Ladder area again draws trial's focus

A Lubbock architect called on behalf of the Glenn Polk family testified Friday he felt a stage-level ladder leading into the ceiling area of the Scurry County Coliseum should have been "locked or supervised."

But, under cross examination by attorneys for Scurry County and the Snyder Chamber of Commerce, the architect admitted the ceiling area "was not a place where the general public is invited or permitted to be."

Sanford Whitaker was called to testify in 132nd District Court as part of the plaintiff's case in the $2 million lawsuit brought by the Polks against the county and chamber.

The Polk's attorney, Alton Griffin, called Whitaker to the stand as an expert witness to testify about "architectural matters" related to the case.

Whitaker told the court he had inspected the area of the coliseum two weeks ago. It was this area where Jeff Polk apparently climbed prior to falling to his death on Oct. 7, 1984.

Under questioning from Griffin, Whitaker testified he found no "warning of danger" in either the sound booth or ceiling area.

Under cross examination from chamber attorney Brad Crawford, Whitaker told the court that he was being paid $50 per hour for his work in inspecting the coliseum and testifying in the trial.

Under further questioning from Crawford, the architect testified "it was obvious to anyone that the ladders (leading into and up from the sound booth) are not a 'public way.'"

Mammography open house slated at Cogdell Sunday

County and area residents are invited Sunday to view the latest technology offered for early detection of breast cancer — one of the leading causes of death among women.

In December, Cogdell Memorial Hospital radiology staffers began offering the screenings utilizing Xero-mammography equipment, considered by professionals to be the most advanced technology currently available.

Sunday, tours of the mammography room will be conducted and brochures concerning breast cancer will be available during the open house from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. in the west lobby at Cogdell.

Although the equipment is generally not available in hospitals the same size as Cogdell, employees and members of the ladies auxiliary have raised some $47,000 of the estimated $65,000 needed for the unit.

While the auxiliary has been the most visible fundraisers, its members credit Dr. Buerk Williams, the hospital's chief radiologist, as the project's instigator.

"It became apparent to me the need for Xero-mammography services. The first person I talked to for feedback was Dr. (Carl) Dillaha. He was encouraging mainly because of all the people he sent to Lubbock for mammograms. I talked to other doctors who were also encouraging," Williams said.

At the request of the facility's board of managers, Williams developed a proposal.

Two mammogram systems are currently used by health care professionals — the film-screen system which uses X-ray film and the Xerox system.

A film-screen mammogram is done in the same manner as any other X-ray. The film is exposed and developed through a processor. With the Xero-mammography system, the image is produced in much the same manner as a copier.

Williams believes the advanced process detects cancers at an earlier stage. "I feel the image detail is so much better with the Xerox system. In my opinion, there is less of a chance of missing a lesion that might be present than with the film-screen. Not only do I enjoy using the system, but I feel more comfortable with it and have a higher confidence level in my interpretations," he said.

Radiology technicians Rory Doan and Joyce Wellborn, who perform the majority of the screenings, recommend women have the test as prescribed by American Cancer Society guidelines.

The ACS recommends one baseline screening — a mammogram that will later be used for comparison — for women between 35 and 40 years of age.

In the 39 to 40 age group, women should be tested at least every two to three years. Those 50 years and over should be screened yearly.

The American Cancer Society estimates that one in every 11 women will develop breast

SHS play used for training

Snyder High School drama students performed on the Texas Tech campus in Lubbock Friday night at the state convention of the Texas Educational Theatre Association.

They presented a play entitled "Dope" with the performance used to train critic judges for the University Interscholastic League one-act play contests.

It marked the fifth time Snyder students have been invited to participate in such an event. The last time was in 1984 in Waco.

The play, which will be staged for hometown audiences at a later date, deals with drug addiction, telling the story of a young man whose life is ruined due to drugs.

Playing the lead roles are Brad Vincent, as the addict, and Karl Menges, the drug pusher.

Other members of the cast include Bryan Norris, Charlie McCormick, Melissa Hodges, Kristen Walton, Brandon Neeley, Amber Adams, Joy McSpadden, Ashley Miller, Monique Miller, Lois Urdy, Jeff Franklin, John Griffin and Michael Cato.

Technical assistants for the production are Galen Price, lighting; Brad Pylant and Greg Glass, sound; and Theresa Weir, props.

TV role dedicated by Tubb

Snyder's Barry Tubb may next be seen by hometown residents in a PBS American Playhouse television production this Monday night–a performance Tubb says he has dedicated to the memory of the late John Wilson Jr.

Tubb learned of Wilson's death in New York, where he is performing in a Broadway play entitled "Sweet Sue." In a letter addressed to the SDN, he noted, "When we were doing plays together, (John) was a person who I always thought was much more talented than myself."

Tubb is a 1981 graduate of Snyder High School and Wilson was a 1982 grad.

Wilson died Jan. 14 in Austin. He was 23.

Tubb's performance Monday may be seen locally at 9 p.m. on the PBS Channel 13 out of Dallas. It is received locally on the cable

District tagging desks from TDC

Snyder school officials have identified and are in the process of tagging 50 desks and 100 desk chairs which the Texas Department of Corrections say have paint with too high levels of lead.

The classroom furniture was refinished at TDC facilities and, earlier in the week, was identified as receiving coats of paint which exceeded health standard recommendations for lead.

Assistant Superintendent Artie Butler said Friday that state officials have not yet instrueted the school district to remove the desks from the classroom.

The instructions are to identify the desks, he said, so that they may be picked up at a later date by TDC for repainting.

The classroom furniture is located on two Snyder campuses, East and North Elementaries.

The desks are part of some 50,000 identified throughout the state. Releases earlier this week indicated the paint used by TDC had lead amounts some 42 times greater than the specified level of 0.06 percent by volume.

State health officials have noted that the paint does not pose a health threat unless a significant amount of the paint was ingested.

Locally, the affected desks and chairs are the older style models built of both wood and metal. Only the metal parts were painted with the suspect paint, Butler said.

The recall issued by TDC went

A route man has to get up early and stay late. A successful route man is always in a hurry, rarely taking time for a cup of coffee or even lunch.

Mike Price, the Rainbo Bread man in Snyder, was running full speed ahead several days ago. He popped into the 66 Super Station on East Highway and asked to use the telephone.

"I need to make a long distance call to the warehouse," Price said. "But I'll call collect."

James Harbin, the long-time manager of the station, heard Price as he asked the operator for assistance in making his collect call.

It wasn't long before the red-faced Price hung up the receiver and said, "Boy, that was strange."

Instead of reaching his party in Big Spring, Price had given the operator his home telephone number in Snyder. The operator had assisted Price in placing a toll call from Snyder to Snyder.

It cost Price $1.10 to say hello to his better half that afternoon.

The women in the business office at Western Texas College were recently exchanging most embarrasing moment stories.

The clear winner was Verta Hardegree, a Colorado City resident who works for business manager Gay Hickman.

Mrs. Hardegree's moment occurred several years ago while she was employed at Root Memorial Hospital in C-City.

Hospital officials determined that all employees should take first-aid lessons, including mouth-to-mouth CPR training.

To make the training as realistic as possible a rubber dummy was brought in. When it came Verta's time with the dummy, she forgot about her chewing gum and blew it into the dummy's mouth.

She was accused of gumming up the works.

WTC signup

Tuesday is the last day to register for the spring semester at Western Texas College. It is also the last day students may add a class.

To enroll, individuals should first go to the registrar's office in the administration building.

Early out

Snyder schools will be dismissed early Wednesday with all students out at 2:45 p.m.

Teachers and staff will be participating in campus in-service dealing with the Texas Teacher Appraisal System.

School buses will run usual routes.

Band group

The Snyder Band Boosters will meet Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the high school band hall.

All interested parents are invited to attend.

Yearbook note

Next Friday is the deadline for parents of Snyder High School seniors to place dedication ads in the 1987 Tigers Lair yearbook.

The deadline has been moved up one week. For more information, contact the journalism department at 573-6301, ext. 35.

Court agenda

County commissioners will consider routine matters when they convene in regular session Monday.

Approval of minutes from last week's meeting and county bills are the only items to be considered during the session set for 10 a.m. in the courthouse.

Weather

Snyder Temperatures: High Friday, 62 degrees; low, 34 degrees; reading at 7 a.m. Saturday, 48 degrees; no precipitation; total precipitation for 1987 to date, .18 of an inch.

West Texas Forecast: Windy with a chance of showers and thunderstorms southeast; rains and snow in the Panhandle. Cooler all sections beginning Saturday night.

Clean water bill gets vetoed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, calling on Congress to show "a little more political courage," vetoed a $20 billion water cleanup bill Friday but acknowledged he lacks the votes to be sustained.

Pinning the blame for big budget deficits on Congress, Reagan said "Let's not belly up to the same old bar, let's not drive down that dangerous road again. Let's work together for clean water and responsible government."

Reagan made a ceremony out of his veto, announcing it to an audience of invited guests in the Old Executive Office Building. He entered the room brandishing thumbs up and left it the same way. When he was handed the water bill, the president made a pretense of throwing it away.

"Just say no," shouted someone in the audience, sounding Reagan's anti-drug slogan. "I just said no," the president responded.

He addressed his remarks to Congress, recalling that only on Tuesday, when he delivered the State of the Union message, he received a standing ovation in calling the deficit unacceptable and outrageous.

"Well, I'm now asking you to stand with me in the first great battle of the deficit in the 100th Congress," Reagan said. "My friends on Capitol Hill, you cannot have it both ways."

The House has scheduled a vote on overriding the veto for next Tuesday and Senate action is expected later in the week. A two-thirds vote by both chambers is required to enact the bill over Reagan's objection.

The bill was passed 406-6 by the House and 93-6 by the Senate earlier this month.

The president rejected an identical bill in November but that action was not subject to an override because it was a pocket veto, exercised after Congress had quit for the year.

The measure would renew the Clean Water Act of 1972. It calls for $18 billion for sewage treatment facilities and $2 billion for waterway cleanup over an eight-year period.

The administration argued the measure provides too much aid to states for building more of the waste water and sewage treatment plants that have been credited with cleaning up the nation's waterways.

The bill also would focus attention on major bodies of water such as the Great Lakes and Chesapeake Bay, try to clean up toxic concentrations that have resisted standard remedies and close a loophole that allows the dumping of some industrial waste directly into sewers.

The action drew an immediate response from lawmakers and environmental groups.

Woman charged in 22-year-old case

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A 61-year-old woman pleaded innocent Friday in the 1965 beating death of her 3-year-old adopted son, a death that remained unexplained more than 21 years before the boy's natural mother persuaded authorities to reopen the case.

Lois Jurgens of Stillwater surrendered to authorities and entered the plea in Ramsey County District Court, the day after a grand jury indicted her on one count of second-degree murder and two of third-degree murder.

"He died a very tragic death, a very brutal death, and that's why his mother is standing trial today," Ramsey County Attorney Tom Foley told reporters after the hearing.

The woman's husband, Harold Jurgens, was not charged, and Foley said he anticipated no further charges would be brought in the case. Jurgens testified before the grand jury under a grant of immunity from prosecution, said his lawyer, Joe Friedberg.

Judge David Marsden set bail at $25,000 as recommended by the prosecution and set trial for March 23. Mrs. Jurgens, who ignored reporters' questions as she walked from the courtroom, was later released after posting bail.

The child, 3-year-old Dennis Jurgens, was found dead in the Jurgens' home April 11, 1965. The Jurgens family lived in White Bear Lake, a St. Paul suburb, at the time.

The cause of his death originally was listed as undetermined. But at the urging of the boy's biological mother, Jerry Puckett Sherwood, the case was reopened last year. In October, the medical examiner's office said the boy had been beaten to death.

The indictment against Mrs. Jurgens referred to a "dangerous weapon" used in the boy's death, but did not identify the weapon. Foley also refused to identify it.

Foley said he could not explain why the case was not prosecuted earlier and refused to pinpoint blame, saying only that "I think the system failed 22 years ago."

Mrs. Sherwood was in the courtroom Friday and later told reporters the experience "was hard."

On Thursday, she said she was relieved to hear of the indictment.

"I feel fantastic. I thank God," she said. "My son died wrongfully and I hope the person responsible is going to pay. Maybe now he can rest in peace." Because of the long time between the youngster's death and charges being filed, Foley said it would be more difficult to obtain a conviction.

"Any time you have a case that is 22 years old, that brings on certain problems (more) than if the case is one or two years old," he said.

After giving her first-born son up for adoption in 1962, Mrs. Sherwood married Dennis' father and they had four more children.

Tornadoes claim fewest since 1916

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Tornadoes last year killed the fewest people in 70 years of keeping records, in part because improved technology gives faster warnings, the National Severe Storms Forecast Center said Friday.

There were 15 deaths in 1986, the least since 1916, said Fred Ostby, director of the center.

Weather patterns in 1986 and a public that is more educated about tornadoes also helped keep the toll down, Ostby said.

"We only had three violent tornadoes, tornadoes that in our classification system had wind speeds in excess of 100 mph," Ostby said.

The average number of deaths in a year is 90, Ostby said, although the number of deaths from tornadoes has been declining for the past 10 years.

In 1984, the worst in recent times, 124 people were killed, including 57 in a series of twisters that hit North Carolina and South Carolina.

Chrysler pays record fine involving job-safety records

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Chrysler Corp. agreed Friday to pay nearly $300,000 in fines, the largest ever collected by the government for violations of job safety laws, on charges it underreported accidents at auto plants in Illinois, Deleware and Ohio.

The Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration said the agreement settles 182 citations for violations that the agency brought against Chrysler last November.

OSHA originally had sought fines totaling $910,000 for what officials had said were intentional violations of job injury recordkeeping requirements between January 1985 and April 1986 at Chrysler's Belvidere, Ill., assembly plant.

Among the alleged violations at the Belvidere plant, where 3,900 auto workers are employed, were instances in which job accident victims required hospitalization and surgery without Chrysler ever listing those injuries on logs required by the government.

In several cases, Chrysler was cited for crossing off injuries on the OSHA records, which are used by the agency in focusing its inspection priorities.

OSHA Assistant Secretary John A. Pendergrass said Friday that Chrysler agreed not to contest the charges at the Belvidere plant and to pay a reduced fine of $284,830.

In addition, the company agreed to pay fines totaling $10,002 in regard to allegations of under-reporting accidents at its assembly plant in Newark, Del., and another $500 for what were described as "other-than-serious" reporting violations at its stamping plant at Twinsburg, Ohio.

Under the terms of the settlement, Pendergrass said, Chrysler does not admit any violations.

He said the company also promised to review and correct occupational injury and illness records back to Jan. 1, 1985, at all of its plants, and to ensure that all OSHA and Bureau of Labor Statistics regulations concerning the records are met in the future.

In Detroit, Chrysler issued a statement saying a dispute between it and OSHA "centered on the interpretations of federal recordkeeping guidelines ... rather than the actual health or safety of Chrysler workers."

"Chrysler has the best safety record of the Big Three auto companies, and, according to the federal government, the auto industry is among the safest manufacturing industries," the company said.

Stock Market prices said slightly lower

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices finished slightly lower Friday and gave the Dow Jones industrial average its only consecutive loss of the month, but the broad market displayed resilience and analysts said Wall Street's 1987 rally showed little sign of flagging.

"The easiest path is still up," said Jack Solomon, a strategist at the New York investment firm Bear Stearns Cos. "They just cannot drive this market into the ground."

After hitting an 18 point deficit during midsession, the Dow Jones industrials rebounded on renewed buying interest and computer-driven program trading in the final half hour and ended at 2,158.04, down 1.97 points.

Coupled with the 3.38 loss Thursday, it was the only time Wall Street's most familiar indicator had a consecutive decline in January and was only the fourth time in the month it finished lower.

But that still left the average up 56.52 points for the week and 262.09 points higher for January, a gain of 13.8 percent.

Broader market barometers were mixed, reflecting resilient strength in secondary and over-the-counter stocks. The American Stock Exchange's market-value index closed up 0.67 to 300.47, its fourth straight record high.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled 163.36 million shares, compared with 205.25 million Thursday. Losing issues narrowly outnumbered gainers, with 778 down, 743 up and 455 unchanged.

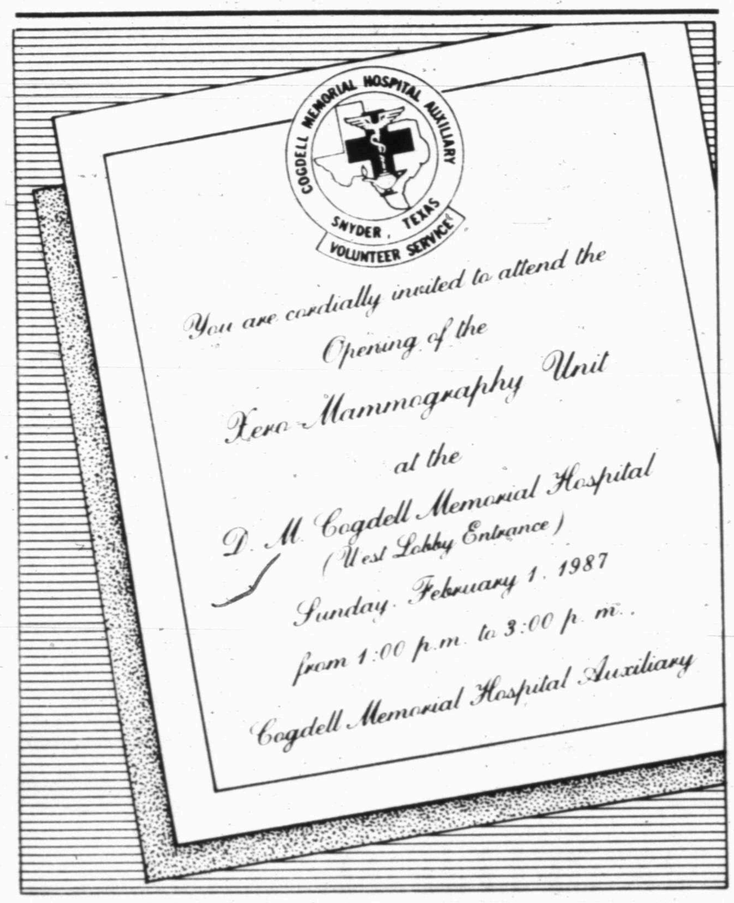

Among the most notable issues, American Telephone & Telegraph fell 1 to 24 3/4 on volume of 6 million shares, the NYSE's most active. The company reported a $1.17 billion fourth-quarter loss Thursday and gave a pessimistic earnings forecast for 1987.

Airline stocks faltered for the second day, a result of renewed industrywide fare-cutting. AMR dropped 1 1/2 to 56 1/2 and Delta fell 1 to 55 5/8. UAL rebounded and closed up 1/8 to 53 1/2 after it announced a staff cutback.

A surge in the dollar, caused by an unexpected decline in U.S. trade deficit figures for December, gave investors an excuse to cash in profits on stocks that had done well because of the currency's depreciation, primarily in the drug, paper, precious metals and chemicals sectors.

Upjohn dropped 1 1/2 to 111; Kimberley Clark lost 7/8 to 105 5/8, Dow Chemical fell 1 1/4 to 70 7/8; and Hecla Mining lost 1/2 to 12 1/8.

Tobacco stocks had a mixed day, partly because of speculative talk about cancer-victim lawsuits and an unfounded rumor that RJR Nabisco would spin off its tobacco operation to the public. RJR initially rose sharply but ended with a 1 5/8 loss to 62 5/8; Philip Morris lost 3 1/8 to 88 1/8; and US Tobacco rose 2 to 26 3/8.

Local surgeon inducted into orthopaedic academy

Stanley D. Allen, MD, of Snyder was inducted recently as a fellow of the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons during ceremonies at the association's 54th annual meeting in San Francisco, Calif.

Dr. Allen was one of 44 new fellows inducted, bringing the academy's membership to 13,276.

The academy is the largest medical association for musculoskeletal specialties. Its members have completed medical school plus up to five years of specialty study in orthopaedics in an accredited residency program, passed a comprehensive oral and written exam, been certified by the American Board of Orthopaedic Surgery, and completed a membership process prior to admittance.

The academy is a not-for-profit organization founded in 1933. Its primary mission is education, for orthopaedists, allied health professionals and the general public.

Local motel adds frame shop

The Purple Sage Motel in Snyder has added a complete line of Windberg gallery prints and a frame shop.

Dalhart Windberg is well known for his scenes of windmills, blue bonnets, fence posts and barns. Mark Petit, a younger artist from this studio, also has achieved recognition for his western scenes.

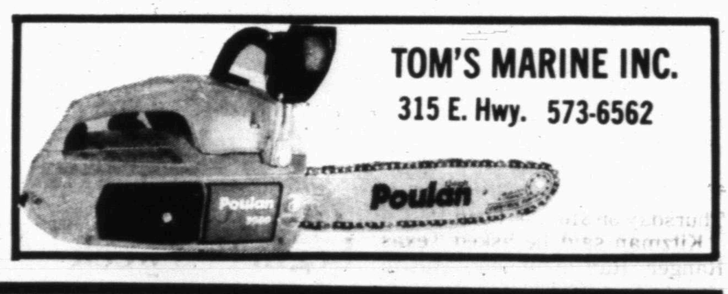

The frame shop offers all kinds of framing needs and can furnish frame selection of wood or metal. Glass and mat cutting are also offered, as well as frames for needle point work.

The frame shop is in addition to the gift shop which opened in 1984 in the then newly remodeled lobby. Gnomes, woodspirits, and special characters from the Cairn Studio were displayed. They are made of pecan shells, wood chips and resin.

The latest addition to the gift shop features sand candles by Virginia Belew of Fluvanna. These candles are sand cast in an almost forgotten technique and feature western and Spanish as well as southwestern motiffs.

Gray hair will become more popular as more women pour their rinses down the drain and let their true colors show, predicts Health magazine.

The net outflow of financial resources out of Latin America between 1982 and 1985 approached the $100 billion mark. This was due to the fact that capital flows into the region slowed to a trickle while interest payments increased, according to the Inter-American Development Bank.

New White House ties discovered to Contra aid fund

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials participated more directly than previously known in a military aid network for Nicaraguan Contra rebels during a two-year congressional ban on arms support, according to evidence in a Senate Intelligence Committee report.

While reaching no conclusions about possible violations of the aid ban, the 65-page report demonstrates the close relationship since 1985 between some White House officials, particularly Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, and principals in the network funneling military assistance to the rebels.

The report, released Thursday night, discloses that:

—President Reagan participated in a meeting last April 23 "for which no topic is listed" involving North, then-national security adviser John M. Poindexter, White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan, "a Central American security official" and a CIA officer. That CIA official was subsequently investigated for "unauthorized contacts with private supporters of the Nicaraguan resistance."

North, then a deputy on Reagan's National Security Council, was fired Nov. 25 for his alleged role in diverting Iranian arms sales profits to the Contras, and Poindexter, a vice admiral, resigned. Both have invoked their Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

Reagan has said he had no knowledge that profits from the secret sale of weapons to Iran were diverted to the Contras.

The White House on Friday refused comment on the purpose of the April 23 meeting, but administration officials have repeatedly declared that the Contra aid network was the work of private citizens and, thus, was not in violation of congressional restrictions — from October 1984 until October 1986 — barring direct or indirect military aid by the U.S. government to the rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Although the CIA officer is not identified in the report, informed sources said he is the station chief in Costa Rica, who was suspended by the CIA last week for failing to disclose fully his participation with North in conveying messages about arms resupply to the Contras.

—Last September, North told Poindexter that Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin "had offered a significant quantity of captured Soviet bloc arms for use by the Nicaraguan resistance" and that if the issue were raised in a Sept. 15 meeting between Reagan and Prime Minister Shimon Peres, "the president should thank him."

The report said "Poindexter noted on the memorandum received by the committee that he discussed it with the president."

Woman gains new trial

BELLVILLE, Texas (AP) — A new trial has been ordered for a woman convicted last month in the shooting death of her husband.

State District Judge Oliver Kitzman ordered the trial Thursday for Julie Milam, 37, after receiving additional evidence he had requested regarding Mrs. Milam's blood-stained clothing.

Mrs. Milam had been sentenced to 30 years in prison in the July 23, 1986, shooting death of her husband, James, 45. She returned to Kerrville with her parents and sister after being released from the Austin County Jail late Thursday on $100,000 bond.

Kitzman said he asked Texas Ranger Ray Nutt and Austin County Sheriff Truman A. Maddox after the week-long trial to have additional tests run on the blood-stained clothing worn by Mrs. Milam the day her husband was shot.

"It was their effort to try to make sure it was accurate, and they did that willingly," Kitzman said. "... My ruling is not a criticism of the quality of anybody's work."

Sgt. Tom Bevel of the Oklahoma City Police Department, who conducted the tests, concluded the stains could not have occurred if she shot her husband while standing outside the couple's truck, the scenario described by prosecutors and their expert witness.

Defense attorney Scott Stehling of Kerrville, who called the guilty verdict reached by an Austin County jury Dec. 12 "contrary to the law and the evidence," said it was unusual that the new evidence was obtained through specific questions asked by the court.

Three classes begin this week

Continuing Education classes in cake decorating, crochet and oilfield production are to begin at Western Texas College this week.

Cake decorating classes begin Monday and meet on Monday nights through Feb. 23. Hours are 6:30-9:30 p.m. and Tori Lyons will be the instructor. Fees are $25 per person and each student must provide a decorating kit. These may be purchased from the instructor for about $18.

Angela Carey will teach the crochet classes from 7-9 p.m. on Mondays from Feb. 2 through Feb. 23. Fees are $15 per person and students are to provide a crochet hook.

The Lease Production Seminar for oilfield personnel will meet on Tuesday and Thursday nights from Feb. 2-12. George Stewart is the instructor and will provide the books to be used. Classes will meet from 6:30-10:30 p.m. each night. Fees are $80 per person.

To enroll in any of these courses call 573-8511, ext. 240.

Immunity requested for one trial witness

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An attorney for a policeman accused of killing a fellow patrolman asked on Friday for immunity for witnesses whose testimony he said would vindicate his client.

State District Judge Phil Chavarria is scheduled to rule on the motion Feb. 13, a week before Farrell Tucker goes on trial for murder in the slaying of Stephen Smith on Aug. 18.

The judge also declared Tucker indigent and formally appointed Terry McDonald as his attorney.

Tucker was suspended after his indictment and the city is seeking to terminate his unemployment compensation, McDonald said.

McDonald, who had taken over the case after Tucker lost his first attorney, argued that some witnesses who testified before the grand jury would corroborate that Smith was an aggressor and had been involved in vigilante acts.

He said Smith's widow, Lea, would invoke the Fifth Amendment against self-incrimination if she were called to testify. Ms. Smith was granted limited immunity during her grand jury testimony last fall.

"It is my belief that her testimony would corroborate what Farrell Tucker said and that testimony is exculpatory in nature," McDonald said.

He said Tucker was only protecting himself.

Smith reportedly planned to kill three top law enforcement officials, former Bexar County District Attorney Sam Millsap, assistant Police Chief Frank Hoyack and Deputy Chief Robert Heuck.

Tucker had met with the officials earlier on the day of the slaying and told them about Smith's plans. They told him to keep a meeting with Smith later that day and gave him a tape-recorder.

Tucker said he took two weapons with him. Smith took one of weapons away and Tucker shot him five times with the other one after Smith threatened him, Tucker has claimed.

The tape-recorder did not work, officials have said.

McDonald argued Friday that two other witnesses could testify to criminal acts committed by Smith.

"My defense is not going to be any surprise," McDonald said. "Our witnesses are the state's witnesses."

The case has received a great deal of publicity in San Antonio, but McDonald said he would not seek a change of venue.

"Farrell Tucker has been a police officer in this town for eight years and I want the citizens here to determine his guilt or innocence," McDonald said.

Rice coach walks out in midst of campaign

HOUSTON (AP) - Rice basketball Coach Tommy Suitts, whose team managed to score only nine points during the first half of a Southwest Conference game this week, resigned Friday, school officials said.

Suitts, head men's basketball coach since 1981, has resigned effective immediately, said Rice Athletic Director Jerry Berndt.

The school scheduled a 3:30 p.m. news conference, and Suitts' office phone was busy.

"We are preparing to conduct an extensive search for a new coach," Berndt said in a prepared statement.

"Our priority will be to be more successful on the basketball court during the last eight games and so earn a spot in the Southwest Conference tournament. We think this will be a positive step in making our program more competitive in the conference and nationally," Berndt said.

Assistant Coach Greg Walcavich will serve as the interim coach, he said.

He said a search committee soon will be named to find a new head coach.

The Owls, 1-7 in SWC play, and 7-12 overall, shot only 19 percent in the first half of Wednesday's game against Texas Christian. The Horned Frogs, ranked 16th in the AP poll, upped their undefeated conference record with a decisive 64-38 win.

BIG SPRING -- Snyder girls ran up a 14-point advantage in the first quarter, then went on to defeat Brownfield 38-21 in the Big Spring Freshman Basketball Tournament here Friday.

Snyder, now 9-7 on the season, was to play Abilene Cooper at noon Saturday in the high school gym here. A victory was to put the young Tigers in the 6 p.m. championship game. A loss would place them in the 4:30 p.m. game for third place.

Cindy Srna's 14 points led the Tigers. Diana Espinosa scored 6 as eight Snyder girls put points on the board.

Hermleigh girls victorious in overtime game with Ira

HERMLEIGH -- Beverly Sandefur hit a freethrow with two seconds left to push an overtime and Jill Roemisch took over from there offensively as Hermleigh defeated Ira 55-43 in a District 17-A girl's basketball game here Friday night.

The victory left Hermleigh at 3-0 in district action while Ira dropped to 2-1.

Roemisch, who had 44 points for the night, scored 10 of the Cardinals' 12 overtime points - including six from the charity stripe. Ironically, Hermleigh had hit just one-of-six free throws in the final 1:12 of regulation. Ira was one-of-three in the same time span.

Sandefur's free throw tied the game at 43-all, and Roemisch put Hermleigh in front when she stole the ball, raced almost the length of the court, and laid it in. She hit a pair of free throws midway through the three-minute period, and Sandefur added two more moments later.

Meanwhile, Ira continued to struggle from the line, and missed the front end of bonus situations on two occasions.

While Roemisch was the key offensively, she got good help on the defensive end from Sandefur, Crystal Church, Tisha Crumly and LaFonda Ford.

Offensively, Sandefur had 9 points on the night and Church added 2.

Ira got 17 points from Cathy Crowder and 15 from Dana Pennington.

In other action here Friday, Hermleigh got 16 points from Ben Smith and 14 from Tim Kotrla to power past Ira's boys, 53-45.

Ira led 20-18 at halftime, but was outscored 18-10 in the third quarter.

Also scoring for Hermleigh, 1-2 in loop play, were Arthur Sanchez with 9 points, Rodney Foster with 8 and Jeff Roemisch with 6.

Ira, 1-2, got 13 points from Varin Walker, 9 from Brent Bearden, 7 from Reyez Juarez, 6 each from Mike Martini and Brent Withers and 2 from Chuck Barbee.

In another 17-A boy's game Friday, Westbrook defeated Loraine 61-59 to go 3-0 in district play. Loraine is 1-2. Also, Loraine girls popped Westbrook 62-37. Loraine girls are 1-2; Westbrook girls are 0-3.

Jordan scores 49 but 76ers prevail

by The Associated Press

Michael Jordan, the NBA's leading scorer, put on another show. Still, it still wasn't enough to stop Charles Barkley and the Philadelphia 76ers.

Jordan scored 49 points Friday night, but Barkley had 40 points and 21 rebounds as Philadelphia beat the Chicago Bulls 121-112.

Jordan, who is averaging 37 points per game with a season-high of 53, made 19 of 35 shots from the field and was 11-for-12 from the foul line. Barkley, with a 24-point average, was 12 of 17 from the field and sunk 16 of 22 free throws.

Chicago suffered its fourth straight loss.

Philadelphia, winning its third in a row and beating the Bulls for the seventh straight time at the Spectrum, led 86-82 after three quarters and went on a 10-2 spree to start the final period.

In other NBA games, Boston beat Indiana 100-94, the Los Angeles Lakers downed Phoenix 114-102, Atlanta defeated New York 106-98, Dallas beat Milwaukee 133-117, Golden State defeated Seattle 127-119, Portland stopped New Jersey 125-107 and San Antonio defeated the Los Angeles Clippers 124-120 in overtime.

Mavericks 133, Bucks 117

Derek Harper and Mark Aguirre scored 28 points each and Dallas beat Milwaukee in a record-setting game for 3-point shots.

Harper made five of the Mavericks' nine 3-point shots, and Craig Hodges had four of the Bucks' seven 3-pointers. The total of 16 broke the previous mark of 11 set by Dallas and Portland on Jan. 13, 1985.

Dallas took the lead for good in the first quarter and was ahead 65-54 at halftime.

Hawks 106, Knicks 98

Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins outscored his brother Gerald 31-23 as the Hawks sent New York to its fifth straight loss.

Gus Williams scored six points and Jon Koncak had four as Atlanta broke an 81-81 tie by going on a 12-3 run to start the fourth quarter.

Celtics 100, Pacers 94

Kevin McHale scored nine of his 31 points during a third-quarter burst as visiting Boston wiped out a 14-point deficit and beat Indiana for its sixth straight victory.

The Celtics, trailing 66-52, came back to make it 82-82. They took the lead for good at 96-94 on Dennis Johnson's layup with 1:09 left in the game. The Pacers have lost five in a row.

Lakers 114, Suns 102

A.C. Green scored 25 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar 23 while Magic Johnson had a season-high 19 assists as the Lakers won in Phoenix.

The Lakers, beating the Suns for the 12th time in their last 14 meetings, took the lead for good

Attorneys say placekicker passed two lie detector tests

DENTON, Texas (AP) - Dallas Cowboys placekicker Rafael Septien has passed two polygraph tests showing he is innocent of sexually abusing a 10-year-old girl, his attorneys said in a motion filed in state district court.

District Judge John Narsutis Friday issued a gag order in the case, forbidding all those involved from talking to the media.

The attorneys filed the motion in response to prosecutor Lee Gabriel's requst for the gag order, contending that Ms. Gabriel was trying to suppress information about the case.

Defense lawyer Jay Ethington said he would appeal the ruling.

Ms. Gabriel, Denton County assistant district attorney, said she filed the motion Tuesday because of continuing attempts by the news media to contact the family of the 10-year-old victim.

The defense attorney's motion states that Ms. Gabriel requested the gag order because "the state's case is insufficient and the media has discovered this."

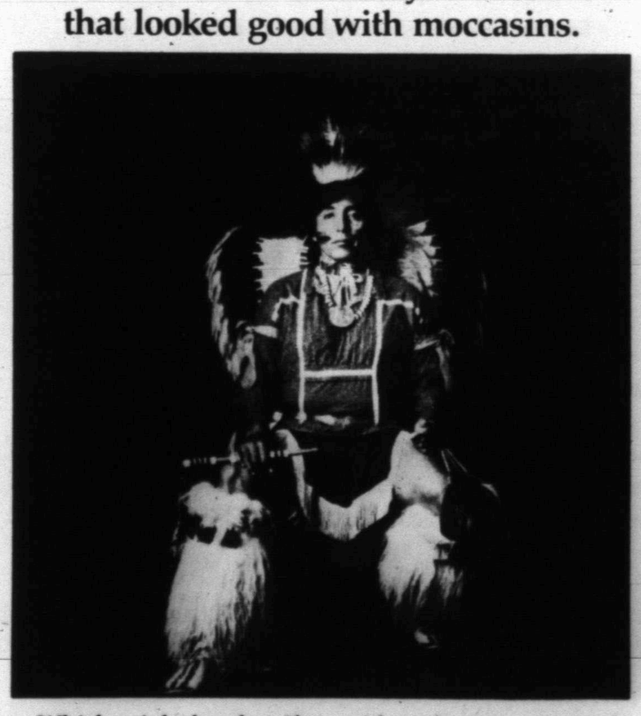

Septien, 33, was indicted Jan. 22 by a Denton County grand jury on a charge of aggravated sexual assault of a child. The Mexico City native and his lawyers say he is innocent.

Ms. Gabriel said she filed the request to prevent harrassment of the victim and her family. She said the girl's family welcomed the request for a gag order.

The motion asked that the judge prohibit Septien and his lawyers, prosecutors, the victim and her family and officers and investigators from talking to the news media about facts and allegations in the case and the identity of prospective witnesses.

Go inside for lastest victory...

Tigers feast on Pecos' box-and-one strategy

PECOS -- Snyder took advantage when Pecos tried to concentrate on Terry Garza, going to its inside game for a 66-53 victory in a boy's District 2-4A basketball game here Friday evening.

The Eagles ran a box-and-one defense on the Tigers, with Garza getting the man-to-man concentration. It did serve to keep Garza from his normal double-figure output, but it also left Snyder's inside game open.

"You usually run that defense against a team that only has one scorer," said Snyder coach Larry Scott. "They don't have much height inside and we were able to just get the ball to the post all the time."

As a result, Trey Tippens scored 22 points and Chris Garrett 21. Reynaldo Gomez added 14, which included several layups when he was able to penetrate inside. Garza had 5 points.

Gomez also recorded nine assists.

The Tigers shot 63 percent from the field, including a 10-for-15, 66 percent effort, in the second half.

"All but 10 of those shots were taken inside the lane," pointed out Scott, who noted that Pecos shot only 12 of 52 shots from inside the key.

"They were 21 of 52 which is pretty good considering almost all of their shots were from 15 to 18 feet out," he noted.

But when the Eagles missed, they didn't get too many second opportunities. Snyder outrebounded them 31 to 15, with Tippens' 15 leading the way.

Snyder led 18-10 after the first quarter and 34-26 at halftime, then clipped the hosts 18-13 in the third period. The Tigers led by as many as 19 points in the game.

The victory puts Snyder at 15-10 for the season and 8-3 in District 2-4A play. The Tigers return home to Scurry County Coliseum next Tuesday to host Big Spring.

Pecos, 6-15 and 1-10, was led by Fili Talamanez's 16 points. Bobby Smith added 14.

Ladies blast Eagles, 68-39; take over 2nd place in loop

Snyder's girls did their part, then got some help from Fort Stockton to take over sole possession of second place in the District 2-4A standings Friday night.

The Lady Tigers burned Pecos 68-39 for their ninth 2-4A win in 13 outings this season. They had gone into the contest with a half-game lead over Sweetwater in the standings. The Lady Mustangs were upset by Fort Stockton, however, 47-46, leaving Snyder alone in second place.

"It (Friday's outcomes) gives us a little cushion, it sure does," said Coach Ken Housden, whose Lady Tigers have won seven straight ballgames now.

At 17-8 overall and 9-4 in loop action, Snyder challenges the frontrunning Lady Steers next Tuesday in Big Spring.

All-district talent Stephanie McKnight led the Lady Tigers in scoring with 20 points. Christi Comer popped for 15 as Snyder deflated Pecos to 6-16 for the season and 1-12 in 2-4A competition. Dedra Tomlin added 10 for the Tigers. Teri Sue Henry bagged 7 and Rhonda Echols and Melody Pickering chipped in a half-dozen apiece.

Snyder also got 10 rebounds from Henry. McKnight had six rebounds, six assists and six steals and Angie Housden turned in five assists.

Lisa Mierhoff, a 5-10 senior, scored 17 points for Pecos. Laura Archuleba notched 7.

Snyder jumped out to an 18-7 first-quarter lead over the visiting Lady Eagles and held the margin to go into halftime with a 34-22 advantage. The Tigers thwarted any comeback attempt by blasting Pecos 23-8 in the third period.

"The girls came out and played real well," said Housden. "We had a good first quarter and really, a good second quarter. In the third, we played real well."

JV girls claim 18th victory

Snyder got off to a quick start and never looked back here Friday, beating Pecos 49-23 in a girl's junior varsity basketball game.

The Tigers outscored Pecos 19-4 in the first quarter.

Shelly Tomlin bagged 19 points while Teena Braziel had 8 and Jodie Dunk and Evette Housden added 6 each. Melissa Williams led on the boards with 13 rebounds. Tomlin pulled down nine and Braziel had eight.

In other individual efforts, Michelle Candanoza had five steals and five assists; Braziel had five steals; and Tomlin and Beth Alvis came away with four steals apiece.

Snyder, 18-2 now, will bus to Big Spring next Tuesday for a 6 p.m. game.

Stars & Stripes wins opening race in finals

FREMANTLE, Austrlia (AP) - Dennis Conner, playing the light, shifting winds like a virtuoso, piloted Stars & Stripes to an easy victory over Australia's Kookaburra III Saturday in the opening race of the America's Cup finals.

Conner fooled the experts who said his San Diego-based 12-meter yacht was a slow boat to the finish line in light air. Comfortably at home in an 8-knot zephyr after the light, flukey winds forced a 20-minute delay in starting the race, Stars & Stripes glided from a dead-even start to take a dominating lead of 1 minute, 15 seconds at the first mark.

Iain Murray had no chance thereafter to use Kookaburra III's fast turning ability to try to catch up. The final margin was 1:41, and Conner led by as much as 2:00 after the seventh of the eight legs.

Spurs 124, Clippers 120

Alvin Robertson scored six of his 25 points in overtime and San Antonio beat the Clippers in Los Angeles for its fourth straight victory.

Robertson made two straight baskets to give the visiting Spurs a 124-118 lead with 1:13 left in the extra period.

The Clippers, who have lost 34 of their last 37 games, forced the overtime when Darnell Valentine made a three-point shot with six seconds remaining in the fourth quarter to tie it at 114.

Warriors 127, SuperSonics 119

Joe Barry Carroll scored 32 points and Purvis Short and Eric "Sleepy" Floyd each had 31 as Golden State ended a five-game losing streak by beating visiting Seattle.

Floyd scored 17 points in the fourth quarter, including five consecutive points in the final half-minute after the SuperSonics pulled to within 120-116.

Trail Blazers 125, Nets 107

Kiki Vandeweghe scored 28 points and Clyde Drexler 20 as hot-shooting Portland downed New Jersey.

Vandeweghe scored 20 in the first half as the Trail Blazers went ahead 60-47. Portland made 15 of 18 shots from the field, including Drexler's 6-for-6, in the third quarter and turned the game into a rout.

The Nets lost their fourth straight game and eighth in a row on the road.

H&R BLOCK STARTS GOLD RUSH

H&R Block announced its unique "Gold Rush" program today. Block preparers will "dig" for overlooked deductions, credits and other items on income tax returns of up to three years ago.

Block reports that thousands of taxpayers overpay their taxes each year and are unaware of it. The Block Gold Rush program is designed to find that overlooked money and put more tax dollars back into taxpayer's hands. Because it is possible to amend returns as far back as three years, any overpaid taxes can be regained for those three years.

Block encourages everyone to have their returns checked. If a Block preparer finds an overlooked deduction, credit, etc., he or she will compute your tax savings and prepare the necessary forms (including federal, state and local forms) to claim a refund, for a reasonable one-time fee.

If a Block preparer doesn't find any "gold" for you, there is no charge for reviewing your past returns and have the satisfaction of knowing you haven't overpaid your taxes. Block invites everyone to join the gold rush for tax money.

For a no obligation tax return review, call 573-9002 _____ today, or stop in our office located at 1822½ 26th St _____

Pesticide poisoning detected in sick farmers in Illinois

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Farmers with flu-like symptoms actually may be suffering from pesticide contamination, but a widely available blood test can help pinpoint the problem, experts say.

"Sometimes a farmer says, 'Gee, I had the flu all summer,' when in fact he had been poisoned," said Mike Hardt of the DeKalb County Farm Bureau. "This test detects it quickly so the farmers can get prompt diagnosis and treatment."

The test, however, is no substitute for wearing gloves, masks and other protective gear when handling such chemicals, said Dr. Samuel Epstein, a professor of occupational and environmental medicine at the University of Illinois.

"Too often, (chemicals) are slopped around in a careless fashion," said Epstein, who stressed that it was important for farmers to learn to use pesticides with caution.

"This blood test is merely a way to detect the damage after it's done," Epstein said.

"We know there is some exposure. I'm seeing more evidence of trying to protect the applicator," said Al Heier of the public information office at the Environmental Protection Agency in Washigton. "The risk is far greater to the applicator than to anyone else."

The experts say no one knows the long-term effects of such chemicals.

The test can detect exposure to a variety of insecticides, notably organophosphates, used by farmers to keep bugs from destroying their crops. It does not work for herbicides, which control weeds.

Bob Frazee, a farm adviser for Marshall and Putnam counties who started Illinois' testing program in 1981, says the test is as important to farmers as seatbelts are to motorists.

The initial blood test, measuring an individual's normal level of the enzyme cholinesterase, is done during the winter when farmers are not exposed to insecticides.

If flu symptoms occur after exposure and a followup test shows the enzyme level has dropped, the problem is pesticides. Treatment usually consists of medication that helps relieve the symptoms quickly.

Symptoms of contamination include headache, nausea, dizziness and fatigue.

In DeKalb County, Hardt said, 130 farmers agreed to a $5 blood test covering a three-year period.

Tap your own pure water.

You can get purified, clear fresh-tasting water right from your own water supply with the Aqua-Pure® Reverse Osmosis System. Water that's more pure than bottled spring water because bottled water isn't necessarily pure ...it's just spring water.

The reverse osmosis system removes up to 95% of the common impurities found in water by forcing it through a semipermeable membrane. The impurities are washed down the drain and you're left with fresh, clean water that is stored in dispensers, ready for your enjoyment...and your health.

Friends of slain students protest Cross's new trial

DALLAS (AP) — The family and friends of two slain students say they're upset that the man who confessed to the killings has been granted a new trial.

James C. Cross was sentenced to life in prison for the 1965 killing of Susan Rigsby. He was accused but never tried in the rape and slaying of Ms. Rigsby's sorority sister, Shirley Stark.

"I'm disappointed," said Richard Rigsby, Ms. Rigsby's half-brother.

"You think there's been a fair trial and there was a just (sentence) of life imprisonment," he said. "Then you find out a retroactive court decision can overturn the whole thing. The guy could just walk without even any record of doing the terrible things that he's done."

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals granted Cross a new trial this week, citing a U.S. Supreme Court decision handed down two weeks after his conviction.

Cross' attorney argued a new trial should be granted because the same jury that decided Cross' mental fitness heard the case against him.

In 1966, the Supreme Court ruled that criminal defendants are entitled to have different juries decide their mental competence and their guilt or innocence.

"It (the trial) was certainly constitutional at the time, and then they changed the rules," said Bill Norman, a Richardson businessman who was engaged to Ms Stark at the time of her murder.

Perot buyout could save millions in taxes

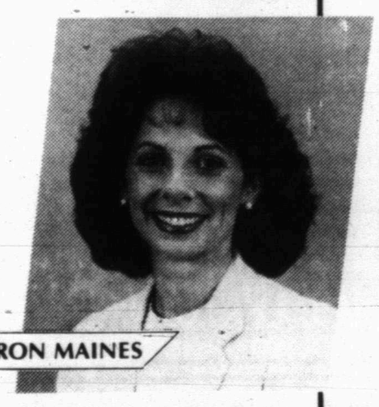

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — General Motors Corp.'s buyout of H. Ross Perot and other Electronic Data Systems executives eventually could save the automaker $121 million in federal income taxes, GM Chairman Roger Smith says.

A five-page letter went out recently from Smith to stockholders who complained the $750 million buyout of Perot and other officials reflected preferential treatment for a small, select group of shareholders.

Bob Bullock predicts improved economy

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock said Friday he thinks the state's economy has hit bottom and will climb slowly, but he's afraid some Texans still haven't learned the importance of not relying on one industry.

"We should have learned that we have a tax system that leans too heavily on one industry, oil and gas," Bullock told the Texas Farmers Union. "We should have learned that while oil and gas were declining, we had other sectors of the Texas economy that were holding their own, or even growing.

"I'm talking about the service industries — personal services, professional services, information services," Bullock said.

Bullock said these services are largely not touched by the state sales tax and corporations do not pay heavy franchise taxes.

Bullock said he recommended last summer several methods to tax these industries.

"We've learned something from issuing that report," Bullock said. "We've learned there isn't going to be any gross receipts tax on Texas business, because business and the governor don't want it.

"We've learned there is not likely to be any sales tax on professional services such as lawyers' fees. The lawyers just are not going to let that happen, and there are a lot of them in the Legislature.

However, Bullock said he believed the Legislature needed to find some way to broaden the sales tax base — "First to get off our dependence on oil and gas and to provide incentive for capital investment in Texas."

The comptroller added that he thought some relief should be built into the sales tax and franchise tax for investments in new machinery and equipment, such as that used by farmers.

At a news conference in connection with the Texas meeting, Bob Mullins, legislative director of the National Farmers Union, said Texans would play an important part in attempts to write new national farm policy.

"The stage is set in both the U.S. House and Senate for major consideration of agriculture policy changes," Mullins said.

"If we are to influence Congress, the effort has to be generated at the grassroots level. We have committees in each congressional district in Texas working on this," he said.

Inmate executed after refusing help

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Convicted killer Ramon Hernandez was put to death early Friday after spurning legal efforts that state officials said almost certainly would have kept him alive.

"Had he been willing to participate, I think a stay would have been granted," Attorney General Jim Mattox said shortly after Hernandez, 44, of El Paso, received lethal injection. "His unwillingness hastened the process."

Hernandez, convicted of killing a service station mechanic in 1980 during a burglary, could have remained alive for maybe a year, Mattox said.

"But based on the trial record, he certainly would have been executed eventually," he said.

Hernandez, in a case described by attorneys as unusual and bizarre, refused outside legal help, fearing the acceptance of such help would force him to surrender his right to represent himself in court.

On Thursday, he rejected the assistance of his former defense attorney at trial, Richard Lovelace, who unsuccessfully challenged in the state and federal courts the inmate's competency to made legal decisions.

When the Supreme Court rejected a final effort at 12:38 a.m., the state proceeded with the execution.

Twenty-seven minutes later, the lethal injection began after Texas Department of Corrections officials had difficulty finding a suitable vein in the long-time drug user's arms. He was declared dead at 1:13.

In his final statement, he declared his love for his common-law wife, Velma, who watched him die, and his four children.

"I'll always love you. You know that," he said. He smiled and added, "That's it."

Mattox, who informed Hernandez of the Supreme Court rejection, said the convict was concerned to the end that the courts recognized his desire to represent himself.

"He did not want to be represented by attorneys," Mattox said. "He was a real good jail house lawyer — better than most."

"Very strange, highly unusual," Assistant Attorney General Bill Zapalac said, describing the case. "There are provisions in the law that anyone can file on behalf of an inmate. But if the inmate refuses to have it considered, the court doesn't have to consider it."

5th Circuit upholds Texas Supreme Court

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — An appeals court has denied a Trappist monk's claim that he was coerced into signing an agreement relinquishing control of the $300 million Kenedy Foundation.

The three-judge panel of the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the Texas Supreme Court dismissal of the claim by Christopher Gregory, a disassociated Trappist monk also known as Brother Leo.

Gregory — along with New York businessman J. Peter Grace — helped Sarita Kenedy East create the foundation. Ms. East, a South Texas heiress signed a codicil appointing Gregory as sole member of the foundation shortly before she died in 1961.

Several of Mrs. East's relatives challenged the codicil in a suit that accused Gregory of exerting undue influence on the heiress.

Gregory signed an agreement in a settlement of the suit, but he later claimed that he had been coerced into signing the agreement by his religious superiors.

Valentine royalty tabulation is to begin Friday

Senior citizens will begin voting for the Senior Center's 1987 Valentine King and Queen on Friday. The new king and queen will be crowned in ceremonies on Feb. 13 and will hold their titles throughout the year.

Wanda Coker will give a demonstration on creating decorations for clothing with Pretty Punch Tuesday morning. Her program is to begin at 11:30 a.m.

The center's Kitchen Band will perform at Snyder Nursing Center at 2:30 p.m. on Wednesday. Senior citizens interested in joining the band or the Sunshine Choir are invited to attend rehearsals this week.

A regular Friday feature in the center is a sing-along starting at 11:30 a.m. in the dining room. Old favorites are always included in these songs.

All county residents 60 years of age and older are eligible to participate in activities at the center. Men and women interested in giving volunteer time to the community are invited to inquire about the center's VIVA program. Call 573-4035 for more information.

Razor makers recommend careful rinsing of any wetshave razor after each use. They explain that dried shaving cream and bits of hair will harden on the surface of a blade, creating dull spots and snags that will pull at hairs next time that razor is used.

GOLDEN CORRAL
Family Steak House

What Makes Golden Corral America's Favorite Steakhouse...

1. U.S.D.A. Choice Aged Beef
Any steak you order at Golden Corral Steak House is aged, U.S.D.A. choice, grain-fed beef. In today's times while so many restaurants are trying to "save money" by switching to lower grades of beef, Golden Corral recognizes you don't save money by cutting corners. We continue to purchase only U.S.D.A. choice beef, and always will.

2. Never Frozen
Aged to our exacting standards, hand cut daily at the restaurant by Buddy Brumit, Jr., U.S.D.A. choice and nothing but. That goes for every steak on our menu - sirloin, filet & ribeye. Chopped sirloin, too!

3. Giant Baked Potatoes
We use only U.S.D.A. No.1 Northwestern Russet potatoes - the biggest we can get! Just ask our customers.

4. Best Salad Bar & Potato Bar Around
We offer a 60 plus item salad bar and a 12 item potato bar stocked with what our customers say is the freshest, biggest and best selection available.

5. Never An Extra Charge For Our Potato Bar With The Purchase Of A Meal Including Baked Potato

6. Free Beverage Refills
At Golden Corral ALL beverages are refilled free with a smile...Just a little extra we provide for our customers.

7. Fast and Friendly Service
Our co-workers are the "cream of the crop" when it comes to service.

If This Didn't Answer All Your Questions, Stop In, Check Us Out, And See What Makes Us America's Favorite Steakhouse.

Borden County show lamb results reported

GAIL — Lamb Judge Jim Mazurkiewicz of Bryan showed a marked preference for leaner animals in the individual class judging Friday, but chose heavyweight crossbred lambs for the grand and reserve champions of the 1987 Borden County Junior Livestock Show.

The grand champion's award went to Tammy Voss and the reserve championship was awarded to Shane Hess — both of whom exhibited animals in the heavyweight crossbred class.

The Voss and Hess lambs were also the breed and reserve breed champions for the crossbred lambs.

Kurt Hess — who had claimed the grand championship of Thursday's swine show — added two more major awards to his trophy case in Friday's lamb show.

Mazurkeiwicz chose his heavyweight finewool lamb as reserve breed champion for that class and his mediumweight mediumwool lamb as breed champion of that division.

Michael Murphy won the breed championship of the finewool division while the reserve breed championship in the mediumwool class was awarded to Stormy Gass.

The 1987 show was to conclude Saturday with the Borden County FFA and 4-H youth exhibiting 30 animals in the steer show starting at 9 a.m. Bob Benson of Plainview was to judge that event.

Also on Saturday's schedule was a goat show following the steer show, a noon barbecue, and the presentation of awards at 1 p.m.

The awards presentation was to be followed by the 1987 Borden County Junior Livestock Association Premium Sale at 1:30 p.m.

Complete results of the Borden County Lamb Show were as follows:

Trial focuses on coliseum area

Also under cross examination, he said an individual would have to work "pretty hard" to reach the ceiling area and that a member of the public could not "inadvertently or accidentally" get there.

Defense attorney David Cobb took over the cross examination and referred Whitaker to a deposition he had given in the case on Jan. 20. Cobb read his verbatim answer at that time that it was "Perfectly obvious that it (the sound booth and ceiling area) was not a place where the general public is invited or permitted to be."

Griffin rested the Polk's case at 4:25 p.m. following a brief series of "redirect" questions to Whitaker during which he restated his opinion that the sound booth ladder should have been locked or guarded.

Earlier Friday afternoon, Griffin had put Jeff's mother Twila and twin sister Amy on the witness stand to retell their versions of the events leading up to the accident and death.

Under questioning from Griffin, Twila testified that from the time they — Glenn, Twila, Jeff and Amy — entered the coliseum until the accident, she did not see Jeff.

On that day, she testified, she did not give her son instructions about where to go during the rehearsal.

In response to further questions from Griffin, she testified she would have given him instructions "If I could see a danger."

She said she did not because, "I thought a public building should be safe."

Under cross examination from Crawford, she told the court she agreed with testimony previously given by her husband that Jeff should have known that they wouldn't approve of his climbing the ladders.

She also testified that despite being in the stage area of the coliseum on several occassions — including the 1983 "Whirlagig" and a style show several years before — she had never noticed either of the two backstage ladders.

In response to questions posed by Cobb, she testified she thought Jeff would have recognized areas open or not open to the public.

Testimony from Amy Polk ended after she broke down in tears while telling what she saw of the accident.

Defense attorney Crawford moved for a recess at that time and, when District Judge Gene Dulaney reconvened the court, all three attorneys stated they had no further questions for her.

Testimony in the trial will resume at 9 a.m. Monday as the defense presents its case.

American refuse to leave Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Three Americans were evacuated from west Beirut Saturday amid mounting concern about the fate of hostage negotiator Terry Waite, but two women who had intended to leave decided at the last minute that they couldn't go through with it.

One of them burst into tears and left the old American Embassy building at Ein Mreisseh seafront district. Sobbing, she said: "I don't want to leave. I don't." The U.S. Embassy now operates out of Christian east Beirut.

She refused to give her name to reporters as she rode away in a car escorted by militiamen loyal to Druse leader Walid Jumblatt.

Druse sources said another American woman, whom they did not identify, also changed her mind just before the evacuation was to take place.

The evacuees had been brought to the old embassy building from their homes by a bulletproof white Mercedes-Benz. They left for Christian east Beirut shortly before noon and arrived about two hours later.

An elderly American man, wearing a Lebanese police cap, was taken in a grey Nissan police patrol car and the two other evacuees, both women, were driven to east Beirut in a French Renault.

Three jeeploads and two cars filled with Druse escorts toting automatic rifles guarded the convoy as it headed for the mid-city crossing of the Green Line that divides Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors.

Police said U.S. Embassy officials would take delivery of the evacuees after their arrival in east Beirut, police said.

Pressure has been mounting for Americans to leave the country. Declaring that all Americans in Lebanon were potential hostages, the U.S. State Department on Wednesday ruled the country off-limits to U.S. citizens.

Eleven foreigners have been kidnapped in Lebanon since Jan. 12 when Waite arrived for his fifth visit seeking freedom for foreign hostages. He has not been seen since leaving his Beirut hotel Jan. 20 for what was believed to be a meeting with Shiite Moslem captors of two Americans kidnapped in 1985.

A magazine with contacts in Iran on Friday said Waite may have been taken prisoner, while a Lebanese newspaper said he would surface this weekend in Beirut.

Diplomatic sources in Washington, meanwhile, told The Associated Press Friday that Waite may have been abducted in a power struggle involving Jumblatt.

In London, the Anglican Church would not comment on the various reports.

cancer in their lifetime. "If you assume the county's population is about 17,000 and that half that number are female. That means that there are 772 possible cases here," said Wilma Dillard, chairman of the auxiliary's mammography steering committee.

Mammograms are also recommended for men. According to the ACS, one male will have breast cancer for every 100 women who develop the disease.

Cost for the local service has been set at $60, nearly half the $125 to $150 charged by hospitals within a 100-150 mile radius of Scurry County. Unlike the program offered by other institutions, Cogdell's price also includes interpretation.

"Dr. Williams interprets the test and sends the results to a woman's local physician," Doan and Wellborn added. "She can obtain her results just by calling the doctor's office."

Since the equipment carries a $65,000 price tag, board members and Hospital Administrator Cy Miller requested auxiliary members undertake the project as a community effort.

"I think it mainly started because auxiliary women have reached the age where they need a screening every year," noted Sue Mize, a member of the steering committee.

Members decided to establish a room separate from the radiology department to offer privacy and comfort to the program's clients. "Our main concern was to make it affordable and to use the most advanced equipment available," Dillard added.

The three-member committee, which includes Dillard, Mize and Billie Brice, based the auxiliary's fundraising primarily on personal contacts. Other projects have included concessions sold during the hospital's Health Fest last year, a garage sale and a bake sale. In addition, auxiliary members donated the initial $10,000 to kickoff the effort.

"Any service provided by the auxiliary represents tax savings to the community. Every dollar earned goes back to the hospital," Dillard added.

Donations from clubs and civic organizations and businesses and memorial gifts by individuals have also promoted the cause.

Recognition plaques will be placed in the mammography suite to honor donors. A group listing of individuals donating between $100 and $499 will be placed on a framed scroll. An engraved plaque will bear the names of persons giving $500 to $999. A person donating $1,000 or more will be honored with an individual engraved plaque.

Committee members noted several individuals and businesses who provided discounts on goods and services for the unit. Among those are Classic Designs, B&R Frame Shop, Donna Holt, Rita's Cake Shop, artist George T. Weir, Helen Hatter and the local ACS unit and Kenny Miller with Snyder Signs.

Corazon Aquino talks to crowds in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino Saturday told a huge crowd of chanting supporters that "our country needs us again" and urged them to approve a proposed constitution in Monday's national plebiscite.

She also praised Defense Minister Rafael Ileto and Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos for crushing this week's coup attempt and vowed punishment for the conspirators.

A crowd estimated by police at 170,000 chanted "Cory, Cory" as the 54-year-old president made her final public appearance in support of the draft charter, which affirms her six-year term.

Referring to the abortive coup by right-wing military officers, Mrs. Aquino said, "I thought that we could reconcile all Filipinos. But it is very clear there are some people who do not want to reconcile but to make trouble for us.

"You know that I don't want to kill," she said. "But also I do not want them to kill us."

Mrs. Aquino repeated her threat to prosecute those involved, in Tuesday's attempt to take over military and media centers around the capital.

Grass fire noted

Units of the Snyder Fire Department answered an alarm west of the city Saturday morning.

Firemen went to the intersection of Gary Brewer Road and Farm Road 1611 at 8:03 a.m. and extinguished a small grass fire.

No other property damage was reported from the blaze.

Troopers in state like to drive Mustang GTs

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Public Safety is one of the nation's largest collectors of Ford Mustangs, and officials say troopers like driving the 130 mph-plus cars.

In the early 1980s, state troopers were being outrun by criminal suspects and traffic violators driving high-powered cars.

The California Highway Patrol was solving the problem with a fleet of 160-horsepower, 130-mph Mustang GTs, so the Texas DPS bought two dozen Mustang GTs as an experiment.

Since late 1982, that fleet has grown to 191 Mustang GTs, which are identical to models sold to the general public except for lights, markings and radar, according to DPS officials.

The standard pursuit cars, Ford LTDs and Dodge Diplomats, are much larger and considerably slower than the Mustangs.

This year, the DPS will add 140 Mustang GT pursuit cars, said DPS spokesman Mike Cox. The Mustangs then will make up 40 percent of the DPS pursuit fleet.

The 1987 Mustang GT is even faster than earlier DPS Mustangs. The cars, which have 5-liter, V-8 engines, have a top speed of near 150 mph, according to road tests by automotive magazines.

Trooper Tim Ferguson calls the Mustangs "a refreshing change of pace" for troopers who drive all day, and an important safety advance.

In the Mustang, "you don't have to chase somebody for 10 miles. The chase is over quicker, and that's safer for me and safer for other cars on the road," he said.

"Before, when you'd see a car go by at 100 mph, you'd think, 'I'll have to let him go, no point in even turning around for him.' Now, we catch more cars than we ever had before," Ferguson said.

Ferguson credits the Mustang's rapid acceleration more than the top speed in allowing him to catch speeders sooner.

Capt. Frankie Waller of the DPS traffic enforcement division said initial concerns about using the Mustangs proved unwarranted.

"We thought because of the high power-to-weight ratio, the drive trains of the Mustangs would be highly stressed. But they have been mechanically reliable with no unusual problems. They've held up as well as the full-size cars," he said.

Shared birthday spans 4 generations in family

DALLAS (AP) — The Jan. 7 birth of Chadwick Parker Hume continued a four-generation birthday tradition started by his great-grandfather in 1882.

The odds of members of four generations sharing the same birthday is one in 50 million, says mathematician James Andrews.

Lee Royal Jenney was born in Warren, Mich., on Jan. 7, 1882. His daughter, Florence Hume, was born in New York City on Jan. 7, 1925. Her son, Craig Hume, was born in Boston on Jan. 7, 1955 and his son, Chadwick, was born Jan. 7, 1987.

The phenomenon makes for good parties, Hume said.

"It was always a lot of fun having my mother and grandfather to celebrate birthdays with. Now to have my son celebrate it, too, that's great," said Hume, controller for Dallas Family Hospital in Oak Cliff.

"My father and I always enjoyed having the same birthday," said Florence Hume, who lives in Louisville, Ky. "When my son was born, then it really made it special. When this grandchild came on the same day, it was just a glorious, glorious bit of news. I still haven't gotten over it."

The baby's great-grandfather, Jenney, died in 1969 at age 87.

Family members say the first three birthdays were a coincidence, but the fourth time family planning and modern medicine helped out.

Craig and Michelle Hume's first child, Jennifer, 3, was born Dec. 21.

"When we started talking about having a second child, I said, 'Why don't we at least wait until the first of April to start trying, and if it's meant to be, it's meant to be," Mrs. Hume said.

The doctor predicted a Christmas Day due date, but Mrs. Hume had other plans.

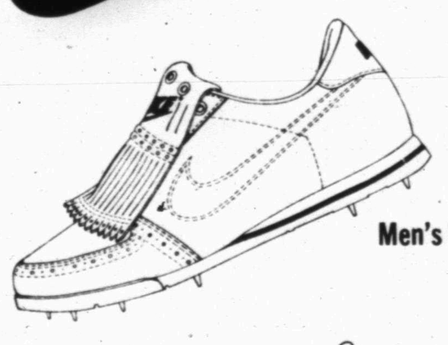

"A week before Christmas the doctor told me to pack my bag because it could be any day," she told the Dallas Morning News. "But I kept telling Chad to stay snug as a bug in a rug, and he did until Jan. 7."

With a little medical encouragement, Chadwick was born at 11:31 a.m. on the appointed day.

"I think it's really going to be nice for Chad to have that link to the past," Mrs. Hume said.

A Chinese court official invented paper in A.D. 105 by mixing mulberry bark, hemp, rags and water, according to Georgia-Pacific Corp. The predominantly wood mixture was mashed into a pulp and pressed to eliminate liquid. The thin mat then was hung to dry in the sun.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

If all the candles in the Burl and Virginia Belew home were lit simultaneously, the Fluvanna couple might have no need for electric lighting each evening. Over the past eight years, Virginia's sand sculptured creations have not only decorated her home, they have become a full-time hobby and profitable business venture.

The Scurry County native developed an interest in sand candles with prompting by her brother. "My brother in Albuquerque is 82 years old. When he retired in his 70's, he took up candle making as a hobby. About eight years ago, he taught me how to do it too," Virginia said.

Although she had little experience with crafts, she found working with sand and wax relaxing. "I used to sew, but I can't do as much now because of arthritis. I really love to work with my hands. And I guess you could say I love dirty work too. The sand is so dirty," she noted. "I love the candles because you can do so much with them.

"I'm not much of a go-er and when you live out like this you need something. It's real good therapy and I love to do them. I had my hands full with the boys (the couple's two sons). As long as the boys were home, I stayed busy with their interests," she added.

Virginia explained that creating sand sculptured candles is more complex than merely pouring hot wax into sand. The craftsman must first find the right type of sand. The Belews travel to Roswell, N.M. for the fine grain she uses. "This is a pure sand. It doesn't have much dirt in it. My brother tried so many different sands until he discovered this is the best. This comes from a pasture just off the highway."

A large proportion of dirt in the sand allows the wax to seep too deeply through the sand and can give the candle a dirty appearance.

In her garage workroom, Virginia places a large pile of sand in her "sandbox." About four to five feet long, the box is supported by saw horses and other boxes to hold it about waist high.

To prepare the sand for the wax, she first adds water determined by the amount of sand in the pile. "The sand must be wet evenly and just right," she said.

Next, she chooses a mold that will provide the basic shape to the candle. Ovals, circles, squares and a combination of those shapes are created from "everything from tin cracker boxes to coffee cans to Jello molds," she laughed. Only one mold — to create a wax replica of an Indian pueblo — was purchased.

Often she places two or three different molds in the sand together to create one completed piece.

Virginia pushes the mold into the sand to about three-quarters of its length. When she removes it, the sand is lifted out to leave the hollowed shape in the pile. The medium must be damp enough to prevent loose sand from falling back into the hollow.

For her creations, she uses a high grade petroleum wax purchased in Albuquerque. "I used to be able to get it here, but since I can't any longer, I buy it when I visit my brother," she said.

She usually purchases 20 boxes containing 55 pounds of wax each. "That much will last about a year depending on how many candles I make," she added. High grade wax burns more slowly than lower grade waxes used in canning for example, she said.

After melting the wax, she colors it and adds scent. She purchases wax color and several scents by mail from a Wisconsin firm.

Virginia fills the mold depression with the hot wax and allows it to harden. As it cools, the wax slowly seeps into the sand about ¼- to ½-inch on all sides. Although she fills the mold completely, the seepage causes the candle to shrink. She refills the mold once the first pouring has hardened and adds a 2-inch wick.

When the wax is cool and hard, she carefully removes the remaining sand from around the candle and lifts it out of the box.

Although her brother prefers a rough texture to his creations, Virginia likes to smooth the sand by carving and "torching" the excess. She scrapes each of the candle's outer edges with a knife to remove rough particles. With the flame of a hand-held propane torch, she softens the wax slightly to allow the molten liquid to seep to the surface for a smooth finish.

In her next step, she carves out portions of the sand to expose the wax interior. She often chooses a cross, a square or an oval shape opening. "Brands carved into the round candles are very popular," Virginia noted. "I think everyone in the county has one now."

Her son Joe carves most of the brands for her because she believes "he does a better job."

Among her favorite work is a large, heavy candle depicting Indian cliff dwellings. However, she makes only a few of them. "They are very heavy — I'd guess nearly 30 pounds — so they are difficult to work with. You must be very careful when carving out all the windows in order not to break it. I don't know how many I've broken while trying to make those little windows," she explained.

Although she disclaims any skill as an artist, Virginia paints Western and Indian scenes on the openings in most of her creations — including pump jacks, cactus and windmills. "I just love windmills. If I'm not doing a special order, nine out of 10 of my candles end up with windmills," she laughed.

By combining two molds, she creates what she calls "easel candles." A round can forms the body on which she carves back legs. A discarded gelatin mold forms a scalloped edge for the front and a piece of mesquite wood placed under the mold becomes the front pedestal.

Because Virginia cools the wax slightly before the first pouring, the base is coated with only a few granules. She then torches the base and legs to remove all sand particles. Very hot wax creates a wide sand coating for the scalloped edge.

Virginia begins her scenes on wax surfaces by melting crayon and spreading the color with the torch. Once the color sets, she paints the foreground in enamel. "It's very difficult to find a paint that will adhere to wax. I use Pactra which is a brand used most often for models," she explained.

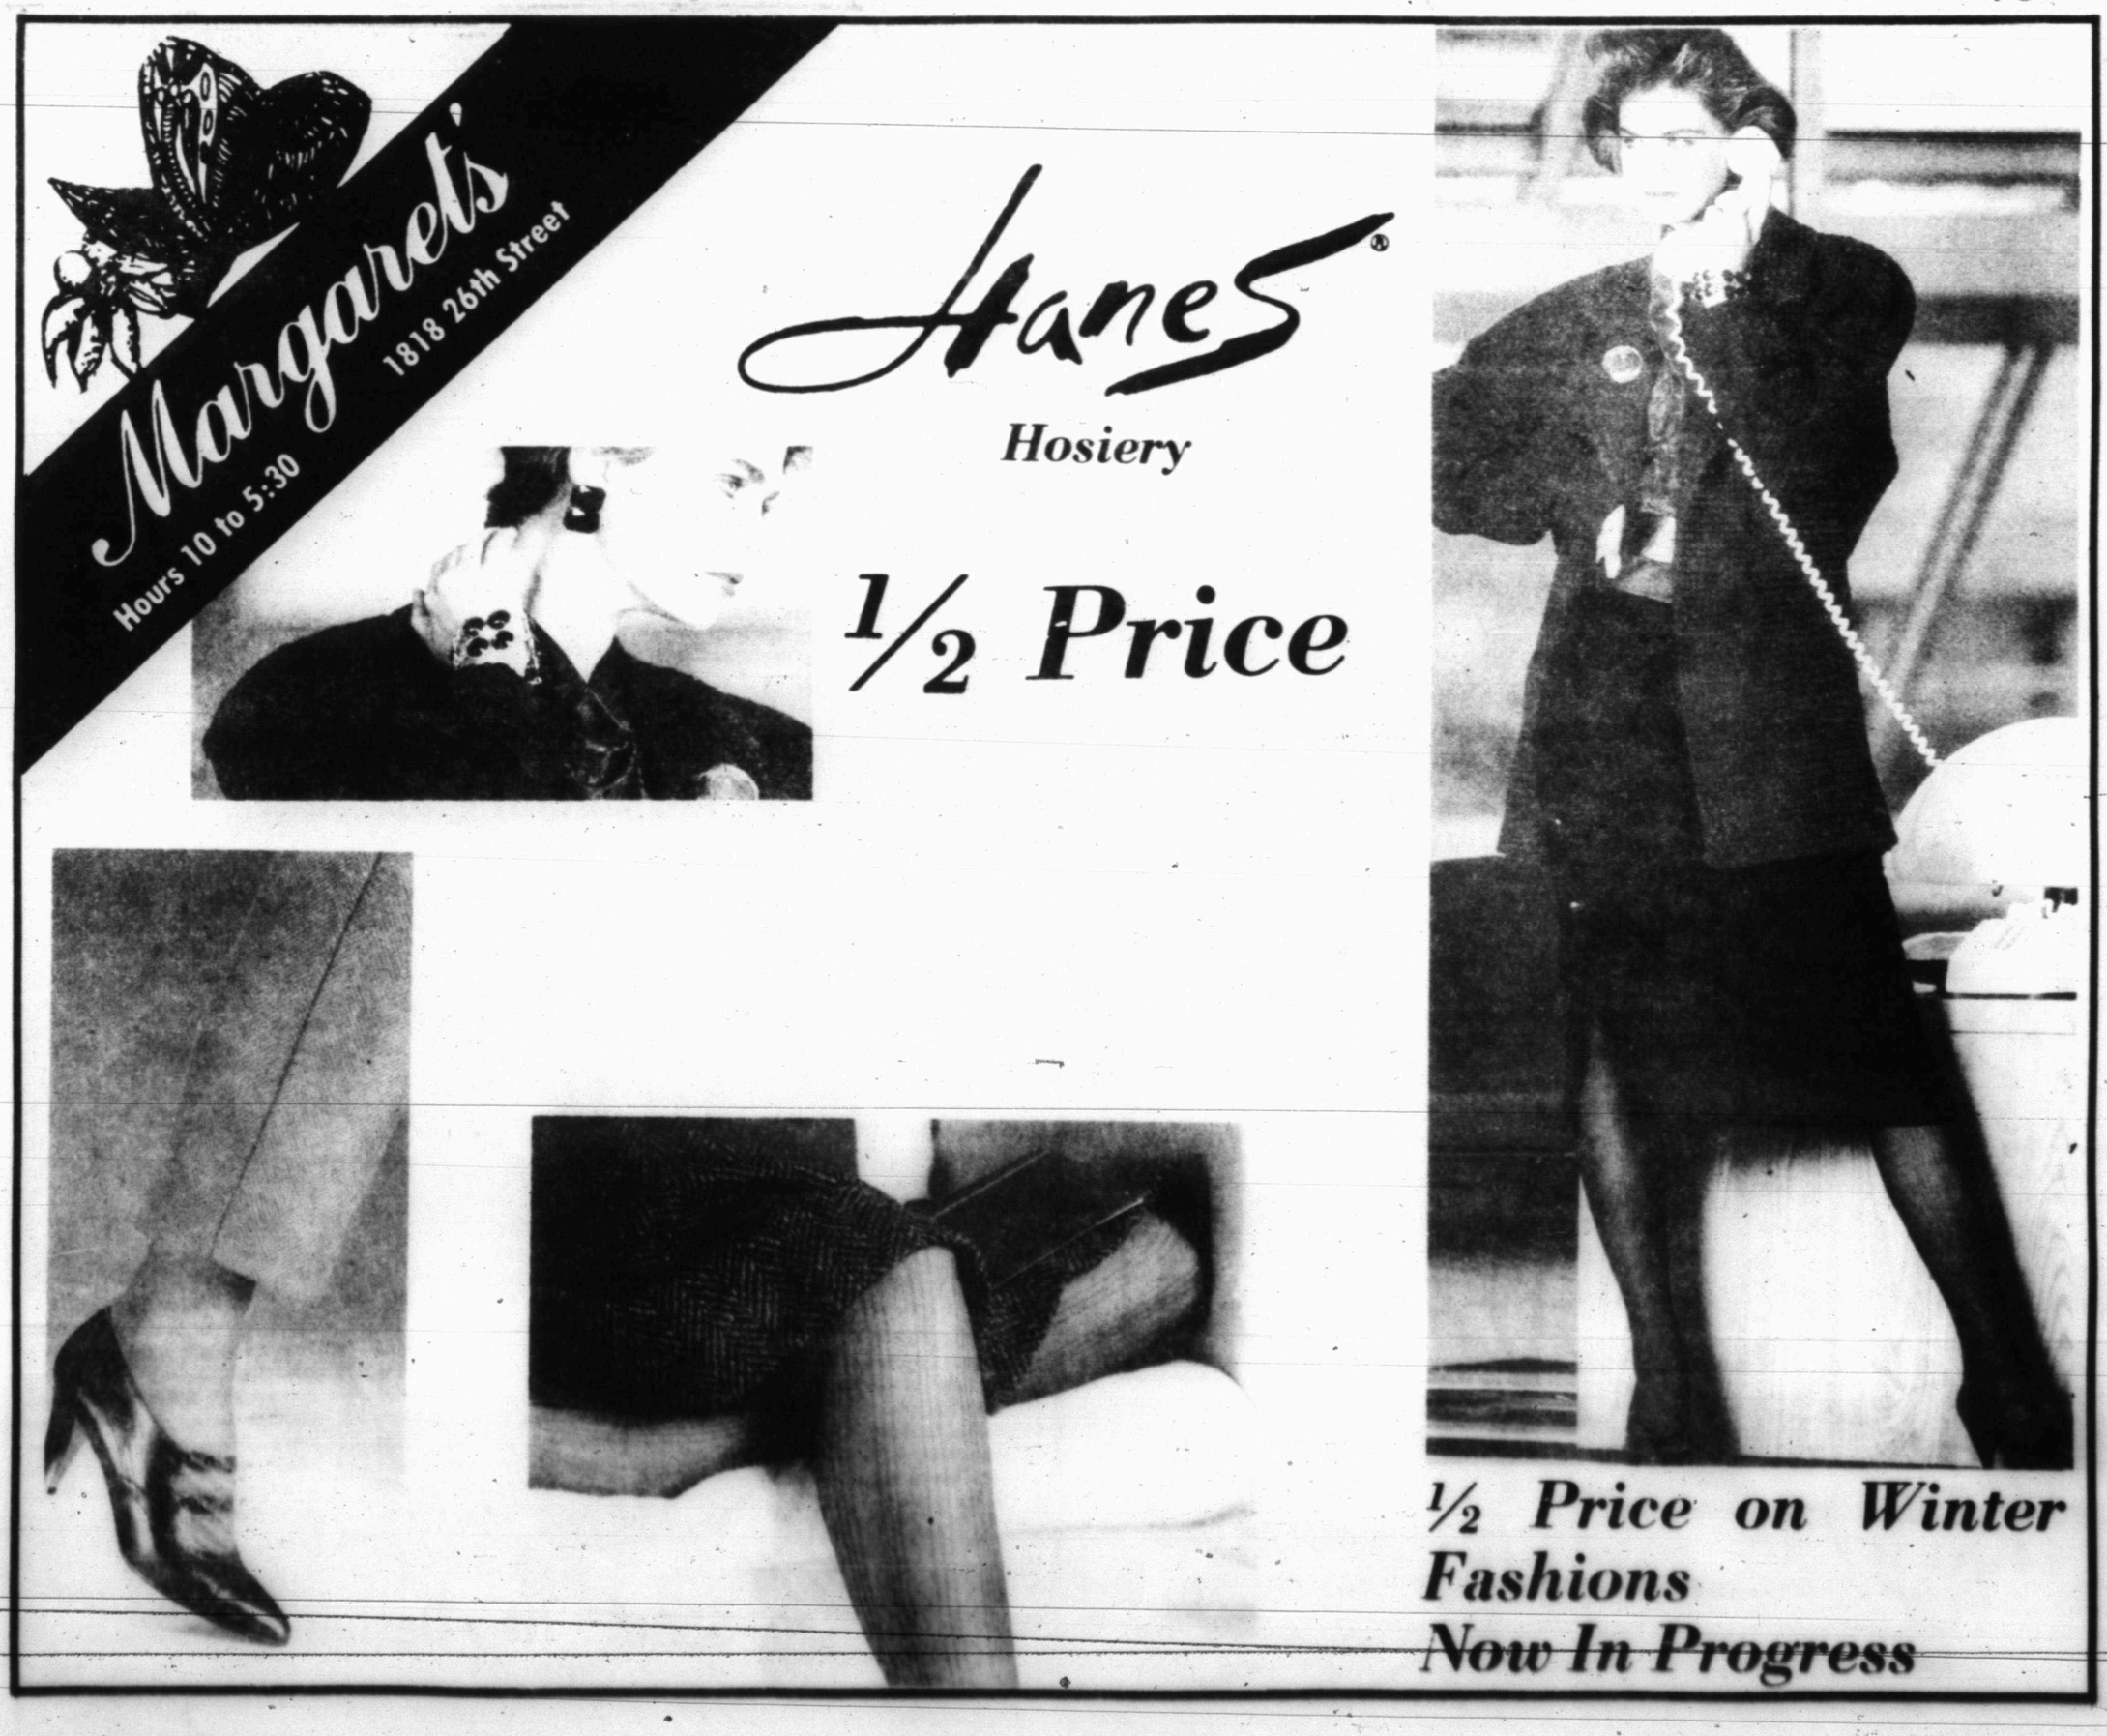

After the scene has dried completely, she wraps the candle in plastic to protect it and places her gold seal proclaiming "Virginia's Creations" on it.

Shortly after she began the hobby, she was offered the opportunity to sell them through a local

Kellner, Odom exchange vows in Ira

IRA — Julie Rondell Kellner of Ira and Gregory Todd Odom of Snyder were joined in a double-ring ceremony Nov. 14 at 7:30 p.m. in the Ira Baptist Church. Harold H. Britton, Sr. of Knapp, grandfather of the groom, officiated the service.

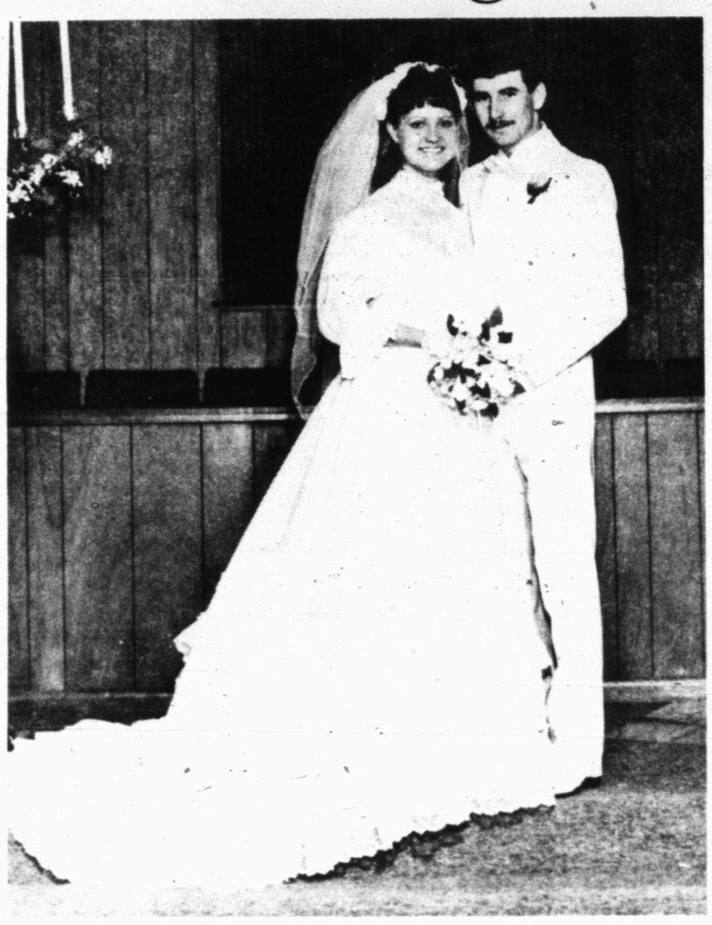

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Kellner of Ira and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Odom of Snyder.

Vows were exchanged before branched candelabra accented with greenery. A Unity Candle and yellow ribbons on the pews completed the church decorations.

Musical selections chosen for the occasion included "If," "Time In a Bottle" and "The Wedding Song." Soloists were Mike Holmes of Ira and Sue Browning of Post. Debbie Smith of Ira provided piano accompaniment.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white gown by Alfred Angelo of luster sheer and taffeta. The dress had a Victorian neckline with Schiffli embroidery embellished with seed pearls and iridescents on an English net yoke.

The yoke had a deep Wedgewood lace ruffle outlined with Venise lace. The luster sheer Victorian sleeves were finished with a deep Wedgewood lace ruffle at the elbow. The fitted bodice was accented at the waistline with Venise lace.

MR. AND MRS. GREGORY TODD ODOM

The bouffant skirt and chapel train were trimmed with alternate rows of Wedgewood lace ruffles and bands of Venise lace.

The headpiece of white flowers was accented with floating pearls and had a chapel length veil sprinkled with seed pearls.

The bridal bouquet was a round nosegay of white rosebuds and blue carnations accented by baby's breath and streamers of yellow, blue and white.

In keeping with tradition, the bride carried an old handkerchief belonging to her grandmother and a Bible belonging to her aunt, Helen Kellner, for something borrowed. The dress was new, a garter was blue, and she wore pennies in her shoes.

Sheila Kellner of Midland, the bride's sister, was maid of honor. She was attired in a yellow floor-length gown and wore a wreath of yellow sweetheart roses. She carried a long-stemmed yellow rose.

The groom wore a white Dynasty tuxedo with tails accented by a blue tie and cummerbund. He wore a boutonniere made of double yellow sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Charles Menix served as best man with Tracy Odom, the groom's brother, and Rusty Radican serving as ushers. All wore blue tuxedos with yellow ties and cummerbunds.

The registry table was covered in a blue cloth and was accented by a long-stemmed yellow rose, a yellow feather pen, the bride's book and an engagement picture of the couple. Melissa and Dana McCright, cousins of the bride, registered guests.

The reception following the ceremony was held at the Ira Community Center. White lace with a yellow underlay covered the bride's table. The three-tiered wedding cake was designed and created by Reta Graham. An open Bible and the bride's bouquet served as centerpiece. The corners of the table were decorated with yellow bows and baby's breath.

Dee Dee Dunn of Ira and Debra Brown of Midland served at the bride's table.

The groom's table was covered in a beige cutwork cloth with a light blue underlay. Louanne and Denese Crowder of Eldorado, cousins of the bride, served the groom's chocolate cake.

After a honeymoon trip to Las Vegas the couple made their home in Snyder.

The bride attended WTC and Texas Tech University and is employed by Ira Pump and Supply and K-Mart.

The groom is currently attending WTC and is employed by The Shack.

SALVATION FOR SALE. By Gerard Thomas Straub.

"Salvation for Sale" takes a hard look at the growing power of televangelism and fundamentalist Christianity. Gerald Straub, whose search for spiritual truth led him to become "born again," used his professional and pentecostal experiences to help build Pat Robertson's "700 Club" empire. This book tells the story of his disillusionment and takes the reader on a journey through the dark side of fundamentalism. These are witty, sharp and sometimes charming, sometimes shocking anecdotes. A must reading for all who value the principles of liberty on which America was founded.

VCRs surpass pay TV

DENVER (AP) — The number of homes with videocassette recorders will surpass the number of basic cable television households in 1987, according to projections reported in Multichannel News.

The cable TV industry journal says VCRs in American homes are expected to total some 42 million this year, and the figure will total 55 million by 1990, and 70 million by 1995.

It adds that by 1990 domestic home video revenues will climb to $4 billion, four times that of pay TV and twice the revenue from domestic theatrical releases.

PUMPING DIETARY IRON

How much iron has your child pumped today? How much have you? No, not the kind with barbells and muscle shirts. This iron is strictly dietary and the lack of this mineral in the American diet is affecting the well-being of millions.

Adult women and young children in the United States consume only about two-thirds of their recommended dietary iron allowance, according to the Department of Agriculture's 1985 Nationwide Food Consumption Survey. In fact, iron is one of the nutrients most often lacking in the American diet.

It's not the only mineral Americans are forgetting to pump either. The statistics for zinc are equally sad. Women from 19-50 years consume only an average 61 percent of the recommended daily allowance of zinc. Children one to three fall short of their zinc RDA by an average 23 percent.

Shortages of either nutrient can cause serious health problems. Diets lacking in iron can lead to anemia, irritability, apathy and reduced work capacity. Digestion is hindered and resistance to infection lowered. Fingernails can become thin, spoon-shaped and pale in color.

Zinc shortages will lead to loss of appetite, poor growth, retarded sexual maturity and skin changes such as scaly dermatitis. Zinc is also important for proper healing of wounds and resistance to infection.

How do you ensure an adequate supply of iron and zinc in the diet? One of the best ways is to include red meat. Red meat is an excellent source of iron and zinc.

There are two types of dietary iron: heme iron and nonheme iron. The body absorbs heme iron five to ten times better than the nonheme version. Plant sources supply nonheme iron while animal sources supply both. About 40-60 percent of the iron in beef and other red meats is heme iron.

Zinc content of foods is highest in foods with a high protein content. It is also found in vegetable protein sources such as nuts and whole grain breads and cereals. However, just because you include foods high in zinc doesn't mean that your body will get enough zinc. The availability of zinc differs from one food to another. Cereals and legumes contain significant amounts of zinc but they also contain other substances which act to inhibit zinc availability. Red meat, on the other hand, has a high zinc content as well as high availability.

If you've been dragging around lately, perhaps you should add up the iron and zinc in your diet. If they're not up to par, chances are you're not either.

SCS Notes

By Ricky Linex
Range Conservationist

February is the month to disk strips throughout pastures to improve quail habitat for next summer. The purpose of disking is to prepare a seedbed for increased germination of large seeded forbs such as crotens, sunflowers and ragweeds as the soils warm up next spring. Proper discing in February will remove winter annuals that would compete next spring with germinating quail foods for moisture and sunlight. Ranchers who install fire guards to protect pastures along highways will notice an increased growth of forbs favorable for quail. Quail prefer smooth, hard seeds and have difficulty eating chaffy seeds such as tobosa grass or any of the bluestems.

The land should be disked at least four inches deep to kill or bury existing vegetation. Locate 25- to 50-foot strips near woody cover or areas of tall and medium height grasses to enable birds to move safely between protective cover and food supply. At least five percent of a pasture should be disked to have a noticeable effect on your quails' food supply. For more information on managing land for quail contact our office at 573-1268 or come by 3423 Ave. T.

DEADLINE APPROACHES ON WINDBREAK TREES

Feb. 13 is the deadline for buying windbreak trees from the Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District.

Trees being sold on first-come basis are Mondell Pine, Native Plum, Desert Willow, Skunkbush Sumac, Scotch Pine, Russian Olive, Green Ash, Hackberry, Black Walnut, Osage Orange (Bois-d-'arc), Arizona Cypress, Austrian Pine, Ponderosa Pine, Bur Oak, Pecan and Eastern Red Cedar.

Protection from rodents and wind should be planned for the seedlings. Cans, shingles, hailscreens, old tires, etc. are all good choices for protection. Water is essential with each tree needing a minimum of five to eight gallons of water each week during the first growing season and about 10 gallons the second season. A recommended drip system is available from the district or can be made using plastic pipe and emitter tubes.

Payment is due when the order is placed. Refunds will be made if delivery is not completed, but no guarantee of liveability is made.

Order forms may be picked up at the Soil Conservation Office in the Snyder Shopping Center, 3423 Ave. T or one will be mailed by calling 573-1268.

WEDDING PLANNED — Eva Nimmo wishes to announce the engagement and approaching marriage of Jan Nimmo and John Weaver. Jan is the daughter of Eva and the late Bob Nimmo. John is the son of Ida Grace Rupert of Pawnee, Okla. and the late Jacob Weaver. The couple will be united May 2 in Mesquite. (Private Photo)

Bidding one more for a better score

By James Jacoby

After East had supported hearts, West should prefer bidding five hearts to defending against four spades, for many reasons. First, five hearts might make. (Suppose East had the diamond ace instead of the K-Q-J.) Second, the opponents might bid on to five spades. Finally, even if five hearts is set, it may well be that South could make four spades. And so he could, although he needed a little luck.

When West led the diamond deuce, South suspected it was a singleton, so he took the ace right away. Although he didn't expect to find a distribution that would allow four spades to make, declarer took his best shot. He ruffed a heart, played a spade to dummy's jack, ruffed a second heart, played a spade to dummy's ace and ruffed dummy's last heart. Next came the ace of clubs. The interesting thing about this deal is that declarer will make the hand now whether he leads a diamond or a second club. If he leads a club, West can take the 10 and the jack and then play the club queen. Declarer will simply play a diamond from dummy on that last club. That is the third trick for the defense, but West will now have to give declarer a diamond sluff in dummy and a ruff.

If declarer gets off lead with a diamond, East can take two diamond tricks but will then have to give declarer a sluff and a ruff. Either way declarer takes 10 tricks for his contract. Now wouldn't West have been better off bidding five hearts?

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

1987 NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN

FERTILITY PROBLEMS ARE NOTED FOR 1987 COTTON CROP

After reviewing many of the soil analyses conducted in Scurry County during the past few months, we have noted severe fertility problems. Analysis has shown that nitrogen and phospherus levels appear to be low enough to severely limit cotton production.

The fertility problem in Scurry County was promoted by the heavy rainfall experienced in 1986. Nitrogen moves easily through the soil profile and is leached out when large amounts of water move through the profile.

Phosphorus doesn't move with moisture in the soil. It essentially stays exactly where it is placed. Phosphorus levels are also low in many soil analyses due to plant utilization.

If a cotton producer aims for a yield of a bale per acre, it requires 80 to 90 pounds of total nitrogen and 20 to 25 pounds of phosphorus per acre. In order for a producer to know how much he should apply, a soil analysis is needed.

Area producers should realize that good soil moisture, good heat unit accumulation and good pest control will not be enough to produce a high yield without the needed plant nutrients.

Producers should contact the County Extension Office for the necessary forms and supplies for soil analysis. Samples are analyzed at the Extension Center in Lubbock.

Osteoarthritis increases as people grow older

ATLANTA (AP) — Recent studies show that osteoarthritis of the knee continues to increase in prevalence as people grow older, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

It says Boston researchers learned that X-ray evidence of osteoarthritis increases with age in both males and females. Up to age 75, it was equally evident in both sexes, but after age 75 women had a higher rate of the disease.

However, the foundation points out that slight X-ray evidence of the disease does not always mean that pain and deformity will follow.

Osteoarthritis is the most prevalent form of arthritis, affecting about 16 million Americans.

4-H leadership training is set

Dr. Martha Couch, extension 4-H specialist, will be in Snyder Tuesday to conduct training for 4-H adult leaders and 4-H teen leaders. Dr. Couch will present training on increasing 4-H membership and suggestions for club programs. The training will begin at 7 p.m. at the Extension Office, Senior Citizens building.

All interested 4-H parents and teen leaders are invited to attend. Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

A member of the San Angelo Art Guild, she displays and sells her work through the group's two yearly shows and often attends a Christmas show in Odessa.

Virginia credits her family with the success she enjoys with her creations. "They are all very supportive. I have a grandson that always wants a full report after a show," she said.

Although she loves the task, she doesn't want the hobby to become a full-time career. "I want to continue making them, but I really don't want to do it on a large scale. I think a younger person could do something with it. I think they could get into it on a large scale and really market it," she added.

Virginia plans to continue "the dirty work" as long as her candles are still in demand.

Mc Auliffe's brother breaks his silence

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — Christa McAuliffe's brother broke a year of near silence to accuse NASA of using his sister for publicity and urge that the space agency abandon, for now, programs to put everyday people in space.

"They're using private citizens for the publicity to make it seem OK to do the defense and 'Star Wars' stuff," Christopher Corrigan, whose sister was chosen to be the first private citizen in space, said in an interview Thursday.

Corrigan, 35, said McAuliffe "knew there was some risk, but she thought it was very safe because there had been no accidents."

McAuliffe, a Concord, N.H., schoolteacher, was killed with six fellow astronauts when the shuttle Challenger blew up shortly after liftoff Jan. 28, 1986.

Corrigan said the program did boost the morale and image of teachers, but said he still believed the National Aeronautics and Space Administration took advantage of his sister.

"These teachers, these journalists, I think it's really using them for the publicity in a negative way," said Corrigan, of Framingham. A journalist in space program was to have followed McAuliffe's flight.

Corrigan said he thought perhaps ordinary people could be sent into space sometime in the distant future, but only if the space program deals with the safety issues and turns its focus more toward discovery and away from commercial and military projects.

Edward Campion, a NASA spokesman in Washington, said the astronauts were told about the risks of space flight, but he did not know whether they had been told about previous technical problems with the shuttle.

The space agency has said no ordinary citizen would be on any of the next five shuttle flights and perhaps not on any of the next 20, Campion said. "They're not going to put a civilian on until we are comfortable with the design changes that have been made," he said.

But Corrigan, an administrator at Framingham State College, where his sister went to school, said, "I don't think they should go ahead and do anything else for the moment, if ever."

Geter movie made

DALLAS (AP) — Lenell Geter will watch dumbfounded as police officers surround him, and he'll live through the same agonizing trial and hear the prison doors clang shut again.

But when the ordeal begins anew Tuesday night, the aerospace engineer will be watching actor Dorian Harewood in the CBS television movie, "Guilty of Innocence: The Lenell Geter Story."

"Just remembering some of the painful events, remembering my arrest and how life-threatening and scary it was ... " Geter's voice trails off.

Geter, a black engineer for E-Systems, was arrested Aug. 24, 1982, in connection with the robbery of a Taco Bell. He later was convicted of robbing a Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant the day before his arrest.

His co-workers and family, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, a "60 Minutes" segment and other stories of his plight helped turn up discrepancies in the case, and he was exonerated after 16 months in prison.

Five eyewitnesses had identified him as the robber, but Geter's supporters argued he was arrested only because he was a black man in a small, white Texas town.

"I'll be emotionally up and down roller coaster-style," the 29-year-old Geter said of the movie in a recent telephone interview. "If I didn't have to live with the bad memories of a bad experience, I wouldn't have too much of a problem seeing it again."

Police said they had arrested another man in the case, and Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade dropped the charge against Geter on March 24, 1984, after the nationwide publicity.

No one else ever was brought to trial, said Geter attorney Ed Sigel, who is portrayed by Dabney Coleman in the Embassy Communications production.

Geter — who still lives in the city of Greenville, about 50 miles northeast of Dallas — has filed an $18 million civil suit against almost all the officials and institutions who had anything to do with what he called his "racially motivated incarceration."

Wade says of the case only that "the press proved him innocent whether he was innocent or not. I still in my own heart feel like he was guilty."

After his December 1983 release from prison, Geter went back to work at E-Systems.

"I'm able to express myself better as I get this stuff out of my system," he said. "You begin to unbottle yourself, and I especially want to talk about the case because there's much to learn about our legal system.

"I had always felt our judicial system would never treat anyone like this," he said. "The mechanism to unjustly incarcerate people is still intact, and I hope this movie gets that point across to people."

The "S-O-S" distress signal was adopted in 1906 at an International Radio Telegraphic Convention in Berlin.

Health officials: Texas flu epidemic less severe so far

DALLAS (AP) — Texas is one of seven states reporting widespread influenza outbreaks, but health officials say they expect fewer cases at the end of this flu season than last year.

The state Department of Health reported 4,982 cases of influenza in December and 7,912 cases so far in January. But staff epidemiologist Jeff Taylor says those numbers "come nowhere near the total number of cases."

"I would guess if you multiply by 10 or 15 you would get a better idea of the number of cases," he said.

A full appraisal of this year's flu epidemic can't be obtained until it has subsided, but epidemiologists are predicting fewer Texans will have suffered from the disease this year than last.

Typically, about 15 to 20 percent of the population will show evidence of the infection, said Taylor.

Across the state, employers and health officials are reporting an average number of flu cases, but say the outbreak might get worse.

"We're in the midst of a major outbreak here in Austin," said Dr. Greg Maksymowicz, the director of communicable diseases at Austin's health department.

At IBM in Austin, where 7,000 people are employed, company officials "have noticed an upturn in flu-related activity," said IBM spokesman John Pope. He noted, however, that absenteeism is not much above normal.

In Dallas, enough workers are out of the office and in bed to prompt a rise in demand for temporary workers. Kelly Services, a temporary service in Dallas, said business is brisk due to illness in local companies.

School districts across the state report that student absenteeism isn't unusually high, but credit the Christmas holidays and recent exam breaks for giving students recovery time. The Houston Independent School District reported lower absenteeism than in last year's flu season.

But at Texas A&M University, where students returned from semester break Jan. 19, the flu epidemic is picking up steam.

Dr. Claude Goswick, director of the student health center, said about 500 students came through his facility one day this week and about 70 or 80 of those had flu-like symptoms.

"Students bring it from home and share it around," he said. "I hope it doesn't get worse."

Dr. Carl Kappus, epidemiologist at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, said Texas and six other states are reporting widespread bouts with the troublesome illness.

"The last couple of seasons we saw rather heavy occurrence of flu," he said. "This year is not as severe as the last couple."

Taylor said the flu season, which usually lasts about 8-10 weeks, has been in full swing since early December. "We're probably in about in our eighth or ninth week," he said, adding that the peak came probably in the last week of December or first week of January.

Because another strain of flu could develop before the season ends, Texas isn't out of the woods yet, health experts say.

The strain of influenza virus currently making the rounds is known as Taiwan flu, a variation of Influenza A that first appeared in 1986 in Taiwan. The newness of the strain means people haven't yet developed immunity to it, said Taylor.

Taiwan flu has the same symptoms as other influenza types — fever, headache, sore throat, coughing. It primarily attacks children and young adults, doctors say.

Kappus said the flu's principal victims are one reason the epidemic hasn't been as severe this year. Because children and young people are generally in better health, the strain has less virulence, he said.

A vaccine for Taiwan flu is available, but doctors say only the elderly and people with chronic illnesses, including cardiac or pulmonary disease, diabetes and asthma, need to get the vaccine.

Dr. Weldon Smith at Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas says people not yet vaccinated can still get the shot or a vaccination against three other flu strains before the flu season ends.

In 1935, a flying boat named the "China Clipper" took off from Alameda, Calif., bearing more than 100,000 pieces of mail on the first trans-Pacific airmail flight.

Your Birthday

Feb. 1, 1987

Opportunities will develop in the year ahead that will help you further your financial ambitions. The trend will be put into play by something you create.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If your hopes are unreasonably based upon what others can do for you today, you might be disappointed. Be self-reliant and depend solely on yourself. Major changes are ahead for Aquarius in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you have an important objective you're anxious to achieve today, don't leave things up to chance. You're not apt to be successful if you lack method.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't make impulsive decisions regarding important matters today. Be logical and methodical, and take time to think things through.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's best not to involve friends in your commercial affairs today. Although they'll want to help you, they might end up doing the opposite.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Partnership arrangements could have their drawbacks today. If both parties are not in total accord, objectives aren't apt to be accomplished.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Sensible safety precautions should be followed today if you're working with equipment or materials with which you are unfamiliar. Don't take chances.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Strive to minimize your expenditures today. If you try to gratify your extravagant whims in some foolish or expensive manner, you'll regret it later.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually you're a self-starter, but today you may be too dependent upon others and waste valuable time waiting on one who lacks initiative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A poor attitude will cause you to be unproductive, especially if your philosophy is, "Don't do today what you can put off until tomorrow."

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Because you've worked hard all week and feel you deserve a bit of pampering, there's a possibility you may unwisely waste some of the financial surplus you've acquired.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Companions will find you a rather charming person to be around today, provided everything goes your way. If it doesn't, they'd better run for cover.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your outlook and attitude could run to extremes today. You might be unrealistically optimistic or unduly negative. Seek the middle ground.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Instead of trying to force issues today, let events run their natural course. You could be quite fortunate in situations that are dictated by chance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't let doubts impede your progress today. If there is a new undertaking you've been anxious to initiate, proceed in a fearless fashion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Judge career situations realistically today, but also give credence to the way you instinctively feel about things. Your intuition is your ace in the hole.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Valuable lessons can be gained through personal experiences today. That which you learn firsthand, you'll wisely use to your advantage later.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The possibilities for fitting yourself into sound ventures that others have successfully underway are better than usual today. Hunt for a piece of the action.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your ability to get along harmoniously with others is your greatest asset today. Put your charm to work for you where it can do you the most good.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Being kind of service to others encourages reciprocity today. People you help now will want to do more for you in return.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Self-interests can be effectively advanced today by dealing on a one-to-one basis with people pertinent to your plans. Avoid committee involvement.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're a strong finisher today because you'll gain momentum as you go along. Zero in on projects that have loose threads.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're likely to fare better in important discussions if you conduct them later in the day. You need a little time to assemble your ideas properly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Something advantageous which could affect your material security is stirring today. A person who likes you will have a hand in jarring it loose.

Army, INS tangle over soldier's fate

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. Army Spec.4 Alfredo Rodriguez, a Mexican citizen, wants to become a U.S. citizen and re-enlist, but the Immigration and Naturalization Service wants to deport him.

Rodriguez, 24, is assigned to Company C of the 588th Engineer Battalion at Fort Polk, La. He appeared in uniform in immigration court Thursday at a deportation hearing accompanied by his commanding officer, Capt. Mark Kuehl, and a friend, Spec. 4 Anthony Roybal.

Immigration Judge Stephanie Marks postponed the case until April 27, because the paperwork is still in Chicago where it originated.

"It appears that if you were a permanent resident there is no basis for the charges against you," Ms. Marks told Rodriguez. "I hope that by April 27 one branch of the government will get together with another branch."

The INS claims Rodriguez is in the United States illegally since he was divorced from a U.S. citizen. The Army claims Rodriguez' enlistment was legal, entitles him to remain in the country, and to citizenship when he has served the three-year hitch.

Rodriguez was born in Veracruz, reared in Tampico and came to the United States on a vistor's visa three years ago. He married a U.S. citizen in Chicago and his wife applied on his behalf for permanent residency. His passport was stamped "adjustment of status" but he never received a green card or a denial of that status from the INS before he and his wife were divorced.

Kuehl said Rodriguez, who has served 28 months of a three-year enlistment, is a soldier the Army wants to keep, and Rodriguez says he wants to re-enlist to get money for college.

GLASS OR PLASTIC?

When those who wear glasses have to choose between glass and plastic lenses, the decision may be difficult. No lens material is ideal for everyone. One must weigh the advantages of each material as they relate to his or her individual needs. Here is a comparison of the two most common materials:

	Crown Glass	CR-39 Plastic
Superior Scratch-Resistance	✓
Superior Shatter- Resistance		✓
Lighter-Weight		✓
Superior Ultraviolet Protection	✓

Other materials have recently been developed which are lighter, thinner, and more scratch-resistant than CR-39 plastic, so the choice is not easy. Let us help you decide. Call now to make your appointment.

Above the Fold

By Donny Brown

Every morning, we get up and check the bag quotient.

That is, the progress of those twin semi-circles collecting beneath both eyeballs.

It is a ritual, this morning self-inspection, but its reasons aren't totally linked to vanity.

Men stumbling toward 40 aren't that interested in "looking" at their face. In fact, most stopped wondering what they "really" look like about 25 years back when the teenage years were left behind.

Youngsters going through puberty can give mirrors a real workout, attempting to catalogue all of the whorls, bumps, funny folds and angles of that face they will be forced to live with all the days of their lives.

At some point, however, your own face begins to bore you, and you are finally free to pursue more interesting things.

At this point, the early morning looks in the mirror are pretty much daily maintenance.

A quick check to insure that the cowlick isn't raised up too high; that both sideburns have been shaved to the approximate same level; that all the shaving cream has been washed off; and that in general you can count on your face not embarrassing you--at least no more so than yesterday.

There is also the daily bag quotient check, a self-examination to determine what damage yesterday caused.

It and a series of other actions are to detect the telltale signs implanted on the old kisser due to the adverse affects of gravity, time and circumstances.

Other stops to make on this morning visual tour include:

—The flared ridge of the nose, checking for the roadmap of broken blood vessels.

—Those lines which bracket the mouth, folds that simultaneously grow deeper and stab lower with each passing year.

—The bumpy ridge above the nose which, as time goes on, begins to buckle between the eyebrows like bad paving on a hot summer day.

—Those horizontal furrows on the forehead which start sneaking around to join up with what is pleasantly called your "laugh lines."

Other checks may not be on a daily basis. The "biggie" is when you have sufficient time to locate a hand mirror and view the backside of your skull--trying to identify if what you used to call your "crown" is developing into a bonafide bald spot.

Norman Lear, the guy who invented Archie Bunker, remembers how his father used to constantly pinch the flesh at the back of his hand.

This to check the skin's elasticity--for as long as the pinch smoothed down quickly, his father felt he wasn't old.

The morning bag quotient check is the same thing. And we suspect it is done daily as a natural self-defense.

Like most things, the realization of getting older is handled best one day at a time.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

Me 'n' my horse fell in a hole the other day. As I write this, it is still early January; winter is teasing us with spring days, perfect for riding. I was jogging along, "countin' my money," as the saying goes, admiring the way the cool sun glinted gold off the long stalks of Johnson grass which were bowed low as if in prayer, whispering incantations to the wind. Two fat hawks, obviously male and female, swooped and circled around each other, flirting in the clear winter sky.

Then, with a stumble and a WHOOSH, I found myself impaled on the saddle horn with the big black on his knees, looking at Johnson grass growing from earth beside me, not below me. Sox, so named for two white feet in an otherwise all black body, reacted with the calm and dignity befitting an old-timer, backing us slowly and picking a careful way out of the hole.

As soon as we reached level ground I bounded from the saddle and began running my hands down his front legs, checking for any signs of tenderness or swelling. He was fine, but as I remounted I cursed myself as only someone who knows they should know better can. It was an unfamiliar pasture and I should have paid more attention. My carelessness could have cost us dearly.

A horse like Sox can't be bought. No one knows what his breeding is, but I figure there must be some circus pony in his background because of the way he arches his neck and picks up his feet when he trots, tossing his wavy black mane. We traded for him for $300 worth of day-working when my husband left the Fuller Brothers "E" Ranch back in 1975.

Our decision to pick Sox out of the ranch horse remuda was made on the tragic day when P.L. Fuller's old frame ranch house, Dick and Elizabeth Hart's home, burned to the ground. My husband, who was three miles out on the big horse when the first coiling smoke plumes began rising, rode him in at a dead run with strength to spare.

Sox received his training at the finest school possible: open range country, from one of the best horse handlers in the area, I think--my husband, Kent. He's a working horse with no patience for the patting and scratching our other horses like. A wiley devil, he takes every opportunity to sidle out of the pen if he thinks he's going to get saddled.

Because of his power and urgency and my inexperience, I was afraid to ride Sox at first, and held him so tight in the mouth he would sometimes stop outright. Then, one summer, I decided to go back to square one: bareback. Every night we took off down the road — my goal was to be able to ride him at one of his long, fast trots without bouncing to high heaven or clinging to his mane for dear life. By the end of the summer, we had found a new rhythm. We understood each other, and I've never been afraid of any horse since.

Sox is 19 years old now. He has a new job that he takes seriously, teaching our kids to ride. I've seen him stand stock-still while a child clambors aboard, grabbing knee-holds and handfuls of mane wherever available, or throw up his head to keep them from pitching overboard at a quick stop. I've also seen that same horse terrorize an adult visitor from New York by jumping into a breathless run at first touch of the heels, just for the hell of it.

At horse shows he stands quietly in the midst of jittery, jostling younger horses, eyes closed to a half-slit while he dozes, waiting his turn. He'll stand at halter or run around barrels, whatever the job requires. The folks out at Fuller's still can't believe the stout old ranch horse has yielded a living room full of trophies and two silver buckles from showing. This year my son reluctantly hands over the reins to his little sister and "graduates" to the sorrell, Buck, for the next shows, so that Jessica can have her turn to compete. Sox has taught Dustin to handle a nervous one like Buck, and the "old man," as I call him, will look after the little one, I know.

Just as he's looked after me all these years. Just as he's cut cattle from herds and brought them in on a rope for my husband. Whatever the job requires. I don't think he'll ever retire. It's not in his nature. We'll bury him someday, out on this place, and our family will never be quite the same again.

FIVE YEARS AGO

The Snyder High School drama and choral departments opened a production of "My Fair Lady" Thursday evening — Jan. 28 — in the SHS Auditorium. Featured in the starring roles of Prof. Henry Higgins and Eliza Doolittle were Jack O'Banion and Ramona Murphy.

Officers of the Canyon Gun Club for 1982 elected this week were Jack Greene Jr., president; Tommy Wright, vice-president; Kenny Miller, treasurer; and Allen Wright, secretary.

Officers of the Cogdell Memorial Hospital Board of Managers for 1982 elected this week included A.Z. Glover, president; Leon Autry, vice president; and John Jarrell, secretary.

10 YEARS AGO

Victor Conrad, executive vice president of Walls Industries, today — Jan. 26 — announced the appointment of Ronnie Sutton as manager of the Snyder plant. Sutton is currently employed as manager of Walls' Sweetwater plant and had previously served as manage of the Aileen Inc. sewing plant in Snyder.

Kathy Harrell of Snyder — daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sonny Harrell — won the Dorthea Griffin Steer Showmanship Award this week at the Abilene Livestock Show.

15 YEARS AGO

SHS Bandsmen Darlene Abbott and Mike Harper were named to the Texas Music Educators Association All-State Band following auditions in Lubbock this week. They will be performing with the elite band during the TMEA convention in San Antonio.

R.J. Becker, president of Chevron Oil Co., Western Division, this afternoon — Jan. 26 — turned a valve releasing the first C02 into an injection well in the Kelly-Snyder Field northwest of Snyder. The beginning of the C02 injection marks the start of the first large scale use of the injection process for oil recovery.

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
January 25

A fourth candidate has announced for one of two at-large positions on the Snyder city council, it was reported Sunday.

Voicing her intent was Evelyn J. Malone, who was also a candidate for the council's district 3 seat during a special called election here Aug. 30.

The induction of 26 new members into the National Honor Society at Snyder High School was completed Sunday in Worsham Auditorium.

The Scurry County 4-H club claimed exclusive rights to the winner's circle at the steer competition for this year's Scurry County Junior Livestock Show, it was reported Sunday.

4-H member Leddy Lewis claimed his second consecutive county grand championship in the steer division, while Rana Eicke's steer, the largest in the show, was singled out for reserve champ honors.

One family's journey of self-discovery was chronicled in Sunday's SDN.

The four members of the Huff family — Richard, Susan and their son's Allen, 14, and Aaron, 11 — told how they are rediscovering American by walking from the Pacific to the Atlantic Ocean.

MONDAY
January 26

Commissioners discussed county insurance needs Monday as part of a plan to renew the county's comprehensive automobile insurance which covers all county-owned vehicles.

TUESDAY
January 27

Snyder's representative to the Silver Haired Legislature (SHL) was back in Austin Tuesday for two days of meetings planned between SHL members and state legislators.

Delbert Downing, elected last year to the state's first SHL group, attended as a representative from the West Texas Council of Governments district.

Sales totals from Saturday's premium sale were released Tuesday by officials with the Scurry County Junior Livestock Association.

The auction netted $55,000 in bid prices for some 118 animals. Premium monies added by the association, drawn from other contributions, brought the total to $61,000.

The unemployment estimate for Scurry County, which has been declining since it hit a record high in June, again dropped for the month of December, according to figures released Tuesday by the Texas Employment Commission.

This decline was calculated at less than 1 percentage point and brought the total here to an even 9 percent unemployment.

It marked also the third month in a row that the civilian labor force estimate for the county--figured by combining the number of persons employed and those "actively seeking" jobs--remained approximately the same.

WEDNESDAY
January 28

Jury selection ended around 11 a.m. Wednesday in the $2 million civil lawsuit filed against Scurry County and the Snyder Chamber of Commerce by the Glenn Polk family.

Opening arguments began in 132nd District Court following a noon lunch recess.

The Snyder school district has been identified as one of 202 districts throughout the state which received refurbished desks from the Texas Department of Corrections which have paint with greater than recommended levels of lead.

As of Wednesday morning, school officials here say they have received no official word, but noted, "We plan to do whatever is necessary once we've heard from TDC."

The selection of a new Snyder chamber of commerce manager is now forseen as a lengthy process which may see the position vacant for as long as six months.

This was the opinion expressed Wednesday by Elizabeth Potts, this year's chamber president, who said, "I don't expect to get anyone in here for four to six months."

THURSDAY
January 29

Two committees will be formed to determine methods of combining city and county services--in particular the local ambulance service--as a result of a joint work session held by the two governmental entities Thursday.

"As much duplication as we can eliminate, the better we will be," Mayor Rod Waller noted during the session. City councilmen and county commissioners agreed that combining services will save money for both entities.

Most of Thursday's meeting centered on possible alternatives to the independent ambulance service currently contracted.

FRIDAY
January 30

Some five hours of testimony spread over a two-day period was offered through noon Friday by Glenn Polk, who has filed a $2 million lawsuit against both Scurry County and the Snyder Chamber of Commerce in connection with the death of his 12-year-old son Jeff.

For some two hours Thursday afternoon and two more Friday morning, testimony from Polk was elicited from his attorney, Alton Griffin of Lubbock.

The lawsuit, which began with jury selection in 132nd District Court Monday, is now expected to spill over into next week.

Anxiety attacks aren't abnormal

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've heard more and more people say they have anxiety attacks. What they talking about?

DEAR READER — Anxiety attacks are episodes of nervousness and apprehension. They are milder than panic attacks. Anxiety is a universal, unpleasant sensation of tension, fearfulness and irritability. We all experience some type of anxiety on a regular basis. Most forms of anxiety need no treatment; the person copes with an uncomfortable situation and the anxiety goes away.

Many people believe that tension and anxiety are "unnatural," and they try to eliminate them by using tranquilizers or other medications, "recreational" drugs and/or alcohol. This belief is wrong — and the "cures" can be damaging. Anxiety is a normal human emotion. If people accept it as such, they will deal more effectively with stress and not have to rely on drugs or alcohol. In most cases, these simply cover up the anxiety, prevent people from finding satisfactory solutions to problems — and also can lead to habituation or abuse.

In short: Pain or distress, whether physical or emotional, mean that something's wrong and must be treated or resolved. This isn't done by covering up the symptoms.

To give you more information, I'm sending you a free copy of my new Health Report on MENTAL AND EMOTIONAL ILLNESS, which describes different problems and appropriate treatments. Others who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Five years ago, I was diagnosed as being diabetic. I take 250 milligrams of Diabinese daily. Since then, all my teeth became loose and were pulled, my nails split easily, I'm losing my hair and I've found it increaingly difficult to become sexually aroused. I'm 50 and female. I hope you can shed some light on this.

DEAR READER — Circulatory insufficiency is one consequence of long-term diabetes. Diabetics tend to develop arteriosclerosis at a faster rate than do normal people. This blood-vessel narrowing deprives tissues of oxygen and nutrients. Therefore, diabetics are more prone to develop infections, skin ailments, dental abscesses, heart disease and vascular problems, and sexual dysfunction. Check with your doctor to make sure that your diabetes is under control and that you do not have an internal imbalance of hormones or a low-grade infection.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My son is 31, and during a recent physical, his doctor said he had very low platelets, even though his red and white cells were normal. A specialist put him on steroids, tranquilizers and sleeping pills. He bloated up and got very shaky. Now he sleeps all the time. Should he see another doctor?

DEAR READER — Yes, he should. The condition you describe is called thrombocytopenia and it can lead to a serious bleeding tendency, because platelets enable the blood to clot normally.

Cortisone is useful in treating this disorder, but it is important to determine why your son developed thrombocytopenia in the first place. Cortisone causes salt retention and fluid buildup; this may explain why he became bloated.

The use of tranquilizers and sleeping pills has no place in the treatment of your son's blood disorder. The doctor must be giving him these drugs for another reason. If your son is too sedated, have the doctor stop the tranquilizers. See if your son's behavior returns to normal.

It's time to try the low-cost diet

A New York City doctor has written a diet book that prominent scientists say isn't worth the paper it's printed on.

It's a best-seller.

No reputable physician endorses the author's view that an astonishing miscellany of illnesses is caused by diet-correctible malfunctions in our immune systems. Nonetheless, people are snapping up the book with the same enthusiasm that they snatch cashews out of a bowl of mixed nuts. (It's easy. You simply shake the bowl and the cashews, being larger than the other nuts, migrate to the surface.) Anyway, the doctor is not only receiving handsome royalties from his fad diet, he also demands exorbitant office fees from fat people who are convinced that all their sorrows will evaporate if they become thin without counting calories. The diet doctor drives a Rolls-Royce. To me, that says a lot.

Apparently, if your life's goal is to make a great deal of money in the shortest time, the way to do it is to write a book on dieting. Remember, however, that you are not supposed to write a real diet book. It won't sell.

According to Dr. Gabe Mirkin, associate professor of pediatrics at Georgetown University, "The diets that sell well are those that promote something for nothing." Such get-rich-quack schemes include Dr. Berger's Immune Power Diet, The I-Like-My-Beer-Diet, Laugh Off the Pounds, the Herbalife diet, How to Flip Your Flab Forever, the United Sciences of America diet, Mind Over Fatter, the Fit For Life diet, the Rice Diet, and More of Jesus, Less of Me.

From a nutritional standpoint, these fad diets — like others before them — are medically hard to swallow. They are either unhealthful, unproven or misrepresentative of current scientific knowledge. They can be dangerous. People died from the liquid-protein Last Chance Diet. Mirkin observes that "the diet kings are doing Americans a terrible injustice — they're setting them up for regaining any weight they may lose. And every time they rapidly put the weight back on, they lay down arterial plaque at an accelerated rate and increase the number of fat cells in their bodies."

One fact is certain: Every pound that a patient sheds as a dollar in the pocket of the author. When asked why he chose to publish a sensationalistic diet book, Robert Haas (author of "Eat to Win") explained that "the original manuscript bears no resemblance to what you see in the book." The publisher was not interested in marketing a valid scientific manual. "I really didn't like this approach," Haas admitted. "My agent clued me in to the realities of life. You either say yes, or you say no and the book does not get published."

I think it's sad that the public is so willing to take chances on health. Fad diets pander to an increasingly prevalent American obsession: the belief that given the right magic, anybody can beat the laws of physics. Nutritional experts have repeatedly and reliably shown that about 80 percent of body mass is governed by genetic factors; in order to lose weight, the dieter must decrease caloric intake or increase caloric expenditure (or both). In short, you have to eat less and exercise more.

Almost any diet will promote weight loss. The trick is to keep the weight off. Fad diets are often high in fat and artificial nutrients and deficient in vitamins and minerals. Therefore, even while on such a diet, a person may be endangering his or her health. Furthermore, these diets are often impossible to follow for any length of time. The initial weight that is proudly lost usually returns embarrassingly (and inexorably) as the dieter discovers that quick answers do not mean sustained cures. Dr. Richard Friedman, director of the University of Wisconsin weight-reduction clinic, says that "basically, 85 to 90 percent of all people who go on any weight-loss program gain back all the weight within two years."

The Scarsdale, Pritikin, Atkins and Simmons diets have come and gone. So will the plethora of today's diet scams. What is left is not a generation of slim-and-trim dieters, but a new class of affluent hucksters who have made instant fortunes by promising the impossible.

Save yourself the purchase price of glitzy diet books. The true answer to weight reduction is simple, obvious, cheap — and difficult: Cut down on calories. Reduce dietary fat, omit sugar and alcohol, stop junk food and eat smaller portions of a balanced diet. A loss of one-half to one pound a week is an appropriate goal. You will lose weight slowly, but the pounds will stay off. At the same time, you'll starve money-hungry publishers who print diet books only for a fat profit.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Perot invests in company

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot is putting up $20 million for a 16 percent share of Next Inc., a company owned by Apple Computer co-founder Steven Jobs, Business Week magazine reports.

Perot, 56, also will be named to Next's board of directors, the magazine said in its Feb. 9 issue.

Perot could not be reached for comment. His spokesman in Dallas, Bill Wright, said Perot was on the West Coast and unavailable for comment. Wright said he knew nothing about Perot's investment in Next.

A Next spokeswoman said Jobs planned to hold a news conference at the company sometime today, but the topic was not revealed.

Attempts to reach Jobs by telephone were unsuccessful. His home phone number is unlisted, and his lawyer, David Balabanian of San Francisco, did not respond to a reporter's message for a return phone call.

Gramm says Reagan decides to build new supercollider

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has decided to go ahead with a $6 billion high-energy physics "supercollider," and Texas stands a good chance of landing the enormous project, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm says.

"I have learned the president has made a decision to proceed with the Superconducting Supercollider project, 'which would keep America No. 1 in the world in high-energy physics," the Republican senator said Thursday.

"The president's decision to go ahead with the project is clearly part of his commitment to excellence in science and technology outlined by him in the State of the Union Message this week."

Doug Elmets, chief spokesman for Energy Secretary John S. Herrington, said he could not confirm Gramm's statement. But Albert R. Brashear, a White House spokesman, said Reagan has not made a decision on funding for a supercollider.

Gramm reiterated Thursday night that his information was accurate and discounted Brashear's statement by saying, "Maybe they're just not ready to make an official announcement."

Reagan and the Domestic Policy Council heard a plea from Herrington on Thurday to back the $6 billion project to probe the deepest scientific secrets of matter.

Gramm said that building the supercollider would serve to keep the United States the undisputed leader in the field of high-energy physics.

The nation's physicists have eagerly been seeking such a machine to explore the next layer of questions in their quest for explanations of the physical world. Proponents say the machine is essential if the United States hopes to maintain the lead in physics research.

Gramm said the decision to go ahead with the program will also be a boon to modern technology in general and to the state that is picked to host the supercollider.

"The Houston Area Research Council and Texas A&M have been heavily involved in research on the superconducting supercollider, and since they have been involved, they stand a good chance of getting the project," said Gramm, a former economics professor at Texas A&M.

HARC is a consortium of Texas schools including Rice and the universities of Texas and Houston.

Gramm said the Texas researchers believe they can build the supercollider for $1 billion less than the $6 billion Department of Energy estimates it will cost.

"The advanced work done at HARC and Texas A&M should make Texas very competitive," Gramm said. "I will certainly work to promote that."

The supercollider would be a vast tunnel, almost circular, with a circumference of about 52 miles.

Powerful magnets would force counter-rotating beams of protons, one of the naturally occurring subatomic particles that make up the building blocks of all matter, to smash into each other with an energy of 40 trillion electron volts, more than 20 times the maximum energy of the most powerful existing accelerator.

The collisions would concentrate into a small space the energy density that some scientists believe existed at the moment of the "big bang" that created the universe. Out of that could come particles predicted by exotic theories of the origin of matter.

The magnets would draw so much electrical current they would be cooled below the point at which electrical resistance ceases — that is, into the "superconducting" region.

AIR CARE

REACT (Regional Emergency Air Care Transport) is the aviation branch of Lubbock General Hospital's Emergency Center. It is certified through the Texas Department of Health as a Mobile Intensive Care Unit. With a cruising speed of approximately 200 miles per hour, REACT can fly to most cities in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico within one hour.

Since July of 1985, REACT has flown over 60,000 transport miles. Our special flight team of experienced paramedics, nurses and doctors has been trained to provide the best medical care for our patients both on the ground and in-flight. REACT specializes in providing quick and safe medical transport for patients requiring emergency or urgent care.

Lubbock General strives to provide the very latest in medical care and technology and is proud to lead the way with one of the first certified air ambulances in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico. For more information about REACT, please call 806/743-4444.

Dear Abby

Friend Furious at Woman's Silence on Daughter's Rape

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a female and have a girlfriend I've known since high school. I'll make up a name — Millie. We are both 30 years old. Two years ago Millie's boyfriend raped her 11-year-old daughter, and Millie is still dating this guy, and she's planning to move in with him!

My problem is that I can't seem to set aside my anger toward Millie. When she calls me on the phone I make excuses why we can't get together. As far as I know, neither Millie nor her daughter has ever received any kind of counseling or therapy following the rape. Am I wrong to hold this against her? She never talks about it — it's as though it never happened. What would you do about it?

COLD IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR COLD: I would get together with Millie immediately and ask her if either she or her daughter has ever had counseling following the rape. If she says no, you should impress upon her the importance of therapy — especially for her daughter. The friendship between you and Millie is not important, but getting the child into counseling now (if she has never had therapy) is very important. The rape crisis treatment center in your area can help Millie and her daughter.

Please don't let this slide. Write again and let me know what's going on. I care.

DEAR ABBY: We have a middle-age woman in our office who doesn't seem to have a birthday. She's been in this office for going on three years, and even though the rest of us have a little lunchtime celebration on our birthdays — and we all pitch in for a cake — this lady has never let us celebrate hers.

When she applied for the job here, she left the space blank where it indicated date and year of birth — informing the head of personnel that it was "against the law" to ask a person's age! And she got by with it, because she got the job anyway.

She's very nice, quiet and competent and a lady in every way, but we find it rather strange that she refuses to disclose her birthday. (It's also slightly irritating.)

Nobody really cares how old she is, so what's all the secrecy? Any ideas?

THE BIRTHDAY GIRLS IN EAU CLAIRE, WIS.

DEAR GIRLS: If the woman doesn't care to disclose the date and/or year of her birth, it's her right. So what is the big deal? You know she was born; now just let her live.

DEAR ABBY: Recently while we were in Munich, Germany, we came upon a display of eight new modern homes, so we decided to tour them since they were open to the public.

We noticed that every home was built with a bathroom about six feet from the front door! It was actually in the entrance hall, and not part of the family living area. There was a partition that one could lock.

I asked the salesman why a bathroom was situated near the front door — and locked away from the main area of the home. He said this was law in Bavaria. Homeowners cannot deny anyone who wants to use the bathroom entrance into that area! I speak German, so I know that I did not misunderstand. I admit that I was shocked. Have you ever heard of this before?

J.F. IN VANCOUVER, WASH.

DEAR J.F.: Never.

DEAR READERS: In my morning mail, I found this charming poem, written by a 16-year-old girl:

"A Kiss Goodnight"

I climbed the door and shut off the stairs
I said my shoes and took off my prayers
I brushed my makeup and took off my teeth
I pulled down my alarm and set my sheets
I shut off the bed and climbed into the light
And all because he kissed me goodnight!

Prison funding plan critized

AUSTIN (AP) — As the state scrambles to find millions of dollars to pay for court-ordered prison reforms, teachers are warning the Legislature to leave their retirement fund alone.

John Cole, president of the Texas Federation of Teachers, on Thursday called "shameful" a proposal to temporarily divert to prisons some $83 million in payments to the Teacher Retirement System.

"This is not the state's money, and the state ought to keep its hands off," Cole said.

Top lawmakers said they don't know where they will get the millions needed to make improvements ordered by a federal judge who has threatened to fine Texas $24 million a month beginning April 1.

"We need several million dollars to try to take care of the prison system, (and) I still don't know where the money's going to come from," House Speaker Gib Lewis said.

"We were working on it at midnight last night and we're going to be working on it at midnight tonight," he added.

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said Republican Gov. Bill Clements is studying the plan that would temporarily lower the state's contributions to the Teacher Retirement System and generate additional money for prisons.

"Whether that's a good idea or a bad idea, I don't know. We'll just have to look and see what type of proposals come forward," the House leader said.

Lawmakers and Clements aides said reducing state contributions to the teacher retirement fund for six months might provide enough money for Texas to escape the $800,000 in daily fines threatened by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice over failure to implement prison reforms.

But teachers' union leader Cole said the state wouldn't have this problem if Clements had approved proposed prison construction during his first term.

"The state's retired teachers should not be asked to bail Governor Bill out of a jam caused by his own actions. If he had not vetoed a prison construction bill during his first term, we would not be facing fines," Cole said.

Besides tapping the teacher retirement fund, legislators are looking at other possibilities to obtain the extra prison money, including:

— Diverting some tax revenues directly to a dedicated prison fund for the remainder of the 1987 fiscal year, which ends Aug. 31.

— Transferring unspent monies from other, so-far unspecified agencies. Clements asked the Legislature for authority to do this, but some lawmakers say the plan is complicated by the state's $1 billion budget deficit.

— Using education trust funds to buy surplus state lands. Under this Clements proposal, money paid by the Permanent School Fund for the land would go for prison improvements.

Also Thursday, Senate Criminal Justice Committee Chairman Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, introduced a bill he said could keep the inmate population below prison capacity and make it easier to hire needed medical personnel for the prison system, two key requirements of Justice's order.

"The matter requires immediate and emergency attention," McFarland said. He said his bill is supported by Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Lewis, and the prison and parole agencies that would be involved.

McFarland said his bill would create methods to ease prison crowding by offering more probation and parole alternatives for up to 3,000 so-called "low-risk" convicts who committed theft crimes.

"Such low-risk inmates can be diverted from TDC ... to a system which will include intensive supervision probation, intensive surveillence probation, house arrest, electronic maintenance and specialzed caseloads for probation officers," he said.

McFarland estimated the total cost of the bill at about $60 million, but said, "The funding source has not yet been determined."

Economic, security threats are seen by oil industry officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oil industry representatives told Congress Friday that the plunge in oil prices exposes the United States "to disruptive economic and security threats more serious than any development short of war."

Key parts of any solution, most segments of the industry agreed, are a new tax on imported oil — which would boost consumer energy prices — and increases in several income tax breaks.

Witnesses before the Senate Finance subcommittee on energy taxation blamed problems of the U.S. oil industry on policies of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The Independent Petroleum Association of America said that because of OPEC, "the United States has lost control of its energy future." IPAA spokesman George Singer of Tulsa said that within two years, the United States will be dependent on foreign oil for more than half its needs.

"The nation and the American people are therefore exposed to disruptive economic and security threats more serious than any development short of war," he said.

"America — once the fuel tank of democracy — has been hit squarely by an intercontinental-caliber economic missile launched from foreign shores," said Mack Wallace, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission.

"In my judgment, imposition of a variable fee on imports of crude oil and refined petroleum products would truly go a long way toward repelling OPEC's recent Saudi-led assault and toward enabling the producing industry in this country to rehabilitate itself — and thereby benefit the nation," Wallace said.

A special tax on imported oil is part of a package sponsored by Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., chairman of the subcommittee, and several other oil-state lawmakers. "Our national security is being imperiled" because the price decline has devastated U.S. producers, causing a sharp drop in domestic production and increasing reliance on other countries, he said.

GOOD POSTURE

Stand straight and keep your chin up. That advice can save brain power. Poor posture may result in forgetfulness and fuzzy thinking proper alignment of neck and head speeds nourishing blood flow to the brain. The brain needs 30 times more blood than other organs. A slumped neck slows this essential blood flow.
