Dry January joins record book

By HANK MURPHY
Staff Writer

Not only was last month one of the warmest Januaries on record but it also was one of driest — as a matter of fact, it was bone dry.

Not a single drop of measureable precipitation fell on the Spring City last month, according to records at the U.S. Agricultural Research Service. Only twice this century in 1912 and 1963, has there been a rainless January.

Before light sprinkles yesterday and today, the last time it rained was Dec. 12 when 0.03 of an inch of water fell on the city, said a field station spokesman. He said 0.01 of an inch was measured since Sunday.

No rain is in the forecast for the city. The dry weather has made things miserable for the area's winter grain crop, said Tim Hall of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Hall guessed the area soil is dry as dust about 8 inches down.

"The smaller grains are desperately needing a drink," Hall said.

Furthermore, he said, farmers who want to plow their fields are worried about losing precious top soil should the wind blow away the dry dirt when it's tilled.

Hall said farmers are hoping for some moisture, soon.

Aside from the drought, last month's unusual warmth was a welcome respite from winter's chilling blasts.

Record high temperatures were smashed twice last month when on Jan. 19 the mercury rose to 78 degrees while inching up to 79 the very next day. The warm spell eclipsed the previous highs of 77 degrees in 1951 and 74 in 1972, respectively.

The average daily high last month was 63 degrees, eight digits higher than the normal 55 degrees for January. Since 1949, only in 1952 and 1953, when the average daily high for the month was 65 and 67 respectively, was the year's first month any milder.

Ships aid shuttle search

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Two ships and a third robot submarine joined the search for Challenger's cabin today as investigators studied film and data that could tell whether a mysterious spurt of fire from a rocket triggered the destruction of the shuttle and its crew.

As the probe into Tuesday's disaster proceeded, NASA officials were confident they could pinpoint the cause and resume shuttle flights perhaps as early as June.

"This is fundamentally a sound system," William R. Graham, acting director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said Sunday. "It's gone through 24 successful flights."

The investigation board held its first full formal meeting today, and

Delta probe skips many questions

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Life goes on for the 27 survivors of Delta Flight 191 six months after the plane crashed, but not quite in the same way as before the tragedy.

And the cause of the crash, which occurred at 6:05 p.m. Aug. 2 at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, is still largely unfinished business.

Killed were 137 people, including the driver of a car that was struck by the faltering aircraft. The L-1011 was en route from Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The National Transportation Safety Board's report on the accident will not be complete until April at the earliest, officials say.

The probe into the crash has focused mostly on wind shear, a violent change in wind direction, which occurred within a rapidly developing thunderstorm in the area.

Questions have arisen about why the pilot flew into the thunderstorm and whether, using proper maneuvers, the crew should have been able to fly out of it.

One of the crash survivors, Debbie Katz, who is beginning to overcome the paralysis she suffered as a result of injuries, said:

"This would be my question if the pilot lived," she said. "What made him go through it (the thunderstorm)?"

Election workers at the Commission on Elections office in Manila load ballot boxes onto trucks Monday for distribution to the provinces.

Thousands of boxes will be moved in preparation for Friday's presidential election.

Aquino 'certain' of election victory

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Opposition candidate Corazon Aquino said today she will need almost two-thirds of the vote in Friday's presidential election to offset cheating by supporters of President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

However, Mrs. Aquino said she was increasingly confident she would defeat Marcos in the special election the 20-year incumbent called more than a year early.

"My advisers tell me it would have to be 65 (percent)-35 (percent)," Mrs. Aquino told The Associated Press during a picture-taking session at her home in a Manila suburb.

She had said in a radio broadcast Saturday that she would need at least 70 percent of the vote to defeat Marcos. She did not say how her campaign officials had arrived at either of the two different figures.

However, Mrs. Aquino said that she was becoming more confident, and that she felt she "definitely" would win the presidency.

Later, in a speech to 3,000 Filipino and foreign business people, Mrs. Aquino vowed to give priority during her first weeks in office to domestic reform, including the restoration of civil liberties and the breakup of businesses monopolies held by Marcos associates.

Likening herself to the prophet Moses, Mrs. Aquino said she would tear down the "pharaoh's pyramid of disgrace" erected by the incumbent.

"Our first 100 days must manifest to all ... that the ruinous course Mr. Marcos set has been reversed," she told her audience, which jammed a meeting room and watched on closed-circuit television at a suburban Manila hotel.

Of the balloting itself, Mrs. Aquino said, "I will feel more kindly disposed to my opponent if he observes the rule of law and allows us to have a free election."

On Sunday, the government's National Election Commission and a private watchdog organization known as the National Movement for Free Elections, or NAMFREL, agreed to conduct separate but coordinated quick tallies of results from nearly 90,000 precincts.

However, they had not decided who would report the results.

Mrs. Aquino's supporters expressed fears that a third count by pro-Marcos news media might be used to project victory for Marcos and influence the final figures.

All three quick counts are considered unofficial because of official canvassing of votes and declaration of the winner are done by the National Assembly. The National Election Commission, however, supervises the balloting.

Marcos' party distrusts NAMFREL, suspecting it of favoring Mrs. Aquino. The opposition suspects the National Election Commission that Marcos appointed will cheat in favor of the president.

NAMFREL, headed by business and church leaders, says it has 500,000 volunteers who will collect results directly from polling places, creating a hedge against cheating.

U.S. officials have credited NAMFREL with reducing cheating in a 1984 National Assembly election.

Former Sen. Eddie Ilarde and Laban, or Fight, party spokesman Jaime Vicente, both supporters of Mrs. Aquino, outlined for The Associated Press what they described as a possible scenario to influence results in Marcos' favor.

"On the basis of the selected returns, an overwhelming Marcos victory will be broadcast to the whole nation," said Vicente, referring to the results of the media count.

Three more file for county primaries

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

Three more candidates filed this morning for the county primary elections to be held May 3, said County Clerk Margaret Ray.

Deadline for filing for county and state offices is 5 p.m. today.

Last minute filings for candidacy were made by Leo Williams, D-Big Spring, for Howard County Commissioner in Precinct 2; William W. (Bill) Price, R-Big Spring, for Justice of the Peace Precinct 1 Place 2; and Dr. Joe Neff, D-Big Spring, for Howard County Commissioner in Precinct 4.

Ray said Williams and Neff designated themselves as campaign treasurers. Price designated Claudene Cooper as his campaign treasurer, Ray said.

After a candidate had designated a campaign treasurer, he or she must file with the respective party chairman by 6 p.m. today, Ray said.

Candidates for county and state offices are:

• State Representative of District 69 — Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring; Travis Floyd, R-Big Spring; and John R. (Rich) Anderson, R-Borden County.

• District Judge for the 118th District — James Gregg, D-Big Spring; and Leo Williams, R-Big Spring.

• District Clerk for the 118th District — Peggy Crittenden, D-Big Spring.

• Howard County Judge — Milton Kirby, D-Big Spring; and Warren Wise, D-Big Spring.

• Howard County Commissioner Precinct 2 — Paul Allen, D-Coahoma; Jack Shaffer, D-Big Spring; John Stanley, D-Big Spring; G.C. "Dub" Clinton Jr., R-Big

Spring; and Leo Williams, R-Big Spring.

• Howard County Commissioner Precinct 4 — David Barr, D-Vincent; Mack Underwood, D-Big Spring; Al Valdez, D-Big Spring; and Dr. Joe Neff, D-Big Spring.

• Justice of the Peace Precinct 1 Place 2 — Lewis Heflin, D-Big Spring; Bill Shankles, D-Big Spring; Stanley Bogard, D-Big Spring; and

Pioneer Doctor

Osteopath recalls early days of practice in Amarillo

AMARILLO (AP) — The rough and dusty life Dr. L.V. Cradit led as a child at the turn of the century in the American West helped forge a determination he would need later in life to beat back negative ideas about his profession.

From his rugged origins in a sod house in Nebraska, Cradit went on to help charter the first osteopathic hospital in Texas.

And now the 95-year-old doctor lives in the hospital he helped create.

When the young Dr. Cradit moved to Amarillo in 1920 he became one of the first doctors of osteopathy in town, but the osteopaths were not allowed to use the one hospital in town at that time, he said.

Cradit describes the town as rugged then.

"Amarillo was a western town with lots of railroad men," he said. "It was quite an interesting place to be in."

In those early days, Cradit mostly made house calls.

Most people couldn't afford to have babies in the hospital, he said.

"I delivered more babies than I ever dreamed I would," Cradit said.

But the wariness of osteopaths was here from the start.

"M.D.s didn't know much about D.O.s then except that their hierarchy wouldn't recognize us," Cradit said.

One medical doctor would help admit Cradit's patients if they needed hospitalization.

Soon, several M.D.s, upset that an osteopath's patients were being admitted to the hospital, started a petition to exclude doctors of osteopathy from practicing at the hospital.

When other osteopaths had located in Amarillo, the group decided to start its own hospital in 1928. Those first four osteopathic doctors financed the hospital.

They converted a two-story rooming house to a 12-bed hospital, Cradit said.

They kept this hospital going until shortly before World War II when the doctors built a 40-bed hospital, which received the first charter for an osteopathic hospital in Texas. It was well equipped, he said, but due to the war, it took a while to complete because of the the shortage of materials.

Dr. L.V. Cradit poses in his office recently in Amarillo. Cradit became one of the first doctors of osteopathy when he arrived in Amarillo in 1920. He later helped charter the first osteopathic hospital in Texas.

The osteopathic doctors ran up against opposition in the creation of this hospital, when a number of the medical men in town said Amarillo already had enough hospitals, Cradit said.

The mayor and other influential men issued an edict to let the osteopaths build their hospital, Cradit said.

"We had some friends by then," he said.

But medical and osteopathic doctors pulled together when emergencies arose. A taxing year for both doctors was the small pox epidemic of 1927.

"It developed into quite an epidemic," Cradit said, with several hundred cases recorded.

All doctors were advising people to be vaccinated, and Cradit said he immunized about 900 people in a few weeks time.

"It kept me busy day and night vaccinating people," Cradit said.

When the Depression hit, business, including medicine, slowed considerably, Cradit said.

It was the Dust Bowl era and more difficult for people to pay their bills, and Cradit himself had to borrow on an insurance policy to pay the rent on his office, he said.

A common affliction during the Depression was dust pneumonia, caused from the mighty dust storms that swept the High Plains, he said.

Many times on his house calls to families on the edge of town, dust would blast across the roads, and he could barely see to drive, he said.

But a man whose early years were spent in western Nebraska could hold strong against the ravages of nature.

Cradit was born in 1890 in a sod house on a spread in Nebraska. His father helped construct the log schoolhouse, Cradit would later attend, from willow trees along the creeks.

When he was 5 years old, he was put on an old grey pony to trudge the three miles to the log schoolhouse with his siblings, he said.

"I didn't get much schooling maybe, but it was a start," he said with a grin.

His stint in the Army during World War I took him to Rockford, Ill. He was forced to serve as an enlisted man because the military would not recognize his osteopathic training.

Since he couldn't get a commission, he went to infantry school, Cradit said. After the four-month training, he could be commissioned as a second lieutenant.

Two weeks shy of completing his training, armistice came, and military men were pushed out, he said. But he was still promised his commission although he was leaving the military.

Twelve years later it came.

By that time, Cradit had put down roots in Amarillo.

And these roots are intertwined with the osteopathic hospital he helped create.

The modern version of the hospital is now known as Family Hospital Center in Amarillo.

And this is Cradit's home now, too.

"I wanted to stay here rather than a nursing home," he said. "The attention here is great."

His outlook on life has changed. "This is my second lifetime," he says. "I know the things that are important now."

Another passenger, Kathy Ford of Fort Worth, is still hospitalized at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas. Her visible injuries healed weeks ago, but she remains in a coma from head injuries she suffered in the crash.

"The doctors are not very optimistic," said Carol Christy, 35, one of Mrs. Ford's three sisters. "They really don't say anything to us. They're just negative."

But Ms. Christy has not given up hope.

"Her eyes are open a lot. She doesn't really focus on things, but we think she hears us and knows that we're there," she said.

Mrs. Katz, whose neck was broken and who was paralyzed from the neck down for a time after the crash, doesn't remember anything about the crash. Her last pre-crash memory was having her nails done the day before.

For the last two months she has been treated as an outpatient at a rehabilitation hospital near her home in a Fort Lauderdale suburb.

Recently, Mrs. Katz has been able to walk.

Her husband, Robert Katz, who miraculously escaped injury in the crash, said, "She may look good physically, but she's very badly hurt. She still thinks she may die from this crash."

Jay Slusher, a Phoenix computer programmer, walked away from the crash with minor injuries.

Shuttle

NASA spokesman Hugh Harris said Jesse Moore, shuttle director and head of the board, would meet with reporters later in the week.

Until then, Harris said, the public could expect little information from the board.

"There was obviously an accident," Graham said. "There's a problem there. But the overall configuration and design we believe to be fundamentally sound and we believe it won't take a very long time to get this problem corrected."

He said investigators are not certain how to interpret photographs that show a plume of flame at or near a seam on Challenger's right rocket booster "grow and grow" until it reaches the explosion point.

NASA sources, insisting on anonymity, say the flame probably triggered the explosion of Challenger's fuel tank 73 seconds after liftoff.

Weather

State

A tornado roared out of a stormy sky in Parker County, destroying a mobile home and a barn, as heavy thunderstorms moved across North Texas.

The tornado struck near Brock in southwest Parker County, about 35 miles west of Fort Worth, at 9:40 p.m. Sunday. No one was injured, the sheriff's office said.

Weatherford was out of electrical power for a short time because of wind damage, officers said.

A Weatherford police dispatcher who asked that her name not be used, said "We've had a lot of lightning, and we're dealing with a major power outage at this time. It's affecting all of Weatherford."

Tax return help available

People needing help preparing their 1985 income tax returns can receive assistance from IRS trained volunteers free of charge beginning Feb. 10.

The service is primarily for seniors citizens; lower income persons; handicapped persons; persons who have trouble understanding the English language; and retired persons who need to determine if any of their social security income is taxable.

Anyone in the above categories may come to one of the following locations to call one of the numbers listed to make an appointment.

• Feb. 10, 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church at Seventh and Runnels Streets. 263-4211 or 263-8773.

Thieves hit Highland Mall

Five businesses in Highland Mall were burglarized between late Saturday night and Sunday morning with losses and damages totaling more than $1,500.

Vera Robertson, owner of Pretty Things, told police Sunday morning that someone had entered the business through the ceiling, stealing $20 and causing $300 damage to a cash drawer and a wooden door.

Barbara Donelson, owner of Sew What, told police someone stole $191 in cash, and caused $400 damage to a plate glass window and $100 damage to a ceiling tile.

While investigating the reported break-ins, police discovered that three other businesses at the mall had been burglarized as well.

Personnel at Gray's Jewelry told police an undetermined amount of gold jewelry was stolen.

Officers also discovered that Mr. G's Garden Center had been broken into. Thieves got away with $90 after causing an undetermined amount of damage to two glass doors, according to the police report.

Joy's Hallmark suffered a cash loss and burglary-related damage. Hal Boyd told police that $140 in currency was stolen, and $250 damage was done to a safe at the business.

In other criminal activity: • Steve Lewis, owner of the Rain Barrel General Store, told police someone burglarized the business Sunday night. According to the complaint, $2,000 worth of camera equipment and $50 in coins were stolen from the store.

• Mrs. Rudy Carpenter of 212 N.E. 10th St. told police Sunday morning that someone stole a pair of mag wheels and tires valued at $275 from her front yard early Sunday morning.

• Inez Petty, a cashier at the Ritz Theater, told police Sunday morning that someone stole $435 in cash and caused $650 damage to two video machines and a door at the business Sunday morning.

• Kenneth Smith of 2305 Marshall St. told police someone stole a $400 revolver and a $200 rifle from his truck while it was parked at his residence between 12:15 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. Sunday.

• Joe Alvarado, 20, of Big Spring was arrested Sunday on suspicion of a second offense of failure to carry adequate car insurance. He was arrested after the car he was driving was involved in a minor accident Sunday in the 2700 block of Old Highway 80.

• Irineo Perez of 2308 Marshall St. told police Sunday morning that someone stole a 1984 Chrysler automobile from the street in front of his home between 7 p.m. Saturday and 9:30 a.m. Sunday. The car was recovered by police with an unreported amount of damage done to it, according to a police report.

• George Ann Wilson of 1002 N. Main St. Apt. 35 told police Sunday evening that someone stole $45 from her residence Saturday afternoon.

• Servando Delossantos, 31, of 200 N.W. Second St. was arrested on N.W. Eighth St. Saturday night on suspicion of driving without a license.

• Marie Lownes of 2606 Langley St. told police early Sunday morning that someone caused about $250 damage to the windshield of her car while it was parked at 1009 N. Lamesa St. Saturday night.

• Dennis Wilson, sales manager at D and C Sales, Inc., told police Sunday afternoon that someone caused an undetermined amount of damage to two manufactured houses at the business. He also informed officers that a chair and couch were stolen during the break-in that occurred between 6 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday.

• Chuck Richardson of Chuck's Oil Co. told police someone broke into a pickup at the business and stole a $269 radar detector between 5:30 p.m. Saturday and 11:45 a.m. Sunday.

• Charles Clayton, 16, of 3912 Parkway was arrested late Sunday night on suspicion of driving without a license.

• Genice Garza of 1112 Mulberry St. told police Sunday morning that an acquaintance put a knife to her neck and lightly cut it and then threatened to cut her more severely if she screamed. The incident, a police report shows, occurred early Sunday morning at her home.

Woman kills family, self

PEARLAND — Authorities said it appears a woman — fearful of being committed to a mental hospital and losing her children — killed her family and then committed suicide.

The bodies were discovered by a neighbor Friday night, probably a week after the deaths occurred, in the family's mobile home near Pearland, 15 miles southeast of Houston, Harris County sheriff's Capt. T.O. Bock said.

Neighbors told investigators that Mrs. Davis — an outpatient at John Sealy Hospital in Galveston for eight months — believed that she was going to be committed to a mental hospital and that her husband would leave with her children.

Board approves buyout

CHICAGO — The richest leveraged buyout in corporate history, a $6.1 billion offer for Beatrice Cos. Inc., has been approved by the company's board of directors and will be submitted to its stockholders in April, officials say.

The revised offer from Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. of $40 in cash and $10 in preferred stock for each common share of Beatrice stock was approved Sunday night.

Guards check workers

AUSTIN, Minn. — Several hundred National Guard troops blocked off a road leading to the north gate of Geo. A. Hormel & Co.'s strike-torn flagship plant today and checked vehicles as employees arrived for work.

The redeployment of the Guard came as officials planned to begin statewide inspections of Hormel meat products after razor blades were found in hot dogs.

CIA disputes charges

WASHINGTON — A newly declassified CIA report disputes charges of Nicaraguan rebel atrocities, contending the Contras could not have slit the throats of captives because they "are normally not equipped with either bayonets or combat knives."

That claim, which was contained in a 12-page report obtained last week by The Associated Press, was challenged by two former rebel leaders.

Warning against snuff

WASHINGTON — Legislation that will put health warnings on snuff and chewing tobacco is expected to be approved easily by the House this week, on the heels of three new scientific studies showing growing use of the products by children.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce health subcommittee, is seeking passage of a compromise bill that would require one of three rotating warning labels and ban radio and television advertising of the products.

Pope John Paul II has his arms around Mother Teresa as they are in the Popemobil just outside the Home for the Dying in Calcutta, where Mother Teresa and her nuns have more than 80 patients. The Pope, who is on a 10-day pastoral journey through the Indian sub-continent, arrived in Calcutta Monday afternoon and headed to Mother Teresa's place immediately.

Pope prays with Mother Teresa for poor

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Pope John Paul II today met with Mother Teresa, known in this jammed, squalid city as the "saint of the gutters," and prayed at her home for the destitute and dying.

The pontiff, on the third day of his 10-day, 14-city tour of India, flew here on an Indian Air Force Boeing 737 from Ranchi in the impoverished northeast state of Bihar.

At a Mass in Ranchi before 200,000 people, he spoke out against the exploitation of workers in a region where thousands are held in virtual slavery.

The pope, praying at Mother Teresa's Nirmal Hriday (Immaculate Heart) home in Calcutta, asked God to "watch over and protect those who care for the sick and assist the dying."

"Sustain them in their efforts to bring comfort and healing," he said. "Make them ever more a radiant sign of your transforming love."

The Roman Catholic nun then escorted the pope inside the home.

Mother Teresa, a 75-year-old nun born in what is now Yugoslavia, won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1979 for her work in the slums of Calcutta. Her Missionaries of Charity now operate orphanages, free kitchens, leper colonies and clinics worldwide.

"To help people to die in peace with love is most important, and these are the poorest of the poor," Mother Teresa told The Associated Press before the pope's arrival.

Her home for the dying, which houses 85 impoverished patients, is next door to a Hindu temple to Kali, the goddess of destruction. The temple priest, Ajit Kumar Mukherjee, said the pope's presence in Calcutta would "create a solemnity and divine light among people."

Prisoner swap reported

BONN, West Germany — Two newspapers today reported agreement between East and West on a major prisoner exchange that includes Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky, but there was no official confirmation from West Germany or the United States.

Details of the reputed exchange were printed in the mass-circulation West German tabloid Bild and The New York Times. Quoting "ranking Soviet sources," Bild said U.S., Soviet and West German officials had agreed to swap an unspecified number of captured East bloc spies for Shcharansky and 12 former Western agents.

Libyan agents confess

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt — Four Libyan security agents on Saturday told a court they were assigned to assassinate two opponents of Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy who were living in Egypt.

All four claimed at the start of their trial by a three-man criminal court in this Mediterranean city that they "disapproved" of the mission but could not refuse it because they feared punishment.

New president elected

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — Oscar Arias, who promised to keep this key U.S. ally out of Central America's conflicts, defeated five other candidates Sunday to win the presidency of Costa Rica.

Voters turned out in record numbers for an election many observers predicted would be a close race between the 45-year-old Arias and Rafael A. Calderon Jr., 37. Both are considered moderate and pro-American.

Arias, a London-trained economist, was the candidate of the governing National Liberation Party.

Haiti bans reporters

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Security forces patrolling the capital fired into the streets at random, while 2,000 protesters calling for the downfall of President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier massed in a city in northern Haiti.

Duvalier's government, facing the most widespread anti-government rioting in its 14-year history, barred foreign reporters on Sunday from leaving Port-au-Prince, the capital, without permission.

Oil cartel meets

VIENNA, Austria — A special OPEC committee gathered for a three-day meeting to discuss ways of ensuring that the cartel keeps what it considers its fair share of an oil market complicated by stiff competition and falling prices.

But Saudi Arabia's oil minister was quoted today as saying that contacts between OPEC and producers outside the cartel on controlling prices have produced no results.

BIG SPRING TRAVEL TALK

by Mary Valli

NATURE-LOVERS' DELIGHT

The island of Dominica, nicknamed the "Nature Isle of the Caribbean," is blessed with mountain retreats nestled in virgin rain forests. It also has nature preserves, a waterfall around every corner and even a boiling lake. Hiking along marked trails is the best way to appreciate the island's beauty. One can never be far away from nature, however, in Dominica. Even the few beachfront hotels are framed by a backdrop of towering, heavily forested mountains. Botanists, birdwatchers and lovers of nature will enjoy the interior. Inland beaches at many of the island's 365 sparkling rivers and streams are more popular than the seashore. This is because the beaches have dark sands due to Dominica's volcanic origin.

Whatever your dreams, whatever your desires, from a shopping filled vacation to an island retreat to a relaxing and fun-filled cruise, your dream becomes a reality when you step through the doors of BIG SPRING TRAVEL, 608 Scurry. Let our travel professionals put on a magic flying carpet to the destination of your dreams where you can spend fun-filled days as well as exciting nights returning with memories that will fill a scrapbook and a lifetime. Come in today and discover the travel arrangements suited to anyone's needs and desires. Tel. 263-0225. Open 8:30-5:30 Mon.-Fri.

Press on to get draft registrants

It is only fair that the government is making every attempt to identify those relatively few young men who have refused to register for a possible military draft. It is especially appropriate that applicants for federal student aid will be screened to determine if they have ducked Selective Service registration.

It is inexcusable to allow Americans who would shirk the duty of defending their country to receive taxpayer aid to further their education.

Secretary of Education William J. Bennett on Jan. 22 took the occasion of announcing that the names of student aid applicants would be turned over to the Selective Service System to remind us of a quote from Theodore Roosevelt: "The first requisite of a good citizen in this republic of ours, is that he shall be able and willing to pull his weight."

"One of the ways in which college students can pull their weight and fulfill their responsibility of citizenship," Bennett added, "is by standing ready to defend their country in time of need."

Most taxpayers — who finance federal student aid programs to the tune of $8 billion a year — would agree with Secretary Bennett.

A 1982 law (the Solomon Amendment) prohibits giving student aid to men who fail to register with the Selective Service System.

The Selective Service System will screen applicants for federal Pell Grants, which are received by more than 2 million students annually. An additional 3 million students per year apply for the grants.

Although the military draft was abolished in 1973, men are required at age 18 to register in a Selective Service pool from which they could be drafted if Congress reinstitutes conscription.

The penalty for failure to register is up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. It speaks well for the younger generation that most 18-year-old men have registered, and it is appropriate that the government is tracking down the few who are not willing to pull their own weight, as Mr. Roosevelt would say.

Deaths teach us our vulnerability

WASHINGTON — The headline on Tuesday's Wall Street Journal turned out to be horribly inauspicious: "The Astronauts Only Make It Look Easy." Every other time the space shuttle had flown, they had made it look easy.

We all had forgotten that it isn't. We had forgotten that the space program is still skirting the very edges of the humanly possible. What was once a source of awe had become almost boringly routine.

But the familiarity was not what made the fatal explosion such a shock. We hear every day of people dying, suddenly and unexpectedly, in the middle of everyday activities — driving a car, shoveling snow from a sidewalk. When it affects someone we know, it may shock, but not when it happens to a faceless stranger.

That's one reason this came as a special blow. When the Challenger disintegrated in midair, we lost an ordinary human being whom we had come, in some small way, to know. The other astronauts — the real astronauts — had names and faces, but it was hard to believe they were people like you and me. Christa McAuliffe was like us — a 37-year-old woman with a husband and two children, an ordinary job, a radiant smile and an enviable sense of adventure. It was hard to bear watching the film of her floating around in a weightless environment, laughing merrily, juxtaposed against the awful explosion.

But what made her death especially piercing was that her presence on the mission was largely an accident of fate. She set out to be a teacher, not an astronaut. Only a quirky presidential idea to send a teacher into space gave her the opportunity, and out of some 11,000 applicants, she was the one chosen.

McAuliffe had, in effect, won a lottery — or, as it turned out, lost one. To lift her out of an outwardly happy, normal life to put her on a doomed spacecraft seems unspeakably cruel. Besides feeling sorrow, we could hardly help but feel some undefined guilt. This is a democracy, and we feel some responsibility for what our leaders do.

Still, the Challenger carried not one human being but seven, all of them more like us than not, all of them vulnerable to all the perils of the flesh. The intrusion of death into a space flight is a new experience. The nation had watched men travel to the moon and return safely.

To be reminded of the ultimate helplessness of every person is to feel what Job must have felt when his complaint to heaven was answered by the magnificent fury of the Almighty: "Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth?... Hast thou commanded the morning since thy days?"

Even now, it seems dreadfully incongruous that though we can build machines that can soar beyond the sky, we can't make a human body invulnerable to something as prosaic as an explosion. Life, the most precious of heavenly gifts, is also the most fragile. One brief moment, like the one that occurred a little more than a minute into the Challenger's flight, and it is gone forever.

So when we mourn the seven passengers aboard the Challenger, we also mourn for our own lost hope of omnipotence. At some level, we always know that our achievements are tiny when measured against the breadth of the universe, and that ultimately our lives are at the mercy of forces greater than we can imagine. But we strive to forget those facts. On Tuesday, as the space shuttle rose off the launch pad, it was easy to forget. Now, we remember.

Iranians train suicide pilots

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA
WASHINGTON — In an ominous replay of World War II's closing days, Iranian pilots have been trained to fly light planes loaded with explosives on suicide missions against U.S. warships in the Mediterranean or land facilities throughout the Middle East.

According to our intelligence sources — including the testimony of an Iranian defector — the young Iranian pilots are as fanatically dedicated to the Ayatollah Khomeini as Japanese kamikaze pilots were to Emperor Hirohito in 1945. The kamikazes destroyed 36 U.S. warships and damaged 368 in the battle of Okinawa.

What makes the possibility of suicide attacks on the Sixth Fleet particularly galling is the fact that the aircraft that would be used were made in West Germany and Switzerland. The two types of planes may be able to evade the U.S. warships' radar protection; on land, it would be virtually impossible to protect American embassies against a flying suicide attack.

Up to now, Iranian-controlled Shiite terrorists have succeeded all too well in their undeclared war on the United States, using hijackings and suicidal truck bombers. But the kamikaze force, potentially far more dangerous, has been steadily growing. Indeed, our sources believe that only the continuation of Iran's war with Iraq has kept Khomeini from unleashing his suicide pilots against U.S. targets.

The Iranian kamikazes were first trained on powered gliders in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley of eastern Lebanon. The Syrians bought the aircraft from West German firms in 1981-82, intending to lend them to Palestinian guerrillas. But the 1982 Syrian split with the Palestine Liberation Organization ended that scheme.

So the Syrians offered the gliders to the Iranian Revolutionary Guards, who had been invited to the Bekaa that year. U.S. intelligence first got wind of the airborne threat early in 1983.

Top-secret minutes of a high-level meeting in Tehran in mid-1984 disclose that the Iranian leaders were enthusiastic about expanding the kamikaze unit, but dissatisfied with the performance of the West German gliders.

The replacement they chose was the Swiss Pilatus PC-7, normally used for crop-dusting. Iran bought 80 Pilatus planes in 1984; the Swiss maintain they thought the planes would be used for agriculture, rescue missions and pilot training.

They were correct on the last score, but not in the way they thought.

The Swiss were alarmed when they belatedly discovered that some of the technical documents shipped to Iran included instructions on converting the PC-7 into a warplane armed with machine guns, rocket launchers or fragmentation bombs.

The kamikazes began training in the Swiss planes at Bushire, the main Iranian fighter-bomber airbase on the Persian Gulf. Later they were sent to Won San, North Korea, for further training.

But even the minimal flying skills required of suicide pilots proved beyond several of the Iranian volunteers, who perished during the low-level flight exercises. One who survived and got back to Iran was Hushang Mortezaei, and he was so unnerved at the prospect of immolation for the imam that he defected the first chance he got. Mortezaei skedaddled from a four-plane formation heading for a base near the Strait of Hormuz.

Now hiding in London, young Mortezaei has told his debriefers it's not surprising that he was the only one of Khomeini's kamikazes to defect. "I must tell you that my comrades are 100 percent fanatics," he explained. "They are preparing to make their strikes and nothing will stop them."

As evidence of his ex-buddies' anti-American zeal, the defector described their "reactions of uncontrollable joy" whenever Shiite terrorists succeeded in hijacking a plane or blowing up a U.S. installation.

The possibility of Iranian kamikaze pilots sneaking into the United States has not been discounted by security experts. White House defenses include radar and anti-aircraft missiles.

UNDER THE DOME: It's no secret that the new Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law will mean extinction or crippling of any federal program that doesn't have a powerful lobby going for it. One of the first programs to be "zeroed out" will, we're told, be the funds to complete the Washington, D.C., subway system. Congressional aides report they've been flooded with calls urging Congress to reconsider the subway system cutback. The calls come from friends and relations who live in the area and who, unlike members of Congress, would use mass transit if they could. Will this be enough to save the subway? Stay tuned.

MINI-EDITORIAL: New York Gov. Mario Cuomo has broken new ground in the hallowed ritual of running for president. While insisting coyly that he doesn't really want to go for it in 1988, Cuomo is threatening to declare his candidacy if certain media people don't stop saying an Italian-American can't be elected. The point is not that his charges are the flimsiest gossamer; what fascinates us is the threat itself. Somehow we never thought that someone might run for president as a means of inflicting punishment for real or fancied injury. Maybe this is a Cuomosque twist on the old Kennedy motto: Don't get mad, get even.

Around The Rim

Education comes first

By TIM APPEL

It really saddens me to see all these people up in arms about the no pass-no play bill that was passed by the legislature, for it seems that those doing most of the complaining are the parents of school's athletes.

I have no idea if the state of Oregon has such a bill, but at the school I went to, the parents were the ones that made such an unwritten rule, and enforced it to the maximum.

My own parents set (what I thought) fairly high standards, but not impossible to attain if I worked at it. If I did not get at least a "C" in each class, all extra-curricular activities I was involved in would cease, and I would be forced to sit at home each night and study until my grades went up the next quarter.

This was an outrage! I had many after-school activities, and if I failed, such things as cruising around in my dad's car and my job at the city daily paper would also end.

It amounted to nothing more than blackmail, but being powerless to override this law, I had to comply.

And it worked. I passed all courses with high marks, and was able to keep my privileges — as did all of my other classmates that I knew who had after-school endeavors. And to top it off, the football team won the state championship, one of my classmates was not only named an All-American, but an Academic All-American, and the editor of the school paper eventually won a Rhodes Scholarship, just to name a few.

So it really upsets me to hear all this commotion. A lot of parents seem to care more about the won-loss column of their child's football team than if the kid can read and write.

Remember, about one percent of college football players end up making it to the pro level. If five out of 100 high school football players make it to the college level, then the odds of a high school player going into the pros is about one in 2000. The percentage is not too good if you have high hopes of your kid suiting up in an NFL uniform.

In other countries, education is a rare privilege. Let's keep learning in higher esteem, and other activities secondary until our kids can function in our complex society.

Opinions expressed in this column are those of the staff writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the newspaper's management.

Billy Graham

Old Testament teaches much

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have tried to read the Old Testament, but every time I do I just get bogged down. I find the New Testament very helpful, but I wonder if the Old Testament is useful to us today. — F.R.

DEAR F.R.: The Apostle Paul in the New Testament says concerning the Old Testament: "For everything that was written in the past was written to teach us, so that through endurance and the encouragement of the Scriptures we might have hope" (Romans 15:4). The Old Testament is God's Word just as much as the New Testament, and "All Scripture is God-breathed and is useful for teaching, rebuking, correcting and training in righteousness" (2 Timothy 3:16).

Let me make several suggestions. First, realize that the Old Testament is essentially the story of God's dealings with the human race and particularly that nation through which the Messiah would come. By studying it, therefore, we can learn much about God and His will for our lives.

Also, many people begin to read the Old Testament with the book of Genesis and get bogged down after a few books. But I suggest you begin with the books of Psalms and Proverbs.

Army aims to blunt criticism against Bradley

FORT HOOD (AP) — Green-faced camouflaged soldiers scampered through the brush, their M-16 rifles blazing. Tanks shrouded by smoke advanced on a "Soviet-controlled" hill as a line of Bradley fighting vehicles blasted enemy positions and delivered infantrymen to the front.

The Army played out a war on the Central Texas range last week.

The objective: Force the retreat of Congressional critics who say the Bradley, a $1.5 million tank-like troop taxi, is the Pentagon's latest lemon.

The tactic: let reporters kick the treads, fire the 25-millimeter cannon, give it a spin around the prairie past cattle and mesquite trees, and see the controversial weapon in action.

A made-for-television war.

The aluminum-sided Bradley — which can travel at 40 mph, kick up a huge cloud of dust and give you a ride similar to a New York subway — is likely to go to battle again in Washington budget hearings this spring.

Critics say it's too vulnerable on the modern battlefield, that it's a weak-sided, fire-prone deathtrap for the soldiers it is designed to carry to the front.

But the Army, which has already bought more than 2,000 Bradleys and wants a total of 6,832, says it would have to change its tactics if Congress kills its high-tech, high-speed baby that fires on the move and fights at night.

And the Pentagon has launched an all-out offensive to keep the Bradleys coming off the assembly line. Last week's rough-riding was officially called a "media visit," but the troops dubbed it "Operation S.O.B. — Save Our Bradley."

"The Bradley puts infantry back on the battlefield," said Maj. Phil Soucy. "I still believe the battle is not over until the infantry walks up on the ground and says 'This is mine.'"

In battle, the Pentagon contends, the infantry needs the Bradley to keep up with the speedy M-1 Abrams tank. What's more, the Army says it needs the Bradley's firepower to offset the numerical advantage the Soviets have in tanks and personnel carriers.

"They've got three for every one I've got," said Col. Smythe Wood, a brigade commander at Fort Hood. "That's why we like the Bradley. The Bradley can clean clock on the BMP" — its Soviet counterpart. It can also clean out any cobwebs in your head.

When the Bradley moves, dirt flies. Its 500-horsepower turbo-charged diesel engine growls at a deafening din, its turret lets out a high-pitched shriek as it spins, its treads pound over hill and valley.

The ride in the rear, where up to six soldiers sit, is akin to taking a spin in a blender. Riders have to hang on to subway-like ceiling straps.

The thing bucks and shakes so much that sand and dust seep in through the tiny portholes.

In the turret, the Bradley becomes a video arcade of high-technology weapons. Place your head against a cushioned periscope. Flick a few switches on a control panel. Line up the crosshairs on the scope and press the little red button.

Poof.

You just destroyed a tank with a TOW missile, or killed a jeep with the cannon, or wiped out a company of soldiers with a machine gun.

It's so easy, day or night, that not even near-sighted reporters miss.

Up front, the Bradley handles like a car — if you know what you're doing. "Sometimes I like it better than a car. It's more fun," said Specialist Richard Schwab, a Bradley driver.

There's a speedometer, an automatic transmission, a horn, an oil pressure gauge, a turn signal and headlights. The Bradley can turn on a dime.

And, as the visitors found, it can scare the living daylight out of the cattle that graze on Fort Hood, the largest armor training post in the free world.

"It beats walking," said

A Bradley armored personnel carrier at training exercises at Fort Hood. The aluminum sided vehicles look like tanks, run on treads at speeds up to 45 mph and has a price tag of about $1.5 million.

Specialist Glenn Kinsman.

Standing on a scraggly cliff overlooking a "war zone" covered with blue, white, green and yellow battle smoke, Lt. Col. Jim McDonough narrates the action with a wireless microphone.

About 13,500 Fort Hood troops had been in the field for three weeks of training, with 1,025 vehicles and 800 tons of ammunition. The exercise, part of the regular training, is a test of the company commander.

If hit by the light beams shot instead of missiles and bullets, a yellow light mounted on the tanks and Bradleys signifies death. With reporters watching, U.S. forces controlled the air and outnumbered the troops posing as a Soviet motorized rifle division.

Today, U.S. forces "lost one tank and one Bradley, but (they) blew the opposition off the hill," McDonough says proudly at the end of the exercise.

The Bradley, named for Gen. Omar Bradley, is built by FMC Corp. with major contracts at General Electric, Cummins, Hughes Aircraft, Chrysler and RCA.

The old 1960s troop carrier, the M-113, had only a short-range 50-caliber machine gun that, reporters found, was almost impossible to accurately fire on the move.

"In the 113, you had to take hits, take whatever came at you," said Sgt. Maurice Phinney. "In this one, you can shoot back."

"It's awesome," said Sgt. First Class James Kwasniewski. "I feel the American people cannot complain about the expense."

But some have. Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., said the latest testing of the Bradley, which included firing 10 live shots at the vehicle, was carefully set up to avoid serious damage. Pryor said it was "a classic example of buy now, test later — if ever — and then obfuscate the results."

The Army had originally refused to release those test results, but word leaked out through sources who claimed the tests showed extremely high casualties if the fuel tanks or ammunition storage areas were hit. Ammunition is mounted next to troop seats in the rear.

The Army has contended all along that the tests were true-to-battle situations and exposed no defects that couldn't be corrected.

A $500 million enhancement program is currently under study by the Army, which says it could make the Bradley more survivable by adding protective cabling around electrical wires, moving ammunition to another position, changing the flow of fuel and adding better armor.

China Long's Bachelor's Degree Paid Off

"I knew educated people generally have a better quality of life"

China Long's professional life could have ended with the closing of Webb Air Force Base in 1977, but it didn't. It just began.

"I had seventeen years in civil service, three short of retirement. I could have transferred anywhere in the world, but I wanted to stay in Big Spring," she said.

So Long decided to travel the 55 miles from her home to The University of Texas of the Permian Basin every day for a year. "I decided a long time ago I was going to be 50 whether I got a degree or not—it's never too late. I knew that educated people generally have a better quality of life. A college degree doesn't insure success, but it shows that you're willing to put forth the effort to attain a goal."

Long graduated from high school in 1956 and completed a year at Howard College before she married. Then over the next 15-20 years she kept taking courses until she earned her associates degree at her hometown college.

"When I got to U. T. Permian Basin, I found that an older student has a definite advantage; you have more life experience to relate to the material you study." Long also took advantage of U. T. Permian Basin's unique self-paced instruction courses that allowed her to complete work on her own time without the added pressure of classes to attend.

You can reach your potential with a bachelor's or master's degree from U.T. Permian Basin. See Teresa Brockman at Howard College's "Educational Pursuit" College Night. Tuesday February 4, 6:30-8:30 p.m. in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Dear Abby

Elderly patients get good mileage from jogging suits

DEAR ABBY: "Disgusted in Ontario" complained that her niece had sent a 78-year-old uncle who was terminally ill in a nursing home a jogging suit for Christmas.

"Disgusted" said: "This same idiot niece sent me a 10-quart kettle. I'm a widow, living alone in a small condo, and I can't imagine where she got the idea I could use anything like that."

Abby, please tell "Disgusted" that a jogging suit is a very appropriate gift for an elderly person in a nursing home. And she can use the 10-quart kettle to soak her head!

DISGUSTED WITH DISGUSTED
DEAR DISGUSTED: Did I get letters? Read on:
DEAR ABBY: I work as a nurse's aid in a nursing home, and I'd rather see the male residents in jogging suits than in pajamas. Most of the time their flies are wide open.

SEEN AN EYEFUL
IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR ABBY: I have an 88-year-old mother who is frail, but she lives in her own home. This lady has always been very proper and had never worn slacks in her life, but last year her granddaughter sent her a powder-blue jogging suit, and it changed her way of living! Abby, she laughed when she saw it, but after trying it on she didn't want to take it off.

I went right out and bought her five more jogging suits in pretty bright colors, and they are now her uniforms. Not only that, but some of her "girlfriends" who have visited her have picked up on the idea, and now they all wear jogging suits.

M.J.L., ELMIRA, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: I have been a nurse in a nursing home for many years, and I think the jogging (or warm-up) suit is the best invention since the wheel.

No matter how inactive a resident is, we "get them up" every morning even if it is only to get them out of bed and place them in a wheelchair. They always feel (and look) more "dressed" in a jogging suit than a bathrobe.

A handicapped, stroke or paralyzed patient is not always completely covered, and need not worry about being exposed while in the wheelchair or being transferred from chair to bed.

Hypoglycemia: Uncommon problem, popular topic

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: After reading up on hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) I feel it is what I have. My doctor dismisses the evidence and pooh-poos the idea out of hand. He feels hypoglycemia is a hoax. Should I have the test for it? — A.A.

Your doctor will order the tests if you insist. His reaction is not unusual, for hypoglycemia has been greatly overworked and, I'm frank to say, the subject of far too much self-diagnosis.

Normally, when we eat the sugar in the food gets converted to blood sugar (glucose). At that point the body releases insulin, and a couple of hours later blood sugar returns to normal. In a few people, the level continues to drop until there is a deficiency of blood sugar. The pancreas, the source of insulin production, has failed to fine-tune its insulin production. Symptoms arise — nervousness, headache, etc. The low blood sugar level has triggered release of adrenalin, causing those symptoms.

Now this is "reactive" hypoglycemia. The same problem can occur if a tumor of the pancreas, for example, is the cause of the insulin overproduction. But actually, neither situation is all that common.

Proof of the low sugar problem requires three pieces of solid evidence. Tests must show a drop of blood sugar to a certain indicator level. The symptoms must occur with that reading and, finally, they must subside when the blood level returns to normal (with food ingestion).

The answer for people with hypoglycemia is diet manipulation. If they can decrease consumption of these sugars they have fewer episodes of blood sugar drops. And if they emphasize smaller, more frequent meals stressing protein foods, there will be less of the rambunctious insulin production and fewer symptoms.

If you are having the symptoms I described, especially chronic headache, you would do well to try to get at the basis of those problems. If they can't be explained otherwise, then the hypoglycemia idea can be entertained. In any event, there is nothing worse than going around with symptoms for which you have no explanation.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please discuss epididymitis, specifically symptoms, causes and cures. What type of a doctor does someone with this go to? — Mr. R.L.B.

The epididymis lies in the scrotum, a network of tubules through which travel the sperm produced by the testes. If you make a fist and cover it with the other hand you get an idea of the relationship of the epididymis to the testes. The testes is the fist, the hand the attached epididymis.

Epididymitis is inflammation of the tube network, and a number of germs can cause it, often germs that are lurking elsewhere in the urinary tract. Sometimes the bacteria of venereal disease is the cause. Or, an injury to the area may cause the inflammation.

The most salient symptoms are swelling of the scrotum and pain. Or there may be pain on urination and a discharge.

Antibiotics are used for infection, along with rest and special scrotal supports. The doctor to see first is the family physician, for it's not an obscure illness, and he sees it often enough to treat it effectively.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

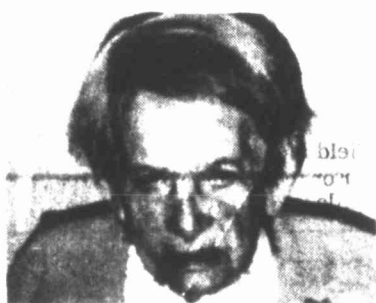

Party held for Francisca Perez on 100th birthday

Francisca M. Perez celebrated her 100th birthday Wednesday at 1300 Wood St.

Perez was born Jan. 29, 1886, in Ojuelos, Texas. She married Juan Perez on March 30, 1908 in Laredo. Her husband died in 1935.

She moved to Big Spring with her daughter, Beatrice, and son-in-law, Ramon Uribe, in 1938.

She has one daughter, Beatrice Uribe; and 11 grandchildren, including: Ray Uribe, George Uribe and Hilda Uribe, all of Big Spring; David Uribe of Seminole, Rose Marie Calderon of Fort Worth, Irene Nieves, Arnold Uribe of Oceanside, Calif., Lilia Zamora

Cindy Pearce is honoree at bridal shower Jan. 25

Cindy Pearce, bride-elect of Gary Barnes, was honored with a bridal shower Jan. 25 in the home of Mrs. Frank Clark.

The honoree is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pearce.

The refreshment table was covered with a blue linen cloth overlaid with lace and centered with an arrangement of votive candles surrounded by blue carnations and white daisies. Silver and crystal appointments were used.

The hostesses presented the honoree with a set of stainless cookware.

Hostesses were: Joann Avants, Joan Beil, Marilyn Clark, Betty Dean, Ernestine Harris, Cheryl Harris, Gay Herren, Lila Estes, Velta Lloyd, Catherine Perry, Pat Moore, Roberta Wiley, Clovie Shirey, Shirley Matthews and Janice Rosson.

The couple will wed March 1 at the Joseph A. Hill Chapel at West Texas State University in Canyon.

Desk, Derrick club members study oil industry

The Big Spring Desk and Derrick Club met recently at Alberto's. Jimmie Lou Drake presented the program called, "A New Look at Orientation."

The Desk and Derrick Club is an organization for women employed in the energy industry who are interested in expanding their knowledge of the industry.

People interested in joining the Desk and Derrick Club may call Margaret Wise at 267-1661, or Gertrude McCann at 267-6476.

Officers for the coming year are: Gertrude McCann, president; Margaret Wise, vice president; Charlotte Shedy, treasurer; and Anna Shedy, secretary.

The next meeting is Feb. 3 at 6 p.m. at Alberto's.

Chris Evert Lloyd puts some muscle into a return against West Germany's Steffi Graf in the finals of the Key Biscayne Virginia Slims tournament Sunday. Evert Lloyd defeated Graf 6-3, 6-1 for the title.

Tougher Evert Lloyd cruises to Slims win

KEY BISCAINE Fla. (AP) — The new and improved Chris Evert Lloyd, unveiled to rave reviews at the Virginia Slims of Florida, has a bolder serve and more punch in her groundstrokes.

Lloyd lost only 10 games in five matches during the $250,000 tournament on the cement courts at the Sheraton Royal Biscayne resort. Her most difficult match was Sunday's final against West Germany's Steffi Graf, but even that wasn't very tough as Lloyd cruised to a 6-3, 6-1 victory.

"I'm really pleased with the way I played all week," said Lloyd, who earned $40,000. "You never know how you're going to react after a long layoff."

Lloyd, seeded first here and ranked No. 2 in the world, had been away from the women's tennis tour for six weeks. She spent the holidays with her family in nearby Fort Lauderdale and much of the rest of the time in the weight room. The hard work showed in her game.

"I'm trying to be more of an all-court player, trying to play more aggressively," she said. "I don't want my serve to just start out a point. I want it as a weapon."

"I think I did that a few times (against Graf). I think I surprised her a few times with my first serve, and even once or twice with my second serve. If anything, that's because I'm stronger from the weight work."

Lloyd's most impressive service game came at 4-3 in the first set when she hit two service winners, and an ace to win the game at love.

Graf, seeded second here and ranked No. 6 in the world, was suitably impressed. "I think she's playing the best she's ever played," Graf said.

But the 16-year-old West German said she felt she was playing well, too. The difference, she said, was more mental than physical.

"In the beginning, I was playing well," Graf said. "But in the end I didn't know what to do."

The reason for her undoing was a bad line call that cost her the second game of the second set. She had bounced back from losing 11 of the final 14 points in the first set to break Lloyd's serve in the first game of the second set.

But after the line call went against her and the chair umpire refused to overrule the decision, Graf fell apart. She won only four more points in the final five games.

"I think that she lost a little bit of concentration after the call," said Lloyd. "You've got to block it out of your mind and if she can't do that, it's her problem."

Graf, who won $20,000 admitted that she didn't react the way she should.

"In the second set, after I got the bad call I didn't play any good," she said.

NFC registers comeback win

HONOLULU (A) — Phil Simms' season with the New York Giants ended badly when he and his team were overpowered by the Chicago Bears in the National Football League playoffs.

But, thanks in a roundabout way to Bears' quarterback Jim McMahon, Simms was able to close the books on the campaign with a victory and a most valuable player award. In the process, he also took McMahon off the hook as the potential goat of the Pro Bowl.

Simms got extensive playing time for the National Football Conference All-Stars Sunday after McMahon, who lost a fumble and threw an interception in a brief span in the second quarter, aggravated a knee injury and didn't play in the second half.

Simms, who figured to play the first and third quarters in his role as the NFC starter, instead played all but the second period. He responded with three touchdown passes in the second half, the last with 2:47 remaining, to rally the NFC to a 28-24 victory over the American Conference.

"It's a real nice way to end my season," said Simms, who brought the AFC back from a 24-7 halftime deficit. "After our divisional playoff loss to the Bears in Chicago last month, I was down."

"When Jim got hurt, I knew I was going to play the rest of the game," Simms said. "I can't say I was really thrilled about Jim getting hurt, but it turned out well."

Simms, named the Pro Bowl

MIKE SINGLETARY ... big game and defense

DAN FOUTS ... throws key interceptions

MVP in his first appearance as an all-star, connected with Tampa Bay's Jimmie Giles for a 15-yard touchdown in the waning minutes to give the NFC the victory.

Earlier in the second half, the Giant quarterback threw scoring strikes of 15 yards to Washington's Art Monk and two yards to Doug Cosbie of Dallas.

"At halftime, the coach (John Robinson of the Los Angeles Rams) just told us to keep playing and we'd get some breaks and turnovers," Simms said of the NFC's 17-point deficit at the intermission. "No one wants to embarrass themselves, so we wanted to settle down in the third quarter and play good ball."

Simms finished with 15 completions in 27 attempts for 212 yards, with no interceptions.

The lost fumble and interception by McMahon, the brash star of Chicago's 46-10 rout of New England in the Super Bowl a week ago, set up a field goal and a touchdown by the AFC, which rattled off 17 points during a four-minute span of the second quarter to pull away from a 7-7 tie.

McMahon said of the decision to keep him out of the second half, "Coach Robinson didn't want anyone to get seriously injured, and I wasn't too thrilled about going out there with my knee hurting."

McMahon completed one of his six passes for seven yards.

Another Chicago star, Walter Payton, played sparingly because of flu and finished with just three carries for 14 yards.

The defensive contingent from the Bears, although out of their "46" defense, were more of a factor. Linebacker Mike Singletary had six solo tackles, four assists and intercepted a Dan Fouts' pass in the NFC end zone to halt an AFC scoring threat midway through the final period.

Chicago defensive end Dave Hampton had two quarterback sacks, safety Dave Duerson had three solo tackles and an assist, and end Richard Dent, the Super Bowl MVP, had two tackles.

Two key defensive plays, however, were made by cornerback LeRoy Irvin of the Rams. He intercepted a Fouts pass in the NFC end zone to snuff one scoring threat, then picked off another throw by Fouts at the NFC 22 with 1½ minutes remaining to preserve the victory after the AFC had moved to the National Conference's 34-yard line.

The NFL's MVP in 1985, Allen scored on a 2-yard run and threw a 51-yard touchdown pass to San Diego's Wes Chandler.

Chandler and Seattle's Steve Largent also turned in outstanding performances. Chandler had a Pro Bowl-record 114 yards on four receptions, and Largent set another record for the game with eight receptions for 82 yards.

"You have to give the NFC credit," said AFC Coach Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins. "We made the plays in the first half, they made the plays in the second half."

Hawks, Queens to play WTC tonight

The Howard College Hawks and Hawk Queens will host Western Junior College Athletic Conference rival Western Texas College tonight in doubleheader at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The Hawk-Queens, who have won three conference games in a row, are now in fourth place in the WJCAC with a 3-4 league slate and 9-14 record overall. They will open the doubleheader with game time slated for 6 p.m.

The Hawks have been mired in a slump, losing six straight games, after opening WJCAC play with two wins. The Hawks bring a 2-6 WJCAC ledger into the game and a 8-13 record overall.

The Hawks game is slated to get underway at 8 p.m.

Lendl wins U.S. Indoor by default

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ivan Lendl won the 25th annual U.S. Pro Tennis Tournament Sunday when final round opponent Tim Mayotte defaulted because of an injury.

Mayotte said he pulled a stomach muscle in the second set Saturday night during his semifinal victory over Yannick Noah of France. Lendl was declared the tournament champion and earned the $67,500 first prize. Mayotte received $33,750 for second place.

The fifth-seeded team of Scott Davis and David Tate won the doubles title and $21,000 by defeating Sweden's Davis Cup team, Stefan Edberg and Anders Jarryd, 7-6 (7-3), 3-6, 6-3 7-5.

Zoeller leading at Pebble Beach

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller fired a 2-under-par 70 to expand his lead to five strokes Sunday in the third round of the weather-delayed AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am Golf Tournament.

Zoeller completed one round over each of three Monterey Peninsula courses in 205, 11-under par.

Payne Stewart is alone in second going into Monday's final round of the chase for a $108,000 first prize.

Upsets dominate at Dallas indoor meet

DALLAS (AP) — Don't call Billy Olson a homer.

In fact, there's no place like pole vaulting on the road for him.

He bombed out again Saturday night in the Dallas Times Herald Invitational Indoor Track and Field Meet.

For the second year in a row, the Dallas resident failed to clear the opening height.

Olson has improved the indoor world best three times this winter, but the day got off to a bad start. Joe Dial cleared 19-feet, 4¼ inches Saturday afternoon at a meet in Columbia, Mo. to break the mark of 19-3¼ set by Olson a week earlier in Albuquerque.

Olson had failed to clear the bar three times in Toronto on Friday night.

On Saturday night, with a crowd of just over 12,000 rooting him on, Olson couldn't clear 18-0½. Dave Volz won at 18-8¼.

"I had about 60 people in the stands who are like family," said Olson. "Some of them drove up from Abilene where I went to college. They drove for hours. Then I failed to do anything."

"I'm frustrated, puzzled and embarrassed."

Frustration was in ample supply. Carl Lewis has been busy shooting movies and recording an album and not working out much.

The four-time Olympic gold medalist sprint and long jump champion found out that's a bad combination.

Emmitt King nipped Lewis in the 60-yard dash.

King, a member of the 1984 U.S. Olympic team and former NCAA champion from Alabama, outdistanced Lewis in 6.12 seconds to 6.15 seconds. Lewis owns the world indoor best at 6.02 seconds.

"I was surprised he didn't come on like he usually does," said King, who was beating Lewis for the second time. "It's something I can tell my kids some day. I've beaten him twice now. The other time was about five years ago."

Lewis wasn't overly unhappy about the outcome.

"It was my first meet of the season, and I wasn't really very sharp," said Lewis. "It's been a busy week. I shot a movie on Wednesday and Thursday — I play a cop — and Friday I met with my musical producer. I'm recording an album."

Lewis said he simply got beat at the start.

"I know the mistakes I made," he said. "I can correct those. The indoor season is fun, and this is not something I totally train for."

Lewis was very patient during his interviews after the race. At the same meet last year, he stormed away without answering questions.

Asked the difference, Lewis said, "People are asking questions now instead of giving me answers. The media seemed to have its mind made up about me. It's not that way any more."

Georgetown, N.C. State register college hoop upsets

By The Associated Press

Michael Jackson's role as Georgetown's point guard has been to play tough defense, bring the ball upcourt and give it to the scorers.

On Sunday, Louisiana State found out he can do more.

"It was a point guard's dream," Jackson said after leading 12th-ranked Georgetown to a 74-72 college basketball victory over the No. 17 Tigers. "They were playing us tight underneath, so (guard) Horace (Broadnax) and I took it upon ourselves to take the outside shots."

Jackson finished with 20 points, including two free throws with six seconds remaining that snapped a 72-72 deadlock, while handing out 11 assists. It was his season high in both categories. Broadnax added 16 points as the Hoyas, 17-3, registered their sixth straight triumph.

"Their outside shooting was very, very good," LSU Coach Dale Brown said. "We had no time to prepare for this game and you can't stop that anyway."

In another Sunday contest, Chris Washburn and Charles Shackleford scored 16 points apiece to lead North Carolina State to a 54-51 upset victory over No. 8 Kentucky.

On Saturday, Virginia Tech handed No. 2 Memphis State its first loss of the season, 76-72; No. 11 Syracuse stopped No. 7 St. John's 68-64, and Georgia upset LSU 92-76.

In other games Saturday involving Top Ten teams, it was No. 1 North Carolina 85, Clemson 67; No. 4 Kansas 64, Kansas State 50; No. 5 Duke 68, Wake Forest 58; sixth-ranked Oklahoma 88, Missouri 84; No. 11 Syracuse 68, No. 7 St. John's 64; ninth-ranked Michigan 91, Wisconsin 64, and No. 10 Nevada-Las Vegas 87, Utah State 79.

In the Second Ten, it was 13th-ranked Bradley over Tulsa 54-51; No. 14 Notre Dame edging Marquette 72-70 in overtime; No. 15 Indiana 62, Minnesota 54; No. 18 Louisville 91, UCLA 72; No. 19 Texas-El Paso 68, New Mexico 54, and No. 20 Richmond 67, William & Mary 47.

John Williams, playing only his second game since recovering from chicken pox, led LSU in the Georgetown game with 27 points, while Derrick Taylor added 14. But it was the Tigers' fourth straight defeat and dropped LSU to 16-6.

Jackson went to the free throw line when he was fouled after grabbing a rebound under the LSU basket. The Tigers then missed a chance to send the game into overtime when Taylor's shot from the top of the key bounced off the rim at the buzzer.

David Wingate scored 18 points for Georgetown, 12 coming in the first half.

In North Carolina State's victory over Kentucky, Washburn said he relied on his basic basketball instincts in the second half.

"We were just trying to do the basic things, but we got knocked out of basic game plan," Washburn said. "In the second half, coach told us not to be so stiff. We just

Top Ten

No. 1 North Carolina 85, Clemson 67
The Tarheels had little trouble rebounding from their loss to Virginia as Brad Daugherty scored 21 points and Kenny Smith added 16.

"Coming off a loss is always a disappointment, but you can also learn," Daugherty said. "We have a very experienced team. All the guys took everything in stride and tried to make the best of it."

North Carolina stretched a 23-21 margin to 37-23 at halftime and never was challenged.

Va. Tech 76, No. 2 Memphis St. 72
"I guess we put North Carolina in the No. 1 position," said Virginia Tech Coach Charles Moir after his team's victory over Memphis State, which reversed a 22-point loss to their Metro Conference rival last year.

"We knew we could play with Memphis State and we knew we weren't that bad a team when we got beat by 22 points," said guard Dell Curry, who led Virginia Tech's victory with 28 points.

No. 4 Kansas 64, Kansas St. 50
Danny Manning's 18 points and 14 by Greg Dreiling led Kansas over a charged-up Kansas State team. The underdog Wildcats were riding an emotional wave after Thursday night's unexpected announcement of Coach Jack Hartman's retirement at the end of the season.

No. 5 Duke 68, Wake Forest 58
Mark Alarie scored 20 points as Duke raised its record to 20-2 overall and 7-2 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. It is the earliest the Blue Devils have won 20 games in a season.

No. 6 Oklahoma 88, Missouri 84
Overcoming a nine-point deficit, Oklahoma was led by David Johnson, who scored 16 of his 20 points in the second half, including 10 straight at one point.

No. 11 Syracuse 68, No. 7 St. John's 64

Rafael Addison scored 23 points and Syracuse held St. John's Walter Berry to 15 with a collapsing zone as the Orangemen took the lead in the Big East Conference with an 8-1 record.

No. 9 Michigan 91, Wisconsin 64

Michigan's entire starting lineup scored in double figures, led by center Ray Tarpley's season-high 27, as the Wolverines crushed Wisconsin.

No. 10 UNLV 87, Utah State 79

Anthony Jones scored 23 of his 31 points in the second half and Fred Banks added 28 in the Nevada-Las Vegas victory.

Second Ten

Center Mike Williams scored 18 points and grabbed 11 rebounds as Bradley posted its 13th straight win and increased its record to 22-1 overall and 9-0 in the Missouri Valley. Tulsa fell to 16-5 overall and 6-3 in conference play.

Tim Dolan's career-high 22 points paced Notre Dame over Marquette. He sent the game into overtime at 60-60 when he grabbed an offensive rebound and scored at the buzzer. Tim Kempton sealed the victory with three free throws late in extra session.

Ricky Calloway had 21 points. Steve Alford 18 and Daryl Thomas 15 to lead Indiana, which rallied from an 11-point deficit. It was Minnesota's second game since sexual assault charges against three players and suspensions for team violations against two others left Minnesota with six scholarship players. Coach Jim Dutcher resigned in the wake of those charges.

Joe Ward scored 28 points and Donald Hartley added a career-high 22 to lead Georgia over LSU. Ward hit six straight field goals in one stretch in the second half as Georgia pulled away.

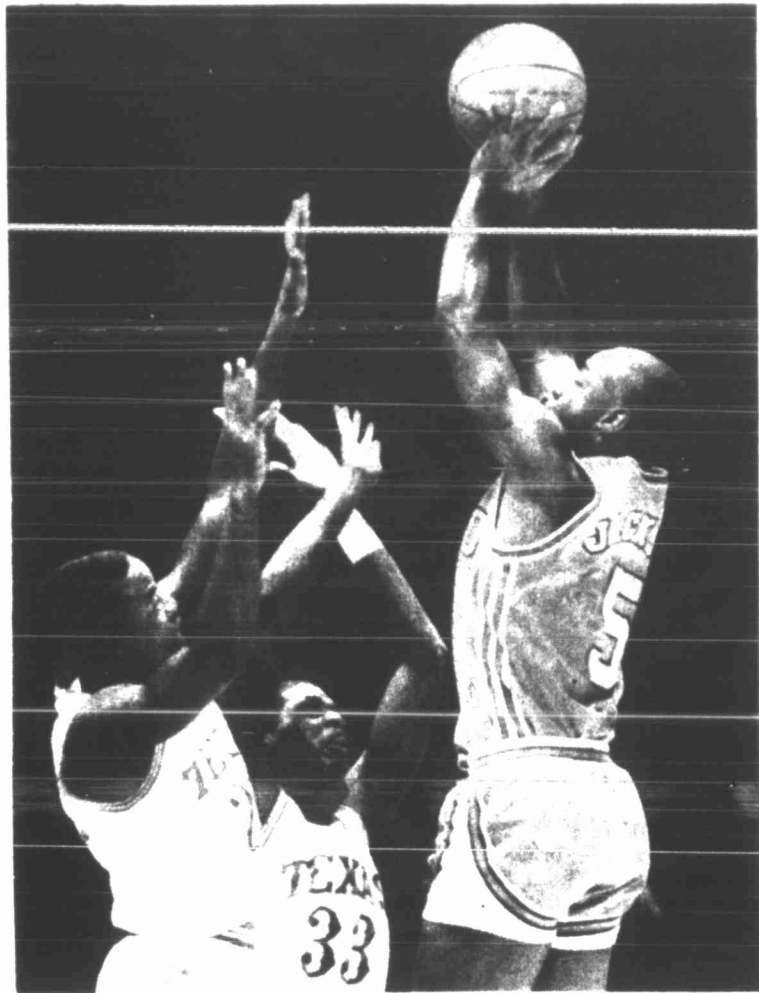

Juden Smith scored 15 points, Dave Feitl 14 and Mike Richmond 11 as Texas-El Paso improved its record to 18-3 and 7-2 in the Western Athletic Conference.

John Newman led Richmond with 16 points and Greg Beckwith's three steals keyed a 12-0 Spider run midway through the first half against William & Mary.

Louisiana Tech 77, Texas Tech 71
Erica Westbrook had 20 points and Tori Harrison added 16 Saturday night in leading fifth-ranked Louisiana Tech to a 77-71 victory over Texas Tech in college women's basketball.

The Lady Techsters rushed to a 43-39 halftime lead and never again trailed en route to their 17th victory in 19 games this season.

Five players in double figures led Texas Tech, now 13-6. Sharon Cain had 17, Julia Koncak 15 and Camille Franklin and Lisa Logsdon each had 10 points in giving Louisiana Tech a harder-than-expected homecourt challenge.

Houston guard Ricky Jackson tries to make a shot over the outstretched hands of Texas' Wayne Thomas and Patrick Fairs (33) in the first half of their SWC conference game Saturday night. Texas defeated Houston to remain one game in back of league leading Texas A&M.

Second-half race getting tight in SWC

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The second-half of the Southwest Conference basketball season is under way with Texas A&M still the top dog, but Texas Christian, Texas, and Southern Methodist refuse to go away.

The 8-1 Aggies, who survived a 62-58 scare at Baylor on Saturday night, have defeated all three of their current challengers. A&M's only SWC loss was to Houston.

However, the Aggies still must meet TCU and Texas on the road and SMU at home.

TCU and Texas are in second place with 7-2 marks. Texas drilled Houston 79-63, and the Horned Frogs routed Rice 69-48 on Saturday.

SMU, which outgunned Arkansas 90-80 on Saturday, is alone in fourth place at 6-3 followed by Texas Tech at 4-4, Houston at 4-5, Arkansas at 2-7, and Baylor and Rice, each at 1-8.

It was the first time SMU had swept a season series from Arkansas in 15 years.

Arkansas Coach Nolan Richardson was ejected from the game after receiving three technical fouls.

"In 22 years of coaching, I have never been ejected from a game," said Richardson. "It's depressing."

Richardson, who threw his coat and exchanged unpleasanties with three SWC officials, was slapped with three bench technicals. SMU's Scott Johnson hit five of six free throws that cost Arkansas.

"I had to apologize to our players because it had never happened before," said Richardson. "Things have been disturbing me, but I haven't said anything because it never sounds good to say you were beaten by officials. But I just couldn't take it any more."

TCU will travel to Arkansas on Wednesday night and Texas will be in Fayetteville on Saturday.

In other games Wednesday night, Baylor is at SMU, Texas Tech is at Houston and Rice is at Texas. A&M is idle.

The Aggies came close to being upset before 6,200 fans in Heart O' Texas Coliseum, but guard Don Marbury saved the night with 32 points. He hit two free throws with 38 seconds left and made a dunk with 19 seconds on the clock.

"Baylor will be in the SWC tournament," Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf said. "They are a lot better with their people back."

Forward Darryl Middleton and guard Eric Johnson came back from NCAA suspension for the game.

The Aggies return to play Saturday night at G. Rolie White Coliseum, hosting the fast-improving Mustangs.

Ward resides in Perris, Calif. Sundberg is a resident of Fort Worth, while Harrah lives in Arlington.

Knicks best Lakers on road

By The Associated Press

With all that as gone wrong this season, the New York Knicks were glad to see something go right ... very right.

Sunday night, second-year player Ken Bannister scored 18 points as the Knicks defeated Los Angeles 103-96 and broke the Lakers' three-game winning streak. The Knicks have won three of their last four.

"We're happy to win, especially on the road," Knicks Coach Hubie Brown said. "Despite all the adversity we've had, this team goes out and plays hard every night. When we lose, it's not because we don't put in the effort. This points.

In Sunday's other NBA games, Boston defeated Seattle 114-101, Indiana beat Chicago 131-106 and Dallas defeated Utah 100-97.

"They did it with effort," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "My hat is off to them. New York plays everyone tough. They're not going to beat themselves."

"Bannister is a player a lot of teams think they can back off on," Riley said. "He did the job tonight. He was their main man. There are teams out there who would like to have him."

The Knicks took a 60-58 lead midway through the third quarter, then built it to 81-73. The Lakers never got closer than four points in the fourth quarter, the last time at 100-96 on a sky hook by Abdul-Jabbar with 22 seconds left.

Celtics 114, SuperSonics 101

The Celtics improved their home record to 21-1 with their 11th straight victory, rallying in the third period behind Scott Wedman and Dennis Johnson to beat Seattle. The winning streak is Boston's longest since 13 in a row in January 1981.

The Celtics outscored the Sonics 31-14 in the third quarter, moving from a 63-51 halftime deficit to an 82-77 lead. Johnson scored eight of his 24 points in the period.

Wedman was playing for the injured Kevin McHale for the fifth straight game. He cut his lip in the second period, then returned for the crucial third quarter.

The SuperSonics, who have lost 9 of their last 11 games, were led by Xavier McDaniel's 21 points.

Pacers 131, Bulls 106

Indiana took the lead for good in the first quarter as Steve Stipanovich scored 16 of his 24 points before intermission, and the Pacers won a third straight game for the first time since January 1985. Vern Fleming led the Pacers with 27 points.

The last time Chicago led was 14-13, but Stipanovich hit a jumper with 7:02 left in the first period to give Indiana a lead it would never relinquish. The Pacers went on a 9-1 run as the Bulls went three minutes without a field goal.

The Pacers scored the first six points of the second quarter and ended a 12-3 burst with two Stipanovich baskets and a Wayne Tisdale field goal that put Indiana ahead 47-20. Chicago never got closer than 18 the rest of the way.

Rookie Charles Oakley led the Bulls with 22 points.

Mavericks 100, Jazz 97

After trailing by as many as eight points in the final quarter, Dallas won its fifth in a row with a three-point play by Mark Aguirre and two free throws by Sam Perkins. Aguirre's three-point play with 34 seconds left broke a 95-95 tie. After a basket by Karl Malone pulled Utah within one, Perkins hit two foul shots. Utah's Ricky Green missed a three-point attempt with one second left.

Jay Vincent scored 20 points for Dallas, and Aguirre and Rolando Blackman had 18 apiece. Vincent's 20-foot jumper capped a 20-10 run that gave Dallas a 91-89 lead with 4:01 to play.

Adrian Dantley scored 19 points for Utah.

Blake to retire after loss

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — Lightweight Robin Blake says his loss to Meldrick Taylor may be his last professional fight.

Taylor, of Philadelphia, took a unanimous 10-round decision over Blake, of Fort Worth, here Sunday. It was only the second time Blake had lost two consecutive fights in a 31-fight career.

Taylor weighed in at 135½ pounds while Blake was at 135.

Asked if it might be his last fight, Blake replied, "It may be."

"I've had a good career, said Blake, 23. "I fought with the best and I lost to the best, so I have nothing to be ashamed of."

"I might decide to get out, but who knows? I might try my hand at junior welterweight," Blake said.

It was Blake's first fight since last June 30 when he failed in a bid to unseat Jimmy Paul from his International Boxing Federation lightweight championship.

Taylor, a former Olympic gold medalist, was appearing in his first 10-round fight.

Sean Miller, 17, spins a basketball after practice at Blawhawk High School in Beaver Falls, Pa. recently. Miller, who has been performing a trick ballhandling act at college and pro games since the age of 6, turned down over $100,000 in endorsements so he could retain his amateur status.

Boy Wonder passes up big money

BEAVER FALLS, Pa. (AP) — Sean Miller may be the only 17-year-old in the country who had to give up commercial endorsements and a lucrative professional career just so he could play high school basketball.

A talented showman and ballhandler who can dribble five basketballs at the same time, Miller — as a high school freshman — made an unpaid television commercial for Converse shoes that was shown during the 1984 Olympics.

He appeared on "That's Incredible" and "The Tonight Show," on which he tried, unsuccessfully, to teach Johnny Carson the multiple ball dribble. He had shoe company, breakfast cereal and TV show offers worth an estimated $100,000.

Miller could have signed the contracts, invested the money and been a wealthy young man in a few years, but would have had to forfeit his amateur eligibility. That would have ended his dream of playing college basketball.

"It wasn't a hard decision to make," said Miller, a junior at Blawhawk High School. "The trick stuff gets boring after a while and I've wanted to play in college since I was 6 years old."

That was the age when Miller and his father, John, who is Blawhawk's coach, were just beginning to perfect the ballhandling show that the younger Miller has performed at college and professional games and basketball camps on two continents.

The 6-foot, 154-pounder has little time now for showmanship as he tries to steer Blawhawk, 12-6, into the western Pennsylvania Class AAA playoffs. He plays with an obvious flair and confidence built during years of having a basketball, or two or three, in his hands.

Miller dribbles effortlessly through zone presses, then whips passes into the hands of sometimes unsuspecting teammates. If he is uncontested from even 20 feet away, Miller's shot almost automatically finds the bottom of the basket.

"He doesn't put any mustard on any part of his game, but sometimes he'll dribble behind his back twice bringing the ball up the floor and not know it," his father, 42, said. "Dribbling behind his back for him is like you or me dribbling in front. He can do so many things naturally that someone else would have to work on for years."

"He is probably the finest ballhandler in high school basketball," said scholastic sports writer Dave Krider in a Basketball Times column.

The slender Miller is also an excellent shooter who averages 21 points a game in fewer than 20 shots a game. He quickly is developing into one of the top basketball talents produced in a section of western Pennsylvania better known for such football stars as Joe Namath, Mike Ditka and Tony Dorsett.

"He works on basketball nearly every day," his father said. "We keep a chart and he's shot at least 100 free throws a day for almost 700 days in a row. That's why he shoots more than 90 percent from the foul line."

Miller had visited Japan, Germany and France by his early teens, but he won't be satisfied until his career leads to a college scholarship. The nearby University of Pittsburgh already is interested, as are Boston College, Purdue and Wake Forest.

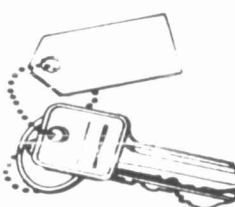

"I watch a lot of games on TV and I know how much better I have to get," Miller said. "I have to get quicker and stronger. I see players who have so much more talent than me, I know I have to play 10 times harder than them just to play on their level."

"There's probably only five days a year I don't play. Sometimes when I'm tired or want to go out at night I wish I didn't play as much as I do, but then I realize how much money a scholarship is worth."

Miller inherited his intensity from his father, but John Miller said he wouldn't have pushed his son unless he wanted pushing.

"I'm very tough on him, tougher than I am the rest of the kids on the team," he said. "Every day of the week I tell him he has to get better. From the third grade on, he's been told, it's not how you do, it's how the team does. He's always put the team first."

Imposter wreaking havoc

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas County grand jury is investigating a case in which a former convict has posed as a Dallas Cowboys player and a former player with the team in order to gain lodging, money, jewelry and sexual favors, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

Authorities told the newspaper the man has posed at times as Cowboys tight end Doug Cosbie, who played in Sunday's Pro Bowl. He has also posed as Doug Donley, a fleet wide receiver whose career ended last year because of an injury.

The newspaper quoted sources close to the three-month investigation as saying the grand jury will decide Tuesday whether to indict the man.

The investigation has been conducted by the National Football League, the Cowboys, and the Dallas County District Attorney's office.

Sources told the newspaper that Larry Wansley, director of counseling services for the Cowboys, and Ben C. Nix, a security representative with the NFL, testified last week before the grand jury.

The man has been identified only as a 220-pound former convict who stands 6-3 tall and is said to be a clever con man.

Nix and Wansley, who met last week with District Attorney Henry Wade and Gerald Banks, a former prosecutor acting as a go-between for the Cowboys, would not comment about the investigation, the newspaper said.

"He (the imposter) walks and talks the part, all I can figure out is he's just a super con man," a source close to the investigation told the newspaper. "He's playing on people's emotions of wanting to rub elbows with a star, a Dallas Cowboy, a celebrity."

The newspaper reported that a hotel in suburban Addison was tricked into extending the man about $5,000 in credit which he used to run up phone, liquor and food bills he never paid.

The man also reportedly tricked a woman he met in a bar into taking him home, where he convinced her his sports connections would get her a good price on a gold coin and some jewelry she wanted to sell. He took the coin and jewelry and never returned them.

In another case, the newspaper reported, the man convinced a Dallas man that he was Donley and had lost his job and his wife and child in a car wreck. The man allowed him to stay a week at his apartment. The man told authorities the imposter obtained the man's credit card number and used it to rent a limousine.

Team officials first became aware of the situation in November when people began calling with complaints that a man, who identified himself either as Donley or Cosbie, had made off with the jewelry, credit cards and automobiles.

"One woman called up and said, 'Would you please tell Doug (Donley) I need my car back,'" a source told the newspaper. "Imagine her shock when she was told he wasn't who she thought he was."

UTSA coach under investigation

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — University of Texas-San Antonio basketball coach Don Eddy, under investigation by a faculty committee for alleged mistreatment of his players, has not been with the team for five days, but school officials say the job is still his.

Athletic Director Jim Skaines declined comment Sunday on Eddy's alleged shoving of a player in a recent game, but he did say Eddy is still head basketball coach at UTSA.

"I really don't know when he'll be back," Skaines told the Dallas Morning News. "We play Grambling (tonight) and UTSA assistant coach Larry Gatewood is the interim coach."

A three-man faculty committee began an investigation last week into Eddy's confrontation with Tyrone Harbin, a freshman from Louisville, Ky., late in a game in Edinburg against Pan American.

Eddy, 47, who has been head coach since UTSA began its basketball program five years ago, failed to show up for the team's practice sessions on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week, then missed the Roadrunners' game Saturday night against North Texas State in San Antonio. Gatewood and two other assistant coaches were in charge.

UTSA lost the game, 72-66, failing to 4-16 for the season.

"He's on vacation. That's the only explanation I was given," UTSA sports information director Fred Battenfield told the Associated Press Saturday night shortly after the game started.

The AP reached Eddy by telephone at his San Antonio home after the game, but he declined to elaborate on the situation.

"I'm making no comments regarding UTSA at this time," Eddy said.

Sunday, he added "I can't comment on anything until the university makes an announcement."

Skaines indicated he has no plans to make an announcement. He met Friday with university president Dr. James Wagener, but said afterward that he would do "absolutely nothing" until he receives the final report from the committee.

Skaines said the investigation was not discussed in his meeting with Wagener.

"I can't discuss it with Dr. Wagener because I don't know anything to tell Dr. Wagener. I don't have the committee's report. When I get the committee's report, I'm going to read it and spend some time studying it," Skaines said.

Several UTSA players went public Friday with complaints against Eddy. They told the San Antonio Light that Eddy — who is active in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes — took away off-campus jobs arranged for them because they failed to attend a special church service over the Christmas holidays.

Senior guard Chuck Johnson, a senior from Los Angeles, said he clashed several times with Eddy and that despite good performance by him, Eddy refused to start him and tried to make him quit the team.

"I don't remember his exact words, but it was something like he's got to get rid of me or make me quit, since I had ... poison in me," Johnson said.

One player, commenting on the condition his name not be used, complained that Eddy disilluminated the team by warning in a pre-game talk at the Great Alaska Shootout tournament earlier in the season that if the starters played poorly they would not stay in the game long.

Gary Payne, a junior guard from Albion, Mich., said Saturday night that the team played more relaxed than usual under Gatewood's coaching. Every member of the team saw action in the contest.

The New England Collectors Society — Presents The American Eagle by George de Lodzia

A magnificent original work in the great tradition of classic bronze sculpture.

- Available in a single, limited edition of 9500 serially numbered sculptures.
- Hand-finished to the rich luster of classic bronze.
- Available exclusively from the New England Collectors Society.

In a special tribute to the symbol of America's freedom and independence, the New England Collectors Society is proud to announce "The American Eagle," a major new work by the acclaimed American wildlife sculptor George de Lodzia.

"The American Eagle" dramatically portrays our national symbol in an exceptionally detailed sculpture of museum quality cold-cast bronze. This modern method captures even finer detail than traditional hot-cast bronze. Each sculpture is individually cast from a special blend of powdered bronze and resins, then hand-finished with a sculptor's patina to the distinctive luster of classic bronze.

Each "American Eagle" will be individually serially numbered and hallmarked. A Certificate of Authenticity will accompany the work. The edition will be strictly limited to only 9500 pieces. Once the edition has closed all molds will be destroyed forever.

At the unusual original offering price of just $95.00 per sculpture, "The American Eagle" is a unique opportunity to begin or add to a collection of bronzes. To reserve this impressive work of art, simply return the reservation application. No payment need accompany your order at this time.

Your satisfaction is guaranteed or you may return your sculpture for a prompt replacement or full refund.

The New England Collectors Society is a subsidiary of Reed & Barton Silversmiths, makers of fine metal products since 1824.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Communicating with as many persons as you can will bring fine results at this time. You can easily garner the data you need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A day when you can gain many benefits by utilizing leads that can bring you a greater income.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are full of energy and inspiration and can accomplish a good day's work and get fine benefits.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Elevate your consciousness if you want to get ahead faster in the days ahead. Confer with advisers who can give you pointers.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be your gregarious self now and see as many persons as you can for whatever your purposes.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get out in the bustling business world and accomplish a great deal. Let a bigwig know of your ability.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she can express own ideas very well and be very interested in all kinds of philosophies of life, so plan to give as fine an education as you can, but be sure to add foreign languages. Much travel is denoted here, mainly for business purposes and the field of sports.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!
