Wichita Falls Skyscraper Raided; Liquor and Gambling Found By Officers

First signs of a rebirth of the "roaring twenties" of prohibition in Wichita Falls Wednesday night as county and state control officers cracked down on a gambling room complete with a stock of "legal" whiskey in a large office building downtown. Sheriff Harvey Hawkins, Deputy George Garrett, Deputy Sheriff C. B. Trent and Inspector Wayne McCormick of the Control Board and City Detective Charlie Wilson staged the raid at 9:30 p. m.

Officers found the door of the unlocked and walked right in. A poker game in full blast was just set there with their hands hanging open for nearly a half hour before anybody said anything, Wilson said.

Liquor control officer stumbled to the outfit this week looking for an office in the building. He found the door of the unlocked and walked right in. A poker game in full blast was just set there with their hands hanging open for nearly a half hour before anybody said anything, Wilson said.

Officers were cleaning the tenth floor den McCormick held several telephone conversations with persons who called the place. He did not divulge details of these calls but indicated the callers never suspected they were being followed.

Officers will be filed against the men arrested, McCormick said. They may wear a golf outfit and she can't play golf, and a girl when she can't swim, then she puts on a wedding dress means business.

Everyone Needed To Harvest Abundant Texas Cotton Crop

Effort and cooperation of every farmer, farm worker and every citizen will be needed to assure that the 1942 Texas cotton crop is harvested, said Donald W. Hawkins, manager of the local United States Employment Service office. Agriculture is a number-one industry, and farm workers are the riveters in the national war effort, he said. The cotton and by-products are vital to the armed forces in the production of clothing, of munitions, and hundreds of Army supplies, he continued. Labor has been set up in a plan between the United States Employment Service and the United States Department of Agriculture War Relocation Administration. In each of the 254 counties in Texas, and this plan recognizes the fact that every source of supply in every farm community must be utilized to the job done.

Farm laborers, operators and owners of farm families who are only partially employed should register at their local United States Employment Service office to make their services available for part-time work on farms.

School Opened Tuesday With 872 Enrolled

The Burkburnett schools opened their 1942-43 session Tuesday with 872 enrolled in both the high school and grade school.

Superintendent Davis stated that this was a smaller number than enrolled last year, due to the fact that Sheppard Field was being built and a number of families working there were living in Burkburnett.

Davis states that it has been a hard job getting teachers this year but all teachers have been engaged for the grade school and every position in the high school has been filled with the exception of two or three.

Horace Hinkle Arrives Safely In Iceland

Mrs. Nancy Hinkle, who is visiting in Tennessee, received word this week that her husband, Horace Hinkle had arrived safely in Iceland.

Mrs. Hinkle has been visiting in Tennessee since her husband was called to the armed forces. She is expected to return to Burkburnett soon.

A Universal Want Ad

Wanted—A man for hard work and rapid promotion, who can find things to be done without the help of a manager and three assistants. A man who gets to work on time in the morning and does not imperil the lives of others in an attempt to be the first out of the office at night. A man who is neat in appearance and does not sulk at an hour's overtime in emergencies. A man who listens carefully when he is spoken to, and asks only enough questions to insure accurate carrying out of instructions. A man who moves quickly and makes as little noise as possible about it. A man who looks you straight in the eye and tells the truth every time. A man who does not pity himself for having to dig in and hustle. A man who is cheerful, courteous to everyone, and determined to make good. If interested, apply any hour, any day, any place, to any employer.

Joan Whisnant To Be Here Sept. 14th

Joan Whisnant will appear in Burkburnett High School, on Monday, September 14, at 1:25 p. m., according to an announcement by Ralph Davis, Supt.

A year ago Webster High School, Tulsa, Oklahoma, graduated the most unusual student in its history. . . . Joan Whisnant.

Joan Whisnant

ated the most unusual student in its history. . . . Joan Whisnant. This popular and beautiful youngster received an ovation, not the stereotyped handclap, when she was handed her diploma.

Joan Whisnant was born without arms and yet has lived a life so normal that her friends and schoolmates have long since ceased to wonder at her. She has asked and received no special favors from her teachers, and with the help of remarkably wise parents is one of the happiest young persons we have ever known.

Astonishing as it may seem, she earned her Driver's license a year ago, a feat which was publicized throughout the nation. She is not only able to eat, comb her hair, put on "make-up" by herself, but she is an excellent crayon artist and plays the electric guitar. She will demonstrate all these abilities in her program— from pouring and drinking a soft drink to drawing a landscape in colored chalk.

Chevrolet Gets A-N Coveted "E" Award

Detroit, Sept. 9.—The Army-Navy "E" Flag, top award in America for excellence in war equipment production, has been presented to Chevrolet for "high achievement in the production of war goods." In ceremonies yesterday at the Gear and Axle unit of Chevrolet's nation-wide volume production system, M. E. Coyle, general manager, received the flag and the accompanying "E" pin, presented by Col. A. B. Quinton, chief, Detroit Ordnance District, and Lieut.-Comm. A. F. Duernburger, Naval Reserve Army, Detroit.

More than 7,500 employees of this Chevrolet division shared in the award and now wear the E pin as a symbol of their production efficiency.

Pointing out the fact that there are few types of war materials toward which Chevrolet does not contribute materially either as a prime or sub-contractor, Mr. Coyle noted that machinery and materials necessarily regulate production. To the officers attending the ceremony he added, "You of the Army and Navy are operating our Chevrolet plants today. Give us the machinery and materials and we will give you an 'E' record in every plant."

Col. Quinton in his presentation address, praised the Chevrolet Gear and Axle Division for innovations pioneered that have resulted in the saving of time, money and materials.

ROTARY CLUB

Tom Boyd had charge of the Rotary club program Tuesday noon. He started his program with a dialogue between Fred Brookman and Jack Brumley. This was followed by a quiz program that proved very interesting as well as entertaining.

President Ralph Davis appointed a committee to secure one man to do the cooking to replace Mrs. Morris, who is leaving for Washington. The club members gave Mrs. Morris a rising vote of thanks, as well as the club sweetheart, Miss Dorothy Browning, who resigned due to the conflict with her school duties.

RED TAPE vs. RED INK

The city council of Reno, Nev., looked at last month's bill of $500 for feeding jail prisoners—and asked the judge to see if the inmates couldn't be hurried through a bit faster.

Twenty-Five True Bills Returned By Wichita County Grand Jurors Wednesday

Wichita County grand jurors Wednesday expressed approval of the Wichita Health Unit's quarantine program for persons under treatment for venereal diseases, but deplored the crowded conditions of the women's ward of the county jail, where 20 or more such female patients are being housed, according to a report submitted to Judge Ernest M. Robertson in 89th district court.

The report observes that many of the venereal patients are being compelled to sleep on the floor owing to lack of beds, or room for beds. The inquisitors commended the sheriff, the matron and the jailers "for the manner in which they are handling" a difficult situation; and recommended to the commissioners court that "sufficient facilities to handle these patients be provided."

Motorists Admonished

The grand jury also asked motorists "to be less careless with reference to leaving ignition keys in care left standing on streets or in alleys." It was asserted that a number of car thefts were the issue of such carelessness.

The grand jury reported having returned 25 true bills for felonies since it was empaneled early in July, 18 of them being submitted with Wednesday's final report. A. J. Brumley, charged with murder in connection with the death of a Sheppard Field soldier several weeks ago in a traffic accident on Holliday Street was no-billed.

Indictments voted Wednesday were as follows: Mrs. Billie West, forgery, two cases; Travis Clem, theft; Raymond Lee, burglary, two cases; Charles McNurlen, burglary; Richard Ellis, burglary; Richard Luster, burglary; Marvin Luster, burglary; Kenneth Williamson, theft; James E. Griffin, theft; C. B. Bland, forgery, two cases; Joe B. Crawford, theft; Lettis Carr, forgery, burglary; Alvie Meredith, theft; William McMillan, theft; and Mrs. Johnny Smith, arson.

Eight defendants were no-billed.

LATEST WAR NEWS
Milton, nephew of Mr. and Mrs. A. Dodson, should be a war correspondent, and he would make a crack reporter, too. The following communique was received by them recently:

August 26, 1942.

Dear Aunt Ella and Uncle Dodson:
How are you all faring physically and mentally. We are all well, but I can't help thinking about the war. Have you heard that, "It was reported this morning that the Germans have taken Ex-Lax."

The British War office has announced that they doubt the ability of the Germans to hold it. Both dispatches state the strain on their rear is terrific. The British have caught them on the run several times. Unlike the German tradition, they have tried several times to evacuate. Several sharp blank movements have been undertaken which resemble gas attacks. The Germans tried to suppress the movements from the rear, but it leaked out and the Allies got wind of it—the Germans now realize the value of scrap paper. Later reports state that 10,000 Heines have been wiped out.

Your War worried nephew,
Milton.

The junk drive in Burkburnett is lagging behind quota, and the final drive for scrap iron and other metals will end Monday. If you have not gathered up all the scrap iron around your place, do so this week. County Commissioner Slim Holman has agreed to furnish men and trucks to gather it up Saturday and Monday mornings and if you will call the Star office or the Chamber of Commerce and leave your number, Mr. Holman will have his trucks pick it up.

Season football tickets go on sale Monday morning at the high school building, tax assessor's room, and every fan in this city is urged to buy a ticket this season. Don Short, the new coach, is doing a wonderful job with the boys he has out. They are young and inexperienced and they need your moral support—and the athletic department needs your financial support.

The Bulldogs play their first scrimmage game this Friday afternoon at 2:00 p. m., with Coach Eddleman's Eagles from Holliday, and everyone is invited to the stadium to see the boys in their first practice game. Next Friday, Sept. 18, the boys will go to Pampa, for a return game. They will make the trip in cars furnished by progressive business men of the city.

Wichita Makes Liquor Raid In Office Bldg.; Burk Man Catches Quail On Main Street

Yes, prohibition is here. It has already been brought home to the people of Wichita Falls and Burkburnett, Wednesday morning as Jess Griffin opened his barber shop for the day's business, he saw a quail out in front, and with a little coaxing he succeeded in capturing it and now has it on display in his shop. Another Bob White was also seen this week on top of the Parker Grocery store building. Officers made a raid on a down-town office building in Wichita Falls Wednesday night and arrested several men and succeeded in capturing a number of pieces of gambling equipment, and several cases of liquor was confiscated.

Burkburnett was represented in the Wichita Falls golf tournament by B. H. Alexander Jr., local champion. B. H. is only 17 years of age, but has been a consistent winner here for a number of years. He qualified for the championship flight at Wichita Falls with a 78. He lost his first match, won his match in the first flight and was eliminated in his third match. He shot a total of 54 holes in the tournament. B. H. has played most of his golf on the local sand greens and was unaccustomed to the grass greens. He is leaving this week for Denton to enter the T.S.T. C., and will also join the college golf team. He is planning on entering the tournament next year, and it is liable to be a different story when the winner is announced.

Truth is a good thing, but you should be careful how you handle it.

Think Of Lincoln

When Abraham Lincoln was a young man he ran for the legislature of Illinois and was badly swamped. He next entered business, failed, and spent seventeen years of his life paying up the debts of a worthless partner.

He was in love with a beautiful young woman to whom he became engaged—and then she died. Entering politics again, he ran for Congress, and was badly defeated.

He then tried to get an appointment in the United States Land Office, but failed.

He became a candidate for the United States Senate—and was badly defeated.

In 1856 he became a candidate for the Vice-presidency and was once more defeated.

In 1858 he was defeated by Douglas.

One failure after another—bad failures—great setbacks.

In the face of all this he became one of the greatest men of America—a man whose name is honored, whose memory is loved throughout the world.

When you contemplate the effects of a series of setbacks such as these, doesn't it make you feel rather small to become discouraged just because you think you are having a hard time in life?

What Future Sacrifice

We are expecting a number of products to be rationed but the fact that there is a possibility of meat rationing is still almost unbelievable. This of course, means in turn a shortage of lard and cooking fat as well as other meat products. It is hard to understand the shortage of meats but information states that "with nearly everybody working and with record high wages being paid and with many items of normal commerce off the market, people are spending a larger-than-usual portion of their increased income for meat." Now what this possible meat rationing will do for the farmer or the man producing his own meat we can not yet know. Will the meat producer be forced to sell all meat raised except a certain allotted percentage? Then, too, the question arises concerning the possibility of forcing the producer to sell at a certain time specified by certain government orders. There is a very likely chance that this situation will develop, for if the situation will soon develop, for if the shortage of meat continues throughout the war and the war continues for a long time, there must be some order or precision in working out this problem.

There may be the day when a producer will be nationally required to produce a certain amount of livestock and other foodstuffs and in turn directed when and where to sell. This of course, is prospecting in the future but it is not at all impossible or out of reason for we may be fighting a long and more serious war than we realize and we too must realize that this could happen even in our United States. It also may be forced upon us to individually preserve a certain amount of food for national use—this could happen although it seems unlikely now and we do not like to think of such possibilities.

In all probability we are to see present situations develop seriously in the future—we cannot yet realize the nearness of war problems to our otherwise orderly lives but these things we might well consider. We may soon have to determine their solution. This is not pleasant or the exactness of their solution is not to be easy or all satisfying but a thing to be completed to the best of our individual abilities—whatever the task.

The American Mood - Who Knows?

So "Tillie the Toiler" has joined the WAAC's and is now merely an auxiliary or private. We wonder when "Invisible Scarlet O'Neil" will render her services, or is she already lurking invisible near headquarters? How about "Daisy Mae"? Can she leave "Dogpatch" and the disinterested "Li'l Abner." Maybe "Popeye's" "Olive Oyl" will join—who knows?

We are fighting the most serious war the world has ever known and yet—we play with paper dolls! We will have the future problem of feeding a devastated world and we take time to read the foolish antics of an imaginative mind! Do we yet realize the importance of our individual work and the necessity of our own contribution to the war effort? Are we aimless and pleasure seekers, drifting to the lighter phases of living? Are we underneath sober-minded and fully able to cope with pending forces—is the mere lightness of our many moods symbolic of our very stable and forceful habits?

We have never known defeat nor have we seen our buildings in ruins; our America is still geographically intact from the devastating forces of war; our children have not been driven from their homes. We can yet be complacent and bask in languid moods—or can we? Who knows the force behind our nature, the will to do within our souls! This apparent lightness may be our strength, our power—who knows?

Britain could guess from her taxes that the war is being fought in the air.

Burk Burnett . . . History

As revealed by the files of The Star 10 and 20 years ago.

TEN YEARS AGO

A shadow of gloom was cast over Burk Burnett last Friday when it was learned that Edward Daniel (Doc) Heine was dead. Although he had been ill for the past four years and his death was expected, the shock was nevertheless a severe one to his many friends.

Jas. C. Nance, speaker of the Oklahoma House of Representatives while in Burk Burnett yesterday stated to a Star representative that he had just returned from Oklahoma City and while there he secured an appropriation from the state highway department for the building of five miles of concrete road leading northeast from the Texas-Oklahoma free bridge.

Butler Westerfield has his chest thrown out, his head high and is stepping high, wide and handsome since becoming the father of a baby boy, which was born at the Wichita Falls Clinic yesterday.

Approximately 1100 students are expected to enroll in the Burk Burnett public schools as compared with the 1414 that attended last year. Chapel services will be effected Monday morning and text books will be issued Monday afternoon.

Homer Brown, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Brown, who reside on Fourth St., made a miniature saddle, bridle, boot and gun which attracted a great deal of attention while on display at the Rexall Store Saturday and Sunday.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

The most remarkable exhibition of strength in the history of cotton trading, according to exchange records was given on the New Orleans exchange today when all months in the future opened with $10 a bale over yesterday's close.

A mass meeting has been called for tonight at the Y.M.C.A. building to perfect the permanent organization of the Home Charities Association and to discuss and arrange programs for the two day celebration to be put on by the association Friday and Saturday.

The Oscar Frye Post, American Legion, of Burk Burnett, a comparatively new organization donated $100 to the Home Charities Association of Burk Burnett, which they raised by promoting the Brennan-Collins bout at the Liberty Summer Club last night. The boys are to be congratulated upon their liberal spirit and other organizations should follow the example set by them.

At a meeting of the Board of Control it was decided that Call Field would be used for City and County patients until the new addition to the General Hospital is completed.

United Gas Corp. Pay High School Tax For 1941

"The total amount of school taxes paid by United Gas Corporation for 1941 would send 1,400 children to the public schools for a year." This statement was made public today by Mr. R. W. Lindsey, district manager of the company here.

"Expressed in another way, the school taxes paid last year by our company would practically operate the entire school system of a town of several thousand population.

"Yet school taxes are only one part of the large sums paid out in taxes by our company to help finance the war and to support other governmental functions. In many communities we serve, United Gas is among the largest taxpayers."

MARINE INVASION

The marines have the situation well in hand on the recruiting front, too. They enlisted Irving Paul Adams and Shannon Lowell Doss after the two had worked six months as civilian clerks in the army's recruiting office at Little Rock, Arkansas.

CLEAN RAGS WANTED—STAFF

In countless industrial plants American working men, with Natural Gas as an ally, are fighting and winning the battle of production.

Guns, planes, ships, munitions and other needed war materials are flowing from production lines in ever-increasing quantities. In the manufacture of all of these, Natural Gas plays a vital part, supplying the ideal fuel for generating power and heat.

These war industries must be kept going at top speed. Their requirements for Natural Gas are large, but whatever the demand, our entire organization will be devoted to meeting it.

Constipation! Why Not Get and Keep "Regular"?

One of the commonest causes of constipation is simply the Modern diet, superinduced, too often gives us too little "bulk food." In such cases, dosing with cathartics, or laxatives, gives only temporary relief — the trouble comes back again and again. The way to more lasting relief is to get to the underlying cause and correct it.

You can do this by eating KILLOGG'S ALL-BRAN® daily. This delicious cereal actually supplies the needed "bulk." It acts pleasantly, works principally on the contents of the colon, helping you to have a normal, regular elimination. In many cases, eating ALL-BRAN regularly and drinking plenty of water brings lasting relief from constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not benefited by this simple treatment, see your doctor.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

FRAMING YOUR SNAPSHOTS

Have you ever thought of "framing" members of your family in an open window? Try it if you want results like this.

MORE people have probably been "framed" photographically and lived to tell the tale than you could count in a forty-hour week. Furthermore, they've probably looked all the better for it. Photography is like that.

For instance, just take a look at our illustration. Isn't it a simple, charming shot? You bet it is. Lots of the charm, of course, is due to the pleasant expression of the little girl. But, I think you can charge a lot more off to the setting—to the fact that the subject in this case is "framed" by the open window.

If you keep your eyes open, you'll find that there are lots of potential "frames" like that through which you can picture your subjects. Doorways viewed from inside or out are always excellent; the window of an automobile is another possibility.

arches of any sort are good; a couple of trees, or an overhanging branch with a lot of leaves will make excellent framing material. Look for places through which you can view your subject, and you'll have the idea down pat.

However, here's a tip. In making such pictures, because of the wide discrepancy in distance which frequently exists between the frame and your subject, you'll need all the photographic depth of field that you can possibly secure. Therefore, use a small lens aperture. Small lens apertures give greater depth of field, and in cases like this will help keep all objects in the picture sharp and clear.

Try "framing" your subjects the next time you make pictures—and see if it doesn't give you more attractive and interesting results.

Chaplain and Mrs. E. S. Morford with their son, Norman, left on the afternoon train Wednesday. They had moved recently into another house here and were planning for Norman to start to school on Monday. Mrs. Morford and Norman will return to their former home in Indiana, until such time as they will be able to rejoin Chaplain Morford.

They lived in our community five months and we will miss them a great deal. Insofar as his work at the post gave him time, they made themselves a part of the community and civic life. They were very active in the church work. Chaplain Morford is a graduate of Asbury College and Boston Seminary. He was sent to Sheppard Field as his first appointment after going into the Chaplaincy. He has been a member of the Southern Indiana Conference of the Methodist church for twelve years. His many friends here extend best wishes to him and his family.

Scott were appointed on the project committee of the club for the 1942-43 term.

After the business session Mrs. F. G. Jeffers directed a program and presented Mrs. W. M. Wolfe who read an interesting and informative paper on the planting and care of bulbs and what to do in the garden in September. Mrs. W. C. Gage led in a garden gossip which was followed with a round table discussion.

The hostesses served lovely refreshments in a setting of attractive arrangements of fall flowers. To Mesdames A. C. Houser, Wid Phillips, Fred Brookman, W. M. Wolfe, W. C. Gage, F. G. Jeffers, Charles Boyd, Wiley Bloxom, A. H. Bazell, D. A. Wesbrooks, and one new member, Mrs. B. H. Preston.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

"Substance" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, Sept. 13.

The Golden Text is: "Thy name, O Lord, endureth forever; and thy memorial, O Lord, throughout all generations" (Psalms 135:13).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance and of my cup; thou maintainest my lot. . . . The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, I have a goodly heritage" (Psalms 16:5, 6).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "As God is substance and man is the divine image and likeness, man should wish for, and in reality has, only the substance of good, the substance of Spirit, not matter" (page 301).

Insurance Man Guy Ericson of Pierre, S. D., spent a day settling farmers' claims after a severe hailstorm beat down crops, and took refuge from a sudden shower in a patron's house.

When the storm cleared, Ericson found his car roof beaten flat by hailstones "about the size of golf balls" and filed his own claim with his own company.

HITLER Can Invade AMERICA BY AIR

We need the DEFENSE GUARD defense against Nazi raids by plane-borne troops.

This is an argument for the need of Defense Guards. We have the Army and Navy to meet major invasion attempts, the FBI to combat saboteurs; and our Interceptor Commands and air-raid protective services are prepared for bombings—though "token" bombings are all we really expect.

In one such raid by plane-borne troops, one plane could do more damage than 10 planes could with bombs. Each individual raider would be a bomb with eyes, capable of exploding many times. He would be a shower of incendiary bombs, which only bullets would snuff out.

Economy Accent . . . Delicious Chicken Croquettes

(See Recipes Below.)

Budget Stretchers

What can I serve as a main course that won't take too many dishes? What can I give my large family that isn't too expensive? These are the two queries often asked by my readers. The answer to both questions is simple—a casserole. Easy to make, easy to serve, economical too, casseroles solve the main dish problem almost perfectly.

Almost! Yes, I say almost advisedly, because if the family ever becomes aware of your ulterior motives in serving casseroles, their interest in them becomes less, less and finally non-existent.

Make your casserole so delectable and so distinctive in flavor and no one will ever realize that it's packed with economy and you have a one-dish meal that's perfection plus.

Never overwork the casserole by trying to use up all the leftovers lining refrigerator and pantry shelves. Never swamp the flavors of the food so you strike a false note and confuse the sense of taste. Use good food and season with discrimination. Your result will be a real success.

Here are some new ideas I've compiled for you. Most of them of the food you have used often enough so they're old favorites, but in new dress! You'll like:

*Rice and Chicken Casserole.

(Serves 6 to 8)

2 cups rice
2 cups milk
1½ tablespoons butter
2 eggs
2½ cups diced, cooked chicken
Boil rice in salted water until tender. Stir in butter, milk and eggs. Put a layer of this into a casserole, then chicken, more rice, etc. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until well browned.

Every now and then you've heard me talk about food affinities. Here's another I'd like to add to the list:

Lamb and Lima Bean Pie.

(Serves 6)

2 pounds lamb neck, shanks or shoulder
1 pound dry lima beans
Salt, pepper
Celery salt
Soak lima beans overnight. Drain and place in a heavy kettle. Have lamb cut in 2-inch pieces. Add to beans, season and cover with water. Transfer to casserole and top with pimiento biscuit rings and bake in a moderately hot oven 20 to 25 minutes.

To make pimiento biscuit rings: add ½ cup coarsely chopped pimiento to baking powder biscuit recipe. You'll get your carbohydrates, proteins along with vitamins and minerals in this economical, hunger-satisfying dish good for family dinner or informal buffet entertaining:

American Goulash.

(Serves 6)

½-pound package macaroni
1½ pounds hamburger
1 large onion, chopped
1 tablespoon fat

Lynn Says:

Store Food Wisely: There are no "Finders Keepers" but you may be the "Loser Weeper" if you do not store those vegetables properly.

Scientific experiments show that lettuce may lose 40 per cent of its vitamin C if kept at room temperature. Refrigerator recommended!

Spinach, left standing on pantry shelf, will be drained of its vitamin C by about one-third. Canned string beans lose about one-third of their vitamin C if they stand in a bowl at room temperature for six hours.

Short cooking time is recommended, too. Cabbage, for instance, loses 69 per cent of its calcium and 72 per cent of its other minerals when these valuable nutrients go up in steam.

This Week's Menu

Tomato Juice Saltines
*Rice and Chicken Casserole
*Grapefruit-Cranberry Salad
Popovers Strawberry Jam
Sliced Melon
Beverage
*Recipe Given.

2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
3 cups tomatoes
1 can tomato soup
Buttered crumbs

Cook macaroni in boiling, salted water, about 20 minutes, or until tender. Drain. Brown meat and onions in fat. Add macaroni, seasonings, tomatoes and soup. Pour into greased baking dish and sprinkle with buttered crumbs. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate (350-degree) oven.

An economy meat cut that is getting itself talked about plenty because of its simply wonderful flavor is this:

Ribs of Beef With Vegetables.

(Serves 6)

3½ pounds of short ribs
1 large onion, sliced
2 cups tomatoes
Salt, pepper
6 onions
6 potatoes
3 parsnips

Season short ribs with salt and pepper. Put in skillet with fat and brown quickly. Place in an iron skillet or roasting pan and add onions and tomatoes. Let bake in a moderate oven for 1½ hours, tightly covered. Add whole carrots which have been scraped, parsnips, peeled, and potatoes peeled but left whole. Cook another hour or until vegetables are tender. Add boiling water if necessary during the last hour of cooking.

Second day service of chicken is beautifully simplified if you do up the bird in crusty cylindrical croquettes, and dish them up together with golden carrot strips and either canned or frozen asparagus and you have a one-plate meal that is bound to inspire the family's appetite:

Chicken Croquettes.

(Makes 10 croquettes)

2 cups cooked, ground chicken
1 cup thick white sauce
2 teaspoons chopped parsley
Flour
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon milk
3 cups oven-popped rice cereal
Salt, pepper

Prepare white sauce using ½ cup chicken stock and ½ cup milk. Add to chicken and parsley and chill thoroughly. Shape into pyramids or cylinders. Roll cereal to fine crumbs. Dip croquettes first in the flour, then in egg to which milk has been added and in rolled crumbs. Fry in deep, hot fat (365 degrees) for 2 to 5 minutes or until golden brown.

A crispy, citrus salad goes well with casserole dishes. Suggestion of the week which will take top honors in the hall of fame is this one made with grapefruit, oranges and cranberries for color. Its dressing is unusual in that it combines honey with mayonnaise, and cranberries.

*Grapefruit and Cranberry Salad.

(Serves 4)

1 large grapefruit
2 large oranges
Lettuce
½ cup ground, raw cranberries
2 tablespoons honey
½ cup mayonnaise

Peel and section oranges and grapefruit. Arrange alternately on lettuce. Mix cranberries with honey. Let stand ½ hour. Combine with mayonnaise. Serve over salad.

THE STORY SO FAR: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are on their way to Tierra Libre when Jeff receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. Later he learns from Jerry McIntosh that Zora's husband has been murdered and that it is his job as chief engineer for a fruit company that Jeff has been called to fill. When they arrive in Tierra Libre, Jerry tells Jeff there is something strange going on. Jeff and Lee meet Montaya, Jeff's employer, and go with him to San Alejo, where Montaya tells them that Zora Mitchell has "committed suicide." Neither Jeff nor Lee believes that her death was suicide. Zora, they agree, was not the type to commit suicide. Jeff suspects Montaya of arranging, or at least of knowing about, both Zora's and her husband's death.

NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IV

Every day was a new day at San Alejo, fresh and cool and clean at dawn no matter what the blazing sun might bring later. Even the asphalt underfoot was toned up by the dew as Curt swung along for his early appointment with Montaya. Curt's mind should have been toned up, too, by the tangy air so much like a Fall morning at home, but his last words to Lee just now—he'd read the pucker between her eyes—were still in his ears.

"Don't you be worrying about Zora Mitchell," he'd told her. "I admit suicide doesn't sound like her, but we hadn't seen her for six years and that length of time will work changes in any of us."

"It was her little girl I was thinking of," Lee had answered him soberly.

"I'll find out about her," Curt made his way to Montaya's office, a high-ceilinged room paneled and furnished in unvarnished whitewood. An impression of coolness was heightened by Venetian blinds and a grass rug.

Curt came to the point before Senor Montaya could broach business. He said, suggestively, "The news of Mrs. Mitchell's death was a considerable shock to us—to my wife and me."

Montaya looked at him in silence as though the words needed elaboration.

"I mean, we should hardly have expected suicide of Zora Mitchell, especially as she was leaving a small child."

"Nor did I expect it," the senor made this statement as a sort of admission. He fumbled among papers on his desk, bringing forth two large square envelopes.

From one he spread several photographs before Curt. They showed, from different angles, Zora Mitchell slumped over in a bamboo "peacock" chair, her head at a curious angle. There was a bullet-hole in her left temple, and blood had run from the wound, coagulated, stained her dress.

Her left hand, hanging over the arm of the chair, held a gun Curt recognized as a Luger. A Luger! He thought instantly. Funny! Where'd she get that?

He recalled how Mitchell had always favored a Colt .45 against all foreign makes of small arms.

Another question forced itself on Curt's mind. Why hadn't the physical shock relaxed Zora's fingers and made her drop the gun?

"Now, in the case of her husband, we had no chance to obtain photographs on the ground. The body was moved to Tempujo. But we did the best we could. I had sketches made."

From the second envelope Montaya spread out these sketches, and with them a map marked with an X and two photographs of the body as it lay on the flat handcar.

"An inquest was held, of course, as in the case of Mrs. Mitchell. Both—ah, incidents were quite properly handled by our local police. We have a comandancia here, another at Tempujo."

The sketches and the map were valueless, but the photographs . . . Curt picked up one of them. The picture was sickening, the body slashed and mutilated beyond recognition. Many of the cuts were clean, however, and something about these clean cuts rang a bell in Curt's mind. Yet the reason didn't at once click—that cuts which didn't bleed had to be made after death, after the blood stops coursing in the body.

"What about their little girl?" he asked. "Only five, isn't she?"

"Ah, but it is sad about her. Poor little thing. We have her at the hospital for the present, where the nurses can look after her. I am trying to get in touch with relatives in the States."

Montaya stacked the photographs and sketches, replaced them in their envelopes. He drew from his pocket an oversize cigarette case and stamped against the lid one of the special six-inch Turkish cigarettes he used. Apparently he was considering some problem.

At length he said, picking his words, "It would be natural for you to want to see the murderer of Mr. Mitchell brought to justice. I also do. But I assure you everything was done that could be done. You may believe me, Mr. Curtis, it would be a waste of time for you to try where we have failed."

Curt stared before he managed, "Oh, quite."

"Splendid. Besides, shall I confess to a selfish motive? If—if, I say, we have been mistaken and the murderer is still about, then he is a more clever man than we think."

And if you should interest yourself in the case, you might perhaps invite a similar fate, no?"

Montaya put an end to the subject with an apologetic flash of teeth. "I cannot risk that. Engineering work is behind schedule. I need you so very badly, Mr. Curtis."

The next hour was spent in meeting key workers of the general staff, persons with whom Curt would have frequent contact.

It was a whirlwind tour. The bulk of employees, numbering fifty to sixty, were Americans, with a sprinkling of Britishers and other Europeans.

Then said Montaya, "This is the best time of day for you to meet Dr. Toenjes. Later he is likely to be in the field."

Using a handy phone he called for the laboratory, and when he got his connection spoke in French.

"French?" queried Curt, as the other hung up. "I thought the name was Dutch."

Montaya smiled perfunctorily. "Oh, Dr. Toenjes also speaks Spanish and English—after a fashion. He is more successful with French. You do not, then, speak French?" As Curt shook his head, "I thought not. He will use English with you."

The Agricultural Department occupied an adjacent building, filling a corner left by the administration building and the hospital. Montaya pushed on through the outer office, vacant except for a young man typing cards, and on to a door at the rear.

In the huge working laboratory there was sheaf upon sheaf, and row upon row, of carefully labeled boxes and jars. Along one side of the room a number of steel filing cabinets stood in a straight line.

On the work tables were odd-shaped vessels—alembics, glass funnels, retorts.

Dr. Toenjes, below medium height, in a dirty linen laboratory smock, proved a colorless individual. Indeed, with his full-bearded face and careless dress he looked fair prey for a caricaturist. Near-sighted, he wore thick-lens spectacles which gave him a bug-eyed appearance.

The first words were conventional greeting. Then:

"Your shipment of—ah, chemicals at Cabeza aroused Mr. Curtis' curiosity yesterday," Montaya said. "I told him such questions were your special province."

Geniality left the bearded face. Hostile gray eyes bored through the thick lenses into Curt.

"You ver vonce with der beebles across der riffer?" asked the Dutchman.

Curt nodded, smiled. Montaya's deprecation of the doctor's English hadn't been an exaggeration.

"Six years ago, I know Panama disease has shown up with them and that they've tried a lime treatment for it. It was a simple question I put. The quantity of lime landed on the docks—"

"Ah, ja. It iz trooth I use der lime—but also der other chemicals. Vat I use iz my zegred. Der banana plant will be der more healthy and vigorous from my chemical treatment uff der soil, and so ve combat der fungi more better as yet. Den vill ve haff der reechest plant-ing in Tierra Libre."

Dr. Toenjes did have a miraculous cheap compound for soil treatment, something to allay the dread of fungus disease, something with which Associated could rejuvenate their used lands, then there was good reason for guarding the secret.

"You still haff friends ofer der Negro vith Associated?"

The amusement in Curt's eyes was a better answer than his words.

The trend of the interview, Curt's feeling that Montaya was exhibiting him to the doctor, a certain indefinable deference in Montaya's attitude toward the Dutchman, convinced Curt that whatever the dummy, bearded man had, he'd sold Montaya on it pretty solidly.

At last, as final courtesies were being said, the worthy doctor let down the bars. He asked with what could best be described as a cunning look, "You blay gribbage, ja?"

"Cribbage?" Curt laughed. "Sure, I know the game."

"Goot. We blay sometime, ja?" "Certainly."

Montaya explained as they left the laboratory.

"Dr. Toenjes' one regret here is that he has no good opponent at his favorite game." He smiled politely. "He is very good at it. I hope, Mr. Curtis, you will be able to stand up to him."

Curt chuckled. "If I can't, I'll sic my wife onto him. She can play the game backwards and forwards."

He added, with another chuckle, "If he'll comb out his beard first."

Their final stop was the engineering office, a one-story structure, square like the laboratory. It occupied the corner between the general offices and the clubhouse, thus completing the layout of principal company buildings about the square and balancing the community center.

Here Curt was introduced to his own staff. It was now midmorning. Three draftsmen were at work, two at detail drawings, the third on maps. One room was reserved for the field men when they came to San Alejo to submit their progress reports. There was a dark-room, and a big vault containing records and master charts. From photostatic machine down to electric erasers the equipment throughout was ultra-modern.

Curt's own office was airy, light, cool, with both desk and big table on which to spread out his papers, a swivel chair for rolls of blueprints. But the one thing which instantly took his attention was the huge aerial photographic map of the C. A. T. tract permanently framed against the wall. Here was something!

Montaya led the way across the room, to tap proudly with his finger tips. "I'd never have gotten my planting under way without this."

This map showed a rough triangle of about 20,000 hectares, or 50,000 acres. The Quebrado Mountains formed the western boundary. Along the south and east flowed the Masica River, joining the turbulent, unruly Rio Negro, the northern boundary, just below the rise of land where stood Tempujo.

No buildings and no engineering work showed on the map. It had been made before any preliminary work had been done. But it gave Curt an instant picture of the entire project; of the drainage necessary to clear the huge swamp, dotted with stands of jungle; of the levees necessary to hold back the rivers; of the best terrain for spur tracks to feed the farms.

"The Negro is a wild stream that requires taming," said Montaya. "We worked on that now. Along here," he indicated with a pointer taken from a rack beside the map, "we make a twenty-three-foot levee. Your most important job, Mr. Curtis, is to see that it is completed within the next five months. On that I gamble 8,000 acres of planting!"

"The Masica will hardly worry us this year. In fact, since the—ah, unfortunate happening to Mr. Mitchell, I have halted work on the Masica levee and put those machines on the Negro levee. Flooding of the Masica will not endanger present planting."

"Along this line," he indicated with the pointer, "is our main canal. Already it has drained several thousand acres. Here will be secondary ditches. But we have so much to do, yes, so many laterals to dig. The canals in the upper half of the tract must also be completed before the rains come."

"Now, we have four draglines and a three-yard shovel and 6,000 laborers at work on the engineering projects . . ."

This wasn't even the beginning. More and more Curt realized he'd stepped into a man-size job. And with people who knew where they were going—what they wanted and how to go about getting it.

"Who made this map?"

"Mr. Ryden and Mr. Lannestock," was the answer. "In a plane I chartered especial for the purpose, a year before I was ready to start work. It takes long to secure a concession, to plan. It is good work, no? They are competent young men. That is why I am so happy now to have them under contract."

"Bueno. Here are progress reports on the Negro levee, the main drainage system, and the railroad. You will wish to look them over, but you will be brief about it, no? Directly after lunch we shall start on an inspection tour of the valley. For this we shall take the rest of today and tomorrow, so you will bring what personal articles you need for overnight. In the meantime, I have much to do myself . . ."

Curt hardly noticed Montaya's departure. He even forgot the worries in the back of his mind. What a job! The best equipment to work with, a challenge to meet, with the next season's rainfall the deadline. He swelled to the task, his eyes shone. He could have stood for hours before that map. Noon rolled around all too soon.

TEXAS
OUT-OF-DOORS

The farmer's wife has no excuse for not being cultured and up-to-date. All she has to do is cook the meals, wash the dishes, mop the floor, scrub the steps, wash the clothes, mend the linen and darn the socks; milk the cows, churn the butter, feed the chickens, bathe the children and can the fruit; cut the children's hair, set the dog on tramps, chase the cat out of the milk house, polish the silver, black the stove and straighten the shades—

Settle the children's scraps, shoo the hens off the porch, wipe up mud father and boys track in; and bake bread, make the cake, chase the pigs out of the garden, answer the telephone and air the featherbeds; heat the water for father to wash his feet, watch out for bed bugs, get the men up in the morning, gather the eggs, set the hens and keep the neighbor's baby while she goes to town and get the children off to school—

Get rid of insurance agents, spray the fruit trees, gather the berries, trim the lamps, swat the flies, empty the ashes and slop the pigs; peel the peaches, rake the yard, feed the pet lambs, string the beans, fill the lantern, sort the apples, carry in the wood and pick the geese; and answer the door and tell the men what they did with the axe the last time they used it; and write a letter to mother.

Then in the afternoon she can go to the missionary meeting and work her head off for the heathen.

Buckaroo—Cowboy.

Bulldogging—Often termed steer-wrestling; throwing of a steer by his horns by a "bulldogger."

NEWS FROM THE NORTH

Mourning doves in the northern tier of counties where the season opened September 1, are big, fat and numerous and nimrods are having little difficulty bagging their limits each day, according to reports from game wardens in that section of the state. The season opens in most of the remainder of the state on September 16. Mourning doves appear plentiful in almost all localities, but the white-wing crop in the lower Rio Grande Valley appears short of expectations.

Hunters who will take out after white-wings at high noon of September 17th were urged, incidentally, to retrieve every possible bird brought down. Thousands of these rapidly vanishing birds each year are crippled and left to die in the dense brush that is their native habitat. If the hunters were to retrieve every bird shot, they would greatly help those trying to save the white-wing from extermination in this state.

SKUNK FAT FOR SKUNKS

T. P. Lawdermilk, Irion county clerk, might have something here. In a letter to the game department he points out that trappers of fur-bearing animals annually waste much of the fat from animals. The government needs fats for the manufacture of explosives. So why not ask each hunter and trapper to save the animal fat, turn it over to retail fur dealers, who in turn could take it to district rendering plants? And if a little skunk odor remains in the fat of the striped creatures, then "why not fight the Skunks with a little skunk fat?" asks Mr. Lawdermilk.
