SENATOR BLEASE READY FOR BOUT AT ANY MOMENT

HOLDS RAP ATTENTION OF GALLERIES FOR OVER TWO HOURS

BY THOMAS L. STOKES
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—A move to hasten a vote on the world court stirred up the small but energetic forces of opposition Friday, and the reserves were called out.

Senator Cole Blease, the plain spoken senator from South Carolina was selected as the first volunteer fireman, and he poured a stream of homely wit and sarcasm upon the threatening court blaze and then turned aside to comment generally upon ambassadors here, evolution, conduct of men of today in the presence of women, aviation, conscription and other objects.

After holding the floor for two hours—as well as the rapt attention of the galleries—the southern senator, a vigorous talker, announced that he was ready at any time to fill the breach, and the score of his first effort indicates that he would appear again.

The action of the irreconcilables in sending in Blease to prevent a vote, indicates that the opposition is ready to start an old-fashioned filibuster if necessary.

"RED" GRANGE NOT STRONG FOR SOCIETY

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 15.—Harold "Red" Grange, exhausted after a series of dinners, receptions and entertainments in his honor, cancelled all remaining engagements and went to bed early.

The phantom seaman from Wheaton, Illinois, will be put on test here Saturday when his Chicago Bears play an all-star football team headed by George Wilson, all-American back from Washington university.

An attendance of 70,000 is expected to see Grange.

6TH ANNIVERSARY OF PROHIBITION CELEBRATED

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Contemplation of the sixth anniversary of national prohibition inspired many comments in the capital Friday, the more pleasurable including:

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League: "Our political life is cleaner since the corrupting influence of the brewery and saloon have been destroyed by prohibition."

A group of nationally known ladies headed by Miss Jane Addams: "Prohibition is only following the normal course of history, all great reforms having taken from one to two generations before they were well enforced."

MARTIN LIKELY TO KNOW HIS FATE TODAY

By United News
FT. WORTH, Jan. 15.—W. A. Martin, on trial here charged with robbery with firearms in connection with looting the Krum Bank last June probably will know his fate tomorrow. Both state and defense rested today and attorneys began argument with two and one half hours allotted to each side.

Testimony introduced today by the defense was aimed to offset state witnesses testimony that Martin had been seen in the vicinity of the robbed bank shortly after the hold up.

YOUNGSTERS DON'T CARE TO BECOME PRESIDENT

By United News
CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—The White House seems to have lost its lure for Chicago school kids. Of 189, eighth graders who answered a questionnaire only one wanted to be president.

Ten expressed a desire to be football stars, eleven wanted to become dancers, seven hoped to be great travelers and others longed for careers as aviators, actors, saxophone artists, speed boat kings, swimmers and radio announcers.

WIFE THROWS ACID IN FACE OF HUSBAND

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 15.—Grace Bernice Day, the flapper bride, whose conviction on charges that she threw acid in her husband's face was reversed in the appellate court, now faces another trial.

The state supreme court Friday, at the request of the state attorney general's office, granted a petition for a re-hearing of the case. Mrs. Day's husband is Darby Day, Jr. son of a Chicago millionaire.

The alleged attack occurred in Los Angeles, where she was tried and convicted in superior court.

The young woman blamed "too much mother-in-law" for her marital unhappiness, declaring the acid that seared Day's face had been purchased for suicidal purposes.

After taking treatment for sore throat, James Cox of White Sulphur Springs, N. Y., coughed up a needle which he had no recollection of swallowing.

YOUNG MAN ASSAULTED AND ROBBED NEAR SLATON, TELLS STORY TO HIS PHYSICIAN AT A POST SANITARIUM

Special to The Avalanche.
SLATON, Jan. 15.—No trace has been found of the two men who last night robbed a young man, giving his name as Wilson, of Canyon, and left him at the roadside 12 miles southeast of Slaton, in an unconscious condition, after beating him and robbing him of his clothes and $52.

PENNSYLVANIA LEGISLATURE WILL MEET IN SPECIAL SESSION TO CONSIDER ANY PLAN THAT WILL BREAK THE DEADLOCK

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—President Coolidge knows of nothing he can do regarding the deadlock in the anthracite strike, the White House said Friday. The Pennsylvania legislature is meeting in special session on the question and the president has no plan for intervening, it was said. The subject was not discussed at the cabinet meeting.

Nevertheless, Senator Copeland, New York democrat, expects to ask the senate Saturday to consider his resolution which would request the president to take whatever steps are necessary to bring about a resumption of mining.

Resigns

John W. Langley resigned as representative from Kentucky when the Supreme court refused to review his conviction for violation of the prohibition laws.

WOULD FORM LARGE BRICK AND TILE CORPORATION

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 15.—Formation of the largest brick and tile corporation in the world, merging thirty-two southern western plants into an eight million dollar combine, virtually was completed here Friday night.

Representatives of brick companies from Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Iowa which will enter the gigantic merger, were in conference here with company attorneys to complete the transfer of the individual plants to the new corporation.

Harry Allyn of New York has been named as president of the corporation. C. E. O'Brien, New York will be secretary-treasurer and J. H. Atwood, Kansas City, general counsel. Names of the vice-president and chairman of the board of directors have not yet been announced.

The average annual gross business of the thirty two companies has been above $4,200,000.

PATTON WILL HEAD LAUNDRY OWNERS ASSOCIATION

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 15.—Frank W. Patton of San Antonio was elected president of the Texas Laundry Owners' Association at the closing session of the 19th annual convention here Friday.

Other officers elected were: A. A. Yates, Dallas, first vice president; Henry Fletcher, El Paso, second vice president and Ben Wofford, San Antonio, re-elected sergeant-at-arms.

PERSHING HAS ALL POWER, VIEW OF COOLIDGE

By United News
WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—President Coolidge, as arbitrator in the Tacna-Arica dispute between Chile and Peru, has upheld the position of General John J. Pershing, chairman of the plebiscitary commission, by sustaining the powers of the commission to regulate the conditions of the plebiscite.

Coolidge's opinion was handed down Friday night following an appeal by Chile, protesting against the commission's actions in arranging for the plebiscite which shall decide which country shall govern the disputed provinces.

The president held that the plebiscitary award gave the commission power to take such action in Tacna and Arica, now under Chilean rule, as to make a fair plebiscite possible.

The opinion recognized the sovereignty of Chile over the territory pending the plebiscite insofar as it was subject to Chilean law and authority, but it held that "this retention of possession and administrative authority was subject to the provisions for the taking of the plebiscite" it was stated in the award.

VERY LATEST FAD "SUDDEN DEATH" DINNER

By United News
NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—A "sudden death" dinner to celebrate the sixth anniversary of prohibition will be given at the hotel McAlpin by the Anti-Saloon League Saturday night, with "Pussyfoot" Johnson as the guest of honor.

The "sudden death" reference is to some demonstrations which are expected to show in dramatic form the evil effects of alcohol. Plans will be adopted for a show down exposition next June, when it is the intention of the prohibitionists to give the public "for the first time" the true facts concerning the prohibition issue.

CORN SUGAR WILL BE OFFERED AMERICA

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—The movement to relieve corn surpluses was further accelerated in Illinois Friday when 1,000 representatives at a corn conference here heard promises of aid from the state and from labor.

Governor Small announced at the meeting that he had rescinded the agricultural department's regulation requiring labeling of canned goods to show the contents of corn sugar.

Many persons who read the labels believe corn sugar is an undesirable ingredient when as a matter of fact it is not, declared S. J. Stannard, state agricultural director.

The support of labor was pledged to the farmer by John P. Walker, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor.

AMERICAN LEGION FOR MILITARY TRAINING

By United News
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. Jan. 15.—Propaganda being circulated against military training in public schools has aroused the ire of the American legion.

The national executive committee of the legion, meeting here, has decided to launch a counter campaign designed to restore military training to schools that have discontinued it and to keep it in schools where it is now practiced.

John McQuigg, national commander, was authorized to call a special conference on national defense, if he feels that such a move is advisable.

The committee contemplated issuing a series of pamphlets showing the "un-American character of the propaganda against the school training corps."

Just before adjournment the executive committee placed the legion on record as favoring entrance of the United States into world court and adopted a resolution calling for development of an "adequate military power."

Four brothers, Joe, Teddy, Bernard and Alex Kuschel, married four sisters, Charlotte, Wanda, Lovetta and Frances Wasielewski, and all live in the same house in Buffalo.

GOVERNOR IS HARD ON PARDONED CONVICTS

By United News
AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 15.—Requisition was received today by Governor Miriam A. Ferguson from Governor Terrill of Arkansas for rendition of Arthur J. Gurley, from former sheriff and collector of Miller county, Arkansas, who is reported to be in Texarkana, Texas.

Gurley was one of the nine persons pardoned last October by Acting Governor S. B. McCall of Arkansas during the absence of Governor Terrill. Upon his return Terrill ordered the pardon revoked and the Arkansas supreme court recently held the revocations valid.

Gurley, who was serving a five year sentence for embezzlement of public funds, resides at Texarkana, Arkansas, and when the supreme court rendered its decision, he went across the line into Texas.

LOST TRIBE OF CAVE DWELLERS BEEN FOUND

By United News
CAPETOWN, South Africa, Jan. 15.—Discovery of a lost tribe of primitive cave dwellers was announced Friday by Dr. C. E. Cadle, of Denver, Colorado, on his return from a scientific expedition into the isolated regions of Southwest Africa.

The tribe probably has been isolated from all human contact and progress for centuries, Dr. Cadle believes.

RESCUED MINERS HUNGRY, BUT IN BEST OF HEALTH

SHORT CIRCUIT THOUGHT TO HAVE IGNITED COAL GAS

By United News
FAIRMONT, W. Va., Jan. 15.—Twenty trapped miners were rescued Friday evening from the Jamison Mine No. 6, which was torn by an explosion Thursday while 47 men were at work. All the miners now are accounted for. The explosion took a toll of 19 lives.

The 20 who were removed from the mine Friday night were hungry but unharmed. They had been previously given up for dead. They were found by searchers in an old underground stable. They had not heard the noise of the explosion and did not know the cause of their predicament. Twenty-one men originally were in the stable, but one refused to take his machine boss' advice and left the refuge to seek a way to the surface. He was a victim of fire damp.

While rescuers with gas masks dug away at tons of debris, a temporary hospital was set up at the mouth of the mine with doctors and nurses ready to revive any faint spark of life in the bodies that may be brought out.

Company officials at Greensburg, refuse to give up hope of finding some of the men alive but L. C. Fitzhugh, a coroner, is of the opinion that all are dead.

Some of the men within the mine are believed to be two miles from the main shaft. It is believed that several of the victims were caught and overcome while they were working in passageways between the point where the blast occurred and chambers further back. The explosion is thought to have been due to a short circuit which ignited coal gases.

The mine is of soft coal and was on a non-union basis.

BRIDE WANTS TIME TO ENJOY HER HONEYMOON

By United News
LONDON, Jan. 15.—Irving and Ellen Berlin have arrived, Ellen tired, and Irving very much the attentive lover.

Clarence H. Mackay, head of the Postal Telegraph Co., and the bride's angry father, did not send any radio blessings to daughter and son-in-law while they were steaming across the Atlantic aboard the Leviathan.

"We can't think of anything more to say except that our honeymoon has been very happy; we have found married life a dream," Irving said on stepping from the boat train at Waterloo Station where he was greeted by friends.

"No, Mr. Mackay is not reconciled to our marriage," Irving continued. "Can't you ask people to let us alone for awhile?" Mrs. Berlin plaintively inquired. "It is our honeymoon, not theirs."

"The voyage was delightful," Berlin said.

"We are very tired but glad to be back in England. We will remain at least a week before going to the Riviera."

Ellen and Irving showed the strain of dodging reporters and photographers who had swarmed aboard the Leviathan at Southampton.

Delphian Exhibit Well Patronized Yesterday

The exhibit which is being shown by the members of the Delphian Club in the Bacon building was very popular yesterday, and greater crowds are expected today. The pictures are of unusual attractiveness and many other things of interest were shown. The musical program offered was delightful, the piano solos by Miss Kathryn Atkins and Mrs. Fran Barclay and the song by Miss Violet Grayam, being particularly pleasing. Mrs. Barclay and Miss Grafum were also delightful in the duet which they sang.

Mrs. Janet Rix and Mrs. Joe Flaig favored the audience with piano numbers which were greatly enjoyed and Dr. D. Rodier, who has been given special praise for his solo. The orchestra played several numbers. In addition to the program arranged for the daylight hours of Saturday, one has been promised from 8 to 9 in the evening. Miss Mary Dunn and other music teachers of the public school will have many pupils to play, and an excellent program is assured with the following talent performing: Mary Evelyn Woodson, Guthrie Morris, Ruth Johnson, Faye Williams, Edna Mae Slover, Edith Trent, Mrs. Carl Scroggin, Mrs. J. A. Harvey, Margaret Haisell, Johleriah Clem, Mary Frances Felty, Gladys Lindsay, Mozelle Law, Betty Hamilton, Ernestine Lockhart, K. Carter, Howard Hunt, Mary Eleanor Quick, Gildemell Mullins, Faye Hunt, Mancil Hall, Lois Harkley, Juanita Haynes and Mr. Washam.

Among the out of town visitors to the exhibit today were Mrs. E. Woods and Mrs. C. E. Ray of Crosbyton, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Powell of Brownfield, M. R. Emmerson of Odessa.

NOTICE TO MEMBERS OF WESLEY CLASS
The members of the Wesley class will appear in a body at the funeral of Mrs. James Trigg this afternoon at the Methodist church. The funeral will be held at 3 o'clock.

BABY PEGGY TO APPEAR AGAIN THIS MORNING
Baby Peggy will again appear at the Saturday morning matinee, this time in "Helen's Babies." This is one of her best films, and she is cuter than ever in it. McDonald Birch, the wonder magician, will also appear in a very fine program. The children are requested to remember that the admission will be ten cents this morning because of the extra treat in having Mr. Birch.

The members of the Child-Study

Club who will supervise the show this morning are Mesdames Tom Stone, J. P. Giles and Paul Barrier.

K. CARTER P. T. A. HAS MEETING THURSDAY

"Room Mothers" were chosen at the K. Carter P. T. A. Thursday afternoon for the purpose of interesting other mothers of children in the same room in the organization, and in the needs of the school. Several reports were made, and in the count of mothers attending, Miss McCallion's room received one picture and Mrs. Ballenger's room the other.

The next meeting of the club will be held Thursday, January 8.

PERSONALS

Mrs. W. M. Dings will enter the Elwood Hospital today for a week's stay. Her friends are hoping for her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Richard Maxwell has returned from Abilene where she has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. McLemore.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Powell of Brownfield were in Lubbock yesterday visiting their daughter, Mrs. Rufus Rush.

AT THE CHURCHES

CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE
Services at the Church of the Nazarene over Sunday will be at the usual hours, Sunday at 9:45 and preaching at 11 a. m. Junior service at 5:00 p. m. Young people's service, 6:30 p. m. Preaching at 7:15 p. m. You are not only invited, but if you are not actively engaged elsewhere you are urged to come and worship with us. With as many places to worship as we have in Lubbock, no one should be without a place to worship.

We are delighted with the way our Sunday-school is growing, and we believe by the early spring months it will be necessary for us to add some Sunday school rooms to our building in order to accommodate our fast growing school, and I trust we can see our way clear to remodel our building in several ways. Mother Ranford and Mother Evans, two deaconesses, have moved down from Plainview, and are helping push the work, and are proving a great blessing to the church, they will appreciate any second handed clothing of any kind that might be given them, that they may give it to the poor, and help them through the winter.

We are looking forward, and trusting the Lord for a good year, and we are pleased with the way we are getting started, if we can only meet the demands that are upon us and continue to go forward.

The church and parsonage is located at 1616 Avenue H. Come and worship with us, a hearty welcome awaits you.

S. S. Wood, pastor.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Fourteenth and N.

All of the service of this church will be of very great importance Sunday. The new year has started in very truth and with it an increased interest in all of the different departments of the church.

One of the most important features of the day will be a regular monthly officers meeting at 3:30 p. m. All of the officers, both Elders and Deacons, urged to make no other plans for this hour Sunday afternoon. Matters of very great importance will be brought up for discussion. All new and old officers are urged to attend.

The program for the day follows: Sunday School—9:45 a. m. Morning Worship—11:00 a. m. Junior Endeavor—2:30 p. m. Officers Meeting—3:30 p. m. Senior Endeavor—5:45 p. m. Evening Worship—7:30 p. m.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

LEAVES HER AT HOME WITH BABY WHILE HE GOES TO DANCES

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been married a little over a year, and we have a darling baby girl. I love my husband and he seems to think lots of both the baby and me. But I am not happy. My husband is always flirting with other women. He meets them at dances and makes dates with them and never tells me he promised to call such a girl up. He will tell me he is going downtown, and then comes home at one o'clock or later. Sometimes a few days later he will mention he was such and such a place on a certain night probably a dance. And he saw so and so, and if I say I would like to have gone, he will answer that he goes when and where he pleases. Not that he never takes me out, but I can't go very much because of the baby. Then he goes with other women. Things like this keep coming up all the time, and make me miserable. The word divorce makes me feel sick. Am I doing a lot of foolish and unnecessary worrying? I have talked to him about it and know I will either have to give in or leave him. I reproved him about his men friends but he brings them around and acts as though I never said a word against them. He says they are his friends and the house is as much his as mine. What shall I do? For the baby's sake I want to do what is best. But things can't go on like this. And I can't have him going on making me ashamed of him and humiliating me. Several months ago, before I went home on a visit, we had a quarrel and he cried about it and said they weren't worth breaking for a while, but now it's just as bad as ever. HEARTSICK. Don't give up yet. Your attitude toward his friends may be at the bottom of the trouble. When you make it difficult for him to enjoy his home, he naturally turns elsewhere. Even if you don't like them, try making his friends welcome to the extent of doing your duty as a hostess. Plan charming little evenings, with games or candy-making or some simple little pleasure, that will make him want to stay at home with you and baby. Don't give him tasks to do, but let the evenings he spends at home be pleasant and restful. Your lack of tact in handling him has only made him stubborn, and brought out a determination to show you that he will not be bossed. Try a new method. If it fails, there is only one course left.

LONGING: Such spelling! Such grammar! Such scribbling! And you are chafing because your parents won't allow you to quit school and devote yourself to marrying a young man who must be utterly worthless, or he wouldn't be dependent on his parents at 25!

Capes Are Important Theme Throughout the Style World

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

The mode travels capeward. On the tip of the tongue of fashionists far and near are such expressions as cape-coats, cape-tops, cape-collared blouses, cape-dressed wrap and like-minded phrases until one is almost warranted in concluding that capes are the chief concern of the style world. According to present indications, coats and capes will be in the minority this spring. It may, at least, be said without exaggeration that the cape-coat is a matter of supreme importance. The mode especially influences the simple circular cape such as the picture shows. The chief of this type is that it is detachable. For the useful cape-coat solid-colored fine twills, knish cloth and wool reps are favored. However, there is considerable interest in fancy basket weaves in plaided effects, also colored tweeds. Large plaids in pastel colorings are favored, also bold black and white plaided patterns. Sometimes cape-sleeves are substituted for the cap entirely. A military look is given to the cape by attaching a high close-fitting collar. Many of the new cape-coats are very striking in design. For instance a bold black and white plaid with flowing capelet-sleeve effect, reveals a lining of tongue red which, by the way, is one of the popular shades of the hour. Another handsome travel and general utility coat is of rough brown and undyed wool. The cape part flaps across the back and low on the hips a wide belt of the cloth is posed, which buckles at the front with a lustrous colonial brass buckle. Not only is the cape-coat in fashion but full-length circular capes are included among fashionable wraps for spring.

DR. GRANBERY TO GO TO DALLAS FOR EMPOR-TANT MEETING

Dr. J. C. Granbery, head of the History department will leave this afternoon by motor for Dallas where he will attend the Third Annual Rural Church Conference which is to be held there January 18 and 19. Dr. Granbery is chairman of the Conference and will preside at all meetings. He will make the Opening Address to the members at the dinner which is to be given Monday evening.

Dr. Paul W. Horn, president of the College is also a member of this Conference and is one of the directors of the Co-operative Committee.

Mrs. Granbery, Mrs. E. E. White, and Miss Ruth Horn will accompany Dr. Granbery to Dallas this afternoon.

W. C. A. CONDUCTS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

The Cabinet members of the Young Women's Christian Association of the College are conducting a drive for members yesterday and today. They maintain a desk on the second floor near the east stairway. All girls of the College are invited to join the Chapter as either active or associate members. Ladies of the town are also invited to become associate members. Membership cards can be obtained at the desk on second floor. A cabinet member will be there or call at the office of the Misses of Women. The drive will close tonight.

ASSISTANT ADDED TO BUSINESS OFFICE FORCE

Miss Ophelia Steele will be added to the working force in the Business Office this morning. Miss Steele comes to the College from the K. Carter School of this city having resigned to take up her work at the college. She is a College graduate and has had several years of business experience.

DR. HORN TO RETURN FIRST OF NEXT WEEK

President Horn will return to the college the first of next week from Greenville and other points in Texas. He has been attending a meeting of the State School Heads at that place. He also attended the Dedication of a new Building at the State Teachers College at Commerce.

FORMER TECH STUDENT MARRIES

Hugh Bourland, a student in the College during the first term was married Thursday at Vernon. Bourland was a good man on a Mata-dor school who he left school and showed fine form in all games he played in Friends of Hugh wish him a happy voyage on the sea of matrimony.

STUDENT DIRECTORY TO BE OUT MONDAY

The first student directory of Texas Tech will be off the press Monday and ready for distribution to the students. It will contain the name, home address, Lubbock street address and telephone number of each student of the College. It will be similar to those put out by many of the large schools of the state.

The material was gathered for the print by two Tech students, Alton Hutson and Scott Turner. They plan to sell the books at the small price of twenty five cents, making only a small profit on them. The supply is limited and all students wanting directories will have a chance to buy them in the Main Building Monday. The merchants of the town will also reserve copies of this first student Directory.

DECLAMATION CONTESTANTS WORKING FOR CONTEST

Contestants in the declamation division of the Davidson Public Speaking Scholarship Contest are hard at work daily and plan to do their best in the trials Wednesday and Thursday. They have had plenty of time to prepare, as the contest has been postponed twice.

Dr. Horn will be back Monday or Tuesday and the Contest will be held January 20 and 21. Ten speakers will be heard each day. Miss Pirtle who has charge of the contest announced that all students are invited to attend the contest which will be in room 202.

BLOOD AND SAND FROM EL TORO

We might know it, but we just didn't know any stock in the rumor that Dan Cupid was registering at Tech this term. At any rate, with the good men down, and several others just on the brink of falling over, things begin to look a trifle serious for this flapper gang out here.

Bourland, first string man on the team, was the second one to get shot, we understand. Chick's name, of course, will go down in history as being the first Tech student to succumb to Cupid's darts, but Bourland is running him a very close second.

Speaking, too, of close seconds: from what we learned the other day a very close second will be made sometime like day after tomorrow. That La Ventura contest has already closed and editor says that picture of the year book will be accepted only a very few days longer. Oh, well, we should worry—the printer will use out picture, anyway.

Faculty club had a rip-roaring time last evening out at the Country Club. Real rustic, the setting was, and just more fun than a little was had.

Now that wasn't so bad! At least, so it seems to us. We may change our tune a trifle when we see our grade, but unless we're mistaken, which we so seldom are, that chemistry quiz wasn't bad at all.

A new brand of American sardines was discovered yesterday noon. It's a funny about this species—they are to be seen only at one time during the day, and for only a few minutes. We rode down on the bus yesterday, and believes us or not, we might well have passed anywhere for a big can of little fish which reminds us that in reality we were.

Toreador gets out this afternoon. Getting to be, as you know, a regular Saturday habit with the old paper, and a pretty good one at that.

Funny it is how many people in town know about the big raid on a poker game, made at Cheri Casa some days ago ended in the shooting of one of the inhabitants of the Casa. But what's funnier, it was so realistic that some people still believe that Elliott was really put into the hospital. Umph!

Them sunshine. That breeze. This clouds. Those beautiful weather. Which is all describing, in part, the atmospheric conditions existing all day yesterday. Wasn't it just grand, and maybe glorio? Made us want to get hold of a spade handle—and—no! Not by a long shot! What we meant was that we felt that "back to nature" urge, and went out to dig some worms for fish bait; not that we were ready to commence shoveling coal!

And then we realize that there wasn't any fishing place around here. But what we do remember is that the other night when those harpists were here we remarked that we'd like to learn to play one of them, so we'd be all ready to take our place in one of those celestial choirs up in the loft, and—

One person, who should know, told us we'd better, sure enough, be spading the garden, because we were more liable to get a job at shoveling that nat playing the harp.

AGED MAN RUN DOWN BY CAR LAST NIGHT

J. W. Lackey, 65 years of age, sustained a broken collar bone and minor bodily injuries when he was struck by an automobile last night at 10:30 o'clock.

The accident occurred at the corner of 10th street and Avenue K when the aged man, blinded by the lights of the approaching car, stepped in front of it and was struck by the right front fender. He was thrown to the paving, and was dazed when occupants of the car rushed him to the West Texas hospital where immediate medical and surgical attention was given him.

The car was not going at more than 15 miles an hour, eye witnesses to the accident said, and the driver of the car saw Mr. Lackey before hitting him but believed he had stopped on the street corner.

Mr. Lackey was going to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Roy Stevenson, at the corner of 17th street and Avenue M when the accident occurred, and was carrying a small hand bag.

It was several minutes after he reached the hospital before he was able to give his name or the whereabouts of his people.

Thousandth Student Is Enrolled at Tech

Texas' newest educational institution yesterday enrolled its thousandth student when Eastin Nelson, who for the past three years has been teaching at Diboll, Texas, was transferred to the Texas Technological College from Stephen F. Austin Teachers College at Nacogdoches.

Registrar Dohoney was elated over the enrollment reaching the one thousand mark, and believes that Texas Tech has established a record for enrollment never before achieved by an educational institution of its rank during an initial term.

Students in the college are exhibiting a wonderful spirit despite the lack of historic background which is possessed by other educational institutions of Texas, and an atmosphere of enthusiasm prevailed throughout the institution yesterday.

Barker Company At Plainview Gives Party

The L. P. Barker Motor Company of Plainview, one of the big automobile concerns of the Panhandle, was host to the people of Plainview and surrounding territory Friday night at a big party at which nearly five hundred were in attendance, according to Jim T. Douglass, south plains representative of the Automobile Finance Company at Galveston, who returned to his home here last night after attending the party.

An old fiddlers reunion was conducted in connection with the program, and the veterans furnished appropriate music for the square dance and other old time features on the program.

The entire second floor of the large automobile company building was cleared of all stocks and parts and converted into a dance pavilion, where the square dances were enjoyed until a late hour.

Automobile men from Lubbock, Amarillo, Floydada and other towns on the plains were in attendance, and assured officials of the Barker Company that they will look forward to the big party next year with no little eagerness.

The attractive ground floor sales room of the company was used as the reception of guests, and all new Ford models were displayed.

NEW YORK FINANCE BY TODD W. WRIGHT

United News Financial Editor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Following the generosity of several automobile manufacturers to their stockholders in the way of increased or extra dividends, the failure of the directors of the Hudson Company to declare anything but the regular quarterly disbursement was a keen disappointment to Wall street Friday.

Earnings of the Hudson Company in 1924 broke all previous records and the outlook for this year is particularly bright. Under such conditions the financial community had expected something handsome from the directors.

The disappointing news was announced early in the afternoon and acted as a bomb in the stock market, where the general list was valiantly fighting efforts of professionals to start the earlier decline in motion.

Prices broke sharply, with Hudson leading the toboggan slide. Traders were too disappointed to offer much support and stop loss orders which were caught on the decline added to the momentum of the down rush. The result was that numerous new lows for the year were recorded when the gong finally ended the disaster for the day.

The solving of the recently popular cross word puzzles is nothing to the problem presented by the current stock market for it has developed into nothing more nor less than a huge puzzle.

One can make two guesses and have the satisfaction of knowing that one of them is likely to be right. Even the professional prognosticators are tired of expressing opinions, now, the substance of their remarks are "It might go up and then again it might go down."

The brunt of Friday's selling was borne by the International section was natural, due to the heaviness of the motors. Professionals found it easy to widen their selling operations to other groups in that section of the market and while the rails escaped with less severe punishment, they too joined in the decline.

GOLF IS CROWDING BASEBALL OUT OF RUNNING

By United News

DETROIT, Jan. 15.—Bring the boys of America back to the sand lots was the keynote of the annual convention of the National Amateur Baseball Federation here Friday.

To renew and stimulate interest in baseball among boys under 16, delegates voted to carry their case to Washington.

Boys who once played baseball from March to October have deserted their baseball suits and bats and gloves for plus fours, niblicks and the more sophisticated game of golf, according to a general sentiment among delegates. The sand lots of the country are vacant, while the youth of the nation flocks to golf links. It is time, in the opinion of the federation, that something was done.

Trousers Will Take Place of Breeches For Army Officers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Secretary of War Davis has saved the peace time army from another of the horrors of war.

As a result of an order issued Thursday officers and enlisted men hereafter "may wear uniform trousers instead of breeches, at all times when the uniform, except when in formation, under arms, when mounted or when on duty for which breeches with leggings or boots are especially prescribed." This was explained, will save the officers from uncomfortable boots and leggings while riding their swivel chairs.

ENGLAND WORKS HARD TO WIN SEAPLANE CUP

LONDON, Jan. 15.—To capture the Schneider Cup for seaplane racers next year Great Britain is planning to construct three racers each capable of 270 miles an hour or better.

No expense or pains, it is declared, are to be spared in Britain's efforts to lift the cup. The Air Ministry has already invited a number of firms to submit plans for machines capable of meeting the requirements for speed.

The designs which are accepted will be built for the Air Ministry and will be loaned to the constructors for participation in the race, if it is believed after tests that they are fast enough to stand a fair chance of winning.

A modern wood-working machine will turn out a perfect baseball bat in 30 seconds.

To prevent automobiles from skidding a device has been invented which discharges sand in front of the rear wheels when required.

GIVE ALL TO GOD—“And the angel of Jehovah called unto him out of heaven, and said, * * * Lay not thy hand upon the lad, * * * For now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son * * * from me.” Gen. 22:11-12.

NOW ITS ALUMINUM

Senator Walsh, who probed the Tea Pot Dome scandal, is at the head of another Senate Committee to investigate the Aluminum Company of America, and the relation of Secretary Mellon thereto.

The facts in this case seem to warrant an investigation, and the resolution to do so was not seriously opposed. This company was brought into court in 1912 charged with monopolistic practices. The case was settled by an agreement to discontinue discriminatory practices against competitors. In 1922 the Federal Trade Commission was directed to inquire into certain similar complaints, and reached a conclusion that the company had violated the court decree of 1912. The report was sustained by the attorney general, but he found it necessary to continue the investigation because of the law of limitations.

The evidence against the corporation was locked up in the files of the commission and on a vote of three to two this body has refused to release it to the Department of Justice. However, the commission has given the department access to all evidence in its possession against a firm competing with the Aluminum Company of America.

The situation is without precedent. Its implications are of such a character as to not only shake public confidence in the Federal Trade Commission but to indicate undue influence from some powerful source.

TOUGH ON MASHERS

Those who would “ply the avocation of a flirt or masher” find little opportunity for that sideline of activity in the town of Abilene, Texas, if an ordinance recently passed by the municipal authorities is strictly enforced.

Quite a number of such regulations have been made in various cities and towns, but it appears that the Abilene fathers have tried hard to construct a model ordinance covering the offenses sought to be suppressed. How well they have succeeded may be judged by the following extracts from the law:

“It shall be unlawful for any person to idle and loiter on any street or thoroughfare, sidewalk, or alley, or in any store, theatre, motor car, motion picture show, business house, or in the entrance or doorway of any place within the corporate limits of the city of Abilene for the purpose of plying the avocation of a flirt or masher.

“It shall be unlawful for any man in the city of Abilene to stare, or to make what is commonly known as googoo eyes at, or in any other manner look at or make remarks to or concerning, or cough or whistle at, or do any other act to attract the attention of any woman upon or traveling along any of the sidewalks, streets, or public ways of the city of Abilene with an intent or in a manner calculated to annoy such woman.”

MEXICO'S OIL LAWS

During the various and sudy Mexican revolutions, said to have been precipitated by competing American oil interests who found that an easy method of obtaining governmental concession, certain American capitalists acquired large landed interests, the title to which has long been a subject of dispute.

In 1917 the reorganized Mexican government adopted a new constitution which included a clause providing that “only Mexicans by birth or naturalization and Mexican companies have the right to acquire ownership in lands” or concessions to develop mines, or mineral fuels in the republic of Mexico. The Constitution provides however, that the government may grant certain rights to foreigners, providing they conform to Mexican laws, under penalty of forfeiture to the nation of property so acquired.

During the negotiations of 1923 preceding American recognition, it is claimed that Mexican officials agreed that this Constitutional article should not be construed to apply to legitimate oil rights acquired by American citizens before the Constitution was adopted.

Recently the Mexican government has adopted a new land law and petroleum bill which our State Department construes to be retroactive and in violation of the agreements entered into and threatens to place in jeopardy property of Americans valued at $500,000,000.

Secretary Kellogg has entered a vigorous protest through Ambassador Sheffield, demanding protection for property of American citizens, under threat of withdrawal of the American recognition. While Mexico is putting up the bars on foreign exploitation it is believed the parties interested will, with the help of Uncle Sam, effect an amicable adjustment.

SURPLUS FARM CROPS

Due to overproduction of several farm crops last year, particularly cotton and corn, with the inevitable lowering of prices, plans for relieving the situation thus created are being earnestly considered by farm organizations and government agencies.

Bills looking to federal assistance in disposing of surplus crops are being proposed in Congress while farm bureaus and other similar bodies are urging a curtailment of acreage to be devoted to certain products next year.

That something should be done toward stabilizing prices of farm products is indisputable. Just what ought to be done, or can be done, presents a difficult problem.

The natural tendency of production of a given crop to “see-saw” is well known. A short crop in one year causes higher prices which encourage larger planting the next year. Then, if weather conditions are especially favorable, great overproduction results, and prices tumble, often causing the farmer to suffer an actual loss, in spite of his big crop.

Theoretically, the farmers have the regulation of crop production in their own hands, through greater diversification and the limiting of acreage devoted to crops likely to show a surplus. But it is hard to secure cooperation on a large scale. This is well illustrated by a study of cotton acreage, which has increased steadily in spite of repeated and insistent warnings from year to year.

Co-operative marketing has secured good results in many instances, but even cooperative marketing can afford only a small measure of relief. When there is a great surplus of any crop throughout the world, the law of supply and demand will govern prices to a large extent, in spite of all the artificial means which may be devised to stabilize them.

MUSCLE SHOALS POWER

Although the prospects for final disposition of Muscle Shoals by Congress in the near future are not particularly bright, it is of interest to the public to know that the power now being generated there is being devoted to useful purposes.

Through a temporary arrangement between the government and the Alabama Power Company, the power from the units already installed and in operation has been sent to relieve the shortage in those states caused by the recent severe drouth.

Requests have been made to the War Department urging that other Muscle Shoals units be similarly utilized when installed, so that this power may be of some benefit to the South during the time which must elapse before Congress shall agree upon a permanent policy for the project.

While a joint resolution providing for a Committee of Congress to invite bids has passed the House, there may be considerable opposition in the Senate, where Senator Norris has introduced a bill providing for government operation.

Whether a definite settlement of this long standing and vexatious question can be made at the present session is a matter over which there is much difference of opinion but it is gratifying to know that an arrangement has been made whereby industries of the South may derive some benefit from Muscle Shoals power in the meantime.

WANTS GOVERNMENT OPERATION

Senator Norris bill for the operation of Muscle Shoals power and fertilizer plant will meet the approval of the people, but will be opposed by those who demand that the government keep out of business—except in certain instances. Senator Norris, plan provides that the Secretary of War shall develop the power system and turn it over to a governmental corporation; that the fertilizer operations shall be conducted by the Secretary of Agriculture and the product sold to farmers at a minimum profit. The plant should pay for itself in 50 years, and after that, the profits would go into the United States treasury.

It is a simple business plan under which the government and the farmers should profit but that very fact entails the hostility of influential interests who see an opportunity to double their money within a very short time.

Many there are who recall the Centennial Exposition held at Philadelphia fifty years ago this summer when people flocked to that city from all parts of the world to view the splendors and marvels of science and invention. This was in commemoration of the first hundred years of the independence of the United States. Another fifty years of history has been made and next summer the same city plans to open its gates to the people of the world in commemoration of the sesquicentennial. In the name of the republic the President, has issued invitations to all nations to participate in this celebration, and to witness evidences of our material and social progress during the last fifty years. Plans involving participation by every state in the Union on elaborate scale are being perfected and it will no doubt be the greatest event of the kind in the world's history.

The modern jazz world knows little of Stephen C. Foster, but he was the author of many melodies that are dear to the hearts of millions of old-timers. Among them are “My Old Kentucky Home,” “The Old Folks at Home,” “Massa in the Cold, Cold Ground” and other favorites of a bygone day. Mr. Foster was born near Pittsburgh, Pa., just 100 years ago and died in New York City in early manhood. Many fraternal and patriotic organizations are arranging programs to include these old melodies in commemoration of the centennial of his birth.

Under a new law Russia's poorer peasants will be exempted from taxation, while the more prosperous ones will have to pay increased levies.

Six Years Old Today

DINNER STORIES

A young couple had been courting for several years, and the young man seemed to be in no hurry to marry. Finally, one day, he said: "Well, I canna marry thee." "How's that?" asked she. "I've changed my mind," said he. "Well, I'll tell thee what we'll do," said she. "If folks know that it's thee as has given me up I shanna be able to get another chap; but if they think I've given thee up then I can get all I want. So we'll have banns published and when the wedding day comes the parson will say to thee, 'Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?' and thou must say: 'I will.' And when he says to me, 'Wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?' I shall say, 'I winna.'"

The day came, and when the minister asked the important question the man answered: "I will."

Then the parson said to the woman: "Wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?" and she said: "I will."

"Why," said the young man furiously, "you said you would say 'I winna.'"

"I know that," said the young woman, "but I've changed my mind since."

The preacher's evening discourse was dry and long, and the congregation gradually melted away. The sexton tipped up to the pulpit and slipped a note under one corner of the Bible. It read: "When you are through, will you please turn off the lights, lock the door, and put the key under the mat?"

SO THINK WE

We think that clothes do not make the man, but some times nice clothes has a tendency to make a fellow fit in better where rags would not.

We think that when the days get longer Herbert Hoover may be able to handle several more departments in the national government.

We think that an alarm clock is very much like a person holding a public office. They are blanked if they do and they are blanked if they don't.

We think that more of the friends of the boot leggers die suddenly than any other class of people.

We think that some of the clouds we see in the north may be merely soft coal smoke.

We think that if Senator Borah agrees with himself it must certainly be something unusual. He never agrees with anyone else.

We think from the bargains that the business men of this city are offering that it would pay you to do your Christmas shopping now. Its only 343 days till Christmas anyway.

We think that a fellow is unwise to boast about being boss at his home and then invite his friend home with him to dinner.

We think that if more men and women would show more concern about the boys and girls that are going to the dogs, than they do about men coming from monkeys the world would be better.

We think that the weatherman certainly is smiling upon the people of the South Plains.

We think that there will be seven or eight men defeated for sheriff in Lubbock county this year.

We think as long as what are considered law abiding citizens will criticize the peace officers for arresting men who have violated the laws of the state, it will be a rather hard proposition to break up the ring of crime that encircles the nation.

We think every good citizen should make up their mind to vote.

We think that good citizens should never excuse themselves from jury service in criminal cases. The attorneys may reject you. You cannot help that. But you have shown a willingness on your part.

We think that Lubbock is about the liveliest city in the Panhandle and the South Plains, and a trip out among the other towns would probably be very convincing. Visit other places and come back to Lubbock satisfied.

IT IS REPORTED

That officials of the Borden Milk condensing company are going to make a tour of the plains at an early date, and we believe that the people of Lubbock should get in touch with them, and have them see Lubbock country. A milk condensing plant here would lend much aid to the development of the dairy industry, which could be made one of the greatest industries of this country.

That many real mortgage lifters are going to be added to the farms of this section this year. The cow, the sow and the hen.

That there is not near the interest shown in the coming farmer's short course that there should be among the farmers. The business men are sold on the importance of the school, but it seems that our farmer friends look upon it with a certain degree of indifference, which we believe is one mistake that will be costly to them if they fail to avail themselves of the experience and tests that these instructors have to give out.

That unless the poll tax payers of this county do, not snap into the line and pay up more generally than they have up to the present date, there will be less than sixty percent of them have a vote next July.

That people are writing to Lubbock every day almost asking about the prospects for oil in this section of the plains.

That less than half of the automobiles in the county have 1926 license plates on them.

That Old Battle ax was here yesterday, and he did not fail to leave plenty of evidence of his being here on the side walks.

That people are in Lubbock every day looking for small modern dwelling houses in which to live.

That a number of men will enter the race for the office of sheriff within the next few days.

TIMELY WORLD VIEWS ON TOPICS

"Study Actual Behavior of Men," Is Advice of Columbia Deans To Future Lawyers

"The law student of the future will be taught to study the behavior of men as well as the law of the century," predicted Dean Huger W. Jervey, dean of the law school of Columbia University, in his annual report to President Nicholas M. Butler of the university.

"The attempt to get under and behind the applicable legal rule and to illuminate it by a study of the particular social or economic phenomenon it purports to control through listing the special co-operation of the economist, the sociologist, the philosopher, is indicative of the present-day trend of our ablest legal scholars on the bench, at the bar and in the law school, toward the function and content of the law," Dean Jervey continued.

"Logic System at Fault"
The law, to be useful and certain and just, must have a logical symmetry of its own so that men's conduct may be guided with reasonable confidence and security. But the question is whether, in some fields of the law at least, the premises of the traditional logic system have not become false or incomplete statements in themselves, thus bringing it about that the consequent conclusion, though logical in form, bears no relation to reality. "The confusion caused by the abandonment of the established or so-called logical rule in those limited instances where it shall clearly appear that the rule is not working well here and now would be a small price to pay for the law's readjustment to the realities around us. And surely in its last state it will be more certainly predictable, as well as reasonable, than in the first."

"The task of going on is plainly the task of the graduate schools and research scholars in our colleges of law. It is not proposed to construct any encyclopedic statement of society and law's present deficiency—such a statement might well be a desirable even if it were written. Society changes as men write and the new and liberalizing truth of today may become the hampering dogma of tomorrow."

"The desirable thing to be achieved in spirit and method. To investigate some of the major fields and to do our bit toward where reform still seem to be needed, but above all to infuse into our own thinking and the thinking of the men we school the penetrating understanding that our material for study is the actual behavior of men as well as the law reports that deal with that behavior—such an objective is quite ambitious enough."

Mrs. Clara Hamrick of Shawnee, Okla., aged 106, recently became the wife of her fifth husband, who is 76.

St. Louis policemen are credited with having made 2,712 arrests last year.

ALL I SAID

"I wish you'd hold your tongue," said she, "such dreadful things you say!"

"I don't know how many friends of ours you've driven away!"

"You're always blurting out your thoughts with words that bite and burn. But all my preaching does no good. It seems you'll never learn!"

"Well, mother, what's the matter now? What is it that I've said?"

"You know," she answered with a sigh and sadly shook her head. "That woman won't come here again."

SLATON TIGERS EASILY DEFEAT HIGH SCHOOL WESTERNERS LAST EVENING ON SLATON COURT WITH 24-15 SCORE

The Slaton Tigers drew blood from the Lubbock high school Westerners last evening at their home court, beating out the Lubbock high school Westerners with a 24-15 score getting sweet revenge from the defeat the Tigers suffered at Lubbock some few days ago.

The mighty offensive attacks of the Tigers together with light defense was the cause of the victory from the beginning until the final whistle was blown.

Kendricks and Hamilton were easily the two outstanding players for the evening both made 6 field goals and being responsible for the entire score of the Slaton Tigers.

Hays, usually high point man for the Westerners was taken from the game in the early part with an injured foot.

The second team of the Westerners defeated the second team of the Tigers with a 32 to 16 count just prior to the regular game.

The line-up—

Slaton	Position	Lubbock
Hamilton	F	Hays
Tunnell	F	Adkisson
Kendricks	F	Reed
Huckabay	G	Ing
Stone	G	Allen

Substitutes—For Slaton, none; for Lubbock, Pruitt for Hays, Hardberger for Allen.

YOUNG BOB FITZSIMMONS EASILY DEFEATED IN 10 ROUNDS—FIRST APPEARANCE A DISAPPOINTMENT

By FRANK GETTY
United News Staff Correspondent
MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Young Bob Fitzsimmons proved only a slight slip-off of the old Bob Friday night when he was easily beaten in a 10 round bout by Jack Delaney.

Making his first appearance against a heavyweight, Delaney proved a decided disappointment, but at that he was much too good for the ungainly Fitzsimmons.

Missing badly throughout the fight, the Bridgeport boxer got home often enough to the head with overhead right chops to keep the New Jersey heavyweight on the defensive through most of the fight.

It was one of the slowest fights in the new garden, where young Bob's illustrious father would have fought to glory if there had been such edifices in his day.

Fitzsimmons' advertised left hand proved ineffective against Delaney who kept his distance throughout most of the battle, outboxing young Bob whenever the latter would mix it.

On his showing Friday night Delaney is capable of outpointing most of the country's heavyweights, but he had none of the fire, speed and punch that he showed against Berlenbach.

They fell each other gingerly in the first round with neither landing a telling blow. Twice Fitzsimmons got some heavy rights, but the blows had no effect upon Delaney. Jack was trying to get home at long range with his right, but young Bob was exceedingly cautious and covered up whenever Jack opened up.

In the second round the Bridgeport boxer began to score with his left to Fitzsimmons' head. Young Bob was fighting on the defensive and spent most of the time brushing nervously at the end of his nose.

Delaney landed a heavy right and was slipping Bob's left past his head and countering with stiff lefts to the New Jersey heavyweight's head. Several times in the third round Jack made Fitzsimmons look foolish and sank his right in Bob's body.

Askew
Fitzsimmons stumbled awkwardly about the ring in the fourth, unable to land on the clever light heavyweight, who bided his time and caught Bob with a right hook to the jaw which dropped the Jersey man to the canvas. Fitzsimmons caught hold of Jack as he fell and dragged him down with him. Both were up before the count started, but Bob was groggy and twice more Delaney shot his right to the jaw, making Bob's knee sag.

The fifth became where the fourth left off, with Delaney shooting his left to the body and an over hand right to the jaw without return, Jack was making a monkey out of young Bob who was supposed to be a clever boxer for a heavyweight. He made Fitzsimmons miss and landed several light blows of his own but it was a slow round.

Both missed badly during the sixth and the crowd began to complain loudly. Fitzsimmons landed the only telling blow, a right to the jaw, Jack's lip was badly swollen.

Speed
Young Bob tried to force the fight in the seventh. Jack straightened him up a couple of times with lefts to the head but kept missing with his right.

Delaney lacked his usual speed. He shot a solid right to the body and two to the jaw, while Bob failed to land a hard blow.

Delaney was missing again in the eighth and the crowd began to yell for Bob. The Jersey man smashed his left repeatedly to Jack's face which was bleeding badly. Delaney put a right to the jaw, but Bob snatched and scored with lefts at long range, having the better of the round.

Encouraged by his success, Fitzsimmons began to bore in with his left and twice drove Delaney to the ropes. The Bridgeport boy put several punching rights to the head and slowed up Bob, who began to play for the body.

Jack continued wild and fitful, Delaney forced him to the ropes, but did little damage. Delaney was missing with a right uppercut, which he swung repeatedly for the jaw.

A right chop opened a bad cut over Fitzsimmons' left eye and he bled copiously. Just before the fight ended, Bob ripped a wicked left to the body and another to the jaw.

PRO FOOTBALL
By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)
NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—After lengthy deliberation and comprehensive consideration the moral doctors of college football reached the conclusion that the professional game was beyond their means of control.

Those who did not share the opinion of the radicals that it was a well developed cancer on the vitals of the college game believed that it was a mild form of infection with dangerous symptoms.

Each group, during the winter deliberations, faced the question—"What can be done about it?" and they were forced to answer—"We don't know."

After some noising around in which a flock of opinions were picked up from various sources, the attitude of the public seems to be—"Well, what of it?"

If professional football is to be killed and if the temptation of college players to turn professional is to be removed, the attitude of the public will have to be changed.

Discussing the professional game and its character, Knute Rockne, the level-minded Notre Dame coach, said:

"It looks as if the public wants professional football and the American public usually gets what it wants."

No college can dictate to a graduate what profession he must follow when he leaves the campus. Even the strict discipline of the Army and Naval Academies cannot force a Cadet or a Midshipman to follow the service even when he has been commissioned. There is only the moral obligation and the duty of graduate to force him to do so.

There are graduates of law schools who are not making their living at the bar. There are graduate doctors who are not practicing medicine, and there are skilled engineers who are not laboring over blue prints. The natural inclination is to follow the line that will bring in the most money.

How then can any influence be brought to bear upon a graduate, who has only a general A. B. or B. S. degree to follow any particular profession?

The most violent critics of professional football admit that there is no disgrace attached to association with the game. Talk to any one of the majority party of neutrals in the discussion and a great many of them will tell you—

"Red Grange would have been a winner if he did not accept his opportunity. I wish I had a chance to pick up $50,000 three months after I left school."

GOLF
TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 11.—A host of golf stars will battle for honors in Florida during the present winter sports season.

Various Florida cities will be resented this winter by famous golf stars. Cyril Walker is at Winter Haven; Jim Barnes is planning to be at Tampa; Gene Sarazen and Mike Brady at Miami; Walter Hagen at St. Petersburg; Willie McFarlane at Hollywood and Johnny Farr II, Bobby Jones and Watts Gunn are expected to tour the state.

The main attraction for professional golf stars is the Winter Professional Championship Tourney which will be held at St. Augustine, March 18-20. The Florida East Coast Women's Golf Championship tournament will be held at St. Augustine, March 2-4, and the winter golf championship of Florida at St. Augustine, March 23-27.

Other tournaments are scheduled for St. Petersburg, Clearwater, Tampa, Miami, Palm Beach and Daytona.

A special train carrying 200 golfers will invade the state March 4 for a tour of the various Florida courses.

BASEBALL
By EDWARD C. DERR
CHICAGO, Jan. 11.—Baseball fans in the Windy City have their hearts set on a championship contender for the 1926 season in the major leagues—and they may get it.

Not that anybody expects the White Sox to actually ride in at the top of the heap in either the American or National Leagues, but they do hope that one of Chicago's big league entries will have to be reckoned with.

Chicago has always been one of the greatest baseball towns in the country. The fans take their baseball out here not very much unlike college students take their football.

And Chicago fans are tired of having their favorites in the second division, which is what they've had to accept ever since the unfortunate season of 1910 wrecked the powerful White Sox machine.

As an indication of the feeling about the baseball situation, one Chicago newspaper conducted a contest in its sporting pages, requesting readers to offer suggestions to Charles Comiskey and William Veckhoven respectively of the Sox and Cubs. The contest brought surprising response, thousands of persons sending in their ideas on what should be done to give Chicago a pennant contender. The letters were turned over to the club owners, but since most of the suggestions called for the expenditure of vast sums of money with which to buy new players it is not likely that they will be followed any further than the pure strings will stretch.

But the letters brought forth two things: First, that most of the fans think the White Sox have a better chance to finish high in their league than the Cubs have in theirs—despite the fact the Cubs mangled the Sox in the last city series, and second, that Eddie Collins has won his way into the hearts of Chicago fans.

This fellow Collins, of course, is one of the best-known and best-liked players that ever played ball; but until he assumed the managerial reins he was never fully appreciated in Chicago. Taking a team that finished in the cellar in 1924, Collins led his men to great heights in the last season and flashed in fifth place only because he himself was out of the game during the closing weeks of the campaign with an injured leg. But he demonstrated the fact that he was a great leader of men as well as one of the greatest second basemen in the history of the game and his place in the hearts of Chicago's fans is now secure. Among the thousands of letters that were sent in to the newspaper not one of them suggested removing Collins.

PRESIDENT FAVORS LEASING LARGE DIRIGIBLE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—President Coolidge would be inclined to accept an offer from private interests to lease the dirigible Los Angeles provided it were assured that the ship would be operated in a way satisfactory to the government. Some talk of this occurred before the Shenandoah disaster but that seemed to kill interest. Under the terms of the agreement with Germany, the United States can not use the Los Angeles for military purposes.

At the capitol Friday, aviation enthusiasts were interested to learn of a bill being prepared by Representative Wainwright, New York republican, which would carry out some of the ideas advanced by Colonel William Mitchell.

Advocacy of Mitchell's ideas by Wainwright has considerable significance as he formerly in the war department, as assistant secretary during the Harding administration. Major General Patrick chief of the air service, and number of experts, assisted in preparation of the measure. The bill would provide a separate air corps, almost on equal footing with the army and navy, increase the personnel to 40,000 men and provide a separate promotion list.

many as were seized during the entire preceding fiscal year.

White House spokesman: "I have nothing to say."

Senator Cole Bleese, South Carolina, democrat, (in great disgust) Great God! What a country.

Both wets and dries used the eye of prohibition birthday as a pretext for continuing the inhibition. It all contributed to great national debate over prohibition preparing the ground for the eventual showing in congress.

Senator Bleese entertained the crowded senate during the afternoon with select and uninhibited comments on prohibition.

He read a newspaper account of a raid on a night club here in which the police let a diplomat go and arrested a woman companion.

He said some diplomats are "feeding liquor to women, debauching women, and keeping open houses of ill fame."

"When you read about those things don't you think that the poor fellow down in the field plowing with a one eyed ox thinks he ought to have the right to do the same thing?"

"Liquor is sent over from Baltimore and delivered to the embassies where they can drink all they want, while the poor devil digger when he tries to take a little appetizer is nabbed by a dirty scoundrel who is a w* of the government and calls himself a prohibition agent."

"That same officer, when he sees a foreigner in an embassy, sitting back in his fine decorated clothes, and drinking wines ad champagne, bows down before him and smiles 'good morning, Mr. Ambassador.'"

"Great God, what a country."

"When I get back to South Carolina, I'm going to tell them about some of the things they are going on here in Washington."

Bleese had been charged, he said, with carrying liquor on his hip in his home state.

"I never carried much," he said, "but I did drink it."

The senator is a curiosity in congress because he says frankly to his constituents that he is personally wet but officially votes dry because he believes the majority of his constituents are dry. Plenty of senators and congressmen vote dry and drink wet but they try to keep the latter fact secret.

"The only man who thinks we've got prohibition," Bleese continued, "is the poor devil who hasn't got any money to buy liquor."

"Why bootleggers come right into senate office buildings. They come right into the house office building. They come right under the dome of the capitol."

Wayne Wheeler in an anniversary statement, mentioned these as results of prohibition.

Consumption of alcohol intoxicants, before the prohibition was more than twice the present total production of denatured alcohol.

Census figures show 55 per cent decrease in drunkenness in 1923 over 1910.

Death rate has declined two per cent and pauperism at lowest point in history.

HAS LIVED HIS LIFE IN ALLEYS BUT JIMMY SMITH BASKS IN THE LIMELIGHT OF FAME

By NORMAN E. BROWN
Jimmy Smith, grand old man of the bowling game, is making his annual exhibition tour, demonstrating to the temple public the fine arts of the gentle sport.

And despite his age—for Jimmy boasts of some white hairs and quite a few years—he has proved his greatness once more by setting up, on his present tour, a new world's record for scoring by rolling a total of 7,311 pins for 30 games, an average of 243 pins to the game.

When one takes into consideration the fact that the average star bowler who is rated as a first-class man is glad to turn in a 243 game a few times a season, Smith's achievement looms as remarkable indeed.

Smith is probably the best known and greatest match bowler the game has produced. His career as a bowler who is rated as a "fair" conditions has made him popular.

Sixteen Scores of 300
In his career as a bowler Smith has turned in 16 perfect games—16 games in which every ball clean the alleys.

He holds the world's record for a three-game score in a tournament, a mark of 771, made in a tournament some 12 or 15 years ago in Toledo, O.

In 1911, in the American bowling congress tournament, he won, every event. Nine years later, in 1920, he duplicated this feat and now stands as the only man ever to accomplish that feat twice.

However, the remarkable part of Smith's fame as a bowler is the fact that he has piled up his great records while bowling on various and assorted alleys from one end of the country to the other, and on some in foreign lands.

Smith long ago learned to know the "feel" of any alley almost on the first ball. Failure of that first ball to "hook" as expected indicates to Smith quite clearly the presence of a "groove" in the alley.

This groove, of course, works to the advantage of the home team. Ordinarily this does not bother Smith because, having once found the groove himself, he can play it. He does, however, discourage the tendency of a few devotees of the game to favor such home stars by permitting their alleys to become so "marked."

Hurts the Local Star
"This is most unfair to the home bowlers than to the visitor, in a way," remarked Smith to me several years ago. "When the local bowler essays to try his hand on some foreign alley he is entirely at a loss—is unable to control his ball. He has perfected the proper 'hook' to carry the ball down a given 'groove' and can not control it on a fresh planned alley."

Smith, however, takes the alleys as he finds them. And he takes his scores that way, too. An off day fails to perturb him. He has rolled a few games as low as the 162 mark he scored in his present tour.

ATTORNEY GENERAL MOODY WANTS ACTION

By United News
AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 15.—Attorney General Dan Moody's ultimatum to the state highway commission for cancellation of road maintenance in 31 counties was in the hands of the commission Friday but no action was taken.

Hal Mosley, chairman, announced that not until communication had been carefully studied would its contents be divulged and Moody declined to discuss the matter until the highway commissioners were ready to give him an answer.

W. P. Kempner Friday became acting state highway engineer succeeding R. J. Hank, whose resignation was requested by the highway commission two weeks ago.

SILENT CAL CAN'T CRITICIZE FIRST PRESIDENT

By United News
WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The private life of George Washington, exposed amid much protest by Rupert Hughes, the author, was commented upon at the White House in the senate chamber Friday.

Asked what he thought of Hughes' speech which he said that Washington was "a dancer, carser and distiller of whiskey," President Coolidge smiled, looked out of the executive office window toward the Washington, and said:

"I see the monument is still there."

Senator Cole Bleese, South Carolina, democrat, in referring to Washington's farewell address during a speech against the world court declared:

"The old man must have been at a champagne supper the night before he wrote this speech."

WORLD COURT CRITIC MAY START FILIBUSTER

throwing the responsibility for holding up a vote upon the court's opponents. If the opposition group carries on at great length, it can be charged with filibustering. It was the action of world court advocates that brought Bleese to the floor.

Senator Ferris, Michigan, democrat, was granted a few minutes to express his views in favor of the court, but he is the last. Its advocates hereafter will remain silent.

Senator Borah, leader of the opposition, and his handful of followers, have been encouraged recently by a steady stream of telegrams endorsing their stand. Borah still believes he may swing enough votes behind him to beat the court, if he can get time to air the subject thoroughly. For this reason it appears that he and his group will not be daunted by charges of filibustering.

One of those famous filibusters of the past may be matched in the next few weeks in the senate, with opponents of the court reading chapters from current novels, or soothing the agitated friends of the court with lines from the poets.

Bleese was a likely selection by the irreconcilables Friday, as he displayed an ability for talking fascinatingly on a number of subjects which is the sign of the real filibuster. Senator Reed, Missouri, democrat, is another. During the ship subsidy, filibuster in the House of Representatives, he spoke for hours about British influence in the Caribbean, delivering a lecture, with a series of maps and a ready pointer to make his discourse readily understood.

Borah's belief that public opinion is behind those who oppose the court is shared by Bleese.

Must Tell Truth
"If the senators would go out in their respective districts and tell the truth about this court," he said, "they wouldn't come back here. I know who's who's coming back. I am going into every county in South Carolina and tell the truth about the court."

He referred to his colleague, Senator Smith, who favors the court.

It appears now that the tax bill will not be taken up in the senate before the middle of next week, or perhaps later. The court will be the business of the senate up that time. Its opponents as neatly prevent a vote now, and after the tax bill is disposed of will have to shoulder the responsibility again.

Apparently desiring more air, a movie elephant at Hollywood knocked the end out of the house in which he was kept, but made no attempt to escape.

Miss Mary Childen, school teacher at Spencer, N. C., administered 99 whippings in one day, of which one boy received 9, the next 7, and so on down the line.

Children of Jacob Bunn, whose Springfield, L., bank failed in 1878 are voluntarily paying about $800,000 to heirs of depositors who lost through the failure.

Harmon Morris of Atlanta is paying his way through college by taking care of children evenings when their parents wish to go out.

Little Tots Will Be Given Class Here Monday

Monday morning when the doors of the Lubbock public schools swing open to welcome the nearly four thousand students of the city, little tots who were seven years of age or before January 1 who have not experienced the "good old school days" will be welcomed at the K. Carter school where a special class, arranged for their benefit and of which Miss Katie Bell Crump will have charge, will be open to them.

Parents of the little fellows are urged to see that they report at the school in time for enrollment in the class Monday morning at the regular school hour, and urged to offer the teachers every possible co-operation in making this little class one of the most important units of the great public school system of Lubbock.

Supt. M. H. Duncan is elated over the possibilities of having a large enrollment in the new class and expressed himself as being highly pleased at securing the services of Miss Crump to take charge of the little ones.

The new class will continue throughout the remainder of this school term and the regular work for students of this age will be afforded.

Trigg Funeral To Be Conducted At M. E. Church

Funeral services for Mrs. J. T. Trigg, wife of the local manager of the Gulf Oil and Refining company, will be conducted this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the First Methodist church.

Rev. E. E. White will have charge of the services at the church with members of the Masonic bodies assisting.

Interment will be made in the Lubbock cemetery.

The pall bearers as announced by the funeral directors yesterday are: John Denman, R. E. Hardberger, W. T. Clark, J. T. Collie, Tim Stovall and L. F. Holland.

The ladies of the Wesley class of the First Methodist Sunday school will be grouped in specially reserved places near the casket during the services at the church this afternoon, according to an announcement made yesterday.

The members have realized a great loss at the passing of Mrs. Trigg, who since her first residence in Lubbock has been an active member of the class and one who has done much good in the Sunday school.

BOY SCOUTS TO AID LEGION IN BIG DRIVE

Boy Scouts Troop No. Three, of which O. P. Sensabaugh is scout master, is so thoroughly interested in the membership campaign launched here by the Allen Brothers Post of the American Legion that they are going to make a canvass of Lubbock to ascertain the home addresses of all ex-service men of the city.

Their reports will be turned over to officers of the Legion.

UNUSUAL BUT TRUE
CONSTANTINOPLE—Mevahibe Hanoum, wife of Premier Pasha, has been judged the most meritorious woman in Turkey because she has shunned society to rear her four children. The national assembly made the announcement following a questionnaire from the Texas Women's Club Association.

DETROIT—A bandit who looted the Detroit Savings Bank of $5,000 five weeks ago returned to the same bank Friday and escaped with $5,702. Miss Alice Hunt, a clerk, said she recognized him.

LONDON—Recruits for American choruses are being sought here. They must be five feet three inches to five feet seven inches tall and between 17 and 22 years old. They will start at a salary of twenty pounds a week.

WORLD WILL BE DISAPPOINTED IN LEAGUE'S FAILURE TO BRING ALL POWERS DISARMAMENT AGREEMENT

BY HENRY WOODS
 United News Staff Correspondent.
 Copyright, 1926, by United News.

GENEVA, Jan. 15.—Attaches of the League of Nations are convinced that the world will be disappointed in the results of the league's disarmament efforts.

The assurance of United States participation in the preliminary conference February 15 means that the meeting will mark the world's most serious disarmament effort to date. The problem will be studied by representatives of 18 principal nations representing every continent. But there is frank conviction here that reduction of armaments will be limited to a few.

Even Soviet Russian participation, which is essential to any European limitation of armaments, would not permit disarmament on the scale the more optimistic expect. Pessimism of league attaches is based on two factors.

After five years examination of the problem, the league is convinced that disarmament is not attainable through general agreement, but only as a spontaneous result of establishment of security through the Locarno and other similar agreements yet to come.

The second factor is the divergence of interests among the nations which makes extremely difficult the drafting of an acceptable general plan.

At least six conflicting viewpoints will be presented before the preliminary meeting:

- 1.—United States—Separation of military and naval conferences.
- 2.—France—Disarmament based specifically on mutual assistance agreements which would include industrial as well as actual fighting potentials.
- 3.—Great Britain—Mere special limitation of military, naval and airial units similar to the naval restrictions agreed upon during the Washington conference.

- 4.—Scandinavian—Complete disarmament without obligations to participate in mutual assistances.
- 5.—Germany—Armament equality with the remainder of Europe either through increased German armament or decreased armament elsewhere.
- 6.—South America, Poland, Rumania, Jugo-Slavia, China—Opposition to armament limitations which would prevent the creation of adequate national defenses in South America or the building of navies by the four latter countries, which have become potential naval powers since the war.

Two beneficial potentialities are foreseen in the preliminary meeting; the entire problem will be studied profoundly and there will be a pos-

Clarence Saunders Store to Open Here At 10 This Morning

This morning at 10:00 o'clock the doors of the Clarence Saunders store at 1207 Broadway will be formally opened to the public, and flowers and other favors will be given the visitors.

The store that is being opened here this morning together with a Clarence Saunders store at Louisville, Mississippi, Carthage, Missouri and two stores at Dallas, makes a total of 99 Clarence Saunders stores in all, and others will be opened throughout the country in rapid succession.

M. G. Bourke, traveling representative of the Clarence Saunders stores with headquarters at Memphis, Tenn., is here to assist L. H. Jones and John Kinney, operators of the local store, with the formal opening, and will remain in Lubbock until early next week.

Special music will be furnished for the formal opening of the store today.

The Clarence Saunders store is operated on the self service plan, and everything for the table is included in the large and neatly arranged stock.

ORGANIZED LABOR WINS IN COURT HEARING

What court attaches said was the first Union Labor controversy to be settled in the District Court here was won by the Hotel and Restaurant Employees International Alliance Union here yesterday when District Judge Clark M. Mullican granted an injunction against J. H. Puckett, local restaurant owner, in joining him from displaying a union label in his cafe.

The petition, which was presented by the law firm of Pearce & Tripplett for the plaintiffs, alleged among other things that the defendant had not complied with his contract with the labor union organization, but that he had refused to relinquish a union label sign that was displayed in his restaurant on east Main street.

MANY ODDS—ONE CHANCE
Black Bear had been listening to what Polar said, but there were one or two things that he could not quite understand. He interrupted his neighbor.

"Say, Polar, do you mind if I ask you a question?" he asked, politely. "Certainly not. What do you want to know?"

Polar Bear, as you can see, was a good-natured chap, except when he lost his temper. And, after all, who could blame him for not liking to be a prisoner? Wouldn't it make anybody mad to have to spend his days behind bars?

"Why need you have waited for the berg to drift into port? Why didn't you slide off the block of ice and pull for the shore? Didn't you tell me you were a strong swimmer—that few natives of the deep could beat you at it?" Gypsy was sure he had it straight.

"A very good question, Black Bear," answered Polar. "But have you any idea how far that berg was from land when I woke up? Of course, you haven't, and no more had I. But I knew it must have been some long way when with my single

SHEEP AND MEN
It should be obvious to the observant man or woman that a great many persons go through life with a little thinking as possible.

To the cultivated man, it is amazing how many persons are so willing to accept whatever they read or hear without stopping to think whether it makes sense or confides to their own observations and experience.

Ask the average man why he believes such and such a thing, and the chances are he can't tell you; for he never has thought about it. He is a Democrat or a Republican because his father was; he attends a church of a certain denomination because it was where he was sent in his youth; and any ideas he has about politics, or public affairs are no more than prejudices, which he can not defend.

Thought is man's greatest and most neglected possession. "Nothing, at first view may seem more unbounded than the thought of man, which not only escapes all human power and authority, but is not even restrained within the limits of nature and reality," David Hume observed.

To form monsters, and join incongruous shapes and appearances, costs the imagination no more trouble than to conceive the most natural and familiar objects.

And while the body is confined to one planet, along which it creeps with pain and difficulty, the thought can in an instant transport us into the most distant regions of the universe; or even beyond the universe.

What never was seen, or heard of, may yet be conceived; nor is anything beyond the power of thought, except what implies absolute contradiction.

Man is a more perfect animal than the rest because he has better reasoning powers.

However, few men utilize their reasoning powers; most act blindly, like automatons.

Is your mind your own? Then you are different from other men.

Thinking for yourself, acting as YOU think best, is like swimming UP stream, and most men are content to drift along what is known as public opinion, with no more individuality than a sheep, an animal that must have a leader.

eye I could not sight the icefields. And Bear sense told me I had better take a chance on the berg than in the sea. Strong swimmer as I was, I could hardly hope to reach shores that were many miles away. I would have tried and once wearing overtook me, my strokes would lose their strength—I would grow cold and by and by I would be frozen. Then what would become of me? I know only too well: Down, down, down I would have sunk to the bottom of the sea, and I had no notion to meet with such a fate before I had to, even if the berg was growing smaller and smaller."

Black Bear at this point asked another question.

"That makes the second time you have said that, Polar. Why was that berg growing smaller and smaller?" "Was melting, of course. Don't tell me, Gypsy, that wise Bear as you are, you have never heard that water melts ice. Big as a berg may be, once it goes floating it is only

Wichita Falls Oil Man Takes Position Here

Frank Mason formerly of Wichita Falls and who for five years has been in the employ of the Texhoma Oil & Refining Company as traveling representative, has been given management of the local wholesale business of the company, succeeding George Morris, who has had charge of the business here during the past eight years and who early this week resigned that place.

Rebirth of Jewish Nation Will Be Class Subject

The subject to be used in the Goodfellow's Bible class at the First Baptist church tomorrow morning at 9:45 o'clock is the budding of the Jewish Nation. The rebirth of the Jewish Nation and its rise to power and influence in the world is one of the greatest marvels of the age. Without a country, without a flag, the International Jew is the first man of the world today. Infidels may laugh at the Bible and say that it is an antiquated book, but it is the only book that tells us the truth as to the future. Its plain prophecies, written 2500 years ago, are being fulfilled before our eyes so that he who runs may read. Only a dead church and a blind world inoculated with an empty optimism refuse to read them. Thinking men and women want to know the truth. Come and let us study them together. A hearty welcome to all those who are not attending Sunday School elsewhere. The ladies are always welcome as visitors. Music by a splendid male quartette. Class Reporter.

HEART-HOME PROBLEMS

Cast Her Aside, Then Crawled Back When Scorned by Other Women. Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have always read your heart problems hoping to see an answer to my own affair. I am 35 years of age and have been married 15 years. The first six years of married life was all that I wished it to be. I didn't have as much as I have now, but I was so contented with my own home. I have always been considered neat and good looking. After six years of married life I began to suspect my husband, as he was in a business that brought him in contact with lots of women daily. I noticed his indifference to me at his home, and as time passed we had quarrels about his staying away so long at night and he told me one lie after another about where he had been. Finally I found out who the married woman was that he was so devoted to and they had some rotten affairs. After that shock I received others when people would call me up and tell me he went to see a certain woman right along. When he knew I was next to all, he surprised me by leaving home, as he now had one he wanted to marry at any cost, so he got me to give him a divorce he was willing to give me all I asked. I consented to his wish and he gave me all I asked, which I invested and am independent today. Now here is the story. After all this, he went to his angel and, oh, how happy he was, while I was a wreck from worry and all broken up with nothing but money which meant little to me without the love I had lost. Then he and his woman had a complete falling out when she learned that he had given me everything but his job to get her. She refused to have anything more to do with him and had the nerve to call me up and tell me so, saying I could have him back it was all a mistake. So, after two months, he began to try and come back to his old home which I still had. After all I forgave him and he entered, bag and baggage. All was going fairly well without any love from me, only compatibility. He tried to be awful dear to me because he feared what has since happened. He became sick and had one spell after another, unable to find his former health, while I have strength to spare. Now after seven years he has never recovered entirely and never will. He seems like a man 65 years old, although he is two years my senior and gray haired. Now should I live my life without him and suffer for his sins along with him? We have never had any love affair between us; all he cares for is my kindness and service. Of course, he tries to be pleasant and lets me have my way altogether, but the question is where do I come in? Am I wasting my life living like this? Hadn't I better get out and make something more useful out of myself than a dead man's wife? PEPPERED.

You do not love him, and he cannot rightfully expect your devotion and loyalty. Don't allow him to wreck your life. After all these years you are entitled to the happiness you cannot obtain while you have him on your hands. If you see to it that he is not homeless and helpless, you will have done your duty, it seems to me. Arrange for him to be cared for in a private hospital, for a time at least. A few months of this arrangement and you will be able to better decide what to do.

Hogan-Burrus Co. To Occupy New Funeral Home

T. J. Hogan and J. A. Burrus of the firm of Hogan & Burrus, undertakers, have entered into contract with E. P. Norwood, who recently let a contract with J. J. Clements for the erection of three modern brick buildings, to occupy the building that will be erected on 10th street between Avenues J and K, and which has been designed especially for a funeral home. The building is to be modern in every respect and ample room for taking care of the increasing business of the undertaking company will be provided, with special features such as are embodied in the larger funeral homes. Contractor Clements has started excavations for the foundation and basement of the building, which will be completed at an early date.

TODAY'S RECIPES
Ham Sandwiches—Into a pint and a half of well seasoned potatoes, mashed fine, stir two eggs without beating. Spread two tablespoons of this potato out smoothly, and lay on it a slice of neatly trimmed boiled ham. Cover the potato with butter, the edges together well and fry a delicate brown in hot fat. Scraps of any kind of meat minced and seasoned may be used instead of the slices.

Finger Biscuits—Mix and sift three times one quart of flour, three teaspoons baking powder and one teaspoon salt. Stir in sweet milk enough to make a soft dough. Flour the board and turn out the dough on it, touching it as little as possible. Beat to a cream two tablespoons butter, one teaspoon lard and one tablespoon sugar. Spread this on the dough, double the dough over it, flour it slightly and press it out with the rolling pin, half an inch thick. With a knife cut the dough into strips finger length, lay them close together in the pan and bake in a quick oven. They are peculiarly delicate.

Lobster Chops—Put one tablespoon butter into a sauce pan, and when it bubbles stir in three tablespoons flour. Stir until flour is cooked, and pour in one cup cream, or rich milk and two cups boiled lobster, cut into dice. Stir till scalding hot, take from fire, and when cool add beaten yolks of two eggs, one-half grated nutmeg, salt and pepper to taste. When the mass is cold form into chops that are pointed at one end, roll in beaten egg then in cracker crumbs. Fry in wire basket in boiling fat. Garnish with parsley.

Cherry and Almond Sorbet.—One quart water, six pint white sugar, juice of one lemon, six sweet almonds blanched and pounded, one bitter almond a wine glass of cherry juice. Freeze in a freezer; when half frozen add the beaten whites of three eggs. Serve in glass cups.

Serve it quick and hot

The lamps of Kenilworth's car suddenly revealed another car picking its way slowly just ahead. Almost at the same moment a disc of pale yellow light shone through the mist to be immediately wiped away by the gray mass of cloud-like atmosphere.

"What was that?" Joanna asked. "The lighthouse at La Turbie village," he replied. "Queer necessity, isn't it? A lighthouse to warn travelers on a mountain road?"

While the dim radiance cast its sickly illumination over them, Kenilworth examined the girl who sat so close beside him. He saw that her white throat, on which a single great red ruby hung, was glistening in the dampness against the contrast of her hair and the black of the gown she had chosen to wear. She had thrown back her head. Her wraps of somber, plish clinging stuff, softened at the collar with a ripple of ebullience, lay open. Kenilworth felt for the bank with his front wheels and brought the roadster to a stop.

"It's a treacherous atmosphere," he admonished her. "One never foretells its next day's consequences."

"Consequences are uncertain things to make into a prophecy, aren't they?" she asked. He studied her a moment, peering at her through the fog. He saw the vague shadows lurking in her eyes, shadows that came and then evaporated as if they were fugitives of the mist that had reached a haven of brown depths.

"Are you wondering," he asked, "what is to be the outcome of my well-timed invitation to a battle between us tonight? If you are, it is needless. There will be one thing or another: joyful, glorious, useful, beautiful; or, so far as I am concerned, empty and in that event, meaningless to you."

She was silent, motionless, for a time. Then: "How are we going about it, Roddy? You are to tell me that you love me, want me, and make all these rituals of adoration for which you are distinguished. That much of course, I am to measure you and measure myself. That will be the obvious program. But there must be some new note. What shall it be?"

He guided the car back into the road, satisfied that the bigger car that had been ahead of them would have gone a safe distance beyond. "You are, in yourself, the only one," he declared then. "You and the whim of you to throw your colors at my feet and challenge me to fasten them to my shield—if I can. I've never experienced that before, from a woman. They've done it, of course, but they thought they were furitive about it."

"I don't believe in being furitive," she returned. "It used to be the fashion, and the custom, I know. But what's the use of that? Any woman who knows what another woman thinks. And every man knows what his brother wants. They pretty well know what they think about each other—every woman and every man. So much has gone wrong in the world, it seems to me, because people have tried to make a mystery and a game out of the plain and commonplace. It's more fun to be honest. If a girl builds a wall around herself she always leaves an opening that she can peek through. That's the breach through which a man may conquer her, if she's weak. So why have the walls? I think it's better to stand out in the open—better for the girl I mean. She can see what's coming at her, then, and be ready for it."

"So you have decided to put your arms down and tell me I may have whatever I can win? Just why, if it's not asking an advantage, have you chosen me?"

As was her way, at times, she considered this quietly. He waited, apparently intent upon keeping his car safely away from the ledge at the outer side of the road. At last she answered him:

"It's because you're straight, Roddy. Straight, according to your standards. You've never fooled me, and I don't desire of me since that night Yvonne's back in New York, when I asked you to wipe John's accusing kiss from my lips with a warmer one from yours. I knew enough then, thanks to what I'd learned of men, to realize he'd determined to hang me up, if you could, with your other trophies, as you would any woman who'd make herself interesting to you. And you've never tried to deceive me. You've even amused me, tremendously. Now I'm wondering if, after all, I haven't been deceiving myself."

She paused, but Kenilworth did not speak. He thought she would go on, and presently she did.

"John has done a big thing. When his opportunity came to him he went like a man who is going now, through the mist, straight toward the end of a beautiful rainbow. He tells me I've been just a fizzle—and I suppose he's right. His pride and his triumph doesn't fit in with his loving me because, he says, I've wasted my time, guiding the clouds with tinsel. Betty Weymouth is convinced I'm not worthy of Teddy Dominister who's not like you Roddy, because he wants to marry me. And I suppose I'm not worthy of whoever it was who gave me my money for he has never revealed himself. So it may be that I'm worth only the kind of thing you've been wanting to give me—the sort of thing you gave Yvonne."

"When I was twenty-seven of the silks I was what I thought it was smart to be—bold enough to let everybody know I was a girl, that I wanted being a girl unashamed to take everything I dared accept out of unfettered girlhood. Perhaps short skirts and scarlet lips and too much knowledge of things as they really are does spoil a girl inside as much as some people say they do. You see, Roddy, and find out—for me, I'll fight you like the devil, but I want to know if you and what you represent can win; if you do, John wins; Betty Weymouth wins; everybody wins."

When she finished she put her hand against Kenilworth's coat. He felt it slipping into his coat pocket and resting there. When he would have spoken he realized that a long time had passed; that he had been holding himself stiffly, trying to absorb the feel of the hand that snuggled in his pocket and determine whether it rested quietly or trembled.

As the red car felt its way upward the mist became less oppressive. Twice the lamps outlined the car ahead with a suddenness that would have unstrung the nerves of most motorists, but Kenilworth was a nerveless driver and Joanna seemed oblivious in every danger. At times when the man beside her was particularly intent upon his wheel and his thoughts concentrated upon some bend in the road, she studied his face.

They paused for a minute at the village of La Turbie. Across a gorge the lights in the windows of a villa were pinpoints of red fire where, on a clear night, they could have been a brilliant blaze. The atmosphere had become so cold, he wondered if the mist were not evaporating after all.

When they slid out of the village they passed the car that had been

When he let her go because he dared hold her no longer, and because couples who had come out into the yard were stopping to glance curiously at them, Joanna laughed, the rippling laugh that might be irritating as well as musical, and said to him while he fixed his own mask: "You see, Roddy, the night is wear down. I'm in the open, and I'm fighting fair."

When they had disappeared across the club house veranda and through the doors which had been opened to the why the red car stopped after one of the two men who had sat silently in their seats in the other car, descended. To the one who remained at the wheel this one said:

"Back around between the red car and the gate, so you can get out first if there's a rush for the road at any time."

"It's getting thick and moist, Master," the one at the wheel grumbled, in the voice of Antoine. "In another two hours we won't be able to see the wheels and all there'll be between us and eternity on the road down there will be the brakes."

"Your course must be less fearful of being recognized, and so will you," the other retorted. "That pleases you, doesn't it?"

While Antoine muttered unintelligibly, Brandon threw his coat into the car and fixed his mask carefully.

He did not go at once into the house, but loitered on the veranda, smoking. When he had finished his cigarette he stepped on the door, and was admitted. The orchestra was playing a fox trot in languid rhythm and the floor was thronged with couples whose moods the musicians knew as well how to interpret.

Brandon surveyed the dancers with searching glances. Then he Almost at the same minute a disc of pale yellow light shone through the mist—"What was that?" Joanna asked.

ahead of them. It had stopped before a crumbling hut at the edge of the little town, where the road began its sharp upward twisting. Both Kenilworth and Joanna looked into it curiously. They saw that whoever had been at the wheel had left it—to go into the hut, probably.

The other figure was too muffled to be recognized.

They reached the plateau at the top of the mountain at last, and drew up before the clubhouse. Its cheerful lights glowing an unnatural red, made faint shadows in the open yard. Strains of mellow music floated through closed doors, inviting newcomers to make the most of whatever sort of romance had brought them there.

"We'll leave the car near the road," Kenilworth announced. "We may have to make a dash for it if the mist becomes too thick."

Joanna slipped to the ground and stood close to the car. Kenilworth stood beside her while he drew off his overcoat, revealing his domino of shining white satin. It is a fiction at the mountain-top clubhouse that one must mask, so that all who go there may be assured of their anonymity—if they require it.

Joanna produced from a pocket of her wrap her soft black mask, a strip of their velvet that barely reached the tip of her nose, with two almond shaped slits for her eyes. This silver cord, to be concealed and fastened in her hair, dangled from either tip of the mask. She held up her face to Kenilworth in mute invitation for him to fix the taunting strip of velvet in its place before they should enter the house.

Her warm breath, escaping partly, he opened lips, fanned him gently. She smiled up at him, half-drowsily, as if the faint melodies of passion that came out from the dance floor had lulled her senses into a careless tenderness.

Careless of the tang of damp cold she allowed her wrap to fall back and bare the throat that seemed to blend into the silver sheen of the ghostly moonlight. Twin lights of another car—they recognized it as the one they had left down the road—swung into the yard. The lustre of the lamps flared suddenly bright and, for an instant, enveloped them in their mist-dimmed glow.

Kenilworth's fingers lingered at their task of fixing the silver cord. His fingers quivered when the short gold-brown strands of hair slid among them. Joanna moved closer to him and rested her hand lightly on his arm. When he let his fingers relax that the night breeze might blow her hair about them, he stared into her eyes and fancied that they had widened and that a circle of black had formed about the shimmering iris in each of them.

Then he caught her in a feverish clasp. She did not draw away, but reached up and drew down his head until she could frame his face with her two hands. Then she let him rest his lips on hers.

looked among the tables. Suddenly his eyes found a slender figure in black, with gold-brown hair, at a table half hidden behind the potted palms that stood in a corner of the balcony that overhung the dance floor. He appeared to be satisfied, then, and dropped into a place at an unreserved table and ordered a liqueur.

Chapter XXXII
La Turbie

Even as Brandon watched the slim figure in black, from his table, the orchestra struck up a waltz, a slowly rhythmed, exotic melody that chanted like a song of passion. The figure in black rose. The man across from her who had been recognized easily despite his domino, as Kenilworth, was on his feet with her. A woman who had become careless breezed up to Brandon just then and boldly commanded him to take her onto the floor. He eyed her coolly and shook her head.

"I'd rather watch them," he said, and motioned to the vacant seat at his table in invitation to the unknown to sit out the number with him. The unknown declined. "I want to walk," she said. "Any one will do—if not you, a more gallant knight will humor me. It's the only time I ever think—when I'm waiting."

"An odd condition, that!" Brandon taunted her. "Sound so, doesn't it," she returned. "But it isn't, you know. Women think while they wait, all women do. It reminds them of foolish dreams they had when they were very young. With a flirt of her hand across his shoulders the unknown disappeared. A moment later he saw her, among the dancers, and saw that she was dancing silently. And he saw, too, that Joanna, a striking figure in the colorful maze, danced silently; as if she, too, were thinking. He saw, too, that Kenilworth was holding her tightly.

Photographs of Men Who Served The 72nd. Judicial District Court Will Adorn Walls of Spacious Court Room

While the opportunities of today and possibilities of tomorrow are realized by the officers of the 72nd Judicial District Court, the romances of yesterday are cherished by the members of that body and as a means of preserving the history that time has attached to the court an effort to secure large photographs of all of the District Judges and District Attorneys who have served in the court is being made, and when this has been accomplished they will be hung on the walls of the court room as mute reminders of the human element that has entered into the founding and preservation of that institution.

Already photographs of the late W. R. Spencer, a veteran lawyer who gave the best of his last days to the court, and of District Attorney Parke N. Dalton, whose brilliant career was tipped in the bud by untimely demise, adorn the walls of the court and efforts to secure pictures of their predecessors are being made by the present District Judge Clarke M. Mullican.

Officials who have served in lesser capacities than the judges and attorneys of the court will be included among those whose photographs will adorn the walls of the spacious court room, not least among these to be a likeness of District Clerk Louis F. Moore, whose efficient services in the operation of the court machinery have entered largely into its successes.

Attorney J. E. Vickers, who served as District attorney of the court, here, and who is now engaged in the private practice of law as a member of the firm of Vickers & Campbell, will be among those whose photographs will be included in the list.

The 72nd Judicial District Court is a big machine that has had as important bearing perhaps on the community life of Lubbock as any other institution here, and the move to preserve the likenesses of the men who have served its sessions, while doubtless combining the elements of sentiment such as is not foreign to any thing that has its foundation upon human service, is one that friends of the court look upon as timely and even thoughtful.

IMMATES OF GREAT LEPER INSTITUTE PASS TIME AWAY

By N. REYNOLDS PACKARD (United Press Staff Correspondent) BUENOS AIRES, Arg., (United Press).—Among the happiest people in the world are the isolated lepers of the Hospital Munitz which is located on the outskirts of Buenos Aires and which is one of the greatest such institutions in the world.

Contrary to general opinion, the high stone-walls about the grounds of the Munitz Hospital do not echo with the groans of suffering, but rather with laughter and pleasant chatter as the inmates play or work. The outdoor diversions are numerous and include tennis, quito, croquet and various forms of ball games.

Among the most popular indoor amusements of the Hospital Munitz are checkers and chess, of which there are frequent tournaments, arousing the greatest rivalry among the lepers. There are also poker games and rounds of bridge as well as Mah Jong, but many prefer to pass the time working out cross-word puzzles.

In the spring and summer, the able men are busy tilling the soil, planting and caring for the crops which supply the table. The women with their sewing machines make their own dresses and mend the garments of the men.

The women still possess their sartorial vanity, but there are no mirrors in the Hospital Munitz. For the inmates are not allowed to see their own faces.

At night the lepers are entertained with musical programmes which prove exceedingly popular. They are very fond of all kinds of music from the jazz numbers to the classics of Chopin and Schubert.

The orchestra is composed entirely of lepers and includes numerous women. A fine radio, with a loud speaker also contributes to the musical concerts as well as informing these isolated people of much that is transpiring in the outside world.

Leprosy, feared since the earliest Biblical times, is rarely fatal. It is chronic, incurable, but seldom acute. The lepers live for many years, oftentimes much longer than normally healthy people. It is probably because of this slow working effect of the disease that the lepers in the Buenos Aires institution have adopted themselves with resignation to their lot and live in an atmosphere of happiness and cheer.

John Gelin Makes Study of Homes In California

John Gelin, local building contractor, has just returned to his home here after a tour of points of interest in California, including Los Angeles and other cities where he made a close inspection of the types of buildings in use there.

Special attention was given by Mr. Gelin to the type of construction of residences there, however, he also made a close study of commercial building designs.

Mrs. Gelin is visiting relatives and friends at Los Angeles, where she will remain for several weeks.

ANTWERP TO BE PORT FOR SOVIET RUSSIA

By United News BRUSSELS, Jan. 15.—Soviet Russia is anxious to make the port of Antwerp its center for trade with Europe and America, the link between Russia and the whole Western world, according to M. Wauter, Minister of Trade and Commerce. "This would be a great gain for us," said the Minister, "and we are giving the problem of trade relations with Russia our most serious consideration."

"Belgium manufacturers need markets. We manufacture nearly everything that Russia needs and if arrangements regarding credit can be reached, it will be to the immense advantage of both countries."

The minister added that the Soviet had already approached Belgian firms regarding materials for tramway systems in Russian towns and cities.

Home Dressmaking

By JEANNE ROLAND (Copyright 1925 by Pan-Art Service, Inc.)

Tailored Blouse with Raglan Sleeve and hem with fine hemming stitches. The under side of the slash is finished with a smaller hem than is used for the upper side. The latter should be about 3/4 of an inch wide and after it is hemmed, it is lapped over the under edge and at the top of the slash two or three rows of fine running stitches are run across the overlapped seams to make them more secure.

After the placket of the sleeve has been finished, the lower edge is gathered and the wristband attached to it. The front of this blouse is slashed down the center of the front and finished with a bias fold of self-material.

White is all the rage at the fashionable winter resorts and this blouse, made to forecast fashions for spring, is developed in white silk crepe de chine. The collar is of self-material, edged with a bias fold, while the sleeves are finished with narrow wristbands. The cross-stitching on the sleeves and lower edge of the blouse is done in gray, red and dull green silk, a most effective combination.

This waist, for bust size 36 or 38 calls for 3 1/2 yards of material 36 inches wide. The two diagrams show the easiest and most effective way of finishing the opening in the sleeve. Slash to the depth indicated, then turn under one edge of the slash.

Ladies' Blouse No. 199, cut in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust, will be mailed, postpaid, upon receipt of 15 cents. Be sure to give correct number and size of pattern desired when ordering. Write name and address plainly. Send orders to Pattern Editor, this newspaper.

MARKETS

Kansas City Livestock
KANSAS CITY, Jan. 14.—Cattle receipts were about normal Friday and quality was only fair. Packers bought sparingly but values were regarded as about steady.

Hog receipts at the western markets were light and trade everywhere was active with prices generally higher. Prices here were up 10 to 15 cents.

Hogs, 5,000, steady to 10 cents higher; good to choice 180 to 250 lbs. averages 12.00@12.30; 130 to 160 lbs. averages mostly 12.35@12.50; packing sows 10.00@10.75; stags 8.75@9.25; stock pigs steady, mostly 11.75@12.25.

Cattle 1,000, calves 200; killing quality plain; no early sales fed steers; undertone around steady with markets decline, not enough of other classes offered with prices; practical top veal 11.50.

Sheep 2,500; killing classes generally steady; best woolled lambs offered 15.00; others downward to 14.75; clippers 13.50.

Fert Worth Livestock
FORT WORTH, Jan. 15.—Cattle receipts 3,500; heaves 4.50@9.00; stockers 9.75@8.00; cows 3.75@6.00; cutters 3.25@3.65; canners 2.75@3.25; heifers 4.00@9.00; yearlings 4.50@10.50; calves, receipts 700; calves 3.00@8.50; bulls 3.00@5.00.

Hogs, receipts 300; medium 12.25@12.40; heavy 12.00@12.35; light 12.40@12.50; mixed 11.75@12.00; common 10.00@11.25; packing sows 10.00@10.75; pigs 9.50@11.00.

Sheep, receipts 600; spring lambs 13.50@15.50; feeder lambs 10.00@12.00; yearlings 10.00@12.00; weth-culps 1.00@2.00; stocker sheep 3.00@7.50; goats 1.00@3.25.

Stock Letter
NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Stocks continued under pressure in today's market and showed comparatively little rallying power. Almost from the start there was a resumption of pressure against a number of recent prominent issues, especially in the motor group, where Hudson and General Motors were subjected to bearish attacks.

Wells Fargo and American Express showed considerable heaviness and was pressure for sale. Some railroad stocks also were without support and registered losses. It was noticeable that a steady tone was maintained throughout the general trading in Texas, Pacific and Rock Island both of which have of late been acquired by important interests.

During the last hour a corks broke sharply on the announcement that Hudson Motors directors had declared only the regular quarterly dividend and the weakness in the stock encouraged resumption of professional selling, with forced additional recession in General Motors, American Can and other leaders.

Stock Opinions
Hornblower & Weeks.—We judge that oil stocks are on the verge of a new movement if, in fact, it has not already started.

Pynchon & Co.—We continue to scan the market from a cautious viewpoint and suggest that profit taking be freely indulged in on all bulges and that all commitments at this time being on a strictly trading basis.

Housman-Gwathmey.—We expect an active market for Rock Island at advanced prices.

Cotton Opinions
Hicks & Williams.—Some new influence is needed to give the market a trend.

Orvis Bros.—There appears no cause to alter the view of buying cotton around current price and on any slight cracks.

S. M. Weld & Co.—Our market opinion remains unchanged (bullish)

Grain Opinions
Lamsom Bros.—We would be cautious about following advances in wheat, cotton and oats look like a sale on bulges.

Bartlett and Frazier.—We offer no excuse for being drastically bullish on wheat prices for the future.

Harris & Winthrop.—Feel that too much importance is being placed upon the fluctuations in Europe and the whole wheat problem still remains purely a domestic one. Selling of corn seems to be coming from those who bought on legislative possibilities.

CITATION ON APPLICATION IN PROBATE
THE STATE OF TEXAS.

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Lubbock County, Texas: Greeting: You are hereby commanded to cause to be published once each week for period of ten days before the return day hereof, in a newspaper of general circulation, which has been continuously and regularly published for a period of not less than one year in said Lubbock County, a copy of the following notice:

YOUTH OF NATION TOPS DEATH LIST IN U. S. AUTO FATALITIES

YOUTH pays the heaviest toll in annual automobile fatalities. From five to fifteen years is the period when the greatest number of fatal accidents occur, for both sexes. The chart shows the age distribution of automobile deaths for men and women as given in the latest mortality figures prepared by the government. These figures, says the Stewart-Warner Safety Council for the prevention of automobile accidents, emphasize the need for more playgrounds and increased safety education among school children.

Complete statistics are not possible, as only 85 per cent of the United States keeps mortality records. About 22,000 a year is generally conceded to be the annual number of automobile fatalities. For 5,821 males known to have been killed in one year there were only a third as many women, or 2,845, in spite of the fact that the male population is only 4 per cent greater than the female.

YES BOY IT'S ME!

Me is I and I is Me, I'm Me all right

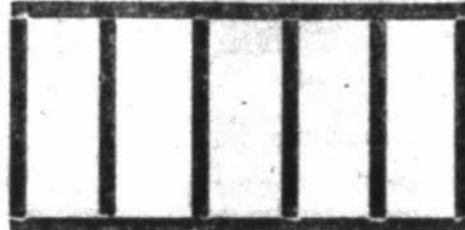

Fine! Feeling fine today. That's the me in I that feels so good today. You bet I'm glad to be here in your town with my new "Sole Owner" Store, and the me in you is going to be glad, too.

Happy smiles, warm thoughts, big resolves will each be yours as you see this new "Sole Owner" Store. The me in myself is right proud of this new "Sole Owner" Store there is the atmosphere of beauty.

Cleanliness and convenience are everywhere in this new "Sole Owner" Store. There is not a single turnstile to bother you. No place to get hemmed in a jam. Things are just so easy and simple in the arrangement—so beautiful in looks—so radiant in personality that one cannot help but say "me, too" in approval.

There's no horny-rimmed spectacle air about this store—it's not a "dudy" place, but it is a glorious store in which one will be happy. Over one comes a feeling of perfect satisfaction the very moment one is inside a "Sole Owner" Store.

I telegraphed to Chicago where they grow Carnations by the millions and said to the Carnation Man, I want a few thousand Carnations to make the Lubbock folks a little more beautiful. I told him first that there was much beauty already in Lubbock, but, however, beautiful one is the desire still persists to be more beautiful. This is my apology. Now you come and get the Carnation whether you need it or not.

"SOLE OWNER" HIMSELF

Sole Owner Stores now operating from Florida to California. They are in 14 States—sixty-one towns and cities and growing faster and faster.

Two new Sole Owner's at Dallas today—one at Carthage Mo., and one at Louisville Miss., and one in this town, making 99 of my new stores to date.

Everything that the gray hairs of my head know about how to please you is to be found in my new "Sole Owner" Store. Everything that the youth of my heart feels to be the kind of store you will love is a part of my new "Sole Owner" Store.

Don't be afraid of the Big crowd. Get yourself jazzy for one day and have a lot of real fun, I have a jazzy band all ready to play for you. It will all be in fun, nobody need fear that he will lose his dignity and pompous bearing by being present.

Come right on, folks. You Chesterfielders, and you sorry faced, blue-boned nut crackers. Come and join with the real human being of this town tomorrow and get some real fun spilt over you.

We'll Smile At You as If You Were a Regular Fellow

TODAY IS THE DAY--10 A. M.

MUSIC AND CARNATIONS

BOTH ARE FREE TO YOU
MUSIC TO THRILL
Carnations to make you more beautiful. Our Smile thrown in extra.

Fresh Meats

This is the Whiz Bang part of my new "Sole Owner" Store. Nothing like it has ever been in this town before. Your eyes, your ears your smell, and your taste will agree that "WHIZ BANG" are the right words!

NEW SOLE OWNER STORE

THAT'S WHAT THIS IS Funny talk in this Ad I know,—
but a lot of sense in the Store.
COME AND BE HAPPY!
