Study estimates 1,000 Midland youths are involved in gangs

By Alice Ashmore
Staff Writer

A new special grand jury report states that Midland does have a gang problem, and that those gang members are responsible for 30 percent of local criminal activity.

After 12 months of study, from October of 1996 to September of 1997, the panel concluded, "Midland has a gang problem because all the ingredients are here, and there is increasing presence of gang activity."

The report continues, "This Special Grand Jury believes Midland will have a marked increase in gang activity within a short period of time unless this issue is addressed immediately through a coordinated plan and a commitment by this community."

The panel was commissioned by Midland's four state district judges in response to what appears to be a growing juvenile and gang problem, said 238th District Judge John Hyde.

"I anticipated they would conclude the beginnings of gang activity," Hyde said. "There were not any real surprises." He noted that more juveniles are being certified for trial as adults and more juveniles are in gangs.

The study estimates that approximately 1,000 juveniles in Midland are involved in gang activity.

"The Crips, Eastside, Southside and White Gangs" were identified by the report as the four primary gangs in Midland. Twenty-three smaller gangs operate under these four major gangs.

The gangs have names like the ISG (Insane Gangster Crips), the AEK (Another Evil Klan), The Eastside Homies, the Latino Kings, the Mid City Locos, the Greenwood Connection and the Irish Brotherhood.

The report notes that gang members range in age from 8 to 22 years old, and that there has been an "exceptional increase in female gangs and female gang membership." An Asian gang appears to be in the formative stages as well.

"These gangs consist of delinquent youth gangs, traditional turf gangs, profit-oriented gangs and hate gangs," according to the report.

Although Midland has the beginnings of some serious gang problems, some law enforcement officials have characterized many of the gang members as "wannabes"

"If I was pleasantly surprised at all, it was that the problem is not as serious as other communities face," Hyde said. He added he hopes the community will take

Somalia flooding

A old Somali woman sits with other displaced villagers who were forced to flee their homes due to severe flooding in the Juba and Shebelle Valleys on Tuesday. United Nations officials say some 40,000 people have been displaced within the Bardera area alone and are in serious need of immediate humanitarian help.

Americans killed

KARACHI, Pakistan — Four U.S. citizens and their Pakistani driver were killed when gunmen opened fire on their vehicle early Wednesday in Karachi, sources said. Details of the shooting were sketchy but it is believed that the four Americans worked for an international oil company. Authorities in the violence-wracked southern port were refusing to give details and the identity of the Americans had not been released. Other information was not immediately known.

Angry Baptists

AUSTIN — Angry conservative Baptists in Texas are moving toward forming their own convention after a string of stinging defeats at the annual meeting of the moderate-controlled Baptist General Convention of Texas.

Resolution adds travel ban, omits threatened force

■ U.S. ambassador expects 'near unanimity' in vote among 15 council members, which is to be held today.

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Declaring that Iraqi defiance has reunited the Gulf War coalition, U.S. and British diplomats asked the Security Council on Tuesday to slap a travel ban on Iraq and warn of "further measures" unless it cooperates with U.N. arms inspectors.

But the resolution did not include the threat of military force should Iraq continue refusing to rescind its Oct. 29 order to expel American members of the U.N. weapons inspection team.

The draft also omitted a warning of "serious consequences" because of opposition from the French and Russians.

■ Gov. Bush on his father's actions in Gulf War/4A

U.S. Ambassador Bill Richardson said the council would vote on the resolution today and he expected "near unanimity" among the 15 council members.

"This resolution is going to be passed tomorrow," Richardson said. "And we think it sends an unmistakable signal for Iraq to comply immediately."

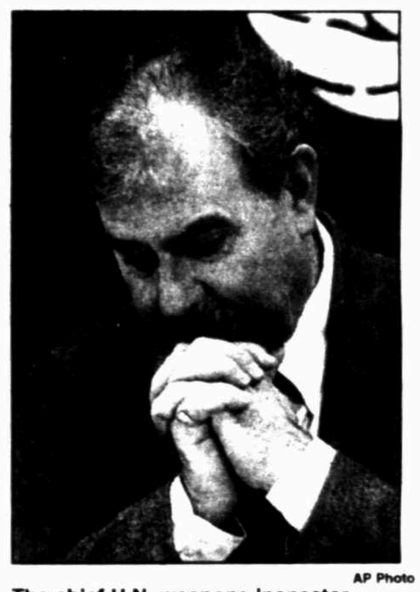
Earlier, Richardson predicted a unanimous vote. Diplomatic sources said the lone holdout was China, which said it needed to consult Chinese leaders before deciding how to vote.

Council sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said several members would try before the vote to persuade the Iraqis to rescind the decision against the Americans.

Britain's acting U.N. ambassador, Stephen Gomersall, said there were "diplomatic efforts by a number of members of the council with the Iraqi government at this moment."

"We hope to hear positive news from that tomorrow," Gomersall said. "But as of now, the intention is this resolution will be voted on around noon tomorrow."

The resolution would ban Iraqi officials who interfere with U.N. inspectors from traveling abroad, condemn Iraq for its expulsion of American inspectors and suspend further reviews of economic sanctions against Iraq until the inspectors certify that Baghdad is cooperating.



AP Photo

The chief U.N. weapons inspector, Richard Butler, denied Iraqi allegations of undue U.S. influence on his team. Butler said Tuesday that his U.N. Special Commission on Iraq has a staff of 180 people of 35 nationalities working in Baghdad, Bahrain and New York and only 14 percent are American.

The Security Council imposed the sanctions in August 1990 after Iraq invaded neighboring Kuwait.

"The coalition has reunited itself because of Iraqi behavior," Richardson said. "We believe that there's strong unanimity and consensus on the council that Iraq's behavior has been unacceptable."

Despite the strong rhetoric, U.S. and British diplomats worked throughout the day to polish and sometimes weaken language in hopes of a unanimous vote. The French raised questions about the timetable for reviewing Iraqi compliance.

Threats of force were deleted from the resolution in hopes of winning support from Russia, France, China and other nations anxious to resume lucrative trade links with Iraq once sanctions are lifted.

Egypt insisted on language affirming the territorial integrity and independence of Iraq. The council suspended its consultations for about 90 minutes while

Police to release more information on widow's death

By Rick Lopez
Staff Writer

Police investigating the unsolved death of Lula Belle Klingler — who was found stabbed to death inside her own home on Sept. 28 — will release more information today in hopes of creating more awareness about the widow's death.

Officials on Tuesday would not say what exactly would be released at the news conference at 1 p.m., but a report from the Midland Police Department states, "detectives will attempt to clarify the time of death, motives involved and disclose more details surrounding the investigation." Officials also said results of evidence analysis were to be discussed.

In earlier interviews with the Reporter-Telegram, police suspected that the motive for Ms. Klingler's death was robbery. As a result, her slaying would be classified as a capital murder, police said.

Ms. Klingler, who was 92 at the time of her death, was found dead at her home, 2209 Brunson Ave. Police said in an earlier interview that the victim's daughter found her dead that day and called for authorities. At least one person reported seeing Ms. Klingler the morning she was found dead. The victim's house is adjacent to the Dennis the Menace Park.

Sgt. Jim L. Crouse, spokesman for the Midland County Crime Stoppers, said that the reward for Ms. Klingler's death has recently been upgraded from $1,000 to $5,000.

Crouse explained that Crime Stoppers offers a $1,000 reward for information that leads to an arrest or indictment of the suspect. He said that a private citizen, who wished to remain anonymous, enhanced the amount for only Ms. Klingler's case.

So far, only one call has been made to the hotline — 694-TIPS — he added. Though the call was not a hoax, the information the caller provided to authorities did not help them identify a suspect. However, authorities did follow the lead, Crouse said.

Meanwhile, preliminary autopsy reports indicate that Ms. Klingler was stabbed several times to the chest area with a knife. The day after Ms. Klingler was found dead, police received information that led them to find the victim's purse and contents in a trash bin in south Midland. The items, police said, were taken from her home.

Somali floods kill at least 130, leave thousands without homes

BARDERA, Somalia (AP) — Rain steadily beat down on the Juba River, day into night into day, until the winding waterway burst its banks and flooded the lush green valley in southern Somalia.

Mohamed Abdirisak said it took just five days of rain for the Juba to flood his house and cut his hometown in two. The 50-year-old agronomist was among as many as 300,000 others without homes or food Tuesday.

At least 130 people have drowned since the flooding began three weeks ago, aid workers and local officials said. Those trying to survive on dry patches of land amid the swirling waters have to contend with crocodiles and other creatures.

Entire villages have been submerged, roads washed away, bridges destroyed and towns cut off from all communications except by air.

With chocolate-colored mud dripping from his bare feet, Abdirisak shook his hand at the endless mass of brown water all around him.

"There used to be my house, just left of that tree," he said Tuesday, pointing to branches sticking out of the water. There was no sign of a house.

The Juba Valley is the breadbasket of Somalia, producing sorghum, a staple crop in this nation of 7 million. The calamity could not have come at a worse time: Nearly all of the freshly planted sorghum and the reserves just harvested have been destroyed.

Abdirisak waited Tuesday for one of two plastic boats provided by the United Nations to carry him to other side of the river, where flood victims have set up a sprawling refugee camp.

He and others stranded reeled off the horrors of flooding: They've killed a 13-foot-long snake; A crocodile killed a man in the flooded marketplace; Others have fought aggressive hippos for patches of dry land.

At least 23 people have drowned in Bardera alone.

AP Photo

A Somali soldier rides a boat through the flooded town of Bardera while children looking for their belongings wade through the water Tuesday.

A doctor at the camp said he was tending to 150 cholera victims — and feared more will appear. There is no clean water — meaning that residents are drinking contaminated water that will bring dysentery. In the meantime, malarial mosquitoes were breeding by the thousands in the muddy water.

Aid workers said such heavy seasonal rains haven't been seen in Somalia in 30 years and speculate they could be the result of the periodic weather pattern known as El Nino, which is warming ocean currents in the Pacific and provoking weather changes throughout the world.

When the last such disaster struck in 1961, Somalis could rely on their government and army to rescue them.

Now, six years into a civil war, there is no central government and the estimated 1 million people in the Juba Valley depend on the mercy of the world to provide helicopters, boats and food.

The same faction leaders who forced a U.S.-led peacekeeping operation to pull out in 1995 now are appealing for outside help.

In 1992, troops of Operation Restore Hope moved in to protect convoys of relief food for the starving people of the Juba Valley from looting by militiamen working for faction leaders.

The absence of a central government and ongoing clan warfare in the center and south of this East African nation make distribution of food aid difficult even when the weather is dry.

So far, not a single government has responded to a request for helicopters. The European Union was expected to announce a major donation for Somali operations on Wednesday, and the U.S. government gave 50,000 prepackaged ready-to-eat meals to be air-dropped to flood victims.

Europeans celebrate anniversary of armistice

PARIS (AP) — Young French soldiers on vintage World War I motorcycles rode down the Champs-Elysees on Tuesday and Britons paused for two minutes of silence as Europeans tried to preserve the memory of the devastating conflict that ended 79 years ago.

With the ranks of the war's veterans dwindling, that is a growing challenge. Out of 8.4 million French mobilized for the Great War, only an estimated 2,000 are still alive in the country where the bloodiest battles were fought.

The front pages of most French newspapers failed to mention the historic date, although French radio and television reported President Jacques Chirac's wreath-laying at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier under the Arc de Triomphe. In broadcast interviews, veterans complained the day was being forgotten.

Since veterans were too feeble to march from the Arc down the Champs-Elysees, young troops mounted restored World War I motorcycles and descended along France's grandest avenue as a chilly wind carried tunes by military bands.

The French blue, white and red flag flew throughout Paris, but Tuesday was just a day off for most residents of the capital. Shops bustled with people getting an early start on their Christmas purchases.

The war has left an indelible mark on even the smallest town squares across France and in other countries, with marble or granite monuments showing how four years of battle decimated their fathers and sons. The towns commemorate the war dead with small, solemn ceremonies, often attended by the mayor and a few aging men with sashes.

Even in shining new subway trains that went into service in Paris this year, there are written reminders for people to give up their seats to injured veterans.

About 1.3 million of the French who fought in World War I were killed, and 3.6 million others were wounded. The fighting turned 1 million French women into widows, more than half of them with children.

In all, the war killed an estimated 8.5 million soldiers and 10 million civilians.

Pressure from vets forced Britain last year to revive its tradition of observing two minutes of silence for the nation's war dead, a practice that was suspended during World War II. On Tuesday, airport terminals stood still, the stock exchange stopped, and radio and TV stations stopped broadcasting.

Unlike Veterans Day in the United States, Armistice Day, which marks the war's end in 1918, is not a holiday in Britain.

The country's big national chain stores, including Marks and Spencer, observed the silence. Cash registers stopped and shoppers stood still. At London's Piccadilly Circus, the huge flashing advertising signs turned off.

Staff in 100 towns fired flares to mark the start and end of the silence.

Ceremonies marking Armistice Day were held elsewhere in France, with at least one honoring some of the 116,000 Americans who died in the war.

The village of Bathelemont-les-Bauzemont in eastern France paid tribute to three young American soldiers killed while fighting the Germans in November 1917.

The three, James Gresham, 24, and Thomas Enright and Merle Hay, both 20 and from Pittsburgh, landed in France in June 1917 in Gen. John Joseph Pershing's American Expeditionary Forces.

The German bombardment began early Nov. 3, 1917, killing the three young Americans and wounding 11 others. The town began honoring the U.S. soldiers in the 1920s and has paid tribute to them ever since.

One French schoolteacher is using modern media to keep the veterans from becoming a ading memory. He created a CD-ROM based on the recollections and mementos of 100-year-old veteran Victor Dupuis.

"In 10 years, the last witnesses to the First World War will probably all have disappeared," Daniel Martin told the French daily Le Parisien.

"Thinking about that gave me a certain sense of urgency."

Airlift rescues American from Antarctic base

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand (AP) — An American worker at the McMurdo base in Antarctica was airlifted out Tuesday after suffering heart problems.

Cmdr. John Stotz said a C-130 Hercules from Christchurch touched down on the ice about midnight and delivered the man to New Zealand about nine hours later Tuesday morning.

The civilian employee was taken to Christchurch hospital. His condition was not known.

A member of the New York State Air National Guard also went on the same flight to get an X-ray for a thumb he had injured earlier.

Neither Americans' identities were released.

The airlift follows the death in May of American civilian worker Charles Gallagher. The U.S. Air Force had planned a dangerous wintertime emergency flight for Gallagher, but he died of pneumonia before he could be airlifted out.

McMurdo station is on the Antarctic coast on the Ross Sea, south of New Zealand.

Gov. Bush defends father's handling of Gulf War

By Sig Christenson
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Texas Gov. George W. Bush said Tuesday his father was right when he stopped U.S. troops from marching on Baghdad and pursuing Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in the 1991 Gulf War.

Touted as a potential Republican presidential nominee in 2000, Bush said then-President George Bush followed the advice of his military commanders and avoided a direct assault on Baghdad, the Iraqi capital.

"There are a lot of Americans (who say), 'Why didn't you go get him?'" the governor told reporters at a Veterans Day event in San Antonio. "Well, I'm confident that losing men and women as a result of sniper fire inside of Baghdad would have turned the tide of public opinion very quickly.

"And I don't think people really fully understood why General (Norman) Schwarzkopf and General (Colin) Powell made the decision they made, because it seemed so easy out in the battlefield."

Powell was chairman of the Joints Chiefs of Staff under President Bush and Schwarzkopf directed the military assault that drove Iraqi forces from Kuwait in early 1991.

At the United Nations Tuesday, officials continued to monitor the latest showdown with Iraq, which began Oct. 29 when Iraqi officials said they would expel Americans on an international arms control inspection team, and threatened to shoot down U-2 surveillance flights.

The U.N. inspection teams were established to monitor Iraq's compliance with the 1991 cease-fire agreement that ended the war.

Just 100 hours after it began in January 1991, the ground war was stopped by Bush after an international coalition of forces routed the Iraqis. He made the decision to stop the conflict and not drive on to Baghdad to capture Saddam.

Former CIA Director Robert M. Gates revealed in 1993 that Powell and Schwarzkopf said it would have been difficult to capture Saddam if he had fled and gone into hiding. Gates also said Bush feared American troops would have taken more casualties in a Baghdad assault and mistakenly believed Iraqis would topple Saddam after the defeat.

Gov. Bush said Tuesday that any attempt "to ferret out" Saddam would have transformed the battle from a desert conflict to "kind of a guerrilla war, trying to go from house to house to find this guy.

"And so I think they made the right decision and history will prove that," he said.

Jim McGrath, a spokesman for the former president, said capturing or killing Saddam wasn't part of the administration's mandate as outlined by the United Nations and Congress.

"The mission was not to topple the Iraqi regime and it was not to 'get' Saddam Hussein," McGrath said. "It was to liberate Kuwait — period."

The younger Bush warned that Clinton should not "politicize" the use of military force. But he also expressed support for Clinton, saying the president so far has sent "clear signals" of American resolution to Iraq.

Clinton should heed the advice of his military commanders, Bush said, just as his father did in 1991.

"I'll tell you another thing," he added. "Clinton would be well-served to call George Bush, if he chose to do so. I think my dad conducted himself brilliantly during Desert Storm and understands the situation pretty clearly."

'I'll tell you another thing, Clinton would be well-served to call George Bush, if he chose to do so. I think my dad conducted himself brilliantly during Desert Storm and understands the situation pretty clearly.'

DRAFT: Iraq bans inspection team because of Americans the Egyptian-requested paragraph was inserted into the final draft.

(From 1A)

Iraq issued its order to expel American inspectors after five council members — France, Russia, China, Egypt and Kenya — abstained on a resolution last month threatening a travel ban.

U.S. and British diplomats believe Iraqi President Saddam Hussein saw the abstentions as a sign of divisions on the council and sought to exploit them by moving against the American inspectors.

Iraq's deputy prime minister, Tariq Aziz, admitted Tuesday that his efforts to fend off council action had failed. Aziz flew to New York on Monday to press Iraq's demand that the United Nations agree to reduce the percentage of Americans on the inspection team, stop U.S.-manned U-2 spy flights and provide a timetable for the end of sanctions.

Diplomatic sources said the envoys told him they could do little to argue Iraq's case as long as Baghdad defied U.N. orders. For the eighth time in nine days, Iraq banned an inspection team Tuesday because it included Americans.

The inspectors are in Iraq to determine whether Baghdad has complied with U.N. orders issued at the end of the Persian Gulf War requiring that Saddam destroy all long-range missiles and weapons of mass destruction. That is the main condition for the council to lift the sanctions.

The Iraqis claim the Americans are delaying certification of compliance to keep the sanctions in place.

The chief U.N. weapons inspector, Richard Butler, denied Iraqi allegations of undue U.S. influence on his team. Butler said Tuesday that his U.N. Special Commission on Iraq has a staff of 180 people of 35 nationalities working in Baghdad, Bahrain and New York.

The largest percentage — 32 percent — is Chilean. Americans account for 14 percent; Britons 11 percent; New Zealanders 9 percent; Iraqis 6 percent; and Australians 5 percent, he said.

Conservative Texas Baptists may form own convention

By Richard Vara
Hearst News Service

AUSTIN — Angry conservative Baptists in Texas are moving toward forming their own convention after a string of stinging defeats at the annual meeting of the moderate-controlled Baptist General Convention of Texas.

The Rev. Miles Seaborn, president of the conservative Southern Baptists of Texas, said a new convention would likely be formed after a survey of members but he could not predict when the convention would be established.

He said leaders of the conservative organization of pastors and laity support a new convention.

"We have a sense of direction," Seaborn told a meeting of 400 disgruntled conservatives late Monday after a string of defeats, including the loss of a conservative candidate for convention president.

The Rev. Russell H. Dilday, 66, of Waco received 3,751 votes to defeat conservative layman Ted Tedder of San Antonio, who received 1,524.

The defeats continued Tuesday as moderates voted to accept the two remaining recommendations of a controversial 16-point Efficiency-Effectiveness Report. Conservatives complained bitterly that many of the recommendations were designed to lead Texas out of the 15.6 million-member Southern Baptist Convention.

Conservatives control the national convention while moderates control the Texas convention. The groups have been locked in a bitter 18-year state and national struggle over biblical interpretation and other issues. Texas, with 2.7 million members and 5,800 churches, is the largest state convention in the Southern Baptist Convention.

The recommendations include the establishment of a Bible college for laity and ministers. The state convention also will publish church materials and will train local and international missionaries.

Conservatives said the national convention already has the same programs.

"For all practical purposes you saw the creation of a new convention," Seaborn said.

Conservative tried to derail the recommendations through time-consuming amendments and debate. The tactics angered moderates.

"They are trying to be obstructionists," said the Rev. Bob Campbell, pastor of Houston's Westbury Baptist Church. Campbell chairs the convention's Executive Committee, which developed the recommendations.

Campbell said the new programs increase Texas' role in evangelism and missions. Outgoing convention president Charles Wade of Arlington made a plea to conservatives not to leave the convention.

Catholic bishops consider return to meatless Fridays

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aiming to improve Catholic unity and penitence, the nation's bishops are considering a return to meatless Fridays, a practice that hasn't been mandatory since the 1960s, except during Lent.

Members of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops Pro-Life Committee, where the proposal originated, say reinstating meatless Fridays would give Catholics a way to publicly display their penitence on Fridays — the day the Bible says Jesus suffered and died on the cross.

"Maybe we need to return to that, but more broadly, we're studying the very nature of Friday as a penitential day and how do we better call ourselves to observe it," says Cardinal Bernard Law of Boston, chairman of the pro-life committee.

The proposal also is intended to be a way for the nation's 61 million Catholics to express themselves against abortion, euthanasia, war violence, drugs and other "attacks on human life and human dignity."

"The question now is, 'Did we lose the whole notion of Friday being a penitential day?'" Law said. "Our pastoral experience is that people have tended to lose sight of it since the obligation of abstinence on Friday was removed."

And there is another question: Is giving up meat a sufficient sign of penitence. "Fish is very good — I have to say that coming from Boston," says Law, who abstains from meat in his home on Fridays.

The 300-member bishops conference ends its national meeting here Thursday.

Cardinal Adam Maida of Detroit says that if the proposal is endorsed, Catholics might not turn to fish.

"I know people who on their fast days do bread and water," Maida says. "When I was a child, our staple on Fridays was potato soup and potato pancakes."

But he says the proposal is not just about not eating meat on Fridays. Catholic beliefs have become homogenized into American culture, he said.

He says Catholics need to publicly witness that "'I'm a Catholic. I am for life and I affirm the value of life as taught by the church.'"

Archbishop Francis E. George of Chicago says he's in favor of meatless Fridays because it would help Catholics identify with Christ's suffering and death. But he admits he doesn't always abstain today.

"If there's fish around, I'll try to eat it," George says.

Monsignor Lorenzo Albacete of New York pointed to his portly shape and said he thought it would be healthy for him to eat more fish, which is generally considered more healthful than some other meats.

But Albacete doesn't want to see people scorned if they don't embrace the practice. "My concern is that it not be presented as, 'If you eat meat on Friday you'll burn in hell.' I think that would be an abysmal mistake."

GANGS: Document identifies 17 individual problem areas appropriate action to limit the growth of gangs in Midland.

The 30-page document identifies 17 individual problem areas, encompassing the Midland Independent School District, the city of Midland, Midland County, the general community and the existing juvenile probation system.

The special panel believes a S.T.A.R. (Special Training and Rehabilitation) Program "is the most attractive remedy for this community's situation."

The non-resident "boot-camp" style program works on the basis of building self-esteem and bringing responsibility into the juvenile lives. The S.T.A.R. program is intended to build the necessary character to allow youths to resist the lure of gang activity. The program also requires academic performance and parental involvement.

"While it is true that the gang problem in one that is very complex and represents a very diverse culture, there is one very basic approach that must be adopted by all communities in order to prevent its spread," the report adds, "Parents must be parents!"

'There is one very basic approach that must be adopted by all communities in order to prevent (gangs') spread. Parents must be parents.'

— special grand jury report

The report stresses that gang-related activity is an economic problem as well. "Gangs are a business," the report states. "We must make it hard for them to do business in our community."

The special grand jury estimates $4.5 million dollars in "lost costs" can be attributed to gang activity in Midland.

The jury panel was composed of 12 citizens chosen to represent Midland both ethnically and professionally. Hyde said this group was chosen from a pool of 20 potential jurors.

Mike Bradford served as jury foreman. Other jurors were: Jerry Moritz, Albert Terrazas, Oland Butler, Reuben Ramirez, Claudia Egan, Dan Walkenshaw, Buddy Swinney, Charles Swallow, W. C. Wilson, Hector Valdez, Jr., and Melissa Cartwright.

The last special grand jury that convened in Midland County was five or six years ago to study drug and alcohol problems among teens in Midland, Hyde said.

He believes the panels serve an important role in determining the well-being of Midland. "I think it is appropriate for a community to re-evaluate itself, just like we take an annual physical every year," Hyde said.

McAleese inaugurated as Irish president

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Ireland's new president took office Tuesday affirming her determination to build bridges across the political and religious divisions of the island, and praised a victim of Irish Republican Army violence for his example of forgiveness and love.

Mary McAleese, a 46-year-old Roman Catholic law professor from Belfast, is the first of Ireland's eight presidents to come from British-ruled Northern Ireland.

"Ireland sits tantalizingly ready to embrace a golden age of affluence, self-assurance, tolerance and peace. It will be my most profound privilege to be president of this beautiful, intriguing country," McAleese told 600 guests in St. Patrick's Hall of Dublin Castle.

"The theme of my presidency ... is building bridges," she said. "There will be those who are wary of such invitations, afraid that they are being invited to the edge of a precipice."

McAleese had invited all of Northern Ireland's political leaders to the inauguration, but most pro-British Protestants refused. They regard the president as head of a foreign state that maintains an illegal claim to Northern Ireland.

Among the guests at the ceremony was Joan Wilson, whose 20-year-old daughter Marie was one of 11 people killed by an IRA bomb a decade ago in Enniskillen, Northern Ireland.

The young woman's father, the late Gordon Wilson, was injured in the blast and gained international attention by quickly and publicly forgiving the IRA with the words of Christ: "God forgive them for they know not what they do."

"His words of love and forgiveness shocked us as if we were hearing them for the very first time, as if they had not been uttered first 2,000 years ago," McAleese said, as Mrs. Wilson dabbed a tear from her eye.

McAleese won a record 59 percent of the vote in Ireland's Oct. 30 election to succeed the nation's first female president, Mary Robinson, who resigned in September to become U.N. Commissioner for Human Rights.

McAleese was able to run even though as a resident of Northern Ireland she wasn't eligible to vote. Any candidate nominated by a political party in the Irish republic may run.

Tuesday's seating arrangements inside the castle — the center of British administration until southern Ireland's independence in 1922 — illustrated how Northern Ireland's peace process is bringing opponents together.

Sitting side by side in the front row were Mo Mowlam, Britain's minister responsible for governing Northern Ireland; John Hume, leader of the north's moderate Catholics; and Gerry Adams, leader of the IRA-allied Sinn Fein party — a political untouchable only a few years ago.

Behind Mrs. Wilson was Martin McGuinness, the reputed former IRA commander who now leads the Sinn Fein team in negotiations on Northern Ireland's future.

Voting regulation not necessary now in Texas

Texas Secretary of State Tony Garza has been traveling throughout the state recently advocating appealing to the U.S. Congress to get Texas out from under Section 5 of the 1965 Voter Rights Act — the document that forbids discrimination along ethnic or racial lines.

Now, one might wonder why Garza, himself a member of a racial minority, would seek such a change when Section 5 supposedly was intended to ensure that minorities are allowed to vote. But Garza believes Texas is now as progressive as any other state in permitting voting by all races and that Section 5 is actually working against the state.

An example of the problem cited by Garza noted that election reform measures enacted by Texas lawmakers two years ago didn't gain the approval from the federal government until August 1997.

"In today's context," Garza said on a recent stop in Midland, "the preclearance process now serves less to preserve voting rights in Texas and more to interfere with them, given the delays involved with the U.S. Justice Department's administration of Section 5."

Garza went so far as to call the continued federal supervision of election issues in this state an "affront to the integrity of Texans and their representatives in the Legislature."

An example of the problem cited by Garza noted that election reform measures enacted by Texas lawmakers two years ago didn't gain the approval from the federal government until August 1997.

Garza noted that while Texas remains under the provisions of Section 5, Gov. George W. Bush cannot order a special election to fill a vacancy caused by the death of a representative without submitting paperwork to the feds. Neither may a city change the location of a polling place or even the means of entry to a polling place without first undergoing the time-consuming federal preclearance process.

"The point is," said Garza, "that present reality in Texas simply doesn't support the kind of extensive federal oversight that Section 5 commands. We saw how long it took to implement 1995 election reform measures."

Texas is one of only nine states still kept under Section 5 because too few minorities were registered to vote 22 years ago. But few observers would contend the Texas of 1965 is the same as the Texas of 1997 where voting registration and rights are concerned.

Garza is correct. It's time for a change.

ANOTHER VIEW

Corruption killed set-aside program

When Cleveland established a contract set-aside program for minority- and female-owned businesses nearly two decades ago, most of its proponents were realistic enough to expect a certain amount of cheating.

But surely no one expected the cheating to be as pervasive or as blatant as that documented last week by The Plain Dealer. It is difficult not to wonder whether the program has been fatally compromised.

It pains us to say this, because this newspaper long has supported set-aside programs as a legitimate way of overcoming discrimination against minority- and female-owned firms.

The time has come for a top-to-bottom review of the set-aside program.

The review should be guided by one key principle: A set-aside program cannot serve its intended purpose, and certainly cannot maintain the public's confidence, if the law is not rigorously and impartially enforced. If the will for such oversight is lacking, it would be better to scrap the program entirely than to acquiesce in its continued corruption.

Presidents gather to celebrate Bush library

Anderson

Amid hoopla and a rare gathering of presidents, former President George Bush opened his presidential library, museum and related facilities last week on the campus of Texas A&M University.

Many notables were on hand to celebrate, from entertainers Arnold Schwarzenegger, Kevin Costner and Wayne Newton to a host of dignitary "formers": Former British Prime Minister John Major; former Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney; former Polish President Lech Walesa; and Toshiki Kaifu, the one-time prime minister of Japan upon whom Bush once vomited. "Dinner is on me this time," Bush joked.

Most of Bush's presidential cabinet was there, as well as Colin Powell. President Clinton was also on hand, as were former Presidents Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford. Nancy Reagan represented former President Ronald Reagan, who suffers from Alzheimer's disease.

Mrs. Reagan, dressed in her customary red, spoke first. She called Bush, Ronald Reagan's "other loyal partner," and spoke of how President Reagan never missed their Thursday lunch "regardless of war, peace, Congress, whatever." She movingly recounted how President Bush, on his first Thursday in the White House, called former President Reagan in California to say how much he missed him for lunch.

Gerald Ford praised Bush's "commitment to public service," his "old-fashioned virtues," and noted of Barbara Bush: "Behind every great woman is a man wondering what on earth she ever saw in him."

Jimmy Carter talked about the ties that bind the "very small fraternity" of presidents, including similar foreign conflicts and problems, domestic issues and a shared family heritage spelled out in a genealogical book linking most presidents as cousins through common ancestors.

Even President Clinton, who beat Bush in the 1992 general election, thanked him for his Thousand Points of Light initiative, which Clinton announced he would restart. He also praised Bush for "his decency and devotion" to America.

But when it came time for Bush to be the concluding speaker, he began with an apology to his mother: "Mother taught my siblings and me never to be what she called a 'braggadocio.' After we found out what that meant, we tried to do as she taught. For example, Mother always lectured us — in a kinder, gentler way — against using 'The Big I.' Well, I am afraid that some of the exhibits here might not pass her 'no bragging rule.'"

He did not spell out in his speech, however, one of the most important aspects of his new library -- a reason it is much more than a monument to Bush's life and times.

Last September he inaugurated as part of the project the George Bush School of Government and Public Service. It is an academic unit of Texas A&M, the nation's third-largest university, and is intended to attract quality students to public service careers by offering a master of public service and administration degree. Bush has already taught a few class sessions for the 19 students enrolled in the inaugural course, and plans to do more in the future.

Just how deeply he feels about this part of the library was evident in an exclusive interview with our associate Dale Van Atta prior to the library opening.

As the campaign finance reform scandal has further emphasized, Bush said, Americans have a cynical view of politicians because of the "level of sleaze" that is evident. "They think that 'everybody does it' — no matter how bad the moral or the egregious ethical offense is, they think it's just brushed off. That attitude, I think, discourages young people from public service."

That, any way, is "the fallout" he thinks has come from the campaign finance and Whitewater hearings — and other possible ethical breaches by Cabinet officers over the last decade. All in all, the number of these incidents "has just been a terrible thing."

One small solution, he believes, is a school that promotes the nobler aspects of the profession. It hopes to attract some of the brightest, most moral students into the profession — giving them a helping hand, a mentor, a guide for the road.

"So I'm interested in the school," he said. "I'm interested in it more than I am the bricks and mortar of this beautiful facility we've got. The school interests me because I think that the concept of public service is being eroded. I think it's being diminished by all this. People say, 'I don't want any of that.' And a lot of it is the economy — they think, 'I'll just go ahead and make my fortune,' so the idea of serving gets hurt."

ART BUCHWALD

Republicans, Democrats both sell services

It's not only the Democrats who are selling their services for big bucks to the electorate -- the Republicans are playing the same game.

Buchwald

The GOP is offering donors briefing sessions with all the leaders of the House and the Senate. Presumably the information given out at these events is hot stuff, unavailable to the average American who, as Trent Lott said recently, is "sitting on his wallet."

Zachary Tombstone was furious. When he was called by a Republican fund-raiser and asked to contribute $100,000 for exclusive face-to-face meetings with GOP leaders, Zach said, "Why should someone be expected to give $100,000 to have cocktails and dinner with members of the Senate?"

The fund-raiser said, "This is a unique opportunity to hear what your political leaders are going to do about clean air, dirty water and prayer in schools."

"I don't think that I should have to pay extra to find out what my elected officials are thinking."

"Don't you care about your country?"

"Listen, I pay them a hefty sum in salary to tell me what's on their minds. I have no intention of shelling out $100,000 to hear it out of both sides of their mouths."

"You're not just getting the opportunity to find out what they're thinking. You are also entitled to a photo opportunity with Republican leaders. We'll present you with a color photo of yourself shaking hands with Trent Lott."

"Who the hell is Trent Lott?"

"He is the most charismatic member of the Senate. You hang a picture like that on the wall, and people will be breaking down your door. We also give you a choice of having your photograph taken with three other Republicans: Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, Sen. Jim Inhofe of Oklahoma, and Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina are the pick of the litter."

"It still seems like a lot of money."

"Okay, there's an alternative. If you give us $50,000, you can get a secret briefing from Sen. Alfonse D'Amato of New York in the steam room of the Hilton."

"I don't think my accountant would consider that a worthwhile expenditure."

The fund-raiser wasn't about to give up. "Look, what you'll hear in this briefing, as well as at the cocktail party, could make a difference to your tax assessment for the next 20 years. Our legislators are sworn to secrecy when it comes to what laws they will vote for or against, but they will reveal this information to you, providing you join the club."

"Can I ask any question I want?"

"Of course, it's a free country."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 12, the 316th day of 1997. There are 49 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 12, 1942, the World War II naval Battle of Guadalcanal began. The Americans eventually won a major victory over the Japanese.

On this date:

In 1815, American suffragist Elizabeth Cady Stanton was born in Johnstown, N.Y.

In 1920, baseball got its first "czar" as Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis was elected commissioner of the American and National Leagues.

In 1921, representatives of nine nations gathered for the start of the Washington Conference for Limitation of Armaments.

In 1927, Josef Stalin became the undisputed ruler of the Soviet Union as Leon Trotsky was expelled from the Communist Party.

In 1948, former Japanese premier Hideki Tojo and several other World War II Japanese leaders were sentenced to death by a war crimes tribunal.

In 1954, Ellis Island closed after processing more than 20 million immigrants since opening in New York Harbor in 1892.

In 1980, the U.S. space probe Voyager 1 came within 77,000 miles of Saturn.

In 1982, Yuri V. Andropov was elected to succeed the late Leonid I. Brezhnev as general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party's Central Committee.

In 1990, Japanese Emperor Akihito formally assumed the Chrysanthemum Throne.

Ten years ago: The American Medical Association issued a policy statement saying it was unethical for a doctor to refuse to treat someone solely because that person had AIDS or was HIV-positive.

Five years ago: In his first formal post-election news conference, President-elect Clinton presented a detailed blueprint for action once he took office, and promised his administration would have the strictest ethical guidelines in history.

One year ago: A Saudi Boeing 747 jetliner collided shortly after takeoff from New Delhi, India, with a Kazak Ilyushin-76 cargo plane, killing 349 people. In Pontiac, Mich., Jonathan Schmitz, a guest on "The Jenny Jones Show," was convicted of second-degree murder for shooting Scott Amedure, a gay man who'd revealed a crush on Schmitz during a taping of the program. Schmitz was later sentenced to up to 50 years in prison.

Today's Birthdays: Retired Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun is 89. Actress Kim Hunter is 75. Rhythm-and-blues singer Ruby Nash Curtis of Ruby and the Romantics is 58. Actor-playwright Wallace Shawn is 54. Singer Brian Hyland is 54. Rhythm-and-blues singer Jimmy Hayes of Persuasions is 54.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Reading Saddam's mind reveals his calculating nature

Listen to them all: "Foolish Saddam — just when France and Russia and China show signs of splitting from the U.S. on the sanctions against Iraq, the Iraqi unites them with his demand that the U.N. inspection team not include Americans."

Safire

And they all say: "That crazy Saddam, to threaten to shoot down the American spy plane — didn't he learn his lesson in the gulf war that the U.S. was invincible?"

Not so foolish. I have already forced the U.N. into negotiating with me despite the American objections. Oh, they say the U.N. diplomats I have summoned are here merely to repeat the Security Council's message, but they will listen; they will report my conditions; and I will send Tariq Aziz to New York to further the discussions. That's a negotiation and it slaps the Americans in the face.

The benefit to me is immediate. My people need a lift to their pride, and to see me on the world stage denouncing the Americans is the necessary tonic for their misery. And the young officer plotting to become the next Saddam will watch my street demonstrations and tremble.

But a greater benefit is this: Even if I appear to become reasonable and let the inspectors include Americans, my "concession" would end all possibility of increased sanctions against me, as we continue to keep inspectors away from our most secret sites.

What could be more important to me than protecting the places where I am preparing weapons of mass destruction? Do those Western idiots think I am giving up tens of billions of dollars in oil revenues year after year for no reason?

The inspectors think they are closing in on the sites where we have buried the nerve gas VX. So they were, and this delay is useful to redeploy, but that is not why I moved this week. Poison gas is good for battlefield use against Iran, but no gas will terrorize the world.

Nuclear bombs would. And so would a weapon that Rihab Rashid Taha is perfecting: my growing stockpile of anthrax and botulinum germs, spray-dried and stored as spores. One hundred kilograms in a missile would empty Tel Aviv, and if pulverized and released when the wind is right from Bethesda or Westchester, would pay back Washington or New York for Bush's bombing of Baghdad. No wonder the Americans are so eager to continue their "surprise inspections."

(I arranged for Rihab to marry my oil minister — must get a present for her new baby.)

And now — am I "crazy" to challenge the Americans militarily?

Take the most extreme case — that I shoot down their spy plane or take some of their people hostage. How does Clinton respond? His congressional leaders have already given him a blank check because I am such a villain. But what can he do?

He could give me another pinprick, Tomahawk missile strikes where he risks no casualties, same as he did last year when I moved my troops into Erbil and killed the Kurds the U.S. was supposed to be protecting. That showed me his weakness.

Or Clinton could light up the night sky in Baghdad for CNN. What does his killing a few thousand Iraqis mean to me? Fewer mouths to feed. He could bomb "purely military targets"; there are none. We cover them all with hospitals and orphans' homes. A counterstrike from his carrier, the Nimitz, would satisfy his Congress and the editorialists but would not hurt me.

Do you suppose he could reassemble the coalition to threaten me with invasion? The French, who are willing to sell their souls for my oil, will surely refuse. And this time, Yevgeny Primakov, my best foreign friend for 20 years — whose Communist spy network I supported — is now Russia's foreign minister and would personally veto any U.N. invasion.

Police raid Toshiba Corp., Mitsubishi Electric

Japanese racketeers called 'sokaiya' buy a token amount of stock, then threaten to disrupt shareholders meetings.

TOKYO (AP) — Police raided the headquarters of Toshiba Corp. and Mitsubishi Electric Corp. on Tuesday — the latest Japanese corporate giants tainted by allegations of making illegal payments to a racketeer.

The raids came a day after police arrested one executive at each corporation on charges of paying off Terubo Tei, a 53-year-old racketeer, to ensure that the internationally known electronics companies' annual shareholders meetings ran smoothly.

"What a disgraceful thing it is. This is sheer foolishness," Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto told reporters.

Hashimoto said he was worried that the scandal would cause further damage to Japan's already beleaguered stock market.

Television footage showed 15 Tokyo police officers entering the Mitsubishi building in central Tokyo. About the same number entered Toshiba's head office to gather evidence on the alleged payoffs.

A Japanese type of racketeers, called "sokaiya," buy a token amount of a company's stock and threaten to disrupt shareholders meetings by bringing up embarrassing information about failed investments or the personal lives of executives. They also demand money from companies in exchange for pressuring other racketeers to keep quiet.

The arrested executive from Toshiba, Takeshi Watanabe, 55, was suspected of paying $16,900 to Tei over a three-year period from 1995, Tokyo police said. Mitsubishi Electric's Yoshiki Sugiura, 47, was suspected of funneling $37,000 to the racketeer over the same period.

Spokesmen for both Toshiba and Mitsubishi said the companies would cooperate with investigators.

Tei already had been arrested on charges of receiving illegal payments over the past two years from Mitsubishi Motors Corp., a major Japanese automaker. Three Mitsubishi Motors officials have been arrested for allegedly funneling $72,500 to him.

On Tuesday, Mitsubishi Motors announced that its president, Takemune Kimura, and chairman, Hirokazu Nakamura, will resign to take responsibility for the payoff scandal.

Katsuhiko Kawasoe, a managing director, will take over as Mitsubishi president on Nov. 27. Kimura will become an adviser, mainly a ceremonial post.

It is common for top executives to step down at Japanese companies in a gesture of contrition for public relations damage incurred by scandals.

In a bid to combat racketeering problems in the early 1980s, Japan made it a crime for companies to pay extortionists, but cutting corporate ties with racketeers has proven difficult. There are still about 1,000 groups specializing in corporate racketeering across the nation, according to police estimates.

In a related development, Japan's 500-member lower house unanimously passed a bill designed to strengthen penalties against corporate racketeers and company executives who bow to threats and make payments to sokaiya.

The new bill will increase penalties for racketeers who demand illicit payoffs to a maximum three-year sentence or a fine of up to $24,000.

Currently, the maximum punishment is six months in prison or a fine of $2,400.

The upper house will take up the bill soon, and it is expected to take effect early next year.

Among prominent arrests in recent payoff cases were executives of Japan's "Big Four" brokerages — Nomura Securities, Daiwa Securities, Nikko Securities and Yamaichi Securities.

Former top executives of Dai-Ichi Kangyo Bank also have been arrested in the brokerage scandal.

Mrs. Clinton promotes partnerships with former Soviet republics

ALMATY, Kazakstan (AP) — If young Californians and Kazaks can call themselves partners, so can the United States and the former Soviet republics, Hillary Rodham Clinton said Tuesday.

Saying she had made the 16-hour trip from Washington to "promote solidarity" with the emerging republics, Mrs. Clinton opened her five-nation tour with a visit to Almaty School 55.

There, star-struck Kazak student leaders explained how relations with their California counterparts changed their views of the world.

Victor Kam, a student at the National Technical University, said through an interpreter that the Kazakstan Association of Youth Leaders and its partnership with the California Association of Student Councils helped him "learn to be more tolerant" of those who are different.

Olyeg Bakhmutov said he believed himself to be "a minute particle" incapable of helping change the world. But now the partnership has helped build confidence among Kazak students, who are looking for ways to set up American-style student councils in local schools.

"You see how much I can do," said Bakhmutov.

Mrs. Clinton pushed the students to give these examples, as a symbol of the possibilities between nations that once called each other enemies.

That is the overriding theme of Mrs. Clinton's eight-day goodwill trip to Kazakstan, Kyrgyzstan, Uzbekistan and Ukraine as the independent republics shift to free market economies and democracy.

President Clinton and the State Department asked Mrs. Clinton to make the journey to such little-traveled places also to promote American interests as some of the republics consider striking trade and oil deals with such nations as Iran and Iraq.

After a fire censor on her airplane malfunctioned and delayed her trip by a day, Mrs. Clinton became the first first lady to visit Central Asia solo with a visit to the Kazak capital of Almaty.

Under a brownish-pink blanket of pollution that nearly obscured towering snow-covered mountains, Mrs. Clinton stepped out on the tarmac about 5:30 p.m. Girls wearing traditional purple and red "saukele," or hats, handed her roses.

Waving, Kazaks leaned over their balconies and lined the capital's bleak streets as her motorcade traveled to the school. After the discussion, the youth group's executive director, Aliya Telemtaeva, gave her a T-shirt and photo album of the members working on their projects.

Her next stop was the marble state museum modeled after a "yurt," or native tent. The building housed an actual yurt, made of wood and wool on the outside and furnished inside with scarlet rugs and silks.

The traditional, portable home of Kazak nomads also featured a narrow canvas hanging from the hole in the center of the ceiling. A museum official said the shadow cast by the canvas told inhabitants the time.

Viewing a display of leather animal whips, an interpreter told her that no self-respecting Kazak man leaves the house without one.

"Oh, do you bring your whip to work?" Mrs. Clinton asked the director of the museum, through the interpreter.

"He says he has a good one there (at work), so he doesn't," the interpreter replied.

Police arrest Israeli on suspicion of kidnap plot

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Police have arrested an Israeli man whom Swiss authorities insist plotted to kidnap the heiress of the vast Onassis shipping fortune, the Justice Ministry said Tuesday.

Ronen Balulu, reportedly a former member of the Israeli secret service, was taken into custody on an international warrant, according to a ministry spokesman, after being cleared by Israel last week of any wrongdoing.

He was being held in the Italian city of Milan, where he was arrested Monday.

A Swiss investigating judge believes that Balulu, 28, and six other Israelis schemed to abduct Aristotle's granddaughter, Athena Roussel, at the St. Moritz ski resort in February.

The Israeli government offered no immediate response to the arrest. But last week, police there declared the case closed, saying the ex-secret service agents were merely hired by members of the Greek-based Onassis foundation to spy on Athena's father, Thierry Roussel.

Athena, 12, stands to inherit some $2.4 billion when she turns 18, and in the meantime her father and the Greek executors of her mother's will have been fighting over control of the money.

Roussel receives $5 million a year for personal expenses, under his ex-wife's will. He recently sued the charitable Alexander S. Onassis Public Benefit Foundation, accusing it of having mismanaged and embezzled millions of dollars. A Greek court acquitted the foundation earlier this year.

Israeli police said Greek trustees at some point turned to Israeli private investigators and asked them to find evidence that Athena's father was involved in "immoral acts."

Athena is the only child of Christina Onassis, the shipping magnate's daughter, and Roussel, her fourth husband. The couple divorced in 1987 and Christina died a year later. Roussel has remarried and has three children with his new wife. Athena lives with her father and his new family in Switzerland and France.

Swiss authorities have 18 days to apply for Balulu's extradition from Italy, according to Swiss Justice Ministry spokesman Folco Galli.

Slain journalist sixth this year in Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Gunman shot and killed a 36-year-old radio journalist in his home in northern Colombia, his widow said Tuesday — the sixth Colombian reporter slain this year.

Francisco Castro Menco was killed Saturday in the small town of Majagual, 270 miles north of Bogota.

"We don't have any information about who the murderers were or the motive for the crime," Castro's wife Rosario told The Associated Press by telephone.

She said Castro owned and ran the local radio station for five years, had no enemies and had never received any threats on his life.

However, Castro was also an unsuccessful candidate for the Sucre state assembly in Colombia's Oct. 26 elections, which were marred by a guerrilla sabotage campaign that forced at least 2,000 candidates to withdraw.

At least 53 candidates were killed prior to the election.

Majagual is in Sucre state, where leftist rebels and their paramilitary foes are locked in a bitter struggle — and the victims are mostly civilians suspected of siding with one side or the other.

The father of three children, Castro was the second Colombian journalist murdered in three weeks.

BASIN BRIEFING

Robotics contest

Lee High School robotics students will compete at a statewide robotics contest on Saturday at College Station after recently placing first in a regional contest. The Lee students placed first in Texas Instruments and Texas A&M University's annual West Texas-BEST (Boosting Engineering, Science and Technology) regional contest at Texas Tech University. The LHS team was among 20 West Texas schools competing at Tech. The Lee students each received $1,000 scholarships to study engineering at Texas Tech. Odessa Permian High School finished third and will also advance to state. Midland High School tied for sixth and Midland's Trinity School finished in a four-way tie for eighth place. The contest involves schools spending about six weeks to create a robot out of crude materials that's able to perform a complex task. This year's task involved the robot climbing a steep ramp, picking up a stick of pretend dynamite and placing it in a bucket atop the ramp. The contest is designed to encourage creativity and understanding of engineering concepts among students.

MISD board OKs new Crockett bid

Revised bid to renovate Crockett Elementary is still $163,000 over budget

By Richard Enos
Staff Writer

The Midland Independent School District school board on Tuesday voted to approve a revised and reduced bid for Crockett Elementary after listening to four citizens voice their opposition to the resubmitted bid.

The board voted 5-2, with members Adela Villa Marmolejo and James Fuller dissenting, to award a $2.51 million bid to J.W. Cooper construction. School officials have said that Crockett will still be a modern and safe facility even with the revisions and that future renovations will be smoother.

The reduced bid is still $163,000 over MISD's $2.35 million budget for Crockett, but the district will make up the difference with contingency money.

David Messersmith, an architect for the Crockett project, earlier presented the board with line items of cuts from the original Crockett bid.

"In my opinion most of these items do not affect the quality of the construction — some do — but most do not," Messersmith said. "This school can still be bright and cheerful and safe. This has been a work in progress."

Earlier in October, district officials were stunned when the Crockett staff's wish list of renovation items received a low bid that was $800,000 over the MISD budget for the project.

MISD officials received some criticism for not doing a cost estimate after Crockett staff approached construction firms with their ideas for renovations.

Last week a school board subcommittee removed items that brought the Crockett bid down to about $100,000 above budget and made Crockett comparable to Lamar Elementary. Lamar, which was renovated in 1995, is a benchmark for MISD's renovations at 13 elementary schools through the year 2000.

One of the district's goals in its renovations is to have all classrooms be within an enclosed facility, rather than connected via outside walkways.

That's still the case with Crockett. But many items were pared from the original bid, including a security system and new sidewalks. The board opted to postpone replacement of old chillers, use alternate roof materials, and use stucco instead of face brick for the campus.

Couple's gift helps hospital to diagnose bone disease

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The generosity of a Midland couple, Frank and Sheila Thompson, is playing a vital role in diagnosing the debilitating bone-thinning disease osteoporosis at Scott & White Memorial Hospital and Clinic in Temple and environs.

Thompson, an independent oil operator who was Midland's mayor from 1958 to 1962, and his wife donated funds that enabled Scott & White to purchase a computerized portable scanner that allows physicians to detect bone density through advanced technology called X-ray absorptiometry or pDEXA at sites, such as health fairs, away from the main hospital and clinic.

The test detects osteoporosis.

"They gave (continued) life to a lot of people because we could diagnose (osteoporosis) early," and helped ensure "quality of life" for others, said Scott & White spokeswoman Patricia Benoit of the Thompson couple. "They were very helpful in helping to save lives."

By year's end, the portable pDEXA will have played a role in screening more than a thousand Central Texas people for osteoporosis at no cost to them.

"Scott & White would not have been able to offer free screening had it not been for the Thompson gift," Ms. Benoit said. "That's absolutely true. We had a need for a portable pDEXA machine," she said, and the Thompson couple "were extraordinarily generous."

Scott & White in 1991 installed a permanent, non-portable bone densitometer, which was equipped with updated software in 1993.

"We are very committed to health and wellness," Ms. Benoit said of the hospital.

The Thompson couple's $300,000 in gifts to Scott & White include funding of the annual Thompson Lectureship in Endocrinology, which was established in 1986. Former death row inmate Kerry Max Cook freed after 20 years

TYLER (AP) — Wearing a charcoal suit and carrying his possessions in three bags, former death row inmate Kerry Max Cook used his first moments of freedom in two decades Tuesday to hug his crying mother and thank his lawyer.

Cook, on death row most of the last 20 years for the murder of a Tyler secretary, was freed on $100,000 bond to await a fourth trial for the same crime.

"It's an out-of-body experience. It really is," Cook, 41, said.

His mother, Evelyn Cook, was equally elated.

"I'm walking on cloud nine. You don't have any idea," she said. "Now is the greatest time since he's been born."

Smith County prosecutors had asked Visiting State District Judge Robert Jones to increase the $100,000 bond set last week to $500,000.

"The bare facts of this case, regardless of any comparison with any other case, cry out for reconsideration of the amount and the terms and conditions of bond," prosecutor Edward Marty wrote in a nine-page motion.

A hearing on the motion to increase the bond was set for Nov. 21. In the meantime, Cook was allowed to post bond and leave Smith County Jail in the company of attorney Paul Nugent

Council weighs plan to fight gang graffiti

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

The Midland City Council is considering a pilot program to help area residents combat the growing problem of spray painted gang graffiti.

Incoming police chief John Urby addressed the council Tuesday with a proposal for a graffiti abatement program.

The program is designed to help salvage areas of the city that become inundated with gang activity, Urby said.

"It's like the broken window theory ... If you have one broken window and you don't repair it, you'll have two broken windows, then three broken windows. And then the neighborhood starts to deteriorate," Urby said.

History has shown that, locally, crimes such as assault begin to increase in frequency after a section of the city has been marked with gang graffiti, said

Council assures golfers surcharge funds will be used only for course

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A group of Midland golfers voiced concerns over plans for the future of Hogan Park at a Tuesday meeting of the Midland City Council.

It has been a goal for some time to add another nine holes to the Hogan Park facility, because the number of people making use of the municipal golf course warrants expanding it into a 36-hole course, according to Rick Menchaca, assistant city manager.

Some confusion was caused within the golfing community, however, when the city staff sent out requests for proposal (RFPs) to companies that might be interested in managing the pro shop and other retail parts of the golf course operation.

In exchange for a long-term lease for those services, city staff members are "fishing" to determine whether any company might be interested in building those extra nine holes or sharing the burden of their construction, according to Menchaca.

Some area golfers were troubled by that move, however, and asked the council what would become of money collected from golfers over the past two years as a $1 player facility charge on greens fees.

This surcharge has been collected as a way to offset some of the cost in the future when the city creates the new holes.

Council members assured golfers that the money would remain in a separate fund for use only at the golf course.

City staff also reiterated that no matter what comes of the RFPs, the council will still control the operation of the golf course, including fee schedules.

POLICE REPORTS

Child injured

A 7-year-old boy remained in critical condition at the Midland Memorial Hospital and Medical Center on Tuesday after sustaining serious injuries in a two-vehicle collision. Two other children, ages 3 and 5, were also at the hospital in satisfactory condition, officials said.

The accident, Texas Department of Public Safety officials said, occurred on Farm-To-Market Road 715 at about 7:30 a.m. The victims' names were not available at press time.

DPS officials said that the three children were passengers in a pickup driven by their mother. The woman, DPS troopers said, was taking the children to their grandmother's house. No citations were immediately issued, but troopers said the woman failed to yield a right of way. This information, troopers said, was listed in a report as a contributing factor.

Police said the pickup the children were in was struck on the passenger's side. The accident, officials said, will remain under investigation.

Obituary & Death Notice policy

There is no charge for death notices of residents or former residents of Midland or for those who have Midland relatives. We also publish death notices for residents of the surrounding West Texas area.

Free death notices include date and place of death, service and burial information, funeral home handling arrangements, date and place of birth, brief biography, survivors and memorials. A longer, more detailed obituary is available for a charge. It may include tributes, expanded biography, organizational associations, notes of appreciation, pallbearers, honorary pallbearers and a photo.

Deadline for both free death notices and paid obituaries is 4:30 p.m. and information must be either received from or verified by a funeral home.

COUNCIL: Nov. 14 declared to be 'Spirit of Christmas Day'

(From 1B)

Also at the council meeting, Mayor Bobby Burns presented a proclamation to volunteers with The Spirit of Christmas, an organization dedicated to finding gifts for those children most likely to go without on Christmas Day.

In the proclamation, Nov. 14 was set aside as The Spirit of Christmas Day in Midland.

The Spirit of Christmas is a nonprofit group in partnership with the Texas Department of Child Protective Services, which targets those Texas children most in need during the holiday season, according to TSOC Coordinator Julie Tounget.

Volunteers with the organization distribute "wish cards" to those children and work to raise funds for the gifts. This year's effort in Midland begins Thursday and continues through Dec. 13.

Proclamations also were presented for two other community-service efforts.

Nov. 18 was established as Permian Basin Philanthropy Day in association with the National Society of Fund Raising Executives.

In addition, a proclamation was presented to Don Hellinghausen in support of Hunger and Homeless Week. Hellinghausen was representing Habitat for Humanity and the St. Vincent DePaul Society.

Later in the meeting, the council approved on first reading an ordinance authorizing the last batch of Airport Revenue Bonds for the new airport terminal construction at the Midland International Airport.

Those short-term bonds have been issued in stages throughout the construction process of the $32 million terminal complex to cover lag periods between federal payments to the project, explained Glen Hackler, assistant city manager.

Those bonds are paid off with federal money and passenger facility charges. Because regular federal payments on the project have been larger than expected, this last set of bonds was reduced by $1.3 million to reflect lower interest accumulation, Hackler said. It had been anticipated that about $5 million in bonds would be issued at this time, but only $3.7 were needed.

During the Tuesday meeting, council members also voted to:

- approve a contract for $46,000 with Buena Vida Builders for the construction of restroom facilities outside the Scarborough Lineberry House. It is hoped by late spring that Midlanders can reserve the grounds of this historic home for outside events.
- accept a $67,200 grant from the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission for the local "Reduce, Reuse, Recycle" program. In a joint endeavor by the city of Midland, Keep Midland Beautiful and the Midland Independent School District, the funds will be used to advertise and promote recycling, educational materials and for the Christmas tree composting program.

GIFT: Thompsons' donation made free screenings possible

(From 1B)

Scott & White Division of Endocrinology and a professor with the Texas A&M University Health Science Center College of Medicine, noted that bone-mass loss was detected in about 40 percent of 900 women who were offered free pDEXA screenings thanks to the Thompson couple.

"With early detection of osteoporosis," Dr. Piziak said, "a patient can get help early to stop the deterioration and perhaps prevent fractures."

The Thompson couple's gift, which made the portable equipment and the free screenings available at health fairs and health-care events in Central Texas, has developed into an excellent 'birthday gift' during Scott & White's centennial this year.

While osteoporosis is more often identified with women than men, "Men lose bone mass, too, (though) not as quickly," Ms. Benoit said.

Dr. Piziak explained that "Osteoporosis occurs when bone mass declines to a universal 'fracture threshold' — the point at which bones may break if exposed to mild stress, such as coughing or picking up groceries."

The bone-thinning disease, she said, "may be the result of normal aging, or it can be related to some disease states or drug treatment."

The pDEXA X-ray screening takes about 20 minutes.

"The more X-rays that are absorbed by the bone, the denser the bone," Dr. Piziak said. "Therefore, the healthier the bone."

Ms. Benoit noted that Dr. Piziak has been "involved in a national study on a medication that can actually build back bone." Currently, that medication is undergoing Food and Drug Administration approval in stages.

At Scott & White, the physicians and staff, said Ms. Benoit, "want people healthy, and this (the pDEXA screening) is one way that we can keep them healthy and keep the quality of life."

GRAFFITI: Plan would cost about $33,500 to get started

(From 1B)

Chief of Police Richard Czech.

To combat this problem, members of the police department put together a proposal that would cost about $33,500 to get started for the first year.

This would include funding a civilian coordinator to oversee the project. This coordinator would organize the efforts of volunteer groups and probationers performing community service work as they remove graffiti, Urby explained. The coordinator also would work with community resources to secure funding or supplies, such as paint.

Also included in the startup cost would be the purchase of a "soda blaster," which is the latest technology in removing paint in an environmentally safe manner, Urby said.

The soda blaster uses high-pressure water laced with chemicals that assist in the paint removal, but require no cleanup afterwards, one police officer explained.

Cost for the soda blaster is estimated at $6,000 and it can be used to clean metal, masonry and some kinds of siding, but is not effective on wood.

For graffiti-covered wood, painting over the vandalism is still the best option, police officers said.

Response from the community has been "overwhelmingly" positive regarding such a program, and it is expected to be invaluable to people living in some parts of east and southwest Midland where people have removed graffiti so often that some are ready to give up, Urby said.

Also, Urby and Czech are willing to provide intense surveillance to those areas that are vandalized repeatedly. It is believed that dogged determination on the part of many home owners in gang-blighted areas has allowed them to outlast the graffiti vandals and keep their property free of these markings, Urby said.

In a few dwellings, however, the owners appear to be sympathetic to the gang markings and police are asking the council to pass an ordinance, as part of this program, making it against city code to allow gang graffiti to remain on property within the city limits.

Urby assured the council that such an ordinance would only be enforced on those homeowners who refuse to allow graffiti abatement workers to remove markings from their property.

"We don't want to victimize the victims," Urby said.

Assistant City Manager Glen Hackler also proposed funding the program for only a six-month test period for a cost of about $20,000.

City Council members will be considering the effort and may vote on the matter at the next City Council meeting on Nov. 25.

COOK: Court ruled that prosecutors hid evidence in third trial and Jim McCloskey, executive director of Centurion Ministries Inc.

Centurion Ministries, a Princeton, N.J.-based prisoner advocacy group that believes Cook was wrongly convicted, posted his bond.

"We have a lot of confidence in Kerry and his innocence," McCloskey said.

Cook's saga began in 1977, when 21-year-old Linda Jo Edwards was found beaten, stabbed and sexually mutilated in an apartment she shared with a friend.

A former bartender, Cook was convicted of capital murder and sentenced to death in 1978. He later received a reversal, and a 1991 retrial ended with a hung jury. A third trial in 1994 ended in Cook's conviction and another death sentence.

Last November, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals overturned Cook's conviction, ruling that prosecutors hid evidence. The U.S. Supreme Court last month let the reversal stand, clearing the way for a fourth trial tentatively scheduled for next fall.

Chief felony prosecutor David Dobbs said Tuesday he could not comment because of a gag order.

After his release, Cook briefly greeted Andrew Lee Mitchell, another former death row inmate from Tyler who spent 13 years on death row. Mitchell, who has been free on bond for four years while awaiting a new trial, said he wanted to offer support to Cook.

"I know how it is walking through those doors after all that time," Mitchell said.

Cook described his time on death row as "very traumatic. Very painful. A nightmare." But he says he's looking forward to spending time in Jacksonville with his family, eating a pizza with everything on it and getting to work. Without being specific, he said he has lined up a job that involves computers.

When asked how he could have kept up with the technology over the past 20 years, he noted, "I've been using a typewriter. I've been typing a lot of letters to my lawyers."

Warrant issued in slaying of quadruplet mother from San Antonio

'We want (Toro) to know that next to Texas, Florida is the second state in the nation in the execution of murderers.'
— Sarasota County sheriff Geoff Monge

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — A drifter was sought Tuesday by Texas Rangers and Florida law officers in the savage slaying of a San Antonio woman whose quadruplets were found crawling in her blood.

Jose Luis Del Toro Jr., 21, was named in an arrest warrant obtained by Sarasota County sheriff's officers in the death of Sheila Bellush, who herself was the target of a criminal investigation.

Del Toro is accused of first-degree murder in the warrant issued by a Sarasota, Fla., judge on Monday.

"We want Toro to know that we have the murder weapon and we have his fingerprint at the murder scene," Sarasota County sheriff Geoff Monge said. "We want him to know that next to Texas, Florida is the second state in the nation in the execution of murderers."

Sheriff's officers who believe Del Toro is in the San Antonio area requested assistance of police there and the Rangers in apprehending him, according to a prepared statement that accompanied release of the suspect's photograph.

Del Toro, whose last known address was La Pryor, Texas, was seen in Mrs. Bellush's neighborhood the day of the killing wearing camouflage clothing. He checked into a nearby Hampton Inn on Nov. 6, one day prior, under his own name, Monge said.

Authorities received 131 tips that eventually led police to check the tag number of a car registered to Del Toro spotted near the victim's home.

Mrs. Bellush, 35, was shot when she confronted the suspect as he entered the laundry room from the garage, officers said.

A 45.-caliber slug was found in the suspect's motel room after he fled to Texas, where the gun and more ammunition were later located by authorities.

The suspect bought clothes at a Sarasota store and later wore them during the attack, Florida authorities said.

Texas law officers recovered the vehicle the suspect allegedly used in his round-trip to Florida along with handwritten directions to the victim's street.

Also found in Texas were the clothing used in the slaying and an invoice along with the Sarasota motel receipt and items from the room.

"Del Toro is a drifter and known to stay in Austin, Texas and San Antonio, Texas," the Florida statement said, adding that he is currently in the San Antonio area.

Austin and San Antonio are about 70 miles apart in south-central Texas.

Florida law officers said their investigators have recovered the bullet that killed Mrs. Bellush and its casing. Police found Del Toro's fingerprints on a clothes dryer in her house.

The mother of six was accused in an Aug. 31 complaint by 12-year-old Daryl Blackthorne, Mrs. Bellush's daughter from a previous marriage. After running to a neighbor, Daryl said her mother accused her of lying and beat her with a belt, records show.

Mrs. Bellush's body was found Friday by 13-year-old daughter Stevie. Her four toddlers were unharmed, but covered in blood and strapped in life vests.

The abuse allegation by Daryl Blackthorne was the second in five months against Mrs. Bellush. The Bellush family had moved from San Antonio to Sarasota about two months ago.

In March, Stevie Blackthorne had gone to the same neighbor's house and said her mother was threatening to slap her for being disrespectful. Authorities who did not have enough evidence to pursue the initial allegation arrested Mrs. Bellush on a felony charge of injuring a child following Daryl's August complaint.

The child had five welts on her thigh, a red mark on her face and a scratch on her hand from when she tried to protect herself from the buckle, he said. But Child Protective Services found no evidence the injuries were caused by abuse.

Detectives headed to Texas this week to interview Mrs. Bellush's ex-husband, Allen Blackthorne, a San Antonio medical equipment manager, said Bexar County sheriff's detective Bill Spaulding.

Blackthorne's lawyer, a prominent San Antonio defense attorney, said Florida police told him his client was not a suspect.

"He is as shocked and surprised as anyone else by what happened," said lawyer Roy Barrera Jr.

After Mrs. Bellush and Blackthorne divorced in 1988, she took custody of their two children. Blackthorne gave up parental rights to his daughters several months ago.

The quadruplets wore life jackets, perhaps because their mother was preparing them for a swim in the family's backyard pool. But authorities said it was possible the killer outfitted them to make sure they didn't wander into trouble.

CPS worker says she was demoted for taking child from lesbian pair

DALLAS (AP) — A Child Protective Services employee has filed a grievance with the agency, saying she was demoted from her job as a supervisor for removing a foster child from the home of a lesbian couple.

In the grievance, Rebecca Bledsoe said she told caseworkers to remove the infant boy because "homosexual conduct is against the law in Texas."

Rebecca Bledsoe said she told caseworkers to remove the infant boy because 'homosexual conduct is against the law in Texas.'

"Just as you wouldn't put a child into a family where there were known shoplifters or worse, you shouldn't put them into a place where they are expressly violating the law," said Ms. Bledsoe's attorney, Roger Evans.

A Texas law, which has been challenged, makes "homosexual conduct" a Class C misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $500.

In addition, Ms. Bledsoe, a 10-year employee, has threatened to sue the agency if it doesn't change its practice of allowing children to be placed with gay and lesbian couples.

Linda Edwards, a spokeswoman for the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services in Austin, said there is no policy to prohibit the agency from placing children with single gays or lesbians who are licensed foster parents.

"What we look for when we evaluate potential foster or adoptive parents is their ability to protect, to nurture and parent a child. That's our primary criteria," Ms. Edwards said.

Ms. Bledsoe claims she was sanctioned for going against CPS support of "gay culture" and alleged that some CPS supervisors are biased because of their own sexual orientation.

The demoted CPS employee also questioned the practicality of placing a black infant boy with two white lesbian caretakers, Evans said.

"The idea of having homosexual conduct modeled for a boy as he grows up, she didn't think was the best thing," he said.

Ms. Edwards said Ms. Bledsoe's supervisors did not agree with her assessment of the situation. She said they demoted Ms. Bledsoe not over philosophical disagreements but because she failed to follow the rules in abruptly moving the infant to another foster home.

"She's been reassigned with no change in pay because she violated policies regarding the procedures that must be followed when you move a child from a home," Ms. Edwards said.

"These procedures are set up to prevent a child from suffering emotionally, as can often happen when they're moved from one place to another."

The baby boy, who was removed from the home in August, was returned to the two women soon after Ms. Bledsoe's decision was overruled, she said. The couple got a favorable report during a home study. It was noted that the woman licensed to be a foster parent works as a child-care teacher.

The lesbian couple intends to adopt the baby, though technically only one of the women can be the legal parent because Texas law forbids unmarried couples from adopting children, Ms. Edwards said.

BID: Opponents say they hoped Crockett would be like new schools

(From 1B)

"It doesn't affect any of the amenities," said Wilson Heidelberg, MISD construction manager. "Any of the air conditioners can be easily replaced should they become inoperable."

The board decided to go over budget to allow every classroom to have its own air conditioning unit, instead of assigning two to a unit as suggested. The item increased the cost overrun by $65,000.

The district will make up the cost overrun by using money out of $400,000 in construction bond interest funds.

The bond interest is normally used at the end of a bond project as a contingency fund to deal with any surprises.

Four people voiced their opposition to the series of cuts, including Manuel Lujan, who has a child at Crockett.

Lujan told board members that he took issue with the word 'comparable.' He said it should be a case of equal facilities and wants to see Crockett be similar to newer MISD schools like Abell Junior High or Greathouse Elementary.

"We believe we should receive equal benefits from our tax dollars and not comparable benefits," Lujan said. "It is clear in reviewing these cuts that it would result in a campus inferior to others. I urge the board to abandon this course of action."

Dr. Viola Coleman told the board that she wasn't aware that Lamar Elementary was the benchmark when she voted for the bond package in the spring.

'I understood that we were going to bring these schools up to the level of our latest schools. I didn't know Lamar was the benchmark.'
— Viola Coleman

"I understood that we were going to bring these schools up to the level of our latest schools," Ms. Coleman said. "I didn't know Lamar was the benchmark."

Rose Romero attended Crockett in her youth and said she wants her daughter to go to a first-rate facility like the new MISD schools.

"I want to understand the cuts being made, but we're not happy," Ms. Romero said. "I want to have the same school that everyone else has. I didn't know I was voting for Lamar.

"We don't want cuts. Don't use us as guinea pigs. We want a school to be proud of."

Member Martha Mims Manulik responded to Ms. Romero's comments.

"We cannot change the outside of the school so that it will look the same as Greathouse," Ms. Manulik said. "We tried to get more. We can't get a Rolls Royce roof. We're going to get a Chevrolet roof."

Kelly Sokolowski followed with his own objections.

"In not doing a cost estimate on something as important as this...to me that's pretty shabby," Sokolowski said. "People don't do their arithmetic, then we get the shaft end of the deal because we're on the east side. We've accomplished nothing after spending $2.4 million."

Ms. Manulik again defended the district's actions.

"We tried to push the envelope and get more, but we don't have money," Ms. Manulik said. "We're doing the best we can. We're trying to do the best we can for what the citizens have given us."

Fuller said the cuts will disappoint the Crockett staff and expressed his frustration with the budgetary constraints.

"The community doesn't want anything but the bare necessities," he said. "That doesn't make sense to me."

Member Glen Bufler remembered the days when he went to a crude rural schoolhouse and said he received a good education.

"I think the basics of education comes with what we teach and not where we teach. Let's not confuse the issues here," he said.

In other business, district officials released their fall enrollment report by race by school, which formerly was required by the federal government.

Among the numbers from 1997, throughout MISD about 52 percent of students are white, 37 percent are Hispanic and 10 percent are black. MISD has about 22,600 students this year.

Larry Lusby, executive director of pupil services, told the board that the Hispanic enrollment continued to grow about one percent annually while the white student population continues to decline slightly.

"Our student population continues to grow, although the growth has slowed down since the early 1990s," Lusby said.

The board also welcomed Gary Doherty to the district. Dohery will be Midland High School's new band director beginning in January.

David Boyce
Master Engraver

DAVID BOYCE
MASTER ENGRAVER

In 1986, David began his career as a wedge cutter with Waterford Crystal. After a five year apprenticeship with regular practical examinations and the cutting of a qualifying bowl, David was deemed a fully qualified cutter in 1991. In 1993, David joined the Engraving Department.

Engraving is a difficult skill that requires great patience. The engraver draws an outline of his subject in a clear portion of the crystal, marking the area of the deepest cuts. These will be the most prominent elements of the subject. Resting the piece on his fingetips, he uses a small engraving wheel to make the cuts, then lightly polishes the area for contrast. The engraving's frosted appearance comes from the cutting effect of the paste composed of carborundum powder and linseed oil that is continuously applied to the wheel.

Over the years, David has engraved many cycling, golf and tennis trophies and has worked on engraved portraits of numerous famous people. He has also engraved pieces for Waterford's Studio Line Collections.

David's hobbies include squash, swimming and rowing. He resides at Ashley Court with his wife Sandra.

Jackie's death opened agents lips, author says

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Long-silent Secret Service agents from the Kennedy White House only detailed the president's extramarital affairs after the 1994 death of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, the author of a new book on JFK said Tuesday.

Pulitzer Prize-winner Seymour Hersh, author of the controversial "The Dark Side of Camelot," said the Mrs. Onassis' death "freed up the Secret Service. ... I think a lot of those people had a lot of respect for her. They felt sorry for her."

Four agents agreed to speak with Hersh on the record in 1995 — months after Mrs. Onassis' death on May 19, 1994. They described a bacchanalian merry-go-round of hookers and Hollywood starlets — a White House of ill repute.

Very few of the book's tales are unattributed; the book includes 17 pages of chapter notes detailing who was interviewed and when.

"I wouldn't write this stuff if I didn't have sources on the record," Hersh said.

As to charges that he started the project intent on Kennedy-bashing, he responds, "Yes, it's negative. Yes, it sells. Did I go in thinking I'd write this? No way. I thought I'd write my usual book on foreign policy, and maybe it would sell a little more because it was Kennedy."

Hersh, winner of the 1970 Pulitzer for international reporting, wrote the first account of the My Lai massacre while a freelance reporter in South Vietnam. He has written a half-dozen books, including the award-winning "The Price of Power: Kissinger in the Nixon White House."

Hersh said this book has moved people to attack his credibility.

Arthur Schlesinger, the historian and former Kennedy aide, said earlier this week that "Hersh's capacity to exaggerate is unparalleled."

Some of the criticisms stem from the fact that Hersh was forced to delete a chapter claiming Kennedy had paid actress Marilyn Monroe to keep quiet about their alleged affair. It was discovered that papers supporting the claim were fake.

Still, Hersh stands by his book and said it is exactly what its title promised: a previously unseen report on the flip side of Kennedy's all-too-brief presidency.

"I'm not entitling this book 'The Life and Times of John F. Kennedy' or 'The History of John F. Kennedy.' It's 'The Dark Side of John F. Kennedy.'" Hersh said. "There's no false advertising. You can criticize me for anything I write, but I'm not misrepresenting what I'm doing."

Papers incriminate Clinton, McDougal says

■ Whitewater figure James McDougal claims a recently discovered check contradicts Clinton's previous sworn testimony.

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Imprisoned Whitewater figure James McDougal claims a recently discovered 1982 cashier's check payable to Bill Clinton was a loan from McDougal's S&L and that the two men agreed to conceal the transaction.

Clinton has testified under oath that he never got a loan from the institution. McDougal says the cashier's check and other newfound documents contradict Clinton and provide a major break for Whitewater prosecutors.

"They're going to hang them with the documents that they got," McDougal said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. "It certainly proves the chief executive perjured himself when he said he never obtained a loan from Madison Guaranty."

President and Mrs. Clinton's Whitewater lawyer, David Kendall, said McDougal cannot be believed because he keeps changing his account of Whitewater.

McDougal, who defended Clinton before deciding to cooperate with Whitewater investigators following his conviction on 18 felony counts, leveled his latest allegations against his old Arkansas friend Monday from a federal prison medical center in Fort Worth, Texas.

A 1982 cashier's check payable to Clinton for $27,600 was among thousands of pages of long-missing documents from McDougal's savings and loan discovered last March in a tornado-damaged car abandoned nearly a decade ago near Little Rock.

The check wasn't endorsed by Clinton, who testified last year that he never borrowed from McDougal's thrift.

McDougal said the cashier's check represented the proceeds of a loan to Clinton from McDougal's Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan and was used to pay off a Whitewater debt at the other financial institution McDougal owned, Madison Bank & Trust.

McDougal said that "Clinton and I had gotten worried about having his name on the loan" for $27,600, and so the obligation was moved out of Clinton's name.

According to McDougal, the loan to Clinton was repaid by someone other than him or Clinton. The repayment, said McDougal, was followed by a series of related transactions culminating in a fraudulent federally backed loan for $300,000 that was the focus of last year's Whitewater trial. A jury convicted McDougal, ex-wife Susan and then-Gov. Jim Guy Tucker.

"Mr. McDougal has never told this story before, no loan documents support it and it is flatly contradicted by the contemporary bookkeeping entry of his own accountant," the president's lawyer, Kendall, said Tuesday. "Given his own previous testimony under oath and his present circumstances, Mr. McDougal is hardly a paragon of credibility."

McDougal said the material found in the car "backs up everything I've been telling them."

Deborah Gershman, a spokeswoman for Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr's office, declined to comment.

Asked about the Clintons' consistent contention that they were passive investors in the Whitewater land venture, McDougal replied: "I've never known the Clintons to be passive about anything."

During the interview, which McDougal abruptly ended after about 20 minutes, he also complained he had been harassed and punished after the documents found in the car trunk were first disclosed by the news media Thursday.

Baby discovered in coffee can; young mother charged

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A 19-year-old woman was accused Tuesday of drowning her newborn baby in a toilet and hiding the body in a coffee can under a bathroom sink.

Marianne Biancuzzo was charged with murder and child abuse.

"We theorize, at this point in the investigation, that she just didn't want to be bothered with having a baby," Detective Lt. Richard Middleton said. He said the community college student planned on burying the baby in the back yard.

Her lawyer insisted the baby was stillborn or died soon after birth.

Ms. Biancuzzo was nine months' pregnant when she gave birth about noon Saturday in her home, Middleton said.

She drowned the girl in the toilet, placed a plastic bag around its head, wrapped the body in a flannel shirt and put it in a 3-pound coffee can inside a cabinet under the bathroom sink, police said.

Ms. Biancuzzo's 15-year-old brother found the body when he went to take a shower the next morning.

Preliminary autopsy results show the baby died from drowning or suffocation, Middleton said.

Defense attorney Jesse Smith said Ms. Biancuzzo did not know for sure she was pregnant and believed the baby was born dead.

"She and her family have faith that she will be vindicated when the facts and circumstances are known," Smith said.

Fast-track failure slows two major trade deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unable to bend Congress on trade, President Clinton has limited maneuvering room as he prepares for a meeting with some of America's most important trading partners just two weeks from now.

The president is depicting his withdrawal of the fast-track trade legislation as a temporary setback. But behind the scenes, administration officials and free-trade supporters in Congress have begun exploring fallback positions for a more narrowly focused trade bill next year.

The Senate Finance Committee chairman, Sen. William Roth, R-Del., said he would introduce a fast-track proposal focusing on specific sectors in which America has huge competitive advantages — such as agriculture and information technology — as an alternative to the sweeping negotiating powers that Clinton was unable to get this week.

But some trade experts see dangers in this stripped-down approach.

"Clinton has got to keep doing what he has started doing, making it absolutely clear that he is going to pull out all of the stops next year," said C. Fred Bergsten, director of the Institute for International Economics in Washington. "He has to leave no doubts about that or otherwise there could be severe repercussions to the cause of free trade."

In a news conference Monday, Clinton said "all we need is a few breaks to have more than enough votes" to pass the fast-track measure, which grants him the authority to negotiate trade agreements that Congress must approve on yes-or-no votes without amendments.

He told reporters he will bring the matter up again next year and expects to win over the House support that eluded him, a view he will emphasize in Vancouver, British Columbia, at a meeting with the 18-nation Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation forum Nov. 24-25.

The president's outward optimism, however, cannot hide the fact that his failure to win fast-track authority puts in jeopardy the main reason APEC leaders meet every year — to create a free-trade area in the Pacific by 2010.

Also in jeopardy is Clinton's ambitious effort to create a free-trade area covering the Western Hemisphere by 2005. Clinton is scheduled to go to Santiago, Chile, in April for what was supposed to be the kickoff negotiating session for the free-trade agreement of the Americas.

Without fast track, Clinton cannot proceed with either of these big negotiations — which were at the heart of his economic agenda for a second term.

That doesn't mean the United States will be totally on the sidelines in trade negotiations. Clinton does have authority to complete some negotiations that had been begun under the Uruguay Round, the last comprehensive global trade talks.

That authority allowed Clinton to complete the Information Technology Agreement last year to eliminate tariffs on $600 billion of computers and other high-tech products. The United States was also able to wrap up a telecommunications deal aimed at giving a boost to America's highly competitive telephone companies.

While the residual negotiating authority covers a few other areas such as chemicals and forest products, it doesn't cover an important set of negotiations on agriculture, services outside of the financial area and government contracts that are scheduled to get under way in 1999 in Geneva.

Without fast track, the administration is likely to concentrate in Vancouver on getting Asian nations to sign onto a deal to lower barriers in financial services, negotiations that so far have made little progress despite a mid-December deadline.

But the United States had also planned in Vancouver to push for tariff cuts in a number of other sectors including environmental products, energy technology and automobiles as a way of jump-starting the effort to achieve overall Pacific free trade among industrialized nations by 2010.

However, Asian countries may now be reluctant to proceed down this path, fearing that Congress would be able to pick apart any deals the administration negotiates.

Economists, who almost universally support the elimination of trade barriers as a way to promote economic growth, worried that the biggest danger in Clinton's failure to win fast track this week may come in the signal it sends to countries where protectionist forces are fighting even harder to derail globalization.

"This sends a terrible message to the world at a time when there are a lot of market uncertainties," said Robert Hormats, vice president at Goldman Sachs in New York. "What does this say to other countries with weaker economies and weaker currencies when the strongest economy in the world is pulling away from its global responsibilities?"

Wild horses, burros die in cold weather

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal investigators are heading to Elm Creek, Neb., this week to try to figure out why dozens of captured wild horses and burros awaiting adoption are dying.

"It's just unacceptable to me that we have the stewardship of these horses, and then we're letting them die," said Pat Shea, who was sworn in as director of the Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management on Oct. 2.

Two weeks ago, during a severe snowstorm, 17 burros and a horse suffocated under a snowdrift. Another 14 horses have died during the past month from strangles, a bacterial respiratory infection with coldlike symptoms.

The BLM operates a holding facility in Elm Creek as a rest stop for about 5,000 wild horses and burros captured in the West each year and trucked to Eastern and Southern states for adoption.

The deaths come just four months after a team of veterinarians reported that 70 percent of the horses at the facility showed some sign of strangles.

The team made a series of recommendations: Haul manure away more often; build sick pens and segregate horses with contagious illnesses; spread hay out on the ground so horses don't cluster at a feeder while they eat; call veterinarians when animals are sick; examine animals that die; and keep health records on all the animals.

"If those recommendations had been taken, it looks as if this would not have happened," said Shea.

An internal BLM report shows there are 793 horses and burros at the facility, 193 more than it was designed to hold. Of those, more than 60 animals are sick; 32 have died, according to the report.

Shea said his special assistant, Henri Bisson, and a veterinarian were flying to Nebraska on Tuesday and will evaluate management of the facility.

"If what they find is not to our liking we will make some changes," said Shea.

Staff at the facility did not return calls Tuesday. A local veterinarian, Dr. Barry Littell, said: "They're doing the best they can."

Kaczynski's mind the focus of Unabomber trial

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The centerpiece of the Unabomber trial will be the mind of Theodore Kaczynski, the brilliant boy who turned into a technology-hating hermit embittered against everything from planes to pay phones.

With a mountain of evidence found in his Montana cabin pointing to him as the Unabomber, the trial that begins with jury selection Wednesday will focus on whether Kaczynski was a man with a "mental defect," not responsible for his actions, or prove that he's a rational, cold-blooded killer.

Kaczynski's own letters and journals provide the raw material for both sides.

One item, a letter in which Kaczynski wrote, "I can't wait until you die so I can spit on your corpse," suggests that the veneer of a socially concerned vigilante could well have masked childhood hatreds looking for an outlet, said Dr. Eugene Schoenfeld, a psychiatrist and forensic consultant.

"There's a lot rage building up in this guy," he said. "And people will rationalize anger and violence through a cause — a greater good that justifies destruction and murder."

In the Sacramento case, Kaczynski is charged with bombings that killed two and maimed two. Separately in New Jersey, he's charged in one death.

In all, the government claims Kaczynski is behind 16 bombings that killed three people and injured 23 over 18 years.

No longer the scruffy, wide-eyed mountain man arrested in April 1996, Kaczynski now appears in court wearing a tweed sports jacket with his hair and beard trimmed, looking every bit the professor he once was.

That courtroom image is more in keeping with the bright young boy whose mother read him Scientific American on their porch in Evergreen Park, Ill. But his mother, Wanda, has said she believes her son's problems began shortly after his birth.

At 9 months, Kaczynski was hospitalized with a drug reaction. He was forcibly pinned to a bed for a week, and lay virtually untouched by human hands. His mother says Kaczynski came home listless, and believes her son was never the same.

Cameraman Scott King, left, and reporter Mike Emmanuel of Fox Television in Los Angeles perform a live shot in front of the Federal Courthouse in Sacramento, Calif., Tuesday. The trial of Unabomber suspect Theodore Kaczynski is scheduled to begin today.

But otherwise, Kaczynski the child showed few signs of developing into an angry loner. Acquaintances said he laughed and joked, played in the band and did so well in school he wound up skipping two grades. As he grew older, though, Kaczynski seemed increasingly immature compared to his classmates.

After high school, the brilliant student left home for Harvard University. There he acquired a reputation as a loner with poor hygiene who debated environmental issues long before the subject became fashionable.

Kaczynski went on to the University of Michigan for his postgraduate degrees, awing his professors but making few connections with other students. It was much the same in 1967 when he took his first teaching post in the mathematics department of the University of California-Berkeley.

He spurned his fellow professors' beer-and-pizza outings, and also resisted the political and social maelstrom of the late 1960s, although the anti-technology and environmental themes shouted in Sproul Plaza would be echoed in the Unabomber's manifesto three decades later.

But by 1969, society had become too much for Kaczynski. He quit Berkeley without explanation, and blamed his parents for his social ineptitude, bitterly criticizing them in letters home.

He later bought land with his brother in Montana, and worked odd jobs while building his cabin with only a single window to provide outside light.

In 1978 — the year the Unabomber began his attacks — Kaczynski returned to the Chicago area. He said he wanted to reconcile with his family. But the diaries found in his cabin give a darker explanation.

"I came back to the Chicago area in May, mainly for one reason: So that I could more safely attempt to murder a scientist, businessman, or the like," he wrote. He left Chicago for good after his brother was forced to fire him from the factory where they worked for harassing a woman he briefly dated.

Prosecutors would like to use evidence in the trial to show that Kaczynski treasured his Montana solitude so much that he resorted to violence, trashing a neighbors' cabin after one dispute, and stringing wire across trails to injure dirt bikers.

In other words, they say, the quiet nature lover had a penchant for violence.

But the librarian and many other neighbors in Lincoln, Mont., remember a quiet, pleasant, bookish man whose back-to-nature philosophy was common in their mountain community. And maybe in a lonely man.

Rather signs new deal to continue with CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — With his evening news emerging from the ratings basement, Dan Rather has decided to stick with CBS, ending a flirtation with CNN.

The 66-year-old newsman signed a contract extension that will keep him at the network through 2002 and pay him a minimum of $5 million to $6 million per year. He has anchored the "CBS Evening News" since Walter Cronkite retired in 1981.

"I expect to be anchoring for quite a while," Rather said Tuesday.

His contract extension coincided with the news that his broadcast tied ABC's "World News Tonight" for second place in the ratings last week.

Rather declined to provide details of his deal, which extends a contract due to end in 1999. Overtures from CNN to anchor a nightly newscast were "very serious," he said.

"I would be proud to work for CNN any time, any place on just about anything, partly because they've made a home for so many distinguished people in news that I admire," Rather said.

Rather's decision comes at a time when CBS posted its best evening news ratings against ABC in more than five years.

> 'We now have a situation where enough of the audience has noticed and moved toward us to give us some momentum.'
> — Dan Rather, CBS newsman

Rather credits the rise to a decision two years ago to make the network broadcast more hard news-oriented and resist the temptation to "sleaze it up, dumb it down and make it, at the very best, a sort of crossbreed of an entertainment program."

"We now have a situation where enough of the audience has noticed and moved toward us to give us some momentum," Rather said.

CBS News President Andrew Heyward was pleased to be holding on to his longtime anchorman: "He's obviously the heart and soul of our organization, and he is enjoying some well-deserved success."

Until about a year ago, ABC's "World News Tonight," was the longtime champ in evening news ratings.

But "NBC Nightly News" has succeeded with a magazine-type approach that emphasizes longer stories, while ABC has floundered with a more featurish approach.

As it stands, NBC had an average of 11.9 million viewers last week, CBS had 11.1 million and ABC 10.9 million, according to Nielsen Media Research.

How do I fry the turkey?

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Lifestyle Editor

"You know that story you had in the paper this time last year about the Midland man who fried his Thanksgiving turkey?"

"Are you going to run that recipe again this year for fried turkey?"

"What kind of oil do you use to fry a turkey? I think I saw it in your food section last year."

The countdown has begun. In little more than 2 weeks it will be time to get out the roasting pans and start cooking those turkeys. But some Midlanders are ready for something new — adding some zing to the traditional holiday bird with Cajun spices, or deep-fat frying it in peanut oil, instead of roasting.

Specifically, local cooks have been calling for a recipe that was published in the Reporter-Telegram's "What's Cooking?" section Nov. 11, 1996. In that article we reported on Midlander Greg Ewbank, who was raised in Louisiana and made a mean Cajun-flavored fried turkey. Readers have been calling for Ewbank's recipe, which was also published in the 1996 St. Ann's Cajun Cook-Off cookbook. Since it required so much peanut oil, Ewbank said he would make the turkey frying an event by cooking up to 12 turkeys for friends. Frying turkeys was something his mother always encouraged. "My mother liked it because it got all the men out of the house so she could cook the other stuff for Thanksgiving," Ewbank said.

Ewbank wasn't too surprised to hear that people were requesting his recipe again this year. "People really seem to love it. Our list keeps getting bigger and bigger. We will be frying the turkeys again Thanksgiving and Christmas, about 12 each time," the cook said, noting he hosts an open house for the events.

Every fried turkey recipe we've found suggests using peanut oil. Most suggest taking great caution in loading turkey into the fryer as hot oil can shoot up through the cavity.

Since so much oil is required, groups of people often get together to fry turkeys for more than one family. According to the National Turkey Federation, this has made fried turkey especially popular for block parties, summer barbecues and holiday church dinners.

To fry a turkey you will need a 40 to 60-quart pot with a basket, burner and propane gas tank, a candy thermometer to measure oil temperature and a meat thermometer to determine doneness of turkey. For added safety, have a fire extinguisher and pot holders nearby. To add flavor with different marinades and seasonings, you may want to purchase an injector.

It's recommended to fry the turkeys outdoors. (Ewbanks said he does all of his frying outdoors, also). Place the fryer on a level dirt or grassy area. Do not fry the turkey indoors, in a garage or in any structure attached to a building. Avoid frying on wooden decks which could catch fire if oil splashes. Note that concrete can be stained by oil.

For each 8 to 10 pounds of turkey, you will need about 5 gallons of peanut oil. To determine amount of oil needed, place the turkey in the fry basket and place in pot. Add water until it reaches 1 to 2 inches above the turkey. Remove turkey and note the water level, using a ruler to measure the distance from the top of the pot to the surface of the water. Pour out the water and dry pot thoroughly before adding oil.

Do not stuff turkeys to be fried, and don't leave the frying turkeys unattended. Other than that, the fries the limit.

GREG'S FRIED TURKEY

1 thawed 12-pound turkey
35 pounds of peanut oil
2 tablespoons of liquid crab boil
1 cup white wine
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1/4 teaspoon black pepper
Tony's Creole Seasoning
60-quart stock pot with fry basket or a cotton rope to tie turkey
Baster/injector

On an outside butane burner system, heat peanut oil to 350 degrees. While oil is heating, clean turkey cavity. Mix crab boil, wine, garlic powder, black pepper and 1/2 teaspoon Creole seasoning. Use an injector to inject liquid

I need a unique turkey leftover alternative

There's the traditional turkey dinner, and the traditional day-after turkey sandwich.

"But after that, I don't want to hear: 'Oh, no, turkey again,' " said one Midland cook. "I want a turkey leftover recipe as far removed as you can get from a turkey sandwich. I can't face turkey sitting in aluminum foil all week."

The best advice, offered by Butterball's Turkey Talk Hotline, is don't go overboard when selecting a turkey. Purchase at least one pound of uncooked turkey per person to ensure enough for the feast and some leftovers. (Some folks don't consider it Thanksgiving without anticipating at least one turkey sandwich).

After that, turkey can be reserved and disguised in various recipes. Shredded, cooked turkey can be used in quesadillas; diced turkey and fill quiches or top mini-pizzas.

As a side dish or appetizer, turkey can be served in Mexican Turkey Meatballs. The meatballs are rolled in crushed tortilla chips and dipped in salsa. With Tapas, tiny appetizers served in Spain, being all the rage, try Tomato, Artichoke and Turkey Tapas. They can be made with sun-dried tomatoes or cherry tomatoes.

With fusion and Thai cooking still gaining in popularity, try grilling leftover turkey on skewers and serving in a spicy peanut sauce.

Appetizers are a great way to use leftover cooked turkey. Here turkey, served in Tomato, Artichoke, Turkey Tapas is far removed from the traditional turkey sandwich.

TOMATO, ARTICHOKE & TURKEY TAPAS

1 pound turkey breast meat or turkey tenderloins cut into 3/4-inch medallions
2 teaspoons olive oil
6-ounce jar marinated artichoke hearts, drained, cut in half, juices reserved
2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
1/4 teaspoon oregano
1/4 teaspoon red pepper flakes
1 large garlic clove, minced
1/4 cup sun-dried tomatoes

Snip ends of tomatoes and soak in boiling water for 2 minutes until reconstituted, drain

In large non-stick skillet over medium heat, saute turkey in oil for 4 minutes per side or until turkey is golden brown and meat is no longer pink in center.

In medium bowl, combine artichoke juice, vinegar, oregano, pepper flakes, green onion and garlic.

Fold turkey, artichokes and tomatoes into mixture.

Turkey Satay with Peanut Sauce features grilled strips of turkey that were flattened with a meat mallet and marinated in a spicy ginger/coconut-flavored sauce

TURKEY SATAY WITH PEANUT SAUCE

1 pound turkey breast meat or turkey tenderloins
3 tablespoons skim milk
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 teaspoon reduced-sodium soy sauce
1 tablespoon dried onion
1/2 teaspoon red pepper flakes
1/2 teaspoon lemon rind zest
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
1/8 teaspoon coconut extract
Vegetable cooking spray
Bamboo skewers

Cut turkey in half lengthwise and place between 12-inch pieces of wax paper. Using a meat mallet, flatten each turkey half and cut into 1-inch wide strips.

In self-closing, plastic freezer bag, combine milk, oil, soy sauce, onion, pepper flakes, lemon zest, ginger and coconut extract. Add turkey strips and seal bag. Refrigerate at least four hours, turning bag to coat strips.

Remove grill rack from grill and lightly coat with vegetable cooking spray; set aside. Prepare grill for direct heating.

Soak bamboo skewers in water for 15 minutes. Weave turkey strips onto skewers. Discard marinade. Position grill rack over hot coals. Grill turkey 2 to 3 minutes per side or until turkey is no longer pink in center. Serve with Peanut Sauce.

PEANUT SAUCE:
1 small garlic clove
1 tablespoon onion, chopped
1/4 cup creamy peanut butter
1-1/2 teaspoons lime juice
1/4 teaspoon reduced sodium soy sauce
1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper
1/4 cup skim milk
Dash coconut extract

In food processor, combine garlic and onion. Process 10 seconds or until chopped. Add peanut butter, lemon juice, soy sauce, cayenne pepper and coconut extract. Process 20 seconds or until blended. With motor running, slowly add milk through processor feeder tube. Process sauce until smooth and well blended, scraping sides often.

In small bowl, heat sauce in microwave on high 20 to 30 seconds or until thickened.

MEXICAN TURKEY MEATBALLS

1 pound ground turkey
1 egg, beaten
2 garlic cloves, minced
1/4 cup onion, finely chopped
1/4 cup dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon chili powder
1/2 teaspoon cumin
4 ounces tortilla chips, finely crushed
3/4 cup non-fat sour cream
1/2 cup salsa
Vegetable cooking spray

In medium bowl, combine turkey, egg, garlic, onion, bread crumbs, chili powder and cumin. Shape into approximately 36 (3/4-inch) balls.

Place crushed tortilla chips on plate. Roll each meatball in chips, coating thoroughly. Lightly coat baking pan (10x15-inch) with vegetable cooking spray and arrange meatballs. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes or until meat is no longer pink in center. In small bowl, combine sour cream and salsa. Use as dip for meatballs.

Stuffing a sensational side dish

Staff Reports

It's that time of year to think about side dishes for Thanksgiving dinner. While some families have "tried and true" recipes for turkey, ham and brisket, some cooks are willing to experiment with new side dishes and stuffing recipes.

Some cooks spend hours cooking turkey giblets and fussing with complicated stuffing recipes. If you want and irresistible blend of apple, pecans and sauteed onions — without all the fuss — then consider Apple Sausage Stuffing. It is made with apple pie filling which saves chopping and cooking apple slices.

The tasty stuffing is such a pleaser, it's likely to be served at other times of the year, than just the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

For the more adventurous, Chefs at the Culinary Institute of America suggest these two other taste-sensational stuffings: Chestnut and Raisin, or Oyster and Spinach.

For safety's sake, and to make sure that both the turkey and stuffing are done at the same time, the CIA recommends separate cooking of the stuffing and the turkey. For moistness and flavor, baste the stuffing with chicken broth from time to time.

The Oyster and Spinach, and Chestnut and Raisin recipes are taken from "An American Bounty" (Rizzoli, 1995), a cookbook inspired by the American Bounty Restaurant located on the campus of the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, N.Y.

Apple Sausage Stuffing is made easily with apple pie filling, sauteed onions, celery and pecans.

APPLE SAUSAGE STUFFING

1 pound pork sausage
1/4 cup butter or margarine
1-1/2 cups chopped onion
1 cup sliced celery
1 can (21 ounces) of apple pie filling or apple cranberry pie filling
1 can chicken broth
1/2 cup minced fresh parsley
1 package (14 ounces) herb seasoned stuffing cubes
1/2 cup chopped pecans (optional)

In a large skillet, brown sausage, drain. Add butter, onion and celery; saute 2-3 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Stir in pie filling, broth and parsley. In a large bowl, combine stuffing cubes, pecans and apple mixture.

Place in a 13x9x2 baking dish. Bake uncovered at 325 degrees for 40 minutes.

Makes 10-12 servings.

For an easy dessert with apple pie filling, try Apple Cinnamon Cake.

APPLE CINNAMON CAKE

1 package (18.25 ounces) spice or yellow cake mix
1 can apple or peach pill filling
3 eggs
3 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Blend together cake mix, pie filling and eggs in large mixer bowl. Beat at medium speed 2 minutes.

Combine sugar and cinnamon. Spread half of the batter in greased 13x9 pan; sprinkle with half the cinnamon-sugar. Repeat with remaining batter and cinnamon-sugar. Bake 30-35 minutes, until wooden pick inserted in center of cake comes out clean. Cool.

Makes 12 servings.

Recipes from Homemaker Schools.

CHESTNUT AND RAISIN STUFFING

6 cups cubed white bread
6 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup finely diced celery
1/2 cup finely diced onion
2 cups coarsely chopped, peeled chestnuts
1 cup raisins, plumped in brandy
1/4 cup brandy
Chicken broth, as needed
Salt, to taste
Freshly ground black pepper, to taste

Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Place the bread cubes on a baking sheet and toast lightly, 10 to 12 minutes. The bread should be slightly dry, but not browned. Transfer the toasted cubes to a large mixing bowl.

Melt the butter in a large skillet over medium heat. Add the celery and onion. Saute, stirring frequently, until tender, about 10 minutes.

Add the chestnuts; saute for 2 more minutes. Add the raisins and the 1/4 cup brandy. Saute for about 1 minute, to evaporate the brandy.

Add the chestnut mixture to the bread cubes; toss to combine. If necessary, moisten the stuffing with chicken broth. The mixture should be moist enough to hold together when lightly pressed, but not so moist that it packs tightly. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Makes about 8 cups.

PREPARATION NOTES: Peeled and frozen chestnuts, if available in your supermarket, will greatly reduce preparation time.

To prepare fresh chestnuts, score an "X" on the flat side of each chestnut with the tip of a sharp knife. Place the chestnuts on a baking sheet and roast them in a 350-degree oven or boil them until the outer skin begins to curl away, 10 to 12 minutes. Peel away both the outer and inner layers of skin from the chestnuts. Chop the chestnuts coarsely with a chef's knife.

To plump the raisins, cover them with brandy and let them rest for one hour.

OYSTER AND SPINACH STUFFING

6 cups cubed white bread
6 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup finely diced celery
1/2 cup finely diced onion
3 cups fresh oysters, with their liquid
1 cup cooked chopped spinach, well drained
Chicken broth, as needed
2 tablespoons minced fresh parsley
Salt, to taste
Freshly ground black pepper, to taste

Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Place the bread cubes on a baking sheet and toast lightly, 10 to 12 minutes. The bread should be slightly dry, but not browned; transfer the toasted cubes to a large mixing bowl.

Melt the butter in a large skillet over medium heat. Add the celery and onion. Saute, stirring frequently, until tender, about 10 minutes.

Add the oysters and their liquid; saute for 2 more minutes. Add the spinach and saute for another minute.

Add the oyster-spinach mixture to the bread cubes; toss to combine. If necessary, moisten the stuffing with chicken broth. The mixture should be moist enough to hold together when lightly pressed, but not so moist that it packs tightly. Season with parsley and salt and pepper to taste. Makes about 8 cups.

PREPARATION NOTES: For best results, squeeze the spinach in a piece of cheesecloth, clean dishcloth or paper towels to remove excess water.

This can be done before or after chopping.

DEAR ABBY

Dental assistant needs short course in hygiene

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have just returned from the dentist and I'm upset. The assistant who was working with him today has long hair — well below shoulder-length. It was not pulled back or confined at all, which meant that whenever she leaned over, it was hanging right above my open mouth. She pushed it back behind her ears quite often.

Van Buren

I may be terribly old-fashioned, but I consider this to be very unsanitary. I am a retired nurse. I was taught that even clean hair is to be considered "contaminated" and should NEVER be touched while working with a patient unless you immediately scrub your hands. Hair should be pulled back securely from the face whenever you are in a patient treatment or preparation area. I kept thinking about all the loose hairs that were being dropped on the counters, instruments and patients, and it made me sick.

Am I being too persnickety? I need some extensive treatment, and I can't bear the thought of returning to this office because I have to wonder if it is as clean as it should be. — FUSSY OLD LADY

DEAR FUSSY: You have a legitimate complaint. Open your mouth and voice it to the dentist. Both he and his assistant should know the rules of proper hygiene. A professional look is sleek and clean — and the hair should be worn up, tied back in a ponytail or confined in a hairnet.

If the personnel in your dentist's office don't comply, find another dentist.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to "Good Old Dad," the father whose daughters bypassed him and talked only to their mother, was exactly right. I would like to add my own experience:

I am the oldest daughter of eight children. When any of us called home and my dad answered the phone, he would barely say, "Hello, how are you?" before passing the phone to my mother. When we visited, he'd sit and watch the ballgame while we talked with Mom and filled her in on all our news. If we became too loud, he'd comment on our "yakking," just like "Good Old Dad." Then about 10 years ago, my mother convinced Dad — against his better judgment — to take a course in self-awareness. I received a phone call from him shortly after he completed the course, and we actually talked for about 10 minutes! He asked me questions, listened to my answers and spoke about himself. When I hung up the phone, tears were streaming down my face. My husband couldn't believe it was my father I had been talking to.

After that, Dad made it a point to call all of his children and ask how they were doing. He also spent a little time with us when we visited. We grew much closer and discovered we really enjoyed each other's company.

Dad passed away a few years ago, and I am so grateful to him for reaching out so we could have some time together before it was too late. Abby, please tell "Good Old Dad" that his daughters are dying to be close to him. — KAREN CLARK, HOLLAND, PA.

DEAR KAREN: Yours is an important message. To dads everywhere (and it is usually dads who do this): If this sounds like you, please take the time and get to know your children.

TURKEY: Fry until it floats

(From 8B)

throughout turkey. Sprinkle outside with Creole seasoning. Use a sharp knife to cut the skin between the leg (drumstick) and the main body cavity. This will help insure that the breast is cooked throughout. Carefully lower turkey into hot oil. Fry turkey until it floats, about 3-4 minutes per pound. Remove turkey from oil. Remember to empty cavity of oil before transferring turkey to serving platter.

Another fried turkey recipe from the 1996 St. Ann's Cookbook is provided by Party Time Cookers of Lantern Petroleum:

FRIED TURKEY

1 (20-pound) turkey
10 gallon pot
5 gallons of peanut oil
Butane burner
Cajun Injector/w seasoning
Tony Chachere Seasoning
Thermometer

Add 5 gallons of peanut oil to large pot and preheat oil to 300 degrees. Inject turkey throughout with seasoning. Then sprinkle with Tony Chachere Seasoning on the outside. Work the two legs together over the outside of the turkey for easy access of getting it into the pot and retrieving it. Lower turkey slowly into the oil to prevent splashing. Slowly cook about 3 minutes per pound. Cook a 20-pound turkey about an hour. Remove turkey. Let cool for three to five minutes, then cut to serve.

TERIYAKI FRIED TURKEY

(Recipe is for a 10-pound turkey)

1 cup teriyaki sauce
1 tablespoon garlic powder
1 tablespoon onion powder
1 tablespoon powdered ginger

In small bowl, combine teriyaki sauce, garlic, onion and ginger powders. Using an injector, inject marinade into all parts of the thawed turkey. Gently massage turkey to distribute marinade. Place turkey in large plastic bag (cooking bag or clean, unscented trash bag). Close bag and refrigerate overnight.

Deep fry.

White chocolate cheesecake elegant dessert

N.Y. Times Service

Nothing quite says creamy elegance like a white chocolate cheesecake. The flavors are rich, but don't overwhelm. And what a great change from the standard pumpkin or pecan pie during the holidays.

WHITE CHOCOLATE CHEESECAKE

Serves 10-12

CRUST:
1 cup graham cracker crumbs
1/4 cup brown sugar
3 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
CHEESECAKE:
4 (8-ounce) packages cream cheese, softened
4 eggs
1 egg yolk
8 tablespoons unsalted butter, softened
16 ounces white chocolate (any fine chocolate), melted over a double boiler
1 tablespoon vanilla extract

Place graham cracker crumbs, brown sugar and butter in bowl. Mix thoroughly. Press mixture into the bottom of a buttered, 9-inch springform pan.

Beat cream cheese in a large mixer bowl until light and fluffy. Beat in the eggs, one at a time, following with the yolk. Beat in the 8 tablespoons of softened butter and the white chocolate. Then add the vanilla. Pour filling into the crumb crust.

Bake for 1-1/2 hours at 300 degrees. Be sure to place your springform pan on a baking sheet so the batter won't dribble out of the pan into your oven.

Cool on wire rack for 30 minutes, and then refrigerate overnight.

Variation: When you mix in the vanilla, add 3 tablespoons of Frangelico liqueur for a hazelnutty flavor.

Other variations would include topping the cheesecake with cherry pie filling or fresh berries. Berry pie fillings make an easy topping, and cranberry pie fillings can sometimes be found during the Thanksgiving/Christmas holiday season. The cheesecake is also fine without any topping, since much of the flavor is infused with the Frangelico hazlenut liquer or extracts.

Cook turkey without using oven

Associated Press

Although the conventional oven is the appliance most often used to cook a whole turkey, it is only one way to prepare the holiday bird. The USDA's Meat and Poultry Hotline suggests the following alternative methods.

ELECTRIC ROASTER OVEN

Generally the cooking time and oven temperature setting are the same for an electric roaster oven as for conventional cooking. Always check the roaster's use and care manual.

(NOTE: If the oven interior is dark, food could cook faster than in a light-colored interior, just as a dark pan cooks food faster than a light or shiny pan in a conventional oven.)

To cook, preheat the oven to at least 325 degrees. Place the turkey on the roaster oven's rack or other meat rack so the juices will collect in the metal oven liner.

Leave the lid on throughout cooking, removing it as little as possible to avoid slowing the cooking process and browning.

Cooking bags can be used in the roaster oven if the bag does not touch the sides, bottom or lid. Follow directions given by the cooking bag manufacturer, and use a meat thermometer to be sure the internal temperature in the inner thigh reaches 180 degrees.

NOTE: Do not use brown paper bags for cooking. They are not sanitary, may cause a fire and can emit toxic fumes.

SMOKE COOKING — ON THE GRILL

Smoke cooking is a method of cooking by indirect heat using a covered outdoor grill or smoker.

When using an outdoor grill, cooking is by smoky air rather than the direct coals used when grilling a steak or chicken parts.

Turkeys that are 16 pounds or less are the recommended size for safe smoking on the grill. Do not stuff the turkey.

To grill, start with clean equipment and a good quality charcoal. Build a pyramid of charcoal to one side, ignite the charcoal and let the coals get red-hot.

When the charcoal has developed white powdery ash — about 20 to 30 minutes — place a pan of water in the center of the grill beneath where the turkey will be set. The pan is used to catch the fat and juices that drip from the turkey as it cooks. This prevents a flame-up that could burn the turkey.

Carefully push the hot coals evenly around the edge and position the grill rack above. Place the prepared turkey breast-side up on the grill along with an appliance thermometer to maintain safe cooking temperature, then place the cover on the grill.

Replenish with about 15 briquettes every hour as needed to maintain 225 degrees to 300 degrees. If desired, add water-soaked wood chips for desired flavor.

Estimate cooking time at 15 to 18 minutes per pound. The turkey is done when a meat thermometer in the inner thigh reaches 180 degrees. For gas grilling, follow the manufacturer's instructions.

Do not use brown paper bags for cooking. They are not sanitary, may cause a fire and can emit toxic fumes.

SMOKE COOKING — IN A SMOKER

A smoker is a cylinder-shaped cooking device. The turkey is placed on the food rack above hot liquid in a drip pan. Beneath the pan is a container that holds the hot coals.

Start with clean equipment, light the charcoal and when the charcoal has developed a white powdery ash — about 20 to 30 minutes — put liquid into the drip pan.

Some smokers have a built-in temperature indicator. If not, place an appliance thermometer on the food rack to monitor the air temperature inside the smoker. Then put the cover on.

When the thermometer reaches 225 degrees to 300 degrees, place the prepared turkey on the rack and quickly replace the cover. Do not stuff the turkey.

Generally, smoking takes longer than grilling. Follow the manufacturer's estimated cooking times. Add fresh charcoal every hour to maintain 225 degrees to 300 degrees and ensure smoke.

Add liquid to the water pan as needed. Turkey is done when a meat thermometer inserted in the inner thigh reaches 180 degrees.

Water-soaked hardwood or a fruitwood, in the form of chunks or chips, is often used to add flavor to the turkey as it is cooking. A soft wood, such as pine, fir, cedar or spruce, should not be used because it gives the food a turpentine flavor and coats everything with a black pitch or resin.

For additional flavor, the turkey can be brine-soaked one or two days in the refrigerator before smoking.

DEEP-FAT FRYING

A whole turkey can be successfully cooked by the deep-fat frying method. However, there are safety concerns when working with such a large amount of oil.

Select a pot large enough to submerge the turkey in oil without spilling over. Measure with water beforehand to determine the amount of oil needed.

Heat the cooking oil to 350 degrees. Carefully lower turkey into the hot oil. Allow about 3 to 5 minutes per pound cooking time. Check turkey with a meat thermometer. The internal temperature of the bird should reach 180 degrees when measured in the thigh.

Remove turkey from the oil and drain oil from cavity. Place the bird on paper towels and let it rest about 20 minutes before carving.

MICROWAVE OVEN

Turkeys can be successfully cooked in a microwave oven. Timing can vary because of wattage differences; the owner's manual should be followed for recommendations.

A 12- to 14-pound turkey is the maximum size most microwave ovens can accommodate, otherwise uneven cooking can occur. The time for cooking a turkey in the microwave oven is 9 to 10 minutes per pound on medium (50 percent power).

Always use a meat thermometer to determine doneness. Temperature should reach 180 degrees when measured in the thigh.

Allow 3 inches oven clearance on top and 2 to 3 inches of space around the bird. The use of oven cooking bags allows more even cooking. Turkey parts may be cooked in a dish with a tight cover or a cover with a vented top.

Rotate the bird during cooking to insure even cooking. Do not stuff the turkey as the stuffing may not be cooked to the proper internal temperature when the turkey itself is done.

If the bird is defrosted in the microwave oven, cook it immediately.

Always use a meat thermometer to determine doneness. Temperature should reach 180 degrees when measured in the thigh. Let the turkey stand 20 minutes after removing from the microwave.

For additional food safety information about meat, poultry or eggs, call the toll-free USDA Meat and Poultry Hotline at 1-(800)-535-4555 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. (EST) year-round.

Ice cream flavor tasty, but not for everybody

By Linda Anderson

"Mother!" she said. "What were you thinking of!!??"

My child was standing by the freezer with a carton of ice cream in her hand.

"Daughter!" I answered. "I was thinking that it might be an interesting flavor to try! I like carrot cake!"

Anderson

Needless to say, I got to be the primary taste tester for the sampling we did of Blue Bell's new Carrot Cake Ice Cream. Obviously, if you don't like carrot cake in the first place, you probably don't want to taste the ice cream. At least she didn't.

According to information from the company, its Carrot Cake Ice cream is "A creamy mixture of delicious cream cheese-coated pecans, blended with moist pieces of carrot cake and surrounded by a rich brown sugar cinnamon ice cream."

For some reason, Blue Bell decided this is a "great new flavor" for the holiday season, available in stores during October, November and December. I've never particularly thought of carrot cake as an end-of-the-year holiday season kind of dessert, but why not? I guess you gotta take a break from pumpkin pie once in a while.

I bought my half-gallon carton of the ice cream for about $3. Yes, it was on sale. I don't like to buy ice cream unless it is on sale. There's something not quite right about paying $5 or so for a half-gallon of ice cream. I don't care how "premium" it is. (Of course, when ice cream does go on sale, I have been known to go overboard in filling up my freezer.)

In the taste test, I discovered that I like carrot cake ice cream, even if my teenage tester doesn't. The cream-cheese-covered pieces of pecan are really good; the little chunks of carrot cake are about the size of the pieces of chocolate chip cookie dough in that flavor of ice cream, but they have the consistency of mushed bread (you can't have pieces of real carrot cake in ice cream — it would get all soggy).

The ice cream itself has a very interesting flavor. It's a definite carrot cake taste, but not a very strong one. In fact, the best description came from the littlest taste tester (he's 4 years old), who doesn't ordinarily like ice cream very much. He said it tasted like doughnuts. That's good enough for me.

Will I buy it again? Probably, but it will have to be next year during the holidays, since I'm mostly eating this carton by myself, and Blue Bell says it's only available during the year's last quarter. Even my co-tester only ate a couple of bites. (Like I say, he's not much of an ice cream lover. Not like I am.)

I still can't figure out the connection between carrot cakes and the holidays. I like carrot cake all year long.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Experts: Civil liability looms for au pair agency

BOSTON (AP) — How does someone making $135 a week get some of the best lawyers and medical experts in the world?

In Louise Woodward's case, from the au pair agency that brought her to America. And EF Au Pair's expenses probably have not come to an end. The agency may also have to defend itself.

A jury convicted the 19-year-old British au pair of second-degree murder for the death of 8-month-old Matthew Eappen, but Judge Hiller B. Zobel reduced the conviction to involuntary manslaughter Monday and set her free. The time she had spent in jail since her Feb. 5 arrest — 279 days in all — was punishment enough, the judge ruled.

The au pair agency won't say how much it has spent on Ms. Woodward's defense, but legal experts estimate it was at least $500,000. Marcia Horowitz, a spokeswoman for EF Au Pair, said Tuesday that the agency stepped in because Ms. Woodward couldn't afford to mount a defense, and that EF Au Pair would pay for her appeals.

But some have suggested EF Au Pair intervened to protect its own interests. The agency could end up paying far more if the baby's parents, Sunil and Deborah Eappen, sue the agency in civil court.

The Eappens, who could not be located for comment, have not indicated whether they will sue. But legal experts said they have a compelling wrongful-death case — one that could cost EF Au Pair tens of millions of dollars.

AP Photo

Members of the media gather around the main entrance to a hotel near Boston's Logan International where Louise Woodward is reportedly staying with her parents Tuesday. A day after Woodward was freed she issued a statement thanking supporters and again denied that she did anything to harm 8-month-old Matthew Eappen, the baby she is convicted of killing.

The agency maintains it reviewed Ms. Woodward's credentials, checked her references and properly trained her for the demands of looking after children. Besides, it has argued in other cases that it is a charitable organization whose liability would be limited by Massachusetts law to $20,000 in damages.

But there are ways to get around that cap.

Attorneys could argue that EF Au Pair is not, in fact, a charity. While EF Au Pair is an unincorporated division of EF Educational Foundation for Foreign Study, which was established as a charitable corporation in 1988, it has a for-profit sister organization called EF Education Inc., which runs student tour programs. The companies claim to be independent of each other, but court papers in another case showed they shared a single bank account.

EF Au Pair has said that it has no liability and that the Eappens, both doctors, chose to leave Ms. Woodward alone with their children. The Eappens, however, testified they had quarreled with the teen-ager over her late hours and what they thought were lapses in duty.

"We have acted at all times in a responsible and professional way and therefore we have no case to answer," EF Au Pair said in a statement.

EF Au Pair, which is based in Cambridge, has denied trying to protect itself by pressuring Ms. Woodward and her defense attorneys to push for an all-or-nothing legal strategy that offered the jury a choice: convicting her of murder or acquitting her. The jury was not given the option of convicting her of manslaughter.

Some have speculated the au pair agency faced less civil liability if Woodward were convicted of murder as opposed to manslaughter, which suggests that the au pair agency could have been negligent in not training her properly.

But legal experts said the potential for a civil suit would be the same no matter the verdict. And Ms. Woodward's attorneys could have gotten themselves disbarred if they had schemed with EF Au Pair in a way that put the interests of the au pair agency ahead of the defendant's, said Marc Perlin, a professor at Suffolk University Law School and an expert in civil procedure.

Even if Ms. Woodward were acquitted, the agency could still be sued for the baby's death. That happened in the case of a Swiss au pair, Olivia Riner, who was acquitted in 1992 of burning to death a suburban New York baby. Despite the acquittal, the baby's parents brought a multimillion-dollar lawsuit in 1994 against the agency that brought her to America: EF Au Pair. The case is still pending.

It was prosecutors who first complained that EF Au Pair's decision to pay for the defense was a conflict of interest.

Prosecutors speculated it might be in Ms. Woodward's interest to plead guilty or emphasize her lack of training in child care matters as a defense. But they said her lawyers might discourage her from doing so to avoid a lawsuit.

An independent counsel said she found no conflict.

Recent DEA threat makes doctors nervous about prescribing potentially lethal pills

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — A week after Oregon voters affirmed the state's law allowing doctor-assisted suicide, some physicians are holding off on writing prescriptions for lethal drugs for fear of being punished by the federal government.

Despite what Orgeon voters say, the Drug Enforcement Administration is warning doctors they risk losing their license to write prescriptions if they help someone kill themselves.

"If I were to lose my DEA license, my practice would close," Dr. Peter Rasmussen, an outspoken supporter of assisted suicide, said Tuesday.

Oregon approved a law three years ago that permits doctors to dispense drugs for the purpose of suicide, but legal challenges prevented it from taking effect. Voters reaffirmed the law last week when a ballot questions seeking the law's repeal was defeated.

However, DEA Administrator Thomas Constantine warned that doctors who take part in assisted suicides would be violating federal narcotics law and risk losing their licenses to prescribe drugs.

Physicians are licensed to practice medicine by the states, but it is the DEA that registers doctors to prescribe drugs.

The Justice Department, which would be responsible for enforcing such a revocation, has yet to determine if the DEA position is a correct reading of federal law, department spokesman Gregory King said.

The quandary has left Oregon doctors confused and worried.

"It's a big deal," said James Kronenberg, spokesman for the Oregon Medical Association. "We're telling them, 'You may lose your DEA license. They're not fooling.'"

Oregon's senators disagree over what is to be done.

Republican Gordon Smith, who opposes assisted suicide, said he let the White House know that he agrees with the DEA and that state law must be consistent with federal law.

"It is not unreasonable for the federal government to have concern about this," he said. "This is not a small issue, and this is not a practice which will stop at the borders of Oregon."

Democrat Ron Wyden, who also opposes assisted suicide, said the federal government should nonetheless abide by the will of Oregon voters.

Powell says he will not seek office

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Retired Gen. Colin Powell said Tuesday he will not seek the Republican presidential nomination or any other office in 2000, lacking "the passion" for political life.

"I went through this in 1995. I took a hard look at myself and took a look at the needs of my family and I concluded individually and we concluded as a family that political life was not for us," Powell said at a news conference.

"I am not running for any political office in 2000," he said.

Powell, who is heading President Clinton's national volunteerism effort, had said before that he had no intention of running for president. Tuesday's remarks left no room for doubt.

Polls consistently show that Powell is by far the most popular of potential GOP candidates. That may be why Republicans still refuse to count him out as a potential candidate.

"It always leaves him the option of playing the 'I was drafted into the race' thing" closer to 2000, GOP pollster Tony Fabrizio said.

"I think Colin Powell has such stature he can go back and forth," GOP strategist Jill Hanson said.

Fabrizio said Powell made a smart political move by ruling himself out.

"I think that it would only be hurtful for him to have the suspense continue to grow and raise expectations," he said. "It does not play to his warrior image to look gun-shy."

Powell spokesman Bill Smullen said the retired general has ruled out a presidential race in less formal settings. "Whenever it comes up, that's his standard answer."

Asked if Powell meant to flatly rule out a presidential race in 2000, the spokesman said, "You can take that to the bank."

Powell, who rocketed to prominence during the Gulf War, when he was chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, toyed with the idea of running for president in 1996 but decided against it after speculation soared.

He raised some eyebrows when he agreed to speak at a motivational conference in Des Moines Tuesday. With its precinct caucuses opening the presidential nominating season, the state gets heavy attention from presidential candidates of both parties. Powell quickly made his point.

"I am not a candidate for political office," he said. "I made that decision in 1995 after a great deal of deliberation. I plan to devote my energies to the work I'm doing in private life, charitable work, educational work."

Retired Gen. Colin Powell speaks during a news conference Tuesday, in Des Moines, Iowa. Powell said he will not seek the Republican presidential nomination because he does not "have the passion" for political life.

While Powell was briefly a hot candidate in Republican circles, some strategists argued his candidacy faced fundamental problems — he is black and favors allowing women to get abortions.

But Powell said the reasons for declining were more fundamental.

"I was never a politician, nor did I consider political office before 1995," Powell said. "It came up and was the subject of great interest and speculation. I considered it and decided that was not where I would spend my life.

"I didn't have the passion for it and I didn't have the commitment to that kind of life," he said. "I'm still principally a soldier."

He joked about the heavy attention his trip was bringing. "It's always safe to come to Iowa in an odd-numbered year."

Study supports mental health coverage

CHICAGO (AP) — Giving employees mental health coverage on par with the insurance they receive for physical ailments would involve only minimal costs for employers, according to a study.

The findings by Roland Sturm, an economist at Rand, a think tank in Santa Monica, Calif., come less than two months before federal legislation to help achieve so-called parity between mental-health and medical coverage goes into effect.

The law bars businesses from providing higher annual and lifetime caps for physical diseases than for mental illness.

Sturm's study appears in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

He examined data from 24 public-employer health plans with more than 140,000 enrollees each, mostly in the Midwest. All the plans used a common managed-care feature called "carve-out" contracts, in which medical care and mental health services are provided separately. Employers "carve out" mental health care to a subsidiary or an independent vendor.

Sturm found that removing the typical $25,000 yearly limit on mental health benefits would raise group insurance costs to the employer by only about $1 per enrollee per year. The most costly changes he looked at would increase an employer's cost by no more than $7 per enrollee.

He said his findings apply only to carve-out plans. However, most managed care plans that offer mental health benefits do it via carve-outs.

He acknowledged that most of the employers were located in the Midwest, and were not in the private sector, where most of the U.S. work force is employed.

"The data are not necessarily representative for all industries or for other geographic regions in the country," he wrote.

He examined data from 1995 and 1996. Most previous cost estimates for parity involved much older data reflecting the state of managed care in its infancy, and found that the costs would be as much as four to eight times higher than Sturm's projections, he said.

The new law, which takes effect Jan. 1, does not require employers to offer mental health benefits. But if employers do offer them, the limits on coverage must be equal to those for physical ailments. The law does not apply to some small businesses.

Sturm said employers who base their decisions on the older data "might erroneously decide to drop mental health coverage altogether" when the law takes effect.

The National Alliance for the Mentally Ill said Sturm's study "provides further evidence that equitable health insurance is affordable."

"This paper shows that the 'sky is falling' rhetoric by special interest lobbyists does not have any economic basis," said Laurie Flynn, executive director.

A spokesman for the American Association of Health Plans, which represents over 1,000 health plans covering over 140 million people, called Sturm's report "a very interesting and thoughtful study" but said further research is needed to determine how costly parity will be.

Some of the association's member employers object to making parity a federal mandate.

Argument turns bad

PHILADELPHIA — Two bystanders were killed after a disagreement about who was the better point guard, Allen Iverson of the Philadelphia 76ers or Gary Payton of the Seattle SuperSonics.

Words turned to gunfire Sunday after the game between the 76ers and Sonics. Neither of the victims attended the game, the 76ers said.

Derrick Washington, 21, and his cousin, Jameka Wright, 22, were killed in the crossfire in the Southwark Plaza public housing development.

Washington was a father of one and Wright was a mother of two.

Police on Tuesday were looking for the triggerman, who fled with a group of men.

"They started out arguing about the basketball thing, but then they started arguing about other things," said Jerrold Kane, a city homicide inspector. "It got down to basically just general bad-mouthing."

Another man involved in the argument was Washington's brother, Montrell, 25, who was wounded in the left shoulder. He was treated and released from a Philadelphia hospital.

Golden Spikes

NEW YORK — J.D. Drew, a holdout since the Philadelphia Phillies made him the second pick of June's amateur draft, was presented Tuesday night with the Golden Spikes Award.

Drew, 21, hit .455 for Florida State this year with 31 homers, 100 RBIs and 32 steals, become the first 30-30 player in NCAA history.

He has been holding out for a $10 million signing bonus, citing the amounts given to Matt White and Travis Lee in 1996 after they became free agents on technicalities.

The Golden Spikes Award is given annually to the nation's top amateur player by the U.S. Baseball Federation.

WNBA to expand

NEW YORK — Detroit and Washington are officially entering the WNBA. Orlando and Chicago may be next.

The WNBA received formal approval Tuesday from the NBA Board of Governors to expand to 10 teams. Detroit and Washington will join Charlotte, Cleveland and New York in the year-old league's Eastern Conference.

To make room, the defending champion Houston Comets will shift to the Western Conference and join Los Angeles, Phoenix, Sacramento and Utah.

The league's operating committee will recommend another two expansion cities by June 1. While no one is publicly pushing any single candidate, Orlando and Chicago would seem the two favorites.

Orlando was considered for one of the two 1998 expansion teams. But Magic president Bob Vander Weide, chairman of the WNBA planning committee, wanted to wait until the team completed building its practice and office facility.

"With the logistics involved in moving all of our functions to the new building, we would not have been comfortable operating a team for the upcoming season," Magic spokesman Alex Martins said.

"We're eager to have a team, and we spent the second half of last season traveling to NBA cities to look at the logistics of having a team, everything from logistics to game presentations to basketball operations."

Stanton endures mother of all road trips

Longest District Road Trip In The State...

Barbara Grimm: Midland Reporter-Telegram

"Geography or distance are not primary concerns when forming a district. Giving the kids a chance comes first," — Rex Spain, assistant athletic director of the University Interscholastic League.

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Last weekend, the Stanton football team trekked the 340 miles to Anthony, which lies just northwest of El Paso and right on the Texas-New Mexico border. It is the longest trip that any school in the state of Texas will take for district competition.

In the midst of the 18 1/2 hour trip across West Texas and back for a District 6-2A football game, Stanton head football coach Mark Cotton wonders what his school did wrong to deserve such treatment from the UIL people who claim they want to give the kids a chance.

"There is no logic in this. I understand that people have to be in a district but this is completely ridiculous," Cotton said.

On Feb. 1, 1996, Cotton received the news that his team was placed in the district of endless travel and little reward — Anthony is 340 miles, one way; Tornillo is 300 miles; Van Horn is 210 miles.

He learned first hand of the cruel lessons of the district that day, having to attend his first district meeting in Van Horn. He said then it was a move that showed the UIL has little regard for the welfare of the kids — a thought he reiterated before the trip.

"We have 36 (Class) 2A schools closer than our third closest district game (Van Horn, a 210-mile trip)," Cotton said. "There is no common sense in it. If you take the distance to Anthony and draw a circle (using the distance from Anthony to Stanton as the radius), there are places in Oklahoma

Martinez adds NL Cy Young to his resumé

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Now Pedro Martinez comes with the Cy Young seal of approval.

Martinez, put on the trade market by Montreal immediately after the season, boosted his stature Tuesday by easily beating Greg Maddux and Denny Neagle to win the NL Cy Young Award.

■ Astros deal for Alou/2D

Martinez, 17-8 with 305 strikeouts and a major-league best 1.90 ERA, will become the second Cy Young winner dealt in the offseason he won the award. David Cone was traded from Kansas City to Toronto after winning in 1994.

Martinez

"What I really want is a team that's going to be in contention and a team that's going to be able to afford me," Martinez said. "I will go wherever they send me. ... I'll play anywhere, even in the backyard."

Montreal, once again looking to cut payroll, says it can't afford Martinez, eligible for arbitration this winter and for free agency following the 1998 season.

"I'm more sad than mad at them," Martinez said. "That's their politics and that's the way they do things."

Rangerettes get past River Road

Staff Report

LUBBOCK — The Greenwood volleyball team made history Tuesday night at Coronado High School with a 15-3, 15-12 drumming of Amarillo River Road in the area round of the Region I-3A playoffs.

With the win, the Rangerettes have advanced farther into the post season than any other volleyball team in school history. Last year, Greenwood advanced to the area round before falling to Seminole.

"This feels greet," Greenwood coach Patti Purser said. "We are totally excited about going to regionals and about playing well. That (playing well) has been a big factor in getting this team as far as we have gone."

The Rangerettes (28-9 overall) now move on to the Region I-3A tournament, which will be played Friday and Saturday at Monterey High School in Lubbock. The Rangerettes are scheduled to play 25-7 Clifton Friday night at 7 p.m.

The win was Greenwood's 19th straight win — a streak that goes back

LEE BOYS BASKETBALL

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

The Midland Lee boys' basketball team will be counting on its three returning players, from left, Robert House, Charncy Ephriam and Aaron Erdwurm — all seniors — to lead the Rebels this year.

Rebels know how to handle challenges

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Looking back on last year's fantastic run just to get into the playoffs, any challenges ahead this year should be a piece of cake for the Midland Lee Rebels.

If you were to say that the Rebels would make the playoffs with a 2-5 record at the beginning of District 4-5A play, maybe somebody would've said that you were one shot away from losing your marbles. Add to that a couple of players exiting the team because of personal choice or grades.

Maybe you were a little crazy after all as the Rebels proved so by winning the last five games in district and making it all the way to the area round of the playoffs. The Rebels' magical run ended with a 77-62 loss to El Paso Eastwood and a 24-12 overall record.

"It was a sort of a roller coaster," said Lee coach Jon House about last season's up-and-down ride through district. "I think it shows the resiliency of our kids and our kids' ability to stay focused with our backs up against the wall. I felt really good about the kids' attitude.

"They really think they can do anything. We have a tra-

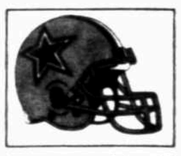
Switzer adds illness to list of problems

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Barry Switzer, battling a cold, rumors of his dismissal, and a season heading south, holds to the theory the Dallas Cowboys are capable of making a championship run if they can beat Washington on Sunday.



In fact, he points out, the Cowboys did it last year with a big win over Washington.

"This is a big game, no question about it," Switzer said Tuesday in a croaking voice. "This is a must-win situation. We responded well last year against Washington (21-10 on Thanksgiving Day) when we were 7-5. I just hope we respond the same this Sunday."

Dallas, winner of five consecutive NFC East titles, is 5-5, with one of the losses 21-16 to Washington in the sixth game of the season. The Redskins stand 6-4.

Dallas hasn't missed the NFL playoffs since 1990, but the current team has trouble winning despite owning the No. 2 defense in the league. The offense can't score touchdowns.

"I just hope we play like we did in the second half of the game against the Cardinals," Switzer said. "We're getting (guard) Nate Newton back for the Washington. He should be able to play after missing last week."

Switzer said the 24-6 win over Arizona helped team morale. There had been some grumbling among players that practices weren't hard enough.

Switzer said the practice talk "was just an excuse for getting your butt beat. I'm coaching the same way I have all my life. Winning is the only thing. It doesn't cure cancer or AIDS, but it cures football problems."

Switzer was in full command on Tuesday even though he was feeling bad. He ended his quick news conference by saying, "I've had enough of this. I'm sick. I

Rebels' offensive line comes together at right time

On Oct. 10, the Midland Lee Rebels walked off the Shotwell Stadium field with a cold rain pelting them in the face. The Shotwell scoreboard, glittering through the haze, read Abilene Cooper 24, Midland Lee 0.

Williamson

Lee's high hopes for a great football season seemed to be in shaken tatters with a 2-4 record and back-to-back district losses. Gone were the past memories of two consecutive District 4-5A titles. And now in jeopardy was its long state playoff run.

This was not a glory day in Lee's illustrious grid history. It seemed time to start writing an obituary.

"We walked off that field in Abilene with the rain and no points, and I was thinking, 'Well, it can't get any worse than this,'" said Lee head football coach John Parchman. "That was the low point of our season and just about everyone was giving us up for dead."

Of course, history will record that the Rebels rallied for three consecutive victories to jump back into its usual playoff mode, entering the state's run for roses for the 14th time in the last 15 years, beating vastly improved Abilene High, arch rival Odessa Permian and last hope San Angelo.

Many will say with vigor that the return of star running back Josh Norman from injury turned the ship, and it was a key factor. But the maturity of Lee's huge offensive line, which averages over 250 pounds per man, also had a lot to do with it.

Lee is now playing the kind of football that the coaches had vision of all along. That's where Lee keeps the ball all night and keeps its defense off the field as much as possible. It was no secret that Lee would give up more points this season with a green defense that lacks overall team speed.

Lee is in the playoffs because of long drives and you don't do that without a fine offensive line. Lee won its game against Midland High with an 80-yard drive in the fourth quarter. Lee defeated Permian with an 80-yard drive in the fourth quarter. Lee defeated San Angelo with two drives of 96 and 90 yards. If those two drives didn't come about, Lee would have had only 14 points and would have lost to the Bobcats.

"With the size we have, everyone expected us to blow people away," noted Lee line coach Randy Smith, "but nearly all our kids in the offensive line were sitting with me over on the sideline a year ago. We didn't have any experience. We were green."

But now those long drives are coming and Lee is winning. Tight end Brian Boyd had his best game against the Bobcats, grading out at 96 percent in Smith's grading system while producing seven pancakes, the lineman's dream statistic. Center Todd Rogers graded at 93 percent with four pancakes. Other top performers were Matt Sullivan (90 percent), Josh Miller (90), Brad Lofton (89) and Dana Shank (84). The average for the entire offensive line was 86 percent, the highest of the year.

And they are doing this even with injury problems. Tackle Rex Richards has missed two games, Boyd missed a couple of games and tackle/guard Brad Lofton is now injured. Sullivan and Miller have come to the rescue.

One would expect that grade when you produce two drives of 90 yards or better. In fact, Lee got to the Bobcat three-yard line on one other occasion after driving 87 yards. Three consecutive penalties kept Lee from having three 90-yard scoring drives. You just don't ever see that at any level of play.

If Lee is to have any success in the upcoming playoffs, the offensive line will have to turn in more of the same. The green is wearing off.

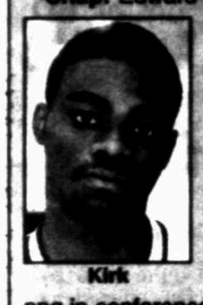
Chaparral Profiles



Kirk

Chap: Edward "Prep" Kirk, 6-2 guard.
Hometown: Dallas.
Major: general studies.
Quick Stats: Averaging 12.2 points per game for 4-0 Chaparrals. Had game high 18 points in win against Ranger College and Central Arizona.
Last year: Averaged 9.5 points, 2.9 rebounds and 2.8 assists in 28 games as starter for the Chaparrals. He twice led team in scoring, with season-high 20 points vs. Angelo State JV. He had 13 games in double figures, including nine of the last 12 games. Shot 74 percent from the free-throw line and 43 percent from the field, averaged 12.1 ppg in conference play.
High School: Averaged 22.5 points and 6.0 assists for Bryan Adams High School. He was twice a first team All-District selection and was named Offensive Player of the Year once. Nominated for Texas High School All-Star game.
Coach Pat Rafferty's Comments: "Edward has gotten off to a very good start for us this year. Part of that comes from sophomore maturity. He's elevated his defensive play and has gotten a better feel for the game. It seems that ever since we got him off point guard to two-guard, it seems to suit him better. He should be solid for us and should develop more and more into a complete player."

Finley

Lady Chap: Jody Finley, 5-9 forward
Hometown: Bloomington
Major: N/A
Quick Stats: Averaging 7.0 points, 2.6 rebounds, 2.6 assists per game for 2-1 Lady Chaps. Had season high 12 points in 121-30 win over Wayland Baptist JV on Nov. 3.
Last Year: Played in all 31 games last season as a part time starter, averaging 6.7 points and 3.5 rebounds. Connected on 33, 3-point field goals while shooting 40.9 percent from the field. Had nine games scoring in double figures with high of 16 points in the Region V Tournament vs. McLennan College. Pulled down game high 12 rebounds against Odessa College.
High School: District and Area MVP at Bloomington High, was also first team All-Region, first team All-State, and was a USA Today Honorable Mention. She averaged 22.5 points and 6.9 rebounds as a senior. Was also a first team All-State in volleyball and state qualifier in track. Graduated as BHS Salutatorian. Was a cheerleader and member of the Student Council.
Coach Ron Jones' Comments: "I think she will be a very consistent outside scorer for us this year and should help out on the boards. She's made a lot of improvement from last year and should be a solid contributor for us this year."

Florida trades Alou to Houston

By Teresa Aguayo
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Two weeks after winning the World Series, the Florida Marlins began their fire sale.

The 5-year-old Marlins started gutting their high-priced roster Tuesday, trading Moises Alou to the Houston Astros for two minor-league pitchers and a player to be named.

"Experience teaches you when this happens, the perception is that it's not a good deal," Marlins general manager Dave Dombrowski said after the first of what promises to be many teal deals. "It's not what you prefer to do."

Alou signed a $25 million, five-year contract last December, but spent only one season in Florida. He led the wild-card Marlins with 23 home runs and 115 RBIs, and was a key contributor in the World Series win over the Cleveland Indians.

Owner H. Wayne Huizenga wants to ditch expensive stars as fast as he signed them after last season, when he committed $89 million to free agents.

Huizenga, claiming he lost $34 million this year, intends to sell the Marlins to a group headed by team president Don Smiley, and the pair have vowed to cut payroll from $54 million to about $20 million.

That means Gary Sheffield, Bobby Bonilla, Alex Fernandez, Kevin Brown, Al Leiter and Devon White are candidates for trades, too. The new-look Marlins will include the likes of Oscar Henriquez and Manuel Barrios, the pair of 23-year-old right-handers acquired from Houston along with a player to be named.

"In this situation we're looking for young quality players that are ready to step in," Dombrowski said.

Alou, 31, was thought be many to be the MVP of the World Series, an award that officially was given to Marlins pitcher Livan Hernandez. Alou hit .321 with a pair of doubles, three homers and nine RBIs in Florida's seven-game victory over Cleveland.

Alou hit .292 during the regular season.

"Moises Alou obviously is one of the premier players in the game today," Astros general manager Gerry Hunsicker said. "It's unusual that anybody can acquire a player of this magnitude. Adding him to our lineup makes us a force to be reckoned with."

Alou is to be paid $5 million in each of the next two seasons and $5.25 million in each of the 2000 and 2001 seasons. Others probably out of the Marlins' new price range are Sheffield ($61 million in the next six seasons), Bonilla ($5.9 million in each of the next three years), Brown ($4.8 million in 1998), Fernandez ($7 million in each of the next four seasons), Leiter ($3 million in '98) and White ($3.5 million in '98).

Fernandez, expected to miss all of 1998 following rotator cuff surgery, agreed Tuesday to a partial waiver of his no-trade clause that will allow Florida to expose him in the expansion draft, one baseball official said on the condition he not be identified.

Under his contract, Alou had a limited no-trade clause. On Monday, he gave the Marlins his list of six teams he could be dealt to.

In Houston, Alou joins a lineup that already has Craig Biggio, Jeff Bagwell and Derek Bell.

"When you put Bagwell, Biggio and Alou in the middle of your order, it's a pretty awesome trio, no matter what the order is," said Hunsicker, whose team won the NL Central despite an 85-78 record, then was swept by Atlanta in the first round of the playoffs.

The deal is especially unusual because the bullpen has been Florida's strength. Henriquez was 4-5 with a 2.80 ERA and 12 saves in 60 games with Triple-A New Orleans last season. Barrios was 4-8 with a 3.27 ERA in 57 games.

"I don't know what their thinking was. All I know is they got a couple of good arms," Hunsicker said.

Henriquez, a native of LaGuaria, Venezuela, and Barrios, a native of Cabecena, Panama, could appeal to Hispanic fans in South Florida if they become successful.

But they won't replace the drawing power of a winning team and Alou.

"About a half dozen other clubs had an interest in him," Dombrowski said, "but we felt this trade made most sense."

Devil Rays, Diamondbacks get protected list

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Injured Florida pitcher Alex Fernandez was among five players who waived no-trade clauses and were left unprotected Tuesday when draft lists were submitted for Arizona and Tampa Bay to pick from next week.

Only one player who waived his no-trade can possibly receive money. St. Louis catcher Tom Pagnozzi would get $250,000 if he's taken by the Diamondbacks or Devil Rays in the Nov. 18 draft and then dealt to another team.

Gregg Jefferies and Lenny Dykstra of the Philadelphia Phillies, and Eric Plunk of the Cleveland Indians also waived no-trade clauses, a pair of baseball officials said on the condition they not be identified.

The complete list was not immediately available. General managers, not wanting to tell players they weren't protected, voted not to make the names public. After the commissioner's office compiled the list Tuesday, copies were were given only to Arizona, Tampa Bay and the players' association.

"After all the months and miles and games watched, we finally got to see the names of the players we'll be working with," Diamondbacks general manager Joe Garagiola Jr. said. "It was just a tremendously exciting moment. There were a lot of names we were happy to see."

It appeared the strategy of many teams was not to protect high-priced veterans who are not stars.

"I'd be lying if I seed there weren't some surprises ... some of them pleasant surprises," Devil Rays general manager Chuck LaMar said. "I think when you take the job two years ago, you have stars in your eyes. Today, reality sets in," he said. "Unless you're going to spend a lot of money to try to be competitive right away, it's going to take time to build."

Among those rumored to be available are New York Mets second baseman Carlos Baerga, Florida third baseman Bobby Bonilla, New York Yankees catcher Joe Girardi, Toronto pitcher Juan Guzman, Los Angeles first baseman Eric Karros, Marlins pitcher Al Leiter and Atlanta first baseman Fred McGriff.

Each team initially can protect 15 players. After losing a player in the first round, each team can protect three more players. After the second round, the total of protected players increased to 21 per team.

A coin flip Thursday will determine which team picks first. The team with the No. 1 pick will also go fourth, while the other will go second and third.

VOLLEYBALL: Clifton next

to Sept. 9. Purser's team swept through district, and then dropped Fabens in I-3A's bi-district round.

"We are just taking it one game at a time," said Purser, whose team has not dropped one game of either match in the playoffs. "We want to do well, play well and want to go to state really bad. We know the other teams will want it as bad as we do. We will have to play well to get it."

In Greenwood's win Tuesday over 11-17 River Road, the Rangerettes took control of the match early on, recording over 10 points before River Road hit the scoreboard. Key serves, good defense and the ability to side out at will were the main factors of the Game 1 triumph.

"It was awesome. They stayed at zero forever," Purser said. "We played well again and dominated the first game."

The second game was not as clear cut. Greenwood played well enough to jump out to an 8-2 lead, but began to struggle as River Road cut the Rangerette lead to 13-12. Greenwood, however, won the last two points to get the win.

Greenwood's big hitters, Karen Gasch and Mandi Choat, again played huge with eight and five kills respectively. Gasch added two blocks and tied Tracy Womack for the team lead with six service points each. Setter Shiloh O'Donnell added 11 assists.

As a team, the Rangerettes had 10 aces, continuing to hit their spots at will during the playoffs. Gasch and Hemphill contributed three each.

River Road had defeated Seminole in three games to advance to the area round.

Statistics from Greenwood's 15-3, 15-12 win over Amarillo River Road.

Kills: Karen Gasch 8, Mandy Choat 5, Stephanie Willis 1, Amy Alderson 1, Heather Hemphill 1. Blocks: Gasch 2. Serving Points: Gasch 6, Tracy Womack 6, Shiloh O'Donnell 5, Willis 4, Alderson 3, Hemphill 3, Katie Walker 2. Setting Assists: O'Donnell 11. Passing assists: Walker 2, Gasch 2, Alderson 2, Hemphill 2, Womack 2. Aces: Gasch 3, Hemphill 3, Walker 2, Womack 1, Alderson 1.

DALLAS: Coach Switzer gets sick

know you (the media) are, too."

However, rumors about the coaching job persist. One broadcast report said owner Jerry Jones will replace Switzer with former San Francisco coach George Seifert next year.

A weary Rich Dalrymple, spokesman for the Cowboys, responded: "Our reaction is there is no need for a comment. Jerry Jones is the only source that matters on any subjects pertaining to the contract status of any coach on the Dallas Cowboys staff.

"He has repeatedly made it clear that any speculation in that area is a waste of time."

Report: Dodger lost $35 million

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers, on the verge of bringing the highest selling price for a North American sports team, reportedly lost $35 million over the past four years.

The Los Angeles Daily News, quoting sources within the organization, also reported Tuesday the team lost between $12 million and $13 million in 1997 — the greatest loss of the four-year period.

CY: Expos' Martinez picks up award

(From 1D)

have both said they're interested in Martinez, as are the Cleveland Indians. Many other teams are thought to be in the bidding, which will intensify after the Nov. 18 expansion draft.

"I know New York seems to be tough, and it's a very fast life that we live there, but once we're on the field, believe me, I know what to do," Martinez said.

It's not clear whether Montreal would make a conditional trade that would give teams a 48- or 72-hour window to sign Martinez to a multiyear deal.

"There are a lot of teams, but not all of them can give what Montreal is asking for," Martinez said.

Martinez played with the Dodgers for two years, then was traded to Montreal after the 1993 season. His brother, Ramon, remains with the Dodgers and Pedro would like to play with him again some day.

"That's something I've always dreamed of," Pedro said. "I had the chance once and it was great. It doesn't matter if it's in LA or somewhere else."

Martinez, a 26-year-old right-hander, joined with Philadelphia's Curt Schilling to become the first pair of pitchers in 25 years to reach 300 strikeouts in the same season.

Martinez became he first ERA leader with 300 strikeouts since Steve Carlton in 1972. Opponents hit just .184 against him, the lowest average against any major league pitcher last season. His 13 complete games led both leagues and his strikeout total was No. 2 in the majors behind Schilling's 319.

"I think that the ERA and the 300 strikeouts really shined on top of everything," Martinez said.

He ended Atlanta's streak of four straight NL Cy Young Awards, receiving 25 of 28 first-place votes and 134 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

"I'm dedicating this award to Juan Marichal, who I think deserved this award and didn't get it," Martinez said, referring to his countryman, regarded as the greatest pitcher from the Dominican Republic.

Maddux, who won the award four consecutive times from 1992-95, was second with the remaining first-place votes and 75 points. Neagle, his teammate on the Braves, was third with 24 points, followed by Schilling with 12 and Houston's Darryl Kile with seven.

"I don't consider myself better than Maddux right now," Martinez said.

Atlanta and Maddux have combined to monopolize the award in recent years. After Tom Glavine won it in 1991, Maddux won it with the Chicago Cubs in 1992, then repeated in his first three seasons with the Braves. John Smoltz then won it last year.

Martinez, the Expos' first Cy Young winner, gets a $100,000 bonus for leading the voting. Maddux gets a $150,000 bonus for finishing second and Neagle gets $75,000 for finishing third.

Maddux got his first-place votes from Barry Rozner of the (Arlington Heights) Daily Herald in Illinois, David O'Brien of the (Fort Lauderdale) Sun-Sentinel and Shaun O'Neill of the North County Times outside San Diego. Only one writer failed to list Maddux on his ballot: Jim Molony of The Dallas Morning News.

LEE: Rebs look for another playoff run

(From 1D)

dition here and there are certain expectations that go with that. The main thing last year is they (district opponents) got us down and they thought they were going to get us out of it — and they couldn't quite get us."

"It let us know that we need to get off to a good start. We can't get into that type of situation like we did last year when we had to win all our games," said senior returner Charncy Ephriam.

When you've done what the Rebels have done, you expect nothing less than to make the playoffs again this year. That should help with three lettermen returning in 6-4 Ephriam (15 ppg), 6-6 Robert House (10.8 ppg) and 6-5 Aaron Erdwurm (6 ppg). The Rebels did lose one potential starter when Josh Ralston moved to Houston.

Ephriam was an all-district player last year and is an all-state candidate this year. Ephriam said his role is to be the floor leader of the team. House is a returning all-district player and also tied a school record with Martin Lattibeaudiere for 3-point shots with 109. House said his role is simple — knock down all his shots and be a leader. Erdwurm started sparingly last year and is known as the defensive stopper of the team. He said his job is to get the scorers in Ephriam and House the ball and play some tough defense.

"I expect us to work hard and play hard this season. This season should be a blast," Ephriam said.

"I want us to be in the thick of the district race and be competitive," Robert House said.

"District is going to be tough but we've got as much talent as anybody. It's just a matter of putting it all together," Erdwurm said.

Coach House also has players moving up from a 24-4 junior varsity team and a sophomore team which won 22 games last year.

The Rebels do have good size this year and because of that, coach House said the team will post up more and try to pound it on the inside. They won't look to run as much as they did last year but instead they will try to control the tempo a little more and mix up the defenses at half court instead of utilizing the full-court press.

Offensively, one of the best inside-outside combinations in the district should be Ephriam teaming up with deadly outside shooter Robert House. Adding some depth on the inside should be 6-6 senior Josh Brewster up from the JV; 6-6 Blake Hinsley is good inside and outside; 6-5 Jeremy Conaway is very athletic as a post player; and 6-5 Brandon Cobb should also help at the post.

The only question mark going into the season is at the point guard spot where three players are vying for that position in 5-11 senior Jake Lacy, 5-9 junior Orlando Castillo and 6-2 junior Ken Myer, a transfer from Bartlesville, Okla.

"We'll just have to see which point guard plays the best and which combination of players work," House said. "We've got three guys to go with so I feel real comfortable with that position."

At the perimeter, of course, you have Robert House along with 6-0 Keith Rotan and Ephriam.

Lee has gained some preseason respect with a No. 19 ranking in the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches' poll. Midland High, by the way, is ranked No. 7 in that poll.

"I think it's great that both of us are ranked there but that just makes for good reading," coach House said. "I think it's pretty neat that when people think of Midland, they think of the basketball teams here."

House does expect to be one of the top four teams in Region I. But before they can start thinking regionally, they have to start thinking about the district wars as MHS looks to once again repeat. After that, the race should be another mad scramble with Permian, Abilene Cooper, Abilene High, and San Angelo Central all having solid returning players.

"If you look at it on paper it's Midland High and it's a dog fight for the other two places," House said.

Just to get ready for district should be tough enough with games against Wichita Fall High, Lubbock Coronado, Lubbock Monterey, Duncanville, Lancaster, South Garland, Eastwood, Little Rock Parkview (Ark.), and Hobbs, N.M., sandwiched in between district play.

With the respect and the confidence gained from last year, House and his team know that they still have to prove themselves when they hit the hardwood.

"We just need to keep things in perspective and just play. If we do that, everything will work out," House said.

Kansas, Arizona rule preseason honor team

By Jim O'Connell
AP Basketball Writer

Only three schools could brag about having a preseason All-America this year.

Kansas forwards Raef LaFrentz and Paul Pierce and Arizona guards Mike Bibby and Miles Simon highlighted The Associated Press' preseason All-America team Tuesday. They were joined by North Carolina forward Antawn Jamison.

Since the preseason All-America team was first selected before the 1986-87 season, only Duke's Bobby Hurley and Grant Hill, before the 1992-93 season, had been chosen as a teammate tandem.

LaFrentz, a 6-foot-11 senior and the only returning All-America from last season, was the leading vote-getter. He was named on 69 of the 71 ballots cast by a national media panel.

Jamison, a 6-9 junior, was second with 67 votes and was followed by Bibby, a 6-1 sophomore who received 59 votes, and Simon, a 6-5 senior who had 32, and Pierce, a 6-7 junior, who was named on 28 ballots.

Bibby averaged 13.5 points and 5.2 assists last season while shooting almost 40 percent from 3-point range. He was believed to be the first freshman to lead a team to the national championship as the Wildcats won it all last season with an overtime victory over Kentucky in the title game.

Simon, who missed the start of last season for academic reasons, averaged 18.4 points and 4.2 assists while shooting 41 percent from 3-point range. With the top eight players back from last season's team, the Wildcats are the preseason No. 1 team.

"Not only is it a great honor for Mike and Miles, but it is also a great honor for our program to have two guys picked to be on the same team," Arizona coach Lute Olson said Monday. "The way Mike and Miles performed throughout last season was outstanding, but the real key for them to receive this type of honor was the way they played in the NCAA tournament, particularly in the Final Four."

One of the three No. 1 seeds Arizona knocked off on the way to the title was Kansas, which held the No. 1 ranking for the final 15 weeks of last season.

LaFrentz averaged 18.5 points and 9.3 rebounds last season while shooting 58 percent from the field. He stepped up when seniors Scot Pollard and Jacque Vaughn were sidelined with injuries.

Pierce averaged 16.3 points and 6.8 rebounds while leading the team with a 47 percent mark from 3-point range. Many thought LaFrents and Pierce would head to the NBA. Instead, they are back for a team ranked second in the preseason poll.

"I am very happy for the two youngsters, they are very deserving," Kansas coach Roy Williams said. "Both are outstanding players and the fact that they chose to return to Kansas as opposed to going to the NBA shows that they also enjoy college life, and I think that makes for a healthy atmosphere."

Jamison helped the Tar Heels reach the Final Four last season, averaging 19.1 points and 9.4 rebounds while shooting 54 percent from the field. His decision to return was a big reason the Tar Heels were ranked fourth in preseason.

Notre Dame senior forward Pat Garrity and Duke junior guard Trajan Langdon were the only other players to receive more than 10 votes, getting 22 and 12, respectively.

San Antonio edges Timberwolves

More Sports/8D

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — David Robinson had 36 points, 16 rebounds and the winning tip-in at the buzzer Tuesday night. Just wait until he starts playing like himself again.

In just his seventh game since missing nearly all of last season with injuries, Robinson dominated like the Admiral of old in San Antonio's 93-92 win over the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Spurs coach Gregg Popovich, whose 6-1 team is off to its best start since 1991-92, said Robinson still is tentative at times and uncertain of himself in some situations.

A prime example came on his missed layup an instant before his winning tip-in, and Robinson agreed with his coach's assessment.

"It's never enough around here," Robinson joked. "But I still don't feel like I'm moving as well. Like at the end, I mean, normally I just spring off the ground and dunk that pretty easily. I still don't feel like I'm exploding like I want to, but I'm feeling better and better every day."

All five starters scored in double figures for Minnesota, led by Tom Gugliotta's 22 points. Stephon Marbury scored all 15 of his points in the second half, including a driving jumper that put the Wolves up 92-91 with 2.8 seconds left.

But Robinson got the ball on the baseline after the ensuing inbounds pass. He had a wide-open layup, but shockingly rolled the shot over the rim. He atoned by springing up on the other side and tipping the ball in.

"When I stepped through I was kind of surprised I was wide open like that," Robinson said. "Those I've just got to dunk."

Cavaliers 101, Bulls 80

CLEVELAND — Shawn Kemp scored 21 points and the new-look Cavaliers blew out the struggling Bulls, one of Cleveland's most convincing victories over Chicago in the Michael Jordan era.

The Bulls, without the injured Scottie Pippen and with Dennis Rodman still trying to find his form, dropped to 4-3 and remained winless on the road as they seek a sixth NBA title this decade.

Hawks 89, Sonics 87

ATLANTA — Atlanta improved to 7-0 when Steve Smith hit a turnaround jumper from 16 feet with 4.9 seconds remaining.

Gary Payton had a chance to tie for the Sonics, driving into the lane as time was running down. But his left-handed layup hit the rim three times before bouncing out as the horn sounded.

Heat 101, Kings 82

MIAMI — Isaac Austin scored 24 points and P.J. Brown grabbed a career-high 18 rebounds for Miami.

Reserve forward Mark Strickland, receiving extra playing time with Jamal Mashburn injured, scored 10 of his career-high 14 points in the first half for the Heat.

Knicks 93, Nuggets 90

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing scored 28 points, survived a harsh foul in the second quarter and helped New York avoid another fourth-quarter collapse.

The Knicks almost self-destructed in the final quarter for the fourth time this season, but Denver rookie Bobby Jackson lost control of the ball and was unable to get away a 3-pointer before the final buzzer.

San Antonio's Avery Johnson gets in the way of Minnesota's Stephon Marbury during the Spurs' 93-92 win Tuesday in Minneapolis.

Lakers 118, Mavericks 96

DALLAS — Shaquille O'Neal scored 25 of his season-high 37 points in the first half and the Los Angeles Lakers rolled to their fifth consecutive victory.

The Lakers' 5-0 start is their best since 1987-88 when they got off to a franchise-best 8-0.

O'Neal, making his third start of the season, dominated Mavericks center Shawn Bradley in the first half, converting 12 of 16 shots as the Lakers built a 57-43 lead.

Princeton upsets No. 22 Longhorns, 62-56

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — It's usually much later in the season when Princeton scares or beats a team considered much better.

The Tigers started this season that way Tuesday night with a 62-56 victory over No. 22 Texas in the Coaches vs. Cancer Classic.

Princeton will play North Carolina State, which beat No. 19 Georgia 47-45 in the opener of the doubleheader at Continental Airlines Arena, in Wednesday night's championship game.

The Tigers used the same basic principles — patient offense and team defense — used over the years in NCAA tournament scares against the likes of Georgetown, Arkansas and Villanova and the huge first-round win over defending champion UCLA in the 1996 tournament.

Texas was playing without coach Tom Penders on the sideline. He underwent heart surgery last Thursday, having a defibrillator implanted. The 52-year-old Penders, who was diagnosed with cardiomyopathy in 1991, is expected to resume his regular duties within 10-14 days.

Princeton went on a 14-4 to break a 36-36 tie for a 10-point lead with 5:46 to play. Texas wasn't done yet as three 3-pointers, the last two by freshman Luke Axtell, had the Longhorns within 50-49 with 3:30 to play.

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 12, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, Nov. 12, 1997:
Physical activities of all kinds are highlighted in this fulfilling year. Personally and socially, you are a dynamo. You are unwilling to accept anything less than the best, brightest and most promising for yourself and those you care about. The obvious result is success for you and satisfaction for your loved ones, who become more important to you than ever. If you are single, you attract a potential soul mate who is wealthy and strong, and gives you a run for your money. If attached, you and your mate might take that dream vacation before the end of 1997. TAURUS helps you prosper.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ Money matters flow; effort is minimal, and others don't mind your taking the lead. A friend fantasizes about being more than your buddy. Recognize this crush before you get too involved in a project with this person. Tonight: Take a timeout.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ You are capable of tireless effort for a heartfelt goal that nears completion. Focus on details, so you don't miss anything in your zeal. Another is impressed with what you accomplish. A loved one wants more of your time; you'll be happy if you permit that! Tonight: Keep it to two.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ The spirit is willing, but the flesh is still a step behind. Honor your body's needs, which are for rest and a slow pace. Something you hear is unsettling, but before you confront another, think it through. A cool head and good cheer save the day. Tonight: Check your e-mail.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ A friend shows that he genuinely supports you. You could become closer, if you so choose. It's entirely up to you! Meanwhile, if you're involved, your partner stamps his feet and demands equal time. Don't deny him your company. Tonight: Be romantic!
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ A career coup awaits you, if you're diplomatic. Still, all is precarious for another day or two, so don't jump the gun. A co-worker recognizes what you can offer. Let your work speak for itself; don't point out anything. Patience is essential; you're almost there! Tonight: Let yourself get distracted.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ A romantic tie entices you to take a vacation, and midweek or not, at least consider it. You create a stir wherever you go; don't hide your light. If single, someone you meet could be "the one"! Even if you're happily solo, camaraderie and fun mix. Tonight: Grab the limelight.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Finances, a domestic matter and personal transformation are all highlighted, although events might unexpectedly occur. Stay open to opportunities that come from left field; these could be the most important. You might receive money that others owe you. Tonight: Shop.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ What you say could elicit a shocking reaction from a partner. Make sure he heard what you actually said; if he didn't, clarify your viewpoint. In no time, you will both be laughing up a storm! Creativity and libido are strong. Tonight: Be alone, together.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Think through a financial proposal; the time might not be right to move just yet. Work on the small stuff: Fine-tune details, verify information, check in with others for feedback. When it all comes together, you'll know it, and nothing will stop you! Tonight: Go to bed early.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ You are energy, imagination and profundity all in one; others might be taken aback by your strength. A new idea or project draws applause. A romantic tie is also impressed, albeit in a more low-key way. Don't neglect him! Tonight: Enjoy candlelight and champagne.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Home is where the heart is, with stamina in short supply. Pace yourself, and do only what is necessary. Puttering around is more satisfying than setting the world on fire. Do things for yourself. You'll know when you're ready to return to the social scene. Tonight: Have a chat.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Good-natured noise surrounds your office and home. You've got plenty to say, and can find many wonderful ways to get your point across. A friend engages you in witty repartee that could get heated. Such fun! Tonight: Enjoy a late night.

1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	6 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♠

Here's an opportunity to rate your play technique. Cover the East-West cards and decide how you would play six clubs after West leads the nine of spades.

The bidding was a model of accuracy. South showed a powerful hand with at least five clubs and four hearts, then patterned out the distribution with a cue-bid in diamonds in response to North's jump rebid in spades. North needed no more to bid the small slam in clubs.

Win the spade lead in dummy, lead the ten of clubs to the queen and cash the king, jettisoning dummy's nine. Unblocking dummy's clubs proves to be vital when West shows out on the second round. Now it is an easy matter to cross to the king of diamonds, discard a diamond on dummy's remaining high spade, then take the marked finesse for the jack of trumps. Draw the last trump, then lead a low heart to the jack. Since the ace of diamonds is still in hand, it does not help East to withhold the king, so the only trick you lose is to the king of hearts.

If you don't unblock the high clubs from the table, you will be defeated. Now when you finesse the third round of clubs, you are stuck in dummy. Even though the finesse of the jack of hearts wins, when you try to return to hand with the ace of diamonds (you will lose control if you try to get back by ruffing a spade), East ruffs and exits with the queen of spades. Eventually, you still have to concede a heart for down one.

Hunter Tylo's attorney claims TV executive suggested actress get abortion to save job

LOS ANGELES — If Hunter Tylo had gone to "get an abortion," as one TV executive allegedly suggested, she might not have been fired from "Melrose Place," her attorney said in court.

In opening statements in her wrongful termination and breach of contract lawsuit, attorney Nathan Goldberg said Monday the suggestion came from Jonathan Levin, president of the production company Spelling Entertainment.

Aaron Spelling's company said Tylo, who is seeking unspecified damages, was fired before she appeared on the primetime Fox show because her pregnancy made her unsuitable to play a sexy seductress.

Goldberg pointed out that the show worked TV magic to conceal star Heather Locklear's recent pregnancy. Lisa Rinna, who plays restaurateur Taylor McBride on the show, recently announced she is pregnant.

MANILA, Philippines — Dozens of slum dwellers, shouting "Martin Sheen, Martin Sheen," welcomed the actor Tuesday as he arrived to lead a fact-finding mission on urban poverty.

Martin Sheen is visiting poor communities to recommend ways to deal with inadequate housing.

Sheen shook hands and embraced supporters.

"The worst form of violence is poverty," he said, quoting Gandhi. "What we see here in Manila among the poor is the reflection of the violence we see against the poor all over the world."

Sheen, 57, said he became aware of poverty in the Philippines when he co-starred in "Apocalypse Now" 20 years ago.

He joined members of the Urban Poor Colloquium, an association of 16 organizations that work with urban poor. They will visit poor communities in Manila and recommend ways of dealing with the problems of inadequate housing and public services.

MALIBU, Calif. — Barbra Streisand says fiance James Brolin is a lot of things rolled into one.

"He's my lover and my romantic other self. But he also fills a need. I now know what it is to have a father," she said in Tuesday's New York Times.

Ms. Streisand's father died when she was 15 months old. If Brolin is a father substitute, then President Clinton's mother, Virginia Kelley, was the kind of mom she always wanted.

"I called her my Southern mom," Ms. Streisand said. "She knew how to soothe with words. Virginia would say, 'Do you know how precious you are? Every conversation, she'd say, 'I love you.' The way I was brought up, nobody would ever used words like 'I love you.'"

So what would Ms. Streisand have turned out like had Mrs. Kelley, who died in 1994, been her real mom?

"Either I would have become president or a very happy Long Island housewife with no artistic ambitions and no need to express herself beyond children and a house. One or the other."

MAYSVILLE, Ky. — Rosemary Clooney had a special gift for the young girls who sang at her wedding — roses from nephew George Clooney.

The "ER" actor and heartthrob couldn't attend the wedding Friday but sent 150 red roses as a present to his aunt and her new husband, Dante DiPaolo.

"It was the biggest bouquet I've ever seen," Ms. Clooney said. "I didn't want to keep them in this little house where only Dante and I could enjoy them."

She stuck the roses in the back seat of her car and she and DiPaolo drove them to the church. She instructed the Rev. Bill Hinds to give one to each of the girls from St. Patrick's High School who sang Mozart's moving Agnus Dei at the wedding.

"Tell them they're from George," Ms. Clooney said.

CHICAGO — Oprah Winfrey has given Morehouse College $1 million for the second time in eight years.

The talk show host's first donation to the men's liberal arts college in Atlanta has funded scholarships for 36 students and has grown to more than $2.3 million.

Graduates of the only all-male black college in the country include the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Spike Lee and Maynard Jackson, the first black mayor of Atlanta.

TRIP: UIL punishes Stanton for being 2A in West Texas

(From 1D)

The travel involved is something that Cotton believes UIL officials don't understand. He may be right looking at how far 340 miles actually is.

Even if the Buffaloes go to a state title game in Dallas or Austin, the trip to "Mile Marker 0" is the farthest the team will travel this season. Another example of the vastness of the district is that Stanton to Tornillo is approximately 300 miles. Compare that to the distance from Dallas to San Antonio, which is only 280 miles.

For a national perspective, Stanton to Anthony is longer than the distance from New York to Washington, D.C. (235 miles). It is also close to the distance between Kittery, Maine, and Newark, New Jersey — a trip that goes through seven states.

The numbers go beyond the Rand McNally Atlas. For Cotton and the Stanton ISD, there's the matter of the bottom line. Cotton, who also serves as the school's athletic director, says the school will lose a significant amount of money over the two years while competing in District 6-2A.

"We are $18,000 to $20,000 over the normal budget," Cotton said. "Our normal travel budget over the two years when we were in the previous District 6-2A was $15,000. This year, it is over $27,000. This trip alone for the football team is $1,500 to $2,000."

The UIL's reasoning for placing Stanton in a district with Tornillo, Van Horn and Anthony is to have six teams in the district, thus avoiding open dates for the teams involved.

Spain can't promise that Stanton's fate of being in the same district as Van Horn, Anthony and Tornillo will not happen again. Although the UIL can leave a district with an odd number of teams, and even five if they so choose, Spain said the decision to put Stanton in 6-2A two years ago had to do with giving the district an even number of teams, therefore, making scheduling easier.

"It is policy to keep districts on even numbers when possible," Spain said. "They have to have someone else to play. Realizing Texas is such a large state, we will have drastic situations. With 560,000 square miles, we will make some folks unhappy."

Spain even went on to say that Stanton could have helped itself in some situations.

"There are multiple ways to cut fiscal losses — schedule neutral sites and alternate weekends. These are the choices they can make. They can cut (expenses). That is their option," Spain said. "It is fiscally impossible to make everyone happy and Stanton just got caught on the edge."

The Stanton coaches chuckle at the thought of neutral site games and other ways to cut costs. A neutral site game is still over 180 miles to play teams like Tornillo and Anthony at places like Alpine or Van Horn.

"We tried to go to another district, but the other teams in the district voted to keep us in," Stanton basketball coach Doug Gordon said of the efforts to move basketball and the others sports to a closer district.

"Now we are stuck to do the traveling," Gordon added. We are the low man on the totem pole. We do as we are told. It is 5-1 in the voting and we are the ONE."

Also, Stanton has been the odd-man out when it comes to scheduling in other sports, not just basketball and football.

In track, Stanton, which has more people on its junior varsity track team than four other district schools have on their varsity teams, was denied the chance (by a 5-1 vote of the district schools) to host the district meet this year. Now, its 70 tracksters have to travel to El Paso. Cotton estimates that will cost $3,000 for that trip, not including travel.

Other district competitions include the district's tennis meet in Alpine (over a three-hour drive), and district golf in Fort Stockton (just under two hours). Last year, the district cross country meet was held in Tornillo, which didn't even field a cross country team. Two Stanton athletes, Lacy Chandler and Tiffany Madison, had to make the trip with the cross country team and later go back as cheerleaders for the football game on the same weekend, a trek that covered over 1,200 miles.

Anthony is a school all too familiar with the label of "the longest district road trip in Texas." The Wildcats have owned that distinction for three straight years. Even before the most recent realignment, Anthony had to travel 444 miles to play Eldorado in 1995. That year, Anthony had to play all its football games on the road, a prerequisite for being allowed in the district. Before that, Anthony played what was called a non-honors schedule against New Mexico teams and junior varsity teams in Texas.

In 1995, Anthony almost proved to be the ultimate road warrior, just missing the playoffs in its last district game. Its loss to McCamey allowed Eldorado to make the playoffs.

"I don't know if you get used to the travel. You just accept it. It won't matter what the UIL does. We will have to travel," Anthony football coach George Janes said. "I don't know if you can justify realignment. I heard they (the UIL) take a rubber band and if another school is in our area, then it is in our district."

Janes said that Anthony's location forced him to schedule four of his first five games against teams from New Mexico. That's what budgeting and the rigors of the travel have done to Anthony while playing in 6-2A.

"Our budget has been $15,000 in each of the last three years," Janes said. "That takes care of football, volleyball and basketball. That leaves track eating burgers."

Playing New Mexico schools also affects his team once it comes to district play where he says his team gets "torn up" after playing weaker New Mexico schools. Anthony was 4-6 overall but 1-4 in district.

The disparity in Stanton's talent level and that of the rest of the district, especially the western schools, is another reason Stanton wants out. With the exception of the Iraan game, Stanton, which finished the season ranked No. 4 in Class 2A by the Associated Press, outclasses the field. Overall, the Buffs outscored their opponents by a 296-21 margin. Take out the game with Iraan, the defending state Class 2A champion, and Stanton's edge was 269-9.

"I'll be glad to get out of this district. Hopefully, we will not do it again," Stanton junior linebacker Jody Lauder said. "You hope to get out of these games with no one hurt. Not to sound cocky but you know you are going to win. It would have been better to have big district games where we didn't win by 50."

Stanton's dominance got to the point where many opponents kept running clocks to help keep scores down. That was the case in an 88-0 win at Tornillo in 1996 when Stanton scored 35 points in the second half, snapping the ball just twice. Stanton also had to yank first-team players out of the game early for damage control.

Friday against Anthony, Stanton's all-state candidates quarterback Kyle Herm and wide receiver Tyron Davis only played three minutes into the second quarter. Even though Herm had 322 yards and four touchdowns passing and Davis had 191 yards in receiving yards, it could hurt their respective chances in the all-state balloting. Playing so little the week before the playoffs also can't help down the line as Stanton readies for Shallowater in the bi-district round of the Class 2A playoffs.

"It is frustrating playing just a quarter," Herm said. "It is like Nebraska traveling cross country to play Appalachian State."

Playing in this district has also hurt in terms of gate receipts. Last year when Anthony's football team traveled to Stanton, six people sat on the visitor's side and two were coaches from Shallowater. Tornillo brought eight, including the athletic director, an ex-coach from Odessa and the Iraan scouts.

Traveling and lack of competition also takes its toll in sports other than football. Stanton's boys basketball team won its district title before being booted from the playoffs in the first round.

"We would win and win big," Gordon said. "We had one game under 10 points and that was at McCamey, who was state ranked. This district wears you out. We have to make two trips in football and three in basketball."

There is a positive side to life in 6-2A. Seeing the advantages, Stanton has over schools like Anthony and Tornillo has some counting their blessings.

At Tornillo, which the Buffaloes say is the worst football facility in the district, a fence topped by razor wire surrounds the field, which is located 300-400 yards from the Rio Grande. Cotton says the worries of the drug trafficking along the border even played a factor in the game. Stanton had scored against Tornillo, but before the coach could get the kicking team on the field for the extra point, a Stanton manager asked the coach not to kick it, so she didn't have to go outside the fences and into the darkness to chase the ball. Cotton went for two.

At Anthony, the field is better, although not without its flaws like the two permanent sprinkler heads present right in the middle of the field and sticking two inches above ground.

"On these trips, you see more sites than you normally see," Stanton defensive tackle Josh Carson said. "You also see how nice your facilities are. It is like you see them wishing they had it as nice as we do. All of these guys on the bus would love to play no matter where it may be — on a street or where ever. That is the difference this year than in past years."

Playing in the far reaches of West Texas like Stanton did Friday night in Anthony can also bring a team down to earth.

"Oh, Lord, what have we got ourselves into," said Cotton. "Last week we played in the 2A Super Bowl in front of 4,000 people and we are here (Anthony) this week."

Unfortunately for Stanton, that's life in 6-2A.

Tale of a Fateful Trip

Chronology of the Stanton football team's trip to Anthony on Nov. 7 (all times CST).

10:00 a.m. — Chartered bus leaves Stanton's field house.

10:01 a.m. — First of three movies seen on the trip, Wayne's World, popped in VCR.

10:02 a.m. — One mile down I-20, road sign says "El Paso 313 miles."

11:45 a.m. to 12:35 p.m. — Stop in Pecos to eat pre-arranged buffet at Quality Inn.

1:15 p.m. — I-20 merges with I-10; Road sign says 188 miles to El Paso. Assistant football coach and head basketball coach Doug Gordon says, "The fun thing is that I get to do this in two months and two days," referring to the basketball team having to go back for a district game.

3:15 p.m. to 4:10 p.m. — Stop in Fabens for players to stretch legs and walk around. The one rest stop that coaches hope to visit is closed due to highway construction. Coaches decide to head to Fabens High School to allow players to toss footballs around.

5:10 p.m. — Arrive at Anthony/Road Marker 0. Upon driving past the run-down gymnasium, a sign that says "Want a new Gym?... Vote Yes," becomes visible. Game will not start until 8 p.m., so players spend time unwinding and warming up. Trip odometer indicates bus has traveled 349.9 miles since leaving Stanton.

8 p.m. — Game starts.

8:40 p.m. — Buffaloes score on their first six possessions, hold 42-0 lead in the second quarter. The lead stretches to 49-0 by halftime.

10:40 p.m. — Game ends with no change to Stanton's 77-0 third quarter lead. Coach Mark Cotton tells players that the bus will leave in 13 minutes.

10:55 p.m. Bus leaves Anthony High School; Cotton runs through game tape, which except for a few hits and scores brings little emotion out of the Stanton team.

11:35 p.m. — Bus stops at the Iron Skillet, a restaurant at a truck stop on the outskirts of El Paso. Burgers and fries had been pre-ordered. Players eat while the last movie finishes up.

12:30 a.m. — Lights out! No more movies will be shown in an attempt to get players to get some shut eye. At this time, some players even lie on the bus' floor to get comfortable. There will be just one more stop (just on the other side of Van Horn), so the driver can get some coffee.

4:35 a.m. — After 18 hours and 35 minutes and over 690 miles since leaving campus the previous morning, the bus arrives at Stanton High School. Coach Cotton tells players no meetings will be held until Monday. Already one day is lost in preparation for Stanton's first round game with Shallowater.

Steve Young should keep the San Francisco 49ers in contention for the Super Bowl, but the Dallas Cowboys may be out of it.

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

It was a typical Jerry Jones high.

"We have a chance for a storybook season," he said after his Cowboys beat the Cardinals (the Cardinals?) on Sunday.

Storybook, perhaps, but not with the ending Jerry prefers.

For as the NFL's stretch run begins after the 10-game positioning season, there are perhaps six teams that have a shot at winning the Super Bowl. And the Cowboys are not among them.

It's really a short list: a top three of Denver, San Francisco and Green Bay (in any order you want) and dark horses Pittsburgh, Jacksonville and Minnesota.

The others, like the Cowboys? First or second-round playoff material at best.

And say hello to Indianapolis, a team with a real shot of going 0-16, particularly now that the Colts are down to Kerwin Bell, a fourth-stringer who will become a fifth-stringer when Peyton Manning arrives next summer. (Was that a sign of relief from the Manning family when the Saints, who turned papa Archie into a punching bag, won their third game last weekend and probably eliminated themselves?)

NFC: San Francisco (9-1) can and probably will clinch the NFC West against Carolina at home next week. "Then we want home field for the playoffs," says Dana Stubblefield, one of several dominant players on what's probably the league's best defense. The last four games are the toughest — at Kansas City, Minnesota, Denver and at Seattle — but 13-3 probably does it.

Add to the playoffs Green Bay and Minnesota, both 8-2. They meet Dec. 1 at the Metrodome, where Mike Holmgren is 0-5 as a head coach. Tampa Bay (7-3) should make it, along with two of the three teams contending for the NFC East title. The Cowboys are 5-5, one game behind the Giants and Redskins.

Yes, the Cowboys will be underdogs only once in their last six games, in two weeks at Green Bay.

But they always have trouble with Norv Turner's Redskins, who come to town Sunday, and they could also lose any of the other three home games — Tennessee, Carolina and the Giants. Their 2-4 division record bodes poorly in tiebreakers.

It's simple: they're not a dominant team, although the defense is close, and they don't play in the NFC West, where the schedule gave San Francisco half a season to work out its kinks. Yes, they could make the playoffs, but picture them playing at Minnesota, San Francisco or Green Bay in January.

Jerry's storybook ending won't happen, Barry Switzer will probably retire or be retired, and someone who can work with coach Jones (not George Seifert, as was rumored Tuesday) will arrive to coach an aging team that desperately needs help on the offensive line.

AFC: Denver (9-1) will just about wrap up the West if it beats Kansas City (7-3) this weekend. In fact, the Chiefs, without Elvis Grbac, could have a problem making the playoffs. They go to Seattle the following week and then have the 49ers, meaning they could be looking at four straight losses.

Seattle (6-4) should be a wild card. It's got New Orleans, Baltimore, Atlanta and Oakland (combined record 12-28) among its six games.

Then take Pittsburgh and Jacksonville (both 7-3) and assume the Dolphins, Patriots and Jets (all 6-4) have a shot. The Patriots are 4-1 in the division and hold the tiebreaker edge; the Jets, 2-4, don't.

That's eight teams for six spots in the conference.

And the Super Bowl?

Denver's likely to have home field advantage in the playoffs. Having learned their lesson last year, it's hard to see the Broncos losing at Mile High as long as John Elway and Terrell Davis stay healthy.

The NFC representative could depend on where the title game is played. The Packers' problem is getting by Minnesota. If the game's in Green Bay, the Pack probably goes back. But in San Francisco or Minnesota — HELP!

Tyler JC turns down Cowboys' camp

TYLER (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys can scratch Tyler Junior College off their list of prospective new training camp sites.

Tyler Junior College officials said Tuesday they're not interested in playing host to the Cowboys, who have severed their relationship with St. Edwards University in Austin after eight years training there.

College trustees said they conducted an informal poll and could find almost no one in the East Texas city who supported bringing in the NFL team for preseason workouts.

Despite the unanimous board vote, Tyler Area Chamber of Commerce President Tom Mullins said he wasn't giving up and might try pitching the use of another local site — the campus of the now-defunct Ambassador College in Big Sandy.

"Before we call them and say, 'No, this area's totally not interested or not able to respond to your needs,' we need to exhaust all possibilities," Mullins told the Tyler Morning Telegraph.

TJC trustee Pat Thomas said the board decision was based in the belief that the school's primary mission is education.

"We need to make a policy that this is an educational institution and ... if anything doesn't enhance that, it's in the wrong place," Thomas said.

Officials also cited potential conflicts with student sports programs.

The Cowboys and St. Edwards decided to part ways after this year's training camp, which ended with players trashing one of the school's dormitories. Both sides called it a mutual decision and said it had nothing to do with the dorm incident.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones has named several possible training camp sites, including San Antonio, El Paso, Houston and East Texas. He said in September that camp will "unquestionably be in Texas."

On Tuesday, Cowboys officials toured the campus of Midwestern State in Wichita Falls.

Tyler Junior College was thought to be the only East Texas site with facilities large enough for the team.

Team spokesman Rich Dalrymple said Tuesday that he hadn't heard of the college trustees' vote and declined to discuss how things stand with other possible sites.

"There are still quite a few," he said. "As is the case with all of them, we're not getting into who might be ahead of the others."

Humphries still has concussion

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Chargers quarterback Stan Humphries says that he's still showing symptoms of a concussion he suffered on Nov. 2.

His headaches are starting to go away, "but I'm having a lot of problems not sleeping," Humphries said Tuesday. "I guess that has a little something to do with it, they said."

The Chargers said last week that once Humphries' symptoms clear up, he'll have to sit out one month. That could effectively end his season, because he won't be able to practice during that month.

Third-year pro Craig Whelihan replaced Humphries in Sunday's loss to Seattle, and will make a second straight start against the visiting Oakland Raiders this Sunday night.

Aggies Stewart gets credit now

■ Team's success this year is reverse of last year's troubles.

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION — Last season, Branndon Stewart took the blame. This year, he's getting the credit.

The Texas A&M quarterback is being praised by his coaches and fans for helping the No. 18 Aggies (7-2, 4-2 in Big 12) battle their way into the Big 12 South lead with a chance at the conference title next month.

But Stewart is accepting pats on the back in the same quiet manner he took his shots a year ago, when the Aggies sagged to 6-6.

"I think that just goes with the territory. it's just like being a head coach," Stewart said. "A lot of times the head coach gets blamed for the players not being focused. A lot of times the coach has nothing to do with it. it's just the attitude of the players.

"It's the same with the quarterback. They handle the ball on every down and yet it takes 11 players to win a game and 11 players to lose. It's just easier to point to one person, the coach or player for a loss or credit for a win."

Stewart transferred from Tennessee after he lost the starting quarterback's job to Peyton Manning. He took over for the Aggies last season with high expectations. Too high.

Now Stewart ranks No. 21 nationally in passing efficiency, two spots behind Manning.

"I haven't made the mistakes I made last year, so I feel good about that," Stewart said. "I feel comfortable on offense, and I have a feel for what the defense is doing. I think the key for me is just the experience of last year and just playing more football."

Stewart started the season sharing duties with Randy McCown, but got his first full game against Oklahoma State and rallied the Aggies to an overtime victory after they trailed 22-7 early in the fourth quarter.

Last week, he completed 18 of 25 passes for a season-high 231 yards against Baylor.

In his last 10 quarters, Stewart has completed 48 of 75 passes for 583 yards and five touchdowns with no interceptions. He has a string of 98 consecutive passes without an interception.

Beating Oklahoma State in overtime was unifying to the team, but they were already together, Stewart said.

"I feel we've played together all season," Stewart said. "There's good relationships with all the guys. It just came through in the Oklahoma State game. I don't think it brought us together. We'd already jelled as an offense."

The Aggies close out the regular season at Oklahoma on Saturday and against Texas on Nov. 28 in Kyle Field.

The Sooners (3-7, 1-5) remind Stewart of the 1996 Aggies.

"Last year, we had turnovers and if we had eliminated those type of things, we win some big ballgames," Stewart said. "They (Oklahoma) have the potential if they don't turn the ball over to all of a sudden be as good a team that we've played against.

"So you have to go in expecting to pay a great football team, which they are."

Miracle grab lifts 'Husker freshman into spotlight

By Tim Korte
Associated Press Writer

LINCOLN, Neb. — Matt Davison was recruited by Colorado State, Kansas State, Nebraska and Wyoming. Good thing for the Cornhuskers that he decided to stay home.

The freshman from Tecumseh (population 1,900) made the biggest play of the college football season during Nebraska's 45-38 overtime victory at Missouri last Saturday.

"A lot of people didn't know who I was until that catch," Davison said Tuesday. "I was a nobody. Still am."

Tom Osborne feels otherwise.

"Matt is a celebrity now," the Nebraska coach said. "That one catch has catapulted him into the limelight."

Davison probably would have missed this season with a redshirt year if not for injuries to more experienced receivers. After last weekend, Nebraska fans are glad he was available.

With time running out and Nebraska trailing 38-31, quarterback Scott Frost drove the Huskers downfield. On the last play of regulation, Frost threw to Shevin Wiggins at the goal line.

Wiggins was flanked by two defenders and missed the catch. But as he dropped to the ground and fell backward, Wiggins kicked the football a few yards up and behind him into the end zone.

Davison appeared and made a fingertip catch with the ball only inches above the turf. The Huskers tied the game with Kris Brown's PAT kick and won with Frost's 12-yard TD run in overtime.

On the final drive, Davison said he was trying to concentrate on hand signals — used to combat crowd noise — relayed from the sidelines to junior receivers Kenny Cheatum and Lance Brown.

"When the last play came in, Lance signaled a double-slant," Davison said. "I thought he had signaled that it was to our side, and he did. I was kind of surprised. I thought they would go the other way because Kenny had been having a pretty good game."

"I'd been releasing outside on my man the whole drive," Davison said. "I just gave a little move outside. He kind of bailed out, which gave me and Lance both a clear path to the end zone.

"When I first looked back at Scott, he was already looking to his right. He had already looked to the left and was back to the right, looking at Shevin. So I was just trying to get across the field and get in his vision in case he had to scramble or whatever," Davison said.

Then the football came free.

"I saw the ball going toward the ground," he said. "I guess I thought it was going to hit the ground because I kind of stopped for a split second. Then I saw it get kicked, and just happened to be there."

The play salvaged Nebraska's national title hopes. Although the narrow victory dropped the Huskers from No. 1 to No. 3 in the rankings, Nebraska remains on track for an Orange Bowl contest against No. 2 Florida State.

Cowboys assistant won't talk about Longhorns job

AUSTIN (AP) — Dallas Cowboys defensive coordinator Dave Campo says he's uncomfortable talking about the head coaching job at the University of Texas since the job isn't even vacant yet.

Campo wouldn't confirm or deny that UT officials have contacted him about the job now held by John Mackovic, who's widely rumored to be on the way out because of the Longhorns' poor season.

Asked if he'd want the UT job if Mackovic were dismissed, Campo told the Austin American-Statesman, "When a coach has an opportunity to look at different positions, you do that in this business. A lot of times, people have goals to become a head coach if there is an opportunity.

"If that happens in the future, I would listen to just about anything. Right now I'm sensitive because of both teams involved."

The Cowboys are 5-5 with six regular-season games remaining this year, and Campo doesn't want to lobby for any position while they're still playing.

However, Cowboys head coach Barry Switzer said Campo would be a good choice.

"Dave's one of the four best defensive coaches I've ever known," Switzer said. "I always try to promote my assistants when a job is open, but right now the Texas job isn't open. Coaches don't get involved in the speculation of other coaching jobs."

NEW YORK — Oil futures prices rose Tuesday on expectations the United Nations will act against Iraq for barring U.S. weapons inspectors.

After rising as much as 33 cents, the December crude oil contract settled up 11 cents at $20.51 barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Prices rose amid talk the United Nations will punish Iraq for refusing to withdraw its threats to expel U.S. weapons inspectors and to shoot down U-2 spy planes.

Analysts speculated the United Nations might decide against renewing an agreement that lets Iraq export $2.1 billion in oil every six months to buy food and medicine for its people.

The latest exporting period expires on Dec. 5. Under that agreement, an exception to a U.N. embargo, Iraq exports about 1 percent of total world crude output. Analysts say a disruption might not be quickly absorbed by other producers, causing short-term supply tightness.

December natural gas rose 6.2 cents to $3.495 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar retreats

NEW YORK — The dollar dropped to its lowest level this year against the British pound in thin trading Tuesday after Britain's government reported inflation exceeded its targets last month.

Sterling also was aided by traders seeking refuge from Asia's economic troubles, which in turn helped push the dollar to its third consecutive six-month high against the Japanese yen. The U.S. currency finished unchanged vs. the German mark.

In late New York trading, the pound was quoted at $1.7044, up from $1.6961 late Monday, to reach the dollar's lowest level since Jan. 1 and its second straight 10-month low.

The U.S. currency also settled at 125.03 yen, up from 124.40 late Monday, to reach its highest level since May 7. The dollar was unchanged at 1.7077 marks.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday: 1.3893 Swiss francs, up from 1.3887; 5.7217 French francs, up from 5.7155; 1,673 Italian lire, up from 1,672.75; and 1.4068 Canadian dollars, down from 1.4069.

Dow edges higher

NEW YORK — Blue-chip stocks edged higher Tuesday, ending a three-session slump, but the broad market finished mostly lower after drifting through a lazy holiday session.

The Dow Jones industrial average surrendered an early gain for the second straight day, but turned higher during the final hour and rose 6.14 to 7,558.73.

With the Treasury bond market closed for Veterans Day and a Federal Reserve meeting looming on Wednesday, there was little conviction behind the stock market's moves in either direction.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by a slim 10-to-9 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled just 434.61 million shares.

The Standard & Poor's 500-stock list rose 2.65 to 923.78, and the NYSE composite index rose 0.79 to 485.66.

The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies fell 1.97 to 433.43, the Nasdaq composite index fell 5.86 to 1,584.86, and the American Stock Exchange composite index fell 0.04 to 680.43.

Kodak plans to eliminate 10,000 jobs

■ Layoffs part of plan to cut costs by $1 billion.

Associated Press

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Eastman Kodak Co. said Tuesday it is eliminating 10,000 jobs, or 10.5 percent of its work force, as part of a plan to cut costs by at least $1 billion and revive sluggish sales and profits.

It is the latest in a series of overhauls since 1983 at the world's biggest photography company, which has encountered increasingly fierce competition from Japan's Fuji Photo Film Co.

The cuts will be made over the next two years, at least half of them by the end of 1998. Kodak plans to set aside at least $1 billion during the fourth quarter to pay for the job cuts and other expenses of the restructuring.

The layoffs among Kodak's 95,000-strong labor force worldwide will account for only about half of the savings, company executives said.

The company will reduce research spending next year by between $100 million and $150 million compared with this year. The company's overall research spending in 1996 was about $1 billion.

Kodak also will reduce its sales force, hire other companies to do more of its manufacturing and look for more joint ventures and partnerships.

The job cuts will be made unit-by-unit and employees are expected to be notified by Dec. 1 at the latest.

Stung by an anticipated 25 percent slide in profits this year and Fuji's inroads in the U.S. film market, Kodak in September axed 200 senior and middle management jobs.

Kodak CEO George Fisher pauses during a news conference Tuesday in New York. Eastman Kodak Co. said Tuesday it is eliminating 10,000 jobs, or 10.5 percent of its work force, as part of a plan to cut costs by at least $1 billion and revive sluggish sales and profits.

In refocusing research costs, Kodak is attempting to curb this year's projected losses of $400 million in digital photography. Losses totaled $300 million through the first three quarters.

Chief executive George Fisher's predecessor, Kay Whitmore, was fired in 1993 for failing to cut costs deeply enough. Two weeks later — before Fisher's arrival from Motorola — Kodak slashed 10,000 jobs.

Microsoft wants federal lawsuit dropped

■ Company says customers aren't required to use its Internet browser.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — People don't have to use Microsoft Corp.'s Internet browser just because it's there, company lawyers are arguing in trying to fend off a government lawsuit claiming the computer giant is anti-competitive.

Microsoft filed court papers Monday night asking a federal judge here to dismiss the Justice Department suit accusing the Redmond, Wash., company of trying to corner the market on browsers, which enable computer users to find and retrieve information on the Internet.

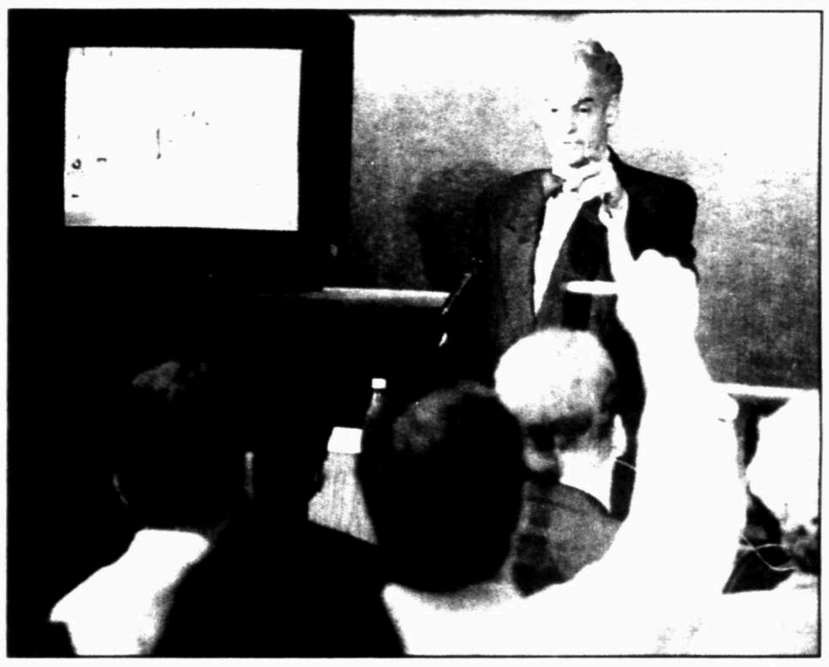
"There's nothing ... which in any way precludes or discourages end users from installing on their system any type of software that they think would be useful or fun," said William H. Neukom, Microsoft's senior vice president for law and corporate affairs.

The Justice Department's antitrust division last month filed the suit objecting to Microsoft's requirement that personal computer manufacturers that install the company's popular Windows operating system on their products also install the Microsoft Internet browser, known as Internet Explorer.

The government is seeking an unprecedented $1-million-a-day fine that would take effect if Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson orders a halt to the challenged activity but the company persists.

"Microsoft is unlawfully taking advantage of its Windows monopoly to protect and extend that monopoly," Attorney General Janet Reno said when the suit was filed. "It's plain wrong."

Windows is used on more than 80 percent of the nation's personal computers and an even higher percentage of new computers. It is usually installed at the factory.



AP Photo

William Neukom, senior vice president, Law and Corporate Affairs, Microsoft Corp., meets reporters at the National Press Club in Washington, D.C., Tuesday to discuss the Justice Department's suit against the company.

At a news conference Tuesday, Neukom booted up a personal computer bought new at retail store to show that manufacturers can also install additional brands of browsers as a choice for consumers. The Sony computer came with the leading stand-alone browser, Netscape Navigator, as well as Windows with Internet Explorer.

The Justice Department, however, says Microsoft is in contempt of a 1995 court order barring the company from anti-competitive licensing.

Microsoft's lawyers contend that government officials knew of company plans to market Windows with an Internet browser during that case and did not try to stop it.

"Even a casual reading of the ... (court order) makes it abundantly clear that Microsoft retains unfettered freedom to create integrated products," said the lawyers.

The government has until Nov. 20 to file papers responding to Microsoft. A court hearing has been scheduled for Dec. 5.

'There's nothing...which in any way precludes or discourages end users from installing on their system any type of software that they think would be useful or fun.'

UPR gives Pennzoil deadline

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Pennzoil stock fell 10 percent Tuesday after Union Pacific Resources said it would abandon its $4.2 billion hostile takeover offer as soon as Monday and told a Delaware judge that it doesn't plan to continue challenging Pennzoil's takeover defense.

UPR said it would drop the offer unless Pennzoil starts negotiating a deal by Monday. Pennzoil responded with a board vote to reaffirm its view that the UPR offer is too low.

UPR chief executive Jack Messman said in a letter to Pennzoil Chairman James L. Pate that the value of Pennzoil's international assets appear to have eroded sharply and said UPR didn't want to pursue a hostile offer indefinitely. Messman said Pennzoil's failure to find oil at its Karabakh prospect in the Caspian Sea was a "serious setback" for the Houston-based energy company.

Separately, UPR told a Delaware state court judge that it would not push for a trial on a lawsuit fighting Pennzoil's anti-takeover strategy.

Last month, Pennzoil Co.'s board unanimously rejected UPR's revised offer. Even with a majority stake in Houston-based Pennzoil, UPR still would face Pennzoil's takeover defense, through which new shares are issued to make a hostile takeover too costly.

"UPR's disingenuous attempt to denigrate the value of Pennzoil is nothing more than sour grapes," company spokesman Bob Harper said. Harper said the Caspian Sea project is a three-well project and only one well had been drilled so far.

UPR had offered $84 per share for 50.1 percent of Pennzoil and UPR stock for the rest.

Pennzoil has consistently complained that the offer undervalued the company's stock, which many investors had placed closer to $90 a share.

Midland's House of Pancakes welcomes customers

By Mella McEwen

Midland's new INTERNATIONAL HOUSE OF PANCAKES restaurant has opened its doors on Loop 250 just east of Best Buy.

McEwen

The restaurant offers a full-service menu with breakfast, lunch and dinner items. The breakfast menu includes 16 different types of pancakes, omelettes and other breakfast combinations.

The lunch menu includes grilled sandwiches, hamburgers, cold sandwiches and soups and salads while the dinner menu offers steaks, pork chops, chicken, chicken fried steak, soups and salads. Any item can be ordered at any time of the day.

Hours presently are 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and 6 a.m. to midnight Friday and Saturday. The restaurant will be open 24 hours in the near future.

Just open in the Cornerstone Shopping Center, Loop 250 and Midland Drive, is THE WILD SCALLION restaurant.

The restaurant is owned by David McCartney and Rudy Bernard, who have 20 years experience each as executive chefs. McCartney served as executive chef at The Plaza Club and Bernard was executive chef at The Racquet Club before joining forces to open their own restaurant.

McCartney described the menu as continental contemporary cuisine that features fresh seafood and other dishes. He said everything, from the salad dressings to the pastries and desserts, are made in-house from scratch.

The restaurant offers wine and dinner clubs and will offer cooking lessons after the first of the year. During the holiday season The Wild Scallion will host private parties and there is a special chef's table for anniversary dinners that the celebrating couple can reserve and the chefs will choose the menu, courses, wine and dessert.

It seats 56 and reservations are required for parties of six or more.

The restaurant is open for lunch Monday through Friday from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Currently it is open for dinner Thursday through Saturday from 5 to 10 p.m. and beginning next week will add Wednesday to its dinner schedule.

Midlander Raul Campos has opened FIESTA MEXICANA at 2404 N. Big Spring.

The menu includes hamburgers, salads, a wide variety of appetizers and Mexican dishes, among them carne asade, fajitas, three different types of tacos, a variety of chicken or shrimp dishes and combination plates.

Hours are 10:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday, from 10:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday.

CHEZ LA NAE, which has an Odessa location, has opened a Midland store at 117 E. Wall St. next to Wall Street Bar & Grill.

Daina Perkins, who owns the store with husband Steve, said they sell fine furniture and decorating accessories from around the world.

She said the furniture includes American pieces and pieces from Europe, primarily France, Italy and Spain. Pieces include large armoires that can be used as entertainment units, buffets, dining room sets, bedroom sets, display cabinets and trunks. They also carry antiques from the 1800s up to around 1920 that include old park benches from an English park and trunks from Romania that can be used as coffee tables.

Decorating accessories include new and antique lamps and chandeliers.

The store employs a floral consultant and someone who helps design and execute stained designs on concrete and offers handpainted glassware by order.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and other times by appointment.

A variety of Christmas retailers have opened in Midland Park Mall.

SHOPSMITH has opened in front of Common Scents, selling wood working tools. KNOT-YO-TOYS, in front of Trendy Ts, carries knot-tying toys; DESERT TRADING COMPANY, next to Motherhood Maternity, sells paint and airbrush T-shirts; CALENDAR CLUB offers calenders in front of Athletic Supply; CAMPUS DESIGN, located in front of Sam Goody, carries a variety of college sports wear; HICKORY FARMS is located near The Gap; NFL MAN sells NFL sports wear near Gap Kids; BIG HORN SHEEP SKIN offers products made from sheep skin in front of Bath & Body Works; WHITE TRASH, in Center Court, carries snack foods; KELTINA LC IMPORTS sells imported items in front of Gymboree; body lotions are sold by HOUSE OF VICTORIA in front of Lane Bryant and CREATIVE METALS sells handmade silver jewelry in front of Master Cuts.

The mall train will be operated by St. Luke's United Methodist Church Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

HOW TO READ THE MARKET IN REVIEW

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.
Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.
Chg: Loss or gain for the day. No change indicated by ...
PE: Price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's earnings per share for the most recent four quarters.
PPE: Projected price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's projected earnings per share for upcoming 12 months. PPE supplied by I/B/E/S, Institutional Brokers' Estimate System. Is a consensus forecast of all analysts following the company. Only companies with three or more analysts following them have a PPE.
How to use: In general, if PPE is lower than PE, analysts believe earnings will be going up. If PPE is higher, they expect earnings to fall. The numbers can be helpful in following stocks but as with all financial data are only one of many factors to judge a company by. Consult your financial advisor before making any investment decision.

Heloise Classified Hints!

Heloise Hint: Don't be a drowsy driver. Did you know that nodding off for just three seconds while you're driving can cause a fatal accident? The American Automobile Association Foundation for Traffic Safely reports that most drivers cannot predict when they're about to fall asleep at the wheel. Check out your driving habits and take note of signals that you're getting sleepy. It can save your life. Send your car story to Heloise, P.O. Box 795000, San Antonio, TX 78279-5000.

CRIME STOPPERS CRIME ALERT

Midland Crime Stoppers cares about the lives of Midland's youth. If you have information about criminal gang activity, call Crime Stoppers at 694-TIPS so we can put an end to this illegal activity. And remember, you can always remain anonymous and no caller I.D. is ever used. Lets all work together so our youth can grow up in a healthy environment.

ABOUT CRIMESTOPPERS

Crime Stoppers of Midland is a community program, operated by citizens which involves the public, the media and area law enforcement agencies in the fight against crime. It offers cash rewards and anonymity to persons who furnish information leading to the arrest or indictment of felony crime offenders.

We at Crime Stoppers would like to hear your questions about the organization. If you have any questions please write to us at Midland Crime Stoppers, P.O. Box 1882, Midland, TX 79702. After we have received your letter, we will attempt to address your questions in the following month's fugitive flyer.

A quick $100

Does Midland Crime Stoppers have a "Crime of the Week"? If so, what channel, day, and time does it air?
Channel 2 (KMID) air's our crime of the week on Thursdays on the 6:00 p.m and/or 10:00 p.m.. news.

Is there a person in the office at all times, or will I ever have to leave my tip on an answering machine or recorder of some type?
There is a Crime Stoppers representative answering the phone 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

How much information does one need to have about a crime or fugitive before calling Crime Stoppers?
This is a question often asked. When a person calls Crime Stoppers with a fugitive tip, they need to provide the name of the fugitive, what they are wearing and their exact location.

Article 5.33A. Section 6 (a)(1). Texas Insurance Code

A person's residence qualifies for a 5% discount on homeowners insurance premiums if the property meets the following specifications.

1) Exterior doors must be solid core doors that are 1 3/8 inches thick and must be secured by deadbolt lots. The deadbolt must lock with a minimum bolt throw of one (1) inch and must penetrate a metal strike plate firmly secured to the door frame. If a door secured with a deadbolt has breakable glass within forty (40) inches of the lock, the deadbolt lock must be a double cylinder (double keyed) deadbolt. (UNLESS PROHIBITED BY LIFE SAFETY CODES)

2) Metal doors must be secured by deadbolt locks (as outlined above).

3) Double doors must meet the specifications for exterior doors listed above in (1). and have the inactive door secured by a header and threshold bolts that penetrate metal strike plates. If glass is located within forty inches of header and threshold bolts, the bolts must be flush-mounted in the edge of the door.

4) Sliding glass doors are secured by secondary locking devices to interlock the upper and lower halves, and the door is secured by a deadbolt lock as described in (1) above.

5) Dutch doors have a concealed flush-bolt locking device to interlock the upper and lower halves, and the door is secured by a deadbolt lock as described in (1) above.

6) Garage doors are equipped with key-operated locking devices.

7) Windows are secured by auxiliary locking devices. An auxiliary locking device required by this section must include either screws, wooden dowels, pinning devices, and key-operated locks. In areas where life safety codes permit, metal bars or grating, if mounted to prevent easy removal, may be substituted for auxiliary locking devices. Jalousie or louvered windows DO NOT meet the specifications of this section unless they have metal grating mounted as provided for above.
