TOPICS of OUR CITY
By O.E.H.

TWINKLES

Tonight is the night of nights to 50 Lions and 10 pretty young misses who at 8:15 o'clock will see the curtain rise on the first performance of the 1933 minstrel show and musical revue at the city auditorium.

And are we self-conscious? A great many of the members of the cast will be facing those big audiences with the knowledge that certain cronies in the audience are casting aspersions on their singing ability. They have seen their names in print and their faces are already red. But they'll get over it.

But seriously, we believe the public will enjoy this show. It has been prepared at a sacrifice of time by business men who could ill afford to leave their offices to practice. Men who otherwise could not be dragged by all the king's horses to a musical comedy stage are presenting this show in order that lives may be saved and bodies rebuilt with the proceeds.

We promised something on the second part sketches prepared by Dr. Hicks et al. Well, it seems that this stunt is staged in total darkness with the exception of occasional flashes. And what scandals are revealed in those brief glimpses into the private lives of local prominent citizens. To reveal the plot would spoil the fun, but this is the general idea.

If you can't see the show the first night, try to see it Friday night, which will likely be the best performance anyway.

* * *

Mayor W. A. Bratton says golf is a game which unnecessarily prolong the lives of worthless citizens. (Mrs. Bratton says Bill is getting ready to take up the game.)

* * *

Most states have laws prohibiting men from dressing in women's clothing. We're writing Senator Small to introduce a bill to prevent Texas women from dressing in men's trousers.

TIME TO DECIDE

County commissioners right commendably have studied the hospitalization problem long and sincerely. So far, so good. But too long delay would be imposing upon the patience of the people and endangering the lives of those who quite frequently find themselves in need of quick surgery or medical care. . . . There are people in Pampa brought here by the wealth of natural resources. Because of the nationwide system of helping only bona fide residents, they dare not leave. For the county to help care for them when they are in dire distress seems to be the most logical plan. As much as 80 per cent of the county taxes is paid by those who benefit from the county's natural resources. It would cost the average taxpayer less than a dollar a year for the county to go to the aid of those most deseperately in need. The citizens of the county await a definite, adequate decision on the part of the four commissioners.

THE HUMAN PROBLEM

We cannot overlook the human, moral question involved in caring for those in dire need. No other function of government transcends this one. There are corners which cold be cut, savings which could be made, to reduce cost of government without ignoring the welfare problem. Indeed, if other expenses were not so high, the government could do more for its needy. We do not believe that the American people intended for the cost of government to EQUAL THE FAIR NET

WITNESS TO TESTIFY WIFE FOUND WEAPON

MISSING WOMAN LED OFFICER TO GUN IS CONTENTION

TWO GIRLS ON STAND

CLAIM QUINN PURSUED THEM ON MORNING OF SLAYINGS

ENID, Okla., March 2. (AP)—Jubilant over a court ruling which they said will make it possible for them to trace the death pistol of Earl Quinn, state's attorneys today pressed toward a conclusion of their circumstantial case again Quinn, on trial a second time for the Griffith sisters murder.

Judge J. W. Bird ruled at the end of a legal battle that the state may trace the movements of Jean Quinn, missing wife of the man on trial.

As a result of the ruling the state can present witnesses to testify that Mrs. Quinn led officers to the pistol that killed Jessie and Zexia Griffith, Frank M. Dudley, assistant attorney general, said.

"I can't get a fair trial," Quinn said angrily after the ruling. "I'll testify, though. I'll go on the stand and beat this case anyhow."

James H. Mathers, defense attorney, said he will continue to interpose an objection every time the name of Mrs. Quinn is mentioned.

The present trial was ordered by the criminal court of appeals when it reversed the conviction and death verdict of a Newkirk jury 17 months ago. Quinn is charged in the deaths of both Griffith sisters, Blackwell school teachers, and is being tried for the murder of Jessie.

The bullet-torn bodies of the Griffith sisters were found on a little-used road south of Tonkawa the morning of Sunday, December 28, 1930.

Two witnesses, Miss Ruby Heard and Vergil Davis, this morning related that Quinn pursued them at 3 a. m. that Sunday morning on the highway, trying to force their car into a ditch and finally forcing them into his car at the point of a pistol.

Jury In County Court To Meet Again Saturday

Prospective jurors in county court will meet again Saturday for possible duty in criminal cases, then will end the two-week jury service. The third week is non-jury.

One jury assessed a 2-year suspended sentence in a juvenile case, but for the most part the court's time was occupied in rendering default judgments, continuing or dismissing cases, taking a plea of guilty in a criminal case involving a fine of $10 and costs for passing a school bus, and probate matters.

The next term of county court will open April 3 for a non-jury period last the rest of the month. Seeking to save money for the county, Judge C. E. Cary is re-arranging the terms to use fewer jury lists.

SECOND TRANSFUSION

A complicated story that is claimed to be the truth—DeLea Vicars won something like 35 cents from Hamp Brown in a friendly game of Golf. DeLea didn't pay so Hamp sent a draft through the First National bank. DeLea had Notary Public J. O. Gillham protest and send Hamp a bill for $1.25 protest fee. Now it seems that Hamp is going to sue DeLea and J. O. for using the mails to defraud.

SAVES SISTER

"I DON'T hurt—I saved my sister, didn't I?" Betty Le Master, 8, shown above in an Athens, O., hospital, spoke those words unmindful of the seven fingers she sacrificed in saving her little sister, Rita, 6, from death beneath a train. Rita had been playing under a frienght car. When it started to move Betty crawled under, pushed her sister free just as a wheel crushed her hands.

ROOSEVELT TO BLAST BUREAUS GARNER CLAIMS

Millions To Be Saved In New Economy Program

WASHINGTON, March 2. (AP) — Speaker Garner today told newspapermen that advistors of President-elect Roosevelt had completed an economy program to shave from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 off of government costs.

The program was drafted by Representative Douglas of Arizona, President-elect Roosevelt's choice for director of the budget, and Swagar Sherley, a close associate.

Garner said that under the treasury-post office department supply bill's provisions giving Mr. Roosevelt power to reorganize the government most of the economies could be effected by executive orders.

"If congress gives Mr. Roosevelt authority to reduce salaries and cut veterans compensation, between $700,000,000 and $800,000,000 will be saved and the country will approve it," Garner said.

"A shake-up is brewing for Washington such as past March fours never have brought, for, barring a misstep today, congress will place in the hands of Franklin D. Roosevelt power to tear the government's huge bureaucratic structure wide open.

That he intends to use it, and use it thoroughly, experienced observers here have no doubt whatever. The very secrecy with which the economic preparations of his trusted advisers have been guarded for weeks past, is taken as evidence of a serious intent to houseclean.

By comparison the removal of republican office holders not under civil service protection and the substitution of democrats becomes a small item.

Minstrel Troop Lunches Together

Members of the Lions minstrel cast, including most of the girls who are assisting, lunched together today.

The girls were Miss Jackie Jones, club pianist, and Misses Dorothy Doucette, Esther Stark, Dorothy Dodd, Aileen Cook, Dorothy Harris, and Louise Walstad. Other guests were Bob Daugherty, Loyd Moore, A. C. St. Clair, and T. J. Coffey of McLean, and F. H. Yealy.

The club received a request that it support Del Harrington of El Paso for the next district governor, but took no action.

Roger McConnell, Ed Mazey, and B. W. Rose were appointed to assist in the Boy Scout drive opening Monday.

Mrs. L. R. Bush of McLean left Pampa hospital this morning.

BIG RANSOM PAID KIDNAPERS

DOCTOR HANDS OVER AMOUNT NEAR AIRPORT

BOETTCHER UNHARMED —WAS BLINDFOLDED FOR 17 DAYS

KIDNAPERS NEVER SEEN

VICTIM THINKS THERE WERE THREE IN HIS CAPTORS' GANG

DENVER, March 2. (AP)—A ransom of $60,000 was paid shortly before Charles Boettcher, 2nd., 31-year-old heir to riches, was freed here last night, ending nearly seventeen "days and nights of blackness, discomfort and threats" in the hands of kidnapers.

It was revealed today that Dr. John M. Foster, young physician and friend of the kidnaped broker, kept a rendezvous with the abductors in behalf of Claude K. Boettcher, the multimillionaire father, and paid the demanded $60,000.

"Thank God, it's all over," young Boettcher said in his first utterance since the kidnapers released him from an automobile in the stockyards district unharmed.

The climax to the west's most amazing kidnaping came with startling suddenness. Shortly after 6 p. m. last night, Dr. Foster drove to a designated spot near the municipal airport. In his automobile he had the $60,000.

Kidnapers Waiting

There the kidnapers were waiting. Although they remained out of sight themselves, they allowed the physician a glimpse of their blindfolded victim. Foster dropped the bag containing the money and raced for Denver to inform young Boettcher's family.

Soon after young Boettcher telephoned his mother, Mrs. Millson McCormick, from a drug store in the vicinity where he had been released. Foster and Norman Bar-

Pampa Girls To Be Honored At Amarillo Show

Miss Ruth Reynolds will be the Pampa princess at the Amarillo Fat Stock show next week, and Miss Louise Walstad will be her maid of honor, it was announced today.

There will be about 50 princesses and 200 other girls of the Panhandle in the Rainbow pageant to be staged in connection with the show. Miss Frances Mayhugh of Plainview will be crowned queen of the show and the various princesses and attendants will file on the stage between specialty numbers.

Caliche Being Put On City's Streets

Routine work is being done by men hired by the federal relief committee. More than 85 men started to work this morning, relieving those who were employed the first three days of the week. Most in the new group are at work in the caliche pits and spreading caliche on city streets.

Forms have been removed from the walls of the swimming pool and it will be several days before the floor will be poured. A few men are getting the forms ready for the floor and cleaning up the grounds around the pool.

Work in the Talley addition has been completed. Some of the men are hauling Red Cross flour and storing it in the basement of the city hall.

Lions Minstrel Will Be Staged Tonight

Capacity House Will Witness First of Two Shows in City Auditorium Here.

Those citizens who have not bought reserved seats can occupy other seats almost as good for the general admission price of 25 cents at the Lions minstrel tonight. Most or the reserved seats are in the center section.

PAMPA Lions, with a cast of more than 50 men and ten young women, tonight will present their second annual musical revue and minstrel show in the first of two performances at 8:15 o'clock in the city auditorium.

The curtain will rise for the second show at the same time Friday evening.

Reserved seat tickets were nearly sold out at noon at Fatheree Drug No. 4, but the 25-cent unreserved seats, numbering 375, are still on sale and will be offered at the door both nights. Those who have not bought reserved seats are being urged to go early and get the best of the unreserved seats.

Directed by John F. Sturgeon, the Lions practiced for many weeks and are said to have a more tuneful, interesting show than last year, but shorter. The entire performance will require only an hour and a half. More than a score of popular song-hits and several original songs will be heard, together with solos, duets, male quartets, "black-outs" sketches, and gags. The curtain will rise on a Russian roof-garden scene, with all members of the cast in costume.

The program follows:

1. Opening overture, by entire cast.
2. I May Never Pass our Way Again, Emmitt Smith.
3. Fit As a Fiddle, Roy Bourland.
4. It's Going To Be You, Miss Dorothy Doucette.
5. Carry Me Back to Old Virginny, E. D. Zimmerman.
6. I Wish I Had Wings, George Limerick.
7. Wait For Me At the Close of Day, club quartet.
8. Pink Elephants, Dr. H. L. Wilder.

SIGNS POINT TO RAINEY AS NEW SPEAKER

BYRNS STEPS OUT OF RACE IN FAVOR OF ILLINOIS MAN

WASHINGTON, March 2. (AP)—It looks as though before the day is out that name of Rainey of Illinois will be joined to the list of speakers of the house of representattives after Cannon, Clark, Gillett, Longworth and Garner.

Eventualities may change the prospect, but out of a swirl of developments at the capitol today emerged indications that only a terrific upset would suffice to do so.

Supporters of Representative McDuffie of Alabama, party whip, would not concede: but Rainey's managers confidently predicted he would win on the first ballot at the party caucus in the late afternoon.

Managers for Representative Byrns of Tennessee, the third leading candidate, frankly stated that Byrns had withdrawn in support of Rainey and would make a speech in his behalf.

Represenative Cullen of New York, a leader, plainly indicated that his powerful Tammany delegation would support Rainey.

Tomorrow's Date Has Four 'Three'

Pampans who use the abbreviated form of putting dates on checks and letters will write figures tomorrow that will not be used again for a century—3-3-33.

Tomorrow happens to be the third day of the third month of the year 1933 which can be added to 12 or 39, both divisible by three. And Pampans are wondering if March came in like a lion or a lamb. The sun came out brightly but a brisk wind blew most of the day. If the almanacs' predicitions for the end of the month are right, March came in like a lamb, because probabilities for the end of the month are stormy and cold.

Dog-Catcher Has Killed 157 Dogs

Chief of Police Jno. V. Andrews has compiled a "dog" record for last month and even surprised him if that were possible. The chief said this morning that the drive on untagged and unclaimed dogs was "about half over," yet 448 dogs had been accounted for up to yesterday morning.

Of the dogs recorded, 261 have been tagged, 157 killed and 30 are now in the pound to be killed unless claimed. Two dog catchers are working full time catching dogs which have not been tagged or vaccinated.

SCOUT LEADERS SECURE AID OF MANY IN DRIVE

Preliminary Work Is Being Completed This Week

WHILE Pampa's main Boy Scout finance drive will start Monday with men's and women's organizations assisting, much preliminary work is being done this week by A. G. Post, Roger McConnell, and J. O. Gillham, who have planned the campaign.

Believing that local citizens know the work of the Scouts and wish to help, the campaign committee is not setting a goal and making a high-powered appeal, but will attempt to see everyone so that all may help.

Simultaneously, a drive will be held in Borger and likely at other towns where preliminary work is under way. At Borger Vice-President H. W. Price has appointed C. I. Lieurance to head the campaign.

Scout Executive C. A. Clark said today that requests for data and advice were coming from all over the council and beyond. Scouting is "going over" as never before in the Adobe Walls council.

DEATH COMES SUDDENLY ON BOARD TRAIN

NOTED MONTANAN WAS TO BE IN CABINET OF ROOSEVELT

MARRIED ON SATURDAY

BRIDE OF ONE WEEK IS IN HYSTERICAL CONDITION

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C., March 2. (AP)—Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana died suddenly of a heart attack aboard an Atlantic coast line train near Wilson today while en route to Washington with his bride whom he married Saturday in Havana.

The senator, who was named to be attorney general in the cabinet of President-elect Roosevelt only a few days ago, was stricken and died within a few minutes as he lay in a berth in his drawing room.

He was 73 years old.

Sen. Walsh died at 7:10 a. m. as Conductord Herbert Weatherspee, operating on the train between Laurens, S. C., and Rocky Mount, felt his pulse.

Only the conductor, Mrs. Walsh, and her Cuban maid, and a porter were present.

Mrs. Walsh was described as hysterical by Conductor Weatherspee, who said he reached the senator's side at 7:02.

"The senator died while I held his hand," Weatherspee said. Mrs. Walsh was hysterical. A Dr. Costello was located on the train but he arrived after the senator died.

Dr. Vostello is from Cambridge, Mass. His initials were not learned.

"Doubled Up"

Mrs. Walsh, who speaks little English, told Weatherspee her husband awakened about 6:30 a. m., and that he was "doubled up" in pain. She said she found Senator Walsh holding his stomach with his hands.

The senator rose from his berth in his drawing room and crossed over to his wife's berth and there collapsed, Mrs. Walsh said.

A negro porter was called and he raced seven cars away to find Conductor Weatherspee whom he told the senator appeared to be dying.

Weatherspee said he reached the senator's side in a few minutes, felt his pulse and that death came while he held his hand.

Dr. Costello had reached the drawing room by this time and, as the train rolled into Wilson, Dr. M. A.

LONG LIFE, AND—HAPPINESS

You aren't necessarily wishing a man happiness when you wish him a long life, these days.

According to Dr. Francis M. Pottenger of Monrovia, Calif., who retired not long ago as president of the American College of Physicians, long life is actually proving a curse instead of a blessing.

Medical science, he pointed, prolongs a man's life—and then the man discovers that he can no longer get a job, because of his age. He has an extra allotment of time and nothing to do with it. Even in times of prosperity, the tendency is more and more to dispense with the aging worker. The old man, all too often, must find someone to support him, or starve.

Here we have another of those developments which show the disastrous way in which our society has used the advantages which science has given it.

Science has shown us how to produce enough of everything for everybody, and the chief result seems to be that 12,000,000 men are living on charity. It has enabled us to live longer lives, and the aged are unable to support themselves. It has given us the automobile, and we use it to kill 30,000 people a year and to drive our railroads to the verge of bankruptcy. It has given us the airplane, and we use it to bring the horrors of war into every man's front yard.

Before we get straightened out again on the long road to a better civilization, we shall have to find some way of using these boons as they ought to be used—of using them, in short, to make human life happier and richer and fuller. As things are now we seem to be using them backward.

Perplexing as the tangle is, however, there is no need for us to be discouraged. For even if we haven't learned how to use these advantages properly, we at least have them on hand. We can abolish poverty, make old age serene and contented and make our accelerated system of communications pay us the right kind of dividends, if we once learn how to make use of the existing opportunities. The job isn't nearly as hard as it might be.

DALLAS SENATOR DIRECTS HARSH CRITICISM AT WEST TEXAS' TECH

AUSTIN, March 2. (AP)—The house and senate state affairs committees met last night in joint session to start consideration of bills to reorganize the state government and the institutions of higher learning.

Senator George Purl of Dallas, chairman of the senate committee, harshly criticized the teachers college officials for opposing the recommendations of the legislative committee on efficiency and economy and charged they made the criticism "before they had even read the report."

"The teachers college can take it or leave it and like it or lump it," Purl stated, "but what this legislature ought to do is to cut out some of the inefficiency and extravagance in the teachers colleges."

Purl said it cost more to educate a student in music at the Texas Technological college at Lubbock than it did to send a student to Vienna to study under the masters.

Senator Grady Woodruff, member of the committee on efficiency and economy, asserted the Lubbock school had become "the best teachers college in the state," instead of being operated as a technological institution.

Woodruff said the Lubbock school should be operated as a teachers college and that all its engineering and agricultural activities should be transferred to Texas A. & M. He urged concurrence in the committee's recommendation to center all graduate work in the University of Texas at Austin.

The revenue and taxation committee completed hearings on bills to levy a severance tax on oil production.

California Has Joined 13 States In Bank Holiday

By The Associated Press.

California, Oklahoma, Louisiana, and Mississippi entered today upon bank holidays, bringing to 14 the number of states in which limitations on withdrawals now exist.

The proclamation of Gov. Rolph at San Francisco makes mandatory the closing of California banks for a three-day period ending Saturday. The three-day holiday called by Gov. Murray in Oklahoma for the same period also is mandatory.

The proclamation of Gov. Allen of Louisiana provides for the cessation until the end of the week of "all public business including banks and other public enterprises." In Mississippi the decree of the state banking commissioner called only for the limitation of withdrawals.

In Alabama the holiday which began today is effective until March 10, but is not mandatory. Banks in many parts of the state indicated business would go on as usual.

Nine states in which bank holidays exist by proclamation of governors or authorized state bank officials are: California, Oklahoma, Michigan, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, and Maryland.

In five other states restrictions on withdrawals are in effect in some of the banks. The states are: Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Aarkansas, and Illinois. In the latter state a five per cent withdrawal limit has been made operative by three St. Louis banks as a "temporary measure."

No holiday has been called in Minnesota, but Gov. Olson signed a bill yesterday by which the state commissioner of banks is empowered to suspend the business of a state bank for a maximum period of 15 days at his discretion.

Likewise in Idaho a bill was passed by the legislature before its adjournment last night empowering the governor to call bank holidays if such action is required.

VALIANT DUST

by Percival Christopher Wren, Author of "BEAU GESTE"

SYNOPSIS: Like a lamb among wolves, Margaret Maligni wanders about the Citadel of Mekazzen, watching Jules, her husband, grow more and more like a Moor, and entangle himself deeper and deeper in the unending intrigue of the palace. The Kaid of Mekazzen plots with a German against France; Raisul, the Kaid's son, plots with Major Napoleon Riccoli of the Foreign Legion to take over Riccoli's soldiers and make Riccoli commander of the Kaid's army. Unknown to Margaret, her girlhood sweetheart, Otho Belleme, is in Riccoli's command.

Chapter 19

RAISUL IN LOVE

JULES!

"Is that you, Jules?" said Margaret, confused, suddenly awakened from sleep by a slight sound in the pitch-dark room—for nowadays she slept as lightly as a mouse or a bird.

"Who's there? Is that you, Jules?" repeated Margaret, wondering whether she had been mistaken.

She had retired to rest in the great stone turret-room, leaving Jules smoking with his father, Raisul, the Kaid and the curious man whom Pedro Maligni addressed as Herr Schlacht—although Jules had told her that he was a German officer, Ober-Leutnant Carl von Mittengen.

There had been cognac, Algerian claret, and assorted French liqueurs on the low table in the tiled garden, and Jules had flatly refused to leave the party when she had suggested retiring.

It seemed, nowadays, that he was carrying his principle of "When in Rome, do as the Romans do" altogether too far, and enlarging it to "When in Rome, make your wife do as the Romans' wives do." But there she had drawn a very firm line. Because she was in Morocco, she was not going to behave as a Moorish woman.

There was someone in the room . . .

Margaret felt for the box of matches which should be on the stool beside her low uncomfortable bed.

"Would you mind answering, Jules?" she said, with some asperity.

"'Fraid he can't answer," said a voice, "he's—er—speechless."

Raisul.

"D'you mean he's ill? Have you come for me? What's happened?" cried Margaret, sitting up. "Where are the matches?"

"No, I wouldn't say he's ill," replied Raisul, "but I think he will be, tomorrow. At the moment he's very drunk indeed. Speechless, as I said. As to whether I've come for you . . . Well, I've certainly come for a talk with you, my dear. A conclusive one—with no interruptions.

"I'm going to finish what I began saying in England, and what you've contrived to prevent my saying, on numerous occasions, here. And finally, as to the matches, I've got them."

"Go out of my room, instantly. I'll . . . I'll . . ."

"In fact, 'Unhand me, monster, said the village maiden to the villain,'" continued the cool and mocking voice. "Or you'll do—what? Just what will you do?"

"My husband will . . ."

"He won't. Don't you think it, my dear. In point of fact, your husband will do exactly as I tell him, for our good Jules knows on which side his bread is buttered. He also knows that some quite funny and amusing things happen in this place.

"He knows, too, that he is not really persona grata with the Lady Zainub, and that if both she and I became two minds with but a single thought—well, you'd soon be a single woman again. Wouldn't that be nice? For you know you don't love him, Margaret. And surely you must be deadly bored with him by now?"

Springing from the bed, Margaret seized her dressing-gown which lay upon the foot of it, threw it round her, and slipped her feet into the mules which lay beside the bed.

"Have you gone completely mad?" she asked, facing about, to where, between her and the balcony, the figure of Raisul loomed dark against the starlit sky.

"Completely mad," replied Raisul. "Mad for love of you; love at first sight. I saw you at noon on a day in May, and I loved you at a minute past noon on that day, desperately, devotedly, madly, as you say. I loved you then, I have loved you every hour of the day and the night since then. I love you now, and I shall love you every hour of the day and the night until I die. And then in Paradise or Heaven—or Hell—I shall still love you for the whole of that Eternal Day or Night. I tell you . . ."

"Would you kindly tell me, instead, where my husband is?" interrupted Margaret, icily. "And I'll tell him something. I'll tell him to give you the finest horse-whipping that ever a gentleman gave a cad."

Raisul laughed lightly.

"My dear, the poor Jules couldn't understand you, for he's far too drunk. And if he were sober he wouldn't understand you, for he's far too wise. He realizes, as you're going to do, that there's no law here—except mine; there are no police—except mine; no friends—except mine; no servants—except mine; no transport—except mine; no weapons—except mine; no food or water—except mine—no hope—except in me.

"For the Kaid, my father, rules in Mekazzen as Allah rules in Paradise—and I rule the Kaid."

"And you call yourself a gentleman and you . . ."

Raisul laughed again.

"Not a bit of it, my darling. I call myself a man," he interrupted, "and I pay you the compliment of calling you a woman fit to be the mate, and, if you like, the wife, of such a man."

Margaret gasped.

"I can only suppose that you've been drinking, too," she said, endeavoring to control her voice.

"Been drinking! No, I'm drinking now, the sound of your voice, the fragrance of your presence," and Raisul strode toward the spot where Margaret stood.

"That's what I am drinking, Margaret, a million times more intoxicating than alcohol. Alcohol! We Moors invented al kohl, but not to drink it. We leave that to Christian swine. No, I won't call them that, for you are a Christian, for the present. But you are going to be a Moorish princess, Margaret—Sultana of Morocco. I will make you a Queen; I will lay a kingdom at your feet, and . . ."

"Meanwhile you will kindly get out of my room."

(Copyright, 1932, F. A. Stokes Co.)

There was someone in the room!

Margaret finds herself in another terrible predicament, tomorrow.

HISTORY OF SOCIETY IN WHITE HOUSE IS PRESENTED

IMPORTANCE OF FIRST LADY'S POST EVIDENT

HUGE RESPONSIBILITY ON SHOULDERS OF MRS. ROOSEVELT

(Editor's Note: When Mrs. Roosevelt "goes into office" as First Lady of the Land next Saturday, a tremendous responsibility will be placed upon her shoulders. As she entertains socially and politically prominent personages of the world, she must have an infallable knowledge of etiquet and other graces which make for a perfect hostess. True, she will break away from some of the customs, and her entertaining will tend to be informal—but to know just when she may break away and still remain in the good graces of those to whom form is eminent will be no small problem. A history of society in the White House was given by Mrs. William M. Craven before members of El Progresso club Tuesday afternoon, and her talk, in abbreviated form, is given in the following article.)

By MRS. WILLIAM M. CRAVEN.

As each American president has added to American history and tradition in his own way, so each mistress of the White House must carry on the long line of social regimes which have been so much a part of the life of the capital ever since it was turned from a struggling country village into the governing city of a great nation.

While we are quick to recognize the honor which comes to the first lady of the land, we may overlook the trials she must endure. Martha Washington endured the terrors of Valley Forge land remained with her husband during that trying winter.

Received While Seated.

When Washington became president, his wife established in New York City and later in Philadelphia a salon which was a credit to the young country. Always an aristocrat, she set an able example for her successors. Her administration as hostess was a reproduction of customs of foreign heads of governments. She received her guests while seated, and would dismiss them with the remark, "The colonel retires at 10 o'clock and I always precede him by a few minutes." She had the two-fold advantage of wealth and high social position, and was in manner, appearance, and character a pleasing, graceful representative of American womanhood.

It was during the revolution that Martha Washington's ability in household management was best seen. Everything had to be made in the home, and she directed her servants with skill, teaching ignorant slaves to become expert spinners, menders, and sewers.

Proud of Dresses.

Martha Washington liked to exhibit two dresses of cotton with silk stripes of red and brown, these dresses having been woven by her maids at Mt. Vernon, and the silk was from the ravelings of old brown stockings worn by the colonel, and the red was from old silk damask chair coverings.

We like to remember Martha Washington's act of relinquishing her dower right to the Washington slaves as soon as her husband had freed the slaves contingent upon this right of hers.

During Washington's administration there was no White House. The first mitress of the White House (or the presndent's palace, as it was then called), was Mrs. John Adams. This "palace" was far from completed.

Stork Appears.

Following Mrs. Adams, there came a group of exceptionally cultured women. Although Mrs. Jefferson died befo e her husband was inaugurated, her two charming daughters served with all the ease and charm necessary for their distinguished position. The stork made his first appearance at the White House when a son was born to Mrs. John

MRS. ROOSEVELT POSES IN INAUGURAL GOWN

INAUGURATION will be a "blue" day for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. For the costume she will wear at the ceremony will be of blue shades that have been named for her, and the above pictures, especially posed by her, show how she will appear when she becomes the First Lady of the Land. The gown (left) is of Eleanor blue crystelle velvet—a two-piece peplum dress with an unusual double-draped surplice front. The long sleeves taper to tight cuffs. The skirt, straight-line, but flaring slightly at the bottom, is then inches from the floor. The gown and coat, as well as the matching accessories, were made by Arnold Constable, New York, and the above pictures are copyrighted by that firm. The coat (shown right) is made of a darker shade of crystelle velvet, called Anna blue. It is three-quarter length with shirred scarf collar and epaulet shoulders. The hat is of Anna blue Milan straw, and purse and pumps are of matching blue kid.

The following were present: Mesdames M. L. Williams, Earl Vernon, H. C. Chandler, G. D. Holmes, R. M. Mitchell, Bessie Kennedy, O. J. McAlister, G. C. Stark, and L. W. Hardcastle.

Art Exhibit Is Viewed by Large Group at School

Woodrow Wilson school was host to a large number of parents and students at an exhibit of pictures brought to Pampa by the Pampa public schools. The pictures, loaned by the Practical Drawing company of Dallas, are reproductions of the works of both past and contemporary artists, the originals being valued from a few hundred to millions of dollars each.

A visitor would have been surprised at the ready recognition and hearty appreciation shown by the school children for all the pictures from the stately Madonnas to the portrayals of the children of their own age. This appreciation was made possible by a previous art appreciation campaign directed in the Woodrow Wilson school by Miss Lois Stallings.

The visitors were directed thru the collection by Mrs. A. N. Dilley, Jr., president of the Woodrow Wilson Parent-Teacher association, and Mrs. John Andrews, Mrs. E. Hooks, and Mrs. T. F. Morton of the Arno Art club. The pictures were attractively arranged by Miss Stallings.

The total proceeds of the small admission fee will buy pictures from the Practical Drawing company for each school, and according to Miss Roy Riley, the general director, the school which makes the most money will receive one picture free.

Wade Duncan of Mobeetie spent yesterday with his family here.

Ed Fowler of Albuquerque, N. M., is spening a few weeks in Pampa. He was with the Richards Drug company, here, before moving to New Mexico.

—SOCIETY

Wayles Eppes, daughter of Jefferson.

Mrs. Madison, Mrs. Monroe, and Mrs. John Quincy Adams were women who had obtained an eminent social polish at foreign courts, their husbands having served as envoys or ambassadors.

A Beautiful Woman.

Dolly Madison (our Quaker maid, so reared) was a talented woman, and obtained a more popular social position in the social life of the country than the wife of any other president with the exception of Mrs. Grover Cleveland or Mrs. Calvin Coolidge. She was very beautiful, and spent money lavishly while at the White Douse. It was said she spent $11,000 in decorating the "palace." She put bells in every room and hired 30 servants.

The story of her acts when the British marched on the capital is an interesting one. The president and his cabinet had fled to Virginia. Mrs. Madison remained at the capital, at the door stood a carriage filled with valuables, including some state papers, which must be saved. She awaited instructions from her husband as to when to follow him. The mayor of Washington urged her to go ahead, but she stood by her post until a penciled note came from her husband. Then she took the Stuart portrait of Washington from its frame, rolled it, and, placing it under folds of her skirt, drove away. The British found the table set for a party of 40, with food in preparation in the kitchen. The commanders ate a hearty meal, and ended by burning the executive mansion. Up to this time it had been called the president's palace, but when it was rebuilt the charred walls were white washed, and thereafter it has been known as the White House.

Mrs. James Monroe was a quiet, polished woman, but her ill health kept her from such lavish entertainment as had marred Mrs. Madison's terms.

Amid the privations of the new country Rachel Donnelson was reared. 'Twas here she met and married General Jackson, who was practicing law. She lived through trying times, but died before her husband took possession of the White House. Her niece, Mrs. Emily Donnelson, filled her position as mistress of the White House.

When Martin Van Buren became president, it was his daughter-in-law, Angelica Van Buren who served as mistress of the White House. She was a woman of rare charm and accomplishments, and dispensed with the duties of her position with true Southern hospitality.

Mrs. William Henry Harrison never occupied the White House because of the untimely death of her husband.

Died in White House.

The first wife of President Tyler died in the White House. Mrs. Robert Tyler, daughter-in-law, performed the duties of hostess until Tyler married again. The second wife was the youthful Julia Gardner, and it was said that the remaining eight months of the administration were of most brilliant character.

Sarah Childress Polk, a native of Tennessee, already had served the hopitalities of the governor's mansion. She was of a deeply religious nature, which led her to dispense with many frivolous social activities, discontinuing all drinking and dancing. Nevertheless, she was a popular hostess.

Disliked Society.

Mrs. Zachary Taylor was a housewife of humble background and did not relish the idea of entering the mansion. Through many years she had shared her soldier-husband's life in tent, camp, or cabin, and so had little time to cultivate social graces. She refused to take part in social life, but selected for herself a few rooms from which she could minister to her husband's comfort. Her actions caused a storm of unfavorable comment, so she stayed more and more to herself, and spent the time knitting and smoking her corncob pipe.

Though Mother Taylor refused the social life of the capital, her daughter, Betty, did not. She performed all the duties of her mother.

Installed Library.

Abigail Powers Fillmore was the daughter of a Baptist minister. Because of lameness, Mrs. Fillmore put the burden of the White Douse functions on the shoulders of her daughter. She was very fond of books, and it was she who caused the first library to be installed in the White House.

Jane Appleton Pierce, also a daughter of a clergyman, came to the White House in morning, her 13-year-old son having been killed in a railroad accident. She did not like politics, and shrank from public life, but did the honors of the White House in becoming style.

During the term of Buchanan, the only bachelor president, a niece, Harriet Lane, whom he had adopted and reared after her parents' death, presided as mistress of the White House. Under her direction, White House functions came back to a livelier and more sumptuous standard.

Eliza McArdle was a school teacher and met Johnson while teaching in a mountain village in Tennessee. She helped to educate her husband, who had never attended school. When she began her social duties as wife of the president, she was handicapped by failing health and was of little help in this way to Johnson. But her daughter took over the duties of the White House and performed them exceedingly well.

Her Ambition.

To Mary Todd Lincoln the White House was an ambition. It is said that when a child she remarked that some day she would be a president's wife and live in the White House.

Mrs. Grant was a social favorite in St. Louis when she was married. She became companion, as well as wife, to General Grant, and is ranked as one of the outstanding hostesses of the White House.

No Wine Allowed.

Lucy Webb Hayes never allowed wine to be served at the White House. She left the White House signally honored by her own sex.

Mrs. James Garfield was hardly settled in the White House before an assassin took the life of the president.

Following Mrs. Garfield, Mrs. Mary McElroy, sister of President Arthur, took over the social reign of the White House, entertaining lavishly.

President Weds.

Grover Cleveland was the first president to be married in the White House, the ceremony being one of great festivity. Mrs. Cleveland, who won immediate popularity, entertained a great deal and with distinction. The first president's child to be born in the White House was Esther Cleveland, born September 9, 1893. She is one of the six living presidents' wives and is now Mrs. Thomas J. Preston.

Benjamin Harrison's first wife died at the White House near the end of her husband's term. She was a painter and musician, and was the first president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Her niece, Mary Scott Lord, became Harrison's second wife, and is living today.

Ida Sexton McKinley was the daughter of an Ohio banker, and was cashier in the bank at the time of her marriage. She was an invalid for years, but presided well at the White House and accompanied her husband wherever he went. She was with with him when he was assassinated at Buffalo.

Is Still Living.

The first wife of Theodore Roosevelt died in 1884, leaving one daughter, Alice Lee Roosevelt, who was married at the White House in 1906 to Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, who later became speaker of the house of representatives. The second Mrs. Roosevelt was Edith Kermit Carow, and many gay events occurred during her occupancy of the White House. She also is one of the living wives of presidents.

Helen Herron Taft, is a daughter of Judge John W. Herron of Cincinnati. She is a musician, and brought to the White House many gifts which made her social regime there attractive. Her teas became famous, and it was she who made the Cincinnati orchestra one of the greatest in the country while she was teaching music in a conservatory in that city.

Regarding the last five wives of presidents, there is a splendid article in the February number of Good Housekeeping, 1932. These women had one thing in common—each was a professional wife, investing her ambitions and gifts in her husband's career. But each brought to this profession a different gift. The women are characterized as follows: The exploiter wife, Florence Kling Harding; the promoter wife, Lou Henry Hoover; the front door wife, Mrs. Grace Coolidge; the inspirational wives, Ellen Axson Wilson and Edith Bolling Wilson.

Mrs. Euel Wegster of Miami visited friends here yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jess Goad of Farrington were Pampa visitors Wednesday.

FOR TEXANS ON INDEPENDENCE DAY (MARCH 2)

Do not forget, O people, hurrying under the Texas sun
That this is the land Sam Houston's army won!
You men enveloped in steel and stones
There is pioneer stuff in the marrows of your bones;
Where your great buildings now stand
Your fathers fought the Indian hand to hand;
Your regal rooms of polished wood,
Standing where the forest stood,
Are not half as majestic as the trees
That once dozed in the Gulf coast breeze;
Your machines are more fatal in a thousand ways
Than the scalping Comanches in the early days.

You people in great buildings, frustrated by toil,
You can not go on forever without the leaven of the soil;
You must love the earth of Texas as your fathers did
While they forced from its crust the secrets it hid.
Before this generation is gone, you will go back to the sod;
You will seek life and beauty there—you will seek God
The plant and the animal will reign again;
The machine will release its hold on the brain;
No longer afraid, man will be sane;
He will trust in the soil as he trusts in rain.

Sons of buffalo hunters and Indian fighters,
You who are bankers, merchants and writers—
Every native and adopted son,
Your heritage is a matchless one.
Take your cue from Stephen Austin's men
Who, hearing the oncoming musketry din,
Courageously, fiercely called themselves "Texicans"
While they moulded bullets to fight the Mexicans.

Look at Galvez beach spread with glacial rolls that gleam and flit,
Then think of the sands cut by the footprints of Jean LaFitte.
Look at the high flung-plains and note the miles of waving wheat.
Then see the great herds of buffalo advancing to defeat.
Observe the great ranch kingdoms and the red and white cattle,
Then listen to the dying groan at Adobe Walls battle.
Look at the fine white road and fast machines, hear what their drivers say,
Then listen to the conquistadors driving stakes to mark their way.

Watch the shining aircraft dart and dip like a mocking bird climbing the sky.
Then in fancy see the buzzards waiting for Coronado's men to die.
Hunt in East Texas for the grave of Robert de la Salle,
Hear his dying words and know what it means to be loyal
Think of his honor and courage, how he is immortal
Then follow Deaf Smith to Vince's bridge;
March your soul to San Jacinto ridge.
Take your heart to Goliad and put it on that funeral pyre
Where Fannin and his deathless patriots went up in smoke and fire.

Read about Bowie, Crockett, Bonham, Travis and Ellis Bean.
Read about the Alamo and tell your heart what these words mean:
"Thermopylae had her messengers of defeat, but the Alamo had none."
Then, alone hold a death watch there through that midnight after it was lost and won.
See the blood-drenched walls gleaming in the setting sun,
Be Mrs. Dickinson and load your husband's gun,
Fight with Travis until the foe has not left one.
Almost die a year with Stephen Austin in his foreign prison cell;
Know that the flame of patriotism burns brighter than the flames of hell.

"Remember the Alamo, Remember Goliad!"
Then try, if you can, and make your song of Texas sad!
Think of Dick Dowling at his guns in Sabine Pass;
Hear Albert Sidney Johnson ride over Texas grass.
Help Coronado hunt his cities of gold;
Learn that the quest for them makes men sad and old.
If you seek beauty and desire her fruition,
Go look at the Rose Window of San Jose mission.
Listen to the sea's music at Galveston beach;
Glimpse Palo Duro canyon's painted reach.
If you hold honor high and know what it will bring,
Read about Sam Houston, look inside his cherished ring.

If you like courage in the face of deathly danger,
Read about McNelly, Red Hall, Gillett, and many another Ranger,
If you like pageants follow the Chisholm trail to Dodge;
If you would know sorrow follow the Raven's trail to his Indian lodge.
If you like grandeur, visit the Big Bend—
If you like friendship learn that "Texas" means "friend."
Call yourself a "Texian" in the grand old manner;
Hang your heart and honor upon the Lone Star banner.

Pick up the song sung by Houston's men;
Sing it until there arises a din
That can be heard from the coast to the plains.
Pick up the words of the rhythmic refrain.
The "Texian" tribe is not dying out.
Let the song be a crescendo and then shout;
Let every singer free his mind from doubt;
Sing the song until it becomes a rout;
Let it be the song of every man;
Let every one sing it and if he can
Try to be a "Texian."

--DEATH

Pittman was called to attend Mrs. Walsh, who was in a highly nervous state.

Heart Attack.

Dr. Pittman said the senator was dead when he arrived and that, in his opinion, he had died of a sudden heart attack.

He was placed in charge of Mrs. Walsh, who told the physician to have the senator's body removed from the train at Rocky Mount to be prepared for burial.

When the train reached here, the body was taken to the Bullock Funeral home and embalmed, preparatory to sending it on to Washington on the next train which leaves at 2:30 p. m.

Mrs. Walsh was first taken to the Ricks hotel by Dr. Pittman who said she was "in a highly nervous state" and that she was showing "much emotion." A short while later she was removed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Spruill. Spruill is a prominent Rocky Mount attorney and local counsel for the Atlantic Coast Lines railway.

The Montanan had been a familar figure in the capital for twenty years, ever since he left the private practice of law in Helena to come to the senate.

Noted Democrat.

He probably gained his greatest prominence as the prosecutor in the Teapot Dome oil scandal in 1924.

But to democrats all over the United States, he was known as the man who presided over the tumultuous democratic convention of 1924 which fought out the long deadlock between Alfred Smith and William G. McAdoo for the nomination. The deadlock was finally broken by the selection of John W. Davis as the standard bearer.

Again in 1932, the Montanan was chosen to preside over a national conclave of his party, this time at Chicago where after three ballots Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated.

Senator Walsh took an active part in the campaign. Throughout the long western trip of Mr. Roosevelt, which took him into every far western state except Nevada, the senator conferred frequently with the nominee and appeared often on the rear platform.

Through the west on this rear platform appearances, the announcement that the Montana senator would speak was the signal for immediate applause from the crowds.

Safety Agency Is Formed By Empire

An Empire Oil & Gas and Cities Service Safety organization was perfected at a meeting of employes in the city hall Tuesday night. Hupp Clark was elected president for the first six months. Johnnie Corrigan was named secretary. Meetings will be held monthly.

G. O. Lockwood of the safety department of the Empire Oil & Gas company, of Tulsa, was the chief speaker. Mr. Lockwood showed pictures of the progress of the oil industry from the first well drilled to present day efficiency. He stressed the advancement in safety through the years.

Entertainment for the evening was supplied by Harry Kelley and his high school quartet, Misses Dorothy Dodd and Marjorie Enloe, Howard Zimmerman, and Charles Frost. Solos and piano numbers were hendered by members of the quartet.

Schools Observe 97th Birthday Of State Today

Observance of Texas week which began last Monday and will end Saturday, reached a climax in city and county schools today when the 97th anniversary of Texas independence was celebrated in chapel and room programs. The high school observed the event in a special chapel program.

Business people of the downtown district were made aware that a Texas holiday had arrived when they glanced at the Texas flag flying from the flagpole atop the Brunow building early this morning. Dr. V. E. von Brunow has run up the Texas flag in Pampa on March 2 for almost 30 years, the time of his residence here.

For Mrs. Brunow, the flag and observance of the day has a personal significance. One of her ancestors was a defender of the Alamo and others fought through the Texas revolution.

PAMPA TOPICS OF OUR CITY By O.E.H.

INCOME ON THE VALUE OF ALL THE PROPERTY IN THIS COUNTRY. We do believe the government should give relief to two classes of sufferers: 1. The taxpayers least able to pay; and 2. the destitute in need of medical attention and food.

AN OBJECT LESSON

Direct relief has been condemned as a dole. But under severe stress a dole, with work provided as far as possible, is the cheapest relief plan obtainable. The government will spend $160,000 here for the post office building. Pampans are glad to get it. It will be pretty, convenient, a matter of civic pride—but we will pay for it. As a relief project, however, it is not justified. While some work will be given while it is under construction, a big per cent of the cost will be spent elsewhere. The government could have sent one-tenth the total cost here for minor construction and have rendered as much local aid. Public works is too expensive as a relief program, smacking of 1929 extravangance. . . . A prominent citizen said he wished the government would cancel the post office building project as an object lesson in economy here and elsewhere. We cite this as an example of the trend in public thinking.

INCOME TAX FACTS

It is important that the taxpayer render on or before the due date—March 15, if filed on the calendar-year basis—as complete and final return of income as possible. However, when by reason of illness or absence from home additional time is required, a reasonable extension of time may be granted. Application should be made to the collector of international revenue for the district in which the taxpayer files his return, together with a full recital of the causes for the delay. Except in the case of taxpayers who are abroad, no extension may be granted for a period of more than six months.

An extension of time for filing the return does not extend the time for payment of the tax, or any installment thereof, unless so specified in the extension. Application for such extension should be made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue through the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer's return is filed. The applicant should set forth under oath the specific reason for desiring an extension and should clearly indicate what hardship, if any would result if the extension were not granted. The amount for which the extension is desired should be stated. The commissioner will not consider an extension of time of payment unless made on or before the due date of the tax or installment thereof. If the extension is granted, interest at the rate of 6 per cent year is collectible from the date the payment should have been made if there had been no extension to the expiration of the period of the extension.

"Spelling bees" are still popular in Dixie. A recent one at Petal, Miss., a rural community, drew 200 spectators.

'The Queen City Of The Plains'

—GEORGE TYNG

(Note: This is the second installment of a series of articles dealing with the early history of Pampa. Yesterday, events which led to the naming of Pampa by George Tyng, for 16 years until 1903 the agent for the White Deer Land company, were related.)

Mr. Tyng had an adventuresome disposition, and his desire for raw, unclaimed lands led him to the far west after he left Pampa. He wanted to civilize a place but he did not want to live in it after he had civilized it. He met a tragic death in a snowslide at a mining camp in Utah in 1903. The mine belonged to him and was paying enormous profits at the time of his death. Mr. Tyng's son, Charles, was a prominent man of Salt Lake City before his death. George Tyng's wife was a member of an old aristocratic Spanish family of California. She visited the ranch once during Mr. Tyng's managership. Physically, Mr. Tyng was small. He wore short mustaches. Tyng street in South Pampa was named for the pioneer. Perry LeFors was the first man in the county to hear of Mr. Tyng's death, and Jess Wynne, good friend of Mr. Tyng, planned to attend his funeral but when he learned of his death the burial was due to take place the next day. Mr Tyng had sent all of his employes out of the valley, anticipating that a snow-slide might take place. He himself was preparing to leave the next day. It was several days before his body was recovered. He was buried in the little mining town. He was 72 years old at the time of his death, it is believed. While here, Mr. Tyng built the original structure that was the Schneider hotel. It is still standing just east of the present Schnieder hotel. Mr. Tyng's influence in this section was enormous.

Other officials of the White Deer company who moulded the early history of Pampa were Albert de Peyster Foster, his brother, Frederic de Peyster Foster, the latter being the principal stockholder in the company. Albert Square on which is now located the city hall was named for Mr. Foster.

Mr. Lane's first residence was a half-dugout just across the street from where is now located the White Deer Land building. Buffalo bones were scattered about where the Rose building is now located. Herds of cattle grazed up and down Cuyler and Foster streets when Mr. Lane lived in the half dugout.

When Mr. Lane began working for the Santa Fe here in '88, the only structure of any kind in the immediate vicinity was a shack that was used for a station. There were not even any stockyards. Cattle in that year and in a few succeeding years were shipped from Miami and Panhandle. The original decision of the Santa Fe was to build no further than Miami, but the Denver was building north to Amarillo, so the Santa Fe pushed on to Panhandle in '88.

In that year, Pampa was not much of a social center for trainmen and cowboys who usually went to Codman to attend dances. Codman was a stop east of Pampa. All trains in those days were mixed. Several years after Mr. Lane came to Pampa, a telegraph operator was sent here for a few weeks in the spring and in the fall of each year during roundups, but finally they stopped sending operators here altogether.

Mr. Stewart And Miss Maness Wed

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Weldon Stewart and Miss Lois Maness, the ceremony having been solemnized Saturday noon in Guymon, Okla. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart returned to Pampa Sunday and are making their home on Russell street.

Mr. Stewart, son of Mrs. John Kirby, has been driver of a school bus here for the last three years. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Maness.

wise sped to the spot and picked him up.

"Where I was held and by whom I do not know," young Boettcher said. "It appeared to be in a basement of some house 18 hours by fast automobile from Denver. Neither do I know who my abductors were, but there were two of them—possibly three."

He said a stop was made some place along the way returning to Denver, "and I got the impression another mn joined us. That's what makes me think there were three in the gang."

Father Threatening

"Finally," he related, "the men said they were going to let me out. They said that after I had been let out I should count to 150. Then go around the corner where you will find a telephone. Be sure and call your parents as they are worried about you.' I called them and here I am. Seventeen days—it seems more like seventeen years—of blackness, discomfort and threats—thank God, it's all over."

With his son safe, the elder Boettcher later talked guardedly of the case.

"This is the beginning. Not the end of this case," he declared. "I might say that this is the end of one story and the beginning of another. What the outcome of the second story will be remains to be seen."

Running Gun Battle

Police, who despite reports of a breach with the family were kept informed of progress in the case, went into action and within a few minutes had engaged in a running gun battle with a car believed to contain the kidnapers. The car escaped.

Boettcher was taken to the home of a friend where Chief Clark questioned him. Then he was taken home to bed.

The elder Boettcher, apparently excited, drew a revolver and threatened police and reporters who were congregated in front of his home when he returned from a reunion with his son.

"Get back or I'll shoot," he cried.

Patrolman Ralph Fairley drew his pistol while the others dispersed, a friend disarmed the father and he later apologized.

HOW MODERN WOMEN LOSE FAT SAFELY

Gain Physical Vigor—Youthfulness With Clear Skin and Vivacious Eyes That Sparkle With Glorious Health

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast—cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—in 4 weeks get on the scales and note how many pounds of fat have vanished.

Get a bottle of Kruschen Salts—the cost is trifling and it lasts 4 weeks. If even this first bottle doesn't convince you this is the easiest, safest and surest way to lose fat—if you don't feel a superb improvement in health—so gloriously energetic — vigorously alive — your money gladly returned.

But be sure for your health's sake that you ask for Kruschen Salts. Get them at Richards Drug Co., Inc. or any drugstore in the world.

MORE THAN JUST "ANOTHER STOP"

TEAM OFF FOR SECOND FIGHT WITH LAMESA

BOYS EAGER TO PLAY BEST GAME OF YEAR TOMORROW NIGHT

The Harvester basketball team left at 9 o'clock this morning for Lamesa for the second battle with the Golden Tornado tomorrow night in the bi-district championship race. The boys have been in a fighting mood since they were nosed out in the first game during the last minute of play, and they had only one thought in mind when they left and that was to win.

The team has looked better this week than at any time this year. They are expected to play super-basketball tomorrow night and take the second game, despite the disadvantage of playing on Lamesa's small concrete-floored court.

Yesterday the boys went to LeFors and scrimmaged against James Gotcher, formerly of the Amarillo Badgers, and "Dinty" Moore, ex-Harvester. Coach Odus Mitchell was optimisitic after the workout. He believes that his boys will have no trouble winning the third game if they are successful tomorrow night.

Frank Kimbrough, coach of the Plainview high school football team, will officiate. The boys and coach are confident that he will not allow the game to get from under his control. He has officiated several times for Pampa in the last few years.

A number of Pampa people were planning today to attend the game.

Members of the team who accompanied Coach Mitchell on the trip were Capt. Robert Woodward, Miles Marbaugh, Hoot Fullingim, Wayne Kelley, Jess Patton, Orville Heiskell, Bill Kelley, Leslie Sartain, and Siler Faulkner. The party is making the trip in automobiles.

AT THE SPRING TRAINING CAMPS

Al's Arrival Awaited

PASADENA, Calif., March 2. (AP)—Instead of waiting until March 12 to report to the Chicago White Sox, Al Simmons probably will join his new mates by the end of this week.

Owner Lou Comiskey has become so eager to see Simmons working in a Sox uniform that he called him last night and urged him to report as quickly as possible. The former Athletics slugger said he needed a couple of days for treatment of his teeth, but would have his five replacements installed in California instead of remaining at Hot Springs, Arkansas, for the job.

BILOXI, Miss., March 2. (AP)—Manager Joe Cronin of the Washington Senators doesn't want any lost motion, such as a catcher planting himself with a step backwards, before pegging the ball.

So Cliff Bolton was given a bit of instruction on how to step up a stride, and let the ball fly for the bag.

It's all part of the "scientific baseball" the new mentor announced as part of the training curriculum.

Third baseman Cecil Travis, was the latest arrival in camp. He likewise got a little of that scientific instruction.

Bowling Scores

The Thirty Footers practically clinched their hold on the top of the Commercial league Tuesday night with three straight wins from the Schneider hotel and 2 wins out of three from the Country club in a postponed series. The Country club broke even on the night's play with two wins over the Cullum Motor and one over the Thirty Footers.

F. A. Peek of the Thirty Footers, bowling on his favorite alleys, toppled 1,273 pins in his six games. He rolled a high series of 668 pins and a high game of 258 pins. Tom Darby toppled 660 pins in one series. Mel Davis had a game of 244 pins, Roff one of 236 pins and Chambers one of 220 pins to help the big scores of the night.

CRISLER TRAINS PLAYERS BY MAIL ON DIET AND EXERCISE

Princeton's Coach Almost Eliminates Injuries By Preventative Methods.

(Note: Fritz Crisler not only has rebuilt Princeton's athletic morale but installed methods of physical conditioning that have cut down the danger of injuries, especially on the gridiron. His contributions to football in this respect have attracted nation-wide interest. They are described herewith in the final chapter of a series of stories on the Tiger athletic revival.)

By EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

PRINCETON, N. J., Mar. 2. (AP)—A year ago this spring, "Fritz" Crisler put his first Princeton football squad through early practice, and the boys came out of a month's drilling with as complete a crop of injuries as the new head coach ever had seen.

Scarcely a man on the small squad wound up with both knees in good working order. There were many ankle hurts, strained ligaments.

Puzzling over this problem, the greatest that American football faces because of the toll of injuries and deaths that have lately ranged between 30 and 50 yearly, Crisler came up with an answer in the form of preventative exercise. Not only has this almost eliminated injuries from Princeton football, but it has contributed as well to the athletic system that has brought about such a surprising return to power of all Tiger sports in the short period of one year.

As the basis of a "train by mail" program, Crisler sent every squad member six diagrams, pictures of exercises designed to strengthen ankles and knees, the latter a joint nature left with little muscular protection against hurts that come so often to dodging ends and twisting half backs.

Skillfully also he rebuilded the broken Tiger morale with frequent letters to the squad through the summer, laying down caustic definitions of what did and did not constitute the type of player Princeton needed in the crisis. Just as carefully he laid out a routine of training, practice and diet that brought every man back for the late Sept. 15 start fit and ready.

"There was nothing remarkable in that," Crisler said. "The boys were conscientious. There is nothing in such a system that violates the spirit of the dual agreement with Yale barring organized conditions and practice before Sept. 15. I believe they do similar things at both Yale and Harvard. It must be done if boys are to stand up under the rigors of a heavy schedule. It is just common sense."

In his letters were the following instructions:

"Be ready for scrimmage the opening day. There'll be no fooling with men not physically fit. Kicking, passing, catching, dodging must be perfected during the summer. There'll be no time in the fall.

"Cut out smoking absolutely. Sleep at least eight hours regularly, preferably 10 p. m. to 6 a. m. Fifteen minutes setting up exercises every morning, followed by a cold bath. No automobiles, walk or jog instead. For endurance, five minutes of stationary running each day, exaggerating the left knee lift. For the first week sprint 25 yards 7 times at two minute intervals. Work it up to 15 sprints of 35 yards 12 times a day at ¾ minute intervals. Skip rope for balance and quickening. Harden your body for bumps by rolling on the ground. For blocking practice running on all four.

"Watch your diet. No fried foods, chocolate, candy, bananas, coffee, ice water. Drink weak tea with three regualr meals, lots of water in between, an apple before bed time. Meat once a day, lots of roughage, cereals, fruit, but no cabbage. Too hard to digest.

"If you're not in shape after that," he wrote them, "don't blame me."

GRID PRACTICE FOR REGULARS IS ANNOUNCED

BOYS WITH PREVIOUS EXPERIENCE WILL BE DRILLED

Spring football training will start in earnest Monday afternoon at Harvester park when the boys who have had previous experience will join the boys who have been working for the last two weeks. Coach Argus Fox has arranged a game for Friday afternoon between his two teams of little fellows. He will select the boys who look the most promising and keep them out for a while. The rest will be excused until next year.

The bigger boys who have been showing promise during practice sessions will play with the experienced boys in intramural games. Spring training will continue for several weeks. Only one of last season's regulars and seven substitutes will be available this season. Several Gorillas from last season are expected to show their wares in big style this season.

Coach Fox was to call all the boys with previous football experience together this afternoon to find out how many suits he will need. He expects at least 40 boys to add to the present list of 80 when the time comes for the opening practice.

While the little fellows work up the plays they will use Friday afternoon, the bigger members of the squad tackle the dummy, catch passes, and run a few plays.

The black-face end men and the cast of "Lion Varieties" maintained their secrecy through the dress rehearsal last night, holding an "executive session" to prevent the public and the rest of the cast from knowing their gags and plot.

A number of persons who because of leaving town could not see the performance tonight saw the show last night and praised it highly.

Moreland Sets New Record On Louisiana Links

NEW ORLEANS, March 2 (AP)—Gus Moreland of Dallas, medalist in yesterday's qualifying round of the New Orleans Country club carnival invitation tournament, met a fellow Texan, Gaston Peek of Galveston, in the first match play today.

Moreland burned up the course yesterday to establish a record of 69, two under par.

The nearest approach to Moreland's record-smashing mark was the 76 hung up by Hickman Greene, of Baton Rouge. Johnny Dawson of Chicago, the defending champion, went the route in 79, hanging up a 38 going out and a 41 coming in.

TRAINING FOR TRACK DUE TO BEGIN MONDAY

FIRST MEET TO BE AT AMARILLO WITHIN THREE WEEKS

Only the weather will stop track and field work starting Monday afternoon, Coach Odus Mitchell said yesterday afternoon. He will have less than two weeks to get his boys in shape for the first meet of the season, which will be March 18 with the Amarillo Sandies coming here for a dual meet.

Two lettermen will be missing from the ranks unless they make up their work before that time. Some of the most promising material has almost decided to go out for spring football rather than track which will leave the track and field boys in the minority unless some unexpected change develops.

The Harvesters will go to Amarillo March 24 in a triangle affair with Lubbock and Amarillo. The Clarendon invitation meet will also be attended March 31. The next day will be the county meet here.

The Interscholastic League meet will be held in Canyon April 21 and 22. Coach Mitchell may enter the Tech Relays at Lubbock and one or two other events, dates for which have not been set.

Several young Harvester thinclads have been getting themselves in condition by jogging around the track and going over the hurdles at Harvester park. Lack of uniforms has kept more of the boys from getting in their early practice Little time will be spent on preliminaries this year because of the short training period. Coach Mitchell has been busy with basketball, which is overlapping the track and field season since the Harvesters won the district.

A win over Lamesa tomorrow night would prolong the season but Coach Mitchell said yesterday he would devote considerable time to the track and field squad regardless of the outcome of the game in Lamesa. Assistant Coach Argus Fox is busy with the football prospects.

TWINKLES

Tonight is the night of nights to 50 Lions and 10 pretty young misses who, at 8:15 o'clock will see the curtain rise on the first performance of the 1933 minstrel show and musical revue at the city auditorium.

* * *

And are we self-conscious? A great many of the members of the cast will be facing those big audiences with the knowledge that certain cronies in the audience are casting aspersions on their singing ability. They have seen their names in print and their faces are already red. But they'll get over it.

* * *

But seriously, we believe the public will enjoy this show. It has been prepared at a sacrifice of time by business men who could ill afford to leave their offices to practice. Men who otherwise could not be engaged by all the king's horses to appear in a musical comedy stage are presenting this show in order that lives may be saved and bodies rebuilt with the proceeds.

We promised something on the second part sketches prepared by Dr. Hicks et al. Well, it seems that this stunt is staged in total darkness with the exception of occasional flashes. And what scandals are revealed in those brief glimpses into the private lives of local prominent citizens. To reveal the plot would spoil the fun, but this is the general idea.

* * *

If you can't see the show the first night, try to see it Friday night, which will likely be the best performance anyway.

* * *

Mayor W. A. Bratton says golf is a game which unnecessarily prolongs the lives of worthless citizens. (Mrs. Bratton says Bill is getting ready to take up the game.)

Most states have laws prohibiting men from dressing in women's clothing. We're writing Senator Small to introduce a bill to prevent Texas women from dressing in mens trousers.

TIME TO DECIDE

County commissioners' right comfortably have studied the hospitalization problem long and since. So far, so good. But too much delay would be imposing upon the patience of the people and endangering the lives of those who frequently find themselves in need of quick surgery or medical attention. There are people in Pampa brought here by the wealth of natural resources. Because of the statewide system of helping only indigent residents, they dare not die.

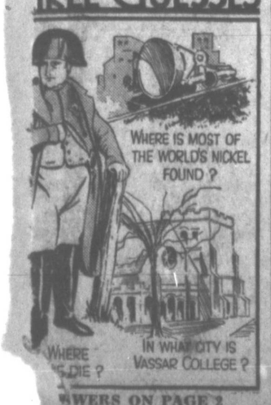

For the county to help care for them when they are in dire need seems to be the most logical plan. As much as 80 per cent of the county taxes is paid by those who benefit from the county's natural resources. It would cost the average taxpayer less than a dollar a year for the county to go to the aid of those most desperately in need. The citizens of the county await a definite, adequate action on the part of the four commissioners.

HUMAN PROBLEM

One cannot overlook the human, personal question involved in caring for those in dire need. No other function of government transcends in importance. There are corners which might be cut, savings which could be made, to reduce cost of government generally, but ignoring the welfare problem. Indeed, if other expenses were found to be too high, the government could afford more for its needy. We do not believe that the American people subscribed for the cost of government to EQUAL THE FAIR NET

TWO GIRLS ON STAND

CLAIM QUINN PURSUED THEM ON MORNING OF SLAYINGS

ENID, Okla., March 2. (AP)—Jubilant over a court ruling which they said will make it possible for them to trace the death pistol of Earl Quinn, state's attorneys today pressed toward a conclusion of their circumstantial case again Quinn, on trial a second time for the Griffith sisters murder.

Judge J. W. Bird ruled at the end of a legal battle that the state may trace the movements of Jean Quinn, missing wife of the man on trial.

As a result of the ruling the state can present witnesses to testify that Mrs. Quinn led officers to the pistol that killed Jessie and Zexia Griffith, Frank M. Dudley, assistant attorney general, said.

"I can't get a fair trial." Quinn said angrily after the ruling. "I'll testify, though. I'll go on the stand and beat this case anyhow."

James H. Mathers, defense attorney, said he will continue to interpose an objection every time the name of Mrs. Quinn is mentioned.

The present trial was ordered by the criminal court of appeals when it reversed the conviction and death verdict of a Newkirk jury 17 months ago. Quinn is charged in the deaths of both Griffith sisters, Blackwell school teachers, and is being tried for the murder of Jessie.

The bullet-torn bodies of the Griffith sisters were found on a little-used road south of Tonkawa the morning of Sunday, December 28, 1930.

Two witnesses, Miss Ruby Heard and Vergil Davis, this morning related that Quinn pursued them at 3 a. m. that Sunday morning on the highway, trying to force their car into a ditch and finally forcing them into his car at the point of a pistol.

Jury In County Court To Meet Again Saturday

Prospective jurors in county court will meet again Saturday for possible duty in criminal cases, then will end the two-week jury service. The third week is non-jury.

One jury assessed a 2-year suspended sentence in a juvenile case, but for the most part the court's time was occupied in rendering default judgments, continuing or dismissing cases, taking a plea of guilty in a criminal case involving a fine of $10 and costs for passing a school bus, and probate matters.

The next term of county court will open April 3 for a non-jury period last the rest of the month. Seeking to save money for the county, Judge C. E. Cary is re-arranging the terms to use fewer jury lists.

Rita had been playing under a frienght car. When it started to move Betty crawled under, pushed her sister free just as a wheel crushed her hands.

ROOSEVELT TO BLAST BUREAUS GARNER CLAIMS

Millions To Be Saved In New Economy Program

WASHINGTON, March 2. (AP) — Speaker Garner today told newspapermen that advistors of President-elect Roosevelt had completed an economy program to shave from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 off of government costs.

The program was drafted by Representative Douglas of Arizona, President-elect Roosevelt's choice for director of the budget, and Swagar Sherley, a close associate.

Garner said that under the treasury-post office department supply bill's provisions giving Mr. Roosevelt power to reorganize the government most of the economies could be effected by executive orders.

"If congress gives Mr. Roosevelt authority to reduce salaries and cut veterans compensation, between $700,000,000 and $800,000,000 will be saved and the country will approve it," Garner said.

"A shake-up is brewing for Washington such as past March fours never have brought, for, barring a misstep today, congress will place in the hands of Franklin D. Roosevelt power to tear the government's huge bureaucratic structure wide open.

That he intends to use it, and use it thoroughly, experienced observers here have no doubt whatever. The very secrecy with which the economic preparations of his trusted advisers have been guarded for weeks past, is taken as evidence of a serious intent to houseclean.

By comparison the removal of republican office holders not under civil service protection and the substitution of democrats becomes a small item.

Minstrel Troop Lunches Together

Members of the Lions minstrel cast, including most of the girls who are assisting, lunched together today.

The girls were Miss Jackie Jones, club pianist, and Misses Dorothy Doucette, Esther Stark, Dorothy Dodd, Aileen Cook, Dorothy Harris, and Louise Walstad. Other guests were Bob Daugherty, Loyd Moore, A. C. St. Clair, and T. J. Coffey of McLean, and F. H. Yealy.

The club received a request that it support Del Harrington of El Paso for the next district governor, but took no action.

Roger McConnell, Ed Mazey, and B. W. Rose were appointed to assist in the Boy Scout drive opening Monday.

Mrs. L. R. Bush of McLean left Pampa hospital this morning.

DOCTOR HANDS OVER AMOUNT NEAR AIRPORT

BOETTCHER UNHARMED —WAS BLINDFOLDED FOR 17 DAYS

KIDNAPERS NEVER SEEN

VICTIM THINKS THERE WERE THREE IN HIS CAPTORS' GANG

DENVER, March 2. (AP)—A ransom of $60,000 was paid shortly before Charles Boettcher, 2nd., 31-year-old heir to riches, was freed here last night, ending nearly seventeen "days and nights of blackness, discomfort and threats" in the hands of kidnapers.

It was revealed today that Dr. John M. Foster, young physician and friend of the kidnaped broker, kept a rendezvous with the abductors in behalf of Claude K. Boettcher, the multimillionaire father, and paid the demanded $60,000.

"Thank God, it's all over," young Boettcher said in his first utterance since the kidnapers released him from an automobile in the stockyards district unharmed.

The climax to the west's most amazing kidnaping came with startling suddenness. Shortly after 6 p. m. last night, Dr. Foster drove to a designated spot near the municipal airport. In his automobile he had the $60,000.

Kidnapers Waiting

There the kidnapers were waiting. Although they remained out of sight themselves, they allowed the physician a glimpse of their blindfolded victim. Foster dropped the bag containing the money and raced for Denver to inform young Boettcher's family.

Soon after young Boettcher telephoned his mother, Mrs. Millson McCormick, from a drug store in the vicinity where he had been released. Foster and Norman Bar-

Pampa Girls To Be Honored At Amarillo Show

Miss Ruth Reynolds will be the Pampa princess at the Amarillo Fat Stock show next week, and Miss Louise Walstad will be her maid of honor, it was announced today.

There will be about 50 princesses and 200 other girls of the Panhandle in the Rainbow pageant to be staged in connection with the show. Miss Frances Mayhugh of Plainview will be crowned queen of the show and the various princesses and attendants will file on the stage between specialty numbers.

Caliche Being Put On City's Streets

Routine work is being done by men hired by the federal relief committee. More than 85 men started to work this morning, relieving those who were employed the first three days of the week. Most in the new group are at work in the caliche pits and spreading caliche on city streets.

Forms have been removed from the walls of the swimming pool and it will be several days before the floor will be poured. A few men are getting the forms ready for the floor and cleaning up the grounds around the pool.

Work in the Talley addition has been completed. Some of the men are hauling Red Cross flour and storing it in the basement of the city hall.

IGNS POINT TO RAINEY AS NEW SPEAKER

BYRNS STEPS OUT OF RACE IN FAVOR OF ILLINOIS MAN

WASHINGTON, March 2. (AP)—It looks as though before the day is out that name of Rainey of Illinois will be joined to the list of speakers of the house of representatives after Cannon, Clark, Gillett, Longworth and Garner.

Eventualities may change the prospect, but out of a swirl of developments at the capitol today emerged indications that only a terrific upset would suffice to do so.

Supporters of Representative McDuffie of Alabama, party whip, would not concede; but Rainey's managers confidently predicted he would win on the first ballot at the party caucus in the late afternoon.

Managers for Representative Byrns of Tennessee, the third leading candidate, frankly stated that Byrns had withdrawn in support of Rainey and would make a speech in his behalf.

Represenative Cullen of New York, a leader, plainly indicated that his powerful Tammany delegation would support Rainey.

Tomorrow's Date Has Four 'Three'

Pampans who use the abbreviated form of putting dates on checks and letters will write figures tomorrow that will not be used again for a century—3-3-33.

Tomorrow happens to be the third day of the third month of the year 1933 which can be added to 12 or 39, both divisible by three. And Pampans are wondering if March came in like a lion or a lamb. The sun came out brightly but a brisk wind blew most of the day. If the almanacs' predicitions for the end of the month are right, March came in like a lamb, because probabilities for the end of the month are stormy and cold.

Dog-Catcher Has Killed 157 Dogs

Chief of Police Jno. V. Andrews has compiled a "dog" record for last month and even surprised him if that were possible. The chief said this morning that the drive on untagged and unclaimed dogs was "about half over," yet 448 dogs had been accounted for up to yesterday morning.

Of the dogs recorded, 261 have been tagged, 157 killed and 30 are now in the pound to be killed unless claimed. Two dog catchers are working full time catching dogs which have not been tagged or vaccinated.

SCOUT LEADERS SECURE AID OF MANY IN DRIVE

Preliminary Work Is Being Completed This Week

WHILE Pampa's main Boy Scout finance drive will start Monday with men's and women's organizations assisting, much preliminary work is being done this week by A. G. Post, Roger McConnell, and J. O. Gillham, who have planned the campaign.

Believing that local citizens know the work of the Scouts and wish to help, the campaign committee is not setting a goal and making a high-powered appeal, but will attempt to see everyone so that all may help.

Simultaneosuly, a drive will be held in Borger and likely at other towns where preliminary work is under way. At Borger Vice-President H. W. Price has appointed C. I. Lieurance to head the campaign.

Scout Executive C. A. Clark said today that requests for data and advice were coming from all over the council and beyond. Scouting is "going over" as never before in the Adobe Walls council.

Just outside the council area, the town of Keyes, Okla., has registered a troop of 12 boys and has taken in

BANKERS ACTS AS OTHER STATES CLOSE BANKS

Institutions Will Reopen On March 7—Paying Out Of Money Suspended.

AUSTIN, March 2 (AP)—Governor Miriam A. Ferguson this afternoon issued a proclamation ordering all banks and financial institutions in Texas to observe a financial moratorium and remain closed until and including March 7.

The governor decided on this action as a means of preventing any disturbed situation resulting from financial difficulties experienced by banks in other states recently.

The governor ordered that "all state banks, all National banks, state trust companies, building and loan associations, private banks and all other banks and financial institutions be prohibited and enjoined from paying to any depositor or creditor upon any account or deposit liability any amount during the period of time covered by this proclamation" and said in conclusion "shall remain closed during said time."

DREISER CHARGE DROPPED

PINEVILLE, Ky., March 2. (AP)—Criminal syndicalism indictments against Theodore Dreiser, New York novelist, and members of his party who came here in November, 1931, to investigate conditions in the coal fields, and indictments against a group of alleged organizers and workers for the National Miners' union were dismissed today in Bell circuit court.

Another indictment, involving Dreiser and Marie Pergain, also was dismissed.

UNCONSTITUTIONAL

NEW ORLEANS, Mar. 2 (AP)—The Louisiana supreme court today affirmed a decision of the Caddo district court holding that repeal of the state prohibition enforcement law, known as the Hood act, by a referendum vote of the electorate last November was unconstitutional. The lower court held the act could be repealed only by vote of the state legislature.

Income Tax Man Coming Tomorrow

For the convenience of those who are required by law to file federal income tax returns, a deputy collector will be in Pampa Friday and Saturday at the city hall to assist taxpayers in filing their returns. Returns for 1932 must be filed not later than March 15. M. D. Sloan is the collector who will come here.

L. D. Gill and W. S. Willis of near Groom were here today.

LONG LIFE, AND-

You aren't necessarily wish you wish him a long life, thes

According to Dr. Francis Calif., who retired not long American College of Physicia proving a curse instead of a Medical science, he pointed, prolonged [illegible] life—and then the man discovers that he can no longer get a job, because of his age. He has an extra allotment of time and nothing to do with it. Even in times of prosperity, the tendency is more and more to dispense with the aging worker. The old man, all too often, must find someone to support him, or starve.

Here we have another of those developments which show the disastrous way in which our society has used the advantages which science has given it.

Science has shown us how to produce enough of everything for everybody, and the chief result seems to be that 12,000,000 men are living on charity. It has enabled us to live longer lives, and the aged are unable to support themselves. It has given us the automobile, and we use it to kill 30,000 people a year and to drive our railroads to the verge of bankruptcy. It has given us the airplane, and we use it to bring the horrors of war into every man's front yard.

Before we get straightened out again on the long road to a better civilization, we shall have to find some way of using these boons as they ought to be used—of using them, in short, to make human life happier and richer and fuller. As things are now we seem to be using them backward.

Perplexing as the tangle is, however, there is no need for us to be discouraged. For even if we haven't learned how to use these advantages properly, we at least have them on hand. We can abolish poverty, make old age serene and contented and make our accelerated system of communications pay us the right kind of dividends, if we once learn how to make use of the existing opportunities. The job isn't nearly as hard as it might be.

DALLAS SENATOR CRITICISM AT

AUSTIN, March 2. (AP)—The house and senate state affairs committees met last night in joint session to start consideration of bills to reorganize the state government and the institutions of higher learning.

Senator George Purl of Dallas, chairman of the senate committee, harshly criticized the teachers college officials for opposing the recommendations of the legislative committee on eficiency and economy and charged they made the criticism "before they had even read the report."

"The teachers college can take it or leave it and like it or lump it," Purl stated, "but what this legislature ought to do is to cut out some of the inefficiency and extravagance in the teachers colleges."

Purl said it cost more to educate a student in music at the Texas Technological college at Lubbock than it did to send a student to Vienna to study under the masters.

Senator Grady Woodruff, member of the committee on efficiency and economy, asserted the Lubbock school had become "the best teachers college in the state," instead of being operated as a technological institution.

Woodruff said the Lubbock school should be operated as a teachers college and that all its engineering and agricultural activities should be transferred to Texas A. & M. He urged concurrence in the committee's recommendation to center all graduate work in the University of Texas at Austin.

The revenue and taxation committee completed hearings on bills to levy a severance tax on oil production.

VALIANT DUST

by Percival Christopher Wren Author of "BEAU GESTE"

SYNOPSIS: Like a lamb among wolves, Margaret Malignі wanders about the Citadel of Mekazzen, watching Jules, her husband, grow more and more like a Moor, and entangle himself deeper and deeper in the unending intrigue of the palace. The Kaid of Mekazzen plots with a German against France; Raisul, the Kaid's son, plots with Major Napoleon Riccoli of the Foreign Legion to take over Riccoli's soldiers and make Riccoli commander of the Kaid's army. Unknown to Margaret, her girlhood sweetheart, Otho Bellême, is in Riccoli's command.

Chapter 19

RAISUL IN LOVE

JULES!

"Is that you, Jules?" said Margaret, confused, suddenly awakened from sleep by a slight sound in the pitch-dark room—for nowadays she slept as lightly as a mouse or a bird.

"Who's there? Is that you, Jules?" repeated Margaret, wondering whether she had been mistaken.

She had retired to rest in the great stone turret-room, leaving Jules smoking with his father, Raisul, the Kaid and the curious man whom Pedro Malignі addressed as H. r Schlacht—although Jules had told her that he was a German officer, Ober-Leutnant Carl von Mittengen.

There had been cognac, Algerian claret, and assorted French liqueurs on the low table in the tiled garden, and Jules had flatly refused to leave the party when she had suggested retiring.

There was someone in the room!

It seemed, nowadays, that he was carrying his principle of "When in Rome, do as the Romans do" altogether too far, and enlarging it to "When in Rome, make your wife do as the Romans' wives do." But there she had drawn a very firm line. Because she was in Morocco, she was not going to behave as a Moorish woman.

There was someone in the room . . .

Margaret felt for the box of matches which should be on the stool beside her low uncomfortable bed.

"Would you mind answering, Jules?" she said, with some asperity.

"'Fraid he can't answer," said a voice, "he's—er—speechless."

Raisul.

"D'you mean he's ill? Have you come for me? What's happened?" cried Margaret, sitting up. "Where are the matches?"

"No, I wouldn't say he's ill," replied Raisul, "but I think he will be, tomorrow. At the moment he's very drunk indeed. Speechless, as I said. As to whether I've come for you . . . Well, I've certainly come for a talk with you, my dear. A conclusive one—with no interruptions.

"I'm going to finish what I began saying in England, and what you've contrived to prevent my saying, on numerous occasions, here. And finally, as to the matches, I've got them."

"Go out of my room, instantly. I'll . . . I'll . . ."

"In fact, 'Unhand me, monster, said the village maiden to the villain,'" continued the cool and mocking voice. "Or you'll do—what? Just what will you do?"

"My husband will . . ."

"He won't. Don't you think it, my dear. In point of fact, your husband will do exactly as I tell him, for our good Jules knows on which side his bread is buttered. He also knows that some quite funny and amusing things happen in this place.

"He knows, too, that he is no really persona grata with the Lady Zainub, and that if both she and I became two minds with but a single thought—well, you'd soon be a single woman again. Wouldn't that be nice? For you know you don't love him, Margaret. And surely you must be deadly bored with him by now?"

Springing from the bed, Margaret seized her dressing-gown which lay upon the foot of it, threw it round her, and slipped her feet into the mules which lay beside the bed.

"Have you gone completely mad?" she asked, facing about, to where, between her and the balcony, the figure of Raisul loomed dark against the starlit sky.

"Completely mad," replied Raisul. "Mad for love of you; love at first sight. I saw you at noon on a day in May, and I loved you at a minute past noon on that day, desperately, devotedly, madly, as you say. I loved you then, I have loved you every hour of the day and the night since then. I love you now, and I shall love you every hour of the day and the night until I die. And then in Paradise or Heaven—or Hell—I shall still love you for the whole of that Eternal Day or Night. I tell you . . ."

"Would you kindly tell me, instead, where my husband is?" interrupted Margaret, icily. "And I'll tell him something. I'll tell him to give you the finest horse-whipping that ever a gentleman gave a cad."

Raisul laughed lightly.

"My dear, the poor Jules couldn't understand you, for he's far too drunk. And if he were sober he wouldn't understand you, for he's far too wise. He realizes, as you're going to do, that there's no law here—except mine; there are no police—except mine; no friends—except mine; no servants—except mine; no transport—except mine; no weapons—except mine; no food or water—except mine—no hope—except in me.

"For the Kaid, my father, rules in Mekazzen as Allah rules in Paradise—and I rule the Kaid."

"And you call yourself a gentleman and you . . ."

Raisul laughed again.

"Not a bit of it, my darling. I am myself a man," he interrupted, "and I pay you the compliment of calling you a woman fit to be the mate, and if you like, the wife, of such a man."

Margaret gasped.

"I can only suppose that you've been drinking, too," she said, endeavoring to control her voice.

"Been drinking! No. I'm drinking now, the sound of your voice, the fragrance of your presence," and Raisul strode toward the spot where Margaret stood.

"That's what I am drinking, Margaret, a million times more intoxicating than alcohol. Alcohol! The Moors invented al kohl, but not to drink it. We leave that to Christian swine. No, I won't call them that for you are a Christian, for the present. But you are going to be a Moorish princess, Margaret—Sultana of Morocco. I will make you a Queen. I will lay a kingdom at your feet and . . ."

"Meanwhile you will kindly get out of my room."

(Copyright, 1933, F. A. Stokes Co.)

Margaret finds herself in another terrible predicament, tomorrow.

UGE RESPONSIBILITY ON SHOULDERS OF MRS. ROOSEVELT

(Editor's Note: When Mrs. oosevelt "goes into office" as irst Lady of the Land next aturday, a tremendous respon- bility will be placed upon her oulders. As she entertains ocially and politically promi- nt personages of the world, e must have an infallable owledge of etiquet and other aces which make for a rfect hostess. True, she will eak away from some of the stoms, and her entertaining ll tend to be informal—but know just when she may eak away and still remain in e good graces of those to om form is eminent will be small problem. A history of ciety in the White House was en by Mrs. William M. Cra- n before members of El Pro- sso club Tuesday afternoon. d her talk, in abbreviated m, is given in the following icle.)

MRS. WILLIAM M. CRAVEN.

each American president has dded to American history and tion in his own way, so each ess of the White House must on the long line of social re- which have been so much a of the life of the capital ever it was turned from a struggling y village into the governing city of a great nation.

While we are quick to recognize the honor which comes to the first lady of the land, we may overlook the trials she must endure. Martha Washington endured the terrors of Valley Forge and remained with her husband during that trying winter.

Received While Seated.

When Washington became president, his wife established in New York City and later in Philadelphia a salon which was a credit to the young country. Always an aristocrat, she set an able example for her successors. Her administration as hostess was a reproduction of customs of foreign heads of governments. She received her guests while seated, and would dismiss them with the remark, "The colonel retires at 10 o'clock and I always precede him by a few minutes." She had the two-fold advantage of wealth and high social position, and was in manner, appearance, and character a pleasing, graceful representative of American womanhood.

It was during the revolution that Martha Washington's ability in household management was best seen. Everything had to be made in the home, and she directed her servants with skill, teaching ignorant slaves to become expert spinners, menders, and sewers.

Proud of Dresses.

Martha Washington liked to exhi- wo dresses of cotton with silk s of red and brown, these s having been woven by her at Mt. Vernon, and the silk om the ravelings of old brown ngs worn by the colonel, and d was from old silk damask coverings.

I like to remember Martha ington's act of relinquishing ower right to the Washington as soon as her husband had the slaves contingent upon ght of hers.

ing Washington's administra- ere was no White House. The nitress of the White House e presndent's palace, as it was called), was Mrs. John Adams. "palace" was far from com- .

MRS. ROOSEVELT POSES IN INAUGURAL GOWN

INAUGURATION will be a "blue" day for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. For the costume she will wear at the ceremony will be of blue shades that have been named for her, and the above pictures, especially posed by her, show how she will appear when she becomes the First Lady of the Land. The gown (left) is of Eleanor blue crystelle velvet—a two-piece peplum dress with an unusual double-draped surplice front. The long sleeves taper to tight cuffs. The skirt, straight-line, but flaring slightly at the bottom, is then inches from the floor. The gown and coat, as well as the matching accessories, were made by Arnold Constable, New York, and the above pictures are copyrighted by that firm. The coat (shown right) is made of a darker shade of crystelle velvet, called Anna blue. It is three-quarter length with shirred scarf collar and epaulet shoulders. The hat is of Anna blue Milan straw, and purse and pumps are of matching blue kid.

Dorcas Class Has Splendid Reports

Good reports for the last month were made by members of the Dorcas Sunday school class, First Baptist church, at a business meeting yesterday afternoon in the classroom.

Services included the following: 248 visits, 154 telephone calls, 37 trays, 7 floral offerings. The collection for the months was $55.50.

Club Makes Study Of Seed Selection

Helps on selecting garden seed were given by Mrs. J. C. Browning to members of the Merten home demonstration club Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. J. H. Smith, and different kinds of beans were judged for wholesome flavor.

The meeting place for the party of Saturday evening was changed and will be held at the Merten school house. American cheese will be made at a meeting on Wednesday of next week. This will be an all-day meeting in the home of Mrs. C. B. Haney, and each member is asked to come early and to bring sandwiches.

A pot luck dinner was served to the following members: Mesdames Fred C. Fischer, A. C. Enloe, C. O. Bridges, G. N. Culverhouse, J. C. Browning, H. B. Knapp, C. B. Haney, B. T. Hargis, Miss Joy Enloe, and the hostess.

Mrs. E. B. McQuiddy of Exum visited friends here yesterday.

Mrs. John Cunningham of Miami was a Pampa shopper this morning.

Floyd Ditmore of LeFors was in the city last night.

NOTICE—

LESSONS ARE STUDIED WHEN GROUPS MEET

WOMEN OF CHRISTIAN CHURCH GATHER WEDNESDAY

STUDY periods held the interest of the large groups of Women's council members, First Christian church, when they met in various homes yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Lee Ledrick was assisted by Mrs. Frank Meers in entertaining group 1. The devotional was led by Mrs. T. M. Saunders, and the lesson was directed by Mrs. J. B. Townsend. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

Those attending were Mesdames O. H. Ingrum, C. P. Willis, Ivy Duncan, A. A. Tieman, T. M. Saunders, E. A. Records, Floyd Coffin, Weldon Wilson, F. W. O'Malley, A. C. Jones, Frank Wallace, Alma Turman, J. B. Townsend, Younger Cockrell, Marian Walstad, Lee Ledrick, Frank Meers, and the following visitors: Mesdames Tom Darby, Bill Kaufman, Claude Lard, Roy Holt, and Walters.

Luncheon Is Served

Luncheon was served covered dish style when members of group 2 met at the church. Mrs. W. R. Marshall directed the lesson, and Mrs. Garrett was in charge of the devotional. Special numbers included a piano solo by Mrs. Mel Davis and a violin solo by Miss Dorothy Mae Meers, accompanied by Mrs. R. C. Wilson.

The following attended: Mesdames George Farley, W. L. Marshall, A. F. Pendergrass, E. L. Reeves, J. A. Berry, Ed Thom, Don Hurst, Olga Wilson, Eva Erard, C. D. Lynch, Tom Eckerd, Cora Kolb, T. A. Robinson, W. A. Martin, J. R. Cahill, W. M. Andrews, Ray Mackey, R. E. Arey, C. L. Garber, Ben Garber, C. P. Woodward, Bert Isbell, J. H. Jones, Mel Davis, Hugh Isbell, Garrett, Roy McMillen, F. W. O'Malley.

Mrs. Kinzer Directs

Mrs. Bill Kinzer conducted a lesson on Romans 8, 9, and 10 at a meeting of group 3 in the home of Mrs. Hamp Brown. Refreshments of punch and cake were served at the close of the afternoon.

Today's Supreme Challenge to America was taught by Mrs. G. C. Stark at a meeting of the Bethany class in the home of Mrs. L. W. Hardcastle.

The following were present: Mesdames M. L. Williams, Earl Vernon, H. C. Chandler, G. D. Holmes, R. M. Mitchell, Bessie Kennedy, O. J. McAlister, G. C. Stark, and L. W. Hardcastle.

Art Exhibit Is Viewed by Large Group at School

Woodrow Wilson school was host to a large number of parents and students at an exhibit of pictures brought to Pampa by the Pampa public schools. The pictures, loaned by the Practical Drawing company of Dallas, are reproductions of the works of both past and contemporary artists, the originals being valued from a few hundred to millions of dollars each.

A visitor would have been surprised at the ready recognition and hearty appreciation shown by the school children for all the pictures from the stately Madonnas to the portrayals of the children of their own age. This appreciation was made possible by a previous art appreciation campaign directed in the Woodrow Wilson school by Miss Lois Stallings.

The visitors were directed thru the collection by Mrs. A. N. Dilley, Jr., president of the Woodrow Wilson Parent-Teacher association, and Mrs. John Andrews, Mrs. E. Hooks, and Mrs. T. F. Morton of the Arno Art club. The pictures were attractively arranged by Miss Stallings.

The total proceeds of the small admission fee will buy pictures from the Practical Drawing company for each school, and according to Miss Roy Riley, the general director, the school which makes the most money will receive one picture free.

Wade Duncan of Mobeetie spent yesterday with his family here.

Ed Fowler of Albuquerque, N. M., is spening a few weeks in Pampa. He was with the Richards Drug company, here, before moving to New Mexico.

Wayles Eppes, daughter of Jefferson.

Mrs. Madison, Mrs. Monroe, and Mrs. John Quincy Adams were women who had obtained an eminent social polish at foreign courts, their husbands having served as envoys or ambassadors.

A Beautiful Woman.

Dolly Madison (our Quaker maid, so reared) was a talented woman, and obtained a more popular social position in the social life of the country than the wife of any other president with the exception of Mrs. Grover Cleveland or Mrs. Calvin Coolidge. She was very beautiful, and spent money lavishly while at the White Douse. It was said she spent $11,000 in decorating the "palace." She put bells in every room and hired 30 servants.

The story of her acts when the British marched on the capital is an interesting one. The president and his cabinet had fled to Virginia. Mrs. Madison remained at the capital, at the door stood a carriage filled with valuables, including some state papers, which must be saved. She awaited instructions from her husband as to when to follow him. The mayor of Washington urged her to go ahead, but she stood by her post until a penciled note came from her husband. Then she took the Stuart portrait of Washington from its frame, rolled it, and, placing it under folds of her skirt, drove away. The British found the table set for a party of 40, with food in preparation in the kitchen. The commanders ate a hearty meal, and ended by burning the executive mansion. Up to this time it had been called the president's palace, but when it was rebuilt the charred walls were white washed, and thereafter it has been known as the White House.

Mrs. James Monroe was a quiet, polished woman, but her ill health kept her from such lavish entertainment as had marred Mrs. Madison's terms.

Amid the privations of the new country Rachel Donnelson was reared. 'Twas here she met and married General Jackson, who was practicing law. She lived through trying times, but died before her husband took possession of the White House. Her niece, Mrs. Emily Donnelson, filled her position as mistress of the White House.

When Martin Van Buren became president, it was his daughter-in-law, Angelica Van Buren who served as mistress of the White House. She was a woman of rare charm and accomplishments, and dispensed with the duties of her position with true Southern hospitality.

Mrs. William Henry Harrison never occupied the White House because of the untimely death of her husband.

Died in White House.

The first wife of President Tyler died in the White House. Mrs. Robert Tyler, daughter-in-law, performed the duties of hostess until Tyler married again. The second wife was the youthful Julia Gardner, and it was said that the remaining eight months of the administration were of most brilliant character.

Sarah Childress Polk, a native of Tennessee, already had served the hopitalities of the governor's mansion. She was of a deeply religious nature, which led her to dispense with many frivolous social activities, discontinuing all drinking and dancing. Nevertheless, she was a popular hostess.

Disliked Society.

Mrs. Zachary Taylor was a housewife of humble background and did not relish the idea of entering the mansion. Through many years she had shared her soldier-husband's life in tent, camp, or cabin, and so had little time to cultivate social graces. She refused to take part in social life, but selected for herself a few rooms from which she could minister to her husband's comfort. Her actions caused a storm of unfavorable comment, so she stayed more and more to herself, and spent the time knitting and smoking her corncob pipe.

Though Mother Taylor refused the social life of the capital, her daughter, Betty, did not. She performed all the duties of her mother.

Installed Library.

Abigail Powers Fillmore was the daughter of a Baptist minister. Because of lameness, Mrs. Fillmore put the burden of the White Douse functions on the shoulders of her daughter. She was very fond of books, and it was she who caused the first library to be installed in the White House.

Jane Appleton Pierce, also a daughter of a clergyman, came to the White House in morning, her 13-year-old son having been killed in a railroad accident. She did not like politics, and shrank from public life, but did the honors of the White House in becoming style.

During the term of Buchanan, the only bachelor president, a niece, Harriet Lane, whom he had adopted and reared after her parents' death, presided as mistress of the White House. Under her direction White House functions came back to a livelier and more sumptuous standard.

Eliza McArdle was a school teacher and met Johnson while teaching in a mountain village in Tennessee. She helped to educate her husband, who had never attended school. When she began her social duties as wife of the president, she was handicapped by failing health and was of little help in this way to Johnson. But her daughter took over the duties of the White House and performed them exceedingly well.

Her Ambition.

To Mary Todd Lincoln the White House was an ambition. It is said that when a child she remarked that some day she would be a president's wife and live in the White House.

Mrs. Grant was a social favorite in St. Louis when she was married. She became companion, as well as wife, to General Grant, and is ranked as one of the outstanding hostesses of the White House.

No Wine Allowed.

Lucy Webb Hayes never allowed wine to be served at the White House. She left the White House signally honored by her own sex.

Mrs. James Garfield was hardly settled in the White House before an assassin took the life of the president.

Following Mrs. Garfield, Mrs. Mary McElroy, sister of President Arthur, took over the social reign of the White House, entertaining lavishly.

President Weds.

Grover Cleveland was the first president to be married in the White House, the ceremony being one of great festivity. Mrs. Cleveland, who won immediate popularity, entertained a great deal and with distinction. The first president's child to be born in the White House was Esther Cleveland, born September 9, 1893. She is one of the six living presidents' wives and is now Mrs. Thomas J. Preston.

Benjamin Harrison's first wife died at the White House near the end of her husband's term. She was a painter and musician, and was the first president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Her niece, Mary Scott Lord, became Harrison's second wife, and is living today.

Ida Sexton McKinley was the daughter of an Ohio banker, and was cashier in the bank at the time of her marriage. She was an invalid for years, but presided well at the White House and accompanied her husband wherever he went. She was with with him when he was assassinated at Buffalo.

Is Still Living.

The first wife of Theodore Roosevelt died in 1884, leaving one daughter, Alice Lee Roosevelt, who was married at the White House in 1906 to Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, who later became speaker of the house of representatives. The second Mrs. Roosevelt was Edith Kermit Carow, and many gay events occurred during her occupancy of the White House. She also is one of the living wives of presidents.

Helen Herron Taft, is a daughter of Judge John W. Herron of Cincinnati. She is a musician, and brought to the White House many gifts which made her social regime there attractive. Her teas became famous, and it was she who made the Cincinnati orchestra one of the greatest in the country while she was teaching music in a conservatory in that city.

Regarding the last five wives of presidents, there is a splendid article in the February number of Good Housekeeping, 1932. These women had one thing in common—each was a professional wife, investing her ambitions and gifts in her husband's career. But each brought to this profession a different gift. The women are characterized as follows: The exploiter wife, Florence Kling Harding; the promoter wife, Lou Henry Hoover; the front door wife, Mrs. Grace Coolidge; the inspirational wives, Ellen Axson Wilson and Edith Bolling Wilson.

Mrs. Euel Wegster of Miami visited friends here yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jess Goad of Farrington were Pampa visitors Wednesday.

FOR TEXANS ON INDEPENDENCE DAY (MARCH 2)

Do not forget, O people, hurrying under the Texas sun
That this is the land Sam Houston's army won!
You men enveloped in steel and stones
There is pioneer stuff in the marrows of your bones;
Where your great buildings now stand
Your fathers fought the Indian hand to hand;
Your regal rooms of polished wood,
Standing where the forest stood,
Are not half as majestic as the trees
That once dozed in the Gulf coast breeze;
Your machines are more fatal in a thousand ways
Than the scalping Comanches in the early days.

You people in great buildings, frustrated by toil,
You can not go on forever without the leaven of the soil;
You must love the earth of Texas as your fathers did
While they forced from its crust the secrets it hid.
Before this generation is gone, you will go back to the sod;
You will seek life and beauty there—you will seek God
The plant and the animal will reign again;
The machine will release its hold on the brain;
No longer afraid, man will be sane;
He will trust in the soil as he trusts in rain.

Sons of buffalo hunters and Indian fighters,
You who are bankers, merchants and writers—
Every native and adopted son,
Your heritage is a matchless one.
Take your cue from Stephen Austin's men
Who, hearing the oncoming musketry din,
Courageously, fiercely called themselves "Texicans"
While they moulded bullets to fight the Mexicans.

Look at Galvez beach spread with glacial rolls that gleam and flit,
Then think of the sands cut by the footprints of Jean LaFitte.
Look at the high flung-plains and note the miles of waving wheat.
Then see the great herds of buffalo advancing to defeat.
Observe the great ranch kingdoms and the red and white cattle,
Then listen to the dying groan at Adobe Walls battle.
Look at the fine white road and fast machines, hear what their drivers say,
Then listen to the conquistadors driving stakes to mark their way.

Watch the shining aircraft dart and dip like a mocking bird climbing the sky.
Then in fancy see the buzzards waiting for Coronado's men to die.
Hunt in East Texas for the grave of Robert de la Salle,
Hear his dying words and know what it means to be loyal
Think of his honor and courage, how he is immortal
Then follow Deaf Smith to Vince's bridge;
March your soul to San Jacinto ridge.
Take your heart to Goliad and put it on that funeral pyre
Where Fannin and his deathless patriots went up in smoke and fire.

Read about Bowie, Crockett, Bonham, Travis and Ellis Bean.
Read about the Alamo and tell your heart what these words mean:
"Thermopylae had her messengers of defeat, but the Alamo had none."
Then, alone hold a death watch there through that midnight after it was lost and won.
See the blood-drenched walls gleaming in the setting sun,
Be Mrs. Dickinson and load your husband's gun,
Fight with Travis until the foe has not left one.
Almost die a year with Stephen Austin in his foreign prison cell;
Know that the flame of patriotism burns brighter than the flames of hell.

"Remember the Alamo, Remember Goliad!"
Then try, if you can, and make your song of Texas sad!
Think of Dick Dowling at his guns in Sabine Pass;
Hear Albert Sidney Johnson ride over Texas grass.
Help Coronado hunt his cities of gold;
Learn that the quest for them makes men sad and old.
If you seek beauty and desire her fruition,
Go look at the Rose Window of San Jose mission.
Listen to the sea's music at Galveston beach;
Glimpse Palo Duro canyon's painted reach.
If you hold honor high and know what it will bring,
Read about Sam Houston, look inside his cherished ring.

If you like courage in the face of deathly danger,
Read about McNelly, Red Hall, Gillett, and many another Ranger,
If you like pageants follow the Chisholm trail to Dodge;
If you would know sorrow follow the Raven's trail to his Indian lodge.
If you like grandeur, visit the Big Bend—
If you like friendship learn that "Texas" means "friend."
Call yourself a "Texian" in the grand old manner;
Hang your heart and honor upon the Lone Star banner.

Pick up the song sung by Houston's men;
Sing it until there arises a din
That can be heard from the coast to the plains.
Pick up the words of the rhythmic refrain.
The "Texian" tribe is not dying out.
Let the song be a crescendo and then shout;
Let every singer free his mind from doubt;
Sing the song until it becomes a rout;
Let it be the song of every man;
Let every one sing it and if he can
Try to be a "Texian."

--DEATH

Pittman was called to attend Mrs. Walsh, who was in a highly nervous state.

Heart Attack.

Dr. Pittman said the senator was dead when he arrived and that, in his opinion, he had died of a sudden heart attack.

He was placed in charge of Mrs. Walsh, who told the physician to have the senator's body removed from the train at Rocky Mount to be prepared for burial.

When the train reached here, the body was taken to the Bullock Funeral home and embalmed, preparatory to sending it on to Washington on the next train which leaves at 2:30 p. m.

Mrs. Walsh was first taken to the Ricks hotel by Dr. Pittman who said she was "in a highly nervous state" and that she was showing "much emotion." A short while later she was removed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Spruill. Spruill is a prominent Rocky Mount attorney and local counsel for the Atlantic Coast Lines railway.

The Montanan had been a familiar figure in the capital for twenty years, ever since he left the private practice of law in Helena to come to the senate.

Noted Democrat.

He probably gained his greatest prominence as the prosecutor in the Teapot Dome oil scandal in 1924.

But to democrats all over the United States, he was known as the man who presided over the tumultuous democratic convention of 1924 which fought out the long dealock between Alfred Smith and William G. McAdoo for the nomination. The deadlock was finally broken by the selection of John W. Davis as the standard bearer.

Again in 1932, the Montanan was chosen to preside over a national conclave of his party, this time at Chicago where after three ballots Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated.

Senator Walsh took an active part in the campaign. Throughout the long western trip of Mr. Roosevelt, which took him into every far western state except Nevada, the senator conferred frequently with the nominee and appeared often on the rear platform.

Through the west on this rear platform appearances, the announcement that the Montana senator would speak was the signal for immediate applause from the crowds.

Safety Agency Is Formed By Empire

An Empire Oil & Gas and Cities Service Safety organization was perfected at a meeting of employes in the city hall Tuesday night. Hupp Clark was elected president for the first six months. Johnnie Corrigan was named secretary. Meetings will be held monthly.

G. O. Lockwood of the safety department of the Empire Oil & Gas company, of Tulsa, was the chief speaker. Mr. Lockwood showed pictures of the progress of the oil industry from the first well drilled to present day efficiency. He stressed the advancement in safety through the years.

Entertainment for the evening was supplied by Harry Kelley and his high school quartet, Misses Dorothy Dodd and Marjorie Enloe, Howard Zimmerman, and Charles Frost. Solos and piano numbers were hendered by members of the quartet.

Schools Observe 97th Birthday Of State Today

Observance of Texas week which began last Monday and will end Saturday, reached a climax in city and county schools today when the 97th anniversary of Texas independence was celebrated in chapel and room programs. The high school observed the event in a special chapel program.

Business people of the downtown district were made aware that a Texas holiday had arrived when they glanced at the Texas flag flying from the flagpole atop the Brunow building early this morning. Dr. V. E. von Brunow has run up the Texas flag in Pampa on March 2 for almost 30 years, the time of his residence here.

For Mrs. Brunow, the flag and observance of the day has a personal significance. One of her ancestors was a defender of the Alamo and others fought through the Texas revolution.

INCOME ON THE VALUE OF ALL THE PROPERTY IN THIS COUNTRY. We do believe the government should give relief to two classes of sufferers: 1. The taxpayers least able to pay; and 2. the destitute in need of medical attention and food.

AN OBJECT LESSON

Direct relief has been condemned as a dole. But under severe stress a dole, with work provided as far as possible, is the cheapest relief plan obtainable. The government will spend $160,000 here for the post office building. Pampans are glad to get it. It will be pretty, convenient, a matter of civic pride—but we will pay for it. As a relief project, however, it is not justified. While some work will be given while it is under construction, a big per cent of the cost will be spent elsewhere. The government could have sent one-tenth the total cost here for minor construction and have rendered as much local aid. Public works is too expensive as a relief program, smacking of 1929 extravangance. . . . A prominent citizen said he wished the government would cancel the post office building project as an object lesson in economy here and elsewhere. We cite this as an example of the trend in public thinking.

INCOME TAX FACTS

It is important that the taxpayer render on or before the due date—March 15, if filed on the calendar-year basis—as complete and final return of income as possible. However, when by reason of illness or absence from home additional time is required, a reasonable extension of time may be granted. Application should be made to the collector of international revenue for the district in which the taxpayer files his return, together with a full recital of the causes for the delay. Except in the case of taxpayers who are abroad, no extension may be granted for a period of more than six months.

An extension of time for filing the return does not extend the time for payment of the tax, or any installment thereof, unless so specified in the extension. Application for such extension should be made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue through the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer's return is filed. The applicant should set forth under oath the specific reason for desiring an extension and should clearly indicate what hardship, if any would result if the extension were not granted. The amount for which the extension is desired should be stated. The commissioner will not consider an extension of time of payment unless made on or before the due date of the tax or installment thereof. If the extension is granted, interest at the rate of 6 per cent, year is collectible from the date the payment should have been made if there had been no extension to the expiration of the period of the extension.

"Spelling bees" are still popular in Dixie. A recent one at Petal, Miss., a rural community, drew 200 spectators.

—GEORGE TYNG

(Note: This is the second installment of a series of articles dealing with the early history of Pampa. Yesterday, events which led to the naming of Pampa by George Tyng, for 16 years until 1903 the agent for the White Deer Land company, were related.)

Mr. Tyng had an adventuresome disposition, and his desire for raw, unclaimed lands led him to the far west after he left Pampa. He wanted to civilize a place but he did not want to live in it after he had civilized it. He met a tragic death in a snowslide at a mining camp in Utah in 1903. The mine belonged to him and was paying enormous profits at the time of his death. Mr. Tyng's son, Charles, was a prominent man of Salt Lake City before his death. George Tyng's wife was a member of an old aristocratic Spanish family of California. She visited the ranch once during Mr. Tyng's managership. Physically, Mr. Tyng was small. He wore short mustaches. Tyng street in South Pampa was named for the pioneer. Perry LeFors was the first man in the county to hear of Mr. Tyng's death, and Jess Wynne, good friend of Mr. Tyng, planned to attend his funeral but when he learned of his death the burial was due to take place the next day. Mr Tyng had sent all of his employes out of the valley, anticipating that a snow-slide might take place. He himself was preparing to leave the next day. It was several days before his body was recovered. He was buried in the little mining town. He was 72 years old at the time of his death, it is believed. While here, Mr. Tyng built the original structure that was the Schneider hotel. It is still standing just east of the present Schnieder hotel. Mr. Tyng's influence in this section was enormous.

Other officials of the White Deer company who moulded the early history of Pampa were Albert de Peyster Foster, his brother, Frederic de Peyster Foster, the latter being the principal stockholder in the company. Albert Square on which is now located the city hall was named for Mr. Foster.

Mr. Lane's first residence was a half-dugout just across the street from where is now located the White Deer Land building. Buffalo bones were scattered about where the Rose building is now located. Herds of cattle grazed up and down Cuyler and Foster streets when Mr. Lane lived in the half dugout.

When Mr. Lane began working for the Santa Fe here in '88, the only structure of any kind in the immediate vicinity was a shack that was used for a station. There were not even any stockyards. Cattle in that year and in a few succeeding years were shipped from Miami and Panhandle. The original decision of the Santa Fe was to build no further than Miami, but the Denver was building north to Amarillo, so the Santa Fe pushed on to Panhandle in '88.

In that year, Pampa was not much of a social center for trainmen and cowboys who usually went to Codman to attend dances. Codman was a stop east of Pampa. All trains in those days were mixed. Several years after Mr. Lane came to Pampa, a telegraph operator was sent here for a few weeks in the spring and in the fall of each year during roundups, but finally they stopped sending operators here altogether.

Mr. Stewart And Miss Maness Wed

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Weldon Stewart and Miss Lois Maness, the ceremony having been solemnized Saturday noon in Guymon, Okla. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart returned to Pampa Sunday and are making their home on Russell street.

Mr. Stewart, son of Mrs. John Kirby, has been driver of a school bus here for the last three years. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Maness.

wise sped to the spot and picked him up.

"Where I was held and by whom I do not know," young Boettcher said. "It appeared to be in a basement of some house 18 hours by fast automobile from Denver. Neither do I know who my abductors were, but there were two of them—possibly three."

He said a stop was made somplace along the way returning to Denver, "and I got the impression another mn joined us. That's why makes me think there were three in the gang."

Father Threatening

"Finally," he related, "the men said they were going to let me out. They said that after I had been let out I should count to 150. 'Then go around the corner where you will find a telephone. Be sure and call your parents as they are worried about you.' I called them and here I am. Seventeen days—seems more like seventeen years of blackness, discomfort and threats—thank God, it's all over."

With his son safe, the elder Boettcher later talked guardedly of the case.

"This is the beginning. Not the end of this case," he declared. "I might say that this is the end of one story and the beginning of another. What the outcome of the second story will be remains to be seen."

Running Gun Battle

Police, who despite reports of a breach with the family were kept informed of progress in the case, went into action and within a few minutes had engaged in a running gun battle with a car believed to contain the kidnapers. The car escaped.

Boettcher was taken to the home of a friend where Chief Clark questioned him. Then he was taken home to bed.

The elder Boettcher, apparently excited, drew a revolver and threatened police and reporters who were congregated in front of his home when he returned from a reunion with his son.

"Get back or I'll shoot," he cried. Patrolman Ralph Fairley drew his pistol while the others dispersed, a friend disarmed the father and he later apologized.

HOW MODERN WOMEN LOSE FAT SAFELY

Gain Physical Vigor—Youthfulness With Clear Skin and Vivacious Eyes That Sparkle With Glorious Health

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast—cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—in 4 weeks get on the scales and note how many pounds of fat have vanished.

Get a bottle of Kruschen Salts—the cost is trifling and it lasts 4 weeks. If even this first bottle doesn't convince you this is the easiest, safest and surest way to lose fat—if you don't feel a superb improvement in health—so gloriously energetic — vigorously alive — your money gladly returned.

But be sure for your health's sake that you ask for Kruschen Salts. Get them at Richards Drug Co., Inc. or any drugstore in the world.

TEAM OFF FOR SECOND FIGHT WITH LAMESA

BOYS EAGER TO PLAY BEST GAME OF YEAR TOMORROW NIGHT

The Harvester basketball team left at 9 o'clock this morning for Lamesa for the second battle with the Golden Tornado tomorrow night in the bi-district championship race. The boys have been in a fighting mood since they were nosed out in the first game during the last minute of play, and they had only one thought in mind when they left and that was to win.

The team has looked better this week than at any time this year. They are expected to play super-basketball tomorrow night and take the second game, despite the disadvantage of playing on Lamesa's small concrete-floored court.

Yesterday the boys went to LeFors and scrimmaged against James Gotcher, formerly of the Amarillo Badgers, and "Dinty" Moore, ex-Harvester. Coach Odus Mitchell was optimsitic after the workout. He believes that his boys will have no trouble winning the third game if they are successful tomorrow night.

Frank Kimbrough, coach of the Plainview high school football team, will officiate. The boys and coach are confident that he will not allow the game to get from under his control. He has officiated several times for Pampa in the last few years.

A number of Pampa people were planning today to attend the game.

Members of the team who accompanied Coach Mitchell on the trip were Capt. Robert Woodward, Miles Marbaugh, Hoot Fullingim, Wayne Kelley, Jess Patton, Orville Heiskell, Bill Kelley, Leslie Sartain, and Siler Faulkner. The party is making the trip in automobiles.

AT THE SPRING TRAINING CAMPS

Al's Arrival Awaited

PASADENA, Calif., March 2. (AP)—Instead of waiting until March 12 to report to the Chicago White Sox, Al Simmons probably will join his new mates by the end of this week.

Owner Lou Comiskey has become so eager to see Simmons working in a Sox uniform that he called him last night and urged him to report as quickly as possible. The former Athletics slugger said he needed a couple of days for treatment of his teeth, but would have his five replacements installed in California instead of remaining at Hot Springs, Arkansas, for the job.

BILOXI, Miss., March 2. (AP)—Manager Joe Cronin of the Washington Senators doesn't want any lost motion, such as a catcher planting himself with a step backwards, before pegging the ball.

Ed Cliff Bolton was given a bit of instruction on how to step up a stride, and let the ball fly for the bag.

It's all part of the "scientific baseball" the new mentor announced as part of the training curriculum.

Third baseman Cecil Travis, was the latest arrival in camp. He likewise got a little of that scientific instruction.

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING PARAGRAPH FIVE, OF SECTION NO. 2, OF ORDINANCE NO. 53, PASSED BY THE CITY OF PAMPA ON AUGUST 23, 1926, GOVERNING ELECTRICIANS AND THE INSTALLATION AND REPAIR OF ELECTRICAL WORK IN THE CITY OF PAMPA, AND DECLARING AN EMERGENCY.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CITY OF PAMPA, TEXAS:

SECTION 1: Paragraph five, of Section No. 2, of Ordinance No. 53, passed by the City of Pampa on August 23, 1926, governing electricians and the installation and repair of electrical work in the City of Pampa, is hereby amended so that hereafter said paragraph shall read as follows:

"The name of each member of any firm or partnership obtaining a license, the names of the officers of any corporation obtaining a license, together with the names of all journeymen electricians who are employed by said firm, partnership, or corporation, or who are employed by any individual obtaining a license, shall be given to the City Secretary of said city, and all such names shall be inserted in such license. The person, firm, or corporation obtaining such license shall pay to said City Secretary the sum of $50.00 as an annual license fee therefor, and no license shall issue for a less amount; provided, that all persons, firms, or corporations who are not now engaged in such business in said city, and who have not heretofore passed the examination of the Pampa Electricians Examining Board, and who shall hereafter establish or desire to engaged in such business in said city, shall pay to said City Secretary the sum of $100.00, which said sum shall cover the rivilege of engaging in such business or work in said city until the first day of January next succeeding its payment. Thereafter such persons, firms, or corporations shall be charged the annual license fee of $50.00, as above provided. The City Commission of said city may withhold approval of the bond filed by any person, firm, or corporation in accordance with the provisions of this ordinance until such time as is reasonably necessary to investigate the character and ability of the principal, or its officers and agents, not exceeding thirty days."

SECTION II: EMERGENCY. It appearing that said Ordinance No. 53 should be amended as herein set out, and it further appearing that the public welfare demands the immediate enforcement of said amendment, an emergency is hereby declared, and the rules prescribing three separate readings of an ordinance are hereby suspended, and this ordinance shall be in full force and effect on and after its passage and publication, as provided by law.

Passed and approved this the 20th day of February, 1933.

CRISLER TRAINS PLAYERS BY MAIL ON DIET AND EXERCISE

Princeton's Coach Almost Eliminates Injuries By Preventative Methods.

(Note: Fritz Crisler not only has rebuilt Princeton's athletic morale but installed methods of physical conditioning that have cut down the danger of injuries, especially on the gridiron. His contributions to football in this respect have attracted nation-wide interest. They are described herewith in the final chapter of a series of stories on the Tiger athletic revival.)

By EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

PRINCETON, N. J., Mar. 2. (AP)—A year ago this spring, "Fritz" Crisler put his first Princeton football squad through early practice, and the boys came out of a month's drilling with as complete a crop of injuries as the new head coach ever had seen.

Scarcely a man on the small squad wound up with both knees in good working order. There were many ankle hurts, strained ligaments.

Puzzling over this problem, the greatest that American football faces because of the toll of injuries and deaths that have lately ranged between 30 and 50 yearly, Crisler came up with an answer in the form of preventative exercise. Not only has this almost eliminated injuries from Princeton football, but it has contributed as well to the athletic system that has brought about such a surprising return to power of all Tiger sports in the short period of one year.

As the basis of a "train by mail" program, Crisler sent every squad member six diagrams, pictures of exercises designed to strengthen ankles and knees, the latter a joint nature left with little muscular protection against hurts that come so often to dodging ends and twisting half backs.

Skillfully also he rebuilded the broken Tiger morale with frequent letters to the squad through the summer, laying down caustic definitions of what did and did not constitute the type of player Princeton needed in the crisis. Just as carefully he laid out a routine of training, practice and diet that brought every man back for the late Sept. 15 start fit and ready.

"There was nothing remarkable in that," Crisler said. "The boys were conscientious. There is nothing in such a system that violates the spirit of the dual agreement with Yale barring organized conditions and practice before Sept. 15. I believe they do similar things at both Yale and Harvard. It must be done if boys are to stand up under the rigors of a heavy schedule. It is just common sense."

In his letters were the following instructions:

"Be ready for scrimmage the opening day. There'll be no fooling with men not physically fit. Kicking, passing, catching, dodging must be perfected during the summer. There'll be no time in the fall.

"Cut out smoking absolutely. Sleep at least eight hours regularly, preferably 10 p. m. to 6 a. m. Fifteen minutes setting up exercises every morning, followed by a cold bath. No automobiles, walk or jog instead. For endurance, five minutes of stationary running each day, exaggerating the left knee lift. For the first week sprint 25 yards 7 times at two minute intervals. Work it up to 15 sprints of 35 yards 12 times a day at ¾ minute intervals. Skip rope for balance and quickening. Harden your body for bumps by rolling on the ground. For blocking practice running on all four.

"Watch your diet. No fried foods, chocolate, candy, bananas, coffee, ice water. Drink weak tea with three regualr meals, lots of water in between, an apple before bed time. Meat once a day, lots of roughage, cereals, fruit, but no cabbage. Too hard to digest.

"If you're not in shape after that," he wrote them, "don't blame me."

GRID PRACTICE FOR REGULARS IS ANNOUNCED

BOYS WITH PREVIOUS EXPERIENCE WILL BE DRILLED

Spring football training will start in earnest Monday afternoon at Harvester park when the boys who have had previous experience will join the boys who have been working for the last two weeks. Coach Argus Fox has arranged a game for Friday afternoon between his two teams of little fellows. He will select the boys who look the most promising and keep them out for a while. The rest will be excused until next year.

The bigger boys who have been showing promise during practice sessions will play with the experienced boys in intramural games. Spring training will continue for several weeks. Only one of last season's regulars and seven substitutes will be available this season. Several Gorillas from last season are expected to show their wares in big style this season.

Coach Fox was to call all the boys with previous football experience together this afternoon to find out how many suits he will need. He expects at least 40 boys to add to the present list of 80 when the time comes for the opening practice.

While the little fellows work up the plays they will use Friday afternoon, the bigger members of the squad tackle the dummy, catch passes, and run a few plays.

Moreland Sets New Record On Louisiana Links

NEW ORLEANS, March 2 (AP)—Gus Moreland of Dallas, medalist in yesterday's qualifying round of the New Orleans Country club carnival invitation tournament, met a fellow Texan, Gaston Peek of Galveston, in the first match play today.

Moreland burned up the course yesterday to establish a record of 69, two under par.

The nearest approach to Moreland's record-smashing mark was the 76 hung up by Hickman Greene, of Baton Rouge. Johnny Dawson of Chicago, the defending champion, went the route in 79, hanging up a 38 going out and a 41 coming in.

TRAINING FOR TRACK DUE TO BEGIN MONDAY

FIRST MEET TO BE AT AMARILLO WITHIN THREE WEEKS

Only the weather will stop track and field work starting Monday afternoon, Coach Odus Mitchell said yesterday afternoon. He will have less than two weeks to get his boys in shape for the first meet of the season which will be March 18 with the Amarillo Sandies coming here for a dual meet.

Two lettermen will be missing from the ranks unless they make up their work before that time. Some of the most promising material has almost decided to go out for spring football rather than track which will leave the track and field boys in the minority unless some unexpected change develops.

The Harvesters will go to Amarillo March 24 in a triangle affair with Lubbock and Amarillo. The Clarendon invitation meet will also be attended March 31. The next day will be the county meet here.

The Interscholastic League meet will be held in Canyon April 21 and 22. Coach Mitchell may enter the Tech Relays at Lubbock and one or two other events, dates for which have not been set.

Several young Harvester thinclads have been getting themselves in condition by jogging around the track and going over the hurdles at Harvester park. Lack of uniforms has kept more of the boys from getting in their early practice Little time will be spent on preliminaries this year because of the short training period. Coach Mitchell has been busy with basketball, which is overlapping the track and field season since the Harvesters won the district.

A win over Lamesa tomorrow night would prolong the season but Coach Mitchell said yesterday he would devote considerable time to the track and field squad regardless of the outcome of the game in Lamesa. Assistant Coach Argus Fox is busy with the football prospects.
