Gov. Bill Clinton

President avoids attack at National Guard parley

By Julia Malone
N.Y. Times News Service

SALT LAKE CITY — Like two grandmasters hovering over a chessboard, President Bush and Bill Clinton played an elaborate political game for two days over Clinton's avoidance of military service during the Vietnam War.

But when they came to the end game Tuesday at the National Guard Association convention, the rivals apparently decided that a draw was good enough for this round.

The president surprised some listeners by avoiding a stinging attack on Clinton's draft record, which has been a central theme for the Bush campaign for two weeks. And the Democratic nominee, speaking an hour later, sidestepped the issue almost entirely and focused on economic policies.

The back-to-back addresses came after days of high-stakes strategizing and last-minute tactical shifts. Bush made the first move by deciding to attend the National Guard meeting in place of Vice President Dan Quayle, the scheduled speaker.

Amid wide speculation that Bush would use the setting for an all-out assault on Clinton's credentials to be commander in chief, the Arkansas governor responded

Panel 'tags' $517 million, revives SSC

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House and Senate conferees Tuesday earmarked $517 million for the super collider next year in a remarkable turnaround for a project that just months ago was in danger of being canceled.

Backers, who redoubled their efforts after a stunning House vote in June to kill the $8.25 billion giant atom smasher, hailed the conference committee's action.

"Having gone through the SSC funding battle, I have a far better appreciation for Winston Churchill's observation that nothing in life is so exhilarating as to be shot at and missed," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

"We really dodged a bullet."

Said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas: "It has been a long, hard battle and we have won."

"It is a clear and convincing victory."

The funding is part of a $22 billion energy and water development appropriations package that now returns to the House and Senate for final approval.

Conferees split the difference between the $550 million approved last month by the Senate and the $483.7 million allocated by the House Appropriations Committee before the House voted to ditch the project under construction south of Dallas.

'It has been a long, hard battle and we have won.'

— Sen. Phil Gramm

Although the figure falls $133 million short of the funding sought by the Bush administration, it is significantly higher than the minimum amount the Energy Department said would be necessary to keep construction on track.

Last week, the DOE's chief overseer of the project said the collider might not be completed on time if Congress didn't earmark at least $483 million for fiscal 1993.

Rep. Jim Chapman, the only Texan on the conference committee, said the $517 million was a "fair compromise" — but one that would add to costs and construction time.

"It's unfortunate though that in the process we have to compromise, because I think the honest result is some slippage in schedule and some increase in cost. I think that's inevitable," the Sulphur Springs Democrat said. "We ought to be honest about that."

Rep. Joe Barton, whose district spans the collider, agreed.

"I think this eliminates any reasonable hope to build the project for $8.2 bil-

County becomes eligible for crop disaster relief

Staff report

A newly expanded list of counties eligible for crop disaster assistance now includes Midland, Martin and Howard counties.

Those three local counties were among 14 added to the list of areas approved for crop disaster assistance by the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Gov. Ann Richards, noting that crop damage in the High Plains and West Texas areas had suffered more severe crop damage than orginally reported, had requested the expanded coverage.

The declaration brings to 26 the number of counties included in the program. Excessive rain and and hail which have affected the area since May 1 are being blamed for the losses.

State and federal inspectors, including representatives of the Governor's Division of

City vehicles, equipment to go on block Saturday

By Darren J. Waggoner

A plethora of over-the-hill city vehicles and equipment will go on the block Saturday available to the highest bidder at the annual city of Midland auction.

The auction, set to begin at 10 a.m. at the city garage, will feature 86 automobiles of various sizes among the hodgepodge of loot available for purchase.

A Midland tradition for about 25 years, officials say the auction is known for the unusual items typically up for sale.

This year is no different, according to Hank Kirk, director of fleet services.

"We have all kinds of strange things to sell," he said. "A lot of cars — undercover police cars — but a lot of other things too," including a 1987 American LaFrance Fire

By Adolphe V. Bernotas
Associated Press writer

DUBLIN, N.H. — Fresh off its prediction of Hurricane Andrew, The Old Farmer's Almanac entered its third century Tuesday, forecasting a warmer-than-usual winter in much of the nation.

The almanac, which warned of a possible hurricane in south Florida at the end of August, forecasts a white Thanksgiving and a sunny Christmas for the Northeast.

The 201st edition hit newsstands, supermarkets and bookstores with its familiar planting and tide tables, anecdotes and other tidbits, like tips on the usefulness of leeches.

But weather remains the publication's main staple, said John Pierce, the 22nd publisher since amateur as-

Upper 80s to hang around

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for morning cloudiness, becoming partly cloudy by noon, and a less than 20 percent chance of afternoon showers and thunderstorms. The high will be in the upper 80s with south to southeast winds at 10-15 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms and a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be cloudy in the morning, becoming partly cloudy by noon, with a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 65, Tuesday's high reached 86, compared with the record high for that date of 100 set in 1965. The record low was 50, set in 1951.

STATE

High pressure to the east continued to sweep warm moist air into South Texas on a south wind; strong easterly winds also were reported along the upper Texas coast, the result of a low pressure system offshore.

Showers and a few thunderstorms also were reported in far West Texas, particularly in the mountains.

An upper level high pressure ridge continued to influence North Texas, where skies were partly cloudy due to afternoon heating coupled with moist atmospheric conditions.

Winds were easterly over the east and southerly elsewhere in North Texas in response to circulation around a surface high pressure center over the eastern United States.

The National Weather Service said widely scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms are likely for North Texas and South Texas through Thursday, with highs both days from the upper 80s to the 90s and nightly lows in the upper 60s to lower 70s.

NATION

Torrential rains drenched parts of Iowa on Tuesday. Heavy snow fell in Alaska and high winds and rain covered much of the Plains. Showers also dotted the Atlantic Coast and Northwest.

Very heavy rain over southern Iowa early Tuesday flooded roads in Union County, where officials ran out of barricades to block submerged roads.

Rainfall by morning included 8.6 inches at Lorimor, 8.8 inches at Promise City and 11.5 inches at Derby. By midday, a few showers lingered.

Thunderstorms produced wind gusts to 75 mph at Creston.

By midday, rainshowers and thunderstorms were scattered from South Dakota and Nebraska to Michigan, from Texas to the southern Atlantic Coast, and from Oregon to Montana.

High southerly winds whipped across the southern and central Plains and the Mississippi Valley.

Heavy snow fell over parts of central Alaska. A winter storm warning was in effect for the Alaska range. A snow advisory was in effect for up to 4 inches in the Tanana Valley, east of Fairbanks.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SSC: Committee earmarks $517 million for collider lion," said Barton, R-Ennis. "You can't keep cutting and underfunding. There's only so much stretch in that rubber band and I think they've exceeded it."

The collider should come above current projections, but under $9 billion, he said.

But a spokesman for the super collider laboratory near Dallas wasn't prepared to admit the $517 million would cause delays and cost overruns.

"I think it will be close. We are going to have to take a careful look," said lab spokesman Russ Wylie.

"I think overall people are exceedingly pleased with the final outcome," Wylie said. "We are trying to do everything we can to keep this program on budget and on schedule and to warrant the confidence that was shown by the political leadership in restoring these funds."

"If we have to postpone building administrative buildings and work out of trailers to do that, we will."

The collider, which faces difficult funding fights each year on Capitol Hill, has had a tougher year than usual. The House vote to kill the project stunned backers, causing them to redouble their lobbying efforts.

"This has been the hardest year," said collider lobbyist Randi Thompson. "We've never received what we wanted, but we've never been cut to zero."

But, she added, "When you start with zero, $517 million isn't bad."

To date, almost $1 billion in federal money and $227 million in Texas funds have been spent on the super collider, which is due to be completed in 1999.

Scientists hope to learn more about the fundamentals of matter by crashing proton beams into each other at near-light speeds in the collider's 54-mile underground tunnel.

CAMPAIGN: Clinton, Bush play political chess

with his countermove Monday. He announced he would accept an invitation he had earlier declined to address the group.

Bush, who spoke first, told the several thousand guardsmen, "I didn't come here to attack him." But he alluded to the draft issue nevertheless.

"We can never forget that we ask our presidents to lead the military — to bear the awful authority of deciding to send your sons and daughters in harm's way," Bush said. "We must hold our presidents to the highest standard."

As he read from a letter from the mother of a Marine lost in Operation Desert Storm, Bush choked with emotion.

Clinton, who watched Bush's address from his hotel room, was ready to hit back if attacked, said campaign strategist Paul Begala.

But Clinton's address made no mention of his personal experience with the military, though he did respond to Bush's remarks on the responsibility of command.

"Every president in the last half century has had to confront the fateful decision to put some Americans in harm's way. I do not relish this prospect, but neither do I shrink from it," Clinton said.

As the candidates spoke, their aides mounted elaborate campaigns to bolster their side of the draft issue.

The Bush/Quayle campaign sent reporters two faxes attacking what it called Clinton's failure 'to come clean on all the contradictions" surrounding his draft record. And campaign staffers phoned reporters to tell them of a Tuesday night television appearance of a Clinton college friend who is now a source of damaging information on the draft issue.

Democrats in Washington, meanwhile, assembled more than a dozen House and Senate members who served in World War II, Korea and Vietnam at a morning press conference announcing formation of the National Veterans Committee for Clinton-Gore.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., said that Bush was trying to use national divisions over Vietnam as a political issue, adding, "For a president to try to use this as a way to get elected is not an act of leadership. It is an act of shame and cowardice."

After the National Guard speeches, both sides claimed to have won points.

Clinton advisers noted that rather than having to devote his speech to a defense of his draft record, the candidate was able to emphasize his theme that a strong defense rests on a strong economy.

The draft story "is behind us," Begala said. "The voters want this election to be about their lives and their future."

Bush campaign spokeswoman Torie Clarke argued that Clinton's appearance would only focus attention on the draft issue.

"This guy wants to be commander in chief, but he can't avoid the land mines on the campaign trail," she said.

Although the draft issue is still one "I don't think Clinton quite feels comfortable with," he said, the topic is losing its steam and may only last a few more days without a new revelation.

"It's one piece of the puzzle" that the Bush campaign is putting together to show that Clinton is untrustworthy. But it is not enough, Bolger said. "They've got to find more new evidence."

There is evidence that the topic is not changing many voters' minds.

An ABC News/Washington Post poll released Tuesday showed Clinton leading Bush by 15 percentage points, gaining three points during a week when Republicans hammered at the draft theme.

Three-quarters of the California respondents to a Los Angeles Times poll said Clinton's draft record would have no effect on how they will cast their votes.

Even many in the National Guard crowd here, who generally gave both candidates polite applause, said they would not hold Clinton's past against him.

"It's certainly not on the plus side of the ledger, but it's not a disqualification," said Col. Brian Bade, a fulltime Guard officer from Sioux Falls, S.D.

"I don't think it affects my opinion one way or another," said Lt. Col. Kim Watts of Salt Lake City.

Even so, George Whitney, a 21-year-old diesel mechanic and member of the Guard, said he wouldn't vote for Clinton because of his actions more than two decades ago. "I think he made a mistake," he said. "It has a lot to do with character."

CROP: Midland County becomes eligible for aid

(From 1A)

Emergency Management, visited the High Plains area in late August and reported that crop losses there were extensive. Disaster Recovery Manager Ed Laundy noted that losses for both cotton and vegetable acreage were greater than originally anticipated.

Crop losses were estimated to exceed $320 million in lost crops and more than $7.2 million in lost wages.

The 12 original counties were Bailey, Briscoe, Castro, Cochran, Crosby, Floyd, Hale, Hockley, Lamb, Lubbock, Parmer and Swisher.

State and federal emergency management personnel have been in the Lubbock area since Sept. 9 initiating recovery programs for the 12 original counties. Those efforts now will be expanded to all 26 affected counties.

As a result of the declaration, both Disaster Unemployment Assistance for unemployed or self-employed workers and Farmers Home Administration loans to producers, have been made available to individuals who were directly affected by the crop failures.

ALMANAC: Weather remains publication's staple

The Old Farmer's Almanac takes pains to point out the "Old" in its title, not to be confused with an upstart rival, the Farmers' Almanac, published in Maine.

Regarding Hurricane Andrew, The Old Farmer's Almanac predicted "a possible hurricane crossing southern Florida at the end of August." The Maine almanac predicted "humid southeast, storms Fla., Louisiana." The storm blasted south Florida on Aug. 24, then sliced across the Gulf of Mexico and hit Louisiana the next night.

The almanac's predictions, which claim 80 percent accuracy, include a slightly warmer than usual winter in New England and from the middle Great Plains to the Southwest and much of California.

Temperatures should be well above normal from the mid-Atlantic states to the lower Great Lakes and across the Southeast and West. The almanac said Minnesota and Northern California are the only regions expected to be colder than usual.

As for snow, the almanac said it should be relatively light in the Northeast, heavy in the Sierras, Rockies, Cascades, northern Great Lakes and Great Plains and about normal everywhere else.

The almanac is the legal document for tides and sunrises and sunsets, Atlantic and Pacific, in most states.

The tide tables almost caused the government to ban the almanac during World War II when a German spy was arrested at New York's Penn Station with a copy of the tables marked up to help enemy submarines deposit spies on the Long Island shore.

The Maine almanac has 48 pages, is 23 years younger and is given away to businesses for advertising purposes. The Old Farmer's Almanac has 260 pages and costs $2.95.

There's another difference. The older almanac has a signature hole in the upper left corner, put there at great inconvenience and expense, its publishers say, to preserve the tradition of hanging it on a nail in the pantry or outhouse.

AUCTION: Old vehicles, equipment go on block

(From 1A)

Truck, a Clark warehouse forklift and an oil storage tank.

The auction also will feature jewelry, tools, office furniture, computers, clothing and lawn mowers.

"It's a lot of surplus and items due for replacement," Kirk said. "The city keeps things on a depreciation-type basis. When something has passed its prime — then it's let go."

Such city department leftovers include desks, typewriters, chairs, radios and pagers.

Much of the miscellaneous goods were confiscated by Midland police officers. But some items — including clothes and a variety of household appliances — were simply found and never claimed.

The city estimates profits from the sale will top $90,000. Of that, the majority, which will come from vehicle sales, will go toward the purchase of other vehicles.

Money from the sale of equipment and miscellaneous items will become part of the General Fund.

"The smaller items don't really bring us much. They're just thrown in. The bulk of our money will come from the vehicles," said Mark Phillips, director of Equipment and Materials Management.

Conducting the auction fulfills the city's legal responsibility to sell items they no longer need.

Auction-goers are encouraged to arrive early to inspect the offerings. Gates at the garage, located at 1500 Orchard Lane, will open at 7 a.m. Registration begins at 8 a.m. at the Carver Street gate, with the auction starting at 10 a.m. and expected to end around 1 p.m.

Buyers should be as varied as the wares with local residents being joined by bidders representing large companies or other cities.

The auctioneer, Rene Bates of McKinney, who has a a reputation for "expertise in presenting an honest appraisal ... while obtaining the best possible price" is expected to draw a crowd of auction devotees again this year.

Bates, who sells for numerous municipalities and counties, has brought down the gavel on Midland's auction for more than 20 years.

By Dirk Johnson
N.Y. Times News Service

BURLINGTON, Colo. — When the Pilmentel and Perez families moved here from Mexico in the 1970s, there was a shortage of manual laborers for the kind of dirty, back-breaking, low-paying field work that seemed reserved for those who spoke Spanish.

Like many rural towns, Burlington today faces a worker shortage at the opposite end of the economic and social spectrum: physicians. In the past four years, Burlington has spent $50,000 on a campaign to recruit a doctor or two, but none would settle in this 3,000-person town, which is a flat spot near the Kansas border and not much else.

The town ultimately found a solution in its own backyard: It persuaded a wealthy resident to finance the medical school costs of two Burlington High School graduates in exchange for their promise to return home.

Burlington now looks forward to the day when "Dr. Sacramento Pilmentel" and "Dr. James Perez," the sons of field workers and dishwashers, come home to hang out their shingles. The two young men have just begun their first year at the University of Colorado Medical School.

"My son will help the town," a beaming Israel Pilmentel, a 46-year-old farm hand, said through an interpreter, his 14-year-old son, Jerardo, who added his own comment: "Man, I am so proud."

The town's newspaper will run a regular feature that keeps up with the progress of the medical students. "This town is real proud of these kids," said John Hudler, the news editor at The Burlington Record newspaper.

"We want people to know how things are going for them and their families," he said. "That way, when they come home for Christmas, people can ask them about classes and life at school. And by the time they've finished up, people here will still have a connection to them. They won't be strangers."

Born in Mexico to migrant workers, the young men spent their early years traveling to fruit and vegetable fields in California, Florida and Colorado with their families. They usually stayed in beaten-up trailers, although Sacramento Pilmentel recalls a stint of staying in an old Buick.

Their fathers worked in the sugar beet fields here and eventually found permanent jobs as farm hands. Their mothers work as dishwashers in local restaurants. Neither of the young men spoke English when they came to Burlington. As a child, Perez said he knew, "My father — the Mexicans — did work no one else was willing to do."

A Spanish teacher at the high school would come to the elementary school to help sometimes, but mostly they learned the language on their own.

"We watched a lot of Sesame Street," said Perez.

For a time, the two young men doubted they would even go to college, much less medical school. In the summer after graduation from Burlington High School in 1988, Perez was working on a farm and Pilmentel had gone to the oil fields of Wyoming in search of work. They told their parents they would probably not be going to college. They could not afford it.

But Colorado State awarded them scholarships, and the young men nervously went off to campus. "Most kids had parents who had gone to college, or older siblings, and they knew what to expect," said Perez. "If we hadn't had each other, we probably would have put our backpacks in the car and gone home."

The year the boys went to college the town began searching for a doctor because two of the town's physicians retired. Burlington could have applied for a federal program that assigns doctors to rural regions, in exchange for forgiveness of loans. But the town was skeptical. Those doctors often leave as soon as their obligations are fulfilled.

The town was unaware that James Perez, who is married and the father of a three-month-old boy, had been accepted to medical school. But news spread quickly when he came to the Bank of Burlington last winter in search of a hefty loan.

Despite the common view that scholarship money is always available for bright minority students, officials at the Colorado Medical School said the pool of financial aid had been inadequate for several years.

The Burlington loan officer, Charles Baker, called Hudler at the newspaper and asked, "Do you suppose there is anything we can do for him?"

Hudler met with Perez. "If we paid for your schooling," he asked, "would you come back here?"

At first, Perez was skeptical that an offer would be made. Hispanic people account for less than 10 percent of the town's population. He wondered whether they might have been looking for a doctor that looked more like Marcus Welby. "I didn't think Burlington would want me, you know, being a minority," he said.

One local resident assured Perez: "Look, if you have a good bedside manner, it won't matter if you're 10 different colors and striped to boot."

Vayo Rodriguez, a 31-year-old who works for the city's electric department and is a friend of the Pilmentel family, said the majority of the townspeople were fair-minded. And the others? "Well, they're learning something, aren't they," he said, and smiled broadly. "They're about to turn around and see that one of those people — the ones who are below them — has gotten as high in this town as you can get."

As products of the working class, the young men said, they will be able to relate to patients in a way that other doctors might not. "Most doctors are from pretty educated, well-to-do backgrounds, and the patients know it," Pilmentel said. "But if a concrete worker or a welder or a farm worker comes into the office, I'll be able to say, 'Hey, I can relate to what you're doing.' And it will give the patients some connection."

As a gruff old man with plenty of power and money in a small town, Harold McArthur is a kind of warm-hearted version of Mr. Potter in "It's a Wonderful Life."

"I've been lucky," said McArthur, 82, as he sat near a sign on the wall about shooting salesmen and spat tobacco juice. "I've made potfuls of money, and I'm going to spend it."

He has a long list of beneficence and is also executor of a charitable trust. He was approached about the idea of using trust money for the young men.

"I like this idea so much I'll pay for it myself," he said.

He has earmarked about $30,000 a year for the two students. But if that isn't enough, townspeople say they will get the money somehow.

"It's going to be like some corny Norman Rockwell painting," said Hudler, the newspaper editor. "This whole town is going to pull together."

Before the agreement was made, McArthur wanted to meet the boys at his farm implements dealership. A sometimes cantankerous man, McArthur has been known to have physically removed a salesman or two in his time. As he sat in work trousers behind a cluttered desk, he asked the young men some hard questions.

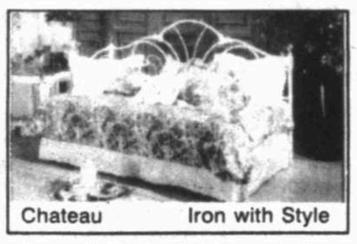

"What really turned me on about these boys," said McArthur, who came from an impoverished family of 12 children, "was the way they want to learn, really learn."

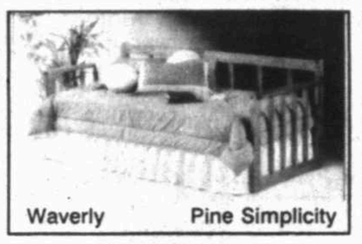

Hudler had gone along to the meeting with a contract that would legally bind the young men to return to Burlington.

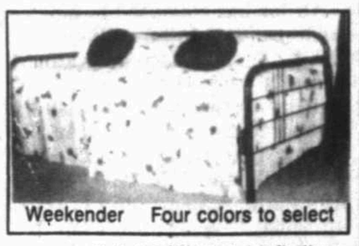

"Nope, I don't do business that way," said McArthur, who simply wanted to shake hands on the deal.

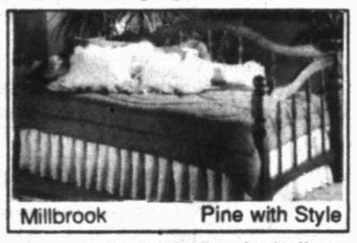

"Pretty cool," said Pilmentel. And they shook.

Hearst News Service

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Under the watchful eyes of Somalis toting submachine guns, the first U.N. peacekeeping troops have arrived to help guard relief efforts in this country stricken by famine and terrorized by anarchy.

The 36 U.N. troops, all from Pakistan, arrived Monday. They are the vanguard of a 500-member force that will eventually patrol the city's airport and seaport, officials said.

Order has collapsed in Mogadishu, and up to 1.5 million people in Somalia face starvation. Bandits and rival militiamen are preventing relief shipments from reaching the starving.

Pakistani Gen. Imitiaz Shaheen said the U.N. troops may use their weapons only in self-defense. "We don't want to start anything," he said. "There is no reason to provoke."

The soldiers will prepare camp sites on property adjoining the airport for other Pakistani troops who will join them later this month.

Shaheen said the troops probably will not begin guard duty until October and that they would camp at the airport until then.

The U.N. troops arrived on two U.S. C-130 cargo planes. U.S. Special Forces soldiers fanned out across the tarmac to guard the planes before the troops disembarked.

About 200 Somalis, some of them armed with submachine guns, stood about 100 yards away.

A pickup truck equipped with a .50-caliber anti-aircraft gun and carrying armed youths suddenly burst past the troops and drove wildly around the airport. The truck's passengers were thought to be members of the Hawarele clan who have controlled the airport for nearly two months.

The U.N. Security Council has approved the deployment of 3,500 troops to help the food distribution effort, but Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid, the country's main warlord who controls most of southern Somalia, has so far agreed to allow only 500 troops in the country.

Relief groups estimated that more than 100,000 people have starved to death since rebels overthrew dictator Mohamed Siad Barre in January 1991. Aidid and his chief rival, Ali Mahdi Mohamed, then fought a clan war that threw the country into anarchy.

Convoys attempting to deliver food and medical supplies have been repeatedly looted at gunpoint. There are no police and no functioning jails in Mogadishu.

Broken street lamps and traffic lights are dangling from wires that carry no electricity. Once-prestigious office buildings now gape at the sky, roofless, looters having stripped them of everything of value.

Europe waits as French ponder treaty

PARIS (AP) — For three months, French voters have been harangued and cajoled, bombarded with speeches and ads, warned of national catastrophe and continental chaos if they vote the wrong way.

On Sunday, they get to choose for themselves.

With their referendum votes of "oui" or "non," the French will decide the fate of the Maastricht Treaty, drafted by leaders of the European Community's 12 member nations to forge closer economic and political union.

As a free-trade zone, the EC will survive a "no" vote. The end of trade barriers within the community is still set for Jan. 1.

But the drive for unified economic and diplomatic policies that could transform Western Europe into a superpower could be set back for years by tedious new negotiations if the treaty is rebuffed by the country which 40 years ago helped erect the Common Market.

"The French have a major responsibility," said Premier Pierre Beregovoy. "Either Europe gets made, or it doesn't. It depends on us. ... 38 million French voters will decide for 350 million Europeans."

After President Francois Mitterrand announced the referendum in June, polls indicated nearly two-thirds of French voters backed the treaty. Now, the race is too close to call. The many undecided voters will determine the outcome.

Most EC nations are expected to approve the treaty by parliamentary vote. But Mitterrand called a popular referendum following Denmark's narrow rejection of the treaty, calculating that it would win resounding approval.

Instead, Mitterrand has become a focal point of the campaign. Treaty opponents, seeking to capitalize on his unpopularity, are urging "no" votes to repudiate him and 11 years of Socialist rule. Mitterrand, 75, was hospitalized for prostate surgery just nine days before the vote.

The campaign has sparked intense debate on virtually every issue preoccupying French voters, including many not addressed in the treaty. Crime, illegal immigration, AIDS, cross-border trash dumping, fear of German domination — all have been grist for pro- and anti-Maastricht polemics.

One striking phenomenon has been the fissure between the political establishment and the public. More than 80 percent of Parliament's members favor the treaty; their constituents are far more skeptical.

The leaders of every mainstream party have endorsed the accord, while renegades from their ranks have joined an ungainly "no" movement that encompasses the far-right National Front and the Communist Party.

The cleavage created by the campaign is perhaps more sociological than ideological. The "yes" side includes much of the political and cultural elite; "no" sentiment flourishes among laborers, farmers, those who feel the government ignores them.

Treaty supporters have staged a pro-Maastricht rap concert, scaled Mont Blanc to plant the EC flag, and recruited scores of celebrity campaigners. Farmers opposing the treaty have stuffed copies of it into trash cans atop tractors headed to Paris for anti-Maastricht protests.

Critics say the treaty itself is legalistic mumbo-jumbo. Its advocates, notably the government, have been faulted for realizing too late that they needed to explain the text and the consequences of the treaty.

"The copies they sent us are difficult to read," said Marcel Roche, mayor of Saint-Clement, a village near Vichy, 240 miles south of Paris.

The treaty commits EC members to establishing a central European bank and single currency; seeking common foreign and security policies; and allowing EC citizens to participate in local elections if they live in another EC nation.

Treaty foes say these proposals disguise the dangers — loss of control over immigration and fiscal policy, higher taxes to fund the EC, submission to the whims of EC technocrats in Brussels, a likelihood that Germany will dominate EC policymaking.

Assembly opens amid world disorder

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The 47th General Assembly, with 145 topics from famine to environmental protection on its agenda, opened Tuesday by plunging into a bitter dispute over Yugoslavia's membership in the United Nations.

U.S. and European Community speakers told the assembly they objected to Serb-led Yugoslavia's participation in the U.N. system, and would seek suspension of the federation, now consisting only of Serbia and Montenegro.

"It is anomalous and unacceptable that representatives of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia — Servia and Montenegro — should continue to participate in the work of United Nations bodies," Britain's ambassador, Sir David Hannay, said.

U.S. Ambassador Edward Perkins took the floor to support the comments by Hannay, who spoke on behalf of the 12-nation European Community.

The matter was to be decided by the 15-member Security Council later this week, then be taken up by the 179-member General Assembly. Russia and China have veto power in the Security Council, and could block a move toward suspending Yugoslavia.

In its first act, the new assembly endorsed by acclamation Stoyan Ganev, the foreign minister of Bulgaria, as its new president.

Ganev, who promised to work to end the war in the Balkans, himself is a symbol of the end of the Cold War. A 37-year-old lawyer, he was named last November to the first Bulgarian government since 1944 without Communists or Socialists.

A parade of about 40 world leaders begins next week with President Bush's speech to the General Assembly. President Fernando Collor of Brazil, which traditionally speaks first, canceled because he faces possible impeachment on corruption charges. Brazil's foreign minister, Celso Lafer, will speak before Bush.

During the session, which lasts until mid-December, the General Assembly is expected to consider the establishment of a revolving fund for peacekeeping, famine in Somalia and other African countries, and payments to a fund to protect the environment.

In a throwback to Cold War divisions, Russia opposed suspending Yugoslavia, saying isolation would hamper communications leading to peace in the Balkans. China reportedly shared Russia's view.

The United States wanted Yugoslavia expelled outright from the United Nations, but apparently will settle for suspension as a compromise, diplomats said. Muslim countries — angry about the "ethnic cleansing" of their brethren in Bosnia-Herzegovina by Serb forces — also favored expulsion.

Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, making his first appearance at a General Assembly opening as head of the world body, took note of the new era of opportunity in a speech to reporters earlier Tuesday.

"In the years of the Cold War, there were powerful pressures to be on one side or another," said Boutros-Ghali, an Egyptian. "Today, we should not forget that in a fundamental sense, we are all on the same side. Our differences are over how, not whether, a problem must be solved."

World in brief

Gunmen kidnap official of Christian party

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A senior official of Lebanon's largest Christian party was kidnapped Tuesday as the country was becoming even more bitterly divided.

The official, Boutros Khawand, 53, was seized by gunmen outside his home in East Beirut. No group has taken responsibility.

Khawand is a member of the politburo of the Phalange Party, which fielded the main Christian militia during 15 years of civil war with the Muslims.

The Phalange Party is the largest of several Christian factions that boycotted recent Parliamentary elections because they objected to the continued presence of Syrian troops in Lebanon.

The election widened the Christian-Muslim rift and seemed to threaten the peace achieved two years ago.

Asian man shoots, wounds two police officers

TOKYO — An Asian man shot and wounded two Japanese police officers who tried to question him and a companion in downtown Tokyo on Tuesday, police said.

Police arrested the two suspects. They identified themselves as Wang Yi Yi, 28, of Malaysia and Liu Feng-chang, 27, of Taiwan, said a police official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The police official said the two men started to flee when four police officers tried to question them about strange behavior, but Wang then pulled a pistol out of his bag and fired three shots at the officers.

Police arrested Liu at the scene and Wang later at a nearby apartment house, the official said. He said Wang carried a pistol with six bullets.

According to an annual police report, the number of crimes committed by non-Japanese in this country rose 72 percent in 1991.

Study: Birth rate portends environmental damage

WASHINGTON — Serious flaws in family-planning programs in China and India make it unlikely that the world's two most populous nations will be able to stabilize growth until well into the next century, by which time they may have added more than 1.5 billion people to the world's population, according to findings published this week by the independent Population Crisis Committee.

The problem is especially acute in India, the research group says. India, with a population of about 882 million that is growing 2.1 percent a year, is likely to overtake China as the most populous country by 2035, the committee says; India's population may reach 2 billion before leveling off.

China, with about 1.165 billion people, is likely to stabilize at about 1.5 billion, the group says.

The world's population is estimated at 5.4 billion.

Disaster develops in southern Sudan

NAIROBI, Kenya (NYT) — As relief agencies and diplomats struggle to deal with the famine in Somalia, they say a huge humanitarian disaster, largely hidden from the world, has developed across the war-ravaged southern Sudan.

The long-running civil war between the fundamentalist Islamic government and a southern rebel group has reached a new intensity in recent months as the government has has made new gains and has practiced scorched-earth policies against civilians.

The rebels, split and under heavy military pressure, have shelled the main government-held town in the south, Juba, which is the main delivery point for emergency civilian relief aid, diplomats say.

The United Nations said a few days ago that more than one million people had been forced to flee their homes in the last six months in the southern Sudan, joining two million already displaced by the civil war.

SAT scores reflect improved education

Midland parents have every right to be pleased about the SAT scores their children achieved during recent testing in Midland Independent School District (MISD). The fact that the scores of Midland youngsters averaged 18 points higher than students at the national average and 43 points higher than students elsewhere in Texas speaks well for the ability of Midland's educators and the quality of the educational system.

There has been extraordinary attention focused on the schools in recent years, and much of it has been deserved. Across the state and nation, schools as a whole have not been performing as well as those in Midland; there has been a need for educational improvement. And educators got the brunt of the criticism. After all, the educators are the ones who hold the future of this nation in their hands and when parents feel that their youngsters aren't getting the education they should receive, school administrators and teachers hear about it.

What the test scores indicate to us, however, is that Midland teachers are putting the subject material before students in such a way that the students can't help but learn. Why else would Midland students score 18 points better than students nationwide or 43 points better than other students in Texas? Better skills in the classroom should translate into better scores on tests like the SAT. Test scores should reflect what students actually have learned.

Furthermore, the education students are receiving today in MISD should make them better prepared to face the educational challenges they'll encounter in college, trade school, work or even in daily life. That is, after all, the end result of education: to make one better equipped to face the world.

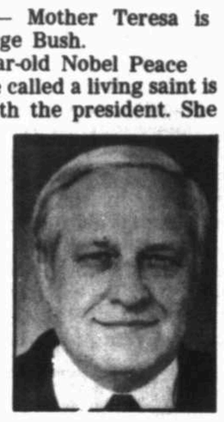

It's even more astounding, to some, that MISD accomplished that level of education while spending a thousand dollars less per student than the average Texas school district. That didn't shock us. Spending more in an attemptto educate students may prove successful to a point, but beyond that point education comes down to a simple matter of the student's desire and the educator's ability. Money really doesn't matter too much, and the recent SAT scores are verification of that fact.

The frail 82-year-old Nobel Peace Prize winner many have called a living saint is clearly disappointed with the president. She apparently preferred doing business with Ronald Reagan.

Anderson

The issue is the fee the United States is imposing on her religious workers coming into the country. Last April, the $50 per visa charge doubled to $100 per religious worker from India entering the United States. Some government officials predict it will go up even more.

To Mother Teresa, of course, it's a huge waste of money. It's a tax imposed on charitable workers who can put that money to much better use.

After all, Mother Teresa has only two changes of clothes, both of them blue-trimmed cotton saris worth $1 apiece. There are no washers or dryers, vacuum cleaners, televisions, record players, computers and other modern devices in her homes and hospitals in Calcutta for the destitute and dying — she believes the money that people donate can be better spent.

According to government officials who have had recent contact with Mother Teresa, it is weighing heavily on her mind, and she's asked for help in her conflict with the White House.

At least twice, she has visited the U.S. consulate in Calcutta and implored them to get the president to drop the fees. And that hasn't been her only moments of attempted redress, either.

One of her most recent visitors, someone she knew was a friend of the president, described for us how Mother Teresa expresses her frustration.

He visited her on the second floor of her headquarters, known as the "Motherhouse," in the middle of the squalor of Calcutta. She pulled a bench over for both of them to sit on. In her familiar sari, she sat down gently, clasped both hands and spoke to him with her shoulders hunched, her head bowed, only occasionally looking up at him.

And then she raised the subject for which she'd wanted the meeting:

"She brought it up very shortly. She asked gently, but forcefully, that when I went back to Washington, would I attempt to do something for her," the source told us. "To pass the word that this visa charge was an unfair burden on them. That what troubled her greatly was accepting money from people who were giving to help the poor and having to spend that money by giving it to the government for some bureaucratic reason."

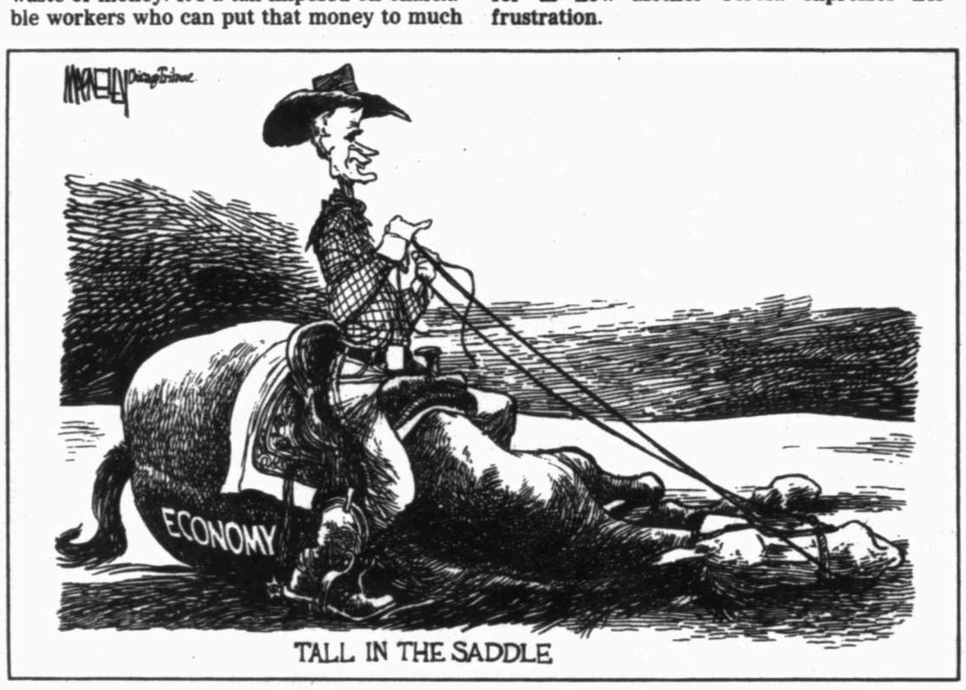

Both this Bush friend and the consular officers in Calcutta gently tried to explain to her that there was nothing they could do. The Indian government was charging such fees to American religious workers, and the long-standing State Department rules of reciprocity required that the United States match their fees.

Several of the American officials have pressed Mother Teresa to turn her lobbying efforts on the government of India, but she demurred, describing her relationship with the Indian government as delicate. "She said this was something she could not ask of them," said the Bush friend.

In her comparisons between Bush and President Ronald Reagan, Bush glaringly falls short.

"I like President Bush," she told the Bush friend, "but President Reagan was helpful." She told the story of a time when she had called President Reagan on the phone about another matter. She was put right through. "He was quite responsive to her, and immediately acted on her request," said this source.

Bush's China policy has disintegrated

WASHINGTON — On the eve of the crucial 14th Party Congress in Beijing, when Chinese reformers behind Deng Xiaoping need all the help they can to wrest control from the totalitarians, the Bush administration's China policy has disintegrated.

Safire

I happen to think it was a bad policy, but at least it was a policy. Throughout his term, President Bush — claiming expertise based on his experience as our ambassador to the People's Republic — has refused to put pressure on China to couple economic and political freedom.

After Tiananmen, Bush pretended to protest by having his secretary of State say that all subsequent high-level contact had been cut off. Secretary Baker's flat lie — no other word is accurate — was to conceal from the U.S. the clandestine visits to China by Brent Scowcroft and Larry Eagleburger. That homage made hypocritical our public protests.

When the Congress voted to remove most-favored-nation trade benefits in retaliation for the crackdown on dissent, Bush vetoed the bill — showing Beijing's hard-liners that the advancement of human freedom in China was not high on the American agenda.

Bush's rationale for this kowtowing was that it paid to maintain contact, that pressure might backfire, that good business would ultimately produce civilized behavior.

As vice president a decade ago, Bush gave impetus to this policy of steady stroking by actively supporting the U.S.-China joint communique of 1982. This was our sellout of Taiwan; with Bush firmly "in the loop," the U.S. promised in writing to limit sales of fighter planes to the island that has resisted communism for a half-century.

The Chinese set great store by these communiques; this agreement was the third building block in the new relationship begun by Nixon and Kissinger in 1972. It was a great victory on the road to intimidating and taking over the 14 million Chinese on Taiwan, many of whom wish to remain free.

Last week, Bush stunned the other signatory by abrogating the agreement. Not for any noble cause of human freedom; it was just that there was this plant in Fort Worth, producing F-16 fighters, that needed Taiwan's business. Votes in Texas outweighed America's word in the world, and Bush found some phony excuse — not mentioned in the communique — to break our solemn undertaking.

The Chinese will pursue nuclear sales to Iran, pay even less attention to our pleas to release dissidents, and might — if they really want to hit where it hurts at election time — stop buying wheat from American farmers.

And for what? To buy some votes in Fort Worth? This is a clear case of undermining our national interest and our international credibility to save a candidacy. As a result, the vaunted Bush China policy has run aground; a new tack has to be taken.

Monday, the Senate had plans to attach human-rights conditions to China trade; this time, Bush should refrain from vetoing it.

Also Monday, the Commission on Broadcasting to the PRC planned to present its report to the White House and Congress. The State Department wants all such broadcasting done by its Voice of America, where editorials are vetted by the mushmouth brigade. Human-rights supporters want the kind of hard-hitting "home service" done by Radio Free Europe, doing the reporting that local media would do if there were no repression.

The commission will come down on the side of a RFE-style Radio Free Asia, though it is willing to defer to Chinese politburo sensibilities by calling it "Asia Democracy Radio."

It's here, in time to be part of a new China policy. We have had four years of no success with secret contacts and one-way trade; this is the time for Bush to make the best of his shameful abrogation and to tell the Chinese leaders that the next four years will be different.

Take my money, please

A gang of the cultural elite was sitting around drinking margaritas and eating refried beans when Lacey came rushing into the bar. "Have you heard the news? Bush is giving away millions of dollars in a desperate bid to win back the disillusioned voters."

Buchwald

"That's just for the people in Florida," Total said.

"It started out in Florida, but he then handed out millions to the farmers in South Dakota, and he dumped a ton of cash on the aerospace workers in Texas. He's behaving like a drunken sailor."

Lampner asked, "How can he do that and balance the budget?"

"He is giving up balancing the budget," Healy declared. "His sole concern is beating Clinton, and the only way he can do that is to give away the store."

"I thought his main argument with the Democrats was that they were the big spenders," Total said.

Healy told us, "It's not really new money he's giving away. It's funds already allocated for programs by Congress that Bush refused to spend because they were wasteful. In a close political race a president has the right to change his mind."

Lampner then said, "Hey, wait a minute. If Bush is handing out money to the voters, maybe we can get a grant from the National Endowment of the Arts."

"They turned us down when we submitted plans to build a statue to Jane Fonda on Pennsylvania Avenue," Lacy said. "Even after we promised she would be fully clothed."

Healy suggested, "If we promise the president he can count on us on Election Day he might reconsider honoring Jane."

I admitted, "I'd rather get a grant to study why Hollywood deals in sex and violence."

"You can't get one for that because all the people who make the films on sex and violence are working to re-elect President Bush. He's not going to write a check for someone who wants to expose Arnold Schwarznegger, Tom Selleck and Chuck Norris."

"You are probably right," I agreed. "But I sure would like some of that Bush money while it's available. I wonder how much my vegetable garden is worth in agricultural subsidies?"

"Thousands," Lampner replied, "providing you convince your entire family to vote the straight GOP ticket."

Healy said, "There is something wrong about Bush using my tax money for his re-election."

"All presidents do it," Lacey claimed. "It's their prerogative. But Bush's mistake is to hand it out too early because then the voter forgets who gave it to him."

"I'd like to see him ship some our way to finance a missile site," I said.

"Bush doesn't ship money," Lampner disagreed. "He brings it with him, so the press will see him handing it around. In that way the whole country will witness him playing Santa Claus in September."

Healy said, "Let's think of something we need federal money for and then set up a photo opportunity his political people can't resist."

I said, "It has to have the letters G-O-D in it. The president made that perfectly clear to us at the Republican Convention."

"How about a new U.S. highway called 'God 66'?" suggested Healy.

"It's worth a try. If they turn us down, we'll propose the Quayle Center for Remedial Television Disabilities."

Pro-choice equals pro-family

The Republican Party never ceases to amaze me. They are against abortion yet they criticize unmarried women for having children. Most women dream of having a good man but fairy tales rarely become reality.

They promote the family, yet the president promises to veto the family and Medical Leave Act. The Congress passed this act last fall, but did not send it to the president because he vows to veto it.

The United States has the great honor of being the only major industrialized country in the world with no family leave policy.

This act provides an employee with 12 weeks of UNPAID job-protected leave per year for the birth or adoption of a child. Also for the serious illness of the employee or an immediate family member. Only firms with 50 or more employees would be covered by the act.

The president states this bill "would cost too much." Who does the president think is going to pay for the birth, housing, feeding, clothing and education of all future unwanted children of this country when the Republican Party outlaws all abortions and some methods of birth control such as the I.U.D.? I am willing to bet the American taxpayer will foot the bill.

Have any of these people looked at the statistics and unbelievable amount of unpaid child support in this country? We should also keep in mind, world overpopulation rates are skyrocketing.

I believe that every child should be a wanted child. I believe that pro-choice is pro-family.

Trade alliance steps closer

On behalf of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors, I want to extend my congratulations to trade negotiators from the United States, Mexico, and Canada for wrapping up negotiations on the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA).

It appears that we are one step closer to creating a trade alliance consisting of over 362 million consumers that will be of great economic importance to the Midland area.

As the specific details of the agreement are made public and as the debate over the merits of NAFTA begin to intensify, it is mandatory that we take into consideration the potential job and commerce opportunities that could be available to Texans across this state. According to State Comptroller John Sharp, Texas stands to gain 113,000 new jobs — many in the Midland area. Just as importantly, the announcement signals a new era of cooperation between the United States and our beloved Mexico.

Nation in brief

■ Study: Stress is reason for Gulf War illnesses

WASHINGTON — The Army has concluded that "very high levels of stress" — exacerbated by a fear of an Army cover-up — was the main reason why 125 Indiana Army reservists were stricken with hair loss and other unexplained symptoms following their service in the Gulf War.

The 50-page Army study, obtained by Cox Newspapers, will serve as the starting point for a House Veterans' Affairs Committee hearing on Wednesday into a scattering of unusual medical problems reported by Gulf War veterans.

"A disease that results from psychological factors is just as serious as a disease that is caused by some physical problem," said Pentagon spokesman Bob Hall on the eve of the hearing. "It is something that needs more investigation, and we need to keep looking for common denominators between the various cases that have come forward."

Pentagon spokeswoman Susan Hansen said "up to 200" of the more than 540,000 Gulf War troops have reported lingering medical problems after the war. Complaints have included skin rashes, bleeding gums, elevated blood pressure and liver disorders.

■ L.A. school district rejects Magic's AIDS video

LOS ANGELES — Magic Johnson's AIDS video is now in stores, but it will not be available in Los Angeles public schools because a district committee says it is inappropriate for classroom use, officials said Tuesday.

A review committee of the Los Angeles Unified School District rejected the celebrity-studded video, "Time Out: The Truth About HIV, AIDS and You," which was released Tuesday by Arsenio Hall Communications in association with Paramount Pictures.

In a prepared statement, Hollace Brown, senior vice president of advertising for Paramount Home Video said he was surprised by the district's decision because Paramount never submitted the tape for evaluation.

"We did submit it to an individual member of the L.A. school board asking for personal endorsement," he said.

The district committee of educators and teachers said the 42-minute educational video is too long for classroom use, the language is inappropriate and the structure is ill-defined, said Sue Quinn, the district's supervisor of audiovisual services.

■ More kids come to school sick, teachers say

WASHINGTON — More children are coming to grade school sick, disturbed or abused, a national survey of teachers showed Tuesday.

"This country has a health care crisis in the classroom," said Dr. Daniel Shea, president of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

In the group's poll, nine out of every ten teachers said they had at least one student last year whose emotional or physical health problems had hindered their classroom performance. Nearly two-thirds of the teachers said they are seeing more students with health problems than in the past.

Most teachers said some children at their schools suffered from psychological and emotional problems, family violence and abuse, unhealthy lifestyles, poor nutrition, violent behavior and lack of regular health care. Nearly half the teachers reported students suffering from untreated illnesses or problems with vision or hearing.

Pat Henry, president of the National PTA, warned that the problem is growing because most worker health insurance doesn't cover routine preventative care and immunizations.

WASHINGTON (NYT) — FBI Director William S. Sessions said Tuesday that the armed theft of cars from drivers was becoming such a serious problem nationwide that his agency was adding it to the list of violent crimes being handled by a special force of agents.

The FBI said the case of a Maryland woman being dragged to her death last week by thieves stealing her car prompted a survey of such carjackings around the country. Officials said the survey found that armed theft of cars in parking garages, shopping center lots and at traffic stops had become so extensive that it should no longer be considered simple auto theft.

From now on, the FBI said, carjackings would be included with gang activity and drug-related violence as crimes investigated by a 300-member arm of the agency formed in January with former foreign counter-intelligence agents. The FBI said the force would use undercover officers, decoys and informants to pursue carjackers.

"We consider carjacking a violent crime that deserves the full attention of the FBI," Sessions said in a statement released Tuesday.

But when pressed for numbers, the FBI said there were few precise statistics because carjacking is not a specific crime, but rather a blend of auto theft and armed robbery.

The FBI said that while it had few statistics, its national survey indicated that the problem was most severe in Los Angeles, New York City, Newark, Washington, Houston and San Juan, P.R. Law-enforcement officials say they believe carjacking was first reported in Detroit and Miami sometime within the last five years. From there, it quickly spread across the country.

Last week a bill was introduced in Congress to make carjacking a Federal crime, and Gov. William Donald Schaefer of Maryland said Monday that he would ask state legislators to make carjacking a specific crime carrying a mandatory 15-year sentence.

Carjacking came into particularly sharp focus last week with the death of a 34-year-old mother in a violent auto theft.

The crime shocked Washington area residents but did not deter other carjackers.

On Friday alone, there were seven more carjackings, including one by 14- and 15-year-old girls armed with a rusted but loaded 9-millimeter pistol, and another in which a 17-year-old boy was shot dead after trying to steal the car of an off-duty FBI agent.

"What makes this different than other violent crime is that people tend to treat their cars like their homes," said an FBI spokesman, John Collingwood. "They don't give a second thought to safety in their car. Now violent crime has invaded that area."

As with other violent personal crime, police and the FBI have advice for motorists on avoiding carjacking — drive with doors locked and windows closed, be aware of people and surroundings when parking a car, leave enough space between cars at a red light or stop sign to pull away if necessary.

They also suggest carrying auto registration in a wallet and keeping house and car keys on separate rings.

"Probably the most important," Sessions said in a television interview Tuesday "do not resist a carjacker. Try to simply say, 'Yes, here. Take my keys. Take my car. Thank you.' "

Child care changes in two-income families

By Nita Lelyveld
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Working parents are increasingly turning to day care centers, instead of relatives, to care for their preschool children, according to a U.S. Census Bureau report released Tuesday.

Meanwhile, in families in which both parents are employed, many parents work different shifts to take turns being at home, the report shows.

In 1988, 26 percent of the 9.5 million children under the age of 5 with working mothers were cared for in organized child care facilities, compared with 13 percent in 1977, the report shows.

The portion of preschool children with working mothers who were cared for in the home dropped from 34 percent to 28 percent during the same period.

Only 8 percent of these children were cared for in their homes by extended families in 1988, compared with 12 percent in 1977. The portion cared for in relatives' homes dropped from 18 percent to 13 percent over the time span.

'Because of the enormous expense of day care, people have had to become more creative about what kind of arrangements they can make, and fathers and mothers often work at different times.'

—Shelley Gates

Economic changes are partly responsible, said Barbara Otto, a spokeswoman for 9 to 5, National Association of Working Women in Cleveland, Ohio.

"It's a two-wage earner economy and many people are recognizing that they can't rely on relatives," Otto said.

In 1988, there were 18.9 million working women with children under the age of 15. No comparable statistic exists for 1977.

During that time, the number of preschool children whose mothers worked more than doubled, from 4.3 million to 9.4 million.

The section of the report on the hours parents worked — and who took care of the children when the mothers were away — focused only on married couples, not single mothers.

It found that preschool children were far more likely to be cared for by their parents at home ff their parents worked different shifts. In such cases, fathers often were the primary care-givers, the report said.

"Because of the enormous expense of day care, people have had to become more creative about what kind of arrangements they can make, and fathers and mothers often work at different times," said Shelley Gates, associate director of Women Employed, a Chicago-based association of working women.

Battle rages in Colorado over school-choice

N.Y. Times News Service

In the newest battleground over "school choice," a ballot initiative in Colorado would give parents up to $2,500 in public money each year to cover the expense of private or parochial schools and even of educating a child at home.

The citizen-led initiative, which is on the ballot in November, has touched off another rancorous debate over the merits of school choice, in which parents are allowed to use public dollars at whatever schools they wish.

Opponents assert that if the measure is approved it will undermine public schools by siphoning money away from them. But proponents say giving all parents more choices will improve public schools through competition.

Although the only poll published so far shows that the measure has more support than opposition, both sides say public opinion on the measure is about evenly divided right now.

Because Colorado has the only choice initiative on a ballot this fall — efforts to get one on the California ballot failed — both sides expect the campaign to draw inordinate interest, turning the state's measure into a national litmus test for school choice, an approach to education supported by the Bush administration.

"It's a good initiative, and it advances the notion of giving parents and students greater educational opportunities," said Lanny Griffth, assistant secretary of education for intergovernmental and interagency affairs.

While the measure has drawn considerable fire, opposition to the home-schooling component has been vociferous, in part because of the rising popularity nationally of educating children at home. As many as 500,000 children are being taught at home, according to 1990 estimates.

Critics maintain that it is detrimental to a child's academic and social development. But supporters call home-schooling the ultimate in choice, and Griffith says the Education Department considers home schools an appropriate option for voucher money along with private or public schools.

Kauai residents return to battered homes; tourists leave

By Jeff Wilson
Associated Press Writer

LIHUE, Hawaii — Residents separated from family and homes on hurricane-battered Kauai began returning to the island Tuesday for their first look at the devastation.

Officials resumed some commercial flights to the island, where limited phone service was restored Monday for some of the 52,000 residents, and portable generators were pumping running water to about 70 percent of it.

But electricity remained out. And health officials warned people to bury perishable food and issued instructions on how to build trench latrines.

"It's just a Herculean task that we're doing," said Thomas Batey, assistant to Kauai Mayor JoAnn Yukimura. "We've been kind of knocked down to our knees and we're crawling up as fast as we can."

Restoration of telephone service was set back late Monday when a construction crew clearing debris from the roadway severed a trunking cable between Lihue and Kapaa. Calls to and from the island are now possible only from the Lihue area, said Hawaiian Telephone spokesman Mark Doyle.

He said the company shipped 170 pay telephones to Lihue so that people in other areas can go there to place calls.

"This guy called me at 3 a.m. and said, 'I'm the first one in line,'" said Civil Defense spokesman Glenn Soma. "These guys have been waiting since Saturday to get there so I don't think it's too early for them."

Because Lihue Airport's control tower is damaged, only daylight flights are allowed. General aviation craft and helicopters are still forbidden.

—James Denny
tour bus driver

Before the flights could start going in, more than 2,000 stranded tourists had to come out, said state transportation spokeswoman Marilyn Kali.

Officials warned that island resources are scant.

"We would hope that people who visit the island have a real good reason for being there," said Roy Price of the state's Civil Defense.

A sense of order was returning to Kauai. Homeowners carted trash, tree limbs, palm fronds, and aluminum siding to their curbs and stacked rubble in neat piles 6 feet high. People lined up outside banks, which reopened Tuesday, and at markets and drugstores, and neighbors exchanged Iniki stories.

Streets have been cleared of power lines and poles, and there was heavy traffic congestion with people trying to find water, propane gas and open markets.

Electrical power was expected to be restored in Lihue, Kauai's largest town, by Monday, although officials said full restoration would take months.

Iniki struck Friday, flattening sugar cane fields, battering the island's 70 resort hotels and seriously damaging almost half of Kauai's 21,000 homes. Damage has been estimated at $1 billion on Kauai alone.

A Hawaiian Air National Guardsman died in a storm-related accident on the island late Monday, said Army National Guard Maj. Bud Bowles. Tech. Sgt. Dennis Dalen, 46, of Honolulu, was pinned under a truck that flipped when it got entangled in cable along a rural road.

Three people died during the weekend, one on Oahu. Coast Guard officials suspended the search for two missing fishermen Monday.

Relief supplies and federal troops poured into the island Monday, replenishing a hospital and restocking bare cupboards. Gasoline and other items were in short supply.

Wilcox Memorial Hospital was running low for a while on tetanus shots, because so many people were stepping on nails, said Steve Hosler, the hospital's vice president for human resources.

However, supplies — including tons of ice, rolls of plastic sheeting and boxes of hammers and nails — were bolstered by relief flights.

In Washington, the Senate approved $3 billion more for the rebuilding in Hawaii. The money was added to the $7.5 billion approved for reconstruction in Florida and Louisiana, battered last month by Hurricane Andrew.

Hawaii National Guard spokesman Maj. Wayne Yoshioka said 2,400 active duty military personnel along with nearly 900 Guardsmen are on Kauai to assist in the relief effort.

The National Guard set up five distribution centers to pass out food and emergency supplies.

Senate approves $10.5 billion for Hurricanes Andrew, Iniki

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rushing to keep up with Mother Nature, the Senate overwhelmingly approved $10.5 billion in disaster aid on Tuesday to help Hawaii rebuild from Hurricane Iniki and assist Hurricane Andrew's victims in Florida and Louisiana.

Senators approved the measure on a 84-10 vote. House-Senate negotiators will now try to write a compromise bill, which Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said could be done as early as this week.

"Kauai is a scene of unimaginable devastation," said Sen. Daniel Akaka, D-Hawaii, referring to a weekend trip he made to the island that bore the brunt of the Iniki's destruction. "Whenever you see a coconut tree and its leaves stripped, you know that its winds were strong."

Earlier, the lawmakers used voice votes to make two major changes in the measure. They added a final $3 billion to address Iniki's toll and the growing pleas for help from areas battered by Andrew. And they inserted an extra $66 million to rebuild small parts of Homestead Air Force Base, far less than President Bush wanted.

Eager to show they can respond to emergencies, lawmakers and Bush seemed likely to work out their differences quickly. But the bill's immediate future was clouded because it included an unrelated provision on labor regulations that drew veto threats from Bush administration officials.

The $10.5 billion measure would be easily the biggest federal relief package ever for a natural disaster, dwarfing the $2.9 billion approved in 1990 for California's Loma Prieta earthquake. It would also further swell the federal deficit.

The original $7.5 billion hurricane bill, completed last Thursday, was rendered moot a day later when Iniki slammed Hawaii with 160 mph winds and 30-foot waves. Iniki left three dead, 8,000 homeless and caused an estimated $1 billion in damage.

"This is one time I think this place is moving too quickly," said Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla. "We keep getting information."

Andrew, the costliest natural disaster to ever hit the United States, is so far blamed for 55 deaths and nearly $22 billion in damage. The storm left more than 250,000 homeless.

Mack and other Florida officials, bargaining behind closed doors until the last minute, won more aid for their state, but less than they initially hoped.

On a voice vote, the Senate accepted an amendment by Mack and Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., that would provide $66 million to rebuild some of the facilities at destroyed Homestead Air Force Base.

The money would allow enough reconstruction to let the U.S. Customs Service and other agencies that use the base to resume functioning. But no money was provided for work that would allow a fighter wing to return to the air base.

An additional $26 million to remove rubble and begin planning for possible reconstruction was already in the measure, bringing the total for Homestead to $92 million.

The base's fate has become a political issue, as President Bush pledged to resurrect the south Florida air base shortly after it was destroyed by Andrew on Aug. 24. Florida is a key state in Bush's re-election bid, and the base was a major local employer.

Officers, city file response to lawsuit

■ Lawmen claim they acted reasonably in pursuit of man they thought was a suspect and whose arm was broken in the incident.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Two police officers acted reasonably when pursuing a man they had mistaken for a suspect and whose arm they injured, according to a response filed to a federal lawsuit against the officers.

The lawsuit alleging a violation of civil rights ,filed Aug. 17, stems from a July 6 incident in which Celestino Jasso, 46, who is mentally ill, had his right arm broken by officers David Beatty and Alvin Navarette.

Jasso fit the description of an intoxicated man involved in a disturbance earlier that night who had eluded police, Police Chief Richard Czech said prior to the lawsuit being filed.

Jasso was not the man wanted by police.

While looking for the suspect, the officers spotted Jasso outside his home at 1407 Walnut St. about 11 p.m.

The lawsuit states that Jasso was standing in his front yard. The defendants' response states that Jasso was in the street. The roadway and yard are separated by a fence.

"These Defendants believed that he (Jasso) was the suspect and, because of concern for the safety of any occupants in the house, made chase and entered the house in an attempt to apprehend the suspect," according to the defendants' answer filed Friday.

The officers "used no more force than was reasonably necessary to apprehend the resisting Plaintiff," the response stated.

Conversely, the lawsuit states the officers "grabbed Jasso's right arm, pulled the arm violently, broke his arm and caused severe bruising and contusions."

Jasso, a thinly built man, spent several days in the hospital and has undergone surgery on his arm twice, according to his family.

The lawsuit seeks an unspecified amount for compensatory and punitive damages.

The lawsuit maintains that Jasso had not engaged in any criminal activity and the officers' actions constituted "an unlawful search, excessive use of force and false imprisonment."

But the defendants claim that the officers had probable cause and "had every reasonable belief that Mr. Jasso was the suspect."

In addition, Jasso was "solely responsible" for the incident because his "conduct was unreasonable under the circumstances."

City Attorney Keith Stretcher, who represents the city and Czech, and Terry Rhoads with the law firm Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe & Dawson, who represents the two officers for the city, declined to expand on Jasso's contribution to the incident at this time. The attorneys will be taking depositions within the next few months.

The defense also contends that the officers are immune from prosecution in the case because of the nature of their jobs and because reasonable action was taken.

"There are protections afforded to police officers who in good faith perform their duties," Rhoads said. That protection is acknowledged and part of the American justice system, he said.

The response further maintains, based on case precedent, that the

Radio talk show listeners take Guerrero to task

■ TRC chairman's academic past and political future has been a topic of conversation all across the state.

By Michael Holmes
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Lena Guerrero's academic past and political future were hot topics of conversation across Texas on Tuesday.

From radio talk shows to coffee shops, Texans were talking about Ms. Guerrero's admission that she really isn't a college graduate and doesn't know how she became erroneously linked to the Phi Beta Kappa honors society.

"It should be called Phi Beta Kappagate," said one caller to Austin radio station KLBJ-AM, where Ms. Guerrero's resume was under discussion for a second straight day.

An Austin restaurant known for wisecracking humor displayed a sign that read: "Lena, it could have been worse. You might have almost graduated from A&M."

The controversy arose last week, with Ms. Guerrero's admission that she wasn't a graduate of the University of Texas-Austin, as she has claimed for 12 years.

It grew more heated this week.

Monday, Republican opponent Barry Williamson produced literature from Ms. Guerrero's 1984 state House campaign — which he said was prepared by her own advertising firm — that claimed she was a member of the prestigious Phi Betta Kappa honors society.

Then on Tuesday, the head of the UT Ex-Students Association said Ms. Guerrero was warned last year there were doubts about her claim to be a 1980 honors graduate.

"We told her that the university's records didn't match with her records and that when she had time, she ought to check it out," said Roy Vaughan, executive director of the ex-students' group.

Vaughan said the issue of her graduation status was discussed with Ms. Guerrero or a member of her staff in February or March of 1991 after she was selected as an "Outstanding Young Texas Ex."

"When we called them, we said it (her graduation status) was not material for the award," Vaughan said. "It was in a context of 'this is something you ought to get straightened out.'

Guerrero was in Houston on Tuesday and unavailable for comment, a spokeswoman for her campaign said.

Ms. Guerrero, a Democrat, said she always believed she earned a bachelor's degree and never intended to mislead anyone.

She said she only learned otherwise after being questioned by news reporters and discovering — to her shock — that she was four classroom hours short of the 120 hours required for a degree.

As for the Phi Beta Kappa claims in her old campaign and legislative biographies, she said, "I have never myself, I believe, made that claim."

While political analysts were assessing the fallout, so were voters.

"Her credibility is zero," said a

Teacher's efforts are rewarded

■ Goddard social studies instructor has been named as one of the U.S.' top 100 first-year teachers.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Walking into a seventh-grade classroom as a new teacher is a situation most people would consider challenging, to say the least.

But for Susan Danley, a seventh-grade social studies teacher at Goddard Junior High School, it was a chance to try to reach every student in her class, an effort that has garnered her national recognition.

A wealth of appreciative letters from every one of her students last year — and a nomination from an administrator — helped persuade a panel of judges to name her one of the top 100 first-year teachers in the United States, and one of two educators receiving the award in Texas.

The Student Loan Marketing Association in Washington, D.C., — known as Sallie Mae — selected Ms. Danley for its First-Year Teacher Award. The award includes a plaque for the teacher, and one for her school; a check for $1,000, and a Teacher Tribute Award to the teacher who inspired her to go into teaching.

"When I found out about it, it felt neat. I felt really honored," Ms. Danley said Tuesday afternoon as she took a short break from her duties as cheerleader sponsor.

"Ten years ago at Goddard, I was a cheerleader," Ms. Danley said. "So when they needed a cheerleader sponsor ... "

The young teacher, who practically blends into her classroom with her youthful and bubbly personality, said her greatest challenge last year was teaching students with a wide range of abilities.

"I had 35 students last year. Some knew exactly which law school they were going to go to and some had trouble writing their own name. Others had trouble reading. It was challenging to try to reach the brightest to the lowest (achievers)," she said.

But no matter which level a student is at academically, Ms. Danley has a philosophy that "each child can learn."

"Each child has his or her own needs, and the more kids you have, the harder it is to meet their learning needs in 50 minutes," she said. "But all kids can learn. You just have to find their special niche — research, drawing or singing — and plug into that niche."

The teacher said she always had an inkling that she would be a teacher. But she was really inspired to go into the field by Sarah Macina, her honors English teacher during her senior year at Midland High School. Ms. Macina, who retired from Midland Independent School District last May, will be honored with a Sallie Mae Teacher Tribute Award and will be mentioned in the Sept. 21 issue of Newsweek magazine.

"Mrs. Macina was a hard teacher," Ms. Handley said. "But she made me realize what it meant to be a good teacher. She inspired me to teach. I realized that I wanted to be one of the teachers who cares about kids."

"I am just delighted that Susan mentioned me," Ms. Macina said. "She also came to my retirement party. She has certainly done very well."

Ms. Handley said her award money will go toward a dining room table and chairs. "I am getting married in December, with no furniture," she said, grinning. "So this is my table and chairs."

Despite the notoriety, Ms. Handley said the best part of being named one of the top 100 first-year teachers is receiving copies of the letters her former seventh-graders wrote on her behalf.

"It allowed me to keep every single one of the letters," Ms. Handley said. "It's the most inspiring thing that has ever happened to me — to read what those kids said. It's amazing the little things that you do that have an effect on them."

While the young teacher allowed that seventh-graders can be a challenge to teach, she said, "I like it. This is an age where you can be a very positive influence on their lives."

Ms. Danley graduated magna cum laude with a bachelor's degree in science from Texas Tech University in 1991.

She was given the award for her outstanding performance in the classroom. All first-year public and private elementary and secondary school teachers nationwide are eligible for the award.

MC board formalizes role of foundation

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

The Midland College board of trustees approved the role of the Midland College Foundation and added two new faculty members at its meeting Tuesday.

The board officially formalized the role of the Midland College Foundation in its relationship with the school.

"The foundation and the school have been working in an informal agreement until now," said college spokesman H.A. Tuck. "This just formalizes what the foundation has been doing all along — raising funds and supporting the development of the college."

The board also approved the appointment of two full-time faculty members. Carol Bailey will teach art and Quintin Taylor, Ph.D., will teach government and history.

MC President David E. Daniel reported that the base for the marquee to be put up on Garfield Street had been installed and the board should be up within the next week.

Daniel also said that while he did not have an final enrollment report, the estimated number of students for this year was comparable to last year's record high of 4,153.

Although late registration concluded last week, final enrollment figures are not expected until later this week.

Those figures will reflect those students enrolled in off-campus classes in Big Lake, Fort Stockton and Iraan. Also included will be high school seniors concurrently enrolled in MC credit courses while finishing their high school course load, in Midland and the three outlying communities.

Mrs. Quayle: Clinton lacks experience to lead nation

VICTORIA (AP) — Marilyn Quayle plunged into a Texas campaign swing Tuesday with attacks on Bill Clinton and Al Gore, saying the Democratic candidates would further damage the economy with more taxing and spending.

Mrs. Quayle began a two-day trek by officially opening a Republican Party headquarters office in Victoria, in the heart of oil and ranch territory, before heading to San Angelo Tuesday night and to Abilene this morning.

"We barely survived four years of Jimmy Carter," she told supporters. "I guarantee you this country is going to have a hard time surviving another four years of another Southern Democrat governor who has no experience leading a large nation and leading the world."

Mrs. Quayle said farmers, ranchers and oil business people should be afraid of Clinton and Gore and their environmental proposals.

"With Al Gore's policy on fossil fuels and on oil and gas, this guy's going to close down most of our oil and gas industry," she said in an interview with The Associated Press. "I think anybody in oil and gas ought to read Al Gore's book and they'd be plenty scared."

Later, at a Republican political fund-raiser, Mrs. Quayle described Gore's book on the environment as "frightening."

"He would basically shut you all down," she said. "Yes, we want clean water and clean air, but we need a balance between human needs."

Mrs. Quayle said President Bush knows the oil business because he was in it and said he is working to decrease America's dependence on foreign oil. Mrs. Quayle also said Bush will help farmers and ranchers by opening new markets and keeping interest rates and inflation low.

Almost as often as she attacked the Democrats, Mrs. Quayle took jabs at news organizations, particularly the "national" news media, which she said is biased in favor of the Democrats.

"They are trying so hard to swing this election. It is amazing to me what they are doing. It makes it doubly important for our volunteers to get out there and work very hard," she said at the fund-raiser, which generated more than $20,000.

In the next six weeks she and Vice President Quayle "are going to blanket the state," she said, predicting Bush will carry his adopted home state on election day.

DEATHS

Paul Laverty Sr.

Volunteers to raise 'Angel Plane' funds

Staff report

A group of Midland volunteers has begun a telephone campaign to help raise money for "Angel Planes," a program that provides free air transportation to blood banks, tissue banks, health care agencies and needy individuals with serious health care problems.

Money raised by the local telephone effort will be used to purchase fuel for the airplanes.

Mrs. Quayle to work on Hawaii relief efforts

VICTORIA (AP) — Marilyn Quayle says she will head to Hawaii Thursday, the day after her Texas campaign trip ends, to work on disaster relief efforts in the wake of Hurricane Iniki.

Mrs. Quayle said Tuesday during a campaign stop in Victoria that relief efforts are moving quickly on the Hawaiian island of Kauai, which was pounded by the storm's 130-mph winds last weekend.

"One of the advantages of having it in such a self-contained area is that you can move things — even though it is an island — in quickly. You can control what goes in," she said.

In the aftermath of Hurricane Andrew in Florida, she said, one problem was there were too many relief items flowing in for the organization that was in place to handle.

Mrs. Quayle said on Kauai she will oversee the Federal Emergency Management Agency's response and observe to see how well the military and civilian relief efforts work together.

Richards criticizes GOP's attack on lawyers

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Speaking to a Houston audience dotted with attorneys, Gov. Ann Richards ridiculed President Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle for criticizing lawyers.

"Never, ever in my adult life have I seen a presidential and a vice presidential candidate indict and attack an entire profession in the middle of a presidential race, and they should be called out and defeated for it," Richards said.

Richards, whose 1990 campaign received hundreds of thousands of dollars in contributions and loans from plaintiffs' lawyers, was honored Monday at a Democratic Party fund-raiser for judicial and other local candidates. Contributions to the luncheon came mostly from lawyers.

Lawyers are engaged in "a terrific profession" and spend their lives "protecting the rights of Texans.'

— Gov. Ann Richards

She said the Bush-Quayle ticket's attacks on the legal profession will boost support for Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton.

"Regardless of your philosophical persuasion, if you are an attorney and you have heard the attacks that have come from the Republican Party, you're going to be writing a check to help Bill Clinton get elected," she said.

During his acceptance speech at the Republican National Convention here, Bush said, "Sharp lawyers are running wild."

He has vowed to curb "crazy lawsuits" and has suggested that Clinton's campaign is overly reliant on support from trial lawyers.

In addition, Quayle has criticized the American Bar Association for what he calls a liberal stand on social issues.

Richards, whose ex-husband is a civil rights lawyer, said lawyers are engaged in "a terrific profession" and spend their lives "protecting the rights of Texans."

She said public disenchantment with the legal system is being stoked by the Republicans.

"I would suspect that since the president holds the legal profession in such low repute, that explains some of his appointments to the Supreme Court," she said.

The governor, however, had her own criticisms for Texas judges. "When I hear of a judiciary that spends more time on the golf course than it does sitting and hearing cases, I wonder whether we have made good decisions," she said.

She also said criminal court judges should use more consistent sentencing guidelines and consider alternative sentences as the state scrambles to expand its prison space.

"There are other, productive sentences that can be handed down from this bench that punish those that have committed crimes but do not completely break the treasury of the state of Texas," she said.

Agency wants biologist's assailant to be charged

AUSTIN (AP) — The Lower Colorado River Authority and a biologist hired to look for endangered species want criminal charges filed against a man who said he mistook the biologist for a trespasser and shot at him.

Williamson County prosecutors say they will present the case to a grand jury by early October.

The biologist, James Reddell, was shot in the leg Sept. 7 by Thomas Hemesath, officials say.

Reddell was working for the LCRA on its right of way, looking for endangered animals along a power line that the authority plans to upgrade.

The work is required by the federal Endangered Species Act to make sure such projects don't harm protected species.

Hemesath, who leases the property for his cattle, has had numerous problems with trespassers, Georgetown police said.

When he came upon Reddell and his assistant, Jose Reyes, he ordered them to get down to their knees. When they didn't immediately comply, he fired at the ground; the bullet ricocheted and hit Reddell, police said.

In a letter to Williamson County District Attorney Ken Anderson, the LCRA urged that criminal charges be pursued "with vigor."

The LCRA said the shooting has engendered fear among its employees who work on transmission line easements and rights of way.

Reddell, a renowned biologist, said that in years of field work, "I had never been confronted by a landowner in such a violent manner. He did not give me the opportunity to explain my business on the property before he started shooting."

Anderson said, "Everyone agreed the gun was fired at the ground, and it was a ricochet that hit Mr. Reddell. Whether you characterize that as an accident or an illegal, reckless act is something the grand jury will have to determine."

RADIO: Guerrero's academic past is hot topic

(From 1B)

Bill Cryer, the governor's press secretary, says Richards has no regrets about naming Ms. Guerrero as her first appointee.

"I don't think Lena should resign," Cryer said. "If you look at Lena's record, she has been one of the most effective Railroad Commissioners we've ever had."

Several newspaper editorial pages Tuesday said the incident raises serious questions about Ms. Guerrero.

The Dallas Morning News editorialized: "'Honesty is the best policy,' wrote H.L. Mencken, 'unless, of course, you are an exceptionally good liar.' Lena Guerrero is in trouble on both counts."

Said the Houston Post: "For Guerrero to have used or allowed the use of such information repeatedly in her political career is not only deceitful, it's just plain dumb. If she had simply told the truth and corrected any misinformation before it was perpetuated, her career would probably have fared just as well."

Added the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, "Whether ... Lena Guerrero has a college degree is irrelevant to her qualifications to serve in public office. But questions about whether she has knowingly and intentionally misrepresented her academic credentials strike at the heart of character and integrity ..."

Officers say teen tried to hire man to kill mom

HOUSTON (AP) — A 15-year-old boy has been accused of trying to hire a hitman to kill his mother for $3,000 because she had been "on his back" for years, authorities said.

Harris County Sheriff's officials said the youth allegedly had asked a man he knew to commit the murder.

But the man instead contacted sheriff's detectives, who set up a meeting between the youth and a "hitman," who actually was an investigator for the Harris County District Attorney's office.

"He told our investigator that he wished he could kill her, bring her back to life and kill her again," sheriff's Sgt. John Denholm said. But investigators said the youth has offered no specific reasons for wanting his mother dead.

The youth was arrested late Friday after meeting with the undercover investigator. He later was placed in the custody of the Harris County Juvenile Department.

Prosecutors said they may seek to get the boy certified as an adult to stand trial on a solicitation of capital murder charge.

Authorities said the teenager, a student at Spring High School in north Houston, told an undercover officer he wanted his mother killed because she had been "on his back" since he was 9.

"His mother is scared to death of him," Denholm said. "She doesn't want him out. He doesn't like her. They've (deputies) made calls there before for him beating her."

The sheriff's department has been called to the home many times because of disputes between the single mother and her only child.

But despite the past problems, sheriff's detective Frank Pratt said the mother "was surprised at the extent to which he went."

Man dies when car falls on him

Staff report

A Midland teen-ager died Monday afternoon after a car that he was working on fell on him.

According to a police report, officers were dispatched at 4:56 p.m. Monday to 2613 Fannin in reference to someone being pinned beneath a car.

Michael Wilson, 19, had been working under his car when it fell on him. He was transported to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center where he later died of head and chest injuries.

Speaker to discuss health-plan proposal

Staff report

Shirley Hutzler, president of the Texas Association of Health Underwriters, will be the guest speaker at Thursday's meeting of the West Texas Association of Health Underwriters.

The meeting is set for noon at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

The subject of her speech will be "the pitfalls of Gov. Richards' health task force's recommendation of a Texas health plan (single payor system) and better alternatives."

Man destroys yard, plumbing in effort to rescue puppies

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Hours after Aaron Gonzalez began trying to rescue his puppies from a sewer line, his back yard was a shambles, his plumbing system devastated and his home flooded.

But the dogs, including one named Stinky, were safe.

The puppies' frantic mother alerted Gonzalez Sunday morning that the seven 2-week-old pups had fallen down a 4-inch trap line.

Gonzalez and his wife, Sharon, could reach only two.

So he dug several feet to where the pipe runs horizontally toward the house, and cracked open the line.

He lost his sewer and water service but he still couldn't reach the other dogs. They wouldn't come when he called either.

Gonzalez turned to the city for help, but none of the agencies he called would help, he said.

He used his neighbor's shop vacuum to suck three more pups from the pipe.

Gonzalez abandoned his efforts about 2 a.m., planning to get a backhoe to tear up the yard the next morning.

But the couple couldn't sleep because the trapped puppies "cried and cried," and their whimpering mother refused to leave the hole.

Said Gonzalez: "It was ugly."

The next morning he tried the city again. He said he only got this advice: chop up the dogs with a plumber's snake and flush them away.

"Everybody wanted me to take the easy way out," he said.

But after neighbor Jose Perez called his city councilman, some 15 city workers showed up with a backhoe. They dug a trench to the pipe below.

One dog had died. After several hours, however, a worker snagged the other mud-covered puppy with a length of stiff clothesline.

"It's a white dog, but he looked black," said Perez, who plans to keep the puppy. "I'm going to call him Stinky."

Democrats to play 'real people' ads

■ Radio spots by the state party feature Republicans who are disenchanted with Bush.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Republicans who are disenchanted with President Bush and the GOP are featured in two radio advertisements by the Texas Democratic Party.

Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle said Tuesday the "real people" ads "are representative of many, many individuals in the state who have had it with Bush."

Both of the Republicans — business people from Houston — complain in the 60-second ads about the economy, and the conduct of their party during the GOP National Convention last month.

Joan Kennedy, whose interview was the basis for one ad, told reporters she supported former President Reagan both times, and voted for Bush in 1988. She said she voted for Democratic Gov. Ann Richards in 1990.

'Democrats have helped elect George Bush and Ronald Reagan, and they will do it again.'

— Karen Hughes of Texas GOP

But she said Bush lacks the leadership abilities to work with Congress and get the economy moving.

The single mother of three children also said that criticism of Hillary Clinton during the Republican Convention was unfair.

Ms. Kennedy, who works for a land developer and runs a personnel business, says in the ad: "There are no jobs. I've had enough broken promises from the Republicans. I used to support them all the way, but my family cannot wait any longer."

Karen Hughes, executive director of the Texas GOP, said the ads were a "desperate attempt" by Democrats to get votes.

"You can always find a few disaffected people, and the Democrats have experienced that in the past. Democrats have helped elect George Bush and Ronald Reagan, and they will do it again," she said.

She said most people thought the tone of the Republican convention was proper. "The convention produced a big boost in the polls for President Bush," she said.

Meanwhile, the state GOP reached out to supporters of Ross Perot with a direct mail advertisement. In the mailing, Bush accuses Democrat Bill Clinton of proposing "the largest single tax increase in American history."

Craig Sutherland of the Clinton-Al Gore campaign, said the claim is wrong.

"George Bush passed the second-largest tax increase in history," Sutherland said. Clinton has proposed a tax increase for the wealthiest 2 percent, he said.

Court throws out conviction of ex-officer in woman's death

HOUSTON (AP) — A state appeals court Tuesday overturned the conviction of a former Houston police officer who killed a woman in a highway shootout nearly three years ago.

Alex Gonzales was convicted of voluntary manslaughter in the Oct. 31, 1989, shooting death of Ida Lee Delaney, 50. He was sentenced to seven years in prison.

Gonzales, 27, who was off duty when the shooting occurred, has been free on bond since the April 1990 conviction.

The shooting sparked outrage among blacks in Houston and the formation of a community civil rights group. Ms. Delaney was black, while Gonzales and the two other officers involved in the highway chase are Hispanic.

Then-Police Chief Lee Brown fired all three officers a few months after the shooting.

Ms. Delaney was on her way to work as a janitor at The Houston Post about 5:30 on the morning of Oct. 31 when she was chased for 12 miles along Houston freeways by the three officers.

The officers, who were off-duty at the time, had been attending a birthday party for a colleague and had been drinking for several hours before they confronted Ms. Delaney.

Ms. Delaney died and Gonzales was injured in the abdomen.

Hospital blood tests showed Gonzales had a blood-alcohol level of .19, nearly twice the amount considered legally drunk in Texas.

Gonzales was found guilty during a trial that had been moved to Dallas because of publicity about the case in Houston. A grand jury declined to indict the other two officers.

In a separate legal action, the woman's family this year agreed on a $635,000 settlement from the city of a federal lawsuit they had filed claiming Ms. Delaney's civil rights had been violated.

■ 4-year-old receives part of mom's liver

Neslie Herrera was listed in fair condition Tuesday at Hermann Children's hospital after the Sept. 4 procedure, hospital spokeswoman Lisa Fuglaar said.

Neslie became gravely ill two weeks ago and suffered acute liver failure. She was transferred to Houston from San Antonio and put on the candidate list for a liver transplant.

Her mother, Maryann Perez, was determined to be the most suitable and doctors took a fifth of her liver and transplanted it during a 10-hour operation.

■ Mother, daughter jailed in theft of emus

AUSTIN — A mother and daughter from Houston remained jailed Tuesday in connection with last month's theft of emus from a Leander ranch, officials said.

Tessa Brisher, 25, and Betty Jordan, 48, were held in the Williamson County Jail on $500,000 bail each, Williamson County officials said.

Ms. Jordan and Ms. Brisher were identified as suspects after an Amarillo resident bought seven emus from them, Sgt. Don Wood of the sheriff's department said.

The Amarillo resident contacted authorities after discovering microchips under the skin on the birds' necks. The microchips had been implanted for identification.

In addition, 22 emus were recovered Friday from Ms. Jordan's yard, according to Williamson County Assistant District Attorney Paul Womack. A total of 55 emus had been stolen in mid-August from the ranch.

"I'm still trying to run the rest of 'em down," said ranch owner Jody Giddens, who valued the missing birds at $150,000.

■ Teen sentenced in death of deliveryman

DALLAS — A Dallas teen-ager has received a life sentence for the fatal shooting of a Domino's Pizza deliveryman.

Jurors deliberated less than an hour Monday before convicting Damione Lamonte McCraney, 16, of capital murder. The jury then delivered a life sentence for the April 13 murder of Charles Carson.

Dallas police found Carson's body beneath a Trinity River bridge April 14, hours after two teen-agers robbed him with a shotgun. As Carson, 28, hung from a bridge railing, McCraney shot him in the head after promising not to kill him if he jumped, said Joel James Lee, McCraney's accused accomplice.

Lee is expected to plead guilty to aggravated robbery this week for his role, said his attorney, Rick Magnis.

■ NTSB: Pilot error caused Vaughan crash

DALLAS — A federal investigation shows pilot error caused the helicopter crash that killed blues guitarist Stevie Ray Vaughan and four other people.

The National Transportation Safety Board, in a report released Monday, found that "improper planning/decision" by the aircraft's pilot was the main probable cause of the 1990 crash near East Troy, Wis.

Contributing to the copter's crash into the side of a manmade ski hill were "darkness, fog, haze and rising terrain," agency spokesman Ted Lopatkiewicz said.

The 35-year-old Vaughan, a Grammy Award-winning musician who was raised in Dallas, died on Aug. 27, 1990 after the Bell 206 copter carrying five people left the Alpine Valley Music Theater, an open-air concert facility, and crashed.

Rape victim to receive $1.5 million settlement

HOUSTON (AP) — The owners and managers of a Harris County apartment complex have agreed to pay a woman $1.5 million settlement after she was raped while living at the complex in 1988.

Depositions and other evidence presented during mediation talks showed the complex had been negligent in providing security for its tenants, the woman's attorney said Monday.

Attorney G. Robert Friedman said his 27-year-old client had returned to her home in the Hunterwood Apartments late from visiting her mother on the night of Sept. 20, 1988. She put her two children to bed, then took a shower.

Friedman said she was attacked as she got out of the shower by a man who may have entered the apartment through a sliding glass door off a patio. The man was in the apartment for about an hour. He never has been caught.

Named as defendants in the lawsuit were Hunterwood Apartments, M&S Associates, which owned the complex, and the Richard Gill Co., which managed it.

In another case, a Harris County jury in July awarded a woman $3.38 million in a judgment against the Richard Gill Co. The company had managed a Webster apartment complex where she was raped in 1988.

Attorney Karri J. Webb, who represented the management company in the more recent lawsuit, declined comment Monday on the settlement.

The settlement was reached Friday through the mediation of Phil Peden, a former judge who now serves on the advisory board of Texas Judicial Arbitration and Mediation Services Inc.

The woman said she was pleased with the size of the award, which was the latest in a series of major judgments and settlements in the Houston area apartment complexes where women have been raped.

She added that she hoped cases like hers would force apartment owners and managers to take security issues more seriously.

The woman said the sliding glass doors were installed backward, making it impossible to wedge the doors closed with something like a broom handle. She also said that depositions revealed that around the time of the attack apartment managers had poor control of the master keys and did not have a lock on the box that contained the keys.

Omni disavows letter North wrote on hotel stationery

HOUSTON (AP) — Omni Hotels officials have asked Oliver North to retract a fund-raising letter written on Omni Houston Hotel stationery.

"I'm sure his organization has letterhead, and we're puzzled as to why he would choose to do that on anybody else's stationery," said Omni senior vice president Jack Gaines in Hampton, N.Y.

North stayed at the Omni before the Republican National Convention, then moved to the another hotel during the Aug. 17-20 event. The stationery on which the three-page letter was typed and then reproduced apparently came from North's room at the Omni.

Gaines has asked North to print a retraction or send Omni a list of who got the letter so the hotel chain can disavow its implied association to the Freedom Alliance, North's political arm.

"We have no comment," Cliff Kincaid, a spokesman for the Freedom Alliance in Washington, D.C., told The Associated Press on Tuesday.

But Kincaid earlier told The Houston Post: "If they claim we don't have permission, I'd like to see their proof."

When asked why North used the letterhead, Kincaid said, "Because he was at the Omni."

The former Marine officer and White House aide gained notoriety during the Iran-Contra scandal. His felony convictions for attempting to conceal the details of the Iran-Contra affair were overturned by an appellate court.

Rangers dispute officer's account of how he was shot

COCKRELL HILL (AP) — A Texas Rangers report has disputed the acting police chief's account of how he was shot July 6.

The official report says Lt. Shahriar "Shaz" Shahi was incorrect in saying an unknown assailant shot him in the thigh.

The report did not speculate how the officer got the wound, Rangers Capt. David Brynes said.

"But we do not believe, based on the information, that it happened the way he said it did," Brynes said.

"I'm not surprised at the inconclusions," said Charles Maduka. "What shocks me is the manner in which they did it."

Mayor Tony Hinojosa Jr. said the City Council will meet with the city attorney soon to consider taking action.

Hershey offers sweet scent of cocoa

By Aaron Watson

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — A sugary, cocoa aroma has wafted throughout this town for 87 years. But when asked about it, some puzzled residents respond: "What smell?"

Some admit their senses may have been dulled by years of exposure, and when pushed, they can't deny the sweet scent.

"Other people can smell it more than we do," says Pauline Peace, a worker at the Hershey Chocolate company's factory for 42 years. "I only smell it when it rains."

Inside the factory, ventilation relieves what could otherwise be an overpowering odor. "I've never heard of a complaint about it, inside or outside," says Earl Light, head of the chocolate workers' union and a native of Hershey, the unofficial chocolate capital of the United States.

"When I went into the service in 1957, you know the thing I looked forward to the most coming home?" he says. "The smell."

Hershey, Pa., 82 miles west of Philadelphia, is called the "Sweetest Place on Earth."

And the aroma of cocoa isn't the only reminder that this town of about 20,000 residents lives and breathes chocolate.

Street lights shaped as Hershey Kisses — those bite-size chocolate morsels — line Chocolate Avenue, the town's main strip. Other street names include Cocoa Avenue; Trinidad, Caracas and Grenada Avenues, named after places that export cocoa beans; and Areba Avenue, named after an expensive, flavorful type of cocoa bean.

Tourists (estimated at 4 million annually) can stay at the Cocoa Motel or Chocolatetown Motel. They can visit Hershey's amusement park, zoo, gardens, museum and theater, and tour Chocolate World, a re-creation of the chocolate factory.

Hershey's American Hockey League team was called the Hershey B'ars during its first year in the league in 1938. The next year, the league decided the name was too commercial. So the team is now known as the Bears.

Mrs. Reese, who lives near the Reese candy plant where Hershey chocolate meets roasted peanuts, says cocoa and peanut smells only add to the town's appeal.

"We always get the peanut butter smell," says Mrs. Reese, who is not related to Harry B. Reese, inventor of the peanut butter cup. "It's not offensive. It means people are working."

Milton S. Hershey, a caramel manufacturer in Lancaster, Pa., made the milk chocolate candy bar in 1899, after five years of painstaking experiments. His chocolate manufacturing plant opened in 1905. The H.B. Reese Candy Co. plant opened in 1923. Hershey Chocolate bought the company in 1963.

Large cities — such as Chicago — may produce more chocolate, but Hershey is still considered the chocolate capital of the United States, mainly because of its history and contribution to the industry, says Ray Broekel, a chocolate and candy historian. "Milton Hershey is the granddaddy of U.S. chocolate," Broekel says.

Chocolate truffles aren't difficult to make at home

By Joan Cirillo
Associated Press

Chocolate truffles, those rich and round confections of fine chocolate, butter and cream, may be sophisticated and costly, but California dessert-maker Alice Medrich says they're easy to make at home.

"People think they are too difficult to make," said Medrich at a demonstration of her dessert-making techniques in New York City. "They deliver a tremendous amount of mystique and sophistication, when you spend only a few minutes in your kitchen doing them."

Medrich, known as the "mother of the American truffle," has been making and selling truffles for nearly 10 years.

Unlike the bite-size French truffle, which is dusted in cocoa, Medrich's American truffle is almost the size of a pingpong ball and is coated with bittersweet chocolate.

Medrich learned to make truffles while living in Paris in 1972. She first tasted the creamy French morsels, so named for their resemblance to the misshapen mushroom, while helping her landlady prepare them as holiday treats.

The following year, when she returned to California, Medrich tried to duplicate her landlady's recipe. "I kind of lost control of the process," she joked. "The big truffle started in my kitchen."

She brought her version of the truffle to a Berkeley, Calif., delicatessen. They were so popular, Medrich said, that she decided to open her own dessert shop in Berkeley in 1974. Today there are a number of Cocolat stores as well as wholesale and mail-order businesses.

Medrich, author of "Cocolat: Extraordinary Chocolate Desserts" (Warner Books, $35 hard-cover), says homemade truffles are easy enough for a child to make and adults to enjoy. "It's sort of the ultimate comfort food," she says.

Dessert-maker offers advice on chocolate truffles

Associated Press

The flavor and the texture of chocolate has always appealed to Americans, says California dessert-maker Alice Medrich. But, she warns, chocolate burns easily and home cooks can "underestimate its fragility."

When using chocolate as an ingredient, Medrich begins by breaking up 4-ounce bars of chocolate, still wrapped, in the palm of her hand. She stirs the chocolate pieces in a double boiler or a hot water bath (a glass or metal bowl placed in a pan of simmering water over low heat) until the chocolate is melted.

Bars of bittersweet and semisweet chocolate can be used to make truffles, but, Medrich warns, don't use chocolate chips! Chocolate chips are designed to keep their shape in cookies, she says, and they don't flow as nicely as bar chocolate when melted.

Medrich says that because each brand of chocolate has its own amount of cocoa butter — the natural fat of the cocoa bean — home cooks should find the brand they like best and stick with it. Cocoa butter is what makes chocolate difficult, causing it to lump, burn, or become gritty, depending on how it is handled, she says.

Recipe makes classic homemade chocolate truffles easy

Associated Press

ALICE MEDRICH'S CLASSIC HOMEMADE CHOCOLATE TRUFFLES

¼ cup whipping cream
2 4-ounce bars bittersweet chocolate, broken into small pieces
6 tablespoons unsalted butter, cut in small pieces
⅓ cup unsweetened cocoa

In a small saucepan bring cream to simmering. Remove from heat; stir in chocolate and butter. Bring ½ inch water to slow simmer in skillet. Set saucepan in skillet over low heat. Stir mixture just until chocolate is completely melted. Remove from heat.

Pour chocolate mixture into shallow bowl. Cool, cover and refrigerate until firm, at least two hours.

Pour cocoa into pie plate. Line baking sheet with waxed paper. Dip melon baller or small spoon into glass of warm water; shake off excess water and quickly scrape across surface of chilled truffle mixture to form rough 1-inch ball. Deposit into cocoa. Repeat with remaining truffle mixture.

Gently shake pie plate to coat truffles evenly; place truffles in waxed paper-lined container, separating layers with waxed paper. Cover tightly and refrigerate up to two weeks, or freeze up to three months. Makes about 30 truffles.

SnackWells offer healthier snacks

By Linda Anderson

The supermarket shelves seem to be bursting with new low-fat, low-cholesterol, etc., products these days, and old, established companies seem to be leading the way.

Anderson

Nabisco, well known for its cookies and crackers, has recently introduced a line of no- or reduced-fat snack goods called SnackWell's, and the company evidently is so proud of these new products that they sent us a couple of boxes in the mail.

Of course, journalistic-types never turn down free food, so we all checked them out. And it's a well-known "scientific" fact that foods sampled for scientific purposes have no calories. OK, so it's a well-known fantasy...

The two kinds of SnackWell's we received were Fat Free Devil's Food Cookie Cakes and Reduced Fat Bite-sized Chocolate Chip Cookies (the teeny-tiny kind). Other snack foods in the line are Reduced Fat Cheese Crackers, Reduced Fat Crunchy Oatmeal Raisin Cookies, Fat Free Wheat Crackers and Fat Free Cinnamn Graham Snacks.

According to information from the company, each box of these snacks is supposed to sell for $1.99. That's pretty close to other, more traditional, fat-loaded snacks in similar-sized boxes.

Label advertising for the Devil's Food Cookie Cakes claimed the snacks are "luscious snacks made with real chocolate...Plus, they're fat free and contain no cholesterol.

"Now, with SnackWell's, you can enjoy delicious cookies and crackers that fit into your healthy lifestyle."

The nutrition label revealed that each cookie-cake contains 60 calories and no fat or cholesterol.

Label advertising for the Chocolate Chip Cookies was similar: "SnackWell's Bite Size Chocolate Chip Cookies are made with real chocolate and are deliciously fun to eat...Plus, they're low in fat, too!" You can probably figure out the rest.

What I want to know is: Is all that talk about "your healthy lifestyle" for real, or just designed to make us feel guilty?

Anyway, the taste-test was mixed. Newspaper people aren't shy about expressing their opinions. Basically, what it boiled down to is, if you like regular devil's food cookie cakes or bite-sized chocolate cookies (this kind is, admittedly, a little tough), you'll probably like these. Some people thought the chocolate chip cookies were too tough and grainy; some people didn't like the devil's food cookie cakes, but both boxes ended up empty by the end of the day.

I plan on buying some of the SnackWell's cheese crackers and cinnamon graham snacks before I finish forming my opinion. But for reduced- or no-fat snacks, they were pretty edible.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Inhibited and Embarrassed" not to worry about her mastectomy scars. Her potential lover might have a few problems of his own. She'd be lucky to find anybody in even near mint condition. Many of us, both male and female, in the fiftysomething age range have had organs lopped off, bypassed, reamed out, and otherwise rearranged.

Van Buren

Any man who would reject a woman because of her scars or an absent breast is a man from whom she should be fleeing as fast as she can.

If I were a widower, I'd consider myself lucky to meet a gem of a lady who had a record of a successful, loving marriage, had won a battle against cancer, had endured the trials of widowhood and who now has the spunk to remarry. A great big hug to her and congratulations to the lucky man who finds her. — S.G.B. IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for 45 years. She lost her left breast to cancer 30 years ago.

Last March, she lost her right breast. Did it make any difference to me? Not a bit! I thank God every day for her life. I love her for what she is, not for what she looks like. Besides, we have known each other since we were 13 — and she didn't have any then, and it didn't make any difference. — BOB LONG, SACRAMENTO

DEAR ABBY: First of all, let me tell you that I am a male and a nudist, and I have seen women of all shapes and sizes — some have had mastectomies. There is one thing I learned from being a nudist, and that is to respect people for what they are, not for what they have, or what they look like. People who carry scars from surgery shouldn't feel embarrassed — they are "badges of honor" awarded to survivors of a life-and-death battle. — NASHVILLE, TENN.

DEAR ABBY: Some years ago, I met a woman I found attractive. She was hesitant to get involved, and finally confessed that she thought I might be turned off by the scars she carried following her mastectomy. I told her I had a few scars of my own across my back and across my chest from a VC grenade ambush I earned along with a Purple Heart and a Bronze Star. I confessed that while recovering in a VA hospital, I worried that my scars would turn women off. I worried in vain. We accepted each other for what we were — not how we looked. This is the second marriage for both of us, and we couldn't be happier. — AN OFFICER AND A GENTLEMAN

DEAR INHIBITED AND EMBARRASSED: Your body is not disfigured — it carries a badge of courage and triumph over disease.

Your husband had the sense to realize this, and you should not settle for less now that he is gone. Physical attraction is mental and emotional. If someone loves you with his whole heart, mind and body, it will not matter that you are missing a breast, an arm, a leg or any other part.

You have nothing to be ashamed of. I am a 53-year-old man, and if I were not already "involved" with someone I love very much, I would be delighted to meet you! — JIM MACOMBER, TACOMA

DEAR READERS: "Homefront," my favorite TV series, begins its fall season tomorrow night, Sept. 17, at 8:00 p.m. Central/Mountain Time, 9:00 p.m. Eastern/Pacific Time, on ABC. Try it; you'll like it!

Want your phone to ring? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Baby foods organic

MIDDLEBURY, Vt. (AP) — Earth's Best has introduced eight new certified organic baby foods including three yogurt breakfasts and three organic dinners with natural meat. The new meat products are Vegetable Turkey, Vegetable Beef and Sweet Potato and Chicken. The new yogurt breakfasts are Blueberry Yogurt Breakfast, Apple Yogurt Breakfast and Tropical Yogurt Breakfast.

In addition, the company has introduced Rice & Banana Cereal, a new whole-grain cereal (suggested retail price: $1.49), and Pear Raspberry, a new strained fruit combination (suggested retail price: 59 cents).

Earth's Best's line of 41 certified organic baby food products is available in supermarkets, natural food stores and by mail order.

Microwave snack mix is easy, healthy after-school treat

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

For those brown-bag lunches or an easy after-school treat, stir up a microwave snack mix. You say things don't get crunchy in the microwave oven? You're right — microwave mixes crisp as they cool, not as they cook. This nutty cereal combo will be just as crispy as any conventionally cooked snack mix. Let your kids be the judge.

HONEY-SUNFLOWER MIX

5 cups puffed wheat cereal
1 cup pretzel sticks
1 cup peanuts
½ cup toasted sunflower nuts
¼ cup toasted wheat germ
½ cup honey
¼ cup packed brown sugar
¼ cup butter or margarine

In a 3-quart microwave-safe casserole combine cereal, pretzels, peanuts, sunflower nuts and wheat germ; set aside. In a 2-cup glass measure combine honey, brown sugar, butter or margarine. Cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 1½ to 2½ minutes or until butter is melted and sugar is dissolved, stirring once.

Pour honey mixture over cereal mixture, tossing to coat evenly. Cook, uncovered, on high for 6 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes. Cool, stirring occasionally. (The mix will crisp as it stands). Cover and store in a cool, dry place. Makes 7½ cups (15 servings).

Nutrition information per serving: 190 cal., 11 g fat, 5 g pro., 22 g carbo., 125 mg sodium. RDA: 11 percent thiamine, 12 percent niacin.

Frozen fries shaped in alphabet letters

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Ore-Ida Foods has introduced Ore-Ida Tater ABCs, french fries shaped in the letters of the alphabet. The product, which comes in a 26-ounce bag, cooks quickly in the oven (suggested retail price: $2.09).

25 Libertarians are on Harris ballot

Hearst News Service

In fact, that's exactly what he is — minus the backing of either the Democratic or Republican Party.

And he isn't the only challenger operating outside the two-party system.

The Nov. 3 ballot in Harris County will include more than 60 contested races, from president to justice of the peace, and 25 of them include Libertarian contenders.

Libertarians have been on the ballot in Texas for years, winning obscure slots such as "public weigher" in Austin but capturing no major seats.

This time, with anti-incumbency and political restlessness in the air, they sense an advantage.

"People know fundamentally that the two parties together are the problem," says Lassen, who has never run for office before.

"Ross Perot came in and sort of stole our thunder. And then he left again and we're doing a whole lot better," says John Kormylo, the Harris County Libertarian chairman.

Before deactivating his independent bid for president, Perot promoted the idea that a candidate could generate widespread support without relying on the dominant parties for a boost. He promised to overhaul partisan politics and streamline government into something more responsive.

Libertarians, on the other hand, would simply junk the system. The candidates call for a minimalist government with virtually no regulation of business, no anti-drug laws, no welfare and no government-backed health care.

It's a philosophy that encompasses support for abortion rights and opposition to gun control. The party's presidential candidate is Andre Marrou, a former Alaska lawmaker.

"We're anti-big government. We will deliver what the Republicans only promise, except we won't deliver their 'traditional family values' garbage," Kormylo says.

Lassen, a one-time Republican on leave from his job as an analyst of natural gas regulations, is distributing a series of campaign brochures, but they make no mention of his Libertarian affiliation.

Lassen says he isn't the typical Libertarian candidate because he doesn't dwell on political philosophies that would appear obscure.

"They (Libertarian colleagues) can't believe there's somebody who wants to win and not (just) make a statement," he says.

Lassen sides with Washington's votes against funding for NASA's space station and the superconducting super collider project, which have created jobs in Texas. Lassen says private industry could do a more efficient job of developing such scientific pursuits.

But Lassen is closer to Washington's Republican challenger, investment banker Ed Blum, on ideas for reining in social programs and promoting free enterprise.

Washington's 18th Congressional District includes many of Houston's inner-city neighborhoods, where the federal government provides housing subsidies, food and preschool programs. Lassen's party, however, calls for the government to withdraw from those responsibilities, reduce federal taxes and let local individuals address problems with the resulting savings.

Kormylo acknowledges that many Libertarians will run limited campaigns that have no hope of being successful.

"We're building a party. Someday we'll be able to win and until then we simply have to go through the motions until we do," he says.

AUSTIN (AP) — People who are jobless because of severe weather in 12 West
Texas counties from May 1 through July 30 may be eligible for disaster unemployment assistance, officials say.

Claims for the assistance must be handled by the Texas Employment Commission, and are due Oct. 13.

CB-wielding neighbors band together against crime

By Steve Ray
Associated Press

ROCKPORT — In Diane Coots' neighborhood, the CB radio does the job of a badge and a gun.

Mrs. Coots was raised just a few blocks from the city limits sign. Now she's bringing up her own four children in a blue-shingled, two-story house just across the alley from where her parents still live.

When burglars hit her neighbor's house five times as well as other houses on her block, Mrs. Coots decided to take matters into her own hands. "I felt like we were being violated," Mrs. Coots said. "I was raised in this neighborhood. My kids are being raised in this neighborhood. I had to do something.

"When my husband bought a citizens band radio base for our home, I started patrolling and calling in to report what I saw."

Slowly, friends began to join Mrs. Coots' efforts. "Finally, someone asked if we shouldn't call and make sure what we were doing was legal," Mrs. Coots said.

They contacted Aransas County Sheriff's Deputy Ricky McLester. "These folks knew who was supposed to be in this neighborhood and who didn't live in the neighborhood. And I liked that," said McLester, who oversees the Aransas County Neighborhood Watch program. "And they were the remnants of a CB club."

Now, armed with CBs and a desire to fight crime, 13 Aransas County residents hit the streets each week in the subdivision. Since the volunteer crime fighters began patrolling a five-by 10-block area, calls to the sheriff's department from the area have decreased 30 percent, McLester said.

"Several hours a night, these folks are in cars with CBs out there riding around," he said. "If they find something strange or suspicious, they relay that back to the base station, call the sheriff's department and we come and check it out."

So far, calls from the group, which organized in March, haven't resulted in any arrests, but that doesn't concern McLester. "Their game plan is not necessarily to catch somebody," he said. "It is to prevent crime. They are out here making their efforts very public and letting people know, 'Hey, we're neighbors and we're keeping track of and watching our neighbors' property.'

"Through their high-profile presence in this neighborhood, there is a preventive measure to keep crime from happening. That's what Neighborhood Watch is all about."

In addition to patrolling, members of the program carry hand radios and walk with elderly residents to protect them. "Before these people started operating, I'd been mugged once and robbed twice, and since they started, none of that has occurred," said Price Johnson, a 67-year-old homebound disabled veteran.

"We have older people who stop us and tell us how much they appreciate our patrols," said Bill Bannister, who helps patrol the streets. "They say now they don't mind going to the grocery store at night and coming home in the dark."

Johnson said the group has performed an invaluable service for its neighborhood. He said Mrs. Coots has provided him with transportation and checks on him regularly.

McLester said the Aransas County watch group is unique because it patrols the streets using CBs and walkie-talkies and because participants are not losing interest in the program. "Most Neighborhood Watches form, and then after several weeks they have a fallout after accomplishing their first goals and getting the signs put up," he said. "But this group is meeting their goals and accomplishing other things as well."

Neighborhood Watch programs have been in the Coastal Bend since at least the early 1980s. Sponsors include local police departments and county sheriff's departments. Some funding has come from grants from the Governor's Criminal Justice Division.

LUBBOCK — The question was never if Texas Tech's Lloyd Hill would be a success on the football field. It was just a matter of picking a position.

But several colleges thought of Hill as a defensive back after he earned all-state honors as a safety.

What to do?

Gaines put it best. He says just watch Hill shake a cornerback and grab a pass over the middle of the defense and the question will be answered.

"It doesn't take an Einstein to know you have to get the ball to him," said Gaines, who joined Hill at Texas Tech three years ago as a defensive coach. "Lloyd would be good at a lot of positions, but wide receiver is his natural spot."

Hill continues to prove Gaines a genius, including last Saturday when the junior split end caught a school record-tying 12 passes for 222 yards and a touchdown in Tech's 49-32 victory against Wyoming.

Hill's effort earned Southwest Conference offensive player of the week honors from The Associated Press.

Southern Methodist senior linebacker Bill Kiely received AP's SWC defensive player of the week for his 16-tackle performance in the Mustangs' 28-14 victory against North Texas.

Kiely, who had 11 solo tackles, came up with the game's pivotal play. With North Texas driving for a tying touchdown and facing fourth-and-1 on SMU's 11, Kiely shot a gap in the offensive line and stuffed Terrance Brown for no gain.

Kosar out

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Browns quarterback Bernie Kosar will be out at least six weeks with a hairline fracture of his right ankle, suffered in the first half of Monday night's loss to the Miami Dolphins.

The team said that Kosar, the Browns quarterback since 1985, will be out at least through October.

Kosar was hit hard several times in the first half of the 27-23 loss, but wasn't sure exactly when the injury occurred.

'Wrecking Crew' preps for Mizzou

■ Texas A&M's defense has been the star so far for the fifth-ranked Aggies.

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — They're called "The Wrecking Crew" and fifth-ranked Texas A&M's defensive unit is off to another destructive start in dismantling opposing offenses.

Well, almost.

They struggled at times in their first two games but the Tulsa Hurricane felt the full force of the Wrecking Crew last week and the Aggies hope to give Missouri the same treatment on Saturday.

The rich history of the Aggie defense has started to work on the current crop of wreckers, headed by linebacker Marcus Buckley.

"You hear about all the players who have been great players in the Wrecking Crew," Buckley said. "Just to be a part of that defense makes you play better."

Feeling the glare of former Wrecking Crew members pushing him on, Buckley played his best game of the season in a 19-9 victory over Tulsa. He had seven tackles, four behind the line, one sack, he caused one fumble and recovered another and broke up a pass.

"We started kind of slowly against Stanford and we didn't play well at LSU but against Tulsa we had to realize that we're the Wrecking Crew and we had to rise to the challenge," Buckley said.

"I don't think we're as good as last year but the season has a long way to go," Solari said. "We haven't peaked that's for sure. We need to just work more on techniques and running to the ball."

The Aggies will take a 3-0 record to Columbia. They are trying to open the season 4-0 for the first time since 1978.

The last time A&M held a No. 5 national ranking was Sept. 6, 1977 prior to a 41-3 loss to Michigan.

Rebs finally chalk one up against MHS

■ For the first time ever, Midland Lee defeats Midland High in a team tennis dual match.

By Jimmy Patterson

History was made Tuesday afternoon at the Midland Lee tennis courts. And it wasn't just any trivial piece of history, either.

It was a stigma that fell, actually.

For the first time in the 33-year history of Midland Lee High School, the Rebel tennis team defeated Midland High in dual match action.

"I think this is a major step in the right direction for our program," third-year head tennis coach Steve Buck said. "I think it's very important, and I know the kids think (beating MHS for the first time) is the most important thing. They're extremely happy."

Also elated were a handful of alumni, who many moons ago tried in vain to defeat the Bulldogs.

"It's really neat to see them win one," said Lee Hobbs, a 1966 Lee graduate who played No. 2 singles his senior year, and whose daughter, Wendy, came away victorious in the same No. 2 singles spot Tuesday.

Lee won by a score of 10-8, with four of the six boys singles and three of the six girls singles matches going to the Rebels.

First-year player Mat Thompson, a transfer student from Bakersfield, Calif., defeated MHS' Alan Neighbors, 6-4, 7-5, in the No. 1 spot.

"I was pretty disappointed in the lower half of the guy's lineup in both singles and doubles," first-year MHS coach Tom Heiting said. "Because we were in command in at least three of the matches. We blew some big leads.

"The key to any match is depth and doubles, and we had our chances. We had every chance we could possibly imagine, we just couldn't capitalize on it."

Lee did defeat MHS at No. 4 and 5 boys singles, and No. 2 and 3 doubles.

A pivotal match was at No. 5 boys singles, where Monty Miller, slowed recently by an injury, overcame a 4-0, 40-love deficit in the final set to win his match with Brandon Herring, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5.

"I'm real proud of Monty," Buck said. "He's been hurt for the last couple of weeks, and he had to talk Dr. (Thurston) Dean into letting him play. He's a senior and he wanted to play so badly. If he lost that match, it could've gone the other way (to MHS)."

In girls action, MHS' No. 1 Bonnie Terrazas downed JoAnn Kelly, 6-1, 6-3. Lee girls won in the No. 2, 3 and 5 spots, while MHS took 1, 4 and 6.

Thompson seems a definite plus for the Lee boys' team. With a father who works in the oil business, the senior said Tuesday his move to Midland last May was his 16th; Lee is the fourth high school he has attended. At Bakersfield, Thompson played No. 1 singles his junior year. In his sophomore year, he played No. 6 singles at Houston Clemens, and as a freshman, he attended high school in Colorado.

"The wind was tough today," Thompson admitted. "It seems like it's that way all year around here. Today it wasn't constant, just stop and go. And especially in this wind, he (Neighbors) gave me a challenge."

Buck said after the match he was pleased with the progress he has seen in his program.

"I think our program is coming along well," Buck said. "Three years ago, when we won a dual match against Odessa High, it was the first dual match the seniors had won in three years. You'd have thought they just won the state championship.

Permian's loss not that big an upset

But following Permian's 20-14 loss to Temple, this year's Mojo won't be compared to the Panthers' undefeated teams of the past. Permian, the preseason favorite to be the state's No. 1 team, is now No. 4. The loss is on the record.

Williamson

However, a loss by No. 1 to No. 3 is not shocking news. It's only a ripple in the road to a state championship. After all, the game was played on grass and it was a long, tough road trip. The Permian machine has not been dismantled, just set off the track for a week.

Non-conference games are only a gauge of where teams need to be when district play starts. It is the time of testing — the time for the Orkin man to clean out the bugs.

But the tests come in waves. Midland Lee faces its non-conference test Friday when it hosts the unbeaten and high scoring Dons of Amarillo Palo Duro, a team that has already put 78 points in lights in just two games. Not even a shooting spree at the school has slowed this team, and the Dons already own a victory over Odessa High of District 4-5A.

Midland High, too, faces a test against Class 4A Andrews. Admittedly, the Bulldogs didn't look good Saturday in a 24-7 loss to Lubbock Monterey as the Purple Pack losing streak climbed to 11, but there is a season ahead and MHS must answer the challenge quickly.

A victory — any kind of victory — is what is needed at MHS. It's time to circle the wagons and fight back.

The Bobcats of San Angelo also head into a major test. They host No. 1 Temple. San Angelo seems to be able to score at will, but they also give up a lot of points. However, the Bobcats catch Temple following a big win over Permian and Temple is the traveling team this time. Eyes across the state will be on this one. It will not only provide a measuring stick for San Angelo, but for Permian as you will have two games by district teams to compare.

Permian has another important test Friday. The Panthers host undefeated Amarillo High. This is a game that Permian should win, but Amarillo is good enough to provide a key gauge on how well the Panthers respond to a loss.

Abilene Cooper is well on the way to a 3-0 start. Keller shouldn't provide a problem for the Cougars this week. Abilene High, picked for the lower part of the 4-5A standings, could easily be 2-1 after this week since they host Fort Worth Western Hills. If both win Friday, and they should, it will set up a key Key City game between the two teams next week.

Odessa High is much like San Angelo this year. The Bronchos have the ability to score, and not much ability to stop the other team from scoring. The Bronchos travel to El Paso Eastwood in search of a 3-1 start to the season, one they need to enter the Permian game the following week with confidence.

Who said non-conference games mean nothing? They don't mean much in the standings, but they do set the tone for the year. Friday is the last night to tune the tone.

Braves' win streak ends

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Dan Wilson doubled home two runs in the eighth inning Tuesday night as the Cincinnati Reds scored three times to beat Atlanta 4-2 and snap the Braves' nine-game winning streak.

Atlanta's number for clinching the NL West remained at ten games as the second-place Reds moved to 9½ back. The loss extended the Braves' misery at Riverfront Stadium — they're 0-7 there this season.

The Reds overcame a 2-1 deficit off Steve Avery (10-10), who's never had much success at Riverfront. The left-hander is 1-5 in seven career starts there with an ERA of 7.20.

Pinch runner Cesar Hernandez went to third on Bip Roberts' single and scored the final run of the inning when third baseman Terry Pendleton threw low to home for an error on Hal Morris' grounder.

Tim Belcher (12-14) gave up four hits over eight innings, including solo homers by Jeff Blauser, his 12th, and Ron Gant, his 14th, for his first win since Aug. 25. Rob Dibble struck out the side for his 20th save.

Avery was in command through the first six innings, allowing just a pair of hits, including Roberts' solo homer, his fourth. Avery got Geronimo Berroa to hit into a bases-loaded double play to end a seventh-inning threat, then faded in the eighth.

National

Mets 4, Cubs 2

CHICAGO — Eddie Murray and Jeff McKnight each hit two-run homers, leading New York to a victory over Chicago in a game shortened to 7½ innings by rain.

The game was halted as the Cubs prepared to bat in the bottom of the eighth as a severe thunderstorm moved into the area. The game was called after a wait of 1 hour, 28 minutes.

Murray hit his 15th homer in the first inning after Bobby Bonilla had singled and McKnight hit his first National League homer in the sixth after Murray had walked, breaking a 2-2 tie.

Paul Gibson, making his first start in three years, after 183 relief appearances, didn't last through the fifth inning. Gibson, replacing Sid Fernandez, who has a knee injury, limited the Cubs to two hits going into the fifth.

Astros 9, Giants 6

HOUSTON — Jeff Bagwell's three-run homer in the 11th inning was his fifth hit of the game and helped Houston overcome a five-run lead to defeat San Francisco.

Bagwell's 15th homer, a two-out shot to center off reliever Steve Reed, followed consecutive singles by Steve Finley and Luis Gonzalez allowed by loser Dave Righetti (2-6).

Bagwell was 5 for 6 for game and became the first Houston player with five hits since Billy Hatcher on May 20, 1988 against St. Louis. Bagwell surpassed his career high of four hits, which he's accomplished four times.

Doug Jones (9-8) worked three innings, allowing a run on two hits, for the victory.

Expos 3, Phillies 0

PHILADELPHIA — Ken Hill pitched a three-hitter over eight innings and Marquis Grissom had two RBIs as Montreal beat Philadelphia.

Hill (16-8) struck out seven and walked two. He gave only a pair of singles in the fifth — to outfielder Tom Marsh and pitcher Curt Schilling — and an eighth-inning hit to second baseman Mickey Morandini.

Pirates 4, Cardinals 2

ST. LOUIS — Pittsburgh had three homers, including consecutive shots by Barry Bonds and Jeff King in the sixth inning, to beat St. Louis for the 12th straight time.

The Pirates trailed 2-1 in the sixth before Pittsburgh got to St. Louis starter Mark Clark. Jay Bell opened with a double, extending his hitting streak to a major-league high 20 games, and went to third on a groundout before Bonds hit his 29th home run into the right-field seats.

DETROIT — Jose Canseco homered onto the left-field roof and Rafael Palmeiro and Dean Palmer also connected as Texas beat Detroit 6-5 Tuesday night.

Palmeiro, who has gone 10 for 20 in the last six games, broke a 3-all tie with an RBI single off Bill Gullickson (14-11) in the seventh. Palmeiro had three hits, including his 18th homer, and drove in three runs.

Canseco led off the ninth with a drive that was measured at 434 feet. It was his 26th home run of the season and fourth in 11 games for Texas. Palmer hit his 25th homer, a solo shot, in the third inning.

Palmer doubled and scored on Jeff Frye's double in the eighth. Travis Fryman hit his 20th homer, off reliever Todd Burns, in the Detroit eighth and added an RBI single in the ninth.

Jose Guzman (14-11) allowed five hits in seven innings. He struck out six and walked three. Matt Whiteside went 1 2-3 innings for his first major league save.

White Sox 4, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — Frank Thomas became the first White Sox player to drive 100 runs in consecutive seasons in 38 years, hitting a two-run double in the eighth inning to lead Chicago over New York.

Thomas, who drove in 109 runs last year and has 101 RBIs this season, became the first White Sox player to accomplish the feat since Minnie Minoso in 1953-54.

Sam Militello took a two-hit shutout into the seventh, backed by home runs from Don Mattingly and Bernie Williams. But he allowed Dan Pasqua's fourth homer in the seventh inning, a drive that glanced off the webbing of Williams' glove in center field.

Blue Jays 5, Indians 4

Winfield's two-run homer capped a three-run third and put Toronto ahead for good at 4-3. Winfield has 24 homers and 94 RBIs this season.

Guzman (15-3) gave up three runs in the first inning, but left after the seventh with a 5-3 lead. He is 25-6 in 1½ seasons with the Blue Jays. Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 29th save.

Brewers 7, Red Sox 2

The Brewers won for the ninth time in 13 games. They remained five games behind first-place Toronto in the AL East.

Yount's eighth homer of the season and a single gave him 4,531 career total bases and left him just one behind Tony Perez, who is in 24th place. His two hits brought him to 3,006, one from tying Al Kaline for 15th place.

Orioles 2, Royals 1

BALTIMORE — Pinch-runner Steve Scarsone dashed from first to third on an unusual single, then beat the throw home on Brady Anderson's sacrifice fly in the 14th inning as Baltimore defeated Kansas City and kept pace in the AL East.

With one out in the 14th, Leo Gomez singled against Bill Sampen (0-1), and Scarsone went in to run. On a hit-and-run play, Hulett lined a single off Sampen's leg, and when the ball caromed to the vacant shortstop's hole, Scarsone raced to third without a throw.

San Angelo spikers defeat Lady Rebels

SAN ANGELO — Midland Lee's varsity volleyball team fell to 0-2 in District 4-5A play Tuesday with a two-game loss to San Angelo, 15-8, 15-9.

After San Angelo (1-0, 8-5) jumped ahead 9-3 in the first game, Lee closed the margin to 12-8 before the Bobcats closed out the first game.

In the second game, the Lady Rebs (10-3 overall) went up 7-2 before San Angelo reeled off 10 unanswered points for a 12-7 lead.

"I don't know what happened," head coach Anita Corder said of her Lady Rebels. "We stayed in the locker room a long time (after the match) and a lot of things were talked about, but it may take awhile to get any solutions. (This loss) kind of slammed our backs to the wall."

In other district varsity action, Abilene Cooper defeated Odessa High, 15-11, 16-14, and Abilene High downed Odessa Permian, 15-7, 4-15, 15-8.

Midland Lee hosts OHS Saturday, while Midland High travels to Permian.

Greenwood falls in dual match

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood Rangerettes fell to Wink and Water Valley Tuesday night in dual match volleyball action in Greenwood.

The Rangerettes were defeated by Wink, 4-15, 10-15, and then lost to Water Valley, 10-15, 4-15.

Coach Patti Purser cited outstanding play by Kristie Schraer for blocking, Gena Hodges for setting, and Tricia Ross for backcourt passing.

In JV action, Greenwood fell 15-11, 10-15, 11-15 to Wink, and 6-15, 5-15 to Water Valley.

Shannon Gillery's serving and Ashley Evans' court play were noted by Purser.

Whiteside wins gymnastics title

ABILENE — Hayley Whiteside placed first in four events and finished first in the all-around with a 35.40 as the Midland YMCA Sandstormer Gymnastics Team competed here recently in the first district qualifying meet of the 1992 compulsory season.

Whiteside, competing in the 7-8 year old age group at Level 5, won the title by scoring 8.2 in vault, 9.0 in bars, 8.9 in beam and 9.3 in floor exercise.

In the 9-11 Level 5 group, Kristin Stoltz was third all-around with a 32.10.

Sandstormer Results

7-8 Level 5: Hayley Whiteside: 1. beam, 8.9; 1. floor, 9.3; 1. vault, 8.2; 1. bars, 9.0; 1. all-around, 35.40.

MCS spikers take first loss

LUBBOCK — The Midland Christian volleyball team suffered its first loss of the season here Tuesday night, as the Lady Mustangs were defeated by Lubbock Christian 15-7, 15-8.

The loss makes MCS 5-1 for the season and 3-1 in district play. In junior varsity play, MCS swept Lubbock in two games.

N.Y. Times News Service

IRVING — Defensive tackle Danny Noonan said Tuesday night that he has decided to join the Green Bay Packers, the only club that claimed him off waivers.

Noonan, waived by the Dallas Cowboys this week, is a vested veteran, and therefore could have either accepted his assignment to Green Bay or opted for free agency. The latter option would have allowed him to negotiate with any team, and forced the Cowboys to be responsible for half of his $615,000 base salary.

But by going to Green Bay, Noonan's contract will stay intact. Noonan had said he hoped to join a team with a chance to play in the postseason.

ILLINOIS (2-0) at HOUSTON (0-1, 0-0 SWC), 11 a.m. (CDT) Saturday, ABC regional telecast — The series: The Illini and Cougars meet for just the second time in history. Last year, coach John Mackovic (now at Texas) guided UI past the Cougars 51-10 in Champaign. Though relative newcomers in their current positions, UI's Lou Tepper and Houston's John Jenkins have earned their spurs through outstanding years as assistant coaches. Tepper is 2-1 (second year) overall after coaching his first contest in last year's Hancock Bowl against UCLA. Jenkins is 14-9 (third year) overall as his entire head coaching career has been with the Cougars. Jenkins assisted teams at Arkansas, Mississippi State and Pittsburgh in the college ranks before moving to Houston as offensive coordinator and run-and-shoot guru. Tepper assisted at Colorado, Virginia Tech, William and Mary, New Hampshire and Pitt before coming to Champaign. Illinois proved its explosiveness in last year's win over the Cougars and last week's triumph over Missouri 24-17. The Fighting Illini have a fine balance between the run and pass and feature an aggressive defense. Houston showed signs of continued defensive improvement by holding Tulsa to 28 points after the 1991 Cougars allowed 101 points in their final two, injury-riddled games. UI looks to QB Jason Verduzco, who finished ninth nationally in total offense last year with 2,781 net yards (including 2,825 passing yards), to propel the attack. He led the Illini on a 27-point outburst in last year's triumph over UH. The Cougars have Jimmy Klingler slinging aerials to the tune of 30-of-51 for 327 yards and two TDs in the opener. LB Todd Leach is an experienced defender for Illinois; Cougars' freshman SB Lawrence McPherson showed promise on Sept. 5 with eight carries for 56 yards and a TD.

TEXAS A&M (3-0, 0-0 SWC) at MISSOURI (0-1), 1 p.m. (CDT) Saturday — The Aggies and Tigers have met twice previously, with A&M winning both contests. In 1957 coach Paul 'Bear' Bryant's Aggies blanked the Tigers 28-0, and Texas A&M shut out Mizzou 12-0 in 1958. The Tigers' last game with a SWC opponent was a 47-21 loss at Baylor last fall. Aggies' coach R.C. Slocum is 30-9-1 (fourth year) for a .763 winning percentage, tops among all active SWC coaches. Tigers' mentor Bob Stull, who came to Columbia after a successful stint at Texas-El Paso, is 40-51-1 (ninth year) overall, 9-24-1 (fourth season) at Missouri. Neither coach has faced the other as a grid chief. The Aggies are steeled for road play as they face their third opponent in four games away from the friendly confines of Kyle Field. The Tigers have continued the rebuilding process under Stull and lost a heartbreaker to national champion Colorado in 1990 at Columbia. With continued progress defensively, the home squad may have a strong say in the Big Eight Conference race. LB Marcus Buckley has overcome an arthritic ankle and leg condition to make game-turning plays for the Aggies. He stopped a Stanford drive in the opener by forcing and recovering a fumble. TB Greg Hill nears the 1,500-yard career rushing standard with 300 carries for 1,464 yards in just 14 games to date. Aggies' NG Eric England has 20 tackles and four stops behind the line in three contests. WR Victor Bailey (29 receptions, 506 yards, 17.5 yards per catch in 1991) is a long-play artist in the Tigers' receiving corps while SS Maurice Benson gives added punch to the defense. QB Phil Johnson is 176-of-330 for 2,122 yards and 14 TDs in his last 12 games.

UTAH STATE (0-2) at BAYLOR (0-2), 1 p.m. (CDT) Saturday — The Bears and Big West Conference Aggies have played once — in the frozen Gotham Bowl at New York's Polo Grounds in 1961. Baylor won 24-9 to help keep alive the SWC's streak of 7-0-1 in football contests against Utah State. BU's coach Grant Teaff is 163-148-6 (30th year) overall, 127-102-6 (21st season) with the Bears, and 0-0 against Utah State. Teaff was in his second season of college coaching at McMurry in 1961 when these teams last battled. USU's Charlie Weatherbie, a former Oklahoma State quarterback, is 0-2 in his first season as a college mentor. Something has to give for two young teams that already have faced some of their toughest opposition of the 1992 season. Baylor threw 13 first-time starters into the fray in the season opener and had 14 student-athletes competing in their initial games as collegians in the opener. Utah State knew it had a major rebuilding task ahead of it after the Aggies lost 12 key starters off the 1991 unit, a third-place finisher in the Big West Conference race. Baylor's backfield is a strength. Aggies' center Warren Bowers is the anchor of a line, which, like Baylor, has made strides from USU's opener to last week's loss to Utah. Defenders Joe Jacobs (DT) and Damon Smith (FS) helped Utah State hold its final six opponents to 12 points per game after the first five foes had tallied 187 markers in 1991. Bears' RBs are helping the team to grab the third spot in SWC rushing with 170.5 yards per game. Senior All-SWC TB David Mims leads the way with 14 carries for 104 yards while QB J.J. Joe adds 21 rushes for 71 yards and 30.6 yards per pass completion. LB Robbie Birleson already has 23 stops and a pass interception in his first two contests.

TEXAS TECH (1-1, 0-0 SWC) at OREGON (0-2), 2:30 p.m. (CDT) Saturday — Oregon is playing its 14th game (7-6 mark) against a SWC rival and leads Tech 1-0 in the short series. The Ducks captured a 28-13 triumph last year at Jones Stadium and hope to duplicate the feat on regional television. Tech's Spike Dykes is 31-27-1 (seventh year, all in Red Raider territory) while the Ducks' Rich Brooks stands 71-95-4 (16th season, all at UO). Both mentors have led recent teams to school pinnacles. Dykes guided Tech's 1989 edition to a 9-3 mark with an All-American Bowl win over Duke and paced the Red Raiders to their best SWC finish -- tie for second in 1991 --since 1976. Brooks commanded the 1989 and '90 UO squads to back-to-back bowl berths. In last year's meeting the Red Raiders caught Oregon at the Ducks' peak. Tech won five of its last six games while Oregon, 2-0 after downing the SWC opponent in Lubbock, lost eight of its last nine contests with wholesale injuries. Tech has had its greatest success in recent games when the running game helped to set up QB Robert Hall's scrambling passing magic. Tech RB Byron "Bam" Morris is coming off a pair of solid showings, including a career-best 107 yards against Wyoming and 103 yards versus Oklahoma. FS Tracy Saul has climbed into a tie for ninth place in NCAA Division I-A history with 21 pass interceptions — a SWC career high. Oregon QB Danny O'Neil was the starter in all three Oregon wins in 1991 with 55-of-115 passing totals for 713 yards and seven TDs despite missing six games with a dislocated thumb. FS Eric Castle is a Tracy Saul-type whose height (6-3) and physical size (206 pounds) provide the Ducks with a "third linebacker" in their "50" defensive scheme. Red Raiders' punter Robert King (45.4 average) has been a pleasant surprise among '92 newcomers.

RICE (0-1, 0-0 SWC) at DUKE (0-2), 6 p.m. (CDT) Saturday — Rice bids to become just the second SWC team in history to master the traditional basketball power on the football field. Duke leads the Owls 3-0 in a trio of games played from 1957-65 during the heydays for both teams. The Blue Devils edged the Owls 7-6 in 1957, won 24-7 in 1959 and tallied a 41-21 triumph in 1965. RU's Fred Goldsmith is 13-29-1 (fifth year) overall, 11-22-1 (fourth season) at Rice and 0-0 in previous matches with DU. Barry Wilson of Duke is 8-15-1 (third year). Wilson, like Goldsmith, was an assistant coach at several Southeastern area schools, primarily Georgia, Mississippi and Georgia Tech, before moving to Duke as an assistant in 1987. Ground superiority and defense could spell the difference in this one. Duke has met two opponents with widely variant styles of offense in pro-style Florida State and Wishbone-formation Vanderbilt and will see its third brand of attack (one running back) this weekend. The Owls have had a precious week away from competitive action to lick wounds after a 30-21 loss at Air Force. Team reaction is something to watch after the Owls had a three-year streak of opening-day wins snapped by the Falcons. Rice NG Matt Sign may be one of the SWC's most rugged down defenders. He has 63 total tackles in his last 12 games despite the assignment of knocking out initial interference. Owls' RB Trevor Cobb needs 80 carries to become the all-time SWC leader in rushing attempts. He has 830; the career mark is 909 carries by Texas A&M's Darren Lewis from 1987-90. Cobb adds a Rice-record 3,868 yards rushing. Duke QB Spence Fischer was cruising along at 11-of-20 passing for 179 yards when he was injured against Florida State. CB Keith DuBose is the Blue Devils' returning pass interceptions' leader with three pilfers last autumn.

SMU (1-1) at NEW MEXICO (1-1), 8:05 p.m. (CDT) Saturday — New Mexico beat TCU on Sept. 5 in those teams' first-ever engagement, and that 24-7 victory raised the Western Athletic Conference crew's record to 6-35-2 against SWC opponents. SMU is well-acquainted with the WAC as well, after facing such powers as Air Force and Brigham Young. Both relative newcomers to their present positions but seasoned from previous posts, the two coaches are known for fine offenses. SMU's Tom Rossley, offensive coordinator on the Hilltop and with the NFL Atlanta Falcons just prior to his 1991 head assignment, is 2-11 (second year). UNM's Dennis Franchione stands 81-20-2 (10th year) overall and 1-1 (first season) with the Lobos. There's a juxtaposition of temperaments for this contest. SMU snapped an eight-game losing streak by dropping North Texas 28-14 Saturday and the Lobos were edged by intrastate rival New Mexico State in a 42-39 heartbreaker. SMU is aware of UNM's potential, though, after screening tapes of the Lobos' 24-7 win over TCU in Albuquerque. WR Brian Berry had the kind of game that SMU coaches had been anticipating during the '92 campaign with a career-high six catches for 130 yards and a 65-yard TD catch last week. LB Bill Kiely made a possible game-turning tackle on a fourth-and-one situation against UNT and has 33 total hits this year. RB Rongea Hill remains a force for SMU with 32 carries for 141 yards. Lobos' QB Stony Case was a workmanlike 12-of-21 passing for 156 yards and two TDs along with seven carries for 39 net yards in his opening win over TCU. TB Winslow Oliver enjoyed 33 carries for 130 yards in that same contest, while SS Ray Wilson helps to lead the defensive charge.

Raiders may give Marinovich nod

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Jay Schroeder, coming off his best passing game with the Los Angeles Raiders, reportedly will be benched in favor of Todd Marinovich.

The Daily Breeze reported Tuesday that an unnamed Raiders staff member confirmed that the decision to start Marinovich had been made and that Schroeder had been informed by coach Art Shell.

Tuesday is a day off for the Raider players, and Schroeder, Marinovich and Shell were not available for comment.

"Coach Shell will meet with the media on Wednesday, as usual," said Al LoCasale, executive assistant of the Raiders. "He will have no comments today."

Although it was anticipated that Marinovich, a second-year pro, eventually would move into the starting job, the timing for the switch seems peculiar.

Although the Raiders fell to 0-2 with a 24-21 overtime loss at Cincinnati last Sunday, Schroeder threw for 380 yards, completing 25 of 40. That was the third-largest yardage total in Raiders history and it was Schroeder's biggest day with the team.

Schroeder was the Raiders quarterback in 1990 when they advanced to the AFC title game.

"This defense is getting better and they can be outstanding before the seasons ends," coach R.C. Slocum said. "I've been pleased and a little surprised at how well they've come on.

One of the Wrecking Crew's biggest fans in Saturday's game was offensive coordinator Bob Toledo, trying to mold his young offense into a balanced attack. The offense struggled at times against Tulsa and the Wrecking Crew picked them up.

"You can't have one without the other, when we aren't contributing the other side has to be better," Toledo said. "Against Louisiana State, they kind of struggled and we held our own.

"Last week, we put them in jeopardy and they did a great job of holding them to just field goals. We could have lost that game if they hadn't done that."

"It helps them because the coaches coach better and the players play better," Slocum said. "They'll be saying 'we'd better get ready for these guys. They're ranked No. 5 in the nation.'

"You look around the country and every week teams like Missouri beat teams like Texas A&M."

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Welcome an opportunity to reverse a negative trend. Joining forces with those who share your values will empower you. A financial situation shows marked improvement in late fall. Be gracious about accepting assistance when you need it. Once 1993 gets under way, you will be in a position to repay past favors. Next spring, your selection of a romantic partner will be of utmost concern. The ideal spouse will be a source of inspiration and support.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A wonderful day for teaming up with others. Alliances of all types and sizes enjoy favorable influences. It is time you changed your thinking about a romantic connection.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Excitement and surprise fill the air now. Love strikes like lightning! A legal decree, job announcement or message from afar signals success. Defer to an older person's wishes this evening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep your contacts with the public on a high level by offering inspiration. First impressions may not always prove reliable. Steer clear of people who are only out for themselves.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You or the people you work with could be on edge now. Ignore any negative undercurrents and be a model of stability. Make certain changes in your diet to give you more energy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look over financial records carefully; you cannot assume all is well just because someone says so. A business plan could work out great if the initial outlay is not too high.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Attend to any unpaid bills today, and make certain your credit rating is good. Allowing your romantic partner to take charge of the social schedule has many benefits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): By getting together and agreeing on procedures, you and your associates greatly increase your chances for success. Be willing to make intelligent compromises.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Positive influences surround you. Are you paying attention? Listen to higher-ups and learn from their experiences. Seek the help of experts, too. Romance is much improved the second time around.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not let your associates' enthusiasm go to waste. When allowed to work with you, they tend to be friendlier and more productive. A love relationship will transform your entire life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your determination to finish up whatever remains undone should lead to success. Lie low this afternoon and attend to family and domestic affairs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): While financial stability lends strength to a union, money worries could strain it to the breaking point. Consult mate before investing jointly owned funds.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Powerful forces could block your efforts to reach an agreement with key associates. Avoid taking any unnecessary financial risks. Make certain that a lesson learned today will never be forgotten.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are calm, self-reliant and thrifty. As tots, they will treasure their piggy banks the way most children cling to their teddy bears. Obedient and hard-working, these Virgos rarely have problems in school. They recognize the importance of getting a good education and will want to attend a highly regarded college. Count on these well-spoken Virgos to develop their leadership skills as they mature. Their quiet confidence will impress others more than any amount of impassioned pleading.

Opening lead: Five of ◇

Imagine yourself on the verge of winning a major national championship. All you need is a good score on this board from the recent Summer North American Championships in Toronto, and you will have achieved your goal. Cover up the East-West hands and formulate your plan.

You have reached a three-no-trump contract that should be bid by everyone. You receive a favorable diamond lead, which you win on the table with the ten. You cross to hand with the ace of diamonds and run the nine of hearts. East, Frank Wharton of Bermuda, wins the ace and returns a club to dummy's ace. How do you proceed at match-point pairs? Do you play differently in a team match scored by International Match Points?

Playing in a pair competition, South saw the possibility of a host of overtricks. Declarer led the jack of spades, covered by the king and taken by the ace. The king of clubs was cashed and when the ten of hearts was finessed, the roof fell in. East's queen of hearts won, and after cashing the jack of clubs East returned a spade, allowing the defenders to take three tricks in that suit for down two.

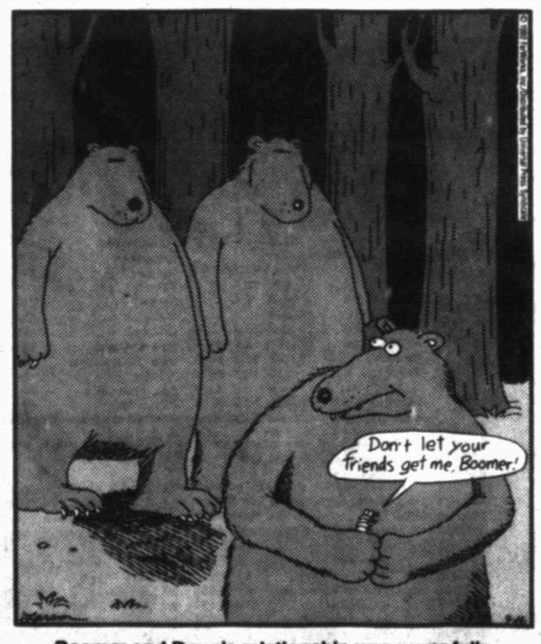

We would probably have suffered a similar fate in a pair event. What about in a team match?

Unless we desperately needed a point or two, we would make certain of our contract. After winning the first trick, we would simply lead hearts from dummy to force out the ace and queen. That way we would be guaranteed one spade, three hearts, four diamonds and two clubs—10 tricks in all.

Dreyfuss

A call Tuesday to the actor's lawyer, Dennis Wasser, was not immediately returned. But a spokesman for the actor, Richard Grant, said Tuesday, "The agreement to part was mutual and amicable."

Ali, the only three-time world heavyweight boxing champion, won his first title against Sonny Liston in Miami Beach in 1964 and trained there in the 1960s.

The parade, to be broadcast nationally by NBC, will have the theme "King Orange ... A World of Fun" and include a section, "Heroes of the Hurricane," honoring those in the community who helped victims of Hurricane Andrew.

LOS ANGELES — A judge said a sound-effects inventor can still sue Michael Jackson over failure to remove the man's name from the album "Bad" after deleting his contribution to the record.

Lawyers for the pop star, his MJJ Productions and Sony's Epic Records failed Monday to persuade Superior Court Judge David Yaffe to dismiss the lawsuit for lack of evidence and cause. However, the judge said he would consider the argument that the lawsuit was filed late.

Zuccarelli invented a system called Holophonics to create three-dimensional sound effects that seem to project a sound away from the stereo speakers producing it.

According to the lawsuit, the sound of a car, a ticking clock and a building break-in were recorded on "Bad" using Holophonics. After 2 million copies of the album were sold, the sound effects were removed yet credit to Zuccarelli remained on the album jacket.

The inventor claims the reputation of his Zuccarelli Holophonics Inc. was damaged because potential customers who listen to the album hear no sound effect.

HONOLULU — Hawaii brought fair weather for actor Larry Manetti's career. Now he's helping victims of Hurricane Iniki by organizing a nightclub benefit, including fund-raising souvenirs.

"We'll have Polaroids on hand for instant prints, which will be framed and signed, with proceeds going to a relief fund for the Kauai folks," said Manetti, of CBS television's "Magnum P.I.," which is set in Hawaii and since gone to reruns.

The lineup for the benefit scheduled for Thursday so far includes Manetti and Lee Majors, a co-star on the Hawaii-based "Raven" TV series.

"I can't say yet who exactly will be there, but we will get a bunch of people, for sure," Manetti said Monday. He switched planes to come to Hawaii to arrange the benefit after working in Canada on a CBS drama, "Hat Squad."

NEW YORK — Marilyn Horne let out a cry of astonishment when she drew the winning ticket at a raffle Sunday at Carnegie Hall: "This is hysterical," she said. "The name is Barbara Bush." The audience roared.

The prize, a trip for two to Scotland, the homeland of Andrew Carnegie, founder of the hall, was awarded at the culmination of a "Carnegie Insider" day that included an open house and a four-hour live broadcast on radio station WNCN.

Regaining her aplomb, Ms. Horne said: "Barbara Bush, you're going to love it. I was there last weekend and it was glorious."

It was just another stroke of luck for Mrs. Bush and her husband, David, a teacher. They had come to New York after winning a weekend trip here in a Rotary Club raffle.

"We wanted to see Carnegie Hall, so on Saturday we went by to ask about tours," she said. "They told us to come back Sunday." And that's when she entered the raffle.

A homemaker, foster parent and church volunteer, Mrs. Bush said she has got accustomed to the double-takes her name elicits. "It's been fun, and as long as everyone still likes the Barbara Bush, it's all right with me," she said.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:
1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.
2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.
3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.
4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).
Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.
5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Prices slump

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell slightly Tuesday as traders took some profits from the previous day's increase, but trading was light ahead of this week's meeting of OPEC oil ministers.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in October, which rose 30 cents a barrel Monday, fell 13 cents Tuesday to settle at $22.18 per barrel at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian, Texaco Trading and Transportation and Navajo Refining lowered their posted price 25 cents to $20.75.

Natural gas prices were higher, with contracts for delivery in October settling at $2.244 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 6 cents.

CPAs to meet

The Permian Basin chapter, Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants, will meet Thursday at the Midland Center. The meeting begins with social hour at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 7 p.m.

The guest speaker, who will speak at 6:30 p.m., will be Mason Backus, president of the Texas Society of CPAs. Also attending will be members of the society's governmental affairs committee and at least one of the society's lobbyists from Austin.

The speakers will give a brief presentation on the political races in the area and the society's position on various issues such as tort reform.

Cost is $15 per person.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar ended mostly higher Tuesday, particularly against the British pound and Italian lire, in hectic currency trading dominated by economic uncertainties in Europe.

Stocks retreat

NEW YORK — The stock market fell broadly Tuesday amid profit-taking and growing pessimism over the global economy, nearly erasing the year's best one-day gain, posted in the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which jumped more than 70 points on Monday, tumbled 48.90 points to close at 3,327.32.

■ Stagnant economy keeps lid on consumer prices.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Retail sales fell by 0.5 percent in August, the poorest showing since March, the government said Tuesday, but the stagnant economy continued to keep a lid on prices with consumer inflation rising by a modest 0.3 percent last month.

With seven weeks to go until Election Day, economists said a flurry of statistics Tuesday depicted an economy still showing few signs of life.

"It's the same old story. The economy is dead in the water," said Bruce Steinberg, an economist at Merrill Lynch in New York.

In addition to the drop in retail sales, the government also reported that the country's overall trade deficit tripled in the April-June quarter to $17.8 billion, the worst showing for the current account in 2½ years.

With overseas economies slowing, analysts said that the United States can expect little help from what had been the economy's one bright spot, sales of American products abroad.

"The world's major economies are stagnating with few signs of a turnaround and that is hurting our exports," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co.

Financial markets retreated Tuesday following a huge rally Monday that had been spurred by a cut in German interest rates. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 48.90 to close at 3,327.32, giving up more than half of Monday's gain.

Analysts said that, upon reflection, investors had turned pessimistic that the small German rate cut would do much to spur worldwide growth.

Among economic developments Tuesday:

■ The 0.5 percent drop in retail sales was the worst showing since a 1.2 percent decline in March. While sales were revised upward for June and July, analysts said there still was very little strength in America's retail sector. They noted that sales of cars and other durable goods fell by 1.6 percent, the biggest plunge in 18 months.

"We are seeing the effects of low consumer confidence and concerns about the job situation," said Lynn Reaser, an economist at First Interstate Bancorp in Los Angeles.

■ The 0.3 percent increase in the Labor Department's consumer price index last month left inflation for the year running at an annual rate of just 2.9 percent. In August, the first drop in gasoline prices since February helped to offset the biggest jump in fruit and vegetable prices in more than 2½ years.

■ The $17.8 billion second quarter deficit in the current account, the broadest measure of foreign trade because it includes not only merchandise but trade in services and investment flows, followed a January-March deficit of $5.9 billion. It represented a blow to Bush administration hopes that continued improvements in trade would help offset a weak domestic economy.

■ Americans' average weekly earnings, after adjusting for inflation, did show an improvement, rising by 1.5 percent in August, but the gain followed declines in June and July.

Economists were most disappointed by the worse-than-expected retail sales report. They had been looking for a slight decline of around 0.1 percent because of weak auto sales, but they had not anticipated the widespread weakness evidenced in the report.

Since consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of total economic activity, the overall economy will not turn around until the consumer starts spending again.

Given the bleak unemployment picture, analysts said any significant upturn in consumer demand is still months away, not the type of forecast President Bush wants to hear in the midst of an election campaign in which the weak economy is a major issue.

For August, auto sales were down 1.1 percent, with sales at furniture and hardware stores, the other two categories of durable goods, both down 2.7 percent.

But most other non-durable good categories showed declines, with decreases of 1.2 percent in restaurant sales, 2 percent at gasoline stations and 1 percent at apparel and specialty clothing stores.

Crude prices 'reasonable,' ministers hint

GENEVA (AP) — Several OPEC ministers expressed satisfaction Tuesday with the current level of oil prices, suggesting that the cartel won't try to drive prices sharply higher in the winter months.

Nazer, whose country is the world's largest crude exporter, is closely watched for any signs of policy changes by the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. OPEC ministers meet today to discuss pricing levels.

Iran's minister, price-hawk Gholamreza Aqazadeh, gave no clues about his position. A fight between Aqazadeh and Nazer, frequent OPEC sparring partners, could disrupt the meeting.

An oil market analyst, chairman John Lichtblau of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation in New York, commented, "They are saying that prices are moving in the right direction."

"I don't see any confrontation there," he said.

Many analysts predict higher demand for oil ahead of winter will lift crude prices a dollar or two a barrel in the coming months, possibly reaching OPEC's target of $21 a 42-gallon barrel.

Alliance pushes to stimulate recycling demand

BOSTON (AP) — More than 20 companies, including McDonald's Corp., Coca-Cola Co. and Sears, Roebuck and Co., launched a national campaign Tuesday to encourage U.S. businesses to buy recycled goods.

A business alliance for the National Recycling Coalition hopes to recruit 5,000 small and large businesses to commit themselves to buy recycled products.

Steve Morrow, recycling manager for Coca-Cola, said the effort was the first by a diverse group of U.S. corporations to create a market for recyclables.

The alliance will conduct programs around the country to show businesses how they can buy recycled goods and use them in daily operations. The effort will include a database that informs businesses where, for example, they might buy memo pads made of recycled paper.

As a first step, the member companies surveyed their organizations and found $2.7 billion worth of materials they use, either for internal purposes — such as office supplies — or to make their products, contain recycled goods.

Sears, for instance, asked its purchasing agents to buy business supplies that use recycled content. Also, the retail giant has set goals with its suppliers to use corrugated paper and plastic packaging that contain at least 25 percent recycled materials.

Bramwell Yarns and More opens retail outlet

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

BRAMWELL YARNS has just opened a retail store in the Fairmont Shopping Center, 3323 N. Midland Drive.

McEwen

The store carries 38 different types of yarns, knitting machines and fabric paints, according to owner Frances Collins.

She noted that Bramwell has been in business for a number of years as a wholesale company and decided to open a retail outlet.

Hours are from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays.

Programs include Junior Scientist programs, introducing science to eight children aged 18 to 36 months on Tuesday mornings, ages 3 to 5 years on Wednesday mornings. The Future Scientist Club explores the different facets of science every other week with Grades K-2 on Tuesdays, 3-5 on Wednesdays.

Other programs include Adult Workshops for parents and teachers, Children's Workshops for children and their families, Meet the Scientist with different experts and Kids Care offering how-to programs on different topics.

There are also organized group programs, and birthday parties that include science activities and projects.

There will be an open house at the center Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Adoption fair brings children, potential parents together

DETROIT (AP) — Veda Thompkins came to the annual Adoption Festival on Saturday looking for a son. She didn't have to look far. He found her.

"I was looking around and he just came up to me and started talking to me," Thompkins excitedly told a social worker. "I'm in love."

Several adoption agencies in metropolitan Detroit sponsored the fourth annual festival, hoping to place more than 200 children with adoptive families.

The children played sports, got their faces painted and listened to rap groups between meetings with prospective parents. Most of the children ranged in age from 2 to 15, but there were a few infants available.

The idea is to create an environment in which prospective parents and children can meet in a less formal setting than an office, said John Kraphol, a social worker at the Ennis Center for Children Inc. in Detroit.

Kraphol, who was adopted as an infant, said the participating agencies expect to place more than the 30 children placed at the 1991 festival because the event was better organized this year.

Potential adoptive parents at the festival must go through the same screening procedure as parents who apply through traditional ways. It takes a about a year before an adoption is formally approved by Probate Court.

Thompkins, who has three adopted daughters and an adopted son, said she came to the festival looking for a companion for her son.

"This is great," the Detroit woman said. "They don't feel picked over or rejected because everyone is just having a good time."

As potential parents strolled by, 14-year-old Leonardo hung out by the swings with two friends. He said he would like to find someone to be his parents but hadn't talked to anyone yet.

"I like sports. And I like spelling," he said in a barely audible voice when asked what he would tell prospective parents.

"I want a family," he said a little louder.

Scientists to ask UN how to respond to aliens

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — After more than 30 years of listening to radio waves from outer space for greetings from an alien civilization, scientists are planning to turn to the United Nations for guidance on how to answer.

Dozens of times, scientists have picked up radio waves matching the expected signature of a message from space. But these have not been confirmed as genuine contacts because they were fleeting and unverifiable.

With new NASA equipment joining the search next month, radio astronomers believe they will ultimately be able to confirm that a future transmission is a sign from a distant planet.

Radio astronomers and engineers involved in the Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence, commonly called SETI, this month began consulting with their colleagues in all scientific disciplines for suggestions on what the reply to aliens should be.

After sifting and winnowing their own ideas, the scientists plan to seek a decision from the U.N. General Assembly's Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space.

"The basic thinking all along is that this decision ought to be put into the hands of the United Nations," said John Billingham, head of the SETI project at NASA's Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif.

In a "white paper" now being circulated to space scientists worldwide, one key principle is that Earth should reply with one voice, on behalf of all humanity, rather than individual states sending a response, according to scientists familiar with the document.

"We have always considered this not just a U.S. question, but an international question," Billingham said. "Everybody, in some way or another, should be involved in it."

Officials at the U.S. State Department, speaking on condition of anonymity, say they are leaving this initiative to the scientists.

The space scientists plan to refine their ideas at international meetings in April and October of 1993, and then bring them to the U.N.'s space committee.

The 53-nation Committee of the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space has in the past drafted five international treaties on the peaceful use of outer space, and three internationally accepted declarations of legal principles.

The scientists would have to find a sponsor nation to bring their ideas before the U.N. committee. Then, Billingham said, the committee could accept wide-ranging testimony from scientists, historians, philosophers and political delegates to shape Earth's reply to a message from another planet.

The nature of the reply may well depend on the complexity of the transmission received, Billingham said. That transmission could range from simple radio or radar "noise" from another world to a purposeful message greeting other planets.

Billingham and some of his colleagues think the world may need a reply sooner than most people might think. The United States, Russia, Australia, Argentina, France, India and Japan are all running SETI searches.

Receivers have picked up signs that bore all the earmarks of an intelligent signal from space about 60 times — except they were brief and could not be reacquired and confirmed, said Frank Drake, the man who in 1960 launched Project Ozma, the first SETI search.

He still wonders if the receptions were simply a glitch in the equipment.

Drake thinks there is no need to rush a reply back to the stars.

"You would build a large enough (radio telescope) system to capture those communications and spend years, perhaps, learning what that civilization is all about. By then, the answer would be obvious," Drake said.

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — A letter long buried in federal archives indicates the U.S. government helped bomb the home of notorious bandit Jesse James, killing his half-brother and maiming his mother, a historian claims.

"This is the smoking gun," said Ted Yeatman, who for two decades has studied the James gang, which robbed banks, trains and stagecoaches in the Midwest more than a century ago.

"If this thing had come out in the 1870s, it would have been like some new revelation in the Iran-Contra case," he said.

James was well-known as a criminal, though some saw him as a Robin Hood who robbed unregulated railroads and banks suspected of overcharging common people trying to make a living on the western frontier.

People began pitying James after an explosion Jan. 26, 1875, at the family's log farmhouse outside Kearney, Mo. James was miles away at the time and the blast killed his 8-year-old half-brother and caused his mother to lose her right forearm.

The explosion shocked the region. The Missouri legislature hired an investigator to look into the blast, but he gave up, saying he could not get anyone to testify under oath.

They suspected Allan Pinkerton, director of the Pinkerton National Detective Agency and founder of the Secret Service, was a key player in the attack.

Yeatman said he found a letter last year at the Library of Congress in Washington that proves Pinkerton indeed was involved.

In the letter, Pinkerton wrote to P.H. Woodward, a special agent for the U.S. Post Office in Washington, to keep the postal service abreast of his efforts to apprehend James.

Yeatman said Pinkerton was working for the postal service because the James gang was believed to have looted mail during a train robbery in Gads Hill, Mo.

Then, with fellow researcher Fred Egloff of Chicago, Yeatman found another letter in the National Archives in Chicago that he says shows a Pinkerton agent got a bomb from the U.S. Arsenal in Rock Island, Ill.

In that letter, Civil War Gen. Philip H. Sheridan wrote to the arsenal on Dec. 24, 1874 — a month before the explosion rocked the James' home — to introduce the arsenal commander to a Pinkerton agent named R.J. Linden.

"Linden's visit to the Rock Island Arsenal puts new perspective on the incendiary device used at the James' house," Egloff wrote in a special October issue of True West, a western history magazine. "If Pinkerton agents intended to use just a flare, or some basic flammable material, they would have had no need of help from government munitions experts."

World's oldest bound book goes on display

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The world's oldest known bound book, a 1,600-year-old Book of Psalms, goes on display almost eight years after it was discovered in a little girl's grave.

"What a wonderful day for me!" Nasry Iskander, Egypt's chief conservation expert, said on Saturday. "We've gone through so much to save it."

Gawdat Gabra, an Egyptologist and Coptic scholar who is the museum's director, has studied the book since it was found in November 1984. Its 490 handwritten pages were stuck together, and experts had to go through a painstaking process of separating each parchment leaf.

Egyptian archaeologists discovered the book in a poor Christian cemetery at Al-Mudil, 85 miles south of Cairo and 25 miles north of the Greco-Roman city Oxyrhynchus.

Early Christians incorporated the ankh into their cross.

"Through their tears, I can imagine what this family was feeling," Gabra said. "I have only one daughter, and I can't imagine losing her. I believe that they, too, had only one daughter."

Her parents must have sought in their grief to protect her with the most precious gift they had, The Book of Psalms, Gabra said.

When he first saw the book, all but two pages were stuck together and damaged by water and salt.

"I wouldn't leave until I'd copied the two pages. I knew I had a treasure," Gabra said.

Iskander said initially he didn't know if he could save the book.

"I touched everything as if I was a blind person, as though I were dealing in the dark, because we knew nothing," he said.

Andrew, Iniki have chance to join Hurricane Hall of Infamy

N.Y. Times News Service

Camille and Hugo have joined the Hurricane Hall of Infamy, and perhaps Andrew and Iniki will join them, meteorologists say.

The World Meteorological Organization of the United Nations issues names every year for hurricanes — or typhoons, if they originated west of the international dateline — listed alphabetically and alternating between male and female names.

The lists run on a six-year cycle, said Llyle Barker, a meteorologist at the National Weather Service in Miami.

Names chosen tend to be short, easy to pronounce and easy to remember, so boaters can readily communicate them over their radios, said Dan Graf, a meteorologist at Pennsylvania State University. But names that are too easy to remember — like Hurricane Camille, which ravaged the Gulf Coast in 1969, and Hurricane Hugo, which did the same to the East Coast and the Caribbean in 1989 — are retired, he said.

"I'm sure Andrew will be retired, and maybe Iniki will be, too," Graff said.

Iniki, the name of the hurricane that devastated the Hawaiian island of Kauai, is the Hawaiian word for "sharp, piercing."

The meteorological organization issues one list for hurricanes in the Atlantic, and divides the Pacific into three zones. Hurricanes that develop in an area about 1,000 miles on either side of the Hawaiian Islands are given Hawaiian names, while those that originate in the eastern Pacific, off the Mexican and Central American Coasts, are given Spanish names.

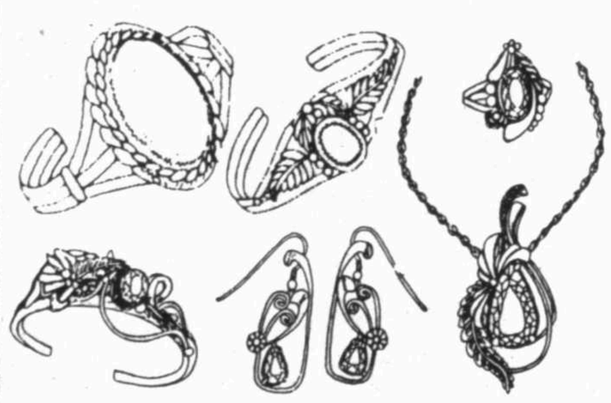

Atlantic hurricanes were once given exclusively female names, but since 1979 male names have been added to the list.

The Bells Are Talking Out Both Sides Of Their Receiver.

The Bell telephone monopolies are telling Congress they will create thousands and thousands of jobs. All Congress has to do is allow them to enter into the electronic information services, telecommunications manufacturing and long-distance services industries.

But the truth is, millions of jobs have already been created in these thriving and competitive industries without any help from the Bells.

Now these jobs could be in jeopardy.

In 1984, when the seven regional Bell companies were created from the breakup of AT&T, the courts wisely banned the Bells from entering certain industries. But in the past year and a half, a U.S. District Judge reluctantly reversed the ban on information services, the Senate has approved legislation allowing the manufacturing of equipment and the Bells are trying to enter long-distance services.

If they bully their way into these industries, the Bells could abuse their position as monopolies and drive thousands of currently prosperous companies out of business.

And that means lost jobs and higher prices—something today's economy cannot afford.

Millions of Americans are depending on Congress to protect a competitive marketplace and support—along with the Consumer Federation of America and more than 1,600 other consumer and business groups—the Antitrust Reform Act of 1992 (HR 5096) introduced by House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jack Brooks.

The Bells may claim they want to create more jobs, but the simple truth is that these monopolies have eliminated jobs. It takes a free and competitive marketplace to increase employment, fuel the economy and benefit the American consumer.

Help protect American jobs. Help protect the American consumer. Call or write today and urge your U.S. Representative to support HR 5096—the Brooks bill.

Call 1-800-547-7482 to learn how you can help protect American jobs.

310 General Help Wanted

KENT OIL, INC. — KENT KWIK CONVENIENCE STORES

WHY KENT OIL COMPANY?

Kent Oil (operating Kent Kwik convenience stores) is a West Texas-based company, thirty five years old and still growing. We offer many benefits to our employees. These benefits include:

- Company-assisted medical, dental and life insurance
- Paid vacations
- Sick pay program
- Tuition reimbursement program
- Special incentive programs for all employees
- Profit-sharing and retirement plan
- Intensive new hire training
- Structured continual management training
- Flexible scheduling
- Full and part time hours available
- Work close to home
- Affiliation with Odessa 66 credit union

We attempt whenever possible to promote from within. All of our current store managers, middle and upper management started with the company at the entry level. It is possible to move up quickly based on your experience and level of education.

Working in a convenience store is both exciting and challenging. You have to be outgoing and enjoy serving the public, while at the same time be a self-starter, as you receive very little on the job supervision.

If you are considering a career in the retail industry, give Kent Oil your consideration. Please apply (and be ready for interview) at the Kent Oil office Monday-Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. 3314 N. Loop 250 in Midland.

Tired of reading all of those ads? Tired of searching page to page? Why not call and give me an opportunity to do the work for you? My services will cost you nothing and you will have the benefit of my education and all of the material that I pay for at your disposal. Call Skeet Doss for a complete picture of today's market.
Imagine yourself under a cool cabana with a deep blue pool 10 feet away surrounded by lush landscaping. Go into the house and have the same view through floor length windows around the whole perimeter. Hawaii never looked any better than this hidden lagoon located within a stones throw from downtown. Custom designed, custom built and beyond replacement in today's construction. A private oasis awaits your viewing pleasure. Call Skeet and ask to see this gorgeous home. Expensive.
Stand at the top of the staircase and overlook the living room. Turn around and view the entrance hall. Loop up to a vaulted ceiling! Wow is right! There are two bedrooms and two full baths upstairs. Downstairs features a master with two separate bathrooms. An additional bedroom downstairs features another full bath. Then there's an atrium, formal dining, living, breakfast, den, utility, half bath and music nook all downstairs. Add gorgeous updating throughout and then stand back and pull in your breath. There's a beautiful courtyard entry, small backyard as well as a workshop! Impressed? Expensive. Call Skeet
