Castro regime causes terror, Reagan says

MIAMI (AP) — President Reagan, in another campaign-style trip, said today Congress will be writing a "prescription for disaster" if it fails to give arms to Central America and will be held accountable by Americans if the region falls to leftist revolution.

In a speech to a Cuban-American audience, Reagan also described Fidel Castro's government as "a new fascist regime" responsible for repression and terror.

In a two-hour trip here, Reagan was having lunch at a Cuban restaurant in an area known as Little Havana and speaking at festivities marking Cuba's independence from Spain in 1902.

The president, in his prepared speech, suggested that Congress was moving too timidly on his arms and economic aid program for Central America.

"There are far too many trying to find excuses to do nothing," Reagan said. "If we are immobilized by fear or apathy by those who suggest that because our friends are imperfect we should not help them; if those trying to throw roadblocks in our path succeed, and interpose themselves at a time when a crisis could still be averted, the American people will know who is responsible and judge them accordingly."

Reagan said the United States' allies in Central America "cannot be expected to stand unarmed against insurgents who've been armed to the teeth by the Soviet-Cuban-Nicaraguan axis.

"Any excuse for not providing our friends the weapons they need to defend themselves is a prescription for disaster," Reagan said. "And, again, those who advocate the legitimate defense needs of those under attack will be held accountable if our national security is put in jeopardy."

The speech was Reagan's second address in two weeks to a Hispanic group, an important voting bloc in the 1984 presidential election. Teasing about a possible re-election bid, Reagan said that runner Alberto Salazar visited the White House recently and "gave me some running shoes, but I'm not sure what kind of race he wanted me to run in."

Reagan repeated charges there is strong evidence that high-level Cuban officials are involved in drug smuggling, and he called on the island's government to respond to the charges. "Is this drug peddling simply the act of renegade officials, or is it officially sanctioned?" asked Reagan. "The world deserves an answer."

In his harshest attack yet on Castro's regime, Reagan maintained that Cuba, once one of the most prosperous countries in Latin America, is rapidly becoming one of the most economically backward.

"So, don't let anyone fool you, what's happening in Cuba is not a failure of the Cuban people, it's a failure of Fidel Castro, and of Communism," Reagan said. "The Soviet Union, with all its military might, with its massive subsidy to the Cuban economy, can't make the system produce anything but repression and terror."

Reagan said that under Castro the independent labor movement has been destroyed and the church has been repressed. "It is a new fascist regime, where freedom of speech and press of every opposition group has been stamped into the ground with ideological zeal."

Reagan's aid plan for Central America — particularly El Salvador — has been faltering in Congress. Earlier this month the Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved a plan to give El Salvador $76.3 million in military aid in fiscal 1983 and 1984. That is $60 million less than the administration wanted in total aid this year, and $10 million less than it was seeking for next year.

In a statement earlier this week, the Cuban government noted Reagan's visit and said, "The attempt of interference in internal affairs of Cuba is doomed to failure in advance." It said Reagan would visit "Cuban counter-revolutionaries" in Miami.

Reagan made a similar trip May 5 when he went to San Antonio. In both Florida and Texas, Reagan's target was Hispanic voters — the nation's second largest and fastest growing minority.

In the Dade County area surrounding Miami, Hispanics totaled 580,994 — more than a third of the region's population — in the 1980 census. That was before a flood of 125,000 Cubans fled their homeland and sailed to Florida, many arriving in Key West. An estimated 93,000 of them settled in Dade County.

Overall, there are 14.6 million Hispanic Americans in the United States. If present trends continue, they could replace blacks as the largest minority by the year 2000.

Reagan captured 35 percent to 40 percent of the Hispanic vote in 1980, but White House aides are worried his support is slipping.

Although he has not said whether he is running, Reagan certainly acts like a candidate.

House Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois, talking Thursday about Reagan's trip, said, "There's always this conjecture about every move the president makes, and I think he's making all the right moves..."

Poker player wins $540,000

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Tom McKevoy, a professional poker player who had never won more than $20,000 before this month, outlasted Rod Peate in a marathon session to win the $540,000 first prize today in the 14th annual World Series of Poker.

McKevoy, who said he was down to his last $3,000 a month ago, came back from a $300,000 deficit early in the final round and wore down fellow Las Vegan Peate to capture the tournament championship.

"He had a chip lead and my strategy was to grind him down, grind him down, grind him down," McKevoy said after taking Peate's last $226,000 in the final pot about 1:30 a.m. "Well, it worked."

McKevoy has been a professional poker player for the past four of his 38 years. Before this month, his biggest win was a Lake Tahoe poker tournament that paid him $20,000.

But McKevoy, who sold shares of his potential winnings to enter the tournament, pocketed the $117,000 first place prize in a limit Hold 'Em game early in the month-long tournament, and used part of the money for his $10,000 entry fee into the no limit Hold 'Em finals.

He trailed Peate by more than $200,000 when the two finalists started their final round of play at 7 p.m. Thursday and slipped further into the hole early into the play.

However, in a game marked by cautious and slow play, McPeak on four separate occasions threw all his chips into the pot. One pot alone was worth $648,000 to the winner.

McKevoy took the win when Peate put in all of his chips, about $225,000 worth, after being dealt the first two cards. In the game, five more cards are dealt face up and shared by the players.

McKevoy had two queens on the draw and matched it with two sixes to take the win.

Tom McKevoy smiles while handling some of the $540,000 first place money he won in the 14th annual World Series of Poker in las Vegas early this morning. He outlasted Rod Peate in a marathon final session, which began with 108 players.

Peate, 35, who had to borrow $25 to enter one of the qualifying tournaments and also sold shares to get to the final 108-player event, took home $216,000 for his second place finish.

Both players said they would keep only about 35 percent of their winnings, with the rest going to their backers.

Play began Monday in the Hold 'Em no limit tournament with each player buying in for $10,000. When the player expended his bankroll, he was forced to leave the tournament.

Sharp sentenced to die by injection

Convicted killer maintains innocence

OZONA, Texas (AP) — Michael Eugene Sharp, convicted of capital murder in the abduction and fatal stabbing of a Kermit woman, continued to protest his innocence even after jurors sentenced him to die by injection.

Sharp, 29, was found guilty Thursday of the June 11, 1982 murder of Brenda Kay Broadway, 31. He was also sentenced to life in prison earlier for the death of Mrs. Broadway's 8-year-old daughter, Christie Elms.

Mrs. Broadway, her daughter Christi and her daughter Selena Elms were abducted from a car wash and taken to a desert section of West Texas oil patch, where they were fatally stabbed and buried in a shallow grave, police said.

Selena Elms, 15, was a key witness against Sharp.

The jury deliberated three and a half hours before finding Sharp guilty, and then pondered a punishment for about 40 minutes before sentencing the former roughneck to die by lethal injection.

After State Judge James H. Clack announced the death penalty decision Thursday evening, he asked Sharp if he would like to make any comment.

"Yes, sir," Sharp said, "I'm not guilty."

On Wednesday, Selena Elms testified that she, her sister and mother were forced with a knife to accompany Sharp from a car wash into a remote area where they were sexually abused.

District Attorney Mike Fostel said circumstantial evidence and the teen-ager's testimony pointed to Sharp as the killer. He called Selena Elms' escape a "miracle."

The teen-ager said she escaped by running into the desert with her hands bound together after her mother and sister were killed.

Fostel said hair found after the slayings in Sharp's car was "similar" to that of the victims, and he recounted the testimony of several women who said Sharp was "on the prowl in Kermit" shortly before the abductions.

Sharp's attorney contended that neither Sharp nor his pickup truck fit the original description given by Selena Elms.

During final arguments Thursday, defense attorney Glen Williamson told the jury Sharp was not the man that the teen-ager identified as the assailant who killed her mother.

Williamson said the teen-ager's statements to authorities, describing Sharp, 29, as older, "pretty big" and driving a blue pickup with white lettering did not coincide with evidence.

Williamson said Sharp's "composite drawing looks more like me than Michael Eugene Sharp." He said Sharp's pickup truck had no lettering.

Williamson questioned whether any abduction actually took place.

"I don't know that there was an abduction. I don't know a mother who wouldn't fight and scratch if a man was trying to take her children under those circumstances," Williamson told the jury.

"He (Sharp) says it's not true, as far as him being involved. Obviously, something happened to that girl and her family. But whether Sharp is responsible is the key question."

Wednesday was the second time Selena Elms had testified against Sharp. In Nov. 1982, she told a similar story to Lubbock jurors during Sharp's trial for Christie Elms' murder.

Fostel also noted that less than a week after the killing, Sharp quit his job and left in a bus without his wife or luggage.

"He left a $42,000-a-year job when people in the oil field were being laid off. That blows my mind," Fostel said.

"We have brought proof, proof, proof, so I don't think there is a shadow of a doubt as to the guilt of Michael Eugene Sharp, sitting right there, in this case," Fostel said.

Kissing bandit robs investment securities

Glenn Little

Most people wouldn't be able to laugh about being held up. But then, not everyone has Glenn Little's sense of humor.

Little, the 30-year-old president of Little & Co. Investment Securities at 300 W. Wall Ave., was at work about 9:15 a.m. today when a man walked in, introduced himself and inquired about a $900 payment for some construction work the man had done more than a year ago for the firm which employs Little's wife.

"I didn't know anything about it," said Little. "So I told him he'd have to talk to my wife, who just happens to be out of town."

Democratic candidates shift attacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic presidential candidates are shifting some of their campaign fire from President Reagan to each other to demonstrate they are not peas in a single ideological pod.

Campaign aides were quick to assert that their candidates have no intention of engaging in personal attacks on party rivals, but were merely attempting to differentiate themselves on issues.

After months of campaigning in which the Democrats concentrated their fire on Reagan, the past few days have seen a flurry of statements about Democratic programs and proposals.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio expressed some misgivings on Thursday about the education program offered last week by former Vice President Walter F. Mondale.

The day before, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina called Glenn's program for dealing with acid rain "incredible, naive and indefensible."

And in an interview with The New York Times, Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado accused Mondale and Sen. Alan Cranston of California of "circulating rumors about my campaign."

The "rumors" that upset Hart are suggestions that his campaign is not doing well.

Glenn appeared before a teachers union for a question and answer session and was fully prepared to outline a view on education that would make clear his differences with the $11 billion plan offered by Mondale.

The former vice president proposed a 73 percent increase in the budget for the Department of Education, as part of a program that also included improved teacher training, greater investment in science and research and assistance to families that otherwise could not afford college tuition.

The teachers did not ask the questions that would have given Glenn an opportunity to separate himself from Mondale on this issue.

But after the closed meeting, in response to a reporter's question, Glenn said, "just to put more money out, to go the traditional route and just say we'll float more money if we have a problem, I'd want to see things targeted more to what they're supposed to accomplish."

Gregg Schneiders, Glenn's campaign spokesman, said they would have little hesitancy about pointing out the differences between the Glenn and Mondale approaches on the issue.

On the other hand, said Schneiders, Glenn is determined "to not get involved in a negative campaign."

Glenn aides still are smarting at Hollings' characterization of the Ohio senator's position on acid rain as "like a drunk driving off the road and hitting a tree and then suing the city for putting the tree in his way."

Hollings made that statement in Concord, N.H., the capital of the state that holds the first presidential primary and a region where acid rain emissions from smoke stacks in Ohio are a strong concern.

Glenn has suggested a utility tax to raise the revenue needed to pay for equipment to reduce sulfur dioxide emissions.

Al Kamhi, press aide to the Hollings campaign, said the senator's statement in New Hampshire "is pointed directly at the (Glenn) legislation."

He said Hollings would continue to point out issues where he has a different approach from any of his rivals.

John Russonello, spokesman for the Cranston campaign, said he did not think the California senator would "come out swinging" against his Democratic rivals. "The focus of his campaign will remain Ronald Reagan," said the aide.

"We welcome a sharp debate on the issues," said Maxine Isaacs of the Mondale campaign. "We always expected there would develop a sharp debate on the issues. What you're debating is the future of the country."

Kathy Bushkin, an aide to Hart, said she thought the shift of attention from Reagan to each other was in response to demands for "more information from the candidates about how they differ from each other."

FAA officials won't tighten security

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite a third airplane hijacking this month, this time by a "lonesome" Cuban who commandeered a flight from Miami to New York, federal aviation officials say they have no plans to increase in-flight security.

A gray-haired Spanish-speaking man, wearing a contraption of wires, batteries and what he said was dynamite around his neck, hijacked Eastern Airlines Flight 24 to Cuba on Thursday. The flight arrived safely at its final destination, La Guardia Airport, nearly six hours late, after the hijacker was seized in Havana.

"He explained to me that he was lonesome...He was sometimes on the verge of tears," said passenger Amy O'Brien, who acted as interpreter for the hijacker. He told her his name was Carlos Arias.

The jet was diverted soon after it took off from Miami International Airport at 2:19 p.m., said Eastern spokesman Jim Ashlock.

The hijacker apparently cleared Eastern's security system, Ashlock said, adding that the company would cooperate with the FBI and the Federal Aviation Administration. But he said there were no immediate plans to tighten security.

All passengers at Miami International Airport must walk through a metal detector and put their belongings through an X-ray machine machine before boarding a plane.

"The bottom line of the system is to make sure no one is hurt," Ashlock said. "A diversion to Cuba on an occasional basis is a small price to pay for overall safety."

The last hijacking of an Eastern flight was in July 1961.

FAA spokesman Jack Barker said in Atlanta that the agency has no plans to put sky marshals on airlines, as it did after a rash of hijackings in 1980.

"Historically when there's been one (hijacking) there's been two or three," Barker said. "To our knowledge, the hijackers are in prison in Cuba. Why they'd hijack a plane to go to a Cuban prison is beyond us. Maybe if that fact were better known, we wouldn't have so many."

It was the third U.S. skyjacking since May 1. In two previous cases, Miami-bound Capitol Air jets were diverted to Cuba after leaving San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Chris Mazzella, an FBI spokesman in Miami, said Thursday's hijacker "had a family in Cuba and wasn't able to get them back to the U.S."

"We really can't say for certain whether he had a bomb," Mazzella said after agents interviewed passengers and crew members in Miami.

The hijacker, in his 50s and neatly dressed, told an agent at the ticket counter that his name was C. Arias and listed a Miami address, Mazzella said.

"A lot of the people were a little unnerved and didn't get back onto the flight (at Miami)," said Nancy King, 24, of Miami, the first passenger off the plane at LaGuardia's Eastern Terminal.

"We were treated very well, although it was not the best of circumstances," said Ms. King, who was visiting New York.

On May 1, Capitol Flight 236 was hijacked by a man who tossed notes across the cabin complaining of his "unemployment, misery and grief." Then he locked himself in a lavatory and demanded to be taken to Cuba.

On May 12, a woman armed with a flare pistol took over the same flight with 248 people aboard.

Both hijackers were seized by Cuban authorities and the jets returned safely to Miami and continued on to Chicago.

Hijackings troubled Miami in 1980, many of them blamed on homesick refugees who arrived in Florida during the boatlift from Mariel, Cuba. Security was tightened throughout the country in the wake of those hijackings.

Administrator suspended for removing asbestos

HIGHTSTOWN, N.J. (AP) — An administrator who secretly removed asbestos from two elementary schools one night, saying swift action was needed to soothe anxious parents, has been suspended by the school board.

"I felt some emergency action was needed since we were talking about a minute amount of asbestos that had become a focal point of so much attention," said George T. Hepbron, assistant superintendent of the East Windsor School District.

"I wasn't going in to be a hero or to try to stir up all this trouble," said Hepbron, 53, who has worked for this central New Jersey district for 25 years. "It's not that I'm on a crusade against asbestos."

Several parents withdrew their children from school after an April 6 report that material suspected to contain the carcinogen had been found in the two buildings. School officials had thought the district's six buildings were cleared of asbestos in a $44,000 cleanup effort last summer, but apparently some was overlooked.

On Friday night Hepbron, who supervises operations and planning for the district, removed 3 feet of asbestos from cafeteria pipe coverings in the Walter Black Elementary School and 6 inches from pipes in the Grace Norton Rogers Elementary School.

State health officials say Hepbron used professional techniques to remove the asbestos, watering down the area near the pipes to prevent fibers from entering the air.

"I went in when nobody was around because I didn't want to get anybody else involved," Hepbron said Thursday. "The reaction far exceeded the deed...I thought it would be a quick, easy way to get children back in school."

But the board of education's president, Raymond Lewis, said Hepbron's actions were "unauthorized"and suspended him Monday.

"One must follow procedures," said Lewis. "He didn't have to do it. The board has been proceeding at a very good pace."

Lewis said the board will decide the length of $48,000-a-year administrator's suspension by next Thursday.

Kissing bandit robs Little & Co.

Little did some fast mental calculations and told the man: "You have a very persuasive manner. I just happen to have a few hundred dollars in the office. Aren't you lucky."

Little then folded nine $100 bills and handed them to the man: "I asked if there'd be anything else. He then kissed me on the forehead and said if he ever got any money ahead, would I invest it for him ?

"Hell, I'd do most anything for a compission. At least he knows a good investment broker when he sees one."

Little, who keeps a loaded gun in his desk, called police as he watched the man drive off in a white pickup truck. "I'd have shot him as he went out the door, but I didn't want to get blood all over the carpet."

Police found the pickup parked near Midland High School a few minutes after the robbery, but no arrests had been made by press time.

All in all, Little said, it wasn't the worst day he's ever experienced on the job.

"I've had mornings where the market is dropping and all eight phone lines are lit up at once. I wish my wife hadn't been gone. I'd have referred him to her."

Governess charged with training subversives

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet officials have accused an American governess who worked for a U.S. diplomat of organizing and training a subversive cell of Jehovah's Witnesses "under the pretense" of religious work.

The news agency Tass reported that the woman, Pamela Carne, was allowed to leave the Soviet Union after being arrested Sunday in a raid on a meeting of the group in Kalinin, 90 miles northwest of Moscow.

The U.S. Embassy confirmed Miss Carne had been detained and had left the country. But a spokesman declined to discuss the case, citing the U.S. privacy law.

Miss Carne had worked for diplomats at the U.S. Embassy. Her latest employer, William G. Plunkert of the embassy's political section, said he could not comment on the Tass report, published Thursday.

Another U.S. diplomat said Miss Carne was in her 20s, had been in Moscow about two years and had worked for another embassy diplomat before working for Plunkert, who arrived in Moscow about a year ago.

According to Tass, Miss Carne also posed as Paula Combs and said she was a Russian-language student at Moscow's Pushkin Institute.

It charged she traveled to Kalinin often "to instruct members of the underground group which was created by her initiative, and also to hand over to them different subversive materials which contained deliberate slander against the constitution and the state system of the U.S.S.R., and appeals to organize undermining work against the U.S.S.R., under the pretense of struggle against the 'antichrist.'"

She also helped pay for building a hall for illegal meetings, the report charged, and "was generous in giving them duplicating equipment including typewriters and tape recorders."

House approves repeal of gasohol tax breaks

AUSTIN (AP) — House members have tentatively approved a partial repeal of a 1981 law that gave tax breaks to gasohol in an effort to spark development of the industry.

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, argued that the tax break has worked to help out-of-state gasohol producers, and done little to benefit Texas producers.

"We were told it would generate more gasohol plants in Texas. That hasn't happened," he said.

The Schlueter bill, tentatively approved 81-48 on Thursday, would allow the tax break only on gasohol — a gasoline-alcohol blend — produced with Texas grain. The measure faces another House vote before going to the Senate.

Gov. Mark White, in his $1.27 billion tax plan, has called for repeal of the tax break. The 1981 bill frees gasohol of the state's five-cent per gallon motor fuels tax. The governor claims doing away with the tax break would generate $22 million for the state.

Schlueter said 99 percent of the alcohol used for gasohol sold in Texas is produced from out-of-state grain.

"They don't want to use Texas grain, but they want to reap the benefits," he said.

His bill was approved despite several lawmakers' comments that it could stifle Texas' gasohol industry.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, complained to Schlueter, "You're killing the industry."

Schlueter said he was trying to protect the Texas gasohol industry. "We'll get these out-of-state boys out of Texas. We'll have it all to ourselves."

Rudd replied, "You know that isn't so. We have no gasohol industry."

"Y'all know him. He's the guy that bought a big cowboy hat and a pair of boots and called himself a farmer and rancher and got elected agriculture commissioner," Schlueter said.

Burt Reynolds meets his match

HOUSTON (AP) — Burt Reynolds, who played a sheriff bedeviled by a television reporter in the movie "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," declared the original Marvin Zindler much more frightening than the movie version.

Reynolds met Zindler, consumer reporter for KTRK-TV, Thursday during a break in the filming of Blake Edwards' movie "The Man Who Loved Women."

"I'd rather have to face Dom DeLuise any day than this man," said Reynolds. DeLuise played opposite Reynolds in the film.

Zindler, whose screamed sign-off ("Mar-vin Zindler — EYYYYE-witness News) could drown out many rock bands, forced the late Fayette County Sheriff T.J. "Big Jim" Flournoy to close down the Chicken Ranch near La Grange in 1973.

His persistent reports, in which Zindler repeatedly expressed his astonishment that Texas contained a house of prostitution, caught the attention of then-Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who officially ordered the business closed. The Chicken Ranch had reportedly served Texas customers since the late 1800s.

Reynolds said he was delighted with Zindler, whom he said he watches every time he comes to Houston.

"I just told him to wear something more colorful next time," Reynolds said. Zindler was clothed in a blinding red jacket, white pants and a blue striped shirt in addition to his customary platinum toupee and purple-tinted glasses.

Reynolds wore a brown corduroy jacket and his own, much tamer, brown hairpiece.

Reynolds said his first thought when he heard the tale of Zindler's assault on the brothel was that he must be hearing ancient history.

"I thought that certainly could happen, but I thought it might have happened in the 1950s," Reynolds said. "But Texas has a way of waiting until things have been done and then doing them better."

Zindler is professionally indignant. He receives about 50,000 letters a year from consumers recounting the wrongs they have suffered at the hands of businesses, landlords and politicians.

He said he enjoyed his meeting with Reynolds much more than an encounter with Flournoy which occurred about 18 months after the Chicken Ranch closed. Flournoy, then in his 70s but still enormously strong, ripped Zindler's toupee off and threw it in the mud and broke several of the newsman's ribs.

Zindler settled out of court for a sum which was never revealed.

He said he was surprised by a phone call telling him Reynolds wanted to meet him.

Navy emphasizes polar operations to antifreeze under-ice warfare

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The chief of naval operations said Wednesday the Navy was putting increased emphasis on polar operations so as to be able to hunt down any Soviet ballistic misile submarines (SSBNs) hiding under the ice pack.

Adm. James D. Watkins told reporters the under-ice region "is a beautiful place to hide — it's a slick way to do it, but we think we can deal with it."

He said the Navy may strengthen some of its current Los Angeles Class nuclear attack submarines to allow them to broach marginal ice layers better and would put "hard points" of special steel on all newly constructed subs for that purpose.

In addition, Watkins said the Navy next year would ask Congress to approve for construction in 1989 a new and larger attack submarine that could do the under-ice job even better. He said it would displace between 7,000 and 10,000 tons and would be faster, quieter and carry twice the weapons load of the 6,900-ton Los Angeles Class boats.

Asked why the U.S. Navy was stressing under-ice operations, Watkins referred to the Kola peninsula area in the Arctic as a likely under-the-ice haven for Soviet SSBNs and said:

"If their navy is going to be hunkered down at the outset of conflict up in that region — as is our expectation — then we want to be able to go and at least have the option available to the commander-in-chief to employ our forces in a way that can go get his (Soviet) navy up in that region."

Watkins said that the Soviet Union, just as the United States does, plans for its submarine ballistic missile force to be its "strategic ace in the hole — the secure reserve force that's the bargaining chip in the aftermath of a nuclear exchange."

Calling under-ice operations "a very new and complex concept" and a "whole new ballgame," the admiral nevertheless asserted that the U.S. Navy had extensive experience with submarines in the Arctic.

"We now what we're doing under the ice," he said. "We know a lot about the ice. We know about our weapons' performance under the ice. We are ready and we are getting more proficient all the time."

He said the Soviets have shown a strong interest in operating their submarines under the ice and have operated extensively in the marginal ice zone — areas up to three meters thick.

As a former submarine captain, Watkins was asked what is important for a skipper to know about operating in such a region.

"Where is the ice above you, where is the ice below you and am I going into the Valley of Death and walking into a canyon that I can't get out of?" he replied. "It's a very tough environment."

On another subject, Watkins was asked to comment on statements by Navy Secretary John F. Lehman that in a war with the Soviet Union carrier task forces would be sent into the Norwegian Sea in order to carry out air strikes

Free seats on shuttle for civilians

WASHINGTON (AP) — Want to fly in space as a private citizen? Your chances of reaching this dream are better if you are a writer, broadcaster or educator.

There will be seats for non-astronauts on the space shuttle in three or four years, and a special task force recommended on Wednesday that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration make them available to civilians at no charge.

Those selected for early flights, it said, should be professional observers able to provide the public with insights into space flight and the role of humans in space.

THE FIRST, the task force said, should be communicators, such as reporters and authors, who "could provide a comprehensive visual mission history as well as real-time reports." This group also could include poets, artists or photographers.

Technical writers should be among the early travelers, to "provide a written and interpretive history that also covers the science, technical and institutional achievements that make the space program feasible," the group's report said.

High priority, it said, also should be given to educators who could later instruct students "on the science, engineering and biological principles integral to manned space flight."

Other professions would follow, but none of the citizen passengers should be permitted to profit from the experience and there should be a provision that any money earned be donated to charity, it said. Whether foreigners should be included would be a NASA decision.

THE REPORT was presented to the NASA Advisory Council by Dr. John E. Naugle, a scientist who heads the Task Force for the Study of Private Citizens on the Shuttle. Naugle, a former NASA official, is an executive of the Fairchild Space and Electronic Corp.

"We sought the views of a wide cross section of people," Naugle said. "We concluded that we are ready to take another step to open up space travel. ..."

Naugle said Congress would have to pass legislation allowing citizens to fly because NASA's charter does not permit it to carry passengers.

The report concluded that shuttle flight is not particularly stressful, that medical requirements would not be stringent and that outsiders would not pose an undue safety or mission risk as long as they were carefully selected and trained.

CITIZEN candidates would train for five or six months and during that time would be carefully evaluated for compatibility with the astronauts who would fly with them.

"By and large, most astronauts are in favor of this and feel it is the next logical step," Naugle stated.

Naugle said the candidate selection process should focus on the probable productivity of the observer and the widest dissemination of the resulting information.

He said candidates would have to submit proposals on why he or she wanted to fly.

Some council members suggested provision should be made to fly NASA managers and those who helped design the shuttle.

Senator Tower collects $26,000 for speeches delivered in 1982

Tower received $26,200 for 16 speeches made to various organizations and interest groups in 1982, plus $300 for an article that appeared in Washington Quarterly, according to his financial disclosure report released Thursday.

That was in addition to his Senate salary of $60,662. The average salary of the Texas wage-earner likely totaled about $17,000 last year, an analysis of figures provided by the Texas Employment Commission shows.

Among the 29 members of Congress from Texas, Tower was the biggest recipient of such honoraria in 1982, although three others also exceeded the $17,000 figure.

THEY WERE House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Forth Worth, who received $20,550 in honoraria; Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, with $19,750 and Rep. Phil Gramm, R-College Station, with $17,650, according to House financial reports released earlier this week.

Of this, Wright contributed $1,350 to charity and Hance $1,560 to charity.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, reported no income from honoraria in 1982.

Tower's speaking honoraria ranged from $200 to $2,000 per speech, paid by groups including the the National Tooling & Machining Association, the Fertilizer Institute, the American Paper Institute and the American College of Foot Surgeons.

Despite Tower's honoraria, however, Bentsen far outstripped him in terms of income from sources other than congressional salary.

BENTSEN, A millionaire, received at least $709,000 and possibly more than $923,000 from a variety of sources. These ranged from a farming operation and several partnerships to interest, dividends and capital gains from a vast array of investments.

Besides his honoraria, Tower reported outside income of between $15,000 and $52,000 from savings accounts and rental of drilling rig equipment.

No precise figures on income, assets and liabilities can be determined from the disclosure reports, which require only that senators report a range of figures for each category.

Bentsen reported assets of at least $2.4 million and possibly more than $3.7 million, including notes receivable, various bank accounts, stocks, mineral deeds and extensive real property holdings.

TOWER'S ASSETS totaled between $128,000 and $177,000, in the form of banking accounts and the drilling rig equipment, which he purchased on May 1, 1981 for $107,000.

In a note attached to his report, Tower said he had no knowledge or control of the separate estate of his wife, Lilla, director of the Institute for Museum Services and the sister of Sam Cummings, one of the world's foremost arms dealers.

"Prior to marriage we entered into an agreement that her property prior to marriage and all income therefrom would be held by her as her sole and separate estate..." Tower said.

Bentsen reported liabilities of at least $630,000 and possibly more than $850,000. Tower placed his liabilities at between $60,000 and $130,000.

White: Lobbyists focus on taxes rather than educational needs

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says lobbyists who are more concerned about a minor tax increase than a good education for Texas children have stalled his $1.27 billion luxury tax package which would be used to raise teachers' salaries.

White told a statewide television audience Thursday night that a garbage collector in Houston and a prison guard in Huntsville make more money than teachers.

His address was part of a campaign to build public support for taxes he has proposed to raise teachers' salaries 15-24 percent over two years.

"Every year," White said, "we are graduating high school seniors who can't read, can't write and can't multiply and divide. Is it any wonder?

Senate sends message to South Africa

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' only black senator wanted to send a message to the Republic of South Africa, and his colleagues went along with him after an impassioned plea for human rights.

At the urging of Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, the Senate approved an amendment Thursday to let South Africa know it does not approve of that nation's strict segregation policies.

The amendment was designed to reduce future investments of Texas' large school, veteran and retirement funds in South Africa.

It stated that "no funds may be invested in a business enterprise that conducts business with or has investments in the government of the Republic of South Africa."

The amendment applied to the foreign government, not private businesses in that country. It was agreed that some businesses in South Africa might not like the government's apartheid policies.

After the amendment was adopted, the Senate tentatively approved a bill that would broaden investment of large state funds.

A final vote is still needed.

Washington said doing business with South Africa in 1983 would be the same as doing business with Nazi Germany 40 years ago, but Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, questioned whether one country such as South Africa should be singled out.

Washington responded, "You're playing games, but you're playing with the wrong people, because you're playing with people's lives."

House approves three measures

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Two bills by Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, and one bill by Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, have been given final approval by the House, which sent the measures to the Senate last Friday for consideration.

HB 742 states that Department of Public Safety division chiefs should make annual reports on the efficiency of each employee for consideration in all matters of promotion and discharge. Such reports are currently prepared twice each year by division heads.

HB 855 relates to the discretion of a court to allow certain persons convicted of crimes to serve their sentences during off-work hours or on weekends.

HB 1316, the bill by Shaw, relates to the notification of certain landowners of agricultural use and open space appraisal provisions.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, May 21, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The English poet Alexander Pope was born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actor Raymond Burr, author Harold Robbins, football coach-sportscaster Ara Parseghian and actress/TV panelist Peggy Cass. Romance requires great caution in the months ahead. You could fall for someone who is not good for you. Use common sense and everything will come into clearer focus. You gain peace of mind when financial figures edge into the solid black again. Energy and enthusiasm are essential for those in sales. Creative endeavors bring you some marvelous luck. Advertise your talents. It is important to reach a wider market.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Finances are extremely sensitive this weekend. There are many things you and your loved ones can do together. Teamwork helps restore those areas of your home needing repair.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A creative hobby keeps you busy and cheerful. Do not neglect the other members of your household. You are in a lighthearted mood. Romance flourishes in quiet surroundings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A good time to take a short vacation. Be firm, but not bossy with your friends. You and partner could be lucky in a sports event. Catch up on your letter-writing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are full of bounce this weekend. The news you receive from a faraway friend or relative gives you good reason to feel optimistic. Offer your friendship to a lonely neighbor.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Ponder a compromise very carefully before saying "yes". It will affect your loved ones as well as yourself. Others are prepared to finance a project that has been a dream of yours.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Consult mate before accepting an invitation. Be grateful that family members are not putting additional pressures on you while you are trying to solve a financial problem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An authority-figure is apt to prevail unless you stand up for your rights. Be tactful and considerate when dealing with an older person's problems.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A talk with someone influential paves the way for business expansion. Romance is high on your list of priorities. A change in a personal relationship makes this a happy day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Spend the morning getting your finances in order. Keep a list of expenses for tax purposes. An unusual attraction leads you to move in a new social circle.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Steer clear of financial schemes proposed by friends or relatives. Pointed questions get you the answers you need to clear up a mystery. Do not try to rush romantic partner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep a low profile today and work on a creative or artistic project. Travel and long-distance phone calls are best postponed. Catch up on your rest.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A good day for real estate transactions. Resist an urge to gamble. You need to get your personal life in better order. Spend the evening at home.

Amputee's story airs on HBO

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — When the networks began making movies, they did an inordinate number of "Malady of the Month" films. Home Box Office, in its first made-for-pay-TV film, also focuses on a disease but combines it with an inspirational true-life story worth telling and watching.

"The Terry Fox Story," which premieres on HBO Sunday night, is about the young Canadian who, after losing his leg to cancer, embarks on a run across Canada to raise money for cancer research. The movie stars newcomer Eric Fryer, himself an amputee, and Robert Duvall.

So often, films like this become maudlin, but "Terry Fox" honestly plays on our emotions because it's a real story and Fox comes across as a believably human hero.

Fox is not a saint. He can be mean and abusive, particularly to his friend, Doug Alward (Michael Zelniker), who selflessly drove the van and offered companionship during Fox's 1980 Marathon of Hope. Alward objects to being treated like a flunky and lashes out at Fox's egocentricity.

But it's easy to be moved by Fox's courage and his gallant achievement. Running one-legged for over 3,000 miles, he averages a marathon a day for four months until the cancer, which killed him a year later, hits him again.

As depicted in the film, Canadians flock to the roads during his run, and Fox raises over $20 million. Even a group of Hell's Angels are moved to contribute.

The movie will strike the same nerves Fox touched in Canada, where a nation, hungry for heroes and some national identity, made Fox a hero.

Fox is first seen as a strapping, physically normal 18-year-old basketball star. This is done by filming Fryer's double from the back and matching that footage with shots of Fryer from the waist up.

Suddenly, the athlete is struck down by cancer, and his leg is amputated. The suffering he sees in the hospital, particularly the pain of little children, motivates his national run and allows him to deal with his anger in a positive way. He's fitted with a prosthetic leg and learns to run with a hop-skip movement.

At times, his run becomes an obsession, especially when he pushes himself after he's physically spent and debilitated.

As publicity builds, the Cancer Society finally gets involved. Bill Vigars (Duvall) joins the crusade as a public relations man. Vigars tries to promote attention without compromising Fox's dignity. However, Fox doesn't always understand the value of the speeches and sponsoring stunts. "The run is not mine anymore," he protests.

The bidding:

Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

If you always believe what you see, you are a prime candidate for insolvency. At least, that seems to be the case if you hang around magicians or bridge players!

The auction was a model of brevity. South announced that, at this vulnerability, he expected to take six tricks with diamonds as trumps. North thought his hand would provide the other seven.

West led the king of spades, and when dummy came down declarer expected an easy path. All he needed to do was to set up dummy's club suit to bring home the grand slam. He won the ace of spades and tested trumps by cashing the ace. Both defenders followed suit.

Since he would not be able to make the slam if clubs were 5-0, declarer decided to test that suit next. But a strange thing happened. On the ace of clubs East dropped the queen!

East was a very fine player, so declarer realized that there was a possibility that he was being conned.

After much thought, he decided to treat the queen of clubs as an honest card. He unblocked the jack of clubs from his hand, then drew two more rounds of trumps. He continued with a low club to the nine, and he was crestfallen when East produced the ten. To add to the rout, the defenders quickly cashed two spade tricks for down three.

Observe that declarer would have had the same problem had East followed with the ten of clubs — South could still have unblocked the jack and then finessed for the queen. But the queen was a much prettier play, and deserved to succeed.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Join the prayers

It's always a little spooky when the talk in farming circles turns to a drought. That's the situation in Midland County, though, as if farmers don't have enough problems.

Since the first of the year, Midland has recorded just over an inch and a half of rain, or mositure in some other form, and farmers are getting understandably edgy. There's good reason. Even if growing a successful crop on the land wasn't the primary consideration, farmers have to think about other dangers like wind erosion, one of Midland County's major potential pitfalls. That danger increases dramatically in a dry year such as this one.

It's true that the weather is always the life thread for a farmer. It can give him bountiful crops and a glorious harvest or it can pound a season's hopes into the dust on a summer afternoon. And even when a steward of the soil successfully completes a harvest, that's no assurance that he'll be able to market it or even recoup what he's invested in it. A number of factors have teamed up in recent years to give farmers more than their fair share of headaches — inflation, poor markets, a vanishing labor pool and the like. But it doesn't seem fair at all that the weather would join the ranks of those opposing farmers.

Farmers in Midland County are praying for rain; the situation is that desperate. They aren't the only ones with a stake in this nasty situation, though. Every Midlander stands to lose if the weather doesn't cooperate soon because damage to the farming community hurts all of Midland's economy.

We all need to join those already praying for rain.

Sadat's footsteps

It is grossly unfair to attempt comparisons between the leadership of Anwar el-Sadat and that of his successor as president of Egypt, Hosni Mubarak. After all, any Egyptian with the courage and the sense of history, to fly to Israel and address the Knesset in Jerusalem, is bound to cast a shadow over all who follow.

Nevertheless, in his non-flamboyant, determined and thoughtful way, President Mubarak is following in the footsteps of President Sadat. Obviously he is serving under different circumstances. He has had to readjust his priorities, giving renewed attention to Egypt's lagging economy, and opening wider the doors for foreign investments.

Mr. Mubarak has, however, firmly and repeatedly stated his commitment to the Camp David peace accords. Although he has had his differences with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, he has pledged to support the complicated process of improving relations between Arabs and the Middle East.

His latest effort in this direction was to urge his fellow Arab leaders to support the United States in seeking withdrawal of foreign troops from Lebanon. He praised our nation for "consistency in its active role" toward removal of Palestinian, Syrian and Israeli forces.

Mr. Mubarak is well aware that the Syrians are the big stumbling block. And he surely is well aware that the stumbling block is the more formidable because Syria is a client of the Soviet Union. At the risk of inviting scorn from his fellow Arabs, Mubarak said of the Syrians:

"They must now withdraw, because the Lebanese people and government have declared their wish of having the Syrians out. What then are the Syrians waiting for?"

Yes, in his own way Hosni Mubarak is following the footsteps of Anwar Sadat by speaking out when he thinks it will help, by being unafraid to swim against the tide of Arab opinion, by keeping a steady eye on the goal of peace and stability in the Middle East.

Sadat would approve.

Another View:

Confiscating privacy

Relationships between individuals and their priests, doctors, and lawyers have long been treated as privileged, not only with respect to their conversations but to the records doctors and lawyers keep concerning the health or business affairs of their clients. A violation of this trust is always a cause for concern, but it's of special concern when the violator is the U.S. government.

Agents of the Drug Enforcement Administration and the Internal Revenue Service raided the San Diego office and home of attorney Philip DeMassa recently and spent three days going through and carting off records and personal items, as part of the investigation of a drug conspiracy case in which one of DeMassa's clients was involved. In addition to files and materials connected to the case, the agents took large quantities of files having nothing to do with that case. Although materials seized have been ordered sealed by a federal judge, and the government is at least temporarily restrained from examining them, prosecutors acknowledge that agents microfilmed some documents. Despite that, government spokesmen insisted the DEA and IRS acted within legal limits.

Given the ludicrously loose standards that the U.S. Supreme Court set five years ago (in a case involving a raid on the offices of the Stanford University student newspaper), they'll certainly be able to make that claim. In that case, the court held that, rather than having to get a subpoena to obtain records from an individual or business not charged with a crime, the police could search the premises provided they had a warrant describing "with specifically ... the place to be searched and the things to be seized." The court thus permitted the target of the search no chance to contest the legitimacy of the search or to challenge its scope. In the DeMassa case, even the principle of specificity was violated, though the principle is so general that, as many predicted five years ago, it invites such violations.

However the courts dispose of this case (DeMassa is suing the government for $11 million), the damage to the privileged lawyer-client relationship is incalculable. Apart from the potentially devastating harm to DeMassa's practice, such acts by government agents can only intimidate clients and potential clients of attorneys, or doctors, who fear that what they say is no more secure from seizure than their car or their bank account.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Political protectionism practiced

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department is returning to the bad old days when the politically powerful could escape the kind of rigorous prosecution that is applied to lesser mortals.

Jack Anderson

For a short while after the Watergate scandals, no one in high position was above the law. Unfortunately, this is no longer the case. Under Attorney General William French Smith, the Justice Department has developed a benevolent mutual protection society, which grants special treatment to politicians with the right connections.

This is not to say that politicians are immune from prosecution today, but Justice is unlikely to act against someone who has clout inside the department — say, someone who serves on the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The prosecutors have also demonstrated a proclivity to protect themselves, no matter what damage it may cause to the judicial process, when an investigation like ABSCAM bubblegums in their faces. This is human enough. But the situation is the worst I've seen since the Watergate convicts were forcibly removed from the White House and installed in the slammer.

I am in the business of exposing the compromises, equivocations and sellouts that politicians are wont to make. This has put me at odds with prosecutors who mete out justice according to their own interests and prejudices.

Apparently, my exposes have made me somewhat of a pariah in the halls of Justice. John Russell, whose job is to handle press inquiries for the department, went so far as to tell my associate Donald Goldberg not long ago: "Nobody here will talk to you. We don't like Jack Anderson."

This attitude was given expression after I embarrassed two of the most sacred of the department's Brahman bulls. The federal dragnets had dredged up accusations against two powerful senators who oversee the Justice Department: Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., who is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee when the Republicans are in power, and Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., who takes over when the Democrats come to power.

The charges may be absolutely unfounded and unfair, but high Justice officials didn't want to find out. They resisted efforts to get to the bottom of the accusations, according to sources close to both investigations. Nevertheless, the accusations worked their way through the gossamerlike processes of the Justice Department.

On Jan. 12, 1983, police detective Michael Hubbard told a federal grand jury how he had infiltrated and broken up a Capitol Hill cocaine ring. He identified nine congressional customers of the ring. One, he said, was Sen. Kennedy.

On Feb. 10, 1983, William W. Pearce, a former security man for renegade CIA agent Edwin Wilson, told a federal grand jury about Wilson's operations. Pearce said he saw Sen. Thurmond take at least $20,000 in bribes that Wilson had put into envelopes.

Both witnesses made their allegations under oath and under penalty of perjury. The names of less newsworthy people had leaked into the press from both investigations. I decided, therefore, to make the stories complete and publish the names of the two big guns. I also published their emphatic denials.

In each case, Justice officials fell all over themselves rushing to the defense of their high and mighty overseers. Kennedy and Thurmond were given clean bills before thorough investigations could possibly have been conducted.

Of course, sworn testimony before a grand jury does not add up to a conviction, let alone an indictment. Hubbard told the grand jury that Kennedy had been identified as a cocaine customer by three or more informants. But the detective himself never witnessed an illegal drug transaction involving the senator.

The lone witness against Thurmond was unable to swear that the payments he saw passed to Thurmond were illegal. He assumed they were but had no way of knowing.

He also acknowledged many times to my associate Dale Van Atta that he didn't actually see the senator pull money from the envelopes. He witnessed the money being stuffed into the envelopes, he testified. He also saw the envelopes being handed to a middleman and saw the middleman pass what he thought were the same envelopes to Thurmond. But Pearce never could swear that what was passed to Thurmond contained the alleged bribe money. Indeed, this is why he failed a lie detector test when asked a poorly worded question about what he actually saw.

Clearly, the investigations haven't gone far enough to justify legal action against either Thurmond or Kennedy. But the Justice Department's handling of the cases leaves a cloud of suspicion that is unfair to the two senators and ought to be cleared up.

Because the department can't be trusted to investigate its own overseers, President Reagan should appoint special prosecutors to follow up the grand jury testimony and make sure no stones are left unturned.

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: In the years since the United States severed diplomatic relations with Iran, Vietnam and Cambodia, their embassies and other buildings in the Washington area — almost 30 in all — have been vacant and lacking maintenance. Many of these structures now need extensive repairs, so the State Department is negotiating with the Treasury to release some of the countries' frozen assets for repairs and upkeep.

— When the United States needed space for a new embassy in Tokyo, a location was found with no trouble. The State Department reciprocated when the Japanese decided to expand their embassy in Washington. What has baffled the Japanese, however, is the months-long delays caused by the various red-tape specialists of the inscrutable District of Columbia government.

INSIDE REPORT:

Aid question vital to Nicaragua

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — Although the effort to terminate "covert" American aid to anti-Sandinista guerrillas in neighboring Nicaragua is stalled for now, it has cost the Contras no momentum and raised excruciating questions for the future.

Rowland Evans

Uncertain about continuing U.S. support, logistical supply lines slowed to a crawl two months ago. "The debate in Congress put a dead spot in the pipeline," an official intimately involved in the Contras' anti-Sandinista insurgency told us.

Robert Novak

That revealed how significant a player American ambivalence has become in the harsh, thickly-forested guerrilla country across the long, undefended Honduran-Nicaraguan border. The unannounced plan of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force (FDN) had been the overthrow of the Sandinistas by September — at the latest. Despite the surprising successes of the FDN's claimed 10,000 insurgents now operating in small units deep in Sandinista territory, that goal was forced back by congressional liberals trying to end the covert aid program altogether.

The FDN's overall military commander, rotating between the field and a safe house here, has devised a strategy that counts on a short war. "We do not think about a long war," Emilio Echeverie told us. "We will win this war, between September and December."

But if the Congress vetoes U.S. assistance, covert or otherwise, what then? "Our momentum is excellent today," said Echeverie, a highly impressive former military engineer. "A cutoff would hurt us but it would not be devastating." One reason: Echeverie's insurgents have already captured 2,500 weapons, including mortars, in their attacks on Sandinista military units.

In fact, however, a congressional veto switching Reagan administration policy might cripple the FDN. That's because a 180-degree switch would have dramatic political impact in Nicaragua — particularly in Managua, the Sandinista stronghold which must turn against the Sandinistas if the FDN insurgency is to succeed. The outpouring of anti-Sandinista emotion in Nicaragua since the FDN took the field would be bitterly affected if the U.S. forsook the guerrillas.

The fiction that the objective of the FDN was ever anything less than the overthrow of the Sandinistas serves diplomacy and, back in the U.S, congressional politics. Their objective was never simply cutting the arms flow to Marxist rebels in El Salvador. That was clearly understood — but not advertised — by the Reagan administration when the CIA first sought congressional approval to finance its clandestine help to the Contras.

Indeed, one cause of delay in the Reagan administration's moves against the Sandinistas was its initial selection of Eden Pastora as the natural future leader of a post-Sandinist Nicaragua. Pastora is the celebrated "Commander Zero" who accused the Sandinistas of betraying their revolution and fled to exile. Pastora now has his own anti-Sandinista guerrillas in the extreme Nicaraguan south along the Costa Rican border.

As an original anti-Somoza leader, Pastora was viewed in Washington to be politically safer with American liberals as the chief guerrilla leader — and potentially as heir apparent in Managua. While he was "pure," a small percentage of the FDN's forces had been involved with Somoza's National Guard.

The dispute over Pastora was finally resolved in favor of the FDN but the delay frustrated its leadership. If the U.S. objective had ever been limited to cutting arms supplies to El Salvador, the dispute would never have occurred.

That raises the question of future intentions of Congress as the real significance of the operation seeps under sensitive liberal skins. But the question may not be as fateful as it once seemed. If Echeverie's guerrillas can administer the coup de grace to the Sandinistas between September and December, President Reagan would easily carry the U.S. with him in defending his anti-Sandinista policy from liberal attackers claiming they had not been told the whole truth. One diplomat here dismissed that potential trouble as "a problem we would love to have."

But if the Sandinistas stop the insurgents and Congress then cuts U.S. aid, the blow would be "devastating," whatever Echeverie says today. It would devastate the FDN and it would supply more evidence to American allies everywhere that a pledge of U.S. support is worthless.

CHARLEY REESE

Socialists going down wrong road

In my area there is a retired Methodist minister who is a persistent writer of letters to the editor. The strange thing about this man's letters is that they consistently support Communist states and consistently attack the United States.

Charley Reese

The man is clever. He always cloaks his positions in the garb of a desire for peace or as if he were discovering something that the American people should know. For example, he "discovered" there was complete religious freedom in Castro's Cuba; he found the Nicaraguan government was entirely peace-loving and greatly hurt by President Reagan's hostility toward them. He wrote once that President Reagan was "lying" about the Soviet military buildup.

Well, the man finally made a mistake. He sponsored a speaking tour by a Soviet journalist for Izvestia, an official Communist newspaper. The journalist wrote three articles about his experiences, two of them about his friend, the Methodist minister. I obtained translations of the articles.

It turns out, as you might expect, that the retired minister has been an ardent admirer and supporter of the Soviet Union ever since he spent his honeymoon there in 1934 marching in the May Day parade. It turns out he was a National Council of Churches staffer attached to the United Nations and so forth. In short, he had spent his whole career as an apologist for the Soviet Union.

It is important to understand that there are such people in our country. It is important to understand the difference between a person genuinely motivated by a desire for peace and a person who is not.

There are many people who are genuine pacifists — people who for religious or philosophical reasons abhor war, but who yet make no excuses for Communist governments. The singer, Joan Baez, actively opposed the war in Vietnam, but she has also spoken out strongly against the repression and brutality of the North Vietnamese. Jane Fonda, who actively supported North Vietnam in the war, refuses to utter a word of criticism. As she put it, she will no speak against "any socialist state."

You can be for peace and against the arms race and still recognize that there is not a shred of religious freedom in Cuba, that the Sandinist government of Nicaragua is attempting to impose an atheistic, totalitarian state on the Nicaraguan people. You can be against nuclear arms and still recognize that the Soviet Union is the world's worst tyranny, that it has murdered 66 million of its own people, that it is using chemical and biological weapons against the people of Afghanistan, that it has engaged in the most massive arms buildup in human history.

You can spot the phonies by the pattern of their consistencies. When you find somebody who consistently attacks the United States and other anti-Communist governments but who consistently supports or ignores criticism of communist governments, you know that you are not dealing with a person who is genuinely interested in peace and an end to the arms race.

In the 1930s, it is entirely possible that many people were fooled by the Soviet Union. It is not possible for any person outside a mental institution to stand before you in 1983 and pretend that the Soviet Union is a peace-loving nation which is only reacting to the hostility of the United States. People who tell you that are liars. They know what they are doing. So should you.

We shall not find the road to peace if we follow people whose real job is to lead us down the road to world socialism.

Land case headed for trial in dispute involving 12 million acres in Nevada

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal court will decide if Western Shoshone Indians are entitled to roughly one-fifth of Nevada in a case that began when two Indian women let their cattle graze on federal land without a permit.

The 9th U.S. Court of Appeals on Thursday ordered a trial to determine whether Mary and Carrie Dann and other Shoshones still retain aboriginal title to more than 12 million acres of land.

Interior Department officials contend that the Dann sisters, who own an 800-acre homestead about 40 miles southeast of Battle Mountain, Nev., were trespassing on federal lands by grazing cattle without a permit.

In defense, the women asserted they had a right to graze cattle there by aboriginal title, which is the right to land accorded those who held it before white settlers.

Judge Bruce Thompson of Reno, who will handle the trial, granted an injunction against trespassing in 1980. He said the sisters and the tribe gave up the land in 1979 when the federal Indian Claims Commission imposed a $26 million payment on several groups of Shoshone.

The government argued that the $26 million claim award was final and nullified the Indians' aboriginal title to the land, which initially involved 24 million acres under the 1863 Treaty of Ruby Valley. Various land grants have reduced the land still at issue.

The appeals court's 33-page decision said that until Congress approves a plan to distribute the money, the Danns can continue to defend themselves against the government trespassing charges by asserting their claim.

It said that while the funds have been deposited in an interest-bearing account, no funds had actually passed into the hands of the tribe or its members.

The trial will decide if the Indians actually do retain title and if the sisters should have a share of the land as Shoshones.

The appeals court upheld Thompson's finding that aboriginal title hadn't been extinguished by public land laws, by creation of the Duck Valley Reservation or by inclusion of the lands in a grazing district.

Legislature invites Jackson to speak

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The Alabama Legislature has invited civil rights leader Jesse Jackson to become the first black in modern times to address a joint session of the House and Senate.

The Legislature voted Thursday to ask Jackson to address a joint legislative session next week in Alabama's statehouse, where the Confederate government was organized.

"Ain't no black ever addressed a joint session of the Alabama Legislature," said Rep. Alvin Holmes of Montgomery.

At Holmes' request, the House passed a resolution inviting Jackson to speak to the Legislature when he visits Montgomery on Tuesday. The resolution passed on a voice vote with some dissent.

It then went to the Senate, where the lawmakers approved it on a voice vote without any opposition.

Holmes said the resolution was in keeping with the Legislature's policy of asking potential presidential candidates to speak to the Legislature. So far, however, only Sen. Ernest "Fritz" Hollings, D-S.C., has done it.

Jackson has said he feels the time may have come for a black presidential candidate in 1984, but has not said whether he will run.

Holmes said he had spoken to Jackson, who heads the Chicago-based self-help group Operation PUSH, and he had agreed to visit the Legislature.

Senate Secretary McDowell Lee said he could not remember a black addressing a joint legislative session.

He said a check of legislative records back to 1971, when blacks began serving in the Legislature for the first time since Reconstruction, produced no evidence that a black had spoken to both houses at the same time.

Commercial communication satellite launched

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The sixth Intelsat V satellite, capable of handling 12,000 telephone calls and two television programs, has been launched into space.

It was blased into a preliminary orbit at 6:26 p.m. Thursday atop an Atlas Centaur rocket, officials said.

Weighing 4,450 pounds, the satellite is owned by the International Telecommunications Satellite organization, composed of 109 countries.

The Intelsat, 33rd in a series dating from 1965, will serve as the second major satellite for commercial communications traffic between North America and Europe.

The satellite first goes into an elliptical transfer orbit ranging from 120 miles to more than 22,000 miles in space. On Sunday morning, an engine aboard the spacecraft will be fired to place it in a stationary orbit 22,300 miles above the Atlantic Ocean.

The mission cost about $80 million, said Allen McCaskell, manager of the Launch Vehicle Program office for Intelsat in Washington.

Mourners carry the pine coffin of Grzegorz Przemyk, an alleged victim of police brutality, through Warsaw Thursday. An estimated 20,000 people took part in funeral services.

Newspapers avoid publicity about teen-ager who died

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Government newspapers today gave a one-sentence account of funeral services for teen-ager Grzegorz Przemyk, who died in police custody and was mourned by 20,000 people who jammed a Warsaw cemetery.

"The funeral of Grzegorz Przemyk, a pupil of Warsaw Secondary School No. 17, was held here today (Thursday) at Powazki Cemetery after a Mass said in the St. Stanislaw Kostka Church," the account read. There was no mention of the funeral on state-run radio.

Leaders of the now-banned Solidarity union decried what they called the "bestial murder" of Przemyk, whose mother works in a church group that aids families of prisoners seized under martial law.

The Communist government, apparently worried that the youth's death could aggravate tensions in Poland, has carefully avoided publicizing the incident but has promised an investigation.

Przemyk's mother has said her son was beaten last week by police who so badly damaged his vital organs that surgeons were unable to save his life despite a five-hour operation.

The high school senior died last Saturday, three days before his 19th birthday.Police say that Przemyk was detained last Thursday evening after a drunken brawl and that officers needed to use force to restrain him.

"Every death is painful, but this brutal death is especially dramatic. I assure you that his death will not be forgotten," said Lech Walesa, former head of Solidarity, in a telegram read at the end of the funeral Mass.

Many of the mourners — who included high school students carrying flowers and wearing black ribbons on their shirts — wept during a graveside eulogy by Warsaw Bishop Wladyslaw Miziolek.

"We come here with pain and a form of internal protest," he said. "We also come ... with the awareness that brotherly blood was shed."

The most emotional oration came from Przemyk's teacher, Wieslawa Gromlawska, who said the teen-ager died "just as he was experiencing his first love. But can death destroy such a feeling? No. Grzegorz, we all loved you and you will stay with us forever."

Police have used force to break up public gatherings in recent weeks, but the security forces stayed out of sight during the Mass and funeral march.

It was one of the largest peaceful gatherings in the capital since the Dec. 13, 1981, martial law declaration, under which Solidarity was suspended and later outlawed.

In another development Thursday, sources close to Solidarity said police have arrested Bronislaw Geremek, a senior Solidarity adviser.

Geremek, a 51-year-old historian, was one of a dozen people detained and later released after taking part in a May 6 meeting with Walesa and other leaders of the union. There was no indication why Geremek was detained again.

CONGRATULATIONS GRADUATE!

Cubs home for Drillers

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

With only a month left of the first half Texas League West race, Midland's Cubs languish four games out of first place. That's the bad news.

If the Cubs intend to do anything about the deficit, the opportunity is at hand. The Cubs open a 10-game homestand at 7 p.m. tonight against Tulsa and will play 22 of their final 28 first half games in the windy confines of Cubs Stadium. That could be the good news.

And tonight's game with the Drillers could be a key one. If Doug Welenc can get his season turned around, it could be an omen. Doug, who along with Jon Perlman, were Midland's top winners with 13 games last year and tied for first in most Texas League wins a year ago, is 1-5 tonight and was a 7-2 loser at Tulsa. At this stage of last year's race, Welenc was 5-3 and one of the few bright spots in a long dry first half.

Midland comes off a 3-7 swing through Tulsa and Shreveport and probably are lucky they aren't more than four back.

Actually, the pitching wasn't all that bad on the road. Stan Kyles lost a 1-0 game and in five of the Cubs' defeats Midland scored two runs or less as the team went into a batting decline, both for average and power. The opposition outhomered the Cubs 8-2.

A.J. Hill, for example, left Midland for the road trip with a 22-game hitting streak going and a .356 average. He comes home with a .305 average after managing just four hits in 31 at bats.

Catcher Don Hyman is about the only Cub to show any marked plate improvement, raising his average from .298 to .309. Coming home, outfielders Rick Baker, at .354, and Bill Hatcher, .352, are the leading hitters, not to mention base stealers with 33 between them.

The Midland pitching staff may have some problems keeping the Texas Rangers' farmhands in check. The guy they'll have to start with is first baseman Mike Rubel, who hit four homers and knocked in seven runs at Tulsa. If he can do that there, what will he do in West Texas, where the wind will be the righthander's ally.

Tulsa Manager Marty Scott's Drillers rank seventh in team batting with a .256 average and fifth in team pitching with a 4.81 earned run average. Midland is second to El Paso in hitting and sixth in team ERA, 5.81.

Hatcher leads the TL in runs and hits while Darryl Banks is the leader in pitching wins with five.

Trim Holmes defends title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes, the slim-trim version, will make his 15th defense of the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship tonight against lightly campaigned Tim Witherspoon.

The 33-year-old Holmes weighed 221 pounds, the heaviest of his career, when he scored a decisive, yet unispired 12-round decision over Lucien Rodrigeuez in his last fight March 27 at Scranton, Pa.

Thursday, the unbeaten champion weighed in at 213, the lightest he's been since he weighed 212¼ when he stopped Leon Spinks in the third round June 12, 1981, five fights ago.

Holmes went into the Spinks fight off a 15-round decision over Trevor Berbick, one of three times he has had to go the distance in defending the title.

THE OTHER two times preceded tonight's fight — a 15-round decision over Randy "Tex" Cobb and the victory over Rodriguez. In the 27 rounds against Cobb and Rodriguez, Holmes lost one round on the scorecard of one judge — that was against Cobb.

Holmes was a prohibitive favorite to beat the 25-year-old Witherspoon in second half of the heavyweight title doubleheader at a 20,000-seat outdoor arena at the Dunes. Top ticket price was $500.

The other heavyweight title bout was a scheduled 15-round rematch between Michael "Dynamite" Dokes, 223, the World Boxing Association champion, and Mike Weaver, 218½. Dokes won the title in 63 seconds last Dec. 10, but because of charges that referee Joey Curtis stopped the fight prematurely, the WBA ordered a rematch.

The fights will be televised on closed-circuit and pay-per-view. A sellout was not expected.

SHOULD Holmes win, he will be due to make a mandatory defense against the winner of a scheduled 12-round elimination bout on the card between Greg Page, 227, ranked No. 1 by the WBC, and Renaldo Snipes, 216, ranked second.

Snipes fought Holmes Nov. 6, 1981, at Pittsburgh and knocked the champion down with a right to the head in the seventh round before being stopped in the 11th.

Witherspoon gained his title shot by scoring a 10-round decision over Snipes here last June 5. The challenger has not fought since.

"He's gotten into a position he's not ready for," Holmes, who is 42-0, with 30 knockouts, said of Witherspoon. "He's ranked No. 3 and he hasn't fought in a year.

"A couple more years and he'll be ready to fight for the championship again."

"I can't help it," Witherspoon said of his getting a title shot after only 15 fights. "Hey, they've got geniuses at the age of 7. They can't help it and either can I.

"He's old — 33-years-old. His legs are weak. The way I'll beat him is to be mean."

DOKES, 24, knocked Weaver down in the first fight and won when Curtis called a halt with Weaver standing against the ropes. Weaver said Dokes was not punching when the fight was stopped.

Weaver, who won the title with a 15th-round knockout of John Tate March 31, 1980, and defended it twice successfully, has a 24-10-0 record, with 16 knockouts. He was stopped in the 12th round in a WBC title bid against Holmes June 22, 1979.

In another title fight on tonight's card, Ossie Ocasio will defend the WBA junior heavyweight championship against Randy Stephens.

Ocasio bid for the WBC heavyweight title against Holmes Jan. 27, 1979, and was stopped in the seventh round. He also fought Dokes twice before Dokes became a champion — gaining a 10-round draw April 19, 1980, and getting knocked out in the first round June 28, 1980.

The 27-year-old Ocasio, who has an 18-3-1 record, won his share of 195-pound division title with a 15-round decision over Robbie Williams last Feb. 13 and will be making his second defense.

The 30-year-old Stephens is 24-7-0, with 17 knockouts.

Lakers seeking clincher

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley isn't worried because his Lakers have to travel to San Antonio to beat the Spurs.

Riley just wants his team to pick up one more road victory tonight for the National Basketball Association Western Conference title and a shot at Philadelphia in the best-of-seven NBA championship series.

San Antonio beat the Lakers' 117-112 Wednesday night to cut the Los Angeles lead to 3-2. The Spurs still must win here tonight to stay alive.

If necessary, a seventh game would be played Sunday in Los Angeles.

"We won two in San Antonio this past weekend," Riley said after Wednesday's home loss. "I know we can go down there and win another."

Spurs Coach Stan Albeck couldn't decide if playing at home was an advantage or a handicap.

Despite sellout playoff crowds and rabid fans, San Antonio is winless in Texas in the series. The Lakers have taken only one home game, the series opener.

"The first game in San Antonio, we were flat. We just can't have a situation like that again," Albeck said. "We are just happy to be in a position to have a sixth game.

"We're still alive," he said, "and it's a two-game series now."

Only three teams ever have battled back from a 3-1 deficit to take a seven-game series. The Boston Celtics accomplished it twice, the Houston Rockets did it against the Spurs in 1979, and the Lakers have done it once.

San Antonio reserve center Billy Paultz has had time on the bench, despite Artis Gilmore's recurring foul trouble, to work out a scenario explaining this series' home-court disadvantage.

"I guess if it's any reason, it's because there's less distractions," Paultz said. "You go to a hotel room, lay down and that's it. The support at home is great when the fans get behind you, but it seemed to fire up the Lakers more than us."

Riley said his Lakers were caught looking ahead Wednesday night, after hearing that Philadelphia knocked off Milwaukee in the Eastern Conference final in five games.

"I think we were looking too much into the future after our two wins down there," he said.

Monterey eliminated

EL PASO—El Paso Burges collected 17 hits and took advantage of five errors to eliminate Lubbock Monterey from the 5A Area baseball playoffs, 12-4. It was the 19th straight for the Mustangs, 30-3, who beat Lubbock 19-1 Tuesday.

Lee White's handicap too much

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland Lee coach Spike Dykes gave his junior varsity (Maroon) players a chance Thursday night by spotting them 28 points in the intrasquad spring game against the varsity (White) at Memorial Stadium. The handicap proved to be 14 more than they needed despite being kept out of the end zone.

On both sides of the ball, White dominated the game but couldn't quite chalk up enough points in the 28-14 defeat though opportunities were plenty.

Twice in the second half, Maroon dug in and held ground when White was inside the 15-yard line. One of the goal line stands was set up when Maroon's Randy Ellis tackled White quarterback Jeff Motley on the 17-yard line after a 53-yard gain. The drive stalled on the six.

"That was a great play by Randy Ellis," said Dykes

There were a lot of great plays in the game, which marks the end of the 1983 spring football practice season, and a lot of promise for the fall when the players return for the real thing.

Probably the brightest area for White was the four-man offensive backfield: Motley, Isaac Garnett, Walter Jones and Tyrone Thurman. On 59 carries, the four produced 307 yards with Motley setting the pace with a 109-yard night.

Garnett, the workhorse fullback, accounted for 75 yards; Jones 71 and one touchdown and Thurman 59 with a TD.

White's first touchdown came in the opening moments of the second quarter when Jones scored from 26 yards out. It was only fitting that he crossed the goal line since, six plays earlier, a penalty nullified a 50-yard scoring run.

Kicker John Wurster added the point after.

With 39 seconds remaining in the half, Thurman capped a 16-play drive with his seven-yard scoring run. Wurster's second PAT knotted the game at halftime, 14-14.

"The blocking was real good," said Motley. "The line did a real good job. You've got to have that line before you can run."

And the Maroon runners?

"I thought Billy Gibbs (26 yards), Gordon Norris (10) and Sergio Ochoa (6) ran real well too," said Dykes about the Maroon running backs. "I think our backs will be adequate."

DEFENSIVELY, WHITE allowed Maroon to compile only 105 yards rushing and nothing through the air. In six attempts by three different quarterbacks, all but one fell harmlessly to the ground. White's Andre Mayfield intercepted the one that didn't.

On their first four possessions, not counting a fumbled punt by White on the third, Maroon ran only three plays before kicking away the ball. On the third possession when they received new life on the mishandled kick, Mayfield took the ball back with his interception.

Maroon never did run more than eight offensive plays in any series and that series accounted for two of their five first downs in the game.

"I THINK we made a lot of progress," said Dykes about the game and the spring season. "Certainly, that's hard to evaluate when you go against yourself. We had some goals that were absolute necessities when the season started."

Two of those goals were finding a defensive secondary and offensive front line to replace the won depleted by graduation.

"Not one player in the secondary has ever suited up for a varisty game and I felt like they developed a great deal," said Dykes. "I felt like our offensive line had to get better and they've made a marked improvement. There's very little experience there (Tracy Sherman, offensive tackle, is the only returning full time starter) but I feel they've come a long way.

"I think the chemistry of this football team is good, a blend of complimentary personalities. They're certainly eager, hard working and enthusiastic and as a coach that's all I can ask for."

Rader had to do something

DETROIT (AP) — Texas Manager Doug Rader felt he had to do something, even if it was wrong — and, as it turned out, it was.

Rader lifted Rangers starter Mike Smithson with the bases loaded after 9 1-3 innings Thursday night only to have Detroit pinch-hitter John Wockenfuss hit a sacrifice fly off Frank Tanana to give the Tigers a 2-1 victory.

It snapped the Rangers' winning streak at four games and the Tigers' losing streak at three.

"Anything I do there is wrong," Rader said. "I was just dodging bullets, really. Mike wasn't throwing that poorly, but I had to force them into doing something with Lou Whitaker; he already had hit two long balls to left field."

Golden Throat silenced, at last

TERRY WILLIAMSON

It's really a relief to know that Midland Lee's spring football season is down the tubes without having to leave town. The only loser in Thursday's Maroon-White scrimmage was KCRS' Ed Clements. It couldn't happen to a nicer guy.

Clements coached the White team to a 28-14 loss while I evened the score with old "Golden Throat" at 1-1 by coaching the Maroon. A year lies ahead with no hassle in the air waves. He won't have the nerve to bring it up again until next year.

Otherwise, things worked fine for the Lee players. The underdog Maroons, who were given seven points at the start of each quarter, allowed only two touchdowns to Lee's No. 1 offensive unit. The No. 1 defense of the White team didn't give up any points.

Even if it wasn't a polished effort, there was a glimpse of explosive potential for the Rebels in 1983. Here are some observations.

Eye Bulge: Junior-to-be Walter Jones touching the ball renders fear into any defensive unit. He could become Lee's best running back in history.

Play of the Game: David Golden's third down play in the fourth quarter when the White team was at the Maroon two-yard-line.

Points of Concern: The Lee passing game was unimpressive at best in the spring game and the verdict is still out there. Also the defensive secondary didn't get a test like it needs.

Points of Hope: The running attack has the potential of being awesome if penalties can be avoided.

Most Improvement: Assistant coach David Browning is back in good graces. He didn't let me down this year.

Best Generalship: Assistant coach Earl Miller wins hands down. On a fumbled punt by the Whites, the referee wanted to ask head coach Spike Dykes for a scrimmage ruling. When he couldn't find Dykes, he asked, "Well, who is second in command?" Miller replied, "I am and it's our ball." The Maroons were given the ball.

Best Quote: When told the Maroons had 28 points to work with, White fullback Isaac Garnett said, "They need all they can get."

Permian Complex: That goes to this corner. Given three plays of my own to call, I netted nine yards, gaining four on a sweep, a minus-four on a pass call and nine on a reverse. Lee always seems to get nine yards in three plays against Permian.

Bloodiest Nose: Maroon linebacker Donnie Rivas after a goal line meeting with White quarterback Jeff Motley.

Most Confused: Coach Jennings Teel when listening for directions from Coach Miller. "You have to learn to read my mind," said Miller.

Death Trap: White linebacker Reggie Ellis, a player who has a tackle for every play.

Biggest Copout: Spike Dykes refusing to write this column after I did all the work for him. "I didn't bring any paper," he said.

Cry Baby Award: Clements naturally. Was last seen rolling in the grass, kicking and screaming in front of the Lee field house.

Memories to Deal With: Permian, Midland High and coin flips. Permian is still champion. MHS is still city champion. And San Angelo knows how to flip coins for playoff berths. Will memory be incentive for the Rebels?

JIM MURRAY

Every sport has name for 'em

In boxing, they're called "opponents." In tennis, they're "unseeded." In baseball, they're "the bench." In football, they're "special teams." In opera, "spear carrier." In golf, "rabbits." They're on the undercard in life. The chorus line. A bunch of what's-his-names?

Their dreams keep them going. They're life's plating horses. There's a little bit of Rocky Balboa in every man. They figure they're one lousy break away from the top. They probably are. But they stay that way. After awhile, they get psychologically fitted to their role.

Nowhere is this ghostly sad company more evident than at Indianapolis. The Indy 500 has been won by 66 race drivers. This means it has been lost by 1,012.

THE WIRE stories out of Indy last Friday were particularly bittersweet. They noted that driver Bob Harkey, 52, a veteran, had been critically injured in a practice accident. Times race writer, Shav Glick, pointed out that a 52-year-old had no business in a 200 m.p.h. race and that Harkey additionally didn't have a very fast car and hadn't raced lately.

But Indianapolis has always had hundreds of entrants who fit that description to a camshaft. They knew who they were. You could see them there every year. In bad cars. In bad position. With short money. With inexperienced pit crews. Filling out the dance card. Nothing more. Reluctant to let go.

They fascinated me. I have been going to Indianapolis for over 20 years now and every year I could spot this melancholy crew. They had names like Steve Krisiloff, Sheldon Kinser, George Snider, Spike Gehlhausen, Dick Simon, Bud Tingelstad, Wally Dallenbach.

I always put Lloyd Ruby in this category, although the Speedway took the tough Texan a little more seriously. In 18 years at the Brickyard, Ruby had one third, but a lot of 27ths and 32nds and 20ths and 19ths.

IT SEEMED to me that these drivers got in a rut, although I did see one I had mentally categorized as one of the backdrop-scenery cast, Gordon Johncock, lift himself out of the ruck. He did that in the 1973 race, an automotive disaster in which two drivers and a pit crewman lost their lives and the race was mercifully stopped in the rain after 133 laps.

The race hasn't been won in years by anybody but an Unser, Johnny Rutherford or Foyt — with Johncock slipping through twice. It's as formful as high tide. Yet this forlorn cast of characters lines up every year, champing to qualify, eager to be part of "the show," as the drivers call it, defying death, injury, mutilation or humilitation just to be part of it — like the guy who couldn't bear to stop washing elephants because he couldn't leave show business.

I remember one year, 1967, when a colleague, Pat Dugan, and I were sharing a pizza in some joint on Meridian Avenue where they ran a book on the race. I looked up and saw that the great race driver, Jimmy Clark, was 35-1. "My God! The world's greatest driver and he's 35-1!" I told Pat. "Let's bet on him."

IT SEEMED to me unconscionable that a man who had won one Indy, finished second twice and was a world champion Formula One racer should be let go at such long odds. That night we ran into Clark at one of the posh motel dining rooms out by the track. Jimmy laughed when we told him we had wagered on him, insulted he should be held so lightly by the Indianapolis punters. "Save your money," he advised. "I'm in one of those cars they give to the crowd that hangs around the garages just hoping for something with four wheels."

Clark was right. His jalopy barely lasted 35 laps. He finished 31st. This man who might have won the Indy the year before, in fact, showed up at the winner's lane only to be told a questionable tally made Graham Hill the winner and him second. Why did Clark subject himself to this demeaning role, a ride in a race car that was miles an hour slower than the front row cars? "I won't, anymore," grinned Jimmy. He didn't. He was killed at Hockenheim, Germany, the following April.

BOB HARKEY symbolized this luckless cast of characters in sick used cars, held together by baling wire, chewing gum, hope and second-hand parts. Some of them have lost their lives just to be part of the Memorial Day tradition, to hear the strains of "Back Home Again in Indiana," to see the baloons go up and the cannons go off.

You have to salute these gallants of the road, these gladiators of the asphalt sent out to do battle with the lions of this blood sport, with survival their only victory. Without them, there's no race. Without them, there are no dreams. They are Don Quixotes on their sway-backed mounts, tilting at phantoms, noble in their delusions, indomitable in their defeats, seeing the world not as it is but as it should be. They'll be long gone before the checkered flag is dropped. But they'll be back next year.

Eddie's now mad about his Rangers

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

ARLINGTON (AP) — Chairman of the Board Eddie Chiles isn't ordering World Series tickets yet, but he's just mad about the way his Texas Rangers are taking apart the American League.

"I'm afraid it's just a dream and I'll wake up," Chiles told The Associated Press Friday. "There's no way I could be any more pleased than I am."

The 72-year-old Chiles has caught heavy flack from the local press since he took command of the team in 1980. It reached its thickest after the team lost 98 games last year.

The chief executive officer of The Western Company was criticized for trying to operate the Rangers as if they were an offshore drilling platform.

Known for his "I'm Mad" radio and television commercials in which he attacks government meddling, Chiles fired Manager Don Zimmer and General Manager Eddie Robinson.

He has been strictly low-profile since he hired Joe Klein as the new vice president and general manager and Doug Rader as field manager.

Chiles flew back from Venezuela Wednesday night in time to see his Rangers take over undisputed first place in the western division by a game over California.

He saw Texas defeat Cleveland 3-2 in 14 innings and was cautiously optimistic about the rarified first-place air.

"I'm not saying we have arrived but it appears we have," Chiles said. "There are a lot of games left to play and it's too early to judge. I'm not letting myself think we have totally solved our problems."

Chiles said Klein and Rader have more than exceeded expectations.

"They are the kind of men I thought they would be," he said. "We looked the country over and they filled the bill. They have outdone themselves."

Klein was director of player procurement and development for the Rangers for three years. He managed 10 years in the minor leagues.

The fiesty Rader, a former major league third baseman, managed Hawaii of the Pacific Coast League three years.

Asked about his low-key status this year, Chiles said, "It's really not my style to be visible. I had to do it because there were no other answers to the problems of that time.

NHL Blues still in St. Louis despite sale to Saskatoon

NEW YORK (AP) — The Blues are still in St. Louis, even though their owners don't want them and Saskatoon, Saskatchewan does.

The National Hockey League Board of Governors on Wednesday turned down the request from Ralston-Purina, owners of the Blues, to sell the team to a group from Saskatoon headed by Bill Hunter. Hunter, a co-founder of the World Hockey Association in 1972 and former owner of the Edmonton Oilers, had reached an agreement in principal to buy the Blues, reportedly for $11 million and move them to Saskatoon.

Hunter needed support of three-quarters of the board to buy the team and unanimous approval to move it.

But the Board voted 15-3 against the sale and transfer, with Montreal, Toronto and, of course, St. Louis voting in favor. Three former WHA franchises — Edmonton, Quebec and Hartford — who still owe money to the NHL from the 1979 merger were prohibited from voting.

"The basic contract someone gets when they receive a franchise states they will not transfer it," NHL President John Ziegler said.

Seattle rookie squeezes Angels

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The 24-year-old left-hander fired a four-hitter for his first shutout and first complete game in nine major league starts Thursday night as the Mariners nipped the slumping California Angels on Jamie Allen's suicide squeeze bunt in the eighth inning.

Young, 5-3, has won four of his last five starts, allowing only two earned runs in his last 44 innings. He is especially tough on left-handed hitters who are only 5-for-42 against him this season.

"I feel I can go right after people," Young said after his three-walk, seven-strikeout gem. "If they hit it, they hit it. I'm just on one of those rolls right now where things are going my way.If they hit the ball hard, they hit it right at the shortstop. You try to shut them out inning for inning. You just go after each batter.I try to keep the ball away and get ahead on the count. If you get ahead, you don't have to come in."

Julio Cruz opened the Seattle eighth with a double off Ken Forsch and moved to third on a pickoff throwing error by the California pitcher. After pinch hitter Ken Phelps walked, Cruz broke for the plate and Allen bunted to Forsch, whose only play was to first.

The Angels had a chance to score in the seventh when they loaded the bases with two out, but Young retired Juan Beniquez on a fly ball.

Orioles 2, Blue Jays 1

Dan Ford's two-out, two-run homer in the eighth inning and the six-hit pitching of Scott McGregor and two relievers led Baltimore to its fourth consecutive victory. Ford's fourth home run of the season came after John Shelby doubled off Toronto starter Mike Morgan. McGregor, who won for the first time since April 29, lost a bid for the Orioles' third straight shutout when Cliff Johnson hit his fifth home run with one out in the bottom of the ninth.

"Traveling on my (31st) birthday and then finding it raining when we got here, I didn't exactly have a chance to do the things I wanted to," said Ford, who has the game-winning RBI in the last three games. "I think I'll go back to the hotel and do something there."

Red Sox 4, Twins 1

Dave Stapleton and Jim Rice each drove in a run with bloop singles and Tony Armas and Rich Gedman added RBI doubles, while Doug Bird and Luis Aponte combined to check Minnesota on eight hits. Bird, earning his first victory since being aquired last winter from the Chicago Cubs, allowed six hits in seven innings, including John Castino's seventh homer in the fourth.

"It's enjoyable to win a game," said Bird. "Playing for Ralph (Manager Ralph Houk) makes it easy because he lets you know exactly what he expects from you. I knew from the time I reported to spring training what my role was going to be — long relief and an occasional start when needed. I have to admit I expected to get more work, but so far I haven't been needed much.The way our pitchers have been throwing, I haven't really had a job."

Padres 3, Mets 3

Eric Show, celebrating his 27th birthday, hurled six shutout innings and combined with Luis DeLeon on a seven-hitter that ended the Mets' four-game winning streak and the Padres' four-game losing streak.

The Padres took a 1-0 lead in the first inning off Scott Holman. Gene Richards walked with two out and went to third on Steve Garvey's single. When rookie right fielder Darryl Strawberry overthrew the cutoff man, Richards broke for the plate and was beaten by shortstop Jose Oquendo's throw, but he kicked the ball out of catcher Ron Hodges' glove for an error. They made it 2-0 in the second inning on Sixto Lezcano's double, and Tim Flannery's sacrifice fly.

San Diego scored an unearned run that proved to be the game-winner off Doug Sisk in the ninth on an error, a walk and two ground balls, with Lezcano getting an RBI. That offset Strawberry's two-out home run in the bottom of the ninth, his third.

Gold seeks KC assistant

DENVER (AP) — Kansas City Chiefs assistant coach Rod Humenuik is in town to talk to Denver Gold owner Ron Blanding about the now-vacant head coaching job with the United States Football League team, according to a published report.

The Denver Post reported today that Humenuik is close to being names to replace Red Miller, whom Blanding fired Thursday.

"I think we could come to some kind of agree-ent tonight (Thursday)," Blanding told the newspaper. The newspaper reported Blanding had attempted to conceal Humenuik's identity and spirited him to a downtown Denver hotel under an alias Thursday.

NCAA fights for TV rights

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The NCAA is going back to the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in its fight to retain control of football television rights.

By a 2-1 vote last Thursday, a three-judge panel in Denver upheld a lower court's ruling against the NCAA in an antitrust suit brought by Oklahoma and Georgia. The NCAA, breaking a week-long silence in the case, said Thursday it will seek a rehearing before the entire eight-judge appeals court.

"The application will be made prior to the deadline of May 26," the NCAA said in a prepared statement Thursday night.

David Cawood, the NCAA's television program director, said there was no indication when the request for rehearing might be acted upon. Cawood confirmed earlier reports that the NCAA is planning to take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

In the lower court, U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga found the NCAA in violation of antitrust laws in forcing its member schools to take part in the NCAA television plan. In the order last September, Burciaga voided the NCAA's $281-million football contracts with ABC and CBS and enjoined the NCAA from ever making new contracts.

Sunny's Halo set for Preakness

BALTIMORE (AP) — David Cross, trainer of Preakness favorite Sunny's Halo, visits his barn three or four times a day, even in the middle of the night, hoping he doesn't find a rash on the colt.

Sometimes it's there, sometimes it isn't.

At any rate, he doesn't think the problem will affect the Canadian-bred son of Halo-Mostly Sunny in the 108th running of the second leg of the Triple Crown Saturday at Pimlico.

Sunny's Halo, who won the Kentucky Derby May 7 and is the 2-1 early Preakness choice, is expected to go for the lead or close to it under Eddie Delahoussaye from the No. 11 post position.

"Everybody (trainers) get confronted with this (rash) problem from time to time," said Cross, who has only two horses in his charge so he can concentrate on Sunny's Halo. "But this is the Preakness and I'd rather not have the problem now."

A field of 13 3-year-olds was entered for the 1 3-16-mile test, in which two of the leading contenders, Desert Wine and Marfa, are not being permitted to run with the medication Lasix.

Trainer Jerry Fanning of Desert Wine, the 7-2 early second choice and the Derby runnerup, was upset at the ruling by the Maryland Racing Commission. He had said Wednesday he would recommend to owners Fred Sahadi and Dan Agnew that they withdraw the colt.

"I've talked it over with my owners and my vet," Fanning said Thursday, "and we've come to the conclusion the chances of him bleeding are almost nil."

Lasix is a diuretic which helps prevent horses from bleeding through the nose after a race or workout.

The Maryland commission, operating under more stringent guidelines than such states as California and Kentucky, turned down Marfa and Desert Wine for Lasix because they didn't bleed visibly from the nostrils on the track before a state veterinarian.

Marfa was the early third pick at 4-1.

Cross, meantime, has changed Sunny Halo's h... "It's under control now," he said, "and I hope it's stopped."

A few hours after those remarks, evidence of the fungus reappeared on the colt's girth.

He said he had stopped giving the colt an antibiotic because it was getting close to race day.

The Canadian-born trainer said he isn't even thinking about the Belmont Stakes, a 1½-mile race June 11. Cross would prefer to send the colt to the Queen's Plate at Woodbine in Toronto.

But he knows owner David Foster, a Toronto stockbroker, might opt for the Belmont if a Preakness victory gives the colt the golden opportunity of becoming the 12th Triple Crown winner.

Sports heroes go Show Biz route

By SCOTT OSTLER
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

"I think Reggie Theus could be the next Billy Dee Williams."

—A Local public-relations man whose agency would like to snare Theus.

—Famous player's Hollywood PR man.

I sincerely believe that within a few years, Hollywood will be taken over by athletes, and real actors like Dustin Hoffman and Billy Dee Williams will have to seek work in the then-wide-open field of professional sports.

—The author of this column, who can't decide whether he would rather be the next Mark Twain or the next Mr. T.

Once upon a time — it was about two weeks ago, in fact — sports stars were tough to pin down for interviews.

Nowadays it is a lot easier. You just sit back, feet on desk, hands locked behind head, and wait for the sports star's PR man to call and offer you an interview with the hero himself.

Actually this is an exaggeration. The new era hasn't completely dawned yet. Not every sports hero has a publicist. Yet.

But a lot of them do. One agency in Los Angeles, Rogers & Cowan, handles public relations for Ozzie Smith, Alexis Arguello, Juan Bonilla, Martina Navratilova, Kirk Gibson, Eric Hipple, Milt Wilcox and Bill Madlock, to name a few. George Brett has a show-biz PR man. Ron Cey had one, and Don Sutton.

A lot of sports stars are not happy with being just sports stars. They want to make TV commercials, do movies, get on Johnny Carson's show, sing and dance, that kind of thing. So they hire a PR man.

LET'S TAKE Ozzie Smith, for example. Ozzie's regular agent signed Ozzie up with Rogers & Cowan a couple years ago. Ozzie was well known in San Diego, a slick shortstop who didn't hit much and was hardly a national celebrity.

"He (Smith's agent) wanted us to get Ozzie Smith known on a national level," said PR man Alan Nierob, who also handles people such as Ann-Margaret, Victoria Principal and Kathy Lee Crosby.

As a result of the PR campaign, Ozzie has appeared in fashion spreads in Playboy and Gentlemen's Quarterly magazines, was featured in the Saturday Evening Post, appeared in Time magazine and will soon be featured in People magazine.

The people at Rogers & Cowan believe that they had something to do with Ozzie signing a very rich contract with the St. Louis Cardinals.

"Because of the publicity and image we gave him, he was able to negotiate that contract," said Tommy Cook, director of the sports division at Rogers & Cowan. "Perhaps, in a way, we were responsible."

If it seems like the sports star is being packaged and marketed like a new brand of mouthwash, it's because that ms pretty much what is happening.

Bill Madlock
...seeks identity

"The key is to make the athlete more a household name," says Paul Block of Rogers & Cowan, "in order to expand his career and his horizons."

BILL MADLOCK was buried in Pittsburgh, the greatest unknown hitter in baseball, an annoymous three-time batting champion.

So his agent went to Rogers & Cowan and they got him appointed to the President's Council on Physical Fitness, and got Sports Illustrated to do a feature on him, and got him publicity in a dozen other publications.

While such media blitzes seem to work, some media people are wary of PR people.

Nevertheless, the sports editor listens to the shoe salesmen, and occasionally buys a pair. If the shoe fits ...

The PR people say they are selective, that they don't sell every pair of shoes that wants to be sold. Not every athlete is marketable.

"Not that many have a shot (at doing well outside of athletics)," says Milt Kahn, a Los Angeles show-biz PR man who handles some athletes.

Greenwood, 'Anatomy of Winner'

By CHAD PUELRING
Sports Writer

With feet still tapping to the sounds of a Beach Boys medley, sung by a student group called "Best Friends," Greenwood fans honored their student-athletes at the annual All-Sports Banquet Thursday night at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

When guest speaker Bill Hicks, Howard Payne University football coach, was introduced he complimented his hosts saying, "You've had a first class banquet. Up to now."

And before he began his talk on the "Anatomy of a Winner," he let the crowd know exactly how he felt about being picked to address the Ranger faithful.

"I know you're here to honor your young athletes, not to listen to me", he said. "But I drove here all the way from Brownwood, and I'm going to say my piece."

The three ingredients he has found it takes to be a winner are a funny bone, wish bone and backbone.

"You have to have a sense of humor," he said. "Sports has to be fun in order for one to succeed. That's where the funny bone comes in.

"Then you've got to set goals and set them high. I call that the wish bone.

"And finally, you've got to remember there is no easy way. It takes backbone to be a success."

GREENWOOD HAS made a commitment to, and built a tradition around, the team concept. Unlike most schools the athletic department and administration has extended this philosophy to include ceremonies like the Sports Banquet, where no individual awards are handed out. Only the teams are recognized.

The Ranger basketball program combined to win two district and bi-district championships, and one area crown while compliling a 52-7 record.

Under first year coach Cliff Stephens, the Rangerettes were 28-3, losing in the second round of the regional playoffs.

In what has the highest of compliments, district coaches selected Greenwood's starters for the All-District squad.

In addition, Renvy Evans made the All-Regional team and third team All-State by the Amarillo Globe News. Belinda Duke made third team All-Regional squad.

HERSCHEL BURLESON had a tough act to follow after taking his boys' team to the state finals last year and finished with a 34-3 record.

"If I can keep having rebuilding years like this," he said, "I'll coach forever."

The Rangers finished 24-4, three of those losses by 2 points, before losing to Anton in the area contest.

Despite all the success, Greenwood failed to place even one player on the All-District team.

After explaining that one school superintendent had nominated a team but it died for lack of a second, Burleson said, "I lost a job that way once."

Stuart Burleson, the coach's son, made first team All-Regional and the coaches All-State squad. Jim Lee was second team all-regional.

THE GIRLS' track team captured district and sent four to the state meet.

Evans was the state's second best 110-meter hurdler and finished fourth in the triple jump.

Amy Franks, Marla Morgette and Terry Busie also went to Austin, joining Evans on the 400-meter relay team.

Coach Joe Longley guided the boys to second in district with seven qualifiing for regionals. Burleson doubled his way to state, finishing second in the high jump and fourth in the 110 hurdles.

But Longley's pride was the newly formed cross country team.

"We won district because we had the only team," he said.

And, according to Longley, the long-distance runners fell short in the regional meet due to unusual running conditions.

"They had to run up and down HILLS," he said. "We just don't have those around here. We've got to find some hills to pratice on for next year."

DISTRICT CROWN No. 5 went to the boys' golf team where Darren Anthony was the district medalist. For the girls, Marla Morgette finished second for the district honors.

Tennis coach Joey Light hit it on the head when he called Burleson "The franchise."

As defending state champion, Burleson advanced to Austin again only to lose to the eventual winner.

For the first time in three years of competition, the football team suffered a losing season, finishing at 4-6.

Burleson made All-District at three positions (quarterback, defensive back and punter) and was All-West Texas at quarterback.

Despite breaking both arms during the season, Kevin Knowles made All-District as an offensive and defensive lineman, and wide receiver Mark Colburn made the second team.

Indy 500 drivers swap speed for safety

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Every improvement in safety involves a trade-off in racing performance. The safest race car is one locked in its garage, but drivers, crews and car owners obviously aren't willing to go that far.

"The designers and constructors always do as much as possible to protect the driver, but they're also concerned with the limitations of the rules. They don't want to add any more weight to the cars than necessary," says 1969 Indianapolis 500 winner Mario Andretti, concerned but not panicked by the increasing number of foot and leg injuries.

The most noteworthy example was the crash during practice that broke three-time winner Johnny Rutherford's left foot and right ankle on Wednesday. Rutherford almost certainly will miss his 20th Indy start, and Andretti said Thursday the new design of many of the race cars puts drivers in a very vulnerable position.

Among new rules this season designed to slow the cars down and provide greater safety for the driver, was the movement forward of the rear wing by seven inches. To keep the proper center of gravity, the new March, which is the predominant car model this year at Indy, also moved the driver forward.

"You'd like to have as much protection as possible. What we have now is pretty strong, but you've got to rememfer a concrete wall is not a catch fence like you have at most of the road courses. Everything (on the car) collapses now because of how hard you hit," said Andretti.

More than two dozen drivers practiced on Thursday, the next-to-last full day of testing before Saturday's start of qualifications for the May 29 race. The first two scheduled days of time trials were rained out last weekend.

A 17th driver topped 200 mph during practice on Thursday — rookie Derek Daly of Ireland. His teammate, Desire Wilson, however, withdrew as an entrant because of repeated engine problems and rapidly dwindling time for her mandatory rookie driver's test.

Wilson, 29, had hoped to become the second woman driver in Indy history. Janet Guthrie drove here from 1977-79, finishing ninth in 1978.

The Wysard Racing Team brought three engines to the Speedway. When Daly blew two of his engines, the third also was placed in his car, leaving Wilson without a power plant. She received a rebuilt engine on Wednesday but was unable to complete the required rookie test of 20 laps at 180 mph.

"Let's put it this way," she said Thursday. "I am a professional driver, the Wysards run a professional team, Indianapolis runs a professional race. If we can't put in a professional effort, I'd rather not run.

"You just can't get everything sorted in one day when we'll have 20 or 30 other cars out there, all looking for 203-204 mph."

Wilson said the team would concentrate on making her Indy-car debut at the Cleveland 500 in July.

"I'm not a quitter, and we've agreed that Cleveland is a better bet now than trying to cram for Indy," Wilson said.

Daly improved his best practice time from 198 mph to a lap of 200.490 mph.

Track record-holder Rick Mears, who went over 205 mph last week, had a lap at 196.463 mph. Tony Bettenhausen, also over 200 last week, was clocked at 192.020, and Danny Ongais, who has struggled for speed since practice opened, switched from a Chevrolet V-8 engine to a Cosworth and turned a lap at 198.237 mph.

Other practice speeds included 195.482 by Andretti, 199.379 by Kevin Cogan and 199.911 by rookie Teo Fabi.

Ten other drivers besides Rutherford have hit the Speedway walls since practice opened on May 7, and most of them have come away with foot and leg injuries of varying severity.

Eric Broadley, designer of the Lola car driven by Andretti, said, "The problems (of foot and leg injuries) are very unfortunate. You can't afford to have your driver hurt.

"Actually, there's quite a lot that can be done in strengthening the foot well area. We can put in more internal sections, like we have, and use different materials. But everything you do adds weight, and additional weight creates different problems."

Mears has not crashed here, but his new Penske racer suffered heavy damage in a crash during tests last month at Michigan International Speedway.

Highlanders win to square series

EL PASO—El Paso Bel Air squared its 5A Area baseball playoff series with San Angelo Thursday with an 11-4 win, forcing a decisive third game today at Dudley Field.

The winner will play Hurst L.D. Bell next week in a best-of-three series.

Ricky Molinar pitched eight-hit ball to keep the highlanders alive after a 6-4 loss in San Angelo Tuesday.

The Highlanders chased San Angelo pitcher Jeff Schakde, who hadn't lost since March, coming up with a six-run fourth inning to ice the decision.

Luis Maldano led the El Paso team with four hits, scoring twice and knocking in three runs. The Bobcats' defense didn't help matters, committing five errors.

San Angelo was behind 8-1 before scoring three runs in the sixth. Scott Bingham led the Bobcats with three hits, including a double and triple.

Parallel reported sound, staying conservative

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Parallel Petroleum, a small, local oil company with no debt and a positive cash flow, will remain conservative this year, reflecting the operating philosophy of its president, Frank S. Delay.

The company intends to increase its reserves and financial strength, however, through some type of merger, if all goes according to plan.

Delay told shareholders at the company's annual meeting Thursday that Parallel is holding itself to limited financial exposure and drilling risk in a variety of oil and gas prospects, with several industry partners. It has a stake in Exxon's activity in Borden and Glasscock counties, for example, where that company has several wells planned.

Parallel is nevertheless actively seeking a merger partner.

The company has its "shark repellent" out and will "most assuredly be the parent company," Delay said. "We've done a good degree of analysis on this. We prefer to do it on a friendly basis, but if this does not come to pass, we could conceivably do it another way."

Parallel has opened preliminary talks with major shareholders of a likely merger candidate, as yet unnamed.

Parallel reported net income for the first four months ended April 30, of $55,387, or $.014 per share, on revenues of $350,720. This compares with a net loss of $208,985, or $.056 per share, on revenues of $238,936 for the same four months last year.

Positive cash flow of $132,812 was reported, versus negative cash flow of $158,135 for the same four months a year ago.

Parallel has seen a turnaround in performance in the first four months of 1983 compared to the same period a year ago. Oil and gas sales are up 70 percent, overhead has been cut in half, and net earnings have quadrupled.

The search for a likely merger candidate has been going on for some time, vice president Larry Oldham told shareholders. He and Delay are looking for a firm with about $1 million in cash flow and half a million to a million barrels in reserves, he said.

Parallel has scouted about 100 companies which would be compatible in size and financial status.

"About 10 have kept their powder dry, that is, have a positive cash flow," Oldham told shareholders. "We narrowed it to one, and began acquiring stock."

When the stock doubled in price, Parallel sold it at a profit rather than buy the company, because it did not want to borrow the money the merger candidate would have required.

Meanwhile, Parallel is counting on a shallow well on an undisclosed property which, according to Oldham, will be very significant to the company this year. The well offsets a hole which made 170,000 barrels of oil out of the same zone found in Parallel's well, he said.

A second offset has already been drilled; it picked up the same zone, and one other, Oldham said. Parallel owns a 50 percent working interest in the prospect, the largest interest it has ever had in a single deal.

"This is where we could have trouble," he cautioned shareholders. "You don't go broke on bad deals; you go broke on good deals because you tend to take greater exposure than you should."

Parallel is looking for 200,000 barrels of proved reserves and 100 barrels a day production by the end of 1983, Oldham said. This goal should be reached if the "undisclosed" prospect comes through as the geology has indicated.

In 1982, the company participated in 23 dry holes and 20 producers. In the last four months, seven wells have been completed.

Total costs and expenses at Parallel during the first four months of 1983 were $295,333, a reduction of $152,588, or 34 percent as compared to the same four-month 1982 period.

Delay told shareholders that Parallel has continued to maintain its strong financial position, with working capital at April 30, 1983 of $1,213,846, and no debt. He further reported that gains achieved on the sale of leasehold interests in the amount of $730,339, on an inception-to-date basis, have exceeded Dry Hole and Abandonment cost by $52,084.

Stockholders re-elected Delay; Oldham; Ernest R. Duke, president of Mustang Mud, Midland; Charles R. Pannill, oil and gas consultant, Fort Worth; and Glen A. Smith, president of Las Oil Corporation, Burkburnett, as directors of the company for the coming year.

Rick Brennan, Midland Fire Department, crosses a bridge spanning the void between the First City Bank towers Thursday morning. The custom made, portable bridge is intended to be used as a fire escape for tower occupants. It serves as a means of escape in extreme emergencies; the towers would ordinarily be evacuated through two smoke-proof fire wells in each building.The bridge is stored atop the towers, and may be set up in two 1/2 minutes. The fire department learned how to use the bridge in a special drill Thursday.

Opportunity knocks for Harvel in Amarillo

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

When he leaves the Midland Chamber of Commerce as its executive vice president to assume the same post in Amarillo, Paul Harvel will take with him one regret: that the opportunity hadn't come along two years from now.

"I would have liked to have stayed here," he said recently. "Midland has one of the best overall staffs that I've seen. They are really energetic, new-idea type people. But, the opportunity in Amarillo is one I could not pass up."

Harvel leaves Midland around June 15 to oversee a major restructuring of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce. He sees the job as the high point of his 16-year chamber career. He does not expect to move again, unless it be to a larger city such as Fort Worth, which, for him, would be the ultimate goal.

The Midland Chamber's executive committee will meet next week to name a search committee, according to chamber president Larry Bell. Economic development director Grant Billingsley will head chamber operations in the interim.

Already, Harvel has begun the transition process. He is on the phone daily with the Amarillo chamber to begin to implement necessary changes there.

In addition, he is tieing up loose ends in Midland and setting out in a formal way the information he carries around in his head.

"I want everything written down in black and white as to where we stand," he said.

This follows the same pattern Harvel established when he came to Midland from Enid, Oklahoma, about 18 months ago. Several weeks before his "official" arrival here, he was spending two-thirds of his time in Midland, beginning to accomplish the things for which he will be remembered here.

"In looking back, the best thing accomplished is our membership involvement," Harvel said. Of the chamber's 1,700 members, about 800 are active on the chamber's various committees. This broad participation has strengthened the organization and gives it continuity in programs and experience, according to both Harvel and Bell.

Because of the declining economy in Midland, maintaining the same size membership, and thus, income, has been one of the biggest challenges Harvel faced. Sales in 1982-83 have been only fair; nothing like they were in 1981, he said. Income is down from the 1981-82 high.

"But, our chamber has not had to go to the bank for a penny," Harvel said. "I don't know of any other chamber in the country which has not had a drop in income, just like any business."

The Midland chamber has made adjustments in staff travel and other expenses, but has not had any lay offs.

"We have worked extremely hard on membership income — renewal and retaining. We're losing members and we're gaining them, so we haven't had a net loss."

Harvel expects that when the chamber's fiscal year ends Sept. 30, the books will show a balance even with that reported last year.

The chamber and Midland City Council enjoy good cooperation, Harvel said. The challenge for the chamber is to increase funding from the city for its Convention and Vistors Bureau and the economic development department.

Priorities for the chamber, and Midland, include trying to get more regional office headquarters to locate here, seeing Loop 250 to a timely completion, and diversifying Midland's economic base with industry or high technology companies such as Texas Instruments, Harvel said.

His advice to the incoming executive vice president would be to exploit the large reserve of volunteer leadership talent in Midland.

"There is a tremendous pool of good volunteer leadership here. You have to maximize the use of it. Membership in this chamber is extremely talented."

TXO buys Hadson properties

DALLAS (SWN) — Texas Oil & Gas Corp. announced this week the signing of a contract for the acquisition of the interests of Hadson Petroleum Corporation and its limited partners in 128 producing gas wells and about 52,000 undeveloped leasehold acres for $26.7 million.

All of the wells and properties are located in the Arkoma Basin of western Arkansas and easter Oklahoma where TXO recently completed its 25-percent-owned Ozark Gas Transmission System. TXO is currently the operator for or has a working interest in about 50 of the wells being acquired.

Texas Oil & Gas also has an interest in over 350 other producing wells and more than 400,000 net undeveloped leasehold acres in the basin.

"We are quite optimistic about the potential of this acquisition, since we already have an extensive exploration and development program in the Arkoma Basin. TXO has had considerable success in drilling for relatively shallow, low-cost gas in this area, and we plan an aggressive drilling program for the undeveloped acreage acquired from Hadson," company officials said.

Texas Oil & Gas Corp. is engaged primarily in the gathering, transportation and processing of natural gas, and exploration for and production of gas, crude oil and condensate.

Well plugging fund created

AUSTIN (AP) — Senators voted Thursday to establish a state fund for plugging hundreds of abandoned oil and gas wells that may pose health threats to the public.

The same bill would allow the Railroad Commission to charge a $100 fee on applications to drill, deepen or reenter a well. The Legislative Budget Board estimated this could raise $3.3 million a year.

The bill also would raise penalties for violating the natural resources and water codes to $10,000 per day for each violation.

The House-approved bill was sent to the governor on voice vote.

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 243 taxable funds)		40	7.8	7.9

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 243 money funds reporting to Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 declined $.7 million to $167.2 billion for the week ending May 18, 1983.

The funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 7.81% from 7.86%. The funds' 30-day average yield decreased to 7.88% from 7.91%. The funds' average maturity stayed at 40 days for the third week.

William E. Donoghue says, "Asset outflow from the taxable money funds has slowed considerably for the second week in a row. This week's outflow of $.7 million and the $.4 million of last week together represent a smaller decrease than any one-week outflow since the asset peak of $226.5 billion on December 1, 1982."

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate adjustment date.

Mobil closing refinery, selling less gas

NEW YORK (AP) — Mobil Corp., the nation's fifth-largest gasoline supplier, will close its 66-year-old refinery at Augusta, Kan., and stop supplying Kansas, Nebraska and South Dakota because of declining gasoline demand and excess refining capacity.

The withdrawal, which will take place gradually over the next year, will also include parts of three other states, the company said Thursday.

The states targeted for partial withdrawal are Missouri, Iowa and North Dakota.

The company said it also will phase out operations at its product terminals in Topeka and Kansas City, Kan.; Omaha, Neb.; Sioux Falls, S.D.' and Sioux City, Iowa.

Mobil's decision to stop selling gasoline in those Midwestern states is part of a broad trend in the U.S. oil industry, according to industry watchers.

"These pullouts from unprofitable geographies are part of the great evolutionary move toward more effective distributing and marketing," according Dan Lundberg, publisher of Lundberg Survey Inc., which tracks the gasoline market.

The American Petroleum Institute, a trade group of oil companies, said Thursday that gasoline use in the first four months of the year was down 0.6 percent from the same period last year. Consumption in 1982 fell 1.3 percent, and the volume of gasoline sales was the lowest in a decade, according to the institute.

The approximately 400 employees affected by Mobil's closures and pullouts will be offered jobs elsewhere in the company, Mobil said. Those who choose not to transfer will receive early retirement benefits or severance pay, plus job counseling.

Mobil said its pullout means 720 gasoline stations will lose their supplier.

Time Inc. selling tree business

From Wire Reports

NEW YORK — Time Inc., whose better-known products include Time magazine and the Home Box Office pay-television service, said Thursday that it will spin off its less glamorous forest-products business to shareholders.

The move instantly creates a separate corporation that would rank as the nation's 270th largest industrial company, based on last year's sales.

By spinning off the forest-products unit, Time will sever an enterprise that last year accounted for nearly a third of its $3.5 billion in revenues but less than a sixth of its $356 million in operating profits. It will also rid Time of a unit that demands considerable capital expenditures at a time when it is spending huge sums to expand its cable television business.

Time will hold on to businesses, including cable TV, that many investors consider far more dynamic, from its popular magazines such as Money and Sports Illustrated to Home Box Office.

The move, scheduled to be completed by year's end, still requires approval of Time's shareholders. But the announcement met with an initial favorable reaction on Wall Street. Time's stock Thursday rose $1.50 a share on the New York Stock Exchange to close at $67 on turnover of 286,500 shares.

John Reidy, media industry analyst at the New York investment house of Drexel Burnham Lambert, said he sees "no fit at all" between forest products and Time's other businesses. The new Time, he said, will be "much more interesting than when you had all (the businesses) blended into one."

The favorable reception among stock analysts and investors indicated that Time may achieve one key objective, overcoming what chief executive J. Richard Munro described Thursday as the "blurred image of Time Inc. in the eyes of many stockholders, security analysts and employees."

At least as important, Munro told stockholders at Time's annual meeting, the spinoff will end a "continuing tug-of-war" between two cash-hungry businesses, forest products and cable television.

Large crowd turns out to hear Redford discuss filmmaking

Robert Redford

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor-director Robert Redford attracted the largest crowd in the 36-year history of the Hollywood Radio and Television Society as nearly 1,400 people turned out for his speech on filmmaking.

Redford, 45, winner of an Academy Award in 1980 for directing "Ordinary People," described Thursday his Sundance Institute for filmmakers, which he established two years ago because of a "need for quality."

"It's a place where filmmakers can go where the risks are not great. They can get back to the way it was when they started out. You see that you can experiment and take chances," he told the audience packed into the International Ballroom of the Beverly Hilton Hotel

Oliver H. Crawford, executive director of the society, said tickets sold out immediately, with many companies buying tickets for their women executives.

M. Thatcher

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher often has only an apple for breakfast and likes to awaken at 6 a.m. to listen to reports to farmers on the radio, a new biography says.

And while she doesn't have much for breakfast herself, she does the cooking for her husband Denis, who cannot cook, journalists Nicholas Wapshott and George Brock say in "Thatcher," which was published Thursday. It is described as the first full-length account of Mrs. Thatcher's life and time in office.

The authors say she rarely sleeps more than five hours. While her retired oil executive husband sleeps in his own bedroom suite, Mrs. Thatcher, 57, listens to the news, making sure not to miss the daily briefing for farmers on livestock and cereal prices.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Paul Newman's face now appears on jars of spaghetti sauce, as well as the silver screen, and he's only too happy to crow about it.

At a news conference Thursday, Newman sang the praises of his home-made spaghetti sauce to the tune of "I've Grown Accustomed to Your Face."

He was joined in melody by his partner, author A.E. Hotchner, and by his actress-wife, Joanne Woodward, as they revealed to the public "Newman's Own Industrial Strength Venetian Spaghetti Sauce," an all-natural recipe cooked up by the blue-eyed superstar himself.

Public relations spokesman Frank Fagan said Hotchner, author of "Papa Hemingway," takes care of the day-to-day worries in the business venture while Newman creates the recipes.

Bob Hope

WASHINGTON (AP) — Entertainer Bob Hope will have the tables turned on him tonight when he gets — instead of gives — a USO show.

Hope, who will be 80 on May 29, will be President Reagan's guest of honor in the presidential box for the USO benefit at the Kennedy Center opera house.

More than a dozen stars are joining in the birthday tribute to Hope, including Lucille Ball, Phyllis Diller, George Burns and Tom Selleck.

At a Senate reception Thursday, Hope joked about his age, telling Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., "Hi, I've joined your group — the Geritol Army."

Vice President George Bush presided over the ceremony in which Hope was given a plaque and a birthday cake with 80 candles.

As Pepper, 82, joined him on the platform, Hope said he went to the Smithsonian Institution "but someone tried to stuff me into a cage. What bothered me was it was Claude Pepper."

The Senate this week adopted a resolution praising the comedian for "a lifetime of selfless devotion to the health and happiness of others."

The House took similar action when Hope turned 75. Noting that the Senate didn't act until five years after the House, Hope quipped, "That's a long time in committee."

With the economy improving, houses such as these two in Beverly Hills, Calif., owned by Robert Wagner, bottom, and Rachel Welch are available to anyone who is homeless with about $2 million to spare. Welch's home is selling for $1.15 million, and Wagner's, featuring six bedrooms, maid's quarters and three reception rooms is going for $2.9 million.

Celebrities playing muscial houses with million-dollar digs

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Now that the economy is on the upswing, perhaps you'd be interested in moving up, house-wise. If so, there are several celebrity homes to choose from in Beverly Hills — starting at a tad over $1 million.

Raquel Welch's house, for example, is being offered at $1.15 million. It's a stone English-style home not far from the Beverly Hills Hotel and has four bedrooms, maid's quarters, a guest house and pool.

Robert Wagner's place, described in the listing as having "closets for a star," is for sale at $2.9 million. It has six bedrooms, maid's quarters, guest house, gourmet kitchen, three different reception rooms and a huge family room. Wagner bought it eight years ago from singer Patti Page.

Some of these digs can be leased if you don't want to take the big plunge. Yvette Mimieux is asking $3.2 million for her home but would consider a monthly lease of $13,000. Either way, you get three bedrooms and maid's quarters, a gourmet kitchen, six fireplaces, huge windows and a projection room. The place has a Moroccan motif and is on park-like grounds with lush landscaping and a gated entrance.

"The most unusual house in all of California," belonging to none other than Cher, is available for either sale or lease, real estate broker Elaine Young said Thursday. Said to resemble the Mexican hotel where the movie "10" was filmed, the white stucco mansion has six bedrooms and a maid's room, a formidable security system and a $6.4 million price tag. And, oh yes, the lease is $27,000 a month.

Why are so many celebrity bungalows up for sale?

"It's musical houses," said Miss Young. "This is the land of discontent. Everybody's got so much that they're not satisfied with what they've got. And people go through these phases where they redecorate, or even move, according to who their boyfriend or girlfriend is. Then there are a lot of divorces too, and that helps turnover."

School secretary suspended for posing in Hustler

The woman is the second public employee in Springfield to be suspended for posing in men's magazines. Police officer Barbara Schantz was suspended from the force after posing for Playboy last year, but later was reinstated.

"This could be blown farther than Barbara Schantz ever could be because this lady comes into contact with children every day," said Highlands Elementary School Principal Richard Yontz.

Lewellen Construction specializes in storm and replacement windows

Today's economy is making it more difficult than ever for the average family to purchase and maintain an affordable home. Owner Bill Lewellen, of Lewellen Construction, understands the need to protect this investment - to protect it from unnecessary energy loss, damaging weather and natural day to day abuse.

Lewellen Construction specializes in maintenance-free exteriors. These include U.S. Steel and Revere siding, soffits and fascia, replacement windows and storm windows and doors.

To save energy and reduce costs of and air conditioning, Lewellen Construction offers storm windows and storm doors. Storm windows are available in both aluminum and vinyl. The aluminum storm window are self-storing windows. They are available in a variety of colors to coordinate with siding and trim colors.

Solid vinyl storm windows are available in various styles: single hung, horizontal siders and round top windows. Storm windows are offered in colors of mill, bronze, black, white, tan and grey. Storm doors, both full-view and self-storing are available in these same colors.

Lewellen Construction offers the option of tinted sun glass in windows and doors. "Tinted sun glass will stop 24% of the sun's heat," explains Bill Lewellen. Tinted sun glass is available in solar grey and bronze tints.

Due to the West Texas climate, wooden windows tend to dry out and warp. This allows dust and heat to easily creep into your home. Replacement windows at Lewellen Constructon are custom made to fit each opening.

Replacement windows act to seal your home, prohibiting dust to enter through windows. Air conditioning and heating losses will be cut through the installation of replacement windows.

Lewellen Constructon offers replacement windows in various styles, colors and prices. They are available in basic aluminum ranging to the deluxe solid vinyl.

The deluxe solid vinyl replacement windows are designed with energy saving, cleaning and security features. The glass, which is double insulated, tilts inward for easy claening access. Double cam locks prevent the non-professional burgular from entering your home through windows.

Any questions regarding storm doors and windows, replacement windows, U.S. Steel and Revere siding should be directed to Bill Lewellen at 686-8007. Call Lewellen Constructon to insure a maintenance-free, energy saving home.

Owner Bill Lewellen of Lewellen Constructon demonstrates a solid vinyl replacement window. For information regarding replacement windows, storm windows and storm doors call Bill Lewellen at 686-8007.

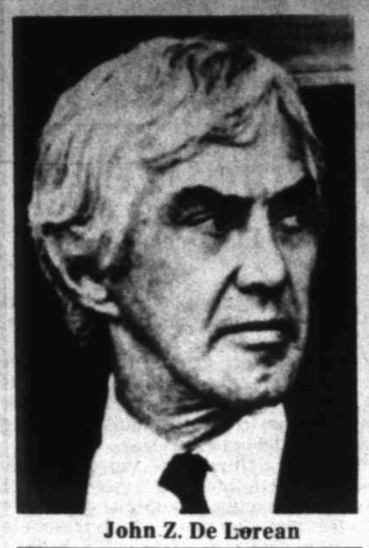
Prosecutors ridicule De Lorean's claims of innocence



John Z. De Lorean

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In newly released court documents, prosecutors ridicule the claims to innocence of John Z. De Lorean, saying anyone caught on videotape as he "fondles cocaine and toasts his future in the narcotics business has few defenses available to him."

The former automaker also offered to invest $2 million in Asian heroin and Colombian cocaine and said it was a "tragedy" when the deal fell through, the government alleged in documents released Thursday by a federal trial judge.

The statements were contained in papers filed by the government in January and unsealed Thursday by U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi, after motions by The Associated Press and the Los Angeles Herald Examiner.

However, after a hearing later Thursday, Takasugi rejected most requests by the two news organizations for access to documents. Having unsealed only five of 28 pretrial papers which were secret, Takasugi said he would consider opening others later.

Takasugi said he still has questions about a 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling ordering the release of documents and he is seeking clarification from the appeals court.

U.S. Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist earlier Thursday turned down an emergency request by De Lorean's attorneys aimed at setting aside the appeals court order.

The 58-year-old De Lorean is charged with conspiring in a cocaine distribution scheme, allegedly devised to pump funds into his failed sports car business based in Northern Ireland.

De Lorean is scheduled to go on trial Aug. 9 along with codefendants William Morgan Hetrick and Stephen Lee Arrington.

U.S. Attorney James Walsh said in the documents that 90 per cent of the government's case will consist of De Lorean's own words and actions recorded by government agents during the "sting" operation which resulted in De Lorean's arrest last October.

"It should be obvious," said Walsh, "that a defendant who is captured in a room with 25 kilograms of high quality Colombian cocaine following a videotape session in which he fondles the cocaine and toasts his future in the narcotics business has few defenses available to him."

One 23-page document released contained the government's account of De Lorean's alleged involvement in a failed drug deal.

In that paper, Walsh ridiculed a defense contention that De Lorean was an unwilling participant in a scheme to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine.

"It is difficult to imagine a more willing participant in a narcotics transaction than John Z. De Lorean," Walsh said, citing as evidence the automaker's behavior on about 100 audio and videotape recordings made by undercover agents.

He spoke of an incident in which De Lorean allegedly offered to invest $2 million "in both an Asian heroin and a Colombian cocaine transaction," but the money became unavailable when it had to be placed in a trust account to satisfy British receivers of De Lorean's bankrupt car company.

"After informing the FBI undercover agents of this temporary setback, De Lorean himself stated, 'I feel as bad about this as you do,' characterized the setback as a 'tragedy' and said 'unless you got some ideas, all I can do is I'll try to develop an alternative,'" the documents said.

"These are hardly the words of an unwilling participant or a withdrawn conspirator," Walsh said in his papers.

He added that De Lorean went on to arrange an alternate format for investing in narcotics by delivering De Lorean Motor Co. stock to a Drug Enforcement Administration undercover agent who De Lorean thought was an organized crime figure.

He suggested that a defense of entrapment raised by De Lorean's lawyers has been "historically unsuccessful in narcotics cases."

"The only thing which distinguishes this case from the routine drug case is the celebrity of one of the defendants," Walsh added.

"De Lorean has cultivated a larger-than-life public image in his business and his social dealings," Walsh said. "He has embraced the spotlight; that it continues to follow him in his time of trouble is not surprising."

Takasugi said other papers which he decided to keep secret contain sensitive information.

Psychologist: Races' mental makeup differs

FORT VALLEY, Ga. (AP) — A recognition that blacks and whites have different mental makeups is growing even though many traditional psychologists ignore it, according to two black psychologists.

"We understand there is a limited knowledge of black psychology and it's a low-visibility thing at this time, but over the next 20 years this issue will become important," said Joseph Baldwin, national president of the Association of Black Psychologists.

He and Na'im Akbar, Southern regional representative for the group, spoke to students and faculty at Fort Valley State College on Thursday about "African-American psychology."

Baldwin is a psychology professor at Florida A&M University. Akbar is a clinical psychologist at Florida State University.

Past oppression of blacks, coupled with the fact they were cut off from their African history, has put them in a singular psychological situation, Baldwin said.

"There is something unique about black people's experience, and it is a legitimate scientific arena for study," he said after the seminar.

Akbar gave an example of how a psychologist unfamiliar with blacks might incorrectly diagnose a client.

"A black person who is suspicious about trusting his welfare to whites might be considered paranoid by a white psychologist," he said. "A black psychologist who understands historically how blacks have been treated by whites would see that as not only normal, but healthy."

He also said white and black psychologies differ in their views on individuality.

"One of the most important ideas in white psychology is the concept of individuality, because it works to the advancement of the achievement of whites," he said. "As an oppressed people, if we (blacks) set ourselves up in terms of individuality, then we continue the oppression, because only by uniting can we change that."

Historically, whites have misidentified psychological disorders in blacks, Akbar said.

One example was Samuel Cartwright, a white psychologist who worked while slavery existed in the United States.

Cartwright identified two disorders suffered by blacks, Baldwin said, neither with much validity.

"'Drapetomania' was the desire of blacks to run away from slavery," he explained, "and 'dysathesia aethopica' was a form of rascality where slaves broke hoes or walked over cotton plants or poisoned cows to get out of work.

"He thought these were mental disorders," Baldwin said. "For whites, (it was) crazy, but for us it was the logical thing to do."

AIDS only acquired through intimacy, doctor says

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A belief that the deadly immune disorder AIDS can be transmitted by casual contact has caused some doctors and nurses to be overly cautious in their treatment of the disease's victims, according to a physician.

AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — can be transmitted only by "intimate, close contact" such as sexual relations, not through medical treatment, Dr. Roy Steigbigel of the University of Rochester Medical Center said Thursday.

He said he knew of some health-care workers who had expressed reluctance to treat AIDS patients and "perhaps done a little less than they might have done," but did not cite examples.

Steigbigel disputed a conclusion by Dr. Roger Cooper Jr. of St. Michael's Medical Center in Newark, N.J., who said medical personnel might be especially vulnerable to contracting AIDS.

Cooper was a co-author of a report this month in the Journal of the American Medical Association that said several infants had experienced AIDS-like symptoms after normal close contact with parents who had the syndrome.

Couple denied class-action route

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Midland couple's $100 million lawsuit against The First National Bank (FNB) and a businesswoman has been greatly reduced after U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton denied a class-action route in the legal dispute.

The case, which alleges a conspiracy between the bank and Jo Ann Jonsson of Christy's Boutique to deny plaintiffs Dale and Joan Paul ownership of the boutique, is set for trial at 9 a.m. June 6 in federal court here.

"We're more than happy to have our day in court," FNB attorney Charles Tighe said Thursday.

His adversary, Odessa lawyer Gerald Fugit, who represents the Pauls, said his case against the bank and Ms. Jonsson is "absolutely the same" despite the absence of the class-action aspect.

"THE SUIT is still against the bank, and the suit is still against Ms. Jonsson," Fugit said Thursday. However, he declined to speculate on how much money the Pauls would seek in the jury trial.

In the initial petition, filed last December, the Pauls had claimed that at least 5,000 other FNB money borrowers were harmed, as they allegedly were, by the bank's "prime floating (interest) rate."

On Oct. 1, 1981, Paul borrowed $50,000 from FNB to make the initial down payment on the boutique, which he and his wife were buying from Ms. Jonsson. That day, Paul, as the boutique's officer, paid off that note with another note and thereby paid no interest on the initial note.

A year later, Ms. Jonsson took over her former business after the Pauls had defaulted on a payment, which Paul claims he was unable to make because he could not secure another $50,000 loan from the bank.

"Mr. Paul admitted (in a deposition) that he would not have sued the bank if it had lent him individually $50,000 in October 1982," Tighe said in his brief in arguing against allowing a class-action suit.

The initial $100 million suit presupposed that the lawsuit would be class-action in nature and apparently was based on at least 5,000 borrowers in the December 1978-December 1982 four-year period joining in the court action.

THE INITIAL $50,000 which Paul borrowed from FNB was at 19.5 percent. But the rate was to be "prime floating," which meant the rate could change with the market. The prime rate rose from 15¾ to 17 percent in February 1982.

Group may challenge misdemeanor law

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

West Texas Legal Services is considering a challenge to the state law that allows suspects in Class C misdemeanor cases to be held for up to five days in lieu of being able to post bond.

Class C misdemeanors — which include disorderly conduct and public intoxication offenses — are tried in municipal court and are punishable by fines, not jail time.

"We've had complaints from people who were kept in jail simply because they could not raise bail," said Gerald Lopez. He is managing attorney for the Midland-Odessa office of the 106-county West Texas district of the federally funded Legal Services program.

Lopez said a challenge of the Texas statute would be based on a recent federal appeals court ruling that overturned a similar law in Virginia.

That decision, dated Sept. 22, 1982, upheld a lower court ruling that it's unconstitutional to jail defendants "for non-incarcerable offenses solely for failure to meet bail."

The case revolved around a man arrested for using abusive language, an offense for which the maximum penalty was a $500 fine. The appeals court decision also ruled that $7,300 in attorney's fees accrued in challenging the law could be collected from the magistrate who ordered the man jailed in lieu of bond.

Lopez said a change in Texas law would not impose a hardship on the judicial process because Class C offenses would be handled the same way traffic violations are handled: A ticket is issued and if defendants don't appear in court on the appointed date, warrants are issued for their arrest.

Lopez expects to meet with other Legal Services attorneys in the West Texas district by August to decide which of their offices will prepare and handle the challenge.

"The way things stand now," he added, "judges are in effect sentencing people to jail on offenses for which they can't be sentenced to jail."

Midland's municipal court judges, James Fitz-Gerald and Michael Abrams, both said they had not seen the appeals court ruling in the Virginia case and declined comment on it.

Abrams, however, added, "The court will continue to follow the appropriate laws of the state of Texas. If they're changed, we will (abide by) the appropriate changes."

Health club's program ends in loss

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

The jokes were as thick as gravy, until the food came.

Then silence fell as the forks made sparks across the plates.

For 16 Midlanders the Incredible Edible program at a local health club began as a painstaking effort, but ended in a delightful loss.

"We've all lost weight on it," said Becky Lacoff, who has dined at The Midlander three times a day for the past week.

Through her past experiences with other health clubs, Vickie Bailey, The Midlander's women's fitness and aerobics director, introduced the one-week weight loss/management program.

"I had people coming to me saying, 'I'm coming (to exercise), but I'm not losing weight," Ms. Bailey said. "When I'd ask them what they were eating, I knew why. So, I thought this would be a fun way to learn how to eat right without giving up foods you like."

Ms. Bailey explained the Incredible Edible program is designed to provide a healthy approach to eating. Calories are controlled through food portions. The "test" group ate three meals, totaling about 800 calories a day and exercised 30 minutes daily.

"If you're interested in permament weight loss, the key is the combination of increased physical activity and reduced caloric intake," Ms. Bailey said.

"I've planned all the menus," she added, explaining the meals were catered by Annie Knowles, a Midland resident.

— Vickie Bailey

Ms. Bailey said the diet is low in salt, devoid of refined sugar and high in natural fiber. While there weren't any large portions of red meat, fish or poultry, Ms. Bailey said about 23 percent of the calories on this diet plan were from protein.

"This level of protein is achieved by properly combining plant and animal products for high quality, complete protein," she said.

Midlander released after being jailed for contempt

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland landowner John Phillip Stroud, who spent 2½ weeks in jail for contempt of court after he refused to testify before a federal grand jury in Midland, was released from jail last week but only after he agreed to appear before the same grand jury next Tuesday.

Federal law provides that a person may be confined for up to 18 months during the term of a grand jury on civil charges of not testifying before the grand jury.

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton ordered Stroud, a partner in the K&S Land Co., jailed after he refused "to answer questions propounded by the federal grand jury" on April 21.

Court records indicate that Stroud was granted immunity in exchange for his testimony.

The 23-member grand jury for several months has been investigating criminal allegations of aerial shooting of wildlife from a three-seater orange and black Hiller helicopter now owned by K&S Land Co. Charles Koonce, 32, company president, said the firm bought the helicopter in February 1982 to show prospective land buyers K&S Land Co.'s ranches, farm land and other holdings for sale.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has been investigating allegations of illegal aerial hunting of wildlife, including eagles, deer and coyotes, by aircraft in the winter of 1981-82 in the McCamey-Fort Stockton area.

Reportedly several hunters in the Midland-Odessa area had used the helicopter to hunt game prior to February 1982, when K&S purchased the aircraft.

The government is alleging that pilot James Clyde Short Jr. flew the helicopter on airborne hunts in 1981 and 1982. Short was the registered owner of the helicopter, a 1976 Hiller Model UH12E, in December 1981 and January 1982, according to Federal Aviation Administration records, the government contends.

Under federal law, any person who "while airborne in an aircraft shoots or attempts to shoot for the purpose of capturing or killing any bird, fish, or other animal" or who "uses an aircraft to harass any bird, fish or other animal" or who "knowingly participates" in an airborne hunt may be fined up to $5,000 or imprisoned up to one year. The offense is a misdemeanor.

The U.S. government last November confiscated the helicopter on grounds the aircraft was a criminal tool even before K&S bought it. Shortly after the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service flew the aircraft from its hangar — a barn — west of Midland, Koonce posted an $82,000 bond to gain release of the aircraft. Through lawyers Al Schorre of Midland and Gary Hill of El Paso, Koonce and Stroud are trying to keep the government from possessing the helicopter.

"They think there's a big conspiracy (to kill wildlife)," Koonce said last month of the federal agents, "and it simply is not true."

While Stroud was jailed for contempt of court, his attorney — Hill — argued to the court that Stroud "is being compelled to answer questions that will tend to incriminate him in violation of the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution."

In his brief to the court, Hill contended that the government's offer of immunity to Stroud did not extend to the government's helicopter forfeiture proceedings. However, in his order last week, Bunton ordered that whatever testimony Stroud gives to the grand jury cannot be used in the forfeiture hearing.

Midland plans to hire second assistant city manager

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Because Midland's business keeps on booming even when the oil boom goes bust, the city plans to hire a second assistant city manager and reorganize responsibilities within the city manager's office, according to City Manager James Brown.

Meanwhile, Midland's Aviation Department is awaiting the arrival of a second assistant director and soon will be hiring a full-time accountant and three operations managers to staff the airport on a 16-hour-a-day basis.

Brown said the city is advertising in trade journals and elsewhere for applicants for the assistant city manager position and may have a candidate selected by the end of May.

He said Assistant City Manager Fred Poe will become the deputy city manager with responsibility for the city garage, and the Aviation, Utilities and Public Works departments. The police, fire and finance departments will report directly to the city manager, Brown said.

The shuffling of responsibilities leaves the assistant city manager responsible for Animal Control, Mid-Tran and the Data Processing, Parks and Recreation, Personnel, Planning and Health departments, according to Brown.

He said the assistant city manager's salary will likely be about $50,000. Brown said Poe earns about $66,000 now and will probably receive the same amount after the new assistant is hired.

"It had become evident that we have too many people reporting to this office," Brown said. "While everybody says things slowed down, our work doesn't slow down. Our problem has been here for some time and our problem is not diminishing. We just needed another assistant to help split this work up."

A study of the city's management recently completed by the Texas Research League recommended the city hire another assistant manager.

Brown said the city had been considering hiring an additional assistant manager for some time, but the lack of space in city hall and the "one crisis after another" management during Midland's recent growth had postponed the move.

Although recent sales tax shortfalls have left the city's budget tight, Brown said hiring a new assistant manager should help make the operation more efficient and perhaps even save money.

"We think that with more supervision and more scrutiny, we might be able to save more money," he said. "With a new assistant, we're going to really be able to sit down and scrutinize our operations."

Aviation Director Victor White said unscrutinized operations are one of the Aviation Department's biggest problems.

White said the new employees should give the department better control of airport maintenance, accounting and other areas which have been neglected in the past.

"We're going to bring this airport more up to the state of the art of airport management," White said.

Tommy Lee Jones, manager of Denton's airport, is expected to begin work June 1 as Midland's assistant director of aviation in charge of operations and maintenance.

White said Jones, who has a bachelors degree in business administration and transportation from the University of Texas-Austin and has extensive airport management experience, will be in charge of aviation activities including maintenance, buildings, housekeeping, security, parking lot operations and coordinating construction.

Darrell Adams, who now serves as White's assistant, will fill the job of assistant director in charge of administration and engineering.

White said the new salaries, including the assistant director's $32,000, will be paid with airport revenue. The new positions will enlarge the department's staff to about 50 people.

White also expects to add an accountant to the department later this year. Shoddy accounting of airport finances is costing the department money in terms of uncollected rent and in some cases the percentages paid to the department on car rental, landing fees, restaurant and bar operations and vending machines, White said.

According to White, the managers will work on rotating shifts so that an Aviation Department official is on duty during all hours of airport operation. He said the managers will be on hand to handle complaints from the public, provide daily facility inspections and perform other duties.

"This is too busy of an airport to not have that," White said. "This way we'll have somebody here for those type of purposes."

White said the aviation accountant will likely earn about $20,000-$23,000 and the operations managers about $18,000-$20,000 annually.

Midland couple denied class-action route

"The use of the prime rate by the defendant bank was and is utterly uncertain, vague, unclear, indefinite, imprecise, misleading, deceptive, arbitrary and unascertainable from day to day," Fugit contended in his argument for a class-action suit. "When interest is couched in such a manner, it is illegal and unlawful..." The Pauls "are just one of several thousands who were caught in this unilateral action" by the bank.

"All who have been borrowers from the defendant bank in the prior four years that have been victims of the rise of the prime rate should be a member of the class," Fugit said. "The common question of law(s) deal(s) with the matter of unjust enrichment, discriminatory trade practices, breach of contract, unconscionability, usury, Racketeer Influence and Corrupt Organizations Act, conspiracy, and in some cases fraud."

Fugit even drafted a proposed class-action notice against the bank. Had the judge allowed a class-action suit, the notice to solicit members of that suit likely would have been published in The Midland Reporter-Telegram. Fugit proposed the bank would pay 95 percent of the cost of publication.

Fugit further noted that "there has been no settlement negotiations" between the Pauls and Ms. Jonsson or her attorney, Jim Boldrick. "There has been no meaningful negotiation with either the defendant First National Bank of Midland or its attorney, Charles Tighe."

IN HIS ORDER denying a class-action suit, Bunton noted that the bank's stance via Tighe "is well taken" but that Fugit in his class-action allegations only established that Christy's Boutique paid interest on a note setting an interest rate at "FNB prime floating" and as to how the bank sets that rate. "Absolutely nothing else has been done to 'protect' whatever class the plaintiffs seek to represent."

In his argument against a class-action suit, Tighe noted that Fugit variously described class as those who were "caught in the upswing of the prime rate as the prime rate gyrated upward and see-sawed upward;" as "all borrowers who have been charged interest at the 'prime rate' and/or 'FNB prime floating' rate at anytime during the applicable period;" and all FNB borrowers from Dec. 6, 1978, to Dec. 6, 1982.

"Is the class plaintiffs seek to represent all borrowers for the same period of time?" Tighe asked. "Does it include those whose interest rates were fixed? Does it include those whose rates were higher and/or lower than the 'FNB prime floating'? Does it include those who enjoyed the 'down turn' in rates as well as those who were 'caught in the upswing?'

"In short," said Tighe, "plaintiffs have failed to carry their threshhold burden of clearly defining and identifying with particularity the class they want to represent."

"Are the plaintiffs aggrieved?" asked Tighe. He said that the Pauls "have no legitimate grievance with the bank. Their grievance comes from losing their business by foreclosure, because they couldn't pay a note Mr. Paul executed to Ms. Jonsson..."

Dead man loses election

EAST TAWAKONI, Texas (AP) — Edward Poland says he's relieved that he won a runoff election for a City Council seat by a vote of 75-39 because losing "wouldn't speak very highly of me."

Poland's opponent was a dead man. C.Q. Williamson, 68, died April 1, seven hours before the polls opened in the first election. He tied Poland 75-75 on April 2.

"It was a funny feeling running against a dead man," Poland said. "I kept thinking well, what if the guy wins? That wouldn't speak very highly of me."

Mayor Andy Van Asperen ordered that both names appear on the ballots in this small city 60 miles east of Dallas.

Poland said he still can't understand why the election was needed, but hopes that the town can now go about it's business.

"I think this should settle the controversy," Poland said after his victory.

U.S. bargain hunters find Mexican paradise

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Bargain-hunting American shoppers have found paradise in Mexico's border cities since last year's peso devaluations, and the local merchants are rejoicing — all the way to the bank.

While sales have plunged sharply on the Texas side of the border and several hundred businesses catering to Mexican shoppers have failed, Matamoros merchants are reaping the benefits of Americans' sudden buying power.

Oscar Martinez, who has worked 13 years for a curios shop in the downtown market area, says sales this year have exceeded his wildest dreams.

"We've had good seasons and bad seasons," Martinez said during an interview that was interrupted several times by American customers.

But, said Martinez, "We've never had (a year) that was so good in 13 years. We're talking about a 100 percent increase over last year."

Martinez says other merchants in the city's market area also are reporting record-breaking sales.

The economic surge apparently is under way all along the U.S.-Mexico border, according to a recent story in Mexico's business daily El Financiero.

The newspaper, which surveyed business leaders in several border cities, said the border area could bring in $1.3 billion in badly needed foreign exchange this year.

Sales are up 50 percent and tourism is up 40 percent in what El Financiero called the "suprising recovery" of the border zone.

Martinez attributes the sales boom solely to the 1982 peso devaluations and the comparative strength of the American dollar.

"They knew they were going to get bargains," Martinez said of his American customers.

"People that didn't come last year did this year because of the devaluation," he said.

In January 1982, Americans could purchase about 27 pesos with a dollar.

Now, the going rate is about 147 pesos to the dollar, which means shoppers could have bought the same item they did last year for about a fifth the cost — if prices had not increased.

Patients return to nursing home as it reopens after 10-day closing

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Ida Rust, complaining of swollen feet brought about by her daughter's "good cooking," returned to the Greencrest Manor Nursing Home and vowed never to leave.

Mrs. Rust was one of five patients who returned to Greencrest Manor as the facility reopened its doors Thursday. The nursing home was temporarily closed by the state after allegations of negligent health care.

"I'm proud to be back," she said, leaning against her cane. "I didn't want to leave here in the first place."

The Texas Department of Health, which ordered the 10-day closing, agreed to the reopening after the nursing home's owner, the Hillhaven Corp. of Tacoma, Wash., submitted a plan of action proposing changes in health care procedures.

"We have made changes to address all of the things the health department felt needed to be changed," said Steve Tricklin, a district director for Hillhaven.

The home was closed May 6 by a health department order delivered by Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Mattox said the closing resulted from a nine-day investigation into alleged improper patient care, including sloppy record keeping, inadequate medical care, poor grooming of patients and improper handling of medication.

Greencrest Manor administrator Martha Ford said she expects 10 more former patients to check in today. The home has commitments from 30 former patients and will also be taking new applicants to the 75 bed facility, she said.

"It's nice to be back in business," Mrs. Ford said.

Robert Bernstein, state commissioner of health, said the plan approved by the state included some staff changes, improved in-service training and updated health care procedures.

A decertification hearing scheduled for next Thursday could be canceled if the changes at the home satisfy health officials.

Although it was mandatory that the group eat their meals at the health club, Ms. Bailey said they were "allowed one piece of fruit at home. But when I told them that, one man chose a watermelon for his fruit.

"That's not quite what I meant," she said, laughing.

"This was my Mother's Day gift," said Lora Smith, adding "I'm not a mother and I'm not married, but my boyfriend thinks I need to lose weight.

"We're used to it (diet) now," she added, while eating the mushroom soup and curried tuna salad for Thursday's lunch.

"I'm ready to do this on a regular basis," said Charles Koch. "Vickie really knows how to make it appetizing."

Mrs. Dan Mendell said after the "first two or three days you don't want that (hamburger). I've come over here to eat, gone back home and watched my family eat pizza."

"This first run has been an experiment and it's worked out beautifully," she said, referring to the $170 diet plan.

Because this week's program was successful, Ms. Bailey said she will try it again, opening it up to 25 participants. She noted that with a larger group and meals cooked at The Midlander the price would drop.

"The key to the success of this program has been the camaraderie," Ms. Bailey said. "They've been an incentive to each other."

Besides counting calories, the week-long program included three lectures. Dr. Brian Mohr, a Midland cardiologist, explained the positive effects of exercise on the heart and the value of aerobic exercise. Alan Schroeder, a clinical psychologist, addressed modifying or changing eating habits, while Joy Payton, a registered nurse and nutritionist, revealed the hidden sugar and calories in different foods.

Today, the last day of the program, all 16 persons were to be tested.

"I'm turning them loose on our regular salad bar," Ms. Bailey said. "This is the big test to see what they have learned."

Montford forces Craddick to 'pay' for bill's opposition

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, is getting a message from Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, that Montford isn't pleased with Craddick's refusal to approve all the "Water for Texas" measures referred to the House Natural Resources Committee which Craddick chairs.

Craddick has indicated he is opposed to SB 1026 by Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, which provides for the Texas Water Commission to allocate water to maintain fresh water inflows to bays and estuaries.

That part of the water package has been opposed by river authorities, but has the support of coastal area legislators and environmentalists, who insist that the provisions must be part of any overall state water effort.

Montford has called the water for bays and estuaries — needed to maintain coastal fishing and fish and shrimp and nursery areas — "part of the price" which must be paid for a statewide water program.

Thursday afternoon, the Senate refused, on a 12-16 vote, to suspend its rules to take up Craddick's HB 1474, setting out authority for rural physicians to maintain supplies of prescription drugs in rural areas without pharmacies.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, failed to convince his colleagues to suspend the rules, and Montford made it clear with questions about Craddick that the opposition wasn't to the bill — but rather to the House author of the bill.

Montford asked Farabee if the author was the same person who was holding up action on the water bills, and Farabee admitted that he was.

"Is he genuinely concerned about these rural counties?" Montford asked.

"He may be," Montford added, "about their drug needs, but not about their water needs."

'Mobile minister' ready to go to jail

HOUSTON (AP) — A minister who parks his mobile wedding chapel outside the Harris County Civil Courthouse says authorities can arrest him for violating a municipal ordinance because "I feel like I'm in the right."

The Rev. Charles Neal, who converted his red and white van into a church earlier this year, said the ordinance against conducting business on public property discriminates against him.

Neal said newspaper vendors, lawyers and other people are allowed to conduct business on the street. He also argued that he does not charge a fee but rather asks for contributions.

Neal, who is pastor of the Abiding Love Wedding Chapel interdenominational church, placed a steeple-like roof on top of his van and plays organ and gospel music from the vehicle's stereo system.

He parked the van in front of the courhouse earlier this year and began looking for couples on their way to civil ceremonies. His aim was to intercept them and talk them into having a religious service, he said.

He charged $19.95 for a simple service and $24.95 for the deluxe model, which includes a color photograph and a cassette tape recording of the wedding.

But Neal said he was ordered to move the last time he assumed his usual spot.

"A sergeant with the Houston police department who had four or five policemen with him told me Tuesday they'd put me in jail and haul my truck off if I continued to park here," Neal said. "He was real nice, but he said if I was on the street (Wednesday), he'd put me in jail."

Neal said he decided not to challenge the police for the rest of the week because he was afraid he would miss the Saturday wedding of his daughter, 18-year-old Linda Darlene Neal.

Big Spring teenager killed in mishap

BIG SPRING — A Big Spring teen-ager died when the pickup truck in which he was a passenger collided with a dump truck near here Thursday afternoon.

Turner, who was riding in the bed of the 1982 Chevrolet pickup, was injured an hour earlier when the driver failed to yield the right of way to a 1978 Chevrolet dump truck, according to the Department of Public Safety.

The accident occurred on the north service road of Interstate 20 as the dump truck was exiting the highway about four miles east of Big Spring. Neither driver was injured.

Tunrer's body was taken to the Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

Physicians' husbands discover married life two-way venture

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Justin Marciano, 52, was raised in a household where he says his father was treated like royalty — always being served and never having to clean up afterward.

"My father was a traditional king-of-the-mountain," said Marciano, 52, an insurance underwriter from suburban Norristown. "He came, sat at the table and somebody served him like he was King Tut."

Such rules haven't applied in Marciano's 25 years of marriage to a doctor.

Men who marry doctors may eat more than their share of frozen food from microwave ovens and can be a little sensitive about who has the bigger paycheck.

But the men with wife-physicians also think they may have blazed a few trails in the changing relations between men and women.

"We're maybe a little further along than the rest of society," said Charles Weinberger, 39, an associate professor of chemical engineering at Drexel University.

With the exception of a month or two off to have their two children, she has worked or studied continuously throughout their seven-year marriage.

"What we're getting to eventually is elimination of the phrase 'working wife,' " Weinberger said. "What we're getting to is both parents working."

"There are huge numbers of women in high-commitment careers," said Dr. Ellen Berman, director of training at the Marriage Council of Philadelphia and associate professor of psychiatry at the University of Pennsylvania.

"Thirty to 40 percent of the students in medical school are women; there are large numbers of women in law school.

"The difference today with 30 years ago is that they (married women) are not expecting to take several years off to stay home and rear their children. So any man who takes that on has got to take on a more equal role."

The professor, the doctor, their 3½-year-old son and 2-year-old daughter march out of the house at 8 a.m., the parents to the university or the hospital and the children to a day-care center where each has been enrolled since the age of 1 month.

Dr. Phyllis Marciano, 51, had twins, the first of the couple's six children, during her senior year of medical school. She has practiced and taught pediatrics most of the time since.

"I don't have a microwave and the kids all wear permanent press," she said. "But our house is not the cleanest in the development."

"It was always a joint venture," Marciano added. "I didn't think of it in terms of we have boys' work and there's girls' work. To me it was like it was our work.

"Really you have to bend. A lot of times I would rearrange my schedule because she just couldn't rearrange hers," he said.

Sara Taubin, a professor of family studies at Drexel University, said marriages between professionals appeared to work best when husbands adopted the attitude that raising the family was a shared responsibility.

"What doesn't help is if the husband says he is helping out," she said. "It's the wrong question to ask, 'Who does it?,' anymore.

"It takes an intelligent man, a secure man, who wants space in his life and can pursue his own interests," she added.

Robert Wenger, 25, the son of two doctors, said that he had been raised in the company of numerous women doctors at the once all-female Medical College of Pennsylvania where his mother still teaches.

"I didn't think men were allowed to be doctors," he said.

His mother wasn't a great cook, he said, so his father did most of the shopping and much of the cooking.

Deaf dance students 'feel' beat of music

Christie Abrams, 10, of Greenbrier, her 6-year-old sister, Stacy, and their friend, Jessica Jones, 9, of Little Rock meet for 1½ hours once each week at the Little Rock School of Dance.

Christie and Stacy are congenitally deaf from causes unknown. Their mother, Betty Abrams, has normal hearing. With their hands, Christie, Stacy and Jessica chatter like any outgoing, animated little girls.

They say they can hear a little of the music, but they can feel it better. As they dance, they keep their eyes on their instructor, Sheila Vaught, as she leads them through routines in preparation for their first recital this summer in Little Rock.

"They watch me, everything that I do," Mrs. Vaught said in a recent telephone interview. "They're all three very bright girls."

Sometimes they feel the vibration of the music, she said. For their tap classes, Mrs. Vaught uses a machine that produces no notes, just rhythmic beats. The girls also take ballet, jazz and gymnastics with their classmates. "They learn by watching us," says their teacher.

Jessica's parents are Johnny and Judy Jones. Both are deaf.

The girls also are members of the eight-member dance group at the Arkansas School for the Deaf, where they are students. The group performs for the elderly and ailing in homes and hospitals, doing dance routines and singing songs through sign language.

They dance, Mrs. Abrams said, "because they want to" and seldom look on deafness as a handicap. Mrs. Vaught communicates through gestures and speech and with the help of other students in the class. Some of them can converse in limited sign language.

Camera gadgets

By HOLT CONFER
Copley News Service

There really isn't any way a person can be in this business very long and not recognize the need for some kind of unusual mechanical, electrical or electronic device to help solve an unusual photographic problem.

For example, I often use several Vivitar strobe units when I shoot close-ups of people or inanimate objects.

I have a 285 that I attach to a special handle equipped with the same kind of tracks you'd normally find on a hot shoe. The problem with the handle was that it was built in one piece so that when it was necessary to shoot vertically instead of horizontally, I had to slip the strobe out of the tracks so that I could hold it in its normal position while I turned the camera vertically.

Now all of this in-and-out activity begins to takes its toll on the equipment. The fitting on the strobe that fits into the hot shoe tracks isn't built to stand a whole lot of abuse — a slight sideways pressure will often break the fitting loose from the light.

I asked the Vivitar people why this fitting couldn't be strenghtened since I'd heard at one time it was made out of metal. They told me that making the foot too strong creates another problem — instead of breaking, as mine did, the extra strong foot pulls the hot shoe off the camera — and then the repair bills get very large.

So to solve this problem (since I'd already broken the foot section twice) the Vivitar folks sent me a flash holder to try out. On this one, the handle breaks away from the base that holds the camera. At least it will eliminate sliding the strobe in and out of the shoe on the handle. Incidentally, that shoe rotates through 360 degrees so it's possible to aim your light in any direction.

Renovation work gives swimming pool facelift

Copley News Service

Modernizing or cleaning up your pool can upgrade the value of your property if you plan to sell your home or it can simply make poolside life much more enjoyable for your family.

There are several ways to renovate a pool, from repainting, retiling, plastering and fiberglassing to complete rebuilding of the pool. The cost of the job will depend on your location, size of the pool and material you choose, but a simple paint job can cost as little as $400, while a major rebuilding can run over $30,000. Most renovations range from $1,000 to $8,000, with the majority somewhere in the middle of that range.

Although ambitious do-it-yourselfers may consider performing their own renovations, there are many factors to consider in what can be an extremely complicated and sometimes dangerous job. For example, mixing and spreading plaster sounds like a relatively simple task. But if you use too much sand in the mixture, it won't bond to the pool. If you let the first coat dry too long, the second coat won't hold. And if too much color is added, the plaster will become weak and may fall off the pool soon after the job is completed.

Fiberglassing is a delicate process, due to the flammability of the materials used. Smoking is definitely out during the process of fiberglassing a pool. And the unused material left in a bucket can generate heat if not doused with water. Some pools require an acid wash prior to applying fiberglass, while others, such as metal pools, need a special wash primer to permit the fiberglass to adhere.

Considering these factors, repainting is probably the best choice for the do-it-yourself pool renovator, according to the pool-care experts at Polaris Vac-Sweep. The advantages in using paint to update your pool's looks and performance are numerous.

No special training or costly equipment is required to paint a pool.

Algae doesn't grow as freely in a painted pool because the paint covers the dirt-collecting pockets on the pool wall and floor. Paint contains no elements that support the growth of algae.

Painted pools have a smooth, nonporous surface film that resists discoloration and staining while providing a waterproof membrane on the pool interior.

There are several things to keep in mind when considering painting your pool. First, be sure that you choose a paint formulated for swimming pools. There are two main types of paint used for pools — epoxy and chlorinated rubber. The two paints don't mix, so be sure you don't try to apply one kind of paint to a pool that was previously painted with the other type.

If you aren't sure which type of paint your pool has on it, rub some rubber-based paint thinner on the surface. If the paint gets very soft — so that you can dent it with your fingernail or a sharp object — then it is chlorinated rubber paint.

Many people prefer epoxy paint because you can drain, paint and refill your pool in less than a week during good weather. With rubber paints, you have to allow the paint to dry for a week to 10 days before refilling the pool.

Scriptures on nudity

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A reader who was also a nudist tried to justify nakedness by quoting Scripture (Genesis 2:25): "And they were both naked, the man and his wife, and they were not ashamed."

Had he gone on to read Genesis, Chapter 3, he would have learned that Satan appeared in the Garden of Eden and tempted Adam and Eve to eat of the forbidden fruit that would give them the knowledge to discern good from evil. So they ate the forbidden fruit. Then they knew they were naked and became ashamed, so they sewed fig leaves together and made themselves aprons to cover their nakedness.

The Lord then rebuked them with, "Who told thee thou wast naked?" And from that time on, the beauty and innocence of nudity were to be forever a thing of the past.

What sayest then, fair Abigail? — STUDENT OF THE SCRIPTURES

DEAR STUDENT: I sayest that was the first major coverup known to man.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can give me a confidential reply through your column because I do not want to disclose my name. I sent a check to a mail-order firm for a sex manual — one of those "how to" books that one sees advertised in catalogs. My check was cashed, but I never received the book or a refund.

Is it illegal to order or receive such a book through the mail? Would the post office have confiscated it? Or do you think I was ripped off? I have the name and address of the firm.

Maybe I should explain why I ordered it so you won't think I'm some kind of pervert. I'm an adult married man who is too embarrassed to discuss such things with a doctor and too self-conscious to go into a bookstore and buy such a book off the shelf. — CURIOUS YELLOW

DEAR CURIOUS: Send a registered letter to the firm from which you ordered the book, advising the firm that the book was not received. If your letter is ignored, notify your postmaster.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can help me. I've been married almost 23 years, but haven't seen my husband in 21 years. He walked out on me, and I have no idea where he is.

I want to find out if he has divorced me. And if he hasn't, how can I divorce him without having to pay the kind of money a lawyer wants? Also, isn't there a law that says that after a certain number of years of not hearing from your husband, you can just presume he's either dead or has deserted you, and no divorce is necessary?

I've talked to several lawyers and the lowest fee was $350 to free me to marry again. You see, I met this terrific man who wants to marry me, and he offered to pay for my divorce if I need one.

Answer soon. I don't want to lose this guy. — WHERE DO I STAND?

DEAR WHERE: I am constantly amazed at the number of people who will gladly pay a physician to cure their physical ills but would begrudge a lawyer a reasonable fee for straightening out their legal woes.

Weeding, thinning gardens encourages healthier plants

Copley News Service

Home gardeners spend a great deal of time at this time of the year either stooping over or getting right down to earth on their hands and knees. There's not much choice when those rows or blocks of vegetables and annual flowers are well up and in need of thinning and weeding.

It's not a job everyone likes, hunched over the small, crowded plants, straining to spot the most robust to leave while uprooting the weaker ones. There's nothing like it for bringing on a good growth spurt in the plants.

For joints and bones no longer in their first flush of youth, it's a great help during this weeding and thinning operation to shift postures often. And it gives the body some additional exercise at the same time. A kneeling pad of foam or carpet underlay or some such cushioned material will help preserve the old knee bones.

But on with the job. For vegetables that can be used small, don't aim for the final spacing for mature vegetables right away. Carrots, radishes, spinach, kohlrabi and lettuce can all be thinned by degrees. The first thinnings of leafy vegetables, though small, can be used in salads and sandwich fillings. The second thinning of radishes and carrots and beets usually will yield small but tasty edibles.

Thin by degrees even the larger vegetables, like corn, lest some fall prey to pests later on. Never thin peas or beans, but leave them in quite close company, the peas 1 inch and the bush beans 2 inches apart.

Home taxes may rise

Copley News Service

The government giveth and the government taketh away. At least, that's the way many real estate industry leaders are interpreting current indicators that could change tax laws this year.

Home owners could be hit hard by these changes, if currently proposed and simmering tax changes boil over into new legislation. And the pressure is on to make it happen during the 1983 tax-legislation season.

Changes could adversely affect a home owner's plan to sell a home and defer tax on the profit. It could also scuttle plans to make energy-conserving improvements to a home and receive substantial tax credits.

These changes are among the 29 revenue-raising options proposed to the House and Senate by the Congressional Budget Office.

The proposals are the result of a new push to generate additional tax revenues, particularly in the wake of the emergency Social Security bail-out bill.

The proposal that probably worries home owners and real estate brokers most is to tax 10 percent of the gain (profit) immediately on home sales. This would change the present system of deferring all tax on the gain if the seller purchased another home of equal or greater value.

It would also change the current $125,000 tax-free exclusion for older sellers. The imposition of an immediate 10 percent tax could raise $4.4 billion in just four years, it was reported.

Another proposal would repeal the residential energy tax credits. As it now stands, home owners and renters can take a credit equal to 15 percent of the first $2,000 they spend on insulation and other energy-conservation home improvements.

Home owners can also benefit from a 40 percent tax credit on the first $10,000 invested in certain solar and other "renewable" energy improvements.

"There is little evidence thus far that these credits have been effective in promoting energy conservation," it was noted in the proposal to repeal the credit. If it is so repealed, it would save an estimated $2 billion in revenues over the next four years.

Still another proposal would lengthen the depreciation period for rental buildings, generally decreasing the tax advantages in owning and building rental units. One proposal would eliminate tax credits for preserving and renovating older buildings.

Cross-stitch method for runner, napkins

Copley News Service

Angels are easy to cross-stitch on even-weave cloth. The result: a beautiful table runner and napkins for special occasions.

Cross-stitch is one of the simplest, most popular forms of embroidery. It appears in the finest decorative textiles, folk costumes and contemporary fashions from all over the world.

In this country, however, many people still think of cross-stitch as covering blue lines on pre-stamped dish towels, sheets and pillowcases. Little by little, though, Americans are discovering the "counted thread" method used in the rest of the world.

By counting threads in an even-weave cloth, it's easy to copy a cross-stitch design from a printed graph. Each square in the graph represents one square, or intersection of vertical and horizontal threads, in your fabric.

Fabric for counted cross-stitching includes aida cloth, hardanger cloth, linen and other even-weave fabrics. The table runner and matching napkins, described below, are made from red aida cloth.

Author Mary Gostelow designed the angel table set for "The Cross Stitch Book," published by Van Nostrand Reinhold. In her book, Gostelow presents cross-stitch designs from China, Russia and the Mideast, along with her own original designs and projects.

Gostelow also includes directions for transferring any design to cross-stitch, all basic instructions, and stitch variations. Her angel design, like others in the book, is easy to do.

CUTTING: 1. Cut cloth to 8-by-60 inches. For the runner, cut away 41 inches. 2. Cut two 7-by-7-inch napkins from remainder of the 8-by-60-inch cloth. 3. Cut eight more napkins from remaining 7-by-60-inch cloth.

FRINGES: 1. Unravel edges of napkins and runner to create fringes all around. 2. Machine-stitch around napkins and runner, just inside fringes. Use zigzag machine setting and matching sewing thread. 3. Tack a center line from one end of the runner to the other.

STITCHING THE ANGELS: 1. Thread needle with two strands of embroidery floss. 2. At one end of the runner, work two angels, putting stitch (A) 12 squares up from the end of the runner and 6 squares over from the center line. 3. Work angels on other end of runner. 4. Remove center line. 5. Stitch angels on napkins so that stitch (B) is 12 squares up and 12 squares over from the corner.

CROSS-STITCH TIPS: 1. Make one cross-stitch (C) over a square of fabric for each square in the angel graph illustrated. 2. Stitch over intersections in fabric, where vertical and horizontal threads meet. 3. Use the same holes for adjacent stitches so that all crosses touch. 4. Instead of knotting ends, hide by running through threads in back of the fabric.

Varied sewing arts quilting to knitting

Well, my ribbon vest fell through. Want to know why? I got bored! B-o-r-e-d, bored.

Row after row of ribbon, on and on ... I just fell apart. If you have made a ribbon vest, I don't want to know about it.

There are all types of "artists" in the sewing world. Those who tailor, those who knit, those who quilt, those who make dozens and dozens of one thing. All types. Which type are you?

Don't feel put down if you don't like to tailor or quilt. Who cares? Your talent and personality may fit better into another area.

From spring through fall, decorators and charitable causes join together in many American cities to produce that warm-weather extravaganza known as the decorator showhouse.

As an exercise in winning, it's hard to imagine a better example than the showhouse. Worthwhile causes are supported through ticket sales; old houses get a new lease on life through refurbishing; decorators gain new clients. And for a small, usually tax-deductible fee, visitors get to revitalize their decorating thinking and come away with ideas they can put into effect themselves or with the names of decorators whose work they admire.

Visits to two showhouses recently in the New York area turned up many ideas an individual could adapt in her own home. And a talk with the chairman of one of the showhouses — Joyce Miller of the Junior League of Greater Bridgeport, Conn. — established that the $70,000 or so the group expects to raise in the month-long showhouse at Burr Homestead in Fairfield, Conn., will be used to support many community projects.

Mrs. Miller said the league's earlier showhouses had helped rehabilitate the mansion owned by the town of Fairfield. Last year, 30,000 people attended events held at the Burr Mansion which is rented out for a variety of public and private functions.

At the Kips Boys' Club Showhouse at a Fifth Avenue mansion in New York, a similar story of funds to benefit a worthwhile project was told.

At both showhouses, basic decorating ideas for walls and window treatments as well as color schemes, furniture arrangement and use and arrangements of accessories were covered in depth.

New ways of thinking about paint were well demonstrated at Burr Homestead. In one room, for example, paint was used to simulate a costly-looking, suede-like finish on the walls.

"It's really quite simple to do," said Trudy Ludwig, a decorator. "You use three coats. The first coat is a flat oil paint in the lighest color you plan to use. Step two is to sponge on a darker coat. We used bunched-up paper towels to apply the color." A final coat of a matte finish completed the job.

Mrs. Ludwig also used paint to create a faux marble finish on woodwork. Using a sponge and feathers dipped into several paint colors, she created a marble-like veining that was no more costly than the paint itself, though it contributed to a room that looked rich enough for an emperor.

Another easily copied idea employed wallpaper panels in place of paintings. The panels of Chinese scenes were hung in a passageway by designers Lena Polzello and Marilyn Kohn. The two women framed each panel with wood mouldings to create the effect of a series of framed art works.

He recreated the swag and bow in an actual window treatment for an effective room that is entirely original, yet moderate in cost. Bygott said the use of wallpaper border produced a rich effect for a rather small outlay of effort and expenditure.

Susan Anthony of Laura Ashley Inc. used paint to transform a piece of furniture in a nursery. She painted a trompe l'oeil design on the front and sides of a pine armoire so that the furniture resembled an Edwardian townhouse whose doors and windows opened to reveal drawers and storage cubbies for clothing and other items.

She said it was relatively simple to transform an unpainted cabinet or chest into a room's focal point. To execute the finished design, she starts by painting the piece white, then copies the pattern directly onto the furniture, and then applies the necessary colors for her design.

Those wishing to emulate the idea should check with a paint retailer about the proper paints and how to apply them, she said. She also advised looking for a suitable pattern by checking in a book of old house designs.

Stretch home decorating dollars with creative ideas

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. I'm moving into a new home with very little furniture but with the desire to create a lovely setting.

I will have just enough money to buy a sofa and pair of chairs or maybe a two-piece sectional and some tables. There will be little left for window and floor coverings and all the other accessories so important.

Do you have some ideas for stretching my decorating dollars? — N.R.

A. You might be inspired by some designers who created an elegant and interesting room using a toasty rose-colored velvet sofa as the key furnishing.

To stretch their decorating dollars they bought a 9-by-10 foot remnant of linoleum which they painted blue and then splattered on an assortment of soft pastels including pale rose.

A similar effect was created using muslin dyed pale blue and splattered with the same pastel shades. The muslin was used for window shades and was also framed and used as a wall hanging.

Those elements cost only pennies but produced dollars worth of drama.

Q. We recently moved into a rented apartment which has horizontal mini-blinds in my daughter's bedroom. She is only 6 years old and so I would like something else at the windows. However, I don't think I should take the blinds down. And I do like the privacy she has with them.

What might I do to make the mini-blinds more attractive? — P.B.

A. You could do great things with fabric. Why don't you choose some terrific sheets and comforter for her bed in a pattern and colors you especially like and that blend with your walls and mini-blinds.

Paper to open plant in The Hague

PARIS (AP) — The International Herald Tribune said today it plans to open a new printing operation near the Hague, the capital of the Netherlands, in October to serve readers in northern Europe.

The plant will be the sixth for the daily, which is published in Paris and currently printed simultaneously in Paris, London, Zurich, Hong Kong and Singapore.

Publisher Lee W. Huebner said the paper, which is sold in 164 countries, was exploring other printing possibilities in southern Europe and the Middle East.

Casbah's walls crumbling down

Funds allocated to rebuild city

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — The legendary line "come with me to the Casbah" has lost its glamour and mystery. The ancient heart of Algeria's capital has become a derelict, rat-infested slum.

The government of President Chadli Bendjedid has allocated the equivalent of $180 million to preserve the crumbling labyrinth of alleys and courtyards described as a "citadel of the nation's culture and history."

But experts from UNESCO — the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization — who spent two years drawing up plans for saving the Casbah, concluded that 10 times as much money may be needed for the job.

The chronic housing shortage and the drop in Algeria's oil revenues have severely limited the funds available for safeguarding the nation's cultural heritage.

AN ESTIMATED 100,000 Algerians, many among the poorest of Algiers' 2.5 million inhabitants, live jammed together in the 1,700 buildings of the Casbah. Families of eight or 10 often live crowded into a single rented room in primitive, unsanitary conditions.

Before the derelict houses can be demolished and rebuilt, accommodation must be found for the occupants. Since 1975, more than 200 four- and five-story Casbah houses, many of them at least two centuries old, have collapsed. There is no public record of the deaths or injuries. The survivors are housed in tents, sometimes for months, awaiting accommodation in outlying suburbs.

To the visitor approaching Algiers from the sea, the Casbah is a cascade of white-painted terraces descending steeply to the harbor, seemingly as solid as when they were built in the early 18th century following a disastrous 1716 earthquake.

The Turkish dey, or viceroy, ordered the reconstruction as proof against further tremors, and the houses were built more solidly than was customary at the time. But the materials have not withstood the damp and rain of centuries. Housing Minister Ahmed Ali Ghazali says most of the houses are beyond repair, though he adds:

"We intend to demolish only what is really irretrievable."

A START HAS been made in the Casbah's Lallahoum section, where 300 families were evacuated from houses in imminent danger of collapse. Some residents protested, but in vain.

Most of the houses are privately owned. The landlords, who often collect rent from dozens of families in a single house, claim they lack the means to undertake repairs.

The Casbah covers a hillside of 115 acres. During French colonial rule, it was the center of the city's Moslem inhabitants and acquired a largely undeserved reputation of danger, intrigue and immorality. During the eight-year Algerian war of independence, its network of dark alleys and passageways became a hotbed of guerrilla activity brutally crushed by French paratroopers in the 1957 battle of Algiers.

On some walls, faded "off limits" signs can still be seen, dating from the World War II occupation of the city by British and American troops.

Since Algeria's 1962 independence, peace has returned to the Casbah, but its population has more than doubled. Artisans, shoemakers and tailors occupy many of the crumbling basements, and there are many small cafes and groceries.

MANY OF THE occupants observe the cracks in the walls with as much concern as they feel about the official evacuation of the most dangerous areas. There is widespread controversy over whether priority should be given to preserving the Casbah or to providing modern housing for the inhabitants on the site of demolished buildings.

Traditionalists shudder at the prospect of a superhighway, a subway station, a high-rise parking garage and a giant bus station that are planned for the very edge of the Casbah.

"People like living here," said jeweler Mohamed Benaid in his Casbah workshop. "They don't want to be moved into tents or into far-distant suburbs. So when they see cracks in their walls, they try to shore them up with planks of wood or hide them with sheets of tarpaulin.

"We kow most of us will eventually have to leave. But it would be heartbreaking if the planners were then allowed to turn our Casbah into a concrete desert."

It's a far cry from the 1930s when French actor Jean Gabin uttered the immortal invitation to his heroine, "come with me to the Casbah," in the French film "Pepe Le Moko," later remade in the Hollywood classic "Algiers" starring Charles Boyer and Hedy Lamarr.

6-year-old corrects book

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — One of the nation's largest textbook publishers is correcting an error in a science book because a talented 6-year-old boy spotted it and complained.

James E. Brown III, a straight-A first-grader whose hobby is reading about science and dinosaurs, knew something was wrong when he read in Reading About Science, Skills and Concepts Level C that Mercury was the hottest planet.

James knew that Mercury can reach only 648 degrees Fahrenheit. Venus can hit a temperature of 896 degrees.

His teacher, Deborah Austin at Eisenhower Elementary School, said James "wasn't happy with saying, 'Yes, they made a mistake.' He had to make sure it would be corrected."

With Ms. Austin's help, the youngster pointed out the error in a letter to publisher McGraw-Hill Book Co. in New York. McGraw-Hill acknowledged the mistake, said thanks, congratulated James for his research and assured him, "We will make the change in the next printing of our science readers."

Ms. Austin said that when James first noticed he error, "he came up and said, 'This isn't right.' At first, we let it go. Then he asked if he could check it further. He came back with a book showing he was correct."

"He had a Space Calendar at home which also showed he was right," she said. "It was his idea to write a letter to the publishing company."

Daniel McCrimmon, left, and Steven Fromholz, collectively known as Frummox, will perform tonight and Saturday at the Polo Grounds restaurant, 3325 Wadley Ave. After an almost 12-year hiatus from performing together, the two reunited in 1982 to cut "Frommox II," which recreates the sound they became famous for in Austin during the late '60s and early '70s. Their first album "From Here to There" includes "Texas Trilogy" and "Dear Dacey," both written by Fromholtz.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Pregnant women should consume animal products

Dear Dr. Solomon: Does a pregnant woman who is a vegetarian have to do anything special about her diet? I don't want to eat meat, but I do want a healthy baby. Any suggestions? — Mrs. K.G., Silver Spring, Md.

Solomon

Dear Mrs. G.: Pregnant women who are vegetarians but who include milk and egg products in their diets generally have adequate nutrition. However, women who avoid all animal products during pregnancy may give birth to smaller-than-normal infants.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been trying to get my husband to stop drinking and smoking because he has a peptic ulcer. He says he can stop drinking, but it would make him too nervous not to have a cigarette when he wants one. Can cutting out the booze help his ulcer? — May, New York City

Dear May: Eliminating the use of alcohol is a very big step, and I would not minimize its value in contributing to your husband's overall good health. However, there are indications that smoking rather than drinking is associated with the development of peptic ulcers.

David R. Baines, a student at the Mayo Medical School in Rochester, Minn., studied about 150 alcoholic men and women. Although it was found that they developed peptic ulcers more frequently than did non-alcoholics, the increase appeared to be due to cigarette smoking rather than to the use of alcohol.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know a young woman who is very much overweight but she says she is anemic. I always thought that only skinny people could be anemic. If I'm wrong, can you tell me what it is that decides whether a person is anemic? — Dorothy, Bakersfield, Calif.

Dear Dorothy: Anemia refers to a low number of healthy red cells in the blood. The condition may occur regardless of a person's weight. The main purpose of these cells is to carry oxygen from the lungs to the tissues, and to carry carbon dioxide from the tissues to the lungs. A person who is anemic and whose tissues are therefore receiving less oxygen, may experience weakness and shortness of breath.

According to Dr. Farid I. Haurani, of the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, anemia may occur if there is an excessive loss of red blood cells from the circulation, and if the bone marrow, where these cells are made, is not capable of replacing them. The production of ineffective cells or the production of too few cells are other causes of anemia.

For Juanette, Jackson Miss.: Mortality of infants around the time of birth is about the same whether or not the mother is diabetic. However, diabetic women are more likely to have babies with congenital abnormalities.

Dr. John Hobbins, of the Yale University School of Medicine in New Haven, says that the possibility of an abnormality depends on how well the mother's diabetes is controlled. In poorly controlled diabetic women, the incidence may be as high as 25 percent. The average however, is eight percent.

University course is too good to be true

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Finally, a college course so good it melts in your mouth: Botany 20, the study of chocolate.

Eight hundred students signed up for the 35 available places in the class at the University of California-Berkeley. Those who got in found that chocolate was more than just a yummy mouthful.

Botanist John A. West, who devised the course, told about the floral anatomy of cocoa, basic modes of propagation and the effect of surface tilling on a cocoa plantation.

Of course, they also were required to sample milk chocolate, bittersweet, semi-sweet and chocolate chips. And there's a compulsory field trip to a chocolate factory. There was even a lecture devoted to carob.

University officials weren't initially sweet on the course, said West.

"I finally got the department to approve it... I think there was some skepticism," he said.

Search goes on for lovers' killer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Police say they still have no indication who is responsible for two "lovers lane" shootings that injured four people, including a college student who died of her wounds.

Catherine Marie Britt, 22, of Towson, died Thursday of injuries suffered in the attack Sunday. Her boyfriend, James Rhodes, 23, of Bel Air was in serious condition with a gunshot wound to the chest.

Baltimore County police said the .25-caliber automatic weapon used in that assault was also used in a shooting April 16 that injured another couple. "We still have no indication who the suspect is," said Major Jospeh H. Zerhusen, a member of the task force investigating the shootings.

Parents of 30 children give love

ELIZABETH, N.J. (AP) — Joanne and Billy Sheptock say they want to give their children "unconditional love" — all 30 of them.

The Sheptocks, who have seven biological children and began adopting children 13 years ago, welcomed four new members to their family Thursday, bringing the number of children in the household to 30.

Union Superior Judge Edward W. McGrath signed documents giving the Sheptocks custody of Jonathan, 9; Joseph, 10; and a pair of sisters, Mary Sue, 10, and Mary Jean, 11.

"The judge commented that if the Sheptocks adopt any more children, they'll have their own municipality," said court clerk Grace Dennigen.

Teacher may get life sentence

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A teacher who pleaded guilty to four counts of sexual assault stemming from attacks on his young pupils faces an automatic life sentence on each charge.

Sentencing was set for July 15 for Stephen Boatwright, 35, who told Washoe County District Judge John Barrett on Thursday that he pleaded guilty because he didn't want the youngsters to be subjected to the trauma of testifying in a jury trial.

Police alleged that while Boatwright was a teacher at the Papoose Palace Academy, he lured as many as 75 children, ranging in age from 2½ to 12 years, into a basement storage area and molested them.

Troop leader may seek new trial

KIRKSVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Attorneys say they may seek a new trial for Kenneth Willard, a former assistant Boy Scout leader who was convicted of branding six Scouts during a camping trip.

Willard was found guilty on six counts of assault Thursday by Adair County Circuit Judge Bruce Normile in a non-jury trial.

Willard and another man were accused of using a heated clothes hanger to brand the six boys on the arm or buttocks.

Experts seek cause of explosion

MARIETTA, Ohio (AP) — Authorities were seeking the cause of an explosion and fire that killed one maintenance worker and injured seven others at the Elkem Metals Co. plant here.

The fire, which broke out around 1:50 p.m. Thursday, was the second in four months in one section of the metalworking plant, said Dick Petrie, Elkem's superintendent of employee relations.

Two of the injured were taken to the burn unit of a Pittsburgh hospital, while the five others were hospitalized in Marietta and Parkersburg, W.Va.

Consultant connected with 14 murders in three states

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post New Service

SANTA ANA, Calif. — Orange County authorities said Thursday they have evidence that links 38-year-old computer consultant Randy Steven Kraft to the strangulation murders of 14 men in three states since September 1979.

Sheriff Brad Gates said investigators are also looking at Kraft as a possible suspect in an undetermined number of additional unsolved deaths in Orange County, south of Los Angeles, dating back to 1972.

Kraft's roommate, Jeff Alan Seelig, 25, is being considered "a potential suspect in some of the killings," Gates added. Seelig's attorney called that statement absurd.

The 14 murders, which took place in Southern California, Oregon and Michigan, were of young men, many of them in their 20s or teen years who may have been hitchiking.

Some of the killings, authorities said, had "homosexual overtones," but they would not elaborate.

Kraft has been in custody since Saturday, when two California Highway Patrol officers pulled him over on Interstate 5 in Mission Viejo south of here and discovered a passenger in his car who was near death. Terry Lee Gambrel, 25, a Marine from El Toro, Calif., died later of strangulation. He is one of the 14 victims.

Orange County Deputy District Attorney Bryan Brown said this week that murder charges will be filed against Kraft in Gambrel's murder and that of 19-year-old Wayne Loggins of Montclair, Calif., whose body was discovered in south Orange County in 1980.

Meanwhile, investigators from Oregon and Michigan have been in Orange County since Sunday, conferring with sheriff's deputies and local police.

Oregon authorities said Kraft is a "definite suspect" in six murders there. A Michigan State Police captain said "we're looking at him for two here."

Drug bust leads to arrest of movie author, nobleman

NEW YORK (AP) — An airport heroin arrest has led to drug charges against 16 people, including a British nobleman and the author who inspired the hit movie "Saturday Night Fever," authorities say.

Writer Nik Cohn, Ian Ben Brierley, ex-husband of singer Marianne Faithful, and John Jermyn, a British earl, were arrested Thursday along with 13 other people on the basis of wire taps, according to a complaint filed Thursday in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn.

The tap was on the telephone of Frances Mullin, 32, of Manhattan, according to the complaint. She also was arrested.

All 16 were charged with conspiracy to distribute narcotics. The charge carries a penalty of up to 15 years in prison.

Senate revenue plan could increase taxes, cut deficits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defying both President Reagan and Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., the Republican-led Senate narrowly approved a 1984 spending and revenue plan which would permit a $9.9 billion tax increase next year, and $75 billion over the next three years.

In a dramatic 50 to 49 roll call vote minutes before midnight Thursday, the Senate gave a stunning victory to a small band of Republican moderates and minority Democrats who said attacking swelling federal deficits with higher taxes is the key to economic recovery.

Their opponents, led by Baker, argued for higher defense spending and against any budget which threatened all or part of this year's 10 percent income tax cut.

The Senate budget resolution sets up tough negotiations with members of the Democratically-controlled House; which previously approved a budget plan with far higher taxes and a far-slower defense buildup over the next five years.

The final budget blueprint left the Senate after a tense day of wild, seesaw legislative battles in which the outcome was in doubt until the very end.

The winning plan was drafted by freshman GOP Sen. Slade Gorton of Washington and was approved only after the Senate had taken nine previous roll call votes on budget alternatives of wide extremes.

Meanwhile, the Senate appears to be on its way to confirming former Sen. Richard Stone as Reagan's Central American troubleshooter despite initial misgivings about his work for the fallen government of Guatemala.

Stone, 54, a Democratic senator from Florida from 1974 until 1980, was nominated by Reagan on April 28 as special representative to the troubled Central American region.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee scheduled a confirmation hearing today, with some committee officials predicting sharp questions about administration policy in Central America, but no opposition to the nominee.

Another congressional committee, meanwhile, heard testimony Thursday on another aspect of Reagan's Central America policy — strategy and military aid levels for El Salvador.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz told the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations that Congress should give the administration all it wants for Salvador so that the Salvadoran government would be in a stronger position to end the war with leftist guerrillas through negotiations.

In other developments Thursday on Capitol Hill:

— A White House official told a congressional subcommittee that marijuana use is dropping in the United States as users become more aware of health risks and government agencies reduce the supply.

Carlton E. Turner, special assistant to the president for drug abuse policy, said 40 states and the federal government now have programs to destroy U.S.-grown cannabis plants that produce marijuana.

Father wants reward for returning son's arrest

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — The father of a convicted killer claims he is entitled to $30,000 in reward money because his tip to police led to his son's arrest.

Raymond Lee Miller, a 60-year-old retired bakery worker and the father of Ray Lee Stewart, has made his claim in letters to more than a dozen corporations and organizations that put up reward money during the intense investigation that followed his son's killing spree.

Stewart was convicted in a series of six slayings that terrorized Rockford and Beloit, Wis., for a week in early 1981. He currently is on Death Row at the Menard Correctional Facility.

William M. Flaherty, a lawyer representing Miller, hinted Thursday that he would file suit against those who offered the rewards if his client is not paid.

"There may be litigation," Flaherty said. "I haven't threatened anybody with a lawsuit yet, but I think, of course, that is a possibility."

He said none of the reward money had been paid.

Winnebago County State's Attorney Daniel Doyle, the prosecutor in Stewart's first Rockford trial, declined comment Thursday on Miller's claim.

He said he had responded to one company that asked about procedures for paying the reward by sending a list of law-enforcement officials involved in the investigation.

Doyle, who noted that no central clearing house has been set up to distribute the reward, said he told company officials they would have to initiate any proceedings to decide who deserved the money.

The significance of Miller's tip is still being debated in law-enforcement circles. Some say that without Miller's help, police might never have arrested his son.

Miller's tip, given police about two weeks after the last two killings, was "the first time (Stewart's) name surfaced," Pumilia said Thursday. "Unless you have a name, you don't have anything."

Beloit Police Chief John Mizerka said Miller was not entitled to any of the Beloit reward money, which includes $10,000 from the Tandy Corp., which owned the Radio Shack store where Stewart killed his last two victims.

In an interview with the Rockford Register Star last October, Miller was quoted as vehemently denying he had tipped police to his son's involvement in the murders.

Economy forces children to beg, rob, prostitute

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — "Hey, mister, shoeshine?"

This call, heard on the streets of Brazil, Mexico, Chile, Colombia, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador, identifies the hordes of solitary, poverty-stricken children trying to survive in the overcrowded cities of Latin America.

"The problems of abandoned and street children are extremely serious and growing daily," said UNICEF, the U.N. Children's Agency, in a recent report.

The organization's current estimate of the number of such boys and girls in this part of the world — 40 million — is equal to the population of Spain or of California and Texas combined.

EXPERTS LINK the phenomenon to rapid industrialization, migration from rural areas to already overcrowded cities and the staggering economic problems facing Latin American countries.

"The street child problem is the other side of the medal of development and progress," said Gerson da Cunha, communications and information officer at UNICEF's Brazil office. "We can't allow the street children to be one of the prices of development."

Little boys and girls frequent the outdoor cafes along Brazil's luxurious Ipanema and Copacabana beaches, urging tourists to buy roses, chewing gum and peanuts.

CHILDREN STEAL for a living in Bogota, and frequently sleep under bridges, along sidewalks and in parks in Colombia's capital.

Boys in Mexico City dazzle tourists by working as "flame throwers." They fill their mouths with kerosene and spit it out slowly over the tip of a burning torch.

Children from cities as diverse and distant as Guadalajara, Mexico, and Sao Paulo, Brazil, find themselves growing up "in poverty and instability, forced to beg, steal and prostitute themselves," UNICEF said.

And, the report went on, nearly all are victims of "industrial miracles" that have caused rapid and uncontrolled population growth in major Latin American cities, where rural families in search of better lives have streamed into urban slums.

IN MANY CASES, da Cunha explained, children leave home on their own because they know they are a financial burden. In other cases, the youths bring home the money they earn to help out.

Putting street kids in institutions is not the thing to do, the report said. Beside the cost, said to be $300 to $500 per child per month — much more than most Latin American urban families earn — taking the youngsters away tends to "destroy their initiative and ability to achieve independence," the report said.

The fact that the children have to work cannot be ignored. Youths in Santiago pack up their wares, usually displayed on a blanket, and scamper away at the sight of the police, who have been ordered to arrest street vendors.

Sauce makers brew 'hot' air

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — To liven up their already sizzling blend of jalapeno peppers, tomatoes and onions, hot sauce makers in this city have been tossing in another spicy ingredient — lawsuits.

The competition in San Antonio's lucrative picante sauce market has been liberally peppered with litigation as demand grows for the eye-watering, mouth-searing product.

Texans just plain like hot sauce — slathered on most everything — and the rest of the country seems to be catching on.

"Down here, it's always been used like salt and pepper," said Kit Goldsbury, president of Pace Picante Inc. "Now, a lot of people are making it part of their daily diet."

Picante sauce, or salsa, is basically a hodgepodge of tomatoes, jalapenos, onions, vinegar and a dash of spices, but Goldsbury said the ways to blend the ingredients are "incalculable."

Goldsbury has presided over much of the family-operated company's expansion, which mirrors the boom in the $350 million Mexican food business.

Mexican sauces rake in about $135 million annually, and Pace makes the nation's best-selling sauce, even though it concentrates its efforts mostly in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arizona and Colorado.

Pace is moving to a new manufacturing complex from its current cramped facilities, and the aroma of success, the company's lawsuits say, has drawn imitators.

Larry Amstutz and Brian Loranger left Pace about 1½ years ago to form Sauces Unlimited Inc., which manufactures a generic-labeled picante sauce marketed in a three-state area.

Amstutz and Loranger had been mixing their sauce for less than a year when Pace obtained a temporary injunction, contending the pair pirated the Pace recipe.

A jury acquitted Sauces Unlimited of the pirating charges, but Pace's appeal still is pending before the 4th Court of Civil Appeals here. Sauces Unlimited's suit is pending in federal court.

Both Amstutz and Goldsbury refused to discuss the litigation in any detail. And asked about the supposed similarities in sauces, Goldsbury answered only, "Just taste it."

Jiminez turned around and filed an antitrust violations lawsuit against Pace.

Jiminez agreed to change its bottles in an out-of-court settlement in April, and lawyers said the company would drop its countersuit against Pace in exchange for an undetermined amount of cash.

Now the south Texas sauce makers face heated competition from a new source — national companies with mammoth marketing campaigns and a taste for a chunk of picante profits.

Campbell Soup Co. and Chesebrough-Ponds have jumped into the Mexican sauce business in the past several months. Campbell pushes La Especial and Chesebrough-Ponds touts Montera.

"We've got our hands full just keeping track of the competition," said Rod Sands, Pace's vice president of marketing. He said 67 brands of Mexican sauce currently are on the market.

Nuns slain in holy city

JERUSALEM (AP) — Two nuns were found slain today at the nunnery of the Russian Orthodox Church in the west Jerusalem suburb of Ein Karem, Interior Minister Yosef Burg said.

He called the killings "a grave matter," and said police were investigating. "At this moment, only the fact is clear but not the reason," he said on Israel radio.

The nunnery was recently daubed with swastikas and an attempt was made to set alight tanks of cooking gas by an outer wall of the nunnery, Israel radio said.

It was not known whether there was any connection between these incidents and the killings.

The police spokesman was not in his office and could not be reached by telephone for further details. No information was released on the nuns' identities or how they were slain.

The nunnery is part of the Russian church based in the Soviet Union, and is not connected with the Russian church-in-exile, which also has churches in Israel.

Assembly adopts budget

PARIS (AP) — The French National Assembly adopted a five-year, $113 billion military budget today that includes a controversial cut in conventional ground forces and a corresponding emphasis on nuclear strength.

France's tilt towards nuclear defense is likely to prompt renewed demands from the Soviet Union that the independent French nuclear force be included in any agreement to reduce Soviet and NATO medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe.

French defense officials project the budget represents an 11 percent real increase in military spending after inflation, with the largest single expenditure — $18 billion — earmarked for France's tactical and strategic nuclear force.

The Socialist government's military plan for 1984-88 calls for the addition of a seventh nuclear-powered submarine and a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier, and development and deployment of a new multiple-warhead submarine-fired nuclear missile system.

France, which pulled out of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's integrated military command in 1966, continues to participate in NATO's overall strategic planning.

The 1984-88 budget also foresees a 7 percent cut in conventional troop strength — a reduction of about 31,000 soldiers from the 320,000-man force over the five-year period. The army will lose 22,000 of those troops.

Cobra eats giant python

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Plantation workers shot a 14-foot king cobra to death as it was swallowing a 10-foot python about 12 miles from Kuala Lumpur, the daily Straits Times reported today.

The snakes were discovered Thursday on a palm plantation by a worker identified as M. Anthony, who summoned others to shoot the reptiles, the paper said. The python was already dead, said the daily, which printed front-page pictures of the snakes.

Omaer Bin Mohamed Yusof, a government official, told the newspaper the cobra was the biggest he had ever seen and that it would be preserved in the department's museum. He said snake experts will dissect the python for study.

A bid proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or, if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bond and payment bond. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

The successful Bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond each in the amount of the contract, written by a responsible Surety Company authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Article 5160, V.A.T.C.S., as amended by H.B. 344, passed by the 56th Legislature, Regular Session, 1959.

In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction thereof, or to reject the bid. Unreasonable (or "unbalanced") unit prices will authorize the Owner to reject the bid. Bidders are expected to inspect the site of the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions.

NOTICES FOR ALL AIP CONTRACTS

A. Policy. It is the policy of the Department of Transportation (DOT) that minority business enterprises as defined in 49 CFR Part 23 shall have the maximum opportunity to participate in the performance of contracts financed in whole or in part with Federal funds.

B. MBE Program. All bidders assure they will make sufficient reasonable efforts to meet the Minority Business Enterprise goals as established for this prime contract. The MBE goal for minorities is five percent and the goal for women is two percent of the dollar value of this contract.

After opening of bids, the apparent successful bidder will be required to submit the names and addresses of MBE firms that will participate in the contract along with a description of the work and dollar amount for each firm. If the responses do not clearly show MBE participation will meet the goals above, the apparent successful bidder must clearly demonstrate, to the satisfaction of the airport sponsor, that a good faith effort has in fact been made and that meeting said goals is not reasonably possible. If any apparent low bidder cannot do so, the contract may, at the option of the airport sponsor, be awarded to the next low bidder able to meet these requirements.

C. Required Notices for Contracts Over $10,000. The regulations and orders of the Secretary of Labor, OFCC, and FAR 152.61 require the following notices:

1. The proposed contract is under and subject to Executive Order 11246 of September 24, 1965, and to the Equal Opportunity Clause, and

2. The Bidder must supply all the information required by the bid or proposal form.

3. The successful bidder will be required to submit a Certfication of Nonsegregated Facilities prior to award of the contract, and to notify prospective subcontractors of the requirement for such a Certification where the subcontract exceeds $10,000. Samples of the Certification and Notice to Subcontractors appear in the specifications.

4. Women will be afforded equal opportunity in all areas of employment. However, the employment of women shall not diminish the standards or requirements for the employment of minorities.

Notice of Requirement for Affirmative Action to Ensure Equal Employment Opportunity (Executive Order 11246, as amended)

a. The Bidder's attention is called to the "Equal Opportunity Clause" and the "Standard Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Construction Contract Specifications" set forth herein.

b. The goals and timetables for minority and female participation, expressed in percentage terms for the contractor's aggregate work force in each trade on all construction work in the covered area, are as follows:

These goals are applicable to all the contractor's construction work (whether or not it is Federal or federally assisted) performed in the covered area.

The contractor's compliance with the executive order and the regulations in 41 CFR Part 60-4 shall be based on its implementation of the Equal Opportunity Clause, specific affirmative action obligations required by the specifications set forth in 41 CFR Part 60-4.3(a), and its efforts to meet the goals established for the geographical area where the contract resulting from this solicitation is to be performed. The hours of minority and female employment and training must be substantially uniform throughout the length of the contract, and in each trade, and the women evenly on each of its projects. The transfer of minority or female employees or trainees from contractor to contractor or from project to project, for the sole purpose of meeting the contractor's goals, shall be a violation of the contract, the executive order, and the regulations in 41 CRF Part 60-4. Compliance with the goals will be measured against the total work hours performed.

c. The contractor shall provide written notification to the Director, OFCCP, within 10 working days of award of any construction subcontract in excess of $10,000 at any tier for construction work under the contract resulting from this solicitation. The notification shall list the name, address, and telephone number of the subcontractor; employee identification number; estimated dollar amount of the subcontract; estimated starting and completion dates of the subcontract; and the geographical area in which the contract is to be performed.

d. As used in this notice and in the contract resulting from this solicitation, the "covered area" is nationwide.

D. Contracts in Excess of $50,000. For contracts of $50,000 or more a contractor having 50 or more employees, and his subcontractors having 50 or more employees, and who may be awarded a subcontract of $50,000 or more, will be required to maintain an affirmative action program within 120 days of the commencement of the contract.

E. Additional Notices for $1 Million Contracts. For each contract which may result in a bid of $1 million or more, the following notices shall also apply:

1. Preaward Equal Opportunity Compliance Reviews. Where the bid of the apparent low responsible bidder is in the amount of $1 million or more, the bidder and his known all-tier subcontractors which will be awarded subcontracts of $1 million or more will be subject to full, on-site, preaward equal opportunity compliance reviews before the award of the contract for the purpose of determining whether the bidder and his subcontractors are able to comply with the provisions of the equal opportunity clause.

2. Compliance Reports. Within 30 days after award of this contract, the contractor shall file a compliance report (Standard Form 100) if,

a. The contractor has not submitted a complete compliance report within 12 months preceding the date of award; and

b. The contractor is within the definition of "employer" in paragraphs 2e(3) of the instructions included in Standard Form 100.

The contractor shall require the subcontractor on all-tier subcontracts, irrespective of dollar amount, to file Standard Form 100 within 30 days after award of the subcontract if the above two conditions apply. Standard Form 100 will be furnished upon request.
