June 1 Marks Start of Ban On Shrimping

Austin.—The closed shrimping season for Texas Gulf waters will be the 45-day period from June 1 to April 15. The mandatory closed season, set by law, provides an additional growth period for the small shrimp moving out of the bays at that time.

During this period of rapid growth, a shrimp will triple its weight in 45 days. Since most of the shrimp are of a uniform age, the size of the shrimp at harvest can be regulated by seasonal adjustments.

Because the shrimp has a short life and each year's production is based on the success and survival of the tiny shrimp entering the bays in March of the same year, marine biologists keep a close watch on the progress of these juveniles in each of the Texas bays.

The law does provide some flexibility in adjusting the beginning date of the 45-day closed season. Last year after being advised by the biologists of a delay in growth of the young shrimp, the Parks and Wildlife Commission reacted quickly to set back the closure to conform with shrimp growth. This season, however, no adjustment seems warranted and the closed season will extend from June 1 through July 15.

The area concerned is a strip of the Gulf of Mexico ten and one-half miles wide extending along the Texas coastline from Lousiana to the Mexican Border.

The annual closure of the Gulf waters will have no effect on bait operations in the bays, where a plentiful supply of bait shrimp can be expected in most areas throughout the summer months.

Fisherman's Body Found On Beach

The body of Rene Padillo Perez, a 41-year-old Brownsville fisherman who fell overboard was reported missing from a boat on May 19, was discovered by the pilot of a private aircraft Monday afternoon on the beach at the north end of St. Joseph's Island.

The pilot contacted the Coast Guard at Port Aransas by radio, and in turn the Coast Guard called the sheriff's department here. Chief Deputy Sheriff T. A. Kilgore, of the Aransas County Sheriff's Department, and Deputy Constable Tommy Smith, of Port Aransas, who investigated, found the body, which was identified from papers contained in the clothing, on the Gulf Beach, about a mile south of Vinson's Slough.

Perez had been missing since he fell overboard on May 19 from the Aransas Pass shrimper Lyco XV, which was fishing off near Pass Cavallo at the time.

He was a resident of Brownsville and is survived by a wife and child in that city and a brother in San Antonio.

Justice of the Peace G. D. Johnson conducted the inquest.

Nets Are Banned On Local Beaches

A law just passed by our State Legislature, which became effective on May 17, bans nets, trotlines and crab traps in the Rockport recreational area. This area included all of Little Bay and the water area of Aransas Bay within one-half mile of the following line, from Hail Point on the Lamar Peninsula, then direct to the eastern end of Goose Island, then along the southern shore of Goose Island, then along the causeway between Lamar Peninsula and Live Oak Peninsula, then along the eastern shore of Live Oak Peninsula past the town of Fulton, past Nine Mile Point, past the city of Rockport at the east end of Talley Island. This law also bans netting, trotlines and crab traps within 1,000 feet of the causeway between Lamar Peninsula and Live Oak Peninsula. Minnow seines, not exceeding 20 feet in length, may be used for taking bait only in the described area.

While fish netting, trotlines, and crab traps are absolutely outlawed by the legislature in this recreational area, the same law confers on the Parks and Wildlife Commission regulatory responsibility over the taking of wildlife resources in the balance of Aransas County.

This law was sponsored by the Rockport Sportsmen Conservation Association and others in this area. Many discussions were held during the time the bill was pending in the legislature and not only the amateur fishermen, but the commercial fishermen's organization took part in discussions of the provisions of the bill.

While all fishermen are optimistic over prospects of more fish, resulting from the conservation measures afforded by this law, sponsors point out that all businesses will benefit directly or indirectly due to the increased number of visitors being attracted to a better fishing area.

POST OFFICE TO BE CLOSED

The Post Office will be closed Monday, May 31, in observance of Memorial Day. There will be no city delivery service or Star Route delivery. Delivery will be limited to distribution to the post office boxes and special delivery and perishable mail.

Morrison Receives CP&L Scholarship

Hugh Martin Morrison, who graduates this year, has been notified by Dr. C. Jernigan, president of Texas A&I College that the scholarship selection committee of that institution has awarded Morrison one of the Central Power and Light scholarships in business administration for the 1965-66 school year.

In Dr. Jernigan's letter he says:

"Three hundred dollars will be available to you in the business office at the time of registration for the fall semester, and again at the beginning of the spring semester, 1966, provided your progress in college is satisfactory.

"This process will be repeated through your four years of college, provided you maintain an academic and citizenship record that meets with the approval of the donor of the scholarship, and the officials of this college."

Dr. Jernigan continues:

"You are to be congratulated on the high honor which has been bestowed upon you and your school in being awarded this scholarship, because the competition has been very keen among those applying."

Morrison, a senior, was one of the top ten in his class this year, and has maintained a four-year average in Aransas County High School of more than 90.

He is vice president of the class, and will deliver one of the speeches at the Commencement. An all-around athlete, he was also a member of the National Honor Society.

MOST BUSINESSES TO CLOSE MAY 31

The First National Bank, the H.E.B. store, Roe's, and many other businesses will close Memorial Day, Monday, May 31, along with the city offices. Only a few business men indicated they will stay open.

BUT WAR GOES ON. On May 30, we solemnly celebrate Memorial Day, remembering the soldiers killed in wars of yesteryear. But the above picture is taken in Vietnam, 1965. A chaplain sits by sandbags, and makes the Sign of the Cross in absolution. The young kneeling man is an American marine. His countrymen wait their turn, before returning to a war that goes on. —WFS Photo

Buddy Poppy Day To Be Saturday, May 29

Buddy Poppy Chairman V. A. Dullye, Jr., outlined today the exact channels through which the money collected by the drive on May 29 will be spent. The expenditure is regulated by the national by-laws of the VFW, he said, and are confined to the following purposes:

For aid and relief of disabled and needy veterans and their dependents, widows and orphans.

For maintenance and expansion of the VFW National Home.

For rehabilitation, welfare and service work, including liaison with the Veterans' Administration.

For necessary expenses for military funerals of deceased veterans.

For acquisition, improvement and maintenance of burial plots and decoration of graves of veterans and service men.

In each VFW community, he said, over half the proceeds of the poppy sale is used for local veteran welfare work. The VFW, Dullye said, is primarily an organization devoted to serving veterans, no matter what war they have fought, or whether or not they are members of the VFW.

Buddy Poppy Day has been set for Saturday, May 29. All members of the VFW and members of the local Girl Scout troops and Little League will meet at the Tropics Motel at 7 a.m. on that day.

CHIEF OF POLICE REPORTS 3 ACCIDENTS

Chief of Police Bob Hewes reports that there were three more accidents this last week. Two of them were on the 19th.

The first one was at Church and Rowan Street between Maynard Rowan and Estaban Garcia, both of Rockport. Garcia was attempting to pass Rowan on the right and the accident occurred.. Garcia was ticketed for passing on the right.

The second was only 20 minutes later and occurred before Asst. Chief of Police Stautzenberger had finished investigating the first accident. It was at the intersection of Liberty and Live Oak Street. Involved in the accident were John Baugh and James Reed, both of Rockport. Both men were ticketed in the accident.

Another accident occurred on the 25th at about 1 p.m. It happened in front of the Keys Service Station on Highway 35. A lumber truck driven by Alfonso Tijerina was traveling north on Highway 35 and an automobile driven by Rosie Wolfram was traveling south on Highway 35.

A one by ten board blew off of the truck and hit the windshield of the Wolfrom auto. Miss Wolfrom managed to bring her auto to a safe stop but was injured by the glass that was broken. She was taken to Memorial Hospital by Cage Marshall ambulance. Assisting Chief Hewes in the investigation was Sheriff Joe Earl Hunt and City Patrolman Joe Dominquez.

Outdoors in Texas

By Vern Sanford

One of the finest collections of firearms in the world is in the Winchester Gun Museum in New Haven, Conn.

Thomas E. Hall is curator of the Winchester museum. It has proved to be a handy place for Texas collectors to direct their questions about unusual firearms.

It is open to the general public and is one of the latest steps in the perservation of early-day firearms.

Originally the guns were collected as a record of firearms developed in America. Now, however, it has been expanded into a study of projectile arms and firearms of all types and from all countries. It contains more than 5,000 guns, including Chinese pieces more than 2,000 years old.

First guns in this collection were placed there by Oliver Winchester around 1850. He was the first president of the Winchester Repeating Arms Co.

Most valuable gun in the collection is a Colt Patterson revolver with accessories. It dates back to about 1836 and is worth something like $5,000.

Of special interest to Texans is an old Walker-Colt, worth some $3,500. It was made in 1847 and was the first revolver to gain acceptance as a worthy military weapon.

This is the gun designed by Captain Walker of the Texas rangers. It was field-tested by Texas rangers in the rough days just after the war with Mexico and just before the Civil War.

There also are many old model 73's in the collection. This is another gun well known in Texas, because of the great number held by collectors. I understand that Bill Gooch of Raymondville, a game warden, has a score of these old rifles in all calibers ranging from .22 to .44 caliber. He has gathered them from all over the southwest .

A former game warden, Norman Swansburg of Rio Grande City, has a half dozen of these famous 73's.

The Winchester collection also includes a number of Civil War firearms. It will be remembered that many of the guns used by the Confederacy were made in Texas, around Tyler and Rusk. No doubt some of these original Texas-made guns are in the collection.

One of the most unusual guns in the Winchester collection is an old Sharps Carbine, with a coffee grinder in its stock. This gun was invented about 1863. One of them was issued to each company so that troops could have fresh coffee. There are six of these guns in the total collection.

Among other interesting guns is a pair of boudoir pistols. As the name implies, these were for the protection of the lady of the house.

Then there is another gun, which must have had its inspiration in Texas. It was mounted in a round base so it could be revolved to protect watermellon crops. A trigger wire actuated the weapon. When a thief stumbled over the wire, the gun would wirl around and fire.

Other interesting guns include a combination pistol and dagger with iron knuckle pieces. Then there is a gun that is a combination pistol, knife and corkscrew.

Incidentally antique gun collectors have been on the increase in Texas in recent years.

One of the most recent collectors is Paul M. Fulks Sr. of Wolfe City. He is a former newspaper man and now is chairman of the Texas Aeronautics Commission. He has assembled a magnificent collection of antique guns.

There are numerous antique gun clubs scattered about the state. And they hold annual meetings.

It's no wonder therefore that so many books are being published about antique guns and their origin. Stakpole Co., of Harrisburg, Penn., has issued a half-dozen in recent years that contain much valuable information for collectors.

One of these books, by William A. Albaugh III, is the story of the Confederate States Ordinance Works at Tyler. It deals with authenticated information on the manufacture of guns in Texas during the Civil War days.

Another such book, written by Donald B. Webster Jr., is under the title of "Suicide Special." It contains pictures and information on scores of small caliber revolvers, of which there was a rash from the end of the Civil War until about 1900.

Recently Stackpole issued a book under the title of "Colt," which contains hundreds of letters and documents written to Samuel Colt. Also letters he wrote to others concerning the invention and manufacture of Colt guns both before and during Civil War days.

Then there is "Manhattan Firearms," a simular book dealing with the products of the Manhattan Arms Co., originated by New York bankers to make guns during the Civil War.

With so many of these books on the market, is there little wonder that interest is kept alive in old guns?

I never have been an antique gun collector myself. But I know many who are.

L. A. Wilke of Austin may not be an antique collector either. But he sure has some old timers. One is a single shot wire-framed Hamilton rifle, the first he ever owned. He has had it for more than fifty years. It still is in fair condition.

He also has a double-barred, twelve-gauge Ithaca, which is around 60 years old.

His prized gun is a model 1873 Winchester, carried by an old Texas ranger. It was presented to Wilke by the ranger just before he died. Wilke also has a model 94 Winchester, also carried at one time by a Texas ranger.

These are not traffic guns. In other words they are not for sale.

I suspect there are thousands of other persons in Texas who have such guns tucked away in their closets, proud possessions of the yesteryears, when a good gun was so important.

There are museums of various types in most of the larger cities of Texas, where collections of old guns have been assembled. Also, there are a number on display in the Witte Museum in San Antonio, as well as the Alamo. And too, there are old guns on display in the state library in Austin. Also in the state museum.

A number of schools and colleges have such collections and there are private collections in Texas that go into the hundreds.

Some collectors go for one kind of gun while others are interested in any kind they can acquire.

It is an interesting hobby well worth studying.

ALLIED IN THOUGHT. France, once one of America's staunchest allies, has now officially sided with Russia in opposition to U.S. action in Vietnam. French Foreign Minister Couve de Murville (right) extends the hand of agreement to Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Paris. De Gaulle also declared to Gromyko his disapproval of the Vietnam war. Two nations are pressing jointly for a peace conference on Vietnam and an international conference on Cambodia. — WFS Photo.

OUR TOWN

Editorial

(Editors Note: The following editorial, which appeared in the Corpus Christi Caller on Tuesday is so pertinent to the situation now existing in Aransas County, that it is reproduced in its entirety.)

The City of Alice has been a pioneer in solving its water supply problem. The example must soon be followed by other cities, including Kingsville, Rockport and Fulton, and perhaps Sinton.

Coastal Bend towns share a common problem: Potable water is available in substantial quantities only from wells. But wells on the Gulf Coast behave predictably. In those in which the fresh water lies over salt water, heavy pumping inevitably brings salt water intrusion. In those reaching aquefiers which are recharged slowly, heavy pumping drops water tables relentlessly.

Growing towns in the area may continue drawing some of their water from wells, but increasing demand forces them to look to the Nueces River for long-term requirements. Alice has led the way by building a pipeline from the Nueces River to the city and its own water treatment plant.

Substantial savings may be made through an area-wide approach to water supply, however. Individual water treatment plants are expensive. It may be possible to pool the resources of several towns and build one big water treatment plant in the vicinity of Calallen to serve all area towns.

Corpus Christi probably cannot justify large additions to its water treatment facilities just to accommodate area towns. Aside from the cost factor, during periods of peak demand it might be necessary for Corpus Christi to ration area users, something that would be sure to arouse bitterness and resentment among area residents.

Cooperative action by area towns in solving their water problems seems to be the best possible approch. Yet action and planning should begin now, instead of waiting for the crisis which surely lies not far ahead.

PAUL COCHRAN TELLS OF TRIP ON BLACK SEA

Paul Cochran, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Cochran, who will end his Peace Corps service in Turkey this year, writes most interestingly to his mother of a trip on the Black Sea:

Dear Mom and Dad:

At the moment I am on the M.V. Ordu ("V" stands for "Vapor"—boat—I guess, but I haven't figured out the "M" yet,) sailing up the Black Sea on the first day of a three and a half day trip to Hopa, the last town on the line before Russia.

Frank and I are taking the first two weeks of our allotted 30 day vacation. We have worked hard for a month on a teachers' book. The work itself has been most enjoyable to me because I love to do grammatical analysis (ever since St. John's,) but despite the pleasure the manual has given, I'm glad to have a little rest from it.

We're not making the round trip from Istanbul on this boat, but will get off at Hopa, take the bus up to the Russian border, then to Kars, a three-day trip by bus, about 100 kilometers but through a mountain pass.

While in Kars, we hope to be able to go to an Armenian ruin on the border. Thence to Erzurum, Erzincan, Amasya, Corum, the Hittite ruins and back to Ankara. There, we'll work one more week on the book, go back to Killis to give some exams (for students who failed last year,) back to Ankara again for one final week or so of work on the book, and then take the last two weeks of our vacation.

We went up to Istanbul day before yesterday evening, and so had only one day there. We're not too distressed about that, since Istanbul will require two weeks, and I'm going to have that much time there after my Peace Corps stint is over.

We spent yesterday morning in Ayia Sofya (Turkish), Sancta Sophia (Latin), *&?? (Greek). (Note please, Paul wrote the Greek name, but I cannot reproduce it, nor do I think you have the type to print it if I could. Forgive me if the assumption is wrong. E.B.C.), or, the Church of the Holy Wisdom, as we call it in English.

It is quite impressive, though not splendid by any means, since whatever crusaders left the Turks have taken, but it's an imposing structure when seen from a distance of a hundred yards. They are in the process of removing the Muslim plaster, and the four or five Mosiacs that have been uncovered are beautiful.

Fifty years from now, when, hopefully, the whole thing will have been restored, it will be quite wonderful and enough is there now to show what a fantastic church it must have been.

I say this last with regret, not only because of the loss of its splendor, but because that loss was due to Christians as much as it was to Turks. All the Mosaics now showing date from the 12th and 13th Centuries, there being only some stones of the original (Justinian's) 6th Century construction left.

But the later Mosaics are not to be scoffed at. It's easy to see why, when some 13th Century Byzantine frescoes were discovered recently beneath the plaster in one of Istanbul's Mosques, scholars thought the Byzantines had imported Giotto to do the work.

Until very lately, art historians were ignorant of the tremendous artistic vitality of the late Byzantine empire. Whereas they thought that Italians of the Middle Ages had produced what late Byzantine art there was, they now know that, on the contrary, it was the Byzantine influence that produced Italian artists like Giotto.

Yesterday afternoon we went to the "Covered Market." It was a fascinating place, crammed with everything from Swedish modern furniture to Greek Orthodox Icons. I bought a Turkish rug. It's dark, deep blue, with simple patterns and very finely and softly woven. I can't think of a better use for some of my graduation present money. I gave the rug-seller half his price, and before my vacation is over I'll make it up to Istanbul again to pay him the other half.

Give my love to everyone, I should have written and haven't. Much to you both.

KIN OF LOCAL FOLK TO RETIRE IN ROCKPORT

A thirty-year career ends for the kinswoman of a number of local people when Miss Evelyn A. Townsend retires May 30 as secretary of Boyd-Campbell, Inc., in Corpus Christi, and moves to Rockport.

She received an award of merit from the Woman's Committee of the Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon session last week at the Americana Motor Inn. She is the first to receive this award from the committee.

Miss Townsend has been planning for her retirement for several years.

"I have a home in Rockport on 1½ acres and I plan to live there. I usually have a garden and grow green beans, onions, radishes and potatoes with the help of one of my brothers who lives in Rockport," the soft-spoken businesswoman said.

Miss Townsend grew up in South Texas. She was born in Harrold shortly before she moved to Oklahoma, where her father homesteaded.

In 1912, they moved to Papalote and five years later to Velasco. Miss Townsend was graduated from high school there and returned to Oklahoma where she spent a year or so with her aunts.

She joined her family again just after the 1919 storm. They had moved to Rockport. Her first job here was at the office of the Heldenfels Shipyard.

In 1921, she went to work for the Lone Star Fish and Oyster Co. as a bookkeeper and secretary. The office was across the street from the Nueces Hotel.

"At that time, the export of seafood and oysters was a huge industry," she said.

Boats for the firm were docked at the old wooden pier that extended into the bay at Water and Peoples Streets.

"I remember that there was a fishing shack on the pier and the odor was very strong," she said with a smile.

This was followed by three years' working for the Pease City National Bank, which closed in 1931 during the depression. Then came five years in the office of a lawyer, Tom Henderson.

Recalling working conditions, during that era the youthful - looking secretary said:

"In those days, the working day was from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. six days a week. My salary was $10 a week but it was adequate. I remember that I could eat breakfast in a restaurant for 15 cents and lunch or dinner for as little as 25 cents. I shared an apartment with a friend and we paid around $35 a month for rent."

Women office workers were in the minority, outnumbered by men about two to one. And a real rarity was a married woman who worked, she recalled.

RARE BROWN PELICANS ARE NESTING HERE

Brown pelicans, long an ornament of the Gulf Coast, are making an attempt at a comeback on the Second Chain of Islands in San Antonio Bay, where Audubon Warden Reagan Lee says two pairs are nesting, and two more pairs are looking the situation over.

These are the only nesting pelicans between the Florida coast and the Rio Grande Delta, Lee said, and this is in marked contrast to past years when the birds were very plentiful in this area.

Twenty years ago an excursion to the same islands would have disclosed brown pelicans by the hundreds, with the ungainly, naked young inhabiting great stretches of the shell-strewn nesting ground, and moving offshore in platons when they were disturbed.

Then something happened: No one knows just what. Brown pelicans disappeared almost overnight. No more did they roost on the pilings along the waterfront or follow the shrimp boats when they were culling, arrowing down from the heights to pick up fish thrown overboard.

From being one of the most common of the waterfront birds, they became one of the rarest, and their numbers along the Texas coast at least dropped to where they were rarer than whooping cranes.

Lee says that ornithologists are watching these nesting pairs with much interest, hopeful that once more flocks of the big brown birds will be seen along the Gulf coast, where they added so much interest to the scenery.

The islands, which lie in San Antonio Bay are loaded with birds as they always are at this time of the year. Gulls, terns, egrets, herons and other water birds nest there to rear their young in safety, and among those nesting now are approximately 300 adult roseate spoonbills and 100 yearlings that haven't attained the glorious rose and white plumage of the older birds.

IMPORTANCE OF EARLY CLAIMS FOR SOCIAL SECURITY EMPHASIZED

Coastal Bend residents age 65 or over who have not yet applied for Social Security benefits are advised to file a claim now even if they are not planning to retire right away.

H. M. Cleveland, Corpus Christi Social Security district manager, explained that it is to the benefit of an applicant to apply when he reaches age 65 to protect his Social Security rights.

"A number of South Texans who applied last year found that they had lost some benefits by not applying earlier, he said. "We have found that the best way for any person to protect his Social Security benefit rights is to apply at 65 whether or not he intends to go on working. Even though no benefits may be payable right away, there is an advantage in having your claim already approved when you do retire."

New Books In Public Library

A number of new books have been received for the library recently, and will soon be on the shelves for use by patrons of the Aransas County Public Library.

Among these are seven new additions to the shelves, one at least, applying to Rockport and its surrounding area. The "Life of Henry Smith" is a factual account of Texas' first governor, whose descendant, Mrs. C. R. Gibson, daughter of A. L. Bruhl, still lives here. It contains some early material on the Copano Bay area.

The "Life of Bigfoot Wallace" by one of the frontiersman's contemporaries, John C. Duval, tells of Wallace's many adventures in early Texas as Indian fighter, Texas ranger and hunter.

"The Evolution of a State" by Noah Smithwick, is another book that is a standard for any Texas collection, and while the original is long out of print and brings huge prices at rare book auctions, it is possible to buy a facsimile.

For that matter, six of the books listed here are facsimile reproductions of the originals, prepared by the Steck Company.

"Three Years in Texas, including a View of the Texas Revolution, and an Account of the Principal Battles, together with descriptions of the soil commercial and agricurtural advantages, etc., by Dr. Joseph E. Field, One of the Few Survivors of Fannin's Command," was originally published at Greenfield, Mass., and at Boston, in 1836. It contains an account of the Fannin massacre.

Published two years earlier than the Field's account is the little volume "A Visit to Texas: Being the Journal of a Traveler Through Those Parts Most Interesting to American Settlers, With Descriptions of Scenery, Habits etc., etc." published in New York in 1834, and long on the rare book list.

No one knows who this traveler was, but he describes that early day Texas very vividly, and included in the book is material on the lands around "Aransas" and Nueces Bays. For students of Texas history, and for those just interested in Texas as a state it is exceedingly interesting reading.

Another addition is Yoakum's "History of Texas". Like all the rest, an original copy will cost you a good deal of money, but in this fine facsimile prepared by Steck, every word of the original is preserved in exactly the same form as when first published, and at a price that every library can afford to pay. It details, in two volumes, the trials and tribulations of early Texans in the years up till 1854.

The other book received from this publisher is the "Story of Texas Schools," by C. E. Evans president emeritus of Southwest Texas State Teachers' College at San Marcos, and published in 1955.

Out of a background of study and experience covering 60 years, Dr. Evans has written the history of education in Texas. It is the story of the beginnings, development, administratiion of schools of the state, vitalized by interpretive and evaluative comment.

Also received, as a gift of the French government, is a most interesting small volume on "France." This is modern, well-printed, and attractive, and tells, in capsule form, many things about the French republic.

Valued additions to the reference shelves include dictionaries of the French, Spanish, German and Latin languages.

New biographies, soon to be available, include Hammemskjold's "Markings," McArthur's "Reminscences," Chaplin's "Autobiography," and one of Queen Victoria by Elizabeth Langford, which is on order. Also on order and expected soon are "Sixpence in Her Shoe," by McGinley, and "The Italians," by Barzini.

Also two books of fiction—"Herzog," by Bellow, and "The Possessors" by John Christopher, are in and awaiting cataloguing, while another best seller "The Horse Knows the Way", by O'Hara, has been ordered.

Other reference books purchased at this time, and now on the shelves to aid students, include Webster's Biographical Dictionary, Webster's Dictionary of Synonum, and Webster's Geographical Dictionary.

J. Frank Dobie's latest book, "Cow People" is also awaiting cataloguing and cards before circulation; Judge John D. Wendell, of Aransas County, has borrowed a newly acquired copy of the latest edition of Roberts' Rules of Order, and there is a copy of Abingdon's "Shower Parade" outlining various kinds of showers for various occasions that will soon be on the shelves.

Also on order, and expected soon, are sets of the latest "Collier's Encyclopedia" for adults and one of "Compton's" for the children's section of the library, to supplement the children's portion of the library.

Other children's books received this week include a copy of "The Real Mother Goose," "The Story of Barbar," and "The Little Engine That Could," all of them for younger readers, as is "The Best Word Book."

Also almost ready for the shelves are an Encyclopedia of Space Science in four volumes, and a book on the fresh water fishes of America.
