Midland's bank deposits increase

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

Despite major bank closings, one in the third quarter and one in the fourth, Midland's total bank deposits for the year end increased from the previous quarter. But, as would be expected, total deposits are down over the same time one year ago.

Midland bank deposits totaled approximately $1.6 billion at the end of the fourth quarter of 1983. Compared to the third quarter total of approximately $1.38 billion, deposits are up approximately $228 million. However, the total is down almost $478 million from the same quarter of 1982.

According to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., a drop in deposits is not unusual when a bank fails and is taken over by new owners.

Net loans for Midland's nine banks totaled just over $584 million for the fourth quarter of 1983. As a result of the city's two bank failures, total loans are down almost $900 million from the third quarter total of approximately $1.48 billion and down by almost $1.2 billion from the same quarter in 1982.

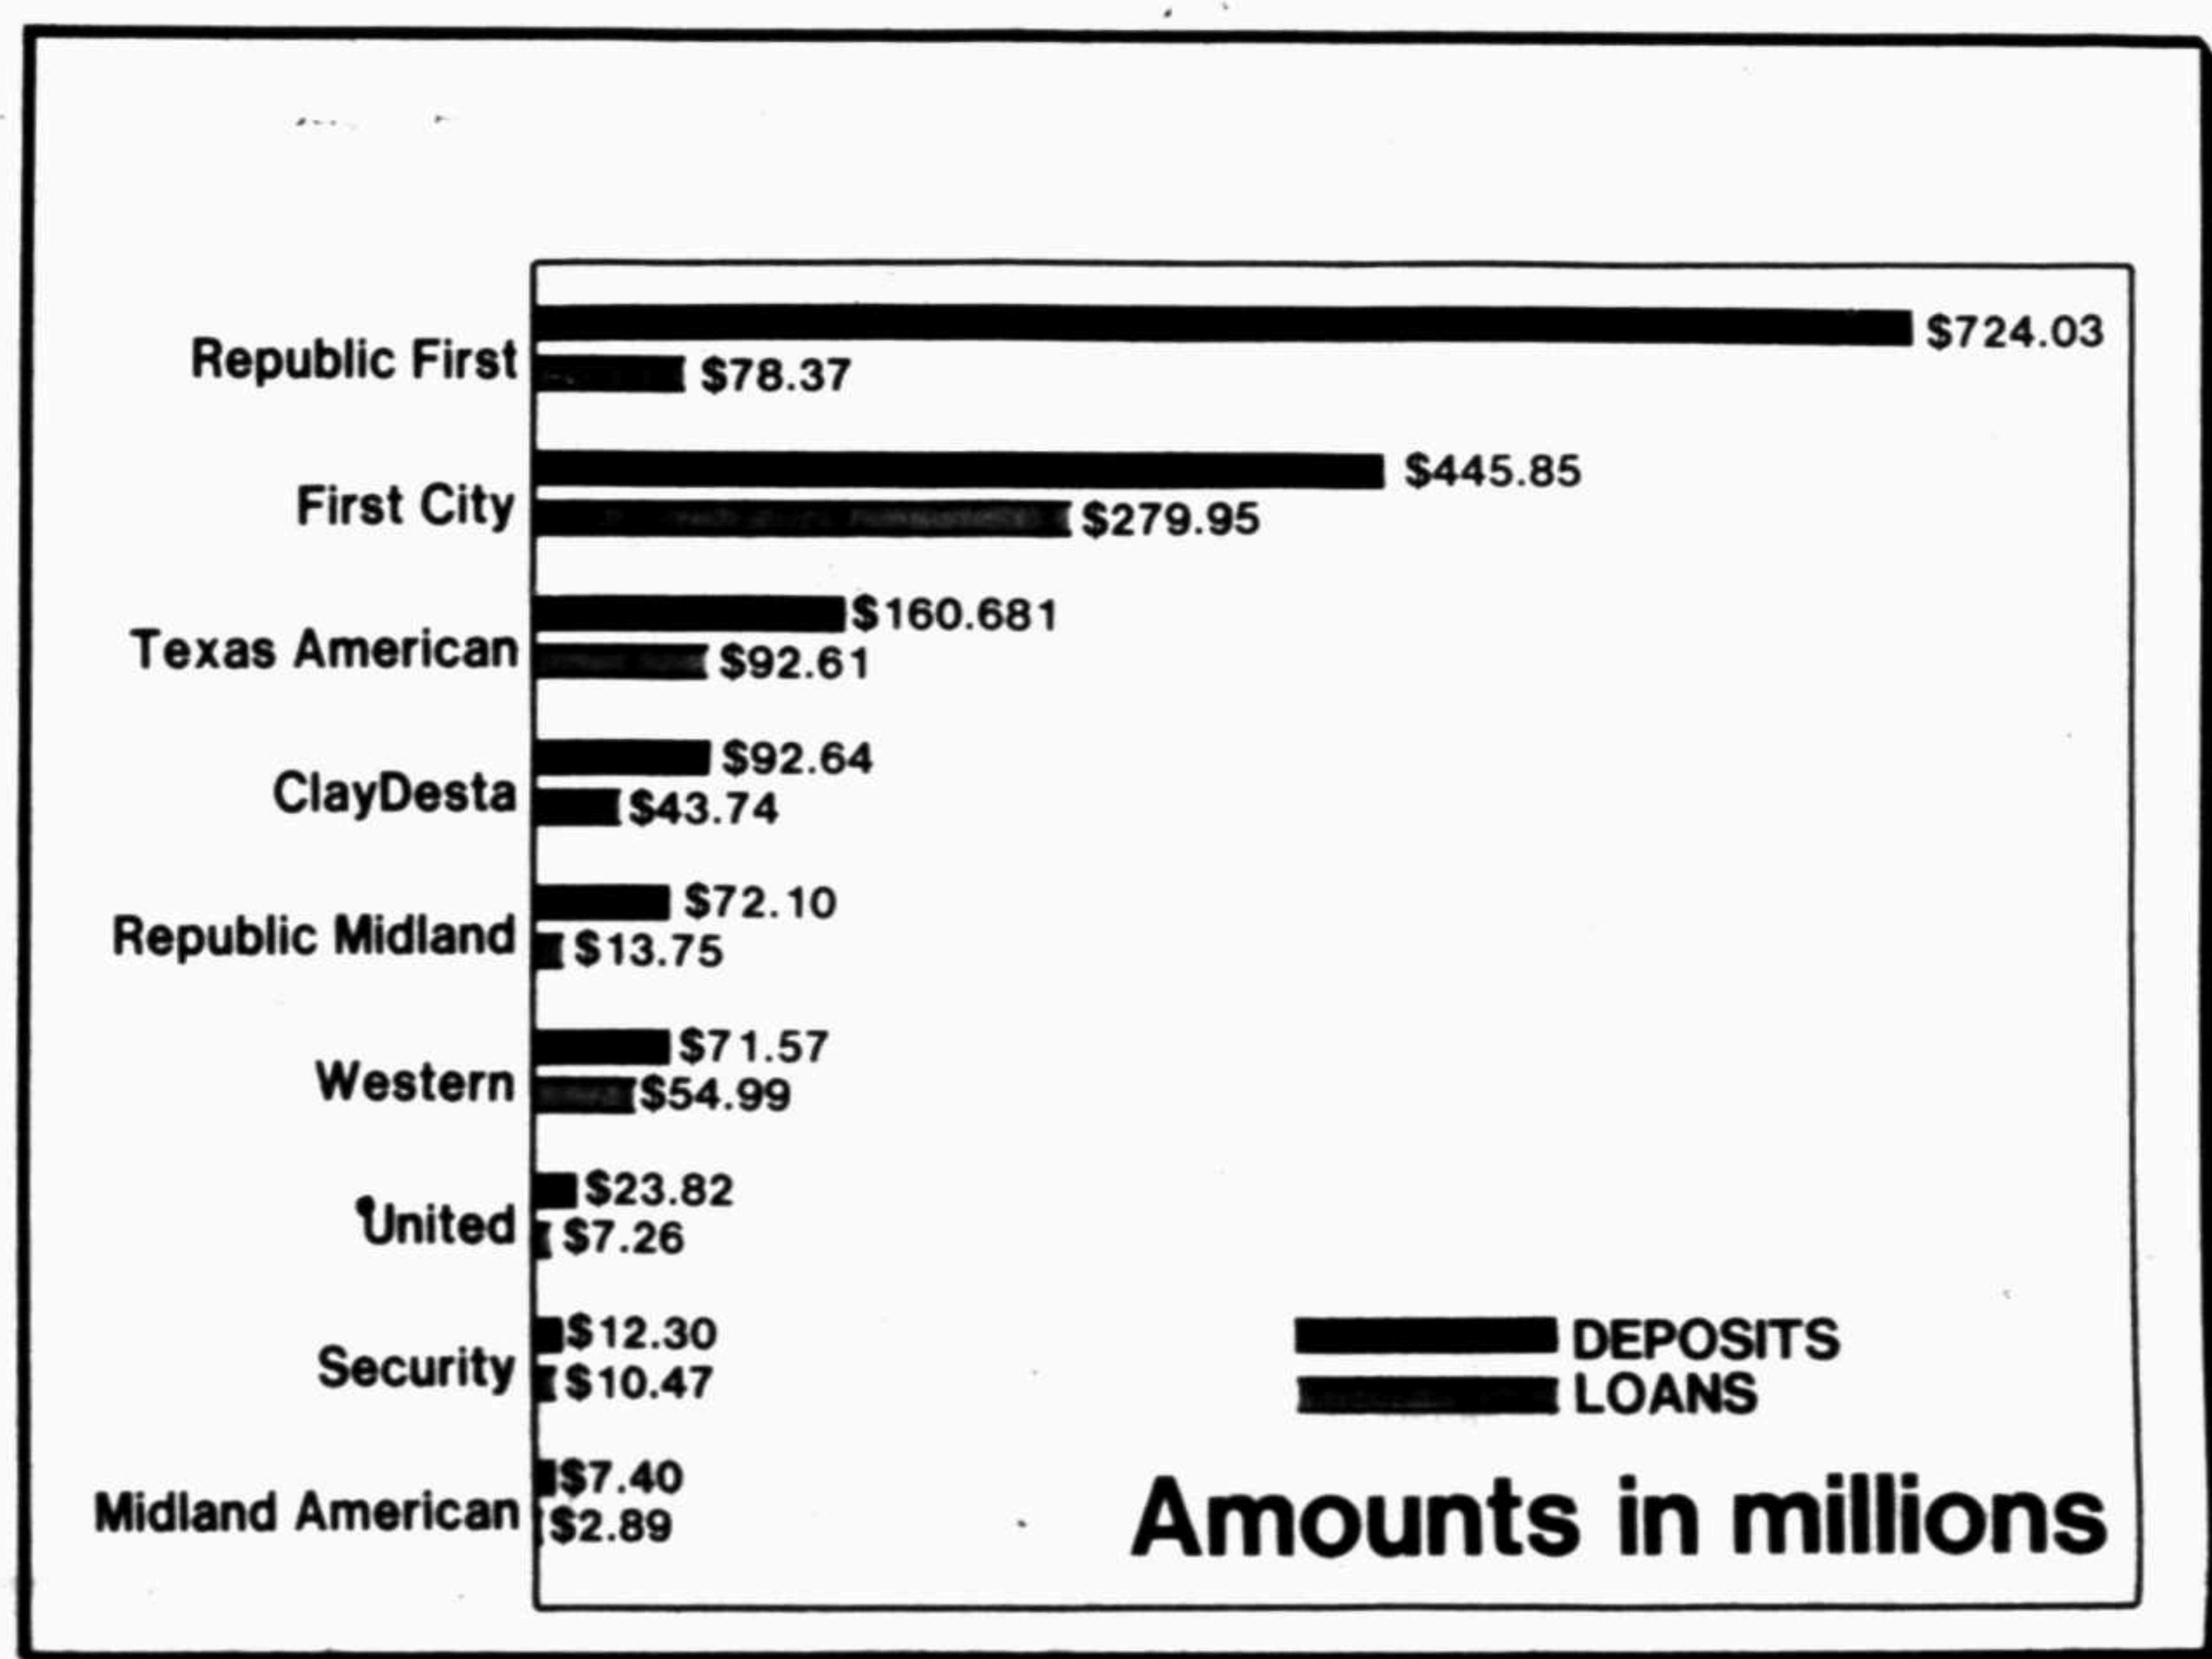

The decline in total loans for the fourth quarter compared to the previous quarter and to the fourth quarter of 1982, is mainly due to the failure of FNB and Metro Bank.

The third quarter total includes figures from FNB — approximately $1.1 billion in net loans — reported two weeks after the end of the third quarter.

Total loans at UnitedBank and RepublicBank First National Midland cannot be compared with past quarters because they are new banks which only assumed the deposits of the two failed banks and not the entire loan portfolios.

Also to be taken into consideration is the fact that total deposits assumed by the two new banks had been greatly affected by banking conditions which prevailed prior to the failures of Metro Bank and FNB.

UnitedBank, formerly Mid-Cities National Bank, opened Aug. 1 in place of Metro Bank which failed July 29. Metro Bank was declared insolvent due to substantial loan losses and closed by Texas Banking Commissioner Robert E. Stewart. The FDIC was named receiver of the failed bank's loan portfolio totaling more than $20 million. Since then, UnitedBank has been reviewing the portfolio and buying back loans. RepublicBank First National Midland opened Oct. 17 following the failure of First National Bank of Midland Oct. 14. Again, large loan losses were blamed for the failure.

At the time it closed, FNB reported almost $1.1 billion in loans which were assumed by the FDIC. RepublicBank has also been reviewing FNB's portfolio and is buying back some loans.

Because both banks chose not to buy back the complete loan portfolios from the two failed banks, the FDIC has become the city's largest lender. While it is not making any new loans, the FDIC is currently holding almost $1.1 billion in loans from the two failed banks.

Banks are required by law to report total deposits and loan activity after the end of each quarter.

Despite not having a full fourth quarter, RepublicBank First National Midland led all nine banks with deposits of approximately $724 million, an increase of more than $150 million compared to the $574 million it assumed last quarter when FNB failed. In the fourth quarter of 1982 FNB reported approximately $1.4 billion in total deposits. Loans net of discounts at RepublicBank totaled more than $78 million at the end of the quarter.

First City National Bank was second in total deposits for the fourth quarter with approximately $446 million, an increase of more than $23 million compared to the third quarter and up $51.4 million compared to the same quarter of 1982. Total loans net of discounts were just under $280 million, up approximately $1.4 million from the preceding quarter and down almost $2.1 million from the same time in 1982.

Fourth quarter 1983 deposits at Texas American Bank were just under $161 million, an increase of approximately $19.3 million from the previous quarter and an increase of almost $15 million from the fourth quarter 1982. Total loans were approximately $92.6 million which is up almost $10 million from third quarter reports of $82.6 million and up slightly from fourth quarter 1982 of $92.3 million.

ClayDesta National Bank reported the most significant increases of any of Midland's banks. Deposits were up more than $37 million compared to the third quarter 1983 and increased more than $80 million from the same time in 1982. Loans net of discounts totaled approximately $43.7 million on Dec. 31, 1983, up almost $13 million from the previous quarter and up more than $39 million from fourth quarter 1982.

Arms report prepared

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, even while it hopes for a thaw in chilly U.S.-Soviet relations, is preparing a new indictment charging the Soviets with at least three violations of existing arms control treaties.

The classified report will be sent to Congress, possibly by the end of next week, according to administration officials who discussed it Thursday on condition they not be identified. They said an unclassified version will be made public.

The analysis says the Soviets are constructing a new missile, a major new radar station, and are encoding almost all technical data from missiles being tested, said the officials.

All those actions are prohibited by the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaties. SALT I, including an anti-ballistic missile treaty, was negotiated in 1972 and SALT II was signed in 1979. Although the U.S. Senate has never ratified SALT II, both superpowers say they are abiding by its provisions.

In a United Nations speech on Sept. 26, President Reagan said "a newly discovered radar facility and a new ICBM raise serious concerns about Soviet compliance with agreements already negotiated."

The study has been pushed by conservatives in Congress, who won approval last October for an amendment to the State Department budget bill requiring a report on whether Soviet actions violated the treaties.

The report comes as the administration is sending signals that it hopes relations between the two superpowers can improve. President Reagan has scheduled a speech Monday in which he reportedly plans to say he hopes for better U.S.-Soviet relations.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who meets next week with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, said Thursday the United States is "prepared for a thaw" in its dealings with Moscow.

The study on alleged Soviet treaty violations has been prepared by a group including experts from the Pentagon, Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, State Department, CIA, and National Security Council.

It has been finished for some time, but its release was delayed because the violations are technical and because the administration has been reluctant to make the allegations, according to congressional sources who discussed the report only on condition they not be named.

Probe says counterfeiting could be 'inside job'

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Inmates at a state penitentiary may have used a prison print shop to counterfeit money orders, birth certificates and driver's licenses, and whoever was responsible did "a pretty good job," a federal official says.

The official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said authorities don't know how many inmates at the New Mexico State Penitentiary near Santa Fe might have been involved in the alleged counterfeiting.

An investigation by the U.S. Postal Service and the Secret Service now centers on Jessie Sandoval, a 26-year-old recent parolee charged Thursday with passing a counterfeit money order, said Corrections Department spokesman David Roybal and U.S. Attorney William Lutz.

Sources said the money order apparently was produced in the prison print shop. The shop, manned by 210 inmates, has been closed since a search Tuesday but will probably reopen today, Roybal said.

Ken Rommel, special assistant for investigations at the Corrections Department, said, "At this stage I don't think there's that many people involved."

Rommel said a few prisoners have access to the equipment that would have to be used for counterfeiting.

'Excited' five-month-old finally joins his family

BOSTON (AP) — Finally free from the germ-free hospital room that has been his home for five months, baby Sean Michael Halloran is a bit dazed, but settling into family life like a pro, the infant's elated parents say.

He's so excited to be home, you can see it on his face," the baby's father, Jay Halloran, said in a telephone interview Thursday from the family's home in Plymouth. "He's playing with his sister and a couple of boys. He hasn't slept since we got home."

Sean suffers from severe combined immunodeficiency disease, a sickness that breaks down the body's immune system so it cannot ward off infections. Until Thursday afternoon, the baby's parents and 11-year-old sister, Alina, were only able to touch Sean while wearing sterile gloves, hats, suits, masks and boots.

The 5-month-old infant's life was saved by a bone marrow transplant from his father, a nuclear engineer at the Pilgrim Station in Plymouth.

Jay Halloran tried without success to save his first son's life with the same procedure last year. As television cameras buzzed and flashes popped, Sean's mother, June Halloran, carried her son from Children's Hospital at 2:30 p.m. Tears filled her eyes as she whispered, "This feels great. It feels really real."

Sean didn't seem as thrilled. After his first look at the outside world, he started to cry and let out a healthy wail.

He was much happier after he arrived home, his father said.

"We fed him a couple of times and he's acting really natural," he said.

Halloran said he and his wife are overjoyed to have Sean "where he belongs."

An easterly wind of 10-20 miles per hour may send the chill factor plummeting.

Thursday's high of 51 was 26 degrees short of the alltime record for the date set in 1957, while the low of 28 was well above the 7 degree mark of 1964.

No precipitation was recorded in the 24-hour period ending at 6 a.m. today, leaving the month's and year's total at 0.39 inches.

Wholesale prices make smallest increase in two decades

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose a minuscule 0.6 percent last year, the smallest gain in two decades, the government said today.

Gasoline prices fell a record 10 percent; home heating oil costs rose off 15.8 percent.

The overall increase was less than one-fifth the 3.7 percent gain in 1982.

As for last month's report, prices rose just 0.2 percent, the Labor Department said, as a 1.0 percent decline in energy prices offset the sharpest meat prices gains in 3 1/2 years.

Taiwan's reunification addressed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang, greeted by enthusiastic applause from members of the largest Chinese community in the United States, said reunification of Taiwan with the mainland would not mean a "swallowing up" of the island.

Experts said Zhao's detailed description Thursday night of the freedoms Taiwan would retain under reunification could mark a "welcome advance" in bringing the two sides together.

Zhao said Taiwan would not be taxed by Peking and could keep its own armed forces, maintain an independent judiciary and political system and have representation in Peking.

"It will not be a case of the mainland swallowing up Taiwan or vice versa," Zhao told more than 300 Chinese-Americans. "We have proposed that after reunification, Taiwan and the mainland shall be both part of the People's Republic of China, and Taiwan will become a special administrative region."

"This means that Taiwan will enjoy full autonomy and enjoy some exclusive powers that don't exist in other municipalities and autonomous regions" of China, said Zhao, delivering his remarks in Mandarin Chinese which was then translated into English.

Unlike the Autonomous Region of Tibet, which is still under strict Chinese control, Zhao said "the mainland will send no representatives to Taiwan, neither troops nor administrative personnel."

Zhao asked the guests, who were invited by the Chinese Consulate in San Francisco, for suggestions on how reunification could be achieved and urged them to promote it among Chinese leaders in Los Angeles and Seattle. The premier took no questions from the audience, but shook hands with several of those attending as he left the hall at the Fairmont Hotel.

Zhao continues his tour of the San Francisco today with a ceremony at City Hall, where he will get the key to the city, and a tour of the Lawrence Hall of Science at the University of California-Berkeley. He will be guest of honor tonight ence, but shook hands with several of those attending as he left the hall at the Fairmont Hotel.

Zhao continues his tour of the San Francisco today with a ceremony at City Hall, where he will get the key to the city, and a tour of the Lawrence Hall of Science at the University of California-Berkeley. He will be guest of honor tonight at a dinner given by Gov. George Deukmejian, then is scheduled to fly to New York on Saturday for a two-day visit before traveling to Canada.

Professor Tom Fingar, director of the U.S.-China Relations Program at Stanford University, said that while the speech was "not fundamentally different from previous statements," it represented a "welcome advance" because of the details of freedom Zhao mentioned.

"It's less jargonistic, less vague than what's been said before," Fingar said. "There's been a pressing for greater detail on what Peking has in mind for Taiwan. I don't remember hearing it said previously with that degree of explicitness."

Ling Chi Wang of the University of California's Asian studies department said the speech was "significant" and could lead Chinese-Americans to look more favorably on reunification.

"Chinatown has been divided far too long," Ling said. "This shift will bring the two factions closer together."

Zhao received the loudest applause when he talked of the "honor" Taiwan would retain.

"After reunification, Taiwan will have nothing to lose," Zhao said. "On the contrary, they will gain great honor and benefits as a part of the motherland."

A similar, but less detailed, outline of Peking's reunification plan was offered Jan. 1 by Deng Yingchao, a member of the Politburo and widow of Chou En-Lai.

Taiwan rejected the offer the next day, calling it "a new soup containing the same old poisonous ingredients."

Fingar said the remarks by the 64-year-old Zhao, in conjunction with other efforts Peking has made recently to woo Taiwan, show that "Chinese leaders are genuinely becoming more concerned about reunification."

"Taiwan's leaders are becoming old," Fingar said. "The affection for the mainland, while it does not rest solely with the old leaders, is strongest in them. Peking wants to start the process of reunification, which could take decades, before the old leaders pass from the scene."

General may have 'disguised' suicide

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An Army Reserve general who had hanged himself with his hands tied behind his back at Fort Sam Houston might have been trying to disguise his suicide as a murder by terrorists, the FBI says.

FBI agent Julian Delarosa said Thursday that investigators have discounted terrorism in the death of Maj. Gen. Robert G. Ownby, who was discovered bound and hanged Wednesday in the headquarters building at the fort, where he led the 90th U.S. Army Reserve Command.

People have faked murders "because of an insurance policy; they might feel it would disgrace the family; there are religious reasons, social reasons," Bexar County Medical Examiner Vincent DiMaio said.

Pinned to Ownby's sweater was a note bearing the typewritten message: "Captured, tried, convicted of crimes by the U.S. Army against the people of the world. Sentenced and executed."

The FBI said a handwritten note also had been found in Ownby's office, saying he had "started" some intruders in the building at "1145 hours" and was going to investigate.

In Washington, Pentagon officials told The New York Times the investigation centered on suicide, although murder had not been ruled out. The officials said they were looking into Ownby's mental condition, the status of his business and personal affairs and related matters for a possible motive.

The general's glasses, jacket and wallet were found in a neat stack near the body and there was no sign of foul play, the FBI said. Pentagon officials said the note could have been "a diversion."

"The possibility of the victim having placed the belt around his own wrists has not been ruled out," an FBI statement said.

Delarosa, assistant agent in charge of the FBI office in San Antonio, said, "As far as we are concerned, we are conducting the investigation as a crime on a government reservation, not as a terrorist investigation."

Ownby, who was married and had three children, was to be buried today at Fort Sam Houston National Cemetery.

Blood was found on the general's body, but the FBI quoted DiMaio as saying the blood could have dripped from Ownby's nose and mouth during the hanging.

DiMaio ruled asphyxiation by hanging as the cause of death and said the general had no "preliminary marks or bruises indicating a struggle."

DiMaio also said he had seen people who had hanged themselves by placing a loop around the neck, then pulling the hands together behind the back and jumping off a high stair.

Investigators placed the time of Ownby's death sometime between late Tuesday and 6:40 a.m. Wednesday, when an employee found the body. The FBI said the handwritten note was apparently written late Tuesday night, despite its opening reference to "about 1145 hours," military jargon for 11:45 a.m.

"I started out of the building and caught a glimpse of some people in the building who moved toward the back of the building. I don't know who they are or what they are doing. They were apparently startled. I came back here to call the MPs (military police), however, I cannot get any of the telephones to work. Just as a precaution I am placing my office keys in my shoe. I will call the MPs as soon as I can get to a phone."

Base spokesman Capt. Rudy Purificato said Ownby often worked late and probably would have been alone in the building late Tuesday.

Bob Butler, who described himself as the general's "dearest friend," told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that he doubted Ownby killed himself.

1. Republic Bank First National succeeded failed First National Bank after the quarter began, taking over that bank's deposits but not its loans. Republic has since purchased a small portion of FNB's loans and begun making new loans of its own, as indicated in the table. As Republic First is a new bank, its condition cannot be accurately compared to that of its predecessor.

2. United Bank formerly Mid Cities Bank, is successor to failed Metro Bank. It took over the old bank's deposits but not its loans during the 3rd quarter. It has since purchased some of the old bank's loans and begun making new loans of its own, as indicated in the table. However, United's present condition cannot be accurately compared to that of its predecessor.

UnitedBank, which assumed the deposit of failed Metro Bank and moved from Midland Regional Air Terminal to downtown Midland, reported fourth quarter deposits of almost $24 million. The total is up approximately $1.25 million compared to approximately $22.5 million UnitedBank assumed when Metro Bank failed. In the fourth quarter of 1982 Metro Bank reported approximately $27.6 million in total deposits. Total loans at UnitedBank were slightly more than $7.2 million on Dec. 31, 1983.

Security National Bank's deposits increase more than $430,000 to approximately $12.3 million during the fourth quarter 1983 compared to the previous quarter. Loans net of discounts totaled more than $10.4 million, up almost $815,000 from the third quarter, report of $9.6 million and up more than $6.9 million from the same time in 1982.

Midland American Bank also reported increased deposits of approximately $7.4 million during the fourth quarter. The total is up more than $2.7 million from the third quarter results and up more than $4.2 million from the same time in 1982. The bank's total loans were just under $2.9 million in the fourth quarter, down almost $134,000 from the third quarter and up more than $678,000 compared to the fourth quarter of 1982.

Are Soviets listening in on Fremont's calls?

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — Soviet diplomats in San Francisco appear to be eavesdropping on microwave telephone calls and can intercept "virtually any call" made in this medium-sized city, police say.

But City Councilman Bob Reeder, who had asked for the police report on Soviet technical capabilities to intercept calls, said he would be paranoid if he thought his city had been singled out for special surveillance.

Fremont, a city of 140,000 about 50 miles southeast of San Francisco, has only three security-cleared defense related companies. "There are hundreds in the Silicon Valley," a high-technology region near Fremont, Reeder said.

Soviet Vice Consul Gennady German in San Francisco called the investigation "senseless" and said the allegations were "groundless" and "based entirely on gossip and speculation."

The vice consul said the "allegations seem to be a product of mistrust and hatred toward the Soviet Union generated in this country by those who are not interested in improving mutual understanding between the two nations."

The Fremont report based its conclusions on interviews with the FBI, the State Department, the telephone company, San Francisco police and various news reports, including those from The New York Times and the San Francisco Chronicle.

It found that telephone microwave transmissions that send mid- and long-distance calls can be intercepted and scanned by a computer. Specific calls can then be recorded by a machine that is activated if a key word or phrase is mentioned.

Reeder said the report should be of general concern to the San Francisco Bay area and that he does not believe that Fremont was a focus of Soviet activity.

"I would be paranoid if I thought they (the Soviets) were looking at Fremont particularly," said Reeder. The report by Chief Robert Wasserman concludes that the Soviet Consulate in San Francisco "is in a strategic location for the interception of microwave signals from radio and telephonic communications."

Based on the research, "It appears that the intercepting of microwave telephone communications does occur at the Soviet Consulate," the chief wrote.

Reeder, meanwhile, said he has asked Sen. Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., to reintroduce a 1981 bill that would have forced any person with diplomatic immunity to leave the country if he refused to stop electronic surveillance.

Cult members protest 'abuse of love' at massage parlor

DALLAS (AP) — An anti-pornography demonstration, staged to protest an "abuse of love," turned sour when two employees of a massage parlor threw bottles and buckets of water at members of the Unification Church.

One woman was arrested in the demonstration Wednesday after Marci Cowlishaw, a photographer for KXAS-TV, was hit in the face with water containing soap or a chemical irritant on the sidewalk in front of the Yellow Rose Massage Parlor, said police spokesman Bob Shaw.

About a dozen members of the Unification Church, followers of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, marched on the sidewalk in front of the parlor carrying anti-pornography signs.

With placards shouting "Pornography Perverts," and "Close this Puke Shop," the otherwise tame protest also set up a "Heavenly Peep Show" — a videotape of Moon's Christian teachings.

"This is part of our traveling ministry against pornography," said Donald Hendrich, a leader of the group. "We did this in Houston (last month) and had no trouble at all. We're going to be in Dallas for three weeks holding meetings and making our social statements."

The disruption apparently was fueled when two employees became enraged because photographers were taking their pictures.

"I haven't heard whether they (the Moonies) were going to continue their protest, but I know this — the employees really got hacked, they really got unhappy," Shaw said.

By the time police restored order, two Moonies and two photographers had been doused with buckets of water, one Dallas Morning News photographer was also hit by a bottle. The camerawoman was not seriously injured.

Hendrich said the march was intended to speak out against the "abuse of love."

This abuse of sexuality is Dead Love. Living Love comes from God, and is available 24 hours a day. We are going to make available a different kind of love. These people are looking for love, but only finding each other's bodies," Hendrich said.

The employee who was arrested for dousing the Fort Worth camerawoman was standing in the doorway of the Yellow Rose, brandishing a baseball bat.

Renters find deal from 'wealthy dentist' too good to be true

HOUSTON (AP) — The bargain was impressive: a $120,000 west Houston house offered for rent for $400 a month, almost half what officials said a leaseholder could usually expect to pay.

But it was too good to be true. A "wealthy dentist" who does not own the house leased it to four families who were convinced he did.

Among those taken was a newlywed couple who said they spent all the cash they got as wedding presents to pay the first month's rent.

"Now we're strictly broke," Randy Morse said Thursday.

Morse said he was enthusiastic about the lucky find until he visited the house Tuesday and a neighbor said he was the fourth person to tell her he planned to move in this week.

Morse said he answered an advertisement about the house and a man identifying himself as Dr. William M. Kennedy came to his trailer Jan. 3. The man said he was looking for good tenants who would take good care of the place and that the rent was low "so we could afford the upkeep," Morse said.

Morse said he paid cash because the man offered him a 4 percent discount not to write him a check.

Assistant District Attorney Russel Turbeville said his consumer fraud division has received at least six calls from people who had attempted to lease the house. Three people other than Morse had paid cash and signed lease papers, Turbeville said.

He said his office began investigating Jan. 5 when Wayland Hutchens, an executive with Associated Properties, the actual owner of the house, reported the scam.

Hutchens said he was tipped off by someone who had signed a lease for the house one day and discovered a "for sale" sign in front of it the next.

Hutchens said if the house were for rent, it would command a price of about $750 a month.

State health official knew of EDB problems last May DALLAS (AP) — The commissioner of the Texas Health Department knew eight months ago that a cancer-causing pesticide had been detected in Florida's waters, but waited until last week to order tests to determine if Texas has a similar problem. The Dallas Morning News reported today.

In a copyright story, the newspaper reported that Dr. Robert Bernstein said Thursday that he had learned last May, at a meeting in Alexandria, Va., of state health officials, that EDB had contaminated ground water in Florida.

Despite coming under widespread attack by legislators and other officials, Bernstein has defended his action and has criticized Florida's removal of EDB-tainted food from grocery shelves as premature.

"We thought — and still do — that we're on top of it," Bernstein said. "There is no public health menace that we're aware of."

State Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, has asked for a legislative hearing to investigate the way state officials have handled the EDB problems. The hearing is tentatively scheduled for Jan. 25, said Tony Grigsby, an aide to Uribe.

"I don't think that Texans are served well by the apparent cavalier attitude of the chief physician who is charged with protecting our public health," said Uribe, vice chairman of the Health and Human Resources Committee.

State Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, also expressed displeasure with Bernstein's actions.

"It's my impression that the Health Department is not responding," she said. "I'm extremely disappointed with Dr. Bernstein's lack of concern and lack of activity in this area."

Ms. Danburg is vice chairwoman of the Committee on Environmental Affairs.

Bernstein defended his agency's actions, saying that until the federal government sets EDB limits, there is little reason for the Health Department to act.

Tests of the water in Texas cities began Tuesday, almost a month after the state Agriculture Department began testing food to see if it contained ethylene dibromide, or EDB. The chemical has been found in almost a third of the 79 food items tested in Texas.

Health Department officials said they will announce results of their 22 water-sample tests on Friday.

Teen-age housekeeper pleads innocent

WACO (AP) — A teen-age housekeeper has pleaded innocent to last month's slaying of a 70-year-old woman, whose death and change of wills has pitted her son against television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart in a battle for the estate.

Jacqueline Euna Warren, 19, was arraigned Thursday before State District Judge George Allen, who ordered her returned to McLennan County Jail in lieu of $25,000 bond.

Ida Lee Baugh, 70, who had been confined to a wheelchair for the past nine years, was stabbed repeatedly in the face and shoulders with scissors early Dec. 10. She received 400 stitches about the head and shoulders, but died two days later without regaining consciousness, investigators said.

Ms. Warren, who was working as a housekeeper for Mrs. Baugh and her husband, flagged down a motorist early on Dec. 10 outside the Baugh's home on the east edge of McGregor, 20 miles east of Waco.

The housekeeper was arrested a short time after police began their investigation and a charge of aggravated assault was upgraded to murder after Mrs. Baugh died.

Two men had broken into the residence and attacked Mrs. Baugh, Ms. Warren told police. Her husband, Maurice Patrick Baugh, who was hospitalized at the time for a heart ailment, died on Dec. 17, five days after his wife.

Their wills, filed in probate court two days later, left the bulk of their estate to Swaggart Ministries of Baton Rouge, La.

The couple's son, Larry Neale Baugh of Irving, filed challenges earlier this month to their wills, saying they were changed on Nov. 30.

Freeze causes jump in jobless rate

McALLEN (AP) — Unemployment among farmworkers may cause the jobless rate in Hidalgo County to rise from 18.4 percent to 40 percent in the next two months as a result of the freeze which destroyed fruit and vegetable crops, officials say.

And citrus growers predict the high jobless rate may be a fact of Rio Grande Valley life for the next few years.

Thousands of laid off workers began lining up at 5 a.m. Thursday outside the Texas Employment Commission office in McAllen, hoping for special unemployment benefits that became available after President Reagan declared four Valley counties a disaster area Saturday.

Based on the number of people applying for benefits this week, Molly Ramirez, a district supervisor for unemployment insurance who is overseeing the federal program, predicted the high jobless rate.

"We've never had anything like this happen before, so it's hard to say. We had about 19 percent unemployment in McAllen before the freeze. That may now go as high as 40 percent."

"It's about the same in Weslaco and throughout Hidalgo County," she said.

Prior to the disaster declaration, only 50 percent of the unemployed farmworkers in Cameron, Hidalgo, Starr and Wilacy counties were eligible for unemployment benefits. Those previously employed by growers who did not contribute to the state unemployment fund did not qualify for aid.

"A lot of these people who are considered by the law to be self-employed are living day-to-day and hand-to-mouth," Ramirez said.

"Many of them are very desperate because they have been out of work and out of money for going on three weeks," she said.

Ramirez said additional staff was hired to process federal disaster unemployment claims. Offices began processing claims Monday in Weslaco, Edinburg, Rio Grande City and McAllen, and the average wait between filing a claim and receiving a check has been cut from three weeks to 10 days.

About 30,000 families are expected to apply for benefits, which will last about 14 weeks. Costs to the unemployment assistance program could run as high as $10 million, according to White House estimates.

Unemployed farmworkers wait in long lines for hours in McAllen to apply for federal disaster unemployment benefits in Hidalgo County. Officials say unemployment may rise to 40 percent as a result of the freeze which destroyed citrus and vegetable crops.

John Kruse, economic analyst for the Texas Employment Commission, said some farmworkers may leave the Valley, take parttime jobs or drop out of the labor force for the next two months. So, future unemployment figures may not reflect actual number of people affected by freeze-related layoffs.

Ramirez said that in addition to farmworkers "we're seeing a lot of workers from related industries, like truckers who haul citrus, canners and nursery workers who are also applying."

The freeze of '83 is expected to affect unemployment figures in Hidalgo County for the next several years.

Firearms expert: Revolver not made well

DALLAS (AP) — A firearms expert says a .22-caliber revolver responsible for paralyzing a teen-ager was not made well and could be dangerous in the hands of an untrained user.

Dallas police officer Jerry Compton was called by the defense Thursday in a handgun liability trial to testify about the importance of safely using handguns.

David Clancy, of Amarillo, is seeking $20 million from the manufacturer, designer and marketer of an Armsco revolver that accidentally discharged in the parking lot of an Amarillo high school in October 1977. Clancy was struck in the neck and was left paralyzed from the shoulders down.

Under cross-examination, Compton said the .22-caliber Armsco revolver in question lacked an important safety device, was "of very poor quality," and could be "dangerous" in the hands of a person untrained in gun safety.

The revolver was sold for $19 by a store owned by the Zale Corp. in 1971, testimony showed.

When Clancy's lawyer, Windle Turley, asked if Compton agreed that the revolver was "a dangerous piece of junk," the officer replied.

Execution stayed; Supreme Court must now hear appeal

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge in an impromptu hotel-room conference blocked today's execution of convicted police killer James Hutchins, and the U.S. Supreme Court must now decide whether the state can proceed with the lethal injection.

Chief Justice Warren Burger, refusing to rule on an early-morning appeal by North Carolina officials, referred the case to a court conference today, said Supreme Court spokeswoman Toni House.

Judge J. Dickson Phillips of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals stayed the execution at 12:05 a.m. today, less than six hours before it was due to be carried out.

If the Supreme Court removes the stay, Hutchins could still be executed today, prosecutors said. State law requires a condemned prisoner to be executed between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m.

HUTCHINS, 54, was sentenced to death in 1979 for the rifle slayings of two sheriff's deputies who were investigating a report that he had beaten his teen-age daughter, and that of a state trooper who later pursued him.

His lawyers based their appeals on claims that jury selection at his trial was flawed because death-penalty opponents were excluded from the panel and that Hutchins was insane at the time of the killings and remains so.

As the condemned man waited late Thursday in a cell 10 paces from the death chamber, his wife pleaded with Gov. Jim Hunt for mercy, while a sister of one of the victims collapsed in a Capitol hallway after demanding to see the governor.

Hunt said he was still reviewing the case. Phillips' handwritten order delaying the execution "pending further orders from this court" was delivered from a Richmond, Va., hotel room where he met for 50 minutes with lawyers.

EARLIER THURSDAY, both the state Supreme Court in Raleigh and U.S. District Judge Woodrow Jones in Rutherfordton rejected the appeals. Superior Court Judge Robert Collier refused to block the execution despite a psychiatrist's testimony that Hutchins was "severely mentally ill."

Phillips' decision took into account a federal judge's ruling in Charlotte earlier Thursday, according to North Carolina Deputy Attorney General Dick League. U.S. District Judge James McMillan set aside three murder convictions in an unrelated case because people who opposed the death penalty were excluded from jury service.

Shortly after Phillips' ruling was announced, two sisters of the slain trooper demanded to see Hunt and were admitted to the state Capitol but not to the governor's office.

Senator won't seek re-election

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Paul Tsongas once said, "I probably can live without politics better than almost anyone else." Now, says the Massachusetts Democrat, illness has forced him to make that choice.

Tsongas, 42, announced in Boston Thursday that he is giving up his campaign for a second term because of a chronic ailment diagnosed 3½ months ago.

He did not disclose the nature of his illness. He said it would not have prevented him from serving again, but he wanted to spend more time with his family.

The Boston Herald, quoting an unidentified source, is reporting in today's editions that Tsongas has cancer of the lymph nodes which doctors are saying is a treatable condition.

"Last Friday night after three days of campaigning, I helped put my daughters to sleep. I was lying there in the darkness, and it became obvious to me what I had to do," said Tsongas. "This is not an easy decision. But under the circumstances, I have no other choice."

TSONGAS REFUSED TO DISCUSS his medical problem, saying, "This is a political event, not a medical event. That's what the emphasis should be." He explained, "What I'm doing today is giving up a career. That's the story. You can all start on that."

Tsongas is the fourth senator to announce he will not seek re-election this year. The others are Democrat Jennings Randolph of West Virginia and Republicans Howard Baker of Tennessee and John Tower of Texas.

But Randolph, Baker and Tower all are veterans of long service retiring in good health. The brevity of Tsongas' Senate career, and the circumstances in which it is ending, lent a special poignancy to his announcement.

"The Senate loses one of its brightest young lights," said Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

"Paul has decided to leave the Senate in the prime of an outstanding public career," said Tsongas' senior colleague from Massachusetts, Edward M. Kennedy.

"I am terribly sorry for him and his family," said Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

Tsongas had often said he did not want to remain in the Senate until he got stale. Shortly after his victory over Republican Sen. Edward Brooke in 1978, he told a reporter he felt he could "live without politics" better than most public officials.

IN 1981, AFTER HIS EMERGENCE as a spokesman for the "new liberalism" in the Democratic party had made him controversial, he said, "What have I got to lose? I don't want to be a senator for the rest of my life."

Tsongas' decision gives Republicans, who control the Senate 55-45, another chance, statistically, to capture an open Democratic seat. Democrats are confident of keeping the seat in their column, however, and Republicans are only cautiously encouraged.

Mitchell Daniels, executive director of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, said, "I think it is fair to say our prospects are certainly improved and our counterparts have a new problem." However he noted, "It is still a very Democratic state."

"There is virtually no question that we can hold the seat," said a Democratic official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

He said Democrats known to be "telephoning around" about the possibility of running included former Massachusetts House Speaker David Bartley, former Rep. Michael Harrington and Massachusetts Secretary of State Michael Connolly.

John D. Stobierski, press secretary to Rep. Brian J. Donnelly of Boston, said Donnelly is "consulting with his family, friends and advisers" about the race and would decide in the next two weeks.

IN BOSTON, DEMOCRATIC Gov. Michael Dukakis said he would not seek Tsongas' seat. Party sources in Massachusetts mentioned Lt. Gov. John Kerry and Reps. James Shannon of Lawrence and Edward Markey of Malden as possible candidates.

Shannon's press secretary, Julie Witcover, said the speculation was "premature." Markey's spokesman, J. Wayne Dillehay, said the congressman was flying from the West Coast and could not be reached for comment.

GOP sources in Massachusetts said the announced Republican candidate, Ray Shamie of Walpole, who lost to Kennedy in 1982, might face opposition from better known Republicans such as Margaret Heckler, a former Massachusetts congresswoman who is now secretary of health and human services. Mrs. Heckler could not be reached for comment.

U.S. Senator Paul E. Tsongas, 42, speaks to a reporter outside his Lowell, Mass., home, Thursday morning, as he confirms reports that he will not seek re-election at the end of his term.

"This is a political event, not a medical event. That's what the emphasis should be. What I'm doing today is giving up a career. That's the story."

— U.S. Senator Paul Tsongas

Former U.S. Attorney General Elliott Richardson and Rep. Silvio O. Conte were also being mentioned as possible GOP candidates.

State GOP chairman Andrew Natsios predicted Tsongas' withdrawal would prompt an infusion of campaign money from conservative political action committees seeking to preserve the Republican Party's majority in the Senate.

"It will be one of the two or three most targeted races in the country," Natsios said.

Tsongas emerged as a "new liberalism" leader after questioning the continued relevance of traditional Democratic social programs in a speech before the liberal Americans for Democratic Action in 1980 and publishing a book called "The Road from Here" in 1981 that called for "compassionate realism" and suggested that Democrats reconsider their relationship to big labor.

As a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Tsongas has been a strong critic of Reagan administration policies in Central America and the Middle East.

Guard sentenced to prison

NEW YORK (AP) — Saying that "the fruit of the crime... should not be in easy reach," a judge sentenced a security guard and another man to 15 years in prison for stealing $11.2 million from the Sentry Armored Car Co.

U.S. District Judge Edward Weinfeld also imposed $35,000 fines on Christos Potamitis, 25, and Eddie Argitakos, 24. Steve Argitakos, 58, was sentenced to four years in prison and a $5,000 fine as an accessory in the December 1982 theft in New York.

Weinfeld noted that more than $10 million is still missing from what authorities say was the nation's largest cash theft.

Biting Indians released on bond

SEATTLE (AP) — Six Lummi Indian men accused of biting two teen-age girls during a ritual were released on bond and ordered by a judge to abstain from religious ceremonies until their March trial.

The six men, including the fathers of the two girls involved, pleaded innocent Thursday to assault charges.

Defense lawyer Russell Barsh said there is no question that Darlene Washington and Shellina Cooper, who were 15 at the time, were "abused or mistreated," but said the assaults may have happened after the ceremonies.

Contributions to help animals

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — About $80,000 in contributions, including a 6-year-old Louisiana boy's $2 allowance, has been donated to help Utah's starving deer and elk, officials said.

The animals have been forced down from their traditional feeding grounds into populated valleys because of heavy mountain snows.

The state will seek an emergency $337,200 from the Legislature to shore up feeding programs, Division of Wildlife Resources spokesman Steve Phillips said. State Rep. Glen Brown said the money would also aid farmers whose crops have been damaged by hungry deer.

Sailors plead guilty to charges

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Sixteen sailors charged in the sale of the hallucinogenic drug LSD aboard the aircraft carrier Independence have pleaded guilty and been dishonorably discharged, a spokesman said.

The four-month investigation resulting in the November and December courts-martial was kept quiet while the Independence participated in the invasion of Grenada and then redeployed off the coast of Lebanon. Navy spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Tom Connor said Wednesday.

Besides dishonorable discharges, the sentences included confinement at hard labor, Connor said.

As many as 20 more sailors face lesser charges of using the drug, and two civilians accused of mailing LSD-soaked cards to the carrier are being sought, Connor said.

Diet cola makers deceptive?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group has charged the makers of some diet colas containing the new sweetener Nutrasweet are neglecting to inform customers their products are also sweetened with saccharin.

The Center for Science and Public Interest said Thursday that advertisements for Diet Coke, Diet Pepsi and Diet Rite colas are deceptive because they do not include a mention of saccharin.

The organization said it would ask the Federal Trade Commission to prohibit ads promoting Nutrasweet in the products unless they mentioned saccharin. Tom Mattingly, a spokesman for Coca-Cola USA said the company was simply promoting Nutrasweet as it would any new ingredient.

Official releases combination

MONSON, Mass. (AP) — After a week-long dispute, Monson selectmen have wrested the combination of a 19th-century safe from the clerk-treasurer and moved its contents — most of the town's records — to her new office in a nearby annex.

Clerk-Treasurer Dorothy Hanic, 60, responded to a court order Thursday and turned over the vault combination which she alone knew.

Selectmen moved Mrs. Hanic's office to make room for their new executive secretary and accountant. Mrs. Hanic contended the wooden annex is a firetrap, and held the files in protest.

Airports to get new system

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sophisticated electronic landing systems will be installed at 172 airports over the next five years under a $90.6 million contract announced by the Transportation Department.

By 1986, airports in the Boston, Washington and Denver areas as well as parts of Alaska will be equipped with the microwave equipment made by Hazeltine Corp. of Greenlawn, N.Y., department officials said Thursday.

The system, which is designed to make landing easier in poor weather and allow more landings at a given time, will be installed at more than 1,250 airports by the year 2000, the Federal Aviation Administration said.

Dilaudid approved by FDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high concentration of the narcotic Dilaudid has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration as a pain-killer for terminal cancer patients.

While the drug has been previously available in concentrations of 1, 2, 3 and 4-milligrams-per-cubic-centimeter, the FDA said Thursday it would allow a 10-milligram dose.

The higher concentration will be sold as Dilaudid-HP by Knoll Pharmaceuticals of Whippany, N.J. It was developed because some patients develop a tolerance for the drug and need larger doses to kill pain. The FDA said the higher dose would provide as much relief from pain as heroin.

Court upheld 'deadly' FTC rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court has upheld a Federal Trade Commission rule requiring funeral directors to give customers an itemized list of prices.

The FTC reported Thursday that the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., had disposed of several legal challenges to the rule that were waged by the National Funeral Directors Association.

The association has said in the past it would go to the Supreme Court to block implementation of the rule, which is scheduled to take effect on April 30.

Shultz doubts country's proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz is doubting the sincerity of North Korea's proposal for a conference on unifying the divided peninsula because of its alleged involvement in the deaths of 18 South Korean officials last fall.

ting it. He reported getting death threats. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told other candidates at the time that "unique conditions and circumstances" caused him to assign agents to Jackson.

The ubiquitous presence of Secret Service men will be a new experience for all but Walter Mondale, who was accompanied by agents in his four years as vice president, and for George McGovern, who was the Democratic nominee in 1972.

Representatives of the Secret Service visited a number of candidate headquarters Thursday to make final arrangements. Staffs of the candidates and the candidates themselves will be briefed next week on what to expect.

The decision of who gets protection and who doesn't is made by Regan, relying on guidelines set by a five-member advisory committee. The committee is made up of the speaker and minority leader of the House, the majority and minority leaders of the Senate and former Secretary of State William P. Rogers as a "public" member.

A major candidate must have qualified for at least $100,000 in federal matching funds and have received $1.5 million or more toward his campaign; or he must have received at least 10 percent of the total votes cast for all presidential candidates of his party in two consecutive primary elections.

pay entirely for operating and capital costs," the study concluded.

"Introduction of high speed rail service, therefore, may well depend on whether the public benefits are judged sufficient to justify public support," it continued.

In addition to the California and Florida corridors, high-speed rail projects are being discussed for a number of other areas of the country, including corridors linking Chicago and Detroit, New York and Montreal, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh and the triangles of Akron-Columbus-Cincinnati and Dallas-San Antonio-Houston.

Former Rep. Richard B. Kelly, R-Fla. talks to reporters Thursday after a federal judge sentenced him to a prison term of six to eighteen months on his Abscam conviction.

Ex-official sentenced in Abscam case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Richard B. Kelly, R-Fla., sentenced to six to 18 months in prison for his Abscam bribery conviction, says he's sorry "that I was not able to protect myself better than I did."

The judge who sentenced him said he was reluctant not to be throwing the conviction out again. U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant had earlier overturned the verdict, but he was overruled by an appeals court that reinstated Kelly's conviction.

Bryant had opposed the government's investigation and prosecution of Kelly, but in issuing the sentence did not explain why he imposed a prison term in the light of all his objections.

Convicted in 1981 of bribery, conspiracy and interstate travel in aid of bribery, Kelly could have been sentenced to 15 years in prison and fined $30,000.

Kelly's unscheduled sentencing was the last for the seven congressional defendants in the FBI's massive case that used a phony Arab sheik offering bribes for help on an immigration problem. Kelly's was the lightest of the seven.

Asked before sentencing if he had anything to say, Kelly noted the government's contention that he had shown "not one word of remorse, apology or any indication that he's sorry."

"I do express sorrow and disappointment in myself that I was not able to protect myself better than I did," Kelly said.

Kelly argued at his trial that he accepted a $25,000 bribe — which jurors saw him on videotape stuff into his coat pockets in the form of $100 bills — only to advance his own investigation of "shady characters" around his office.

He also argued, then and Thursday, that he had been entrapped — that the government induced him to accept the bribe which he did not really want and initially had refused.

Bryant agreed with that argument in several observations Thursday, saying at one point, Kelly's "entire lifetime had been spent in honorable enterprise until the government forced him to do this."

At another point he said, "I think what the government has done in this case brought about the downfall of a person who would have lived out his life without committing a crime."

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger Adelman refused to concede that Kelly had been induced to take the bribe.

"There was clearly evidence on both sides of the inducement question and on both sides of the predisposition question," Adelman said.

"A reasonable jury could find no refusal of a bribe, (that) what was in debate was the manner of payment."

Adelman sought a "substantial" prison term, arguing that Kelly had "besmirched the institution" of Congress through "clear, patent and unforgivable abuse of his public office."

"The victims in the broader sense were all of the individuals in Florida who looked to him for representation in Congress," Adelman said.

Judge marries, sentences man

MINOOLA, N.Y. (AP) — If Nicholas Compitello married in haste, he now, as the saying goes, has time to repent in leisure — in prison.

Two hours after being married to 22-year-old Ellen Sarter, the 24-year-old New Hyde Park man was back in front of the same judge and sentenced to 2½ to 5 years in prison for a Sept. 5 jewelry store burglary.

During the exchange of vows, Judge Stuart Ain pointedly asked Compitello: "Will you honor her in sickness and in health and adversity such as you have here?"

"I know you are going to be separated, but I have a spotless record on divorce and I hope my record remains unblemished," said the judge.

Compitello had admitted the burglary, but wanted to be married before being sentenced Wednesday and going to jail.

After the brief wedding ceremony, the newlyweds asked to be alone for a few minutes, and Ain granted a five minute "parole."

The couple adjourned to a hallway under the watchful eyes of court officers and embraced. Compitello was then whisked back to a holding cell.

LARGE OR SMALL YOUR BEST INVESTMENT MAY BE ANTIQUES

Antiques and fine arts are rated by financial experts among the top three "best investments" today — along with real estate, precious metals, and precious and semiprecious stones. But only antiques have the distinction of being affordable by large and small investors alike. (Have you priced diamonds, gold, or investment real estate lately?) Antiques are available in every investor's price range.

The suggestion that "carefully selected antiques should double in value within three years" is an exciting one. And what other investment can you display, use and enjoy daily in your home or office while it grows in value?

MEET THE ANTIQUES EXPERTS ODESSA, TEXAS ANTIQUE SHOW & SALE JANUARY 13-14-15 —FORTY—

Independent exhibitors will display antiques of every description in every price range—furniture, dolls, toys, china, art glass, Americana, paperweights, orientals, linens, turquoise, pottery, Indian artifacts, books, paintings, tools, paper goods...collectibles and investments of every value and description.

GAO criticizes investigation of officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Hugh Kaufman, a well-known internal critic of the Environmental Protection Agency, was suspected in 1982 of abusing his sick leave, the intensity of the investigation surprised even a detective assigned to the case.

The detective was ordered to Meadville, Pa. where Kaufman's motel room was watched. Photographs were taken of the EPA employee in apparent good health. A tape recording was made of him speaking to a meeting.

All of this was ordered because of an allegation that Kaufman improperly took two days of the more than 23 weeks of sick leave he had accrued, according to a congressional report.

By contrast, when James Sanderson, a top aide to then-EPA Administrator Anne M. Burford, was accused of a serious conflict of interest — interfering with an agency decision that affected a client of his law firm — the EPA inspector general showed considerably less interest, the report said.

ACCORDING TO THE report by the congressional General Accounting Office, Inspector General Matthew N. Novick did not determine: — which of Sanderson's clients had matters before EPA.

— the extent of Sanderson's outside law practice.

— whether Sanderson was paid for his law firm's work before EPA.

— exactly when Sanderson officially was employed by the government. This is critical because federal law imposes stricter conflict-of-interest standards 60 days after a person joins the government.

The inspector general's office also did not interview Sanderson's boss, Mrs. Burford, about his activities. But it did keep her informed, through a briefing memo, on the progress of the investigation.

And in a report, the inspector general said he could find no evidence to support the charges against Sanderson. The matter was dismissed by the Justice Department based on insufficient evidence.

The handling of the two cases was contrasted in a report released Thursday by the GAO, an investigative arm of Congress. The report of the activities of the EPA's inspector general's office under Novick was requested by two House subcommittee chairmen critical of the agency.

IN ITS SUMMARY OF THE report, the GAO was mildly critical of the agency. It said that while most cases appeared to be handled properly, "in some cases all relevant matters were not followed up and some investigations were not performed consistently."

The summary drew criticism on Capitol Hill. An aide to Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., noted that GAO never found out whether the inspector general's office was allowed to act independently to investigate high-level wrongdoing.

"It's almost like two different reports," said aide Dan Buck. "They did lay out all the facts, and then I think they got cold feet."

But Marcus Kunian, an aide to Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., said the GAO report "reinforces the fact that serious abuses occurred at the agency. The inspector general's office was clearly subverted for political purposes."

The report was requested by Mrs. Schroeder, chairman of the House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee on civil service, and Scheuer, chairman of the House Science and Technology subcommittee on the environment.

IT COVERED THE EPA inspector general's office under Novick, who was fired by President Reagan last Feb. 23 for allegedly using his staff for personal chores. The auditors made no allegations against the current inspector general, Charles L. Dempsey.

While drawing few broad conclusions, the GAO did portray a sharp contrast over how EPA employees were treated.

In Kaufman's case, the GAO noted, the criminal investigator from EPA's Philadelphia office who was ordered to go to Meadville and put Kaufman under surveillance complained that the trip was unnecessary for a simple abuse-of-sick-leave case and suggested that newspaper articles about Kaufman's appearance would be sufficient.

In another incident, the EPA asked the Justice Department to consider criminal prosecution of Kaufman for making personal long-distance telephone calls on government phones.

The Justice Department refused, suggesting the case be handled within the agency. It eventually was dropped because Kaufman had not been given the opportunity to identify and pay for personal calls.

That courtesy had been given more than 400 other EPA employees who had made personal calls, including an assistant administrator — and Novick himself, who paid for $22.48 in personal calls.

White House backs access fee

WASHINGTON (AP) —

The White House is distributing a memorandum that strongly supports charging telephone customers so-called access fees. It remains to be seen how hard the administration will push the issue with Congress.

The four-page memo, written for the Cabinet by the Office of Management and Budget and obtained Thursday by The Associated Press, opposes legislation pending before Congress that would block introduction of the new fees.

Under a plan adopted by the Federal Communications Commission, telephone customers are to begin paying the new access fees in April. The fees would initially begin at a level of $2 a month for residential customers, generating an estimated $2 billion in 1984. The fees are expected to rise to a level of roughly $6 a month for all customers by 1990.

The fees would be paid to local phone companies to replace revenues that are now paid by long-distance callers to help hold down local rates. The payment of the fees would make it possible for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. to reduce its interstate long-distance rates.

Nonetheless, the House has already passed a bill that would block imposition of the charges on residential customers and maintain long-distance rates closer to their current level. Sponsors of the bill maintain the fees would be the final straw that would price phone service out of reach of millions of Americans.

The memo obtained Thursday, however, elaborates by listing several reasons for the White House position as well as discussing political strategy.

The FCC's access charge plan will "eliminate (an) unfair cross-subsidy" now borne by long-distance callers, the memo states. The plan will not contribute to unreasonable rate hikes, it adds, because long-distance reductions will help offset local increases. The FCC has agreed to waive the access fee for low-income customers, and state regulators are not approving the rate hikes requested by phone companies.

"Over-pricing long-distance service will hurt U.S. productivity and competitiveness increasingly as information becomes a more important input to all areas of industry and commerce," the memo continues. "Over-priced long distance will also encourage large users to build their own systems that bypass the public telephone system to avoid paying the subsidy, even when this results in wasteful duplication of facilities."

New publisher's goal: Turning paper around

ST. LOUIS (AP) — After winning a bitter fight to buy the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, magazine publisher Jeffrey M. Gluck says he faces a bigger challenge.

"Buying the paper wasn't supposed to be the big hurdle," said Gluck, 30, who publishes the Saturday Review in Columbia, Mo. "Turning the paper around was. And that's our next goal."

Editorial employees voted overwhelmingly Thursday to accept a new severance waiver, clearing the way for Gluck to take over the morning paper on Feb. 25.

After the meeting, champagne corks popped in the Missouri Grill across the street from the newspaper, where Mayor Vincent Schoemehl joined employees to celebrate the survival of the 131-year-old paper which was a strong voice for anti-slavery during the Civil War and which backed Charles A. Lindbergh's solo flight across the Atlantic in 1927.

"It was a great relief," said Gluck after a sales contract for the paper was signed Thursday. "It's been a long and trying transaction."

On Nov. 7, the Globe-Democrat announced it would cease publication at year's end due to heavy losses, but it extended publication to allow time for Gluck to continue negotiations.

The sale puts the Globe-Democrat in direct competition with the Post-Dispatch, which plans to switch to morning publication Feb. 27 — two days after Gluck is to begin publishing with a new printing plant.

Gluck said he isn't worried about the head-to-head competition.

Globe-Democrat employees, whether they planned to stay or take other jobs, were nearly unanimous in their predictions of a newspaper war reminiscent of the 1930s and 1940s.

Newton arrested, booked for drug investigation

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Former Black Panther leader Huey Newton, free on bail pending an appeal in a handgun possession case, was arrested early Thursday and booked for investigation of driving under the influence of drugs and possession of drug paraphernalia, police said.

Officer T. K. Lewis said he arrested Newton after he observed him driving erratically for several blocks in his 1976 Mercedes at about 3 a.m.

Newton, 41, who was released on $3,000 bail, was scheduled to appear Jan. 19 in Oakland-Piedmont Municipal Court, according to authorities.

"He came in about 4:15 a.m. and was released about 10:30 a.m. from jail," jail spokesman Michael Johnson said.

Newton has been free on bail pending appeals of his sentencing on his conviction of being an ex-felon in possession of a handgun. The 1st District Court of Appeals upheld the sentencing Dec. 28, saying Newton would be taken into custody within 60 days unless the California Supreme Court agreed to hear his case, Alameda County District Attorney Thomas Orloff said at the time.

The three-judge panel said the trial court acted properly in using Newton's prior felony conviction in a 1984 stabbing as a basis for sentencing him to a term of up to three years in prison on grounds that he was an ex-felon possessing a pistol.

The pistol was allegedly used in the pistol-whipping of Newton's tailor, Preston Collins, but the jury that convicted him on the gun possession charge found him innocent of beating Collins, who refused to testify in the case.

Newton returned to the United States in 1977 after having fled into exile in Cuba following the stabbing case.

Injured woman ignored

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP) — Motorists ignored a bleeding injured woman trying to flag down someone as she struggled down a highway for up to 30 minutes, state police said.

Melinda Gail Chapin, 26, apparently fell asleep while driving and drifted off the road, Trooper Louis Beed said Thursday. Her car went down a 20-foot embankment, slid 60 feet and struck a tree.

He estimated it took her 1 1/2 hours to reach the highway and that she was on the road for 20 to 30 minutes before she got help.

Jim Thomas, an employee of the state Highway Department, saw Miss Chapin on the side of the highway, turned around, and notified state police over his radio. He gave her first aid and tried to keep her warm in his truck until help arrived.

Motown Record executives want
Wonder's magic back in studio

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singer-songwriter Stevie Wonder says Motown Records executives are eager for him to get back into the recording studio now that his dream of establishing a national holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr. has become a reality.

"They call me every day to tell me how many records Michael (Jackson) sold," said the 33-year-old Wonder, who put his recording career on hold for most of the last three years while promoting the honor for the slain civil rights leader.

But music "is not as important to me as this," he added.

Wonder will give a concert Sunday at the Capital Centre outside Washington to honor King, whose Jan. 15 birthday will be celebrated as a holiday beginning in 1986.

"Dr. King was black-skinned," said Wonder. "But I believe there is a Dr. King that lives in every culture and every color and background in the world."

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Former California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., still on the go despite being out of office since 1982, can't seem to find the time to sit for his official state portrait.

Brown, 45, chose Santa Monica artist Don Bachardy to do the painting which will hang in the state Capitol with others of former governors. But the artist says he needs two more sittings and two more months to complete the work, which was to have been finished this month.

"It's been difficult for him to find time (for sittings)," Bachardy explained this week.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Appropriately, a non-human has been chosen as honorary chairman of the National Wildlife Federation's annual National Wildlife Week.

The distinction of being the first of his kind to be so honored goes to Kermit the Frog, one of Jim Henson's most popular Muppets, who will appear in public service announcements promoting the federation's theme: "Water — We Can't Live Without It."

"Who knows more about the importance of clean water than a frog?" said Jay Hair, executive vice president of the organization.

Hair said more than 20 million students, teachers and conservationists are expected to participate in the observances March 18-24.

Past chairmen include news correspondent Walter Cronkite, actor Robert Redford and singer Loretta Lynn.

NEW YORK (AP) — Miss America Vanessa Williams says she's received "lots of threats" because of her color, but she has not let them cut into her schedule of appearances.

Miss Williams, the first black woman to wear the crown, said being black has not limited her bookings.

"I have had more calls for appearances than any other Miss America," the 20-year-old said in an interview in Redbook's February issue. "I've done 100 percent more. But it's not as glamorous as people think."

Miss Williams was asked if having a white boyfriend had posed a problem for her with black men.

"No," she replied, "Most of my boyfriends before...were black. I've never had a problem."

Craft victim of 'betrayal of trust,' her lawyer says

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — Newswoman Christine Craft was the victim of a "betrayal of trust" and misrepresentation, her attorney told jurors who are deliberating in a retrial of her lawsuit claiming a Kansas City television station cared about her looks, not her skills.

Ms. Craft, 39, claimed she accepted the co-anchor job at KMBC-TV after the station's managers told her they were interested in her journalism skills. After she was hired, the management spent much of their energy criticizing her appearance, she alleged.

The seven-woman, five-man jury hearing the case before U.S. District Judge Joseph F. Stevens spent nearly two hours deliberating Thursday and was to resume meeting today.

In closing arguments, Ms. Craft's attorney, Dennis F. Egan, said, "They (the management) felt from day one 'she wasn't quite what we want but we'll go with her.'"

But, "day by day by day the obsession was with her appearance," Egan said.

The station's then-news director, Ridge Shannon, and general manager, R. Kent Replogle, after assuring her during the hiring procedure that they liked her appearance and were interested in her journalism talents, spent most of their time picking apart her makeup and clothes, Egan said.

Ms. Craft is asking for $500,000 in actual damages and $3 million in punitive damages in her civil suit against Metromedia Inc., which owned KMBC-TV when she was hired as co-anchor in November 1980 and demoted to reporter in August 1981.

Ms. Craft said in her testimony that she had made it clear she was not interested in the job if her appearance had to change.

Defense attorney Donald W. Giffin replied that Ms. Craft was never promised that KMBC-TV would not make modifications in her appearance, and that Shannon made it clear to her that the station was using consultants to help several of its on-air personalities.

He said Shannon and Replogle did not intend to make changes when Ms. Craft was hired, but they became necessary to enhance her chances of succeeding in the Kansas City market.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Coffee won't sober driver up

Dear Dr. Solomon: A few weeks ago a friend of mine left a party and got into an automobile accident. He had been drinking most of the night, but he had had several cups of black coffee before leaving and he seemed to be in good shape. I understand that he has been charged with drunk driving, and I would like to know why the caffeine in the coffee he drank did not sober him up. — Mike, Stanten Island, N.Y.

Dear Mike: It is long past time that the myth about black coffee helping a person sober up was laid to rest. Black coffee will not help anyone sober up. It might help the individual feel more wide awake, but the person will not be alert or coordinated and should not attempt to drive.

Dr. Morris Chafetz, an expert on alcoholism, points out that it takes about an hour for the average drink (about three-fourths of an ounce of alcohol) to be metabolized. Once the drink has been ingested, it takes the body that long to get rid of the alcohol. A person who drinks to excess and then gets behind the wheel of a car, even after having had black coffee, is a menace to himself or herself, and to others.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband has bronchitis, but he still smokes. He says that if he could do it all over again he would not start smoking because he knows it caused his bronchitis. But he says that since he already has bronchitis, he might as well continue smoking. Is he a little crazy or am I? — Annemarie, Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Annemarie: I'm not going to pass on the sanity of either yourself or your husband, but you can tell your husband that he would have a better chance of resolving the bronchitis if he stopped smoking. Dr. Cheryl A. Megaro of the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor has reported on a study of more than 500 people with bronchitis. Stopping smoking was the only important factor that predicted that bronchitis in men would resolve. If he would like information about my one-day stop-smoking program, please have him write to me.

Dear Dr. Solomon: After visiting a friend who was in an intensive care unit because of an accident, I've begun to wonder if the treatment isn't worse than the illness. The place would drive me crazy. Doesn't the environment of an intensive care unit have a detrimental effect on patients? There isn't a shred of privacy there. — Ms. H.P., Detroit.

Dear Ms. P.: Patients have been known to have adverse reactions to the environments of intensive care units. Many patients experience a sense of helplessness that may result in agitation, confusion, and even hallucinations. Others show anger or fear, or become depressed and withdrawn.

With some patients, of course, the intensive care unit is essential to life, and this outweighs any of its disadvantages.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I suppose during the years that you've written your column, you must have been asked this before. But frankly, I wasn't interested before. How long after a heart attack does a man have to wait before resuming sexual relations? — Mr. K.R., Augusta, Ga.

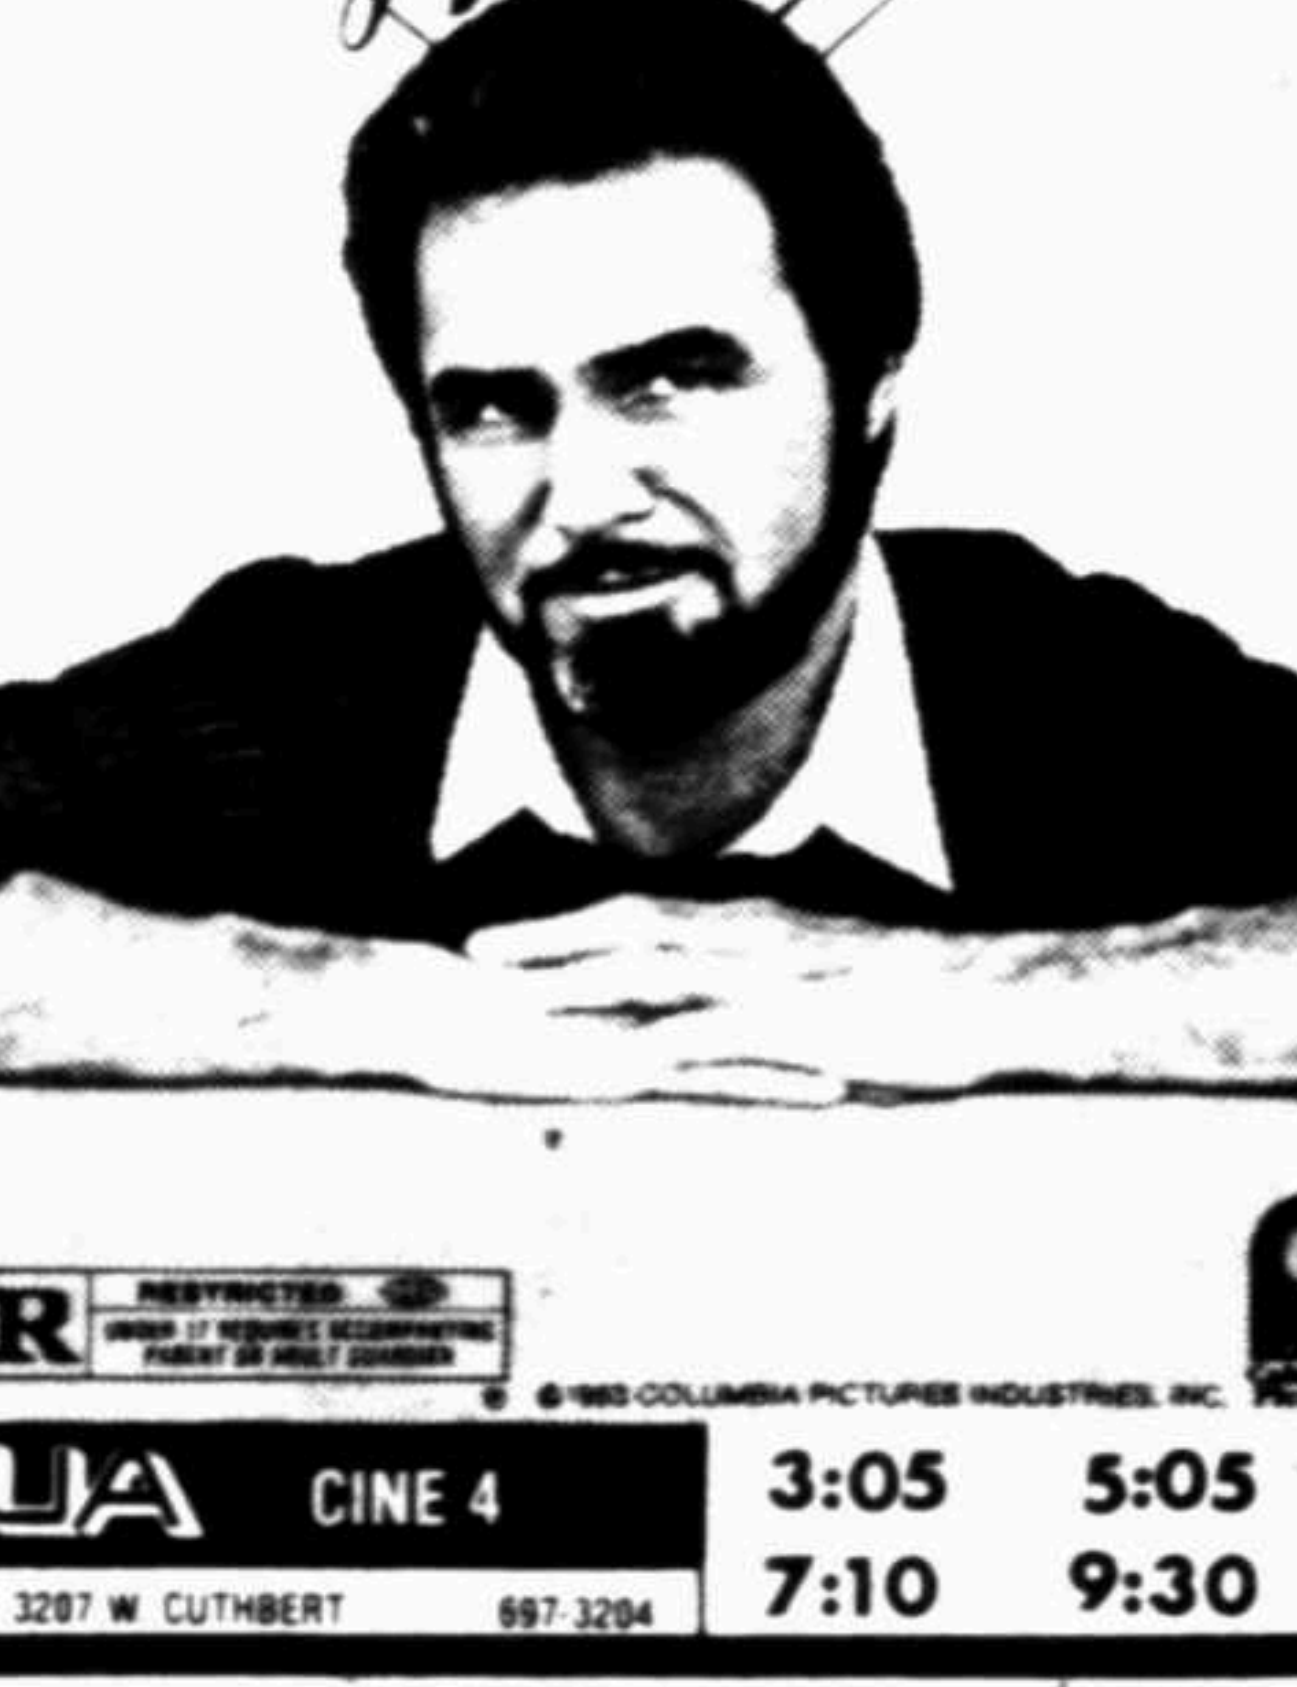

Dear Mr. R.: When you can climb stairs or ride a bike, you should be able to resume sexual relations.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor tells me I have gout, and he gave me a list of foods I should avoid, and he also told me to stop drinking. The trouble is that he's been telling me to stop drinking for the past 10 years, and I would just like to know whether he's using the gout to get me to stop, or whether drinking several beers a day actually can cause gout or make it worse. — Alfred, Greensboro, N.C.

Dear Alfred: People with gout should restrict their use of alcohol. Studies have shown that heavy drinking is often associated with gout.

Dear Dr. Solomon: If doctors know so much, why are there so many more diseases today? From what I read, people didn't get sick a few hundred years ago the way they do today. —

It's the perfect relationship
and half the human race.

Dear Alice: One reason that medical disorders appear to have increased with the passage of time is that people are living longer. The average lifespan of a woman at the time Columbus discovered America was about 40 years; today it's almost twice as long. Living longer means that each of us is therefore subject to many more disorders that accompany aging.

Smith plays love of Washington

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — Jaclyn Smith is best-known as the star of "Charlie's Angels" for five seasons on ABC, but she's developing a reputation for dramatizing the lives of real people, first in "Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy" and now in "George Washington," upcoming in April.

Miss Smith wore wigs and 83 different costumes when she played the lead in the three-hour "Kennedy" movie, broadcast by ABC October 1981. Portraying a living, and easily recognizable, personality presumably did not leave much room for improvisation.

That's not so much the case with Sally Fairfax, Miss Smith's character in "George Washington," the eight-hour miniseries that CBS will broadcast in three parts, April 8 and April 10-11.

Sally Fairfax was the wife of Washington's best friend, and the general's secret love.

"There is not a lot of information about Sally Fairfax, so you can give your imagination a little range," says the Texas-born Miss Smith.

Richard Fiedler wrote the script for, and produced, "George Washington," which was based on the first two books in James Thomas Flexner's four-volume biography, published between 1965 and 1973.

The miniseries covers Washington's life through his farewell to his troops after the Revolutionary War.

"I looked at her portraits," the actress says of Sally Fairfax, "and didn't really like what I saw. It didn't fit what I had read and heard."

She maintained her figure, for example, into her 80s. "Miss Smith says," and was a fashion plate of her day, a little like Scarlett O'Hara, not totally, but a real Southern belle."

Barry Bostwick plays Washington, and Patty Duke Astin, a four-time Emmy winner, is his wife, Martha.

Barry has the height and bearing," says Flexner, "and I think the contrast in character between the two young ladies who are playing Sally Fairfax and Martha is very good."

The extent of the relationship between Washington and Miss Fairfax is not really examined by "George Washington," but it is clear from the miniseries that the woman from Virginia was an important influence on his life.

They met when Will Fairfax (David Dukes) brought her home as his bride. Washington was, at the time, a young farm boy, and she brought to him a style shaped by Williamsburg society.

Despite their relationship, Washington and Fairfax remained friends, and even Sally and Martha were close.

The bidding:

North East South West
1 NT Pass 3 Pass
4 Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

Tommy's day was made — he had been invited to play for his club in a team match against the local country club. His joy was not tempered by the fact that he was a last-minute replacement, and then only because the other members of the team felt that it would be inappropriate to have the club captain's seven-year-old daughter fill in.

As we all know, Tommy was a hacker except in one case: when trumps broke badly he became Bob Ham man and Benito Garozzo rolled into one! Soon that hand came along.

The bidding was the same at both tables. North's opening no trump was standard and South, with his unbalanced hand, correctly looked for game in hearts rather than no trump. With a ruffing value and three good trumps, North wisely chose the suit contract.

At both tables the lead was the ten of spades. Both Easts won the ace and returned a spade. The opposition declarer won the spade and cashed ace king of hearts, and he now could not avoid losing two heart tricks and a diamond for down one.

Fortunately, Tommy was in his element. He knew the hand was cold unless trumps broke 4-1 — not even he could handle a 5-0 break. There was nothing he could do if East held four trumps, but if West held four trumps and East's singleton was the eight, the contract could still be made.

At trick three Tommy led the nine of trumps! West did the best he could by covering with the ten. When dummy's king fetched the eight, it was all over. Tommy returned to his hand with a club and led a trump toward the A 7. West played the jack, the table's ace won and the seven of trumps forced out the queen. No return could harm Tommy, and he still had a club entry to his hand to use his six of trumps to draw West's five!

Papal decision

The decision by the United States to end a diplomatic break of 117 years by resuming formal relations with the Vatican has stirred emotions in the American religious community. As one would expect, Catholics are generally supportive of the move and see it as a benefit to the nation while protestants typically oppose the relationship and call to mind the constitutional guarantee of separation of church and state.

Yes, the Vatican is a religious state, but as any number of officials have noted, it is a state and is recognized as such by the indisputable fact that 107 nations — including the United States — have diplomats assigned there.

Those who oppose the United States' move probably will continue to do so regardless of what is written here, but the information needs to be offered nonetheless to put the decision in its proper perspective.

The Vatican and, with few exceptions in recent years, the pope hold undeniable influence throughout the world. The Vatican itself occupies a position as an independent state unique to any other religion and enjoys tremendous respect throughout the world.

In recent times, the pope has been approached to act as mediator in differences between peoples and nations, largely because the church's influence gives it the ability to effect meaningful change where and when no one else can.

Pope John Paul II holds a particularly influential position by being the first pontiff from a communist state — Poland. As such and much to his credit, he has broken tradition and led the way in speaking out against communist aggression and human rights violations.

In addition to all the influence wielded by the pope and the Vatican, Reagan administration and State Department officials express confidence that the renewed relationship with the Vatican will be in the best interests of the United States and the free world not only because of the influence factor but also because of the information available to papal envoys at the ambassador level. This has been lacking in the former exchange of diplomats between the U.S. and the Vatican.

The world of diplomacy requires this change be made if the United States is to enjoy the full range of benefits stemming from the relationship. It is an important and needed step in the interest of freedom, human rights and world peace, and should be viewed in that light.

Another View:

Rescue the Marines

Lt. Robert O. Goodman Jr., the Navy flier shot down and captured by the Syrians, is back home where he belongs. But some 1,600 U.S. Marines remain in Lebanon, captives of a gravely flawed policy backed by an adamant president.

It is time — past time — to revise that policy and to set the terms for a safe and orderly withdrawal of those Marines. Properly applied, that kind of pressure could spur, rather than retard, political efforts to end Lebanon's fierce many-sided civil war.

Other nation-members of the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon are revising their policies. The Italians are going to reduce their contingent by about half. France has announced that it will remove about 25 percent of its force from Beirut. With fewer Italians and Frenchmen to shoot at, the gunmen in Beirut may now turn on the Marines with increasing frequency and ferocity.

In the United States, the Pentagon commission that investigated the Oct. 23 truck bombing of the Marine headquarters in Beirut has recommended "a re-examination of alternative means of achieving U.S. objectives in Lebanon." Important congressional Democrats and Republicans (most recently GOP Sen. Charles Percy, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee) have said a reassessment of U.S. policy in Lebanon is vital. And Democratic presidential hopeful Walter Mondale has urged that the Marines be withdrawn immediately.

The Marines, under their loosely defined role, are supposed to protect the government of President Amin Gemayel, but in fact they have their hands full protecting themselves. Far from being visible symbols of support, they are — as they must be — hunkered down behind sandbags.

Yet, there is an important difference between simply withdrawing, as Mondale and others suggest, and setting the terms for a withdrawal; the latter choice would be far preferable. It would give Gemayel fair warning that the time for a political solution was running out and would prepare the way for a dignified removal of U.S. forces, minimizing the loss of American face and influence in the region.

Specifically, Gemayel should be given a reasonable deadline (we're thinking weeks, not months) for making a deal to share power with his many adversaries. That would increase the pressure for a political detente in Lebanon, the only kind that, in the long run, can succeed in ending the fighting.

A new plan to broaden the Gemayel government's authority seems to be emerging. That supposedly would be followed by a reconvening of the national reconciliation conference whose purpose is to redistribute powers within the Lebanese government. To withdraw immediately would diminish Gemayel's incentive to pursue those options. However, to maintain the U.S. commitment indefinitely — which seems to be the administration's policy — would lessen the incentive for Gemayel to broker a deal.

So, let's set the terms for Marine withdrawal. Then, if Gemayel can't or won't make a deal with rival factions, the United States in good conscience can call it quits. The Marines went to Lebanon to keep "peace," not to play sitting ducks in an endless civil war.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Death squads have hazy origin

WASHINGTON — Operating at the subterranean level of Latin American politics is a far-flung network of affiliated death squads.

Their purpose: to intimidate suspected leftists and deter movements that threaten the status quo throughout Latin America.

Their methods: kidnapping and assassinations, secret pacts, intrigues, terrorism and blackmail.

But what is truly appalling is the possibility that the idea of an anti-communist Murder Inc. was germinated at CIA headquarters.

Sources familiar with the secret history — including a former covert operations specialist for the CIA — say the death squads were first formed under agency sponsorship in 1954. This is denied by CIA officials.

Whatever their origins, the death squads clearly got out of control. Dedicated to the physical elimination of suspected leftists, they recruited assassins from the military services, police forces and security agencies of right-wing governments.

Today, the death squads are most active in El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras. Dormant death squads exist in almost every other Latin American nation. In all these countries, they are protected by high-level military and government officials.

Their activities are loosely controlled and coordinated by a sinister international organization, known as La Mano Blanca (The White Hand). "Our movements are all coordinated out of Mexico City," said a leader of the Honduran death squad. "The name of the front group there is CAL — Latin American Anti-Communist Confederation."

CAL is the Latin American affiliate of the World Anti-Communist League, a right-wing organization linked to ultra-conservative groups in Asia, Europe and the United States. A Mexican intelligence source said CAL was founded by a neo-Nazi splinter group after World War II. "CAL is also called The White Hand, The White Force and the White Brigade," said the source.

My associate Jon Lee Anderson, working through a contact in the Honduran secret police, arranged a face-to-face meeting with the Honduran death squad leader. I'll call him El Lobo, which means "The Wolf."

El Lobo said he and some friends founded the Honduran death squad in 1979 with 85 members. "Now we have 400," he boasted, "and we've successfully infiltrated the leftists with our own spies in the university and labor unions."

"We've eliminated 16 people so far. They were either labor unionists or university professors — all confirmed Marxists."

El Lobo explained how his death squad operates. "First we investigate and follow a suspect who has come to our attention," he said. "Then, if we decide the case merits further action, we either kidnap the victim or leave him an anonymous warning."

The usual warning, he said, is a scrap of paper with the message: "Men don't fight with flowers, they fight with bullets."

"If the suspect heeds our warning and we confirm his rehabilitation, we leave him alone," said El Lobo. "If he doesn't, we machine gun him." He did not explain how they can be sure the victim simply failed to understand the cryptic warning.

One victim apparently never had a chance to mend his ways. A peasant cooperative leader, staying at the same small hotel in Tegucigalpa as my associate, disappeared the day after he arrived. Police found his body crammed into the trunk of his car, his head riddled with bullets. The official explanation of the crime was "robbery."

El Lobo said his group gets "unofficial help" from the Honduran military, whose head, Gen. Gustavo Alvarez, is the de facto ruler of the country. Alvarez dismisses even the best-documented reports of leftist disappearances as "subversive propaganda."

But in 1982, Leonidas Torres Arias, former Honduran military intelligence chief, defected and publicly implicated Alvarez in death squad activity. Torres Arias is now in hiding in the Washington, D.C., area. He is afraid to speak out, for fear he will be deported to Honduras and certain death.

WATCH ON FOOTBALL: So much loose cash is wagered on football that someone is bound to try to fix an occasional game. The FBI, therefore keeps a watchful eye on the sport.

The FBI tends to become suspicious of football officials who regularly make crucial, game-breaking calls that turn out to be wrong on the television replays. But it is almost impossible to prove that a bad call was intentional.

The FBI's suspicions have never progressed beyond the investigative stage. The most active investigation, as I reported in an earlier column, was conducted during the National Football League's 1979 season. The probe finally floundered for lack of evidence.

I have studied some of the documents in this case. Stamped "hand carry in sealed envelope," the documents allege that "car dealers in several cities are involved with unnamed New York figure allegedly connected with organized crime in this scheme."

The car dealers, all high-stakes gamblers, allegedly used a New York underworld figure to bribe three NFL officials. They "were allegedly being paid off $100,000 a game," the FBI report states. This would have been a small price to pay to fix a game that could win millions for the corrupt gamblers.

Nine games were cited as having been fixed, all worked by at least one of the suspected officials. The FBI adds this ominous note: "... a Los Angeles car dealer was murdered ... and was involved in the game-fixing scheme."

Underworld sources say that some games were fixed, all right, but the FBI didn't find a bit of proof. The National Football League also has an outstanding record for guarding against the fix.

Still, the story won't go away. My sources say that a game can be fixed.

INSIDE REPORT:

Wallop leading GOP 'revolt'

WASHINGTON — A Republican revolt against President Reagan's indecisive follow-through on space-based missile defense carries a political threat into the presidential campaign that could undermine his much-heralded defense buildup.

The still-shrouded revolt, led by Sen. Malcolm Wallop, threatens to kill the long-controversial MX missile unless the Pentagon stops procrastinating and moves quickly ahead with a national defense against nuclear missiles based on current laser technology.

If Wallop, followed by other conservative Republicans, switches against the MX, gleeful Democratic hands will rush to help, reversing Reagan's biggest defense win and arming Democratic presidential candidates with new ammunition. At work here is that familiar phenomenon in the administration of Ronald Reagan: a president clear in his own mind, in this case that his country desperately needs a defense against missile attack, but unable to drive an unresponsive bureaucracy.

Wallop, a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee who is listened to, declared war in a tough, confidential letter to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger in late November attacking Under Secretary Richard DeLauer. To hear DeLauer warn about the cost of space-based laser defense, he said, "was the last straw for me." If DeLauer spoke for the administration, Wallop told Weinberger, "then with a heavy heart I will work to defeat ... funding for all major missile programs." That would include both laser missile defense and the MX, destined for deployment in Wyoming.

Across the board, congressional Republicans were unhappy with DeLauer's November testimony to the House Armed Services Committee. Although he had kind words for Reagan's space-based missile defense proposals, he seemed to kiss them off on the basis of unacceptable cost. "You'll be staggered at the cost," he said. "All the new technologies are likely to cost on the order of a trillion dollars."

To Wallop and other backers of Reagan's misnamed "Star Wars" missile defense, cost is being used as a bogymon to prevent full-speed development of a workable system based on chemical lasers already tested. If current technology is ruled out as not good enough for missile defense because the Soviets will someday harden the skins of their missiles, Wallop told Weinberger, then the MX missile must also be ruled out as an offensive weapon soon to be vulnerable to Soviet defenses.

"If it is so relatively easy to harden missiles against first-generation lasers," Wallop wrote Weinberger with a hint of sarcasm, then the U.S. would be derelict to deploy vulnerable MX missiles. "Let's not bear the heavy costs and expose the people of Wyoming to danger and disruption for the sake of things that will be easily countered."

Behind Wallop's sharp tongue are months of Republican anguish at go-slow administration bureaucrats obstructing Reagan's clear desire to deploy space-based missile defenses, switching U.S. nuclear doctrine from deterrence based on balance of terror into active defense. "I cannot imagine the security of the world depending on two guards who are holding cocked .45 pistols at each other's head," the president said privately at one of his first briefings on the new potential of space-based laser defense.

That evocation of the Reagan's has hardened and deepened in the nearly three years since he voiced it. It has become an emotional force in his perception of the nuclear issue and his conviction that mutual assured destruction — MAD — is a policy of madness.

But his bureaucrats, worrying about Soviet reactions and the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty (despite evidence that the Soviets are tearing it to shreds), show no equal fervor. Wallop's threat to kill the MX might convert that bureaucratic resistance into actual — and unaccustomed — support.

CHARLEY REESE

Political prediction missed one

Occasionally, on the way to print, a columnist is struck with a fresh insight; occasionally, the broken limb of dumbness falls on his head. Last week, the dumbness befell me. In writing a prediction column about the Democratic presidential primary, I dropped Sen. Fritz Hollings, the eighth candidate, right out of my memory bank.

That I could forget the elegant South Carolinian and that the people who read this column before it goes out could fail to note that I had forgotten him probably say as much for his chances as anything.

Even so I can take this occasion of penance to make a point about the present state of American politics. That is that the qualifications for president are not necessarily the same as the qualifications for a presidential candidate.

Senator Hollings is qualified to be president, probably more so than most of his competitors, but he lacks the qualifications for a good presidential candidate. This is a sad state of affairs, but elections are won or lost on the basis of perceptions, not realities. Senator Hollings does not project warmth. That doesn't mean he isn't a compassionate person, but if he is, he hides it. He has a sharp tongue. He has difficulty masking his impatience with lesser mortals. He does not have the ability to project the image of a man who believes he can kiss all of our hurts and scrapes and make them well. Probably, he's too much of a realist and too intellectually honest.

Intellectual honesty and realism are two qualities you want in a man who will occupy the White House, but they are not two qualities which sell well in the campaign trail. Too many people don't want to hear the truth if it is unpleasant and they certainly don't want to hear that some problems are so tough that only hard work and great sacrifices will solve them.

At my last meeting with Sen. Hollings, I came away with the sharp impression that he was a man who knew darn well he wasn't going to win the nomination, but thought he could position himself to be a good vice presidential choice for Walter Mondale by providing the geographical and ideological balance a ticket headed by a second-hand version of Hubert Humphrey would desperately need.

I came away believing Senator Hollings would be no more of a factor in this race than John Connally was a factor in the 1980 Republican primary and for the same reason: both men are qualified to be presidents but both men lack the qualities of a successful presidential candidate in today's media-mushy environment.

Television is the dominant medium of politics today and it wants a soft, conversational tone, not the heavy tones of a Hollings or Connally. It wants a soft face that reeks with compassion, not a strong, but stern visage. The intellectual environment among those concentrated in the media and in the political activist circles are on the democratic side radically liberal and hysterically opposed to any deviation from their own liberal orthodoxy. They are the kind of people who would be blind to sin as big as an elephant in a Jesse Jackson but could find the moles in Hollings' eyes with laser accuracy.

A George Washington, an Andy Jackson or an Abraham Lincoln would be hard put to get elected in today's environment. We have been weaned away from strength and accomplishment to compassion and image. Dwight Eisenhower was the last president to have accomplished any great feat in his private life. John Kennedy was all born-wealth and image; Richard Nixon, Lyndon Johnson and Jerry Ford were professional politicians; Jimmy Carter was freakishly lucky and freakishly incompetent; and Ronald Reagan is a moderately successful actor.

I'm sorry I forgot Senator Hollings, but it doesn't make much difference one way or the other.

Envoy Rumsfeld meets with Syrian president

By The Associated Press

U.S. Marines unleashed rockets and mortar fire to repulse a heavy attack today by militiamen on their base in Beirut, while U.S. special envoy Donald Rumsfeld, visiting Damascus, met for the first time with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

Elsewhere in Beirut, police reported an Egyptian diplomat and the wife of a French envoy survived separate attacks by gunmen, and shells from anti-government gunners crashed onto the capital's eastern Christian sector for a second straight day, reportedly killing two civilians and wounding 12.

Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said there were no reports of casualties or damage at the U.S. base at Beirut airport. He said the south-eastern perimeter of the base came "under attack by a heavy concentration of small-arms fire" from a building to the east.

The Marines, part of the multinational peacekeeping force, then beat back an attempted "infiltration" by firing back with small arms, machine guns, 60 mm mortars, shoulder-fired rockets and anti-tank guided missiles, Brooks said.

The fighting forced the international airport to shut down for an hour before operations resumed.

In Damascus, Assad, who had declined to meet Rumsfeld during two previous visits, warned in advance of today's session that "peace in Lebanon cannot be established under the American gun barrel." There were no immediate details on today's meeting.

Rumsfeld met Thursday and again today with Foreign Minister Abdel-Halim Khaddam of Syria, but there also was no word on those talks. Rumsfeld has visited Syria twice since he became Reagan's Middle East envoy last November.

At the French Embassy in Beirut, a spokesman said one of two people riding a motorcycle today shot Elaine de Chico, wife of the director of the French Cultural Center in the capital.

Embassy spokesman Eric Coulauf said Mrs. de Chico, 47, suffered a "superficial" wound on her chin as a bullet grazed her. He said the attack occurred when she was driving from the west Beirut area where she and her husband live. She was taken to the nearby American University Hospital, he said, and the assailants escaped.

Beirut police said an Egyptian diplomat escaped unharm when gunmen in a speeding car fired at him Thursday.

Police said the second secretary of the Egyptian mission, Hamdi Salah Lozy, was riding in a car with French diplomatic license plates in west Beirut when unidentified gunmen in a Mercedes fired four rounds from a silenced-equipped pistol. The assailants missed their target and fled, police said.

Police said it was not immediately known whether the attack was against the Egyptian diplomat or the car with French license plates.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government admits its troops shot down a U.S. Army helicopter but denies they killed the pilot after he landed on the Honduran side of the border.

"We cannot accept the version that the pilot was fired at on land," Daniel Ortega, coordinator of the junta, said Thursday night.

He said Sandinista troops fired at the helicopter when it was in Nicaraguan airspace, without knowing it was an American aircraft.

The Reagan administration lodged a formal protest and said it was holding the Sandinistas responsible for the pilot's death. U.S. officials contended that the pilot was killed by Nicaraguan soldiers after he got out of the downed helicopter.

Ortega said Nicaragua hoped the United States will not view the incident as a "provocation" but will realize it was a mistake. His comments reinforced a statement issued by the governing junta which said: "The government of Nicaragua...deplores this incident and expresses its condolences to the family of the dead pilot."

The U.S. Embassy in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, said the pilot, Chief Warrant Officer II Jeffrey C. Schwab, 27, of Joliet, Ill., was killed by "hostile fire" from Nicaragua after his helicopter made a forced landing about 200 yards inside Honduras.

Two unidentified U.S. Army engineers aboard the helicopter were not injured.

"This incident is very tragic and, for us, very serious," John D. Negroponte, U.S. ambassador to Honduras, said. "The pilot was killed in Honduran territory, by Sandinista fire."

President Reagan's spokesman Larry Speakes denounced the attack on Schwab as "reckless and unprovoked," and key presidential aides met to draft the U.S. response, which sources said could include possible military retaliation.

Reagan called Schwab's death "a great tragedy."

Government sources in Washington said the helicopter was "blown off course" by a windstorm that pushed it near the Nicaraguan border.

Candidates use pilot's death to condemn Reagan policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is blaming "unacceptable" Nicaraguan behavior for the slaying of a U.S. Army pilot at a tense border area in Honduras, but four Democratic presidential candidates are seizing on the incident to condemn the administration's Central America policy.

Secretary of State George Shultz said Thursday the United States has lodged a strong protest with Nicaragua over the slaying of Chief Warrant Officer Jeffrey C. Schwab, 27, of Joliet, Ill., who was killed Wednesday by gunfire as he took refuge from his downed chopper in an area where cross-border incidents have occurred frequently.

Shultz told a news conference the United States does not plan any military action in retaliation for the incident. Other officials said that option was discussed at lower levels.

As Shultz was denouncing the Nicaraguan action, four Democratic presidential candidates said Thursday the episode demonstrates a fundamental flaw in administration policy.

In Boston, Colorado Sen. Gary

Hart said he will file legislation when Congress reconvenes calling for withdrawal of all United States combat troops from Honduras "before another U.S. pilot is killed."

"We are headed for creation of another Lebanon in Central America and possibly another Vietnam," said Hart, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Former Vice President Walter Mondale told reporters in New Hampshire there is a link between military maneuvers in Honduras and covert action in Nicaragua.

"You can't conduct a covert action in Nicaragua with a backup support action right along the border in Honduras without risking loss of American lives," said Mondale. "We've seen this now. That covert action should be terminated."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson said in New York that "we must cease using Honduras as a staging base for overt and covert military operations against other countries in the region."

In Iowa, George McGovern said the incident "underscores the soundness of the position I've taken for many months that we should terminate our military operations in Central America. I fear if we continue on our present course, this is simply the first of a series of needless American fatalities," added McGovern.

Ortega described the slain pilot as a victim of United States political aggression in Central America and said his death "should not serve as a pretext to escalate the situation of war that the region is experiencing."

"No one was more surprised than we that it was an American helicopter since the United States had said its joint maneuvers are being conducted deep in Honduran territory as far as 20 miles from our border," Ortega said.

The killing of Schwab was the first such shooting episode since joint U.S.-Honduran military maneuvers began in August as a warning to the Sandinistas against supporting leftist rebels in Central America. The attack occurred in an area near which there has been heavy fighting between CIA-backed rebels and Sandinista troops.

The U.S. Embassy said the helicopter, an OH-58 observation craft, was on a flight from San Lorenzo, on the Pacific coast Gulf of Fonseca, to El Aguacate, an air base that American military engineers are improving, in the mountains 130 miles northeast of Tegucigalpa.

"We thought at first that it was a helicopter belonging to the counter-revolutionaries, one of those that the United States has provided them or that it could have been a Honduran aircraft, one of those that constantly supply the counter-revolutionaries," Ortega said.

The Sandinistas overthrew the pro-American government of rightist strongman Anastasio Somoza in 1979. Since then, relations have grown increasingly tense between Honduras and Nicaragua.

The official Cuban news agency, Prensa Latina, said the death of the helicopter pilot "could be the pretext yearned for by the Reagan administration to increase its aggressions against Nicaragua."

Nicaragua's ambassador to Canada, Casimiro Sotelo, told reporters the helicopter was fired upon as it "deliberately overflew" military installations inside Nicaragua.

Sotelo claimed that so far in 1983, there have been 620 cases of foreign aircraft flying into Nicaragua from Honduras.

Honduras' foreign minister, Edgardo Paz Barmic, said his country sent a formal protest to Nicaragua and demanded an explanation of why the helicopter was fired upon.

Honduras also requested an urgent meeting of the permanent council of the Organization of American States on what it called "serious threats" by Nicaragua.

U.S. violating South African embargo?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two private groups charged today that the United States has licensed $28.3 million worth of military technology sales to South Africa in violation of a U.N. embargo forbidding such transactions.

The State Department acknowledged that it approved licenses for the sale to South Africa of items subject to U.S. government control, but said all but one sale were for civilian use and therefore did not violate the U.N. embargo.

In that one instance, involving the sale of electronics equipment for howitzers and naval craft, the transaction was carried out fraudulently and the guilty parties have been sentenced to prison terms, a department press officer said.

At issue is the export to South Africa of items that appear on the so-called munitions control list, many of which can be used for either military or civilian purposes. In 1977, the U.N. Security Council, with U.S. support, imposed a mandatory ban on the sale to South Africa of arms and of equipment for use by that country's military or police forces.

A report prepared by the American Friends Service Committee and the Washington Office on Africa said the United States "is sabotaging the international arms embargo by winking at U.S. companies' exports to Africa. The volume of this trade is much greater than has been reported."

Rather than outright sales of large weapons systems, exports by U.S. corporations consist to a great extent of the building blocks of modern weaponry — components, unfinished sub-assemblies and other technology that can be easily submerged in large wholesale transactions, the report said.

Noting the State Department claim that the technology is for civilian use, the study said once it reaches South Africa, it is impossible to prevent it from being used for military purposes.

The report was written by Thomas Conrad, a researcher for American Friends Service Committee, a Quaker group.

"By loosening controls on exports to South Africa, the Reagan administration is cozying up to the white-minority government in Pretoria," said Jean Sindab, director of the Washington Office on Africa, a private research group.

A State Department official, insisting on anonymity, said in all cases the United States has received "end use assurances" from South African companies that the equipment will not be used for military purposes.

Responding to complaints in the report about the sale of encoding devices, the official said such equipment is routinely used by banks with automatic tellers.

The sale of navigational gear was approved because it was needed for South Africa's commercial airline fleet, the official said.

He added that the report stated incorrectly that the United States had sold counter-insurgency aircraft and engines to "military forces in South African homelands."

Britain accused of sabotage

LONDON (AP) — Argentina's foreign minister during the Falklands war has accused Britain of sinking an Argentine cruiser to sabotage a plan by Peru to end the 1982 conflict.

Nicanor Costa Mendez, who served Argentina's then military government during the 74-day war, said the General Belgrano was sunk by torpedoes from a British submarine "with the precise timing margin to cause the maximum effect and ruin the immediate negotiation."

The attack on the Belgrano killed 368 Argentinians.

Algerian leader re-elected

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Chadli Bendjedid, the only candidate for the Algerian presidency, was re-elected to a five-year term with 95 percent of the vote, according to official results today.

The voting on Thursday essentially is an indication of the president's popularity, since under Algeria's one-party system of government, the nation's 9.5 million voters can only approve or reject the candidate of the National Liberation Front.

In 1979, Bendjedid took 94 percent of the vote when running for his first term. He succeeded the late Houari Boumedienne.

106 Afghan rebels slain

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Soviet-backed Afghan forces killed at least 106 rebels during battles in six provinces, Radio Afghanistan reports.

The biggest battle occurred in Paktya province, near Pakistan, where 88 guerrillas were killed and 83 anti-tank and anti-personnel mines were seized, according to the Pushtu-language news broadcast on Thursday.

The radio said the other deaths occurred during battles in Herat, Baghlan, Kunduz, Kandahar and Balkh, but it did not break down how many were killed in the battles or say when the fighting occurred.

Czechoslovakians seek asylum

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Iva Prochazka, a playwright and daughter of a leading writer during Czechoslovakia's short-lived liberalization in 1968, says she and her actor husband have applied for political asylum in Austria.

Ms. Prochazka and her husband Ivan Pokorny defected with their daughter, 9, and son, 5, on Dec. 30, while on vacation in Yugoslavia. She said they sped their car over the Austrian border after guards raised a barrier to let a vehicle in front of them cross.

Neutral Austria regularly grants asylum to refugees from Czechoslovakia and other neighboring communist countries.

Government reports consumer credit, spending boom continues

By The Associated Press

The consumer credit boom is continuing and businesses are stepping up their spending plans, too, as the economy grows stronger, government reports say.

Consumer debt rose $4.67 billion in November, the Federal Reserve Board reported Thursday, a growth rate of 15 percent that suggests consumers are increasingly willing to assume more debt as the economy exhibits more signs of strength.

Consumer credit had expanded by $4.89 billion in October. Although such monthly increases are generally viewed as a sign that consumers are taking on more credit, the government's report does not specify how much of the month's gain can be attributed to additions to credit and how much due to repayment of existing debt.

The Federal Reserve said debt outstanding for car loans rose $1.2 billion in November, a slowdown from the $1.8 billion rise of the previous month.

Offsetting this slowdown were increases in debt on revolving credit cards, such as those issued by stores and banks, and in another category that includes cash loans.

In a separate report on business investment, the Commerce Department said executives plan to boost spending for modernization and expansion this year by an inflation-adjusted 9.4 percent, the fastest pace of capital spending since 1977.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said that could mean more jobs and help "restore U.S. technological leadership."

The report said a survey of non-farm businesses in November and December showed managers planning to increase capital spending to $333.3 billion this year. Inflation-adjusted capital spending fell 3.5 percent in 1983.

The report showed a 13.3 percent increase in spending planned this year by manufacturers, with those producing cars and electrical machinery gaining the most.

In other economic and business developments Thursday:

—The major auto companies said the number of U.S.

autoworkers on indefinite layoff fell to 107,500 this week from 108,400. Separately, the industry journal Automotive News said the carmakers planned to build 10.6 percent more autos this week than last week, when work was limited by the New Year's holiday.

—Chrysler Corp. said it had taken its battle against the proposed joint carmaking venture between General Motors Corp. and Toyota Motor Corp. to court, filing an antitrust lawsuit that contends the deal is "clearly illegal."

—A group of former government economic officials told President Reagan and Congress that the past two years' gains against inflation could be wiped out if the federal deficit is not reduced significantly from last year's record $195.4 billion.

—The Labor Department said new applications for unemployment compensation rose by 8,000 in the week ended Dec. 31, to 421,000.

—Warner Communications Inc. won a round in its battle to block a possible takeover move by publisher Rupert Murdoch. A Delaware state judge denied Murdoch's request for a temporary restraining order that would have stopped a proposed stock swap between Warner and Chris-Craft Industries Inc.

—The Securities and Exchange Commission said it is investigating the possibility of wrongdoing in securities transactions prior to the largest municipal bond default in the nation's history. It had said earlier it was looking into bonds that were sold to finance nuclear power plants for the Washington Public Power Supply System, which declared itself in default.

—A former bank official pleaded guilty in Oklahoma City to conspiracy charges in a scheme that contributed to the collapse of Penn Square Bank. Thomas S. Orr approved loans for the purchase of thoroughbred horses in return for a 10 percent commission from the buyers or a profit on horses that he owned, a prosecutor said.

NTSB says '83 safe year for airlines

WASHINGTON (AP) — After two devastating airline crashes the year before, 1983 was a relatively safe year for the nation's airways with the rate of fatal accidents on the decline, according to the National Transportation Safety Board.

Commuter airlines, the short haul carriers that have become increasingly important since large airlines pulled out of many cities, recorded sharply improved safety records for the second straight year.

Fatal accidents among larger carriers as well as the hundreds of thousands of private pilots also declined.

The safety board reported that the commuter carriers had 17 accidents involving two fatalities last year. The rate of fatal accidents per 100,000 departures was 82 percent lower than in 1981 for the short-haul scheduled carriers.

There was no catastrophic aviation accident among U.S. carriers last year such as the two that marred 1982 — the crash of an Air Florida jetliner in Washington that killed 78 people and of a Pan American World Airways jet in New Orleans that killed 153.

But because only U.S. carriers were involved in the NTSB's 1983 statistics, they did not include the death of 23 people from a fire aboard an Air Canada jetliner last summer. The plane, its cabin engulfed in flames, made an emergency landing at Cincinnati and the remaining passengers and crew escaped with only seconds to spare.

While the industry had no fatal jet accident during the year, there were a number of close calls.

An Eastern Airlines L-1011 lost all three engines over the Atlantic and barely managed to limp back to Miami after one engine was restarted. A Republic Airlines jet made an emergency landing at an airbase outside of Phoenix only to find its fuel tank was virtually empty.

The worst accident involving a U.S. carrier came last October near Pinckneyville, Ill., when a commuter plane belonging to Air Illinois crashed killing all 10 persons aboard. Although the aircraft was of the type used by commuter airlines, the airline also operates larger planes and is listed among the larger carriers.

In the only other accidents involving airlines using large planes, three crewmen died when a United Airlines cargo plane crashed during a takeoff at Detroit, and a passenger was killed when a propeller ripped through the cabin of a Republic Airlines plane when it skidded and hit a snowbank while trying to land at Brainerd, Minn.

Meanwhile, air taxis reported 141 accidents, an increase from 133 the year before. But the fatal accidents dropped by two to 26 and the number of fatalities were reduced from 70 in 1982 to 60 last year.

Accidents among general aviation pilots declined as well. Nevertheless, the NTSB said there were 1,049 people killed in 548 general aviation accidents during the year — a rate of 1.67 fatal accidents per 100,000 aircraft hours flown.

NCEP debunks retirement ideas

Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Most retirees do just that: they retire.

So says a National Commission for Employment Policy (NCEP), disputing some surveys which show that many workers take part time jobs upon leaving full-time employment.

The NCEP further knocks down another common misconception that many retirees increase their volunteer activities after retirement.

A third NCEP study on retirement decisions of older workers holds that though recent changes in Social Security and Medicare would seem to cause people to retire later, the effects of changes are likely to be minimal.

The commission is an independent, federal agency, established under the Job Training Partnership Act to provide advice on employment issues. Its members represent business, labor and education.

The reason retirees choose total retirement over part-time work is because the pay tends to be low, and few workers are encouraged to stay on their current jobs at reduced rates, the study found.

At the same time, relatively high hourly employer costs are a major reason employers avoid using part-time workers, the research indicated.

Though there are a large number of part-time jobs in the labor market, they tend to be filled by people who have other obligations, such as going to school, and for whom part time work is preferable to a full-time job.

The research found that less than a third of all adults are involved in volunteer activities of any kind and that the proportion drops to less than a quarter of older women and less than one tenth of older men volunteer.

Volunteer activities do not appear to be affected by whether a person is working or not. Thus, policies aimed at delaying retirement among older workers would likely have little effect on the level of volunteer activities.

Recent changes in Social Security raise the age at which maximum benefits can be received from 65 to 67-years-of-age over a period of 35 years and increase the benefits received 8 percent a year for each year retirement is delayed.

While workers can continue to receive Social Security payments at age 62, the payments will be 30 percent greater for someone retiring at age 67 than at 62 — a provision which would encourage people to retire later.

However, the study found the effects on retirement patterns of such a change will be minimal — increasing the average retirement age by only about three months.

While the legislation did increase the incentives for later retirement, the study, which analyzed how older workers responded to incentives in the past, indicated the new incentives by themselves are not great enough to change retirement patterns very much.

Getty heir tells court about small inheritance

By The Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — J. Ronald Getty, 54, quietly took the witness stand Thursday in Los Angeles Superior Court to outline what he knows about a family trust that limited him to $3,000 annually, but made his brothers multimillionaires.

Getty is suing his family and the Sarah C. Getty Trust, established in 1934 in the name of his grandmother by his late father, oil magnate J. Paul Getty, to "equalize" his share with those of brothers J. Paul Getty Jr., 52, Gordon Peter Getty, 49, and the late George Franklin Getty's offspring.

Until a few months ago, Ronald Getty believed that his equal share should be about $26 million annually. But with last week's agreement by Texaco Inc. to purchase Los Angeles-based Getty Oil Co., Ronald's attorney, Morgan Chu, estimated Thursday that his client's stake now should be more than $160 million annually. The Texaco deal will pay the family trust more than $4 billion for its stake of more than 40 percent in Getty Oil.

Testifying before Judge Julius M. Tittle, Ronald, eldest living Getty son, echoed earlier testimony by his mother, Fini Getty, 73, the third of J. Paul Getty's five wives, that he had been omitted from the family's trust income primarily because his father believed that the son's maternal grandfather, German industrialist Otto Heimle, would bequeath him a separate fortune.

Mrs. Getty said, however, that, although her father was "comfortable by German standards," he was never as wealthy as the Gettys. Heimle, the head of the electricity supply company for the German state of Baden, was imprisoned by the Nazis, she said, and lost any money the family had.

The mother and son said J. Paul Getty also omitted Ronald from the trust because the boy was growing up in Germany, and Getty did not want part of his fortune sent to that country, and because of anger with Fini over their divorce.

She married Getty in Cuba in 1928, and divorced him in Mexico in 1932. In 1935, she moved with Ronald to Los Angeles, she testified, because her former husband preferred that he be brought up in California.

The son said he was first told of the trust in 1948, and that his father assured him he would be "equalized," or given a fair share of the family fortune. In 1960, Ronald said, he received 80,000 shares of Getty Oil Co. stock then worth about $1.5 million as part of the "equalization," but still did not realize that he wasn't included in the trust.

Asked if he ever sought to read the trust agreement, Getty replied: "He was my father and I had always believed him... He had always taken care of me and I relied on him."

Getty said he learned of his exclusion from the trust income only in 1976, when his father died.

UAE field producing

LONDON (SWN) — Gulf Offshore Ras Al Khaimah Limited, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Gulf Oil Corporation, announced today that production has begun from the Saleh Field. The field is located 26 miles offshore Ras Al Khaimah, United Arab Emirates, in 320 feet of water.

Initial production commenced on January 3, 1984 and is currently flowing at a rate of 5,000 barrels of oil per day. From the discovery of the Saleh 1X well on February 7, 1983 to the date of first production, development has been completed in less than one year.

The development consists of a three-well early production system with a capacity of 30,000 b/d and an associated moored storage tanker. Completion of the Saleh 2X well is currently underway.

Business executives propose government savings plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of business executives, searching for ways to clamp down on government spending, today proposed savings of $424.4 billion over three years, with more than one-third of the reduction from cleaning up wasteful programs.

Without major changes in government operations, the report warned the budget deficit could balloon to an astronomical $2 trillion by the start of the century and the interest on the national debt would run around $1.5 trillion. Last year's deficit stood at a record $195.4 billion.

As a result, it said that the United States "is in a new ball game — where many of the old rules no longer apply and where many of the 'sacred cows' will have to be sacrificed."

The report, put together by the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control, spelled out 2,478 recommendations that the president, Congress or individual federal agencies could put in place to reduce red ink.

J. Peter Grace, the business executive who was chairman of the panel, urged President Reagan, in a letter accompanying the report, to act quickly on the suggestions. "The current economic trends are simply too serious to delay action any longer," he said.

The recommendations vary from requiring an overhaul of programs in some cases to offering such practical suggestions as putting cash seized by the Justice Department into bank accounts that pay interest.

In spelling out their cost-cutting suggestions, the panel members complained the Defense Department has bought three-cent screws for $91 and spent $114 for silicon electric cells that go for 9¢ cents.

They urged the Pentagon to be more efficient and cost-conscious when it contracts for more than $60 billion in major weapons systems and called on the Department of Health and Human Services to charge a penalty to states that have high error rates in welfare payments.

The Treasury Department pays bills as they come in, regardless of when they're due, they said. If it waited until the due-date, a savings of $1.3 billion over three years could be had.

Moreover, federal retirement plans are much more generous than those for workers in private business, offering government employees three to six times the benefits of the best private pension plans, according to the report.

And it said the Internal Revenue

Service should turn its "immediate attention" to trying to recover the estimated $81.5 billion individuals and corporations failed to pay in taxes in 1981.

"It is abundantly clear to anyone who reads through ... this report ... that the federal government is suffering from a critical case of inefficient and ineffective management, evidenced particularly by the hemorrhaging of billions of tax dollars and mounting deficits," it said.

"For decades the federal government has not managed its programs with the same eye to innovation, productivity and economy that is dictated by private sector (profit and loss) statements and balance sheets."

Overall, it cited savings of $424.4 billion over three years. Tightening up on wastefulness in government programs could save $160.9 billion and proper personnel management, an additional $90.9 billion, it said.

A smattering of its findings:

—The Agriculture Department has three agencies that duplicate certain research analysis. Some $22 million could be saved over three years if corrected.

—Savings of about $445 million, over three years, could be made if the Federal Aviation Administration reduced the number of air traffic control centers and consolidated other activities.

—The Pentagon could come up with an additional $590 million over three years if it consolidated some of its 29 depots for heavy maintenance of defense systems.

—The Urban Mass Transportation Administration spent $10 million on a computer to keep track of its approximately $25 billion in grants but hasn't been able to close its financial books since 1979.

—The Veterans Administration pays $15 billion annually to six million people (An average of $2,500 a person). "Yet, it has no information to measure the accuracy of these payments even though it knows the error rate exceeds $500 million per year."

—The financial offices of the Energy Department, which was formed from parts of other agencies, don't close their monthly books on the same day. "Payrolls are processed independently at eight locations."

—The government owned buildings, structures and land worth $104 billion at the end of the 1980 fiscal year. Yet, it lacks a central office to manage those holdings.

The group said 161 business executive worked for 18 months on the project at cost of $75 million to the private sector. No government money was spent, it said.

Dollar lower, gold steady

LONDON (AP) — The seesawing dollar dipped from record-high levels in early European trading today. Gold bullion prices were little changed.

Traders at West German banks said investors were awaiting a deluge of U.S. economic reports later today. The reports included statistics on retail sales, money supply, industrial production, producer prices and bank credit.

The traders said the reports could give signs of U.S. economic recovery and interest rates, which could play a key role in determining whether the American currency retains its strength.

Meanwhile, the dollar fell from all-time highs of the previous day against the French franc and Italian lire, and eased against all other major European currencies.

In Tokyo, however, the dollar rose marginally for the fourth straight day, finishing at 234.67 yen, up from Thursday's 234.60 and 1.47 yen higher than last Friday's close of 233.20.

Later in London, the British pound firmed to $1.3995, from $1.3974 late Thursday.

Other mid-morning dollar rates in Europe compared with late Thursday included:

— 2.8330 West German marks, down from 2.8385

— 2.2450 Swiss francs, down from 2.2493

— 8.6660 French francs, down from 8.6975

— 3.1805 Dutch guilders, down from 3.1880

— 1.71650 Italian lire, down from 1.72125

— 1.24985 Canadian dollars, down from 1.24965

Gold and silver bullion held steady in quiet trading.

London's five major bullion houses fixed a recommended mid-morning gold price of $370 a Troy ounce, up 25 cents from late Thursday. In Zurich, gold was bid at $370.40, a loss of 10 cents.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold rose 48 cents to finish at a bid of $372.88.

Silver was bid in London at $8.08 an ounce, compared with $8.045 Thursday.

Lee bombs Permian

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Taking nearly twice as many shots and hitting 10 percent more of them was a key to Midland Lee's 72-46 District 4-5A girls' basketball victory over Odessa Permian Thursday night at Chaparral Center.

What gave the Rebels such a one-sided shooting night — 30-of-64 field goals to 13-of-35 — was the Lee press which caused 34 turnovers while committing only 21.

"I thought our press was with it tonight," said Lee coach Shirley Stephenson. "I thought the girls hustled and I thought they did a great job when Felicia (Farias) went to the bench in the first half. The girls also did an excellent job on the half court defense."

Farias is the Rebels' leading scorer this year with a 17.1 average. However, in the first half against Permian, she was held scoreless while being called for three personal fouls. She managed 13 points in the second half, but her teammates were there to pick up the slack during the two quarters she was down.

One of the players who picked up the difference for the Rebels was Jeanne McFadden who scored a season-high 10 points in a near flawless offensive effort.

In the first two quarters she was

3-for-3 from the field and 2-for-2 from the line for eight of her points. She missed her only shot of the game in the third quarter and came up with her first double-figure scoring effort at the start of the fourth when she scored from under the basket, a two-pointer that started a 12-point Rebel streak that ended any hope Permian might have had of cutting down the 17-point advantage Lee took into the final frame.

McFadden, who started the year as a top off-the-bench player and gradually worked her way to a starting role, impressed Stephenson with her performance.

"Jeanne did a great job," said Stephenson. "There's no doubt she can play."

Tunya Mayberry, shooting better than 50 percent for the night, led the Rebels in scoring with 16 points spread through all four quarters while Stacy Harmon exploded in the final period for 10 points to give her 13 on the night.

Shelley Armstrong, Faye Oudems, Brenda Haven, Megan Pace and Janetta Eaden also contributed points toward the victory.

Permian was led by LeeAnn Rood with 12 points and Jan Carr with 10.

PERMIAN HELD only one lead all night, 2-0, when Carolyn Gibbs scored from underneath on a rebound with 25 seconds run off the clock.

Lee answered with five straight points and managed to stay at least one point up the rest of the quarter. The Rebels used a 10-0 start in the second quarter and 12-0 at the top of the fourth to set up the run away victory.

Winning was all-important for the 4-5A defending champion Rebels as they trail San Angelo, the only district team that's beaten them in the standings, by one game. The Bobcats, 54-31 winners over Abilene High Thursday, are 6-0 (12-6 overall) in league play while Lee is holding onto second at 5-1 (16-5).

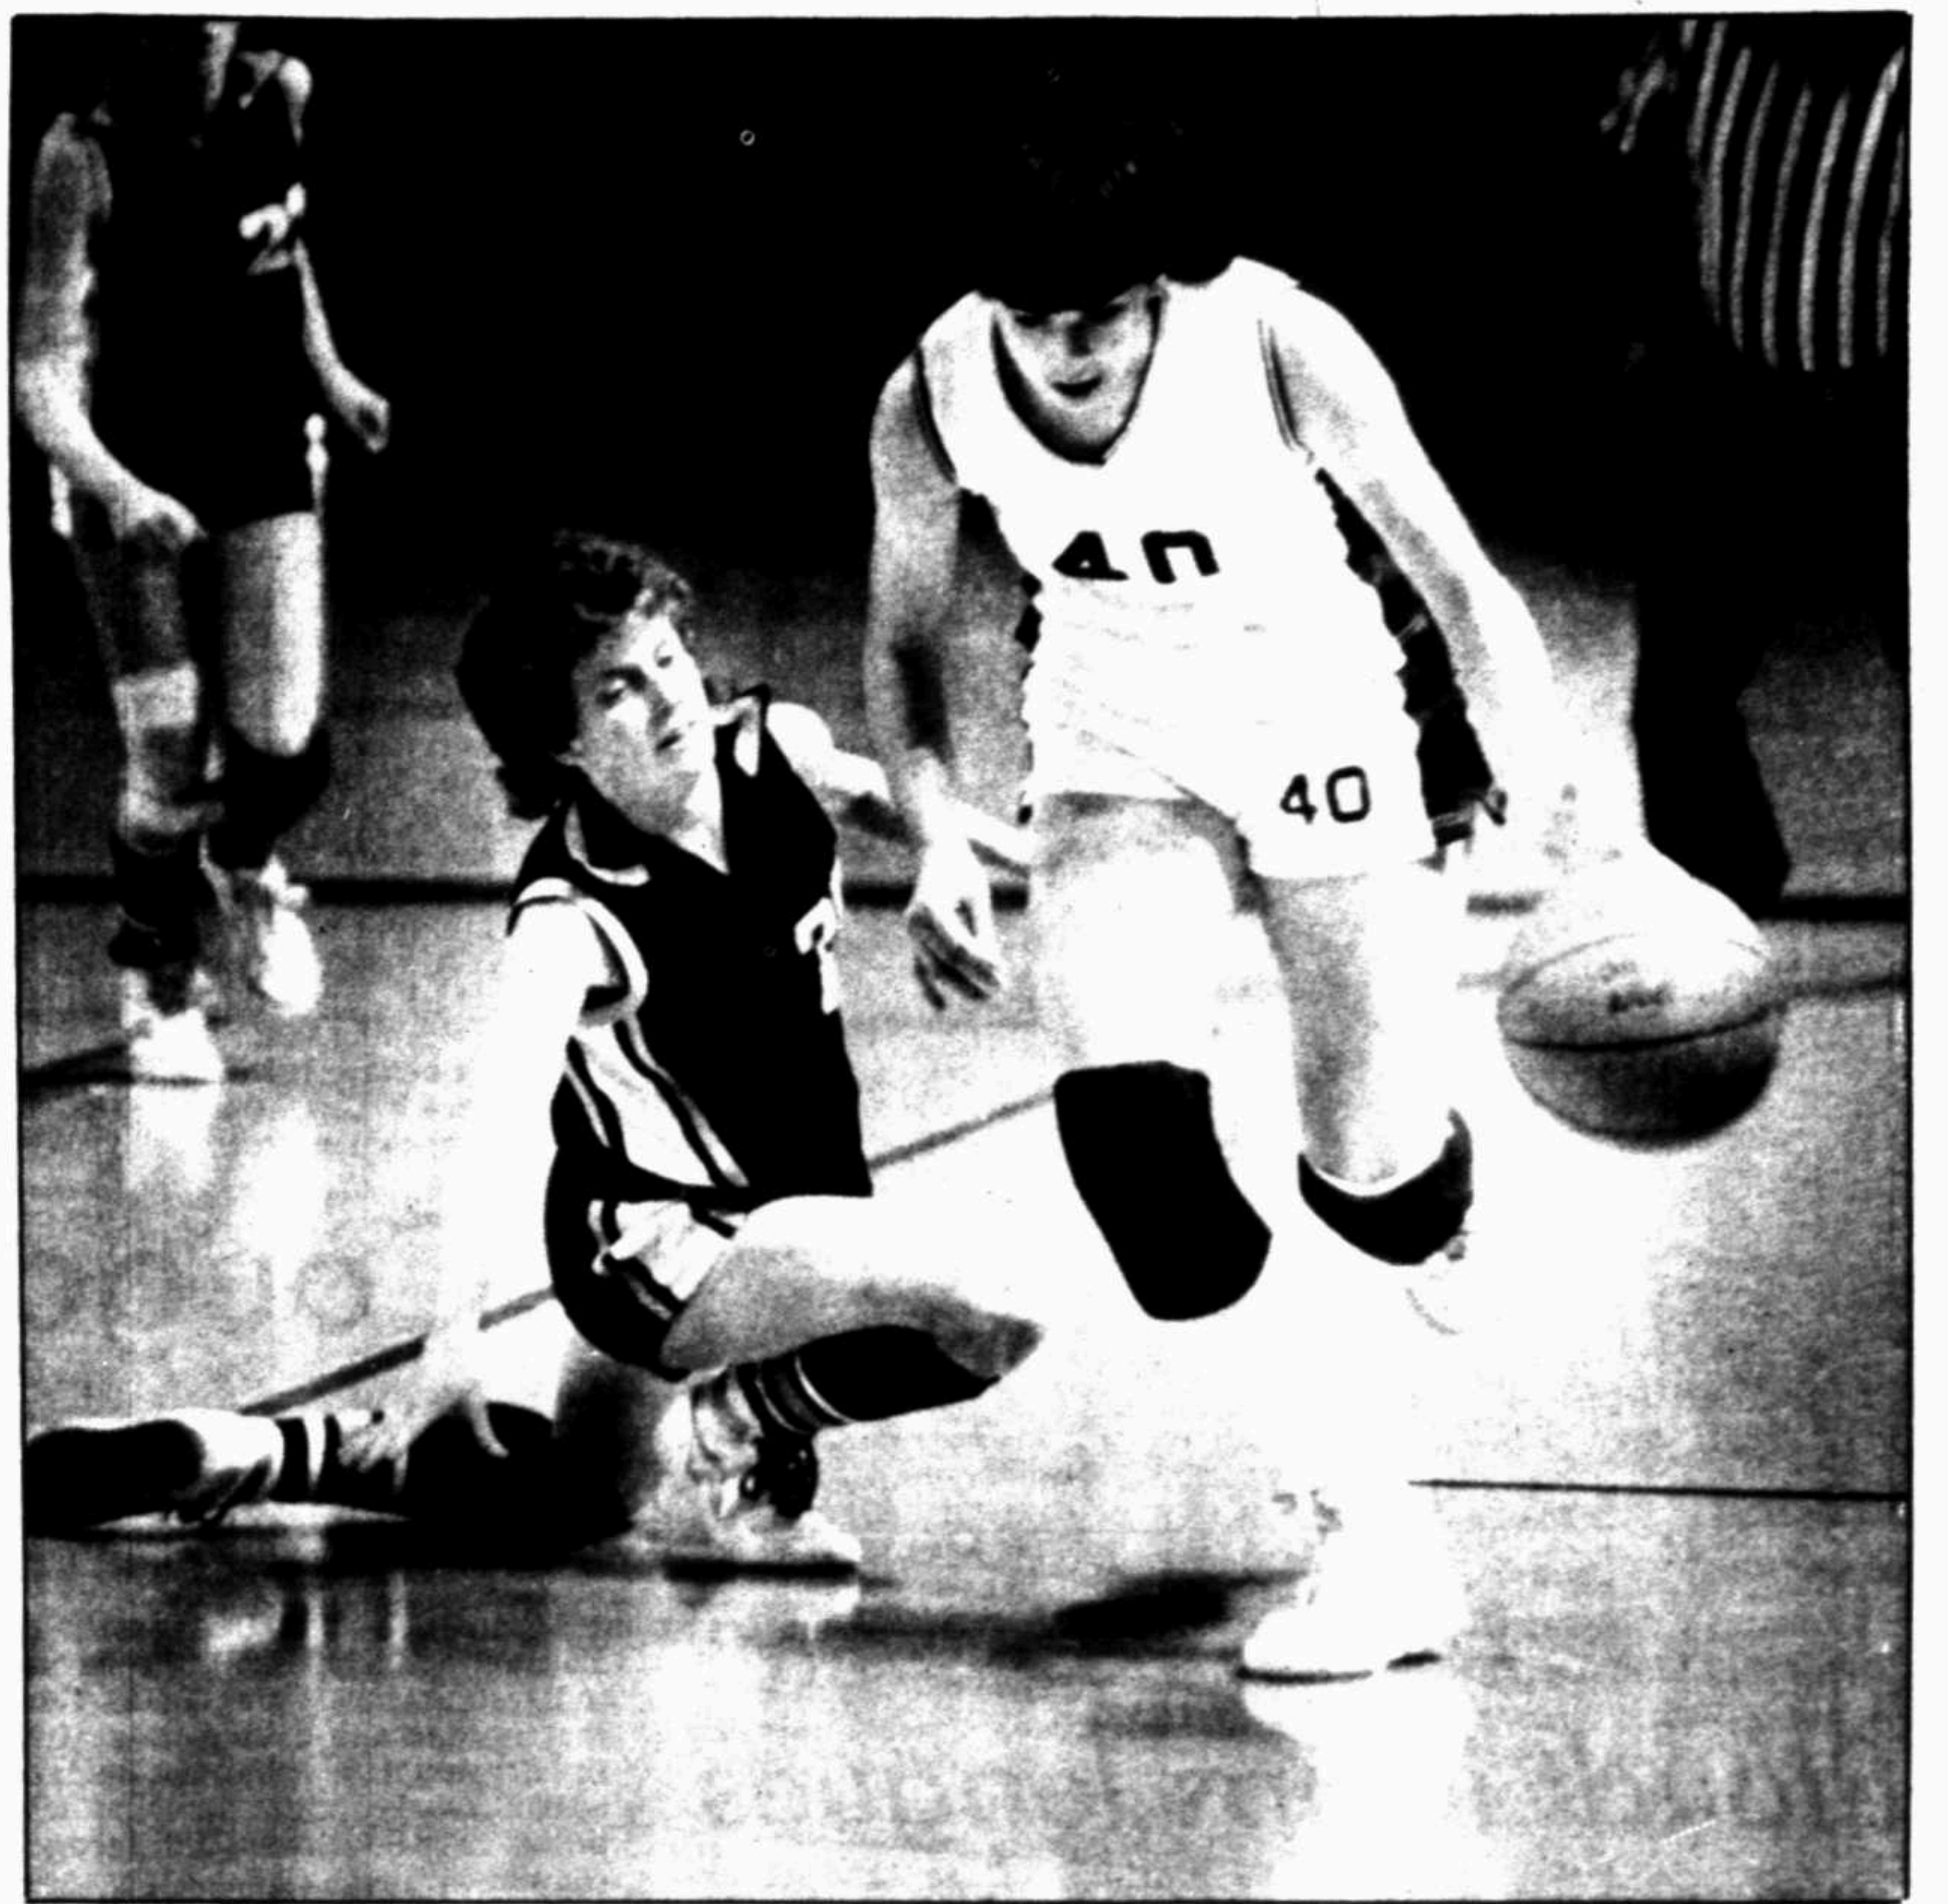

On Monday, the Rebels travel to Big Spring to close out the first half of district play.

In junior varsity action, the Panthers used a 19-point second quarter and 18 in the third to pave the way to a 54-36 victory.

Bulldogs test Bronchos

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Even though Odessa Permian has moved into sole possession of first place in the District 4-5A basketball race after only three games of the schedule, Midland High coach Jack Stephenson thinks the league is so balanced that the Panthers may soon join the ranks of the beaten.

Stephenson's Bulldogs host defending district champion Odessa High at 8 p.m. today at Chaparral Center and he thinks a victory against the Bronchos may move his club into a tie for first place if the chips fall just right.

"Permian can't get 60 percent shooting from their guards forever and when they don't get that kind of shooting, they can be beat. In fact, I look for Lee to beat them Friday. Lee is a good basketball team too," said Stephenson.

The Bulldogs had great success against OHS a year ago. MHS defeated the Bronchos in both meetings last year when Odessa High won the 4-5A title.

"Odessa is awfully physical on the boards and the scary thing about them is that they have four starters back from last year. That's a lot of experience, but they haven't put things together this year."

"We were happy to get a victory over Cooper Tuesday, but we didn't really play very well. We made too many mental errors, but we still won. We feel like we can beat anybody when we go out and play."

"I don't know if you could call it a mid-season slump or what, but we have to start pushing again. Even if you are a good team, there is not much difference between a good team and average team if you don't go out and play. Our kids have to realize that."

Even though Stephenson has not been pleased with his team's play in the first phase of district action, he was happy to see the return of the scoring form of guard Chris Rooker, who canned 28 points against Cooper.

"I knew Chris' touch with the outside shot would come back and that was good to see," said Stephenson.

"With the exception of Big Spring, the league looks very balanced from top to bottom and Big Spring has some good players. I think we are better than any of them when we play."

LEE HITS the road against Permian tonight and the Rebels need a victory after losing two straight to San Angelo and Abilene High. Lee was in both of those games, but another loss could make the going rough for the Rebels.

Permian's 30 league mark is the warning for Lee and the Panthers would be off and flying with a 4-0 record with Lee, Midland High and San Angelo behind them.

In another key game tonight, San Angelo travels to Abilene High. The winner will be 3-1 in league action while the loser will be 2-2. The winner will be in position to stay close in the league race.

In the only other league game tonight, Big Spring (0-3) hosts Abilene Cooper (1-2).

Despite the loss to Midland High Tuesday, Cooper's Bob Estes took over the 4-5A scoring leadership with a 20-point per game average in three outings with 60 district points. Permian's Terry Williams fell to second with 52 points in three games for a 17.3 average. Cooper also has the No. 3 scorer in the loop in Joe Melson, who is tied with Abilene High's Tom Simmons with 16 points per outing.

Rooker's 28 points Tuesday moved him into the top 15 for the first time this year, averaging 15.3 per district contest to rank sixth. Lee's Alvin Henry stands in seventh place for scoring honors with a 15.0 average.

Midland High's Kenneth Johnson's 14.0 average in three games ranks eighth while teammate Darrell Davis is tied for ninth with a 13.3 average. Lee's Derek Westbrook is tied for 12th with an 11.6 average in loop play and is the only other Midlander ranked in the top 15.

Robinson aim keys MHS

The Midland High Bulldogs, trailing San Angelo and Midland Lee in the District 4-5A standings, couldn't afford to lose to winless Odessa High Thursday night if they had any hopes of repeating last year's performance and going to the playoffs.

So, on a night when few shots were falling in, the Bulldogs found the one girl with an aim, Terez Robinson, and she responded with 16 points and led MHS to a 45-38 victory.

Neither team was able to shoot the ball worth a darn as MHS hit 21-of-63 shots while OHS dropped in only 13-of-46.

Robinson, on the other hand, missed her first shot of the second half but went on to hit her final seven for an 8-of-12 performance from the field for her game-high, and second best of the year, performance.

Midland High led Odessa 12-10 at the end of the first quarter and went up by eight at the half, 23-15.

In the third quarter, Denise Lanz hit a short jumper to give the Bulldogs their biggest lead of the night, 29-15 with just under five minutes remaining, only to have OHS pull back to eight going into the final frame.

With 6:35 left to play, Odessa cut the margin to three points, 33-30 on a Fawn Cox rebound shot, but that was as close as the Bronchos would come.

OJ Johnson was the only Bulldog to join Robinson in double figures while Odessa was led by Zorina Saldana with 11 and Dalia Castillo and Bunny Smith with nine each.

The victory leaves Midland High alone in third place with a 4-2 district record (13-7 overall) while Odessa High falls to 0-6, 5-16. Midland High trails 6-0 San Angelo and 5-1 Midland Lee in the 4-5A standings.

The Bulldogs can go a long way toward helping their playoff cause Monday night when the host San Angelo at Chaparral Center at 8 p.m.

IN OTHER district action Thursday night, San Angelo pounded Abilene High, 0-6, 6-13, and Abilene Cooper, 3-3, 7-8, moved into a three-way tie for fourth by defeating Big Spring, 3-3, 10-9. Odessa Permian, a 72-46 loser to Midland Lee, is also in the tie with a 3-3, 8-12 record.

For San Angelo, Monica Bradley and Shawn Sweeten set the scoring pace with 12 points each while Abilene High had Trena Jackson with 10.

After taking a one-point lead in the first quarter, San Angelo built up a 28-13 halftime lead and led 40-19 after three.

Abilene Cooper used a 16-10 first quarter and a 19-13 fourth to set the pace against Big Spring.

The Cougars were led by Melinda Finley with 13 pints, Tracy Scott with 12 and Rhonda Hays with 10 while the Steers had Paula Spears with 15 and Debra Rubio with 13.

Reporter wants piece of Dunk-off

By SCOTT OSTLER
The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

It really does shape up as a memorable sporting event, a true classic, a showdown of epic proportions, one for the books.

The Super Bowl? Sure, that will be a nice football game. But I'm talking about the NBA's Slam-Dunk Championship the Saturday after the Super Bowl.

Eight of the league's premier dunkers will slam it out before the All-Star Game, including Dr. J, Darryl "Chocolate Thunder" Dawkins and Mike Cooper. I have a backup TV set ready, in case Dawkins shatters my picture tube.

One thing worries me, however. The dunks will be judged by a panel of five former players. While I respect these people, I feel strongly that a sixth member should be added. It should be someone who knows dunking from a several viewpoints, who has studied the history and the art of the slam. A connoisseur.

I nominate me, and respectfully submit my resume:

I respect the slam dunk. Who else do you know who tried to find a Dr. J ornament to put on the top of his Christmas tree?

I know the history. I span the two eras of basketball, B.D. (Before Dunk; also known as the Layup Age) and A.D. (After Dunk; also known as the In-Your-Face Era).

I remember the days when a player open under the basket would toss the ball into the hoop like he'd flip a quarter to a hotel doorman. Then came people like Wilt Chamberlain and Gus Johnson. In their hands, the dunk became a crowd electrifier and a weapon of intimidation.

Today, of course, everyone dunks, but most dunkers don't have a lot of style. They look like they are trying to ring a bell and win a cigar at the county fair. Very few players have the sensitivity and dramatic flair to achieve dunk greatness.

The contestants will be judged on the basis of creativity, athletic ability and style. I have a keen eye for all three, developed through years of watching professional wrestling.

Not the least of my qualifications is that I can dunk. True, I no longer dunk with the power and elan of my younger days. Nonetheless, I do have first-hand experience.

In high school I was named to the unofficial all-league All-Warm-Up team. The level of my total game never approached that of my pregame dunking, but who can estimate the amount of psychological damage I did to opponents?

A couple years ago I challenged Kheriff Miller to a one-on-one dunk-off. Her father declined the offer, despite my promises to keep the competition tasteful and dignified.

More recently I prepared to challenge Larry Dawkins himself, but he came to town injured. I knew I couldn't match Dawkins' height and power, but I planned to weight the competition heavily on the naming of the dunks.

Dawkins is the acknowledged master of dunk-naming poetry, but I was ready to hit him with the "Over-the-Hill Thriller," the "So Fine, Tickle the Twine, Double Devine, Come Up and See Me Sometime," and the "Where You Been All My Life Jack-knife," and the "White Lightning Sing-in, Dawkins Cringin' on the Shoulder, Boulder Dam Bustin' Jam."

I have talked to players about the importance of the dunk in their lives. Mike Cooper, for instance, dunked his first dunk when he was 17.

"I did it in practice," he told me a couple years ago. "I was just fooling around, I jumped up and slammed it. It was something I'd always wanted to do. I'd see Wilt, Doctor, Elgin slamming, all the brothers. I remember when I saw West do it, it tripped me out."

"My main reason for coming to Laker games then was to see someone slam it. So I always try to dunk a couple of times in warm-ups and in games."

Third-seeded John McEnroe eyes the ball for the return against Johan Kriek during the $400,000 Volvo Masters Tennis Championship in New York. McEnroe polished off Kriek 6-4, 6-2 to advance to the semifinals against top-seeded Mats Wilander Saturday.

Navratilova keeps streak in Slims

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Martina Navratilova experienced some problems but stretched her winning streak in tennis singles competition to 52 matches with a 6-1, 6-3 victory Thursday night over Pam Casale in the second round of the $150,000 Virginia Slims of California.

Navratilova, unbeaten in singles since last June, overpowered her opponent, a 21-year-old from New Jersey, in the first set. But in the long second set, four of the games won by Navratilova went to deuce at least two times, with one reaching that point five times.

"I played better in practice," remarked the top-seeded Navratilova, who was named The Associated Press' Female Athlete of 1983 earlier Thursday.

Navratilova's 52nd straight victory — four short of a women's record held by Chris Evert Lloyd — came after Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova, seeded eighth, defeated Bonnie Gadusek 6-1, 6-7, 6-2.

Mandlikova's opponent in a quarterfinal match Friday night will be Andrea Jaeger, who won 6-4, 6-3 over Kathy Rinaldi in another of Thursday's second-round matches.

McEnroe, Wilander win

NEW YORK (AP) — The explosion was expected and expensive. But when it was over, the tempestuous John McEnroe advanced to the semifinals of the $400,000 Volvo Masters tennis championships where he will meet top-seeded Mats Wilander.

"I think there's definitely a possible chance" that the winner of their Saturday encounter will be considered 1983's top tennis player, McEnroe said after disposing of Johan Kriek 6-4, 6-2 in Thursday night's quarterfinal.

Wilander, who has beaten McEnroe in all three of their 1983 meetings, agreed after he advanced with a 7-6, 6-2 victory over Spain's Jose Higueras.

In today's quarterfinal, reigning U.S. open champion Jimmy Connors played surprising Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia. The winner will face the survivor of tonight's quarterfinal pairing between two-time defending Masters champion Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and Ecuador's Andres Gomez.

Saturday's semifinals, as well as Sunday's final, will begin at 12:30 p.m. EST and will be televised nationally by NBC. The winner of this elite 12-man field will collect $100,000, with $60,000 going to the runnerup.

And, besides the money and the crown, the title as 1983's top player could hinge on the outcome here on the Supreme Court at Madison Square Garden. The four Grand Slam titles — the French Open, Wimbledon, the U.S. Open and the Australian Open — were split among four players, three of whom are still in the running for the Masters championship.

Only Yannick Noah, the first Frenchman in 37 years to capture the French Open, is sitting on the sidelines after being shocked by Smid in an opening-round match.

McEnroe captured his second Wimbledon singles title in July and Wilander took the Australian Open in December, beating McEnroe in the semifinals and Lendl in the final. It was the Swede's first grass court title.

The last time McEnroe defeated Wilander was in their first meeting, and their only encounter indoors. That was an epic 6½-hour Davis Cup struggle in St. Louis in 1982 when McEnroe outlasted his Swedish opponent 9-7, 6-2, 15-17, 3-6, 8-6.

Since then, Wilander has beaten McEnroe, who finished the 1983 season atop the Atari-ATP computer rankings and was named by his fellow players as the ATP Player of the Year, on clay in the French Open, on cement at the ATP Championships in Cincinnati and on grass at the Australian Open.

"It's exactly the same thing that happened to me and Lendl," McEnroe said about Wilander's recent successes against him. "You get up to play certain people and then for others you don't get mentally prepared."

"For me, when I first started playing, it was Connors and (Sweden's Bjorn) Borg, and then it was Connors and Lendl. And now a new guy comes in who I have to prepare myself for."

"I know that that's what makes tennis interesting," McEnroe said. "I just hope that I can rectify the thing with Wilander sooner than I did with Lendl."

Where McEnroe is impulsive, Wilander is calm. McEnroe plays a devastating serve-and-volley game; Wilander prefers to stay on the baseline, making an occasional and usually successful trip to the net. McEnroe wears his feelings on his face, scowling or speaking up when he feels a line call was unjust. Wilander is stoic, appearing to take everything in stride.

"I think it will be an interesting match," the Swedish right-hander said of Saturday's semifinal. "I was surprised when I beat him on grass, but I know I can beat him."

"However, I know I don't have to play very badly to lose to him. My passing shots and serve will have to work well" in order to win, he said.

Despite the score, McEnroe's victory over Kriek wasn't an easy one. Neither player could hold serve in the first four games.

Then, after McEnroe broke his South African-born opponent in the ninth game, his temper got the best of him.

After he was wide with a forehand down the line, giving Kriek a 15-30 lead in the 10th game, the New York left-hander slammed his graphite racket to the court. The racket splintered and the broken head went crashing into the curtain at the back of the court, just missing two linesmen.

He was given a warning for abuse of racket by referee Charles Beck of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and later fined $500 by the Volvo Grand Prix supervisor Ken Farrar.

"I've done that a thousand times," McEnroe said of hitting the floor with his racket, "and it's only shattered twice — here and against Connors in the U.S. Open when it landed on his side of the net."

"It was completely accidental and I apologize for that. But I may have to change because it's not worth getting fined for and having fans boo me."

Until then, the Garden crowd of 15,638 appeared to be behind McEnroe, which is not usually the case. But after his impetuous action, the fans jumped on him until he won them back with superb tennis in the second set.

After the incident, McEnroe ripped off the next five points to close out the first set. Despite serving two consecutive double-faults, his fifth and sixth of the match, Kriek held service to begin the second set.

Hatfield wins Kodak honors

DALLAS (AP) — Five years ago, Ken Hatfield wasn't interested in becoming head football coach at the Air Force Academy.

"(Coach) Bill Parcells told me he was leaving and going to the pros, but I told him I didn't want the job and he told the athletic director."

Hatfield took the job anyway and a few years ago he "told Coach Broyles (Arkansas athletic director Frank Broyles, Hatfield's college coach) that I was ready to stay at the Air Force Academy forever."

But he also told Air Force AD Col. John Clune that if other schools came calling, "There was no place I'd ever consider other than Arkansas if it came open at the right time. He understood that the last two years."

The last two years produced records of 8-5 and 10-2 after the Academy had experienced eight straight losing seasons, and consecutive bowl trips — both victories — for the first time. The latter record was good enough to earn Hatfield major-college Kodak Coach of the Year honors Thursday in balloting by members of the American Football Coaches Association.

And when Lou Holtz was pushed into "resigning" at Arkansas on Dec. 18, the right time had suddenly arrived.

"It totally shocked me," Hatfield said. "I didn't know what to say at the time. I really felt for Lou because of what he'd done and what he's meant to college football."

"If the Arkansas job wasn't something I leaped for I had to do a lot of thinking and my first thought after that was that I thought it would be an opportunity to talk to them."

"I didn't know if I would be comfortable at Arkansas and I hadn't really talked to Coach Broyles over the years, although we'd seen each other socially. I'd only been back to Fayetteville once in 19 years — for one day of spring practice when I was an assistant at Florida," said Hatfield.

The 40-year-old Hatfield couldn't resist the chance to "come home" — he a native of Helena, Ark., and was a star defensive back in 1962-63-64 — and shortly after Thursday night's Coach of the Year banquet he was headed back on the recruiting trail.

In a strange twist, Hatfield wrote his way into the Air Force job in 1979.

"The greatest thing that helped me was one year as an assistant under Bill Parcells," Hatfield said. "It gave me a chance as offensive coordinator to kind of look around."

"So even though I didn't want the job, I wrote a position paper on what had to be done to win at Air Force. They came back and asked me if I was interested in the job. I really thought and prayed about it hard. I had three years left on a five-year contract when they offered me a new five-year contract before the bowl game (a 9-3 Independence Bowl victory over Mississippi last Dec. 10). I thought I could stay forever in view of what we'd done."

Hatfield won national honors over four other regional Coaches of the Year — Jack Bicknell of Boston College, Pat Dye of Auburn, Tom Osborne of Nebraska and Mike White of Illinois. For the first time, the AFCA chose a Coach of the Year in four categories, rather than one each in the University and College Divisions.

Hatfield won in University Division I-AA, while Ray Dempsey, who led Southern Illinois to a national I-AA championship and then accepted the job at Memphis State, was named Coach of the Year in University Division I-AA.

Sony does it again for music lovers who don't want to leave high fidelity at home. MDR-FM7, FM stereo headphone radio, is the ultimate portable FM stereo experience you can be part of because the open air dynamic headphones reproduce sound with the clarity of an expensive home stereo system. It's also lightweight, compact and hugs the ears just right. Six station preset buttons, positioned neatly on the side let your fingers dance through your favorite stations. Or touch Auto Scan to span the entire FM band. And while you're moving in style, up town or out of town, it's nice to know that the PLL synthesized tuner provides unwavering reception. Hear it like it is. Sony's MDR-FM7 portable stereo headphone radio.

FOR BABYSITTING, HOME SECURITY, FOR MONITORING THE SICK ROOM

COMPLETELY PORTABLE STATIC FREE

The Baby-sitter lets you keep "an ear" on your children while doing anything from laundry in the basement... to sleeping upstairs... to sitting outside—anywhere there is an electric outlet. Just plug the transmitter into an outlet in the room you wish to monitor and the receiver into an outlet in any other room in the home, office or apartment. It's voice activated! You receive no annoying static and it's completely silent when there is no sound in the room being monitored.

Lets you hear intruders, the phone, the baby crying, the sick in need or any other sounds you wish to monitor. You can mount it easily on the wall or lay it on a table. Now you can listen while you're somewhere else. UL approved.

and as a city police officer prior to his becoming a deputy sheriff in the 1970s, was convicted and sentenced to 10 years' probation in connection with the theft of furniture from the Knorr Furniture Co. warehouse while he was a deputy in 1982.

Former deputy gets probation

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Unaware that he had a prior felony theft conviction, jurors Thursday night sentenced former Midland County deputy sheriff Joe Brownlee to 10 years' probation in connection with the 1982 disappearance of $6,500 worth of furniture from the Knorr Furniture Co.

The sentence came after more than four hours of deliberations and capped a three-day trial that found Brownlee guilty of stealing expensive Drexel-Heritage furniture from the Knorr warehouse, which he patrolled while he was employed as a deputy.

Company officials testified that furniture had been removed from the warehouse over a period of time but that they were unable to find out how it was stolen.

Brownlee maintained his innocence throughout the trial, claiming he purchased freight-damaged Drexel-Heritage furniture from a Lubbock flea market at prices "three or four times" cheaper than what Knorr's charged.

According to testimony, he would then sell the furniture at cost to friends and colleagues — none of whom suspected it might have been stolen — as a gesture of "good will."

Brownlee could have been sentenced to a maximum of 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine for the third-degree felony.

Pilots plead guilty in marijuana case

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The pilots who were accused of flying about 900 pounds of marijuana into Midland in their twin-engine aircraft on Nov. 8 pleaded guilty to importing marijuana from Mexico.

Also, a 39-year-old man who escaped from federal custody in the Midland City Jail in 1981 pleaded guilty to breaking out of jail. In addition, an Odessa man was sentenced to three 1-year prison terms for failing to file income tax returns and failing to pay $100,000 due the Internal Revenue Service.

The pilots, Jerry Brian Macoy, 43, Walnut Creek, Calif., and George B. Bivens, 36, of Mount Vernon, Wash., are to be sentenced by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton in the week of Jan. 30 or on Feb. 27. Each could be sentenced to five years in prison and fined $15,000.

"They (law enforcement officers) caught me with the marijuana in the airplane," Macoy told Bunton. "and I'm guilty." Macoy owns Western Jet, an aircraft management and charter company in California.

Both men, who have previous drug-related convictions, are being held in the Midland City Jail in lieu of each posting $500,000 in bail. Their bail had been set at $1 million each, but U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith in late December cut the bail in half.

The escapee, William Anthony "Tony" Dugan Jr., pleaded guilty to escape from the jail on June 10, 1981. Three other inmates who bolted with Dugan already have been sentenced, as those who helped them escape. "I didn't care for them at all," Bunton said. "They were bad people."

Dugan, who is to be sentenced Jan. 30, is to be tried on a marijuana charge in Pecos on Jan. 23. Dugan, a former Texas Department of Corrections inmate, had been taken out of state prison on a bench warrant to be tried on the marijuana charge.

"What do you think I ought to do, Mr. Dugan," the judge asked him. "You escaped from jail."

Bankruptcy judge gives debtors some relief

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Joseph Elliott, U.S. Bankruptcy Court judge, spells relief.

On Thursday, he granted relief from debts to a dozen Midland-Odessa couples and individuals who had filed for personal bankruptcy under Chapter 7 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code. He discharged many of their old debts.

The judge did not fault them. "I am aware of the economic situation of this area and the country," Elliott said, "and understand and believe that no one would be here today if it weren't a matter of last resort."

In noting that the bankruptcy petitioners had undergone "stressful times," Elliott said he was "not accusing anyone of irresponsibility in any way, shape or form."

This hopefully will be for you the light at the end of the tunnel. You will have received a great source of relief and release, and a fresh start."

The federal judge exhorted them to "go out and take every advantage" of their new found relief.

Those filing for personal bankruptcy were allowed to keep certain properties, which are exempt from sale by the government in order to satisfy at least some of the debts. Exempt are the homestead, automobiles, wearing apparel, furniture, and tools of trade. "Those are necessary items in order to achieve a fresh start."

Clerk oversees Ector Countians from cradle to grave

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — She oversees Ector Countians from the cradle to the grave.

She's Lucille Wolz, the affable, 57-year-old Ector County clerk who has lived in Odessa long enough to see it transformed from a hamlet to a metropolitan area.

It's known as "progress," a concept Mrs. Wolz favors but one which she wishes would not hinder the friendly atmosphere of a small town.

"I'm glad to see the progress we've made," she said, "but you would like to see some things as they were — the close friendship ties. We're doing a lot of busywork, so we don't have that close tie with friends that we did have then. When we first married (in 1949) we visited our friends in each other's home. But we feel like we don't do that now. But I'm for progress — I'm sure 10 years from now I'll see things that I'll be glad happened."

Mrs. Wolz grew up on a farm in Nolan County and moved with her family to Odessa as an 11-year-old in 1937. But the move was not made without overcoming the chiding of her grandparents.

"They were very upset that we were coming," she remembered. "I could hear them say, 'They're taking those babies off to that terrible place.' So they really thought we were moving to a wild and woolly area of Texas."

Their first home when they arrived in Odessa was a tent and adjoining trailer at 12th and Grandview, a teeming downtown location today. At that time, she recalled, she would walk with her family to First Baptist Church down Grandview and, with one exception, only residences lined the street.

Her future husband, meanwhile, found himself stationed at Midland Army Air Base during World War II. He would walk to the gate along Highway 80 and catch rides into Odessa, where he met Mrs. Wolz at church. They were married while he was stationed at the base, and when he returned from the service in 1949 they purchased a house in Odessa.

At that time, just 35 years ago, "there was nothing beyond East County Road," she noted. "That's hard for me to believe."

That same year Mrs. Wolz, pursuing her Christian obligations, took a job as First Baptist Church secretary — a position she held until being hired as a deputy county clerk in 1956. But it was when the then-county clerk decided in 1973 to retire that Mrs. Wolz first looked toward an elective office.

"She called me in and said that she was going to retire and that she would like for me to run for the job," she said. "Well, my first thought was, it's a big job, and I don't know if I would want that or not. But I told her I would think about it and discuss it with my family."

Her husband and two sons gave her the full-steam-ahead sign, and she filed for the office.

Mrs. Wolz took the Democratic Primary and then defeated her Republican opponent to garner the job, but it was not before she and her friends had undertaken a lot of one-to-one contact with voters.

"All the time I was running, I was thinking, 'I've got to do this on a personal basis. I'm not going to spend a lot of money, because if I'm going to be out of work Dec. 31st I don't want to be in debt. My friends got out and told their friends, and we did it on a personal basis.'"

She met, with no opposition her next two terms, and now is looking ahead to perhaps a fourth term. "We never know what the future holds...but if my health is good, I might as well work. I enjoy working. I'm not sure I could settle down to be at home because I've worked all my life."

As county clerk, it is persons' lives around which her work revolves.

"We touch more individual lives than any other office," she explained. "We record their birth certificates, we record their land transactions, their honorable discharges if they're in the service, we issue their marriage licenses, we issue their children's birth certificates, and then finally at the end we issue their death certificates and then probate their wills."

Additionally, Mrs. Wolz' office handles records from five courts — civil, criminal, probate, commissioners and juvenile — as well as 38 different types of records.

But Mrs. Wolz' lifeblood flows fastest in her Christian work.

"My greatest interest is my church," said the longtime Sunday School teacher. "If I have a conflict in a meeting between the church and something else, the church comes first."

Having grown up in the church, Mrs. Wolz always was aware that family life should revolve around Christianity.

"We just always felt church is the place to be for raising a family, and it proved good to us. We used to say, 'we don't send our children, we go with them, and then when they're grown up maybe we won't. We won't have to set a good example.' But we found that with our children gone and in our senior years the church means as much to us as it did when we had a family — it's the satisfaction."

Residents take Topsy Taxi for free ride

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

More than 100 calls from area residents who needed solid wheels to get their spinning heads rolling home were made to Topsy Taxi during the holiday season.

According to George Bakke, president of KNFM/KMND radio, sponsor of the service for those who think they are too drunk to drive, 110 calls were made between Dec. 20 and Jan. 2.

The calls, which are made to the hotline number — 561-8336 — and are answered by the station's disc jockeys 24-hours a day, were evenly made from Odessa and Midland, Bakke said. Most calls came from local restaurants and bars.

A total of 733 calls were made since May, when Topsy Taxi went into effect.

Organized to keep drunk drivers off the road, Topsy Taxi provides free cab rides home from restaurants and lounges for those who think they shouldn't get behind the wheel. It has been endorsed by law enforcement and alcoholism prevention agencies as well as many local eating and drinking establishments. Employees of the radio station who receive the calls contact cabs. The customer receives a ride home at no cost.

Five calls were made to the hotline number in May, 23 in June, 52 in July, 71 in August and 41 in September.

In October, the numbers increased with 183 phone calls recorded, 141 in November and 217 in December.

Some 250,000 people have died in alcohol-related car accidents in the past decade, according to statistics from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and the National Safety Council. Another 650,000 persons are injured each year, with 125,000 suffering permanent injuries.

On an average weekend night, one of every 10 drivers is legally impaired or drunk. When drinkers are at the presumed level of intoxication, the risk of causing an accident is six times greater than those for non-drinkers, according to the statistics, which were compiled by MADD, Mothers Against Drunk Drivers.

Alcohol-related traffic accidents are the leading cause of death for Americans between 16 and 24 years of age. That same age group causes 44 percent of all fatal accidents at night involving alcohol, although it comprises only 22 percent of the total licensed population and 24 percent of the total vehicle miles traveled by all licensed drivers.

Bluegrass band to play with symphony

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Critic

"Sounds lovely," Raymond K. McLain tells Dr. Thomas Hohstadt at the close of Thursday's rehearsal.

"Well, we are really having fun playing this," Hohstadt replies. Applause from the players in the Midland-Odessa Symphony registers their agreement.

They're certain to have company when the house lights go on at Odessa's Permian High School Auditorium following the symphony's fourth subscription concert tonight. The performance, which features the McLain Family Band as guest artists, will be repeated in Midland Saturday at 8 p.m. at Lee High School. Single admission tickets will be sold at the door.

Thursday night was the only rehearsal the McLain Family had with the symphony. The anticipatory sense of excitement felt by the symphony players upon entering the uncharted ground of bluegrass and orchestra filled the auditorium. During the rehearsal, symphony musicians smiled in spite of themselves.

Bluegrass is far removed from what a symphony orchestra is expected to play, but Phillip Rhodes' "Concerto for Bluegrass Band and Orchestra," written for the McLain Family Band, blends the two into a pleasurable foot-tapping experience.

COMMISSIONED By grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Kentucky Arts Commission, "Concerto for Bluegrass Band and Orchestra," was first performed Dec. 21, 1974, by the Bluegrass players Michael McLain, from left, Raymond W. McLain, Michael Riopel, Ruth McLain Riopel, Raymond K. McLain and Nancy Ann McLain, will be entertaining local audiences tonight and Saturday when the McLain Family Band performs with the Midland-Odessa Symphony today at 8 p.m. at Odessa's Permian High and Saturday at 8 p.m. at Midland's Lee High.

McLain Family Band and the Louisville Orchestra, directed by Jorge Mester. Since that time, the work has been performed by orchestras from Anchorage to Atlanta.

"One of the nice things about it is that it allows us to be a bluegrass band, and it allows the orchestra to be a symphony orchestra," McLain Sr. said Thursday prior to the rehearsal. "They don't play down to us, and they don't have just an accompaniment with lots of long notes. There are quite a few folk themes that some people will recognize such as 'Cripple Creek.'"

The McLain Family Band has played this piece at least 75 times, McLain Sr. said. "It has had more performances than any other work that they (NEA) commissioned."

Impressive credentials for a group that began playing at home for their own entertainment in Berea, Ky. The group's name means just what it says. Four of the performers are McLain Sr.'s children, one is his son-in-law.

"We began playing about 16 years ago just in our living room because we lived, at that time, in a place in eastern Kentucky which was 150 miles from the nearest television station," McLain said. "Bluegrass music is strong there, and we became a bluegrass band."

WHEN ASKED HOW they began performing professionally, McLain Sr. laughed as he replied, "That's a good question. If we had to do it again, I wouldn't begin to know how."

"It is just a matter of responding to invitations. The first invitation came from our local PTA. Then I think we played a Christmas program for Uncle Charlie's Meat Packing Company in Hazard. One thing leads to another."

"We did perform for the music council of the National Endowment for the Arts pretty early in our career, and Gian-Carlo Menotti, who happened to be on that board, invited us, on the spot, to Italy to perform at his Spoleto Festival of Two Worlds. That led to our overseas touring."

Since then the McLain Family has toured 62 foreign countries in nine tours in addition to performing in 49 states.

"We love doing that. It's wonderful to be in other parts of the world, but it's particularly nice to take some U.S. culture that is positive and enjoyable to foreign countries. When you're there though, it doesn't seem to be so foreign. It's not until you get home and look at the pictures that you realize really where you've been."

THE OPPORTUNITY for the McLain Family Band to perform for NEA happened when NEA's music council accepted an invitation to hold a meeting at Berea College where McLain Sr. was a member of the faculty. He taught "A Survey of Appalachian Music."

"All of these important musicians like Rise Stevens, Van Cliburn and Menotti came to Berea. We played after supper for them one night." After hearing the McLain Family Band Thursday, there's little doubt that occasion was anything but a delightful dessert for those music lovers. The McLains' spontaneous, fluid style makes them appear as home onstage as they are in their own living room.

None of the members reads music. When Raymond W. McLain played the fiddle cadenza during the third movement of Rhodes' concerto Thursday, many of the string players cast him an appreciative look. The work is, as McLain Sr. said, "a nice cross-cultural experience."

The Rhodes concerto isn't the only number the McLain Family Band is playing. In addition, the group will perform a gospel song with the symphony, "Bound for Glory," written by Ruth McLain Riopel. The group will also play two pieces without the orchestra. One is a banjo duet written by young Raymond (who is no longer the youngest Raymond McLain). His position has been preempted by his 7-month-old son, Raymond Calico, who is still not the youngest McLain on tour. That honor goes to 3½-month-old Rebecca Riopel.

BEFORE THE McLains come onstage, the symphony will have already set the mood for its audience.

"I wanted to have the same theme for the whole evening," Hohstadt said. "Since the soloists play bluegrass or mountain music, we are opening with 'Cindy,' the first movement of a larger suite, 'Kentucky Mountain Portrait.'"

Hohstadt admitted it may be stretching it to say the other work performed is mountain music, but "Harold in Italy" is wandering through the mountains of Italy and French composer Louis Hector Berlioz (1803-1869) was quite an outdoorsman. "I believe he would be very sympathetic to what we're doing, putting his piece on the same program with bluegrass," Hohstadt said.

The viola solo in "Harold in Italy" is being played by Sally Chisholm, symphony player and member of the Midland-based Thouvenel String Quartet.

After listening during rehearsal to the McLains and Miss Chisholm, it's more than an even bet symphony goes will walk away from this one with a lighter step than when they came, carrying the memory of this unique musical offering with them.

"Since I've never sat behind a podium (as a judge), I wouldn't know how to advise you," said Dugan.

Dugan said he had gotten into trouble with the law "at a time when I got bored with my life and was looking for some excitement."

Dugan said he escaped from jail because he didn't want to return to prison and to "fighting and chopping cotton."

Buntun told Dugan that he could be sentenced up to five years for the escape offense.

Buntun said that Dugan's family had been supportive of him despite his errant behavior. Buntun said that impressed him, as "most families" in similar cases "are going to let you fend for yourself."

"I don't know why," Buntun said. "Obviously, there's a lot more to you."

Buntun said he would recommend that Dugan serve the remaining portion of his state sentence in federal prison, so that he could do "something other than chopping cotton and fighting. I imagine you've had enough of that."

Richard Dennard, a 35-year owner of an Odessa car wash and former college football player, was sentenced to three-year prison terms for failing to file employee income tax returns from 1978 to 1980.

"I made a mistake," he told the judge. "I didn't have the money. The company was floundering. I used the money to keep the company afloat."

Back then, Dennard said he was managing a car wash, Buggy Wash, owned by his father and was responsible for the business. Since then, Dennard said he owns his own car wash business.

His attorney, Steve Brannon of Odessa, said Dennard's father, Ed Dennard, had "continued to take money from the company. He took money out of the business, as did Mr. Dennard," he said.

Buggy Wash was sold in 1983, Brannon said, and the father "made money from the business."

The defense attorney said the father and his attorney, Walter Wilson, of Odessa had agreed to pay $40,000 toward the $100,000 the son owes the IRS, but had not.

Judge allows Gibson to cancel leases, contracts with 16 creditors

From Staff Reports

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Joseph Elliott has allowed Gibson Distributing Co. to cancel leases and contracts with 16 creditors who failed to appear in court this week in Gibson's hearings on reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws.

None of the creditors appeared in court to contest Gibson's motions to sever the agreements.

Gibson, an Odessa-based grocery and merchandise discount chain, asked the U.S. Bankruptcy Court to protect it from creditors while Gibson seeks to reorganize its business.

under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

The company owes $12.3 million to two secured creditors, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., as receiver for the defunct First National Bank of Midland and a Chicago bank. Gibson is indebted $10 million to approximately 1,600 unsecured creditors.

Gibson, which filed for bankruptcy in August, in October closed six of its 11 stores. Liquidated were stores in El Paso, San Angelo, Big Spring and Plainview. Gibson stores in Midland and Odessa remained open.

Off-duty Odessa officers help arrest two suspects

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Two off-duty Odessa police officers spotted and aided in the arrest of suspects in an aggravated robbery, which had been reported minutes earlier Thursday afternoon, at the Revco Discount Drug Center at 1523 E. 8th Street in Odessa.

Two minutes after police had received a report of a robbery at the drugstore, Officers Shara and Alan Woods saw two people running in the 1000 block of N. Grandview. After watching the suspects enter an auto parts store, the officers called for backup and arrested two men now held in Ector County Jail.

Officers carry their police radios even when off duty, enabling the Woods to be aware of the incident and participate in the apprehension of the suspects, police said.

The suspects reportedly made off with $78 from the drugstore at 1:34 p.m. Thursday after one of them walked into the store with his hand in his pocket and handed the clerk a note saying she was being robbed.

After filling a paper sack with the money, the clerk, Edwige Rodriguez, watched the man run east from the store. The clerk identified this suspect when the arresting officers returned the two men to the scene.

Already arraigned is Jerry Maurice Wilson, 44, of Odessa on charges of aggravated robbery. The other suspect's name is being withheld pending arraignment on three counts of aggravated robbery.

The unnamed 31-year-old suspect listed as a resident of Hollywood, Cal., is also thought to be the man responsible for unsolved robberies that occurred during the past week at a local Win-Hells Donuts store and Venture Food at 310 Custer in Odessa, police said.

Wilson, allegedly the look out in the Revco robbery, is in jail on $10,000 bond set by Municipal Judge Bob Garcia.

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed a 40-foot mobile home at the Westgate Mobile Home Park on County Road 1224 about 10:45 a.m. Thursday.

The cause of the blaze is under investigation by the city fire marshal's office. The home belonged to Darrell Thien.

Former deputy gets 10 years' probation

Court observers believe he might have received a prison sentence instead of probation if jurors had been told of his conviction and three-year sentence last spring in an unrelated, 1982 auto theft case. But that conviction is being appealed and is not considered a final one.

By law, therefore, jurors could not be informed of the conviction prior to their deliberations in the sentencing phase of the furniture theft trial. In effect, Brownlee technically is not guilty of a previous felony but in fact has been convicted of one.

In arguing for conviction and a prison sentence in the furniture case, Assistant District Attorneys Janet Copeland and Mike Williams pointed to Brownlee's law enforcement career, which included his being a Department of Public Safety trooper and a Midland police officer before he joined the sheriff's department in the 1970s.

He made a mockery of the system of which he was a part," said Williams.

Earlier, Copeland told the seven-man, five-woman jury: "He was an employee of the sheriff's department and embarrassed everyone there. He patrolled the (warehouse) as a peace officer and nobody would suspect him."

Defense attorney Homer "Woody" Leverett Jr., Brownlee's wife and a string of character witnesses sought probation for the 41-year-old father of two girls.

"To punish him by putting him in the penitentiary is to punish three innocent people," said Leverett. "Everybody deserves a second chance."

"I ask you to temper justice with mercy. Joe will have to live with this for the rest of his life."

Copeland countered by saying, "As a peace officer, he had the public trust. He violated that trust. You will set the standards for peace officers in this community. Don't feel guilty about his wife and children. He did this to them."

Formal imposition of the probation sentence was to take place in State District Judge Pat Baskin's court at 11:30 a.m. today.

Jurors were not available for comment by press time.

Indebtedness on the homestead is not absolved in bankruptcy, he noted. If the property is owned outright, it cannot be repossessed and sold to pay bills, he said.

However, Elliott said if anyone is buying a house, "You must continue to pay for the property if you wish to keep it." If bankruptcy were to wipe out house debts, he said, "Why, there would be a line from here to the airport, and I would be first in line."

Among the petitioners, only three couples opted to "reaffirm" — agreed to pay off — any of the old debts instead of getting rid of them. Elliott said the petitioners may do that "if you feel you have a moral obligation to someone...or maybe you want to pay a debt to maintain a line of credit with a merchant."

Two couples agreed to pay off debts to Montgomery Ward & Co., and a third reaffirmed indebtedness on a piano and a home mortgage.

Elliott, who is based in San Antonio, seat of the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the federal court system's Western District of Texas, cautioned the petitioners not to fall into the other economic binds which again might call for bankruptcy.

"You need to make sure that you keep your (financial) slate clean," he said, to avoid another economic quagmire.

U.S. statutes only permit a person to file for bankruptcy once every seven years.

"The only people who will care will be your creditors," Elliott told them if they ever again were to get into bankruptcy, "and I don't think they will be very sympathetic."

The judge offered the petitioners tips to stay financially solvent:

—Balance checking accounts each month.

—Set a family budget that is "reasonable and feasible" and get all the family members involved.

—Live within your budget.

—Keep a savings account and "deposit something regularly every month."

—Live on a cash basis.

"This is certainly a novel idea in today's economy," the judge said. "It simply means life without plastic; life without credit cards."

Sadie Kendall, founder and owner of Kendall Cheese Co. in Atascadero, Calif., shows a tray of Chevreffeulle, a Brie-like goat cheese produced by her company. At right the illustration from the package of one of her cheeses, which have become increasingly popular with top-of-the-line restaurants on the West Coast.

'Cheesy' hobby becomes booming business

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

ATASCADERO, Calif. — L'Ermitage, Trumps, La Toque and other top-of-the-line restaurants in Los Angeles snap up as much of Sadie Kendall's goat cheese as they can get.

Julia Child was so impressed after tasting the cheese that she filmed one of her television programs at Kendall Cheese Co. here, about 15 miles north of San Luis Obispo on Highway 1.

It all started as a hobby for Kendall, 38. While finishing her philosophy degree at California State University, Northridge, in Los Angeles, Kendall started raising goats 10 years ago at her home in Los Angeles' San Fernando Valley.

"I have always been into foods and raised the goats to make cheese," she said. "Goat cheese is worshipped in France. The French make hundreds of varieties of goat cheese. But in America you can count on one hand commercial goat cheese companies — all small. It is virtually unheard of here."

Americans' flirtation with goat cheese began several years ago with the rise in popularity of feta cheese, a goat cheese from Greece that is often eaten cold with crusty bread and in salads.

More recently, the popularity of goat cheese got a push in Berkeley, Calif., at Chez Panisse restaurant. Alice Waters, owner and chef of this culinary cutting edge, began experimenting with baked goat cheese and soon became well known for her baked goat cheese and garden salad.

As the Chez Panisse style of cooking began to spread and increase in popularity, the demand for goat cheese also grew.

Kendall started her goat-cheese venture by making the cheese for friends and for her husband, Jeff Sicha, a philosophy professor, author, Rhodes scholar and owner of Ridgeview Publishing Co.

It was Sicha's publishing profits (from philosophy books and now cheese-making books, too) that launched her into the commercial goat-cheese business in 1981.

Sales this year will be more than $60,000, Kendall says, and next year are expected to top $100,000. Her herd of 100 goats is producing 200 pounds of cheese a week.

Among the several varieties Kendall makes are Chevreffeulle, a soft-ripening, Brie-like cheese, which is her most expensive and retails for $5 to $7 for an 8-ounce round, and Chevre Frais (fresh goat cheese), the least expensive, which retails for $3 to $4 for 6 ounces.

There is pure goat Camembert, Chevredux, 50 percent goat and 50 percent cow; Petit Chevre, and Chevre Sec, a dry cheese. She also makes Creme Fraiche, the French version of sour cream, which is sweeter and less acidic than the conventional variety.

Kendall is the cheese maker. "It is a labor-intensive process. I work 70 to 80 hours a week and love every minute," she said.

"I was about to enroll in law school and at the 11th hour I decided, no, I want to be a full-time cheese maker. I increased my herd from eight to 100 goats and will double its size next year. So here I am."

Baby fights to survive rare protein disease

By LYNN SMITH
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

GLENDORA, Calif. — Doctors have tried chemical formulas, intravenous feedings and pureed fruits and vegetables. But no one is sure what will make 7-month-old Ami Sheather survive.

Only 75 cases worldwide, three in California, have ever been recorded of the metabolic disorder propionic acidemia — that makes it difficult for her to digest needed amounts of life-sustaining protein.

There is no treatment for the disease and Ami's case is particularly severe. "I've almost lost her twice now," said her mother, Debra Sheather, 26. In an acidotic seizure, Ami has vomited whatever she's been fed. Or, before phenobarbital controlled the seizures, she stared into space, turned a dusty blue or slept too long.

LAST OCTOBER, after she hadn't awakened for a week and a half, her mother made funeral arrangements on the advice of hospital staff. "But with the Lord's help, she pulled through and slowly got better and better," she said.

Ami, who weighs only 13 pounds, 2 ounces, is stable for now, said Jun Ozumi, pediatrician in medical genetics at Children's Hospital of Los Angeles where Ami has spent most of her life. Children with propionic acidemia who survive past one year somehow start adjusting to their environment, he said. One child who spent her first three years in Children's Hospital with the disease is now doing fine living on vegetarian food, he said. Another victim, now 18, has just graduated from high school.

But of 50 victims recently studied, none survived past a few years, he said. Ozumi declined to specify Ami's life expectancy, but said her prognosis is "not too good." She also has a lesion on her brain that will slow her development, although otherwise, she is like any other playful, teething infant, Sheather said.

Ami is Sheather's only child. The news of her condition was devastating. "These words (propionic acidemia) were new to me. When they told me she could die of this, I was very shaken up. She's my whole world."

At first, she wondered "Why me? Why didn't anybody tell me about these genes?" Ami's problem, a missing enzyme in the digestive system that digests protein, is genetic. Sheather said she found out she is missing half an enzyme and Ami's father is also missing half an enzyme. "The chances are one in 350,000 that you match up with a carrier."

FOR THE SHEATHERS, life became tough. In addition to an already unstable marriage, there were the pressures of precise routines for Ami's feeding and medication. At night Debra was getting up every hour to check on her child.

Sheather is now in the process of being divorced from Ami's father. Both her parents died within months of each other two years ago. With neither money nor transportation, she moved in with her brother and sister-in-law.

She must borrow a car for the 30-mile drive to the hospital. During the October crisis, she lived at the hospital, sleeping and showering there, for two months. Then, when she was allowed to bring Ami home, she still had to find transportation to take her back every other day for observation.

Friday, Ami was to have returned home, but started vomiting again and was not released. When she is allowed to come home, Sheather said, "I hope I won't have to take her back."

She was eating nearly one jar of fruit or vegetable baby food a day. But Ozumi is now trying to add donated breast milk to Ami's diet. "It might contain Factor X, something we don't know, that could help her grow and develop."

But now, there's another setback. Debra stopped breast-feeding Ami at one week, when the infant became ill with constant vomiting. What milk she can express now is not enough. The last month, they have relied on breast milk supplied by volunteers to the Children's Hospital through the Mothers Milk Bank of Orange County.

But now the supply of breast milk for Ami — as well as other sick or premature infants throughout Southern California — is threatened.

"I just gave out the last of our milk," said Roseanne Barr, one of two paid employees at the Santa Ana-based Mothers Milk Bank — one of only two community-supported milk banks in California.

Since it opened last April, the bank has collected 8,455 ounces of breast milk from 104 donors, mostly from Orange County. But it had not acquired a large enough backlog to offset the loss when breast-feeding mothers were too busy to donate over the holiday season, Barr said.

THE ORANGE COUNTY milk bank, which serves Southern California, may receive some milk from the Mothers Milk Bank in San Jose to solve the current shortage. But Barr said she is hoping to find more local volunteers quickly.

"There is a great need for breast milk," Ozumi said. "It's not as urgent as blood for a bleeding patient, but in terms of long-term management or health for the patient, it can be critical."

"Ami's case is very special. No one knows what's the best thing to use," Sheather said she believes the donated breast milk is crucial for Ami.

"Breast milk is the best thing a baby can have," she said. "I'm trying to get my own milk back, but it's hard. I get a little, but it's not enough for Ami to live on."

Despite Ami's recent improvement, there are still problems for her mother. Ami cannot receive the usual vaccines that infants receive and in order to prevent infections, she needs to watch closely who is around Ami. When she has to take her shopping, she goes at times when stores are less crowded.

"The first few years will be the hardest," she said. When she is sure Ami is stabilized, she hopes to return to work as a bookkeeper or secretary. "But I have to find someone dependable to watch her and train them to know the signs when she gets acidotic. She can die in a matter of hours."

"It's hard, but I manage. I'm happy with her because she's alive. When she smiles and puts out her arms, it's worth everything," she said. "And more."

Boy Scouts 'will fight' order to hire woman scoutmaster

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The Boy Scouts of America says it will fight an order requiring it to offer a scoutmaster's post to a 65-year-old grandmother, who a hearing officer called "well-qualified" due to her past as a "de facto scoutmaster."

Catherine Pollard, of Milford, the mother of two Eagle Scouts, has served periodically as an adult volunteer since 1953. She complained to the state Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities in 1976 after regional and national Boy Scout officials rejected her application for a scoutmaster position.

"The facts make it abundantly clear that the Quinipiac Council denied Catherine Pollard the position of scoutmaster solely because of her gender," hearing officer Helen Z. Pearl wrote in a decision released Wednesday.

The decision said Mrs. Pollard was "unusually well-qualified for the position" and noted she was "acting de facto scoutmaster" while Troop 13 in Milford was without one between 1972 and 1976.

But Michael Whittaker, a Boy

Scouts spokesman at national headquarters in Dallas, called the ruling "clearly erroneous" and said it would be appealed in Connecticut Superior Court.

"The decision clearly infringes on the fundamental American right of freedom of association whereby our government does not have the right to dictate how private membership organizations can carry out the purposes for which they are organized."

In addition, Whittaker said, "We feel the position of scoutmaster should be held by a male because boys at that age need a male role model."

The Boy Scouts allow women to hold any paid and most volunteer positions, with the exception of scoutmaster, assistant scoutmaster, Webelos leader and "lone counselor," a person who helps individual Boy Scouts not attached to a troop.

"I wasn't surprised," Mrs. Pollard said after the decision was released. "If you can give good leadership, it should be utilized, whether it's male or female leadership."

Rape victim suing former employer — U.S. Army

Hearst News Service

SEATTLE — When she took up the U.S. Army on its recruiting challenge to be all that you can be, Betty Ann Buckmiller, a Missourian now living here, didn't realize what it held in store for her.

The 26-year-old private, trained by the Army as a cartographer, was raped by two soldiers while she was on active duty in Fort Ord, Calif. 14 months ago.

The Army has since dismissed her claim for damages, citing a ruling that it is not liable for paying claims of people who suffer injuries "incident to service" and on active duty.

But now that she is out of the Army and being helped by attorney J. Byron Holcomb, Buckmiller hopes to win damages from the U.S. government.

"The military is going to have to take a serious look at how it handles rape victims," Holcomb said. "With increasing numbers of women enlisting, there's bound to be a problem."

Buckmiller was raped and beaten while confined alone to a Fort Ord barracks for disciplinary reasons in November 1982. Two soldiers, also confined, and who were on duty, climbed through a second-story window to reach her, said Holcomb.

In courts-martial last February, the Army sentenced Pfc. Xavier F. Burke and Spec. 4 Sidney Hashimoto Jr. to 40 years at hard labor and 20 years respectively in Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Now that his client is out of the Army, she might stand a better chance of winning damages, Holcomb said.

Buckmiller also is suing the Army for the way she was discharged. Shortly after serving as a witness in the courts-martial of Burke and Hashimoto last February, Buckmiller was discharged from the Army Feb. 23, but was not immediately told.

Instead, the Army ordered her to the Philippines Feb. 26. While her plane refueled in Guam, she was told she was discharged and ordered off, Holcomb said.

The Army took Buckmiller's military identification card and left her stranded without money or resources in Guam, he said. He said she lived hand-to-mouth for 30 days off the good graces of the American Red Cross and some friendly people before coming up with the money to return home.

"It was just negligence on the Army's part. One hand didn't know what the other was doing," he said.

Bands give backdrop interest

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We will soon be moving into a new condominium which has an open plan in the living room, dining room and kitchen.

We like light colors and have chosen a beige carpeting and probably will have off-white walls to start with. However, I'd like to do something interesting with the walls — something that will provide an interesting backdrop for our natural-tone contemporary furniture.

I don't want lots of print wallpaper and figured patterns because we like a quiet subdued feeling. But I don't want a dull look, either. Any ideas? W.V.

A. A graphic on your walls would provide some drama but still stay quietly in the background.

For example, you might paint your walls a medium taupe tone and then paint 6-inch horizontal bands of white, gray and rust around the walls. Repeat the bands vertically around doors to make the doors seem more important.

Q. I have an oak kitchen with cabinets in a light, almost white finish. I want to accessorize the kitchen with some color for walls, chairs and light fixtures. I have white cabinet tops and off-white vinyl floor.

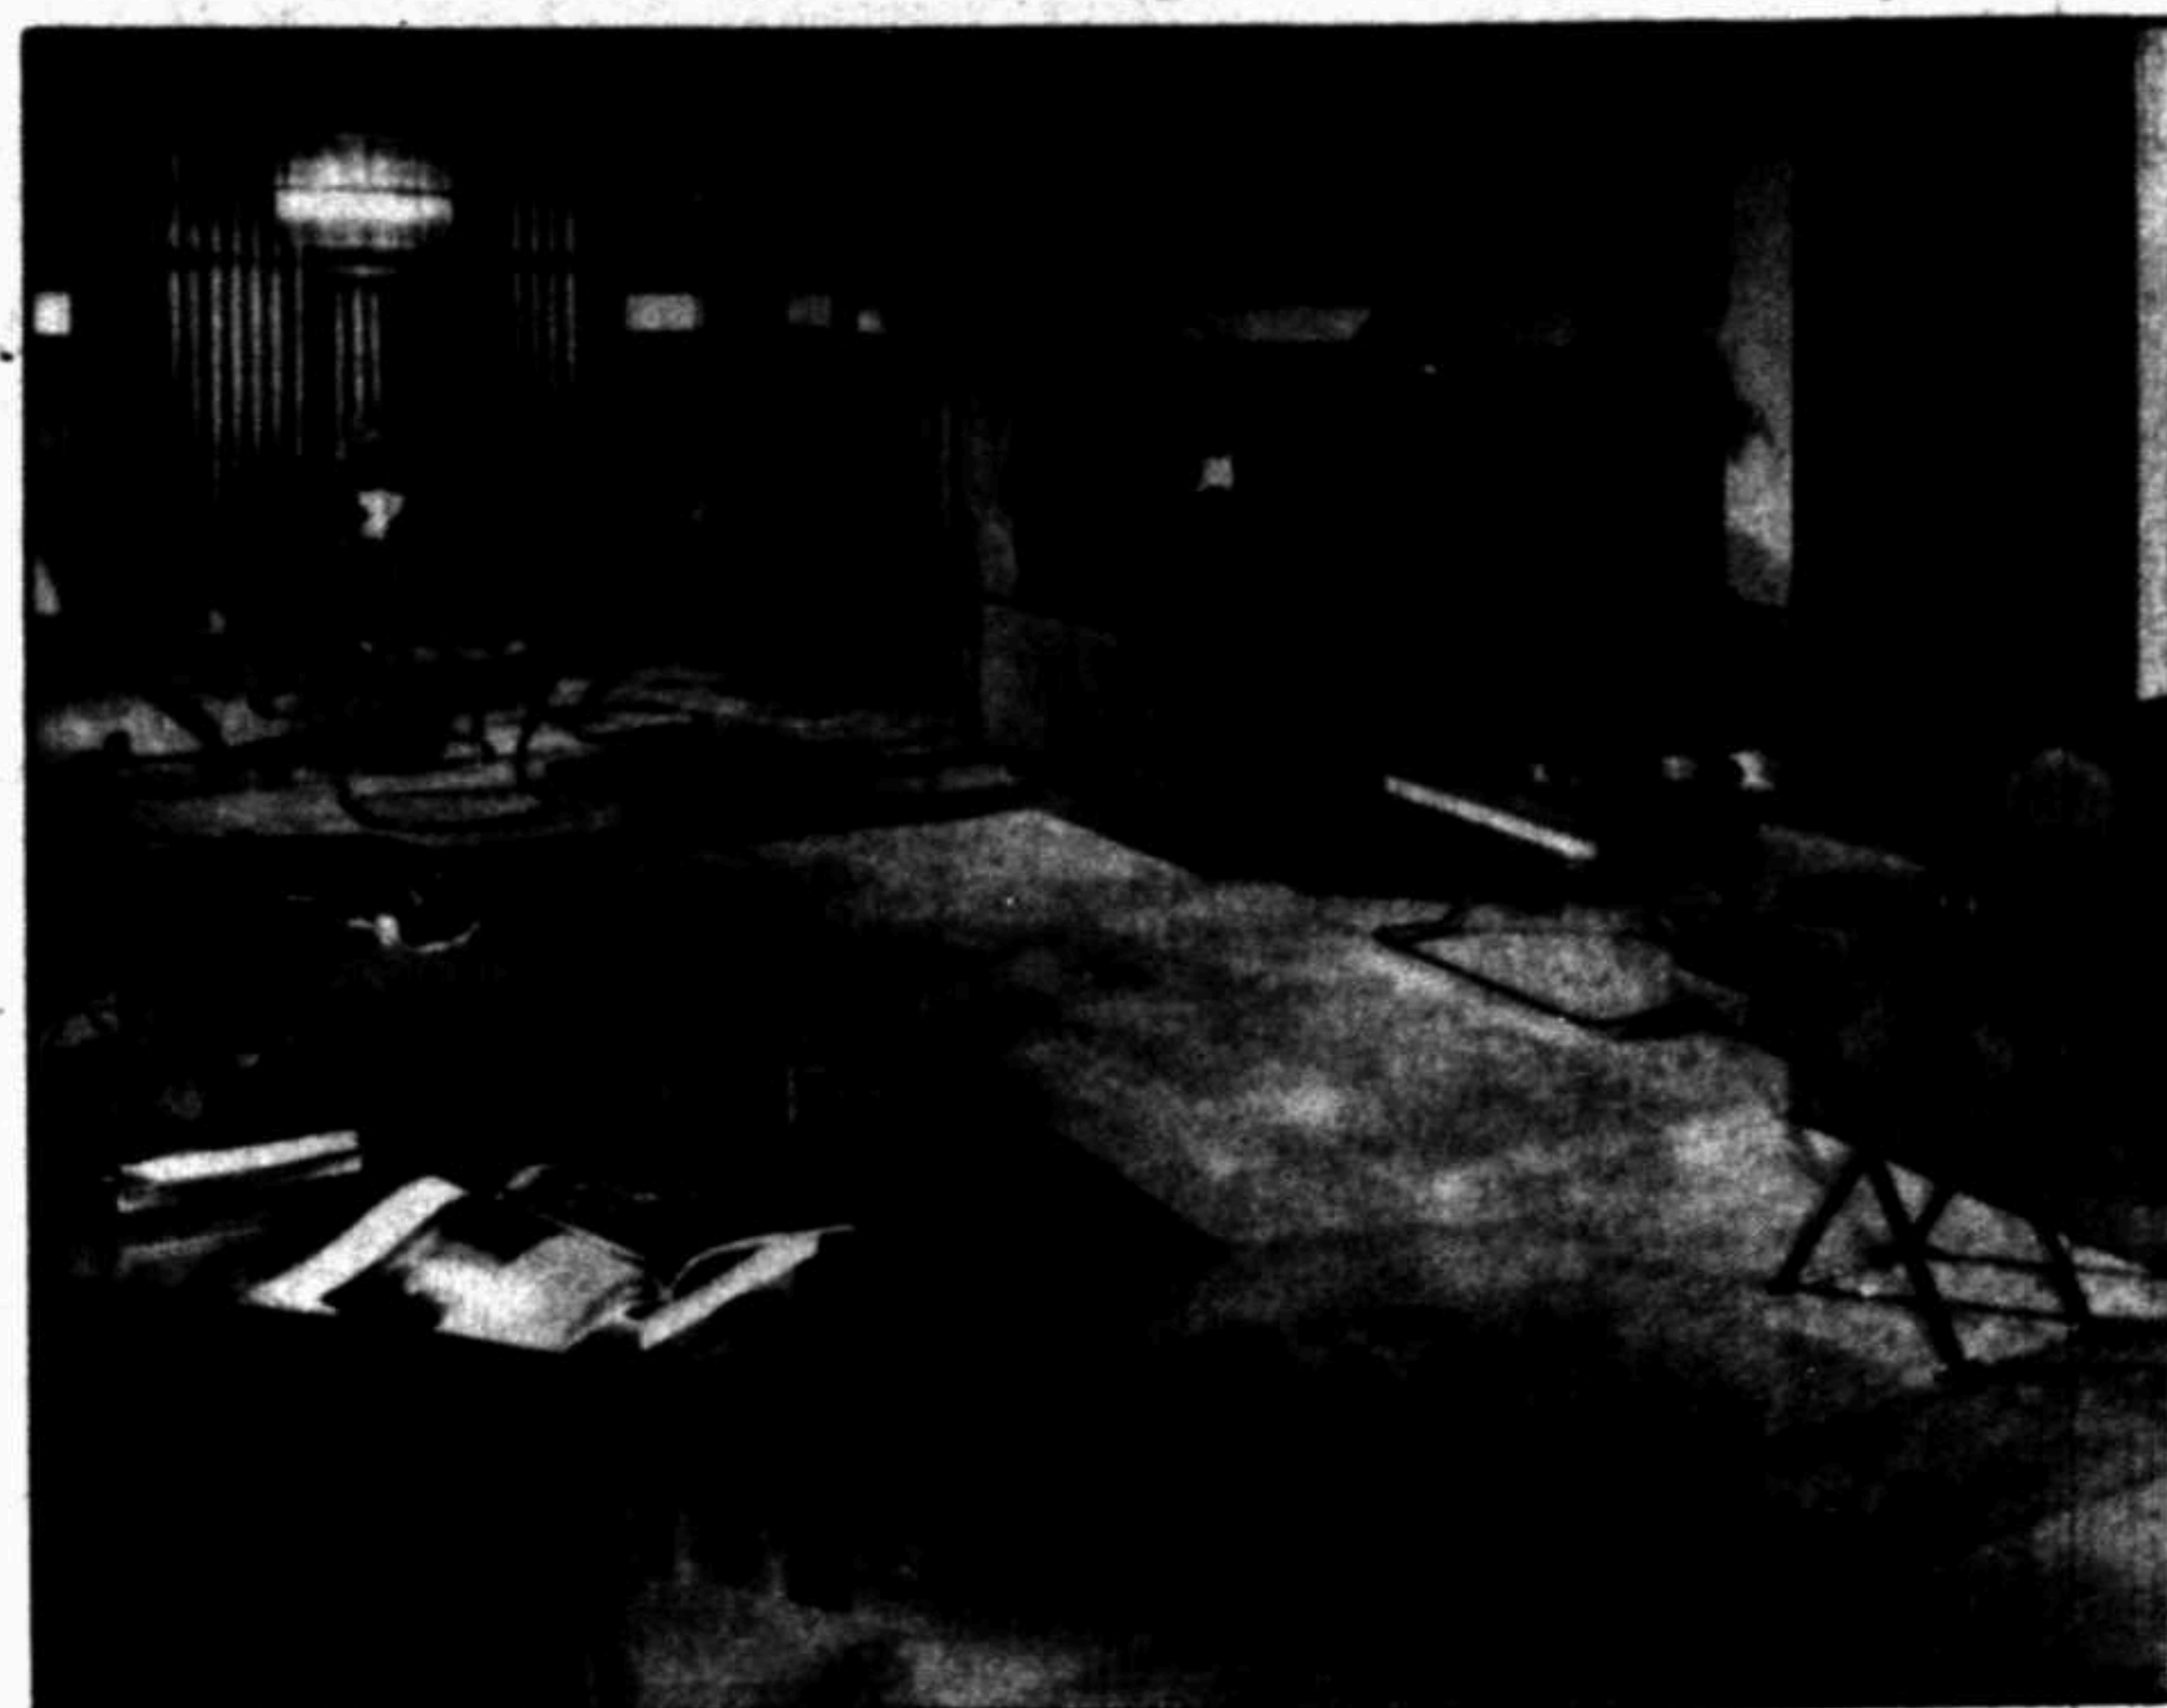

I want a very contemporary look. What would be good to create this feeling? L.S.

A. Any clear medium color you like would be great for the walls and for painted furniture as well — a Wedgwood blue or a soft olive green or even a warmer color such as mustard.

Accent with black — black lighting fixtures, black hardware on your kitchen cabinets and even a black table top or black leather seats on chrome chairs.

Q. Some time ago I remember reading about what interior planners figure is the minimum amount of space necessary between the edge of a dining table and the wall in a dining room. Do you have those dimensions?

I want to be able to walk around my diners to serve but I don't have very much room. What are considered minimums? K.N.

Bands in subtle shades of rust, gray and white form a graphic design on the walls of this living-dining room setting. Horizontal bands on the walls are repeated in the vertical treatment around the door. The carpeting is light beige and the walls are taupe.

A. A rule of thumb used by experts suggests that about 40 inches be allowed, 44 being better. A chair at the table takes up at least 20 inches and you need to be able to pull it out comfortably to sit down. And so 20 inches more isn't much when you are considering walking behind a seated diner.

If you are very cramped for space, have you considered pushing one end of a rectangular table up against the wall? This, of course, cuts down on the seating but can alleviate some space problems.

Q. We are doing some remodeling of a very old house. Our problem is our daughter's room.

It is only 8 feet wide by 10 feet long. It has two doors and two windows. There is only one place for the twin bed. Across from the bed is one wall for a small chest. But other than that, there is no place for a desk and toy box. Please suggest some ways to create more space in this postage-stamp room. R.B.P.

A. I'd eliminate the chest idea. Instead build drawers underneath the bed, and, in fact, build the bed high enough so that you will have lots of storage for clothes, toys and other treasures. Put the drawers on rollers so they are easy to manage.

Fit the child's closet carefully with shelves and double bars for clothes so you get the most out of the closet.

Along your one wall opposite the bed, consider a built-in shelf that can double as a desk and work space attached on adjustable brackets. Add narrower shelves above that can be moved up and down as your child grows. Underneath the shelves you can stash baskets for toys and other treasures.

Belt sander serves as 'workhorse'

By The Associated Press

The workhorse of the portable sanding field is the belt sander. It's the tool that is required when a lot of heavy-duty sanding is to be done. That includes what you might call "messy" sanding, such as removing paint, sanding rough surfaces smooth and covering large areas from which sizable amounts of wood must be taken off.

If you seldom do this type of work and have some other electric sanders, you can probably get by without the belt sander if you utilize coarse abrasives with the machines you have. But this kind of sanding places a heavy burden on the finishing sanders and should be undertaken only on rare occasions.

A belt sander uses a continuous belt, which runs over pulleys, drums or cylinders at both ends. Because the sanding apparatus is so powerful, it is important that you do not touch the belt to the work surface until the motor is in full operation. It is then lowered slowly so that the back part of the belt touches the wood first, after which the belt is quickly brought to a horizontal position as it is moved forward. Once the sander is in action, guide it back and forth in a sort of stroking action, applying very little pressure.

The machine should always be moving forward or backward. If it is left in one spot, even for a second, too much wood will be taken off in that area. When you are ready to call a halt, temporary or otherwise, lift the sander from the surface and then — and only then — turn off the motor. At the edges and corners, be extra careful that you don't take off too much wood, so lift it off the wood as you reach the edges. This will prevent it from tilting over the edges, which is the cause of excessive wood removal.

When you first begin using a belt sander, test it on scrap wood. After you have handled it a while, you will get the knack and have little trouble. In fact, those who use the belt sander a few times find they have such control of it that they can even use it as a finishing sander by using the proper abrasive paper. But this should not be attempted until you feel you have mastered the sander.

Because a belt sander is meant for tough work, it must be held firmly, which is why most of them have two handles. There are different ways to activate the motor, one of the most convenient being via trigger switches. It is even more convenient when the model also has a device which locks on the switch while you are doing prolonged sanding and then releases it when you press the trigger.

Changing a belt on this type of sander is easy. Sanding belts are spliced and have designations on them which show which way the belts should be installed so that the splices will not break.

Most belt sanders include instructions on how the sander can be mounted in an upside down fashion to perform as a stationary sander. Some come with dust bag attachments, which are most helpful, since belt sanders usually stir up a lot of dust particles that can be annoying to gather up. In any case, dust bag or not, it's a good idea to wear goggles.

Blankets can be source of material

Copley News Service

If there is any disadvantage to making something from a blanket, it would be the limited choice of color and design. Other than that, I can't think of any. One twin-size blanket will give you plenty of yardage for whatever you might want to make.

For example, this week I am making a poncho and matching vest from a blanket that cost $5.99. I selected a solid, dusty blue and will decorate it with some of the marvelous stitches on my new sewing machine.

For your "blanket project," choose a pattern that is roomy, has few seams and doesn't deal much with tiny detail.

My poncho pattern is very, very old (and no longer available), but there are several patterns for loose, roomy coats, capes and even skirts that would be great done from a blanket. For easy care, select a washable blanket. Pre-wash and dry it a couple of times before cutting out your pattern.

Grain line on most blankets will be difficult to determine. Fold blankets as you would your yardage fabric; smooth it out on the cutting board, lining up the two long edges. Do not worry about the two ends.

DEAR ABBY

Disrupted life may be saved

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Recently a problem occurred that I hope never occurs again, but in case it does, I want to know how to handle it.

A friend who lives 300 miles away started writing letters containing threats of suicide. She is divorced with a 6-year-old daughter. I became concerned, so I telephoned her. At first she seemed normal, then she became hysterical and started shouting things that made no sense at all. Among other things she threatened to kill her daughter and then commit suicide. Then she hung up.

I was terribly worried, so I called her back. She went into a rage again, vowing to kill her child and herself. Then she hung up again.

I tried frantically to reach her mother, her brothers and her ex-husband, who live near her, but I could reach no one. Finally I called my neighbor over who urged me to notify the police in my friend's town, so that's what I did.

The police picked her up and she was subsequently hospitalized. She's better now, but she has never forgiven me for "disrupting her life."

My husband says I was wrong to have called the police, but what were my alternatives? I couldn't take a chance on her carrying out her threat. If I had called a minister or psychiatrist, she wouldn't have let them in. How would you have handled it? — GOOD INTENTIONS

DEAR GOOD: Just as you did. It's sometimes necessary to "disrupt" a life in order to save it. I hope your friend comes to realize that you acted in her best interests. In the meantime, don't judge her too harshly. She could still be far from well.

DEAR ABBY: I am the grandmother of a very smart, strong-willed, 20-month-old boy who resides in a state in which seat belts for children under 4 years old became mandatory right after the first of the year.

No matter how tightly this child is strapped into his seat belt, he can pull a "Houdini act" and wiggle out of it. I have seen him do it twice, even while he was wearing a bulky winter coat!

He refuses to ride in a car unless he's sitting on someone's lap, and he absolutely will not stay buckled in any kind of seat belt. Spanking, bribing and reasoning have not worked. I am worried sick that his mother will have an accident while trying to force that child to stay buckled up. Please help. — MISSOURI GRANDMOTHER

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: There is an obvious power struggle going on between your daughter and her young son — and the boy is winning. Advise her to consult her local safety council (motor vehicle division) for some helpful suggestions. And if this precocious 20-month-old is already calling the signals, your daughter should take a course in parenting, or the boy will have her jumping through hoops before he's 3.

DEAR ABBY: I recently celebrated an "important" birthday and received many lovely cards.

A friend casually mentioned (on seeing the stack of cards) that I would be very tired by the time I had written thank-you notes for all those cards.

Abby, does a person have to write thank-you notes for cards? — WRITER'S CRAMP

DEAR CRAMP: No one "has to" acknowledge anything. But those with the best manners acknowledge everything — cards included.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Survey: Real estate market outlook good

Copley News Service

This year, 1984, will bring a revitalized real estate market — a good time to buy or sell a home or other real estate property.

That's the consensus in a recent survey conducted by Real Estate Research Corp. The survey questions were directed at 80 of the nation's leading real estate investors, lenders, developers and syndicators.

Over 76 percent of those interviewed expressed the opinion that 1984 will be a particularly good time to buy real estate. Almost as many (70 percent) think it will be a very good time to sell real property.

An underlying reason for the strengthening real estate market is the marked improvement in the overall economy, and the positive prognosis for future real estate activity. This puts consumer and investor confidence and action.

Another reason is the increasingly strong flow of funds becoming available for real estate financing. The most noteworthy sources of funds are syndications, savings and loan associations, and public and private pension funds.

Also, banks are becoming particularly eager to make construction loans because corporate borrowing is low.

While home sales will be up in 1984, the rental market will continue to weaken. The primary reason for the downward turn in rentals is the shrinkage of young households.

The number of households comprised of persons under age 30 declined by more than 450,000 last year. The shrinking trend is expected to continue this year.

Much of the decline is pegged to young couples doubling up, or maintaining residence with parents. The under-30 group comprises only 20 percent of all households, but they make up 37 percent of renter households.

Cashews can cause itching

It sounds nuts, but if poison ivy makes you itch, cashews also may, according to Family Circle.

It states that in Pennsylvania about 25 percent of the people who ate cashews bought from a Little League organization developed a poison ivy-like rash. The Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta found that the victims developed it one to eight days after eating the cashews; it lasted five to 21 days.

According to the CDC the cashew tree is part of the same plant family as poison ivy, poison oak and poison sumac. CDC investigators note that people sensitive to these plants may be equally sensitive to cashews or cashew nut oil.
