Shultz testifies he knew 'zero' about arms deals

■ Former National Security Council member sketches history of Irans arms deal —7A

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said today the diversion of Iranian arms sale profits to Nicaraguan rebels was an "illegal" activity that he knew "zero" about.

At an extraordinary, nationally televised congressional hearing that delved into the Reagan administration's worst crisis, Shultz also said he was "opposed and very skeptical" about President Reagan's decision to sell arms to Iran. He added that there is evidence that Iranians were involved "at least in some fashion in the most recent hostage-taking" of Americans in Lebanon, well after they received American military arms.

During his two hours at the witness table, Shultz told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that he had fragmentary knowledge of the president's decision to apprrove the arms sale. But when it came to transferring sales profits to the Contra rebels resisting the leftist Sandinista government in Managua, Shultz said, his knowledge was "non-existent."

"My role in that was zero," Shultz said at the hearing at which he pledged complete cooperation with congressional investigators looking into the affairs, as well as with Justice Department investigators.

Shultz was the leadoff witness at the House panel's hearing while the Senate Intelligence Committee called Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for Latin American Affairs, to a closed-door session.

Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., the committee's chairman, said the panel has now received most of the documents it sought in its probe. "There was some creative subpoena serving" over the weekend, he said, declining to provide details.

Asked about Reagan's weekend statement that mistakes were made in the affair, Shultz said, "It was a mistake to get involved in the illegal...funds transfer." He said he didn't want to appear to be speaking as a judge, but added, "From what I have seen and what the attorney general said, some things took place that were illegal."

Shultz said that not only was the diversion illegal, but that it served to confuse American foreign policy toward Nicaragua.

In other disclosures in testimony gien under oath — the first time in 10 years as a Cabinet official that Shultz has been asked to formally swear to tell the truth, the secretary:

— Denied that he had personally appealed to the sultan of Brunei for money to help the Contras. But he did not deny that other State Department officials did so, and said a law against U.S. military aid to the Contra rebels "did not preclude activities of the Department of State to solicit humanitarian assistance."

— Declined to provide a direct response when asked about newspaper reports that Iran was involved in the bombing of the Marines barracks in Lebanon in 1983 in which 231 servicemen were killed. But he said Iran seems to have been involved "at least in some fashion...in the most recent hostage taking" of Americans. Three Americans have been taken hostage in Lebanon since September.

— Said it was "outrageous" if ousted National Security Council aide Oliver North persuaded businessman Ross Perot to post a cash reward for the release of American hostages in Beirut.

A Sunday morning explosion in downtown Fort Worth leveled a row of specialty shops and knocked out windows in surrounding buildings. One person was injured by flying glass.

Gas leak 'probable' cause of explosion

FORT WORTH (AP) — An explosion ripped through a building in the heart of downtown Fort Worth, leveling a row of specialty shops, blowing out windows in a four-block area and terrifying guests at a hotel, authorities said.

A natural gas leak in one of two cafes probably caused the Sunday explosion, which caused an estimated $2 million in damage, said fire department spokesman Butch Hall. In addition to the cafes, the explosion destroyed a print shop, an optometrist's office and a bookstore, Hall said.

A guest at the nearby Worthington Hotel was cut by glass, but no serious injuries were reported after the blast, which occurred about 3 a.m., Hall said.

City crews spent Sunday clearing the rubble off the streets and picked up several tons of glass, Hall said. Two streets remained closed today so damage could be assessed by insurance appraisers, he said.

The casualties might have been higher had the blast occurred at another time, authorities said.

"Two hours before, we had 500 people in the ballrooms," said Worthington Hotel spokesman Tom Weiskopf, pointing to a 30-foot-tall wall of plate glass windows that were blown in.

The blast blew a hole in the roof of a building on Throckmorton Street, across the street from the normally bustling Tandy Center shopping mall.

"Had it happened three hours earlier, I'd hate to think about it," Hall said. "This is a heavily traveled area."

Hall said investigators believe a natural gas leak in a food preparation area caused the explosion. "It's not a suspicious situation at all," he said.

An inspection by Lone Star Gas Co. revealed no problems with mains or service lines in the area, said Hall and company spokesman Breck Harris.

Building walls that remained standing were pulled down Sunday afternoon, leaving a pile of rubble on the north half of the blast site.

U.S. helicopter pilots ferry Honduran troops to Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. helicopters, which ferried Honduran forces to the Nicaraguan border region to battle a weekend incursion by Sandinista troops, have completed their airlift and the fighting has subsided, a White House spokesman said today.

Earlier, a House Foreign Affairs Committee member warned that the airlift, the second of its kind in recent months, risked U.S. involvement in a war in Central America.

But spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters today the unarmed troop carriers kept out of harm's way, steering clear of the border and the area where fighting was taking place.

A statement released Sunday by the State Department said President Reagan, "after consulting with his senior advisers, agreed (Saturday night) to provide the requested airlift support using U.S. military helicopters currently located at Honduras' Palmerola air base, near Comayagua."

Americans were under orders to remain at least 25 miles away, in keeping with congressional restrictions on the use of U.S. forces along the border dividing Honduras, a U.S. ally, from Nicaragua, governed by the leftist Sandinistas, said the spokesman, Gregory Lagana.

Last March, the U.S. helicopters ferried Honduran troops toward the border to thwart an incursion by 1,500 Nicaraguan troops. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said at the time that no U.S. troops stationed in Honduras were involved in the fighting.

The United States provided Honduras with $20 million in emergency aid to help fight the March crossing.

Of this weekend's activity, Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., said, "It raises the risk of American involvement in that war."

Hamilton, appearing on the "CBS Morning News" this morning, added, "Whenever we send American combat forces near that border, the risks are high that an accident or a miscalculation will occur."

But Rep. William Broomfield of Michigan, the ranking Republican member of the committee, disagreed.

"I don't think it's that great of a problem," Broomfield said on CBS. "It's my understanding, talking to senior State Department officials, that our military people are not even going to be close to the border."

Collection of late taxes becoming more difficult

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Even the tax collector cannot escape the effects of an oil bust, which is making it more difficult to get delinquent taxpayers to pay up, reports a law firm collecting for Midland County.

"Our collections are down for Midland. We're not collecting as much now as we have in prior years," said Frank Walker, attorney with the El Paso firm Calame, Linebarger & Graham.

The firm, which today had its two-year contract renewed by Midland County commissioners, has collected late taxes for the county during the past two years, bringing in about $512,497 in penalties, interest and taxes.

With more unemployed and many people leaving town, the collection of the approximately $834,000 in outstanding county taxes has become a challenge, Walker said.

"The main excuse is they're out of work. There's just not money available. We're putting a lot of people on installments," Walker said.

Most late taxes are paid after the firm begins sending the delinquent taxpayers a series of "stern" letters, he said.

However, some cases eventually reach the lawsuit stage.

"When you file a lawsuit, you're dealing with a hard-core delinquent taxpayer. They're just not going to pay," he said.

Former candidate to give teen excess campaign funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vincent Carrafiello lost his bid to represent a depressed region of Connecticut in the House but his campaign can help one teen-ager from a valley that he says is "straight out of Bruce Springsteen" lyrics.

Carrafiello got the go-ahead from the Federal Election Commission last week to establish a trust fund with his leftover campaign treasury of $3,842 for the education of 16-year-old John Sherwin, whose mother committed suicide last June.

Carrafiello, a graduate-level business professor at the University of Connecticut, learned of the youth's plight during his unsuccessful campaign for the Democratic nomination to run against Republican Rep. John Rowland. The boy "kept sticking in my mind" said Carrafiello.

"He is fairly representative of kids in that whole valley area. They have to have just a little bit of encouragement. They do get it on the chin very early in life," he said, describing the Naugatuck Valley as a once bustling industrial haven that has been plagued by factory shutdowns in recent years.

"It's straight out of Bruce Springsteen," he added in reference to the rock singer's songs about ordinary people trying to survive hard times.

The blue-collar region, one of the most depressed in Connecticut, is in the same congressional district as some of the state's wealthiest areas.

Sherwin, a sophomore football player at Derby High School, says he wants to someday have his own heating installation business in the area and will use the campaign money to go to trade school after graduation.

"I'm really glad that he thought about me," he said of Carrafiello. "I appreciate it really a lot."

For just $20,000, you can treat friends to special evening

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — For $20,000 a night, the Fairmont Hotel atop San Francisco's posh Nob Hill has a holiday special just for you and 19 of your very best friends.

For 24 hours, 20 people can bask in the luxury of eight suites, including the famed Penthouse Suite, and enjoy anything legal, said spokesman Russ Alley.

"It's a package," Alley said. "Anything they want. Full scale."

The guests get the entire eighth floor of the original Fairmont and seven suites in the adjoining tower — some 15 rooms — along with the fanciest food they can dream up, butlers, maids, live music, a fleet of Rolls Royces and unspecified other services.

The deal is good through Dec. 31, 1987, but reservations must be made by Jan. 1.

So far, the only taker is a retired corporate executive from Los Angeles, whom Alley declined to identify and who bought a $20,000 night for his wife and 18 friends on Jan. 14.

The Penthouse Suite commands a spectacular view of the city. It usually rents for $5,000 a night and undoubtedly will be the party's centerpiece.

Built in 1918 and offered for $1,000 a month, which these days would rent a fair-to-middling two-bedroom apartment in San Francisco, the suite boasts a richly paneled drawing room, three bedrooms, four baths with gold-plated fixtures, a game room, library, kitchen and a secret passageway.

Presidents, royalty and prime ministers have stood at its windows, enjoying spectacular views of the city.

Rich oak adorns the walls. Thick carpets muffle footsteps. The doors are of Philippine mahogany and hearths are inlaid with detailed lapis lazuli, marble and woods. A contemporary art collection covers the walls. The arched, minareted game room is floored in Persian tile.

The library is a small, round room topped by a dome with a representation of the constellations.

The $20,000 night begins with guests being transported to the hotel in four Rolls-Royces.

That evening, there will be a banquet.

"You meet with any of our international chefs and order anything you want, a banquet for 20 people," said Alley. "Whatever you come up with, we'll serve. And the next morning, it's breakfast in bed for all of them."

— Testified that the U.S. ambassador to Beirut, John Kelly, discussed efforts to free American hostages in Beirut with NSC officials in Washington, but circumvented the State Department in doing so. "I am, to put it mildly, shocked to learn this," Shultz said, adding that Kelly has been ordered back to Washington.

— Disclosed he already has been questioned by Justice Department officials looking into the arms sale and diversion of funds to rebels.

Shultz said he was prepared to cooperate fully with the committee in its probe into the Reagan administration's foreign policy controversy, although he said some information could only be discussed in secret session.

The secretary reiterated President Reagan's statements of the weekend, in which Reagan acknowledged that "mistakes were made" in connection with the decision to seek contacts with moderates in Iran.

But Shultz said the uproar stemming from disclosures of funds transfers to Nicaraguan rebels should not be allowed to uproot the basic foundation of the administration's foreign policy.

"President Reagan is a freedom fighter, and the world knows it, and I stand with President Reagan," Shultz told the panel. " ... Let us show the strength of our free institutions by showing every detail of this Iran episode ...but as we do so, let's keep this country moving ahead" to meet the dangers and challenges in the world.

Shultz said flatly he opposed Reagan's secret arms sale to Iran. "I was opposed and very skeptical about the use of arms" in connection with seeking a new relationship with the government in Tehran. But he said he supported Reagan's overall decision to seek a new relationship with Iran.

But in his opening statement, Shultz said flatly that Iran "continued to believe that terrorism is a legitimate instrument of foreign policy."

"It has been prepared to employ that instrument when and where it suited its needs," he said. "It is in our interest to see that it stops."

Reagan says he approved the sale of arms to Iran to seek a new relationship with the government, and that there was a lessening in Iranian terrorism while contacts were under way. Reagan says he did not know of the diversion of funds to the Contra rebels until Attorney General Edwin Meese III told told him several days ago.

Reagan, at the urging of House and Senate members from both parties, called last week for an independent counsel to investigate the Iran arms sales, which sent up to $30 million to aid Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

That, coupled with his remarks Saturday, had even Democratic critics saying he seemed to be moving in the right direction to deal with the crisis that has seen his popularity plummet in recent weeks according to several polls.

Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., the incoming House majority leader, said Reagan's Saturday speech "sets the right tone for the administration's reaction to the (upcoming) investigations."

Others, including some who have criticized Reagan, echoed the sentiment Foley expressed on the CBS-TV program, "Face the Nation."

"The right strategy is, No. 1, to come up front," said Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C. "The president is moving in that direction. He said yesterday that he thought some mistakes had been made. That's quite a concession."

Republicans went further.

The Republican leader in the Senate, Bob Dole of Kansas, called the president's speech "a big step in the right direction" and predicted "a turn-around" in the political mood.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, a Nevada Republican and confidant of Reagan, also welcomed the president's speech but urged him to go further to "marshall all the forces in the federal government, the FBI and everything else, and get ahead of the information."

"You shouldn't sit idly by in the weeks and months ahead on a Chinese water treatment basis and have these disclosures," said Laxalt, appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Dole, appearing on CBS, cited unidentified sources on the Senate intelligence committee as saying that panel's probe "may have a dry hole there."

The panel, he said, "may have gone about as far as they are going to go. And maybe this isn't such a big, big thing."

Although Reagan talked of mistakes being made, he did not specify who made them, what they were, or when they were made.

Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, in line to become House speaker, said he believed the Iran and Contra connections may have broken several laws, including those that require the administration to notify Congress of clandetine actions and sizeable arms sales and prohibit it from aiding guerrilla movements without congressional approval.

While the congressmen talked, additional details surfaced in a variety of news reports based on anonymous sources:

— The New York Times reported in today's editions that former national security adviser John Poindexter persuaded Reagan to resume arms shipments to Iran after Reagan had decided in December 1985 to end them.

Poindexter argued during a Jan. 7 meeting that resuming sales was the only way to free American hostages in Lebanon, the Times said.

— Newsweek, however, said Poindexter was neutral on whether to resume shipments. The magazine said CIA Director William Casey pushed for the arms shipments at the meeting.

— The Miami Herald reported Sunday that the White House had precise evidence three years ago that Iran ordered and paid for terrorist bombings that killed 258 U.S. servicemen and diplomats in Beirut in 1983.

— Newsweek said Casey solicited contributions of $200 million in 1984 and $240 million in 1985 from Saudi Arabia's King Fahd. The money, Newsweek reported, went to CIA Swiss bank accounts primarily to finance the anti-communist resistance in Afghanistan.

— Newsweek also reported that some money from the U.S.-Iran arms deal went from Swiss accounts to Israel, where it was used to purchase weapons, largely Soviet-made, for the Contras.

— The Washington Post, in today's editions, quoted unidentified informed sources as saying Reagan and his top advisers failed to tell their own secret interagency counterterrorism group they were selling arms to Iran.

Sherwin and his older sister have continued to live with their maternal grandmother in Derby since their mother hanged herself in June after a history of emotional problems.

"She just couldn't cope with everything," Sherwin said in a telephone interview.

The boy's grandparents, Patrick and Ann Sherwin of Bridgeport, are longtime friends of Carrafiello, and they told him about the tragedy.

Patrick Sherwin said the death occurred after his daughter-in-law sought help at a hospital, where she was seen but not admitted.

She was separated from John's father and had reared her two children virtually alone, working at various clerical jobs over the years, her father-in-law said.

"She was a very fine person. She tried so hard...She had such great hopes, and they were shattered so often," he said in a telephone interview.

Carrafiello, who met John Sherwin for the first time during his campaign, said: "I was quite moved by the situation. I missed the wake, didn't even know about the death, until about two or three weeks after it happened."

He said he was campaigning in front of a Derby church when the youth walked up and introduced himself. The meeting shook him, Carrafiello said, because he had felt badly that his busy campaign schedule kept him from the wake.

"He's a very well-mannered kid...He's had a lot of hard punches," Carrafiello said. "I wanted to do what was best for the youngster."

Carafiello checked with the Federal Election Commission to make sure the trust fund complied with laws allowing expenditure of excess campaign funds on "any lawful purpose" except conversion of the funds to the candidate's personal use. The commission said yes.

Carrafiello failed to win enough support at a summer party convention to enter the Democratic primary. Campaign records show he raised a total of just over $7,000.

PILOTS

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., who is chairman of the House Foreign Relations Committee's Western Hemisphere affairs subcommittee, said Sunday that it was "enormously dangerous" for the Reagan administration to involve U.S. forces in the conflict in Central America.

"It can only lead to disaster for the United States," Barnes said. "I hope that they don't make the mistake of getting the United States further involved in the regional war that's going on in Central America as a way of trying to divert attention from the Iran scandal."

Some 700 Nicaraguan soldiers crossed the border into Honduras, according to a U.S. Embassy official in Tegucigalpa, the nation's capital.

The airlift began Sunday afternoon and was expected to conclude sometime today, the statement said. "U.S. helicopters will not be armed and will not approach areas of hostile action," the statement said.

In Nicaragua Sunday, Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto denied that any Nicaraguana troops were in Honduras and claimed instead that U.S. warplanes bombed two Nicaraguan villages Sunday afternoon.

The Nicaraguan Defense Ministry said seven Nicaraguan soldiers were killed and nine wounded in warplane attacks near the headquarters of the First Brigade, about 14 miles southwest of the Honduran border.

"Today Nicaragua has been the object of a series of air bombardments in the northern zone of the country," D'Escoto said during a news conference in Managua. "Everything indicates that the planes that have penetrated our territory and bombed different populations are North American planes."

However, Dan Howard, a White House spokesman, discounted D'Escoto's assertion, saying, "It's not for me to say what's happening. It's for the government in Honduras to say."

EXPLOSION

Weiskopf, marketing director at the Worthington, said windows were blown out in 162 rooms. He also said the explosion shattered a 30-foot glass wall in a ballroom lobby.

"There was no structural damage to the hotel itself," he said.

Hotel guests said they thought a bomb had exploded or a plane had crashed.

"Some people got a hell of a wake-up call," said W.P. White, a hotel guest from San Angelo.

"It was a very loud noise. It would be like a bomb," said hotel guest Ken Truhan of Stevensville, Mich. "I thought this whole thing (the hotel) was coming down."

The explosion blew the windows out of Truahan's 10th-floor room. Shards of thick, smoke-tinted glass lay beside his bed. A heavy window drape shielded him from the fragments.

Firefighters checked all 509 rooms of the Worthington for casualties, Hall said.

"One guy slept through it," Hall said. "He wouldn't answer the door so we beat the door down with an ax. When we got in there, the room was covered with glass. There was glass all over his bed. He wanted to know what had happened."

TAXES

Most people, even of "modest means," make an attempt to pay their taxes, Walker said.

"You'd be surprised how many people of modest means, recognize their obligation to pay taxes, and others — 'fly-by-nighters,' who live really high, don't pay them," he said.

During a 12-month period, Midland County has collected about $344,167 in late taxes, penalties and interest, said Frances Shuffield, tax assessor and collector with Midland County.

About $77,000 of the this money came through interest and penalties, Ms. Shuffield said.

The longer taxes remain unpaid, the higher the interest rates become.

Unpaid taxes from 1985 will draw 23 percent interest and unpaid taxes from 1984 will draw 35 percent interest if they are paid this month, she said.

"It's earning tremendous interest, because sooner or later it's going to be paid by somebody," Ms. Shuffield said.

On Feb. 1 of each year taxes become late and penalties and an interest rate of 7 percent is charged. Each month 2 percent is added to the interest rate up to June, she said.

Also late payers pay the law firm a 15 percent collection fee after June, she said.

Personal property taxes are difficult to collect, because when most businesses leave town, they take the furniture and items taxes are owed on, Walker said.

"When they close businesses, all the inventory is gone or creditors collect it," he said.

Collection on property taxes is more successful because people have to eventually sell the land, Ms. Shuffield said.

"Real estate, you'll get sooner or later," she said.

While it's getting more difficult to collect late taxes, the majority of taxpayers are paying their taxes on time this year, Ms. Shuffield said.

About 59 percent of the '86 taxes were collected by October, she said.

Last year the county collected 95.4 percent of their taxes with 4.6 percent becoming delinquent, Ms. Shuffield said.

"So far we have really been fortunate in what we collect. The people are holding on to what they have and they are paying their taxes," she said.

HOW TO CHOOSE A PLASTIC SURGEON.

Today, you no longer have to live with a nose you hate. Or wrinkles that make you look older than you feel. Or an unflattering figure. Modern plastic surgery can improve these and many other conditions.

If you're considering plastic surgery, you should make sure you select a doctor who is qualified as a specialist in plastic surgery.

Because of the level of expertise needed, a specialist in plastic surgery has completed five to seven years of supervised training. To be a board-certified plastic surgeon, the physician then is required to pass a series of stringent examinations.

However, the average consumer may not know that a doctor can legally claim to be a cosmetic surgeon without specialized training or board certification.

How can you tell?

Check his credentials thoroughly. Is he certified by the American Board of Plastic Surgery? Is he a member of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons? Does he get good references from his patients? Is he listed in the Directory of Medical Specialists? Is he affiliated with an accredited hospital?

Make sure you check before you choose.

Sylvan Bartlett, M.D. is a board-certified plastic and reconstructive surgeon and otolaryngologist. He is a member of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons and the American Academy of Otolaryngology. Dr. Bartlett is a specialist in plastic and reconstructive surgery including hand and microvascular surgery and otolaryngology as it applies directly to problems in plastic surgery.

Texans recall deadly attack at Pearl Harbor

Associated Press

JoAnn Nelson remembers the shaky voice of a radio announcer, John Grady recalls taking cover in a drainage ditch and Dallas city councilman John Evans remembers losing 1,777 shipmates.

These are the memories of Texans who recalled the Japanese bombing of Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941.

Eighteen ships were sunk or damaged, 188 U.S. aircraft were destroyed and 159 others were damaged in the 7:55 a.m. attack. The United States lost 2,403 servicemen, while 1,178 others were wounded.

Some of those killed were shipmates of Evans, who was a 19-year-old gunner aboard the USS Arizona. A 1,760-pound bomb dropped by a Japanese aircraft penetrated the decks of the Arizona and exploded, lifting the entire bow of the vessel from the water, Evans said.

Nineteen of the dead were Evans' friends. Evans, 64, said he has avoided returning to Pearl Harbor since then.

"I couldn't go back," Evans said. "You can be a hard, tough guy all your life, but 45 years later you still feel it. I still dream about it. I keep thinking about all those boys I went through boot camp with. I wonder why I didn't die there, too."

But after 45 years, he decided to make peace with the tragic memories. He planned to join 300 other survivors of the Arizona and their families Sunday for a private memorial to commemorate the 45th anniversary of the Pearl Harbor attack.

John Grady of Austin said he also is grateful to be alive.

Grady was an airplane mechanic stationed at Hickam Field when the Japanese attacked. He was ordered to move three planes during the attack. He moved two safely, but had to jump out of the third when the plane's hydraulics were shot out.

The 69-year-old retired painter said he jumped in a drainage ditch where he and several other soldiers stayed until the attack was over.

"To put it mildly it was mass confusion," said Grady. "It sounded like everything in the world was exploding. It was unreal."

JoAnn Nelson of Wichita Falls, the wife of a state district judge, also remembers thinking the attack was not real. She lived in a Honolulu suburb at the base of Diamond Head on Oahu.

"It was like being in a movie. It isn't really real. It never entered my mind I could be killed," said Mrs. Nelson who was 13 years old at the time.

"My mother woke me up," she said. "It didn't really understand what she was telling me but I could hear the radio. (The announcer's) voice was shaking, but he said to 'keep calm, everybody.'

"We all rushed outside. We were all looking up," Mrs. Nelson said. "We saw six airplanes and we couldn't see who was who. We saw one go down in flames."

When Mrs. Nelson returned to the continental United States, she volunteered as an air spotter and Red Cross worker.

Two killed, three injured in game-room shooting

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Two people were killed and three others wounded when two men with high-powered guns burst into a game room and sprayed bullets into the crowded building.

Four of the victims were shot inside Tam Game Room, located in a mostly Asian neighborhood in this coastal city, and another was shot outside the building Sunday.

A mostly Vietnamese crowd of about 200 people were inside the game room when the gunmen opened fire with what police believe were a shotgun and an M-16 machine gun, said Sgt. Mark Blanton.

Nang Pham, 30, is being treated for shoulder injuries and a concussion, while 20-year-old Dinh Nguyn had surgery on his left forearm at St. Mary Hospital, nursing supervisor Eunice Huhn said today.

"They both had a good night but are still considered guarded," she said.

Another victim, Luan Do, 34, also remains in guarded condition at Park Place Hospital after surgery was performed on his left arm to remove gunshot debris, said Alice Hopkins, assistant hospital director. He also sustained injuries to his back and chest, she said.

The names of the dead men are not being released, said Port Arthur Police Sgt. W.C. Wright.

"It was complete chaos," said ambulance driver Tim Blakeslee. "I went through and checked pulses to see who was alive."

Police were searching Southeast Texas and Southwest Louisiana for three suspects described as young Vietnamese men.

"No one has been apprehended, but we have leads as to who they are," Wright said.

Witnesses told authorities the two gunmen jumped into a light blue 1976 Monte Carlo and a dark 1986 Nissan with out-of-state license plates.

Some onlookers told police the shooting was gang-related, but Wright said, "we have nothing to indictate it was gang-related at this time."

Police believe the attack was intended for one or more of the victims.

Witnesses volunteered information to police, but some had trouble understanding questions because of the language barrier, said Blanton.

The shooting began after the men entered the game room; the first shots killed one man and wounded another, according to information pieced together by authorities.

The gunmen then moved to a lounge at the rear of a billiard room and continued to shoot, killing one man. Another was shot in the kitchen area, officials said.

Christmas spirit alive in death row inmates

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The Christmas cards are not unlike many others that speak of good will toward men and put forth the holiday ideals of hope and love.

But the six artists who drew frisky stallions, snowy scenes, lute-playing angels and fat Santas are atypical. They're death row inmates.

"They were drawn by guys who were condemned to die and are considered worthless and the scum of earth by society," said Lisa Haberman of Houston, a volunteer organizer of the "Holiday Notes" project. "But they are beautiful works of art and show that they have something to offer."

The cards are being sold by Lois and Ken Robison of Burleson, whose son, Larry, 29, is one of the death row artists. The couple organized the shoestring project and had the cards printed.

Ken Robison said almost all of the 1,200 cards that were produced in an initial printing have been sold and another batch will be printed if the orders keep coming in.

Proceeds from the cards sales go to fund HOPE, an anti-death penalty group started by the Robisons. Some of the money is sent back to the artists.

"The margin of profit on the cards is not much," Robison said. "One of the main things is that it gives the guys an outlet for their creativity, something they can be proud of and see in print."

The cards, printed on standard heavy card paper in black-and-white, carry a picture and message on the front with the artist's name and prison number on the back.

One best-seller is the card, "Notes of Hope," by Joseph Starvaggi, featuring a Christmas angel playing a lute. Starvaggi, 34, was convicted of killing a Montgomery County deputy sheriff in his home during a 1976 robbery.

Another is Larry Robison's drawing of two white doves. Robison is awaiting a new trial on a capital murder charge filed in the 1982 slayings of five people near Fort Worth.

"Actually, this may sound a little strange seeing what he's convicted of, but he's always been a gentle person and it (the card project) helps to portray his own personality," Robison's father said.

The artwork gave the condemned men a break from their boring routine, said Billy G. Hughes, 34, whose card featured a stallion tugging open a Christmas package with his teeth. Hughes was convicted in the 1976 shooting of a state trooper.

"You see a lot of art, poetry and writing coming off the row from guys you wouldn't think of as sensitive, artistic types," Ms. Haberman said.

The other artists are Joseph Nichols, 25, convicted of killing a Houston store clerk in 1980; Noe Beltran, 31, condemned for killing a Cameron County saleswoman in 1981; and James Paster, 41, convicted of a 1980 contract slaying in Houston.

Out-of-court settlement costs smelter $20 million

DALLAS (AP) — Expert testimony documenting irreversible brain damage to children who lived near a now-defunct lead smelter led to a secret, out-of-court settlement estimated at nearly $20 million, The Dallas Morning News reported.

In a copyright story Sunday, the newspaper said the settlement was reached in 1985 between RSR Corp., operator of the smelter, and Dallas attorney Frederick M. Baron, who sued in behalf of 370 children.

Almost all of the plaintiffs were disadvantaged blacks who lived in public housing across from the smelter in west Dallas.

The settlement was sealed on order by State District Judge Gary Hall who acted on a request by attorneys in the case.

The News said it confirmed details of the agreement during a five-month inquiry that included interviews with scientific experts in the case, west Dallas residents and public officials.

With interest accruing over the next 30 years, the agreement will funnel nearly $45 million to the children in periodic payments, The News said. Over the life span of the payouts, sources said, the victims will receive between $13,000 and $500,000.

Baron's team of scientists, including a psychologist, a pediatrician and an expert on lead emissions, documented brain damage that already has created learning problems for some of the children and could render them functionally illiterate and only marginally employable for life, The News reported.

RSR officials and Baron were unavailable for comment Sunday. RSR's office was closed and Baron's residential number is unlisted.

The lead smelter was the subject of a series of private lawsuits and investigations by the Environmental Protecton Agency and the Texas Air Control Board in the early 1980s.

The smelter was ordered closed by a state district judge in 1984 after RSR officials refused to comply with a deadline for installing pollution controls. The company had attempted to sell the facility in order to settle a federal antitrust complaint, but had received only an offer of $25,000 for it.

Needy children walk away with new shoes

HOUSTON (AP) — About 3,000 of the neediest students in the Houston Independent School District have been fitted with a pair of shoes.

The children and their parents patiently stood Saturday in a line that snaked around a block for Christmas Shoes for Kids giveaway, sponsored by Adolph Coors Co.

"The kids didn't know what to expect but they all walked away with a smile and a new pair of shoes," said Gail Revis, director of guidance and counseling for the school district. "We're very appreciative to Coors but we really needed more shoes."

The school district was asked to identify the neediest of the 50,000 to 60,000 children enrolled in free lunch programs, she said.

"We could only afford 3,000 shoes this year for Dallas and Houston," Coor spokesman Skip Rogers said. "So I decided to bring all the shoes to Houston based on the level of need here."

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10652 ♡98753 ◇J83 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	Pass	1 ◇
2 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's cue-bid of the enemy suit shows a hand of great power and guarantees at least one four-card major suit. You have already shown abject weakness by passing one club, so now you need not guess which major partner holds—you can have him tell you! Cue-bid three diamonds to make him choose.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A9863 ◇Q92 ♣KQJ72
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—If partner doesn't have a double stopper in hearts, your distributional hand might play better at a suit contract than at no trump. While we appreciate the virtues of telling partner about your fifth spade, we think three diamonds is a more flexible call. It leaves partner the opportunity of showing belated spade support and keeps all options open.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q10762 ♡J854 ◇7 ♣A98
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Pass	Pass	1 NT
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—In the passout seat, partner's one no trump reopening bid can be made on considerably less than in the immediate seat—about 12-15 points. With the equivalent of a no trump opening, he would first double and then bid no trump as cheaply as possible. And if he wanted to hear about your spades, he would have doubled. Therefore, you have reached your best spot—pass.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♡KQJ1072 ◇93 ♣AKQJ5
What is your opening bid?

A.—While you have a powerful hand in trick-taking ability, it is not strong in high-card points enough for a demand bid; should you open two hearts partner, looking at, say, the ace-king of spades and king of diamonds would be entitled to think in terms of a grand slam when even game might not be makable should the opponents maneuver a club ruff. Since you are far too strong for a preemptive four hearts, you must open one heart.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠932 ♡AK9 ◇10762 ♣AJ6
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?
A.—There were days when your hand would have been considered an automatic takeout double. Now, however, wiser heads have prevailed—your hand is better suited to defense than offense. Pass, and see how the auction develops. If it dies early, you can always reopen if that action is indicated.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK63 ♡A93 ◇Q9 ♣J1072
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—While partner's two hearts was the fourth suit and, therefore, did not necessarily promise hearts, his diamond rebid confirmed a red two-suiter. Don't persist with no trump. Since you have already denied holding four hearts, bid three hearts now. If the hand belongs in no trump, partner can still place the contract there.

Rising stars join Reagan in honoring leading lights of performing arts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of America's brash and bright new stars paid tribute to such legendary performers as Ray Charles and Lucille Ball while the Kennedy Center celebrated the winners of the nation's most prestigious artistic award.

President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, on Sunday joined singer Stevie Wonder, actresses Liv Ullman, Sigourney Weaver, Glenn Close and a host of dancers, singers and actors in a tribute to Charles and Miss Ball, as well as the acting team of Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy, violinist Yehudi Menuhin and choreographer Antony Tudor.

Staid patrons of the Kennedy Center clapped and sang along as Wonder pounded out a musical tribute to Charles, a blind musician like himself who he said had been his inspiration.

Included in the musical revue — part of a weekend of gala festivities surrounding the awards — was a rendition of "The Saints Go Marching In" by a jazz brass ensemble known as the "Heavenly Hummingbirds," who were introduced as having been recently discovered playing on a Manhattan street.

Reagan, at a White House reception for the honorees before the performance, lauded the six as having inspired America because they had given of themselves to see "to the deepest needs of the heart."

"We give this evening, this night of honor, to you," said Reagan, his wife at his side in a gleaming, gold lame Aldofo gown. "It's the least we can do for all that each of you have given to us."

Reagan praised Miss Ball, saying: "This red-headed bundle of energy is perhaps the finest comedienne of our time." The president then brought tears to the actress' eyes by offering a tribute to her ex-husband, Desi Arnaz, who died last week.

"After all these years...I still love Lucy," the president added.

The former actor even poked some fun at himself. Remarking on the rave reviews that Menuhin had received as a child, Reagan observed, "I know from experience, good notices don't come that easily."

The White House reception and Opera House performance were part of a weekend of glittering, black-tie events in the nation's capital. The honorees received their beribboned awards at a dinner Saturday night at the State Department.

The program at the Kennedy Center was taped by CBS-TV as a two-hour special for broadcast Dec. 26.

The awards program, set up in 1978, was designed by the center's trustees "to provide deserved recognition to individuals who throughout their lifetime have made significant contributions to American culture through the performing arts."

The weekend's events were a fund-raising benefit for the national cultural center.

— Miss Ball was hailed by the center as an actress who had "ensured her place in television history" with her zany television series, "I Love Lucy." Her portrayal of the good-hearted, trouble-prone Lucy won her four Emmy Awards as best commedienne.

— Charles was cited as "one of the most respected singers of his generation...the pioneer who broke down barriers between secular and sacred styles, between black and white pop," with such hits as "I Can't Stop Loving You" and "You Don't Know Me."

— Miss Tandy and Cronyn were lauded as "the outstanding acting team of our time." The couple, married in 1942, have starred in such Broadway hits as "The Fourposter," "The Gin Game" and "A Delicate Balance."

— Menuhin was termed "one of the world's foremost violinists." The son of Russian-Jewish immigrants, Menuhin was acclaimed early on as an outstanding musician, debuting as a soloist with the San Francisco Orchestra at 8 years of age, and for decades he has continued to charm audiences around the world.

— Tudor was cited as a choreographer who has been one of the single strongest influences in American ballet, with a career "that bridged English tradition with American innovation." Tudor personally helped shape one of the worlds best ballet companies — the American Ballet Theatre.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Barry Mann and Cynthia Weil, who collaborated on hit songs like "You've Lost That Lovin' Feelin'" have earned the National Academy of Songwriters' first Lifetime Achievement award.

Stephen Bishop, Burt Bacharach and his wife Carole Bayer Sager, Brian Wilson and Kim Carnes performed for the 2,000 people who attended the Saturday night ceremony kicking off the academy's "National Songwriters Week."

The event also gave writers whose names aren't as famous as their songs a chance to perform, including Billy Steinberg and Tom Kelly, who wrote Cyndi Lauper's latest hit, "True Colors," and Madonna's "Like a Virgin."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Fans walked through the bedrooms of country music singers Wynonna and Naomi Judd as the mother-daughter duo opened their tour bus for inspection at the American Bus Association convention.

Naomi Judd

"I wouldn't mind being a stowaway," said Julie Brooks of Murfreesboro, who walked through the Judds' bus and other vehicles with her husband and two children Sunday. "We're fans of the Judds, so it was worth the drive."

The Judds' Silver Eagle has two bedrooms. Interior fabrics match the exterior's dusty rose color, and appointments include televisions, stereo, plush carpeting, skylights and indirect lighting.

The Judds' band members and others travel in a second bus equally as plush but arranged differently. It was also on display.

The Judds' vehicles and 17 other buses worth more than $4 million were at Buscade 1986.

Get to the truth

Oliver North and John M. Poindexter took refuge in the Fifth Amendment in their testimony before the Senate Intelligence Committee. The Constitution shields citizens from questions that may lead them to incriminate themselves.

But observers in Washington say they have a hard time remembering the last time an active duty admiral and lieutenant colonel took the Fifth Amendment before a congressional committee.

Naturally, that decision raised more questions than it resolved. Are Poindexter and North remaining silent to protect themselves? Or are they also shielding others higher up in the government? There have been no indications of such, of course, but if the involvement of others exists, the public has the right to know it.

There's only one way to find out. North and Poindexter should be granted immunity from prosecution and brought back for questioning under oath.

Why should they testify?

Because as officers of the armed forces and as patriotic Americans, they have sworn allegiance to the American flag and to the nation for which it stands — not to their superiors.

Perhaps Poindexter and North sold arms to Iran and ran guns to the Contras without the knowledge of their superiors. Perhaps they alone are to blame for this foreign policy mess and domestic political crisis. If so, granting immunity would be to leave those responsible unpunished.

But they have already lost their jobs and had their reputations tarnished. The goal of the inquiry is not to lynch people but to find out where our democracy was subverted in its foreign policy. In that way, it can be hoped that the same mistakes will not be repeated by future administrations.

Immunity from prosecution doesn't mean immunity from revelation. As Vice President George Bush said, "If the truth hurts, so be it. We must take our lumps and move ahead."

He's right. The Senate must proceed with its investigation.

Another View:

Protection from porn

A 7-year-old in Nevada dialed an advertised number to talk to Santa Claus and got a dial-a-porn recording instead. The mix-up occurred because a Santa number being advertised in nearby Utah was the same number as the dial-a-porn service in Nevada. The incident dramatizes how difficult it is to protect children from pornography.

Even if all the producers of pornography in America were put out of business tomorrow, there would be a residual collection of millions of pornographic videotapes, magazines, films, photos and books.

In an amazingly short period of time, about 15 years, the United States has been inundated with pornography. This in spite of laws against pornography still on the books in many states, and that the FBI still seeks indictments of porn producers and distributors.

Contrary to a notion popular in some quarters, the First Amendment does not provide "free speech" protection for pornographers. The Supreme Court has established guidelines that permit cities and states to pass and enforce laws against obscenity. The court has also established the right of cities and states to prohibit pornography depicting children.

Nevertheless, the war against pornography is not being won. Elected and appointed officials in most parts of the country seem indifferent. Omaha is an exception. Pornographic book stores and X-rated movie houses have been more or less eliminated within the city limits, as is the case in a few other cities, such as Cincinnati.

Now, however, videotape equipment has made the taping of pornographic subjects virtually impossible to prevent. This kind of homemade pornography is a problem even in such countries as New Zealand, which bans most imported X-rated material.

With pornography a relatively permanent part of the cultural landscape, parents will have to face the fact that, sooner or later, their children will be exposed to pornography that was unthinkable when their parents and grandparents were growing up. Puritanism, historically a kind of protection, has given way to permissiveness. Even in a permissive age, however, two important weapons are available to parents. They are a firm moral code and sensible sex education.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Dec. 8, the 342nd day of 1986. There are 23 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 8, 1941, the United States declared war against Japan, one day after the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. In asking Congress to declare war, President Franklin D. Roosevelt said Dec. 7, 1941, would be a date that "will live in infamy."

On this date:

In 1776, during the American Revolution, George Washington's retreating army crossed the Delaware River from New Jersey to Pennsylvania.

In 1863, President Abraham Lincoln announced his plan for the Reconstruction of the South.

In 1886, the American Federation of Labor was founded at a convention of union leaders in Columbus, Ohio.

In 1949, the Chinese Nationalist government moved from the Chinese mainland to Formosa as the Communists pressed their attacks.

In 1966, the United States and the Soviet Union agreed to a treaty to prohibit nuclear weapons in outer space.

In 1978, former Israeli prime minister Golda Meir died.

In 1980, rock star John Lennon was shot to death outside his New York City apartment building.

In 1982, a man demanding an end to nuclear weapons threatened to blow up the Washington Monument. After a 10-hour standoff, Norman D. Mayer was shot to death by police; it turned out he had no explosives.

Ten years ago: The United Nations General Assembly re-elected Kurt Waldheim Secretary-General by acclamation, one day after he had won the endorsement of the Security Council.

Five years ago: Three hijacked Venezuelan airliners landed in Havana, Cuba, where the gunmen were taken into custody. Meanwhile, a hijacked Libyan jetliner traveled between Beirut, Athens, Rome and Tehran. The Libyan plane's hijackers surrendered two days later.

One year ago: Pope John Paul II closed a two-week Synod of Bishops in Rome with a Mass and homily.

Today's birthdays: Entertainer Sammy Davis Jr. is 61. Actor-director Maximilian Schell is 56. Comedian Flip Wilson is 53. Rock singer Gregg Allman is 39. Actress Kim Basinger is 33.

Thought for today: "Hatred comes from the heart; contempt from the head; and neither feeling is quite within our control." — Arthur Schopenhauer, German philosopher (1788-1860).

Mandate Syndrome felled Reagan

NEW YORK — The Greeks had a word for it, which can be loosely translated as "wanton ... arrogance resulting from excessive pride." In our more scientific time, it might be called the Mandate Syndrome, and Ronald Reagan has become the fourth president of the modern era to be felled by it.

Tom Wicker

Presidents elected by overwhelming margins, that is, slip easily into the belief that the public supports them so strongly that it will accept any policy or approach they may espouse; and that if questions arise, a few calming words will set things right.

Presidents, moreover, are surrounded by staff assistants eager for presidential favor and happy to encourage the syndrome — which also means greater presidential receptivity to these aides' own schemes, crack-brained or otherwise. Thus, one White House assistant happily claimed at the time that Reagan had been "liberated" by his 1984 landslide. From what, the aide neglected to say; but now he knows what history could have taught him:

— Franklin Roosevelt carried every state but Maine and Vermont in 1936, but his triumph caused him to believe that he could get away with the Supreme Court "packing" plan that nearly wrecked his second term.

— Lyndon Johnson won what was in 1964 a record percentage of the vote, and fantasized as a result not only that the public would support both an enlarged war in Vietnam and the Great Society, but that neither would require a tax increase.

— Richard Nixon whipped George McGovern by an even greater margin in 1972, and so was able to view his mandate as more than sufficient to justify "stonewalling" a "third-rate burglary" at the Watergate.

The Iran-Nicaragua fiasco seems just as certainly a consequence of the 1984 landslide and of Reagan's phenomenal scores since then on the popularity charts. How could such a leader be brought down, no matter what chance he took? Who was there to tell him no?

Reagan's punishment may not be so harsh as Nixon's, though the misdeeds inherent in the current scandal — flirting as they do with real national security — seem considerably more serious than most of the Watergate offenses. But with two years to go in his second term, the consequences for the Reagan administration will be severe.

Even before the fall, even before the Democrats took over the Senate, Reagan's military buildup had come to a probable end, owing to the federal deficit and to public resistance to military spending at the expense of domestic programs.

Nor can he hope to muster now — when he couldn't before — the necessary congressional support for such cherished goals as a constitutional amendment to force a balanced budget, or one to permit prayer in the schools, or a line-item veto, or school vouchers. And if the economy turns down, as seems possible, he may no longer have the capacity to persuade the public that he bears no responsibility.

In foreign policy, Reagan's heedless fling into covert action seems sure to be equally punished. Any chance he may have had to oust the Sandinistas and install a hand-picked regime in Managua, without the use of U.S. forces, is gone with Colonel North. And what becomes now of the vaunted "Reagan Doctrine" of assisting so-called "freedom fighters" around the world? What possibility is there now that he can have useful influence in South Africa?

In the Middle East, where the administration started out boldly with Al Haig's vision of a "strategic consensus," the situation is even more muddled than it was after Reagan pulled the Marines out of Lebanon — his most serious, if often overlooked, previous setback. Even the Israelis seem baffled and not a little miffed at what passes for U.S. policy in this crucial area, which now offers virtually no hope for diplomatic achievement.

As for arms control, the subject that even after the Iceland summit meeting seemed to offer Reagan the best hope of accomplishment, the Russians may now consider him too weakened for the possibility of a major agreement. If sufficiently humbled, however, by the ill effects of the Mandate Syndrome, the president might be able to scale down his arms control approach to the level of a small but useful agreement — a tenuous prospect, but worth discussing in another article.

'Miss Manners' won't hold power in Manila

Philippines President Corazon Aquino is not likely to remain the Philippines president.

Disregarding the gaga-analysis of those Americans who think the rules of statecraft are the same as the rules for a dinner party, Aquino has demonstrated that she doesn't know how to govern.

Charley Reese

She is, of course, only a figurehead anyway. She was a convenient focus for a coalition of anti-Marcos groups that included the church, the military, the democratic socialists, the oligarchical families Marcos had offended economically and the U.S. government. Without the army and the U.S. government, she would never have made it to the presidential palace.

Even though she is a figurehead president, if she had had the smarts, she might have consolidated her power. But she has shown that she has no grasp of power and how to wield it. Her chief value now is that the U.S. government likes her.

If she were a student of history, she would know that since World War II being liked by the U.S. government has often resulted in death or exile. She should remember that the U.S. government was very fond of her predecessor, Ferdinand Marcos. America's enemies seem to thrive better than its allies.

Some of the principles of statecraft Aquino has violated are these:

People overthrowing what they view as an oppressive regime always expect more benefits than they will get. A wise leader, knowing this, moves swiftly to consolidate power before the people become disaffected. She has not done this.

The economic problems of the Philippines require long-term solutions. Wealthy families, such as her own, might receive short-term benefits by simply shifting the patronage from the Marcos elites to the anti-Marcos elites. But there are not many goodies available to the common people in the short term.

A wise leader will either treat opponents well or crush them. Aquino has treated the former Marcos supporters badly — she ousted elected officials, for example — but she has not crushed them. She has forced Juan Ponce Enrile, her former defense minister, out of the cabinet but she has not discredited him. On the contrary, she is now doing what he had been urging her to do, which is to get tougher with the communists.

To keep the army with her, she will eventually have to unleash it against the communist insurgents. This will alienate her leftist, pacifist factions both in the Philippines and in the United States. If she refuses to let the army fight, the army will overthrow her.

The army knows that the communists will not lay down their guns. The communists view negotiations as war tactics and cease fires as opportunities to resupply and position their forces. Aquino does not appear to understand this.

Moreover, the communists have a specific objective, power, and a specific plan for accomplishing their objective while Aquino has neither — except a rather vague notion of somehow creating, with good intentions, a happy-happy land.

Aquino's choice, which she appears determined to avoid, is fighting a successful civil war with all the hardships that involves or losing power to the communists.

The United States, which is no better at statecraft than Aquino, also faces an eventual choice in the Philippines — either support a strong, probably military government or watch the Soviet fleet sail into Subic Bay.

That many Americans prefer fantasy and happy-happy talk about nice people and democracy and peaceful resolution of conflicts will not alter one jot the reality in the Pacific.

The world plays by the rules of Machiavelli, not those of Miss Manners.

Shultz's cheerleading won't appease Nancy

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George Shultz, the only senior administration official publicly critical of Ronald Reagan's decision to send arms to Iran, raised eyebrows at Wednesday's Cabinet meeting by turning himself into a self-appointed cheerleader for the president.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Before Reagan entered the room, Shultz went from one Cabinet member to another, suggesting how nice it would be if they greeted the president with applause when he walked in. Once the applause ended, Shultz himself took the floor to tell Reagan that the Cabinet fully approved his handling of the crisis and that it was now time to turn to other matters.

Shultz's performance unfavorably impressed White House staffers and Cabinet members. "I thought he was grandstanding," one Shultz colleague told us. Reagan kept his reaction to himself, but Shultz's grand gesture appeared unlikely to appease Nancy, who was deeply upset by the secretary's earlier nonsupport.

DEAVER'S RETURN

Returning to comfort the president in the Iran arms crisis was ex-White House aide Michael K. Deaver, disheartening backers of former national security adviser William P. Clark to replace Donald T. Regan as White House chief of staff.

Deaver's frequent phone talks and personal visits to the White House, while under investigation by a federal special prosecutor, carried no implications of any return to full-time duty. But it served to remind presidential intimates that his clout with Reagan remains largely intact.

That means Deaver's weight will probably be added to Nancy Reagan's against any move to bring Clark back to the Oval Office if the president accedes to GOP demands that Regan be sacked. Deaver and the first lady ended Clark's brief stint as the national security adviser four years ago.

INTELLIGENCE WARS

Before being forced out as national security adviser, Adm. John Poindexter ordered Gen. William Odom, chief of the National Security Agency (NSA), to "cut out" both Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Secretary of State George Shultz from his agency's secret communications and intercepts on Iran.

Weinberger counterattacked against Odom, most of whose budget is obtained from the Pentagon. Weinberger warned that if he was not immediately restored to the select list of officials entitled to secret information, he would cut NSA's budget forthwith. Odom capitulated.

Shultz was left high and dry. But, his critics say privately, getting shut off from information did not really bother him. It supported his claimed claim of deniability — that he hardly knew the plan he had opposed was being carried out.

ANOTHER CIA DISGUISE

The CIA outfitted Lt. Col. Oliver North with disguises to conceal his identity on secret, highly-sensitive missions abroad, a throwback to Watergate days when the CIA performed similar services for at least one of the Watergate burglars.

That suggests to congressional investigators that the CIA had more inside information about the Iranian-contra arms connection than acknowledged so far.

Buttressing that suspicion is an incident in the heated struggle early this year before then-CIA counsel Stanley Sporkin was confirmed as federal judge. North tipped key senators that Sporkin had been extremely helpful with Nicaraguan contras.

CAP'S VETO

Any hope Navy Secretary John F. Lehman might be named President Reagan's national security adviser died when his boss, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, exercised an absolute veto.

Conservatives boosting Lehman to replace Adm. John Poindexter felt they had turned Attorney General Edwin Meese III from opposition and that White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan would not persist against Lehman. But Weinberger had clashed with Lehman over his demands for a 600-ship Navy. Worse for Lehman, the defense secretary suspected him of planting Weinberger retirement stories in the media to open the way for Lehman to get the job.

A footnote: Regan played no major role in the selection of ex-Deputy Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci, who was vigorously recommended by Weinberger. White House aides grumble that in the haste to name Poindexter's successor, the recent failure of a Sears international division under Carlucci received insufficient attention.

Govs. Dick Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, left, John Sununu of New Hampshire, center, and Thomas Kean of New Jersey, commented on the Iran arms deals crisis during the Republican Governors Association meeting being held in Parsippany, N.J.

Governor: GOP will be judged by how arms deal crisis handled

PARSIPPANY, N.J. (AP) — Republican governors, concerned about the political fallout from the Iran-Contra controversy, are counting on President Reagan's promise of full disclosure to minimize damage to the GOP.

As the chief executives gathered Sunday for their annual three-day meeting, host Gov. Thomas H. Kean told a news conference that "something like this obviously isn't helpful to the party in power."

Kean said the Republican Party "is going to be judged by how it now handles it...We'll find out as time goes on exactly what has been going on, who's been doing what and we'll put it all on the table."

After a day devoted primarily to social activities, the governors settle down today to formal sessions with Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, a former White House chief of staff, as the keynote speaker.

But politics dominates the agenda with a discussion of the impact of the 1986 elections and the future of the GOP scheduled for today.

That future was abruptly clouded by the recent disclosures of secret arms sales to Iran and channeling of money to the Contra forces fighting to overthrow the leftist government of Nicaragua.

The disclosures were followed by a sharp drop in Reagan's standing in the polls.

The president has endorsed appointment of an independent counsel and has pledged to cooperate with congressional investigations.

However, two former White House officials — Adm. John Poindexter who resigned as national security adviser, and Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, who was fired from the NSC staff — refused to answer when questioned by the Senate Intelligence Committee last week.

The GOP governors, who increased their numbers by eight in the elections last month, had anticipated a political celebration at their meeting. Instead, they were bombarded with questions about the potential impact of the Iran-Contra disclosures.

"Any one want to talk about education?" Gov. John Sununu of New Hampshire, chairman of the GOP governors, asked at a news conference.

No one did.

Instead, Sununu was asked about the scheduled appearance Tuesday by former President Nixon who lives in nearby Saddle River.

Sununu said Nixon's appearance was "a good opportunity to hear from someone who was there and probably wishes he had a chance to do it over again and I can't think of anybody who would have a stronger understanding of how it ought to be done right."

The Iran-Contra affair is being compared by some to the Watergate scandal that led to Nixon's resignation.

Most governors were reluctant to assess the impact of the disclosures troubling the Reagan administration.

"It's far too early to express any judgment on what the effect will be," said Gov. Richard Thornburgh of Pennsylvania.

Ex-official sketches arms deals history

By HARRY ROSENTHAL

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — In 1982, a diplomat at the Soviet embassy in Iran defected to Britain, and the resulting ripple effect set the United States on its path to today's headlines, a former National Security Council staff member says.

When Vladimir Kuzichkin, a Soviet vice consul in Tehran, arrived in London that October, a newspaper trumpeted: "One of Russia's top spymasters has fled from the KGB to England."

Gary Sick who manned the Iran desk in the National Security Council during the Iranian revolution and the U.S. hostage crisis, says Kuzichkin — a former KGB major — was full of information and was debriefed by the CIA.

Eventually, the information was passed back to Iran, which was so upset by Soviet activities in Iran as described by the defector that it dissolved Tudeh, the country's communist party, and expelled 18 Soviets.

"This was the first major contact since the revolution and proved there were areas of mutual interest," Sick told journalists and scholars last week at the American Enterprise Institute. "It proved that intelligence contacts obviously were beneficial to both sides."

"The United States had won the overthrow of the Tudeh party," said Sick, but there was fear "they would come back." A CIA memo in May of 1985 warned the administration that the United States was falling behind the Soviets in Iran. At the same time Iran received 60 Soviet missiles, which it used against targets in Iraq, he said.

Sick, the author of "All Fall Down," a major work on Iran, stressed his information came only from public sources. He then sketched this diplomatic history:

When Iran came under heavy Iraqi air strikes in early 1985, the stage was set for a new open-door policy by mid-year. By then, Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, a National Security Council aide, had a gun-running operation in place in Central America that could be deployed anywhere.

Saudi Arabia's Prince Saud visited Iran in May 1985 because the Saudis perceived the country was prepared to open to the rest of the world in ways not seen before and the May-June period "was quite important as a psychological turning point."

Israel had sent arms to Iran much earlier but was rebuked by the Reagan administration and quit. However, in July 1985 the NSC debated how the United States could establish relations in Iran.

"The pitch was made (by Israel) that 'if you want to be taken seriously, arms is the currency," said Sick. "Israel said it was in a position to manage it."

Robert MacFarlane, then national security adviser, took that advice to Reagan, who said he was interested in making contact, but opposed direct arms sales.

Israel sent a shipment in 1985 and a second shipment, which included U.S. arms. "That flight went in mid-September and that day the Rev. Benjamin Weir was released," Sick said. "It established that arms delivery was one way" to get hostages free.

In November of last year, a third shipment was sent to Iran and included old, outdated material. Iran turned that down and it was returned to Israel.

On Dec. 4, 1985, MacFarlane retired. Two days later, a meeting in the White House discussed whether there should be arms sales. On Dec. 7, MacFarlane flew to the Middle East.

"At the same time, Khomeini made an interesting speech," Sick said. "He said 'we do not want to live in a country which is isolated from the rest of the world.'"

On Jan. 7 there was another full scale review in the White House on the question of U.S. arms sales to Iran. Secretary of George Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger are known to have argued against that. CIA director William Casey was for it and drafted a "finding" for the president that was signed by Reagan 10 days later.

"At that point, North and Poindexter came together with the CIA," Sick said.

On Feb. 2, two planeloads of arms went from the United States to Iran. The Israelis decided to send their shipments by sea. On May 28, MacFarlane flew into Iran with a planeload of arms.

As is often the case between governments, the arrangements had been cemented: All American hostages would be released before MacFarlane's arrival and he was to open high level discussions with Iranian leaders. "Neither happened," said Sick.

By July 4, another planeload of arms went into Iran and soon after, the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco was released. In September, at least one more U.S. shipment went to Iran.

"So what?" asked Sick. "What difference did all this make. It's a great story, but is it going to have an affect on long term relations with Iran?" He answered his own question: "It's too early to tell."

Sick said contrary to reports, the arms shipment dealings were not at low levels of the Iranian government. "The president, the speaker, the chief justice of the Supreme Court and Khomeini's son...those people were involved at various stages of this operation," he said.

In all, said Sick, 5,500 tons of arms went to Iran between May and November of this year. Their total value, he estimated, was between $500 million and $1 billion.

Hart trying to trim debt before next campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Gary Hart moved back to Colorado to plan a 1988 presidential bid, he took home a $2.4 million momento of his unsuccessful 1984 run for the White House.

That is what is left of his campaign debt, more than two years after he lost the Democratic nomination to Walter F. Mondale.

As the retiring Colorado senator ponders another bid for the presidency in 1988 — and there is little doubt he will run — the old debt remains a reminder of the past at a time candidates would rather look to the future.

"Absolutely, anytime you start a campaign when you've got to pay off an old debt it's always difficult," said Bill Carrick, political director for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who lost a presidential bid in 1980. "And $2 million is a serious amount of money to raise."

Hart ended his 1984 bid $4.7 million in the hole and his finance people have slowly whittled it down to about half that amount, most recently raising about $100,000 with a series of 50th birthday parties for him. Tonight, a lavish $1,000-per-person party is expected to draw several hundred people with the proceeds going toward the '84 debt.

"It is a sizable sum clearly. It has in fact taken longer to pay off than we had expected," Hart's press secretary, Kevin Sweeney, said of the debt.

But he added, "For an '88 campaign the ('84) debt does not have to be paid off. He can just go and start another committee and start raising money."

And that is precisely what Hart intends to do. The 1984 debt will take a back seat to fund-raising for 1988 once his campaign begins in earnest next year. Hart, the acknowledged Democratic front-runner, is expected to announce his candidacy in late winter.

Presidential campaign debts in modern times have taken years to pay off. Hubert H. Humphrey and Edward Muskie both took a decade to even up their debts from failed presidential bids. And Hart is not alone among failed 1984 candidates who still have debts: Ohio Sen. John Glenn still owes $2.8 million, California Sen. Alan Cranston $641,000, the Rev. Jesse Jackson $67,500, and South Carolina Sen. Ernest Hollings $10,000.

But of those others, only Jackson is contemplating another presidential race and his debt is peanuts compared to Hart's.

"I don't think it's a prohibitive barrier to '88. It just makes things a little more complicated, a little awkward," Carrick said, adding that individual creditors may pop up during the campaign and embarrass the candidate by pointing out that they hadn't been paid.

Deaths may be linked to halted oxygen supply

DENVER (AP) — Two babies died after oxygen to critically ill infants at Children's Hospital was interrupted, apparently deliberately, police said.

"All I can say is somebody entered that area and turned it off," Detective John Wyckoff said Sunday. A lever-type valve controlling the oxygen supply was closed Nov. 29 by someone who apparently used considerable effort and pressure.

Authorities are trying to determine whether the infants died because valve was closed on the fresh oxygen supply.

Public TV station to offer money back guarantee

OWINGS MILLS, Md. (AP) — Raymond K.K. Ho believes so strongly in the future of Maryland Public Television despite gloomy times in the rest of the industry that he's offering a money-back guarantee to contributors.

The network will give a full refund to any member who "feels that we have reneged on our promises," the new executive director of MPT said last week as he unveiled a plan to expand programming for the 50,000 familes who watch Maryland's six public stations.

MPT, which holds a fund-raising drive this month, will be the first public TV network to offer short pieces of breaking news and weather during prime time, Ho says. It also will have tidbits of information in such areas as fitness, health, dieting, parenting, investment, taxes, job search and coping with stress.

The expansion of services comes at a time of retrenchment for much of public television.

"I am the only person who is totally optimistic about the future," Ho says. "Either I'm totally wrong or my colleagues are wrong. If I'm right, I'm going to change the way this industry does business."

The 35-year-old Hong Kong native, who stepped into the job in October after heading Arkansas Educational Television, wants to make Maryland Public Television — which operates on a budget under $16 million — more responsive to the consumer, and to shatter its image as elitist and dull.

Ho speaks idealistically about attacking social evils and eradicating political apathy through the television screen.

He announced plans, for example, to broadcast phone-in programs with state leaders and for theme weeks devoted to such issues as teen-age drug abuse, pregnancy and crime.

"It's a sad statement on democracy that half the people don't vote," he said. "The majority don't read the newspaper. I think a state network like this could put politicians closer to the people they serve."

Cooler weather is in store for Midland-area residents, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The NWS is calling for the high on Tuesday to reach only into the middle 40s under cloudy skies.

The overnight low is expected to dip into the middle 30s and, under cloudy skies, there is a 20 percent chance of rain. Winds will be out of the south tonight at 10-15 mph, but will shift to the north. On Tuesday, winds will be out of the northeast at 10-15 mph.

STATE

A cold front stalled over Central Texas today bringing chilly temperatures and heavy rain, prompting flash flood watches in eastern North Texas.

Snow expected late Sunday and early today never materialized, but weather officials were expecting light snow to dust the Panhandle during the night.

Light drizzle and fog covered a large section of North Texas and patches of freezing rain were occurring in the southwest Texas Panhandle.

The storms were moving northeast at about 30 miles an hour.

Storms also developed in Central and East Texas ahead of the front while other isolated rainshowers dotted parts of Southeast Texas and the Rio Grande Plains.

Scattered showers and a few thunderstorms spread across the South Plains.

Winds were blowing from the north and the northwest behind the front.

In the forecast, rain should end in the state Tuesday.

NATION

A southwestern storm spread rain and some snow today across the mountains of Arizona and New Mexico, while snow and snowshowers spread from the Plains to northern New England.

Snowshowers were reported this morning from central Kansas across southern and eastern Nebraska to central Iowa. Four inches of snow were on the ground at Beloit, Kan., with an inch at Concordia, Kan., and Omaha and Norfolk, Neb.

Snowshowers also were reported across northern Minnesota, the upper Great Lakes, the northern mountains of Pennsylvania, western and upstate sections of New York state and northern New England.

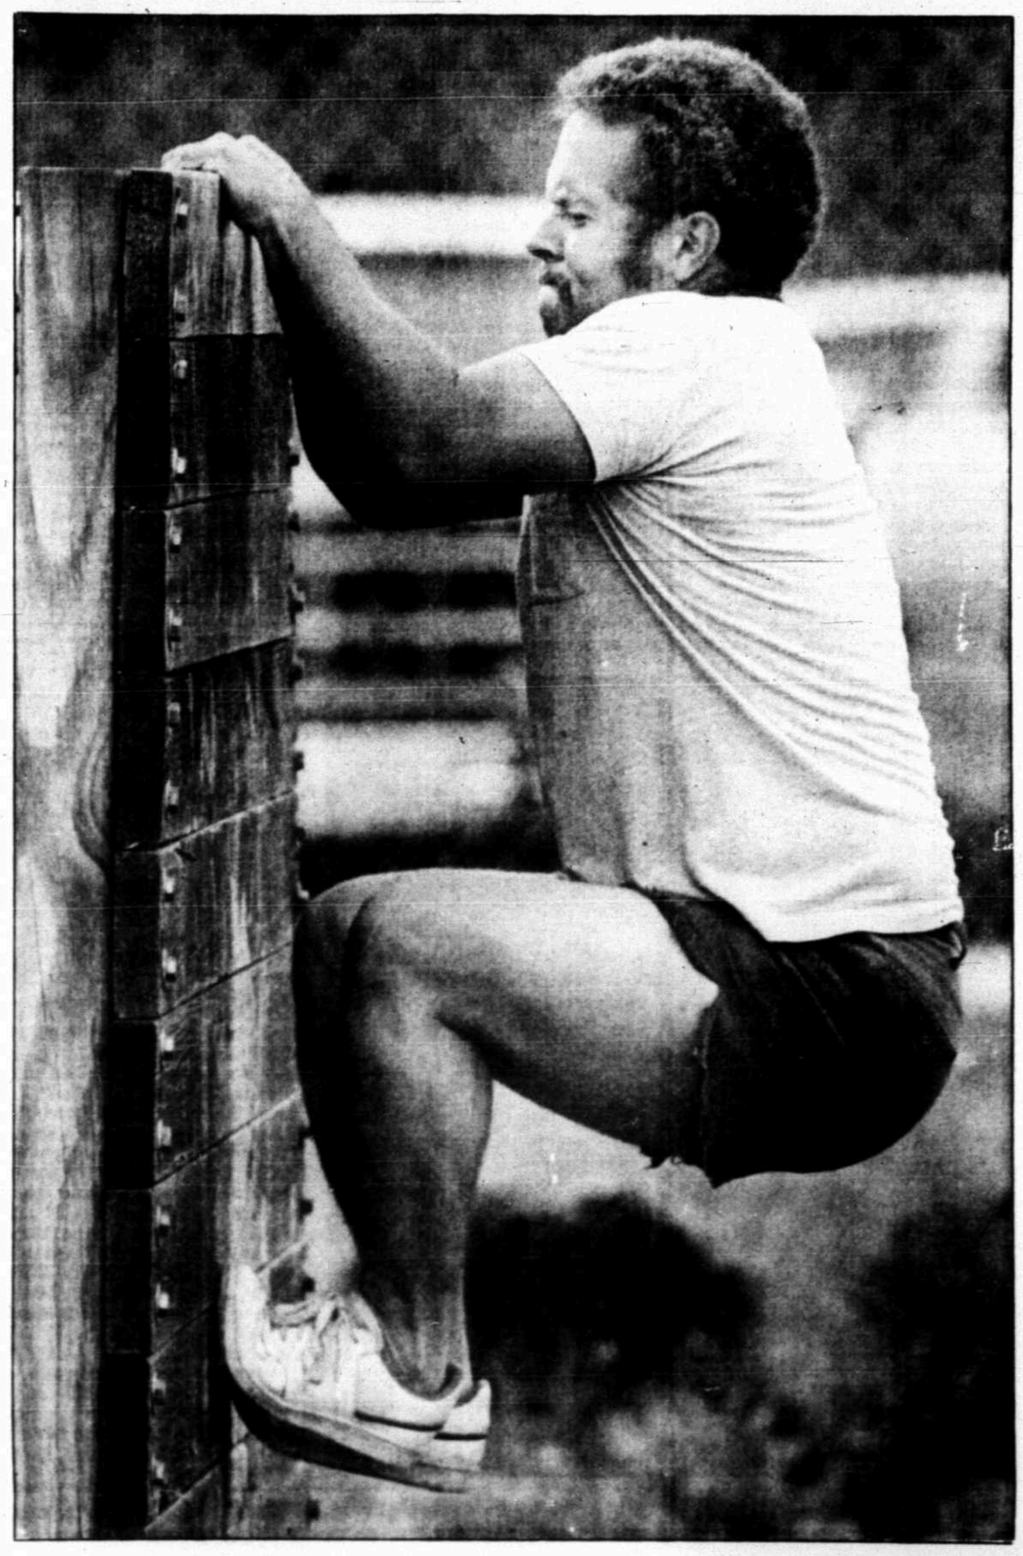
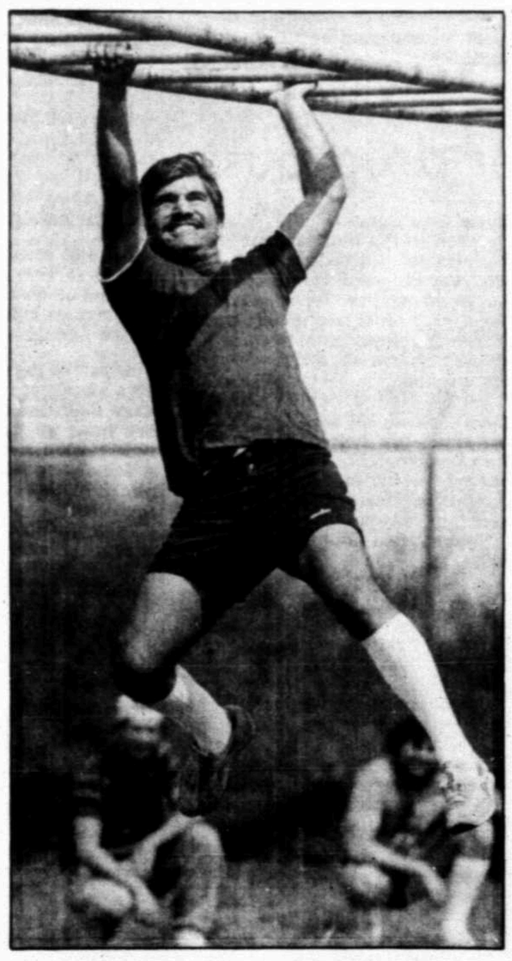
Climbing the ladder to success

Text by Patrick Crimmins

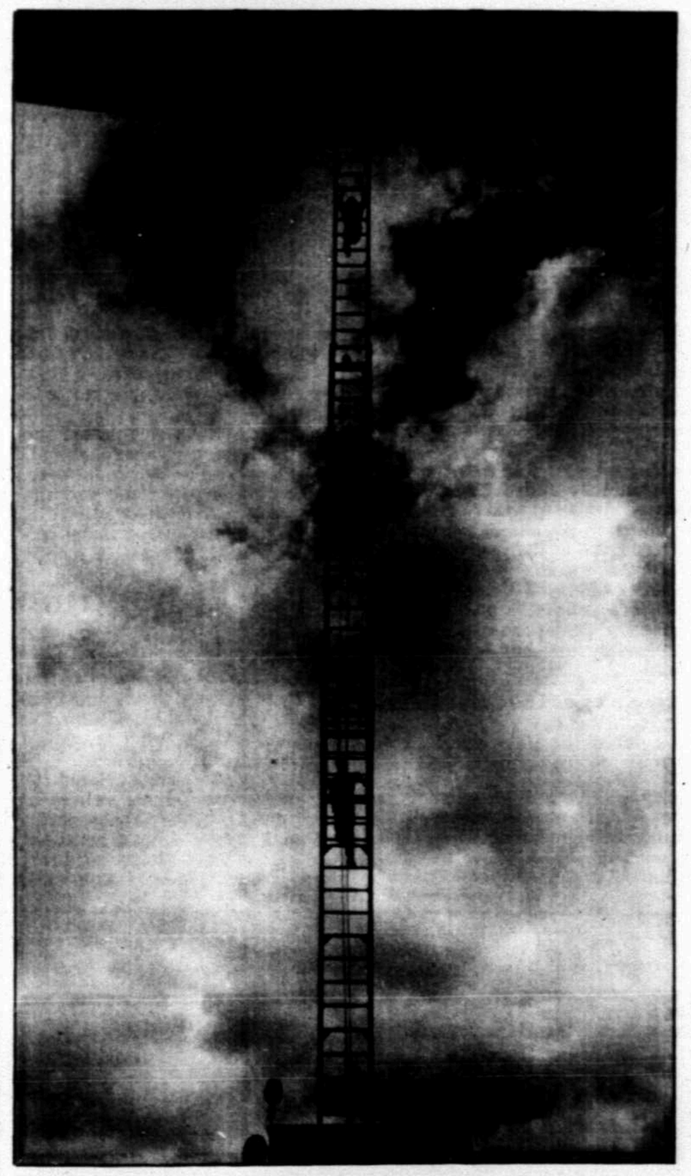
Photos by Kent Porter

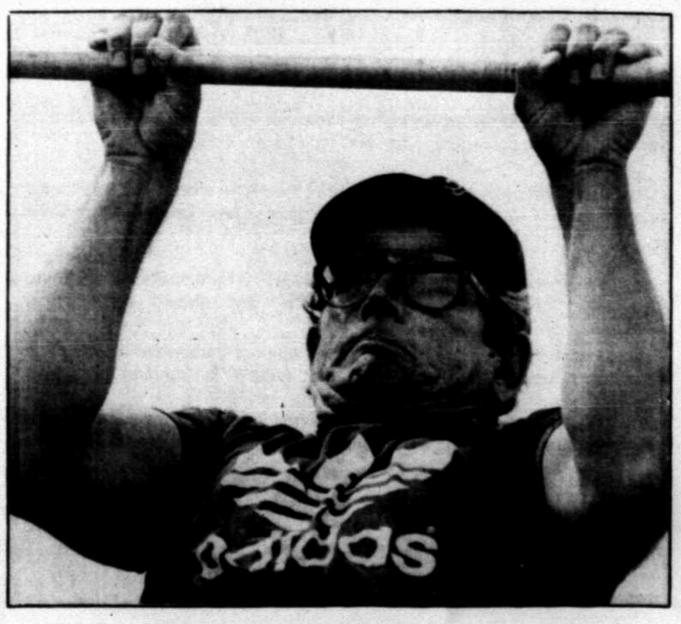


Two walls, at right, which must be scaled, comprise part of the obstacle course at the fire department drill field. Below, firefighter applicants scamper up the ladder of an aerial truck at the fire department drill field. The sprint, up 72 feet at a 70 degree angle, is the only one of ten activites that is not timed by drill instructors.



A serpentine obstacle course, designed to test an applicant's ability to get through a similarly cluttered fire scene, must be negotiated completely and within a time limit.





The chinup is one of the exercises applicants for firefighter must successfully complete to make the department's eligibility list.

The nature of firefighting demands that those in the profession be able to do more than aim a stream of water at rumbling flames — they also must be able to climb stories with 40 pounds of fire hose, or make their way quickly from a fire, carrying one or more unconscious victims.

Recently, the Midland Fire Department held its physical performance examination, one that while not extremely difficult does insure those firefighters hired have the minimum abilities.

The exam for new applicants is held annually at the fire department drill field and tower on Cloverdale Road.

Midland Fire Chief James Roberts said the test has been designed specifically for firefighters.

"What we've done basically on the physical performance exam is to make it as job-related as possible," he said.

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARY

The following books are now available for loan from the Midland County Public Library.

"Home is Where We Start From: Essays by a Psychoanalyst," by D.W. Winnicott. Donald Winnicott was one of the most popular psychiatrists of this century, who influenced schools such as Anna Freud's before his death in 1971. He was a popular lecturer who had a wide following among parents and teachers. The 80 unpublished papers which Winnicott left at his death form the basis of the book. Winnicott explores topics such as the value of depression, the mother's contribution to society, the child in the family group, and delinquency as a sign of hope.

"Freud and His Father," by Dr. Marianne Krull, is a fascinating reconstruction of the relationship between Sigmund Freud and members of his family, particularly his father. Krull's main thesis is that Freud abandoned his seduction theory out of deference to his father and his fear of delving into his family's history. Most of Freud's biographers attribute the early abandonment of the seduction theory to the further development of the theories of the Oedipus complex, infantile sexuality, and the libido theory, cornerstones of psychoanalysis.

"Courage is a Three-Letter Word;" by Walter Anderson. The editor of "Parade" magazine at age 35, Anderson was raised in a tenement, dropped out of high school, served in Vietnam, and resumed his education after the war. Along the way, the author suffered from anxieties that he "was not good enough," obsessed with his shortcomings. Anderson's book is full of life experiences and anecdotes of such notables as Prince Michael of Greece, Marlo Thomas, Carroll O'Connor, and Barbara Walters, each of whom has had to come to terms with his or her own special fears. Dr. Joyce Brothers says of this book, "A fascinating, and finally exhilarating book, which is the more so for the evident courage it took to write it."

"Emotions," by June Callwood. The author wrote a book in 1964 which received wide acclaim and remained in print for a decade. The material in the earlier work has now been revised and expanded in Callwood's new book, about the basic emotions which everyone shares, but expresses very individually. Love, hate, fear, anger, courage, guilt, ambition, depression, anxiety, and happiness are all treated sensitively. In the author's word, "Most people live their lives in the middle ground between complete sanity and total insanity...they can never be certain which element in their nature will prevail in a crisis."

"Multimind," by Robert Ornstein. A psychologist and human biologist at Stanford University, Ornstein has a gift for using literature, poetry, myth and humor to illustrate his startling new concepts of how the human mind works. Instead of envisioning it as a computer, Ornstein would have us imagine a number of "computers" at work simultaneously. One regulates the internal environment of the body, another handles immediate reactions to danger, another screens out unnecessary information from the environment. Other systems make comparisons of objects or events, checks perceptions against stored memory, and so on, most of which goes on outside or our conscious awareness. "Multimind" offer some real insight into how our minds work in terms which most people without scientific training can understand.

"One Minute for Myself," by Dr. Spencer Johnson. The co-author of "The One Minute Manager," a runaway best-seller in 1982, Dr. Johnson advises millions of his followers to take tine for themselves and to listen to their own inner wisdom. People who take care of themselves are more likely to reduce their own levels of anger or frustration, allowing then to more freely give of themselves to other people. The author uses the venerable literary device of the parable to illustrate that, ultimately, world peace may hinge on how we, as individuals, care for ourselves and one another.

EXAM

"It tests muscular strength and endurance, and allows us to judge a person's capability."

The physical exam was developed in part by the Midland department, and in part by standards suggested by the National Fire Protection Association. A written test, which is also required for consideration, was developed by the International Personnel Managers Association.

The test consists of routine calisthenics such as a half-mile run, sit-ups, and an obstacle course, but other activities also test the mettle of future firefighters.

As part of the test, applicants must lift a section of fire hose to the third story drill tower; stack sections of fire hose; go up several flights of stairs with a rolled hose and nozzle attached, and climb an aerial ladder truck, 72 feet high at a 70 degree angle.

Typically about 50 percent of applicants pass the written and physical exams, Roberts said; of the 140 or so applicants who took the exam, 84 made the department's eligibility list.

"We have hired two from that list, Allen Roberts and Stuart Sherman, and are in the process of hiring a third one," Roberts said.

Applicants for the position of firefighter have come from as far from the Tall City as California and Memphis, Roberts said.

Midlander free on bond after drug bust

From Staff Reports

A Midland man is free on $10,000 bond following his drug-related arrest Friday.

Bruce Alan Riley, 33, of Rt. 9, Box 9040, was arrested late Friday night as the result of an investigation by the Midland Police Department, the Department of Public Safety Narcotics Office and the Drug Enforcement Agency.

Midland Police Narcotics Detective Michael Reed said a search warrant issued by Judge Robin Smith garnered a small quantity of cocaine and about 15 pounds of marijuana.

Street value of the marijuana was $15,000, Reed said.

Reed said Riley was charged with two felony counts — possession of cocaine and possession of marijuana over five pounds but less than 50 pounds.

Police records also showed a burglary of a residence Sunday, with items valued at more than $2,500 taken.

Brenda Decker reported the burglary of a home at North Fairgrounds Road and East Wadley. Ms. Decker had been watching the house for the out-of-town owners. The burglary took place sometime Sunday afternoon or evening.

Taken in the burglary were four tires valued at $1,200, one maple-finish china cabinet valued at $1,400 and an unspecified amount of United States silver coins, according to reports.

The report further indicated the home had been "ransacked" — clothes had been pulled from closets and thrown on the floor and the house itself was in disarray.

Midland Sheriff's Department records show a $1,680 theft of mobile home tires Sunday.

Taken in the theft at Cameo Mobile Homes, located at 9500 West Highway 80, were 24 standard-sized mobile home tires. Reports said they were taken off of new mobile homes.

Sheriff's Department records also showed a horse was stolen early Sunday evening.

Vickie Hodge, who resides on County Road 125 west of Highway 349, said the horse, described as "very overweight, very gentle and one who would follow anyone," was a miniature mare, 12 years old and about six hands tall.

She reported the horse was worth $800.

Dillard's department store reports theft of mink coats

From Staff Reports

Dillard's department store at Midland Park Mall reported a theft Saturday of six mink coats valued at $8,700, Midland Police Department records show.

Reports said one dark-colored full fur pelt mink jacket, valued at $2,500; one light-colored beige corduroy mink jacket, valued at $1,400; two light-colored beige corduroy mink jackets, valued at $2,400 and two dark-colored corduroy mink jackets, valued at $2,400, were taken in the theft.

A spokesman for Dillard's, who asked to remain anonymous, said the coats did have a security wire running through them that was attached to the racks the coats hung on. However, he said the wire had been cut.

The spokesman said Dillard's does employ security personnel to safeguard against thefts during the Christmas season especially, but that the security guards are coming in and out at various times.

He said the security guards may not have seen the theft because "it's been crazy in here," referring to an onslaught of Christmas shoppers.

'Encyclopedia of Associations' lists group for everyone

Copley News Service

Are you dull? Are you a couch potato? Are you a collector of stamps with musical composers on them?

Well, don't feel alone anymore. Get yourself a copy of "The Encyclopedia of Associations" and find a group that is just for you.

The recently published 1987 edition lists more than 23,000 kinds of national and international groups, including the Philatelic Music Circle, an international group that collects and studies postage stamps that are related to composers of music.

There are 780 members, both in the United States and other countries. The group's headquarters is in London. Once a year there is a general meeting in London, and the group presents the Robert Stolz Trophy to the designer of the best music stamp.

You dull couch potatoes are in luck, too. The encyclopedia also lists the International Dull Folks Unlimited and Couch Potatoes.

Jim "Dull" Stewart of Rochester, N.Y., is founder of International Dull Folks Unlimited, an organization of "dull pride for all the good and dull people of the Earth."

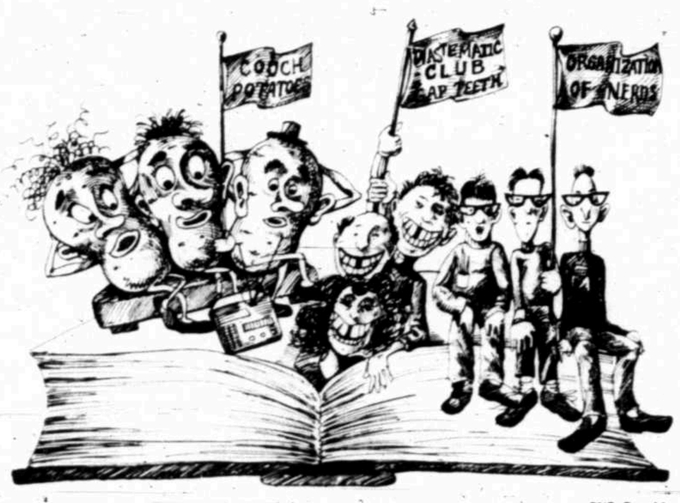
Every January, the group names the "10 Dullest Americans." This year's list included Brooke Shields ("Few look as good as Brooke, but Brooke has become a bookworm."); Hulk Hogan ("The non-incredible Hulk. We think professional wrestling is about as boring as we can get."), and No. 1 on the list was former Oakland Raiders coach John Madden.

"We think he is madden-ingly down to Earth," said Stewart. "And he hates domed stadiums, artificial turf and flying."

Stewart, who founded the group in 1983, is a price analyst for Eastman-Kodak. Does he think what he does is dull? "I don't like to use the term 'dull' in reference to Eastman-Kodak, and they don't like it said of them, either." Oh.

COUCH POTATOES has a common bond among its 7,500 members. They are all "individuals who practice the esoteric art of prolonged television viewing and who enjoy a state of lengthy vegetation," according to the group's creed.

"It is a group whose time has come," said Couch Potatoes founder Robert Armstrong of Dixon, Calif.



CNS Graphic

"For so long people have suffered from video guilt. They watch a lot of TV and feel guilty about it because all these do-gooders say it's a waste of time. We're trying to turn that around. We say that TV is good for you, and that it is a form of American meditation."

Being a couch potato is "not a pastime; it's a way of life," says Armstrong, who is a free-lance illustrator when he is not watching TV.

"Some people say we resemble potatoes; that's a half-truth. We do get a little bottom-heavy. But that gives us a little ballast, so that we don't roll off the couch."

Couch Potatoes has viewing tips for everyone from "Tater Tots" — kids who are C.P. members — to "Rocking Chair Taters" — senior C.P. members. Armstrong says his favorite show is "the one I'm watching at the time."

AMONG SOME of the other groups listed in "The Encyclopedia of Associations" are:

■ Procrastinators' Club of America. Activities include a Christmas party in June and a Fourth of July picnic in January. The group says it protested the War of 1812 in 1966. The club has 5,000 members, and "we have another half-million who haven't joined yet," said president Les Waas of Philadelphia. Address: 1111 Broad-Locust Building, Philadelphia, Pa. 19102.

■ International Organization of Nerds. "The term 'nerd' as used by ION is not meant in a derogatory way," said Bruce Chapman, who calls himself "Supreme Archnerd" of the group, based in Cincinnati. The International Organization of Nerds "considers nerdity a mark of distinction and seeks to officially recognize nerds everywhere." Address: ION, P.O. Box 118555, Cincinnati, Ohio 45211.

■ Society for the Restoration and Preservation of Red M&Ms. Ten years ago, the Mars Co., which makes M&Ms, stopped making red ones because of the red dye health scare. The Knoxville, Tenn.-based group has 179 members who conduct a continual letter-writing campaign to candy manufacturers and the Food and Drug Administration. Address: Paul Hethmon, P.O. Box 8777, Knoxville, Tenn. 37996.

■ Diastematic Club of America. If you have a gap of at least 2 millimeters between your two front teeth, you can be a member of this group. Diastema means a gap between the two front teeth.

Dale Hempel, the Wisconsin president of DCA, says persons with diastema are encouraged to "make light of the matter and overcome feelings of self-consciousness."

The address is: 2147 Crestmont Drive, Moses Lake, Wis. 98837.

DEAR ABBY

Headless rooster story has legs to stand on

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: A Michigan reader asked me to prove that he was neither nuts nor the world's biggest storyteller when he recounted the story about a decapitated rooster that lived several days with his head chopped off. (He had read about it in Life magazine in the early '50s.)

"Please help. My reputation is riding on this," he pleaded. "Maybe one of your readers remembers it and can back me up."

I replied: "Life magazine ceased publication in 1972, but if anyone out there can provide me with any information on the decapitated rooster, it will be something to crow about."

Well, came the dawn, and with it a letter, Federal Express, from Life magazine's top brass informing me that Life had, indeed, died as a WEEKLY in 1972, but continued to publish special reports twice a year. Then, in 1978, Life resumed publication as a monthly magazine, and celebrated its 50th anniversary on Nov. 15.

Readers informed me that the rooster story had appeared in the Oct. 22, 1945, issue of Life. I received over 100 photocopies of the article and six originals. There were pictures showing "Mike," the headless rooster, strutting around, hale and hearty.

According to Life: "Ever since Sept. 10 (1945), a Wyandotte rooster named Mike has been living a normal chicken's life though he has no head. He walks, flaps his wings, preens his feathers and when he hears other roosters crow, even answers with a few croaky gurgles.

"Mike lost his head in the usual rooster way: Mrs. L.A. Olsen, wife of a farmer in Fruita, Colo., 200 miles west of Denver, decided to have a chicken dinner. Mr. Olsen took Mike to the chopping block and axed off his head. Thereupon Mike got up and soon began to strut about. After decapitation, many chickens run around frantically before dying. Mike, however, kept going as if nothing had happened.

"What Mr. Olsen's ax had done was to clip off most of the skull but leave intact one ear, the jugular vein and the base of the brain, which controls motor functions. Still thriving and gaining weight, Mike has been on exhibition in Salt Lake City at 25 cents admission. His owners have put a $10,000 price tag on him."

Other photographs showed Mike being fed with milk and water from an eyedropper through his esophagus, which had not closed over. Mike was also fed a few small grains of corn, which he had no trouble digesting.

Now, lest you think that Mike was the only bird who lost his head and refused to die, readers sent me photocopies of several pages of a book titled "Believe It or Not," by Robert W. Ripley (published by Simon and Schuster in 1931). It seems that as far back as 1904, a black Minorca chicken in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., was beheaded, but walked around headless for 17 days. Other chickens made headlines when they lived headless for days, weeks and months in Coal City, Ill., Fresno, Calif., Middleport, Ohio, Mobile, Ala., and Walnut Grove, Mo.

Many readers wrote to say they had paid to see a headless chicken (or maybe it was a rooster) on exhibition in Long Beach, Calif., San Diego and Florida.

Another reader sent an undated column titled "The Ginger Jar," by Mrs. R.V. Jared from the Double-R Hatcheries, Olney, Ill. The entire column was devoted to yet another tale of a headless rooster in Woodstock, Conn. This one lived for only 3½ days because no one could figure out a way to feed it.

Mrs. Jared wrote: "But even immortal roosters have their weaknesses — at least this one did. He thumbed his nose (or rather his beak) at the ax; a little thing like being minus a head didn't disturb him; but when it came to eating — that was something else. It was like the poet put it:

'Men (and roosters) may live without poetry, music or art,
They can live without conscience and live without heart,
They can live without love, what is passion but pining?
But where is the one who can live without dining?'"

Evergreens thrive in Arizona desert

By EARL ARONSON
Associated Press

Christmas trees are thriving in the Arizona desert, safe from the holiday ax.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is raising the evergreens as proof that they will survive in an area averaging only 12 inches of annual rainfall.

An ancient farming practice, terracing the land, has kept the trees alive, catching scarce rainfall, says researcher Dwayne H. Fink.

Likening this type of farming to harvesting rainfall from peaked roofs, Fink said, "We smoothed the desert surface and formed sloping terraces to capture whatever rain falls. The terraces, treated with wax to make them water repellent, divert this water to the trees."

'Wet your whistle' at The Water Bar

Copley News Service

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Gourmet water was bound to make a splash in this town where clothing stores require appointments and restaurants have unlisted telephone numbers.

It has. The Water Bar opened its doors last week to the thirsty and the trendy among shoppers on Rodeo Drive, Beverly Hills' designer row.

The bar comes exactly as advertised, serving water and only water. There is no booze, no beer — not even peanuts or pretzels. A small neon sign hanging in the window says it all: H20.

And the menu, shaped in the form of a bottle, boasts the "most extensive selection of international bottled water to be found in North America."

For $1 to $2 a pop, bartender Richard Heriza pours a Sangemin from Italy, a Pedras Salgadas from Portugal and a Borjomi from the Soviet Union for the first trickle of customers.

"It's very unusual that anyone can have so many waters from all over the world," said one patron, visiting Mexican businessman Juan DePablos. "The Russian water was like Alka Seltzer — not very good. I enjoyed the Portuguese and the Italian, though."

"We've had customers from Seattle, customers from Beverly Hills...even the tennis pro from the Bel Air Country Club," Heriza said. "They all said it was the best idea they've heard of in a long time."

"It's just a good place to relax," Heriza said.

The Water Bar sits in the rear of the Ixiz clothing store, an airy boutique of black metal shelves and green Italian-tile floors. Among its browsers one recent afternoon was "Dynasty" star Linda Evans.

Ixiz president Steve Mills said The Water Bar was his idea: "I started thinking, 'What can we do that will be unusual?' Then I thought, 'Why not a water bar?' "

The establishment stocks 51 brands of water from 18 countries — everything from South Korea's Bigcool and Austria's Voslaver to Radenska from Yugoslavia and Loashan from China. More are on the way.

"We're working on one from Brazil," said Mills. "Also, one from Morocco."

The menu schools the untraveled drinker on the subtleties of each offering: low carbonization, high mineralization, and so on. Its "facts and trivia" column relates that Arkansas' Mountain Valley water is a favorite of President Reagan, and that Italy's Ferrarelle was the water of Cicero and Hannibal.

OC tonight opens challenging week for 12-0 Chaps

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

The holiday is over for the Midland College Chaparrals. It's time to get down to business and find out if this team is for real.

Last week the Chaps ran their season's record to 12-0 with 110-69 and 92-67 Western Junior College Athletic Conference victory over Clarendon and NMMI, respectively.

Now it's get serious time.

The Chaps begin what could be a telltale week at Odessa College 8 p.m. tonight. Then, Thursday night, the Chaps come home to play undefeated New Mexico Junior College.

In their WJCAC opener last week, the Thunderbirds, always noted for their scoring punch, scored 136 points, 16 more than MC has been able to score in any one game this season.

Meanwhile, the Wranglers lost their only WJCAC start, a 72-71 loss to Howard College.

It was Odessa that handed MC one of its two conference losses in 1984-85 and on the OC court.

Western Texas College defeated the Wranglers by a point in the semi-finals of the OC Turkey Shootout a couple of weeks ago, thus delaying a meeting between the two inter-city traditional rivals.

After this week, the Chaps get a real holiday, no action until the Mesa, Ariz., Tournament in early January as a tuneup for a resumption of WJCAC play.

Under new Coach Dennis Helms, OC is off to a 9-4 start and, although five sophomores return, three freshmen — Gene Edwards, 15.3; Troy Bell, 12.3 and Riley Smith 12 — lead the team in scoring. Smith is 6-7, Bell 6-5 and Edwards 6-1.

Robert Stone, 6-9, and Mark Wilson, 6-8, both sophomores, give OC an edge in height under the basket, which may be the one area where the Chaps have yet to prove themselves.

MC, whose forte this season is depth, defense and diversification on offense, will be seeking its 23rd straight league success. The Chaps are a team that can't be stopped by defensing one or two players. Stop Mookie Blaylock and Lincoln Minor or Todd Duncan breaks out in a rash of points and inside Coach Jerry Stone has balanced striking power.

Jones, who finished 136th on the 1986 PGA money list, had an even-par 72 on the 7,271-yard TPC and PGA West course, giving him a 90-hole total of 20-under-par 340.

Cowboys lose again

Threats to Landry also mar game

By MIKE BARNES

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — After losing 29-10 to the Los Angeles Rams, Dallas is on the brink of missing the playoffs for only the third time since 1966 — but even that seemed trivial to the Cowboys Sunday night.

Tom Landry, the only coach the team has ever had, resorted to wearing a bulletproof vest on the sidelines during most of the fourth quarter after receiving a death threat.

Landry, 62, was escorted off the field by police early in the period and returned a few plays later with the vest covered by his gray sweater and blue jacket.

There were no incidents, but winning suddenly did not seem so important to the Cowboys.

"Heck, man, everybody's looking around and over everybody's shoulders and saying, 'Who's behind who?'" said Tony Dorsett. "Wait a minute, man, this is only a game. My life is more important than anything.

"It was very eerie being on the sideline after hearing what we heard ... you're trying to keep your head in the game as well as wondering, 'Is something going to happen? Is there a sniper in here? Is he going for one individual or is he going to spray the sideline?'"

Said Landry, in his 27th season as Dallas coach: "I don't think much about those things. It's just something we have to deal with in our society."

With or without the distraction, the Cowboys could not deal with the Rams, who won their third straight to improve to 10-4. They lead the NFC West by 1 ½ games over San Francisco with two to play.

LeRoy Irvin returned an interception 50 yards for a touchdown and Barry Redden burst 41 yards for the clinching score in the fourth quarter as Los Angeles won easily.

The Cowboys, on the brink of their first losing season in 20 years, have lost three straight and five of their last six to fall to 7-7.

"We are the laughing stock of the NFL, and everybody's loving it" said Dorsett. "And we haven't done anything to prevent that."

Dallas trails the 8-5-1 49ers and 8-6 Vikings in the battle for the second wild-card berth in the NFC.

Henry Ellard caught a 22-yard scoring pass from rookie Jim Everett in the second quarter and Mike Lansford kicked first-half field goals of 37 and 27 yards for the Rams, who built a 20-10 halftime advantage.

In the first quarter, Irvin stepped in front of Tony Hill and raced 50 yards with his sixth interception of the year to give Los Angeles a 7-0 lead.

"It seems like every week the other team wants to pick on me early," said Irvin. "With the interceptions, I take their tempo away and make them respect me. I was gambling a bit and I came out the winner this time."

Los Angeles scored the only points of the third quarter when Gary Jeter sacked quarterback Steve Pelluer in the end zone for a safety with 8:58 left in the period.

Redden then polished off the victory when he burst off tackle for the final points with 5:08 left.

The Rams' Eric Dickerson, the NFL's leading ground-gainer, rushed 28 times for 106 yards — the 10th time this year he has rushed for more than 100 yards.

Dallas, eliminated by Los Angeles 20-0 in the playoffs last year, scored in the first quarter on Timmy Newsome's five-yard run and in the second on Rafael Septien's 48-yard field goal, his longest of the season.

Everett completed 14 of 25 passes for 212 yards, one touchdown and one interception. Pelluer was 18 of 29 for 173 yards. He was intercepted twice and sacked five times.

The Rams outgained the Cowboys 418 yards to 224 and held Dorsett to just 36 yards on 11 carries and Herschel Walker to only 33 yards on 7 attempts.

Dallas coach dons bullet-proof vest after threat

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Cowboys Coach Tom Landry was the target of several telephone threats and, flanked by security guards, left the field for several minutes during Dallas' NFL game with the Los Angeles Rams.

Landry returned to the field Sunday night wearing a protective vest underneath his sweater.

A statement from security officials at Anaheim Stadium said:

"After a series of telephoned threats were received on Tom Landry, it was deemed by authorities they were serious enough to warrant taking Landry to the dressing room, where the situation was evaluated and investigated.

"After doing such, it was decided by Landry to return to the field, where he remained under close security."

Lt. Jackie Parra of the Anaheim Police Dept., said in a statement: "At approximately 7:55 p.m. (PST), during the Los Angeles Rams versus Dallas Cowboys football game, a call was received by the operator at Anaheim Stadium from an unidentified male.

Denver's John Elway gets handed his head in sacking by Kansas City Chiefs in Sunday's upset of the Broncos.

By JOEL SHERMAN
UPI Sports Writer

The NFL saw two rare occurrences Sunday: an Indianapolis Colts victory, and the New York Giants all but solidifying a division title.

At Atlanta, Eugene Daniel returned a blocked punt 13 yards for a touchdown with 20 seconds to play Sunday, allowing Indianapolis to end its 13-game losing streak and give Ron Meyer a victory in his Colts coaching debut with a 28-23 triumph over the Atlanta Falcons.

At Washington, Phil Simms threw for three touchdowns and the Giants intercepted six Jay Schroeder passes to take sole possession of first place in the NFC East with a 24-14 victory over the Washington Redskins.

THE COLTS had not won a game since last Dec. 22. The Giants have not won a division title since 1963 when Y.A. Title was their quarterback.

Tate Randle broke free to block the punt and Daniel scooped up the loose ball and raced into the end zone.

"On the blocked kick, I took the inside rush, broke free and was able to block it with my arms. We knew our only chance with 30 seconds left was to get in and block it, " Randle said.

IN THE CLOSING seconds, Atlanta's Turk Schonert completed throws of 23 and 25 yards to reach the Colts 12. But tight end Arthur Cox dropped a pass near the Indianapolis goal line as time expired.

NFL Roundup

Gary Hogeboom, playing for the first time since separating his shoulder in the second game of the season, threw two touchdown passes for the Colts — a 7-yarder to Matt Bouza early in the third quarter to cut the Falcons' lead to 17-14, and a 2-yarder with 7:11 left to draw Indianapolis within 23-21.

The Falcons, 6-7-1 and all but out of the playoff hunt, led 17-7 at the half and 23-14 midway through the final period.

With two triumphs over the Redskins this season, the Giants need one victory or one Washington loss in the final two weeks to clinch the NFC East title. The Giants close at home, where they are 6-0, against St. Louis, 3-10-1, and Green Bay, 3-11.

IF THE GIANTS win their last two games, they will earn the home-field advantage for as long as they stay in the conference playoffs. Both New York and Washington have clinched at least wild-card berths. The Giants won their seventh straight to match their longest winning streak since 1962 while ending the Redskins' five-game winning streak.

"I think this is the year of great things for us," said Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor, who had three sacks. "If there are still doubters out there, I say to heck with them."

Lubbock 'Audition' pays off

Five out of the last six, do you suppose they've just got everything backwards in Dallas, SMU doing what the Cowboys are supposed to be doing?...

If David McWilliams hadn't had a 7-4 bowl-season year at Texas Tech, one wonders if he would have been tapped for the Texas job. The way it turned out, it was almost as though he auditioned for the Texas job at Lubbock....

After the house-cleaning by Fred Akers at Texas a year ago, McWilliams will have to round up what amounts to a new staff. Very few familiar faces are still around as he returns...

Tech AD T Jones did everybody a favor by naming Spike Dykes as McWilliams' successor immediately, eliminating any lame duck tenure...

With Jack Pardee at Houston and Dykes at Tech, it's two down and seven to go for a complete roster of former Midlanders coaching in the SWC....

If the Chicago Bears' Walter Payton hurries, he can score as many touchdowns in 12 seasons, and no figuring how many extra games, as Jim Brown did in nine. Just to remind those young whippersnappers who voted Payton the best running back ever, that there are still some of us old heads still around.

Payton is more likable and better for the game's image, but, face it, Brown was one of a kind, darn it...

Now that the Cowboys are out of it, who do you root for? Denver should be the popular choice with ex-Midlander Keith Bishop snapping the ball to John Elway and ex-Cowboy Dan Reeves guiding the Broncos toward the playoffs they should have been in last year.

Somehow the tug here is toward the Raiders, maybe because of Jim Plunkett...

One of the big edges pro football has gained over baseball in recent years has been in continuity of personnel. Fans get to know their teams and establish a loyalty...Danny White is a Cowboy, Marcus Allen is a Raider; Lawrence Taylor is a Giant; Dexter Manley is a Redskin. You don't have to guess who is the good guy and who is the bad guy.

The result is more loyalty toward the local heroes and more enduring hatreds of traditional foes. How how are you going to hate Joe Theismann if he's a Redskin one year, a Patriot, the next and then becomes a Saint?...

Did you see where Chicago Cubs' GM Dallas Green turned his back on the free agent market. The free agent he signed after the Cubs' NL East division pennant in 1984 have been vacationing with pay ever since...

Chargers blank hapless Houston

By HILMER ANDERSON

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Halfback Gary Anderson caught one touchdown pass and threw for another Sunday and the San Diego Chargers limited Houston to 130 yards of offense to record their first shutout in seven years in beating the Oilers 27-0.

The Chargers, 4-10, forced three turnovers as they produced their first shutout since Dec. 9, 1979 at New Orleans, 105 regular-season games ago. San Diego last registered a home shutout 130 regular-season games ago.

ANDERSON threw a 4-yard touchdown pass to tight end Kellen Winslow and caught a 31-yard scoring toss from Dan Fouts. Fouts completed 21 of 30 passes for 250 yards as he became the third quarterback in NFL history to pass for more than 40,000 yards.

A 22-yard completion to Trumaine Johnson in the third quarter pushed Fouts over the 40,000-yard mark. He now has 40,050 yards to trail Fran Tarkenton's47,003 and Johnny Unitas' 40,239.

Houston quarterback Oliver Luck, starting for Warren Moon who has a thumb injury, completed jus 10 passes for 110 yards. He was sacked six times and intercepted by Vencie Glenn and Jeff Dale.

THE CHARGERS took a 14-0 lead early in the second quarter by capitalizing on Oiler turnovers.

Dale intercepted a pass intended for Ernest Givens and returned it 24 yards to the Houston 23-yard line. After Curtis Adams danced 16 yards through traffic to the 1, Tim Spencer went over the top to give San Diego a 7-0 lead 1:39 into the second quarter.

Twenty seconds later, the Chargers took a 14-0 lead on Fouts's 31-yard pass to Anderson.

The score was set up on the previous play when Lynn Madsen, a third-string defensive end, fumbled the kickoff. Angelo Snipes recovered for San Diego at the Houston 31.

The Chargers dominated the first quarter, running 24 plays to Houston's 11. They were denied a field goal on their opening drive when holder Tom Flick fumbled the snap. The Oilers were held to 50 yards of offense in the first half.

Houston Oilers

THE CHARGERS took a 17-0 lead with 48 seconds left in the half on a 20-yard field goal by Rolf Benirschke.

Benirschke kicked a 35-yard field goal to give San Diego a 20-0 lead 4:15 into the third quarter.

After Fouts threw his landmark pass, Anderson found Winslow on the 4-yard halfback option pass to make it 27-0 with 8:25 to play.

Plano, Reagan, Hurst back in 5A

Prep Roundup

Among the three longtime powers of Texas high school football — Plano, Hurst Bell and Austin Reagan — in the Class 5A semifinals, the LaMarque Cougars stick out like a sore thumb.

The Cougars, however, proved Saturday they could cope with adversity on and off the football field in becoming the first LaMarque team ever to advance to the 5A semifinals.

LaMarque defeated an Aldine MacArthur team, 26-10, that had not given up a touchdown in three playoff games despite playing without injured running back Milton Frank and in the wake of coach Hugh Massey's death two days earlier.

Assistant coach Darryl Cope said the Cougars were emotionally flat Saturday and probably did not show their full talents in beating MacArthur.

The Cougars, 13-1, scored on their first play from scrimmage on a play called by Massey before his death in a Thursday night auto accident near Galveston. Ronny Johnson, who had three touchdown catches, caught the 84-yard bomb from quarterback Michael Little.

LaMarque, which expects to have Frank back next week, now will play the Reagan Raiders, a longtime power in Texas high school ranks that is fielding its best team since the mid-1970s. Plano and Bell meet in the second semifinal at 2:30 p.m. Saturday at Texas Stadium in Irving.

LAMARQUE advanced to the 3A semifinals in 1963, losing 9-7 to Pharr-San Juan-Alamo. The other three semifinalists, meanwhile, have seven state championships and three title game losses among them in the last 25 years.

Reagan, which dominated Texas high school football in the late 1960s but has declined in recent years, is in the latter stages of the playoffs for the first time since 1977 after upsetting Converse Judson, 18-15, behind Donald Carr's 126 rushing yards and three touchdowns.

The Raiders' wishbone attack has drawn most of the attention in the playoffs, but Reagan coach Wally Freytag said his defense was the key against Judson. The undefeated Rockets were held to just three first downs in the second half.

"Reagan was averaging 40-something points a game and Clark (San Antonio Clark, an earlier playoff victim) was, too," Freytag said. "Our kids have been playing with a lot of determination. That's a tough den down there in Judson, and our kids played well when they had to."

Plano's 17-12 win Saturday over Longview was sparked by an unlikely hero in wide receiver Jason Davidson, who caught touchdown passes of 32 and 15 yards from Bobby Schrader to send the Wildcats into the semifinals. Plano's defense, meanwhile, held a Longview team that had rushed for almost 500 yards against Highland Park a week earlier to only 94 yards on the ground.

Hurst Bell rallied from a 14-point deficit to beat Wichita Falls, 31-21, in a game that was stopped by a bench-clearing brawl with 1:21 to play. Wichita Falls' single-wing, led by tailback Eric Chatman's 230 rushing yards, held the statistical edge, but Bell broke a 21-21 tie in the final period with a 1-yard touchdown run by Brian Terry and Cary Blanchard's 35-yard field goal.

THE CLASS 4A quarterfinals featured two blowouts — McKinney's 48-13 win over Wilmer-Hutchins and New Braunfels' 48-7 win over Gregory-Portland — and two squeakers — Hereford's 17-12 wiun over Wichita Falls Hirschi and West Orange-Stark's 21-15 win over Jasper in a rematch of 9-4A foes.

Outstanding running backs turned the tide in the McKinney and New Braunfels games. Randy Simmons rushed for 278 yards for McKinney while Brad Grant had 260 for the Unicorns in their win.

Jasper, a 21-8 regular-season winner over West Orange, throttled blue-chip running back Brian Cleveland but gave up touchdown runs of 8 and 1 yards to the Mustangs' Scottie Littleton. West Orange also scored on a 21-yard guard-around touchdown by Desmond Smith.

Hereford jumped in front of Hirschi, which was playing without star

Spike Dykes
...Texas Tech new football coach

'McDavid Who?' signs sprout as fever cools

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

LUBBOCK (AP) — Anti-David McWilliams fever was cooling off as the Texas Tech Red Raiders welcomed a new head football coach for their Independence Bowl workouts.

"McDavid Who?" signs were prevalent throughout Lubbock, including those scrolled on cotton bales near the airport.

But new Coach Spike Dykes is trying to make the Red Raider faithful quickly forget McWilliams, who left last Friday after just a year at Texas Tech to become the new head coach at the University of Texas.

Dykes, the team's former defensive coordinator, will lead the Red Raiders when they meet Mississippi Dec. 20 in Shreveport.

Until Saturday, preparations had proceeded under McWilliams.

However, McWilliams' quick defection to Texas stirred deap-seated resentment among Red Raider backers and players.

Center and co-captain Chris Tanner said the "Hook 'Em Horns" signs flashed by McWilliams and his wife at a televised press conference made the players decide they didn't want him around for the Independence Bowl.

"That really hurt," Tanner said.

McWilliams came to Texas Tech last year after leaving his job as the Longhorns' defensive coordinator. He led Tech to a 7-4 season and its first bowl bid since 1978.

Athletic Director T. Jones announced Saturday, without informing McWilliams, that Dykes would take charge of Independence Bowl preparations.

Dykes will receive a five-year contract at about $75,000 per year.

He was euphoric about taking the Tech job, which has seen four new coaches in six years.

"I was born in Lubbock, Texas," Dykes said. "I was born in the kitchen of the University City Club in Lubbock. That was St. Mary's of the Plains Hopsital then. I have deep feelings for Lubbock and for Texas Tech University."

Dykes said he wanted to quickly put aside all the tension of McWilliams' abrupt departure.

"We've got a bowl kicking off two weeks from right now and it doesn't do any good to worry about what happened yesterday," Dykes said. "That's over with.

"We need to build on the positive and keep going from this day forward — looking for the good things and not trying to dig up bad ones."

More on Bobby Layne....

Layne was a realist and one thing he wanted to do but never got the chance to do was coach Texas Tech.

"I just wanted to be coach for five years, so Texas Tech could go to the Cotton Bowl one time for ol' Lubbock. But it's a Baptist school, no drinking. I think my past hurt me."

"One of the worries was if I knew how to recruit, since I'd never done it before, but I know how you recruit-with $100 bills. If they'd named me the coach, we'd win, and then we'd be on probation, and then we'd win again, and then we'd be on probation again, and then we'd be on probation again, and then we'd be on probation again."

running back Elbert Cooper, on two touchdown pases by quarterback Todd Shire of 17 yards to Kyle Streun and 38 to Bobby Baker. Keith Stevenson, who threw for 193 yards, and two TD passes in the final quarter for Hirschi.

CLASS 3A quarterfinals were dominated by Jefferson's 14-7 upset win over Daingerfield, the defending state champions, which entered the game with a 29-game winning streak. Rafael Robinson rushed for 156 yards, including an 85-yard touchdown, to pace Jefferson.

"I think maybe we have a better team than the last 29 (Daingerfield victims)," said Jefferson coach Jerry Bennett. "We're just 26 miles from Daingerfield, but we've never played in the five years I've been here. But our players will not in awe of them. We have the kind of players (most notably quarterback Kenneth Henderson and running back Keith Smith) who can tee it up with anyone."

Cuero, which lost to Daingerfield in the 1985 Class 3A title game, used 113 rushing yards by Robert Strait to beat Hebbronville, 21-12. The Gobblers next will play Port Arthur Austin, a 21-14 winner over Cameron on quarterback Kenny Ford's three rushing touchdowns.

In the other half of the draw, Lampasas took the lead on tight end Curtis Thrift's 23-yard TD reception from Richard Roach and held on to beat Iowa Park, 16-7. Lampasas plays Jefferson in the second semifinal this weekend.

UPSETS dominated play in Class 2A. Unbeaten Eastland, playing without injured quarterback Jason Rattan, fell 20-7 to a Mart team led by backs Wayne Atkison and Terrell Pride, who combined for 270 yards. The Panthers next play Reagan County, which handed Goldthwaite its first loss in two years, 17-14, as Scott Lipsey threw a fourth-down, 12-yard TD pass to Mark Townsend with 1:15 to play.

To the south, unbeaten Shiner knocked off its second straight unbeaten foe by beating San Antonio Cole, 21-9, as quarterback Gilbert Price ran for 113 yards and two touchdowns. Shiner held Cole running back Deon Cockrell to 94 yards.

In the other 2A game, Winona running backs Marvin May and Michael Wright combined for 301 yards rushing to lead the Wildcats past Kerens, 33-0.

Simms threw touchdown passes of 9 yards to Mark Bavaro, 7 yards to Bobby Johnson and 16 to Phil McConkey. Raul Allegre added a 21-yard field goal in the third quarter.

"We stunk today," Washington safety Curtis Jordan said. "Our biggest game of the year, probably the biggest game in the regular season in the past two or three years, and we choked.

"Well, we didn't play well. I didn't mean that we choked."

ELSEWHERE, Cincinnati routed New England 31-7, Cleveland edged Buffalo 21-17, Kansas City crushed Denver 31-10, Pittsburgh defeated Detroit 27-17, Miami nipped New Orleans 31-27, Minnesota whipped Green Bay 32-6, St. Louis and Philadelphia tied 10-10, Chicago drubbed Tampa Bay 48-14, San Francisco beat the Jets 24-10, and San Diego blanked Houston 27-0.

At Foxboro, Mass., James Brooks rushed for 163 yards, including a 56-yard touchdown, and totaled 101 yards receiving to help Cincinnati amass a team-record of 584 yards of offense and end New England's seven-game winning streak. The Patriots, 10-4, remained tied with the Jets atop the AFC East and failed to clinch at least a wild-card berth. Cincinnati, 9-5, stayed one game behind first-place Cleveland in the AFC Central.

At Orchard Park, N.Y., Kevin Mack ran for two touchdowns to power Cleveland, 10-4. The Browns play the Bengals at Cincinnati next Sunday in a game that should decide the AFC Central title. The Bills fell to 4-10.

At Kansas City, Mo., Sherman Cocroft and Gary Spani picked off passes that the Kansas City offense turned into touchdowns and Lloyd Burruss returned an interception 72 yards for a score to help the Chiefs, 8-6, remain in the wild-card hunt and stop Denver, 10-4, from clinching the AFC West title.

At Pittsburgh, Louis Lipps caught eight passes for 150 yards and two touchdowns, including the game-winner, to enable Pittsburgh, 5-9, to eliminate Detroit, 5-9, from the playoff hunt.

AT NEW ORLEANS, Dan Marino threw three first-half touchdown passes to help Miami, 7-7, score on five of its first six possessions and keep alive their slim playoff chances. New Orleans, scored 17 straight points to get back into the game and got 203 yards rushing from rookie Rueben Mayes, but fell to 6-8 guaranteeing it will not make the playoffs nor finish above .500 for the 20th straight year.

At Philadelphia, St. Louis' Eric Schubert missed two field goals in overtime and Philadelphia's Paul McFadden missed one as the Cardinals, 3-10-1, and Eagles, 4-9-1 played to a tie.

At Chicago, quarterback Doug Flutie ran for one touchdown and threw for another to spark a 21-point second quarter and Chicago's defense forced five turnovers to lead the Bears, 12-2, over Tampa Bay, 2-12. Chicago won its fifth straight and sent the Buccaneers to their fifth loss in a row. Chicago will earn the home-field edge throughout the NFC playoffs if it wins its last two games while the Giants lose once.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against European currencies today after registering a loss against the Japanese yen in thin, trendless trading typical of the end-of-year season. Gold strengthened.

Dealers said statistics indicating stronger U.S. economic performance were canceling out the mild market instability generated by the White House crisis over arms supplies to Iran.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar lost nearly half the gain it made last week, falling 0.47 to a closing 162.33 yen from Friday's 162.80. Later, in London, it was quoted at 162.50 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Friday:

— 2.0075 West German marks, up from 1.9945

— 1.6798 Swiss francs, up from 1.6627

— 6.5975 French francs, up from 6.5325

— 2.2690 Dutch guilders, up from 2.2520

— 1,391.50 Italian lire, up from 1,380.50

— 1.3791 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3803

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4205, compared with $1.4285 Friday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $391.50 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $389. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $390.50.

In Zurich, the bid price was $390.70, up from $388 late Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $1.64 to close at a bid $391.32.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.40 a troy ounce, up from Friday's $5.37.

Stocks fall

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fell Friday, depressed by tumbling bond prices and renewed worries over the insider trading scandal, analysts said.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 14.62 points to 1,925.06.

Decliners outpaced gainers by about 13-to-7, with 923 issues down, 523 up and 500 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume totaled 139.82 million shares, against 156.91 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index fell 0.99 to 143.69.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 0.18 at 267.66.

Futures prices for coffee fell; cattle, soybeans and corn were mostly lower and pork and wheat were higher.

Economists fear consumer spending may decline

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Consumer spending, which has been running at a healthy level all year long despite declining disposable income and increasing debt, could begin to taper off as early as this holiday season, some economists say.

Declining disposable income, and a recent splurge in buying automobiles at low interest rates, the economists say, may affect the buying zeal of 88 million American households this Christmas and in the first quarter of 1987.

Moreover, the revision of the tax code and problems in Washington, in the view of economists, could adversely affect consumer buying as a reflection of potential economic uncertainty.

Retail sales, however, have been gaining this year about 5 percent over 1985 in real terms, helped by extremely low inflation, although the household durables splurge demonstrated by many shoppers has been slowing.

Merchants generally have been predicting gains of from 6 percent to 12 percent over last year in the Christmas shopping season. Leading national retailers reflected only a modest year-to-year rise in their Novemeber business reports, with the nation's three largest chains showing gains of 2 percent, 7.3 percent, and 1.2 percent, respectively.

A survey of consumer holiday buying plans by the Conference Board due out on Tuesday is expected to indicate that shoppers will be spending only slightly more than in 1985, or less than retailers expect. The board, in its monthly survey, normally contacts 5,000 households through National Family Opinion Inc., of Toledo, Ohio.

One focus of concern is the erosion in real consumer disposable income, which has fallen in four of the last five months and has remained relatively weak in the last six months. October, for example, showed no gain.

Rising federal income taxes and social security deductions have pared consumer purchasing power. According to the Tax Foundation, the typical American family has $986 less in after-tax income this year compared with a decade ago. In real terms, the family in 1986 has after-tax income of $23,723 compared with $24,709 in 1976, the foundation said.

Consumption, however, has steadily risen, exceeding income in growth rate, and there is a high level of consumer debt as a percentage of disposable income.

This year, economists say, outstanding debt reached a record level of 19 percent of income for the year's first nine months, compared with 17.3 percent in 1985. Both annual figures do not include home mortgages, but this year's has been inflated by the high automobile purchases. Even without that, however, the debt trend has been rising all year.

But not all economists believe that the fading disposable income and a rising debt level are worrisome.

"I don't think that the consumer debt situation causes spending declines as much as such other things as inflation, interest rates or tightened monetary policy," said Dr. Thomas A. Durkin, chief economist and research director of the American Financial Services Association, a trade group of consumer credit concerns in Washington, D.C. "Currently, inflation shows no signs of rising, interest rates are low and stable and monetary policy is easy."

And while Durkin says consumption has run faster this year than disposable income, he expects both disposable income and consumer buying to rise 3 percent next year after inflation.

The primary influence on consumer buying, however, said Durkin, is "something that is beyond the control of the consumer: the health of the national economy." He added: "While many consumers may not be directly aware of it, if the foreign trade picture brightens and the inventory situation improves in 1987, these will definitely improve the consumer's buying ability. If not, they won't."

For some others, political problems in Washington could be influential, including the current dispute about selling arms to Iran.

"With the Iran situation being likened to Watergate, we went back to that period from 1972 through 1973 and found that consumer confidence slipped sharply," said Robert Westcott, economist and vice president for United States operations at Wharton Econometrics Forecasting Associates in Philadelphia.

Other economists say that consumers respond to more direct influences. Rosalind Wells, corporate economist for the J.C. Penney Co. in New York, said: "In terms of what people will spend, the public's most direct response is on having a good job outlook and a steady paycheck. Consumers in general don't react as much to interest rates and dividends."

Wells added: "The economy is still growing and employment is holding steady and has good prospects. Wages and salaries are increasing 3 percent to 3.5 percent this year over last. Consumer confidence also depends on how they react to inflation. But the consumer price index has been up only 2 percent this year so far over last and that is low."

IOCC favors opening refuge to exploration

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — At least part of Alaska's 19 million-acre Arctic National Wildlife Refuge should be open to oil and natural gas exploration and production, the Interstate Oil Compact Commission said.

The 29-state association opened its three-day annual meeting Sunday saying the resolution on the remote refuge on Alaska's north coast will be one of about a half dozen before the 350 delegates.

"The resolution urges Congress to allow environmentally responsible oil and gas development in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge," said Esther Wunnicke, commissioner of the Alaska Natural Resources Department.

"The refuge is considered to have the highest oil and natural gas potential of any unexplored area on the North America continent," Wunnicke said.

The refuge is east of Prudhoe Bay, site of a major oil and gas field. It is bordered by Canada on the east, the Beaufort Sea on the north and the Brooks Range on the south.

The isolated, virtually uninhabited and environmentally fragile refuge is the home of hundreds of polar bear and thousands of caribou.

The IOCC-proposed resolution asks Congress to allow exploration on 1.5 million acres of coastal plain, about 8 percent of the refuge. Oil resources could be transported to southern Alaska by the Trans-Alaska Pipeline.

"Major discoveries could reduce our nation's future needs for imported oil, help balance our trade deficit and significantly increase the national security," the resolution said.

Govs. Norm Bangerter of Utah, George Sinner of North Dakota and Mark White of Texas are scheduled to speak to the convention Monday, along with Steven Griles, an assistant secretary of the Interior Department.

It's not the latest in Egyptian fashion, but all the vogue in airplanes: light, strong and flexible Hexcel honeycomb, which makes up 80 percent of the volume on the wings and fuselage of Voyager. The experimental plane embarked on Sept. 14 to attempt history's first around-the-world flight on one tank of gas. With Hexcel honeycomb reinforcing the entire structure of this "flying fuel tank," Voyager has the wing span of a 200-passenger Boeing 727 but weighs less than a four-passenger Beechcraft Bonanza. Hexcel Corp. is based in San Francisco with worldwide sales of approximately $225 million.

Economists predict stagnant economy in 1987

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy will pick up a little steam next year but will still lag well behind Reagan administration hopes, U.S. business economists say.

And a new recession may be on the way, arriving as soon as 1988, more than half of them believe.

Inflation will just about double next year, but it will still be only 3.8 percent, far below the big increases of the late 1970s and early 1980s, the National Association of Business Economists said in a forecast released today.

Unemployment, stalled around 7 percent for a year and a half, will stay there, the economists said.

Interest rates may decline slightly by next June but will finish the year a bit higher than at present, they said. Housing starts and auto sales both will be down from this year.

And while the federal budget deficit and the foreign trade deficit will both improve, both will remain huge.

"As the U.S. expansion begins its fifth year, economists continue to be concerned about a recession on the horizon," said Jerry Jordan, president of the economists' group. He also is senior vice president and chief economist of First Interstate Bancorp in Los Angeles.

"Although only about 30 percent believe we will be in recession by the end of 1987, about 60 percent expect a downturn by the end of 1988 and over 90 percent anticipate a decline before the close of 1989," he said.

The association, representing about 4,000 corporate, consulting and government economists, said total U.S. economic output should rise by 2.8 percent from the end of this year to the end of 1987, after adjusting for inflation.

That prediction is a shade more pessimistic than the economists were in June when they estimated a 2.9 percent increase over the same period.

The administration is keeping to an official prediction of a 4.2 percent 1987 gain. However, Reagan officials, commenting only on condition they not be identified by name, are now saying the public forecast may soon be lowered to 3.5 percent.

USAir concludes deal to purchase Pacific Southwest

WASHINGTON (UPI) — USAir Monday said it reached an agreement to buy Pacific Southwest Airlines in a $400 million cash deal that would create the sixth-largest passenger air carrier in the nation.

Edwin Colodny, chairman and chief executive officer of USAir Group, said the transaction still needs approval by shareholders of the two companies and the federal government. Colodny said he anticipates "no significant opposition" and expects the deal to be completed during the first quarter of 1987.

USAir, with headquarters in Washington and a hub in Pittsburgh, is the nation's No. 8 airline in terms of passengers flown and serves 78 airports in 31 states and Canada.

No. 10 PSA, a strong force in the California market, serves 29 airports in six Western states and Mexico.

Colodny said at a news conference the acquisition would put USAir in sixth place with passengers flown domestically after the Texas Air group, Delta-Western, American, United and Northwest-Republic airlines.

USAir and PSA will have a combined work force of 20,000 people.

"We've had a long interest in expansion in California," Colodny said.

He said PSA will be operated initially as a wholly owned subsidiary of USAir but that the two airlines will be merged "after a reasonable transition period."

"We don't plan any layoffs," Colodny said.

"USAir has a reputation for treating its employees fairly," Paul Barkley, PSA's chairman and chief executive officer, said in a statement.

"USAir Group has assured me there will be no reduction in wage rates because of this transaction, which we believe is in the best interest of our employees," he said. "We expect our unions will agree."

Under the proposed agreement USAir is to acquire PSA at a cash price of $17 a share. PSA common stock closed at $11.25 Friday on the over-the-counter markets.

Weinberger to discuss Iran with Thatcher

LONDON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger is expected to discuss the Iranian arms controversy with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today and may learn whether Britain will buy sophisticated radar planes, U.S. officials say.

Weinberger may announce some additional "Star Wars" research contracts for British firms, but his talks on military matters for the most part should be routine, the officials added.

Weinberger planned to meet privately with British Defense Secretary George Younger "and may receive some kind of hint about which way the English are going to go on AWACS," said a U.S. official, referring to a British decision expected on whether to purchase airborne warning and control system planes made by Boeing Co. or pursue Britain's own Nimrod project.

Weinberger arrived in London on Saturday. He earlier held consultations in Paris with French officials and attended a NATO defense ministers meeting in Brussels as well as visiting Morocco.

At each stop, the defense secretary has been dogged by questions from the allies about President Reagan's decision to sell arms to Iran. Profits from those sales were diverted to Contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government.

Weinberger is the first member of Reagan's Cabinet to travel overseas since the arms transactions were disclosed.

U.S. officials, speaking on condition that they not be identified, said they expected today's talks at 10 Downing St. to include the Iran arms deal.

"I am sure there will be some continuing discussion about the situation in the United States — the political implications of the Iranian affair," one official said.

"Mrs. Thatcher is one of our closest allies, and she's certain to want to discuss the matter," added another.

At his previous stops, Weinberger has gone to great pains to stress that Reagan was acting with the best of motives and simply hoped to reopen ties to moderate elements in Iran.

Weinberger has also said, however, that the president was receiving some bad advice. On Saturday, Reagan acknowledged in a radio address that mistakes were made in the course of pursuing his policy toward Iran.

Aides traveling with Weinberger said Sunday they expected Mrs. Thatcher to focus on the issue of how the president would regain his political strength, rather than on the arms sales themselves.

After meeting with Mrs Thatcher, Weinberger also planned a brief session with Denis Healey, the top foreign affairs official in Britain's opposition Labor Party.

The socialist Labor Party, led by Neil Kinnock, has pledged to eliminate Britain's independent nuclear deterrent and shut down U.S. nuclear bases in Britain if the party wins the next election.

Those policies have been roundly condemned by Reagan administration officials and NATO leaders alike.

The British government is now in the throes of trying to decide whether to pursue development of its own Nimrod early warning radar plane, or purchase the American AWACS made by the Boeing Co.

The Nimrod project has been plagued by cost overruns and technical problems, and two London newspapers reported Sunday the government was likely to buy the U.S. plane.

Israeli soldiers shoot, kill 12-year-old in West Bank

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Israeli soldiers shot and killed a 12-year-old Palestinian boy today at a West Bank refugee camp, Palestinian news reports said. Clashes occurred throughout the occupied territories, wounding eight.

An army official who spoke on condition of anonymity confirmed that a 12-year-old child had died, but said the cause of his death was under investigation.

At least six other Palestinians suffered gunshot wounds and two Israeli women were struck by stones in more than a dozen clashes today throughout the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, the army and witnesses said.

It was the fifth day of violence in the occupied territories. Last week, soldiers fatally shot three Palestinians, including a 14-year-old boy, and arrested more than 70 people.

Palestinian journalists said the protests were triggered by suspicions that Israel was helping Shiite Moslem Amal militia fight Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon.

The Palestine Press Service, which monitors events in the occupied territories, said soldiers fatally shot Ramadan Mohammed Daoud Zeitun in the head in a clash at the Balata refugee camp near the West Bank city of Nablus.

A hospital official at Al-Itihad Hospital in Nablus who spoke on condition of anonymity confirmed the shooting death.

The army official confirmed a 12-year-old child had died.

The official said soldiers wounded at least four Palestinians at Balata, which has about 11,700 residents.

Israel radio reported that the army also fired tear gas at the camp.

The army official said soldiers shot and wounded two Palestinians in clashes in Gaza City and Jerusalem. Maqseed Hospital in East Jerusalem reported one person was brought in with a bullet wound in his thigh, apparently the man reported wounded in Jerusalem.

The army official also said an Israeli woman was hit by stones in the West Bank city of El Bireh. Israel Radio said another Israeli woman was slightly injured when her car was pelted with stones near the Jewish settlement of Psagot.

French premier withdraws education bill

PARIS (AP) — Premier Jacques Chirac today announced the withdrawal of the university bill that brought hundreds of thousands of protesting students into the streets and led to some violent confrontations.

The announcement came as millions of people stopped working briefly — some for just a minute but others for an hour between 11 a.m. and noon — to mourn the death of a 22-year-old student killed early Saturday.

Chirac, who spoke with reporters after meeting with Cabinet ministers, said he asked Education Minister Rene Monory to "engage immediately in a wide consultation.

"No adaptation (of universities), as necessary as it may be, can be carried through without a large adhesion of all of the interested parties, notably students and teachers," the conservative leader said.

"It can only be done in calm. It clearly appears that that is not the case today. Demonstrations in process, with all of the risks of violence and the dangers that they entail for all, are the proof," Chirac said.

A spokesman at the presidential palace said Socialist President Francois Mitterrand was satisfied with Chirac's announcement. "This decision conforms with the position expressed to the prime minister by the president."

Although the government said its proposal would make schools more competitive, the students claimed it would create an elite university system.

French high school graduates now are allowed to enter any state university they wish. There is a modest registration fee and students have to pay for their own housing and books, but there is no tuition, and everyone receives a similar state diploma upon graduation.

The proposed legislation would let universities set their own admission and curriculum standards.

Monory announced Friday three controversial parts of the measure would be withdrawn for further study and consultations, but students demanded complete withdrawal of the bill.

The death of Malik Oussekine early Saturday, after what witnesses said was a severe beating by three policemen, dramatically changed the mood of the protest.

Dozens of people clashed with about 500 police in the Latin Quarter student district Sunday. The protesters threw stones, burned barricades, smashed windows and set cars afire.

At least 68 people, including 58 police, were injured and 28 people were arrested. Student leaders distanced themselves from the troublemakers.

At a congress of his Rally for the Republic party Sunday, Chirac appealed for calm, but said the government "will accept neither disorder nor attempts at destabilization waged by minorities."

The same day, the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor, France's largest union federation, voiced support for students who planned mass demonstrations Wednesday.

Communist rebels say U.S. bases in Philippines must go

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Communist negotiators said today that a lasting peace is impossible in the Philippines unless U.S. military bases are closed and warned that a dispute over military patrolling could prevent a cease-fire agreement from going into effect this week.

The nationwide, 60-day truce was signed Nov. 27 by the government of President Corazon Aquino and the Communist-dominated National Democratic Front and is to go into effect Wednesday.

During the cease-fire the two sides are to begin talks on "substantive issues," including land reform, political change and the status of American bases here.

The armed forces reported today that two soldiers were killed and a total of six were wounded in separate ambushes in the Luzon island provinces of Zambales and Abra. The army blamed Communist rebels for the Sunday attacks.

At a breakfast meeting with reporters, three Front representatives said they have not softened their position that the U.S. bases must ultimately be closed.

They also took issue with statements by senior military commanders that the army will continue patrols in rebel areas during the cease-fire and that anyone caught with illegal weapons will be subject to arrest.

South African government says 256 youths under 16 being held

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government said today that 256 youths under age 16 are being held without charge under state of emergency regulations, including an 11-year-old.

The government also holds six youths who are 12, 21 who are 13, 88 who are 14, and 140 who are 15, according to the first official accounting of detained children, which was provided by the commissioner of police, Gen. J.P. Coetzee.

Anti-apartheid monitoring groups estimate between 1,300 and 4,000 children under 18 are in detention and have appealed for their release before Christmas.

The Black Sash, a group leading the "Free the Children" campaign, challenged the government to release figures for detained 16- and 17-year-olds.

"We are concerned that the commissioner does not appear to be aware of the fact that in terms of South African legislation, children are those under the age of 18," said Black Sash official Ethel Walt.

An estimated 20,000 people have been detained since the state of emergency was declared June 12. Monitoring groups estimate about half remain in detention.

In other developments today:

— An anti-draft group which opposes deployment of white conscripts in black townships said there was a "massive concentration of troops" in the townships during the past week.

The End Conscription Campaign said soldiers set up roadblocks at township entrances in the Johannesburg area and conducted house-to-house searches. The group said the defense force called up thousands of conscripts in the past two weeks and refused to grant leaves during December.

The South African Defense Force, asked for a response, said it "does not comment on troop strength and deployment."

— The chairman of South Africa's largest industrial group urged the government to abolish the law which mandates racially segregated neighborhoods. A.M. Rosholt, whose Barlow Rand Ltd. employs 232,000 people, said in the company's annual report the government should not opt for piecemeal reform of the Group Areas Act, a cornerstone of apartheid.

— The owner of the Vaal Reefs Gold Mine said about 500 miners quit following factional fighting which left 20 dead and 72 injured. An Anglo American Corp. spokesman said the workers apparently were fed up with the violence.

— The Bureau for Information, in its daily report on violence, said a black man was killed Sunday in a black township near Cape Town by a security force officer who fired birdshot after being threatened by five blacks.

More than 2,100 people, almost all of them blacks, have died in unrest since September 1984.

Under emergency rules, the government has sweeping powers to detain people. Reporters are not allowed to describe security force actions or publish the names of detainees without government permission.

Anti-apartheid groups contend the government detained many children without formally notifying their parents.

The police commissioner also denied widespread complaints that children are sometimes placed in the same cells with adult criminals.

A detailed report issued last month by the Detainees' Parents Support Committee contended that many youths were abused or tortured in detention.

British professor, wife to be deported

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A British professor was served with a deportation order and taken into police custody today, a British diplomat said.

Philip Bonner, who teaches history at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg, was ordered to leave South Africa by Dec. 15, according to the British consul here, John Dove.

Bonner's wife, Chris, works with the predominantly black Chemical Workers Industrial Union and also was believed to be sought for deportation, according to Rod Crompton, the union's general secretary.

Crompton said authorities had not yet been able to locate Mrs. Bonner, whom he described as "an experienced and very effective trade unionist."

Two Soviet soldiers cross border to West Germany

HANOVER, West Germany (AP) — Two 19-year-old Soviet soldiers stationed in East Germany escaped into West Germany during the weekend, officials said today. It was the first Red Army defection across the heavily fortified border since 1984.

Interior Ministry spokesman Michael-Andreas Butz said the two Soviets made their way across the border at about 7:40 a.m. Saturday near the northern West German city of Wolfenbuettel.

The border patrol command in Wolfenbuettel said the soldiers crossed so quickly that East German guards did not have time to shoot at them.

Both soldiers wore civilian clothes during the escape. They did not carry arms and were not injured, border police said.

Butz told a news conference in Bonn their unit was not stationed near the border with West Germany. There are about 250,000 Soviet soldiers in Communist East Germany.

Butz said both men are from Estonia and hold the lowest rank in the Red Army, the equivalent of private. One of them had been in the Soviet army one month, while the other was drafted nine months ago.

Swiss probing Iran deal

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — The federal prosecutor's office opened an inquiry today to determine if U.S. arms shipments to Iran were sent through Switzerland in violation of Swiss law, government spokesman Achille Casanova said.

He told reporters unauthorized use of Switzerland as a conduit for such shipments would contravene laws on arms trading.

The Swiss Sunday newspaper Sonntagsblick quoted unidentified arms dealers as saying U.S. deliveries shipped to Iran through Switzerland included at least three Cobra helicopter gunships, howitzers and spare parts for MX-18 tanks.

Casanova also said Swiss authorities have received a formal United States request for judicial help in the U.S. investigation of the matter.

He said the request concerned two Swiss bank accounts that may have been used in connection with the secret arms deal.

Center open near Auschwitz

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — In a gesture of reconciliation, West German and Polish officials opened an international youth center Sunday near the site of the Nazis' Auschwitz death camp.

The West German delegation, including representatives of all four political parties in the Parliament, toured the former concentration camp, now a state-run museum and memorial, and participated in ribbon-cutting ceremonies for the new international meeting center for youth organizations.

Providing the organization for the center were the Polish veterans association Zbowid, and Action Mark of Atonement, a West Berlin volunteer organization that has been active since the 1950s in civic and social projects in Israel and countries occupied by the Nazis during World War II.

The head of the West German delegation, Rita Suessmuth, minister for youth, health and social affairs, said the fate of the millions of Auschwitz victims "will remain for us a live warning."

"All the people who suffered so much at the hands of the Germans — first of all, the Jews, Poles and Russians — should know that we will not put aside this history and we will not forget its victims," she said.

An estimated four million people, including more than 2.5 million Jews — perished at Auschwitz between 1940-45.

Cost of Chernobyl soars

LONDON (AP) — The cost to the Soviet Union of the Chernobyl nuclear accident has soared well above Moscow's original estimate of 2 billion rubles — $2.9 billion, the Times of London reported Monday.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev revealed the increased cost to Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland of Norway at a two-hour meeting Friday in the Kremlin, The Times said.

Soviet Finance Minister Boris Gostev announced the 2 billion ruble figure in September, The Times said.

Mrs. Brundtland said Gorbachev did not give a revised cost estimate from the April 26 explosion at the Chernobyl nuclear power station, near Kiev in the Ukraine, that emitted a radioactive cloud monitored around the world.

"He told me that it was now clear that it was going to be much higher than the earlier estimate of 2 billion rubles," she was quoted as saying.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

"Can you do it right away?"

GETTING THE JUMP ON COLD WEATHER

It's a statistical fact: every year tens of thousands of motorists are caught unprepared for cold weather. To help car owners get ahead of the game, Car Care Council offers a "stitch in time" checklist.

1) COOLING SYSTEM: If it hasn't been done in a while, flush it out with a good chemical cleaner and install fresh anti-freeze. Note: Use in proper proportion. Pure antifreeze (ethylene glycol) does not cool nor protect as well as the proper mixture prescribed on the container. Check connections, belts, hoses, pressure cap and thermostat.

2) BATTERY AND ELECTRICAL SYSTEM: If your battery is over a few years old, have it checked. Cold weather is hard on batteries. Be sure connections are clean and tight. Corroded or loose connections can give the symptoms of a weak or dead battery.

3) ENGINE: Is it time for a tune-up? Faulty wiring, worn spark plugs, a sticking choke or emission control devices that need attention all can lead to hard starting. A diagnostic check-up of the engine can be a good pre-winter investment.

4) OIL AND FILTER: Dirty oil can give you trouble in the winter. Now's the time to change it. Change the oil filter, too. Your car may have several other filters that need checking at this time, including the fuel & air filters.

5) TIRES: For every 10° of temperature drop, your tire pressure decreases by one pound. Obviously if you haven't checked tire pressure since last summer, they're likely to be several pounds under-inflated. Periodic rotating of tires along with wheel alignment and balancing all contribute to longer tire life.

6) BODY AND PAINT: Be sure to give the car a good protective coating of wax before the weather turns nasty. This is critical in areas where salt is used for snow removal.

Whether you're a "do-it-yourselfer" or a patron of the professional repairman, there's a lot to be said for getting the car care chores out of the way before the severe weather arrives.

For additional information on "HOW TO FIND YOUR WAY UNDER THE HOOD AND AROUND THE CAR", send 25¢ and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Car Check, Car Care Council, 600 Renaissance Center, Detroit, Michigan 48243.
