rodeo men as "Freckles." "Red" Parsons took a painful fall and Fred Kohler, actor, received an injured leg when his mount rolled over on him.

Approximately a hundred cowboys, two score of them participants in rodeos and an equal number of bucking horses were used in the exciting scene. The bucking horses were mixed with the cavalry mounts to start as much confusion and excitement as was possible.

Such well known pitching horses as "Funeral Wagon," "Widow-maker," "Pancho Villa," "Whirling Chair," "Spindletop," "Pinto," "Whirlwind," and "High-Wide-'n'-Handsome," were used.

"Funeral Wagon was ridden for the first time, it was said, in four years. Mister Coward from Charlotte, Texas, was the contest hand who mastered the fierce bay before a battery of movie cameras.

"Pardner" Ed Jones, three times riding champion of Arizona, rode his stormy mount through the dust. Son Kuykendall and his brother Bud, from Charlotte, took and gave a lot of punishment in the wild melee. J. E. "Red" Laidley of San Antonio distinguished himself as did Jack Bridges of Oklahoma City, Frank and Henry Savage of Charlotte, Taylor Smith of Ganado, and a dozen others from Beeville, Floresville, Marfa, Castorville, Big Spring, Jouranton and El Paso.

British Kill 500 Chinese in Reprisal for Commander's Death

British river steamer Kia-We and Commander F. C. Darley.

In an attempt to rescue two other British river boats from the attack of warring Chinese on the upper Yangtse river, Commander F. C. Darley of H. M. S. Despatch met death by machine gun fire. Reprisals for his death and that of a number of British seamen of the ship Kia-We brought other British ships into the fray and resulted in the killing of some 500 Chinese. The ships which Commander Darley attempted to rescue were seized by the Chinese general Yang Sen.

Men Much More Sentimental Than Women In Choice of Their Books

Dallas Hotel Librarian Makes Interesting Report On Taste of Male Readers Who Call At Her Library; Women are Flightier She Finds In Survey.

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 3. (AP)—Gentlemen may prefer blondes in real life, but in literature the men folks are not particular about complexions so long as the heroine is romantic and the story entertaining, according to the finds and observations of a certain hotel librarian.

Venturing forth on something new, Corrine Blair Beakley, late of St. Mary's college, Dallas, has flung aside her college diversions to give both the traveling and the stationary public a peek into the land of books. She has installed in the Baker hotel here the first hotel library in Texas and by virtue of this adventure has gained some startling information concerning the innermost literary preferences of men away from home.

For instance, men are much more sentimental than women, she finds. That is, traveling men, far away from home and with idle time on their hands, just naturally take to books about domestic happiness and love which drip with sentiment from cover to cover. When this is not their mood, then they crave excitement or mystery, detective and adventure stories, principally those in which the hero is all hero and the villian all villian.

Women, on the other hand, whether they be traveling or residents of Dallas, go in principally for love stories of the lightest variety, and with them the Mr. Harold Bell Wright type is greatly to be desired.

One explanation for this taste on the part of women readers is that most of them who come to the hotel have a few moments to idle away, while waiting for friends or for a luncheon or bridge engagement and don't want to get into anything too deep in the few moments at their disposal.

Miss Beakey has established herself on the mezzanine floor of the hotel where her books are within easy reach of hotel guests who desire to lounge about in ease and quiet. Here she displays her ware to reading tastes representing every section of the United States and finds some rather quiet and interesting complexes in the reading public.

One man, who resides at the hotel, wants poetry for breakfast. He has a fresh book of poems set out for him every morning, and explains that the harmony of poetry gives him a proper rythmic start on the day.

Another man, this a tired business man, must have a detective story every night to retire on, and it keeps the librarian busy digging up the most exciting yarns of deep crimes unraveled by shrewd Sherlocks for this customer. He says it is his chief relaxation, and is better than a baseball game or a round of golf.

Then there is the man who sells golf and other sport paraphernalia, but who doesn't play golf. He wants all the latest books on the game so he can keep up on the talk.

Strangest of all, however, are the visitors from the North and East who insist on the wildest of wild west stories "in order to get the atmosphere out here" and tall buildings and perfectly civilized natives do not daunt them, for they expect the wild west to jump out on them at almost any corner.

Through all the divergent desires, however, there is one theme that never palls on the American public, whether they be at home or abroad, experience has taught the librarian. It is the Cinderella theme, the story of the boy or girl born poor, who suddenly finds wealth and fame, puts all enemies to rout, and lives happily ever afterward. In a thousand and one versions of this plot, the idea never grows stale, but may be dressed in a new garb, hashed and rehashed, and still turn up as a best seller.

The promulgator of this new idea in hotel service finds the contact with people far and near an exhilirating diversion from the college days, and the necessity of satisfying book tastes from the Atlantic to the Pacific whets the wits as nothing else can.

The idea has worked successfully thus far, both the traveling public and residents of Dallas patronizing the hotel library, and the hotel management is considering placing libraries in other hotels throughout the state as a service to their patrons.

U. S. SHIPPING MAKES GAINS

Shipping Board Will Put More Vessels Into Operation

BY HARDIN COLFAX
Special Correspondent of The Record News.
Copyright, 1926, By the Consolidated Press Association.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3. — For the first time since the post war boom collapsed, in 1920, the demand for ocean tonnage is so heavy at American ports that cargo rates are advancing.

Uncle Sam, an unwilling ship operator, wringing his hands in distress, while the major portion of a mammoth fleet built at high cost to meet war needs rotted at anchor in quiet waters, has more of his vessels steaming the seas today than for years.

Thirty-five more ships are in commission than at any time in two years. Despite the sales to private owners of choice vessels during that period, the United States shipping board is preparing to recondition 25 to 30 others from its reserve. It will place them in service if conditions justify.

Cargos Declined.

The emergency fleet corporation this week was forced to decline a cargo, the first occurrence of the kind in many a long day.

With fifty vessels ordinarily assigned to relief roles, the corporation found itself this week with only three unengaged, and these in waters far removed from the Gulf, whence came the call for a bottom to transport lumber to Brazil. The lumber will be moved, on a delayed voyage, by various shifts but the condition is significant.

The North Atlantic conference recently announced an increase in rates. Similar action has been taken by lines operating out of Gulf ports. Thus far, no increases have been made on shipments from South Atlantic or Pacific ports. The higher freight rates are not applicable to all commodities. Cotton, for instance, which is of tremendous importance to the South, is paying the same ocean rates as formerly.

There is no boom in shipping, the American merchant marine problem is not solved. The picture is not one of vivid splashes of color, but rather shows a brightening of the dull grey of depression which has marked the industry for many months.

How long the more happy condition will exist is uncertain, but it is not too much to say that the present situation in ocean transportation along the far flung coast of the United States is the best since post war inflation turned to deflation.

Rates Lower.

Ocean freight rates have been low since the Armistice left a vast surplus of ships on all the seven seas. It has been the exceptional line which has made money. That is true of all flags. The halls of congress have reverberated with the cries of anguish over the losses of Uncle Sam's shipping operations, although these have been only relative to what many private corporations have suffered at the same time.

World competition for cargoes has kept rates down. It is a fact that ocean shipments are carried at prices only slightly in advance of those prevailing before the war. Foreign vessels, due mainly to lower wages for their crews, operate cheaper than ships under the United States flag—thus controlling rates.

But world commerce is more stabilized this year than since the catastrophe of 1914. Grain, cotton, lumber, petroleum are rushing from the United States in heavy quantities, adding to the normal demand which calls for ships. The increase in bulk exports since the first of July has been extraordinarily.

Domestic Gain

Enjoying a domestic prosperity which is making new records in many lines, the United States is drawing more heavily upon its wealth of products to supply the needs of foreign nations, which themselves, in most cases, are in a better position since they are able to buy.

East coast shipping has been disrupted in recent weeks by the demand by the British Isles for American coal. This, of course, will end with settlement of the long drawn out strike.

Cotton, low in price is moving to foreign shores in almost unprecedented quantities after having lagged in early months this year. In August 391,000 bales were exported, contrasted with 215,000 in the same month of 1925 and the movement continued throughout September.

Wheat has been going out of the country heavily in the last three months—28,994,000 bushels of grain were exported in August compared to 7,425,000 in the 1925 month. Flour shipments increased 575,000 barrels in the same comparison. Even Japan is buying American wheat this year. Crude petroleum, gasoline and kerosene exports are ahead of last year. So are shipments of soft wood lumber, iron ore, copper, steel products, machinery and a host of other commodities.

"I AND GEORGE"—By NINA WILCOX PUTNAM

America's Only Woman Humorist

NINA WILCOX PUTNAM

As Col. Cody, who put the great open spaces into the minds of men, once said, "Riding horses and stalls are closely associated, but believe me all the stalls connected with riding horses are not in the stables."

And the truth of this come over I and George, that's my husband, not long ago, when we thoughtlessly accepted a invitation to stay over a very week-end with the Freddy Freenashes out on Long Island at their country estate. The Freenashes are very wealthy people now, and as such, why they naturally like to show it offence in a while to old friends in the flivver class, the same as ourselfs, especially when they can't get ahold of anything better in the way of company. And while naturally I and Geo. both are above caring anything about such things as staying at big pretentious country houses, why we accepted out of curiosity and because we was too broadminded to object to giving them the pleasure and satisfaction, if you get what I mean.

Well anyways, the very first night we was there, we was sitting in the East Saloon, which wasn't a saloon at all; there was not even a sign of a bar in it—they are strictly temperance, but that's what they called it.

Simple Life De Luxe

At any rate we was sitting there after dinner, and the conversation turned onto the joys of country life, and how, after all, a country gentleman had it all over a city business man. This line was commenced by Freddy in full evening dress, which Geo. could fortunately match up to, I having insisted that he get his soup and fish back from the waiter who he ordinarily rents it out to by the week. Well anyways, Freddy waved his perfecto at the informal Louis Quarts furniture of this simple little 90x40 "den" and he commenced a Mark Anthony.

It's the only life, this simple one, says Freddy, just living quietly in the country, the same as we do, with a few yachts and motor cars, and a nice acre or two of garden. It's the real life, George, you ought to get yourself a little place out here, not too big, say fifty or a hundred acres. You and your Missus certainly would enjoy it; there is such a lot to do in the country—of a healthy nature, you know. Do you ride horseback? That's my hobby!

Why, of course we ride horseback, says Geo. in a offhand manner. Now I personally myself, he says, have ridden all my life; that is, ever since I was grown up and went out West, you know, into the wilds. I was on a ranch once, didn't you know that, Freenash?

The Great Open Spaces

Sure I was on a ranch, out in Arizona. It was a pinochle ranch, they raised fine points about the game. Yes sir! I rode fences out there, lots of 'em. Why I and the boys used to get up at dawn and bust horses. Bust 'em right in the nose, many and many's the time. I'm telling you, those was the days, riding over the wide prairies, lassoing all kinds of wild flowers from Tiger lilies to mushrooms.

I was in the saddle day and night and sometimes early morning and late afternoon, as well, not even stopping for tea. Yes, Fred, I learned to lasso wild chickens out there, and as for wild oats, well, that's nobobdy's business! I'll say I used to ride. There is nothing quite like the feel of a good horse under you, eh, Freenash?

Well, while listening to this of course I realized that Geo. was exaggerating some, the same as any other hearth-rug rider. I wouldn't go so far as to say he was lying, exactly, because it was true he had been on a ranch. He was there two whole days in fact, selling the Six Foot Shelf of the World's Best Cookbooks. I don't know that he was ever on a horse while there, however, in fact, I had previously got a impression that the horse had been on him, on account he hadn't made any sales. But I am not the type of wife which will give her husband away in public, especially not in front of stuck up, pretentious people like the Freenashes.

Jennie Raises the Ante

Quite to the other hand, I am the type that waits until they are alone together and then don't allow him any sleep, kidding him about it in a nice, yet definite sort of way. So when it come my turn to fib, why I merely give him a look as much as to say now stand by, the same as I did dear, when I commenced.

Oh I just adore horseback riding, I says, especially across country. Now when I was a young southern girl in the mountains of dear old Kentucky, N. Y., and points west, about all I did was ride, in fact, my mother claimed I rode her almost to death. I used to be up bright and early when the dew was on the rent, and be off before the earliest collector was pounding on the door of our colonial mansion that was bagged by the carpet bagger after the civil war. You know, it's so romantic down there. You can't imagine how lovely it was, riding over the Blue Ridge in the early dawn, perfectly groomed over the bridal-paths. Indeed I have a hard time imagining it myself. I used to wear a plumed hat and a velvet skirt, yes, it was the custom in those days. And we rode to hounds, too, in fact ours was one of those old southern families who went to the dogs completely. As for fox-hunting, why my grandfather, the "Colonel" provided fox-scarfs for every lady member of the family, but later he sold out to another furrier, a Jewish gentleman. But I will never forget those gallops over the hills and streams on my milk white mare, "Lily," no indeed, I can remember them just as well as if they happened yesterday or tomorrow.

The Bluff Is Called

Well, well, says Freddy, isn't that delightful to know you both ride, because that is exactly what we have framed up for tomorrow morning, a nice horseback ride. We have a flock of saddle-horses and you two shall have the wildest of the bunch.

Well, naturally I and George exchanged the first look of mutual sympathy in mons. And George says ah, hem, why that's wonderful, simply wonderful, but I'm awfully afraid we won't be able to join you—you see, er, the truth is, I ain't feeling so good. But Freddy says kw shucks, it's probably your liver. A good ride is the very thing you need. And I says, but my dear man, I would adore to ride and so would George, but how can we. We didn't bring our riding clothes. You see we hadn't the least idea that you had riding horses!

Which was the first perfect truth that had been spoke for fully fiftsen minutes. But that clothes alibi didn't even get us a reprieve. On account Mrs. Freddy spoke right up, and she says why that's easy fixed, Fred and me have both got extra costumes and I and he are just about the same size as you and George. I will have the thirteenth footman take them up to your rooms tonight, and we will start out before breakfast in the morning.

Mounting a Nightmare

Well naturally there wasn't much sleep that night for I and George, even aside from the argument we had over why did you go and make a fool out of yourself, telling about how you love to ride and how good you was at it? And etc. First Geo. would say it to me, and then I would say it to him, and then we would yell it in a whisper together. Geo. was figuring if it would be possible to sneak down to the village and send himself a telegram to come home before it was too late, and I was wondering whether on the whole it wouldn't be less painful, to fall downstairs and break my neck on the way to breakfast.

But morning come at last in spite of all our wishes to the contrary, and it wasn't even a rainy morning. So we put on the 2 riding suits as nearly as we could tell them apart. To this day I guess I got some of the stuff intended for Geo. and he put on some of mine. But we done the best we could in the nervous state we was in, and joining our hosts, we all tripped with a negligee air down to the fatal spot where the horses was waiting.

Well, they give Geo. a horse named Spavin, a big grey animal with false teeth, at least I guess they was false because they told him to be careful of the plate.

Riding For a Fall

Geo. held out two fingers for the creature to smell of, and says nice horsey, but all he got in return was a dirty look. So Geo. says, my stars, what a fine animal, does he go very fast? You see after all it's simply years since I been on a horse. I've pretty near forgot how to ride, ha! ha! ha!

Well, I thought, I hope he can laugh it off, maybe when he falls they will think he laughed himself out of place. Then I took a look at the 4 legged chase provided for me. It was a horse not over 12 feet tall and about 30 ft. overall, capable of making 40 knots an hour. I will say one thing for Mrs. Freddy, though, she did apologize for the saddle on mine. I'm sorry she says, but we had to give you a Mexican saddle, it's the only one we had left. I'm sure you will realise it's no slur on your riding. And I says oh not at all dear, nothing could slur my riding, I assure you! And with that, she and Freddy got on their mounts and started off just exactly as if they really liked it.

As for Geo., his horse evidently had a date with the other two, on account he didn't hardly wait for Geo. to board him before he was right with them.

The Horse Laughs Last

As for me, well, the groom helped me up, and I felt just exactly as if I was sitting on top of the Woolworth building only worse, on account it at once begun to move. So did I. Right up in the air. But my aim was better then I thought, for I made the saddle the very first shot.

But somehow or another I didn't ride anywhere near as good as I had told about the night before. Every time I come in contact with that horse was a jolt, every time I left him for a few feet, was a surprise. But we never quite parted company, and the whole ways on that awful ride, the thing which was worrying me the most, next to keeping on at all, was what excuse could I give for not doing better? And then I remembered that I had a perfectly good one—with Mexico in the condition it's been in, how could anybody expect a person to sit pretty in a Mexican saddle?

But it'll be a long time before I go out to them Freenashes again. Believe you me, horseback riding may be Freddy Freenash's hobby, but from now on, hobby is gonner, be my only kind of horseback riding!

The Difference That Money Made.

In the old boom days at Virginia City James Fair, the famous Silver Magnate, was sitting one day in a barroom. It will be recalled that Mr. Fair, despite his lack of book-learning, ammassed a great many millions of dollars and became a leader in several lines of endeavor.

As he sat there the bar-keeper, who was writing a letter, called out to him, asking how to spell the word "bird."

"B-U-R-D," answered Mr. Fair.

"That's the way I thought it was," said the letter-writer.

An educated gambler, who had overheard this conversation bided his time. On the following day, finding Mr. Fair in company of a group of mining men, the gambler offered to bet him a hundred dollars that he could not correctly spell the word bird.

"B-I-R-D," said Mr. Fair, reaching for the stakes.

"My Lord!" exclaimed the loser, "You didn't spell it that way yesterday."

"Son," said Mr. Fair, softly, "there wasn't any money up on it yesterday."

SWINDLERS GET INSURANCE FOR "WIVES" OF BACHELORS

LONDON.—Amazing swindles under the National Health Insurance act have been revealed by an investigation. By means of imaginary marriages and forged certificates large sums have been paid out in maternity benefits. Spurious records of sickness and disablement helped the swindlers and it is believed the frauds may total more than $1,000,000 when the investigation is complete. In many cases maternity benefits were paid out for the "wives" of men who had never been married. Such "wives," of course, were nonexistent and the insurance allotted to them went into the pockets of the swindlers.

MOVIES LURE TEXAS 'HANDS'

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 4. (AP)—Contest hands from all parts of Texas who are "game" to ride anything from a mad bull to a streak of chained lightning have gone into the movies here, though temporarily, on a glorified rodeo that perhaps eclipses any mass struggle ever staged between men and bad horses.

The cowboys were picked for their skill and the professional contest horses for their viciousness to participate in a regimental melee of "The Rough Riders," which is being filmed here by Famous Players-Laskey corporation on the original training grounds of Roosevelt's horsemen.

In the opening sequence where bucking horses were used to disrupt the mounted review of 1,200 Rough Riders, four men were hurt and a dozen others took bad spills from their ponies, crawling from under the onrush of trampling hoofs to avoid more serious consequences.

E. O. Acree of Uvalde required hospital treatment after a tracas with a mean horse. Riley Mays, contest rider from Hondo, was kicked and bruised by a pitching pony known to rodeo men as "Freckles." "Red" Parsons took a painful fall and Fred Kohler, actor, received an injured leg when his mount rolled over on him.

Approximately a hundred cowboys, two score of them participants in rodeos and an equal number at bucking horses were used in the exciting scene. The bucking horses were mixed with the cavalry mounts to start as much confusion and excitement as was possible.

Such well known pitching horses as "Funeral Wagon," "Widow-maker," "Pancho Villa," "Whirling Chair," "Spindletop," "Pinto," "Whirlwind," and "High-Wide-'n'-Handsome," were used.

"Funeral Wagon was ridden for the first time, it was said, in four years. Mister Coward from Charlotte, Texas, was the contest hand who mastered the fierce bay before a battery of movie cameras.

"Pardner" Ed Jones, three times riding champion of Arizona, rode his stormy mount through the dust. Son Kuykendall and his brother Bud, from Charlotte, took and gave a lot of punishment in the wild melee. J. E. "Red" Laidley of San Antonio distinguished himself as did Jack Bridges of Oklahoma City, Frank and Henry Savage of Charlotte, Taylor Smith of Ganado, and a dozen others from Beeville, Floresville, Marfa, Castorville, Big Spring, Jouranston and El Paso.

British Kill 500 Chinese in Reprisal for Commander's Death

In an attempt to rescue two other British river boats from the attack of warring Chinese on the upper Yangtse river, Commander F. C. Darley of H. M. S. Despatch met death by machine gun fire. Reprisals for his death and that of a number of British seamen of the ship Kia-Wo brought other British ships into the fray and resulted in the killing of some 500 Chinese. The ships which Commander Darley attempted to rescue were seized by the Chinese general Yang Sen.

Dallas Hotel Librarian Makes Interesting Report On Taste of Male Readers Who Call At Her Library; Women are Flightier She Finds In Survey.

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 3. (AP)—Gentlemen may prefer blondes in real life, but in literature the men folks are not particular about complexions so long as the heroine is romantic and the story entertaining, according to the finds and observations of a certain hotel librarian.

Venturing forth on something new, Corrine Blair Beakley, late of St. Mary's college, Dallas, has flung aside her college diversions to give both the traveling and the stationary public a peek into the land of books. She has installed in the Baker hotel here the first hotel library in Texas and by virtue of this adventure has gained some startling information concerning the innermost literary preferences of men away from home.

For instance, men are much more sentimental than women, she finds. That is, traveling men, far away from home and with idle time on their hands, just naturally take to books about domestic happiness and love which drip with sentiment from cover to cover. When this is not their mood, then they crave excitement or mystery, detective and adventure stories, principally those in which the hero is all hero and the villian all villian.

Women, on the other hand, whether they be traveling or residents of Dallas, go in principally for love stories of the lightest variety, and with them the Mr. Harold Bell Wright type is greatly to be desired.

One explanation for this taste on the part of women readers is that most of them who come to the hotel have a few moments to idle away, while waiting for friends or for a luncheon or bridge engagement and don't want to get into anything too deep in the few moments at their disposal.

Miss Beakey has established herself on the mezzanine floor of the hotel where her books are within easy reach of hotel guests who desire to lounge about in ease and quiet. Here she displays her ware to reading tastes representing every section of the United States and finds some rather quiet and interesting complexes in the reading public.

One man, who resides at the hotel, wants poetry for breakfast. He has a fresh book of poems set out for him every morning, and explains that the harmony of poetry gives him a proper rythmic start on the day.

Another man, this a tired business man, must have a detective story every night to retire on, and it keeps the librarian busy digging up the most exciting yarns of deep crimes unraveled by shrewd Sherlocks for this customer. He says it is his chief relaxation, and is better than a baseball game or a round of golf.

Then there is the man who sells golf and other sport paraphernalia, but who doesn't play golf. He wants all the latest books on the game so he can keep up on the talk.

Strangest of all, however, are the visitors from the North and East who insist on the wildest of wild west stories "in order to get the atmosphere out here" and tall buildings and perfectly civilized natives do not daunt them, for they expect the wild west to jump out on them at almost any corner.

Through all the divergent desires, however, there is one theme that never palls on the American public, whether they be at home or abroad, experience has taught the librarian. It is the Cinderella theme, the story of the boy or girl born poor, who suddenly finds wealth and fame, puts all enemies to rout, and lives happily ever afterward. In a thousand and one versions of this plot, the idea never grows stale, but may be dressed in a new garb, hashed and rehashed, and still turn up as a best seller.

The promulgator of this new idea in hotel service finds the contact with people far and near an exhilirating diversion from the college days, and the necessity of satisfying book tastes from the Atlantic to the Pacific whets the wits as nothing else can.

The idea has worked successfully thus far, both the traveling public and residents of Dallas patronizing the hotel library, and the hotel management is considering placing libraries in other hotels throughout the state as a service to their patrons.

U. S. SHIPPING MAKES GAINS

Shipping Board Will Put More Vessels Into Operation

BY HARDIN COLFAX
Special Correspondent of The Record News.

Copyright, 1926, By the Consolidated Press Association.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3. — For the first time since the post war boom collapsed, in 1920, the demand for ocean tonnage is so heavy at American ports that cargo rates are advancing.

Uncle Sam, an unwilling ship operator, wringing his hands in distress, while the major portion of a mammoth fleet built at high cost to meet war needs rotted at anchor in quiet waters, has more of his vessels steaming the seas today than for years.

Thirty-five more ships are in commission than at any time in two years. Despite the sales to private owners of choice vessels during that period, the United States shipping board is preparing to recondition 25 to 30 others from its reserve. It will place them in service if conditions justify.

Cargos Declined.

The emergency fleet corporation this week was forced to decline a cargo, the first occurrence of the kind in many a long day.

With fifty vessels ordinarily assigned to relief roles, the corporation found itself this week with only three unengaged, and these in waters far removed from the Gulf, whence came the call for a bottom to transport lumber to Brazil. The lumber will be moved, on a delayed voyage, by various shifts but the condition is significant.

The North Atlantic conference recently announced an increase in rates. Similar action has been taken by lines operating out of Gulf ports. Thus far, no increases have been made on shipments from South Atlantic or Pacific ports. The higher freight rates are not applicable to all commodities. Cotton, for instance, which is of tremendous importance to the South, is paying the same ocean rates as formerly.

There is no boom in shipping, the American merchant marine problem is not solved. The picture is not one of vivid splashes of color, but rather shows a brightening of the dull grey of depression which has marked the industry for many months.

How long the more happy condition will exist is uncertain, but it is not too much to say that the present situation in ocean transportation along the far flung coast of the United States is the best since post war inflation turned to deflation.

Rates Lower.

Ocean freight rates have been low since the Armistice left a vast surplus of ships on all the seven seas. It has been the exceptional line which has made money. That is true of all flags. The halls of congress have reverberated with the cries of anguish over the losses of Uncle Sam's shipping operations, although these have been only relative to what many private corporations have suffered at the same time.

World competition for cargoes has kept rates down. It is a fact that ocean shipments are carried at prices only slightly in advance of those prevailing before the war. Foreign vessels, due mainly to lower wages for their crews, operate cheaper than ships under the United States flag—thus controlling rates.

But world commerce is more stabilized this year than since the catastrophe of 1914. Grain, cotton, lumber, petroleum are rushing from the United States in heavy quantities, adding to the normal demand which calls for ships. The increase in bulk exports since the first of July has been extraordinarily.

Domestic Gain

Enjoying a domestic prosperity which is making new records in many lines, the United States is drawing more heavily upon its wealth of products to supply the needs of foreign nations, which themselves, in most cases, are in a better position since they are able to buy.

East coast shipping has been disrupted in recent weeks by the demand by the British Isles for American coal. This, of course, will end with settlement of the long drawn out strike.

Cotton, low in price is moving to foreign shores in almost unprecedented quantities after having lagged in early months this year. In August 391,000 bales were exported, contrasted with 215,000 in the same month of 1925 and the movement continued throughout September.

Wheat has been going out of the country heavily in the last three months—28,994,000 bushels of grain were exported in August compared to 7,425,000 in the 1925 month. Flour shipments increased 575,000 barrels in the same comparison. Even Japan is buying American wheat this year. Crude petroleum, gasoline and kerosene exports are ahead of last year. So are shipments of soft wood lumber, iron ore, copper, steel products, machinery and a host of other commodities.

"I AND GEORGE"—By NINA WILCOX PUTNAM

America's Only Woman Humorist

NINA WILCOX PUTNAM

As Col. Cody, who put the great open spaces into the minds of men, once said, "Riding horses and stalls are closely associated, but believe me all the stalls connected with riding horses are not in the stables."

And the truth of this come over I and George, that's my husband, not long ago, when we thoughtlessly accepted a invitation to stay over a very week-end with the Freddy Freenashes out on Long Island at their country estate. The Freenashes are very wealthy people now, and as such, why they naturally like to show it offence in a while to old friends in the flivver class, the same as ourselfs, especially when they can't get apold of anything better in the way of company. And while naturally I and Geo. both are above caring anything about such things as staying at big pretentious country houses, why we accepted out of curiosity and because we was too broadminded to object to giving them the pleasure and satisfaction, if you get what I meah.

Well anyways, the very first night we was there, we was sitting in the East Saloon, which wasn't a saloon at all; there was not even a sign of a bar in it—they are strictly temperance, but that's what they called it.

Simple Life De Luxe

At any rate we was sitting there after dinner, and the conversation turned onto the joys of country life, and how, after all, a country gentleman had it all over a city business man. This line was commenced by Freddy in full evening dress, which Geo. could fortunately match up to, I having insisted that he get his soup and fish back from the waiter who he ordinarily rents it out to by the week. Well anyways, Freddy waved his perfecto at the Informal Louis Quarts furniture of this simple little 80x40 "den" and he commenced a Mark Anthony.

It's the only life, this simple one, says Freddy, just living quietly in the country, the same as we do, with a few yachts and motor cars and a nice acre or two of garden. It's the real life, George, you ought to get yourself a little place out here, not too big, say fifty or a hundred acres. You and your Missus certainly would enjoy it; there is such a lot to do in the country—of a healthy nature, you know. Do you ride horseback? That's my hobby!

Why, of course we ride horseback, says Geo. in a offhand manner. Now I personally myself, he says, have ridden all my life; that is, ever since I was grown up and went out West, you know, into the wilds. I was on a ranch once, didn't you know that, Freenash?

The Great Open Spaces

Sure I was on a ranch, out in Arizona. It was a pinochle ranch, they raised fine points about the game. Yes sir! I rode fences out there, lots of 'em. Why I and the boys used to get up at dawn and bust horses. Bust 'em right in the nose, many and man's the time. I'm telling you, those was the days, riding over the wide prairies, lassoing all kinds of wild flowers from Tiger lilies to mushrooms.

I was in the saddle day and night and sometimes early morning and late afternoon, as well not even stopping for tea. Yes, Fred, I learned to lasso wild chickens out there, and as for wild oats, well, that's nobobdy's business, I'll say I used to ride. There is nothing quite like the feel of a good horse under you, eh, Freenash?

Well, while listening to this of course I realized that Geo. was exaggerating some, the same as any other hearth-rug rider. I wouldn't go so far as to say he was lying, exactly, because it was true he had been on a ranch. He was there two whole days in fact, selling the Six Foot Shelf of the World's Best Cookbooks. I don't know that he was ever on a horse while there, however, in fact, I had previously got a impression that the horse had been on him, on account he hadn't made any sales. But I am not the type of wife which will give her husband away in public, especially not in front of stuck up, pretentious people like the Freenashes.

Quite to the other hand, I am the type that waits until they are alone together and then don't allow him any sleep, kidding him about it in a nice, yet definite sort of way. So when it come my turn to fib, why I merely give him a look as much as to say now stand by, the same as I did dear, when I commenced.

Oh I just adore horseback riding, I says, especially across country. Now when I was a young southern girl in the mountains of dear old Kentucky, N. Y., and points west, about all I did was ride, in fact, my mother claimed I rode her almost to death. I used to be up bright and early when the dew was on the rent, and be off before the earliest collector was pounding on the door of our colonial mansion that was bagged by the carpet bagger after the civil war.

You know, it's so romantic down there. You can't imagine how lovely it was, riding over the Blue Ridge in the early dawn, perfectly aroomed over the bridal paths, indeed I have a hard time imagining it myself. I used to wear a plumed hat and a velvet skirt, yes, it was the custom in those days. And we rode to hounds, too, in fact ours was one of those old southern families who went to the dogs completely. As for fox-hunting, why my grandfather, the "Colonel" provided fox-scarfs for every lady member of the family, but later he sold out to another furrier, a Jewish gentleman. But I will never forget those gallops over the hills and streams on my milk white mare, "Lily," no indeed, I can remember them just as well as if they happened yesterday or tomorrow.

The Bluff Is Called

Well, well, says Freddy, isn't that delightful to know you both ride, because that is exactly what we have framed up for tomorrow morning, a nice horseback ride. We have a flock of saddle-horses and you two shall have the wildest of the bunch.

Well, naturally I and George exchanged the first look of mutual sympathy in mons. And George says ah, hem, why that's wonderful, simply wonderful, but I'm awfully afraid we won't be able to join you—you see, er, the truth is, I ain't feeling so good. But Freddy says kw shucks, it's probably your liver. A good ride is the very thing you need. And I says, but my dear man, I would adore to ride and so would George, but how can we. We didn't bring our riding clothes. You see we hadn't the least idea that you had riding horses!

Which was the first perfect truth that had been spoke for fully fifteen minutes. But that clothes alibi didn't even get us a reprieve. On account Mrs. Freddy spoke right up, and she says why that's easy fixed, Fred and me have both got extra costumes and I and he are just about the same size as you and George. I will have the thirteenth footman take them up to your rooms tonight, and we will start out before breakfast in the morning.

Mounting a Nightmare

Well naturally there wasn't much sleep that night for I and George, even aside from the argument we had over why did you go and make a fool out of yourself, telling about how you love to ride and how good you was at it? And etc. First Geo. would say it to me, and then I would say it to him, and then we would yell it in a whisper together, Geo. was figuring if it would be possible to sneak down to the village and send himself a telegram to come home before it was too late, and I was wondering whether on the whole it wouldn't be less painful, to fall downstairs and break my neck on the way to breakfast.

But morning come at last in spite of all our wishes to the contrary, and it wasn't even a rainy morning. So we put on the 2 riding outfits as nearly as we could tell them apart. To this day I guess I got some of the stuff intended for Geo. and he put on some of mine. But we done the best we could in the nervous state we was in, and joining our hosts, we all tripped with a negligee air down to the fatal spot where the horses was waiting.

Well, they give Geo. a horse named Spavin, a big grey animal with false teeth, at least I guess they was false because they told him to be careful of the plate.

Riding For a Fall

Geo. held out two fingers for the creature to smell of, and says nice horsey, but all he got in return was a dirty look. So Geo. says, my stars, what a fine animal, does he go very fast? You see after all it's simply years since I been on a horse. I've pretty near forgot how to ride, ha! ha! ha!

Well, I thought, I hope he can laugh it off, maybe when he falls they will think he laughed himself out of place. Then I took a look at the 4 legged chair provided for me. It was a horse not over 12 feet tall and about 50 ft. overall, capable of making 40 knots an hour. I will say one thing for Mrs. Freddy, though, she did apologize for the saddle on mine. I'm sorry she says, but we had to give you a Mexican saddle. It's the only one we had left. I'm sure you will realize it's no slur on your riding. And I says oh not at all dear, nothing could slur my riding, I assure you! And with that, she and Freddy got on their mounts and started off just exactly as if they realty liked it.

As for Geo., his horse evidently had a date with the other two, on account he didn't hardly wait for Geo. to board him before he was right with them.

The Horse Laughs Last

As for me, well, the groom helped me up, and I felt just exactly as if I was sitting on top of the Woolworth building only worse, on account it at once begun to move. So did I. Right up in the air. But my aim was better then I thought, for I made the saddle the very first shot.

But somehow or another I didn't ride anywhere near as good as I had told about the night before. Every time I come in contact with that horse was a jolt, every time I left him for a few feet, was a surprise. But we never quite parted company, and the whole ways on that awful ride, the thing which was worrying me the most, next to keeping on at all, was what excuse could I give for not doting better? And then I remembered that I had a perfectly good one—with Mexico in the condition it's been in, how could anybody expect a person to sit pretty in a Mexican saddle?

But it'll be a long time before I go out to them Freenashes again. Believe you me, horseback riding may be Freddy Freenash's hobby, but from now on, hobby is gonner, be my only kind of horseback riding!

U. S. GUESS ON COTTON COSTLY

Farmers of South Lose Half Billion Dollars As Price Sags

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 3. (AP) A plea for bankers and business men of the south to "use every effort in their power to put an end to the unnecessary panic among producers of cotton and their belief that if the staple is held off the market until "right and reason prevail" it would sell several cents a pound higher was expressed in a statement issued here by Frank E. Hayne, president of the New Orleans cotton exchange.

The south sold nearly 16,000,000 bales of the staple last year at more than a hundred dollars a bale and there is no justification for it to force its cotton on the market ad sell it under $65 a bale Mr. Hayne said, pointing out that mill consumption as indicated by mill takings are 12 per cent more than at the same time last year.

"From a world's standpoint, American middling cotton below 15 cents cannot prove otherwise than unusually attractive to mills abroad as well as at home," he said.

Mr. Hayne said that if the government had followed the system in vogue until a few years ago and delayed issuance of a cotton crop estimate until December 15, the south would have been at least a half billion dollars better off.

"Cotton has declined about $22 a bale since the issuance of the government estimate of September 23," he said.

Calls it Guess

"In other words, the cotton market is suffering on account of this estimate almost as much as if the crop had actually been shipped from plantations and bore with its weight upon the market. The final out turn may be more or it may be less but whatever the result unquestionably if the government had waited as it did up to a few years ago and made no estimate of the crop until December 14, the south would be at least a half billion dollars better off."

"Had there been no government guess and the crop marketed in the usual way (even though the government's figures may be reached or possibly exceeded) its weight would have been gradually felt at gradually lower values; as it is, it has given the impression of an unwielding supply even though only a small percentage of that supply has been picked and ginned and producers, panic stricken are rushing their crops to market as fast as possible to avoid what they fear will be still further declines.

"This week's movement brought into sight (787,000 bales) is the largest ever known in one week and an indication of the fears of the growers."

WORTH WHILE CLUB.

Shaded lights made a soft radiance over the rooms of the Abernethy home Wednesday afternoon when though the rain fell in a steady downpour a full attendance of club members gathered for book exchange and a pleasant social afternoon.

The occasion was the regular meeting of the Worth While club, and Mrs. E. A. Abernethy, the hostess, left nothing undone for the pleasure and comfort of her guests. Lovely garden flowers were used to brighten the rooms and at the close of the afternoon a delicious luncheon was served.

Mrs. Abernethy had as special guests Mrs. Clarence Baker, Mrs. Clarence Huber and Mrs. M. J. Carter. Club members present were Mrs. A. C. Fagin, Mrs. T. S. Christina, Mrs. J. A. McCord, Mrs. Robert Kinnair, Mrs. Lee Ewing, Mrs. Herman Oliver, Mrs. Charles Troutman, Mrs. John R. Daniel, Mrs. Floyd Goodloe, Mrs. C. L. Johnson, Mrs. Grover Hardcastle, Mrs. E. O. Hinkle, Mrs. T. BUILDING PERMITS

Building permits for the city of Wichita Falls took a decided slump during the past week when only a mere 21,000 was admitted for new improvements in the city. This is a considerable drop from the high total of more than $275,000 for last week, but the reason is that not a single permit was issued for a business house, and most of the permits being for small residences.

This week's permits run the year's total up to $7,915,686, and with nearly three more months of the year remaining, it is quite likely that the city will set a record for the state this year.

Individual permits were as follows:

Eli Morgan, 2110 Seventh, residence and garage; $4,000.

E. J. Hartsell, 2012 Jones, residence and garage; $3,500.
