SURF'S UP — Small sailboats ruled the waters of Maxey Lake during the third annual Sunfish Regatta, but one watersports enthusiast had his own way of getting into the action. Sailsurfing requires a surfboard, a small sail, some anticipation of the wind and an extra helping of balance. This sailsurfer had it all. (Staff photo by Gary Davis).

Sailing Fun Sport For All

By JOHNNY HOLMES

SAILING USED TO BE for the wealthy. Now, though, the sport is accessible to almost anyone, with the advent of the Sunfish, a light, compact and reasonably inexpensive boat.

The small boats are honored annually in Lubbock at Maxey Park Lake during the Sunfish Regatta. This year's gathering Sunday paid a fun homage to the sport enjoyed by persons who don't enjoy the luxury of big bucks, yachts or oceans to sail upon.

The regatta's real purpose is to have fun, said Suzanne Abbott, the event's sponsor.

"There are plenty of races for the bigger boats, but only a few for the smaller ones," she explained. "We're just trying to provide something fun for the smaller boats to partake of."

Mrs. Abbott's intent was accomplished by all participants Sunday. By the end of the afternoon of races, Lubbock attorney Wendell Coffee had captured the pewter Sunfish Regatta cup in the Sunfish class, while Robert Witter won the Force 5 division.

In winning his class and nearly knocking off Witter as well, Coffee enjoyed better luck than most.

He won by maneuvering his craft smartly and by taking advantage of the unpredictable wind gusts and his opponents' inability to do the same. Of his win, he said, "I had a good day."

The Sunfish crafts have become so popular recently that the brand name has become generic. To sailors, a Sunfish is 14 feet long with a sail area of 75 square feet. The Force 5 boat also measures 14 feet but has 91 square feet of sail area and is sleeker and quicker.

Both can be manned by one hefty sailor or two crazy people. There were some of both at Maxey Sunday.

The day's races ranged from a field of two in the Force 5 class up to 11 boats of all types in the "Dynamic Duo," an inspired free-for-all in which the boats cruise the lake searching for greased watermelons. A winner is one who returns to shore with a greased melon and some dignity intact.

The sailors and their supporters, as well as a large number of cutoff-clad onlookers sporting cameras, binoculars and Frisbees, spent the day more in quest of the ample sunshine and tans than the cups and plaques presented to winners.

Watching the small boats is like screening a silent movie. There are no fiery engines or thundering hooves, only the rustling breeze and an occasional gasp from the shore when a captain comes within a hair's breadth of capsizingin the face of an unexpected crosswind or ducks just in time to avoid being knocked into the drink by a swinging boom.

Winners or washouts, participants or spectators, everyone at the Sunfish Regatta Sunday could say, lake race winner Coffee, they "had a good day."

Cancer Claims 50-Year Screen Veteran

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — John Wayne, who so embodied the American hero in a half century of movies that he became an internationally known symbol of the strong, patriotic American, died of cancer Monday. He was 72.

Wayne's death was announced by Bernard Strohm, administrator of the UCLA Medical Center, where Wayne had been hospitalized since May 1 in the latest of a series of recurring bouts with cancer.

Wayne died at at 5:35 p.m. PDT, "with all of his children at his side," Strohm said. The seven Wayne children left the hospital before the death was announced three hours later.

Fighting To The End

Wayne fought for life until the end. "He had been in considerable pain since Saturday," Strohm said, but "he would not take much medication. He wanted to be awake when he died. He would tolerate the pain just to be near his family."

However he lapsed in and out of a coma Monday.

"Sometimes his vital signs would stabilize and he would look over and call, often in a loud voice, for his children. When they would appear, he would lapse back into the coma."

He was unconscious when he died.

As it became clear death was approaching for the rugged, rumbling-voiced "Duke," he was given many honors. Congress and President Carter authorized a special gold medal — of the kind given to such national figures as the Wright Brothers — and he made his final public appearance at the Academy Award ceremony in April, drawing an emotional standing ovation from his peers when he strode out to present the Oscar for best picture.

200 Movies

John Wayne rollicked, brawled and shot his way through more than 200 movies but though his role might be Marine, pilot, cowboy, sea captain, prize fighter or cavalryman, he was always the hero and he was always John Wayne.

His pictures made him one of the great box office draws of all time and of his critics' complaints of the lack of versatility in his performances Wayne was fond of saying: "Nobody likes my acting but the public."

Wayne made his first movie in 1931, and while he starred in such epic films as "Stagecoach," "Back to Bataan," "Red River," "The Quiet Man" and "The Green Berets," he won his first Academy Award playing Rooster Cogburn in "True Grit."

"Hell, I should have put on that eye patch 20 years ago," the 6-foot-4 inch "Duke" commented as he picked up his Oscar in 1970. He had been nominated once before for "Sands of Iwo Jima."

Wayne carried his roles of patriot, flag-waver and plain spoken he-man into his private life so that his name was almost synonomous with the conservative if not reactionary label but he never backed down on any of his opinions.

In 1974 he rode an armored personnel carrier through the streets of Cambridge to Harvard Square, smoking a cigar and getting pelted with snowballs from students. But when he spoke after accepting an award from the Harvard Lampoon, the audience broke into cheers and chanted, "Duke! Duke! Duke!"

Wayne underwent surgery in 1964 for lung cancer and declared afterward, "I've got the Big C licked." Associates tried to keep his ailment a secret lest it hurt his image as a virile hero.

But Wayne himself disclosed the surgery saying the public should know that cancer could be detected and possibly halted in its early stages.

The actor was plagued by a series of respiratory problems in the mid-1970s, often undergoing tests in hospitals.

In April 1978 he underwent successful open-heart surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. A team of cardiac surgeons replaced a defective mitral valve at the bottom of his heart

Gulf Oil Slick May Invade U.S. Coast

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's top petroleum official says a huge oil slick from a burning well in the Gulf of Mexico is almost under control and damage to rich shrimping grounds is minimal, but a U.S. ecological group said the spill may become the biggest in history.

"Fortunately, the oil is of the very light Arabian variety ... and most of it is either burned or evaporated and does not precipitate to the bottom," Jorge Diaz Serrano, president of the PEMEX state oil monopoly, told a news conference Monday.

In Cambridge, Mass., however, petroleum experts said the spill may threaten the coasts of Texas and Louisiana. Richard Golob, director of the Center for Short-Lived Phenomena in Cambridge, said, "If the well is not capped before the estimated time of control this will become the biggest spill in history," topping a 68-million-gallon spill of crude oil from a tanker that ran aground off the coast of France last year.

Golob's reference to the time of control referred to PEMEX's initial estimate that it would take more than three months for the well to be capped. Specialists now say underwater blowout control valves put in place by a submarine crew may help shut off the flow sooner.

On Monday, PEMEX was saying the slick covered 640 square miles in Campeche Bay — 80 miles by 8 miles — and was floating on the water 23 to 34 miles from one of the richest shrimping grounds in the Gulf of Mexico. Golob estimated the slick at 10 miles by 100.

Both Golob and Diaz Serrano said the runaway well is spewing out huge amounts of natural gas and 30,000 barrels of oil a day — 1.25 million gallons. But Diaz Serrano said half of the oil immediately goes up in flames, another 5,000 barrels evaporate and only 2,500 barrels are not recoverable and are being treated with dispersants sprayed from boats and planes.

"The rest — 7,500 barrels a day — will eventually be recovered," he said. While Golob stressed the potential danger that the slick could be spread if a hurricane develops, Diaz Serrano said a disaster for shrimping has so far been averted by favorable winds, tides and outflows from three big rivers, com-

Warm Weather Aids Waterlogged Crops

A WARMING trend bringing excellent drying conditions to the South Plains the rest of the week may save what is left of cotton and wheat crops in area fields, an agricultural official says.

"If we have more days like today (Monday), the cut in yields won't be nearly as bad," said Alan Mackey, county executive director of Lubbock's Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

"But there's no doubt (Friday's rain) will cut our yields," he added.

No more rain is anticipated here by the National Weather Service this week. Days will be hot and cloudless, and nights will be warm.

Crops in Dawson County and south of Lubbock apparently have been the hardest hit by recent hail and heavy rains, Mackey said.

Farmers in those areas are "going to try to replant until the 25th," he said, adding that "a lot of replanting" will be done in area fields this week because playa lakes already are full and water in them is backing up into fields.

"Small cotton plants can't take that much water and they've already been under stress," he explained. Some wheat, usually planted near playa lakes, also has been damaged by the hard, fast rains that hit the area about a week ago.

Although lakes outside the city are backing up, Walter Heard, Lubbock's parks superintendent, said that "flooding is almost impossible."

When one lake overflows, it runs into another lake, and the chain continues until the excess water reaches the Caprock or Yellowhouse Canyon, said Heard.

Heard added, though, that if more heavy rains hit the city within a week, high water on city streets could occur when the lakes begin overflowing.

U.S. Exodus Foiled In Managua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Gunfire intensified in Managua and the airport road was blocked, frustrating an effort Monday to evacuate American dependents from rebellion-torn Nicaragua. The 60 intended evacuees took refuge at the U.S. ambassador's residence.

Cannon and automatic-weapons fire resounded in several sections of the capital. Other battles were reported in at least three areas outside it as President Anastasio Somoza's troops tried to beat back an offensive by Sandinista guerrillas.

Somoza called a news conference and repeated for foreign reporters his claim that the rebellion is backed by Panama and other outside nations. He denied a rebel claim that Guatemalan troops are assisting his army.

The foreign ministers of Venezuela and Ecuador, representing the Andean Pact, were expected in Managua to warn Somoza against carrying out a threat to invade neighboring Costa Rica, which he claims shelters guerrillas.

U.S. officials said they dropped an attempt to evacuate the Americans, who assembled at the U.S. Embassy compound, because a truck sent to scout the airport road found it blocked about 3½ miles out, and heavy fighting in the area.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said a U.S. Air Force C-130 was standing by in Panama to evacuate the stranded Americans if they failed to get on private flights.

He said 60 Americans had hoped to leave Monday — 28 dependents of U.S. officials and 32 U.S. citizens in Managua in private capacities. Most of the the private citizens were from missionary families.

At his news conference, Somoza, 53, said he had no intention of resigning. Speaking in his fortified compound as gunfire boomed in the background and columns of black smoke rose in the distance, the president estimated that up to 1,300 Nicaraguans, including 300 national guardsmen, had been killed or injured in two weeks of fighting. Another 1,500 are estimated to have died during a two-week Sandinista offensive in September, and 1,500 more since.

Heavy fighting was also reported in Matagalpa, 80 miles north of Managua. Sandinista sources said an attack was underway in the northern city of Esteli, and the guerrillas continued to hold Leon, the nation's second largest city. Scattered sniper fire was reported near the southern frontier with Costa Rica as late as Sunday, when fighting was also reported outside Masaya, 20 miles south of Managua.

Juanita Habron, wife of a U.S. Agency for International Development official, said she wanted to leave because "I've got two teen-age boys, and you just don't want your teen-age boys in Nicaragua now." Troops have been reported rounding up some teen-age boys, presumably on suspicion of aiding the Sandinistas.

A woman who said she was the wife of a Full Gospel Evangelistic Society missionary from Houston, said: "I just felt it was time to get my two girls and Sugar out." Sugar, a white toy poodle, played at her feet.

The Americans were moved to the hilltop residence of the U.S. ambassador. Ambassador Larry Pezzullo, recently appointed, is not in the country but is expected to arrive after June 15. The residence sits on a hill overlooking western Managua. An embassy officer said it would be "easier to defend, if it comes to that."

The embassy's electric power was knocked out Sunday, but an emergency generator kept vital systems going, an official said.

One embassy official said it was not an official evacuation and no staff personnel were leaving.

Wednesday Appearance By Indictees Seen

U.S. ATTORNEY David Bass indicated Monday that persons indicted by a federal grand jury last week may appear before the U.S. Magistrate Wednesday.

The federal panel, which began an investigation into an alleged cocaine trafficking ring in early May, returned six sealed indictments Thursday. Authorities said names of the persons included in the indictments will not be revealed until all appear before U.S. Magistrate Bill Brister.

Monday, Bass, who presented the evidence to the panel, refused to comment on the exact day of the appearances. However, he did say he may have information to release by Wednesday.

"I'm not in a position to comment (on the appearance times) right now," Bass said. "If you will call me Wednesday morning, I should have something then."

Five of the sealed indictments returned last week included "multi-counts," which could mean either multiple indictments against one person or several persons named in one indictment, according to U.S. Attorney Roger McRoberts.

Both summonses and arrest warrants have been issued in connection with the indictments.

Filibuster Threatens Draft Registration Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Armed Services Committee approved Monday a peacetime draft-registration bill that would require all men age 18 through 26 to start signing up beginning next January.

However, threats of a filibuster made it unclear whether or not the issue would be brought to the Senate floor this week as part of a defense bill as had been planned.

Sen. John Tower of Texas, ranking Republican on the panel, said, "I think we may have a filibuster. There are some hot-eyed pacifists out there."

The measure was approved by the committee 12-5 in an unusual evening session after the full Senate had started debate on the legislation authorizing $40.1 billion for military procurement and research.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a leading proponent of draft registration, told the committee there is a mixed view on the issue throughout government. He said the White House does not have a position on registration; Defense Secretary Harold Brown opposes it and the Pentagon's Joint Chiefs of Staff unanimously support it.

Brown told Congress earlier in the day that registration is not needed now even though there would be problems in mobilizing forces in an emergency. His position was disclosed as the Senate opened debate on the defense spending bill.

The legislation also contains a section that would force President Carter to lift trade sanctions against Zimbabwe Rhodesia. Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd said proponents of lifting the sanctions appear to have enough votes to prevail.

A vote on the Zimbabwe Rhodesia issue is being delayed until Tuesday, Byrd said, to give the administration a chance to argue before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Tuesday morning against lifting the sanctions.

Brown, in a letter to Sen. William S. Cohen, R-Maine, said he is concerned that the Selective Service System would not be able to deliver its first recruits within 30 days, as it is supposed to be able to do.

"That circumstance does not, however, lead to the conclusion that peacetime registration is necessary," he said.

Instead, said Brown, Congress should give the Selective Service System enough money to improve its computer capability, its staff and its planning.

He said the view "suggested in all studies of the question that I have seen is that the critical step towards achieving our goals is not immediate collection of names through registration, but rather the immediate improvement of our ability to prepare for processing people, and in the case of mobilization actually to process them, through the Selective Service System."

Brown previously has said he was "not sure we have to go that far" (to registration) to solve manpower problems. Although he is not backing the registration proposal, the Pentagon is not lobbying actively in Congress against it, sources said.

A poll taken by Senate opponents of registration indicated that a vote on registration would be close.

Sources said it shows 45 senators leaning against registration — including 15 senators solidly opposed. The survey lists 18 senators as undecided, 21 as leaning for registration and 16 solidly for registration, the sources added.

Other sources said that Sens. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, and Nunn, head of a manpower subcommittee, have written Brown asking him to declassify manpower results from a military readiness study called "Nifty Nugget."

The sources said the results would bolster the case for renewing registration.

Opponents of registration hailed Brown's letter to Cohen as a shot in the arm for their side.

"This demonstrates beyond a shadow of a doubt that draft registration is just not necessary. ... The movement to bring back the draft is not coming from the Pentagon and the military but from a few members of Congress," said David Landau, an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union.

Overall, the bill would authorize $26.4 billion for weapons purchases, $13.5 billion for military research and development and $107 million for civil defense.

Ways & Means Panel Rejects President's Oil Windfall Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee rejected President Carter's proposed "windfall profits" tax on the oil industry Monday and began writing a stiffer version of the tax.

The panel approved two amendments that would result in a heavier tax on the oil companies but rejected others that opponents claimed would deny the industry the money it needs to increase production.

Rep. Barber Conable of New York, senior Republican on the panel, forced a vote on Carter's proposal, which failed 21-14. Eleven of the 12 Republicans and only three Democrats supported Conable's motion.

The vote indicated a tougher windfall tax, which most Republicans don't want, will be approved by the committee. Democrats on the panel already had agreed last week to strengthen the tax recommended by the president.

The committee voted on Conable's motion without debate.

Then, two amendments were approved that stiffen Carter's proposal, increasing the tax by about $2.2 billion between now and 1984. Before those amendments were approved, congressional economists estimated removal of oil-price controls and the windfall tax would increase government revenues by about $20.1 billion during that period.

On a 21-14 vote the committee approved a provision by Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., that would increase taxation of oil from "marginal" properties.

The second amendment, by Rep. Joseph L. Fisher, D-Va., would slow the rate at which "old" oil, under Carter's bill, would escape the windfall tax. That provision was approved 19-17 after the committee had rejected two rival amendments that would have resulted in an even-stiffer tax.

Any windfall tax is aimed at taking away some of the billions of dollars that will flow to the oil companies over the next several years as a result of Carter's action to gradually remove federal price controls from domestic oil production. That action will allow most U.S. oil to reach world price levels.

Carter's advisers have indicated they can support some toughening of the tax, but have urged the committee not to weaken the president's proposal.

The next proposal before the committee was an amendment by Rep. Charles Vanik, D-Ohio, that would substitute a much simpler and far tougher tax for the complicated Carter plan.

Carter's bill involves a three-level tax on four different levels of domestic oil production. The first two levels of the tax would gradually phase out in the future; the third tax would be permanent.

Vanik's pan would impose a $3-per-barrel tax on most U.S. oil production. The second level would take away 90 percent of any future increase on any U.S. oil above the $16 price.

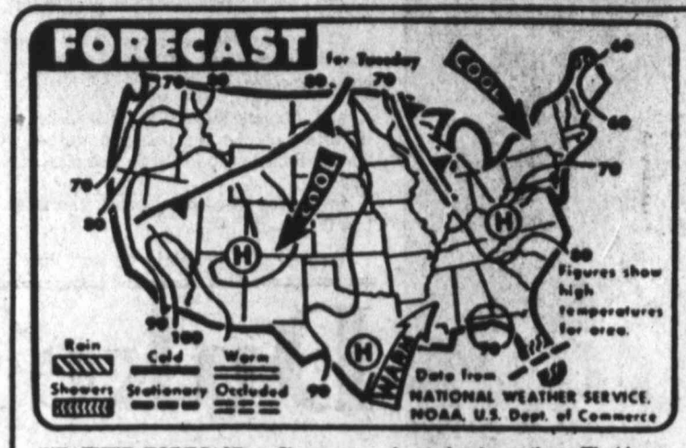

The price of U.S.-produced oil now averages about $9 a barrel. The current world price of oil is about $14.50 a barrel.

Meanwhile, congressional economists raised their estimates of the increased revenues that will flow to the U.S. treasury as a result of reducing federal price controls and approving Carter's "windfall-profits" tax.

Between now and 1984, the staff said, decontrol and the windfall tax should raise government tax revenues by a total of $20.1 billion. The earlier estimate was $13.3 billion. The figures include not only direct revenues from the windfall tax but increases in federal income taxes as a result of higher oil prices.

After the committee determines what type of tax to impose on the oil industry, it must decide what to do with the tax collections.

Carter wants to spend part of the money helping poor Americans pay the higher fuel costs that will accompany removal of price controls. He proposed to split the remaining revenues between mass transit and development of non-petroleum energy.

Nine Presumed Dead In Idaho Plane Crash

GRANGEVILLE, Idaho (AP) — A U.S. Forest Service plane with 12 people aboard crashed Monday in a river in the rugged mountains of north-central Idaho, and a Forest Service spokesman said there were three known survivors.

Two of the survivors were treated at the scene by Forest Service paramedics, who parachuted in.

But the third survivor, accompanied by a dog, walked away from the crash site to the Moose Creek Ranger Station, about 10 miles east, according to Nez Perce National Forest spokesman Steve Waterman.

He said the man who walked out was in good shape, but said the other survivors were being flown by helicopter to Sacred Heart Medical Center in Spokane, Wash. One of the injured had severe chest injuries. The condition of the other man was not immediately known.

Waterman said the remaining people on the plane were presumed dead. No names were available for the victims or the survivors.

Radio communications were hampered because the crash site was in a canyon.

People hiking in the area, in the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness Area, saw one of the twin-engine DC-3's engines burst into flames and fall off, Waterman added. He did not know the hikers' names.

Passengers on the DC-3 included summer Forest Service employees and regular employees of the Nez Perce National Forest, said Dick Guth, regional public relations manager for the Forest Service at Missoula, Mont.

Waterman said the plane was in the flood-swollen Selway River and that the fuselage had broken up and had been washed downstream about a mile from the crash site.

The twin-engine plane left Grangeville at 9:28 a.m., taking the Forest Service workers to the Moose Creek ranger station, about 60 miles northeast of Grangeville, for an orientation meeting, Guth said. A search was started when the plane did not arrive at the ranger station at 10 a.m. as expected, he added.

Begin Blasts Settlement Critics

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin launched a strong counterattack Monday against critics of Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territory, declaring "we shall pay no attention to the invective or abuse."

Begin defended Israel's right to build settlements in the West Bank and Gaza Strip "since this is our land, parts of which were conquered in 1948, in the east and the south by aggression and invasion by Jordan and Egypt."

The sharply-worded statement released by Begin's office came as a smoldering war of words threatened to mar the Israeli-Egyptian negotiations aimed at granting autonomy to the 1.1 million Palestinian Arabs of the West Bank and Gaza.

As Israel's negotiating team left for the second round of autonomy talks in Alexandria, an editorial in the Egyptian newspaper Al Akhbar accused Begin of "blowing a dust storm on the peace path even before the autonomy negotiations got under way."

The newspaper urged The United States "to cut Begin down to size and chop off the snake's head before it spills the venom."

The United States also is participating in the talks.

Interior Minister Yosef Burg, who heads the Israeli delegation, said Israel was "very, very angry" about what he termed "personal attacks" on Begin.

Israel considers the Egyptian press heavily influenced by the government, and Israel Radio reported that Jerusalem would consider calling its delegation home if the campaign against Begin continued.

Last week Israel established the first new West Bank settlement since the signing of the Israel-Egypt peace treaty, prompting criticism from Egypt and the United States. Over the weekend several thousand Israelis journeyed to the settlement, Elon Moreh, to urge that the government reverse its decision.

In an interview, Sunday, U.S. National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski said Elon Moreh could "contribute to a reversal" of the peace momentum. He objected to private Arab land's being used for the outpost and said he was "very encouraged" by the anti-settlement protest.

Begin did not refer to specific critics, but said, "a campaign of incitement has been launched against the government of Israel and against me personally."

Addressing domestic critics who call Jewish settlements "provocation," Begin said: "Shame on them — by doing so they adopt the evil path of the enemies of the Jewish people."

The prime minister said Israel would fulfill its promise to grant autonomy to the Palestinians, but reiterated his oft-stated position which guides Israel in the new round of negotiations:

"Jerusalem is the eternal, indivisible capital of Israel.

"We have the full right to settle in all parts of Eretz Israel (The Land of Israel). Such settlement is also a vital security need to prevent the murder of our children.

"Under no circumstances will we permit the establishment of a Palestinian state in Judea, Samaria and the Gaza District."

Israel has about 50 settlements in the West Bank, and their future is certain to be one of the toughest issues in the autonomy talks. Egypt wants them removed, and says West Bankers and Gazans should have the right to set up an independent state. Egypt also demands that Israel withdraw from the Arab sector of Jerusalem.

Begin also scolded some press reports about settlements, calling them "distortions originating either in cynicism or in ignorance." He singled out the New York Times, which, he said, wrote that Begin promised not to build settlements on land "seized from the Arabs."

"There is absolutely no truth to this report," he said. Begin said he pledged at the Camp David peace talks in March to halt settlement activity for three months "and nothing more."

Lawyer Deals In Air Disasters

HE WROTE THE BOOK — Lee Kreindler, who handled his first airplane crash suit in 1952 and went on to write a two-volume work on Aviation Accident Law, sits in his New York City office Monday. Just 24 hours after the DC-10 crash in Chicago, Kreindler interrupted a tennis game to take a phone call. It was from a man whose brother had been killed in the crash. (AP Laserphoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-four hours after the DC-10 jetliner crashed near Chicago, killing all aboard, Lee Kreindler's tennis game was interrupted by a phone call. "Lighting has struck twice," he was told.

Stanley Stogel, on the line from Los Angeles, explained he again needed the lawyer's services because his brother had been aboard the ill-fated American Airlines jet. Stogel made a similar request 17 years ago after his parents died in another air accident.

Within a few minutes that Saturday, Kreindler telephoned his law partners. By Tuesday, the first business day after the crash, the New York firm filed the first lawsuit in the crash against American Airlines and the plane's manufacturer, McDonnell Douglas.

Some lawyers speculate that suit and others filed on behalf of the 275 persons who died in the nation's worst airplane disaster may result in awards totalling as high as $500 million.

If past air crashes are any indication, the legal fight for compensation will be waged by a small circle of specialists, many of whom for the past dozen years have concentrated on air disaster litigation — a field that is highly technical and equally lucrative.

The settlements are in the tens of millions of dollars and the legal fees — always on a contingency basis — can be several million dollars to a firm.

Kreindler, who handled his first plane case in 1952 and has written a two-volume book on the subject, is among the best known in this circle. Others are Donald W. Madole of Washington, Gerald Sterns of San Francisco, and W. Marshall Morgan of Los Angeles.

"There's no doubt about it ... you can make a lot of money if everything just falls right," says Morgan, 54, whose fee from the 1974 Turkish Airlines DC-10 crash outside of Paris was $500,000.

Kreindler adds, "Yes, for the guys who've made it, it's lucrative."

The top lawyers in the field say they are rarely approached by relatives of victims and usually have clients referred to them because their expertise is well known by other lawyers. They are highly critical of what Morgan calls "plane ambulance chasing," some evidence of which already has surfaced in Chicago.

Yet after every major airline crash, no matter where in the world, some of their number are quickly near the scene gathering information for the cases they know will come their way.

In recent years the insurance industry ad the airlines have tred to get out-of-court settlements and the money offers have been high. That strategy, say legal sources, was evident in the collisions over San Diego last year and at Tenerife in the Canary Islands in 1977.

Some legal sources reportedly predict a low-keyed resolution of expected suits arising from the Chicago crash. But Kreindler says he will seek punitive as well as compensatory damages — a move that indicates possible lengthy legal arguments.

At a 1978 meeting of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America, John V. Brennan, president of United States Aviation Insurance Group, which covered the plane that crashed in Chicago, provided a glimpse at the money reaped as a result of suits arising from air disasters.

In a 1974 Paris crash, Brennan told the lawyers, the settlement won by four U.S. law firms on behalf of 296 claims reached $60.7 million with legal fees of nearly $12 million, or better than 19 percent.

Donald Mandole's Washington firm represented 144 claims with settlements of nearly $29 million and fees of about $4.4 million. Kreindler' firm had 68 claims with a settlement of $13.1 million and fees of $2.3 million, including $500,000 for Morgan who handled much of the case in Los Angeles.

Brennan said such fees were unreasonable since there was a high number of cases involving only a single instance of liability. "Even supermarkets give discounts for volume," he declared.

Insurers have argued that suits filed by lawyers on a contingency fee — based on a percentage of the settlement — have driven up settlements, with much of the money going to lawyers.

On June 1, Robert L. Alpert, a vice president of U.S. Aviation Underwriters, sent letters advising relatives of victims in the Chicago crash to hire lawyers on an hourly, not a continengency basis. Kreindler said Monday he has strongly protested the letter, accusing insurers of trying to give legal advice to those who might sue the insurance companies' airline clients.

He and other lawyers defend the practice of trying to get as many cases as possible out of a single accident. "The economiesare suchthat it would be prohibitive to handle isolated cases if the job is going to be done right," Kreindler said in a telephone interview.

The costs of disaster cases are extremely high, the lawyers argue. Litigation is complicated, investigative work often is spread around the world, and copying of documents alone may run into the tens of thousands of dollars.

Since a critical strategy is to garner as many cases as possible from a single accident, the best known lawyers concede "plane ambulance chasing" is not uncommon.

As result, it was no great surprise that in the week after the May 25 DC-10 crash at O'Hare International Airport, a Chicago man with the same name as the husband of one of the crash victims began receiving telephone messages from a Chicago lawyer.

"That is utterly outrageous" snapped Kreindler.

Anti-Inflation Policy Reinstatement Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration urged the U.S. Court of Appeals on Monday to overturn lower court ruling and restore the president's power to punish violators of his anti-inflation guidelines.

In papers filed with the court, the government argued that Carter is within his legal rights to threaten to deny contracts worth $5 million or more to firms that violate his voluntary wage-price guidelines.

"The president's actions are not inconsistent with any statute but rather constitute a reasonable means of achieving the statutory goals of economy and efficiency in government procurement," the government argued. "His actions, therefore, must be sustained."

The government filed its 47-page defense in its appeal of a May 31 decision that dealt Carter's anti-inflation program a sharp setback by stripping it of its only teeth.

U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker ruled in a suit brought by the AFL-CIO and nine member unions that Carter acted unconstitutionally in threatening to deny federal contracts as a way to enforce his guidelines.

Parker ruled that such penalties turn Carter's "voluntary" program into mandatory wage-price controls, which are banned under current law. Only Congress can reinstitute mandatory controls, the judge said.

The appeals court will hear oral arguments in the case on Wednesday. In signs of the dispute's importance, a full bench of nine judges, rather than the customary three-judge panel, is hearing the case, and the government's position will be argued in person by Deputy Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti, the government's No. 2 attorney.

In its defense brief, the government contended that the use of federal purchasing power as a tool of enforcement does not change the voluntary nature of Carter's anti-inflation program.

"If one wishes to contract with the government, one must meet the terms specified in the contract," the government argued. "That, however, does not make those terms any more 'mandatory' than any other term in a government contract."

The government said controls "eliminate all free, competitie decisions" and levy "stiff penalties" on violators. "The president here, by contrast, has merely established a condition for government contracts. He has not provided for controls," the government argued.

Parker said in his ruling that such an argument "is simply to blink at reality." The judge added, "It would be difficult to convince a business executive or anyone faced with a decision to comply or lose a substantial government contract that such a program is voluntary."

It is estimated that between $40 billion and $56 billion a year in government purchases would be affected by Carter's guidelines, which seek to hold wage and fringe benefit increases to 7 percent a year and price hikes below the average increases of the previous two years.

High Court Refuses Suit On U.S. Motto

WASHINGTON (AP) -The Supreme Court on Monday turned down atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair's bid to have the words "In God We Trust" banned from all U.S. coins.

From her Austin headquarters, Mrs. O'Hair blamed the failure of her appeal on the court's domination by former President Richard Nixon's appointments.

The atheist, whose lawsuit was one of two that led to the court's 1963 decision limiting prayer in the public schools, said the four Nixon appointees should have resigned at the same time as Nixon.

Nine justices sit on the nation's highest bench.

The court refused without comment to hear her appeal, which sought to have the national motto declared unconstitutional.

In other cases involving Texans, the Supreme Court:

-agreed to consider a federal appeals court ruling that parts of the state's obscenity laws were unconstitutional.

-overturned by a 5-4 vote a lower court ruling on the Texas child abuse laws, saying the federal court should not have interfered since the matter was pending in the state court.

-left intact rulings that the Bexar County prosecutor and the San Antonio police chief in 1974 illegally harassed a local adult movie house.

-refused to hear an appeal by Bernard Ferguson, sentenced to die for the 1977 murder of a Killeen store clerk.

Mrs. O'Hair argued that the Constitution's "freedom of religion" guarantees should include "freedom from religion" for atheists. She was joined by other petitioners in her appeal.

U.S. District Judge Jack Roberts of Austin and the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had rejected the arguments, first raised in a 1977 lawsuit.

Concerning the Texas obscenity laws, the circuit court ruled 8-6 in December that portions were unconstitutional. The decision consolidated 20 cases, led by a 1973 suit against the state by the King Arts Theatre adult movie house in San Angelo.

The building's landlord told King Arts that its lease would be dropped because county attorney George McRea had threatened to name the theater as a public nuisance.

The full appeals court said state laws allowing temporary injunctions against movie houses and other establishments believed to be showing obscene material were unconstitutional because future films would be suppressed without first judging them offensive.

Texas Attorney General Mark White asked for the Supreme Court review, arguing that the 5th Circuit ruling conflicts with past decisions on obscenity made by the nation's highest court.

The appeal from Bexar County was an attempt by former prosecutor Ted Butler and police chief Emil Peters to have overturned lower court decisions in favor of Richard Dexter, in 1974 the manager of the Fiesta Theater.

The theater was raided four times in a two-week period of that year. The movie, "Deep Throat," and the theater's film projector were seized each time as "criminal instruments." Dexter was arrested three times.

A federal trial court said the repetition of the raids and seizures showed "bad faith" on the part of police and prosecutor and barred law enforcement officials from charging Dexter with other obscenity offenses.

A Red Chinese Frankenstein?

IF ONE IS to believe news accounts today, all paths lead to Peking where the next big international trade pot at the end of the rainbow lies.

Hardly a week passes since the U.S. formalized relations with Red China but that a delegation of Americans, usually business leaders, visits the mainland.

Many return, talking in glowing terms of the vast possibilities of trade with the Communist nation. Obviously, much of the "glow" has been in the form of propaganda handed out by the host Chinese.

THIS IS NOT to put down an open door policy, including trade, with Peking, but it is to set some things in order.

In the first place, U.S. trade in the Asian theater, particularly with Taiwan, wasn't all that bad. Secondly, with Taiwan and other nations, it was on a more or less cash basis.

In other words, Uncle Sam wasn't underwriting the customer, so to speak.

NOW, AS THE thesis goes, those 800 million Chinese are prime consumer targets for everything from radios to soft drinks.

Never mind that as things now stand, China is a huge land with a highly complex society, regimented to the point of enslavement for all practical purposes. And never mind that the individuals in that society do not have access to the funds to become instant buyers such as we envision them in America or Europe.

Too, far too many people have ignored the small type in most talk of trade with China, that being that the U.S. will be expected to underwrite such things, especially in the heavy industry field.

RECENTLY, ONE Dr. Kenneth E. Boulding, director of the Institute of Behavioral Science at the University of Colorado, took a hard look at China today.

A liberal and longtime supporter of peace causes, Prof. Boulding found some deep concerns after a visit to the mainland.

One of the major ones, he says, has to do with "the four modernizations" of the huge nation. He notes that 70 to 80 percent of the Chinese still harvest a poor existence from agriculture. Any "modernization" in this area would free millions from jobs overnight and create an instant employment problem.

Dr. Boulding also noted that modernization of China's defense complex also would pose problems for the rest of the world. The vast underground defense installations suggest China expects a nuclear war. The tension between China and Russia creates a tinderbox which, with a "modern Red Chinese" war machine could trigger such a conflict.

In brief, however ironic it sounds, while opening a door to Red China, with emphasis on hoped-for trade, we should remember that we may be helping create a Frankenstein we can't control in other areas.

AN EDITORIAL:

Trouble Among Neighbors

ALL OF THE "international" problems facing the U.S. aren't far away. Some are right on our doorstep.

This became evident the past week as the situation in Nicaragua's civil war heated up with new attacks on government forces and charges of interference and arms aid from other nations.

The struggle in the Central American nation not only affects President Somoza's dictatorial rule, but involves U.S. relations with other Latin American points.

THIS IS ESPECIALLY so as regards another key country, Mexico, which has shown increasing coolness to Washington of late.

Evidence that things are coming apart at the seams mounted as Mexico broke diplomatic relations with Managua and the latter charged that arms for the rebel Sandinistas were being sent in from Panama, Mexico and Costa Rica.

The U.S. role in this latest uprising—Venezuela having weathered an earlier storm—is a sticky one indeed.

Not only does Washington have to walk a tight rope as regards President Somoza's iron-fisted regime, but seek to improve relations with Mexico's President Lopez Portillo, who has moved even further away from Washington since President Carter's strained visit some weeks ago.

AT STAKE not only is Mexico's goodwill and vast oil supply, but U.S. credibility throughout the Carribean.

Unfortunately, the lack of a strong position may be the very thing undermining U.S. prestige and power among the Latins.

Although it is now popular to tweak Uncle Sam's nose, while reaching for his pocketbook, around the world, one can make a case for the fact that as the U.S. shows weakness, or even compromise, whether in Iran or Panama, we seem to lose respect.

AT THE RISK of sounding jingoist, it is not too much to suggest that power, handled fairly, still evokes a certain order in international affairs.

Perhaps it is time for the U.S. to quit playing the role of Uncle to the Third World, the racial bigots in reverse and start acting like the world leader we are. If that means keeping order in this hemisphere, then so be it.

The only ones to benefit from disorder—uprising or a family fuss—will be Russia and the Communists. And in the final analysis, that may be what much of it is all about anyway.

ART BUCHWALD:

Goose's Death On 17th Green Poses Dilemma

WASHINGTON—A new chapter in the annals of justice—or is it golf—was written last week when a Washington physician was charged with beating a Canadian goose to death with his putter on the 17th green of the Congressional Country Club.

The charges brought by federal wildlife authorities were originally investigated by the country club's board of directors, but they came to no conclusion as to what really happened.

Dr. Sherman A. Thomas, the accused golfer, said that his approach shot to the green hit the goose, one of two hanging around the 17th hole. In his medical opinion, the goose was in such agony from the blow of the ball that the doctor decided to put it out of its misery.

Instead of pulling the plug on the goose, he struck it several times with his putting iron, thus performing the first mercy killing of a feathered bird on any golf course since the game was invented.

BUT THERE IS another version, and this is the reason the wildlife people have preferred charges. Dr. Thomas, according to an eyewitness, was about to putt when the goose honked.

This, the witness maintains, so enraged the physician that he attacked the goose with his putter and killed the bird.

The doctor is charged with "knowingly killing a goose out of season" and also with being "illegally in possession of a dead Canadian goose."

Even had Dr. Thomas killed the goose when the hunting season was on, he would still have been in violation of the law as the Bird Act specifies you can only go after geese with shotguns, bows and arrows, falcons and goshawks.

Putters are out of the question.

If the doctor is found guilty he could receive a maximum sentence of six months in jail and a fine of $500.

SO MUCH FOR killing one's goose.

The main question is how does this affect the game of golf? Every golfer I heard out gave me a different interpretation of the rules.

One said, "I believe that Dr. Thomas should have been penalized one stroke for each time he hit the goose."

But someone else in the locker room disagreed. "No, you cannot be penalized no matter how many times you strike at the bird, providing you don't move your ball.

"From what I understand, Thomas approached the ball; the goose honked; he left the ball on the green, and started to swing his putter at the Canadian's head. It might be considered illegal bird killing, but it certainly is not illegal golf."

"Wait a minute," another duffer said. "Thomas' story was that his ball accidentally hit the goose on his approach shot to the green.

"THEREFORE, ALTHOUGH he had to play his ball from the spot where it fell after it struck the bird, he was still under par when he attacked the goose with his putter."

"But why the putter?" someone asked. "Wouldn't it have been more merciful if he had done it with a five iron?"

"It's all right for us to sit here in the locker room and Monday-quarterback Thomas' choice of irons, but I believe you have to be in his golf shoes before you can say which club he should have used.

"I might have killed the goose with a driver. You might have killed him with a niblick, but Thomas was right there and decided on a putter.

"I believe we need a club ruling on this. Today it's Thomas...tomorrow it could be one of us. I want to know exactly how many shots I am permitted before I get a birdie."

"AS LONG AS we're at it," another chap said, "I would like to ask the grounds' committee what a Canadian goose was doing there anyway.

"Correct me if I'm wrong, but aren't Canadians forbidden from using the course during the hours when members are playing?"

"I believe there is a bylaw on it," someone replied.

"But let's find out the exact wording as to when you stuff a goose and when you putt it."

GEORGE F. WILL:

Spain On New Road

MADRID—Adolfo Suarez, Spain's prime minister, is one of those glandular political animals who need little sleep and almost no nourishment, to the despair of aides who are slaves to normal metabolisms. Small-framed, sleek and glossy, he is at once feline and masculine.

He may be the handsomest head of a government since Jefferson, and if he ever applies himself to developing his skills at campaigning, on television and elsewhere, southern Europe may have a second superstar.

The first is Pope John Paul II, who must be taken seriously because he takes ideas seriously.

It is not clear that Suarez has that facet of a first-rate public man. But he may have what Spain needs more, the humbler skills of government.

The king plucked Suarez from well down in the ranks of politicians because Suarez was "blue," but not "too blue." He was head of the "blue shirts," the state-sponsored Movimiento Nacional.

That was Franco's perfunctory bow to the fiction that his regime had goals other than survival and tranquility.

Today Spain has a Communist Party that won't say what it is (it is feigning moderation), a Socialist Party that doesn't know what it is (it is torn between Marxism and moderation), and Suarez's Union of the Democratic Center (UCD) that doesn't seem to care much what it is.

In fact, the UCD is an ideological tossed salad, composed of careerists from Franco's regime, and amateurs spanning a political spectrum wider than that of either American party.

THOSE WHO GREW up, politically, within Franco's system are used to a heavy state, and especially a state-directed economy. They are pleased to call themselves social democrats.

Some other UCD members incline toward traditional European liberalism, favoring a free market and a minimal state.

It is frequently and wrongly said that Spain had 36 apolitical years. Actually, for 36 years Spain had bureaucratic politics, the opportunist politics of those with an eye for the main chance within an authoritarian regime.

The most frequent criticism of Suarez is that he rose in that system because he is a mere political technician, indifferent to ideas.

Critics call him manipulative; they say he dominates his party to prevent the emergence of people of stature who might become rivals; they say he is "merely pragmatic," an improviser relying on abundant patronage and overflowing charm rather than a coherent political program.

THE FACT THAT these complaints greatly resemble liberals' complaints about Franklin D. Roosevelt suggests why they are, in a sense, an inadvertent tribute.

Spain is at that state of democratic innocence where ideology is confused with idealism, and the mundane but indispensable skills of maneuvering, negotiating and log-rolling are thought somehow to taint rather than fulfill free government.

Suarez received his political education in a system that provided virtually no role for public advocacy of political ideas, and his "public" skills are undeveloped.

But he is precociously gifted at the "semi-private" dimension of democracy, the artful brokering that builds coalitions. Spain has never lacked ideologues, and never had enough brokers.

SPAIN HAS serious unemployment among youths; depressed regions; and extreme separatist movements. The Russians are almost certainly active in the Socialist as well as the Communist Party.

The Russians may decide they have an interest in destabilizing the nation, which is a key to the security of the western Mediterranean, and from which, on a clear day, you can see Africa.

Many Spaniards would blame democracy for any destabilization, and would desire a return to a heavy state.

One reason Spain is cautious about joining NATO is that, having stayed out of both world wars, it has no strong feelings about collective security.

But another reason is that it does not want to increase Soviet interest in destabilization.

DESTABILIZATION MIGHT provoke a Franco, if there is a Franco in today's army.

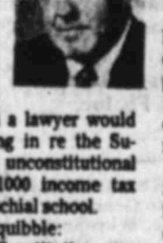

True, Franco had been a fighting hero prior to leading the rebellion in 1936, and there have been no occasions for military heroism since 1939.

But Franco encouraged the army to think of itself as the guarantor of order, and that idea is alive in some civilians as well as officers.

Obviously every mile of Spain's drive to democracy is hazardous.

Suarez's critics say he has been lucky, that he has not been tested, because Spain has not hit any potholes. But not hitting potholes is one sign of a good driver.

ANDREW TULLY:

The Tax Quibble

WASHINGTON—Perhaps even a lawyer would be amused by a bit of quibbling in re the Supreme Court's ruling that it is unconstitutional for states to give parents a $1000 income tax break for sending a child to a parochial school.

So herewith, in a light vein, the quibble:

The First Amendment to the Constitution says Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the exercise thereof.

The Tenth Amendment says that powers not delegated to the U.S. by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people.

My question, then, is whether a state may legally permit tax breaks to parents of parochial school children. The First Amendment bars only Congress from legislating in aid of a religion.

NOWHERE DOES it prohibit a state from doing so.

Very well. I quibble. None of us wants an established religion in these more-or-less United States. Still, I could wish the Supreme Court had given the New Jersey case a hearing, as three of its members proposed.

The highest bench then would have had the opportunity to examine the issue of government by selective neutrality.

With admirable clarity, the First Amendment says only that Congress may not decide that this should be a Catholic country, or an Episcopalian country.

Not so much as a syllable in that amendment says Congress may not offer financial aid to a private institution performing a public service.

INDEED, THE federal government for years has been awarding direct financial grants to private colleges, many of them secular.

The government also offers an individual the incentive to give money to his church by permitting tax deductions for such contributions.

That's neutrality? Some of the colleges getting federal funds openly plug their religious denominations. Morning prayers and chapel attendance are included among the activities on the curricula.

There is the cry that tuition tax credits would be an unfair burden to childless taxpayers. The childless pay taxes to support public schools, just as the rest of us do.

BUT IN FACT every child removed from the public education system—which is in lousy shape—represents a saving for every taxpayer of at least $2500 a year.

And lest we forget, parents of children in private schools also pay taxes to support public schools—and, like the childless couple, get nothing out of it.

Incidentally, the Supreme Court wrote no opinion in the New Jersey case, announcing its decision not to hear it in a four-word order.

Given the majority's cavalier approach to a complicated issue, one wonders how long the armed services—and Congress itself—will be permitted the services of their chaplains.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

A Dream Machine

SINCE IT'S obvious they're never going to invent an automobile that runs on hot air (a resource of which we have more than a sufficiency), the least we can do is applaud Carter's "car of the future" idea.

And hope, of course, that this is not just more political exhaust to keep us quiet while he tries to find a fix for the energy crunch. A forlorn hope, maybe, but we must cling to something.

Anyway, the President, who used to be an engineer himself, thinks it's possible to build a dream car that doesn't guzzle gas, is safer than what we're driving now, and doesn't smog up the landscape.

And he's willing to pitch in with a couple of hundred million (of our bucks) to get the research going.

He expects Detroit to dig down for a few million, too. Not to mention the oil companies. (Out of their "windfall profits," maybe?)

WHAT HE'S calling for is a revolution in automotive design that will do for the car of the '90s what Henry Ford did with his old Model T. This won't come as much of a surprise to anybody, but the auto moguls aren't exactly revving their motors in happy anticipation of this new venture.

They can't even come up with a fleet of cars that will meet the federal requirements of 27.5 miles per gallon by 1983.

They have, with much squawking and stalling, managed to add only five mpg to their designs in the past four years. Back in 1975, when Congress began to get tough, new models were getting around 14; now they're up to 19.

That leaves Detroit with only four years to beef it up to 6.5 mpg more, a prospect that gives them a bad case of the twitches.

And that's only the beginning.

TRANSPORTATION SECRETARY Brock Adams says it should be possible to "reinvent the automobile" with technology that will boost its fuel efficiency as high as 50 mpg by the year 2000.

Talk like this makes the "big four" very nervous.

But a couple of amateur grease monkeys say they've already done it. Better even.

Ralph Moody and Mike Shetley, who race cars for a living, have rebuilt a '79 Mercury, switched it over to diesel fuel, and road-tested it on an 800-mile run from Florida to Washington, D.C.

They claim their "Moodymobile" made it on 12 gallons, which comes out to an average of almost 67 mpg. On other tests they say they got as high as 80.

They're willing to let Carter in on their secret, and, if he's willing to listen, he could save a couple of hundred million.

BUT THEY'RE not the only ones who've been tinkering. The idea of a car that runs on alternate fuels, a true gasless car, has been tantalizing inventors long before service stations began running out of gas.

What set them off, apparently, was the general assumption that Detroit has gone about as far as it can go on the gasoline engine with current technology.

That started them fooling around with things like garbage (for gasohol), electricity, sunshine, the bottom of the henhouse, and almost anything wet that will burn.

The most promising is one that's been around a long time; cars used to run fine on electricity, as your Daddy's maiden aunt could have told you.

Jack Benny got a lot of mileage out of that old Maxwell; more, probably, than most electric cars ever will on highways. Fifty miles is about as far as they'll go on a charge.

BUT THEY DO have a lot in their favor. Their batteries can be brought to life on any household outlet...they're pollution free...and not even the heaviest toe can rev 'em past 50 miles an hour.

Even their backers admit they're more a potential commuter car than anything else. That's not exactly a drawback, though, since most people drive less than 50 miles to work and smog things up something fierce in every rush hour.

It's the answer to housewife driving, too. Mom can do the marketing, run the car pools, and visit close friends (literally "close") without worrying about her batteries letting her down.

With sunshine you get a shorter spin—up to five or 10 miles. But a firm in Florida (where else?) is working on a car that runs on batteries charged by the sun.

THERE ARE still a few bugs to be worked out. Like how to develop a solar collector that doesn't cost more than the car. And what happens when you're 10 miles down the road and you run into a rainstorm.

Then there's the external combustion model, like steam engines. And mechanical hopefuls are fooling around with two different engines—the turbine and the Stirling engine—that will run on anything that will burn, from rum to peanut oil. (Say now...peanut oil? You listening, Mr. President?)

These engines, their backers claim, have up to 60-percent better fuel economy, which is great, as long as we don't run into a booze shortage. They don't pollute the air, either, although there are plenty of folks who wouldn't mind trading smog for a few whiffs of rum-flavored fumes.

Don't laugh. At Indy they run fine on straight alcohol. Besides, if gasoline prices keep going up, the day may come when "one for the road" will be the one we pour in the tank to get us home.

Q. WHAT'S THE best way for a woman to increase her strength?

A. Debatable. But researchers at the University of California at Davis contend weight-lifting is about the best. They recommend workouts of an hour a day three times a week for 10 weeks. They think the strength can be boosted by 30 percent without increasing the size of the muscles.

Jail Construction Slowdown Possible

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Furr's Constrtuction Co. work on the new $4 million county jail may be complicated by the financial problems of its parent firm, Furr's Inc., Lubbock county commissioners were told Monday.

However, an official of the construction firm, contacted afterward by The Avalanche-Journal, denied that the difficulties encountered by Furr's Inc. will have any effect on the project.

County engineer Arnold Maeker, who is supervising the jail project, said Furr's Construction Co. has had some difficulty in paying for materials as they arrive, but he said materials have been paid for eventually and that no serious problems have arisen so far as a result of Furr's Inc. having filed for relief under Chapter XI of the Bankruptcy Act a few weeks ago.

Maeker said that Furr's Construction officers have told him a court order provides for sufficient income to be transferred from the parent corporation to allow the construction company to fulfill its financial obligations.

He explained after his appearance before the commissioners court that county payments to the construction company run about six weeks behind and that the company must have enough money on hand to operate about two months at a time ahead of the county payments.

The complication would arise, he said, if the firm were unable to pay for materials and meet its payroll to keep its construction crew on the job.

In that event, he explained, its $1.4 million performance bond with a Seattle, Wash. bonding company would be forfeited and the job turned over to someone else.

The project has to be kept on schedule to avoid lawsuits from other contractors involved who might file suit if prevented from completing their contracts on schedule, Maeker explained.

Later, Steve Ruten, vice president and general manager for Furr's Construction Co., said the parent company's financial problems would not affect work on the jail and that only current bills on the job are due.

He stressed that his company's payroll is "plenty good" and that he questioned the source of Maeker's information.

Ruten added that Furr's Construction is a separate corporation under the Furr's umbrella and was not named as a party under the parent firm's filing under Chapter XI.

He said that should any problems arise, the bond would cover the company's work, adding that Maeker was "expecting the worst."

As for Maeker's statement that Furr's Construction has had trouble paying for materials as they arrive, Ruten said the company is following a payment plan authorized by suppliers and subcontractors. He said payments are not due until three days after his company receives money from the county for the ordered goods.

Furr's Construction has completed about 70 percent of its part of the jail project, which is the general construction contract for the primary, one-level, structure east of the existing county jail in downtown Lubbock, Maeker said.

Specifically, he told the commissioners that construction material suppliers had contacted him about the possibility of liens against materials supplied to Furr's if bills for the materials were not paid.

Contracts were let with other contractors for the jail cells and related machinery and other phases of the project.

County Bodies Request Third Court-At-Law

Citing what they said is a greatly increased civil and criminal case load, county law enforcement officials and Lubbock County Bar Association representatives Monday asked county commissioners to fund a third county court-at-law.

The commissioners did not make an immediate decision on the request from County Court-at-Law Judge J.Q. Warnick, Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford and others.

Warnick, who presides over one of the two courts in operation now, said there has been a 21 percent increase in civil case filings so far this year over 1978, but an even greater increase in criminal cases.

He said there has been a 47 percent increase in Class A and Class B misdemeanors filed in the two courts.

The commissioners delayed action on the court and on a sheriff's office request for $6,900 to rent uniforms because County Judge Rod Shaw and Commissioner Alton Brazell were absent and the full court was not in session.

Montford said the third court would bring increased revenues to the county.

He said another court would bring in significantly more money in fines, but added, "my great concern, of course, is having unajudicated cases coming up at the end of the year. If we don't have another court of law, we're still going to wind up at the end of the year with unajudicated cases.

Montford also said he needs two more assistant criminal district attorneys to handle misdemeanor cases.

County Auditor Dale Gallimore said he was unable immediately to estimate the cost of adding the court.

He said last year, when the bar asked for another county court-at-law and another district court, that adding another county court would increase the overall cost from $113,000 to $145,000 per year.

He said, however, that he would not be able to analyze the 1979 statistics until later in the year when a more definite pattern may be established.

In other business, commissioners Jim Lancaster, Edgar Chance and Coy Biggs appointed Steve Smith of Smith Ford in Slaton and W.B. (Dub) Rushing, Briercroft Savings & Loan board chairman, to serve the unexpired terms of Lubbock County Hospital District board members Jack Flygare and Ben Robinson, who have resigned. Smith and Rushing will serve through Jan. 14, 1981.

The commissioners heard county jail administrator Gary McGrew ask funding for uniform rentals.

Sheriff's officers recently began wearing uniforms after several years of dressing mostly in western suits of their own choice, and McGrew asked $6,900 for a year of renting uniforms for 33 officers at three changes of uniform per week.

City Man Wanted In Oklahoma

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Oklahoma authorities Monday were looking for a Lubbock man who was involved in a traffic accident shortly after 6 p.m. Sunday which seriously injured a 29-year-old woman, also of Lubbock.

Chris K. Hubble, 33, of Route 9, Box 354, Lubbock, reportedly walked out of the Memorial Hospital in Ardmore, Okla., about 6:45 a.m. Monday. He was wanted for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, according to the Oklahoma Highway Patrol.

Lubbock County sheriff's Capt. Alton Hobbs said Hubble, a former bail bondsman here, reported his 1976 Datsun 280Z stolen Feb. 27, 1977.

Hobbs said there never was a report that Hubble recovered the car, nor $23,000 in property that he said was stolen in a house burglary on that date. However, the car reportedly was the same vehicle Hubble was driving at 6:10 p.m. Sunday when it went out of control and crashed, seriously injuring his passenger, Karen Sue Praul, 29, of 1603-D 59th St. in Lubbock.

The one-car mishap occurred on U.S. Highway 77 about seven miles south of Marietta, Okla. Miss Praul was thrown from the vehicle. She was taken by military helicopter to St. Anthony Hospital in Oklahoma City where she was listed in serious condition, suffering from head and internal injuries.

Oklahoma agencies assisting the Ardmore Police Department in locating Hubble were Carter County sheriff's deputies and the Oklahoma Highway Patrol.

A hospital spokesman said the man, who had been listed in satisfactory condition with head and leg injuries, walked down the back stairs and out of the building. Police were called when it was discovered the patient was gone, the spokesman said.

"He's still gone...we have officers out looking for him," Ardmore police officer D.E. Welch said Monday.

The highway patrol said Hubble was traveling south when he apparently failed to negotiate a curve. The sports car went down an embankment and overturned once.

Hubble also is wanted by Lubbock deputies on a misdemeanor warrant.

Nazi SS chief Heinrich Himmler committed suicide in prison at Lueneburg, Germany, three days after his capture by the British in 1945.

Late Monsoon Rains Too Late For Crops

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Monsoon rains, delayed by a month, finally have brought some relief to badly scorched West Bengal State after a seven-week heat wave, blamed for more than 350 deaths in northern India. But officials say damage to crops is irreversible, and $125 million worth of jute and tea and $156.5 milion dollars worth of rice have been lost.

In West Bengal alone, at least 40 deaths were attributed to the hot spell, in which temperatures hit 116 degrees. Now, said one oficial, "it doesn't matter much whether the drought spell has broken. The damage to food crops has already been done and there is no hope of recovering them."

Church Opens Preparedness Meeting

Thrifty advice on money-saving topics from home gardening to food preservation will be presented at an open workshop at the Mormon chapel Friday.

A basic emphasis of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is self-reliance and preparedness. The Mormon church believes that each family unit should do all that it can for itself and prepare for what the future may bring.

A church educational project to implement this concept is the "Family Preparedness" program, which promotes wise and sound planning for the future and husbanding of resources by each family unit and individual.

In an effort to serve its own members and interested outsiders, the local Mormon church will present an educational program about family preparedness at the chapel at 3211 58th St. Friday from 6 to 9 p.m.

The three-hour workshop will present basic, practical means of increasing self-reliance and wise use of resources that can be used by all families, and will have as leaders local experts in several fields.

As explained by the Mormons, the concept of preparedness and self-reliance is by no means a "doomsday" idea; rather it is a way of helping the family build its individual strength and resources.

The Stake Melchizedek Priesthood Committee and the Seventies Quorum, church bodies sponsoring the workshop, explain that the material to be presented will be of value to both Mormon and non-Mormon families interested in the more sensible use of family resources.

As outlined by the President of the Church, Spencer W. Kimball, "Family preparedness implies the husbanding of resources, the wise planning of financial matters, full provision for personal health, and adequate preparation for education and career development, giving appropriate attention to home production and storage as well as the development of emotional resiliency."

Activities planned for the evening workshop include nine areas which together constitute a comprehenensive program in family preparedness.

Stake missionaries will begin the program at 6 p.m. by explaining the family preparedness concept, after which Tom Davis, an insurance executive, will discuss family financial planning.

Dr. Ronald Walser, director of the Texas Tech University Farms, will discuss "Grow it yourself," with an emphasis on family gardening on a large or small lot. He will give the home gardener helpful information on raising foodstuffs on city lots as a means of improving the family diet and becoming more self-reliant.

Elizabeth Bennett, a professional counselor, will give tips on food purchasing which should be of value to any consumer. Preparing food for storage will be discussed by Ina Hudnall, Helen Trull and Gail Shannon, Mormon mothers and counselors with expertise in drying, canning, and freezing of foodstuffs.

Food storage planning for the home will be discused by Dr. Lane Anderson, professor of business administration at Tech. Mormon families are urged to provide storage within the home of provisions to care for the family in case of personal or community disaster, and many of the hints learned by these families will be of interest to other, non-Mormon families as well.

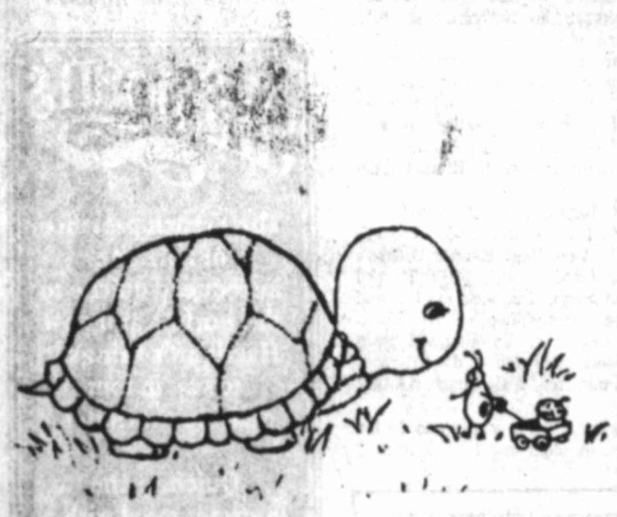

Dr. Larry Higgins and Emma Lou Higgins will discuss the utilization of wheat in the family diet. Dr. Higgins is a professor of botany at Tech while Mrs. Higgins is a marketing representative.

Dr. John Anderson, local bee-keeper, will speak on bee-keeping and uses of natural honey. Dr. Don Ashdown, professor of agriculture at Tech, will serve as special program consultant.

All interested persons are welcome at the meeting. There is no charge and no pre-registration is necessary.

One of Ely Culbertson's great contributions to bridge was the idea of using a four-notrump bid to ask for aces. The Culbertson 4 and 5 notrump convention was too complicated for the players of 1932 and had other weaknesses so that it disappeared years back, but it did have some success in those early pre-Blackwood days.

Here we see Ely and Jo (Mrs. Culbertson) using it in Bermuda in 1932.

Jo's jump to four hearts showed one quick trick plus to two quick tricks and very good trump support, so Ely brought his four notrump convention into action. His bid guaranteed either three aces or two aces and the king of trumps and asked Jo to bid five notrump with two aces, five hearts with no aces, six hearts with the ace of hearts and five of a suit with that ace.

Had she responded five hearts, Ely planned to pass. Had she responded five diamonds, Ely would Have signed off at five hearts. When she showed him the spade ace, Ely bid the grand slam.

Ask the Experts

A Hawaiian reader asks if we consider that Ely and Jo Culbertson were the greatest husband-wife pair of all time.

They were by far the best of their day, but bridge has improved a lot in the last 40 years.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell me why people who hold jobs where confidentiality is vital, blab to outsiders.

We live in a rather small town. The privileged information that leaks out of our banks, schools, health clinics, etc., is beyond belief. I've heard bank clerks (and executives) gossip about overdrafts, loans, bad checks and foreclosures. Teachers pass on information about students that would curl your hair. Nurses and yes, sometimes doctors, discuss intimate details of their patients' illnesses and lives — things that are highly personal. For example — if a woman doesn't want it known that she had a recurrence of a malignancy, does the nurse who assisted with the surgery have the right to tell it over a bridge table?

What's the matter with these people anyway? What can be done about them? — Boiling In The Midwest

Dear Boiling: "These people" feel the need to elevate themselves by being in the know. They use gossip as currency — trying to buy their way socially by contributing juicy tidbits.

What can be done? If the blabbermouth is the top honcho — very little. But usually he (or she) is not — in which case report the guilty party to the most senior persons you can reach.

Dear Ann Landers: What do you think of parents who spell words they don't want their children to hear? The woman next door spells words like "homosexual," "pregnant," and "divorce," so her six-year-old won't understand.

My husband and I believe it's foolish to try to hide things from children. Wouldn't it be better to say the words straight out and if the child asks questions just give a simple explanation? I'll bet the youngster would be satisfied with any kind of an answer.

I don't think you've ever dealt with this in your column. Please express an opinion. — We're From Columbus

Dear Columbus: Spelling is the tip-off that something "off-limits" is being discussed. Little ears perk up and the kids pay very close attention. They also learn to spell a lot faster.

I don't believe everything should be discussed in the presence of six-year-olds. There's a lot to be said for saving certain topics for later — and nothing's wrong with keeping children occupied in another room with games or activities suited to their age level.

Dear Ann: Can I say something to that kid who thought that pot was the greatest? I'm 18 and I've been on a terrific high for the last three years. But it's not pot that does it for me. It's Jesus. I don't need drugs or booze. My kicks come from loving Him and knowing He loves me. It's the greatest trip there is.

Some people think I'm strange but I can tell you my life has been 100 percent better since I found Jesus. Do you think I'm freaky, Ann? Please answer. — Feeling Fine

Dear Friend: Not at all. The freaky ones are getting their heads messed up with chemicals. Religious faith can bring people through life's most difficult trials. I would never knock it.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE,

My sister made some bibs for my baby out of fringed fingertip towels that are so practical and durable.

She cut a half circle out of one end of the towel for the baby's neck, then bound the towel with bias tape, leaving enough tape at each end to tie in the back.

For decoration, she used scrap material and cut out shapes of animals, etc., placing batting under them to make them puffy, then appliqued them onto the towel.

They stay soft when washed and food stains come right out. They were inexpensive but very special because she took the time to make them.

This would be a great item to hand down from child to child. I've received so many compliments on mine, so I just had to let others know. — Mrs. Wilma Kirk

You're a honeybunch for doing so. Most of us have these towels on hand, unused. Thanks to you and your sister, we've found another good use for them. (They make excellent everyday napkins, too.) Love you, — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

I've been drying my clothes with solar energy since spring has arrived. I went out in the yard to collect them one beautiful day and wished I had some place to put the folded clothes as I took them off the line.

So, I placed a folded lounge chair across the wheelbarrow, pushed it along beside the line as I took down the clothes. When finished, I rolled it up to the edge of the patio and carried the folded clothes into the house.

I can't tell you that this is a time-saver though, for when I went back out to take the lounge chair off the wheelbarrow to put it away it fell open and I couldn't resist falling into it. — Pauline R.

DEAR HELOISE:

Use vinegar as a meat tenderizer for tough cuts of meat. Just poke holes in the steak or whatever with a fork, then take your fingers and rub a small amount of vinegar over the meat. Let set for 30 minutes, then prepare as usual.

There will be no taste of vinegar after cooking and it's a lot cheaper then most meat tenderizers. — Mrs. James Marshall

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

A ladder made of wood that's used outdoors should be preserved against the elements.

Instead of paint, use clear varnish to protect it. Rot or deterioration on any part of the ladder can be easily seen and corrected. — L.W. Nelson

DEAR HELOISE:

I found some smallish self-locking plastic garbage cans and bought three of them.

I put my chow for my outside cats in one, along with a scoop, and put it outside where I feed the cats. When I ring their "dinner bell" they come running and I feed them right there. No carrying the food through the house anymore.

I also use these same type cans to store birdseed (again with its own scoop) since it's usually packed in plastic bags which are difficult to get in and out of.

Another can placed outside near the barbecue pit keeps the charcoal dry, handy, and easy to use. — Mrs. Wayne Mancuso

Pinch On Gasoline Tightens In East As West Relaxes

By The Associated Press

The gasoline pinch appears to be growing tighter in the East, but gasoline generally is available at filling stations across the country, according to a spot check by The Associated Press Monday.

Some state officials and local auto clubs said they were concerned, however, that the fuel situation could get worse near the end of the month as stations begin to run out of their monthly allocations of gasoline.

The spot check showed that motorists were able to find gasoline last weekend in most states, although officials in Maryland, Maine and Massachusetts reported that the situation in their states has worsened.

William Zorzi of the Maryland Automobile Club said the past weekend was the worst so far for gasoline availability. On Sunday alone, he said, the club got calls for help from 150 motorists who ran out of gas.

"On a nice day ... we normally wouldn't get more than 10," Zorzi added.

In Massachusetts, state police got a "couple of hundred" calls over the weekend from motorists who couldn't find fuel. A state hotline logged another 600 pleas for help.

Lines at stations along New Jersey highways ranged from three cars long at a station imposing a $2 limit to more than 30 at another station with a $3 maximum sale.

In California, where the current supply problem surfaced first, filling station lines have disappeared. But an odd-even rationing system based on license numbers still is in effect in most of the heavily populated areas of the southern and north-central coast.

"People are learning to live with something that's going to be with us for a long time," said Mark Gestle, a spokesman for the California Automobile Association.

As with other states, California is getting about 85 percent of the gasoline it got last June. And some officials are concerned that as the month wears on, gasoline stations will run of their monthly allocation.

"I'm afraid by the end of the month we are going to need some help or the lines will start forming again," said Terry McGovern of the California Service Station Association.

Dan Lundberg, publisher of a weekly newsletter that follows the gasoline industry, estimated in the latest edition that the fuel shortage cut gasoline consumption by 8.6 percent nationally in June, compared with the level of last June.

Lundberg also estimated that today's supplies are about 23 percent short of what demand would be if there were no shortage.

Scarcity and rising prices have made gasoline more attractive to thieves. In Miami, auto-supply stores reported booming sales of locking gas caps for cars and of siphoning kits used to remove fuel from tanks.

In the three years preceding the present fuel crisis, Miami's ABA Auto Parts had sold just "400 or 500 caps," said manager Luis Brito. But "in the last month, we've sold about 1,000."

Civil Rights Commission To Study Houston Police Violence

HOUSTON (AP) — Charges of police brutality in this, the nation's fifth largest city, will be studied by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights during the next two days as a homicide lieutenant compares the shootouts in Houston to "Dodge City of the 1880s."

There, however, is no legendary federal marshal with a fast draw to send the rowdies, the robbers, the gunslingers biting the dust in a classic face-to-face showdown on a deserted street.

But, spokesmen for some minority groups claim Houston police are slaying, beating, and mistreating many blacks and Hispanics.

Police Lt. C.J. Lofland said Monday Houston is a modern-day Dodge City, with 12 homicides were reported during the weekend. That brings the murder total to 248 for the year, compared with 177 for the same period in 1978.

He said eight to 10 homicides in a weekend "is not unusual, it is a common occurrence."

Noting that several of the homicide victims during the weekend were Latin Americans, Lofland said illegal aliens "are easy prey" because they won't report robberies, instead "leaving it to the macho image and 'I'll take care of it myself attitude.'"

Lofland added, "a certain segment of the populace is carrying pistols. This is a boomtown, alive, vibrant and growing and the number of law enforcement offices needed to police a city this size is unavailable."

Mexican-Americans have been the loudest in the criticism of Houston police, especially since the death of Joe Campos Torres, who drowned while in police custody on May 8, 1977.

The federal commission selected Houston and Philadelphia as hearing sites because of the volume of complaints from citizens in those cities.

The data collected by the commission will be published next year with the findings and recommendations sent to the president and Congress for possible federal policy changes or introduction of legislation.

Arthur Flemming, commission chairman and one-time secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, said the purpose of the study has nothing to do with any individual cases but how the police system could be modified to minimize the potential for abuse while still protecting the rights of police officers.

Gail Berebenics, the commission's assistant general counsel, said Houston Police chief Harry Caldwell had promised "the openness of his department and I think he has lived up to that.

At least seven persons have been subpoenaed to appear before the commission, including Caldwell, Steve Shiflett, president of the Gay Political Caucus and Johnny Mata, district director for the League of United Latin American Citizens.

After the conviction of three officers for violating the civil rights of Torres, the troubles in the Houston police department continued.

Former police chief Carrol Lynn was found guilty by a federal court jury on charges of obstruction of justice, perjury and extortion.

Two other officers were found guilty of conspiring to plant a gun beside the body of a young Louisiana teen-ager, shot to death after a high speed chase over the freeways of the city, and two policemen had a bloody fight in the central station.

Joining Flemming on the commission are Stephen Horn, president of California State University, Long Beach; Frankie M. Freeman, a St. Louis attorney; Manuel Ruiz Jr., a Los Angeles lawyer, and Rabbi Murray Saltzman of Baltimore.

Florida Man Named In Grandmother's Death

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A university student who claims he is a victim of black magic and that he is a messenger from God has been charged with killing his grandmother and setting her body ablaze three days after his release from a psychiatric unit.

Frank Telfair, 21, was taken to the Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center by friends last week, police said, but officials at the center said he was no threat to himself or others and released him.

Dr. H.C. Anderson, the psychiatrist who authorized the release, said Monday that he would have to review his records to determine why Telfair was released.

Duval County sheriff's deputies said they were holding Telfair on charges of first-degree murder in connection with the stabbing death of Louise Holley, 78.

Officials said Mrs. Holley's body, found early Saturday in her Jacksonville home, had been doused with charcoal lighter fluid and set afire.

"They found the grandmother lying prone in the hall with several kitchen implements protruding from her back," said Frank Japour, a Duval County detective.

Telfair, a Florida State University business major who lived with his grandmother, was picked up a short time later. He was carrying a Bible, officers said.

Japour said Telfair also was holding a Bible last Wednesday when friends and university police tried for nearly two hours to coax him out of a dormitory shower. Telfair insisted he was God's representative against the devil, Japour said.

The friends turned off the water supply to the dorm then forced Telfair into a car and took him to the psychiatric unit at the Tallahassee medical center, Japour said. Eleven hours later he was released after Anderson determined he was no threat to himself or anyone else.

Japour said Telfair had complained before of late-night telephone calls and said strangers stalked him after dark. Telfair also said he knew a woman from Haiti who worked black magic against him and that his fraternity brothers at Omega Psi Phi shunned him, the officer said.

Early last week, Telfair called his grandmother to say he had been bitten by a cobra, Japour said. "He was beginning to have delusions, obviously."

Japour said that at about midnight Friday a neighbor of Mrs. Holley heard screams from the Holley home. He said the neighbor saw Mrs. Holley try to flee twice, but Telfair dragged her back inside the house.

Later, Japour said, the neighbor saw Telfair leave the home as smoke began pouring from a rear kitchen door. Firemen discovered the body.

Vote System Opponents Eye Appeal

Plaintiffs and supporters of a suit challenging the city's at-large election of council members will meet at 7 p.m. today to discuss whether to appeal Friday's decision upholding the present election method.

Dan Benson, one of the plaintiffs' attorneys, said the meeting will be held at the Texas Tech University School of Law courtroom.

The plaintiffs must file a notice of appeal by July 8 and must file a record of the case with the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals by July 18.

But the cost of providing that record to the appeals court may be the determining factor on whether the case is appealed, Benson said.

To provide a copy of the 12 days of testimony and all the trial exhibits may cost between $3,000 and $6,000, Benson said.

Additionally, the plaintiffs must post an appeal bond of at least $250 to take the case to the New Orleans court.

"There's a lot of money involved," Benson said. "The legal work is free, but that doesn't cut it."

The law school professor said he would recommend an appeal "at least to the Fifth Circuit, if we can afford it."

But reversing U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward's decision in the case "is not a sure thing at all," Benson said.

"He's written a sound opinion and it's going to be hard to overturn."

Carter Fishes, Views Research Laboratory

LEETOWN, W.Va. (AP) — President Carter toured a federal fish hatchery and research center, Monday, after he and his wife spent five hours fishing for trout on a West Virginia stream.

The president seemed as interested in the solar energy system installed on the roof of the 2-month-old National Fish Health Research Laboratory building as he was in the facility's work on fish diseases.

Spending his second consecutive day fishing while on a three-day Camp David holiday, the president caught seven rainbow trout in Leetown Run, according to one member of the fishing party.

The president told reporters that Rosalynn Carter, who tried her hand at flyfishing for the first time, caught the biggest fish and also caught the most.

The Carters flew here by Marine Corps helicopter, landing shortly before 8 a.m. in a downpour. They headed back to Camp David about six hours later and left for Washington late in the afternoon.

While the president toured the facility, Mrs. Carter remained at the stream to get in a few more minutes of fishing. "I couldn't get her away," the president said.

One person who accompanied the Carters said the first lady caught about a dozen fish, including a largemouth bass, and that "she was quite adept" at flyfishing.

The stream, well known locally as a good fishing spot, is not stocked by the research center, which is run by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. However, David McDaniel, the center's assistant director, said some of the trout raised there may escape into the Leetown Run.

Carter was given a short description of the facility's operation. Most of the questions he asked that were audible to reporters dealt with the 10,000 square feet of solar energy equipment on the roof of the building. When the system is fully operational, it is expected to provide 65 percent of the center's energy needs, according to the director, Robert Putz.

The research facility is one of six such laboratories around the country that deal with fish genetics, food, diseases and environmental contamination. The facility here, established in 1932, was the first such laboratory in the world.

City Man Pleads Guilty To Rape Charge

Billy Ray Lawson Monday pleaded guilty to raping a 30-year-old convenience store clerk Jan. 18.

In exchange for the guilty plea, Lawson, 26, was assessed a 40-year prison sentence and four other aggravated rape charges against him were dropped, according to First Assistant Criminal District Attorney Jim Bob Darnell.

Darnell said Lawson also waived his right to appeal on of a 15-year sentence he received last month in connection with another rape. A 140th District Court jury convicted Lawson, of 516-B E. 37th St., of the Dec. 4, 1978, rape of a convenience store attendant and assessed the prison term May 30.

The 15-year penitentiary sentence will run concurrently with the 40-year term, Darnell said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I lost some stock certificates which are registered in my name and my wife's name. The stock is worth $60,-000. I'm convinced the lost certificates will never be found.

The transfer agent for the company's stock wants a $1,700 bond premium to get a replacement and insists that I'd still be held responsible should the stock be cashed.

This is incredible! What is necessary to procure a replacement?

A. Just what the transfer agent told you. To get a replacement, you have to sign an affidavit that the certificates were lost and you must post a lost security bond.

The "surety bond" protects the company — and its other stockholders — just in case the certificates you lost show up in the hands of a legitimate owner.

What the transfer agent said about you still being held responsible would apply, if you tried to sell the certificates. But, assuming you are an honest citizen, the surety bond will also protect you.

The $1,700 cost you quote for that bond is actually a shade lower then you might have to pay. The going rate for such bonds is now 3 percent. That works out to $1,800 on stock with a market value of $60,000. Not so many years ago, the premiums for surety bonds covering lost stock certificates were higher.

Q. I own some stock which I wish to give to my children. I paid $15 a share for the stock. It is now trading at $12 a share. If and when the children sell the stock, what do they consider as their cost — the price I paid or the price on the date I give them the stock?

A. If the stock is still trading below $15 a share when you make those gifts, the children's "cost basis" will be the market price at the time of the gift. If the stock's price runs up and is more than $15 a share when you make those gifts, the children's cost basis will be $15 a share.

In the case of gift stock, the recipients' cost basis is the price of the stock on the date of the gift or the donor's cost basis — whichever is lower.

So, when you make a gift of stock, be sure you also pass along records of your cost basis and the price of the stock on the date of the gift. The recipient will need that information to calculate his or her capital gain or capital loss for tax purposes, when and if the stock is sold.

Q. You explained that the interest paid on six-month savings certificates is now the same as the interest on "U.S. Treasury Bills" or "T-Bills" but that the interest on Treasury bills is not subject to state and local income taxes.

I am confused, as I am sure other people are, over the various names given to these six-month certificates — such as Super T Certificates, Treasury Rate Saver's Certificates, Money Market Certificates and Treasury Rate Certificates.

What's the difference between the six-month certificates with all those different names and U.S. Treasury Bills?

A. Treasury Bills — nicknamed "T-Bills" — are issued by the United States Treasury Department. The others are issued by banks and savings and loan associations. The marketing and advertising people at banks and S&Ls can call their six-month certificates almost anything they like — as long as they don't name them U.S. Treasury Bills.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

One of the most unusual letter-writing systems in the world was invented by the Chimu tribes of northeast Peru, according to Alain de Cadenet, consultant for the British Post Office. The Chimu created a system of writing codes which they inscribed on lima beans.

Increased Moisture Boosts Wheat Crop

WASHINGTON (AP) — This year's winter wheat crop is estimated at 1.43 billion bushels, 3 percent larger forecast last month, the Agriculture Department said Monday.

The latest estimate, based on field conditions as of June 1, also is up 14 percent from the 1978 winter wheat harvest, which was the smallest in five years.

A month ago the crop was estimated at 1.39 billion bushels. The 1978 harvest was less than 1.25 billion bushels.

Officials said "generally cool temperatures plus adequate moisture contributed to the increased yield prospects in most of the wheat growing area" in May.

Over-all, the crop was reported in "fair to mostly good" shape in early May and then was rated "good in most areas" by the end of the month, the department's Crop Reporting Board said.

Winter wheat is planted in the fall and harvested the following spring and summer. It accounts for about three-fourths of total U.S. wheat production.

Production in Kansas, the leading wheat producer, was estimated at 331.7 million bushels, compared to the May forecast of 321 million bushels and the state's harvest of 306 million in 1978.

Farmers will have about 42.9 million acres of winter wheat for harvest this year, compared to 38.9 million acres harvested in 1978.

Nationally, the average wheat yield was estimated at 33.3 bushels an acre, compared to the May forecast of 2.4 bushels and the average of 32.1 harvested in 1978.

A major question is what the spring-planted wheat will produce this year. Planting "was greatly delayed by wet soils" but picked up in late May and early June, the report said, in much of the northern area where the crop is grown.

No offical estimate of springwheat production will be made by USDA until July 11, along with the first production forecasts of 1979 corn and some other major crops.

Some experts say, however, that total output of spring wheat this year — including durum and other types — could range between 375 million and 475 million bushels, down sharply from their 1978 production of 550.4 million bushels.

Assuming a midpoint possibility of about 425 million bushels of spring wheat, the new estimate for winter grain points to a total U.S. wheat harvest this year of around 1.86 billion bushels against a total output in 1978 of slightly less than 1.8 billion.

The department some time ago said total wheat output this year could range between 1.74 billion and 2.08 billion bushels, depending on the weather and final decisions by farmers on planting spring wheat.

Wheat prices at the farm in May averaged around $3.22 a bushel, according to the department's preliminary figures. That was up from $2.82 a bushel a year earlier.

The U. S. reserve of wheat from previous crops on June 1 was about 926 million bushels, according to recent estimates, down from 1.18 billion bushels carried over a year ago.

Also, it was the first time in five years that the annual June 1 wheat carryover declined from the previous year.

The indicated production of winter wheat and average yields for 1979 by major producing states, based on June 1 prospects, included:

Arizona 4,350,000 bushels and 75 bushels an acre; Arkansas 15,050,000 and 35; California 47,905,000 and 67; Colorado 58,650,000 and 23; Idaho 37,410,000 and 43; Illinois 48,400,000 and 40; Indiana 40,635,000 and 43; Kansas 331,700,000 and 31; Kentucky 10,080,000 and 36; Michigan 30,800,000 and 40; Missouri 52,150,000 and 35; Montana 65,800,000 and 28; Nebraska 78,000,000 and 30; Ohio 62,400,000 and 48; Oklahoma 188,100,000 and 33; Oregon 42,000,000 and 42; South Dakota 13,200,000 and 22; Tennessee 0,850,000 and 35; Texas 114,800,000 and 28; and Washington 92,400,000 and 40.

ELEPHANT PERKS UP

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A 4,000-pound Asian elephant recovering from throat surgery is reported "about as well as she can be expected to be doing" at the Potter Park Zoo. Bingo the elephant underwent surgery for removal of a stone as big as a softball from her throat last Wednesday and doctors gave her only a 15 percent to 20 percent chance of survival. But she perked up Saturday and has been in good spirits.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

HEAVY RAINS LAST FRIDAY NIGHT and Saturday morning and cool temperatures over the weekend have further delayed an already late High Plains cotton crop.

Ken Wigner, agricultural meteorologist at Lubbock, said the heaviest rains were in the central, eastern and southern counties. Most areas, however, received significant amounts of rain.

The average for 26 reporting stations in the 24-hour period ended at 8 a.m. Saturday was 1.48 inches. Silverton recorded a two-day total of 3.72 inches and Matador had 3.27 inches.

Rainfall amounts of 2 inches or more fell at Abernathy, Crosbyton, Floydada, Paducah, Plainview, Tahoka and Tulia. The least amount was .24-inch at Snyder.

June rainfall has totaled 7.06 inches at Jayton, 6.13 inches at Tahoka, and 6.11 inches at Matador. The average for the area is 3-4 inches, compared with a normal of 2.46 inches at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station north of Lubbock.

PLANTING RIGS IN DAWSON COUNTY were back in the fields Monday in the sandier areas following rains throughout the county of 2.5 to 4.5 inches since late Friday.

"We had wind, a little hail and a lot of hard rain," said Eddie Brown of Lamesa, executive director of the Dawson County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. "Our land is cut up pretty bad.

"We've pretty well lost the western half of our county where a lot of cotton was freshly planted. Some farmers are trying to dig it out, but it looks as through most of them are going to have to replant.

"We had some wind Sunday and what little cotton we did have in the west part parched pretty badly — people couldn't sand fight it quickly enough."

Dawson County farmers are trying to get in a crop of approximately 300,000 acres of cotton and they may have about 125,000 acres left. The remainder probably will have to be replanted, Brown said.

HALE COUNTY AGENT OLLIE LINER of Plainview said cotton north of Hale Center is "in pretty bad shape." It has seedling disease, which has been aggravated by cool, wet conditions.

Liner said farmers are going to lose some stands of cotton, but added that how much is still uncertain. He said the picture should become clearer by the end of the week.

The situation in many cases "is touch and go right now and we're just going to have to wait and see what happens," Liner said. "Some will be replanting as quick as fields are dry enough and some will go to soybeans where they have irrigation water."

Liner said Hale County probably had 275,000 acres in cotton but added that this now probably will be down to 250,000 acres or less.

Lynn County Agent Stanley Young said rains in his county Friday ranged from around 2 to 5 inches. He said some hail was reported west of Tahoka but the acreage involved wasn't known.

"WE LOST SOME MORE COTTON, mainly due to washing," Young said. He said cotton planted with bed planters is in relatively good shape as compared with where lister planters were used.

"We lacked only about 15 percent being through planting cotton the first time but now we have a lot of replanting to do," Young said.

Young said seedling disease has been a particular problem in the older cotton, such as that which was planted around a month ago.

"The older cotton has been hit pretty hard and a lot of the stands are questionable," he said. "But I imagine farmers will leave it as late as it is now if it looks as though enough will come out for even a thin stand."

Young said a few farmers have been replanting diseased cotton and added that the whole crop needs warm, dry weather.

COTTON FUTURES AT NEW YORK closed near limit up in near July for the second session in a row as the spot month settled 195 points higher after moving up the 200-point limit in brisk trading.

New-crop December advanced 93 points, but closed nearer its low in a 135-point range.

Floor brokers said strength again came from good buying in the July by a Chicago commission house, which apparently sold new-crop December simultaneously.

Volume approximated a hefty 11,550 lots.

Trading on Telcot totaled 13,149 bales at an average price to farmers of 52.93 cents. The cotton sold for an average of 1,037 points over loan values.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures soared today on the Chicago Board of Trade in response to a cut by the Agriculture Department in its estimate of this year's anticipated grain production by the Soviet Union.

Wheat climbed by as much as the 20-cent-a-bushel daily trading limit, then eased off the day's highs as traders took profits minutes before the close.

Corn and soybean futures rose as well, as traders reasoned that a smaller grain crop in the Soviet Union could mean bigger grain trade with that nation during the coming months.

Beef Trade Closes High

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 102 points higher to 20 points lowed led by February on the advance Monday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Only the spot posted a loss.

Futures ran up as much as 147 in August in early trade on buying stimulated by expectations of a constructive cattle on feed report today and strong daily fundamentals. The Independent Trucker's protests were also noted.

Prices eased late on profit-taking and other selling. Some traders felt the cattle on feed report was already in the market.

There have been 53 deliveries thus far. Wholesale beef was up 2 at 102½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were up 50 cents to $3 with the best top $71 per hundredweight. Omaha's top was $70.50. Slaughter was 107,000 head. About 14,200 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed 60 higher to 15 lower. Distant May was up the most with only January off. Sales totaled 4,725 contracts.

Prices ran up as much as 100 in early trade but failed to hold as profit-taking and other selling came in. Constructive fundamentals encouraged trade early but feeders followed the lead of cattle futures and turned down late.

Cash feeder cattle were steady to up $1 with the best top $146 per hundredweight at San Antonio. The major terminals are expecting about 1,600 head today.

Hog futures closed 60 lower in July to 135 higher in June 1980.

Nearby contracts were all lower with 1980 contracts all higher. A limit level gain of 150 was posted in all 1980 contracts before the close.

Expectations of lower cash prices today were noted by sources as the trucker protests continued to disrupt the market. Back months ran up the limit on buying stimulated by higher grain prices.

Deliveries total 12 thus far. Wholesale hams were unchanged to up 1½ at 60½ to 67 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were steady to up $1.50 with the best top $44 per hundredweight. Kill was 326,000 head. Receipts at the major markets today are expected to total 32,300 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 7 lower to 177 higher paced by February on the advance. Only the nearby contracts were off, with July down the most.

February, March and July 1980 ran up for a limit level gain of 200 around midday before easing at the close. Traders noted buying in the back months on the higher grain prices.

Nearby months reflected uneasiness over the trucker's protests and weakness in nearby hog futures. Overshadowing were firmer cash bellies, higher live prices and light receipts.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 1½ at 41½ to 42 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Uniform Truck Limits Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allan Grant, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, urged Monday that states be forced to accept uniform maximum limits on the weights and lengths of trucks using interstate highways.

The farm leader said such standards would help save fuel and speed the delivery of food from the nation's farms to consumers.

Three years ago, Congress authorized states to increase maximum allowable truck weights on interstate highways to 80,000 pounds. Grant said the interstate system also can accommodate truck lengths up to 65 feet, including two trailers.

"Seven states up and down the Mississippi River and two states in the East block the movement of 80,000 pounds maximum weight trucks across the country, and this means using more fuel per pound of freight," Grant said.

A spokesman said the seven Mississippi River states are Indiana, Iowa, Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee. The two Eastern ones are Pennsylvania and Maryland, he said.

Grant said the Carter administration should issue an immediate order to provide for the uniform weight and length, and that Congress should pass legislation giving the Department of Transportation authority to set the standards on a permanent basis.

Big Board Shows Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rallied near the close of a sluggish session to post a slight advance Monday.

Gambling stocks and takeover candidates accounted for some of the biggest individul gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off a fraction with half an hour to go, closed with a 2.43 gain at 837.58.

New York Stock Exchange volume came to 28.27 million shares, down from 31.47 million Friday.

The day's biggest gainer was Harnischfeger, up 6⅛ at 22 on turnover of better than 850,000 shares.

Paccar Inc. said it would offer $20 a share for the stock of the Brookfield, Wis., manufacturer of cranes, excavating equipment and other heavy machinery. Harnischfeger declined any immediate comment on the proposal.

The most prominent loser was Amdahl, a producer of large-scale computer systems, which fell 9 to 27⅝ and led the active list at the American Stock Exchange.

New York (AP) — Monday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

ABC-TV's 'Special Assignment' Tries To Cover News In Depth

NEW YORK (AP) — Covering a subject as complex as the arms race for the evening news is next to impossible in the normal minute-30, and allowing three or five or eight minutes for the report doesn't necessarily simplify the task.

"If you're going to do it well, you've got to consider the subject in much more depth, give it extra dimension rather than simply add facts, and make it as easy as possible for the viewer to understand," says Phil Bergman, who produces the "Special Assignment" segment for ABC's "World News Tonight."

"And if you've got three or five or 10 nights to cover the story," says Bergman, "you don't merely add more information Tuesday night to what you said Monday night. You try to add an extra dimension each night."

So when Ted Koppel, ABC's diplomatic correspondent, examined American military security in 10 parts several weeks ago, each segment of "Second to None?" — one was eight minutes long — was on a separate facet of the question.

ABC's "Special Assignment" — initially called "Closeup" — was begun in January in an effort to confront head-on a problem that has plagued TV news correspondents — and viewers — from the start.

"It's been a very delicate area in the business," says Bergman, who's been with ABC News since 1962, "that television news is essentially a headline service.

"You've covered a complicated story and someone says, 'You've got a minute-20.' You say, 'But I need three minutes to give the proper perspective.' Well, they say they can't afford that, and the perspective goes."

In fact, long-form reporting on the evening news is not new — "Segment 3" has been a part of NBC's "Nightly News" since September 1977 — but the decision by ABC to clear time on a regular basis was nonetheless an important development.

"Like any news organization in television," says David Burke, a vice president and assistant to Roone Arledge, president of ABC News and Sports, "we were hearing constant complaints from our correspondents that they didn't have the time to do the stories the way they should be done.

"To us, 'Special Assignment' was a way to get something on the air that was journalistically sound in that respect, and it was an appropriate way to differentiate our broadcast from others.

"We're pleased with the results," says Burke, "but we're not finished."

Three-and four-and even five-part "Special Assignment" reports were common from the first, and Bergman has made good use of ABC News' specialists — economic correspondent Dan Cordtz for "Stretch Your Dollar" and "Income Tax," science correspondent Jules Bergman for "Hospital Costs" and "Stress: Are We Killing Ourselves?"

"The question when we started," says Phil Bergman, "was how to find the right stories that would lend themselves to our concept of Special Assignment.'

"We wanted topics of high interest that would fit within the framework of the major current news stories. If the big story is the economy, you look for what people worry about — money, how they earn it, taxes and so on."

Phil Bergman says one tactic is to use as much visual material as possible to help explain the complex subjects often considered. A recent "Special Assignment" series on the elderly, for example, began with a visual list of myths about growing old.

Despite the long form's apparent acceptance, the correspondents — and Phil Bergman's — battle for time goes on. "There's a constant pulling and tugging between the 'World News Tonight' people and us," the producer says. "They want more time for breaking news, and I want more time for series.

"If were going to continue, our reports have to be on a level that everyone agrees is good."

Actor Enjoys Roles On TV, Broadway

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — By night, he plays a two-fisted lawman who cusses, fires his .45 for emphasis but shuns firewater, having "plumb give up on firewater. That stuff makes you fight yore own people."

He daylights in a far different role — as wise, urbane Dr. David Stewart in CBS' venerable soap opera "As the World Turns."

He's Henderson Forsythe, the veteran sheriff of Broadway's "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas." He recently won a Tony award, as did Carlin Glynn, who plays the madame of the house.

He makes it clear in interviews he doesn't find it odd to play both a quiet man of medicine and a noisy man of law every weekday.

"No. No doubt you write something other than interviews," says the silver-haired actor, 61. "What kind of dichotomy is that? It's your job, it's what you're doing at the time."

Cheerfully rustic on stage, he's almost professorial off it. Of course, he does hold two degrees from the University of Iowa and occasionally returns there to lecture on acting.

Direct in manner and plain in speech, as befits a native of Monroe City, Mo., Forsythe has been an actor since 1940, excluding five years in the Army during World War II.

He's paid his dues, as they say, with years of obscurity in regional theaters, including nine years at Pennsylvania's Erie Playhouse. He took the big gamble and settled here with his family in 1955.

"Well, I had a little bit of money," he says with a shrug. "I Figured I could survive — barely — for two years. And if I didn't start making my way economically, I'd just get the hell out."

He didnt have to. He found enough night-time work in television here to get by, walk-on roles at first, then bit parts, then larger ones. He also worked on the stage and in a few films here.

In 1960, he landed the role of Dr. Stewart in "As the World Turns." He's done it ever since by day while acting by night in 15 different plays, by his tally.

The night work, on and off Broadway, has ranged from a "Harvey" revival to "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," from "The Iceman Cometh" to "Waiting for Godot."

He doesn't consider his dual emoting life that much a strain, though: "Well, that's my work. It's the variety that makes it interesting."

The father of two sons (Eric, an actor, and Jason, a Dartmouth senior whose graduation he'll attend this Sunday), Forsythe takes a sturdy, old-school attitude towards awards, even with his pride in the top Broadwy honor he won last Sunday night.

"At no time have I ever worked for an award," he says. "You don't do that. You work at your work ... the joy is in the doing, the playing, the work. If you get an award, that's wonderful, fine.

"But I don't think you take a part expecting anything to come of it but the joy of playing it and the money you'll make on it, whatever that may be."

Students Smoke Less, Dip More Snuff

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — George Michael, principal of Sistersville High School, doesn't worry much these days about students skulking around the school grounds, looking for a secret place to light up a cigarette.

They're too busy rubbing snuff.

Michael, who uses snuff himself, said it would be difficult to find a boy in his rural school of 330 students who does not carry a can of the fine-grained tobacco.

"Even some of the girls do it," he said.

At more urban South Charleston High School, senior Mike Fisher estimated that more than half the male students use snuff.

"It gives you something to do. I've usually got a rub in before 9 o'clock in the morning," said Fisher, who does not smoke.

School administrators throughout the state are reporting a rise in the use of snuff, and if tobacco companies are to be believed, West Virginians are on the forefront of a coming fashion.

Once dismissed as an archaic method of using tobacco, snuff rubbing has made a dramatic comeback in recent years, especially among young people, said Tom Ryan, a marketing executive with the Wheeling, W.Va.-based Bloch Bros. Tobacco Co.

"We don't see it leveling off," said Ryan.

Part of the growth in the snuff industry can be traced to more aggressive advertising and marketing campaigns. But he said the industry also has benefitted from what he calls "a return to basics and an increase in nostalgia.

"We think this growth will continue for many years," said Ryan, who works in New York. "It's not just blue-collar workers, men who work with their hands, who are using the products. So are people in white-collar jobs and students."

Although somewhat related to chewing tobacco, snuff is a tobacco product basically unlike any other. A pinch of it, placed between the cheek and gum, produces a strong, constant tobacco flavor, normally for more than an hour, when left in place.

New users commonly spit excess saliva generated by the snuff into a cup or can. Experienced users, however, say they can swallow freely without the after-effects usually associated with the swallowing of chewing tobacco — light headedness and a greenish skin tone.

Rubbing snuff may not be an entirely harmless enterprise. There is indication use of snuff may lead to diseases of the palate and tongue, and Don Shopland, who monitors such things for the federal government, said "white patchy lesions on the inside of the mouth" are common.

While chewing tobacco normally comes in a foil pouch, the finely ground snuff is packaged in small, round cans that most users carry in the back pocket of their trousers.

Gerry Gilmartin, a spokesman for the Smokeless Tobacco Council, said snuff-rubbing orginated among early settlers, who placed finely cut pieces of tobacco in their noses and sniffed it. The use of snuff began when settlers, often involved in planting and cultivating crops, wanted to find a way to use tobacco that didn't require use of their hands.

The increase in snuff-rubbing is eliciting mixed reactions from school officials.

"I don't encourage it or discourage it, even though I rub myself," said Michael. "It has some benefits because it keeps kids from smoking."

Fiedler Rated 'Satisfactory'

BOSTON (AP) — Arthur Fiedler was making "satisfactory progress" Monday as the 84-year-old Boston Pops conductor recovered from his fifth heart attack, hospital officials said.

Fiedler was stricken at home on Saturday.

"Arthur Fiedler's condition remains stable," said Henry Wilson, a spokesman at Tufts-New England Medical Center. "According to his physicians, he spent a restful night in the cardiac care unit and is making satisfactory progress."

This spring, Fiedler opened his 50th season of conducting the Boston Pops.

He suffered his first heart attack in 1940 at age 44 after he climbed a telephone pole to watch construction of the Hatch Shell, the Pops' outdoor bandstand on the banks of the Charles River.

Wilson said Fiedler's latest heart attack was mild, but that he would probably be hospitalized for several weeks.

Fiedler has not conducted since he collapsed backstage at Symphony Hall after a concert six weeks ago. He spent several days in the hospital being treated for exhaustion.

Doonesbury Comic Strip Back In Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following the lead of the White House, a congressional research organization Monday began circulating the comic strip "Doonesbury" to Capitol Hill offices.

The Democratic Study Group said it was distributing the "legislatively vital" strip with its packet of information on upcoming legislation because of a "local 'Doonesbury' blackout."

The Pulitzer prize-winning comic strip by Gary Trudeau formerly appeared daily in the Washington Post. But the Post stopped running the strip when it was announced that it would move to the capital's other daily newspaper, the Star, in late June.

Last week, the strip began appearing in White House news summaries.

"This special service will continue for the duration of the current emergency," the DSG said in an an explanatory statement sent to congressional offices with six installments of the comic strip.

Swiss Eschew Controls On Petroleum Prices

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — A Czechoslovak soldier defected to West Germany over the weekend, becoming the third to cross the heavily guarded Communist frontier into Bavaria in two weeks, state police said Monday.

The 22-year-old soldier escaped undetected over a wooded "green border" from Bohemia, a police spokesman said. Two other border guards who also escaped without drawing Communist fire or tripping mines told Bavarian authorities they were dissatisfied with life.

Best Speeding Excuses Win Michigan Prizes

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — Caught speeding, huh? What's your excuse? Try to top the Michigan man who claimed, "Officer, my wife is going to get pregnant tonight, and I want to be there when she does."

That was a finalist in a contest run by the Michigan Fraternal Order of Police for the "most creative excuse for speeding."

The winners announced Monday, however, were a man who said he was speeding because he was angry over his wife getting a ticket and a man who claimed he was late for an appointment because he had been delayed by a group of stuttering children.

The winning entries were submitted by Dennis Campbell of the Owosso Police Department and Wayne Coleman of the law division of the state Department of Natural Resources at Stephenson.

Campbell's entry: "While working radar, I clocked a woman driver at 16 mph over the 25 mph speed limit and issued a ticket. About 15 minutes later, I had turned around, covering eastbound traffic and clocked a car at 47 mph. When the driver presented his license, I noticed his last name and address were the same. ...

"I asked if he was related, and he said he was. I asked his reason for speeding. He answered that he was mad at his wife for getting a speeding ticket. He also wanted to know if there was any way I could avoid letting his wife know I also had stopped him. He was very embarrassed because I had him speeding six miles per hour faster than his wife."

Coleman's entry: "A driver told me his wife works for a summer camp as a cook for 20 kids that stutter. Tonight they had a farewell party for her, and by the time all the kids had expressed their appreciation to her, 'We were so late I had to hurry to make up for lost time.'"

Among other finalists:

—"I was just keeping up with the cars behind me."

—A motorist who had driven only 20 miles in one hour because of road construction "said the speed limit was 55 mph, so he was just trying to catch up to make the 55 mph limit," an officer reported.

—"You can't give me a ticket, because another trooper just gave me one 10 minutes ago. I know my rights. That's called 'double jeopardy.'"

—The driver of a car stopped for speeding while in a center lane reserved for left turns told a trooper he thought the center lane was for Volkswagens that wanted to go faster.

—"I was looking for a police officer and figured if I was speeding that one would find me."

—After a chase at speeds over 100 mph: "I'm in a hurry to get to the garage to get my brakes checked."

Winners Campbell and Coleman each will receive a CB radio.

Airline Coupons Prompt Brisk Trading

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jeff Dickey, a seventh grader who wanted to fly his relatives to the West Coast, spent the weekend prowling San Francisco International Airport and found a gold mine trading in half-fare coupons.

In 10 hours of cruising the shiny, carpeted corridors of the airport the 13-year-old youth found 17 people willing to give up their coupons for little or no money.

His net profit, he says, was $150, plus half-fare coupons for four of his kinfolk.

"I had to get four for my grandma, my aunt, my uncle and my other uncle," said Jeff. "And then my brother got the idea we could make money."

And money he made.

Jeff, a short, blue-eyed, blond-haired youth who wears mouth braces, darted from arrival gate to arrival gate in his shorts, sneakers and green-and-white polo shirt.

"Do you want to sell your half-fare coupons?" he would ask the passengers. Three people gave him their half-fare coupons for nothing.

United Airlines came up with the half-fare coupon promotion two weeks ago as a way of building business after being shutdown by a strike, and American Airlines followed suit.

The coupons, which are being given to passengers on the two airlines until Sunday and take effect July 1, allow a person to buy a full-fare, round-trip ticket at half the regular price. They are good until Dec. 15, except for the Thanksgiving holiday.

Jeff was jus one of at least a half-dozen people buying and selling the coupons atthe busy airport this wekend.

The going price was $10 a coupon and higher. One man yelled to passengers in a baggage area that he would pay $20 a coupon. There were many takers.

"We're using someone else's money to buy them," said a couple working another terminal area. Travel agents, they said, are eager to buy the coupons.

One coupon-hawker clutched a sheaf of $10 bills in one hand and a batch of just-purchased coupons in another.

"Young people gave me the most coupons," said Jeff. "Young hippies saved up all their money to go on that flight and they weren't going to have the money to go on another one for a long time."

Who else parted with the coupons?

"Guys in the service," said Jeff. "Single men and women, but never middle-aged people — they always wanted to save them for something."

Jeff said he will use his weekend profits for a skateboard or something.

The youth, whose paper route nets him $60 a month, wants to be a lawyer, he says, "because I'm good at arguing."

Countdown Under Way For Man-Powered Flight

FOLKESTONE, England (AP) — A Californa team has started the countdown to the first attempt at a man-powered flight across the English Channel.

Project leader Dr. Paul MacCready of Pasadena said Monday that recent turbulent weather has abated and the outlook gives a one-in-six chance that the 70-pound Gossamer Albatross can make the attempt early Tuesday morning.

Pilot Bryan Allen, a 26-year-old bicycle racer from Bakersfield, went to bed late Monday afternoon to make sure he would be rested to propel the pedal-powered plane and his own 137 pounds across the 22 miles to France.

"Bryan is in very good shape psychologically, strong as a horse and he's ready to go," said project spokesman Jack Conmy.

The 35-man crew started affixing the plane's 96-foot-wide wings to the slender fuselage and making other last-minute preparations.

Conmy explained that the Albatross needs winds of five or six miles an hour or less, with no gusts, to fly safely. The plane flies best at about 13 to 15 miles an hour and below 30 feet in the air.

MacCready was to decide Monday night whether to continue on standby status and move a flotilla of chase boats into the channel on the midnight tide or again give in to the chilly spring weather that has plagued England since the team arrived last month.

MacCready has set July 6 as deadline for the attempt.

Texas Music Festival Will Return Next Year

DALLAS (UPI) — After its second year, the Texas World Music Festival has found a place — a small, comfortable place — in popular music.

Although it might be considered a misstatement to call anything that lures 82,000 people into the Cotton Bowl as small and comfortable, that precisely describes Saturday's rock concert, particularly considering all the talk which preceded the first one.

Louis Messina of Pace Concerts Inc. in Houston, promoter of the event, made it formal, "Next year we plan to do the same thing."

That means a one-day rock concert in the Cotton Bowl, featuring the best groups, tight security inside and outside the stadium, and a big, competent crew of paramedics and doctors to take care of the hundreds of fans who succumb to the Texas sun.

It was not always thus.

In the days of hype prior to the first festival last year, Messina talked about the desire on the part of everyone to make the event — which then included the Willie Nelson Fourth of July Picnic — a vehicle to put Texas on the musical map. It was three days long, and the talk was to expand it to a week or 10 days and make it the centerpiece of a burgeoning recording industry in North Central Texas.

"It didn't work," Messina said. "We lost a lot of money."

The primary problem last year, surprisingly, was the Willie Nelson picnic. It drew only 20,000 people, and was the cause of last year's festival losing money.

The first casualty, then, was the picnic. Soon after the festival last year, Nelson himself announced he would not be back, that he would return to the Texas Hill Country.

That was fine, with no hard feelings, all around.

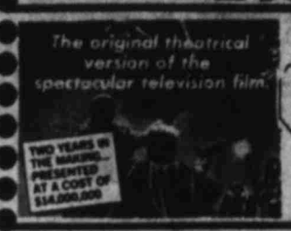

"The rock show became such an event last year," Messina said. "It overshadowed the picnic. We realized Texas can stand a good rock and roll show each year."

Next to go was multiple days formula.

"We considered two days of rock and roll this year," Messina said, "but decided that was just too much. I can't believe a body can withstand that kind of a beating."

Fires, Water Shortages Cause Concern In Los Angeles Area

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Weary firefighters battled home-threatening blazes in dry, brush-covered hills again Monday, the third day of a record-breaking heat wave that set an electricity consumption record and forced a water cutoff in one Los Angeles suburb.

A 30-acre blaze in the Rowland Heights area swept close to several homes Monday afternoon, Los Angeles County fire Capt. Ken Lavoie said. "Many, many homes are threatened," he said, "but none has been damaged so far."

Firefighters got some relief Monday as the hot, gusty desert winds that fanned brush fires all weekend abated. Although most major blazes had been doused by Monday, about 10,000 acres were still ablaze in widely scattered areas of Southern California.

A seven-acre fire erupted Monday afternoon near the entrance to the Angeles National Forest in San Dimas, but was quickly contained, the Los Angeles County Fire Department said.

A "sleepy, slow type of fire," consumed five acres of brush in a residential area near Studio City, but firefighters used three helicopters and six engine companies to control it before any homes were damaged, Los Angeles City fire Department spokesman Martin Garza said.

Temperature Record Set

For the third straight day Monday, the heat got off to an early start. By 9:30 a.m., the mercury had already topped the old record of 95 degrees for June 11 — set in 1896. The new Los Angeles mark for the date is 105, but it was as hot as 108 in Ontario.

Southern California Edision said Monday's heat caused a record power demand of 12,035 megawatts by its three million customers. The previous record was 11,997 megawatts on Sept. 11, 1978. The utility said it was asking customers to cut back on electrical usage between noon and 6 p.m.

Some 300,000 people crammed Los Angeles County beaches Monday, "a real summertime crowd," said lifeguard Eric Buscher. About 1 million packed the coastal areas Sunday.

Temperatures in the high 90s Sunday sent water usage soaring in the exclusive Windsor Hills area northeast of Los Angeles International Airport. Faucets in about 2,000 hillside homes and most fire hydrants ran dry, said Los Angeles County fire department spokesman Dick Friend.

Despite efforts of the private water firm serving the area to restore the flow, pipes remained dry Monday, Friend said.

An "air block" — created when large amounts of water are drawn from wells before the natural flow can catch up — caused the dry-up, Friend said, and also prolonged efforts to get water moving again.

No fires were reported in the area, but to be safe, Friend said, extra fire engines and tankers carrying 3,000 gallons of water were moved in.

Soaring temperatures also sent people to their air-conditioners, and residents were asked Monday to conserve energy, said Los Angeles Department of Water and Power spokeswoman Bonnie Chaikind.

"We are urging our customers to draw the drapes and shades, use appliances in the cool hours and keep the thermostat at 78 degrees or above," she said. "But there is no strain on our system."

The largest fire was a 3,000-acre blaze on the target practice range at Camp Pendleton Marine Base. Firefighters ringed the range but were unable to battle the blaze directly, said Master Sgt. Dick Mescall.

"The impact area is a no-man zone," Mescall said. "We can't even go in there because there are a lot of duds."

An 8-day-old, 3,016-acre blaze on the Morongo Indian Reservation in Riverside County — which claimed the lives of two firefighters Friday — was brought under control about 10 a.m. Monday, said state Department of Forestry spokesman Dan Proctor.

The rugged terrain had not burned for about 40 years, Proctor said.

Independent Truck Operators Urged To Park, Protest

By The Associated Press

The Independent Truckers Association urged 100,000 owner-operators to park their rigs Monday and join a nationwide protest that already has led to sporadic violence and threatens to disrupt shipments of food to grocery stores. Amid growing reports of trucks peppered with bullets and rocks in some areas, Mike Parkhurst, president of the association and editor-publisher of Overdrive magazine, said in Washington that he would support the truckers' protest against fuel costs, varying load regulations and the 55 mph speed limit.

Parkhurst, who says his Los Angeles-based organization has about 30,000 members, predicted consumers would begin to feel the pinch of a food shortage within a week.

Packing Plants Close

A few meat packing plants in the West were forced to shut down late last week and agricultural officials said grain elevators were filling up in some areas.

Local trucker organizations have been blockading truck stops, tying up rush hour traffic and parading in convoys through capital cities for more than a week.

Denny Bowen, manager of Skelly Truck Stop on Interstate 90 near Hampshire, Ill., estimated that a blockade which began at his station Sunday night had cost him several thousand dollars, but he said he felt the truckers' protest was legitimate.

"The truck drivers are paying champagne prices and getting beer for their money," he said.

No Prediction

Parkhurst, who said his organization represents about one-third of the estimated 100,000 independent long-haul operators, would not predict how many would shut down.

"These are independent truckers," he said. "We can't tell these guys what to do."

Parkhurst said the truckers were seeking an immediate and full allocation of fuel to truck stops and an increase in the speed limit to 65 mph on all federally financed highways.

They also want uniform weight and length laws, permitting trucks up to 60 feet long and a maximum weight of 80,000 pounds. Presently the regulations vary from state to state.

Other Developments

Following a weekend of scattered incidents of sniping, arson and nails strewn on highways, these were some of the developments on Monday:

•A trucker who passed other trucks attempting to tie up traffic on Interstate 90 near Missoula, Mont., said that five miles down the road a rock smashed his windshield and four shots were fired into his rig.

•Police monitoring CB broadcasts in the Chicago area said truckers were broadcasting "threats" against drivers still on the road.

•Truck stops were blockaded in Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Okla., Hampshire, Ill., Missoula, Mont., and Springfield, Mo.

•A convoy of about 20 trucks circled the Tennessee Statehouse in Nashville and the Tennessee Highway Patrol said seven truck drivers were arrested Sunday night on Interstate 40 near Knoxville for refusing to leave the highway.

•In the Northwest, most truck stops closed down from Post Falls, Idaho, to Ellensburg, Wash.

•About 75 rigs formed a convoy to slow down morning rush hour traffic on the interstate system in metropolitan Omaha, Neb.

•A trucker was arrested for impeding traffic on Interstate 30 near Little Rock, Ark., where a weekend blockade of diesel fuel stops broke up Monday.

•Independent truckers drove their rigs to state capitals in Indiana, Alabama and North Dakota to press their demands on the states' governors, who promised their support but stressed their limited power over trucking.

FBI Releases New Composite Sketch In Assassination Probe

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The FBI released another composite sketch Monday, bringing to six the number of men being sought in connection with the May 29 assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

The latest drawing is of a man witnesses have told investigators was in the immediate vicinity of Wood's townhouse the morning he was slain by a sniper firing a single shot.

The FBI had released two composites June 1 of men seen in the vicinity the day of the shooting. The three sketches released last week were of men the FBI said were in the vicinity that day or an undetermined number of days prior.

"They're not suspects, as such. We're just trying to identify who they are and what they were doing there," Special Agent Manuel Marquez said of the men in the six composites.

None of the men had been officially identified by Monday afternoon, although an FBI spokesman said some information could be forthcoming on "one or two."

The FBI, mobilizing at least 40 agents and numerous other federal agents, has mounted an intense ivestigation into the slaying of the 63-year-old judge known as "Maximum John" for his stiff sentences in drug cases.

It was the second time in seven months a Western District of Texas official involved in West Texas drug cases had been ambushed. Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr escaped a hail of automatic rifle fire Nov. 21 when he ducked behind the dashboard of his car.

Kerr has since been given 24-hour protection by U.S. marshals. Since Wood's assassination, the four remaining judges in the district and other prosecutors have been given constant protection.

The man pictured in the sixth composite is described as being a tall Anglo or Mexican-American in his early 20s, with a dark complexion, large nose, thin build and full, black wavy hair.

Supreme Court Deals Handicapped Blow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Handicapped persons have no legal right to attend schools if they cannot meet the physical qualifications, the Supreme Court ruled Monday.

What's more, schools offering clinical training are under no legal obligation to take "affirmative efforts" to reshape their curricular offerings to accommodate the handicapped, the justices ruled unanimously.

Dealing a major setback to the educational opportunities for handicapped persons nationwide, the justices placed a narrow interpretation on a 6-year-old federal law.

The Rehabilitation Act of 1973 prohibits all programs and activities receiving federal funding from discriminating against any "otherwise qualified handicapped individual."

A federal appeals court ruled last year that the law required a North Carolina community college to admit into its nursing program a handicapped woman who would have been a qualified applicant had she not had a hearing disability.

That ruling was struck down Monday.

"An otherwise qualified person is one who is able to meet all of a program's requirements in spite of his handicaps," Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. wrote.

Other Rulings

In a busy day on the bench, the justices took these actions in other matters:

•Ruled unanimously that individual consumers may sue businesses suspected of price fixing.

In a decision with potentially sweeping impact for the American buying public and businesses as well, the court reversed a ruling in a Minnesota case that limited the right to sue in such instances to persons hurt in their business.

•Handed the Carter administration a big victory in ruling unanimously that federal agencies are not required to supply environmental impact statements when making budget requests.

•Agreed to decide whether New York State may funnel some $10 million a year to private schools to pay for certain state-mandated student testing and record-keeping. Opponents say the state aid violates the constitutional separation of church and state.

•In the first case of its kind to reach the nation's highest court, refused to hear the appeal of a 28-year-old Unification Church member seeking damages from persons who tried to "deprogram" her.

•Turned down an appeal by atheist activist Madalyn Murray O'Hair aimed at banning the inscription "In God We Trust" from all U.S. coins.

•Agreed to review a ruling that truck down substantial portions of Texas' obscenity laws. One provision called for the possible closing down for one year of any establishment found to be a "public nuisance" through its dealing in obscene materials.

Victory Scuttled

In its handicapped rights decision, the court scuttled the legal victory previously won by Frances Davis of Fairmont, N.C.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had ruled that Southeastern Community College in Whiteville, N.C., violated the 1973 federal law when it rejected Mrs. Davis' application to its program leading to licensing as a registered nurse.

Mrs. Davis, 46, has been a practical nurse for the past 12 years. There was never any question that she was academically qualified for admission.

But because of a serious hearing impairment, Mrs. Davis can communicate only when she wears a hearing aid and looks directly at the talker to read lips.

'Affirmative Relief'

After a federal trial judge dismissed her lawsuit against the college, the appeals court sent the case back. It ordered the judge to consider Mrs. Davis' request that the school give her some "affirmative relief" by altering its program.

Monday's ruling, however, said: "The language and structure of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 reflect a recognition by Congress of the distinction between the evenhanded treatment of qualified handicapped persons and affirmative efforts to overcome the disabilities caused by handicaps.

"It also is reasonably clear that (the law) does not encompass the kind of curricular changes that would be necessary to accommodate (Mrs. Davis) in the nursing program," Powell's opinion said.

The head of the Department of HEW's Bureau of Education for the Handicapped said the Supreme Court decision would not affect a separate law dealing with handicapped students at the elementary and secondary school level.

The Education for All Handicapped Children Act of 1975 requires states to provide a free public education in the least restrictive environment for all handicapped children age 3 to 18.

"I don't think that decision has any impact at all on (the 1975 law)," said Edwin W. Martin, a deputy commissioner of education. "The college and university issue is quite a separate thing."

John Wayne Succumbs To Cancer

with a valve from the heart of a pig. Doctors termed the operation "uneventful."

Wayne stayed at MGH a little more than three weeks but left in good sprits, chatting with reporters before flying back to California. He said at the time he felt he had enough strength to carry on a normal life.

Wayne underwent his second operation March 2, less than five months after his cancerous stomach was removed. Doctors said the surgery was to remove an obstruction in the intestines caused by hostsurgical adhesions.

They said it did not appear malignant. Wayne withstood the surgery well and was out of intensive care in little more than a day and then moved to the same room he occupied at the UCLA Medical Center when physicians fashioned a new stomach for him from intestine tissue.

And again he was surroanded by family, children and grandchildren, while friends and well-wishers around the world held their own vigils.

Not A Ladies' Man

Although he played opposite many provocative leading ladies, Wayne somehow got the reputation of never doing much more than giving a girl a peck on the cheek. He laughingly denied it.

"I've had my moments," he said. "Two of my pictures had bedroom scenes: 'Wake of the Red Witch' and 'The Barbarian and the Geisha.' And I literally hit the hay with Jean Arthur in 'Lady Takes a Chance' and Maureen O'Hara in 'McLintock.' They had me kissing those girls in haystacks."

In the first public appearence he made since the operation that removed his stomach, a weak but smiling Wayne received a standing ovation at the Academy Award presentations last Airil in Hollywood.

Wayne stole the show as he walked to the podium to present the award for Best Picture amid resounding applause and cheering.

"That's about the only medicine a fella'd ever really need," Wayne, who had lost about 40 pounds, told the gala audience.

"Believe me when I tell you I'm mightly pleased that I can amble down here tonight."

Wayne played the star studded audience like a pro.

Oscar and I

"Oscar and I have something in common," he told the blacktie crow. "Oscar first came to the Hollywood scene in 1928. So did I."

He led popularity polls at the box office for more than 20 years starting in 1950 and it was estimated his pictures grossed around $1 billion. But in 1970 he said he was still "just one step ahead of the tax collector."

Of his own performances Wayne said, "I'm not an actor, I'm a reactor. I just do what seems natural in a situation. All I know's sincerity and simplicity."

Wayne was once asked about criticism that he was a "racist in Indian movies."

"I treated Indians with human dignity in any movie I've ever made," he said.

Marion Michael Morrison

Wayne was born Marion Michael Morrison in Winteset, Iowa, on May 26, 1907. His father, a pharmacist, moved the family to California six years later.

He dished up prescriptions and ice cream in his father's drug store. He was turned down in a bid for appointment to the Naval Academy and enrolled in the University of Southern California where he played varsity football. One of his teammates and lifelong friends was the late actor Ward Bond.

Wayne left school after his sophomore year for lack of funds and worked at the old Fox Film Corp. as a prop man. He came to the attention of Director John Ford while taking a turn as a stunt man and the two became close friends.

First Flop

His first part was in a flop, "The Big Trail," in 1931. Thereafter he made an endless series of B movies for Republic Studios until 1938 when Ford picked him for "Stagecoach," one of the finest Westerns ever made.

From that time on he was constantly on the big screens. He led a hectic cattle drive with Montgomery Clift in "Red River," one of his first big moneymakers.

He and William Holden won Civil War battles in "The Horse Soldiers." He and Robert Stack safely brought in a crippled plane in "The High and the Mighty." He took the "Long Voyage Home" with Thomas Mitchell and fought one of the movies' grandest fights with Victor McLaglen in "The Quiet Man."

He produced one of the biggest Westerns of all time in 1960 —"The Alamo" — with an all-star cast and authentic Texas background. He also helped produce and acted in "The Green Berets."

In 1972 he made another offbeat Western in the "True Grit" style, shaping up a little band of schoolboys for a cattle drive in "The Cowboys."

His last picture, "The Shootist" with Lauren Bacall, was a disappointment, and in 1977 Wayne (a television holdout except for a 1970 video salute to America) signed an exclusive contract with ABC-TV for a series of specials.

Wayne's personal life included three wives, all Latins. The first was Josephine Saenz, the mother of four of his seven children —Michael, Toni, Patrick and Melinda.

They were divorced in 1946. He married actress Ezperanza Baur the same year. They were divorced seven years later.

Wayne married Peruvian beauty Pilar Palette in November 1954. They were the parents of Aissa, John Ethan and Marisa.

Gulf Oil Slick

bined with the fact the spilled oil is not sinking to the bottom where the shrimp live. Shrimp fishing is worth $100 million a year to the area.

Diaz Serrano said many fishermen "have offered to work or lend their boats to help control the spill," but are not complaining of damage.

PEMEX engineers at the conference said only an area of 2½ square miles around the burning well has a thick slick several inches deep. The rest gradually thins out and more than three-fourths of it is only hundredths of an inch thick, they said.

Diaz Serrano said three flotation beams, each capable of containing 8,000 barrels, were flown in from Norway and were being laid down.

"These together with the smaller beams that PEMEX has makes for a total containment capacity of 30,500 barrels a day — more than twice what we need," he said, adding that two boats with a 5,000-barrel capacity are ready to vacuum the oil once the beams are in place.

Hijacked Airliner Lands Safely In Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Delta Airlines jet heading from New York to Florida roared on to Cuba Monday night after being commandeered by a hijacker, a Delta spokesman said.

There were no reports of injuries, and a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman said the U.S. government had been told "the Cuban authorities have the hijacker in custody." He added that the hijacking apparently was carried out by that man alone.

The Delta spokesman and FAA officials said the plane carrying 195 passengers and 12 crew members landed safely just after 7:30 p.m. CDT at Jose Marti Airport in Havana, where many hijacked American planes landed during the 1960s and early 1970s.

It was the first hijacking of a U.S. airliner to Cuba since 1974, a year after a U.S.-Cuba extradition treaty stemmed the flood of hijackings.

A spokesman for the airline, Bill Jackson, said, "Delta's information is that no injuries were sustained by any passenger or crew members during the Havana landing." He said he understood "the passengers were taken to the terminal buiding" at the airport.

Both government and Delta officials said they expected the plane to be flown eventually to Miami, but none could say when.

FAA spokesman Jack Barker said in Atlanta, "We are now awaiting word from the Cuban authorities when it (the plane) will return to the United States."

Barker said the pilot indicated in a radio message the hijacker "was possibly a Cuban," but the pilot "gave no information" about weapons or the manner in which the plane was hijacked. Barker indicated some doubt the pilot felt free to talk at the time.

The FAA spokesman said the State Department "has been in contact with the Cuban government and ... there doesn't appear to be any problem between the U.S. and the Cuban government."

Another Delta spokesman, William Berry, said the plane "was diverted" as it passed near Wilmington, N.C., about 6 p.m. CDT, when "a man entered the flight deck and demanded to be flown to Havana, Cuba."

"The crew advised there was a man in the cockpit demanding transportation to Havana," he said. "They (the crew) made no other communications regarding others or weapons or whatever. Nothing else was said."

Delta's flight 1061 had taken off for Fort Lauderdale, Fla., less than an hour earlier from New York's Kennedy Airport, an FAA spokesman said.

He said he had no details on what happened aboard the plane except that "it has been hijacked and is en route to Havana."

He said the plane is an L-1011 widebody jet.

There were 87 U.S. planes hijacked to Cuba between 1961 and 1973 — many for what the hijackers said were political motives — but there have been few since a 1973 treaty on extradition and prosecution of hijackers.

Considerate Thief Pays For His Gas

SEATTLE (AP) — The note in an envelope on the windshield of Bonnie Cole's car was straightforward.

"I needed the gas," it read.

The $2 accompanying the note, however, came as a surprise.

"I couldn't believe it," she said Sunday. "The car was an old clunker, a station wagon I had parked there to protect the boats in my garage. I hadn't driven it in months."

The considerate thief also didn't leave the tank empty.

"He took only what he had to have, just a couple of gallons," she said. "There's three-quarters of a tank left. That's the best part."

Crime Line Report Results In Arrest Of Rape Suspect

Two men were jailed Monday in connection with the Sunday morning rape of a 19-year old Lubbock woman.

Detectives arrested a 21-year-old suspect at 11:50 a.m. Monday after receiving a Crime Line tip that the suspect was driving a 1965 Chevy in an East Lubbock neighborhood.

Another suspect in the aggravated rape case turned himself in at the Lubbock police department at 1:30 p.m. Monday. A third suspect, identified as a 28-year-old Mexican-American male, still is at large, authorities said.

The victim told police she was dragged out of a club in the 1700-block of Fourth Street around midnight by three men. The men took her outside the city, raped her repeatedly and dropped her off near her house at daylight Sunday, she told police.

The woman was examined at a local hospital.

K-Bob's Steakhouse at 4902 34th St. was burglarized between 3:30 p.m. Sunday and 9 a.m. Monday, sustaining more than $1,500 in damages, reports indicate.

Burglars entered through a back door and made off with 12 cartons of cigarettes, five paintings that had been on display in the restaurant, an AM/FM receiver in a wooden cabinet and several rolls of change, according to reports.

The burglars also pried open an empty cash register and attempted entry into the company safe, police said.

Joe T. Ince of 3402 70th St. reported the loss of a 1977 Ford from his residence Monday. The car, valued at $5,500, was stolen between 11 p.m. Sunday and 7 a.m. Monday, Ince told police.

Two other auto thefts were reported in the city Monday. Realtor Bobby Day said his car, a 1977 yellow Mazda, was stolen from his home at 4502 98th St. between 10 p.m. Sunday and 11 a.m. Monday.

Dan Skidmore told officers his 1975 Chevrolet was stolen in the 4400-block of 23rd Street sometime Sunday evening. The car, Skidmore said, had broken down late Saturday.

A $1,200 mortar mixer was stolen from a job site at 82nd Street and Chicago Avenue, reports show. The mixer, owned by Colonial Stone and Brick, was stolen between 4 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. Monday.

Separate fights at a Lubbock pool hall Sunday night resulted in the hospitalization of two men.

George Moreno, 23, of 1914 Ave. N was in satisfactory condition early today at Health Sciences Center Hospital with injuries suffered during an altercation about 8:20 p.m., and Charles Dennis Robinson, 31, of 710 13th St. was in fair condition at West Texas Hospital with wounds suffered in a fight about an hour later.

Moreno, who suffered a possible broken leg, told police two men attacked him at a pool hall in the 700-block of 13th Street. A witness said Moreno and the suspects began arguing and one of the assailants picked up a stick and began beating Moreno.

The suspects were described as tall, black and between 20 and 25 years old.

In the other reported assault, Robinson said he was sitting in front of the same pool parlor when an Indian man walked out and began beating him over the head with a chain.

The suspect was described as medium built and between 38 and 45 years old. The man's first name reportedly is "Tornado."

Reports indicate that an EMS ambulance picked up Robinson while he was walking in the 1700-block of Avenue C.

A 19-year-old Lubbock man was arrested about 10:45 p.m. Sunday on suspicion of burglary after he was found hiding under a desk inside a business at 220 E. Broadway.

Police answering a burglary alarm at McLaughlin Manufacturing, Inc., discovered the suspect inside one of the offices. The man was taken into custody after failing to convince the officers that he had been forced inside the building by someone else.

Plainview Youth Drowns

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW Julio Perez, 15, of Plainview drowned Monday in a playa lake at 18th Street and Milwaukee Avenue in the northwest section of the city.

A Plainview fire department diver recovered the boy's body at about 3:45 p.m. in 10 feet of muddy water. Police were notified at 2:45 p.m. of the incident, and officers Willie McGee and Alan Connell attempted to retrieve the body from the lake. They were unsuccessful.

Justice of the Peace Glen Stone ruled the death accidental.

According to police, the youth had been swimming with several friends at the lake.

One youth told officers that Perez was trying to swim across the lake when he slipped below the surface in the middle of the lake.

After the drowning incident, Police Chief Alan Stewart cautioned parents to keep their children away from playa lakes and other places where water collects.

"We regularly patrol the playa lake areas, but the children just keep coming back to them," he said. "It's a very dangerous situation."

Services for Perez are pending with the Wood-Dunning Funeral Home here.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Perez of Plainview.

Film Stars Honor Haley In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Jack, it's going to be very lonesome on the Yellow Brick Road," a tearful Ray Bolger said Monday at the funeral mass for Jack Haley, his co-star "The Wizard of Oz."

Four hundred mourners heard the Roman Catholic liturgy at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Beverly Hills.

Dennis Day sang "Never in a Million Years ... Could There be Another You," the Haley theme song he introduced in the 1930s movie, "Wake Up and Live."

The temperature was 100 degrees as celebrities arrived for services.

Among those attending: dancer-actor Gene Kelly; Meredith Willson, composer of "The Music Man;" actors Robert Young, Tom Drake and Phil Regan; singer Alice Faye; comedians Milton Berle and Jan Murray, and director Vincent Minnelli, whose former wife, Judy Garland, played Dorothy in "The Wizard of Oz," and whose daughter, Liza Minnelli, was married for three years to Haley's son, Jack Jr.

Bolger, the Scarecrow of "The Wizard of Oz," led the pallbearers down the aisle of the stately church. Among the pallbearers was Haley's nephew, Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif.

Jack Haley Jr. followed with an arm around his mother, Flo, who was married to the elder Haley for 52 years.

"The Wizard of Oz" figured strongly in eulogies to the Tin Man who went to see the Wizard to get a heart.

"In 'The Wizard of Oz' there is a line so contradictory to Jack's character — 'If I only had a heart,'" said the Rev. James O'Callaghan. "Jack had a great, strong, loving heart that was very close to Christ."

Another Haley nephew, Richard Dornan, observed that Haley was not "off to see the Wizard" but was now "face to face with God."

Bolger, his voice breaking, commented that he and Haley had worked hard in "The Wizard of Oz," which he said has reached more people than any other film in history.

"I think there is not a person in the United States who hasn't said, 'I loved the Tin Man.'

"I loved him too," he added. "We had fun living and working together."

The casket stood before the altar, behind which sat the 15 priests who assisted in the ceremony. As the casket was wheeled out into the blazing midday sun, the organ softly played the strains of "Over the Rainbow," the theme of the 1939 film classic.

Twin Girls' Condition Improving

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Separated Siamese twins Lisa and Elisa Hansen were upgraded to fair condition Monday and for the first time doctors expressed a bit of optimism about the girls' future.

Early indications are favorable and the doctors say the twins are progressing well, John Dwan, a spokesman at the University of Utah Medical Center, said.

The 20-month-old girls, joined at the top of their heads at birth, were surgically separated in a 16½-hour operation May 30.

They were listed in critical but stable condition for one week after the separation. That was changed to serious but stable condition a week ago.

Doctors had declined to give a general prognosis for the girls, saying they were neither optimistic nor pessimistic.

On Monday, however, Dwan reported that "while it could be months before a definitive neurological evaluation is possible, the doctors also report that early indications are favorable."

Dear Hemphills,

My Dad isn't what most people consider a typical father...I mean he's very athletic and stays in peak condition. He's very young for his age and doesn't like loose, baggy clothes. Have you got anything lean and mean for a dad like that?

Signed,
Mr. America, eat your heart out.

Dear Mr. America,

Lean and mean is a good way of describing the new French jeans from Sasson. They're pared down to basic essentials and designed specifically for guys like your father. The Sasson jean is for men and women and looks fantastic in linen weave, twill or classic blue denim. They fit very tight and mold to your body when they're worn...so they never bag. And, oh yes, they are definitely French, because they're sized metrically. So, to be sure you get the right size, check the conversion chart on the jeans. Sasson Jeans 32.00-35.00.

Casey Leads Lady Golfers

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Judy Casey leaned forward in the chair and pulled a sweater up around her tanned shoulders. She didn't look overwhelmed by the fact that she had just turned in the day's low score in the opening round of the Women's West Texas Golf Association 44th annual tournament.

Mrs Casey carded a 75 at the Hillcrest Country Club on Monday to claim individual medalist honors in the qualifying round. But the real action begins today when the women begin match play in the championship, and eight other flights.

Still Mrs Casey should be the clear favorite. The Abilene native is fresh from a victory in the 1979 Texas State Public Links Tournament in Kerrville. She also won the 1973 W.W.T.G.A. tournament, held that year at the Lubbock Country Club.

"I guess I shot about as well as can be expected today," she said smiling. "I might go lower tomorrow, of course, I could go higher— you never can tell."

But Jimmie Smith was under the impression that the Abilene linkster was more likely to go lower.

"You'd have to say that she (Mrs Casey) is one of the favorites," said Mrs Smith. "But she's always one of the favorites."

"Well I wouldn't want to have to play against her tomorrow," replied Miss Casey, motioning towards the Tascosa Country Club golfer. "I can assure you of that."

And Miss Casey has ample reason to respect the Amarillo golfer. Mrs Smith claimed the senior medalist honors (for women over 50) by turning in a round of 80.

Mrs Smith, who is 61, was a relatively late-starter in golf. She's only been playing for about 20 years.

"I started way too late to catch up with these other gals," she says laughing.

But the direct opposite is true in Mrs Casey's situation.

"Lordy, I was 12 years old when I played in my first Women's West Texas tournament," she said. "And, with a few exceptions I've played in most of them since."

Not to disclose any ages, But Mrs Casey has played in over 20 of the tourneys since her debut. But she still has fond memories of that first one at the Fort Worth Colonial Country Club.

"I think I shot a 121," she said. "I remember coming to a water hole — there was just no way to get around it. So I hit a few into the water and finally got past it."

She laughed at the memory.

And since then Mrs Casey has learned her golf well. On Monday she turned in a steady, consistent round, firing a couple of birdies and carding only three bogeys.

"My strongest point is probably my putting," she said. "The sorriest part of my game is the long irons. So I use a seven wood and a five wood in place of those long irons."

Most of the ladies competing at Hillcrest know each other at least in passing, since all are members of the Women's West Texas Golf Association. Still the competition is fierce in all nine flights. Match play begins at 8 a.m. this morning when the second flight tee's off. The last group to start today will be the eigth flight, which will go off at 2 p.m.

Under match play rules, the women's raw scores are unimportant. What counts is who can win the most number of holes. Ladies who lose today will compete in the consolation bracket Wednesday but once a woman loses after Wednesday she is eliminated from the tournament.

One friend none of the ladies want to see eliminated is the ideal weather conditions that were present on Monday.

"It was just a gorgeous day for golf," said Mrs Casey. "It sure would be nice if it could stay like that all week. But I'm not counting on it — I've been to Lubbock before."

In fact, Mrs Casey was generally pessimistic for a first-round leader.

"I never think I can win," she said. "You hope that you do but that's about as far as it goes.

"I play golf for enjoyment too, you know."

Royals Lead Balloting

NEW YORK (AP) — Five Kansas City Royals lead in voting for starting positions on the American Legue All Star team, with Darrell Porter, Fred Patek, George Brett and Amos Otis collecting enough votes to pass other rivals in this week's tabulation at their positions.

In addition, Royals second baseman Frank White held the lead he had in the results of the first vote-count announced last week by the baseball commissioner's office.

Porter moved ahead of Thurman Munson of the New York Yankees and Carlton Fisk of the Boston Red Sox in the catcher's spot and had 373,975 votes on the computerized ballots submitted by fans across the country.

Bowman Stuns NHL; Quits Canadiens Job

MONTREAL (AP) — Scotty Bowman, who guided the Montreal Canadiens to five National Hockey League titles in eight years with the team, resigned as coach of the club Monday to accept a multiyear contract as general manager of the Buffalo Sabres.

"There are certain times in life when you have to move on, and this is one of them," Bowman said, sporting a navy blue necktie emblazoned with the Sabres' crest.

Bowman admitted a possibility remained that he would coach the club next season, while naming as other candidates for the job iterim Coach Bill Inglis and Roger Neilson, coach of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Bowman added that the assistant general manager's position had been offered to John Andersen, who had taken that spot last Dec. 4 when Punch Imlach was fired as general manager and Marcel Pronovost was replaced by Inglis as coach.

Openly miffed over being ignored for the Canadiens' general managership when Sam Pollock retired last fall, Bowman invoked an option in his contract with the team that permitted him to listen to offers from other clubs. Monday was the dealine for the announcement of his decision.

The 45-year-old Montreal native refused to name the other clubs that had made offers during the two-week negotiation period that began after the Canadiens won the Stanley Cup.

It was known, however, that Maple Leafs President Harold Ballard had made a substantial offer to Bowman, including giving Bowman the right to hire any coach available.

Prior to joining Montreal in 1971, Bowman spent four seasons as general manager and coach of the St. Louis Blues.

Bowa's Single Sinks Astros 4-2; Bosox Beat KC, Busby In 10

By the Associated Press

Larry Bowa's RBI single in the seventh inning snapped a 2-2 tie and triggered the Philadelphia Phillies to a 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros.

Bud Harrelson walked to start the Phillies seventh and moved to second on a groundout by winning pitcher Randy Lerch. Pete Rose walked, and Bowa then singled to left, scoring Harrelson.

Harrelson appeared out at the plate on a fine off-balance throw from left fielder Jose Cruz to catcher Bruce Bochte, but the ball squirted out of the catcher's mitt as the runner slid home safely.

Garry Maddox then added an insurance run with a double into the left field corner scoring Rose.

Lerch, 3-4, had lost three games and was involved in four no-decisions before Monday night. J.R. Richard, 6-5, was the loser.

RED SOX 4, ROYALS 0

Dwight Evan's double and reliever Al Hrabosky's throwing error opened the way for Boston to score four runs in the 10th inning as the Red Sox ended a pitching duel with a 4-0 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Steve Busby, the once-great right-hander attempting a comeback from shoulder surgery, allowed only two hits in 9 1-3 innings. After Busby walked Carlton Fisk and Butch Hobson with one out in the 10th, Marty Pattin came on to relieve.

Evans hit Pattin's first pitch to left for a double, scoring Fisk, and Hrabosky came in and intenionally walked George Scott to load the bases.

Jerry Remy bunted back to Hrabosky, but the pitcher threw wildly to catcher Derrell Porter, allowing Hobson and Evans to score. Scott later scored on Rick Burleson's ground ball.

Bob Stanley, 7-4, allowed only four hits through 10 innings. Busby's record fell to 2-3.

ANGELS 9, INDIANS 4

Brian Downing and Larry Harlow drove in two runs apiece in the ninth inning to power the California Angels to a 9-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The Indians had broken a 3-3 tie to go ahead 4-3 without a hit in the eighth.

But with one out in the top of the ninth, Cleveland reliever Dan Spillner loaded the bases on a walk to Carney Lansford, a single by Dan Ford and an intentional walk to Don Baylor. Don Hood relieved Spillner and the Angels tied the score when Willie Aikens was hit by a pitch, forcing in Lansford.

Reliever Mike Paxton came on to face pinch-hitter Downing, who doubled home two runs. Harlow then singled home two more runs and the Angels added their final run on a double by Dickie Thon.

BLUE JAYS 2, MARINERS 0

Rick Bosetti's two-run single backed Dave Lemanczyk's six-hitter as the Toronto Blue Jays blanked the Seattle Mariners 2-0.

Lemanczyk, 6-3, gained his second shutout of the season and his seventh complete game. The big right-hander lowered his earned run average to 2.53 as he struck out four and walked two.

Floyd Bannister, 3-6, took the loss despite pitching only the first inning. Bannister re-injured his left ankle that he twisted in Kansas City on May 24. Joe Decker took over in the second inning and hurled shutout ball the rest of the way.

Toronto scored when Bannister loaded the bases on a pair of walks and a single by Rico Carty with one out. Bosetti followed with his single up the middle.

Bannister had two strikeouts before he left while Decker struck out four and walked none.

EXPOS 6, BRAVES 5

Rodney Scott drew a bases-loaded walk in the 11th inning to force in the winning run as the Montreal Expos defeated the Atlanta Braves 6-5.

Ellis Valentine began the Montreal 11th with a single to center off Craig Skok, 1-2, and went all the way to third when Braves right fielder Gary Matthews bobbled pinch-hitter Dave Cash's two-out single.

Skok was replaced by Adrian Devine, who promptly gave an intentional walk to Andre Dawson in order to face Scott. After falling behind 3-0, Devine threw two strikes before yielding the game-winning walk.

Woodie Fryman, 2-2, the fourth Montreal pitcher, earned the victory, yielding three hits over two innings.

The Expos had tied the game 5-5 with two runs in the fourth when they bunched four straight hits to chase Atlanta starter Tony Brizzolara.

Valentine led off with a double and scored on a single by Larry Parrish. Chris Speier then moved Parrish to second with a single and Parrish came home when pinch-hitter Tommy Hutton singled.

ORIOLES 6, WHITE SOX 0

Ken Singleton doubled in two runs and Al Bumbry delivered a two-run pinch single to back the five-hit pitching of Scott McGregor as the Baltimore Orioles rolled to their sixth straight victory with a 6-0 decision over the Chicago White Sox.

Singleton's double featured a three-run fifth inning and Bumbry came through with a bases-loaded single in the sixth as McGregor, a 15-game winner last year, posted his first victory this season after two losses.

Kiko Garcia, who had three hits, tripled to drive in the Orioles' first run in the third after Rich Dauer had doubled off loser Richard Wortham, 6-5.

McGregor, bothered by tendinitis this season, was helped by double plays in the first two innings as he gave up singles in each of the first three innings and then held the Sox hitless until the seventh, when Lamar Johnson doubled and Greg Pryor singled. However, both runners were left stranded.

METS 3, REDS 2

Wayne Twitchell's five innings of one-hit relief pitching and Lee Mazzilli's tie-breaking RBI single enabled the New York Mets to defeat the Cincinnati Reds 3-2.

Twitchell, 1-0, relieved New York starter Jesse Orosco with two on and two out in the fourth. He allowed only a seventh-inning single by Junior Kennedy over the final five innings, striking out four and walking one.

Mazzilli's fifth-inning single off Cincinnati starter Fred Norman, 3-6, drove in Joel Youngblood to break a 2-2 tie. Youngblood had walked to open the inning and moved to third when Frank Tavaras doubled for the second time in the game.

TIGERS 3, A's 1

Detroit's Lou Whitaker singled twice, scored two runs and sparkled defensively as the Tigers trimmed the Oakland A's 3-1.

The Detroit second baseman, the 1978 American League rookie of the year, singled and scored the game's first run in the opening inning, coming in from second on Jason Thompson's single.

He also scored one of Detroit's two fourth-inning runs when the Tigers chased Oakland starter Steve McCatty, who suffered his first loss in five decisions.

Davis Quits Raider Squad Over Dispute

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

There didn't appear to be that much at stake during Sunday's final round of the Texas Amateur Athletic Federation (TAAF) tennis championships.

After all, it was only a local summertime tournament designed to give the local folks something to do during these lazy days.

But when it was all over, all the charges and counter-charges given and taken, Texas Tech had lost Doug Davis — the Raiders No. 1 singles player during the 1978-79 season.

Davis got into an argument with Texas Tech recruit Mark Thompson during the semifinals of the singles competition and when Tech coach Mark Hamilton tried to intercede, things took a turn for the worse.

"Doug told me exactly what I could do with my tennis program," Hamilton said Monday. "He was very explicit in the way he said it.

"So as far as I'm concerned the matter is closed," added Hamilton. "Doug won't be coming back to Tech on a scholarship."

Contacted Monday, Davis expressed regret about the situation but said that he felt his decision was justified.

"It (the disputed call during his match with Thompson) was just a difference of opinion," said Davis. "Then it just snowballed. As far as I'm concerned he (Thompson) is just not a good person.

"I couldn't have played on the same team with him," said Davis. "I tried to be nice to the guy, but when you get on the court and he's cutting your throat—I was playing to win."

"Playing to win" has been a problem that has troubled Davis all year, according to Hamilton.

"Doug is a super player," prefaced Hamilton. "But he just can't stand to lose, not during practice or anytime. That's fine, but when he is losing he just can't handle it. And we've had some problems before. At least five times this year Doug has nearly gotten into fights on the court.

"But now I don't have any choice but to take back his scholarship," said the coach. "How could I have the other players give me any respect if I didn't?"

"I have a pretty hot temper," admitted Davis. "And all people don't mix. That was the case with Mr. Thompson and me. There was just no way that I could play on the same team with that guy."

But, according to Davis, there is more to his decision to quit the Tech program than just a personality clash.

"We had been promised changes in the program," said Davis. "And they never came about. Then Mark (Hamilton) goes and gives scholarships to a couple of guys he'd never seen play before.

"And there were plenty of people who had been coming out all year and working with the program who don't have a scholarship," added Davis. "Now they've got to wonder."

The scholarships Davis was referring to were given to Mark Thompson of South Africa and Zahid Maniya of Pakistan. Both played at Central Texas Junior College in Killeen last year.

Actually, the two foreign students are only splitting a single scholarship. NCAA regulations limit to five the number of full tennis scholarships a school can offer.

And says Hamilton, "I'd seen both of the athletes play several times."

"I was hoping that Doug would have been more helpful with the new players," said Hamilton. "He's a veteran player and should have been more cooperative."

In his defense, Davis says he tried to help the new athletes but things just didn't mesh.

"I stood behind Mark when he first took over as head coach (last fall)," said Davis. "I was elated when he got the job — and I still stand behind him. But he was trying to coach this summer and I don't think he should have been.

"I entered that tournament (TAAF) on my own," he said. "I paid my own entry fee. I wasn't competing for Tech. Then, when we got into the argument, I felt like he wasn't being neutral, he was blaming it on me."

The dispute came in the second set of the Thompson-Davis singles match as Thompson hit what appeared to be the set winning shot — which Davis claimed went wide. If allowed, that point would have evened the sets at one apeice.

Neither player was willing to concede the point.

"I've got mixed feelings about losing Doug," said Hamilton. "With his playing ability he could have been a big help to us on the court.

"But he was also causing problems with the team."

LONG REACH — Former Texas Tech tennis star Doug Davis makes a long stretch to make a return during Sunday's TAAF tennis finals. Davis quit the Tech squad that same day and says now that he'd like to try his hand at some professional satellite tours. Davis also played tennis at West Texas State for two years before calling it quits. (Staff Photo By Paul Moseley)

Kite Rates U.S. Open Attention

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — He doesn't have the distance of some of golf's big hitters. He doesn't tell jokes or throw tantrums. His record — on a surface examination — doesn't compare with the marks compiled by others.

He is neither flambouyant nor spectacular. Perhaps he's lacking in color. But quiet, steady Tom Kite is a grinding competitor who very well could be on the line that separates the good players from the greats of the game.

"Sometimes I have a feeling that the players who win all the time know something that I don't know, something I haven't learned yet," Kite said before a practice round for the 79th U.S. Open, the American natinal golf championship that will be start a four-day run Thursday on the Inverness Club course.

"It almost seems as if there's a trick to winning, an ability that you have to acquire, something you have to learn that isn't entirely involved with playing good golf," Kite said.

He's won twice in a PGA tour career that started in 1972. And he's challenged literally scores of times, been in position to win a dozen tournaments.

A majority of those have come in premier events on the more difficult, demanding, testing courses. The little (5-foot-8, 145-pound) man seems to play his best on those tough courses, in the bigger events.

In 1977, for example, he was third in both the Canadian Open and the Masters. Last year he tied for second in the British Open and the Hall of Fame Classic and was third at the Western on tough Butler National.

In the Hall of Fame Classic, he called a pentalty on himself when his ball rolled. No one else saw it. But Kite called the penalty that took him out of a possible title playoff. That action resulted in a national award for sportsmanship.

And this year he has had seven finishes in the top 10 including ninth at the Tournament Players Championship, fifth at the Masters, seventh at the Tournament of Champions and fourth in the Memorial.

In four of the last five years he's led Ben Crenshaw — his more famous teammate at Texas and the man in whose shadow he's played all his life — on the money-winning list. Although Crenshaw has won this season and Kite has not, Tom again leads Ben on the money-winning list, $96,000 to $64,000.

More importantly, perhaps, he's continued and confirmed his happy habit of playing his best on the tough courses.

"It seems that my game is suited to the majors," Kite said, "where there's a premium on accuracy, on getting the ball in the fairway and on the green.

"Of course, I get pumped up for them more, too. But mostly it's the courses, the courses that make you play well to score well, courses where par is a good score."

Johnson Wants $$—Lots Of 'Em

NEW YORK (AP) — Dennis Johnson says he should be paid as much as any guard in basketball, and negotiations are under way to bring him toward that lofty goal.

Johnson's agent, Fred Slaughter, has been meeting with Seattle SuperSonics owner Sam Schulman and General Manager Zollie Volcok in an effort to work out an extension of Johnson's contract, which has one year to run.

"We're in the same ballpark," said Slaughter, a former UCLA basketball player. "But it's a big ballpark — like Yankee Stadium."

The highest-paid guard in basketball is Denver's David Thompson at $800,000 a year. Johnson may well be the sport's most underpaid performer, laboring last year for a reported $85,000.

There were some fringe benefits, however, such as the playoff bonus he earned for leading the Sonics to the National Basketball Association championship, and the car he received Monday for being named most valuable player of the final series.

The car, a Volkswagen Scirocco, was presented to Johnson by Sport Magazine at a luncheon Monday.

Johnson smiled when asked whether he should be paid as much as any guard in the league.

"I think so, I think I'm up there," he said after a pause. "But what I think and what Sam (Schulman) thinks are two different things."

Slaughter said he was optimistic a new contract could be agreed upon. "We're seeking a secure contract that fairly and adequately compensates Dennis for what he has done and what he can do. He is not being fairly compensated now, but he signed a contract and he's got to live up to the terms of that contract."

Johnson was a virtual unknown when he came into the league three years ago and thus was signed by the Sonics at bargain rates. He has since developed into one of the most complete players in the game, a defensive star as well as an effective offensive player.

His two-way talents earned him MVP honors in the playoffs, certainly enhancing his bargaining position, since if a new contract is not signed Johnson would become a free agent after next season.

"If I was writing a Hollywood script, I'd have written it just like this," conceded Slaughter, who has been negotiating with the Sonics on and off since November. "But he's been doing this year in a year out. He's proven his ability, day in and day out, at both ends of the court. I think Sam recognizes what Dennis has meant to the team."

Slaughter added, "Dennis has never talked to me about any team other than Seattle. He likes Seattle, the team, Sam, the coach. I think he wants to stay."

However, Johnson wasn't making any commitments.

"I have a year to go and I'll play out that year," he said. "In the meantime we'll talk. But it's not something that I'm going to let drive me crazy. For me the rewards will come. If not this year then next year, or the year after.

"If my contract ever ran out, it would be in my best interest to look at every option that is available. That's just good business."

Net Stars Falling For Spouses; Tour Takes On Family Look

PARIS (AP) — The pro tennis tour, once a collection of unmarried players and men traveling without their wives, has becoming a family affair. Several spouses travel on tour now and a baby boom is under way.

"It's not the party circuit it used to be," said Sandy Mayer, who travels with his wife Libby and their 6-month-old daughter. "I guess that people found out stress and loneliness came right along with the independence."

"Everybody's doing it," agreed Chris Evert Lloyd, who recently married British player John Lloyd. "It's a funny part of human nature where things seem to group together like that. First it was a lot of single players getting married, and now it's babies."

Marjorie Smith, 28-year-old wife of Stan Smith and a former pro player herself, travels to tournaments with their 9-month-old baby Ramsey.

"Life on the road has its pluses and minuses," said Mrs. Smith. "But it sure beats watching Stan on television."

Babies and spouses abounded here last week during the French Open, where Bjorn Borg took the men's crown on Sunday with the moral support of his fiancee, Romania's Mariana Simionescu, who currently plays on the women's tour. They are to be married this summer. They have traveled together for a few years.

During the two-week tournament, Brian Gottfried was seen as frequently with his new baby as with his rackets. Jimmy Connors said he will skip Wimbledon if his wife, Patti, appears to be ready to deliver their first child.

Arthur Ashe's photographer wife, Jeanne Moutoussamy, held an exhibition of her work during the tournament.

Before winning the women's crown Saturday, Lloyd sat in the players' lounge and pointed to a corner where two blond, gurgling babies were surrounded by admiring tennis stars.

"It's just like a nursery," she said, laughing.

Indeed, the increase in the number of babies has been so marked that many pro tournaments now provide players with child care. A few even have full-time nursery staffs.

"One of the biggest demands on the pro tour this year is for more nurseries," said Mayer. "There have been tennis babies in the past, but unless it has just been a lot of mistakes, this time it has really snowballed."

Mayer said the tremendous increase in prize money and promotional income for the players had made a big difference in lifestyles.

"There were a lot of faulty marriages where the wives and kids had to stay at home because there wasn't enough money," he said. "That's all changed now."

Twins Tim and Tom Gullikson and their wives are in their late 20s and haven't had children yet. But after nearly two years of living out of suitcases, both couples have bought homes in the United States and are thinking about families.

"Everybody wants a home base," said Julie, Tom's wife. "Sometimes you need some semblance of an average life, and a child can help that."

"The children here are international and well-adjusted," said Tim's wife Rosemary. "And they can be a real bond where others may not exist."

Rosemary Gullikson acknowledged, however, that the pro tennis circuit might not be the easiest place to raise a child. "It's hard to discipline a child in public. And you're always in public."

Many tennis-playing parents say all the attention — particularly from single players — can spoil a child. Others say it's hard enough for an adult to travel alone from country to country — let alone with children in tow.

"I don't think it is such a great life for a kid, but sometimes there's not much of an alternative," said Lloyd. She and John do not plan to have children in the near future.

"There are an awful lot of highs and lows in this business," she said. "You can win and you can lose, and having your family there can give you a security you wouldn't otherwise have."

As for the husbands of the women players, a quick survey showed that few travel with their wives.

Two exceptions are Margaret Court and Evonne Goolagong Cawley.

LCC Signs Brownfield Duo

Lubbock Christian College has announced the signing of Brownfield High School pitchers Jesse Gonzales and Roy Lee Tealer.

Gonzales, a 6-1, 175-pound righthander, was 5-5 in 1979 and 3-2 in district play. He allowed 41 hits in 59 innings and had 95 strikeouts. His earned run average was 1.42 for the year and 0.97 in district. He pitched no-hitters against Eunice and Lamesa.

Tealer, a 6-3, 160-pound southpaw, was 6-8 in 1979 with 14 complete games. He compiled a 2.04 ERA in league play and a 1.60 ERA for the year. He pitched a no-hitter against Portales and was 6-2 entering district play.

Tealer also served as the designated hitter the final 10 games of the season, hitting .365, with one homer and eight runs batted in.

Eight of Coach Larry Hays' recruits thus far are pitchers. Two are outfielders, one a shortstop and one a second baseman.

Some ideas work and some won't! In 1978 over 2000 growers from California to Delaware and from Canada to Florida agreed that the Spray Sickle is one weed control idea that really works. The 1979 Spray Sickle is better than ever—(Over 35 New Improvements.) If you have Johnson Grass (or any other problem weed) the Spray Sickle is really the only sure way to eradicate it.

ANNOUNCING A DATSUN EXCLUSIVE... ONLY SMALL PICKUP WITH ONE-TON PAYLOAD.

$5196. Does not include taxes, destination charges, license and title fees.

Here it comes. The first small pickup with a one-ton payload! And that's more carrying capacity than any other small truck.

This is one tough, solid, little truck. It's got a heavy-duty, nearly 7 1/2 foot long bed that's solid steel. Plus eight-ply white wall tires, a heftier gross axle weight rating and four-leaf rear spring suspension that'll take on just about anything.

Result: 43% more cargo and passenger capacity than ever before. Now that's a lot more payload than you'll find in even some bigger rigs. Plus you get some standard features not available on other small pickups.

What's more, this new Datsun truck runs on regular gas. So you get more out of it, without putting more into it.

Come in and put our tough little pickup to the test. Let us show you how they're built to last and last. Compare our prices. Then get set to deal. We are driven to give you the best heavy-duty small truck your money can buy.

STANDARD EQUIPMENT: 85-liter overhead cam engine • Power-assist front disc brakes • Bucket seats • Independent front suspension • Four-leaf rear spring suspension • Eight-ply white wall tires • Dual headlights • Center console • Armrests • Package Tray • 60 AMP Battery • Engine Compartment Light • And many more standard features at no extra charge.

CONNALLY AND THE MAYOR — Mormer Texas Gov. John Connally shakes hands with Mayor Angelo R. Martinelli of Yonkers, N.Y., after Connally addressed the U.S. Conference of Mayors in Pittsburgh, Pa., Monday. Connally, who is an announced candidate for the Republican nomination for president in 1980, said the nation is facing severe problems in energy. (AP Laserphoto)

Connally Opens Up On Carter, Blames Him For Energy Crisis

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Presidential candidate John Connally launched a Republican salvo at Jimmy Carter on Monday, saying the energy crisis is endangering democratic society and that the president is failing to deal with it.

"We are confronted by a situation which, if we do not respond to it boldly and with a sense of urgency, places at risk the future of democratic societies everywhere," Connally said.

Connally, an ex-Democrat, spoke at the annual meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors. He was the first of three GOP presidential hopefuls on Monday's program. Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker and Republican House Conference Chairman John Anderson were scheduled to speak later.

The GOP counterattack followed major policy victories by the Carter administration during weekend sessions of the conference. The mayors' resolutions committee approved both Carter's oil price decontrol program and his proposed windfall profits tax.

Connally has campaigned heavily on energy issues, but his speech to the mayors raised the rhetoric of alarm to new heights.

"We must understand that we are faced with far more than the nuisances of this summer of 1979," he said. "Our integrity as a nation, our standard of living, our way of life are at stake — not merely our personal convenience."

Connally said the energy crisis was a political crisis brought on by indecision in Washington. And while he conceded his proposed energy program is similar to the president's, Connally said "the choice is between saying it and doing it."

"If we cannot — as a consequence of the energy shortfall — maintain an annual growth rate in our economy of at least 3.5 percent, our farms and factories, and most especially our cities, will suffer severely," Connally said.

"Broad, deep and prolonged unemployment will become pervasive," Connally said. "The adequacy of food supplies will come to question. The network of transportation which supports this economy will be reduced to uncertain and erratic operations. ...

"What our cities face is magnified beyond our imagination on the world scale," he said. "Every government and every society in the free world is dangerously exposed by the (oil supply) conditions."

Connally called for an effort akin to the Manhattan Project, which produced the first atomic bomb, toward producing synthetic energy sources, making coal more usable and pushing development of nuclear power as well as encouraging greater oil production.

The Republican counterattack was kicked off by Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., who charged Monday that Carter had built a disappointing record in urban affairs. "(Carter's) bright visions have been brought down to earth because rhetoric isn't leadership and good intentions aren't policy," Heinz said.

But Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps defended Carter, saying he had constructed an urban policy with "a strong reliance on private sector responsibilities and the leadership of the cities' mayors."

Connally also assailed the Democrats for favoring cuts in revenue sharing, which he said stuck "at the very heart of the cities' ability" to meet urban problems.

Democratic Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, chairman of the Senate subcommittee dealing with revenue sharing, responded by noting that budget cutters in Washington are pressured by the taxpayers' revolt.

"I think when a presidential candidate starts talking about spending more money for revenue sharing, he should say what he's going to cut out to pay for it," Bradley said of Connally.

Republican mayors issued a joint statement criticizing Carter and charging "that many of our problems stem from a bureaucratized and ineffective federal government."

The statement, read by Mayor E. Clay Shaw Jr. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., at a news conference, accused Carter of "playing politics with programs and leaving local government with fewer opportunities to serve the people."

The conference also was asked to support the SALT II nuclear arms treaty. George M. Seignious, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, said, "The United States is better off with this treaty than without it."

President Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev are scheduled to sign the treaty next week in Vienna. The U.S. Senate must then approve it.

Baptists Divided As Interpretation Of Scriptures Leads To Feuding

HOUSTON (AP) — A long-time principle of Baptists is that no ecclesiastical organization or official can tell them how to interpret the Bible. But Southern Baptists are facing pressures to clamp on stiff regulations on biblical meaning.

As "messengers" gathered Monday for the annual convention of the nation's biggest Protestant body, charges and counter-charges swirled about the issue.

An ultraconservative group is campaigning to elect leadership committed to what is termed "Biblical inerrancy," which holds that Scripture is word-by-word inspired by God and free of all error.

The group, the Baptist Faith and Message Fellowship, charges that "liberals" in the denomination's seminaries do not insist on that view.

The heads of six denominational seminaries counters, saying the criticisms are irresponsible and are "blanket accusations" without specifics.

The Rev. Dr. Duke K. McCall, longtime president of the seminary at Louisville, Ky., said: "We are in agreement o the inspiration and authority of Scriptures. We think the issue is over the fallibility of human language."

The convention opens Tuesday and runs through Thursday, with about 20,000 delegates taking part.

The Rev. Dr. Jimmy R. Allen of San Antonio, outgoing president of the 13 million-member denomination, said the conflict was causing an "erosion of trust" that could undermine the denomination's evangelistic thrust.

"There are those who would like to change the agenda of the convention from missions to orthodoxy," but "such a shift in emphasis would be tragic," he said.

Baptists always have clung to the Bible as their mainstay of faith, shunning creeds or ecclesiastical rule and stressing the freedom of each congregation and individual in it.

While Southern Baptists have spread nationwide, north and south, embracing a wide educational and economic spectrum, including President Carter, they have generally held to a conservative view of Scripture.

But the Rev. Dr. Harold Linsell, head of the ultraconservative faction, says "liberals" in the seminaries "do not accept what the Bible says" and that something must be done to purge them.

If a crackdown on biblical interpretation caused a split in the denomination and a half million members left, he said recently, "that would be a small loss — if they chose to leave."

Prior to the convention, the ultraconservatives held a series of about 15 meetings around the country to whip up sentiment for electing a president who would insist on "Biblical inerrancy."

The drive drew criticism from the Oklahoma Baptist Messenger, which said in an editorial: "Sincere but misguided men are endeavoring to take over the organizational structure of the Southern Baptist convention.

"Such maneuvering as this clique is carrying on is an insult to the intelligence, integrity and ability of the messengers. ... A clique, regardless of their intentions, should never be permitted to take over the elected posts and organizational structure of the convention."

Fourth Trial Delay Request Denied

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Circuit Judge Edward Cowart denied a defense request for a fourth delay in the Theodore Robert Bundy's double murder trial Monday and ordered jury selection to begin Tuesday.

However, Cowart took under advisement a second defense motion asking that the trial be moved out of Tallahassee because of what defense attorneys called massive and damaging pretrial publicity.

Cowart said he would know by Tuesday evening whether it will be possible to select a fair and impartial jury in Leon County.

Bundy, 32, is charged with the Jan. 15, 1978, deaths of sorority sisters Margaret Bowman and Lisa Levy, both of St. Petersburg, and with assaults on three other women that same night in Tallahassee.

Cowart indicated that he will move the trial outside Tallahassee if, after examining the potential jurors, it appears that a panel of 12 jurors and two alternates cannot be drawn from Leon County.

Earlier Monday, Cowart found Bundy mentally competent to stand trial on the murder charges. The judge also denied Bundy's motion that his court-appointed counsel, led by Minerva, be dismissed.

Cowart ruled on Bundy's competency after hearing testimony from two psychiatrists. Both said that Bundy demontrated certain anti-social behavior but that he understood the charges against him and could participate in his defense.

Cowart also refused Bundy's request that he be granted new counsel. Bundy based that motion on a contention that Minerva no longer could effectively represent him because he believed Bundy was guilty and could not avoid conviction.

Minerva filed a motion of his own asking that he be relieved of the responsibility of defending Bundy. He said he should be removed from the case because he might hold a subconscious resentment against Bundy.

Cowart said Minerva had proved himself an effective advocate, adding that the court could not be controlled by Bundy's "subjective belief" that Minerva was ineffective.

Bundy, a former law student from Tacoma, Wash., has also been charged with the murder of a 12-year-old Lake City, Fla., schoolgirl.

Californian Powers 'Albatross' Across Channel

CAP GRIS NEZ, France (AP) — Bryan Allen, a 26-year-old Californian, furiously pedaled a flying bicycle resembling a giant dragonfly 22 miles cross the English Channel today to become the first person to make the flight by human power alone and win a prize of some $200,000. He was welcomed with red, white and blue flowers and champagne.

Allen, wearing shorts, crash helmet, cycling shoes and a life jacket, steered his 50-pound Gossamer Albatross through gusty winds to a beach landing at Cap Griz Nez two hours and 49 minutes after taking off from England, the International Aeronautical Federation said. It was the longest flight of its kind ever and Allen's speed ranged from six to 10 knots.

A posy of red, white and blue flowers with miniature French and American flags was thrust into his hands by Marie Agnieray, the American wife of a retired French merchant marine officer chosen for the honor because she was the only American resident of the little beach resort town. Champagne was quickly broken out.

Stepping out of the fragile craft with a 90-foot wingspan, Allen, a biochemist and racing cyclist from Bakersfield, said, "Right now, I feel marvelous, but about two minutes ago I didn't feel good at all because I had strong cramps in both my calves and one of my thighs."

Allen, who is about 6 feet tall and weighs 137 pounds, said the toughest part of the crossing was half-way between the takeoff point at Warren near Folkestone and the French coast.

"The swell was strong and the associated turbulence was strong too," said Allen, whose craft was guided by a fleet of small boats and was rarely more than 15 feet above the water.

Allen approached the coast at the rocky foot of Cap Gris Nez, and despite increasingly turbulent winds which swung the Albatross almost to within inches of the water, he steered it around the rocks and on to smooth sand.

In the confusion of the landing, handlers could not secure the craft quickly enough and the 45-foot left wing, made of artificial fibers and resins, snapped in a gust of wind. Allen looked at the wing and said: "That's a bit of a drag."

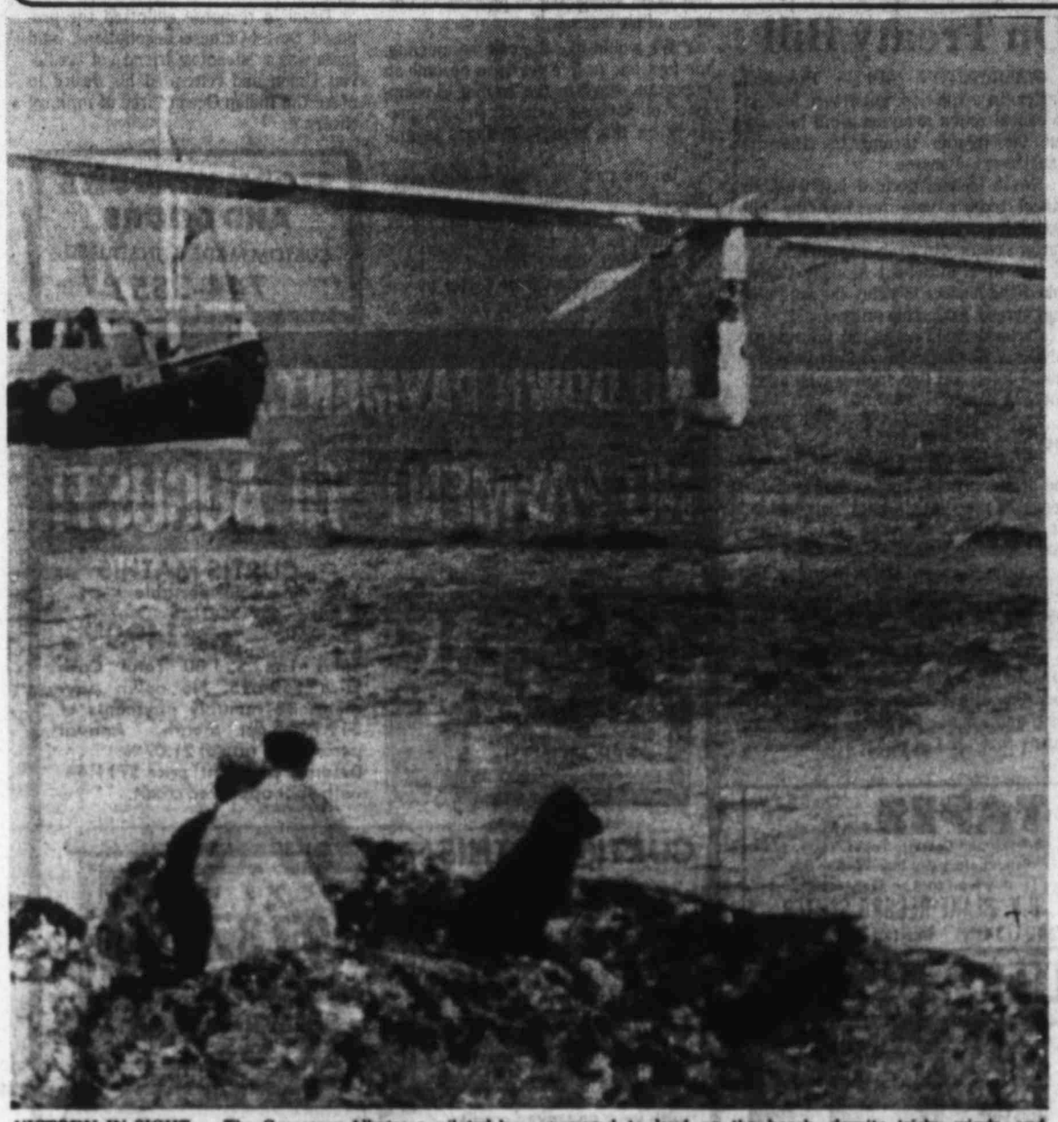

Despite the tremendous effort he had exerted, Allen grinned broadly and looked surprisingly fresh as he stepped out of the transparent, wafer-thin cabin.

He said at one point he had to change course to avoid a supertanker, though constant warnings from coast guard stations on both sides of the Channel kept other ships clear of the Albatross.

Allen said, however, the change of course, and an earlier one to go around the tip of a sandbank which his accompanying boats could not cross, did not really affect the flight.

Asked how arduous the flight was, he said: "In retrospect, it was about what I expected, but at the time it was tougher."

Asked if he planned a flight back across the Channel, he grinned broadly between gulps of champagne and said: "Not today, not even this week."

VICTORY IN SIGHT — The Gossamer Albatross, piloted by American Bryan Allen, approaches the coast of France early today after its epic flight across the English Channel. Allen managed to land on the beach, despite tricky winds, and earned the $200,000 prize for the first man-powered flight across the channel. (AP Laserphoto)

Carter Proposes HealthCare Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today proposd a limited national health care plan that would combine Medicare for the elderly and Medicaid for the poor into a single program, and limit the cost of catastrophic illness to any American family to no more than $2,500.

In announcing his long-overdue program, Carter said the so-called Phase I would cost $23 billion to $25 billion in new federal spending in 1983, the plan's first year of operation.

Most of the money would be used to double the number of relatively poor Americans covered by state-run Medicaid programs and fold the various state programs into a single federally administered HealthCare system encompassing Medicare as well.

The White House said in documents designed to explain the new plan that Carter remains committed to the universal, comprehensive national health plan he promised during his campaign.

But "in a time of budgetary restraint and concern about inflation, it is not possible to enact a full, universal, comprehensive plan," the administration said. It said the president therefore has decided "to address the most pressing health needs of the nation" in his Phase I proposal, designed to permit eventual expansion to build the complete plan Carter would like.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and a coalition of organized labor, senior citizens, and religious interest groups broke with Carter after he refused to commit himself to seek congressional approval of a single comprehensive plan as he had promised during the presidential campaign.

Highlights of the plan announced today include:

—Catastrophic coverage limiting the out-of-pocket costs to any American family to $2,500 for any major illness. Employers and employees, who together pay most health care costs through private group insurance plans, would be required to buy such protection if they don't have it already, which the administration says would increase private premium costs by more than $6 billion.

—Universal free care for all pregnant women and their infants under 1 year old.

—A requirement that employers pay at least 75 percent of private health insurance premiums.

—Establishment of a mandatory fee schedule for physicians who treat the aged and disabled with "an advisory schedule" for those doctors who treat people covered by private plans. "The names of the physicians who are willing to adhere to the schedule will be published in order to increase consumer choice," the proposal said.

—States that now help finance Medicaid would continue to provide health care to the poor in the federalized system, but "there should be significant fiscal relief in the program" to provide state and local governments with about $2 billion in each of the first two years of the program.

The federally-run HealthCare program would operate much as Medicare does now, with the government making the rules but private insurance companies acting as agents to process claims.

Officers Catch Jail Escapees

BORGER (AP) — Law enforcement officers in Borger captured two men today following a breakout by the pair at the Hutchinson County Jail that left a jailer dead.

A sheriff's dispatcher confirmed the capture, but declined to give details.

The men had been the subject of a dragnet snce the jailbreak at Stinnett Monday night.

Officers sought Michael Clyde Jones, 26, of Borger, and George Marshall Hall, 23. The pair were described as armed and extremely dangerous.

Jailer Jack Thompson, 43, was killed by a gunshot, and an autopsy was scheduled.

Hutchinson County Sheriff Lon Blackmon said Thompson apparently was shot to death with his own .357 Magnum revolver. He said it had not been confirmed that Thompson's gun was used in the shooting.

"He (Thompson) had opened the cell door and they apparently overpowered him," Blackmon said. "They got access to both the jail and the jail office keys."

Blackmon said there were no signs of a fight.

Vance Fights Move To Lift Sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance strongly indicated today that President Carter would veto any attempt by Congress to lift trade sanctions against Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

Vance told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee in separate appearances that lifting sanctions would undermine U.S. diplomatic and economic interests in Africa.

"We would tarnish our image abroad and divide ourselves at home," he said. "...It would do grave damage to our national interest."

Vance commented as Senate conservatives boasted they have the votes to adopt a resolution lifting the 14-year-old trade embargo. Supporters of Carter's decision to maintain the sanctions said they hoped to muster at least the 34 votes needed to sustain a veto.

Vance said ending the sanctions "would put us in a position where we would appear to be aligning ourselves with a small white minority. ... This would have a devastating affect on how the Unite States is viewed by other countries."

Vance said the legal requirements for lifting sanctions have not been met.

He acknowledged that steps have been taken away from total white control. And he said it is encouraging that Zimbabwe Rhodesia's white minority

City, Market Air Charges

A Lubbock meat market is operating this week in defiance of city health department inspectors, who a meat market co-owner today said, "snatched our permit off the wall" after the store failed an inspection.

The City Health Department has filed a complaint against Discount Meat Center at 4116 Ave. Q because, its written reports states, the store failed a Saturday inspection to renew its city permit that expired at the end of March.

If found valid, the municipal court complaint could result in a $200-a-day fine for every day the store operates without a permit.

Store co-owner Floyd Umsted said today that the inspectors told him Saturday the store would have to close, but that no formal order had been given.

Dr. Margaret Orr, health department director, said today that a formal notice of reasons why the store failed inspection and of possible penalties for continued operation had just been mailed.

"They snatched our permit off the wall," Umsted said. "We feel like they were very wrong, and we've got to stand up for our rights."

Umsted said Lubbock attorney George Thompson has been hired to represent the store.

Among numerous violations of city health standards claimed in the health department report are "rodent contamination" of meat in the walk-in freezer, dirty floors, and "rodent activity noted in all parts of the store."

Americans Pay Tribute To Man Called 'Duke'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — John Wayne, The American Hero, died of cancer Monday. He was 72 years old and fought for life until the very end.

Millions of Americans mourned the death of the super-patriot and film star.

The rugged actor, who had licked the "Big C" in 1964, died at UCLA Medical Center "with all of his children at his side," said administrator Bernard Strohm.

"He had been in considerable pain since Saturday," Strohm told reporters, but "would not take much medication. He wanted to be awake when he died. He would tolerate the pain just to be near his family."

"The Duke," hospitalized since May 1 in his latest battle with cancer, lapsed into a coma Monday and died at 3:35 p.m. CDT, Strohm said.

"Sometimes his vital signs would stabilize and he would look over and call, often in a loud voice, for his children. When they would appear, he would lapse back into the coma." He was unconscious when he died.

Comedian Bob Hope, told of Wayne's death, said, "We knew he was in tough shape, but we kept our hopes up, because he had pulled through so many times before ...

(John Wayne Stories, Photos On Pages 8-9, Sec. A)

"John's death is a great loss, but he made a lot of pictures, about 200 of them, and he made a lot of important pictures that will live on and on. We're fortunate to have those pictures. He was a unique presence and in those pictures we will always know his memory."

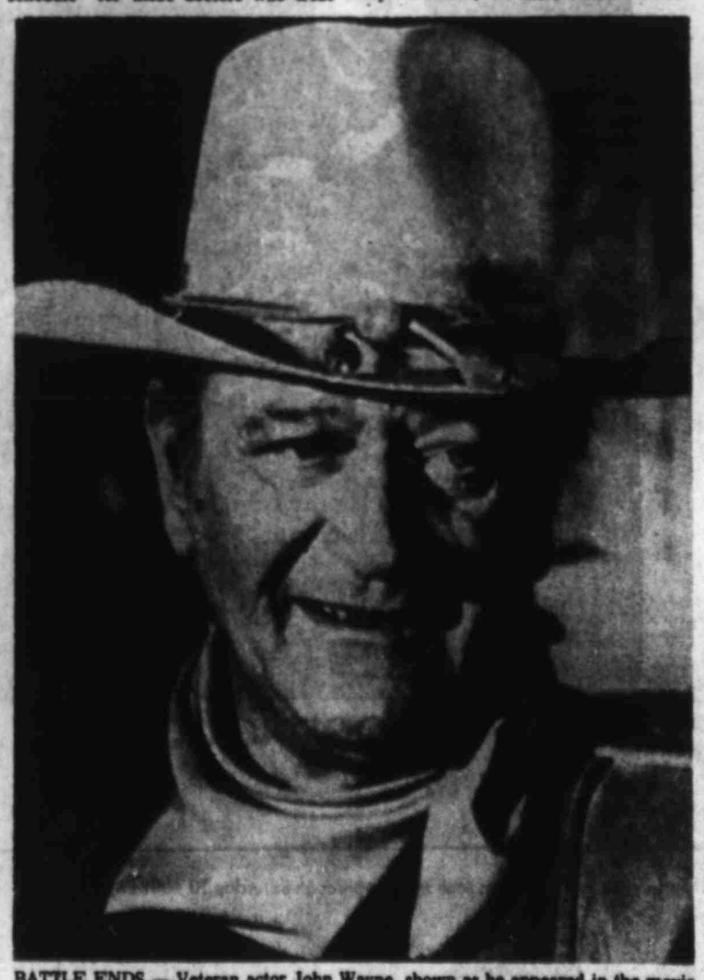

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a friend of Wayne for 50 years, said, "He was just one hell of a guy, a hell of a man. I will miss him. So will America."

Strohm said Wayne's burial will be private and his family has asked instead of flowers that donations be made to the John Wayne Memorial Fund at the UCLA Medical Center. Strohm did not say when the funeral will be held.

As it became clear that death was approaching for the rugged, rumbling-voiced "Duke," he was given many honors.

Congress and President Carter authorized a special gold medal of the kind

CONNALLY AND THE MAYOR — Mormer Texas Gov. John Connally shakes hands with Mayor Angelo R. Martinelli of Yonkers, N.Y., after Connally addressed the U.S. Conference of Mayors in Pittsburgh, Pa., Monday. Connally, who is an announced candidate for the Republican nomination for president in 1980, said the nation is facing severe problems in energy. (AP Laserphoto)

Connally Opens Up On Carter, Blames Him For Energy Crisis

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Presidential candidate John Connally launched a Republican salvo at Jimmy Carter on Monday, saying the energy crisis is endangering democratic society and that the president is failing to deal with it.

"We are confronted by a situation which, if we do not respond to it boldly and with a sense of urgency, places at risk the future of democratic societies everywhere," Connally said.

Connally, an ex-Democrat, spoke at the annual meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors. He was the first of three GOP presidential hopefuls on Monday's program. Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker and Republican House Conference Chairman John Anderson were scheduled to speak later.

The GOP counterattack followed major policy victories by the Carter administration during weekend sessions of the conference. The mayors' resolutions committee approved both Carter's oil price decontrol program and his proposed windfall profits tax.

Connally has campaigned heavily on energy issues, but his speech to the mayors raised the rhetoric of alarm to new heights.

"We must understand that we are faced with far more than the nuisances of this summer of 1979," he said. "Our integrity as a nation, our standard of living, our way of life are at stake — not merely our personal convenience."

Connally said the energy crisis was a political crisis brought on by indecision in Washington. And while he conceded his proposed energy program is similar to the president's, Connally said "the choice is between saying it and doing it."

"If we cannot — as a consequence of the energy shortfall — maintain an annual growth rate in our economy of at least 3.5 percent, our farms and factories, and most especially our cities, will suffer severely," Connally said.

"Broad, deep and prolonged unemployment will become pervasive," Connally said. "The adequacy of food supplies will come to question. The network of transportation which supports this economy will be reduced to uncertain and erratic operations. ...

"What our cities face is magnified beyond our imagination on the world scale," he said. "Every government and every society in the free world is dangerously exposed by the (oil supply) conditions."

Connally called for an effort akin to the Manhattan Project, which produced the first atomic bomb, toward producing synthetic energy sources, making coal more usable and pushing development of nuclear power as well as encouraging greater oil production.

The Republican counterattack was kicked off by Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., who charged Monday that Carter had built a disappointing record in urban affairs. "(Carter's) bright visions have been brought down to earth because rhetoric isn't leadership and good intentions aren't policy," Heinz said.

But Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps defended Carter, saying he had constructed an urban policy with "a strong reliance on private sector responsibilities and the leadership of the cities' mayors."

Connally also assailed the Democrats for favoring cuts in revenue sharing, which he said stuck "at the very heart of the cities' ability" to meet urban problems.

Democratic Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, chairman of the Senate subcommittee dealing with revenue sharing, responded by noting that budget cutters in Washington are pressured by the taxpayers' revolt.

"I think when a presidential candidate starts talking about spending more money for revenue sharing, he should say what he's going to cut out to pay for it," Bradley said of Connally.

Republican mayors issued a joint statement criticizing Carter and charging "that many of our problems stem from a bureaucratized and ineffective federal government."

The statement, read by Mayor E. Clay Shaw Jr. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., at a news conference, accused Carter of "playing politics with programs and leaving local government with fewer opportunities to serve the people."

The conference also was asked to support the SALT II nuclear arms treaty. George M. Seignious, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, said, "The United States is better off with this treaty than without it."

President Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev are scheduled to sign the treaty next week in Vienna. The U.S. Senate must then approve it.

Baptists Divided As Interpretation Of Scriptures Leads To Feuding

HOUSTON (AP) — A long-time principle of Baptists is that no ecclesiastical organization or official can tell them how to interpret the Bible. But Southern Baptists are facing pressures to clamp on stiff regulations on biblical meaning.

As "messengers" gathered Monday for the annual convention of the nation's biggest Protestant body, charges and counter-charges swirled about the issue.

An ultraconservative group is campaigning to elect leadership committed to what is termed "Biblical inerrancy," which holds that Scripture is word-by-word inspired by God and free of all error.

The group, the Baptist Faith and Message Fellowship, charges that "liberals" in the denomination's seminaries do not insist on that view.

The heads of six denominational seminaries counters, saying the criticisms are irresponsible and are "blanket accusations" without specifics.

The Rev. Dr. Duke K. McCall, longtime president of the seminary at Louisville, Ky., said: "We are in agreement o the inspiration and authority of Scriptures. We think the issue is over the fallibility of human language."

The convention opens Tuesday and runs through Thursday, with about 20,000 delegates taking part.

The Rev. Dr. Jimmy R. Allen of San Antonio, outgoing president of the 13 million-member denomination, said the conflict was causing an "erosion of trust" that could undermine the denomination's evangelistic thrust.

"There are those who would like to change the agenda of the convention from missions to orthodoxy," but "such a shift in emphasis would be tragic," he said.

Baptists always have clung to the Bible as their mainstay of faith, shunning creeds or ecclesiastical rule and stressing the freedom of each congregation and individual in it.

While Southern Baptists have spread nationwide, north and south, embracing a wide educational and economic spectrum, including President Carter, they have generally held to a conservative view of Scripture.

But the Rev. Dr. Harold Linsell, head of the ultraconservative faction, says "liberals" in the seminaries "do not accept what the Bible says" and that something must be done to purge them.

If a crackdown on biblical interpretation caused a split in the denomination and a half million members left, he said recently, "that would be a small loss — if they chose to leave."

Prior to the convention, the ultraconservatives held a series of about 15 meetings around the country to whip up sentiment for electing a president who would insist on "Biblical inerrancy."

The drive drew criticism from the Oklahoma Baptist Messenger, which said in an editorial: "Sincere but misguided men are endeavoring to take over the organizational structure of the Southern Baptist convention.

"Such maneuvering as this clique is carrying on is an insult to the intelligence, integrity and ability of the messengers. ... A clique, regardless of their intentions, should never be permitted to take over the elected posts and organizational structure of the convention."

Fourth Trial Delay Request Denied

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Circuit Judge Edward Cowart denied a defense request for a fourth delay in the Theodore Robert Bundy's double murder trial Monday and ordered jury selection to begin Tuesday.

However, Cowart took under advisement a second defense motion asking that the trial be moved out of Tallahassee because of what defense attorneys called massive and damaging pretrial publicity.

Cowart said he would know by Tuesday evening whether it will be possible to select a fair and impartial jury in Leon County.

Bundy, 32, is charged with the Jan. 15, 1978, deaths of sorority sisters Margaret Bowman and Lisa Levy, both of St. Petersburg, and with assaults on three other women that same night in Tallahassee.

Cowart indicated that he will move the trial outside Tallahassee if, after examining the potential jurors, it appears that a panel of 12 jurors and two alternates cannot be drawn from Leon County.

Earlier Monday, Cowart found Bundy mentally competent to stand trial on the murder charges. The judge also denied Bundy's motion that his court-appointed counsel, led by Minerva, be dismissed.

Cowart ruled on Bundy's competency after hearing testimony from two psychiatrists. Both said that Bundy demontrated certain anti-social behavior but that he understood the charges against him and could participate in his defense.

Cowart also refused Bundy's request that he be granted new counsel. Bundy based that motion on a contention that Minerva no longer could effectively represent him because he believed Bundy was guilty and could not avoid conviction.

Minerva filed a motion of his own asking that he be relieved of the responsibility of defending Bundy. He said he should be removed from the case because he might hold a subconscious resentment against Bundy.

Cowart said Minerva had proved himself an effective advocate, adding that the court could not be controlled by Bundy's "subjective belief" that Minerva was ineffective.

Bundy, a former law student from Tacoma, Wash., has also been charged with the murder of a 12-year-old Lake City, Fla., schoolgirl.
