China military shows support for Li

BEIJING (AP) — The struggle for China heated up today with official reports of widespread military support for Premier Li Peng, whose attempt to crush the pro-democracy movement has led to mass demonstrations demanding his ouster.

But Li faced new opposition within the policy-making Politburo Standing Committee and from China's best-known author, who joined the multitudes opposing the conservative premier.

Foreign Minister Qian Qichen said a Politburo meeting would be called Thursday or Friday.

Also today, China informed Western television stations it was cutting off satellite transmissions as of midnight, ending their ability to broadcast from China.

Li declared martial law in Beijing on Saturday, ordering troops to restore order in the city where more than 1 million people have rallied in support of a student campaign for a freer China and an end to official corruption.

The student protests have galvanized the nation, inspiring the largest spontaneous movement in Communist China's 40 years.

Soldiers were deployed on Beijing's outskirts today but did not move on tens of thousands of student protesters, now on their 12th day of a sit-in at central Tiananmen Square.

Over the weekend, throngs of city residents erected street barricades to prevent an army advance, stalling convoys. Hundreds of thousands of protesters also took to the streets in dozens of other cities. All reportedly called for Li's ouster.

Subway and bus service resumed in Beijing and traffic appeared near normal today.

Although the army's inability to enforce martial law has called into doubt its willingness to follow Li's orders, the official Xinhua News Agency said six of seven military regions supported the decision to call troops to Beijing. Only the Beijing military command was not mentioned.

Liberation Army Daily, the military newspaper, today published a letter from army headquarters urging soldiers sent to enforce martial law to "fully understand the nature of this struggle."

MISD trustees weigh appraisal board expansion

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Meeting with Midland Memorial Hospital representatives Tuesday, Midland school board members said they feared allowing an expansion of a county appraisal board could disrupt its pristine track record.

MMH district board President Gene Abbott told Midland Independent School District trustees that the hospital district deserved representation on the Midland Central Appraisal District board.

Abbott said the five-member appraisal board, three of whom are elected by MISD and one each from the county and city, should be expanded to either seven or 13 members so the hospital district would have representation.

"There's no reason for the hospital to have a problem with what has transpired in the past and what will transpire in the future," Abbott said of the appraisal board. "All we want is somebody sitting on the board. We felt like this was prudent management."

Trustee George Staley, however, said adding more members could adversely affect a board that the Texas Research League recently ranked ninth in the state in how closely it sets appraised market value of property. Texas has 254 appraisal districts.

"If you increase the number of members on the board, you also have a chance to increase the inefficiency," Staley said. "I personally think the five-member board is an easier thing to handle."

Among its duties, the appraisal board sets policy for the appraisal district, hires its chief appraiser and appoints an appraisal review board to hear protest cases.

The number of board seats a taxing entity has depends on how much money its taxing district levies, with MISD securing a majority of positions because it collects the largest percentage of taxes.

■ Teachers' groups ask for pay hike — 1B

A 1981 state law allows only school districts, cities and counties to elect board members, while "special" taxing jurisdictions, such as MMH and Midland College, aren't guaranteed representation.

To expand the board at least three of the four voting entities, which also includes Greenwood Independent School District, must approve the expansion, which can be invalidated if the opposing entity would lose voting entitlement, according to the Texas Property Tax Code. GISD, because of its lower tax levy, hasn't had enough votes to put a representative on the appraisal board.

Chief Appraiser Ron Stegall, who attended Tuesday's meeting, pointed out that the state property code states that an expansion is not valid "if it expands the types of taxing units that are entitled to vote on appointment of board members."

"The special districts flat do not have the right to vote for an appraisal district board member," Stegall said. "The only people that can change it is the Legislature itself."

But attorney Ted Kerr, representing MMH, said he interprets the code to mean that the change would only be invalid if the expansion was made as a "political ploy" and deprived an entity of voting power.

Ethics committee discusses charges against Wright

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ethics committee met today to take a "fresh look" at its charges against House Speaker Jim Wright, but the panel's chairman said he didn't know whether any minds were changed by arguments advanced a day earlier by Wright's lawyer.

There was no word on when a vote would come in the committee, which was meeting privately, in contrast to Tuesday's nationally televised session.

Wright personally proclaimed his innocence Tuesday night. At the same time, he spoke about the possibility of losing his job, telling reporters that if he became politically crippled he "wouldn't want to be speaker."

Some of Wright's fellow Democrats have said that the speaker should give up his leadership post if he unable to clear his name swiftly on charges he engaged in financial dealings that violated House rules.

Rep. Julian Dixon, D-Calif., the ethics committee chairman, told reporters this morning as the closed-door meeting began that members would take "a fresh look" at the charges it brought against the speaker, in the wake of arguments presented at the hearing Tuesday.

"I don't know if any minds were changes yesterday," Dixon said. He also declined to predict when the committee might rule on Wright's motions to dismiss charges against him.

The two most serious groups of allegations contend that the Texas Democrat used bulk sales of his book repeatedly to evade rules limiting outside income and that he improperly took gifts from a developer friend who had a direct interest in legislation.

Wright has discussed the possibility of resigning before he raised the issue Tuesday night, but his latest comments came with his situation at an especially critical point.

■ Fort Worth still behind Wright — 3B

Pressure is mounting on his Democratic colleagues, who are torn between loyalty to the speaker and concern that his political troubles may be unresolvable.

"The political pressure is so intense that until this matter is resolved the House of Representatives is paralyzed," said Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M.

The ethics panel, in its rare televised session Tuesday, heard arguments from lawyers representing the speaker and from the team of investigators whose report led to 69 allegations that Wright violated House rules.

The speaker's lawyer, Stephen Susman, argued that the committee was stretching House rules in charging the speaker. Special outside counsel Richard J. Phelan countered that ethics should not be judged on narrow legalisms.

Susman said today on ABC's "Good Morning America" he believes Wright can prevail "if he gets his day in court, if he can get on the witness stand and put Mrs. Wright on the witness stand to testify what she did to earn her keep.

"Whether he's politically a dead man or not I don't know," Susman said, but added that he sensed a "feeling in Congress and the American public that 'wait a second, we're going a little too fast here. Maybe we shouldn't be putting Jim Wright on this railroad.'"

Survey finds many people overweight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly two-thirds of Americans are too fat, and more than a third are at least 10 percent over the recommended weights for their height, body build and sex, a nationwide health survey shows.

The study, done for Prevention Magazine, determined that 64 percent of adults age 25 and over could stand to lose at least a few pounds.

But fewer than half of those people were trying to shed the extra pounds when polled in November, the study by Louis Harris and Associates says.

The percentage of overweight Americans is the highest since the magazine began keeping track in 1983, and is up from 59 percent in 1987 and 1986, 62 percent in 1985, 56 percent in 1984 and 58 percent in the first year of the survey.

More than a third of Americans are at least 10 percent over the weight recommended for their height, body build and sex by the Metropolitan Life Insurance tables used by many doctors, the survey found.

Lawmen disagree with Newsweek's drug war poll

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Law officers reacted cooly to a just-released Newsweek poll that reports just over half of Americans think local agencies are doing all they can to stop drugs.

The poll, conducted for Newsweek by the Gallup Organization and published in this week's issue, reported only 55 percent of citizens surveyed nationwide think police agencies are doing a good job in the fight against narcotics trafficking.

Thirty-six percent responded "no" when asked the question "Do you think the police are working as hard as they can to combat drugs?" according to the poll.

"I think that is a typical thought that is shared by many people," Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said. "They do not know what's going on. The public does now know what it takes to make a good case, to take it into court so that a judge will accept it.

"Our problem is not getting it to the grand jury," the sheriff continued. Our judicial system in my thinking has gone past the point of right and wrong. It is now about technicalities. It doesn't matter if the man is innocent or guilty."

Midland Police Chief Richard Czech said he disliked the way the question was asked; he said the lack of "yes" responses was not surprising.

"I think the public understands that we are understaffed, and that we can't put all the resources we would like to into fighting narcotics," Czech said.

Painter — who said he was not talking about specific cases in Midland but "generally" — blasted "technicalities" in the law.

"There have been cases kicked out of court because of things like improper wording on indictments, or improper jury instructions. To me those are minor things that do not deal with the guilt or innocence of the individual."

MISD, ECISD students do better than average on TEAMS test

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

■ Related graphic — 2A

Midland and Odessa seventh- and ninth-graders beat the Texas average on mastery of a math, reading and writing skills test, while the two school districts' third- and fifth-graders came in both above and slightly below the state average in the three subject areas.

Midland Independent School District seventh- and ninth-graders edged the state in math and reading on the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills but were well above average in writing. Compared to the state, grades seven and nine in Ector County Independent School District stood out in writing and math on TEAMS, administered in February.

MISD third- and fifth-graders outmastered the state in math but fell just short in reading and writing. In ECISD, only third-graders showed lower mastery than the state, scoring at or slightly below average in math and reading but above average in writing.

Larry Lusby, MISD executive director of computer and special services, said it was the first time since TEAMS was first administered in 1986 that district third-graders fell below the state average on a section.

"Our instructional development staff is taking the appropriate steps to determine why we were below average and what steps to take to improve next year," Lusby said.

Third-grade mastery dropped from 94 percent last year to 93 percent in math, 86 percent to 82 percent in reading and 82 percent to 78 percent in writing.

Lusby said this year's fifth-, seventh- and ninth-graders did about the same against the state compared with past years.

BOARD

Margaret Cowden, an appraisal board director, assured MMH and MISD representatives that the appraisal board and its district try to make decisions in the best interest of all Midland County taxing authorities.

"I would like to be very complimentary about the way the appraisal district is run," Ms. Cowden said. "There's nothing done in a political manner."

MISD board President James Fuller questioned why an expansion is needed if the appraisal board is running fairly and effectively.

"I've heard the terms 'efficient' and 'cooperative' many times," Fuller said of the appraisal board. "I'm not sure why we should tinker with something that's working in that way."

Fuller said trustees and MISD officials would continue discussing the proposal in coming weeks.

POLL

Midland's police spokesman gave a familiar answer to a question about the first poll response.

"I hate to keep throwing this out because it is the same rhetoric," Cpl. Jim White said. "Police are doing a good job...but they (drug offenders) aren't spending anytime in jail" because of chronic overcrowding in the state prison system.

Pollsters by telephone interviewed a national sample of 602 adults on May 17 and 18, and according to the magazine the poll has a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

Respondents to the poll also were asked "If more money is spent to fight crime, what should it go for?"

Forty-four percent answered to more drug treatment programs and social services, and only 28 percent urged more money be spent to hire more police. More prisons were the answer of 17 percent, while 4 percent recommended more judges.

Painter laughed out loud at the 44 percent recommendation.

"I would not put them (drug treatment programs) as high on the list as the survey has," the sheriff said. "Being in law enforcement, I feel we need more penitentiaries. I agree we need drug treatment, but that only works if they want it. There are so many people who you offer a program to, and they don't want it. That's why the recidivism rate in the state prison system is 85 percent."

The hiring of more police should be a higher priority than is reflected in the poll, Czech said.

"I would think that more police should be a little higher," he said. Referring to the recommendation for more drug treatment programs, he said "Apparently they feel we should treat the symptoms rather than the disease."

Said White: "I think there is a need for public education, but to stop this tide, we are going to have to have more officers."

The final question of the poll was "Would you be willing to pay extra taxes for a larger police force in your community or not?"

Sixty-one percent responded "yes," with only 35 percent responding "no," according to the poll.

"And I would think here that number would be even higher," Czech said. "I have talked to the people here, and they have said they want more protection and are willing to pay for it."

Painter agreed.

"I feel like the majority of people don't mind paying for the service."

White said he was "happy" with response to the third question.

"It makes me happy in that people see the need for a better, better-trained police department."

Despite his criticism of the poll, the sheriff said he was not sorry to be part of the system.

"Our judicial system is the best one in the world," Painter said. "I wouldn't want to trade it for anything. I just feel some improvements could be made."

HEALTH

Only about one-fifth weigh about what they should, and they are more likely to be "people in the East and West, suburban residents, people in their 30's and 40's, college graduates," the magazine said.

Slightly more women than men are the proper weight — 22 percent compared with 20 percent — and gender aside, only 29 percent of people making more than $50,000 a year are appropriately trim, the survey said.

Overall, it found that people 65 and older are more likely to take preventive health measures than those under 35.

Among the findings:

■ 48 percent said they try to avoid high-cholesterol foods, up 6 percentage points from 1987.

■ 36 percent said they exercise strenuously, sustaining an accelerated heart and pulse rate for at least 20 minutes, at least three days a week. That proportion has remained stable over the past five years.

■ 63 percent reported that they feel under great stress at least once a week, up from 55 percent in 1983. Stress is reported more frequently by those in the lowest and highest income brackets, the survey found.

■ Americans are continuing to kick the cigarette habit, with the percentage of smokers declining to 26 percent, down from 30 percent in 1983.

■ The rate of heavy drinkers — 11 percent — has changed little since 1983, but the proportion of adults who say they never consume alcohol rose 5 points over the period to 39 percent.

SCORES

"We hope to maintain those averages in years to come," Lusby said. "That's what we expect in this district."

At the state level on this year's TEAMS, third-grade mastery was 92 percent in math, 86 percent in reading and 79 percent in writing.

For fifth grade it was 89 percent in math, 85 percent in reading and 84 percent in writing.

Seventh-graders showed 91 percent math mastery, 86 percent in reading and 79 percent in writing.

Ninth-graders had 83 percent pass the math, 86 percent the reading and 69 percent the writing.

Overall mastery of all three sections was 72 percent for third grade, 74 percent for fifth, 72 percent for seventh and 62 percent for ninth. Last year, third-grade mastery was 69 percent, fifth grade's was 72 percent, seventh grade's was 73 percent and for ninth grade, 58 percent.

In MISD, 71 percent of third-graders, 74 percent of fifth-graders, 77 percent of seventh-graders and 74 percent of ninth-graders passed all three TEAMS sections. Overall passing percentages in ECISD were unavailable.

ECISD Superintendent Hugh Hayes said his administrators three years ago set a goal of 85 percent TEAMS mastery on each section and at every grade level taking the test.

The district has met the goal in all areas except seventh-grade writing, which saw 83 percent mastery this year.

"We did all right," Hayes said of the scores, especially in writing at all grade levels. "Every area throughout the curriculum is involved in writing. We're well above the state average and we feel pretty good about that."

CHINA

The letter said "the turmoil created by an extremely small number of people still has not been quelled. If their scheme succeeds, then the 10 years of hard struggle for reform and the work of establishing of modernizing socialism will be destroyed in a moment."

On Monday, however, more than 100 senior army officers signed a letter seeking an end to martial law, suggesting a deep split in the military.

Two government sources said today that Hu Qili, one of five members in the policy-making Politburo Standing Committee, had thrown his support to the relatively liberal Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang, who is battling Li.

Hu is in charge of the state-run press. On Tuesday, some official reports criticized Li's attempts to carry out martial law.

Reports circulated that Zhao — who had urged conciliation with the students — had offered to resign rather than order troops into Beijing.

In the first indication of Zhao's status in days, the foreign minister told diplomats Tuesday that Zhao had returned to work.

Early today, Xinhua mentioned Zhao for the first time since before the martial law order and referred to him as party general secretary.

Wan Li, president of the National People's Congress, cut short a U.S. visit Tuesday after meeting with President Bush. U.S. officials said Wan, who has praised the students for their patriotic fervor, was expected to call an emergency meeting of the legislature and press for Li's ouster.

In Shanghai, author Ba Jin, the chairman of the Chinese Writers' Association, was one of 500 intellectuals and high-ranking party members to sign a letter blasting the speech Li made Friday that signaled the start of a crackdown.

The letter also told the party to end press censorship and bring its struggle into the open.

"For 40 years now the party has made a series of major mistakes because life inside the party is not normal," the letter said. "We must open the party to the supervision of the people."

The student movement started April 15 following the death of ousted Communist Party chief Hu Yaobang, a favorite with intellectuals.

Students initially called for a freer society and press and an end to official corruption, but after martial law was ordered they demanded that senior leaders resign.

WRIGHT

Normally, dismissal motions such as Wright's are a routine part of a case. However, House Democrats have grown increasingly uncomfortable with the speaker's situation and some have suggested that he must turn things around now or he should step down.

"He needs a victory. That's clear. Only by succeeding on one of the charges can House members and the public take another look at the entire case," said Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., a member of Wright's defense team.

Lawmakers will be reading the committee's decision like tea leaves to determine the speaker's future.

Susman said he might consider a 6-6 tie within the committee on one of the charges as a victory. That would not dismiss a charge, but it could mean there is no majority within the committee for moving it to the next step in its process — a trial-like disciplinary hearing where Wright himself might testify.

If the committee held that hearing, it would then make a report to the full House, possibly recommending punishment.

Rep. Jim Slattery of Kansas, a possible gubernatorial candidate who has come under attack from Republicans who portray him as a Wright ally, issued a statement Tuesday seeking to distance himself from the troubled speaker.

"If the speaker is not exonerated by the ethics panel and if the ethics committee concludes that Speaker Wright has violated House rules, then I think he should resign."

During Tuesday's hearing, members of the committee discussed the political angst that's come from their work.

Rep. Charles Pashayan of California, a Republican member, said he was "disheartened" that some lawmakers were prejudging the case.

"It is the duty of Jim Wright as a member of Congress ... to come before this committee and present himself," he said, promising to take a "fresh look" before rendering a verdict.

The speaker did not attend the arguments but his wife Betty did.

Wright spoke to reporters briefly as he left the Capitol, and said he was optimistic.

"I think we clearly had the better side of the legal argument," he said, accusing Phelan of "distorting facts."

Asked whether he believed he could survive as speaker, he said, "That remains to be seen...If I can't be not just a respectable speaker, but an effective speaker, then I wouldn't want to be speaker."

Bush meets with Chinese legislator

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, in his first direct contact with a Chinese leader since the advent of student demonstrations, called on Beijing to stop jamming Voice of America radio and refrain from violence against protesters.

Bush, who met Tuesday in the Oval Office with Wan Li, president of China's National People's Congress, also expressed his commitment to strong U.S.-China relations, and the two discussed the recent Soviet-Sino summit, according to a White House statement.

Wan then cut short his U.S. trip to rush home to a nation that has been in turmoil since pro-democracy demonstrations spurred thousands of students to rally in the streets of Beijing. U.S. officials said they expected him to push for the ouster of Premier Li Peng.

The Bush administration expects Wan to call a meeting of the People's Congress, China's legislature, which has the authority to impose or revoke martial law, said one U.S. official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The White House statement quoted Bush as telling Wan that the United States is committed to democratic movements and urging Beijing not to employ violence.

Democracy, said Bush, "is the underpinning of our being as a nation. I urge non-violence and restraint in your present situation."

He also complained about Beijing's recent jamming of frequencies used by the U.S.-sponsored Voice of America to broadcast Mandarin-language programming into China.

"I urge that Voice of America not be jammed, and that reporters be given open access," Bush was quoted as saying.

Demonstrators listened to VOA to keep informed during the five weeks of demonstrations. The jamming, which began Monday, was the first since before Sino-U.S. relations were restored in 1979.

The Chinese also temporarily blocked U.S. news organizations from transmitting their broadcasts from China, but lifted that ban Tuesday.

Bush told Wan that "he remains personally committed to expanding the normal and constructive relations the United States enjoys with China," according to the White House statement.

"The world has a stake in China's economic progress, national security, and political vitality."

Former national guard members still feel threatened outside prison

By DORALISA PILARTE

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — For many of the 1,894 former national guardsmen released two months ago after nearly a decade in prison their dreamed-about freedom has turned into a nightmare.

Most of the men are from poor families and joined the guard as a way to make a living. They say now they are jobless, harassed by militant Sandinistas and fear for their lives.

They are reviled by a society that remembers the torture, murders, rapes and beatings committed by troopers of the national guard — both the military service and the secret police under the right-wing regime of President Anastasio Somoza.

Sandinista guerrillas led the civil war that ousted Somoza in July 1979.

Even people defending the ex-guardsmen's rights have been vilified.

"There's a whole social drama surrounding these 1,800 people," says Lino Hernandez, director of the Permanent Commission on Human Rights that is supported by international organizations. "The government has left them on the street and they are in an extremely difficult situation.

"In about 80 percent of the cases their families have disintegrated. The wives have found new 'husbands'; those who had houses now find they were confiscated.

"The only clothes they have are the pants and shirt the International Red Cross gave them. They're starting from zero.

"And they feel that if this negotiating process collapses they could find themselves behind bars again."

The negotiating process is the attempt by Nicaragua's Sandinista government and its Central American neighbors to find a durable peace for the region.

Before the guardsmen were released March 17, President Daniel Ortega asked Nicaraguans for understanding, saying the mass pardon came under commitments he made with four other Central American presidents in peace agreements.

But Ortega also promised the "people's wrath in its full force" should the guardsmen stray.

"We ourselves were repressed by the national guard," Hernandez said. "I was in prison in 1977 and 1978, and I was beaten up by guardsmen. I caught the name of one who beat me: Gomez. But how many Gomezes are there?

"Back then they called us communists because we defended the rights of Sandinistas. Now the Sandinistas call us reactionary because we defend the rights of guardsmen."

Hernandez said about 60 percent of the former guardsmen want to leave Nicaragua.

"There is still a lot of resentment," said Vilma Nunez de Escorcia, head of the National Commission for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights, a government-funded group.

"A lady about 50 or 60 years old came up to me the other day and said: 'If I see the guardsman who murdered my son, I'll kill him even if it means spending the rest of my life in jail.' "

Mrs. Escorcia is a lawyer who represented Sandinistas in Somoza's courts and she said she was jailed and tortured four months before the Sandinistas gained power.

"I don't have a single criterion for the guardsmen," she said. "You find every kind of person among them."

Some guardsmen say they were threatened in the days before they were freed.

"We were taken out of our cells at about one in the morning to a state security office," said Luis Jacinto Camacho Valverde.

"They told us that if we became involved in politics we'd end up in jail, or the hospital or the cemetery."

Several other former guardsmen told similar stories.

Camacho said he was a private for eight years in the national guard and was seized by the Sandinistas on July 22, 1979, in his hometown of Leon north of Managua.

He shares a room with two other freed guardsmen in a shabby hotel and seldom goes out except to try to obtain the documents he needs to leave Nicaragua.

Camacho carries with him a photocopy of the pardon each guardsman was given upon release.

He said he keeps the original pardon "in a safe place.

"If they (state security) catch you in the street they ask for your identification and then tear it up in your face. This is the only piece of paper I have."

The International Red Cross paid for his room and meals for the first two weeks and then representatives of a political party arrived one day, he said. There were about 25 former guardsmen in the hotel and the political group offered the guardsmen help if they signed up with the party. That help ended in three weeks without explanation, Camacho said.

The other guardsmen have left and only Camacho and his two roommates remain.

Cards, letters to ailing Pepper flood hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — On a wall of his cluttered office hangs the faded letter that Claude Denson Pepper wrote, before leaving for work one July morning in 1978, to his wife of 43 years as she lay dying of cancer.

"Dearest Mildred," it said. "You have not awakened...I pray for the early time when we can go together as we have done for so long...I love you with all my heart."

Claude Pepper, 88, never old enough nor lonely enough to quit, has waited for more than a decade for that time, though it may finally be at hand. As he lies seriously ill at Walter Reed Army Hospital, the love letters are flooding in from a nation.

"Perk up," says one card scrawled by a shaky hand. "You work so hard, you're probably just exhausted."

Many of the well-wishers are Americans 65 and older, including George Bush, who recently paid a bedside visit. To senior America, the withered, dog-faced congressman from Florida is a peerless hero, an ever-alert guardian of the fastest growing and, in his view, the most commonly mistreated segment of the population.

The oldest member of Congress and chairman of the House Rules Committee, Pepper is known both as Mr. Social Security and Mr. Medicaid, for his efforts to establish and strengthen both programs. And thanks to him, federal law now bans employers from forcing workers to retire before age 70.

His own advice to the older set was to "keep on doing what you're doing," but maybe at a slower pace.

"I was playing golf one day," he said a few years back, "when I noticed my partner's clubs were lighter than mine. I found I could handle them easier. So I changed to less weighty clubs.

"So that's what you do in life," he said. "When you come to a time when there's a need for any sort of change, simply lighten your clubs and go right ahead."

Despite heart surgery in 1976, despite relying on a pacemaker since 1982, despite dismal hearing and vision — he wears a hearing aid in each ear and thick, horn-rimmed trifocals over his blue-gray eyes — he hasn't lightened that much of his load. Though emotionally numbed for more than a year by the death of his wife, Pepper charged back in the 1980s, keeping long office hours and gallivanting around the country to push his own social legislation in the face of Ronald Reagan's budget cuts.

"I've got a lot to do," he said. "Except for my terrible burden of loneliness, I enjoy life. It has always been good to me."

His legislative achievements, spanning full careers in both the Senate and House, are legend, reaching far beyond his concern for the elderly. He fought for the first minimum wage, 25 cents an hour, in 1938. His first bill, that same year, extended federal assistance to handicapped children. He was among the first members of Congress to support equal rights and equal pay for women.

Born in 1900 in rural Alabama, Pepper remains a pre-eminent eyewitness to America's turbulent journey through the 20th century. He was 5 years old, in 1905, when he first saw an automobile. He witnessed the celestial passing of Halley's Comet in 1910, and again in 1986. He met Orville Wright, and greeted the Apollo 11 crew on their return to Earth.

He stared Adolf Hitler down in a Nuremberg beer hall, sized up Joseph Stalin at the Kremlin, and earned Winston Churchill's undying affection for casting the only vote in the Senate for the Lend-Lease Act the first time around.

It has long annoyed Pepper that some of the younger generation presume to think that he champions the elderly because he is old himself. He was 28 years old and a member of the Florida legislature when he introduced a bill waiving fishing license fees for senior citizens. He was in his 30s when he took up Franklin Delano Roosevelt's crusade for Social Security.

One of his first bills, in 1937, created the National Cancer Institute, the first of several government centers to explore cures for diseases that especially afflict the elderly.

He was 36 when he was elected to the Senate, where he remained for 14 years until his defeat in 1950 by fellow Democrat George Smathers in an extremely bitter election. After an interim and lucrative 12-year period in private law practice, Pepper has now spent 26 years in the House.

Board blames Aloha Airline for accident

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators blame Aloha Airlines for an accident that ripped open an airliner fuselage 24,000 feet over Hawaii but they say lax inspection of aging 737s was an "industry-wide deficiency."

The National Transportation Safety Board, ending a 13-month investigation Tuesday, blamed the accident on failure of island-hopping Aloha's maintenance program to detect broken bonds and fatigue damage in the Boeing 737's outer skin.

The board voted 4-1 to lay primary blame on the airline and said Federal Aviation Administration failures contributed to the April 28, 1988, accident that hurled the plane's chief flight attendant out of the airliner to her death. With one engine out and its passenger section exposed to the sky, the plane landed on the island of Maui with 89 passengers and five other crew members.

The independent safety board said the FAA failed to issue sufficient orders to correct problems with the aging 737 fleet and didn't adequately monitor Aloha's maintenance program before the incident.

Aloha's president, A. Maurice Myers, took exception to the board's conclusion, saying multiple cracking found around rivets in the fuselage skin was undetectable prior to the accident. He said the airline had followed all Boeing and FAA safety orders.

Myers said the accident was Aloha's first in four decades, and the airline has voluntarily scrapped three old 737s and decreased the average age of its fleet from 15 years to 10. The average age of U.S. airliners approaches 13 years.

Metallurgist James Wildey points to a photo of an Aloha Airlines Boeing 737 in which the roof ripped away in flight over the Hawaiian Islands last year, during a National Transportation Safety Board hearing in Washington on Tuesday.

The board said Aloha's maintenance program failed to detect disbonding and fatigue in fuselage skin joints, including numerous cracks around rivets that hold fuselage pieces together.

The 19-year-old airliner had been flying between 12 and 18 flights a day in Hawaii's warm, humid climate, investigators said. But the board noted that similar fatigue problems were found as early as 1974 in other 737s, resulting in service orders from Boeing and FAA directives.

The board indicated that many airlines were not making required inspections.

"Reports of fleet-wide cracks received by the FAA after the Aloha Airlines accident indicate that a similar lack of critical attention to lap joint inspection and fatigue cracks detection was an industry-wide deficiency," it said.

The FAA cited the Aloha accident last week when it issued broad orders for mandatory replacements on aging Boeing 727s, 737s and 747s. Previously, the FAA generally required replacements only if regular inspections detected excessive wear.

Safety board member Jim Burnett called for an examination into new FAA orders that are based on proposals from an aviation industry task force.

"I have sensed generally that the FAA is moving in a competent manner in tying to deal with the aging aircraft problem," Burnett said. "But I'm always suspicious of (FAA orders) that are drafted by the industry, and we need to take a good careful look at them."

Board member Joseph Nall dissented from the board's vote on a "probable cause" for the accident. He proposed wording that would not have laid primary blame on the airline, saying the fact that cracks went undetected was "a system problem" involving the industry, the government and the carrier.

The board rejected a conclusion proposed by its staff that would have sharply criticized the cockpit crew of Aloha Flight 243 for procedures used in landing the heavily damaged plane. Staff investigators said the speed of the landing threatened to split apart the plane.

Board members said they would include cautions about such landing conditions in the full report to be released in several weeks, but wanted to include balancing comment about the heroics of the pilots and flight attendants.

The NTSB has no authority to impose penalties and can only make recommendations to government agencies, transportation companies and others.

Radiation may kill cancer inside body

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Nuclear-tipped antibodies that seek and destroy cancer inside the body show promise of giving doctors a new way to attack tumors, researchers say.

The goal is to blitz cancer cells with huge doses of killer radiation. Doctors launch the attack with protein probes that hunt down the cancer deep within the body.

In initial experimental use, researchers found that the strategy wiped out all detectable cancer in people who were not helped by ordinary treatment. However, far more study will be necessary before researchers know for sure whether this approach will cure cancer.

The findings were presented Tuesday by Dr. Oliver W. Press of the University of Washington to the annual meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology.

Press is one of several researchers around the country who are working with radioactive antibodies to combat cancer. However, he said his group is using the highest doses of radiation yet tried.

"We're trying to blast them out of the water," he said.

Antibodies are natural hunters produced by the body to find germs, cancer and other dangerous invaders. Scientists can now produce large quantities of antibodies that look for cancer, and they have fitted them with powerful warheads of radioactive iodine.

With this strategy, doctors believe they can deliver far higher doses of radiation than would otherwise be possible and still spare healthy tissue from harm.

Press and colleagues have given the treatment to seven people with the blood cancer lymphoma. All had failed an average of four kinds of chemotherapy. The treatment wiped out all visible signs of the cancer in five of them.

"The percentage of patients responding is much greater than we would expect from conventional chemotherapy," said Dr. Bruce Cheson of the National Cancer Institute.

WHAT SITS OUT BACK, RUNS SUMMER AND WINTER, AND SAVES YOU MONEY?

A HEAT PUMP COOLS, HEATS AND SAVES.

Replace your old air conditioner with a new electric heat pump. It's a high efficiency air conditioner in summer. In winter, it's your most energy efficient heating system, especially when the temperature is above 32°.

TEXAS IS HEAT PUMP TERRITORY.

A HEAT PUMP CAN SAVE $130 A YEAR.

Compared to a gas furnace, a heat pump is more energy efficient. And TU Electric's low rates make heating and cooling your home with a heat pump an even better value. Tests have shown you can save $130 or more a year by installing a heat pump.*

You can find out more about the amazing heat pump, including details on rebates, from your local heat pump dealer.

Cat's meow gives smugglers pause at main Tokyo airport

TOKYO (NYT) — Alerted by the sound of a cat's meow, a customs inspector at Tokyo's main international airport thwarted an attempt last month by two Japanese to smuggle endangered species of wild cats and apes into the country.

The incident came to light last week when prosecutors filed charges against Takeshi Shirowa, 20, an animal dealer who has appeared frequently on national TV, and Nobuyuki Yamazaki, 34. The two men were charged with violating Japan's Customs Law.

The case marks the first time anyone has been arrested in Japan for smuggling live mammals into the country. Japan has been harshly criticized by some wildlife groups for not enforcing an international convention that prohibits trafficking in endangered species.

The two men are accused of attempting to smuggle nine young leopards and two whitehanded gibbons into Japan on a flight from Bangkok April 6. The animals were found in the false bottoms of two wooden boxes filled with live bats, police said.

Customs officials said the animals were apparently drugged to prevent them from making noise that would lead to their detection, but that one of the leopards awakened and tipped off the customs inspector with its meows.

FAA's directives worth high cost

Stringent new airworthiness requirements mandated recently by the Federal Aviation Administration will involve the airline industry in repairs costing hundreds of millions of dollars. But that price tag is not too much to ensure greater safety and peace of mind for passengers flying on the nation's aging fleet of commercial jetliners.

Substantial modifications must be made on 115 older Boeing 727, 737 and 747 airliners at a cost of $142 million. And 2,200 U.S. aircraft of all makes will be drawn into the program eventually. Repairs or replacement of sections of the airliners would be required after 20 years of use, or after a certain number of flights — 60,000 flights for 727s, 75,000 for 737s and 20,000 for 747s.

The directives indicate a fundamental change in the FAA's methods of determining airworthiness and constitute an implicit admission that the agency has been wrong to rely for safety on inspections and maintenance alone. The new philosophy calls for numerous modifications to wings, doors, tail assemblies, landing gears, fuselages and landing struts after a certain amount of use, whether or not they show signs of corrosion or metal fatigue.

Unfortunately, it took a series of accidents to shake the FAA and the airline industry out of their complacent conviction that inspection and maintenance could keep planes airworthy indefinitely.

The turning point came when an Aloha Airlines 737 lost a 20-foot section of its cabin walls and roof while flying near Hawaii during April last year. A flight attendant was killed and 61 passengers were injured. That aircraft was 19 years old and had completed 88,000 flights.

More disasters of a similar nature followed, including the tragic deaths last February of nine passengers who were sucked out of a United Airlines Boeing 747 when a large section of the outer skin and the cargo-bay door ripped away in flight, also near Hawaii. That aircraft was 18 years old.

The airline industry, pre-empting action by Congress and the FAA, swiftly formed a task force to study the problem of aging aircraft. That committee's recommendations have been incorporated almost in toto in the FAA's new directives, which will become final in September. Other studies of McDonnell Douglas and foreign-made aircraft are currently being carried out.

Considering that about 40 percent of the world's 7,800 airliners are already more than 20 years old, the directives come not a moment too soon. The new airworthiness philosophy represents an overdue and reassuring elevation in air-safety standards.

Bush's dumping of Koop big mistake

WASHINGTON — C. Everett Koop, the most popular surgeon general in U.S. history, was pushed ungraciously out the door by a president and Cabinet secretary who didn't want him around any more.

Jack Anderson

President Bush and Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan didn't have the backbone to ask Koop to leave. They simply gave him the silent treatment until his own self-respect forced him to resign.

In his final months in office, Koop was denied access to the executive dining room at the Health and Human Services Department. And last month he was not invited to the department's two-day retreat for senior executives. Bush's chief of staff, John Sununu, refused to return Koop's phone calls. Similarly, Sullivan did not respond when Koop asked permission to have his top assistant kept on.

Bush, the master of the thank-you note, apparently missed the rest of the course on social graces. If the president didn't want Koop around, he could have invited him to the White House, asked for his advice and then told him there was no new job for him. Instead, Koop waited and watched the insults mount.

Koop's curt letter of resignation to Bush earlier this month covered a mountain of hurt. His colleagues told our associate Jim Lynch that Koop had been fuming for years over the snubs he has endured.

Reagan loyalists didn't like him because he wouldn't toe the party line if he didn't agree with it. "Koop had the concept of some higher loyalty," said a high-level HHS official who worked closely with him.

First a surgeon, Koop never bothered to master politics. "He was used to giving orders in an operating room," explained one HHS official. "When he said, 'Jump,' everyone used to jump." In Washington, when Koop said "Jump," he was told to put it in a memo.

Koop's career was a paradox. He won the respect of the public and Congress, but he didn't fit into the Reagan inner circle, and that hurt his feelings. A former HHS chief of staff recalled that Koop came into his office one day in 1985 and shed tears of frustration. Then-HHS Secretary Margaret Heckler wouldn't give him more staffers to work on the AIDS issue and wouldn't invite him to senior staff meetings.

A variety of sources told us Heckler didn't like Koop because he upstaged her in the press. The fussy Heckler thought the bearded doctor "looked weird. She considered him an oddball," said one former Heckler confidant.

Koop flourished under Heckler's successor, the mellow Otis Bowen, who didn't care how much publicity Koop got.

During the presidential campaign, Koop urged Bush to speak out about AIDS. One Koop colleague told us Koop thought it was cowardly of Bush to duck the subject, and that the word may have gotten back that Koop "thought Bush was a wimp" on the issue.

Other sources told us that the new ego on the block, Sullivan, didn't want Koop to steal the spotlight. Sullivan also knew that Koop wanted the Cabinet post for himself.

Bush weighed the liability of having a surgeon general who talks candidly about condoms and hypodermic needles. Less than two weeks before Bush's inauguration, Koop told Reagan that he could not produce a report on the emotional and physical consequences of abortion. Koop is an outspoken opponent of abortion, but he couldn't find the facts to reach conclusions Reagan wanted. On the abortion issue, Koop made it clear he was the nation's doctor, not the nation's chaplain.

As of July 13, he will be neither, and Bush will be free to appoint someone with a blander bedside manner.

Footnote: After Koop resigned, Bush sent him a thank-you note.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Iran's Speaker of the Parliament Hashemi Rafsanjani misspoke himself recently when he said Palestinians should kill five Westerners for every dead Palestinian. It turns out Rafsanjani was misunderstood. What he really meant to say was that Iranians really hate terrorism and violence. We can understand the confusion, what with the language barrier and all. Rafsanjani will understand that when we say he should be dipped naked in Prince William Sound, what we really mean is that we would love to have him visit our country.

Don't resort to force

The temptation to use force to remove this plague upon the Panamanian people (Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega) is extremely great. However, before the U.S. administration succumbs to this temptation, a closer inspection of the situation must be made. The potential danger to the Americans residing in Panama and to American prestige in the region requires that such an action be taken only as a last resort. Just as a doctor would choose to use a non-surgical means to cure a malady if one is available, we must utilize restraint to rid ourselves of this cancer.

Nonetheless, as it is evident that the current situation is untenable, steps must be taken. First, in order to send a clear and equivocal message to Noriega and the rest of Latin America, an increased military presence is warranted. It is necessary to demonstrate that we intend to back up our rhetoric.

Second, as a means to repair the damage caused by the economic sanctions to which the United States has subjected the Panamanian people, Congress should authorize the payment of a significant amount of humanitarian aid, payable to the recently "elected" government upon the ouster of Noriega. In addition to the shot in the arm to Panama's beleaguered economy, this step would serve to give Noriega a graceful exit by becoming a "martyr" for the benefit of Panama as a whole. Such a step may also serve as a tempting carrot to those junior officers of the PDF who are not so enmeshed in Noriega's organization to take the situation into their own hands and remove him. Finally, this may also show the other Latin American countries that the U.S. will take responsibility for its actions.

Third, the U.S. must continue to request input from other Latin American countries regarding possible solutions. At one time the U.S. sponsored a "School of the Americas" for the military of other O.A.S. nations in the Canal Zone. This entity is now located elsewhere. Perhaps maneuvers by this group at Ft. Sherman in Panama would be called for in the near future.

The United States does not have a pat hand. Decisive action must be taken immediately. The longer Noriega remains, the more difficult he will be to remove and the more the Panamanian people will suffer.

Story was uplifting

I can't help but congratulate the Midland Reporter-Telegram for publishing the article about Joe Ukrop, the small businessman in Richmond, Va. that appeared in the May 14 edition. We read articles such as this primarily in Christian literature, but seeing this article in our own local newspaper simply delighted my heart.

From the very start of Mr. Ukrop's business, it is noticed that he was a Christian man because he closed his store on Sunday, not only so his family could worship in church but also to give his employees the same privilege. He was also showing his Christian attitude by treating his employees as friends. Also, not selling alcoholic beverages goes along with his Christian values.

There was never a conflict between family values and running the company business. When growing up, Joe Ukrop's sons, Bobby and James, went to Sunday School and church. The boys say they knew what the "Golden Rule" was, but they never heard it related to the business but saw it reflected in the business. So actions speak louder than words. Full-time and part-time workers are encouraged to memorize a list of the store's "corporate values" and to recite them publicly, which rewards them with their name on the "Values Honor Roll," and a Ukrop's lapel pin.

This man who believes "the personal touch" is the best way to grow in the business world, also believes in sharing with others and charitable organizations. He gives 10% of his profits to charity. The last two years they have donated more than $1 million to non-profit groups that get 2% of the sales receipts they collect. Ukrop believes giving to charities is "the way it should be."

Thank you, Midland Reporter-Telegram, for giving us this wonderful uplifting story.

Old slogans too dangerous for new scene

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Some important but subtle changes are going on behind spectacular developments in international affairs. Whatever happens in China now — repression, upheaval, or piecemeal accommodation — history has taken another spin.

Flora Lewis

Mikhail Gorbachev achieved Moscow's longstanding aim of "normalization" with China. But he won't soon forget the massive demonstrations, which his trip to Beijing gave students a chance to develop with minimum government interference, nor the aftermath, whatever that turns out to be.

It is bound to affect his ideas on how to go ahead "opening" the Soviet Union, despite great differences in the two societies.

Memories of the Cultural Revolution no doubt shaped the extraordinary discipline and restraint of Chinese youth, whose counterparts wreaked such vast devastation on their country just one generation ago.

Still, those who hold the levers of power were frightened by sheer numbers into reasserting control. Reform is the hardest task of power.

The ordeal of Communist leaders trying to worm their countries out of self-devised distress is enormous. Le Monde of Paris portrayed it neatly the other day in a cartoon showing Gorbachev and Deng Xiaoping trapped in a closed hammer-and-sickle-shaped maze. The caption was: "Maybe together we can find a way out."

There are good reasons to accept eager assurances from Beijing and Moscow that their formal reconciliation is not aimed against the U.S.

Both desperately want American and Western involvement in reviving their economies. They also look to the U.S. to keep some global stability while they attend to troubles at home.

This is where the subtleties come in. Neither shows any interest in trying to push the U.S. military out of Asia, where, as a New York Times editorial put it, American forces are keeping the peace between two Koreas and averting the possibility of renewed Japanese militarism.

Despite the old polemics, something similar is happening in Europe. In a peculiar way, the overseas American military establishment set up to counter Communist expansion is being converted into a guarantor of the World War II victory.

The vanquished are leading economic powers now, and it is U.S. military presence that keeps their resurgence from overwhelming postwar security arrangements.

An eminent international group, mostly physicists, has been meeting here in the second Niels Bohr Symposium on the grandiose theme of "Global Issues in an Open World: From Confrontation to Cooperation."

These stars of hard science tend to be wishy on politics, but quickly realized they're not so sure what "open" means.

Verification helps, but it is far short of full opening, one noted. Another pointed out there was little secret about the ambitions of Hitler and Japan's militarists in the 1930s, but information wasn't enough to prevent war. It would have taken our willingness to face reality.

In Europe, the big issue is once again "the German question," but it doesn't mean what it used to. The murkiness comes partly because the Germans themselves aren't sure what they want, partly because old taboos make it so hard for them to be open about the choices.

The urge to consolidate and strengthen the European Community is intense, and it is moving forward. Britain's Margaret Thatcher won't be able to prevent the decisive move to monetary unity if Bonn makes up its mind to push for it.

But at this stage in history, that would pull against the urge to bring Eastern Europe much closer to the West and re-establish a special German role in the middle of the continent.

Shifts in the French view reflect the new dilemma. Since de Gaulle, Paris and Washington have been tugging Bonn in opposite directions to assure the greater influence. But now Paris is moving around to help Washington keep the Federal Republic firmly anchored in the West.

Reunification of Germany, or even the emergence of a formally disunited Germany as the central pole of attraction in Europe, is no more in French than in Soviet interests. U.S. troops help prevent that.

The Berlin wall is the most potent symbol of how much opening is available and desired as the world transforms itself. Theo Sommer, respected editor of Die Zeit, was asked at the Bohr Symposium whether West Germans really want the wall dismantled and what the consequences would be.

"Not until East Germany is fully liberalized," he answered. "Then people would stay where they are. If they pull it down too soon, we'd have to build one in the West." He said it jokingly, but it is what most West Germans would say if they had the courage.

There needs to be some new openness, new candor in the West as well if we are to deal reasonably with contradictory new trends. The old slogans are dangerously confusing.

ART BUCHWALD

How about a date, Baby? In court, that is!

It was in all the papers. A young woman in Palm Beach, Fla., named Tomontra Mangrum was stood up by her 17-year-old date who had promised to take her to the high school prom. Tomontra did what any jilted young woman would do — she filed a lawsuit to recoup the cost of her new shoes, her hairdo plus the flowers for her hair.

Art Buchwald

Wait, there is more... The defendant, Marlon Shadd, says that he had fractured his ankle and had informed Miss Mangrum a week before that he would not be able to take her to the dance.

It must be obvious to anyone reading this that the only way this dispute can be resolved is to turn it over to the lawyers.

Something about this story was familiar. My mind went back to my youth when the situation was very different from the one we have now. Those were the Roosevelt years when many more men than women were stood up. I can remember at least 10 — no, make it 12 — occasions when I arrived at a young woman's door only to be informed by her father that she had already left for the evening.

In those days, corsages did not grow on trees — nor did tickets to the Paramount Theater on Broadway. We're talking about five bucks for the entire package, but they were 1940 dollars, worth about $100,000 today.

Yet, no matter how cruel the rejection, the last thing I would have done in that distant time and place would have been to sue the girl who wasn't there. The fact is I respected her for seeing through me, and for giving me a lower opinion of myself than I had ever had before.

It just wasn't in teen-agers to seek out a lawyer's help to resolve our lovers' quarrels. Most of us didn't even know a lawyer, which is more than can be said for the affluent kids of today, who usually have one attorney living on either side of them.

Instead of taking our case to court, we suffered — sometimes for weeks and, if it was serious enough, even a month. We wove fantasies in which we went off to join the Navy, came back in uniform and then refused to dance with the girl who had broken our heart. We never wanted monetary satisfaction — we only wanted the one who had wronged us to weep tears and beg forgiveness.

Those of us who grew up in the '40s, '50s and even '60s did not wish for a black-robed judge to mete out justice against the person who had stood us up. We dealt with our sorrow alone.

So back to Miss Mangrum who, I am sure, is quite lovely. Yet, according to Marlon, she suffers from a communication problem. The reason that her suit has today's parents unnerved is that young people are breaking dates all the time, and if they're going to be dragged into court for it, they'll never get their homework done.

In one of the newspapers, I read that Marlon's mother offered to compensate Tomontra for her expenses, but Tomontra's mother refused, saying that Marlon had to be taught a lesson.

What kind of lesson could Marlon possibly be taught, you may be wondering? He claims that he gave Tomontra notice and therefore he is not responsible for Miss Mangrum being left standing in the hall in her prom dress. I know that there are many people who say Tomontra has no case, but that's the kind lawyers like best.

All over America teen-agers are awaiting the outcome. The price of suing may be very high. The terrible thing is that if Miss Mangrum wins the $50, she will never know if the boys who ask her out are inviting her for herself or because of her money.

Mother jailed for two years in custody battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is slowly being drawn into a custody battle so bitter that a prominent plastic surgeon has been in jail for almost two years on contempt charges after refusing to turn over her child for a court-ordered visit with dad.

"Every time I read about this case I see everyone wash his hands of it," Rep. Frank Wolf, R-Va., said Tuesday in urging passage of legislation that would free Dr. Elizabeth Morgan from her District of Columbia jail cell.

"If we don't act now, who will? This has been stalemated for 21 months," Wolf told a House subcommittee with jurisdiction over the nation's capital.

Wolf made his appeal on the eve of the latest round of court arguments in the 3-year-old case. A city appeals court panel has scheduled a hearing for today on whether Morgan, who has been jailed since August 1987, should remain behind bars.

Morgan accuses her former husband, oral surgeon Eric Foretich, of sexually abusing their 6-year-old daughter Hilary. Morgan was jailed on contempt charges for refusing to disclose where she hid the girl rather than allow her near her father.

Foretich vigorously denies ever molesting his daughter.

In an attempt to break the legal deadlock, he offered during an interview outside the committee hearing room Tuesday to submit to interviews with social workers and psychiatrists who would determine whether he was fit to be with Hilary.

Congressional involvement and Foretich's renewed effort at compromise are only the latest twists in the protracted dispute over the child.

Normally, the 11-member House District of Columbia Committee concerns itself with the city's schools, budget and police department, much like a city council in many American cities.

But in this case, Wolf is trying to propel the panel, and the entire Congress, into what amounts to a private quarrel between parents.

Wolf's bill seeks to limit imprisonment for civil contempt charges to 18 months. After that, the district would be required to either file criminal contempt charges against a person in Morgan's position, thus guaranteeing a trial, or dismiss the case.

The bill would be made retroactive for 18 months so as to apply to Morgan.

Similar laws limiting civil contempt jailings are in effect in Wisconsin and California.

"In this case, coercion has clearly proven to be ineffective," Rep. Stan Parris, R-Va., said at the hearing. "At what point do we realize that this lady is really serious about this?"

Woman in good spirits after emerging from cave

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — A human guinea pig says she made friends with mice and learned some English during her 130 days in an underground cave to help researchers study the effects of isolation.

Stefania Follini of Ancona, Italy, smiled and waved at reporters and well-wishers as she emerged Tuesday afternoon from Lost Cave, ending an experiment that began on Jan. 13.

Would she do it again?

"Sure," said the 27-year-old interior decorator, who volunteered for the experiment.

Miss Follini, who lost 17 pounds during her solitude and now weighs 90 pounds, appeared healthy and happy as she answered questions from reporters.

Although she had no contact with humans, except through computers, Miss Follini said she didn't feel lonely during the experiment and adopted two cave mice as pets. She named them Giuseppe and Nicoleta.

"There was some difficulty in communicating with the mice," she said through an interpreter. "But I was always right."

The experiment was designed to resemble interplanetary travel. The University of Ancona in Italy, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and several U.S. universities took part in the experiment.

Miss Follini's only contact with the outside world was through computer terminals linked between her 10-foot-square plastic-enclosed underground habitat and the researchers' house trailer above the cave.

She had no clocks, her menstrual cycle stopped, and she lost track of how many days had passed. When she was told Monday the experiment was almost over, she thought she had been in the cave about 80 days. She tended to sleep about 10 hours and stay awake 20 to 25 hours.

Three video cameras and microphones monitored Miss Follini constantly. Only the bathroom was out of sight of cameras. She said she didn't mind the lack of privacy.

"I rarely thought about it," she said. "Sometimes I felt it was a strong presence, but generally I was not bothered by that."

When Miss Follini climbed out of the cave into the midday sun, she appeared disoriented for a few seconds. But she quickly donned sunglasses handed to her, then grinned and waved at the 60 onlookers.

At the news conference, she said she thinks her isolation will make her more thoughtful, outgoing and decisive. And she said her outlook has improved.

"I consider myself more important," she said. "I love myself more and consequently I can love people and the world more."

Scientists plan to examine her intensively during the next few months to find out if her isolation affected her mentally and physically.

For example, project coordinator Maurizio Montalbini — who spent 210 days in a cave two years ago — believes the isolation will help Miss Follini's concentration. A NASA-affiliated research team at the University of Texas Medical School in Houston plans to test that Monday by monitoring Miss Follini's brain waves while she solves computer-generated problems.

Other scientists will be drawing blood and checking her immune system, bones, muscles and coordination. Some believe her immune system was suppressed, her bones lost calcium and her muscles weakened.

But Montalbini said he thinks Miss Follini might surprise researchers. He said she kept her strength and flexibility by doing calisthenics and judo and maintained her poise by keeping busy by reading and decorating her living area.

The researchers chose Lost Cave because it maintains a constant climate of 74 degrees and 99 percent humidity and is relatively close to Houston, home to NASA and many researchers.

Before the experiment began, Miss Follini said she was taking English textbooks with her and would answer questions in English. She did understand simple questions and was able to answer in short English phrases, but she didn't master the language in 130 days.

"When she was down there, she had English and Spanish books to learn," said translator Rita Fraschini. "But the English one was difficult and boring, so she switched to the Spanish one, which was funny."

South Texas woman cares for abandoned, injured creatures

CLUTE, Texas (AP) — Connie Brugman has a way with a little orphan. Even though its eyes have not yet opened, it instantly responds to her reassuring voice and offer of food.

Mrs. Brugman, 30, may not be this tiny raccoon's real mother, but she's the only chance for survival he has. Mrs. Brugman is a wildlife rehabilitator who cares for orphaned, abandoned and injured creatures that would otherwise perish.

As spring breezes gently rustle the leaves of stately oaks outside Mrs. Brugman's Brazoria-area home, she coaxes a baby raccoon to drink a special milk substitute from a miniature baby bottle.

"This time of year is orphan time; the rest of the year, it's injuries," she says.

Mrs. Brugman, who has a state permit, has been a volunteer rehabilitator for nearly two years. She hopes that people who find orphaned or injured wildlife will immediately contact the Brazoria County Sheriff's Office for referral to a certified "rehabber."

"Unfortunately, a lot of people either don't look for help or they want to raise one of these animals themselves, and they don't quite know what they're doing," Mrs. Brugman says. "When they finally bring it here, it's just about to die, and by then it's too late to save them."

The baby raccoon is not Mrs. Brugman's only boarder. Several silvery, baby opossums are nestled in a box.

Somewhat older than the raccoon, the possums squirm and nudge one another as Mrs. Brugman cups them in her hands. One takes time to hiss at a stranger. And, in true possum form, another hangs by its tail from Mrs. Brugman's finger.

While they are infants, the possums and raccoon live in their boxes inside the home Mrs. Brugman shares with her husband, Rod. Nearby, another small box holds a baby pileated woodpecker named — what else — Woody.

Woody rat-a-tats a rhythmic chatter as Mrs. Brugman gingerly lifts him from his cozy cardboard nest. She will care for him until he is old enough to fly.

"We've got a 12-foot-long dog kennel where I test-fly them to be sure they know how to fly," she says. "You also have to make sure they're familiar with what food they're going to be eating in the wild, so they'll recognize food when they see it."

That process varies from animal to animal, ranging anywhere from one week to several months. Mrs. Brugman recently kept one baby owl that was "just a tad short of flying" only a week and a half before it took off for the wild blue yonder.

How, exactly, does a human teach a winged creature to fly?

"Sometimes you have to coax them into it," says Mrs. Brugman, who introduces flying lessons by perching birds on a branch in one end of the kennel.

"If they're used to me, I stand on the other end and they automatically want to come to me so they kind of bail off," she explains. "Once they get the feeling, it's pretty much instinct.

"But they're like anyone else they're pretty much chicken to jump off that first time, too."

Fascinated by the whirring of a camera motor and the gleam of its lens, Woody who sits on the kitchen table stills his persistent clattering and cocks his head sideways.

The thrill of a new encounter in the human world wears thin, however, and before long he issues forth a big yawn and crawls into Mrs. Brugman's hand. For all practical purposes, she is his mother.

Mrs. Brugman lightly strokes his crimson crown, and frets about his sparsely-feathered appearance.

"The babies don't have a lot of feathers," she notes. With each orphan comes research for Mrs. Brugman, who relies on books for pertinent information about raising her charges. She also calls upon Brazoria veterinarian Kathy Dickerson for additional help, especially where injuries are concerned.

"You see hawks and owls hit by cars frequently in the winter because they're hustling for food," she says. Mrs. Brugman explains that car headlights illuminate the path of flying insects. The birds instinctively swoop to catch the bugs and are subsequently struck by the car.

Mrs. Brugman has cared for injured animals and birds of all sorts, including seagulls and a deer that was entangled in a fence. After the deer died, Mrs. Brugman found out that it also had been shot. Death came from massive internal bleeding.

One discerning buzzard who took up residence at the Brugman home couldn't fly at all. Dubbed "Buzz," he still managed to hop by each night for supper and even got in the habit of waiting on the front steps.

Mrs. Brugman laughs about Buzz's eating habits. It seemed he only wanted fresh meat, not the spoiled stuff his sort is supposed to thrive on.

"And he loved leftovers, too," she adds.

As he rests in Mrs. Brugman's hand, Woody closes his eyes. His tiny head droops and his pointy beak comes to rest on the table top.

Woody is a "meat-eater" a fact Mrs. Brugman must ascertain before proceeding with a course of nourishment. Ironic as it seems, his infant formula is cat food. Birds who are seed-eaters are treated to baby cereal.

"Until I can get him big enough to eat bugs, I do not want to chew up bugs for him," she jokes. "So I give him cat food until he's big enough to eat whole bugs.

Like most mothers of newborns, Mrs. Brugman's nights are interrupted by hungry cries for food. The feeding process, especially for the little birds, can be painstakingly slow. But it is gratifying work.

"The reward comes when you turn them loose and see them go back into the wild," she says.

"Some are familiar with people, although that's really not the point," she continues. "But when you raise a bird like this until it is full grown and it is accustomed to people, some of them will let you know when they see you.

"We've released hawks and owls that have come back and swooped around and visited. After a while they go back and they forget all about people."

Teacher groups seeking pay hikes

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Three Midland teacher organizations asked school board members Tuesday for 5 percent and 8 percent salary hikes and improved benefits, including a "sick-leave bank."

Margaret Leonard, a Santa Rita Elementary School teacher representing the Midland Educators Association, asked Midland Independent School District officials to grant an 8 percent, across-the-board raise for teachers and support personnel.

"Teachers in Midland are fortunate to receive a salary above the state base," Ms. Leonard said. "But these recent salary increases are not enough to keep certified teachers in Midland or attract new teachers. There is little incentive to stay."

Ms. Leonard pointed out that a teacher with 10 years of experience makes only $2,500 more a year than a starting teacher.

Among other requests, the association also asked for MISD to create a sick-leave bank, where personnel can donate extra sick days. If an employee suffers a catastrophic illness and runs out of sick days, then he could withdraw extra days from the bank.

Ms. Leonard also asked administrators to set aside one day per semester for parent-teacher conferences at all grade levels.

Gilberto Garcia, a Goddard Junior High School math teacher and an association representative, asked for a long-term study to determine the number of dropouts. The study would follow a class from kindergarten through high school.

Garcia also requested for the district to start a tutorial program, whose tutors would be either retired teachers or those who need a second income.

The Midland Federation of Teachers and the Classroom Teachers of Midland had a more moderate proposal, which included a 5 percent salary hike.

Sam Manning, a Lee High School teacher representing both groups, also requested the creation of a sick-leave bank. In addition, he asked the district to allow a "discretionary day," which an employee could use for personal business. The day would not fall around a holiday or during an inservice training day, he said.

Superintendent Joe Baressi said — because state funding for next year has not been set — it would be difficult to predict what kind of raise MISD could give.

A bill which passed the House and is being studied by a Senate committee would force all Texas school districts to raise teacher salaries by $1,140, straining MISD's budget.

"There needs to be a considerable effort on the part of the taxpayers," Baressi said.

In other action, trustees on first reading unanimously passed a boundary change proposal affecting 300 pupils in five elementary schools.

Larry Lusby, executive director of computer and special services, said the zone shifts are needed to relieve overcrowding at Houston and Travis elementary schools, reduce the number of schools receiving rural pupils from south of Interstate 20 and create less fragmented boundaries in the rural areas.

Under the proposal, 34 Long Elementary School special education children would be moved to Henderson Elementary School. At a Monday boundary change hearing at Burnet Elementary School, parents and teachers complained that moving the special education would disrupt their education.

Keri Knowles, a Long special education teacher, told trustees Tuesday her pupils' transition to Henderson could be made easier if in-service training was given to other Henderson teachers, so they would know how to instruct the children when placed in mainstream curriculums.

Ms. Knowles then asked that a refrigerator and stove, used to teach the children life skills, be in place when school begins.

Baressi said he would honor the requests.

Trustees also approved a 10-cent hike in lunch prices for elementary and secondary schools, bringing elementary lunch to $1.10 and secondary lunch to $1.20. It was the first meal price increase since 1984.

Before heading into the meat of board agenda, trustees elected officers among themselves. But the results left the seats unchanged, with James Fuller remaining as board president, Ken Morrison as vice president and Ken Marks as secretary.

Jury deliberations continue in suit over 'junk' cement

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A six-woman, one-man federal jury was still weighing six days' worth of evidence and arguments late this morning in the suit brought by Wagner & Brown against Dow Chemical Co. and Dowell Schlumberger Inc.

Opposing lawyers clashed Tuesday over Wagner & Brown's use of the term "junk" cement to mean that the product sold them was inferior in quality.

Attorneys for Midland, Mich.-based Dow and Houston-based DSI disputed the charges in closing arguments at the end the trial, which began more that a week ago in U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton's court.

In his instructions to the jury, Bunton laid out 14 questions which the seven-member panel must unanimously agree upon to reach a verdict.

A decision could come as early as today.

In filing suit, Wagner & Brown alleged that Dow and DSI had "cheated" the firm on oil-well services by doing inferior work and using inferior materials in acidizing, fracturing and cementing work on Wagner & Brown wells between 1979-86.

The plaintiffs maintained during the week-long trial that Dow and DSI's use of "blow-down" or "returned" cement in cementing projects caused casing leaks in 13 of 18 Conger (Penn) Field oil wells.

But Dow and DSI attorneys brought in witnesses to testify that the casing leaks occurring on Wagner & Brown wells were caused by a combination of lost circulation and the oil company's failure to order sufficient volumes of cement to fully seal off the corrosive zone.

Expert witnesses for both the plaintiff and defendants agreed that the corrosive zone in the Sterling County field — the site of the litigation wells — is located between 2,000 and 3,000 feet.

In closing arguments, plaintiff's attorney William White of Houston described Wagner & Brown as a "good customer whose confidence was betrayed."

He said there is no legal authority for the proposition that someone can misrepresent the product being delivered and give someone a defective product, exposing the customer to a high risk of loss, and then be relieved from all legal responsibility.

White pleaded with the jury to ask, "Why, if it was such good cement, didn't they tell us what they were really selling us?"

On the other side, Dow and DSI attorney Martin Bierne argued with White's assertions that "junk" cement is "junk."

"Junk cement is not junk," said Bierne. "It's cement that's been returned from a job. It's cement that's never been used; never been opened. It's not junk."

Another member of the Dow and DSI legal team, Blake Tarrt of Dallas, offered that there "never has been and never will be any evidence" to show that DSI caused the casing leaks to Wagner & Brown's wells by their use of "returned" cement.

Instead, he alleged that Wagner & Brown "didn't want to spend the money" to mitigate their losses with the use of "centralizing" tools.

"They didn't use them in the corrosive area and they didn't use them even though their expert, Dr. (Preston) Moore, suggested in his textbook that they do it every 60 feet up the casing," Tarrt said.

Midlander Stephen Henderson conducts an impromtu press conference Tuesday as he continues his protest against a police policy that allows officers to photograph citizens walking in "high crime areas."

Complaints spur police probe of field investigation policies

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Midland police have yet to determine whether policy was broken when a 15-year-old boy's photograph was taken and kept on file during the investigation of a car burglary near Lee High School.

News of the internal investigation came on the same day a Midland man made his second appearance at a City Council meeting to complain about the police department's procedure known as a field investigation.

Photographs of three Hispanic youths were snapped with a Polaroid camera several months ago by a policeman, who told them he was investigating a car burglary nearby, one of them explained Tuesday. The trio and another friend were walking in the vicinity of Lee High School around midnight on a Friday night.

A fourth Anglo youth was not photographed by police, the youth said. All were taken to the police department until their parents' retrieved them around 2 a.m.

Internal Affairs Sgt. John Irby said today the department is investigating the taking of the juveniles' photographs because the action usually is "not policy."

However, the procedure is deemed constitutional if "the officer has reason to believe the photograph of a child taken into custody will assist in the identification of the offender," Irby explained.

Cpl. Jim White said today the police department may ask Attorney General Jim Mattox for an opinion.

Stephen Henderson, the 31-year-old Midland man who was photographed by police during a field investigation last April, interrupted the City Council meeting Tuesday to protest the omission of one of the youth's mother from the agenda.

The mother believed she was to appear before the council to question the procedure, Henderson explained.

City Manager Fred Poe responded that the woman was inadvertently omitted, and Mayor Carroll Thomas invited her to return in two weeks.

Some 20 parents who claimed their children had been photographed during field investigations and the president of the Midland Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People also were in attendance Tuesday.

Henderson is waging his battle with hopes of eradicating certain elements of the field investigation process, he explained Tuesday.

He doesn't think people should be photographed.

"I was there because again I want the public to realize this thing is widespread through Midland," said Henderson, an employee at a local cinema.

The field investigation policy arbitrarily and incorrectly alludes to "high crime area" and "reasonable cause," Henderson charges.

"How am I to know what a high crime area is when I am walking around?" he questioned.

Billy Ashley, president of the local NAACP chapter, said Tuesday the photography process is "causing a lineup to occur before the crime."

"There are some things that either enhance our city or cause it to decline," said Ashley, at council Tuesday to lend support to Henderson. "I'd like to see the whole policy stopped ... if you're a law abiding citizen, why put them in a lineup?"

The police department's internal investigation will continue into June, Irby said.

City Attorney David Reagan is also investigating the constitutionality of all field investigations, he said Tuesday.

Construction got under way Monday on a new traffic signal that should ease congestion at the intersections of Air Park Road and Corporate Drive with North Big Spring Road.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

New signal expected to lighten traffic on North Big Spring

From Staff Reports

When drivers on Air Park Road get impatient, traffic conditions on North Big Spring Road can get dangerous, a city traffic technician said.

To mitigate that situation, a new traffic signal is being installed at the north Midland intersection.

A "fully actuated" signal should be operational at the intersection of Big Spring Road and Air Park Road (Corporate Drive to the east) by the beginning of June, said Gary Saunders, city of Midland traffic technician.

The light also will have left turn signals, Saunders said.

Late in 1988, city planners opted to install the light. Studies showed that traffic on the two east-west thoroughfares were heavy at rush hours.

But traffic is also heavy during rush hours on Big Spring Road, so drivers from the auxiliary thoroughfares back up, Saunders explained.

"There will be loop detectors in the street, which is wiring embedded in the pavement," the technician said.

"As soon as there's a 'window' available, somebody on Air Park Road can go."

House, Senate far apart on school financing bills, with little time left

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Public school equity bills fall as much as $100 million short of the amount set aside in the state budget, state education officials told House and Senate conferees Tuesday.

The conference committee on school equity got the bad news Tuesday as it started comparing the House and Senate versions of school finance bills with just a week left in the regular session.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, conference committee chairman and author of the Senate bill, said the committee has a tough job as it tries to cut spending to $450 million while keeping the focus of the plan, which was to pump more money into poor school districts and avoid court intervention.

"Both bills spend more money than is left for education under the general appropriation bill," Parker said.

School district	Current formula	Senate version	House version
Midland	$4,079	$4,998	$5,913
Ector	3,906	7,677	8,008
Greenwood	289	501	549

Figures are in thousands of dollars

The conference committee also must decide whether to mandate a teacher pay raise, whether the state can help school districts build new classrooms and whether the state should require districts to raise local revenues before they receive more state aid.

The Senate plan was supposed to spend $500 million as part of a six-year $2.5 billion plan to bring equity to public schools, but the Texas Education Agency found it would require $527 million for the first two years, and the plan would put the state on track to increase spending by $5.4 billion over six years.

The House plan was supposed to spend $488 million, but the agency found it actually would require $550.8 million in the first two years of a six-year, $1.7 billion plan.

AIDS legislation passes House by compromise

By RICK BROWN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Authors of embattled AIDS legislation were able to put aside differences to fashion a compromise Tuesday that the House approved unanimously on a preliminary vote.

However, a state policy on acquired immune deficiency syndrome may see a further setback if Senate sponsors stand by anti-discrimination language that their version contains but the House did not include.

House sponsors on May 19 had retreated in disarray after presenting one version but halting debate when they failed to strike a compromise on two key issues.

But sponsors hailed the measure after approval Tuesday as "progressive."

"I don't know of a state that's doing this much," said Rep. Mike McKinney, D-Centerville.

Houston convention bureau head resigns

HOUSTON (AP) — The leader of the city's convention bureau who has been criticized for remarks he made about minorities said it was in the best interest of the city that he resign.

Don Vaughn, who has been under fire from Mayor Kathy Whitmire and various minority leaders and groups, including the NAACP, resigned Tuesday as president and chief executive officer of the Greater Houston Convention & Visitors Bureau.

"I think it's in the best interest of Houston in order to move forward both on the local and state level, and I believe that any further divisiveness in the community would not be helpful to Houston and the convention industry," Vaughn said in resigning his $145,000-a-year job.

Last month, Vaughn told state Rep. Steve Wolens, R-Dallas, that he didn't want black and Hispanic council members reviewing his annual budget because they would not understand it.

Vaughn made his remarks while he and Wolens were discussing a bill by Wolens that would give city and county governments more scrutiny over convention bureau budgets.

Vaughn has since apologized to local NAACP members.

Furthermore, Dow and DSI attorney Sawnie McEntire, in an attempt to impeach the plaintiff's evidence, submitted various filings with the Texas Railroad Commission suggesting that if Wagner & Brown had used a "centralizing" or "DV" tool at 3,200 feet, the wells would have no potential for causing leaks.

But White — referring to Moore's expert testimony — reiterated the point that "blow-down" cement would be of a type that set more slowly — if at all — in a zone with corrosive waters located between the bottom of the surface casing — 2,000 feet deep — and the bottom of the corrosive zone — 3,000 feet deep.

White said Wagner & Brown attempted to mitigate its losses with the use of "centralizers" and "DV" tools.

"We know how to drill oil wells and we did it right," he said. "They (Dow and DSI) did what they did, knowingly. They planned it, they executed it and the executed the concealment of it."

Dowell Schlumberger was formed as the result of a corporate merger in 1984, with Dowell becoming jointly owned by Dow and Schlumberger, according to court records.

Wagner & Brown, which owns and operates working interests in oil and gas wells in Texas and Oklahoma, filed suit against the companies in September 1988 in 238th Texas District Court in Midland.

The litigation, which was later moved to federal court in Midland, charges Dow and DSI with violation of the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act. Under those violations. Wagner & Brown is asking treble the alleged $5 million in actual damages.

The company has not specified the total amount of actual damages sought in the litigation.

AIDS

Another author, Rep. Billy Clemons, D-Lufkin, said reaching the compromise was "tough" because of House politics and the emotional nature of the issue.

The original bill had required state educational materials to include language indicating that intravenous use of illegal drugs and homosexual conduct could lead to AIDS and are against state law.

The legislation's new provision splits educational materials into those intended for adults and those for people under 18.

Materials for adults would emphasize that "sexual intercourse, especially involving anal intercourse ... and intravenous drug use involving sharing of needles are the primary methods" of infection.

The materials also would tell readers that homosexual conduct and prostitution, both as defined by the state penal code, are criminal offenses in Texas.

For people under 18, materials would emphasize that abstinence before marriage is the "most effective way to prevent" infection. The materials would tell readers that "homosexual conduct is not an accepted lifestyle and a criminal offense" under the penal code.

The original bill also had called for a hearing process before community-based organizations could receive state grants for educational purposes.

But sponsors Tuesday struck that provision, they said, because of a cut in AIDS-earmarked money by the House-Senate budget conference committee. The committee had reduced the appropriation from $22 million to $18.3 million.

As the committee finishes up technical details of the state's budget, House Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said the $18 million-level "is locked in pretty good."

AIDS legislation authors also had struck provisions calling for AIDS testing at the Texas Department of Corrections owing to the same shortfall.

In addition, the authors had decided against using "contact tracing" to allow the Texas Health Department to identify and contact partners of infected persons, as is the practice with syphilis outbreaks.

But an amendment offered by Rep. Jack Harris, R-Pearland, added the provision against objections that it also would be too expensive with the current appropriation.

McKinney said later that "the bill's shortcomings are not in the bill. The bill's shortcomings are in the conference committee."

The House during Tuesday debate also rejected an amendment from Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, to allow state health centers to distribute condoms.

A sponsor of Senate AIDS legislation, Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, was mulling alternatives after House sponsors asked Speaker Gib Lewis not to appoint a conference committee to find middle ground between the two versions.

Washington felt that without anti-discrimination provisions the Senate approved, AIDS sufferers would not come forward for treatment.

In addition, if those afflicted are liable to lose their jobs — and their health insurance — local taxpayers would have to pay for treatment, he said.

"Some of the hospital districts are going to be mad at their representatives when all of their taxes are going for AIDS," he said.

The chairman of the House Public Health Committee, Rep. Brad Wright, R-Houston, said "there's probably only 25 votes on the floor of the House for a broad anti-discrimination measure."

Should Gov. Bill Clements call a special session after the current one ends May 29, Washington said he would consider asking the governor to allow the AIDS question on the agenda a second time.

At that point, Senate sponsors either could add amendments to the House legislation or start fresh with a new bill, he said.

DIRECTOR

As conductor of the MSO, Jaeger was responsible for commissioning works by several American composers, including Lukas Foss, Dave Brubeck, Alec Wilder and Leslie Bassett. For these innovative efforts, he received three ASCAP Awards for "adventuresome programming of contemporary music."

In 1979, he helped found the Northwood Orchestra and its annual summer festival in Michigan, which continues today. He founded and continues to produce three critically acclaimed annual Bach festivals, one in Cass City, Mich., one in Lancaster, Pa., and the other in Boulder, Colo.

He has appeared with the Aspen Festival Orchestra, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, the Chattanooga Symphony, the Inland Empire Symphony at San Bernardino, Calif., the Philharmonic Orchestra of Lisbon, Portugal, the Antwerp Philharmonic in Belgium, and the State Orchestra of Thessolaniki in Greece. In the spring of 1981, he was invited to the People's Republic of China, where he lectured, taught and conducted.

"Don Jaeger has an extensive history of successfully developing programs," said Ingrid Zeeck, chairman of the Music Director Search Committee and president-elect of the symphony board of directors. "His positive reception by the board, musicians and patrons, together with his visions of development for the symphony and chorale, promise a bright future."

As music director and conductor of the MOSC, Jaeger will work with the general manager and the board of directors in planning, developing and overseeing the symphony's musical programs.

In addition to conducting rehearsals and performances, his responsibilities will include the development of musical programming, selection of guest artists, coordination and direction of artistic personnel, recruitment of musicians and the development of long-range artistic planning. He also will assist with the MOSC's educational and outreach programs, including performing in school concerts and other related activities.

The search committee made its recommendation after reviewing dozens of applications and attending performances by numerous candidates. During April, finalists appeared before the orchestra in a rehearsal/audition. Written evaluations completed by musicians and board members following this audition played a critical role in the selection process.

In addition to Zeeck, the search committee included board members Margaret Simmons, Dorothy Croft and David Grimes; symphony musician Theodore Grille; and General Manager Connie Linsler.

"Don Jaeger possesses the qualities necessary to take the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale into its next stage of development," stated Linsler. "I look forward to a prosperous partnership to which he will contribute immensely in leading the way in shaping the artistic future of the Symphony & Chorale."

In accepting his new responsibilities, Jaeger stated, "I am extremely pleased to return to Texas, my native state, to become active in the musical life of West Texas.

"I have watched the process of the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale throughout the years with interest, and I hope to utilize my experience to further enrich the cultural climate. All those committed to bringing the artistic growth of the orchestra and chorale to their present level of attainment should be congratulated.

"It is my fervent wish to be able to expand the influence of the ensembles to a far wider audience and perhaps bring a new energy to an already highly regarded program.

"My wife, Ann, and I have been immensely impressed with the friendliness and enthusiasm of all those we have met. It is both refreshing and exemplary. In short, it is good to be home again."

Jaeger will be honored in a "Welcome Reception" 5-7 p.m. today, at the Symphony Rehearsal Hall, 3100 LaForce Blvd., near the Midland International Airport terminal.

Jaeger's first performances leading the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale in his new role will be in late August.

Longest Day of Golf offers opportunites for 'tee-totaling'

From Staff Reports

Bucky Bates has been appointed chairman of the "Longest Day of Golf" by the West Texas Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Bates, of Brockett, Cunningham & Bates, will be conducting the Longest Day of Golf during the month of June to help raise funds which will support research and patient service programs in the Permian Basin area for young adults with Multiple Sclerosis.

Bates said, "My wife, my law partners and my banker feel I should work every day, but I don't think they will mind my participation in this worthy event. I hope everyone who has the opportunity, or needs the excuse, will join in the fun."

From June through June 30, area golfers will have the opportunity to play as many holes of golf in one day as humanly possible for a worthy cause — the fight against Multiple Sclerosis. Participants raise money on a pledge-per-hole basis to support research projects and provide a wider range of service for local patients with Multiple Sclerosis.

Top fund-raisers will qualify for awards including a "Duffers Delight Vacation" for two, courtesy of the Hyatt Regency Hilton Hotel Palmetto Dunes, Hilton Head Island, S.C., with round trip airfare courtesy of American Airlines; a golf vacation for two to Horseshoe Bay; a golf vacation to Ruidoso, N.M.; a gift certificate as well as many other individual prizes.

Sponsors for Longest Day of Golf are IBM, American Airlines and Hyatt Regency Hilton Head, S.C.

Part of the problem was that changing property values in local districts increased costs by $30 million over the biennium, said Lynn Moak, deputy commissioner of the TEA.

The Senate plan would put more money into the state's poorest school districts than the House plan would, Moak saaid. He also noted that the House bill generally gives more money to urban and suburban districts while the Senate bill puts more money into rural districts.

The House plan made no commitment for additional funding past the coming biennium.

David Thompson, general counsel of the Texas Education Agency, told conferees that opting for a long-range plan would allow state attorneys to make a more persuasive argument before the Texas Supreme Court.

A lawsuit filed by poorer districts that alleges discrimination in the current financing system is pending before the high court. The case also has received hearings before Austin district and appeals courts.

The House also requires the state's 175,000 teachers to receive a $1,140 minimum raise in each of the next two years.

The Senate did not mandate a pay raise, although Parker said it was the clear intent that the majority of the additional money go to increase teacher salaries.

Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, chairman of the House Public Education Committee, said she was optimistic the panel would reach an agreement before the Monday night adjournment. "But then I'm always optimistic," she added.

Among Permian Basin school districts, Midland, Ector County and Greenwood school districts all would do best under the House plan.

Midland would gain $4 million in state aid during the next two years under the current funding formula, due to changes in enrollment and property values. The Senate bill would increase that gain to nearly $5 million, but the House version would give Midland $5.9 million.

Ector County would see a $3.9 million increase under the current formula. The Senate plan would give Ector County Independent School District $7.6 million more than its current aid, but the House plan would give the district $8 million over current levels.

40-year-old executed for woman's murder

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A man was executed by injection early today for helping to rape and strangle a woman who was abducted as she awaited help in her disabled car following a New Year's Eve party in 1981.

McCoy

Stephen McCoy gave no final statement, although he smiled briefly to four friends he had invited as witnesses. He coughed and his chest heaved five times as the drugs began to take effect, then uttered two low and long groans before he stopped breathing at 12:25 a.m.

The 40-year-old Houston electrician was the 31st Texas convict and the 110th in the nation executed since the 1976 U.S. Supreme Court ruling allowing states to resume capital punishment.

McCoy lost a final appeal late Tuesday when the court voted 5-4 against a stay. The action, which came without comment, was unusual since the appeal was McCoy's first to reach the high court. It has been routine for initial appeals to merit at least one reprieve.

"The significance of this is the courts very clearly are indicating impatience with dilatory tactics within the process and they intend to expedite the process," said state Attorney General Jim Mattox.

McCoy was convicted in the murder of Cynthia Johnson. The 18-year-old Conroe woman was abducted by McCoy and two other men from her car, which had broken down on a Houston freeway as she was returning home from a New Year's Eve party.

According to trial testimony, McCoy raped the woman and then held her legs down while James Paster and Gary LeBlanc strangled her with an electrical cord. Testimony also showed Paster hammered a nail up the woman's nostril to make certain she was dead.

Miss Johnson would have turned 27 on Monday.

Paster, awaiting death for another slaying, received a life sentence for the Johnson murder. Last month, he was caught with another death-row inmate in an unsuccessful escape attempt. LeBlanc, who testified for the state, received a 35-year term.

"The death penalty was made for people like Stephen Albert McCoy to protect society from people like him and from people like James Paster," said George Ambright, who prosecuted the case.

"There was no remorse, no drugs, no alcohol, no real explanation for the violence except they were just mean," Mattox said.

McCoy had insisted he was in another room when the woman was slain.

Wright's constituents still behind speaker

FORT WORTH (AP) — As a lawyer for House Speaker Jim Wright clashed with outside counsel of the House ethics committee, constituents in the speaker's hometown stood firmly behind their congressman.

Most Fort Worth residents were optimistic Tuesday that Wright would emerge victorious from the ethical inquiry that has plagued him in recent months.

The House ethics committee has charged Wright, the nation's highest ranking Democrat, with 69 ethics violations.

Beverly Labovitz, a Fort Worth court reporter, said she's impressed with Stephen Susman, one of Wright's lawyers.

"I heard Stephen Susman on NPR (National Public Radio) today. I think Susman was an excellent choice of attorney," Ms. Labovitz said.

She said she had not decided whether Wright was guilty of wrongdoing, but said Susman's arguments Tuesday pushed her in favor of the Fort Worth politician.

Ms. Labovitz also said she's glad Wright was finally given the chance to tell his side.

"They already have him stepping down because in the minds of people he's guilty," she said. "They already have him leaving in disgrace. I'd like to see if he didn't do what every other Congressman is doing."

Attorney Hugh Savage, 41, called Wright's troubles "a sign of the times."

"Everybody's pretty much hung out in the open. ... It's just become the ultimate exposure of everything. I don't think he's done anything worse than anyone else has done.

"Obviously, you've got to stop somewhere, but where do you stop?" Savage asked.

> "They already have him stepping down because in the minds of people he's guilty. They already have him leaving in disgrace. I'd like to see if he didn't do what every other Congressman is doing."
> — Beverly Labovitz, court reporter

Eighteen-year-old student Daniella Butts said she has heard Jim Wright speak a few times and believes "he has too much support from the people of Fort Worth and the people abroad" to do anything illegal.

"I don't think anyone would put that kind of job in jeopardy," said Ms. Butts.

"I think he'll come out of it. He helped get the super collider here and got General Dynamics to come here. ... It's like Gov. Clements said: 'I don't think the people of Texas are going to let that slip by.' "

An elderly man who refused to give his name said he doesn't believe Wright is much different from other politicians.

The man said he thinks the House speaker made promises in exchange for contributions, but "I kinda think that's the way politicians do it."

"I think most of the ones that give in the money expect something, but that's the way politics goes," he said. "If it was an open and shut case, it wouldn't have taken them a year to do something about it."

Cult slaying defendants claim they've been tortured

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Defendants in a notorious drug-cult murder case say they were tortured and forced to confess, but a police agent here said they are using a common defense ploy.

Attorney Cesar Ceballos Blanco said Tuesday his client, Sergio Martinez Salinas, 23, told him he was forced to sign a confession after being "subjected to physical violence."

The lawyer said he planned to submit a petition Tuesday afternoon in a Mexican federal court, seeking reconsideration of charges against Martinez.

The father of the cult's alleged "godmother," also has said his daughter, Sara Aldrete, told him she was tortured by police in Mexico City.

"They beat her and gave her (electrical) shocks," Israel Aldrete last week told the Spanish-language television network Univision.

Aldrete, of Matamoros, met with Ms. Aldrete, 24, in a Mexico City jail last week. A family member said he was unavailable for comment Tuesday.

Martinez was charged in the Fourth Federal District Court in Matamoros last month with murder, kidnapping, illegal burial, criminal association, firearms violations and drug trafficking in connection with the discovery of 15 bodies west of this border city.

Some of the dead were victims of human sacrificial rites allegedly directed by cult "godfather" Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo. Others were killed in drug-related executions, police said.

Constanzo died May 6, reportedly after ordering a follower to shoot him and right-hand man Martin Quintana Rodriguez, as police closed in on their Mexico City hideout where Ms. Aldrete and others were arrested.

Three other men jailed in Matamoros also claim to have been tortured by Mexican Federal Judicial Police, Ceballos said.

A Mexican Federal Judicial Police agent in Matamoros said claims of torture are a common defense.

"It is logical that they will report being beaten and being forced to make statements, but it is not true," said the agent, who refused to identify herself.

"But they have a right to present their case to the courts," the agent added.

Ceballos said he would file the petition with the Sixth Federal District Court in Reynosa on Tuesday afternoon, seeking a reconsideration of the charges.

The petition includes a report by Dr. Paulina Vela Esquivel of Matamoros, who examined Martinez and the three other men in jail.

"There is absolutely no doubt in my mind" the men were tortured, said Dr. Vela, who said he has documented other cases of torture by police.

The doctor reported finding evidence of electric shocks on the head, tongue, lips, back and ears of Martinez.

Dr. Vela, a professor of medicine at the Autonomous University of Tamaulipas, reported that Martinez claimed police put a plastic bag over his head on as many as eight different occasions "until he lost consciousness for an undetermined time."

The doctor also found perforated ear drums, and said Martinez reported being slapped on the ears, forced to inhale water and was punched and kicked "on diverse parts of the body."

Ceballos showed photos of Martinez with numerous red spots the doctor identified as sites of electric shock administered with the exposed ends of wires plugged into a wall socket.

"What he declared was not written down in the (papers presented to the court)," Ceballos said. "He had to sign because of the pressure."

Allegations of torture make up only one element of the court petition, Ceballos said.

The lawyer, who is Martinez' uncle, said he hoped to have the charge of criminal association dropped.

Arab League to deal with Lebanon problem

CASABLANCA, Morocco (AP) — Leaders of the Arab League tried to come to grips with the Lebanese problem today, one day after their summit quietly welcoming Egypt back into the Arab family of nations.

President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt lost no time forcefully expressing the views of the most populous Arab state.

"Lebanon has become a grave problem," Mubarak said. "It exhausts us and is exhausting our consciences. We must work together to overcome this crisis before the fire overcomes us all."

Mubarak reoccupied Egypt's place in the league on Tuesday following a 10-year suspension and resumed a leadership role as though his country had never been absent.

The chairman, Morocco's King Hassan II, told Tuesday's session, "Let me address President Mubarak, a friend of 17 years, to tell him how happy we are to see him among us."

Egypt was suspended for signing its peace treaty with Israel in 1979. Only Libya's Col. Moammar Gadhafi tried to insist on the original condition being met for Egypt's return — abrogation of the peace treaty.

Hassan invited Egypt back following informal discussions among the members.

Mubarak quickly showed that Egypt intends to take a lively interest in Arab affairs. He was the only chief of state invited to speak in the public part of Tuesday's session.

Gadhafi sat taking notes during Mubarak's 20-minute address. An expression approaching a scowl was on his face, but he made no attempt to claim the floor. Gadhafi was likely to intervene in the continuing closed session today, although summit sources said it would be concerned mostly with Lebanon.

Mubarak

Gadhafi

The Libyan news agency JANA has warned that Gadhafi would walk out if any attempt were made to surrender to Israel by compromising on the Arab demand for Palestinian statehood.

In his speech Tuesday, Mubarak asked the league to back the efforts of its six-nation committee on Lebanon to restore Lebanese national unity. Lebanon's civil war is now in its 15th year, with rival Moslem and Christian governments vying for power.

In particular, Mubarak said, the committee should seek withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon — meaning both Syrians and Israelis — and help the country live peacefully under its "constitutional authority."

Mubarak gave Egypt's full backing to the intefadeh — or revolt — in the Israeli-occupied territories and backed the right of the Palestinian people "to choose whatever road they find suitable for the achievement of their aspirations."

World War II bomber gets makeover for Smithsonian stay

SILVER HILL, Md. (AP) — The Enola Gay, the steel-gray bomber that effectively ended World War II, today sits in a warehouse without wings or engines, belying its fame as the B-29 that carried the first atomic weapon.

Restoration experts are taking the plane apart bolt by bolt in a nine-year project to turn the grimy aircraft into a shiny relic for the Smithsonian Institution's National Air and Space Museum.

When the plane is displayed in 1994, the exhibit likely will renew debate about America's use of the atomic bomb.

It was early in the morning on Aug. 6, 1945, when the first atomic bomb was released over Hiroshima, Japan, killing and injuring 160,000 people. A second bomb was later dropped over Nagasaki.

"Any time you even bring up the name Enola Gay it rekindles debate," said Theodore Van Kirk, a navigator on the historic mission. "I guess the discussion is always going to be around. It's been 40 some years and there still isn't any conclusion."

Van Kirk, now 68, saw the plane in 1985 when rehabilitation work began at the Smithsonian's Paul E. Garber Preservation, Restoration and Storage Facility in Silver Hill, just outside Washington. He retired three years ago from DuPont and lives in Novato, Calif.

The Enola Gay's 98-foot-long body sits severed in half at the warehouse. The two pieces sit side by side with various other historical planes and spacecraft.

"We have some (visitors) who tell us that this plane saved their life or their uncle's life because it ended the war," shop foreman Richard Horigan said recently.

It took nearly three years for Horigan and Dave Peterson to restore the front section. Earlier this year, technicians began work on the rear section and wings of the plane, which Cmdr. Paul W. Tibbets named after his mother.

Each part is dipped, sprayed or painted with preservatives and waxes, Horigan said.

Using photographs, old technical manuals and history books as their guides, the restoration experts plan to remove all markings and decals that were not on the plane the day after the mission. The names and dates of scores of unknown people will be buffed from the plane's aluminum exterior.

"There's lots of graffiti," Horigan said. "Most of it was 'Joe Blow 1950' — that kind of thing."

Tibbets' name will be repainted in stenciled military lettering instead of the script-style print added sometime after the flight.

"Enola Gay" was painted in black, block letters under a cockpit window just hours before the mission. The name will remain, but extra brush strokes on the "E" and "G," from a touch-up paint job done later, will be removed, Horigan said.

During the restoration work, Horigan and Peterson found a chisel that had been lost inside the plane when it was being manufactured.

They also found an atomic bomb arming pin behind the radio operator's table. The pin apparently was an extra not used on the weapon. A replica of the Hiroshima bomb sits in front of the plane.

"There's no evidence of the blast whatsoever (on the plane)," Horigan said. "I think they were 10 to 15 miles away when the blast went off."

After the war, in November 1945, the plane was modified. It returned to the United States in 1946 and went into storage for three years in Arizona, then was ferried by Tibbets to Park Ridge, Ill., a storage site for the Smithsonian.

It made its last flight Dec. 2, 1953, when it was flown to Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland.

Richard Horigan, shop foreman at the Paul E. Garber facility of the National Air and Space Museum, poses next to the Enola Gay, the B-29 bomber that dropped the atom bomb on Hiroshima, Japan.

Goats butt into flight schedules

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Officials at Will Rogers World Airport had their hands full for a while Monday, and it had nothing to do with unruly passengers or flight delays.

The problems were three adult domestic goats discovered on the terminal's concrete apron in the air operations area. They were spotted by Trans World Airlines workers who were loading baggage and passengers aboard planes.

Three airport police officers responded to the call. With the help of three airline workers and two groundskeepers, they were able to loose-herd the animals into a corner of the jet blast fence.

Attempts to rope the excited animals quickly showed that goat-roping isn't easy. The police called animal control officers who couldn't approach the goats without agitating them further.

"They used the tranquilizer gun on them, but it didn't seem to settle them down right away, either," said airport spokesman Tom Morton.

It wasn't long, however, before nooses were slipped around of the necks of the two Billy goats, and Lt. Ted Carlton, head of the airport police, arrested the nanny by the ears.

A newborn gaur calf lies safely within a group of adults at the International Wildlife Park in Grand Prairie Tuesday. The calf was born despite the turmoil and high waters of last week's flooding which left much of the park under water. Gaurs are native to India and are considered an endangered species.

Eden inmates negotiating with prison authorities

EDEN (AP) — Inmates protesting food quality and other conditions at a privately run prison were negotiating with authorities there today as 20 lawman stood by outside, a federal prison official said.

"We're in negotiations with the inmates and everything is peaceful and calm," said Pat Whalen, a spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, which contracts with the Eden Detention Center to house federal inmates. "There have been no injuries and no property damage."

Whalen said the prison houses about 300 inmates, but he did not know how many of them were involved in the "stand-in" that began after dinner Tuesday night, when inmates refused to return to their dormitories.

Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said he had been told the disturbance initially involved a large number of prisoners, but that only 75 were still outside their cells shortly after midnight.

Local law enforcement agencies were standing by at the prison only as a precautionary measure, Whalen said. The prison is about 40 miles east of San Angelo.

Inmates congregated in a courtyard to protest prison conditions and the quality of food they're served, said Concho County Sheriff Bill Fiveash.

But Whalen said he could not say exactly what sparked the disturbance: "The whole topic of that is under negotiation with the prisoners right now and it would be premature to discuss it."

Prison employees reached by phone declined to give any information about the prison or the protest.

When inmates began returning to their dormitories after 10:30 p.m., officials said they decided to avoid an immediate confrontation.

"We will not take any steps. We will let them sit in the yard and wait," Jim Eyskens, a San Antonio-based Bureau of Prisons officer, said at the time. "I'm certain this will be resolved without force."

Most of the prisoners are illegal aliens serving sentences of no more than 18 months for federal crimes, said Greg Bogdan, a Bureau of Prisons spokesman in Washington.

Prisoners have complained before about conditions at the facility, which opened in early 1986.

IRS employees say cuts will cost U.S. money

AUSTIN (AP) — Internal Revenue Service employees are protesting $40 million in cuts in enforcement programs and personnel they say will result in the loss of $200 million to the federal treasury and the loss of jobs of 850 seasonal employees at Austin.

More than 70 IRS employees chanted "honest taxpayers lose, tax cheaters win" as they marched along a sidewalk in front the Federal Building Tuesday.

Anita Greenberg, president of Chapter 247 of the National Treasury Employees Union, which represents 6,000 workers, said cutbacks at the Austin regional center alone will mean a $95 million loss in tax collections.

The IRS began the year with a $360 million deficit and imposed deep cutbacks to balance its budget.

The additional $40 million in cuts, which the union is asking Congress to offset with supplemental appropriations, were announced in May, Ms. Greenberg said.

"Certainly we care about the loss of jobs," Ms. Greenberg said. "But we have a tremendous responsibility — we are the people who fund the federal budget. There are tax cheats out there and they're robbing America blind."

Those furloughed at the Austin center include 850 seasonal workers, about 600 hired to process tax returns, and about 250 at the Austin Compliance Center to check returns for compliance, according to Bob Branson, public affairs specialist with the Austin District IRS Office.

More releases of seasonal workers are likely, Branson said.

"We're getting to that time of year when we normally let them off," he said.

Linda Valentine, who said she was promoted three times in eight months and has received awards monthly since March, was among the 104 employees furloughed last week at the Compliance Center.

Park hunts missing deer with helicopters

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — It was a most unusual deer hunt Tuesday in this Dallas suburb — one with a helicopter and no guns.

But it was the only way that officials from International Wildlife Park could figure to find their five missing deer, who escaped during the recent flooding that ravaged the drive-through wildlife park.

Terry Gonzalez said the park had received numerous reports of deer being sighted in nearby business developments.

"We secured the services of a helicopter, and they're searching for the deer this afternoon," Ms. Gonzalez said.

The wildlife park, which abuts the Trinity River, was flooded following several days of heavy rain last week. Two fences were knocked down and zoo officials had to stand guard to keep animals in those areas, including several rhinos and hippos, from escaping. Despite their efforts, several hoofed animals bolted away to freedom.

Searchers Tuesday afternoon spotted several deer from the helicopter but were not able to get close enough to shoot them with a tranquilizer dart.

"We're still trying to determine our losses," Ms. Gonzalez said. "A number of animals died."

Among the losses at the 11-year-old business were a monkey, several hoofed animals, and a couple of ostriches.

But park employees managed to help several expectant animals give birth during the turmoil, including a rare guar. The wild ox, normally found in India, is an endangered species, Ms. Gonzalez said.

Officials do not expect the park to reopen until Thursday or Friday.

"We've mounted an unbelievable cleanup effort," Ms. Gonzalez said. "We've temporarily doubled our staff. We're repairing fences, and we're even pumping water back into the Trinity."

Ms. Gonzalez said the flood, similar to one that damaged the park in 1981, was not an unpleasant experience for everyone.

"We have five baby hippos," she said. "I understand they thoroughly enjoyed all the water."

Oswald's seat donated to exhibit

DALLAS (AP) — The seat occupied by Lee Harvey Oswald in a Dallas theater at the time he was arrested the day of President John F. Kennedy's assassination has been donated to The Sixth Floor exhibit, officials say.

The chair, which was spray-painted black to underscore its place in history, was removed from the Texas Theater last week and turned over to a historical conservationist hired by managers of the exhibit, an official of the organization sponsoring the exhibit said Tuesday.

Memphis monument remembers deaths on the Mississippi River

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The 1865 explosion of the paddlewheeler Sultana was a disaster to rival the sinking of the Titanic.

The dead, many of them emaciated from Confederate prison camps, totaled more than 1,500, but newspapers of the day gave scant notice. The horror was lost in the greater gore of Civil War and presidential assassination.

Until now, there had been no marker here for the Union soldiers who perished in the muddy Mississippi. But on Sunday, a six-foot granite marker is being unveiled in Memphis' Elmwood Cemetery as a reminder that the Sultana went down in flames just seven miles north of the city's downtown riverfront.

Built for 300 passengers and a crew of 76, the steamship was carrying more than 2,300 people plus 100 horses and mules when three of its four boilers exploded at 2 a.m. on April 7, 1865.

Jerry Potter, a Memphis lawyer who has researched the disaster for a dozen years and is writing a book on it, said Union officers may have overloaded the paddlewheeler to inflate troop transport payments.

"There were two other steamboats that were trying to get a portion of the men. The only explanation I have been able to uncover for why the Sultana got them all is bribery," Potter said.

Potter and Hugh Berryman, a forensic pathologist at the University of Tennessee in Memphis, estimated the death toll at 1,547, 44 more than the number of people lost when the ocean liner Titanic hit an iceberg and sank in the North Atlantic in 1912.

Other counts of the Sultana victims have put the total between 1,400 and 1,450, but Berryman said those estimates failed to include one of three trainloads of soldiers who boarded at Vicksburg, Miss.

The monument, financed by three Memphis residents, will be the second of two major markers to the disaster.

The other, in Knoxville, was put up in 1916 by Sultana survivors who raised money for the monument.

Researching the disaster has been difficult because newspapers of the day were still primarily concerned with the assassination of Abraham Lincoln two weeks earlier and with the end of the war.

"It was just lost to history because of the other events that were going on at the time," Berryman said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Robert Kennedy's killer denied parole

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy's assassin, Sirhan B. Sirhan, has an unpredictable capacity for violence and remains a threat to society, a state prison board ruled in denying him parole for the 10th time.

Sirhan

Sirhan, 45, who is serving a life sentence for the 1968 shooting of the Democratic presidential candidate, is not eligible for parole again until next year.

Board chairman David Brown on Tuesday called the shooting "one of the most shocking criminal assassinations in the history of the United States."

It was "an attack not merely on an individual's life but on the political life of the country," he said.

In his arguments to the panel, Sirhan apologized for the slaying, said he was no longer a threat to society and that he hasn't given up hope for freedom.

"I feel very sad, very sorry, very remorseful...that a human life was taken," the Jordanian-born Sirhan said. "After 21 years...I have become quite convinced that my act was very wrong, morally and humanly, toward Robert Kennedy, and especially toward his family and his loved ones and his supporters."

"I realize the mistake of it and I wish from the bottom of my heart...that this crime, this horrible event, never occurred," he said.

AIDS measures discussed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says 5.3 million workers would be better protected from exposure to AIDS, hepatitis and other viruses under new regulations requiring all blood and bodily fluids to be handled as if they were known to be infected.

The regulations, proposed Tuesday by the Labor Department, were applauded by two unions that represent health-care employees and other workers who would be affected, although one of the unions suggested some minor changes.

"We sincerely hope that the department lives up to its commitment to finalize the standard at the very latest by the end of the year," said John J. Sweeney, president of the Service Employees International Union.

In addition to 4.7 million health-care workers, the government said the regulations would protect 600,000 people working in law enforcement, fire and rescue squads, corrections facilities, research laboratories, blood banks and the funeral industry.

Marcos not improving

HONOLULU (AP) — Former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos' condition is not improving and his doctors say it's a miracle he's still alive.

"He's the sickest I've ever seen him," Dr. Steven Berman, an infectious disease specialist, told a news conference Tuesday.

Doctors said Marcos is dependent on life-support equipment and the prospects for his survival are slim. Marcos is unable to breathe on his own and is undergoing constant kidney dialysis, they said.

"He would die if he was off the ventilator. He would die if he wasn't going to get dialysis. He would probably die if his cardiac medicines were removed," Berman said. "This is a multi-factoral problem."

The 71-year-old Marcos, who has been hospitalized at St. Francis Medical Center since Jan. 15, is suffering from massive bacterial infection, kidney failure, cardiac failure, pulmonary failure and pneumonia, the doctors said.

Women share numbers

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The odds of two unrelated women sharing the same birthdate and similar names are high enough.

But they are partners to another quirk: they share Social Security numbers.

Elizabeth Carroll and Betty Gibson learned three weeks ago that the Social Security Administration made a freakish mistake years ago and assigned them the same number.

Ms. Carroll, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Ann Smith, was the first to learn about the mixup. When she was considering buying a house, a mortgage company's printout of her credit history also contained Ms. Gibson's, who was born Betty Ann Smith.

Ms. Carroll took the question to the Social Security Administration, which told her it stemmed from a clerical error in the early 1970s.

Ms. Carroll called Ms. Gibson to explain.

"I was dumbfounded," said Ms. Gibson. "I couldn't understand how two people could have the same Social Security number. I've had this one since it was issued to me when I was a little girl."

Social Security officials declined to discuss the specifics of this case, but did say such mistakes are rare.

Ayatollah's illness comes at time of intense struggle

By ED BLANCHE

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Surprise disclosures that Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has undergone surgery come at a time of intense struggle within Iran's fragile leadership structure over who will succeed him.

The public admission that the 89-year-old Imam, as he is known, was even ill marked a major departure for Iranians, who for the last three years have only glimpsed the Islamic republic's supreme leader on television.

The reports by the state television and radio networks that Khomeini was in "exceptional condition" for his age, despite the surgery on Tuesday to stop intestinal bleeding, appeared aimed at reassuring Iranians the revolutionary patriarch was still at the helm.

"I would like to inform listeners and viewers that his eminence...is perhaps one of history's exceptions in his physical structure and state of health," the chief surgeon, Dr. Hassan Arefi, declared.

That may have comforted Khomeini's followers. But it was also a reminder of Khomeini's mortality and emphasized that the question of who will rule Iran in the post-Khomeini era is wide open.

On March 28, Khomeini dumped his designated successor, Ayatollah Hussein-Ali Montazeri, in one of Iran's biggest political upheavals since the 1979 Islamic revolution ended 2,400 years of monarchy.

Political and religious leaders are grappling with changing the revolutionary constitution to eliminate what Khomeini calls "flaws and imperfections" and settle the leadership question.

The recommendations of the 20-man Constitutional Committee that Khomeini appointed will go before voters in a referendum in mid-August — the same time Iranians vote for a new president.

Since Iran abruptly accepted a cease-fire in the 8-year war with Iraq last summer, it has been gripped by political uncertainty.

Anti-Western revolutionary radicals led by Prime Minister Hussein Musavi and Interior Minister Ali Akbar Mohtashemi, who favor tight control of the economy, are locked in a power struggle with those seeking more free enterprise and links with the West.

In March, Montazeri was forced to resign after criticizing Khomeini's policies and questioning what the revolution had achieved in its first decade.

Montazeri's resignation followed Khomeini's sharp swing back to fundamentalist radicalism. In February, Khomeini ordered Moslems to seek out and kill British author Salman Rushdie for his novel, "The Satanic Verses," charging it blasphemes Islam.

The death call brought widespead Western condemnation of Iran, smothering moves toward liberalization and efforts by Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani and others to end Iran's self-imposed isolation.

The radical resurgence intensified a wave of executions of political dissidents and purges.

The power struggle is likely to intensify.

"Montazeri's resignation...raises the question of how far Ayatollah Khomeini is prepared to go in his current drive to root out revisionism," commented Charles Snow, an analyst with the Middle East Economic Survey weekly.

"It may be that the ayatollah is feeling his mortality and is trying, like Chairman Mao in China, to ensure the future of his revolution after his death by turning the radicals loose while he is still alive," Snow said.

The uncertainty is compounded by Khomeini's tactic of constantly switching support for one faction or another so none becomes too powerful.

Against this backdrop, the deliberations of the Constitutional Committee will have a far-reaching impact on Iran's future.

Rafsanjani, the only declared presidential candidate so far, wants to widen the powers of the office and scrap the premiership to eliminate the competing power centers that have paralyzed decisions on the economy and social reform.

The hardliners favor a presidency which is largely ceremonial, with power centralized in the prime minister.

All indications are that in the absence of any leader with Khomeini's spiritual authority as vice-regent of the prophet Mohammed, there will be a tilt toward installing a collective leadership after he dies.

Khomeini doing well after surgery

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran's parliament speaker, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said today that Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini was well and cheerful following surgery to stop intestinal bleeding, Tehran radio reported.

Rafsanjani said he visited Khomeini, 89, in the hospital today, one day after the operation.

"He was in bed, and the doctors were around him. His health was very good," he told the radio. "He was very cheerful. I asked him if he had any pain and he replied that he has very little and that he is comfortable."

The radio was monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. in London.

Khomeini's son, Ahmad, said Tuesday that his father was in "very good condition" after the surgery.

Iranian television, monitored in Nicosia, later showed film of Khomeini leaning on a stick, walking slowly into a Tehran hospital accompanied by his son. It also showed Khomeini after surgery, wrapped in a colorful shawl and rubbing a string of worry beads in one hand, propped up on a hospital bed.

Using Khomeini's title of Imam, or spiritual leader, his son told Tehran radio: "Some blood had been detected in the Imam's digestive tract. The doctors and surgeons consulted among themselves and concluded that the best course would be to operate."

An Analysis

WORLD IN BRIEF

Glass found in U.S.-made candy

LONDON (AP) — Small pieces of glass have been found in eight packages of American-made Nerds candy, a brand popular with millions of British children, the importers said Tuesday.

Importers Anglo, Bellamy and Wilkinson said no one had been injured but urged customers, who buy a million packets of Nerds a week, to be "on their guard."

The glass was found in eight packages of the tiny fruit-flavored sweets bought in the Liverpool area and in north Wales.

"At present there is insufficient evidence to show how the glass came to be in the packets," the importers said.

"In an attempt to identify sources of glass in each case, the company has been conducting thorough checks from manufacturing to retail outlets," it said.

The contamination was discovered when 8-year-old Stephen Lloyd of Liverpool found glass in his Nerds after eating half a packet.

Police involved in the investigation are looking for a possible link with a baby food scare last month when glass was found in products in jars and cans in several areas.

Soviets photograph sunken sub

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet search ships have photographed the hulk of a nuclear-powered submarine that sank off Norway last month and found no increase in radiation in the area, Tass said Tuesday.

The Komsomolets, laden with nuclear-tipped torpedoes, sank April 7 after a fire broke out on board. Forty-two Soviet seamen died in the accident.

The Soviet research ship Akademik Mstislav Keldysh, which arrived May 16 in the waters where the sub sank, detected the wreck with the help of deep-sea exploration vehicles it carries and photographed it, the official news agency said.

The research vessel also carried out surveys that showed that "radiation levels at different depths and in ground samples does not exceed background level and does not differ from the level characteristic of remote areas of the world ocean," Tass said.

The studies, including analyses of sediment samples, found no "violations of the environmental situation" caused by the sinking of the sub, Tass said.

The Soviets have said they have not yet decided whether to raise it.

Human rights activist denied visa

ROME (AP) — The Czechoslovak government has barred Milos Hajek, a historian and human rights activist, from attending a convention in Italy on Stalinism, organizers say.

The government said the visa was denied because his participation "would not be in harmony with the interests of the Czechoslovak state," said officials of the Gramsci Institute, which is named after one of the founders of the Italian Communist Party.

Hajek was one of three spokesmen last year for the Charter 77 civil rights group in the Communist country.

The institute said scholars from the Soviet Union and a number of Eastern European countries are expected to attend the four-day conference in Urbino that begins Friday.

Leader of pro-Nazi group caught at abbey

PARIS (AP) — A Frenchman accused of committing crimes against humanity as head of a pro-Nazi militia during World War II was arrested today in southern France, police said.

Paul Touvier, 74, was captured at a priory near Nice.

The French news agency Agence France-Presse said he was arrested at St. Francis Priory, which is run by followers of Monsignor Marcel Lefevbre, a fundamentalist priest. Lefevbre was excommunicated from the Roman Catholic Church last year after a long battle with the Vatican over church doctrine.

There had been persistent reports extreme-right Roman Catholics were protecting Touvier.

In Nice, police said Touvier was being questioned, but they refused to provide further information.

"We see this with great satisfaction," Beate Klarsfeld, France's best-known Nazi hunter, said of the arrest. "It's a great bravo for French justice."

In 1945 and 1947, Touvier was sentenced to death in absentia on convictions of collaborating with the Nazis and executing and torturing members of the resistance.

Touvier was the Lyon head of the Milice, which worked closely with the Gestapo during the Nazi occupation. At the time, the Gestapo was headed in Lyon by Klaus Barbie, who in 1987 was sentenced to life in prison for crimes against humanity.

Touvier was not caught, and the sentences against him could not be carried out because of a 20-year statute of limitations.

President Georges Pompidou quietly pardoned Touvier in 1971, restoring his rights as a citizen.

Touvier went into hiding two years later when new charges were raised. Charges of crimes against humanity were filed against him in 1981, and an international arrest warrant issued.

The new warrant lists six charges, including the slaying of Victor Basch, the 81-year-old president of France's League for Human Rights, who had taken refuge in the Lyon area.

> "We see this (pro-Nazi group head) with great satisfaction. It's a great bravo for French justice."
> — Beate Klarsfeld, Nazi hunter

Investigators determined that when Basch and his wife were arrested by Touvier's Milice in January 1944, they were "judged too old to be deported and they were killed on the spot."

Magazines and newspapers have published extensive accounts of Touvier's protection by the Catholic hierarchy until 1967.

The address on his official identity card was the archbishop's headquarters in Lyon, and church officials reportedly lobbied for the 1971 pardon.

Since Touvier's return to hiding, there have been reports that he came under the protection of fundamentalist Catholics with extreme-right political views.

Historian Henri Amouroux, a specialist on France's wartime collaboration, said Touvier's trial would bring out "the role the church played in the protection he was accorded."

In an odd twist, a death notice for Touvier was published in a Grenoble newspaper in 1984, giving thanks in the name of his family for expressions of sympathy. It was never explained, and there were frequent reports afterward that Touvier was seen in monasteries in France, Italy or Switzerland.

Touvier's brother Andre, 61, said in an interview that he was surprised by news of the arrest, because he had been "99 percent" convinced his brother had died.

Reds' Dibble loses bat, composure

Associated Press

Cincinnati reliever Rob Dibble found an unusual way to take Terry Pendleton's dangerous bat out of the St. Louis Cardinals' lineup.

After Pendleton's RBI single off Dibble in the eighth inning Tuesday night, Dibble took the bat and tossed it against the screen behind home plate.

Umpire Joe West immediately ejected Dibble, who faces a minimum $200 fine for his actions. John Franco saved Danny Jackson's victory as the Reds beat the Cardinals 6-4.

"I'd like to make a public apology to the people of Cincinnati, to my team, to the Cardinals, to the umpires," Dibble said. "I should never have lost my composure like that. I embarrassed myself, my family and my team. Sometimes I'm overcompetitive. This was one of those times."

Dibble relieved Jackson with the bases loaded and one out in the sixth, struck out Pendleton and got Tony Pena to pop out.

But Manager Pete Rose wasn't smiling about his hard-throwing reliever's antics in the eighth.

"I'm not saying it's right," said Rose, who tried to downplay the incident. "There probably will be some action taken."

Dibble once charged an umpire in the minor leagues after an ejection. This spring, he overturned tables and threw chairs in a pond at the Reds' Plant City, Fla., spring training site after a bad exhibition outing.

"It'll never happen again," Dibble said. "I just thank God it didn't go 10 feet higher and go into the stands."

Padres 3, Mets 2

Eric Show scattered nine hits in 8 2-3 innings for his first victory over New York in four years as San Diego beat the Mets and Dwight Gooden at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Show had been 0-7 in 11 previous starts against the Mets since 1985. It had also been four years since the Padres beat Gooden, who had a six-game winning streak against San Diego snapped.

Show, 6-4, walked none and struck out three and Mark Davis got the last out for his 14th save.

John Kruk and Luis Salazar hit home runs for the Padres.

Phillies 4, Dodgers 1

Ex-Dodger Ken Howell allowed three hits in eight innings and Mike Schmidt drove in two runs as visiting Philadelphia beat Los Angeles.

Howell, 5-2, struck out six and walked two and Steve Bedrosian got the last three outs for his fifth save.

Howell, who beat Los Angeles 3-0 on May 12 in Philadelphia, went from the Dodgers to Baltimore in the Eddie Murray trade last December and was dealt to the Phillies four days later for outfielder Phil Bradley.

In the eighth inning, Howell made it 4-1 with a run-scoring double.

Fernando Valenzuela, 0-4, failed for the seventh time in eight starts this season to pitch more than six innings.

Giants 4, Expos 2

Rick Reuschel became the NL's first eight-game winner this season and Will Clark hit a two-run homer, leading San Francsico past Montreal at Candlestick Park.

Reuschel, 8-2, allowed six hits in 7 2-3 innings and gave up one earned run. He has allowed just three earned runs in his last 47 innings for an ERA of 0.57 over the last month, and 2.06 for the season. Mike LaCoss got the last four outs for his fifth save.

Kevin Mitchell had a run-scoring single, his major-league leading 43rd RBI for the Giants.

Pirates 5, Braves 2

John Smiley pitched an eight-hitter and Glenn Wilson hit a two-run homer as Pittsburgh sent Atlanta to its eighth loss in 10 games.

Smiley, 5-1, struck out nine and walked one for his third complete game.

Cubs 5, Astros 4

Shawon Dunston hit a two-run homer and Scott Sanderson won his fourth straight decision as Chicago beat Houston in the Astrodome, moving into first place by one game over the Mets in the NL East.

Sanderson, 5-2, pitched 5 1-3 innings and allowed four runs on six hits. Calvin Schiraldi pitched three innings for his fourth save.

Chicago took a 2-0 lead off Mike Scott, 6-3, in the second when Dwight Smith singled and Dunston hit his first home run of the season.

Angels take Drillers, series

From Staff Reports

TULSA, Okla.— Midland's Angels defeated Tulsa's Drillers, 10-5, here Tuesday night as Dave Martinez picked up his fourth win and John Orton collected three hits and knocked in four runs in this final meeting of the season between the Texas League first half division leaders.

Midland moves on to Arkansas to open a five-game series in four days in Little Rock with Roberto Hernandez scheduled to go for the Angels against the Travelers' Steve Mumaw, 12-3.

Tuesday's win for the Angels gave the West Division leaders the series, 3-2, and left the teams all even, 5-5, for the series.

Orton's two-run homer in the second highlighted a three-run second and Midland batted around in the fifth to take an 8-0 lead. Dan Grunhard and Chris Cron contributed rbi doubles, Otto Gonzales, back on the active list, had an rbi triple while Everett Graham supplied an rbi single.

In the seventh, it was Orton again with a two-run rbi.,

Midland maintained its 4 1/2 game lead in the TL West with the win as the first half race heads into its final month.

Ho-hum, Lakers win

Isiah, Pistons throw Bulls

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The usual "Showtime" atmosphere was missing for the most part Tuesday night. Instead, the Los Angeles Lakers used a stifling defense in the second half to beat the Phoenix Suns 101-95.

The Suns made only 14 of their 43 field goal attempts in the final 24 minutes as the Lakers took a 2-0 lead in the Western Conference finals.

"You have to give their defense the credit," Phoenix coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "We shot poorly, but they deserve the credit for a lot of our turnovers.

"Their jump-switching worked well, we just didn't handle it. They forced us way out and it seemed we were taking a lot of shots as the 24-second clock ran down."

The Lakers went ahead for good by outscoring the Suns 30-12 over a span of 12:20 in the second half, turning a 68-60 deficit into a 90-80 lead with 4:35 remaining.

"James Worthy and the double-team was the difference in this game," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "We dug it out. It was a case of staying with the defense, playing hard. They missed a lot of shots but a lot were contested."

Epitomizing the Phoenix shooting problems were Eddie Johnson, who made only two of 12 shots, and Tom Chambers, who was just 8-for-23. Worthy played against Chambers for most of the game.

"The defense picked us up in the fourth quarter," said Worthy, who scored 12 of his 19 points in the final period. "Without it, we wouldn't have been able to get the few transition baskets we got."

Byron Scott led the Lakers with 30 points. Magic Johnson had 22 points, 14 assists and nine rebounds and Orlando Woolridge came off the bench to get 10 points and five rebounds for Los Angeles.

The win was the ninth in as many playoff games for the two-time defending NBA champion Lakers, equaling the playoff record for consecutive victories they set seven years ago.

It was also the 14th win in a row for the Lakers, including the regular season, and their 11th straight playoff victory dating back to last season.

A three-point play by Tom Chambers with 5:09 remaining in the third quarter gave the Suns a 68-60 lead, but the Lakers scored 11 of the final 16 points in the third quarter and 19 of the first 26 in the fourth period to go ahead 90-80 with 4:35 remaining.

Kevin Johnson led Phoenix with 22 points and 10 assists, but he also had 10 turnovers and scored only four points in the second half. Chambers had 21 points and 10 rebounds and Majerle and Jeff Hornacek each had 16 points.

The series shifts to Phoenix for Games 3 and 4 Friday night and Sunday afternoon. The Suns beat the Lakers in all three regular-season meetings on their home floor. Phoenix has lost 19 straight games at the Forum dating to 1984.

Pistons 100, Bulls 91

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Detroit's backcourt trio of Isiah Thomas, Joe Dumars and Vinnie Johnson, who scored only 27 points on 11-for-45 shooting in the first game, combined for 69 points in Game 2 of the Eastern Conference finals as Detroit beat the Chicago Bulls 100-91.

The win evened the best-of-7 series at 1-1.

"Guards are our strength," center Bill Laimbeer said. "When they score big, we usually win the game. Our coach says, 'Run faster, jump higher, shoot straighter and you'll win.' Tonight, they just hit their shots, it's that simple."

The series now shifts to Chicago for Games 3 and 4 Saturday and Monday — and the Pistons, who were 26-15 on the road during the regular season, can hardly wait. Detroit has won its last five visits to Chicago Stadium.

"I think now the pressure's on them," said Johnson, a reserve who scored 13 of his 16 points in the second quarter. "They have the home-court advantage and they're going to have to hold it."

The Pistons earned the home-court advantage throughout the playoffs by virtue of their NBA-best 63-19 record, but the Bulls took it away with a 94-88 victory in Game 1.

The Pistons, who had been idle for five days after sweeping Milwaukee in the second round, were sluggish in that first game — especially Johnson, Thomas and Dumars.

In Game 2, the three guards scored 24 points on free throws alone.

"They were driving the ball to the basket," Chicago coach Doug Collins said. "Isiah and their guards had their minds made up to penetrate and take the ball to the hoop. They ended up shooting 30 foul shots. That's a big difference."

At the same time, the Detroit defense held Chicago's Michael Jordan to 27 points, matching his season average against the Pistons, who beat the Bulls all six times they played.

"We did a decent job on Jordan or maybe he just missed, I don't know," Detroit coach Chuck Daly said. "Maybe he became a little less, or maybe a little more, human. We played a great defensive game."

MC, Tyler share Juco tennis lead

From Staff Reports

TYLER — Tied for the lead, Midland College men's tennis team is trying to end 10 years of frustration while Tyler Junior College wants to continue MC's string by taking the NJCAA tennis title again here today.

While Midland and Tyler have 22 points each, the Anderson, S.C., team is making a run from two points behind. Abraham Baldwin, Ga., is in fourth with 16 points. Jefferson State, Ala., McLennan College of Waco, and North Greenville, S.C., are tied for fifth with 11 points each.

The Chaparrals send four singles players and two doubles teams onto the courts today in a bid for the elusive National Junior College Athletic Association title. But they are doing it without their No. 1 singles and doubles.

TONNY van de Pieterman fell in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2, to No. 1 seed Jean Lagoria of Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College, Ga., usually know as ABAC. It was van de Pieterman's first straight set loss of the year. Amine Boustani and van de Pieterman later suffered a 7-5, 7-5 defeat by Adler and Gonzales of Tyler in the No. 1 doubles semifinals. The Chap duo was ranked No. 1 in the nation among junior colleges with a 30-2 record.

That was all the bad news, as No. 2 Mohammed Ridaoui, No. 4 David Fontaine, No. 5 Scott Randolph, and No. 6 Robert Antoun all won their semifinals matches. Fontaine took that division's No. 1 seed, Joran Bergwall of Anderson, 6-2, 2-6, 6-4. Ridaoui, Randolph and Antoun all won in straight sets.

Midland's No. 2 and 3 doubles teams won two matches each to advance into the finals. Fontaine defeated his final opponent, Michael Martinez of Tyler, last fall in the Odessa tournament. Randolph lost to his championship foe, Kiyoshi Ueda of Anderson, in last year's NJCAA championships.

THE CHAPARRALS are seeking to take the first NJCAA men's title since it tied with conference teammates Odessa and New Mexico Military Institute for the crown in 1978. They go into today's finals with four singles and two doubles, for a possible six points. Tyler has three players in singles and two doubles teams. Anderson plays in the finals of three singles and one doubles.

In a Tuesday night seeding meeting, the Chaps got the top number for a three-day experimental team tournament which begins Thursday. Sixteen teams will play in a bracket, with the winning teams advancing to the next round. When a team wins five matches, that's the end of the event with the winner advancing and the losers out of the tourney.

Two rounds are slated Thursday, the semifinals on Friday, and the finals on Saturday.

MC coach Joe Williams will be changing his line-up for each of the team events. Pepe Garcia, who's been playing doubles only, and reserve Tommy Heitting are expected to be in the singles line-ups for at least the first round. Line-up changes can be made for each team match.

Drawing the No. 2 seed was Tyler, followed by Anderson at three and ABAC at four.

David Fontaine (MC) defeated Joran Bergwall (Anderson, S.C.) 6-2, 2-6, 6-4. Finals: Fontaine vs. Michael Martinez (Tyler). 5. Scott Randolph (MC) def. David Garcia (McLennan, Tx.) 6-0, 6-1. Perfect throw nips Diablos for Travelers

Associated Press

It took a perfect throw by Arkansas Travelers first-baseman Rod Brewer to catcher Ray Stephens to preserve a 5-4 Texas League baseball victory over the El Paso Diablos.

In other Texas League action Tuesday night, San Antonio defeated Shreveport, 4-2, Wichita whipped Jackson, 6-1, and Midland defeated Tulsa, 10-5.

Brewer caught a pop foul hit by El Paso's D.L. Smith past first base, as Shon Ashley waited at third, with just one out in the ninth inning. Brewer's catch made it two down, but Ashley tagged up and headed for home after the ball was in Brewer's glove.

Stephens tagged out Ashley for the third out.

The winning pitcher was Frank Potestio, 3-2. The loser was Mike Costello, 0-1.

A triple by Homar Rojas in the seventh inning powered the San Antonio Missions to a 4-2 victory over the Shreveport Captains.

Aikman wants to start for Cowboys, and avoid spotlight

By Ric Bucher
Copley News Service

IRVING, Texas — Maintaining a low profile is one of Troy Aikman's favorite pursuits. Becoming the first-string quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys, at the moment, is another one.

Aikman knows all too well how incompatible those two pursuits are. For $11.2 million, he's willing to try.

"I feel a little uncomfortable with the attention I've received," said Aikman earlier this month inside the Cowboys' training-camp complex. "But you just have to get along with it. I don't think my approach will change at all. You make your situation whatever you want it to be."

It's not as if Aikman's name wasn't of the household variety before the Cowboys made him the first pick in the 1989 NFL draft. Which NFL team would finish with the worst record last season, and thereby receive first choice in the draft, was unofficially dubbed the "Troy Aikman Derby." Even before his senior season at UCLA began, he was being touted as a favorite to win the 1988 Heisman Trophy.

Losing out to Oklahoma State running back Barry Sanders for that honor did little to diminish Aikman's attractiveness in NFL circles, which became obvious with his pre-draft signing by the Cowboys to a six-year contract worth $11.2 million, reportedly the most lucrative deal ever obtained by an NFL rookie. Then again, when you're 6-foot-3, 217 pounds and have the foot speed and arm strength Aikman has, few things stand in your way.

The local attention given the Bruins' football program in Los Angeles, however, does not compare to that lavished upon the Cowboys by denizens of Dallas.

"In L.A., it was easy for me," Aikman said. "UCLA wasn't the hottest thing going. You had a lot of other teams — the Lakers, the Raiders, the Rams — who were a bigger deal. With the Cowboys, it's different."

Particularly for a blond-haired, blue-eyed QB who will receive $2 million next season — and is expected to earn it by single-armedly improving last year's record, 3-13.

"The contract and everything else hasn't been a problem so far," he said. "The teammates I've met so far have been extremely good to me."

In some ways, unwittingly. Veteran defensive tackle Kevin Brooks provided protection by failing to show up for the start of the team's three-week spring practice. Running back Herschel Walker has run interference by revealing his interest in other avocations, which include fighting Mike Tyson and joining the FBI, in no particular order.

And then there's owner Jerry Jones, who, since purchasing the team in February, has lambasted the franchise's previously revered figures — Coach Tom Landry and scout Gil Brandt being two — after firing them.

Aikman has done nothing to draw attention, either. Other than buying his mother a Cadillac for Mother's Day, he hasn't spent his salary on any flashy purchases. He plans to live in an apartment until the '89 season is over, at which time he'll start house-shopping. His approach on the field has been equally reserved.

"I've never approached the leadership role as a holler-and-shout type," he said. "I've tried just to lead by example. Once you show the people what you can do, that's where you gain your respect."

As next season draws near, however, the focus is sure to be on his progress reading NFL defenses.

"Troy's got a tremendous amount of talent," said Jimmy Johnson, who replaced Landry. "I feel like he's coming along just fine."

Johnson, however, is not ready to officially name Aikman as his starting quarterback next season.

"We're prepared to go with the best quarterback at that time," he said. "If that's Troy, then it's Troy."

It would appear, however, that Aikman has a near-lock on the job, especially with the request by last year's starting quarterback, Steve Pelluer, to be traded. Pelluer also has not been participating in the Cowboys' spring practice, which leaves Aikman and veteran Danny White as the only candidates.

"I'd be doing the same things if Steve were here," said Aikman. "It really hasn't changed anything."

That includes his own perspective of whether he will take the first snap of the Cowboys' 1989 season.

Steroids sideline Harvesters

PAMPA, Texas (AP) — Four Pampa High School students have been suspended from sports-related activities for the rest of the school year because of steroid use, an athletic official said.

The four, juniors who were taking part in off-season football conditioning, were found to have used steroids in the last 2½ weeks, said Dennis Cavalier, athletic director and football coach.

Two of the four twice used anabolic steroid injections of the hormone testosterone, while the other two used only one injection each, Cavalier said.

"They are on suspension from all activities in the athletic department, including the use of facilities themselves — the weight room, et cetera," Cavalier told the Amarillo-Globe News.

Of the four, one started on the varsity team last season, one played junior varsity and the other two did not play football until this spring, said Cavalier. He also said he believes the four were the only ones using steroids.

Steroid use increases muscular build, but testing has proved its side effects can be dangerous.

Among those side effects are an aggressive behavioral change, potential heart damage and liver cancer, shrinking of the testicles, changes in the cholesterol and lipid makeup, enhancement of male pattern baldness, increased acne and premature closure of the bone plates, which stunts growth in young users.

"My feeling is how can you make the decision to participate knowing the short-term, long-term negative effects?" Cavalier said. "Folks who get involved in this are trying to accomplish some kind of muscular advantage. It seems to me that it's a hollow thing."

Market for Pelleur?

IRVING, Texas (AP) — A week after Cowboys quarterback Steve Pelluer asked to be traded after becoming disgruntled with contract negotiations, onlookers are asking whether there's a market for the five-year NFL veteran.

The answer to that question: You bet.

"Any veteran quarterback has value," said Green Bay Packers executive vice president Tom Braatz. "(For) anyone that has started in this league, there is a market value out there."

"Sure, I think there is (a market for Pelluer)," said Dick Steinberg, director of player development for the New England Patriots. "He is not a sure thing, but he has shown he has the talent to move the ball."

Feds seek leniency for 'Rose' bookie

CINCINNATI (AP) — Federal prosecutors are asking leniency for Ronald Peters, identified by authorities as a bookmaker who has accepted perhaps more than $1 million on behalf of Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose.

Peters, 31, is awaiting sentencing by U.S. District Judge S. Arthur Spiegel after announcing he will plead guilty to charges of cocaine distribution and making false statements on his 1985 tax return. A court clerk said Tuesday that a sentencing date hasn't been set by Spiegel.

Twin Cities set for big weekend

From Staff Reports

ODESSA— Twin Cities Speedway will host the Texas Late Model Stock Car championships Friday and Saturday with the Grand American Racing Tour staging its first race of the season. The gates open 6 p.m. and racing begins at 8:30 p.m., after qualifying, both nights.

Pro Stock, street stock, and pure divisions will be offered Friday, along with spectator drags while qualifying for late Super Late Models begins 7 p.m. Saturday and heat races, trophy dash and 50-lap championship feature beginning at 8:30 p.m.

Junior Robertson of Midland is the current point leader and is an early entry in what he has described as "the toughest field he has seen at Twin Cities Speedway in two years."

The TCS has added 1,200 metal grandstands and restrooms.

A National Demolition Derby is scheduled June 3 and the Joey Chitwood show is June 7.

Ryan beats KC, but Bo belts 461-foot er

Associated Press

Even as Nolan Ryan beat the Kansas City Royals, Bo Jackson started to get even.

Ryan improved his record against Kansas City to 22-11 as Texas took a 10-0 lead in the fourth inning and hung on for a 10-8 victory over the Royals Tuesday night.

But the lasting memory for the fans at Arlington Stadium will be Jackson's 461-foot, three-run homer in the fifth.

"Bo has tremendous bat speed and you know how hard Nolan throws it," Texas shortstop Scott Fletcher said. "Boom! It was out of here."

It was Jackson's 11th home run of the season and came after he had struck out six consecutive times against Ryan.

Jackson was upset with the loss and didn't want to talk about the homer.

"I wasn't throwing very well," said Ryan, 5-2, who struck out six to increase his major league-leading total to 79. "I lost the groove and never recovered."

Luis Aquino, 3-1, allowed six hits and six runs in 1 2-3 innings. He had won five consecutive decisions since a 7-6 loss to Baltimore on Aug. 13, 1986, his first big-league decision.

Kansas City, which has lost six straight, scored five runs in the sixth, one in the eighth and two in the ninth.

Blue Jays 2, Twins 1

John Moses dropped Kelly Gruber's fly ball for a three-base error in the ninth inning and George Bell followed with a sacrifice fly to drive in the winning run.

Tigers 7, Indians 2

Mike Trujillo pitched a six-hitter for his third career complete game and Gary Ward drove in two runs.

Cleveland, tops in the AL East with a 21-22 record, is the first team with a sub-.500 record to lead a division this late in the season.

Trujillo, 1-0, held the Indians hitless until Mark Salas doubled to lead off the sixth. Trujillo won for the first time since Sept. 27, 1987, striking out six and walking one.

Greg Swindell, 4-1, gave up five hits and six runs in 2 2-3 innings.

Red Sox 6, Mariners 5

Ellis Burks doubled with two outs in the ninth and scored on Dwight Evans' single as Boston overcame 4-0 and 5-2 deficits.

Burks popped a double down the right-field line off Jerry Reed, 3-3. Mike Greenwell was walked intentionally and Evans, who tied the game with an RBI double in the eighth, hit the first pitch over left fielder Greg Briley and off the 37-foot wall.

Lee Smith, 2-1, retired one batter in the ninth after Rob Murphy had allowed just two singles in 2 2-3 innings.

Orioles 9, White Sox 3

Mike Devereaux hit a two-run homer and Mickey Tettleton, Billy Ripken and Larry Sheets hit solo homers for Baltimore.

Bob Milacki, 2-4, allowed eight hits in 7 1-3 innings, struck out four and walked two. Baltimore, which has won five of its last seven, also hit four home runs on April 25 against California.

Bill Long, 2-5, gave up six hits and four runs in 3 1-3 innings for the White Sox, who have lost five straight.

Brewers 9, Athletics 1

Jim Gantner doubled to cap a three-run fifth inning and Rob Deer hit his 11th homer to start a five-run seventh. Deer is tied with the Royals' Jackson for the AL lead in homers.

Gantner's two-out, two-run double gave the Brewers a 3-1 lead in the fifth off Bob Welch, 6-3, who had a three-game winning streak snapped.

Chris Bosio, 6-3, allowed 10 hits in seven innings.

Ballesteros boosts position in Europe

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Severiano Ballesteros of Spain strengthened his position atop the PGA European Tour prize-money list Tuesday and Ronan Rafferty of Northern Ireland moved into third place with their play at the Italian Open.

Ballesteros, seeking his third Vardon Trophy in four years as top money-winner in Europe, finished in a tie for seventh at the weekend tournament. He has earnings of $169,245 after 13 events this season.

Compatriot Jose Maria Olazabal did not play at the Italian Open but remained in second place.

Murray

Okay, break up the Lakers. I've seen enough. Tell the Pistons or the Bulls to mail the loss in.

Oh, sure, Phoenix was not so easy. Phoenix almost fooled them.

That's not the point. The point is, the Lakers win playoff games when they are down 41-12. And, then, they win playoff games with Magic Johnson on the bench for the critical part of the game.

I mean, it's considered an act of faith the Lakers cannot win anything without Magic. Magic has to have the ball, not a seat, for the Lakers to be champions.

Giving Magic the basketball is like giving Hitler an army, Jesse James a gang, or Genghis Khan a horse. Devastation. Havoc. He's one of the more demoralizing forces in sports, Dempsey with a hook, an Unser with a car, Henry Aaron on a slow curve.

MAGIC JOHNSON without a basketball is an offense against nature.

You have to bear in mind Magic hasn't fouled out of a playoff game since Reagan's first term in office. In fact, first year. He hasn't fouled out of any kind of game in 5 years.

Magic is usually too smooth to draw a whistle. He has this guile-less face of a kid playing an angel in a school play. He has practiced the art of looking incredulous till he's better at it than a New York pickpocket. Magic's "Who me?!" look is as good as the rest of his game. Injured innocence is as big a part of his arsenal as the full-court pass. Magic could get his gun back after a holdup. Jack the Ripper would have been freed if he could feign the reproachful, pained look Magic musters up right after he has knocked somebody out of bounds or charged to the basket like a runaway freight as he did twice in a little over a minute Saturday.

NATIONAL Basketball Association protocol calls for the official to look for the nearest part-time player to deal off the foul call in these situations. Wilt Chamberlain, for example, never fouled out of a game in his life. In those days, they were afraid customers would call for their money back.

But, Magic got too reckless in Game 1 of the conference playoffs Saturday. He roughed up more guys on his way to the basket than a Mafia loan collector. Magic came through the key like a fullback on the 1-yard line. They either had to give Phoenix a foul or the last rites.

Magic, of course, acted as if he couldn't believe it. It was a case of mistaken identity. Persecution. He grimaced, rolled his eyes heavenward, tried to look the way you imagined Joan of Arc or the prisoner of Shark Island looked.

IT DIDN'T work. Magic had to sit out almost the whole third quarter and there were only 7 minutes left in the game when he came back in the fourth period. The Lakers had squandered a 16-point lead in the course of the action. He soaked up his final, disqualifying foul with 2:23 to play and the Lakers in front 116-111.

When you can still win a game with your best player (and maybe the world's) playing spectator for most of the last half of it, you might be the basketball equivalent of the 1927 Yankees or the Lombardi Packers or Rockne Notre Dames. You might have a better bench than Custer's Indians.

The Suns completely misunderstood their role. This wasn't supposed to be a game, it was supposed to be a festival. They were just supposed to be the scenery. The Lakers were to give an exhibition of championship basketball, the Suns were the props. It was supposed to be Tyson-Spinks. But it turned out to be more Dempsey-Firpo.

The subs, in a sense, won it. While Magic was out, instead of just staging a delaying action, just trying to keep the game in sight till their leader returned, they carried the fight to Phoenix.

THE PHOENIX Suns are kind of the mystery guests in the tournament this year. A funny little team of anonymous nobodies, as unknown as a bunch of stage coach robbers, they proved to be young, fast and not at all in awe of the two-time world champions. They were all over the Lakers like a posse after a rustler.

Magic wasn't even the No.1 Johnson when he was on the floor Saturday. Phoenix' Kevin was the one-man Johnson team Saturday — 27 points, 18 assists, 3 rebounds in 46 minutes. He does all this with the kind of calm, almost bored, look on his face of a guy painting a fence.

But, if the Lakers can win with Magic on the bench and the Phoenix Johnson dishing off Hall of Fame stats — if they can win spotting playoff opponents 29 points — they may have to get them their own league. If 31 minutes out of Magic Johnson is enough for the Lakers, they're not a team, they're a dynasty. If Chicago had to do without Michael Jordan for 17 minutes would they be a lot of Bull? And the Celtics without Larry Bird, anybody notice what happened to them?

Gullickson hurls Yomiuri to win

TOKYO (AP) — Former major-leaguer Bill Gullickson pitched the Yomiuri Giants to a 7-3 Japanese baseball victory over the Yakult Swallows 7-3 Tuesday.

Gullickson limited the Swallows to two hits over six innings for his second victory against one defeat.

Matt Keough pitched a two-hitter over 6 2-3 innings and hit his first home run of the season, leading the Hanshin Tigers to a 7-3 triumph over the Chunichi Dragons. Keough, formerly with the Houston Astros, is 4-1.

The Orix Braves downed the Nippon Ham Fighters 7-3 on 16 hits including a solo homer by Greg "Boomer" Wells. Wells, formerly with the Minnesota Twins, has 11 homers.

Tony Bernazard, formerly with the Oakland Athletics, hit a two-run double in a five-run seventh inning, helping the Fukuoka Daiei Hawks beat the Lotte Orions 8-3.

Hextall 'wrong'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ron Hextall said Tuesday he shouldn't have picked a fight with Montreal's Chris Chelios, but the Philadelphia Flyers goalie said he shouldn't have been suspended 12 games, either.

The penalty, which begins at the start of next season, was imposed Monday by the NHL for Hextall's attack on Chelios in the final minutes of their Stanley Cup semifinal, won by the Canadiens.

"I know I was wrong, but I also know what Chris Chelios did to Brian Propp was far more vicious than what I did to Chelios," Hextall said. He referred to Chelios' opening-game elbow that gave Propp a concussion and put him out of the second game.

Chelios received neither a game penalty nor league discipline, despite a formal protest by the Flyers.

"Show and Tell" was an educational experience when we were at school. At the bridge table, it could be fatal to tell declarer, who might be faced with a choice of ways to tackle a hand, which line is destined to fail.

North-South used a straightforward auction to get to their best game contract. With 14 points in prime cards and key cards in his partner's suit, South had an easy acceptance of his partner's invitation to three no trump.

West led his fourth best spade, won in the closed hand. The king of diamonds lost to the ace, and West won the spade return with the ace and continued with the eight to force out declarer's last stopper.

Now, declarer had to guess whether to take the club finesse or play East for the ace of hearts to make his contract. West's defense provided the clues to the winning line. His hurry to take the ace of spades and his return of the eight both suggested a fast re-entry in hearts—the higher-ranking of the two key side suits. So declarer decided to take West's play at its face value and rely on the club finesse for his contract. Making three-odd.

There is no guarantee that declarer, left to his own devices, would not have made the contract anyway. However, had West revealed little or nothing about his hand, he would have had a sporting chance to defeat the contract. When East returned a spade, West should have followed with the five. That might have caused declarer to surmise that spades were 4-3, and that he could afford to force out the ace of hearts with impunity. He would soon have learned that that expectation would prove his undoing.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Drummer Michael Clarke, an original member of the 1960s rock group, The Byrds, has permission from a judge to continue using the name of the band for one he has formed.

Clarke was sued in U.S. District Court by three former band members — Roger McGuinn, Chris Hillman and David Crosby.

They accused Clarke, Artists International Management Inc. in Boca Raton and AIM agent Steve Green of false advertising and unfair competition in using the name The Byrds.

Judge William Castagna said last Thursday that he found little to support the accusations and allowed the 45-year-old Clarke to use the name.

The judge said the former band members have known for at least four years that Clarke had used the name in more than 300 concerts but didn't try to stop him. The suit was filed more than a month ago.

The Byrds hit the top of the charts in 1965 with "Mr. Tambourine Man," then followed with other hits including "Eight Miles High," "Mr. Spaceman" and "Turn! Turn! Turn!"

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — British rock star Sting visited Australia's hottest environmental trouble spot after meeting Primè Minister Bob Hawke to promote a campaign to save Amazonian rain forests.

The former singer of the group Police went to the Eden rain forests near the Snowy Mountains of southern New South Wales to show his support for the conservation issue.

Since February, 550 demonstrators have been arrested at the Eden forests. Shortly after Sting's visit Tuesday, police arrrested for trespassing 28 demonstrators who walked into a protected area of the forests.

Sting's visit caps a world tour that has included Britain, the United States and Japan to raise awareness for the vanishing jungles of Brazil.

"I don't pretend to be an expert on this problem here," he said. "But one thing I did learn while in Japan recently is that they don't log their own forests. They don't need to, they log yours."

Hawke pledged $187,500 toward the protection of the Amazon rain forests.

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Three-time Country Music Association Entertainer of the Year Hank Williams Jr. returned for an "apology concert" and said "some idiot" drugged him before his aborted May 6 concert.

Williams

"When you're a champion, they like to knock you down," Williams told the audience Tuesday night.

Williams began his previous performance with rambling 20-minute speech, made a false start on several songs, cursed the crowd and stormed offstage.

Williams, 39, who is known for his songs of hard drinking and rowdy living, agreed to pay concert organizers $65,000. He later offered to do Tuesday's concert at his expense.

"I hate drugs," Williams told Teusday night's sell-out crowd of 10,000. "I detest drugs. I'll have me a beer, and I'll have me a drink, (but) drugs have killed too many people...

"I'm mad for them (the fans) and I'm mad for me," Williams said.

He told the crowd that "some idiot" had slipped "a foreign substance in my drink" before the May 6 show.

Analyst: Oil demand higher than expected

By ANNE PEARSON
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — World demand for oil is growing more rapidly than experts expected, which should set a firm base for rising oil prices, according to William L. Randol, analyst for First Boston Corp.

Addressing oil contractors here, Randol said analysts last year predicted a 1 percent to 1.5 percent growth rate in world oil demand, but it now appears the world's appetite for oil will grow annually by 2.5 percent.

This bodes well for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, Randol said. The cartel should be able to raise its daily sales quotas – now at 18.5 million barrels per day -- by 1 million barrels a day in each of the next few years.

"OPEC will be back in the driver's seat in the early '90s rather than in the mid- to late 1990s, as we thought earlier," Randol said.

In the United States, demand for oil is growing more slowly,a at a rate of about 1.6 percent annually. The need to import oil is gaining speed, however, and U.S. imports are projected to grow from 42 percent of the oil consumed domestically last year to some 56 percent by 1993.

"We see OPEC crossing the 23 million barrel-a-day production threshold in 1992 or 1993. That will put them at about 80 percent of (oil producing) capacity," Randol said.

That 80 percent level is key, he noted, because studies show that when demand for a basic commodity exceeds 80 percent of capacity, the price tends to firm.

West Texas Intermediate, the U.S. benchmark crude, should climb by roughly $1 a year and reach $23 a barrel by 1993, Randol said.

Consortium to study superconductor uses

WASHINGTON (AP) — A university and two giant companies that are leaders in technology research have joined forces to try to beat Japan in development of commercial uses for superconductors.

The announcement by the American Telephone & Telegraph Corp., International Business Machines and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on Tuesday said the consortium's goal is develop applications for the new technology.

Superconductors are ceramic materials cooled to beyond minus 200 degrees Fahrenheit, at which point they can let electricity pass through them without resistance.

In theory, superconductors could let energy be stored and sent without any loss of strength and more cheaply than is now possible. Potential uses include faster computers and more powerful batteries and motors.

Both the United States and Japan are researching superconductors, but the U.S. has the edge.

The goal of the consortium is to make sure American firms, rather than those from Japan, have the advantage in commercial application of the research.

"This will be a consortium of open communication among the researchers involved," the three organizations said in a joint statement. "The combining of their scientific knowledge and their knowledge of applications will benefit the nation."

The new organization will be called the Consortium for Superconducting Electronics. Researchers will remain at their present locations but will share information.

In January, the White House Science Council said such an organization was needed if the United States wanted to avoid what occurred in laser and videotape technology.

Both were created in the United States but were commercially exploited by Japan.

Crude oil prices head upward

Crude oil future prices headed upward today while the posted price of West Texas Intermediate remained at $19.25, according to Permian Corp.

Prices, at mid-morning stood at $19.32 up 28 cents from Tuesday, which saw futures prices rise in brisk trading on speculation that OPEC members may maintain their current production levels and benchmark price.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the July contract for West Texas Intermediate, the major grade of U.S. crude, settled at $19.04 a 42-gallon barrel, up 43 cents. The June contract expired Monday and finished at $20.93, with a gain of 33 cents from Friday's close.

Prices of crude oil contracts for delivery later than July all posted gains.

Among refined products traded on the exchange, wholesale home heating oil for delivery in June rose 0.52 of a cent to 47.50 cents a gallon after falling 1.08 cents on Monday. The June contract for unleaded gasoline rose 0.34 cent to 64.24 cents a gallon following Monday's decline of 1.29 cents.

Analysts said crude demand was sparked by new theories about the possible outcome of next month's meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The latest speculation centered on the possibility the cartel may decide against adjusting its output ceiling and altering its $18-a-barrel benchmark price when members gather in Vienna on June 5.

U.S. firms in China cautious

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. companies operating in China are reacting to the tumultuous political events there by delaying visits and telling expatriate workers to avoid street protests, but few are taking people out of the country.

Many companies believe it's premature to even consider divestment or withdrawal, particularly because the protests aren't anti-foreign and violence has been rare.

But many were surprised at how quickly the government's seeming stability weakened because of the Beijing demonstrations for democratic reforms.

"So much depends on what ultimately happens here," Jerome Cohen, a lawyer and expert on doing business with the Chinese, said in a telephone interview from his Hong Kong residence.

Republicans join assault on S&L bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration braced itself for new assaults today on the president's bill to crack down on abusive and often fraudulent savings and loan operators.

Although he got all he wanted and more from the Senate and the House Banking Committee in seeking to make S&L operators put more of their own money at risk, President Bush faced new opposition to his plan today from House members in his own party.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said he would offer an amendment today before the House Judiciary Committee to make S&L regulators go through lengthy hearings before making thrift operators put up billions of dollars in new capital.

Robert Glauber, Bush's No. 2 official at the Treasury Department, called Hyde's measure "a grave error."

Meanwhile, Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., chairman of the panel's subcommittee on crime, was heading an effort backed by the American Bankers Association to cut back on the sharp increases in fines and jail terms in Bush's bill for S&L and bank fraud.

Bush's proposal, approved by both the full Senate and the House Banking Committee, would raise from the current five years to 20 years the maximum sentence for bank and S&L fraud and embezzlement. The maximum fine would rise from $5,000 to $1 million.

Fraud has been blamed by the General Accounting Office, regulatory officials and the Justice Department as the single biggest contributor to what has become the nation's largest financial crisis since the Depression.

The legislation is the price the administration is demanding for a $90 billion bailout of the industry.

Bush jumped into the fray Tuesday, asking House leaders in a letter "to hold absolutely firm against any attempt to weaken those vital elements ... which protect the American taxpayer from additional costs."

"Now is the time for the House to act," Bush said in identical letters to House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, Democratic Leader Tom Foley of Washington, Democratic Whip Tony Coelho of California, House Republican Leader Bob Michel of Illinois and House GOP Whip Newt Gingrich of Georgia.

"Bipartisan majorities in both the Senate and House have defeated determined special interest lobbying against the tough capital standards needed to protect American taxpayers from a repeat of this tragedy."

Dollar still stronger; Gold falls

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was stronger against most foreign currencies except the British pound in active European trading late this morning. Gold prices fell.

Dealers said the dollar remains well-supported above the 2-Deutsche mark level, despite concerted central bank intervention Tuesday and overnight dollar sales by the Bank of Japan.

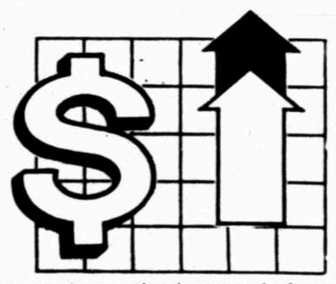
Other dollar rates at midmorning compared with late Tuesday:

- 2.0113 West German marks, up from 2.0079
- 1.7875 Swiss francs, up from 1.7820
- 6.8150 French francs, up from 6.7865
- 2.2740 Dutch guilders, up from 2.2570
- 1,459.35 Italian lire, up from 1,451.50
- 1.1992 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1975



In London, the pound rose after the Bank of England signaled a one percentage point increase in base lending rates to 14 percent. One pound cost $1.5685 at late morning, slightly more expensive for buyers than $1.5675 late Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $362.75 a troy ounce, down from late Tuesday's $364.35. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $362.50. In Zurich, the bid price was $362.50 compared with $364.25 late Tuesday.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.17 dollars a troy ounce, down from Tuesday's $5.26.

Stocks falls in moderate trading

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fell in moderate trading Tuesday as the market took a breather amid concern about the dollar's strength and the pace of economic growth.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 24.01 points to finish the day at 2,478.01.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by about 8 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 938 issues down, 594 up and 469 unchanged.

Tough anti-takeover bill unveiled

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Gov. Michael S. Dukakis has proposed some of the nation's toughest barriers to hostile takeovers in an effort to protect Massachusetts companies from corporate raiders.

The former Democratic presidential candidate said Tuesday the barriers would include mandatory severance pay for workers laid off during takeover battles and a higher percentage of share ownership required for control.

Dukakis said he hoped the package would inspire similar measures across the nation. He had called for anti-takeover action during last year's presidential campaign.

"In the absence of federal action ... the states have got to move — and we're going to move," he said.

The governor outlined the legislation in Cambridge's Technology Square, outside the headquarters of Polaroid Corp., which recently staved off a $3.1 billion hostile bid from Shamrock Holdings Inc. of Burbank, Calif.

Dukakis said Polaroid's experience helped shape the bill.

The instant photography company, which is incorporated in Delaware, made use of a Delaware law that bars completion of a takeover for three years unless the raider either gets approval of the target company or buys 85 percent of its stock.

By placing millions of its shares in friendly hands through an employee stock ownership plan, Polaroid made it virtually impossible for Shamrock to reach the 85 percent level.

The Massachusetts law would go further, raising the threshold to 90 percent. It also would be triggered earlier — delaying a takeover as soon as a hostile bidder acquires 5 percent of a public company's stock, rather than 15 percent, as in Delaware.

The bill was drafted by a 27-member commission appointed by Dukakis. Members included labor leaders, corporate executives, lawyers and legislators.

Some provisions, such as the severance pay, are expected to draw opposition from business lobbyists.

Merger specialists also predicted that the 5 percent threshold would be challenged in court as an unconstitutional intrusion on federal authority over interstate commerce.

"It's an admirable effort, but the question is going to come down to state regulation versus federal regulation, and I think there's going to be a lot of debate about it," said Thomas J. Dougherty, a partner in the law firm of Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom. "They're going to be in and out of court."

Dukakis maintained the legislation was not designed to ban takeovers, or even hostile takeovers. It's designed the block takeover specialists from buying companies, laying off workers and then selling the companies piecemeal at big profits.

"The aim is to force takeover artists to be socially responsible," he said.

Among the provisions is a requirement that an acquiring company assume all of the takeover target's labor contracts.

In addition, boards of directors would be given explicit permission to consider the interests of employees, customers and communities in deciding whether to reject an offer. That would help insulate directors from lawsuits by shareholders who favor selling out quickly for the highest price.

From the time a raider acquires 5 percent of a company's stock until two years after the takeover is completed, all employees who are laid off without good cause would be entitled to two weeks severance pay for each year they had been employed.

Also, the legislation would make it easier for corporations to set up shareholder rights plans, or "poison pill" defenses, which boost the price of a takeover.

Proponents of the takeovers that have reshaped corporate America this decade contend that hostile bids have shaken up entrenched managers and forced companies to pay more attention to providing a good return to stockholders.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

No hint given in efforts to slow dollar

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top Federal Reserve official gave no indication the central bank might ease credit to slow the rise of the dollar against foreign currencies, saying that curbing inflation remains the Fed's top priority.

Fed governor Robert Heller's remarks Tuesday at the National Economists Club came in response to rapid rise in the dollar's value, which some economists say has taken pressure off the Fed to keep interest rates high in order to thwart inflation.

Penny stock employees plead guilty

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Four former employees of a now-defunct penny stock brokerage pleaded guilty in connection with a fraud scheme that prosecutors say cost customers $67 million.

The pleas Tuesday in federal district court by the ex-workers in F.D. Roberts Securities Inc. came against the background of an avowed federal crackdown on penny stock scams that prosecutors say is a major part of white-collar crime.

Thrift files suit to leave insurance fund

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Great Western Financial Corp. accused federal regulators of unfairly thwarting a plan by the nation's No. 3 savings & loan to leave the thrift industry's federal insurance fund.

The lawsuit filed Tuesday against the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reflected the anger felt by managers of healthy S&Ls who blame sloppy or dishonest rivals for the crisis in the fund that insures customers' deposits.

Hamburger Place eyes expansion

By MELLA McEWEN

McEwen

The Hamburger Place — formerly 39 Cent Hamburgers — has been undergoing changes since its purchase and the concept may spread throughout the Basin, says Gil Mowbray, who also owns Der Wienerschnitzel.

But, Mowbray notes, he will still carry the 39 cent hamburger.

He says that if the chain does well, he hopes to have an additional 10 to 15 Hamburger Places throughout the Permian Basin.

He explains he was invited to look at the restaurants by the previous owners, from whom he rented the Wienerschnitzel location. "I thought the restaurants had a future," he notes, "so I bought the two in Midland and two in Odessa, cleaned them and upgraded the equipment and service." He also introduced a family pack with six hamburgers, two orders of fries and soft drinks.

•••

Also undergoing changes is FURRS CAFETERIA, located at Midkiff and Cuthbert.

Karen Williams, interior designer in the company's Lubbock office, explained that the cafeteria is undergoing extensive remodeling both inside and outside to give it a more modern look. When the remodeling is finished, both dining rooms will be open.

She says demolition of interior walls has just begun, and the project is expected to take six to eight months.

Midland's newest chiropractic center is helping patients help others.

Dr. Debra Sensabaugh, owner of Care Chiropractic Center located in North Park Shopping Center next to Sally's Beauty Supplies, explains that her office will waiver the insurance deductible if a patient will bring in 12 cans of food for the Permian Basin Food Bank. In addition, she will waive the co-payment each visit if the patient brings in a can of food.

Sensabaugh, who just moved to Midland from the Missouri Ozarks, also offers a spinal care health care class free to the general public on Thursday nights from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Clinic hours are from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 3:30 to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturdays.

•••

Undergoing a change is Stroman, Stoltz, Henthorn, Binggeli and Rosgnol Insurance Associates, which has changed its name to THE INWEST GROUP and moved offices to 6 Desta Drive, Suite 5550.

•••

On the move is RED WING SHOES, which will be moving from 315 Dodson to 412 Andrews Highway and open for business in their new home Memorial Day.

Gary Walling, manager, notes that actually the new location will house two business: Red Wing, which sells Red Wing work shoes, and Friday's Boot Co., which repairs and makes boots.

Hours are from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8:30 to 5 p.m. Saturdays.

•••

Mr. Tom's Hair Salon, located at 2302 Big Spring, has been taken over by former employee Sylvia Lozano and renamed MANE ATTRACTIONS.

According to Lozano, Mane Attractions offers haircuts and styling, permanents, highlighting, manicures and pedicures. She currently employs three hairdressers, two manicurists and a shampoo and color technician. She is on the lookout for two more hairdressers.

Hours are from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, though the shop closes a little earlier on Saturdays. Appointments and walk-ins are accepted.

Sematech moves toward chip development

New York Times News Service

DALLAS — Sematech, the semiconductor industry's two-year-old consortium for manufacturing research, Tuesday awarded its first development contracts to seven companies for advanced equipment and supplies required to produce a new generation of computer chips.

The announcement confirmed that the consortium was moving into a second phase in its effort to develop, by 1993, the ability to manufacture chips more advanced than those produced in Japan, at high volumes.

The chips involved are dynamic random access memory chips, or D-RAMs, which are the most widely used type of memory chip, found in computers, telephones and other electronic products. Japanese chipmakers now produce more than 90 percent of all D-RAMs.

This year, Sematech, using equipment contributed mainly by the American Telephone and Telegraph Corp. and International Business Machines, began producing chips at quality levels that it said matched those of any Japanese chip maker.

The circuits on those chips are etched in lines that measure .8 microns, smaller than one-hundredth the width of a human hair. Advanced chip production in Asia and the United States currently is at the level of .8 microns, and is expected to improve to half a micron before the end of 1991.

Sematech's chief executive, Dr. Robert N. Noyce, has said that the goal of the group's second phase is to achieve high-volume production at the half-micron level by 1991.

Its ultimate goal is to reduce the density to .35 micron in 1993, a level that Japanese chip makers are not expected to be able to match.

"Sematech is on a very successful track," said George Bodway, director of systems program planning for the Hewlett-Packard Co. and one of Sematech's directors.

Hewlett-Packard was the only member of the consortium to be awarded one of the contracts announced Tuesday.

The Sematech member companies account for 80 percent of all computer-chip making capacity in the U.S.

They and the Defense Department formed the research group with the blessing of the Reagan administration and Congress in 1987 to accelerate gains in the nation's chip-making technology.

The 14 members, which include AT&T, IBM, the Digital Equipment Corp. and the Intel Corp., among others, contribute half of its annual budget of about $250 million.

The balance of the funding comes mostly from the Defense Department. The Texas state government also supports the consortium, which is in Austin, Tex. All the companies in the consortium will have access to any technology developed by Sematech.

Michael Boss, an industry analyst at Dataquest, in San Jose, Calif., said Tuesday's announcement indicated that Sematech was fulfilling an important goal: knitting together the efforts of a variety of technology companies.

The contracts announced Tuesday reflected the full range of the complex process of chip production. Ateq, of Beaverton, Ore., will develop masks, or stencils, for circuit designs. GCA, a unit of General Signal based in Andover, Mass., will develop the photo-lithography process for transferring designs to silicon chips.

Hewlett-Packard will design tests to gauge the quality of the sub-micron production system during its development stage. Westech, of Phoenix, will make equipment required for allowing electric current to flow through circuits on stacked chips.

Also, a team composed of three rivals in natural-gas technology was awarded a contract to develop pure gas pipelines, filters and other technology for Sematech.

The three are Union Carbide Industrial Gasses, of Danbury, Conn.; SemiGas, a subsidiary of Hercules Inc., in San Jose, Calif., and Wilson Oxygen and Supply, of Austin.

CHINA

"I'm still holding open the possibility that a new surge of modernization, a more open China, could come out of this."

Roger Sullivan, president of the U.S.-China Business Council, a Washington-based association of American companies with interests in China, said business requests for information have multiplied to 50 or 60 daily since the crisis intensified, compared with two or three a day ordinarily.

But Sullivan said he knew of no companies that were rethinking their long-term plans in China.

"There's a lot of hand-wringing going on. But companies are intelligent enough not to make decisions in that environment," he said. "Companies don't react to something like this until they see the longer-term implications."

The unprecedented demonstrations come against a background of broadening U.S. business operations in the world's most populous country, with a range of ventures including open-pit coal mining and nuclear power.

The United States is a leading foreign investor in China and one of its most important trading partners. More than 600 U.S.-Chinese joint ventures have been established since relations were normalized a decade ago.

Telephone interviews Tuesday with business consultants and executives in the United States, China and Hong Kong suggested many visits to Beijing had been delayed until the crisis stabilizes.

Most postponements were attributed to a U.S. State Department travel advisory and uncertainty over whether the demonstrations would turn violent.

"Everybody is just tentatively rescheduling things," Cohen said.

Some companies also curtailed Beijing operations.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co., for example, closed its office temporarily last weekend and offered its 27 U.S. staffers the option of sending family members out. Spokesman Rick Wallerstein said it was unclear whether any had left.

GROUP

The consortium announced that research efforts will be concentrated in four areas, including signal distribution, high-temperature materials and technology, advanced devices and integrated circuits, and junctions.

The consortium will focus on applying superconductor technology to high-speed microelectronic devices for use in computers, telecommunications and military systems.

"It is a model of how universities, government labs and industry have to cooperate in the future to address a number of issues," MIT Provost John Deutch told the Times.

Ralph E. Gomory, IBM senior vice president for science and technology, told the Times that the consortium would seek $4 million to $6 million in financing from a Defense Department research agency, most of which would go to MIT.

Robert C. Dynes, director of chemical physics research at AT&T Bell Laboratories, told the Times that consortium organizers thought having big organizations involved would give the group weight to attract other members.

"I don't regard this as the big guys banding together and wiping out the little guys as much as giving the little guys an ability to get in the same building as us," he said.

Popcorn: Snack food's popularity exploding

By JUDITH LARWILL
Copley News Service

It used to be that popcorn was popcorn. Getting fancy meant buying Jiffy Pop and oohing and ahhing as you watched the foil cover puff up over the disposable pan.

Today the popcorn section of the supermarket takes up 4 to 5 feet of the snack section. The Jiffy Pop is still there, but it is dwarfed by jars of gourmet popcorn, bags of yellow, white and black popcorn and at least a half-dozen brands of microwave popcorn in various flavors.

According to the Popcorn Institute, a Chicago-based trade association representing the popcorn industry, Americans consume more popcorn than any other country. Each of us eats, on average, 12 gallons of popcorn each year, 70 percent of it at home. Midwesterners grow and consume the most popcorn, with Indiana and Illinois the top producing states.

Popcorn has come a long way since the time of the first Thanksgiving, when the Iroquois Indians introduced it to the Pilgrims. That corn was probably popped by pouring kernels into hot sand. As the kernels popped, they sprang to the surface.

Perhaps to avoid sand in their popcorn, the colonists developed the mesh shaker, a tiring way to pop corn since the operator had to constantly shake the kernels to prevent burning. In the 1930s, the first electric popper was invented, but it still required constant manual rotation by means of a handle on top.

Not until the 1940s did an inspired popcorn lover discover that the kernels needed little or no agitation if oil was added to the bottom of the cooking implement.

UNLIKE SWEET corn, popcorn is the only type that pops when the kernels are exposed to high heat.

The heat causes a tiny bit of water stored in the center of each kernel to turn to steam, building pressure until the outer surface gives way, making the popcorn explode.

Growing popcorn with the utmost "popability" has become quite a science. According to the Popcorn Institute, the ideal kernel has a 13 percent to 14.5 percent moisture content and an expansion ratio of at least 35-to-1. (Some improved hybrids expand more than 40 times.) Good popcorn also leaves less than 2 percent unpopped kernels, often referred to an "old maids."

All this science means buying popcorn isn't the simple task it used to be. Buying considerations include cost, nutrition, convenience and even color.

Compared with many snack foods, popcorn is economical, but the cost per cup varies with the form purchased. Calculating cost per cup is complicated by the fact that some popcorn pops bigger than others, a fact I discovered with some home experimenting.

Currently, bagged yellow and white corn sell for about 38 cents a pound. One cup popped costs about a penny.

The best known gourmet popcorn, Orville Redenbacher's, sells for about $1.45 a pound. The kernels pop slightly larger than regular popcorn; taking this into consideration, one cup runs you about 3 cents.

BAGGED BLACK popcorn costs just more than $1 a pound. It doesn't pop up to gourmet levels and ends up costing 2½ cents per cup.

Jiffy Pop, 4½ ounces of popcorn with oil and salt in its own disposable pan, sells for just less than $1, and a four-pack of TV Time premeasured corn, oil and salt sells for approximately $1.30, or 3 cents per cup of popped corn.

The most expensive form of popcorn is microwave popcorn, averaging 7 to 12 cents per cup of popped corn.

Plain popcorn is low in calories; one cup of air-popped corn has just 27 calories; oil-popped corn has 50 calories per cup. Adding melted butter, margarine or other flavorings boosts the calorie content. One cup of buttered popcorn weighs in with roughly 125 calories.

When you buy the popcorn kernels, you control the type of fat, if any, used to pop the corn. Polyunsaturated oils such as corn oil or soybean oil work well.

Most microwave popcorns use partially hydrogenated soybean or cottonseed oils. These oils differ from bottled vegetable oils by having a smaller percentage of polyunsaturated fat and higher levels of monounsaturated and saturated fats.

A few brands, however, such as Pillsbury's Frozen Microwave Popcorn and Paul Newman's Microwave Popcorn, list highly saturated coconut or palm oils among the ingredients.

According to Marlene Johnson, manager of product communications for The Pillsbury Co., Minneapolis, Minn., coconut oil was chosen for the frozen microwave popcorn because it is the oil used to pop corn at movie theaters and gives that familiar movie popcorn taste.

IN RESPONSE to consumers' nutrition concerns, Pillsbury now also offers a non-frozen version of microwave popcorn that uses partially hydrogenated soybean oil.

Jiffy Pop and TV Times premeasured popcorns also contain tropical oils.

Most microwave and other convenience forms of popcorn come presalted, although several brands do offer no-salt varieties.

Inventive Americans have devised a variety of gadgets for popping corn.

Hot air poppers are a boon to dieters since they require no added fat. Electric poppers, once essential equipment in dormitories, have lost popularity of late.

THE SIMPLEST popper is a heavy pot with a lid. Heat 2 tablespoons oil for each ⅓ cup of unpopped corn. Do not pop in butter since it will burn. Test heat by dropping in two or three kernels. When they pop, add the rest of the corn, put on the lid and shake it occasionally, turning off the heat once popping slows. Be sure the lid of the pot is loose enough to allow steam to escape.

Fresh popcorn has just the right amount of moisture inside and pops best, so keeping it fresh is essential to getting the most pop from the corn.

Unopened bags should be stored in the freezer or refrigerator, but once opened the kernels will retain more moisture if stored at room temperature since the air in the refrigerator-freezer is extremely dry. Vacuum-packed jars of popcorn should be stored at room temperature.

UNLESS YOU eat popcorn frequently, buy in smaller portions so that the corn maintains its peak of freshness.

'Indian spicy snacks' gain loyal following

By JULIE SAHNI
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The American love for snack foods seems unceasing.

With each new wave of culinary influence has come a new delight — shrimp wafers, rice puffs, nachos, Cajun chips and sesame sticks, to name a few — bringing a multitude of flavors and textures to the palate.

The newest arrivals on the crunchy-munchie scene are Indian spicy snacks, gaining a loyal following throughout America. These age-old snacks are sometimes given bizarre names by the manufacturers: Chickpree, for example, and Mumm-Mumm, Proteebeen and Hot Sticks.

Bob Speigel, who was the chef at the Princeton (N.J.) Charcuterie Cafe, now closed, encountered spicy snacks while visiting India in 1986. "I was completely blown away the first time I tasted it," he said. "I never knew such a thing ever existed."

After returning home, Speigel continued craving them until one day he called Arun Sinha, who owns an Indian grocery store, Foods of India, in Manhattan. Sinha suggested Hot Mix.

Known generically as chivra in India, Hot Mix is a delicious combination of 18 or so separately prepared and spiced preparations. Among them are chickpea vermicelli, broad tagliatelle, tiny pearl drops made from chickpea flour, pinwheels from rice flour, roasted peanuts, cashew nuts, sesame seeds, fried mung beans, peas and potato shreds.

THE FIRST company to introduce chivra, which means mixture, gave it the registered name Hot Mix. The company, Deep Foods of Bloomfield, N.J., says it sells 50 percent of all the of the spicy Indian snack foods sold in the United States.

"We spent several years researching in recipe development and panel testing before arriving at our combination," said Arvind Amin, the company's vice president.

Indian snacks are rich in vegetable proteins and other nutrients but generally high in salt. They are roasted or fried in oils and are free of preservatives.

New cookbooks specialize in wok cooking, fish dishes

By NATALIE HAUGHTON
New York Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — I'm a pushover for Sunset cookbooks, so whenever new releases arrive on my desk, I waste no time looking them over.

Such was the case recently when the "Wok Cook Book" ($6.95) and the "Fish & Shellfish A to Z" ($7.95), both by the Editors of Sunset Books and Sunset Magazine (Lane Publishing Co., Menlo Park, Calif.), came to my attention.

The fish cookbook is an excellent and welcome new volume that explores seafood in depth.

Particularly welcome should be the two-page guide to the cooking characteristics of fish that groups and lists specific fish according to whether they are thin and delicate, medium-dense and flaky, medium-dense with extra-firm flakes or dense and meaty.

The best ways to cook the fish within the group are also included.

A buyer's guide, which includes availability information, will assist you in identifying, preparing and cooking more than 60 different fish and shellfish.

You'll find answers to questions like: "How do I fix clams?" "Can I smoke fish on the barbecue?" and "How long does fresh caviar last?"

Recipes with nutritional data and a chart of microwave guidelines also should prove helpful.

The latest "Wok Cook Book" appears to be a repackaging of the "Sunset Complete Wok Cook Book," with 130 of its recipes appearing in the original complete volume.

Regardless, the recipes sound delicious (many are not even Chinese inspirations), and each is accompanied by a nutritional analysis.

The recipes that follow are from the "Wok Cook Book" and "Fish and Shellfish A to Z").

SPICED PECANS

Pecans, a favorite in the South, are sauteed in a pungent spice mixture in this Creole-style snack. Your guests will find them hard to resist!

½ teaspoon EACH salt, paprika and cayenne pepper
1 teaspoon white pepper
1 tablespoon fresh OR dry rosemary
2 tablespoons butter OR margarine
1 tablespoon olive oil
10 ounces (about 2½ cups) pecan halves
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon liquid hot pepper seasoning

Combine salt, paprika, cayenne pepper, white pepper and rosemary. Set aside.

Place a wok over high heat; when wok is hot, add butter and oil. When butter is melted, add pecans and stir-fry until nuts are well coated with butter and oil and slightly darker in color (about 1 minute). Add Worcestershire sauce, hot pepper seasoning, and spice mixture; continue to stir-fry until pecans are deep brown (about 1½ more minutes; be careful not to scorch nuts). Let cool. If made ahead, store airtight for up to 2 days. Makes 2½ cups.

TURKEY AND GREEN BEAN STIR-FRY

Readily available turkey breast is a nice alternative to chicken in stir-fry dishes; though not as velvety-textured as chicken, it's every bit as tasty. This easy-to-prepare dish features turkey with fresh green beans and celery; if you like, offer toasted almonds or sesame seeds to sprinkle on top.

Cooking Sauce (recipe follows)
1 egg white
2 tablespoons soy sauce
2 pounds turkey breast, skinned, boned and cut into ¼x2-inch strips
¼ cup cooking oil
½ pound green beans (ends removed), cut into 2-inch pieces
½ cup thinly sliced celery
½ cup thinly sliced onion, separated into rings
6 tablespoons water OR dry sherry
1 OR 2 cloves garlic, minced OR pressed

Prepare Cooking Sauce; set aside.

In a bowl, beat together egg white and soy sauce; add turkey and stir to coat. Set aside. Place a wok over high heat; when wok is hot, add 2 tablespoons oil. When oil is hot, add beans, celery and onion; stir-fry for about 1 minute, then add water. Cover and cook, stirring occasionally, until beans are tender-crisp to bite (about 4 minutes).

Remove vegetables from wok, then add remaining 2 tablespoons oil. When oil is hot, add garlic and ½ of turkey. Stir-fry until meat is no longer pink in center, cut to test (about 3 minutes). Remove from wok. Repeat to cook remaining turkey; return all turkey to wok along with green bean mixture. Stir Cooking Sauce, pour into wok, and stir until sauce boils and thickens. Makes 4 servings.

COOKING SAUCE: Mix 1 tablespoon EACH cornstarch and soy sauce, 2 tablespoon dry sherry, ½ teaspoon ground ginger and ½ cup water.

CHILE, SHRIMP AND CORN SALAD

3 small dried hot red chilies
¼ cup olive oil OR salad oil
½ teaspoon pepper
2 cups corn cut from cob OR 1 package (10 ounces) frozen whole-kernel corn, thawed and drained
1 medium red bell pepper, seeded and finely chopped
1 pound medium-size raw shrimp (30 to 50 per pound), shelled and deveined
1 tablespoon soy sauce
⅔ cup cider vinegar
1 pound spinach, stems removed, washed and crisped
1 pound green leaf lettuce, washed and crisped

In a wide skillet, combine chilies and oil over medium heat; cook, stirring, until chilies are lightly browned (about 4 minutes). Add pepper, corn and bell pepper. Increase heat to high and cook, stirring constantly, until vegetables are tender to bite (about 3 minutes). Add shrimp and cook, stirring, just until shrimp are opaque when cut (about 3 minutes).

Remove pan from heat. Stir in soy sauce and vinegar; spoon shrimp mixture into a bowl. Let cool; then cover and refrigerate for at least 1 hour or for up to 4 hours.

Meanwhile, tear spinach and lettuce into bite-size pieces (you should have about 4 quarts total, lightly packed). Place greens in a large salad bowl; spoon shrimp mixture over greens (lift out chilies and use for garnish, or discard). Mix lightly. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

STIR-FRIED SCALLOPS AND ASPARAGUS ON COOL PASTA

8 ounces dry capellini OR coil vermicelli
1 pound fresh asparagus
3 tablespoons salad oil
3 tablespoons water
1 clove garlic, minced OR pressed
1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger
½ pound bay scallops OR sea scallops, cut into ½-inch chunks, rinsed and drained
½ cup rice vinegar OR ½ cup white wine vinegar and 1 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon EACH soy sauce and sesame oil

In a 5- to 6-quart pan, cook pasta in 3 quarts boiling water just until barely tender to bite (3 to 5 minutes). Or cook according to package directions. Drain and rinse with cold water until cool; drain well. Place in a shallow dish.

Snap off and discard tough ends of asparagus. Cut diagonally into ¼-inch-thick slices 1½ to 2 inches long.

Place a wok or wide skillet over high heat. Add 1 tablespoon oil and asparagus; stir to coat with oil. Add water; cover and cook just until tender-crisp (2 to 3 minutes). Lift out asparagus and spoon over pasta.

To wok add remaining 2 tablespoons oil, garlic, ginger and scallops. Cook, stirring, until scallops are opaque when cut (2 to 3 minutes.) Add rice vinegar, sugar, soy sauce and sesame oil; cook, stirring, just until sugar is dissolved. Pour over pasta mixture.

DEAR ABBY

In-laws flunk mom's safety test

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My in-laws are wonderful grandparents to my 2½-year-old son. They would do anything in the world for him, except take the trouble to buckle him up in his car seat. This is a big problem for me because I depend on them to baby-sit quite often. I can't afford to pay a sitter, and there's no one else.

I've tried several times to stress the importance of car-seat safety, but they think it's unnecessary since it's only a 10-minute drive from their home to mine.

My husband has been very firm with them, but twice I've caught them not using the car seat. I haven't told my husband because it would cause a family feud. His parents are very stubborn and don't take criticism very well.

Abby, I fear for my child's safety, but don't know what to do. Please print this letter and stress the importance of buckling up small children. Perhaps they'll listen to you. Thank you! — WORRIED MOM

P.S. My in-laws have their own car seat. We purchased one for them so they would always have it handy when our son is in their care.

DEAR WORRIED MOM: You have good reason to worry. There is only one solution to your problem. Do not trust your in-laws to drive your child. Their excuse, "It's only a 10-minute drive from their home to yours," means nothing. A large percentage of all automobile accidents occur within a mile of one's home.

DEAR ABBY: I know that many people share this problem. If you answer in the paper it will help not only me but also others.

Last week I went to supper at a friend's home. The hostess served a food that I had never eaten before, and I found that I didn't enjoy it, so I pushed it to the side of my plate and finished the rest of my meal.

In the future, how can I avoid this situation without offending my hostess? — CANADIAN

DEAR CANADIAN: We all have our special likes and dislikes, so don't feel compelled to eat anything and everything that is served. Pushing food aside on your plate can be conspicuous, so next time, simply "rearrange it," and leave it.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I can't cope with. I am a 25-year-old woman dating a 28-year-old man. Stan and I have dated for a year, and he is the one man I would like to spend the rest of my life with. He says he loves me, but he is having trouble breaking away from his ex-girlfriend. She lives four hours away, and he has gone to see her several times since he told me he loves me. She has also been here several times that I know of for sure — I suspect several times I didn't know about. In short, I feel very insecure. Stan insists he is not carrying on behind my back, but I just can't believe him.

I am fed up with his long, unexplained absences, and his disappearing into a telephone booth to make a "quick" phone call that lasts 20 or 30 minutes. I can't handle this stress.

I have no desire to see any old boyfriends. I have let go of my past, but Stan hasn't.

All my friends tell me I am crazy for believing him. Am I? — INSECURE IN IOWA

DEAR INSECURE: You have good reason to be insecure. If you want to buy a peck of trouble, continue your romance with a man you can't trust. Tell Stan it's over and date others.

Frosting flowers add expert touch to cake

NEW YORK (AP) — Vanilla Butter Cake, topped with buttercream frosting, is an impressive dessert, suitable for many occasions, as delicious as it is easy to make.

For ease of preparation, the cake can be made a day or two ahead. The rum glaze used between the layers of the cake keeps it moist and fresh.

The recipe is provided by Jim Fobel, author of "Jim Fobel's Old-Fashioned Baking Book" (Ballantine), which won the IACP-Seagram's award as one of the best cookbooks of 1987.

The cake is decorated with a double ring of frosting violets and apple blossoms, accented with yellow-green leaves.

VANILLA BUTTER CAKE

2⅓ cups all-purpose flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
8 tablespoons (1 stick) butter, softened
¼ cup white vegetable shortening
1⅓ cups granulated sugar
2 large eggs
1 tablespoon vanilla extract
¾ cup milk
Rum Glaze (recipe follows)
Butterscotch Buttercream frosting (recipe follows)
Frosting flowers

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour three 8-inch round cake pans, tapping out the excess flour.

In a medium bowl stir together the flour, baking powder and salt.

In a large bowl combine the butter and shortening; beat with an electric mixer until fluffy, about 1 minute. Gradually beat in the sugar and then the eggs, one at a time. Add the vanilla and beat until light and fluffy, about 1 minute. Beat in the dry ingredients alternately with the milk, about one-fourth at a time, beginning and ending with dry ingredients. Divide between the prepared pans, smoothing the tops. Bake on two evenly spaced racks until the tops spring back when lightly touched and a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean, 25 to 30 minutes.

Cool in the pans on a rack for 10 minutes. Run a knife around the edges and invert onto the rack to cool thoroughly. Brush crumbs away.

Place one layer on a serving plate. Brush with 1 tablespoon Rum Glaze and spread with 1 cup buttercream frosting. Brush both sides of next layer with 1 tablespoon glaze and spread with 1 cup frosting. Brush each side of final layer with 1 tablespoon glaze. Frost top and sides with remaining buttercream. Decorate top with frosting flowers and chill cake. Makes one 8-inch cake.

Rum Glaze: In a small pan stir together ¼ cup rum and ¼ cup packed brown sugar. Carefully place over low heat so rum does not flambe. Warm the rum, stirring once or twice; remove from heat and stir until sugar is dissolved.

Buttercream

4 large eggs
1½ cups packed dark brown sugar
4 sticks (2 cups) butter, softened
2 tablespoons dark rum
1 tablespoon vanilla extract

Choose a large bowl (preferably a stainless steel one) that will fit over a pan without dropping into it. Fill the pan with 1 inch of water and bring to a boil over moderate heat. Reduce the heat to low and keep the water at a simmer.

In the large bowl beat the eggs with a handheld electric mixer until frothy, about 1 minute. Add the brown sugar and beat until smooth. Place the bowl over the simmering water (it should not touch the water) and beat constantly just until the sugar has dissolved and the mixture is just slightly warm, 1 to 2 minutes. Remove from the heat and cool to room temperature, stirring occasionally.

Put the butter in a large bowl and beat with an electric mixer until fluffy, about 1 minute. Gradually beat in the cooled sugar mixture and beat until smooth and fluffy, about 1 minute longer. Beat in the rum and vanilla. Use right away to frost the layers. When chilled, this buttercream will set. Makes about 4 cups.

"In Memoriam"

TO MOTHER
We do not forget her,
We love her too dearly
For her memory to fade
From our lives like a dream.
Our lips need not speak
When our hearts mourn sincerely,
For grief often dwells
Where it seldom is seen.

HUSBAND
God took him home, it was His will,
But in our hearts we love him still,
His memory is as dear today
As in the hour he passed away,
We often sit and think of him
When we are all alone.
For memory is the only friend
That grief can call its own.
We Miss You
Your Wife and Children

FOR OUR YOUNG SON
Oh, say not that our little son is dead;

That he has left his little trundle bed
To climb the hills,
Of morning, and to share the joy that fills
God's pleasant land of dreams.
