Ginnings For County Reach 35,761 This Week-End

County Estimate For Season Yield Now 38,000 Bales

Survey Shows Crop About 90 or 95 Percent Picked; Bad Weather Retards Ginning Last Week.

EXPECT ALL TO BE GATHERED BY XMAS

Lubbock Gins First, Slaton Second and Shallowater In Third Place; Influx of Crop Stimulates Trade.

Inclement weather of the past week, coupled with the fact that the finishing touches are being put to most of the cotton fields in this county had its effect on cotton ginnings, the increase this week being approximately 3,000 bales over the previous week, whereas each preceding weekly report has been showing an increase of about 5,000. The total ginnings in the county for the season as shown by tabulation of reports from the ginning companies, Saturday night is shown as 35,761, counting round bales as half.

The report this week includes accurate counts from four rural gins which heretofore have been estimated, namely Estacado, Becton, Woodrow and Acuff, leaving only two in the county on which estimates are made, New Hope and County Line and these and they are estimated on the basis of the reports of the ginning companies. Estacado, the three lowest of the other four rural gins.

90 Percent Picked

On the basis of estimates of correspondents at the various places, the crop is between 90 and 95 percent in, which would fix the ultimate yield in the county at approximately 38,000 bales, as compared with early season estimates of agricultural leaders of 25,000.

The city of Lubbock stepped well into the lead in municipal ginnings this week, with a total of 6,742, according to reports.

Doctor Declares Pneumonia Attack Caused Girl to be Victim of "Depressant Insanity" Ever Since.

(By Associated Press)

LA GRANGE, Tex., Dec. 10.—Laying the ground work for its plea of insanity, the defense in the trial of Mrs. Rebecca Bradley Rogers, charged with robbery of the Farmers National Bank of Bida, about a year ago, introduced a physician, a school teacher and other associates of the 22 year old defendant, at the afternoon session Saturday.

Dr. W. C. Lackey, a Fort Worth physician who attended Mrs. Rogers during an attack of pneumonia when she was a child, was the principal witness of the afternoon. He testified that he believed she was a victim of "depressant insanity" caused by the attack of pneumonia. She had never seemed the same since that time, he said, and had assumed a different posture.

This difference, he asserted, was evidenced in her manner toward him. At times she would speak pleasantly at him and at other times she would stand staring at him like a frightened animal.

Dr. Lackey testified that he knew Mrs. Rogers' father and mother quite intimately. He asserted that Mr. Bradley, a railway mail clerk, was a reclusive and of a retiring disposition. The last time he saw him the doctor stated, was in 1911, when he attended Mrs. Rogers at the time she was a child.

He said he had not seen her since that time. He said he always considered him a little "off."

Mrs. Bradley, Dr. Lackey stated, was "hysterical and neurotic." This evidence was brought out apparently to show that the insanity

Senate approval still is necessary before the award can be made by President Coolidge.

"The bill is passed," Longworth notified his colleagues the minute reading of the measure was concluded and members, instead of voting could only applaud again.

This action came just a few minutes after Lindbergh had been accorded the privilege of the floor.

San Angelo Fray Has Fatal Result For Two Bankers

President and Cashier of Guaranty State Succumb From Wounds; Details of Affair Still Mystery.

(By Associated Press)

SAN ANGELO, Dec. 10.—The tragic shooting in the office of the president and cashier of the Guaranty State bank here shortly before noon Friday which took as its toll William Schneemann, Jr., president and Karl H. Word, cashier and sent to the hospital Ira Swope, assistant cashier, and Mrs. Thelma Walling and Earl Gibson, customers, was as much an enigma tonight as it was Friday noon.

Mr. Schneemann was buried tomorrow afternoon. Relatives of Mr. Word say his body will be taken to Kyle, Texas, for interment, but no announcement of when his body will be removed was made.

Schneemann was conscious for but an hour and a half after he left the operating table in the hospital. Before he lapsed into unconsciousness he said "I hold no ill feeling for Mr. Word. I do not know why he did it."

There was no signed statement made by any of the principals. Swope's story of the shooting is that Word shot him first and then Schneemann.

Swope is expected to live, but his condition is serious. Mrs. Walling and Gibson will be able to leave the hospital in a few days.

DOLLAR JUDGMENT

Jury Awards Lone "Iron Man" to E. G. Lambeth

Reminiscences of an unusual court decision handed down here about 15 years ago were recalled by Judge Charles Muliken, judge of the Ninety-Ninth district court, when E. G. Lambeth, one of the claimants in the case of Brooks and Lambeth vs. R. L. Keeney was awarded damages of one dollar by verdict returned last week. John Keeney, at that time sheriff of what is now Yorktown county, had arrested a fugitive from justice, so the story goes, and while bringing him to Lubbock for safe-keeping, chained him to a windmill one night. The prisoner caught a severe cold, and entered suit against Keeney for mistreatment. The jury awarded the man one dollar damage, the same amount given Lambeth last week. Brooks was awarded judgement of $200 in the case tried here. The suit grew out of alleged breach of contract. There have been but few one dollar judgements here, Judge Muliken said.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Dec. 10—

Poland and Lithuania formally declared themselves at peace at a special session of the council of the League of Nations tonight. They agreed to enter into direct negotiations with each other for the settlement of their differences. This probably means that full diplomatic relations will be restored shortly.

Premier Waldemar, of Lithuania, and M. Zaleski, Polish foreign minister, announced before the council that they accepted the Polish Lithuanian settlement. Jonkneer Beelaerts van Blokland, the Dutch foreign minister, submitted to the council at 10:50 tonight his report recommending that Poland and Lithuania, having declared that peace exists between the two countries, should enter into direct negotiations to restore good relations. The report was adopted by the council.

Among other things the report rules that the Lithuanian protest regarding Poland's treatment of minorities shall be examined by a committee of the League council.

The settlement was reached in one of the briefest and most surprising meetings the council ever held. It was reached from all kinds of social functions, the members sat together for a brief 15 minutes. There was much hand-shaking and exchange of congratulations when the announcement was made that Poland and Lithuania had come to an amicable understanding. The council members as hurriedly dispersed to resume their interrupted social and carnival festivities.

Sherman Bearcats Swamped as Waco Enters Final

Ten Sweaters Are Awarded To Lubbock High School Grid Performers

Touted North Texans Fail to Bother Rampaging Tigers, Who Use Spin Play and Line Bucks for Large Gains

Sherman's Activity Confined To Lone 40-Yard Run; Waco Scores on First Play from Scrimmage.

(By Associated Press) WACO, Dec. 10.—Even Sherman's touted Bearcats could not hold Paul Tyson's rampaging Tigers in the big semi-final clash here this afternoon and the Waco eleven ran roughed over the visiting team, winning by a score of 59 to 0.

Playing on a muddy field with a drizzling rain coming down during the entire battle, the more experienced Tiger eleven ripped off gains almost at will on running plays, leaving their passes for a sunny day that may come some when they meet the Abilene Eagles in the final gridiron battle that will decide the Texas Interscholastic league champion.

At the beginning of the contest today Captain Colling gave the Tigers a scare with his forty yard return on the kickoff but the Cats did not get past the 25 yard line, where they were held for downs. On the first play from scrimmage, Maurice Pierce, Tiger fullback, ripped off 75 yards and a touchdown. From that time on it was a parade of golden-jerseyed lads down the field.

Sherman Offense Snuffed Out
The Sherman offense, heralded as one which could not be stopped, never advanced the ball within Waco's 25 yard line and after the first minute of play never carried it past the 50 yard line. Six first downs did the Sherman boys make, all coming deep in Sherman's territory, many for the first one of the game. After that one, however, the Sherman offense flickered and died.

Sherman came to Waco coached to stop the spin play, made famous by Pop Warner and improved upon by Coach Paul Tyson. Waco tried the play with devastating effect as soon as the Tigers got the ball, although they didn't get it so very quickly. In fact, the ball was on Waco's 25 yard line when Sherman reluctantly surrendered it.

Changing the usual procedure of utilizing the spin play, Glover, who in the past usually has carried the ball, gave the ball to Pierce, fullback, the line opened in the center like a huge gate, and Pierce bounded through and raced behind faultless interference 75 yards for a touchdown. It was perhaps, the most sensational play of the contest.

Waco was master of the Sherman fate throughout the game, although on the defensive in the early minutes of the fracas. The Tiger line was impregnable for the most part while the Tiger backs, showing the wizardry in ground gaining which has marked Tyson's teams for many years, filtered through the Sherman line and around the Sherman end almost at will.

FAME FOR CATCHERS

Three Receivers Gained By Catching Walter Johnson.

Walter Johnson, aside from winning great fame for himself over the 26 years he starred as the pitching ace of the Washington staff, helped to win plenty of glory for the catchers.

It was only natural that Johnson's receiver should look to a certain extent in the spotlight that was constantly turned on Walter.

The first catcher to handle Johnson's shots was "Nabby" Street. Walter classes him as the best catcher he ever had. Next came Eddie Almsmith then Muddy Ruel.

Johnson used a fast ball almost entirely when Street handled his delivery and in those days his speed was terrific.

Let Hal Baysinger Do It, Is Cry Of Syracuse Fans

HAL BAYSINGER

It's been a rather sad season for Syracuse, what with a lone victory over Georgetown mixed in with losses to Penn State and Nebraska and a tie game with Ohio Wesleyan, but there has been one ray of sunshine even in these reverses.

That has been the play of Hal Baysinger, Syracuse's brilliant young quarterback, who has thrilled Orange fans so many times this year. Syracuse is boasting its sterling signal-caller for all-American honors. While he can hardly be called the best quarterback in the nation this season, he no doubt will rate among the best.

ENTER SEA MASKS
NEW YORK.—Gas masks now are provided for sea-sick passengers on the North German Lloyd liner Statagart and she came into harbor the other day with the report that 80 per cent of the usual sickness was relieved on this trip by a device perfected by the ship's surgeons. It is nothing but a mask that supplies good, fresh oxygen with the tang of solid earth in it.

Frog Banquet To Be Held Monday
Noted Football Men Will Address Group at Fete Tomorrow Night; Captain Will Be Selected.

PORT WORTH, Dec. 10.—Texas Christian University's annual banquet honoring its varsity football team will be held Monday night at 7 o'clock at the Fort Worth Club. The freshman football squad also will be guests at the affair, marking the beginning of what likely will become a yearly practice of jointly honoring the athletes.

President E. M. Waits of the University, Athletic Director L. C. "Pete" Wright, members of the athletic council, Varsity Coaches Matty Bell and Ed Kolonie and Freshman Coaches "Dutch" Meyer and "Hobo" Carson and several other university officials will be special guests.

The captain of the 1928 varsity will be elected, letters awarded to varsity men and numerals to freshmen. The program is in charge of Athletic Director Wright.

Meanwhile, the two biggest basketball squads over to report to T. C. U. coaches are busily preparing for hard schedules which begin immediately after the Christmas holidays. Varsity Coach Bell has a squad of about 20 men working out daily while Fresh Coach Meyer is putting 30 men through conditioning workouts every afternoon.

A decision other than an incomplete pass would have just about won the old ball game for Southern California, instead of defeat by a one-point margin.

Morley Drury Real Star
Two of the best backfield stars in the game, Christy Flanagan of Notre Dame and Morley Drury of California, showed their stuff to advantage in the clash between these two great teams.

I want to go on record right here by stating that any All-American team that fails to include Morley Drury in its backfield will be lacking something. He's one of the best football players I've seen in a long while.

Drury can run like Red Grange, he can punt like Kipke, he can hit the line very much like Jostling, he passes like Gusterbush and he's a whole on defense. He's a wonder. Everything the coach expects have said about him is O. K. with me now that I have seen him perform.

"Just his regular game," was the word of Pop Warner of Stanford as he marveled at Drury's remarkable all-around performance.

And Christy Flanagan, by the way, performed in like manner, although he was favored with an occasional rest while Drury carried the ball four out of every five times.

Mail This Week to Help Postoffice

Wrap Well, Address Plainly and Pack Securely—Are Suggestions of Postmaster Vaughan.

"Wrap well, address plainly to street and number, pack securely and by all means mail early," were the instructions handed out by Postmaster John L. Vaughan yesterday as his Christmas mail began to descend upon the local post-office.

"The local office is well prepared to meet the mail rush if the patrons will only send it to them early," Mr. Vaughan said. "We did not receive any Christmas mail during the past week, and could not have disposed of a goodly portion of the city's greeting cards had we had them on hand."

"Every effort will be made to give you efficient and prompt service, but please remember that there is a limit to human endurance," he said.

A receiving station will be maintained by the office at the Hemmick-Price store beginning December 15. Three windows will be maintained at the main office and the Tech branch will be run full capacity to take care of the mail at the office.

Mr. Vaughan's list of aids by which the patrons can cooperate with the office includes: prompt signing of insured and special delivery packages; presentation of notices for parcels; orderly mailing and early mailing.

Question Right of Senate in Probing Origin of Report

Mexican Ambassador Challenges Committee Right to Call Witnesses In Quiz On Hearst News.

(The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Authority of the special senate committee to summon Mexican consular officers in its investigation of charges in the Hearst newspaper that a fund of $1,200,000 was raised for four United States senators was challenged tonight by Manuel

G. Telles, the Mexican ambassador to Washington.

The ambassador's statement was made after he had been advised officially that the committee was planning to summon Arturo M.

Elias, Mexican consul general at

New York, and half brother of President Calles, between whom most of the purported correspondence relating to the senators appeared to have passed.

"In my opinion Elias will not come to Washington at the summons of the senate committee,"

Ambassador Telles said. "He will not be obligated to do so because he can stand on his rights of immunity under international law."

The ambassador said that while there was no treaty of commerce and amity between the United States and Mexico, which usually contains a provision giving consular officers immunity from court processes, it was an established practice under international law that such officers were immune from subpoenas.

"The embassy has made two formal denials of the authenticity of the documents," the ambassador added, "and has no further comment to make thereon. The senate has obligated itself to investigate the documents and as far as I am concerned this is purely an affair of the senate."

State department officials appear to hold with the ambassador that there is every rule of international custom and practice against summoning consular officers before even senate committees, but some senators are known to disagree with that proposition and it was indicated today that the committee would seek to obtain the presence of Elias.

Congress Belies Fearful Portent, And Looks Serene

Although Outwardly Calm, Plenty of Dynamite Seen Underneath by Those Looking for Trouble.

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Believing momentarily the signs and portents that have forecast a session torn by legislative and political storm, the new congress ended its first week tonight wearing an air of confident serenity.

While the senate was taking a day off, the house opened its Saturday's deliberations in a spirit of perfect fellowship by greeting and honoring Colonel Lindbergh. Gathered in, unexpectedly from a nearby corridor, blushing and almost overwhelmed, the ace of aviators was welcomed at the speakers' rostrum, and unanimously voted a congressional medal of honor. Then the members returned to the session, now passing through the earlier, better stages of its legislative journey, and occupied the remainder of the day exchanging statistics across the party aisle.

A good part of the house missed the colonel and the tax debate that followed his exit. Working under rules that required only 100 of the 435 members for a quorum, the leaders frequently would have found even less than the requisite number on hand if they really had counted noses. Many such Saturday afternoons are used by members to catch up with work at their offices, and regular week-end trips to their homes have not been unknown among representatives who live in nearby states.

Plenty Dynamite There.
But if there was little agitation on the surface as the week came to its end, there was plenty of dynamite underneath. The new congress now has technically before it all of those legislative subjects which will furnish the fighting points of the session. The McNary-Haugen bill, in slightly different form, came back to the senate's waiting list yesterday, with Senator McNary's name again affixed to it, and the Curtis-Crisp bill of last session again was presented today in the house. Appropriations and taxes already are in the process of actual consideration, and the flood relief problem is just around the corner. A "Missouri plan" for flood control was added to the calendar today when Representative Dyer put in a bill like that presented yesterday by his fellow member of St. Louis, Senator Hawes, proposing appropriations of a round billion dollars in place of the less than $300,000,000 suggested by President Coolidge.

The senate's household troubles, which have provided several days of debate thus far, have only reached the stage of an armistice today. The Reed slush fund committee met and prepared to fight all over again the question of admitting Vane and Smith to senatorships. A conquest over some places on the state of senate officials also is threatened, and the new committee which is to inquire into certain Mexican government appropriations, alleged to have been designed for the pockets of United States senators, is drawing up subpoenas for witnesses to be heard next week.

But the goddess of political harmony may take heart in the circumstances that the Lindbergh medal of honor proposal, approved today by the house, is likely to be the first actual legislative project to pass the seventieth congress. This is one bill against which no senate filibuster is expected.

Young Leader Of Chinese Is Back

Chiang Kai-Shek, Romantic Nationalist Chieftain Once More Takes Stage, This Time as Civilian.

(By Associated Press)
SHANGHAI, Dec. 10.—Chiang Kai-shek, romantic young generalissimo of the nationalists before his resignation several months ago, is back on the Chinese stage again. This time he appears in a civilian role as leader of the nationalist movement and not as "generalissimo," a title under which he swept from Canton northward to the Yangtze valley in 1926, bringing Hankow and Shanghai under the nationalist banner.

Today party leaders, faced with the task of healing the split in the nationalist ranks, so fatal to their drive on Peking, agreed to Chiang Kai-shek's again assuming active leadership of the movement. He was drafted unanimously by the leaders as the man around whom all the various factions could rally.

Chiang Kai-shek, who formerly was married to Miss Meiling Soong, Wellesley graduate and sister of the widow of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, the Chinese republican leader, will not resume his title of generalissimo. It is expected he will take a civilian title. By this means, it was said, he will avoid taking a position akin to a dictatorship such as is exercised by Marshal Chang Tso-lin, the northern leader, a situation that all of those at today's conference want to avoid.

Even though he will not resume the military title, it was stated, Chiang Kai-shek will again assume direction of nationalist military affairs centralizing on a new campaign against the north—this time, assuming the drive he was conducting when he resigned because of the split in the nationalist regime.

WOMAN SELLS WHEAT

Is One of First of Sex To Be Selling Agent

AMARILLO, Dec. 10 (AP).—Many a man has appointed his wife as his purchasing agent, but it remained for the wheat growers of Texas to choose a woman to sell their grain.

Miss Grace Webster, secretary and treasurer of the Texas Wheat Growers' Association, handled millions of bushels of wheat—which meant millions of dollars—following the harvest of this crop.

Her direction of the co-operative marketing enterprise was so successful that the farmers belonging to the association placed in her hands this winter an additional responsibility. They decided to let her market their coarse grains as well as wheat.

Miss Webster's age is in the early 20's.

Prepare to Open On Contempt Quiz Again Tomorrow

Kidwell Becomes Central Figure, Being Slated to Take Stand Monday for First Testimony.

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—With Edward J. Kidwell, alleged talkative juror in the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy case, again a central figure, government attorneys were busy today arranging their procedure at resumption of the hearing Monday of the criminal contempt proceedings against Harry F. Sinclair, William J. Burns, and their associates. Kidwell will be summoned as a government witness.

Repeatedly he has tried to get before Justice Siding of the District of Columbia supreme court his denial of affidavits made by Don K. King, a newspaper reporter, and J. Ray Akers, a former street car conductor, that he talked too freely about the case which ended in a mistrial. To be called as a government witness would accomplish his purpose to some extent, though objections might prevent much of his denial getting into the records.

For the most part interest in the contempt proceedings centered today around the expected returns to the stand Monday of C. G. Ruddy, Philadelphia manager for the Burns detective agency.

Ruddy had charge of the surveillance of the conspiracy jury by detectives, employed by Harry F. Sinclair.

Defense counsel have contended during the proceeding that there was nothing unlawful in the surveillance as long as no juror was conscious that he was being shadowed. The government insists that the mere shadowing was contempt of court, but has also introduced a report of a detective showing he talked to Kidwell's father.

Ruddy, who already has testified freely, probably will be turned over to the defense for cross-examination Monday afternoon, he is expected to elaborate upon his direct testimony that his instructions from Henry Mason Day, a business associate of Sinclair, who hired him, and from his superior, W. Sherman Burns, were that no members of the shadowing squad should approach or annoy any member of the jury.

District Attorney Gordon intends to have additional reports of the detectives read into the record Monday. He believes that he will be able to finish presentation of the government's case during the coming week.

NEGROES INCREASE

Figures Show Half Million Is Yearly Growth

CHICAGO, Dec. 10 (AP).—Based on the present birth rate and subtracting the prevalent death rate, the negro population of the United States will increase by 2,000,000 every ten years, says Dr. William H. Walsh, executive secretary of the American Hospital association.

Figures on the nation's negro population were compiled for the hospital association by Allan LeRoy Locke, professor of philosophy and sociology of Howard University, Washington, D. C.

Dr. Walsh declares negro hospitalization in the United States has become acute. The minimum requirement for a community, he pointed out, is one hospital bed for every 500 population, but there are only 187 hospitals for negroes in the country, or one bed to each 2,686 inhabitants.

KIDNAPED PRISONED
That Is Charge Which Man At Edinburg Must Face

EDINBURG, Tex., Dec. 10 (AP).—Joe Garza, former assistant jailer in Edinburg, charged with kidnaping a federal prisoner escaped into Mexico, will face federal court in Brownsville Monday. Constable A. R. Baker of Edinburg is cited to appear for releasing the prisoner after his return and for taking him back across the border to Mexico.

Garza is alleged to have made the prisoner a trusty sometime ago. Taking advantage of his partial liberty, the man escaped from H. J. Baker county jail and escaped into Mexico. It was then that Garza learned of his mistake and went over the Rio Grande after his man. Learning of the case Constable Baker released the prisoner, carried him back to Mexico and turned him over to authorities at Reynosa.

PROTEST LISLE HOSE

Plea for Silk Stockings Is Unheeded In Wyoming

GLENROCK, Wyo., Dec. 10 (AP).—Some of the high school girls of Glenrock, required by the school board to wear uniform garb, are protesting that the lisle hose prescribed as a part of the costume is unheeded.

The board is standing firmly behind its decree ordering that personal taste in dress must give way to uniform garb composed of black shirts, white middle blouse, black hose and shoes, and the rule has taken effect despite the contention of some of the girls that it is unfair not to apply it to feminine teachers as well.

The court, composed of Judges Clegg, Lusk and Clegg, affirmed the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The commission had previously held that the original cost method was the proper one for valuing railroads. The court's decision is a significant victory for the railroads, which have been fighting the commission's attempt to use the replacement cost method.

upon which the defense is depending for acquittal of the young defendant, is hereditary.

On cross-examination Dr. Luckey admitted that last week was the first time he had examined or observed Mrs. Rogers since 1921.

C. A. Wheeler, former assistant attorney general under Dan Moody at the time Mrs. Rogers was an employee of the attorney general's office, testified that he "thought Betty (Mrs. Rogers) was queer." One thing that impresses him was that, she often came to work an hour earlier than was required.

Work is Described

Several of the employees of the State Historical association, of which Mrs. Rogers was a member and active organizer, told of her zeal in attempting to broaden the scope of the organization to state wide proportions. This fell through, however, they said.

Miss Mamie Brightwell, Fort Worth school teacher who taught Mrs. Rogers in 1916, declared she considered the girl queer. She would become intensely interested in certain subjects, she said, and then all of a sudden would drop them, being all her enthusiasm apparently without cause.

Following Miss Brightwell's testimony court was adjourned until Monday morning.

SLUG GUARD WITH PIECE OF PIPE

HUNTSVILLE, Texas, Dec. 10 (AP)—Four prisoners, two serving long sentences, attacked and seriously injured Emmett Appleton, a guard at the state prison here while they were being transferred to the Eastland state farm Saturday. The men who escaped are: Richard Kaylor, serving 10 years for burglary; Alfred Lamberson, 2 years; Wilbur George Miller, 3 years; Russell county.

The attack occurred 12 miles west of Huntsville. Appleton was struck with a short length of iron pipe and was beaten to the unconsciousness. He was thrown into the road where a passing autoist found him and brought him here. The convicts escaped in the machine Appleton was driving and up to tonight had not been located.

Cotton Yield

though an appreciable decline is shown over the previous week. The city of Slanton with five gins reported a total of 5,738 bales with three community gins at Posey, Union and McClung. In that city's immediate territory, reporting 3,614 bales, the gins center takes a good lead over the rest of the county.

Shallowater with two gins, continued its lead over all others with 5,656 bales, and according to the correspondent there another 566 bales will be ginned this season. Hales reported a total of 4,517. Two gins at Monroe reported 1,136.

As far as the east part of the county, from where a definite count has not been secured previously, took the lead on strictly community gins where only one is located with a total of 1,700 bales with Hurlwood next in order showing 1,191.

The gin in the Canyon community reported 1,453, with Wolfarth showing 586.

Estimado, Woodrow and Beeton, from where previous definite count has not been secured have ginned 763, 614, and 560 respectively. On the basis of the average of these three, the other two rural County Lines and New Hope will have turned out 600-1,150 bales, believed ultra-conservative for they are both in heavy cotton producing sections.

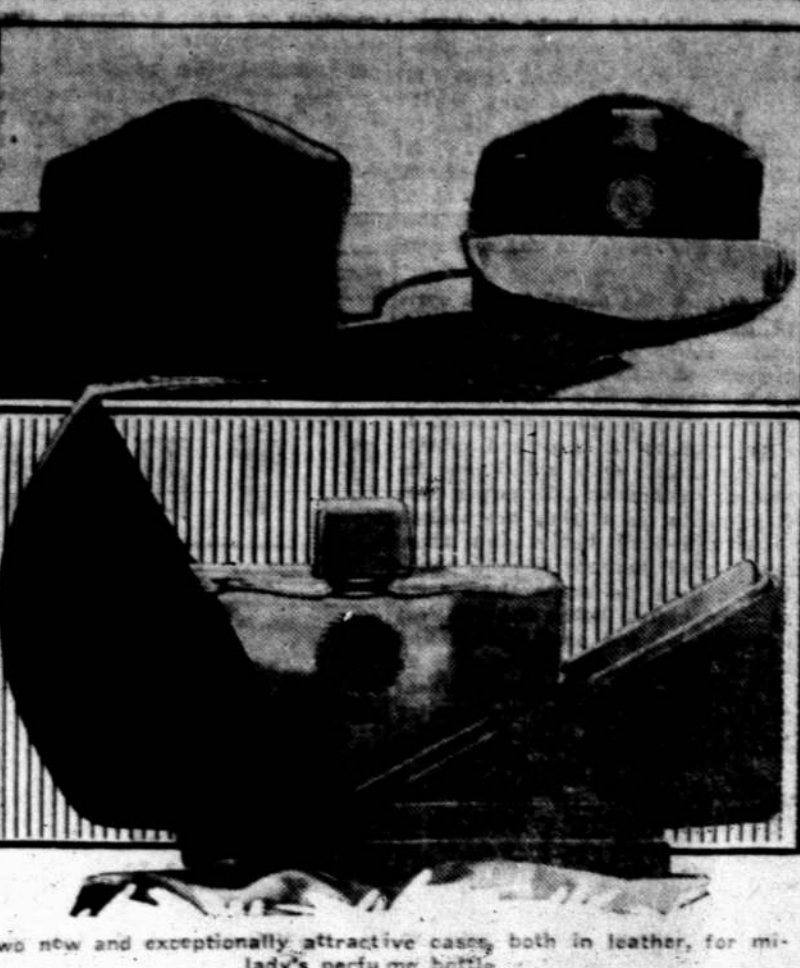

While the bulk of picking is over, and farmers are now turning to "shucking" a quick and economical method of finishing up the harvest, it is believed that with continued fall weather, as has prevailed generally throughout the entire fall, the entire crop will be harvested by Christmas. The shucking, while it serves in a measure to depreciate the market value of the cotton, is accepted as supplying the best finishing machine.

The crop has had its effect on the general Christmas trade, which is reflected in steadily rising bank deposits at all points in the county, and in the literal rush of buying that prevails for the Yuletide season. Stores in this city are jammed to capacity each Saturday, with an exceptional amount of buying being done on week days.

MORE TROUBLE FOR THE GOP

With Vice President Dawes removing his name from the slate of presidential candidates next year, the republican party finds its problem more complicated. When Mr. Coghlan uttered his now famous statement that he did not choose to serve again many of his ardent followers looked to Mr. Dawes as the "next best bet." Although Mr. Dawes openly urged that the republican party nominate ex-Governor Lowden of Illinois, one observation is obvious—his refusal to become a candidate strengthens the possibility of Senator Borah being selected.

In many respects Mr. Dawes and Mr. Borah represent the extremes in party policies, but on one plank they are in harmony. That is, they are both opposed to the "New Deal" program. Mr. Borah's political power is bound to swing to Borah. Both Borah and Lowden are "western farmer candidates." Coghlan and Dawes both suited big business in the east. The conservative administration, election of the party is still holding for a candidate—Amarillo News-Globe.

WHEN EM Hove wrote "The Story of a Country Town," he faced plenty of discouragement in getting it published. The Kansas "Star" first to one of the leading publishers of that day and it was refused.

"It had been sent to six or seven others," says Hove, "and returned each time. I decided to print it myself, being the editor and owner of a daily paper." The "Star" (Chicago, Kans. Globe), with job office attached.

"The type was set by a man named Kelley, with whom I had worked as a printer long before in various towns of the west. Kelley was an old soldier, but not much of a fighter, as he often told me he played tennis in the regimental band."

"As Kelley set the type fit was a new font of minion purchased for that purpose. The printing was done four pages at a time on job press. The sheets were run off, and when the sheets were ready, a local bindery bound them in cases, purchased in St. Louis."

The story was written under adverse circumstances. Hove left the work almost entirely at night, on the kitchen table, where stood a kerosene lamp, in the house where he still lives today.

"I had little children then, lovable and noisy," he says, "and it was my custom to retire to the kitchen for quiet and work on the story after a hard day's work on a daily newspaper."

Today the story is being "dolled up" by publishers who at last have come to realize its value as a landmark in native letters. We are glad to hear Hove has a good story when he saw it, even if he had written it himself.

Chinese authorities barred the film "The Big Parade." Probably they think the people of China ought to be satisfied with home products.

face head winds or other adverse air conditions.

Should Colonel Lindbergh find conditions suitable, he will take a direct compass route from Washington, spending over Providence, R.I., Boston, and Detroit, Va. Knoxville, Knoxville and Chattanooga, Tenn., the northwest corner of Georgia and northern Alabama to Jackson, Miss.

To Touch Point Isabel.

Jackson probably would be reached about midnight, and he might point for the Gulf of Mexico from that point or fly further westward over Lake Charles, La., to Galveston and thence to Point Isabel near Brownsville, Texas.

At Point Isabel, he would turn down the gulf coast to Tampico, and thence across the state of Hidalgo to Mexico City.

His bad weather route, as outlined by Major Burwell, would avoid the southern Appalachian mountains and take him from Roanoke to western North Carolina to Atlanta and thence to Montgomery, where he would point for the Gulf of Mexico at Mobile, probably following the coast line to Tampico.

Ready for Emergency.

The engine which has carried Colonel Lindbergh's plane from San Diego to Paris and on a 22,000 mile flight over the United States is somewhat worn and will require more gasoline than when first put into service, Major Burwell said, adding that the flier would carry 250 gallons of gasoline and 15 gallons of oil.

Although not contemplating a forced landing, Colonel Lindbergh is preparing for such contingency and the plane will be stocked with two canteens of water and a week's supply of concentrated food.

Weather reports have been ordered beginning tomorrow from various cities along the route.

Major Burwell said that the tentative plans call for Colonel Lindbergh to take off about 10 o'clock Wednesday. In spite of previous denials, and that he was expected to make the trip in about 24 hours.

The flier already has examined the field with a view to planning a take-off under varying wind conditions.

The sense of smell, I believe, is as important as that of sight, hearing or touch, and a well-dressed woman should flatter all senses agreeably.

I have often noticed that some otherwise very smart women were totally devoid of a discriminating sense when it came to choosing their perfume. They would select one usually very expensive—which detracted from, rather than added to their charm. This I found resulted more often than not from the fact that the essence they had chosen did not blend with the fragrance of their skin.

The skin of a blonde blends better with the essence of some flower or any perfume in which the scent of flowers predominates.

Dark women may adopt a much heavier and headier perfume, one in which musk or amber enters for a large part, that is to say, the more Oriental essences.

For a woman the art of perfuming herself is a subtle one. It happens sometimes that she perfumes herself so lavishly as to spoil the effect of charm provoked by the sense of sight.

By using more or less perfume a totally different impression can be acquired, just as a color dress or one of range completely changes a face.

Need I add that a refined woman should banish all eccentricity from her perfume as from her dress? She must perfume herself with the same discretion, taste and distinction that she displays in her clothes.

There are some exceedingly clever women who can adapt their perfume and their make-up to suit the varying circumstances and environment in which they expect to find themselves. But this is an art unto itself, and very rare.

CHICAGO—George Butler, who had an eye for business, decided to go into the tow-rope market. He bought up discarded rope, cut it into lengths, treated it to make it weather-proof, and sold it to motorists.

One of the motorists who bought a Butler tow-rope tried to use it to pull his car up an embankment. The rope broke, the car smashed and the owner sued Butler for $100.

Butler felt pretty badly about it and decided to commit suicide. How? Why, with one of the tow-ropes, of course. Next morning the janitor found Butler with a broken eye and an unbroken neck. Another tow-rope had parted, and the inventor still lives.

But he answered the all-important question vigorously, "I do absolutely," he said when asked whether he took Miss Frances Richardson for his lawfully wedded wife.

Lubbock Post Not Enthusiastic Over Legion 'Dry' Vote

Legion Leaders Intimate Poll Would Not Be In Accord with Objects and Ideals of Body.

The proposal of Edward E. Spafford, national commander of the American Legion, that a nationwide poll on the wet and dry issue is to be taken among ex-service men on a demerit to major and political leaders "as a true interpretation of the sentiment of the national service men's organization," apparently is to meet a stumbling block in Allen Bros. Post of the Legion here.

Officials of the Post, while not yet committing themselves squarely on the proposal, have intimated that such is not in keeping with their conception of the objects and ideals of the Legion, and that such would not be a true indication of the general existing spirit among war veterans, regardless of the outcome.

One or two of the official personnel of the local post, in discussing the proposal of Mr. Spafford, offered the suggestion that his statements had been misinterpreted regarding the notion that the eighteenth amendment had never been approved by ex-service men of the post. In his defense, they explained, that he probably meant by inference that the organization is for strict law enforcement, regardless of questions at stake.

In this connection it was mentioned that the Post is to meet here Monday night, and that this latest move on the part of the national commander will come in for considerable discussion, with the possibility that definite action through some kind of a resolution will be taken to inform the sentiment of the members of the local unit of the Legion. The meeting will be held in the Temple Hotel building, beginning at 7:30 and full representation of the membership is anticipated.

Xmas Carols To Be Sung At Tech

Program At Gymnasium To Usher In Christmas Programs For Lubbock; Public Is Invited.

Heretofore the third annual observance of the coming of Christmas by the college students, the sound of two trumpets will usher in the Christmas Carol Singing which will be held at the Tech gymnasium this afternoon at 5:30. Following the singing of the traditional hymns, a brass band will render, "Adeste Fideles."

The choir will be followed by a program, "The Christmas Carol," which will be followed by the singing of the hymns and the adoration of the wise men.

Following the tableau, the audience will join in singing a number of the Christmas Carols.

The program will be in charge of C. W. R. Wachsmuth, of the music department and Miss Anna J. Pennington, of the public speaking department.

Hope for Tech To Land Conference Berth Is Yet Held

Freeland Declares Chances of School Much Better Than Reports Indicated; Two Conference Games.

"I have just this much to say: Tech's chance of getting into the Southwest conference is much brighter than the mere report of last week would indicate."

This was the encouraging statement made by Coach E. Y. Freeland of the Tech last night following the return from the Southwest conference session at Dallas, where Tech's application for admittance was reported to have been disposed of with the assurance that the conference would not be enlarged at this time.

Mr. Freeland said that a number of names had been scheduled but that since the athletic council had not adopted the schedule, as yet, it would not be made public at this time.

He intimated, however, that the Southwest conference teams would be met during the season, and that the stronger teams played in the season just past would again be rivals of the Black and Red in 1939.

Referring to the conference application, Coach Freeland said that the attitude of Conference officials was, to him, very encouraging for the possibility of Tech's being admitted at a later time.

Coach Freeland was a speaker at the banquet given by Fort Worth Area clubs for high school grid stars of that city. Also on the speakers' program were Coach Fred and Coach E. T. C. U. Littlefield of Texas; Morrison of S. M. U. and Billie of A. and M.

CHOCOLATE STAINS

To remove cocoa or chocolate stains, soak in cold water before washing in tepid suds and drying in the sun.

Cranberries, whether made into sauce, jelly or jam, should have the finest bit of salt added to increase their flavor.

Tech Faculty To Assemble And Publish History Of Plains

Definite Subject For Each Chapter Assigned; "Llano Estacado" Designed To Refute Popular Idea Of Plains

Granbery And Horne Will Edit Work And Faculty Experts To Gather Data By First Of Year

"Llano Estacado," an authentic story of the far famed Staked Plains of Texas, is to be published in the spring, the first purely academic book of its kind.

A volume that may do much to refute the popular idea that the Staked Plains of Texas are inhabited by little other than roving herds of long-horned cattle and countless bunches garbed in picturesque costume, this book will tell of the past, present and contain some promise of the future anticipated for this section.

Granbery and Horne Editors

J. C. Granbery and Cecil Horne, of the Technological College, are to be editors of this publication and men and women of the faculty have been asked to contribute chapters on definite subjects, authorities in the various fields having been chosen in order to be sent to the publisher. President Paul W. Horn is to write an introduction for this volume, which is to be published in two editions, one an inexpensive book, bound in paper and the other in cloth.

It is to be in by the first of the year, and after extensive editing is to be sent to the publisher. Books are expected to be off press sometimes during the week, Dr. Granbery said Friday.

All of those asked to write chapters have not indicated their willingness.

Typical Sketches

Miss Marie Delaney, associate professor of art in the college, is to draw sketches, typical of this section, to be placed over chapter headings in the book and numerous illustrations will be used in the compilation, according to press statement.

The book is to open with a history of the South Plains, written by Mrs. Laila Boone, history teacher at the Tech and pioneer in this section, who has made a comprehensive study of past events and conditions here.

Dr. Leroy Patton, head of the department of geology, has been asked to contribute a chapter on geology, structures, and A. H. Leitch, dean of the school of agriculture, has been asked to write a discourse on "Agriculture."

Other chapters, with the names of those who have been asked to write them are as follows:

Engineering, William J. Miller, dean of the school of engineering; architecture, Edgar Shelton, associate professor of architectural engineering; music, W. R. Waggoner, head of the department of music; mining, Miss Lucille Gill, instructor in geology; home life, Margaret Weeks, dean of the school of home economics; government, W. A. Jackson, head of the department of history; economic life, F. Condray, professor of economics and business administration; education, A. W. Evans, head of the department of education; athletics and recreation, E. Y. Freeland, head coach and professor of physical education; religious life, J. M. Mason, dean of the school of liberal arts.

Literature, R. A. Mills, professor of English; chemical resources, Dr. W. L. Read, head of the department of chemistry; livestock, dairy and poultry, W. L. Stangel, head of the department of animal husbandry; cotton mills, E. W. Camp, head of the department of textile engineering; horticulture, Charles H. Mahoney, head of the department of horticulture.

There is to be a chapter on climate and one on industry, with particular emphasis on oil, but no one has been solicited to write these late last week.

"This book will appeal, we think, to people in other sections of the world as well as to those of this district," Dr. Granbery said Friday.

Promises On Present Facts

Some of it is to be promise of what may be done, a promise based on facts concerning what is here, he said.

While the book is not to be in the form of propaganda and may be branded as "chamber of commerce literature," Dr. Granbery continued, it is thought that chambers of commerce and such organizations will find much use in the book.

PROPOSED POLL OF LEGION ON DRY LAW

SPokane, Wash., Dec. 10 (AP)—A poll for a national poll of opinion on the question of prohibition is being conducted by the National Convention of the United States Legion in the opinion of General James A. Drain, past national commander of the organization.

LAWYER THOUGH BLIND

Fort Worth Youth Although Handicapped, Took Exam

FORT WORTH, Dec. 10 (AP).—Although handicapped by blindness, Marvin Shannon, son of County Judge and Mrs. M. D. Shannon, of Fort Worth, has passed the state bar examination and has been licensed to practice law in Texas. He was one of the eight who successfully made passing grades, 32 having taken the test.

The youth is a student of the University of Texas and will receive his degree next June. Soon after he was stricken with blindness as a result of illness, he went to the state institute for the blind at Austin and after being graduated from there entered the state university.

Democrat Urges Party Eliminate Electoral College

Plan Permits 13 States To Name Nominee, Minor Says In Fostering Move For Popular Election

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Because of votes of 13 of the larger states alone can elect a president of the United States in the electoral college, democrats will be asked to sponsor a revision of the constitution to authorize popular election of presidents at the next national committee meeting January 12.

Henry Minor, democratic national committeeman from Mississippi, an authority on democratic history, has prepared the proposal to lay before the committee.

Minor has collected data to show that the votes in the electoral college of 13 states can defeat the will of the other 35 states. The 13 states are: New York, 45; Pennsylvania, 34; Illinois, 29; Ohio, 24; Texas, 20; Massachusetts, 18; Minnesota, 15; Indiana, 15; Michigan, 15; New Jersey, 14; Iowa, 13; Kansas, 10; Connecticut, 7.

There are 531 votes in the electoral college.

"Thus 13 states," Minor says, "by a majority of one vote in each can elect a president over another candidate carrying the other 35 states unanimously."

"It is easily possible, indeed it may become probable, that on some great economic question of overwhelming importance 15 or 16 of the densely populated manufacturing and commercial states, carried by small majorities, may in a presidential election over-ride the decision of double that number of states containing twice their population and four times their area, and thus (this is mere fact) over-ride the will of the majority of three-fourths of the electorate."

"This system came very near substituting Burr for Jefferson in 1800; it probably kept Jackson out of the presidential chair in 1824; it kept the democratic Tilden's election in 1876 and Cleveland's reelection in 1888. It easily may cost the democrats the presidency again."

Interscholastic League Popular

Enrollment of Texas Schools Goes Forward Rapidly; January 15 Closing Date Lining with Circuit.

AUSTIN, Dec. 10.—Enrollment of Texas schools in the interscholastic league is going forward rapidly at this time, according to Roy Bedichek, chief of the League bureau of the University of Texas. January 15 has been set as the closing date for enrollment in the league contests for this year, Mr. Bedichek said.

There are now enrolled in the interscholastic league 3,000 schools; however, Mr. Bedichek expects fully 4,500 schools to enroll for some part of the general work of the league before the closing date. There have been about 200 schools which participated in the state football contests and about 1,000 schools are expected to enter in basketball.

From among the approximately eight or nine thousand schools in the state, almost 100 per cent of the high schools are members of the league and take part in some of the contests, while from among the rural schools there is usually about 50 per cent enrollment, according to Mr. Bedichek. There have been reports of county league organizations from about 150 counties in the state thus far, Mr. Bedichek said.

TEXAS PROSPEROUS

Jump In Bond Issue Values Is Indicator

AUSTIN, Dec. 10 (AP).—Texas is enjoying an era of steadily increasing prosperity and development, if the remarkable jump in bond issue values is a good criterion.

The November total of $13,000,000 is the highest in the history of the state, Comptroller S. H. Terrell's figures show, while the $72,324,935.45 total for the fiscal year ending last August 31, represents an increase of more than $18,000,000 over the previous year.

Twenty years ago, the fiscal year's bond issue total for the state was only $2,245,454. The totals have grown steadily from year to year.

Road district and school bonds, approved by the attorney general's department and registered by the comptroller, account for much of the totals. Other issues range from municipal water works bonds to fresh water supply districts bonds.

One of the largest issues of recent date was for $3,900,000 by a Hidalgo county road district, approved by Assistant Attorney General D. L. Whitehurst after cutting it from the proposed $4,000,000 to conform to property valuation limitations.

CALL TEXTBOOK BOARD TO CONVEY ON JANUARY 9

AUSTIN, Dec. 10 (AP).—Governor Moody today called the textbook commission to meet February 9 and let contracts to total about $750,000 and other books, despite the contention of S. M. N. Marrs, state school superintendent that to renew the geography contract would cause waste.

Myriad Lights And Icicles Sparkle In Technological College Gym For Annual Dance Given By Sophomores

Three Hundred Students Guests of Class of '30; Christmas Motif Prevails In Large Hall

Under a canopy of myriad colorful lights and low-hanging icicles, some 300 students of the college danced away the hours in the Technological college gymnasium Friday night as guests of the class of '30 in what was termed as the most delightful campus-wide social event of the year. The Christmas spirit prevailed throughout the affair and guests were delighted by atmospheric decorations which added to the success of the evening.

At a few minutes until nine, Sam H. J. Womack, of Colorado, president of the class, and Miss Nora Cooke, of Wellington, Sophomore council representative, led the Grand march which terminated into a series of pleasing dance numbers last until 12 o'clock. Shortly before the close of the affair, artificial snow, serpentine and confetti rained on the group.

Faculty attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Horne, Mrs. R. M. Chittwood and Miss Ivo Wilson. Members of the faculty attended the affair following the faculty dinner at the cafeteria. A number of out-of-town guests who also spent the evening at the dance were served by girls of the school of home economics.

The dance is an annual affair given during each fall term by the Sophomore class.

RURAL PARTY, FRIDAY

Club Women Entertain for Families This Week

A rural party that was attended by about fifty people Friday evening and that was very enjoyable was given in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Williams. Women in the Southwest Ward home demonstration club entertained their husbands and families at that time.

The evening's program opened with a song of welcome from the members and Mrs. Williams gave a toast to the retiring and incoming presidents, Mrs. A. R. Pendley and Vada Houston, respectively.

Cake, chocolate and coffee were served at a late hour and during the serving period Mrs. Williams gave a clever reading and toast to the men attending Christmas decorations were used in the home.

WOMAN'S DAY

By Allene Sumner

This pink for a boy and blue for a girl or vice versa, business continues to puzzle the material world. For years we have been bewildered as to whether to present new babies with pink or blue, booties, and whether to put pink or blue ribbon on the bonnet for brand new baby niece Betty.

But no public agitation was given the subject until it was noted about the Crown Princess Astoria of Belgium, expecting a son and heir, had optimistically prepared a pink bunting only to have to change it to blue when the little baby princess arrived. "What ho!" cried the critics, "she's all wrong! It's pink for a girl and blue for a boy!"

Layette departments of stores can't just about a 50-50 vote for both. Why not settle the difficulty by having it blue for both? It's as mean to do down a little pink-faced babe to wear pink as to throw the fate upon a red-headed girl.

"WHEN COMPANY COMES"

One of our leading home magazines printed a schedule not long ago for the women who drop in for a social visit and are serving Sunday dinner for six people. The schedule began at 9 a. m., though it was assumed that breakfast was well out of the way and the actual dinner preparations were beginning "after" means a 7-o'clock rising, at least, and then she'd have to go some if there were children to be bathed and dressed.

You Can Read Milady's Character In The Hat She Wears, Expert Says

By BETSY SCHULER

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—I'd like to see a new game-judging character by chapeaux. I think one could come as near telling what kind of character a woman has by her hat as by numerology or some other of the guessing arts.

The last football game I attended gave me the idea. Such a sea of hats seemed to offer such vast possibilities in the way of individuality.

Clearly hats grow more subtly original each day. Harder to get lost in the crowd, incidentally, but the subtle reward when one is right.

Hats with fur coats present their own problems this season. Margie Gelrich, I noted one day, cleverly got around a high badge collar on a green coat by wearing a tightly swathed Bohemian urban of matching velvet that fitted her head so snugly as not to present a speck of interference.

Warm Weather Disallows

Continued mild-weather has taken topsy-turvy right off the smart winter suits they carry. And, how smart they are this season.

Joan Leibelheimer, strolling along Park avenue surprisingly early one morning this week, wore a gray long coat suit, fur trimmed, made of one of Rodier's luxuriously soft materials. The coat's shawl collar and deep, narrow cuffs were a contrast in matching shade—a most happy combination, in fact.

She wore a sweet hat, plain grey felt with a smartly turned-up tiny brim, banded with light and dark grey. Even her shark skin purse and shoes were of matching grey. An overall or two added the last perfect touch.

JEAN ICKHEIMER

Frances Gilmore, on the other hand, sponsored about the cutest little short jacket suit I've run across this season. Dull, coffee brown dappled entirely, handed as to wear around skirt and flaring jacket with beaver. The fur fashioned a shawl collar and narrow cuffs.

She wore a matching blouse with a kerchief collar of beige knotted on one shoulder. For this she chose a hat of matching color, which to me is really the secret of making suits and frocks do their best for one. This hat was of velvet with a ruffled brim and a grosgrain banding.

One of These Sheaf Bouquets

She looked charming in a wool crepe frock of soft purple and hat in hat's plush to match.

Stockings grew darker with winter. Gloves seem to grow lighter. Plain gloves, slip-ons with many a buckle or extra stitching, are the best. Elizabeth Bassett gave a satisfying touch to her trim black outfit the other day by sponsoring the softest of gray gloves—almost white. Glazed kid, really pleasing, whether stylish at the moment or not, are coming back. By spring it will probably be chic again to wear white glazed kid with your blue suit. Which, to me, is really a very satisfactory mode.

EXQUISITE LOUNGING PAJAMAS AND TEA GOWNS POPULAR

By BETSY SCHUYLER
NEA Service Writer
NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—(Press) The man who still says women have no purpose in their lives. He really should be attending some of the stunning fashion shows society prominent women are staging now as part of various benefit entertainments.

Just why I ask you, if the fair fashionables have no purpose, should they manage to have faithful husbands, brothers and other gift giving relatives among those present when they show quantities of lovely, lovely things that would make the perfect Christmas gift?

At one recent one, staged for Russian refugees in France, Bunting pajamas and tea gowns had the floor in the matter of intimate wear. All exquisitely feminine, in color and cut, even the pajamas with their tricky little jackets and full trousers.

Yellow's Popularity

Yellow was surprisingly popular. It's a color women have let alone. Certain types are stunning in it. She modeled in a gorgeous pajama suit, satin trousers of daffodil yellow gathered into ankle bands of lame that had burnt orange figures in it and the long coat of the same, with yellow maribou around the shawl collar and wide cuffs. Simple lines, but so gorgeously becoming and lovely.

Of course all the models shown expressed the individuality of the manikins just as their own clothes do.

Consuelo Gimbarant, for instance, dainty feminine creature that she is, chose to show an exquisite lace pajama suit. Ecru lace fashioned it, made over rose beige flat crepe. The upper portion was of the slip-on variety, with a modish Vionnet neck and wide, hungry sleeves snapped to form a cuff. "Oxford lace" best describe the trousers, with their dainty scalloped edge. A wide light hip band was of the crepe, with a single feather pom-pom for ornament at one side.

A Tea Gown Train

To heighten the dignity of a woman of regal of regal bearing Gerald Shepard showed to advantage a tea gown with a sweeping train.

Orchid and purple were its colors—orchid lame with purple fleur de lis figured in it. Sleeves flowed to great width while the gown was cut on extremely slendering lines with the train extending magically from the side. White fur banding all around the edges softened the garment and enriched it.

Transparent velvet, maribou and satin—in pink and reds—fashioned a cut pajama suit Eleanor Alexander showed. Its coat was extremely long and its satin trousers banded into velvet anklets.

While velvet seems the season's choice for evening wear—whether in the boudoir or on the ball room floor—velvet is making inroads for smart daytime wear, I notice.

Velvet on the Avenue

Dinner for Faculty

One Hundred and Fifty Attend Festivities at Tech

About 150 Tech faculty members and guests enjoyed the convivialities at the college cafeteria Friday evening, this being the last regular meeting of the Faculty club for this term.

Dean William J. Miller was general chairman in charge of this affair and he was assisted by other faculty members in preparations. A three-course dinner was served, with program numbers given between courses and at the close of the meal.

Small tables were arranged in a square in the cafeteria, with "circular tent" canopy overhead. In colors of red and green, streamers led from a Japanese umbrella in the center to the tables where there were red and green balloons. Mistletoe, holly and other winter berries were arranged in the room and upon branches decorated the tables. Mrs. W. J. Miller was at the head of the decoration committee.

Program is Good.

James Allen and Miss Dorothy McDonald gave a number of piano and violin selections at the close of the first course and between the second and third courses of the meal, Wallace Rix, Edgar Inmon, Mrs. R. L. McNight and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Clements presented "Sweaters," a number they had given before and which had proved popular.

W. R. Wagborne and Miss McDonald played old-time waltzes at the close of the meal while Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mahoney danced popular ones of a past day.

Carl Svensen had arranged clever program, printed in language of many nations and Mrs. A. H. Leidigh prepared the meal, supervising the service.

State Head P.T.A. Tells of Objects

To Stress Organization Of County Councils During The Year; Makes First Official Visit.

AUSTIN, Dec. 10.—Mrs. Noyes Darling Smith, president of the Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations, made her first official trip as president of the state organization the past week. She attended a meeting at Fairbury which had been called by the county superintendent, J. T. Ferguson, in the interest of organizing a county council of Parent-Teacher associations. This trip was in line with Mrs. Smith's stated program of stressing county organizations in order to extend the work into rural communities.

Mrs. Smith said that she wants her administration to be notable for the progress of organization in proving its value to rural schools. It is a coincident worthy of mention that Mrs. Smith's first call came from a county council, that of Gonzales county, in the first week of December, which call she was unable to answer, and that her first response was to a county organization, that of Fairbury in Brooks county. That this work is now new hobby for Mrs. Smith is evidenced by the statement of Mrs. J. M. Remberg of Gonzales, who is extending the invitation to Mrs. Smith, to meet with the Gonzales County Council at Smiley, December 3rd, stated that this organization had come into being as a result of a "spark of inspiration" that Mrs. Remberg had received from Mrs. Smith six years ago in San Antonio.

Solution in Council.

Mrs. Smith, on the eve of her departure, stated that from a serious study of the Texas educational system and from her knowledge of the Parent-Teacher movement, the solution to the various problems that now confront the educator, lies in the extension of Parent-Teacher work into rural communities.

This, in Mrs. Smith's opinion, can be accomplished more expeditiously through county councils than through other means because the aim of the council is not only to organize but to foster associations in school communities where there is little interest in school affairs.

first and where there is no live Parent-Teacher association.

Mrs. Smith expressed her desire to have a number of 100 percent county organizations in each of the ten districts. She explained that the county organization to be a 100 percent one should have a live Parent-Teacher association in every school community.

"It would be a wonderful thing," concluded Mrs. Smith, "if every county in Texas would organize a council and try to be 100 percent, but that will take time, and I shall be satisfied if a good beginning is made during the two years I am president."

Mrs. E. M. Smith, 2113 18th street, is chairman of county extension work in the eighth district which includes Lubbock.

Beauty! How and Why

IN ALL DEPIPLATORIES THERE'S SOME RISK

Of all the skin blemishes, the most hated by sensitive women is unwanted hair. And they will try almost anything that is recommended in order to free themselves of this disfiguring growth.

There are three ways in which this may be accomplished: by chemicals, mechanical means, and by electricity. The chemicals used for this purpose are called depilatories and have the property of dissolving horny substances, and as might be expected of drugs having such a drastic effect on the skin, have a very irritating effect on the skin. Indeed the thing we must fear in all skin applications, is their acting upon such an irritation as may spread, or become so deep seated as to be difficult of cure.

Mechanical means such as tweezers are preferred by some people, while others find the small safety razor the answer to their problem. The so-called wax removers have been found satisfactory by many. Removing hair by means of electrolysis is thought by many to be the best method, but this too, at times cause irritation. It seems as though that risk must be run no matter which method is chosen.

"A King with a Gun for a Sceptre," That's Scar-Face Al Capone, Gang Leader of Chicago's Underworld

Bootleg Boss Holds Power
Of Life and Death Over
Subjects; Lives Life of Extreme Luxury.

By NEA Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—This second largest city in America has many things that other cities lack. It has a magnificent lake front, a double-decked auto street, a huge municipal stadium, skyscrapers that rival New York's. It also has an overlord of crime who is one of the strongest figures in America.

The man is Alphonse Capone, alias Al "Scarface" Capone. He is a reality, a myth, because he is seldom seen, seldom heard from directly, because he seems to be a fictitious embodiment of all that an ambitious gangster might want to be—and a reality because he is one of the most powerful men in Chicago.

Underworld King.
"Scarface Al" is king of Chicago's underworld. To many men, people his word is law. He can pass death sentences, issue judgments, make or destroy fortunes, issue business, levy king's tribute, utter decrees of exile. Many an ambitious king has had less power than this swarthy gunman.

What is he like, anyway? What sort of man is it that this sprawling city has tossed up to such a position of sinister eminence? He got his nickname from two diagonal scars on his left cheek, and his start in life from the fact that he knew how to use an automatic pistol. Both characteristics, he says, were acquired in France where he served with the famous "Lost Battalion." The Scarface is proud of his war record.

Like most other prominent Americans, Capone worked his way up from the bottom, and can attribute his success to hard toil and singleness of purpose. Capone came upon the Chicago scene shortly after the war, when the roving bands of gangland were just beginning to develop from groups of ordinary stick-up men into real syndicates of run-running, beer barons.

Make Big Fortunes.
His fortunes were being made by the gangs. Beer cost $2 a barrel to make, and sold for saloons for $50 a barrel. Each gang had its own territory, and to infringe on the sales area of a rival clique meant bloody wars.

John Torrio and Dean O'Banion, who perpetually hid a gaudy career of crime behind the plate glass window of a florist's shop, were leaders of the chief rival gangs. Torrio, always a target for hostile bullets, wanted a bodyguard. Capone, handy with a gun, got the job.

The changes of gangland fortune soon brought death to O'Banion, shot down amid his flowers. Torrio shortly thereafter found Chicago too hot for him. The police weren't bothering him, but enemy gangsters were, so he went to Europe, and Capone succeeded him.

Capone soon made a city-wide reputation for utter ruthlessness, not without he won gangster's respect as a square shooter, after his execution. He lived in the posh, trendy suburb of Cicero, and built up a powerful machine. But one, Hyman Weiss, who had succeeded the defunct O'Banion, dared to challenge his authority.

Capone's men ambushed Weiss and shot at him. Weiss escaped, but called on Capone personally, and there was talk of a truce. Hyman agreed to a truce on condition that Capone would put the two men who had shot at him "on a spot" where Hyman's gunmen could kill them and avenge the insult to their leader. Capone agreed to betray his men, and the war went on.

A Hot Fusillade.
Weiss led 11 pouring cars, each with a machine gun in the back seat, out to Cicero. They drove around the Hawthorn Inn where Capone lived, and opened it with as severe a fusillade as any strong point in France ever received. Capone, safe behind steel shutters, waited until the uproar had ceased, and then beckoned his lieutenants. A few days later Hyman Weiss died with half a hundred machine gun slugs in his body.

Then began Capone's period of luxuriance, now in its fullest flower. He moved through Chicago like a miasma, breathing at the police, bringing saloons, gambling houses, drive-in theaters and other haunts of vice under this thumb. Few of his rivals ever saw him; yet all knew the penalty that awaited for the man who dared to defy him. Such a man would be waking along a downtown street in broad daylight, and would draw up alongside, a machine gun would begin its muffled "at-tat-tat," and Capone would have less than a minute to escape.

Once the federal prohibition force indicted Capone. Shortly afterward the government's two leading witnesses were found shot to death. The police seemed, and still seem, utterly unable to touch him. Time and again, when some victim of gangland's wars is found, the police with one accord say "Capone!" But they never pin him down.

An observer when gangland's wars have grown too hot for the police to arbitrate what they cannot quell; on one occasion Capone and a rival leader met in a downtown hotel room with a captain of police acting as intermediary and holding the weapons to insure a memorable discussion.

Recently one Joe Aiello, a wealthy importer, thought to defy Capone. He established a string of gambling houses on Capone's territory. A series of bombings and shootings began; then Aiello disappeared; he was fighting a losing fight.

Arrested on some minor charge, he refused to leave jail, knowing he would be shot down within 24 hours. Two of Capone's henchmen were in the next cell, and he begged them for mercy. They sniggered at him. The Scarface had ordered his death, and no power on earth could save him.

Aiello's pleas at last reached Capone personally. Capone took pity on him. He issued a free pardon. Aiello was to live, on condition that he withdraw entirely from Capone's field. So it was agreed.

Has No Rivals.
Such is Capone's power. Today he is supreme in his field. How long he will stay that way is problematical; some day doubtless, some rival machine gunner will find him and send him on to join O'Banion and Hyman Weiss. Some day he probably will be decaying away from the bodyguard of 12 gunmen which he always keeps about him.

But until then—a large part of Chicago will continue to fear a "Scarface" who has found him, and send him on to join O'Banion and Hyman Weiss. Some day he probably will be decaying away from the bodyguard of 12 gunmen which he always keeps about him.

Brownfield, Typical Of Plains, Bustles With Activity

Wheels Of Progress Hum Busily With Potential Wealth Of City And County Barely Touched; Big Program Planned

Natural Advantages With Progressive Citizenship Places Town Among Best In West Texas

(By Staff Correspondent)
BROWNFIELD, Dec. 10.—Forty miles from the "big city" of Amarillo, Brownfield is a typical western South Plains town. It is both an old and a new town—old in that it was one of those originally marked out in this section, and new in that most of its progress and its present physical dimensions date to the time when the South Plains came into its own—just a few years back.

The Brownfield Chamber of Commerce tells you that there are 2,300 people there. The casual observer would probably guess 2,500. The residence section and the square lined with thriving business houses suggests this size.

Brick Courthouse
Coming into the town one is first attracted perhaps by the attractive brick court house. Then, a fringe of new, clean and modern business buildings greets the eye. For Brownfield business men have built with a regard to the future. There is hardly a structure in the downtown district but that would do credit to a city much larger and but that will fit in harmoniously with the civic development which is certain to come in the years just ahead.

Brownfield is rich in natural advantages. It is still richer in its progressive citizenship. The business men here have shown their aggressiveness by bringing two new compresses, a large commercial butcherery, and other industries to the town in recent years. And "it won't be long now," they say, until a grain elevator is located in Brownfield.

Organized in 1904
But back to the beginning. Terry county was organized in 1904. At that time the present Brownfield consisted of a saloon and general store, with perhaps a house or two nestled around somewhere. There was much debate as to whether the county seat should be located at Brownfield or at Gomez hamlet about 7 miles to the west.

The election was bitterly contested and was very close. Some "old timers" will tell you that the removal of the above mentioned hamlet to Brownfield and its resultant prominence swung the election in favor of Brownfield. However that may be Brownfield is the county seat today and Gomez is still a hamlet.

Good Corn Country
Brownfield, of course, depends upon agriculture as the backbone of its existence. Cotton is the main crop, but Terry county and especially the section about Brownfield, is likewise a great corn producing region.

"This is one of the best countries for corn that there is in the state," declared J. E. Shelton, secretary of the Brownfield Chamber of Commerce. "Some other nearby sections can't raise corn very successfully but the soil here is especially well adapted to it."

"Last year there were 30,000 bushels of corn grown in this county. This year, due to the fact that increased acreage has about balanced the unfavorable planting season, the yield will probably be almost as high."

Terry county produced 22,446 bales of cotton in 1925. This year, it is estimated, 12,000 bales will be the production. Ginnings to date in Brownfield alone are over 8,000 bales. The crop is estimated by those keeping in touch with the

His Buns Best

W. P. Sullivan, a traveling man of Dallas, became disgusted with the biscuits served to him in restaurants on the road. So he and his wife studied biscuit recipes. The other day Mr. Sullivan won the biscuit-baking championship of Texas receiving the award at the state fair.

situation as now about 85 per cent gathered.

Other Grains Flourish
Other grains besides corn flourish. Maize and kaffir rank next, followed by sudan, feterita and other varieties grown elsewhere over the South Plains. There were about 20,000 tons shipped out of Brownfield last year, and a similar amount was believed to have been invested in foreign.

The cattleman is making a last stand in Terry county. Ten years ago there was hardly any farming, and white faced Herefords grazed on the occasional traveler from every side. Today there are only three large ranches left in the county. It is estimated that there are 10,000 head of cattle on these three ranches and on the few smaller ones that are left.

The Brownfield ranch, managed by Ray Brownfield, is of about fifty sections; and the southwest Brownfield ranch, managed by M. B. Brownfield, the owner, and the Pool Brothers and Goodman ranch, of about 40 sections, are the three to which reference is made.

Diversification Big Aid
Diversification has been consistently preached by the Brownfield Chamber of Commerce and by agricultural leaders of the city. As a result today it is estimated that there are 5,000 head of hogs to be found in the county whereas two years ago there were practically none. Eighteen cars, each bearing 80 head, have already been shipped out this year. Forty-seven cars of cattle have been shipped to date for the year.

Indicative of the rapid agricultural growth in Brownfield are the figures cited by Mr. Shelton. Ten years ago there were 234 farms in the county. Today there are about 1,200.

Now every farm has its quota of poultry and livestock. Every farmer—or nearly everyone—is living at home. The farmers have found that this may be done if common sense is mixed with farming, and they all have profited as a result. The past cotton crop was made, in almost every instance without going into debt.

"Everyone's happy," was one citizen's comment. "No one got tremendously rich, perhaps, but everyone made some cotton and enough feed to get by on till next year."

Many Old Debts Paid
Banks report many old debts are being paid up. This "safe and sane" farming policy is fruition of efforts which have been expended by the Brownfield Chamber of Commerce and other interested parties.

America Held To Be Thrift Nation

Vast Amount of Insurance Taken Out During 1927 Is Cited As Proof of Contentment.

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Purchase in 1927 of $14,900,000,000 new life insurance reveals America as a nation of thrift addicts. Archibald A. Welch, president of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance company, declared at the 21st annual convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents.

The year's new business he said brings to 62,000,000 the number of policy holders, and to 115,000,000 the number of policies in force. The records offer proof, he asserted, that the American character is not softened by accumulation of wealth and that the American incomes are being spent to a considerable extent for the comfort of future generations.

Billion and Half Paid Out
"This year's payment to beneficiaries and policy holders," Mr. Welch said, "will total $1,500,000,000, almost eight-tenths the return of 26 years ago. Since the beginning of the century, life insurance companies have paid out $16,484,000,000, nearly twice the amount of life insurance in force at the beginning of the period."

"The present generation is excellent all former generations in making provision for its families. While our population has increased only a little more than one-half since 1900, American policy holders now number 62,000,000, or more than six times the number in 1900. Life insurance companies now have $87,000,000,000 of insurance in force—ten times the amount at the beginning of the century, and double that of 1920."

LOCKNEY CATTLE POINT

Abundance of Grain Sorghums Ideal Feeding
LOCKNEY, Dec. 10.—With an abundance of grain sorghums raised in this section every year, supplemented by the cotton seed products of the city's latest institution and this city is affording two railroads that give the desired transportation facilities, cattle buyers and feeders assert that Lockney is destined to become one of the leading cattle feeding points in West Texas.

At present, there are four hundred steers being fed at this place and facilities are being provided for two hundred more. However, many times that number could be cared for as only a very small portion of the output of the mill is being consumed locally.

Division Of State Into Districts And Election Of Commissioner From Each For Highway System Is Offered

Lanham Suggests Move And Raps Administration In Conduct Of Affairs For State System

(By Associated Press)
DALLAS, Dec. 10.—The dividing of Texas into not less than four districts and the election of a highway commissioner from each district was proposed here by Frank V. Lanham, former state highway commissioner as a way of improving the highway system of Texas. He also criticized the present state administration's highway policy. His statement follows in part: "We were told during the campaign of the successful candidate for governor that if he was elected he would appoint a highway commission that would remedy all the ills that were then or ever had been present in the conduct of highway affairs. We would have a 'correlated' system of roads. Lots of us didn't know what 'correlated' meant, but it listened well. See STATE HIGHWAYS, Page 2

Education Bill Seeks To Lower School Failures

Department Of Education
In National Government
Viewed As Solution To National Problem

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Bearing a significant change from similar measures in the past, the new bill to create a department of education in the national government is being introduced by congress as an opportunity to solve the problem of school failures, estimated at one million annually.

Championed by Senator Charles Curtis, Republican floor leader, and Representative Daniel R. Reed of New York, the measure now provides for a conference of state superintendents of public instruction to meet periodically in Washington to discuss educational matters as they affect individual states. At the same time, the bill provides for the appointment of a national board of education to study the causes and the cure.

"These failures," says Dr. William M. Davidson, superintendent of the Pittsburgh public schools and chairman of the legislative commission of the National Education Association, "constitute a great economic loss to the nation, and a loss of spirit and initiative on the part of the children who suffer thereby. A large percentage of these failures are unnecessary and could be avoided, if the government were equipped to study the causes and the cure."

"Teachers never have been so firmly united in behalf of the so-called education bill as they are now. They no longer regard the proposed department of education with a secretary in the president's cabinet, as merely a desirable thing to be established, but as a national necessity."

"The principal function of the department would be to conduct nationwide studies of educational problems in a manner comparable to the investigations carried on by the departments of agriculture, commerce and labor in their respective fields."

Dry Modification No Campaign Issue Indiana Man Says

Eventual Disposition Of 18th Amendment Held Aim Of Wets By Borah; He Is To Debate Butler

(By Associated Press)
LAFAYETTE, Ind., Dec. 10.—Not modification, but eventual disposition of the eighteenth amendment in its entirety is the prime issue in the liquor controversy in the opinion of United States Senator William E. Borah.

He will debate prohibition with Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University at Purdue University here, on a date to be set this month. In accepting the invitation Borah said he would not discuss modification.

"The so-called modification of the eighteenth amendment in my opinion is an incidental question which does not get at the heart of the controversy," he wrote.

"The Volstead act could not be modified so as to permit intoxicating liquor. What the people who are opposed to the eighteenth amendment is more intoxicating liquor. A modification of the Volstead act simply to get a little more non-intoxicating stuff would settle nothing. But if anyone wants to debate what shall be done with the eighteenth amendment I would consider it and take part in the debate."

Prof. Allen H. Monroe head of the division of public speaking at Purdue arranged the debate which climaxes a series of forensic tilts among Purdue students. Sixty-eight teams of three men each and 24 freshmen have taken part in debates.

NEW TOWN DEVELOPS South Plains Sets Record For Agricultural Growth

SOUTH PLAINS, Dec. 10.—South Plains, new city on the Fort Worth and Denver South Plains extension is setting a record for development that has not been surpassed by any West Texas city that is solely dependent upon the farming industry. Work is now under way on a complete water distribution system that will be finished before the first of January, 1934. The system is made up of a complete pumping plant, a large storage tank and 7,200 feet of distribution mains that will serve practically every dwelling and business house in the city. According to the developers, the city will have electricity and natural gas available before its first birthday is reached.

PLAN BOX SUPPER

Proceeds of McClung Fete
Will Go For New Piano
SLATON, Dec. 10.—C. E. Reasoner, prominent citizen of the McClung community, seven miles north of Slaton, has announced that a box and pie supper will be given at the McClung schoolhouse Friday night, December 14, to raise funds with which to buy a new piano. A good program is being planned and the event is expected to attract a large crowd. Mr. Reasoner said.

Recently when a similar event was held to raise funds for purchasing seats for use at church services in that community, several Slaton business men, members of the chamber of commerce and the Rotary club, attended and aided in the program.

State Highways

and most of the voters favored it. Mileage in State.

"Further we were told that too great a mileage had been designated as state highways and that it should be reduced. I listened to the governor tell at the automobile dealers convention in Dallas about a hunting trip he made and got bogged in the mire and lost in the wilderness on what was a designated state highway. This condition of too many roads having been designated as state highways he proposed to cure. Now it is a fact that the present administration has materially increased the mileage of designated state highways."

"To my mind there is a definite sensible plan of remedy for the highway situation. The highway commission should be held accountable to and directly answerable to the people of Texas who provide the funds for their existence and expenditure. Committees of citizens having vainly sought relief from the highway commission in their highway difficulties, upon taking their troubles to the governor have been told by him that his hands were tied and that he could give them no help. If the highway commission is not accountable to the governor who appointed them, then to whom are they accountable? I propose that the state of Texas be divided into not less than four districts and that a highway commissioner shall be elected by the people in each district. In addition to those elected a chairman of the commission shall be appointed by the governor. This chairman should devote his entire time to the work of the commission and should be paid a commensurate salary."

Should Designate System

"The highway commission so constituted, with the approval of the legislature, should proceed to designate a system of highways which are to be built, and such system should be enacted into law so that the revenue of the highway department would be expended for the building of a pre-arranged, definite system of highways of only first class construction to serve the people of this state. Such system should constitute a building program of some ten years at least. The highway department would then become a road-building organization. The highway department would become a drug store is it were to simply fill the prescription which the people of Texas as the doctor acting through their duly elected agents had prescribed."

"The question will now be asked where will the funds come from to carry out this program. The answer is that we have more than enough at present."

Auto License Fees

"The license fee on automobiles should not exceed two dollars per year. This will more than cover the cost of registration for identification purposes. In fact, it will produce more than a million dollars per year in excess of registration cost."

"The present gasoline tax provides for highway purposes approximately fifteen million dollars per year. The federal allotment for Texas per year is approximately five million dollars, making a total revenue for the highway department of no less than twenty million dollars per year. I take the position that twenty million dollars is as much and probably more money than any highway commission can intelligently spend in one year. It will permit the building of as much highest type highway per year as we now have of the highest type highway in Texas all put together. By building only first class permanent roads our maintenance costs would be correspondingly reduced. Texas has suffered long enough from cheap and shoddy road construction. Such roads have already cost the taxpayers of Texas more money than permanent roads would have cost. We have paid for permanent roads but we don't have them. We should by now know that it is the cheapest to build correctly in the first instance."

State Bonds Unnecessary

"It is unnecessary that any state bond issue shall be saddled upon the already overburdened back of the people of Texas. The need is for a highway commission elected by and directly answerable to the taxpayers, and an intelligent and economical expenditure of the revenue already available."

"The legislature could authorize the counties to fix such additional license fee per car as to provide necessary funds for the building and maintenance by the counties of whatever county highways as the counties might deem most beneficial."

"I realize that the sum of twenty million dollars per year mentioned above is approximately ten million dollars per year less than the present highway commission has at its disposal and which the people of Texas are now painfully digging up and putting into the hungry maw of the highway commission, but my proposition still stands and I submit it to the intelligence of the taxpayers of this state."

Mr. Lanham referred to recent statements by C. O. Johnson, a member of the highway commission as being of interest and quite illuminating.

Agricultural Progress During Past Year Manifest In Better Balanced Production, Jardine's Report Says

Advancing Prices For Some Crops And Increased Buying Power Held As Paramount To U. S. Farmer

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Agriculture in the United States during the past year has made substantial progress in recovery from effects of the postwar depression. It is set out in the annual report of Secretary of Agriculture W. M. Jardine, filed today with President Coolidge.

"Progress is manifest in better balanced production, in advancing prices for some important crops, notably cotton and cattle, and in further improvements in the relationship between prices of farm products and prices of other goods," the report says. "This relationship is expressed by the department of Agriculture in index numbers showing the purchasing power of a unit of farm products in terms of non-agricultural goods. On September 15 the index number indicated this purchasing power was 82, compared with an average of 85 for 1926, with 100 representing the average for the five years preceding the war."

Buying Power Increases

"Since June, 1931, when the depression was at its worst, the unit buying power of farm products has increased more than 35 per cent. This means that agriculture has regained more than three-fourths of the buying power lost per unit of its products in the postwar price decline."

"It is important to bear in mind, moreover, that the improvement thus registered in the purchasing power index does not show the full extent of the recovery effected. Index numbers indicating gains in the exchange value of farm commodities tell only part of the story. They do not accurately reflect advantages accruing from increased efficiency. In the last few years the productivity of American agriculture, as measured in output per farm worker, has increased greatly. On fewer acres, and with a farm population 2,000,000 less than in 1919, the agricultural industry since 1923 has averaged a larger volume of production than in the years immediately following the war. The farmers, through increased efficiency, are offsetting to some degree at any rate, the effect of unfavorable relative prices."

Distress Areas Active

"Areas where distress has been acute in recent years are this year marketing good crops at good prices. Montana and parts of the Dakotas are conspicuous examples. Crop yields in Montana were nearly 50 per cent above the average for the last 19 years. In the Dakotas, Nebraska, Idaho and Oregon yields were from 16 to 20 per cent better than usual. In the cotton belt generally notwithstanding poor yields in certain areas in eastern Oklahoma and New Mexico and heavy losses from flood damage in the Mississippi valley, farm returns are expected to be up to the average of recent years. The troubles of the farmer are not yet over, but the balance of the year's developments are on the side of progress."

"Although unfavorable weather delayed planting, and the season started under discouraging conditions, production of the principal crops was estimated in October to be 1 per cent above the average during the last five years and only 1 per cent below that of 1926. This result was obtained on a crop acreage about 1 per cent less than that of last year. Such an achievement is surprising in view of the difficulties encountered. Growers of cotton and tobacco faced low prices at planting time. In Florida and in a large area extending through southwestern Kansas, western Texas, and eastern New Mexico long-continued drought damaged growing crops. Floods covered 4,000,000 acres of crop land in the Mississippi valley. Up to June 5 only a fourth of the intended corn acreage had been planted in the lower Ohio valley, and only a half in a large part of the eastern central corn belt. Yet, the total crop production besides being above the average of recent years, is so well balanced that no marked scarcity exists of any product. Previous heavy stocks of cotton, tobacco and canned goods will be reduced, but this is a favorable change."

Most Striking Change

"The most striking change in the agricultural situation this year, as compared with that of 1926, is in the cotton belt. The year's cotton crop was estimated in October at 12,672,000 bales, compared with 17,977,000 bales produced in 1926. From the standpoint of price the improvement has been remarkable, and it is estimated that cotton prices continue of the present level, returns to farmers for the whole year will exceed by about $150,000,000 the income from last year's crop. Acreage reduction, boll weevil damage and the Mississippi floods mainly account for the fact that this year's cotton crop is nearly one-third smaller than that of last year. Cotton acrea this year as estimated in September was 40,626,000 acres, compared with 47,057,000 acres picked last year. Although floods in the Mississippi valley accounted for some of the reduction in cotton planting, the farmers themselves, acting on the advice of federal and state departments of agriculture, agricultural colleges, and co-operative marketing agencies, effected much of the reduction voluntarily, thereby showing that intelligent action to reduce production to demand in agriculture is practicable on a large scale."

"All this technical progress has raised the question of the relation between increased efficiency and the prices of farm products. It has been suggested that the advantage of increased efficiency to the farmer may be largely offset through increased total output and reduced prices per unit of product. This is a problem which demands consideration. It may sharpen the necessity for a better adjustment of production in agriculture and for a better relationship between the agricultural population and other groups. There can not, however, be any justification for lessening the effort to attain increased efficiency. Such effort may return a diminishing total reward as the percentage of efficient producers increases, but the gain probably never vanishes altogether, and for the farmer in efficiency it is substantial."

Efficient Methods

"The most universal force for benefit goes mainly to the consumer. In the case of crops like cotton and wheat, the prices of which are determined in the world market, it is especially important that the highest possible level of efficiency be maintained by American farmers. Undoubtedly, however, progress in efficiency which causes production to keep pace with or to outstrip consumption calls for compensating adjustments in our agricultural system. Under present conditions it is probably unwise to live more than into the future, and I shall have more to say on this question later. While continuing our efforts to obtain increased productivity per worker, we should do what is possible to prevent unnecessary expansion of crop acreage and to increase the efficiency of agriculture by better adjustment of production and marketing."

Mistletoe Shipments
Oklahoma To East
Gradual Decline
Custom Fading

(By Associated Press)
OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Dec. 10.—Mistletoe will not find its way to eastern and northern Christmas markets this year in the quantities in which it once was shipped from Oklahoma.

The mistletoe is disappearing from this state, and its haul among native farmers is being dried as farmers clear the wooded land for agricultural purposes.

Pioneers a third of a century ago earned a small income from sale of mistletoe, and the plant was chosen as the state flower. In choice receiving legislative confirmation.

Rooted not in the earth, but the branches of growing trees, mistletoe produces each year a bushy growth of green leaves and pear berries. Popularly termed a parasite, it is so only in part, according to George Phillips, state forester. The Oklahoma species of mistletoe is its moisture and possibly some food from the host tree, but manufactures most of its own food by means of chlorophyll contained in its green leaves and stems. It damages its host, however, by starving the branch on which it grows.

BIG SPRING

TRAGEDIES!

--that occur annually on the South Plains ... taking from life without taking life.

One of the saddest things about the development of the South Plains is that of the farmer who rents land year after year without making a serious sacrifice and attempt to own his own farm!

Yes, year after year—with settlement continuing steadily—land values gradually growing—he works hard from dawn 'til dark—taking out of the soil the products which means his own livelihood—accumulating rent receipts!

Any South Plains Farmer Who Rents Can Just As Well Own His Land

Under process of settlement and development land values are lower now than they will ever be again on the South Plains. Rent farmers who wish can own their own farm with rental paid land-lords; can have property with rising valuation in their own name; may have the opportunities held under cover now in their own grasp should they be uncovered. Rent farmers can do these things on the South Plains now—easier than ever again. May secure their own farm on easier terms, with less cash payment than will ever be given in the future. Those who know these things and fail in making an honest effort in securing a home—present to the world the ANNUAL TRAGEDIES of South Plains development—tragedies that take from life—without taking life!

70,000 SOUTH PLAINS ACRES

10% Cash

—for the rent farmer who wants to make a serious effort to become independent of rent receipts and wants the opportunities for increased values, mineral discoveries, on his own farm—is given the best chance to secure them in the offering of 70,000 acres of land—the safest farming belt of the Plains—in tracts of almost every size—none more than 10 miles away from railroad services, all accessible to schools and churches.

These lands are located around, near or adjacent to the Santa Fe railroad in Terry, Yoakum and Gaines counties.

For Sale At $11 to $21 Per Acre

These lands at the price of $11 to $21 an acre offer the greatest investment opportunity on the Plains, in my opinion, as well as land that will yield more surely, year in and out, all the crops of the South Plains, than any other section.

SAFEST FARMING LANDS WEST OF THE 100TH MERIDIAN!

There is no doubting the fact established thru years of observance, that lands lying west of the 100th Meridian, must have moisture sustaining qualities to make safe farming. The lands in Terry, Yoakum and Gaines counties are sandy loam lands, underlaid by red clay—the best moisture holding lands on the Plains. In addition to being the finest corn lands on the Plains, they are recognized as the surest for all crops because of their moisture retaining qualities. The prices are less than one-half that asked for other South Plains lands in counties of more development.

Their low prices, easy terms and safety of production features, make them the most ideal investment for the man wishing to start his own home—and is handicapped by having only a small amount of money to begin ownership. We advise every South Plains renter to investigate this offering of 70,000 acres.

A DEED WORTH
WHILE IS A DEED
TO A HOME!
CHRISTMAS

Mr. Renter, vision your own home—vision the improvements that you make, how they increase happiness in your work, as well as increased valuation of your property. Vision, this Christmas, the deed to a Home of your Own. What will the wife think?

Will the children have the protection of their own roof? Why not, since Christmas is so near, inspect the land offerings and see if there isn't a tract of such size and character that you will want for a home. Try to have the deed that's worth while done by Christmas day—the deed to your own farm—rather than rent receipts from another's!

OIL--
THE MAGIC WORD!

The deeds to these farms include mineral rights—or if already under lease—the buyer becomes owner of lease-rentals or lease of lands under same condition as present owners.

Oil development is under way in the counties of the South Plains. It is our honest opinion, based upon the investment of hundreds of thousands of dollars by the big oil companies that buyers of South Plains lands—and especially in Terry, Yoakum or Gaines counties, will receive valuable returns either from its production or through leasing for development.

By all means the chances for securing returns from oil development in this region are too great to be ignored by any man who buys land. None of the lands offered here are priced to buyers on the basis of oil development. We only wish to direct prospective purchasers to their chances. For agricultural purposes they are lower in price than they ever will be again.

Major Hoople Finds His Own Hard Luck Is Nothing; Don't Forget the Poor Kiddies At Christmas, Pleads

Philosopher Recounts Many Blessings He Has and He Finds He's Lucky; Santa Claus Spirit Is Theme.

By MAJOR HOOPLE MCCORMICK

Well, it is almost Christmas, and we are still minus the long discussed turkey. About the best thing we have at present is a mangled hand as the result of too much "Dodge." So if you find this space a little bit this week you need not be surprised, for with a "no turkey no present" Christmas starting us in the dock, and a bungled-up hand that looks more like hamburger than it does "typewriting" equipment we can't be blamed for feeling like we have had an overdose of "hard luck."

But when we get to thinking of all the suffering in this old world—the number of mothers and babies that actually want for food, clothing and the actual necessities of life, we figure that we are in pretty good shape, even if old Santa were to look us up and we are forced to eat bull beef Christmas as we did Thanksgiving.

No Room for Kick
We still have good feet capable of transporting us about over town. We have a little coal to burn these days and we like sympathy, but we can't find anything else to do. We have a "job" that insures a little food even if we can't work, so why kick?

Most of us are too ready to give up the sponge and take a count. We like for other people to feel sorry for us. We like sympathy, but as we are pondering this column out about the main thing on our mind is this—will the insurance company do us right. We hope so, and for once in life we can see where a man without insurance is fool. For it has taken a mighty good man to force us to continue the policy. Insurance premiums are hard to pay, but most of us make prompt collectors when the company owes us something.

New For Christmas
But back to the subject. If we had one Christmas. Ever since we can remember, we have looked forward to Christmas with fond anticipation. In our earlier days we looked forward to the visits of old Santa Claus, and even now we figure that the old gentleman might make a mistake and leave us something. But whether he remembers us or not, we hope he remembers every child on the South Plains. An empty stocking to a child is a tragedy. In most instances children in this section are remembered.

It doesn't take much money to finance a visit from old Santa, but a memory of empty stockings will blight a child's life. It is a thing they will never forget.

Maybe there are some unfortunate children in your neighborhood—children who will not be remembered unless you make it possible. Your children will get presents; they will enjoy Christmas as they should, but if there are neighbor children who will be greeted by an empty stocking—stockings that you should have filled, you will find your real Christmas joy in doing your duty.

Means A Lot To A Kid
A visit from old Santa means more to a child than most anything we can think of. It means happiness—happiness they are justly due. If they fail to get this happiness they can have but one thought—that Santa loves the rich; while the poor must get along as best they can. As they grow older they have the same thought, and these thoughts will grow and grow until they reach proportions of anarchy. It will cost only a few cents to change this and it is our duty to do so.

We all appreciate gifts, but the real pleasure, after all, is in the giving. If we can make others happy we will find happiness for ourselves.

So when we make out our shopping lists let us include a few boys for the unfortunates that are around us. We won't miss the money and we will feel better all during the year because we did our duty. There are a lot of things we could say, but owing to certain physical pains we are now "excusing" we shall postpone further comment until conditions change.

Bledsoe's Cattle Shipments Large

850 Cars, Market Bound; Is Record Set By W. Texas Town Past Season; Most Of Stock Hereford

BLEDSE, Dec. 10.—850 cars of market cattle is the record for other shipping points of the state to try to reach for one short season. That number has been sent out of Bledsoe in the season just about to close. Most of these cattle have gone to Kansas City, a smaller number going to Fort Worth although the haul is shorter. This does not mean that Fort Worth prices are lower, but that shipping comparisons to that city are less available. With the completion of through systems to Fort Worth it will be more readily available to West Plains shippers.

Most of these cattle shipments were pure bred—Hereford, stock. Few shipments into the territory have been made, the breeders have preferred to grow their own herd stock. The heavy shipments of the present season does not mean that cattle interests are dying out, but are the increase of the herds of the vicinity of Bledsoe in Texas and New Mexico.

Several cars of sheep have also been sent out to market, and a number of cars of goats are expected to be shipped in within the next thirty to sixty days.

Coolidge Rapped By Europe As He Turns to Havana

His Promise To Visit Cuba Results In Arousing The Jealousy of "Trade-Mad" Europeans.

BY MILTON BRONNER
NEA Service Correspondent
LONDON, Dec. 10.—President Coolidge did a big day's work for the U. S. both politically and commercially, in announcing that he will go to Havana in January to attend the opening of the Pan-American conference and make a speech.

To Europe, the president's first journey beyond the U. S. borders since he succeeded Warren Harding will be a most significant one. For don't mistake it—Europe is daily seeking to undermine the U. S. Latin-American policy by fostering distrust of North American political ambitions and by knocking U. S. goods. The Latin-European is knocking Uncle Sam politically. The English and the Germans are knocking him in a business way. Five nations now are in the knock-out line—France, Belgium, England, Germany and Italy.

The French have been reading numerous articles attacking U. S. political aims in Central America and representing them as a menace to the freedom of action of the Latin republics.

In Belgium, publicists charge that the whole U. S. policy is to make of the Caribbean Sea what England made of the Mediterranean for so long a time—a private lake.

Both Germany and England, in England, there is a double-barreled attack. London newspapers have been calling the attention of English industrialists to the markets of South America by a series of articles on "The Other Americas." They also are saying North American goods are inferior in quality and durability, and that South America should buy from its best customer—England.

England buys most of the wheat and meat of the Argentine. Recently an association of the wheat and meat raisers of the Argentine has been formed with the slogan "Buy from those who buy from us." Germany is carrying on an intensive campaign to win back the trade ground lost during the war. The Germans have always been strongly entrenched in South America. One of the southern states of Brazil is almost a German colony and they also are strong in the Argentine and Chile.

Why the Italians Dislike U. S. Italian sentiment is marked by an active hammerfest on the part of the hundreds of thousands of Italians who have settled particularly in the Argentine, Brazil and Uruguay and made good. Italians play a big role in the life of the Argentine. They dislike the United States because it largely has closed its doors to Italian immigration. Dr. Max Jordan has made a survey of South America for the Berliner Tageblatt, the German capital's greatest newspaper. He said the countries where the United States is strongest are Brazil and Peru, and weakest, Chile and the Argentine.

Cuozette Packer, 13-year-old Anderson, Ind., girl, recently flew alone 124 miles from her home city to Kankakee, Ill., a distance of 138 miles by air. Cuozette's father, mother and brother are registered pilots and the girl is believed the youngest pilot in the United States.

The Chileans dislike the United States because of its policy with Mexico and Nicaragua and also of account of the handling of their dispute with Peru and Bolivia over Tacna-Arica. They have been led to believe North America is exploiting their copper, iron and nitrate fields solely.

In the Argentine the British have a considerable lever in the fact that British money largely built the country's railroads and British banks play a large part in its commerce.

Besides, many German and British business men settle down there and become citizens, whereas United States in-comers always remain what they were born—American citizens.

With this whole situation in the background, Europe found the news of President Coolidge's forth-coming mission to Havana most interesting. The President will come in personal contact there with Latin-American political and commercial leaders. In the strategy of international trade, such contacts sometimes are fruitful of far-reaching results.

Indians To Begin Festivities For Guadalupe Sunday

Great Bonfires Are To Be Lighted At Dusk; Annual Celebration One Of Most Unique In World

(By Associated Press)

LAS CRUCES, N. M., Dec. 10.—The annual feast of Guadalupe begins tomorrow night in the Indian village of Tortugas.

Great bonfires will be lighted at dusk on the mountain near the village to form a huge cross, summoning Indians from all the countryside to attend the festival which betokens the anniversary of the miraculous appearance of the Virgin Guadalupe, patron saint of Mexico.

Festivities Elaborate
The anniversary is observed in many little Indian communities along the Rio Grande and throughout Mexico, but the most elaborate of the festivals is that of the Indians of Tortugas.

The tiny village will bustle with excitement as the celebrants gather to the thump of native drums and at sunrise Monday the dancing and feasting will begin to last after midnight.

The feast of Guadalupe is a strange mixture of ancient Indian tradition and old Spanish Catholicism. It begins with a procession led by a tribesman entrusted with an image of the Virgin of Guadalupe.

Members of the tribe, garbed in gayly beaded costumes and warriors' head dress, march to the dancing ground, to weave through a series of dance figures depicting the protection of the holy virgin from the evil spirits. A little girl represents the virgin, and is protected throughout the dance by a warrior who fights the powers of evil. Some Indian youths dance continuously for ten or twelve hours in the ceremony.

In days past it was the custom for the Penitentes—a sect believing lupine whom tradition says appeared first to Juan Diego, a lowly Indian woodcutter, in 1591 while he was at work in the mountains near Mexico City.

Station Woman Fills Place Vacated Thru Marriage

BLEDSOE, Dec. 10.—With the marriage of Miss Annie Wood Howell two weeks ago Alton Goldwater of Shawwater, and her with-drawn from the school last week, the school board and superintendent faced a difficulty in securing a teacher to fill her place. Fortunately they secured Miss Ethel Martin of Shiton. Miss Martin is a Plains product, Plains trained to her work, a graduate of the University of Texas, with a degree of Bachelor of Arts, and has had six years of public school experience before coming to the high school department here, as head of the English division. With the close of one week of work, she is pronounced successful by her people.

Boy Confesses To Killing of Father

Says He Was Forced to Slay Parent Who, In Drunken Rage, Shot Mother and Threatened Him.

(By Associated Press)

CAMDEN, N. J., Dec. 10.—"Yes I killed my father I had to," said 13-year-old Joseph Cucinotta, today to Prosecutor Ethel P. Westcott in telling of the events that led up to the shooting of Joseph Cucinotta, 38, yesterday.

"There was nothing else I could do," the lad continued. "He had fired one shot at my mother and told me I was next. He was drunk and I knew he would have carried out his threats."

Mrs. Josephine Cucinotta, the wife, agreed with her son.

With the father's own shot and used by father and son on gunning trips in the south Jersey meadows—the lad took his father's life.

Police records show that Cucinotta served several sentences for "bootlegging" and had been arrested at least four times for attacking his wife.

The boy was sent to the detention house. The formal charge of murder was lodged against him.

lies for several years. Several produce houses create a ready market for Brownfield. They are operated by Swift and company, for whom J. W. Moore is the local manager; by Armour, for whom W. A. Bundy is locally in charge, and by Lubbock Poultry and Egg company, for whom Mr. Jones is the local manager.

City government in Brownfield is by the aldermanic form. Joe Jerry McGowan is mayor. Aldermen are W. H. Collins, Glenn Hurst, R. L. Bowers, E. G. Alexander and Tom May.

The city is justly proud of its school system, which at present boasts of a scholastic enrollment of 535 and a corps of 22 able teachers. There are two buildings to the Brownfield educational plant, one a high school and the other a grade school. T. W. Fugate is city school superintendent. J. E. Jackson is principal of the high school, and Eugene Turney is principal of the grade school.

Fire Prevention Taught
Teaching of fire prevention as a regular course has resulted in a material reduction in the Brownfield fire insurance rate. The fire department is volunteer, holds regular practices and is considered unusually efficient for such an organization. Edna Jones is the chief. Equipment is motor operated.

George E. Homan is city marshal and tax assessor.

Ray Herrod is city secretary. Brownfield believes that she possesses as low an electric power rate as may be obtained in any place, large or small. This is because the power plant, like the water and sewerage systems, are municipally owned and operated.

Water comes from wells sunk to the inexhaustible pool of sheet water which found at an average depth of 80 feet.

Natural Gas Promised
Gas from the West Texas Gas company has been promised during 1933, the Chamber of Commerce having exerted a strenuous effort to obtain an assurance that gas would be available not later than December 1, next year.

The Chamber of Commerce is active in many ways. Its secretary, Mr. Shelton, not only attends to the multitudinous duties ordinarily ascribed to a commercial secretary but also acts somewhat as an executive county agent distributing free of charge governmental pamphlets and bulletins about various agricultural subjects.

"And you'd be surprised," said he, "at the number of farmers who ask for these bulletins."

Brownfield has a municipal auditorium, seating about 500 people. One-hundred street lights are now being installed, thus making Brownfield one of the best lighted towns on the Plains.

Highway Program
Typical of the thorough manner in which the Brownfield Chamber of Commerce goes after projects which smuck of improvements to the section is highway program now on the "date." The organization is seeking state designation of highway from the Puhandle to the Odessa oil fields, through Lubbock and Brownfield. State designation has already been secured over much of this route. Another highway, connecting at Quanah with Oklahoma roads, and extending through Lubbock and Brownfield to El Paso is being boosted as an all-weather route from California and old Mexico to St. Louis.

W. A. Bell is president of the Chamber of Commerce. There are 105 members and these have selected the following directors: Tom May, E. G. Alexander, G. A. Michie, R. L. Bowers, A. R. Winston, W. H. Collins, Ben Hurst, J. Barrett, Morgan Copeland and A. W. Anderson.

Good Rotary Club
Rotary has gone over in a big way at Brownfield. There are about 25 members in the local club which meets each Friday at noon. Morgan Copeland is the president, W. A. Cruse the secretary.

Finally, the house was dark and still. Stealthily he opened the wall safe door. Furtively he placed the long, important looking envelope in his strictly private strong box. No one should know at least not until his dying day... then it would be theirs... until then the joy of it would be his alone.

Years later... when the estate was settled... they learned the truth. Life insurance for reasonable needs, he had provided well. But that one mysterious envelope was specially marked: "For Merry Christmas purposes only." That policy pays the family a check each Christmas Day. It never fails. Always it is there on the table beside the tree, as if placed by Dad's own hand.

And sometimes, just as the candles are lighted, it seems that he, too, is really there, laughing, talking with them all. Who knows? Perhaps he really is.

CHAPTER I

In 1871 a few buffalo hunters, among them a certain Captain Stone, pitched their camp on a little knoll in Kansas just north of the Indian Territory line. South and west of the rise flowed Fall creek; on the east the waters of Big Casino creek ran their endless course and invited the roaming herds of buffalo and other wild game in which the region abounded. The captain was a far-seeing man; he noted the abundance of spring water, the succulence of the prairie grass and the not unimportant factor of the place's nearness to the border of a land from which the government, in accordance with its treaties with the Indians, had excluded the white man from settling. When other buffalo hunters joined them, Stone thought he saw the possibility of a new "Princess of the Prairie," as Wichita then called itself; so he took the first step in colonization and established a small store, carrying such supplies as the hunters required, including, the records state, one barrel of whiskey.

As the population increased, Cox and Emerson put in a real outfitting store and a man named Dickie installed a genuine saloon, with bar, foot-rail and all accessories. The "prairies" with their luxuriant growth of blue stem and buffalo grass, became dotted with small cattle and horse ranches; the big cattle herds on their way to Ogallala, Neb., then a big shipping point on the Union Pacific, stopped in the little town for their supplies.

And the news traveled fast. Soon hundreds were drifting into Caldwell, farthest southward of the plain settlements; whereupon Stone and two other men, Dagner and Smith, laid out a townsite.

In a few years Caldwell had attained a population of 2000. In 1879 the Atchison, Topka & Santa Fe ran its tracks down from Wellington, forging an iron link between Caldwell and Wichita and making its bid for the big herds that thundered up the Chisholm Trail. The buffalo camp had flowered in a few years—one of the wildest-est cow towns in history.

The big boom that started with the coming of the railroad found Gordon W. Lillie waiting on tables in one of Caldwell's busy restaurants and longing for something that would more nearly satisfy a normal youth's desire for adventure and the opportunity to make a fortune.

As he saw it, the main requirement for the latter was a working capital, whereas Gordon Lillie and capital were not yet acquainted. As far back as he could remember, Newton Lillie, his father, had had about all he could do to make ends meet. Gordon was 19, and the oldest of the children. Then came Albert, Effie May, Lena and Gordon's foster sister, Lucy Conant.

Newton Lillie had been a flour miller in Bloomington, Ill. Two years before, calamity had descended on the family when fire had destroyed the mill, and the Lillies now lived near Wellington, Kas., about 25 miles from Caldwell, where the father still patiently tried to eke out a living from a few acres of land, but counted more hopefully on the productivity of the farm land that he had pre-empted.

Gordon Lillie stood in the doorway of the restaurant, his gaze fixed idly over one of the strong medleys of humanity a man had never looked upon. It was Saturday afternoon in Caldwell. Bronzed, shap-club cowboys from nearby ranges, or stopping en route from their fatiguing herd riding, rubbed elbows with roughly dressed railroad laborers. For the Santa Fe extension was not yet finished and Caldwell was the haven of thirsty souls who worked along the right of way. Here were cattle thieves, horse thieves, Indians, desperadoes, women, some with children, and others with hard eyes and painted cheeks and a ready smile for each passing male; men making sidewalk speeches on the coming greatness of Caldwell, urging their listeners to buy while the boom was yet young.

A clatter of hoofs and an enveloping cloud of dust moved down the street. Three men dismounted in front of the restaurant. The tallest of the three, a man with a shaggy black beard, eyed the youth with cold appraisal and waited. Lillie did not appear to notice him. He tugged at his lip and was lost in contemplation of the panorama of wild border life before him.

A harsh voice broke in on his thoughts. "We're hungry. Are you gonna stand there and go to sleep, or invite us inside?"

Lillie straightened up with a start. He murmured something in apology, then led the way into the dining room and indicated a table for the trio. Glibly he recited the bill of fare.

AT THE SOUND OF THE BOY'S "DADDY!" HARRISON'S EYES WAVERED. IN THAT INSTANT BENTON FIRED.

the deep-set, slitted eyes, and said nothing. He went about the business of setting food before them and retired to the kitchen. Another waiter was out there, eating his own supper ahead of the evening rush. "I've got a crab out there," Gordon Lillie told him.

The waiter pointed out into the dining room. "Him? That's Tom Benton. He's ornery."

Presently a loud command in Benton's stony tones called Lillie forth. The man was pounding on the table with his fist. "What kind of beef do you call this? This steak's so damned tough you could shoo boots with it."

The color deepened in Gordon Lillie's ruddy cheeks and resentment flamed within him. He made no answer but started to remove the offending meat. Benton's heavy stare never left the youth's face. "I said the steak was tough," he repeated. "I'm waitin' to hear you admit it."

A calm voice drifted from the doorway. "I didn't know anything in anybody came too tough for you, Benton. Benton swung around and met the smiling blue eyes of a broad-shouldered, fair-haired cow puncher who had entered at that moment with half a dozen companions.

The bearded one glared. "I don't remember issuing any invitation for you to horn in on the conversation, Joe Craig."

Joe Craig grinned. "I declare to goodness I clean forgot my manners. Tom, I always was disappointed to my folks that way. They never could count on me to uphold the family reputation for politeness and so I come to Kansas and got a job riding for Titus Moore, not wanting to embarrass the family for the rest of their lives."

"That was being right consideration of the family's feelings," Benton snapped.

"Ain't it the truth? Although my interruption in this particular case might be excused on the grounds that I had a personal interest in the discussion. Didn't I just hear you say that the steak was too tough to suit you?"

"If there ain't anything the matter with your ears you did."

stant, then, with fists swinging, sidestepped the bigger man's rush to the head. As Benton reeled he ran at Craig. The latter deftly and rocked him with a solid smash back, cursing, his right hand made

Full Regulation Of Motor Buses Is Asked Congress

Right Of Appeal To I. C. C.
Also Included In Bill To Be Offered Congress At This Session

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 10.—Regulation for buses engaged in interstate commerce, with primary authority vested in state commissions, and with right of appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission, is recommended in bills to be introduced in congress immediately representing the viewpoint of 2,100 affiliated bus operators, according to a statement issued recently by the Bus Division of the American Automobile association.

Senator Watson, republican, Indiana, chairman of the senate committee on Interstate Commerce, and Representative Denison, republican, Illinois, member of the house committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, are sponsoring the bills as a preliminary step to securing the enactment of a suitable law at the present session, says the A. A. A. statement.

Coincident with this came an announcement from the Interstate Commerce Commission, that oral argument on docket No. 18,300, dealing with motor bus and motor truck operation has been assigned for 10 o'clock a. m. January 16, 1928, at the offices of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

This hearing deal with an investigation into the motor bus and truck operation started by the I. C. C. in May, 1926, for the purpose of recommending to congress whether regulation of interstate motor carriers is necessary.

The Bus Division of the A. A. A. anticipates, in view of the evidence collected, that the special report will stress the need for regulation of motor buses and that some legislation will be enacted during the present session of congress.

Members of the legislative committee of the Bus Division, representing the operators of between 25,000 and 30,000 buses, outlined their viewpoint at a recent conference held preliminary to the move to seek congressional action. The bills to be introduced are similar to those presented at the last session.

Diversification Is Given Credit For Slaton Prosperity

Bank Deposits Higher And Collections Along Every Line Good With Farmers
In Good Shape

(Special To The Aualanche-Journal)
SLATON, Dec. 10.—Diversification put into profitable practice on Slaton farms during the past few years is largely responsible for the prosperity the section is now enjoying, according to the statements of J. H. Brewer, bank president, and W. E. Olive, active vice president of another bank here. The two banks have urged farmers to diversify for the past five years. More especially for the last two years, the banks have required the practice of diversification if farmers expected to secure bank loans.

Higher deposits than last year are reported by the banks, and the deposits compare favorably with the most prosperous years in the history of the Slaton section. The bankers have had good collections this fall and believe they will be able to finance the actual needs of a quick, stealthy move toward his left breast, but Craig's own gun was whipped out in a flash and leveled from the hip. Benton's arms fell to his sides.

"Some day," Craig said coolly, "you're going to make me real mad and I'm likely to forget myself. You can leave now. Me and the boys are aiming to eat and we don't want our appetites spoiled by the presence of complaining dyspeptics. And don't forget to pay your reckoning," he added.

Benton's cheeks glowed an angry red beneath their fringe of beard. "Anybody," he muttered, "can act like a real bad man when he has six more behind him to dependable farmers, those who diversify, in 1928.

No loans in 1928 will be available for one-crop farmers, say Slaton bankers. They prefer to lend money for buying dairy cows instead of to pay living expenses while cultivating cotton. They have learned by experience that the diversifying farmer rarely needs bank credit in any considerable degree, according to their direct statements.

The bankers believe their policy in recent years of stressing the importance of diversification is largely responsible for the present situation which finds more hogs, more cows, more poultry and more feed-stuffs on the farms than ever before. "Not only will we ask farmers wanting to borrow money in 1928 about how many cows, chickens and hogs he has, but we will require him to raise enough feed to last him two years," says J. H. Brewer. This plan, Brewer argues, protects the bank, and the farmer, because failure to produce a feed crop in any one year would still leave the farmer with a sufficiency until he could grow another crop.

"Farmers and merchants are in better condition financially than they have ever been in the section at any other time," said W. E. Olive. "It is because of diversified farming, too," he added.

Collections Are Good
J. A. Elliott, local manager of the Texas Utilities company, says he has made 100 per cent records on collections through the two months of October and November this year. He thinks this is an indication of a better financial situation than the Slaton section has enjoyed in several years. The bills collected involved hundreds of customers who use electric light, power or cooking service furnished by the Texas Utilities company.

A move is under way on the part of the Chamber of Commerce to import purebred dairy stock in carload lots for distribution among the farmers of the area. The banks are supporting the move. Farmers are showing keen interest in it. A few bull circles have already been formed in the section. County Agent D. F. Eaton is helping in this work.

England Facing Traffic Trouble

Situation There Is Worse Than Here; More Cars to Square Mile in Britain Is The Reason.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Great Britain with only one-tenth the number of automobiles that are in the United States, is already worrying about saturation.

But Great Britain has a far different situation than that which exists across the Atlantic.

First, the island which takes in England, Scotland and Wales covers an area of 87,745 square miles, which is about one-third-fifth the size of the United States. Since the 2,000,000 automobiles are only one-tenth the number in America, the number of automobiles per square mile is far greater in Great Britain than in the United States. Second, and most important, the total road mileage in this country is 178,000 miles, while that in the United States is over three million miles. In this country there are two miles of road to every square mile of area. In the United States there is less than a mile of road to every square mile of area.

Greater Congestion.
The result is that the 2,000,000 automobiles, scotching over 178,000 miles of road, are more congested than the 20,000,000 motor cars on the 3,000,000 miles of road in the United States. Most of these cars, as in the United States, are concentrated on a small proportion of the road mileage, which makes the problem of traffic congestion so much more difficult.

The United States can double its road mileage and just about approach the situation in England. For here distances already are close and not much more room is left for highways.

Yet the average rate of increase in automobiles is about 200,000 cars a year. Five years from now will see a million more vehicles on the road with no additional mileage available.

Out of the 178,000 miles of road here, only 24,000 miles are considered of the Class 1, or best, type. These roads permit of four or more vehicles abreast, two going each way.

Few Broad Roads.
In the remaining mileage there are 43,000 miles of Class 2 roads which permit of three lanes, one going one way and two the other. The rest are either two lane roads, or are not as well paved or maintained as the other two classes.

The result is that the bulk of the 2,000,000 vehicles on the island move over less than 70,000 miles of road in a congested stream that is almost at a standstill around the greater cities.

Efforts are being made to relieve the congestion that is sure to come if conditions remain as they are. Widening of highways and streets is urged. Cries over bridges or tunnels are advised at great traffic junctions.

ANNUAL AUTO SALON SHOWS ELABORATE MODELS FOR SOCIETY'S COMING USE

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Highly embossed invitations have brought members of the Park Avenue and Long Island elite to this year's annual automobile salon at the Hotel Commodore.

For right at the foot of New York's exclusive and luxurious avenue are gathered the latest creations of the world's masters in coachwork and automobile manufacture. This is the auto show of society, the one from which it is said, new ideas will come for use on the more popular models one or two years later.

Guarding jealously their secret innovations until the opening hour the exhibitors at this salon pride themselves in the singularity and uniqueness of their products. Most seem to follow a general trend toward convertible or all-weather bodies, as well as the sporty phaeton or roadster type of car. But every exhibit on the ballroom floor of the Commodore has some unique features that reflect the peculiar characteristics of its designer and builder.

Cost is only secondary to this great display. The cars shown here are some of the most exclusive and expensive vehicles in the world. One foreign car, the Isotta-Fraschini straight-8 is equipped with a cabriolet body by Fleetwood. It is priced at $22,000 and several others cost little less than that.

What's $22,000?
What is of primary importance is the custom body construction of 14 American and six European coach builders. For this is essentially a body exhibition.

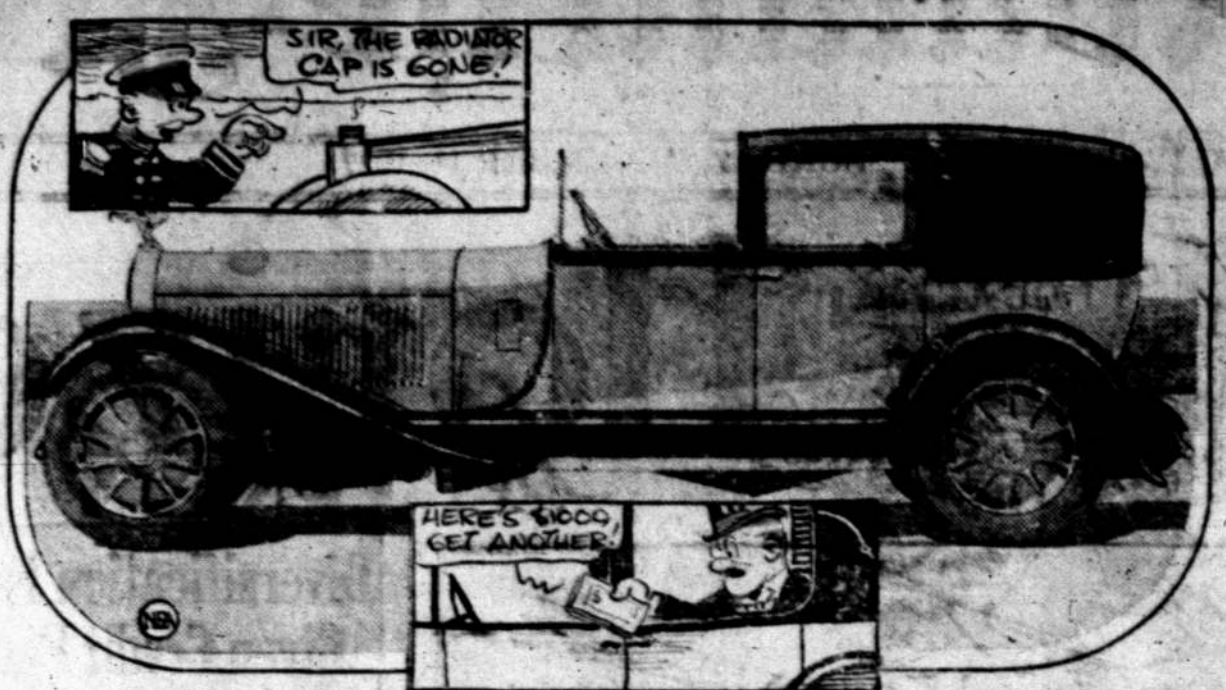

Each body reflects wealth, superiority and refinement. Every little appointment within is made sedulously for those who are accustomed only to the finest. Bright colors, sweeping lines and hand-some trimmings combine to give the vehicles a dashing air, and their luxury is enhanced by expensive fittings and decorations.

Every thought is given to the desires of those in position to buy these cars. There is storage space for golf bags, for instance, just behind the rear seat. In some of the cars a small cabinet for glasses and refreshments is found, and even a miniature ice chest is included.

Upholstering Is Expensive.
Many are upholstered in reptile skins, from python to lizard leathers, which are distinctive in appearance and very durable. Others have needle-point interiors, or highly expensive broadcloths.

The high seatbacks of some phaetons are set at an angle to allow deep cushioning and greater comfort.

planned with the eye toward making greater use of minor roads. Elimination of dangerous crossings, blind corners, bottle necks, railroad crossings and other obstacles to regular traffic flow is demanded. And finally, specialists are being sought to make a study of the entire situation today and in the future, and to keep the country prepared for further emergencies.

A mere $22,000 will buy this Isotta-Fraschini with Fleetwood body. It is one of the exclusive exhibits of the annual auto salon in New York.

Sunday Sermon

stand that they were all conscious hypocrites; but many of them were like Saul of Tarsus, "ignorant and in unbelief." Blinded with self-righteousness, they could not see their own spiritual destitution and rejected Christ, and His gospel of the grace of God. "Being ignorant of God's righteousness, they went about to establish their own righteousness, and would not submit to the righteousness of God." If any one thinks that he is not in danger of like folly, let him remember what St. Paul said, "I would not that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye be wise in your own conceits."

To be born again is to be a new creature. "Old things have passed away, and all things have become new."

"A heart, in every thought renewed." Perfect will, right and pure and good.

When love comes to control the life, malice, envy, pride, vanity and greed, must take their departure. Who is it that has not felt one, or all, of the above vices? To be born of God, is to have victory over the world, the flesh and the devil. The things which were not possible before, now become natural and easy.

A missionary to the American Indians was trying to teach an old chief that he should love his enemies. The chief could not see how such a thing could be possible. After thinking a while about the impossibility, remarked that "before one could love his enemies, he must have another heart." Was he not right in his conclusion? It is joyful news, in deed, that we may be born of God, and partake of His divine nature; for He says, "A new heart will I give you."

But how shall we become the children of God? On what condition may we pass from our bondage to sin into the glorious liberty of the children of our Heavenly Father?

The answer to that important question is not hard to find. "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the Sons of God, even to them that believe on His name." John 1:12; and He adds these words, "Which were born, not of the blood nor of the will of man, but of God."

Jesus did not undertake to explain to Nicodemus all about how the Spirit of this work of regeneration. He only reminded him that the mystery was beyond his comprehension. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit."

We understand but a small part of the mysteries of the material world. "Earthly things" have much about them that the scientists have not yet understood; and the average mind will find much that lies beyond the range of its mental grasp; and shall we grasp the infinite Spirit of God, in His mysterious operation in raising from death unto life, the souls that are dead and sinners?

Most of us have, perhaps, made the mistake of supposing that experience of regeneration, must always be attended with a certain definite phenomena; and if this were not present, in conversion, it was not genuine. Such presumption on our part, is but little short of sin, and a stumbling block to saving faith.

NOTE—There have occurred a few mistakes already in these sermons; and more will probably occur, as others are printed, but they are not all to be charged on the printer. I do not use a typewriter.

And sometimes find it hard to write my own script.

IT IS THE MERRY CHRISTMAS TIME

—From the Horseless Carriage to the Latest Ford—

SHOWING THE EVOLUTION OF A FLIVVER

A 1902 Model

Model A 1903

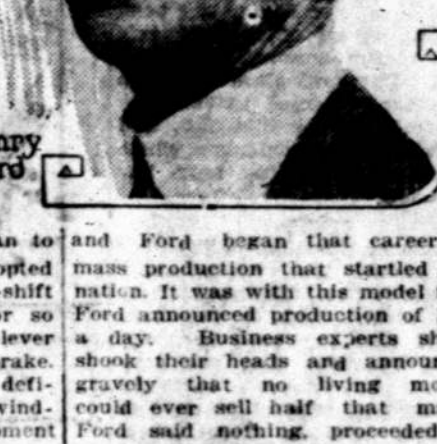

Model T a year later

The Ford in 1925

The Ford automobile has undergone a long period of evolution. As the above pictures show, there is no resemblance between the first horse-drawn carriage and the latest Ford. In 1902 this blossomed into the first machine above; an affair with a ponderous buggy top, that rolled and rattled as the car went down the street, and with a section glass big enough for a merchant to show window for a window.

Next came the first of the lettered models—Model A, published in 1903. This was more like an automobile; the engine still remained under the seat, however, and the rear door still bisected the back seat. The 1906 model had the engine up in front, with a hood to encase it. It was in this model that Ford experimented with a six-cylinder engine. Note what a huge pile the folded up top makes. No one had heard of doors for the front seat then, and windshields were considered more or less excess baggage. Then came 1910, and with it came the first of the famous Model T's. Model T was the first of the flivvers. It was about this time that the first Ford motor began to appear. Ford had not yet adopted the famous planetary gear-shift that distinguished Lizzie for so long; note the gear shift lever sticking up beside the hand brake. A year later Model T was definitely established. Top and windshield became standard equipment and Ford began that career of mass production that started the nation. It was with this model that Ford announced production of 1909 a day. Business experts shook their heads and announced gravely that no living mortal could ever sell half that many. Ford said nothing, proceeded to sell every car he made, and jumped his production even higher than that mark. By now the Ford was a recognized American institution—and so was its maker. Model T underwent small changes from year to year; its stern, angular lines were softened slightly now and then, and by 1925—15 years after Model T was born it had attained stream-line qualities quite foreign to the flivver traditions. The Ford of 1925, however, found stiffer competition than its predecessors had had. A year later, when the 15 millionth Ford was produced, Ford's sales began to fall off. Finally, late last spring Ford suspended production and began redesigning his car completely. The result is shown in the last picture. The new Ford, in many respects a complete departure from the old models, has just been put on public display. It is quite unlike its immediate predecessors; and if you'll look at the very first picture you'll agree it is even more unlike the original Ford.

U. S. CARS MAKE HIT IN EUROPE
WASHINGTON — Despite the heavy campaign being waged by European automobile manufacturers to induce Europeans to buy European cars, American-made vehicles sales in these countries have increased 21 per cent during the past six months.
The value of these sales are nearly $225,000,000.
In many sections of Europe marked performance is shown for American cars. Australia, for instance, is buying more American cars and trucks than British products.

The Manhunter's Own True Story
by Gordon Hines

Chapter Fifty-five
I scratched my head and twisted my mustache. "Well, now, I'll tell you, I got a letter here from wife an' I don't know just how it would take us. Anyhow it was like I might be able to raise the ready cash. Before, I left the house a hundred acres to my old company, and it's kinder like they might make a mistake, she's already collected some and she writin' for me to come on home to sign up some more so we can collect some more right down to Texas an' fix us up."

I knew Davis had read the letter, and I knew that I only need to fill in the gaps to provide material for conclusions that would give them great hope. I then lead the conversation and all suggestions. It wasn't long Miller mentioned that it might be a good idea if I would wire my instructions to her to close the bank and send the money along. This was quite in line with the conversation. He never wants to let a victim get to his friends or relatives with a story of his new wealth until the cleaning has been completed. After that, it is seldom the victim cares to mention his experience to anyone. Although extremely, they will accompany the victim to his home or anywhere else to help him money. Miller and Davis, however, preferred that I get mine by the possible. That would suit the hunters for their consideration. I had to seem suggest something else for the sake of appearance, so he insisted that it would be better for me to go home and receive with the money. This was a good idea and I agreed to it. I had better wire and thus I went to my home. There would be time enough to arrange it after we heard from Ferris, Texas. So I immediately wrote out a wire, and with their criticisms, it was finally drafted and ready to be sent. I wrote in a large round style that would contrast with the cramped line writing of the letter I had written from my wife to me. The wire read:

affected agony. It wasn't hard to turn down their requests that I allow them to bring me something to eat. That is, it wasn't hard for them to believe my sham. It was mighty hard for me, for my mouth was watering for the good things they suggested to try to awaken my appetite.

We sat down about the room and chatted in bored voices all day. I knew I was bored and I would have felt like putting up money on their anxiety to have the thing over and be on their way.

Miller asked me if I wouldn't like to have my luggage from my hotel. That was one thing I did not want. I was afraid there might be something in my bag that would betray me. I had left one bag containing credentials and papers, in the vault at the hotel Columbia. My other bag had been left in my room at the hotel. I evaded the matter by saying that my clothes at the hotel were all dirty, and that I'd wait till I got home so my wife could wash them.

We had other visitors, several times a day, and I sat hunched up in my corner chair, nursing my painful tooth and watching every newcomer. I had hoped that Spencer would walk in the door. Regardless of circumstances, I expected I'd have thrown down on him and dragged him off, taking Miller and Davis along for good measure. I was plain that the room we were in was a regular hangout for the gang. I wondered how many poor devils had been kept there until they could get money from home. The idea was interesting but it made me nervous. Every time those two sharp raps would sound on the door, followed by two lighter ones, I'd tremble and have trouble making my heart behave. I knew several of the faces photographically, but I had never had a personal contact with any of them, except for the brief time I had seen one or two of them in the stock exchange in the Denham Theatre building. But I lived in dread. The next four raps on the door might be the signal of some crook of my acquaintance—one I had met professionally, so to speak. My fear that I had already been recognized would not quiet, and I couldn't afford to indicate that they couldn't get away from pressing business. I never heard them mention the "cleaning business," but I was sure they were engaged in it, also. They mentioned several times over the telephone that their deal probably would soon be wound up and they would all get together and celebrate. They neglected to mention whether or not I would join in the celebrating. That was probably an oversight. Or, perhaps, when they got my money, they'd forget to invite me to their party. Such innocent social errors do occur occasionally in such cliques as theirs. I hadn't been asked to that party in San Antonio when my money was divided.

I passed an endless night. I lay as I had the night before, fully dressed, across my trick bed, with my hand on my gat. The others stirred so restlessly that I felt duty bound to mean and groan occasionally to convince them that neuralgia and toothache do knock folks awake.

Years later, the sun peeped in through a window in the bathroom, and I got up and took my chair in the corner. After an hour or so, the others stirred. Then Miller arose and dressed. Davis was

ARE WE PROPERLY EDUCATED?

The educational heads seem to have at last waked up to an important matter, that has been in our mind for a number of years. It seems to have dawned upon a number of them now that the schools of the country are not teaching the main fundamentals of education, and their boys and girls who leave high school are far short of being educated on lines that are practical, and things that they need to make their work worthwhile after they enter into the life work, or profession that they may choose. A recent survey of high school students reveals the fact that the schools of Texas are too long on Shakespeare and Poe and too short on everyday English and writing. This statement was made recently by Dr. David Lee Clark, director of a committee which made the survey. State Superintendent S. M. N. Marrs is credited with the statement that the so-called classical institutions, which include the State university, are largely to blame because for the last 40 years they have encouraged high schools to saturate themselves with Shakespeare and Poe.

It makes very little difference just who is to blame, but it certainly should make enough difference to the educational institutions who are interested in the welfare of the child to try to remedy the trouble somewhere, and not turn out thousands upon thousands of children annually who are supposed to be educated in a practical manner, especially to the point of a high school graduate. Texas high school students do not have the fundamental teaching that they should. This can be proved by asking most any business or professional man who has had occasion to take them into their businesses or offices.

Mr. Clark produced some very interesting statistics or figures along this line that certainly should convince anyone that there is need for a change somewhere. He says that out of 1201 first year students examined only 21 made a grade of 90, or above while 409 were unable to make a passing grade at all. Only four high schools escaped with no failures, and these were located at Wichita Falls, Longview, New Braunfels and Fredericksburg. Of the 409 failures the report says 57 per cent of those who came from Beaumont failed to pass, compared with 57 per cent from McAllen, 51 per cent from Fort Worth, 50 per cent from Waco, 40 per cent from Houston, 45 per cent from Port Arthur, 33 per cent from Austin, 33 per cent from El Paso. According to this report, Fort Worth's ratio of failures was twice that of San Antonio, only 24 per cent of that city's freshmen having fallen down in the tests.

Does this mean that San Antonio high school students are trained twice as well in English than those of Fort Worth? No, says Marrs.

"The figures as a whole are significant that improvement in English courses is needed, but they signify little as between cities," he said. "Only 33 per cent of the students from Austin failed. That is much less than Fort Worth, apparently, with its 51 per cent. But you must recall that Austin sent by far a larger number of beginners to the university than did Fort Worth, and that San Antonio did likewise." The freshmen were given tests in spelling, punctuation, grammar, sentence structure, a theme of 200 words written in class and another of 400 words written outside of class. "It is hoped that the committee will bring about closer relations between colleges and high schools to our mutual advantage," Clark remarked. "The committee stands ready to advise with principals and teachers of English in regard to this very important problem which the secondary schools and colleges alike are facing." Miss Sterett declared that "the pendulum is now swinging backward again," meaning, she explained, that recently there has been an effort in the high schools over the State to let Shakespeare and Poe rest a bit, while the students polish up on everyday writing and speaking of English.

If tumbling from his mounts is a publicity stunt on part of the Prince of Wales, he had just as well quit—the public has long since ceased to get any sort of a kick out of it.

THE SPIRIT OF THE WEST

Still the spirit of the West exists in the minds of the people of the north and east. They must always admit that West Texas people are not the kind that quarrel among themselves, or they the type of people who are willing to look altogether to their individual interests. They are more inclined to act as a group, and their method of cooperation is so outstanding as to be noticeable to anyone who comes in contact with them. The following from the Southern Pharmaceutical Journal, of Dallas shows what the editors of that publication has to say about the Western portion of the state:

"Another convention goes West."

"The above term is not used in the sense in which it was used by the Yanks in the late war, where 'going west' meant crossing the Great Divide. Conventions are going west this year. The National Association of Retail Druggists will convene next in San Francisco. The next largest drug organization is the Texas Pharmaceutical association which is also going west and will pitch its tents in Abilene, the municipal queen of the prairies.

"Abilene is the Capital of West Texas, and stands majestically in the heart of what was once the cattle country. The writer recalls discovering Abilene in the late nineties from the hurricane deck of a chuck wagon going north. Although 'them days is gone forever' we further recall that Abilene had the best spirit, the friendliest people and the most convenient saloons west of the Alleghenies. It still has the friendliest people and the spirit of the old west is as noticeable today as when the chuck wagon camp fires glowed along the cattle trails through Taylor county.

"Canyons of brick and cement do not seem to cramp the spirit, narrow the vision or smother the cordiality of Abilenians, they are for the most part children of the wide open spaces, descendants of hardy pioneers who with hearts of oak weathered the storms of earlier days and laid the solid foundation upon which, today, stands Abilene, a community gem, an enchanted garden, a municipal monument to the civic genius of its builders. Towering trees and rare flowers have replaced the waving grass, stately mansions the hut of the settler and the shout of childish laughter the drumming of the wild fowl, the yowl of the wolf and the scream of the panther.

"Nearly a half century of years have gone glimmering into the trash heaps of things that were since the organization of the Texas Pharmaceutical association in Dallas in 1879 this will be her first visit to the far-flung domain known as West Texas in whose firmament are written the names of Pittard, Weeks, Waggoner, Ray, Harrison, Robertson, Compton, Hays and a host of others too numerous for this space. This will be a little journey into a new area, but a warmer welcome was never accorded the organization than the one it will receive at the gates of Abilene and at the hands of her people.

"All West Texas has joined in the task of entertaining the convention, they stand together in West Texas 'one for all, all for one.' Abilene is not standing up alone in the task but has the cooperation of West Texas druggists."

It is no longer a test to pull conventions into the west. It is rather the opposite. They want to come this way, before some of the towns feel they are equal to the task of taking care of them. This, however, is made possible by the wonderful cooperative spirit of the citizenship of every West Texas town. The homes are thrown open, and every fellow helps, and even though there are not many places now that do not have the necessary hotel facilities, there are a few towns that do not, and when that is the case the folks just throw open the doors of their homes and ask them to come in.

DOG RACES AND BETTING.
England is crazy over dog races, we are told in dispatches. Betting on the races is wilder than on horse races. All classes participate.

Efforts to establish dog racing has met with determined opposition in this country. Just why this opposition flares up is explained by the Dallas News, in this editorial:

"There has been some doubt whether the statutes of Texas cover specifically the offense of bookmaking on dog races. To be sure they do not, and for the same reason that they do not specifically cover bookmaking on automobile races. When the statutes were framed there were no automobiles. And there were certainly few dog races. Any doubt that the general anti-gambling statutes covers the offense, however, should be dispelled by the fact that the tracks have ceased to operate in Texas wherever prosecution has been threatened under the gambling act.

"As far as actual operation of dog races is concerned, there is certainly no law against it. There is no law against horse racing. All that the law seeks to obviate is the racetrack gambler and the bookmaker. Unfortunately, experience has demonstrated that track associations can not conduct tracks profitably without bookmaking, and when they can not operate at a profit will not operate at all.

"The District Attorney had no need to prevent dog racing in Dallas. It is only necessary for his office to see to it that gamblers do not operate. Since he was elected to prosecute violation of the law, there can be no just criticism of his energy in enforcing the terms of the gambling statute, even though that act happens to terminate the profitable character of an otherwise pleasing competition."—Abilene News.

SO THINK WE

We think that possibly the greatest forward movement that the people of Lubbock can put on at this time is the question of permanent roads. Lubbock county is getting a long way behind the procession on the building of roads. Some folks question the bond issue being the best method. We are not undertaking to say anything about that, but we are thoroughly convinced that our roads must be put in condition if we are to keep in the line of march with other counties.

We think that Lubbock has made fine progress during the past 12 months, and the city commissioners have accomplished much in the way of improvements. The building of the additional water supply tank, one of the commendable things, and the building of another fire station will add to this as a precaution against the fire hazards of the city. We also commend them for the purchase of the lighting system for traffic regulation, and we are sure that this will bring about a reduction of the traffic accidents and will aid in speeding up traffic. Now with a better lighting system for the streets we feel confident that Lubbock will stand high in the scale of efficiency of cities of the size of this.

We think that the board of city development is a very economical organization. The men on the board have constantly endeavored to keep the expenditures down to a minimum. They have had many dollars for money, and have not been able to grant all of the requests because of the amount of money involved. They are close watchers over the funds turned to them by the tax collector of this city, and we think that the people as a whole will agree with us that none has been wasted.

We think at this time of the year people should be exceptionally careful about fire. Christmas decorations always add to the hazards. If they are used carefully they are beautiful, and not very dangerous, but there certainly should never be any tallow candles and cotton used in close touch, for they do not get along well together and have caused many thousands of dollars of property to be destroyed and many lives to be lost as a result of trying to use them together. Lubbock needs to guard well her fire record.

We think it was a pretty honest confession of the physician who made the frank statement several days ago that half of what we eat goes into his stomach and the other half goes to keep the physician alive. That means just this that we all eat about twice too much.

We think that war was partly right when he said that mice had lost all their traits of usefulness. They are no longer needed in order that the observation of some of the old sayings could see the pretty silk stockings clear to the knee. Dame fashion has regulated all of that and the mouse might just as well admit that he is of no more use to mankind.

We think that there is too much litter and trash being left in the alleys for the very best protection against fire. It is near Christmas time and there is always more or less danger of fire because of shooting candles and crackers. Might spend the next few days very profitably by cleaning up some more.

We think that Lubbock has the friendship of most every town in the South Plains, and that is worth a great deal to any city.

We think this new fangled wedding proposal may be all right for some folks, but for real home builders cannot be recommended. And when America strikes at the home building, she is striking at the very foundation of the nation, and has better look out for the results before anything but happy. The nation cannot stand when the home is jeopardized.

We think that President Coolidge probably is anxious that Ambassador Morrow see just what he has to put up with. He has scheduled an automobile trip that will take them six days to complete, provided the enemies of the present administration do not get sight of them.

We think that it may be all right for people to talk about the president of the governors' public life, but we just can't give this kind of talking about a fellow's private life much of our time.

We think that a five year penitentiary sentence for killing a man and a death sentence for robbing a bank when there was one killed and not a shot was fired was too great ratio for money against human blood.

We think this old thing of etiquette is all both any way. We read a long book on the stuff one time, and the first time we tried to put it into practice we got laughed at, and of course we must have pulled a bone, or else none of the fellows present knew their onions, one or the other. Anyway we have always been able to get along, but better by not trying to do like somebody else that we did not know whether they knew any more than we did or not.

We think that bank robbers should be given not less than 50 years sentence in the state penitentiary, but cannot believe that it is right to place a bounty on their heads. There are other things, such as rapists and sorry, good for nothing men that will ruin the life of our girls, are meaner than the bank robber, and if any class of folks should be placed in the bounty class they should, and even then there are too many chances for the wrong interpretation of the intentions of people to be so drastic.

A Great Impersonation

IT IS REPORTED

It is reported that the college students are eager to see the holidays come—but those term examinations take all of the kick out of the thought of the days previous to their departure back home.

It is reported that the Southwestern Conference officials did not take in any new members. However, we feel that Texas Tech will be taken in at the time the conference authorities are ready for more members.

It is reported that Colonel Lindbergh will make a flight to Mexico. Here's hoping that the revolutionists won't hold him for a ransom for he would bring a good price.

It is reported that cold weather seems to be responsible for a good many car wrecks in Lubbock, as well as elsewhere. The reason seems to be that curtains and closed-in devices seem to hinder the vision of the driver. We would imagine it would especially when some of the cars are covered up entirely with wagon sheets with nothing but a key hole to look through. There is much danger in driving in cars thus equipped, and as long as they are operated that way there will continue to be wrecks and accidents of various and sundry kinds.

It is reported that Lubbock county has produced more turkey meat this year than ever before in this history of the South Plains and with the large facilities that we have in Lubbock for handling them, the industry is sure to increase. There is a lot of mighty good money in the poultry business, and when our farmers get to the point where they will give more attention to the marketing problems there will be still better returns from their particular industry.

It is reported that Lubbock is soon to have the biggest grain elevator in this section of the Plains. Lubbock is gradually and steadily growing into the industrial center of the great country, each year adding big plants taking care of the developments of the various industries. This is a good condition. Its healthy, and it is the kind of growth that makes towns that stay.

OPINIONS

TEACHING IS NOT A SIDE LINE

The state superintendent has handed down a decision upholding the action of a county superintendent in declining to approve the teaching contract of a man who, in addition to teaching school, operated a filling station, grocery store and a farm. The crux of the decision is that in the opinion of the school authorities teaching must be the exclusive business of those engaged in the teaching profession, and that it must not be regarded as an auxiliary employment merely to supplement an income from other activities. Of course this inhibition against outside employment is restricted to the actual period the schools are open and does not affect vacation employment of teachers.

There can be little basis for quarrelling with the decision of the state superintendent in this case. That it would be difficult, if not impossible for a teacher to give his best efforts to his school duties while being at the same time engaged in outside business activities seems obvious. Not many people are sufficiently talented to enable them to do well more than one job at a time, and certainly spheres of activity as widely separated as nature and environment as filling stations and the task of directing

YOUR HEALTH

LIFE SPAN IS MEASURED BY KIND OF WORK WE DO

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

The average man works eight hours, sleeps eight hours and spends the other eight hours in recreation. The eight hours of work have much to do with all of the rest of his life. If he occupies a menial position, he is likely to be exposed to cold and wet and unfavorable physical conditions.

If his pay is limited, he is likely to eat an insufficient diet and to have insufficient recreation. More and more, therefore, scientific medicine is beginning to investigate conditions associated with work as to their effects on health and disease.

The average mortality rate for men of the age of 25 to 65 is fifteen per thousand, but liquor handlers and copper and lead miners have a rate of twenty per thousand, and doctors have a higher rate than either lawyers or ministers.

The high rate for physicians is accredited to the fact that their lives lead them into much overwork and exposure. The disabilities of men also vary according to their occupations.

Actors, architects, bankers, musicians and teachers have rates lower than the average. On the other hand, brokers, traveling salesmen, dentists and restaurant proprietors and tailors have more than the average amount of illness.

The expectation of life at the age of 20 is eight years less for industrial workers than for agricultural commercial and professional workers.

The death rate from tuberculosis is two to three times higher among industrial workers than in farming commercial and professional classes. Pneumonia has twice the death rate among industrial workers.

Bootleggers are subject to all sorts of unusual hazards and are kept extremely irregular hours. To the insurance companies these factors are of great importance because it is necessary they be taken into account in estimating premiums against loss of time from illness or against death.

Our Sunday Morning Sermon

By REV. R. F. DUNN

"That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit."

"Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again—John 3:6-7.

The doctrine of regeneration, or the "new birth," is not a doctrine of theological speculation. It is not a presupposition of post-apostolic times. It is true, that before Jesus began His earthly ministry, theologians had lost sight of the Kingdom of God. They were high in the great spiritual truths of the scriptures beneath the traditions of the Scribes and Elders. The declaration of Christ, that "except a man be born from above" he couldn't enter the Kingdom of God, came to Nicodemus as a profound surprise, and with overwhelming amazement. He could just ask, "How can these things be?"

Another surprise, was expressed by Christ, which ought to teach us an important lesson of not being deceived by theological speculations of the theologians of our day. This danger is not only a possibility, but a sad fact, verified by many instances of unscriptural teaching in some of the seminaries of Europe and America.

Jesus said to Nicodemus, "Art thou master in Israel and knowest not these things?" Of course Jesus knew all about the ignorance of the people on earth. Note what he says in Matt. 15:3-9. "This people draweth nigh unto me with their lips; but their hearts are far from me. But in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men." This quotation for Isaiah the prophet (Isa. 29:13) can be duplicated in other parts of Old Testament history. If we flatter ourselves with the conceit that we are so much wiser than the saints of old, we need not fear the possibility of serious delusions. We are sure to fall into the error they made and our responsibility being greater, because we have fuller revelations of the truth, our condemnation will be more severe.

Again, we need to remind ourselves of what Jesus said to those people about righteousness. "Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the Kingdom of Heaven." Matt. 5:20. What was their righteousness of which the Master is speaking here? Jesus said they were full of mint and anise, and cummin, and omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy and faith; and added these words, "These ye ought to leave alone, and not to leave the other undone." In the same connection (Matt. 23:23-28), "Even so, ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity."

If we read the entire reference, as given above, we shall see other characteristics of the same nature, which reveal their righteousness as a kind that was beautiful in its outward appearance, but within they were full of "rottenness." From Jesus, they received the most scathing denunciation because of their hypocrisy. We do not under-

OUR CHURCHES

In the church columns you find each week announcements of the various services in the city today. You should form the habit of looking in these over and learning just what is going on in the churches each Sunday. You can find at one of the several organizations a service that will interest you, and it will do you good to attend. We doubt if there ever was a service held in any church in this city that some one was not benefitted by having been there.

The ministers of this city are an extra high type. They are men who stand out prominently among the preachers of the various denominations, and also take prominent part in the affairs of the city. They are men of ability, and strong character, and you should be pleased to avail yourselves of the opportunity of attending services at any of the churches in Lubbock.

We believe that everyone should consider it a duty to meet at least once each week for a worship service. Use the Sabbath day for something other than commercialism. Do not shove the ox in the ditch in order that you may have the job of pulling him out on Sunday. Plan your business so that you can be at home Sundays, and make it an open day for worship, rather than for trading and traveling.

Today's Poems

"THE LAST OF LIFE FOR WHICH THE FIRST WAS MADE"

What though the swift years fly,
What though thou canst not deny
Yon in the east the shades of twilight gray?

Let pile each year on year—
Old age can hold no fear
For thee if death holds not the power to dismay.

From youth's present delight
Enticing future bright
In dazzling flight fast lures the years away;

At last the sun sinks low,
And as the late hours go
And golden afternoon for twilight slow gives away.

Old age on looking back
Along the swift run track

May look a pleasure record made
He looks from his antique place
Looks down upon the race that
And smiles to see how grimly the age-long game is played.

The scheme to win the race,
The zest of strife for place
Stirs him no more; unselfish friendships live

Lave and twine around his breast,
Old age by love is blest
And loving gives and giving learns how blest to give.

In younger lives again
He lives, has pleasure, when His heart and brain are spent to try the tears

Of younger hearts in pain,
And prove his efforts vain.
He conquers grief by wisdom developed through the years.

Inadequate Snow Removal On Main Highways In Snow Belt Means Annual Loss Of $500,000,000, A. A. A. Says

$100 Spent To Keep Roads Open Saves $1,000; Plan Is To Spend $5,269,000 In Coming Winter

WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec. 10.—More than 117,000 miles, nearly 50 per cent of the main arteries of vehicular travel in the 26 states in the snow belt will be kept open and free from snow during the present winter, according to a statement issued today by the National Headquarters of the American Automobile Association.

Approximately $5,269,000 will be expended for this extensive program and it will mean a saving of millions of dollars in economic benefits to the snow states.

Seek Definite Program
The national motoring body, it is announced, will continue its efforts to have all states in the snow belt adopt a definite program for snow removal not only in the interests of economy, but as a vital factor in distributing food, maintaining social communication and keeping the schools in operation.

In the winter of 1926-27, a total of 106,721 miles were cleared of snow, the A. A. A. says, and this mileage will be increased ten per cent in the winter of 1927-28. The estimated cost for clearing winter roads is based on a slight increase in both mileage and cost over last winter.

The A. A. A. estimates that every $100 spent in snow removal yields $1,000 in more efficient transportation and business activity. On the basis of these figures the communities which keep their streets and highways clear this year will reap an economic benefit in excess of $50,000,000.

Value Demonstrated
"These figures demonstrate the great value of snow removal to commerce alone," says the A. A. A., "and when it is considered that 75 per cent of the nation's population or 30,000,000 people are dependent largely upon the open road, the figures carry a vital significance."

The "hustle and bustle" of daily life is cited by the national motoring body as a sure sign that closing of highways would mean untold loss to the snow belt area. It is now estimated that inadequate snow removal causes a loss to the nation's business in a single winter of $500,000,000. The A. A. A. statement continues:

70 Per Cent In Snow Belt
"Practically seventy per cent of the nation's registered motor vehicles are in the snow belt. This means that on a basis of 15,000,000 motor vehicles registered, with an average value of $1,000, an investment of $15,000,000,000, in the snow states alone, is dependent upon the problem of keeping the highways open for winter travel."

"The cost of clearing the highways of snow averaged $43.50 a mile last year and ranged from $6.50 per mile in Virginia, the southern boundary of the snow-belt, to $126.22 per mile in Wyoming, in the northwest."

"In the snow belt there are 215,000 miles of improved highways representing an initial investment of $8,000,000,000, assuming an average cost of $25,000 per mile. The elimination of surface repairs is a great factor in the argument for snow removal and it is estimated in Maryland, for instance, that there was $150,000 saved in repairs for every $50,000 expended in snow removal."

"Far too many states and cities still lag behind in preparedness for snow removal. The result is transportation tie-ups, interference with winter motoring, unnecessary damage to the streets, the closing of schools, the isolation of thousands of families in rural homes, the loss and deflection of business, and quite often the serious curtailing of food distribution."

"The rapid increase in bus transportation alone brings the snow removal problem directly as one of national importance."

"As there are, over 50,000 motor buses operated in the United States and the majority of these are in the snow belt, the situation becomes doubly serious. Of these buses, over 40,000 are operated as common carriers and over 20,000 for use of public and private schools."

Radiograms Used By Truck Company

Graham Brothers Maintain Private Wireless Plants For Messages Between All Factory Units

The manufacturers of Graham Brothers trucks, in Detroit, operate one of the largest of private radio plants for transmitting and receiving radiograms in the United States. This company sends between four and five thousand messages per month and receives between 2,000 and 2,500 over the same period.

The business is restricted to inter-company messages between the Detroit headquarters factory and the Evansville, Indiana plant.

Construction of the radio station was begun in December, 1925, but it was not opened officially and put into daily use until March, 1926. The wireless plant comprising WFL, Detroit, and WTL, Evansville, has eliminated the necessity of a private wire between these two points insofar as the Graham Brothers truck manufacturing are concerned and this effects a saving of many thousands of dollars throughout the year. The toll on the private wire, which the radio replaced, amounted to several thousand dollars per month, while under the wireless arrangement the cost is negligible—less than the salary of the personnel.

The wireless plant has an output rating of approximately 600 watts and operates on a wave length of 423.3 meters, 7600 kilocycles. Master oscillators, using 204A, 250 watt tubes, and two of the same type amplifiers are used in Detroit and Evansville. The Detroit station has two 65-foot antennas poles set 125 feet apart. These stations could reach any part of the earth but the license issued by the government restricts them to sending messages for their own business and between the two stations mentioned.

How the Anti-Freeze Works

By ISRAEL KLEIN

Science Editor, NEA Service

What anti-freeze does to use in the cooling system depends on the climate as well as the extent to which the automobile is driven.

Where a constant cold spell is expected for long periods, as in the northwest, it may be economical to use alcohol as the anti-freeze. In this case, the alcohol will not boil out, since low temperatures will be maintained for some time, and will at the same time keep the mixture from freezing.

High percentages of anti-freeze have to be used, where the temperature falls down to 20 degrees and more below zero. The higher this percentage, the greater becomes the difference in cost between alcohol and glycerine, and the less economical becomes the latter.

Where the average cold spell is short and not too severe, however, glycerine is the best anti-freeze to use. In this case, there isn't the danger that comes with the use of alcohol when a sudden cold snap hits the locality or when the cold changes suddenly to warmer weather.

Whatever the weather, the glycerine remains in the car ready for the next cold spell.

The following table, based on U. S. Bureau of Standards tests, tells what proportion of anti-freeze to use with water, for the degree of temperature expected at any locality or at any time of the winter.

Degrees Fahrenheit	Per cent Alcohol	Per cent Glycerine
20	19	22
10	28	32
0	38	42
-10	45	47
-20	52	54

The alcohol here considered is the denatured variety and the glycerine is the pure, distilled chemical that is now being prepared in several commercial forms for special radiator use.

The temperature mentioned is the minimum to which the percentage of anti-freeze shown may be used with safety. Below that temperature, the amount of anti-freeze has to be increased, in proportion to water used.

For instance, if the expected low temperature will be 20 degrees above zero at any period, and alcohol is to be used, 19 per cent of the cooling solution, or about one-fifth, should be alcohol and the rest water.

If glycerine is to be used, the lowest possible temperature for the entire winter can be considered at the very beginning. If that is ten degrees below zero, the amount of glycerine needed would be 47 per cent, or almost one-half the capacity of the cooling system, with the rest water.

The instruction book that goes with each automobile gives the capacity of its cooling system, from which the right amounts of water and anti-freeze may be calculated. If the instruction book is lost, any dealer or garage man can give the information.

If glycerine is used, the mixture in the cooling system should not come within three inches of the top of the overflow pipe in the radiator. This is essential because glycerine expands considerably, and if the radiator is filled to the top, it would be lost in the overflow.

The expansion of the glycerine has no ill effect on the mixture.

Old Buick Engine Used On Railroad

Most Novel Method Found For Second Hand Motor In Use By Portland Man On Miniature Road

FLINT, Mich., Dec. 10.—Thrilling machines, pumping outfits, home lighting installations, and a host of other labor saving devices are providing work for automobile engines to do after they have finished their term of service in the field for which they were built. But it remained for Robert Ballinger, of Portland, Ore., to devise for such an engine one of the most novel uses which has come to the attention of the Buick factory here.

For the past four years, Ballinger has been using the engine from a 1914 four-cylinder Buick to run a miniature railroad which he operates at Oaks Park, a Portland amusement place. His train is also an annual feature of the Oregon State Fair at Salem.

Ballinger's father, who is manager of the park, bought the Buick in 1915, when it had seen a few years' use. He drove it several years, making repeated trips to California in it in the days before the present splendid highways were built.

Then in 1923, a power plant was needed for the miniature railway which Ballinger planned to build, and the Buick's long record of service suggested adoption of its engine to the new use.

With 12,000 miles showing on its speedometer, the Buick was dismantled, and the locomotive was built around its power plant, the carburetor, starter lever, switch, and generator being retained.

Ballinger reports that his son has operated the locomotive for four seasons without a breakdown, averaging 5,000 miles a season. It runs a train weighing 3,000 pounds, and 5,000 pounds loaded, and though it has covered well over 100,000 miles, still has an apparently indefinite capacity for service.

Drivers, in crossing a railroad down this location, must take every precaution that no train is near, even to the extent of getting out of the car, unable to see otherwise. The U. S. Supreme court recently handed down this location. Evangelist Booth has gone to Chicago. You'll find the 8th Army wherever there is blood.

Trophies Recall Hill Climb Days

Up Collection At Oakland Factory Won Years Ago By Quaint Four On Display At Pontiac

Reminiscence of the old days, when curious crowds witnessed the climbing contests between pioneer automobiles in the collection of trophies, is the collection of trophies, frequently stop to read the inscriptions on the old trophies recall the contests which filled the newspapers of 1909, 1910, and 1911, when the automobile was still king and many of these "horseless carriages" as cranks contrived of the real value.

The power and mechanical perfection of modern cars prompts the average motorist to take for granted the fact that his automobile is practically any grade of car, and it was not so long ago that the automobile was assembled to meet the putting efforts of auto hill-climbers, resplendent in polished brass equipment, to struggle up "test hills" which today seem unnecessary, even a change of cars.

The trophy inscriptions record the names of many such historic hill-climbing contests in addition to several early economy and reliability events. Among the famous hill-climbers are listed: William C. Clark, at Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Arthur D. Hill, Long Island, N. Y.; William C. Clark, at Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Arthur D. Hill, Long Island, N. Y.; William C. Clark, at Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Arthur D. Hill, Long Island, N. Y.

On several of the cups appears the name of Harold Bauer, a famous driver of that period. Acquisition of the first of these trophies is antedated only two years by the organization of the Oakland Motor Car company in 1909. In 1907 E. M. Murphy, who years later had been a successful manufacturer of buggies, and president of the Pontiac Buggy company, organized the Oakland company.

At that time he saw that the carriage business was on the decline, while the motor car was being to secure a firm foothold in the country. When he organized the new concern he set aside one of the buggy company's buildings for making the new product.

The start was modest, beginning with a two-cylinder model, equipped with a unique motor—two vertical cylinders—designed by A. P. Brush, who was first vice-president of the Oakland Motor Car company. Brush was also the designer of the Cadillac, and of the single-cylinder Cadillac. The first Oakland was popularly received, although production was limited.

In 1908 the company brought out the first four-cylinder car, an unusual type, known as Model K. It was a success, and the Oakland Motor Car company was purchased by the General Motors corporation, being the third passenger company to join the corporation.

At that time the Oakland was of course much smaller than it is today and the production was modest. Five thousand automobiles per year was regarded as a tremendously large production.

In the completion of the current expansion projects, culminating in Oakland's steady growth, then in decades, the company will be

HUPP'S NOVEMBER SETS NEW RECORD

Orders And Shipments Are Greatest Of Any Month In Company's History, Report Of Factory Says

November, with shipments of 5,076 cars and orders totaling nearly 2,000 cars more than that figure, was the largest month in Hupmobile's entire history. Retail value of orders shipped and unfilled exceeded $9,000,000, according to H. S. Cole, general sales manager. The company entered November at capacity production, its largest previous month was June, 1926, when 5,941 cars were shipped. Its shipments for November, 1927, were 5,076. The previous record November was in 1925, when 4,363 cars were shipped, following the introduction of the first Hupmobile Six.

"The remarkably satisfactory introduction of the New Hupmobile 1928 Six accounted for the vast bulk of our November business," said Mr. Cole. "As of November 29, dealers reported the sale of more than 4,000 of these cars, and were carrying close to 2,000 unfilled orders on their books on December 1."

"There is no question but what this car has been given easily the greatest reception ever accorded any Hupmobile, and is already a startling success. Its features, both in body and chassis, naturally cause us to look forward to the winter months and to 1928, generally, with greatest optimism. Our dealers are tremendously pleased. From coast to coast, they have given us unqualified assurance that the public is buying and will continue to buy this car in greater volume than ever before."

Hupmobile's success is establishing a new record month at this time of year is almost unparalleled in motor car annals. Its sales record during the first month following the introduction of the New Hupmobile 1928 Six is most successful in several of the country's largest centers of population. Both in Wayne county, Michigan, in which Detroit is located, and in Cleveland, November registrations show Hupmobile in fifth place among all manufacturers, exceeded only by companies producing cars of considerably lower prices.

Chrysler Erects Engineering Unit

Most Modern Testing And Experimental Equipment Provided And Offices For Executives

Construction was begun on November 22 at the Chrysler Corporation's Highland Park, Michigan, plant, of a new building to house the activities of the Chrysler Engineering Department, including the offices of engineering executives, and to provide improved facilities for automotive research, experiments and tests.

The new structure will be 60 by 400 feet, of four stories, and designed for a fifth floor to be added when further expansion requires it. Concrete construction of the latest type is being employed. The floors to have a carrying capacity of 200 pounds per square foot. The exterior surface will be of glazed brick cut stone and concrete.

Specifications include a freight elevator of 5,000 pounds capacity and speed of 200 feet per minute, with automatic doors, and a passenger elevator of the super-selective push-button control type.

Among the many unusual features of the new building will be an ice plant with a capacity of 75 tons per day, with the latest equipment for testing cars under all conditions of temperature and humidity; dynamometer test rooms without exhaust systems underground; an air washing system to provide pure, fresh air in all working spaces; chassis roll testing machinery; hydraulic lift for car observation, etc.

Complete facilities will be provided for mechanical, physical, electrical and metallurgical laboratories, experimental machine shop, all design and drafting, experimental body building and painting departments, test and experiment car garages.

The new building is scheduled for completion before March 15, 1928. Smith, Hinchman & Grylls are the architects, and W. E. Wood the builder.

"Electricity brings increased Comfort"

Says Herbert Hoover, Secretary U. S. Department of Commerce.

"We are in the midst of a great transformation in the development of electric power—it is reducing the burden of human toil; it is increasing productivity; it is bringing increased comfort to our people."

WHAT each workman in the United States can do with his hands is multiplied ten times by the electric power he uses. Sixty-eight million people are also using labor-saving electrical devices in their homes.

Electrical service has its greatest value because it is delivered at the time and place where it is needed. That is what electrical SERVICE means, and the foresight and enterprise of the country's light and power companies have helped make it possible.

Because power companies built power plants and transmission lines that would take care of the growing demand for service many years in advance, every new electrical invention has found an abundance of power ready to serve it. Now even the small communities get electrical service through interconnected power systems.

Enthusiastic public acceptance has done much to help build this electrical service. These million investors own the securities of electric power companies and the whole public has benefited from greater service made possible through increased use of labor-saving devices.

To insure the complete fulfillment of the promise of comfort and happiness which electricity offers, the American principle of individual initiative must be maintained.
