Hostages' release nears

Loved ones hopeful, but wary of promise

N.Y. Times News Service

JACKSBORO, Texas — The news is good, but Rainard Walterscheid has been disappointed before, his wife says. It's one thing for Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to say that all foreign hostages should be freed, but another for the Jacksboro resident and the rest to actually be on their way home.

So while he was heartened by the development, Walterscheid, a 52-year-old field worker taken hostage by the Iraqis on Aug. 2, continues a skeptical wait.

"He was glad to hear what he did," said Margie Walterscheid, who talked to her husband via overseas telephone early Thursday. "But he's like me. He wanted someone to tell him that he was really coming."

Iraq told the world on Thursday that all foreign hostages would be freed, some as early as this weekend, but President Bush said release of the thousands of hostages would not weaken U.S. resolve to get Iraqi troops out of Kuwait.

In the United Nations, Iraq's U.N. ambassador said all the hostages, including an estimated 900 Americans held in Iraq and Kuwait since Iraqi forces overran the oil-rich emirate on Aug. 2, likely would be home by Christmas.

"Definitely, we would like to see everyone with his family by Christmas, because that is a very joyous and happy occasion, and it is time for family reunions," U.N. Ambassador Abdul Amir al-Anbari said.

Iraq officials late Thursday said foreigners can begin leaving Saturday, and that those in Baghdad, the capital city, can apply immediately for exit visas. Processing could take days, though, the officials said.

The State Department said in Washington that the Voice of America was broadcasting a message Thursday night meant for U.S. citizens in Iraq and Kuwait, saying, "We are making preparations to evacuate all U.S. citizens as soon as they are permitted to leave."

Saddam Hussein's dramatic announcement signaled the removal of a major obstacle to resolving the Persian Gulf crisis.

OSLO, Norway (AP) — A dog appearing as a witness in a cruelty case against his owner helped the defense considerably when he licked his master's face in court, the prosecution said Thursday.

King, a beagle-pointer cross-breed, "seemed very unoffended (against his owner) and at one stage licked his face," said Clas Erik Ause, prosecutor in Namdal.

The local Animal Protection League said it had received reports that King's owner, Inge Skomsvold, beat the dog.

Controversy about flag gets public airing today

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midlanders can voice their opinions on the issue at 7 p.m. tonight in Midland High School's auditorium, 906 W. Illinois.

The controversy over the Confederate flag became citywide following disruptions over the flag in other Texas high schools — although some Midland black teachers said they had been offended ever since LHS adopted the flag.

Following a racial scuffle between 300 students, the principal of Southwest High School in Fort Worth dropped the school's 23-year-old Rebel mascot and reinforced a campus ban on the Confederate flag Oct. 24.

But Midland appeared to be unaffected, according to school administrators who said they had received no complaints about LHS's Rebel flag as of Oct. 29.

Still, there were indications that the controversy eventually would come to Midland.

School board member James Fuller said at the time, "The Confederate flag is offensive considering its historical significance. Based on the other situations in Grand Prairie and Fort Worth, it's just a matter of time before we have to deal with it here."

James Bradford, an LHS teacher and social studies chairman (who taught at Carver High School — Midland's black neighborhood school — before transferring to LHS when Carver closed in 1968), said it was unfortunate that certain right-wing groups hold up the flag to "put the black man in his place, which sets the clock back."

Parker pushes for statewide property tax

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Sen. Carl Parker Thursday pre-filed legislation to establish a statewide property tax and do away with most local school taxes.

With the legislation, Texans would vote on a constitutional amendment that would establish the statewide rate at $1 for every $100 of property valuation.

Local school districts still could levy up to 25 cents per each $100 for enrichment purposes, said Parker, D-Port Arthur, but subsequent changes in the statewide rate would require approval from a majority of voters.

■ With the legislation, Texans would vote on a constitutional amendment that would establish the statewide rate at $1 for every $100 of property valuation.

"I guess what I'm doing is running a flag up to see if we can get anybody to salute," he said.

Of the more than 1,000 school districts in the state, the measure would mean a school tax decrease for about 600, he said.

The bill also would have the state assume the long-range debt of all districts at a cost of about $10 billion.

In total, Parker estimated the measure would provide an additional $370 million per year in revenue available to public schools.

America commemorates 'date that will live in infamy'

By John Sinor
N.Y. Times News Service

Today, we commemorate Pearl Harbor Day, the day nearly 200 Japanese planes attacked Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, in 1941.

If you're old enough to recall it, you remember exactly where you were. It's a day that stuck in American minds like the day John Kennedy was assassinated.

I remember I was coming out of a Sunday-afternoon performance of "Buck Benny Rides Again" at the MacDonald Theater in Eugene, Ore.

I don't recall a thing about the movie, but I remember the day.

Newsboys were on the streets selling extras. We hurried home to hear the news on the radio.

I can recall President Roosevelt's "a date that shall live in infamy" speech.

And I remember the war.

It was a distant thing for me. I was too young to go, and my father was too old.

But I had cousins who went, and the sons of neighbors went. Later, some of their homes had little flags with gold stars on them in their front windows.

We seemed to switch our lives almost overnight.

Suddenly there was little gasoline, and you

CAF to land in city next year

Dec. 7, 1991, the 50th anniversary of Pearl Harbor Day, will have a special meaning for Midland.

At that time, the Confederate Air Force will officially move its headquarters to the Tall City.

Four days of activities are scheduled to mark the CAF's 1991 grand opening in Midland.

In addition to the renowned CAF museum, other facilities will include headquarters that will house CAF offices and a 220-foot-by-300-foot hangar for aircraft storage.

The headquarters and museum will be located on a 42-acre tract at Midland International Airport.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Sunny skies forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-50s and winds from the north at 5 to 15 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be clear with a low in the upper 20s.

Saturday is expected to be sunny and warmer with a high in the mid-60s.

Thursday's high was 54 compared with the record for that date of 78 in 1966. The overnight low was 40. The record low for this date was 20 set in 1976.

STATE

Heavy clouds moved into Texas Thursday afternoon along a fast-moving cold front that rushed into the state and stretched from Texarkana to Austin.

The front moved through South Texas by late afternoon, bringing mostly cloudy skies throughout the region.

Strong north winds were blowing across most of West Texas as gusts to near 40 mph were stirring up dust in the Permian Basin, reducing the visibility to as low as 3 miles at Midland.

Afternoon temperatures in South Texas ranged from the 60s in Hill Country to near 80 degrees in the lower Rio Grande Valley. In West Texas, temperatures ranged from near 40 degrees in the Panhandle to the mid 50s in the extreme western and southern sections.

The 3 p.m. temperatures statewide Thursday ranged from 40 degrees at Dalhart to 80 degrees at McAllen.

NATION

Dry weather prevailed Thursday across most of the nation, with rain from Oklahoma to Missouri and snow lingering over Colorado and western New York state.

A cold front brought strong southerly winds to the south-central sections of the United States and wind advisories for most of Texas and Oklahoma.

Strong, gusty winds also developed over parts of Southern California, including the Tehachapi Mountains in Kern County.

High temperatures ranged from the 20s in Colorado, Wyoming, Minnesota, Wisconsin and upper Michigan, the 60s and 70s over Florida and southern Texas and the lower 80s in Southern California.

The nation's low was 1 degree in McCall, Idaho.

Flooding resulting from earlier heavy rains continued Thursday in South Carolina and in portions of the Kankakee and Wabash rivers in Indiana.

Officials announced that record flooding in Washington state last month ravaged wilderness areas in the state's western sections, with damage to Mount Baker-Snoqualmie National Forest alone estimated at $12 million.

The Wenatchee, Olympic and Gifford Pinchot forests also suffered.

Damage to roads, homes and businesses has been estimated at tens of millions of dollars and some counties were declared federal disaster areas. Two men died in Thanksgiving weekend floods.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

HOSTAGES: Release expected soon after vote

(From 1A)

But Bush said Saddam should not have taken people hostage in the first place and insisted: "The man must leave Kuwait without reservation, without condition" before the standoff can end.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said in a statement Congress could take no credit for any release of hostages, and, "It looks like Saddam is finally hearing the administration's tough message loud and clear."

The news of Saddam's announcement sent oil prices plunging to their lowest level since August, when Iraq invaded its neighbor.

The initial drop was more than $2 a barrel, but closed Thursday on the New York Mercantile Exchange at $26.40 a barrel, an 89-cent loss.

Several governments and relatives of hostages quickly welcomed Saddam's announcement, which the Iraqi leader called a response to the "positive changes" of recent diplomatic moves.

"It's an answer to our prayers," said Rande Vallekoop, whose husband has been stranded at the U.S. Embassy in Baghdad.

plan to release the 900 American hostages in response to apparent improvement in the Persian Gulf crisis, he told his wife.

"He wanted to know if I heard anything," said Margie Walterscheid, who lives with the couple's 11-year-old daughter, Raina, in this West Texas oil town of 4,000 residents about 40 miles northwest of Fort Worth. "I told him I had just seen it on TV, too."

TAXES: Other changes would require voter approval

From 1A)

Earlier Thursday, Gov.-elect Ann Richards said the next session of the Legislature probably is not the time for a major state tax overhaul.

"I don't think that the mood of the people is such that we're going to make any major changes," she said. People are accustomed to the current system, she said.

She stood by previous predictions that some re-examination of the franchise tax on business is likely, as is a constitutional amendment proposal on a state lottery.

Parker said he "briefly" discussed his ideas with Lt. Gov.-elect Bob Bullock, who will preside over the Senate when the Legislature returns Jan. 8.

"He said it sounded so good there must be something wrong with it, and he wanted to think about it before he took a position on it," Parker said.

He said constitutional provisions that hold revenue generating bills must originate in the House of Representatives do not pose a problem.

His legislation technically slips by that rule because it is drafted as a resolution, which requires a two-thirds majority in each house, and not a bill, which requires a simple majority.

The chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, James Hury, D-Galveston, was unavailable for comment Thursday.

Parker Thursday also prefiled legislation to subject all state taxes starting in 1994 to a periodic review before re-enactment by the Legislature.

He said he hoped the idea would "force politicians and Texans to take a serious look at the structure of taxes in this state."

The reviews could result in a fairer system of taxation, he said, contending that the system now gives breaks to special interests, burdens investors and discourages business growth and development.

Parker's proposal for a statewide property tax comes in anticipation of a Texas Supreme Court ruling he believes will strike down the current school finance system, which he sponsored in the Legislature.

"Questions asked by the Supreme Court ... indicate to me that the court has not read or does not understand the bill we passed," he said.

FORUM: Flag issue takes center stage tonight

(From 1A)

Midlanders can voice their opinions on the issue at 7 p.m. tonight in Midland High School's auditorium, 906 W. Illinois.

The controversy over the Confederate flag became citywide following disruptions over the flag in other Texas high schools — although some Midland black teachers said they had been offended ever since LHS adopted the flag.

Following a racial scuffle between 300 students, the principal of Southwest High School in Fort Worth dropped the school's 23-year-old Rebel mascot and reinforced a campus ban on the Confederate flag Oct. 24.

"There's no need to have any paraphernalia like the Confederate flag in the 1990s. The Civil War is over," said Lee Alcorn, president of the Grand Prairie National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The incident at the Fort Worth school was just one of several around the state that took place in October and November.

But Midland appeared to be unaffected, according to school administrators who said they had received no complaints about LHS's Rebel flag as of Oct. 29.

Still, there were indications that the controversy eventually would come to Midland.

School board member James Fuller said at the time, "The Confederate flag is offensive considering its historical significance. Based on the other situations in Grand Prairie and Fort Worth, it's just a matter of time before we have to deal with it here."

James Bradford, an LHS teacher and social studies chairman (who taught at Carver High School — Midland's black neighborhood school — before transferring to LHS when Carver closed in 1968), said it was unfortunate that certain right-wing groups hold up the flag to "put the black man in his place, which sets the clock back."

Despite his personal feelings about the flag, Bradford said that Midland had made great strides in integration efforts over the past 30 years and he would hate to see problems magnify because of the flag.

But magnify they did.

In November, LHS students began circulating positions for and against the flag. Meanwhile, board trustees discovered that the high school harbored six symbols which were out of compliance with board policy because they lacked board approval. The issue then was thrown back into the school's lap, and it was decided that the student body should vote on keeping its symbols and make its recommendation to the board.

On Nov. 28, Citizens for Positive Change, a group of Midland citizens opposed to the flag and the song "Dixie," approached school trustees at a board meeting. Cheryl Franklin asked board trustees to "gut up" and make a decision about the symbols rather than ask the students to vote on them.

"The dignity and rights of all students cannot be protected by students voting on Confederate symbols," said the Rev. Michael DeVaugh at the same meeting.

But board officials refused to take a stance on the item, which was not on the agenda, and Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said, "We are not going to pre-censor the students." Baressi said he had faith in the students to "consider each others' rights and dignity ... and choose something that all students can rally around."

But students did not select symbols nor a flag that they could all unite under. A multi-racial task force drew up a ballot and students voted overwhelmingly to keep all of the symbols as they were.

The day of the vote, LHS student Sheldon Phillips said, "Nobody is surprised that the majority won. The vote was lopsided to begin with since the majority of the school is white." About 11 percent of the LHS enrollment is black, 21 percent Hispanic, 67 percent Anglo and 2 percent Asian.

While some students were euphoric over the vote, others considered it an insult "to an entire race."

Offended students boycotted the school by staying home and attempted to burn flags on campus. Heated debates broke out during the lunch hour and after school. Members of the media swarmed to the campus. Police patroled and security was beefed up, and LHS adminstrators dealt with a bomb threat, which may have been an unrelated incidence, according to the Midland police.

On Wednesday of this week, school administrators discovered that the use of the "Confederate Battle flag" was approved as an official symbol during an Oct. 11, 1966, board meeting. But, unoffical or not, Baressi said, "The flag is still an issue" and tonight's public forum will go on as planned.

The flag will be an action item on the agenda, but no longer will have to be approved by the board. In order to remove it from the school, however, a board member must make a motion to reverse the Oct. 11, 1966, decision.

Many students and parents have said they plan to attend the meeting whether they speak or not. Derina Dickens, an LHS sophomore who has boycotted the school all week, said she probably would not speak unless someone says something that she feels compelled to respond to.

What if the board doesn't move to reverse the decision of the previous board and the flag stays?

"Then you will see a lot of white students dancing in the street," said one senior, who asked not to be identified.

"Then I will think about transferring from Lee High School," Derina said. "Some students upset about the flag are already in the process of doing that now."

KCRS Radio 550 AM will broadcast MISD's public forum live tonight, beginning at 7 p.m.

Controversy about flag, symbols has deep roots

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Regardless of how it began, Lee High School's controversial use of the Confederate flag has divided much of Midland along racial lines.

It was officially approved as a school symbol by an all-white board Oct. 11, 1966. There were no black board members to oppose it, and LHS had only a few black students until it was fully integrated in 1968, according to previous Reporter-Telegram reports.

But when was LHS named Robert E. Lee High School and how did desegregation work?

Following is a chronological list of the major events surrounding the desegregation of the Midland Independent School District and LHS's involvement.

May 17, 1954 — The U.S. Supreme Court rules "separate but equal" school systems are "inherently unequal" and violate the "equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the 14th Amendment of the Constitution."

Jan. 6, 1956 — The recently formed Biracial Advisory Committee meets to develop a plan to desegregate the Midland school system.

August 14, 1956 — In a marathon session lasting until 1 a.m. Aug. 15 and reconvening at 7:30 a.m., trustees vote to integrate schools, beginning with the "first grade only" in September. The trustees estimate approximately nine blacks will attend DeZavala Elementary School. Under this plan, which integrates one grade at a time, it is estimated that it will be September 1968 before all grades are completely integrated.

Aug. 27, 1956 — The first black student enrolls in DeZavala. By the end of the school year, four blacks are enrolled.

Aug. 30, 1956 — A black second-grade student is denied admission to DeZavala, since the second grade is not scheduled for integration until September 1957.

Jan. 23, 1961 — Board member Emil C. Rassman moves to name the new high school Robert E. Lee High School of Midland. The motion carries 4-2, with John F. Younger and Roy C. Jeter opposed. A name selection committee had presented board trustees with a list of names of former presidents, educators and Spanish suggestions such as Buena Vista, Buena Ventura and Llano Estacado.

Feb. 14, 1961 — John F. Younger moves to approve the nickname of "Rebels" and colors of maroon and white for Lee High School. The motion carries unanimously.

Oct. 11, 1966 — Board trustee Deane H. Stoltz makes a motion to approve the use of the "Confederate battle flag" as an official flag of Lee High School. The motion is carried unanimously.

Nov. 7, 1967 — The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare officials announce that segregated school systems in the South must be dismantled by the fall of 1969 or lose federal funding.

Nov. 28, 1967 — Trustees vote to close Carver Junior-Senior High School, which had been the black secondary school before integration.

April 5, 1968 — L.E. Ausbie, a black Midland minister, launches a write-in campaign for a seat on the MISD board of trustees. The board's decision to close Carver is a major factor in Ausbie's decision to run.

May 1968 — Carver is closed.

Sept. 3, 1968 — Busing of secondary students begins and both Midland and Lee High School are fully integrated.

REMEMBRANCE: A day stuck in our minds

had to explain your needs to a government official.

Meat was scarce and also was rationed. I don't recall having to go without it that much, though. My mother raised chickens, and I had gotten pretty good at shooting squirrels in a nearby wooded area.

Toothpaste suddenly came only as powder and in cans. The material used to make toothpaste tubes was now needed to make airplanes.

The government also needed aluminum, as much as people could gather, to make planes.

Aluminum pots, pans and skillets were donated to community drives. Bins to collect them were on street corners.

My dad smoked Lucky Strike cigarettes, the kind that came in green packages in those days.

They changed the color to white, though, along with the motto, "Lucky Strike green has gone to war."

That never made any sense to me. And to this day I've never really understood why the government needed green dye for the war effort.

Rumors were everywhere, and suspicion abounded.

There were signs warning us not to talk. "A slip of the lip could sink a ship," they read.

And we suddenly learned to hate an entire race of people. There were ugly cartoons of Japanese people on billboards, in newspapers and in Disney cartoons. They were portrayed as monsters in movies.

Thousands of American citizens of Japanese ancestry were put into camps in the Western part of this country "just in case."

Finally it all ended, and since then we have become friends again with the Germans and Japanese.

The strange thing is that in my life I have often heard World War II referred to as "the last good war."

It's a stupid remark. There is no such thing as a good war.

Vacant landmark has Greenville officials in quandary

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Several months ago, an elderly man stood at a window and watched sheets of rain swirl around the old Cadillac Hotel downtown.

He recalled the first time he stayed at the historic hostelry.

"It was in 1941 and I had just joined the army," he said. "They put us up there for the night before we were shipped off to Fort Hood in the morning.

"For a lot of us, it was the first time we had stayed away from home. We were in awe of the place and really didn't want to leave it."

The hotel, between Stonewall and St. John on Washington Street, opened on Aug. 18, 1926, as the Washington Hotel. Its six stories made it Greenville's tallest, most modern building. Citizens pointed to the hotel as a symbol of the city's progress.

Now city officials are trying to find someone to take responsibility for the building, which has been abandoned for several years. The only people who stay there now are vagrants who find shelter from the cold. The hotels floors have been scarred by their campfires, and others have stripped the copper wiring and other things of value from the hotel's rooms.

But it was a festive time when the Washington Hotel was opened, by a stock company of Greenville residents.

Most of the city's merchants took out ads in a special issue of the Greenville Evening Banner, giving congratulations to "Greenville's first European Hotel."

One local clergyman, Pastor French of Wesley Methodist Church, even urged his congregation to attend the hotel's grand opening dance, provided they took some precautions as to the nature of the proceedings.

"I am to tell you how we can all do this without dishonoring God or casting away any sort of reproach upon our Christian profession," French told his congregation on Aug. 15.

He told them to pray before attending the dance and obtain from the management the promise that "no man or woman shall be allowed to attend who is so dressed as to make an appeal to the baser passions of the opposite sex," that there would be no drinking, and that males would dance only with males and females only with females.

It isn't known how many heeded French's advice, but the hotel's 100 rooms were filled on opening night as Greenville couples dined on a seven-course meal that cost $2 per couple and later danced on the hotel's roof garden to the tunes of Ligon Smith and his Orchestra.

It was an interesting age. Texas' first woman governor, Miriam "Ma" Ferguson, was in office and the Greenville Hunters baseball team was finishing up its season a disappointing 28-30, good for only fourth place in the East Texas League. In New York, movie idol Rudolph Valentino lay on his death bed.

But at its opening, the Washington Hotel was the talk of Greenville and it remained a touch of class through the years "Cotton was king" and Greenville was booming.

The Washington was sold several times and became the Cadillac in later years. But its rooftop dances and simple elegance continued to attract visitors.

In its twilight, when the Cadillac was owned by J.P. "Punk" McNatt, it had become an apartment hotel with mostly elderly residents. After it was sold several more times, it became the property of an Oklahoma savings and loan that eventually went bankrupt. The hotel became the property of government regulators, and was closed for good in the mid-1980s.

Drug mixup case no-billed by grand jury

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas County grand jury Thursday declined to indict a paramedic who admits giving the wrong drug to a traffic accident victim who later died.

The no-bill frees from prosecution veteran Highland Park paramedic Dennis Loftis, said Debra Gutierrez, a clerk in the district attorney's office.

Dallas Theater Center director Ken Bryant, 35, died Oct. 2 after being treated by Loftis following a minor traffic accident.

He reportedly had blacked out while driving and hit a guardrail. While talking with police afterward, he fainted and was treated by paramedics.

Loftis had contacted hospital officials for permission to administer a 50 percent dextrose or sugar solution.

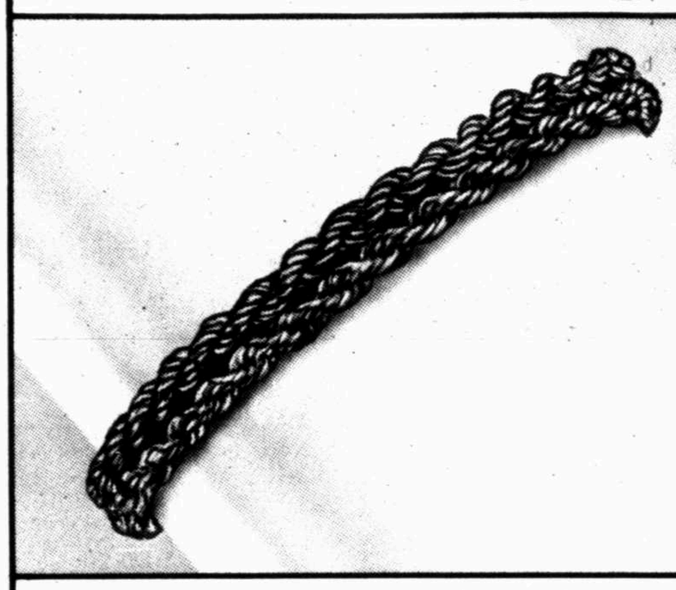

After receiving consent, Loftis radioed back and informed the hospital that he accidentally injected lidocaine, which is used to treat irregular heartbeats, according to a release issued by Highland Park officials.

Bryant died six hours later at Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas.

Portion of tolls to fix streets

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Beginning next year, half the tolls collected at the Paso del Norte Bridge in downtown Ciudad Juarez will stay in the city for street and road development, Chihuahua Gov. Fernando Baeza Melendez announced.

The announcement came more than two weeks after members of the National Action Party, PAN, and other Juarez residents protested the third toll increase at the bridge this year. The tolls went up to $2.05 from $1.85 for a passenger vehicle.

Protestors were demanding a toll rollback and that the revenue remain in Juarez.

"I explained to President Carlos Salinas de Gotari about the need in Juarez to use at least half the money ... to develop city streets and bridges ... and he agreed," Baeza said.

But Sergio Hayen, committee chairman for PAN said he doubted the statement is true. He said he would not consider the announcement official until the group received official notification from the government.

He also believes the money should help people in outlying impoverished neighborhoods, or "colonias."

"We also should continue protesting until the tolls are reduced to the previous rate and we get all the money coming in from those fees," Hayen said.

Library joins UT system

AUSTIN (AP) — The library of Sam Rayburn, the legendary Texas politician who served as speaker of the U.S. House longer than anyone else, will become part of the University of Texas at Austin in January.

The library will remain in Bonham, Rayburn's home town, but will be administered by UT's Barker Texas History Center.

The transfer will be effective Jan. 1 through an agreement between the UT System Board of Regents and the Sam Rayburn Library Foundation. The agreement was approved Thursday by the regents at a Houston meeting.

Under the agreement, the foundation will transfer to UT an endowment valued at about $2.5 million to operate the library.

"The library is an enduring testimony to Mr. Rayburn's wisdom and integrity throughout his many years of dedicated service to the nation. The university takes pride in being selected to care for these materials for the benefit of scholars and all citizens," UT Austin President William Cunningham said.

The library houses books, papers and mementoes from Rayburn's 48 years in the House.

Except for four years when Republicans controlled the House — 1947-49 and 1953-55 — Rayburn served as speaker from 1940 until his death in 1961, and one of the three buildings on Capitol Hill where House members have their offices is named for him.

Suspects extradited

FORT WORTH (AP) — Two men extradited from Arkansas have been arraigned on charges of capital murder in connection with the kidnapping and murder of an optical store worker.

Fort Worth officers returned Thursday afternoon with David Aron Hernandez, 37, and Servando Pachecano Jr., 24, from Clarendon, Ark., where the two were arrested Saturday.

Criminal District Court Magistrate Gene Grant charged the pair at about 4:30 p.m. Thursday. He said both were charged with capital murder and parole violation. Pachecano also was arraigned on charges of aggravated kidnapping and aggravated sexual assault.

Bond was set at $500,000 for each capital murder charge, $25,000 for the aggravated kidnapping charge and $50,000 for the sexual assault charge, Grant said.

Lt. Greg Bradley said police plan to question the pair about the slaying of Cruz Torrez, 41, whose body was found bound with tape in a shed Nov. 28, the day after she and co-worker Yvonne Molina, 23, were taken by force from Credit Optical in Fort Worth.

State lottery opposed

AUSTIN (AP) — The anti-gambling group Texans Who Care says they will oppose creating of a state lottery, calling it "fiscal folly" and a regressive tax that victimizes the poor.

The board of the Dallas-based organization said it would urge voters to reject any change in the constitutional ban on a state lottery if such a proposal passes the 1991 Legislature.

"The lottery is a Band-Aid approach to long-term problems which diverts attention from serious consideration of solid fiscal solutions to state budget problems," said Abner McCall of Waco, the group's chairman and a former Baylor University president.

"By targeting the poor, the lottery puts government in the indefnsible position of exploiting its most vulnerable citizens," said Bob Brackney, a professor at the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth.

New contraceptive's approval nears

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is expected to give American women their first new birth control option in three decades when it approves a hormonal implant that prevents pregnancy for up to five years, officials said Thursday.

The implant, called Norplant, was expected to win government approval within days, according to government and industry sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The method involves implanting in a woman's upper arm six silicone rubber capsules, each about the size of an inch-and-a-half-long wooden matchstick. The procedure is done with local anesthesia and the implant isn't noticeable.

The capsules contain a hormone called levonorgestrel, a synthetic progestin, that is released slowly over time.

"Norplant is one of the most significant advances in contraception we've had in the last 30 years," since the birth control pill and intrauterine device became available, said Dr. Samuel A. Pasquale of the Robert Wood Johnson Medical School in New Brunswick, N.J.

"It's the most effective, reversible method of contraception" available in the United States, with a failure rate of less than 1 percent, said Pasquale, a principal investigator in the Norplant studies.

It also would be the first long-acting, hormonal contraceptive available in this country.

"It's a new choice women have and there haven't been any new choices in the United States in a long time," said C. Wayne Bardin, vice president and director of medical research for the New York-based Population Council, which began researching the method in 1966.

"It offers them a new choice which is long-lasting and convenient, uses the lowest dose of hormone that's used in any (hormone-based method) and it doesn't contain estrogen," which can cause problems for some women, he said.

Norplant has been approved in 16 countries, the council said.

In the United States, it would be marketed by Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories of Philadelphia.

The company was reluctant to talk about Norplant without formal approval from the Food and Drug Administration.

However, Wyeth-Ayerst spokeswoman Audrey Ashby said that assuming the drug is approved soon, the contraceptive would be available commercially in February. The company will train physicians on how to implant the capsules, but "there will be some lag time," she said.

Ashby declined to discuss the cost of Norplant, saying that pricing was being evaluated. However, she said expected it "will be priced significantly below oral contraceptives over five years."

Birth control pills cost about $15 to $20 per month.

Bardin said he had been told the price for Norplant would be $200 to $300, which does not include the fee for implanting the device.

The contraceptive contains nothing new — the silicone rubber and the hormone have been used for many years, according to the council's literature. However, the delivery over a long period of time is a new technique.

An FDA advisory board recommended approval of Norplant in April 1989, saying the method was at least as safe and effective as any other contraceptive on the market.

The contraceptive is more than 99 percent effective overall.

'Whistling' city skyscraper fined

NEW YORK (NYT) — For the first time in the history of New York City, a building is being fined for whistling.

The building is Cityspire, a 72-story skyscraper best known for being too tall. Now it has been deemed too loud.

The residential and commercial tower on West 56th Street off Seventh Avenue first received notoriety a few years ago for exceeding its authorized height by 11 feet. Now it is being cited for generating a high-pitched whistle that neighbors throughout midtown say is driving them crazy.

Think of the piping sound made by blowing across the neck of a soda bottle. Now imagine a very, very big bottle.

In recent weeks, the city's Department of Environmental Protection, which levied the fine, has received hundreds of complaints about the whistling, some from as far away as Third Avenue, said Sanford Evans, department spokesman.

— Anthony Mazzola, Harper's Bazaar magazine editor in chief, NYC resident

"I've been all over the street trying to follow the noise," said Anthony Mazzola, editor in chief of Harper's Bazaar magazine, who lives at 15 West 55th Street.

"You think you're in a loony bin," he said. "You can't get away from it."

Inspectors said the noise is apparently made by wind blowing over louvers on the building's green, eight-sided dome, some 800 feet above the ground.

"This is the first whistling case that I've heard of," said Jerome Ross, environmental protection enforcement officer.

Neither the building's developer nor its architect has heard any noise complaints, or noise. A notice of the fine is in the mail, city officials said.

"Given the aggravation I've had with this building, this tops it off," said Howard Hornstein, a lawyer for Ian Bruce Eichner, the developer.

Eichner will receive a summons for violating the unnecessary-noise section of the noise control code, part of the city's administrative code, Ross said. There are no decibel standards for unnecessary-noise violations.

The developer will have to fix the whistling and pay a fine of as much as $880 if he is found to have violated the noise code. The matter will be decided by an administrative law judge of the Environmental Control Board.

Sam Scaccia, senior vice president of Murphy/Jahn, the Chicago architectural firm that designed Cityspire, said fines for noisy buildings are new to him.

"I've got to admit that I've never heard of one, but anything's possible," he said.

Can Scaccia, the architect, stop the whistling?

"It's fixable, yes," he said. But he said he needs to know more about the situation before proposing a solution.

NATION IN BRIEF

Deficit to set record this year

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Driven by the weakening economy and the savings and loan bailout, the federal budget deficit will set a record this year and be even higher the next, despite the budget agreement reached in October, the Congressional Budget Office said.

Among members of Congress, the mood on Thursday ranged from sober to grim as Robert D. Reischauer, director of the Congressional Budget Office, reported that the deficit, $220 billion in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, would increase to at least $253 billion in the current fiscal year, 1991, and $262 billion in 1992.

Those estimates assume that Congress takes further action to keep military and domestic spending within the limits set in October.

The estimates presented at a hearing of the House Budget Committee do not incorporate the costs of U.S. military operations in the Persian Gulf, which some economists say could increase spending by as much as $1 billion a month.

More shuttle troubles

CAPE CANAVERAL, FLA. (NYT) — The space agency's already troubled astronomy mission aboard the orbiting shuttle Columbia was thrown into turmoil when a computer overheated and failed, apparently because it was clogged by lint from astronauts' and workers' uniforms.

Ground controllers tried Thursday to salvage the 10-day mission by taking over some operations that had been conducted by the shuttle's seven astronauts and the failed computer.

The automatic pointing system for the ultraviolet telescopes aboard the shuttle malfunctioned from the start of the mission, and the astronauts were struggling with a manual backup control system when the new problem struck. The ground control system now being improvised has not been rehearsed and its success is not assured.

Nonetheless, officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration expressed hope that all had not been lost.

Transcripts released

MIAMI (NYT) — Ending a long legal battle, a federal judge in Miami made public a transcript of recorded telephone conversations between Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega and an assortment of his friends and relatives.

Much of the conversation consisted of hours of cryptic small talk and guarded banter.

Judge William M. Hoeveler of U.S District Court ordered the release of the transcript on Thursday after the Cable News Network, which first obtained the recordings, fought all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court for the right to play the tapes, but then decided not to.

In a separate action Thursday, Luis del Cid, a former Noriega subordinate and a co-defendant in the drug case against Noriega, pleaded guilty in an arrangement likely to strengthen the government's position.

PTL accountants blamed

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A lawyer for thousands of PTL contributors suing to get their money back argued Thursday a fraud scheme that put Jim Bakker in prison worked only because he had help from his accountants.

Tom Anderson, an attorney for former Bakker believers in a $757 million lawsuit, blamed the accounting firm Deloitte, Haskins & Sells for his clients' troubles.

"If Deloitte had not aided and abetted, we would not be here," he said.

Anderson made the remarks during his closing argument in a six-week civil trial. About 145,000 people are seeking reimbursement for money they paid to stay at Heritage USA, PTL's now-defunct religious theme park in Fort Mill, S.C. Lodging at the park entitled donors to be "lifetime partners" in PTL, Bakker's bankrupt ministry.

Bakker, 49, is serving a 45-year prison sentence on conspiracy and mail fraud charges for overselling lifetime partnerships.

The lawsuit said Bakker, other PTL officials and accountants including those of Deloitte conspired to set up secret bank accounts that were tapped to give huge bonuses to the Bakkers and ministry officials.

The case could go to the jury Friday.

Main liaison to testify

WASHINGTON (AP) — In compelling James Grogan to testify, the Senate Ethics Committee is summoning the person who probably knows more than anyone but Charles H. Keating Jr. about Keating's relationship with five powerful senators.

At the start of Thursday's 13th day of hearings, the committee announced Grogan will begin closed-door testimony on Dec. 17, followed by his appearance at an open hearing.

Grogan was Keating's main liaison with Congress. He's the man who can tie together any relationship between the money Keating raised for the Keating Five and their intervention with thrift regulators on his behalf.

In testimony Thursday, a career counsel for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, William K. Black, said the five senators mounted "defense after defense after defense" of Lincoln at a 1987 meeting when examiners informed them of massive violation's at Keating's thrift.

But four members of the ethics panel appeared skeptical about whether the senators had been as aggressive as portrayed by Black.

The committee is trying to learn whether the $1.3 million Keating raised for the five influenced their conduct.

Military jet plows into school, 12 students dead

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — A burning, pilotless military jet plowed into a classroom at a suburban high school Thursday, killing 12 students, officials said. Many survivors jumped from upper windows and were among the 87 injured.

The pilot of the Italian air force jet had been trying to land his disabled plane in fields near the school, and ejected minutes before the crash, Gen. Carlo Brandini said. The pilot suffered injuries.

Some survivors, engulfed by heavy smoke, were rescued from the third floor by firemen on ladders.

Police said 87 people suffered burns, broken bones or smoke inhalation and were taken by ambulance or helicopter to hospitals in Bologna. One fireman was hurt.

At the time of the crash, 285 students, 28 teachers and four monitors were at the Gaetano Salvemini Vocational High School in Casalecchio, three miles from Bologna, authorities said.

"I heard a lot of students screaming and I saw at least eight of them jump in panic from the third floor," said Giovanna Degli Esposti, who watched from her home in a nearby condominium complex.

"Luckily the firemen arrived in a few minutes."

She said it was recess time and some students were already outside Gaetano Salvemini High School in Casalecchio, three miles from Bologna.

A paramilitary official said all 12 dead were students in the classroom hit by the jet, which tore a 12-foot-wide hole in a wall on the second floor of the three-story building.

A teacher who was giving a German lesson to the 16 pupils in the class was hospitalized in Parma, in critical condition with burns, the officer said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Fireman Tonino Pavoni said he heard the cries of a girl in the class who was trapped under wreckage of a wing, and pulled her free.

The girl, Federica Tacconi, 16, suffered a crushed pelvis, said ANSA.

"The German lesson was almost over. The teacher was giving us homework. I heard a very loud noise, I saw the airplane come down, then it was the end of the world. I found myself on the floor, in pain, and now I'm here," ANSA quoted her as saying from her hospital bed.

Brandini said the plane was on a mission to test the effectiveness of an anti-aircraft radar system and had taken off from Villafranca military airport near Verona, 55 miles north of Bologna.

He said the Macchi 326 trainer was flying at about 280 mph when trouble developed in its single engine, which then burst into flames.

Brandini said the pilot ejected "according to regulations." He identified the pilot as 2nd Lt. Bruno Viviani and said Viviani first thought he could make an emergency landing at Bologna's airport.

"When he saw he couldn't do it, he directed the plane toward an open area. If the plane had cleared the school, it would have crashed in...open fields," Brandini said from air force headquarters in Rome.

ANSA quoted a student as saying, "I was in class and saw through a window this low-flying plane coming at us and only had time to say 'This is crazy.'" The 24-year-old pilot suffered fractured vertebrae and was questioned by a prosecutor in the hospital, ANSA said.

Brandini said the plane was flying low when the pilot ejected, but he didn't know the exact altitude. A helicopter, alerted to the pilot's distress, was following the jet and rescued the pilot after he parachuted to safety.

The Italian-produced jet, a two-seater, had only the pilot was aboard, Brandini said. The plane, which has been purchased by several other countries' military forces, has a wingspan of 35 feet and can be used for training or for attack.

In addition to the prosecutor's office, a military commission is investigating the crash.

Opposition parliamentarian Filippo Berselli demanded the government explain why a military jet was on a training mission over a populated area.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Trade talks near collapse

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Talks among 107 nations trying to draft an ambitious global trade pact came close to collapsing Thursday night after the European Community rejected a last-minute compromise proposal to make significant cuts in farm subsidies.

Various trade ministers suggested that the European action virtually doomed any chances for reaching a trade agreement this week in Brussels although many said they would campaign Friday to get more discussions scheduled following a cooling-off period.

The battle between the United States and its trade allies on one side and the 12-nation European Community on the other turned out to be the biggest stumbling block to getting an overall agreement in the trade talks.

Militia blamed for killings

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Populist priest Jean-Bertrand Aristide on Thursday blamed the Tonton Macoutes, the private militia that terrorized the people during the Duvalier rule, for killing seven people at a campaign rally.

Fifty-three people were wounded in the Wednesday night gun and bomb attack on his rally in Petionville, a suburb seven miles from the capital.

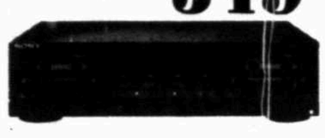

Aristide, considered front-runner in the Dec. 16 presidential elections, said he and the 10 other candidates would not let such violence derail the campaign.

Vatican tie restored

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican restored diplomatic ties with Bulgaria Thursday, thus achieving ties with all members of the former Warsaw Pact and formally ending an era in which the church and the East bloc were foes.

The former hard-line Communist nation had been implicated in an attempt to kill Pope John Paul II.

Since democratic revolutions swept Eastern Europe in the past 18 months ousting Communist governments, the Vatican has also restored ties with Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania and Poland.

Focus should be on education — not symbolism

This evening members of the Midland School Board face one of the most emotional issues to confront this city in recent memory — whether or not to ban the Confederate flag and the song, "Dixie," as official symbols for Robert E. Lee High School. Those symbols have been in use there, and have been a part of activities in which the school was involved, for decades.

On Wednesday, Nov. 28, the Reporter-Telegram stated in an editorial that we supported allowing Lee students to vote on the symbols in the belief that only people, not symbols, can create racism. We knew that black and white students had co-existed harmoniously at Lee since the 1960s. After all, we reasoned, it is their school and their symbols and isn't democracy and majority vote what America is all about?

Well, the election was held and the results were overwhelmingly in favor of keeping the flag and the song. That probably was to be expected since white students at Lee outnumber members of other races by a large percentage. Since then, the situation at Lee has worsened.

Frankly, we were wrong in our earlier position.

We underestimated how "real" the connection between the symbols and Civil-War-Period-slavery still is to today's black citizens. We failed to realize that, while democracy does indeed involve majority rule and resolution of issues by vote, it means much more than that.

It means compassion for the feelings of all citizens and respect for their right to human dignity. Today's young citizens should learn that democracy means many things and not all of those are embraced by all Americans all the time.

We also didn't realize that this whole business of Confederate symbolism and the pain it still causes some Americans is not new. We have come to know it has been an issue for some of our citizens since desegregation days but one they put aside in favor of the larger problems that loomed at that time. And we were less than astute in our failure to investigate and discover that Civil War-related symbols and the issues they raised had been faced up to and dealt with by schools and universities elsewhere in Texas and the country, in some cases years ago.

Well, we, and Midland as well, may be coming late to some of those realizations but there are worse things than being late.

The overwhelming number of Midland citizens and Lee High School students, past and present, probably never associated the symbols with the demeaning of human beings. When students and their parents, including black students and black parents, waved the Rebel flag at sporting events, school pride and winning games were the issues.

But all the while some members of our community probably were swallowing hard, perhaps even as they cheered, and today the issue has grown far beyond the football field.

If Confederate symbols conjure up an image we all had rather put to rest, then should they be used in our public school system?

Is this image, even if it is one that is honestly felt by only a relatively small segment of our community, one that we want to project for Midland?

Midland already has stood in the national limelight and been the recipient of plaudits from around the country and world for those efforts that resulted in the rescue of a small child from an abandoned well. Is it outside the realm of possibility that the spotlight could return, this time with a Midland version of "Friday Night Lights" as the objective?

We think not.

We also believe there is another major reason, if it is needed, for our elected school officials to take a long and hard look at this issue and examine it beyond the limits of polarized student voting.

What seems to have been lost in the current debate is the real purpose of Robert E. Lee High School — education for students of all races.

Athletics are important but athletics never have been considered, even by the most enthusiastic fans, as having priority over education. And athletic symbols should be even further down the list of what our school system is all about.

The Confederate symbols have become a disruptive force at Lee High School and the issue has the potential to create a significant racial rift in this city. We must not allow that to happen.

The symbols and the controversy that has resulted, primarily but not exclusively among adults, have gotten in the way of the educational process of our young people and threaten to do so in a much worse and more protracted way in the future, depending on the decision of our school leaders.

It is time to change those symbols and begin to exhibit school spirit with symbols around which ALL students and adult citizens can rally.

Just as there are more important things than "being late," there is a more important thing facing MISD than mascots and school songs. It's called education.

We realize this position won't find favor among the majority of people who have written to us and whose views we have published. In fact, it may well fail to find favor among the majority of this city's population.

But we, and Midland school board members, must believe that, popular or not, actions taken on the basis of what we believe to be morally correct, are actions we can stand behind regardless of repercussions.

In that connection, we probably all need to remember that where decisions involving the dignity of our fellow man are concerned, might isn't necessarily right. It never has been. Right is right.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese warplanes attacked the home base of the U.S. Pacific fleet located at Pearl Harbor on the Hawaiian island of Oahu, an act that resulted in America's entry into World War II.

On this date:

In 1842, the New York Philharmonic gave its first concert, performing works by Ludwig van Beethoven and Carl Maria von Weber.

In 1965, 25 years ago, Pope Paul VI and Orthodox Patriarch Athenagoras I simultaneously lifted the mutual excommunications that had led to the split of the two churches in 1054.

In 1972, America's last moon mission to date was launched, as Apollo XVII blasted off from Cape Canaveral.

JACK ANDERSON

'Keating Five' staff under scrutiny

WASHINGTON — With the "Keating Five" senators on the hot seat for their dealings with the high-flying savings and loan magnate, many Senate staffers are counting themselves lucky that they and their bosses steered clear of Charles Keating. But one Senate aide can only count herself caught.

Anderson

Carolyn Jordan, an aide to Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., on the Senate Banking Committee, was constantly courted by the thrift industry. While her boss was earning himself a place of dishonor as one of the "Keating Five," Jordan was a guest at S&L functions in Orlando, Palm Springs and Toronto. Among the hosts paying the bills was American Continental Corp., Keating's company.

The S&L scandal has opened wide the doings of Congress so that the public can take a look at the ugly scene inside. People such as Keating didn't stop at winning friends and influencing people in elective office. They wooed the staffers too.

We reported in July that the chief banking aide to Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., had been wined and dined by Keating. Annunzio has since tried to pass himself off as a tough cop on the S&L beat, even though he took money from Keating too.

Jordan's trips on the industry's dime don't help the case of her boss, Cranston, who is trying to back out of the ranks of the "Keating Five."

From 1986 through 1988 — even after the horror of the S&L scandal had begun to dawn on Americans — Jordan was the guest of the thrift industry at a variety of functions. In May 1988, the National Council of Savings Institutions paid for her lodging and transportation to attend the council's annual meeting in Toronto. A spokeswoman for the council told our associate Scott Sleek that key Washington officials such as Jordan are invited to the meetings to discuss legislation.

Jordan also got free food and lodging for various trips as a guest of the American Savings and Loan League and the California Thrift and Loan Association, according to her own records.

Keating's American Continental paid Jordan's expenses during a trip to Phoenix in 1987, but a company spokesman said no one was left at the company who could explain why.

The trip that has caused Jordan the most grief is already a matter of public record and ridicule. Reports surfaced last summer that she took a nine-day trip to Europe in 1987 as a guest of Robert Royer, a lobbyist for Swiss bankers and the U.S. Securities Industry. The purpose, according to Senate documents, was to meet with foreign government officials to discuss securities issues.

Jordan failed to report the trip on her 1987 financial disclosure statement. She owned up to the trip with the required paperwork only after a reporter quizzed her about it. Then she told the Senate Ethics Committee that the omission was an honest mistake.

Last year, the Ethics Committee had to lean on Jordan twice before she submitted her financial disclosure records for 1988, three months after they were due. She was also late in filing her 1989 report, which was due last May.

Jordan did not respond to our questions, but a spokesman in Cranston's office said many congressional staffers take such trips. He said it's preferable to the industry to pay for such trips than for taxpayers to fund them.

Maybe the taxpayers would rather pay the bill and have public servants in debt to the public rather than special interests. And there is another option. The staffers could stay home.

CHARLEY REESE

Those little bears are busy in the Kremlin

One hates to inject dark thoughts into the holiday season, but while George Bush is wackily railing against a country that is no threat to us, the Soviet Union, which is a threat to us, has been up to no good.

Reese

The shelves in Moscow may be empty but the missile silos are not. Those busy little beavers in the Kremlin have completely modernized their strategic nuclear forces, configured of course for a first strike offensive capability.

They completely modernized their doomsday weapon, the 10-story tall SS-18, and redeployed it in spiffy new silos. They are deploying two mobile missiles, the SS-24 and the SS-25. They are also modernizing their strategic bomber forces with the new Bear H and Blackjack aircraft equipped with longer-range cruise missiles. And they continue to turn out Typhoon and Delta IV boomers.

Thus, even if they sign a strategic arms reduction treaty and, even more surprisingly, don't cheat on it, they will retain a first strike capability to knock out most of our land-based missiles, command and communications centers, and non-alert bombers and subs.

Should they deploy a country-wide antiballistic missile system, which they seem to be firmly committed to doing, then the old United States will be up the proverbial creek with a broken paddle.

Another unpleasant thought nobody in Dreamland, also known as Washington, wishes to confront is that by developing these two new intercontinental missiles in mobile modes, there is no way to count them. Unlike missiles in fixed silos, mobile missiles can be easily hidden from satellites. We simply won't know how many they have deployed. We will only know how many they say they have deployed, and our Soviet friends, as it is now fashionable to call them, are bigger liars than fishermen.

If you were poetic and decided to write a poem along the lines of let me count the times you Soviet pals have lied to me, it would be of epic length, longer than the "Iliad" and "Odyssey" combined.

I love bureaucratese, a language of government similar to legalese, a language of lawyers, and there is a wonderful example in the Defense Department publication, "Soviet Military Power 1990," which the Bush administration delayed less it cloud the rosy picture of the New World Order.

The quotation is this: "The Soviet violation at Krasnoyarsk, Soviet violation of the Biological Weapons Convention and Soviet failure to advise U.S. negotiators about the transfer of these INF missiles call into question Soviet good faith in negotiating arms control agreements."

Yeah, I'd say lies and deception call their good faith into question. In fact, I would go so far as to say only an idiot or an American politician would trust them.

But just pour yourself a drink and don't worry about it. George trusts Gorby. Congress, which has debated whether to deploy a mobile missile for 17 or so years, may get around to deciding the matter by the year 2000. Those geniuses charged by the Constitution with providing for the common defense have decided the Soviet Union is no longer a threat, and that we really don't need an ABM system, a strategic bomber, or very many new submarines.

I just wish they'd go to Moscow and learn a little from our Soviet friends on how to handle a federal budget. We seem to be broke, but the Soviets, who claim to be broke, still manage to spend 15 to 25 percent of their GNP on military arms and turn out lots of first-class weapons. Somehow they manage to have lots of new mobile missiles and lots of new subs and lots of new bombers while Congress thinks we can get by with about 5 B2s.

In the meantime, our fearless leader, King George, whose favorite word is the personal pronoun, I, will make the world safe for British Petroleum and Exxon and Mobil and Kuwaiti emirs, if not for Americans.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Reading economic tea leaves not difficult

Grizzard

I am not without portfolio. I was treasurer of my freshman class in high school, and I take the Wall Street Journal at home.

I don't read it, but when friends drop by, they are impressed when they see my dog, Catfish, eating table scraps off the front page.

We've been hearing about certain economic indicators lately, and economists look at things like housing starts, retail sales and the hemlines of women's dresses to predict what's forthcoming for the economy.

Over the years I have developed my own set of economic indicators and they have proven to be trustworthy.

I was able to predict the stock market crash of a few years ago.

A couple of days before the fall I tried to get in touch with my broker and got a recording saying his phone had been disconnected.

I knew that was a sure sign the bottom was about to fall out on the Amalgamated Goat and International Mushrooms he had sold me a couple of days earlier and told all my friends, "Get out of the market."

They didn't listen, however, and a number of them now live in cardboard boxes.

What follows is a list of the indicators I use to tell me exactly what state the economy is in:

GOLF TEES: If you play golf, notice how many perfectly good tees have been left on tee boxes. If there are lots of them, then the economy is fine.

People are in such good shape financially they don't even bother to bend over and pluck their tees out of the ground after they've hit.

If there are no tees left, it means people are tightening their belts and you might want to show up for work one day next week instead of lollygagging around on the golf course.

DEION SANDERS: If his monthly bill for jewelry drops under $100,000, tough times are ahead.

ROACH MOTEL: If you notice yours has a lot of vacancies each time you check in, even the roaches are feeling the crunch and staying home more.

TIPPING: If you leave your waiter a lousy tip and he not only complains, he also attempts to pistol-whip you, it's a sign you should be at home eating fish sticks instead of being out at a fancy restaurant.

EX-WIVES: If more than one calls in a single day to complain about the amount of alimony you're paying them, you can bet the price on such luxury items as pocketbooks and silky things they wear at night for their boyfriends has gone sky high.

JESSE JACKSON: If a crisis breaks out somewhere and Jesse's not right in the middle of it making speeches, it means whoever picks up the tab to send him all over the world has decided to cut back.

My dog, Catfish, incidentally thinks the economy is in sad shape. He's been eating off copies of old campaign literature lately.

My subscription to the Wall Street Journal ran out and I was afraid to re-up. Jesse hasn't been in the Middle East in weeks now.

Bush praises Chilean reforms

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Bush, unfazed by a spate of bombing incidents that greeted his arrival here Thursday, hailed Chile's peaceful transition to democracy and its pro-growth economic policies.

Bush received a generally friendly welcome on the first visit by an American president in 30 years. He hailed Chile's "democratic renaissance" and said "Chile's return to the ranks of the world's democracies is cause for pride and celebration."

But the bombings and other anti-American incidents were a reminder that Chile has not yet escaped its fractious political past.

Before Bush arrived, leftist guerrillas exploded a half-dozen bombs overnight at sites with U.S. ties, including four Mormon chapels, a new McDonald's restaurant and a downtown park outside a hotel where some officials in Bush's advance party were staying.

The incidents, however, seemed designed more to make a political statement than to cause harm. Police reported no injuries.

The president's limousine was also hit by an egg thrown from the crowd as his motorcade passed through Santiago streets.

Police used tear gas and water cannon to scatter scores of university students who threw rocks at police and blocked traffic during a two-hour anti-Bush protest at a campus in the southern section of the city. They burned at least two U.S. flags

But generally the visit — Bush's fourth stop on a week-long South American tour — went smoothly. At a colorful airport arrival ceremony, at a news conference and at a speech to the national congress, Bush heaped praise on Chile not only for its peaceful return to democracy but its ability to generate economic growth rates that are the envy of Latin America.

At the red-carpet welcome for Air Force One at the airport, President Patricio Aylwin said, "Mr. President, we welcome you with joy.

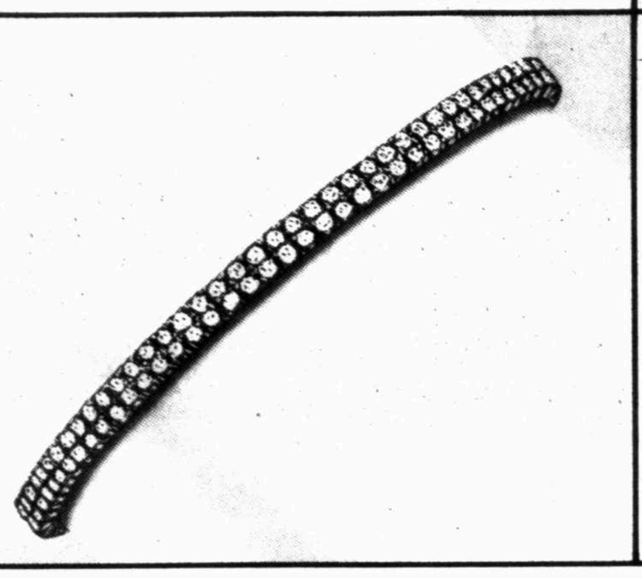

"We value your presence in our land," he said.

Also on hand at the airport was former military ruler Gen. Augusto Pinochet, who is still commander in chief of the army.

Feeda Ahmad, an architecture student at Texas Tech University, explains his model of the elementary school of the future to Midlander Toni Midkiff. Twelve Texas Tech students displayed their architecture designs in the school district's future administration building Thursday.

Future architects take a look at elementary school designs

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland elementary schools don't have greenhouses, skylights, atriums, expansive libraries or hoop-shaped windmills to generate electricity. But they could, according to Texas Tech University architecture students.

Twelve fifth-year seniors from Texas Tech's College of Architecture displayed their projects of elementary schools of the future Thursday.

Detailed sketches of floor plans and intricate tiny scale models of the students' visionary works were displayed in the first floor conference room of the future school administration building, 615 W. Missouri St.

Some students designed new schools which integrated community needs with academic needs while others attempted to improve upon existing schools.

Keeping the future in mind, students included facilities to accommodate high-tech equipment for science departments.

"The students each took a different focus or looked at different issues," said David Driskill, Texas Tech Architectural teacher. Driskill said the students used Midland schools and Midland's educational needs as fodder for their projects at the suggestion of James W. Riggen, architect for the Midland Independent School District (MISD).

Some of the architecture students, who have one semester left before graduation, have already won awards from the Texas Society of Architecture, according to Driskell. "So, we have some real talent here," he said.

Student Paul Morgan, said his project incorporated the trend to return to smaller classrooms by using partitions to divide children into task specific groups.

Morgan's project also included a school with a large gymnasium and art center. "Members of the community could use these facilities after school hours," Morgan said. "Public use could be restricted until after 5 p.m." He said the massive facilities would operate on a concept similar to a municipal library or recreation center. "Other schools would use these facilities, too, which would save the school district money since they wouldn't need to be built at each school," he said.

Morgan blended the old with the new in his project. He integrated nature, energy efficiency and the concept of the one-room school house into his design. Attractive trellises provided shade while strategically placed light wells provided optimum sunlight where needed.

Student Rick Kincheloe designed an energy efficient school, specifically to utilize solar energy. His hoop-shaped windmills and greenhouse are intended to have practical applications as well as serving as objects of discovery for inquisitive young minds.

One student who took on an existing school was Brian Alling who re-designed Bonham Elementary School. He filled in the courtyard between Bonham's two wings with a library resource center and administration offices. Removing administration offices and the library from existing wings freed up space for additional classrooms.

Alling also designed an attractive and protective screen wall to enclose the kindergarten area. He added in windows and existing pods, and even included a play area which could be surrounded by additional pods. Alling said he kept future expansion in mind because the Midland enrollment "keeps increasing, doesn't it?"

Supporters welcome Hutchison and Perry

■ Transition teams are geared up and preparing to be sworn in Jan. 15.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Kay Bailey Hutchison and Rick Perry were all smiles at a reception Thursday with their Republican supporters at Bobby Holt's home.

Hutchison

Perry discussed his plans to start up a tannery in the High Plains to process Texas steer skins, while Ms. Hutchison emphasized the need for the treasury department to crack down on "black market cigarettes."

The state treasurer-elect and agriculture commissioner-elect said they have their transition teams geared up and are preparing to be sworn in Jan. 15.

They captured the highest Republican posts in a general election that saw most statewide seats go to Democrats.

Perry

But the officials-elect put partisan issues aside until the next election and were full of conciliatory words for governor-elect Ann Richards, who defeated Midlander Clayton Williams last month.

Perry said he and Ms. Richards had worked together for six years; during the last four he gave input in budgetary issues affecting the treasury.

"I'm in harmony with Ann and expect to have a good working relationship with her," Perry said.

State Treasurer Richards recently gave Ms. Hutchison the grand tour of the treasury office and introduced her to the employees.

"That got me off to a good start," Ms. Hutchison said.

Although Ms. Hutchison and Perry plan to replace some employees in their departments, they said that for the most part, they would follow the lead of their predecessors.

"My philosophical bent differs from Jim Hightower's," said Perry. "But there'll be no wholesale changes in the Department of Agriculture."

Rather, he will work to develop new markets for Texas products.

Perry said Texas Tech is already working on his tannery idea, which would process beef cattle hides. He envisions Texas-based Justin and Tony Lama manufacturing plants using the leather for their boots.

"It could be a built-in Texas industry: from when the steer or heifer is born, to the feed lot, to the tannery, to boots on Texan feet — or Californian or Oklahoman feet, for that matter," Perry said.

Cotton, mohair, cashmere, fruits and vegetables also have the potential to be processed in-state, he said.

He would like to see a second import/export terminal created to handle increased agricultural traffic.

"Horticulture's a major industry here," he said. "You can get a lot of poinsettias out on a 747."

Perry believes he will be able to work with U.S. Department of Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter more effectively than Hightower did.

"I expect to see some discretionary funds come available for our programs, including federal dollars for fire ant research," Perry said.

"It's phenomenal what we can do when we focus the agency on the people of Texas," he said.

"Rick, you're going to make the money and I'm going to invest it wisely," said Ms. Hutchison, a good friend of Perry's.

She thanked Midland County for handing her the highest victory percentage in the state — 74 percent of Midlanders voted for Ms. Hutchison.

"I'm just thrilled," she said. "It's probably because I was here so much during the campaign."

One of Ms. Hutchison's first priorities will be to add her debt management and fiscal system strategies to the legislative package for the next session. Her plans will bring more money to the state's coffers through streamlined systems and keep tabs on state indebtedness incurred through bond issues, she said.

"I also plan to beef up cigarette tax collection," she said, citing a report that said the state loses up to $100 million a year because of black market cigarettes from states, including Louisiana, that have lower taxes.

"There's some thought that they're even connected with illegal drugs," she said.

Ms. Hutchison believes the tax collection improvement can be passed by emergency legislation.

"I want to make sure the taxpayers get what they deserve," she said.

Barry Thompson to tackle West Texas State troubles

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Barry Thompson, the blunt, tough-talking president at Tarleton State University, was named Thursday to take over troubled West Texas State University in Canyon.

The Texas A&M Board of Regents approved the hiring of Thompson, 54, a Kermit native who has worked from one end of the state to the other in a 33-year educational career.

For the past nine years, he has been in Stephenville at Tarleton, a four-year school similar to West Texas State with about 6,200 students.

"I'm a dedicated professional," Thompson said. "I expect every person anywhere who works for the state of Texas and the A&M System to be a dedicated professional person.

"I expect them to meet classes, I expect them to teach their very best and I expect them to be enthused about what they're doing. If they're not, I don't need them."

Thompson succeeds Ed Roach, whose stormy six years as president included allegations of fiscal mismanagement and a faculty vote of no confidence. Roach is taking appointment within the A&M System as associate deputy chancellor for academic program planning.

Earlier this fall, Roach had helped negotiate a merger between West Texas State and the A&M System.

Students receive conflicting chemical abuse signals

■ Students' use of illegal drugs has decreased while alcohol consumption has increased.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Secondary school students are receiving mixed messages when it comes to illegal drug and alcohol use, according to two Midlanders involved with educating youngsters about drugs.

That may explain the findings of a recent survey by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

According to the report released Wednesday, Texas junior high and high school students' use of illegal drugs has decreased while alcohol consumption has increased since 1988.

"A lot of alcohol use is due to media influences ... it's still being ingrained in the youth on television," said Midland Police Officer Dale Seago, Coordinator of DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education).

"Any sports event (on television) you're going to see a minimum of six to eight beer commercials," Seago added.

Glenn Woods, coordinator of guidance/counseling for MISD, agreed. "A high school senior will have seen about 100,000 beer commercials," Woods said.

According to Woods, youngsters need to be educated about alcohol use the same as illegal drug use.

"We have to work together to send a united message that alcohol is an illegal drug until they are 21," Woods said, adding that drug education programs should continue in an effort to further decrease its use.

"I think it's going to take a unified effort ... parents, schools, churches and the community as a whole to send an unmixed message that chemical abuse is dangerous and wrong," Woods said.

According to Bob Dickson, executive director of the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drugs, preventive efforts — primarily in the form of education — are working to reduce illegal drug use.

Woods said that is true in Midland.

"We are four years into a concerted drug education program in Midland. I feel like the efforts we are making are beginning to show," Woods said.

One of those programs, DARE, was implemented in Midland schools in the fall of 1989.

With a decrease in drug use by youngsters who have had limited chemical abuse education already noticeable, Seago said he expects the usage to drop even further because of current programs.

"You're going to see a dramatic decrease when these kids get to high school," Seago said. DARE brings police officers into the classrooms of sixth graders to teach about how to avoid drug use.

As society's permissiveness toward alcohol use diminishes, its use among students will also drop, Seago predicted.

In DARE, officers are already making headway.

"We tell them (students) alcohol is a drug and is the number one abused drug in the country," Seago said.

According to the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse survey, when alcohol and tobacco are included as part of drug use, just one-third of Texas youngsters were drug-free in 1990.

Other findings of the survey, which had 110,000 respondents, included:

- In 1990, 10 percent of the respondents said they had used illegal drugs within the past month compared with 17 percent in 1988.
- Students who had never used drugs in their lifetime plunged from 39 percent in 1988 to 25 percent in 1990.
- Current use of marijuana fell from 12 percent to 8 percent; stimulants went from 6 percent to 2 percent; and sedative-type drugs dropped from 4 percent to 1 percent. Other drugs also showed decreases.
- Students that have tried marijuana went from 32 percent to 23 percent; stimulants, 17 percent to 7 percent; and sedatives, 13 percent to 5 percent.
- Those who have used alcohol rose from 76 percent in 1988 to 81 percent in 1990.
- Seniors in high school that had smoked cigarettes in the last month also rose from 21 percent in 1988 to 26 percent in 1990.

The Associated Press contributed to this story.

Pecos, Hereford bands invited to march in inaugural parade

AUSTIN (AP) — The marching bands of Pecos and Hereford high schools, which competed against one another last month, will march together in the 1991 Inaugural Parade after accepting invitations Thursday from Gov.-elect Ann Richards.

Richards

The bands received the first offers to join the Jan. 15 parade, personally delivered by the governor-elect in phone calls to the schools.

Richards said she was impressed by the sportsmanship shown by Pecos students who voted to give their Class 4A state band contest spot to Hereford after a scoring error was discovered in regional competition.

"I think the sense of fair play those kids showed was wonderful," she said. "We hear an awful lot about what's wrong with Texas schools today; but what's right is the students."

At Richards' request, the bands will perform together in the parade on Austin's Congress Avenue following the noon ceremony where Richards and Lt. Gov.-elect Bob Bullock take oaths of office.

At Hereford, Richards' phone call Thursday was broadcast over the school's public address system. After the calls, she said band directors Pam McAnally at Pecos and James Maclaskey at Hereford would arrange a joint performance.

"The two bands are going to get together, and going to play together and going to march up Congress Avenue for the inaugural parade," she said. "We're going to have a wonderful time here."

The bands competed in the University Scholastic League's Class 4A regional marching band contest in Odessa in early November. After the contest, it was announced that the Monahans and Pecos bands would advance to the state contest in Austin.

But a day later, an error was discovered in tabulation of the judges' scores. The Hereford band should have advanced. But officials said rules called for Pecos to go anyway.

The Pecos students then voted overwhelmingly to decline the trip and allow Hereford to participate. In return, Hereford band members wore ribbons in Pecos High colors at the state contest.

Richards said she read news accounts of the confusion and decided to reward both bands.

"When I read about the camaraderie between these two bands, it reminded me that we sometimes lose sight of what's right about Texas schools. Winning still comes in second to being a good sport with Texas students," she said.

Richards said planning for the inaugural is going well, including a "peoples' march" from Austin's Congress Avenue Bridge to the Capitol that she proposed during the campaign. She joked that the idea is so popular, the bridge may have to be stress tested.

"I said that one day in a speech, just said it. Everyone was so enthusiastic about it, and it dawned on me that we really do want a visual and physical way to participate in our government. We really do," she said.

"This is one of those ways in which people can participate and have a good time at the same time."

DEATHS

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Bogus collections

Staff reports

The Midland Police Department is warning residents about false solicitations for the Crime Prevention Unit and the Crime Prevention Commission.

Neither group is soliciting funds at the present time.

Anyone who receives a call to contribute money is asked to contact Sgt. Lalo Camarillo of the Midland Police Department at 685-7131.

Residents who receive such calls should take note of the name or phone number of the caller.

Assault reported

A 39-year-old Midland woman was the victim of an attempted sexual assault Wednesday morning, police officials said.

The woman told officers she had left her residence in south central Midland about 7:30 a.m. and started her car to warm up before going back inside.

She then went into the bathroom to finish getting ready for work when she heard her dog barking, officers said. She then noticed a man standing by the bathroom door who grabbed her and forced her into the master bedroom.

Struggling with the intruder, the two re-entered the bathroom at which time the man closed the door and locked her inside before fleeing, the woman told police.

The woman managed to open the door and call police.

The suspect was described as a white male, 20 to 25 years old, 6 feet tall, and about 180 pounds. He was wearing blue jeans, an orange coat and ski mask.

Shooting

A 25-year-old man turned himself in following a shooting in Midland County Thursday night, Midland County Sheriff's officials said.

Max Morgan, 19, sustained minor injuries to the hand and arm from a shotgun blast about 8 p.m. at Charlie's Trailer Park, 2610 South County Road 1223½, officials said.

Morgan was standing outside a trailer with a group of men when the suspect allegedly drove by and fired one round from a sawed-off 12-gauge shotgun, officials said.

The victim was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital by a private vehicle, where he was treated and released.

Both the victim and suspect resided at the trailer park, officials said.

Boy Scouts recruiting Hispanics

IRVING (AP) — The Boy Scouts of America are initiating a national marketing campaign aimed at attracting more Hispanics to Scouting.

The Scouts have long sought minorities, including blacks and Asians, but the language barrier made it necessary to cater specifically to Hispanics, said Lee Sneath, national spokesman for the Scouts.

"The local councils have put this same effort forth for African-Americans," Sneath said. "But language isn't necessarily a barrier, and certainly African-Americans have played a major role in Scouting almost since Scouting began."

The recruiting effort is a practical move, because the Hispanic population is the fastest growing group in the country, Sneath said.

"We're really just now beginning to scratch the surface," Sneath said Wednesday.

Midland College students receive music scholarships

Staff Report

Gana Leggett and Kathy Nichols, both of Midland, have been selected as the first recipients for the Ellen Gonzalez Music Scholarships to Midland College.

They were announced Thursday evening during the Midland College Jazz Ensemble's fall concert in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium.

The Gonzalez Scholarships were established this fall by Roy Gonzalez of Midland in memory of his wife, Ellen, who had served 10 years as the college's Fine Arts Division Secretary until her death last spring.

The recipients will receive cash awards of $300 per semester, renewable for two years.

"Ellen Gonzalez was a constant supporter of the fine arts programs at Midland College, especially encouraging to the students she encountered," said Dr. Don Grant, conductor of the Jazz Ensemble. "We are grateful to her husband for this generous scholarship program and what it will mean to countless students during coming years."

Miss Leggett is a 1990 graduate of Midland High School, where she attained a 3.7 grade point average. She received "Top Dawg" Orchestra Award, Optimist Club Youth Appreciation Award twice, National Honor Roll, Who's Who Among American High School Students four years, regional orchestra three years, first place in viola and cello in UIL contest, Negro Business and Profesional Women's Club Music Award, Outstanding Student of the Month for the Negro Business and Professional Women's Club and the American Association of University Women. She received scholarships from the Discovery/Horizon Cabinet, MHS Band Boosters, and the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs.

She has participated in Camp Fire for 12 years, First Baptist Church Orchestra, Pack Backers, 1988 San Diego Leadership Conference, 13th annual Governor's Leadership Conference, plays in the First Christian Church Youth Handbell Choir, and is a Museum of the Southwest workshop assistant.

Miss Leggett currently is enrolled at Midland College as a music education major. She plans to major in Music Education, eventually working, through music, with the visually handicapped.

Miss Nichols is a freshman at Midland College, a member of the Midland College Chorale and Jazz Singers. She has studied voice the past five years with Ruth Ann Griffin. A 1989 graduate of Midland Lee, she was a three-year member of the top choir and a two-year member in the pop ensemble "Origin".

She has been a member of the youth and adult choirs at Kelview Heights Baptist Church. For the past two years she has been a member of the Joe Whitten Prison Ministry, based in Big Spring, which is a "ministry through music" for maximum security prisons.

She has been named to All-Region Choir four years and the Texas All-State Choir for two years. She also received Division I awards in Solo/Ensemble contests each year she was in high school. She received two second places in the Texas Music Teachers Association's annual music competition (vocal division). She received two first places and a third place in Knox Festival competitions.

After Midland College, she plans to transfer to Wayland Baptist University to major in music performance or music education.

Prayers will be offered for the sick. Local singers will include Eddie, Sammy, James and Carlos Zachery, the Rev. George Pope and Robert Dorn.

The public is invited and admission is free. For more information, please call Dorothy D. Zachery 683-0961.

WTSU: Thompson named president

(From 1B)

An audit of the school's finances, released Oct. 2, said the university dipped into state and federal money to cover shortfalls in its athletic budget, which was losing $1.2 million a year.

Thompson said getting the school budget back under control would be his first priority.

"We have a significant budget deficit," he said. "We have to set that right. I've been told it's $1.7 million; I've been told it's $2 million; I've been told its $2.2 million.

"Whatever it is, it will take two or three years to correct."

Asked how he would do that, he replied: "You cut corners. You don't spend money on things that aren't absolutely essential. One of the things you need is an outstanding faculty, so we won't scrimp there."

Although relations between Roach and the faculty were strained at best, Thompson warned that his first responsibility was to students.

"Basically, I believe all faculties believe presidents are unnecessary," he said.

When asked about faculty salaries and academic freedom, which school professors have complained about during Roach's reign, he responded:

"I believe in merit pay. Those who perform will be paid. That's all I have to say about that.

"Academic freedom is earned. Tenure is earned. People who have academic freedom have it because they've earned it and because they're responsible. Academic freedom is not a lifetime grant.

The key is performance. I don't believe in potential. I believe in achievement. I expect a great deal out of faculty. I expect a great deal out of myself."

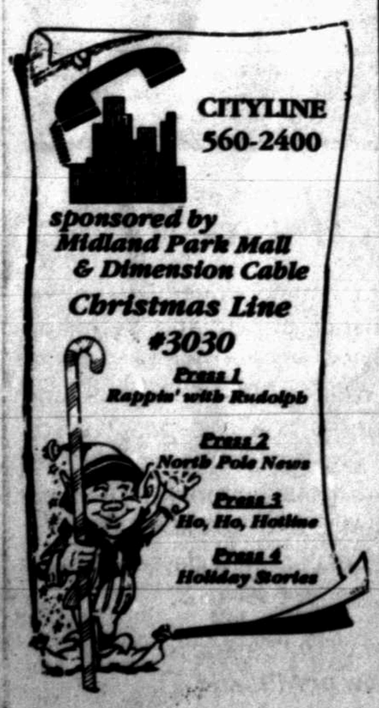

Academically, he said he hoped to revive the school's agriculture program.

"With the Iron Curtin falling in central and Eastern Europe, there's a tremendous market for American know-how," he said.

The West Texas State football program is the main casualty of the school's money problems and Roach last week said the program had until Jan. 10 to raise $300,000 or be dissolved.

Thompson said he wanted to see the football program and all athletics at West Texas State be non-scholarship.

"I don't believe in athletic scholarships," he said.

FBI confirms Bustamante, Garcia targets of probe

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The FBI for the first time has confirmed reports that Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-Texas, and his longtime friend, self-styled "bingo king" Eddie Garcia, are targets of an investigation.

Chief FBI spokesman Thomas Jones would not say why the two are being investigated.

A source familiar with the probe said it includes an examination of whether either of the two gained or dispensed money illegally in pursuing a potentially lucrative bingo parlor agreement with the Kickapoo Indians of Eagle Pass, Texas.

"It's a pending investigation," said Jones. "The FBI is not going to comment on a pending investigation."

However, he added, "we will follow the leads where they take us."

THE SOURCE, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the probe is far from over. "I don't think we really know what we have here. We've been on it for awhile."

Investigators are attempting to reconstruct the financial elements of Garcia's agreement with the Kickapoos to build a 7,000-seat bingo hall on the tribe's 125-acre reservation southeast of Eagle Pass, on the U.S.-Mexico border.

William Collier, area director of the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs office in Anadarko, Okla., said the Kickapoo tribe had submitted a draft application to operate a bingo hall, and that it had been sent back to tribal leaders for technical revisions. The BIA must approve any application before it is implemented.

"We do not have a formal application for them to do bingo," Collier said.

Among the elements of the investigation is an FBI check of whether Garcia offered any inducements to the tribe — including bribes — to cement the bingo deal, the source said.

Also, agents are trying to find out if Bustamante stood to profit from the deal through his friendship with Garcia, the source said.

CONTACTED BY phone at his office on Capitol Hill, Bustamante was asked whether he was interceding on Garcia's behalf on the Kickapoo deal. He said, "My agenda is so broad that I don't have time to deal with that type of stuff."

Bustamante described Garcia as "a friend. We do hang around together; we have a few drinks."

Garcia, who calls himself the "bingo king" of San Antonio, leases three halls there to charitable organizations that operate bingo games.

He also denied any impropriety.

"It's strictly political," Garcia said in a telephone interview.

HE REPEATED charges reported by San Antonio newspapers in recent days that the FBI is conducting a "vendetta" against him and Bustamante because they supported Hispanic FBI agents who won a bitter anti-discrimination lawsuit against the bureau in 1988.

Of Bustamante, Garcia said: "Albert and I are good friends. We don't apologize for being good friends, but this was my deal, and Albert and I have no understanding. We didn't reach any kind of an agreement."

Garcia said, however, that Bustamante wrote a letter of recommendation to the Kickapoos in 1988 when Garcia was lobbying the tribal council for a bingo agreement.

"I said to Albert, 'You know who I am. (The Kickapoos) are in your district. Wouldn't you rather have somebody you know in there than somebody you don't know?'" Garcia said. He added that he also asked Henry Cisneros, who then was mayor of San Antonio, to write a letter of recommendation.

Garcia said he has asked Bustamante's office for help "here and there" on a number of issues. But he said, he has not asked Bustamante to intercede with the Bureau of Indian Affairs to smooth the way for the bingo application.

Bustamante also sees the FBI investigation as part of an anti-Hispanic conspiracy. He said if the FBI were to "find anything wrong with him (Garcia), they would go after him hoping that he would, in turn, provide damaging information (about me)."

ASKED IF he had any investments with Garcia, Bustamante said, "No, and I wouldn't want any, not even in a church bingo."

Asked whether Garcia was a campaign contributor, Bustamante said, "I know he gets out there and campaigns," but he has not given money.

With regard to "the bingo area," Bustamante said, "it's always delicate to get that type of stuff. I'd rather not."

Garcia said that he became aware of the FBI probe in January, four months before the tribal council submitted its bingo application to the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Garcia said that he realized an investigation was under way because FBI agents questioned his accountant.

On Tuesday, 11 organizations led by the League of United Latin American Citizens backed Garcia, also alleging that the FBI was persecuting Hispanics. The group proposed that the Bush administration establish an advisory council to oversee the FBI.

Since bingo games on Indian reservations are not regulated by the state, the pot of cash prizes is unlimited. State-regulated bingo parlors are limited to dispensing $5,000 in cash prizes each evening.

Judge orders reporter held for contempt over interview

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A district judge Thursday ordered a newspaper reporter jailed for refusing to answer questions about interviews with a capital murder suspect.

At a pre-trial hearing, reporter Libby Averyt of the Corpus Christi Caller-Times refused 12 times to answer questions about the interviews with Jermarr Arnold, accused of killing a jewelry store clerk during a 1983 robbery.

State District Judge Eric Brown of the 28th District Court cited Ms. Averyt for contempt of court, then released her on her own recognizance until a 9 a.m. Friday hearing, to allow time for paperwork to be completed for her incarceration.

The judge said once Ms. Averyt goes to jail she will stay there until she agrees to discuss the interviews.

Ms. Averyt claimed protection under the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and a corresponding provision in the Texas Constitution.

"I don't want to go to jail," the 26-year-old reporter said after Thursday's hearing. "But my desire to avoid jail is outweighed by my duty to stand up for what I believe in.

"And I believe that if every time I interview someone, the entire conversation could be scrutinized by attorneys, then significantly fewer people would be willing to talk to me. And if they will not talk to me, then I cannot fulfill my role as a reporter and inform the public."

Ms. Averyt and the newspaper's attorney, Jorge Rangel, told the judge that free-speech provisions protect reporters from having to divulge the content of interviews, other than what is published.

Houston works for best economy in 1991

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Houston will have the state's most vibrant economy next year as Texas feels a recessionary pinch, University of North Texas economists said Thursday.

"Houston has been leading the state out of the wilderness just as Houston led the state into the depths of depression," said Bernard Weinstein of the Center for Economic Development and Research at the university.

About one-third of all new employment in the state next year will be in Houston, Weinstein and his colleague, Harold Gross, predict in a new study.

Job growth in Texas will decline from about 1.5 percent this year to 1 percent in 1991. The state's four largest metropolitan areas will all have fewer new jobs next year, the economists said.

Houston jobs will continue growing the most, at about 1.5 percent compared to 3 percent this year, they predicted.

New jobs in Dallas-Fort Worth and Austin will occur at a rate of .5 percent. Dallas-Fort Worth jobs grew at a 2 percent rate this year and Austin jobs grew at 1.25 percent.

San Antonio, which had a .5 percent rate this year, will show virtually no job growth in 1991, the economists said.

The job picture for Houston is "amazing" because of the slump it went through in the mid-1980s, Weinstein said.

Houston lost 212,000 jobs between 1982 and 1986, but has recovered 170,000 since then. "It's a dramatic recovery and says a lot about the vitality of the area," he said.

Houston's economy has benefited the most of any in Texas from higher oil prices driven by the Persian Gulf crisis, Weinstein said. It will still prosper when the prices fall after the Middle East tensions ease, he said.

Weinstein and Gross predict oil prices will settle at between $22 and $25 per barrel when the Persian Gulf crisis is resolved. "That's going to be good for Texas and help insulate us from vicissitudes of the national recession," Weinstein said.

A hint occurred Thursday of the likely decline in oil prices that resolution of the crisis would bring. West Texas Intermediate fell 90 cents to $26.40 a barrel after Iraqi President Saddam Hussein said foreigners held hostage in Iraq and occupied Kuwait could go home.

Energy extraction was flat in Texas during October and November, the Federal Reserve Bank reported earlier this week. Producers haven't increased drilling because of fears they'd lose money if prices fell.

The gulf crisis has harmed the two key components of San Antonio's economy, the military and tourism, Weinstein said. The city has lost the spending power of locally-based military personnel deployed in the Middle East and tourists who are staying closer to home because of gasoline costs.

The city's economy will still fare better than many places, though, the economists said. "Texas is going to outperform the country next year, which isn't saying much," Weinstein said.

Economists have said for several weeks the nation is near recession, officially defined as six months of decline in the inflation-adjusted gross national product.

Economic activity across the country was either declining or grew slowly last month, according to the Federal Reserve Bank survey. Business conditions in late November "on balance display a weaker pattern" than a similar survey conducted in mid-October, the Fed said.

The survey showed the Texas economy was stagnant. Manufacturing declines were offset by growth in the service sector and slight growth in retail and auto sales, the survey said.

Ethics reform given top priority from Richards during coming year

AUSTIN (AP) — Ethics reform legislation will be a top priority in the 1991 Legislature, Gov.-elect Ann Richards says.

The Democrat, who will be sworn in Jan. 15, said in an interview with The Associated Press that she already has discussed ethics reform with Bob Bullock, who will become lieutenant governor, and House Speaker Gib Lewis.

"We are of one mind that ethics legislation should be No. 1 or 2 or 3 on our agenda. It'll be discussed and debated very early on in the session," Richards said.

She also said former congresswoman Barbara Jordan has agreed to serve as her special counsel on ethics.

The three state leaders made ethics reform an issue in their campaigns, and aides said the three staffs met Wednesday to being drafting the legislation.

Richards said she wants to require disclosure of lobby expenses of more than $100 per occasion and the creation of an ethics commission to oversee ethics law enforcement.

She also said she would like to see a limit on campaign contributions. "I think there has to be limitation on the size of contributions from any source, whether it be a PAC (political action committee) or an individual," she said.

Richards said she wants an ethics package that includes full financial disclosure, including federal income tax returns for all statewide elected officials.

"That way, the public has a very clear idea of whether there are any conflicts of interest," she said.

Tim Conger, press secretary to Lewis, said the four-term speaker wants to see a reform bill passed in the upcoming session.

"He's been committed to passing ethics for some time. We made a fairly large push in the special sessions (earlier this year) to get ethics in the call and pass a bill."

Conger said that a low House bill number, usually reserved for priority legislation, had been set aside for ethics legislation.

Bullock issued his own detailed ethics reform plan during the campaign and reiterated last week that he wanted action. "Not only is the government short on cash ... it is short on credibility," Bullock said.

For nearly two years, dozens of news stories have detailed lobbyists' lavish gifts to members of the Legislature.

Doing the honors of drawing the lucky number for a hand woven Serape was Mr. Charles Spence, Publisher of Midland Reporter-Telegram. Mr. Spence was assisted by members of this dance study group: Ritzie Williford Alibia Childers, and Graciela Luna. Ballet Mujeres is a non-profit study group encouraging cultural fine-arts dance work classes in castenet (as a percussion instrument) and dance training in Flamenco, Foriklorico and Spanish Ballet. For further information on membership, and classes open to women of all ages, please phone: 699-7820

The lucky winner of the Serape is:
Audrey Larson of Midland

Low-interest loans all that's available to farmers this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Agriculture Committee is urging the Farmers Home Administration to move quickly to make low-interest loans available to farmers who lost this year's crops to disaster.

Unlike in years past, Congress failed to pass a direct aid package for farmers who lost production to natural disasters in 1990. Instead, Congress waived a federal law which prohibits emergency disaster loans to producers if crop insurance was available. The waiver, included in the 1990 farm bill, applies only to crops for harvest this year.

But for many farmers in Texas who are operating on the edge, the 4.5 percent interest loans won't do much good, a critic said.

"If you're in the hole and you're broke, a loan doesn't help," said Joe Rankin, president of the Texas Farmers Union, which represents 4,000 member families.

Disaster payments, approved by Congress in four of the past five years, while "not lucrative ... are very helpful," Rankin said this week. "We need to have those disaster payments."

Jack Eberspacher, executive director of the National Grain Sorghum Producers Association in Abernathy, said he believes the low-interest loans would be very helpful to a large number of producers in Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

"It is some avenue that they have for assistance to operate this next year," Eberspacher said Wednesday. "Producers have been hurt badly." Yields in some areas, he said, were cut by 50 percent to 70 percent.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, the Agriculture Committee chairman, said the government's budget situation made it impossible for Congress to provide direct disaster payments this year, "despite the very real losses suffered by many agricultural producers around the country."

"But by quickly implementing this waiver, the (Agriculture) secretary can make available some additional assistance to help these farmers get back on their feet and prepare for next year's production cycle," de la Garza said Tuesday.

According to Rankin, a substantial portion of Texas' 186,000 farmers lost crops because of bad weather this year. Half a million acres of cotton was lost west of Lubbock because of dry weather, which also caused poor yields from Amarillo west to the New Mexico line and south to the Rio Grande Valley. Floods from the Dallas-Fort Worth area into East Texas ruined even more crops, Rankin said.

According to de la Garza, D-Mission, producers in more than 1,600 counties in 43 states could be eligible to apply for emergency loans because of disaster declarations this year.

In a letter to Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter, de la Garza asked him to move quickly to implement the waiver, saying "this modest step will help alleviate the difficult circumstances that many of our farmers and ranchers face as a result of various natural disasters."

But Rankin said he believes many farmers in Texas will give up the business, in part because they're at retirement age and in part because of economics.

"A lot of people are going to give it up this time, it's so difficult to get financed," Rankin said. "Some people are just going to hang it up and retire. We're going to lose a lot of farmers here in the state of Texas, but I don't have a number."

Joe O'Neill, spokesman for the Farmers Home Administration, said the agency is looking at all regulations in the 1990 Farm Bill, which includes the waiver for disaster loans, and is "trying to see how quickly we can act on all of them."

Chilly breezes speed harvests

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A swift, windy cold front Sunday and Monday brought freezes to the top two-thirds of the state and speeded harvesting of cotton, pecans, peanuts and soybeans, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports.

The front also brought rain to North Central and Northeast Texas, and to some areas of West Central Texas but left deepening drought in South Texas and the Coastal Bend.

Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, Extension Service director, said the dry, crisp conditions in the rainless northern areas are ideal for wrap-up harvesting of major crops.

District Extension Director Paul E. Gross of Amarillo said soil moisture is short but "sorghum and cotton harvesting are near completion, and cotton yields may be the best in years. Carrot and cabbage harvesting also are active."

In the Rolling Plains, killing frosts have enhanced cotton, peanut, pecan and guar harvesting, said Ed Garnett of Vernon, district Extension Service director.

"Cotton harvesting is expected to be completed within two weeks in Dickens County. The peanut harvest is complete in most counties, with Hardeman County averaging 3,500 pounds per acre," he said.

Garnett said wheat is making excellent growth but the lush forage has caused bloat death in some cattle.

Tony H. Douglas of Overton, district Extension Service director, said killing frosts in Northeast Texas have hastened and enabled 95 percent completion of cotton harvesting. Winter small grains are providing generous grazing and keeping livestock in good condition.

In Far West Texas, ranges, pastures and livestock are in fair to good condition but there are predator problems in some goat herds, said Extension Service District Director Charles Neeb of Fort Stockton.

"Terrell County goats are kidding (producing young) and there are losses from predators," Neeb said.

Another active "harvest" can be found in Central Texas, where District Extension Service Director Ronald C. Woolley of Stephenville said "harvested deer are in excellent body condition and have very good antler growth."

'Cotton harvesting is expected to be completed within two weeks in Dickens County. The peanut harvest is complete in most counties, with Hardeman County averaging 3,500 pounds per acre.'

— Ed Garnett, district Extension Service director, Vernon

Southwest Texas is drying fast, but Joe Pena of Uvalde, Extension Service economist, said most livestock and pastures still look good overall. Early-planted small grain fields are growing normally and offering grazing, but late-planted fields need rain to get the crop up and growing.

"Harvesting of an excellent crop of greens and cabbage continues," he said. "The cabbage market has been strong but shows signs of weakening. The spinach harvest is gaining momentum."

Soil moisture is much too short in South Texas, said Doyle G. Warren of Weslaco, district Extension Service director.

"Dry, windy days have kept ranges and pastures in very poor condition and maintenance livestock feeding is active. Livestock are generally in fair shape," Warren said.

He said citrus trees that survived the freeze of last December and recently planted trees are making promising progress.

Soil moisture also is far too short along the Coastal Bend, and District Extension Service Director M. Lin Wilson of Corpus Christi said winter and spring rains will be needed for 1991.

"Cattle are generally in fair condition. Some locations have adequate grazing and some cattle are on full maintenance feeding programs," Wilson said.

District Extension Service directors reported the following specific crop, livestock and weather conditions for the past week:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture is short and temperatures have dropped to well below freezing. Sorghum and cotton harvesting are almost finished, and cotton yields may be the most bountiful in years. Wheat is growing well but needs rain. Many fields are being grazed by stocker cattle. Deaf Smith County carrot and cabbage harvesting is active.

SOUTH PLAINS: Soil moisture is short to adequate. Cotton is about 80 percent harvested and very little sorghum remains to be harvested. Wheat is fair to good but needs rain. Pastures also would welcome rain. Pecan harvesting is under way.

ROLLING PLAINS: Killing frosts have pushed cotton and pecan harvesting. Wheat is growing fast and more wheat pasture is available than there are cattle to graze it. Some cattle bloat deaths are reported on lush wheat. Wheat leaf rust is a problem in Baylor County. Dickens County cotton harvesting should be ended in about two weeks. Hardeman County peanut harvesting is almost complete, with yields averaging 3,500 pounds to the acre. Guar harvesting has begun in Wilbarger County.

NORTH CENTRAL: Soil moisture is adequate to surplus after recent rains. Cotton is up to 90 percent harvested, and peanuts and soybeans are 100 percent harvested. Good yields are reported. Wheat and oats are mostly planted and up to good stands. Ranges and pastures are good to fair. Cattle are in good shape but there is some maintenance feeding. Cool-season vegetables are growing normally. A very short pecan crop is up to 95 percent harvested.

SOUTHWEST: Freezing temperatures early Tuesday morning will likely terminate the fall growing season. November was dry but livestock, ranges, pastures and small grains have made excellent progress. Peanut harvesting is almost complete, with strong markets throughout the season. Harvesting of a fine crop of greens and cabbage continues. The cabbage market has been strong but shows some weakening.

FAR WEST: Soil moisture is short to adequate and there have been frosts and freezes in northern and some southern counties. Cotton yields and grades are average. Livestock are in good condition but some areas are feeding. Goats are kidding and Terrell County has lost many of the young animals to predators. The overall pecan crop is good.

WEST CENTRAL: Soil moisture is adequate in most counties. Up to an inch of rain fell in Callahan County during the past week, causing delays in peanut harvesting. District temperatures have been at or near freezing. Cotton and wheat are excellent, and ranges, pastures and livestock are in good to excellent shape. Good lamb crops are reported. Pecans, now up to 95 percent harvested, are erratic in yields.

CENTRAL: Wheat and oat pastures are providing excellent grazing, and more stocker cattle are being put on wheat and oat fields. Harvested deer are in fine body condition and show good antler growth.

EAST: Soil moisture remains adequate following recent rains. Winter pastures, including oat fields, are progressing well but warm-season forages have gone dormant. Livestock are in excellent condition and sales are favorable.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Soil moisture is short to adequate. Pastures are still productive and small grains are growing well. Cattle are in good condition and markets remain strong. A good quality pecan crop is being harvested.

FAMILY MATTERS

Marriages need nurturing too

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I have been married 40 years. Most of our acquaintances think we have the perfect marriage. I have seriously considered divorce for about 10 years, but I guess I care too much for my husband to wreck his plans for retirement and upset his reputation. He is well known and respected in this community. I'm not noble enough to just leave and try to support myself — I'm too old and my career skills are outdated.

May

What I'm starving for is affection and affirmation. I never really had either, but it didn't seem to matter as much in the earlier years. I must be a person of worth; others tell me so but all he does is put me down. We stopped having sex two or three years ago. I think that he might be impotent but we've never discussed it (or anything else). I haven't had a spontaneous hug or pat or kind work in years.

He'd never consider joint counseling. He wouldn't admit it, but talking about my feelings (or his) would be abhorrent to him. Since we can't even talk about the possibility of counseling, am I just doomed to endure this "until death do us part?" We can't even talk about talking to each other. STUCK

DEAR STUCK: I assume that if you are so unhappy, so is your husband. If you believe that he will not go to marriage counseling, seek professional help for yourself..I do not believe God intended for marriage to be a painful test of endurance. I do believe there is a spirit to marriage that must be nurtured and loved in order to blossom. As Dr. Scott Peck wrote in "A Road Less Traveled," the aim of genuine love is always spiritual growth.

The first step toward nurturing the spirit of a marriage is to identify what is working and what is not. The next step is to lovingly confront those issues.

Peck wrote: "To fail to confront when confrontation is required for the nurture of spiritual growth represents a failure to love equally as much as does thoughtless criticism or condemnation and other forms of active deprivation of caring." I encourage you to seek professional help to learn how to "lovingly confront" your husband.

Your letter reveals a lot of pain. You are at a good point to work on your marriage. Talk to your minister or a marriage counselor. The process of change will be painful, but the potential rewards are significant.

DEAR FAMILY: My brother and his children are coming to our house for Christmas. His children are 10 and 12, and "know it all." My children are 3, 4 and 6. As far as I know, they all still believe in Santa Claus. I am worried that my brother's children will tell my children about Santa Claus. I am going to ask my brother to ask his kids to not say anything about Santa Claus to my kids, but I just know they will anyway.

I don't want my children to miss out on Santa Claus. I don't want some other kid to ruin Christmas for them. Is there anything I can do to protect them? WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: I don't know of anything that you can do that would be "failsafe," but there are some things you can do that might help. Santa Claus is about the spirit of giving, of sacrificing to give to others.

If your children question you about Santa Claus' reality, first ask them what they believe. If they think he is real, you can agree that you think he is too. If they think that he isn't real, you can ask why they think that. Should the response be that their cousins told them, you can point out that Santa may not be real for them. However, you still believe in him.

I don't really know if Santa Claus is real or not, but I do know that Santa's spirit is real. I have seen it in many places and many times, and that's good enough for me.

Cream cheese substitute is fat-free

Copley News Service

For a fat-free substitute for cream cheese and sour cream, registered dietitian Karen Owens recommends the following.

Simply line a strainer with three layers of cheesecloth and fill with a quart of non-fat yogurt. Set it in a bowl in the refrigerator to drain overnight. In the morning you'll have creamy, non-fat cheese, which you can mix with non-fat milk, raisins, dates, chives or dill.

Veal recipe contest announced

The American Veal Association is sponsoring its fifth annual Favorite Veal Recipe Contest and is now accepting entries.

To enter, submit an original recipe prepared with at least one pound of veal. Any cut is elegible. Last year, innovative reipes with simple preparation methods scored high. The recipe for Broiled Rib Chops topped with a pepper-pear relish took the top honors.

For an "under 30 minute" second prize, veal leg cutlets teams with roasted red peppers and capers. And quick mustard-yogurt sauce joined seasoned ground veal patties for a third-place finish.

Recipes are judged on overall appeal, ease of preparation, taste and appearance. Three prizes will be awarded: a grand prize of $2,500, a second prize of $1,000 and a third prize of $750.

Participants can enter as often at they wish, but only one entry per envelope. Mail entries to Favorite Veal Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 530, Barrington, Ill. 60011. Entries must be postmarked on or before April 26, and received by April 30, 1991. For complete rules, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to "Veal Rules" at the same address.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm planning my wedding and need to know how to handle a touchy problem. My mother has selected a beautiful royal blue street-length dress.

Van Buren

My fiance's mother says she is wearing either a floor-length dress or a pantsuit! (She's had polio and she wears leg braces.)

I asked her if, just for that one day, could she please make an exception and wear a street-length dress like my mother is wearing, and she said, "Sorry, I'd rather not." I even offered to rent a wheelchair, so she could wear a nice dress and not use the leg braces, and she still refused.

Abby, it is just one day in her life — surely she could bend a little. The pictures will be important to us for a long time, and the impression the wedding party gives is important to me. My mother is very upset.

Please let me know what you think, as my future mother-in-law values your opinion highly. — TORONTO BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: You and your mother should "bend a little" and rearrange your priorities if you want your wedding to be a stress-free, convivial occasion. Apologize to your fiance's mother for having hassled her to wear a street-length dress instead of a floor-length dress or a pantsuit to cover her leg braces. Your wedding pictures will be no less cherished if she wears whatever she feels comfortable in. Trust me.

DEAR ABBY: I don't know a soul in the Saudi desert, but I wanted to help the military a bit with morale. I made a "cookie coupon" stating it was good for one box of homemade chocolate chip cookies; please fill in name and address and return to (my address). I mailed it to Any Servicemember to an APO in New York. So far, I've had one response from a Marine. (I sent out six coupons.)

1. Wipe the inside of a sturdy box with a damp sponge sprinkled with vanilla.
2. Line the bottom of the box with a layer of unsalted popcorn.
3. A layer of waxed paper.
4. A layer of cookies.
5. More waxed paper, popcorn, cookies, etc. until the box is filled.

DEAR SARAH: Thanks for the helpful tips. Everybody loves cookies, and our men and women serving far from home in all corners of the world will eat them up. Readers, head for your kitchens!

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a married man who has been married for 16 years and goes with a married woman for nine years and then drops her and goes with a girl for five years? Then, when his wife dies, he goes with another married woman for seven years? — CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: I think he must be a very old man by now.

Early diet book holds up thin ideal

Associated Press

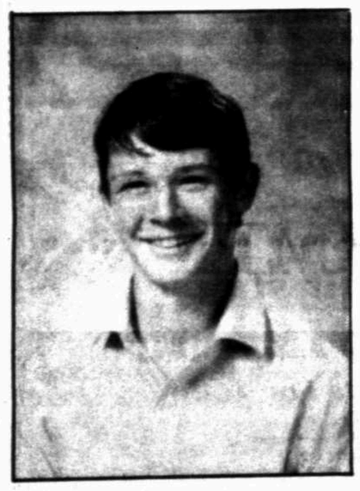

"Diet and Health with a Key to the Calories," published in 1918 and written by a physician, was the first best-selling diet book in this country, according to Joan Jacobs Brumberg's history of anorexia. It's full of good humor, but makes it clear that a thin ideal had already taken hold. The author, Lulu Hunt Peters, uses names like "Mrs. Sheesasite, whose husband bought her freight scales," Mrs. Tiny Weyaton and Mrs. Ima Gobbler.

Some excerpts:

■ To her readers who want to gain weight, she says: "I am not particularly interested in you, anyway, for I cannot get your point of view. How anyone can want to be anything but thin is beyond my intelligence."

■ "Somehow, willpower with a layer of fat on it gets feeble."

■ Peters says go ahead and eat some chocolate creams if you "think you will die unless you have some," but when she does, she has a 50-calorie dinner of broth and a cracker. "And thus, you see, every supposed pleasure in sin (eating) will furnish more than its equivalent of pain (dieting) until belief in material life (chocolate creams) is destroyed."

Those who were there remember Pearl Harbor

By Dr. Henry F. Page

Page

I personally entered the scene as a junior medical officer via the hospital ship Solace on 27 October 1941 — a memorable day because drinks were free throughout Honolulu, it being Navy Day! My unit's project was to build and establish a Fleet Mobile Base Hospital overlooking Pearl because the old Base Hospital had become inadequate. This was accomplished and operative on Dec. 6 without any outside labor force except one engineer from Brooklyn. We had worked feverishly seven days a week and were looking forward to our first day off.

A sense of relaxed unreality had pervaded both the city and Naval Base with no imitation that actual hostilities might erupt. Perhaps this attitude could be explained by the national political atmosphere created by vocal America Firsters, the Oxford Peaceniks, pro German advocates and our own political machinators.

First came the high altitude bombers, dropping what at first we interpreted a smoke bombs on the air field at Ford Island. Next came the low altitude torpedo bombers, so close we could almost touch the red ball on their wings. Then came a mixture of everything including our own wayward anti-aircraft shells — one of which killed the sailor standing next to me. Then ensued a blazing inferno, with even the water alive with burning oil.

Two other doctors and myself manned the boxing arena with mattress between the rows for beds. Nurses and corpsman plus the wives of naval personnel constituted the staff. Full activity was maintained for three days. The great majority of injuries were burns.

One highlight was a young sailor who had his appendix removed as an emergency aboard the Oklahoma just four hours before it turned turtle. He squeezed thorugh a port hole, swam to shore through burning water, and made a speedy and uneventful recovery.

Another highlight was my drinking two glasses of water and immediately after the last swallow, hearing the loud speaker announce "The water supply has been poisoned — do not drink any water until further notice!"

The most soul searching moment came during a lull amidst the clamorous confusion when the loud speaker broadcast the President's "Day of Infamy" speech before Congress, followed by a band playing the Star Spangled Banner. During this, the American flag could be seen waving in the breeze.

It dawned on me that that flag represented what it was all about, why over a thousand of our country's top young men gave their lives that day. That explained why even today the desecration of that flag comprises an obscenity not protectible by naive first amendment advocates.

With planning, gardens produce longer

By James E. Walters

PHOENIX (AP) — Superior taste is the main reason for homegrown vegetables. But identical varieties will ripen around the same time unless the planting is spaced over several weeks. So successive plantings are needed for a continuous, top-quality supply over the longest possible period.

For example, in this warm, arid climate, green onions for eating (scallions) develop from onion sets in a few weeks. In late October or early November, I prepare a 4x10-foot raised bed and divide it into three equal segments. Sets spaced an inch apart are planted in the first segment. Two weeks later a similar planting goes into segment No. 2. Segment No. 3 is planted two weeks later.

By the time the green onions from the first bed have been eaten and replacement sets planted, the second bed is being harvested. This sequence continues until higher temperatures rule out onion planting, usually in late February. Then I put in a warm-season crop such as green peppers, using the same timing.

Planting times vary with climates and vegetables, of course, and the process can be this simple or more complex, as desired.

To determine plant-succession timing it's necessary to determine the days needed for maturing. There are general guidelines for each vegetable.

Beets usually take 60 to 80 days; cauliflower 90 to 100 days; carrots 60 to 100 days; eggplant 70 to 120 days; peppers 90 to 120 days. A reference book will help.

MORE PRECISE is the specific information in seed catalogs or on seed packets. Some varieties of the same vegetables are genetically ready to eat earlier or later than others.

While seed sellers take this into account, they also tend to be optimistic. So it's wise to routinely add a week or so to the catalog-packet estimate. Then allow for some plants of the same variety to mature later or before others.

After such approximations, and if your beets, say, are supposed to mature in 60 days, plant a third of the seed packet at the recommended time, follow with another third 20 days later, and the final third after another 20 days.

The idea is to let nature's growth-regulating system supply vegetables at peak quality over a long period. This works especially well with crops such as lettuce, green onions, carrots, radishes and beets, and is effective with just about everything throughout a growing season.

HOW IS peak quality determined? Frequent sampling is effective and simple. Remember that most vegetables taste best when fully developed but before they turn the corner to maturity.

Such an idea will bring hoots from commercial growers and from home gardeners who freeze or can their produce. Their need is for everything to be ready for harvest about the same time, for ease of handling. Most seed crops are developed to meet such timing needs. It's a valid position for mass production of food. It's also one reason that so many store-bought vegetables taste so bland.

So if taste is your reason for growing vegetables, experiment with successive planting. There is nothing sacred about planting a third of a seed packet at a time. Divide the packet by four or five, or in half, if this works better.

Remember, too, that growing seasons seldom are the same from year to year. So adjustments may be needed.

As for using sets to produce green onions, purists will insist that scallions, or bunching onions, are best grown from seed designed to produce white, "bulbless" onions. This is true. But fresh onions for the table from sets are easy and inexpensive; arrive three weeks or more before those from seeds; and can be planted later in the season.

They also are a great way to spark children's interest in gardening. Kids love to push the marble-size sets into the ground and love the almost immediate results.

If space is limited, the most space-efficient vegetables include beets, broccoli, beans, cabbage, carrots, leaf lettuce, onions, radishes and tomatoes.

Winners of 'Home for the Holidays' announced

Staff Report

Southwest Airlines is celebrating the beginning of its second decade with the "Home for the Holidays" program which enables senior citizens in each of its cities to join thier families and friends in another Southwest destination.

"Home for the Holidays," a Southwest Airlines tradition since 1979, has reunited thousands of seniors with their loved ones during this special time of year. The program was cited by President Reagan in 1986 as an outstanding community service program and awarded the Presidential Award for Private Sector Initiatives.

Deserving seniors were chosen from a field of applicants based on their proven need for transportation to visit a special individual in their life. Each applicant had to be at least 65 years of age and on a fixed income.

This year's recipients in the area are: Frank Dutchover, Lucille Floyd, Ila Davis, Mildred Littlejohn, Bessie Ferrell, Amanda Brown, Edith Wells, Martha Bartley, Beulah Garmany, Lela Mae Hunter, Trini Salas, Silvestra Millan, Mary Elizabeth Schmidt, and Mr. and Mrs. J.M. Lipham. These seniors may travel on or after Dec. 6 with a return flight scheduled on or before Jan. 16, 1991.

Recipients were awarded their tickets during a special ceremony Thursday at Dobb's Restaurant at the Midland International Airport.

Each year, Southwest Airlines works with local community organizations in each of its 31 cities to select a set number of seniors to receive free tickets to any city on the Southwest Airlines route system. This year's program in Midland/Odessa was coordinated by Southwest through the Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging.

"Southwest Airlines is pleased to again have the opportunity to support Midland/Odessa's seniors," said Sherri Moegle, the area's marketing manaer. "Nothing is more gratifying than to see this very special group of people happy during the holiday season."

Scuba divers' blurry vision caused by contact lenses

Copley News Service

Blame temporary blurriness sometimes experienced by scuba divers and snorkelers on contact lenses. Dr. Peter Wilmhurst, medical adviser to the British Sub-Aqua Club, reports in Lancet that bubbles of gas, presumably nitrogen, may collect between the cornea and contact lenses during dives.

As these bubbles increase in size during ascent, they cause indentations in the cornea, causing severe blurring that lasts about two hours. Remedy: Wear gas-permeable contacts or a mask with prescription lens.

Association sues state over health care costs

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — The debate over how much the state should pay for the cost of caring for nursing home residents has shifted from the Statehouse to the courtroom.

Two groups sued this month, alleging the state is not paying enough.

The Kansas Health Care Association and the Kansas Association for Homes for the Aging filed the lawsuit in U.S. District Court against the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services. The groups represent 330 privately owned and non-profit nursing homes in Kansas.

"We have worked extensively at the administrative and legislative branches of government to work out a solution to the rising health care costs of caring for our senior population, but to no avail," said Lou Esplund, chairwoman of KAHA.

The lawsuit complains that the SRS payment system violates a federal law that requires states to pay "reasonable and adequate costs" for nursing home care.

Tim Owens, attorney for SRS, declined to comment.

John Grace, president of the Kansas Association of homes for the Aging, said federally mandated regulations took effect Oct. 1, requiring that nurses be on duty 24 hours.

The state has earmarked $2 million to cover the cost of that regulation and others. But SRS officials estimated the total cost would be $30 million.

Legal Hotline for Older Texans offers legal rights brochure

Staff Report

The Leagal Hotline for Older Texans has entered its second year of providing legal advice, consultation, pamphlets on legal topics and referrals, to Texans who are 60 years of age and older. The Legal Hotline for Older Texans has recently prepared a new brochure, concerning certain legal rights of older Texans: "Alternatives to Guardianship Under Texas Law."

The brochure was developed to assist older Texans in knowing about the Directive to Physician ("Living Will"), Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care, General Durable Power of Attorney, Representative Payee under Social Security, and the Texas form to Designate A Guardian in Advance of Need. The brochure describes each of these matters.

Any Texan, 60 or older, may call the Legal Hotline and request, at no charge, a copy of this brochure. There is no charge for any of the services provided directly at the Legal Hotline for Older Texans. If the free advice and consultation, and brochures provided by the Legal Hotline are not sufficient to resolve an older Texan's legal matter, the Legal Hotline will refer the client to a further source of follow-up assistance. Some sources of follow-up assistance charge a fee, if their services are used pursuant to the referral. It is always the client's choice as to whether to use the referral. As noted, for the Legal Hotline's advice, consultation and brochures, there is not charge.

Texans 60 years of age and older can receive the services of the Legal Hotline by calling 1-800-622-2520, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Persons receiveing a busy signal are requested to attempt the call again.

The Legal Hotline for Older Texans is a joint project of the Texas Legal Services Center and the AARP Legal Counsel for the elderly. The Legal Hotline receives funding from the Texas Equal Access to Justice Foundation, and general support from the Texas Department on Aging.

Quayle played Little League in Huntington, Ind.

Schedule snafu

PRAIRIE VIEW (AP) — Texas College says there's a simple explanation for its men's basketball team not showing up for a game against Prairie View A&M.

"Texas College did not have a game scheduled against Prairie View" Wednesday night, said Texas College Athletic Director Richard Watkins. "It's just another incident of Prairie View trying to do whatever they want."

But Prairie View officials say the game was scheduled and that they never heard from Texas College, so the game officials called it a forfeit.

MC Invitational boasts some of state's finest

■ Austin LBJ enters today's opening round of the Midland College High School Invitational boys basketball tournament looking for its third straight tourney title.

By Terry Williamson

The road to the championship throne room today and Saturday in the third annual Midland College Invitational basketball tournament will be cluttered with high powered obstacles for both Midland High and Midland Lee.

MHS and Lee both won entry into the Tall City Invitational finals on Thanksgiving weekend with the Bulldogs taking the title over the Rebels. However, the MC event at Chaparral Center this weekend has some names that will make your head jerk.

Austin LBJ, the only team to own an MC Invite championship in the first two years of the event, is back for a third go at the crown while sporting a 9-1 record under coach Mike McShane.

LBJ was a Final Four team last season and will come rolling into the Chap at 4:45 p.m. today against Fort Worth Paschal. LBJ also owns impressive 6-5 guard Ray Jackson, who is considered one of the better players in the state and who has already signed with Michigan.

Paschal is a strong team year in and year out, but happens to play in the same district as Fort Worth powers Southwest and Dunbar, two teams who have made many appearances to the Region I tour-

Detmer vows to return

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Ty Detmer, the third straight junior winner of the Heisman Trophy, claimed his award Thursday, saying he'll be back for another season if not for another statue.

"It'll be a different team and a whole new season," the BYU quarterback said. "We're losing quite a few players. We've got a young team next year. I'm going to enjoy it now, while it's here."

Detmer received the award at the Heisman dinner Thursday night.

"This is just an overwhelming night for me and my family," he said in his acceptance speech. "This is the greatest award any individual can receive.

"I grew up in awe of the Heisman Trophy and I'm still in awe of it."

Bearkats gear up for quarterfinals

■ Garden City and Valley Mills may feel like they are looking in a mirror in tonight's Class A quarterfinal.

By Bill Grimes and Joe Wyatt
Staff Writers

That's because Scott's Garden City Bearkats and Allen West's Eagles seem to be similarly-matched teams with explosive offenses and rugged defenses. Fans will see just how similar during the Class A state quarterfinal between the two teams at 8 p.m. tonight in Coleman.

The Garden City-Valley Mills winner will face the Rankin-Munday winner in the state semifinals next week. Rankin and Munday square off at 2 p.m. Saturday in Colorado City.

Scott can't speak highly enough of the Valley Mills offense led by senior quarterback Jason Hicks, who has thrown for almost 2,000 yards.

"They look like they have gobs and gobs of talent," Scott said. "A lot of people say they're so good because of their explosive offense, and others say it's because of their hard-nosed defense."

Area Football Playoffs

Hicks triggers the Eagles' run-and-shoot, no-huddle attack that has enabled Valley Mills to outscore its foes 443-80. The senior has plenty of mates at his disposal to help him shred opposing defenses.

Running back Michael Bohannon needs only 10 yards to reach the 1,000-yard mark, while cousins Steven and Donnie Sadler have posted 605 and 539 receiving yards, respectively.

West said the Eagles aren't strictly a run-and-shoot team.

"We run whatever the defense gives us," West said.

The Eagles might not get much from Garden City's defense, especially since middle linebacker Eric Seidenberger may be able to play after missing the last two games with an injury.

Other Bearkat defensive standouts linebacker Matt Seidenberger, cousin of Eric; free safety Allen Hoelscher, strong safety Jim Bob Scott, and ends Wes Glass and Michael Jones.

Garden City isn't lacking for offensive weapons, most notably junior tailback James Soles, who went over the 2,000-yard mark last week despite only having had playing tailback full-time since mid-season. Going into tonight's game, Soles has 2,066 yards rushing and 25 touchdowns and nine catches for 288 yards and three more TDs.

Usually, the Bearkats leave the passing to sophomore Shae Scott, who is 103-for-165 for 1,793 yards and 19 TDs. Scott, son of the coach and younger brother of Jim Bob, enjoys the services of a trio of receivers, including his brother at tight end.

Hoelscher, who started at quarterback last season, leads the team with 33 catches for 527 yards and six touchdowns. Jim Bob Scott has caught 32 passes for 456 yards and four touchdowns, while wingback Richard Morales has caught 25 passes for 461 yards and 10 TDs.

"I think they have to do the same thing we have to do — defense the whole field," Scott said.

The Bearkats were saddened upon hearing after the Axtell game that Gary Seidenberger, father of Matt and uncle of Eric, was killed in a traffic accident earlier last Friday.

"It was a rough time after the game and a rough weekend," Scott said. "This is a real close-knit community.

"That's where athletics are such a good thing," Scott added. "They help keep your mind off a lot of things."

ROSEMONT, Ill. — The Chicago Cubs put the final touch on baseball's furious winter meetings Thursday, welcoming George Bell to Wrigley Field and ending his temperamental times in Toronto.

Bell became the 18th free agent to sign this week — at a total cost of $110 million — and joined Willie McGee, Vince Coleman and Dave Righetti on the go. He got a three-year deal from the Cubs for $9.8 million, plus the chance to earn a lot more in options and incentives.

A day after the meetings officially ended, some teams were still in town. Baltimore was the busiest, talking trade with San Diego about Bip Roberts and getting closer to signing Dwight Evans.

Already there had been seven trades, including Joe Carter, Tony Fernandez, Fred McGriff and Roberto Alomar in Wednesday's big San Diego-Toronto deal, and Steve Bedrosian, Devon White and Cory Snyder in others. There were five trades at last year's meetings.

Bob Welch and Fernando Valenzuela remain free. Gary Gaetti, Jack Clark, Brett Butler and 12 others are likely to soon be set loose in the collusion settlement. The Major League Baseball Players Association unanimously ratified the agreement Thursday during a meeting at Orlando, Fla.

Bell's signing put him in the same outfield as Andre Dawson; they both were MVPs in 1987 and later became Canadian free agents. The signing also stripped away the last member of one of baseball's best outfields in the 1980s — Bell, Lloyd Moseby and Jesse Barfield with the Blue Jays.

"I built my career in Toronto, but after all those years, I think it's time to go," Bell said. "But I'm going to miss the city of Toronto. It's a beautiful city."

Bell, 31, averaged .286, 25 home runs and 93 RBIs in eight seasons, and was the Blue Jays' all-time leader in homers and RBIs. But for all he did with the bat, he was a below-average fielder and got into several feuds with Toronto management and fans.

The Blue Jays offered only a one-year contract and stipulated that Bell would be a full-time designated hitter, a sore spot in the past. When Toronto traded for Carter and White, it was certain Bell would not return, which is what he thought during the season.

Chicago was on Bell's wish list, and the Cubs were one of six teams to get into the early bidding.

"We wanted to get a run producer, and George Bell is in the top of that class," Cubs general manager Jim Frey said. "Players like George Bell aren't available every day."

Bell dipped to .265 with 21 home runs and 86 RBIs last season. He really slumped in the last two months with a bruised hand and fluid in his eye.

Bell, a three-time All-Star, said he liked the idea of playing left field on Wrigley's grass, rather than on the SkyDome's artificial surface.

"I think it will help a lot," he said. "It can probably add another six or seven years to my career. I might've been able to play only two or three more on turf."

Bell played with Cubs star Ryne Sandberg in Philadelphia's minor-league system from 1978-80. At last summer's All-Star game at Wrigley Field, Bell told Sandberg that he would like to play someday in Chicago.

Bell is assured $12.6 million if he plays all four years with the Cubs. He got a $1.5 million signing bonus and will be paid $1.6 million next season and $3.1 million in each of the following two years.

Bosox woo Welch

Associated Press

ROSEMONT, Ill. — The Boston Red Sox made an offer to free agent pitcher Bob Welch on Thursday that was said to be worth $11 million over four years.

Welch

"It's a question of money," Boston general manager Lou Gorman said. "We put a very big offer down and they'll get back to us."

The White Sox have made an offer of $12 million over four years for the right-hander, $1 million more than Oakland.

"You've got to realize now for sure that's it's in the four-year area, White Sox general manager Ron Schueler said. "It's going to be $3 million-and-up when it starts. We realize $3 million will be the starting point."

Welch won 27 games.

Zorich-nabs Lombardi

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Notre Dame nose tackle Chris Zorich, a finalist for the honor last year, was named the winner Thursday night of the 21st Lombardi Award as the nation's top collegiate lineman.

Zorich beat out Outland Trophy winner Russell Maryland of Miami, and tackles David Rocker of Auburn and Moe Gardner of Illinois.

"Playing nose tackle is like being a fire hydrant in the middle of a dogfight," said Zorich, who will lead the Fighting Irish against No. 1 Colorado in the Orange Bowl Jan. 1.

"He's a fierce competitor, and it doesn't matter if it's practice or a game," said John Palermo, Zorich's former Notre Dame defensive line coach. "He's trying to whip the guy in front of him every time the ball is snapped."

The Lombardi Award is named in honor of Vince Lombardi, former coach of the NFL Green Bay Packers and Washington Redskins. Lombardi died of cancer in 1970.

Maryland, a defensive tackle for the No. 4 ranked Hurricane, won the Outland Wednesday in Los Angeles, then flew to Houston for Thursday night's awards dinner. He'll return to the state to face the No. 3 Texas Longhorns in the Cotton Bowl.

All four 1990 Lombardi finalists were defensive players. Sixteen of the past 20 winners were defenders.

Rockets drop Hornets by six

NBA

Akeem Olajuwon scored 39 points, grabbed 20 rebounds and blocked 6 shots, leading the Houston Rockets to a 116-110 victory over the Charlotte Hornets on Thursday night.

Houston's inside game produced 83 points as Otis Thorpe added 17 points and 10 rebounds and Buck Johnson scored 15 points. Guard Sleepy Floyd added 20 points and helped the Rockets stay in front after Charlotte rallied from a 17-point third-quarter deficit. Floyd was 8-for-8 from the free-throw line in the game's final 81 seconds.

Armon Gilliam, who led the Hornets with 31 points and 21 rebounds, hit a basket to bring Charlotte to within 106-102, but Floyd hit two free throws for a 108-102 lead with 1:09 to play.

Lakers 83, Timbewolves 73

Sam Perkins scored 11 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter, when Los Angeles finally shook off the stubborn Minnesota Timberwolves for a victory, the Lakers' eighth straight win.

Los Angeles, which had its lowest-scoring game since an 83-pointer last December at Chicago, won for the ninth time in 10 games despite Magic Johnson's 6-for-22 shooting. The Lakers shot only 42 percent.

Johnson, guarded all game by 7-3 Randy Breuer, still scored 21 points and became the 40th player in NBA history to reach the 16,000-point plateau. He and Oscar Robertson are the only two players with 16,000 points and 9,000 assists in their careers.

SuperSonics 105, Heat 103

Seattle's Sedale Threatt hit a tie-breaking free throw with 49.7 seconds remaining and Miami's Glen Rice missed the game-tying free throw with three seconds to play as the SuperSonics beat the Heat to snap a six-game losing streak.

Smith resigns with Pirates

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Zane Smith, a left-handed pitcher with a 51-68 career record, decided Thursday night to return to the Pittsburgh Pirates and agreed to four-year contract worth $10.6 million.

Smith, traded to Pittsburgh in August by the Montreal Expos, was 6-2 during the Pirates' strech run and became a free agent after the season. He was 12-9 overall in 1990 with a 2.55 ERA.

"Zane Smith meant a lot to us in the last two months of the 1990 season. To expect him to perform at the same level for four years is unrealistic," said Pirates general manager Larry Doughty. "But we expect him to be a solid part of the organization."

Smith made $660,000 last season and Pittsburgh originally offered a $6 million, three-year deal. But Smith's price soared after left-hander Bud Black agreed to a $10 million, four-year deal with the San Francisco Giants.

"It's a great sign," manager Jim Leyland said of the signing. "It's obvious what he did for us down the stretch. We gave up a lot to get him and he responded. It's a real credit to Larry Doughty and (team president) Carl Barger for getting this done."

The Pirates, who won the National League East but lost the pennant playoff to Cincinnati in six games, had said they would not offer any pitcher a contract longer three years. But the marketplace during the last few weeks forced them to change their minds.

PREPS: Both girls teams play at home

nament here in Midland.

Amarillo Tascosa will kickoff the tournament at 3 p.m. against El Paso Eastwood. Tascosa is the pre-season pick to win District 3-5A, but is off to a losing record thus far this season. Bobby Lesley's Eastwood Troopers were a playoff team last season, but have gained Region I status to Midland three times in the last decade and are the District 2-5A favorite this year with what is described to be one of Lesley's best teams in recent years.

The two local teams will round out first round action tonight with Midland High taking on Lubbock Estacado at 6:30 p.m. and Lee meeting El Paso Bel Air at 8:15 p.m.

Estacado is said to rely heavily on football players and they have now had about three weeks to in the groove under coach J.J. Wood. MHS will be seeking its first win over a Lubbock team this year after losses to Coronado and Monterey.

MHS has lost two of three games since winning the Tall City title, but put 100 points on the boards against Pecos Monday.

Since gaining the Tall City finals, Lee has dropped four games in a row, so neither local team will be heading into the tournament with a full head of steam. But this is the kind of lineup that both MHS coach Jack Stephenson and Lee coach Jon House likes to put their teams up against.

Mike Stevens, Chaparral Center manager and host of the MC tourney, says this event could become a bigger event in years to come.

"I've talked with Jack Stephenson, Jon House and athletic director Jack Tayrien about this, and all seem to feel right now that this tournament might become the replacement of the Tall City tournament," said Stevens. "House and Stephenson have never been afraid of playing against good teams and both would like to try and get the best competition they can find to come here."

Stevens did say that there is no pressure being made to drop the Tall City event.

"In fact, if the school district wants to take over the control of this tournament and keep the Tall City name which has over 20 years of tradition behind it, we wouldn't stand in the way of that," said Stevens. "Both coaches and the athletic director know I'm here and willing to help them any way I can.

"Everyone feels that this week of the season is better for a basketball tournament. The football playoffs are in full swing during the Tall City event on Thanksgiving and really hurts your chance of getting any kind of crowd.

"Of course, this would be the weekend that a Lee-Permian match-up might fall in the football playoffs, but that is getting more and more unlikely with the Big School and Small School brackets they have now."

In other action tonight, the Midland Lee girls will host Denver City at 8 p.m. in the Lee gym while the Midland High girls will host McCamey at 8 p.m.

The Lee girls own a 4-7 mark while MHS' girls are 5-6, heading into those games.

Purdue inks new coach

Associated Press

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — It won't be the run-and-shoot offense of his predecessor, but new Purdue football coach Jim Colletto promises a familiar look to the Boilermakers' offense.

Colletto, the former offensive coordinator at Ohio State, signed a five-year contract to coach Purdue on Thursday and said he planned to junk the run-and-shoot offense that produced a 2-9 record this year and led to the resignation of Fred Akers last week.

The Boilermakers netted only 612 yards rushing this past season, an average of 1.0 per carry and 55.6 per game.

"I think the things we have to do are the same things I've done for a lot of years in coaching; get back to some of the things I believe in, in terms of running the football," said Colletto, the offensive coordinator at Purdue from 1982-84.

"The offense that they're going to see here is going to be very similar to what we did here with (quarterbacks Jim) Everett and (Scott) Campbell. It's not going to be anything new," Colletto said.

Colletto anticipated a busy three weeks in his new job, meeting his players, selecting a staff and launching an active recruiting program.

Tar Heels down Connecticut

Associated Press

Rick Fox and Pete Chilcutt led a second-half surge that helped 10th-ranked North Carolina overcome a big deficit and take a 79-64 victory over 14th-ranked Connecticut on Thursday night.

Top 25

The Tar Heels (4-1) won the final game of the challenge series between the Atlantic Coast Conference and the Big East. But the Big East won six of the eight games between the two conferences; Virginia beat Pitt in the series opener for the ACC's only other win.

Fox scored 18 points before fouling out and suffering an arm injury. George Lynch scored 12 and Chilcutt and Hubert Davis added 11 each for North Carolina. Lynch also had a career-high 14 rebounds.

Tennessee Tech 84
No. 15 S. Mississippi 78

Van Usher scored nine of his 17 points in the second half as Tennessee Tech stunned No. 15 Southern Mississippi.

Tech (3-2) lost an early 21-10 lead in the first half before using a four-minute Southern Mississippi drought from the field late in the second half to expand a 65-62 lead to 73-63 with 4:12 remaining.

Southern Mississippi led 48-45 with 15:34 to play before Tech of the Ohio Valley Conference went on an 11-2 run to lead 56-50 with 14:10 remaining.

Southern Mississippi (2-1) came back with six quick points, tying the game at 56 on two free throws by Darrin Chancellor with 11:38 to play.

No. 11 Pittsburgh 105, Marshall 75

Brian Shorter scored 17 of his season-high 20 points in the second half as No. 11 Pittsburgh wasted most of a 20-point first-half lead before recovering to rout Marshall.

Sean Miller made five 3-point field goals and had 18 points.

NHL expands

Associated Press

PALM BEACH, Fla. — The Tampa Bay Lightning and Ottawa Senators won approval Thursday to join the NHL in 1992-93 even though arenas for the teams are only in the planning stages.

As part of a plan to expand from 21 teams to 28 during the '90s, the league's board of governors decided to venture into Florida for the first time. Former NHL star Phil Esposito helped Tampa beat bids by groups from nearby St. Petersburg and Miami.

"To be a part-owner of this thing is the ultimate," Esposito said. "I've done everything in this game now."

The governors also decided to return an NHL team to Canada's capital for the first time in more than a half-century. The Ottawa Senators were league members from 1917 to 1934.

Bruce Firestone, a real estate executive who led the bid by Ottawa, said he burst into tears upon learning the news.

"I haven't done that since I was a little boy. I was stunned, just overwhelmed," Firestone said.

"It's a very special day. We've worked very hard for over two years to bring the National Hockey League back to Ottawa."

An application from Hamilton, Ontario, was rejected. Two groups from Southern California seeking teams later in the decade also failed to extract an invitation from the league.

In Ottawa, the provincial Ministry of Agriculture recently objected to the proposed site of a 22,000-seat arena. But the hockey group assured NHL owners the matter will be resolved.

Ottawa plans to play its first season at a 10,000-seat downtown civic center before moving into the new arena.

FPC stuns Chaps

Staff Report

BORGER — The Midland College Chaparrals received a major wound in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference basketball race here Thursday night with an 82-75 loss to Frank Phillips College.

MC fell to 1-1 in the young conference race while the surprising Plainsmen of coach Kelly Green climbed to 2-1.

The Chaps led much of the way, but began to fall back late in the second half. With 3:50 left in the game, Midland College lost post Carroll Boudreaux to fouls and down by seven points. MC just couldn't make up the difference down the stretch, although they crept to within three points late in the game.

Boudreaux scored 18 points in the game and Charles Sanders also hit for 18 points, but those were the only MC players to grace double figures.

FPC's Robert Torrence lit up the cords for 28 points before fouling out with 1:50 left in the game. Magno Cuto scored 18 points.

Army-Navy still has national interest

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Navy football coach George Chaump says the emotion in Saturday's 91st annual Army-Navy game is no greater than the Lycoming-Allegheny Division III championship the same day.

"Players who win the national championship on a Division III team enjoy it as much emotionally as players who win the Division I national championship," Chaump said this week.

"The emotional factor in a game is about the same whether it's the Army-Navy game or the Lycoming-Allegheny game. Those players have the same emotional level in that game as we do in ours. There's a common denominator there."

Chaump, of course, wasn't trying to lessen the image of what for years has been a great spectacle. It would be fair to say the pregame march of the corps of Cadets and brigade of Midshipmen, the singing, the cheering, the mule and the goat, have created a few goose bumps over the years.

It's certainly not the caliber of football expected to draw a sellout crowd of 65,000, and the eyes and ears of U.S. servicemen around the world via television (CBS) and radio (Mutual).

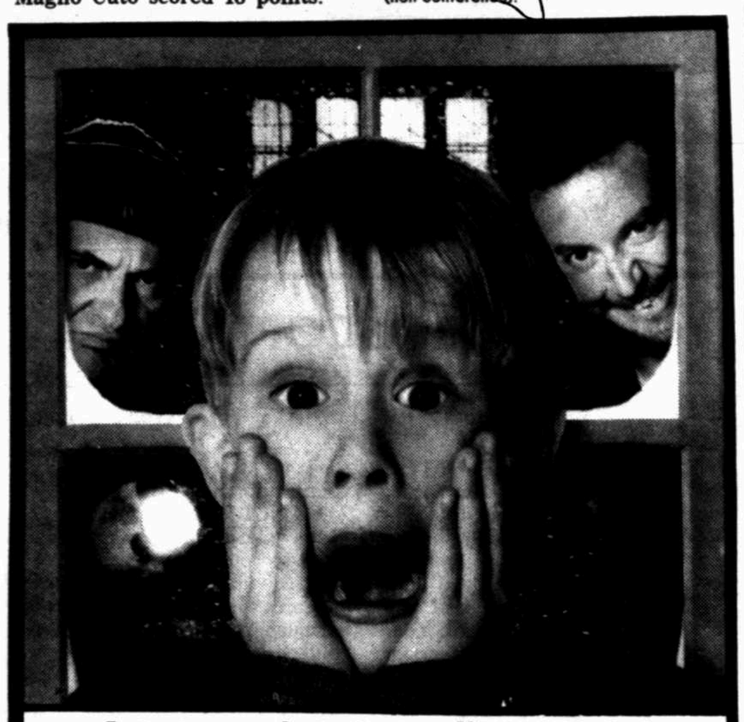

"But it's a great game and I'm proud to be a part of it," Chaump said.

"I don't think any rivalry parallels Army-Navy because of the national interest," he added.

It's been a long time since Army or Navy have had a national impact. Not since Navy finished second in 1963 has one of the service academies contended for the national title.

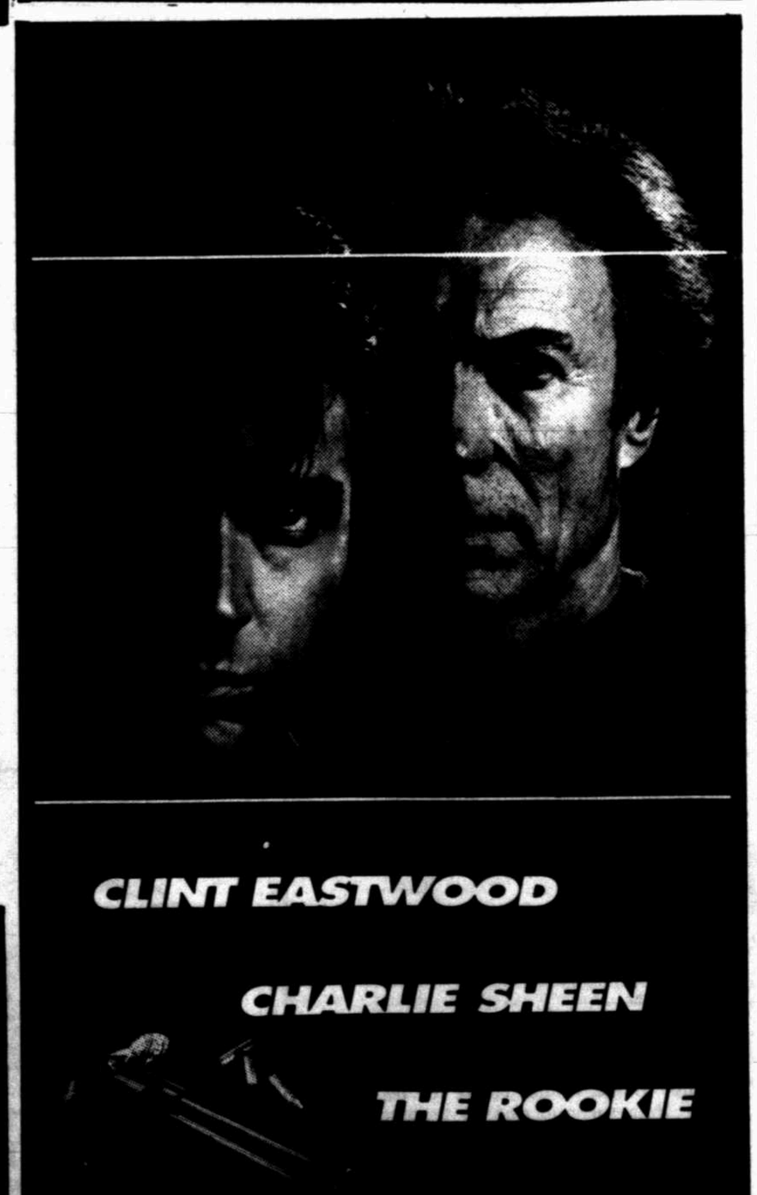

Sometimes it's hard to remember that in the 1940s, '50s and '60s, Army and Navy were Top 10 teams. Army was No. 1 in 1944 and 1945. The Cadets were second in '46, sixth in '48, fourth in '49 and second in '50. They were in the Top 10 twice more in the '50s.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Substantial business and financial gains are possible in the coming months. Be careful not to drop the ball at work. Plan ahead and keep your associates informed of any changes you intend to make. Your reputation is your most important asset. Do not let others get the mistaken impression that you are unreliable. A romantic relationship next fall will add some spice and adventure to your life. Treasure it.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Ellen Burstyn, author Rosemary Rogers, catcher Johnny Bench, basketball's Larry Bird.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be more attentive to family members' wishes now. Be willing to reverse direction to please your mate. Greater self-discipline is necessary at work. Capitalize on your creative talents.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An encounter with a special person will make your heart beat faster! Be open to new ideas. A change of lifestyle could prove very beneficial. Loved one is interested in your suggestions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Choose carefully when faced with several options. Do not jump at the first offer. Invite someone special to lunch. Sharing a secret with this person could have a profound effect on your happiness.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Focus your attention on paperwork today so you will be prepared for a busy Monday morning. Financial pressures will subside. Do not expect too much from other people. Rely on yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Start afresh with a member of the opposite sex. A financial opportunity sounds too good to be true. Check it out thoroughly before investing. Do not try to mix business with pleasure.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your ability to think in the abstract and plot alternative courses of action are tremendous assets today. Honesty will pay off handsomely in romance. You move nearer to making a commitment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Step lively today and you will beat out the competition! All of your relationships are on an upward swing. Travel is indicated. Make your reservations well in advance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A message received from afar needs clarification. Read between the lines. Stick to tried-and-true methods where your work is concerned; influential people prefer the conventional approach.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A breakdown in communication may cause delays. Social contacts are important to business success. Broaden your horizons. You begin to feel in a holiday mood.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The spotlight is on home and property. Postpone a journey. Heavier domestic responsibilities call for an adjustment. Seek the cooperation of your mate. Be aware of a tendency toward self-deception.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Loyalty pays big dividends now. Seize an opportunity to reward someone who has helped you in the past. You gain new prestige by enlarging your social circle.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A personal energy crisis may become apparent. Try to postpone signing contracts until another day. A friend would like to help you reach your goals. Take advantage of this person's financial tips.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are freedom-loving, restless and highly independent. Although they make excellent grades in school, these youngsters prefer to learn by doing. Highly ambitious, these Sagittarians will work hard to achieve the goals they set for themselves.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♠

Victory over the green baize, like in a battle, often goes to the one who "gets there fustest with the mostest." Given enough time, East-West will be able to take three club tricks and two hearts, so South, declarer at three no trump, must do everything possible to take nine tricks first.

The auction was routine. With a good five-card spade suit, North's hand was too strong to open one no trump. When South could do no more than respond one no trump, North showed a powerful balanced hand by jumping to game in that strain.

West led a club, taken perforce in dummy. There were five fast tricks available, and it looked as if the spade suit would certainly produce four more. So at trick two declarer woodenly called for the king of spades from dummy, with unfortunate results.

West won the ace and forced out the remaining club stopper. When declarer tried to run the table's spades, it turned out that the last spade was a loser. Declarer hoped for four diamond tricks, but since West had taken care to hold on to all the minor-suit cards, declarer could come to no more than eight tricks.

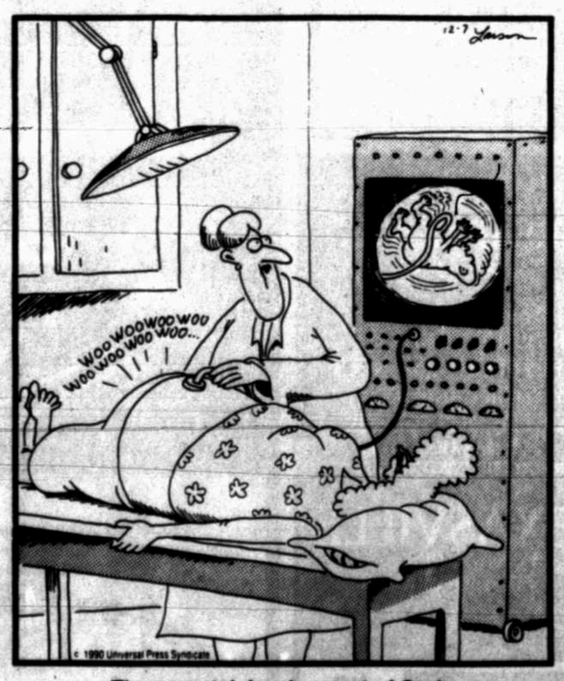

Even apparently laydown contracts should be handled with tender loving care. Declarer could have given himself a little extra chance at absolutely no cost.

At trick two, declarer should have come to hand with a diamond to lead a low spade toward dummy. As the cards lie, that fetches the ace from West, and declarer has the four spade tricks needed for the contract.

What if it's East, not West, who holds the singleton ace? You are not going to finesse the spade seven, so this contract is destined to go the way of all flesh.

Madonna

The judge said Madonna had violated an agreement with neighbor Donald Robinson requiring her to keep her shrubbery trimmed so it wouldn't interfere with his view.

The judge rejected Robinson's claim of $1 million damages for the loss of his view, but she ordered Madonna to pay Robinson's attorney fees.

Liz Rosenberg, publicist for the singer, was out of the office Thursday and couldn't be reached, a receptionist said. Madonna's lawyer, Meghan Serwin, and Robinson's attorney, Robert Rigdon, were not in their offices Thursday for comment.

Madonna said in a deposition she bought the house above the Sunset Strip because of its spectacular view and privacy. But after she moved in, she said she noticed gardeners peering through her hedges.

Disco ruled there was insufficient evidence to support Madonna's cross-claim against Robinson that said he had harmed her by infringing on her privacy.

SEVIERVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Dolly Parton's younger sister has filed a worker's compensation lawsuit against the theme park the entertainer owns.

In the lawsuit filed this week in Sevier County Chancery Court, Freida Parton says she sustained the injury on June 10, 1989, and underwent back surgery.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Beach Boys' reclusive founder Brian Wilson made a private concert appearance before a group that included political cartoonist Garry Trudeau as the two joined in an AIDS fundraising effort.

Looking uncomfortable in a dark suit and tie, a nervous Wilson played piano and sang Wednesday at the private reception. A few dozen patrons paid at least $125 each for the 15-minute performance.

"I enjoyed it," Wilson said after the performance. "I had to close my eyes. That's the only way I can really feel my music, closing my eyes."

Wilson had said before the show that he was "scared to death."

Among other tunes, Wilson played selections from the Beach Boys' 1966 "Pet Sounds" album, which recently came out on compact disc. Andy Lippincott, a character in "Doonesbury" who died from AIDS, had looked forward to the disc's release.

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The government plans to sell the luxury yacht that shipping tycoon Aristotle Onassis donated to it in his will, a magazine reported Thursday.

The 325-foot yacht once hosted royalty, heads of state and leading jet-set personalities. Onassis also used it as the base of his shipping operations.

Opera singer Maria Callas, once romantically involved with Onassis, had her own suite on the yacht. And Jacqueline Kennedy, who later married Onassis, was another frequent guest.

Onassis died in 1975. He stipulated in his will that if his daughter Christina did not want the yacht — named after her — it should go to the Greek government. Christina Onassis died in 1988.

The former Canadian submarine chaser was bought by Onassis in the 1950s and was converted into a luxurious palace, complete with priceless works of art and faucets of gold.

LONDON (AP) — Dame Joan Sutherland is coming out of retirement after just two months, but for only one performance: a New Year's Eve farewell to Covent Garden, the Royal Opera House said Thursday.

Pavarotti

Sutherland, the coloratura soprano with amazing voice range, will be joined by Italian tenor Luciano Pavarotti and U.S. mezzo-soprano Marilyn Horne.

"Although Dame Joan has retired, she wants to make this one — and only one — exception, to come to London to say goodbye to Covent Garden where she began her opera career in 1952," said Kathleen Wilkinson, the Royal Opera spokeswoman.

NYMEX sets crude trading limits

■ The New York Mercantile Exchange has set swing limits to prevent panic buying and selling of crude oil in the event of a crisis.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

A plan to set a floor and ceiling on crude oil futures trading was announced today by the New York Merc cantile Exchange, but a local industry official says it will have little impact on halting day to day volatility of the crude oil market.

Under the conditions of the plan announced at a press conference today, NYMEX would halt trading within two minutes if the price declined or increased by $7.50 cents.

"For the first time, the exchange will be imposing trade cessations as circuit-breakers," President R. Patrick Thompson said. The proposed changes would allow crude oil futures to rise or fall by up to $15 per barrel each day, far more than they have ever moved.

"With this large swing tolerance. The plan will affect oil prices only in a crisis situation," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, "and will not have much impact on the daily oil trading. We can expect volatility to continue."

Exchange officials added that they were not trying to predict movements that big, but rather setting up rules that will keep trading orderly through a crisis.

The exchange also offers futures contracts for two refined petroleum products, unleaded gasoline and home heating oil, that will be affected.

The possibility that war or peace in the Persian Gulf could lead to huge movements in oil prices has prompted some calls for tighter controls on the exchange.

While exchange officials say the proposed rules changes, which they expect to be approved by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission next week, were "self-imposed." The exchange has nonetheless discussed the rule changes with the CFTC ahead of time.

"We were not goaded into this by any federal agency," Chairman Z. Lou Guttman said. "We felt that this was a very responsible and necessary precautionary measure."

However, Spannaus said he found it hard to believe that NYMEX had initiat-

Prices slip

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices fell for a second straight session Thursday to levels not seen for months, with the plunge based on Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's promise to free all hostages.

West Texas Intermediate dropped 89 cents to $26.40 per barrel at the New York Mercantile Exchange on contracts for delivery in January. Oil for next-month delivery had not been that cheap on the exchange since late August.

Unleaded gasoline futures fell 2.24 cents to 66.60 cents a gallon for January delivery.

Oil had fallen even farther in early trading Thursday, but it regained some ground during the afternoon. Traders were responding in part to continued harsh rhetoric from U.S. officials, but some began buying oil again when they decided crude must have hit bottom, at least for the time being.

Natural gas, which is not directly affected by the turmoil in the Middle East, also dropped Thursday. It closed down 5.1 cents at $2.351 per 1,000 cubic feet on contracts for January delivery.

Busy market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned in a mixed showing Thursday in the heaviest trading in more than a year as investors took a wary view of Middle East peace prospects.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up about 30 points in the early going, was down 7.92 at 2,602.48 by the close.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar fell on world currency markets Thursday as the prospects for war dimmed following Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's offer to release Western hostages.

Gold prices also fell. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold settled at $371.70 a troy ounce, off $2.50 from Wednesday.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.9390 from $1.9225 late Wednesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday's rates, included: 1.4885 German marks, down from 1.4993; 1.2710 Swiss francs, down from 1.2795; 5.0510 French francs, down from 5.0770; 1,122.25 Italian lire, down from 1,127.68, and 1.1621 Canadian dollars, down form 1.1630.

Gold fell in London to a late bid price of $370.25 a troy ounce, from $372.65 bid late Wednesday.

Silver prices also declined. On New York's Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $4.121 a troy ounce, down from $4.148 on Wednesday.

Largest retailers say Christmas sales down

Associated Press

Predictions of a dismal Christmas shopping season are so far proving correct as some of the nation's biggest retailers said today their sales fell in November from levels of a year earlier.

Consumers, shaken by the faltering economy and the uncertain outlook in the Middle East, clamped down on holiday spending even during the Thanksgiving weekend, traditionally one of the most popular shopping periods in the year.

"We're seeing the consumer retrenching, worrying about higher gasoline prices, higher inflation, lower employment," said Walter Loeb, a retail analyst and consultant.

Jeffrey Feiner, an analyst with Merrill Lynch & Co., called November sales "extremely disappointing and even below our generally conservative expectations."

Retailers expect to do most of their business in the last 10 days before Christmas, but analysts believe even a last-minute surge will not be enough to offset the industry's weak performance since Thanksgiving.

"Unless a very quick solution to the Mideast were to occur, consumer confidence will remain extremely weak," Feiner said.

Department stores and general merchandise retailers like Sears, Roebuck and Co. bore the brunt of November's dismal results.

Sears, the nation's largest retailer, said sales at stores open at least a year fell 2.4 percent, while the company's overall sales dropped 1.6 percent.

Analysts believe sales from stores open at least a year — also known as same-store or comparable store sales — provide a more accurate assessment of a retailer's performance than overall sales do. New stores tend to have particularly strong sales that can skew a retailer's results.

J.C. Penney Co. Inc. said same-store sales dropped 4.6 percent, while overall sales slipped 3.1 percent.

May Department Stores Co. suffered a 5 percent drop in same-store sales, and its overall sales fell 0.2 percent.

Discount retailers fared somewhat better, indicating that many consumers are buying cheaper gifts this year.

But even Wal-Mart Stores Inc., which consistently outperforms the rest of the industry, saw sales lag. Wal-Mart reported its same-store sales were up 7 percent, below the discount retailer's usual double-digit increase, while overall sales were up 22 percent.

OPEC oil production declines

LONDON (AP) — OPEC's crude oil production was down 1.2 percent in November from levels before Iraq invaded Kuwait, the International Energy Agency reported Wednesday.

The 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries produced 22.9 million barrels a day in November, despite the U.N. embargo against oil produced by Iraq and Kuwait, both OPEC members, the agency said in a report released in London.

The November figure was 300,000 barrels per day less than in July, just before the Iraqi invasion, and up 600,000 barrels a day from October, the report said.

The IEA said that among OPEC producers, Saudi Arabia's output was 7.9 millions of barrels a day, an increase of about 300,000 barrels a day over October.

Iran boosted production to 3.3 million barrels a day, up 400,000 barrels a day from October, the report said.

The Paris-based organization said increases in production came from greater output in heavier, high-sulphur grades.

World oil supplies outside countries with centrally planned economies totaled 53.8 million barrels a day in November, up from the revised October total of 53.2 million barrels a day, the IEA said.

That was the second monthly rise since levels were depressed in August and September, following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2.

Production in Western countries that are members of the 24-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development rose slightly to 16.1 million barrels a day, mostly from increases in North Sea and Australian output. Oil producers within the OECD include the United States, Britain and Norway.

Soviet oil exports suffered a larger-than-expected seasonal drop. After averaging about 1.7 million barrels a day during the first nine months of the year, Soviet crude exports to the OECD countries have dropped to about 1.4 million barrels a day since September, the agency reported.

The IEA said the normal seasonal drop of Soviet exports to the OECD in the fourth quarter of the year to meet rising winter domestic demand was this year reinforced by falling output and a drop in deliveries to eastern Europe, caught in a hard currency crunch.

Outside the OECD, the IEA expects oil consumption to average 15.3 million barrels a day, up from 1989's level of 14.7 million barrels a day.

Strategic oil sales goes smooth

■ A relatively small sale of oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve went smoothly, but uncovered problems that might hamper larger sales.

N.Y. Times News Service

The last deliveries of oil sold from the nation's Strategic Petroleum Reserve were made Sunday, according to the Energy Department.

The relatively small sale went fairly smoothly, but it did uncover some problems that might hamper bigger efforts to tap the reserve.

The financial picture was mixed; the government may have turned a profit, but it depends on the accounting method used.

President Bush announced the sale on Sept. 26 in an unsuccessful effort to scare speculators and drive down the price of oil. The sale involved 4.125 million barrels, delivered over several weeks.

The White House described the sale as a test, and it was a modest exercise for a reserve system that is supposed to be able to deliver as much as 3.5 million barrels a day in a full-scale emergency.

Establishing the buyers' credit was one source of potential delays. government officials said the Energy Department required bidders to submit letters of credit from their banks, to assure that the buyers could pay for the oil. But without a standard form, each letter had to be analyzed carefully by government lawyers.

Another possible problem involved the federal law that requires the use of U.S.-flag ships when oil is shipped from the reserve by tanker. Oil companies try to avoid American ships, because they are more expensive and sometimes are not available.

Of the 26 deliveries in the test, 21 were made by pipeline and five by barge, but none by tanker. In a large sale, tankers would be needed.

There also appeared to be something of a mismatch between what was offered for sale and what the oil companies wanted to buy. The government accepted bids on all 2.2 million barrels of low-sulfur oil that were offered. But with high-sulfur oil, only 1.925 million of the 2.8 million barrels offered were sold because some bids were judged to be less than 90 percent of fair market value.

The average sale price was $31.80 a barrel. Whether that was good for the taxpayers depends on which of the 585 million barrels in inventory were being sold.

The last oil bought, just before the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait by Iraq, cost about $16 a barrel.

The first barrels bought, in the late 1970s, were even cheaper, about $14.45 each. But the government has paid 12

Make sure credit card cancellation 'takes'

By Jane Bryant Quinn

NEW YORK–Are you sweeping credit cards out of your wallet? Canceling those that you don't use, in order to save money and lend an air of frugality to your credit report?

Quinn

Make sure that the cancellation "takes." Even though you wrote to the creditor, canceled the account, sent back the cut-up card and got an acknowledgment, the account may still appear "open" on your credit report.

An unhappy reader in Seabrook, Texas, writes that he was just turned down for credit, because of all the cards that were listed on his credit report. But two of those cards had been canceled years ago. "Now I find out that they still appear in an active status on my credit history" he says. "How can I make my canceled cards disappear from the credit bureau files?"

First off, let me say, "Me, too." I've also found canceled cards carried on my credit history as if they were open. Many card issuers are sloppy about the way they transmit data.

To be sure that your canceled accounts have indeed been closed, get a copy of your credit report. It's free if you were turned down for credit based on information it contained. Otherwise, you'll pay anywhere from $3 to $15 (plus state tax), depending on the bureau and the state you live in.

There are three major credit bureaus–TRW, Equifax Credit Information Services and Trans Union–all of which may have your name. Write to their local branches, listed in the Yellow Pages under "Credit Bureaus." (Equifax might also be listed as CBI, part of its former name). If you don't see a local branch, write to their headquarters: (1) TRW, National Consumer Assistance Center, 12606 Greenville Avenue, Dallas, Texas 75243 (2) Equifax, 1600 Peachtree St. N.W., P.O. Box 4081, Atlanta, Ga. 30302. (3) Trans Union has no central office.

TRW marks a closed account "paid satisfactory." Equifax marks it "account closed." Trans Union marks it "closed."

If your credit report show a closed account as open, follow the bureaus' procedures for reporting an error. They have to verify your claim with the creditor within a reasonable period of time, generally 30 days, and inform you of the results. If the creditor agrees that you did, indeed, close the account, it will be so listed. If the creditor itself is still carrying your account as open, you will have to cancel all over again.

But you can't, as the Texas reader hopes, make canceled accounts disappear from your credit-bureau file. They stay on your history to show how promptly you paid that particular account.

Closed accounts normally stay on your record for up to seven years. TRW's Susan Murdy says that TRW now keeps them for ten years if the information is positive. "Our surveys showed that consumers wanted the record displayed," she said. Negative reports normally wash out after seven years–except for bankruptcies, which last ten years.

Here are two situations where it's especially important that you check your credit report to be sure that closed accounts have been properly noted:

1. You are applying for an important loan, like a mortgage. An inaccurate credit history might keep you from getting it. If your spouse is cosigning, get your spouse's history, too. Some bureaus will send you your spouse's record on request; others require his or her express consent.

There is no such thing as a joint credit report. You have to request the reports filed under each of your names. The spouse's record goes to the address shown on the credit file, so you can't spy on a spouse who is living somewhere else.

2. You are separating from your spouse, and want his or her new transactions off your personal credit record. Write to all your creditors, closing joint years of interest on the money it borrowed to buy that oil. Assuming an average interest rate of 9 percent, the price of those barrels rises above $40. With maintenance expenses, the total would be about $46 a barrel.

SALE: Profit depends on accounting system

The cost basis could be even higher if the oil is assumed to be the barrels bought for more than $36 in the early 1980s.

John W. Bartholomew, director of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, does not any use any of those accounting systems; the law that established the reserve, he noted, states that the money from sales is to be used to buy replacement crude.

On a replacement-cost basis, the sale was probably profitable, since analysts expect oil to drop to the low $20s, if not lower, when the gulf crisis ends.

Bartholomew added, however, that the reserve was not regarded as a vehicle for making money through speculation.

In a telephone interview, he said: "For the most part we avoid getting into any kind of speculative nature in our purchasing approach, because it's a double-edged sword. In the oil industry, if you're right 51 percent of the time and wrong 49 percent, you make a profit. But in government, if you're wrong 49 percent of the time, you're lousy, and you're not doing a good job."

Government: Milken must serve three years

NEW YORK (AP) — The government said Michael Milken's admitted crimes involved more than $4.7 million in fraud, an amount requiring more than three years in prison before parole.

The defense disputed the calculations, placing the total at a maximum of $693,000, which would make the former Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. junk bond financier eligible for parole after two years imprisonment.

NYMEX: Sets trade limits

ed the plan internally without influence from Congress or the Administration. "Congress and the administration have been putting the heat on in recent weeks, because massive paper barrel trading has created unrealistic oil prices."

Spannaus said the decision to install circuit breakers in crude oil trading was a step in the right direction, but it did not go far enough. "It would be better if the Exchange would require 50 percent margins for trading instead of the current 15 percent. That would give investors a greater financial stake in a transaction and eliminate some of the volatility."

Under the new rules, if oil prices swing $7.50 in either direction during a single trading session and stay at that level for five minutes, oil brokers will be told that trading will be halted in two minutes. After the market is stopped for an hour, trading will resume, with the swing in prices limited to $15 for the spot month and the month after that.

According to press reports, if futures for unleaded gasoline and home heating oil move 20 cents a gallon, their trading would be stopped and then resumed with a 40-cent-a-gallon limit on moves for the rest of the session.

Prices have never swung as wildly as the new limits would allow them to swing, and exchange officials emphasized they are not trying to predict the size of the swings that would be possible during a sudden oil emergency.

The exchange came up with the price limits by figuring out what kind of swings the market could withstand while keeping trading orderly and fair, the officials said.

Exchange officials said the hour's break in trading would give futures players time to take a closer look at world events that are pushing the price of crude.

Mesa sells properties to Seagull Energy

DALLAS (AP) — Mesa Limited Partnership, headed by T. Boone Pickens, has agreed to sell property with about 13 percent of its proven reserves to Seagull Energy Corp. of Houston in a deal valued at nearly $400 million.

The sale will allow Mesa to reduce its debt by 30 percent, from $1.3 billion to $1 billion, spokesman Jay Rosser said Thursday.

The properties are in Oklahoma, the Texas Panhandle, North Dakota and Wyoming.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Keep mutual fund statements three years

By Bill Doyle

Q. How long should I keep the monthly statements from the mutual fund in which I am investing?

Doyle

A. Hang onto the monthly statements until you receive the annual statement summarizing all your fund transactions for the year. At that point, you can chuck out the monthly statement.

Each January, you also receive a Form 1099-DIV, showing the taxable dividends and capital gains distributions on your fund account in the previous year. If you redeemed any fund shares during the year, you will also get a Form 1099-B, listing the date and amount of each redemption, which is counted as a sale for tax purposes.

The Internal Revenue Service gets copies of all 1099s, so make sure you report those numbers on your income tax returns.

Then, keep your annual statements and 1099s for at least three years. That's generally how long the IRS is allowed to audit your return. The time span becomes six years if you are charged with underreporting your gross income by 25 percent or more.

For most folks, three years will do.

But make sure you file away the annual statements showing the "basis" — cost for tax purposes of your mutual fund shares. You'll need those statements to correctly report your profit or loss when and if you sell some shares.

My blue-eyed finance officer and I have annual statements going back many, many years for our mutual fund accounts. Each is in an separate envelope. Cumulatively, they don't take up much file space.

Q. I heard on television that a big income mutual fund is in trouble because of its holdings of junk bonds. My wife and I invested in that fund about five years ago. It paid good dividends until about a year ago, when the dividends were reduced?

Will we be wiped out completely?

A. That's more than unlikely. Even in a worst case scenario, you are certain to come out with something, albeit a huge loss.

Yours is a familiar story — one spelled out over and over again in this column during recent years. I have constantly warned readers to get out of junk bond funds — those holding bonds rated below investment grade.

Some pundits claim the junk bond market has hit bottom and is about to rebound. I wouldn't bet on that. Hardly a week goes by without some unhappy and often scandalous revelation about junk bonds and the mutual fund that bought them.

My advice concerning junk bonds and junk bond funds remains unchanged: Get out before things get even worse.

Q. My husband and I, who are just 50, invested $40,000 from a rollover individual retirement account in two mutual funds — one holding stocks and the other holding bonds.

The broker through whom we made the purchases advised us to just forget the money and not even watch the funds' share prices in the newspaper. But after a year and a half, my husband got nervous. We got out of the stock fund and into an annuity assuring us of 10 percent.

Is there any sense staying with the bond fund, without having the stock fund as a hedge? Supposedly, they work against each other.

A. When you had both type of funds, you had a balanced investment portfolio. The idea is that when stocks go down, bonds are supposed to go up, and vice versa. But things don't always work out that way.

By redeeming the stock fund shares and putting that money in an annuity, your total investment is no longer balanced and is very conservative. That's fine, assuming you do not want to take on risks in hopes of larger financial rewards. That's the story with most people.

As for that annuity, find out how long the 10 percent interest accrual is assured. It's doubtful the insurance company that issued the annuity promised that high a rate for many years into the future.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed some spotty gains in heavy trading today, responding to hopes for an orderly resolution of the impasse in the Middle East.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 20 points in the early going, fell back to 2,610.40, unchanged from Wednesday's close, by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 945 up, 567 down and 469 unchanged.

The market's yearend rally picked up fresh momentum Wednesday after word came from the State Department that Iraq had agreed to hold talks with President Bush on the crisis in the Persian Gulf.

Today, traders arriving at work were greeted by news that Saddam Hussein, Iraq's president, had urged his parliament to permit all foreign hostages stranded by the invasion of Kuwait last summer to leave.

Those developments drove oil prices lower, and interest rates fell in the credit markets.

But after an initial burst of enthusiasm, investors seemed to sit back to await more concrete evidence that more peaceful times lay ahead.

NCR, which is opposing a $90-a-share takeover bid by American Telephone & Telegraph, rose 5⅜ to 92. AT&T shares slipped ⅛ to 30.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .17 to 180.28. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.56 at 306.97.

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

Texas hostages call wives with news

DALLAS (AP) — The families of Texans held hostage in Iraq were greeted early Thursday with the dramatic news that President Saddam Hussein had called for the release of all foreigners.

"He called me about 7:15 this morning, and said that they had seen it on television that he was ...gonna be released," she said. "But they had not been told personally yet. As soon as he was told he would try to call me back and tell me.

"He said, 'I'm ready to come home.' "

Mrs. Walterscheid said her husband, a Santa Fe Drilling Co. employee, was "really tired and he just wanted to come home and get back to work."

"And I said I thought maybe we'd go on a honeymoon or something, and he just kind of laughed," she said. "But he's happy, he's ready to come home."

Sarrah Amos of Harmony in northeast Texas said she had talked to her husband, Charles, 59, early Thursday and could "hear him grinning all over."

"I talked to Charles at 6:30 this morning, and he had heard it," she said. "He was excited, but he seemed to be very hopeful that there would be no delay."

Mrs. Amos said her husband, a Santa Fe Drilling Co. employee taken hostage when Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, saw the announcement on television. He then called her, but they only were able to talk for a couple of minutes.

Lynda Parker of Vidor, whose husband Bobby, is among the captives, said the apparent good news was doubly welcome because their soldier son also is in the Middle East.

"All our prayers are being answered," she said. "Now we have one more prayer to be answered. We have a son over there, too."

Eric Parker, 25, is in Saudi Arabia with the Army's 475th Quartermaster Group, out of Houston.

"His C.O. promised that if his father was released he could home," Mrs. Parker said. "I think I'm gonna hold them to it."

Saddam's announcement did not say when the captives would be freed. It followed the Iraqi leader's previous offer to release all hostages over a three-month period beginning Christmas Day, "if nothing mars the atmosphere of peace."

Mrs. Parker said she will cancel her Dec. 19 trip with another group of Americans bound for Baghdad to see her husband, a Kuwait Oil Co. employee.

Meanwhile, the grandmother of a Southern Methodist University student who traveled to Baghdad this week to see her hostage father reacted with caution.

"The news is very welcome, but we're not throwing a celebration," said Margaret Williams, whose son and daughter-in-law, Stewart Williams and Charlotte Courte, are among "human shields" in Baghdad.

Mrs. Williams' granddaughter, Jennifer Williams of Dallas, was among a group of about 20 Americans that — against State Department advice — traveled to Baghdad this week to seek their relatives' release.

"You can't give up hope — there's always hope," Mrs. Williams said from her home in Germantown, Tenn. "But this could well be just another one of (Saddam's) cat-and-mouse games."

Patricia Hale of Spring, whose son, Kevin, 17, also went to Baghdad this week with other Americans, said she was delighted with news.

She said her son hoped to meet with her husband, Ed, a drilling supervisor for OGE Drilling Co. Inc. Thursday.

"I'm delighted of course," Mrs. Hale said. "He was going to be going into Baghdad to meet with my son."

Aspermont Mayor P.C. Carr and his wife, Edyth, expressed optimism that their son, Gary Carr, may be home for Christmas.

"I just believe that he's (Saddam) going to let them loose ... and that's our hope," said Mrs. Carr.

She and her husband are elated at the prospect of having their son released, Mrs. Carr said. Carr's wife, Willie, also was among those who traveled to Iraq this week to see her husband.

Leaders welcome announcement, say Saddam must withdraw from Kuwait

LONDON (AP) — Western governments welcomed Saddam Hussein's announcement on Thursday that he is freeing all hostages, but said Iraq must still quit Kuwait.

President Bush said in Santiago, Chile, that Saddam's announcement "will not change my thinking on his need to comply 100 percent, without condition, to the U.N. resolutions" calling for withdrawal.

British Prime Minister John Major echoed the demand. "Saddam Hussein still has to withdraw totally and unconditionally from Kuwait and the legitimate government must be restored," he said in London.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said in New York it was very good news, if confirmed, "but I always need the proper official information about it."

French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said Saddam's decision was "going in the right direction. It's a good sign. Now we have to wait for this decision to be executed."

A spontaneous celebration was held at the Al-Mansour Melia Hotel in downtown Baghdad, where several hostages were brought from strategic sites to meet with visiting family members.

"We did it at last and now we can go home for Christmas," said Susan Dring, who traveled to Baghdad last week to try to win her husband's freedom.

Michael Dring stood behind her, celebrating with a can of imported beer.

"I'm over the moon. It's what we've prayed and prayed for," said Sue Dorrington, whose British husband is being held in Baghdad.

"I have been in tears all morning since I heard the news. I just hope it is true," said Linda Grant, part of a group of 30 women related to British Airways employees who planned to go to Baghdad this weekend.

Relatives of Americans held in Iraq expressed delight.

"There were times I couldn't eat, I couldn't sleep," said Doris Whatley of Shreveport, La. "All of a sudden I am a changed person ... because my husband is coming home."

Italy's foreign minister, Gianni De Michelis, said the announcement caused "deep satisfaction for the Italian government and for me personally." He said he hoped it was a first step toward full compliance with U.N. resolutions demanding Iraq's unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait.

Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu of Japan said the crisis should be resolved fairly and peacefully, based on complete implementation of the U.N. resolutions. "I hope that this measure by Iraq is the first step toward achieving that goal."

Irish Foreign Affairs Minister Gerry Collins said in Dublin that he was very pleased by the report, but "we are somewhat cautious and will be so until such time as the news is confirmed."

Britain's Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said the embassy in Baghdad was seeking details on how the release would be organized.

"If President Saddam Hussein does not comply in full with the Security Council resolutions, then he will be forced to do so. If he does comply, then he will not be attacked," Hurd said in the House of Commons.

Hurd said it was not known whether Saddam's announcement applied to 440 Britons known to be in hiding in Kuwait, which Iraq invaded Aug. 2.

There are nearly 1,200 Britons held in Iraq and Kuwait, and about 250 Irish citizens.

Swiss Foreign Minister Andrea Reichlin said the government was reacting cautiously to the news. Switzerland has seven citizens detained in Iraq.

At the London headquarters of the Gulf Support Group, which aids relatives of hostages, spokesman Andy Charles said the families were "cautiously optimistic and cautiously delighted, but we've had a lot of similar announcements in the past which have not borne fruit."

Perot criticizes U.S.' role in gulf

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Dallas businessman H. Ross Perot is sharply criticizing the Bush administration's handling of the Middle East crisis and urging Congress to intervene before the nation goes to war.

Perot

In an impassioned speech Thursday at the National Press Club, the Texas billionaire portrayed the standoff with Iraq as having the potential for another Vietnam — a drawn-out, divisive war. He called for a grass-roots campaign to demand a vote in Congress over the possibility of war.

"Only Congress can declare war and commit troops to death on the battlefield. That's Congress' job," he said. "In a country like ours, can you even conceive that one man can put 450,000 lives at risk?"

Perot questioned the motives behind the U.S. troop deployment in Saudi Arabia and criticized Secretary of State James Baker III. Perot said his fellow Texan "missed the lesson of Vietnam" and encouraged Iraq's invasion of Kuwait by mishandling U.S. policy in the region.

In testimony before Congress this week, Baker said the lesson from Southeast Asia is that the United States should not go to war unless it is prepared to do what it takes to win.

But Perot contended that the real lesson of Vietnam is that the United States cannot win a war without total commitment from the American public.

"The lesson of Vietnam is, first commit the nation; then commit the troops," Perot said. "I don't want people spitting on Medal of Honor winners when they come home."

Perot said Baker's attempts at friendlier relations with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to believe he could invade Kuwait without repercussions. Perot also faulted the Bush administration for forging alliances with Syrian President Hafez Assad as part of the effort to oust Saddam.

"Assad blew up our 250 Marines in Lebanon and he blew up Pan Am 103. I can't imagine anybody from our country ever wanting to be in a room with him except for one thing," he said.

Perot, whose experience in the Middle East includes a successful hostage rescue mission in Iran, disparaged both U.S. enemies and allies in the region.

Perot said Bush and his aides owe the nation a better explanation of the reasons for their policy against Iraq.

"So why are we there?" he asked. "First it was the price of oil. Then it was for jobs. Then it was for a new world order. Then we wanted to get rid of Hussein's chemical and nuclear capability."

Executive says Saddam wants peace

PARIS (NYT) — The chairman of a major American oil company, who met on Wednesday in Baghdad with President Saddam Hussein of Iraq, said Thursday in a telephone interview from the Iraqi capital that Saddam's announced plan to release all Western hostages "removed one of the major obstacles to peace" in the Gulf crisis.

The executive, Oscar Wyatt, chairman of Coastal Oil Corp., said he and former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally had met Saddam on what he described as a private visit.

"I am convinced the man wants peace," Wyatt said of the one-hour meeting.

"John Connally recommended to him that he reconsider what he did. He basically took what we said to heart."

Wyatt has a longstanding relationship with Iraq. Until July his company was a major buyer of Iraqi crude oil. He has frequently warned that war over the invasion of Kuwait would wreak immense damage on United States interests in the region and to the oil industry.

Iraq moves 30,000 more troops near border

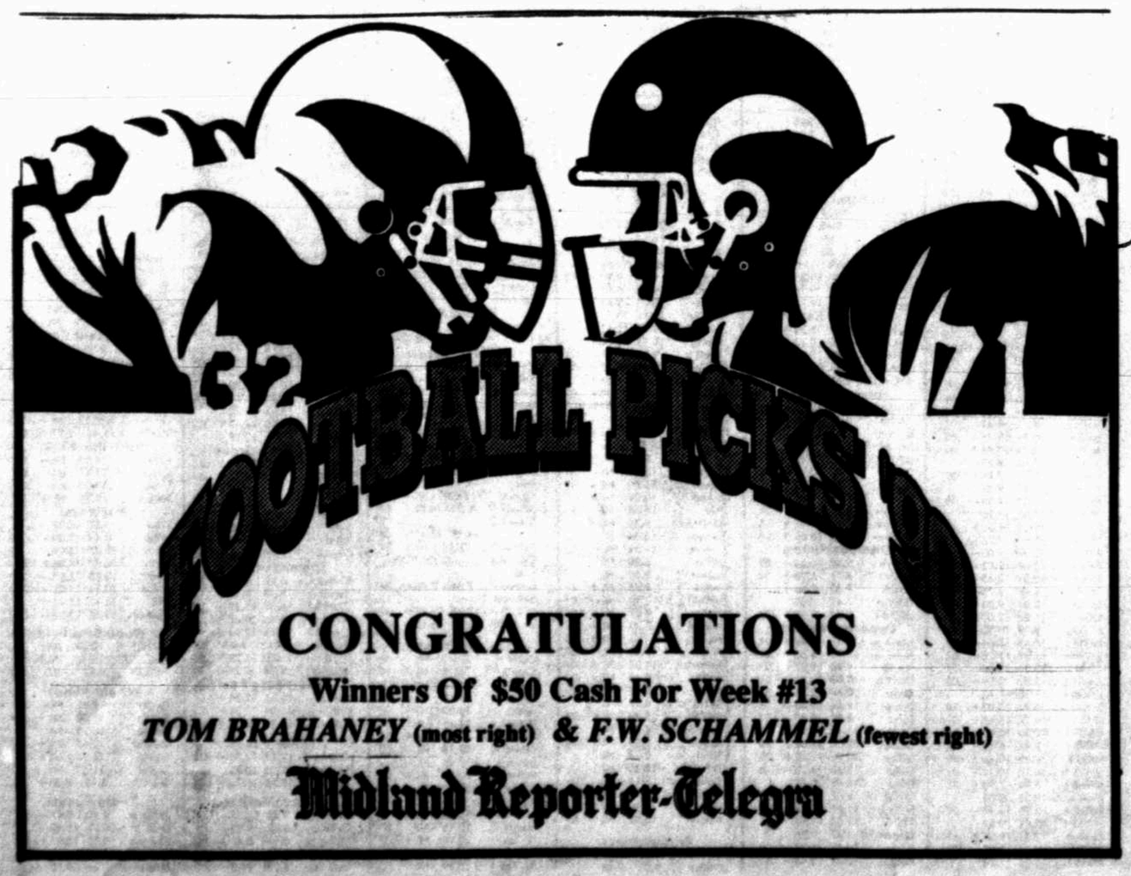

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iraq has moved an additional 30,000 troops into Kuwait and southern Iraq, and 10,000 U.S. reinforcements have arrived in the Persian Gulf, the Pentagon said Thursday.

There are more than 480,000 Iraqi troops in the region and more than 250,000 American troops, including at least 130,000 U.S. Army soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

Also Thursday, the Army said it ordered 1,521 National Guard and Reserve members to report for active duty. They are from 35 states and Puerto Rico and will be assigned mainly to medical-related duties in the gulf crisis.

The call-ups raised to 118,834 the number of U.S. reservists put on active duty in all four services since the buildup began in August.

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — A fake edition of the student newspaper carried a headline proclaiming "U.S. Invades Iraq," and caused some panic on campus.

Students and staff at the State University of New York at Binghamton hugged each other and cried. A dining hall worker whose son is stationed in Saudi Arabia ran screaming from the building. The school's radio station began broadcasting that the United States had gone to war.

One of the headlines announced, "SUNY Binghamton Students Drafted."

But both Page One stories Wednesday had disclaimers in their last paragraphs on inside pages: "The events described above have not happened. Yet. But they may."

Editors of the real paper, called Pipe Dream, said a student group, Looking Left, known for its radical politics, had published the phony issue to make an anti-war statement.

"We were inundated with several hundred phone calls," said junior Matthew Furman, managing editor of Pipe Dream.

The editors rushed to distribute 4,000 printed fliers by midafternoon that said war had not begun and that Pipe Dream had not published the issue.

David Anderson, interim vice president for student affairs, said the publication violated the code of campus conduct. University officials said the incident would be investigated.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 65% adult and 35% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $200 to $600 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although no motor routes are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 AM Monday - Friday and 7 AM on Saturday and Sunday

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
