Devastating blaze inhales last breaths

By ROGER GILLOTT

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A disastrous brush fire that was started by an errant kite touching a power line has finally been controlled, fire officials sajd today. The blaze injured 22 persons, destroyed or damaged 385 expensive homes and caused a loss estimated by officials at $50 million.

"It's very quiet this morning. There are no flames at all," said Dennis Orbus, a U.S. Forest Service spokesman. "We're just tamping down the hot spots now."

The fire which began Tuesday night and was contained Wednesday had burned 740 acres of brush. An extimated 3,000 persons fled the area.

Authorities said they were told by a young man who they would not identify that the fire, one of the worst in this scenic community's history, began when his kite blew into a high-voltage power line in Sycamore Canyon.

"I shall always regret the part, however innocent, I have had in this tragic matter," the young man was quoted as saying Wednesday. "I am deeply shocked and saddened by the great loss and suffering which has resulted from the fire."

The kite flyer was reported in seclusion outside the city, and authorities said no prosecution was contemplated.

Firefighters had been worried the blaze might flare up again during the night, or that another spark might reignite the chapparal brush, normally dry and highly flammable and described now as "explosive" because of two years of drought.

"But the wind is very quiet and we don't anticipate any more problems unless something totally unforeseen happens," Orbus said.

Santa Barbara, a wealthy community of mission-style homes whose red-tiled roofs lend a Mediterranean flavor to the parched Pacific coast some 100 miles north of Los Angeles, became a panicked city Tuesday night as sheets of flame tore through the drought-dried brush of the Santa Ynez Mountains.

Fire storms leaped erratically from canyon to ridge, leaving a patchwork of destruction across the city's richest neighborhoods, where some home values start at $250,000.

Fire officials estimated that 250 expensive homes were destroyed and another 135 homes and other structures were damaged. Three thousand persons fled as the flames, driven by "sundowner" winds, raced through the chaparral brush that covers southern California's mountains.

Carter criticizes new settlements

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter declared today that Israel's legalization of three settlements on the West Bank of the Jordan River poses obstacles to peace. He also announced progress toward negotiating a ban on all nuclear tests.

At a nationally broadcast news conference, Carter acknowledged that he had not discussed the granting of legal status with Prime Minister Menahem Begin on his visit here last week. He called it "an oversight" on his part.

However, Carter said he had advised Begin that the establishment of new settlements "would be a difficult thing for public opinion to accept here and in Arab countries."

Still, Carter was hopeful about prospects for new negotiations on the Arab-Israeli conflict. He said the legalizing of the three settlements was an obstacle that could be overcome.

Carter opened the session with reporters by announcing the completion of preliminary negotiations with the Soviet Union and Britain on a comprehensive nuclear weapons test ban.

While a number of problems must be resolved, Carter said,, "the results are sufficiently promising that the three countries can begin formal negotiations Oct. 3."

He said he hoped they could arrive at a treaty that would be signed by other countries as well.

On the domestic side, Carter said he expected to have new welfare proposals ready next week.

He said the search for a new director of the FBI was "proceeding very slowly, very methodically and with the prospect of good results."

Assessing his first six months in office, Carter said he had made mistakes "in minor things"—he declined to list them—and said the White House's relations with Congress has been improved.

Carter said the major stumbling block to reconvening of the Geneva conference on the Mideast is the Palestinian issue. However, he said until the Palestine Liberation Organzation gives up its commitment to the destruction of Israel the administration will not support PLO participation in the peace talks.

Carter rejected any notion that he is biased either toward Israel or the Arab countries. And he called on the leaders on both sides to try to cool down the situation in the Middle East by not being so adamant about their positions.

Carter said he had discussed the settlements with Prime Minister Menahem Begin during his visit here last week. However, Carter said Begin had not given him advance notice that the Israeli government would recognize the legitimacy of three new setlements, as it did this week.

Chamber advocates vote

An election calling for the creation of a hospital district and the issuance of bonds for expansion of Midland Memorial Hospital were urged Wednesday by the Midland Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors.

The resolution read: "The directors of the Midland Chamber of Commerce believe strongly that all of the people of Midland County are entitled to and ought to have the best possible medical care for themselves and their families; and recognizing that our present hospital facilities are inadequate, and that private financing no longer is able to provide the funds needed to bring the hospital up to the standards required by a growing Midland; and we are confident that lives could be saved and prolonged and health care for every citizen be vastly improved once a hospital district is established, public funds provided, and the proposed expansion accomplished."

The ballot would be divided into two parts, one part concerning the formation of the hospital district and the election of the hospital board of directors, and the other part dealing with the approval of a $10 million bond for building expansion.

Cappadonna estimated that the proposed hospital district assessment rate would amount to about $1 per $1,000 of assessed valuation. Thus the tax levied on a $30,000 home would be about $30, he said.

The new hospital building plan calls for a new intensive care and coronary care unit, and expansion to about 200 private rooms from the present 175 semi-private rooms.

Reports spur U.S. dollar's value

By ED BLANCHE

LONDON (AP) — The dollar lost ground to the British pound today but improved against other European currencies amid reports the U.S. government would move soon to halt the dollar's recent slide against major world currencies.

Within the first hour of money-market trading in London, the pound was marked at just over $1.74, up from Wednesday's closing $1.7395, which was the highest since mid-September last year.

This represented a rise of two cents this week, a considerable gain for the pound sterling, which has fluctuated very little recently. The pound's lowest closing this year was $1.7042 on Feb. 15.

The dollar was mostly higher against other European currencies. Part of the rise was believed to result from dollars being used to buy pounds.

In early dealings today in London, the dollar rose to 2.2635 West German marks from its overnight 2.2590, to 2.3930 Swiss francs from 2.3905, and to 4.8280 French francs from 4.8225.

Monetary experts in London said they expect the U.S. government to move soon to support the dollar in an effort to halt its slide against major world currencies.

British financial commentators said the West German government is pressing for an urgent meeting with American, British and French leaders to discuss the dollar's decline.

The European Commission, a joint executive of the nine Common Market countries, today called for an increase or at least a stabilization of the value of the dollar on international markets. The dollar's price against the German mark has dropped about 4 per cent in the last month — a rapid change in world money market terms.

It means an American car priced at $10,000 a month ago can be bought now with West German marks worth only $9,600 at the time.

Renato Ruggiero, chief spokesman for the European Commission, told reporters he hopes the U.S. authorities will intervene to keep the rate in line with the American economy, which is recovering faster than most West European nations from the recession of recent years. He said stabilization or improvement of the dollar must be expected.

Deceased's identity withheld

Midland County Sheriff's officers are withholding the identity, pending notification of relatives, of a body found Wednesday afternoon by the side of the railroad tracks five miles west of the city.

According to a spokesman for the sheriff's office, the person apparently had been struck by a train.

The body was reported at 1:55 p.m. Wednesday by a train engineer, who saw the body beside the tracks.

The death is still under investigation. The body has been taken to Thomas Funeral Home.

City stays dry despite lightning

Despite an impressive lightning display Wednesday night, and despite the fact that several area cities reported traces of rain, Midland remained as dry as the sand upon which it sits.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal, no rain officially was reported here.

Andrews, Stanton, Big Lake and Big Spring all reported small amounts of moisture, while Lamesa, Crane and Rankin reported no rain.

The high temperature Wednesday was 100 degrees, as predicted by the National Weather Service. The low tonight is expected to reach 70 degrees.

A slight chance of rain, 20 per cent, is forecast again for tonight. Winds this afternoon are to be southerly at 10 to 15 mph, decreasing to 5 to 10 mph tonight.

'Country' Courtney lies close to dried-up old watering hole

COURTNEY — Lonnie Decker stepped from his rent house and onto the porch. It was his day off as a pumper, and he was taking it easy.

A chaw of tobacco was resting in a pouch formed just behind his lower lip. He appeared contented; country living must agree with him.

Besides that, about all there is out here now is just "country." Cotton fields are all about. Some are dotted with pumping jacks and oil tanks. Occasionally there are meager rows of corn. Some of the stalks are dried out; the cotton isn't.

No more, though. It's just an empty, deserted building where birds now roost. The school has been closed for 17 years.

The brick school building has long since been torn down.

"About everybody in the country must have gone to school there at one time," Decker said. He didn't. He's from Haskell. But he said quite a few people around his age (he's 32) went to school over there.

Near the old gym are a couple of tile houses. One is vacant. Loud rock 'n' roll music is coming from the other one. Two motorcycles are at the back. A black watch dog, who may or may not be "mean," is on a leash on the other side. No one seems to be stirring inside.

Just beyond the old gym is the Baptist church and parsonage. Nobody seems to be at home there. Unlike the other place, it's quiet.

Beyond that lives an 85-year-old widow, Donie Hull. She's been living there, on the same site — not in the same house — for more than 50 years. She's been widowed for almost as long as that. Some 40-odd years.

She never remarried. And she rarely, if ever, complains about her long and sometimes hard life.

"I don't have no grumblings about it, sure don't," she was to say later on in the afternoon. She was carrying around a short-handled hoe that served both as cane, which she didn't need, and chopping tool.

Back at his place, Decker was still on the porch. He wasn't talking much, but enough. Toy riding horses were in the yard. Too, just inside the picket fence, was an old car tire dangling from a tree. He and the wife have a couple of kids — a boy and a girl.

Across from the tree swing is the

Robbers nab millions in 'pocket change'

PARIS (AP) — Robbers today seized a semitrailer truck containing 17 million francs ($3.54 million) in coins in a holdup near a Paris railroad station, police said.

The coins were being sent to the Bank of France from Bordeaux. A truck ordered by the bank had picked up the container and was leaving the Gare de Lyon railway station when three or four armed men stepped in front of it and forced the chauffeur and a guard to get into a car which had carried the gangsters, the authoritities said.

One of the men got into the truck and drove away. Another man drove the guard and truck chauffeur a few miles away and set them free, the police said.

The operation, which police said was obviously carried out by professionals, went off so quickly that no one seemed to have noticed. The first alert to police was given by the chauffeur after he was released some 30 minutes after the robbery.

Begin report accepted by Israeli parliament

By DIAL TORGERSON
The Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — The Israeli parliament voted Wednesday to accept Prime Minister Menahem Begin's report of his talks with President Carter and to approve his policy of continued Jewish settlement in the occupied West Bank area of Jordan.

On his talks with Carter, support was limited to Begin's Likud bloc and the two religious parties that have joined his coalition.

The parliamentary action came amid these other developments:

— Begin expressed "deep distress and disappointment" at U.S. criticism of Israel's recognition of three disputed Jewish settlements in the West Bank area.

— Carter said in Washington that Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance "speaks for me" in criticizing the Israeli settlements. Vance had said Tuesday that the new settlements were "an obstacle to peace" in the Middle East.

— Begin said he was surprised at reports from Washington that the United States will supply Egypt with 40 Lockheed C-130 Hercules transport planes. He said he had instructed his foreign minister, Moshe Dayan, to take up the question with the State Department.

The vote to accept Begin's report on his Washington trip was 59 to 36 with 13 abstentions. It came after 2 1-2 hours of debate, much of it acrimonious.

Begin was questioned about his failure to reach agreement with Carter on a number of points, among them the question of the West Bank settlements.

"The American reaction came as a shock," said Yigael Yadin, head of the Democratic Movement for Change. "After the euphoria which was created after Mr. Begin came back here with statements about his understanding with the United States, one would have taken it for granted that there was some kind of agreement between Mr. Begin and Mr. Carter on such an issue."

Two members of parliament, both pro-Palestinian, proposed a halt to Jewish settlement in the West Bank area. They were the only members favoring the proposal in a show-of-hands vote.

In the course of their Washington talks, Carter had asked Begin to halt Jewish settlement of the West Bank area pending resumption of the Middle East peace conference in Geneva, which is expected to be convened in the fall. Begin declined to make such a promise.

His position has been that the Jews' traditional homeland, which he calls the Land of Israel, includes the West Bank area.

"We stand on the right of Jews to live in any part of the Land of Israel," he told the parliament Wednesday.

Observers here believe that Begin agreed to give legal recognition to the new settlements in order to gain favor with two religious parties that provide 16 of the votes in his coalition. Even with their votes, he has only a 62-seat majority in the 120-seat parliament.

Yadin's Democratic Movement for Change, which has been considering joining Begin's governing coalition, abstained from the voting Wednesday. Yadin said that his group favors settlements in the area only for reasons of security and does not approve the establishment of new Jewish settlements in areas that are heavily populated by Arabs.

Shimon Peres, defense minister in the former Labor government and now leader of the opposition, said the timing of the decision to recognize the new settlements — which was announced Tuesday — was unfortunate.

His statement was echoed by U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim. A spokesman for Waldheim, who is in Vienna, said in New York that Israel's recognition of the settlements was not only unfortunate but "cannot but affect the current efforts to resume the negotiating process in the Middle East."

Meanwhile, the 20 Arab delegations to the United Nations agreed to meet Thursday to discuss the development and the possibility of taking it to the Security Council.

The Security Council's president, Jorge Illueca of Panama, said last November that Israeli action in settling the territories occupied in the 1967 war had no legal validity and constituted an obstacle to peace.

Commenting on reports that Washington will send transport planes to Egypt, Begin told parliament Wednesday:

"Why does Egypt need 40 Hercules transports capable of carrying 4,000 soldiers? We shall not keep silent about this."

Adventure film slated

NEW YORK (AP) — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer recently announced that Bob Rafelson will produce and direct "At Play in the Fields of the Lord," based on the novel by naturalist and explorer Peter Mattheissen.

Marx battle ended

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — The bitter battle over who is to handle Groucho Marx's affairs ended quietly Wednesday during a 20-minute court session in the ailing comedian's hospital room.

Wednesday's events signaled a surrender by Erin Fleming, Groucho's constant companion the past seven years, in her efforts to be named his conservator.

Rafeedie also ruled that the Bank of America continue as conservator of Marx's business interests in his estimated $2.85 million estate.

"I hope I can remain neutral," the 27-year-old grandson said, "and I'm glad there won't be any more of this haggling." Miss Fleming was not present but her attorney, Douglas Dalton, said, "Erin never really wanted all of this but she had been the nominee of Groucho and that's why she asked to be conservator. She is very happy with the appointment of Andrew."

Marx is in Cedars-Sinai Medical Center where he was rushed six weeks ago suffering from a mild form of pneumonia.

Following the brief session in Marx's eighth floor room, Rafeedie said that the comedian was "reasonably alert... although he has trouble speaking and gave only one word answers to my questions."

Prior to going to Cedars-Sinai, Rafeedie and attorneys for all sides in the conservatorship controversy met in the judge's nearby Santa Monica courtroom.

Rafeedie explained that the hospital meeting was absolutely necessary because of certain legal requirements in such cases.

NAACP director continues criticism of Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — NAACP director Benjamin Hooks, ignoring President Carter's warning against criticism of his domestic programs, says Carter should remember that when he meets his maker, he'll be judged on whether "he fed the hungry."

In a speech that brought cries of "Amen," Hooks placed the nation's largest civil rights organization "four-square" behind Vernon Jordan of the National Urban League, who said earlier this week that Carter's policies are inadequate for black and poor people.

Following Hooks' speech Wednesday to the Urban League, Jordan said civil rights leaders are "together" and will continue pressuring Carter despite the President's statement that criticism of his record damages "the hopes and aspirations of poor people."

Just as labor and business leaders lobby Carter for their concerns, "We cannot expect black people and poor people to suffer silently the daily outrages of their lives, to complacently accept joblessness and poverty," said Jordan.

Hooks put in his last day at the Federal Communications Commission on Wednesday and, as incoming head of the NAACP, joined a growing chorus of civil rights leaders petitioning Carter for new policies.

Explaining that as a Baptist preacher he believes Carter has been born again, Hooks told the Urban League: "I believe he has a conscience that can be reached. It's our job to reach it starting here and now.

"I will remind him that when he shall have finished the work that he has been given to do on this earth and he stands before the pearly gates ... he will not be judged on the fact that he was an atomic engineer, nor will Peter be concerned about the fact that he was a successful peanut farmer, or a governor of Georgia, or even a president.

"But they will ask him, Brother Jimmy:

"I was hungry, did you feed me?

"I was naked, did you clothe me?

"I was in jail, did you come and see about me?

"I'm not concerned about whether you thought I was a beggar.

"But I'm concerned about whether you handed the help to the poor brother that used to be my little one."

Carter told Jordan on Monday that criticism of his administration's domestic record is damaging his attempts to aid the poor. But black leaders insisted their only ability to influence Carter is to "go public with the truth," as Jordan has put it.

Following Jordan this week with their own criticisms of Carter policies were other moderate black leaders, including Mayor Kenneth Gibson of Newark, N.J., Carl Holman of the Urban Coalition and Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., head of the Congressinal Black Caucus.

By JACK NELSON
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.), siding with black leader Vernon Jordan, said Wednesday President Carter has "missed the boat" by failing to develop a policy to help the nation's impoverished cities.

"I think the problem with the Administration on the cities is that there's been no focus," Humphrey said. "There's been lots of little pieces. It's like building blocks — they are spread all over the table and nobody has built them into any kind of system."

Humphrey's criticism, although tempered with praise for the President on the foreign front and on some domestic issues, was as sharp as any leveled at Carter by a leading Democrat since he assumed office. And it added a prominent new voice to the chorus of complaints in the wake of the New York blackout that Carter has failed to develop an urban program.

The former vice president suggested that Carter has been guided by current public opinion polls and added, "I think that's a very dangerous thing to do. I think that a man who is president has to lead and has to be willing to take some risks and to do things that at times, at the beginning may not seem very popular."

Humphrey, who has developed a close relationship with Carter since their bruising rivalry in last year's Democratic presidential primaries, said Jordan had performed a great service in criticizing the President for his lack of an urban program.

Jordan, executive director of the Urban League, voiced his criticism at the League's annual conference here last Sunday. In reply the next day, Carter told the conference he had "no apologies to make" and listed a number of Administration efforts to improve the plight of the urban poor. And he later personally told Jordan his criticism was "damaging to the hopes and aspirations of poor people."

But Humphrey, interviewed at a breakfast session with The Los Angeles Times Washington Bureau, said:

"Vernon Jordan spoke for his constituency. This is what politics in America is all about — it isn't a love feast. If you don't have a fellow like Vernon Jordan.... saying, 'look, Mr. President, we've got these problems, there is the ghetto problem, the huge unemployment, etc. And unless you've got someone like that really sticking it to you, you have a tendency to put some of this stuff on the back burner.'"

Humphrey predicted that Jordan's speech will spur "the beginning of the development and the articulation of a national urban policy in this country" and added, "I've felt this is what has been needed for a long time. We've got to start putting these pieces together so that you get a picture and not just a lot of blotches and splatters here and there."

Officials say aid efforts on target

WASHINGTON (AP) — Efforts to aim billions of dollars in federal aid at urban "hardship" areas such as Newark, St. Louis and Philadelphia, are right on target, say Brookings Institution researchers.

The government's economic stimulus programs for the next fiscal year are sending an unprecedented $82 billion in federal grants to states and localities, the researchers told the Joint Economic Committee today.

"Partly by accident and partly by design," they said, the money has been funneled to the areas where unemployment and poverty is most pervasive.

"The average rate of increase" in the amount of federal dollars going to the cities compared to three years ago "is 135 per cent," according to an analysis by the Brookings associates.

"While all major cities receive sizable increases" in the next federal budget, "cities which are experiencing particularly severe problems will be the primary beneficiaries," they added.

The huge windfall is expected to provide some measure of fiscal relief for cities still reeling from inflation and declining tax bases.

However, many of the programs causing the big increase in spending are due to expire, or have "trigger" mechanisms that will suspend funding if economic conditions improve to a certain level.

"When the Congress turns next year to the question of whether and when to allow the Economic Stimulus Package to turn off, you will face conditions in which a decision could cause a precipitous drop in the funds available to some of the nation's most troubled big city governments," they told the congressional panel.

Brookings studied federal money going to 15 cities and discovered that the worst off on the institution's "hardship" index will receive big increases in federal spending. Newark is to receive a 400 per cent boost; St. Louis 247 per cent, Buffalo 154 per cent and Philadelphia and Chicago 150 per cent and 145 per cent respectively.

Even cities which rated well on the Brookings index will see healthy boosts in federal spending. Los Angeles, for example, is to receive a 162 per cent hike and Phoenix and Houston both will get about 90 per cent more money than three years ago.

"It would be a disaster" to many of these governments if the new federal aid should end overnight, as could happen if the programs are allowed to expire or do not take effect, says economist Richard Nathan.

Hypnotism use said helping solve crimes

By WILLIAM CLAIBORNE
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Amidst the first stirring of apprehension by some forensic psychiatrists and civil libertarians, an increasing number of police departments and prosecutors' offices across the country are training their own hypnotists to interrogate consenting witnesses and victims in hard-to-break criminal cases.

While proponents of the technique claim it is a safe and reliable aide to criminal investigation, some experts in hypnosis argue that information elicited from a witness who has been put into a trance is of questionable legal value, at best, and frighteningly Svengalian, at worst.

Robert Reiff, a psychologist who has published work on experimental hypnosis, asked the Justice Department to stop its Law Enforcement Assistance Administration from promoting seminars at which police officers and district attorney staffs are taught how to use hypnosis to enhance witnesses' recall about crimes.

The LEAA helped advertise and promote a law enforcement hypnosis seminar recently in Los Angeles at which 50 law enforcement officers were trained in the use of hypnosis. It was the second such national training seminar held in a year by the Law Enforcement Hypnosis Institute of Los Angeles.

"Such a powerful suggestive technique in the hands of law enforcement personnel poses a serious threat to the rights of offenders and victims," Reiff, an official of the American Board of Psychological Hypnosis, an accrediting board for medical hypnotists, said in a telegram to Attorney General Griffin B. Bell.

"This practice borders dangerously on the methods characteristic of the law enforcement systems of totalitarian countries," he added.

Recently, the most extensive use of law enforcement hypnotism has been in the Los Angeles Police Department, where psychologist Martin Reiser, who conducted last week's police seminar, pioneered the technique in 1970.

Reiser, head of the LAPD's Behavioral Sciences Division, said his officers have used hypnotism in several hundred cases and that in 60 to 65 per cent police elicited information that helped solve major crimes.

Last July the FBI called in William S. Kroger, an expert in medical hypnosis, to interrogate the driver of a school bus in Chowchilla, Calif., who, with some students, had been kidnaped by three men. In a hypnotic trance, the driver, Ed Ray, recalled all but one digit of the license plate of the kidnapers' van; the information helped authorities track down the suspects.

In another case, a woman who had been high no drugs could recall no details of the murder of her boyfriend; however, in a hypnotic trance she gave police a detailed description of the assailant, which led to the arrest of the killer.

Reiser, in a telephone interview, said he believes the psychological discipline is just beginning to pay dividends.

"It's a developing field. More and more police departments are interested in adding this technique to their investigative tools," he said. "I predict that within the next 10 years hypnosis will become a standard tool of law enforcement."

Already, he said, the technique has been taught to police officers from New York City, Denver, Phoenix, Indianapolis, Boulder, Colo., San Antonio, the Air Force Special Investigations Unit, the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tax and Firearms, the FBI and numberous state police departments.

Yet Reiff warned that policy hypnotists could influence courtroom testimony with posthypnotic suggestions that the witness "positively identify" suspects that the police wished to be so identified.

His claim was considerably stronger than those of some other experimental psychiatrists interviewed, who based their objections more on the prospect of a mesmerized witness fantasizing or making mistakes while in a hypnotic trance.

One of them, Martin T. Orne, director of experimental psychiatry at the Institute of the Pennsylvania Hospital in Philadelphia, said improper questioning under hypnosis could cause a subject to distort his memory of a crime.

Also, Orne said, hypnotized witnesses are susceptible to creating visual descriptions that either never existed, or, worse, reflect what the witness knows or can guess about what authorities think about a crime.

"If I hypnotize you and tell you the year is 1983 and you are standing in the middle of Times Square and I ask you what is happening, you might describe a scene in great detail," said Orne, who is considered preeminent in his field and has testified in numerous criminal trails, including the Patricia Hearst case.

In any event, Orne said, a hypnotized witness or crime victim should never be permitted to testify at a trial without a videotape of the entire interrogation session to establish the quality of the technique.

He said he recently testified in a trial in which the witness' testimony and the videotapes were ruled inadmissible by the court.

"If a hypnotist has an ax to grind, he can very easily impart critical information to his subject. He (the witness) is of no further use as an objective witness," Orne said in a telephone interview.

Any time a hypnotized witness is used in a trial, Orne proposed, the jury should be made aware of the risks involved, and all data from the hypnotic session should be made available to defense counsel for scrutiny by competent scientists.

Reiser claimed that hypnotized witnesses are credible in court because more and more judges "are recognizing this field as a legitimate process of discovery." The weight of testimony, he said, is left to the juries; in practice, he said, most California juries have been disposed to accept such testimony.

"We don't interrogate suspects with hypnotism, only witnesses and victims who voluntarily submit themselves. The issue of rights doesn't really come into play," he said.

New York City Police Detective Sgt. Charles Digget, assigned to the Brooklyn homocide squad, attended the hypnosis course and said, in an interview, that the technique can be valuable to solving major crimes.

"We used it in 20 cases and in 80 per cent of them we elicited new and valuable information that we couldn't have obtained otherwise. I think it's a fantastic possibility," Digget said.

Despite these apparent successes, hypnosis experts such as Orne still have reservations.

Orne was critical of LEAA promotion of law enforcement hypnosis, saying, "Unfortunately, hypnosis is seen by the police as a magical solution. This view needs to be corrected."

'Satisfactory' describes final shuttle testing

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The space shuttle Enterprise has made its highest and last piggyback test flight before a solo launch Aug. 12.

Some "nuisance problems" were reported during the craft's hour-long flight Tuesday atop a Boeing 747, but National Aviation and Space Administration officials said everything was generally satisfactory.

"Absolutely nothing" developed during the final test to prevent the Enterprise from making it first free flight next month, said test flight manager Donald "Deke" Slayton, a former astronaut.

Traveling at 312 m.p.h., the 75 ton shuttle was lofted to an altitude of 28,660 feet, the highest so far, before 747 pilot Fitzhugh Fulton nose the transport jet into a seven-degree dive for 4,000 feet.

It's at that point on Aug. 12 that seven explosive bolts holding the shuttle to the 747 will be fired, releasing the Enterprise for a five-minute free-flight glide. It will land on a 15,000 foot dry lake runway.

NASA officials said the craft has performed so well on test flights that the number of free flights may be cut from eight to four, saving $10 million to $12 million.

However, a flashing warning light did prove annoying to NASA scientists in Tuesday's test. The warning could have indicated overheating in one of three auxiliary power units (APUs), which provide energy for steering, braking and other controls.

However, astronaut Gordon Fullerton, who manned the Enterprise with astronaut Fred Haise, said the malfunction appeared to be in the sensor light, not the APU.

Fullerton and Haise will pilot the shuttle on the Aug. 12 flight.

The Enterprise will eventually be sent into earth orbit with men and scientific equipment. It is the first U.S. spacecraft designed for multiple flights and re-entries.

FTC to make firm relinquish control

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission has announced it has ordered American General Insurance Co., based in Houston, Tex., to give up control of Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland.

American General, an alllines diversified insurance company, acquired F&D, primarily a bonding specialist, with headquarters in Baltimore, in 1969 for stock valued at $107.7 million.

The commission ruled unanimously that the acquisition violates a section of the Clayton Act because it may substantially lessen competition in the business of underwriting fidelity bonds and surety bonds.

The most common type of surety bond covers construction contracts and guarantees performance according to the terms of the contract. A fidelity bond represents an undertaking by the bond writer to indemnify an employer against losses suffered through the dishonesty of bonded employes.

Texas Recipes

Piney Woods Hush Puppies

2½ cups yellow corn meal
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons Imperial Granulated Sugar
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 egg, beaten
2 cups buttermilk
1½ cups cooking oil, about

Mix all dry ingredients; beat milk and egg together and combine with dry ingredients; batter should hold its shape when picked up in spoon. If it is too soft, add more cornmeal. Drop by mounded tablespoonful into 350°F. fat and cook about 1½ minutes; turn and cook on second side 1 minute. Allow oil to heat a few seconds after removing a batch. Delicious freshly cooked and hot; however, leftover hush puppies freeze well. When ready to serve frozen hush puppies, place on oven rack in preheated 250°F. until very hot and crisp. Makes about 48 hush puppies 2" round.

Hints on frying: Using a small diameter heavy saucepan allows using a minimum of oil; a 5 or 6 inch pan with oil 1½ inches deep and heated to 350°F. will cook three hush puppies in about 2½ minutes. When batter consistency is correct and oil is at 350°F., hush puppies will become firm, round shapes almost as soon as they enter the hot oil. If they are cooked in oil that is too hot, they will not cook in the center.

Midlander's brother vacations in restored 1918 Model T Ford

Henry Ford may have been right. Paul Conn, brother of Vernon Conn of Midland, has owned and operated Model T's since he was 12 years old.

Conn, whose hometown is Tomball, will leave Midland today to journey through Louisiana, Arkansas, Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee in a 1918 Model T. He said it took him 20 driving hours to get from Tomball, near Houston, to Midland to visit his brother.

His 1918 Model T travels approximately 30 mph and gets approximately 30 miles per gallon.

Conn rebuilds and restores Model T's. He has five, varying in age from 1918 to 1927. He is working on a 1922 model and will sell the 1918 car once the 1922 model is finished.

For the past four years, Conn has vacationed in one of his restored cars. "That's the way I put them to the test," he said. "I drove to Midland from Tomball and had no trouble, not even a flat tire."

In case of car trouble, Conn carries most spare parts with him on his vacations. "If I do have problems, I can make most minor repairs on the spot," he said.

"I've noticed one thing on my trip to Midland," he said. "The people in West Texas are more courteous than they are in the Houston area."

During the day, Conn usually travels with the top up. It is the only way he has to get a little cooler during the heat of the day.

The final stop on Conn's vacation will be the "Grand Ole Opry" in Nashville, Tenn., ending a trip of approximately 3,000 miles for Conn and his Model T.

Jaycees planning breakfast

Dr. Daniel Vestal, pastor of First Baptist Church, will be the speaker at a city-wide prayer breakfast planned by the Midland Jaycees for Aug. 23.

The continental breakfast, to be held at 7 a.m. in the Permian Ballroom of the Midland Hilton, is open to all citizens of Midland at no charge.

"Our Jaycee Creed states 'Faith in God gives meaning and purpose to human life,'" said Les Riek, project chairman, in announcing the breakfast.

"In keeping with this belief, we would like to share with everyone a period of thanks for what we (residents of Midland) can be grateful for," said Riek.

Persons who plan to attend the prayer breakfast should contact Riek or John Pennington at 683-4231 before Aug. 15 in order that an attendance estimate can be made.

The Jaycees strive to keep informed of community activities and are very optimistic about Midland's future and growth, Riek said.

"We can keep Midland a positive community and we can pull together to keep it strong," he said.

The Midland Jaycees have expressed support for the Midland Alliance, a group of citizens from all races and ethnic groups, "from all political persuasions and parties, who are interested in Midland's children and their schools."

Legislator named to 5 committees

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Sen. Pete Snelson of Midland has been named to five committees meeting during the interim before the 1979 session of the Texas Legislature.

Snelson will be on the Committee on Public School Finance, a committee studying the Texas' "sunset" legislation for state agencies, a panel on trade and tourism, the Legislative Council and a committee on special education.

In making those appointments, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby also named Sen. Kent Hance of Lubbock to a committee studying ad valorem property taxes.

Lions learn of Ireland trip, honor firefighter

By RICHIE REECER

"If you ever go to Dundalk (Ireland), mention Midland, Texas, and your worries are over," Art Cole director of the Midland Community Theatre, told the Downtown Lions Club Wednesday during its noon meeting.

Cole told the Lions, who had gathered at the Midland Hilton, of the experiences he and the Summer Mummers, a group from the Midland Community Theatre, had during a recent trip to Ireland.

The entourage from Midland went to Ireland to participate in the Dundalk Maytime Festival, an annual 10-day event held in that city. In addition to the amateur theater festival, a beauty pageant, art contest and other events were conducted at the festival, Cole said.

The group, consisting of 73 persons, left Midland May 19 and returned May 26. This was the second trip to Dundalk made by the Mummers. Cole and 52 other persons made the trip three years ago.

Cole told the Lions of the many humorous experiences he had while trying to get 73 people, stage props, costumes, hats and peanuts (to throw at the villain in the play) to Ireland at the same time.

The idea for the group's trips to Ireland originated in 1972 at a council meeting of the International Amateur Theater Association, he said. During the meeting, which Cole attended, he invited the council to meet in Midland for its next annual meeting.

The council accepted the invitation and met here the following year. During the stay in Midland, the council attended a performance of the Summer Mummers. The council was so impressed by the group that the Mummers received an invitation to perform at the Dundalk Festival, Cole said.

Upon his return to Dundalk this year, Cole was honored as a "Free Man of Dundalk," the Irish equivalent of receiving the "key to the city." Cole said this event was quite an honor since the last man to receive the honor was the president of Ireland.

After their final performance both years they have attended the festival, the Mummers gave a party for other festival participants and the citizens of Dundalk. These parties are one of the major reasons for Midland's popularity in Dundalk, Cole said.

For both the parties, the Midland group brought large quantities of tequila, he said, and the Irishmen loved it.

Cole is the only director the Midland Community Theatre has ever had.

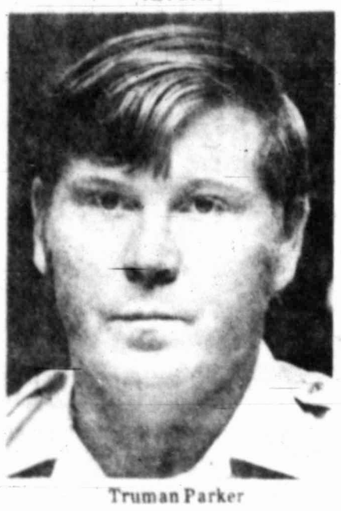

He first came to Midland in the 1940s while with the special services branch of the Army Air Corps. Later, after being transferred to various locations, Cole was discharged from the service.

After leaving the service, Cole returned to Midland to live. He has been president of state, national and international theater groups.

In other action, the Lions named Truman Parker of 1400 Keith as their "Firefighter of the Month" for July. Parker is an equipment operator with the Midland Fire Department. He has seven years of firefighting experience, and has received training as an emergency medical technician. He also has an associate degree in fire technology from Midland College. He served with the U.S. Navy in Vietnam.

Decker, when he's got the time to spare, said he enjoys hearing old-timers talk about the past.

"Everytime they get to talking, I ease up behind them and listen," he said.

He said Cliff Hazlewood Sr. over at Stanton is a fine one to listen to. He's an old-timer, and he, for sure, knows a lot about Courtney, Stanton and the rest of Martin County.

In fact, he would know about dried-up Mustang Spring (some say "Mustang Pond") about two miles down the road.

It was a watering place for explorers, pioneers and gold-seekers traveling west in and after 1849.

There's a marker there, Decker said.

"It's there if somebody don't (hasn't) knocked it down again."

It's still there. Smack-dab in the middle of Mustang Draw. Some say creek.

And Decker, tobacco in lippy pouch, returned to the house to rest on the quiet — except for the rock 'n' roll — afternoon in the country.

Report on inspection of jail made public

Sheriff Dallas Smith today made public a report by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards dealing with the inspection and evaluation of the Midland County jail in June.

The Midland County jail meets or exceeds 90 per cent of the mandatory compliance items, Smith announced.

"Basically, 266 items were on the mandatory list, and the Midland County jail meets or exceeds 237 of these, leaving 29 that we did not meet," said Smith. "We are currently in the process of implementing procedures that will correct the noted deficiencies. In a few areas where the facility itself does not meet requirements, it will be necessary to request a variance from the Commission on Jail Standards."

One of the areas in which a variance will be requested includes the width of inspection corridors. The Commission requires that the corridors be foor feet in width. Two of the corridors in the Midland County jail are three-feet and six inches.

"At the time the jail was built, there were no exact specifications. We cannot knock out walls and bars," said Smith.

"We will be finished up (with the changes) quite quickly if we (the county and the Commission) agree on these variances," he said.

"I am optimistic that any cost incurred as the result of the Texas Jail Standards Commission inspection and evaluation will be minimal."

According to Smith and County Judge Barbara Culver, the Midland County jail was in "better shape" than many of the other 253 county jails in Texas.

"They were about half finished with their inspections when they came to Midland, and they indicated that at that time ours ranked among the top two or three jails," said Smith.

Officials expect return of Americans' remains

By RICHARD PYLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Department officials expect Vietnam to return the remains of 22 Americans listed as missing in the Indochina war and hint that Hanoi may be preparing to reveal the fate of other missing U.S. citizens.

Senior state department officials told a House subcommittee Wednesday they expect the bodies of 20 U.S. military men and two civilians to be turned over by Hanoi by the end of September.

The 22 bodies include 15 identified by Hanoi officials in a Paris meeting with U.S. representatives in June, plus five listed as unknown, and the two civilians about whom queries had been made.

The subcommittee, headed by Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., scheduled a closed-door meeting today with Nguyen Cong Hoan, a Vietnamese legislator who says he has information about missing Americans.

Hoan, who escaped from Vietnam last March, arrived in the United States this week. Questioned by another House panel Tuesday, he said his information was based on "rumors" but came from a trustworthy source, who would be in danger if identified. He indicated there are Americans living in jails in Vietnam.

Richard Holbrooke, assistant secretary of state for East Asia, told Wolff's panel Wednesday that there was special significance in the fact that, for the first time, the Vietnamese had offered to return bodies which had not been the subject of specific inquiries.

But a congressman who twice led U.S. delegations to Hanoi to seek information on missing Americans says he doubts Vietnam will ever account for all MIAs.

Rep. G.V. Montgomery, D-Miss., told the subcommittee that some American pilots shot down during the war were lost at sea or in remote jungle where their bodies were never recovered.

"There is no way the Vietnamese could give a full accounting," Montgomery said.

About 2,500 Americans are unaccounted for from the Indochina war. 1,800 are presumed dead and 700 listed as missing in action. Many were lost in Laos and some in Cambodia, neither of which has furnished any information to U.S. officials.

Investigation of restaurant fire continues

A fire at the Branding Iron, a Midland restaurant, at 3:58 a.m. today was definitely set, according to Jerry Petree, fire inspector for the Midland Fire Department.

"It was set in four different places, but whoever set it didn't really know what they were doing," said Petree.

The fires were set on two tables and the chairs around them, and on a table in back with a large number of napkins on it, said Petree.

There was only slight structural damage to the walls behind the table holding the napkins.

The fire is still under investigation.

Police studying thefts of radio, tape units

G.K. Kinsey Wednesday reported the burglary of a CB radio and a cassette recorder from his vehicle in front of his residence at 2800 Delano Ave. between 10 p.m. Tuesday and 7 a.m. Wednesday.

Midland police are investigating the burglary. Total estimated value of the missing items is $75.

Police also are investigating the burglary of an eight-track receiver, speakers and a television set from 1101 W. Kentucky Ave.

The burglary, reported by Elmer Howard, occurred between 1 p.m. Wednesday and 1 a.m. Thursday.

Robbery investigated

According to police, a man approached Richard Derwin Friday and his wife of 2310½ Cloverdale Road and robbed them at gunpoint. Taken in the robbery were a pocketknife and assorted change with a total value of $5.80.

Land decision reversed by Texas Supreme Court

Austin Bureau.

AUSTIN—The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday upheld a civil appeals court ruling that reversed a decision in a Midland County land case.

Midland County trial court originally ruled against Lucy Skeen, who claimed land owned by her and her husband was flooded by nearby Highway Department road construction in 1968 and 1970.

Skeen and her husband had brought acreage and built a home on land adjacent to Highway 80. She alleged that the Highway Department elevated the highway without providing adequate drainage, diverting flood water onto their property.

Although the first judgment was entered for the Highway Department, Skeen appealed the ruling, which was reversed by the El Paso Court of Civil Appeals. That new ruling was upheld by the Supreme Court.

The Highway Department contended that the appeal of the Midland County decision should have been dismissed because Skeen failed to file a motion for a new trial. But the appeals court ruled, and the supreme court upheld, Skeen's right to appeal, citing a rule that a motion for a new trial is not a prerequisite to the right to appeal court action.

Burns won't make rate forecasts

By HOBART ROWEN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur F. Burns in unusually strong and often emotional languge, has denounced an effort by some Congressmen to require the central bank to make public forecasts of interest rates.

"You'll never get a forecast on interest rates out of me," he told Rep. Henry S. Reuss (D-Wis.), chairman of the House Banking Committee and principal author of a bill to make the Fed more accountable to Congress.

"If I am forced to do it (forecast interest rates) that would pose a very difficult moral circumstance for me," Burns said. A Fed spokesman later denied that Burns had intended a veiled threat of resignation.

Burns did not deal with substantive issues relating to the economy or to current Federal Reserve money policy. He will do that in a separate session Friday, when he presents the Fed's regular quarterly updating of money targets.

But in response to questions, he said there were "serious implications" to the depreciation of the dollar. "We have a great deal of responsibility to protect the integrity of our money domestically and internationally," Burns said.

The dollar has depreciated only fractionally against an average of other currencies, but has declined against a stronger German mark, Swiss franc and Japanese yen. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal in a Washington Post interview said last week that the dollar might edge down further against the strong currencies.

Burns said that "Blumenthal's thinking has been misinterpreted by the press." A Treasury spokesman later said that Burns' comment was incorrect if his reference was to the Post story.

Reuss' bill (H.R. 8094) would make basic changes in the operation and management of the central bank, and especially its relationships to Congress. The requirement for public revelation of the Board's thinking on interest rates was only one of several major provisions to which Burns objected.

On the other hand, he endorsed several parts of the bill, including a statement that monetary policy "shall be governed by the national policy to promote maximum employment, production, and price stability." In effect, this would substitute the more precise "price stability" goal for the "purchasing power" language in the Employment Act of 1946, which now is the guiding underpinning of Fed policy.

Federal judge drops out of FBI running

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Federal appeals court judge Harlington Wood Jr. Wednesday withdrew from consideration as the new FBI director as controversy continued to swirl around President Carter's effort to fill the post.

Wood, one of five men whom a special search committee recommended to Carter in June as possible choices for the job, cited personal and family reasons in asking that he be dropped from the list.

Wood's action came as Stanley Sporkin, enforcement chief of the Securities and Exchange Commission, charged that the nine-member search committee had sought the wrong qualities in tapping candidates for the FBI job.

Sporkin, prominent for his role in numerous investigations, including those that exposed widespread bribery and political payments by U.S. corporations abroad, was among 60 or so people considered for the FBI post by the search committee. He was not included among the five finalists.

"What they (the nine-member search committee) were looking for was to protect the people FROM the FBI," Sporkin said in an interview. Instead, he said, the committee should have recognized that "the people need the FBI to protect them" by rooting out lawbreakers — and the agency's director must be the kind of person who can lead it aggressively in that direction.

"There is nobody on that list who meets that standard," Sporkin said.

Sporkin said the search committee focused on the problem of restraining such excesses as the illegal breakins and wiretaps which the FBI undertook under Director J. Edgar Hoover.

"The committee overstated this problem — the problem of overreaching" by the FBI, Sporkin said.

The statements by the SEC official brought to a boil a hitherto simmering feud between him and Irving S. Shapiro, who is chairman of the giant chemical company, E.I. du Pont de Nemours and Co., and also head of Carter's search committee.

Coupled with Wood's withdrawal, they added to the aura of groping and confusion that has plagued the selection process ever since Carter announced the names of the five finalists June 13.

Since that time, one of the choices, Wayne County Sheriff William Lucas of Detroit, has suffered because of disclosures that he accepted free Las Vegas holidays as part of gambling junkets. None of the other choices has proved an overwhelming favorite, and at the urging of Atty. Gen. Griffin B. Bell, Carter has added at least one additional name to the panel, that of FBI general counsel John A. Mintz.

It is not clear when the sniping between Sporkin and Shapiro began. But Shapiro complained privately about what he called lobbying on Sporkin's behalf during the search committee's deliberations. Sporkin has denied any such lobbying.

At the same time, Shapiro has bristled at suggestions, which he said he thought might have been inspired by Sporkin or others at the SEC, that a clash between Du Pont and Sporkin's enforcement division left Shapiro biased against the SEC man as a possible candidate for the FBI job.

The run-in with the enforcement division came when it urged the SEC to require Du Pont to disclose publicly $599,000 in questionable payments it allegedly had made between 1973 and 1975 both in the United States and abroad. Du Pont resisted doing so.

Eventually, the commission voted not to require the disclosure. The information came out later anyway in congressional testimony.

Governor Briscoe says he won't reply to Anderson charge

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A spokesman for Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Wednesday the governor has no plans to "dignify with a reply" a charge by columnist Jack Anderson that the governor ignored abuses in Texas nursing homes.

Anderson's Tuesday syndicated column said, "The people who run nursing homes in Texas have made friends and influenced the right people from Austin to Washington."

It also said Briscoe has received some $13,000 in campaign contributions from the Texas Nursing Home Association's political action fund. The column named other Texas state and national lawmakers.

"I told him (Briscoe) about the column," said executive assistant Ken Clapp. "All he said was that he couldn't really see how anyone could buy that in light of the special session."

The Texas Legislature returned this month for a special session where a new law governing the operation of nursing homes was one of a handful of bills passed.

"I personally just don't think Mr. Anderson did his homework," Clapp added. "When you consider that during the special session the only items that can be brought up are those that the governor initiates and it's my personal opinion that the nursing home bill he brought up and got passed is designed to keep these very violations (nursing home abuses) from happening."

Anderson's column said the $13,000 in contributions "may explain his (Briscoe's) indifference to nursing home abuses, which appear to be worse in Texas than in any other state. He has put together a licensing board which rarely acts against homes caught in violation."

The new law consolidated regulation of nursing homes in the state health department, ending years of divided authority between it and the state welfare department. It provides possible prison sentences for nursing home employes who deliberately injure patients and heavy civil penalties for nursing homes that fail to meet standards set by the state health department.

The bill also mandates annual suprise inspections of each nursing home in the state and yearly hearings at each home, where patients and their relatives can raise complaints about service and treatment.

The nursing home controversy was sparked by The Lufkin Daily News in a series of stories that revealed incidents of abuse in some Texas nursing homes.

Califano disagrees with housing tax

By MYRA MacPHERSON
and DAVID S. BRODER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Joseph A. Califano Jr., the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, said Wednesday that he disagreed with his department's suggestion that President Carter could help finance welfare revision by a kind of tax on families living in federally subsidized housing.

Califano told the convention of the National Urban League that he had advised Carter against reducing welfare payments 10 to 15 per cent for beneficiaries who also receive housing assistance.

"The Washington Post says I've got my greedy paws out for some of HUD's money," Califano said, referring to the funds that the Department of Housing and Urban Development uses to subsidize low-income tenants. "I should note that doesn't happen to be the case."

Rex Granum, the deputy White House press secretary, said the "tax" proposal "is contained in one of the options before the President, but it is not an option recommended by Secretary Califano."

The text of the relevant portion of Califano's memo was obtained late Wednesday by The Washington Post. It showed that the secretary argued that the merits favored the "tax" proposal but political considerations might make it imprudent to adopt.

Califano said "there are strong arguments of equity for providing lower cash assistance benefits to subsidized housing occupants than to those who do not receive housing subsidies." He said a 15 per cent "tax" on their welfare payments could provide "an additional $450 million for welfare reform."

But then he added: "My best political judgment is that the misery is not worth the fight, as I told the New Coalition (of governors and local officials) and the press last week. But some of your advisers do not agree with me. On the merits, most (except HUD) would impute something as a matter of equity."

Imputation is the technical term for reducing cash benefits for those receiving housing subsidies, whether through such "taxes" or other means.

When Califano was asked why he included in his memo to the President a proposal with which he personally disagreed, he said: "The President has charged me with the task of preparing a welfare reform program, and if I am to serve the President properly, it is my function to make certain that he sees the important options in welfare reform, whether I happen to agree with them or not."

HUD officials, still nervous that some of their programs may be sacrificed to meet Carter's goal of a welfare-revision package that entails no higher Federal spending, has a different interpretation of the incident.

One senior HUD official said that having promised mayors and governors last week "that there wouldn't be a housing aspect to the welfare-reform proposal, I would think it is incumbent on Califano to formally say he's against the proposal."

"But," he continued, "it's laid out in such detail and the arguments are so well put forth that it's hard to believe it wasn't laid out for a reason."

Defense conducting own probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department is conducting its own investigation of the Korean influence-buying scandal in an effort to determine whether payoffs and gifts flowed to the Pentagon as well as to Capitol Hill.

In response to queries, the Pentagon acknowledged on Wednesday that it began its own investigation earlier this month.

A Pentagon spokesman said the investigation was ordered "because of information that there have been improprieties."

Meanwhile, Justice Department officials told a group of congressmen Wednesday that "a very few" indictments are expected as a result of the department's investigation of the scandal on Capitol Hill.

Assistant Atty. Gen. Benjamin R. Civiletti told congressmen no final decision has been made to seek indictments against anybody, although he said several cases are at the point where a decision will be made shortly.

Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said earlier this week that he understood five persons would be indicted soon. Sources said the five would include former congressmen, but no one now holding office.

But Civiletti said the probe has not even produced enough "evidence of a chargeable crime" to take action against South Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park, who has been the central figure in the scandal.

But after Civiletti's cautious assessment at the unusual briefing, Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell told the congressmen, "There are some people that will be prosecuted.

"Others will be absolved," Bell continued, "and there will probably be some in the middle that your own committees will want to deal with from the standpoint of ethics and propriety."

The two Justice Department officials told the meeting of about 100 congressmen they could give no details on their findings.

Civiletti said an obvious problem in the investigation is that Park has fled to London and the Justice Department would need "evidence of a chargeable crime" to extradite him.

"If we had that evidence there would be an indictment today," Civiletti said, "and we would have extradition proceedings begun."

Bell foresees several prosecutions

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Atty. Gen. Griffin B. Bell told congressmen Wednesday that the Justitice Department's South Korean payoff investigation was "80 per cent complete" and indictments may be sought in a few instances.

At an unusual public briefing attended by about 90 congressmen — most of them junior members who had complained about the investigation's lagging pace — Bell and his criminal division chief said the case was moving along well.

"There is a cloud over Congress, and I knew of nothing more important than to remove this cloud," Bell said.

Declaring that he expected "some prosecutions," Bell said, "There will probably be some other cases that your own committee may want to deal with in regard to ethics and propriety."

He referred to the House Ethics Committee, which is conducting a parallel investigation into allegations that South Korean agents sought to win influence in Congress by lavishing cash payments, gifts and other favors on congressmen.

Rep. John J. Flynt Jr. (D-Ga.), the ethics committee chairman, said he found Bell's briefing, which was open to the press, "as comprehensive and as forthright as it could be under the circumstances."

Flynt said Bell could not discuss specific details because the case was still under active criminal investigation.

Some other members disagreed.

Rep. Millicent Fenwick (R-N.J.), a committee member, expressed disappointment that Bell did not describe the scope of the alleged wrongdoing being investigated.

"What are we faced with, an enormous spreading cancer.... Or is this just one or two individuals?" she asked.

Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman (D-N.Y.) remarked, "I was disturbed by the presentation. It raised more questions than it solved."

Benjamin R. Civiletti, chief of the Justice Department's criminal division, told the briefing that four areas of wrongdoing were being investigated. He listed these as bribery, income tax evasion, fraud and violations of federal election laws.

Civiletti said five department attorneys are presenting evidence to a federal grand jury with assistance from 12 Internal Revenue Service agents and 12 FBI agents. In the last four months, "we've made an enourmous amount of progress," he said.

Civiletti said investigators have sought to separate "legitimate conduct which involves Korea and interest in Korea from conduct which gives rise to a potential criminal violation."

Although 500 persons have been interviewed and 60 witnesses have appeared before the grand jury, the department has been unable to compel testimony from Korea lobbyist Tongsun Park, a central figure in the probe who now lives in London, Civiletti said.

The House committee held a closed-door meeting Wednesday to discuss seeking a grant of immunity for two former close aides of Park, sources familiar with the investigation said.

HEW employes discovered on welfare roles

By ALICE BONNER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has discovered 216 of its employes on District of Columbia Welfare rolls — 105 of them by "apparent fraud or error," HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said Wednesday.

The cases were revealed in initial testing here of a new HEW effort to expose welfare fraud on the part of federal workers across the country, Califano said in testimony to the House intergovernmental relations and human resources subcommittee.

He said the cases involving suspected fraud or error will be promptly investigated and referred to proper agencies for legal action against the federal workers.

Officials of the D.C. Department of Human Resources, which administers city welfare programs, said they have not been informed of the suspected fraudulent or erroneous payments to HEW workers. They alone have the authority to eliminate such benefits, the officials said.

"We have cooperated by supplying HEW our rolls, but we have not been given their payroll," acting DHR deputy director William H. Whitehurst Jr. said. He said DHR asked for the information more than a week ago.

Whitehurst said the District's own intensified efforts to reduce its welfare error rates, among the highest in the country, produced a slight decline during the first half of 1977.

Welfare benefits to ineligible persons declined from 14.3 per cent of the total caseload to 11.3 per cent, but the rate of overpayments rose from 22.1 per cent to 23.8 per cent, Whitehurst said.

Welfare fraud and errors most often result from recipients failing to report changes in income, family size and other factors that determine the amount of benefits, according to federal and local officials. DHR's inability to thoroughly review its caseloads and accurately process new applicants have also been blamed for the high error rate here. DHR has estimated that it pays out $33,000 a month for erroneous cases and in overpayments out of a total of $8 million paid in family welfare each month.

According to Califano, a preliminary analysis of 11 of the cases indicates that the persons are entitled to benefits they receive.

Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the major welfare program, provides $3,769.20 a year to a family of four in the District. Working parents of large families often qualify for AFDC benefits to supplement their salaries.

Califano said HEW's comparison of welfare and federal employe rolls here was an initial step in a new program, labeled Project MATCH, to undertake such checks nationwide.

Based on its success in the District, HEW is exploring a match-up of the entire federal workforce with lists of people receiving welfare, food stamp and unemployment benefits nationally, Califano said.

He testified in hearings on a bill, introduced by subcommittee chairman Rep. L.H. Fountain (D-N.C.) to create statutory inspectors general in 14 federal departments and agencies, to track down fraud and abuse in the bureaucracy.

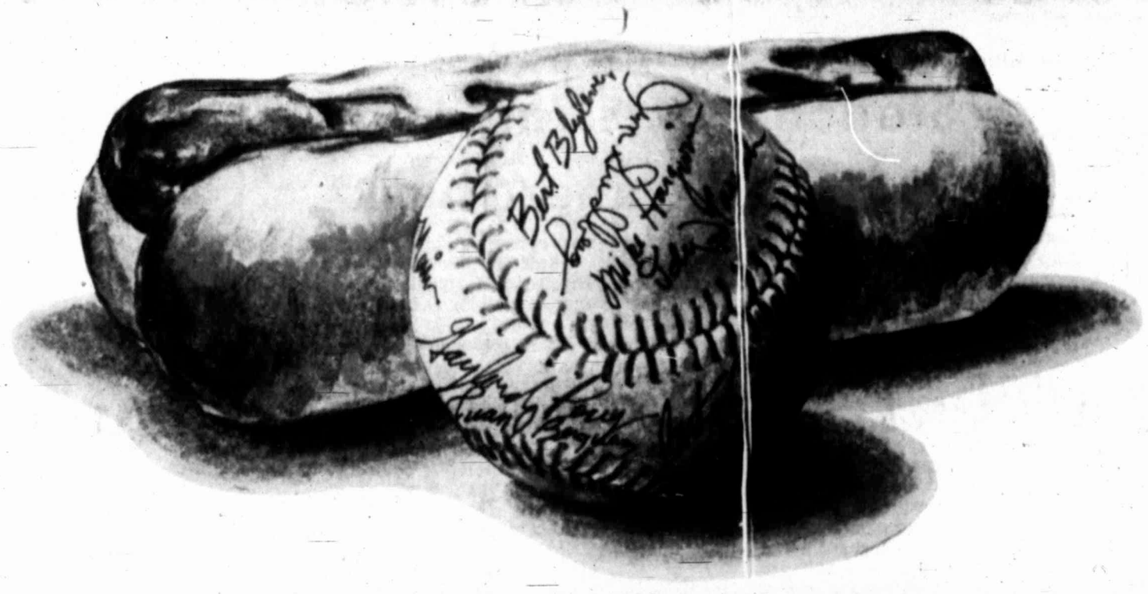

HEW has had an inspector general for four months, under legislation that Fountain initiated last year. Califano said the MATCH project is one of several anti-fraud efforts undertaken by that office which have shown early success.

Committee kills funding plan

By SPENCER RICH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Carter's plan to use general income tax revenues to help finance Social Security benefits was killed by the Senate Finance Committee Wednesday, 11 to 3.

Liberal Democrats such as Sens Gaylord Nelson (D-Wis.), Abraham A. Ribicoff (D-Conn.) and Daniel P. Moynihan (D-N.Y.) united with committee chairman Russell B. Long (D-La.) and Republicans to crush the controversial plan.

Social Security benefits have always been financed by a specific earmarked employer-employe Social Security payroll tax, not by using general income tax funds.

Long said the committee vote means that whatever money may be needed to shore up the old-age and disability trust funds will come from specific earmarked taxes, not general treasury funds.

Otherwise, it would simply be like "telling the Federal Reserve to print the money," he said.

The Carter plan, to help meet growing deficits in Social Security funds, would have pumped $14 billion in general income tax funds into the Social Security funds over the next five years.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano, in outlining the plan earlier, said it would be reasonable for the Treasury to aid the trust funds whenever unemployment rose over 6 per cent and the Social Security tax as a result brought in less money. Califano calculated that amount at $14 billion for recent years, and said Congress should consider making additional fund shifts whenever unemployment rose over 6 per cent in the future.

Long, angrily denouncing the plan Wednesday, said the federal government was running at a deficit on many programs. Here was one in which it was the accepted practice to impose a specific tax to cover all costs — and the administration wanted to abandon that practice and let Social Security slide into deficit financing, too, he said.

One reason for the plan's defeat was apprehension that organizations of the elderly, knowing that the whole treasury was open to them potentially for the first time, would mount tremendous pressures for benefit increases unaccompanied by any tax increases, thus worsening the entire fiscal posture of the government.

On the other hand, some senators said many elderly fear that if Social Security depends on Treasury funds, any time the Treasury's general income tax revenues are running at a deficit compared with general government outlays, there will be pressure to cut back on Social Security benefits, cancel cost-of-living increases and the like.

While killing the income-tax revenue plan, the committee put off action on other proposals for new Social Security financing. Long wanted to vote, but Nelson said he would rather delay the issue for more study.

Carter's picnic attracts share of fun seekers

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — They came dressed in their tasteful pin-stripe suits, halter tops, creased blue jeans and polyester pantsuits. They looked spanking fresh and ready for a big night at the White House.

But they appeared a little nervous and a little hungry.

In an hour, shirt tails were out, shoes were off and ties hung like limp dishrags from back pockets. Dresses and faces were mustard-stained and lips were sticky with chocolate ice cream.

It was President Carter's second congressional picnic, and it was again just like down-home.

Everyone seemed to be relaxed and enjoying the bluegrass and country music, square dancers, clowns and food — especially the food: hot dogs, hamburger, baked beans and slaw. There was no cake walk.

President Carter did the same with the press.

They followed his every move, pressing closer and closer hoping to overhear a touch of down-home rumor. They watched breathlessly as he ate a popsicle. Would he drop it? No.

Some guests complained that because of the reporters they couldn't get to the President to have their hand shaken or their baby kissed.

A group of congressmen challenged Carter's congressional liaison office to a bit of volleyball.

But then came a swift, merciless defeat by the congressmen. "I've never seen them with this kind of determination before," said Mrs. Richard L. Ottinger. "They really want to win."

Off came the coats, ties, shoes.

Frank Moore, head of the liaison office, shouted boastfully across the net as another game got under way. "They seem to need some leadership over there. Somebody help them out!"

Station wants Yarbrough to give TV camera back

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston television station was attempting to get back a cameraman's equipment that a station spokesman said former Texas Supreme Court Justice Donald B. Yarbrough grabbed and took into his house.

Bill Gilmartin, news director of KHOU-TV, said the altercation occurred Wednesday when cameraman George Ellis attempted to take pictures of Yarbrough's Houston residence.

Yarbrough was not available for comment but his wife said neither she nor her husband would have any comment.

A real estate agent said the Houston Yarbrough home sold for $125,000. The report of this sale and a report from an Austin real estate agent that Mrs. Yarbrough had entered an ernest money contract to buy a home there prompted Ellis to go to the Houston home, Gilmart in said.

Gilmartin said that while Ellis dismantled his equipment on the sidewalk in front of the Yarbrough home, the former Supreme Court justice "came out of the house in a very concerned state of mind."

Gilmartin said Yarbrough grabbed Ellis' camera, camera recorder and equipment dolly and took them inside the house. Ellis said Yarbrough made no physical threats and no one was hurt in the incident.

Gilmartin said the equipment was valued at between $5,000 and $8,000.

"We called Mr. Yarbrough and asked for our equipment," Gilmartin said. "The best way I can describe his answer is that he politely and very definitely demurred and told us to contact his attorney, Mike Maness."

Contacted by the Houston Post, Maness said, "I have no comment to make in connection with anything that has happened with Channel 11 (KHOU)."

Yarbrough's wife, Julie, said, "We have no comment. He (Yarbrough) has no comment, either. Thank you."

Gilmartin said Ellis was able to eject the video-tape cassette and retrieve it as Yarbrough went into the house. He said the pictures had no people in them and and added that he knew of no other witnesses to the incident.

2 court rulings go for, against adult businesses

HOUSTON (AP) — Adult bookstore and theater owners in Houston have broken even in two court decisions — obtaining a favorable ruling from one judge and an unfavorable one from another.

A federal judge issued an order Wednesday that temporarily enjoins the city of Houston from enforcing an ordinance that would close 19 adult bookstores and theaters.

U.S. District Court Judge Ross Sterling set an Aug. 5 hearing date for the city to oppose a preliminary injunction, which would prohibit enactment of the ordinance until the case reaches trial.

Earlier, U. S. District Court Judge Robert O'Conor denied a request from the owners of an adult bookstore that Houston vice squad officers be prohibited from interferring with the operation of the business.

O'Conor ruled that the owners, James D. Cagle and Jim D. Chappell, had failed to prove sufficient police harassment.

Sterling said in his ruling that the bookstore and theater owners would suffer "irreparable injury" if forced to close today, the day the law would become effective.

The ordinance, passed last month by the city council but opposed by Mayor Fred Hofheinz, would prohibit the operation of an adult commercial establishment within 2,000 feet of a school, church or other educational or charitable institution.

The city legal department indicated that during the 10 day injunction period the city will not move against remaining adults establishments not proterted by the federal order.

City Atty. Otis King said he felt it would be "bad faith" on the city's part to proceed against those not named in the suit.

City council member Frank Mancuso said he regretted Sterling's decision and speculated the council may find other ways to control pornography.

"Whatever needs to be done, I'm hopeful we can come up with an ordinance that will be effective," Mancuso said.

Attorney Rick Young, who represented the plaintiffs, called the temporary restraining order a "temporary victory" for the shop owners and "a victory for the Constitution."

In the request before Judge O'Conor, attorneys for Cagle claimed police were "harassing and intimidating employes and patrons."

Kite striking power lines sparks blaze

By ROGER GILLOTT

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A young man flies a kite on a soft summer evening. A gust of wind wafts the kite into high-voltage power lines. It flutters flaming to the ground.

Result: 385 homes and other structures destroyed or damaged; $50 million in damage; 3,000 persons evacuated; 22 persons injured, 740 acres of brush destroyed.

"I shall always regret the part, however innocent, I have had in this tragic matter," the unidentified young man said late Wednesday as firefighters worked to contain one of one of the worst fires in this scenic community's history. "I am deeply shocked and saddened by the great loss and suffering which has resulted from the fire."

Santa Barbara, a wealthy community of mission-style homes whose red-tiled roofs lend a Mediterranean flavor to the parched Pacific coast some 100 miles north of Los Angeles, became a panicked city Tuesday night as sheets of flame tore through the drought-dried brush of the Santa Ynez Mountains.

Fire storms leaped erratically from canyon to ridge, leaving a patchwork of destruction across the city's richest neighborhoods, where some home values start at $250,000.

Fire officials estimated that 250 expensive homes were destroyed and another 135 homes and other structures were damaged. Three thousand persons fled as the flames, driven by "sundowner" winds, raced through the chaparral brush that covers southern California's mountains.

Seven evacuation centers were set up, but relief workers said few of the financially secure refugees stayed there. Most elected to stay at the 78 hotels and motels in Santa Barbara, a major tourist area.

Dist. Atty. Stanley Roden said the kite flyer, identified only as a man in his 20s, was in Sycamore Canyon when his kite was blown into a 16,000-volt power line. He said the string of the kite caused an electrical arc, which "either set the brush immediately below on fire or sent a shower of flammable material to the ground, which set the brush on fire." Authorities had first believed the blaze was the work of an arsonist.

Although small by California standards, the 740-acre blaze left an uncommon trail of tragedy. Many of those whose homes were destroyed were wealthy; others were not.

Although the fire was declared encircled by late Wednesday, firefighters would not say when the blaze would be extinguished. They kept a careful watch lest the hot, dry evening winds come up and fan the blaze into renewed life.

Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. declared a state of emergency Wednesday and deployed 500 National Guard troops to help firefighters.

Reports increase dollar's value

By ED BLANCHE

LONDON (AP) — The dollar lost ground to the British pound today but improved against other European currencies amid reports the U.S. government would move soon to halt the dollar's recent slide against major world currencies.

Within the first hour of money-market trading in London, the pound was marked at just over $1.74, up from Wednesday's closing $1.7395, which was the highest since mid-September last year.

This represented a rise of two cents this week, a considerable gain for the pound sterling, which has fluctuated very little recently. The pound's lowest closing this year was $1.7042 on Feb. 15.

The dollar was mostly higher against other European currencies. Part of the rise was believed to result from dollars being used to buy pounds.

In early dealings today in London, the dollar rose to 2.2635 West German marks from its overnight 2.2590, to 2.3930 Swiss francs from 2.3905, and to 4.8280 French francs from 4.8225.

Monetary experts in London said they expect the U.S. government to move soon to support the dollar in an effort to halt its slide against major world currencies.

British financial commentators said the West German government is pressing for an urgent meeting with American, British and French leaders to discuss the dollar's decline.

The European Commission, a joint executive of the nine Common Market countries, today called for an increase or at least a stabilization of the value of the dollar on international markets. The dollar's price against the German mark has dropped about 4 per cent in the last month — a rapid change in world money market terms.

It means an American car priced at $10,000 a month ago can be bought now with West German marks worth only $9,600 at the time.

Renato Ruggiero, chief spokesman for the European Commission, told reporters he hopes the U.S. authorities will intervene to keep the rate in line with the American economy, which is recovering faster than most West European nations from the recession of recent years. He said stabilization or improvement of the dollar must be expected.

Common Market officials named three main reasons for their concern about the fall of the dollar:

—It makes American goods cheaper and more competitive with European goods on world markets.

—It threatens the arrangement called "the Snake" that links the West German mark, the Dutch guilder and the Belgian franc with the currencies of Scandinavia. Collapse of the Snake, so named because of the way it looks on a graph, would endanger the joint farm policy of the Common Market countries, which depends on a complex adjustment of prices to the fluctuation of currencies.

—By threatening the value of the dollars that the oil-producing countries get for their product, it could encourage oil producers to raise prices.

In Bonn, West German Finance Minister Hans Apel said he was concerned about the dollar's decline in recent weeks and felt continued fluctuation could threaten global economic recovery.

"The rapidity of the devaluation is extremely alarming," he said in a television interview.

Some British financial writers reported growing European suspicions that the United States is deliberately encouraging the dollar's devaluation to make U.S. exports more competitive in foreign markets in an effort to narrow America's increasing trade gap.

But Apel said he did not believe the United States was trying to gain an unfair trade advantage by allowing the dollar to weaken.

The dollar slumped against the British pound Wednesday in London, sterling gaining nearly two cents in hectic trading and closing at 1.7395 pounds to the dollar, its highest mark against the U.S. currency since last Sept. 16.

Chamber advocates vote

An election calling for the creation of a hospital district and the issuance of bonds for expansion of Midland Memorial Hospital were urged Wednesday by the Midland Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors.

A resolution passed by the chamber board urged the Midland Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees to call the election at the "earliest practicable date."

The resolution read: "The directors of the Midland Chamber of Commerce believe strongly that all of the people of Midland County are entitled to and ought to have the best possible medical care for themselves and their families; and recognizing that our present hospital facilities are inadequate, and that private financing no longer is able to provide the funds needed to bring the hospital up to the standards required by a growing Midland; and we are confident that lives could be saved and prolonged and health care for every citizen be vastly improved once a hospital district is established, public funds provided, and the proposed expansion accomplished."

The ballot would be divided into two parts, one part concerning the formation of the hospital district and the election of the hospital board of directors, and the other part dealing with the approval of a $10 million bond for building expansion.

Cappadonna estimated that the proposed hospital district assessment rate would amount to about $1 per $1,000 of assessed valuation. Thus the tax levied on a $30,000 home would be about $30, he said.

The new hospital building plan calls for a new intensive care and coronary care unit, and expansion to about 200 private rooms from the present 175 semi-private rooms.

Carter nears overseas arms sales

By DAVID ESPO

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, responding to "new situations and new requests," is moving closer to approving arms sales to Egypt and Sudan, two of Russia's arms customers in the past, a spokesman says.

The State Department made two announcements Wednesday about the developing sales:

—Administration officials are consulting with Congress about possibly providing Egypt with additional C130 transport planes and other equipment.

—The President is prepared to open a military supply relationsip with Sudan and a nine-member survey team will visit the strategic East African country in early August "to determine Sudan's legitimate defense requirements."

The announcements, by spokesman Hodding Carter III, followed by one day word that the administration is prepared in principle to provide military assistance to Somalia, which is engaged in an African territorial conflict with neighboring Ethiopia.

Arms sales to any of the three nations has implications for U.S.-Soviet relations, since the Russians in the past have provided military supplies to each of the countries.

But the Soviets now are providing arms to Ethiopia, Somalia's foe, relations between the Russians and the Sudanese government have deteriorated in recent years and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has ended his arms dependence on Moscow.

During his campaign for the presidency last year, Carter often was critical of U.S. arms sales overseas. An administration study launched shortly after he took office resulted in a six-point program unveiled in May.

While the program was aimed at reducing arms sales abroad, the President said, "We will continue to use arms transfers to promote our security and the security of our close friends.

The State Department spokesman said Wednesday the new announcements reflect "a limited decision" in the three cases, resulting from "new situations and new requests."

U.S. officials said Saudi Arabia was likely to play a major role in financing the purchases by all three countries.

State Department spokesman Carter said assisting Sadat with military supplies "is clearly in our interest," since Egypt wants to diversify its sources of military supplies.

Deceased's identity withheld

Midland County Sheriff's officers are withholding the name, pending notification of relatives, of a body found Wednesday afternoon by the side of the railroad tracks five miles west on U.S. 80.

According to a spokesman for the sheriff's office, the person apparently had been struck by a train.

The body was reported at 1:55 p.m. Wednesday by a train engineer, who saw the body beside the tracks.

The death is still under investigation. The body has been taken to Thomas Funeral Home.

City stays dry despite lightning

Despite an impressive lightning display Wednesday night, and despite the fact that several area cities reported amounts of rain, Midland remained as dry as the sand upon which it sits.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal, no rain officially was reported here.

Andrews, Stanton, Big Lake and Big Spring all reported small amounts of moisture, while Lamesa, Crane and Rankin reported no rain.

The high temperature Wednesday was 100 degrees, as predicted by the National Weather Service. The low tonight is expected to reach 70 degrees.

A slight chance of rain, 20 per cent, is forecast again for tonight. Winds this afternoon are to be southerly at 10 to 15 mph, decreasing to 5 to 10 mph tonight.

Riproaring thunderstorms and occasional tornadoes lashed parts of Texas during the night, and deluges of rain filled the streets in places.

Sheriff's officers reported one twister struck one mile east of Granburg in the area south of Fort Worth and unroofed a farm house. There was no other word of damage there or from other tornadoes sighted near Sealy, which is in the Houston vicini-

COURTNEY — Lonnie Decker stepped from his rent house and onto the porch. It was his day off as a pumper, and he was taking it easy.

A chaw of tobacco was resting in a pouch formed just behind his lower lip. He appeared contented; country living must agree with him.

Besides that, about all there is out here now is just "country." Cotton fields are all about. Some are dotted with pumping jacks and oil tanks. Occasionally there are meager rows of corn. Some of the stalks are dried out; the cotton isn't.

No more, though. It's just an empty, deserted building where birds now roost. The school has been closed for 17 years.

The brick school building has long since been torn down.

"About everybody in the country must have gone to school there at one time," Decker said. He didn't. He's from Haskell. But he said quite a few people around his age (He's 32.) went to school over there.

Near the old gym are a couple of tile houses. One is vacant. Loud rock 'n' roll music is coming from the other one. Two motorcycles are at the back. A black watch dog, who may or may not be "mean," is on a leash on the other side. No one seems to be stirring inside.

Just beyond the old gym is the Baptist church and parsonage. Nobody seems to be at home there. Unlike the other place, it's quiet.

Beyond that lives an 85-year-old widow, Donie Hull. She's been living there, on the same site — not in the same house — for more than 50 years. She's been widowed for almost as long as that. Some 40-odd years.

She never remarried. And she rarely, if ever, complains about her long and sometimes hard life.

"I don't have no grumblings about it, sure don't," she was to say later on in the afternoon. She was carrying around a short-handled hoe that served both as cane, which she didn't need, and chopping tool.

Back at his place, Decker was still on the porch. He wasn't talking much, but enough. Toy riding horses were in the yard. Too, just inside the picket fence, was an old car tire dangling from a tree. He and the wife have a couple of kids — a boy and a girl.

Across from the tree swing is the Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Leroy Brookover of Sonora; two sisters, Mrs. Carl Crone of Olden and Mrs. H.G. Brown of Denver City, and one grandson.

Begin report accepted by Israeli parliament

By DIAL TORGERSON
The Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — The Israeli parliament voted Wednesday to accept Prime Minister Menahem Begin's report of his talks with President Carter and to approve his policy of continued Jewish settlement in the occupied West Bank area of Jordan.

On his talks with Carter, support was limited to Begin's Likud bloc and the two religious parties that have joined his coalition.

The parliamentary action came amid these other developments:

— Begin expressed "deep distress and disappointment" at U.S. criticism of Israel's recognition of three disputed Jewish settlements in the West Bank area.

— Carter said in Washington that Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance "speaks for me" in criticizing the Israeli settlements. Vance had said Tuesday that the new settlements were "an obstacle to peace" in the Middle East.

— Begin said he was surprised at reports from Washington that the United States will supply Egypt with 40 Lockheed C-130 Hercules transport planes. He said he had instructed his foreign minister, Moshe Dayan, to take up the question with the State Department.

The vote to accept Begin's report on his Washington trip was 59 to 36 with 13 abstentions. It came after 2 1-2 hours of debate, much of it acrimonious.

Begin was questioned about his failure to reach agreement with Carter on a number of points, among them the question of the West Bank settlements.

"The American reaction came as a shock," said Yigael Yadin, head of the Democratic Movement for Change. "After the euphoria which was created after Mr. Begin came back here with statements about his understanding with the United States, one would have taken it for granted that there was some kind of agreement between Mr. Begin and Mr. Carter on such an issue."

Two members of parliament, both pro-Palestinian, proposed a halt to Jewish settlement in the West Bank area. They were the only members favoring the proposal, in a show-of-hands vote.

In the course of their Washington talks, Carter had asked Begin to halt Jewish settlement of the West Bank area pending resumption of the Middle East peace conference in Geneva, which is expected to be convened in the fall. Begin declined to make such a promise.

His position has been that the Jews' traditional homeland, which he calls the Land of Israel, includes the West Bank area.

"We stand on the right of Jews to live in any part of the Land of Israel," he told the parliament Wednesday.

Observers here believe that Begin agreed to give legal recognition to the new settlements in order to gain favor with two religious parties that provide 16 of the votes in his coalition. Even with their votes, he has only a 62-seat majority in the 120-seat parliament.

Yadin's Democratic Movement for Change, which has been considering joining Begin's governing coalition, abstained from the voting Wednesday. Yadin said that his group favors settlements in the area only for reasons of security and does not approve the establishment of new Jewish settlements in areas that are heavily populated by Arabs.

Shimon Peres, defense minister in the former Labor government and now leader of the opposition, said the timing of the decision to recognize the new settlements — which was announced Tuesday — was unfortunate.

His statement was echoed by U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim. A spokesman for Waldheim, who is in Vienna, said in New York that Israel's recognition of the settlements was not only unfortunate but "cannot but affect the current efforts to resume the negotiating process in the Middle East."

Meanwhile, the 20 Arab delegations to the United Nations agreed to meet Thursday to discuss the development and the possibility of taking it to the Security Council.

The Security Council's president, Jorge Illueca of Panama, said last November that Israeli action in settling the territories occupied in the 1967 war had no legal validity and constituted an obstacle to peace.

Commenting on reports that Washington will send transport planes to Egypt, Begin told parliament Wednesday:

"Why does Egypt need 40 Hercules transports capable of carrying 4,000 soldiers? We shall not keep silent about this."

Adventure film slated

NEW YORK (AP) — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer recently announced that Bob Rafelson will produce and direct "At Play in the Fields of the Lord," based on the novel by naturalist and explorer Peter Mattheissen.

"Fields" is a drama of high adventure set in the Amazon jungles.

Marx battle ended

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — The bitter battle over who is to handle Groucho Marx's affairs ended quietly Wednesday during a 20-minute court session in the ailing comedian's hospital room.

Wednesday's events signaled a surrender by Erin Fleming, Groucho's constant companion the past seven years, in her efforts to be named his conservator.

Rafeedie also ruled that the Bank of America continue as conservator of Marx's business interests in his estimated $2.85 million estate.

"I hope I can remain neutral," the 27-year-old grandson said, "and I'm glad there won't be any more of this haggling." Miss Fleming was not present but her attorney, Douglas Dalton, said, "Erin never really wanted all of this but she had been the nominee of Groucho and that's why she asked to be conservator. She is very happy with the appointment of Andrew."

Marx is in Cedars-Sinai Medical Center where he was rushed six weeks ago suffering from a mild form of pneumonia.

Following the brief session in Marx's eighth floor room, Rafeedie said that the comedian was "reasonably alert... although he has trouble speaking and gave only one word answers to my questions."

Prior to going to Cedars-Sinai, Rafeedie and attorneys for all sides in the conservatorship controversy met in the judge's nearby Santa Monica courtroom.

Rafeedie explained that the hospital meeting was absolutely necessary because of certain legal requirements in such cases.

'Satisfactory' describes final shuttle testing

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The space shuttle Enterprise has made its highest and last piggyback test flight before a solo launch Aug. 12.

Some "nuisance problems" were reported during the craft's hour-long flight Tuesday atop a Boeing 747, but National Aviation and Space Administration officials said everything was generally satisfactory.

"Absolutely nothing" developed during the final test to prevent the Enterprise from making it first free flight next month, said test flight manager Donald "Deke" Slayton, a former astronaut.

Traveling at 312 m.p.h., the 75 ton shuttle was lofted to an altitude of 28,660 feet, the highest so far, before 747 pilot Fitzhugh Fulton nose the transport jet into a seven-degree dive for 4,000 feet.

It's at that point on Aug. 12 that seven explosive bolts holding the shuttle to the 747 will be fired, releasing the Enterprise for a five-minute free-flight glide. It will land on a 15,000 foot dry lake runway.

NASA officials said the craft has performed so well on test flights that the number of free flights may be cut from eight to four, saving $10 million to $12 million.

However, a flashing warning light did prove annoying to NASA scientists in Tuesday's test. The warning could have indicated overheating in one of three auxiliary power units (APUs), which provide energy for steering, braking and other controls.

However, astronaut Gordon Fullerton, who manned the Enterprise with astronaut Fred Haise, said the malfunction appeared to be in the sensor light, not the APU.

Fullerton and Haise will pilot the shuttle on the Aug. 12 flight.

The Enterprise will eventually be sent into earth orbit with men and scientific equipment. It is the first U.S. spacecraft designed for multiple flights and re-entries.

FTC to make firm relinquish control

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission has announced it has ordered American General Insurance Co., based in Houston, Tex., to give up control of Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland.

American General, an allines diversified insurance company, acquired F&D, primarily a bonding specialist, with headquarters in Baltimore, in 1969 for stock valued at $107.7 million.

The commission ruled unanimously that the acquisition violates a section of the Clayton Act because it may substantially lessen competition in the business of underwriting fidelity bonds and surety bonds.

The most common type of surety bond covers construction contracts and guarantees performance according to the terms of the contract. A fidelity bond represents an undertaking by the bond writer to indemnify an employer against losses suffered through the dishonesty of bonded employes.

Texas Recipes

Piney Woods Hush Puppies

2½ cups yellow corn meal
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons Imperial Granulated Sugar
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 egg, beaten
2 cups buttermilk
1½ cups cooking oil, about

Mix all dry ingredients; beat milk and egg together and combine with dry ingredients; batter should hold its shape when picked up in spoon. If it is too soft, add more cornmeal. Drop by mounded tablespoonful into 350°F. fat and cook about 1½ minutes; turn and cook on second side 1 minute. Allow oil to heat a few seconds after removing a batch. Delicious freshly cooked and hot; however, leftover hush puppies freeze well. When ready to serve frozen hush puppies, place on oven rack in preheated 250°F. until very hot and crisp. Makes about 48 hush puppies 2" round.

Hints on frying: Using a small diameter heavy saucepan allows using a minimum of oil; a 5 or 6 inch pan with oil 1½ inches deep and heated to 350°F. will cook three hush puppies in about 2½ minutes. When batter consistency is correct and oil is at 350°F., hush puppies will become firm, round shapes almost as soon as they enter the hot oil. If they are cooked in oil that is too hot, they will not cook in the center.

Midlander's brother vacations in restored 1918 Model T Ford

Henry Ford may have been right. Paul Conn, brother of Vernon Conn of Midland, has owned and operated Model T's since he was 12 years old.

Conn, whose hometown is Tomball, will leave Midland today to journey through Louisiana, Arkansas, Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee in a 1918 Model T. He said it took him 20 driving hours to get from Tomball, near Houston, to Midland to visit his brother.

His 1918 Model T travels approximately 30 mph and gets approximately 30 miles per gallon.

Conn rebuilds and restores Model T's. He has five, varying in age from 1918 to 1927. He is working on a 1922 model and will sell the 1918 car once the 1922 model is finished.

For the past four years, Conn has vacationed in one of his restored cars. "That's the way I put them to the test," he said. "I drove to Midland from Tomball and had no trouble, not even a flat tire."

In case of car trouble, Conn carries most spare parts with him on his vacations. "If I do have problems, I can make most minor repairs on the spot," he said.

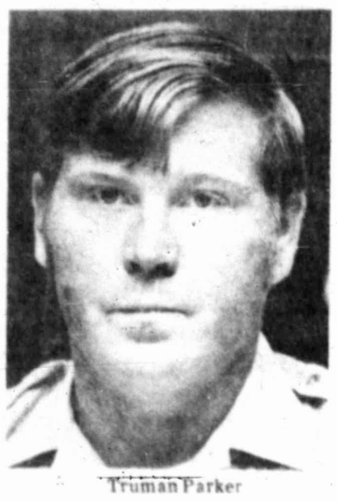

"I've noticed one thing on my trip to Midland," he said. "The people in West Texas are more courteous than they are in the Houston area."

During the day, Conn usually travels with the top up. It is the only way he has to get a little cooler during the heat of the day.

The final stop on Conn's vacation will be the "Grand Ole Opery" in Nashville, Tenn., ending a trip of approximately 3,000 miles for Conn and his Model T.

Lions learn of Ireland trip, honor firefighter

By RICHIE REECER

"If you ever go to Dundalk (Ireland), mention Midland, Texas, and your worries are over." Art Cole director of the Midland Community Theatre, told the Downtown Lions' Club Wednesday during their noon meeting.

Cole told the Lions, who had gathered at the Midland Hilton, of the experiences he and the Summer Mummers, a group from the Midland Community Theatre, had during a recent trip to Ireland.

The entourage from Midland went to Ireland to participate in the Dundalk Maytime Festival, an annual 10-day event held in that city. In addition to the amateur theater festival, a beauty pageant, art contest and other events were conducted at the festival, Cole said.

The group, consisting of 73 persons, left Midland May 19 and returned May 26. This was the second trip to Dundalk made by the Mummers. Cole and 52 other persons made the trip three years ago.

Cole told the Lions of the many humorous experiences he had while trying to get 73 people, stage props, costumes, hats and peanuts (to throw at the villain in the play) to Ireland at the same time.

The idea for the group's trips to Ireland originated in 1972 at a council meeting of the International Amateur Theater Association, he said. During the meeting, which Cole attended, he invited the council to meet in Midland for its next annual meeting.

The council accepted the invitation and met here the following year. During the stay in Midland, the council attended a performance of the Summer Mummers. The council was so impressed by the group that the Mummers received an invitation to perform at the Dundalk Festival, Cole said.

Upon his return to Dundalk this year, Cole was honored as a "Free Man of Dundalk," the Irish equivalent of receiving the "key to the city." Cole said this event was quite an honor since the last man to receive the honor was the president of Ireland.

After their final performance both years they have attended the festival, the Mummers gave a party for other festival participants and the citizens of Dundalk. These parties are one of the major reasons for Midland's popularity in Dundalk, Cole said.

For both the parties, the Midland group brought large quantities of tequila, he said, and the Irishmen loved it.

Cole is the only director the Midland Community Theater has ever had.

He first came to Midland in the 1940s while with the special services branch of the Army Air Corps. Later, after being transferred to various locations, Cole was discharged from the service.

After leaving the service, Cole returned to Midland to live. He has been president of state, national and international theater groups.

In other action, the Lions named Truman Parker of 1400 Keith as their "Firefighter of the Month" for July. Parker is an equipment operator with the Midland Fire Department. He has seven years of firefighting experience, and has received training as an emergency medical technician. He also has an associate degree in fire technology from Midland College. He served with the U.S. Navy in Vietnam.

Radiologist believes death fears realized

By FRED BRUNING
Newsday

NEW YORK — When fallout from a Chinese atomic test blast began drifting toward the United States last fall, Ernest Sternglass, a University of Pittsburgh radiologist, feared that an increase in infant mortality would occur. Now, he says, those fears have been realized.

To say the least, not everyone is convinced and now the observations of Sternglass are causing some fallout of their own.

One New York State health official said Sternglass' claims that at least 200 to 300 babies in the Northeast died as a result of the nuclear test were "unfair" and should be subjected to the most careful scrutiny. An official in Connecticut said Sternglass was simply wrong.

Sternglass, a professor of nuclear and radiological physics and an opponent of nuclear energy, says infant mortality rates increased by 13 to 60 per cent during the first three months of this year in five Northeastern states where radioactivity readings were highest and where state officials failed to take "countermeasures."

In New York, he said, the rates increased only slightly and in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, where wide-ranging preventative measures were taken, there was a decrease in the rate of infant mortality. The states experiencing substantial increases in infant mortality rates, he says, were Delaware, New Hampshire, Maine, New Jersey and Connecticut.

"There is no alternative explanation that anyone has advanced" that makes more sense than his analysis, Sternglass said. And, he said, these findings are similar to those in the past regarding the effects of nuclear fallout.

However, Mitchell Leon, a spokesman for the New Jersey Health Department, said the statistical increase experienced in his state was "not significant." Further, Leon said, he is aware of no health official or physician in New Jersey "who can find a correlation between the October fallout and the mortality rate of the past few months."

A representative of the New York State Department of Health said the agency had disputed past findings advanced by Sternglass, specifically those that sought to indicate cancer rates increase in the vicinity of nuclear energy installations. Sternglass, said the spokesman, is known as an ardent enemy of nuclear power. "He's anti-nuclear, period," said health department spokesman Marvin Nailor.

Officials expect return of Americans' remains

By RICHARD PYLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Department officials expect Vietnam to return the remains of 22 Americans listed as missing in the Indochina war and hint that Hanoi may be preparing to reveal the fate of other missing U.S. citizens.

Senior state department officials told a House subcommittee Wednesday they expect the bodies of 20 U.S. military men and two civilians to be turned over by Hanoi by the end of September.

The 22 bodies include 15 identified by Hanoi officials in a Paris meeting with U.S. representatives in June, plus five listed as unknown, and the two civilians about whom queries had been made.

The subcommittee, headed by Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., scheduled a closed-door meeting today with Nguyen Cong Hoan, a Vietnamese legislator who says he has information about missing Americans.

Hoan, who escaped from Vietnam last March, arrived in the United States this week. Questioned by another House panel Tuesday, he said his information was based on "rumors" but came from a trustworthy source, who would be in danger if identified. He indicated there are Americans living in jails in Vietnam.

Richard Holbrooke, assistant secretary of state for East Asia, told Wolff's panel Wednesday that there was special significance in the fact that, for the first time, the Vietnamese had offered to return bodies which had not been the subject of specific inquiries.

But a congressman who twice led U.S. delegations to Hanoi to seek information on missing Americans says he doubts Vietnam will ever account for all MIAs.

Rep. G.V. Montgomery, D-Miss., told the subcommittee that some American pilots shot down during the war were lost at sea or in remote jungle where their bodies were never recovered.

"There is no way the Vietnamese could give a full accounting," Montgomery said.

About 2,800 Americans are unaccounted for from the Indochina war. 1,800 are presumed dead and 700 listed as missing in action. Many were lost in Laos and some in Cambodia, neither of which has furnished any information to U.S. officials.

Investigation of restaurant fire continues

A fire at the Branding Iron, a Midland restaurant, at 3:58 a.m. today was definitely set, according to Jerry Petree, fire inspector for the Midland Fire Department.

"It was set in four different places, but whoever set it didn't really know what they were doing," said Petree.

The fires were set on two tables and the chairs around them, and on a table in back with a large number of napkins on it, said Petree.

There was only slight structural damage in the walls behind the table holding the napkins.

The fire is still under investigation.

ty, and in Hood County near the middle of the state.

One of the heaviest downpours dumped more than two inches of rain at Alief, just west of Houston. Flooding of streets occurred at several points in that part of the state and also near Fort Worth.

A bumper crop of thunderstorms ripped through the south part of the Texas Panhandle into the South Plains, and marched eastward through much of North Central Texas while others belabored much of East Texas.

Appreciable rainfall brought some further relief from the protracted July heat wave at many points. Moisture measurements elsewhere included Dallas-Fort Worth 1.08 and Lubbock .92 inch.

By early morning occasional fog and low clouds covered much of Northeast Texas and it was at least partly cloudy everywhere else.

Forecasts promised scattered thunderstorms again late in the day from the Permian Basin and the South Plains eastward across a broad stretch of the state.

Jaycees planning breakfast

Dr. Daniel Vestal, pastor of First Baptist Church, will be the speaker at a city-wide prayer breakfast planned by the Midland Jaycees for Aug. 23.

The continental breakfast, to be held at 7 a.m. in the Permian Ballroom of the Midland Hilton, is open to all citizens of Midland at no charge.

"Our Jaycee Creed states 'Faith in God gives meaning and purpose to human life,'" said Les Riek, project chairman, in announcing the breakfast.

"In keeping with this belief, we would like to share with everyone a period of thanks for what we (residents of Midland) can be grateful for," said Riek.

Persons who plan to attend the prayer breakfast should contact Riek or John Pennington at 683-4231 before Aug. 15 in order that an attendance estimate can be made.

The Jaycees strive to keep informed of community activities and are very optimistic about Midland's future and growth, Riek said.

"We can keep Midland a positive community and we can pull together to keep it strong," he said.

The Midland Jaycees have expressed support for the Midland Alliance, a group of citizens from all races and ethnic groups, "from all political persuasions and parties who are interested in Midland's children and their schools."

Legislator named to 5 committees

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Sen. Pete Snelson of Midland has been named to five committees meeting during the interim before the 1979 session of the Texas Legislature.

Snelson will be on the Committee on Public School Finance, a committee studying the Texas' "sunset" legislation for state agencies, a panel on trade and tourism, the Legislative Council and a committee on special education.

In making those appointments, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby also named Sen. Kent Hance of Lubbock to a committee studying ad valorem property taxes.

Decker, when he's got the time to spare, said he enjoys hearing old-timers talk about the past.

"Everytime they get to talking, I ease up, behind them and listen," he said.

He said Cliff Hazlewood Sr. over at Stanton was a fine one to listen to. He's an old-timer, and he, for sure, knows a lot about Courtney, Stanton and the rest of Martin County.

In fact, he would know about dried-up Mustang Spring (some say "Mustang Pond") about two miles down the road.

It was a watering place for explorers, pioneers, and gold-seekers traveling west in and after 1849.

There's a marker there, Decker said.

"It's there if somebody don't (hasn't) knocked it down again."

It's still there. Smack-dab in the middle of Mustang Draw. Some say creek.

And Decker, tobacco in lippy pouch, returned to the house to rest on the quiet — except for the rock 'n' roll — afternoon in the country.

Land decision reversed by Texas Supreme Court

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday upheld a civil appeals court ruling that reversed a decision in a Midland County land case.

Midland County trial court originally ruled against Lucy Skeen, who claimed land owned by her and her husband was flooded by nearby Highway Department road construction in 1968 and 1970.

Skeen and her husband had brought acreage and built a home on land adjacent to Highway 80. She alleged that the Highway Department elevated the highway without providing adequate drainage, diverting flood water onto their property.

Although the first judgment was entered for the Highway Department, Skeen appealed the ruling, which was reversed by the El Paso Court of Civil Appeals. That new ruling was upheld by the Supreme Court.

The Highway Department contended that the appeal of the Midland County decision should have been dismissed because Skeen failed to file a motion for a new trial. But the appeals court ruled, and the supreme court upheld, Skeen's right to appeal, citing a rule that a motion for a new trial is not a prerequisite to the right to appeal court action.

Doing it yourself? Here's the answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q.—I have an old bureau that I picked up at a cheap price from a second-hand store. While the finish, apparently varnish, seems in good condition, it is badly in need of a cleaning. I recall reading somewhere that furniture could be cleaned with soap and water, but before I start, I want to be sure that my memory is correct. Can a piece of old furniture be washed this way to remove dirt and grime?

A.—Yes, if it is done carefully. This means wiping with a cloth dipped in a mixture of water and a mild soap and immediately rinsing off the mixture with clear water. Don't saturate the cloth, just keep it moderately wet. In wiping, be very careful that none of the water gets near or into any of the joints. All this is predicated on the fact that the finish, as you think, is varnish. If it should be shellac, the water might cause the finish to develop white spots. Better try first on a small, inconspicuous area.

Q.—Some years ago I visited a friend whose patio had the impressions of leaves in the concrete. I since have moved away from the city where my friend lived without having learned how this effect was created. I now want to build a patio of my own and would like to make similar designs in the concrete. Can you tell me how this is done?

A.—The same way any impression is made in concrete — by imbedding the object in the wet mixture after it has been troweled. Just be certain that each leaf rests far enough in the concrete to make an impression, but not so deeply that it cannot be removed after the concrete has set. Don't let any of the mixture get on top of the leaves or the removal will become difficult and messy.

Q.—One of our outside wall faucets has developed a small opening between the metal and the house. What should be used to fill the gap?

A.—A caulking compound. First, clean the area of any loose bits of old filler material. Squeeze the compound around and behind the faucet flange. If you use a latex caulk, it can be applied even if the surface is slightly damp.

Q. —I want to install some insulation myself and intend to use the fiber glass type. What's the difference between blankets and batts? And what can you tell me about the kinds of loose fill?

A.—The blankets are rolls of insulation, with or without vapor barriers. The batts are similar to blankets, except that they are cut into 4-foot and 8-foot lengths. Pouring wool is loose insulation usually meant to be poured into attic floors. Blowing wool is loose insulation for application by a contractor, whose uses pneumatic equipment for the job. In an unobstructed attic space without flooring, you can use batts, which are simply laid in place without stapling. Loose fill insulation usually is used when access to the attic is difficult or if it has a floor, in which case it is blown into the attic through flexible tubing.

Q. — I'm enclosing an unheated crawl space on all four sides. How big should the vents be? I'm putting one on each side.

A. — Each vent should be one square foot for each 150 square feet of crawl space area. This basic minimum size should be increased if the vents are to be protected by screens or rain louvers.

Choose best finesse to make your slam

There are finesses in three suits, but you have no trouble rejecting the diamond finesse. How do you chose between spades and clubs?

The slam is easy if you can guess who has the queen of spades, but it would be foolish to guess if you couldn't see the East-West cards. Work out the best line of play as though you were answering the contest in "Popular Bridge" a few months ago.

You lead a heart to the king and discover that both opponents follow suit. Now the slam is unbeatable.

Draw two more rounds of trumps, ending in your hand. Then lead a club and finesse with dummy's nine.

NO SAFE RETURN

You expect to lose this trick, of course, but East has no safe return. He must give dummy a free finesse for the 12th trick. Without that finesse you started with 11 sure tricks: five trumps in your own hand, one spade ruff in dummy, two top spades, two top diamonds and the ace of clubs.

Many other lines of play are very tempting, but there's nothing like being absolutely sure.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner bids one heart as dealer, and the next player passes. You hold: S-Q9875; H-2; D-107632; C-43. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. One heart may be a poor contract, but you may finish in something much worse if you bid with this kind of garbage. The best way to keep out of trouble with a bad hand is to open your mouth, say "Pass," and then close your mouth.

Austin Bureau
By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN—Texans concerned with water development will gather in Dallas Aug. 1 and 2 to present their views on a proposed national water policy being developed by the Carter Administration.

They may have some harsh comments—particularly on Federal regulation of groundwater.

President Jimmy Carter plans to announce his decision on a national water policy (an area where he has had—and continues to have—clashes with Congress) on or about Nov. 1.

The Dallas meeting is one of eight across the country to get reaction to "policy option papers" developed through five committees composed principally of Federal agencies, to which some state representatives were added at the request of groups such as the National Water Conference.

One of the 10 state representatives is Russell Bean, Lubbock, long active in water development matters.

Officials from the Texas Water Development Board are to be in Dallas for the session there—and TWDB Executive Director James Rose has asked water officials from neighboring states (particularly those involved in the coordinated High Plains Council) to meet with the Texas delegation while there to make a coordinated presentation.

The policy option papers are to be used in developing the policy (which doesn't include water quality—the subject of a separate paper.

However, the proposals do note a "lack of coordination between water quality and water quantity planning efforts, leading to instances of more costly or less effective solutions...than would be the case if the planning were less compartmentalized."

But it is the options on groundwater that are likely to prove most unpalatable to Texans—particularly those in West Texas and the High Plains.

"Many state water rights systems have developed without regard to the physical fact that surface water is related to groundwater and certain sources of groundwater are related to each other," one paper states.

That, it says, may result in "inequitable and ineficient uses and effects, while making rational management more difficult."

The Federal government "does have an interest" in management of groundwater, the paper says, "particularly if State law might threaten the viability of a Federal project or program," including where a state might continue to grant rights in streams in which "existing diversions make water quality standards difficult to attain."

Or, it adds, "where Federal reclamation storage facilities, and thus delivery capabilities and cost recovery prospects, are endangered due to decreased surface flows resulting from upstream groundwater withdrawals."

The options suggested are:

—Requiring states to "take account of these physical relationships" (including legal action where Federal proprietary interests in a dam or reservoir are damaged).

—Developing a comprehensive model water code (perhaps through the Council of State Governments or a similar entity).

—Conditioning future water quality grants, flood control projects, etc., upon the states implementing "legal and administrative systems" coordinating ground and surface water development.

—Having the Federal government "review all licenses, contracts and permits" to insure that "all actions taken under them are consistent with an integrated approach to water resources management."

Water Rights Commission Chairman Joe Carter sees the recommendations as another step in the attempt by Federal officials to control groundwater—by the threat of cutting off funds for non-compliance.

"I think the Feds will try," Carter says, "unless Congress heads them off...it's another step in an on-going effort."

Carter also predicts even the threat of a cutoff of funds isn't likely to persuade Texas lawmakers to give in on that issue—noting that in Texas, groundwater is considered the property of the overlying land owner.

The Federal attitude, Carter says, is that "the way to conserve water...is not to use any."

The papers also propose requiring adjudication and recording of all water rights in the states, development of a data bank of water rights established under state law, reviewing existing state water law systems to determine if they "promote equity, efficiency and environmental quality consistent with Federal policy"—or having the Federal government "purchase rights to water and re-allocate them to the most socially desirable or economically productive use."

"Purchases could be through voluntary sales or through eminent domain procedures," the paper concludes.

That approach isn't likely to win many supporters from Texas.

The paper also states that conservation efforts are hindered because "the price of water is insufficient to provide the incentives necessary to promote efficiency and prevent wasteful use."

"My summer power bill is lower than my neighbor's."

Newsday

NEW YORK — People have been taking aspirin of a sort (acetylsalicylic acid) for 2,300 years — although, for most of that time, they didn't know it.

Legend has it that the ancient physician Hipocrates advised his patients to chew willow bark for the relief of pain, not knowing that it contained salicin, a chemical cousin of aspirn. Salicin was isolated from the evil-tasting willow bark in 1889, and has since become such a popular nonprescription pain killer that more than 25 million pounds of salicylate-containing compounds are produced in the United States each year.

Aspirin has been around for so long in such common use, in fact, that most people take its beneficial effects as an analgesic or pain-reliever for granted and never wonder how it works. That may be just as well, since exactly how it does work is still something of a mystery.

Some scientists believe it acts on the central nervous system and the pain-sensing centers of the brain to raise the body's pain threshold (the point at which the pain is perceived.) Other scientists, though, have a different theory, and believe aspirin works locally by easing the pain at the spot where it occurs.

Still others believe part of its pain-relieving properties are due to a unique ability to stop the aggregation of platelets, little particles in the blood whose main job is to join together to plug up a blood vessel that has been cut. Those scientists believe platelets come together at times in a kind of "sludging" that causes pain, but which is stopped by aspirin.

Since aspirin is one of the few medications available that can relieve pain, reduce fever and relieve the aches of inflammation all at the same time, effectively and at low cost, more than 14 million physician recommendations for aspirin are made each year. That triple ability helps make aspirin a good cold medicine and an effective remedy for minor arthritis pain, among other things.

Despite its innocuous look and the common admonition to "take two aspirin," however, that medication is one of the most frequently abused drugs available to the public. At times, it can be dangerous.

Although most people can take aspirin without ill effects, some people experience stomach upsets with aspirin and are advised to use other pain-relievers — such as acetaminophen (Tylenol) — that contain no salicylates. Those who have ulcers, or have symptoms similar to those for ulcers, should keep away from aspirin since it has been known to cause gastric hemorrhaging.

To make your use of aspirin's good qualities safer, here are some common-sense suggestions to follow:

—Never mix aspirin with beer, wine or liquor. Alcohol makes the stomach lining supersensitive to the irritating effects of salicylates, and bleeding from the stomach wall can occur.

—Never mix aspirin and anticoagulants (bloodthinners) since that combination, too, can lead to massive bleeding.

—If you're taking a strong anti-inflammatory drug for arthritis, don't take aspirin, too. You may develop painful stomach irritation, and aspirin can reduce the effectiveness of some such products.

—If you must take a diabetes medication like Orinase, leave aspirin alone. The interaction can cause drastic decreases in blood sugar.

—Vitamin C prolongs and intensifies the action of aspirin, an interaction which, though possibly useful, can also be dangerous, causing headaches and dizziness in some people.

—If you are pregnant, ask your physician about using aspirin. Taken during pregnancy it can sometimes prolong labor, complicate delivery and cause newborn babies to be susceptible to bleeding.

—Aspirin can be harmful to a child. Be cautious not to exceed dosage recommendations for children. There are three different ways generally used to calcualte the amount of a drug to give a child; many experts feel that whichever rule results in the lowest dosage is the best to follow:

Clark's Rule — Divide the weight of the child in pounds by 150. The resulting fraction will equal the fraction of an adult dosage, as prescribed on the label, that the child may safely take.

Young's Rule — Divide the age of the child by the child's age plus 12. The resulting fraction will represent the portion of an adult dose recommended for a child.

—Follow dosage recommendations strictly, whether they're those printed on the package or those given by your doctor.

—When taking aspirin, always swallow it with a full glass of water, milk or other fluids. The fluid will aid in dissolving the medication and dilute its ability to irritate the stomach.

—Keep the aspirin bottle out of the reach of children. Don't trust the so-called "childproof" bottles for safety. Aspirin overdose can kill a child.

—Aspirin is the most effective nonprescription pain medicine available — and all aspirin is the same. Don't be fooled by manufacturer claims of extra strength. All aspirin products must meet the same standards of effectiveness and strength, so buy the least expensive type of aspirin you can find.

New hospital for Argentena

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Construction is under way in Buenos Aires of a National Pediatrics Hospital which will be completed in 1980.

It will be the largest children's hospital in South America and will be among the most advanced of its kind in the world, hospital officials say.

Eubanks eliminated from meet

ABERNATHY — The Eubanks Pistons of Midland were eliminated by Odessa Natural, 9-8, Wednesday in the District Texas Teen-Age Sophomore Baseball Tournament.

The game was played in a dust storm and during the blowing dust, the Odessans took advantage to score four runs in the third inning off loser Scott Collyer. Justin Morett also worked on the mound for the Tall City team.

Midland's other entry — Furr's remains unbeaten in the tournament and tangles with Andrews, which is also unbeaten in two games at 7:30 p.m. today.

Rain stops Cubs, Tulsa

Manager Jim Saul will pitch Randy Martz, 1-1, and Andy Muhlstock, 7-3, the same pair which gave Midland its third doubleheader sweep of the season against Shreveport last week.

The Drillers will counter with Mark Soroko, 3-1, and either Ray Rainbolt, 7-2, or Rick Kemp, 2-4.

Injuries rock Cowboys

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — It's been a bad week for running backs in the Dallas Cowboys training camp as several have suffered apparently minor injuries.

And the Cowboys were playing musical lineman Wednesday, particularly at right tackle where a man who was filling in for a player injured earlier was himself felled for about two days by a neck sprain.

Jim Eidson, a second-year tackle, who had been filling in for injured All Pro Rayfield Wright, suffered a neck sprain and is expected to miss several days of practice.

Wright has returned to Dallas and is to undergo tests on his troublesome right knee Thursday and Friday to determine the extent of his injuries.

Pat Donovan, a third-year man who last year backed up both Wright and veteran Ralph Neely at offensive tackle, worked in place of Eidson Wednesday.

Charles Young, a veteran running back who suffered a sprained thumb Sunday, suffered a right knee sprain and will be out for about two days. Young joined fellow running backs Doug Dennison and Scott Laidlaw, who were sidelined earlier with hamstring strains.

Heisman Trophy winner Tony Dorsett became the center of more concern Wednesday when he bruised his right knee in the same area where he suffered a slight sprain last Thursday in a scrimmage.

Newsday

NEW YORK — Call it professional rivalry. Or call it pride. Or vanity or jealousy. Or don't put any label on it at all, but if you invite Carlton Fisk and Thurman Munson to the same banquet, better seat them at separate tables.

"We don't send each other Christmas cards, put it that way," Fisk said.

Fisk catches for the Red Sox. He was the American League's No. 1 catcher in the All-Star voting. Munson catches for the Yankees. He was No. 2. It's been going on like that in the years they've been in the league together.

Even during the relative pacifism of spring training, there was an air of belligerence in the way they merely passed each other on the field. "He's not one of my best friends, nor is he my worst of enemies," Fisk said back then. What does that mean? "It means," Fisk replied, "I don't like him worth a damn."

And after the exhibition game in which Fisk had taken a challenging step toward the mound because a Yankee pitch had sailed over his head, Munson declared Fisk was fortunate he had gone no farther. "He would have had his butt kicked," Munson said.

CLEARLY THIS feeling is not a one-way street. But just why they feel the way they do about each other — and how much of it do they feel? The fued has gone on so long that it appears to be a matter of habit.

Fisk said before the All-Star game, "I don't even know him so how do I know if there's animosity? It's a professional rivalry."

But, he concluded, whatever the feeling was, there was more of it a couple of years ago. "I think there's something of it left," Fisk said. "We're out to beat each other. I feel personally challenged every time we play the Yankees. I'm sure he does, too. I know that rivalry was here before either of us came on the scene."

Munson was Rookie of the Year in 1970. Just when he was about to take the mantle of outstanding catcher in the league, Fisk came along to be Rookie of the Year in 1972. In four of their six interlocking seasons, Fisk has topped Munson in the All-Star voting. Even when Munson won the honor in 1975, it rankled him that Fisk was able to finish second as a write-in even though he had been on the disabled list most of the first half of the season.

A number of players may not care to play in the All-Star game, but almost all of them want the honor of being elected. When this year's voting pattern became apparent, Munson became sarcastic. "We'll have a hell of a backup catcher," he said.

BOTH PRESENTED excellent statistics. Fisk had a .311 average, 16 homers and 53 runs batted in. Munson had a .314 average, 13 homers and was second in the league with 68 RBI. And Munson had won the Most Valuable Player Award last season, the highest of honors. Still he felt he wasn't getting the recognition he deserved.

"It used to bother me more than it does," Munson said. "I still don't like it."

"How about if I was the backup? Fisk said. "I'm sure I'd have felt something about it."

Munson says his resentment is less because he's getting recognition from "people who matter." But he touches on other aspects he resents. Fisk is tall and lean with the look of a Minuteman carved out of Vermont granite.

When he was a hero in a losing cause in the 1975 World Series, a tobacco company paid big money to use him in television commercials. American Express also uses him in some of its advertisements. Munson is built the other way. He has been descriptively nicknamed Squatty Body, Turtle and Stump. He was a hero in a losing cause last World Series and has been seen on television only in his customary dirt-stained Yankee uniform.

"Maybe it's because Fisk is a big, tall good-looking buy; he looks like what an All-Star catcher should loke like," Munson mused recently. "I'm short, I'm pudgy, I don't look good in a uniform."

THERE ARE the constant comparisons on the field, beginning with the fact that Fisk looks better at whatever he does.

He throws with the classic upright style while Munson, striving to get the ball away quicker, throws sidearm in a banana arc. Fisk is considered slightly better defensively. Munson has always been better offensively, but when Fisk has been healthy he's hit more home runs.

His big one decided the magnificient sixth game of the 1975 World Series in the 12th inning and prompted a movement to rename Boston's ritziest hotel the Fisk Carlton. That memorable blow stole some of the glamor of Munson's first 100 RBI season.

Salinas stopped, but South wins

By TFRRY WILLIAMSON
R-T Sports Writer

DALLAS — The Rebels nipped the Yanks, 101-97, as expected Wednesday night in the Dallas Civic Arena in the 33rd annual High School All-Star basketball game, but the way they did it was what was unexpected.

Corpus Christi Moody's Charles Moore, who is headed for Southern Illinois, pumped in 28 points to lead the South to the victory while Kerville-Tivy's Robert Hubble, a Rice recruit, did a lot of damage with 18 markers.

However, it looked like a North rout for most of the game, and the South had to rally from a 50-37 deficit to take the win.

EARLY IN the game, Dallas Carter's Vernon Smith, who is headed for Texas A&M and who won most valuable player honors, dominated the action with 22 points and 17 rebounds. He also dominated the highly recruited Gilbert Salinas of San Antonio Burbank, and that more than anything else earned him the MVP award.

Salinas, the 6-foot-11 giant who is headed for Notre Dame, was pushed around by the 6-6 Smith, who played at about 10-3. Salinas scored only nine points in the game, hitting only one of eight from the field and getting only four rebounds. Salinas did not score until the 5:58 mark of the final period, but all nine of his points did come during the South's catch up drive at the wire.

Moore's 20-foot jumper from the top of the key tied the game at 90 for the first time in the contest with 5:08 left, and the game was knotted four more times before Salinas gave the South the lead for good at 99-97 with 52 seconds remaining.

With Salinas paying the price for meeting Smith the first time in his cage career, Moore, a 6-7 postman, was the only thing that kept the South from falling apart early in the game. He kept hitting, but the North's front line of Smith and Rynn Wright of Dallas Roosevelt, who had 10 points and good tough board play, was the best.

The North bench, however, could not produce the depth needed when Wright and 6-7 Ralph McPherson, who is headed for Texas Tech, fouled out.

"To tell you the truth, I was really worried about Moore," South coach Boyce Honea of Houston Milby said after the game. "He did not look very good in workouts this week. He kept telling me that he would be ready for the game, but I thought if we were going to win, we would have to have more than we got from Gilbert (Salinas)."

"Foul trouble definitely hurt our big boys," Cleveland said. "And we got into a little trouble with our guards in the last quarter. I don't want to knock anyone, but it's tough to coach this type of contest when you have a rule that you have to play everybody. That's good really, but it sure hurt us. I thought Smith was the best man on the floor."

Stanton's Tim Glynn played only sparingly and ended with one point for the North. He had two rebounds, but missed on three field goal attempts.

Nets desert New York

By The Associated Press

BASKETBALL

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The Nets will enter into a 30-year lease with the New Jersey Sports Authority for an arena yet to be built at the Meadowlands complex, club president Roy Boe said.

Boe, whose National basketball Association franchise was shifted from Uniondale, N.Y. to New Jersey on Tuesday, signed a two-year lease with Rutgers University to play at its new 8,700-seat gymnasium in Piscataway.

TENNIS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Top-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina rallied from a slow start to post a 4-6, 6-2, 6-3 victory over unheralded Frank Gebert of West Germany in a first-round match at the $125,000 Louisville International Tennis Classic.

In other first-round matches, seventh-seeded Phil Dent of Australia defeated John Marks 6-1, 6-3, fourth-seeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland crushed Larry Turville 6-1, 6-1 and No. 9 John Alexander was upset by Henry Bunis 6-4, 6-2.

BASEBALL

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Former Texas Rangers Manager Frank Lucchesi plans to file a personal injury suit against Lenny Randle, the former Texas infielder who has been charged with assaulting Lucchesi this spring, the Orlando Sentinel-Star has reported.

The Sentinel-Star said Luchesi was in Orlando Wednesday to meet with a local attorney experienced in civil suits. It is expected the suit against Randle will be filed in circuit court next month, the paper said.

Lucchesi declined to comment on his plans.

GOLF

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tom Kite made his first start as a defending champion today, and he loves it.

Only four of the year's top 10 money-winners are in the 156-man field that is chasing a $40,000 first prize in the 72-hole test over the 6,687-yard, par-71 Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course.

YACHTING

NEWPORT, R.I. — Ted Turner and defender Courageus outdueled sailmaker Lowell North and Enterprise, winning the final America's Cup observation trial race of the month on the final leg by 43 seconds.

The two yachts were close throughout, with Enterprise taking the start by a slim three seconds on the 13.5-mile Olympic course. However, Courageous went ahead at the weather mark by eight seconds.

SMU still has a long climb

BY TERRY WILLIAMSON

DALLAS — Ron Meyer, who is heading into his second year as the head grid boss of Southern Methodist University, seems to know where he is going, but he just hasn't arrived at his destination yet.

A year ago in Houston, when he was entering his first Southwest Conference campaign, he said that his Mustangs would be competing not only for the SWC title, but also shooting for national prestige. He is not heading from that goal.

"We are pleased at where our program at SMU is heading," Meyer said this week during the Texas High School Coaches Association convention. "We had what we feel was a good recruiting year, but the question is how much can freshmen help your program."

The concensus seems to read that Meyer will not have nearly enough help to do much better then the 3-8 record of a year ago. The emphasis is on rebuilding for the future.

THE MUSTANGS will have to start rebuilding without quarterback Ricky Wesson, who was lost to graduation. That means that a freshman will probably draw the assignment, and that's tough in a conference where nearly every squad will have top quarterbacks.

"We were pleased with the four freshmen quarterbacks we signed this year," Meyer noted. "Mike Ford, Mark Gibson, James Mobley and Durham, N.C., player Alan Stephenson will all get a shot at the job."

Meyer is realistic about this year's chances, and doesn't see much hope of winning the conference, but says the future of SMU is in the near future. Meyer is serious when he talks of being a national power.

"Nobody likes to lose," Meyer said. "So we want a program that will be tops in the country. If you go 11-0, you can win the national championship. That's what we have to do, and I've said before that we will have a chance to do that in five years from the time I came to SMU. We may not do it, but I know we will have a chance."

IT IS general knowledge, however, that the Mustangs will not be able to line up this year with any power in the nation with a chance to win. Meyer learned his lesson last year when he predicted a win over Alabama, only to lose 56-3.

Offensively, running back Arthur Whittington is the only bright spot at this point. And Meyer doesn't even think his star performer is as good as some of the other backs in the conference.

"We've got to work harder than anyone in the conference," Meyer said. "We just don't have the talent of Houston, Tech or A&M. About the only school that we are equal with talent-wise is Rice. TCU has better talent than we do.

"Our salvation was the Arkansas game (SMU won 35-31). If we'd gone 2-9, we would be looking down a gun barrel. That game gave us a good springboard for recruiting, and that is where it's at for me at this point in time."

SMU will have only 74 players on scholarship this fall. That is considerably below the 95 player limit imposed by the NCAA.

"When we line up against TCU this year in our first game, we will have six or seven freshmen starting, and 18 may possibly play," Meyer noted. "By the time they are seniors, they are going to have a lot of playing time under their belts. I know that."

ONE OF the big holes this year that will have to be filled is at fullback. It could be the big trouble spot on the team. Milton Jones, a former standout at Midland Lee, is not returning to SMU this fall. Meyer said the job was his for the taking.

"The fullback job is definitely up in the air," Meyer said. "I think Milton had a lot of promise, and we could have used him. But Milton just had a lack of maturity as far as I'm concerned.

"I asked him to pre-register about 10 times last year and he didn't do it. I also didn't feel like he showed up at the trainer often enough to help with his injury problems. I guess he just didn't want to work for it.

"I'm not saying that I kicked him off the team, but I didn't offer him a uniform."

Jones was out all season with a hip injury last year. In his freshman season, he broke one run for over 70 yards and a touchdown against Texas Tech.

Munson, Fisk organize mutual hate society

Newsday

NEW YORK — Call it professional rivalry. Or call it pride. Or vanity or jealousy. Or don't put any label on it at all, but if you invite Carlton Fisk and Thurman Munson to the same banquet, better seat them at separate tables.

"We don't send each other Christmas cards, put it that way," Fisk said.

Fisk catches for the Red Sox. He was the American League's No. 1 catcher in the All-Star voting. Munson catches for the Yankees. He was No. 2. It's been going on like that in the years they've been in the league together.

Even during the relative pacifism of spring training, there was an air of belligerence in the way they merely passed each other on the field. "He's not one of my best friends, nor is he my worst of enemies," Fisk said back then. What does that mean? "It means," Fisk replied, "I don't like him worth a damn."

And after the exhibition game in which Fisk had taken a challenging step toward the mound because a Yankee pitch had sailed over his head, Munson declared Fisk was fortunate he had gone no farther. "He would have had his butt kicked," Munson said.

CLEARLY THIS feeling is not a one-way street. But just why they feel the way they do about each other — and how much of it do they feel? The fued has gone on so long that it appears to be a matter of habit.

Fisk said before the All-Star game, "I don't even know him so how do I know if there's animosity? It's a professional rivalry."

But, he concluded, whatever the feeling was, there was more of it a couple of years ago. "I think there's something of it left," Fisk said. "We're out to beat each other. I feel personally challenged every time we play the Yankees. I'm sure he does, too. I know that rivalry was here before either of us came on the scene."

Munson was Rookie of the Year in 1970. Just when he was about to take the mantle of outstanding catcher in the league, Fisk came along to be Rookie of the Year in 1972. In four of their six interlocking seasons, Fisk has topped Munson in the All-Star voting. Even when Munson won the honor in 1975, it rankled him that Fisk was able to finish second as a write-in even though he had been on the disabled list most of the first half of the season.

A number of players may not care to play in the All-Star game, but almost all of them want the honor of being elected. When this year's voting pattern became apparent, Munson became sarcastic. "We'll have a hell of a backup catcher," he said.

BOTH PRESENTED excellent statistics. Fisk had a .311 average, 16 homers and 53 runs batted in. Munson had a .314 average, 13 homers and was second in the league with 68 RBI. And Munson had won the Most Valuable Player Award last season, the highest of honors. Still he felt he wasn't getting the recognition he deserved.

"It used to bother me more than it does," Munson said. "I still don't like it."

"How about if I was the backup? Fisk said. "I'm sure I'd have felt something about it."

Munson says his resentment is less because he's getting recognition from "people who matter." But he touches on other aspects he resents. Fisk is tall and lean with the look of a Minuteman carved out of Vermont granite.

When he was a hero in a losing cause in the 1975 World Series, a tobacco company paid big money to use him in television commercials. American Express also uses him in some of its advertisements. Munson is built the other way. He has been descriptively nicknamed Squatty Body, Turtle and Stump. "Maybe it's because Fisk is a big, tall good-looking buy; he looks like what an All-Star catcher should loke like," Munson mused recently. "I'm short, I'm pudgy, I don't look good in a uniform."

THERE ARE the constant comparisons on the field, beginning with the fact that Fisk looks better at whatever he does.

Offensively, running back Arthur Whittington is the only bright spot at this point. And Meyer doesn't even think his star performer is as good as some of the other backs in the conference.

"We've got to work harder than anyone in the conference," Meyer said. "We just don't have the talent of Houston, Tech or A&M. About the only school that we are equal with talent-wise is Rice. TCU has better talent than we do.

"Our salvation was the Arkansas game (SMU won 35-31). If we'd gone 2-9, we would be looking down a gun barrel . That game gave us a good springboard for recruiting, and that is where it's at for me at this point in time."

SMU will have only 74 players on scholarship this fall. That is considerably below the 95 player limit imposed by the NCAA.

"When we line up against TCU this year in our first game, we will have six or seven freshmen starting, and 18 may possibly play," Meyer noted. "By the time they are seniors, they are going to have a lot of playing time under their belts. I know that."

ONE OF the big holes this year that will have to be filled is at fullback. It could be the big trouble spot on the team. Milton Jones, a former standout at Midland Lee, is not returning to SMU this fall. Meyer said the job was his for the taking.

"The fullback job is definitely up in the air," Meyer said. "I think Milton had a lot of promise, and we could have used him. But Milton just had a lack of maturity as far as I'm concerned.

"I asked him to pre-register about 10 times last year and he didn't do it. I also didn't feel like he showed up at the trainer often enough to help with his injury problems. I guess he just didn't want to work for it.

"I'm not saying that I kicked him off the team, but I didn't offer him a uniform."

Jones was out all season with a hip injury last year. In his freshman season, he broke one run for over 70 yards and a touchdown against Texas Tech.

41 teams enter state Slow Pitch

Aaron-Kimball Lumber Company of Waco draws one of the favorite nods in the double elimination affair with play starting on three of the four Hogan Park diamonds at 7:30 p.m.

Other strong entries inlcude Brazos Sports of Lake Jackson, a two-time runnerup here in the Tall City in recent years in state play along with Goodrich Service of Midland; Abilene Barretts; Lubbock's Raiders; Hamilton-Bryan of Wichita Falls; San Angelo Spectrum; The Alcapulco A's from Killeen and Tinsley's Bucs from Huntsville.

Teams are from Midland, Odessa, Wichita Falls, Weatherford, Waco, Tomball, Seguin, San Marcos, San Angelo, Round Rock, Paris, Lubbock, Lewisville, Lamesa, Lake Jackson, Killeen, Andrews, Huntsville, Gainesville, Freeport, Fort Stockton, El Paso, Cleburne, Brownwood, Big Spring, Angleton, Amarillo and Big Spring.

D&D FARM and Ranch of Seguin is another power entered in the tourney which will see a total of a possible 80 games played during the three days.

Besides Goodrich, the other

Pastorini is sued

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini has been named in a $1.5 million damage suit filed by the parents of a young girl who was killed in a dragboat accident.

Two dragboat associations also were named in the suit filed Wednesday by Hubert and Bobbie Gaskins of Houston whose 10-year-old daughter, Sherry, was killed May 22 when Pastorini's boat crashed into a group of spectators at a lake in Liberty County.

Permian Basin areas draw 151 oil, gas operations

The number of petroleum tests staked in the Permian Basin stayed approximately the same last week as the figure for the prior week. Operators filed permit applications for 151 tests, compared with 150 permits sought two weeks ago.

Last week District 7-C, in San Angelo, and District 8, in Midland, each tallied 11 wildcats, with District 8-A reporting six and Southeast New Mexico getting three.

The Texas Railroad Commission District 7-C accounted for 47 field tests, followed by 35 in Disirict 8.

Mills joining law firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, whose liaison with an Argentine striptease dancer cost him his career as a powerful congressman, is joining the Washington office of a New York law firm.

Mills, once the chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, will do tax work but no lobbying for the important law firm of Shea, Gould, Climenko and Casey.

Mills, who is vacationing in his hometown of Kensett, Ark., said, "I don't know why I've decided to go back to work. I'm enjoying what I'm doing." He said he is feeling fine.

Mills resigned from his Ways and Means chairmanship in 1975 after his alcoholism and relationship with stripper Fanne Foxe became known.

Wildcat tests slated in five WT counties

Fisher, Schleicher and Sutton sectors drew sites for wildcats, while a discovery has been indicated in Kimble, and Coke and Crockett fields were extended.

SCHLEICHER PROBE

Delta Drilling Co. of Odessa filed application for No. 1 Wheeler, a 6,500-foot wildcat in Schleicher, 11 miles east of Eldorado.

It is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 21, block L, GH&SA survey, 2¾ miles northeast of the Page (Strawn) field.

SUTTON PROSPECTOR

The Sutton prospector, a 4,700-foot test, is slated by HNG Oil Co. of Midland. Designated No. 2-4 Syfan, it spots 2½ miles northeast of the Ellenburger gas pay opener in the Sawyer field.

Location is 1,320 feet from south and 1,650 feet from east lines of tract 4, Absalon Gray survey 71, abstract 92, 32 miles southeast of Sonora.

KIMBLE TRY

Great Western Drilling Co. was making production tests at No. 1 Stevenson, Kimble County wildcat, three miles east of Telegraph and ⅝ mile southeast of a shut-in gas discovery.

It flowed gas at the rate of 200,000 cubic feet per day, through perforations at 7:7-1,327 feet.

COKE EXTENDER

The Arledge field of Coke County gained a current third Odom lime oiler with completion of ACR Exploration, Inc., Abilene, No. 1 Geraldine Arledge, 14 miles northwest of Robert Lee.

The 24-hour flowing potential was for 192 barrels of 43-gravity oil and five barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 2,350-1. It finaled on a 16-64-inch choke and through perforations at 6,618-6,632 feet. The section was washed with 200 gallons of mud acid.

CROCKETT PRODUCER

The Shannon (San Andres) field of Crockett was extended ½ mile south with completion of Lifestyle Energy Corp., Richardson, No. 3 A. C. Hoover, 27 miles northwest of Ozona.

It had a 24-hour flowing potential of 56 barrels of 30-gravity oil, through a ½-inch choke and perforations at 2,400-2,412 feet. The pay had been acidized with 500 gallons and fractured with 500 barrels of fluid, plus 22,600 pounds of sand.

Terrell well flowing gas

Napeco, Inc., Houston, No. 1 Rashap, Terrell County scheduled 13,000-foot wildcat, 2½ miles southeast of the Allison, South (Pennsylvanian detrital) gas field, flowed gas and condensate, no gauge, for one hour, through perforations at 10,488-10,507 feet, after acidizing with 3,000 gallons.

Operator reacidized with 9,000 gallons, and it flowed an estimated 500,000 cubic feet of gas per day, plus 25 barrels of condensate in 12½ hours. It then flowed gas at the daily rate of 600,000 cubic feet, plus 20 barrels of condensate in 24 hours, on a ¼-inch choke. Testing continued.

New Mexico areas get wildcat projects

Wildcat sites have been staked in Lea and Chaves counties, N.M., and Eddy fields draw sites for stepouts.

Victory III Petroleum Co. of Houston, Tex., plans No. 1-22 New Mexico-State, as a 14,000-foot wildcat in Lea, seven miles northeast of Maljamar.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 22-16s-33e, seven miles northeast of Maljamar and one mile northeast and northwest of an undesignated two-well lower Seaman field.

CHAVES PROSPECTOR

Drillsite is 1,675 feet from north and 2,301 feet from west lines of section 29-11s-25e, seven miles southeast of Roswell and one location east of a 1,108-foot failure. It also is four miles southwest of the depleted Hondo (San Andres) field.

EDDY PROJECTS

Gulf Oil Corp. No. 1-GF Eddy-State is planned as a one-mile east outpost to Morrow production in the Carlsbad, South gas field of Eddy.

It has a proposed depth of 12,300 feet, and spots 810 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 16-23s-27e, seven miles south of Carlsbad.

Flag-Redfern Oil Co., Midland, No. 1 Keystone has been slated to drill ½ mile east of the nearest Morrow well in the Burton Flat field of Eddy.

Location, nine miles north of Carlsbad, is 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 32-20s-28e. Planned depth is 11,500 feet to test the Morrow.

Yates Petroleum Corp., Artesia, will attempt to extend a newly openerd undesignated Yeso area one location south with the scheduling of No. 1-IF Ferguson, nine miles south of Artesia.

Also slated as an outpost to San Andres production, it is 330 feet from south and 2,310 feet from west lines of section 28-18s-26e, and is scheduled to drill to 3,100 feet.

Four Basin sectors gain explorer sites

Stepout sites have been planned for fields in Coke, Crockett, Upton and Midland County areas.

Corpening Enterprises, Fort Worth, has staked two stepouts to the three-well Meadow Creek (Canyon) oil field of Coke.

Both are slated for a 5,200-foot bottom depth and are about nine miles northwest of Robert Lee in block 1-A, H&TC survey.

No. 1-B I. A. Bird is 660 feet from north and 700 feet from west lines of section 467, ½ mile southwest of production.

No. 1-A I. A. Bird is 660 feet from south and east lines of the northeast quarter of section 320, 2,150 feet north of production in the field.

CROCKETT TEST

C. F. Lawrence & Associates, Inc., Midland, No. 1-58-A Eck is slated as an east and southeast stepout to the Ecklaw (San Andres) oil pool of Crockett.

Drillsite is 330 feet from north and 1,803 feet from east lines of the south half of section 58, block OP, GC&SF survey. It is slated to 1,500 feet.

The Ecklaw pool has four wells.

UPTON PROJECT

Gulf Oil Corp. No. 18-M McElroy Ranch Co. has been planned as a north stepout to the six-well Bend oil sector of the King Mountain, North field of Upton.

Contract depth is 10,300 feet, and it spots 1,980 feet from south and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 143, block E, CCSD&RGNG survey, 11 miles southeast of Crane.

MIDLAND REENTRY

Sohio Petroleum Co. intends to reenter and deepen to 8,680 feet at No. 4-D R. S. Davenport, in attempt to extend Dean production 1¼ miles north in the Midland part of the Calvin field.

Gaines test to deepen

Estoril Producing Corp. of Midland has filed application to reenter and deepen to wildcat depth of 13,300 feet at No. 1 Medlin, Gaines County 10,700-foot failure, two miles northwest of the Howland (Pennsylvanian) field and 1⅛ mile east of a 13,225-foot failure.

Originally drilled by Zapata Petroleum Co. as No. 1 Medlin, it was plugged and abandoned in 1958.

Merle Spence

M. Spence joins Herd

ODESSA — Merle L. Spence recenlty joined Herd Corp. in Odessa as general manager, Marvin Hert, president, reports.

His last five years in the oil industry has been with Nalco Chemical in Houston and Odessa.

Probe tests in Delaware

HNG Oil Co., Midland, No. 2-138 Robertson, Ward County Cherry Canyon wildcat, flowed gas at the rate of 263,000 cubic feet per day with a trace of oil and 20 barrels of water per hour for 12 hours, from the Cherry Canyon.

The flow was through a 20-64-inch choke and perforations at 5,092-5,134 feet, after the pay section had been fractured with 20,000 gallons of fluid and 16,000 pounds of sand.

Location is 1,257 feet from northeast and 1,215 feet from southeast lines of section 138, block 34, H&TC survey, six miles east of Barstow. It is a southeast twin to the discovery well in the Phantom (Ellenburger) field.

Sutton test gauges oil

Longhorn Exploration, San Angelo, No. 1 J. W. McDermott, ¾ mile southwest of Canyon gas production in the Roberts field of Sutton County, flowed 155 barrels of 38-gravity oil in 24 hours, along with gas at the daily rate of 300,000 cubic feet, from the Canyon.

The flow was through an 18-64-inch choke and perforations at 3,780-3,821 feet, after washing with 4,500 gallons of mud acid. Testing continued.

Uranium ore deposit found

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — "Potentially significant" uranium reserves have been discovered in a band of sandstone that runs from near Rio Grande City to Newton County on the Sabine River, paralleling the Texas coast, a University of Texas news release declared today.

Dr. William E. Galloway, working under contract with the UT Bureau of Economic Geology on loan from the Energy Research and Development Administration, conducted the investigation that discovered the deposit in the Catahoula Formation.

Texas is the third leading state in uranium production, but that production today is mostly from two other formations — the Jackson in Karnes County and the Oakville in Live Oak County.

DRY HOLES

CHAVES — Dyco Petroleum Corp. No. 1 Rinetta, wildcat, 660 feet from south and east lines of section 3-8s-28e, five miles southwest of Elkins. td 2,610 feet, temporarily abandoned.

KERR — Steve Goss No. 1 Klein, wildcat, 990 feet from most northerly north line and 2,300 feet from west line of F. B. Klein survey 1098, abstract 1797, 14 miles southwest of Mountain Home. td 4,040 feet.

Goss No. 1 Smart, wildcat, 2,340 feet from north and 2,640 feet from west lines of EL&RR survey 1061, abstract 533, 18 miles southwest of Mountain Home. td 4,063 feet.

PECOS — Hilliard Oil & Gas, Inc. No. 1 Grant-State, wildcat, 2,172 feet from northeast and 660 feet from southeast lines of section 74, block 10, H&GN survey, 10 miles southwest of Imperial. td 3,700 feet.

RUNNELS — Mercury Production Co. No. 1 Bobby Mayo, wildcat, 467 feet from north and east lines of A. B. Hutchinson survey 181½, abstract 1032, 11 miles west of Winters. td 4,825 feet.

SCHLEICHER — Tucker Drilling Co., Inc. No. 1 Otto Williams, in the Otto (Strawn) field, 1,880 feet from north and 990 feet from west lines of section 38, block 1, GH&SA survey, 18 miles northeast of Eldorado. td 3,690 feet.

Government orders fill operations halted

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — North Slope crude oil, for 38 days on a trouble-scarred road to the trans-Alaska pipeline's southern terminal, has been stopped for the fifth time, this time by a federal order just 15 miles short of its destination.

The U.S. Department of Transportation claims the welds are faulty and don't meet federal standards. Officials of the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. reacted angrily to what one called a "last-minute order" and said the welds are sound.

Alyeska had intended to deliver the Prudhoe Bay crude to storage tanks here Wednesday — well within the Aug. 1 deadline the firm imposed on itself three years ago.

The town's two hotels are crowded with industry representatives, reporters, tourists and government observers who came for the announced arrival of the first oil.

Headed north to Valdez are two tankers — the 120,000-ton ARCO Juneau and the 80,000ton Sohio Intrepid. The Juneau, expected to arrive Saturday, will be the first ship to carry Alaskan oil to the west coast, putting in to ARCO's refinery at Cherry Point, Wash., early next month. The Intrepid is expected to reach California a few days later.

But for now, the oil is still, waiting in Keystone Canyon 15 miles away.

Transportation officials said Wednesday that Alyeska was notified about 11 claimed flaws on July 21. Since then, they said, three more faulty welds have been found — all made during final preparations to receive the oil.

Several top Alyeska executives, who asked to remain unidentified, called the order unnecessary. They said the questioned pipe sections had withstood pressures 2½ times what would be expected in normal pipeline operations.

Jack Fernsite, acting director of the Transportation department's Materials Transportation Bureau, said in Washington Wednesday the faults were spotted in checks of X-ray tests. He said the telegram to Alyeska advised that the welds "required correction or resolution before the oil reached the Valdez terminal."

"We did not call up today and say, 'Stop the pipeline,'" he said. "It's not a big battle or anything. This is something we agree does not meet standards. Cutout and repair is a required procedure when cracks appear."

Contract announced

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah — Northwest Energy Co. has announced the signing of a contract with Pan-Alberta Gas Ltd. of Calgary for the delivery of up to 800 million cubic feet of natural gas daily for five years beginning in 1979.

John G. McMillian, Northwest Energy's chairman and chief executive officer, said a new pipeline, which several natural gas transmission companies propose to construct, will transport the new Canadian supply initially, as well as Alaskan North Slope natural gas at a later date, to markets in the lower 48 states.

Northwest will act promptly to secure responsible U.S. purchasers for the new gas supply, he said.

"We believe this is an excellent opportunity to build in advance necessary parts of the Alcan Pipeline Project and relieve some of the serious natural gas shortages which plagued the country this past winter," McMillian said.

Northwest Energy is the parent of Northwest Pipeline Corp., which is the U.S. sponsor of the proposed Alcan Pipeline Project to transport Alaskan North Slope natural gas to the east, midwest and western United States.

Northwest's Alcan Pipeline Project has been recommended by both the U.S. Federal Power Commission (FPC) and Canada's Energy Board (NEB).

Tenneco says earnings up

HOUSTON (AP) — Tenneco Inc. reported today all its major divisions had increased operating revenues in the second quarter and first half of the year.

Second quarter earnings of $106.5 million or $1.10 a share compared with $105.5 million or $1.14 for the comparable year earlier period. Record revenues of $1.9 billion compared with $1.6 billion.

Earnings the first six months of the year were $211 million or $2.19 a share compared with $195 million or $2.11 in 1976. Revenues totaled $3.7 billion compared with $392 billion.

Explorer scheduled

Ector County drew site for an exploratory test, an extender finaled in a Reeves gas field, and completion has been scheduled at a Pecos wildcat.

Robert B. Holt of Midland plans No. 1 Secret Holt, a 13,800-foot wildcat, surrounded by production in the Cowden, North field, and two miles west of the Fasken multipay area in Ector.

REEVES EXTENSION

Enserch Exploration, Inc., Dallas, finaled a ½-mile south extension to the Reaves, North (3200) gas field of Reeves County, 10 miles south of Orla.

No. 1-36 Amarillo-State gauged a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 1,225,600 cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing through perforations at 3,160-3,172 feet. The pay section had been fractured with 3,100 gallons and 5,000 pounds.

PECOS PROJECT

Longhorn Exploration of San Angelo was waiting on a completion unit after setting 4½-inch casing at 1,492 feet, total depth, at No. 2 University Lands, Pecos County scheduled wildcat, ¾ mile northwest of its No. 1 University, Queen gas discovery.

No. 2 University spots 2,173 feet from north and west lines of section 36, block 18, ULS, three miles south of Bakersfield, 3½ miles southwest of a Queen, West segment of the Cardinal pool.

University No. 1 finaled in May for 2.8 million cubic feet of gas daily, through perforations at 1,311-1,356 feet.

DRILLING REPORT

ANDREWS — Texaco No. 3-Z State of Texas; pumped 48 barrels of oil, no water, in 24 hours, through perforations at 12,518-12,528 feet.

BORDEN — Monsanto No. 1 Good; taking a straddle-packer drillstem test in the Mississippian from 9,360-9,420 feet. Total depth is 9,660 feet.

DAWSON — Gulf No. 2 Speck; td 12,190 feet, still recovering load through perforations at 9,835-9,839 feet, which have been acidized with 2,000 gallons.

EDDY — Gulf No. 2-FT Eddy; drilling 2,940 feet. Operator set 9⅝-inch casing at 2,920 feet.

'Tolerable limits'

The public, which ultimately pays the bill for government's losses to cheaters, probably has contributed through apathy to the multibillion dollar fraud toll.

There has been some reluctance to prosecute those who try to hoodwink federal agencies because of a belief that the perpetrators of crime against the government were, in many cases, society's victims — the poor and the ill.

But recent exposure of welfare and Medicaid ripoffs has revealed that the intended beneficiaries of the programs often are being exploited by greedy administrators or purveyors of services.

Corruption has been uncovered in veterans' educational programs, in nursing homes, in defense contracts, in housing programs, in food stamp sales and in loan and subsidy programs.

A U.S. attorney, quoted in U.S. News and World Report, gave a gloomy assessment of the extent of the problem of fraud. "Everything the government is involved with is an invitation to thievery," he said.

And the mounting publicity has brought demands from the American people and from their representatives in Congress for a crackdown on the schemers.

Law-enforcement officials concede that fraud and abuse of government programs have increased "beyond tolerable limits."

They are convinced, however, that the several agencies and departments must control their own programs. They recommend that they seek out trouble with trained investigators rather than waiting for irregularities to appear. A good investigator or auditor, according to recent studies, can save the taxpayers $20 for every dollar spent on a probe.

The congressional concern which has stimulated recent gains against taxpayer gouging is welcome and must be sustained, but Congress could go further. Each new program must be examined for the potential for fraud and the loopholes closed beforehand.

There is no easy, immediate answer, but the new public awareness and outrage are essential to the drive against wrongdoing.

The wage cycle

The so-called "compromise" under which President Carter has endorsed a plan to tie the federal minimum wage to industrial wages actually is a concession designed to ease the strained relationships between the administration and labor chief George Meany.

Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, wants the automatic escalator, which would maintain the minimum at about 52 per cent of the average factory wage.

Mr. Carter had been reluctant to support an increase beyond 20 cents to $2.50 an hour. But under the agreement worked out by administration representatives, congressional leaders and Meany, the pay will go to $2.65 Jan. 1 and the increases will be automatic from then on.

Those who support the minimum wage standard insist that it eliminates poverty-level pay.

In effect, however, it eliminates jobs — jobs for the very young and inexperienced and jobs for those who barely qualify in the labor market.

The "indexing" of wages to inflation — as has been done with Social Security benefits and other federal pensions — conditions the nation to continued inflation and locks business into a wage spiral.

America took its economic strength from a free market for trade and jobs.

Every effort to tinker with the free enterprise system — through trade barriers or wage guarantees — erodes its strength.

Congress should dig in its heels and resist the contemplated revisions as too high a price to pay for political peace.

ART BUCHWALD

Dinner guest rental business pays well

Art Buchwald

A few years ago I wrote about the shortage of guests on the Riviera, and pointed out that while everyone had a villa or a yacht, the natural resources in house guests and boat guests were drying up fast, and unless a guest conservation program was instituted, the people along the Riviera would soon find themselves dining and sailing alone. Well, they scoffed at my warning, but this year the Riviera is facing its worst guest shortage since Elsa Maxwell tried to get a passenger list together for a cruise of the Greek islands.

The profiteering in guests this year is unimaginable.

I know, because that's how I was paying for my vacation. It happened by accident, but if a fellow doesn't take advantage of a situation, he'll wind up spending his own money on the Riviera, and who wants to do that?

It seems that fellow columnist John Crosby showed up in Monte Carlo and innocently asked me if I could get him invited to the Red Cross dinner and gala at which Sammy Davis Jr. was going to entertain.

I pretended it would be difficult but said I'd do my best. What I knew but John didn't was that the ratio of women to men along the Riviera was six to one, and hostesses were willing to pay anything for a single man to sit at one of their tables.

An hour later I was down at the beach making discreet inquiries. I was tipped off that a Mrs. Max Kettner of New York had three extra women for the gala and was getting desperate.

"Bing Crosby?" she asked.

"Listen," I said, "if I had Bing Crosby, I wouldn't be here — I would be negotiating at the Palace with Princess Grace.

"My boy's John Crosby, but he's been a helluva dinner guest in his time. He's eaten at Billy Paley's house, he's broken bread with Mrs. Pam Harriman, he's had coffee with the Trudeaus twice. This guy is no bum — he's Yale '38, and that gives him a presold table audience right there."

Mrs. Kettner wet her lips. "How much are you asking for him? "It depends," I said. "Do you want him for cocktails before the dinner?"

"What's the difference?" Mrs. Kettner wanted to know.

"Well, I can book him for cocktails before the gala at the Hotel de Paris with another party, and that would cut down the price for you. He could join you for dinner around ten o'clock."

"I think I should have him for cocktails," Mrs. Kettner said.

"But I'd better warn you that I don't want to pay more than $1,500 for the evening."

"Fifteen hundred dollars?" I said. "Why, I turned down $2,000 from Sam Spiegel for Crosby to lunch with him on his yacht, and Crosby didn't have to put a black tie on either. If you're going to start talking chicken feed I'd rather have Crosby stay in his room tonight."

"I'll pay $1,750," Mrs. Kettner said.

"This is ridiculous. I couldn't get you a gold caddy for $1,750 tonight. Look Crosby's a syndicated columnist, he's a name. You pair him up with one of your female guests and she's going to be impressed — this guy's got class. I'm not going to sell him out for a song."

"Well, how much do you want?" Mrs. Kettner said.

"The same as Sammy Davis Jr. is getting for entertaining tonight," I said.

"But that's outrageous," Mrs. Kettner replied.

"Look. Entertainers are a dime a dozen," I said. "Where are you going to find dinner guests at this late date? After all, Davis will only be on stage entertaining. Crosby will actually be at your table sitting with you."

Mrs. Kettner finally agreed, provided Crosby also would come for cocktails.

I pocketed the money and then rushed back to tell Crosby the news that I had managed to get him invited to the gala.

Tears of gratitude poured from his eyes. "How can I ever thank you?" he said.

"Forget it, kid," I said, punching him slightly in the shoulder. "You can do a favor for me sometime."

To this day Crosby doesn't know how much he is worth. He still thinks I did him a good turn. If I only had three Crosbys a season I could make enough dough to retire for the rest of the year.

HEMISPHERE REPORT:

Latins wish respect were mutual

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

He has inspired Latin Americans to reach a consensus on their most important foreign policy problem, the United States.

True, Latin America, as a whole, has long entertained doubts about the wisdom of the United States.

But it remained for Mr. Carter to alienate most of the larger Latin American countries by demonstrating a lack of concern for their sensibilities.

Mr. Carter's insistent talk about human rights violations in Latin America is a prime example.

Most of those countries that have been singled out for U.S. criticism in this hemisphere are nations that have as long a tradition of observance of the rights of man as does the United States.

So, for a U.S. President who hails from an area where a man still can be denied admission to a church group because of the color of his skin, to preach about human rights to Latin America grates on the Latin ear.

That point arises frequently.

The prestigious Buenos Aires newspaper, La Nacion, admitted recently that "what we fail to understand is why President Carter, who has made human rights the main and apparently the single objective of his foreign policy, believes it appropriate to effect a reconciliation with a dictator (Fidel Castro) whose opinions are openly cynical and incompatible with respect for the individual."

The widely read Brazilian commentator Carlos Castello Branco wrote recently in the newspaper Jornal do Brasil of Rio de Janeiro that "unfortunately (Secretary of State) Cyrus Vance degraded that condition (of respect for human rights) set by the Carter policy by exempting those areas of immediate strategic and economic interest for the United States from compliance with that principle."

Chile's greatest newspaper, El Mercurio of Santiago, specifically complained that the recent suspension of an $11 million U.S. loan to Chile until human rights are better respected there amounts to "use of pressure and interference in matters which concern Chilean sovereignty exclusively." Mercurio also declared that "now the U.S. Democratic government is thwarting the fulfillment of important aspects of human rights: the economic and social."

President Augusto Pinochet made no secret of his irritation with the Carter administration. Chile is not a country of beggars, he said, and Chile was rejecting the credit in protest of the propaganda attacks that accompanied it.

President Jorge Rafael Videla of Argentina, a country that has been a frequent target of U.S. human rights activists, recently was quoted as saying that relations with the United States are improving. Nevertheless, at the conclusion of the visit that Videla made to neighboring Uruguay the end of June, he and Uruguayan President Aparicio Mendez issued a joint declaration reaffirming their determination "to oppose any attempt at external pressure or coercion of a political or economic nature..." They also pledged to go on fighting subversion and terror which they termed a threat to "the essential rights of human beings."

Brazilian President Ernesto Geisel told the French television that "anybody who lives in Brazil knows that it is a free country in which everybody can live and exercise his rights freely. Subverslon is not allowed in Brazil.

"But that picture of people who do not support the government being tortured, harassed, ...is absolutely untrue. Brazil lives under a democracy which is relative to its conditions. U.S. or British democracy just cannot be transferred over here, because democracy has its own characteristics in Brazil," Geisel affirmed.

But even those few hemisphere heads of state who seem to meet with the approval of the Carter administration give some indication of resenting U.S. meddling.

Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez, who recently visited Mr Carter in Washington, later told a Venezuelan radio and TV audience that "now it is time to say that Latin America has the responsibility to assert its independence from the United States..." Perez, a civil rights activist in recent years, of course, did not criticize Mr. Carter's stand on that subject.

But the Venezuelan did make it clear that he feels the United States and Latin America should start "developing friendship in terms of mutual respect."

GOP considers changing name to get voter support

Nick Thimmesch

ST. PAUL Minn. — In this state, there is no "Republican" Party, but one called the "Independent-Republican" Party, made up of adherents and candidates who walk, talk and carry on like Republicans. No mystery here. The Minnesota GOP simply changed its name in 1975.

Perhaps the Minnesota innovation is the way out of the vexing dilemma national Republicans find themselves in these days — namely, trying to win with a label most people hold their noses at, while Jimmy Carter corrals the same independent-minded voters Republicans had successfully wooed in many elections.

Now, GOP National Chairman William Brock readily admits that the public doesn't warm to the word "Republican," an unfair situation perhaps, but a reality.

This recognition helped him conclude that the GOP is in for a long rebuilding process, longer even than the refurbishing needed after the 1964 disaster.

The simplistic cry is that the party must become more "liberal" to win back independent voters. But Richard Nixon, hardly a liberal, had won over those indepdnents until Watergate disillusioned them about anything Republican. Actually, the word "liberal," according to polls, is as disliked as "Republican," so a "liberal-Republican" is probably not the most popular kid on the block, either.

Pollster Robert Teeter determined several years back that the most attractive political labels were "independent" and "citizens." "Conservative" was far better than "liberal" or even "Democrat."

Teeter also learned that the "Republican" Party seemed indelibly stamped in voters' minds as belonging to the "big boys," and after Watergate, it lost its reputation as being more honest than the Democratic Party.

There are some ironies here. Democratic campaign finance sins were washed away in Watergate, and even now are hard to limelight in the South Korean situation. Moreover, the "big boys" favored Democrats in 1976. The political action committee of business gave 57 per cent of their campaign contributions to Democrats, and labor favored Democrats by its usual wide margin.

When 28-year-old Charles A. Slocum took over as chairman of the Minnesota Republicans in July, 1975, he anguished over the dilemma, particularly as felt in Minnesota. Until 1972, candidates for the state legislature were not designated by party, and the majority of those elected caucused as "conservatives." Actually, they were Republicans.

But in 1973, the system changed so that candidates were designated Republican or Democratic-Farmer-Labor candidates. Bam, the D.F.L. swept everything.

Slocum, a devotee to market research and polling, decided that since Minnesota voters were "centrist," a survey was needed to determine what "Republican" and "Independent" meant to people.

The survey, taken during the fall of 1975 in the St. Paul-Minneapolis metropolitan area, showed that 61 percent of those interviewed held a negative attitude toward the word "Republican." Around 80 percent of the interviewees held positive attitudes toward "independent."

The survey also showed people preferred the "Independent-Republican" label over "Republican" by a 2-1 margin. Self-described "Independents" like it by a whopping 8-1 count. Even Republicans preferred it, 5-3.

With his subdued GOP membership ready to follow its leadership ("Try anything"), Slocum got the state convention, by a 70-30 margin, to approve renaming the party. A consequent challenge in the Minnesota Supreme Court failed, so it's been "Independent-Republican" Party for 18 months now.

The first test of the I.-R. was 1976, and the new label took a shellacking. Slocum says that's because Minnesotans had the opportunity to vote for Democratic Sens. Hubert Humphrey and Walter Mondale, and thus the election became a matter of state pride.

Slocum, citing personal and family reasons, did not run for party chairmanship again, and says the controversy over the new label was not involved. GOP conservatives weren't hot for the change, and the press initially saw it largely as a cosmetic effort. But Slocum feels that in 1978 his idea will get its first valid test because there will be no stars like Humphrey or Mondale running.

"This name change experience can help us get over the hurdle of a minority status," Slocum says, "and appeal to a majority of voters who believe in our responsible, commonsense message."

The new I.-R. chairman, Vern Neppl, had opposed the change, but now tentatively accepts it. Instead of sticking the word "independent" in front of Republican, he would have liked "Conservative."

Whatever, Slocum's innovation attracted great interest inside the Republican Party, and he got plenty of mail on the subject. Even now, Chairman Brock does not rule out any proposal for the GOP to change its name in order to get the voter support Brock believes the party deserves.

HOUSE

CO-OP BANK. Passed, 199 for and 198 against, a bill (HR 2777) creating a federal bank to spur development of non-profit consumer cooperatives. Such co-ops consist of consumers banding together to buy a wide range of everyday goods and services. Also benefiting from the bill would be inner-city co-ops set up to revitalize slum areas.

Members voting "yea" favored the

ROLL CALL REPORT

Reps. Samuel Hall (D-1), James Collins (R-3), Ray Roberts (D-4), Bill Archer (R-7), Jack Brooks (D-9), Jake Pickle (D-10), W. R. Poage (D-11), Jack Hightower (D-13), Kika de la Garza (D-15), Omar Burleson (D-16), George Mahon (D-19), Henry Gonzalez (D-20), Robert Krueger (D-21), Bob Gammage (D-22), Abraham Kazen (D-23) and Dale Milford (D-24) voted "nay."

Reps. Charles Wilson (D-2), Olin Teague (D-6), John Young (D-14) and Barbara Jordon (D-18) did not vote.

INTELLIGENCE. Adopted, 227 for and 171 against, a resolution (H Res 658) setting up a permanent House committee to oversee the CIA and intelligence activities of other agencies, including the FBI. The new committee has nine majority (Democratic) and four minority (Republican) members. A major part of its mandate is budget and legislative authority over the CIA.

One issue during debate was that H Res 658 lacked specific rules on access to classified information. Limitations on access would be set by the committee after its formation.

Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., a supporter, said: "We certainly have to presume that the committee is going to be sufficiently interested in protecting classified information...and that it will make appropriate rules to guarantee this security."

Opponents ranged from liberals concerned with too much secrecy to conservatives fearful of leaks. One of the latter, Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., said: "The fact is, not all Members of Congress have a bona fide need to know about our nation's intelligence matters."

Members voting "yea" favored the resolution.

FARM PAYMENTS. Rejected, 199 for and 207 against, an amendment to prohibit farm subsidy payments to non-farm corporations. It was proposed to HR 7171, the new farm bill which was headed for final passage and conference with the Senate. A major part of the bill is the multibillion-dollar crop support program with which this amendment was concerned.

Teague and Wright did not vote.

SENATE

FREE PARKING. Tabled, 65 for and 28 against, an amendment to end free parking on the Capitol grounds for members of Congress, their staffs and some members of the press. Fees of $10 to $50 monthly were proposed for the 8,500 parking spaces. The amendment was offered to HR 7932, the fiscal 1978 legislative branch appropriations bill later passed and sent to conference with the Senate.

Senators voting "yea" favored continuing free parking.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen (D) and John Tower (R) voted "yea."

COMMISSARIES. Voted, 49 for and 46 against, to preserve the subsidy of salaries of employes at military commissaries. The vote deleted language in the fiscal 1978 defense appropriations bill that would have phased out over three years the $100 million annual subsidy of "clerk-hire" at commissaries. Other subsidies that keep commissary prices low, such as free rent, would not have been affected by the proposal.

B-1 BOMBER. Adopted, 59 for and 36 against, an amendment removing funds for the B-1 bomber from the fiscal 1978 defense appropriations bill (HR 7933), later passed and sent to conference with the House. The amendment deleted about $1.4 billion which the Appropriations Committee had put in the bill for building five B-1 production models.

The money was approved by the committee before President Carter's June 30 decision to halt the B-1 program and proceed instead with fitting B-52 bombers with Cruise missiles.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., a supporter of the amendment, said it would be "a great mistake" to seek to reverse Carter's decision and lose valuable defense-preparedness time in the process.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, an opponent, said he is "seriously concerned and distressed by the decision of the President of the U.S. to eliminate the B-1...a political decision not based on fact and a decision that endangers the security of the U.S."

Senators voting "yea" supported Carter's B-1 decision.

By JOHN JACOBS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Two of President Carter's three nominees to the five-member Nuclear Regulatory Commission favor at least in part the Clinch River breeder reactor project that Carter wants ended.

The commission, which licenses nuclear power plants, could conceivably end up having to rule on the $2.2 billion project, so Carter's nominees are reluctant to detail how they might vote.

But based on what the nominees have said during recent Senate confirmation hearings, industry critics say a majority on the commission would support Clinch River, the experimental nuclear power plant in Tennessee that would burn plutonium.

Many in the nuclear industry want to switch from today's uranium-powered plants to more sophisticated reactors that burn and at the same time breed plutonium. They fear that eventually the United States will run out of uranium.

Carter, however, opposes the use of plutonium in nuclear plants because it is also used for manufacturing nuclear weapons and could be extremely dangerous in the hands of, for example, terrorist groups. In April Carter asked other technologically advanced nations to help stop the spread of the highly poisonous substance.

One of Carter's nominees to the NRC, Kent Hansen, a nuclear engineer at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, told the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works last week that he disagrees with Carter on breeder reactors, and that Clinch River "should be built."

Carter's nominee for chairman of the NRC is Joseph Hendrie, a nuclear physicist at Brookhaven National Laboratory on Long Island. He told the committee Monday that if Carter had asked him for advice before deciding to stop the project, he would have "tilted slightly" toward going ahead with it.

Hendrie said he now agrees with the President but also said that Carter should "maintain the pace of research on the breeder." He said that nuclear reactors have "an exceedingly important role to play" as an energy source, and that the United States should preserve the option of fast breeder technology.

Peter Bradford, Carter's third nominee, also testified at the confirmation hearing Monday and said he supports Carter's position. He said that if he were a senator, he would have voted against Clinch River. Bradford is a member of Maine's Public Utilities Commission.

Three representatives from public advocacy groups testified against the nominations of Hansen and Hendrie. Two of them, John Abbotts of Public Interest Research Group, a Ralph Nader organization, and James Cubie of New Directions, said in interviews that the new commission would lean towards approving the Clinch River project and breeder reactors by a 3 to 2 vote "at the least."

They agreed that, of the two present commissioners, Richard Kennedy would probably vote with Hansen and Hendrie for the breeder, and Victor Gilinsky would probably join Bradford in dissenting.

Cubie said Carter was "badly advised" on the nominations by James Schlesinger, his top energy adviser and a former chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

"Schlesinger is putting in some people on the basis of old relationships he had at AEC" (Atomic Energy Commission), cubie said. "At that time and in that context they were good people. But they don't reflect the new directions of atomic-energy policy."

There is considerable uspport for the Clinch River project in Congress. Last week the Senate voted not to fund it for the time being, but some provision to preserve at least a minimal project appears likely. Cubie said that if Congress voted money for Clinch River, it would still have to be licensed by the NRC.

"This was Carter's ace in the hole, and he's giving it up," Cubie said. "With Hendrie as chairman, it's business as usual.

... And it's a signal to the light-water reactor industry (the technology now used in nuclear plants) that it's clean sailing ahead."

The panelists also criticized Hendrie and Hansen for what they said was insensitivity to the "revolving-door syndrome," in which regulators come from the industry they regulate. Under questionng from Sen. Gary Hart (D-Colo.), Hendrie said he was "neither surprised nor upset" that 65 per cent of the NRC staff came from the nuclear industry. Hansen earlier had testified that he had no idea the figure was that high.

Bradford, who was praised by the panelists and by his home-state senators, Edmund Muskie and William Hathaway of Maine, said what is needed is "meaningful public input." He supported public funding for intervenor groups that testify against the views of the nuclear industry at commission hearings.

Alarm triggered by rabid skunk

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Health officials in Oklahoma and Texas are trying to contact all persons who bought skunks in the last few months at the Canton Trade Day flea market in Canton, Tex., near Interstate 20 east of Dallas.

Twenty-seven persons in the McIntosh County area of Southeast Oklahoma have begun a series of painful rabies shots, after coming in contact with a rabid skunk purchased by an Oklahoma boy at the market, authorities said.

Oklahoma Health Department officials fear more rabid skunks may have been sold as pets by a man at the market.

Possible skunk owners in Texas are being contacted by regional health department officials in that state.

"There are an undetermined number of people who may have purchased skunks from the Canton Trade Day flea market during the past several months," said Mark Roberts of the Oklahoma Health Department.

Roberts said the rabid skunk, which was supposedly vaccinated against rabies, was purchased by a McIntosh County boy during the first week of July.

The skunk became ill days later and died. Tests showed the animal had rabies.

Roberts urged anyone who owns or has owned a skunk from the Canton Trade Day to call the state health department in Oklahoma or Texas.

"We strongly discourage ownership of pet skunks," Roberts said.

About 75 per cent of reported rabies cases in Oklahoma are caused by skunks, Roberts said.

Rabies shots, besides being painful, cost about $500 per person.

Decision due Nov. 1

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decision is expected by Nov. 1 on which airlines will fly Atlanta-London and Dallas-London nonstop routes, President Carter has told the Civil Aeronautics Board.

The new routes would begin "shortly thereafter," the President said.

Delta Airlines, Pan American World Airways and Eastern Airlines are the only airlines bidding for the Atlanta route.

Carter asked for recommendations on carriers to begin service on the Atlanta-London route and a route between Dallas-Fort Worth and London in a letter dated July 21 and released Tuesday.

The President, who has final authority over the award of international air routes to U.S. carriers, said, "I hope to make designations by Nov. 1, 1977, after considering your recommendation."

The Atlanta-London and Dallas-London routes are to be exclusively awarded to an American carrier for a three-year period, under terms of the new trans-Atlantic route agreement signed by the United States and Great Britain in Bermuda last Saturday.

There is no direct service between London and Atlanta or Dallas-Fort Worth at this time.

Patient drops in, flies out

PORT LAVACA, Tex. (AP) — James Tagert decided his sore throat was worth a quick trip to the hospital. So he simply set his helicopter down in the hospital's front lawn near the emergency room.

Tagert, a drilling engineer on an offshore oil rig, was flying to work with another man Monday when they spotted the hospital.

Astonished emergency room personnel said Tagert's common cold symtoms didn't warrant immediate treatment, so the pair hailed a cab and went to a nearby clinic.

Sheriff finds grass in corn

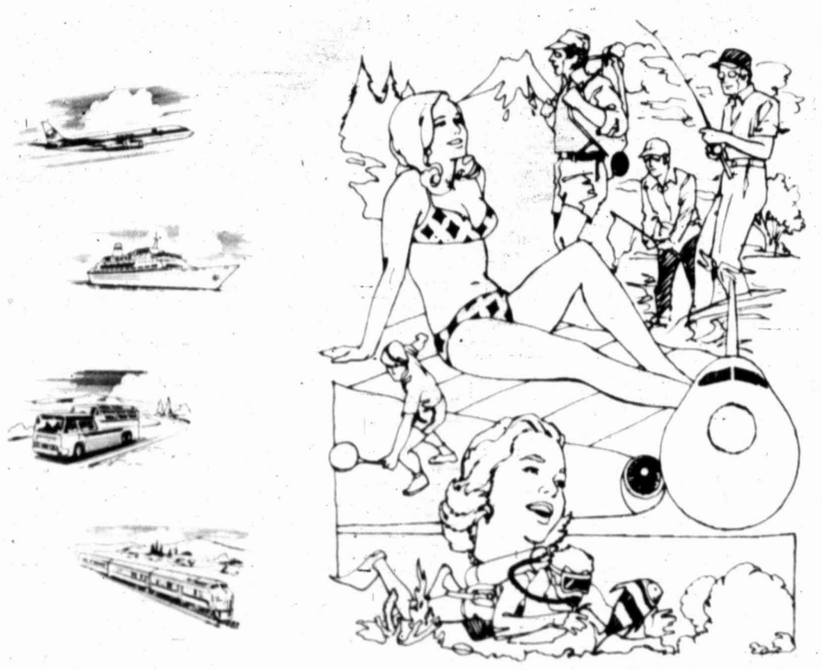

WARTBURG, Tenn. (AP) — When an airplane carrying two tons of marijuana crashed in David Wyrick's pasture two years ago, he was told some of the illegal weed might grow. It did.

Wyrick, a farmer, was charged with cultivating marijuana for resale after Morgan County authorities found 464 six-foot plants growing in his corn field near here. He was released on $2,500 bond.

"The water line he had going from his house up the hillside gave him away," said Morgan County Sheriff Floyd Long.

Salads combine calorie, nutrition requirements

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

Salads can be as simple as mixed greens or more elaborate concoctions that serve as the entire meal.

For the calorie and nutrition conscious, they're an ideal combination — loaded with vitamins and usually low in calories and fats.

Of course, not all salads are in the low-calorie class. Avocado (one cup) can add 260 calories for the California varieties — make that 195 for Florida-grown. And dressings with mayonnaise can add about 110 calories per tablespoon, at a minimum.

But nature offers one of the best of dressings — a simple squeeze of lemon juice — for the calorie conscious.

AVOCADO PINWHEEL SALAD

One-half medium cucumber, sliced
1 (8.75-oz.) can kidney beans, rinsed and drained
One-half cup slivered sharp cheese
One and one-half cups slivered cooked ham
2 hard-cooked eggs, shelled and sliced
2 sweet pickles, sliced
One-half bell pepper, diced
3 green onions, chopped
One-half cup celery, bias cut
10 cherry tomatoes, halved
1 large avocado, sliced
Three-fourths cup salad dressing (mayonnaise type)
One-half cup catsup
1 tbsp. chopped parsley

Mix dressing, catsup and parsley, pass in a bowl with salad. Makes two dinner servings or four side dish servings.

LAYERED MUSHROOM SALAD

1 lb. fresh mushrooms, sliced
One-fourth cup oil
2 tbsps. fresh lemon juice
1 tbsp. toasted sesame seed
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. sugar
One-fourth tsp. ground cumin
One-fourth tsp. ground black pepper
2 cups torn fresh spinach
2 cups torn lettuce
1 pt. basket cherry tomatoes
One-fourth lb. julienne cooked ham
One-fourth lb. julienne Swiss cheese

Rinse, pat dry and slice mushrooms (makes about five cups). Combine oil, lemon juice, sesame seed, salt, sugar, cumin and black pepper; mix well; set aside.

In a tall glass bowl, arrange alternate layers of spinach, lettuce, tomatoes, mushrooms, ham and cheese. (If desired, reserve some of the mushrooms, ham, tomatoes and cheese as garnish.) Just before serving, pour dressing over all; toss well to coat all ingredients. Makes six servings.

PEACH SALAD WITH CHAMPAGNE ICE

6 fresh peaches, peeled and halved (or sliced)
1 pt. strawberries, hulled and halved
Peach Champagne Ice (recipe follows)

Arrange two peach halves and strawberries on each salad plate.

Place a scoop of peach champagne ice on top of fruit; garnish with mint sprigs, if desired. Makes six servings. Or mound champagne ice into large glass bowl. Top with peaches and strawberries.

PEACH CHAMPAGNE ICE

8 medium (two pounds) fresh peaches, peeled and quartered
1 cup sugar
One-fourth cup lemon juice
2 cups champagne (can substitute ginger ale)

Put peaches, sugar and lemon juice into blender container. Blend until smooth. Stir in champagne. Pour into ice cube trays and freeze until mushy. Makes about five cups.

Fresh fruits, vegetables offer best economical buys

COLLEGE STATION — Fresh fruits and vegetables offer economical variety, egg prices are very resonable, but meat and poultry prices are higher, Mrs. Gwendolyne Clyatt, consumer marketing information specialist, reports.

Mrs. Clyatt is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

FRESH FRUITS — Peaches, cantaloupes and watermelons in plentiful supply have attractive prices. Other seasonal items at the most economical prices are nectarines, cherries, plums, seedless grapes, pineapples and bananas.

FRESH VEGETABLES — Best buys include green peppers, cabbage, corn, carrots and cucumbers—along with head lettuce, okra, purple hull and blackeye peas, zucchini and yellow squash.

POULTRY — Eggs continue as a very reasonably priced protein food; however, fryer chicken prices are higher because of lower supplies.

DAIRY — Cheese, in large supply, reflects budget prices and wide variety. Other low-price items are yogurt, sour cream, two per cent and lowfat milk.

BEEF — Prices remain at the higher levels of preceding weeks, but best values are ground beef, rib steaks, round steaks and roasts, chuck roasts and steaks, along with beef and calf liver.

please don't blame your grocer

When we first introduced Grandma Goodwin's Old Fashioned Potato Chips, we hoped you would like them. But we had no idea they would be as popular as they are. We simply can't make them fast enough.

We make Grandma Goodwin's a little differently than our regular chips (they're sliced thicker with the peel still on for instance) and it's taking us a little longer to make and package them for you.

Please be patient. We're adding an extra shift so that we'll be able to get them to you faster. But please don't blame your grocer if you haven't been able to find them. It may be our fault.

Thanks for understanding.

Summer brings ideas for quick, refreshing meals

Copley News Service

Ahhh, summer! Sunshine, warmth and days at the beach. With those lazy days here come thoughts about some quick and refreshing summer meals, while keeping in mind your heart-helping diet. Here are some suggestions.

SUMMER SALAD

One-half cup cucumber, cut in tiny cubes

One-half cup thinly sliced celery

One-fourth cup broken walnut meats

3 tbsps. chopped red or green pepper

4 tbsps. mayonnaise

2 tbsps. buttermilk

Mound on lettuce leaf, if desired. Serves six.

CHINESE CHICKEN

3 whole chicken breasts (no skin)

One-fourth cup polyunsaturated oil

1 cup sliced water chestnuts

1 cup bamboo shoots

2 cups celery

One-half lb. green beans, slivered

3 cups fat-free chicken broth

One-fourth cup soy sauce

2 tsps. salt, if desired

2 tsps. monosodium glutamate

1 tsp. sugar

1 tsp. pepper

2 tbsps. cornstarch

Cut chicken in match-like pieces or slice frozen chicken breasts paper-thin. Saute chicken slowly in oil until meat is white. Add vegetables and half of the broth. Cover and cook for five minutes. Mix rest of broth with the other liquids and seasonings and combine with cornstarch. Pour liquid mixture into pan and stir until sauce thickens. Serve with steamed rice. Serves six.

CHEF'S SALAD

3 cups cleaned, crisped salad greens

3 carrots, scraped and sliced

1 can artichoke hearts, drained, quartered

4 tomatoes, sliced

4 scallions, chopped

One and one-half cups cold lean meat, roast beef (cut in thin slices) or tuna

Toss vegetables and add meat on the top of salad greens. Pass a tasty dressing such as:

CHEF'S COTTAGE DRESSING

Three-fourths cup buttermilk

One-fourth cup low-fat cottage cheese

One-fourth tsp. salt

One-fourth tsp. prepared mustard

1 drop Tabasco sauce

One-half small white onion, minced

1 tbsp. parsley

One-half tbsp. minced chives

Mix ingredients together in a blender until smooth. Serve over tossed greens. Makes one cup, 10 calories per tablespoon.

Garlic spices up chicken

By The Associated Press

A famous French Provencal recipe, chicken baked with 40 cloves of garlic, crops up in a fascinating new cookbook, "Mediterranean Cooking" by Paula Wolfert (Quadrangle). We've tried several versions of the dish; Wolfert's is one of the best.

During its baking everyone in the house will know you are using garlic. But when you carve the chicken and top each portion with a few of the soft cloves — so each eater can spread them on toasted French bread — their pungency will have vanished. They'll be surprisingly mellow. Serving only a few cloves to each person is mandatory. Should a garliclover be tempted to down too many, the next morning there may be regrets. We say this from experience!

One reason we prize the Wolfert recipe is that it uses the 40 cloves (about three heads of garlic) unpeeled. This makes the dish easy to prepare. After the chicken, oil, garlic and other aromatics go into a casserole, it's sealed with "a ribbon of flour and water paste." For the paste we found a cup of flour and one-third of a cup of water about right.

Wolfert has organized her book in an interesting and helpful way: each group of recipes stresses the ingredients that "comprise the bounty of the Mediterranean, the stuff of which its cuisines are built." Thus there are chapters on garlic and oil; olives; eggplant, tomatoes, peppers and other Mediterranean vegetables; chick peas, lentils and beans; pasta, couscous and other Mediterranean farinaceous foods; herbs spices and other aromatics; yogurt, cheese; nuts; honey; lemons, oranges, figs, dates and other Mediterranean fruits.

For cooks in various parts of the United Sates, there's a list of stores and companies on the east coast and in the Midwest, South and West that can supply any special ingredients and materials mentioned in "Mediterranean Cooking," and some of these fill mail orders.

One 3½-pound read-to-cook chicken

Salt and freshy ground black pepper

2 bouquets garnis of Provencal herbs: bay leaf, parsley, thyme, celery leaves, savory and a little rosemary

¼ cup olive oil

40 cloves of garlic, unpeeled

2 tablespoons anisette

Flour and water paste

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees.

Rub the chicken with salt and pepper. Stuff with one of the herb bouquets, then truss the chicken. Place in a 3-quart oval casserole with a tight-fitting cover (preferably earthenware). Combine oil, garlic cloves in their skins, anisette, salt and pepper and remaining herb bouquet and dump over the bird. Cover and seal the casserole with a ribbon of flour and water paste. Set in the oven to bake 1 hour 15 minutes.

Remove the casserole cover at table and serve directly from it, giving a few cloves of garlic to each person. Pass a basket filled with toasted French bread rounds. Each person can peel the garlic with knife and fork and spread them on the toasted bread.

Serves 4 to 5.

Consumers' 'fat chicken' complaints prove valid

By MARIAN BURROS
The Washington Post

In reply to a woman wrote to ask why there was so much fat in their chickens, Holly Farms wrote giving the per cent of fat in the various parts of their chickens and then said: "We at Holly Farms sell each part with the normal amount of fat and skin attached to it."

What is normal? No one seems to know, but Dr. Donald Bray, a poultry scientist at the University of Illinois has solved part of the puzzle. Bray, who just completed a year working with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, has given a scientist's credence to what all the letter writers have been suspecting: Young chickens are fatter than they used to be. Not just Holly Farms, but others as well.

Bray said poultry scientists have been watching this problem for awhile. "My personal feeling," he said "is that it's been going on for five years. Many poultry scientists have been cautioning the poultry industry about this, saying consumers will complain."

Other scientists confirm Bray's views. Two research chemists in the poultry division of USDA's Agriculture Research Service said approximately the same thing: "Chickens are fatter than they used to be."

According to Bray: "We've been selecting chickens to grow at a more and more rapid rate and when we do this we have a correlative response — they tend to get fatter at a younger and younger age. We've been so interested in growth, we haven't paid too much attention to the fatness problem."

But Bray added that Louisiana State University recently has found a method for breeding leaner chickens.

He also said the more the fryer weighs the greater the proportion of fat. In this area he said they sell larger chickens then they do in the south or Midwest. Here, Bray said, chickens weigh 3 pounds or more; in Illinois they are under 3 pounds.

"The longer you feed them the more meat you get in relation to the bone, but you are also getting much more fat in proportion to the lean."

Whether Holly Farms' chickens are actually fatter than anyone else's was a question Bray could not answer, but he suggested a way to find out. By broiling different brands of chickens and weighing them before and after.

Canners readying for crops

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Millions of Americans who planted backyard gardens during spring and early summer are enjoying the fruits — and vegetables — of their labor. And many of them are turning to home canning to stretch out the enjoyment of the produce through the year.

Industry sources estimate that more garden seeds were purchased in 1975, the latest year for which complete figures are available, than in the previous five years combined. The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimated that more than 20 million persons canned their own fruits and vegetables last year.

There are several basics for would-be canners to keep in mind. Fruits, tomatoes and pickled vegetables — all of them high in acid — can be processed in a boiling-waterbath canner. Low-acid items — all common vegetables except tomatoes — require a steampressure canner with the extra high temperatures needed to destroy bacteria present in the food.

Select fresh, firm fruits and young, tender vegetables for canning and process them before they lose their freshness. If you must store them, find a cool, airy place. Wash produce carefully, even if you plan to peel it, but don't let the fruits and vegetables soak too long sinne they may lose flavor.

Decide whether you want to pack foods raw or cooked. Most raw fruits and vegetables should be packed tightly into the container because they shrink during processing. Exceptions are corn, lima beans and peas, which expand and should be packed loosely, as should hot food. Hot items also should be at or near boiling temperature when packed.

There should be enough syrup, water or juice to fill in around the solid food in the container and to cover the food. Food at the top of the container tends to darken if it is not covered; the discoloration does not necessarily mean that a product has spoiled, but it is unattractive. It takes from ½ to 1½ cups of liquid for a one-quart glass jar.

Note: Do not try to use empty jars from products such as mayonnaise or peanut butter for canning. They are usually thinner than canning jars and are less resistant to extremes of temperatures. They also are difficult to match with lids or caps and may not seal properly.

There are two main types closings for canning jars: metal screwband and porcelainlined cap.

The screwband is used in conjunction with a flat metal lid with sealing compound. The screwband is reusable, but the lids are not since the seal deteriorates.

The government has further information for people interested in putting up their own produce. Among pamphlets available from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009 are:

—Home Canning Safety, no charge, booklet 659E.

DEAR ABBY

Weird honeymoon experience published in sister's column

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I just read in a magazine that one of the most unusual letters you ever received was from a woman who said that on her honeymoon her husband wanted her to lie in a tub of cold water for 20 minutes, and then come to bed and "pretend" she was dead.

Boy he IS weird! I would have been satisfied if on our honeymoon my wife had taken a hot bath and came to bed pretending she was ALIVE!—OPPOSITE PROBLEM

DEAR OPPOSITE: The wife of the weirdo who likes 'em cold and lifeless wrote to my sister. Not me!

DEAR ABBY: I was raped almost two years ago and something has been bothering me ever since. I was a virgin before I was raped, and now I won't be able to wear a white wedding dress because white stands for purity, and I'm not pure anymore.

I don't have a boyfriend and I may never get one, but in case I do I'll have to tell him the whole story and he may not even believe me.

Or do you think because I couldn't help myself I can wear white?—TROUBLED AT TWENTY-THREE

DEAR TROUBLED: Even though you may not be a virgin technically, you are still morally "pure." However, white gowns are not reserved for virgin brides only. Any bride who has never been married before may wear white.

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended a wedding with a male friend of mine. Although the invitation was sent to him, he asked me to accompany him. I accepted and we had a wonderful time. To my amazement, my friend received a bill for $25 for "taking a date."

In the past, my friend and I double-dated several times with the bride and groom, so I was no stranger to them. My friend and the groom had even been roommates for a while.

I'm in my 30s and have attended many weddings (myself taking a date, or vice versa) and I have never heard of being "billed" for my guest.

The parents of the bride are supposedly "upper crust" society. Is this proper? Have you ever heard of it before?—SAN FRANCISCAN

DEAR SAN: It is not proper, and I've never heard of it before. You fail to mention whether your friend asked if he could bring a date. If he brought you without asking, perhaps this was their way of punishing him. In any case, it was a chintzy stunt.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY in care of this newspaper. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Business women hear about food

The Tall City Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association met at the home of Pauniece Oglesby for a backyard supper and business meeting.

Guest speaker for the evening was Mrs. Judy Germany, Midland County extension agent for home economics. She explained various methods of preserving and freezing of foods the proper way. She also commented about the monthly publications published by the United States Department of Agriculture which are available at her office at 218 E. Illinois St.

The vocational was presented by Faye King, a geological secretary for MGF Oil Corp. Part of her duties include calling drilling reports to other parties participating in the program.

King, also radio day chairman for the association, reported that the scholarship fund-raising event has been scheduled for Oct. 17.

The association's three scholarship recipients will receive their scholarships for the fall semester. They are Gayette Lotte who is attending Southwest Texas State University, Mindy Bean, who is a University of Texas-Austin student, and Jodi Fisher who is enrolled at Midland College.

Vera Britt was appointed as September Tea chairman. Her committee will be Marion Fisher, Lois Falls and Jeanette Darrough.

Mrs. Oglesby announced the attendance contest party will be held Aug. 3 in her home at 145 Barbara Lane. An ice cream supper will honor the winning team, the "Dragon Flys."

Perfect attendance awards were presented Mrs. Oglesby for eight years; LaVern Pilcher, 11 years; Venoy Curtis, 10 years; King, 4; Mrs. Fisher, 1; Alma Norman, 8; Alta Gray, 3 and Britt, 3.

The 12th anniversary of the Tall City Charter Chapter was observed by serving cake and coffee and a discussion on the accomplishments of the organization, primarily sponsoring scholarships for Midland's young women.

Prenatal diagnoses change myths

By ROXANE ARNOLD
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — The belief that a woman shouldn't have a child past the age of 35 is a myth.

So says Dr. Laurence Karp, an associate professor of medical genetics at nearby Harbor General Hospital, co-director of its prenatal diagnosis center and the author of "Genetic Engineering: Threat of Promise."

At 40, her chances will rise to two or three in 100.

And at 45, they soar to one in 10.

Before, statistics like that persuaded many older women not to take the risk of childbearing. They either had their babies earlier or never had them at all.

Today, says Karp, that's all changing, thanks to advances in prenatal diagnosis of the last five to 10 years.

Using techniques such as amniocentesis, ultrasound and X ray, today's doctors can almost look inside the womb to tell the mother in many cases exactly what she's facing.

They can tell her facts about the fetus ranging from its sex to whether of not it will be a mongoloid, one of the most common chromosomal defects plaguing the babies of older women.

> "Prenatal diagnosis is a means of trying to find out if something is wrong early enough in the pregnancies of high-risk people to give them the choice of terminating them or not."
> Dr. Laurence Karp

"Prenatal diagnosis is a means of trying to find out if something is wrong early enough in the pregnancies of high-risk people to give them the choice of terminating them or not," Karp says.

"Prenatal diagnosis won't guarantee a woman a normal baby but we think she ought to learn the risks, know what she's facing.

"If we find something abnormal, we don't insist in any way that a woman have an abortion. We're here to inform. What is done is entirely up to the family."

In addition to pregnant women over 35, the typical candidates for prenatal diagnosis are those who already have borne an abnormal child or those who have known or suspected genetic defects, such as carriers of hemophilia.

Ultrasound, the sending of an ultrasonic wave into the uterus to produce a picture of the fetus, will show if the developing child is formed properly.

Amniocentesis, the major tool in prenatal diagnosis, will tell the doctors if the child's genetic makeup is correct.

The major use of amniocentesis is to determine if there is an abnormal number of chromosomes.

"We all should have 46 chromosomes that hold a full set of genes," Karp says. "With the wrong number of chromosomes, you have the wrong number of genes.

Woman knows lot about religion

AT WIT'S END

She flunks character judging

By ERMA BOMBECK

On a game show a few weeks ago, three couples asked who they considered to be the best judge of character, men or women. All six agreed that women were better able to strip away the veneer and assess what people really are.

I wish that were true in our family.

My husband says I'm Peter Pan in a panty girdle. I want to believe in people so badly I lose my perspective.

Take the girl on the beach in California who was sitting there bare-chested as a baboon.

"Are you crazy?" asked my husband. "Why do you think she's exposing herself like that?"

"She has arthritis?"

"She is not sitting there for the heat. She is sitting there because she wants attention."

"Is that what you think?" I laughed. "Did it ever occur to you she is probably a wonderful girl who is working on her Ph.D. in physics gathering material for her dissertation on the effects of solar energy on the human anatomy?"

"You don't know people at all," he charged.

"Why would you say a thing like that?"

"Remember when we saw 'Jaws,' and the guy next to you was rooting for the shark and you said he was near sighted and probably thought it was Flipper?"

"It was possible."

"And the girlfriend of yours who has been married six times and you said she couldn't stand the waste of wearing a dress just once and discarding it?"

"I can see her logic."

"You're weird. You look at people and you don't see the same things everyone else sees."

"That's not true. I try to get inside their skin and dissect their emotions, their motivations, their feelings and separate what is real from what is phony."

"Is that a fact? Then how come when we were seeing the movie 'Rocky,' and he was in the frozen meat locker punching the sides of beef hanging from hooks to get into shape for his championship bout, you leened over and whispered, 'Would you get a load of those sirloins?' How come you can't turn away a magazine salesman and we are the only ones in the block subscribing to Yogurt Monthly? I swear you'd find something wonderful about Lizzie Borden."

"She wasn't a bad little girl, really," I said. "She just wanted to go to the orphans' picnic."

Scout mothers plan retreat away from their families

Women who work with Cub Scouts and would like a weekend away from their husbands and children will have the opportunity Aug. 19-21.

All women in the Buffalo Trail Council who work with scouts can attend the first Buffalo Gal Stampede. This includes den leaders, den leader coaches, assistant den leaders, pack committee women or any woman interested in learning more about Cub Scouts.

The event will be held at the Buffalo Trail Scouts Ranch in the Davis Mountains. Women are required to furnish a bedroll, cot, foam or air mattress, towel and soap. The meals will be furnished.

Included in the list of activities will be a history of the ranch by Wayne McBee. The women also will learn games, songs, skits, crafts ceremonies, have a campfire and take a hike to Needle Rock.

Reservations must be made by Aug. 1. Further information may be obtained by telephoning Dottie Slattery, 683-4458, or write to Buffalo Trail Council, P. O. Box 1508, Midland, Tex.

Birthdays celebrated

Volunteers working were Edna Keith, chairman; Mary Maude Hickman; Ralph Hickman; Pauline Turpen; Esther Denton; Suzie Noble; Laura Self; Helen Luff; Lucille Semple; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Redding; Thelma Echols, and Helen Reid.

Buy CB carefully; they vary widely in price, quality

By DANIEL BEEGAN
Associated Press Writer

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — It pays to shop around before putting your money down for a new 40-channel Citizens Band radio.

The prices vary widely, even for the same radio, and price tags on similar units may differ as much as $100.

Some of the best buys are found at some discount houses, which knock as much as $100 off name brand radios. Other discount houses, however, only stock little-known brands which may be difficult to get serviced.

A good deal may also be found at the small electronics shop, which specializes in service and installation of CBs, rather than sales.

The electronics technicians know they will pick up a few extra "Green Stamps," as CBers call money, installing the radio and selling antennas, power mikes and service.

So, many are willing to take a smaller profit on the radio itself.

The chain electronics stores also price the units competitively.

The situation has changed dramatically from a few years ago, when it was rare to find a good radio sold much below the manufacturer's suggested retail price.

A way to cut costs on the purchase of a radio is to make sure you are not getting features you don't need.

If you're planning to use a base station in your home, there is probably little need to have a radio with a digital clock. You can always look at a wall clock or at your watch to find out the time. The owners book which comes with the radio will tell whether the set has these features.

They can save many problems with unwanted electrical interference from the car's ignition system or other sources.

The same radio used in the car can also be used as a base station with the addition of a $25 power pack, a device which allows regular house current to power a radio designed for use with a car's 12-volt battery.

The power packs also may be used with tape decks designed for cars, so they can serve double duty.

Generally, mobile units, designed for car or truck use, are cheaper than the base stations made for use indoors.

Save all you can on the radio, but don't try to cut corners on the antenna. A good antenna is perhaps more important that a good radio for getting the signal out loud and clear.

Insurance group cites soaring auto repair costs

By MORTON MINTZ
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Automobile designs continue to cause costly repairs in low-speed crashes despite the enactment five years ago of a law intended to compel adoption of damage-resistant bumpers, the House Commerce Consumer Protection and Finance subcommittee was told recently.

The evidence came from filmed crash tests of 1977 models conducted by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, a non-profit industry group.

Institute vice president Benjamin Kelley said that "damage of a kind never before seen" was suffered by a full-size Chevrolet, an Impala, that crashed at 10 miles per hour into a wall angled at 30 degrees to the car's front. The damage shown in a screening of the film: the roof buckled.

The total repair bill — based on an hourly labor rate of $11 — was $928.

For the 1977 model year, General Motors re-designed the Impala and other full-size GM cars to improve efficiency by reducing weight and exterior dimensions. Essentially the same body shell as the Impala's is used for the Chevrolet Caprice and two each of Pontiac, Oldsmobile and Buick models.

Kelley said that to an extent not previously found in institute tests, doors on some cars jammed closed in low-speed frontal crashes, sealing the occupants inside so they could not escape quickly in event of fire or other emergency.

He said this happened when a Ford LTD crashed at 5 mph into a wall at an angle; when a Plymouth Gran Fury, a Ford LTD, a Ford Pinto and a Chevette had frontal angle crashes at 10 mph, and when a Ford LTD four-door sedan crashed head-on at 10 mph.

In the last instance, Kelley said, the front doors of the LTD — a rival to the Impala and Caprice — jammed. The repair bill was $978, including $292 for fixing the doors.

In contrast, Kelley testified, the doors of a 1975 Volvo, in an earlier test, didn't jam in a 35-mph frontal crash.

In 16 crashes in which a car rammed into the rear of an identical auto at 10 mph, the repair costs for both vehicles ranged from $4.40 for the Honda Civic CVCC to $594 — 135 times as much — for the Plymouth Gran Fury.

—In 10 mph head-on wall crashes of five models, the range was $397 for a Chevrolet Vega to $687 for the Ford LTD.

—In 5 mph frontal angle crashes into a wall, the range — among 16 models — of repair costs was $98 for a Chevelle (similar to certain Pontiac, Oldsmobile and Buick models) to $437 for a Datsun B210.

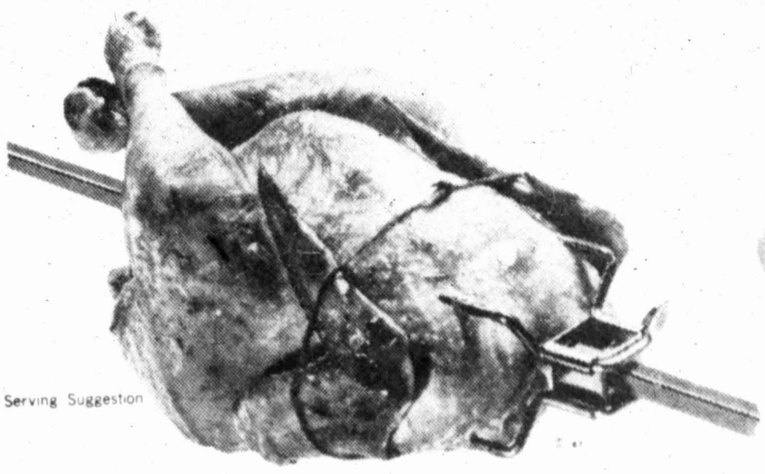

—In 16 similar crashes at 10 mph, the range was $458 for a Honda Civic CVSS to $928 for an Impala.

Kelley said that the Department of Transportation has not fulfilled the mandate of a 1972 law for a standard under which bumpers would have to reduce property damage in low-speed crashes, front or rear. The DOT said in February, 1976, that the standard would take effect, in two stages, in the 1979 and 1980 model years.

GARY OAKES and Claire Brooks have the pivotal roles of Tommy and Fiona in "Brigadoon," currently onstage at Fort Worth's Casa Manana. The Lerner-Lowe musical, set in a mythical Highland wood in Scotland, will play through Aug. 6, with performances at 8:15 p.m. daily except Sunday, and matinees at 2:30 p.m. Saturdays.

Odessan to share skill at Folklife Festival

SAN ANTONIO — A steady and artistic hand isn't all that a glassblower needs — a knowledge of science, engineering and history can be invaluable as well in the creation of delicate glass figures.

Visitors to the sixth annual Texas Folklife Festival here next week can learn more about glassblowing and glassblowers when they watch craftsman Joe Pyle of Odessa at work.

Pyle, a lab technician and glassblower for El Paso Products of Odessa, begins all his pieces with tube-shaped glass. He directs a stream of air through the flame of the lamp to soften his glass for working.

"Glass never ceases to amaze and interest me. It possesses amazing strength and surprising weakness," Pyle notes. "Myriad forms and shapes repose in its flexible state."

Pyle's artistry is one of the many sights to be offered at the Aug. 4-7 fair at San Antonio's HemisFair Plaza. The Texas Folklife Festival is a multicultural mixture of songs and dances, foods, games and contests, arts and crafts, and demonstrations of pioneer skills from Texas' past. The emphasis of this year's festival is on the state's frontier heritage. Visitors can learn old skills such as spinning and weaving, or lye soap making, can talk to tellers of tall tales, and can listen to a wide variety of country-Western-bluegrass music — all while sampling some of the most delicious foods imaginable.

The festival is presented each year under auspices of the Institute of Texan Cultures of The University of Texas at San Antonio. Admission to the Institute grounds at HemisFair Plaza will be $3 for adults, $1 for children under age 12.

Two area cities to host visit of famous circus

Permian Basin circus buffs can attend the famous Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus in either Abilene or Lubbock during the show's West Texas visit next week.

The circus will set up first in Abilene, for performances at 2:30 and 8 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday in Taylor County Coliseum.

A week from Friday, the circus opens a three-day stand in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum. The Aug. 5 opening performance will begin at 8 p.m. Additional performances are scheduled for 11 a.m. and 3 and 8 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 6, and 1:30 and 5:30 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 7.

Tickets for the four Abilene performances are on sale now at several Abilene outlets, including the Taylor County Coliseum box office.

Tickets for the Lubbock series of performances are available at Furr's Family Center in Lubbock or the Municipal Coliseum box office. Additional information on tickets may be obtained by telephoning 806-762-4616.

Artistic, commercial 'approaches' combined

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A year ago, Ken Ehrlich was in his third season as executive producer of Public TV's "Soundstage," the acclaimed pop and jazz music show made at station WTTW in Chicago.

Last month, he became producer of NBC's "Midnight Special," the made-in-Burbank pop series that often rocks and rolls to satisfy those souls still awake when it starts at 1 a.m. EDT on Saturdays.

Worlds apart? Not really, says Ehrlich, 33, a short, energetic man with a beard. Of course, with his old show, he concedes, "I wasn't committed to pulling a rating."

They tend to think about ratings at NBC, he adds, "so here it's different in that I'm trying to combine an artistic approach with a commercial approach."

Which means having certified audience-getters such as Neil Sedaka and Fleetwood Mac sharing the limelight with such lesser-known performers as singer Carol Bayer Sager.

But producer Ehrlich emphasizes he's never felt that in music wide popularity means bad and relative obscurity means good.

"My criteria for 'Soundstage' was always excellence," he says. "So I'd go from Barry Manilow to Randy Newman, from the Bee Gees to Tom Waits."

And, he said, the same criteria prevails now.

He gave a prompt "no" when asked if he's pressured to book "Midnight Special" guests simply on the basis of how hot they are in current record charts. He cited a recent show he coproduced.

It featured superstars George Benson and Van Morrison, but also included pianist-singer Dr. John, singer Etta James and tenor sax man Tom Scott, the last mainly known in jazz circles.

Excitement of Tut's tomb has not waned

By AMEI WALLACH
Newsday

In November 1922, after decades of dogged searching under the unrelenting Egyptian sun archaeologist Howard Carter discovered the 3,200-year-old tomb of young King Tutankhamun, and the world went wild.

For a decade, the discovery made worldwide headlines as, painstakingly, piece by glorious piece, the some 2,000 treasures were evacuated from their somtre resting-place. There was even talk of a curse connected with the tomb, fueled by a series of mysterious deaths and unexplainable happenings. Fashions, furniture, jewelry, films, songs and jokes were all influenced by the remarkable discovery.

And the excitement hasn't stopped yet. When some of King Tut's funeral treasures were displayed at the British Museum five years ago, people waited in line as long as eight hours to see them, and the pattern was repeated throughout Europe. Last spring, some 830,000 people jammed into the National Gallery in Washington during the four months 55 of the treasures were on view there in honor of the 55th anniversary of their discovery, and the gallery's switchboard operators fielded 50,000 phone calls a day.

The King's gold and alabaster and glass and jeweled possessions are in Chicago now as part of their two-year tour which will end in New York at the Metropolitan Museum of Art during the winter of 1978-79. But Wednesday evenings everyone had a chance to see them on the NBC special, "Tut: The Boy King."

What with the crowds in the galleries and the small size of the objects, the television special provides an unusual opportunity to look at everything close up. The camera lingered lovingly on the hieroglyphics on an alabaster cup, the tongue hanging out of an alabaster lion's mouth, the scene pounded out on the sides of a gold chest. It was a riveting experience. Unfortunately, the narration, delivered with snake oil-peddler smoothness by Orson Welles at his campiest, tried to make King Tut real to us by wondering if, while he was seated on his throne, the king's feet touched the floor, and, in general, applying modern psychology to a King who lived in a world totally different from ours, especially since, as Welles said, he was "a god at 9."

There's some Hollywood-style Egyptian music to set the tone and, here and there, some interesting information about daily life in ancient Egypt (Egyptians used black eyeliner around the eye to cut down the glare of the sun). But of the real information available about King Tut, and about the passion of the search and the elusiveness of the find that opened his tomb to the 20th century, there is little indeed.

And what a story it is! A story that came close to never happening. Just two months more and Howard Carter would have been forced to abandon his compulsive search that autumn of 1922, and Tut's bones might still rest in peace.

It was the Earl of Carnarvon who wanted to call it off. He was Carter's patron. Except for a hiatus during World War I, Carnarvon spent the better part of the century's first two decades financing Carter's search. Before it was all over, he would have spent more than the equivalent of $250,000 on the project and have lost his life at the age of 56. In his youth, he had been a dashing and irresponsible gay blade in the Edwardian manner, careening about alarmingly in one of England's first horseless carriages. In 1903, he cracked up his car and went to recover in Egypt where he was bitten by the Egyptology bug. By 1907 he and Carter were a team, setting up headquarters in the bleak and forbidding Valley of the Kings.

But by 1922, Carnarvon was ready to abandon what looked like a hopeless search. When he called Carter to the Carnarvon family seat, Highclere Castle in England, to break the news, Carter pleaded with him: just this one more season, he said, if nothing was found, he'd pay the expenses himself. Carnarvon relented and the two men shook on the deal.

Then one morning some months later, Carter arrived at the dig to find the workmen standing around, waiting for him with news that the beginning of a staircase had been uncovered. He only waited to verify the find before he closed up the steps and wired Carnarvon. By ferry, train, by ship, then train, then ferry, Carnarvon rushed to Egypt and Nov. 26, as Carter wrote later, "was the day of days, the most wonderful that I have ever lived through."

On that day he carefully made a hole in the tomb's sealed door and stood transfixed at what he saw in the candlelight: "strange animals, statues, and gold — everywhere the glint of gold."

That was only the anteroom. It took seven weeks to clear, photograph and catalog that. Then 10 more years before all the treasures had been safely excavated.

But strange things began happening. On the day the tomb was opened, a phython swallowed Carter's pet canary. Word spread that the python was the King's messenger of revenge. Then one day in April 1923, before the King's sarcophagus had been discovered, Carnarvon's barber nicked a misquito bite with his razor; it became infected and Carnarvon died. At the moment he died, all the lights in Cairo went out, giving more credence to the talk of a curse.

Carnarvon's son, the current Earl, remembers that death and blackout well since he was there at the time. NBC brought him over from London to publicize the special — and the curse — which he did with relish in an interview. At the St. Regis Hotel in New York, his butler of 40 years, along for the trip, opened the door for a visitor. And Lord Carnarvon, at 78, is a lord straight out of central casting, with a roving eye and a vocabularly spiked with "ducky" and "right-o." He completed his explanation of the proper form of address to himself by saying his friends called him Porchey, as in "Porchey, you look ravishing."

He said that the Highclere Scottish housekeeper told him later that at the hour his father died, another strange happening occurred. "At the identical moment, a little fox terrier bitch I had given my father sat up in the basket where she was sleeping in the housekeeper's room, and suddenly let out howls like a wolf. Foam flecked her lips, she gave a final howl and died."

For decades the curse has made good copy, while scholars have striven painstakingly to deny its existence. Lord Carnarvon, who is the self-appointed "only living authority on the curse" says, "I don't believe it and I don't disbelieve it."

However, soon after his father's death, a medium called Lord Carnarvon to warn him never to enter the tomb again, and he never has. On the one occasion a few days after his father died that he did journey to the tomb, he found it "boring as hell, dark and musty. I hated the sight of it."

MARK TWAIN LIVES AGAIN in the special one-man show which Midlander Doug McGrath will present at 8 p.m. Sunday at Theatre Centre. Proceeds from the show will benefit the Midland Community Theatre building fund, with tickets, priced $5, now on sale at the box office. Seats may be reserved by telephoning Theatre Centre at 682-2544.

Soap opera writer's style molded by sit-com background

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's a safe bet there's little that hasn't been anguish fodder for network soap operas — rape, drug abuse, adultery, out-of-wedlock birthings and other grimly treated ruinations.

So we asked Ann Marcus if humor may be the last barrier there.

"I don't know," said the lady, a cocreator of Norman Lear's nonnetwork "Mary Hartman" and "All That Glitters," and recently named head writer of NBC's "Days of Our Lives."

"It might be too difficult to do a regular daytime show, trying to hold that large an audience — which is mostly made up of women — with humor," she added, noting that such is very hard to sustain.

Oddly enough, Mrs. Marcus, one of TV's busiest wordsmiths, broke into tube work in 1961 with humor, writing first for a situation comedy called "The Hathaways," then for other sitcoms.

She labored in the mid-1960s on the evening version of "Peyton Place," but didn't join soap operadom's daytime derby until 1969, when she became head writer on CBS' "Love Is a Many-Splendored Thing," she says.

Then came 1½ years on CBS' "Search for Tomorrow," which she says she left after Lear, with no network hot for his spaced-out "Hartman" series, decided to syndicate it to stations.

She stayed with it one season, then moved to his "Glitters," a satirical daily series that reverses the usual male-female roles and may end soon unless Lear renews it by then.

Mrs. M. says she wrote the first two "Glitters" but left after she and Lear bitterly argued about the way the series should go.

She said she thought the Lear approach was too heavy-handed, dwelt too much on boudoir browsing and reflected stereotypes, albeit reversed, of the 1950s, not the '70s.

She spoke favorably, however, of what she calls "the first glorious year" of "Hartman" and its dead-pan, often black humor in a soap opera setting.

JAPANESE BALLET PRODIGY Kumiko Maeda, who was guest artist with Midland's Permian Civic Ballet last December, will perform with dancers of the Southwest Ballet Center in full-length productions of "Giselle" and "Swan Lake" Aug. 4 and 6 in Fort Worth's Wm. Edrington Scott Theatre. Miss Maeda, 17, recently won a bronze medal in world ballet competition at Moscow. Tickets for her Fort Worth performances have gone on sale at the Scott box office and at Central Ticket Agency.

Skater sees ice as art medium

"Those ice companies aren't for me," he says. "They have a monopoly on one format. They are all the same show. Only the names change. They are big extravaganzas, but they aren't really big on skating, so they have to substitute a lot of things for real skating excellence -a smile here, a wiggle there and an ever present chorus line of scantilydressed women."

"Skating in its purest form is beautiful in itself," the 27-yearold Canadian says. "I didn't think we needed chimpanzees coming out on skates. That's probably the most embarrassing thing for any skater to see.

"I could have a beautiful girl come out on the back of an elephant. I'm sure that would get a tremendous ovation. Or we could have costumes filled with sparklers. But I didn't want that.

"It basically comes down to gimmicks. I constantly had to fight against those things and make sure 'the skating was great.'"

The solution was to bring together skating superstars like Gordon McKellen Jr., threetime U.S. men's champion, Olympian Wendy Burge and the internationally ranked dance couple of Colleen O'Connor and Jim Millns. Then, after some economic setbacks to the show, his uncle, Sen. Alan Cranston of California, helped him find the necessary backing.

The result is "The Ice Show," which opened for four weeks at the Palace on Broadway and stayed an eytra four. Cranston and his cast of 15 moves to Los Angeles for four weeks on Aug. 5, then to Toronto, South America and Europe.

Determination has led Cranston to success after setbacks before.

During the 1976 Olympics in Innsbruck, where he won a bronze medal, he became disenchanted with the politics and narrow-mindedness of amateur skating.

"I was an adult being judged by children. They didn't know half as much as I did. I decided I could no longer take their games seriously.

"For me, everything shifted. My priorities were not to get a gold medal, but to hold on to my principles. I knew I was a pawn in one gigantic chess game. Under the circumstances, getting a bronze medal was an achievement."

He also says he had outgrown the Canadian Figure Skating Association, which he calls a bunch of old-fashioned autocrats who didn't believe in the star system. "I had to extricate myself completely."

At a crossroads, Cranston considered three routes: give up skating to concentrate on his other artistic pursuits—painting and writing—join one of the three established touring ice shows or build his own ice company.

He chose the latter, a decision that led to radical departure from the conventional.

During each performance, when he isn't on stage, he watches the other skaters "like a vulture. Somebody has to drive the truck, lower the boom and crack the whip. I'm the person."

The show-stopper in the troupe is McKellen, an energetic entertainer who is often called "the Chaplin of the ice." But Cranston says there is no competition for applause.

"The whole company operates as a family. If Gordy gets an ovation, the company as a whole feels great, that means we're going over and that's nice. As the father of the group, I'm only too happy to hear the audience responding to any of us."

Cranston's style is more interpretive, more expressive than McKellen's. Called the "Nureyev on ice," Cranston cringes at comparisons with other artists.

"I've always fought against being slotted as anything but myself," he says. "If Nureyev were to come to the show, I'm sure he'd be aghast and think 'I'm not anything like that.' Nor do I think I'm anything like him."

But the comparison holds in that both Cranston and Nureyev are thoroughly devoted to the perfection of their arts.

"As a skater I want to hit every possible audience," Cranston says. "Skating could be a great performing art. But it has to be taken seriously. It has to be given a certain respect and dignity."

Gaynor shows open

The show opened Tuesday night and will continue through Sunday in the Music Hall in Fair Park here. Weekday performances are at 8:15 and Saturday and Sunday presentations are scheduled for 2:30. Tickets for all performances are now on sale at the State Fair box office and at other ticket outlets in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Midland teacher plans September studio opening

The Audrey Walker School of Dance will open in early September at 3320 N. Big Sring St., near West Wadley Avenue. Classes in ballet, character and jazz dance will be in the curriculum, Mrs. Walker said, in addition to women's exercise classes. Classes will be offered for all age groups, from pre-school children to adults.

Prior to establishing her own studio, Mrs. Walker taught for many years at another Midland dance school. A member of the Texas Dance Teachers Association, she has been choreographer for a number of Kiwanis minstrel shows here in the past and has worked in Midland Community Theatre productions. For the last two seasons she has served as rehearsal director and production manager for the Midland-based Permian Civic Ballet.

Mrs. Walker has had special study with such noted dancer-teachers as Michael Simms, Eugene Slavin, Ferdinand Nault, Gus Giordano, Buster Cooper, Luigi and Matt Mattox.

Movies spoof styles

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

"THE SPY WHO LOVED ME" is vintage Bond. This time the indefatigable 007 joins with his former enemies of KGB, principally a nubile stunner played by Barbara Bach, in combatting a shipping magnate (Curt Jurgens) who collects nuclear submarines as a hobby. Director Lewis Gilbert maintains a modicum of believability in the outrageous goings-on, and Roger Moore no longer seems uncomfortable following Sean Connery's act.

"THE LAST REMAKE OF BEAU GESTE" makes a game try at finding laughs in a spoof of foreign legion movies. Some of the gags are outrageously funny, many are simply outrageous. Marty Feldman and Michael York play identical twins (twins?) who join the legion to escape something or other.

Classical music series concerts set outdoors

DALLAS — The Dallas Symphony Orchestra has initiated a new classical music series for summer.

The outdoor concerts are being held at 7171 Forest Lane, on the grounds of Electronic Data Systems.

Initiating the second weekend of the series at 8:45 p.m. Friday will be pianist Van Cliburn who will join the orchestra and guest conductor Francois Huybrechts in performances of Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto and Tchaikovsky's First Concerto.

Saturday night, Huybrechts will conduct the orchestra in an all-Brahms program, including the Symphony No. 2, the "Academic Festival" overture and the "Variations on a Theme by Haydn."

The third and last weekend in the concert series will feature Louis Lane as conductor of the orchestra. The Aug. 5 concert will have cellist Ko Iwasaki as solo artist, performing Bloch's "Schelomo" and the orchestra playing Schubert's 7th Symphony. For the Aug. 6 concert, pianist Eugene Istomin will join Lane and the Dallas Symphony in a Beethoven program which will include the Piano Concerto No. 3 and the Symphony No. 6.

Cartoon showing depicts nation's political story

SAN ANTONIO — An entire panorama of American history as depicted by political cartoonists is on exhibit at San Antonio's Witte Memorial Museum.

"The Image of America in Caricature and Cartoon" is a photo duplicate exhibition of some 250 works by foreign and native artists and illustrators from exery era of the nation's development. The show has assembled by the Amon Carter Museum of Fort Worth, through the cooperation of the Swann Foundation and the National Lincoln Corporation and with the assiotance of the National Endowment for the Arts, a federal agency.

Beginning with Benjamin Franklin's famous 1754 cartoon of a several colonial snake. ("Join, the show traces or Die"), the American Revolution, the Civil War, the labor movement, women's rights, the Great Depression, Prohibition, sports, the world wars, Korea, Vietnam and Watergate. Caricatures of famous personalities are interspersed chronologically with the cartoons.

The exhibition, on display in the Witte Museum's first floor galleries, will remain here through Sept. 4. The museum is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekends.

Mogollon lecture's subject

EL PASO — Mogollon, one of the most famous ghost towns of New Mexico, will be the subject of a special lecture Sunday afternoon in the El Paso Museum of Art.

Bill Rakocy, Southwesterm artist and curator of collections at the El Paso museum, will telll historical and legendary stories of Mogollon in a program scheduled for 3 p.m. Sunday in the museum auditorium.

Rakocy's interest and extensive research into the history of the Mogollon area led to the publication of his book, "Mogollon Diary," recently.

Stamp will commemorate U. S.-Canadian bridge

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

To commemorate the 50th anniversary of the completion of the Peace Bridge between the United States and Canada, a new 13-cent U.S. stamp will be issued on Aug. 4 by the U.S. Postal Service. The Peace Bridge spans the longest unguarded border in the history of the world and symbolizes the peaceful relations between the two countries.

The Canada Post Office is also issuing a commemorative stamp to mark the golden anniversary of the dedication of the bridge, crossing the Niagara River between Buffalo, N.Y., and Fort Erie, Ontario. A joint first day of issue ceremony will be conducted on Aug. 4 in Buffalo.

It is interesting to note that when the bridge was completed in 1927, it linked Fort Porter at Buffalo and Fort Erie on the Ontario side — the two forts that had engaged in the last conflict between the United States and Canada during the War of 1812.

The usual two methods of obtaining first day cancellations are as follows: Collectors may purchase their own stamps at their local post offices and affix them to their own envelopes. All envelopes must be addressed and peelable return address labels are recommended. Stamps must be placed in the upper right corner of envelopes and return addresses placed low and to the left.

Congressman softens tobacco subsidy campaign

By MARY RUSSELL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Rep. James Johnson (R-Colo.) had come a long way, baby, with his crusade to knock out subsidies for tobacco growers.

Since he had first argued over a month ago that it is schizophrenic for the government to subsidize tobacco growers to the tune of some $4 million a year while spending money to warn against the health effects of smoking tobacco, Johnson had received what Rep. William Natcher (D-Ky.) called "considerable publicity." There were dozens of news stories, network TV coverage and support from Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano.

A network news team sent to North Carolnia reported that tobacco farmers there were angry and scared over what they considered a serious threat to their livelihood.

When it came time for Johnson to offer his amendment ending tobacco price supports to the farm bill, Johnson announced he wouldn't.

House members from tobacco-growing states winked knowingly and said Johnson had been "beet down."

Johnson represents one of the largest sugar-beet-growing districts in the country. Sugar growers are in deep trouble, because the bottom has fallen out of the world market and sugar that sold for 60 cents a pound a few years ago is selling for 8 to 10 cents a pound this year, while it costs 13 cents a pound to produce.

Without government support, domestic sugar-growers contend, they will be driven out of business by foreign sugar-growers.

Though the tobaccco-state members demur at putting it in such crude terms, they told Johnson their support for a sugar subsidy depended on his dropping the crusade against tobacco subsidies.

"We sweetened the pot," Rep. Charles Rose (D-N.C.) said. "He wanted help on his sugar problem. We wanted help on tobacco. We convinced him to modify his position."

Rep. Walter Jones (D-N.C.), chairman of the tobacco subcommittee, assured Johnson he would hold hearings on tobacco supports if he lessened his opposition. Tobaccostate members also agreed they would not object if Johnson offered an amendment to knock out some $25 million in foreign tobacco sales under the Food for Peace plan.

"There was no direct connection between support for the sugar subsidy (which passed the House last Friday), but indirectly we tried to reason with him that it would be better if all of us in trouble hung together rather than apart," Jones said.

Jones talked to Horace Godfrey, a former Agriculture Department administrator from North Carolina, who now lobbies for Florida, Louisiana and Texas sugar-cane growers.

Godfrey said, "I just told him (Johnson) we don't want to make the tobacco boys mad at us."

Godfrey also admitted he made sure the "60 to 70 sugar growers in here last week" talked to Johnson.

"We talked about those things," Johnson admitted. "It's nice to give me all that credit. But I don't know what I had to trade ... When Horace Godfrey came and said I could hurt the sugar program, I was laughing, because I said, 'Look at all those Democrats from sugar-growing states. Who's going to vote against them?'"

Tuesday Johnson offered his admendment to knock out some $24 million in the sale of subsidized tobacco under the Food for Peace program.

He said on the floor the amendment was "being opposed because it represents the first tiny inroad into the isolated, sacrosanct world of tobacco subsidies."

He called tobacco "cannon fodder for cancer" and said 890,000 people could be fed with the $24 million.

Rep. William Natcher (D-Ky.) was enraged. "We don't produce any sugar beets in my home county," he shouted. "But the 20 states that produced tobacco marched down the aisle for the sugar bill. When sugar is in trouble, my people are concerned."

Johnson's amendment was watered down to say only that food and fibre should be a priority for sales under the Food for Peace program.

That passed 259 to 151.

Doing it yourself? Here's the answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q.—I have an old bureau that I picked up at a cheap price from a second-hand store. While the finish, apparently varnish, seems in good condition, it is badly in need of a cleaning. I recall reading somewhere that furniture could be cleaned with soap and water, but before I start, I want to be sure that my memory is correct. Can a piece of old furniture be washed this way to remove dirt and grime?

A.—Yes, if it is done carefully. This means wiping with a cloth dipped in a mixture of water and a mild soap and immediately rinsing off the mixture with clear water. Don't saturate the cloth, just keep it moderately wet. In wiping, be very careful that none of the water gets near or into any of the joints. All this is predicated on the fact that the finish, as you think, is varnish. If it should be shellac, the water might cause the finish to develop white spots. Better try first on a small, inconspicuous area.

Q.—Some years ago I visited a friend whose patio had the impressions of leaves in the concrete. I since have moved away from the city where my friend lived without having learned how this effect was created. I now want to build a patio of my own and would like to make similar designs in the concrete. Can you tell me how this is done?

A.—The same way any impression is made in concrete — by imbedding the object in the wet mixture after it has been troweled. Just be certain that each leaf rests far enough in the concrete to make an impression, but not so deeply that it cannot be removed after the concrete has set. Don't let any of the mixture get on top of the leaves or the removal will become difficult and messy.

Q.—One of our outside wall faucets has developed a small opening between the metal and the house. What should be used to fill the gap?

A.—A caulking compound. First, clean the area of any loose bits of old filler material. Squeeze the compound around and behind the faucet flange. If you use a latex caulk, it can be applied even if the surface is slightly damp.

Q. —I want to install some insulation myself and intend to use the fiber glass type. What's the difference between blankets and batts? And what can you tell me about the kinds of loose fill?

A.—The blankets are rolls of insulation, with or without vapor barriers. The batts are similar to blankets, except that they are cut into 4-foot and 8-foot lengths. Pouring wool is loose insulation usually meant to be poured into attic floors. Blowing wool is loose insulation for application by a contractor, whose uses pneumatic equipment for the job. In an unobstructed attic space without flooring, you can use batts, which are simply laid in place without stapling. Loose fill insulation usually is used when access to the attic is difficult or if it has a floor, in which case it is blown into the attic through flexible tubing.

Q. — I'm enclosing an unheated crawl space on all four sides. How big should the vents be? I'm putting one on each side.

A. — Each vent should be one square foot for each 150 square feet of crawl space area. This basic minimum size should be increased if the vents are to be protected by screens or rain louvers.

There are finesses in three suits, but you have no trouble rejecting the diamond finesse. How do you chose between spades and clubs?

The slam is easy if you can guess who has the queen of spades, but it would be foolish to guess if you couldn't see the East-West cards. Work out the best line of play as though you were answering the contest in "Popular Bridge" a few months ago.

You lead a heart to the king and discover that both opponents follow suit. Now the slam is unbeatable.

Draw two more rounds of trumps, ending in your hand. Then lead a club and finesse with dummy's nine.

NO SAFE RETURN

You expect to lose this trick, of course, but East has no safe return. He must give dummy a free finesse for the 12th trick. Without that finesse you started with 11 sure tricks: five trumps in your own hand, one spade ruff in dummy, two top spades, two top diamonds and the ace of clubs.

Many other lines of play are very tempting, but there's nothing like being absolutely sure.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner bids one heart as dealer, and the next player passes. You hold: S-Q9875; H-2; D-107632; C-43. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. One heart may be a poor contract, but you may finish in something much worse if you bid with this kind of garbage. The best way to keep out of trouble with a bad hand is to open your mouth, say "Pass," and then close your mouth.

Austin Bureau
By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN—Texans concerned with water development will gather in Dallas Aug. 1 and 2 to present their views on a proposed national water policy being developed by the Carter Administration.

They may have some harsh comments—particularly on Federal regulation of groundwater.

President Jimmy Carter plans to announce his decision on a national water policy (an area where he has had—and continues to have—clashes with Congress) on or about Nov. 1.

The Dallas meeting is one of eight across the country to get reaction to "policy option papers" developed through five committees composed principally of Federal agencies, to which some state representatives were added at the request of groups such as the National Water Conference.

One of the 10 state representatives is Russell Bean, Lubbock, long active in water development matters.

Officials from the Texas Water Development Board are to be in Dallas for the session there—and TWDB Executive Director James Rose has asked water officials from neighboring states (particularly those involved in the coordinated High Plains Council) to meet with the Texas delegation while there to make a coordinated presentation.

The policy option papers are to be used in developing the policy (which doesn't include water quality—the subject of a separate paper.

However, the proposals do note a "lack of coordination between water quality and water quantity planning efforts, leading to instances of more costly or less effective solutions...than would be the case if the planning were less compartmentalized."

But it is the options on groundwater that are likely to prove most unpalatable to Texans—particularly those in West Texas and the High Plains.

"Many state water rights systems have developed without regard to the physical fact that surface water is related to groundwater and certain sources of groundwater are related to each other," one paper states.

That, it says, may result in "inequitable and ineficient uses and effects, while making rational management more difficult."

The Federal government "does have an interest" in management of groundwater, the paper says, "particularly if State law might threaten the viability of a Federal project or program," including where a state might continue to grant rights in streams in which "existing diversions make water quality standards difficult to attain."

Or, it adds, "where Federal reclamation storage facilities, and thus delivery capabilities and cost recovery prospects, are endangered due to decreased surface flows resulting from upstream groundwater withdrawals."

The options suggested are:

—Requiring states to "take account of these physical relationships" (including legal action where Federal proprietary interests in a dam or reservoir are damaged).

—Developing a comprehensive model water code (perhaps through the Council of State Governments or a similar entity).

—Conditioning future water quality grants, flood control projects, etc., upon the states implementing "legal and administrative systems" coordinating ground and surface water development.

—Having the Federal government "review all licenses, contracts and permits" to insure that "all actions taken under them are consistent with an integrated approach to water resources management."

Water Rights Commission Chairman Joe Carter sees the recommendations as another step in the attempt by Federal officials to control groundwater—by the threat of cutting off funds for non-compliance.

"I think the Feds will try," Carter says, "unless Congress heads them off...it's another step in an on-going effort."

Carter also predicts even the threat of a cutoff of funds isn't likely to persuade Texas lawmakers to give in on that issue—noting that in Texas, groundwater is considered the property of the overlying land owner.

The Federal attitude, Carter says, is that "the way to conserve water...is not to use any."

The papers also propose requiring adjudication and recording of all water rights in the states, development of a data bank of water rights established under state law, reviewing existing state water law systems to determine if they "promote equity, efficiency and environmental quality consistent with Federal policy"—or having the Federal government "purchase rights to water and re-allocate them to the most socially desirable or economically productive use."

"Purchases could be through voluntary sales or through eminent domain procedures," the paper concludes.

That approach isn't likely to win many supporters from Texas.

The paper also states that conservation efforts are hindered because "the price of water is insufficient to provide the incentives necessary to promote efficiency and prevent wasteful use."

"My summer power bill is lower than my neighbor's."

Newsday

NEW YORK — People have been taking aspirin of a sort (acetylsalicylic acid) for 2,300 years — although, for most of that time, they didn't know it.

Legend has it that the ancient physician Hipocrates advised his patients to chew willow bark for the relief of pain, not knowing that it contained salicin, a chemical cousin of aspirn. Salicin was isolated from the evil-tasting willow bark in 1889, and has since become such a popular nonprescription pain killer that more than 25 million pounds of salicylate-containing compounds are produced in the United States each year.

Aspirin has been around for so long in such common use, in fact, that most people take its beneficial effects as an analgesic or pain-reliever for granted and never wonder how it works. That may be just as well, since exactly how it does work is still something of a mystery.

Some scientists believe it acts on the central nervous system and the pain-sensing centers of the brain to raise the body's pain threshold (the point at which the pain is perceived.) Other scientists, though, have a different theory, and believe aspirin works locally by easing the pain at the spot where it occurs.

Still others believe part of its pain-relieving properties are due to a unique ability to stop the aggregation of platelets, little particles in the blood whose main job is to join together to plug up a blood vessel that has been cut. Those scientists believe platelets come together at times in a kind of "sludging" that causes pain, but which is stopped by aspirin.

Since aspirin is one of the few medications available that can relieve pain, reduce fever and relieve the aches of inflammation all at the same time, effectively and at low cost, more than 14 million physician recommendations for aspirin are made each year. That triple ability helps make aspirin a good cold medicine and an effective remedy for minor arthritis pain, among other things.

Despite its innocuous look and the common admonition to "take two aspirin," however, that medication is one of the most frequently abused drugs available to the public. At times, it can be dangerous.

Although most people can take aspirin without ill effects, some people experience stomach upsets with aspirin and are advised to use other pain-relievers — such as acetaminophen (Tylenol) — that contain no salicylates. Those who have ulcers, or have symptoms similar to those for ulcers, should keep away from aspirin since it has been known to cause gastric hemmorrhaging.

To make your use of aspirin's good qualities safer, here are some common-sense suggestions to follow:

—Never mix aspirin with beer, wine or liquor. Alcohol makes the stomach lining supersensitive to the irritating effects of salicylates, and bleeding from the stomach wall can occur.

—Never mix aspirin and anticoagulants (bloodthinners) since that combination, too, can lead to massive bleeding.

—If you're taking a strong anti-inflammatory drug for arthritis, don't take aspirin, too. You may develop painful stomach irritation, and aspirin can reduce the effectiveness of some such products.

—If you must take a diabetes medication like Orinase, leave aspirin alone. The interaction can cause drastic decreases in blood sugar.

—Vitamin C prolongs and intensifies the action of aspirin, an interaction which, though possibly useful, can also be dangerous, causing headaches and dizziness in some people.

—If you are pregnant, ask your physician about using aspirin. Taken during pregnancy it can sometimes prolong labor, complicate delivery and cause newborn babies to be susceptible to bleeding.

—Aspirin can be harmful to a child. Be cautious not to exceed dosage recommendations for children. There are three different ways generally used to calcualte the amount of a drug to give a child; many experts feel that whichever rule results in the lowest dosage is the best to follow:

Clark's Rule — Divide the weight of the child in pounds by 150. The resulting fraction will equal the fraction of an adult dosage, as prescribed on the label, that the child may safely take.

Young's Rule — Divide the age of the child by the child's age plus 12. The resulting fraction will represent the portion of an adult dose recommended for a child.

—Follow dosage recommendations strictly, whether they're those printed on the package or those given by your doctor.

—When taking aspirin, always swallow it with a full glass of water, milk or other fluids. The fluid will aid in dissolving the medication and dilute its ability to irritate the stomach.

—Keep the aspirin bottle out of the reach of children. Don't trust the so-called "childproof" bottles for safety. Aspirin overdose can kill a child.

—Aspirin is the most effective nonprescription pain medicine available — and all aspirin is the same. Don't be fooled by manufacturer claims of extra strength. All aspirin products must meet the same standards of effectiveness and strength, so buy the least expensive type of aspirin you can find.

Argentina gets hospital

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Construction is under way in Buenos Aires of a National Pediatrics Hospital which will be completed in 1980.

It will be the largest children's hospital in South America and will be among the most advanced of its kind in the world, hospital officials say.

Newsday

NEW YORK — Call it professional rivalry. Or call it pride. Or vanity or jealousy. Or don't put any label on it at all, but if you invite Carlton Fisk and Thurman Munson to the same banquet, better seat them at separate tables.

"We don't send each other Christmas cards, put it that way," Fisk said.

Fisk catches for the Red Sox. He was the American League's No. 1 catcher in the All-Star voting. Munson catches for the Yankees. He was No. 2. It's been going on like that in the years they've been in the league together.

Even during the relative pacifism of spring training, there was an air of belligerence in the way they merely passed each other on the field. "He's not one of my best friends, nor is he my worst of enemies," Fisk said back then. What does that mean? "It means," Fisk replied, "I don't like him worth a damn."

And after the exhibition game in which Fisk had taken a challenging step toward the mound because a Yankee pitch had sailed over his head, Munson declared Fisk was fortunate he had gone no farther. "He would have had his butt kicked," Munson said.

CLEARLY THIS feeling is not a one-way street. But just why they feel the way they do about each other — and how much of it do they feel? The fued has gone on so long that it appears to be a matter of habit.

Fisk said before the All-Star game, "I don't even know him so how do I know if there's animosity? It's a professional rivalry."

But, he concluded, whatever the feeling was, there was more of it a couple of years ago. "I think there's something of it left," Fisk said. "We're out to beat each other. I feel personally challenged every time we play the Yankees. I'm sure he does, too. I know that rivalry was here before either of us came on the scene."

Munson was Rookie of the Year in 1970. Just when he was about to take the mantle of outstanding catcher in the league, Fisk came along to be Rookie of the Year in 1972. In four of their six interlocking seasons, Fisk has topped Munson in the All-Star voting. Even when Munson won the honor in 1975, it rankled him that Fisk was able to finish second as a write-in even though he had been on the disabled list most of the first half of the season.

A number of players may not care to play in the All-Star game, but almost all of them want the honor of being elected. When this year's voting pattern became apparent, Munson became sarcastic. "We'll have a hell of a backup catcher," he said.

BOTH PRESENTED excellent statistics. Fisk had a .311 average, 16 homers and 53 runs batted in. Munson had a .314 average, 13 homers and was second in the league with 68 RBI. And Munson had won the Most Valuable Player Award last season, the highest of honors. Still he felt he wasn't getting the recognition he deserved.

"It used to bother me more than it does," Munson said. "I still don't like it."

"How about if I was the backup? Fisk said. "I'm sure I'd have felt something about it."

Munson says his resentment is less because he's getting recognition from "people who matter." But he touches on other aspects he resents. Fisk is tall and lean with the look of a Minuteman carved out of Vermont granite.

When he was a hero in a losing cause in the 1975 World Series, a tobacco company paid big money to use him in television commercials. American Express also uses him in some of its advertisements. Munson is built the other way. He has been descriptively nicknamed Squatty Body, Turtle and Stump. He was a hero in a losing cause last World Series and has been seen on television only in his customary dirt-stained Yankee uniform.

"Maybe it's because Fisk is a big, tall good-looking guy; he looks like what an All-Star catcher should look like," Munson mused recently. "I'm short, I'm pudgy, I don't look good in a uniform."

THERE ARE the constant comparisons on the field, beginning with the fact that Fisk looks better at whatever he does.

He throws with the classic upright style while Munson, striving to get the ball away quicker, throws sidearm in a banana arc. Fisk is considered slightly better defensively. Munson has always been better offensively, but when Fisk has been healthy he's hit more home runs.

His big one decided the magnificient sixth game of the 1975 World Series in the 12th inning and prompted a movement to rename Boston's ritziest hotel the Fisk Carlton. That memorable blow stole some of the glamor of Munson's first 100 RBI season.

Salinas stopped, but South wins

By TFRRY WILLIAMSON
R-T Sports Writer

DALLAS — The Rebels nipped the Yanks, 101-97, as expected Wednesday night in the Dallas Civic Arena in the 33rd annual High School All-Star basketball game, but the way they did it was what was unexpected.

Corpus Christi Moody's Charles Moore, who is headed for Southern Illinois, pumped in 28 points to lead the South to the victory while Kerville-Tivy's Robert Hubble, a Rice recruit, did a lot of damage with 18 markers.

However, it looked like a North rout for most of the game, and the South had to rally from a 50-37 deficit to take the win.

EARLY IN the game, Dallas Carter's Vernon Smith, who is headed for Texas A&M and who won most valuable player honors, dominated the action with 22 points and 17 rebounds. He also dominated the highly recruited Gilbert Salinas of San Antonio Burbank, and that more than anything else earned him the MVP award.

Salinas, the 6-foot-11 giant who is headed for Notre Dame, was pushed around by the 6-6 Smith, who played at about 10-3. Salinas scored only nine points in the game, hitting only one of eight from the field and getting only four rebounds. Salinas did not score until the 5:58 mark of the final period, but all nine of his points did come during the South's catch up drive at the wire.

Moore's 20-foot jumper from the top of the key tied the game at 90 for the first time in the contest with 5:08 left, and the game was knotted four more times before Salinas gave the South the lead for good at 99-97 with 52 seconds remaining.

With Salinas paying the price for meeting Smith the first time in his cage career, Moore, a 6-7 postman, was the only thing that kept the South from falling apart early in the game. He kept hitting, but the North's front line of Smith and Rynn Wright of Dallas Roosevelt, who had 10 points and good tough board play, was the best.

The North bench, however, could not produce the depth needed when Wright and 6-7 Ralph McPherson, who is headed for Texas Tech, fouled out.

"To tell you the truth, I was really worried about Moore," South coach Boyce Honea of Houston Milby said after the game. "He did not look very good in workouts this week. He kept telling me that he would be ready for the game, but I thought if we were going to win, we would have to have more than we got from Gilbert (Salinas)."

"Foul trouble definitely hurt our big boys," Cleveland said. "And we got into a little trouble with our guards in the last quarter. I don't want to knock anyone, but it's tough to coach this type of contest when you have a rule that you have to play everybody. That's good really, but it sure hurt us. I thought Smith was the best man on the floor."

Stanton's Tim Glynn played only sparingly and ended with one point for the North. He had two rebounds, but missed on three field goal attempts.

Nets desert New York

By The Associated Press

BASKETBALL

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The Nets will enter into a 30-year lease with the New Jersey Sports Authority for an arena yet to be built at the Meadowlands complex, club president Roy Boe said.

Boe, whose National basketball Association franchise was shifted from Uniondale, N.Y. to New Jersey on Tuesday, signed a two-year lease with Rutgers University to play at its new 8,700-seat gymnasium in Piscataway.

TENNIS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Top-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina rallied from a slow start to post a 4-6, 6-2, 6-3 victory over unheralded Frank Gebert of West Germany in a first-round match at the $125,000 Louisville International Tennis Classic.

In other first-round matches, seventh-seeded Phil Dent of Australia defeated John Marks 6-1, 6-3, fourth-seeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland crushed Larry Turville 6-1, 6-1 and No. 9 John Alexander was upset by Henry Bunis 6-4, 6-2.

BASEBALL

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Former Texas Rangers Manager Frank Lucchesi plans to file a personal injury suit against Lenny Randle, the former Texas infielder who has been charged with assaulting Lucchesi this spring, the Orlando Sentinel-Star has reported.

The Sentinel-Star said Luchesi was in Orlando Wednesday to meet with a local attorney experienced in civil suits. It is expected the suit against Randle will be filed in circuit court next month, the paper said.

Lucchesi declined to comment on his plans.

GOLF

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tom Kite made his first start as a defending champion today, and he loves it.

Only four of the year's top 10 money-winners are in the 156-man field that is chasing a $40,000 first prize in the 72-hole test over the 6,687-yard, par-71 Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course.

YACHTING

NEWPORT, R.I. — Ted Turner and defender Courageus outdueled sailmaker Lowell North and Enterprise, winning the final America's Cup observation trial race of the month on the final leg by 43 seconds.

The two yachts were close throughout, with Enterprise taking the start by a slim three seconds on the 13.5-mile Olympic course. However, Courageous went ahead at the weather mark by eight seconds.

SMU still has a long climb

BY TERRY WILLIAMSON

DALLAS — Ron Meyer, who is heading into his second year as the head grid boss of Southern Methodist University, seems to know where he is going, but he just hasn't arrived at his destination yet.

A year ago in Houston, when he was entering his first Southwest Conference campaign, he said that his Mustangs would be competing not only for the SWC title, but also shooting for national prestige. He is not heading from that goal.

"We are pleased at where our program at SMU is heading," Meyer said this week during the Texas High School Coaches Association convention. "We had what we feel was a good recruiting year, but the question is how much can freshmen help your program."

The concensus seems to read that Meyer will not have nearly enough help to do much better then the 3-8 record of a year ago. The emphasis is on rebuilding for the future.

THE MUSTANGS will have to start rebuilding without quarterback Ricky Wesson, who was lost to graduation. That means that a freshman will probably draw the assignment, and that's tough in a conference where nearly every squad will have top quarterbacks.

"We were pleased with the four freshmen quarterbacks we signed this year," Meyer noted. "Mike Ford, Mark Gibson, James Mobley and Durham, N.C., player Alan Stephenson will all get a shot at the job."

Meyer is realistic about this year's chances, and doesn't see much hope of winning the conference, but says the future of SMU is in the near future. Meyer is serious when he talks of being a national power.

"Nobody likes to lose," Meyer said. "So we want a program that will be tops in the country. If you go 11-0, you can win the national championship. That's what we have to do, and I've said before that we will have a chance to do that in five years from the time I came to SMU. We may not do it, but I know we will have a chance."

IT IS general knowledge, however, that the Mustangs will not be able to line up this year with any power in the nation with a chance to win. Meyer learned his lesson last year when he predicted a win over Alabama, only to lose 56-3.

Offensively, running back Arthur Whittington is the only bright spot at this point. And Meyer doesn't even think his star performer is as good as some of the other backs in the conference.

"We've got to work harder than anyone in the conference," Meyer said. "We just don't have the talent of Houston, Tech or A&M. About the only school that we are equal with talent-wise is Rice. TCU has better talent than we do.

"Our salvation was the Arkansas game (SMU won 35-31). If we'd gone 2-9, we would be looking down a gun barrel . That game gave us a good springboard for recruiting, and that is where it's at for me at this point in time."

SMU will have only 74 players on scholarship this fall. That is considerably below the 95 player limit imposed by the NCAA.

"When we line up against TCU this year in our first game, we will have six or seven freshmen starting, and 18 may possibly play," Meyer noted. "By the time they are seniors, they are going to have a lot of playing time under their belts. I know that."

ONE OF the big holes this year that will have to be filled is at fullback. It could be the big trouble spot on the team. Milton Jones, a former standout at Midland Lee, is not returning to SMU this fall. Meyer said the job was his for the taking.

"The fullback job is definitely up in the air," Meyer said. "I think Milton had a lot of promise, and we could have used him. But Milton just had a lack of maturity as far as I'm concerned.

"I asked him to pre-register about 10 times last year and he didn't do it. I also didn't feel like he showed up at the trainer often enough to help with his injury problems. I guess he just didn't want to work for it.

"I'm not saying that I kicked him off the team, but I didn't offer him a uniform."

Jones was out all season with a hip injury last year. In his freshman season, he broke one run for over 70 yards and a touchdown against Texas Tech.

Pastorini is sued

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini has been named in a $1.5 million damage suit filed by the parents of a young girl who was killed in a dragboat accident.

Two dragboat associations also were named in the suit filed Wednesday by Hubert and Bobbie Gaskins of Houston whose 10-year-old daughter, Sherry, was killed May 22 when Pastorini's boat crashed into a group of spectators at a lake in Liberty County.

Eubanks eliminated from meet

ABERNATHY — The Eubanks Pistons of Midland were eliminated by Odessa Natural, 9-8, Wednesday in the District Texas Teen-Age Sophomore Baseball Tournament.

The game was played in a dust storm and during the blowing dust, the Odessans took advantage to score four runs in the third inning off loser Scott Collyer. Justin Morett also worked on the mound for the Tall City team.

Midland's other entry — Furr's remains unbeaten in the tournament and tangles with Andrews, which is also unbeaten in two games at 7:30 p.m. today.

Rain stops Cubs, Tulsa

Manager Jim Saul will pitch Randy Martz, 1-1, and Andy Muhlstock, 7-3, the same pair which gave Midland its third doubleheader sweep of the season against Shreveport last week.

The Drillers will counter with Mark Soroko, 3-1, and either Ray Rainbolt, 7-2, or Rick Kemp, 2-4.

Injuries rock Cowboys

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — It's been a bad week for running backs in the Dallas Cowboys training camp as several have suffered apparently minor injuries.

And the Cowboys were playing musical lineman Wednesday, particularly at right tackle where a man who was filling in for a player injured earlier was himself felled for about two days by a neck sprain.

Jim Eidson, a second-year tackle, who had been filling in for injured All Pro Rayfield Wright, suffered a neck sprain and is expected to miss several days of practice.

Wright has returned to Dallas and is to undergo tests on his troublesome right knee Thursday and Friday to determine the extent of his injuries.

Pat Donovan, a third-year man who last year backed up both Wright and veteran Ralph Neely at offensive tackle, worked in place of Eidson Wednesday.

Charles Young, a veteran running back who suffered a sprained thumb Sunday, suffered a right knee sprain and will be out for about two days. Young joined fellow running backs Doug Dennison and Scott Laidlaw, who were sidelined earlier with hamstring strains.

Heisman Trophy winner Tony Dorsett became the center of more concern Wednesday when he bruised his right knee in the same area where he suffered a slight sprain last Thursday in a scrimmage.

Odessa's Shepard unhappy over spear-carrying role

BY TERRY WILLIAMSON
R-T Sports Writer

DALLAS — Sherman's Tommy Hudspeth, coach of the North squad, is going with experience at quarterback in tonight's 43rd annual North-South High School All-Star game at 7:30 in the Cotton Bowl, and Odessa High's Darrell Shepard is not pleased with the decision.

Hudspeth named Highland Park's Scott Smith as starting quarterback tonight with Shepard left playing the role of No. 2 for the first time in his life.

"Scott used the Houston Veer offense that we will use while he was in high school," Hudspeth said. "Darrell is picking it up real fast, and we plan to alternate them on consecutive series of plays."

SHEPARD, HEADED for the University of Houston where the Houston Veer was introduced by Bill Yeoman, thought this would be a good time to get an early trial with the veer. Smith is Baylor bound and this will be his last time to see the veer as an operator.

"I sure don't want to alternate with Smith," Shepard said, refusing to hide his feelings at Hudspeth's decision. "I bet it will change when I get in there. If I have to run 1,000 yards to stay in, I will.

"I want to live up to my reputation here. I've never sat on the bench in my life, and I don't want to start now. I don't have anything against Smith, but I want to play. I think they are going to find it hard to get me out of the game after I get in."

The other District 5-4A players, however have earned starting nods. San Angelo's Bill Woodard will join Hamlin's Delbert Thompson at running back while Abilene Cooper's Tim Orr will start at free safety.

OTHER WEST Texas stars to earn starting berths for the North are Plains' Danny Bell, tight end; Monahans' Randy Wilson, defensive end; Hamlin's Thompson and Stamford's Don Earl, defensive cornerback. Hamlin's Thompson is the only two-way starter, playing corner on defense. Wogard and Orr are headed for Texas Tech.

Baytown Sterling's Al Dennis, the South coach, also is having a war at quarterback, but things don't seem to be as tense in the Rebel camp.

Port Neches-Groves' Ricky Ethridge, who is headed for Texas Tech, and Mike Mosley, Humble, who signed with Texas A&M, probably will share quarterback time.

"They are both really good," Dennis said. "They understand that both will play a lot. Both can help us."

The North seems to hold the edge in the line. The Yankee trench is headed by giant Hosea Taylor, Longview, 6-5, 278 pounds and Houston bound.

Cuero's Joe Campbell leads the beef brigade for the South at 6-1, 250.

The North has won 24 times while losing 15 with three games ending in ties.

Hagar's 68 sets pace

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Joe Hager of Dallas, Tex., carded a four-under-par 68 Wednesday to take medalist honors with a 139 after the two days of qualifying play in the 56th annual Broadmoor Men's Invitational Golf Tournament.

Qualifying was scheduled for Monday and Tuesday but was delayed by rain. A double round is scheduled Saturday and the 36-hole finals will be played Sunday.

Lee Mikles of Camarillo, Calif., and Dow Finsterwald Jr. of Colorado Springs shot 141 in the two-day qualifying.

Sara Moore...UT's MVP.

Midland volleyballer picked as UT's MVP

Jody Conradt, University of Texas women's volleyball coach, displayed no hesitation in naming Sara Moore of Midland as the Longhorns' Most Valuable Player at the yearend banquet at Austin.

"Aside from from the importance of being elected by her teammates for this award, the team's captain earned it with her leadership, expertise as a player and determination to set a winning example."

If there was any doubt about the MVP merits of the 1975 Midland High graduate, they were dispelled for Coach Conradt during one match last season.

"Sara played in great pain most of the season becasue of an earlier knee injury," said the coach. "At one tournament because of the pain she was suffering, I pulled her out for the first time ever in a game.

"The team began to fall apart and I put Sara back in. The team commenced to jell and went on to win."

Coach Conradt concludes, "After the game, I told Sara I would play her in a wheelchair if that is what it took."

Miss Moore, only a sophomore, underwent knee surgery last winter and as a result of an intensive therapy program, she is should be ready for the coming season.

Brewers knock Sox two back

By The Associated Press

"We were due to beat somebody," said Milwaukee Brewers Manager Alex Grammas. "We just had a heck of a time finding someone to beat."

The "someone" was the Boston Red Sox, who dropped two games behind the Baltimore Orioles in the American League East race. And the Brewers beat them convincingly Wednesday night with a 14-5 victory.

"We had lost five in a row— all by one run, except for the first one, which was 3-1," Grammas said. "We had to explode sometime. It just happened it was tonight.

"IT FEELS good. To lose that many games and then to explode like this is nice. More importantly, it makes the players feel good."

Don Money slammed a two-run homer and added two singles while Cecil Cooper and Von Joshua each had a pair of doubles and a single to pace the victory.

The explosion came in the final two innings. Boston was leading 5-3 when the Brewers scored four runs in the eighth, then added seven in the ninth as they collected 20 hits against four Red Sox pitchers.

Orioles 6, Yankees 4

Consecutive home runs by Eddie Murray and Lee May started Baltimore to a five-run outburst in the eighth inning as the Orioles defeated New York.

The Orioles broke the game open with their big rally that provided Jim Palmer with his 12th victory of the season against eight losses. Catfish Hunter, 6-5, took the defeat, giving up a home run to Billy Smith to lead off the game besides the blasts by Murray and May.

Twins 4, Mariners 1

A two-out, three-run double by Butch Wynegar in the top of the ninth inning powered Minnesota past Seattle. Wynegar's bases-loaded line drive just inside the first base line wound up behind a foam rubber pad in foul territory. By the time Lee Stanton could retrieve the ball, all three runners has crossed the plate.

Tigers 3, White Sox 1

Aurelio Rodriguez belted a two-run homer to power Detroit over Chicago. Rodriguez' fifth homer of the season followed a walk to Mickey Stanley and wiped out a 1-0 Chicago lead in the second. The Tigers added a run in the ninth on Tito Fuentes' RBI single.

The White Sox' run came in the first inning when Oscar Gamble grounded into a forceout with the bases loaded.

Royals 5, Indians 4

Bob Heise bunted home the tying run in the ninth inning, then scored the winning run in the 11th on George Brett's single as Kansas City nipped Cleveland. Slugger John Mayberry surprised Cleveland with a leadoff bunt in the ninth and tallied on a triple by Amos Otis. Heise then laid down a suicide squeeze bunt to score Otis and knot the game at 4-4.

The Indians had taken a 4-2 lead in the top of the ninth on Jim Norris' triple and Ray Fosse's run-scoring single.

Angels 9, A's 3

Don Baylor crashed the first grand slam of his major league career to lead California over Oakland. The Angel attack also featured two-run homers by rookie Rance Mulliniks and Rusty Torres.

California starter Ken Brett, 8-8, needed ninth-inning help from reliever Dave LaRoche. Loser Paul Mitchell, 0-3, was making his first start after being recalled from San Jose of the Pacific Coast League earlier in the day.

Midland entries in the tournament are Schumann and HNG #1 while the Oil Patch Resturant from Odessa is also entered.

The state tourney was held in Midland in 1974-75 and then was switched back to Killeen last year.

Midland girls enter state meet

Midland's two Miss Softball America All-Star teams begin play today in the state tournament at Big Spring with Team One, coached by Tommy Haney and Dan Foreman, playing at 8:30 p.m. while Team Two, coached by Bill Milner and Dan Price, is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. action.

Opening ceremonies begin at 5:45 p.m. today.

The tournament continues through Sunday with morning games at 9 a.m. and evening games at 6:30 and 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday while the championship game is 1:30 p.m. Sunday.

The Midland Minor League MSA tournament saw regular-season pennant winner Taylor Sporting Goods winning first place while Gibson's, coached by Milner and Joe Marro, took second place.

THE ALL-STAR teams were picked following the tournament. Players picked on Team One were: Cindy Besek, Terri Busic, Diana Feemster, Leslie Fori, Thersa Haney, Phelicia Hall, Jenny Johnson, Cindy Linton, Sharon Mendenhall, Della Moore, Kelly Nolan, Helen Oudems, Misty Pickering, Vickie Rinker, Martha Sanchez with Carol Crow and Pat Sanchez as alternates. Joyce Rinker is manager, Dale Linton, chaperone, and Beverly Haney, backup chaperone.

Team Two members are Denise Castleberry, Michelle Fisher, Nancy Gordon, Gena Hall, Melissa Jones Teresa Lunsford, Lee Ann Maddox, Kristin Marro, Terri Matlock, Allison Milner, Mindy Moss, Susan Pearson, Lisa Price, Teresa Robles, Melinda Willis with Lanette Grube and Karen Krail alternates. Marilyn Price is manager, Pat Marro chaperone, and Nancy Milner, backup chaperone.

RODNEY McDANIEL, above, will team up with F.L. Ballard to defend the Midland CC Team championship Saturday and Sunday. Deadline is 6 p.m. today.

MC signs five to scholarships

Midland College announced the signing of three basketball players, a tennis standout from El Paso and an all-district golfer from Midland High to athletic scholarships.

Kelly Eng, a two-letter winner at MHS, became the fifth golfer signed by Coach Delnor Poss. "Kelly is one of the most talented players in the southwest and his skills could enable him to be one of our regulars this season."

Playing for Coach Robert Young at MHS, Eng was medalist seven times in 12 tournaments as a senior. On the WT PGA Junior circuit, Kelly took eight firsts and three seconds as a 14-15-year-old and three firsts and two seconds in the 16-17 age bracket.

Basketball signees were 6-5 Eddie Davis, Fort Worth Wyatt; 6-5 Michael Battle, Dallas Roosevelt; and 6-3 Ricky Murdock, guard from Lubbock Coronado, bringing to seven the number of players signed by Coach Jerry Stone.

Rivera ranked No. 6 in singles and No. 2 in doubles in the recent Southwest rankings. Jose recently reached the semifinals in the USTA Sectional to qualify for the nationals at Kalamazoo, Mich. He also played No. 2 on the El Paso Davis Cup team, won the New Mexico Indoor 18 title and was runnerup in the outdoor meet. He also was runnerup in the 1976 Sun Carnival tourney and runnerup in doubles in the Fiesta Bowl tourney.

Davis, who plays post and forward, averaged 16.3 points and 10.7 rebounds in making All-District 9-4A. Murdock was named Coronado's MVP and picked on the All-City and All-District 4-3A second teams. Battle, 19.3 points and 17.2 rebounds a game, played on the Roosevelt team that battled state champion South Oak Cliff down to the wire. A forward, who can play defense as well as score, Battle was second team all-district and third team all-metro, and third team all-Greater Dallas.

Bucs streak to seventh

By The Associated Press

It was Lucky 7 night for the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Bucs extended their winning streak to seven games and Rennie Stennett drove in his seventh game-winning run of the season.

"In the last couple of games, I've had the RBI that tied the game, but not the game-winning RBI," Stennett said Wednesday night after the Pirates downed Houston 3-2 in 11 innings. "For me, the biggest thing is to make a great play or get the hit that wins the game."

Stennett's winning single came with Bill Robinson on third and none out. Robinson, whose ninth-inning homer sent the game into extra innings, had walked off Bo McLaughlin, 3-5, and went all the way to third when McLaughlin threw away Al Oliver's bunt.

Reds 6-1, Cubs 2-5

The Reds won the first game on Mario Soto's nine-hitter, his first major league victory, and George Foster's 32nd homer of the season. Soto struck out nine to help Cincinnati snap an eight-game losing streak.

In the second game, Larry Biittner's RBI single accounted for the winning run in Chicago's five-run eighth inning. Ivan DeJesus opened the eighth with a triple off loser Doug Capilla, 2-3. Winner Steve Renko, 1-1, retired 21 men in a row after the Reds scored in the first inning.

Mets 7, Giants 4

Rookie Steve Henderson, acquired in the trade that sent Tom Seaver to Cincinnati, knocked in two runs with a triple and a single and the Mets got a season-high 16 hits against the Giants.

Cards 5, Braves 3

St. Louis broke a 3-3 tie in the seventh on a sacrifice fly by Garry Templeton and Tony Scott's infield hit. Atlanta had scored twice in the top of the seventh on four walks, Barry Bonnell's run-scoring grounder and a bunt single by Vic Correll.

Al Hrabosky, 3-4, who got the win in relief of starter Tom Underwood, once again is sporting a beard, and he said after the game: "I'm myself again. Now I can look in the mirror and see something ugly."

Padres 7, Expos 5

Rookie Tucker Ashford's two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth snapped, gave San Diego its victory. George Hendrick drove in four Padres runs with a pair of two-run homers. Ashford's homer, his second of the season, scored Gene Tenace, who led off the ninth with a single.

Dodgers 7, Phils 5

Pinch-hitter Lee Lacy hit a three-run home run in the eighth inning to boost Los Angeles over Philadelphia. Rookie left-hander Lance Rautzhan, who pitched out of a basesloaded jam in the eighth inning in relief of starter Don Sutton, earned his first major league victory.

Philadelphia scored four runs against Sutton in the third, two on Greg Luzinski's 23rd home run of the season.

By DOUGLAS WILLIAMS
Special to The Washington Post

If it happens -- the past five years have taught Detroit's auto makers and others just how uncertain anything can be — the GM electric model will:

—Weigh 1,700 to 1,800 pounds, have a wheel base of about 90 inches, and measure 150 inches overall.

—Have a top speed of about 55 m.p.h. and a comfortable range of 100 to 150 miles a day.

—Carry two adults handily, plus groceries.

—Be priced at $5,500 to $6,000 in 1977 dollars.

The oil embargo, federal legislation, and the economics of the auto industry are behind GM's newborn optimism about electric cars.

GM's electric car is well into the deadly serious planning and design process that precedes production.

When will the GM electric be ready? It could be as soon as four years, and GM is shooting for no later than seven years ... as a 1985 model.

Industry observers point to three public pronouncements by GM executives this year as proof of the auto maker's seriousness about electric cars.

On Feb. 17, Howard H. Kehrl, executive vice president in charge of the corporate technical staff, presided at a press conference about energy. He and other GM executives talked matter-of-factly about limited world petroleum supplies.

Asked how GM would operate when the nation and world runs out of oil and gasoline, Kehrl said GM has "several thousand engineers and scientists trying to figure that out. I guess we're pretty convinced there will be personal transportation and we intend to be in the business of providing it."

"If you can use nuclear power to generate electricity," he said, "then you can have electric cars."

On May 11, Robert Lund, a GM vice president and general manager of the Chevrolet division, told a reporter from the Daily Oklahoman the "second car in many families would likely be an electric car, by the mid-1980s."

While "every kind of fuel or propulsion system that is known to the industry" is on the drawing board, the electric car "has the best chance to succeed" as an alternative power source, Lund said.

By 1985 battery size and power shortcomings will have been resolved and electric cars will even offer air conditioning, he said.

On May 23, Elliott M. Estes, president of GM, told the Economic Club of New York that one kind of new technology GM "is excited about ... is the progress we've made toward building an electric that is suitable for use as a shopper or commuter vehicle in two or three-car families."

Estes said GM has made "good progress" in the laboratory on the chemistry of a zinc-oxide battery as well as making the conventional lead-acid battery lighter in weight and more potent in the electrical capacity.

The automaker has also "just started a pilot operation ... to learn how to manufacture the battery and solve some other problems it still has," Estes said.

His comments, it should be noted, were the only remarks of the three that were carefully reviewed by GM's legal and public relations staffs.

Wildcat tests slated in five WT counties

Fisher, Schleicher and Sutton sectors drew sites for wildcats, while a discovery has been indicated in Kimble, and Coke and Crockett fields were extended.

SCHLEICHER PROBE

Delta Drilling Co. of Odessa filed application for No. 1 Wheeler, a 6,500-foot wildcat in Schleicher, 11 miles east of Eldorado.

It is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 21, block L, GH&SA survey, 2¾ miles northeast of the Page (Strawn) field.

SUTTON PROSPECTOR

The Sutton prospector, a 4,700-foot test, is slated by HNG Oil Co. of Midland. Designated No. 2-4 Syfan, it spots 2½ miles northeast of the Ellenburger gas pay opener in the Sawyer field.

Location is 1,320 feet from south and 1,650 feet from east lines of tract 4, Absalon Gray survey 71, abstract 92, 32 miles southeast of Sonora.

KIMBLE TRY

Great Western Drilling Co. was making production tests at No. 1 Stevenson, Kimble County wildcat, three miles east of Telegraph and ⅝-mile southeast of a shut-in gas discovery.

It flowed gas at the rate of 200,000 cubic feet per day, through perforations at 767-1,327 feet.

COKE EXTENDER

The Arledge field of Coke County gained a current third Odom lime oiler with completion of ACR Exploration, Inc., Abilene, No. 1 Geraldine Arledge, 14 miles northwest of Robert Lee.

The 24-hour flowing potential was for 192 barrels of $3-gravity oil and five barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 2,350-1. It finaled on a 16-64-inch choke and through perforations at 6,618-6,632 feet. The section was washed with 200 gallons of mud acid.

Wellsite is 467 feet from south and east lines of section 260, block 1-A, H&TC survey.

CROCKETT PRODUCER

The Shannon (San Andres) field of Crockett was extended ½ mile south with completion of Lifestyle Energy Corp., Richardson, No. 3 A. C. Hoover, 27 miles northwest of Ozona.

It had a 24-hour flowing potential of 56 barrels of 30-gravity oil, through a ½-inch choke and perforations at 2,400-2,412 feet. The pay had been acidized with 500 gallons and fractured with 500 barrels of fluid, plus 22,600 pounds of sand.

Merle Spence

M. Spence joins Herd

ODESSA — Merle L. Spence recenlty joined Herd Corp. in Odessa as general manager, Marvin Hert, president, reports.

His last five years in the oil industry has been with Nalco Chemical in Houston and Odessa.

Government orders fill operations halted

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — North Slope crude oil, for 38 days on a trouble-scarred road to the trans-Alaska pipeline's southern terminal, has been stopped for the fifth time, this time by a federal order just 15 miles short of its destination.

The U.S. Department of Transportation claims the welds are faulty and don't meet federal standards. Officials of the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. reacted angrily to what one called a "last-minute order" and said the welds are sound.

Alyeska had intended to deliver the Prudhoe Bay crude to storage tanks here Wednesday — well within the Aug. 1 deadline the firm imposed on itself three years ago.

The town's two hotels are crowded with industry representatives, reporters, tourists and government observers who came for the announced arrival of the first oil.

Headed north to Valdez are two tankers — the 120,000-ton ARCO Juneau and the 80,000ton Sohio Intrepid. The Juneau, expected to arrive Saturday, will be the first ship to carry Alaskan oil to the west coast, putting in to ARCO's refinery at Cherry Point, Wash., early next month. The Intrepid is expected to reach California a few days later.

But for now, the oil is still, waiting in Keystone Canyon 15 miles away.

Transportation officials said Wednesday that Alyeska was notified about 11 claimed flaws on July 21. Since then, they said, three more faulty welds have been found — all made during final preparations to receive the oil.

Several top Alyeska executives, who asked to remain unidentified, called the order unnecessary. They said the questioned pipe sections had withstood pressures 2½ times what would be expected in normal pipeline operations.

Extentions potential to Eddy County fields

Two extensions have been finaled in fields in Eddy County, N.M.

Southern Union Supply Co., Dallas, completed No. 1 Exxon-Federal as a second well and 1⅜-mile southwest extension to the Bubbling Springs, West (Morrow) gas field, seven miles southwest of Lake Wood.

It rated a calculated, absolute open flow of 3.274 million cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations at 10,046-10,110 feet, following acid treatment with 2,000 gallons.

Drilled to 10,450 feet as a wildcat, it has 4½-inch casing set on bottom. Top of the Morrow clastics was picked at 9,962 feet, under ground elevation of 3,761 feet.

Western Oil Producers, Inc., Roswell, completed its No. 1 Hunker Communitized as a new dual producer in the Carlsbad, East field of Eddy, five miles northeast of Carlsbad.

It finaled from the Wolfcamp zone through perforations at 9,641-9,717 feet, for 312 barrels of 49-gravity oil daily, through a 20-64-inch choke. Gas-oil ratio was 6,154-1.

The Morrow zone gauged a flow of 3 million cubic feet of gas daily, with gas-condensate ratio of 71,428-1, through perforated interval at 11,523-11,695 feet. Condensate gravity is 52 degrees.

It has 5½-inch casing set at 11,895 feet, total depth, and is plugged back to 11,836 feet.

Cleary Petroleum Corp., Midland, No. 1-E New Mexico Federal, ⅝-mile southwest of Morrow production in the Salt Lake, South field of Lea County, flowed gas at the maximum, daily rate of 6 million cubic feet on a 1-inch choke, and decreasing to 2.80 million cubic feet daily on a ½-inch choke, from an unidentified section.

Drilled to 14,348 feet, it has been plugged back to 14,251 feet. Operator set 5½-inch casing at 13,347 feet.

Discovery, explorer among activity in WT

MGF Oil Corp., Midland, intends to drill No. 1 Bedford as an 11,000-foot wildcat in Andrews, two miles east of the Bedford multipay field.

PECOS PAY OPENER

Continental Oil Co. has recompleted as a Wolfcamp gas pay opener in the Sheffield, Southwest field of Pecos County, its No. 4 Charles Canon, former 7270 Cisco producer.

The calculated, absolute open flow potential was for 15.6 million cubic feet of gas daily, with gas-liquid ratio measuring 33,333-1.

Completion was through perforations at 7,214-7,247 feet.

Total depth is 7,778 feet, and 4½-inch casing is set one foot off bottom. The plugged-back depth is 7,260 feet. It originally was completed in 1966.

Flag-Redfern Oil Co., Midland, has announced plans for No. 1-X Moore-Gilmore, a replacement wildcat in Pecos, 21 miles north of Fort Stockton.

Slated to 9,600 feet, it is 996 feet from northwest and 1,362 feet from southwest lines of section 6, block 10, H&GN survey, ½ mile north of the depleted Fusselman gas discovery in the Santa Rosa, South field.

It replaces No. 1 Moore-Gilmore, slated 9,600-foot wildcat, 990 feet from northwest and 1,320 feet from southwest lines of section 21, block 10, H&GN survey. That test has been junked and abandoned at 1.633 feet.

WARD EXTENSION

D. B. Baxter, Midland, completed No. 1-A Edwards Estate as a current fourth Glorieta well in the Crawar pool, in Ward County, six miles southeast of Monahans.

It had a 24-hour flowing potential of 26 barrels of 35.8-gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio measuring 1,653-1. Production was through a ¼-inch choke and perforations at 4,182-4,356 feet, following treatment on the pay with 2,000 gallons of acid, and fracturing with 31,000 gallons of fracture fluid, plus 36,000 pounds of sand.

A reentery operation, it was drilled by Shell Oil Co. as No. 1 John Edwards, et al, and plugged and abandoned in 1951 at 8,681 feet. It has been cleaned out to 4,950 feet, and plugged back to 4,360 feet.

Gas opener seen in Lea

Gifford, Mitchell & M. B. Wisenbaker, operating from Midland, have announced a probable Bone Springs gas discovery in Lea County, N.M., 15 miles northwest of Kermit.

Production was indicated with the flowing of gas to pits at the stabilized, daily rate of 1 million cubic feet, plus two to three barrels of condensate per hour.

The flow was through a ¼-inch choke and perforations from 9,781-9,970 feet. Operator was moving in additional test equipment.

Drilled to 21,750 feet for tests of the Pennsylvanian, it has been plugged back to 12,800 feet. Operator set 9⅝-inch casing at 13,500 feet.

It is 1,000 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 33-26s-36e, 1⅝ mile north of the one-well Leck, West (Bone Springs) field.

Wildcat set in Hockley

Victory Petroleum Co., Houston has staked site for a 10,200-foot wildcat in Hockley County. It is the No. 1 Sycilly Lattimore.

Drillsite is 2⅛ mile east of the Levelland, Northeast field and 660 feet from north and east lines of labor eight, league 736, Abner Taylor survey, seven miles northeast of Levelland.

Bill would prevent oil-coal partnership

HOUSTON (AP) — A Congressional bill that would prevent major oil companies from acquiring more coal and uranium properties will reduce the nation's domestic energy supplies, Exxon Co. U.S.A., said today.

The legislation, introduced Tuesday by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., would also require the companies to dispose of the coal and uranium properties they now hold within three years.

"Legislation that would prevent major oil companies from competing in the development of other energy sources is directly contradictory to the spirit and the goals of the nation's antitrust laws," according to an Exxon statement.

Senate Judiciary subcommittee hearings on Kennedy's proposal, called "horizontal divestiture," will begin next week. A similar bill is pending in the house.

Exxon said the proposal, if enacted, would undermine the nation's energy goals.

The company said the oil industry is competitive and allegations to the contrary are not supported by fact.

"By every accepted economic yardstick, the oil industry and other energy businesses are highly competitive and will remain so unless artificial barriers to entry are established," the statement said.

Major oil companies that enter other energy areas are logically extending their activities while benefitting the nation, Exxon said.

Exxon owns approximately 8.4 billion tons of coal.

Explorer scheduled

Attempt will be made to reestablish production in a Lea County, N.M., area, and an outpost site has been staked in an Eddy field.

Seventy-Seven Corp. of Texas, operating from Midland, will drill No. 1 Long, an 11,900-foot test, in attempt to reopen the King, West (Pennsylvanian) oil field of Lea County.

Drillsite, ⅜ mile southeast of the depleted one-well field, is 900 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 8-14s-37e, 13 miles southwest of Bronco.

The Eddy project is Monsanto Co. No. 1 Catclaw Federal, a one-mile east and slightly north outpost to the three-well Morrow gas area of the Revelation field.

It is projected to 10,600 feet, and spots 1,880 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 10-22s-25e, nine miles west of Carlsbad.

Prospector still tests

Napeco, Inc., Houston, No. 1 Rashap, Terrell County prospective gas discovery, 2½ miles southeast of the Allison, South (Pennsylvanian detrital) field, flowed gas at the rate of 500,000 cubic feet per day, plus 25 barrels of condensate and five barrels of load water in six hours.

Strawn oil strike finals

Puckett Partners of Fort Worth has completed No. 1-28 Ida M., a Strawn detrital discovery in Pecos County, 1⅞ mile north and slightly west of the Puckett, East (Strawn) gas field.

The well gauged a 24-hour flowing potential of 312 barrels of 42.2-gravity oil plus 30 barrels of load water, and 1.391 million cubic feet of gas per day. Gas-oil ratio was 4,450-1.

The completion was effected on a 24-64-inch choke and Strawn "A" perforations at 11,071-11,079 feet, after 3,000 gallons of acid; Strawn "B" perforations at 11,109-11,132 feet, after 3,000 gallons of acid and Strawn "C" perforations at 11,162-11,167 feet, after 2,000 gallons of acid.

LIBERTY, Tex. (AP) — Fire swept through a Gulf Oil Co. bulk oil storage facility today, forcing the evacuation of about 200 persons from their homes in the the Southeast Texas town of Liberty.

Chief Ben Pickett of the Liberty fire department said, "When we arrived the loading dock was on fire and then the flames spread to the gasoline tanks and the main building."

Pickett said residents living near the plant were evacuated in fear that the fire would spread to one of five large tanks. A police dispatcher said, "They're afraid one of the tanks might explode."

Gulf officers asked for help from a sister plant at Port Arthur, and all members of the Sabine-Neches Chiefs Association were put on alert. The organization provides mutual assistance among community fire departments and private firefighting units from various petrochemical plants in the area.

No ambulances were dispatched.

DRILLING REPORT

ANDREWS — Texaco No. 3-Z State of Texas; td 12,531 feet, preparing to acidize through perforations at 12,518-12,528 feet.

BORDEN — Monsanto No. 1 Good; td 9,660 feet, preparing to plug and abandon. It recovered 4,200 feet of gas, 35 feet of heavily oil- and water-cut drilling mud, and 90 feet of water-cut mud on a drillstem test from 9,360-9,420 feet.

CROCKETT — C&K No. 3-A Amacker; flowed 5.52 barrels of oil and 2.76 barrels of water in 24 hours, through a 16-64-inch choke and perforations at 4,718-4,754 feet.

DAWSON — Gulf No. 2 Speck; td 12,190 feet, swabbed 44 barrels of water in 10 hours, through perforations at 9,835-9,839 feet.

Moncrief No. 5 Lechuguilla Canyon; drilling 10,690 feet in sand and shale. A drillstem test from 10,475-10,600 feet recovered 470 feet of drilling mud.

Mesa No. 1-B Potter-Federal; td 9,300 feet, preparing to run bottomhole pressure survey and test. It flowed on an 18-64-inch choke, making a solid stream of spent acid water and some gas, recovering 300,000 cubic feet of gas, time unreported, through perforations at 9,084-9,113 feet.

Gulf No. 1-W1 Shugart; drilling 11,325 feet in lime, shale. A drillstem test, interval unreported, open two hours, surfaced gas in 22 minutes, stabilizing at the estimated, daily rate of 200,000 cubic feet on a ¼-inch choke, and recovered 180 feet of distillate, 724 deet of drilling mud and 90 feet of water. The sampler returned 420 cubic centimeters of water and 100 cubic centimeters of distillate.

C&K No. 1-12 Carlsbad; td 11,683 feet, preparing to run casing.

Bennett & Ryan No. 1 Penasco; drilling 8,510 feet in lime, shale. A 90-minute drillstem test from 8,325-8,425 feet, recovered 270 feet of drilling mud.

Antweil No. 1 Mesa Fuerte; td 11,327 feet; It flowed 1.3 million cubic feet of gas per day, time unreported, through a 20-64-inch choke and perforations at 9,822-9,829 feet.

Antweil No. 1 Rio; flowed 4.7 million cubic feet of gas per day, 24 hours, through a ¾-inch choke and perforations at 8,685-8,713 feet, unloading a small amount of water.

HNG No. 1-29 Pardue Farms; td 3,578 feet, preparing to test through perforations at 3,392-3,398 feet, after fracturing with 10,000 gallons and 8,000 pounds.

IRION — Hytech No. 2-105 Rocker B; preparing to fracture through perforations at 8,323-8,600 feet, and test. Total depth is 10,650 feet, and plugged-back depth 8,612 feet.

Cleary No. 1-E New Mexico Federal; flowed at the rate of 6 million to 2.8 million cubic feet of gas daily, through perforations at 13,908-13,060 feet.

LOVING — Texas O&G No. 1 Amarillo; swabbed 11 barrels of oil and 17 barrels of water in 10 hours, through perforations at 11,346-11,356 feet.

Exxon No. 2-1 Linebery; drilling 8,004 feet.

PECOS — Monsanto No. 6-C Bernice; drilling 9,850 feet in lime and chert.

Monsanto No. 5-D Bernice; drilling 8,800 feet in shale and chert; took a drillstem test from 8,690-8,717 feet, recovery was 90 feet of drilling fluid (scample chamber recovery was 1,200 cubic centimeters of mud, no oil or gas).

NRM No. 1 Wynne; td 15 850 feet; flowed 220,000 cubic feet of gas per day, plus 138 barrels of water and five barrels of condensate in 24 hours, through perforations at 13,500-13,679 feet.

H. L. Brown No. 1-A Lloyd; drilling 10,438 feet.

Dyco No. 1 Cline; location has been abandoned.

HNG No. 1-12 Sabine State; drilling 13,960 feet in lime, shale and sand.

SCURRY — Lario No. 4 Schuler; td 7,047 feet; preparing to pull out of hole with logging tool.

SUTTON — Lovelady No. 1 Wardlaw; td 4,570 feet; has been plugged and abandoned.

TOM GREEN — Florida No. 1 West Pate; td 6,483 feet; preparing to move in completion unit and test tank.

UPTON — Gulf No. 939-D McElroy; td 10,500 feet; flowed 26 barrels of oil and 44 barrels of water in eight hours, through a 16/64-inch choke and perforations at 9,8169,746 feet. Gravity of the oil was 42.3 degrees.

VAL VERDE — C&K No. 1-40 Mobil Mills; td 15,186 feet; logging.

The number of petroleum tests staked in the Permian Basin stayed approximately the same last week as the figure for the prior week. Operators filed permit applications for 151 tests, compared with 150 permits sought two weeks ago.

Last week District 7-C, in San Angelo, and District 8, in Midland, each tallied 11 wildcats, with District 8-A reporting six and Southeast New Mexico getting three.

The Texas Railroad Commission District 7-C accounted for 47 field tests, followed by 35 in Disirict 8.

Mills joining law firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, whose liaison with an Argentine striptease dancer cost him his career as a powerful congressman, is joining the Washington office of a New York law firm.

Mills, once the chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, will do tax work but no lobbying for the important law firm of Shea, Gould, Climenko and Casey.

Mills, who is vacationing in his hometown of Kensett, Ark., said, "I don't know why I've decided to go back to work. I'm enjoying what I'm doing." He said he is feeling fine.

HOUSE

CO-OP BANK. Passed, 199 for and 198 against, a bill (HR 2777) creating a federal bank to spur development of non-profit consumer cooperatives. Such co-ops consist of consumers banding together to buy a wide range of everyday goods and services. Also benefiting from the bill would be inner-city co-ops set up to revitalize slum areas.

Members voting "yea" favored the co-op bank.

Reps. Samuel Hall (D-1), James Collins (R-3), Ray Roberts (D-4), Bill Archer (R-7), Jack Brooks (D-9), Jake Pickle (D-10), W. R. Poage (D-11), Jack Hightower (D-13), Kika de la Garza (D-15), Omar Burleson (D-16), George Mahon (D-19), Henry Gonzalez (D-20), Robert Krueger (D-21), Bob Gammage (D-22), Abraham Kazen (D-23) and Dale Milford (D-24) voted "nay."

Reps. Charles Wilson (D-2), Olin Teague (D-6), John Young (D-14) and Barbara Jordon (D-18) did not vote.

INTELLIGENCE. Adopted, 227 for and 171 against, a resolution (H Res 658) setting up a permanent House committee to oversee the CIA and intelligence activities of other agencies, including the FBI. The new committee has nine majority (Democratic) and four minority (Republican) members. A major part of its mandate is budget and legislative authority over the CIA.

One issue during debate was that H Res 658 lacked specific rules on access to classified information. Limitations on access would be set by the committee after its formation.

Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., a supporter, said: "We certainly have to presume that the committee is going to be sufficiently interested in protecting classified information...and that it will make appropriate rules to guarantee this security."

Opponents ranged from liberals concerned with too much secrecy to conservatives fearful of leaks. One of the latter, Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., said: "The fact is, not all Members of Congress have a bona fide need to know about our nation's intelligence matters."

Members voting "yea" favored the resolution.

FARM PAYMENTS. Rejected, 199 for and 207 against, an amendment to prohibit farm subsidy payments to non-farm corporations. It was proposed to HR 7171, the new farm bill which was headed for final passage and conference with the Senate. A major part of the bill is the multibillion-dollar crop support program with which this amendment was concerned.

Teague and Wright did not vote.

SENATE

FREE PARKING. Tabled, 65 for and 28 against, an amendment to end free parking on the Capitol grounds for members of Congress, their staffs and some members of the press. Fees of $10 to $50 monthly were proposed for the 8,500 parking spaces. The amendment was offered to HR 7932, the fiscal 1978 legislative branch appropriations bill later passed and sent to conference with the Senate.

Senators voting "yea" favored continuing free parking.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen (D) and John Tower (R) voted "yea."

COMMISSARIES. Voted, 49 for and 46 against, to preserve the subsidy of salaries of employes at military commissaries. The vote deleted language in the fiscal 1978 defense appropriations bill that would have phased out over three years the $100 million annual subsidy of "clerk-hire" at commissaries. Other subsidies that keep commissary prices low, such as free rent, would not have been affected by the proposal.

B-1 BOMBER. Adopted, 59 for and 36 against, an amendment removing funds for the B-1 bomber from the fiscal 1978 defense appropriations bill (HR 7933), later passed and sent to conference with the House. The amendment deleted about $1.4 billion which the Appropriations Committee had put in the bill for building five B-1 production models.

The money was approved by the committee before President Carter's June 30 decision to halt the B-1 program and proceed instead with fitting B-52 bombers with Cruise missiles.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., a supporter of the amendment, said it would be "a great mistake" to seek to reverse Carter's decision and lose valuable defense-preparedness time in the process.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, an opponent, said he is "seriously concerned and distressed by the decision of the President of the U.S. to eliminate the B-1...a political decision not based on fact and a decision that endangers the security of the U.S."

Senators voting "yea" supported Carter's B-1 decision.

Decision due Nov. 1

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decision is expected by Nov. 1 on which airlines will fly Atlanta-London and Dallas-London nonstop routes, President Carter has told the Civil Aeronautics Board.

The new routes would begin "shortly thereafter," the President said.

Delta Airlines, Pan American World Airways and Eastern Airlines are the only airlines bidding for the Atlanta route.

Carter asked for recommendations on carriers to begin service on the Atlanta-London route and a route between Dallas-Fort Worth and London in a letter dated July 21 and released Tuesday.

The President, who has "final authority over the award of international air routes to U.S. carriers, said, "I hope to make designations by Nov. 1, 1977, after considering your recommendation."

The Atlanta-London and Dallas-London routes are to be exclusively awarded to an American carrier for a three-year period, under terms of the new trans-Atlantic route agreement signed by the United States and Great Britain in Bermuda last Saturday.

There is no direct service between London and Atlanta or Dallas-Fort Worth at this time.

By JOHN JACOBS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Two of President Carter's three nominees to the five-member Nuclear Regulatory Commission favor at least in part the Clinch River breeder reactor project that Carter wants ended.

The commission, which licenses nuclear power plants, could conceivably end up having to rule on the $2.2 billion project, so Carter's nominees are reluctant to detail how they might vote.

But based on what the nominees have said during recent Senate confirmation hearings, industry critics say a majority on the commission would support Clinch River, the experimental nuclear power plant in Tennessee that would burn plutonium.

Many in the nuclear industry want to switch from today's uranium-powered plants to more sophisticated reactors that burn and at the same time breed plutonium. They fear that eventually the United States will run out of uranium.

Carter, however, opposes the use of plutonium in nuclear plants because it is also used for manufacturing nuclear weapons and could be extremely dangerous in the hands of, for example, terrorist groups. In April Carter asked other technologically advanced nations to help stop the spread of the highly poisonous substance.

One of Carter's nominees to the NRC, Kent Hansen, a nuclear engineer at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, told the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works last week that he disagrees with Carter on breeder reactors, and that Clinch River "should be built."

Carter's nominee for chairman of the NRC is Joseph Hendrie, a nuclear physicist at Brookhaven National Laboratory on Long Island. He told the committee Monday that if Carter had asked him for advice before deciding to stop the project, he would have "tilted slightly" toward going ahead with it.

Hendrie said he now agrees with the President but also said that Carter should "maintain the pace of research on the breeder." He said that nuclear reactors have "an exceedingly important role to play" as an energy source, and that the United States should preserve the option of fast breeder technology.

Peter Bradford, Carter's third nominee, also testified at the confirmation hearing Monday and said he supports Carter's position. He said that if he were a senator, he would have voted against Clinch River. Bradford is a member of Maine's Public Utilities Commission.

Three representatives from public advocacy groups testified against the nominations of Hansen and Hendrie. Two of them, John Abbotts of Public Interest Research Group, a Ralph Nader organization, and James Cubie of New Directions, said in interviews that the new commission would lean towards approving the Clinch River project and breeder reactors by a 3 to 2 vote "at the least."

They agreed that, of the two present commissioners, Richard Kennedy would probably vote with Hansen and Hendrie for the breeder, and Victor Gilinsky would probably join Bradford in dissenting.

Cubie said Carter was "badly advised" on the nominations by James Schlesinger, his top energy adviser and a former chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

"Schlesinger is putting in some people on the basis of old relationships he had at AEC" (Atomic Energy Commission), cubie said. "At that time and in that context they were good people. But they don't reflect the new directions of atomic-energy policy."

There is considerable uspport for the Clinch River project in Congress. Last week the Senate voted not to fund it for the time being, but some provision to preserve at least a minimal project appears likely. Cubie said that if Congress voted money for Clinch River, it would still have to be licensed by the NRC.

"This was Carter's ace in the hole, and he's giving it up," Cubie said. "With Hendrie as chairman, it's business as usual

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother has heart trouble and she also has arthritis. The doctor has given her several different kinds of medicine to take. All that is fine. But then, in addition she is forever trying new, non-prescription drugs—whatever she happens to hear about as having "done wonders" for this friend or that. Shouldn't she be much more careful about mixing drugs? Aren't even non-prescription drugs dangerous sometimes when you combine them with a lot of other medicines?—Alice W.

Dear Alice: Drug interactions, as they are called, certainly can be harmful, because of the huge number of medications now on the market. The Medical Letter recently noted that lots of new adverse interactions are being reported; it recommends that as few drugs as possible be prescribed for simultaneous use.

Patients should make a point of getting very clear instructions from their doctors about what medicines can and cannot be taken at the same time—and also check out any possible conflict with over-the-counter products, including vitamins. For instance, patients taking oral anticoagulants should not take large supplements of vitamin E.

There can also be adverse reactions between drugs and food. Just one example among many: Antidepression drugs of the MAO group (Monoamine oxidase inhibitors) can cause acute hypertension if combined with foods containing a substance called tyramine. And the list of tyramine foods is long and varied. It includes aged cheeses, avocados, bananas, canned figs, beer, red wines, fermented sausage like pepperoni, yeast extracts, chicken liver, chocolate, some beans, sherry and dried fish.

Alcohol, too, often has an adverse or dangerous effect when taken with medication.

Why not jot down a list of the drugs that your mother is taking at the moment—including whatever remedies and vitamins she seems to be dosing herself with on the advice of friends. Go over the list with her and her doctor and get everything straightened out once and for all. This needn't take long—it could be done in two or three minutes over the phone. Take notes on his answers, and then write the whole thing up as a little schedule with do's and don'ts for your mother to follow.

To C. P. From Sault-Ste-Marie: Dehydration fever that your infant had was indeed caused by inadequate fluid intake by the third day after birth. This often will cause elevation of temperature in many otherwise healthy infants. Water in 5 per cent glucose solution given by mouth, as early as 12 but not later than 24 hours after birth in amounts varying from as little as one teaspoon in premature infants to two ounces every four hours for full term infants, can prevent dehydration fever.—Your pediatrician can best advise you about such matters.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Maryland 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Patient drops in, flies out

PORT LAVACA, Tex. (AP) — James Tagert decided his sore throat was worth a quick trip to the hospital. So he simply set his helicopter down in the hospital's front lawn near the emergency room.

Tagert, a drilling engineer on an offshore oil rig, was flying to work with another man Monday when they spotted the hospital.

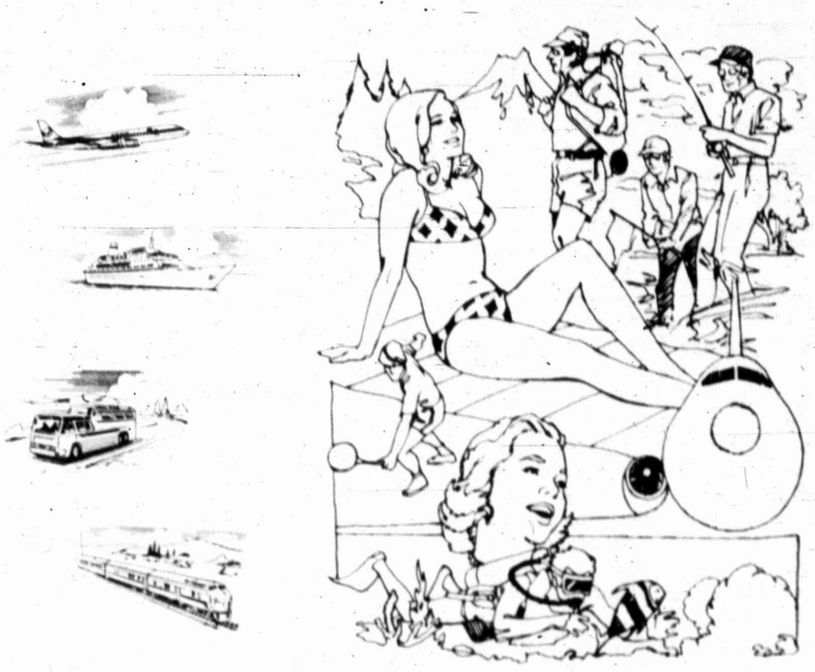

Astonished emergency room personnel said Tagert's common cold symtoms didn't warrant immediate treatment, so the pair hailed a cab and went to a nearby clinic.

The hospital has no landing pad.

The public, which ultimately pays the bill for government's losses to cheaters, probably has contributed through apathy to the multibillion dollar fraud toll.

There has been some reluctance to prosecute those who try to hoodwink federal agencies because of a belief that the perpetrators of crime against the government were, in many cases, society's victims — the poor and the ill.

But recent exposure of welfare and Medicaid ripoffs has revealed that the intended beneficiaries of the programs often are being exploited by greedy administrators or purveyors of services.

Corruption has been uncovered in veterans' educational programs, in nursing homes, in defense contracts, in housing programs, in food stamp sales and in loan and subsidy programs.

A U.S. attorney, quoted in U.S. News and World Report, gave a gloomy assessment of the extent of the problem of fraud. "Everything the government is involved with is an invitation to thievery," he said.

And the mounting publicity has brought demands from the American people and from their representatives in Congress for a crackdown on the schemers.

Law-enforcement officials concede that fraud and abuse of government programs have increased "beyond tolerable limits."

They are convinced, however, that the several agencies and departments must control their own programs. They recommend that they seek out trouble with trained investigators rather than waiting for irregularities to appear. A good investigator or auditor, according to recent studies, can save the taxpayers $20 for every dollar spent on a probe.

The congressional concern which has stimulated recent gains against taxpayer gouging is welcome and must be sustained, but Congress could go further. Each new program must be examined for the potential for fraud and the loopholes closed beforehand.

There is no easy, immediate answer, but the new public awareness and outrage are essential to the drive against wrongdoing.

The wage cycle

The so-called "compromise" under which President Carter has endorsed a plan to tie the federal minimum wage to industrial wages actually is a concession designed to ease the strained relationships between the administration and labor chief George Meany.

Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, wants the automatic escalator, which would maintain the minimum at about 52 per cent of the average factory wage.

Mr. Carter had been reluctant to support an increase beyond 20 cents to $2.50 an hour. But under the agreement worked out by administration representatives, congressional leaders and Meany, the pay will go to $2.65 Jan. 1 and the increases will be automatic from then on.

Those who support the minimum wage standard insist that it eliminates poverty-level pay.

In effect, however, it eliminates jobs — jobs for the very young and inexperienced and jobs for those who barely qualify in the labor market.

The "indexing" of wages to inflation — as has been done with Social Security benefits and other federal pensions — conditions the nation to continued inflation and locks business into a wage spiral.

America took its economic strength from a free market for trade and jobs.

Every effort to tinker with the free enterprise system — through trade barriers or wage guarantees — erodes its strength.

Congress should dig in its heels and resist the contemplated revisions as too high a price to pay for political peace.

ART BUCHWALD

Dinner guest rental business pays well

Art Buchwald

A few years ago I wrote about the shortage of guests on the Riviera, and pointed out that while everyone had a villa or a yacht, the natural resources in house guests and boat guests were drying up fast, and unless a guest conservation program was instituted, the people along the Riviera would soon find themselves dining and sailing alone. Well, they scoffed at my warning, but this year the Riviera is facing its worst guest shortage since Elsa Maxwell tried to get a passenger list together for a cruise of the Greek islands.

The profiteering in guests this year is unimaginable.

I know, because that's how I was paying for my vacation. It happened by accident, but if a fellow doesn't take advantage of a situation, he'll wind up spending his own money on the Riviera, and who wants to do that?

It seems that fellow columnist John Crosby showed up in Monte Carlo and innocently asked me if I could get him invited to the Red Cross dinner and gala at which Sammy Davis Jr. was going to entertain.

I pretended it would be difficult but said I'd do my best. What I knew but John didn't was that the ratio of women to men along the Riviera was six to one, and hostesses were willing to pay anything for a single man to sit at one of their tables.

An hour later I was down at the beach making discreet inquiries. I was tipped off that a Mrs. Max Kettner of New York had three extra women for the gala and was getting desperate.

"Bing Crosby?" she asked.

"Listen," I said, "if I had Bing Crosby, I wouldn't be here — I would be negotiating at the Palace with Princess Grace.

"My boy's John Crosby, but he's been a helluva dinner guest in his time. He's eaten at Billy Paley's house, he's broken bread with Mrs. Pam Harriman, he's had coffee with the Trudeaus twice. This guy is no bum — he's Yale '38, and that gives him a presold table audience right there."

Mrs. Kettner wet her lips. "How much are you asking for him? "It depends," I said. "Do you want him for cocktails before the dinner?"

"What's the difference?" Mrs. Kettner wanted to know.

"Well, I can book him for cocktails before the gala at the Hotel de Paris with another party, and that would cut down the price for you. He could join you for dinner around ten o'clock."

"I think I should have him for cocktails," Mrs. Kettner said.

"But I'd better warn you that I don't want to pay more than $1,500 for the evening."

"Fifteen hundred dollars?" I said. "Why, I turned down $2,000 from Sam Spiegel for Crosby to lunch with him on his yacht, and Crosby didn't have to put a black tie on either. If you're going to start talking chicken feed I'd rather have Crosby stay in his room tonight."

"I'll pay $1,750," Mrs. Kettner said.

"This is ridiculous. I couldn't get you a gold caddy for $1,750 tonight. Look Crosby's a syndicated columnist, he's a name. You pair him up with one of your female guests and she's going to be impressed — this guy's got class. I'm not going to sell him out for a song."

"Well, how much do you want?" Mrs. Kettner said.

"The same as Sammy Davis Jr. is getting for entertaining tonight," I said.

"But that's outrageous," Mrs. Kettner replied.

"Look. Entertainers are a dime a dozen," I said. "Where are you going to find dinner guests at this late date? After all, Davis will only be on stage entertaining. Crosby will actually be at your table sitting with you."

Mrs. Kettner finally agreed, provided Crosby also would come for cocktails.

I pocketed the money and then rushed back to tell Crosby the news that I had managed to get him invited to the gala.

Tears of gratitude poured from his eyes. "How can I ever thank you?" he said.

"Forget it, kid," I said, punching him slightly in the shoulder. "You can do a favor for me sometime."

To this day Crosby doesn't know how much he is worth. He still thinks I did him a good turn. If I only had three Crosbys a season I could make enough dough to retire for the rest of the year.

HEMISPHERE REPORT:

Latins wish respect were mutual

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

He has inspired Latin Americans to reach a consensus on their most important foreign policy problem, the United States.

True, Latin America, as a whole, has long entertained doubts about the wisdom of the United States.

But it remained for Mr. Carter to alienate most of the larger Latin American countries by demonstrating a lack of concern for their sensibilities.

Most of those countries that have been singled out for U.S. criticism in this hemisphere are nations that have as long a tradition of observance of the rights of man as does the United States.

So, for a U.S. President who hails from an area where a man still can be denied admission to a church group because of the color of his skin, to preach about human rights to Latin America grates on the Latin ear.

That point arises frequently.

The prestigious Buenos Aires newspaper, La Nacion, admitted recently that "what we fail to understand is why President Carter, who has made human rights the main and apparently the single objective of his foreign policy, believes it appropriate to effect a reconciliation with a dictator (Fidel Castro) whose opinions are openly cynical and incompatible with respect for the individual."

The widely read Brazilian commentator Carlos Castello Branco wrote recently in the newspaper Jornal do Brasil of Rio de Janeiro that "unfortunately (Secretary of State) Cyrus Vance degraded that condition (of respect for human rights) set by the Carter policy by exempting those areas of immediate strategic and economic interest for the United States from compliance with that principle."

Chile's greatest newspaper, El Mercurio of Santiago, specifically complained that the recent suspension of an $11 million U.S. loan to Chile until human rights are better respected there amounts to "use of pressure and interference in matters which concern Chilean sovereignty exclusively." Mercurio also declared that "now the U.S. Democratic government is thwarting the fulfillment of important aspects of human rights: the economic and social."

President Augusto Pinochet made no secret of his irritation with the Carter administration. Chile is not a country of beggars, he said, and Chile was rejecting the credit in protest of the propaganda attacks that accompanied it.

President Jorge Rafael Videla of Argentina, a country that has been a frequent target of U.S. human rights activists, recently was quoted as saying that relations with the United States are improving. Nevertheless, at the conclusion of the visit that Videla made to neighboring Uruguay the end of June, he and Uruguayan President Aparicio Mendez issued a joint declaration reaffirming their determination "to oppose any attempt at external pressure or coercion of a political or economic nature..." They also pledged to go on fighting subversion and terror which they termed a threat to "the essential rights of human beings."

Brazilian President Ernesto Geisel told the French television that "anybody who lives in Brazil knows that it is a free country in which everybody can live and exercise his rights freely. Subversion is not allowed in Brazil.

"But that picture of people who do not support the government being tortured, harassed, ...is absolutely untrue. Brazil lives under a democracy which is relative to its conditions. U.S. or British democracy just cannot be transferred over here, because democracy has its own characteristics in Brazil," Geisel affirmed.

But even those few hemisphere heads of state who seem to meet with the approval of the Carter administration give some indication of resenting U.S. meddling.

Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez, who recently visited Mr Carter in Washington, later told a Venezuelan radio and TV audience that "now it is time to say that Latin America has the responsibility to assert its independence from the United States..." Perez, a civil rights activist in recent years, of course, did not criticize Mr. Carter's stand on that subject.

But the Venezuelan did make it clear that he feels the United States and Latin America should start "developing friendship in terms of mutual respect."

GOP considers changing name to get voter support

Nick Thimmesch

ST. PAUL, Minn. — In this state, there is no "Republican" Party, but one called the "Independent-Republican" Party, made up of adherents and candidates who walk, talk and carry on like Republicans. No mystery here. The Minnesota GOP simply changed its name in 1975.

Perhaps the Minnesota innovation is the way out of the vexing dilemma national Republicans find themselves in these days — namely, trying to win with a label most people hold their noses at, while Jimmy Carter corrals the same independent-minded voters Republicans had successfully wooed in many elections.

Now, GOP National Chairman William Brock readily admits that the public doesn't warm to the word "Republican," an unfair situation perhaps, but a reality.

This recognition helped him conclude that the GOP is in for a long rebuilding process, longer even than the refurbishing needed after the 1964 disaster.

The simplistic cry is that the party must become more "liberal" to win back independent voters. But Richard Nixon, hardly a liberal, had won over those indepdnents until Watergate disillusioned them about anything Republican. Actually, the word "liberal," according to polls, is as disliked as "Republican," so a "liberal-Republican" is probably not the most popular kid on the block, either.

Pollster Robert Teeter determined several years back that the most attractive political labels were "independent" and "citizens." "Conservative" was far better than "liberal" or even "Democrat."

Teeter also learned that the "Republican" Party seemed indelibly stamped in voters' minds as belonging to the "big boys," and after Watergate, it lost its reputation as being more honest than the Democratic Party.

There are some ironies here. Democratic campaign finance sins were washed away in Watergate, and even now are hard to limelight in the South Korean situation. Moreover, the "big boys" favored Democrats in 1976. The political action committee of business gave 57 per cent of their campaign contributions to Democrats, and labor favored Democrats by its usual wide margin.

When 28-year-old Charles A. Slocum took over as chairman of the Minnesota Republicans in July, 1975, he anguished over the dilemma, particularly as felt in Minnesota. Until 1972, candidates for the state legislature were not designated by party, and the majority of those elected caucused as "conservatives." Actually, they were Republicans.

But in 1973, the system changed so that candidates were designated Republican or Democratic-Farmer-Labor candidates. Bam, the D.F.L. swept everything.

Slocum, a devotee to market research and polling, decided that since Minnesota voters were "centrist," a survey was needed to determine what "Republican" and "Independent" meant to people.

The survey, taken during the fall of 1975 in the St. Paul-Minneapolis metropolitan area, showed that 61 percent of those interviewed held a negative attitude toward the word "Republican." Around 80 percent of the interviewees held positive attitudes toward "independent."

The survey also showed people preferred the "Independent-Republican" label over "Republican" by a 2-1 margin. Self-described "Independents" like it by a whopping 8-1 count. Even Republicans preferred it, 5-3.

With his subdued GOP membership ready to follow its leadership ("Try anything"), Slocum got the state convention, by a 70-30 margin, to approve renaming the party. A consequent challenge in the Minnesota Supreme Court failed, so it's been "Independent-Republican" Party for 18 months now.

The first test of the I.-R. was 1976, and the new label took a shellacking. Slocum says that's because Minnesotans had the opportunity to vote for Democratic Sens. Hubert Humphrey and Walter Mondale, and thus the election became a matter of state pride.

Slocum, citing personal and family reasons, did not run for party chairmanship again, and says the controversy over the new label was not involved. GOP conservatives weren't hot for the change, and the press initially saw it largely as a cosmetic effort. But Slocum feels that in 1978 his idea will get its first valid test because there will be no stars like Humphrey or Mondale running.

"This name change experience can help us get over the hurdle of a minority status," Slocum says, "and appeal to a majority of voters who believe in our responsible, commonsense message."

The new I.-R. chairman, Vern Neppl, had opposed the change, but now tentatively accepts it. Instead of sticking the word "independent" in front of Republican, he would have liked "Conservative."

Whatever, Slocum's innovation attracted great interest inside the Republican Party, and he got plenty of mail on the subject. Even now, Chairman Brock does not rule out any proposal for the GOP to change its name in order to get the voter support Brock believes the party deserves.

A sheriff's deputy stops traffic in the burned-out Sycamore Canyon area of Santa Barbara, Calif., where a brush fire destroyed over 200 homes Wednesday night. Burned out cars and trees surround a new home in the background, which remained untouched by the inferno. (AP Laserphoto)

Homeowners wait at wind's mercy

By AL MARTINEZ
The Los Angeles Times

SANTA BARBARA — The miracles in suburban Montecito depended on the caprice of the winds and the determination of the homeowners.

Where the breezes carried sparks, houses went up in flames, lighting the dark skies with an eerie orange beauty.

Homes on one side of a street were burned to the ground, homes on the other side were untouched.

He, his wife and daughter abandoned their house just before midnight Tuesday. Furnace-like winds were blowing over the rooftop. Fire danced in the distance, moving closer.

"As hot as it was when we left," Petrie said, "I thought for sure the place would be gone when we returned."

Houses on three sides of them were destroyed, but Petrie's home survived the hellish night.

He returned at 2:30 a.m. Wednesday and said quietly, "I never would have believed I'd be standing here this morning in such ruin...."

The Jordano home was untouched by the flames, not because he stayed to fight — although he tried — but because "someone was watching over us."

The water pressure had all but disappeared and his garden hose had gone dry when police ordered Jordano to evacuate.

He and a half-dozen relatives fought the awesome flames through the long night. They used dirt and shovels when the water failed, and stomped out embers with their feet when they had to.

But they saved the house, and it was the second time they had.

"We went through the 1964 fire in the same house and we saved it then too," Rivera said, after the flames had passed and the morning had come.

Police had ordered the 51-year-old landscape contractor to evacuate, and Rivera had complied — but only for a short time.

He and his relatives returned, and for an hour they faced the hot winds and flames until the danger had passed.

He was forced to flee just before flames devoured it.

Their 22-year-old son Scott returned at sunrise Wednesday to look at the ruins and to sigh, "They won't come back to this area. And they'll never move into one like it again."

Nearby, the framing of a house under construction was untouched but a stack of building materials right next to it was a heap of smoking ruin.

They were fighting a wall of fire when their hoses began to burn. Then the motor of their fire truck died.

The three men lay down in the driveway of the home and covered themselves with aluminum "tents" until the fire had roared past them.

The tents, made for just such a situation, had saved them. The department had bought them only a month ago.

The house they were fighting for was saved.

Some lost everything but their lives in the fire storms that roared down the hillsides and across bone-dry canyons.

"I didn't even save my wallet," said Payne Green. "But all that counts with me is that my wife and kids are safe."

Insurance man Bob Burton came to see how some of his clients were doing and stayed to help save their homes. At some, he fought alone.

"There was nobody in sight," he said, "so I grabbed a hose and started spraying..."

In those areas untouched by the fire, homeowners stayed up all night, waiting and preparing.

Only when they were assured the fire had passed them by did they drop their guard.

"I feel guilty," one of them said. "So many people homeless, and we weren't even touched...."

If there is an epitaph to the hours of terror in Montecito, it might be the words of Wes Gallagher, retired president and general manager of the Associated Press.

Gallagher, whose home was not touched by the flames, had covered World War II for the AP, but he was nonetheless move by the immensity of the fire wall when he exclaimed:

"Oh God, What a night."

Reverend counts his blessings despite fire

The Los Angeles Times

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — It was a home he had built with his own hands, but the Rev. Richard Breitigam could see it die in flames and still chuckle.

"We were thinking of going to Oregon," he said, "and we were worried about who would watch our house while we were gone."

He looked at the mound of charred ruins that remained and he smiled.

The house owned by the Rev. and Mrs. Breitigam — he's 86 and retired from the Seventh-day Adventist Church — was one of 200 burned to the ground in the Santa Barbara fire.

And while he could mourn the loss of the place he had abandoned to the flames shortly before midnight Tuesday, he could also count his blessings.

Standing before the still-smoking ruins Wednesday, he turned to his 76-year-old wife Agnes and said with emotion: "We still have each other."

The Rev. Breitigam, who served as a missionary in the Philippines, stayed in his home as long as he could, watching a thin line of fire moving down a hillside.

Then, "The fire suddenly swung all the way around and was exploding everywhere. The heat was terrible, and the police said 'Get out while you can,' so we left."

He and his wife spent the night — free of charge — at a downtown hotel that had opened its rooms to refugees from the tree-high blaze.

When they came back to their home, it was gone.

Mrs. Breitigam sighed and said softly, "We have so much in life that is not perishable, so why should we worry about the things that are?"

The Rev. Breitigam was equally philosophical.

"There are no regrets," he said. "I just keep looking for whatever blessings I can find in this. What counts is not all that, but — " he tapped his chest. "—what's in here."

Of everything he had lost, the former missionary seemed most concerned about a manuscript of his life he had written for his children and for his great-grandchildren.

"But even if it's gone," he said, "I'll never really lose it. I've got it all in my mind."

Then he turned his back on the home he had built 17 years ago, and he walked away.

Fires common in Southern California area

By JACK JONES
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Disastrous fires like that which on Wednesday swept down Montecito's parched slopes for decades have been a fact of life in Southern California with its brushy hillsides and canyons, hot winds and view-lot homes.

Santa Barbara County has had its share — notably the September, 1964, Montecito blaze which began near the origin of the latest fire and which destroyed 78 homes, killed a fireman, injured 46 others and burned 90,000 acres.

Then, in October, 1971, strong Santa Ana winds pushed flames through the Santa Ynez foothills east of Montecito and in eight days killed four men of a bulldozer-firefighter team, injured seven, burned nine homes and 14,200 acres.

— Bel-Air in November, 1961, when hundreds of luxury homes were turned to ashes by wind-whipped firestorms.

— Griffith Park in Los Angeles in October, 1933, when 29 men — welfare recipients working on a brush fire with picks and shovels — died as flames shifted and trapped them in a ravine.

— Pacoima Canyon in November, 1966, when 11 members of a professional "hot shot" firefightyer crew were trapped by flames on a steep hillside and burned to death.

— Malibu-Zuma Beach in November, 1943, when 150 homes were destroyed...

The list goes on and on. Topanga and Malibu appear frequently in yellowed old newspaper clips. So do the Verdugo Mountain foothills where flames have swept down on homes too near the brushline in Glendale, Burbank, Eagle Rock and Montrose...

The Bel-Air fire was the worst in Los Angeles history, exploding in arid brush of the wealthy colony Nov. 6, 1961, and moving so fast in erratic, high-intensity winds that entire blocks of homes would burn before frantic firemen even heard about it.

The fire destroyed more than 450 homes — many of them in the then-impressive $100,000-plus category — and damaged others.

Burned out were Zsa Zsa Gabor, actor Burt Lancaster, actress Joan Fontaine and others of the movie set.

Nine years later, in September, 1970, what was termed the worst series of brushfires in Southern California history erupted almost at once. Four of them joined to form a blazing front from Newhall to Malibu.

After managing to bring most of the various fires under control, officials made an aerial survey of Los Angeles, Ventura and San Diego Counties and made their assessment: 403 homes lost and 435,060 acres burned.

The death toll in those fires was 10.

But the deaths in that month were scattered, with bodies found one or two at a time in charred homes in remote canyons or brush areas. In November of 1966, 10 men had died at once and an 11th succumbed later.

They were members of a crew battling one of several brushfires raging in the northwestern San Fernando Valley. They were caught on a steep hillside south of the Pacoima Reservoir when a gust of wind drove the flames into them and trapped them against a rocky cliff.

Those episodes did not match the magnitude of that in the 1933 Griffith Park brush fire, when hundreds of men on welfare were thrown into the fight with picks and shovels and little or no knowledge of what to do.

They went down into a canyon and began beating out flames and trying to cut a firebreak.

Another brushfire — in the Cleveland National Forest in 1956 — killed 12 firefighters. That was in the Inaja Forest 40 miles northwest of San Diego. The dozen dead included four honor farm inmates and their guard.

One of the first massive home-destruction fires in Southern California was in November, 1943, when 150 homes were lost to a 20,000-acre blaze in the Santa Monica Mountains near Malibu and Zuma Beach.

The Malibu-Zuma area has suffered several major fires, including that of December, 1956, when 99 homes were lost there and in the Lake Sherwood region.

Two years later, flames swept through 20,000 acres around Malibu again under gale-force winds. Destroyed were 36 homes as 1,500 men retreated toward the sea along a 10-mile front.

A few days after that — on New Year's Eve of 1958 — fires in Topanga Canyon and Benedict Canyon wiped out a total of 71 homes.

Then, in July, 1959, Laurel Canyon in the densely populated Hollywood area was struck by a spectacular fire which destroyed 38 homes.

Blindness no bar to achievement, graduate says

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL

NEW YORK (AP) — "Society is not yet enlightened enough to allow you to be average. I really think the only way for a handicapped person to make it is to be way above average," says John McCann, who has been blind since birth.

McCann certainly is "way above average" himself. His Phi Beta Kappa key, his graduation as valedictorian from the State Universith of New York (SUNY) at Binghampton, his overall college average that was just one-tenth of a point shy of perfect and his upcoming matriculation to the Harvard Law School all testify to that.

McCann has accomplished these things in the face of his blindness and an automobile accident that damaged the nerves in his fingertips, making it almost impossible for him to read braille.

But although the 22-year-old said in an interview that he'd "rather play it safe and be twice as good as everyone else," he still insists he's "looking forward to the day when what I'm doing won't turn heads."

Meanwhile, though, the softspoken young man in jeans and sneakers is turning quite a few heads indeed. McCann has been hired temporarily by SUNY at Syracuse to head that school's summer program for blind college freshmen.

With remarkable independence McCann moves freely with a cane through Ozone Park, a quiet, out-of-the-way, residential neighborhood in the New York borough of Queens. He rides subways and buses routinely and walks in his own home with confidence and agility.

While still in college, McCann managed to find time to be a founding member of the Association for Disabled Individuals and to maintain his own physical fitness regimen.

McCann says he loves to ski and ice-skate, in the company of a sighted guide. And he also enjoyed running on his college's outdoor track.

"I found that if I dragged my cane along the inside of the track, I was all right," he said.

McCann attended the Lavelle School for the Blind in New York for the first nine years of his education. It was there that he learned to type, a skill he says is the single most important one any visually handicapped person can learn.

The Lavelle experience was a vital one, McCann admits, but he fears that such places can lead to "ghettoization" of the handicapped. He transferred to Christ the King High School in Middle Village, near his family's home.

"I felt strongly at that point that it was time to develop my social skills," said McCann, as aspiring politician. "It was time to meet and get along with seeing people.

"It's really a trade-off. There is no easy way to decide when to make the change."

McCann said he uses primarily recorded texts and notes for schoolwork, especially since the accident a couple of years ago. He jumped up and walked briskly across two rooms to dig out his "steno-hask."

A steno-mask is a large plastic cylinder that fits over the user's mouth and plugs into a tape recorder. With the device, a blind person can dictate notes in a normal voice without disturbing his classmates.

Braille writers occasionally are used, but McCann said they really are too noisy to be practical.

McCann said he gets most of his books from Recordings for the Blind (RFB), a free service for all visually and perceptually disabled persons. RFB can produce a recorded version of any book if a client supplies two copies and gives them two months to complete the task.

McCann said RFB performs a vital function, insisting that it not be thought of as a charity. "No handicapped person wants a handout," he explained. "They just want to be given the necessary supportive services."

McCann is working hard to dispel the notion that disabled people are helpless people. "Up until the middle of this century, that attitude was generated by the handicapped themselves," McCann said. "Now we say, 'Hey, we want a piece of that pie too.'"
