Christians Declare 'Self Rule' Status In Lebanese Sector

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — The Israeli-backed Christian militia holding a small enclave in southern Lebanon shelled a Lebanese army unit Wednesday as it joined U.N. peacekeepers in the area. Israeli radio said the Christians declared themselves under "self-rule" and proclaimed a new "Free Lebanon" state.

A United Nations spokesman in New York said the peacekeeping force headquarters in the town of Naqoura was "under very heavy mortar and artillery fire" early today from the Christian militiamen.

Liberation Goals Set

"Our intention will be to liberate all Lebanon from all the invaders and all who are foreigners and who have bad intentions against Lebanon," said Christian militia leader Maj. Saad Haddad, whose 1,500 rightist Christian troops control a six-mile strip along Lebanon's border with Israel.

Haddad's militia contends the Lebanese forces are heavily influenced by Syria, which are seen as rivals for control of Lebanon. The Israelis and Haddad's Christians share the view that a Lebanese army aided by Syria will allow Palestinian guerrilla infiltration of the Israeli border and heighten tension in the area.

Israeli radio said Haddad, announced the birth of "Free Lebanon" at a news conference in the northern Israeli town of Metulla.

Lebanon's state radio called Haddad's statement "Israeli-inspired secession." Pierre Gemayel, leader of the rightist Christian Phalange Party, also condemned the declaration, saying "enough of states within a state." Gemayel's much larger forces number some 20,000 men and are based primarily in northern Lebanon.

Statement Denounced

A statement from the presidential palace denounced Haddad's step and said it "does not attach any importance to it." It asked that the world not overestimate Haddad's remarks.

There was no immediate response from Israeli officials to Haddad's declaration. Diplomatic sources reported that the United States had asked Israel to be a moderating influence on its Christian allies and allow the Lebanese army deployment in the area to proceed.

An Egyptian Foreign Ministry spokesman said his country "strongly condemns" what he called the seccessionist movement in southern Lebanon.

Cairo's official Middle East News Agency quoted the unnamed spokesman as saying Egypt opposes "all irresponsible actions and foreign interference which threaten the peace and security of the Middle East."

Haddad's artillery shelled the 560-man Lebanese contingent as it moved into the village of Dirdghayya, the battalion headquarters about seven miles east of Tyre. Two Lebanese soldiers and a civilian were reported injured in the shellfire.

Haddad forces were given control of a strip along the 59-mile border with Israel when the Israelis withdrew from the south after they moved against Palestinian guerrillas in the March 1978 invasion.

U.N Headquarters Attacked

The attack on U.N. headquarters in Naqoura was reported by U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani. He said 300 shells fell on the encampment within a 90-minute period early Thursday.

The U.N. troops are authorized to fire only in self-defense, but Giuliani said the peacekeepers had not returned the fire "as far as I know." He said the United Nations had contacted officials in Lebanon and Israel in an attempt to get the barrage stopped.

Earlier, Samir Sambar, a U.N. spokesman in Beirut, said two civilians were killed Wednesday in Haddad's shelling of Irish U.N. troops, and Norwegian and Nigerian troops also were being pounded by Haddad's guns.

A U.N. spokesman in Jerusalem, however, said one Norwegian soldier was killed and one wounded in the shelling.

Spokesman Hugo Rochas said all seven units of U.N. forces "came under artillery or mortar fire during the day."

U.N. officials said 30 Lebanese soldiers were assigned to each of the U.N.'s Senegalese, Fijian, Dutch, Nigerian and Irish contingents and the remainder occupied a large area east of Tyre.

U.N. spokesman Sambar said the civilian U.N. staff at Naqoura, just off the Israeli border, was evacuated when it came under small arms fire from Haddad's men.

He said a U.N. helicopter returning to Naqoura from a trip to Beirut was hit by small arms fire, and three of Haddad's men were seen placing explosives around the helicopter pad. One of the alleged saboteurs was killed, he said.

Court Jolts Media In Ruling On Libel

WASINGTON (AP) — Public figures who sue a journalist or news organization for libel may probe the "editorial process" that led to the allegedly libelous statement, the Supreme Court said Wednesday.

Voting 6-3, the justices ruled that reporters and editors are not constitutionally protected from being forced to explain how they prepared a challenged report — and may be asked questions about their "state of mind" during that preparation.

The high court's secret deliberations and decision in a case that alters the nation's libel law were subject to an apparent leak earlier this week.

ABC News reported accurately Monday what the court's ruling would be, and that Justice Byron R. White would write the majority opinion.

On Tuesday night, the network "leaked" in a nationally televised report another still-pending decision in a case from Nebraska — a ruling which ABC said will give prisoners fewer rights when applying for parole. It said the court decided that some due process guarantees do not apply to state prison inmates up for parole.

Such premature word of a decision is extremely rare in the court's 190-year history, and the ABC reports apparently have spurred an internal investigation among court employees.

Victory For Colonel

The decision in the journalism case is a big victory for former Army Lt. Col. Anthony Herbert, who is suing CBS and others in a $44.7 million libel action.

The ruling means Herbert's lawyers will be able to ask at least some of the questions they previously have been barred from asking in pretrial proceedings called "discovery" by the courts.

Herbert's 1973 suit named as defendants CBS, the network's "60 Minutes" news program, correspondent Mike Wallace, producer Barry Lando and the Atlantic Monthly magazine.

Herbert, who was stripped of a battalion command, gained national prominence in the early 1970s when he formally charged his superior officers with war crimes and atrocities in South Vietnam.

Lando's investigation of Herbert's experience led to a Feb. 4, 1973 "60 Minutes" telecast called "The Selling of Colonel Herbert."

Charges Questioned

In it, the truth of Herbert's charges was called into question. Lando also wrote an article for the Atlantic Monthly based on his findings.

Herbert's suit charges that the program and article "falsely and maliciously" portrayed him as a liar, injuring his reputation.

When Herbert's lawyers attempted to question Lando in pretrial proceedings, the producer refused to answer questions about the editorial process, how he decided what to use and what not to use in the telecast.

In his 23-page opinion Wednesday, Justice White said, "According an absolute privilege to the editorial process of a media defendant in a libel case is not required, authorized or presaged by our

Malibu Homes Threatened By Boulders

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — A steady stream of rocks fell from the cliff overlooking Pacific Coast Highway again Wednesday, but residents whose $500,000 homes are threatened by the sometimes automobile-size boulders insist they will not move out.

"I have 24 years of my life in this house," said 72-year-old Carmen Jaffe, who wept at the thought of abandoning her home. "I don't want to leave. I'm not going to give up 24 years of my life because of the negligence of Caltrans."

Residents Complain

Mrs. Jaffe and her nephew, who rents the first floor of his aunt's home, contend the State Department of Transportation (Caltrans) failed to respond quickly enough when they and other residents first complained of slide danger weeks ago.

Caltrans began monitoring the two-lane highway along the scenic coast 30 miles northeast of Los Angeles 10 days ago, when rocks smashed through the windshields of two cars and injured four people. All suffered minor injuries but have been released from the hospital, authorities said.

Road Section Closed

Now, a 5½-mile section of the road is closed indefinitely and dents and holes scar the front of Mrs. Jaffe's expensive beachfront home. More than 30,000 tons of rocks and other debris have fallen from the mountainside since Friday and still clutter the normally congested highway.

Geologists monitoring the cliffs say fissures in the mountainside have nearly doubled in depth and width since Sunday and hundreds of small, new cracks have been discovered. The slide shows no signs of stopping, and geologists can't come up with a solution until it does.

Although officials acknowledge it's too early to predict what may eventually happen, some have talked of permanently closing the road and building a detour — or engineering a major construction project to stabilize the mountain through extensive regrading and terracing.

But no matter what how long the danger persists, Mrs. Jaffe and several of her neighbors, whose homes sport signs reading "Unsafe — Do Not Enter or Occupy," say they won't leave.

Her nephew, Gary Harwin, said the homeowners in the threatened section believe that if they evacuate, Caltrans will take the most expedient rather than the safest way of solving the problem.

Picket Lines Crossed At City Strike Sites

By KIM PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

BRICKLAYERS, electricians, plumbers and some laborers have been crossing picket lines and returning to work at several local construction sites since late last week, according to some Lubbock contractors.

More union workers are expected to report to work this morning as negotiations between city contractors and a striking laborers union local resume today.

Contractors reported no problems with workers crossing picket lines Wednesday, as the strike entered its 16th day.

Leo Padgett of Padgett Construction Co. said some carpenters and electricians employed by his firm had returned to their jobs late last week and that "they were still working at noon today (Wednesday)."

Skeleton Crew Returns

A spokesman for Smith and Sweet Masonry Contractors Inc. said a skeleton crew of bricklayers returned to work Wednesday. "They did not give us any notification or a reason why they were going back to work," the spokesman said. "They just showed up."

Another contractor L.C. Burt of Burt Masonry said that about 40 bricklayers and laborers employed by his firm also returned to work Wednesday. While some union workers resumed work on construction projects at Texas Tech University and the new Lubbock County Jail site, Burt said work at a 19th Street construction site, which has not been picketed during the strike, continued as usual.

"Our Medical Village construction site has never been picketed during this strike so we just kept on working," Burt said. "I just don't think they have the manpower to picket the places they want to." Burt contends that the striking laborers union local only has about 38 members despite claims by union spokesmen of 300 members.

Jail Work Continues

A spokesman for Furrs Inc. reported that plumbers returned to work at the Broadway and Avenue G construction site of the new Lubbock County Jail.

Although no workers had returned to work for Page and Wirtz Construction Co., a spokesman for the firm said the man who had picketed the firm since the strike began on April 2 did not show up Wednesday.

Negotiations between city contractors and the striking laborers union local should resume today, according to contractors' spokesman H.R. Bundock.

Bundock said Wednesday he plans to set up a meeting today between seven contractors and a union representative at the request of the union representative.

The Avalanche-Journal learned Wednesday that six contractors had received telegrams from John Wallace, international representative for Laborers Union International Local 1253, requesting a joint meeting with the contractors for negotiation purposes.

The firms who received the request are Claude Martin & Sons Inc., H.R. Bundock, Furrs Inc., Smith and Sweet Ma-

Conroe Soaked By 10-Inch Rain Deluge

A-J News Services

WHILE clearing skies and mild temperatures are in the forecast for South Plains residents today, residents in most of southeast Texas are under a flash flood watch.

A storm carrying high winds dumped heavy rains on the Conroe area Wednesday, leaving the city without power and flooding subdivisions.

The National Weather Service said 8 to 10 inches of rain had fallen in the area Wednesday morning, and John Caswell, Civil Defense coordinator in Houston said about two inches an hour continued to fall in the afternoon.

Caswell said some people were being evacuated from their homes in portions of Montgomery County where the west fork of the San Jacinto River was spilling over its banks above Lake Houston.

Schools in Conroe Independent School District were closed Wednesday as was Interstate 45, which was covered with a foot of water. A shopping center near the highway reportedly was flooded to the tops of cars in the parking lot.

A weak Pacific cool front causing isolated thunderclouds to build across the South Plains failed, however, to produce any significant moisture in Lubbock area cities by late dusk.

The system should continue to hold Lubbock temperatures in the upper 70s this afternoon and the middle 70s on Friday. The overnight low should be near 50.

A slight warming trend is expected for West Texas through the weekend.

Thousands More Flee Flood In Mississippi

By The Associated Press

THOUSANDS of Mississippians downstream from their stunned capital city of Jackson packed bags and fled Wednesday to escape record flooding of the Pearl River that already has cost half a billion dollars and displaced more than 17,000 persons.

In neighboring Alabama, hundreds more joined the 5,000 families in the Black Belt region who have abandoned their homes to rising water. Officials warned of the added peril of snakes and alligators driven from their river lairs.

While the Deep South bore the brunt of this week's floods, which have been blamed for at least five deaths, the 2,000 residents of the northwestern Minnesota town of Warren awoke to find streets inundated by the overflowing Snake River which runs through the center of town.

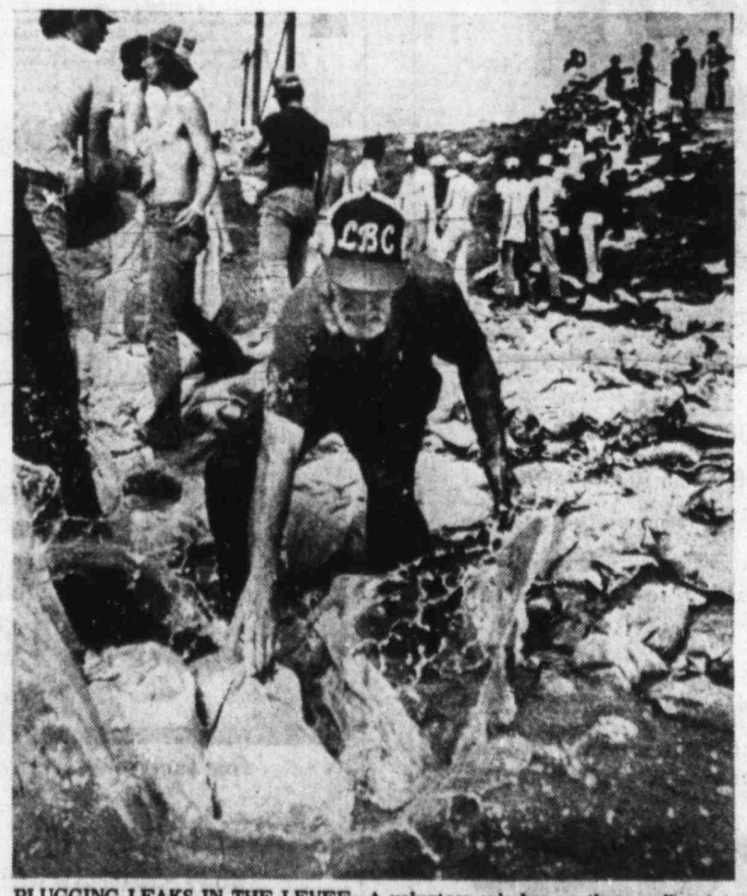

Mary Irby and her 10 children of Selma, Ala., a city of about 28,000 on the Alabama River, were among hundreds plucked from the floods by boat.

"This man came up in a boat to try to get us out to feed the hogs," she said. "But the hogs had all come up on our front porch. That's when I knew it was time to leave."

The water was inching down in Jackson, but it still lapped at the rooftops of some houses and officials warned of record high water advancing on communities to the South.

Jackson Mayor Dale Danks warned residents to stay out of flooded neighbor-

Three Airlines Confirm Bids To Serve Lubbock

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE GREAT air race to serve Lubbock ended Wednesday, with no further airlines applying to fly into the Hub City following the applications of three major carriers within seven days.

Checks with the dockets clerk of the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington, D.C. and Lubbock aviation director Marvin Coffee revealed that Frontier, Ozark and North Central airlines have requested authority to connect Lubbock with Austin and Denver as part of a CAB "show cause order" that expired Wednesday.

The new rush for the Lubbock air market, which pits the three newcomers against Continental Airlines, occurred as a result of the show cause order, which was issued in an effort to "drum up some business," according to George Meyers, a CAB spokesman in Fort Worth.

Under new CAB deregulation policies, any airline may apply for service into any city at any time, but "most activity into a city the size of Lubbock or Austin comes under deals like this," Meyers said.

"The Lubbock-Austin Show Cause," as this particular order is known, is a mandate to all other airlines to show cause why Continental, which originally applied for the Lubbock-Austin-Denver routes, should not receive permission to fly them. Each of the three respondents told the CAB in effect that they, rather than Continental, should get the routes.

Continental now has until April 30 to defend its initial request against the three counterproposals. The CAB then will decide "within 30 to 60 days," according to CAB special counsel Gary Edles, which airline(s) will get the routes.

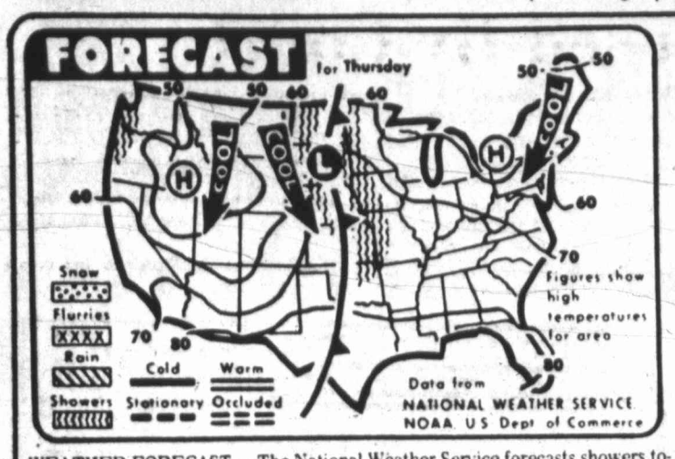

"The CAB probably will award the routes to all the carriers seeking them, although that's certainly not a guarantee," Edles said.

And even if all four carriers did get the new approval, Edles warned it was "very unlikely that all those getting permission will actually move in and fly them. They'll all check out the competition and decide for themselves. Right now, they all just want the approval; they want that option."

Indeed, spokesmen for all four airlines acknowledged pursuit of the routes, but none would guarantee their carrier would begin service if awarded them.

Continental "definitely will respond" to the show cause, said spokesman Bruce Plowman from the carrier's home office in Los Angeles, although he admitted he

Grass, Rain, Art Lovers Menace Continued Survival Of Pompeii

POMPEII, Italy (AP) — Pompeii, the bustling Roman city transformed into a ghost town by a blanket of volcanic dust 1,900 years ago, is threatened today with a second death, say Italian preservationists.

"We're doing our best to preserve and consolidate what has been excavated, but the task is overwhelming," said Dr. Stefano De Caro, the 29-year-old resident archaeologist and administrative director of Pompeii.

A Pompeii exhibit is now touring the United States.

Bruno Molajoli, an art historian, termed the fight against the city's deterioration "almost hopeless ... if unchecked it will lead to the total, final destruction of Pompeii."

The ancient city, located about 14 miles southeast of Naples, was once a popular resort of stately one-and two-story villas, shops, paved streets and public theaters graced with statues and mosaics.

But on the morning of Aug. 24, 79 A.D., the long-dormant volcano Vesuvius blew up, covering the city in ashes. The site was discovered in the early 1700s and unearthed. Now, the forces of nature, thievery and poor administration are taking their toll.

Two-thirds of the oval-shaped city, about two miles in circumference and the home of 20,000 people at the time of the eruption, has been laid bare. There are no plans to excavate the remainder since officials want to preserve what has been found.

Molajoli said the unearthed buildings are mostly brick with marble or plaster facing, which is not fit to resist severe weather. The houses have no roofs because they collapsed under the weight of cinders, exposing to the sun and rain the delicate wall paintings.

The city's paved streets and stepping stones are taking a "terrible beating" from the feet of more than 1.3 million visitors a year, while a parasite-infested vegetation chokes the ancient walls and threatens the foundations, Molajoli said. The growth must be pulled by hand because chemicals can adversely affect the old structures.

Security is also a major problem. De Caro said he needs 250 guards to do an effective job, and since he has only 178, he has closed parts of Pompeii to visitors.

Four serious thefts took place last year. In one, thieves took four valuable statues and chiseled 6 paintings from the walls of a house.

A system of lights and an "unobtrusive" fence were built on the northern edge of the city, but De Caro said he does not expect the security measures to end thefts and vandalism.

Most art snatchers are motivated by "artistic fanaticism" and not by money-making considerations, De Caro said, since the artifacts have been catalogued and are known to museums and dealers.

Souvenir-seeking tourists take their toll by sneaking off with bits of decorated plaster, mosaics or stones. Others engrave their names on the walls next to the names of ancient Pompeiians.

De Caro and Molajoli agree that it is impossible for only one resident archaeologist to oversee the city. "It's a job for 20," said Molajoli.

De Caro said he must devote half his time to paper work, and he has fewer than 50 technicians and laborers to do restoration and maintenance.

Italy's parliament appropriated nearly $4 million in 1976 for a five-year program for Pompeii, but De Caro said a permanent arrangement must be found.

"Pompeii's last hope rests on international solidarity of those who are willing to preserve this treasure for the common interest of all nations," says Molajoli.

"We are often asked how we plan to commemorate the 1,900th anniversary of the eruption of Vesuvius," said one staffer. "We're so preoccupied with problems of daily upkeep that we hardly can think of any other project."

The immensely popular Pompeii exhibition has drawn 4,000 to 5,000 persons a day during its tour of Boston, Chicago and Dallas. The exhibit opens in New York's Museum of Natural History on April 22.

Employment Office Folk Out Of City

Representatives of the Lubbock office of the Texas Employment Commission this week are traveling to Wichita Falls and Dallas to assist disaster victims and to attend a state convention.

Alex Torres is in Wichita Falls to assist with the increased workload in the commission office there following last week's tornado, according to Bert Darden, Lubbock office manager.

Others from Lubbock district offices who are in Wichita Falls are Edna Driskill from Plainview and Ed Burchell from Amarillo.

Twenty-four other employees are attending the state institute of the International Association of Personnel in Employment Security, Darden said.

The theme of the annual educaional institute is "Communication — Key to Improvement." The meetings begin today and continue through Saturday.

Early Rhodesian Vote Suggests Large Turnout Due In Black Rule Elections

SALISBURY (AP) — Officials predict at least 60 percent of the electorate will vote in the five-day elections underway to bring limited black rule to Rhodesia, which has been dominated by whites since British empire-builder Cecil Rhodes founded it 90 years ago.

If this proves true when the elections are over Saturday, it will lend credence to claims by black and white politicians that Rhodesians see the vote as the only way to end the bloodshed caused by racial strife, and hope it will win international recognition for their country.

Geoff Hedges, Rhodesia's assistant police commissioner, said "terrorist intimidation" was responsible for a low turnout Wednesday at Fort Victoria in the south, where guerrila activity as been high.

Election Registrar Eric Pope-Simmonds told a reporters 1,074,570 voters — or 38 percent of the electorate — voted from poll opening Tuesday morning to 2 p.m. Wednesday.

He said 339,167 votes were cast Wednesday by five hours before the polls closed at 7 p.m. and about 25 percent of the electorate voted Tuesday.

Hedges said that in some cases guerrillas were abducting blacks in rural villages to prevent them from voting. But he said overall guerrilla activity had been lower than expected.

The country mobilized 100,000 soldiers to protect voters and voting places from guerrilla attacks.

Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, coleaders of the Patriotic Front guerrilla organization, insist the new government will be a facade for continued white rule and have vowed to disrupt the elections. So far only a few scattered incidents have been reported.

When white Prime Minister Ian Smith unilaterally declared independence from Britain in 1965 to head off black rule, the world turned its back on Rhodesia. Only neighboring South Africa recognizes it and United Nations-imposed sanctions have hit it hard.

Rhodesia managed to survive economically despite the sanctions, but six years of increasingly bitter guerrilla war forced Smith to change his course last March.

He and three moderate black leaders formed a biracial transition government and announced one-man, one-vote elections.

Bishop Abel Muzorewa, heavily favored to become the country's first black prime minister, is one of those moderates.

The white population, 3 percent of the approximately 6.8 million people in Rhodesia, is guaranteed 28 of the 100 seats in Parliament and control of police, military, judiciary and civil service for at least five years as a means of safeguarding minority rights.

Black moderates contend this is an adjustment period, a compromise to prevent an exodus of whites, who have skills the country badly needs.

After Tuesday's voting, Muzorewa told reporters Rhodesia would not bow to "emotional" objections to the agreement its blacks had reached with whites.

"Whites in this country aren't visitors or tourists," he said. "They belong here from the human rights point of view and we regard them now as we do ourselves."

Two Die In El Paso Shootout

EL PASO (AP) — Several months of undercover work climaxed in a blaze of gunfire, late Tuesday night, that left two men dead and three others wounded, including two law enforcement officers.

"Evidently something went wrong during the transaction and they started shooting," said El Paso Police Lt. John Lanahan.

One man surrendered to police Wednesday, and another was arrested at his home, said Lanahan.

"We are operating under the assumption that there was still another man at the scene," said Lanahan. He said police found a trail of blood leading away from the scene but that neither of the men arrested Wednesday had been wounded.

Deputy County Medical Examiner Jim Kingwell identified the dead men as Armando Esparza, 31, and James Mason.

The wounded police officers were identified as El Paso Police Capt. Al Castro and U.S. Customs agent John Volivia.

Lanahan said Castro and Volivia were working undercover along with Sgt. Bill Pfiel, who was unharmed in the shooting incident. The other wounded man was identified as Charles Wayne Louis, 22, of El Paso. He was hit in the right eye by a shotgun blast and may lose the sight in that eye, said Lanahan.

Charges of attempted capital murder were filed against Louis, Anthony Smith, 25, and Joe Smith, 19, by Justice of the Peace Jose Baca. Bonds were set at $100,000 for Smith and $50,000 for the other two men.

Lanahan said Castro went into a nearby shed to retrieve a hidden shotgun when negotiations with the men started to go bad. He said the shooting started while Castro was inside the shed.

"Castro opened fire with the shotgun, and when he was hit, Sgt. Pfiel — who had already emptied his revolver — picked up the shotgun and continued firing," said Lanahan.

Castro was shot in the chest and Volivia in the hip. He said both men were in stable condition Wednesday.

The officers had been working undercover for several months on a special assignment. However, Lanahan said that assignment also involved other cases.

Traditional Observance Brings Official's Ouster

PEKING (AP) — A party official who commemorated his father's death by burning incense, giving a banquet and receiving gifts has been dismissed from his posts for practicing "feudal superstitious activities," the People's Daily newspaper said Wednesday.

The newspaper said Wang Xian-yun, an official in Henan province, also erected a traditional "two-story paper building 12 feet high in front of the funeral shed."

"Wang's behavior has exerted a very bad influence among the broad masses of the commune members," the newspaper said.

66 OFFICERS SUSPENDED

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard Commissioner Sir David McNee suspended 66 officers being investigated for wrongdoing and said corruption will always exist in London's police force.

"The Metropolitan Police is part of London society and has all the warts and blemishes of that society. I will never eliminate corruption from the Metropolitan Police .... All I can hope is to reduce it and keep it at the lowest level possible," he told interviewers Tuesday.

Televising Of Trial Refused By Court

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday refused to let the public view the nation's "beautiful judicial system" through television of a woman's upcoming Jefferson County drug trial.

Ima Jean Baker complained to the Supreme Court that State District Judge Leonard Giblin had automatically rejected her pretrial motion to televise the trial without a hearing.

Court records show she has been indicted on six felony counts for allegedly delivering drugs to undercover agents. Her trial is scheduled for May.

Mrs. Baker asked Giblin for a "public trial." She said the news media should be allowed to televise the trial if they so desired.

He purportedly denied her motion on the basis that the Code of Judicial Conduct bans cameras in the courtroom — even if they are not disruptive — except to film proceedings that might be shown later for instructional purposes at school.

The Texas Supreme Court adopted the code in 1974.

Mrs. Baker argued the ban violates her Sixth Amendment right to "a speedy and public trial." Just as the rules in the code must yield to law, they also must yield to the U.S. Constitution, she said.

Her lawyer contended a public trial "is essential to her trial strategy and constitutes a vital part of her defense."

His plea for a writ of mandamus asked the Supreme Court to order the trial judge to hear Mrs. Baker's motion and to declare unconstitutional the section of the code that bans televised trials.

"To watch this beautiful judicial system in action through the electronic media will not only keep the public informed of police and judicial activity, but, the quality of justice in general," according to Mrs. Baker's application.

Modern techniques eliminate the "hazards of disruption," the application added.

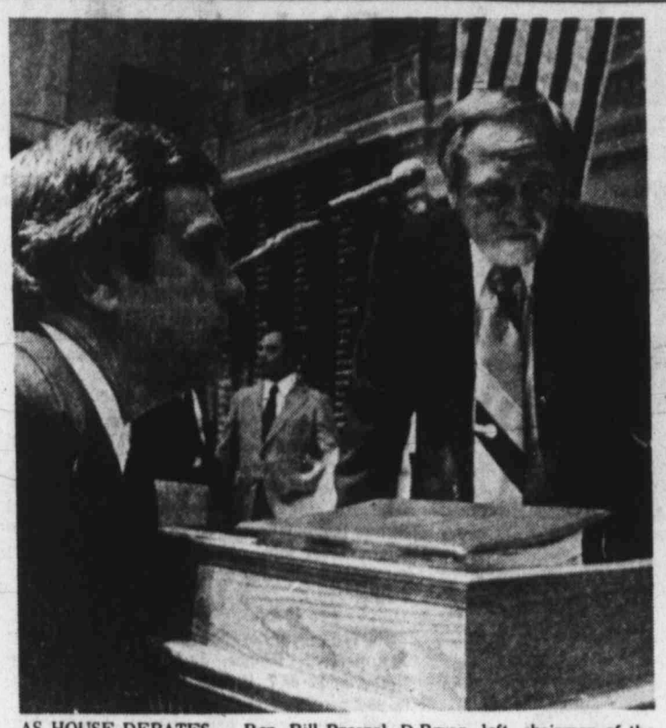

The Supreme Court denied the plea without comment.

Teeth Lost In Brawl Reimplanted In Mouth

EINDHOVEN, Netherlands (AP) — A 13-year-old Dutch girl who lost her two front teeth in a youth club brawl had them successfully reimplanted by surgeons, authorities said.

Police officers had to retrieve the teeth from a trash can at the youth club. They had been discarded before surgeons concluded they could be restored as long as the roots still were attached.

AS HOUSE DEBATES — Rep. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, left, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, and House Speaker Bill Clayton discuss a maneuver as the House begins debate, Wednesday on the $20.2 billion appropriations bill. (AP Laserphoto)

House Adds $20 Million To State Budget To Aid Children On Welfare

AUSTIN (AP) — A small sack of cheap clothes and toilet articles would consume a child's monthly welfare check, Rep. Craig Washington demonstrated Wednesday.

Washington's emotional appeal brought an overwhelming House vote to add $20 million to the state budget bill for Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC).

The additional money would raise the average monthly welfare payment from $32.58 to $38.60 per child, he said.

The 1980-81 appropriation bill before the House would spend $20.2 billion from all funding sources and leave about $370 million available for tax cuts or other spending.

Rep. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, chairman of the House Appropriationss Committee, opposed Washington's amendment but accepted it after representatives refused to table it, 37-103.

Washington, D-Houston, is a black but said this wasn't a case of a "black man fighting for black kids. I'm fighting for little hungry kids because they don't have anybody but you and me."

He told the House 56 percent of the children on the welfare rolls are white.

Washington brought a brown paper sack to the podium and emptied it item by item to show what a $32.58 monthly welfare check would buy at "the very cheapest place in town where they sell dry goods."

He pulled out a pair of children's blue jeans, three pair of socks, a pair of "the cheapest shoes with crepe soles you could find anywhere," a roll-on deodorant, a tube of toothpaste, a tube of shampoo and a bottle of hand lotion.

The bag's contents totaled $27.20, Washington said, and that left "pocket change" from a $32.58 check. The leftover money, he said, would have to cover "shelter, other toilet articles, a shirt, underwear, a toothbrush."

"I want you to look at what you are giving our children because you will see them again. You'll see them at the Texas Department of Corrections or the Texas Youth Council. ... If you could save 10 people from the Texas Department of Corrections, it would pay dividends. ... Help them while they need help," Washington said.

Presnal contended the added $20 million wouldn't raise AFDC payments by as much as Washington said. He said the best way to help welfare children would be to retain the committee's recommended $100 per year "non-recurring payments" to help with such things as school clothes.

Washington replied that his figures showed the average grant would, in fact, rise to $38.60.

In another 3rd graf

In another development, Rep. Bob Ware, R-Fort Worth, contended the appropriations committee's bill increases spending at a faster rate than the growth of the Texas economy, in violation of the state constitution.

Ware, applying an economic growth formula based on personal income, said the bill was $167 million over the constitutional ceiling established by the voters in the 1978 Tax Relief Amendment.

He said he probably would raise a point of order at the conclusion of the appropriations debate. Legislators can override the spending limit only by a two-thirds vote of each chamber.

Rep. Irma Rangel, D-Kingsville, won a 80-60 vote to attach an amendment providing $500,000 to continue pilot programs of career training for welfare mothers.

She said existing pilot programs in Fort Worth and Brownsville are helping mothers and their children to get off the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) rolls.

"The state of Texas will be saving much more money when these women get off welfare and become self-supporting and regain their dignity," Miss Rangel said.

Members of the appropriations committee said the budget already has $22 million for employment programs for welfare recipients, but Miss Rangel said they don't provide real training.

Rep. Milton Fox, R-Houston, tried to cut the 14.8 percent raises provided in the bill for district judges to 5.1 percent, the same as state employees and teachers.

District judges make $35,700 now, not counting supplements most receive from their counties, and the bill would raise them to $41,000 in 1980 and $43,000 in 1981.

"It's unconscionable to grant this size increase to one small group," Fox said. He noted that legislators' own retirement is tied by law to district judges' salaries.

"A very careful look is going to be taken at the size of this increase because of the very personal interest we have," Fox said.

Rep. Jerry Donaldson, D-Gatesville, said local supplements create huge disparities, with judges in Fox's county making $49,400 while those in some rural counties get no supplements at all.

Fox's amendment was tabled 78-57.

Also tabled were amendments to reduce the 42 percent two-year raise for district attorneys who do not practice law on the side and to restrict all judges and prosecutors to a 5.1 percent increase.

14 Injured In Kansas City Bus Crash

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Fourteen people were treated for injuries suffered when two buses collided on a bridge during Wednesday rush hour traffic.

The Kansas City Area Transportation Authority buses collided before 7:30 a.m. on the Missouri River bridge linking the downtown area with North Kansas City.

A spokesman for Truman Medical Center said the most seriously injured passenger was a woman with cuts on her lip. Most victims were expected to be released after treatment.

Although most starfish have five rays, some have six or more, and 12-armed species have been taken in the Gulf Mexico.

HR 2626 Is Bad Medicine

NOT ONLY has the Hospital Cost Containment bill encountered strong opposition from its victim, the hospital industry, but also from legislators usually more open to government intervention in health care.

The bill (S 570, HR 2626) has the support of President Carter who considers it part of his anti-inflationary program. It is supposed to reduce the rate of increase of the soaring prices of hospital goods and services.

While debate continues, a Heritage Foundation analyst this week said his research indicates there is strong evidence that government intervention and runaway malpractice litigation are the major contributors to the problem.

Any legislation which does not deal with these problems, says Samuel T. Francis, likely will not work.

CRITICS POINT out that the increase in hospital costs is due to government intervention in the health care market, to the third-party reimbursement system, to spiraling labor and energy costs (hospitals are intensive consumers of both), and to the vastly increased burden of malpractice insurance which must be passed on to the consumer in higher prices.

Francis stresses two ways in which governmental intervention in health care matters has served to increase prices.

First by seeking to make health care more available to low income groups through programs such as Medicare and Medicaid, the government already has stimulated demand and, hence, consumption of health care goods and services.

Second as government programs and regulations increase, the costs of regulation also increase. The Social Security Administration has calculated that in FY 75, federal and state costs for administration of Medicare and Medicaid were $1.1 billion. Repeat, for administration. Not for services rendered.

"AT THE present time, for example," writes Francis, "the Crouse Irving Memorial Hospital of Syracuse finds that there are 164 different government agencies that supervise almost every aspect of its operations.

"The Hospital Association of New York found that 25 percent of NY hospital costs were due solely to government regulation —more than $1.1 billion. This figure works out to $38.85 per day for every patient and the equivalent of 56,000 hospital employes working full time on regulation, or 115 million worker-hours a year (in New York alone)."

Every hospital in America would be subject to supervision in budgetary matters by HEW under the bills' regulatory mechanisms as proposed.

It would extend the centralized power of the federal government enormously and strangle the last breath of autonomy from our hospitals. It will limit access to health care and force hospitals to abandon progress in their services.

It's bad medicine. It should be thrown out.

AN EDITORIAL:

Antitrust Bills Untrustworthy

BILLS TO ENRICH activist lawyers at the expense of an orderly business climate await action in the 96th Congress.

Three measures—S 300, HR 2060 and HR 2204—would expose business to open-ended antitrust consumer class actions and what the Chamber of Commerce of the United States calls "ruinous money damages."

Since the Sherman Act of 1890, persons directly injured in their business or property have been encouraged by the possibility of treble damages to bring antitrust suits against alleged violators.

The proposed laws, however, would extend that encouragement even to indirect purchasers under the class-action theory.

PROPONENTS of the bills argue that the collection of damages from an antitrust violator should not be limited to, say, the wholesaler who buys from a price-fixing manufacturer.

If the legislation passes, retailers or even ultimate consumers who would have a very small stake in any recovery from the defendant manufacturer would be given standing to sue as part of a class.

Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., is the chief perpetrator of this legislation in the Senate. Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., is the prime mover in the House.

One result of the proposal, if it becomes law, would be to catch the wholesaler in the middle. If he had passed along any illegal overcharge by the manufacturer, he could become the focus of the courtroom arguments instead of a principal accuser.

"Most private enforcement (of antitrust laws) would then be confined to consumer class actions, with little compensation to any but the class-action lawyers," the national Chamber of Commerce warns.

THE LEGISLATION was introduced in an attempt to overturn a Supreme Court decision in a case involving Illinois Brick.

In that case, the Court held that "the antitrust laws will be more effectively enforced by concentrating the full recovery for the overcharge in the direct purchaser."

Opponents of the Kennedy-Rodino bills point out that to go beyond the direct purchaser is to make proof of actual damages almost impossible.

The net result, then, would be merely to enrich "clientless" class-action lawyers who could in effect blackmail defendant businesses into expensive out-of-court settlements that would give the lawyers fat fees.

Such a prospect is not in the long-range interest of the consumer; the legislation is, in fact, anti-consumer in nature masquerading under false colors.

ART BUCHWALD:

Boston Brouhaha Just Buncha 'Baked Beans'

WASHINGTON—The most pressing question Washington faces today is whether we will get the Gilbert Stuart portraits of George and Martha Washington.

For those who have not been following the controversy, the Smithsonian Institution bought the paintings for $5 million from Boston's impoverished Athenaeum Library to hang in the National Portrait Gallery in Washington.

Suddenly Bostonians are up in arms. The idea of losing the paintings caused all the politicians in Massachusetts to scream that Washington was stealing their state's heritage.

Mayor White said that everyone knows Washington has no culture and the sale could only be compared to the Mona Lisa being sold to the Arabs.

My answer to White is, "Baked beans." If any city is lacking in culture it's Boston.

It doesn't have a first-class university, a decent symphony orchestra or an accredit museum.

BOSTONIANS CAN'T tell the difference between a Rembrandt and a hockey puck.

I go to Boston a lot and I have many friends there. But not once has anyone ever said to me, "Would you like to see the Gilbert Stuart portraits of George and Martha Washington?"

Once I said to a pal on the Boston Globe, "I'd love to see Picasso." And he replied, "He isn't here any more. He was traded by the Patriots for a place kicker and two draft choices."

I believe it's silly for Americans to argue which city has more culture. I think the decision as to where the portraits should hang must be left to the wishes of the people involved.

I AM FORTUNATE to have in my possession a tape made during the sitting for the portraits.

It isn't generally known, but Stuart painted President and Mrs. Washington at the same time because George wanted to save money.

The tape was given to me by the Smithsonian, and they have authenticated that the voices are those of George, Martha and Gilbert Stuart.

Here is a partial transcript:

WASHINGTON: Gil, what do you intend to do with these portraits?

STUART: It is my dream, Mr. President, that some day they will hang in the National Portrait Gallery in the nation's capital.

WASHINGTON: I'd like that, wouldn't you, Martha?

MARTHA: What other choices do we have?

STUART: Well, I heard from an art dealer that Boston would like them.

MARTHA: You mean the home of that dreadful Yankee, John Adams?

STUART: That's the way I felt about it, Ma'am. They have no appreciation of art. Just the other day I heard Paul Revere say, "If you've seen one portrait, you've seen them all."

MARTHA: George, I've never asked anything of you before. But you have to promise me that I'll never hang in Boston.

WASHINGTON: (laughing) Martha, you worry too much. The Bostonians are too cheap to buy a Gilbert Stuart painting, much less a pair.

MARTHA: Nevertheless, you must promise.

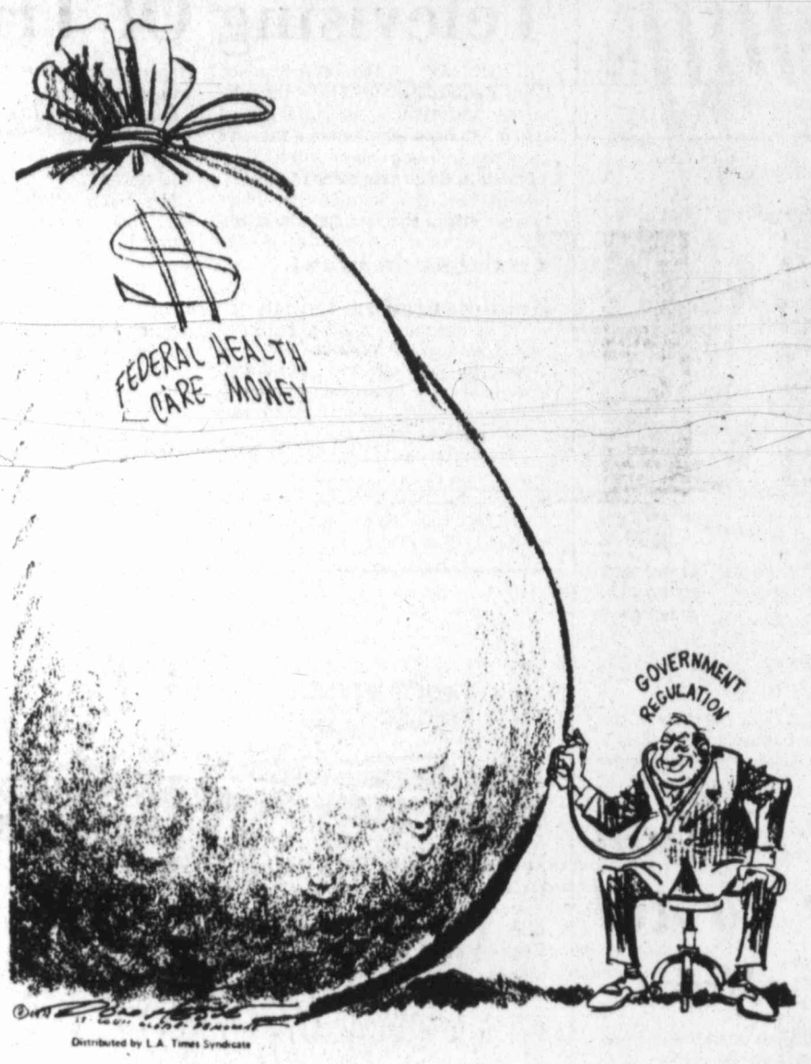

WASHINGTON: All right, Martha, I promise. Gilbert, you're a witness. I never want our portraits to hang in a city that throws Coca-Cola bottles at opposing baseball teams.

STUART: I couldn't agree with you more. I'd rather have my work hanging in Cleveland.

That was the end of the tape, but I believe it speaks for itself. The three people involved have been turning over in their graves knowing the pictures were in Boston.

But they'll be jumping for joy once the portraits are safely ensconced in the city of Washington, where they belong.

ROLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

A Really Big 'Shoe'

EVANS

TEHRAN—With the great unifying force behind the Iranian revolution having vanished with the toppled shah, architects of the new "Islamic Republic" face the gravest peril in the immediate future from Soviet intrigue, border wars and a disastrous economy, with the U.S. powerless on the sidelines.

Expulsion of the shah was the first shoe; the second has yet to drop.

"The Soviet Union pretends to be a friendly country," the minister of the interior told us, "but we are quite aware that they are trying to cause troubles with agents."

Amplifying that statement as he twisted prayer beads around his wrist, Ahmad Sadr said his government makes no charges but that "I personally think" Moscow is helping to exploit Iran's age-old security problems with the Turkoman, Baluchi, Kurdish and Arab minorities.

The present strongman of the revolution, Deputy Prime Minister Ibrahim Yazdi, told us he could not say "precisely" that the Soviets stirred up the trouble in the western Kurdish regions.

But it is assumed by many here in a capital city rich in assumptions but poor in certitudes that when the Avatollah Khomeini received ace Soviet diplomat Vladimir Vinogradov—the first ambassador admitted to his presence—Soviet fishing in Iran's troubled waters was one subject.

But warnings will have no impact from a country without an effective armed force—the defense minister, air force chief and army chief of staff change with the regularity of Italian governments, and the revolutionary regime is hard put to field a healthy division or two.

A HUGE NEW edifice is nearing completion on the one-square-block Soviet embassy grounds here for housing even more Soviet "diplomats," commercial agents and the like (most of whom are undercover KGB operatives) with an obvious mission: weaken and further divide the forces of the revolution.

With Iran's access to the Persian Gulf and its rich oil reserves, its switch out of the American orbit has made it a glittering target for Moscow.

There are no illusions in the interim government headed by mild-mannered, goateed Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan as to Soviet intentions.

Extremist elements of the gun-toting fedayeen, whose numbers are now multiplying, may show few signs of pro-Soviet inclinations, but there is no doubt about their Marxist ideology.

A second organized faction of irregulars, youthful "Mojahadeen" Islamic zealots, is anti-Soviet and anti-American with strong xenophobic tendencies.

THE POWER-vacuum of Iran's turbulent transition from the shah's dictatorial rule to a constitutional "Islamic Republic" begs to be filled.

The increasing number of trained Soviet agents, many of whom speak vernacular Farsi, is obviously intended by Moscow to fill it in a way that will maximize Soviet and eliminate American influence.

Western authorities here say there is no doubt that anti-American broadcasts from across the Soviet border, ignored by the State Department for months, were a major factor in linking anti-shahism to anti-Americanism.

"Those broadcasts by themselves made the (Feb. 14) attack on the U.S. embassy inevitable," one Western ambassador told us.

The first test of whether the weak interim government can build a bridge to the mystical "Islamic Republic," greatly feared by the middle and upper classes, will come when Iran's 35 million people vote on the new constitution and its plan for some form of popular representation mixed with the discipline of the Koran.

THERE IS frightening impatience among Tehran's roving bands of young revolutionaries for instant change to "popular" rule, and constant proselytizing in the villages by Tehran-based fedayeen.

"We are tired of these old men in the government," an American-educated youth told us.

This reflects the demand for quick, massive change and explains the barely-controlled tension lying under artificial surface placidity.

Law and order is in the hands of Khomeini's mushrooming "committees." With the shah's police force disintegrated, most drivers ignore red lights ("No police, no stop," a cab driver gleefully told us).

The tension seems certain to explode some time soon, creating more assets for Soviet trouble-making.

One reason for that forecast is the danger of economic chaos, a subject for a future column.

ANOTHER CHAPTER in the sad story of Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) decline is the total deterioration of its once formidable paramilitary force.

At one point in the early 1970s, the CIA had over 2,000 paramilitary operatives under contract.

Besides serving as advisers for a low-cost, highly successful military operation in Laos (which included no drafted U.S. soldiers), they had the capability of quietly moving anywhere in the world.

Today, the once famed CIA "secret army" consists of 75 men. Like the rest of the agency's covert operations, the paramilitary arm is inoperative.

ANDREW TULLY:

Junkies In A Fix

WASHINGTON—By mistake the other night I found myself at one of those parties where one sits on the floor, poking a fork at a suspicious casserole, when I became aware that the conversation had turned to hopheads, care and feeding of same.

Before I could ingest half a glass of wine, the other guests had reached a consensus.

It was that the federal government should spend as many millions of dollars as required to come up with a substitute for heroin that would give junkies pleasure without driving them bonkers.

The rationale was simple: If people have to have their dope, isn't it our public health obligation to discover something that has the least potential for damage?

WELL, DANDY. I am 110 percent against government pushing people around. And once we invent safe heroin, perhaps we should take a sympathetic look at other members of society who have pressing, compulsive needs.

Need legalized rape be far behind?

There are people who like to kill people. Why not establish a pool of the ailing aged and the mentally ill and herd them into a shooting gallery?

Possibly it is dangerous nonsense to bar the sale of booze to kids under a certain age. That's hard on the sprouts who need a couple of Martinis to get through a long day at the local institution of (a little) learning.

Similarly, perhaps bartenders should be prohibited from shutting off a lush after he's drained his first fifth of Old Popskull. Obviously, the guy's got to have hooch, lest he go into a sulk.

THERE WAS, predictably, much talk about legalizing marijuana,lwith the government taxing its use and setting limits to prevent its use by any kid under 12. Yep, 12.

The conversation seemed to be saying that two wrongs add up to a right, although I do not buy the proposition that the average drinking animal is as much of a menace to society as the junkie.

But what frightened me as this chic little discussion progressed was the general assignment that people, including kids, have a kind of constitutional right to indulge in any vice that pleases them, no matter how socially unattractive.

I TRUST there will be a little more discussion of the dope problem before Congress and Jimmy Carter go all-our permissiveness and decide to fill the "need" of the American people for a nice safe fix.

That "need" may exist, but although I have always hankered after a Rolls Royce (dark blue) I am not sure it would build my character if I pinched one from the nearest millionaire.

Allowing me to turn thief to fill my "need" might be almost as dangerous as passing a law saying hopheads are a privileged class who don't have to do without.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Rich Are Well Off

THREE ECONOMISTS, delving into world trade for the United Nations, find that the United States is not the world's richest nation. Kuwait is.

The University of Pennsylvania's Irving B. Kravis, Alan W. Heston and Robert Summers have developed a new system based on relative wealth.

In their report to the United Nations they rate the United States as 100 percent. Kuwait rates 161 percent.

In the past, economists measured a nation's comparative wealth by taking the domestic production of goods and services and converting it into United States dollars.

Then they took the size of the nation's population. But the Kravis-Heston-Summers method throws that overboard.

It removes some of the effects of erratic fluctuations in exchange rates, and thus is more accurate.

ON THE BASIS of the report, West Germany is 78.2 percent; France, 73.2; Belgium, 72; the Netherlands, 68.7; Britain, 63.5; Japan, 59.2; Italy, 49.2 percent, etc.

And other surveys have found that such countries as Switzerland, Sweden, Denmark, West Germany and Norway are ahead of the United States.

The report does not cover Communist countries, but states that the richest nations have about seven times the per-capita output of the poorest countries.

A few poorer countries are Ethiopia, 3.8 per cent of the output of the United States; Bangladesh, 3.2; Rwanda, 3 percent of the output of the United States.

In reporting to the United Nations, the economists acknowledged that wealth is measured only by the goods and services produced and consumed.

NOR DOES the survey take into consideration untapped wealth like oil reserves or other resources.

But the United States international balance-of-trade deficit has grown at the same time that the American dollar has declined in the world market's checkerboard of international finance.

Surely the United States dollar should be what it always was—the standard of the world. Only the politicians are responsible for the horrendous decline.

The unrevealed figures of the United States Treasury show that the total debt of all segments of American society has now increased to at least $2.25 trillion—trillion!

The word debt derives from the same Latin root as death. Even in the Book of Proverbs you note that "The borrower is the servant of the lender."

THROUGH DEBT you can learn how salty is another man's bread and how hard it can be to mount another man's stair, hat in hand—and wondering.

Our U. S. Treasury, beyond miscellaneous debt, breaks the debt segments into many general categories.

It lists about $500 billion in U.S. Government debt, $200 billion in state and local governments' debt, $600 billion in mortgage debt, $1 billion in corporate debt and nearly $200 billion in consumer debt.

Of the last $200 billion, nearly $160 billion is in installment debt.

Since World War II, ending nearly 34 years ago, the federal government alone has borrowed an average debt of $200 million a day. Never have so many owed so much.

This year's interest on our U.S. federal debt would take more than one-third of the total gross national product of Japan, the world's second largest capitalist economy next to the United States.

IN TURN, our corporations in the past 20 years have tripled their debts. Our Treasury, surveying 550 major non-financial corporations, found that 23 percent—114 companies—have amassed more total debt than they carry in equity.

Add the problem of consumer debt, accounting for about two-thirds of our gross national product and exceeding $1 trillion, has increased in the past three years about 50 percent.

Today a record proportion of the average household's income—23 percent of the after-tax income—is taken by interest charges, mortgage payments and installment loans.

This 23 percent is already committed in advance for previously contracted debts and the interest on them.

President Carter should note that the U.S. is no longer the world's richest nation. Yet, behind the scenes, he spends our taxpayer's money like daisies on a "Love me, love me not" basis as if the barrel had no bottom.

Israeli Woman Reported Killed By Amin's Agents At Entebbe

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Mrs. Dora Bloch, the 74-year-old grandmother who disappeared after the 1976 Israeli Entebbe raid, was executed by Ugandan President Idi Amin's security agents in a forest used to hide at least 6,000 other victims, according to the reports of several Ugandans.

"They shot her along with a white chicken," one resident near the forest said of Mrs. Bloch, a British-Israeli citizen. "Maybe it was some sort of witchcraft. I don't know."

Mrs. Bloch was a passenger on an Air France jet bound for Paris that was hijacked on June 2, 1976, by a group of pro-Palestinians after a stop in Athens. The plane was forced to fly to Entebbe airport in Uganda, where more than 100 hostages were freed in a daring raid by Israeli commandos.

But Mrs. Bloch missed the rescue operation. She had been taken to Mulago hospital in Kampala during the standoff with the guerrillas after a piece of food got caught in her throat.

Kampala was captured last week by Tanzanian and exile Ugandan forces who forced Amin to flee to an unknown destination. Residents of the capital confirmed earlier reports that Mrs. Bloch was kidnapped from the hospital and shot by the Amin's agents.

Mulago's medical supervisor, Dr. J.G.S. Makumbi, told reporters he heard a scuffle in the hospital the evening she was kidnapped.

"I rushed to the stairs to see what was happening and I saw armed men carrying machine guns pulling her down the stairs. They were firing to frighten people out of the way.

"Otside a black Mercedes Benz was waiting," Makumbi said. "The men pulled Mrs. Bloch into the vehicle, shut the door and continued firing in all directions and drove away. We could still hear her screams as he approached the gate of the hospital."

Makumbi said the men were known to hospital employees and were thought to be security agents on the presidential staff.

Victor Kato, a bookkeeper who lived on the edge of the Namanve forest, eight miles outside of Kampala, said Mrs. Bloch was shot the next day.

MRS. DORA BLOCH

"It was a Saturday afternoon and I was coming from my shopping when I heard about nine shots," Kato said. "I rushed to the main road and asked people what had happened. They said two cars had turned into the forest with a white lady."

Kato showed reporters a clearing near a sand bank, about 200 yards from the main road, where he and others found the body, with a dead chicken next to it.

"They left her body there for some time," he said. "Then they came to collect it, probably to prevent journalists from seeing it."

Born in Jaffa, then part of Turkish-ruled Palestine, Mrs. Bloch grew up in Egypt and spent most of her adult life in Jerusalem with her Welsh husband. She was known by Arab children in the area as "auntie." During the hijacking, she used her fluent Arabic, Hebrew, Russian, German, Italian and English to comfort the other hostages.

Mrs. Bloch was on her way to New York to attend the wedding of one of her sons, Daniel. She was accompanied by another son, Ilan Hartuv, 48, who also became a hostage.

Hartuv said he remembered her as an active woman, "who knew how to speak to people, especially children. There was never any generation gap with her." A niece described her as "a wonderful woman with a lot of guts. She would not give in easily."

Three air traffic controllers on duty at Entebbe at the time of the raid were also killed and left in the forest, Kato said. Their deaths were discovered when the father of one found his son's body.

Kato estimated that over the years, Amin's agents dumped 6,000 to 7,000 bodies in the forest, and many were never removed.

"Those who rotted here were not from this area," he said. "Their relatives did not know their whereabouts or did not have transport to collect the bodies."

"No one was here to report that such and such a person was missing. It was always done by word of mouth," he said.

"For instance, I've always been informing my colleagues at the office that we have a particular type of body there, and say if they've lost a relative, please go and check to see if the relative is in the forest."

PEOPLE — PLACES — THINGS

Computer Takes Over

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A payroll computer took things into its own wires last week and fired 235 policemen, including commanders, majors, captains and regular policemen.

Jesus Farfan, the head of the police department's administrative services, revealed the errorneous firings, Wednesday. He said it's not the first time the error had happened, and "it's a difficult problem to solve."

Most of the men receiving their "pink slips" were nearing retirement, Farfan said, but that was only a coincidence.

However, the computer apparently thought the men deserved a chance to have their cases heard and included a request for an interview with Police Chief Arturo Durazo in each of the firing notices.

Fireman Keeps Chest Hair

MIAMI (AP) — Miami firefighter Jerry Saslaw, sidelined to a desk job because he wouldn't shave his chest, is back at the firehouse, chest hair and all.

Saslaw had refused to take a required electrocardiogram stress test because patches of hair had to be shaved off to attach electrodes to his skin. Saslaw said he made the stand for his girlfriend, a 27-year-old flight attendant, who liked his hairy chest.

However, since his transfer, a cardiologist found the electrodes would work as well on his back and he passed the test.

Is his girlfriend happy? The new one is, he says. He and the stewardess split up after his story received national publicity. "The whole thing really irritated her," he says.

President Put On Hold

BOSTON (AP) — When America's First Jogger telephoned America's fastest marathoner, he was put on hold.

So many well-wishers called Bill Rodgers' running store on Tuesday that President Carter had to wait to get through with his message to the winner of Monday's Boston Marathon.

BILL RODGERS

"I picked up the phone and he just said, 'Hi, Bill, this is President Carter.' Out of the blue. I was shocked," said Rodgers. "He complimented me on my win and he was wondering about the marathon. He said he grinds out five or six miles a day. I told him, 'You're doing a good job as a runner and as a president.'"

Carter invited Rodgers and his wife, Ellen, to a White House dinner for Japan's Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira.

Victim Reports Stolen Pot

HAVRE de GRACE, Md. (AP) — When Susan Sarver was robbed, she thought police ought to do something about it.

Miss Sarver, 23, called the town police Tuesday to report that someone had kicked in a window of her car and taken an ounce of marijuana from the front seat. She valued the loss at $35.

She also reported the loss of two surgical clamps she used to hold marijuana cigarettes, seven cassette tapes and a camera, all valued at $131. Police said they were treating the report as a "regular larceny case."

No Divorce Planned

NEW YORK (AP) — Joan Kennedy says she doesn't think her separation from Sen. Edward Kennedy will end in divorce, but she isn't certain she would be at his side if he ran for president.

JOAN KENNEDY

In an interview published in the May issue of Ladies' Home Journal, Mrs. Kennedy described her life since recovering from alcoholism. She lives in a Boston apartment and attends college classes and sessions for Alcoholics Anonymous. She says her husband visits her once or twice a month.

"I am working on myself in — I hope — an unselfish way," she said.

"And until I do that I cannot begin to talk about marriage or no marriage. ... At the end of a couple years, I can make up my mind about things, from a position of strength, and of being well, very well."

School Working Out Debt

PENNINGTON, N.J. (AP) — The headmaster at the Pennington School will do almost anything to wipe out a $700,000 building debt.

He'll weed your garden for a day, faculty members will serve dinner in your home and the dean of students will wash and wax the family car. The chores will be sold to the highest bidders at an auction Saturday to raise funds for the school, said Dr. Donald Miller, headmaster of the small Methodist-affiliated school.

Other items to be auctioned include a 500-mile airplane rid with th vice chairman of Johnson Johnson, the will-drafting services of two attorneys and a variety of silver, antique furniture, paintings, china and jewelry.

Cyclists Trek 3,000 Mile

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three suntanned cyclists wheeled into town this week after a two-month, 3,000 mile trip from Savannah, Ga., to raise money for the American Cancer Society.

Illinois college students Marty Ross, Tom Cummings and Steve Frederick crossed such countryside as the swamps of Mississippi and the windswept plains of Texas, covering about 100 miles a day. All three have relatives who died of cancer.

The grueling trek over, Ross said the trio has still another goal in the drive they think will net about $2,500 — to get on the Johnny Carson Show to raise more money for their cause before they fly back to Savannah Thursday.Cummings said he wrote o the sho in January asking to be a guest, but hadn't gotten a response.

Jokes Take Toll

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Jimmy Carter, a toll taker on the Kansas Turnpike at Kansas City, Kan., says he gets a lot of reaction to his name.

Asked if drivers crack jokes when they notice his badge, he said, "Yes, I do.

"But I get a lot more heckling when people learn my brother's name," he said.

His brother's name is Billy.

Red Chinese Fear Dance Harmful To Work Habits

PEKING (AP) — Dancing can have a bad effect on work habits, according to a letter to the editor published Wednesday in Peking's People's Daily newspaper.

"People can attend balls if they like dancing, provided their normal work will not be affected. But it is wrong if production is hampered," said reader Xiao Li.

Lubbockite Reports Frying Pan Assault

A 44-year-old Lubbock man said he was hit over the head with a frying pan early Wednesday by a man who got angry with him.

George T. Shepard of 1916 Ave. M, Apt. B, told police he was at his home listening to music with the suspect about 2:30 a.m. when the man became angry and struck him with his fist.

Shepard said his guest then poured water on him and hit him on the head with the pan. The irate visitor, described as a middle-aged, tall and muscular black man, also allegedly tore the telephone cord from the wall, smashed a table and chair and shattered dishes.

In another assault Wednesday morning, James Alfred Dickey told officers he went to a residence in the 3300 block of Amherst Street about 9 a.m. to remove storm windows.

The 25-year-old Dickey said that once he began his work, however, a tall, thin Mexican-American man between 26 and 35, confronted the victim with a pistol.

Dickey said the suspect pointed the gun, possibly a .38-caliber revolver with a short barrel, at him and told him he would be shot if he came back.

An apparent case of mistaken identity resulted in an assault on Mark Bilbrey, 22, about 3:30 p.m. Tuesday at a business on Brownfield Highway where Bilbrey is employed.

The appliance repairman said he was working in the back of the shop when someone came in and yelled the last name of the owner of the business.

Bilbrey told police he was about to stand up when the caller struck him in the eye, knocking him unconscious and gashing his back against a condenser. Bilbrey said his attacker was gone when he came to about 30 minutes later.

In recently reported burglaries, Leon Collins said $3,200 in tools and equipment were stolen from the unlocked shop area of W.W. Steel Co., 2221 Erskine St. The shop supervisor said the break-in occurred between 4:30 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday.

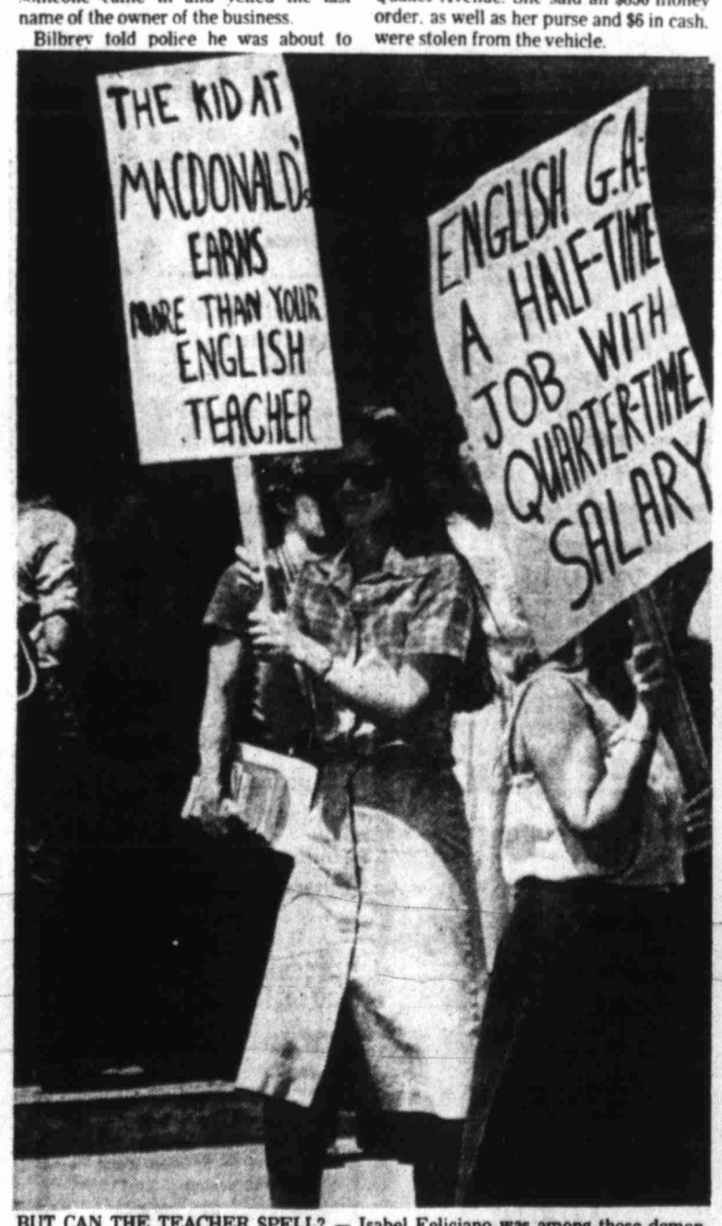

Elsie M. Lightfoot told officers a metal box, containing $250 cash, and her purse were stolen from her van between 2 a.m. and 3 a.m. Wednesday while it was parked outside the restaurant of an Avenue H Motel. She said she could not find any sign of forced entry to the vehicle.

Glen A. Green said burglars broke a window in his 2010 Fifth St., No. 11, residence between 11:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. Wednesday and made off with $150 in groceries.

Sol Thomas told police two 10-speed bicycles, worth $125 each, were taken from the garage of his 2407 22nd Place residence about 7:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Jeffrey Holloman of 709 Ave. X said he lost about $2,000 in stereo equipment to house burglars between 8 p.m. and 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Kathy O'Hair of 5714 69th St. said her car was burglarized Tuesday afternoon while it was parked at 28th Street and Quaker Avenue. She said an $850 money order, as well as her purse and $6 in cash, were stolen from the vehicle.

BUT CAN THE TEACHER SPELL? — Isabel Feliciano was among those demonstrating at the University of Oklahoma Tuesday, unaware that the hamburger stores are spelled McDonald's. Graduate teaching assistants are demanding more pay and smaller classes. (AP Wirephoto)

SALT Critics Assail Pro-Treaty Effort

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration spent some $600,000 last year stumping the country for support of a new strategic arms treaty with the Soviet Union, government officials confirmed Wednesday.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a critic of the nearly complete SALT II treaty, has questioned the public relations campaign at taxpayer expense.

But State Department spokesman Hodding Carter defended the speech-making, which is going on apace this year.

"They simply go out and attempt to put forward, as completely as possible, the case for negotiating the treaty and for the treaty itself," Carter said Wednesday.

The treaty, on the verge of completion for months, will require approval of two-thirds of the Senate. A close vote is indicated. That is why the debate between supporters and opponents of a treaty is considered so important.

Goldwater's complaint, as described by the senator's spokesman, Tony Smith, is that the taxpayer is subsidizing one side of the argument — the case for a treaty.

"The senator was intrigued with the fact that (former Arms Control director Paul) Warnke and a lot of other people were running around the country arguing in behalf of a SALT treaty we haven't seen yet," Smith said.

"It occurred to him (Goldwater) that this might be an expenditure of the taxpayer's money we ought to know about," Smith said.

Goldwater wrote the Government Accounting Office last December for an estimate. Last month, J.K. Fasick, director of the GAO, sent the senator figures supplied by the State Department and the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Fasick noted that "we did not verify the data provided."

According to the letter released Wednesday at the Stae Departent, the data did show the following:

— A total of $600,538 spent by State, Arms Control and the Defense Department "informing the public" about SALT.

— Of this amount, $448,970 represented the salaries of the U.S. officials for the time they spent talking about the subject or appearing at conferences.

— State and Arms Control officials had about 350 speaking enegagements in 48 states and the District of Columbia. In addition, senior State, Arms Control and Defense officials were principal speakers at 11 conferences.

Spokesman Carter, discussing the report at a press briefing, said about 15 percent of last year's speaking expenses went for SALT. Other topics given major attention included the Middle East and the Panama Canal treaties. No sum was given for the amount of money spent on those subjects.

This year, the administration is continuing its campaign to win public support for the SALT II pact, which would limit U.S. and Soviet long-range bombers and intercontinental ballistic missiles until 1985.

Smith, the Goldwater spokesman, said he expects the senator to ask how much in public funds is being spent this year to boost SALT.

Cold Shutdown Nearer At Reactor

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Technicians successfully dropped the temperature in Three Mile Island's primary cooling system Wednesday, but they must take one more cautious step before bringing the disabled nuclear reactor to cold shutdown.

The final, time-consuming obstacle is the designing and building of a backup cooling system, which would serve as an extra precaution against breakdowns or leaks in the primary system.

"They won't make the move to cold shutdown until that's completed," said Jan Strasma, a spokesman for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. "The system is in the design stages now, so it's certainly a matter of days."

"As we said before, we're under no deadline pressure and there's no urgency," he added. "The reactor is sort of sitting there, fat and comfortable."

The technicians speeded up the tedious cool-down by changing the primary cooling system's elaborate plumbing system. More steam was allowed to pass through a condenser, which drained off heat and dropped the temperature to 233 degrees.

It was 245 degrees before the steam process started, Tuesday. The hottest spot in the uranium core also dropped by 12 degrees, down to 328.

Meanwhile, Gov. Dick Thornburgh asked the Small Business Administration to declare an economic disaster area in the central Pennsylvania counties affected by the March 28 accident.

A limited evacuation of pregnant women and small children, along with a voluntary exodus of thousands of others, caused "economic hardships" for merchants and farmers, Thornburgh said. The low interest federal loans would help them recover losses.

"Many businesses had to close and others were disrupted," Thornburgh said. "Millions of dollars in convention, tourist and related business have been lost."

At the plant, radiation measurements remained close to normal background levels.

However, one air sample, taken between 3 a.m. and 4 a.m., showed a radioactive iodine 131 reading of 200 picocuries per cubic meter. If that rate continued every day for an entire year, it would exceed the federal allowable standard.

The NRC said weather conditions were thought to be the primary cause of the high reading, but work was also being done on a holding tank containing contaminated water, a possible source of iodine leaks.

"They get puff releases, so you're going to see increased numbers. But you could check the same place an hour later and not find anything. The average is still well below federal standards," said Don McDonald, a radiation control specialist

NEW MODEL — This Chevrolet Citation, scheduled to go on display today in Lubbock showrooms, represents an attempt by General Motors to produce a car which will contain adequate interior space while maintaining fuel efficiency. EPA ratings for the four-cylinder engine is 24 miles per gallon (city) and 38 miles per gallon (highway). Interest in the car here, relative to allocations, prompted one dealer to describe availability as "fair" for the present, and "good" during the month of May

New Small Chevrolet To Debut Here Today

General Motors will reveal its answer to the family's transportation needs today in the form of a 1980 model Chevrolet called the Citation.

Carrying a basic price of $3,983 (plus dealer preparation and options), the car is designed to accommodate five persons and is rated by the Environmental Protection Agency at 24 miles per gallon in city driving and 38 miles per gallon in highway use.

Scheduled to go on display in 6,000 dealer showrooms today, the Citation "represents a new dimension in our automotive design which combines the advantages of front-wheel drive with impressive fuel economy," a Chevrolet spokesman said.

Don Crow Chevrolet Inc. of Lubbock, which will have five units initially, reports it already has sold three. It expects to receive nine more Citations by May 10.

Orders taken now can be filled in four to five weeks, according to Larry Kennedy of the dealership. He said availability is fair at present and will be good by May.

The car is described as having more interior room than conventional mid-sized cars.

The Citation's wheelbase is 104.9 inches, compared to the 111 inches of the Nova, which it is designed to replace. It is slightly more than 14 1/2 feet bumper to bumper, some 20 inches shorter than the Nova.

The Citation is about 5 1/2 feet wide and has a curb weight of approximately 2,500 pounds.

The new car will be offered in coupe, hatchback coupe and hatchback sedan models, all on the same wheelbase.

The Citation front-wheel drive component arrangement includes a MacPherson strut front suspension with transverse mounted engine and transmission.

The standard powerplant is a cast iron four-cylinder, 2.5 litre engine developing 90 horsepower and built by Pontiac Motor Division.

An optional engine is a transverse mounted V6. Produced by Chevrolet, it is cast iron and of 2.8-litres displacement.

Two-stage carburetors on both engines meter fuel into combustion chambers as the driving situation demands — less in the low and medium power ranges, more when accelerating.

The Environmental Protection Agency rates the V6 engine at 20 miles per gallon in city driving and 30 miles per gallon on the highway.

In reference to fuel efficiency, Norm Sholler, Chevrolet's chief engineer on the Citation project, said the greatest single improvement occurred via size and weight reduction.

"The theoretical effect on composite fuel economy of that kind of mass savings is about 3.8 miles per gallon," he said.

"All mileage improvement programs eventually come down to how much force is needed to propel the vehicle down the road."

Carcinogen Observation Said Near Stage Of Use

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another in a series of stories dealing with cancer research grants in Texas. April has been declared "Cancer Control Month" nationwide. For further information on cancer questions, call 762-0825. Contributions may be made to the American Cancer Society, Area 1 Office, 1902 Ave. M, Lubbock, 79405.)

AUSTIN (Special) — A new system of observing one of the "ultimate" molecules that create cancer in a growing cell is being perfected at the chemistry department of the University of Texas here.

Dr. Charles G. Wade, associate professor of chemistry, is using fluorescence to trace the metabolic pathway of diol epoxide, a molecular product of one of the best known cancer-causing substances, benzo(a)pyrene, (BP) which is found in exhaust fumes from gasoline and petroleum products, cigarette smoke and other fumes from combustible materials. His work is supported by an ACS research grant.

The technique of fluorescence depends on the ability of a substance to absorb light of one energy level and emit a light of lower energy level, providing an identification of the material as unique as fingerprints.

Dr. Wade uses a synthetic membrane similar to that on the surface of cancer cells to measure the intensity of fluorescence caused by BP and its by-product, diol epoxide, at his laboratory here. Colleagues at the University of California at Berkeley, grow living mouse cells for similar tests. The carcinogens (cancer-causers) from a broad chemical grouping known as aromatic polycyclic hydrocarbons, can be "observed" in the cancer cell by their fluorescence stimulated by ultraviolet light.

The epoxide, resulting from an enzyme acting on PB, is known to be the active agent in the cancer-causing process, but its ultimate role and the "scene of its crime" have not yet been found in the normal cell.

Dr. Wade's method for distinguishing clearly the epoxide's presence depends on a process known as "quenching," which diminishes the fluorescence of the parent substance BP, while increasing the intensity of its product, epoxide.

Eventually, the role of the "ultimate" molecule in triggering the cancer process of polycyclic hydrocarbons may be disclosed with this technique.

IRON SELECTION

When selecting an iron, consider cord placement. Cords fitted for right-handed persons contribute to accidents when used by left-handed persons, reports Becky Culp, clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Right-and left-handed persons can use irons with the cord centered in the middle back, the specialist suggests.

Another Monumental Census Task Looms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Back in the old days, census takers had one job: to count people. Nothing more.

The 1980 census, which will start April 1 and cost an estimated $1 billion, has become a pie that every American interest group wants its finger in.

Women wanted to be sure the government knew that men weren't the only ones to head households. So feminist groups persuaded the Census Bureau to eliminate the "head of household" question. Instead, "householder," the person who owns or rents the dwelling, will be named.

Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of health, education and welfare, won a battle to restore a question about disability. But there no longer is a question about religious affiliation. And Sar Levitan of the National Commission on Employment and Unemployment Statistics could not get inclusion of a question about persons who abandon the search for a job and drop out of the labor market.

People will be asked not only whether they are married, but how many times.

Each group of Americans want to be sure it's counted. The primary reason is simple: money. Big money.

The census once was used mainly to help draw congressional districts for the 435 members of the House of Representatives.

Nowadays, census statistics are used to measure the quality of American life — income, education level, employment status, age, housing quality, occupation, number of children and military service.

The federal government devises formulas from these figures to determine how to distribute $50 billion in federal funds to states and local communities for job programs, health services, civil rights enforcement and other social services.

Local officials know that if not everyone in their area is counted, they won't get as much federal money as they need. Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson says an undercounting of blacks in his city in the 1970 census meant a loss of $11.7 million in job aid funds to Atlanta over more than five years.

District of Columbia Mayor Marion Barry testified before Congress that the undercount of blacks in Washington cost the city $1.9 million in general revenue sharing funds in fiscal 1978.

Henry Smith, spokesman for the Census Bureau, says the biggest challenge for the 1980 census is to reduce the undercount, particularly among minority groups.

In 1970, the bureau estimates it failed to tally 3.4 million whites, or about 2 percent of the white population. At the same time, it failed to count 7.7 percent of the black population, or 1.9 million persons.

"The undercount can't be totally eliminated," Smith said. "But we hope to significantly reduce the disparity between the undercount for whites and minorities."

To achieve this, the bureau organized minority advisory committees and hired hundreds of temporary workers to go door-to-door in communities to gather information and explain the census questions to those who don't understand them.

Some groups complain the Census Bureau is asking too many questions that aren't the government's business.

John Shattuck, director of the American Civil Liberties Union's Washington office, has said in congressional testimony that the 1980 census presents many problems of privacy and confidentiality.

The ACLU objects that names are kept on individual questionnaires and stored in census computers for many years.

"We've tried to persuade them to eliminate the names, but they resist," Shattuck said.

However, he said, the bureau has a good reputation for keeping information confidential. "Other government agencies such as the Internal Revenue Service and Social Security Administration are not free to examine their (census) records," he said. "But there are obvious problems in terms of leakage."

By law, the Census Bureau is forbidden to divulge any personal or private business information from the questionnaires to anyone, Smith said.

At the same time, answering census questions — which are approved by Congress — is mandatory. Refusal could result in a maximum $100 fine.

Meanwhile, work continues on writing the questionnaire forms.

"It's always been a big job," Smith said. "But this time it's much more sophisticated, more detailed, more expensive. Holy Moses! More work."

Fewer Residing At State School

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A routine audit of the Lubbock State School, conducted by the State Auditor, shows the average number of resident students is down from last fiscal year, but the average number of employees is up.

The school, which provides care, treatment and education for the mentally retarded under the management of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, had an average of 505 resident students enrolled during the 1978 fiscal year, down from the 524 average of the previous year.

However, the average number of employees increased from 701 to 710.

Also increasing was the estimated cost per day per resident student. That went from $35.50 to $38.12 per student.

Operating cost increases were attributed by the auditor to inflation and planned increases in staff.

Escape Attempt Doomed, Says Corrections Chief

HOUSTON (AP) — The director of the Texas Department of Corrections testified Wednesday in the retrial of Ignacio Cuevas that there was no way that three inmates involved in a 1974 siege could have escaped from a Texas state prison unit.

James Estelle was asked if he ever promised the three inmates they could leave the prison walls and he said, "Never."

Defense attorney Will Gray then asked if Estelle would have stopped the escape attempt "even if it costs the life of all 16 hostages."

Estelle answered, "Those three hostiles weren't going to leave that prison under any circumstances. There was no way they would ever get out there."

Cuevas is the only surviving inmate of the three who seized a prison library building and staged an 11-day siege, the longest in U.S. penal history.

Two other prisoners, Fred Gomez Carrasco and Rudolfo Dominguez, were killed in an escape attempt.

Two hostages, librarians Julia Standley and Elizabeth Beseda, were shot to death.

Cuevas is accused of causing the death of Mrs. Standley. He was convicted in 1975 and sentenced to die. After three years on Death Row, Cuevas was granted a new trial by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals because of a judicial error.

Estelle, on the stand for the second day, was asked by Gray why there were no notes or letters from him to the convicts during the siege which could be offered as evidence.

Estelle said he did not know what happened to the letters he sent to the convicts during the siege.

"Are you telling me there were no carbons made?," Gray asked.

"I don't know," Estelle answered. "Mr. Gray, I did have other things on my mind at the time other than carbons."

Gray said it was strange that the notes from Estelle were missing, while those from the three inmates were available to be presented as evidence.

Asked why he refused to consider release of the inmates while they held hostages, Estelle answered:

"If you cave in to outrageous demands, others may take hostages and it becomes a violent, never-ending game. If I had let them leave the prison then I would have become an accessory to a number of crimes."

The prison system director also said he had volunteered to take the place of the hostages but "The State Board of Corrections said there would be no exchanges and my staff refused to assist in any way to my being a hostage."

Miss Marvin Gets $104,000 For 'Rehabilitation'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michelle Triola Marvin, the unmarried woman who claimed Lee Marvin owed her $1.8 million, was awarded $104,000 Wednesday by a judge who said she needed help to rebuild her life after a long love affair with the actor.

Although the award was far less than the amount Miss Marvin had sought — which she claimed was half his income during the six years they lived together — she said she was "excited to get something" and viewed it as a victory for women.

But she said she is disillusioned about love affairs. "I think if a man wants to leave a toothbrush at my house, he can bloody well marry me," she said. "Enough is enough."

Marvin, 55, likewise saw the ruling as a victory. "I think it's sensational," the actor said at his home in Tucson, Ariz.

Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall, in a decision which will serve as a guideline in similar cases, reached outside the rigid requirements of contract law to grant Miss Marvin, 46, what he called "an equitable remedy."

"The court in equity awards plaintiff $104,000 for rehabilitation purposes," Marshall said, "so that she may have the economic means to re-educate herself and to learn new, employable skills ... so that she may return from her status as companion of a motion picture star to a separate, independent, but perhaps more prosaic existence."

Marvin's attorney, A. David Kagon, said the judge's 33-page decision sustained Marvin's contention that he never had a contract with Miss Marvin, but Kagon admitted that Miss Marvin's lawyer, Marvin Mitchelson, had offered to settle the case earlier for $60,000.

Both Mitchelson and Kagon said appeals of Marshall's ruling are unlikely.

Mitchelson, who fought the case through many appeals for seven years, said he was pleased but called the outcome "a draw."

Kagon's law firm, Goldman and Kagon, has declined comment on the trial's cost to Marvin, but sources have estimated expenses alone were $60,000 to $75,000.

Mitchelson took the case on a contingency bases, meaning he is entitled to no more than a third of the award — about $35,000. He estimates that he spent $60,000 preparing and conducting the case.

"But that's not my main concern. What's important is that we established a precedent," Mitchelson said.

He said he believes this was the first instance in the United States where a judge had awarded the equivalent of alimony to a woman without a marriage license.

He noted the judge specified that Miss Marvin's $104,000 would be equivalent to the highest scale she ever earned as a singer — $1,000 a week — for two years.

But Marshall's ruling was also harsh on Miss Marvin, pointing out inconsistencies in her testimony and supporting Marvin's contention that he never promised lifetime support or a share of his millions.

Marshall noted that Miss Marvin "enjoyed a fine home, traveled throughout the world ... acquired whatever clothes, furs and cars she wished and engaged in a social life among screen and stage luminaries."

"Such services as she has rendered would appear to have been compensated," Marshall said.

He rejected her contention that Marvin's promises were a contract to share. In show business, he said, words of love are cheap.

"As the defendant testified," Marshall said, "in his business terms of affection ar bandied about freely; one 'loves' everyone and calls everybody 'sweetheart.'"

JUDGE MARSHALL

Marvin said the judge's remarks vindicated him.

"I think it's sensational," he said, "because as you know, we won on all counts and the only difference was that the judge is allowed in the Marvin decision to make equitable adjustment in his own mind.

"That's just what I did 10 years ago, more or less," he said. "It's a rehabilitation fee, which is exactly what I did. So I feel absolutely marvelous."

Testimony Marshall cited as damaging to Miss Marvin included the sworn word of dancer Gene Kelly, who refuted her story of a show business venture. Miss Marvin claimed Kelly recommended her for a role in "Flower Drum Song," but Kelly denied discussing it.

MICHELLE MARVIN

The judge apparently gave little weight to a key Marvin witness, Richard Doughty, who claimed he had sexual relations with Miss Marvin 25 times while she was living with Marvin.

Marshall said Doughty's testimony was weakened because he earlier denied the affair.

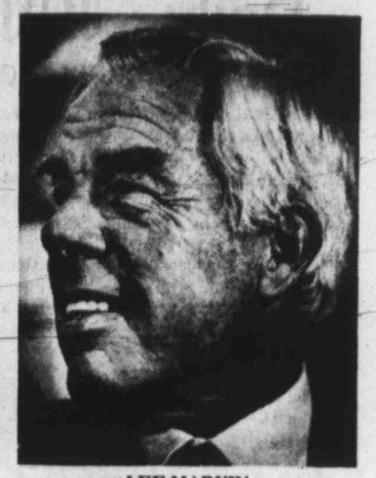

"Plaintiff proved that she acted as companion and homemaker, that she prepared a number of defendant's meals ...," Marshall said.

He also said she apparently cared for Marvin when he was intoxicated, although the judge indicated she probably exaggerated the extent of his alcohol consumption.

"The plaintiff's testimony as to defendant's drinking habits would indicate that he was virtually awash with alcohol," the judge said. "Yet, during the same period, defendant starred in several major films demanding of him physical stamina, a high degree of alertness and verbal as well as physical concentration."

When Miss Marvin first saw the decision in Marshall's courtroom, she threw her arms around her attorney, then told reporters she was delighted.

"I think that men and women everywhere who enter into a relationship such as mine will come to an agreement. Hopefully, now they're going to enter it in writing," she said.

LEE MARVIN

Asked if she thought the award was sufficient, she said: "There's no amount of money that could ever replace the years."

She said she would use the funds to try to make a career in television production. She said she didn't want to see Marvin again and would try to put him out of her mind.

"Last night I took down every memento of Lee, every picture," she said with tears welling in her eyes. "The shrine is gone. Every picture is locked in a trunk now."

Michelle Marvin Feels She's Winner, Anyway

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michelle Triola Marvin says she was a winner in Wednesday's landmark decision awarding her $104,000, but her lawyer stands to lose at least $25,000 in the property rights case.

Attorney Marvin Mitchelson said he took Miss Marvin's case on contingency, meaning he is entitled to no more than a third of her award — about $35,000.

But Mitchelson estimates he spent at least $60,000 on the case. Plane fare for one witness, who flew here from New Guinea, was $2,300.

"But that's not my main concern," he said after Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall awarded Miss Marvin $104,000 to help start a new career. "What's important is that we established a precedent."

Because the case was a civil action, transportation of witnesses and other costs were picked up by the plaintiff and defendant, not the court.

However, the three-month trial still cost Los Angeles County about $30,000. Court spokesman Sam Gordon said the salaries and building operation costs would have been incurred by Marshall's court anyway.

Lee Marvin was defended by the law firm of Goldman and Kagon, which has represented him for some 20 years, and it refused to discuss the fee. However, sources said the firm was already on retainer to Marvin and probably did not charge an additional fee for its services at the trial.

The sources said Marvin has given the firm millions of dollars in business and it probably is charging only for costs — conservatively estimated at between $60,000 and $75,000.

Michelle could be taxed up to 50 percent of her award, says a former agent for the Internal Revenue Service.

"It's a very sad thing," said Phil Storrer, now a professor at California State University at Hayward specializing in taxation.

"In reading Marvin vs. Marvin, I really don't think the IRS has any choice. Under the existing law, they must tax her," said Storrer, who is researching tax cases related to cohabitating couples for a forthcoming book.

Carter Fishes For Third Day In Georgia

SAPELO ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — President Carter, his secluded vacation nearing an end, went fishing for the third straight day with Georgia friends after jogging almost five miles Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Rosalynn Carter left this state-owned island by helicopter for Brunswick, Ga., where she boarded a plane bound for Raleigh, N.C., for a speech to a mental health conference.

Mrs. Carter, who has become a champion of mental health issues, planned to rejoin her husband late Wednesday.

Carter took a brief swim in the ocean after his 7 a.m. jogging trip, then drove Atlanta lawyer Charles Kirbo and his wife to the island airstrip, where the Kirbos caught a plane to Atlanta. Kirbo is trustee of Carter's property holdings, and spent several days on the island with the president.

At mid-morning, the president went fishing with his Georgia friends, lawyer Jim Bishop and optometrist Carlton Hicks.

Carter planned to leave the heavily wooded island Friday for a brief stop at his hometown of Plains, Ga., folowed by an overnight visit with his son Jack in Calhoun, Ga., before returning to Washington on Sunday.

Marvin Case Decision Evokes Victory Claims By Both Sides

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The much-awaited Marvin vs. Marvin decision, handed down Wednesday amid the glare of television lights and the shouts of reporters, produced no clear-cut loser and a lot of self-proclaimed winners.

"I'm absolutely excited by the decision," said actor Lee Marvin, whose claim that he never had a contractual agreement of any kind with his girlfriend of six years was upheld by Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall.

"I'm proud to have paved the way for people in relationships such as mine," said Michelle Triola Marvin, who left the courtroom after learning she will receive $104,000 from the actor.

"I'm pleased," said her attorney, Marvin Mitchelson.

"It's a total victory," said Marvin's lawyer, A. David Kagon.

Marshall's award to Miss Marvin "for rehabilitation purposes" was based on a California Supreme Court decision giving judges discretion to impose an equitable remedy in cases like Miss Marvin's.

It fell far short of the $1.8 million half-share of Marvin's earnings that Miss Marvin had sought as compensation for her contributions to the actor's career and well-being during their time together.

But at an impromptu news conference in the hall outside the crowded courtroom where she read the 33-page decision, Miss Marvin said: "I'm very happy that I won something."

"They have given her the equivalent of alimony," Mitchelson said. "I'm not going to stand here and say I wouldn't have wanted more, but we won an award. It was in six figures. It was a substantial sum."

"I couldn't have hoped for more," said Marvin, who was informed of the decision in Tucson, Ariz., and commented on it at an airport news conference before boarding a flight to New York.

"They lost on every charge, every one. The award doesn't pertain to the points of law," he said.

He noted that he had accepted the concept of payment for rehabilitation when he gave the former showgirl $22,000 in the year and a half after they broke up. He said he cut off the payments because she broke an agreement not to talk with the press about the relationship.

If the antagonists in the case differed over who was vindicated, there was some consensus over the implication of the decision for other unmarried cohabitants.

"I think he's telling them exactly what the Supreme Court said — to approach any unmarried relationship with care," Kagon said.

"I think that men and women everywhere who enter into relationships such as mine will now come to an agreement, and hopefully they'll put it in writing," Miss Marvin said.

As for herself, she added: "I think if a man wants to leave a toothbrush at my house, he can bloody well marry me. Enough is enough."

"There are a thousand Marvin cases out there; so fellas, beware," Mitchelson added.

Ugandans Loot, Kill In Drunken Frenzy

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — Drunken mobs of Idi Amin's soldiers, on the run from their Tanzanian conquerers, are killing hundreds of people on sight and looting towns in northern and eastern Uganda, residents reported Wednesday.

The new government in Kampala — which has only half the nation under its control—promised help was on the way and urged Ugandans to "keep your spirits up."

Official sources in neighboring Kenya confirmed for the first time that Robert Astles, Amin's top aide during his bloody eight-year rule of fear, was being detained in Kenya for interrogation after initially being reported killed in the fall of Kampala.

Government officials earlier said they were confident Amin himself had fled to Libya. The government was questioning Astles in connection with many of the murders commited during the last eight years.

Refugees Wednesday fled eastern and nothern Uganda, where they described a toal breakdown of law and order.

Drunken mobs of Amin loyalists have rampaged through the area for a week, raping, looting and murdering civilian and government officials suspected of sympathizing with the new administration.

Killing All In Sight

"They're killing everyone in sight," one woman refugee claimed.

Another said, "They are killing any official they believe is sympathetic to the new government in Kampala, and now, any civilian they see."

Estimates on the number of people killed by the marauding troops ranged as high as several hundred.

Many villages sacked by the Amin troops were now deserted, refugees said.

The new government still controls only half of Uganda, though Tanzanian supporting troops Tuesday reportedly captured the important Owen Falls Dam over the Nile River on the outskits of Jinja, 40 miles east of Kampala.

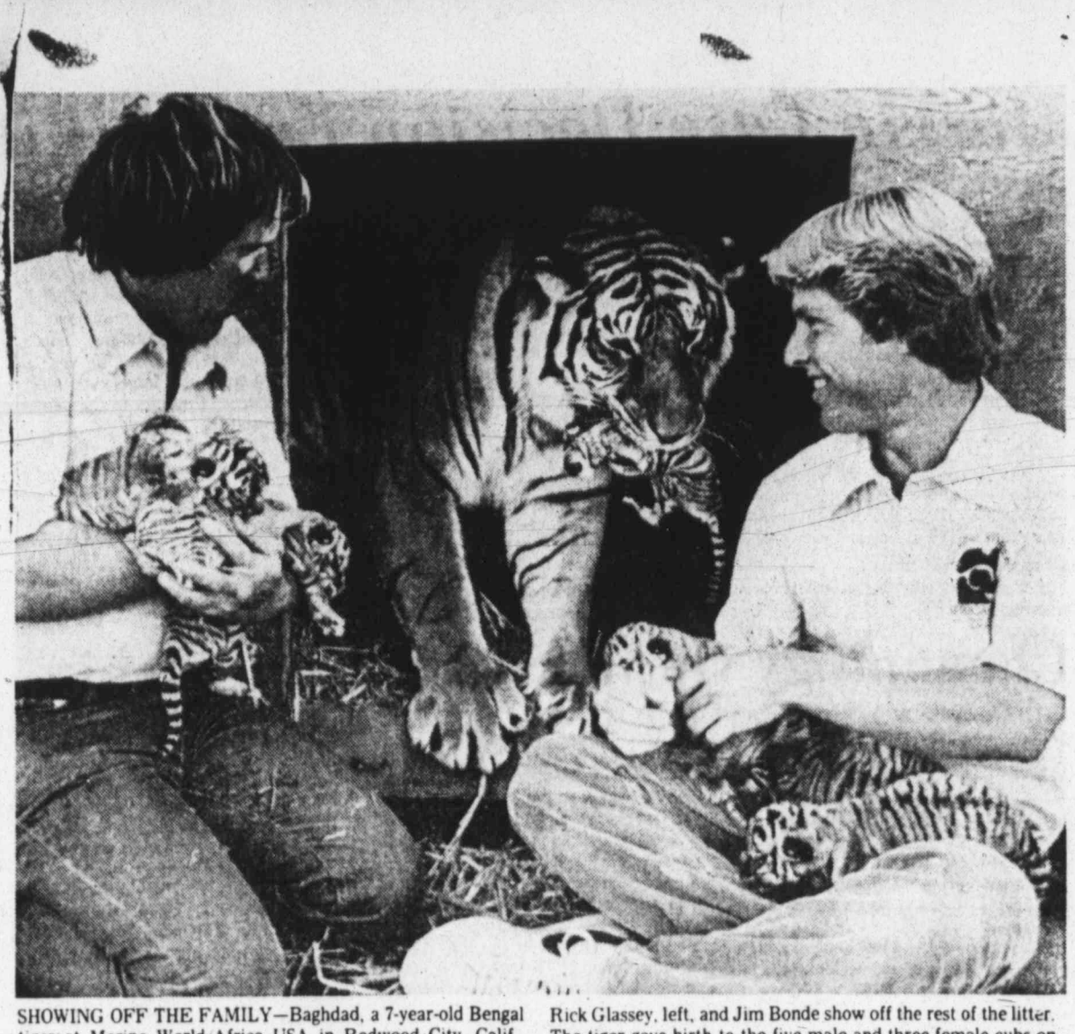

The provisional government of Youssef Lule promised quick military help to try to smash the estimated 1,200 Amin loyalists terrorizing the east and north.

Uganda Radio interrupted a series of pop music shows with special announcements to the east and north asking:

"Are you sill being harassed by fascist Amin's rebel soldiers in your village or locality?"

The radio urged Ugandans to report such incidents to the nearest Tanzanian military units and added "the authorities will help to free you from such terror.

"The liberators are on their way any moment now. Keep your spirits up and save life where you can. If your area is not yet liberated don't give up. Continue praying and hoping."

Justices Support Probing Of Media 'State Of Mind'

prior cases."

He added that granting journalists such a privilege "would substantially enhance the burden of proving actual malice, contrary to the expectations of (past libel rulings)."

Under a 1964 Supreme Court ruling, public officials and other persons in the public eye have not been able to win libel suits against the news media unless they prove "actual malice." That means they had to prove the defendants knew the statement was false or recklessly disregarded whether it was false or not.

Helps Libel Lawyers

If questions probing into the editorial process are permitted, actual malice might be easier to prove in future libel suits filed by public figures. Such questions might include: "Why did you use this quote instead of another?" or "Didn't you and your editors suspect that your source was lying?"

White reviewed extensively past Supreme Court decisions in which "governmental efforts to pre-empt editorial decision" were rebuffed. But he discounted concerns that allowing such pretrial questioning during libel suits would inhiit the nes media.

One case cited by White is a 1974 decision in which the court struck down a Florida law that forced newspapers to print replies to editorial criticism. He authored a concurring opinion in that case, but gave some hint of his increasing uneasiness with a "powerful" press.

"To me," White said at the time, "it is a near absurdity to so deprecate individual dignity ... and to leave the people at the complete mercy of the press, at least in this stage of our history when the press ... is steadily becoming more powerful and much less likely to be deterred by threats of libel suits."

White was joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Harry A. Blackmun, William H. Rehnquist, Lewis F. Powell Jr. and John Paul Stevens in reversing a decision by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Three Back Appeals Court

Justices Thurgood Marshall, Potter Stewart and William J. Brennan Jr. voted to uphold the appeals court's ruling. But none of the dissenters would have gone as far as the lower court in protecting journalists.

Four members of that majority — White, Burger, Rehnquist and Blackmun — are appointees of former President Richard M. Nixon, a longtime vocal critic of the Supreme Court's 1964 ruling that made it more difficult for public figures to win libel suits against the news media.

In the case whose outcome was announced Wednesday, a federal trial judge had ordered Lando to answer questions about the "editorial process" but the 2nd Circuit court ruled he did not have to. Now the controversy will return to the trial judge, but the decision does not give Herbert's lawyers total discretion in what answers they can demand.

The Supreme Court's majority warned that as in all pretrial proceedings, the material sought must be "relevant."

"The district courts should not neglect their power to restrict discovery where justice requires protection ... from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression or undue burden or expense," White said.

"Pleased With Decision"

The decision was hailed by Mary O'Melveny, one of the lawyers representing Herbert. Reached for comment in New York, she said she was pleased with the decision but added that the "ability of the press to truthfully report on events of public interest and information has never been at issue in this case."

Newspaper editors did not see it that way.

The high court's decision "is a major defeat for the First Amendment, because it allows courts to intrude into the most private thoughts and editorial discussions of journalists and news organizations," said Jack C. Landau, director of the Committee for Freedom of the Press.

Jerry W. Freidheim, executive vice president and general manager of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, said: "We filed a brief in the case and, naturally, are disappointed by the court's decision. We have no further comment until we have had time to review the major and dissenting opinions thoroughly."

Down River Areas Hit By Flooding

hoods because of hidden dangers, including snakes and weakened roads and bridges.

"We now face added problems by the receding water, which we consider just as critical as when the river was rising," he said.

Record crests were expected downriver at Georgetown, Monticello and Columbia where more than 2,000 residents already have been evacuated.

Sandbagging was going on around the clock in Columbia, a town of 8,000 about 80 miles south of Jackson, and many residents were packing their belongings and heading for higher ground.

"The river is nearing 22 feet and it is forecast to reach 28 feet later this week," said Jim Thornhill, Marion County Civil Defense director in Columbia. "The crest will reach 2,000 people and if the river climbs even a foot above that level, we're talking about 5,000 evacuations."

Hope To Ride It Out

In Georgetown, about 40 miles downriver, Mayor Beal Allbritton said 80 percent of his town's 420 residents had moved out. "All we can do now is hope we can ride this thing out," he said.

In Monticello, located between Georgetown and Columbia, even more people were evacuated as the river rose at the rate of 2 feet a day, expected to go 143 feet above flood stage on Saturday.

Mississippi Power and Light Co. said late Wednesday that the river had knocked out electricity to about 165 customers in Georgetown and was threatening service to customers in the Monticello area.

The Pearl had dropped to 42.5 feet in Jackson at midmorning after cresting at 43.2 feet on Tuesday, more than 25 feet above flood stage.

Police and National Guardsmen continued to patrol the flooded downtown area, permitting only authorized persons and convoys of dump trucks with sandbagging dirt past roadblocks.

Jackson authorities estimated the damage so far at $500 million.

"We've still got a serious situation here," said Viva Polk, a spokesman for the city of Jackson. "Our homes and businesses are still flooded, we've got thousands still out of their homes and we're having to conserve our drinking water and electricty because of damage to equipment.

sonry Contractors Inc., L.C. Burt Masonry and Page and Wirtz Construction Co.

One other contractor, Leo Padgett of Padgett Construction Co., said he expected to receive a telegram sometime Wednesday.

Bundock said all of the contacted firms previously had been charged with failure to bargain in good faith by the National Labor Relations Board. Wallace was the complainant in those charges.

Wallace was in Lubbock Tuesday on union business and said then he would be available if any of the contractors wished to meet with him.

A halt in six weeks of contract talks between the two parties resulted in a strike by the union local on April 2.

Eight Hurt As Iowa Pipeline Explodes

PLEASANTVILLE, Iowa (AP) — Eight people were reported injured Wednesday when a natural gas pipeline being moved for road construction exploded.

Workers were exposing the 24-inch pipeline, readying it to be lowered to make way for road work, when the line shifted sideways and "came out of the coupling," said Marv Dutton of Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America, owner of the line.

Rescue workers and fire fighters were delayed in reaching the scene because of the construction work that had necessitated the lowering of the pipeline.

Richard McMurtrey, a district superintendent for Natural Gas, said valves on either side of the segment being moved had been closed. He said there was no flow in the line, and only a small amount of gas was in the line when it exploded.

Three Airlines Apply For New City Flights wasn't sure how his company would deal with the trio of challenges.

"It's still early yet, and we haven't formally decided how to handle it," he said. "But you can be sure we'll be in there pitching. We're a very competitive airline and we'll taken them on all the way."

This new controversy over routes only adds more fuel to rumors of Continental's withdrawal of service from Lubbock. The rumors began when Continental cancelled several flights from the city earlier this year, and have been fanned with the announcement that Continental will drop all flights between Lubbock and Dallas June 1.

Spokesmen in Lubbock and Los Angeles fervently deny all talk of a decrease or pullout from Lubbock, but the sudden competition from up to three airlines could force Continental to abandon its Lubbock expansion plans, and maybe even cut its service from the city down to only a handful of flights a week.

Continental's withdrawal from the Dallas route, the most heavily traveled corridor from Lubbock, leaves only Braniff International and Southwest Airlines flying the route.

But Texas International has applied to the CAB to pick up the route Continental is dropping. No hearing date for TI's request has been set, but Coffee said that request was one the city "would surely support."

Utility Extension Measures Advance

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — House and Senate versions of legislation to allow cities such as Lubbock to extend municipal utility services into annexed areas without getting approval from the Public Utility Commission were sent to subcommittees Wednesday.

On the Senate side, SB 1109 by Sen. Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi, went to the Consumer Affairs Subcommittee of the Human Resources Committee on a 4-2 vote.

Lubbock assistant city manager Jim Blagg was among the witnesses appearing for the measure, during a hearing which was cut short by the Senate session convening.

Expense Savings Argued

Truan argued the bill would allow municipally-owned utilities to serve recently annexed areas without having to go to the expense of seeking formal approval, would allow customers the option of municipal service, would encourage orderly growth and would prevent city-owned utilities from becoming restricted to a "core" area.

Truan focused on the problems of Robstown in his district; Blagg noted Lubbock is in a similar situation.

Blagg was forced to return to Lubbock before the House State Affairs Committee met late Wednesday night, after the House had considered the general appropriations bill in a day-long session — with San Antonio attorney John David representing Lubbock on HB 1045 by Rep. Hector Uribe of Brownsville.

Uribe argued the current policy of the PUC results in a situation which prevents cities from growing as their boundaries grow — and could result in problems of paying revenue bonds in the future.

Allows Competition

Uribe said the bills would not put any electric utility or cooperative out of business — only allow "a certain amount of competition."

The measure was opposed by the Association of Texas Electric Cooperatives, with General Manager Jim Morris saying the bill would result in duplication of service, and increased costs to consumers.

Morris agreed utilities need to be able to grow, but said the Public Utility Commission has the authority to control growth in a way to prevent problems, with the proposed measure violating the basic purpose of the act creating the PUC.

PUC commissioner Alan ERwin also expressed doubts on the measure, saying it appears to change some of the basic concepts of the act.

Tahoka Sen. E.L. Short, who met with Blagg Wednesday afternoon, said he recognizes the problems of the cities, but hopes an accommodation with the cooperatives involved can be worked out, while allowing the cities to serve additional areas.

Several cities in his district are supporting the measure, Short reported.

Three Perish In Commuter Copter Crash

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A commuter helicopter plunged 100 feet onto a runway at Newark International Airport shortly after takeoff Wednesday night, and at least three persons were killed and 10 injured, authorities said.

The Federal Aviation Administration said 18 people, including a crew of three, were aboard the 30-passenger New York Airways aircraft, which came down on its side on runway 22.

FAA spokesman Robert Fulton said the pilot of the Sikorsky S61 helicopter reported shortly after takeoff that he was experiencing control problems.

Officials said the aircraft was at about 1,000 feet when the pilot reported the trouble and started to return to the airport.

"He was trying to return to land," said FAA controller Gordon Wilkes, an eyewitness. "It looked like he was going to make it, but about 100 feet from the ground it nosed off."

Flight 972 was en route to LaGuardia and Kennedy International airports in New York, Port Authority Police Sgt. William Olsen said.

Crash victims were taken to four area hospitals, where five persons were listed in fair condition and one was in guarded condition, authorities said. The condition of the remaining injured was not known.

The FAA said the helicopter crashed at 6:23 p.m., coming to rest about 200 yards from the New Jersey Turnpike.

Airport Manager James Dickerson said the helicopter made a "normal departure" from the airport.

What Is Libel?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Libel, simply put, is damage to a person's reputation in print, writing, pictures or signs.

Libel can take many forms. Generally it is accusations that tend to hold people up to ridicule, contempt, shame, disgrace; that cause "right thinking persons" to think evil of the subject; that diminishes the person's respectablility or discredits him; that causes him to be shunned or avoided.

A lesson drummed into every beginning reporter is that there is only one complete and unconditional defense to a charge of libel: that the facts are provably true.

Another defense is privilege. Judicial, legislative, public and official proceedings are privileged on the theory tat the iterests of society require such events to be the subject of public discussion. So are the contents of most public records.

A landmark case in libel law was the Supreme Court's 1964 ruling that a public official cannot recover damages for a report related to his official duties unless he proves actual malice.

The court defined malice as knowledge that a statement "was false" or was published "with reckless disregard of whether it was false or not."

Media Fears Ruling To Erode Freedoms

By MARC CHARNEY
Associated Press Writer

Across the nation Wednesday, editors, publishers and broadcasters expressed fear that their freedom to investigate and criticize officials was eroded when the Supreme Court allowed public figures to inquire into a journalist's "state of mind" during libel suit."

Much of the reaction was strongly stated — in phrases such as "Orwellian invasion of the mind," and "incredibly thoughtless."

Chilling Effect Predicted

Many predicted a "chilling effect" on reporters writing stories involving controversial figures. A number wondered how a jury could make any intelligent judgment about what a reporter or editor had been thinking when a story was being prepared months or years before.

Many also said they felt:

— It is the latest in a string of Supreme Court decisions eroding the press' freedom to gather news.

— It will be easier for public figures to file frivolous libel suits and harass news organizations that criticize them.

— The "chilling effect" will fall heaviest on small news organizations which lack the resources to fight long libel suits.

Public Seen As Loser

— The ultimate loser will be the public, which could wind up less well-informed about controversial situations.

Allen H. Neuharth, chairman and president of Gannett Co., and president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, said the decision "is one more step by the current court to weaken, erode and diminish freedom of the press and, by extension, all First Amendment freedoms. The American people — not just the press — were the real losers today.

"Last spring," he said, "the Supreme Court ruled that police can rummage through newsrooms; today it has ruled lawyers can rummage through reporters' and editors' minds." He said that next week, at an ANPA convention in New York, "the publishers of 1,300 newspapers will devote their annual convention to finding ways to halt the chilling effects of this and other court decisions."

Bill Leonard, president of CBS News, said the court was "denying constitutional protection to the journalist's most precious possession — his mind, his thoughts, and his editorial judgment." CBS is a defendant in the libel suit which prompted the ruling.

May Bar Needed Stories

John Finnegan, executive editor of the St. Paul Pioneer Press-Dispatch in Minnesota, and chairman of the Freedom of Information Committee of the Associated Press Managing Editors, said "the media may well back away from doing stories on public figures where all the facts are not verifiable, an yet stores that should be published in the public interest."

Ralph Otwell, editor of the Chicago Sun-Times, said that "going into the thought process of a reporter and all the subjective judgments he is forced ... to make is a George Orwellian invasion of the mind."

James Goodale, executive vice president of the New York Times, said the ruling would "hamper the really big investigation stories" because reporters would know that if they got involved in libel suits, they "in effect, are going to have to stand naked in front of the courts with respect to all their thought processes."

Good Reporter Goals Cited

And publisher Ronald J. Semple of the Helena (Mont.) Independent Record commented that "One of the goals of any good reporter is to strive for objectivity in writing his news story, which means he suppresses any personal opinions or thoughts. Very often what a reporter thinks or feels is immaterial to how he handles his story."

Erwin G. Krasnow, senior vice president and general counsel for the National Association of Broadcasters, said news organizations would not be the only ones affected — that "Citizens speaking out at public meeting must now weigh any increased risk of suit and accompanying demands that they account for their disagreements with public officials."

"I expect some day it will be changed," said Leroy Clemens, executive editor of the Elgin (Ill.) Courier-News. "But I also expect to see an awful lot of newsmen in jail before then."

Richard Schmidt, general counsel for the American Society of Newpaper Editors, said the decision "will hit particularly hard on small newspapers, magazines and radio stations across the country that can ill afford the costs of defending such actions."

Amendment Stripped

John Seigenthaler, publisher of the Tennessean, in Nashville, said that "the chief legacy of the Burger court will be to strip the First Amendment of its meaning ... This opinion is another link in the chain of cases designed to shackle the press in its effort to report on public affairs."

And John Dougherty, managing editor of the Rochester (N.Y.) Democrat Chronicle, said "the damage Nixon did to the court and Kennedy with his appointment of White has finally reached a climax. The possibility that an attorney or a judge can ask me or my city editor or my reporter 'What were you thinking when you went out to interview Sen. Smith about stealing that money?' ... is such an impingement on the First Amendment that I find it unbelievable."

"A Major Defeat"

But Jack C. Landau, director of the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, called the ruling "a major defeat for the First Amendment, because it allows courts to intrude into the most private thoughts and editorial discussions."

Mike Wallace of CBS News, a defendant in the case, said it will be a long time before he would actually be asked about his state of mind, and "there is no doubt in my mind that the report that we put out was accurate, valid and fair." He also said he would continue to "let the chips fall where they may."

One editor who didn't expect much practical effect from the ruling was C.L. Dancey, editor of the Peoria (Ill.) Journal Star, who said that "normally a defendant opens that question (state of mind) himself, saying that he had good motives and no spiteful intent."

On the other hand, Thomas Plate, associate editor of the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, said his newspaper would editorialize that the court "in effect broke the last barrier protecting the press against the chilling intrusion of the government into the editorial process."

"What we would really like to do," he said, "is examine the decision-making processes and state of mind of the six Supreme Court justices who voted to continue the trend toward converting the once-free press of America into a pusillanimous pussycat."

American Naz Party Slates Hitler Day

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — American Nazis have called for a rally to commemorate the 90th birthday of Adolf Hitler, but Austrian authorities say they will prevent such a gathering and expel any foreigners who show up.

Police said Wednesday they intercepted a confidential letter circulated in Europe by Nazis in Lincoln, Neb., calling for a rally on Saturday at Braunau, Hitler's birthplace, 150 miles west of here.

Hitler's actual birthday is Friday. He was born on April 20, 1889. Austria will not tolerate any gathering on its territory honoring Hitler, police said, and neo-Nazis attempting to celebrate will be arrested, and expelled if they are foreigners, according to the Austrian Press Agency.

Police said the letter called on "old (Nazi) comrades" in the United States and in Europe to "stage a mighty demonstration in Braunau to commemorate the birthday of the Fuehrer, Adolf Hitler."

A spokesman at the Interior Ministry said authorities believed the letter was authentic. "This is certainly not a hoax," he said.

He said the letter was mailed by a group identifying itself as the NSDAP, the German acronym for the National Socialist German Workers' Party — the full title of Hitler's Nazi Party.

They said the letter recommended "active resistance" against Austrian authorities in case of police action. The letter reportedly assumed that only a few local gendarmes would be on duty.

Police said, however, that gendarmerie and customs guards will be reinforced.

Nazis have attempted several marches in the United Sttes, to protests from Jewish groups and survivors of concentration camps. The American Civil Liberties Union has argued that such groups have the constitutional right to march, even though their racist and white-supremacy principles may be opposed to American values.

Most authorities say Hitler committed suicide with his mistress Eva Braun at Berlin in 1945. Russia claims to have identified his body though dental markings after it was found in Hitler's Berlin command bunker in the final days of World War II.

Hitler grew up in Linz in upper Austria, but subsequently went to Munich and served in the German army in World War I. He did not return to Austria until 1938 when he proclaimed the Nazi annexation of Austria to "greater Germany."

Hitler's birthsite at Braunau on the Inn River, which forms the Austro-German border, was considered a shrine in the Nazi era from 1938 to 1945. The birthday celebration was abolished at the end of World War II, when Austria regained independence.

Suit Against Birth Pill Firms Mulled

LONDON (AP) — American lawyer Gerald Sterns said in London Wednesday he is contemplating a major lawsuit against the makers of birth control pills.

The San Francisco attorney, who represents 200 British women claiming to have been harmed by the pill, said he is preparing a suit against American-based multinational drug companies.

Sterns's action coincided with the start of a trial in Stockholm that is considered a pilot case against the giant drug concerns. Swedish plaintiffs are seeking $39 million in damages for deaths and disablement allegedly caused by the pill.

At a hotel news conference, British members of the Pill Victims Action Group described what they consider the side effects of the birth control pills they took.

Judith Challenger, 38, of Abingdon said she suffered a stroke in 1978 and doctors said the cause was a side-effect of the pill.

One of the women who died allegedly because of taking the pill was 43-year-old Beryl Macrow. Her husband, Peter, told reporters: "She died without warning within two hours of an attack." He said her death certificate cites birth control pills as contributing to her death.

Two years ago the Royal College of General Practitioners published a study in the British medical journal, "The Lancet," that said the death rate from circulatory system diseases was five times higher for women on the pill than for those not.

Birth control pills are sold in Britain, by prescription, without any health warnings, and Sterns said he hopes to win on the grounds that American-based drug companies should give the same warnings on pills sold in Britain as they must in the United States, where the law requires warnings of the danger of blood clotting and heart attacks.

He said it was too early to name any of the companies involved or set a date. He will only accept a fee from those who receive a settlement, he said.

A Family Planning Association spokesman later urged the three million British women on the pill not to stop taking it suddenly because of publicity about possible side-effects.

The association said only one in every 170,000 women on the pill risks death, yet 74 women died through complications in pregnancy in England and Wales in 1977.

1980 Buick Skylark (X-Body)

Front-Drive Skylark To Debut Here

The 1980 Skylark, Buick's version of General Motors X-Body, will be introduced today at Scoggin-Dickey Buick Opel.

The Skylark will have the same basic features of all the X-Bodies, including front wheel drive, fuel economy of up to 38 miles per gallon on the highway with a 4-cylinder engine, transverse-mounted for space efficiency, and handling ease.

The Skylark also will have such extras as extensive insulation for quiet operation and the availability of all the options of a full-size Buick. A V-6 engine option also is available.

There are six different models of the 1980 Buick Skylark.

Zoning Board To Consider Bar Variance

Zoning Board Of Adjustment members will be asked today to permit a bar to be located on Furth Street with no separation from adjacent property zoned for residences.

At the 8:15 a.m. meeting in city council chambers, A.J. Malouf, representing Pera Brent, will ask the ZBA to vary a required 200-foot separation between bars and residentially zoned property for property at 2020 Fourth St.

Malouf also will request permission to provide parking for the bar off the development lot, but on property zoned multifamily residential (R-3).

Two requests on the ZBA agenda, if granted, would in effect be zone changes.

Russell K. Lasater, representing Lasater Bait Company, wants a special exception to allow him to operate a business in a neighborhood zoned single family residential (R-1).

The ZBA can grant special exceptions to permit someone to pursue an occupation in his home, but Lasater doesn't live at 3807 Elgin Ave., where he wants to operate the shop.

Also on the agenda is the request of Gwen Evans for a special exception to allow a garage behind a duplex to be converted into an apartment at 2206 32nd St.

The conversion already was started when zoning inspectors red-tagged the project as being in violation of city zoning ordinances.

ZBA members will be asked to grant variances in three cases involving signs.

O.V. Scott, representing the First National Bank, will request a variance in the sideyard setback requirements for a sign at the bank's new drive-in at 10th Street and Avenue Q.

The bank plans a free-standing sign on Avenue Q to be set back 43 feet from 10th Street. City ordinances require a 75-foot setback.

Ronald Thompson, representing the Depot Restaurant, will request a variance in the setback requirement for a sign south of the 1801 Avenue G restaurant.

The sign, already in place, should be set back 16.8 feet from 19th Street, but it is within six inches of the property line.

Bill McDonald, representing the Boyer Company, will ask for a variance in the height requirements for signs at a shopping center under construction at 6200 Slide Road.

City ordinances permit entrance and exit signs to be three feet tall, but McDonald will ask that four five-foot-tall signs be permitted at that center.

Three requests are that mobile homes be allowed to be used for dwellings due to medical hardship.

The requests are from Ed Hoople, representing Georgia Hoople, who wants to locate a mobile home at 8308 Fremont Ave.; H.C. Lonis, representing Bernice V. Scott, to locate a mobile home at 506 81st St.; and Billy O. Perkins, representing Olin F. Perkins, to locate a mobile home at 3803 E. 4th St.

Other ZBA cases scheduled for consideration are:

— Request of the Urban Renewal Agency for a special exception to permit expansion of a church parking lot at 125 Temple Ave.

— Request of Jerry Cannon for Southland Corporation for a variance in the setback requirements for gasoline pumps at a convenience store at 2702 34th St.

— Request of Al Komarek for a variance in the setback requirements for a carport at 2826 62nd St.

— Request of Lloyd Croslin Jr., representing Joe Jack Reynolds for a variance in the screening fence requirements behind a proposed industrial park north of Loop 289 and west of Quirt Avenue.

— Request of Trevor Ford for West Texas District Church of the Nazarene for a special exception to allow construction of a church office building at 1721 45th St.

— Request of Dennis Olson, representing Bob Gafford, for a variance in the setback requirements for a garage at 4817 43rd St.

Small City Scorns Federal Grant

MANCHESTER, Conn. (AP) — Manchester residents tossed a $1 million offer back to the federal government by voting 3-to-1 to halt participation in a community developent program.

"What this means is: 'We can run our town, leave us alone,'" said Robert Von Deck, chairman of the Concerned Citizens for Manchester's Development.

"This town wants to govern itself without any state or federal interference," he said.

Tuesday's vote was 7,262 in favor of the two-year moratorium, 2,606 against it.

By approving the moratorium, voters rejected acceptance of $1 million over the next two years from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The funds would have financed downtown renewal efforts and social service programs.

Berkeley Voters Cut Drug Enforcement Funds

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Voters in this university town have cut off funds which support enforcement of state and federal laws against marijuana.

Berkeley voters on Tuesday also passed measures which stop the city from using local funds to support South Africa's apartheid government.

The city, home of the University of California's largest campus and the scene of often violent activism in the 1960s, also elected a slate of so-called "progressive" candidates over moderate Democrats.

The marijuana measure would prohibit spending city money to enforce state and federal laws against pot smoking. It also directed police and other city officials to lobby for repeal of marijuana laws. The final count of all 118 precincts showed the measure passed 17,507 to 9,681.

The two anti-apartheid initiatives would ban the deposit of city money in banks with ties to South Africa. The main issue passed 17,718 to 9,314 and a second, enabling measure passed 16,519 to 8,454.

The marijuana campaign was financed by a $1-per-ticket raffle. The winner — identified only by number at a Monday drawing — won a kilogram of Colombian grass.

Another marijuana measure was approved by Berkeley voters in 1973 but nullified by court orders which held that the measure improperly ordered police not to enforce the law. Supporters say the new measure's wording will avoid that legal pitfall by restricting the ban to spending money for such enforcement.

Newly elected mayor Gus Newport credited his 12,799-to-11,922 defeat of two-term incumbent Mayor Warren Widener to a drive to get out the student vote and an outpouring of renters.

Khomeini's Charges Denounced By U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has rejected charges by Islamic leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini that "satanic plans are under way by America and its agents" to prokoke unrest in Iran.

"We emphatically reject any suggestion that we have anything to do with events inside Iran," Department spokesman Hodding Carter told reporters.

Khomeini made the accusation Tuesday amid rising tensions among various revolutionary factions in Iran.

Carter said, "We have made it clear from the beginning that we do not intend, will not and are not involving ourselves in those affairs. We have stuck scrupulously with that policy. We hope that others will do the same."

'Headhunters' Bring Home Top Executives

NEW YORK (AP) — When the headhunters found him two years ago, a businessman we will call Joe Doe was orchestrating his own headhunt. This happy coincidence helped him stay calm as the headhunters closed on him, Doe says now.

Doe was then an officer of a big-city bank on the Eastern seaboard. He had hired a New York headhunting team to help him flush out and bag a marketing executive for his bank.

Meanwhile, headhunters from another New York firm were circling Doe.

"Since I was on the other end of a similar exercise, I was more comfortable with what was going on," he says now.

The men stalking Doe were Carl Menk and Peter Schmidt. Casually dubbed "headhunters" by the business world, their game is more properly called "executive search." It is a steadily growing enterprise.

Menk is president and Schmidt vice president of Boyden Associates, which Fortune Magazine calls one of the "Big Six" executive search firms. Such firms are rather like talent scouts. They don't work for job-hunters — only for businesses seeking experienced executives.

Demand for their help is increasing. Fortune reported last fall that the number of executives hired worldwide through search firms increased from 4,000 in 1967 to 16,000 in 1977.

In 1977, one of them was Joe Doe. He moved to a new job after a search involving countless long-distance phone calls, a rendezvous in a motel coffee shop and much probing as the headhunters sought to learn how Joe Doe ticked: his experience and skills, his "promotability" and "executive stature."

Schmidt says no two searches are identical, but the Joe Doe hunt was fairly typical. With names and locations disguised — at Doe's request — this is how it went:

In late 1976, the Small City Bank hired Boyden. Its president was retiring. The board wanted a replacement, someone "mature." Someone outgoing, willing to be active in a college town. Someone amenable to a salary between $40,000 and $50,000 a year, with a "strong loan background," and broad experience.

Like many search firms, Boyden has information on thousands of executives stowed in a computer. There are nearly 100,000 names — candidates in earlier searches, people Boyden's headhunters meet or hear about, people mentioned in magazines and newspapers and some who sent their own resumes.

Using the computer, banking sources, other Boyden headhunters and a list of 10 possible candidates prepared by Small City Bank, Menk and Schmidt gathered 107 names.

Doe's popped up twice. He was on Small City's list and he was suggested by a Schmidt source in the city where Doe then worked.

Menk and Schmidt pared their list to 52, then divided the names and went to work on the telephone. Explaining that they were trying to fill a vacancy in an unnamed small bank, the headhunters cordially, casually pried information from the candidates.

Most wouldn't do. Some weren't qualified. Some wouldn't move to another part of the country, or to a small city. Some had taken new jobs last month or last week. Schmidt and Menk whittled the list to 23, then they arranged meetings with each.

"At this point they know almost nothing," Schmidt says. "We guard confidentiality very carefully. They know it's a banking job, but not what job or where. But they're curious and they've got nothing to lose by meeting with us."

His curiosity piqued, Joe Doe agreed to meet Schmidt in his city. The place? An obscure motel coffee shop, because, says Schmidt, "At this point we're just looking them over. We don't want to do anything to endanger their jobs."

Because of his own headhunt, Doe wasn't worried. "I knew how headhunters operate. I knew confidentiality wasn't a problem."

Two hours and much coffee later, Doe knew only that Schmidt was seeking a "top man" for a small bank somewhere in the Northeast.

Today's FOCUS

Schmidt knew Doe looked good: He was then 48. He had experience in the areas Small City wanted. At $37,000, his salary was not beyond the bank. He liked small cities. And he was restless.

"In retrospect," says Doe, "I was ripe. I had recently undertaken a new assignment and it wasn't one I would have picked. I had a very happy career there — I was really turned on for 18 of 20 years, but I wasn't experiencing that in this new assignment."

So when Menk and Schmidt asked Doe if they could offer him to their client, Doe said yes. So had four other candidates — from Ohio, New York City, Texas and Georgia — but none had satisfied Small City.

When the bank asked to meet Joe Doe, Schmidt called Doe to fill in the blanks. He described the bank, the town, the cast of characters.

"It was the kind of thing that really appeals," Schmidt says. "A solid bank with a good record of growth. And, most important to a guy like (Joe), the top job."

So Joe Doe visited Small City. Things went swimmingly.

"It was a series of right things — the right kind of job, the right kind of town, the right location, the right people. The people, that was really critical in the equation of this decision."

"We don't just find a candidate," says Schmidt. "Part of our job is to advise our client on how to bring him aboard, how to attract him. But I think (Joe) was hooked after he met the people."

So was Small City's board. They hired Joe Doe.

Before he left for Small City, Doe says his own headhunt ended when he hired a marketing executive from Seattle. He says it was what headhunters call "a good fit" — which is to say the parties get along, their philosophies and operating syles mesh smoothly.

And Joe Doe? He says he fits. "Perfectly."

Grand Jury Pondering Wichita Falls Shooting

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — A Wichita County grand jury looking into the shooting death of a curfew violator by a police officer met into the night Wednesday.

Jay L. Wright, the officer who shot the man early Monday after the suspect ran and reached into his pocket, was subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury.

The victim was positively identified Wednesday as Rosendo Sosa Ortiz, 19, of Ciudad Acuna, Mexico. An out-of-date Social Security card found on his body bore the name of Daniel Sosa, but Quintanilla Gonzalez, chief immigration officer in Ciudad Acuna, said the man was identified through his parents late Tuesday.

Ortiz' body will be taken to Del Rio Thursday, according to Leon Humphreys of the Humphreys-Doran Funeral Home there. He said the man is the son of Nasario Sosa and Angelita Ortiz of Cuidad Acuna.

Wichita Falls Police Chief Curtis Harrellson said Ortiz was shot when Wright and his partner stopped a car just after midnight Monday for violating the 11 p.m. curfew. The emergency curfew was imposed after a tornado struck the city last week.

The twister killed 44 persons and left an eight-mile swath of destroyed homes and businesses that were further victimized by looters.

The curfew now has been lifted, except in the devastated area, where it is still against the law to be outside between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m.

Mexican-American leaders are calling for outside investigations into the shooting. Ruben Bonilla, state director of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said in Corpus Christi he has urged Texas Attorney General Mark White to monitor the grand jury investigation.

Jose Cano of the American GI Forum has called for a separate FBI investigation into the shooting.

Citizens in Wichita Falls continue mammoth cleanup operations in the wake of the twister, and prosecutors vow strong reprisals against price gougers.

County Attorney Tom Schrandt said he has heard horror stories of merchants charging $6.50 for a package of bologna and a loaf of bread and gasoline priced at $1.50 a gallon.

Make sure the pilot light for gas stove burners is properly adjusted — it could be burning more fuel than necessary, says Pat Seaman, housing and home furnishings specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: These days with so many people popping up with bobbed noses, vastly reduced (or enlarged) breasts, fantastic hairpieces (after 20 years of baldness), capped teeth, facelifts and eye-jobs, what should a surprised observer say?

You dealt with this problem several weeks ago, but I didn't get much out of your answer.

So many of my friends are going in for recycling that I'm truly at a loss as to how to deal with the startling transformations.

Do these people want to be told they look better? It seems that after going to so much trouble (not to mention expense), something should be said. On the other hand, I'm told, most women who have had facelifts prefer to pass themselves off as "well-rested." How about some guidelines? — Ambushed In Azuza

Dear Am: "You look wonderful" or "terrific" is always appropriate — assuming she or he does, of course. Unless the individual volunteers more information, stop there.

Dear Ann Landers: I've read many letters in your column from parents whose children have broken their hearts. Very little is said about the reverse situation. It's time someone spoke out.

My mother was an alcoholic and my father was a workaholic. She was never sober and he was never home. Miraculously I survived a hellish childhood and I'm still beleaguered by their problems. I get incoherent calls from Mother about Dad. I get calls from Dad begging me to "do something" about Mother. They both beg me to come home and "straighten things out." It's not as if I live next door, Ann — I'm thousands of miles away!

For years I've tried, without success, to help them. It's useless. Yet they continue to cause me untold grief by trying to draw me into their disputes. Any suggestions? — Anguished Son

Dear Son: If you've urged them to get counseling — suggested AA for her and Al-Anon for him — you've done as much as any child can do. The rest is up to them. Parents can guilt-trip children in a very subtle manner. Don't let them booby-trap you.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: I am a male homosexual in my very late teens who would give anything in the world to be straight. I refuse to have physical relations with members of my own sex although the desire is strong. The thought of it disgusts me and goes against my moral and religious training.

My friends are all heterosexual. No one suspects I have this problem. I have no feminine mannerisms — not a single clue that I am not perfectly normal. I've tried so hard to change on my own, but it hasn't worked. Please tell me, is it humanly possible to cure this sickness? Has anyone ever done it? I pray that you can help me. — Your Friend In Virginia

Dear Friend: Some homosexuals have been "cured," but they must be strongly motivated and lucky enough to find the right therapist.

If you have not tried counseling, I urge you to do so. Write the American Psychiatric Association headquarters for guidance: 1700 18th Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20009. If you can't change, therapy can help you understand your dysfunction and accept yourself as you are.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK — How quickly fortunes change in soapland. Three months ago Mary Frann was told she would no longer be a regular in the role of Amanda Peters on "Days of Our Lives." A new headwriter for the show has altered Mary and Amanda's fates.

Mary joined "Days" in 1974 after a year's stint on the defunct "Return to Peyton Place" as industrialist D.B. Bentley. Prior to that Mary had been a 1961 Junior Miss beauty contestant and a TV weather announcer in her hometown, St. Louis, Mo.

The actress' first duties on "Days" involved Amanda Howard's suicidal malais, which was remedied by marrying medico Greg Peters, who later left his wife to devote his attentions to Amanda. Another doctor, Neil Curtis, also tailed Amanda relentlessly. But after brain surgery and memory loss, Amanda realized that Neil was a snake in the grass and eventually married Greg. Last fall, the couple moved to Chicago and out of the Salem, U.S.A., spotlight on "Days"

Meanwhile, the on-screen romance of Chris Kositcheck and Mary Anderson grew stale without a third party to cause emotional conflict. Also, actors Josh Taylor, (Chris) and Barbara Stanger (Mary) weren't hiding the fact that they were not, to put it mildly, compatible as romantic screen duo. They barely speak to each other once the cameras stop grinding. The show's new writer brought Amanda back into the picture, explained that her marriage to Greg wasn't working, and it appears that Amanda and Chris are slated to provide future story juice.

Does that mean that Mary Frann is back on "Days" permanently? Accordingly to the studio, "Mary is not a contract player. But we will use her in the story when her schedule and our production schedule are agreeable." And, of course, if Amanda and Chris' sparks ignite audience interest, you can bet that she'll be around the Salem scene more regularly.

SHORT TAKES:

LAST WEEK we mentioned there will be a new Alice Gordon on "Another World" When Alice returns to the story from a trip to Boston, she'll be joined by a "new" Sally (Alice's adopted daughter) in the personage of Julie Phillips.

OVER AT "Guiding Light," Fran Myers is taking a hiatus from her role as Peggy Thorpe during Fran's last month of pregnancy. It was becoming a bit cumbersome filming Fran from the bosom up to hide the fact she's pregnant in real life when her character isn't. Myers may return to the show this summer. Joining "GL" is veteran character actor Philip Bosco as district attorney Clarence Bailey who'll be handling Holly's rape case. Also new to the show is Tom Neilson as Katie Parker's younger brother, Floyd.

LATE THIS WEEK "One Life to Live" will roll out the story carpet to California actress Mary Linda Rappelye as Faith Kipling, the much-younger wife to Dr. Ivan Kipling, whom Dorian is pushing to oust Larry Wolek as chief of staff.

MARY STUART (Jo Vincente on "Search For Tomorrow") reports that her daughter, Cynthia Krolick, is the writer and host of her own PBS new program in Seattle. Mary, meanwhile, has finished writing her autobiography and shipped it off to the publisher who is anticipating a winter publication date.

NANCY MOSES has been cast as Mary Elizabeth O'Connell on "Love of Life." The character is described as a "gutsy" lawyer who joins Elliott Lang's firm, and she should provide an interesting alternative for her boss who is fighting his wife Betsy's divorce action. Tune in tomorrow to see whether he finds working with Mary more intriguing than holding on to a lost cause.

(Send your questions about soap operas to Tune In Tomorrow, 230 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017. Questions cannot be answered personally, but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Hints from Heloise

HELLO AGAIN:

It seems I pulled a boo-boo by printing the article on cooking using a paper bag!

My mother did this for years but, of course at that time, people never dreamed of such a thing as recycled paper, or recycled anything else for that matter.

We have had numerous letters elaborating on the possibilities of this being harmful. It seems that when the paper is recycled, there is some chemical added that produces a potential hazard.

We checked with the Food and Drug Administration and they gave us the following information: "Chemicals in recycled paper may be 'safe' in themselves, but under heat may combine with certain natural chemicals in food to form toxic byproducts."

They also told us that they have not tested this particular thing. If they haven't tested it, their advice is, and we quote, "we do not recommend," meaning DON'T USE THE PAPER BAGS TO COOK IN. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I have seen people struggle to get a belt turned (one they just made for a new dress). You'd be surprised all the things they try to use for this very simple task.

All you have to do is pin a large safety pin in the end of the belt and just thread it through.

This will work with anything that has to be turned after you have seamed it up. — Rose Quintero

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

I have always wasted my hot charcoal after cooking steaks, or what have you, until the other evening.

I got the smart idea to put carrots, with just a little water, in one foil pie plate covered with foil and in another I sliced some peeled raw potatoes, seasoned, but with no water as they have water in them. They were both cooked in no time and I still had hot coals.

From now on I will plan my meals better. I can cook a roast, meatloaf, ribs, sausage, or almost anything along with my meat for one particular meal.

This way I will get the full benefit of that expensive charcoal. Not only will I be saving money but will have my main course prepared for the next two or three meals. Hope this helps someone else as much as it has me. — A Grandma

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

For those readers who think that experts live in ivory towers where everything works out perfectly, here is a hand from a recent Swiss team event that shows some experts at their worst.

South really should have rebid to two diamonds instead of one notrump. At least that is what happened at the other table where South did rebid to two diamonds and did make nine tricks for a score of plus 110.

At this table South elected to rebid one notrump. When it came around to East, he decided to compete with a double. This was not a takeout double. Not only did it ask his partner to pass, but it went one step further. It asked his partner to open a spade.

West was fully aware of this. At least he should have been. West did pass, but West decided to open a heart anyway.

This wasn't a happy choice. South won in dummy and started on diamonds. East took his ace and went right after spades, but all he could gather in were four spade tricks plus that ace of diamonds. South made an overtrick for a score of plus 380 and a profit of seven IMPs.

Had West opened a spade the defense would have set up their clubs before South could clear diamonds. South would have been down two for minus 500 and an 11 IMP loss.

Betty Ford Takes Sudden Trip To New York

By SHEILA RABB WEIDENFELD

FEBRUARY 5, 1975

Yesterday started normally enough. I called Mrs. Ford as I always do. She was not around. I said I'd call later. The press called to find out what was on the schedule. I said "Nothing official. Mrs. Ford is upstairs relaxing in the residence and she has no appointments."

I was about to leave my office when I got a phone call from a reporter in New York City. "What is Mrs. Ford doing in New York City?"

"Where?"

"She has been spotted just now on Seventh Avenue in the heart of the fashion district."

Impossible, I thought to myself. I double-talked, hung up, and called Rex Scouten, the head usher.

"Is Mrs. Ford in New York City?"

"Yes."

And my walls came tumbling down.

Why? For fun. She love clothes; Nancy loves clothes. They wanted a lark, a buying spree. But why not tell me? An act of vengeance? Of defiance? Of thoughtlessness? Did she realize what an awful spot she's put me in? (Nancy did. I'll bet on that.)

Here I was, her Press Secretary, telling reporters she was there—off by about 250 miles. I was furious. I was hurt. I was humiliated. I was also in hot water. My mistress had fed me to the hungry wolves. Credibility, credibility, credibility. Any minute now, the news would hit the White House press.

Bam. It hit.

"Is Mrs. Ford in New York?"

"Yes."

"Why didn't you tell us?"

"I didn't know."

"Why did she go without telling you?"

"She wanted to see if she could go to New York and not be recognized, and she found out she couldn't."

Not a bad explanation under the circumstances. But I felt bad—really bad. I took it personally, because, frankly, there was no other way to take it. I spent a sleepless night, agonizing, raging, and contemplating resignation. And I bounced upstairs to the Family quarters this morning determined not to let any of it show.

"Gee. I tried to call you yesterday and I discovered you'd sneaked out on me! You really can't do that again. I have to know these things. It is impossible for you to go someplace and not attract attention. It completely destroys my credibility. And if that happens, I'll be no use to you."

She promised she would never do it again. And I believe her.

MARCH 17, 1975

I have been trying to catch up on my correspondence. Some of it is ERA-related. The letters and phone calls—on both sides—continue to pile up.

Unfortunately, most of the letters I've been answering are not ERA-related, and thus not terribly challenging in spite of the fact that they require detailed research:

"Dear Mrs. DeFries,

"Your letter to the President regarding Steven Ford's interest in wrestling has been referred to me."

And enthusiasm:

"Dear Mr. Carlinsky,

"Thank you for your interest in the White House Easter Egg Roll..."

And the ability to discreetly distribute White House secrets:

"Liberty during warm weather loves to go for dips in the White House fountain, and in colder months can be found visiting staffers who keep fresh supplies of dog biscuits in their desks."

This month's award for the most fascinating request goes to the Shrine for Democracy Museum located at the foot of Mt. Rushmore in South Dakota.

"President Ford is now the man of the hour and needs to be added to the Parade of Presidents," the letter proclaims. "It seems they just need a few facts, including, for example, the circumference of the head horizontally about one inch above the ear tops," and the "distance from the inside corner of the eye to the bottom of the chinbone."

I kept picturing an enormous wax President, and thousands of Lilliputians scampering around him with tape measures. The fact that the letter was sent over from the West Wing with a note: "Ron would like for you to reply to this on his behalf... do what you can," only intensified my urge to scrawl across the top. ONLY HIS HAIRDRESSER KNOWS FOR SURE.

The only thing worse than having time to catch up on my correspondence is having time to deal with Ford family friends.

The Reverend Billy Zeoli is one of the more fascinating members of the Ford circle of friends. A fast-talking fortyish evangelical minister with long slicked-down hair, flashy clothes, platform heels, and the overall appearance of a Forty-second-Street hustler, Billy Zeoli comes to the White House not to take, but rather to give the word of the Lord.

He spreads God's word in his own words, however, often in sports jargon, as Billy ministers to professional athletes and has, for example, delivered pre-game sermons to players in the last five Super Bowl games. He did not write the country music song "Drop-Kick Me, Jesus, Through the Goal Posts of Life," but he could have and should have and would have, had someone inspired him with the idea.

That's a typical Zeoli concept—that life is a big football game with Jesus quarterbacking you. ("I'm a total liberal when it comes to methods, but very conservative in theology," he explains.) He is also a Christian entrepreneur, the president of Gospel Films, one of the world's largest distributors of religious films.

The Fords adore him. He and the President have known each other since 1960. I believe he was a major influence in Michael's decision to turn to religion. Mrs. Ford explains, adoringly, that "Billy carries his church with him. He doesn't need a building to make you feel close to God."

All the Fords say he has been a tremendous help in times of family trauma. He was the first non-family member at Mrs. Ford's bedside after her mastectomy. He gives the President a one-page prayer every week (which the President reads and which includes a recommended Bible verse, and a poem or essay to the Lord in Zeoli's own words). At the top of the page it says "GOD'S GOT A BETTER IDEA." At the bottom it says "COPYRIGHT WILLIAM J. ZEOLI. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED."

And I set up a shopping trip for his wife at Loehmann's.

Hallelujah!

MARCH 29, 1975 (PALM SPRINGS)

Just as Christmas means Vail to the Fords, Easter means Palm Springs. They have been coming here for years. Last year when Ford was Vice President they stayed at the Annenberg Estate, but they didn't enjoy it very much. Apparently, Walter Annenberg believes that a person has to have solitude, his own territory, a place that is off limits to others. Jack Ford had an impossible time getting past the Annenberg security system and Mrs. Ford said that she was afraid to touch anything in the house.

This year they're staying at the home of old friends, the Fred Wilsons. Mrs. Ford is happy for the first time in weeks. We left osteoarthritis and cold weather behind. It is sunny, warm and beautiful and life is looking up.

JUNE 3, 1975 (MADRID)

There are palaces and there are palaces. The fact is, in spite of the propaganda caused by all those fairy tales, there are palaces in which it would prove difficult to live happily ever after, even with Prince Charming. Case in point: Moncloa Palace where the Fords stayed in Madrid. It is beautiful from the outside, and I'm sure it was heaven way back when, but this is 1975, and Triple A would not waste a single star. Rundown is the word.

On the morning before our departure from Spain, I came into the kitchen to get a cup of coffee and I could not find a cup that was not cracked. Really cracked. With whole pieces missing. The kitchen floor was filthy. In a decrepit dining room, the White House staff fought over cups and juice. Bob Hartmann stole someone's half-finished orange juice in a moment of desperation. Meanwhile, upstairs in the Presidential Suite...

The sleeping accommodations were not much better. Apparently news of the Fords' "erotic" behavior (i.e., sleeping together) had reached Spain. Greeting them in their palatial Presidential quarters was one bed, higher than the average bed, and a little wider than a single size, but not as wide as a double. Mrs. Ford took one look at it and announced that there wasn't a chance in the world that she was going to sleep in that size bed "with him."

To accommodate madame, they brought in a little cot which they placed next to the other bed, but it was lower and smaller. Together the two beds were quite a sight, it looked like one for the King and one for his lackey.

JUNE 5, 1975

Today was Susan's graduation from Holton Arms, and the President gave the graduation address. It was typical of a high school graduation—the proud parents (the President had tears in his eyes as he handed Susan her diploma) and the tearful farewell to friends.

Jack Ford skipped his own graduation at Utah State University so he could attend Susan's. Driving cross-country his car broke down, and he pulled into the White House in the wee hours of this morning. He opted for bed, thereby becoming the only Ford who did not attend Susan's graduation, doubtlessly setting a family record for missing two graduations in one week.

Last summer he worked as a ranger fighting forest fires in Idaho. Before that he worked as an airline baggage man, a hotel bellman, and a deck hand on a freighter. But he plans to spend this summer out of the labor market ("Trying to put it all together") and I have a funny feeling that it is going to increase my workload.

"You can bet it will," the man on his Secret Service detail assured me. "I'd put money on it. That's a rotten apple, that kid."

"Hmmmmm?"

"You should have seen the way they lived out there in Utah. You should have seen his friends. College kids with no goals. Slobs, that's what they were. There were six of them who roomed together in this red brick house across from the campus. What a mess—empty beer cans, dirty ashtrays, records stuffed into orange crates. It was a wild place. A flop house. 'The Dead Meat House'—that's what they called it."

I hoped he would not explain why they called it that.

He didn't.

"He never carries money," the agent went on, "so he's always borrowing money. Which I might add, he rarely remembers to pay back. He never smiles. Never says a friendly word to us. Sullen, that's what he is. And scornful. And wild. He does some pretty crazy things, let me tell you. And reliable? Not on your life. He'd tell us one set of plans, and then change his mind suddenly—'spontaneously'—and run off in a totally different direction. We spent most of our time running after him."

NEXT: The President gives Jack a deadline to find a job.

Michael Ford Model To Many

Parade Magazine would like to do a cover story on Mrs. Ford and one of the kids. ("How about Michael?") A story that would come out the day before the Republican convention begins.

Terrific timing.

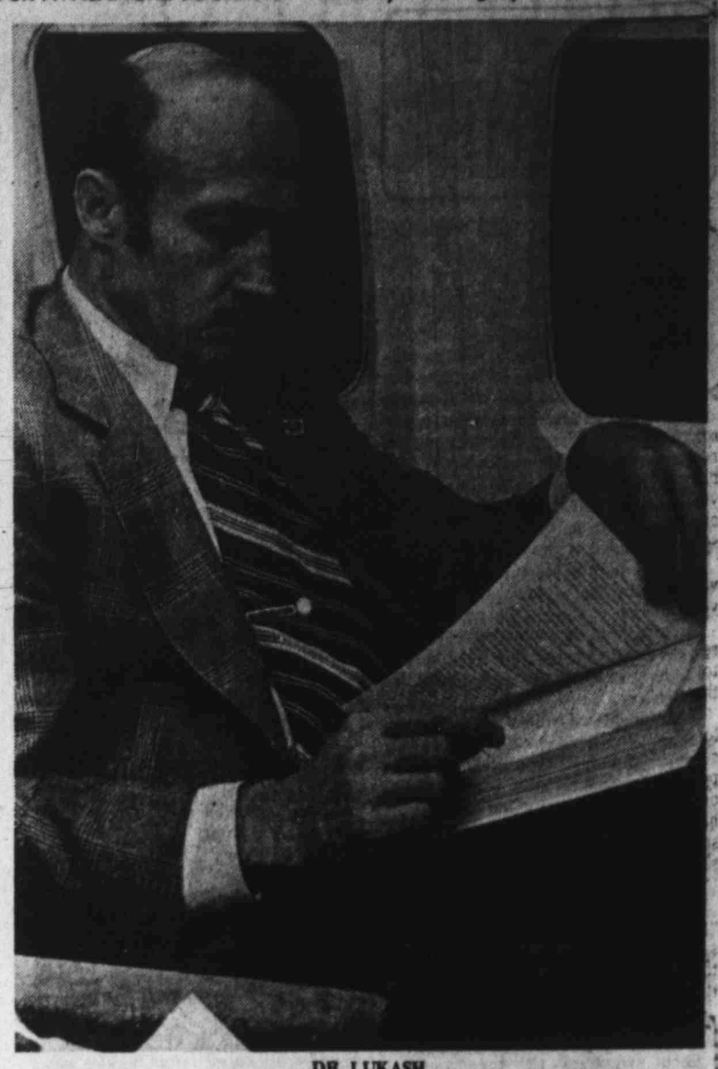

"I like the idea," I told Michael on the phone. "I'm sure the story would be complimentary. And the day before the convention...that's wonderful."

There was a pensive pause.

"I can't," he said. "We're part of the community up here. We're involved in the church and we're doing real well. We've built up trust and friendship. This would upset it all. If I were to turn into some kind of celebrity, the people I'm working with couldn't relate to me. We like things simple...the way they are."

There was no whine, no holier-than-thou tone in the voice. Just honesty.

This, I thought, as I got off the phone, this is a kid who has found his niche. A noble young man, a remarkably solid young man, the type (alas!) that Parade Magazine would have loved.

Divorce Course Offered At Tech

Support from friends and family and feeling good about yourself are two of the most important factors affecting how separated and divorced people adjust to being single. A project sponsored by the department of home and family life at Texas Tech University and the University Counseling Center will teach recently separated and divorced people how to develop support from others and how to start the process of feeling better about yourself.

The project is designed to provide separated and divorced people with the social skills they need to maximize their relationships with family, friends, dating partners and co-workers. The social skills will also provide them with the tools they need to begin to feel better about who they are.

The class, entitled "Transition Training: Easing Adjustment After Separation or Divorce," will begin next week and last for six weeks. Group members will attend a three-hour evening meeting weekly. In order to enroll for the class, individuals must be separated from their spouse for at least one month but they need not have completed the legal divorce process.

The project is designed to be most helpful to people who have been separated or divorced for less than a year and a half. Early enrollment is encouraged as a limited number of participants will be accepted.

For more information call Jake Thiessen, coordinator of the project, at 742-3000 or 747-6722.

New Device Repels Muggers, Rapists

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI) — One new product designed to repulse muggers, robbers and rapists offers a questionable alternative.

It is a clip-on device with an ampule containing synthetic skunk oil and a small vial of neutralizer. The ampule is odorless until squeezed, the manufacturer says. Then the fumes make both victim and attacker so smelly that the victim becomes an undesirable target and the attacker easy to trace.

The neutralizer supposedly dissipates enough odor after the attack for the intended victim to return home to bathe and get rid of the remainder.

(The producer is Career Development Center, Inc., a non-profit tax-exempt organization in Compton, Calif. The distributor is Rapel Industries, Inc., P.O. Box 1993, Scottsdale, Ariz. 85252)

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY

DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: Recently I went out to play golf, and on the way to the first green I had a terrible pain in my chest and arm. It was so bad I had to stop and rest. After about five minutes I thought I'd give it another try. I played 18 holes without a twinge. How do you account for this? I've had other little pains like this, but never that bad. It seems to match what you describe as angina pectoris in a recent column. Should I have an examination for that? — J.D.

I suggest you do. Angina pectoris can take some peculiar paths. It is not unusual for an angina patient to experience what happened to you at the golf course. Angina is, as you know, a deficiency of blood in the heart muscle. It is that sudden deficiency of blood that produces the pain. The deficiency may correct itself in the meantime and one may be able to go on doing whatever he was doing, like your golfing.

Some people who have angina can engage in activity indoors that might cause severe symptoms outdoors. Others may develop symptoms after eating a meal and engaging in activity, but not have the symptoms at other times. It is possible, of course, that your pain was from a muscle spasm from your golf swing, but your reports of similar pains at other times make angina more likely. At any rate, you should want to know for sure. Former President Eisenhower had an experience like this and his was a heart attack.

Angina (if that's what you have) would not necessarily rule out golf in the future if medicine for it allowed you to play without symptoms. For the present, I would forgo golf. My booklet, "How to Handle Angina Pectoris," discusses ways to live with the problem. If you desire a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I guess it would be difficult, maybe impossible, for a surgeon to rejoin the tubes that are cut when a man has a vasectomy even though he might wish to become a father. But would it be possible for a surgeon to withdraw a few million sperm from the testicle with a needle and insert them into the woman's genital tract and have a chance for fertilization? I'm sure I'm not the first to have this idea, but I haven't seen it discussed. — J.W.

It's an interesting idea, but like many simple answers it has flaws.

After the sperm duct (vas) is tied off or severed, sperm production tapers off and after a time the testicles lose this ability altogether. In fact, before doctors attempt to reconnect the duct, tests are done in much the manner you suggest to see if the testicles have the ability to make sperm. If the tests show poor sperm production, the surgery is not recommended, of course.

A more reasonable approach may lie in perfection of sperm banks. Sperm can be frozen and preserved. However, sperm survival is not good after it thaws. On the other hand, the sperm that do survive the preservation and thawing seem to produce infants with less birth defects than otherwise.

Local Ministers Visit Site Of Tornado Destruction

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Family News Staff

Editor's note — The writer was part of a delegation from Lubbock for Palo Duro Union Presbytery which visited Wichita Falls Tuesday for the purpose of assessing needs in the tornado-stricken community.

"What in the world did you think about as you saw the tornado approaching?" Dr. Bill Chapman of Lubbock asked Dr. Joe Copeland, interim pastor of First Presbyterian Church of Wichita Falls.

"That my two grandchildren had just arrived to visit," was Copeland's answer.

"We were so dumb, we didn't realize what was happening. All we knew was the TV said 'take cover now' and went off the air," continued the pastor.

Dr. and Mrs. Copeland are residents of Prebyterian Manor while the minister works at the church. The retirement village was one block from the devastation and sustained only minor damage to some windows. From the residence, the Copelands could see the tornado sweep through the adjacent neighborhood.

"It seemed to be three funnels, each one with devastation in it. It blew through an eight-mile stretch of Wichita Falls demolishing some very fine homes as well as some others."

"You need to see it to believe it," Copeland told his Lubbock visitors. And he took them for a brief tour pointing out homes of members of his church. A light rain had begun, and the weather made all the more urgent the work of those putting hasty coverings of plywood or plastic or paper over remains of roofs and scattered belongings.

"We feel very fortunate that we have had a week of good weather in which to do some clean-up," Copeland commented. "All the debris you see today in yards was stewn all over the streets and no one — not even ambulances — could get around."

At one point in the tour he stopped the van owned by First Presbyterian Church (his own car had been damaged in the tornado) and pointed to an empty field. "There was a church over there. And beyond that you can see the shopping center where the J.C. Penney store almost literally exploded, causing many of the deaths."

A kind of sense of humor has returned to the city in the week since the destruction. Some yards displayed signs such as "Laing's Recreation Area: Closed for Repairs," or "Maid Wanted," or "Help Keep Wichita Falls Beautiful."

At a lunch hour meeting of Presbyterian pastors in the city, the weight of the week was shared along with sandwiches and iced tea. "I certainly hope another one (tornado) doesn't come by here this week," said one man.

"What in the world do we preach about to a congregation who have been through this?" questioned another pastor.

Copeland was the spokesman for the local clergy as he said to the visitors from Lubbock, "Thank you for coming and being with us and beside us today. It meant more than I can express."

As the plane returning the visitors to Lubbock took off from Shepard Air Force Base, one remembered that it was just a week ago — that same time of day — that the tornado had struck the city.

Cotton Modules Stir Dispute

AUSTIN (AP) — Supporters of cotton trailers tangled with protectors of the state highway system Wednesday.

"This is nothing but a $1.5 million gift to the cotton growers from the taxpayers of Texas," claimed Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, about a bill that would let cotton trailers or modules be lengthened from 45 to 48 feet and to carry gross weights up to 59,400 pounds.

"You are increasing the axle load by 2,000 pounds, which the highway department says will increase road wear 25 to 40 percent."

"This will take 6,000 old type cotton trailers off our roads," said Sen. Raul Longoria, D-Edinburg, author of the bill. "Cotton gins will operate trucks pulling two and three modules which will take the place of large numbers of trailers."

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, was successful in attaching an amendment saying that anyone operating the larger trailers would be liable to the state for any "identifiable" road damage.

"No county is ever going to be able to collect for any damage to their roads from this bill," said Schwartz.

"The last time the legislature met, you agreed to give concrete trucks the right to overload. That's what damages our highways — overloads, not winter weather. Before that the law was extended to let the milk truck people carry overloads and then it was the log haulers.

"Now you want to turn the cotton farmers loose on county roads that were not built for overloads."

Utility Commission Decision Expected

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Public Utility Commission will decide Friday whether to order three electric companies to refund up to $20 million to customers.

Commissioners have scheduled a 10 a.m. hearing to consider a final order in the lengthy investigation of Texas Electric Service Co., Dallas Power Light and Texas Power & Light.

The companies are subsidiaries of the Texas Utilities system, headquartered in Fort Worth. They serve customers in North, Central, East and West Texas, including Dallas, Fort Worth, Arlington, Midland, Odessa, Wichita Falls and Big Spring.

Commission staff members conducted a six-month investigation of alleged improper energy transactions among the three companies. Investigators questioned the sale of partial ownership in the Martin Lake lignite power plant near Henderson.

TPL sold some of its interest in the plant to both TESCO and DPL. However, TESCO agreed to furnish TPL with electricity generated from its cheapest natural gas supply.

The commission staff recommended TESCO be ordered to refund more than $17 million to its 484,000 customers. TPL should return $1.2 million and DPL $500,000, the staff said.

Company officials have said none of the questioned transactions resulted in any corporate profits and were made to save customers money on future fuel supplies.

The commission ordered the investigation after the Martin Lake transactions surfaced during a TESCO rate case last year.

U.S. Dispatching Help To Quake, Volcano Areas

WASHINGTON (AP)— The United States is providing about $1 million in relief supplies to areas of Yugoslavia stricken by an earthquake.

Also, food supplies will be shipped to St. Vincent in the Caribbean to help feed 12,000 people evacuated from the area of Mount Soufriere, an erupting volcano. The two projects were announced here by the Agency for International Development.

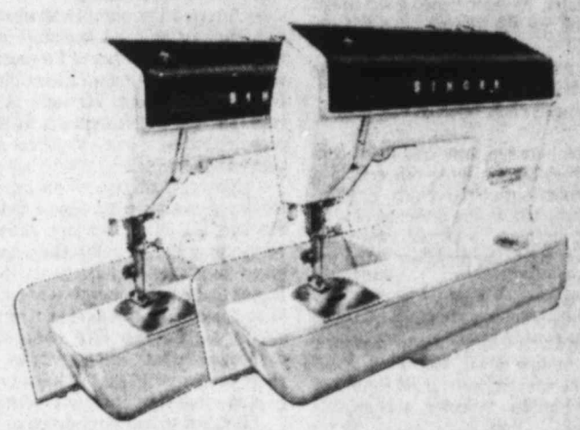

The supplies for Yugoslavia include 1,500 tents to shelter some 12,000, 654 double-decked cots and 20,000 blankets.

St. Vincent is to receive 50 tons of nonfat dry milk and 500 gallons of cooking oil. Earlier in the week, AID airlifted blankets, cots, tents and antibiotics to the island.

Nearly half the world output of dry mustard never reaches the mustard pot; four tons in every 10 are marketed in bulk for use in other foods.

Pressured Confession Nets Man New Trial

AUSTIN (AP) — Joseph Stanley Faulder Wednesday won reversal of his death penalty sentence because law officers pressured him to confess to the slaying of a 75-year-old Gladewater widow.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled Faulder's written confession should not have been used as evidence. A new trial was ordered.

Faulder was tried in Longview before State District Judge Marcus Vascocu and convicted of capital murder in the July 8, 1975, slaying of Inez Phillips.

The defendant was arrested in Colorado in April 1977. After his return to Texas a week later, Faulder signed a statement confessing to the slaying, the appeals court said.

After a hearing, the statement was deemed both voluntary and admissible.

The appeals court rejected that finding.

"It took between three and four hours of interrogation by three officers, in a hidden room out of the county in which he was arrested, in the presence of a lie detector machine, to extract slowly the confession from the appellant," the appeals court said.

In the statement, Faulder said he and a woman drove to Mrs. Phillips's house. The companion told the widow that their car had broken down. Mrs. Phillips admitted the woman, who pulled a gun and allowed Faulder to enter, the appeals court said.

Mrs. Phillips gave them the combination to a safe kept in her closet, the court continued. The safe was empty. The assailants knocked the woman unconscious and gagged her, according to the statement. Faulder said he noticed Mrs. Phillips was moaning and he stabbed her in the heart, the appeals court said.

Faulder's statement was made to Trooper Marvin T. McLeroy, Texas Ranger Glenn Elliott and Gregg County Sheriff's Deputy Bill Roach in Tyler, where the defendant was taken for a lie detector test. He refused the test, the appeals court said, and should have been returned to Longview.

"Appellant told all three that he did not want to talk about it and wanted a lawyer," the appeals court wrote. "All three ignored the request to remain silent and chose to continue the interrogation."

Roach told Faulder he could request a lawyer, but the defendant never specifically asked for an appointed attorney, the court added.

"The fact that appellant was not physically mistreated during his incarceration or interrogation does not remove the taint to the confession which was secured in violation of his federally guaranteed constitutional rights," the appeals court added.

In other cases, the court:

— Reversed the commercial obscenity conviction of an adult bookstore operator. Cathey Collins Price of Freeport won a new trial because law officers illegally seized material from her store as evidence. She had been assessed a six-month probated jail term and a $750 fine. A new trial was ordered.

— Ruled that El Paso private investigator Jay J. Armes must appear before a San Diego, Calif., grand jury. Armes investigated a murder in San Diego and the grand jury wanted him to testify. He argued that his testimony was not material and necessary to the case. The court said it was the first time someone had challenged what another state must prove to compel a Texas resident to testify in an out-of-state criminal proceeding.

— Refused to halt prosecution of an El Paso man who claimed he was denied his rights under the state Speedy Trial Act. David Castro Ordunez was arrested Dec. 12, 1976, and indicted Jan. 20, 1977, on charges of felony theft. He asked the charges be dismissed on Nov. 15, 1978. The court said it could not question the trial judge's use of discretion in denying Ordunez's request.

— Upheld Ronnie Wayne Lowrance's murder conviction and life sentence in the July 18, 1976, beating death of 75-year-old Mary Nipp of Dallas. Lowrance said there was not enough evidence to convict him.

McClenton Conviction Upheld On Appeal

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The murder conviction and life sentence of T.W. McClenton in the shooting death of Joe Ybarra Flores in Lubbock County on April 10, 1977, was upheld today by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

In his appeal, McClenton challenged the admission into evidence of a bloody shirt and undershirt worn by the victim, claiming the clothing was admitted with "no other purpose than to inflame the minds" of the jury.

The appeals court said that it has been held that "bloody clothing is admissible if it has relevance such that a verbal description thereof would be admissible."

The opinion states the trial court record shows that McClenton shot Flores as he was leaving McClenton's cafe early in the morning of April 10, 1977, and dragged the body across the street, where it was found later that morning face down against the curb.

"A description of the deceased and the clothing he was wearing when his body was found were matters that could be testified about; therefore, the fact that the clothing had blood on it would not require its exclusion from evidence."

Name Change Pushed For Tech Med School

Avalanche Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A bill to change the name of Texas Tech University School of Medicine to Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center moved a step closer to becoming law Wednesday.

The Senate Education Committee favorably recommended SB 371 by Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka which would change the name of the school.

Short said the name change proposal came about because Tech wants to project a "regional concept." He said the school serves students from Amarillo, Odessa and El Paso as well as Lubbock.

Arson Suspects, 8, Won't Face Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — City prosecutors have decided not to bring charges against three 8-year-olds believed responsible for a March 25 fire that caused an estimated $250,000 damage to a warehouse used to store materials for the federal government.

"It would take a very special case to approve prosecution of a child that young," said Assistant Corporation Counsel Geoffrey Alprin, chief criminal prosecutor for the city government.

Pryor Film Declared Hilarious Despite Vulgarity, Obscenity

"Richard Pryor: Live In Concert." Presented by Bill Sargent. Directed by Jeff Margolis. Photographed by Tom Schamp. Edited by Stan Livingston. No rating (although language is deemed "vulgar" and may prove offensive to some). At the Fox Fourplex.

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

The title says it all in "Richard Pryor: Live In Concert." Filmed during a 1978 concert in Long Beach, Calif., it is a view of Pryor in his natural element — alone on stage. He is not being stifled by television censors. He is no longer hamming it up as he did in "Silver Streak"; nor is he testing his dramatic talents as he did in "Blue Collar." Instead, he is showing his mettle as a standup comic, combining vulgarities and human nature to make us laugh at everyday truths. He transcends racism by saying, hey, there is a difference — and unites us, though perhaps nervously, through the common bond of laughter.

A-J FILM REVIEW

Only 80 minutes long, this film is a Bill Sargent production. (Sargent hopes to make this the first in a series, with his next project reportedly being filming Sammy Davis Jr. in "Stop The World, I Want To Get Off.") And perhaps the best aspect of this "stage as cinema" strategy is that it brings nationally renowned figures to the masses. In other words, Pryor may appear on stage in Dallas, but now folks in Lubbock can see what all the clamor is about.

And clamor there may be, because this is not really a movie and thus carries no rating. (Fox theater manager Harold Lieck has taken the liberty of rating it R in newspaper ads, but whether entrance can be denied to youth is a question for the courts; the concert, after all, was open to anyone with the price of a ticket.) Those unfamiliar with Pryor, regarded by many as our best standup comic, may walk away offended by the onslaught of four, six and 12-letter words which permeate this film. But if language is no personal roadblock to enjoyment, film audiences are bound to fall just as hard for Pryor as the concert audience on screen. Because Richard Pryor is funny — funny in both animated and perceptive manners.

RICHARD PRYOR

When he explains how whites react to blacks stealing their seats at intermission, he knows he's getting laughter of the anxious, uncertain variety. Indeed, he makes us laugh at ourselves and recognize our faults, our character flaws and fears. And he manages all this whether talking about funerals or sex or hunting in the woods. He also knows how to poke fun at himself, recounting his failure in the Golden Gloves and recalling in comic terms that New Year's Day in 1977 when he was arrested for emptying his revolver into his wife's (now ex-wife's) car.

"She was leaving me," he tells us, "and so I said, 'If you do, you're going to be driving your hush puppies 'cause I'm going to kill this (expletive).'"

The imagination of this comedian knows no bounds. He not only acts out what he did that night, but also takes turns personifying the vodka he drank and the tires he blew out. This switching of characterizations is a major part of Pryor's routine, and it's impossible to hold back the guffaws when he imitates his son, all wide-eyed innocence after a figurine is broken, a white guy angered at people cutting in line in front of him, a scared man wondering whether he's satisfied his lover in bed and, finally, a wonderful sexual stereotype he names Macho Man.

Look also for the scene in which he relives his heart attack, playing himself, death and an angel. So much of this man's material is born of personal experience and personal observation, and it is this aura of truth that serves as the end making any means acceptable. Muhammad Ali, Leon Spinks and even John Wayne are granted affectionate homage in the 80-minute comedy, and we see a great deal of ourselves as well. For this reason — and the fact Pryor does not seem to be including Lubbock on his tour schedule — Bill Sargent's filming of "Richard Pryor: Live In Concert" remains a notable achievement.

Like Lenny Bruce, Richard Pryor aims his barbs right at his audience's shortcomings, and his aim as a comedian of conscience is true. Not to mention hilarious. Indeed, now we're faced with yet another standup comic who knows how to talk dirty and influence people...

Those wanting to see "Richard Pryor: Live In Concert" are urged to refrain from reading Rolling Stone magazine's current cover story on Pryor until afterward. The story reveals a good deal of the material in the film, word for word, thus hampering the spontaneity of the performance.

Texas High Court Upholds Judgement Against Physician For Malpractice

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court affirmed a $500,000 judgment Wednesday for the husband of a woman who suffered permanent brain damage after taking a diuretic prescribed by her longtime Houston physician.

Ernest Cooper sued Dr. Ernest Sears for $2.5 million on behalf of his wife, Emma Jane, who was a 47-year-old cafeteria worker when she was stricken in 1972.

After suffering brain damage, Mrs. Cooper was placed in a nursing home and then transferred to an Austin hospital. Doctors said she would require constant care the rest of her life.

Court records show Mrs. Cooper went to Sears, her doctor of 20 years, on Oct. 12, 1972, complaining of not feeling well and "puffiness" — or edema — in her face and hands.

Sears prescribed one tablet a day of Enduron, a moderate diuretic.

Mrs. Cooper later called Sears' office and said the diuretic had made her feel ill. The nurse told her to stop taking the medicine until Sears returned to town Oct. 20. Mrs. Cooper saw Sears again and told him she was still not feeling well, that she had puffiness and also had been nauseated.

Sears told her to resume taking the Enduron.

On the evening of Oct. 21, Mrs. Cooper called her husband home from work, because she felt sick. The next day, a Sunday, Cooper called Sears, and the doctor told him to give his wife only liquids and bring her into the office on Monday.

Cooper gave his wife a glass of tea and shortly afterwards found her unconscious. He rushed her to Heights Hospital, where she was admitted in a coma.

Sears' final diagnosis was brain damage due to coma caused probably by a severe electrolyte imbalance.

Electrolytes, the Houston appeals court said, are elements such as sodium and potassium in the blood which must be balanced in a particular way to sustain life. An imbalance of electrolytes can cause death, the court said.

Cooper sued Sears on several alleged counts of negligence. Expert witnesses testified the sudden loss of body fluid, perhaps resulting from the ingestion of a diuretic, could cause an electrolyte imbalance.

The jury found Sears was negligent in telling Mrs. Cooper to resume taking the diuretic without first conducting an electrolyte test, which involved taking a blood sample.

The 14th Court of Civil Appeals affirmed the trial court, and the supreme court upheld the lower court decisions without offering its own opinion.

In other cases, the Supreme Court:

— Rejected an attempt by the First State Bank of Hearne to move to College Station, which is 27 miles away in a different county.

— Refused to authorize Ima Jean Baker's upcoming drug trial in Jefferson County to be televised.

— Upheld the disbarment of Ramsey Muniz of Corpus Christi, twice the Raza Unida Party's candidate for governor. Muniz is serving a five-year federal prison sentence, after pleading guilty to charges of conspiring to possess 1,100 pounds of marijuana with intent to distribute it, to import marijuana and jumping bail.

Bank's Moving Plans Thwarted By High Court

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday rejected an attempt by the First State Bank of Hearne to move to College Station, 27 miles away and in a different county.

Justice Zollie Steakley said the legal question presented in the case had never been considered in Texas.

The Hearne bank was chartered in 1957 in Robertson County. In 1976 the bank asked the state banking board for permission to move to College Station in Brazos County.

The four existing banks in College Station and nearby Bryan protested the application. The banks were University National Bank of College Station and Citizens Bank, First Bank & Trust and First National Bank of Bryan.

The banking board approved the change on a 2-1 vote in October 1976. The Bryan-College Station banks appealed in court.

The district court set aside the board order in October 1977, but the 3rd Court of Civil Appeals here reversed the trial court and reinstated the order as valid.

The Supreme Court reversed the appeals court and affirmed the trial court. Justice James Denton dissented, saying he agreed with the appeals court.

Steakley's majority opinion said neither state law nor board rules speak "expressly to the substantive issues to be resolved" in an application to move a bank, "and the question thus posed is one of first impression."

Steakley said it is apparent the board only considered whether public necessity required a new bank was needed in College Station, and that no consideration was given to how the move might affect Hearne.

Also, Steakley said, none of the three board members had heard the case, and only two of the three had read the record. The deciding vote to approve the move was cast by the member who had not read the record, he said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My wife and I own stock in two oil companies — 2,084 shares of one and 362 shares of another. Because of the predicted "shortage of oil" — which I can't believe — and plans to limit sales of gasoline, if that supposed shortage gets bad enough, what will happen to the dividends on our stocks?

We realize that most oil companies have large investments in other products. But will their sales of oil and gasoline remain large enough to continue paying dividends?

A. This column has never held out anything resembling a guarantee on any individual stock or group of stocks — because there is always some risk with every stock.

But, if I were a betting man, I would give long odds against the possibility of any reduction in the dividends paid on oil company stocks in the foreseeable future. It's far more likely that those dividends will be increased.

Haven't you been reading the news stories about the "oil crisis," and the annual and quarterly stockholder reports from those two companies? They all point out that oil company earnings are increasing — in some cases, dramatically.

A company pays dividends out of its earnings. When earnings increase, it's natural for stockholders to expect higher dividends. I'd say you don't have a thing to worry about.

It's not this column's function to take sides, on whether or not the oil shortage is "real." But I have to say it's a sad commentary on stockholder relations that at least two oil companies haven't convinced stockholders — the owners of the companies — on the merits of that argument.

Is it any wonder the general public doubts the seriousness of the alleged oil shortage?

Q. I am the executor of an estate which includes shares of two mutual funds, with a combined current value of approximately $16,360. These are part of the estate's assets, which are to be distributed to four beneficiaries ranging in age from 62 to 89.

I feel it would be advisable to sell this stock and remit cash to the beneficiaries, so that they could put the money in six-month savings certificates. I do, however, want to act in their best interests. They are all agreeable to any decision I make. What is your opinion?

A. I agree that those fund shares should be cashed in. You can do that by "redeeming" the shares — turning them back to the fund for their redemption prices.

Both of those funds have as their investment objective growth in value. They're hardly the kind of things to be held by people ages 62 to 89 — even if the funds had records of achieving their objectives. And a look at the record books shows that's not the case.

One problem with your planning. Split $16,360 four ways and you have $4,090 to distribute to each beneficiary. Six-month insured savings certificates come in minimum denominations of $10,000.

My suggestion is that you distribute the money to those beneficiaries and let them decide what they want to do with it.

Q. My $10,000 savings certificate will come due in July. At that time, will I be better off buying $10,000 in public utility bonds on which I won't have to pay income tax, or blue chip common stock paying a high dividend?

A. Where did you get the idea you won't have to pay income tax on public utility bonds? The interest received from all corporate bonds — issued by a utility or any other company is subject to federal, state and — if you happen to live where there is one — local income taxes.

One vote for the common stock you named in your letters.

General Motors Again Tops Fortune List

NEW YORK (AP) — General Motors Corp. for the second straight year has captured the top spot on Fortune magazine's annual list of the nation's 500 largest industrial companies.

Fortune's 1978 list appeared in its May 7 issue, released Wednesday. The list showed GM, with sales last year of $63.2 billion, retaining its lead over second-ranked Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company, which last topped the Fortune list in 1976.

For changes in rank among the top 10 industrials, 1978 was the quietest year in a decade. General Electric Co. rose from ninth on the 1977 list to eighth in 1978, displacing Gulf Oil Corp., which slipped from eighth to ninth. Gulf remains the nation's fifth-largest oil company.

But Standard Oil Company of Ohio jumped from 66th among all industrials in 1977 to 43rd in 1978 as increasing shipments of its Alaskan crude oil swelled the company's revenues to $5.2 billion from $3.5 billion a year earlier. Among oil companies, Sohio rose from 19th in 1977 to 15th in 1978.

Corporate mergers, which Federal Trade Commission Chairman Michael Pertschuk charged this week "threaten to upset the balance of power in our society," continued to make major changes on the Fortune list.

Ten former "Fortune 500" companies were merged into or acquired by other members of the elite club. That made 1978 the busiest merger year since 1968, when 23 Fortune 500 companies were bought by others on the list. In 1977, six companies disappeared from the Fortune list by merging with other top-ranked firms.

The largest corporate purchase among the list's members last year was 182nd-ranked Johns-Manville Corp.'s $595.5 million acquisition of Olinkraft Corp. The Louisiana-based paper mill was No. 473 on the 1977 list.

The most acquisitive of the 500, based on the number of purchases reported, was conglomerate Chromalloy-American Corp., ranked 203rd in size last year. Chromalloy-American bought 13 companies in its last fiscal year, but may be an acquisition target itself: 492nd-ranked Sun Chemical Corp. recently said it bought 6.2 percent of the Missouri-based conglomerate.

Chrysler Corp. held onto the No. 10 spot in the Fortune ranking, but the nation's third-largest automaker led the list of industrial money-losers by tallying a loss of $204.6 million on sales of $13.6 billion.

While Chrysler lost millions, the Fortune 500 companies as a whole were doing quite well. Ninety-five percent of the companies on the list posted sales increases last year, while net profits of the 500 companies advanced by 17 percent over 1977's levels.

Data General Corp., the Southboro, Mass., computer maker, joined the 500-largest list for the first time as it took over the No. 500 spot from McCormick & Co. Inc., the spice and flavoring manufacturer. McCormick moved to 487th in the latest list.

Fortune defines an industrial as a company that derives "more than half its revenues from manufacturing and/or mining." Thus, American Telephone Telegraph Co. is absent from the Fortune 500 list even though the giant utility's revenues in 1978 totaled $41.7 billion.

But ATT's Western Electric Co. Inc. division, the Bell System's manufacturing arm, took the 17th spot on the Fortune list. Western Electric, with 1978 revenues of $9.5 billion, moved up from 18th a year earlier, while Continental Oil Co. dropped from 17th to 18th place.

U.S. Cuts Gold Sale In Half For May 15

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reflecting increased confidence in the strength of the dollar, the U.S. government moved Wednesday to reduce its public sale of gold to the level it was before dollar-rescue efforts began last fall.

"The amount of the monthly sale is being reduced in light of improved conditions in the foreign exchange markets and the fact that gold no longer appears to be a destabilizing factor in these markets," the Treasury Department said in a statement.

"Sales in the magnitude maintained in recent months — 1,500,000 ounces monthly — do not appear to be needed under current circumstances," the statement said.

As a result, the Treasury said, monthly gold sales will be reduced starting May 15 to about 750,000 ounces "until further notice."

The sales, begun last May to help supply domestic gold needs and bolster the U.S. dollar, initially involved 300,000 ounces. The quantity was boosted to 750,000 ounces in November.

It rose to some 1.5 million ounces in December and stayed at that level through Tuesday's April sale as part of the government's Nov. 1 commitment to strengthen the flagging dollar.

The government's $30 billion "dollar rescue" effort has resulted in a stronger dollar — up some 9 percent to 21 percent against foreign currencies from its Oct. 31 low point, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said recently.

A weak dollar tends to worsen inflation because it means the cost of goods coming into the country rise in price. A strong currency also indicates confidence in the economy.

"The dollar has been quite strong," said a government monetary expert who asked not to be identified. "That means that intervention could be reduced and other action taken to strength the dollar (such as the gold sales) could be cut back."

The dollar has been strong against major foreign currencies in recent week, but was down slightly in international trading on Wednesday. The Japanese yen, for example, hit a 10-month low against the dollar on Tuesday, closing at about 217 yen to the dollar, down from 176 yen last fall.

The Treasury announced its decision to reduce gold sales as it also released figures from its Tuesday auction of 1,500,100 ounces of gold.

The twelfth such sale brought the government $346.1 million, down from the previous month's proceeds of $361.4 million.

Deregulation Seen Offering Too Little Oil, Too Much Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oil price deregulation will save and produce less oil and create more inflation than envisioned by the White House, a congressional study said Wednesday.

The Congressional Budget Office study was released by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., who opposes the lifting of controls on domestically produced crude oil. The study said President Carter's decision to remove all oil price controls by mid-1981 would:

— Reduce imports by 300,000 barrels of oil a day by 1981 and 650,00 barrels by 1985 — instead of the saving of 370,000 a day in 1981 and 950,000 a day in 1985 projected by the administration.

— Add a total of 1.25 percent to the rate of inflation by 1982 instead of the 0.75 percent predicted by the administration.

— Increase domestic production by from 400,000 to 500,000 barrels a day through 1985 — compared to the White House range of 742,000 to 839,000 over the same period.

However, the study generally concurred with the administration's claim that lifting controls will add about five cents a gallon to the price of gasoline and other petroleum products by 1981. This does not reflect inflationary price increases or pricing decisions of the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries.

A study made last week by the House energy and power subcommittee predicted a price hike of about 3.6 cents a gallon while other congressional estimates have ranged as high as an increase of 15 cents to 20 cents a gallon.

Jackson, chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, said the new study showed that "we get all the inflationary impact of the president's proposals with no real benefit. The new production will be less than one-half of one percent of our domestic demand for oil ... It just isn't worth it."

However an administration energy official, who asked not to be identified, noted that despite Jackson's assertion, the figures in the Congressional Budget Office study do not really differ much from those determined by the White House.

"It's really just a political question," the official said.

Jackson is an outspoken critic of Carter's move to lift oil price controls, and the senator is the sponsor of a bill designed to block the action.

The president has announced that he will lift price lids on domestically produced oil, beginning this June, until they reach world-market levels by the end of September 1981.

Under existing controls, oil from older wells is controlled at about $6 a barrel while oil from newer wells may be sold for about $13 a barrel — compared to world prices of about $14.50 a barrel. Each barrel contains 42 gallons.

Carter also asked Congress to tax 50 percent of the "windfall profits" oil companies will reap from the move to lift oil price controls. He proposed rebating some of the tax revenues to help low-income families pay their heating bills.

The Congressional Budget Office study did not attempt to evaluate the economic impact of the proposed tax.

The report said decontrol "would provide several benefits but it would also impose a number of costs."

Heading the list of "benefits" was reduction of demand because of higher prices — although not to the degree forecast by the administration.

Other benefits cited were increased production from older U.S. wells and new exploration.

But on the minus side, the study claimed the price increases, coming on the heels of recent OPEC price hikes, "will further accelerate inflation and may slow economic activity and increase unemployment."

Fallout, Cancer Link Probe Begins

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Nearly two decades after the last open-air nuclear test in Nevada, a congressional team begins an investigation Thursday into claims that radioactive fallout caused cancer in people living downwind in Utah, Arizona and Nevada.

If an informal hearing earlier in southern Utah is any indication, the committee can expect testimony from angry people who either have cancer or lost relatives and friends to the disease.

Irene Allen told of losing two husbands to cancer. Ilene Prosstgaard, whose father died of cancer last year, said, "I wish someone had some answers."

"A crime has been committed in our state," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who sponsored the town meeting Tuesday night and vowed to seek special legislation awarding compensation to bomb test victims.

Thursday's hearing was sparked by millions of dollars in claims from 550 persons, mostly Utah residents.

It has not been proven that fallout from the tests caused cancer in anyone. More than 4,000 sheep died after one series in 1953, but the Army denied that fallout killed them.

The congressional panel, whose co-chairmen are Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Texas, will try to determine whether fallout caused the cancers and whether the government must make amends.

Eckhardt says he will question the Department of Energy's dual role in promoting nuclear energy and researching its health hazards.

Eckhardt, in a telephone interview, suggested that it is a conflict of interest for the DOE to be cheerleader and developer of U.S. nuclear technology while it monitors and studies radiation health hazards.

Peter Livassi, general counsel for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, agreed and said he will testify that the public's confidence in government radiation studies would improve if HEW or another independent agency did the studying.

The congressional panel also will explore allegations that the Atomic Energy Commission, the DOE's predecessor, covered up evidence of higher-than-normal levels of plutonium in Utah soil from atomic tests.

Dr. Joseph Lyon, co-director of the Utah Cancer Registry, said he will testify that leukemia deaths among children in southern Utah were 2.5 times higher during the blasts than before or after.

Utah Gov. Scott Matheson will present new evidence that "further supports the notion that they (AEC officials) knew more than they were willing to talk about, that at least some officials in the agency deliberately suppressed information," says his press aide.

The fallout-cancer question was first raised in 1977 by Army veteran Paul Cooper who claimed his leukemia resulted from having witnessed a 1957 blast in Nevada. The Army did not concede the link, but granted him $820-a-month disability pay.

Hydrofoil Service Used Between France, England

LONDON (AP) — A new over-the-sea service from England to France by Boeing Jetfoil is being advertised here as "The Ship that Flies."

And the future of these remarkable craft of the hydrofoil family "has never been more encouraging," says Roy McLeavy the top British writer on the transport that skim the seas.

McLeavy, editor of the annual "Jane's Surface Skimmers," made his forecast as a new British transportation company announced it is fully booked for the inaugural service of its Boeing Jetfoil across the English Channel from Brighton to Dieppe on April 27.

"The Jetfoil is a cross between a ship and a plane, and with its extraordinary stability, we think it offers the best of both," said John Knighton, sales manager of Jet Link Ferries Ltd. (Seajet).

His firm's Jetfoil will travel at nearly 50 miles an hour, carrying 280 passengers across 82 miles of channel between Brighton on the English south coast and the French port of Dieppe in about 100 minutes.

"For a surcharge, 24 of the passengers will travel first-class in the captain's cabin," Knight said. "They will be served free champagne and canapes. The others will have coffee, tea or soft drinks."

Hydrofoils move on their hulls at slow speed and on extendable fore and aft foils at high speed. When acceleration is wanted, a system of water jets operates, lifting the hull above the surface, so that the craft seems to stand on its foils. The foils remain partly submerged, skimming through the water.

Jet Link Ferries plans to operate its Jetfoil on three round trips a day, "every day except Christmas," and offers customers a London-to-Paris round-trip ticket for the equivalent of $90. They will take a bus for the 50-mile road trip to Brighton, Jetfoil to Dieppe across the English Channel, and by the company's chartered train for the 126 miles from Dieppe to Paris.

A one-way ticket for the Channel crossing alone is about $32, which is costlier than the slower steamer ferries but cheaper than flying.

The company, newly established and backed by a group of financiers, is so confident of doing good business that it has an option on a second Jetfoil.

Most of the Jetfoil passenger craft now in service around the world are Boeing 929-115 models, manufactured by Boeing Marine Systems, a separate operating division of the Boeing Co. of Seattle.

Two other British customers for Boeing Jetfoils are the Royal Navy and the 142-year-old shipping line, Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co., known as the P&O line.

The navy's Jetfoil, due for launch in July and delivery in October, is a modified 929-115 of 117 tons, with the top passenger deck removed and able to carry light weapons.

A Navy spokesman said: "We want to evaluate this craft in a number of offshore roles, such as fishery protection duties and observation of North Sea oil rigs. We opted for the Jetfoil because it is the only hydrofoil of the right size, the right cost and the right delivery date."

"The advantage of hydrofoils," the officer said, "is that they can tootle around on their hulls when nothing much is happening and accelerate to a great rate of foilborne-knots when there's a panic on. They are a fascinating development to conventional ships and we might be able to use them in large numbers."

SHIP THAT FLIES — The Boeing jetfoil is called "The Ship that Flies" in advertisements in London. Here the Normandy Princess takes a run in Puget Sound. The jetfoil travels nearly 50 miles an hour and carries 280 passengers. (AP Laserphoto)

'The Evictors' Labeled Supernatural Sleeper

"The Evictors." Screenplay by Gary Rusoff, Paul Fisk and Charles B. Pierce. Music by Jaime Mendoza-Nava. Photographed by Chuck Bryant. Art director: John Ball. Produced and directed by Charles B. Pierce. Stars Michael Parks, Jessica Harper and Vic Morrow. Rated R. At Showplace Six.

By WILLIAM D. KERNS

A-J FILM REVIEW

A Charles B. Pierce film is generally solid proof that no one ever went broke underestimating the intelligence of the American public. An independent filmmaker, he usually manages to find at least one talented actor willing to sell out for a paycheck, then slips him into an idiotic picture (usually based on a "true story"), gets AIP to distribute it and makes a fortune in the rural and drive-in markets. But with his latest film, "The Evictors," Pierce has surpassed himself. He has made his sloppiest motion picture, a real laugher, and is trying to draw big crowds by intimating something supernatural.

Indeed, "The Evictors" was designed for the cretins who haven't even discovered television, much less motion pictures. At the very least, theater management ought to supply pillows and offer a pleasant "good night" to everyone purchasing tickets.

The stars with a price number three in this film: Michael Parks, a talented actor doing his best to throw his career down the drain with films like this and "Sidewinder One;" Jessica Harper, so good as the vocalist in "Phantom Of The Paradise" and now following in Parks' footsteps with pictures like this and "Suspiria;" and Vic Morrow, whose role as the opposing coach in "The Bad News Bears" was his last decent part. Parks and Miss Harper are introduced as a married couple who buy an old frame house from realtor Morrow in a small Louisiana town in the early '40s.

Morrow, however, fails to inform them of the home's history.

It seems no one owning the house has managed to stay alive very long and, though Pierce wants us to think the killer is some sort of mysterious bogeyman like Michael in "Halloween," the film's initial 1928 shootout with police telegraphs the ending. We know the real identity of the neighborly widow played by Sue Ann Langdon and, by the time we see her locking doors in her own house, we've also figured out the identity of the killer. All that's left is for Pierce to throw in a motive out of some old Rod Serling television episode.

The three principals admittedly try their hardest with horrible material, but the remainder of the cast looks like it had been cast in a shopping center parking lot. For some bizarre reason, Pierce is of the mistaken opinion he can turn his picture into a period piece simply by filming his flashbacks in sepiatone, and poor cinematographer Chuck Bryant will probably take the blame. But the final destructive blow is Pierce calling his audience stupid.

Take one of the final confrontations, for example. A stranger tries to get into the house and Miss Harper fires her pistol repeatedly at him through doors and windows. Then Parks drives up and the stranger fades into the shadows, allowing Parks to enter the house and take the bullet meant for him. But here is what Pierce expects us to accept: (1) that Miss Harper cannot hear the sound of a 1942 automobile being driven up to her doorstep in the dead of night; (2) that Parks would walk up to the house and see nothing strange in the windows being shot out and the door being splintered by bullets; (3) that he would walk into this darkened house without calling out or turning on lights; and (4) that the killer later assaulting Miss Harper on the second floor could not hear (through an open door, no less) the sound of Parks clumping his wounded body heavily up the stairs.

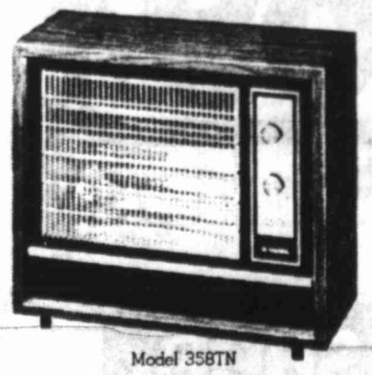

I won't even go into the inane scene in which Morrow wears the same glasses for 20 years, or the one in which the killer enters a barn and somehow manages to lock the barn door from the outside.

The list could go on, but the fact remains that "The Evictors" solemnly tries to show us a house in which no one can live and ends up with a theater in which no one can stay awake. The only surprise offered is Pierce surpassing his previous achievements at insulting audiences. This is the worst film of his career, and undoubtedly the worst film in town.

My advice would be for you to stay home and pull weeds until Showplace serves an eviction notice to this movie. I guarantee you'll have more fun.

Notice

Have you purchased one of these Markel portable electric heaters since September 10, 1978?

Model 358TN

The manufacturer has determined that some of these portable electric heaters may contain a potential shock hazard.

If the first four numbers on the stamp on the bottom of the heater are between 37-78 and 48-78, follow these instructions:

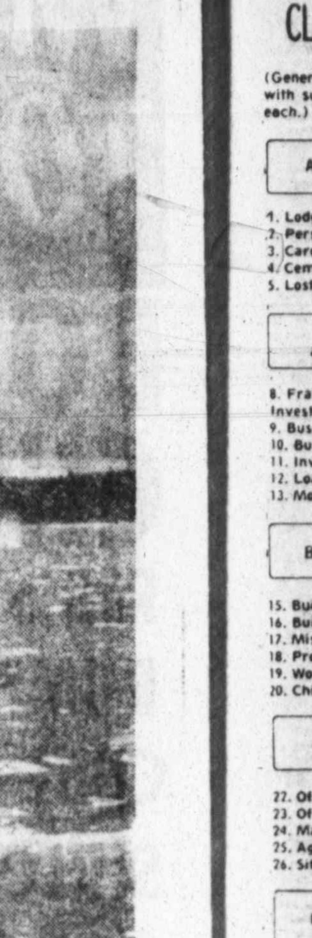

1. Disconnect heater and take out of service.
2. Return heater to the dealer you purchased the heater from and exchange it for a corrected heater.

Although most of these model 358TN heaters have been recovered, our records indicate there are still some heaters unaccounted for in this area.

CHEVY CITATION

Citation goes a long way on a tank of gas. But that's just the start. Citation has the traction of front wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, front disc brakes, and a transverse mounted engine that's cradled in rubber cushioned mountings to reduce engine vibration. Sleek Citation is easy to park, yet big enough for five adults and lots of cargo. See Chevy Citation for yourself. And to really appreciate it, get behind the wheel!

EPA ESTIMATED MPG — CITY ESTIMATE 24 — 38 HIGHWAY ESTIMATE
With standard 4-cylinder engine and manual transmission.

Remember: Compare the estimated MPG to the "estimated MPG" of other cars. You may get different mileage depending on your speed, trip length, and weather. Your actual mileage will be lower in heavy city traffic, and your actual highway mileage will probably be less than the estimated highway fuel economy. the "estimated MPG" is more likely to reflect actual overall mileage than the "combined estimate".

Chevrolet cars are equipped with GM built engines produced by various divisions.

TEST DRIVE THE ALL NEW CHEVY CITATION.

DATSUN 200-SX. RUNS ON REGULAR.
THAT'S SX-APPEAL YOU CAN BANK ON.

Here's a sporty car that'll zip along the highway without sapping you at the gas pump. Datsun 200-SX. The frisky but thrifty Datsun 200-SX with standard 5-speed transmission has an EPA estimate of 21 mpg on REGULAR GAS* Now how's that for combining high mileage with high styling?
STANDARD EQUIPMENT: ●Steel-belted WSW radials ●Power-assist front disc brakes ●Tachometer ●AM/FM stereo radio ●Full instrumentation including seats ●Tinted glass all windows ●Electric remote-control bucket er's door mirror ●Cut-pile carpeting ●And many more features all at no extra cost.
*Remember. Compare these estimates to the "estimated mpg" of other cars. You may get different mileage, depending on how fast you drive, weather conditions and trip length. Also remember that your actual mileage will probably be less than the EPA estimated highway figure.

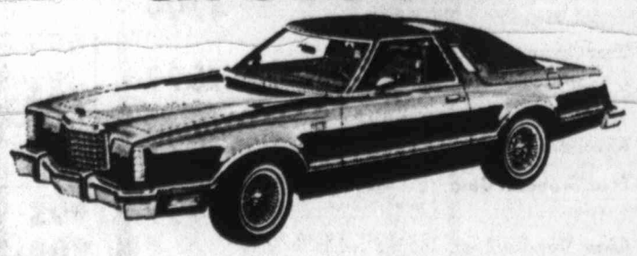

PUT YOUR MONEY IN THE BANK, NOT IN THE TANK.

Two Senate Panel Decisions Reject Talmadge Requests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee rejected two motions by Herman Talmadge that could have made it more difficult for the panel to conclude that the senator's financial conduct violated Senate rules.

The committee announced Wednesday it had rejected a motion by Talmadge's attorneys, who wanted to exclude all evidence taken from the senator's office files without his permission. But the committee said it would consider later motions by the attorneys to exclude evidence as it is introduced.

The committee also said it turned down a motion that would have required the panel to use the strong "beyond a reasonable doubt" standard of proof of criminal trials instead of the weaker "clear and convincing evidence" standard of civil proceedings.

The six-member committee gave no reasons for its rulings on the two motions, which had been publicly argued before it last week. It also gave no details of the vote on the motions.

Rejection of the two motions — the most significant of five filed by attorneys for Talmadge — ended the procedural stage of the proceedings against Talmadge, a Georgia Democrat. The trial portion of the proceeding is scheduled to start Monday.

James Hamilton, an attorney for Talmadge, had argued before the committee last week that it should exclude evidence taken from Talmadge's office by Daniel J. Minchew, the senator's former administrative assistant and now his chief accuser.

Hamilton also argued that the committee should adopt the "beyond a reasonable doubt" standard of proof used in criminal trials instead of using the standard of civil trials, which requires only that guilt be determined by "clear and convincing evidence."

Hamilton claimed the evidence, which includes memoranda and notes which Minchew had acknowledged taking with him when he left Talmadge's office, was taken without the senator's permission. To allow use of the evidence "would condone rummaging through senator's files and would disrupt the Senate's business," Hamilton had argued.

And the attorney noted that in the last similar case before the Senate, evidence taken from the files of Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., was excluded from consideration by the ethics panel.

It is not known what data the committee plans to offer as evidence from Minchew's files. The key question in the dispute between Talmadge and his former administrative assistant is whether the senator ordered Minchew to set up a secret bank account.

Minchew reportedly has alleged that he set up the account in 1973 on Talmadge's instructions and that he funneled about $13,000 in improperly obtained Senate expense funds and about $26,000 in campaign contributions through the account for Talmadge's personal benefit.

Talmadge has denied knowledge of the fund and contends that Minchew set up the fund and diverted money into it without his knowledge.

As for the standard of proof motion filed by Talmadge, the committee said only that it had determined the "clear and convincing evidence" standard was appropriate "for weighing all the evidence which is introduced in the forthcoming hearings."

The committee has accused Talmadge of converting campaign contributions to his own use, of submitting incorrect expense vouchers, of filing false reports of receipts and expenditures with the Senate, of failing to properly report gifts and property owned, and of incorrectly reporting taxes on gifts to his former wife.

The upcoming hearing is to determine whether Talmadge did, in fact, do what the allegations state. If the committee finds he violated Senate rules by his actions, it can recommend that the Senate censure him, expel him from membership or take no action against him.

Investigator Loses Fight On Summons

AUSTIN (AP) — El Paso private investigator Jay J. Armes lost a court fight Wednesday against testifying before a San Diego, Calif., grand jury.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals said it was the first time someone had challenged what another state must prove to compel a Texas resident to testify in an out-of-state criminal proceeding.

On May 31, 1978, an El Paso district court granted the state of California's petition to summon Armes as a grand jury witness.

"Armes had been hired by a San Diego citizens' committee to investigate the murder now being investigated by the grand jury," the appeals court said.

An affidavit from the San Diego district attorney said that after investigating the California murder, Armes "made representations that he knew who the murderer was," the court added.

A Texas court can order a resident to appear in another state only if it determines that the witness is necessary to the criminal proceeding; will not be caused undue hardship; and is protected from arrest in the other state and all other states he or she must travel through.

Texas has a reciprocal agreement with most other states.

Armes claimed he was not a necessary witness and that he would be subject to hardship because his doctor had placed him on a special diet.

"We hold that the certificate from the requesting state setting out that the witness is material and necessary is sufficient to support the (El Paso) trial court's finding of fact," the appeals court said.

"The testimony of the doctor was somewhat equivocal and failed to elaborate on why the foods necessary would not be available in California," the court added.

State Appeals Court Says Dope Link Insufficient

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday reversed the marijuana possession conviction of a man who was arrested in connection with a 1976 seizure of 572 pounds of marijuana at a Temple airport.

A Belton jury convited Thomas Gardner Waldon on a felony marijuana possession charge and sentenced him to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections. Waldon also was fined $5,000.

The appeals court earlier reversed the marijuana possession conviction of Dan Wilkes, who also was arrested during the seizure.

Acting on information from an informant, Department of Public Safety narcotics officers arrested Waldon April 29, 1976, after stopping a pickup carrying the marijuana.

Agents had observed "movement of more than one unidentifable person as if something was being carried" from an airplane to the waiting pickup.

Narcotics officers took a key from Waldon which opened a cargo door on the aircraft. A search of the craft revealed a small amount of "marijuana sweepings."

But in reversing the conviction and ordering Waldon acquitted on the charge, the appeals court ruled that the evidence "does not directly link the appelant to the contraband."

"It (the evidence) ties the appellant into the plane in question, but not specifically at the time in question," the court said.

"The police first observed appellant in the terminal building sitting by himself," the court said. "He was next observed as a passenger in the Blazer."

Although the court said "there are highly suspicious facts here," it concluded that "the state has failed to prove the requisite affirmitive link between the contraband in question and the appellant."

Ruling that the double jeopardy clause of the U.S. Constitution "precludes a second trial once the reviewing court has found the evidence legally insufficient," the court barred further prosecution of Waldon on the charge.

REGIONAL ROUNDUP

Lubbockite To Head Bank In Lockney

A-J Correspondent

LOCKNEY — Carroll Anderson, who has been associated with Plains National Bank in Lubbock since 1965, recently was elected president of First National Bank of Lockney.

Anderson, 31, was chosen to succeed the late Gene Collins Jr. who died March 20 after serving as president for more than 17 years.

Joe Kirk Fulton of Lubbock, chairman of the board of directors of the bank, made the announcement of Anderson's election and also revealed that a new position, executive vice president, had been created and that George Sparkman had been promoted to that post.

Sparkman joined First National Bank of Lockney in 1967. He was elected to the board of directors 11 years ago.

In addition to being chosen as president, Anderson was appointed to serve the remainder of Collins's term on the board of directors. Other directors are Fulton, J. E. Waller, T.J. Wallace and Sparkman.

Rosie Grier To Speak At Howard

BIG SPRING — Roosevelt "Rosie" Grier, former All-Pro football player turned actor, will deliver the main commencement speech at Howard College here May 10, college president Charles Hays announced Wednesday.

Grier became interested in film work after being traded from the New York Giants to the Los Angeles Rams during his National Football League career. His TV credits include major roles in "Daniel Boone" and "Make Room For Daddy." On the big screen, he has appeared in films including "Skyjacked," "Mr. Carter's Army," and the chiller "In Cold Blood."

A close friend of the Kennedy family, Grier is remembered as the man who grabbed and retained Sirhan Sirhan after Sirhan assassinated Robert Kennedy in Los Angeles in 1968.

The subject of his address will be, "People can do what they want to do."

Commencement exercises will be held in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum on the Howard College campus. The public is invited to the 7:30 p.m. program.

Cottle-King Festivities To Start Friday

A-J Correspondent

PADUCAH — The 37th annual Cottle-King Horse Show, Rodeo, Old Settlers' Reunion, western dance and parade will begin with registration for the reunion at 9 a.m. Friday in the Veterans Memorial Building.

At the awards and music program at 10:30 a.m. Friday, recognition will be given to those who have lived the longest in Cottle and King counties, the oldest person present and the individual who traveled the greatest distance to attend.

U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower is scheduled to ride in the traditional parade, Friday, along with floats, Paducah High School marching band, riding clubs and Rodeo Queen Jeanna Tippen.

The parade will begin at 4 p.m. this year, an hour earlier than in years past, because show officials said it would allow participants more time to make it to the chuckwagon barbecue supper at 6 p.m. in the old Dance Barn at the rodeo grounds.

"Mother Goose and Fantasy Land" is the theme of the parade. Prizes of $75, $50 and $25 will be given for first, second and third places in the two parade categories of civic clubs and youth groups.

Judging of halter classes will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday in the Livestock Show Barn and Arena. Performance classes will be judged at 1 p.m. by Jack Rydberg of Wiley, Colo. Awards and ribbons through six places will go to all classes, and special awards will go to the grand and reserve champions.

The Old Timers' Roping contest will be at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, also in the arena.

The rodeo, produced by "Runt" Sloan, will begin at 8 p.m. both Friday and Saturday. At 9 p.m. each night Gary Dean and his Western Sound band from Hammond, Okla., will provide music for dancing in the veterans building.

Additional rodeo events will be held at 1 p.m. Sunday in the arena.

Construction Gift Given Lockney Hospital

A-J CORRESPONDENT

LOCKNEY — H.E. Frizzell, chairman of the board of Lockney General Hospital District and D.M. Cogdell Jr., chairman of the board of Martha Ann Cogdell Hospital Trust, have announced the gift of $150,000 by the Cogdell Trust to the district.

The funds are to be used to expand the clinic facilities of the hospital. Size of the planned clinic addition is 4118 square feet. Plans call for the new structure to be added to the north and west of the present clinic building.

Members of the advisory board of the Cogdell Hospital Trust are Mr. and Mrs. D.M. Cogdell Jr. of Floyd County, Mr. and Mrs. Billy Cogdell and Mrs. E.A. Birdwell of Briscoe County.

Gayle Fortenberry, hospital administrator, says that an application for certificate of need is now in Austin for approval by the Texas Health Systems Agency in Lubbock.

The state commission bases its approval on recommendations by the area health systems agency. Approval is expected by April 27 and construction will begin as soon as possible. Estimated completion time is six months.

The new facilities will make it possible to bring two more doctors into the Lockney clinic, according to Frizzell.

One of the new doctors will be Dr. Gary Mangold, who is scheduled to begin practicing here July 1. The new medical doctor is a son of Lockney General Hospital Chief of Staff Dr. and Mrs. W.J. Mangold. The younger Mangold will complete his three-year residency in family practice at John Petersmith Hospital in Fort Worth the last of June.

Furr's Cafeterias Earnings Rise

Increases in sales and earnings of Furr's Cafeterias Inc. have been announced by Don G. Furr, chairman and chief executive officer of the company.

Sales during the first quarter of 1979 were $21.8 million, an increase of 17.6 percent over sales during the same quarter of 1978. Earnings during the quarter were $844,000, or 35 cents per share, up 60.2 percent over earnings in the first quarter 1978 of $527,000 or 22 cents per share.

"Management is pleased with the improved results in the first quarter, particularly in light of the weather problems that plagued us all three months," Furr said. "The maturity of new units opened in 1978, increased customer traffic and a higher average sale per customer accounted for the increases in sales," he added.

The company's wholly-owned subsidiary, Bill Kelley Athletic Inc., had sales of $404,000 as compared to $462,000 in the first quarter of 1978, a decrease of 12.6 percent. Although shipped sales are below 1978, due in part to the trucking industry contract dispute, orders are about the same as this time last year. Bill Kelley produced a pre-consolidated loss of $23,000 before income tax in the first quarter of 1979 compared to a profit of $10,000 in the same period of 1978.

Shortage Of Transportation Has Far-Reaching Effects

By RODERICK TURNBULL
Kansas City Board of Trade

KANSAS CITY — One of the biggest problems of the nation's transportation shortage is that is provides so many different troubles for so many different entities.

This certainly is true for the grain business.

Put another way, the transportation shortage, usually expressed as a lack of cars, seems to affect everybody in the grain business, but in different ways. You can learn this by listening in on casual conversations within the Kansas City Board of Trade.

And probably no subject currently is being discussed more. Many Kansas City grainmen contend the car shortage this last winter has been the worst ever. Admittedly, some said the same thing last winter.

It should be recognized that a large part of this nation has experienced two of the worst winters on record which with frigid temperatures and heavy snows have played havoc with normal operations of transportation systems, rail and river. Bad weather, therefore, has exacerbated the car and engine shortage. But within the trade, the worry isn't entirely over the current situation. Grain merchandisers fear what may be ahead, if the car shortage isn't solved. The casual conversations aren't official statements, they cover rumors as well as facts and obviously tend to stress each man's personal difficulties.

Take the operators of country elevators. They seem to be worrying most of all probably because they have had such a tough time all winter getting one car or a few cars to move out grain. They point to the big exporters who, in contrast, get whole trains to move grain to the Gulf or the West Coast.

They're hearing that the railroads find the big trains the most efficient way to move grains and are the most profitable to the carriers. They're also hearing that the railroads see the day when grain must be concentrated in centralized or "gathering points" for shipping. The little country elevator would be bypassed and would serve to only hold grain until it could be hauled by truck to the bigger central elevator.

The small elevator operators wonder if they could exist under such a situation. And where would they get all the trucks to haul the grain to the central elevator?

If they could get the trucks, where, with the nation facing a fuel shortage, would all the gasoline come from? The little country elevator often is the major business in the smaller communities over the Plains states. If it closes down, what happens to other business in the little town?

Some of the elevator operators see the railroads closing branch lines and this also presents a problem even when the truck takes over. Take grain moving by truck from North Missouri or Central Kansas into Kansas City. When grain reaches Kansas City by rail, it nearly always carries a transit rate to the Gulf.

This means the wheat from Salina, Kans., as an example, with a transit rate can be moved from Salina to Kansas City and then later to the Gulf by rail cheaper than it can be moved to Kansas City by truck and then later shipped by rail to the Gulf. The average transit rate for grain to the Gulf from Kansas City is 33 cents a bushel, but the flat rate–that is the rate for grain originating in Kansas City–is 60.5 cents a bushel.

A truck may haul grain to Kansas City at a rate less than the rail charge, but not as much less as is offered in the rail transit rates, the country elevator men say. So, they contend logically, they have to buy the wheat cheaper from the farmer when they ship by truck than if they could ship by rail. But what can you do, if the railroad ceases to operate the line to the elevator?

The solution? These elevator operators see only one answer and that is to eliminate transit privileges.

Some small firms at the Kansas City Board of Trade specialize in handling off-grade grains. They can find a market for anything at some price. The general practice has been for a car of such grain to arrive in Kansas City consigned to them. They say they can get the best price available because there always is some buyer who could make good use of it, while others wouldn't want it at all.

But when a farmer sends in such grain by truck, it is delivered to an elevator of his choice. If the elevator doesn't want that quality of grain, the trucker or farmer has to start shopping around. Finding a buyer may be more than it is worth.

Flour millers and bakers during the winter, as one authority expressed it, "absorbed stunning costs of "ridiculous' transportation ventures."

Farm Conservationist Honored

Bill Piercy, who utilizes a vast system of underground pipelines and parallel terraces on his farming operations, was honored as outstanding conservation farmer last week at the Lubbock County Soil and Water Conservation District awards banquet.

About 50 people attended the ceremonies at K-Bob's Steak House to honor Lubbock County agriculturists who promote methods of conservation for soil and water.

John Griffith of Taylor was chosen outstanding absentee farmer for Lubbock County. Terry Stark, agricultural advisor to Sen. John Tower, was selected outstanding professional assisting with soil and water conservation. Agriculture broadcaster Harley Malone of KLBK-TV was honored with the outstanding information award for his programs on conservation.

Wayne Wyatt, manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District spoke to the group and presented a film on irrigation water management.

Soviet Union Buys China-Bound Grain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has bought an additional 118,374 metric tons of U.S. wheat initially destined for China, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

No reason was provided for the switch, which was reported to the department by private exporters who handle foreign grain sales.

One source, who asked not to be identified, speculated that China may have canceled the order because of price or possibly some problems in delivery schedules.

China last month canceled an order for 300,000 metric tons of U.S. wheat. Officials said at the time that China may have had problems with grain storage or supply.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A U. S. COTTON TRADE TEAM has recommended that Cotton Council International's cooperative promotion activities on behalf of American cotton in the Far East be continued and expanded.

The team reported that activities currently being conducted by CCI and the International Institute for Cotton are helping cooperators in Japan, Korea, Taiwan, and Hong Kong sell more cotton textile products.

Far East cooperators are prepared to increase their contributions toward these programs if CCI and ICC can expand theirs, the team reported.

THE TRADE TEAM, SPONSORED BY CCI in collaboration with the Foreign Agricultural Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, was headed by John E. Lawrence Sr. of Boston, representing the American Cotton Shippers Association.

Members included Tom Akers Jr. of Bakersfield, Calif., AMCOT; Peter Hirschfeld of Dallas, ACSA; Stanley Willis of Arvin, Calif., National Cotton Council's Producer Steering Committee; Carl Campbell of CCI; and Joseph Stevenson of FAS.

The team confirmed that U. S. cotton could maintain and improve its market positions in these countries if it remains competitive in price, quality and availability.

Lawrence said, however, that satisfactory cotton credit must be provided to Korea to assure U. S. cotton's predominant position in that market.

SPINNING INDUSTRIES IN THE VISITED countries are operating at reasonable levels and cotton consumption is holding up, Lawrence added.

As of April 1, total export commitments to these four countries amounted to 3,737,300 running bales. By country, commitments are: Japan, 1,392,300 bales; Korea, 1,334,500; Taiwan, 513,700; and Hong Kong, 496,800.

Based on their two-week visit, team members recommended that industry organizations continue to bring foreign textile representatives to this country to see how cotton is bred, grown, harvested, ginned and handled.

They also advocated future overseas visits by cotton trade teams, continued sponsorship of the Maid of Cotton tour to promote cotton in key import market countries, and maximum use of CCI's new Hong Kong office to further strengthen relationships between the U. S. cotton industry and Far East markets.

Plan Before Planting Or Eat Consequences

JERICHO, Vt. (UPI) — There were tomatoes on every kitchen counter. Tomatoes in pans on the floor, tomatoes in the refrigerator. Tomatoes in the kitchen sink. Rotting tomatoes in the compost pile. Ripening tomatoes on the window sill.

And out there in my garden, 40 tomato plants were still churning out disgustingly healthy, usable fruit.

"Canned tomatoes taste mushy," said my husband, turning up his nose.

Gardening lesson Number 1: Start small.

The year of the tomato was 1971 in Black Earth, Wisc. It was my first year as a gardener. In the spring, gardening friends warned darkly of drought, horn worms, blossom end rot and early frosts.

So, since most plants would die, I bought 40 plants, stuck them in the newly plowed garden, piled hay around them so I wouldn't have to weed, and left them to themselves.

The result, despite a very dry August, was the nightmarish cornucopia that left us guiltstricken about the tomatoes we couldn't eat or give away.

Gardening lesson Number 2: Plants want to grow.

In most cases, given mulch and a little fertilizer, plants will produce if the gardener doesn't actually jump up and down on them.

In the years since 1971, not all my gardens have succeeded. One year deer ate all the peas. Another year the eggplant refused to produce.

But every year the biggest problem was what to do with the eight heads of cauliflower that all ripened the same week.

A garden of 10 feet by 10 feet is a good way to begin, says Larry Myott, county agricultural agent in Burlington. Myott suggests starting with four tomato plants, short rows of onion, beets and carrots, two cucumber hills and a few peppers.

A single tomato plant, he says, can produce up to 50 pounds of tomatoes.

A word about corn. Roasted on the cob it is terrific, but it takes up a lot room and attracts raccoons. Save corn until you are sure you like gardening.

Only plant what you know your family likes. The picture of Swiss chard on the seed packet may be inviting, but if your family hates Swiss chard, you are going to end up throwing most of it away.

Also, don't feel compelled to plant all the seeds in the package. Split with a neighbor. If you plant 10 lettuce seeds to the inch, you are going to have to thin later, and nothing hurts worse than pulling up a healthy plant.

Remember that gardening has swept the country like gourmet cooking and there are a skyrocketing number of fancy how-to-do-it books with pretty covers. You can, for example, now buy an entire book on growing lettuce.

Such books convince the beginner that growing lettuce is so esoteric and risky he'd better give up his plans for a five-foot row of black-seeded simpson.

Instead, try common sense. Plants, like all living things, need food, light and water. They have a hard time growing under good-sized rocks.

Pick a spot without too much shade. It shouldn't be as wet as a swamp or as dry and sandy as a beach. Either plan to mulch (protecting the soil around plants to hold moisture in the ground) or put the garden where a hose can reach.

Commercial fertilizer sold by gardening stores or well-rotted manure or compost provide the nutrients.

Having mastered those basics, last fall we plowed our new garden in the foothills of the Green Mountains. It has spent the winter under a thick covering of rotted horse manure.

We mapped out the garden on paper to make best use of the 50-by-15 feet space. One row of carrots, one row of beets, a few eggplants and peppers.

And only 30 tomato plants.

Bantam Association Sets Annual Show

Bantams and standard chickens will compete for trophies and prizes Saturday at the South Plains Bantam Association's annual spring show.

Judging will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the Panhandle South Plains Fairgrounds. Troy Jones of Fort Worth will place the birds. Classes have been set for both junior and senior exhibitors.

According to Norris Sellers, SPBA president, many of the birds entered in the Lubbock show have won championships in several top shows across the state earlier in the year.

The public is invited and admission is free.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain futures declined Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade and soybean futures were mixed.

Profit-taking trimmed wheat futures after prices had increased Tuesday. Corn prices fell on predictions of improved planting weather in parts of the Corn Belt.

Soybean futures were slightly higher in distant trading months, but nearby contracts tumbled sharply, partly on profit-taking after price gains of Tuesday. Ideas of any near-term shortage of soybeans faded.

At the close, soybeans were ½ cent higher to 13 cents lower, with May quoted at $7.27; wheat was 2 to 2½ cents lower, May $3.39¾; corn was ¾ to 1¾ cents lower, May $2.54¼; and oats were ½ to 2 cents lower, May $1.42¼.

Stocks Rally By 2-1 Ratio

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market chalked up its first gain in a week Wednesday as fears of new upward pressure on interest rates continued to abate. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off almost 21 points in the past four trading days, recovered 2.34 to 860.27.

Advances outnumbered declines by close to a 2-1 spread in the daily tally on the New York Stock Exchange.

Several individual stocks gained ground on favorable earnings news. American Motors, for example, picked up ⅜ to 8⅛ as the company listed quarterly profits of $1.06 a share against 9 cents in the like period a year ago.

At the end of last year, AMC shares stood at 4¾.

CBS, which said it expected record earnings this year despite a decline in the first quarter, gained 1⅞ to 45⅞.

Chase Manhattan, which listed a sharp quarterly earnings gain late Tuesday, added ¾ to 35⅛.

And Mary Kay Cosmetics picked up 1 to 13¼. The company reported first-quarter profits of 42 cents a share, up from 15 cents in the first three months of 1978.

American Telephone Telegraph, however, slipped ⅛ to 61⅛ despite postin record rsults for the first calendar quarter.ChairmanCharles L. Brown told the annual meeting that "earnings improvement will be harder to come by" this year.

Optimism

IT WAS TIME for a change, about a month ago; now, it's status quo.

And Rex Dockery wasn't making rhymes or talking about politics, either.

Instead, it was almost like vacation time Wednesday. First, Dockery had finished spring training and the daily challenges of praparing workout schedules, presiding at staff meetings, hollering at his troops, and getting home late for supper.

Then, he had Tuesday night's all-sports banquet speech out of the way.

Now, Wednesday, all Tech's head football man had to do was personally interview every one of his Raiders, catch up on phone messages which might have collected over the past few days and then he could put his feet up the desk for a spell.

Coming off a spring training period that could be rated successful, Dockery found the sun breaking through the clouds even with gray skies dominating outside.

There would be no organized football drills until August, but already, Dockery had the dates memorized, and as he talked about the spring, there was some indication of a connection between now and the future.

• • •

ONE OF THE major factors of the spring period was the shifting of several Raiders to new positions. Some of Dockery's changes over the past year are well documented; some from this spring could rate well up the ladder, too.

But, right now, the changes are solid.

"We've looked over the spring," Dockery commented Wednesday, "and we're not ready to change anyone back, now. We feel pretty good about them.

"That doesn't mean we're definitely set. We have a four-day period before start of (varsity) two-a-days when our freshmen will be in and we can evaluate them. If certain areas look like they need strength, then we might change some (upperclassmen), but not now."

The four-day period with the frosh is something the NCAA is trying this year for the first time. It's a no-pads period, but, to Dockery, it's a good move: "I'd (be willing to) take four days off the spring (training) if it came to it. But, this is a good idea.

"It gives the first-year players a chance to get adjusted to school, and to learn a little of what we want to do, before the upperclassmen arrive."

This year, the frosh orientation will begin Aug. 13, and the varsity will report in on Aug. 17. Three days later, pad work will begin.

• • •

BUT, CONCERNING THE spring, Dockery observed that "We made a lot of strides. Lots of players tryed to get better. . . we had a good attitude. . .everyone was very team-oriented.

"The wide receivers got better; at tight end, we got better. L.M. Cummings gave (starter Mark) Harrelson a lot of competition. And, with Kevin Kolbye, we have three good tight ends.

"Running back was a concern (before the spring). After (starter Mark) Olbert, I don't know. Mark Johnson will probably be No. 2 for the fall, but he was hurt a good bit this spring and didn't have a chance to play much.

"But, the receivers, who improved, have to continue to get better."

• • •

ONE OF THE objectives before spring training was to develop depth at several — if not all — spots. In this, Dockery was pleased.

At noseguard, by moving Jeff McKinney from linebacker, Dockery said the Raiders have two good prospects, with Hans Bischof. "Both have excellent quickness. Neither has the size of Curtis Reed (last year's starter), but we can alternate them and still have that quickness in there in the fourth quarter.

"Johnny Quinney (moved from the secondary to linebacker) showed some things, and Jamie Giles looked better at tackle than noseman, when we moved him out."

On the other side of the line, "The depth in the offensive line looks good.

"The way (Jim) Wosoba came on, it improves our line depth. He is playing behind Joe Walstad at center, but the way Wosoba played, then we could move Joe back to strong guard if we needed.

"Wosoba, Mark Gesch, Denny Harris and George Smitherman (who moved to strong gaurd when Walstad stepped over to center) really improved, which makes our line a lot stronger.

"But, looking it overall, we got a lot accomplshed this spring. We liked the setup of starting earlier, having the (spring) break in the middle and then coming back.

"I can think of only one day when we didn't improve. Out of 20 days, that's good."

76ers Seeking 'Iceman' Solution

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Philadelphia forward Bobby Jones, still weak from a recent bout with the flu, admits he's not exactly comfortable with the idea of another night dogging San Antonio's explosive George Gervin.

But all indications are that Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham, whose 76ers return home Friday trailing the Spurs 2-0 in the best-of-seven playoff series, will continue to use his renowned 6-foot-9 defensive specialist in a desperation attempt to slow the high-scoring Gervin.

The 6-7 Gervin, winner of back-to-back National Basketball Association scoring titles, blistered Jones and a variety of other Philadelphia defenders for 29 points Tuesday night as San Antonio shaded the 76ers 121-120.

Gervin has been able to roam virtually at will with the absence of Philadelphia's injured 6-6 All-Star guard Doug Collins. He got 31 points in 29 minutes over 6-1 Henry Bibby on Sunday when San Antonio won the first game of the Eastern Conference semifinal series, 119-106.

In the two games, "the Iceman" has hit 25 of 37 shots — a 66 percent clip. Meanwhile, forward Larry Kenon, usually guarded by Jones, has collected 57 points in the two games.

Cunningham opened Tuesday night with Jones guarding Gervin. The 76ers sometimes had to use a one-guard offense to accomodate that arrangement. Cunningham also unsuccessfully used Bibby, 6-9 forward Joe Bryant and 6-4 reserve guard Al Skinner on Gervin.

"Gervin came through in the clutch again," Cunningham shrugged helplessly. But he indicated he intends to continue the experiment in the games Friday and Sunday in Philadelphia. "It was just two points away from being successful," he said.

"I'm not really comfortable about doing it," admitted Jones. "For me to guard Ice (Gervin), we'll have to get more action on defense. You have to recover so quickly (on defense) because he can beat you. It takes something out of your offense. It has both its good points and bad points."

"Jones was tougher, but I've got to be ready to work no matter who they put on me," said Gervin.

"You could see George's eyes light up when he knew they were changing their defense just for him," said San Antonio center Billy Paultz.

The victory provided a critical mental boost for the Central Division-champion Spurs, who haven't won a playoff series since 1968 — when they were the Dallas Chaparrals in the now-defunct American Basketball Association. They've lost 10 straight series since then, never winning two consecutive games.

They also had the homecourt advantage last year over Washington, but lost the crucial second game at home and were eliminated in seven games.

"It was the biggest win in the franchise's history," said guard James Silas, the Spurs captain and one of two former Chaparrals remaining. "We're going to win. Their (Philadelphia's) backs are against the wall. I saw fright in their eyes tonight."

"I feel all right going back. We concentrate better at home anyway," said Philadelphia forward Julius Erving. "We can do it at home. We've had our backs to the wall and we've risen before."

Alexander Homers Indians By Rangers

CLEVELAND (AP) — Gary Alexander slammed a three-run homer to give the Cleveland Indians a 6-4 victory over the Texas Rangers.

The victory ended Cleveland's 13-game losing string against the Rangers and was only their third victory against Texas in their last 24 meetings, dating back to July 1977.

Baseball Roundup Page 2

Sid Monge, 1-0, got the victory in relief of rookie Eric Wilkins. They combined to limit Texas to seven hits.

Doc Medich, 0-1, took the loss. Medich, who came on in the fourth inning, left with Texas ahead 4-3 with two out and one on in the seventh. Alexander greeted reliever Sparky Lyle with his first homer of the season.

Alexander had three hits in the game and also was credited with a run batted in when he was walked with the bases loaded in the Indians' three-run third against starter Doyle Alexander.

The Rangers jumped into a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Wilkins walked rookie Bill Sample, gave up a single to Al Oliver and a run-scoring infield out to Buddy Bell.

Texas made it 3-0 in the third on an infield hit by Sample, a triple by Oliver and another infield bouncer by Bell.

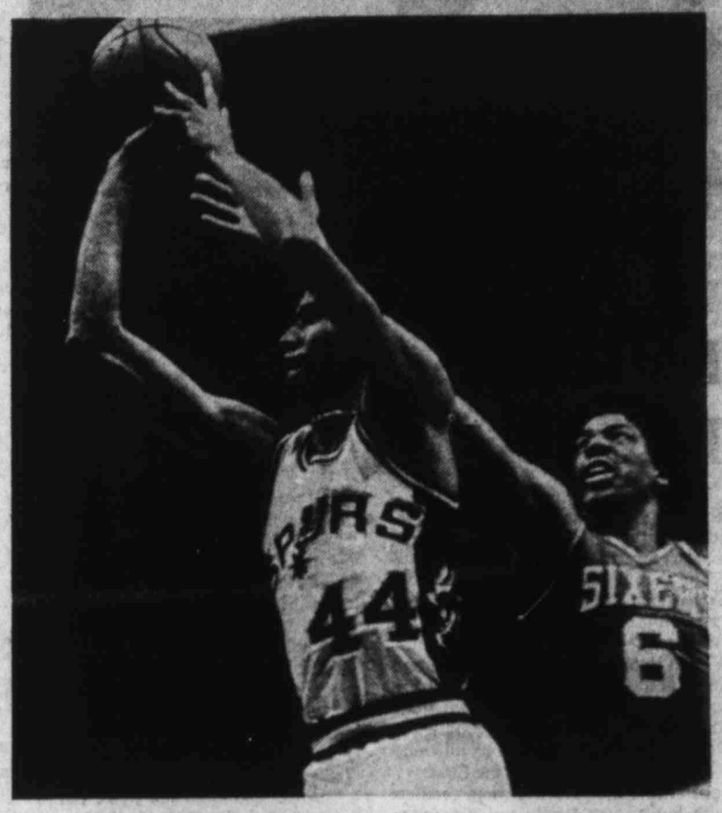

Cleveland, which threatened almost continually in the game, broke the ice in the third. Jim Norris led off with a single and Rick Manning singled him to third. A sacrifice fly by Bobby Bonds brought in the first run and, after Toby Harrah flied out, Alexander walked the next three batters to make it 3-2.

Duane Kuiper then tied the game with an infield hit against reliever Dave Rajsich.

Texas moved into a 4-3 lead in the seventh. Pinch hitter Pat Putnam chased Wilkins with a leadoff double — the Rangers' seventh hit. Monge came on and wild pitched the runner to third before Bump Wills brought him home with a sacrifice fly to left-field.

Monge, who added four strikeouts to the seven recorded by Wilkins, shut Texas out the rest of the way on one hit. Meanwhile, Harrah's leadoff single and a one-out walk to Wayne Cage set up Alexander's heroics in the seventh.

It was the first victory for the Indians against Texas since April 17, 1978.

Cubs Dealt Joker By Cards

By The Associated Press

Tony Scott's second single of the game drove in Keith Hernandez from third base with two outs in the 14th inning Wednesday, lifting the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Hernandez doubled to the center field wall with one out against loser Donnie Moore, 0-1. Ted Simmons was issued an intentional walk and Hernandez advanced to third when Dane Iorg rapped into a force play.

Scott, who had scored the game's tying run in the seventh inning, then lined a single to left field to drive in Hernandez and give the victory to Tom Bruno, 1-0. Darold Knowles retired the final batter in the 14th and earned his first save of the year.

Dave Kingman's run-scoring double in the third inning gave Chicago a 1-0 lead and his RBI single in the fifth made it 2-0 against St. Louis starter Pete Vuckovich.

A's 5, MARINERS 2

Rob Picciolo's tie-breaking bases-loaded single in the bottom of the seventh inning lifted the Oakland A's to a 5-2 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

YANKEES 3, ORIOLES 1

Tommy John scattered eight hits in 7 2/3 innings for his third consecutive victory and Jim Spencer and Reggie Jackson belted tape-measure home runs to lead the New York Yankees over the Baltimore Orioles 3-1 for their fourth straight triumph.

Spencer, who hit a two-run homer to beat Milwaukee in John's first appearance for the Yankees, connected off Dennis Martinez, 0-2, to open the fifth and snap a 1-1 tie. He hit a drive which struck the facade of the third deck in right field.

Jackson unloaded his third home run of the season — all against Baltimore — with two out in the sixth. The ball cleared the fence near the 417-foot mark in almost straightaway center.

BREWERS 4, BOSOX 1

Paul Molitor and Sal Bando hit consecutive home runs in the seventh inning to help right-hander Lary Sorensen and the Milwaukee Brewers to a 4-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Milwaukee got its first run in the sixth when Red Sox starter Steve Renko, 0-1, forced in Molitor with a bases-loaded walk to Sixto Lezcano.

EXPOS 6, METS 5

Ellis Valentine's single scored Andre Dawson from third to cap a two-run ninth-inning rally that gave the Montreal Expos a 6-5 victory over the New York Mets.

Pinch-hitter Jerry White led off the inning against reliever Dale Murray, 0-2, with a double and Dawson walked before Rodney Scott's infield single loaded the bases.

ANGLES 11, TWINS 6

Rod Carew had four hits, drove in two runs and scored three times as California bombed Minnesota 11-6 and won its seventh straight game.

Carew, the longtime Twin who was traded to the Angels in February, had two doubles and two singles plus a walk in five at-bats. He blooped a two-run double to right field in California's five-run second inning and also doubled and scored in the fourth.

CHISOX 12, JAYS 5

Greg Pryor had three hits and drove in three runs to spark the Chicago White Sox to a 12-5 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Richard Wortham, 3-0, went eight innings for Chicago. He allowed seven hits while striking out six and walking just two. Dewey Robinson pitched the ninth in relief.

Dallas 'Hoopsters' Visit Hub For Benefit Contest

Fans attending tonight's exhibition basketball game featuring the Dallas Hoopsters and the Lubbock All-Stars will not need a program to identify the players.

The visiting cagers playing in Lubbock Coliseum at 8 p.m. are standout performers with the NFL Dallas Cowboys — but which ones?

Even Hoopster captain Jay Saldi won't know until today how his team will line up for the contest which is a benefit for St. Mary of the Plains Rehabilitation Center.

Not all the 20 players on the Cowboys' squad make the road trips, and conflicts with business or family activities often trim the list, Saldi said. But, the captain assured that a representative team will be on hand.

"We always put a good team on the court, as shown by our 27-2 record this season," Saldi said.

Wide receiver Tony Hill has been the star of the team, and Saldi indicated that he will be here. Hill scored 41 points last week against a West Texas State team.

Fullback Scott Laidlaw will be here, along with wide receivers Drew Pearson and Butch Johnson, quarterback Danny White and guard Tom Rafferty.

On the Lubbock All-Stars team will be Raider seniors Geoff Huston, Tommy Parks and Joe Baxter, ex-Techsan Grady Newton, and several city high school coaches.

Tickets for the game are $5 and will be on sale today at Hemphill-Wells, Furr's Family Center, Bee & Bee Records, and at the coliseum tonight.

Watson Heads Champions Golf

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP)— Although Masters champ Fuzzy Zoeller is the most recent winner, Tom Watson brings the gaudiest current credentials into the $300,000 Tournament of Champions that begins today.

Watson, pro golf's Player of the Year for the past two seasons, has finished second, first and second in his last three starts, the latter a playoff loss to Zoeller in the Masters. Watson, as is becoming customary, is the year's leading money-winner with more than $175,000.

"I'm striking the ball well, I'm pleased with the way I'm playing," he said after a practice round over the 7,889 yard, par 72 La Costa Country Club course, "but my putting is atrocious. It's just awful.

"If I'd putted just average, I could have won (the Masters) last week. But what's past is past. You can't dwell on it. You have to go on.

"That's behind me now. Now I'm looking forward to this week's tournament."

He comes in as a mild favorite in the elite, 28-man field of winners from the last 12 months that will be chasing a $54,000 first prize.

With the withdrawal of John Mahaffey, the PGA and World Cup champion and winner of two other titles, Watson is one of nine multiple winners from the qualifying period.

Mahaffey, who opened the 1979 season with a victory in the Bob Hope Desert Classic, has been out of action for almost three months with a damaged hand. He hoped to make a comeback in this prestigious tournament, and attempted to play an early-week practice round, but had to withdraw when his left hand became badly swollen.

With him out, the other multiple winners are Watson, Zoeller, Jack Nicklaus, Andy Bean, Lee Elder, Lon Hinkle, Bruce Lietzke, defending champion Gary Player and Lanny Wadkins.

Nicklaus has won a record five Tournament of Champions titles and confirmed last week the end of a slump that has plagued him all season. He missed the playoff for the Masters title by a single stroke after starting the final round 8 shots back.

That revival, and Watson's strong play in recent events made another Nicklaus-Watson confrontations a decided possibility.

Hubert Green, Ben Crenshaw, Ray Floyd, Tom Kite, U.S. Open champ Andy North, Jerry Pate and Lee Trevino are other leading entrants.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by NBC.

The tournament is sponsored by Mutual of New York.

Fem Golfers Swing Into Regional Play

Womens golf teams from Coronado and Plainview will join other girls from El Paso, Amarillo and other Panhandle cities today when the Region I AAAA golf meet gets underway at the Meadowbrook Municipal Course at 9 a.m.

Joining those two teams will be Hereford's Barbara Scott, who finished second in district, rounding out the 4-AAAA entries.

Coronado golf coach Karen Cox realizes that her Mustang linksters will be hard pressed to finish either first or second—and advance to the state meet in Austin.

"I'd hate to say what kind of chance we have in the tournament," said Miss Cox. "But since I've been here (four years) no one from this district has ever gone to state."

The team with the best shot at capturing a state berth, at least from this district, should be Plainview. The Bulldog girls won district going away and boast the leagues best golfer in Ann Horn.

"Ann has a good chance as an individual," said Miss Cox. "She's a senior this year and she has played in every regional meet since she was a sophomore.

"But I think the Amarillo schools are going to the favorites. And the Midland girls are also strong."

Representing Plainview in the meet will be Ann Horn, Brenda Cole, Lori Zelney, Jodi McGowan and Paige Lloyd. The Coronado linksters include Colleen Crump, Bonnie Wilson, Vanessa Rogers, Kelley Price and Carolyn Vorhis.

According to Miss Cox, Colleen Crump has perfromed the most consistently of any of the CHS golfers.

"It's going to be a good experience for the girls," she said. "We'll have to do better than we have in the past if we hope to advance. I guess I'm just going to wait and see how this first day goes.

"This Coronado team is probably the best I've ever had since I've been coaching in Lubbock."

Miss Cox also coaches the Monterey and Lubbock high golfers , so her statement carries a little weight.

Still, this district has never been particularly strong in girls golf and Miss Cox realizes that her charges have their work cut out for them.

"It's going to be a challenge," she admitted. "But the girls all have the capabilities to shoot in the 80's or 90's.

"If they can do that, we'll have a chance at going to state."

Deadline Nears In Pine Hills Golf

Deadline for entering the annual Pine Hills Partnership Golf Tournament is Friday, according to pro Courtney White. The tournament is a 36-hole affair, with 18-hole rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Entry fee is $50 per team, and White said he could accept about 30 more teams.

Teams will be flighted after Saturday's round.

Shotgun starts at 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. will send the golfers onto the course both days.

Cincinnati pitcher Tom Seaver's full name is George Thomas Seaver.

WT To Host Invitational Meet

HEREFORD (Special) — West Texas State may be the home team at the annual WT Invitational today, but they certainly won't have the home-field advantage.

Because of the rennovation work at the WT stadium, the meet has been switched to the Hereford High School track.

The meet, which gets underway at 4:30 p.m., features West Texas, Lubbock Christian College, Eastern New Mexico University and Wayland Baptist College.

Paced by the mile-relay unit of Chris Knighton, Michael Moore, Mike Brown and David Thomas, West Texas is expected to dominate today's meet. However, the relay unit, which finished fifth at the Texas Relays with a time of 3:08.7 (a school record) may not compete if coach Bob Kitchens elects to send the team to the the Kansas Relays.

Lubbock Christian will enter a sprint relay team comprised of Mike Ritchie, John Dover, Joe Green and Dennis Willis. Green and Willis will also run the quarter, Ritchie and Dover the 220.

Also competing for the Chaps will be Kyle Smith in the mile and Michael Jenkins, Kip Mibey and Joel Koech in the three-mile run.

Other top competitors include hurdles Frank Postel of Wayland and Mike King of ENMU, a pair of 13.8 high steppers.

LCC Cancels Baseball Action

Lubbock Christian College had two games weathered out Wednesday, and school officials called off the competition in all honesty.

The Chaparrals had a doubleheader with UTEP on tap for Wednesday, but even though the sun broke through th clouds almost by the time the El Paso team started its journey home, the conditions weren't right to play at noon when the decision was made.

"It was cloudy, the field was wet, and it was spitting rain then," LCC officials reported. "We had no idea it would clear up. And, by making a decision at that time, UTEP was able to start home."

LCC now is scheduled to play at Dallas Baptist College Friday and Saturday. However, weather could affect that series in Dallas.

If the two teams are able to get their games in this weekend, it will be the top team teams in the district colliding.

Latest Dist. VIII poll shows LCC on top, with a 32-15 record, and DBC is 28-20. Rounding out the top six are Paul Quinn (22-12-1), Pariair View (16-11), University of Dallas (12-13-1) and Austin College.

Tech Names Weight Coach

A former athlete at East Texas State who has coached several Olympic athletes has been named weight and conditioning coach at Texas Tech, athletic director Dick Tamburo announced Wednesday.

Russell Polhemus, now at Georgia Tech as weight coach, will assume his new duties here next Monday. His work will be with athletes in all sports, Tamburo indicated, and he will be in charge of the recently remodeled weight room in Jones Stadium.

Polhemus has been at Georgia Tech since 1972, but prior to that, he worked at Dallas Sunset High School, a high school in Birmingham, Ala., and at the University of Tennessee. He has authored several papers on weight training and conditioning and has written one book on the subject.

While in Dallas, Polhemus coached Olympian Sam Walker in weight lifting.

Polhemus earned his bachelor's and master's degrees at East Texas State, and while an undergraduate, he competed in track. He had college bests of 60-4 in the shot put and 177-10 in the discus. After graduating, Polhemus threw the discus 186-2.

At Sunset, Polhemus coached a district-championship track team in 1967 and also handled the school's cross-country team.

Sneed Seeks Tallahassee Title

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Ed Sneed said he won't let his playoff loss in the Masters golf tournament Sunday bother him in the Tallahassee Open, which begins Thursday. He conceded, though, that his collapse at Augusta, Ga., will haunt him for a long time.

"Sure, it's still on my mind," he said as after a practice round on the 7,124-yard Killearn course. "That kind of thing, no matter what I do the rest of my career, that week will stay with me.

"But you just can't let it bother you. It's past. I can't let it affect the way I play now."

The 34-year-old pro last Sunday lost a three-stroke lead on the final three holes of the Masters. Fuzzy Zoeller won the coveted title in a sudden-death playoff.

Sneed, who won the Tallahassee Open in a playoff two years ago, said he is not trying to redeem himself this week for the collapse. "My only goal coming here is to play well. That's all I ask."

The field of 156 players was completed Monday when 41 non-exempt players won their way into the tournament in the 18-hole qualifying round.

Leading the qualifiers were Doug Campbell of Payallaup, Wash., and Dan Halldorson of Shilo, Manitoba.

Others in the field include Billy Casper, Bobby Nichols, Chi Chi Rodriguez, Butch Baird, Rik Massengale and Dave Hill.

Foreign Players End Soccer Strike

WASHINGTON (AP)— The five-day strike against the North American Soccer League was ended by the players Wednesay in the wake of a decision by the federal government that foreigners would not be deported if they played.

Ed Garvey, NASL Players Association staff director, said all striking players had been asked to return to work immediatly because of what he desribed as he "incredible ineptitude of the U.S. government."

Garvey said the union had been informed by the Labor Department and the Immigration and Naturalization Service last week that foreigners would be subjected to deportation if they played during the strike, called by the union last Friday because management refused to recognize the association as the collective bargaining agent.

Last Saturday, the INS issued a statement in which the service said aliens in the United States on temporary work visas could be deported if they played during the strike. However, the INS said Tuesday that no action would be taken against foreigners who play during the walkout if they had valid visas issued before the strike.

The NASL, with some 55 percent of its players from overseas, played its entire schedule last weekend despite the strike. Most of the aliens played in the 12 games.

"The INS and Labor authorities told us clearly what the law is with respect to alien employees," Garvey told newsmen. "Despite the law, management continued not only to threaten players with the loss of visas for next year but induced the foreign athletes by guaranteeing contracts, some for two years, if they came to work, and told them they would handle all legal fees and not to worry about the immigration laws.

"The end result of this complete reversal of policy has been so much confusion among the foreign players that the reps feel they can't ask the players to remain out on strike when nothing the government says can be taken seriously," said Garvey.

He said the union would continue its bid for recognition in Canada where, he said, the labor laws are more effective. "Perhaps, Canada can set up a pattern for everyone else," he said.

Three of the NASL's 24 teams are in Canada -Toronto, Vancouver and Edmonton.

Garvey said the union would pursue its fight for recognition through the National Labor Relation's Board and the courts.

"If justice moves as quickly for us as it does for management, we will proceed," he said. "It was a very strange reversal (by the INS) and done with great speed, maybe it should give us encouragement that the government works swiftly.

"What everyone forgets is this strike was started for recognition and end in an immigration matter," he said.

Unheralded Netter Gains WCT Berth

HOUSTON (AP) — Unheralded Gene Mayer of the United States defeated Francisco Gonzales of Puerto Rico, 6-0, 7-5, in a World Championship Tennis tournament to surprisingly qualify for the WCT championship finals at Dallas next month.

Mayer, who earlier upset No. 1-seeded Harold Soloman, clinched at least an eighth-place finish in the WCT standings and earned a shot at the $100,000 first prize in the Dallas finals beginning April 30.

Second-seeded Roscoe Tanner of the United States met Italy's Adriano Panatta in a later second-round match.

Fourth-seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain defeated West Germany's Ulrich Pinner, 6-4, 6-0, in another second-round match of the $175,000 tournament at River Oaks Country Club.

"I came to this tournament not even thinking about making the finals," Mayer said after easily defeating Gonzales. "First of all I didn't count on beating Harold in the first round."

Mayer broke Gonzales in the first, third and fifth games of the opening set and took a 3-1 advantage in the second set.

"But then I got to thinking about the point standings and I lost my concentration," Mayer said.

Gonzales held in the fifth game and broke Mayer in the sixth to pull even in the second set. But Mayer broke back in the 11th game and then served for the match in the 12th game, winning three straight points to clinch it.

Orantes, recovering from a series of injuries, played cautiously against Pinner. He broke Pinner in the fifth game of the opening set and then took control in the 10th game when he used a series of drop shots to hold service and win the opening set.

Walton Gives Passing View

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Walton, who fervently believes and practices individuality off the court but team play on it, says that All-Americans Larry Bird and Magic Johnson would make "excellent pros if they can get into the right situation."

But the red-haired center thinks there are only a handful of current teams with the appropriate philosophy to accommodate the pass-making geniuses of Bird and Johnson.

He cites Washington, Phoenix, Portland, Atlanta and Seattle as the pro teams that fully understand the advantages of team basketball over five individuals hogging one ball.

And that state of the art moves Walton to call the troubled National Basketball Association "too individualistic."

"When was the last time the league scoring leader was on a championship team?" Walton asked. "Never."

Walton also calls for the return of zone defenses and a move from the 24-second clock to a 30-second shot clock. "The NBA needs more strategy," he said. "The fans love strategy, and zone defenses and the 30-second clock would give it to them."

When Walton talks about the benefits of team play, he knows what he's talking about. Walton's unselfishness made UCLA the dominant team in his college days and helped the Portland Trail Blazers to a world championship in 1977.

But when Walton first preached passing and unselfishness to Portland in 1974, his message fell on deaf ears. "When I first got there, Portland had a lot of individual shooters. It took some time."

A relaxed and friendly Walton was in New York recently to beat the promotional drums for his Sunday segment on ABC's American Sportsman. In the show, the 6-foot-11 Walton will be seen climbing a 145-foot tree in th Philippies to view th nesting laces of the nearly extinct monkey-eating eagle.

"I was plenty scared," he said.

On the expedition, Walton joined four founders of the Film Research for an Endangered Environment who have been living in the Philippines the past two years, attempting to preserve the world's largest and most powerful eagle by improving its breeding and habitat.

During the current NBA season, Walton has had plenty of time to cavort with these mammoth eagles, play drums with the Grateful Dead rock band and vent his competititive juices playing chess. He hasn't played pro ball since he suffered a stress fracture to his left foot last April 21.

He was on crutches for seven months but now bike rides, lifts weights and plays one-on-one basketball. "I can do everything right now but play every day in the NBA," he said.

Walton's injury prompted him to criticize the team's medical practices and to declare he would never play for Portland again — a stand he has since toned down. He now says only that he'll be playing next season in the NBA for a team and city with which he and his family are comfortable.

Some signs point to Portland. He has great respect for Portland's coach, Jack Ramsay, and the Blazers play team basketball.

"People in Portland don't think anything's wrong with the NBA," Walton said.

Five Local Netters Set For AAAA Regional Fun

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

For nearly every girl who swung a racket in district 4-AAAA tennis action this year the season is over. The only action they'll see until next fall will be for practice, local tourneys or just for grins.

But for Monterey's Lori Humphreys, Lori McClure and Pauline Musil— and Coronado's doubles team of Susan Mangum and Beth Nickels the fun has just begun.

Teresa Landry, of Plainview, will join the Lubbock girls as the district 4-AAAA representatives in the AAAA regional tournament that gets underway Friday at Texas Tech.

Miss Landry won the singles title and Miss Humphreys finished second to qualify for regionals. The Coronado team of Miss Mangum and Miss Nickels are the doubles winners and Monterey's team of Misses McClure and Musil finished second to qualify.

The action begins early Friday morning and will last through Saturday afternoon, with the top two singles and doubles finishers heading for the state tournament in Austin on May 4-5.

As far as the Lubbock doubles players are concerned their biggest threat will come from a couple of Odessa Permian teams who will be in the event.

"The girls regional in this area is really tough," said Coronado coach Jim Carter. "And Permian has two teams that are outstanding. Right now I'd say they are the team to beat."

Monterey coach Steve Thomas had the same sentiments.

"Permian defintely has the two strongest teams in doubles," he said. "At least that's the way it looks now."

The Permian teams are Miss Bruce and Miss Lewis, and, Miss Naworski and Miss Wilson. According to the Lubbock coaches the two teams were back and forth all year long, with neither one claiming the upper hand.

The Coronado team of Miss Mangum and Miss Nickels probably have the best chance of either Lubbock team of upsetting the Odessa girls.

"We beat Naworski and Wilson once," said Miss Mangum. "But they have beaten us once also."

"And we've never won against the other Permian team," reminded partner Miss Nickels.

Both girls on the Coronado team are juniors but actually they've had more expereince playing together than the Monterey team, although both Miss Musil and Miss McClure are seniors.

"I didn't put them together until the last two tournaments of the season," said MHS coach Thomas. "So they haven't played a whole lot of these teams they'll see in regionals. But they have really progressed well."

The MHS girls were a little more hun ble about their success.

"The district was a whole lot tougher the last two years," said Miss McClure with a laugh. "We haven't beaten the Coronado team this year but we've played them close," she added.

"Anyway we probably won't have to play them since we'll be in different brackets," said her partner, Miss Musil.

But the brackets won't be set until tonight when the coaches meet and decide the pairings.

Lori Humphreys will be the only Lubbock girl entered in the singles competition although nearby Plainview boasts Miss Landry.

"Nobody was able to beat the Landry girl durin g district round robins," said Thomas. "She is a strong player and is ranked in state. She could do real well in regionals."

But Thomas is also optimistic about Miss Humpreys chances.

"She (Miss Humpreys) played No. 2 as a sophomore and she came along real well in the latter tourneys this year," said Thomas. "She won a couple of B tournaments, so it has been a good year for her."

And so these five girls prepare for the regionals and a chance to stretch their seasons a little longer. But just by making it to regionals, the girls have already made their seasons successful.

"The regionals are what everybody shoots for ever since back in the fall," said CHS coach Carter. "After this everything is just icing on the cake."

Johnny Vander Meer of Cincinnati once pitched two consecutive no-hitters but he also walked 1,072 batters during his career.

Lyle Hopes To Take Next Step In Accomplishing Fight Dream

NEW YORK (AP) — Former heavyweight contender Ron Lyle, at 37, and after personal problems which included being tried for murder last year, said Wednesday he has not given up his dream of becoming champion.

"I want to be world champion not because of what I can reap, but because of my dream. Every man has a dream, and he believes if he works hard, if he sweats and toils in the fields, he can realize that dream. I have slaved in the fields and I want my dream to be fulfilled."

Lyle waxed philosophical and quoted the Bible as he alluded to his troubled past and talked about his future at a news conference to publicize his scheduled 10-round bout with Scott LeDoux in Las Vegas May 12.

In declaring that, "I, Ron Lyle, want to be heavyweight champion of the world," the fighter recalled he had made the same declaration 10 years ago.

"But now, I am a better fighter," he said. "I know how to fight better in the clinches. I know how to slide a punch. I know to press an opponent."

Some boxing people feel that had Lyle been more adept at those qualities when he fought Muhammad Ali in a championship fight in May, 1975, he could have taken the title. Lyle had the edge in the early rounds, but after being stunned by a couple of Ali punches, "he suddenly lost heart," as someone then close to him recalled. Ali won when the bout was stopped in the 11th round.

Lyle was ranked among the contenders until a stretch of inactivity forced by his trial last year on second degree murder charges stemming from the shooting death of Vernon Clark, a former road work aide, in Lyle's suburban Denver home on New Year's Eve, 1977.

Lyle, acquitted last December, began a comeback attempt with an eight-round knockout over Fili Moali in San Diego April 6. He sees the LeDoux fight as another way-station en route to a title shot at World Boxing Council heavyweight champ Larry Holmes, who sat next to Lyle during the news conference. "I'll be ready after seven or eight months and a couple of major fights," Lyle said.

"I'm ready now," said LeDoux, who expects a victory on May 12 to put him in the ring with Holmes.

Boxing promoer Don King, overseer of the proceedings and the man who lines up Holmes' fights, indicated that the winner would be considered for a title fight. "I'll give the white boy a chance," King said of the curly-haired blond fighter from Crosby, Minn. "If he can get by Ron Lyle, his hopes for a title shot will be fulfilled."

King said, though, his tentative schedule for Holmes included a fight with Mike Weaver in June and one with Earnie Shavers in September.

Major Pre-Easter Votes Of Area Members Of Congress Recorded

By Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the days before the Easter recess.

HOUSE

PEACE CORPS — The House voted, 276 for and 116 against, to remove the Peace Corps from the agency called Action. The Peace Corps probably would be linked to the State Department's foreign aid agency, although this amendment did not rule out the remote possibility it could become an independent agency. The vote came during debate on HR 3324, a foreign aid bill later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Edward Derwinski, R-Ill, a supporter, called the amendement a "compromise" favored by those who feel the Peace Corps has become politicized in the Action agency and those who want it to operate more in concert with U.S. foreign aid programs.

Rep. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., an opponent, said the amendment would "transform the soul of the Peace Corps from a person-to-person, nonpolitical agency into an agency that is wrapped in development programs."

Members voting "nay" wanted to keep the Peace Corps where it is now.

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, James Collins, R-3, Ray Roberts, D-4, Jim Mattox, D-5; Phil Gramm, D-6, Bill Archer, R-7, Jack Brooks, D-9, J. Marvin Leath, D-11, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Richard White, D-16, Kent Hance, D-19, Henry Gonzalez, D-20, Tom Loeffler, R-21, and Manuel Lujan, R-1 (N.M.), voted "yea."

Reps. Charles Wilson, D-2, Bob Eckhardt, D-8, Jake Pickle, D-10, Jack Hightower, D-13, Joe Wyatt, D-14, Charles Stenholm, D-17, Ron Paul, R-22, and Abraham Kazen, D-23, voted "nay."

Reps. James Wright, D-12, Mickey Leland, D-18, Martin Frost, D-24, and Harold Runnels, D-2 (N.M.), did not vote.

RHODESIA By a vote of 180 for and 190 against, the House rejected a plan to send a team of official U.S. observers to the Mid-April elections in Rhodesia. The elections are to determine whether the country adopts the "internal settlement" proposed by Prime Minister Ian Smith to end white domination of Rhodesia. The vote came during consideration of HR 3324 (see vote above).

Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., said a vote in favor of sending the delegation "simply puts us on the side of a new freely elected black majority government in Africa and against ... the terrorists, the bombers, those who shoot down planes, those who make our asinine policy in the State Department and those who gather on the floor of the House and support that policy."

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., an opponent, siad that if the House votes to send observers, "by tomorrow morning every key figure in Africa is going to (conclude) that the U.S. House of Representatives has decided to throw its weight behind the internal settlement." He said the U.S. should be neutral at this time.

Members voting "yea" generally were sympathetic to the "internal settlement" proposed by Ian Smith.

Hall, Collins, Roberts, Archer, Pickle, Leath, Hightower, Wyatt, de la Garza, White, Stenholm, Loeffler, Paul, Kazen and Lujan voted "yea."

Mattox, Gramm, Eckhardt, Brooks, Leland, Hance and Gonzalez voted "nay."

Wilson, Wright, Frost and Runnels did not vote.

STATE DEPT. The House refused, 136 for and 236 against, to kill a new agency proposed for the State Department. The vote came during debate on HR 3324 (see above votes). It paved the way for establishing the Institute for Scientific and Technological Cooperation at a first-year cost of $25 million. A chief mission of the institute would be to increase the role of U.S. science and technology in helping under-developed countries.

Rep. Don J. Pease, D-Ohio, a supporter, said the institute "is an awfully good investment of our time and effort to build an indigenous capacity within those nations to use science and technology for their own development."

Members voting "nay" favored establishing the State Department research and development agency.

Collins, Roberts, Mattox, Gramm, Archer, Brooks, Leath, Wyatt, de la Garza, Loeffler, Paul and Kazen voted "yea."

Hall, Eckhardt, Pickle, Hightower, White, Stenholm, Leland, Hance, Gonzalez and Lujan voted "nay."

Wilson, Wright, Frost and Runnels did not vote.

SENATE

SCHOOL PRAYER The Senate voted 53 for and 40 against to shelve an amendment allowing prayers to be said in public schools. The prayer amendment would counter the U.S. Supreme Court ruling that school prayers breach the constitutional separation of church and state. This vote stripped the amendment from the bill (S 210) establishing a Department of Education. Final action on the bill is pending.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., a supporter of shelving the amendment, and thus an opponent of public school prayer, said "our relationship with the Almighty is an individual one, not one to be prescribed by some governmental body...."

Senators voting "nay" favor allowing prayers to be said in public schools.

Sen. Lloyd Bentson, D, voted "yea."

Sens. Pete Domenici, R (N.M.), and Harrison Schmitt, R (N.M.), voted "nay"

Sen. John Tower, R, did not vote.

Area Colleges Face Fund Request Cuts

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The $20 billion biennial budget approved by the House Appropriations Committee and forwarded to the House for debate contains cuts in funding from requests made for most state-supported junior colleges.

The two-year spending bill, up $3.5 billion from current levels, is less than the preliminary budget recommended by the Legislative Budget Board, but still larger than the bottom-line budget Gov. Bill Clements says lawmakers will have to deliver if they want to avoid his veto.

At the beginning of the budget process, the state's 47 public junior colleges requested an average 32 percent budget increase. The LBB quickly cut that to 22 percent.

South Plains Jr. College went from a LBB-recommended biennial funding level of $7.6 million to $6.9 million.

Western Texas College went from $3.07 million to $2.88 million.

Lubbock Human Relations Director Resigns To Attend School

By RHONA SCHWARTZ
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock's Human Relations director Luciano Perez has submitted his resignation, effective May 25, to become a full-time Texas Tech University law student.

Perez, who was appointed to the post Nov. 17, 1975 by then city manager N.B. McCullough, said in his resignation letter, "I have enjoyed my position as HRC director and feel that I have gained invaluable experience without which I would not have been accepted into law school."

Perez said Tuesday he feels what he set out to accomplish as Human Relations director has been achieved, including making city hall a less formidable place for Lubbock citizens.

"I wanted to make city hall the kind of place where people wouldn't feel intimidated," he said. "Generally, most people are awed by the place (and) this is a particularly true for minorities.

"I think by and large I've succeeded, and this is measurable in terms of how freely people sat down and talked to me about their personal problems."

As director, Perez took complains "of a racial nature from the private sector and tried to mediate them."

He also was a "general information dispenser for the City of Lubbock."

Perez said he would have liked to see more minority firefighters and police officers hired in the past three years, something he worked for as Human Relations director. He assisted in the recruiting for both departments and occassionaly for other departments in the city.

In resigning, Perez also relinquishes his role as advisor/secretary for the Human Relations Commission. He does, however, plan to remain an active member of the group in some capacity.

Perez attributes his decision to attend law school to the late Mayor Roy Bass whom, he said, "encouraged me to go to law school."

"Mayor Bass had the savoir-faire that nobody has been able to match in local politics," he said. "He brought an era of sophistication and cosmopolitanism to the city the likes of which the city had never seen."

Perez particulary admired the late mayor's rapport with "even the most underprivileged types whose complaints may have seemed insignificant," but to which Bass gave his attenttion.

Perez said he plans to continue his civic involvement with various community organizations "depending upon how much time law school consumes."

The city plans to begin recruiting applicants to fill the directorship, but as yet no recruiting strategy has been decided, city public information officer Vaughn Hendrie said.

The new director will be bi-lingual, Hendrie said, adding that a candidate from another city is a "distinct possibility."

600-Year-Old Butter May Have Medical Use

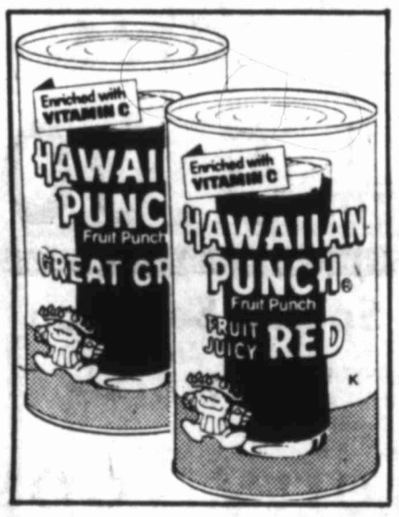

MOSCOW (AP) — A container of 600-year-old butter has been unearthed in Razdan, Soviet Armenia, and it may prove to be a valuable medicine, the Soviet news agency Tass said Wednesday.

"The butter is hopelessly rancid, but not mouldy because it is filled with dead bacteria," Tass quotes scientists. "Its capacity to kill off harmful bacteria may be used in medical practices," Tass said.

Fear Of Aliens Brings Shootout

JUNEAU (AP) — A state mail clerk complained to co-workers that people from another planet were coming to get him just before he went on a shooting rampage that left two officers dead and a third wounded, police said Wednesday.

Police Chief Jim Barkley said Louis Sorensen, 50, then apparently went home and shot himself. He was found dead in his home, about a mile from the state capitol.

Killed in Tuesday's shooting were Rick Adair, 51, and Jimmie Kennedy, 32.

Patrolman Mike Stickler was listed in good condition Wednesday with bullet wounds in the leg, according to Bartlett-Memorial Hospital administrator Jim Burns.

Audrey Perdon, Sorensen's immediate supervisor, said Wednesday that employees had tried "all morning" to get him help.

"I could tell something was wrong," she said. "He was nervous; said he hadn't slept the night before."

Mrs. Perdon said co-workers sympathized when Sorensen talked about people from other planets coming to get him. She said they knew he had been hospitalized previously and some had helped him get his job back.

Sorensen had complained of flu-like symptoms that day, Mrs. Perdon said, but they were unable to find a doctor for him.

"We couldn't get him to a doctor until Wednesday afternoon, and he said maybe he wouldn't need one by then," Mrs. Perdon said. "We called everyone, people who worked for him before, the police. They all said 'we can't do anything until something happens,'" she said.

She said the last she saw Sorensen was when he "was prancing outside the elevator, waiting for it to come up."

While employees were concerned he might "do himself bodily harm," Mrs. Perdon said, "there was no indication he would become involved in a shoot-out."

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

NBC's Latest Offering, 'Highcliff Manor,' Full Of Laughs

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — There are more laughs than chills on "Highcliffe Manor," NBC's take-off on all those spine-tingling tales of the macabre.

If you like your nonsense dark and mysterious and played in dead earnest, this may be for you.

Shelley Fabares stars as an innocent among a houseful of sinister characters. She has just inherited her late husband's foundation, a "think tank" housed in a castle on an island off the Massachusetts coast.

She is blissfully unaware of all the experiments that are going on there, or that all the scientists and philosophers are out to wrest control of the Blacke Foundation from her.

Felix Morger (Gerald Gordon) tries it by wooing her, even over her late husband's coffin, although he really seems to be hung up on sheep. Down in the dungeon, Frances Kiskadden (Eugeni Ross-Leming) is building her own man with parts from an Erector set and whatever Cheng (Harold Sakata) can dig up for her.

SHELLEY FABARES

The Rev. Ian Glenville (Stephen McHattie) arrives one stormy night with his valet (Ernie Hudson). He says he was on his way to Africa by canoe to prove his theory that the black man originated in America and migrated to Africa to keep warm.

All the while, the villagers, pitchforks and rakes in hand, keep storming the castle to protest the grave-robbing and grisly experiments.

The whole thing is absurd, but it does have an appeal that could improve as the writers get a better idea of where they're going and the actors get a better handle on their characters.

It's a continuing serial like "Soap," and like "Soap," it's a bit complicated and difficult to get into until you learn the characters and story lines. NBC has ordered only six episodes, which may not be enough for a show that requires viewers to become addicted over a period of time.

Robert Blees created the concept for T.A.T. Communications, and it was developed by Eugene Ross-Leming and Brad Buckner, who also are the writers and co-producers. Miss Ross-Leming and Buckner were writers and co-producers in the second year of "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman."

T.A.T. began experimenting with the Gothic comedy three years ago, with the idea of syndicating it five times a week, as it did with "Mary Hartman."

"The show has a unique slant on sex," Buckner said. "There are a lot of sexual relationships. Because it's a collection of men and women under one roof there's bound to be a lot of attention to relationships. There are love affairs and marriage proposals."

There also are plenty of bodies. "We call it Gothic because it's dark and mysterious," Buckner said. "It has the overtones of Bram Stoker ("Dracula") and Mary Shelley ("Frankenstein"). It's set in the present day, but the way the set's decorated will remind you of the dark, foreboding tales.

"One thing we wanted to avoid was being campy. It's played seriously. It's nonsense, but earnest nonsense. We're not doing a spoof any more than 'Mary Hartman' was a spoof of soap operas."

Buckner said it is not like earlier series, "The Addams Family" or "The Munsters." "It's not crypt humor and it's not haunted house humor," he said.

The show airs on NBC at 8:30 p.m. EST Thursdays, which Buckner noted is immediately following "Mork and Mindy" on ABC. "What we're hoping is that the people who have their appetites whetted by 'Mork and Mindy' will switch over to us afterward," he said. "I think it has that same kind of appeal."

CBS Shareholders Vote To Continue Aid To PBS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Shareholders of CBS defeated a proposal Wednesday to withhold further financial aid from public television.

Reed Irvine, a CBS shareholder and representative of the organization "Accuracy in Media," proposed eliminating grants to public television because of AIM objections to recent Public Broadcasting System documentaries.

He said the shows were not objective or balanced and cited "Paul Jacobs and the Nuclear Gang," which he said did not present positive aspects of nuclear energy.

The vote by which his proposal was defeated was not announced.

Last year CBS gave $10 million to public television.

Muscovite Disco Lacks Indefinable Something

MOSCOW (AP) — A rap on the tiny window and a secret password get you through the door of Moscow's newest in-spot, the Blue Bird cafe — the city's only real discotheque.

Red, yellow, blue and green lights flash, a tape plays the Bee Gees, four girls in blue jeans dance an improvised disco routine and a young man with Bob Dylan curls pops mysterious little white pills.

It's a disco all right, but something's missing — it's Saturday night without fever. Maybe it's because you don't find "the decor of a whorehouse and the odor of cocaine" that so disturbed a Soviet journalist recently at New York's Studio 54 disco.

Whatever it is, the imagination, the fantasy, the energy that lit up the lives of John Travolta and his friends in the movie "Saturday Night Fever" are missing at this subdued nightspot, where closing time is a strict 10 p.m.

Youngsters in their late teens and early 20s sit at small tables eating tough steak and eggs and fried pork rinds and drinking vodka cocktails with maraschino cherries. They're dressed for the most part in jeans and old sweaters, sometimes in jackets and ties.

The young man in Dylan curls, who called himself Bobik, wound a woolen scarf around his neck for individuality and complained of ennui.

The fun of the Blue Bird, a three-year-old establishment that is just being dicovered by foreigners, is much the same as that of Studio 54: its exclusivity.

Though Bobik and his friends say anyone can enter if he or she lines up early enough, it is clear that most of the youngsters here are the children of the privileged.

They dance with each other, fight with each other, whistle and wave to each other from table to table. And when the doors close behind them at 10, they gather in the street outside to decide whose house to go to for the night.

Throughout the evening, though, there is a mob of the unfortunate around the basement doorway, trying to get in.

Elbow your way through them, rap on a playing-card-sized window and shout, "Irina Nikolayevna sent me."

When the door opens a crack, all the others try to push through with you, but Irina Nikolayevna, a stout little woman with a bun, shoves them back.

"They line up from 3 p.m. to get in," she says, "but we have only 80 seats."

"You must give money," says Bobik. "The first time, the second time, the third time. Then they know you and you can get in.

"I used to come here all the time. Here you can make contacts for selling jeans. I have to make a living so I sell jeans. Now I don't come here so often and I have trouble getting in."

Says Irina Nikolayevna, "I have a good memory for faces."

Inside, the visitors find a tightly packed, low-ceilinged room filled with smoke and loud music, with a bar-window shaped like a large mouth filled with foreign liquor bottles. The Blue Bird serves only Russian vodka and champagne.

'Norma Rae' Gets Viewer Involved In Struggle Against Odds

"Norma Rae." Screenplay by Irving Ravetch and Harriet Frank, Jr. Photographed by John A. Alonzo. Music by David Shire. Edited by Sidney Levin. Art director: Tracy Bousman. Directed by Martin Ritt. Stars Sally Field, Beau Bridges and Ron Leibman. Rated PG. At the South Plains Cinema.

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Film director Martin Ritt is an urban liberal whose best films leave the skyscrapers far behind to reveal the humanity in common people and their dreams. The key to a Ritt film — and his track record includes "Sounder," "The Molly Maguires," "Conrack" and last year's unfortunately ignored "Casey's Shadow" — is the sensitivity with which he treats his characters. We actually breathe their air, taste their food, feel their pains and share theirdisillusionment and hopes. That Ritt usually gives us underdogs scraping for survival in the shadow of big business or cruel authority only heightens our involvement. Why? Because every viewer can identify to at least a small extent with the concept of being kept in check by a more powerful entity, whether it be an employer, tradition or fate itself.

A-J FILM REVIEW

And this formula, this stressing of people over cliches, is one reason we should all celebrate the release of Ritt's new picture, "Norma Rae." The second reason is Sally Field, assured an Oscar nomination for her warm portrait of a textile mill worker inspired to put her courage to the test and, in the process, learn not only about women's rights, but human rights and human dignity as well.

Ritt's story takes place in the small town of Henleyville (actually Opelika, Alabama), where mill management has no trouble warding off the union because of an uninformed labor force. Indeed, upon meeting a New York organizer named Reuben (Ron Leibman), a gruff Pat Hingle says without embarrassment, "You're all a bunch of Communists, agitators, crooks or Jews." Only the latter is applicable in Leibman's case, however, and the organizer stands just as strong as he retorts, "You're underpaid. You're overworked. You're getting shafted right up to your tonsils. You need me, sir."

From this point on, the audience is forced to side with the union — and not even Ritt's later introduction of unfeeling union officials can sway us from our loyalties.

But though this picture has all the characteristics of a 1930s Depression drama, a David vs. Goliath story of the common man vs. big business, it is also the story of a contemporary woman's rising consciousness. We are introduced to Sally Field as a mill worker with "round heels" (one spending a lot of off time on her back), bored with her life and trying to raise two small children on short pay and little excitement. She gripes more than the others, tries to stand up for her rights at the mill, but generally succumbs to authority.

"Everything goes to the rich man," says one character before washing away the frustration with a swig of beer. Norma Rae feels the same way, at least until her will begins to be influenced by Leibman. She's the fish he wants to hook and, when her courage finally overshadows her cautious nature, Ritt's parallel stories at last merge.

Suddenly Miss Field is talking union to her friends at the mill, making it tough on her family and endangering her marriage. She has a cause to fight for, and that cause has priority over washing dishes and ironing shirts. Sally Field is nothing short of electrifying as she comes of age, and her curiosity and dreams and struggles are at the very core of our own inspiration. It's amazing that no one offered Miss Field a major role after her brilliant portrayal of television's "Sybil," but Ritt's gutsy casting will surely change all that. This actress is, after all, at the center of the film's hope and optimism. She makes us laugh, and she tears our hearts out in the subtle scene in which she awakens her children to tell them of her sordid past.

Indeed, Sally Field has emerged an actress to be reckoned with.

Supporting performances are all finely tuned to the needs of the picture, even if the Good Guys are painted a stark white and the Bad Guys in darker colors. Leibman boasts a wonderful exuberance and enlightenment as the New York organizer out of his element in the Deep South. He knows how to be gentle with the workers, and he realizes he has enough backing from federal laws to make a tough personal stand against management. Beau Bridges, in a much smaller role as the husband who can't help but grow jealous of his wife's rising awareness, offers one of his best performances. "I just hope I can keep up with her," he says after marrying Norma Rae, never quite realizing the depth of that statement.

Bridges ably displays his frustration and disappointment but, thankfully, also expresses his love in two of the film's most moving and memorable scenes: the one in which he proposes to Norma Rae, and the one in which he offers his emotional support when it is needed most.

Minor supporting performances come from a fine mixture of talented actors and actual mill workers in Opelika. It's hard to refrain from grinning at the anti-union people Ritt found in town: a farmer (changing a tractor tire in the film) and a group of men whittling on a porch. Pat Hingle is perfect as Norma Rae's father, and Barbara Baxley is quite touching as the silent, coping mother. Look closely, too, and you'll see Ritt himself in a cameo as Billy Joe: keeping his head down as he munches potato chips before calling Norma Rae a "fink."

Sets are as important in this picture as the people, and Ritt not only shows us the din of the mill (and the dangers of deafness and brown lung), but also makes Leibman's motel room mirror the man's character. Again, we can't help but notice the detail which sparks a Martin Ritt film, the love and respect he holds for his characters. In any other director's hands, Norma Rae and Reuben would wind up in bed together, so great is his influence over her. But Ritt opts instead to tease us, to show us the woman's susceptibility without going so far as to cheapen her character and risk losing our symathies.

Because of this deep caring, an eye for detail and a powerhouse performance from Sally Field, "Norma Rae" emerges a triumphant celebration of the spirit and courage within us all. It is the most believable film about a contemporary woman we've been offered in years — but to pigeonhole "Norma Rae" as simply a woman's picture would be unfair. In truth, it is much more. It has the power to entertain, and speak to, all of us on a personal and inspirational level.

Radio City Adds Six Rockettes

NEW YORK (AP) — There will be six more Rockettes kicking at the revived Radio City Music Hall this summer, and something audiences may kick about: a 50 to 60 percent jump in ticket prices for a show that does not include a movie.

Music Hall officials announced Wednesday that on June 1, the hall will open what officials called "the most elaborate stage production ever presented in New York" — a 90-minute musical spectacular entitled "A New York Summer — Magical Celebration."

The show will include a cast of more than 100, wearing more than 1,000 costumes. There will be no film, ending a 47-year tradition of combined stage and movie shows.

But there will be 36 Rockettes, the number that danced when the hall first opened in 1932 and six more than now.

However, the Rockettes will not be used in every show produced thereafter, and their future remains undetermined.

"We're very excited about it, but we don't know the total picture of our future," said Eileen Collins, an eight-year veteran of the high-kicking corps.

The Rockettes — like all unions at the music hall — have signed contracts that do not stipulate the number of women who will work, or the amount of time they will work, and Miss Collins would only say that she believed "the Rockettes would always be an integral part of the music hall."

Robert F. Jani, producer and chief executive officer of Radio City Music Hall Productions, a new firm that was created to save the financially ailing theater, said that ticket prices will be $7.50 for unreserved seats and $10.50 for reserved seats. That compares with present prices of $5.00 and $6.50.

CREDIT CARDS

More than 60 percent of all Americans now carry credit cards, compared with only half of the total population in 1970, reports Lillian Chenoweth, family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Review Textbooks To Be Available

Copies of books submitted to the Texas Education Agency for possible 1979 state textbook adoption will be available to citizens for review at the Education Service Center, Region XVII, May 15-18 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Sample books will be on file in the ESC library, 1212 14th St., Lubbock.

All major publishers are expected to submit text materials for the Texas adoption in selected secondary school subjects; there are no elementary materials called for in the 1979 adoption. New books may be adopted for a maximum of six years.

Additional information may be obtained from Dr. Woodie Coleman at the Service Center.

Corporate Jets Getting Fancier, Higher-Priced

SAVANNAH, Ga. (UPI) — A new generation of luxury corporate jets will be unveiled in the next few months to meet the demand of executives for planes with intercontinental range, greater speed and plusher interiors.

Three companies have begun production of new models, ranging in price from $7 million to $8 million, in a fight to gain control of the most sophisticated and luxurious segment of the business jet industry.

In contrast, Lockheed-Georgia Co., long a major entry in the field with its four-engine JetStars, has announced it will suspend production — at least temporarily — at the end of the year.

The newest entry is the twin-engine Challenger, built by Canadair Ltd. It is a totally new plane being built in Montreal by a firm owned by the Canadian government. In addition, Gulfstream-American Corp., based in Savannah, is developing an improved Gulfstream III and the Falcon Jet Corp., of Teterboro, N.J., is producing the new Falcon 50.

J.B. Taylor, president of Canadair, said the unique aspect of the Challenger is that it was developed from scratch instead of modifying an existing aircraft. The first Challengers, costing $7 million, are scheduled for delivery next year and will carry 12 to 18 passengers, depending on cabin configuration.

"We brought over 200 corporate pilots in and they made a lot of recommendations," said Taylor. "Many of them were the first ones to order. They sort of felt like they were part of the program.

"It's really the first all-new airplane in the sophisticated category in the last 10 years," he said.

Gulfstream-American, formerly Grumman American, also plans to deliver its first twin-engine Gulfstream IIIs next year with a price tag of $7.4 million for domestic sales and $7.5 million for foreign customers. It will replace the Gulfstream II, which has been in production for 12 years, and will have more speed and better altitude capability and fuel economy. It will carry 14 to 19 passengers.

The first Falcon 50 flew from Chicago to Paris with passengers last September and Tom Turner, director of marketing, said the first deliveries of the three-engine plane, which will carry 10 to 12 passengers, are scheduled later this year at a price of $7.75 million furnished.

"I think the most significant aspect of the plane is that it has three engines," said Turner. "You can have conditions where even with one engine out, you can cross the Atlantic. We feel that the third engine gives more assurance of reliability on crossing long stretches of water or jungle to the executive."

Going against the trend, Lockheed-Georgia of Marietta, Ga., announced it was dropping out of the market to consider "both design improvements and new designs," as well as "renewed production of the present model."

Lockheed JetStar program manager W.B. Bullock said it is too soon to say if production will resume on the JetStar II.

"The thing that made us decide to change is that we weren't selling them like we should," admitted Bullock.

Unlike the other companies, the corporate jet business represents only a small percentage of the Lockheed revenue, with the major product being the huge C-130 transport plane.

The sales competition is keen.

"The customers are so demanding in the areas of service and support and Canadair is taking on all these things at once," said Falcon Jet spokesman Turner. "They've never built a business jet. They are not using an engine that is tried, and they've not built up a service fleet.

"I am positive the Falcon 50 will outperform the Challenger in all areas," he said.

At Canadair, Taylor said, "The way we're looking at it, we've got a whole new airplane in this category. We feel like we should have an active market for the next 10 years because we don't see anything coming along to compete with us."

Gulfstream pushes its experience in the industry. It says owners of the Gulfstream II are now ordering the new model. "We have quite a bit of repeat business," said Charles Vogeley, senior vice president for commercial jet sales. "Everyone that has sold a Gulfstream II has sold it for way more than the acquisition price."

Despite Lockheed's decision, Bullock joined executives of the other companies in optimism for the future of the sophisticated business jet market.

"There are about 3,000 business jets in service in the U.S. of all shapes and sizes," said Bullock. "That has grown very steadily at the rate of 200 airplanes a year. The price is not going up relatively any more than on anything else."

"We had one of the best years last year we've ever had," said Vogeley. "We sold a total of 43 Gulfstreams — 23 Gulfstream IIIs and 20 Gulfstream IIs — by far the biggest year we've ever had."

Vogeley said the business jet "certainly is not a pleasure tool of the chief executive officer as it may have been in the early days of business aviation. It's really got to be a business tool."

"The crowding of the airlines and the difficulty of getting from one spot to another has helped sales," said Turner. "For executives, time is money. Some executives tear themselves apart trying to keep companies viable and the executive jet is one way to utilize his time in a better way."

As for the price, Turner said, "If an executive wants to ride in a cabin of a certain size and fly at a certain speed to save time, he will have to pay the price."

One of the major focal points for future growth is overseas sales.

"There are nine Gulfstreams in Africa," said Vogeley. "The rulers of many African nations have Gulfstream IIs — the Ivory Coast, Uganda, Morocco, Algeria. Basically, they are for transportation for the ministers of the rulers.

"For example, in Saudi Arabia, the king has a (Boeing) 747. The minister of petroleum and other ministers use Gulfstreams."

"There is more wealth being accumulated overseas," said Gulfstream president Allen Paulson. "The petroleum nations are the big buyers of Gulstreams."

Vogeley said Gulfstream once looked upon its potential U.S. customers as the Fortune 500 list of the nation's largest corporations. Now that has expanded to the "Fortune 1000."

"Let's face it," said Paulson. "They are a business tool and no longer a luxury. It just makes people more productive and they make money for the company."

Storm Door Energy Saving Questioned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Department of Energy experts have decided storm doors — often promoted as energy savers, along with storm windows, insulation and other products — really don't save that much fuel.

"We found it just doesn't pay for itself in energy savings alone," says an analyst in the department's residential conservation service program. In other words, the doors, which can cost $100 or more, aren't worth the investment if your only consideratiion is the amount of energy saved over their lifetime.

The analyst added that other factors are not counted in the pure investment versus saving calculation, factors such as cooling in the summer when the glass is replaced by a screen and the protection the doors provide for the wood behind them.

The analysis also does not take into account the storm doors' eligibility for tax credits as energy saving products.

As a result of the DOE calculation, the storm door is rarely mentioned in a new set of proposed regulations the department has issued to implement a law Congress passed last fall.

The law requires the nation's bigger utilities to offer customers surveys of their homes to determine what they can do to save energy. The surveys may suggest such things as caulking and weather stripping, ceiling insulation, water heater insulation and clocks that automatic a l l y raise and lower thermostats.

The proposal is not final and will be the subject of hearings across the country. It lists all 50 states and their climatic zones, along with options the utility company's "energy audit" should check on and suggest to home owners. Only in electrically heated homes in a few northern states are storm or thermal doors recommended.

DOE said it hopes to have the energy survey program going by late next year. Many details, including how much, if anything, the utilities will charge for looking around your home will be decided by the states. Audits are likely to cost about $50 each.

It is possible some companies will charge each customer individually while others may spread the cost around among all their customers.

The energy experts said one helpful part of the proposal requires utility companies that perform the inspections to provide home owners with a list of companies that will do the recommended work. Such firms will have to guarantee their work for three years and meet other installation standards.

DOE officials said that approach should be a little better than diving blind into a search for a tradesman.

The department estimates households will invest a total of $6.7 billion in energy saving measures while the program is in progress and, "in return they will realize an estimated gross savings in energy costs of $30 billion over the life of the measures installed."

Settlement Reached In Uranium Lawsuit

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Virginia Electric & Power Co. and Westinghouse Electric Corp. have announced a tentative settlement in Vepco's uranium supply suit.

Westinghouse said its "total pretax cost ... is estimated at approximately $200 million," but Vepco said it would receive $381 million in cash, uranium and services.

This discrepancy is not unusual, for the dollar cost to Westinghouse does not take into consideration various services that may be required by the utility.

Each side declined further comment, citing a gag order on the details pending approval by the boards of directors of the two companies and by U.S. District Judge Robert R. Merhige Jr. of Richmond.

Energy-Saving Tax Breaks Overestimated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some consumers may have been given overblown if not completely incorrect information in advertising about the tax breaks to be had for buying storm windows, insulation and other energy-saving devices.

As a result the business community has issued guidelines to prevent future misrepresentations.

The Council of Better Business Bureaus says one ad it saw "could easily lead consumers into thinking the government was going to foot the entire bill for installing insulation."

In reality, the law Congress passed last year, and which is effective for several years starting with the tax returns filed this year, allows a tax credit for only a percentage of a consumer's expenditures.

The law allows a tax credit of 15 percent of the first $2,000 spent on energy-saving products, such as insulation and storm windows, with the total credit not to exceed $300. In addition, residential solar power, wind generating facilities or other "renewable energy source" products are eligible for a tax credit of 30 percent of the first $2,000 spent, and 20 percent of the next $8,000 — with the total credit not to exceed $2,200.

Under the council's guidelines, future ads for energy saving residential products, if they address the tax issue, should use the phrase "tax credit" and nothing else.

They should also explain the credit is a percentage of what the consumer will spend; they may not claim that all homeowners are eligible (the provision applies only to the principal residence and not to second homes, vacation houses, etc.); and the products involved must indeed be eligible for the tax credit.

The council's list of products eligible for tax credits:

•Insulation for ceilings, walls, floors roofs, water heaters, etc.

•Exterior storm or thermal windows or doors.

•A furnace replacement burner that reduces fuel usage.

•A device to make flue openings for a heating system more efficient.

•An automatic, energy-saving setback thermostat.

•A meter that displays the cost of energy usage.

•Solar energy equipment (collectors, rock beds, heat exchangers, etc.) that transform sunlight into heat or electricity for heating or cooling a residence or providing hot water.

•Geothermal energy equipment that distributes the natural heat in rocks and water.

•Wind energy equipment that produces energy in any form (generally electricity) for residential purposes.

•Any other item that the secretary of the Treasury specifies by regulation as increasing the energy efficiency of a residence.

Not eligible are carpeting, drapes, wood paneling, exterior siding, heat pumps, wood, peat or hydrogen-fueled residential equipment (such as Franklin stoves); fluorescent replacement lighting systems; equipment using wind energy for transportation; money spent to build a swimming pool that will be used as an energy storing medium; and greenhouses.

New Housing Construction On Comeback

WASHINGTON (AP) — New housing construction rebounded in March from the winter doldrums, with home starts rising 30 percent over the previous month, the government says.

March construction at an annual rate near 1.8 million single family homes and apartments was accompanied by a 20 percent February-to-March increase in the number of building permits issued, the Census Bureau said.

The figures were hailed as good news by the housing industry, but were unlikely to draw raves from government economists, who had been pointing to declining construction figures as an indication that the overheated economy was beginning to cool.

"March is a bounce back from the low levels of January and February," said Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders. "That makes it a fairly normal spring bounce back after a pretty bad winter."

Still, he pointed out, construction starts and permits remain below the level of last spring. "I don't think we are going to see 2 million (starts) this year or for at least another two years," Sumichrast said.

Housing starts surpassed 2 million last year after recovering from low levels during the 1974-75 recession.

The Census Bureau report shows new home construction in March at an annual rate of 1,793,000 units, compared with a revised 1,384,000 for February.

Despite the rebound, the March figure was nearly 11 percent below the 2,011,000 units started in March 1978.

"During the first three months of this year, 327,000 housing units were started, compared with 362,200 units for the same period in 1978, a decrease of 10 percent," the report said.

Permits, a good indicator of future construction, rose 20 percent from an annual rate of 1,321,000 in February to 1,579,000 in March.

Again, the March level was below the 1.9 million permit rate of a year earlier, by about 4 percent.

"During the first three months of this year, 309,400 units were authorized by permits compared with 341,100 units for the same period in 1978," the report said.

Data Offered On Interest Change Plan

NEW YORK (AP) — On May 4, the federal government's banking regulators will begin looking over the comments they request on their plan to give small savers a better deal than they get today.

The plan, which regulators say is still open to changes, would raise interest rates and cut minimum-deposit requirements on some savings accounts. Here are some questions and answers on the proposal and on its meaning for savers, home-buyers and bankers:

Q. What's the object of the rule changes?

A. Home Loan Bank Board Chairman Robert H. McKinney explains the changes will "attempt to give relief to the small saver," who doesn't have $10,000 for a short-term certificate or who can't afford to leave balances on deposit. Insurance Corp. Chairman Irvine H. Sprague said, "it is unconscionable to continue a system wherein a big saver with $100,000 to invest earns interest at a rate twice as great as the small saver with $1,000 or less."

Q. What are the main features of the joint proposal by the Federal Reserve, Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board?

A. Banks and savings and loans now sell six-month certificates with rates based on rates for six-month Treasury bills. The plan also would allow banks to sell five-year certificates of deposit with interest rates 1¼ percentage points under the average rate for U.S. Treasury securities over the previous five years. The minimum purchase for the five-year certificate would be $500, against $10,000 for today's six-month certificate.

The plan also would allow the sale of $500, eight-year-savings certificates wherein the yield would rise over the first five years. For example, such a certificate could pay 6 or 6¼ percent the first year, 6½ or 7 percent during the next 18 months, on up to 8 percent after the fifth year. The certificates could be redeemed without penalty any time after the first year.

All minimum deposit requirements for certificates of less than four years' duration — except for the six-month money market certificates — would be eliminated under the proposal. In addition, banks would be allowed to pay a half-point bonus on specified minimum passbook savings balances held for a year.

Q. Would interest rates at savings institutions retain their edge over commercial bank interest rates under the proposals?

A. Yes, although banks and savings institutions both will be allowed to continue paying up to 8 percent a year on long-term Keogh and individual retirement accounts.

Q. Will these proposals raise the cost of mortgages and other loans?

A. Probably, but how high mortgages will rise will depend on money market conditions and on state ceilings on loan rates. McKinney notes, "there will certainly be an effect on the borrower." Savings institutions, he says, "simply cannot sustain rapid increases in their cost of funds without eventually bringing about in increase in mortgage rates."

Auto Sales Show Early April Dip

DETROIT (AP) Sales of U.S. automakers fell slightly in the first 10 days of April, with only No. 1 General Motors Corp. reporting a gain.

Analysts said it appeared the market might be finally settling down to a slight trailing of last year's exceedingly strong pace. Some buyers also might have been waiting for General Motors Corp.'s new front-wheel drive compacts, which go on sale this week, they said.

Sales of the five domestic manufacturers were estimated at 219,882 for the period, down 5.5 percent from 232,581 in the first part of April last year. The estimate is necessary because American Motors Corp. no longer reports more frequently then once a month.

The Big Three manufacturers reported deliveries of 212,255 cars in the period, 6.7 per cent below last year's 227,511.

GM's total of 138,722 was 1.3 percent above early April of last year, when 136,885 were sold. Ford Motor Co. sold 52,643, down 11 percent from 59,296. Chrysler Corp. sold 20,790, a decrease of 34 percent from last year.

Factory Operations Rebound Slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — After two months of decline, operations in the nation's factories rebounded 0.4 percent in March, the Federal Reserve Board has reported.

The March increase put factory utilization at 86.3 percent, the same level it had been in December before 0.2 percent declines in both January and February, according to figures released Monday by the Fed.

"These (March) advances partly reflected production rebounds from earlier weather effects — particularly in motor vehicles and parts, steel and coal," the Federal Reserve said.

The latest figures include revisions of both January and February statistics, which had shown a 0.3 percent drop in January and no change in February. The January decline had been the first in a year.

The first quarter's 86.1 percent capacity rate was slightly above the fourth-quarter rate of 85.9 percent and last year's average of 84.25 percent.

MORE APARTMENTS

Between 1900 and 1940, only about 20 percent of new housing was built to contain three or more families. Today, apartment buildings account for one-third of all residences, The Conference Board observes.

Differences Aired On Proposed Balanced Budget Amendment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — James Davidson sees his labor of love — getting the U.S. Constitution amended to require a balanced federal budget — as something like releasing the handbrake of a car parked on a hill: "It's going to roll and gather momentum."

Davidson, founder and chairman of the National Taxpayers Union, was a somewhat lonely voice when he began pursuing this goal five years ago — "I had to really flog people to get them to support the notion."

Now 28 states have called for a constitutional convention to write a budget-balancing amendment. Davidson believes the 34 states needed to trigger a convention will be achieved this year, and toward that he is working 16 hours a day.

This momentum is in a sense "inevitable," he told UPI, because federal deficits (which have occurred in all but eight of the years since 1930) are "impoverishing" the American people, and the people are determined to fight back.

"Many of America's economic problems — inflation, instability, low productivity — can be traced to chronic deficit spending by the federal government," the NTU said in a recent newspaper advertisement, adding that deficits have "helped erode the value of the dollar."

As a result of inflation, it said, the average family's real income after taxes and inflation has declined in the last decade.

"What's more, inflation, caused largely by deficit spending, has pushed Americans into higher and higher tax brackets — dramatically increasing the tax burden ..."

In a recent article, Davidson added that a balanced budget would force reduction of government waste and keep federal borrowing from competing with private credit so as to raise interest rates.

Requiring a balanced budget, he said, would "preserve the civic virtues of democracy" because "these cannot be maintained through long-protracted inflation."

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, opposes any flat requirement for a balanced budget.

One trouble, Muskie said in a recent speech, is that "constitutional amendments can't balance the economy."

When unemployment rises only one percentage point, he said, $20 billion automatically is added to the deficit through lost taxes and increased aid to individuals. Muskie said President Gerald Ford pledged a $9 billion deficit for 1975, but in three months a recession forced him to raise his estimate to $35 billion.

President Carter proposes a $29 billion deficit in 1980. But Muskie said a $29 billion spending cut wouldn't balance that budget because the economic effects would reduce tax receipts. It would take a $45 billion cut to balance the 1980 budget, he said, and cost more than a million jobs (Davidson says his proposal would phase in a balanced budget over several years).

Vice President Walter Mondale told a group of mayors the nation had balanced budgets in the 1920s and this "busted millions of farmers, millions of business people and ... put millions of Americans out of work."

Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal says a balanced budget requirement would put economic planners in a "straitjacket."

Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office, said cutting spending or raising taxes to balance a budget during a recession would make the recession worse.

Mandatory Wage-Price Curbs Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — If inflation continues out of control for another six months, the Carter administration could be forced to seek mandatory wage and price controls, says former Federal Reserve chairman Arthur Burns.

"I would not rule out mandatory controls, because I think the administration may be driven in that direction" if none of its other policies work, said Burns, who is now with the American Enterprise Institute, a non-profit economic research organization oriented toward Republican economic thought.

Like President Carter, Burns said he doesn't want controls.

Burns refused to say at a meeting at the institute whether he favors a further tightening of the money supply to drive up interest rates and thus slow the economy. He said it would be improper to give his opinion because it has been only a year since he left the Federal Reserve Board.

But he indicated to reporters he believes such a move might be necessary when he said, "One can fairly say the economy is booming ... the signs of an economic boom are all around us."

Burns expressed particular concern over rising consumer debt. He said there are signs that consumers may be at or near the point where they would prefer to hold goods than money and are spending and borrowing to acquire as many goods as they can.

"Many people seem to be proceeding on the assumption that they can buy today at a bargain price, because goods will be much expensive later on," he said. This, he added, is a "dangerous position" for the country.

Burns and Herbert Stein, former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Richard M. Nixon, were critical of the administration for contending that the recent Teamsters contract settlement was within Carter's 7 percent anti-inflation wage guideline.

"I see no advantage in saying that 10 percent, or more than 10 percent, is equal to 7," said Stein. "The government loses its credibility when it makes pronouncements to that effect."

Burns agreed that "you lose credibility ... it means distrust in government, which is already great, becomes stronger still."

The administration is undergoing an internal debate over whether the independent Federal Reserve Board should be encouraged to push already high interest rates even higher to help control inflation.

Stein said he thinks there should be tighter monetary policies to help restrain inflation, even if it risks a recession next year.

Burns said he thinks the administration should further reduce government spending and try to curb the inflationary pressures resulting from such programs as minimum wage and farm price supports.

Neither man thought the wage-price guidelines would work. Stein wants them junked immediately; Burns thinks the administration might as well try them a little longer.

Scott Paper Denied Price Increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scott Paper Co., which last week was denied an exception to President Carter's voluntary price guidelines, has agreed to reduce some of its prices, the Council on Wage and Price Stability said.

Scott Paper announced in Philadelphia that, after consultation with the council, it will reduce prices for some of its products and modify some planned price increases.

"The council wishes to commend Scott for its support of the president's anti-inflation program," the council said in a statement.

The company decided "for competitive reasons" not to say which products were affected by the pricing decisions, said William E. Fulwider, a Scott spokesman.

Scott Paper was the first U.S. business to be denied an exception from the price guides. Under recently modified rules, companies faced with "uncontrollable costs" can petition the council to use an alternate price standard based on profit margins. The council denied Scott Paper's request for an exception, saying "the company has made no showing that these (cost) increases are greater than the increases for these same inputs incurred during the base period."

Wage-Price Guides Void On New Cars

DETROIT (AP) — Sticker prices on General Motors Corp.'s new 1980 front-wheel drive compact cars will range from 0.7 percent to 17 percent more than the models they replace, GM has announced.

Since they are new products, the Council on Wage and Price Stability ruled that the cars did not fall under the wage-price guidelines of the Carter administration.

Price comparisons are difficult because the new models include as standard some equipment that was optional on the old models.

The cheapest Citation, which replaces the Nova, will list for $3,983, GM said. That's 0.7 percent more than the cheapest Nova, which was $3,955.

The most expensive Buick Skylark will cost $5,327, 17 percent above the most expensive 1979 Skylark at $4,562.

One Wall Street analyst, Richard L. Haydon of Goldman, Sachs & Co., said he thought the prices were "reasonable, considering that they're going up against the Honda Accord at $5,799."

The cars officially go on sale Thursday.

Ditches instead of insecticides are used to fight mosquitoes in some salt marshes. Canals link mosquito-breeding places with tidal creeks so that fish can swim and eat the larvae.

There's only one gift that's as good as gold. Gold.

Economy Increasing Popularity Of Gold

NEW YORK (UPI) — Americans in growing numbers are turning for the first time to the economic hedge traditional in the rest of the world — gold.

Worried by steadily increasing inflation, continuing unrest on international money markets, an energy crisis that shows every sign of worsening, they are taking refuge in the precious commodity which became legal for U.S. citizens Dec. 31, 1974.

Gold is riding a crest of record high prices — in part because of this increased demand from the United States. Each new high attracts new demand as investors rush to prove the investment axiom that a new high is a buy signal, regardless of whether it should be.

Following another maxim — where there's demand someone will fill it — the investment community is ready with gold bullion in all weights and shapes.

During 1978, when the weakening dollar drove Americans by the thousands to buy gold, the demand was largely satisfied in record sales for South African Krugerrands, which contain exactly one ounce of gold, and other gold coins.

The serious gold investor interested in something more substantial than coins but unable to afford the official 400 troy ounce bar, can buy a variety of bars in sizes from one ounce to 100 ounces.

"Every time the price of gold hits a new high and makes the headlines we get dozens of calls," said a spokesman for Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, the nation's largest brokerage, which sells three sizes of gold bars — one kilo (32.15 troy ounces worth at today's prices about $8,000), 100-ounce bars, and the 400 ounce bar, mostly traded between banks and dealers.

Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc., another big national brokerage house, has been selling since December the "Bache gold bar," a 10-ounce bar of bullion that retails for the daily price of gold plus a brokerage premium. The firm reports sales have been "highly satisfactory."

There also is the one-ounce bar from Credit Suisse that is sold by , among others, Deak Perera, the large foreign currency and gold trading firm. Deak also sells kilo bars and 100 ounce bars.

The Bache gold bar, like the bars sold by Merrill Lynch and Deak, can be ordered at any of the firm's offices throughout the country. Bache said one Sunday advertisement in a large city newspaper brought approximately 800 inquiries to its local office.

Merrill Lynch says most customers who buy kilo or 100-ounce bars do not take physical possession of the bars. Bache says up to one-third of its customers want delivery.

If the investor elects not to take delivery when buying gold bars from Merrill Lynch, the gold is stored either in London or in a United States bank depository approved by Commodity Exchange Inc. or the International Monetary Market division of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Deak has similar arrangements either in a Swiss or U.S. bank, or will store either bars or coins in Delaware, which is a tax free state. Bache Halsey has arrangements with a U.S. bank depository.

The buyer receives a negotiable certificate from the bank where the gold is stored.

"It has been our experience that customers are better off taking a certificate or holding the gold in their account," the Merrill Lynch spokesman said.

There are some investors — their reasons usually are either personal or highly emotional — who want gold in their possession. There are some things they should know.

First, and most obvious, is security. While the gold certificates are negotiable, they are much easier to store safely than is gold bullion.

Also, bullion is less liquid than the certificates, mainly because most buyers would ask for an assay if an investor tried to sell privately-held gold other than coins. This costs between $60 and $100 and often takes several days or even weeks.

"Someone brought in 10 100-ounce Engelhard bars this morning to sell and one of the bars had 30 assay holes in the bottom," one New York bullion trader said. "Anyone would be crazy to buy a privately-held bar without asking for an assay, even if it's their own bar."

Robert L. Deak of Deak Perera said that for this reason, "We usually recommend coins for the small investor. Most dealers will buy coins with a visual examination."

No one will say how prevalent counterfeiting of gold bullion is, but it does happen.

One counterfeiting method is to cover a tungsten bar — which has about the same gravity as gold — with a layer of gold and counterfeit the stamp of a large refiner.

About a year ago a swindler made up some brass bars to look like gold, put a phony Credit Suisse stamp on them and tried to sell them. He was arrested and is now serving a life sentence in a Swiss jail.

Gold through centuries of mining has lost none of its intrinsic attraction but another factor in its value is its scarcity.

If all the gold that has been refined in history could be gathered together in one spot, it would equal about one-tenth the mass of the Washington Monument.

From a nondescript building in Brampton, Ont., Johnson Matthey Ltd., the big Canadian refiner, manufacturer and trader, provides gold to the London Gold market, the New York Commodity Exchange, Chicago's Mercantile Exchange and Board of Trade and the Winnipeg Gold Exchange.

Bache Halsey's 10-ounce bars are refined by Johnson Matthey and the process has not changed dramatically through the centuries.

"Way back when, there were about 20 steps in which a variety of chemicals were used to break down the base metals one by one to get fine gold," the Johnson Matthey spokesman said. "The only difference today is that it takes two steps because we have chemicals that can take out five or six base metals in one step."

The highest quality bar used in trading today is 99.99 percent pure gold. For spectographic analysis, used as a yardstick to determine the purity of bars, gold has been refined as pure as 99.9999 percent.
