Iraq increases troop strength in Kuwait

(AP) Less than two weeks after President Bush ordered 200,000 more troops to the Persian Gulf to gain parity with Iraq, Saddam Hussein has again raised the stakes, ordering another 250,000 troops of his own into Kuwait.

In another frustrating development for U.S. gulf policy, Bush failed on Monday to get Soviet agreement on a proposed U.N. resolution authorizing force against Iraq.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev went so far only as to agree that force in the gulf "cannot be ruled out," officials said.

In announcing the troop additions on Monday, the official Iraqi News Agency said they would more than double Iraq's strength in the occupied emirate, giving it a superiority that "others cannot match."

Saddam's move was a clear response to Bush's announcement Nov. 8 that up to 200,000 more troops would be sent to the gulf, giving the U.S.-led multinational force arrayed against Iraq an offensive military option.

That would bring the U.S. buildup in the region to about 430,000 — approximately the number of Iraqi troops currently in Kuwait and southern Iraq. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater called the announcement of Iraq's new deployment "another instance of him (Saddam) thumbing his nose at the United Nations."

The U.N. Security Council has passed 10 resolutions — including a global trade embargo — in an effort to force Iraq out of Kuwait.

INA said Saddam met with his military commanders and decided to send seven extra divisions of the regular army and an additional 150,000 reserves and draftees, for a total of 250,000 new troops.

There was no indication as to where the extra regular Iraqi troops would come from. Iraq's army totals 55 divisions of 555,000 regular troops and 480,000 reserves.

Western military analysts say Iraq's reserves are poor in quality.

But its regular army includes about 120,000 elite Republican Guards, who led Iraq's offensives in the closing stages of Iraq's 1980-88 war with Iran. They also led the invasion of Kuwait.

The U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, told ABC's "Good Morning America" today that the United States would closely monitor troop movements.

"It seems to me this is part of Saddam Hussein's headline-of-the-day program. Yesterday it was troop buildup, the day before that it was a hostage release," Powell said. "What he's trying to do is take the world's eye off the ball. And that ball is his aggression against the nation of Kuwait, his aggression in the region, his threatening our economic lifeline."

A poll published today, meanwhile, indicated that Americans are increasingly worried that Bush favors the military option over the diplomatic route to resolve the crisis precipitated by Iraq's Aug. 2 seizure of Kuwait.

In a joint New York Times-CBS poll published today, 47 percent of respondents said the Bush administration has been too quick to get U.S. forces involved and has not been diligent enough about seeking diplomatic solutions.

Only 38 percent felt the same way in August, the poll said.

Shortly after Iraq invaded Kuwait, 75 percent of Americans approved of Bush's decision to send U.S. soldiers to the Middle East and gather international support for an embargo against Iraq, the poll said. Only 50 percent now approve of Bush's approach, while 41 percent disapprove.

The poll of 1,370 adults was done by telephone Nov. 13-15. It has a margin for error of 3 percent.

Community pep rally planned

The Quarterback Club and the Big Spring High School cheerleaders are planning a community pep rally Friday at 7 p.m. at the high school gym. All Steers fans are urged to come and show their support for the Steers football team as they prepare to play the Hereford Whitefaces on Saturday, 7:30 p.m., at Lubbock's Jones Stadium.

A team send off is scheduled for the Steers in the parking lot behind Blankenship Field at 3 p.m. Saturday. A car caravan will follow the team to Lubbock.

The Quarterback Club will be selling "District Champion" bumper stickers at the pep rally and at the game. Bumper stickers are $2 each.

Police department given crime money

The Big Spring Police Department received a bonus recently in the amount of $8,954 and a 1983 Ford Bronco.

The cash and the truck were seized in recent narcotics and gambling crimes, solved in cooperation with federal agencies.

Police Chief Joe Cook said this is the first time in his experience with the department that they have received seizure money. He said the money and vehicle must, by law, be used within the department for law enforcement programs and can be used to help with investigations.

Contract awarded for transportation

West Texas Opportunities, a non-profit organization based in Lamesa, was awarded a contract from the Texas Department of Human Services to provide transportation for Medicaid recipients to medical facilities outside of Howard County.

Lanell White, transportation coordinator for WTO in Big Spring, said the contract is limited to providing transportation to doctor and dentist appointments in Midland, due to staff restrictions. But if a client needs to see a doctor in Lubbock, the arrangements might be worked out, although DHS provides transportation for most clients in that situation.

White said the Medicaid client must call the DHS in El Paso, and give the operator there the name of the doctor and the time for the appointment. The operator verifies the appointment, then contacts White.

"I've been super, super busy. I've got 29 (clients) who go to Midland to see the dentist," she said, indicating other clients using the service include kidney dialysis patients and children.

Water district calls election

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

An election is scheduled Jan. 19 to decide if the northwest corner of Howard County will be annexed by the Martin County Underground Water Conservation District, according to a decision by the board of directors Monday night.

The area under consideration is just under about 20 percent of the land in Howard County, estimates MCUWD Manager Mark Hoelscher. Voters in both that area and in Martin County must approve the annexation for it to pass.

The Howard County area is bounded by: the northwest corner of the county; the northeast corner of Section 25, Block 33, Township 3 North; the southeast corner of Section 19, Block 33, Township 1 North; and the southwest corner of Section 8, Block 34, Township 1 North.

The property tax rate of the district now is 2 cents per $100 valuation.

"At 2 cents per $100 valuation, it'll bring in $10,000," Hoelscher told the board. "It's not as much as we thought."

However, he said, that should enable him to hire a technician, at least on a part-time basis, which would expand the district's capability to serve both areas better than Martin County is being served now.

This year $96,263 in property taxes is anticipated from Martin County landowners, according to an official with the Martin County Election page 8-A

Gulf crisis at top of summit agenda

PARIS (AP) — Leaders of a 34-nation summit unexpectedly pushed the Persian Gulf crisis to the top of their agenda today as President Bush expressed optimism that Mikhail Gorbachev will support a United Nations resolution on using military force against Iraq.

"Just be patient and all will be well," Bush said.

Summit leaders, meeting here on the future of Europe in the post Cold War era, abruptly shifted their focus for a closed-door afternoon meeting to the gulf crisis. Bush and Secretary of State James A. Baker pressed their case in off-stage diplomacy.

Baker met for two and a-half hours with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and scheduled a second meeting with him later in the day. A meeting between Bush and the Soviet president on Monday night failed to produce a U.S.-sought statement from the Soviet president endorsing a U.N. resolution authorizing military force.

Meanwhile, Bush conferred with President Turgut Ozal of Turkey, which is allied with the United States against Iraq. Turkey is letting American bombers use its airfields, but has expressed little enthusiasm about a military confrontation with its neighbor.

During a picture-taking session, Bush said that "Nobody has been more steadfast than the Turks and Mr. Ozal. I have no complaints, only gratitude and I'm glad we're together on this one."

Asked if he had any complaints about Soviet support, Bush replied, "Just be patient and all will be well."

The gulf crisis has overshadowed the unprecedented summit of the 34-member Conference on Cooperation and Security in Europe.

Hungarian Prime Minister Jozsef Antall told the summit today that he hoped "the conditions for the complete dissolution of the Warsaw Pact" will be created by early 1992. "We are happy that the participating states of the (Warsaw Pact) have shown agreement over the dissolution of the military organization."

Antall is the first Warsaw Pact country leader to talk about the complete demise of the pact and to offer a deadline. In the past, the leaders have spoken only of ending the Warsaw Pact's military function.

Against the backdrop of the conference, leaders held a flurry of meetings to discuss how best to get Iraq out of Kuwait. Gorbachev met with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who has advocated military action against Iraq. Thatcher also met with French President Francois Mitterrand, who like Gorbachev has counseled patience.

Meanwhile, the official Soviet news agency created a stir today in a report from Paris that Bush and Gorbachev will hold a summit in Moscow early next year. However, White House officials said nothing has changed and Bush would go to Moscow only if the two sides reach agreement on a treaty slashing long-range nuclear weapons.

Bush is trying to rally support behind a new UN Security Council resolution that would authorize military action against Iraq, presumably if it does not end its occupation of Kuwait by a specified date.

Baker has been busy presenting the summit page 8-A

City vehicles to be tracked by computer

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Staff Writer

The fuel use and maintenance of Big Spring city vehicles will soon be managed by a computer. The ultimate goal is fuel conservation as well as reductions in manual labor and human error.

Assistant City Manager Tom Decell was recently authorized by the City Council to order a $15,900 computerized system to keep track of the 250-vehicle fleet.

"We've been working toward this for a number of years," Decell said. "We have a fuel management system now, but it is manually input. That will be eliminated with our new system."

The system, a personal-computer network tied into the city's mainframe, will eliminate manual filing work while storing information on virtually all aspects in the life of a vehicle. It will be purchased from Tel-Star Systems Inc. in San Antonio.

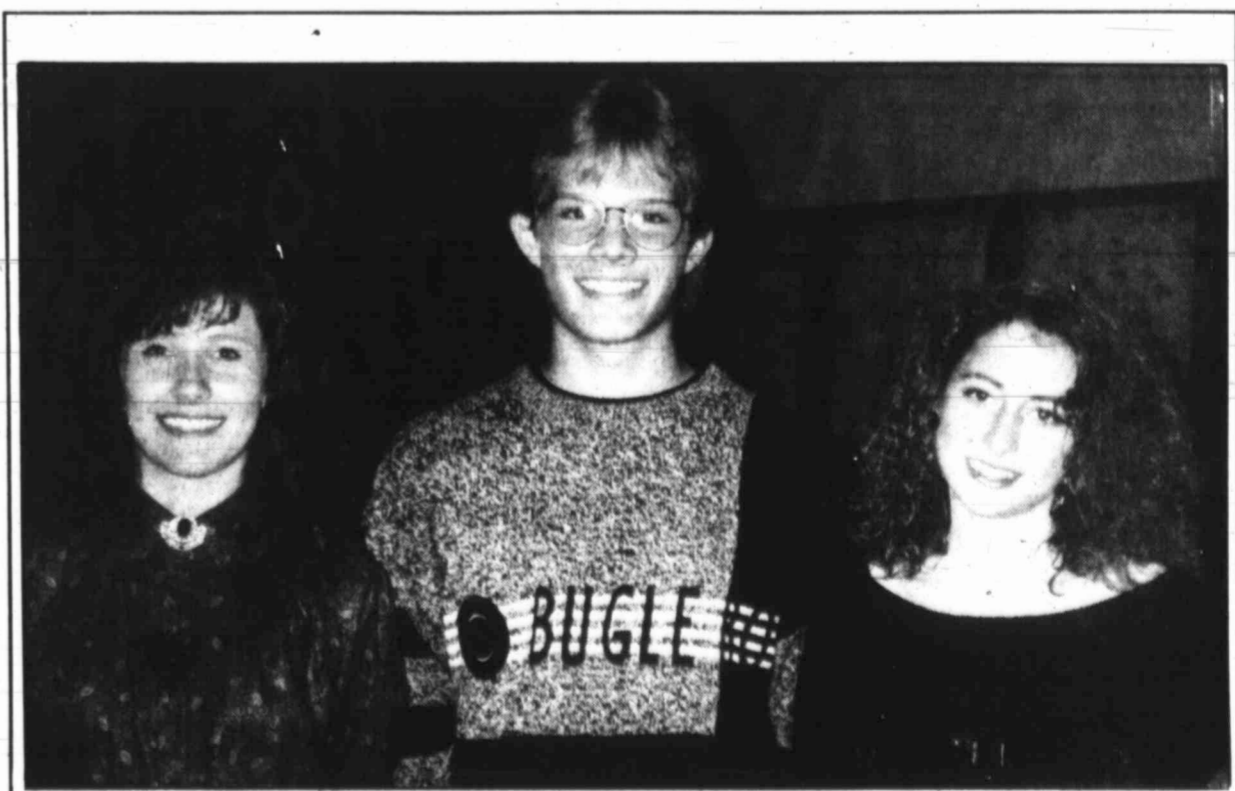

All city vehicles get their fuel from the Service Center at Second and Donley streets. Under the current system, city employees and vehicles will have magnetized cards to identify them when inserted into a reading machine at the facility. The process is similar to the use of automatic teller machines.

Under the new system, when an operator checks in at one of two "reader" stations, the vehicle's fuel use or service is catalogued in detail, including gas tank capacity, mileage and miles per gallon. The system will insure that the wrong type or amount of fuel is not put into a vehicle.

Preventative maintenance records will also be computerized, so when operators insert the cards a message will appear on the reading machine screen if the vehicle is in need of service checks. A complete yearly and lifetime maintenance record will allow city officials to determine exactly what a vehicle is costing the city in work hours and fuel.

Students vote on abortion clinic

ARLINGTON (AP) — Today is the final day of voting at the University of Texas-Arlington, where students are casting their ballots on whether an abortion clinic should be established in the campus health center.

Some 650 students went to the polls Monday to vote on Resolution 90-28, a proposal presented by the Student Congress to gauge campus reaction to on-campus abortion services.

The student body itself cannot approve the clinic. The student council will meet Nov. 27 to decide whether to pass the resolution.

If the student council passes the resolution, it would need approval by University President Wendell Nedderman, a staunch opponent of the measure.

Officials say that if the proposal is enacted, the university would probably become the first school in the nation to offer on-campus abortions.

"Well, why shouldn't it happen here?" said Andy Ternay, a member of the Progressive Students Union. "There are a lot of students who are female who don't have cars and thus don't have access... to the clinics in Dallas and Fort Worth."

There are no abortion clinics in Arlington, a city of about 250,000 located halfway between Dallas and Fort Worth.

Congressman's phone stolen

FORT WORTH (AP) — Fort Worth-Dallas may be one of the world's best places to live according to the private Population Crisis Committee, but as Congressman Pete Geren knows, that doesn't mean residents can let their guard down against crime.

Geren became a crime victim Monday when a $1,200 car telephone was purloined in a daylight car burglary of his Jeep, which he left parked next to his office building in Fort Worth.

Richard Millsap, a special assistant in the congressman's office, said Geren went to a luncheon at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport in another car. He returned about 2:30 p.m. and found his truck had been broken into and the phone taken, Millsap said.

Geren, D-Texas, said he left a window in his truck rolled down about two inches, and apparently the burglar slipped an instrument through the crack to open the vehicle.

"I was mad," Geren said. "I looked around to see if I could spot anyone who might have done it. I share the experience of thousands of citizens here who have been through the same thing."

Toll protest brings riot police

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — The return of protesters angry over recent toll hikes brought riot police and soldiers carrying tear gas and weapons to the international Paso del Norte Bridge.

Authorities on Monday dragged a few demonstrators off the bridge and the rally escalated to shouting matches, but did not become violent. Many of the protesters were members of the Mexican National Action Party, or PAN.

They have been protesting on the Paso del Norte bridge since Friday, when they commandeered toll booths and told motorists to pass through without paying the new $2.05 toll. The protesters returned Saturday, but when police in riot gear showed up Sunday there were no crowds.

At about 5 p.m. Monday, a worker at PAN headquarters said members of the party returned to the bridge that links downtown Ciudad Juarez with downtown El Paso, Texas.

The government raised the tolls by 17 percent on Thursday with little publicity.

Oil production increases not needed say feds

"We don't need to be endangering any of our Texas reservoirs by overproduction. If the nation is in danger and there's a critical shortage, we're certainly willing to work with producers and the federal government to up production, but not when there isn't an urgent national need,"

know for another month the actual production in September.

After Nov. 29, the wells will go back to what they were producing before the emergency order, which is decided on a case-by-case basis, Schaible said.

According to the commission's records, the daily production rate in August was 1.7 million barrels a day, compared with 1.69 million in July.

The Railroad Commission also voted Monday to set the production in the East Texas Field at 86 percent. However, Schaible said, commissioners are still under court order to allow the field to produce at 100 percent as the result of an order issued last month by Travis County District Judge Will Wilson.

AUSTIN (AP) — Federal energy officials have told the Texas Railroad Commission that higher oil production to offset potential losses in the Mideast is no longer needed because world supplies currently exceed demand, commission chairman Kent Hance said.

As a result, the commission voted unanimously Monday not to renew an emergency order allowing oil wells across most of Texas to pump at maximum capacity.

"The Department of Energy did not think it was still a necessity," Hance said. "We felt like there was enough production now and that surpluses look like they're going to be existing for some time."

The commission had approved the 90-day emergency order increasing oil production in August at the request of the U.S. Department of Energy, which said the additional oil was needed to make up for losses resulting from the U.S. trade embargo against Iraq.

Although there was a fear that oil supplies would dwindle after the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, several other nations — led by Saudi Arabia — stepped up production to fill the loss from the two countries. Now, Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent said, there is an "oversupply of oil in the world."

In a memo to the commission on Friday, agency official Ronald Schultz Jr. said the U.S. Energy Department had decided additional production was no longer needed because oil supplies currently exceeded world demand by 100,000 barrels of oil per day and are expected to exceed demand by 1 million barrels of oil per day in March if a war does not break out in the Persian Gulf.

Commission spokesman Brian Schaible said it had been estimated Texas could produce an additional 20,000 barrels of oil a day under the emergency order, but he would not

Winds prevent Atlantis landing

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Atlantis' astronauts awaited better weather today after high winds at the Mojave Desert landing site forced them to stay aloft another day.

NASA aimed for an afternoon landing of the shuttle today at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., but the wind was again a concern, said Randy Stone, chief of the flight director's office.

The five astronauts, who deployed a spy satellite during the Pentagon's last secret shuttle mission, were ready to return home Monday. But the winds suddenly picked up at Edwards, forcing NASA to call off the landing minutes before the shuttle was to begin its fiery plunge to Earth.

"The weather, as it sometimes does, pulled a dirty trick on us," Stone said.

The first scheduled landing time at Edwards today was 4:34 p.m. EST, with two subsequent opportunities. Skies were predicted to be mostly clear, but NASA said high winds were possible.

Atlantis has enough power and supplies to stay in space until Thursday if necessary, Stone said.

Atlantis could land at Kennedy Space Center, Fla., but the three-mile runway provides less room for maneuvering than the wide-open desert and the weather is more unstable. Discovery, the last shuttle to use the Kennedy runway, blew a tire and sustained brake damage during landing in 1985.

Stone said the decision on where to land could be made as late as an hour before the crew fires twin braking rockets to drop Atlantis out of orbit and start the glide home.

Atlantis commander Richard Covey's response to the delay was that "the crew feels all dressed up with no place to go," Mission Control said.

The other crew members are Navy Cmdr. Frank Culbertson Jr., pilot; and Army Maj. Charles Gemar, Air Force Lt. Col. Carl Meade and Marine Col. Robert Springer, mission specialists.

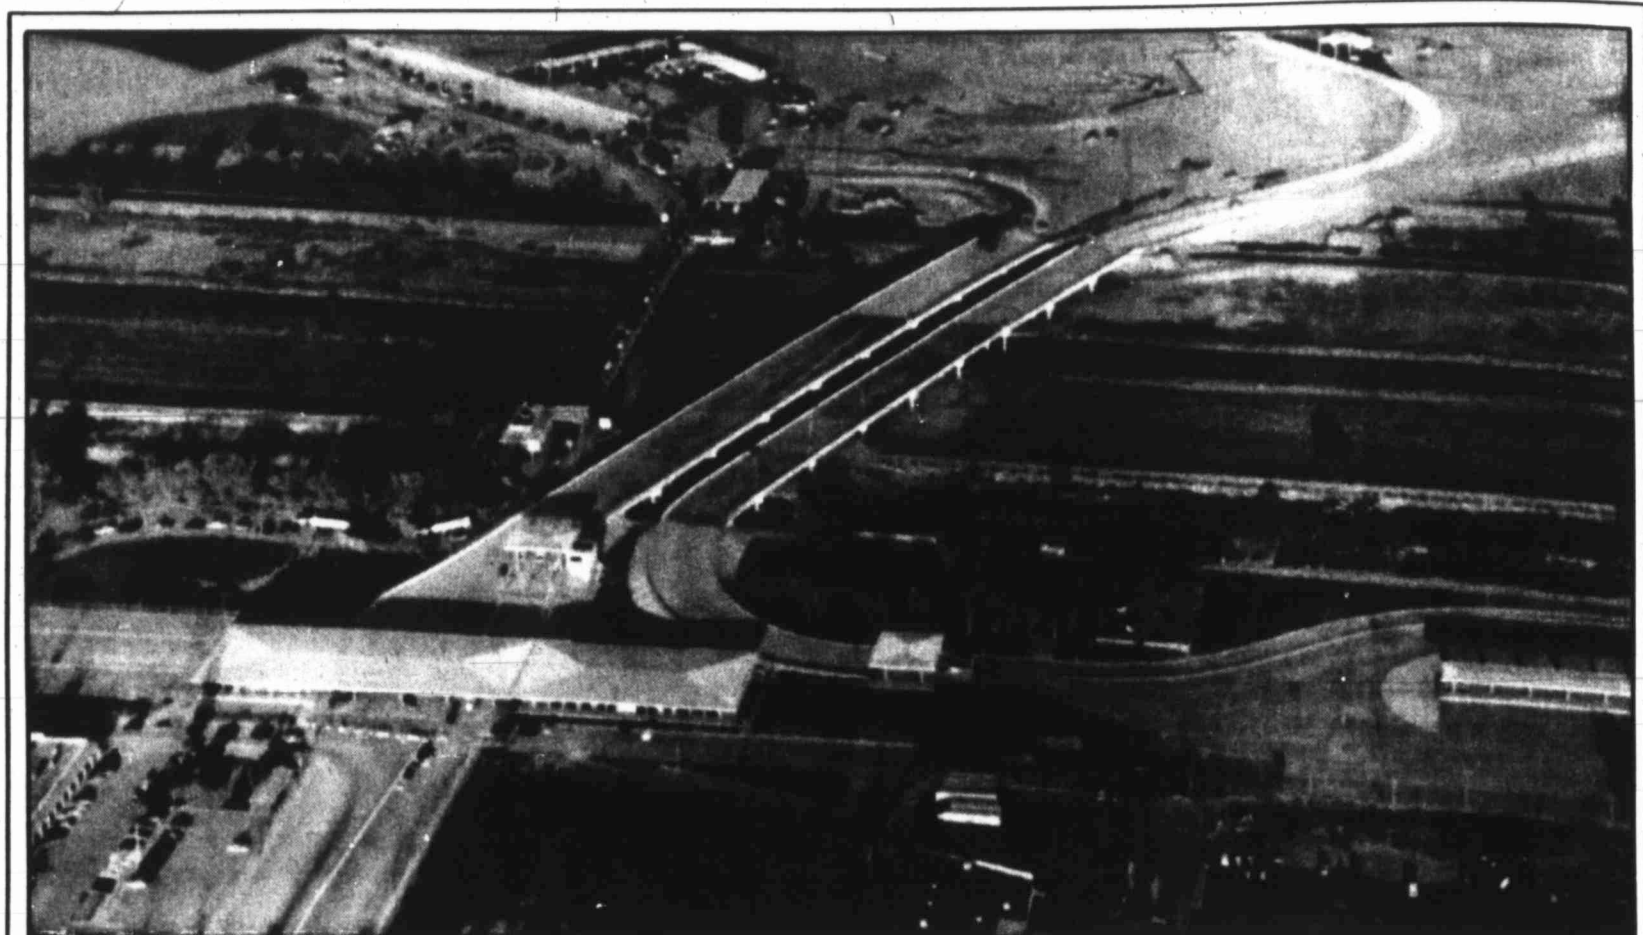

The flight has been shrouded in secrecy since Atlantis blasted into orbit Thursday night. But Stone said Monday the crew was doing well and there had been only a few minor problems.

"This is just about the cleanest orbiter than I can remember in the program," he said. Atlantis and Columbia were grounded during the summer because of hydrogen leaks, but both were cleared for flight last month.

Sources said the crew deployed a satellite Friday that is capable of spying on Iraq by either photographic surveillance or electronic eavesdropping.

The mission is the seventh and last secret shuttle flight for the Pentagon, which will use unmanned rockets to launch classified payloads from now on. The military will use the shuttle two more times, but those cargoes will not be classified.

Columbia is scheduled to fly next in December with seven astronauts and an observatory.

Beef can be part of lean diet

HOUSTON (AP) — A study has demonstrated that lean beef can be safely substituted for poultry or fish in a low-cholesterol diet, but the nutritionist who did the study cautioned that doesn't mean burgers and chicken-fried steak.

Lynne Scott, assistant professor at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, said her study of 46 men with borderline high cholesterol found that lean beef can be as effective as lean chicken or fish in a low-cholesterol diet.

"There's no reason that they couldn't eat beef as long as they stipulate it is a very lean beef in a low-fat diet," Ms. Scott said. "It must be with that stipulation, however. Otherwise, immediately people start thinking of hamburgers, lasagna and chicken-fried steak and that's not what we're talking about."

The study findings will be published in the January edition of Nutrition, Metabolism and Cardiovascular Disease journal, Ms. Scott said. Last week, she presented her findings in an abstract at the American Heart Association's 63rd annual convention in Dallas.

Ms. Scott put the 46 men, whose cholesterol levels were between 200 and 250 milligrams per deciliter of blood, on the low-fat, low-cholesterol diet recommended by the American Heart Association. That diet has less than 30 percent of calories derived from fat and less than 10 percent from saturated fat.

Half of the group ate 8 ounces of beef daily with less than 4 percent fat, while the other half ate 4 ounces of red snapper and 4 ounces of skinless chicken breast.

After four weeks, the overall cholesterol levels of both groups declined by the same amount and there was no statistically significant difference in their cholesterol levels.

Ms. Scott said the finding supports allowing more variety in such diets, but she emphasized the beef had to be extra lean and cooked without additional fats.

"It was all steaks — strip steaks — with the fat trimmed away," she said. "It's not hamburger. That isn't graded in the same way that whole meat is."

She said the study showed "if a person is going to use beef, he should use the select grade and he needs to trim off all of the fat."

The findings did not surprise Dr. Robert Lees, professor of cardiovascular disease at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"It's kind of an old finding, really," he said. "I think there has been a lot of emotion involved in each new dietary finding and people lose track of exactly what they are talking about."

"Certainly lean beef, if it's truly lean, is probably not very different in terms of its metabolic effect than poultry, which has more fat than people realize," Lees said.

Dr. Louis Rakita, professor of medicine at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, said that while the study's results are valid, he questioned whether the public would eat the same amount of meat as did the study subjects.

"There is nothing inappropriate about the result of that study. The question is can people eat a small enough amount of meat," said Rakita, a member of the American Heart Association's task force on cholesterol.

"Under the strict control of her experiment, I think the results are understandable," he said. "I think her recommendations are appropriate, provided you can stick to the standards of her experiment."

Hawaii's marijuana crop wiped out

HONOLULU (AP) — Hawaii's billion-dollar marijuana industry has been dealt a potentially fatal blow by a federal, state and county crackdown that used space-age surveillance and pinpoint aerial spraying of herbicide, authorities say.

About 90 percent of Hawaii's summer marijuana crop has been destroyed in Operation Wipeout, the biggest joint agency crackdown in Hawaii history and one of the largest in the nation, state Attorney General Warren Price said Monday.

"Law enforcement intelligence sources report that the industry is now in shambles, with growers leaving the state or turning to legitimate businesses," Price said.

In three months, the statewide operation that had the blessing of just-resigned drug policy chief William Bennett destroyed 785,000 plants worth $1.1 billion on the street, officials said.

Price said the sweep was made possible by "space-age intelligence gathering and photo identification methods."

He declined to say whether that meant military satellites were used to pinpoint the marijuana crops, saying only that information on the Pentagon's involvement was classified.

Short supplies

BUCHAREST, Romania — Romanians scuffle while lining up to buy shoes in Bucharest Tuesday. Consumer goods are in short supply despite efforts from the government on economic reform.

Postage would increase to meet union demands

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postal unions' pay raise demands would cost $50 billion over the next three years and raise the price of stamps to 43 cents, according to a top Postal Service negotiator.

"We don't take it as a very serious proposal... They're in a fantasy land," Assistant Postmaster General David Charters said Monday, noting that the service's annual budget is $40 billion.

The Postal Service and its four largest unions, which together represent 660,000 workers, were working against a deadline of midnight tonight to reach a compromise for a new contract.

Moe Biller, president of the American Postal Workers Union, said Postal Service officials are "the ones who are not in the real world." He said management always predicts huge stamp increases during contract bargaining to win the public's support.

"They predicted a 50-cent stamp in 1981 — it never happened," Biller said. Stamps now cost 25 cents.

If no agreement is reached by midnight tonight, the two sides could agree to continue talks or allow the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service to appoint a neutral arbitrator.

Under federal law, it is illegal for postal workers to strike.

The Postal Service is offering a two-year contract that provides cash bonuses of $450 the first year and $500 the second year. In addition, the Postal Service would implement a pay incentive plan in which workers could receive bonuses of up to $1,100 a year if their divisions met certain customer satisfaction and budget goals.

Management's plan would provide cost of living increases only if inflation rose more than 4 percent. For instance, if inflation rose 6 percent, workers would get a 2 percent raise. So far this year, the government's inflation gauge has risen 6.7 percent.

Biller, whose union has 334,000 members, has called management's offer of cash bonuses but no hourly wage increases "a piece of garbage designed to pit worker against worker."

Biller said the union would reject the Postal Service's offer of no cost of living increase before a 4 percent inflation rate.

Open letter written to Pakistanis

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — The U.S. ambassador has written an open letter to Pakistanis, explaining that $573 million in U.S. aid has been suspended because Pakistan has not made adequate assurances about its nuclear capability.

The letter appeared in Monday's editions of the English-language newspaper The Nation and several Urdu-language publications.

Washington suspended military and economic assistance Oct. 1, demanding greater assurances that Pakistan neither possesses nor wants to possess nuclear weapons.

Pakistan, the third-largest recipient of U.S. aid behind Egypt and Israel, insists its nuclear program is for peaceful purposes. The 2-week-old government of Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif has pledged to go ahead with its nuclear program — even if it means losing American aid.

Many Pakistanis believe their country's nuclear program acts as a deterrent against possible attack by India, its traditionally hostile neighbor to the east. India exploded a nuclear device in 1974.

The two uneasy neighbors went to war in 1948, 1965 and again in 1971. Fears of a fourth — and possibly nuclear — war escalated last spring over the disputed territory of Kashmir.

Israelis ambush guerrilla squad

AIN ATTA, Lebanon (AP) — An Israeli officer and four Palestinian guerrillas died in an eight-hour firefight in southern Lebanon after the Israelis ambushed the guerrilla squad, police said today.

Police said two Palestinians, including the commander of the raiding party, were wounded in the ambush by about 75 Israeli soldiers and allied Lebanese militiamen near this village in the foothills of Mount Hermon.

A Lebanese army corporal driving along a nearby road was also hurt.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli army said 1st Lt. Yaron Yogev, 23, was shot and killed after his unit spotted and attacked the guerrilla squad on Monday night.

The army statement also said that a fifth guerrilla may have been killed in the firefight. It did not mention the participation of Israeli-allied Lebanese militiamen.

Police said the battle with machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades raged under parachute flares for eight hours before the Israelis and the militiamen of the South Lebanon Army pulled back to the security zone Israel maintains north of its border.

Thatcher faces toughest challenge

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher faced the toughest challenge of her 11½ years in power today as Conservative lawmakers, worried by low poll ratings, voted on whether to keep her as party leader.

The 372 Conservatives in the House of Commons chose between Mrs. Thatcher and her former defense secretary, Michael Heseltine.

The vote was for the party leadership in Parliament, but tradition dictates that a prime minister ousted as party leader resign.

The prime minister, in Paris for a 34-nation summit, says she hasn't finished her mission.

Teenager, who lost legal case, dies

CHICAGO (AP) — A 13-year-old leukemia victim who was denied the possibility of a bone marrow transplant from his 3-year-old half siblings died without a fair chance against the disease or the courts, his father says.

Jean-Pierre Bosze died Monday at his suburban Hoffman Estates home, ending his father's six-month legal battle to have the teen-ager's twin half-siblings, a boy and a girl, tested as donors for a bone marrow transplant that doctors said might have saved his life.

"He was a very, very brave boy," said his father, Tamas

Bosze. "It's very unfortunate the way the law is now. I don't think he had a fair chance."

Bosze had sought a court order to force Nancy Curran — his former girlfriend and the mother of the twins — to have the toddlers tested.

Curran had claimed the tests would be too painful and risky. In September, the state Supreme Court affirmed a lower court's ruling in her favor. A request to reconsider its decision was before the high court when Jean-Pierre died.

The boy was released from Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge last week.

Bank executive escapes kidnapper

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The chairman of Minnesota's second-largest bank was abducted at gunpoint and forced to make a ransom demand from his car phone but escaped uninjured after being left alone in the woods, authorities said.

The search continued today for the lone gunman and the banker's Mercedes.

First Bank System Chairman John Grundhofer was kidnapped Monday when he arrived at his office building. He escaped two hours later and called for help from a dairy farm in Wisconsin, just over the Minnesota line, authorities said.

Atlanta imposes strictest curfew

ATLANTA (AP) — America's crime capital imposed the city's strictest curfew since the Atlanta child murders of the early 1980s, threatening to jail parents of youngsters caught on the street after hours.

No arrests were reported in the first few hours after the curfew went into effect at 11 p.m. Monday.

The American Civil Liberties Union has threatened to challenge the law, but city officials say it is needed to help reverse the highest rate of serious crime in the nation.

Mayor Maynard Jackson praised the curfew, adopted by the City Council 13-1 on Nov. 5, as an excellent way of keeping youngsters from being used as drug runners or lookouts.

The measure requires those under 17 to be off the street between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m. weeknights and between midnight and 6 a.m. weekends, unless participating in school activities, returning from work or accompanied by an adult.

Parents of repeat offenders could get up to 60 days in jail or $1,000 in fines.

Police Chief Eldrin A. Bell said officers would focus on "known drug locations, nightclubs and places of ill repute."

FBI statistics show Atlanta had 210 reported serious crimes per 1,000 residents during 1989, higher than any U.S. city. There were 246 murders in Atlanta last year, but 106 between January and June this year, down 14 percent.

The curfew is the latest move in the city's effort to control crime, including the hiring of Bell as police chief three months ago.

During his 29 years on the force, Bell was twice demoted and developed a reputation in some quarters as a cop willing to bust heads first and let a judge sort things out later. He was cleared of charges of using excessive force during a 1984 incident in which he allegedly pistol whipped a motorist.

The curfew is similar to one adopted at the height of a series of 29 slayings of young blacks in metropolitan Atlanta that terrorized the city in the early 1980s. The original curfew applied to children 15 or younger and did not penalize their parents. It had rarely been enforced in recent years.

Wayne Williams was convicted in 1982 of murder in two of the 29 slayings of young blacks in metropolitan Atlanta between 1979 and 1981. Investigators have blamed him for 22 more of the slayings. He is serving two life sentences.

Officers who spot curfew violators are to take them home if they live nearby. Youths from outside the area will be taken into custody until they can be picked up by a parent.

"What we have asked is for parents to ultimately have responsibility for their children," said City Councilwoman Davetta Johnson, who proposed the curfew penalties.

But Michael Hauptman, president of the local ACLU chapter, said his organization has notified city officials that it considers the curfew unconstitutional.

"In the event we receive any complaints from parents and or children, it is our intent to take this matter into court," he said.

Keep the NFL out of politics

The National Football League was out of bounds when it decided to get involved in Arizona politics.

Arizona voters recently rejected the NFL's threat of economic retaliation and voted "no" to a Martin Luther King state holiday. NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue then announced he will recommend to NFL owners that the 1993 Super Bowl be played in a city other than Tempe, Ariz.

It's not that we're opposed to a Martin Luther King holiday in Arizona, or Texas either, for that matter. Forty-seven of the 50 states and the federal government have declared a paid holiday in honor of King. We just don't think it's a decision the NFL has any business trying to influence.

There were actually two referendums on the ballot in regard to a new holiday: Proposition 103 would have eliminated Columbus Day to make room for Martin Luther King Day; Proposition 302 would have added one more state holiday. Proposition 302 lost by a smaller margin than 103, possibly because it received more pre-election support.

Arizona already has 10 paid holidays for state employees. At an estimated cost of $50,000 per paid holiday, according to the governor's office, maybe voters figure two weeks of paid holidays are enough for state employees. Perhaps they felt more allegiance to Columbus than to King, if only because he's been around longer.

Post-election polls, said a state official, suggest that one of the main reasons voters rejected a Martin Luther King holiday may have been a reaction to just such economic pressure as the NFL, and others, have exerted.

If the NFL had a perfect record in the area of civil rights, this controversy would be less ludicrous. But this is the league that has a team named the Redskins, an offensive term that refers to North American Indians. This is the league that has one black coach, no black general managers and no black majority owners.

Frankly, we think the NFL ought to clean up its own house first, and then work to educate the voters of Arizona as to why King deserves to be honored. A sporting league has no business influencing an election with threats of financial retaliation.

Merchant Marine needs proper gear

WASHINGTON — Some American sailors have been forced to sail into the Persian Gulf without protective gear to shield their skin from the chemical bombs of Saddam Hussein. They aren't the sailors of the U.S. Navy, but they think they are entitled to the same protection.

They are the civilian sailors of the U.S. Merchant Marine, pressed into service in the Persian Gulf crisis to carry supplies to the U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia. It's tough enough that many of the ships they have been assigned to are rust buckets that haven't seen serious action in years. If the sailors are going into a hot spot in less-than-prime vessels, they want all the protection they can get.

Our associate Scott Sleek has obtained a cable from one merchant vessel to the Navy in which the crew begged for proper gear. The cable was from the ship Cape Archway to U.S. officials in Naples, Italy, sent as the ship was in the Mediterranean Sea en route to the Persian Gulf. The cable detailed the shortage of chemical protective gear including gloves, chemical detection kits, masks and decontamination kits. The commander who sent the cable said the equipment was "important to the morale of my crews." Then he ended with a biting reminder: "This is the third request for professional and responsible assistance."

A spokeswoman for the U.S. Maritime Administration, which oversees the civilian fleet, said that the safety gear was finally delivered to the Cape Archway at sea. She acknowledged that during the early stages of Operation Desert Shield, resources were stretched to the limit. The merchant mariners are low on the priority list for those limited resources in part because they are at the least risk of being harmed should war break out. For security reasons, the Pentagon won't say where the ships dock to unload their supplies. But officials insist that the ports are out of harm's way.

The merchant vessels also have the option of staying out of range of Saddam's weaponry during most of their mission. They shuttle in and out with supplies, while the Navy ships must remain in a wartime posture in the Gulf. And Saddam is not likely to waste his chemical potshots on moving ships when he can aim for sitting targets in the desert.

But those caveats don't put the merchant mariners completely at ease.

Their role in Operation Desert Shield has been plagued with exceptions to the rules. We reported earlier that the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait caught the Maritime Administration off guard. The agency oversees a fleet of merchant ships for carrying cargo during national emergencies.

Mechanical problems and the overall poor condition of the fleet slowed the flow of supplies to the Gulf, including tanks, artillery and basic goods.

Fate of six hostages is a maze

By WALTER R. MEARS AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fate of America's invisible hostages is bound up in a maze of shifting interests and allegiances — crosscurrents that could yet serve the cause of freedom for six U.S. captives in Lebanon.

Pressure and attention are concentrated on the confrontation with Iraq, and on nearly 1,000 Americans detained, deployed as human shield hostages at potential military targets, or hiding from Saddam Hussein's regime. There are no clear and current demands for specific concessions as the price of release for the 13 western hostages in Lebanon.

But there have been frequent reports that one step might lead to another.

And in those circumstances, a gesture need not be a surrender to the demands of kidnapers. A policy that bars negotiating concessions to terrorists does not necessarily preclude granting what is not demanded.

Israel is in a position to take steps of that sort. That government controls the forces holding an estimated 340 Shi'ite captives in southern Lebanon. Forty others were freed on Oct. 1. The Israelis also held a militant Moslem cleric captured last year, Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid.

Freeing such prisoners would not necessarily get the western hostages out of captivity. But even a gesture toward that end might take a little of the strain out of U.S.-Israeli relations, under stress since the Persian Gulf crisis began and worsened by the killings of 19 Palestinian Arabs in rioting at Temple Mount in Jerusalem on Oct. 8. Israel has refused to accept a United Nations investigation of the shootings, an inquiry supported by the United States, which also voted for a U.N. resolution denouncing the shootings.

The Kuwaiti prisoners are out now. The two Lebanese Shi'ites among them said to be back in Lebanon, the others, most of them Iraqis who had opposed Saddam Hussein, are believed to be in Iran, although Middle East analysts say there is no firm information on their whereabouts. In opposing Saddam Hussein, the United States is aligned with

That episode posed a problem for the fragile U.S. alliance with Arab states in opposition to the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait. And the Israelis suspect Washington of tilting away from them in favor of the U.N.-sanctioned front against Saddam.

The original ransom demand for at least some of the American hostages has, ironically, been met or rendered moot by the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. It was a demand for the release of 15 Shi'ite Moslems imprisoned in Kuwait since 1983 for terrorist bombings at the U.S. and French embassies, government buildings and oil facilities. That price tag for the freedom of western hostages had been repeated periodically in messages from Islamic Holy War, the group holding two U.S. hostages.

Its captives are Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, now in his sixth year as a hostage, and Thomas Sutherland, a dean at the American University in Beirut, kidnapped later in 1985. The western hostages in Lebanon all are believed held by factions linked with a pro-Iranian group called Hezbollah, or Party of God.

The Kuwaiti prisoners are out now. The two Lebanese Shi'ites among them said to be back in Lebanon, the others, most of them Iraqis who had opposed Saddam Hussein, are believed to be in Iran, although Middle East analysts say there is no firm information on their whereabouts.

In opposing Saddam Hussein, the United States is aligned with Syria, another power in the hostage situation. A move to free hostages could help make that alliance of necessity into a more durable relationship. The Syrians hope eventually to gain U.S. support for a general Middle East peace conference, a forum in which they would seek to reclaim territory lost to Israel.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III met with Syrian President Hafez Assad in Damascus on Sept. 14, and said he raised the hostage question then. He said Assad "did not indicate any expectation that they would be released soon."

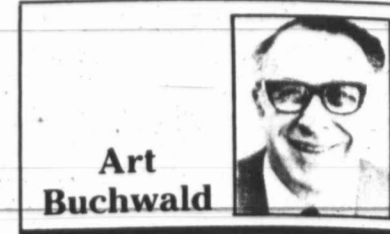

A month later, the Syrians used the military forces with which they dominate much of Lebanon to put down the rebellion of a Christian faction in Beirut, backing the government in imposing a settlement under which rival militias are to withdraw from the capital, ending a long civil war. There are about 40,000 Syrian troops in Lebanon.

Hezbollah has moved its militia from southern Beirut to villages in eastern and southeastern Lebanon. Syrian forces controlled the roads from Beirut, and in moving eastward, the captors would have had to take their hostages across those lines.

Syrian officials have said repeatedly that they want to help gain release of the hostages, to end a situation they say they do not control.

Iran is said to wield a more powerful influence although it, too, is indirect. The latest in a series of reports of imminent release for British hostages came this week from a radical Iranian leader, who said he opposed it.

More moderate Iranian officials are said to favor release of the hostages this year, as a step toward improved relations with the West. As President Bush said when he came to office, good will begets good will.

Forced to borrow fortunes

As more and more American institutions continue to founder, the little man keeps asking himself what the hell went wrong. A year ago we were assured that the banks could never be affected the way that the savings and loan institutions were.

They made a mistake. How did it happen? Well, if you really want to know, we have to return to the go-go years of the '80s:

Mr. Stonehart, the venture capitalist, was walking down the street when he was tackled by Mr. Crabapple, the banker. Crabapple held Stonehart's head in a grip and said, "How would you like to borrow $7 million to buy worthless real estate from a widow who lives in Florida?"

"I don't want to borrow $7 million," Stonehart yelled. "OK, then $10 million. It's a much easier number for me to remember."

"Why would I need 10 when I don't need 7?"

"Mr. Stonehart, you never know when you may have a rainy day. Today you think you only need 7, but tomorrow your wife could find a nice Gucci dress on Fifth Avenue, and you'll be glad to have the extra change."

"Maybe you're right. I must say that banks are certainly looking for business right now."

"That's because we have money to burn. If we don't spend it around it will turn into mulch. Ha, ha, ha."

"Mr. Crabapple, would you ease up on my neck? How do you want me to pay back the $10 million?"

"Very slowly. We'd rather you have our money and pay interest on it than for us to keep it in some teller's drawer where he'll have to look at it every day. We'll work out a schedule for you. You must understand that this does not stop you from borrowing more than $12 million from us for any junk bonds you would like to purchase."

"You're a really generous guy." "When you're happy, we're happy. Banks are awash in cash nowadays, and if we don't loan you the $15 million someone else will."

"What 15?"

"The 15 you're going to use to take your family to St. Moritz. We have a saying at the bank: 'No one ever got hemorrhoids by using other people's money.'"

"Why do they say bankers are tightfisted?"

"Charles Dickens gave us a bad name. The true story is that we loan to everybody — Donald Trump, Ivana Trump, Michael Milken and Bulgaria. We have a warehouse full of high-heeled shoes from Imelda Marcos. The more people we use the better we are doing. We're known as the bank that never said no."

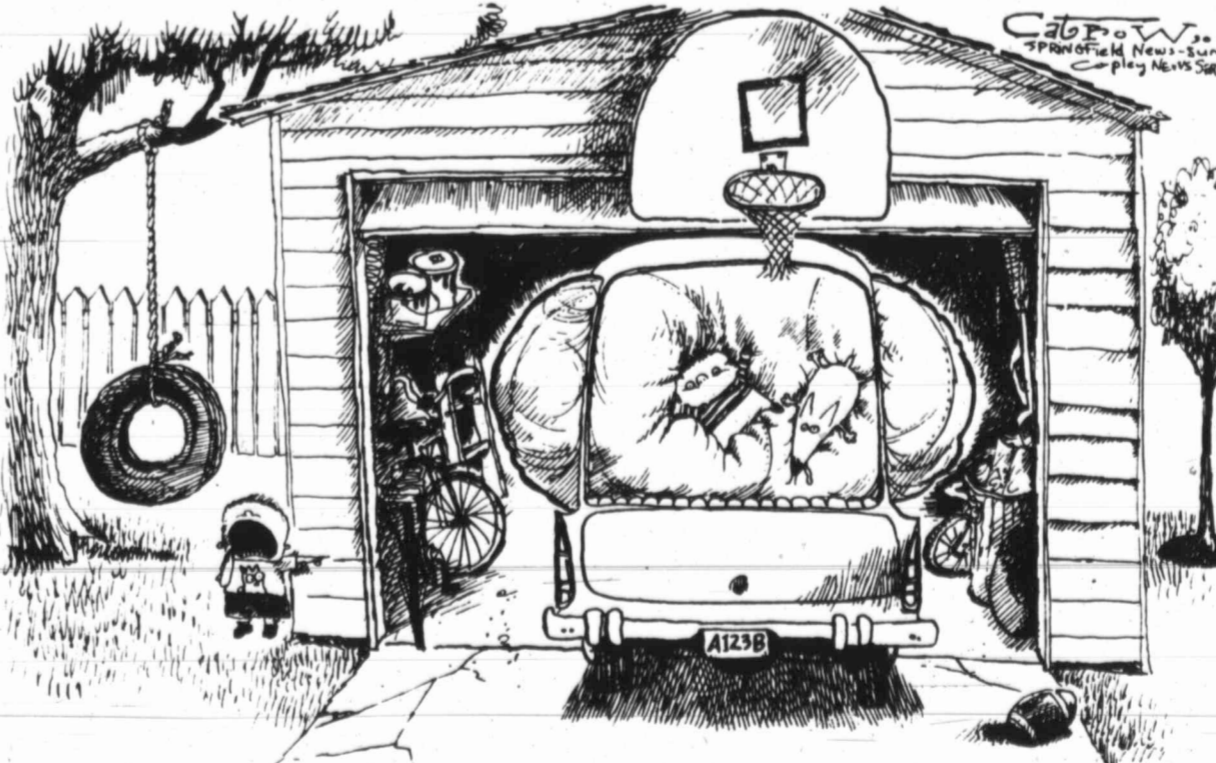

"What happens if borrowers don't pay back?"

"We've never had that problem. These are the boom-boom '80s, which means that anyone can walk out of the bank today with $20 million."

"You'd let me have $20 million?"

"I gave it to Neil Bush, and he didn't even thank me. You'd be amazed at the type of people we deal with. Do you know who was in yesterday? Sam Pierce, the former secretary of HUD. He wanted to borrow against all the public housing in the United States. You can't have better collateral than that."

And so it was that all the banks in the '80s extended themselves. Now it's the '90s and Stonehart can't repay Crabapple the $45 million he borrowed from him. He doesn't even like the man anymore.

Farmers give the needy a reason for thanksgiving

FAIRHOPE, Ala. (AP) — The harvest has been abundant this year — fat tomatoes, sweet potatoes, melons, pecans and purple-hull peas. The rains came, as farmers gathered in a spring field prayed they would.

"We were blessed," produce grower Louis Lazzari said.

At Thanksgiving dinner in Annie White's house, the grace her 80-year-old husband Jack plans to say will be simple: "He'll say he hopes it continues."

By that, she meant not just the fecundity of the good earth here by Mobile Bay, but the sharing of its riches between farmers like Lazzari and families like hers, families in need, through people known as "gleaners."

From bean-growing time in the spring to the gathering of mustard greens, turnips and broccoli in cool weather, farmers invite the gleaners into their fields to take what's left behind after harvest.

On one afternoon this summer, 200 hands picked 16,220 pounds of tomatoes. Altogether last year, the gleaners, organized by a local group called Ecumenical Ministries, carried away 100,000 pounds of vegetables and fruits.

The pickers must be needy. They cannot sell anything they glean. And they must share it with someone else in need — such as the Whites, who cannot pick on their own because they're disabled.

The rules are as simple as the verses from the Old Testament that underlie the 10-year-old project.

"When thou cuttest down thine harvest... and hast forgotten a sheaf in the field, thou shalt not go again to fetch it," enjoins Deuteronomy 24:19-21.

"It shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow. That the Lord thy God may bless thee in all the work of thine hands."

Mrs. White, who at 69 has heart trouble and more other ailments than she can name, and whose husband has cancer, learned of Ecumenical Ministries about eight years ago, on a day she was desperate for food. "That day, I really didn't have anything to cook," she said.

"Before I looked around, it was no time before they were out with boxes and bags of groceries," she said.

After that, gleaners brought regular deliveries of whatever vegetable was in season. Without the food, she said, "I guess I'd starve."

The program began a decade ago with Dot Threadgill, who saw a television news item about people from a California senior citizens center who supplemented their diet by picking leftovers in the fields.

Mrs. Threadgill's energy seems to keep the gleaming operations going — and growing, from about 300 pounds of food distributed during the first year, "about half of that out of my garden," she said.

Now, 15 farmers call her or she LOXLEY, Ala. — Rachael Zellner, 5, carries turnips she pulled from a field in Loxley, Ala., earlier this month. At right is Rachael's mother Suzanne. The pair are gleaners invited into the field by a farmer to take what's left after the harvest, to be distributed to the needy.

calls them as harvests near. And she's learned tricks over the years.

"Mechanical harvesters can't pick where they turn, at the end of the rows," she said, referring to potato picking machines. "So we know where to be."

She scouts the fields, estimating how many gleaners the crop will feed plentifully. "We don't want them to use their gas money and not have sufficient for several days." Then she quickly goes to the "telephone tree" to mobilize pickers before the farmer plows the field under to prepare for the next crop.

Suzanne Zellner got a call when a turnip patch was offered recently. She and her husband have five children, the youngest 2½-year-old twins. Besides improving nutrition and stretching grocery money, gleanings has an educational value, she said, teaching children "how to pick, how to know when something's ready or when it's too ripe."

Another regular in the fields is Gussie Winston, 53, who first went gleanings because her family had nothing to eat, but now makes ends meet with housekeeping jobs and gleanings and cans vegetables for herself and a list of mostly elderly people unable to get out themselves.

"When you become a gleaner, you're an emissary," she said, looking across a sunny field to pickers stooped at their work. "You're supposed to see that no one goes hungry."

Around the Fourth of July, one farmer makes sure to call the gleaners to gather ripe watermelons.

Just before Christmas last year, a rare spell of extreme cold brought a call from another farmer who said he couldn't protect all of his broccoli crop. The gleaners cut 1,200 pounds.

Standing in the shade of an old pecan tree on his farm, 60-year-old Louis Lazzari said the vagaries of the market sometimes open his fields to the gleaners.

"This year, one day I sold my broker 240 bushel boxes of beans and he wanted the next day 340," he said. "I had the beans, some of the prettiest I ever raised in my life." But the going price wouldn't have covered expenses.

"I could have plowed 'em under," Lazzari said. But really he couldn't. "It hurts me so bad to see something... go to waste," he said. And he knows there are plenty of people here who haven't had his good fortune.

"I was born in the Depression," he said, "but I never had to go to bed one day in my life without a decent meal, I'm thankful to say."

Instead of plowing those pretty beans under, he phoned Mrs. Threadgill.

Once, a few years ago, Lazzari spontaneously called and offered sweet corn, 30 big croker sacks

Preparing for Thursday's feast is an art

NEW YORK (AP) — Many people cook an elaborate feast just once a year, on Thanksgiving.

Anthony Dias Blue and his wife, Kathryn K. Blue, think about that dinner all year long, and they have written a book, "Thanksgiving Dinner" (HarperCollins), about it.

"This is 20 years of fine-tuning our techniques and dealing with what our children will eat," Blue, a widely syndicated wine columnist, said in a recent interview.

"Thanksgiving is not a potluck dinner; it is a complex feast that requires organization and considerable precision," the Blues write. And they plan ahead: a menu by Nov. 1, all staples bought two weeks ahead and kept in separate boxes, fresh turkey ordered ahead.

On Thursday, an estimated 45 million turkeys will be cooked, and family after family will confront the age-old conundrum of whether to stuff or not.

Rick Rodgers, author of "The Turkey Cookbook," recommends roasting a turkey with onions, celery and carrots in its cavities and cooking the stuffing — or dressing — on the side.

Although an unstuffed turkey cooks faster and more evenly, and the Blues "have been on both sides of the big stuffing question" over the years, Blue said he finds the "synergism between the turkey and stuffing" to be more important.

The Blues will roast two turkeys, both stuffed, for the 22 people who will be at their dinner Thursday in their home in San Francisco. One turkey will hold a sausage-croton stuffing, the other an oyster-cornbread stuffing.

Their table also will hold a root vegetable puree and other vegetables, cranberry relish, prune chutney, steamed persimmon pudding, pumpkin flan and gingerbread bread pudding.

One of the advantages of Thanksgiving dinner is that there are choices. The cook need not double or triple recipes; instead, make more dishes and let people pick and choose, Blue advises.

Fresh, local ingredients generally make the meal better, he said. "That's what this is all about — the feast of the harvest. I would never have a strawberry dessert, because the fruit is out of season," he said.

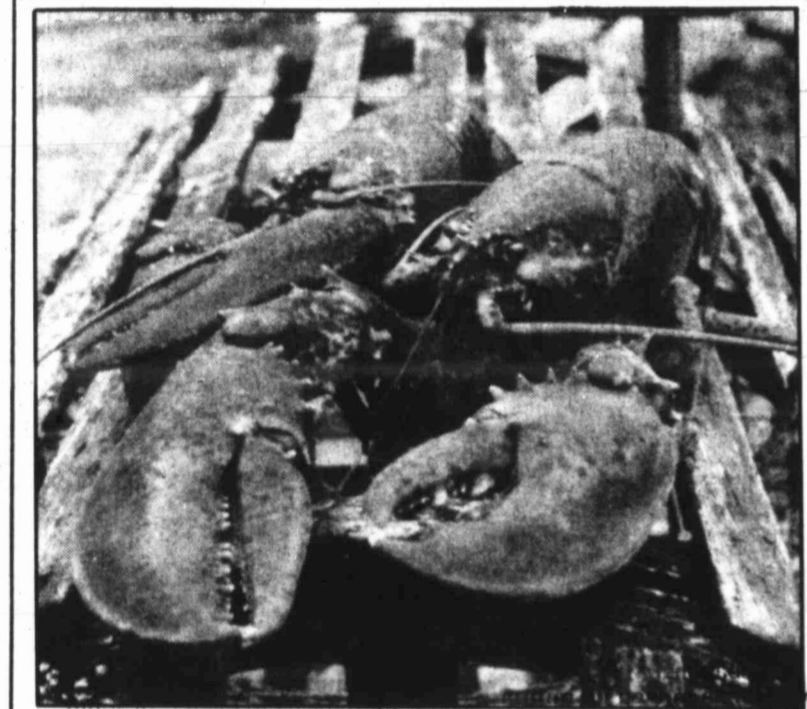

On his radio program, Blue said, he once "tore apart" a caller who suggested asparagus, fresh in springtime, for Thanksgiving. "Our delivery system has gotten too good. It takes a little bit of the joy out of the seasonal changes of eating." The Blues include 150 recipes from appetizers to leftovers in "Thanksgiving Dinner." They include many from friends in California, but evidence that Thanksgiving is a family holiday include recipes named for their children: Amanda's chocolate carrot torte, Caitlin's potatoes, Jessica's caramelized apple tart and Toby's instant replay sandwich.

Thanksgiving certainly is tradition, but not one that officially dates to 1621 and the Pilgrims, the Blues write. The Pilgrims, and others who followed, had meals of thanksgiving from time to time. But a regular, national Thanksgiving holiday began in 1863, when President Lincoln was persuaded by Sarah Josepha Hale, author of "Mary Had a Little Lamb," to declare it so.

Under it all, what's so great about Thanksgiving?

"You get to eat a lot and you don't have to give presents," Blue jokes.

Blue lobster

WALPOLE, Maine — About one in every three to four million lobsters caught along the Maine coast is blue. Aquaculture specialist Sam Chapman has a collection of about 400 blue lobsters at his Walpole, Maine facility.

Original Thanksgiving birds are back

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Massachusetts hunters got their first autumn opportunity since the 1800s to pot one of the wily birds that were on the first Thanksgiving table in 1621.

The wild turkey is back in the land of the Pilgrims, less than 20 years after the first were reintroduced, and last week about 7,000 hunters using bows or shotguns took part in a six-day turkey season in the Berkshires.

Final totals were not yet in Sunday, but just 200 of the 8,000 to 10,000 birds now found in western Massachusetts were bagged in the first two days, said James Cardoza of the state Division of Fisheries and Wildlife.

Unlike their domestic cousins, wild turkeys have sharp eyesight and first-rate hearing, and are masters of the duck and scramble. A flock that can seem to fill a clearing in a blink of an eye can disappear just as fast.

"It takes an awful lot of effort and skill," Cardoza said. Limited spring hunting has been allowed since 1981.

Cardoza launched Massachusetts' wild turkey repopulation efforts in 1972 by trapping 37 birds in western New York. Since 1979 he has been catching and moving some of the birds from the Berkshires into forested areas of eastern and coastal Massachusetts, including Plymouth, the home of the Pilgrims.

In 1621, four wild turkeys were part of the Pilgrims' first Thanksgiving feast. The birds disappeared from the state before the Civil War.

A big reason for their resurgence is the reforestation of the state that had been largely cleared for farming in the 1800s, Cardoza said. "They like mature woodlands where they can find acorns and beechnuts," he said.

Massachusetts is not alone in its success. In 1952 there were about 320,000 turkeys in the United States. The population has increased to about 3 million, and they can be found in practically every state, Cardoza said.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Missouri National Guardsmen, of the 1221st Transportation Company, pause for prayer before leaving for Persian Gulf training Monday afternoon. They gathered at the armory for departure ceremonies before saying goodbye to their families.

Call this number if you need to talk turkey

CHICAGO (AP) — When Thanksgiving Day chefs don't want to wing it or stick their necks out, they can talk turkey with experts stuffed with the right cooking information.

They can dial the Butterball Turkey Talk-Line, which takes questions from harried holiday cooks. Callers range from young brides to Army cooks to a blind man from Norfolk, Va., who was talked through the cooking steps by a hotline staffer.

Forty-five Chicago-area home economists and nutritionists provide the turkey tips from an office in suburban Downers Grove. The service was started by Swift-Eckrich, which has the trademark on Butterball turkeys.

"Every year we have a three-day training session for them," said Jean Schnelle, Talk-Line director. "Staff members have a notebook with 66 categories of types of questions in it."

Since opening in 1981, the hotline has handled about 1 million calls, including 260,000 last year. "The most common one is 'How do you recommend we roast the turkey to get it picture perfect?'" she said Friday. Answer: Use the conventional open pan method, with the uncovered turkey oiled and sitting on a rack in a 325-degree oven.

"It's not only the best way. It's the easiest way," Schnelle said. Other questions concern thawing, food safety, meat thermometer insertion and stuffing.

Some phone with colorful stories. A Baltimore woman said she had cooked her turkey without removing the plastic covering, causing it to melt into the skin. A Philadelphia woman left a red rubber glove, used for cleaning, in the turkey. A cook from Lawrence, Kan., asked, "How do I turn my oven on?"

The hotline number is 1-800-323-4848 and is open Monday through Wednesday from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m., and on Thanksgiving Day from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. It's also open Monday through Friday until Dec. 21 from 9 a.m. until 7 p.m.

Teacher's luncheon set for Wednesday

Forsan Student Council will host a teacher appreciation luncheon Wednesday to thank faculty and staff in a delectable manner.

The Student Council Safety Committee won a national award for safety and drug education, making the list of 46 schools across the United States gaining this honor.

Volunteers honored at luncheon

More than 80 Elbow parent volunteers were treated to an appreciation luncheon Friday. Principal Richard Light and Superintendent J.F. Poyner expressed their thanks, reminding the volunteers that the children of Elbow Elementary are the winners, reaping benefits from the volunteers' investment of time for years to come.

Wiggling kindergarteners serenaded the volunteers with "Over the River and Through the Woods," directed by Mrs. Cregar. The tables were decorated with painted Pilgrim and Indian napkin rings created by the first graders, colorful placemats woven by third graders, and turkey pine cone centerpieces painted by second graders.

Buffaloes end season undefeated

The rammin', jammin' Buffaloes of Forsan Junior High fought their way to an undefeated season in 1990, winning all seven games. Coaches Jan East, Johnny Schafer, Bryan Stringer and Kurt White keep a close eye on these youngsters, while coaching them, because in a short time these boys will make up the high school varsity team.

1990 Junior High Buffaloes are eighth graders — J.J. Baker, JaCoby Hopper, Shannon Hudgins, Chris Evans, Jeremy Etheredge, Josh Rainey, Gregg Roman, Chris Spivey, Rudolph Munoz, Salvador Rodriguez, Andy Burton, James Cogburn, Oscar Barraza, Justin

Military

Air Force Staff Sgt. Thomas J. Decell, son of Thomas A. Decell, 801 W. Marcy, has arrived for duty at RAF Lakenheath, England.

He is an avionics test station and component technician.

Army Spec. Enrique A. Sanchez III, son of Mary A. Sanchez, San Angelo, and Enrique A. Sanchez Jr., 707 Douglas, is a member of the 17th Infantry Regiment, Fort Richardson, Alaska, participating in the multinational peacekeeping force and observers (MFO) as the primary U.S. military contingent in the Sinai.

The MFO, an independent agency responsible to the governments of Israel and Egypt, was established as a result of the 1979 Egypt-Israel peace treaty.

The mission of the unit is to operate checkpoints and observation posts, and conduct reconnaissance patrols along the Sinai Peninsula.

Sanchez is a military police specialist.

He is a 1987 graduate of San Angelo Central High School.

Navy Airman Recruit Bryan A. Payne, son of Duward L. and Debra K. Adkisson, Lenorah, has completed recruit training at Recruit Training Command, San Diego.

During Payne's eight-week training cycle, he studied general military subjects designed to prepare him for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic fields.

His studies included seamanship, close order drill, Naval history and first aid. Personnel who complete this course of instruction are eligible for three hours of college credit in physical education and hygiene.

Mom takes a chance and finds adopted son

DEAR ABBY: This concerns "Closed Chapter," who wants to close the book on her past. I know what she went through because 32 years ago, when I was 16, I also had a child out of wedlock and gave him up because I wanted him to have a better life than I could provide for him.

I beg "Closed Chapter" to at least contact the adoption agency and give them her medical history. She need not disclose her present whereabouts, but she should give them some information about her family, and the family of her child's natural father. (It might not be anything to brag about, but at least the child will know something about his or her birth parents.)

Abby, four months ago, I located my son living in another city. I wasn't sure he would want to see me, so I had him contacted through a third party. He telephoned me immediately, and when he said, "Hello, Mother," I couldn't hold back the tears.

He asked how soon we could meet, and did I want to come to him or should he come to me? I decided to go to him. Abby, he's tall, handsome and well-mannered. He is married to a beautiful woman and they have a lovely daughter.

Last month, he flew here to meet my husband and his half-brothers and sisters, and they all got along beautifully.

I realize that not all reunions turn out as well as mine did, but the point I want to make is this: There should be no secrets. Adopted children should have the chance to meet their birth parents if they so choose. — ONE OF THE LUCKY ONES

DEAR LUCKY: I agree, adopted children should have the chance to meet their biological parents if they wish to, but I wonder how many people are aware that adopted children and biological parents can register with International Soundex Reunion Registry, P.O. Box 2312, Carson City, Nev. 89702. The children must be of legal age (legal age varies from state to state).

If both parties are registered and want to find each other, a match is made. Interested parties must send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to the above address to request Soundex forms. There is no charge for this service.

Abby's family recipes are included in her cookbooklet. Send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage is included.

Dear Abby

1948 Hyperion members hear D-FY-IT program

The 1948 Hyperion Club met Thursday at the home of Mrs. Morris Rhodes, with Mrs. Ed Shive as co-hostess.

Mrs. Robert Moore, program leader, introduced students Santos Martinez and Jennifer Heddelman, and Sgt. Drew Bavin. The two students from Big Spring High explained the D-FY-IT program. They displayed the T-shirts students wear, revealing on the back of the T-shirt that the group is as 50 percent membership.

Six-hundred students are now members, they noted. The local organization is 1 year old. In Texas there are 60 organizations in operation at present. Bavin is the adult source of knowledge when needed along with Chief Joe Cook.

Hyperions donated money to the cause.

The club will participate in the Big Spring State Hospital Christmas Party Dec. 13, with cakes and members to help serve.

Members brought gifts for the Corral's bingo games. Mrs. Gary Sims was voted into the club membership.

The Dec. 13 meeting will be the Christmas Party and gift exchange at the home of Mrs. Merle Stewart, with Mrs. Ross Boykin as co-hostess. Mrs. Stewart will be program leader.

Gold Star Mothers meet

The American Gold Star Mothers Chapter met Thursday morning at the home of Kathryn Thomas.

Coffee time was enjoyed prior to the business meeting. Members on the sick list remembered were Luz Abreo, Ellidia Hernandez, and Edna Perkins. Birthday for the month was Jacquelyn Gilmore.

Hospital report showed 35 patients and seven visitors were served coffee and doughnuts in November at the Veterans Administration Medical Center by Lora Bell Tom, Josephine Garcia and Kathryn Thomas.

Community Service report showed 10 trays of food and eight vases of flowers were given to shut-ins; four hospital visits; 16 phone calls and 16 cards.

Chapters members will decorate trees Dec. 6 on the Nursing Home Care Unit at the VA Hospital, and will distribute Christmas gifts to the patients Dec. 19.

An artificial Gold Star Mother Christmas Wreath will be placed as an entry in the fourth annual Christmas Tree and Wreath Festival Dec. 7-20.

The December meeting will be at the VA Hospital.

Parties silenced in discrimination case

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Nobody is talking following a federal review last week of a sexual discrimination complaint filed against the Sheriff's Department.

Sheriff A.N. Standard said he was advised by U.S. Department of Justice officials, who conducted the review, not to make any more public comments following an interview he granted with the Big Spring Herald last week.

Wilma Arbuckle, the woman who filed the complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission in connection with the hiring of two temporary full-time male jailguards in July 1988, said she also had nothing to say of the incident when contacted at her home in Big Spring.

Arbuckle, a jailer for the city from June 30, 1986, to May, 1989, when she transferred to the Big Spring Correctional Center, last year provided documents and told the Herald that the two men were totally inexperienced. She worked at the Correctional Center as a corrections supervisor until leaving on Feb. 26, according to city personnel records.

It was learned last week that Justice Department officials would be in Big Spring Thursday to conduct the review after Standard asked Commissioners Court on Nov. 12 for legal assistance, which was approved. A similar review by EEOC officials last year cost $1,250 for legal assistance, said County Judge John Coffee. Last week Standard said that review showed no discrimination on their part.

A determination issued April 25, 1989, by the EEOC area office in El Paso, a copy of which was given to the Herald by Arbuckle, said evidence supports Arbuckle's charges, saying that the two men hired had no related experience.

"There is reasonable cause to believe that charging party was denied employment as a jailer because of her sex," it said.

By law EEOC and Justice Department officials cannot release any information concerning an EEOC complaint, but EEOC Area Director Eliazar Salinas, whose signature was on the determination, said that in general they hand a complaint over to the Justice Department when a conciliation can not be worked out.

If there is sufficient evidence, a case could be filed in federal court. Arbuckle also has the option of filing a civil case in federal court; Salinas said. Standard said last week that Arbuckle was not happy with the agreement that he had reached with EEOC officials last year. So far nothing has been filed in a federal court.

Besides having more qualifications, Arbuckle said in an interview last year that a physical agility test, which she failed when applying as a permanent full-time jailer in November 1988, was unfair because previous guards had not been required to take it. At the time male jailers were hired in July and November, she was also working as a part-time guard for the Sheriff's Department.

Also, the EEOC review determined that a new application form was made just prior to her applying in November which unlawfully asked about previous EEOC complaints filed.

The agility test and the new application, with the question concerning EEOC complaints removed, are still being used by the sheriff's department, according to courthouse sources.

Computer

Parts needed by the vehicles will be catalogued in the system as well. Ordering dates and costs will become part of the vehicle's permanent record.

All information will be fed directly into the city's mainframe computer.

Decell said he thinks the system will be beneficial for all city vehicles and their operators, while reducing manual labor for other city employees as well. The currently-used preventive maintenance program requires hours of filing records, and later "digging through stacks" to retrieve them, Decell said.

"This is also going to amount to a complete, historical record of each of our vehicles," he said. "We can go back to our records and see exactly how much money we're spending on it." He added that a cost-per-mile comparison of two or more vehicles will be possible.

The new system will save money,

"to some degree," Decell said. Its major benefit, however will be a reduction in time spent cataloging.

"It takes an inordinate amount of time to input this information now," Decell said. "The system will do it with more efficiency, leaving us more time to be concerned about working on the vehicles, keeping them going."

The computer will have a word processor mode, so use of a typewriter for purchase orders and other related forms will no longer be necessary.

Decell said he expects the system to arrive at City Hall next week, though it may not be on-line and functioning until after Jan. 1, 1991.

Council members voted unanimously to approve the purchase, although it is about $900 over the budgeted amount. At the meeting, Decell said the money spent can easily be reconciled by several other city purchases that will cost less than expected.

Noriega tapes given to judge

MIAMI (AP) — Cable News Network today handed over to a federal judge tapes of Manuel Noriega talking on the telephone from his prison cell.

After receiving the tapes from a team of CNN lawyers, U.S. District Judge William Hoeweler gave them to federal Magistrate William C. Turnoff.

CNN unsuccessfully appealed Hoeweler's earlier temporary order barring the network from airing the tapes. Some of the tapes were broadcast before an appeals court and the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the order.

Hoeweler previously said he would give the tapes to the federal magistrate so that Hoeweler, who will preside over Noriega's drug-trafficking trial, is not "tainted" by any disclosures about Noriega's defense strategy.

Noriega's attorneys claim the tapes disclose defense maneuvers and have damaged the deposed Panamanian dictator's chances for a fair trial.

Hoeweler said today the tapes would be transcribed and translated from Spanish, then would be studied by Turnoff. Hoeweler said he didn't know how long that would take.

The tapes will be reviewed to decide whether they would damage Noriega's right to a fair trial. If the judge then orders a permanent ban on further broadcasts, CNN can again appeal, eventually to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"We are confident that when Magistrate Turnoff reviews these tapes and reports to the judge, CNN will be found not to have violated the court order," said Steven Korn, lawyer for Turner Broadcasting System Inc., CNN's owner.

Korn said the conversations aired were not covered by the judge's order against the broadcast of conversations protected by attorney-client privilege.

On Monday, a Noriega attorney, Jon May, also said he would ask for an immediate contempt hearing aimed at forcing CNN to pay fines of up to $300,000 for each violation of the judge's order. He said he would ask the all-news network for a log of how many times it aired the tapes.

"We're certainly going to suggest that might be one way of solving a lot of problems, and I think an appropriate one, considering the fact that General Noriega's defense was damaged by CNN,"

May said of his proposal that fines against CNN be used for Noriega's attorneys.

CNN's attorney said the network doesn't expect to pay any fines. He said that the conversations aired were not covered by the judge's order against the broadcast of conversations protected by attorney-client privilege.

The fines could help solve another problem plaguing the defense — a freeze on Noriega's bank accounts that has kept him from paying his lawyers.

The private attorneys have said they cannot stay on the case without some money. Hoeweler said last week he would decide soon whether to give Noriega government-paid counsel instead.

The dispute over the tapes has raised questions about attorney-client confidentiality, the right to a fair trial and the First Amendment.

Noriega has asked that the case be dismissed because of the taping, the freezing of his assets, and other alleged government misconduct.

The fallen dictator is jailed outside of Miami on charges of taking bribes to protect the cocaine trade. His trial isn't expected to begin before the spring.

Election

Appraisal District.

The MCUWCD board of directors unanimously approved the election after accepting a petition from Howard County landowners asking to join the water district. Absent from the meeting were board Chairman John Campbell and Director Earl Dickenson.

Directors voted following a public hearing at which only one landowner, Lloyd Robinson of Knott, attended.

"I think it'll carry. I don't see any opposition," Robinson said after the hearing. "I think it's a good thing to become annexed to a district that's already operating. We'll be way ahead instead of starting with our own."

There were more than 80 signatures from landowners requesting the annexation, Robinson said. Only 50 were needed, according to state law, to proceed with a public hearing and election. Hoelscher said.

The election follows more than a year of efforts by a group of Knott farmers, who enlisted the help of Hoelscher, to get an oil well suspected of leaking saltwater into area water wells reentered and plugged.

The well was replugged in July but only after disagreements with Texas Railroad Commission officials in Midland. Those disagreements led to a meeting in May with state representatives and state TRC staff members. A subsequent in-house investigation resulted in the June firing of the TRC director in Midland.

Hoelscher's help in solving the problem prompted area farmers to form a water district in order to protect groundwater and to provide the needed expertise to deal with agencies regulating activities which affect groundwater.

Summit

the administration's case to the 15 members of the Security Council. Still, the administration has been having a hard time finding agreement on the language for such a resolution, especially given Gorbachev's reluctance to get on board.

During a picture-taking session with Bush Monday, Gorbachev was asked by reporters whether he favored force or patience toward Iraq.

"I think we all need patience," the Soviet leader replied, "but that does not mean that we are going to weaken or retreat" from earlier U.N. resolutions calling for an unconditional Iraqi withdrawal.

"We certainly will seek to resolve that situation and we must be firm in our position on that," he added.

Nonetheless, administration aides said today that the White House remains hopeful progress can be made toward the wording of a new resolution. But on the eve of Bush's visit to the Middle East agreement has yet to materialize.

After the 34-nation summit on European security wraps up on Wednesday, Bush will fly to Saudi Arabia for a Thanksgiving visit with troops deployed in the Persian Gulf region.

Student studies soccer

OSLO, Norway (AP) — An Oslo University medical student says he's determined that soccer players who use their heads to strike at balls are risking brain damage.

Thirty percent of retired Norwegian soccer players were found to have signs of minor brain damage from "heading" balls, according to the survey medical student Alf Thorvald Tysvaer conducted for his doctoral thesis.

Tysvaer said in an interview with the news agency NPK that 3 percent of the active Norwegian soccer players he studied also showed symptoms of brain damage. Soccer balls can travel at more than 60 mph.

But Willy Simonsen, assistant head of Norway's Soccer Federation, said such widespread damage appeared unlikely.

"I have not noticed it in my meetings with players," he said.

In the study, former players complained of headache, dizziness and irritability and some had problems with pain in the neck.

Sidelines

Lady Hawks whip Cisco, 92-67

CISCO — The Howard College Lady Hawks keep rolling right along. Playing what coach Royce Chadwick called their best game of the season, the Howard College Lady Hawks downed the Cisco Junior College Lady Wranglers 92-67 here Monday night.

The win gives the No. 14th nationally ranked Lady Hawks a 9-0 record. Cisco falls to 6-4, two of the losses have come to Howard.

"We played better than we've played all season," said Chadwick. "Yolanda Wells is turning the corner and becoming a college prospect and Kim Robinson is pretty close to being one of the best in the country."

Wells, a 5-foot-11 freshman post player from Houston, led Howard with 21 points. Robinson, a 5-foot-11 sophomore guard from Slaton; a returning All-American, scored 20 points. Sophomore post player Mulu Tosi added 16 points.

Chadwick also praised Tosi's defensive play. She limited Cisco's post player Tracy Corn to four points. The first time the two teams met, Corn scored 20. "Mulu played behind her (Corn) and bodied her. I think she got intimidated. Mulu got all the rebounds the first five minutes. Mulu's first six points came off offensive rebounds," said Chadwick.

Howard will be off until Monday, Nov. 26 when they play Weatherford College in Weatherford at 6 p.m. Then on Thursday, Nov. 29 they begin Western Junior College Athletic Conference play by hosting Western Texas at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Hawks roll wagon over Pioneers

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

The Howard College Hawks used their scoring-by-committee act to their best advantage Monday night, swamping the Wharton County Junior College Pioneers, 114-75, in the first round of the Hawk Classic at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Western Texas, behind a 30-point performance by Dominick Byrd, crushed Lamar Community College, 126-100, in the Classic's opening game.

Sixth man Harvey Petty led a bunch of Hawks in double figures with 17 points. Johnny McDowell had 16 points, Vernon Broughton and Cecil Pittman 12 apiece and Ted Berry and Darryl Brown both added 11 points for Howard, now 9-0 for the season.

Maurice Dominique and Derrick Hollis scored 14 points apiece and Clyde Ardoin 11 for the Pioneers, now 2-4 for the season.

The Hawks broke open a tight game with about 10 minutes left in the first half. After the teams swapped the lead on six straight possessions, Petty hit on a three-pointer for a 24-22 lead, and the Hawks were off to the races.

Pittman added a pair of free throws, and added a lay-in after McDowell stole a pass. McDowell then sank a short jumper, stole the ball a minute later and fed Berry for two points. By the time Dominique hit a jumper for the Pioneers, the Hawks had stretched their lead to 32-24.

Things gradually got worse for Wharton, as Barry and Petty, hitting from the outside, fueled a 19-6 run that gave Howard a 21-point lead with 4:35 left in the half.

Wharton traded baskets with the Hawks after that, but Howard took a 23-point lead into intermission and was never threatened in the second half.

The Hawks had one of their better defensive efforts of the season so far, forcing 21 Pioneer turnovers. McDowell led the defensive effort with two steals and a blocked shot. Brown added a block and Berry a pair of steals during the evening.

Howard coach Steve Green was not thrilled with his team's slow start, but was impressed with the overall effort.

"We didn't get off to the most spectacular start," Green said. "I want us to score almost every time down the floor... We can't be ahead enough to satisfy me."

"We hit a couple of shots," Green said of the Hawks' first-half surge. "We got it inside to Vernon — they were definitely mismatched inside — then Harvey hit a couple of shots outside, and that opened it up a bit."

"(Wharton) had to struggle the entire night to score," Green added, "and for the first 10 minutes, they were able to."

Green also was pleased with his substitutes' play.

"I think we played hard from (players) one through 16," he said.

"Ted Berry came in and kind of sparked us. Darryl Brown came in and hit a couple of big shots, and blocked a couple of shots. He's a late developer that has the chance to be a real player."

The Hawks will face Lamar in the second round of the Classic at 8 tonight. Green said he expects a tougher game from the Runnin' Lopes.

"I think Lamar will be tougher for us than they were for Western Texas," he said. "They're quick, and I don't think our pressure defense will rattle them as much as it did Wharton."

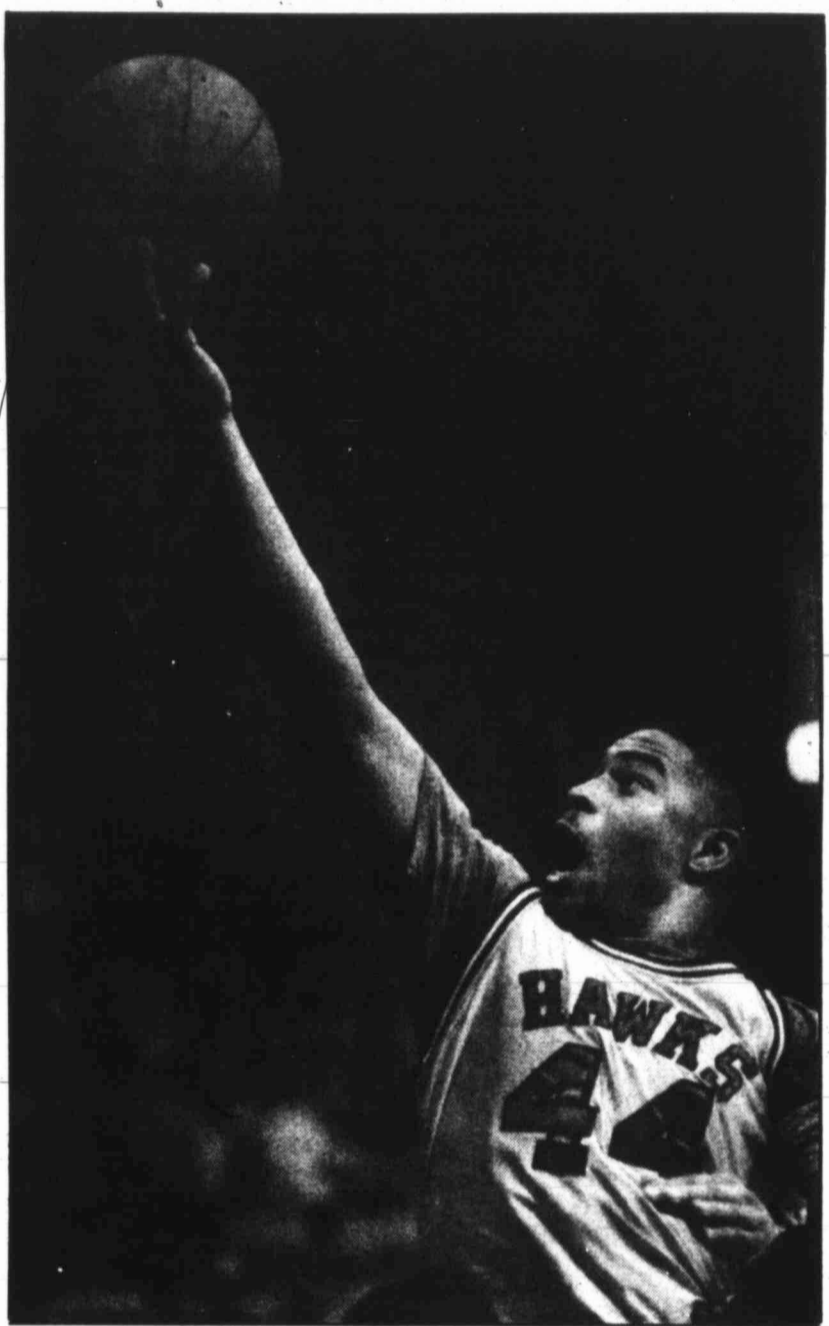

Western Texas and Wharton will square off in tonight's first game at 6 p.m.

Miniscule in size; big in production

By STEVE BELVIN

If football games were decided on size, then the Big Spring Steers probably wouldn't win very many games, and they sure wouldn't have the leading offense in District 3-4A.

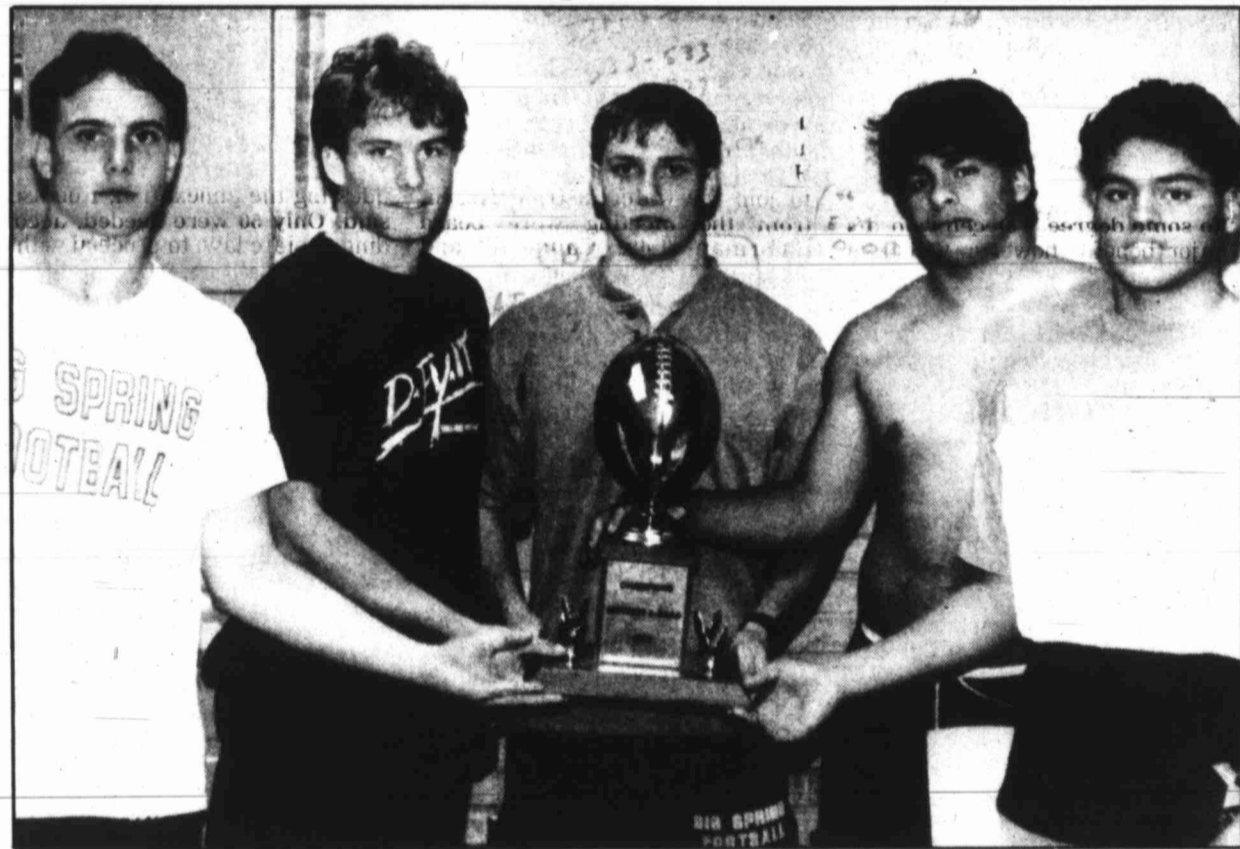

But football games aren't decided on size alone, and the Steers' offensive line is vivid proof of that. David Risner, Lance Reeves, Jon Downey, Santos Martinez, Rocky Ortega and Thomas Sanchez compose the Steers' offensive line, one that has enabled Big Spring to gain 320 yards per game.

They are definitely small when it comes to 4A offensive lines. Senior right tackle Thomas Sanchez is the largest at 6-foot-1, 205 pounds. The next largest is senior left tackle David Risner at 6-foot, 204 pounds. Risner alternates with junior Rocky Ortega (5-7, 185). Then there's junior left guard Lance Reeves (5-10, 175), junior center Jon Downey (5-8, 175) and senior right guard Santos Martinez (5-8, 191).

While their sizes aren't all that impressive, their play is. A lot of their success has to go to offensive line coach Kenny Basinger, the man who had to revamp an offensive line from last year's state semi-finalist team. Basinger did have two returning starters in Martinez, and Downey, who was an all-district and all-area selection last year.

Bonds tops in National

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Finally, Barry Bonds isn't just Bobby Bonds' son.

You might want to refer to him by his new title: National League Most Valuable Player. He was a near unanimous choice, receiving 23 of a possible 24 first-place votes from the Baseball Writers of America Association after his career year led the Pittsburgh Pirates to their first NL East Division title in 11 years.

"I knew I was capable of this, but there are so many great ballplayers out there, I didn't know if it would be this year," Bonds said Monday. "I just put it together in the right year."

In his first four major league seasons, Bonds tried unsuccessfully to reach the standards of excellence his famous father achieved while hitting 30 homers and stealing 30 bases in five different seasons.

Now, after enjoying the kind of season Bonds himself wasn't sure he had in him, he's making others guess how much better he can get. According to Pirates manager Jim Leyland, even an MVP can get better.

"Barry's maturing and coming of age," Leyland said. "He's a hungry player and his concentration is better than it's ever been. People say he's finally playing up to his potential, but, hey, he was a pretty good player before this season."

"Sometimes he goes off the deep end."

Raiders pound Miami's machine

MIAMI (AP) — Coach Don Shula called his Miami Dolphins running attack against the Los Angeles Raiders a disaster — and he wasn't exaggerating.

The sum total of the Dolphin ground game — the worst in the history of the proud franchise — was generated on one frantic 14-yard jackrabbit scamper by fragile-kneed quarterback Dan Marino fleeing a ferocious Raider pass rush.

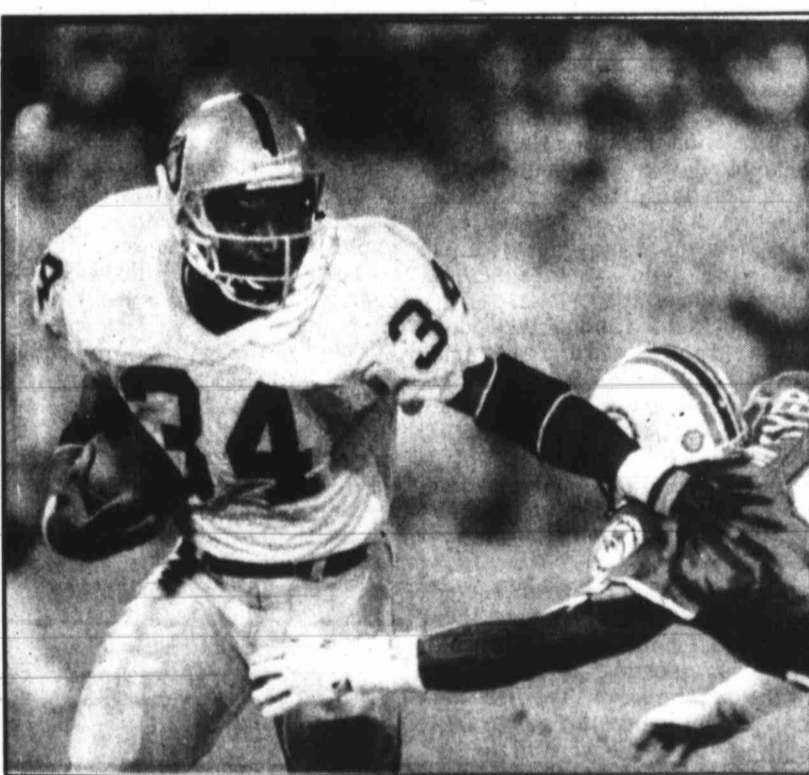

The rest of the time, Dolphin runners were being stuffed at the line, behind the line and under the surging Los Angeles defense in a 13-10 Raider victory Monday night.

Sammie Smith, the second-year Dolphin tailback who has sputtered as much as he's sparked the Dolphins, "gained" minus-3 yards on six carries. Dependable utility back Jim Jensen had three yards rushing to round out the measly total — 105 lower than their 119-yard average this year.

The Raiders' dynamic duo of Bo Jackson and Marcus Allen, meanwhile, were slicing through the Dolphins for 99 and 79 yards.

The 14-yard ground attack topped the Dolphin futility chart over the previous low of 23 yards against Kansas City in 1967 and against Buffalo in 1987.

Raider defensive end Greg Townsend said his team's domination on the line was not surprising.

MIAMI — L.A. Raiders running back Bo Jackson (34) pushes away Miami Dolphins cornerback Tim McKyer (22) during the third quarter of Monday night's game at Joe Robbie Stadium.

"Miami's not that type of offense," he said. "They don't have the hogs on the line."

Smith conceded that when the defense is coming that hard at you, your goals are limited. "The main thing you have to do is hold onto the ball," said

Smith. "The other team was just better on the line. I just give credit to Oakland's (a.k.a. Los Angeles') defensive line."

Smith said he really didn't feel too beat up since he was only in the game for six carries before the Dolphins retreated to their old reliable — the air attack.

"It was a question early of getting handled up front," said Shula, whose priority this year has been to turn the Dolphins into a more physical team, including the drafting of 300-pound offensive linemen Keith Sims and Richmond Webb.

Marino was careful not to discredit the Dolphin reserves, but he noted that the loss of burly fullback Tony Paige to a sprained knee was devastating Monday night.

"It hurt not having Tony Paige in there blocking," Marino said of the 7-year pro out of Virginia Tech whose stocky 5-foot-10, 235-pound build and agile pass-catching has neatly balanced the Dolphin offense since he joined the team this year. But Paige was on the inactive list come game-time and Marc Logan, who has been effective in relief of Smith, also had a sore right knee and didn't run the ball once.

In their place, the Dolphins activated NFL neophyte Garrett Limbrick off the practice squad.

Garrett Limbrick? They also used feisty 5-9, 195-pound veteran Troy Stradford, who has been more effective as a pass receiver than power runner and gained no yards on three attempts.

Iraq to place more troops in Kuwait

(AP) Less than two weeks after President Bush ordered 200,000 more troops to the Persian Gulf to gain parity with Iraq, Saddam Hussein has again raised the stakes, ordering another 250,000 troops of his own into Kuwait.

In another frustrating development for U.S. gulf policy, Bush failed on Monday to get Soviet agreement on a proposed U.N. resolution authorizing force against Iraq.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev went so far only as to agree that force in the gulf "cannot be ruled out," officials said.

In announcing the troop additions on Monday, the official Iraqi News Agency said they would more than double Iraq's strength in the occupied emirate, giving it a superiority that "others cannot match."

Saddam's move was a clear response to Bush's announcement

Saddam's move was a clear response to Bush's announcement Nov. 8 that up to 200,000 more troops would be sent to the gulf, giving the U.S.-led multinational force arrayed against Iraq an offensive military option.

Nov. 8 that up to 200,000 more troops would be sent to the gulf, giving the U.S.-led multinational force arrayed against Iraq an offensive military option.

That would bring the U.S. buildup in the region to about 430,000 — approximately the number of Iraqi troops currently in Kuwait and southern Iraq. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater called the announcement of Iraq's new deployment "another instance of him (Saddam) thumbing his nose at the United Nations." The U.N. Security Council has passed 10 resolutions — including a

PRESIDENT BUSH global trade embargo — in an effort to force Iraq out of Kuwait. INA said Saddam met with his military commanders and decided to send seven extra divisions of the regular army and an additional 150,000 reserves and draftees, for a total of 250,000 new troops.

There was no indication as to where the extra regular Iraqi troops would come from. Iraq's army totals 55 divisions of 555,000 regular troops and 480,000 reserves.

Western military analysts say Iraq's reserves are poor in quality. But its regular army includes about 120,000 elite Republican Guards, who led Iraq's offensives in the closing stages of Iraq's 1980-88 war with Iran. They also led the invasion of Kuwait.

A poll published today, meanwhile, indicated that Americans are increasingly worried that Bush favors the military option over the diplomatic route to resolve the crisis precipitated by Iraq's Aug. 2 seizure of Kuwait.

In a joint New York Times-CBS poll published today, 47 percent of respondents said the Bush administration has been too quick to get U.S. forces involved and has not been diligent enough about seeking diplomatic solutions.

Only 38 percent felt the same way in August, the poll said.

Shortly after Iraq invaded Kuwait, 75 percent of Americans approved of Bush's decision to send U.S. soldiers to the Middle East and gather international support for an embargo against Iraq, the

Murder charges filed in stabbing

FORT MADISON, Iowa (AP) — A North Carolina man was charged with first degree murder early Thursday in the stabbing death of a Texan.

Police said they were holding Donald Thane King, 30, of Raleigh, N.C., in connection with the fatal stabbing of Edward Branch, 25, of Nederland, Texas.

Branch was stabbed in an alley at about 12:45 a.m., police said, and died a short time later. Other details were not immediately released by investigators.

Husband spoke fondly of Kennedy

DALLAS (AP) — Marina Oswald, widow of presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald, said in a television interview that he often spoke fondly of President Kennedy.

"With all clean conscience, I can say, yes, he adored John Kennedy," Mrs. Oswald told David Lifton, author of a Kennedy conspiracy book. The interview was broadcast Monday night by "Hard Copy."

"In my mind I cannot ever pit Lee against Kennedy. That is why I desperately try to find this theory," she said. "It had to be something else. I never heard one negative remark against Kennedy ever from Lee."

Lifton's book "Best Evidence" is one of dozens suggesting that Oswald was framed as part of a covert operation. The Warren Commission ruled that Oswald was the assassin and that he acted alone.

Persian Gulf crisis tops summit agenda

PARIS (AP) — Leaders of a 34-nation summit unexpectedly pushed the Persian Gulf crisis to the top of their agenda today as President Bush expressed optimism that Mikhail Gorbachev will support a United Nations resolution on using military force against Iraq.

"Just be patient and all will be well," Bush said.

Summit leaders, meeting here on the future of Europe in the post Cold War era, abruptly shifted their focus for a closed-door afternoon meeting to the gulf crisis. Bush and Secretary of State James A. Baker pressed their case in off-stage diplomacy.

Baker met for two and a-half hours with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and scheduled a second meeting with him later in the day. A meeting between Bush and the Soviet president on Monday night failed to produce a U.S.-sought statement from the Soviet president endorsing a U.N. resolution authorizing military force.

Meanwhile, Bush conferred with President Turgut Ozal of Turkey, which is allied with the United States against Iraq. Turkey is letting American bombers use its airfields, but has expressed little enthusiasm about a military confrontation with its neighbor.

During a picture-taking session, Bush said that "Nobody has been more steadfast than the Turks and Mr. Ozal. I have no complaints, only gratitude and I'm glad we're together on this one."

Asked if he had any complaints about Soviet support, Bush replied, "Just be patient and all will be well."

The gulf crisis has overshadowed the unprecedented summit of the 34-member Conference on Cooperation and Security in Europe.

Hungarian Prime Minister Jozsef Antall told the summit today that he hoped "the conditions for the complete dissolution of the Warsaw Pact" will be created by early 1992. "We are happy that the participating states of the (Warsaw Pact) have shown agreement over the dissolution of the military organization."

Antall is the first Warsaw Pact country leader to talk about the complete demise of the pact and to offer a deadline. In the past, the leaders have spoken only of ending the Warsaw Pact's military

Election to decide annexation

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

An election is scheduled Jan. 19 to decide if the northwest corner of Howard County will be annexed by the Martin County Underground Water Conservation District, according to a decision by the board of directors Monday night.

The area under consideration is just under about 20 percent of the land in Howard County, estimates MCUWCD Manager Mark Hoelscher. Voters in both that area and in Martin County must approve the annexation for it to pass.

The Howard County area is bounded by: the northwest corner of the county; the northeast corner of Section 25, Block 33, Township 3 North; the southeast corner of Section 19, Block 33, Township 1 North; and the southwest corner of Section 8, Block 34, Township 1 North.

The property tax rate of the district now is 2 cents per $100 valuation.

"At 2 cents per $100 valuation, it'll bring in $10,000," Hoelscher told the board. "It's not as much as we thought."

However, he said, that should enable him to hire a technician, at least on a part-time basis, which would expand the district's capability to serve both areas better than Martin County is being served now.

This year $96,263 in property taxes is anticipated from Martin County landowners, according to an official with the Martin County Appraisal District.

The MCUWCD board of directors unanimously approved the election after accepting a petition from Howard County landowners asking to join the water district. Absent from the meeting were board Chairman John Campbell and Director Earl Dickenson.

Directors voted following a public hearing at which only one landowner, Lloyd Robinson of Knott, attended.

"I think it'll carry. I don't see any opposition," Robinson said after the hearing. "I think it's a good thing to become annexed to a district that's already operating. We'll be way ahead instead of starting with our own."

There were more than 80 signatures from landowners requesting the annexation, Robinson said. Only 50 were needed, according to state law, to proceed with a

Down by 14 points, the Lady Buffs outscored Rankin 18-7 in the final quarter to come within three points, losing to Rankin, 39-36.

In the opening quarter, both teams were cold from the fl, with Rankin managing to score one more basket than the Buffs. The Lady Buffs opened the contest on a play by sophomore Kari Ruth who rebounded a missed shot and went back down court for the first points of the game. After a Red Devil turnover, senior Melissa Scurlark hit another bucket and Stanton led 4-0, with 6:31 left in the quarter.

The Lady Red Devils answered with three straight field goals. Carrie Culpepper scored her first two baskets to tie the ballgame at the 5:21 mark. The first quarter ended with the Lady Red Devils taking a 6-4 lead.

In the second quarter, Rankin outscored the home team 15-10 on a 7-0 run with 5:15 left before halftime. Scurlark broke the Rankin streak with a basket for the Buffs. Tara Brooks went up for a missed shot and rebounded the ball and put it in for Stanton, drawing a foul during the play. Brooks made the free throw to bring the Lady Buffs within six with 4:06 left in the quarter. At the half, Rankin lead 21-14.

In the third quarter, Rankin added to their seven point lead with eleven unanswered points by Culpepper and Gina Criswell. The Lady Buffs did not get on the scoreboard until Sonja Hopper hit a three-pointer with 1:10 remaining in the quarter. Brooks added one on a free throw to end the scoring in the quarter, with the visitors outscoring the home team 11-4.

In the final period, Stanton began to play with intensity as they went on an 8 point scoring run, to close within six of Rankin.

Brandi Bundas was instrumental in helping the Lady Buffsclose with Rankin, scoring four points and pulling down three rebounds, along with teammate Sherry Johnson. She also stole a bounce from a Lady Red Devil and took the ball in for a layup. Brooks added another five points. With :58 left on the clock, Nancy Chapa scored a basket cutting the Rankin lead to three points.

Rankin's Criswell went to the free throw line for a one and one shot. She missed the first shot and Johnson rebounded the ball with less than eight seconds left in the game. The Lady Buffs had a chance to tie up the game, but the shot went off the rim. As the buzzer sounded Rankin led by three for the win.

The win put the Lady Red Devils at 1-1, while the Lady Buffs drop to 1-2.

Summit

function.
Against the backdrop of the conference, leaders held a flurry of meetings to discuss how best to get Iraq out of Kuwait. Gorbachev met with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who has advocated military action against Iraq. Thatcher also met with French President Francois Mitterrand, who like Gorbachev has counseled patience.

Meanwhile, the official Soviet news agency created a stir today in a report from Paris that Bush and Gorbachev will hold a summit in Moscow early next year. However, White House officials said nothing has changed and Bush would go to Moscow only if the two sides reach agreement on a treaty slashing long-range nuclear weapons.

Bush is trying to rally support behind a new UN Security Council resolution that would authorize military action against Iraq, presumably if it does not end its occupation of Kuwait by a specified date.

Baker has been busy presenting the administration's case to the 15 members of the Security Council. Still, the administration has been having a hard time finding agreement on the language for such a resolution, especially given Gorbachev's reluctance to get on board.

During a picture-taking session with Bush Monday, Gorbachev was asked by reporters whether he favored force or patience toward Iraq.

"I think we all need patience," the Soviet leader replied, "but that does not mean that we are going to weaken or retreat" from earlier U.N. resolutions calling for an unconditional Iraqi withdrawal.

"We certainly will seek to resolve that situation and we must be firm in our position on that," he added.

Nonetheless, administration aides said today that the White House remains hopeful progress can be made toward the wording of a new resolution. But on the eve of Bush's visit to the Middle East agreement has yet to materialize.

After the 34-nation summit on European security wraps up on Wednesday, Bush will fly to Saudi Arabia for a Thanksgiving visit with troops deployed in the Persian Gulf region.

Election

public hearing and election, Hoelscher said.

The election follows more than a year of efforts by a group of Knott farmers, who enlisted the help of Hoelscher, to get an oil well suspected of leaking saltwater into area water wells reentered and plugged.

The well was replugged in July but only after disagreements with Texas Railroad Commission officials in Midland. Those disagreements led to a meeting in May with state representatives and state TRC staff members. A subsequent in-house investigation resulted in the June firing of the TRC director in Midland.

Hoelscher's help in solving the problem prompted area farmers to form a water district in order to protect groundwater and to provide the needed expertise to deal with agencies regulating activities which affect groundwater.

Eastern bloc seeks economic from affluent western nations

PARIS (AP) — German Chancellor Helmut Kohl appealed to the world's affluent nations to help Eastern Europe's transition to democracy so that it doesn't collapse from economic hardships and social unrest.

With the end of the Cold War divisions, "there must now be no borders which perpetuate the prosperity divide," Kohl told the 34 leaders of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

The newly united Germany is placing aid to the Soviet Union high on its agenda of shaping the post-Cold War world order. Germany is coordinating emergency international food deliveries to help the Soviets overcome severe shortages and alleviate the winter cold.

President Bush said Monday he would be willing to send food, too.

Unlike his American, Soviet and British counterparts, Kohl in his speech avoided direct mention of the Persian Gulf crisis.

He expressed worry about growing nationalism in parts of Eastern Europe, and the plight of ethnic minorities. "Outmoded hostile stereotyping from the days of (Cold War) confrontation must not be replaced by backward-looking nationalism," said Kohl.

Kohl also formally pledged that the reunited Germany will only use its global muscle for the pursuit of peace, and won't repeat mistakes of the past.

"Peace alone will emanate from German soil," said Kohl.
German experts will be sent to the Soviet Union next week to examine needs, Kohl told reporters Monday night.

Kohl said he spoke with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev about the proposed aid. President Bush also said Monday that the United States is willing to send emergency food supplies to the Soviet Union, and Kohl said the plan is supported by British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

"We'll talk about this in the EC (European Community) very soon," said Kohl, adding that EC leaders have already told him they are ready to help out.

He said some supplies could be shipped by train as early as next week.

Kohl and Gorbachev have been steering their countries closer together in the past few months. The chancellor wants to help Gorbachev keep the Soviet Union from collapsing, at least partly because of the economic shock waves it could send into Europe.

Kohl said he impressed on Gorbachev the importance of making sure food shipments from the West are not backed up at the border by the Soviet Union's slow-moving bureaucracy.

Kohl is making his debut as leader of the united Germany at the summit. Before the Oct. 3 unification, Kohl's West Germany already was Europe's mightiest economic machine, and German economic power is expected to expand even further in the next few years.

Third grade receives self-help story book

Third grade students at Stanton Elementary school have received the gift-book entitled "Feeling Good About Me." It is a handsomely bound book of stories about learning traditional values and self-esteem.

"Feeling Good About Me" contains eight stories about realistic problems young people might encounter and how, using traditional values, they are resolved.

Each story has full-color illustration and teaches lessons as right and wrong, appreciation of family, what it means to be a good citizen, living up to one's full potential, and why (and how) to stay away from drugs.

In the first story, "A Day With Granddaddy", young Wendy is mad. The most popular girl in school has invited her to a slumber party, but Wendy has to go to her grandparents house on the lake, a visit she usually enjoys. During a conversation that takes place as Wendy fishes with Granddad, she learns the relative importance of the party and the visit (her values are put into perspective) and she feels good about herself and visiting her grandparents.

Other stories involve the meaning of friendships, family relationships, respect for others, loyalty and the importance of being your own unique self, lessons not always covered in school curriculums. They reflect positive influences that build a child's self-esteem. Each story is accompanied by a teacher's guide, which covers discussion starters, lesson objectives, and follow-up applications.

The purpose of the lessons is to teach young people good values and encourage discussion of values between children, their parents and other family members in home setting.

In "Real Heros", a war game among a dozen boys and girls results in several broken windows at school. At the principal's office the youngsters learn from an Army veteran that being an American hero isn't something that must happen on a battlefield, but also occurs by being a good citizen, doing whatever they can for their country.

In another story that takes place in a video arcade, Brian and Darrick must weigh the chance to get free games dishonestly against the effects of such action. With the help of a lesson learned from Darrick's dad, honesty wins out.

These beautiful books are made to last and are likely to become keepsake editions of the students. Local sponsors provided this important gift to the children because they know young people are the most precious resource of this community. The local sponsors are: First National Bank of Stanton, Gift Baskets Originals, M&M Meter Service, and Bill's IGA Grocery & True Value Hardware.

Minority unity urged by experts

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Hispanics and blacks must unite in redistricting efforts to ensure political access for minorities, experts say.

"Frankly, if you don't stick together, you're not going to get anyplace," said George Korbel, voting rights director for Texas Rural Legal Aid.

He and others spoke at a weekend conference in San Antonio on Hispanic redistricting. Political districts are redrawn every 10 years to reflect population changes.

San Antonio City Councilman Walter Martinez also urged minorities to unite. Hispanics and blacks have more similarities than differences, including heavy interest in education and health care, he said.

"It doesn't matter if they're black kids or brown kids, the issues are the same and we have to work together," Martinez said.

Cap Rock Connection

Summer job lasted over eight years

By PEGGY LUXTON
Communications advisor Cap Rock Electric, Inc.

Wally Hazelwood is a 1st-Class Lineman for Cap Rock Electric. He started work for the co-op several years ago as summer help. He became a full-time permanent employee eight and half years ago. He has been a 1st-Class Lineman for about six months.

In explaining job classification, Wally said an Apprentice Lineman is an employee who is in the first stage of learning process. WALLY HAZELWOOD Positive changes that have occurred at Cap Rock over the last few years Wally attributes to new management. "I have sure been impressed by the direction the co-op is going," Wally said. "I have no complaints about anything. I feel that under the present management, Cap Rock has made great progress."
