THEN BETTY GOT HEADACHE

The New Year started whoopee for Betty Compson, as witness, her joy at a party of movie players at Aguacaliente, Mexico. Then 1933 became a headache for Betty. Three nights later she reported to police that a robber had bound her and E. D. Leshin, movie producer, in her apartment and had taken $50,000 in jewels. Then Betty refused to describe the jewels, said she was afraid of gang revenge and waived all insurance claims. Irving Wineberg shown above with Betty at the Mexican party, referred to by Betty as "my sweetheart" said he was "just a friend."

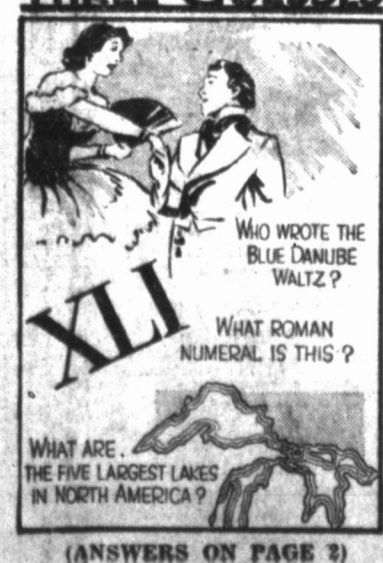

Talks with other editors:
J. C. Rothwell in Borger Herald—Just back from Oklahoma, I not only can't report that prosperity is returning because I saw a jack-rabbit with nobody after it, but I didn't even see a jack-rabbit. I went rabbit hunting and couldn't find one. The folks in the cotton country have eaten all of them.
(It's great to have some all about in times like these. As for rabbits, this Pampa is told that there are many of them hereabouts. One member of the Junior chamber has even suggested a round-up. Personally, we don't know. We went hunting the other day and found only an under-sized cottontail. Our ancient quail gun somehow had developed a hair-trigger and emptied two shells into the ground before we could raise it to aim. The next shot killed the rabbit. That's my story and I'll stick to it.)

Bill Miller in Spearman Reporter—A nation-wide movement is being inaugurated to start the American people to BUYING. Writers and economists all agree that the Americans have become too Scotch in the last two years. One writer estimated that ten billion dollars can be added to the turnover of the nation by each head of families spending one dollar more per week than was spent in 1932.

(According to this plan, newspapers already are ahead of their time. We know few newsmen who do not spend all the money they make, as fast as they make it. The only reason they do not make business even better is that they are temporarily prohibited from spending more money than they make. But even at that, hundreds of newspapers are spending more than they are taking in. The difficult factor in the whole situation is that there is but a small margin of percentage between normal demand and depression figures.)

Suspect Grid Star Poisoned In Strange Death

WATER TROUGH ON FARM HELD YOUTH'S BODY

CAPTAIN OF GONZALES TEAM HEIR TO OIL INCOME

MOTHER LOCATES BODY

CONTENTS OF STOMACH BEING ANALYZED BY CHEMISTS

DILLEY, Texas, Jan. 9. (P)—The death of Valen Osteen, 17, whose body was found in a water trough on a ranch near Dilley, was under investigation today. Osteen was captain of the Gonzales high school football team last season.

His body was found yesterday by his mother, Mrs. B. B. Beatty, after he had been absent from the ranch house about an hour and a half. Less than three feet of water was in the trough.

No marks of violence were found on the body at an inquest, but a verdict was withheld until a report could be obtained from chemists who were analyzing contents of the stomach.

Dr. J. B. Beall of Pearall conducted an autopsy last night. He removed the stomach and its contents and sent them to San Antonio for analysis.

Osteen was the sole beneficiary of an income from two oil wells in South Texas left him by his father, who died several years ago. He had been living on a ranch leased by the Beattys.

Funeral services were arranged for this afternoon in the Lockhart Baptist church. Burial was planned at Dale, his former home.

Schildhauer's Home Free Love Nest Is Claim

CHICAGO, Jan. 9. (P)—Attorney James M. Burke today told police investigating the slaying of Edwin Schildhauer that the bandmaster's widow had decided to "reveal that their home became a free love nest where married couples shared husbands and wives indiscriminately."

Mrs. Frances Schildhauer would come from seclusion in the home of friends and tell Captain John Sturge "the whole story of her life," Burke said.

"If she was unfaithful, so was her husband and so were all the others," he said.

Mrs. Schildhauer, comely young widow of the music instructor of Austin high school, made herself inaccessible to police after questioning last week. She has insisted she saw two men force her husband into an automobile on the night of December 10. He was found shot to death later that night.

Judge Wilson Is Upheld By Court

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9. (P)—The supreme court today refused to entertain mandamus proceedings against Federal District Judge James C. Wilson, of the northern district of Texas which John L. Lamkin, receiver of the Virginia Production company, and Mrs. S. R. Thrasher, a stockholder in the company, sought to bring to compel Judge Wilson to turn over to them assets of the company estimated to be worth $2,000,000.

The company became a bankrupt in January, 1932, in the federal district court for northern Texas. The trustee was discharged in October, 1932, although its estate was never formally closed. In the early part of 1930 a portion of the corporation's property became immensely valuable following the discovery of oil in East Texas.

Lamkin and Mrs. Thrasher, joined in challenging the jurisdiction of the federal district court for northern Texas to disburse the assets of the company, estimated at approximately $2,000,000.

A SEAT in the CABINET

JAMES A. FARLEY
(Editor's Note: This is first of a series of daily articles picturing briefly men and women mentioned for posts in the Roosevelt cabinet.)

If James A. (Big Jim) Farley of New York does not become postmaster general in the Roosevelt cabinet that fact will be more surprising to political onlookers than any other the Roosevelt cabinet slate perhaps could produce.

From the hour when his victory was conceded, it has been tacitly accepted on all sides that Mr. Roosevelt would turn to Farley to fill the portfolio.

A newcomer to national politics, this big, buoyant director of the Roosevelt nomination and election campaigns seems to have found a good stead as state democrat fact-man-in-chief throughout 48 states for Mr. Roosevelt.

He has youth, a temperament that takes the tumult and shouting of national political life easily, abundant energy and a liking for meeting folks of all sorts that stood him in good stead as state democrat fact-man-in-chief throughout 48 states for Mr. Roosevelt.

And it was to Farley and Louis M. Howe that Mr. Roosevelt promptly ascribed chief credit for his election.

Thompson Says Oil Experiments Now Necessary

FORT WORTH, Jan. 9. (P)—Serious suffering in Texas would be caused by collapse of the petroleum industry, Fisher Ames, son of C. B. Ames, told oil men today attending the annual meeting of the Texas oil and gas conservation association here.

Fisher Ames read a prepared address by his father, who was forced to return to his home in Oklahoma City by sudden illness. The elder Ames, president of the American Petroleum Institute, had been scheduled to deliver the main address.

Clarence Kendall, Houston attorney, representing a committee fighting evasion of the gasoline tax, was the first speaker.

"The laws under which we operate in the State of Texas," said E. O. Thompson, railroad commissioner, "are comparatively new and we have had of necessity to experiment quite a bit in finding out just what was best to do. In the first place we had an entirely new theory of law to learn. People have so long thought that it was their proud privilege to do whatever they desired with whatever they owned that it is hard, and has been hard to get them to understand that this right to do as one pleases with one's property carries with it the correlative duty to use one's property in the exercise of his right in such a way only as to do no violence to the rights of others."

Mrs. W. R. Ewing and Mrs. A. B. McCaffey of Pampa and Miss Cora McCaffey of Miami were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Saunders Sunday.

GRAY COUNTY ASSURED MORE RELIEF MONEY

TELEGRAMS INDICATE EMPLOYMENT CAN BE CONTINUED

ALLOTMENT INCREASED

WALKER DIRECTS 100 MEN GO TO WORK TOMORROW

Two telegrams concerning the federal relief situation in Gray county brought encouragement today, although the details will not be available until the return of C. H. Walker, chairman of the county committee, and George Briggs, secretary, from Stamford.

No men were given jobs today, but C. L. Mullen, who is foreman of work, received a telegram from Mr. Walker saying "Everything all right—put hundred men to work Tuesday." Mr. Mullen made immediate arrangements to do this.

The extent of the federal relief, however, is not yet known, since the local men, with representatives of McLean, planned to ask an additional sum for the south part of the county where unemployment and banking difficulties have created an acute problem.

However, that the county will receive more aid than originally announced was indicated in this telegram, received yesterday after Mr. Walker and Mr. Briggs had left $11,450 allotted Gray county but will be several days before you will receive same. However, you can count on above sum, and it is proper to proceed with your relief work. Allotment is for January and February only. D. A. BANDEEN, manager West Texas chamber of commerce.

Lions to Start Minstrel Show Rehearsal Soon

Pampa Lions will assemble in the dining hall of the First Baptist church Thursday at 7 p. m. to start rehearsals for their annual minstrel show and musical revue, which will be presented at the city hall March 2 and 3.

The proceeds will be used in the club's work for the underprivileged. The clubmen will be served a plate lunch in connection with the practice. Director John Sturgeon has the opening ovation ready for rehearsals. Several committees already at work in connection with the event. The production committee includes, besides Mr. Sturgeon, R. G. Allen, George Limerick, R. C. Wilson, H. L. Polley, A. M. Teed, W. H. Curry, and W. A. Bratton.

The costumes committee is composed of Mr. Limerick, Mr. Wilson, and Mr. Polley. Mr. Allen, Mr. Curry, and J. A. Meek will have charge of stag properties.

A more elaborate setting than last year's initial success is being planned.

Hopkins Group to Sponsor Minstrel

The first rehearsal of the negro minstrel to be sponsored by the Hopkins Parent-Teacher association will be held tonight at the Hopkins community hall. M. L. H. Baze is director.

THIEF RAIDS CHOIR ROOM AT METHODIST CHURCH AND TAKES CLOTHING DURING SERMON HOUR

City officers are investigating the theft of an overcoat and pair of gloves and a quantity of bed clothing that were stolen from two different places last night. R. B. Fisher, superintendent of Pampa schools, was the victim of a thief who entered the choir room at the First Methodist church last night and removed his overcoat and gloves.

F. M. Culbertson of 428 Malone street reported the theft of bed-clothing while he was attending church last night. Although no trace of the missing articles have been found, officers are working on clues and hope to make an arrest.

An officer was detailed to every church in the city last night, and as a result there were no thefts from cars. Officers did, however, find that most of the recent petty thieving was probably the result of carelessness of owners. They found several cars unlocked last night and one car with the door standing open and an overcoat and lap robe in it.

Only two men were arrested over the week-end. One on a charge of drunkenness and the other for carrying a pair of "knucks." He was turned over to the county.

Eight negroes arrested Saturday morning on charges of vagrancy have been released on bond.

'MOST FAITHFUL LOVER' EVICTED

You would never guess to look at him that Richard Martin was once one of New York's social lions. But it is true, just the same. At the height of his career as a man about town, he met and wooed but the lady of his choice married another. He renounced social activities and family, let his beard grow and daily—winter and summer—sat on a Central Park bench gazing at the home of the woman he loved and lost. In doing this his money ran out—for the long-distance adoration lasted for years—and above he is shown with his dog companion just after he was evicted the other day from the shack in which he slept in Long Island City.

ADULT SCOUT LEADERS OF MANY COUNTIES WILL COME TO PAMPA TOMORROW FOR ANNUAL SESSION

Banquet To Be Held At Presbyterian Church

Boy Scout adult leaders from all parts of the huge Adobe Walls council will come to Pampa tomorrow for the annual business session, banquet, and election of officers.

Registration of visitors will take place at the city hall, beginning at 3 p. m. Various standing committees will have business sessions during the afternoon.

The main event of the day, however, will be the banquet in the dining hall of the First Presbyterian church at 7 p. m. While the audience is assembling, and during the meal, the group will be entertained by the Pampa high school band directed by "Pop" Frazier.

Group singing will be led by Supt. R. B. Fisher. Then Mrs. A. H. Doucette, mother of an Eagle Scout, will extend greetings to visiting scoutmasters. Comments on the annual reports of committees will be made by A. W. Nelson, Scout commissioner of Borger. John B. Hessey, chairman of the training committee, will present certificates to those who have earned them.

President A. A. Hyde of the council will make a brief address on "The Challenge of the Ten-Year Program."

A nominating committee composed of C. I. Liguereau of Borger, M. B. Welsh of Panhandle, and Chris B. Martin of Pampa will make its report prior to the election of officers. The Scout benediction will be said at the close.

LATE NEWS

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Jan. 9. (P)—Over the luncheon table, President-Elect Roosevelt received today from President Hoover's secretary of state, Henry L. Stimson, a picture of the complicated international situation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9. (P)—The house today met and adjourned immediately out of respect to the deaths over the week-end of Representatives Samuel A. Kendall of Pennsylvania, and Robert R. Butler of Oregon.

WILSHIRE COUNTRY CLUB LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9. (P)—Two professionals from Deal, N. J., Charles Guest and Craig Wood, were tied for the lead in the Los Angeles open golf tournament at the end of the 45 holes today with cards of 173 strokes.

AUSTIN, Jan. 9. (P)—Senator Archie Parr of Benavides plans to introduce a bill in the Texas senate tomorrow providing for the holding of two primaries, February 18 and March 4 to select a democratic nominee for congressman from the 15th district, the position now held by Vice-President-Elect John N. Garner.

Two French Ships Reported Damaged

PARIS, Jan. 9. (P)—Two more French ocean passenger ships were reported damaged today, one by fire, as preparations were made to drydock the burned Atlantique at Cherbourg.

An investigation into the mysterious fire which broke out on the Atlantique last Wednesday and which took lives of 18 members of its crew, was under way.

The 23,000-ton transatlantic liner France was damaged yesterday by a fire at Le Harve, where she had been docked for the past few months. Firemen and a skeleton crew put it out. Officials said it apparently was caused by a short circuit.

The French passenger ship Angkor, in the Mediterranean and Far East service, was reported held up at Saigon as the result of the breaking of a propeller blade.

Nationalist newspapers have insisted the burning of the Atlantique was a criminal act and have pointed to other mysterious fires which destroyed four French merchant ships in the past four years.

UPPER HOUSE NOW READY TO ACT ON MOVE

RATIFICATION PERIOD LIMITED TO SEVEN YEARS

VOTE NEAR UNANIMOUS

SESSION LASTS ONLY AN HOUR AND A HALF

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9. (P)—Acting with unexpected speed the senate judiciary committee sent a prohibition repeal resolution to the senate today with a favorable report.

In a single session, the committee voted almost unanimously to report the Blaine repeal resolution, slightly modified to limit the ratification period to seven years.

The resolution proposes to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, prohibit dry states from shipments of liquor, and permit congress to legislate against return of the saloon.

The action was taken in an executive session lasting only an hour and a half at which Chairman Blaine submitted the favorable report from his subcommittee which defeated the measure.

There was considerable discussion of the provision for submitting the resolution to state legislatures instead of state conventions but the commerce voted to retain it.

The protection for dry states and the provision for congress to legislate against the return of the saloon were also retained on separate votes.

The action of the committee was announced by Senator King, Utah democrat, member of the committee.

The vote was the first time a standing congressional committee has approved a measure to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment since it went into effect 13 years ago.

The vote by which the resolution was favorably reported was 10 to 4. The text of the original proposal to which this added follows:

"Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, (two-thirds of each house concurring therein), that the following article is hereby proposed as an amendment to the constitution of the United States, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states:

Section 1. The XVIIIth article of amendment to the constitution of the United States is hereby repealed.

Section 2. The transportation or importation into any state, territory or possession of the United States for delivery or use therein of intoxicating liquors in violation of the laws thereof, is hereby prohibited.

Section 3. Congress shall have concurrent power to regulate or prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors to be drunk on the premises where sold."

A motion by Senator Bratton to substitute ratification by conventions instead of legislatures was defeated 8 to 6. This question, Chairman Norris said, was discussed during most of the committee's meeting.

Pope Will Order Holy Door Opened

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 9. (P)—Pacification of the souls of individuals and peace and fraternity among peoples, it is expected, will be the purpose of the world-wide prayers which Pope Pius will request in a papal bull to be issued soon promulgating a holy year.

The bull, it is reported, establishes ceremonies of the holy year which make it equal to the usual holy years proclaimed every 25 years, including the formal opening of the holy door of St. Peter's which is opened only every quarter of a century.

NO FIRES YESTERDAY Yesterday was the first day of the new year that the fire department failed to receive a call, false or otherwise. Fifteen calls have answered to date but the loss has been small.

The last run was to a grass fire at the east end of Francis avenue. There was no loss.

STUPIDITY ESCAPES DEPRESSION

The blithe stupidity with which some people can meet a profound social crisis is one of the most discouraging features of the depression. It is instanced strikingly by a little story in the current news dispatches.

In Connecticut, near Danbury, there was a farmer who owed someone $3800. He couldn't pay it, so his creditor went to court and got the farmer thrown into jail under an old law which, it is said, was last used against P. T. Barnum nearly a century ago.

The jailing took place last August. At that time the farmer had fairly good prospects for the harvest season—outside, of course, of the fact that he was in jail. On his farm there were 100 pigs, fattening for the market. There were 6,000 head of cabbages in the fields and 5400 tomato plants which were just beginning to bear.

But the farmer was jailed for debt, and his wife and two small children were left to look after things. The job was too much for them—the wife, by the way, was expecting a third child—and things went to pieces. All but 19 of the pigs died. The tomatoes and cabbages rotted before they could be gathered.

The natural result, of course, is that the family today is utterly destitute. The farmer is still in jail—and the creditor, needless to say, hasn't yet received a dime.

Now here is a prize example of the damages that plain, ordinary dumbness can do in a time of social crisis.

The creditor who ruined everything by having this farmer jailed at the wrong time was possibly a shade more stupid than is usual. Yet his action is merely a logical development of the pressure which the whole load of debts has put on the farmer—and, incidentally, on industry as well—in this time of depression.

The same papers that told of this Connecticut farmer also told Iowa farmers threatened to lynch a bidder at a farm foreclosure sale. The two items weren't really unrelated. Both testify to the unbearable nature of the agricultural debt structure.

POLITICS at random

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

A new tang has been given the political atmosphere of Washington by the news that President-elect Roosevelt is prepared to assume a more active leadership in the legislative program of the present session of congress.

There had been no denying that recent weeks had seen the situation at the capital drifting steadily toward complete stagnation.

The state of the public business at the end of the calendar year gave a surprising demonstration how simply could bog down of its own weight in a time of need.

The feeling had become, increasingly, one of defeatism. With each party holding an effective veto over the other, and all attempts at co-operation stalemated, the disposition of many leaders on both sides was to say "What's the use" and fall back on an exchange of partisan charges and counter-charges which doubtless led many ordinary voters to wonder whether Washington knew the campaign was over.

Now there is a possibility, at least of action.

No Party Programs
The fact that neither side had presented any inclusive party program is traceable directly to the absence of recognized and effective leadership.

The republican old guard, in control of the party organization in senate and house, took no steps to support President Hoover's recommendations because it did not care to rehabilitate him as the controlling force in the party as a whole.

The democrats had been divided and hesitant because they were uncertain how far President-elect Roosevelt wanted them to go, and in what direction.

OUT OUR WAY By WILLIAMS

WHY MOTHERS GET GRAY

A congressional gesture toward remaining on the job during the Christmas holidays may have saved some criticism back home, but actually the accomplishments of record were not impressive. The senate, where the real log-jam always occurs in short sessions, mustered only a corporal's guard at its infrequent five-minute meetings.

The whole performance was degenerating into a fine long-drawn out last day of school.

Roosevelt Steps In

That was the situation when the disordered ranks were called to attention by Mr. Roosevelt's comments on the sales tax and governmental reorganization, and his invitation to Speaker Garner to confer with him.

It is true that some doubt persists just how far the President-elect is prepared to go. It is true also that the mutual veto power remains. But at least the democrats now can prepare a program which, if it fails of enactment before March 4, will be assured of smooth and speedy sailing at the special session—now apparently inevitable.

It is certain Mr. Roosevelt will be consulted by some of his friends not to go too far in risking his prestige before a congress where democratic control hangs by a slender thread.

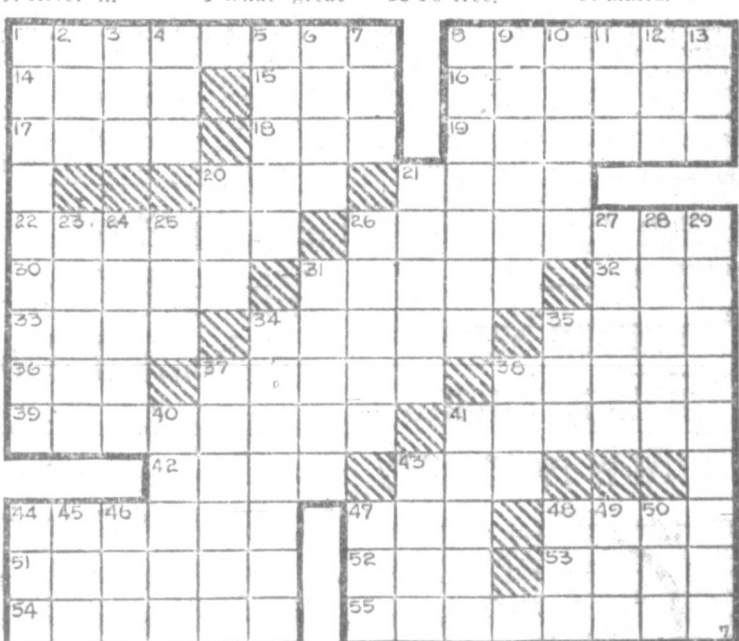

Even the republicans see the hazards of too amiable a disposition on his part to expose his "and before he is in a position to play it.

Buying Barbara

By Julia Cleft-Addams • Author of "YOU CAN'T MARRY"

SYNOPSIS: Farrell Armitage is to devote all his effort to cure the crippled Mark Lodely and make him a successful artist, according to the bargain he has made with Mark's friends, Barbara and Lella. In return Barbara has put off her wedding a year. Farrell, hoping to win Barbara's love in that time, Lella, whom Farrell almost married, is adding him—perhaps because of some past connection with Mark. Lella has brought the one for Patsy Raoul to witness Mark's arrival at Farrell's house. She asks Farrell if he is the painter.

Chapter 21
THE LODELYS ARRIVE

Armitage, taking a thin hand, looked down into an ugly face with no redeeming feature save its vivacity. Patsy Raoul was swarthy and snub-nosed, her eyes were small and her mouth large, all her features a little awry as though one-half of her face did not quite match the other. Armitage sensed a strong personality, whether hostile to his type or not he could not be sure.

"Do I look like the genius, Miss Raoul?"

"You do not it. But then—me! I look like not anything but perhaps a gargoyle. Yes, as you may see them under an old church-roof. Yet I am a great, a unique genius who all I desire must have."

She flicked a finger and thumb at Farrell's two wire-haired terriers, who responded with all the quiverings, nose-pushing and tail-rappings known to canine etiquette.

"Ah, Mr. Farrell Armitage, you will be de-lighted these two to me give for last night?"

"Last night?"

"Farrell has probably never seen you act and even more probably never will," put in Lella. She leaned in the doorway faintly smiling, very smooth and sleek and golden-brown. In accidental clash with her friend she was dressed in a deeper red, but it was, strangely enough, her softer colors that struck the false note—not Miss Raoul's scarlet.

"Then, these animals the more seem-possible to me refuse," decided the actress. "If you will not pay to come to the theatre you must pay because you come not."

Her ugly grin drew an answering gleam from Armitage.

"Has anyone ever refused you anything, Miss Raoul?"

"Yes, one. And he died."

"Then I am evidently a very brave man."

Patsy Raoul's skin twisted, and under her dark grin a red tide well-ed. With a quick flicker of movement she produced a card from her scarlet pocket and a jeweled pencil.

"A box for 'this night,' she cried, scribbling vehemently upon the card. "Now, Mr. Farrell Armitage, I will you eem-barrass. If you see not me act I think you feel anger of me. If you then give these animals, I shall think you feel fear of me. If you give me not anything I think you feel love of me. Well, brvrrre man!"

What was she—French? German? No, Armitage thought neither. And she had certainly cornered him. . . . He put up his hands in surrender and she thrust the card into his breast-pocket.

"You won't make any impression on Farrell," said Lella. "I asked him to marry me only the other day and he refused."

"But I would not permit 'No' for him to say it!" cried Miss Raoul. "It is only that he has a little caprice—"

"At this juncture a merciful interruption saved our hero from the embarrassment that threatened to suffocate him," murmured Armitage, moving into the hall.

Through the glass panels on either side of the door he had seen the arrival of the Lachisse. His butler and a footman appeared, as by telepathy, from the back of the house, the door was opened and the chauffeur was observed assisting the square form of Mrs. Lodely to the pavement. Armitage ran down to meet her.

"It's really very nice of you to come at such short notice," he said. When she had done laughing he added: "Let Gaffen take your dressing-case. He'll see to all your baggage. Is your son with you?"

"You bet he is," Mark!

"Just like Mark," said Lella. Mark had been laid on a couch in the hall and she sat upon the edge of it. With an abrupt movement she pushed back a lock of hair that straggled over his forehead. Armitage saw that she was pale under her rouge. "Clever Mark!" she added, to no one in particular.

There was a moment's pause, and then Mark violently sneezed. "Ah-z-z-z!" Miss Raoul screamed at her snarl and then blew a second cloud of smoke into the pettage entered his house with the lady. She was in her noisiest mood. The introduction of Miss Raoul had to be effected fortissimo, and the actress' face was a study as she waited in vain for a lull in which to express her pleasure at the meeting. As for the terriers, they scuttled up the staircase and disappeared into the peaceful upper regions of the house.

"Got up with the early birds this mornin'," enthused Mrs. Lodely. "Always have to allow an extra hour for Mark, y'know, half an hour for his liveness and half an hour in case anythin' unexpected happens to him!"

Armitage felt Gaffen at his side.

"Mr. Lodely, sir, he doubts whether he can venture to move from the car without your assistance."

"Mine? Can't Michfield and Thomas tackle his weight-between them?"

"Easily, I should have said, sir. Or I offered my own shoulder. But Mr. Lodely is quite insistent, sir, that no one but yourself shall touch him."

Armitage hesitated. His instinct was to ignore this whim, since it could be nothing more. Damned little egomaniac, he ought to be kicked! But, of course, one couldn't kick a cripple. On the physical plane, Armitage supposed, one couldn't logically refuse a cripple anything.

Mrs. Lodely, hurrying the small talk of her type at an appalled Miss Raoul, broke off to glance somewhat anxiously at the car. Armitage went down to it again.

"What's up, Lodely?"

He had put his head right into the sedan for only the faintest movement had come from his guest. At first Armitage, who was ready for a studied languor, arched eyebrows and a good deal of "temperament," was confused by the fact that Mark was not actually visible at all. Then the rugs moved again and Armitage, peering, found him prostrate upon the spacious cushions.

"Very unconvincing, isn't it?" murmured Mark. "But I'm afraid I really do get heart attacks from excitement; and I really do have to be lifted in a special way. Generally, Barbara supervises it."

Armitage, genuinely shocked by the white lips, the twitching eyelids and the panting breath, could only beg to be shown how this lifting was to be attempted.

Mark pantingly explained.

"But, of course, if you don't think you have the strength," he added, "I can just stay here until I'm able to move of myself. Then I shall only need someone to hold by crutch. One of your servants could manage that, I'm sure."

"Just clear this floor, Michfield, will you?" asked Farrell.

Mark was eased off the seat and disposed on a rug while Armitage walked round to his second position. Then came the real pull on his muscles. He succeeded mainly because he felt it was imperative that he should succeed. Slowly, like an overladen beast, with Mark's full weight upon him, he mounted the steps and carried Mark into the house.

"Brute force," he heard Mark murmur. "Women are supposed to admire it." Armitage looked at him sharply but Mark had apparently fainted.

Mrs. Lodely was insistent that no doctor need be summoned.

"His eyes take these faints and he comes 'out of 'em again.' She did not even moderate her tones over the patient's unconscious form. "It feels a bit queer afterwards he might like a drop of brandy. D'you say you've got an elevator, Farrell?"

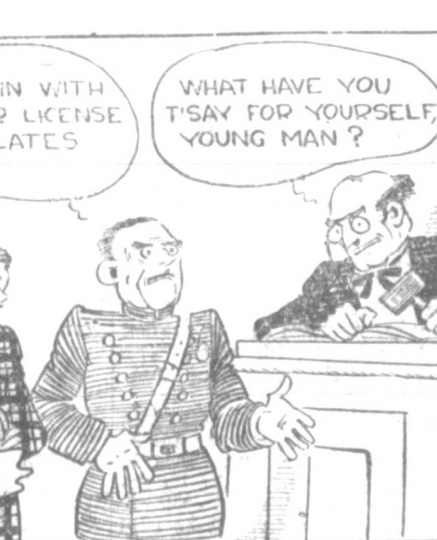

"Just like Mark," said Lella. Mark had been laid on a couch in the hall and she sat upon the edge of it. With an abrupt movement she pushed back a lock of hair that straggled over his forehead. Armitage saw that she was pale under her rouge. "Clever Mark!" she added, to no one in particular.

DIVORCE RATE TO CONTINUE UP, COMMITTEE ASSERTS

SOCIAL TRENDS GROUP SAYS FAMILY LIFE WILL DECLINE STILL FURTHER IN FUTURE

THINKS FAMILY WILL NOT DISAPPEAR; THAT HOMES ARE LOSING OUT; CITES NEED OF HARMONY IN MARRIED LIFE

NEW YORK, Jan. 9 (AP)—That the divorce rate will continue to increase, the size of the family continue to decrease, and still more of the family's functions be taken over by outside agencies are among the conclusions presented in the report of the president's research committee on social trends.

However, the report finds little evidence that the family will disappear. It has "declined in social significance," the report says, "although not in human values."

The factory, the school, the store and the state have taken over activities that once tended to keep the family together, the report declares, leaving its stability dependent on "the strength of the tie of affection, correlated sentiments and spiritual values, the joys and responsibilities of rearing children."

How to strengthen this tie is a major problem, it says.

"The stability of the future family is not clearly seen," writes Dr. William F. Ogburn, of the University of Chicago. "It rests a good deal on what research will discover, and the wide dissemination of the results."

Cites Need For Harmony
"The problems of husbands and wives," he says, "reach their crisis in separation or divorce and maintenance of strict divorce laws represents society's major effort to deal with them. Yet the more fundamental problem for the future stability of the family is to ward off the disharmony which leads to separation."

He finds "a growing need not only for more knowledge in the field of 'inherited variability, habit and the relationship of physiological and psychological behavior' but also for agencies to disseminate such knowledge. And, he declares, 'some sort of preparation for family life is needed for the unmarried, for most of them will marry.'"

The report says that "many people have had higher rates of separation and remarriage" than ours but that few cultures "have or ever have had families which perform as few economic functions as do American families today dwelling in city apartments."

"These facts suggest," it says, "as does a projection of the divorce curve, that our culture may be conducive to further increases in divorce."

LOVE IS AMONG OUTSTANDING CHARACTER BUILDERS, SAYS PRINCIPAL OF SCHOOL HERE

"Character building begins before birth, and from the earliest hours of childhood some force is molding character," said Miss Josephine Thomas, principal of Horace Mann school, at a recent meeting of the Parent-Teacher association. She continued: "Parents and teachers are those upon whom the responsibility for character building is placed. A good teacher is not only a character builder during school hours, but every hour of the day and in every manner."

"The Junior police are among the character builders of the school in that they report any misconduct or vulgar language," Miss Thomas emphasized love as a character builder. "Love for the child, for the infinite, and for the beautiful," she said, "molds the child's character into one that reflects the same qualities."

"Our nation depends upon the parents and teachers to prepare boys and girls to be good citizens. The foremost factor in determining the future of our nation lies with our parents and teachers."

Mrs. Annie Daniels, principal of Woodrow Wilson school, and a group of the Woodrow Wilson pupils will present a program Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at a meeting of Merten Parent-Teacher association.

Mrs. Sterling Treasures Gift Of Silver Set

By R. W. BARRY
AUSTIN, Jan. 9 (AP)—Mrs. R. S. Sterling, wife of the governor, will take with her from the executive mansion when she retires as Texas' first lady, a memento that she will cherish in years to come, and will go down to her children, grandchildren and other descendants as time goes on.

The women of Austin presented her with a silver set on Christmas which, those who know Mrs. Sterling readily recognize, bears a sentiment that is sincere. An inscription, engraved into the main piece, said:

"To Mrs. Ross Sterling, executive mansion of Texas, from the women of Austin as a token of their deep appreciation of her dauntless courage, her clear thinking, her mental and spiritual sincerity, her generous hospitality and her unflinching charity of thought, word and deed, Christmas 1932."

Mrs. Sterling was popular as mistress of the executive mansion. She was a familiar and welcome figure in the capitol. She was acquainted with many of the employees of the departments, with the watchmen and others who frequent the big red granite building. She always had time to exchange greetings with anyone she met.

She was an easy, democratic hostess at the mansion. She always was simple. It did not matter who the caller was—someone high up the political ladder or a humble person knocking on the rear door in an attempt to get the governor's ear on behalf of a loved one in prison—Mrs. Sterling was sympathetic. She always was interested in human beings and she never rejected an opportunity to learn some new angle.

An incident of her graciousness, and understanding came when former service men from all parts of the land had started a march on Washington to persuade Congress to pass the bonus bill.

A contingent of Texans stopped in Austin to visit the governor. The bedraggled group started toward the executive mansion. Texas Rangers sought to head them off. Mrs. Sterling saw them coming. She motioned the Rangers away and beckoned the men to her. She talked to them in a mother's language, counseling them to return to their homes.

Legion Auxiliary
Is To Lead Fight
Against Radicals

Every woman who enrolls in the American Legion auxiliary this year is stepping forward in defense of the American form of government, according to Mrs. W. C. de Cordova, president of the local auxiliary unit. The auxiliary is leading the fight against radical influences at work among the women of the country, she said, urging all eligible women in Pampa to come into the organization to give the auxiliary added strength for the effort.

An aggressive campaign of Americanism activities designed to increase understanding of the ideals and principles of American democracy, and to strengthen loyalty to them will be conducted by the auxiliary during the coming year. Special attention will be given to combating radical influences in educational institutions and keeping patriotic training a part of the education of all young Americans.

"Through wide-spread propaganda, attempts are being made to place the blame for the economic depression on the American form of government," Mrs. de Cordova said. "The auxiliary is directing its efforts to make our women and our students understand that it is the freedom and privileges enjoyed by American citizens under their government which made America the

PILE FABRICS MADE EASILY

New Decorative Possibilities in the Sewing Room

By MARGERY TAYLOR
Copyright, 1932, by the McCall Company for The NEWS

The busy old sewing machine is up to some new tricks. You can now make deep pile fabrics and fringe on it.

And before you say, "What's that to me?" consider the possibilities it opens for rugs, bath mats, chair pads, amusing woolly animal pillows, and miles of all kinds of fringe for edging curtains and pil-lows and slip covers.

The idea seems to have come originally from Europe. All that is necessary is a pronged metal bar around which the yarn is wrapped.

You sew down the middle; the yarn is firmly stitched to the material in even rows of overlapped stitches wool to cover the design. Then you clip as if the thing were a hooked rug, and there is the pile effect.

The design may be worked in by hand afterward; must be, indeed, in the case of scotch dog and tabby cat pillows. Stamped pattern guides are available. For the pile wool yarn or pearl cotton No. 3 may be used.

There's a reversible sewing machine, too. You simply sew along to the end of a seam, flip a gadget, and back the machine goes the way it came.

Gay Party Given Saturday

MISS BUCKLER IS HOSTESS TO LIVELY GROUP

SCAVENGER ENDS WITH BUFFET DINNER AT MIDNIGHT

"Please leave all your money here except 15 cents. All articles have to be returned after the party, please remember where you got them. You are not allowed to go to your own home. Be back home by 12 o'clock. Prizes will be given for the most unusual article and for the couple with the most points."

Such were the instructions given guests of Miss Margaret Buckler at a party Saturday evening, and groups left at 8:30 o'clock in search of the following articles: 1 copy of Dec. 29th Amarillo Daily News; 1 dozen hackberries, 1 bunch cat-tails, 1 live tadpole, 1 ladies' wig, 1 no-parking sign, 1 Coca Cola sign, 1 police officer's signature, 1 specimen Chinese writing, 1 rubber nipple, 1 garden rake, and 1 repeal 18th Amendment sign.

Laughing groups returned about midnight with their "loot" and enjoyed a lovely buffet dinner. The winning group in the scavenger was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Studer, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Barrett, Mrs. Gilmore N. Nunn, and John Sturgeon.

Guests for the evening included Mr. and Mrs. Don Conley, Mr. and Mrs. H. Otto Studer, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Swanson, Mr. and Mrs. Mel Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Damon, Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Hicks, Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore N. Nunn, Russ Allen, Gene Green, Miss Virginia Faulkner, Mr. and Mrs. John Sturgeon, Mr. and Mrs. John Moyer, Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Boyd.

The Rev. Joseph Wonderly was still confined to his bed this morning but was said to be recovering satisfactorily.

Instructors And Parents Ask for High Standards

MRS. J. M. CHAIN, Claude
The educational legislative program of the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers is chosen from that offered by these three Educational Groups: the state department of education, the state board of education, and the Texas State Teachers association.

"Realizing that the public school is the ideal instrument for the development of an enlightened citizenship, we pledge our hearty support to the maintenance of public schools at a standard consistent with the efficient training of youth, urging strict economy in administration in order that terms of school need not be shortened and that the entire programs of physical, mental, vocational, and character training may be obtained. We reaffirm our devotion to the ideals of the congress as set forth in its by-laws and in the seven-fold program of home and school and accept once more the challenge to translate into a program of activity the provisions of the Children's Charter to the end that every child shall have equal opportunity to develop a wholesome and happy adjustment to society. We pledge ourselves to the study of economic problems that we may attain the understanding which will enable us to assist in their intelligent solution." This resolution is one of the twelve adopted by the delegates of the Texas Congress at its twenty-fourth annual convention held in Galveston, in November 1932.

When the thought embodied in the above resolution is put into execution in the 2,219 organizations in the Texas Congress, the Educational Program for the 1,232,900 Texas children, now in attendance to schools within the state, will be greatly enriched and enlarged.

This state faces a serious situation with respect to the public free schools and the available school fund to maintain the schools. This present plight is attributable chiefly to the amendment to release from taxation all homes to the value of three thousand dollars, which carried at the general election last November. When this

"Chesterfields taste Better"

WE HAVE been telling the public for a good many years that Chesterfields taste better. They satisfy!

That wouldn't mean a thing if smokers found out that it wasn't so. Nobody can fool the people very long.

But a great many smokers have smoked Chesterfields for a long time, and they know that they taste right. And so they say to their friends, "If you want a cigarette that really tastes better, try Chesterfields!"

Chesterfields taste better because they are made of mild tobaccos that have been aged for two years. And there is just enough Turkish in them... but not too much.

We are sure that you, too, will enjoy their Mildness and Better Taste.

CAGE VICTORY GIVES HOPE TO MUSTANG CLUB

LONGHORNS ALSO GAY OVER GAME WITH BAYLOR

By BILL PARKER.
Associated Press Sports Writer.
There is a new athletic hope on the hill of Mustangville. It blossomed Saturday night when the Southern Methodist basketball team scored away with a 20 to 19 decision over the Texas Christian university Frogs.

There is a satisfactory status on the University of Texas campus because the Longhorns breezed to a 48 to 26 victory over the 1932 champion Baylor Bear.

This week-end a new band of sharpshooters will invade the championship circle when the University of Arkansas Razorbacks make their 1933 debut by playing the University of Texas Friday and Saturday nights in Austin. The Razorbacks have won more conference titles than any other team. While other conference teams battled against championship competition Saturday night, the Razorbacks won a non-conference game from the North Texas Teachers, 36 to 26.

Fresh and eager for more competition because of their first round victories, both impressive, the Texas Aggies and Southern Methodist Mustangs battle Saturday night at Dallas. At Houston, Baylor and Rice will wage a cellar fight.

Keen interest will be attached to the Arkansas and Texas series since both teams are listed among the favorites for this year's crown. Led by Kubricht, center, who tallied 9 field goals and a trio of free shots for 19 points, the Longhorns experienced no trouble proving themselves the superior team against Baylor. The Longhorns playing was featured by a swift passing attack.

Second in interest will be the Texas A. & M. and Southern Methodist game at Dallas. Breaking a 19-all deadlock in the last five seconds of play for a 20 to 19 victory over Texas Christian, the Mustangs proved beyond doubt they have a strong chance at this year's title. Carter's free shot on Allison's four proved the winning point in this game. The Mustangs defense was almost a complete block against the Frogs passing from crisp shots.

Led by Captain Joe Moody who looped the net for 17 points, the Aggies surprised with their fine showing and 35 to 18 decision over the Owls. The Aggies defense held Rice to four points in the first half.

Kubricht Takes Lead In Cage Scoring Race

Kubricht, University of Texas center, and Captain Joe Moody, Texas A. & M. forward, are leading the Southwest conference basketball scoring race with 19 and 17 points. Baccus of Southern Methodist ranks third with 10 points.

Leading conference scorers follow:
Kubricht, C. Texas, 19.
Moody, F. A. & M., 17.
Baccus, F. S. M. U., 10.
Francis, I. Texas, 8.
Sumner, T. C. U., 6.

Guest Leading In Open Tourney At Los Angeles

By PAUL ZIMMERMAN.
Associated Press Sports Writer.
LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9.—Charles Guest, a home-town golfer back from the East, was well on the way to making good today.

The professional from Deal, N. J., who grew up to his game here, held a one-stroke lead as the 52 survivors of the first two rounds of the Los Angeles $5,000 open turned to the final 36 holes of play.

Two par-shooting rounds put Guest into the lead with 139. He toured the tricky Wilshire Country club course in 70 on Saturday, a stroke better than perfect.

Three were within a stroke of Guest: Craig Wood, Deal, N. J., who already has won two California winter tournaments; Leo Diegel, from Agua Caliente in old Mexico, and Willie Hunter, Los Angeles, who once won the British amateur title before joining the play for pay ranks. All had 140. Hunter, a deliberate player, plodded in yesterday with a 68, the best round of the tournament to date.

In fifth place was Mark Fry, Oakland, Calif., with 141. He marked the dividing point in the entry of those who had bettered par for the 36 holes of play, although Fay Coleman, a former amateur from Culver City, Calif., stood in sixth place with two par rounds for 142.

Princeton and Harvard Play Again in 1934

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 9. (AP)—One of America's classic and most colorful athletic relationships stood renewed today as Harvard and Princeton scheduled home-and-home games with each other.

The gridiron rivalry begun in 1817, was shattered in 1926 with unofficial charges of "rough play" against Princeton and recriminations on both sides. Last night the feud was officially ended with a joint statement by William J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard, and Thurston J. Davies, supervisor of sports at Princeton, which said:

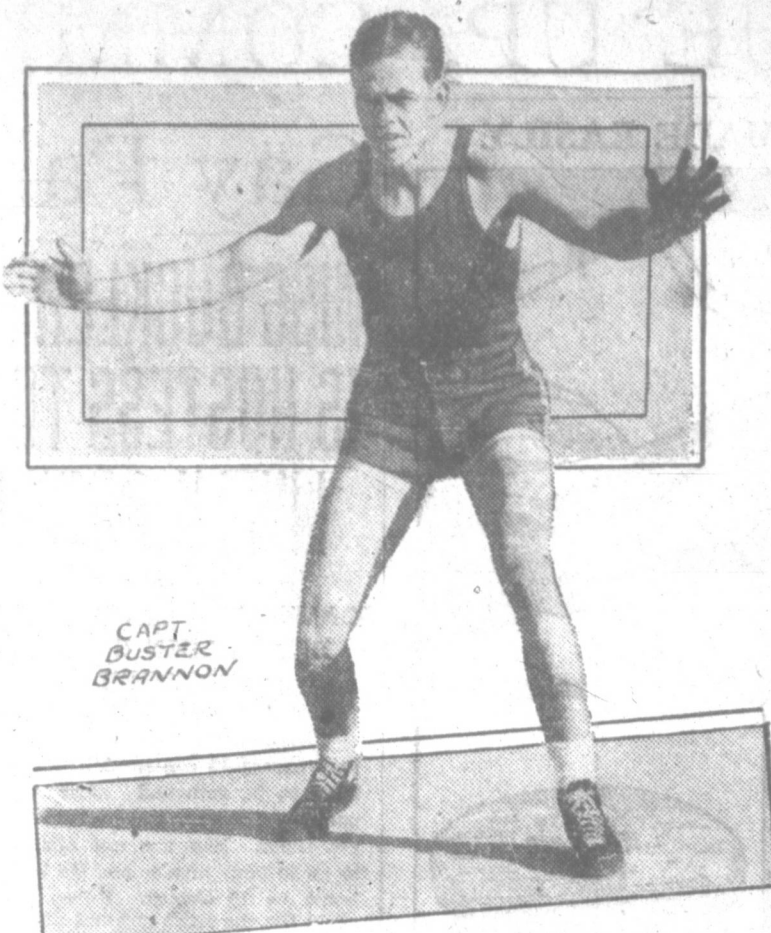

"Arrangements have been completed for two football games between Harvard and Princeton, the first to be played in Cambridge, Nov. 3, 1934, and the second in Princeton, Nov. 9, 1935."

HOG TROUBLE
NEW YORK.—Two little pigs, presented to an encampment of the unemployed last November, have become big pigs now, and what a problem they are.

"What are we going to do?" asked John B. Clark, camp commander. "They're eating what's left of our food. But they've become our pets; if we killed them the boys couldn't eat them. If we sell them some one else will eat them. I ask you."

YOUTHFUL NET STARS GIVE PROMISE FOR A BIG 1933

Vines Outstanding Player Of 1932, Having Won From Cochet.

By EDWARD B. MOSS.
Executive Secretary, United States Lawn Tennis Association.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9. (AP)—The youthful age of championship winners and the broad geographical distribution of titular honors were the outstanding features of the lawn tennis season of 1932. These factors form a fine basis for the prediction of continued increasing popularity of the game and the advancement of its leading exponents to greater championship honors.

Close to fifty players, representing every portion of the United States, shared in the thirty-odd national title tournament honors on the tennis courts last year. California led with thirteen championship holders; the middle west was second with eleven; and the East daddies.

was third with ten. New England players collected seven; those from the South, three; three titles went to the Southwest racket wielders, and one was captured by a mid-Atlantic section competitor.

In addition, United States players won the men's singles and women's singles in the British championships at Wimbledon, and the French women's singles title.

H. Ellsworth Vines Jr., just out of his teens, was, of course, the outstanding player of the year, both from a national and international standpoint, since he won 3 championships including the United States men's singles and doubles, the British singles, and scored two victories over Henri Cochet, until 1932 acclaimed the premier player of the world.

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody still maintained her position as the world's greatest woman player, being victorious in every competition which she entered.

One of the most encouraging developments of the year in tennis was the notable improvement in championship play and ranking among the players of the middle west. This was particularly true among the junior exponents of the game, as exemplified by Frankie Parker, Helen Fulton, girls' singles champion, and Helen Grawn, girls' indoor singles champion.

The eastern seaboard is a close contestant of California and the middle west in the development of outstanding junior players. Judging from the present trend of junior play, it would appear that the leading championship contenders in the near future would have developed from these three sections, notwithstanding the wide differences in climatic and playing conditions. The south and southwest also are evincing greater competitive interest in tennis and its development work and should the improvement continue apace, one or both sections can be expected to submit candidates for Davis cup honors in the near future.

Golfers Take Advantage of Fair Weather

Many Pampa golfers took advantage of the warm weather yesterday to get out their clubs, polish them up, and chase the little white ball over "hill and dale" at the Country club. As early as 8 o'clock in the morning cars could be seen heading east on Browning avenue.

Several enthusiasts were seen limping around this morning and when asked what was the matter, replied "too much golf yesterday after a long lay-off. Guess I'm not as young as I used to be."

Good scores were made yesterday despite the lack of playing weather during the last month. Country club golfers are looking forward to a big year. New officers will be elected at the annual meeting in April.

Carl Sturgeon was ill yesterday but is able to be at work this morning.

ODDS AND ENDS

In addition to verifying the suspicion that Navy's youthful griders are about two strikes behind any time they start against Army the recent service clash brought out some choice repartee. "Nice landing, soldier," cracked Bill Clark, Middle back, as he brought down Dick Vidal, Army speed ball, early in the game. "O. K., sailor," was the retort. "Wait until you go up next time and we'll see what kind of a three-point landing you can make."

There is nothing accidental about the mellow, golden voice of a British sport broadcaster. There is an assistant whose sole responsibility lies in keeping a flagon filled with rare port wine.

Connecticut has a stringent statute against prize fighting within its borders; also a state athletic commission to see that boxing is properly regulated.

Benny Friedman, hero of countless college and professional football bouts, had to take over the management of the Brooklyn Dodgers to learn about the razor-berry at first hand. Flatbush fans gave the former All-American star both barrels because he played only a few minutes in one of the closing games. . . . Everything was lovely in the P. G. A. according to the best available information, until it was suggested our Ryder Cup players travel to England next class.

PERSONALS

ALLISON IS COMING NEXT

Strong Quintets Will Play Pampa Teams Thursday Evening.

The Harvesters and Harvestettes will play their last home basketball game until January 28 here Thursday night, when they will meet the fast Allison teams. After that they will go on a road trip that will include five games for the Harvesters and three for the Harvestettes.

Upon the return of the teams, six home games will be played before the sectional playoff in the Panhandle Basketball league race. Section winners must be declared by Feb. 14 and these will meet in Canyon Feb. 17 and 18.

Coaches have mapped out practice sessions for this week but they will not be hard ones because of the three games to be played on the latter part of the week. The Harvesters will work on plays, free throws, and a new defense, while the girls will work on formations and getting the ball to the forwards.

Captain Amy Walstad is the only member of the Harvestettes who lettered last year. Coach Harry Kelley has been working under a handicap all season, starting out with a comparatively green team and losing two letter girls before the season got nicely underway.

He is badly in need of the services of tall girls, who are apparently not interested in basketball. His short, fast girls have not been able to compete with the tall forwards and centers of teams played this year. It is not too late for some tall girls to report for practice, Coach Kelley says.

Markets New York Stocks

NEW YORK, Jan. 9. (AP)—Stocks were dragged down by the reactionary tendency of the wheat market today. Bulls attempted to revive last week's advance by bidding up the carrier issues for a time, but found the rest of the list sluggish. The close was heavy, with numerous losses of fractions to more than a point. The turnover was only about 900,000 shares.

Young Bride of Mathewson Boy Killed in Crash

SHANGHAI, Jan. 9. (AP)—Christopher (Christy) Mathewson Jr., son of the famous baseball player, was improving today from serious injuries received in a plane accident which took the life of his bride of two weeks.

His wife, the former Margaret Phillips, of Philadelphia, was taking her flying instructor-husband yesterday when the giant two-motored plane suddenly nose-dived in the river bank on the outskirts of Shanghai.

She died a half-hour later in a hospital where young Mathewson was taken with two broken arms, a broken leg and other injuries.

The couple were married Christmas eve in a double-wedding here. The plane Mathewson was piloting belonged to Dr. T. V. Soong, the minister of finance of the Chinese nationalist government.

Jeby-Battaglia Title Bout Tops Card For Week

NEW YORK, Jan. 9. (AP)—The quest for the world's middleweight championship, a rather doubtful matter since Mickey Walker abandoned the crown to compete in heavier divisions, holds the top place on the nation's fistic program this week with some competition from a featherweight title bout at Chicago Friday when Tommy Paul of Buffalo defends his national boxing association crown against Freddie Miller of Cincinnati.

Ben Jeby, rugged New Yorker, and Frankie Battaglia the slugger from Winnipeg, survivors of an elimination series, are the contestants in Friday's 15-round battle at Madison Square Garden. The New York State Athletic commission has agreed to recognize the winner as champion although Marcel Thil of France is generally considered as the title holder, having the N. B. A. recognition among others.

In their course through the "tournament" Jeby made a record which appears to give him the edge.

GRIFFITH SEES FOUR BIG TASKS BEFORE SENS

CRONIN'S NEW ROLE IS MOST IMPORTANT QUESTION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9. (AP)—Clark Griffith laid down his pinche hands, arched his bushy eyebrows and opined to the newspaper boys that there were four big problems between his Washington Senators and the American league pennant.

With a friendly grin at Frankie Baxter, the bat boy who had been playing a prominent role in the pinche game, Griffith touched a match to his dead cigar and gave the four as:

Refurnishing the catching staff. Joe Cronin, and will he fit into his new and dual role of shortstop and manager?

Development of Rookie Cecil Travis with third base in mind, the job now held by veteran Ossie Bludgett.

A training session at Boloxi, Miss., that will put the Senators in fighting trim and on their toes for opening here with Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics.

Cronin, stepping into the managerial shoes of Walter Johnson, who brought the Senators home in third place last season, will be doing his first trick as player-manager and he's only 26. But Griffith, with memories of Bucky Harris and 1924 and 1925 in his mind, has a lot of faith in Joe.

The club owner, who has earned in organized baseball the title of "The Old Fox" in recent weeks has been up to his swappin' tricks in an effort to build up a winner for Cronin next fall.

In the several trades of the last month, Griffith has sought to build up the batting punch of the team. The most recent deal which Griffith let leak out Saturday brings Luke Sewell of Cleveland here to catch in place of Roy Spencer, who went to the Indians in exchange. Sewell on his record is a bit better at catching than Spencer and each fielded 978 last season.

In Cecil Travis, a big 20-year-old country boy from Riverdale, Georgia, Griffith has the makings of an infielder for whom he turned down $50,000 last year. In 1931, Travis closed 429 in 18 games with Chattanooga, and last year, playing in 152 games, batted his way to an average of .362.

TROTZY ILL

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Jan. 9. (AP)—Leon Trotsky, exiled Russian Bolshevik, was reported seriously ill today at his residence on Prinkipo Island. His secretary, Jan Frankel, has gone to Europe to bring back a foreign specialist to treat Trotsky. The nature of the malady was undisclosed.

Argument Over Girls Fatal To Four Mexicans

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 9. (AP)—Four taxi drivers were shot to death last night in a gun fight which a witness said was precipitated by a dispute involving two girls.

The dead: Ramon Garcia, 24; Martin Ramirez, 26; Dan Villareal, 27; Arturo Hernandez, 27.

The shooting broke out suddenly at a house in an alley adjoining the taxi stand parking lot where the drivers were employed.

Elvira Munoz, occupant of the house, came to police headquarters and related her version of the affair.

She said Garcia and Ramirez, together with three other men, were in her house when Villareal and Hernandez entered with two girls. Garcia and Ramirez started up-lauding Villareal and Hernandez about the girls. Mrs. Munoz told police. Then Garcia attempted to put Villareal out of the house.

When Villareal had passed thru the door, he drew a pistol. Ramirez, still inside the house, drew his pistol. They opened fire simultaneously.

Week's Bible Study Will Begin Tonight

The Rev. H. R. Whately of Haskell preached both sermons at the First Baptist church yesterday and will be here for the week of Bible study which will open this evening at 7 o'clock.

Class periods will be from 7 to 8:30 o'clock, after which a 30-minute study of the book of Romans will be led by Rev. Whately. All church members are urged to attend the classes whether or not they take the examinations.

Subjects and teachers will be as follows: Sunday school manual, last half, Mrs. F. Ewing Leech; Sunday school secretary, R. E. Gailin; New Testament Studies, H. R. Whately; Old Testament Studies, Clifford Solomon; Young People and Adult Departments, Mrs. C. E. Lancaster.

NINE CAUSES FOR CRIME IN LIST OF CHICAGO CRUSADER

Tips on CONTRACT

AFTER THE BIG SLAMS
By TOM O'NEIL

Bridge players are eagerly seeking the increased premiums for grand slams. Their success varies with their skill and luck.

Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Jacoby succeeded with the following:

North
S-9 5 3 2
H-6
D-8 6 4 2
C-Q 9 7 3

Jacoby West
S-A
H-A 10 9 8 4 2
D-A Q J 3
C-J 5

South Dealer
S-Q 10 8 6
H-7 5 3
D-10 9 7
C-K 10 8

With the adversaries passing all the while the Jacobys' bidding went: One heart (west); two spades; three diamonds; four clubs; four diamonds; five hearts; seven hearts.

"Well, Ozzie," asked somebody, "what would have happened had your partner bid four clubs on four or five to the king-queen, instead of four to the ace-low?"

"I would not have waited until sunrise to shoot," he answered.

Al Gould regretted his confidence in the following handsome set of cards adorned with kings, which he dealt to himself:

North
S-8 4
H-Q 8 3
D-J 10 8 4 2
C-J 10 7

West
S-7 3
H-9 5
D-K 9 7
C-K 9 7

Gould East Dealer
S-A K 9 5 2
H-A K
D-A 5 3
C-A 6 4

South
S-Q 10 6
H-J 10 7 6 4 2
D-Q 6
C-5

Could open the auction with two spades, his fair partner offered three clubs and Gould zoomed to seven no trump, which the skeptical gentleman in the south doubted.

South discarded hearts and made a spade trick.

The lure of 150 aces was as irresistible as ever to Philip F. Farley in the national pair tourney of the American bridge league, but he triumphed in the following deal:

Farley North Dealer
S-A Q 7 6
H-A Q 8
D-A 10 9 8 7 6 5 4
C-A K J 10

West
S-K 10 9 5 3
H-K 10 7 6
D-8 2
C-5 4

East
S-J 4 2
H-J 9 5 4
D-5 4
C-Q 9 6 2

Farley opened with two no trump and his partner, Stewart W. Bowens, bid four diamonds. Then Farley went the limit in no trump. A club opening helped him. After playing the ace of diamonds he entered the dummy by means of the queen of diamonds to get five discards. A spade finesse at the end worked.

A tale of woe comes from the ritzy Sutton Place district where Ellsworth Charles had great ideas after dealing these tickets:

North
S-9 7
H-8 6 4 3
D-6 5 2
C-Q 8 6 3

West
S-A J 10 3
H-9
D-J 9 4

East
S-K Q 8 6 5 4 2

D-10 8 7 3
C-None

Charles South Dealer
S-None
H-A K Q J 7 5
D-A K Q
C-A 10 9 2

Charles made the only bid, no less than six hearts right off the bat. He had an idea he should have shot at grand slam. West led the club knave. "Aha," thought Charles. "I cover with the queen from dummy, east naturally should play the king, I take it with the ace and the bid is in, maybe more."

"Crash!" yelled east, trumping. South had to lose another club trick later.

CHURCH

will meet Wednesday afternoon in the homes of various members.

The Wesley Friendship class, Methodist church, will have a kid party Wednesday afternoon at the church.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9. (INS)—One basic cause has given rise to the nation's serious crime problem, in the opinion of Frank J. Loesch, veteran crusader against the underworld and a member of President Hoover's commission on law enforcement.

Speaking before the convention of the National Institute of Mercenary Crime, he listed these as follows:

1. Largely unassimilable immigrants from eastern and southeastern Europe.
2. Existence of slum districts in larger cities.
3. The 18th amendment and prohibition laws.
4. Incompetent, corrupt, and political-ridden police.
5. The automobile, as it has been employed by law-breakers.
6. Dishonesty in high finance.
7. Incompetent and inefficient prosecutors.
8. The negro law-breaker.
9. The decline of religion and authority.

Concerning prohibition, Loesch held it responsible for one-third to one-fourth of the crime wave, pointing to the demoralization of law-enforcement officers and the growth of the gangs.

Touching on the problem of the slums, he declared:

"Means must be begun and persevered in to extinguish slums. It can be done by preventing their further spread and constructing under some form of organization better housing at low rents with clean streets and breathing places in their midst."

Cities must attempt to assimilate their foreign residents by teaching them the English language, citizenship and clean politics, Loesch asserted.

Mrs. Katie Vincent has as her guest her sister, Mrs. J. W. Bunting, of Amarillo, and the latter's son, Jim Bunting of Shattuck, Okla. She also had as her guest yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Jack Vincent and two children, Mary Jim and Jack, of Amarillo.

STRANGE INTERLUDE

This serial story adapted from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture "Strange Interlude" by Eugene O'Neill, directed by Robert Z. Leonard and starring Norma Shearer and Clark Gable, will appear daily in this paper for the next six editions.

INSTALLMENT ONE

The arm that steadied her as the car leaped and pitched on that wild ride from Boston was not a strong arm. Even in the hectic confusion of her thoughts as they raced to her father's death bed, Nina Leeds was conscious of this.

But from the very steadiness with which the speeding car cut through the night along the Post Road she was aware that the two hands that gripped the wheel were strong and confident. Sam Evans, whose chief claim to distinction in her mind was the fact that he had known Gordon when Gordon was the most popular athlete on the college campus, was sitting with her on the back seat. Dr. "Ned" Darrell was driving, his foot heavy on the accelerator, and his hand steady on the wheel.

Nina had received the telegram that afternoon telling her that her father was dying. Darrell, a doctor on the staff of the veteran's hospital where she worked, volunteered to drive her out, and Sam Evans had asked to come along.

From Evans, Darrell had learned various facts about Nina, other things he had found out himself. From Evans he had learned that she was the daughter of Professor Leeds; that she had been violently in love with Gordon, and that only her father had prevented their marriage before Gordon went off to the front. He himself had seen the results of this. Rebelling against her father, Nina had come to work as a nurse at the hospital. Here, almost as if by way of atonement to the dead Gordon, and as punishment for her previous cowardice, she had given her body to several of the war wrecks in her charge until her name became a hospital by-word. He himself had once kissed her. The memory of that kiss lingered with him, although he tried to keep his mind on the pathological aspects of her case rather than on her beautiful body.

Nina bent forward and touched him on the shoulder.

"Turn at the next drive."

He swung the car through white gateposts onto a gravel drive. They drew up before an old, dignified white house with lilac bushes growing on either side of the doorway.

Nina was the first to get out of the car. She rang the doorbell. The maid opened the door. Her cheeks were tear-streaked.

"Oh, Miss Nina—" she began. "I know," Nina said, passing her woodenly, "he's gone, isn't he?"

From the study at the left of the hall came a middle-aged man in a dark suit and a white shirt with a soft, ment J look about his weakly handsome face. This was Charles Marsden, who had known Nina since she was a little baby.

A novelist, he lived his sex life in his books, keeping clear of physical love because of his strong attachment for his mother. In his own way he loved Nina, but was too timid, too inhibited to speak of his passion for her. On her part, she considered him as a faithful dog, an unrelated "uncle," who proved in times of stress more comforting than any lover.

"Hello," she said to him. "He's dead."

"It's too bad. I brought Doctor Darrell. I thought there might be a chance."

Darrell appeared in the doorway behind her with Sam Evans. "This is Charlie Marsden, Ned," she told the doctor, "and this is Sam Evans," she added, nodding toward the young man.

Ignoring their efforts to guide her to a chair, she crossed the room and sat down mechanically in her father's chair at his work table. Marsden looked at her questioning.

"When I said good-bye that night I left it a premonition I would never see him again," Nina said dully.

Suddenly she got to her feet and in the cool, efficient nurse's tone she had learned at the hospital, she asked:

"Is he up-stairs?" Marsden nodded. Nina turned to Darrell. "I'll take you up, Ned. I might as well."

She walked out of the room and Darrell followed her. The two other men could hear them ascending the stairs.

BOMBINGS, KILLINGS, BRING TROOPS TO MINE

Violence that has cost two lives, listed 14 wounded, and brought National Guard troops to the Taylorville, Ill., mine area, was heightened by bombing of the home of John Cordo, union miner. Wreckage of the Corbo home is shown above. The family, who were in the home at the time, narrowly escaped injury. Snipers' shots killed a woman and a man before Illinois troops reached the area.

Stevenson and Johnson Waging Hot Battle for Speakership of House

AUSTIN, Jan. 9. (AP)—The campaign between Coke Stevenson of Junction and A. P. Johnson of Carrizo Springs for the speakership of the house of representatives was the only activity her today in incident to convening of the 43rd

Texas legislature in biennial session.

Both Stevenson, a member of the house for two sessions, and Johnson, a three term member, claimed victory. Each said they had pledged from approximately ninety of the one hundred and fifty members.

There was no indication that Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, who will succeed the incumbent R. S. Sterling, as governor, a week from tomorrow was taking any hand in the speakership election, although partisans of Stevenson claimed she preferred him. Johnson wrote a letter to Mrs. Ferguson, sending her husband, former Governor James E. Ferguson, a carbon copy, pledging his cooperation with the executive department in event of his election.

Ninety-four members of the legislature, which will convene tomorrow for a four-months' term, are novices. Eighty-four members of the house are new and ten members of the senate will take their seats for the first time. There are 150 members of the house and thirty-one senators.

Pending election of a speaker, the first business on docket, Mrs. Jane Y. McCallum, secretary of state, will preside over the house. Senator Grady Woodruff of Decatur, president pro tem of the senate, will call that body to order in the absence of Edgar Witt of Waco, lieutenant governor, convalescing from injuries received in a fall several weeks ago. Witt is in Walter Reed hospital in Washington.

It has been predicted that Senator Walter Woodruff of Houston, a personal friend to Governor Sterling, would be chosen president pro tem of the senate for the session.

In that event, Senator Woodruff would ascend to the governorship. Tomorrow afternoon has been announced as follows: Song, prayer, business meeting; round-table discussion of thrift led by Mrs. Bird; discussion of the question, "Should a child be paid for home tasks?" Mrs. Abernathy; discussion of "Should a child have an allowance?" Mrs. Brady; "Should a child know for what he is saving money?" Mrs. Church; "Should a child spend his own money exactly as he wishes?" Mrs. Baker.

European Conflict Feared as Nations Maintain Huge Armies Despite Plea for Disarmament

By ALFRED TYRHAUER,
International News Service
Staff Correspondent

VIENNA, Jan. 9.—The small countries of Central Europe and the Balkans are maintaining standing armies totalling one million soldiers despite disarmament activities.

The total population of the entire region, comprising five kingdoms and five republics, is about 20 millions less than that of the United States, and yet the "peacetime" forces of these countries are almost ten times bigger than the whole regular army of the United States.

This is in addition to the unofficial armed organizations, which are estimated at 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 men by the various statistics.

The six heirs to the late Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, although Austria and Hungary proper were disarmed maintain almost twice as many men under arms, as the deceased dual empire did.

Poland's army.....270,000
Czechoslovakia.....160,000
Yugoslavia.....120,000
Rumania.....210,000
Hungary's and Austria's armies are limited by the peace treaties to 35,000 and 30,000 equals 75,000, respectively.

The peace strength of the old Austro-Hungarian army was 420,000.

The armies of pre-war Rumania and Serbia to gether totaled only 130,000.

The strongest of all unofficial military organizations is that of Hungary. Its strength is difficult to estimate, but it has assumed a distinctly military character drilled and disciplined by officers of the army.

The rest of the ten states show following statistics: Greece 75,000; Albania 15,000; Bulgaria, limited by the treaties 22,000 and Turkey 125,000. Though Turkey is regarded by many statistics as an Asiatic power, it is nevertheless, still one of the most important factors in the Balkans.

The big armies of these small countries are supported by certain great powers seeking domination in this part of Europe. The linking up of the General Staffs of Poland and the Little Entente, that is Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania, with the French general staff and the Banque de France is an open secret. Hungary, Bulgaria and Albania are, on the other hand, satellites of Rome, while Austria is wavering between the French and Italian spheres of interest, often following Germany's lead.

The game of international politics is played here very much like it was played before the war on the Balkans.

The year 1932 ended by a pact of non-aggression between Poland and Soviet Russia and with the breaking off of similar negotiations between Soviet Russia and Rumania. The Polish government tried to justify the haste, with which the negotiations were concluded in spite of the existing Polish Rumanian military alliance by stating that Poland wished to make her Eastern boundary safe in case of possible conflict with Germany.

These are only instances of the many conflicts threatening the peace of Central Europe. To recall a few of the others: the Yugoslavia Italian, the Yugoslavia Albanian, the Yugoslavia Bulgarian conflicts.
