'Sermon on the Square'

By Mary Kaigler

It was the wheelbarrow full of yellow tulips that lured me into the shop. I can't resist yellow tulips. There is something so fresh and unabashedly confident about them; so uncluttered in simple, elegant beauty. They look you right in the eye; doggedly determined, in an unassuming, uncompromising way to perpetually be in a state of blissful happiness. This brazen naivete makes me laugh and makes a lump in my throat at the same time. I love them for this; so, I had to go in.

Almost a garden of greetings, but not "garden-variety" greetings by any means, the store was filled with every sort of expression of thought, wish, motto or message you could think of to send someone.

Always a pushover (a sucker, really) for well-done displays, I appreciated the obvious time and talent spent on the front windows and tables and shelves throughout the shop. Following the trend of the last two decades to cater to American's love for things from our past, the store was steeped in the art and craft of nostalgia.

Perhaps seeing and valuing our past as a "gentler, kinder", less complicated, more innocent time leads us to want to gather the trappings of it around us in an effort to soften some of today's sharp angles and harshness. Maybe in our sophisticated, high-tech, fast-paced world we feel that we can best express our deepest, real thoughts in the packaging of yesterday.

Whatever the reason for the trend, it was there all over the store; old-fashioned principles, idealism and brotherly love, tastefully presented in old-fashioned beauty. A pleasant atmosphere of apple pie-motherhood, eyelet ruffle-crocheted lace sentiments embodied in scripture and verse.

But, as I paid for the graduation cards, my eye caught the sight of something different in tone. Juxtapositioned with the sweetness of all these genteel motifs of "yesteryear" was a new wall of sophisticated, plate-glass mirror panels. Widening and lighting the store and multiplying the images of the decorative items it was, for all its modern sleekness, incongruously "just right".

Just as surprising as how well it "fit", was the reply of Lona Mac Phelps, mother of the owner, when I mentioned the new wall.

"Since the Lord gave us the mirrors, we thought we ought to use them in the shop."

On asking I found that the ten mirrors were rescued from a load of old J. C. Penney displays destined for the trash bin. The costs of display materials being what they are, Elaine Campbell, owner, was quick to see the potential, and she feels that this heavenly boon was not an accident of chance.

"We needed, He provided. . .", she said. (It seems that there is something shining in more than just the catchy play-on-words name of that little gift shop located on the west side of the courthouse square.)

Driving back for a truck and finally getting the mirrors safely to Haskell made being in the right place, at the right time, with the right person, pay off in the recycling of a discard, which was headed for a dumpster, into a thing of beauty and usefulness. Even with their pared-down lines and cool, hard-surfaced contemporary styling, the mirrors were as "right as rain" for the store; beautifully reiterating and compounding by reflection the traditional essence of the whole place.

Mrs. Phelps does not doubt that the Lord led them to the mirrors, and who am I to doubt it? Who is there who can understand or explain the mysterious ways and means by which both large and small wonders are performed?

Backing out from the curb and going around the corner of the square I mused that if the Lord will help recycle mirrors, then why not modern high-tech, high-rise, high-expectation life styles which have somehow become stalled on high-center in the fast-lane, or stuck spinning in a low rut of inescapable frustration. I wondered. Is the Lord really into recycling? Will He, indeed, pull the most unlikely, discarded has-beens from the trash heap and make them into productive, useful reflections of His goodness and light?

As I bumped along up Brick Street considering the question, my mind heard the answer. "He's done it before!"

With pots of happy tulips bouncing in the back of the Bronco I turned into the driveway realizing that I'd just encountered an unexpected Saturday morning sermon; as eloquent as any on Sunday could ever be.

Tax rebate for this month shows increase

The sales tax rebate to Haskell this month showed a 3.82-percent gain over a year ago, but the city still is nearly 9 percent below 1990's figure for the first five months of the year.

This month's check in the amount of $8,701.27 compares with one for $8,381.34 for the same period last year.

For the year, Haskell's one-percent sales tax has brought the city $73,226.59 in the first five months of the year. Last year, the city received $80,369.44 for the same period.

Only other Haskell County city to receive a tax-rebate check this month was Rule, in the amount of $891.43, about the same as last year's check for $889.25 for the same period.

This month's checks represented taxes collected on April sales and reported in May by businesses filing monthly tax returns.

Youngsters provide Super Saturday fun

Haskell residents were treated to some exciting events Saturday in conjunction with Super Second Saturday.

The fun began with a greased pig chase which was held behind Heads or Tails. It was followed by a calf head roping contest. There were some champion pig chasers and ropers in Haskell Saturday.

In the 10, 11 and 12 year old age group, Will Trammell of Haskell was the first place winner. Aaron Hartsfield came from Durango, Colo., to win second place in this age group.

In the 8 and 9 year old age group, Jason Trammell of Haskell was the first place winner. There was a tie for second place between Shayne McKenzie of Rule and Josh Mickler of Sinton.

In the 7 years and under age group, Deshea Phemister of Haskell won first place and Justin Brueggeman of Weinert won second place.

There was some tough competition in the calf head roping contest. At the end of the contest, there was a three-way tie. This called for a rope-off to determine winners, and the pressure was on. After some tough loops were thrown, the contest ended with the following results: First place, went to Hegan Lamb of Haskell, second place to Mitchell Cox of Haskell and third place to Roni Morrow of Knox City.

The fun moved to the square after lunch for a stick horse rodeo that began at 2 p.m. In the barrel race, first place went to Adam Blair of Haskell, second place to Justin Tidrow of Haskell and third place to Morgan Cox of Haskell.

In the pole race, first place went to Adam Blair, second place to Justin Tidrow and third place to Morgan Cox.

Old tires bouncing back in new roads

Imagine a wall, 25 feet tall, encircling the entire state. That's a big wall, even in Texas. But the 280 million tires that are discarded in the United States every year could build a wall that big.

Instead, engineers have found a better way to use some of the old tires piling up in landfills in every community in America. They're making asphalt-rubber, a paving material composed of asphalt cement and up to 25 percent crumb rubber, which is derived primarily from grinding up old tires.

Texas is a pioneer in the use of asphalt-rubber. Since 1983, more than 3.6 million tires have been put to work on Texas highways. In all, 85,000 tons of asphalt-rubber have been used on more than 3,700 lane miles, using 800 to 1,000 tires per mile, in 20 of the state's 24 highway districts.

Asphalt-rubber was developed in the early 1960s by Charles McDonald, a highway engineer from Arizona. He was searching for a flexible material to seal cracks in deteriorating roads. The materials then used were too rigid. Under the weight of traffic, old cracks in the original surface "reflected" upward through the new surface.

Adding rubber to asphalt provided the elasticity, but the high cost of rubber made the material too expensive for widespread use. After trying various materials, McDonald came upon the idea of using old tires as a cheap source of rubber and began experiments with mixtures and application techniques.

Texas began using asphalt-rubber in 1976. A survey by the Asphalt Rubber Producers Group has found that the installation of an interlayer of asphalt-rubber between the old road surface and a seal coat of new asphalt pavement has eliminated reflective cracking on interstate, primary and secondary routes for the past 14 years.

Former theater owner recalls movies' golden era

(A. J. Stone, whose long career in the movie theater business began when he was a school boy in Haskell, was the subject recently of a feature story in the Hood County News of Granbury.)

(Stone, who once worked simultaneously at the Texas Theatre, and the old Crystal silent movie theater, became manager of the Texas about 1935, remaining in that capacity until he entered the service during World War II. He returned to Haskell and the Texas Theatre after the war in 1945. He later moved to Stamford.)

(The story in the Hood County News follows):

By Lisa Perot-Twigg

His backyard is a silent memorial of another era.

In a wooded area extending past his patio in deCordova Bend Estates, soft music fills the air and blue lights filter through the trees to create an imitation of the drive-in atmosphere that he came to know and love during his 55 years in show business.

Looking closely, one can see a metal post with drive-in car speakers nestled among the trees, a ghost from days gone by.

A. J. Stone was always fascinated with the theater. "I started out delivering circulars in 1927 for the Alcove Theater in Stamford," he said.

"I was in it (show business) during that wonderful era when vaudeville was coming to an end and the silent movies were beginning to talk."

Stone managed or owned theaters and drive-ins in Stamford, Haskell, Tyler, Slaton, Baird, Albany, Beaumont, Graham, Odessa and other places.

"Most of those theaters are gone now," said Stone. "There used to be a time when going to the movie was something special. The theaters were designed to be spectacular, to make going to the theater a memorable occasion."

But the large, gilded picture show with velvet covered seats and intricately carved ceiling moldings is a thing of the past, replaced by the small, box-like cinemas we have today in shopping centers and malls across the United States.

Stone still owns one of the gilded theaters in Stamford. The Grand Theater is just that, a grand old 900-seat theater made the way theaters used to be with lovely carpets, double doors and a huge concession area. "It's ready to go. Everything is in perfect working order. I'd like to see the community groups and organizations in Stamford get together and purchase it to hold community events," Stone said.

Show business has been his bread and butter for most of his life. He worked in all phases of the theater business from the art department to manager of chain theaters and drive-ins to owner and manager of a drive-in and theater in Stamford.

"Advertising was a big part of show business," he said, displaying some of the many handbills he has in his collection, some dating back to the silent movie days.

"We used to create false advertising fronts that were collapsible and moveable for the front of the theater, advertising the present attraction and feature those shows to come."

During his high school years Stone worked with the top art man with the R&R Theater chain, a man who showed Stone the ins and outs of marquee and circular advertising.

"Once we advertised that we were going to give away a live baby on stage at the theater," he mused. "So many people showed up that night that we had the people hanging out the balcony. We did give away a baby, a baby pig! They had to remove the pig during the movie because it was making such a fuss and squealing."

Stone met his wife, Mary Ruth, in 1942, while he was managing the Palace Theater in Graham. She was a cashier in the box office there. "She looked like a prima donna in that box office."

A few months later they were married and Stone went to war, leaving his wife to manage the theater.

Stone's daughter, Andrea, was 18 months old when he returned from overseas to see her for the first time.

"I was in Patton's Army. I served for two years and six months in the ETO 2nd Division. We were a part of D-Day and we met the Russians at Czechoslovakia."

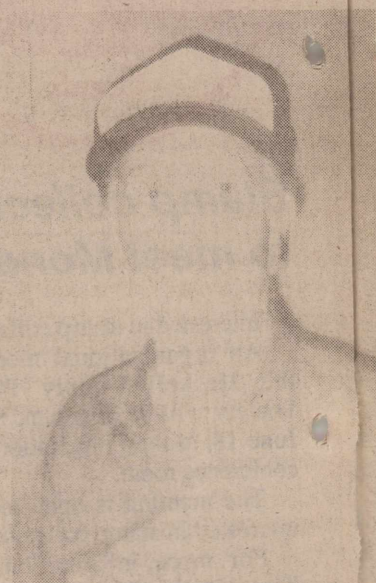

H&H Theatres built the Stamford drive-in in 1949 and hired Stone to manage it. He and his wife and daughter lived in a two-story, three-bedroom apartment built right into the theater's huge screen.

Drive-ins were a big craze during the 50s and families could load up the kids and head to the drive-in and turn them loose in the playground while they watched a movie from their car.

"Over the years the film industry began to cater to the young crowd and made more movies with action and chase scenes instead of cowboy films and the audience changed from older folks to kids."

Young people were always noted for trying to sneak into the drive-in without paying. "We had fence climbers and as many as 10 kids trying to hide in a trunk of the car. If I saw that the rear end of the car was nearly dragging the ground I could bet that it had a few kids in it."

"Drive-ins today are few and far between," said Stone, who sold his drive-in to Wal-Mart a couple of years ago. "I think there will be a few that will remain open for nostalgia, you know, a place where folks will take their kids one day and say, 'This is how we used to go to the movies,' but for the most part the drive-ins are a thing of the past."

out. First place went to Lojan Morrow from Knox City. There was a tie for second between Brennon Manske of Stamford and Bradlee Harris of Haskell.

In the stick horse race, the fastest stick horse was Adm Blair's.

The final events of the day were a Miss Cowgirl and Mr. Cowboy contest. There were two winners in the cowboy contest in the 6 and under contest. They were Geoffrey Phemister of Haskell and Ross Bullinger of Haskell.

In the 6 and under cowgirl contest, the winner was Casie Lamb of Haskell. The winner of the cowgirl contest over 6 was Rni Morrow of Knox City.

There were some tired cowboys, cowgirls, stick horses, parents and workers at the conclusion of the "rodeo".

Richard Whittenburg of Graham took pictures of the different events. The proofs are at Barbara's Boutique and pictures may be ordered through her. All prizes were compliments of Heads or Tails Western Wear.

He was just a country boy,
From an Oklahoma clan.
Just one of eight and times were hard,
In that Okie-Dust Bowl land.

He and Bonnie married,
And their love grew through the years.
And they raised five healthy children,
Through the good times and the tears.

His Mom and Dad were far from rich,
But gave thanks for what they had.
And he had to grow up working hard,
And that's a picture of my Dad.

They started their own business,
With the money that they had.
And the seed they planted flourished,
And that's a picture of my Dad.

He learned Responsibility,
At such an early age.
And his family could depend on him,
To work and share his wage.

He loved so many things in life,
That its hard to list them all.
He loved his family and his friends,
And he loved a Challenge big or small.

On every job he went on,
He was the best they had.
And you could always count on him,
And that's a picture of my Dad.

He loved a good drink and a game of cards
But he was seldom ever sad.
And life's problems couldn't get him down
And that's a picture of my Dad.

He played football at Shawnee High,
And one year they never lost.
In fact played the game so well,
That their goal was never crossed.

He loved to Hunt and Fish and Plant,
And he loved to see things grow.
From a new born calf to a garden sprout,
Life's miracle impressed him so.

Six-two with dark and wavy hair,
He was such a handsome lad.
And Bonnie was his sweetheart,
And that's a picture of my Dad.

He never did forget his roots,
But thanked God for what he had.
And his inner strength impressed us all,
And that's a picture of my Dad.

He never finished college,
But the fire to learn was there.
He had to work the oilfields,
He had to earn his share.

I'm so proud he was my Father,
For all the things that he went through.
And the obstacles he overcame,
To make his dreams come true.

He worked for Noble Drilling,
The Youngest Operator they ever had.
And he knew how to work a crew,
And that's a picture of my Dad.

He taught me how to be a man,
And for that I'm mighty glad.
And his name was Carl Anderson,
And that's a picture of my Dad.

Hispanics challenge school bill

AUSTIN — After being in session for 92 days, top legislative leaders were all smiles when Gov. Bill Clements signed school finance and tax bills last week, but not many Hispanic lawmakers.

State Rep. Greg Luna, D-San Antonio, predicted that the court will reject the plan. "Don't fool yourself. We have not addressed the issue," said Luna, a founding member of the Mexican Amer-so who can blame Cavazos, Luna, Wilson and poor school districts for beseeching the state courts for progress?

So, What's Next?

The question: Now that the courts have taken care of prisons, mental health and education ... what's next?

Whether court-ordered spending is right or wrong is one thing, but the reality is that political power is something you take, not something given.

It is clear to lawmakers and taxpayers alike that the Texas Supreme Court has forced the Legislature to raise the sales tax once again.

Personal Income Tax

What is less obvious, but true nevertheless, is that several justices wanted the Legislature to enact a personal state income tax. And they still want it.

State health officials mismanaged millions in revenues, according to Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, and begged for emergency cash this session so that some health programs wouldn't be shut down.

Will the next Texas Supreme Court force a state income tax to upgrade those same health programs? Time will tell.

AG Nominees Clash

Two lawmakers vying for attorney general clashed over the new tax bill, with one accusing the other of political hypocrisy.

GOP state Sen. Buster Brown, who fought new taxes until the compromise, blasted state Rep. Dan Morales, a Democrat, for voting against new taxes, even though Morales supported them up to the final vote.

Morales is on record supporting a state income tax in earlier sessions, but wants a more conservative record while he's running against Brown, said one source.

Sessions' Accomplishments

Before adjournment last week, the Legislature:

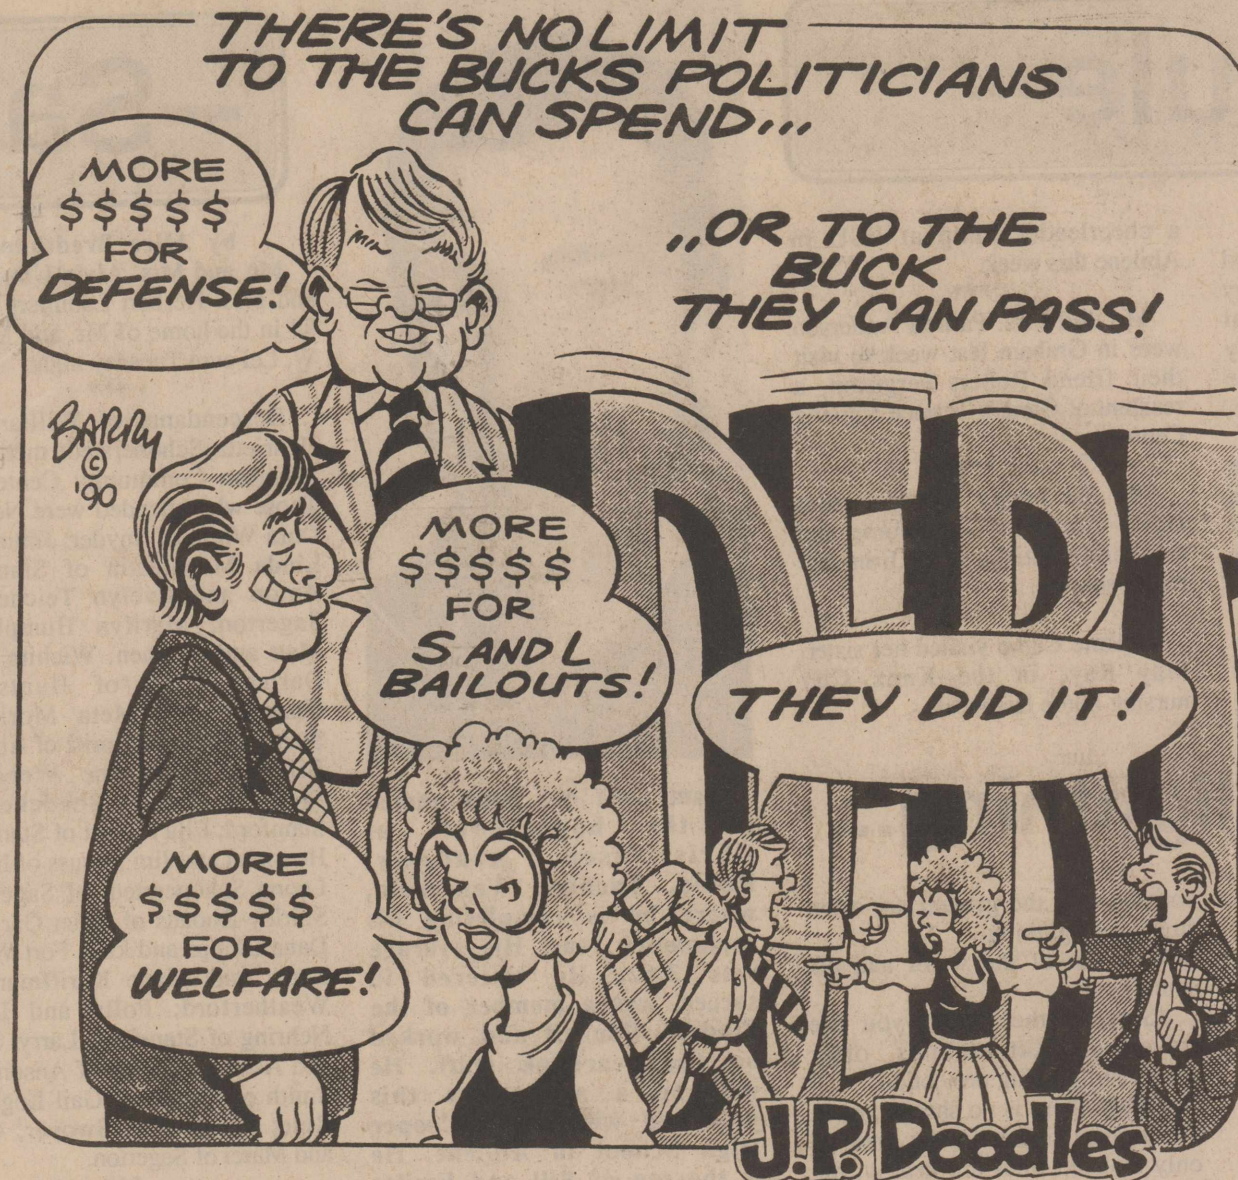

- Raised the basic education allotment from $1,470 in the 1989-90 school year to $1,910 per student next year;
- Increased state education aid by about $528 million in the 1990-91 school year;
- Gave the governor the power to appoint the state education commissioner beginning March 1;
- Provided $17.90 per student in state funds for each extra penny of local property taxes over a 54 cent rate;
- Allocated about $100 million to the Department of Human Services;
- Failed to reduce the state tax on pari-mutuel gambling; and
- Failed to pass a proposed amendment which would have increased lawmakers' per diem from $30 to $70. It passed the House, but failed in the Senate.

Knox Vegetable Festival next week

The 1990 Knox County Vegetable Festival is scheduled next Thursday, Friday and Saturday (June 21-23) in Munday.

Activities will include a baby contest Thursday, a Little Miss pageant and Miss Vegetable Festival Friday and a parade Saturday.

Arts and crafts booths, game booths, food shows, games, displays, an auction and a raffle, as well as a dance, also are on Saturday's schedule.

Hate to give the big head to Elbert Johnsons and the Doy Highs out yonder, but a Gallup Poll reveals that 62 percent of rate pharmacists as having "high" or "very high" standards of honest and ethics.

That makes them the most respected professionals in the country.

Nine points back of pharmacist come members of the clergy (5 percent), followed by doctors and dentists (52 percent), college teachers and engineers (51 percent) and policemen (50 percent).

All the rest of us fall below 50 percent, which is another way of saying that most people think we're at least a bit crooked.

At the bottom of Gallup's list were car salesmen (6 percent), advertising professionals (11 percent), stockbrokers (14 percent), labor union leaders (15 percent), real estate agents (16 percent) and state office holders (17 percent).

Newsman were near the middle of the two extremes with a 32-percent approval rating, putting them right up there (or down there) with bankers and funeral directors.

Move over Yogi Berra. Yo have company.

Commenting on his firing a manager of the New York Yankees, Bucky Dent told a radio audience:

"If I am the scapegoat, then I am the scapegoat."

Time was when we called certain disasters "acts of God," and accepted the fact that there was nothing man could have done about them.

But in our suit-happy society, it is becoming impossible to accept the fact that something just happens.

Recent floods in East Texas have prompted homeowners to look for someone to sue. One target is the Dallas City Council. That group is being blamed for failing to build levees that would have held back the flood waters of the Trinity River.

The Trinity River Authority is another possible defendant. It is being charged with failure to keep flood gates closed, and also with opening the flood gates.

Suits have been filed by families of airline crash victims asking for damages from weather forecasters for "meteorological malpractice."

"Acts of God" may still occur, but until some shrewd lawyer figures out a way to extract money from the Lord, we're not going to hear much about them.

You'll have to be retirement age to qualify, but the National Association of Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) Alumni will have its first national reunion Sept. 27-29 in Pigeon Forge, Tenn. No doubt, there are some in the Haskell area who were in the "3 Cs" during the Great Depression.

The CCC gave employment to about 3 million men during the 1930s which resulted in improvements and conservation projects in the parks and forests.

More than a third of those enrolled in the corps during its nine-year history had never held a job. In its peak year, 1939, the corps had 3,000 camps with 520,000 men. Thousands of illiterate men were taught to read and write and hundreds earned high school diplomas. A few even earned college degrees.

If you don't mind mowing, but hate to rake up and bag the clippings, don't do it.

A new study shows that the common practice of bagging grass clippings is not necessary. And solid waste experts say it's about time the message got out because our landfills are choking on millions of plastic bags of grass and leaf clippings.

The "Don't Bag It" study from the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, demonstrated that lawns actually become healthier when homeowners left grass clippings on lawns. The findings demonstrate that leaving clippings on lawns is one solution for America's landfill crisis. The EPA estimates that grass clippings and leaves account for more than 18 percent of household waste sent to landfills.

The test revealed that lawns are 30 percent healthier when the clippings are left.

Gough challenges foe to back Perry

Graham businessman/cattle feeder Fred Gough is questioning whether his opponent, Breckenridge lawyer John Cook, is really loyal to local ranchers and farmers.

Both Gough and Cook are running for State Representative in District 64.

In a letter dated June 5 mailed to Cook and newspapers throughout the area, Gough questions Cook's apparent support of Democratic Agricultural Commissioner Jim Hightower.

"Who do you support for Texas Commissioner of Agriculture?" asks Gough.

The letter goes on:

"The voters of our district have a right to a straight answer to this question. I realize that as a lawyer, you are not accustomed to giving short and simple answers, but in this case I believe that there are only two acceptable responses: 'Jim Hightower' or 'Rick Perry'.

"As you know, the 1990 election will be one of the most important in history to local agriculture/ranching interests. Most noteworthy is that we have not only the opportunity to elect an agriculture commissioner who truly represents and works in agriculture but we also have the opportunity for perhaps the first time to elect a 'homegrown' leader to a statewide office.

"In the March primaries, Democrats and Republicans alike combined to say overwhelmingly that they wanted 'Anybody But Hightower'. Will you join them in saying 'No' to his show-boating politicalization of the position of agriculture commissioner? Or will you turn your back on the people whom you seek to represent and blindly follow party lines to support a candidate who is as grossly unqualified for Agriculture as Michael Dukakis was to parade around in a tank?

"John, you and I both know Rick Perry and what Rick's victory in the Texas Commissioner of Agriculture race could mean here at home as well as statewide. However, I am shocked to learn that you might be turning your back on Rick and instead supporting a man who has never ranched or farmed in his life. A man who was Jesse Jackson's 1988 Texas campaign chairman. A man who has spit in the face of the Texas Farm Bureau. John, are you really supporting Jim Hightower?

"If you are, I urge you to reconsider and join me in supporting Rick Perry for Texas Commissioner of Agriculture. Our district has spoken. Democrats, Republicans and Independents alike are fed up with Jim Hightower. You and I owe it to ourselves, the voters of District 64 and the Texas Farm Bureau to do the right thing and work for Rick Perry's election.

"With this important cause in mind, I am hereby challenging you to answer this question of whom you support. Furthermore, I feel you should join with me and others, including the Texas Farm Bureau, in asking voters throughout District 64 to support Rick Perry for Texas Commissioner of Agriculture.

"Please address your answer to this question to the newspapers and radio stations in Hood, Shackelford, Palo Pinto, Young, Callahan, Throckmorton, Stephens and Haskell counties by Wednesday, June 13.

"I look forward to your answer and enthusiastically hope you will join with me in supporting Rick Perry for Texas Commissioner of Agriculture."

Gough said that both he and Cook would be seeking the endorsement of the Texas Farm Bureau and other agriculture/ranching groups. "I don't feel it is right for a candidate to accept the endorsement of an organization unless they strongly agree with their issues and concerns," said Gough. "My opponent will be a modern-day Benedict Arnold if he seeks the endorsement of ag groups without being willing to support them on important issues like the election for Commissioner of Agriculture."

CHECK YOUR DEPOSIT INSURANCE

The sign at your bank or savings and loan states that your accounts are insured up to $100,000. Knowing the rules of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation can help you extend your protection beyond this amount.

Generally, the FDIC insures only $100,000 per person per institution. Thus, if you have more than one account in a single bank, only $100,000 of the aggregate of your accounts is protected. Amounts over that are uninsured.

To increase your protection, you can simply spread your accounts over a number of different banks. Remember, however, that accounts in different branches of the same bank will be aggregated. Only $100,000 will be insured if, for example, you have $40,000 in Branch A and $90,000 in Branch B.

Because joint accounts are insured apart from separate accounts, you can increase your protection by placing some funds into a joint account. If you and your spouse have a joint account and each of you has a separate account, the three accounts can be insured to a total of $300,000. As with personal accounts, however, all joint accounts held by the same persons will be aggregated. In addition, an individual is only covered for $100,000 in all joint accounts.

Different types of accounts are also aggregated. For example, if you have an $80,000 certificate of deposit, a $10,000 checking account, and a $30,000 savings account all at the same bank, $20,000 of the total will not be insured. Individual retirement accounts (IRAs), however, are separately insured to $100,000 as are some trusts.

Finally, the FDIC's protection includes both principal and interest. Once the account grows to $100,000, any additional interest earned will not be insured.

Review your accounts with your banker to be sure you have the protection you need.

Sit up straight, good advice

When you mother told you to sit up straight, she knew what she was talking about.

Sitting up straight is one of the ways to lessen the chances of back pain while increasing back strength, according to a free publication on back pain available from Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Many people experience back pain at one time or another, but most recover within a month or two; however, for 65,000 Americans, back injuries in 1990 will result in chronic suffering and disability as well as in long-term medical care.

Here are some other tips to prevent back pain while sitting for prolonged periods, standing, sleeping and driving:

- When sitting, push your hips back in the chair with your thighs parallel to the floor.

- At work, use a firm, straight-backed chair that has armrests and padded support for your lower back. The chair should allow your feet to rest flat on the floor; if necessary, use a footrest.

- Avoid bending over your desk for extended periods.

- To void fatigue when standing, change your posture frequently by walking, bending or stretching. Keep your knees slightly bent, and shift your weight occasionally.

- Stand erect with your chin in, had up and back straight.

- Sleep on a firm mattress, or place a plywood board between the mattress and box springs.

- Sleep on your side with knees bent and a pillow between your knees or on your back with a pillow under your knees; avoid sleeping on your stomach.

- While driving, move the seat forward to keep your knees higher than your hips.

More information on back health and on chronic back pain is available in "Managing Back Pain," a free publication available by writing to "We Care for You," Baylor College of Medicine at P. O. Box 13567, Houston, Texas 77219 or calling 1-800-392-4444.

Millions lost in federal funds

State Comptroller Bob Bullock says that Texas loses $432 million a year in federal funds because of federal laws and policies that give other states more than their fair share of federal tax dollars.

In the second of a five-part series of reports on federal funds in Texas, Bullock outlined 25 specific changes in federal laws and policies that would bring more than $400 million a year in additional federal funds back to Texas.

For example, the report says Texas loses $90 million a year in housing and community development funds because the formulas are based on how much of a state's housing was built before 1940. This formula guarantees that older northeastern states get a larger share of federal housing money.

Heart research seeks treatment

A treatment to reduce heart attack damage is the ultimate goal of a new research project at the DeBakey Heart Center of Baylor College of Medicine and The Methodist Hospital in Houston.

Researchers, funded by a five-year, $6.5 million federal grant, are studying inflammation that occurs in heart cells following a heart attack.

Sea creatures living at depths below 3,000 feet have been found to be blind or to possess their own phosphorescent lighting system.

GED diplomas presented

The auditorium of Abilene High School was the scene Friday for the yearly Big Country Adult Education Cooperative graduation.

The Adult Education Program works under the Abilene Independent School District, with 26 area school districts cooperating. Haskell ISD has participated in the General Educational Development program and English as a Second Language through Abilene for almost 10 years. The Amnesty program was begun in 1988.

Mrs. Marilyn Flournoy, director of the Education Cooperative, served as moderator of the program. About 85 students, working in conjunction with Abilene, Cooper and Wylie High Schools, received high school diplomas. Approximately 60 people from the 26 cooperating classes received certificates attesting to their successful completion of all areas of the GED tests.

A moving moment highlighted the program as Mr. Phoum Dor of Abilene, a GED graduate of the night, led the pledge of allegiance. Dor is an emigrant from Cambodia who has written a book of his and his family's horrifying experiences under four years of communist persecution.

Two young diploma graduates, both of whom are music scholarship recipients at Hardin-Simmons University, played a Bach duet for violins. The Abilene Community Band played musical selections.

Speaker for the evening was Mr. David Wray, minister of the Highland Church of Christ. Mr. Robert Glover, deputy superintendent of Abilene ISD, made the GED presentations.

Principals of the three Abilene high schools conferred the diplomas to their graduates through the Adult Education program.

A reception was held for all graduates, families and friends after the ceremony.

GED recipients from the Haskell class included those who finished their work in 1989 and were:

Belinda Bell, Hope Anquiano, Regina Billington and Peggy Hawkins, all of Haskell, and Benita Gonzales of Stamford.

Those finishing their GED this spring were Daniel Martinez, Robert Gonzales and Shirley Robinson. Others who completed their GED but were unable to attend the graduation were Angelita Castillo, Janie Rodriguez and Adam Gonzales, all of Haskell, and Diana Spray of Knox City.

Graduates

Local GED graduates who received their diplomas in exercises in Abilene Friday were, front row, Belinda Be Hope Angulano, Regina Billington, all of Haskell; Benita Gonzales of Stamford; Peggy Hawkins of Haskell; ar Penny Green and Shirley Robinson, both of Stamford; back row, Billie Cadenhead, teacher; Daniel Martinez Munday and Robert Gonzales of Haskell. Four more graduates who were unable to be present are Angelita Castil of Weinert, Janie Rodriguez and Adam Gonzales of Haskell and Diana Spray of Knox City.

Student receives awards

Kyle Clark, son of Bob and Tommye Jo Clark of Abilene, received several awards at Cooper High School's awards assembly May 23.

He received the Distinguished Service award for citizenship and leadership, the UIL scholar award and the Presidential Academic Fitness award.

He was an honor student and a member of the National Honor Society. He played football four years, was a leader in Young Life, in the senior musical and has worked part time teaching guitar and drafting. He was named to Who's Who and received the National Government and History award for high school students.

He will enter Texas A&M in the fall to study architecture and engineering.

Kyle is the grandson of Mrs. Jo Simpson of Rule and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clark of Sagerton, and great-grandson of Mrs. M. Y. Benton of Sagerton.
