Positive Thinking

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Don't Become Poor Rich Man

He had a quarter of a million dollars but lived in poverty. This is the amazing story of a man who died recently in a midwestern state.

This rich pauper operated a small farm and lived in a run-down house without conveniences of any kind. He lived a hand-to-mouth existence and went about in clothes that were almost in tatters. He was a recluse, shunning human society.

• • •

Some months later county officials decided to widen the main highway, and an exit road passed close to the silo on the deceased poor rich man's place. While excavating, workmen unearthed two milk cans such as dairy farmers use. To their astonishment, the cans were crammed with bills totaling more than $250,000.

You may say to yourself that this fellow was just an "oddball" to have all that money and yet live in poverty. How stupid to deny himself the ordinary comforts and other values which such wealth could buy.

• • •

But wait a minute. Don't write off this strange character so easily. Why not let his story serve to activate a little serious thinking on our parts? Shouldn't I, perhaps, ask myself whether I am utilizing all the rich values open to me in this life? Am I, maybe, enduring a kind of mental and spiritual poverty when I actually possess resources which could make life really worthwhile?

Take, for example, cultural opportunities. The greatest music of all time is available today in many forms, and a marvelous enrichment of mind and heart is provided in the works of famous masters. But many content themselves with jumbles of sound or musical noise produced with a kind of rhythm and this is all the so-called music they know. Either they don't realize there is something better or it's too much trouble to upgrade musical tastes, so they spend their lives in cultural poverty.

• • •

And again, the world offers so much fun and pleasure that it's positively pathetic how little of it people find. I am glad to observe that more people every year are learning to relax and play a bit. And this is good.

But despite this wealth of fun opportunities, would you believe there are more thousands than you can count who live in what you might call pleasure poverty. They keep their noses to the grindstone and develop a fine crop of neuroses and tensions. Work is fine, but when mixed with fun it's a lot better. Don't be a fun pauper.

• • •

There is another kind of pauper who deserves mention—the spiritual pauper. There is for the taking a spiritual wealth that gives strength, joy and peace to every man.

Better think twice, maybe even three times, before going on as a spiritual pauper. Don't be a poor rich man.

Big-City Mayors Asking Aid To Fight Recession

BOSTON (AP) — Some of the nation's leading big-city mayors urgently appealed Saturday for $2 billion in emergency federal aid to fight the recession in their cities.

Citing New York's financial problems, Mayor Joseph Alioto of San Francisco, president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, told newsmen "the seeds of New York are in every American city.

"We are here simply to sound the alarm," he said. "The Congress has got to give us help during this recession. We urgently need that."

More than 300 mayors, who gathered for the conference's annual meeting, will take up a resolution this week backing the emergency anti-recession bill that goes before the Senate Government Operations Committee in Washington on Wednesday.

That bill is not viewed favorably by Ford administration officials attending this conference. Furthermore, the nation's governors failed to back the legislation at their annual conference last month.

The money would go only to states and local governments where the unemployment rate was above 6 per cent for three consecutive months. It could be spent as local officials saw fit.

The mayors gathered amid another of a series of budget crises that have plagued cities periodically since the late 1960s, forcing layoffs, reduced services and higher taxes. The mayors' conference estimates that local government has or will enact $1.5 billion in new taxes during the current crunch alone.

Little more than 200 miles away, Abraham Beame, mayor of New York, was trying to determine Saturday how many of the 19,000 city employes he laid off can be returned to the payroll with a $330-million local tax increase he won at week's end. Meanwhile, New York was paying sanitation men time and a half to help clean up 58,000 tons of garbage left uncollected during a four-day wildcat walkout in protest of the layoffs.

Earlier in the week, Seattle Mayor Wes Uhlman overcame a recall effort launched by white firemen angered over his budget and minority hiring plans for the department.

And in Dayton, Ohio, the city was turning street lights back on after half of them had been turned off to save money.

Boston Mayor Kevin White rejected the contention that fiscal mismanagement had caused the problems in New York and other cities.

"What (former New York Mayor John V.) Lindsay did was respond to a need that was there and that the federal government had ignored for the past decade. With the exception of general revenue sharing, Lindsay had no resources to respond to the social demands of the late 1960s. Now, as a consequence, in many cities, the bill has to be paid and we find ourselves in a financial crisis that has been increased by the recession," White said.

The mayors catalogued a series of problems: unemployment rates at 40 per cent for black youths in Boston, property taxes at $2,000 a year on a $20,000 house in Newark and what they considered an unfair share of federal resources.

ENJOYING A DIP — President Ford enjoys a dip in the new White House swimming pool Saturday. The Chief Executive inuagurated the $66,840 pool last Tuesday. (AP Wirephoto.)

President Makes Debut In Pool

WASHINGTON (AP) — Confessing "I feel very embarrassed," President Ford dove into his new $66,840 White House swimming pool Saturday to swim five laps before a crowd of photographers and reporters.

Ford, who appeared at the poolside wearing a short white swimming robe over navy blue trunks, appeared nervous about making his public debut in the pool.

"I'm not sure I can make it," he told some 70 reporters and photographers lining one edge of the 22-by-55-foot outdoor pool.

He said he thought he might need a life preserver, adding: "I was going to bring an inner tube out."

But then, announcing "Okay — here we go," he quickly shed his robe, stepped out of his shoes and plunged into the shallow end of the pool.

The President did a fast two laps free-style, one lap breast stroke, one lap back stroke and, announcing he would do "one more," did a final lap free-style.

The pool was completed July 1, paid for entirely by public donations, from pennies to a top limit of $1,000.

It was built to replace an indoor swimming pool in the west wing of the White House, built with public contributions from thousands of school children for polio-stricken President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

That pool was covered over during the Nixon administration to provide space for a new press center.

Ford said he plans to swim 40 laps twice a day for exercise, the way he used to in the backyard pool of his home in suburban Alexandria, Va.

Ford Pledges Continued Role In Southeast Asia Area

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Ford told visiting President Suharto of Indonesia on Saturday that the American setbacks in Indochina have served to redouble U.S. interest in the stability of Southeast Asia.

Ford pledged a continuing active U.S. role in the region after of what he described as a "most enjoyable and most constructive" meeting here with Suharto.

In a luncheon toast, Ford praised Suharto as a "wise and valued friend of the United States" and then he gave forceful assurances that Indonesia and other American allies in the area can count on a continued U.S. presence.

"The tragedies in Indochina should redouble, and does, our interest in the stability of Southeast Asia," Ford said.

His remarks were seen as a warning to Communist powers in Asia not to attempt a further expansion of their influence.

Since the fall of South Vietnam 10 weeks ago, Ford has personally relayed similar assurances to leaders of Singapore, Australia, New Zealand and South Korea.

Unlike some U.S. allies in Asia which have been reassessing their ties with Washington, Indonesia appears to see a continued strong American presence in the area as essential.

Suharto, who met with Ford for three hours at this mountain retreat on the fourth leg of a five-nation foreign tour, praised the "open and frank exchange of views" with the American president.

The two leaders met privately for three hours, after which Suharto and his delegation departed immediately for Japan.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Indonesia's role as a U.S. oil supplier also was discussed but he gave no details.

While Ford and Suharto were meeting privately, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and other U.S. officials met separately with other Indonesians.

For the United States, Indonesia has become increasingly important as an oil supply source and American officials believe a stable Indonesia is vital to the maintenance of political equilibrium in East Asia.

The meeting took place amid growing Indonesian concern over the future use of American military equipment left behind in Indochina.

Indonesia also is described as extremely wary of North Vietnamese intentions now that Hanoi's goal of ousting the American-backed regime in

Gandhi Extends Crackdown

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi extended her emergency crackdown to India's labor movement Saturday and warned union leaders against strikes.

A call for "fullest cooperation" by labor marked a new phase in Mrs. Gandhi's crackdown, previously directed only at her opponents. India's two main trade union federations support her government and have backed her 10-day-old crisis tactics.

In a meeting with union chiefs, Mrs. Gandhi demanded that they refrain from "any agitation or strike or go-slow" while the crisis legislation remains in effect. "This is not the time," she added.

Workers also should improve their attitude on the job, she said, singling out white collar employes in banks, insurance companies and public transport.

"They even do not show elementary courtesy in dealing with people," her spokesman quoted her as saying. "This feeling must be corrected."

Since suspending civil liberties, Mrs. Gandhi's government has launched a discipline drive among government employes. Tardy employes are being penalized, many for the first time in their careers, and department heads are ordering quicker disposition of pending files.

In a separate development, authorities in Bihar state ordered Mary Tyler, a 32-year-old British woman imprisoned since 1970 on political terrorism charges, released and deported from India. No reason was given for the action, but her long imprisonment without being brought to trial had provoked criticism from abroad.

Mrs. Gandhi's no-strike order reflected concern over production lost because of labor agitation. She has complained that more than 1.5 million man-days were lost to the economy last year because of strikes.

60 Others Wounded In Lebanon

By The Associated Press

Explosions ripped through a private Moslem training camp on Mount Lebanon Saturday, killing at least 30 militiamen who were practicing how to plant and remove landmines, Lebanese police said.

They said 60 others were wounded in the blasts at Ein Beniyeh Camp, which was being used for mountain warfare training by hundreds of followers of Shiite Moslem leader Imam Mousa Sadr.

The camp is located near the ancient town of Baalbeck where Lebanese army tanks were sent last week to quell armed clashes between Shiites and Christian Phalangists.

Police said only that the explosions were "an isolated accident" and gave no further information.

Earlier, Lebanese Premier Rashid Karami sought to reassure foreign businessmen that his country is secure following months of street fighting between leftists, rightists, Moslems and Christians that left 900 dead.

"We have emerged from these troubles successfully which proves once again the Lebanese miracle," he told newsmen in Beirut.

Little Weather Change Expected

Fog and haze greeted weekenders in Southeast Texas while much of the rest of Texas had fair skies and scattered showers. Weathermen forecast a carbon copy for today.

High pressure centered in East Texas kept skies clear in most sections of that part of the state although areas around Beaumont experienced haze and some morning fog.

Puffy clouds that occasionaly collected into dark-bottomed showers dotted vast areas from the Red River to the Gulf, The Associated Press reported.

Weathermen are calling for a 20 per cent chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorm activity in the Tall City as daytime temperatures continue to level off in the lower 90s.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal recorded a high Saturday of 92 with an overnight low of 66.

State's Death Count Soars

By The Associated Press

Texans paid a heavy toll Saturday as death roamed the state's highways in the second day of the long Fourth of July holiday.

A five-death traffic accident in Garrison, north of Nacogdoches in East Texas, swelled the death toll Saturday bringing the total number of violent deaths to 55 since Thursday evening.

Twenty-seven of the violent deaths were the result of traffic accidents. Shootings, drownings, and other accidents claimed the rest.

Here is how some Texans died as the state began the celebration of the nation's bicentennial year.

The Garrison accident, a two-car collision, claimed the lives of Ann Watts, 15; Eldago Harris, 42, and Cynthia Reed, 14, all of Timpson; Henry Kurbow, 28, of Garrison and Adarryl Harris, 2, of Oklahoma City.

Two Gulf Oil engineers were electrocuted late Friday while working at a Gulf Oliphant substation near Cedar Bayou. They were David Joaquin, 30, of Baytown and Joe L. McDonald, 31, of Humble.

At Greenville, police were investigating the death of Verna Guttery, an executive with E-Systems, who was found shot to death at his home Friday morning.

Three 16-year old McKinney youths were killed Saturday when their car ran off U.S. 75. They were identified by police as Tommy Wayne Lansford, Johnny E. Barker and David L. Hugabone.

In Amarillo, Sue Ann Flesher died of burns received in an accident at her home. Police said Mrs. Flesher lit a cigarette while standing near a can of gasoline and the gasoline ignited and exploded.

Chances Of U.S. Recovering 578 MIAs In Laos Shrinking Each Day

By LEWIS M. Simons
The Washington Post

VIENTIANE — As the U.S. role in Laos shrivels daily, with it shrinks the chances of ever recovering some 578 American soldiers and airmen killed or missing in action in the jungled and mountainous country.

Laos is the last of the three former Indochinese countries where the United States still has a diplomatic mission. But as the Communist Pathet Lao take further control of the government and relations with the United States sour, the continuation of that U.S. presence grows more doubtful.

At the moment, a U.S. Army colonel here has the fulltime responsibility of trying to convince the Pathet Lao that they should provide all the information they have on the whereabouts of the 303 Americans known to have been killed in Laos and another 275 listed as missing in action.

Meanwhile, the Defense Department must soon come to a decision on whether to continue operating the Joint Casualty Resolution Center at Samaesan, in neighboring Thailand. The center, which employs 100 experts in reconstructing and identifying human remains, has been virtually idle for months.

"Time's running out," said Col. Luther Vaughn. "If we don't get some cooperation from the Pathet Lao or any of the others very soon, there's no point in keeping the center operating. In another year or so the jungle will have grown back so completely that it will be impossible to even locate graves or crash sites."

Throughout Indochina, a total of 2,300 American military men are still unaccounted for.

"I know they have a lot of information," said Vaughn.

"I'm sure they could help resolve at least 100 cases."

Vaughn, who has been in Vientiane just over two months, formerly worked on the project at U.S. Pacific Command headquarters in Honolulu.

Altogether, according to Vaughn's figures, 900 Americans are missing in action (MIA) in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos, while another 1,400 are listed as killed in action—bodies not recovered.

Most of these men were pilots whose planes were shot down on bombing runs. Some, Vaughn said, have been missing since 1967 when their planes disappeared over the South China Sea.

The Defense Department is interested in clearing up the cases for humanitarian and economic reasons. "Until we know for certain that these men have been killed, there is always the nagging hope that they may be alive and held prisoner," said Vaughn. "It's hell for the next of kin."

Economically, he explained, as long as a man is listed MIA, he continues to receive promotions and his family continues to receive his salary and other allowances.

Vaughn, a Special Forces officer with a soft southern accent, said he did not have much evidence that any of the MIAs were still alive, but he felt some were. "But," he conceded, "God only knows how they'd continue to be held."

In his efforts to find out why, and if, any Americans are being held prisoner, Vaughn met recently with Col. Phao Bounnaphol, the Pathet Lao delegate to the joint commission in charge of implementing Laos 1973 peace accord.

Vaughn said Phao was courteous and seemingly sincere, "But when I asked him why the Pathet Lao had withheld information so far and whether we could expect some cooperation now, he just laughed and shrugged his shoulders."

The exchange indicated that Phao himself had nothing to do with the matter and that decisions would have to be made by the Communist high command.

Some U.S. officials here believe the Pathet Lao intend to withhold information on the dead and missing Americans until they need to use it as a final political lever. These officials noted that recently North Vietnam reportedly told the United States that there would be no search for any Americans missing in Indochina until the United States contributes "to healing the wounds of war and to post-war reconstruction in both parts of Vietnam."

The official U.S. position so far has been that North Vietnam is not entitled to post-war economic assistance because it blatantly and frequently violated the 1973 peace agreement.

The reported linking of aid with the search for missing Americans is likely to run into opposition from U.S. interest groups seeking information on those reported killed or missing. These groups, which include veterans organizations, are likely to see the North Vietnamese demand as "ransom," sources here said.

Corruption In Grain Exports Widespread, Senator Claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corruption in the grain export industry is so pervasive that few grain ships have left the port of New Orleans in several years with their cargoes properly graded and weighed, a senator who has just returned from an inspection trip said Saturday.

Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, said the nation's major grain exporters and the firms licensed by the Agriculture Department to inspect them maintained a "sweetheart relationship."

Because of this, he said, ships were not inspected honestly, grain was assigned a higher quality grade than it deserved, and cargoes were shortweighted, a practice in which inspectors certified a ship was carrying more grain than was in its holds.

"There was a very pervasive system of corruption," Clark said in a telephone interview from Davenport, Iowa. "That's the way the system works."

"Shortweighting is almost as common and as big a crime as misgrading," he said.

He said one major company sold 18 million tons more of grain in one year than its books show it received at its elevators.

Clark spent several days last week in New Orleans.

He is a member of the Senate Agriculture subcommittee on foreign agriculture policy and the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on multinational corporations. Both committees are investigating the grain scandal, in which 20 persons have been indicted in New Orleans and Houston.

Inspectors are licensed by the Agriculture Department and work for private companies, local boards of trade, or state agencies. The grain companies pay for the inspection service, which is provided to assure the compliance with the Grain Standards Act regulating grain exports.

Of those indicted, most have been inspectors charged with bribery. Foreign purchasers of U.S. grain have complained that the grain is shortweighted, that ship's holds are not being properly cleaned, and that the buyers are receiving a poorer quality of grain than the grain for which they are paying.

During the New Orleans trip Clark met with U.S. Atty. Gerald Gallinghouse, who is leading the New Orleans phase of the investigation and prosecution.

Clark said he could not reveal the substance of his conversation with Gallinghouse, but he said he left the meetings confident that more indictments would be returned in New Orleans.

Nader Says Gasoline Price Hikes Helping Oil Firms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer advocate Ralph Nader said Saturday that recent gasoline price increases are providing domestic oil companies with a huge windfall profit.

In a statement, Nader said President Ford's $2 per barrel tariff on imported oil is only partly responsible for price increases.

Another important ingredient, Nader said, is a $2 per barrel increase in the price of American oil which is not price controlled. This, Nader charged, "enables domestic oil producers to reap a $2-billion windfall profit."

Federal energy officials said Tuesday they expect gasoline prices to rise by 3 to 5 cents per gallon this summer. Increases have been announced during the week by various major companies.

The increases had been expected, energy officials said, and they characterized the increases as largely seasonal. They said refineries are increasing their production of gasoline after a period in which stocks in hand had declined.

In addition to his statement, Nader sent letters to chairmen Henry M. Jackson of the Senate Interior Committee and Harley O. Staggers of the House Commerce Committee. He urged them to work for price controls on domestic oil.

Nader charged that Ford's tariff on imported oil will not reduce consumption of imports as oil users cannot shift their purchases to domestic oil because domestic production has not increased.

And the tariff will not decrease over-all oil consumption, Nader said, because oil companies were allowed to delay the price increases until periods of peak consumer demand when cuts in fuel usage in response to price hikes would be minimized.

Hence, Nader said, the only way the tariff will cut oil consumption is by deepening the recession.

Las Vegas Mopping Up After Flash Floods

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The heaviest-hit Strip casinos were still digging out Saturday from deposits of mud and wrecked autos left by Thursday's flash flooding, the area's worst in 20 years.

The flood's aftermath also has the area knee-deep with insurance adjusters who are working on claims for the hundreds of cars set adrift and overturned by the rampaging torrents through the downtown streets.

"It seemed to me that our guests just took it as something that went with the excitement of the state," said Caesers Palace manager Jerry Gordon. "They come to find the unusual in our state, and they got it."

Gordon said a battery of insurance adjusters were swarming around Caesars Saturday while a cleanup crew of more than 20 worked 'round the clock and used huge cranes to clear the rubble and broken autos from the parking lot.

"We had a little water inside, but the hotel-casino complex was never shut down and we are now functioning as normal," Gordon said.

"Our guests were amazed by the whole thing," said Ralph Engelstad, manager of the Flamingo-Capri, and Caesars. "No one I know had ever seen water of this type before, and they are from all over."

Engelstad said his hotel won't be running normally until Tuesday.

"We would have been all right if the bridge next to the Palace hadn't been plugged by cars," he said. "We had to evacuate parts of the hotel where damage occured and a foot and a half of water ran through our casino."

The hotel remained without air conditioning and hot water in some rooms Saturday because eight to nine feet of water settled in the boiler room, said Engelstad.

"Those boilers have to be completely taken apart," he said. "While I can't say exactly, damage may run up to $250,000."

In comparison, the Marina Hotel-Casino got off easy, despite its position next door and downcurrent from Caesars.

"We had no damage whatever to our building," said Joel Sobel, assistant manager of the Marina. "Our building is new and it was designed to handle this kind of flooding. We have a wash built behind our parking lot and it carried the water right through."

But at the Flamingo-Hilton, just across the Strip from Caesars Palace, assistant manager Dan Driscoll reported: "We still have a real mess here.

"The convention center has soaked carpeting, the parking area is nothing but debris and we had a few boiler room problems when the water got two to three feet deep down there."

"No one has any sound idea yet of what it will cost," he added.

Las Vegas Metropolitian Police said flood damage is estimated to be in excess of $1 million, making the flood the worst since 1955.

The 1955 flood may have washed as much water through the streets, a police spokesman said, but damage was slight. A 1961 flash flood also inundated the streets, but drainage canals did not get plugged up and damage was kept to a minimum, he said.

Last week's storm dumped about 2½ inches of rain in and around the Las Vegas area in less than two hours. When the rain stopped late Thursday night, hundreds of cars were covered with water, houses were flooded and two city employees were drowned.

Despite damages, business remained at maximum capacity in all the hotels.

Saigon has been achieved.

According to some accounts, Indonesia has been making soundings about the possibility of an increase in American military aid.

At present, the country receives several million dollars annually in U.S. arms aid. The Ford administration has asked Congress for $30.6 million in economic assistance, which is more than one-third of the East Asian total.

Relations between the two countries were strained somewhat earlier this year when Congress attached an amendment to the trade act denying tariff preferences to members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, including those which did not take part in the Arab oil boycott during the 1973-74 winter.

The Ford administration has asked Congress to approve legislation which would permit it flexibility in the application of the amendment.

Mrs. E. M. Stegall Dies, Services Slated Monday

Services will be at 2 p.m. Monday in the Newnie W. Ellis Chapel with interment to follow in Fairview Cemetery.

Born Sept. 25, 1922 at Miles, she grew up there and was married there in 1939 to Enoch M. Stegall. They moved from Miles to Midland in 1956. She had been employed by Dunlap's here the last four years. She was a member of the Midland Church of the Foursquare Gospel.

Surviving are her husband; two daughters, Mrs. Tom Owens of Carrollton and Miss Norma Stegall of Midland; her stepmother, Mrs. Virgie Lindley of Hobbs, N.M.; four brothers, Howard Perry of Midland, Kenneth Perry of Ardmore, Okla., and Glen Perry and Robert Perry, both of Hacienda Heights, Calif.; six sisters, Mrs. Frances Reith, Mrs. A. M. Morgan and Mrs. Mary E. Stegall, all of Midland, and Mrs. Jewel Daniel of Porterville, Calif., Mrs. Laverne Smith of Hobbs, N.M., and Mrs. Henry Langraf of San Angelo; three grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Pallbearers will be E. G. Branch, Don Bizzell, Jerry Fussell, J. D. Crawford, Paul Crawford and Ray Watsbn.

Serving as honorary pallbearers will be Roy Rotan, Marvin Briggs, Isaac Johnson, Lonnie Kreger, Pleas Richters, D. Branch, Harold Oldaker, M. O. Bryan, Donnie Thornton, Ralph Cochrane, Tom Carpenter and Charles Watson.

Six Post Bonds After Pot Raid

Six Midlanders were released on $10,000 bonds Friday and Saturday after being arrested for possession of marijuana by Midland police Friday afternoon.

Arrested were Thomas Wayne Nutt, 17, of 204 Western Dr.; Donald Glen Atyia, 17, of 4722 Ric St.; Billy Don Merriman, 24, of 506 S. H St.; Christopher Ray Foster, 17, of 2601 N. A St. Ronald Dean Gill, 18, of 506 S. H St. and Sidney Louise Lennox, 18, of 506 S. H St.

Midland police said they seized approximately six pounds of a substance believed to be marijuana in a raid Friday at 506 S. H St., where the six were arrested.

Bonds were set in peace justice court.

Death Claims Carmon Beggs

Freed Women Say Zaire Guerrillas Broke Promise

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Two women recently released from six weeks' captivity by guerrillas in Zaire say the kidnapers broke a promise by failing to free another American hostage, 22-year-old Kenneth Stephen Smith.

In a statement read to newsmen Friday, Carrie Jane Hunter, 21, of Atherton, Calif., and Emilie Bergmann, 25, of the Netherlands, appealed to the Marxist rebels to live up the ideals of "honor and discipline" they had expressed.

They indicated that the Popular Revolutionary party had "promised" to release Smith, of Garden Grove, Calif., on at least two occasions. The first

Odessan Charged With Shooting

ODESSA — Saul Garcia Bernal, 29, of Odessa, was charged with attempted murder following an incident at the Delta Lounge at 1300 S. Grant here Friday in which Alfonso Chacon, 43, received a gunshot wound in the abdomen.

Chacon was listed in satisfactory condition late Saturday in the intensive care unit of Medical Center Hospital here.

Bernal was being held in the Odessa city jail late Saturday on two $7,500 bonds.

Talks To Avoid Utility Strike Continue

BEAUMONT (AP) — A federal mediator and representatives of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and Gulf State Utilities Co. met again Saturday in an effort to avoid a strike against the utility company by 2,200 employes in East Texas and Louisiana.

Federal mediator Ed Koenig, who joined the talks Thursday, said the meetings would continue late into the night.

Union officials said chances for a settlement were "bleak."

The company's three-year pact with the union ended Saturday at midnight and union officials indicated pickets lines will go up unless the issues are resolved.

The company has offered pay hikes totaling 16 per cent this year and a wage reopener the second year of a two-year pact, another paid holiday, pension plan improvements and other fringe benefits.

The union is asking for higher salaries.

Three Charged With Robbery

ODESSA — Three Odessa men were arrested and charged with robbery of a 7-11 store here Saturday, Odessa police said.

Charged are Gary Cook, 17; Jim Page 18, and Gary Harding, 30. All three were being held Saturday in Odessa city jail in lieu of $10,000 bonds.

Building To Give Way To Flowers

By ED TODD

". . . And the walls came tumbling down."

It was more than a song back in late 1973 when the old Scharbauer Hotel here resisted implosion after implosion and thump after thump from the wrecking ball.

But, the old six-story landmark yielded to pressure, and, finally, the walls did topple.

And now the 11-story Midland Hilton is going up for an April 1976 completion date, and it will take up where the historic, and tough, Scharbauer left off.

A short haul away—more than a brick's throw—is another monument to Midland's past, and it, too, will follow the beat of the wrecking ball.

It's the not-too-old (1936) abandoned downtown post office building that—unless fate doubletracks—will go the way of the Scharbauer.

Nothing, however, will rise from its grave. On its resting place will be a nice, plush, serene park.

Meanwhile, the pale gold-dust brick building just stands there, as if waiting for city planners do it in.

That's just the case.

"It's almost a certainty," Fred Poe, assistant city manager, said of the planned razing.

"We've got to use it for park purposes, . . . and it can't be used for just any purpose."

That, essentially, is the deal the City of Midland made with the federal government to get that plot of land at 114 N. Loraine St. for a song and a dance—almost literally.

The old main post office—the city's seventh—was deserted in the latter part of April 1974 when the $6.1 million Federal Building and Post Office complex was completed.

Since before then, however, the General Services Administration had offered both the City of Midland and Midland County options to bid for the old post office.

In that case, the city or county (or whoever had the highest bid) could have spruced up the building and used it. For the city or county, it would have been an annex.

"It would have been ideal for a tax office," commented Elmo Linebarger, Midland County tax assessor-collector

The county commissioners, however, decided not to cast eyes at the old post office building. Instead, at the time they were looking at the nearly $2 million renovation program for the courthouse. That five-year program was formally completed this year.

County Judge Barbara Culver said the county dropped any interest it might have had in the building with the "understanding" that the city would convert the property to a downtown park.

It would be only a walk-across-the-street from the courtyard, and a full city block south of City Hall.

The proposed park will take in the old post office property east to the deserted Dunlap's Town Shoppe in the 100 block of North Main Street. The park, that is, would take in the northern half of the 200 block of West Texas Street and would flank a black asphalt-covered parking lot.

Some real estate holders, Poe said, are willing to part with buildings and land for the sake of a downtown park.

"They would give that property to the city if we would combine it with the federal property over here," he said, pointing from his third-floor office in City Hall, "and make a downtown park out of it."

The city, possibly with federal and state grant money, would pay for the razing of the buildings, the clearing of the rubble, and the planting of the grass and everything else that goes into the makings of a leisure-time park.

In the early park-talk days, Poe said, "There was some opposition to begin with, that we ought to use it (post office building) for some purpose."

The city, as did the county, Poe said, nixed the idea of turning the building into an annex.

"The building is not really suitable for that," he said, " . . . without remodeling." That, he indicated, would be too expensive. This, in part, was the county's reasoning in not electing to convert the old post office into a tax office or museum should the county have won title to the property.

Just when the tearing-down process will get under way is not certain, Poe said. But it's likely that the downtown park will not coincide with the nation's Bicentennial next year.

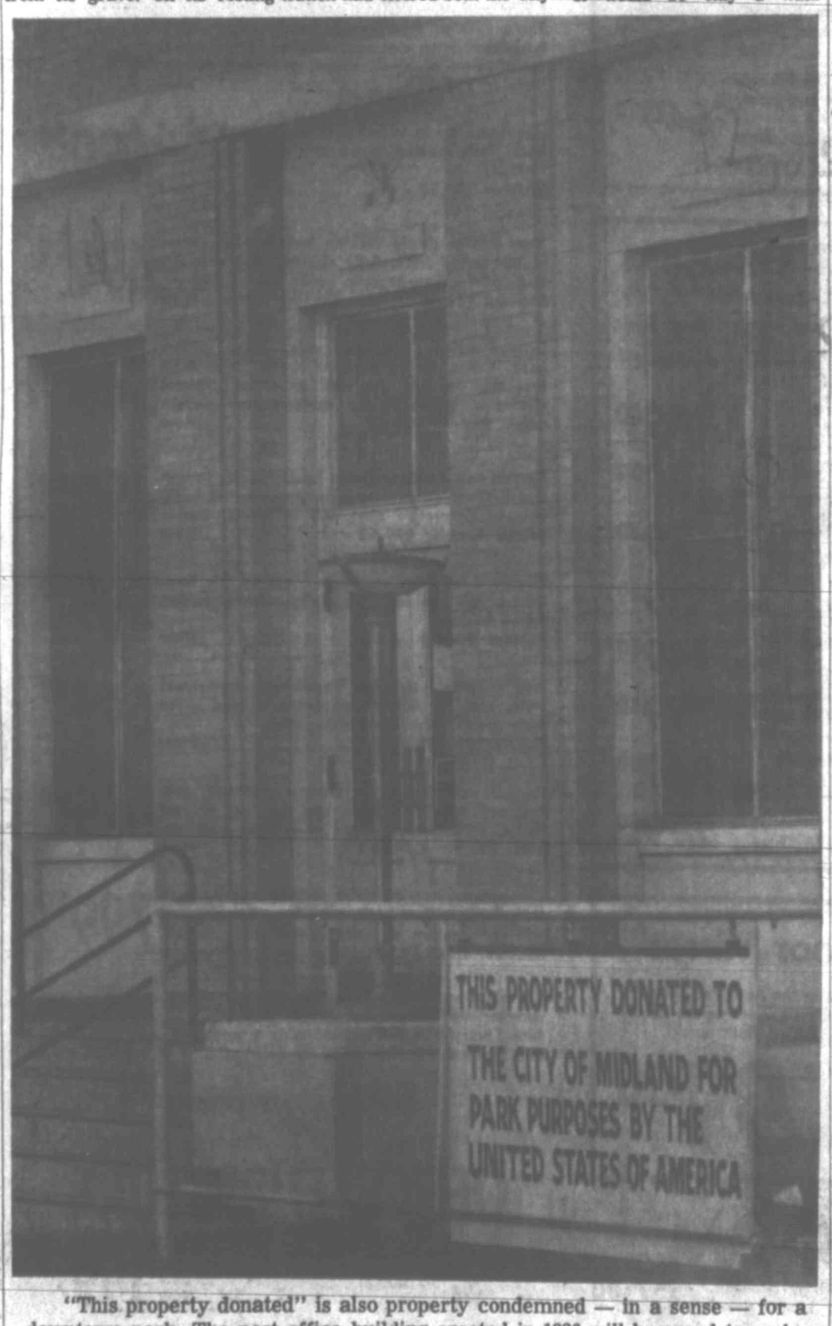
Businessmen-property owners, Poe said, indicate that "a nice, attractive park" "would enhance the entire downtown area."

The park, probably, he said, would incorporate flower gardens and a water fountain.

"You'd really need to spruce it up."

Meanwhile, while the planning and waiting go on, the old post office building just rests there in the past—something like the three-cent stamp that 40 years ago would send a first-class letter anywhere within the 48 states.

And, like the Scharbauer and its Crystal Ballroom, both the old three-cent stamp and the doomed post office building have had their heyday.



"This property donated" is also property condemned — in a sense — for a downtown park. The post office building erected in 1936 will be razed to make way for a city park.

Hit-Run Accident Fatal To Man, 79

COAHOMA — A former Lamesan, Andrew Lee, 79, of Young Mill, was killed by a hit-and-run driver while he was attempting to hitchhike early Saturday less than a mile east of here on Interstate 20, Department of Public Safety officials said Saturday.

DPS officials said Lee was in the middle of the road trying to hitchhike around 2:30 a.m. Saturday when he was hit. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Judge Gus Ochotorena Jr. of Big Spring.

A World War II veteran, Lee lived in Lamesa about three years ago and ran a restaurant there. More recently, he lived in Young Mill, 12 miles south of Fairfield. It was thought that he was on his way from Fairfield to Odessa when he was killed.

Services are pending with Keatts Funeral Home in Mexia.

Mexican-Americans Want Voting Rights Act Extended To Texas

By The Associated Press

Mexican-American representatives across Texas, including members of the Civil Rights Commission, say the Voting Rights Act must be extended to Texas to protect the rights of minorities.

"If Gov. Dolph Briscoe says there is no discrimination of Mexican-Americans voters in Texas, then he has not been out with the people," said former Raza Unida gubernatorial candidate Ramsey Muniz Thursday.

The Rev. Patrick Flores, Roman Catholic Auxiliary Bishop of San Antonio and a member of the advisory committee to the Civil Rights Commission, agreed with other leaders that discrimination exists.

The discrimination, especially in small South Texas towns, often takes the form of "intimidation of voters through threats of economic reprisals."

"That, I know," Bishop Flores said.

Houston comptroller Leonel Castillo, another member of the advisory committee, argued that if Texas officials were so convinced that there is no discrimination, they would not have pushed through the state legislature laws making easier for Mexican-Americans to vote.

Both Briscoe and Secretary of State Mark White have expressed public opposition, in Texas and in Washington to the extension to Texas of the Voting Rights Act.

The law has been approved by the House of Representatives and is now in the Senate. It would give the federal government the power to oversee elections in the state to guarantee the rights of minorities and also would give the Justice Department the right to review any redistricting plans before they become law.

Briscoe and White have criticized the law calling it an "injustice" to Texas.

Richard Avena, regional director of the Civil Rights Commission for the Southwest Region, said his staff has found that some of the discrimination or denial of voting rights occurs in the form of gerrymandering of district lines.

He said also that Mexican-Americans have trouble getting absentee ballots which are automatically sent to "people with non-Spanish names."

Muniz, who said he had witnessed the discrimination and intimidation of voters in South Texas, said: "I am all for having the federal officials around at election time."

Muniz said his party filed complaints of election irregularities in recent elections, but they were never investigated.

"You cannot have a democratic election," he said, "when armed local officials stand watch over the lines of voters and even walk armed inside the polling places."

Bishop Flores said intimidation and fear of economic reprisals are the most common forms of discrimination of Mexican-American voters.

"People are told at their place of employment that they must vote for a certain candidate or lose their jobs," he said. "Of course, people will not admit that sort of thing to an elected official, but we hear about it. They are afraid that, especially in places where paper ballots are used, somebody will find out how they voted and they will suffer economic reprisals. This causes a lot of people to stay away from the voting places."

Castillo said White, who is in charge of enforcing election laws in Texas, now says he does not trust federal officials. "White is an elected official," he said, "and he is now saying federal officials cannot be trusted.

"Briscoe and White," Castillo said, "are ignoring the long history of discrimination in the state, a discrimination that is carried out by diluting the voting strength of minorities through special redistricting or by direct intimidaton."

Castillo said he favored especially the granting of power to the U.S. Attorney General to watch over redistricting moves.

"As a practical thing," he said, "it would reduce the number of redistricting suits."

Castillo said the extension of the act also would cover blacks in Texas a state that has "more blacks than any of the Southern states previously covered by it."

The act, he said, improved the electoral strength of minorities in the South and it can do the same in Texas.

Castillo and representatives of the GI Forum, the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) and the Political Association of Spanish-speaking Organizations (PASO) testified in Congress in favor of the bill.

Israeli Cabinet Begins Critical General Debate Today

By WILLIAM J. DRUMMOND
The Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — Israel's cabinet begins a crucial general debate today on Egypt's settlement terms for a further withdrawal in the Sinai desert.

The agenda will likely be headed by the topic of the strategic Mitla and Gidi passes, but as former Foreign Minister Abba Eban said, the real issue at stake is two other important passes: Capitol Hill and Pennsylvania Avenue.

The cabinet, in effect, will be debating the future of Israel's relations with the United States, which currently are facing their most serious test since 1956 when then Prime Minister David Ben Gurion was forced to withdraw from the Sinai following the Suez campaign.

Israel-American relations suffered a severe setback last March 22 when Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger suspended his Middle East peace shuttle. In discreet briefings, Washington put the blame on Israel. The American Middle East policy reassessment is still up in the air, since the Ford administration has committed itself again to working out an Israeli-Egyptian interim settlement.

Israel's ambassador to the United States, Simcha Dinitz, returned home Friday to present a comprehensive report to the government on the negotiating situation following his meetings recently with Kissinger in the Virgin Islands.

Dinitz denied that President Ford had issued Israel the ultimatum of accepting the Egyptian terms or face reduced American support.

"I never accepted the terminology of ultimatum," Dinitz told reporters after his arrival. "It was never given to me when I had the conversation (June 27) with President Ford. I do not remember any case when it was given to any other Israeli.

"I think there is a situation that requires major, serious decision, but I do not think there is a question of ultimatum," Dinitz said, adding:

"I think we have a fairly good idea of what the Egyptians are demanding as it is related to us by the Americans."

Ultimatum perhaps over dramatizes the situation, but to Israel's political leaders the message Ford delivered to Dinitz in their June 27 conversation was clear and disturbing.

Falling a settlement in three weeks at most, Ford reportedly said, the Geneva conference would be reconvened and Washington would submit a plan that not necessarily be coordinated with Israel's views.

Furthermore, Israel's leaders see Washington as endorsing the Egyptian demand for total Israeli withdrawal from the Mitla and Gidi passes as the only way to salvage an interim agreement.

Israel wants to keep a toehold at the eastern ends of the 19-mile-long defiles and to keep a surveillance position overlooking them to monitor troop movements.

The government has been campaigning for the past five months to build up the military importance of the passes, which Israel seized in the 1967 war.

However, the debate last week by politicians and the press here boiled down to this: Are the passes worth the risk of losing America's political, economic and military support?

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin told his party members last Tuesday that "we stand before a clear decision between a hard partial settlement and going to Geneva where an American plan would not necessarily be pre-coordinated with Israel."

Rabin also said "serious argument" was going on with Washington, but he declined to call it a rift.

Nevertheless, the prime minister stressed that Israel "would get less from the U.S." Jerusalem and Washington do not come to an understanding on the interim settlement with Egypt.

Rabin has so far not made clear his own stand on the issue of the passes versus American support.

Kissinger Seeking Emergency Aid For Egypt

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is trying to line up America's allies for emergency aid to Egypt in order to smooth the way for an accord with Israel, informed sources said Saturday.

The project is expected to be discussed at a summit meeting of the nine Common Market governments in Brussels on July 16.

One well-informed source said the U.S. approach for help to Egypt was not made through the Common Market organization but to individual member governments and to other governments outside the group, including Japan. The object is to get a group together to cooperate on the aid.

West German Foreign Minister Hans Dieter Genscher is reported to have brought the matter to the attention of the Common Market. In the U.S. view, it is up to the nine countries whether they want to go into the project together or separately.

Egypt's economic situation is chronically bad. President Anwar Sadat has had help from the Arab oil-producing countries as well as from the United States.

American officials believe it is in the interest of the West to keep Sadat from being too heavily dependent on the other Arabs, and from being tempted to seek aid again from the Soviets.

Kissinger will be seeing Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Geneva on Thursday and Friday on the Middle East situation.

He also will go to London, Paris and Bonn — where Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin will be spending the latter part of the week.

In the effort to get a settlement between Israel and Egypt, aid for Israel is considered largely a U.S. concern. West European governments, with France and Britain in the lead, have officially tilted toward the Arab side — despite popular sympathy for Israel.

The governments have in mind that Western Europe depends heavily on the Arabs for oil, much more heavily than the United States does. They have set up a "Euro-Arab dialogue" in the attempt to strengthen relations. Though an attempt is made to keep oil out of the discussion, the emphasis is on financial, economic and industrial cooperation — with some political sympathy implied.

The Common Market governments have a particular eagerness to show friendship for the Arabs at this point. A new trade agreement between the Common Market and Israel went into effect Tuesday, amid persistent complaints from the Arabs.

Vengeful Israelis Turned Back By Police

JERUSALEM (AP) — Riot police used a water cannon Saturday to beat back several hundred stone-throwing Israelis who tried to take reprisals on Arabs for a terrorist bomb that killed 13 persons.

The rioters smashed several police car windows and a few policemen received bruises and cuts from the hail of rocks, but no arrests were reported.

The Israelis tried to invade a row of Arab watermelon stands on the old border dividing east and west Jerusalem after police announced that an Israeli family of three — a father, mother and 9-year-old daughter — were killed in the bomb explosion Friday. Two Arabs — a man and a woman — also were killed in the blast.

The bomb was packed in an old refrigerator and left in front of a toy store on Jerusalem's busiest street. Seventy-two persons were injured in the explosion, the worst in the Holy City in recent memory. A Palestinian guerrilla group in Lebanon claimed credit for it.

Elsewhere, Lebanese Premier Rashid Karami sought to reassure foreign businessmen that his country is secure following months of street fighting between leftists, rightists, Moslems and Christians that left 900 dead.

"We have emerged from these troubles successfully which proves once again the Lebanese miracle," he told foreign newsmen in Beirut, the commercial center of the Middle East. Karami promised foreign companies in Lebanon his government would do everything in its power to preserve an atmosphere of calm "to give a sense of confidence to foreigners."

Meanwhile, Israel's leaders prepared for a crucial cabinet session which could decide Israel's stance on peace negotiations.

'Grossly Retarded' Youth Slated To Die July 18

CUMMINS PRISON FARM, Ark. (AP) — Nineteen-year-old Henry Lee Giles has an IQ of 59, is "grossly retarded" and is scheduled to die in the electric chair in less than two weeks.

He would be the first person executed in the United States since June 2, 1967, when Luis Joe Monge was put to death at the Colorado State Penitentiary.

Prison officials say they have made no preparations to execute Giles because they expect a stay of execution.

Giles was convicted in May of stabbing to death Evelyn Drummond, 53, during a robbery in Forrest City. In a signed confession submitted into evidence, Giles said he killed Mrs. Drummond because "something came over me to make me do something wrong."

Giles' attorney, Phil Hickey, said the teen-ager has the mentality of a 7½-year-old and didn't know he was signing a confession.

Dr. Arthur Rogers, a clinical psychologist at Veteran's Administration Hospital in North Little Rock, said Gile's IQ was 59 and that he would be classified as "retarded . . . grossly so."

Prosecuting Atty. Gene Raff said state hospital doctors agreed that Giles was retarded, but that he had "no psychosis, and knew right from wrong."

Circuit Court Judge O. H. Hargrave, who ordered the July 18 execution, said: "I am well aware that the passing of a death sentence on the defendant is going to open public debate that can be argued pro and con . . .

"At one time I thought it (the death penalty) did no good," Hargrave said. "Since that time I have seen things happen that have caused me to reconsider. I don't know whether the death penalty is right or not. I do know that without it our society is in dire trouble."

In 1970, after a widely publicized investigation caused the entire Arkansas prison system to be declared unconstitutional, prison officials dismantled and stored the state's electric chair.

Silverton Cowboy Wins Wilkinson Steer Roping Event

LANDER, Wyo. (AP) — Walt Arnold of Silverton, Tex., won the all around average event in the 2nd annual Bill Wilkinson Memorial Steer Roping Contest at the 80th annual Pioneer Days Rodeo.

Arnold roped two steers in a combined time of 34.7 seconds to win $582.

Tim Prather of Post, Tex., won a similar amount for winning the first go-round in 16.5 seconds, and Dave Bliss of Potter, Mont., earned the same total for taking the second go-round in 15.1 seconds.

About 450 entrants competed for the prize money of more than $16,000 in the three-day rodeo that wound up Friday night.

Other winners and their earnings were:

Steer wrestling—Jim Robinette, Lamar, Colo., $628.

Team roping—Jim Rodriguez, Castroville, Calif., and Jim Compton, Phoenix, Ariz., $554 each.

Bull riding—John Davis, Homedale, Idaho, $764.

Saddle bronc—Dode Givens, Arapahoe, Wyo., $482.

Calf roping—George Yocham, Bartlesville, Okla. $602.

Bareback—Mickey Young, Price, Utah, $497.

Girl's barrel racing—Jimmie Gibbs, Valley Mills, Tex., $250.

24 Former Greek Bigwigs Will Face Trial For Treason

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Twenty-four leaders of the former Greek dictatorship will stand trial July 28 on charges of high treason and insurrection for their role in the April 1967 military takeover, the government announced Saturday.

The trial is expected to last several weeks. The defendants include ex-dictator George Papadopoulos, his successor and former military police chief Dimitrios Ioannides, and one-time regent George Zoitakis. The charges carry a maximum death penalty.

Meanwhile, a legal and political storm broke out after the Supreme Court's decision Thursday not to refer to trial another 104 civilian ranking officials of the dictatorship on the ground that they had no immediate role in the 1967 coup.

They include three former premiers, one archbishop and scores of ministers and undersecretaries, all appointees of the junta strongmen during the dictatorship's seven year duration.

South Vietnam's New Government Said Rebuilding

By RICHARD BLYSTONE

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — According to Saigon broadcasts, the new South Vietnamese leaders have restored 200 miles of war-damaged rail lines and directed rebuilding of 50 bridges, filling of bomb and shell craters and clearing of mines and live explosives from farmlands.

The broadcasts also are saying dozens of new irrigation and land-clearing projects are under way and that factories have resumed production — some of them with workers in charge.

But the broadcasts indicate the leadership in Saigon remains largely in the hands of the Military Management Committee which took over after the surrender on April 30, although the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government is six years old.

The Communist-led Military Management Committee wasted no time in asserting itself in foreign affairs. In the first week it laid claim to South Vietnam's seat in the United Nations and the old government's diplomatic property in foreign capitals including Washington, although relations with the United States are not in sight.

It demanded return of ships and aircraft flown out by refugees and, according to a Washington report, wrested an island in the Gulf of Thailand from Cambodia and battled Khmer Rouge forces on the Mekong Delta border.

It sent a diplomatic delegation to explore opening relations with its old enemy, Thailand.

The broadcasts also indicate the leadership is having a more difficult time with human problems.

The new regime has said in broadcasts that its No. 1 problem is security, a term that seems to encompass everything from pockets of military resistance and banditry to small-scale speculation and uncooperativeness.

A French diplomat, who asked not to be quoted by name, arrived in Laos from South Vietnam last week and told newsmen that shooting is heard nightly in downtown Saigon.

"By 8:30 p.m., the city is dead," he said. "People are afraid to go outside."

The Saigon Liberation radio has reported clashes in provinces near Saigon and the capture of soldiers of the old regime who had been holding out.

To win hearts and minds the new leadership has drawn heavily in broadcasts on the image of the late North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh, admired by Vietnamese on both sides as a patriot and liberator from the French. Ho's image has been distributed in thousands of posters and his words, according to the Saigon radio, in tons of leaflets, song sheets and books.

Revolutionary people's committees have been set up for neighborhood law and order, and the new rulers have founded organizations for every age and status: liberated artists, liberated old people, liberated women and the like, the broadcasts indicate.

Saigon broadcasts have mentioned dozens of student and youth oranizations, with functions ranging from helping clean streets to leading people to health care, to protecting public property.

The Saigon reports say American books and magazines have been banned as "obscene," long male hair and Western dress have been denounced and Saigon's military boss, Gen. Tran Van Tra, has blamed the Americans for leading South Vietnam into "lascivious and decadent" ways.

Dispatches from Western correspondents in Saigon in the first weeks under Communist rule said prostitution, thievery and black marketeering were still going on. Later reports said such pursuits had waned under harsher measures, including public humiliation of transgressors and shooting of thieves.

And while Saigon reports indicated armed resistance to the Communists was not significant, the capital's military headquarters had to twice extend the deadline for soldiers and civil servants of the old regime to report for registration.

Saigon broadcasts for weeks called daily for people to report. In June the message changed: It called on the populace, including children, for help in ferreting out and turning in "traitorous elements" and "lackeys of the Americans." From the few examples given it appeared that the targets of this drive were not die-hard resistance members, but simply businessmen and others trying to hold onto their money and make more.

Hunger also has been a major problem, according to radio reports.

The massive movement of refugees just before the end added to an already grave situation among urban poor. Broadcasts have described rice distributions and the return of thousands of refugees to their land.

Travelers arriving here from Saigon said the influence of the sterner, more organized North Vietnamese seemed to grow rather than diminish, and less and less was heard of the South Vietnamese leadership.

A recent arrival in Bangkok said the frenetic gaiety of central Saigon had turned somber and the mood of the Vietnamese was "extreme despair."

Retired Army Colonel Killed

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Col. Robert F. Bayard, who helped pioneer night-vision equipment used by U.S. Army snipers in Vietnam, has been found shot to death outside a cafeteria in a fashionable Atlanta neighborhood, police say.

Bayard, 56, was shot in the left temple at close range with either a .32-or .28-caliber pistol, police said Friday.

Bayard's pockets were turned inside out and his wallet was missing. Police said they had no reason to suspect any motive other than robbery.

Bayard, who retired from the Army after the Vietnam war, had also worked with the United Nations Arab-Israeli peace-keeping mission on the staff of the late U.N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold. He commanded the 1st Army Brigade of the 87th Division sent to the Dominican Republic in 1965.

Downtown Lions Plan Planetarium Visit Wednesday

Bill Malone, program chairman of the Midland Downtown Lions Club, has announced a change in program procedure for the club's Wednesday noon meeting.

Members will meet for lunch at the American Legion Hall as usual, he said, but following the meal they will go to the Marian Blakemore Memorial Planetarium for a 30-minute audio-visual presentation.

Malone urged a large attendance for the special program.

Midland's Yule Parade To Feature Tech Band

Now that the Fourth of July is over, the Midland Chamber of Commerce has begun thinking about Christmas.

Chamber of Commerce Vice President Howard D. "Rocky" Ford announced at the Independence Day program at Cub Stadium that Texas Tech University's Red Raider Marching Band will be featured in Midland's Fifth Annual Christmas Parade.

This year's parade is scheduled for Dec. 6 and the theme will be "Christmas in America." In addition to its parade appearance, the Texas Tech band will present a "halftime" type marching show in Midland Memorial Stadium and will give an informal concert in the evening.

"We are delighted that director Dean Killion and the members of the Texas Tech band will be part of our parade this year," Ford said. "They are one of the finest university marching bands in the country. Their participation underlines the quality that we seek to present in our annual parades."

Chairman of the parade is Sam Blanck. He said invitations will be mailed next week to all area bands, inviting them to participate in a marching band contest in conjunction with the parade.

Mark Clark Visits With Pope Paul VI

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI Saturday received in private audience Gen. Mark Clark, commander of the U.S. 5th Army which liberated Italy from Nazi troops in World War II.

Gen. Clark is Italy for the 30th anniversary of Italy's liberation.

Dirt, Squirt & Quirt

— FARM, DAIRY AND RANCH NEWS —

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Agent

Young cotton and sorghum crops generally made good growth during the past week in the Midland area. Scattered rain showers have been beneficial, but the rain has been light and spotted in nature with many areas receiving little or none. Insect problems have generally been light on cotton, but the sunflower head moth was observed in high numbers in fields of sunflower. There are several hundred acres of sunflower planted in the Midland-Martin-Glasscock area this year. The larvae of the sunflower head moth is quite damaging to the seed heads and spraying is recommended at five-day intervals for two or three applications when the moth is observed in the field.

What's in store for cattlemen as far as prices are concerned for the remainder of 1975? Although there's optimism in some circles due to current stronger market prices and an increase in cattle feeding, it's a little early for cattlemen to begin cheering, contends Dr. Ed Uvacek, livestock marketing specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

In fact, producers may be in for another drop in market prices as the year moves along. Uvacek advises cattlemen to market or contract early and cull old cows as soon as possible.

• • •

What are the reasons for Uvacek's gloomy outlook? First of all, the supply of grain-fed beef should increase during the second half of the year. Fed cattle marketings are expected to be about 9 per cent larger during the last six months of 1975 than during the first half of the year. Increased cow liquidations will also boost the total beef supply.

Uvacek expects cow slaughter to increase 42 per cent during the last half of 1975 compared to the first six months of the year. More beef will also result from large kills of non-fed steers and heifers and calves. Slaughter of non-fed steers and heifers is expected to be up 62 per cent during the last half of the year while calf slaughter should be up almost 70 per cent. Cow-calf producers are loaded with calves that they will be marketing this summer and fall, points out Uvacek. Many of them will be moving to feedlots, but the expected overflow is sure to bring feeder prices down. All this means a weaker cattle market during the remainder of this year believes the specialist.

The fig is a fruit which many Midland gardeners culture in the home garden. Many fig trees set heavy crops, but shed the fruit prior to maturity. Seeds in other types fruit produce a hormone which prevents premature fruit drop.

Since figs do not have true seeds, the internal hormone level is low and fruit drop is stimulated very easily by such stresses as heat, drought, insects or disease.

Water must be applied carefully to keep the soil at field capaticy level. Mulching the trees with leaves, bark, etc., will help maintain available soil moisture. Most figs are infested with nematodes. This means that extra efforts should be made in watering figs, if fruit drop is to be prevented. Nitrogen fertilizer should be kept to a minimum because it stimulates excessive vegetation growth which increases the water requirement.

Helicopter Leased By FBI Crashes

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (AP) — The FBI said Saturday it is closing the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation to nonessential traffic while the crash of an FBI-leased helicopter is being investigated.

The helicopter was being used is the search for 16 persons sought in connection with the slaying of two FBI agents two weeks ago.

The FBI said there were no serious injuries in the crash, which occurred about four miles from here about 7:30 p.m. Friday. Aboard were two FBI agents and two crewmen.

An FBI spokesman in Washington said the crash apparently resulted from a mechanical problem. Newsmen were not allowed at the scene.

The Black Experience: A resolution approved and adopted by the 27th annual session of the Northwest Texas Conference of the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church held at Abilene, June 24-27; Bishop C. D. Coleman of Dallas, president; the Rev. V. L. Brown of Lubbock, secfary. It reads in part:

"Whereas, we hold that the black church should take advantage of present day opportunities for publicizing its work by means of the Daily newspaper, especially with those who have regular assigned church and-or religious editors on their news staff, and

Tieuel

"Whereas, we hold that the black church should take advantage of present day opportunities for publicizing its work by means of the daily newspaper, especially with those who have regular assigned church and-or religious editors on their news staff, and

"Whereas, radio and television stations are in many areas within the bounds of our Northwest Texas Conference are giving increased public service time to the churches in the ghetto and the black church in general, as well as extending equal opportunity for black personnel, and

"Whereas, this conference is cognizant of the fact that the Odessa American, under the leadership of its late publisher, Vern DeBolt Sr., is reported to have been the first daily newspaper within this conference territory to employ a regular black columnist to its staff 10 years ago . . . We therefore applaud the present staff of the Odessa American for continuing this policy of the people's right to know and of portraying the black experience today, as well as such outstanding daily newspapers as The Midland Reporter-Telegram, the Tulia Herald, the Abilene Reporter News, the Amarillo Globe News, the Wichita Falls Times and the Clovis News-Journal and perhaps others, for following the procedure and policy of showing the black experience in their columns.

"We respectfully urge other daily and weekly newspapers in the West Texas area and elsewhere, as well as all mass media, to join the movement to give greater exposure to the story of a people who for more than 200 years have continued to struggle to be totally free and without bitterness or malice toward any, but with faith and hope in God."

Chit-Chat: Fewer black babies on welfare? The word from the National Right to Life Committee is that 1.2 million abortions will be performed in America this year — 200,000 more than the last annual count and perhaps a million more than in any of the 197 years prior to the 1973 Supreme Court decision liberalizing applicable laws.

Until later, be a good neighbor. Remember they come in all colors. Peace.

YMCA Reduces Fun Club Fees

The Midland YMCA Central Branch has announced a reduction in the daily charge for its fun club program with new rates set at $1 per day for YMCA members and $1.50 per day for non-members.

The program is offered Monday and Wednesday of every week from 9 a.m. to 5:15 p.m. and on Friday from 9 a.m. to 4:15 p.m.

So far the club has visited the Midland Air Terminal, a television station, the Monahans Sand Hills and other interesting places. Future trips are scheduled to the telephone company, fire and police stations, a bakery, the court house and the Moss Creek reservoir near Big Spring.

In addition to special trips, the fun club participates in bowling, skating, miniature golf and other sports as well as arts and crafts. Wednesday afternoon is movie day.

The fun club is a drop-in program with no prior enrollment necessary and each youngster brings his or her lunch and bathing suit each day. Parents interested may telephone the YMCA at 682-3551 after 8:30 p.m.

New Lease On Life!

Good news is something readers look for and request more so today perhaps than ever before.

So, to those who consider the possibility of longer life as good news — and who doesn't? — we are delighted to present something especially for them.

Statisticians at Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., who study such things, report that Americans got a new lease on life in 1974, and it runs about six months longer than their old one. Good news . . . certainly!

Now, this may not seem very long to younger persons, but to others of us, six months is a right substantial, and appreciated, extension. In fact, any extension is appreciated.

This brings the average length of life to an all-time high in the United States, having increased more than one-half year from 71.3 years to 71.9 years in 1974.

The statisticians say this represents a gain of more than a year since 1969-71, and of more than 12½ years since 1929-31, when the average life span was approximately 59 years.

It was explained further that the favorable 1974 experience produced the largest annual increase in two decades and was due in large part to the decline in ischemic heart disease and other cardiovascular diseases. They accounted for more than half the decrease in deaths from all causes. Down also were deaths from motor vehicle accidents, pneumonia and influenza.

For newborn males, the expected lifetime at birth rose to just over 68 years; for females, it rose to more than 75½ years.

Interesting also is the fact that the expected remaining lifetime for men at age 65 — 13 years — is the same as that for women 5½ years older.

The chances for surviving from birth to midlife and beyond also are more favorable for females than males.

But as men and women reach a given age, their chances of reaching older ages increase. Thus, although at birth the average man is expected to live about 68 years, once he reaches age 65 he is expected to live up to age 78.

And if all this isn't good news, what is!

Life is longer than you thought! Enjoy it!

'Texas First' Meet

The first briefing session launching Gov. Dolph Briscoe's "Texas First" program will be held here Monday.

The session is scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. in the Community Room at Commercial Bank & Trust Co.

Other sessions are scheduled Tuesday at Amarillo; Thursday at Stephenville and Friday at Wichita Falls.

The four meetings were arranged at the governor's request by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. The Midland Chamber of Commerce is joining with WTCC in arrangements for the session here.

The "Texas First" program is designed to create 4,000 new, permanent and unsubsidized jobs for Texans and encourage the expansion of industry.

This certainly should be the goal throughout the land and it is fitting that Texas should be taking the lead in such an endeavor. The governor is due commendation for his efforts in this regard.

The "new, permanent and unsubsidized" part of the job program is the really significant factor of the statewide plan.

Midland and area residents will receive full details concerning the program at the Monday meeting here. It is a most worthwhile endeavor.

HEMISPHERE REPORT:

Brazilians Seeking Own Nuclear Power

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

Brazil feels that it needs its own nuclear industry because it cannot rely on the United States, either to defend the free world or to supply the fuel needed for peaceful use of atomic power.

That is the reasoning behind the deal that Brazil made with West Germany to trade Brazilian natural uranium for German advanced technology. The arrangement moved Sen. John Pastore, chairman of the U.S. congressional joint committee on atomic energy, to protest heatedly.

Congressman Herbert Levy made part of Brazil's point clear in a speech in the Chamber of Deputies in Brasilia on June 10.

"The United States, which passively watched the installation of a Communist dictatorship in Cuba and is now watching the strangulation of the Portuguese people at the hands of a minority of Communist officers, should not be concerned over the signing of a nuclear agreement by an allied nation, aimed at peaceful objectives of development," Levy said.

The rest of the story is that Brazil doubts U.S. reliability as a supplier of nuclear fuel, that is of the enriched uranium that it takes to run most atomic electric-generating plants.

It may not be generally known in the United States, but Brazil is aware, that U.S. uranium enrichment plants now are operating at capacity without being able to keep up with demand.

The United States has even had to authorize some uranium shipments to the Soviet Union for processing into fuel for foreign countries.

What is more, so far as Brazil knows, plans for increasing U.S. capacity to produce enriched uranium are still in the talking stage.

It was not until the end of June that President Ford introduced legislation seeking congressional authorization to let private firms enter the nuclear-fuel processing business. Up to now it has been a government monopoly. Washington sources confidently predict that the Ford proposals will stir much debate in Congress.

Meanwhile, in Brazil, a country that believes it possesses half of the world's potential uranium reserves, but which is woefully deficient in petroleum, the need for a reliable source of nuclear fuel seems obvious.

Brazil makes no secret of the fact that acquisition of nuclear technology from West Germany would bring with it the ability to make atomic bombs as well as produce electricity.

But, as the newspaper Jornal do Brasil, of Rio de Janeiro, prefers to emphasize, "For us, nuclear energy is related to the accelerated economic development which the country has been pursuing in recent years . . . Although generously abundant in our country, hydraulic resources are insufficient to insure the long-term maintenance of a growth effort which requires an increasing supply of energy for industrial undertaking, for rural electrification projects, for urban expansion."

The newspaper O Globo, also of Rio, protested that the objection raised abroad, that Brazil would concentrate more on making atomic bombs than on generating electricity, is an allegation that "reaches the point of being insulting."

However, O Estado de S. Paulo reached the conclusion "that the principal preoccupation of U.S. diplomacy is not with the military nuclearization of Brazil, but rather with the survival and validity of the obligations that the United States assumed with reference to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, stipulated in terms of the guarantees given the security of the Federal Republic (of Germany) and the assurances given by Bonn in 1955." That was when Germany was admitted into NATO and pledged not to manufacture atomic, biological or chemical weapons on its territory.

Nevertheless, a careful reading of the many editorials Brazil's two greatest newspapers have written on the subject suggests that Brazil really is thinking of what Jornal do Brasil termed "the use of atomic energy in diverse forms."

"It is our duty not to permit Brazil to be the victim of forceful actions by unscrupulous governments," O Estado declared. "Who is to guarantee that, if Brazil renounced having a complete nuclear industry, with required technology, the other candidates for membership in the atomic club — Iran, Pakistan, South Korea, Israel and Argentina, not to mention others — would follow its example, and renounce this contemporary 'status' symbol of modern powers?"

Jornal do Brasil commented that "although it can be realistically argued that nuclear energy was militarily oriented in the initial stage of its application, that does not necessarily mean that a developing country intends, without a just reason, to misrepresent the objectives of its peaceful use."

Clearly, Brazil intends to concentrate on utilization of the atom for peaceful purposes, but without ignoring its military potential.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By JACK ANDERSON
with Les Whitten

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — The private papers of Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott reveal for the first time the agonizing that went on inside the GOP during the Watergate investigation.

The papers show that top Republican leaders had grave misgivings about President Nixon even while they continued to offer him lip service. But once they became convinced of his guilt, they no longer would support him.

Clearly, Nixon never could have remained in office, as Indira Gandhi is doing in India, by declaring a national emergency and usurping dictatorial powers. His own party leaders simply wouldn't have gone along.

Our investigation has established, for example, that former Defense Secretary Mel Laird fiercely resisted any improper White House pressure when he was Nixon's domestic affairs counselor. He gave his assistants explicit orders, no matter who called from the White House, that they were not to comply with improper requests. They were directed to refer all calls for special favors to his office.

On March 19, 1974, the Scott papers show, Senate Republican leaders had a dramatic confrontation with Nixon's personal attorney, James St. Clair, and White House counselor Dean Burch.

"We told St. Clair," Scott confided afterward to an aide, "that our obligation was not to the President but to the truth. (There was) common agreement on need for full disclosure, on the fact that this scandal continues to harm the nation and the party.

"We said that, if the case comes to the Senate from the House, that we act as jurors and can't prejudge the evidence. At the same time, we cannot and will not shield any guilty party no matter how high it goes. Will it go that high? I know you think it will. St. Clair thinks not. It's a hell of a situation!"

Scott provides an intimate, absorbing account of the GOP agonizing in an exchange of confidential memos with his former trusted assistant and confidant, Martin Hamberger.

As far back as the 1968 Republican convention, Scott expressed reservations about Nixon. "He has the knowledge," Scott told Hamberger. "But the question is: Does he have the wisdom?"

Scott continued to worry about Nixon in private, the memos show, even while defending him in public. Early in the Watergate drama, Hamberger asked his boss bluntly: "Are you sure you're getting the whole truth from these people?"

"Someone is not telling the truth," responded Scott on May 10, 1973. "It is H and E (H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman)? Dean? Or, God forbid, higher up? I have today decided that I must not, as party leader, prejudge this horrible situation until all the facts are out."

The previous March 19, according to the memos, Scott huddled with Gerald Ford who was then the House Republican leader. "We discussed the possibility of White House involvement and I indicated I would put it up to R. N. (Richard Nixon) at the leadership meeting at the White House the next day," related Scott.

The following morning, Scott sat down with Nixon in the oval office. "I told R.N. that many senators had urged me to clear up continuing doubts and I thought he should authorize me to state, if it was true, that no one (including himself) in the White House was involved," related Scott.

Nixon lied to his Senate leader. "No one now at the White House was involved in it," he said.

"Good," said Scott. "I'll tell the press that on my authority."

"Hell no," declared the President. "You can say it on my authority."

Commented Scott in his memo on the incident: "This is relieving. Still, somebody knows more than they're telling . . . The truth will finally come out. Lord knows where it will lead."

After Congress reconvened the following January, Scott held an urgent meeting with House Republican leader John Rhodes and Republican National Chairman George Bush about Watergate. "All of us worried about lacking enough facts," Scott reported afterwards.

He pressed for the facts at a February 1 meeting with presidential staff chief Al Haig and attorney James St. Clair. "They don't conceal the seriousness but continue to insist that the (White House) tapes which Haig showed me last December do not make a case against R.N.," related Scott. "I asked whether there was anything else. St. Clair didn't think so."

Scott talked it over with his assistant Senate leader, Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., on March 19, 1974. "I complained to him that the White House never takes my advice . . . Bob thought we'd better have a go-round with our leadership and get their reactions."

Scott had recommended "full disclosure" to the White House. "I told Gerry Ford at one of our meetings what I'd said," reported Scott. "He's made the same strong recommendation to R.N. that I have. We both get the same answer: 'That's what I'm trying to do.'"

Scott went back to the White House on March 29, 1974, to recommend not only full disclosure but full cooperation with the House impeachment inquiry.

"R.N. stressed willingness to cooperate," wrote Scott, "that they had been in touch with (House Judiciary Chairman Peter) Rodino, and (ranking Republican Edward) Hutchinson, that St. Clair was working on it, that they would keep us informed."

According to the memo, Scott told Nixon to his face: "What's needed here is a strong show of moral indignation. You're in a position to say, 'let the chips fall, let the guilty be punished, I will not stand for wrongful conduct.' I think now you'll have to say it with a great deal of emphasis."

Unless there was full cooperation, Scott stressed in a March 30, 1974, memo, "our whole leadership will have to pull away from him . . . We're beginning to realize that we may yet be jurors."

President Is Ready For Energy Showdown

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

Novak

WASHINGTON — Giddy with his latest veto triumph over the Democratic Congress, President Ford is now ready for a new round of energy hard-ball: force Congress to accept his plan to decontrol "old" oil, comprising about two-thirds of all domestic production, or watch him veto legislation extending the controls law, which expires Aug. 30.

On the performance of his recent veto battles with the overwhelming Democratic majority in the House — four battles and four wins for Mr. Ford — the President is now confident he could sustain a veto of the bill extending the basic price control authority, called the Emergency Petroleum Allocations Act.

Moreover, Republican leaders in Congress have quietly informed the White House they will accept all political risks in such a new game of energy hard-ball.

Those risks are formidable. Allowing the controls law to expire would trigger a rapid rise in gasoline prices of between 10 and 16 cents a gallon, and a similar, but possibly smaller, increase in all other petroleum products.

The President's decontrol plan has been sitting on his desk for weeks waiting to be sent to the House and Senate. It would phase decontrol over a two-year period. Once the plan gets to Congress, either House can kill it by a majority vote.

Thus, the Democratic Congress holds the whip hand on presidential decontrol. But with the controls law expiring, Mr. Ford holds a more potent whip; power to veto the extension bill.

For weeks, presidential aides and energy czar Frank Zarb have hedged on whether to use such hard-ball strategy to force congressional decontrol. Decontrol is essential to a major part of the Ford energy plan — use free-market mechanisms and the $2 oil import duty to raise the price of energy, reducing consumption and dependence on foreign oil.

Strongly tipping the balance toward tough action was House Commerce Committee approval of a decontrol plan last week regarded as totally inadequate in the White House. It would take effect gradually over five years and sets a $7.50 ceiling on almost all domestic oil (the price of uncontrolled or "new" oil is now about $11.50). In the short term, it would actually reduce the cost of energy — exactly reversing the Ford strategy.

Bargaining to avoid an explosive veto showdown will get serious when Congress reconvenes after its July 4 vacation for a mere three weeks before its August vacation. Mr. Ford will offer to stretch his decontrol plan over three instead of two years.

But because Mr. Ford now feels so confident he holds the upper hand, he won't offer much beyond that.

A footnote: Mr. Ford's willingness to risk an explosive increase in gasoline prices is partly based on private polls now under White House study showing that 50 per cent of the public is now aware of the energy "crisis" and wants something done.

WATERGATE'S SHADOW

The latest sign that the ghost of Watergate haunts the Republican party is top-level consideration now being given to Robert C. Moot, former comptroller of the Defense Department, to be treasurer of President Ford's 1976 election campaign committee.

A career government employe who started out in the Truman administration, Moot's credentials as a nuts-and-bolts certified public accountant are gilt-edged, exactly what is wanted by political advisers of Mr. Ford, squeamish about any financial hanky-panky.

The new campaign financing law bristles with legal strictures which require fastidious reporting of every penny raised and spent. Now 64 and recently retired as comptroller of Amtrak, Moot bears little resemblance to Hugh Sloan, the youthful 1972 treasurer of Richard Nixon's Committee to Reelect the President, who was often an unwitting tool of Nixon's top political henchmen.

Moot was hired by former Democratic Defense Secretary Clark Clifford in 1968 to run the comptroller's office and remained during Nixon's first term, after which he went with Amtrak.

Although legal papers filed with the Federal Election Commission 10 days ago listed David Packard, former Deputy Defense Secretary, as both finance chairman and treasurer, the two jobs will be split.

A footnote: Army Secretary Howard (Bo) Callaway is about to take over as Ford campaign chairman. With Assistant Defense Secretary Robert Ellsworth a candidate for a top campaign role, Moot on tap for treasurer, and Packard named as finance chairman, Mr. Ford's campaign HQ is assuming the proportions of a little Pentagon. ## Let's Participate

To The Editor:

The Midland League of Women Voters congratulates the members of the Midland city council for scheduling evening meetings of the city council on the fourth Tuesdays of June, July and August.

This is an effort on the part of the city council to encourage and enable a wider spectrum of the city's population to attend the meetings and participate in the affairs of local government.

We in the League of Women Voters can attest to the fact that attendance at these meetings is a prerequisite to becoming an informed voter as well as an assistance to the council in its efforts to represent fairly all the people of Midland.

The city council has taken the first step. Now — citizens of Midland — it's up to you! Attend an evening meeting and be prepared to spend an interesting and informative night out.

Mahon Listens

To The Editor:

I want to express publicly my appreciation to our representative in Congress, George Mahon, for taking a direct personal interest in the job discrimination case at UTPB.

It's good to know that we have representatives who will hear us out on issues of great national significance.

I think the American people are fed up with federal bureaucrats who consider themselves above the law and beyond the reach of our elected representatives.

What better way, I ask, to celebrate the bicentennial year 1976 than to rally for a second American revolution that would return power from Washington, D.C., to the people. Our small businesses are ensnarled in red tape and saddled by excess taxation. How many more productive enterprises would we have today on the economic scene if our taxes had not been so heavy? How much higher might the standard of living of all Americans be?

Those who warned us of "creeping socialism" in the early 1960s were right. Our money is being used to increase government interference in our schools, our communities and our factories.

Let's speak up and get the message to Washington and find out who rules the roost up there on Capitol Hill, the bureaucrats of the people?

Stop The Buzzing

To The Editor:

I have a suggestion for making summer more pleasant in Midland. Oddly enough, it does not involve expenditure of any funds, taxpayers' or otherwise. It it also simple, and the results will depend on how many wish to participate.

I'm talking about cutting down on the cicada (locust) population. I know they number a trillion or more. Anyway, without scientific knowledge of how quickly one can reproduce many others, I do know from observation it is a very short cycle. One killed means fewer in the near future, and less next year.

Sorry I didn't start this campaign sooner. I have been going out early. When they leave those ugly little brown shells there is a matter of hours before they can fly. The squeamish can step on them as they lie in the grass. Anybody can hit them with any small stick or something. Personally, I just carry my plastic bucket around, kill and remove them (ants may be attracted if they are left on the ground). I figure that every one I killed three weeks ago means at least 20 less this year, maybe more. So, if I kill five a day, and someone else kills five a day, that's a small dent in this horrible buzzing, buzzing, buzzing.

Cape Verde Eyes Union

Agence France-Presse

PRAIA, Cape Verde — The Cape Verde islands, which became independent Saturday, ought to unite with Guinea-Bissau, more for strategic than for economic reasons, the man who negotiated the independence of the two former Portuguese colonies said in an interview here.

"The strategic aspect of the unity that we want to build between independent Guinea-Bissau and Cape Verde is more important than its economic aspect," said Maj. Pedro Pires, the chairman of the National Commission for Cape Verde of the African Party for the Independence of Guinea-Bissau and the Cape Verde islands (PAIGC).

The Atlantic Ocean Islands and the African mainland territory should unite especially because they would be too weak to stand up to the outside world if they kept themselves isolated from each other, the PAIGC leader said.

Maj. Pires charged that certain forces in the world were ready to pay to get Cape Verde not to unite with Guinea-Bissau and thereby strengthen the two countries.

Pires said a volunteer para-military force was currently being set up in the islands alongside the regular army founded last June 9. To assure discipline, the volunteers will be trained by the PAIGC, whose ranks include many Cape Verdeans with long experience of guerrilla warfare in Guinea-Bissau — including Pires himself.

Pires said that during the six months of transition government in the islands, the PAIGC had enacted a provisional land reform which allowed for workers' management of six big plantations which belonged to "absentee" landlords who had gon abroad, abandoning their property.

Canada Emigrants' Favorite

By STAN CROCK
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The quiet but steady movement of native-born Americans to take up permanent residence in other countries appears to be continuing unabated, with Canada leading the way as the favorite destination.

No government agency or private organization keeps figures on the number of emigrants, but inquiries at numerous embassies indicate the overall level remains stable at about 40,000 a year.

Figures kept by four of the most popular countries — few embassies here have accurate statistics either — indicate that while the total number of emigrants remains the same, the figures for individual countries can fluctuate greatly.

Trickle Persists

Emigration to Canada and New Zealand has surged, while the flow to Australia and Israel has declined.

The trickle of Americans leaving the country permanently, which constitutes a tiny fraction of the population, persists despite the end of the draft, despite the end of domestic hostilities over the Vietnam war, and despite more restrictive immigration policies in other countries.

Canada and Australia, for example, have restricted the group of emigrants largely to professionals and skilled workers.

Between 1960 and 1970, an estimated 250,000 native-born Americans emigrated, with yearly totals ranging from about 12,000 at the beginning of the period to about 37,000 at the end, according to Bob Warren of the Census Bureau.

1 Million Leave

Warren also estimated that about 1 million foreign-born Americans left the country during that period, presumably returning to their former homes.

Canada's American contingent increased last year by 15 per cent over 1969, when The Washington Post last surveyed foreign embassies. The figure last year was 26,500 or nearly two-thirds of the total of those leaving. The influx occurred despite a tightening of immigration regulations.

The Canadian government is debating further restrictions in addition to the recently instituted point system, which includes criteria such as education level, knowledge of French or English and whether the person has a job.

Number Doubles

The criterion that may affect Americans the most is that a Canadian must be offered a job before it can be offered to an immigrant.

The number of Americans going to New Zealand has nearly doubled since 1969, rising from 1,315 to 2,426. New Zealand has not adopted more stringent immigration regulations but has tightened up enforcement of already enacted rules, a New Zealand embassy spokesman said.

The rules include a maximum age limit of 45, a prior guarantee of employment and a requirement that married couples have accommodations, he said.

Souring Economy

Emigration to Australia, on the other hand, has dropped from the 1971 high point, 6,600, to about 2,500 last year. In 1971 the peak of emigration to the four countries was reached, more than 41,000.

Charles L. Waterman, a press attache in the Australian embassy here, attributed the decline to steps his government took in reaction to a souring economy. "It's pointless to bring in immigrants when Australians are unemployed," he said.

Restrictions are fairly tight except for doctors, data processors, the metal trades and building trades generally, Waterman said.

War Blamed

Economic conditions, along with the October 1973 war are the reasons for the precipitous decline in emigration to Israel, according to Ida Kahn of Israel Aliyah, a group facilitating emigration.

Fewer families and more single persons are emigrating to Israel, she said.

The 1971 high of 7,900 dropped to 3,500 last year, even fewer than the 6,400 who moved to Israel in 1969.

Last year a little more than 35,000 Americans moved to the four countries. Several thousand more moved to South America, Mexico, other Western European countries and Africa.

ART BUCHWALD—

Nessen Needs You, Harry Truman

WASHINGTON — One day shortly after Harry Truman took over as President of the United States, Bess Truman was cooking him some veal stew. It was summer and unfortunately the air conditioning had gone out. Bess was irritable and yelled, "My, it's hot in here." Harry who also was irritable yelled back, "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen."

Bess stomped out and Harry went hungry that night.

I couldn't help thinking of Harry Truman's remark when I read about Ron Nessen's disenchantment with the press. When you think about White House news, you have to think about the kitchen.

Every day the President's press secretary is supposed to cook up news for 40 to 50 regular White House reporters. In the days of Eisenhower, Kennedy and even Johnson, the correspondents, with one or two exceptions, ate up everything that was served to them. Some of them wound up with indigestion. But they never complained because they were always hungry for news and Jim Hagerty, Pierre Salinger and Bill Moyers were able to whip up enough hash to satisfy them and their readers.

Then came Ron Ziegler. Although Ziegler was supposed to be the head chef, he never knew what Nixon's staff members were cooking up in the kitchen. They would hand him a mess of pottage to take out to the press. "What is it?" he would ask, and they would tell him, "Steak."

Like a dummy, Ziegler would go out and tell the correspondents he was giving them Grade A certified beef.

For a while the reporters ate it. But then they started getting stomach pains and complained to Ziegler that he was feeding them garbage.

This hurt Ziegler's professional pride, but everyone from President Nixon on down refused to change the menus. One day they sent out cornmeal, the next day dog food and the third day thin gruel that had been condemned by the Food and Drug Administration.

"We can't live on this daily diet," the reporters screamed at Ziegler. "Give us something we can get our teeth into."

Ziegler ignored their pleas, and the daily feeding of the press became more and more acrimonious. Pretty soon the correspondents were throwing the stuff back in Ziegler's face, and he'd walk out of the press room with egg all over it.

Finally the White House press corps decided to brown bag it and accept nothing the Nixon administration served up to them. As each White House cook was forced to resign, the heat in the kitchen got worse. In fact, it got so bad that even President Nixon decided he could not stand it and he got out for good.

So then came Ron Nessen. (Jerry terHorst made a few meals, but when he and President Ford could not agree on the ingredients of a briefing he resigned.)

Nessen thought he could make the press briefings delicious occasions for everybody. He served up what he considered choice cuts of information and buttery items of news.

He was certain every time he threw the press a bone, they would believe it was chicken. But unfortunately the White House correspondents had been burned by the Nixon Administration and were still suspicious.

This lack of confidence seemed to be getting to Nessen. "I work day and night to feed them and I get nothing but complaints. How can I cook up stories if they say I lied about the recipes?"

It's a good question that only a Harry Truman could answer.

As it stands now, every time Nessen comes out and says, "I have a juicy tidbit for all of you," some joker in the back always yells out, "I say it's spinach and I say the hell with it."

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Columnists Paint Confusing Picture

By STUART LONG
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — People who read the oil pages of Texas newspapers know what's going on.

But those who read only the columnists from Washington must indeed be puzzled about the oil and gas production situation in the United States in general and in Texas and the Gulf of Mexico in specific.

You read that a House committee in Washington has subpoenaed records of the American Gas Association and a number of major oil producers to learn whether or not gas is being withheld from the market.

You read where Frank Ikard, president of the American Petroleum Institute, says that it is "absolutely false" that the companies he speaks for are "blackmailing the government" to get natural gas prices deregulated.

You read in the news pages that world oil production the first four months of this year is down 8.4 per cent, that the House Ways and Means Committee starts hearings next Thursday on cutting down the tax credits on intangible oil and gas well drilling costs, and you wonder how that is going to encourage people to drill oil and gas wells.

But on the oil pages, and in the oil magazines, you read that the Exxon-Mobil-Champlin Group is turning back to the government six tracts in the Gulf off the Florida Coast for which they paid $632 million in cash bonuses. Test wells have showed that the seismographs showed something that wasn't oil or gas, so they lost a big fat gamble.

You also read that the Federal Power Commission has told Mitchell Energy to continue to sell gas to an interstate pipline at 20 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, even though its contract has expired, when Mitchell could get $1.90 or $1.90 per 1,000 selling the gas inside Texas.

So you begin to sense the uncertainty which affects daily decisions by oil and gas executives. What if, they wonder when deciding on a $1 million investment to drill an almost certain gas well in a proven area, that bill up in Congress passes to let the FPC set the price of intrastate as well as interstate gas?

The well would pay out at $1.90 per 1,000, but it wouldn't at 51 cents. Do you drill it, or do you say "let's wait and see?" And even if you have a contract to sell the gas at $1.90, can the contract be set aside as was that of Mitchell Energy?

What happens, Paul R. Haas of Corpus Christi Oil & Gas told the State School Land Board the other day, is that the major companies back off on drilling. His firm was able to get a couple of rigs from a major company which has lots of leases to drill. But it's waiting back. The independent company is going ahead with drilling, hoping the contracts it has already executed will be honored no matter what Congress does.

The result of this uncertainty in the industry which has taken nearly as many gambles as a West Texas dry land farmer was reflected the other day when the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists took a survey of Houston oilwell drilling companies.

Six months ago, the drilling contractors had a backlog of 331 wells to be drilled, waiting for their rigs to be freed of other commitments. Now they have only 114 wells on their waiting list.

The count of wells being drilled was still high in mid-June, 617 in Texas where there were only 485 a year ago. But the earth scientist group predicts that the total will slip substantially by the end of July.

That goal of making the United States self-sufficient in oil by 1980 seemed six months ago to be attainable. The wildcatters were working like mad. Drilling rigs were being patched together. Some Texas operators were even flying pipe from Alaska to get their wells on production.

Everybody was busy and enthusiastic and working to bring in more oil production.

But now the tone of the oil pages and the oil magazines has changed, reflecting the change in attitude of the oil industry people who give them their news.

Under the impetus of the Arabian embargo, oil production in Texas finally halted its decline in March. But the decline has set in again, and from the way it sounds it will continue to decline, because of the lack of a firm national energy policy and the continual threats to make it harder to find oil and gas.

Observations

The Speech Nobody Made. Too bad more 4th of July orators didn't say what needs saying on energy. Bluntly, that America needs more of its own energy so our country will be less dependent on imported oil; so foreign countries can't threaten U.S. jobs and U.S. security with artificial crises.

We wish, specifically, that the orators had spelled out what it will take to improve things. Decontrol of oil and new natural gas prices, for instance, is a "must" if capital is to be attracted to the search for new U.S. reserves. So is offshore drilling in the Atlantic and Pacific, where the best prospects lie for big oil and gas finds. Plus, realistic environmental regulations, so our country can mine more of its abundant coal and build more nuclear power plants.

Some people will object to these measures. But where would our country be if the Boys of '76 had allowed the Redcoats, Hessians and a few dedicated Tories to block their quest for American independence?

"TWO HUNDRED YEARS FROM NOW NO ONE WILL REMEMBER ANY OF THIS!"

Second Time Around. Volunteer recycling centers sprouted like crocuses with the ecology movement—and wilted just as quickly. Not so in Alexandria, Va. Two years ago, a group of citizens and charitable organizations invested $155,000 in a non-profit company to put recycling on a sound business basis. They hired two full-time workers, bought a truck, a crusher, some storage facilities, and deposit bins for supermarket parking lots. The company sells some 200 tons a month of crushed glass, aluminum and other trash to recyclers. The city government, convinced by this demonstration that the operation can break even, has taken over the project. Says Dayton Cook, Alexandria's director of environmental services: "Recycling cuts our landfill needs greatly. We think all cities will be going this route soon." The sooner the better, we hope.

End of the Road. Like rumble seats and running boards, the convertible coupe is heading for that great parking lot in the sky—being phased out of production by U.S. auto makers.

Time was when all cars were convertibles, in the sense that they had soft tops. But after General Motors' introduction of the first seamless steel tops in 1935, its days were numbered. Gradually it fell victim to the public's greater safety-consciousness, higher levels of road noise, air conditioning, the proliferation of convertible-look vinyl tops, and the steel-framed sun roof. Cost-conscious buyers found the convertible too expensive, its trunk too skimpy.

But Americans who grew up in simpler times will always have a soft spot for the breezy soft tops—the ultimate status symbol. Parking in a sedan, you couldn't see the moon half as well.

Bottom of the Barrel. In 1954, the two houses of Congress had a combined staff of 5,600, an operating budget of $42 million. By last year, staff had nearly tripled and the budget was more than $300 million.

America's 7 Best Restaurants. For memorable meals while driving through the Midwest, be sure to hit Cincinnati. The Ohio city has two of the seven five-star winners in this year's Mobil Travel Guide—Maisonette, famous for filet de red snapper à l'homard, and Pigall's, with its filet de boeuf Wellington.

The only other city to rate two five-star winners was New York (La Grenouille and Lutèce). The others were in Miami (Café Chauveron) and Fort Lauderdale, Fla. (Le Dôme of the Four Seasons) and in San Francisco (Ernie's).

Houdek Feels Schools Should Provide Channel For Parental Complaint

By JAN WILLIAMS

Most people acquainted with Ronnie Houdek still call him "coach" and probably always will. But the Midland School Board on June 24 officially stripped him of that title and thus of his responsibilities to the tennis program and team at Midland High School.

After a March 11 school board vote not to renew Houdek's contract as a tennis teacher and coach at Midland High School, Houdek requested a public hearing to contest the board's action.

The public hearing June 24 resulted in the board's decision to rehire Houdek for a one-year period subject to assignment as a teacher. However, the contract excludes teaching tennis or coaching the tennis team.

Although Houdek says he is not embittered at the outcome of the hearing, he feels the manner by which it came about is not entirely justified.

Houdek said in an interview that Audrey Gill, principal of Midland High School, and Thurman "Tugboat" Jones, athletic director for the district, were under a great deal of pressure over his coaching position. He said there should be a channel for parental complaint.

"It's important that the school district have a policy to handle parental complaints so the pressure doesn't pile up on one person like Mr. Gill or Mr. Jones," Houdek said.

Gill had recommended to Supt. James Mailey, who in turn recommended to the school board, that Houdek's tennis teaching and coaching contract not be renewed, the main reason apparently being parental complaints about Houdek's coaching. Jones complied with the recommendation.

Houdek said he decided to contest the board's decision of non-renewal because "I felt I owed it to my profession and my fellow teachers and coaches."

He said he hoped he had set a precedent for those coaches who thought they had no protection in such cases.

Houdek, who has been at Midland High School for six years, developed the tennis program into one of the best in the state. The tennis facility at Midland High School currently ranks as one of the top high school facilities in the country.

"My specialty is in facilities," Houdek said. "You can't have a good program without good facilities and I've tried to develop a facility here that is of benefit to the whole community."

The MHS courts, which are complete with wind screens designed as a non-distracting backdrop for players, covered bleachers, building with restrooms, telephone, water fountain and vending machines, is the closest thing Midland has to a municipal center.

Houdek said he spent a good deal of extra time to develop the center, while sacrificing time with his family and a salary which he could've doubled or tripled teaching at a private tennis club.

"But I love teaching and I love the kids," Houdek said. "So I didn't mind making sacrifices."

Houdek said he had had no problems with his players in preparing them mentally and physically.

"But we all have problems. That's life. I love the kids and most of them love me and the others will eventually."

Houdek said he was himself a player and wouldn't tell his students to do something he couldn't do himself.

"My message to the players is to get out and get to work and make themselves a place on the ladder (competitive ladder technique Houdek uses in his tennis program).

"No high school coach can keep a young person from being as good as he wants to be. Tennis is an individual sport and nobody can keep you on the bench—it just depends on how you perform."

Houdek said his greatest lesson on the tennis court is to learn to fight and win.

"I teach my players to hang tough and fight on the tennis court. I believe in practicing what I preach. That's why I decided to put my career on the line and fight this thing."

Houdek said the board's decision was working out 100 per cent in his favor. It gives him more time for his family and he will still be involved in tennis.

"I'll be allowed to teach private tennis lessons and I'll still be involved in coaching because I have a 12-year-old son who is very interested in the sport.

Although Houdek hopes to be assigned to a physical education teaching position, he said whatever teaching assignment he is put in will be easy because he loves young people.

"I've got a lot to offer, and not just in tennis. So it's going to work out."

In spite of Houdek's optimistic outlook on the future, many Midlanders feel he got a raw deal from the school board, and many say they are still not clear on just why he lost his tennis teaching and coaching position.

News Analysis

No Definite Answers

Many feel the three-hour verbal battle between Houdek's attorney, Larry Watts of Houston, and the school district's representative, Thornton Hardie, failed to establish a clear-cut, straightforward answer as to why Houdek lost his job.

What was established during the hearing was the fact that following a Feb. 25 conference with two parents and students involved with the tennis team, Gill wrote a letter to Houdek stating he would delay a recommendation for renewal of Houdek's contract until after May 1—the close of the tennis season.

Gill stated during the hearing that he had earlier that day (Feb. 25) sent a written notice to Houdek that he would be recommended for contract renewal, but added a note urging him to seek employment elsewhere.

Gill, in his extensive testimony at the hearing, said he had had repeated conferences with Houdek regarding complaints from an estimated 12 persons who approached him between the end of the first semester and Feb. 25.

The principal stated that in his opinion the situation (parental and student complaints concerning Houdek's teaching relationship with his students) had become critical during the past year and he repeatedly advised Houdek to relocate himself.

"You must have the general support of the kids to be a successful coach," Gill said. "As a coach you must sell yourself and your program and you must have the support of the students you serve."

In his only remarks before the board at the hearing, Houdek said the tennis program at MHS had not collapsed.

"I have a program that includes 200 students and a waiting list of 100, so I must be selling something," Houdek said.

On May 1, Gill said, he told Houdek in the presence of Tugboat Jones that he would not recommend contract renewal. No written statement was issued, he said.

At one point during the hearing, Gill listed the reasons for his decision not to recommend contract renewal as loss of confidence of students, the inability of Houdek to cope with public relations (referring to parents of students) and inconsistent management.

Gill also said one reason for his reconsideration of his original decision to recommend Houdek for contract renewal was that he heard through other sources that the coach had no intention of seeking employment elsewhere, contrary to Gill's advice.

Ronnie Houdek

It was brought out during the hearing that although Gill had previously told Houdek he would recommend him for renewal if he would voluntarily relocate himself, Gill did not indicate to Houdek that it was a condition of the renewal.

During the hearing, Watts asked several times that the two parents issuing the complaints which apparently prompted Gil's decision of non-renewal, be identified.

Hardie said he could not permit the names of the persons complaining to be announced in an open meeting because he feared Watts would file a slander suit.

Gill said approximately six of the 12 persons who had complained to him about Houdek during the spring semester this year, had done so by appointment. However, Gill had never advised Houdek to be present at any of the meetings.

Excellent Record

At one point in the hearing, Gill said he "saw nothing but deterioration in the tennis program" because of Houdek's inability to motivate the students.

Watts pointed out the fact that Houdek's students were winning, concluding they apparently were motivated. Watts, asking Gill how one motivates students, received no reply.

In Houdek's six years as tennis coach at MHS, the Bulldogs won eight district titles, six regional titles, one state doubles title, 21 team championships and 40 consecutive dual team matches.

Gill said he couldn't see Houdek's good record continuing under the atmosphere at MHS now. He did not elaborate on what that atmosphere is.

Also speaking before the board at the hearing, Jones described Houdek as a "real fine person."

"But when you lose control of the parents," Jones said, "you're not coaching the way you should." Jones said he didn't think Houdek could do the job at MHS.

Watts listed his primary objections to Houdek's non-renewal as the lack of prior notice of witnesses called to testify against him, the fact that there was no pre-non-renewal hearing, (allegedly Houdek had no notice of the March 11 board meeting at which teacher contracts were renewed) and Houdek had not been informed of specific charges against him.

During a recess in the hearing, the two attorneys met in private and returned with the settlement that Houdek would be rehired as a teacher in an area other than tennis.

Following the hearing, Watts said he and Houdek had agreed to accept the settlement with the condition that Houdek would receive the same treatment as any other teacher, that he could expect his contract to be renewed next year.

Watts also said it was agreed that Houdek would be assigned to a teaching position in which he could reasonably perform. He said it was an unwritten committment that Houdek would be employed as a physical education instructor.

"I am amazed that a city the size of Midland would totally support a board tolerating people who (complain) about someone they won't meet eyeball to eyeball," Watts said.

"We (Watts and Houdek) gave the tongue waggers a chance to stand up and be noticed," Watts said. He referred to them as "two sets of parents or four immature adults" and said he thought they were in the audience during the hearing.

Commenting on the board members, Watts said he was disturbed with James Ramsoure who started shaking his head at the beginning of the meeting, indicating negative feelings.

"Sparks (trustee Don Sparks) and Warren (trustee Johnny Warren) are young lions who don't give a damn about the rights of individual teachers," Watts said. Both Sparks and Warren were elected to the board after its initial decision on March 11 not to renew Houdek's contract.

Sparks, who favored a private hearing, said that he thought a public hearing was a waste of time. Warren, at one point during the hearing, applauded comments by Tugboat Jones, who spoke in favor of Houdek's non-renewal as a tennis coach.

Watts said Houdek had not been treated fundamentally fair, blaming Houdek's loss on "parents with some political clout or persuasive power."

'Squeaky Wheels'

"The wheel that squeaks the most catches the grease," Watts said. "And some squeaky wheels are getting greased."

Although Watts was displeased with some board members, he said he was convinced that board members James Winget, Joe Dominey and C. Wallace Craig were men of good faith. He said he wasn't sure about Gilbert Tompson, who excused himself from the board during the hearing because he had a daughter formerly involved in the MHS tennis program.

Watts said he was planning no further action on the case unless Houdek's new contract is not honored.

Dismissing Houdek's new role at MHS as a personnel matter, Gill declined further comment following the hearing.

"I'm very pleased that the board decided to rehire Mr. Houdek as a teacher," Gill said

Gill said it was possible Houdek could be assigned to teach in the physical education department and noted that he is also qualified to teach history and social studies.

When asked if Houdek might be rehired as tennis teacher and coach at MHS at some future date, Gill said, "It's possible."

Tugboat Jones also declined further comment on the matter, except to say he was "happy Ron has a teaching job."

Jones said Larry Burger from Roosevelt High School in San Antonio was hired last month as the new tennis coach at MHS. He had been the head coach at Roosevelt for the past five years and is credited with building the program up from nothing to fourth in the state.

Bobby Connell, tennis coach at Lee High School, said in an interview there wasn't any doubt in his mind that Houdek was a good coach.

Connell was a student of Houdek's from 1959 to 1965 as a member of the varsity tennis team at Central High School in San Angelo.

"I got along with him (Houdek) fine and I never lost confidence in him as a coach," Connell said. Connell said he never knew of any instances at San Angelo in which Houdek did not get along with his students.

Interviews with several of the 28 members of the MHS varsity tennis team indicate that only one of the 13 boys was unhappy with Houdek's coaching. Eight of the 15 girls, however, apparently were dissatisfied.

"He was harder on the girls than the boys (in terms of physical preparation)," said one girl.

"He was a nice guy, but not so hot as a coach. I had taken lessons from a pro and Houdek didn't do anything to help me," said a boy.

"He devoted too much time to the top players," another girl said.

"He wasn't a good coach, but I don't have any idea why," said another girl.

Several team members said they were satisfied with Houdek's coaching.

'Good Coach'

"I got along fine, as most of the boys did," said one boy. "It was the girls who didn't get along with him."

"I think he treated everyone fairly. He was a good coach," another boy said.

"I got along fine, although most of the girls didn't. They just didn't like his program. They couldn't relate to it," a girl said.

"I like him. Most of the players who criticized him weren't there to play tennis. He would've spent more time with them if they had wanted it," said a boy.

Most parents of team members who were contacted chose not to comment. The ones who would comment echoed the comments of their children.

Mary Francis Snure, who describes herself as "chaperon" for the girls team, declined to comment on Houdek's coaching but said of him: "Nobody could have treated me any nicer."

Sentiment over Houdek's departure as MHS tennis coach thus is divided. Still, only a few persons know the exact nature of the complaints which led to his ouster. The identity of those who complained is even more obscured.

'Texas First' Sessions Set

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce has arranged four meetings in the region to inform residents of Gov. Dolph Briscoe's "Texas First" program, which just now is being launched.

The first of the four meetings will be held here Monday, with Harry Clark, Midland banker and chairman of WTCC's Local Action Committee, presiding. The meeting, open to the public, is scheduled at 1:30 p.m. in the Community Room at Commercial Bank & Trust Co. The Midland Chamber of Commerce is assisting in arrangements.

The governor requested WTCC to work with government agencies to coordinate the program in West Texas.

Other meetings will be held Tuesday at Amarillo; Thursday at Stephenville and Friday at Wichita Falls. Clark also will preside at the Wichita Falls session.

The program, as initiated by Gov. Briscoe, is designed to create 4,000 new, permanent, and unsubsidized jobs for Texans and encourage the expansion of industry.

Liquid Irritant Hurts 32 Persons At Holiday Event

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — Thirty-two persons attending a Fourth of July fireworks display were treated at a hospital after three teen-agers threw a liquid irritant into the crowd, police said.

Police reported at first that the liquid was acid, but Dr. James Forsyth said later at Carlisle Hospital that the substance was a "clear, colorless, odorless liquid irritant" which he said he doubted could be identified.

About 15 of the victims, who ranged in age from four to 71, were children. Most suffered eye and skin burns, but all were released after hospital treatment.

Police Chief Frank Giordano said three teen-agers were being sought.

FAVORED CONNORS FALLS IN FOUR SETS

Ashe Becomes First Black To Win At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Arthur Ashe upset the reigning champion, Jimmy Connors, 6-1, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4 in a classic duel Saturday and became the first black man to win a Wimbledon singles title.

Nobody had thought it was possible—except Ashe, who oozed confidence from his first shot. Connors had reached the final without dropping a set and the bookies made him the heaviest favorite of all time.

A crowd of 17,000, backing the underdog, cheered Ashe to victory on the center tennis court of the All-England Club. The excitement rose so high as Connors' crown slipped away that the umpire had to call sternly for silence.

Hundreds of the fans had slept out on the sidewalks all night to see the match.

Ashe, 32 next month, was in the final for the first time after 12 years of playing at Wimbledon. He won a first prize of $22,000.

Ashe had played Connors three times before, always on clay or cement, and lost every time. This was their first meeting on grass—and it was the first all-American men's final at Wimbledon for 28 years.

As the crowds converged on Wimbledon around lunchtime, the bookies made Connors a 2-11 favorite. They were almost impossible odds, requiring the bettor to wage 11 pounds to win 2.

Connors, 22, had looked invincible when he pulverized Roscoe Tanner in three sets in the semifinals. But from the start of Saturday's final he was on the defensive. Ashe took the match by the throat and attacked.

His lobs and forehand volleys—usually reckoned his weakest strokes—were inspired.

He lobbed Connors to service break in the third game. He hit an even better lob, right on Connors' baseline, and broke through again at love in the fifth game.

Connors was knocked off his stride and was hustled into hitting bad backhands. The first set was over in 20 minutes.

Connors continued making backhand errors, and the second set went the same way. Ashe could do nothing wrong and scored with a stream of forehand volleys.

"Come on, Connors!" shouted a man in the crowd when the champion trailed 1-3 in the second set.

"I'm trying!" Connors shouted back.

But his efforts brought him no dividends until he was two sets down and had his service broken to trail 2-3 in the third.

Then at last Connors began to play like a champion. He had two scorching returns and went on to break back at 3-3. It was the champion's first service break.

Throughout that set, Ashe was within sight of a straight sets victory. He had two break points in the first game, two in the seventh and two in the 11th. But he failed to turn them to account.

As Ashe served to save the set at 5-6, Connors hit three fine forehand returns and broke him.

That made it two sets to one. Connors' manager, Bill Riordan, and close friend Ilie Nastase of Romania stood waving their arms and shouting in the stands.

When Connors broke service for a 2-0 lead in the fourth set, it looked as if the match was changing course. He was hitting two-fisted backhands in his most spectacular style, and Ashe's first service had temporarily let him down.

Connors led 3-0. Ashe held his service for 1-3. And then Ashe hit another fine lob which started him on the way back. On the last point of the fifth game, Ashe sped across the court and whipped over a forehand, and Connors was taken by surprise and put a backhand volley out of court. Ashe had broken back.

Both men held their service to 4-4. Then Connors, serving, ran into a barrage of winning backhands from Ashe.

The champion made one atrocious shot in that game. He stood at the net with the court wide open and netted a forehand drop. He dropped his service, and Ashe led 5-4 and served for the match.

Two service winners and a backhand volley took Ashe to match point.

Off the next service, Connors knocked a half-hearted return high into the air. The crowd raised from their seats and cheered even before the ball came down. Ashe put his smash away and became the champion.

Connors lost his crown, but his ego remained intact.

"They don't know how to play me," Connors told newsmen jauntily. "They have to play out of their minds to beat me, as Arthur did today.

"They think somehow I'm the man to beat. That is a compliment to me. I came here with my head high, and I can go out of here with my head still high."

The two men have been scrapping over more than the Wimbledon title. Three weeks ago Connors filed a suit against Ashe for $3 million, claiming damages for a letter alleged to have been written by Ashe as president of the Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP).

"I never thought about it, either before the match or during it," Ashe said.

But there was only a brief handshake between them as the match ended, and no conversation.

Ashe raised his fist to the crowd after he hit the winning smash.

He said he was waving to his friends in ATP—legal adviser Donald Dell, associate adviser Jack Kramer, secretary Bob Briner and former president Cliff Drysdale.

Wall Takes Milwaukee

Art Posts First Victory Since 1966

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Art Wall held off a four-way challenge with a steady two-under-par 70 Saturday to win the $130,000 Greater Milwaukee Open Golf Tournament, his first victory since 1966.

Wall, whose successive five-under-par 67s for his first three rounds were his first scores under 70 this year, finished with a 17-under total of 271, one stroke ahead of young Gary McCord, who birdied his last four holes for a final-round 67.

Wall, the 51-year-old 1959 Masters champ, pocketed $26,000 with his 14th tour victory.

Rod Curl, tied with five others four strokes off the pace after three rounds, played his first nine in one-over Saturday but birdied five holes between 12 and 17 for a closing 68 and 273 total. Gibby Gilbert, three strokes behind after three rounds, and Dave Hill finished at 274. Hill shot a 69 and Gilbert a 70.

Wall birdied his second and third holes but bogeyed No. 8 as McCord, a second-year pro who ranks 101st on this year's money winnings list, began his charge.

McCord, one of the six tied at four strokes back after three rounds, made the turn in a four-under 32. A birdie on No. 9 left the 1970 National Collegiate Athletic Association champion from Cal-Riverside one stroke behind and 15-under for the meet. He bogeyed the 11th, however, and posted a double-bogey on the par-three, 186-yard 14th hole.

McCord then finished with his four birdies, but Wall all but wrapped up the victory with a birdie on No. 16. Wall played the last two holes in par.

The tournament attracted only two of the current 25 leading money winners—Miller Barber and U.S. Open champion Lou Graham—because of next week's British Open. Barber, first-day leader with a 65 over the 7,010-yard Tuckaway Country Club course, finished with a 70 and a 279 total. Graham failed to make the cut.

Curl, one of the few pros planning to go to Britain after playing here, said he would have cancelled his travel plans had it not been for his fine finishing round.

"It's a great, great feeling. I worked hard to get what I got," said Wall, voted golf's player of the year when he won the Masters and three other tournaments in 1959, but not among the top 100 money winners this year. His last victory, excluding eight triumphs on the Caribbean tour, had been in the Insurance City meet in Hartford, Conn., in 1966.

"When it got down to the wire like that today, I knew a lot of people were making a run at me," he said. "I haven't been used to that the last few years. It was almost like a new experience, but I felt good inside and believed in my swing."

Wall and McCord played in the last threesome, so Wall was fully aware of his young partner's hot streak.

"I wasn't surprised Gary made a birdie on that last hole," he said. "I felt he would before his second shot but I wasn't too concerned. I felt I could get down in two putts for a par and I did."

Wall, who had said earlier in the week he has been contemplating retiring after 26 years on the tour, wouldn't say his victory had permanently reversed his fortunes.

"It is not my character to say this is going to change everything," he said. "I've always taken everything one step at a time.

Kertzman Leading In Wheeling Classic

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Karolyn Kertzman fired a one-over-par 73 to take a two-stroke lead after two rounds of the Wheeling Ladies Professional Golf Association Classic Saturday.

Miss Kertzman strung together 15 pars and a single birdie against two bogeys in maintaining her tournament lead.

Jan Ferraris, who at one time was eight-under-par Saturday, ran into considerable trouble on the back nine and finished at two-over-par 74. She is alone in second place at 141.

Miss Ferraris, who started the day five-under, got birdies on Nos. 2, 4, and 5 to go eight under. But she bogied 7 and 9 to make the turn at one-under 35. On the back side, after a birdie at 12, she had double bogeys at 14 and 17 and had a bogey on 16. She moved into second by birdying 18.

Meanwhile, Miss Kertzman playing par golf on the backside, also birdied 18.

Susie McAllister had a 70 and was one of three golfers at two-under 142. The others were Gerda Boykin, who had a 72, and Betty Berfeindt, who posted a second consecutive 71.

Debbie Austin and Gloria Ehret each fired 73s and were tied four shots behind the leader at 143.

At even par 144 were Hollis Stacy and Renee Powell, who each had 71s, and Kathy Postlewait, who had a 73.

Scores were generally higher Saturday. Among the casualties on the second day were defending champ Carole Jo Skala, who struggled to a 75 for a 36-hole 147, eight strokes off the lead. Also at 147 was Betsy Cullen, who suffered through a four-over 76.

Lenore Bessera, who had a 70 Friday, ballooned to 80 on the second day.

Bells Cop Lead In RHCC Meet

Don and Mark Bell fired a 58 Saturday to take the lead in the annual Hi-Low Partnership golf tournament at the Ranchland Hill Country Club with a two-day total of 119.

The tournament closes today with an 18-hole round. Players with low handicaps are matched with high handicappers.

Two teams stand just one stroke off the leading pace set by the Bells. O.D. Huckabay and Jimmy Allison stand at 120 along with Bob Hellinghausen and Clyde Harris.

Jim Crume and Bill Hollis are tied at 121 with Rick Peterson and Beck Adkins while the team of Morris Howell and Paul Scherzer are three off the winning pace with a 122.

Wendall Morgan and Roy Dicharry, Friday's first round leaders with a 57, fell to a 66 Saturday for a 123 and are tied with Bill Malone and Ken Green along with H. C. Jones and Joe Kirkland.

The Bells toured the RHCC layout at 58 Saturday for the day's best round. They had a 61 on Friday.

The tournament is far from over since 16 teams are within six strokes of the lead.

Vasicek, Bramlett Win Singles Titles

WACO — Vicki Vasicek and Jeff Bramlett won singles titles Saturday in the Waco Open Tennis Tournament.

Miss Vasicek defeated Tyler's Laura Hanna in the girl's 14 singles finals, 6-0, 6-1, while Bramlett won over Tim Davis of Houston in the finals of the boy's 14 singles, 7-6, 6-2.

Miss Vasicek and Midland's Mary Morgan teamed to reach the finals in the doubles before losing to Hersch and Smith, 6-0, 6-2.

Twins Call Hurler

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The Minnesota Twins Saturday called up right-handed relief pitcher Tom Johnson from their Tacoma farm club in the Pacific Coast League.

Johnson will replace Steve Brye on the 25-man roster. Brye was put on the 15-day disabled list after suffering a broken bone in his left hand when he was hit by a Nolan Ryan fastball Wednesday.

Johnson, who was 2-0 with the Twins at the close of last season, had a 4-2 record with 13 saves in 33 appearances at Tacoma.

Come On Now, Didn't Anybody Root For Jim?

Battle Scene

By Ted Battle

Arthur Ashe, a guy who has been knocking at the door for ages it seems, beat Jimmy Connors for the Wimbledon men's singles and it's a funny thing, we can't find anybody who isn't delighted with the way it came out.

It's not a case of popular sentiment riding the coattails of a champion. Most were emphatic about their preferences before the two Americans ever began trading shots on the faded center green at the All-England Tennis Club Saturday.

As one pro-Ashe supporter remarked, "It's not that I have anything against Connors, it's just that I think this may be one of his last shots at it and I'd like to see him win it. Connors will have plenty of opportunities to win it in the future. He's so young."

* * *

That view point was a rare exception. Most folks seemed to be pulling against Connors, regardless of the opposition, and we seriously wonder if any male chauvnist pigs would have been for Jimmy, even if his opponent had been Billie Jean King.

* * *

One non-Connors fan said he was for Ashe, "because Connors has a bigger mouth than Muhammad Ali."

That sounds like an undeserved rap on Ali, who admittedly has a big mouth, but while the heavyweight champion might be obnoxious to some, he certainly isn't obscene.

Ali is to boxing what Dizzy Dean was to baseball. A loudmouth braggart, who rubs many the wrong way because he has the ability to make his most outrageous predictions come true.

Ali has merely brought the same successful technique to boxing that wrestling has used for years. And he has made several fortunes in the process.

But back to the anti-Connors feeling. Most fans just seem to come away with the "spoiled-brat" image of Connors. Whether it's accurate or not, that's the way he comes across.

* * *

I supose we leaned toward Ashe for several of the aforementioned reasons, but mostly because he worked for it. He wasn't handed outright recognition as the world's top player because he won a couple of high-stakes exhibitions in Las Vegas.

* * *

While Jimmy was beating hand-picked opposition for the Hollywood crowd, Ashe was out in the tough world of cut-throat competition, working his way tediously through the tournament ladders toward the finals.

Sometimes he made it, sometimes he didn't, but he won the two most prestigious tournaments played thus far this year.

Somehow Ashe's victory at Wimbledon, especially over Connors, the get-rich quick conman, seems a vindication for the working stiff who faces his 9-to-5 drudgery too often unnoticed.

Waugh, Raiders Flex Muscles In Tournament

By BOB DILLON

Abilene Waugh, San Angelo Independents, Lubbock's Raiders, Roadrunner Express and the Roswell, N.M. Merchants had all gained victories Saturday night in the winner's bracket of the 7th annual July 4th Slow Pitch Softball Tournament at Hogan Park.

Smith Brothers Pipe was playing Abilene Rosana's while Beverage Sales of San Angelo was meeting the Lubbock Stars while Iowa Park and Western Company were also playing in late games.

Goodrich Upset

Lubbock's Stars had knocked off Goodrich Service Center, 5-4, Saturday morning to knock the Tiremen into the loser's bracket in the double elimination tourney. Goodrich bounced back to win three straight after the surprising loss to the Stars.

(See Results 2-B)

The Independents took a 2-1 9-inning victory over a strong Well Fluids team from Midland in one of the better-played games in the gigantic three-day meet. San Angelo loaded the bases on three straight singles and then scored the winning run on an error.

Roswell's Merchants, the only New Mexico entry in this year's tourney, came up with three runs in the seventh Saturday morning to nip Schlumberger of Midland, 3-2 and then polished off Seat Cover Ace, another Tall City team, 5-3, Saturday evening to move into the third round against the winner of the Rosana-Smith Brothers battle.

The Roadrunner Express ripped Stadium Sports, 16-0 with Kendrick hitting a pair of doubles for the winners who pounded out 16 hits.

Lubbock's Raiders, one of the tourney favorites, whipped Webb Air Force Base of Big Spring, 12-2 with Brian McCutcheon rapping a grand-slam homer and a two-run shot. Dudley Coapland had a three-run home run while teammate Tom Bunch had a round-tripper with one man on for the Lubbock team.

Lubbock was to meet the Roadrunner Express in the 12:20 a.m. contest today.

Waugh Loaded

Abilene Waugh had little trouble with Pioneer Natural Gas of Lubbock in posting an 18-6 victory with Rod Varella and Mike Murphey hitting homers for the Key City entry. Paul Tabor hit one for Pioneer.

Goodrich whipped 3-Way Construction of Odessa, 12-1 and then bombed Dairy Queen, 15-0, to stay alive in the tourney and was set to meet Stadium Sports in the 10 p.m. contest Saturday.

Midland's Merchants took care of the Black Spirits, 7-6 and then defeated TV Service, 13-4.

Iowa Park and Western Company were going at it hammer and tong in their game with the winner taking on the winner of the Beverage Sale - Lubbock Stars contest.

The Red Chiefs, Clay Chemical, Schlumberger, H.N.G. Oil, all Midland teams were still in the tourney with one defeat each.

In today's action, the last winner's bracket game was at 2:40 a.m. with play resuming at 10 a.m. today in games No. 87, 88, 89 and 90.

Today's championship game is set for 4:15 p.m. in game No. 98 with the winner taking home the beautiful first place trophy. Trophies are also to be given out to the runnerup, third and fourth place teams along with individual trophies for the winning team, all-tourney team and Most Valuable Player Award.

Tom Murphy Lost

DETROIT (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers Saturday placed top relief pitcher Tom Murphy on the 21-day disabled list and called up second baseman Bob Sheldon from Sacramento.

COM Records National Mark

ODESSA—The City of Midland Swim Team helped open the inaugural UTPB Bicentennial Long Course A-B Swim Meet here Friday and Saturday with a national record and three West Texas records.

The 10-under girl's 200 meter medley relay posted their third national record, the first in the long course, with a two minutes, 28.25 seconds.

The team was composed of Heather Dunbar, Isabell Torres, Carol Cappadonna and Gretchen Koch. The old mark of 2:28.50 was held by Mission Viejo, Calif. The COM team also owns two short course national marks.

Miss Koch also recorded a 2:26.65 in the 200 freestyle for a new West Texas mark while the senior boy's medley relay team of Brad Swindig, Steve Degenfelder, Brian Lambeth and Mike Butler set a West Texas mark of 3:56.28.

Joe Otero, who is swimming unattached until his records can be sent to COM, set a West Texas mark in the 10-under 200 free with a blazing 2:34.45. Otero will be joining the Midland swimmers in the next week or so.

The meet runs through today, and late point results were not complete late Saturday. COM held down first place early Saturday with 577 points while the Amarillo Aquatic Club was a distant second with 476 points.

After Saturday's record setting pace, COM still held a firm lead, but final point totals were not compiled by press time.

Atlanta Braves Slug Houston Astros Twice

ATLANTA (AP) — Vic Correll and Ralph Garr smashed three-run homers as the Atlanta Braves wiped out a four-run deficit and defeated the Houston Astros 8-4 to sweep Saturday's twi-night doubleheader.

Mike Lum keyed two rallies with singles in leading the Braves to a 4-3 victory in the opener.

Correll's homer highlighted a five-run fourth-inning rally against Doug Konieczny, 4-9, in the nightcap. Larvell Blanks and Rowland Office drove in the other two runs and were on base when Correll belted his ninth homer of the year and his first since May 20.

Garr's fifth homer came in the sixth after Blanks walked and Correll reached on an error.

Houston got four runs in the first, three of them unearned, off Max Leon, 1-0, making his first start of the year. Cliff Johnson had a run-scoring single, Ken Boswell hit a sacrifice fly and two others crossed on an errror by third baseman Darrell Evans.

The Braves got the deciding run in the eighth inning of the opener. Marty Perez opened with a walk, went to third on Dusty Baker's singled and scored on Evans' sacrifice fly.

Atlanta scored twice in the second inning on grounders by Blanks and Office after Evans walked and reached third on Mike Lum's single, with Lum taking second on the throw. Lum singled Evans home in the sixth.

Houston cut a 4-1 lead to 4-3 in the ninth when Bob Watson singled and Johnson hit his eighth home run to chase starter Ray Sadecki, 2-1.

Phillies Sweep Two From Mets

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Every player in Philadelphia's starting line-up except the pitcher contributed at least one hit, scored a run and drove in a run as the Phillies outslugged the New York Mets 10-7 and swept Saturday's twi-night doubleheader.

The Phils won the opener 8-2 behind the four-hit pitching of Ron Schueler, 3-1, with the help of Greg Luzinski's run-scoring double and 22nd homer, tops in the majors. Luzinski had three RBI in the two games, boosting his total to 68.

Philadelphia blew a 3-0 lead in the second game when the Mets scored four times off Jim Lonborg, 7-6, in the third inning, including John Milner's three-run homer. The Phillies then erupted for six runs in the fifth inning off reliever Nino Espinosa, 0-1.

Garry Maddox, who had four hits in the second game after breaking an 0-for-18 slump with a single and double in the opener, started the Phils' tie-breaking six-run outburst with a triple. After Lonborg struck out, Dave Cash singled to send the Phils ahead 5-4. One out later, five more singles and a walk produced five more runs and a 10-4 lead, with the big blow being Mike Schmidt's two-run single. Maddox had two hits in the inning.

Cards, Expos Split

ST. LOUIS (AP) — John Curtis and Al Hrabosky combined to pitch a four-hitter and Reggie Smith, involved in a fight during the first game, doubled home a fourth-inning run as the St. Louis Cardinals nipped the Montreal Expos 1-0 and gained a split of Saturday's twi-night doubleheader.

Tony Scott's two-out triple ignited a two-run fifth inning and the Expos rode the eight-hit pitching of Dennis Blair and Dan Warthen to a 3-0 victory in the first game.

Smith chased and punched Montreal shortstop Tim Foli in the seventh inning of the opener after Smith was forced at second base. After the out signal was given by umpire Bob Engel, Smith delayed for a few seconds and then went after Foli, landing two blows to Foli's head.

Both benches emptied but no other blows were struck and both Smith and Foli remained in the game. Smith later said Foli had called him "stupid" for not sliding into the bag.

Montreal's Woodie Fryman, 6-6, and Curtis, 5-7, were locked in a scoreless duel in the second game before Smith doubled to drive in the winning run.

Royals Rip White Sox

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Frank White led off the bottom of the eighth inning with a tie-breaking inside-the-park home run off the center field wall and the Kansas City Royals went on to defeat the Chicago White Sox 6-4 Saturday night.

White's homer, his fourth of the season, came off Dave Hamilton, 2-5, the third Chicago pitcher, after the White Sox chased Steve Busby and tied the score with three runs in the top of the eighth. The Royals added an insurance run on Jim Wohlford's double and George Brtt's single.

Cubs Sneak Past El Paso Nine, 5-4

EL PASO — The Midland Cubs with some relief help from Dave Giesel and Bruce Sutter, took a 5-4 victory over the El Paso Diablos in a Texas League baseball game at Dudley Field before more than 2,000 fans Saturday night.

Midland scored early and then left 14 runners stranded during the contest which took three hours and 10 minutes to play.

Mike Weiss (2-2) will face the Diablos tonight in the second game of the five-game series while El Paso will counter with Rod Matchwell who is 0-2 and has been with the Angel farmhands only a week after playing Class A ball.

The Cubs took a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Jose Ortiz singled, went to second on an error and scored on a single by Al Montreiul. Montreiul then crossed the plate on a base hit into right by Joe Wallis for a 2-0 lead.

In the third inning, the Cubs scored two more runs. Wayne Tyrone collected his first of two doubles and went to third on an error by Dave Machmer. Wallis had a single, scoring Tyrone and Montreiul singled. Steve Clancy drove in another run with a single.

El Paso almost tied the game in the ninth when Machmer doubled into center, but Sutter came in to get the final out with a fly ball to left by Paul Dade.

Mike Sember was injured in warm-up before the game when he was hit in the face by a ground ball and had some stitches taken to close the cut. He should be back in the lineup tonight.

Fox, Alstott Set Torrid Bowling Pace

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Sam Fox of Pacifica, Calif. and Bob Alstott of Kansas City, each seeking his first professional bowling championship, set a torrid 248-pin average Saturday in the opening round of the $50,000 Fresno Open bowling tournament.

Fox totaled 1,491 on lines of 258, 279, 200, 228, 279 and 247. Alstott was just three pins back at 1,488 with lines of 267, 247, 236, 212, 247 and 279.

Perfect 300 scores were rolled by Carmen Salvino of Chicago, who was in third place with 1,468, and by Curt Schmidt of Fort Wayne, Ind., sixth with 1,424.

In Friday night's pro-amateur competition Skip Tucker of Sarasota, Fla. had a 300 game.

In the field of 160, which was to be narrowed to 24 Sunday for match play, 103 started with averages of 200 or better for their first six-game bloc.

Finals Monday night among the leading five bowlers will determine winner of the $5,000 first prize in this sixth stop of the summer Professional Bowlers Association tour.

Fans Vs. R-T

It's that time of year when the fans send their favorite major league players to that annual extravaganza called the All-Star game.

It is also that time of year when the players yell that the fans don't keep up with what is going on at the ball park. Some say the fans shouldn't even be voting.

At any case, it might prove interesting to see how the fans' vote compares with those cast by the sports staff here at the R-T.

In the National League, second baseman Joe Morgan and catcher Johnny Bench, both of Cincinnati; and shotrstop Larry Bowa of Philadelphia were unanimous selections by the R-T. The fans also went with Morgan and Bench, but selected the Reds' Dave Concepcion as the shortstop with Bowa second.

The R-T also went with Steve Garvey at first base, but Houston's Bob Watson did receive one vote. We differed with the fans on the third base choice as the slot went to Chicago's Bill Madlock with the fans' choice of L.A.'s Ron Cey receiving one vote.

We did not agree with the fans on any of the NL outfielders picked by the fans. Our team consists of Willie Stargell, Reggie Smith and Jim Wynn, with each getting two votes. Dave Winfield, Pete Rose and Greg Luzinski also got votes, but the fans picked Rusty Staub, Rose and Del Unser.

AL Much Tougher

In the American League, second baseman Rod Carew of Minnesota, catcher Thurman Munson of New York and outfielder Fred Lynn of Boston were all unanimous choices by the R-T. The fans also went with Carew and Munson, but ignored rookie Lynn.

Milwaukee's George Scott gets the call for the first base slot by the R-T, but Texas' Mike Hargrove did receive one vote. New York's Craig Nettles was a 2-1 choice for third over Oakland's Sal Bando, but the fans are going with Oakland's Gene Tenace for first and Cleveland's Buddy Bell for third.

Kansas City's Hal McRae got two votes to nail down another outfield slot for the R-T, but the third slot is undecided with Joe Rudi, Elliott Maddox, Claudell Washington and Reggie Jackson each earning a vote. The fans go with Jackson, Rudi and New York's Bobby Bonds.

We couldn't decide on a shortstop either with Bert Campaneris, Robin Yount and Toby Harrah each getting a vote. The fans are overwhelmingly in favor of Campaneris.

When all is said and done, we agreed with only three of eight choices in the National League and two of eight in the American League.

Maybe the fan should continue to vote and leave the members of the R-T out of it. But one thing is for sure. We know who we want to see in the All-Star game a lot better than the players. After all, who is this game played for anyway.

Ashe, King Celebrate Wimbledon Victories

LONDON (AP) — As the band struck up "American Patrol," the first black man ever to win a Wimbledon tennis championship slid his arm around the sport's dominant woman and the pair glided together over a dance floor.

For Arthur Ashe and Billie Jean King, it was the traditional start of the Wimbledon Ball which follows the completion of the tournament. Only hours before, Ashe had upset fellow American and defending champion Jimmy Connors 6-1, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4.

On Friday, Ms. King breezed past Australia's Evonne Goolagong Cawley 6-0, 6-1.

Sir Carl Aarvold, President of the Lawn Tennis Association, called Ms. King one of the greatest champions in lawn tennis history and Ashe one of the most sporting players Wimbledon has ever seen.

Ashe has always said he wanted to win at Wimbledon for blacks as a whole and for their dignity.

"Our people, the people with colored skins, have had an inferiority complex for 500 years. Perhaps it will be another 200 years before we lose it," he said after his victory, which he acknowledged with a mmentary clenched-fist salute after the final point.

"This victory shows us, kids especially, that we have our heroes too, and that we can do what anybody else can."

Ashe amazed the experts and the Wimbledon crowd with his tennis and shattered English sports writers, none of whom had given him a chance to win the final.

Millions of television viewers watching the title match from the famous center court saw Ashe sitting perfectly still with closed eyes during the one-minute rest between games. "He often does that," the commentator said. "He's meditating. He says it helps him."

A sports writer added: "See that? He's absolutely cool. That's his patent recuperation exercise. He shuts his eyes and relaxes his body."

The son of a Richmond, Va., policeman learned to play tennis at the age of 10 in public playgrounds is an era of segregation. He had to fight his way to the top in a wholly white-orientated sport. He likes reading and symphony music and calls London "the calmest, most civilized, liberal and friendly city of all."

Ashe, who now plays out of Miami, was the United States' first black tennis champion 1968 and the first to earn $100,000 is a year in the sport.

He was refused entry to South Africa in 1970 but has since played there. South Africa, he said, is "changing because it has to. It has no choice. Majority rule will come there in my lifetime. That's what civilization is about."

Sports columnists in London raved over Ashe's performance.

"Ashe brought off the greatest upset that the center court has known for years," wrote Henry Raven in the Sunday Telegraph. "He dictated the pace and the strategy and Connors, for all his speed and strength, was outwitted."

"Glory for no-chance Ashe" headlined the Sunday Times. John Ballantine wrote in that edition, "It was probably the greatest upset of form ever at Wimbledon."

And the London Observer headlined: "King Arthur's Court."

Honey Mark Wins American

CHICAGO (AP) — Honey Mark, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Roberts of Shreveport, La., beat High Steel by a neck and won the 65th running of the $133,400 American Derby for 3-year-olds at Arlington Park Saturday.

Master Derby, the Preakness winner, failed as the 7-5 favorite. He finished 11th in the field of 14 while carrying top weight of 124 pounds.

A crowd of 29,114 saw the son of Traffic Mark take the lead coming into the final turn and then hang on tenaciously late in the stretch to defeat eastern invader High Steel.

Go to the Bank finished third in this 1 1-16 mile grass race.

Of the starters, only High Steel had won over a turf course. He won two allowance races, one in Florida and one in New York.

Angel Cordero Jr., who rode High Steel, and Jim Powell, aboard fourth-place finisher Crafty Drone, both claimed fouls against the winner, charging that Honey Mark drifted out and interfered with them in the stretch run. The stewards, however, disallowed the claims.

Honey Mark, ridden by Garth Patterson, earned $93,400 and was timed in 1:44 2-5 under 116 pounds.

Honey Mark, a stakes winner at Arlington Park last summer, had been defeated several times by Master Derby this season, including the Louisiana Derby and the Blue Grass Stakes.

The winner paid $17.20, $6.60 and $5, High Steel paid $4.20 and $3.80 and Go to the Bank paid $6.60.

Henry Clay, ridden by Oscar Sanchez, hit the inner rail on the clubhouse turn during the race and threw his rider, but Sanchez was not injured.

Juniors Attack Records In Meet With Russians

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Discus thrower Darrell Elder and high jumper Paula Gervin continued the American attack on the record books Saturday in sweltering heat at the fourth annual Russian-American junior track meet.

The 6-foot-7 Elder threw the discus a record 192 feet, 8 inches on his first attempt, breaking the meet standard of 182-6 by Russia's Nikolay Vichor.

The toss by Elder, a University of South California sophomore, was the best ever by an American 19-year-old. Russia's Igor Duginets was second at 179-6.

Miss Gervin, 17, a high school senior from Woodbridge, Va., cleared 6-0 to claim the high jump and tie the meet mark set by Galina Prilepina of Russia in 1974.

Miss Gervin failed in three attempts at 6-3 for an American girls' record. Miss Prelipina went out at 5-9.

Russia's Ivan Gromov captured the javelin at 254-1, breaking the 1972 record of 248-10 by fellow countryman Valentin Rytov.

Sonya Hardy and Rhonda Brady, a pair of 15-year-olds, added to the American women's domination over the Soviets.

Win 100

The 5-foot-7 Miss Hardy runs for the Boulder, Colo., Cinderdelles and claimed the 100-meter hurdles in 14.0. Miss Brady, 5-3, was second at 14.2.

Russia's Aili Alikso and Galino Zhilo finished third and fourth respectively.

Both were the Russian representatives in one of the meet's two new events, the women's five-event pentathlon.

The 10-event men's decathlon also was introduced for the first time this year.

The meet brings together the best male athletes from both nations who are age 19 and younger and the top female qualifiers 18 and under.

Two entries from each nation compete in the 49 events, which include the decathlon and pentathlon competition.

Women Lose One

Exclusive of the pentathlon results on the opening day Friday, the American women had won five of their six events, losing only in the discus.

Representing the United States in the pentathlon were Nancy Kindig, 16, of Hastings, Neb., and Cindy Mitchell, 16, of Phoenix, Ariz.

In the men's decathlon, Dave Morey of the University of Pennsylvania and Anthony Hale of Fisk University trailed the two Russian entries, Anatoliy Novikov and Sergei Savelev.

An estimated 5,000 fans turned out in the University of Nebraska's Ed Weir Stadium, where temperatures were in the mid-90s and the Tartan track surface temperature was 124 degrees.

Figueroa Skunks A's With Tough 4-Hitter

OAKLAND (AP) — Ed Figueroa pitched a four-hitter, leading the California Angels to a 2-0 decision over the Oakland A's Saturday.

Figueroa, 7-4, gave up singles in the first inning to Bill North and Claudell Washington but then got Reggie Jackson on a grounder and Joe Rudi on a called third strike. The only other Oakland hits were a seventh-inning infield single by North and an eighth-inning double by Jim Holt.

The Angels scored their first run off loser Stan Bahnsen, 5-8, without a hit in the fifth inning.

Dave Collins led off with a walk, went to second on a wild pitch, took third on an infield out and scored on another wild pitch. Bahnsen had four wild pitches in the game, within one of the American League record for a game.

The Angels scored their second run on Mickey Rivers' RBI single in the seventh.

Golfer Scores Pair Of Aces

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Larry Mehl, playing his first round of golf in 10 years, hit not one but two holes-in-one at a par-three course here Friday.

Mehl, 31, collected his first hole-in-one on the 120-yard 11th hole at the Cliff Valley golf course, using a nine iron. On the next hole, a 116-yarder, Mehl again went to his nine iron—and again put the ball in the cup.

Single Kills Rangers, 5-4

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Eric Soderholm singled home a run in the eighth inning to lead the Minnesota Twins to a 5-4 victory over the Texas Rangers Saturday.

Leadoff hitter Rod Carew reached first when loser Ferguson Jenkins, 9-9, misplayed the grounder in the eighth. Carew was sacrificed to second before eventually coming home on Soderholm's tie-breaking single to center.

Carew's ninth home run, a career high, in the fifth inning brought Minnesota a 4-4 tie against Jenkins, who gave up his 25th home run of the season.

Texas pecked away at Twins starter Dave Goltz for single runs in the second and third innings on Mike Cubbage's RBI single and Roy Howell's third home run.

The Rangers had Goltz on the ropes with no outs in the fourth as Cubbage and Toby Harrah drove home runs with singles.

But a double steal misfired, Harrah being thrown out at third, and Goltz steadied to retire the next two batters.

Rookie Dan Ford, on a hitting rampage, singled home the first two Minnesota runs as the Ranger strategy of intentionally walking Carew to load the bases backfired. Tony Oliva's fourth-inning homer pulled Minnesota to within one run at 4-3.

Carew's grounder which led the winning unearned run was a routine high bouncer to Jenkins' left which went off the tip of his glove and rolled by Cubbage charging in from second base.

Ford then sacrificed perfectly, and John Briggs grounded out, Carew going to third. The Rangers then guessed wrong again, intentionally walking veteran Oliva, Minnesota's hobbling designated hitter, to pitch to slump-ridden Soderholm.

Goltz was forced to work out of a jam in the ninth as shortstop Jerry Terrell's error on Cesar Tovar's hopper left runners on first and second with one out. Cubbage had opened the inning with a single. Goltz, however, got Lenny Randle on a grounder to first and Howell on a fly to center.

Goltz walked four and struck out three, while Jenkin fanned six and walked three, two of them intentional and leading to three of Minnesota's runs.

Carew's previous homer highs were eight in both the 1968 and 1969 seasons. Ford's single extended his consecutive game hitting string to 11.

Cubs' Rally Stalls Despite 4-Run 9th

CHICAGO (AP) — Richie Zisk hit a pair of solo homers and the Pittsburgh Pirates withstood a four-run ninth inning by Chicago to beat the Cubs 5-4 Saturday.

Zisk homered in the second inning and then hit his eighth homer of the season in the fourth as the Pirates rebounded from a doubleheader loss to the Cubs Friday.

The Pirates picked up a run in the third on a single by Paul Popovich and a double by Al Oliver.

Loser Ray Burris, 7-6, was battered for 10 hits before being knocked out in the seventh when the Pirates scored their eventual winning runs on Dave Parker's RBI single and an error.

Winner Jim Rooker, 6-4, retired the first 10 batters before Jose Cardenal singled with one out in the fourth. Jerry Morales also beat out an infield single in the fourth and Andy Thornton walked to fill the bases but Rooker got George Mitterwald to foul out and end the threat.

The Pirate starter ran into trouble in the ninth, though, when the Cubs rallied, two of the runs coming on Vic Harris' single. Ken Tekulve relieved Rooker but Ramon Hernandez had to get the last out for the Pirates.

Orioles Whip Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark Belanger scored the tie-breaking run on a seventh-inning throwing error and Lee May followed with a two-run single as the streaking Baltimore Orioles defeated New York 5-2 Saturday, handing the slumping Yankees their seventh straight loss.

Belanger opened the seventh with a smash which caromed over third baseman Graig Nettles' head for a single and Ken Singleton also singled.

Leftfielder Roy White climbed the fence to rob Bobby Grich of a three-run homer but Belanger took third and Dick Tidrow relieved starter Rudy May, 7-5.

Tommy Davis grounded to shortstop Ed Brinkman, whose throw sailed past home plate for a two-base error. Lee May, who drove in Baltimore's first run in the third inning with an infield hit, then drilled a single to left for two more runs as the Orioles won for the eighth time in 10 games.

Baltimore took a 2-0 lead in the third when a one-out walk to Singleton, a single by Grich and Davis' one-hopper off May's glove for an infield single loaded the bases. May's grounder to deep short glanced off Brinkman's glove for a run-scoring single and Paul Blair delivered the second run with a sacrifice fly.

After hitting into four double plays in the first five innings, the Yankees tied the score against Ross Grimsley, 5-9, in the sixth on Bobby Bonds' leadoff double, a walk, sacrifice and Thurman Munson's two-run single. Grimsley scattered eight hits in the nationally televised game.

Detroit Tigers Nip Brewers, 3-2

DETROIT (AP) — Tom Veryzer's two-run single keyed a three-run Detroit fourth inning Saturday and the Tigers nipped the Milwaukee Brewers 3-2.

The Tiger rally in the fourth began with a leadoff walk to Dan Meyer. Willie Horton singled and Bill Freehan walked to load the bases off loser Jim Colborn, 3-7. After Jack Pierce took a third strike, Leon Roberts hit a sacrifice fly and Veryzer followed with his single, a grounder through the box.

Vern Ruhle pitched a six-hitter to win for only the second time in his last six decisions and raise his record to 7-5.

Milwaukee had taken a 2-0 lead with a run in the second on Darrell Porter's RBI single and one in the fourth on Hank Aaron's ninth homer of the year, the 742nd of his career.

14-Year-Old Signs With NY Yankees

THOROLD, Ont. (AP) — The New York Yankees signed 14-year-old catcher Mark Plantery of Thorold to a contract Friday.

Bill Wray, a scout for the American League team who first spotted Plantery in a midget tournament last year, said the catcher is "probably the youngest player ever signed by the Yankees."

Wray said he was impressed by the "physical and emotional maturity" displayed by the 6-foot, 185-pound Plantery, who will be 15 on Aug. 14. He added he was convinced that the Thorold player "has the potential to be a better-than-average major league catcher."

Plantery, who now plays for a local midget team, will attend the Yankees' instructional headquarters at Oneonta, N.Y. during August. He plans to return to Oneonta again next spring after completing his senior year of high school.

Tribe Belts Sox Again

CLEVELAND (AP) — Buddy Bell belted two home runs—one of them a grand slam—and a run-scoring double, and Roric Harrison tossed an eight-hitter to lead the streaking Cleveland Indians to a 12-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

It was Cleveland's 12th victory in the last 15 games.

Bell's homer with the bases loaded gave the Indians a 6-1 lead in the second. Charlie Spikes scored on a sacrifice fly in the same inning, but all five runs were unearned, because of third baseman Denny Doyle's throwing error with two outs.

The grand slam chased Boston loser Steve Barr, 0-1, and Jim Burton came on in relief. Bell added a solo homer, his eighth of the season, in the fourth and doubled home another run in the eighth.

Duane Kuiper scored on a fielder's choice in the first. Rico Carty scored on Bill Sudakis' single in the third, and George Hendrick hit his 15th homer of the year in the seventh for the Indians.

Harrison, 3-2, lost his first shutout of the year in the seventh when Carlton Fisk and Rick Miller scored on successive singles by Denny Doyle and Doug Griffin.

Soviet Track Team Blasts Americans

KIEV, Russia (AP) — The strong Soviet men's track team defeated a pickup American team 129 to 89 Saturday, the greatest victory over the Americans in 13 Soviet-American track and field meets.

The Soviet women beat the Americans 96 to 49 despite U.S. record performances by Madeline Manning Jackson in the 800 meters and Lynn Bjorklund in the 3,000.

Mrs. Jackson, of Cleveland, clocked a record 2:00.3 in a narrow victory over Lilyana Tomova of Bulgaria. And Miss Bjorklund of Los Alamos, N.M., was timed in 9:08.6 but only placed third in her race.

The U.S. men's team was quickly put together after the meet, cancelled in a dispute over television rites, was rescheduled and American track and field officials hastily tried to gather a team to send here at the last minute.

But the team was definitely not, America's best and despite fine Saturday performances by Mark Enyeart in winning the 800, Ed Preston's 200-meter victory and a steeplechase victory by Randy Smith, the Russians were dominant.

In the history of the meet, the Soviet men have now won four times, but never before by more than six points. The American women were as badly beaten in Moscow in 1963 when the Soviets outscored them 75-28.

America's Terry Albritton won the shot put event, but a bad pass in the 1,600-meter relay cost the U.S. what looked like a winning effort.

A fine second leg by Stan Vinson put the Americans ahead and Enyeart was filling in on the third leg. In a mixup, Enyeart fell and by the time he started running, he was about 70 yards behind the Soviet runner.

Mrs. Jackson, bidding for next year's Olympics, was locked in a duel with Miss Tomova and successfully fought off the Bulgarian's challenge in a close and exciting race.

Miss Bjorklund, lacking experience in international competition, ran a fine race but could not match Bulgaria's Rositsa Pekhlivanova in the stretch.

As she saw first place lost, Miss Bjorklund eased up and Soviet runner Svetlana Ilmasova edged past her to take second.

In the 3,000, Lynn Bjorklund of Los Alamos, N.M., set an American record of 9:08.6 but finished third to Rositsa Pekhlivanova of Bulgaria and Svetlana Ulmasova of the Soviet Union.

Miss Bjorklund lost her stretch challenge to the Bulgarian runner and as she let up at the end, the Soviet girl snuck past her for the second place.

Miss Pekhlivanova was timed in 9:07.4. Miss Bjorklund's mark bettered her 9:10.6 set two weeks ago and improved on the listed American record of 9:16.0 held by Francie Larrieu.

Amateur Tourney Starts Monday

WAILUA, Hawaii (AP) — The 50th annual U.S. Amateur Public Links Golf Championship gets underway here Monday without the defending champion.

Charles Barenaba Jr. of Honolulu, last year's public links champion, has since turned professional.

A total of 159 amateur golfers will compete in the six-day tournament over the tough Wailua golf course on the island of Kauai.

The tournament this year reverts to match play competition. Thirty-six hole qualifying rounds will be played Monday and Tuesday. The low 64 golfers will enter 18-hole match play competition which begins Wednesday.

The second and third rounds are scheduled for Thursday, with the fourth and semifinal rounds on Friday. The 36-hole finals are scheduled for Saturday.

During the qualifying rounds, 33 three-man teams from 23 states will compete for the Harding Cup. The 36-hole aggregate of each player on a team will decide the team championship.

Mixed Doubles Closes Today

The Midland Tennis Club's Mixed Doubles tournament will end today with action in both the semifinals and finals slated Semifinals will begin at 1:30 p.m. and finals at 3:30 p.m.

Saturday's results are as follows:

ASK NOW — SAVE TEARS LATER

From a buyer's viewpoint, I could not think of a worse time to discover that a home has basic flaws than after the deed has been signed, sealed and delivered. There is no need to be unpleasantly surprised. How do you avoid this frustration? Have a ready checklist of items to ask your REALTOR — especially on items that the eye cannot see.

For example: Type of and age of heating system. Types of siding, insulation and roof. Kind of interior walls. Type of waste disposal (city sewer, cesspool or septic). Type of water supply (well or municipal. Does it contain flouride?) Average or yearly operating costs for utilities; taxes on house for last year and assessed valuation. Accessibility to public transportation, shopping and schools.

We like our buyers to ask us questions. If we don't have all the answers — we'll get them. These are facts you should know before you sign the deed. Not after!

IN BRITISH OPEN GOLF—

Nicklaus, Who Else, Pick

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (AP) — Jack Nicklaus has missed the grand slam of golf, but he remains a heavy favorite to tame the tough Carnoustie course and win the British Open.

The bookies make Nicklaus the front runner at odds of 4-to-1 to win the big tournament starting next Wednesday.

Defending champion Gary Player of South Africa and Johnny Miller — one top star who has never won the British Open — are joint second choices at 8-to-1.

You can get odds of 12-to-1 against Hale Irwin, and 14-to-1 against Tom Weiskopf, the 1973 champion.

Carnoustie has been shortened slightly since the Open was last played there in 1968 and Player won it. They have chopped 187 yards off the overall distance, changed some of the holes and juggled the pars around a bit.

But it is still a frightening 7,065 yards, par 36-36—72, with strong winds liable to blow in from the sea. Many experts rate it the most difficult of all Scotland's famed courses.

Nicklaus has won the British Open twice, at Muirfield in 1966 and at St. Andrews in 1970. In the last five years, he has never placed lower than fifth.

Carnoustie, with its fearsomely long fairways, is made for a big hitter like the American star.

The longest hole is the sixth - 524 yards. There are six other holes of more than 450 yards, and five of them are on the inward nine.

The 18th, where many a golfer's hopes have been wrecked, used to be more than 500 yards and carried a par five — and it was a tough par five, even for world class players. It has been cut to 448 yards and a par four, but it's still a hard one.

Coming in on that last hole, golfers have to play twice across the Barry Burn, a winding stream that plagues them most of the way around the course.

They have to play across the meandering stream once each on the first, 10th and 11th holes, three times on the 17th and twice on the 18th.

Statistics of the British Open show just how tough Carnoustie is. The big tournament has been staged there only once in the last 20 years. Player won with a one-over-par aggregate of 289, and that is the highest winning total of any British Open champion since 1947.

But back in 1953, Ben Hogan tamed Carnoustie and won the Open with a score of 282. That was Hogan's golden year when he won the British and U.S. Opens and the Masters.

Nobody could play Carnoustie in 282 when it's at its worst, however.

"There are 365 Carnousties - one for every day of the year, according to how the wind blows," said a local golfer.

"We sometimes get gales at this time of the year. If that happens, you might find someone winning the Open with a score of 300."

The last British Open winner to top 300 was Walter Hagen, who won on the wind-blown sandwich course in 1924 with a 301.

Prize money has been pushed up to $179,500, a 50 per cent increase over last year. The stars will be shooting for a first prize of $17,950.

Dyain Frazier
. . . ex-Cub in no-hitter

Frazier Buzzes San Jose Bees

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Fast ball specialist Dyain Frazier of Houston hurled a no-hitter as the Salinas Packers beat the San Jose Bees 8-0 in the first game of a California League baseball doubleheader Friday night.

The 22-year-old lefthander, who formerly pitched for Midland in the Texas League, faced only 25 batters, struck out two and scattered five walks over the seven-inning game, shortened from the regular nine because of the doubleheader.

Frazier, now 5-6, relied heavily on his fast ball to tame the Bees, but went to a quick curve in the later innings.

Boxing Shows Profit

Bill Miller Makes Go Of It In Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Promoter Bill Miller stood at the bar and said, "I've seen $10,000 change hands in our arena. This is the only boxing arena where you can lose $10,000 and then go downstairs and recuperate or press your loss to $20,000."

Miller's arena and his city are different. He promotes boxing's Strip Fight of the Week at the Silver Slipper here, where gambling is legal.

He is also one of the few promoters who still stages a weekly boxing card. He has been doing it for 13 years, admittedly to earn money where possible, but also because the saloon owner who has been in Las Vegas for 22 years loves boxing. His own bar is far too small for boxing.

His weekly strip fights, so known because they take place along the famed Las Vegas Strip, give local boxers a chance to earn money and build reputations. A tall heavyweight would have a terrible time. The overhang is only about seven feet above the ring.

"We try to go from middleweights on down," Miller said. "In those weight categories, you can offer a fighter from $1,500 to $2,000 for a good fight. When you get into the heavyweight class, once a fighter gets a ranking, he is in the $20,000 to $40,000 status which puts him right out of our bracket."

Ron Lyle, unsuccessful heavyweight title challenger, fought in the Strip fights. So did Jerry Quarry, who also lost his championship fights. But generally, it is the smaller fighters who are featured.

"There's an example in the ring right now," said Miller. "Bird Legs Jensen. He's a comer and hasn't been beaten. The majority of our fight cards have two five-rounders, a six and a 10. We run 25 rounds as our minimum."

Admission is $7.50. You walk through the Silver Slipper casino and up the stairs to the arena, perhaps adroitly maneuvering past a shapely cocktail waitress delivering a martini to a ringside guest.

Cubs' Moore Leads In Whiffs

Midland pitcher Donnie Moore leads the Texas League in strikeouts with 71 and teammate Dave Geisel is the busiest pitcher with 102 2-3 innings, despite his current role as a relief pitcher.

Official statistics also reveal that El Paso's Paul Dade leads in batting percentage, .339, slugging percentage, .678, and runs batted in, 54.

Lafayette's Jack Clark is the home run leader with 15 while Bill Flores, El Paso, is the leading base stealer with 32. Midland's Wayne Tyrone and Dade were tied for second in homers with 13, but Ty collected his 14th Thursday. Also moving up in the base-swiping chase is Midland's Jose Ortiz with 22.

The Cubs also have three batters who could move into contention for the batting leads with Jose Ortiz and Bill Droege at .316 and Al Montreuil at .312.

10-INNING TILT—

Brewers Edge Caps, 3-2

By The Associated Press

Shreveport and San Antonio played a Texas League game Friday night that finished as if it were the Captains who are in last place by 20 games in the West Division instead of the Brewers.

Shreveport had a 3-2 lead going into the ninth inning but the West pacesetters couldn't hold it as Manny Lantigua singled in the tying run for San Antonio with two away. Then in the 10th, Bill Hiss of San Antonio singled and Captain leftfielder Bill Page allowed the ball to get by him for his team's fifth error of the game.

Hiss went to second on the miscue and then scored the run that gave the Brewers a 4-3 victory as Tony Manning singled.

In other TL games, Midland topped El Paso 5-3, Jackson whipped Lafayette 6-2 and Arkansas and Alexandria split a doubleheader, with Arkansas winning the first game 5-1 and losing the second 4-1.

Marty Cornejo pitched a seven-hitter to lead Jackson over East leader Lafayette. He was supported by Randy Trapp and Craig Cacek with two RBIs each.

Cardell Camper's pitching and a homer by John Young led Arkansas' first-game triumph over Alexandria but the Aces' Mike Allen came back with a four-hitter to win the nightcap. Mike Potter hit a homer for Arkansas in the second game and Marc Rhea for Alexandria in the first game.

Baker Inks Patten

BALDWIN CITY, Kan. (AP) — Baker University's new basketball coach, Shannon Reading, announced the signing of Malcomb Patten, who averaged 20 points and 10 rebounds a game for McLennan County Junior College in Texas.

Patten is 6-4 and 190 pounds, and he also was at Sam Houston State for a year.

CELEBRATING 20 YEARS

July marks the month twenty years ago when First Savings and Loan Association opened its doors in Midland. There have been a lot of big years since . . . and First Savings, with its growth and determination has helped make them that way. Today that same determination abounds and First Savings continues to play a vital role in the growth and prosperity of the community.

FIRST SAVINGS' DIRECTORS — 1955

In 1955 First Savings was born . . . and these men, its first board of directors, were the guiding force whose vision made it possible. Their goal for First Savings was to provide the best in service, convenience, and safety for their savings customers, and to be a friendly neighbor in the community. Their dream became a reality, and in two decades First Savings assets have grown to over $46,000,000. Today, many of these same men still serve as directors, and First Savings continues to grow and serve because of the sound guidance and goals set forth in 1955.

The current directors of First Savings are community leaders, ranchers, bankers, oil men and businessmen who know that each customer must be served in the best manner possible to assure the success of the institution which serves them.

Ruffian Faces Supreme Test

NEW YORK (AP) — Ruffian faces the supreme test of her fabulous career in a $350,000 match race against Foolish Pleasure at Belmont Park today.

The unbeaten 3-year-old filly, proclaimed by many as the greatest of her sex in turf annals, is favored to make it 11 in a row by whipping the winner of the Kentucky Derby in this battle of the sexes that has quickened the heartbeat of horse lovers.

The 1¼-mile sports spectacular is expected to lure a record crowd of 83,000 and go down in turf history as one of the great sports spectaculars. Post time is about 5 p.m. CDT, and the race will be nationally televised by CBS.

Front Runner

Ruffian, known for her effortless style of running, has been on top all the way in each of her 10 starts. That is why she has been proclaimed by some as the greatest filly of all time.

Still, because the daughter of Reviewer has raced only against her own sex, many believe she can prove her supremacy only by beating Foolish Pleasure.

It will be a stern test.

"Ruffian's tough, but we're going to test her," Leroy Jolley, trainer of Foolish Pleasure, said. "The only way to beat her is to run with her. We'll test her all right."

Since most match races have been won by the lead horse, it seems that Jacinto Vasquez, Ruffian's jockey, and Braulio Baeza, astride Foolish Pleasure, will bust out of the gate lickity split and stage a speed duel to get in front.

Survival Of Fittest

"You won't see any 48-second half (mile)," said Eddie Arcaro, famed retired jockey who has ridden in and seen many match races. "This will be a freck of a race. It will be a survival of the fittest."

Both horses are fit and have been sharpened for speed as their workouts attest.

"I've done everything I know to make her ready," said veteran trainer Frank Whiteley Jr., after Ruffian's recent five-furlong work in 58 1-5 seconds. Clockers termed it "easy work."

Foolish Pleasure has been a come-from-behind runner this year, but "Don't forget," said Jolley, "as a 2-year-old last year when he was unbeaten, most folks thought he was just a speedball who wouldn't get the classic distances."

Foolish Pleasure's last start was in the Belmont Stakes at 1½ miles on June 7 where he lost to Avatar by a neck in 2:28 1-5.

Boucha Trial Could Change World Of Sports

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Boston Bruins hockey player Dave Forbes goes on trial Monday in a case marking the first time in the United States that a professional athlete has been prosecuted on criminal charges for his actions during a game.

Civil authorities have taken the country's criminal laws into the areans of professional sports, and Forbes' attorney believes it is a dangerous precedent.

Forbes was indicted by a Hennepin County Grand Jury for allegedly attacking Henry Boucha, then with the Minnesota North Stars, during a National Hockey League game Jan. 4 in Bloomington, Minn.

Forbes was indicted for aggravated assault with a dangerous weapon—his hockey stick. He pleaded innocent at a court appearance Jan. 24.

Boucha, who required 30 stitches to close a wound near his eye and then suffered double vision, didn't return to the ice until late in the season. Boucha, 24, has since jumped to the Minnesota Fighting Saints of the World Hockey Association.

Forbes' attorney, Ron Meshbesher of Minneapolis, says the case does not belong in the courts.

"In the first place, it was not the intent of the legislature that this statute on aggravated assault cover injuries that occur during athletic contests. And secondly, Forbes had no criminal intent," he said.

"This trial could have tremendous repercussions in the sports world. If Forbes is convicted, it would mean platoons of police would have to be posted at every basketball game, football game, hockey game, wrestling match to make sure no criminal offense is committed.

"Every time someone is penalized in football, under the rules it could be considered at least simple assault."

Hennepin County Atty. Gary Flakne, who will prosecute the case personally, initiated the grand jury investigation after hearing reports on the game and talking to incensed spectators.

He said the attack was hardly the physical exchange frequently witnessed during hocky games.

Boucha and Forbes tangled during the game and, witnesses said, exchanged words while they sat out penalties. When they returned to the ice, Boucha was struck in the face with Forbes' stick.

After the indictment was returned, Flakne told reporters:

"I agree that hockey is a contact sport but there seems to be a line, which the grand jury found and I agree with, beyond which something other than good-natured hard contact becomes assault."

Meshbesher disagrees, and seems to have most professional hockey players on his side.

"There was nothing unusual about this fight," the lawyer said. "I can assure you that if it had been Forbes who got injured rather than a Minnesota player, there would be no indictment."

Shortly after the fight, even Minnesota players said punishment should be left up to the NHL commissioner.

Napoles Gets Serious For Muniz Rematch

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Champion Jose Angel Napoles, who took a severe beating from Armando Muniz in a welterwight title fight last March, is changing his pre-fight tactics for the July 12 rematch. This time, it's fewer parties and more training.

"Jose Angel was in bad condition," said his trainer, Alejandro Murga of the bout in Acapulco four months ago. "He underestimated Muniz and attended parties more than he went to the gym. But now he knows that Muniz is no easy opponent."

The rematch in Mexico City will be recognized by the World Boxing Council, but not the rival World Boxing Association.

Napoles, from Mexico City, won the Acapulco fight on a 12th round technical decision, even though he was badly battered with his right eyelid cut loose and hanging down. In a disputed ruling, the referee stopped the fight because of Napoles' injuries, the result of butting by Muniz. Napoles was ahead on points when the fight was stopped.

Napoles renounced the WBA welterweight crown when that organization vetoed a return match against Muniz.

"Jose Angel will again be number one," Murga said. "His pay and his style haven't changed just because he has half the crown. Public opinion is more important to him and he is going to show them that he is the only champion."

Napoles 35, won the crown on April 18, 1969, knocking out Curtis Cokes after 13 rounds.

American Billy Backus knocked out apoles in the refourth round of a 1970 fight but knocked out Backus in the return bout to regain his crown.

Napoles has recorded 51 knockouts in 80 professional fights. He has lost six bouts.

Muniz, 29, began as an amateur fighter when he was 18 and later became a member of the 1968 U.S. Olympic boxing team. Of his 47 fights, he has won 39 with 28 of those victories by knockout. He has lost six times and had one draw.

Murga said he knows that Angelo Dundee, world heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali's trainer, will be present at the fight because he is a friend of Napoles.

Harvard Cops Rowing Win In Henley Regatta

By PETER MUCCINI
Associated Press Writer

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England (AP) — Harvard University stroked its way to a magnificent victory against the Union Boat Club of Boston in the semifinals of the Grand Challenge Cup at the Henley Royal Regatta Saturday, setting a record for the one mile 550 yard course.

The Crimson crew completed the course in 6:13, slashing three seconds from the previous record set in 1965 by the Ratzeburger Rowing Club of Germany.

The other semifinal of the Grand Challenge Cup, premier event of the four-day regatta ending today, was a carbon copy of the Harvard-Union race. But in this race, the American contenders, Vesper Boat Club of Philadelphia, lost by one length to Leander Club and Thames Tradesmen, the British national crew.

Leander got off to an explosive start and maintained a lead of three-quarters of a length until the midway point. Then the British crew hit a rough patch of water and crosswinds. The Americans tried to grab the lead but the British crew raised its stroke and won in 6:13.

The British crew's times for the Barrier and Fawley stages of the course were exactly the same as Harvard's earlier clockings—1:47 and 3:01.

The semifinals of the Diamond Sculls, the most coveted trophy for single oarsmen, turned into a duel between two New Yorkers with Jim Dietz beating 20-year-old Chris Allsopp by 2½ lengths in 7:57.

In the other semifinal of the Diamonds, Irish oarsman Sean Drea beat Peter Kolbe of West Germany by more than five lengths in 7:40. His was two seconds better than the previous record set by American oarsman Donald Spiro in 1965.

Drea, 28, won the trophy in 1973 and 1974 and is now expected to best his rival Dietz in the final.

The Mass. Institute of Technology was knocked out in the semifinals of the Ladies Challenge Plate for heavyweight eights by a British crew from the University of London. The British rowers covered the course in 6:30 cutting two seconds from the record set by the University of Wisconsin in 1973 and defeating the Americans by 1 1-3 lengths.

Earlier MIT battled its way to an exciting victory of three-quarters of a length against the Lady Margaret Boat Club of Cambridge University, England after trailing by nearly one length just after the start.

The schoolboy eight of St. Pauls, Concord, N.H. stormed into the finals of the Princess Elizabeth Challenge Cup, defeating Shawnigan Lake School of Canada by 2¼ lengths in 6:45. The Americans will meet Ridley College of Canada today.

St. Elmo Rowing Club, University of Pennsylvania, won by 3½ lengths over Vespa Rowing Club of England with a time of 7:23 in the quarter-finals of the Wyfold Challenge Cup for coxless fours. The American foursome will meet Leander Club of England in the semifinals today.

Today's feature race will be the match-up between Leander Club Thames Tradesmen and Harvard University in the final of the Grand Challenge Cup.

Press As Pilot's Crutch Is Old Tactic ☆

By STEVE JACOBSON
Newsday

The concept of the manager or coach holding up the press before his players as the common enemy has come under an interesting new focus in the flurry of incidents this past week.

Using the natural hostility between players and press to pull a team together is nothing new. What is new is that Tiger Manager Ralph Houk has publicly offered to meet with Baltimore Evening Sun reporter Phil Hersh "to reconcile our differences" and that the reporter has preferred to press assault charges instead.

A Boston reporter claims he was jostled by one of the Red Sox and chased from the locker room for writing critically of the team. In Texas, Manager Billy Martin reacted to reports of a fight between two of his players by attacking the report. "Nothing but a sportswriter could have caused it," Martin said.

It's a tradition for the sports establishment to regard the reporter who reports conflict on a team as having caused the conflict. Houk for years has exploited the common enemy concept and has made himself enormously popular among his players.

The pattern was always similar, Houk would choose the right psychological moment for his attack — Houk is a master of the psychology of the team. There would be a question after a tough defeat or in a losing streak and the substance of the question would have little to do with it. The identity of the questioner would have everything to do with it.

The man would have to be regarded as an outsider by the team. He would have to be someone Houk thought had few sympathizers on the team — a new man on the assignment; a man from a paper that covered the team sporadically; or a man Houk thought the players disliked.

Houk would scream at the questioner and order him instantly out of the clubhouse to save his life. The players would always hear the abuse. Rarely was there the physical contact with reporter Hersh is charging this time. Once, while managing the Yankees, Houk pulled a button off the coat of Trenton reporter Jay Dunn. Once Houk held New York Post reporter Maury Allen against a wall for writing that Houk put on a tough show for the public but was the opposite to his players.

Once after a galling defeat by the Orioles, Joe Trimble of the Daily News climbed on the team bus and muttered: "I guess you have to carry knives to beat these guys." It was totally in admiration of the Orioles, but Trimble had been critical of the Yankees in print before that and Houk seized on the moment as an opportunity to combat a defeatist attitude among the Yankees.

Houk filled the bus with vile abuse for the man, his courage, honesty, talent and mode of dress, and when it was done, the players applauded.

Within a day or so, Houk found the opportunity to apologize to the man — but, as usual, in private—in a hotel elevator or in the privacy of the clubhouse when the players were all on the field.

Houk may be the best of the current crop at that particuticular ploy, but he's not unique. When Herman Franks managed the Giants he responded to probing with "what the hell kind of a question is that?" Often he would trail a reporter into the Latin-flavored clubhouse with a stream of insults in Spanish that obviously the reporter couldn't understand, Franks assumed.

A year ago Cleveland manager Ken Aspromonte shut the the door of his coaches' room while inside a reporter was held and struck. The reporter and his paper settled for an apology.

Wellington Mara, owner of the football Giants, has followed a reporter around the dressing room when Mara objected to the tack being taken, and intercepted the questions.

Almost always the players welcome the interference. Maybe 20 of the 25 players on a baseball team do. They welcome the publicity about their successes—it puts money in their pockets. But so many of them think there should be no negative side. Thurman Munson resents the attention given Carlton Fisk of the Red Sox but last season Munson spit on Associated Press reporter Herschel Nissenson who asked him about a passed ball.

And the manager who knows how to capitalize on those feelings can make himself beloved by his players. Houk has always been able to do that. This time the court will decide whether he has gone too far.

Austrian Earns Pole For French Grand Prix

LE CASTELLET, France (AP) — Austrian Niki Lauda doggedly overcame a head cold and an off-power Ferrari to gain the pole position Saturday for today's French Grand Prix.

It was his fifth pole start in the nine races this season but, despite this edge, the race looked wide open with just one second covering the 11 top drivers in seven different makes of Formula One race cars.

"The race could look like a superfast string of rail cars tomorrow," said Lauda. "I just hope I'll be the engine."

Lauda said his relatively slow times Friday had been due to a head cold and a balky car, "but now I'm fit and so is the Ferrari," he said.

Alongside Lauda, current world championship leader with three victories in the first eight races, was South African Jody Scheckter in a Tyrrell. He made a spectacular Grand Prix debut here two years ago, leading half the race before he and Emerson Fittipaldi collided .

Scheckter thinks the outcome of the race will be determined by the setting of the controversial wings that balance the cars. "If this high wind keeps up," he said, "the setting will be critical and racewinning."

Escalero KOs Champ In 2nd

MITO, Japan (AP) — Hard-hitting Alfredo Escalera of Puerto Rico Saturday night became the new World Boxing Council (WBC) junior lightweight champion by knocking out defending champion Kuniaki Shibata of Japan in the second round of their 15-round title bout.

The end came at 2:56 of the second round for the 28-year-old Shibata, who hit the canvas after a furious flurry of Escalera's devastating punches.

Y Launches July Soccer

The Midland YMCA will offer a summer soccer program each Tuesday and Thursday evening, beginning Tuesday through July.

The program will be free to anyone from age nine through adult and will start at 7 p.m. each night.

Y laymen who have had experience playing or coaching soccer will conduct the program in an informal "learn while you play" emphasis.

Pick up games will be played each evening with players grouped competitively by age. There will be some basic drills to improve the fundamentals of soccer. No special equipment is needed and no registration is necessary.

All interested persons should plan to meet at the field south of Bowie school each Tuesday and Thursday.

World's Biggest Pimple Due August Grid Opening

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Superdome opens next month. Its foundation hasn't collapsed and seagulls haven't pecked holes in the dome, as critics said would happen. But there's still plenty of controversy.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Louisiana Superdome has been called "The World's Biggest Pimple," "The Ninth Wonder of the World," "The $163 Million Misunderstanding" and "The World's Most Useful Building."

It has been Topic A in Louisiana since 1966 — in legislative debates, court fights, newspaper headlines and saloon squabbles. It has survived almost two dozen lawsuits and a year-long investigation by a special legislative committee. It currently is the subject of inquiries by city, state and federal agencies.

The Superdome rises 30 stories, squatting just off the central business district on 55 acres that used to be an industrial slum. Its roof covers 13 acres, and Houston's 50,000 seat Astrodome — once called the "Eighth Wonder of the World" — would fit inside.

Sections of Superdome seats slide on rails to change the arena's shape, and seating capacities can be altered from 19,000 for basketball to 80,000 for football or 97,000 for conventions.

Giant TV Screens

Giant television screens suspended from the roof offer instant replays, but the screens can't be seen from 64 private suites or from many of the middle-level seats.

The exterior is striking. The Superdome is a huge circular structure whose curved aluminum sides are burnished gold in color and whose white dome is made of plastic sprayed on a steel framework.

Opening day was supposed to have been nine months ago. The Dome now is scheduled to open Aug. 9 with an exhibition football game between the New Orleans Saints and the Houston Oilers.

The Superdome began as a modest dream 10 years ago — a project of businessman Dave Dixon, who wanted to attract a National Football League franchise. Then Gov. John J. McKeithen latched onto the idea, and expanded it. He wanted an Astrodome East, not just a $35 million football stadium.

The governor wanted to "outbig" Texas.

An amendment to the state constitution created the Louisiana Stadium and Exposition District. The amendment was ratified by a 4-1 margin in a statewide referendum. Disgruntled losers filed the first lawsuits.

Delayed By Suits

They argued in court that voters were fooled into thinking they were approving a $35 million football stadium when the decision already had been made to build a much bigger, more elaborate and more expensive structure.

The suits delayed construction for 18 months, until the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear arguments.

By the time bids were received early in 1971, construction estimates had soared. The lowest bid was $93.5 million, without the interest costs, the inflation and the "extras" that eventually drove the cost to $163 million.

Officials of the Louisiana Stadium and Exposition District decided to accept the bid, get construction underway, then ask the legislature for additional money to complete what came to be described as extras. These extras included four elevators to supplement the six included in the $93.5 million estimate, furnishings for 64 suites whose huge windows overlook the arena below, carpeting for ramps and halls, and facilities for stadium employes.

Pay Extras

It was a request in 1973 for $8.25 million to pay for these extras that sparked a year-long investigation by a special legislative committee. The committee's 145-page report, issued last March, called for changes in the staff of the Stadium and Exposion District and suggested that state and federal laws might have been violated. The committee said that true costs might have been misrepresented and there might have been conflicts of interest in awarding contracts.

Mayor Landrieu has not commented on the committee's accusations, but other officials of the Stadium and Exposition District have explanations for their critics.

They note that the Stadium and Exposion District — by state law — is composed of the governor, lieutenant governor, mayor and 14 other top figures from state and city governments. It would be difficult to find a major businessman who had not contributed to one of their political campaigns, says Ben Levy, executive director of the Superdome organization.

Daryle Happy To Escape John Madden

By MIKE MORROW
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — There's nothing worse, says Daryle Lamonica, than losing an interest in football—especially when you're the quarterback.

But professional football "had become a drag, pure hell" for Lamonica the last few seasons.

"Ask my wife, she knows what we've gone through. It was disgusting, that's what it was," Lamonica said in an interview.

And now, as a member of the World Football League Southern California Sun, Lamonica can look back and laugh.

"The Oakland Raiders and the National Football League are things of the past," he said. "Oh, I've got my Oakland Raiders plaque on my fireplace at home—and it will always be there—but I'm sure I'll never play for them and I'm sure (Coach) John Madden has made sure I'll never play in the NFL.

"I can never say things were first-rate with Madden, but he has completely lost control of the Raiders and that's a shame. If that happens, the whole team is going to be in trouble. With him in charge, I can see them going under."

Lamonica led Oakland to 11 postseason appearances in 12 seasons and management of the Southern California franchise say he's just what they (and the WFL) need.

He's 32 years old, operates a large trucking company in California in the off-season and considers himself good for three or four more seasons.

"I told the Sun that I was anxious to get going and that I wanted to help them and the WFL in any way I could," Lamonica said.

"All the league needs is a chance to get off the ground. Is that too much to ask?"

Lamonica played out his NFL option last season and officially joined the Sun on May 1.

He says he can't understand players like Tarkenton, who give the WFL little hope of surviving the second season, and feels there is an abundance of talent to go around.

"Believe me, the NFL is in a very touchy situation right now," he says. "I've met with some of the players and they tell me the chances of a strike are greater than ever. The owners won't admit it—that's why you won't see any of this in the newspapers—but there are a lot of unhappy players.

"If the NFL doesn't adopt a form of The Hemmeter Plan (named after new WFL president Chris Hemmeter), they're going to be in for trouble. Players want a piece of the action and I think they should get it. The salaries are totally out of line."

"I can't even imagine playing for John Madden at Oakland," Lamonica said, warming to the subject of his former employer.

"I'm too much of a man and a professional to do that. There used to be used to be a saying. 'Pride and Poise in the Silver and Black,' but that's just a joke now.

"Madden has no control over the team at all. I haven't worked with Tom Fears (the Sun coach), but I've been told he is a real pro.

"Madden doesn't even know what the word means."

Madden coached the Raiders to the AFC finals last season, with the team losing to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Matter of factly, Lamonica says the Raiders "would have won if Madden had stayed in his hotel room."

"Man for man, there are few teams better than the Oakland Raiders," Lamonica said. "Oh, Pittsburgh has the best Front Four in all of football, but I think the Raiders were the better team last January.

"What that game amounted to was Madden's lack of knowledge. He is concerned with his won-lost record. He can look back and say, 'well, we made it as far as we could,' and leave it at that. But the players know better.

"The man doesn't have any imagination.

"My wife was dumbfound that our game plan consisted of a run off right tackle on first down, a run to the left guard on second down and a pass on third down.

CORDER NOTCHES FIFTH HILL VICTORY—

Cubs Walk By Diablos, 5-3

EL PASO — First baseman Wayne Tyrone lashed out four hits in five trips to lead the Midland Cubs to a 5-3 Texas League victory over the El Paso Diablos at Dudley Field Friday night.

Righthander Dan Corder notched his fifth pitching victory of the season, surviving one bad inning and receiving overpowering relief support from Bruce Sutter, who notched his eighth save.

After the game, El Paso Manager Jim Williams moaned, "Walks are killing us."

Four of Midland's five runs came after walks put the runners on base.

In the first, Jose Ortiz walked, moved up on an infield out and after Bill Droege walked, Tyrone singled to load the bases. Ortiz scored on a passed ball.

In the second, walks to Mike Sember and Joe Wallis set up Ortiz' run-scoring single. Tom Donohue retaliated for El Paso in the home second with his eighth homer, a solo blast off Corder.

Midland made it 3-1 in the third. Al Montreuil walked and Mike Overy relieved starter Jim Young. Bill Huisman moved up Al with a ground out and Sember singled in the run.

As it turned out, Midland's two runs in the fourth were the deciders. Again it started with a walk, this time to Steve Clancy. Ortiz doubled the Cub catcher to third, from where he scored on a wild pitch.

Tyrone's double down the left field line, whistled by the head of the third baseman, who never budged and bounced off the the wall in the corner. Of course, it scored Ortiz and third baseman Butch Alberts was just happy to be alive.

One observer said, "A tenth of a second after it went by Alberts, it hit the wall. It was hit that hard."

Corder had his only rough inning in the fifth when Danny Goodwin, the No. 1 pick in baseball's recent draft, singled, moved to second on a walk to Dave Machemer and a second pass to Marty Friedman loaded the bases. Goodwin scored on a wild pitch and Machemer on a sacrifice fly.

In the eighth, Lopez and Randy Wilson singled with one out, which brought on Sutter from the bullpen. Bruce mowed down the game's final five batters, three on strikeouts.

CUB BRIEFS — Goodwin, a catcher out of Southern University, served as DH in his first four games with the Diablos, but was scheduled to start behind the plate against the Cubs Saturday. . . At Southern, Goodwin had a four-year batting average of .394, 20 homers and 166 runs-batted-in. . .His bonus for signing was in the six-figure range. . . When the Angels drafted Goodwin, it was the second time he had been the No. 1 pick, the first time that has ever happened. Goodwin was No. 1 pick of the White Sox four years ago. . .

Richest Quarter Horse Bids For More Loot

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Easy Date, the richest quarter horse of all time, is favored to add another $119,177 to her career earnings today by winning the Rainbow Quarter Horse Derby at Ruidoso Downs race track.

Easy Date heads a field of 10 3-year-olds competing in the derby, which carries a total purse of $302,059. The prize money is scaled down to $12,168 for last place.

The filly, winner of the 1974 All-American Futurity, posted the best qualifying time of the 86 entries in trials run June 27 at Ruidoso Downs. East Date breezed to victory in her trial heat by covering the 440 yards, same distance as the derby, in 21.59 seconds.

The horse, owned by Walter F. Merrick of Sayre, Okla., boasts a career mark of 17 wins, two seconds and only one out-of-the-money finish in 20 starts.

Easy Date's top competition figures to come from Maskeo Lad, owned by Billy G. Underwood of Dallas, Tex. Maskeo Lad posted the second best qualifying time at 21.65. The next fastest qualifing time, 21.72, was chalked up by a gelding, Hi Johnny, owned by Adobe Ranch Co. of Del Rio, Tex.

Other qualifiers, with trial times, are: I Can Go, 21.73; Vim And Vigor, 21.79; Bo Rax, 21.80; Chautos, 21.82; Heza Charger, 21.82; Mongo Jet, 21.84, and Sheswright, 21.84.

Tall City Teams Notch Victories

By BOB DILLON

Midland teams took impressive victories Friday night as the 7th annual July 4th Slow Pitch Softball Tournament got underway at Hogan Park with 24 games being played on the four diamonds.

The Goodrich Service Center Tiremen started slowly but wound up pounding out a 17-7 victory over Gibbs-Weeks of Big Spring with Jim Donnell, James Rhodes and Don Haney paving the way with homers for the Tall City entry.

Well Fluids, Smith Brothers Pipe, Schlumberger and Western Company, all Tall City teams won while the Lubbock Raiders, Webb Air Force Base along with the San Angelo Independents, all posted opening round victories.

Well Fluids won two games, shutting out Walker Auto of Stanton, 8-0 and then came back to bomb TV Service, 24-4. Harvey Kinchlow muscled out three homers, one against Walker Auto and a pair against TV Service.

Abilene Waugh, another strong entry posted an 11-6 triumph over Midland Nazarine while Smith Brothers, behind the home run power of Don Collyer, John Eply and Don Smith, took a 10-3 win over Lone Star.

Lubbock's Raiders looked sluggish at times in taking a 10-1 victory over First Christian of Midland. There were no home runs, but Bo Cornett blasted a triple for the Hub City team.

Rod Varella and Larry Rundle homered for Nazarine while Waugh got a homer out of Gary Meinzer.

Clay Chemical took a narrow 8-7 victory over South Texas Costruction in a battle of Midland teams with Willie Long's homer being the difference in the well-played game. Randy Ward slammed three triples for the winners. Ward had four hits in five trips.

Schlumberger pounded out a 13-4 triumph over Smith International with Brad Van Cleave and Doc Sledge smacking three-baggers for the winners. Van Cleave went four-for-four.

McAfee of Odessa ripped Cooper Mud, 18-3 with former Odessa Permian football star David yerly hitting a homer for the Odessans.

Jim Snyder's two home runs sparked San Angelo Independents to an easy 16-1 win over the Black Spirits of Midland. The Black Spirits had posted an earlier 8-7 win over C&C Carpets.

Webb took a close 2-1 victory over ORD after drawing a first round bye. Tom Newman had a triple for the losers. ORD beat G. Q. Salmon in the opening round with Jim Sale homering for the Midlanders.

Goodrich's Blimps beat First Baptist, 5-2, in the first round and then dropped a 3-2 decision to Pioneer Natural Gas of Lubbock in the second round. Buck Dollar, former Midland Lee athlete, homered for Pioneer.

HNG Oil posted a 19-2 win over Don's Poultry with Cal Bauer leading the attack with three hits. Dave Rock had a triple for the winners.

Western Company took a 16-6 victory over Dairy Queen with Gordon Autry hitting a triple and homer for the winners. Teammate Kenny Wood also had a three-bagger.

Three-Way Construction of Odessa beat Parklea Baptist, 10-6, while in other opening round contests, A. B. Dick took a 7-5 win over Grace Lutheran.

Nazarine shut out the Midland Merchants, 5-0, before bowing to Abilene Waugh while TV Service beat the Red Chiefs, 9-5. In other action, it was First Christian 10, Taylor Electric of Odessa 5; Roadrunners 8; Crestview Baptist 2 and Eckel of Odessa 21, Midland Optimists 15.

Players Take Religion In Locker Room Services

NEW YORK (AP) — There are no stained glass windows, no pews, not even a pulpit. But ballplayers have learned to take their religion where they can get it, so the manager's dressing room is a perfectly acceptable setting for the Baseball Chapel.

Each Sunday, many players on the 24 major league clubs take about 15 minutes from their pre-game batting and fielding drills to listen to non-denominational sermons from a variety of speakers.

90 Speakers

"We've had about 90 different speakers in three years," said Watson Spoelstra, a former sports writer who is coordinator of the chapel program.

One of the most popular is Tom Skinner, a former Harlem gang leader who has found peace in religion and spreads the word to athletes. Skinner has worked with the Washington Redskins of the National Football League for the last six years and has been involved in the Baseball Chapel program since it began.

Skinner sometimes speaks to both visiting and home clubs in the same day and occasionally winds up talking to the same team in consecutive weeks. Repetition, however, is not a problem. "I've got plenty to tell them," he said.

Doubleheader

Last Sunday, Skinner did a doubleheader, speaking first to the Philadelphia Phillies in the visitors' dressing room at Shea Stadium, and then conducting an impromptu session with the New York Mets in their room.

About a dozen players and other club personnel listened as Skinner spoke. His talks were not concerned so much with religion as with man's universal desire "to get it all together."

That is the language athletes understand, and perhaps it explains why Skinner is so well received.

In the meeting with the Phillies, Skinner talked about comaraderie and how much can be accomplished by a group of men working together with a single purpose.

Cards Were Best

"From 1967 through 1970, the best team in the NFL, man for man, was the St. Louis Cardinals. But they didn't win a thing, because they couldn't pull together. In basketball, the same thing was true with the Los Angeles Lakers. They had Jerry West, Elgin Baylor and Wilt Chamberlain, but the New York Knicks beat them with less talent. They had it together."

Silently, Bob Boone, Dave Cash and the other Phils players listened to Skinner. After he was finished with them, he moved down the hall to the New York dressing room.

The Commitment

"The totality of our lives together is what's important," Skinner told the Mets. "...Living our lives the way God intended. It's tough, sure, but a lot of things are tough.

"Look, you guys are ballplayers. That's a priority of your life. You have made a commitment to it. And when you step up to bat, you have made a commitment to hit the ball. Well, God says, 'Make a commitment to Me. Allow Me to run your life.'"

That is a heavy message, but it clearly reaches the players. The Mets group, including Jerry Koosman, Felix Millan and Dave Kingman, sat transfixed, listening to every word. When he was finished, each player shook hands with Skinner, thanking him for meeting with them.

Skinner is a native New Yorker who grew up fighting in the streets. "I busted heads, ripped off people, did it all," he said. "I hated people and I hated myself." He was the leader of a gang called the Harlem Lords and vividly remembers the night his life turned around.

"I was mapping strategy for the largest gang fight I had ever been in," he said. "I was listening to the radio...I had my favorite disc jockey on. Then they interrupted the program for a message."

The message was much the same as the one Skinner now spreads among the ballplayers. It reached him and changed him.

"It made me a new man," he said. "It was like a rebirth. I went back to the people I had hurt and I asked them if they wanted to press charges. They said they would not, and that's the only reason I didn't wind up in jail."

Boston Star's Face Is Unknown To Fans

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

George Fennell has spent 22 of his 41 years in radio. He once dreamed of being on television. Now he's a TV personality in Boston, appearing on WCVB five nights a week. But his dream isn't complete yet.

His fans never have seen his face on the tube.

He's the mellow-voiced, shadowy star of Channel Five's "Five All Night," a wee-small-hour bag of phone talk, old series, movies and miscellany from 2:10 a.m. to 5:55 a.m., Tuesdays through Saturdays.

When his show starts, all the night owls see is a videotape of George in silhouette, holding forth beneath a wide-brimmed leather cowboy hat and clad in a cowboy shirt, battered pants and boots.

The in-the-flesh Fennell actually is in the announcer's booth during the show, doing station breaks, discussing various things and occasionally warning viewers the night's movie is a real dog.

Robert Bennett, WCVB's general manager, says he made Fennell the show's staff mystery man as a publicity gimmick shortly after "Five All Night" began as a one-night-a-week program in late 1972.

It succeeded beyond his wildest expectations, he said, claiming the show now has a fan club of 12,000 viewers, not only in Boston but also in other New England areas where the show is carried by cable TV.

"Uncle George," as the fans call him, says his empire contains "a pretty big mixture of people. There are policemen, firemen, security guards, nurses, insomniacs and partygoers who just fell in the door.

"We also have students who are cramming, writers who are writing books and even teachers who are correcting papers. If they're moved to it, they often call up to correct me about something."

The something usually is Fennell's trivia quiz, which poses such questions as: "How long does 'Gone With the Wind' run in hours and minutes?' I've never really stumped the audience, though."

In addition to the quiz, Uncle George also airs brief chats with the citizenry. He now tapes them from 10 to 11 p.m. each night and sprinkles the talk through the show, but says plans are afoot to air them live soon, or at least with a 12-second delay.

The delay is necessary, he points out, "because when you're dealing with people at two-thirty in the morning there are a lot of 'em who aren't playing on a full deck."

Does he get amorous lady callers late at night?

"Yeah, I get a lot of proposals through the week," says Uncle George, a bachelor. "Every kind of proposal. A lot of 'em are heavy breathers. I try to be really cool about it, you know."

On several nights, there are electronic light shows that briefly flash on to fill the moments between commercials, calls, trivia quizzing and the scheduled program fare, which is indeed a mixed assortment.

This week's supply, for example, includes "The Candlepin Super Bowl;" "The Long View," a local show for the elderly; "Behind the Mask," a 1932 Boris Karloff flick, and even an old "Boston Blackie" rerun.

Fennell, a popular late night radio disc jockey in Boston and Los Angeles before becoming a night-owl TV star, was asked if the fact his face never is seen on TV doesn't do strange things to his mind.

"Well, at first it did," the husky ex-Marine conceded. "Because I couldn't understand what the gimmick was about. And I thought maybe people would get the wrong impression of what was going on.

"Like maybe they'd think I was too ugly and perhaps my face was disfigured. But when I saw the reaction to it, saw it was a great show biz gimmick, then I knew it was right.

"But people still constantly ask me on the phone at night, 'Why don't you show your face?' And I tell 'em, 'Well, I'm the mystery man for a while. But some day they'll unmask me. And you'll be sorree.'"

San Antonio Trip Deadline Tuesday

Tuesday is the deadline for reserving space on the Museum of the Southwest - sponsored trip in early August to San Antonio's Texas Folk Festival.

The annual festival, described as "Texas' biggest block party," is sponsored by the Institute of Texan Cultures at HemisFair Plaza. The event showcases the art, crafts, food, music and dances of the ethnic and racial groups in the state.

Additional information on the Aug. 8-10 trip may be obtained from the Museum of the Southwest office, 683-2882.

Piano Students Win At Convention

Midland piano students were among winners in various competitions at the recent state convention of the Texas Music Teachers Association at Houston.

The Midland Student Affiliate organization of the TMTA received first place for its poster depicting activities and programs of the past year, and several individual students placed in contests in which they participated.

Dabney Tompkins won first in the Original Composition contest with his "Five Small Pieces For Concert Band," recorded earlier by the Midland High School Band. Mark Vasicek was a winner in the tuba solo contest and Holly Christianson received an honorable mention in the Senior Piano Solo Contest division. Among Musiz Quiz winners were Midlanders Katherine George and Gretchen Koch.

In addition to the above students, three 10-piano ensemble teams performed at the convention in Houston's Shamrock Hotel. Also attending the convention were Mrs. C. J. George, incoming president of Midland Music Teachers Association, an affiliate of TMTA, and several members of the local association.

Two Join Theatre Centre Staff

Two new faces are on the scene at Theatre Centre here.

Recently joining the professional staff of Midland Community Theatre were Steve Woods as MCT technical director and Judy Yeckel as director of children's theater activities. Both began their association with MCT in early June.

Woods came here from Abilene where he had been technical director for the McMurry College Theatre; before that he resided at Amarillo where he conducted workshops in religious drama and served as a technical director for the outdoor music drama, "Texas!", presented annually in Palo Duro Canyon State Park.

Woods holds a bachelor's degree in theater from Wayland College at Plainview and an M.A. in technical theater from West Texas State University at Canyon. He is a native of Plainview. He and his wife Linda are the parents of two children, Christopher, 5, and Anthony, 2, and say they consider Midland "about the friendliest place we've been in Texas."

Of his work at MCT, Woods says he hopes "to expand the professional structure within which theater is conducted," and to "educate as well as be educated" in all areas of community theater.

Miss Yeckel came to Midland from Chicago where she directed a children's theater touring group, "Periwinkle Productions." A native of Kansas City, she received a B.A. degree in theater arts from Mount Holyoke College in Massachusetts. She stayed on after graduation to serve as director of the Mount Holyoke Children's Theatre, touring the New England area with that theater's performing company.

Miss Yeckel later became associated in New York City with Periwinkle Productions, an equity-based children's theater group. She served as both director and production manager of the ensemble and wrote and directed several original plays for the company, including "Hums and Poems of Pooh" and "Broken Windows."

Miss Yeckel recently directed the first production of the current summer season of MCT's Pickwick Players and also will direct the third production scheduled for August, a musical play titled "Due To A Lack of Interest, Tomorrow Has Been Cancelled." Woods will direct the Pickwicks' second summer show coming up later this month, a dramatized version of Mark Twin's "Tom Sawyer."

Miss Yeckel says she plans to stick with children's theater rather than using it as a stepping stone to "adult" theater. "I love working with and for kids because they are the most open and honest audiences I know. They are demanding, but always they are appreciative!"

Globe Offering Three Productions

ODESSA — The Globe of the Great Southwest, the Permian Basin's own replica of an Elizabethan-era theater, this week will be offering performances of all three of its major productions in the current Summer Shakespeare Festival.

The third production to enter the season's repertory, Shakespeare's "Troilus and Cressida," opened Saturday night, joining two other productions which had opened earlier. They are the Bard's "Much Ado About Nothing" plus a light contemporary musical, "Dames At Sea."

"Dames At Sea" will be presented at a matinee at 2:30 p.m. today in addition to performances at 8 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday. At 8 p.m. Thursday, "Troilus and Cressida" will have its second performance of the season, and at 8 p.m. Friday, "Much Ado About Nothing" will have a presentation. The Saturday night presentation will be "Troilus and Cressida."

On Sunday, July 13, a special production, "The Life of Christ," will have its first performance. The religious drama by Regina Walker McCally will then play on Sunday matinees only through the end of the festival in late August.

Tickets for all festival performances are on sale at the Globe box office and may be reserved by dialing the theater's new telephone number, 332-1586.

Planetarium Schedules Sky Shows

A series of educational sky shows at the Museum of the Southwest's Marian Blakemore Planetarium will be Wednesday evening features during July. They are open to the public at no charge.

The series began last Wednesday with a program titled "Man in Space: Journey to Infinity."

Subsequent programs in the series are as follows: July 9, "The Sun: Earth's Awesome Star"; July 16, "The Stars: Legions of the Heavens"; July 23, "Constellations: What's Up in the Summer Sky"; July 30, "The Zodiac: Astronomy of Astrology." Each event begins at 9 p.m.

Area Artists Win At Snyder

SNYDER — Artists from Midland, Big Spring and Odessa were among winners in the 12th annual Fourth of July art show here.

The competition was divided into 19 categories, ranging from adult professional and amateur divisions in landscape, portraiture and still life to junior amateur divisions.

In adult amateur portrait copy category, Billie Hart of Big Spring placed second and Roger Holmes of Midland placed third. In adult amateur still life copy division, Odessan Wanda Jean Newton placed second and third.

Other top winners in the various show divisions were from Sterling City, Austin, Snyder, Sweetwater, Colorado City, Lubbock, Hermleigh, Rotan and Kayenta, Ariz.

Tech's Theatre Repertory Season Nearing Finish

LUBBOCK — The Texas Tech University Theatre's annual summer repertory season is in its final week.

The "Festival of Comedy" will conclude Friday with a performance of Lanford Wilson's acclaimed new comedy, "Hot L Baltimore."

The festival opened June 27 with Neil Simon's popular "Come Blow Your Horn" and the season also has offered a third production, Alan Ayckbourn's wacky "How the Other Half Loves."

Today's presentation will be "Come Blow Your Horn," followed by a Monday night performance of "How the Other Half Loves" and a Tuesday night presentation of "Hot L Baltimore." The three plays will be repeated in the same order on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights. Tickets for remaining performances are on sale daily at the University Theatre, 806-742-2153.

'Treemonisha' Broadway Bound

HOUSTON — "Treemonisha," famed ragtime composer Scott Joplin's only opera which recently had a series of Houston performances, is Broadway-bound.

The Houston production in late May and early June was presented by the Houston Grand Opera as its annual Spring Opera Festival offering, and was well received by the public. David Gockley, HGO's dynamic young general director, this week announced that touring negotiations have been completed between the HGO and James Nederlander Inc., a theatrical production firm, to take the Houston production to Broadway for a limited engagement.

To be billed as "The Houston Grand Opera Production," the Joplin opera will open Sept. 9 at Philadelphia's Forest Theater for a two-week tryout period before it goes into Manhattan's Uris Theater on Sept. 25 for its six-week run. Dates for the production to be toured to selected U.S. cities are now being firmed up and will be announced soon, Gockley said here.

Gockley said that "the same staging, dancing, sets, costumes and virtually the same cast" used for Houston performances would be used for the Broadway presentation and the subsequent tour. "Houston Grand Opera will have artistic control over the entire production for the duration of the tour," he emphasized.

HGO's production of "Treemonisha" represents the first time an opera company has toured one of its productions to Broadway, Gockley believes. "In addition, it represents one of the rare occasions an opera has appeared on Broadway," the last one have done so more than two decades ago.

The HGO's fourth Spring Opera Festival at which "Tremonisha" was given a series of performances, was underwritten by grants from Armco Steel, the Houston Parks and Recreation Department, the Humphreys Foundation, the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Opera Institute and the Texas Commission on the Arts Humanities. The production was under the baton of Guther Schiller, one of the nation's foremost experts on the ragtime works of Scott Joplin, and had an all-black cast headed by such noted vocal artists as Carmen Balthrop and Betty Allen, joined by the Prairie View A&M University choir.

Dallas Medicos Ready For Stones

DALLAS (AP) — The Rolling Stones keep rolling along on their national music tour and medical staffs here are ready for them.

The Stones, led by wildman Mick Jagger, hit the Cotton Bowl today with doctors figuring at least 1,000 of the estimated 65,000-80,000 persons in the audience will need their services.

Nurses began preparations for the Rolling Stones concert June 24. Serious medical cases will be treated on a "life-saving basis" only at the concert. Less critical cases will be taken at once to Parkland Hospital.

Sixty percent of the medical volunteers at the concert will be licensed professionals, said John Mayabb, a nurse.

Those attending the concert should be prepared to spend a day in the heat and should ingest large quantities of salt, wear a hat and light clothing, he advised.

Six treatment stations will be set up in the Cotton Bowl, along with five ambulances and 25 roving medicos who will look for medical emergencies.

While physicians expect most of their medical problems will be heat-related, organizers of the event are banning alcohol and glass containers of any kind.

Book By Rankin Man Is Published

RANKIN — A new book by Rankin resident Tommy Sheffield has just been published.

The volume is titled "Best Supporting Actors: Rodeo Clowns."

Sheffield, a well-known professional rodeo performer as well as a bright new writing talent, has captured colorfully and objectively the pain, heartbreak and happiness of these colleagues on the grueling rodeo circuit, and after completing the volume the reader will have a good idea of the time and toil put in by these "supporting players." Sheffield's book also successfully captures the excitement of past performances and the anticipation of new challenges.

Willie Nelson's Picnic Wild, Beer-Guzzling Naked Bash

LIBERTY HILL, Tex. (AP) — The last of a sunburned, hung-over, music-deafened, worn-out mob of 70,000 persons left here Saturday following the third annual Willie Nelson 4th of July Picnic.

"Well, if we had arrested all the naked and drunk people I saw we'd have filled our jail and yours, and all of the jails from here to Dallas," said one Williamson County deputy. "We've got about 20 drunks in the jail right now and we're trying to process them out of here."

The annual "picnic" was staged by Nelson who brought top names in the progressive country music field to entertain their growing legions of fans. On hand were Kris Kristofferson, Rita Coolidge, the Pointer Sisters and similar pied pipers who have developed a new breed of "redneck"—readily identified by their turquoise jewelry, brim-bent straw hats, pickup trucks and capacity for San Antonio-brewed beer.

"The main problem was traffic. Nobody counted on that many people showing up. Parking was something else. People parked their cars and walked for miles to get to the thing," the deputy said.

Attendants at a field hospital set up on the grassy site near this Central Texas community said they treated about 500 persons for heat prostration, along with the routine cuts and scratches.

"It was mainly just people sitting out there in the heat and drinking that old Lone Star (beer)," said one attendant.

Peace officers said thousands of the "picnickers" doffed their clothes and waded into a creek which sliced through the area.

"There were naked folks everywhere but we didn't have the manpower and the time to fool with them. As long as they weren't killing each other—no shootings and stuff—we had plenty to do otherwise," one deputy said.

Ford Attends Flag Ceremony At Ft. McHenry

BALTIMORE (AP) — President Ford says he hopes the Bicentennial year will "become a true, national experience" and there will be concentrated study of the nation's history at every school where the American flag flies.

Helping usher in the nation's 200th year Friday night at historic Ft. McHenry, Ford termed the Bicentennial observance "a celebration of liberty, freedom and democracy — wherever they exist."

"The young republic of yesteryear is today a strong and great nation. It still lives the values of its declaration, its Constitution, its Bill of Rights. It still remains — in Lincoln's words — 'the last, best hope of earth,'" the President said.

"Let us this Fourth of July continue to be a nation of hope. The American people believe in tomorrow — by dawn's early light our flag will still be there."

Stands Beneath Duplicate

Ford stood beneath a duplicate of the original Star Spangled Banner at the fort where Francis Scott Key wrote the poem that became the national anthem. Earlier, there was a re-enactment of the bombardment of Ft. McHenry which inspired Key to write of "the rocket's red glare."

The President made the speech after witnessing a special session of the U.S. District Court for Maryland, at which Judge Edward S. Northrop administered the oath to 41 naturalized citizens.

Ford said "we are honored" by the new citizens, saying, "they have chosen what we often take for granted."

Ford restated a theme he has repeatedly suggested for the nation's third century — that it should be "an era of individual freedom."

"The mass approach of the modern world places a premium on creativity and individuality. Mass production, mass education, mass population, must not smother individual expression, or limit individual opportunity."

Ford Disputes Claim Emissions Standards Unmet

DETROIT (AP) — A government study which claims 1974 cars are not even coming close to meeting federal pollution emission standards has been dismissed by a Ford Motor Co. spokesman as having "no validity."

The secret Environmental Protection Agency report, alleging "massive failure" in emissions control, was revealed Thursday by consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

In a letter to President Ford, Nader said, "The data indicate that only at low mileage are any of the standards even approached." He asked the White House to retract a request to relax emission standards set to go into effect in 1978.

Only First Draft

The Ford spokesman claimed on Friday, however, that the data is based on road tests rather than controlled laboratory tests which the EPA uses in its regular certification trials.

Eric Stork, EPA deputy assistant administrator, said the report was only the first draft of a budgetary statement and was "prepared with marginal competence. Much of the data in the report is incorrect and much of the analysis is incorrect." He refused to elaborate.

Nader quoted the report as saying "that 1974 cars, which are required to reduce hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide emissions by 61 per cent and 62 per cent respectively over pre-1968 levels, in fact achieve only a 15 and 22 per cent reduction over the actual useful life of the car."

AIM Chief Says White America On Trial This Year

MT. RUSHMORE, S.D. (AP) — While Fourth of July tourists at Mt. Rushmore national memorial looked on, an American Indian Movement leader warned that white America will be on trial during the Bicentennial celebration for crimes committed against Indian people.

"For 199 years we've been on trial, and for 199 years we've been found guilty," Dennis Banks said Friday. "The next 200 years will not be like the last 200.

"All this year the United States of America will be on trial by Indian people. How white America handles the next year will determine its punishment."

A group of approximately 300 AIM members and supporters marched four miles from Keystone to the memorial, pounding a ceremoial drum and chanting.

Ted Means, South Dakota AIM director, said the four presidents honored on the monument — Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt — exemplify white treatment of Indians in the United States. "Those four faces are an example of the hypocrisy that exists in this country today," Means said. "But the day is coming for the white man."

Star Trek Fans Gathering

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Fans of Star Trek, the science fiction television series, are convening in Atlanta to celebrate and discuss the optimistic viewpoint of its writer-producer, Gene Roddenberry.

"People get together because they appreciate the concepts of Star Trek and what Mr. Roddenberry was trying to say," said Connie Fleming, an Air Force captain stationed at Dobbins AFB in Marietta, Ga.

"He was the first science fiction writer who has given us something to look forward to instead of just writing about the destruction of our planet. He was saying that people could get along together in the future."

DeForest Kelley, of Atlanta, who played Dr. McCoy in the series, said he and other actors are "going through the pains of being a successful series without doing it. We're not being paid for it.

"I'm receiving enormous mail that I cannot take care of unless I hire a Girl Friday," he added. "The bad thing about Star Trek mail is that it is so literate that it's difficult not to respond to it.

"NASA (the National Aeronautics and Space Administration) is our greatest fan. They ran the show on the big screen in Houston every Thursday night," Kelley said Friday.

Capt. Fleming said 1,200 participants were expected from across the country.

The convention includes panel discussions by Kelley and James Doohan, who played Chief Engineer "Scotty" Scott.

There also will be trivia contests, costume competitions, art auctions, science fiction movies and a 30-minute reel of Star Trek bloopers.

The National Broadcasting Corporation canceled the series in 1969, but reruns of the 79 episodes have been shown on 142 stations in the United States and 50 countries.

Robert Gibbons, a Missouri physicist and convention co-chairman, said a motion picture based on the TV series is expected to be produced next year.

Gibbons also said some ideas used in Star Trek that were considered science fiction at the time had since come true.

"The Navy, for instance, said they examined the Star Trek bridge and this is the optimum arrangement of a type of bridge where you have a command console is the center and all of your inputs around the outside," he said. "They actually built a command center based on the Star Trek bridge."

Japanese Chief Says Ford Talks To Be Vital

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Takeo Miki said Saturday his scheduled talks with President Ford in August will be vitally important not only for U.S.-Japanese relations but for the world as a whole.

"Our talks will be vitally important because it will be our first talk as national leaders, the situation in Asia has drastically changed, and there is more and more necessity of cooperation between industrialized nations as well as dialogue between resource-producing and consuming countries," he told a news conference.

Although there are no urgent problems between the two countries, Miki said his visit would enable him and Ford to "understand each other better and recognize the world issues better."

Some observers said Miki's seven-month-old regime was facing its biggest crisis since he succeeded former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka last December. Some members of the ruling Conservative party are openly accusing the 67-year-old leader of mishandling parliamentary business and espousing policies they consider too liberal.

Miki has come under attack for failing to push through vital bills revising the anti-monopoly law and hiking taxes on liquor, tobacco and postal services, and for not ratifying the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and Japan-South Korea continental shelf treaty.

Midland Students To Attend Farm Bureau Seminar

The Midland County Farm Bureau will sponsor three students to the 13th annual Texas Farm Bureau High School Citizenship Seminar July 13-18 at Baylor University in Waco.

The students are Beverly Hoelscher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Hoelscher of Midkiff; Greg Midkiff, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Midkiff of Midland; Judy Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Jones Jr. of Midland.

Carroll Chaloupka, president of the Texas Farm Bureau, and Warren Newberry executive director, will speak to the group at the opening session July 14.

Purpose of the four-day school is to provide training in the fundamentals of the free enterprise system, how communistic systems work and basic responsibilities of good citizenship, according to Ervin A. Baumann of Midland, president of the local county farm organization.

U.S., South Koreans Observe Anniversary

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — U.S. and South Korean officials Saturday observed the 25th anniversary of America's first ground action against North Korean invaders in the Korean war of 1950-53.

The guest of honor at the ceremony on the battle site was retired Brig. Gen. Charles B. Smith, 56, a native of Lambertville, N.J., who led a unit now known as Task Force Smith.

It was at Chukmi-Ryung near Osan that Smith, then a lieutenant-colonel, and 540 men from the 24th Infantry Division made the first in a series of holding actions against the advancing Communists.

Task Force Smith, hurriedly sent from Japan, knocked out at least four tanks, killed 42 North Koreans and wounded 85 others while suffering a total of 172 casualties during eight hours of delaying actions against a North Korean division, spearheaded by about 30 tanks.

President Chung Hee Park on Friday decorated Smith with the order of military merit, Taeguk, Korea's highest military decoration.

Smith attended the ceremonies under a "revisit Korea" program run by the Korean National Tourist Corp., which invites Korean war veterans of 16 countries which fought against the North Koreans under the United Nations command to visit their old battlfields.

Also attending the ceremony held near Osan, 30 miles south of Seoul, were Gen. Richard G. Stilwell, commander of U.S. forces in Korea, and many Korean military leaders.

Sheinwold On Bridge

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Course Suggested For Summer Reading

Now that my college years are far behind me I can act the professor's role. Summer reading time has arrived, and anybody who wants to gladden my heart can try reading my "Five Weeks to Winning Bridge."

HOW TO OVERCALL

On the 10th day of those Five Weeks, I have this to say about making overcalls:

What do you need to bid your own suit when an opponent has opened the bidding?

The answer depends on three factors:

—How high you must bid

—What sort of opponents you have —The state of your bank balance

You can laugh at bidding requirements if you have more money than brains. This would not, of course, be true of any of my readers, but many players bid as though their losses mean nothing at all.

Perhaps these people got that way by playing against timid opponents. If your opponents don't know how to double, you don't need to be cautious; but if your opponents double at the drop of a trick, you must be especially cautious. Clearly, your requirements for a defensive overcall should vary with the nature of your opponents.

For good measure, there are two chapters on penalty doubles and two chapters on takeout doubles. If you read a chapter a day, you'll learn more in five days than I learned in four years of college.

HYENA CONTROL

One of the most important things to learn about bridge is how to tell your friends from the hyenas. This statement begins the 23rd day of my five-week course.

The idea is that very often one of your opponents is harmless, but the other is a hyena of hideous hue. Here is an advanced hand from this chapter:

| 1 ◇ | Pass | 1 ♡ | Pass |
| 1 NT | Pass | 3 NT | All Pass |

Opening lead — ♠ 6

West opens the six of spades, and you hold up the ace until the third round. By that time you know West is the hyena. If he regains the lead, he will defeat the contract with the rest of his spades.

East is a friendly little fellow. If he wins a trick, he can do no harm.

Therefore you must develop your tricks in such a way as to lose the lead only to East, not to West. You already have eight sure tricks and you must try to develop one more.

Begin by leading a heart. If West happens to play the three of hearts you will play a low heart from the dummy. East will have to win the trick, and you can later cash the top hearts in the hope of setting up dummy's last heart.

As it happens, West plays the eight of hearts, and you dare not play low from dummy. You can't afford to let the hyena in.

START DIAMONDS

The next step is to start the diamonds from dummy. If East puts up the queen, you will let him hold the trick. If East plays low, you will win with the ace of diamonds.

Get back to dummy with a club and lead another diamond through East. This time he is obliged to play the queen, and you let him hold the trick.

This play enables you to set up a diamond without allowing West to gain the lead.

Note the importance of leading diamonds twice from the dummy. If you begin by leading a low diamond from your own hand, West will win and run the spades. If you begin by leading the ace or king of diamonds from your hand, East will get rid of the queen.

I have only one request. If you come up against me in a tournament, please don't play like a genius and then tell me you learned it all from my book. My blood pressure's not what it used to be in my college days.

'Executive Action' Lawsuit Settled By Dallas Officer

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas policeman who claimed he was libeled in the film "Executive Action" — dealing with the President Kennedy assassination — has reached an out-of-court settlement with the co-author of the book used for the film.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert Porter last week set aside a $750,000 libel judgment against Mark Lane and dismissed "with prejudice" policeman Roy Vaughn's claims against Lane.

Porter also dismissed a countersuit against Vaughn filed by Lane.

Lane's attorney, Ernest Figari, said only that "it would be a reasonable interpretation" to assume that a negotiated settlement had been reached.

Earlier Vaughn had reached a settlement with General Pictures Corp., the company that distributed the film, but the amount was not disclosed.

Vaughn had iled a $3-million suit claiming that the movie, which suggests a right wing business conspiracy to kill Kennedy, portrayed him as the policemen who knowingly allowed Jack Ruby to enter the police station to kill Lee Harvey Oswald.

Ex-South Viet General Just Another Face In Crowd Now

By GEORGE ESPER

NEW YORK (AP) — Like all South Vietnamese generals, Nguyen Van Minh lived the good life.

A villa in Saigon, a staff of aides and servants, two helicopters on the lawn, three sons studying in Paris, near promotion to four-star general and a year from retirement to a country home and vegetable farm.

He has come down a long way during the past two months.

Walking on Fifth Avenue in Manhattan, he is lost in the crowd, this man who three months ago was to command Saigon's last stand.

Like many other generals, Minh fled Saigon before its fall. He says now he saw the hopelessness of the situation as soon as he took command of the city's defenses on March 24.

The U.S. evacuation on April 29 took him, his 39-year-old wife and three children aged 10 to 14 through Guam and Indian Gap, Pa., to a seedy apartment on New York's West Side, where they share quarters with longtime Vietnamese friends.

At 46, Minh left everything behind, in Saigon, including 10 pounds of documents he had planned to use in writing his memoirs.

Minh, who arrived here two weeks ago, spends his days now mostly in the apartment working on his memoirs and listening to the radio.

"The first week I arrived here, I took rest," he says. "The second week I have worked on my memoirs, have tried to get in touch with old friends. I am trying to find a job as a writer or reporter. I sit in my house most of the day.

"New York is very strange to me, very big. The construction and roads are modern. My wife is trying to find a school for the children. They have been studying English at home. . .We eat mostly Vietnamese food prepared with Oriental items purchased in Chinatown."

Minh says all he has left is $1,860 in travelers' checks and $5,600 worth of Saigon-to-Paris airline tickets, which were never used. He has not ruled out applying for welfare if things don't work out.

His biggest pride is his defense of An Loc, the city that withstood a four-month siege in 1972 when Minh commanded the provinces surrounding Saigon as well as the South Vietnamese capital itself.

"I never lost any battles except the last one," Minh says.

Minh says he had only one division of about 6,000 regular troops to defend Saigon against 16 North Vietnamese divisions with Soviet-built 130mm artillery. He says that less than 50 per cent of his troops were combat ready.

The loss of South Vietnam began in mid-March with the retreat from the central highlands, then from the northern and central coasts.

"There was intoxicating panic as the troops began to fall back," says Minh. "There was no command, no leadership . . . The enemy planted rumors that President (Nguyen Van) Thieu had given up all of South Vietnam to the 13th parallel. The civilian population hurried to move out. Everywhere the people pulled out with the troops . . ."

Minh recalls that on April 29, the day before the Saigon government surrendered, the 3rd Corps command responsible for keeping the enemy outside Saigon in the surrounding provinces moved to the capital. Minh didn't know they were coming. He lost contact with the main tactical headquarters. The Bien Hoa air and logistics base 15 miles northeast of Saigon was given up. Top military leaders fled.

Hope was gone, he says. And at 12:30 p.m. on April 29, Minh was gone, too.

As he walks the streets of Manhattan, his thoughts return to the war.

While troops got lost in Cambodia and air strikes went astray, Minh noted while walking along Fifth Avenue that New York's numbered East-West streets crossing North-South avenues would be easy to plot on a map.

"The map coordinates would be easy here to draw up for air strikes," he said.

Sports Car Club To Sponsor Show, Gymkhana, Rallye

The West Texas Sport Car Club is sponsoring Saturday and Sunday a week-end of events at the Dellwood Plaza Mall.

A car show, featuring vartous types of sports cars will be held from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday with a watch to be given away at 4 p.m. Besides being just a display of the automobiles, the car show involves a thorough inspection of the cars' tires, engines and other features, as well as the machine's general condition.

A rallye, made up of a driver and a navigator following maps and instructions to reach a destination, will begin at 9:30 p.m. Saturday.

Beginning at 2 p.m. Sunday, a gymkhana will be held. The gymkhana is the recording of the cars' best times after running an obstacle course set up for this particular event. Persons wishing to enter the rallye or the gymkhana may register at the parking lot one hour prior to each event.

The club was formed in 1969 and has a membership of 50 men and women. Meetings are held the second Friday of each month at 8 p.m. in the Commercial Bank and Trust Co.

Planned activities are held every month for couples and individuals, including a trip to Cloudcroft, N.M. planned for September.

Officers of the club are Fred Kluthe of Odessa, president; George Head of Midland, vice-president; Julie Crain of Odessa, secretary; Charles Webb of Ft. Stockton, treasurer; and Jini Pyle of Midland, activities director.

For more information concerning the club and week-end of events, the next meeting will be held Friday at 8 p.m. in the Community Room of the Commercial Bank and Trust Building.

Woman Travels For First Time

HONOLULU (AP) — Hannah Hamamoto left Hawaii for the first time her 65 years recently for a visit to the mainland.

She was the winner of a contest sponsored by a local newspaper which offered a mainland trip to an Island-born resident who had never been out of the state.

Mrs. Hamamoto had never left except on a brief trip to Hawaii many years ago, because she was busy raising three children, caring for her husband who has been blind for the past 10 years, and working at two jobs to pay for all this.

Mrs. Hamamoto was accompanied by her sister, Lily Nishi, who nominated her for the mainland trip contest.

$100 Bill Still Means Big Money To Some

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) — A sum of $100 still means big money to some 1st graders.

When Mrs. Berta Fields, a teacher at College Heights School, asked her pupils what they would do if they had $100, they replied:

Jerry: I would buy me a house. I would buy me a boat.

Dickie: I would buy a new car. I would buy a new TV with a remote control.

Patricia Ann: I would take a trip around the world and I would buy a bike.

Randall: I would buy me a brand new car to go to the store so I can buy my mother something for her birthday.

Geoffrey: I would spend it on a ring for my Mama and a car for my Daddy and a pup for me.

Great For Plants

When taking a shower, put your ferns in the bathroom, shut the windows and doors. The resulting humidity is great for the plants.

Mrs. Jerry Don Snider

Sarah Hale, Don Snider Marry In Midland Church

In a double ring ceremony at 3 p.m. Saturday in the First United Methodist Church, Sarah Belle Hale and Jerry Don Snider were married. Rev. J. B. Stewart officiated.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Hale, 1701 Culver St., and Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Snider, 505 E. Stokes St.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length gown of angelskin peau and Venise lace. The gown featured an Empire waistline and bodice accented with lace motifs and bugle pearls. The lace-edged yoke was enhanced with crystal pleated ruffles. The high neckline was accented with a lace flowerette dotted with pearls. Her demi-bell silhouette and chapel-length train were bordered by a band of lace and edged with crystal pleated ruffles. A divided panel attached to the waistline and sides gave the gown a pinafore effect. The lace and seed pearl bandeau held a three tiered lace fingertip veil. She carried a colonial cascade of yellow Sweetheart roses, white carnations and stephanotis accented with Hahn's ivy. The bouquet was made around a detachable corsage.

Leasa Jo Hale, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Margaret Ann Snider, sister of the bridegroom, and Katie Luchini.

Serving as best man for the ceremony was J. A. Snider, brother of the bridegroom. The groomsmen were Les Snider, brother of the bridegroom, and Jim Trolinder, brother-in-law of the bride. Wesley Braggs, Tommy Green and Terry Smith were the ushers. The organist was George DeHart and the soloist was Charles Dixon.

The bride and bridegroom are both spring graduates of Midland High School. She was the 1974-75 secretary of the DECA club, while he was president for the same period. She is employed by Tall City Pharmacy and he with "M" System Discount Food Stores.

Following a trip to Big Bend National Park, the couple will be at home at Ranchland Acres.

Husband, Wife Karate Experts

READING, Pa. (AP) — Mr. and Mrs. C. Bruce Heilman are a husband-and-wife team of karate experts.

Heilman, an environmental planner, earned his black belt in 1973, and Mrs. Heilman, 27, earned her black belt recently.

"We plan to continue to practice and to use karate as an enjoyment in order that it will make us better as a person," Heilman said. "We hope to keep at karate the rest of our lives."

Practice Fire Safety Drills; Don't Go 'Up In Smoke'

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Fire is more than the subject of a popular catastrophe movie. Last year for more than 11,000 Americans, fire was a killer and for another 300,000 it was an instrument of pain and personal injury.

Very upsetting, according to the report by the National Commission on Fire Safety and Control, is "the difference with which Americans confront the subject." The attitude that a fire can't happen to you is not only foolhardy; it can be a fatal mistake.

Fire strikes hardest at children and the elderly. Last year, fire was the third largest accidental killer of American children. Many injuries and deaths in fire accidents occur because the victims just didn't know what to do.

Most fires start in living rooms, 37 per cent, followed by kitchens, 22 per cent, basements, 14 per cent, then bedrooms, 13 per cent, according to Rick Goings, president of Dynamics, Inc., which makes fire alarm systems.

If a fire starts:

Everyone should have a plan for a quick escape, preferably two escape routes in case one is closed.

Practice makes perfect. Hold periodic drills to make sure everyone knows what to do and where to go in a variety of circumstances. Remember that most fire deaths occur at night, perhaps while you are sleeping, so don't overlook this possibility during your drill.

Once you have established escape routes, plan a central meeting place, so that everyone can be accounted for.

If anyone's clothing ignites, he should roll over and over on the ground. Running will only fan the flames.

If you sense fire, evacuate the family speedily, closing all doors behind you as you leave. Call the fire department immediately.

Sleep with doors closed. If you suspect fire, feel the door with your palm. If it's hot, don't open it.

Use the window for escape.

In smoke, keep low. Air heated by fire rises. The safest area is near the floor. Cover your mouth and nose with a damp cloth if possible.

Don't waste time getting dressed or gathering valuables. Vanity and greed have no place in a raging fire.

In case of fire, don't panic. If you practice what to do and have an early enough warning, you will be best prepared to carry out the safety measures which will give you the best chance for survival.

Luncheon Fetes Terry Hampton

A bridal luncheon honoring Terry Hampton, bride-elect of John Chisholm of Denver, Colo., was held at noon Thursday in the Garden Room of the Midland Country Club.

Hostesses for the event were Mrs. Robert A. Dean, Mrs. C. Hinchey Murphey and Mrs. Thomas F. Thagard. A hostess gift was given to the bride-elect.

Corsages of green and yellow were presented to the special guests. They were Mrs. W. L. Hampton of Lubbock, grandmother of the bride-elect, and Mrs. James Hampton of Odessa, aunt of the bride-elect.

Decorations of green and yellow, the bride-elect's chosen colors, were used.

The couple plans to be married at 8 p.m. Aug. 16 in the First Presbyterian Church of Midland.

Midlander Attends Convention

Mrs. Roy C. Dahl, 3107 Lockheed St., as a member of the Midland Lutheran Church, will be a delegate representing the Southern District of the American Lutheran Church Women at the triennial national convention Monday through Thursday, in San Francisco, Calif. Mrs. Dahl is president of the group.

Jeanne Katherine Lively Bride Of Dr. R. E. Henderson

Jeanne Katherine Lively, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Bill A. Lively, and Dr. Robert Elmore Henderson, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Henderson of El Paso, were married at 7 p.m. Saturday in the chapel of the First Baptist Church, with the Rev. Lucian Rudd officiating for the double ring ceremony.

Mrs. Robert Elmore Henderson

The couple will reside in El Paso following a trip to Florida and a Caribbean cruise. The bride is a graduate of Texas Tech University with a bachelor of fine arts degree in interior design. She is a member of the Society of Interior Designers. The bridegroom also is a graduate of Texas Tech with a B.A. degree in microbiology and of Baylor Dental School at Dallas. He is a member of A.E.D. Pre-Med, Pre-Dent, Tri Beta Honorary Biology, Sigma Nu, social fraternity, and Psi Omega, dental fraternity.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length satin A-line Empire gown with a cathedral train. The dress was accented with pearl encrusted lace appliques and her full-length veil was caught by a bandeau. The bride carried a colonial cascade bouquet of white Margarite daisies, white stephanotis and white Butterfly orchids.

Whitney Adams served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Patti Ford and Jan Lively, sister of the bride. Mrs. Sid Cowan of El Paso, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmatron.

Best man was the father of the bridegroom. Ushers were Bucky Lively and Mark Lively, both brothers of the bride, and Fred Madden of Fullerton, Calif. Ron Ferguson of Lubbock, John Lee and Peter Grabicki of Dallas were groomsmen. Bill Smiley was the pianist.

Use Liquid Starch

Secure applique patches in place with liquid laundry starch. Apply starch with a brush, place on the fabric, and press with a medium warm iron. The excess starch is removed by the first washing.

Pressing Edges

You will have no trouble pressing straight edges on a curtain if you pencil a straight line across your ironing board and fit the curtain edge to the line as you press.

Wife Wants A Gene Kelly, Husband Becomes Al Jolson

By JANE GLENN HAAS
Copley News Service

I poked my hus in bed last night with a cold big toe and asked him how come he never looked deeply into my eyes anymore and sang, "You Were Meant for Me."

"I never looked deeply into your eyes and even sang for my supper," hus muttered, putting down his book.

"That's what's wrong," I explained. "I was thinking today of Gene Kelly. I saw 'American in Paris' eight times."

"I took you to Paris," hus replied.

"It was very nice," I acknowledged. "But you never tried to force me down the Seine to the tune of an old Gershwin melody."

"Why is it women are never happy?" hus hammered into his pillow.

"All I ever wanted," I answered with a wifely whine, "was a man who would woo me with flowers and song, tapping his toes and 'Singing in the Rain.'"

"What you got was a man who has enough sense to come in out of the rain," hus remarked.

"That's so unromantic," I said. "You never tie the bow of my apron at breakfast as you soft-shoe around the kitchen to 'My Blue Heaven.'"

"You don't wear an apron," hus said with growing ferocity. "Besides, I thought we agreed in the morning it's better not to look in your direction. A song would shatter your curlers."

"Husband," I shot back, "there is no romance in your soul. Never once have you gotten off the commuter train, swept me into your arms and waltzed me around the parking lot humming 'Kiss Me Once and Kiss Me Twice.'"

"It's been a long, long time since you even bothered to meet me at the train," hus continued.

Ignoring that thrust, I carried on:

"All I ever wanted was a man who knew the words to 'So Wonderful.' Instead I got a man who worries about whether or not my checkbook is balanced."

"Aha!" hus sat up. "You're overdrawn!"

"You see," I returned to a whine, "you always manage to change the subject."

"Don't start telling me 'Life is Just a Bowl of Cherries,'" hus hissed. "Let's get down to the nitty-gritty — how much?"

"Who cares what banks fail in Yonkers?" I hummed.

"The bankers and the husbands," hus shouted, off-key. "Don't serenade me with romantic palaver when you know very well our ship is sinking."

"You see," I whimpered, "you're being unrealistic. There's nothing about this situation that even resembles the Navy. Now just calm down and we'll have a little 'Tea for Two.'"

Logic like that always floors hus. It reduces him to pounding his pillow.

"All right," I said soothingly. "I'll forgive you for not being Gene Kelly. You can take me out to dinner."

Hus looked up and moaned: "I should take you out to dinner?"

"Naturally." I rasped at my nails with an emery board.

"I just remembered a song!" hus howled in glee. "It's 'Toot, Toot, Tootsie, Goodbye!'"

"You can't leave me now," I wailed. "We're overdrawn!"

Isn't that just like a man? You ask for Gene Kelly and you get Al Jolson.

Female Counselor Helps To Clarify Divorce Issues

By LUCRETIA STEIGER
Copley News Service

Dr. Shelia Kessler of Atlanta, Ga., while a psychologist at the University of Nevada, began delving into the problems of divorce because she had noticed that much of her marriage counseling really was divorce counseling.

To help people through divorces, she set up counseling groups.

Along the way, the woman who won her doctorate in counseling psychology from the University of Washington wrote, "The American Way of Divorce: Prescriptions for Change."

"Marriage counseling is effective when couples want to work out their differences and enhance their marriage," Dr. Kessler, now 30, said. "In such counseling, ways to process problems are discussed along with arguing constructively.

"Before divorce, there is often a nebulous area where the partner has some doubt about his or her commitment to the marriage, although still retaining some strength or caring.

Wedding Plans Told For Midland Girl

Mr. and Mrs. Jarry Callicoatte, 3206 W. Shandon St., announce the engagement of their daughter, Brenda Jill, to Tommy Lynn Willis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Willis of Ovala.

The couple plans to marry Aug. 9 in the Trinity Presbyterian Church of Midland.

The bride-elect is a Lee High School graduate and has attended Midland College. She is employed with David L. Hooper, attorney-at-law, in Abilene. The bridegroom-elect graduated from Jim Ned High School in Tuscola. He attended Tarleton State University and Abilene Christian College. He is employed by Roy Willis Electric Co. in Abilene.

Bridegroom's Father Weds Son To Doris Ruth Howard

BROWNWOOD—Rev. Walter B. Haynie of Highlands, father of the bridegroom, performed the ceremony of marriage at 6 p.m. Saturday in the First Baptist Church of Brownwood for Doris Ruth Howard and David Michael Haynie, both of Brownwood.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Burnell Howard of Stanton and Rev. and Mrs. Walter B. Haynie of Highlands.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of crystalline and Chantilly lace fashioned with a round yoke and stand-up collar of Chantilly lace. The fitted bodice was overlaid with lace and the long sleeves formed points over the hands. The long, full skirt featured an inset of tiered lace in front and her mantilla of Chantilly lace extended into a chapel train. The bride carried a cascade of white daisies.

Mrs. David Michael Haynie

Lois Howard of Stanton, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Chris Shults of Colorado Springs, Colo. and Deborah Haynie of Houston, sister of the bridegroom. The candlelighters were Leo West, cousin of the bridegroom, and Gordon Howard, brother of the bride.

Serving as best man for the ceremony was Bob Mundlin of Dallas. The groomsmen were Cliff Thiele of Highlands and Frank Rankin of Austin. Ushers were Mike Watson and Chester Rummel, both of Brownwood. Jimmy Benton was the organist and Steve Collier and Mike Harris were the soloists.

The reception followed in the Fellowship Hall.

Following a trip to Austin, the couple will reside in Brownwood.

The bride is a senior at Howard Payne University, from where the bridegroom graduated. She is a member of Sigma Alpha Sigma and was an Alpha Phi Omega sweetheart. He is a member of the Rejex, Ministerial Alliance and the Youth Led Revival Team. She is employed at the Golden Bull Restaurant. He works for J. C. Penney Co.

Dear Abby

—By Abigail van Buren

Husband Likes Sexy Look

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old wife and mother of two. I am a good-looking girl with a nice figure. My problem is my husband. He wants me to wear sexy clothes to show off what I've got. He buys most of my clothes, which are all midriffs, tight, clingy sweaters, low-cut necks, very mini skirts and tight hip-huggers.

When I say I want to take something back because it is too revealing, he has a fit.

We had a big fight about his wanting me to go bra-less. I just don't like that look, but he says that HE likes it and I should dress to please him.

I try to tell him that it gives other guys the impression that I am on the make, but he says if I set them straight, they will leave me alone.

I hate to displease him, but it's getting so we fight about this more and more.

Am I wrong? Or is he? And how do I handle it?

WANTS TO BE ME

DEAR WANTS: He's wrong. And you can handle it by telling him that you will dress to please him in the privacy of your home, but you absolutely refuse to show more in public than what YOU consider to be in good taste. And stick to your guns. He is wrong, wrong, wrong!

DEAR ABBY: I am dating a very nice widower. He's taken me to dinner and the movies, but none of my friends or family have met him.

There is going to be a big wedding in my family, and I want him to escort me. His wife died three years ago, and he hasn't dated much, so he is still wearing his wedding band. He is raising three teenagers, which is probably why he hasn't taken his wedding band off yet.

I'd like him to remove his wedding band when he escorts me, but I don't know how to approach him about it. I don't want my friends and family to think that I am dating a married man or that I am secretly married to him.

I considered buying him a large, inexpensive ring to hide the band for that night in case he can't get it off. Any suggestions?

PARENT WITHOUT PARTNER

DEAR PARENT: Dont't ask him to remove his wedding band. And don't ask him to "hide" it. When conversing with family and friends, you can subtly let them know that he is a widower.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY in care of this newspaper. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Patients Have Own Happy Hour In Brooklyn Medical Center

BROOKLYN (AP) — Every day from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. the solarium in the Katz Pavilion of the Kingsbrook Jewish Medical Center is a busy scene of men and women being exercised with and on pulleys, wheels, weights and other rehabilitation equipment by members of Kingsbrook's Department of Rehabilitation Medicine.

But every other Friday at 3 p.m., the equipment is pushed to the walls and two carts are wheeled in . . . one with a record player and pop and Latin records, and the other with bottles of wine contributed by the Manischewitz Wine Co., glasses and trays of snacks, and it's time for the "Every Other Friday Afternoon Cocktail Party."

"This break in the hospital routine is most welcome by the patients," said Pauline Tan, chief occupational therapist. "At first, the patients were somewhat shy in mingling, but after the second party and a little wine, there was a spirit of warmth and cheer." Ambulatory patients began dancing with one another. Wheelchair patients kept time to the music, toe tapping and finger snapping. "The whole atmosphere is psychologically therapeutic," Miss Tan added.

An interesting aspect of the parties is that the patients themselves are responsible for the snacks. Patients in the hospital's Activities of Daily Living Kitchen prepare meatballs, cocktails sandwiches of tuna fish, egg salad, cheese and other delicacies.

Besides being a break in routine, the parties afford the patients an opportunity to forget their personal problems. For many, seeing their fellow patients swing and sway to the music encourages them to undertake activities which they might have thought too difficult.

The idea for the parties was developed by Dr. Asa P. Ruskin, Kingsbrook's director of rehabilitation medicine. "There is no reason," said Dr. Ruskin, "why patients should not enjoy more of the activities that people who are normally active enjoy at home."

The Kingsbrook Jewish Medical Center, which marked its 50th anniversary in May, is known for its rehabilitation activities. Work is currently being completed on the 10-story David Minkin Rehabilitation Institute, the seventh building in the Medical Center's complex.

Humphries, McAdams Wed In Baptist Ceremony

RANKIN—Pamela Jean Humphries and William Bert McAdams II were married here at 3 p.m. Friday in the First Baptist Church with the Rev. Ray Singleton officiating for the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Doyal W. Humphries of Rankin and Mr. and Mrs. Don Carroll of McCamey.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length gown of white silk mist over bridal satin featuring a high neckline with sheer organza yolk and chapel-length train trimmed in Venise lace. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion was held by a peau cloche and trimmed in Venise lace. The bride carried flowers of white camellias and baby's breath.

Mrs. William Bert McAdams II

Liz Smith of Midkiff was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Penny Braden of Midkiff, and Kim Martin and Rene Taylor, both of Rankin. Robin Martin of Rankin was the flower girl. The organist was Mrs. Pauline Cormier.

Serving as best man for the ceremony was Charley McKee of McCamey. Wayne Almond, Jimmy Kennedy and Danny Young, all of McCamey, were the groomsmen. Greg Hyatt of Rankin was the ring bearer.

The reception followed the service in the Fellowship Hall.

Following a trip to Odessa, the couple will be at home at the Rio Pecos Power Station in McCamey.

The bride is a student at Rankin High School. The bridegroom is a graduate of McCamey High School and is employed with West Texas Utilities Co.

Think About Decor

By ADELE FAULKNER
Copley News Service

Often, after initially getting settled in a new apartment, little thought is given to the interior decor.

You might ask yourself how long it has been since you took a good look at your living and dining rooms, visualizing them as if you were seeing them for the first time.

Does the living room have a feeling of beauty and repose? Is it spacious? Is there an orderly arrangement of furniture conducive to a good conversational grouping? Is there a compelling focal point of interest?

If you can answer "yes" to all of these questions, then you need not read any further. However, chances are you purchased your furnishings over a period of time without benefit of a plan. Or, perhaps you moved from a larger home into an apartment.

Should this be the case, there are a number of ways that space arrangement can be improved both visually and functionally. Careful planning, especially in a small room, provides unity and facilitates conversation.

To create a functional grouping, place the large sofa against the long wall and keep other large pieces such as chairs parallel to the walls and in proper relationship to the architecture. Tables should be placed near sofas and chairs.

To keep things in balance, don't place all of the heavy furniture on one side of the room. Architectural features such as a bookcase at one end of the room can balance a fireplace at the other end.

In a small room, wall-to-wall carpeting creates a more spacious effect than scatter rugs. The smaller rugs only tend to chop up the space.

Proper arrangement of accessories also can make a cluttered room seem orderly. Are your pictures hung at random or are they related to the furniture groupings?

If you have a number of small pictures, try putting them together so that they create the illusion of a larger mass. Such groupings enhance the room if they are placed over a fireplace, sofa or long stereo cabinet.

Mrs. Eddy Ross Sawyers

Hedy Hugghins, Sawyers Wedding Vows Exchanged

Wedding vows were solemnized at 7:30 p.m. Saturday with the marriage of Hedy Hugghins and Eddy Ross Sawyers of Quinlan. Officiating for the double ring ceremony was Rev. Billy Wilkinson.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length gown of white imported Chantilly lace and imported silk organza. The gown featured long fitted sleeves of chantilly lace with pink satin beading at the wrists edged with crystal pleated ruffles. The lace motif was repeated in the high neckline which was encircled with pink satin beading. The deep, round yoke, which buttoned in the back with small buttons, was encircled with pink satin beading edged with crystal pleated ruffles. The beading extended around the Empire waist and down the front of the gown extending to the bottom of the skirt. The front and sides of the skirt were of fully gathered lace, the back was silk organza over net, draped in deep folds, each fold being appliqued on the edge with wide Chantilly lace, extending from the crystal, ruffled yoke to form the chapel-length train that was edged with pleated imported organza bordered at the top with deep scalloped appliques of Chantilly lace. The bride's cloche held a three-tiered fingertip veil of imported silk illusion edged with lace flowerette. She wore a ring of her maternal grandmother's and carried a colonial cascade of pink Sweetheart roses, white carnations and stephanotis designed around a detachable corsage.

The maid of honor was Dorothy Hudson of Abilene. Debra Jenkins of San Angelo, Sara Dennis and Marsha Zellmer were the bridesmaids. Amy Beams of Fort Worth, niece of the bridegroom, was the flower girl. Renee Freeland was the soloist, while Mona Ruth Dickson was the organist.

Serving as best man for the ceremony was the father of the bridegroom. Randy Fauts of Odessa, Gary Billingsly of San Angelo, and Clay Allen of Marshall were the groomsmen. Ushers were Ted Hugghins of Abilene, brother of the bride, Roy Berg, Barry Linthicum of San Angelo and Kim Anderson of Pecos. Clint Mashburn was the ring bearer.

The reception followed in the Fellowship Hall of the church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hugghins Jr., 2404 Terrace St., and Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Sawyers of Quinlan.

The bride attended Angelo State University as did the bridegroom. She also attended Midland College and plans to attend Eastfield College in Dallas. The bride was employed with J. C. Penney Co. in Midland. The bridegroom is a rancher and a land developer.

Following a trip to Ruidoso, N.M., the couple will reside in the Bay Island Apartments, Garland.

Among special guests attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hughes of Crane and Mrs. D. S. Eubanks of Kilgore, grandparents of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Countess and Mrs. Delbert Sawyers, all of Idalou, grandparents of the bridegroom.

Japanese Women Prefer European Ethnic Fashions

By KATHRYN TOLBERT

TOKYO (AP) — Fashion-conscious Tokyo mirrors the clothing trends of the United States and Europe with amazing speed and accuracy, but there are some exceptions.

The Chinese look said to be favored in New York and Paris will probably never catch on in Japan.

"Fashion must be something more than life. It must be exotic. Japan is too close to China, so it would be difficult to make the China look fashionable," said Hajime Sakisaka of the fashion research center of one of Japan's major textile manufacturers.

Instead, it is the ethnic look from Switzerland and Germany that Japanese women like.

Fashion is big business in Japan and the European influence is conspicuous. Every weekend in Harajuku, one of the more fashionable areas of Tokyo, soft rock music flows from the open doors of crowded boutiques and thousands of young women in long skirts or chic overalls and wedged sandals stroll down the wide tree-shaded sidewalks.

Small shops that sell only Japanese-made clothing have French names, and although Japanese designers are becoming increasingly well known internationally, Christian Dior, Yves St. Laurent and Pierre Cardin are more popular.

Japanese designer Hanae Mori's butterfly-splashed clothes that made hers a familiar name in New York are said to be less popular here because the prints are identifiably Japanese.

And the Japanese preference for Paris fashion made it necessary for one Japanese designer, Jun Ashida, to make plans to have his clothes manufactured in Paris and then brought back to Japan with "Made in Paris" on the label.

Western clothing does not have a long history in Japan. Only since World War II — the last 30 years — has Western fashion become a point of interest and study.

It has been undertaken with characteristic thoroughness. Blue jeans are the uniform for the young, the classic shirtwaist dresses are a perennial and seasonal fashion changes follow close on the heels of Paris.

The full tent-like clothing of winter's "big look" has given way to what one of Tokyo's most fashionable department stores calls the "semi-ample" or "controlled look," with below the knee skirts and culottes of flat-woven cotton in earthy colors. They cost between $15 and $30 (U.S.).

There are no Japanese fashion magazines, but foreign fashion magazines are a regular for beauty salons and bookshop browsers. Japan's weekly and monthly women's magazines usually devote a few pages to photographs of fashionable clothing.

It has only been in the last four years that Japanese women have been able to afford to dress with individuality and in a variety of styles, according to one fashion research center. It reports they still are behind the United States.

By 1976 they predict the Japanese average income will reach the 1971 U.S. level and make it possible for Japanese women to coordinate their wardrobes, buy better quality goods and have the leisure time that encourages sewing one's own clothes — a practice not widespread here.

The French influence is by far the strongest in the Japanese fashion world, but a Tokyo department store opened a Calvin Klein shop in February and it has been averaging $50,000 (U.S.) a month in sales.

Mrs. Leonard Lee Trout

Baptist Ceremony Unites Karen Banks, Lee Trout

The chapel of the First Baptist Church was the setting at 3 p.m. Saturday for the marriage of Karen D'Ann Banks and Leonard Lee Trout. Officiating for the double ring ceremony was the Rev. Lucian Rudd Jr.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. Banks, 3234 W. Shandon St., and Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Trout of Houston.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a candlelight, silk organza gown featuring a fitted basque and midriff with reembroidered Nottingham lace decorating the V-shaped front and wedding ring neckline. Lace appliques enhanced the bodice and the tops of the full Bishop sleeves which ended at the wrist in a lace-trimmed cuff. The A-line silhouette of the skirt flowed into a chapel-length train with twin bands of lace encircling the skirt. Her cathedral-length mantilla of silk illusion and matching lace cascaded into two layers from a lace Camelot cap. The bride carried a bouquet of Woburn Abbey roses, baby's breath and stephanotis.

Mrs. Jeff Lawless of El Paso was the matron of honor. The bridesmaid was Phyllis Harbin of El Paso. Mrs. Tony Ponian of Abilene was the bridesmatron. Sandy Trout of Houston, niece of the bridegroom, was the flower girl.

Waymon McMackin of Dallas served as the best man. The groomsmen were Gary Feist and Lynn Adams of Dallas. Ushers were Roddy Banks, brother of the bride, and Ed Stephens.

The organist for the ceremony was Mrs. Robert D. Janssen. Betsy Brown was the soloist.

The reception followed in the church parlor.

The bride is a graduate of Hardin-Simmons University. She was a member of the Delta Social Club, Beta Beta Beta and TSTA. She is employed by Dawson Geophysical Co. The bridegroom is a University of Texas-Arlington graduate and was a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity. He is secretary of the Permian Basin Chapter of the American Society of Safety Engineers, and is employed with the Employers Insurance of Texas as an engineer.

Following a trip to Corpus Christi, the couple will reside at 500 N. Colorado St., Apt. F-2, in Midland.

20th Century Woman's Identity Search Compared To 6th Century Soul Search

By JOAN BRUNSKILL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "My publishers were rather appalled when I said my book was about nuns in 6th-century Gaul," said Julia O'Faolain, the Irish writer, talking about her new novel, "Women in the Wall."

Prospective readers need not be daunted. Miss O'Faolain soon won the publishers over to her strong conviction that she's hit on something that would interest a great many people today — not only women — as much as it interested her.

Miss O'Faolain has given much time and study to the role of women. "But I'm not preaching in this novel," she says. "I get interested in an idea and then I write a story about it."

Miss O'Faolain is married to Lauro Martines, a University of California at Los Angeles historian, and worked with him on an earlier book, "Not in God's Image," a history of women in Western civilization from the Greeks to the Victorians. Their research involved "looking for women's voices" in documents through the ages, avoiding literature because that often gives a fanciful rather than a realistic picture of a period.

Before the 14th century, because of the predominance of literacy among clerics, the voice of woman most frequently left in historical records is that of the nun. In the course of her research Miss O'Faolain's attention was caught by a period she'd never had occasion to study in detail before, the 6th century, and in particular by two illuminating accounts of the life and times of Radegunda, foundress of a convent in Gaul. Radegunda became the protagonist of "Women in the Wall," the work of fiction based on these historical facts.

Radegunda's times were the cruel and chaotic Dark Ages, when human life and individual dignity seemed of little account, least of all where women were concerned. Miss O'Faolain began to see correspondences between those times and our own.

"In the late 1960s there was this same sense of people feeling a lack of control over their own destinies. There'd been the civil rights movement, and on the tide of civil rights rode the women's liberation movement and minority groups of various kinds, those who felt the larger society was alien."

In the same way that people have dropped out in recent years, founding communes, for example, so women in the 6th century dropped out, in the same search for their own destiny. Their counterculture then was the church, the only sanctuary available for them. They thought of what they were doing as saving their souls, the equivalent of today's finding one's identity, the author points out.

"At that time every card was stacked against women," said Miss O'Faolain. "Society was in a transitional period following the dissolution of the Roman Empire. Social patterns were being challenged. It was like the late '60s again in its extremism; everthing was black or white. The power of the pendulum swing, rushing from one thing to another, gave this quality of tension."

The title of the earlier book, "Not in God's Image," is derived from Paul's reference in I Corinthians, Chapter 11, to man as "the image and glory of God: but the woman is the glory of man." One frustration of women in the 6th century was that they had to go through men to God, that is, they had no possibility of finding their own identity alone, unless they gave themselves directly to Christ, as nuns, Miss O'Faolain explains. So the only women who had a personal spiritual identity were nuns and they used sexual imagery to describe the relationship with Christ which replaced human relationships. He was their "Mystic Bridegroom."

"It's interesting that visions were often curiously sexual. These women retreating from an alien society to an inner reality couldn't make it up from scratch and so they used secular imagery."

Miss O'Faolain divides her time between Los Angeles where her husband teaches and London where they have a house and a son at school. Her father is Sean O'Faolain, the well-known Irish writer, and Miss O'Faolain says that at first she reacted against the thought of becoming a writer herself. But eventually she turned to writing, and is now working on another novel. She and her father see each other's writings but keep a detached attitude. "We are very polite about each other's work."

Mrs. Carley Lynn Watkins

Garrett, Watkins Are Wed In Presbyterian Ceremony

The First Presbyterian Church provided the setting at 4:30 p.m. Saturday for the marriage of Anna Sissy Garrett of Conroe, formerly of Midland, and Carley Lynn Watkins of Englewood, Colo. Officiating for the double ring ceremony was the Rev. Ray Riddle.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. William Robert Garrett of Conroe, formerly of Midland, and Mr. and Mrs. Carley Watkins of Englewood, Colo.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white Victorian gown featuring a high neckline and full Bishop sleeves trimmed with Venise lace. A satin ribbon banded the Empire waist and trailed down the front. A deep flounce edged the skirt and fell to chapel-length. The fingertip veil of silk illusion, trimmed with lace, cascaded down the sides and framed her face. She carried a semi-cascade of Spanish Sun roses, white daisies and stephanotis.

Mrs. Roger Lindsey was the matron of honor. Missy Leonard, Connie Watkins of Englewood, sister of the bridegroom, and Valerie Anderson of Austin, were the bridesmaids. Mrs. Bertha Johnson was the organist.

Serving as best man for the ceremony was Greg Watkins of Englewood, brother of the bridegroom. Scott Emerson, Scott Williamson of Houston and Bryan Buffone of El Paso were the groomsmen. Ushers were Kennon Garrett of Conroe, brother of the bride, Beck Garrett of Conroe and Jim Witt of San Marcos.

The reception followed the ceremony at the Midland Country Club.

The bride and bridegroom are both graduates of Lee High School. She also graduated from Southwest Texas State University and was a Little Sister of Tau Kappa Epsilon, social fraternity. The bridegroom attended SWTSU, was a member of Tau Kappa Epsilon and will attend Texas A&M University in the fall.

Following a trip to New Orleans, the couple will reside in Bryan.

Review Club To Meet

Mrs. Herman Smith of Big Spring will review the book, "Miracle in Philadelphia" by Catherine Drinker Bowen for the En Amie Review Club when it meets at 12 noon Wednesday at the Rodeway Inn.

Miss Everett, Hines Marry In Pasadena Ceremony

PASADENA — Deborah Ann Everett and Dwight Dee Hines, both of Seabrook, were married here at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with Douglas Church of Stanton officiating for the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Don Everett of Seabrook, and Denton Hines, 5109 Andrews Hwy., Midland, and Mrs. Euzella Hines, 4726 Bowie St., Midland.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length gown featuring long, Bishop sleeves trimmed in organza Venise lace. She carried a bouquet of camellias, yellow roses and baby's breath.

Katie Everett of Seabrook, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Sheila Hines, sister of the bridegroom, Marilyn Reed of Ft. Smith, Ark. and Jeanie Simsarian of Buffalo, N.Y. Elaine Dishoneh was the organist.

Serving as best man for the ceremony was John R. Willingham, cousin of the bridegroom. Shannon Everett of Seabrook, brother of the bride, Jeff Guard and Terry Dennis, both of Kansas City, Mo., were the groomsmen. The ushers were Randy Anderson of Seabrook and Sal Vega of Houston. Tom Whitney was the soloist.

The reception followed in the church.

Following a trip to Fort Davis and the Big Bend area, the couple will reside in Seabrook.

The bride attended Graceland College in Lamoni, Iowa and holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Houston. She is employed as a nuclear medical technician at St. Joseph's Hospital in Houston. The bridegroom graduated from Graceland College and is doing master's work at the University of Houston. He is employed by Technology Inc. in Apollo.

New Bride Feted At Linen Shower

Mrs. Don Allred Thursday was hostess to a linen shower honoring Mrs. Carley Lynn Watkins, nee Anna Sissy Garrett of Conroe, formerly of Midland, in her home, 1010 Lanham St. Co-hostess was Mrs. Norman Raman.

Daisies were used in decorations throughout the home. The front doorpiece was made up of aprons, daisies and hot pads.

Special guest was Mrs. William R. Garrett of Conroe, mother of the honoree, also a former Midlander.

Mrs. Watkins became the bride of Carley Lynn Watkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carley Watkins of Englewood, Colo., in a Saturday ceremony in the First Presbyterian Church.

Good Condition

To keep stainless steel sink and counters in good condition, avoid cutting on it with sharp knives. Wipe up spills at once, then clean with a damp cloth. Dry immediately with a soft cloth to prevent spotting. This keeps your counters shining with little effort.

Organizational Meeting Slated

The Santa Rita Auxiliary of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame will hold at 10 a.m. Wednesday an organizational meeting at the Petroleum Museum, Interstate 20, west of the Rodeway Inn.

All interested persons are invited to attend the meeting.

Women Can Make Choices; Some Choose Abortion

By JANE GLENN HAAS
Copley News Service

She is a young woman who knows what she wants.

At almost 30, her life-style and income are better than most. She has two children, a successful husband and what she feels is a mature and sophisticated approach to living.

What she doesn't want is another child.

She has just had her third pregnancy "vacuumed out" at an abortion clinic.

She talks candidly about her experience and her decision:

"The whole thing took about five minutes.

"The doctor and I chatted through the whole thing.

"I was so relieved. It was such a gorgeous day and I had finally made my big decision.

"We had been in agony for three weeks. My husband said, of course, he would love the baby if I decided to have it.

"One week we had decided to keep the baby—I really don't even like to call it a baby—anyway, we decided to have it and we were excited about it."

(Then they went to a large local shopping center and thoughts of the human being developing in her womb returned...)

"I was looking at pregnant women and women with babies and I said, 'I just can't do it.' That is an image of myself that I put aside..."

(Her first child was born a year after they were married. It was a wanted child...)

"I couldn't wait to get off the pill and get pregnant. I had one period before I got pregnant and I felt like a failure.

"I couldn't wait to get into maternity clothes. When our baby was born, I loved it so. I nursed and enjoyed it.

"Our second was planned and I nursed longer because I knew it would be our last baby."

(In the hospital after birth the second child developed a minor complication...)

"We felt we had had a close call. It upset us both very much. My husband said, 'I'm never going through this again.'

"Of course, what woman who has just had a baby wants to go through that again?"

(Sometimes, when one of her friends would get pregnant, the attractive young mother would think of having another baby...)

"I'd say, 'Maybe . . . maybe' . . . but not for long.'

(She stopped taking birth control pills when she was placed on a hormone to regulate her periods...)

"It balanced me out just enough to make me fertile, I guess. We didn't take precautions; we should have but we didn't."

(Two weeks after she had missed a period she knew she was pregnant...)

"Just when I was getting out of the years of drudgery of baby care...

"Just when I was getting to the point of freedom..."

(At social gatherings, the bright young couple had always advocated abortion. Now their ideals were being tested...)

"We said people would laugh at us saying, 'You see, you knew you'd never really do it.'

"And then the whole thing started to be very wearing emotionally. I started to feel physically tired and nauseous.

"We went back and forth every night. We talked about it every night."

(It is a religious family, regularly attending church. But there were no religious convictions prohibiting them from considering abortion...)

"The doctor who performed the abortion delivered our two children.

"When I found out he had opened an abortion clinic my husband had said, 'Isn't that convenient?'

"Now I was wavering. But my husband was definite.

"We made one appointment and broke it. I had decided to keep the baby and I went to a local doctor.

"I told him I wasn't happy about the pregnancy but he said, 'You'll get over that and be thrilled when the baby is born.'

"I told him my husband was going to have a vasectomy and he tried to talk me out of it. His reasoning was absolutely ridiculous. "He said if we ever got divorced my husband would probably remarry and he would want to have children with his new wife. But he said if I remarried I would have already had three children, so I wouldn't want to have any more.

"So he said I should have a tubal ligation (a female sterilization procedure that separates Fallopian tubes).

"I call it the local version of birth control. Have one more child than you really want and then let the woman have a tubal ligation. The men don't do anything."

She finally decided on abortion and went to the nearby clinic. The cost was $175. The clinic performs abortions up to 12 weeks after the last period. This woman had gone seven weeks after her period. Legally, abortions are allowed up to 24 weeks after the last period. Live births after 27 to 28 weeks are sometimes saved.

She readily admits she has no "convenient excuse" for the abortion—she is not a career woman nor could she claim any financial or health problems.

She had no reason to suspect the child would be anything less than perfect.

"But your life has a certain quality to it and you don't want to rock the boat.

"We are really very quiet people. We don't live a wild kind of life.

"We enjoy the children we have so much.

"Women have to come to terms with the fact that there is a choice. We don't have to be victims of our biology.

"If women could just realize that they do have choices a whole world will open to them."

Sun Exposure Could Cause Early Aging, Skin Cancer

By MARION WELLS
Copley News Service

When was the last time you went out after a tan, only to have your skin get "all burned up about it?"

Though your skin's "surface" anger peeled off after awhile, the "not-so-attractive" consequences of habitual overexposure may not be so easily shed.

Irwin I. Lubowe, M.D., clinical professor of dermatology at the New York Medical College, says ". . . It is now quite firmly established that excessive sun exposure ...is the leading cause of premature and irreversible skin aging, solar keratoses (precancerous), and probably of skin cancer..."

Where your skin is concerned, the sun is no fountain of youth. Although a certain amount of sun is good for you, and evidence indicates we all need some ultraviolet, tanning your hide too much in youth can lead to a leathery, weather-beaten look in later life. Even some "sun worshipers" in their early 20s who spent a lot of time in the sun have begun to show the effects.

Precancerous lesions from years of excessive sunning may also develop in young persons, according to the authoritative "Merck Manual." These lesions "...are usually hard and gray to dark in color." If you notice any suspicious spot on your skin, report it promptly to your physician or dermatologist.

Findings indicate that cumulative overexposure to strong sunlight can greatly increase your chances of developing skin cancer.

The lighter your complexion, the greater the risk tends to be. Medical authorities particularly urge you to protect your lips from being exposed to strong, direct sunlight for extended periods. If you can't keep your lips out of such sunlight, it is recommended that you coat both your upper and your lower lip with a heavy base cream or ointment of a type which will effectively keep out most of the sun's rays.

How much sun is too much? The thickness of your skin and the amount of melanin pigment it produces play a part in determining the answer. Experts warn, however, that it's a mistake to assume people with dark complexions or even black skin can take the sun in unlimited amounts.

For safe and sensible sunning, start your sunbathing season by going out in the early morning or late afternoon when the sun is not as strong. Lie out for just a few minutes the first day and increase your exposure very gradually. Reduce your time in the sun if your skin gets too hot. Be sure to shift positions frequently.

It doesn't have to be a sunny day for you to get a sunburn. "Many sunbathers are badly burned on lightly overcast days when they mistakenly believe they are shaded from the sun," one authority says.

A Dancer Must Submit To Fates

NEW YORK (AP) — Sometimes a girl, having taken dance lessons for a time, wonders whether she should become a dancer.

Modern dance choreographer Martha Graham, who knew from girlhood that she wanted to be a dancer, says, "There are three Fates. They are responsible for life. The first and primary one is Necessity. The spindle of life rests on the knee of Necessity. The second one weaves that. The third one cuts the thread.

"Unless you have the Necessity to dance, you don't do it. If the demand in you isn't so great it splits you wide open if you don't do it, then I don't think you should touch it.

"Most people go so far and won't go farther. They know they're in danger of being destroyed. You have to admit to the Fates if you go on — submit your whole life."

Former Bunny Joins Embassy

MADRID (AP) — Chari Jordan, a former Playboy bunny, is giving new dimension to the U.S. Embassy in Madrid.

More than six feet tall and black, she probably is the most spectacular addition the U.S. diplomatic corps has had in Europe in years.

A junior officer trainee in the U.S. Information Service, she has drawn more than average attention in Madrid, where average resident measures just a little more than five feet in height.

Born in the Virgin Islands, Miss Jordan worked in Playboy Clubs in Baltimore and New York after being graduated with a law degree from George Washington University. She entered U.S. foreign service early this year.

"In a Playboy club, you are a sex object. On a Madrid street, you're not. If a Spanish man wants to give you a compliment, he sincerely wants to be nice. That's not the case on a New York street," she says.

Miss Jordan says she changed careers because she tired of Bunny life and sought something more substantial. She also reports she feels she can make a contribution to the American Information Service abroad.

"Personally, I would like to see the U.S. Information Service less associated with government — on a people to people, not a government basis.

HOROSCOPE

by Carroll Righter

(July 6)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Avoid arguments in a.m., as problems would follow at intervals. Later, unexpected benefits drop into your lap; communications are good and you get correct answers to problems.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Go places where you can get good ideas for future success. Visit with some good friend. Discuss the future with pals.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study monetary position early, but make important decisions after lunch when your judgment is best. A financial wizard advises.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Take health treatments early that make you feel fit, then off to important activities. Accept social invitations of worth.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make plans early for the day that will prove advantageous and further your career. Evening is fine for romance.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have the opportunity to enjoy good pals who can give you support for personal aims, so plan your itinerary early.

VIRGO (Aug. to Sept. 22) Handle outside chores early so you can be with congenials later for fun, or can be with important personages.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make a friend of a different culture. Something good can come of this. Improve thinking for greater happiness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Keep some promise early, then study new ideas. Evening is best for talking a matter over with mate. Don't lose temper.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Find out what partners have on their mind, come to real agreement. Civic work can improve your position.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Handle dreary duties early, then get into those activities later that really appeal to you. Put apparel in good shape.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Reach agreement with mate, then enjoy recreations together. Get into creative work you like. Become more active, interesting.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Home problems are best solved by getting away from them for a little while and studying them objectively. Entertain in p.m.

(July 7)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Communications may be difficult today and you may feel unable to properly express your ideas. If you accept this and don't try to force issues, you can make satisfactory progress.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) It may be difficult to gain your cherished desires today, but if you think more and talk less, you can get ahead.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Rely more on your own judgment today instead of discussing your affairs with others. Show others you are intelligent.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study well what it is you want to accomplish in the future. Be sure not to do anything of a questionable nature today.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Eliminate a feeling of martyrdom and realize that others are not faring as well as you. Express happiness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't depend so much on friends and relatives. Instead use your own initiative at this time and become more prosperous.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Making sure to follow every regulation that applies to you is important today. Strive for more harmony with associates.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have new ideas in mind but you have to study all the details before putting any into operation. Be logical.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Face your problems squarely and solve them intelligently instead of procrastinating any longer. Relax tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have to use tact with associates today in order to get the right results. Steer clear of an opponent.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Attend to duties that await your attention instead of postponing them. Work at a steady pace for best results.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be sure to share the expense when you go out for amusement with congenials. Show more affection for loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) The planets are not favorable for making the changes around your home that you had planned. Think constructively.

Fourth Of July Celebration Called 'Big Success' Here

By STEPHANIE WARD

"Wall-to-wall balloons, excited youngsters and capacity crowds" all describe Midland's Fourth of July celebration termed "a howling success" by those who planned the busy day of activities.

Following the "deluge" rains that showered the city Thursday and the strong breezes that thwarted the efforts of the hot air balloon ascension at 9:30 Friday, there were fears that the day's celebrations might not "get off the ground." However, "the day's festivities were all very successful," Mrs. Charles Linehan, a member of the Bicentennial Commission, said.

More than 500 persons attended the five-hour program in ley-Barron Park, where events ranging from bicycle and tricycle parades to watermelon eating contests took place.

Local attorney David Brooks gave a short patriotic speech following flag raising ceremonies by Boy Scout Troop No. 160. The Scouts provided games for youngsters including the sack race, three-legged race and spoon race.

Local dignitaries were recruited for humorous games and a watermelon eating contest. The featured event was a "fast walking contest toward a finish line made of 25 one dollar bills. Entrees for this race were Joe Dominey, Edward B. Weyman and W. J. Mewhorter. Judges for the race, who finally ran away with the money, were Mayor Ernest Angelo and Jim Winget, school board president.

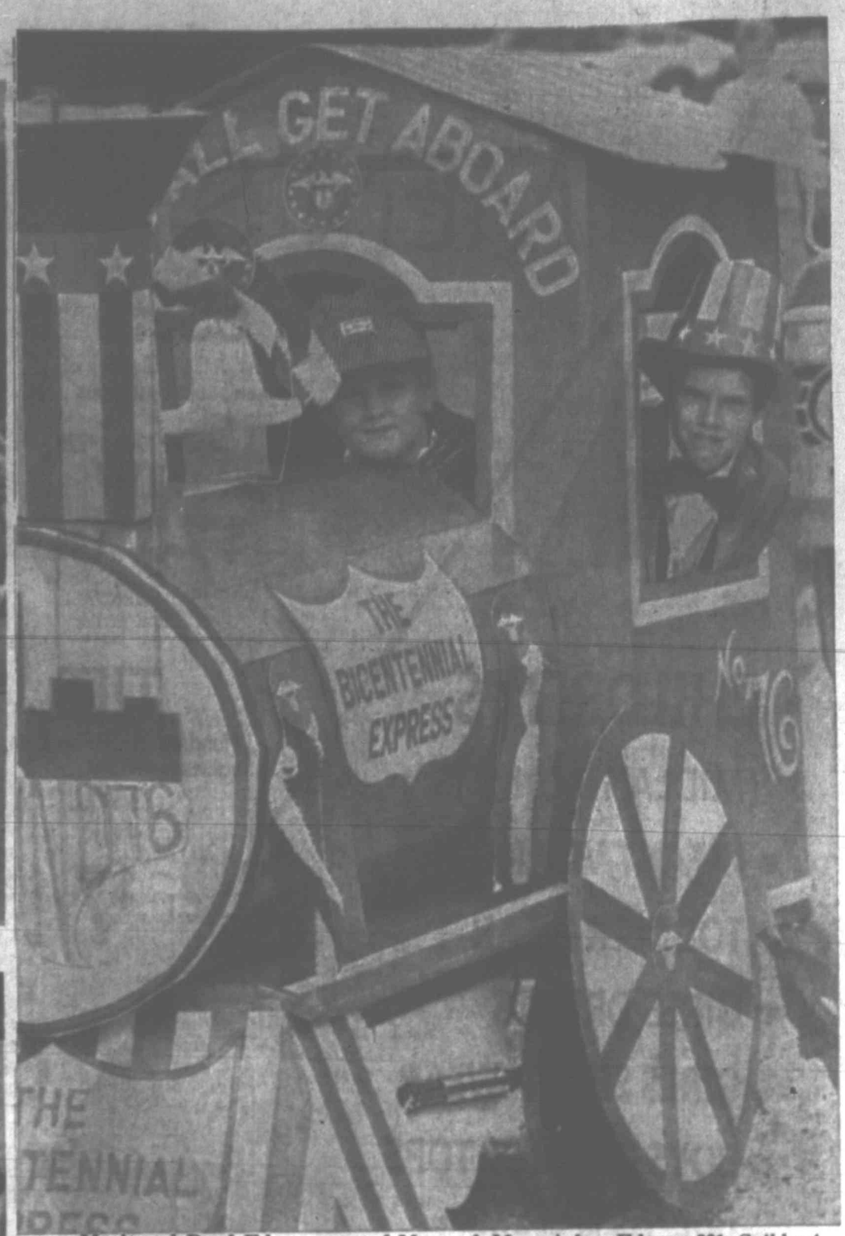
Friday afternoon, Los Manos of the Museum of the Southwest and the Midland Jaycees sponsored a kite-flying contest and awarded prizes in five categories. The kite of the winner's choice was awarded as prizes. Rob Watson took the honors for the smallest kite and Shelby Bond won the largest kite division. The longest kite tail award went to Kira Boyd. The most unique kite was flown by Robert Holton and the most artistic kite was displayed by Rick Butts.

Members of the Midland Kiwanis Club, who presented title of the old-fashioned gazebo to Mayor Angelo at the park and planned with the Independence Day celebration.

Dominey, chairman of the Bicentennial commission, presented the Kiwanis Club with a plaque in honor of its efforts to make the day a success. The plaque called particular attention to the club's work on the gazebo.

An overflow crowd at Cubs stadium watched as fireworks sparkled and exploded while speeches were given and patriotic songs were sung and played.

Kelly and Jamie Dodson, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. James Dodson, 1004 Stanolind, took first place in the pre-school division.



Mark and Brad Edgar, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Arlen Edgar, 901 Cuthbert won the Grades 4-6 division.

Parade Draws 59 Entries

Fifty-nine youngsters pedaled and pulled in a festive display Friday in a bicycle and tricycle parade sponsored and conducted by the Col. Theunis Dey Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution as part of the Independence Day celebration at Wadley-Barron Park.

Ribbons from the DAR were awarded as prizes to the first, second, third place and honorable mention winners with the first place winners' also receiving T-shirts from the Bicentennial Commission.

Parade winners in the Preschool division were Kelly and Jamie Dodson, and Jennifer Nelson of Fort Worth, first place; Tray Holm, second place; and Melissa and Vaughan Ellis, third place. Honorable mentions were received by Catherine and Paul Staley, Amy Lambert, Trish Humes, Ben Fey and Paige McMullan.

Grade 1-3 winners were John Conyers, first place; Catherine and Amy Furgeson, second place and Kira Boyd, third place. Honorable mention went to Kathy Johnston. Winners in grades 4-6 were Mark and Brad Edgar, first place; Allen and Suzanne Johnston, Keith Clay, and Scott and Paul Barthel, second place; and Billy Conyers, third place. Elaine and Jennifer Reese, Rachal Pierson, Drew Richards, Kim Waddell, and Beverly Walker all received honorable mentions.

"This year's parade was the best yet of the 12 years that we (the DAR) have sponsored the event," Mrs. James Dodson, chairman of the parade, said. "The competition was really stiff and there were more participants and spectators than ever before."

Among the 59 entrees was one miscellaneous entry won by a mother dog and her seven puppies "attired" in red, white and blue for the gala occasion. The dogs are owned by Mr. and Mrs. Kingdon R. Hughes, 1601 N. H St.

Russians Arrest Jewish Activist

MOSCOW (AP) — Lev Roytbord, a prominent Jewish activist in the southern port city of Odessa, will be put on trial for allegedly resisting arrest, Jewish sources said today.

They said he was seized Wednesday while trying to catch a plane for Moscow, reportedly hoping to contact a delegation of U.S. senators visiting the Soviet capital.

Stereo Equipment Taken By Burglars

Stereophonic equipment valued at $845 was taken in a house burglary at 1311 E. Pennsylvania St., Michael C. King told Midland police Saturday morning.

Entry to the residence was made through a bathroom window police said.

King reported missing a reel-to-reel tape recorder, turntable, amplifier, and an eight-track AM-FM radio. He said the break-in was some time between 9:30 p.m. and midnight Friday.

—Luella Wiley said several bottles of liquor were taken in a breakin of the Elks Lodge, 1100 W. Cuthbert St.

—Sherman Chew reported the burglary of his automobile while he was at work at Carter's Food Market, 1411 N. Lamesa Rd. Taken from his car were a tape deck, speakers, and tapes valued at $142.32.

Hans Roweck reported the theft of paint and paint rollers, electric sandblaster, vibrator sander and a saw from a storage locker at High Sky Painting & Decorating.

Jack Gibbs of Big D Service Station No. 2, 3400 W. Illinois St., said a man, in his early 30s, used what turned out to be a stolen credit card to get 36 gallons of gasoline from a station pump. Gibbs said the man drove off while he (Gibbs) was phoning the credit card company to verify the card's validity.

—Leslie A. Smith said a tape deck and speakers worth about $100 were taken from his homemade trailer parked in a stall at the Coat of Arms Inn, 3307 W. Front St.

Woman Reunited With Dad, 25-Year Chinese Prisoner

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — "It's like a dream come true," a suburban housewife said when she was reunited with her 73-year-old father, a prisoner in Communist China 25 years.

Nationalist Chinese Army Lt. Gen. Chen Shin-chang, captured by Communist forces in 1949, was released with 293 other prisoners April 14 under a special amnesty program.

He was reunited with his daughter, Mrs. Cheng-Chien Chou of Carmel, at Weir Cook Airport here Friday night.

"I am so excited, it's like hearing a voice from the grave," said Mrs. Chou. "We lost all contact with him and had not heard a word from him since he was captured."

She said she and her mother and brother escaped to Taiwan after the Communist takeover of mainland China.

Mrs. Chou said her father will stay in the United States a short time and then go to Taiwan for a reunion with his wife and son.

Masked Bandit Takes $210 At Restaurant

Masked with a nylon stocking and wielding a snub-nosed revolver, a man robbed the Burger Chef restaurant at 407 N. Big Spring St. of $210 Friday afternoon.

Midland police said the man, in his late teens or early 20s, apparently crawled through a side service window, and from behind the counter announced to clerks and customers alike: "This is a robbery, stay still, stay seated."

Clerk Dorothy Nixon, 22, who was working behind the counter, told police she heard a "loud voice" from behind her make the hold-up announcement.

The man, carrying a white paper sack holding the cash, fled the restaurant and drove off in a car parked behind the business.

Ugliest Beard Prize Taken By Ben Faulkner

BIG SPRING—Cash awards totaling $75 went to three winners in the Big Spring Jaycees "beard growing contest" highlighting Independence Day here.

Winning $25 for growing the "ugliest beard" among 28 contestants, was Ben Faulkner. Mike Nelson won a similar amount for growing the longest whiskers, while the third $25 was awarded Hal Hansen for displaying the neatest beard.

Judging took place in Comanche Trails Park, where the "Let Freedom Ring" reenactment of the original signing of the Declaration of the Independence took place in the evening.

State Rep. Mike Ezzell of Snyder read the declaration. The day ended with a fireworks display atop Scenic Mountain State Park.

Federal Jobs Money Misspent?

By BROOKS JACKSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some federal tax dollars intended to create public service jobs are going to pay staff workers for private groups such as the Red Cross, Salvation Army and church and charitable organizations.

Two high Labor Department officials disagree over whether this use of federal money is proper.

The Labor Department's chief investigator, Frank Yeager, says the practice violated department regulations and the spirit of the law when it was begun several years ago. The law has since been changed but he says it is "an open question" whether the practice is now proper.

Yeager also criticized the Manpower Administration, which administers federal public service funds, for failing to enforce its own regulations. However, manpower chief William H. Kolberg disputed Yeager's interpretation of the law and said the use of public service employes by private groups is in line with department policy.

This indicated the practice may be common nationwide, but no immediate figures on the subject are available.

Yeager said in an internal report that a spot check last year of two cities, San Diego, Calif. and Seattle, Wash., uncovered 97 public service workers who actually were working for private groups in jobs which "did not provide a direct benefit to the general public."

Furthermore, the 97 were officially listed as having such jobs as "community development specialist" or "community service representative," when in fact they were working in such jobs as janitor, pubic relations worker, typist, truck driver, or programmer for private groups.

In San Diego the groups included the Red Cross, Salvation Army, Federation of Women's Organizations, Chicano Federation, United Community Services, Jewish Community Center, Young Mens Christian Association, and others. In Seattle they including a church-run group distributing food to the needy. Four Seattle workers were getting federal salaries to work for the same groups that had employed them earlier.

Yeager's report is based on a review of employment records from 1971, and 1972 and 1973. The review was completed in April of last year, preliminary verions of the report were circulated privately in the Labor Department in December, and the final version was completed this year and cleared for public release June 10, although no public release was made. The Associated Press sought and obtained a copy from Yeager, who did not criticize the agencies themselves, but rather use of federal money to support them.

Kolberg declined The AP's requests for an interview.

In a letter released with Yeager's report, Kolberg said "it is our feeling that the cases cited by the report ... do not constitute violations ... Program agents may provide indirect support to community-service organizations.

Yeager disagreed. "In our opinion, these (Labor Department) guidelines and the intent of the act were violated," he said.

Kolberg also said the department's chief lawyer had said in a written opinion in 1971 that the department would not question the judgment of states or cities that chose to use federal public-service money to hire workers for private, nonprofit groups.

Kolberg quoted the department's solicitor as saying, "if the employing unit of government thinks the work to be performed by its employes in such outstationed position is public service, we would not look behind that decision."

Yet Yeager said this legal opinion should not apply "in cases of clear-cut violations" such as the San Diego and Seattle cases. "On the contrary, the secretary must, by congressional dictate, insure that all expenditures meet legal requiremens established by federal law.

The 97 workers cited by Yeager were among 400,000 hired under the $2.25-billion Emergency Employment Act of 1971, which contained no authorization for private groups to receive federal funds directly. The 97 were hired by the cities and farmed out, or "outstationed," to the private groups.

Under the present law enacted at the end of 1973, private, nonprofit groups may receive federal public-service job money through states and cities to hire public servict workers. But Yeager said in an interview it is still an "open question" whether the kinds of janitorial and public relations job he uncovered would fit the legal definition of public service.

The law defines public service jobs as including work in health care, education, crime prevention, prisons, parks, streets, recreation "and other fields of human betterment and community improvement."

In his report Yeager urged that Kolberg come up with specific guidelines to be used by states and cities wanting to use federal public service employes in private agencies. A spokesman for Kolberg said that recommendation had been rejected. "The question is settled and that's it," the spokesman said.

Children Worked Long Hours

The first Child Labor Law was passed during Woodrow Wilson's administration. One-third of the workers in the textile mills in the south were children under 16 years of age. They often worked 12 hours a day for only a few pennies, before the passage of the law.

Report Urges End To Removing Windbreak Trees

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government report filed with Congress says removal of trees which have formed windbreaks in many areas of the Great Plains poses a national problem and should be stopped.

The report, by the General Accounting Office (GAO), urges that the Agriculture Department take steps to determine the extent of windbreak removals and to encourage programs for their restoration.

Windbreaks, also called shelterbelts, are rows of trees planted so they protect farm buildings, livestock areas and fields. Millions of such trees wene planted in the 1930s as past of a massive conservation program, particularly in the Great Plains where there is a continued threat of wind erosion.

"Unless actions are taken to encourage farmers to renovate and preserve existing windbreaks rather than remove them, an important resource which has taken many years to develop could be lost and adjacent croplands could erode and become less productive," the GAO report said.

Most windbreak removals are being done to make more land available for crops and to enable installation of new irrigation systems, the report said.

"Some conservationists, however, believe windbreaks are no longer needed to prevent wind erosion or that the need has decreased because other conservation practices such as stripcropping, crop rotation, stubble mulching and emergency tillage have been introduced," the report said.

Use of tree-plantings for windbreaks blossomed after 1935 when the federal government established the Prairie States Forestry Project as a way of restoring land damaged by massive wind and dust storms.

By 1942, more than 200 million seedling trees and shrubs were planted on 30,000 farms in six Great Plains states — North Dakota, South Dakota, Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas.

Those windbreaks covered about 238,000 acres. They generally were 8 to 21 rows of trees wide and ranged from a few hundred feet to a mile long. Their combined length was more than 18,500 miles, the GAO said.

In addition to legal steps by the Agriculture Department, the report said an educational program should be conducted to convince farmers that windbreaks should be kept and improved.

"According to some farmers, the windbreaks planted under the Prairie States Forestry Project (of 1935-42) are a nuisance because they occupy too much land and because certain tree species sap so much moisture that crops will not grow next to the windbreak," the GAO said.

"One farmer in Oklahoma said that a mile-long windbreak he removed had added about 16 acres to his production. About half of the 16 acres was covered with trees and the other half was land adjoining the windbreak on which crops would not grow."

Portugal's Chiefs Attempt To Dispel Rumors Of Coup

Special To The Washington Post

LISBON — Portugal's military leaders appeared together on television Friday night to dispel increasing rumors that the country is in danger of a counter revolutionary coup not from the right but from the extreme left.

Emphasizing that he was speaking as head of the armed forces, President Costa Gomes said "an offensive of rumors" had created a climate "propitious for counter revolution."

He denied there were "antagonisms" in the ruling Armed Forces Movement or in its executive group of officers who form the revolutionary council, and he said the military authorities remain "cohesive."

Costa Gomes was flanked by Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves, a leading leftist in the government whose resignation has been expected since he was overruled last week in the case of Radio Renascenca, a station owned by the Roman Catholic Church but commandeered by revolutionaries. The military authorities went against the prime minister's ruling that the station should be handed back to the church.

With the president and prime minister was Gen. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho, another revolutionis, who is head of the security forces and believed to be the most extreme senior officer in the Armed Forces Movement.

Lunt, Fontanne Donating Parcel Of Land To Town

WAUKESHA, Wis. (AP) — Actor Alfred Lunt and his actress wife, Lynn Fontanne, have donated a portion of their estate here to the town of Genesee.

The Lunts have shunned publicity after distinguished stage careers in London and on Broadway. They live in Ten Chimneys, a rambling house he built for his mother long ago.

Lunt, 82, said Friday that the 20-acre parcel being given to the town was the site of family picnics at the turn of the century.

The couple appeared for the donation ceremony before a crowd of 250 persons, many of them youths in Little League uniforms.

Arkansas Governor Thumbs To Picnic

PIGGOTT, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas Gov. David Pryor, stranded at a deserted airfield four miles from where he was to make a Fourth of July speech, stuck out his thumb and began hitchiking.

The governor's plane had been prevented from landing at the airport where he had been expected because of heavy fog.

Pryor and three aides walked to the nearest highway, where they flagged down a pickup truck.

Pryor arrived at the Piggot town pinic a little late, commenting that his trip was "some kind of ride."

LUBBOCK — The second annual Co-op Seminar and Workshop sponsored by the Texas Farmers Union as part of its cooperative education and legislative program will be held July 17 at the South Park Inn Lubbock, beginning at 9 a.m.

The purpose of the workshop and seminar is to provide cooperative leaders and managers an opportunity to review and discuss marketing problems and the relationship between the co-op and its patron.

Texas Farmers Union President Jay Naman of Waco will moderate the program.

Joining him on the workshop panel will be Bob Lewis of Washington, D.C., national secretary of the farmers Union; Dan Davis, general manager of the Plains Cotton Cooperative Association of Lubbock; Dr. Bill Black of Texas A&M, marketing specialist and economist, and Ed Smith of Minot, N.D., vice president of the National Farmers Union.

Orders Continue For Luxury Cars

By CHARLES C. CAIN
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT, Mich. (AP) — Luxury car sales continue to race upward, despite price increases fueled by inflation and the overall auto industry sales slump sparked by recession.

Ford Motor Co. Vice President John Naughton sums it up this way: "There is a certain group of buyers who want a luxury car...and price is not a consideration."

The price is high and going up all the time. The luxury category includes cars in the $9,000-and-up price range, topped off at a $70,000 sticker for the prestigious Rolls Royce Camargue.

The Cadillac El Dorado, with a sticker price of $8,711 in 1973, now costs almost $10,000. The Lincoln Continental is up from $8,483 to $9,656. Many luxury car buyers load up with options that cost additional thousands.

The luxury market has been on the upswing since 1971, when domestic luxury cars accounted for 2.9 per cent of the total market. Since then, the share has increased each year and now has 4.4 per cent of the 1975 market.

A sampling of sales figures of the luxury entries for the first five months of 1975 showed all but Chrysler's Imperial were doing well. The firm reportedly will discontinue the model this fall.

Six entries from America's Big Three auto companies are doing battle with a fleet of luxury imports, mainly Mercedes-Benz and Jaguar.

January through May sales figures show Jaguar up 137 per cent over a year ago; Mercedes-Benz up 19 per cent; Lincoln-Contintal up 10 per cent; Cadillac up 7.3 per cent, and Imperial down 55 per cent.

Combined U.S. luxury cars sales are up 5 per cent, while overall U.S. car sales are down 18 per cent.

Cadillac is by far the biggest seller among luxury cars, with U.S. sales during January-May of 93,308 cars. Ford's Lincoln Division sold 33,590 cars; Mercedes-Benz delivered 17,042 and Jaguar sold 2,761.

Interest in luxury cars increased recently when Cadillac brought out its long-awaited smaller model, Seville — two feet shorter and half a ton lighter than the regular Cadillac.

The Seville joins the regular Cadillac and front-wheel drive Eldorado in the domestic luxury field along with Ford Motor Co.'s Lincoln Continental and Mark IV and Chrysler's Imperial.

Vietnamese Ghost Ship Moored At Hong Kong

Agence France-Presse

HONK KONG — Police have found a decomposed body, 100 rounds of ammunition and about 70 U.S.-made military vehicles aboard the Vietnamese ghost ship now moored west of Hong Kong harbor.

Marine police launches have been guarding the ship, the Truong Xuan, round the clock after reports that the ship was looted during her two months adrift on the South China Sea.

A tug towed the derelict into Hong Kong waters Friday. The twice-abandoned ship is now considered to be worth about $500,000.

Hong Kong police and customs officers boarding the ghost ship found the body of a Vietnamese man in the engine room.

The Truong Xuan was first abandoned May 3 in the South China Sea when the Danish freighter Clara Maersk rescued all 3,700 Vietnamese refugees aboard and brought them here.

Last Tuesday, the Somalian-registered vessel Tailungshan sighted the ship still drifting 300 miles south southwest of Hong Kong and took her in tow but cut her loose 40 miles south of Hong Kong on Thursday.

Both the captain of the Tailungshan and a spokesman of the marine department whose officers inspected the ghost ship said the ship was still in fairly good shape.

A senior official of the shipping company that towed the ship into Hong Kong said the firm might hold a meeting to decide whether to sell her as scrap or put her back in shape to sail again.

The captain of the Tailungshan said his crew found the vessel listing about 10 degrees to starboard.

The four volunteer crewmen and the chief officer he sent to board the ghost ship found her "looted" he said, probably by fishermen. "All her loose wood and rope had been stripped off, her hatch boards and even her steering wheel on the bridge had been removed," he added.

Short Takes On Business

TULSA — Walter E. Bullington has been named executive vice president of Franklin Supply Company, it was announced Saturday by Jack Judd, chairman of the board.

Bullington will assume his new position immediately and will be headquartered in the firm's Tulsa office.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Dan Esmond has been appointed to the post of Territory Director for Sambo's Restaurants, Inc. The annouscement was made by President Wayne G. Kees at the Santa Barbara headquarters of the fast-growing, nationwide chain of family restaurants.

Esmond will be responsible for Texas and Eastern New Mexico, with more than 30 restaurants under his jurisdiction. He will work out of Dallas with five Sambo's District Managers reporting to him.

LUBBOCK — Clem B. Voverie has been named by the board of directors of Furr's Cafeterias, Inc., to replace the late Roy Furr as chairman of the executive committee. Voverie has served as member of the board since its creation in 1968.

FORTH WORTH — William L. Sims has been named trust office of the Fort Worth National Bank.

Sims was an assistant county agent in Midland County for several years before becoming county agent at Sweetwater, a position he held prior to becoming affiliated with Fort Worth National.

Tons Of Lemons Dumped In Ocean

YOKOHAMA, Japan (AP) — A 299-ton freighter has steamed out of this central Japanese port to dump into the Pacific 283 tons of American lemons treated with an antiseptic outlawed in Japan, maritime officials reported Saturday.

The California lemons, imported by a Tokyo trading company, were confiscated after quarantine officials found all of the fruit had been treated with ortho-phenyl-phenol, an antiseptic prohibited under Japanese law, Yokohama port authorities said.

Betsy Ross Portrait May Solve Mystery

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A portrait of Betsy Ross discovered in an antique shop may shed some light on the famous story that she sewed the first American flag, a researcher says.

The portrait of the legendary seamstress was discovered 12 years ago, but went unnoticed until a recent account in "The Flag Bulletin," a publication of the Flag Research Center of Winchester, Mass.

Popular acceptance of Betsy Ross' role in the birth of the nation notwithstanding, there has never been historical documentation that she actually sewed the nation's first Stars and Stripes at the request of George Washington.

And many historians have long been skeptical of the legend, including Dr. Whitney Smith, director of the Flag Research Center.

Smith says the painting was done in 1832, four years before she died, by Samuel Waldo, a well known artist of the time. On the back side of the canvas is the inscription, "Portrait of Betsy Ross," which Smith says may give a clue as to whether Mrs. Ross actually sewed the first flag.

In 1832, Betsy Ross was known as Betsy Claypoole. She had not been Betsy Ross since 1777, when she remarried after the death of her husband, John Ross, according to historical accounts.

According to legend, it was while she was a widow in 1774 that Washington and two members of the Continental Congress came to her home in Philadelphia and asked her to sew the flag.

Smith says the question is: Why did Waldo refer to Betsy Claypoole as Betsy Ross unless the flag story was current at that time and Waldo wanted to do a likeness of her before she died?

"Having this portrait means that the likelihood of the story being around in her lifetime is strongly suggested," Smith says.

He says that although the portrait does not settle the question of whether Mrs. Ross had anything to do with the first American flag, "it certainly opens significant new vistas to our knowledge of a subject too little studied for all that has been written about it."

But Smith, who says he counts himself among those historians who don't think the Betsy Ross story is historical, adds, "I don't think she did it. This (the portrait) does not prove it."

Smith will not disclose who found the portrait or where it was found.

The Betsy Ross story caught the public imagination in part because of an another painting done after her death by Charles H. Weisgerber. It depicts the now-famous scene of Betsy Ross showing the finished flag to Washington.

Stanton's Class Of 1955 To Hold Reunion Saturday

A 20-year reunion for the 1955 class of Stanton High School is planned from 4 to 6 p.m. Saturday in the home of Elaine and Paige Eiland, 400 W. Second St.

A booklet is being compiled for those who can and can't come to the reunion and information on any classmates during the years, whether or not they graduated in 1955, is needed. Information needed includes address, spouse, children, career and other interesting items. Teachers are also invited.

Information for the booklets should be addressed to Elaine Eiland, Box 837, Stanton, Tex., 79782 or Sarah Barnes, Box 1034, Stanton, Tex. 79782, along with $1 to help cover costs and postage.

Strauss Says Wallace Trying To Ride Gripes To Nomination

DALLAS (AP) — Gov. George Wallace is trying to ride the most common complaints of Americans — against the very rich and the welfare cheater — to the presidential nomination of the Democratic party, says Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss.

In an interview with the Dallas Times Herald Friday, Strauss said the American public is not "mad" at the poor people, but only at the welfare cheaters. The people, he said, also are mad at the very rich who are believed not to be paying their fair share of taxes.

Strauss said, "this is Wallace's theme. That's why people are responding to him."

He said that if the Alabama governor captures 20 per cent of the vote at the 1976 Democratic national convention, and if Ted Kennedy fails to emerge as a candidate, the result will be a "multi-balloted convention."

Strauss said that Wallace has tagged the country's concern over the "pointy-headed bureaucrat' because of the frustration of many Americans who feel alienated from government.

"The people feel alienated from the very people who influence their lives," Strauss said. "People such as city councilmen, police chiefs, senators and congressmen. It seems so hard to get through the red tape to be heard."

The Democratic leader said "people sense that something is wrong, things a not working the way they should" and are looking for new ideas and innovations in government.

"The important thing," he said, "is that the two-party system continue to be strong. Our institutions have got to stay strong and elastic enough to the changes aren't made by people riding white horses."

Strauss described President Ford as a "decent, honorable, likeable man," and gave him high marks in foreign affairs, but low marks in domestic affairs.

Texas Youth Drowns In Idaho

MINIDOKA, Idaho (AP) — A 16-year-old Texas youth drowned near the Minidoka Dam of the Snake River on Independence Day, sheriff's deputies said.

Officer said Hugo Reynaldo Casanova of Laredo, Tex., was swimming with relatives in an area where "no swimming" signs were posted.

Scuba divers recovered the body about an hour after Casanova disappeared in the water, 15 feet from boat docks, officers said.

Water in the area is 15 to 20 feet deep and filled with pond weed.

Officers said the youth was visiting the home of Mr. and Mrs. Domingo Torres of nearby Paul.

FDA Wants Anti-Diabetic Drugs To Bear Caution Labels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drugs used by 1.5 million diabetics to reduce the sugar level of their blood would bear label notes warning that the tablets could increase the risk of death by heart disease, under a proposal by the Food and Drug Administration.

The proposal, to be published Monday in the Federal Register, involves a class of drugs called oral hypoglycemics, whose generic names include tolbutamide and phenformin.

The drugs are marketed under eight brand names, among them Upjohn's Orinase and Tolinase, Pfizer's Diabinase, Geigy's DBI and Lilly's Dymelor, an FDA spokesman said Friday.

He said that besides carrying a warning about increased heart disease risk, the proposed labeling also would state that:

—Patients should be made aware of the risk and participate in any decision to use such drugs.

—The drugs should be used only by persons whose blood-sugar levels cannot be controlled by diet and who are unable to use the antidiabetes drug insulin.

—Physicians are not certain the drugs help prevent the long-term complications of diabetes.

A medical authority in Atlanta cautioned, however, that patients should not stop taking the drugs just because of the proposal.

"Any bad effects of these drugs are long-term problems, not short-term problems," said Dr. Roy Wiggines of the Center for Metabolic Studies. "If a patient stops his regimen of oral tablets, he may well get into the problems of uncontrolled diabetes, and this can be immediately endangering to life."

The FDA spokesman said a public hearing on the proposal would be held here Aug. 20 and public comment would be accepted until Sept. 5, after which the FDA will decide whether to make the labeling mandatory.

Spain Asks Fat Price For Bases

The Washington Post

MADRID — Spain has asked the United States for massive weapons deliveries, worth in the neighborhood of $1.5 billion, as part of the price for renewing a 22-year-old agreement on bases currently under negotiation, officials said Friday.

Spain has made it clear to the United States that if it wants to keep on using three Air Force bases and one major Navy station on Spanish territory it will have to pay a steep price.

Senior Spanish officials said that continued use of the bases will depend on weapons the United States is willing to provide for the modernization of the Spanish military establishment in the next fours years.

Graduate Center Offers Refresher Geology Course

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer a refresher course in structural geology July 25-Aug. 23.

Dr. Joseph F. Fisher, professor of geology at The University of Texas at Arlington, will be the instructor.

The course will be taught from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. on Fridays and from 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. Saturdays in the Graduate Center's classroom in the basement of Gihls Tower East, 119 N. Colorado St., Midland. Students are asked to enter the building through the rear door.

Fee for the course is $125.

Dr. Fisher's, research interests are prophyritic textures of granitie rocks and prophyritic copper deposits, and basaltic origins and evolution.

His areas of special study have been the Wichita Mountains, the Southwest Oklahoma Mountains, the Cascade Mountains of Washington and Oregon, and Guatamala.

The course will include stress analysis, physical properties of rocks, rock behavior in tectonic processes, principles of folding, origin of faults, relationship of faulting and folding, grantational gliding tectonics, diapirs, fundamentals of plate tectonics and geotectonics. . .

This program is designed to bring the working petroleum geologist up to date as regards the latest concepts and theories in structural geology.

The course will serve as a good basic foundation to the advanced structural geology course the Graduate Center hopes to offer in the fall.

Persons who want to enroll in the refresher course should contact the Permian Basin Graduate Center, Post Office Box 1518, Midland, 79701.

Armstrong To Speak In Midland Thursday

Bob Armstrong, commissioner of the Texas General Land Office, will be in Midland Thursday to speak at the meeting of the Midland Desk & Derrick Club.

Scheduled to begin at 7 p. m., the meeting will be held in the Midland Country Club.

A 1949 graduate of Austin High School, Armstrong has been land commissioner since 1970. He was unopposed for reelection in both the Democratic and Republican primaries in 1972 and was unopposed in the Democratic primary in 1974.

Prior to running for land commissioner in 1970, Armstrong was a member of the Texas House of Representatives seven years.

During his legislative career, he was twice vice chairman of the House Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence and authored many bills.

In 1969, Armstrong was presented the Distinguished Service Award by the State Bar of Texas for sponsoring legislation for bail bond reform.

The commissioner has been active statewide in the Texas Youth Conference, Texas State Employes Cancer Drive; United Fund, and many other civic affairs.

Getty Finds Oil In Michigan Test

HOUSTON — An indicated A-1 Carbonate-Niagaran Reef hydrocarbon discovery in Otsego County, Michigan, was announced Saturday by Getty Oil Company.

Located about seven miles east of the town of Gaylord, the No. 1-27 C. A. Green encountered 37 net feet of pay. During an eight-hour period, the well tested at the rate of 259 barrels per day of 42-degree gravity oil from perforations below 5,222 feet. The well was drilled to a total depth of 5,606 feet.

This is the third discovery in the Niagaran Reef Trend of Northern Michigan in which Getty Oil has participated.

Brown Reports Record Earnings

Tom Brown, Inc., of Midland Friday reported record net earnings of $6,395,916 for the fiscal year ended March 31.

The earnings represent a 90 per cent increase over fiscal 1974's net earnings of $3,374,689.

The per share earned for fiscal 1975 are $2.15 compared to $1.15 for 1974.

OFF CALIFORNIA COAST—

Industry Optimistic About Exploratory, Development Work

TULSA — The petroleum industry is optimistic that exploratory and development drilling soon will pick up significantly off southern California.

Just how soon depends on when the U.S. Department of the Interior sponsors a lease sale in the area, the Oil and Gas Journal says in its July 7 issue. The oil industry has been under restraints during most of the period since the 1969 oil spill.

Interior, much to the surprise of industry observers, has indicated it will try to hold a lease sale before the first of the year.

The department also has issued a favorable draft environmental-impact statement for the Santa Barbara Channel. The weekly business magazine says this will help clear the way to drilling virtually all federal leases.

Exxon Co.-U.S.A., in another note of optimism, will start development of Hondo field in the billion-barrel Santa Ynez Unit. The company recently won a vote of confidence of Santa Barbara County citizens to permit construction of onshore facilities to handle Santa Ynez oil.

Also, the new California State Lands Commisssion has gradually been approving some drilling programs on state leases, an indication the moratorium on drilling definitely is over.

The Journal says it probably will be 6 months to a year before the industry knows whether the signs are really "go" in offshore California.

Unless an opposition lawsuit stymies the sale, Interior expects to complete an environmental impact study of the 1.5-million-acre sale area by late July or early August. The secretary of the Interior then can announce the sale 30 days later and hold it 30 days after that.

A group of California cities has threatened a lawsuit on grounds the federal government has not yet developed an energy policy showing the need for southern California oil.

Meanwhile, a half-dozen operators have exploratory and development programs for the federal leases they purchased in the Santa Barbara Channel in 1968. Expiration dates have been extended by court order because of the shutdown period. But those companies must resume work or lose the leases when the next expiration dates occur in 1976 or 1977, the Journal says.

The largest development planned is Exxon's Hondo field project. The company will install a $50-million, 940-foot platform in 850 feet of water by May or June of 1976. Drilling of the first of 28 wells will begin in late 1976. Production of its first oil is expected in the second quarter of 1977. The wells eventually should produce 25,000-30,000 barrels of oil per day in 1978 or 1979.

Exxon hopes to increase the field's production to 50,000-60,000 barrels per day by the early 1980's when operation of its subsea production system gets under way. By the mid-1980's, the company is counting on Santa Ynez production of 60,000-80,000 barrels of oil per day and 77 million cubic feet of gas per day.

However, lawsuits brought by environmentalist groups and a challenge by State Controller Kenneth Cory of the State Lands Commission's approval of a proposed Exxon pipeline through state waters could delay the project.

Island Creek Signs Mining Agreement

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — Occidental Petroleum Corp. has announced a preliminary agreement providing for a joint venture to develop a deep coal mine in Buchanan County, Va.

The agreement was signed last week in Bucharest, Romania, by former U.S. Senator Albert Gore, now chairman of the board of Island Creek Coal Co., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Occidental, and by C. Iliescu, general director, Foreign Trade Ministry of Romania and D. Dinescu, general director of Mineral Importexport of Romania.

The agreement would produce more than 1 million tons of coal per year from the Virginia mine, an Occidental spokesman said.

The mine will be known as Virginia Pocahontas No. 6 Mine.

Exxon Employe Marks Milestone

Arthur F. Oestmann has observed his 20th anniversary as an employe of Exxon Co., U.S.A.

He is a senior professional geophysicist for the South Delaware Project, Southwestern Exploration Division in Midland.

Oestmann joined Exxon at Hattiesburg, Miss. Following other geophysical assignments in Mississippi and at New Orleans, La., he was tranferred to Midland.

He is a member of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, the Permian Basin Geophysical Society and the Society of Exploration Geophysicists.

Rotary Work Tops 1974 Drilling Pace

Two hundred fifty-four rigs were reported in the two-state area of the Permian Basin Empire in the Friday survey conducted by Reed Drilling Equipment.

Two hundred fifty-six units were counted a week earlier.

At this time one year ago there were 238 rotaries on location in the area.

Eddy County, N.M., was in the lead with 27 working, followed by Lea County, N. M., with 25. Pecos County with 19. Ward County with 15 rotaries. and Scurry with 13 units making hole.

Amoco Building Office At Sonora

SONORA — Amoco Production Co. is presently building a new sub-area office near Sonora to house company personnel directly involved in Amoco's drilling and production operations in Sutton and surrounding counties, Dave Davidson, Amoco's Odessa area superintendent, announced today.

According to Davidson, the new office is one mile south of Sonora on Texas State Highway No. 277. The 2,400 square-foot-building presently under construction is scheduled for completion mid-July. Amoco will have some 10 employees assigned to the new office.

Expert Claims Rate-Setting System Will Ban Cost Of Fuel Pass-Through

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A utility regulation expert told the Senate Consumer Affairs subcommittee that the rate - setting system which has apparently saved the Lo-Vaca Gathering Company from bankruptcy and has been a major bone of contention in natural gas rate hearings will be eliminated under the new State Utility Commission law.

The law affects rate regulation of both the new Utility Commission and the Railroad Commission as well as cities which do their own rate regulating.

Robert Means, University of Texas law professor on regulated industries, says he interprets the new law as eliminating cost of fuel pass-through adjustment clauses.

In 1972 the Texas Railroad Commission passed an order allowing all natural gas companies to pass through 65 per cent of their increased cost of gas. With the cost of gas escalating, the Railroad Commission took the action to let companies recover some direct costs without the necessity of a new rate hearing based on the single element, the cost of fuel to the company.

A year later, the ramifications of the Lo-Vaca Gathering Company's problems came to light, and the commission passed a special order for that company, allowing it to pass through 100 per cent of its increased cost of gas. The rate allowed for Lo-Vaca is 100 per cent of its cost of fuel plus a nickel per 1,000 cubic feet of natural gas. More recently, the Railroad Commission adopted an order allowing Lone Star Gas Company to pass through 85 per cent of its increased cost.

Both Lo-Vaca and its major customers agreed that was a good solution to the problem, keeping Lo-Vaca out of bankruptcy and giving it sufficient capital to purchase new supplies. A major part of its problem had been that it didn't have sufficient supplies of gas to meet its contractural obligations.

The system has apparently worked to some degree, since Lo-Vaca reports that it will probably be able to make it through the year without any curtailments to high priority users. hen the weather is extremely hot for extended periods, it said, it may have to have some minor curtailments.

Bill Fowler, an examiner with the Gas Utilities Division of the Railroad Commission, said he hadn't seen Means' interpretation of the new law. He did say there are numerous court cases which have held that cost pass-through clauses aren't actually new rates, and, therefore, could be allowed without the necessity of a new rate hearing each time a rate adjustment is made.

He does agree that a section of the new law providing that there is a "major change" in rates every time an increase means $100,000 to the company might require the rate hearings, thereby effectively eliminating the possibility of a monthly adjustment of the rate, since the required hearings would take more than two months.

Sen. Ron Clower of Garland, who has been holding hearings on utility regulation for two years and was one of the legislators who wrote the law, agrees with Means' interpretation that cost adjustment clauses are barred.

Clower and Means agree that the matter will certainly be one of the first things taken to court, when the utility law takes effect. There is even a question about when the regulation will take effect. The actual utility commission won't start really doing any work until Jan. 1, 1976, but the law is effective on Sept. 1, 1975.

The Railroad Commission, which must follow the general guidelines of the utility commission law, isn't sure whether it will come under the act's provisions on Sept. 1 or Jan. 1.

Another possible interpretation of the meaning of the law that's sure to head for the courthouse was highlighted by Means. During debate on the bill before the legislature much time was spent on whether rate setting should be based on the original cost of the capital investment to the company or on the existing Texas system of "fair market value" which is a balancing between the original cost and what it would cost to replace the material at current prices.

The bill specifically says that the rate base shall be "fair market value" and prescribes the percentages to be applied to original cost and replacement cost now.

The problem that arises is in Section 39 of the act, which directs how the rates are to be fixed. It says the rate charged shall be "at a level which will permit such utility to recover its operating expenses together with a reasonable return on its invested capital."

In legal use, the rate to be based on "fair market value," Means said, the law should have said "adjusted value of the act when referring to "fair value."

Section 40 of the act limits the regulatory authority to setting a rate which will yield no more than a "fair return upon the adjusted value of the invested capital" and means says that courts may well interpret that as a limitation on the commission rather than a right of the utility companies, meaning that the Railroad Commission and the Utility Commission could, if they desired, set rates based on the original cost of the capital investment.

Texas Pacific Reports Tests

Four-point tests have been reported by Texas Pacific Oil Co., Inc., for No. 1-A Elsinore, fourth producer and ¾-mile northeast extension to the GMW (Montoya) field of Pecos County.

It flowed the following gauges through perforations at 12,293-12,419 feet, which had been acidized with 32,000 gallons and overflushed with 20,000 gallons: four hours on a 13-64-inch choke, 2.3 million cubic feet of gas per day; four hours on a 17-64-inch choke, 4 million cubic feet daily; six hours on a 21-64-inch choke, 5.7 million cubic feet per day, plus three barrels of water; and six hours on a 28-64-inch choke, 7.1 million cubic feet per day, plus 35 barrels of water.

Operator was preparing to calculate absolute, open flow potential.

The well is 1,320 feet from south and east lines of section 72, block D, GC&SF survey, 17 miles south of Fort Stockton.

Hog Cholera Hits Herd At Hereford

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hog producers throughout the Southwest and the rest of the nation are being warned to watch for signs of hog cholera in their herds following the first confirmed outbreak of the disease in the United States in more than a year.

The Agriculture Department said the outbreak was found in a herd of about 170 hogs owned by Louis Woodford near Hereford, Tex.

The herd has been quarantined by the Texas Animal Health Commission and will be destroyed and its owner compensated, officials said. A federal-state task force is working to halt the spread of the disease, which is often fatal to pigs but does not affect other animals or humans.

The last confirmed outbreaks of hog cholera were reported in Puerto Rico in May 1974 and in Mississippi in January 1974.

Before the government established its eradication program, the disease affected 5,000 to 6,000 swine herds annually at a cost to producers of some $50 million, the Agriculture Department said.

Reptile Ancestry

Although birds lack teeth, their embryos still have teeth ridges in upper and lower jaws, pointing to reptillian ancestry.

EXPERT TAILORING — Doris Gibson, owner of Gibson Tailoring, 400 Kent St., is the only working tailor in Midland. She specializes in men's made-to-measure suits. She has just recently completed costumes for 17 horses and their riders for the 4-H Mounted Drill Teams of Midland for use in the state competition in Fort Worth July 23.

4-H Drill Team Costumes Made By Gibson Tailors

The 4-H Mounted Drill Teams of Midland will wear colorful costumes made by Gibson Custom Tailoring, 400 Kent, when they perform in the state competition in Fort Worth on July 23.

The costumes, completed for 17 horses and riders, include blankets, leggings, breast harness, bridle harness and head bands for the horses; hat bands, ties, vests, chaps and gauntlets for the riders.

Doris Gibson has had 40 years experience in sewing and tailoring. At nine years old, she made her mother's and sister's clothes, never using a pattern. It wasn't until after she was married that she used a pattern, and although she uses one now, she maintains that the directions still don't make sense to her.

The only working tailor in Midland, Doris started tailoring in her home. Four years ago she opened a shop on Dodson and a little over a year ago she moved to the Kent street address. She has lived in Midland since 1952.

She has tailored for many celebrities and at present is teaching actress Chris Noel, now living in Midland, to sew. She has done work for Robert Eden.

Gibson Custom Tailoring specializes in men's made-to-measure suits. Alterations will be finished within a week or sooner.

The shop is open from 12 noon to 1 p.m. for working people. Hours are from 8 to 5 except Friday when the shop closes at 4 p.m.

For your tailoring needs visit Doris Gibson at 400 Kent or call 684-8666 for more information.

New Drycleaning Machine Installed At Local Plant

Drycleaning equipment especially designed to handle the new and versatile "Valclene" drycleaning fluid has been installed at One-Hour Martinizing, 3303 Andrews Hwy.

"The new system," according to Tommy Cartwright, owner, "provides the most up-to-date cleaning techniques available for today's wide variety of fabrics."

Manufactured by Du Pont, "Valclene" is the world's first fluorocarbon to be used in drycleaning. It consists of a fluorocarbon solvent and a special detergent, a combination that supplies unique drycleaning properties and high performance benefits. The fluid is extremely gentle with a range of garments, including knits, bonded and laminated fabrics, suedes and leathers, furs, most plastics, and wedding gowns as well as conventional and easy-care garments.

The installation at One-Hour Martinizing features a Universal machine using Du Pont's "Valclene." According to Tommy Cartwright, cycle times with "Valclene" are about half that of traditional drycleaning systems.

For additional information contact Tommy Cartwright at 682-8561 or Roy Fetters at 683-6005.

Modern Cleaners at 1417 North Big Spring and Mr. Roy Fetters, route salesman, will be using this "Valclene" process.

Accident Injures Two Midlanders

SAN ANGELO — Midlanders were involved in a one-car accident Friday on U.S. 277, four miles north of Christoval.

Bennie Earnest Wilson, 34, and Delia McGowan, 23, were taken to Shannon Hospital in San Angelo after their auto reportedly ran off the highway. Wilson was treated and released Friday night. Miss McGowan remains in the hospital in fair condition.

Department of Public Safety officers are investigating the accident.

Joseph Zeppa, 81, Dies; Rites Today

TYLER, Tex. (AP) — Joseph Zeppa, the "grand old man of drilling" who climbed from the Hell's Kitchen section of New York City to head the world's second largest oil drilling business, died here Friday. He was 81.

Zeppa, founder, president and chairman of the board of Delta Drilling Co., came to America from Fubine, Italy at the age of 12. He died at his Pine Hurst Farm retreat near here.

The Texas Legislature recently honored Zeppa for his many contributions to the oil and petroleum drilling industry. In 1971 he was named the "grand old man of drilling" at the International Petroleum Exposition in Oklahoma.

He began his career in the New York accounting firm of Shearman and Sterling then, in 1917, went to France as a "doughboy." Following World War I, Zeppa remained in France where he studied international law at Toulouse University.

Upon his return to the United States, Zeppa became an accountant for the El Dorado Petroleum Co. at El Dorado, Ark. He later worked for the Arkansas Natural Gas Corp. in Shreveport and the McMillan Petroleum Co. of Los Angeles until he founded Delta Drilling Co. in Longview, Tex. in 1931, now considered the world's second largest drilling firm.

Private funeral services will be here today.

Survivors include the widow, two sons and a brother, all of Tyler.

All Boy Rodeo Slated Saturday At Boys Ranch

TANKERSLEY — The 14th annual All Boy Rodeo at West Texas Boys Ranch here will be at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Boys Ranch arena.

Featured attraction will be the San Angelo Saddle Club in a polo exhibition. There is no admission charge and barbecue will be served at $2 per plate from 5:30 to 7 p.m.

Boys Ranchers will be competing for All Around Cowboy trophy buckle and ribbons for events such as calf riding, steer riding, goat sacking, goat tying and other events, said Buck Owens, rodeo chairman.

Judges will be Benny Friend and Bill Shaw of San Angelo with stock to be furnished by West Texas Boys Ranch.

The rodeo started in 1961 as an All Boy event for the boys at the ranch to compete and has since become a traditional July favorite with the public.

Cape Verde Islands Gain Independence From Portugal

(Related Story Page 11A)

PRAIA, Cape Verde (AP) — The Cape Verde islands, once a staging post in the slave trade between Africa and the United States, became independent Saturday after 500 years of Portuguese rule.

A Portuguese delegation led by Premier Vasco Goncalves handed over power at a session of the new 56-member national assembly in the capital of Praia. Then the 300,000 islanders, a mixture of mulattos and blacks, turned to an evening of open-air singing, dancing and eating.

The assembly, elected last week, met Friday and designated the nation's chief of state but did not immediately reveal his identity.

The nine large and six small islands of the archipelago, now Africa's smallest republic, lie in the Atlantic almost 400 miles off the west coast of Africa.

It is the third territory in Portugal's African empire to be granted independence since the military toppled Lisbon's right-wing dictatorship in April 1974. Guinea-Bissau and Mozambique were freed previously, and Angola has been promised its independence in November.

Delegations from other African countries, including Senegal, Algeria, Mozambique and Mauritania, and international organizations such as the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity flew into Praia to join the official celebration.

Several hundred Cape Verdeans who live in the United States, France, Holland and West Africa also returned home for the occasion. Cape Verde, a poor volcanic cluster whose chief exports are canned fish and salt, has more emigres living abroad than the entire home population.

John Carradine Weds Fourth Wife

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — John Carradine, the actor and director, has taken a fourth wife in a quiet church wedding attended by members of the family and some friends.

Carradine, 69, father of the star of the television series "Kung Fu," David Carradine, married Emily Cisneros, 50. A family spokesman disclosed Friday that the ceremony took place on Thursday.

Karen Black Weds Magazine Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actress Karen Black was married at dawn to a free-lance writer. After the ceremony in a forest area, the couple joined about 400 wedding guests in a traditional Fourth of July picnic.

The groom was L. M. "Kit" Carson, 33. The couple met several months ago while Carson was writing a magazine story on the 32-year-old actress.

The marriage is the second for Miss Black, who was nominated in 1971 for an Academy Award as best supporting actress for her portrayal of Rayette DePesto in "Five Easy Pieces."

Nothing Deters Skinny Dippers On Martha's Vineyard

By ANN BLACKMAN

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) —On Cape Cod they passed a law against it. On Nantucket they frown on it. But on Martha's Vineyard, the only threat to skinny dipping is frostbite. And that's not stopping anyone.

One nippy afternoon recently, three young men ran along the narrow stretch of beach near Gay Head, diving in and out of the icy waves.

One could spot their naked bodies from an over-hanging bluff several hundred yards from the main road. But only the more adventurous choose to slide down the steep incline to the rocky shoreline.

Down on the beach, a young couple walked along the water's edge, blithely unconcerned about where the sun burned them. And in a cozy corner of the dunes, another couple was making love.

"If the residents complain, we just ask the bathers to put on their walking shoes," said a smiling man in uniform who asked to be identified only as "a friendly young police officer." Otherwise, he said, "We don't bother them."

Whatever it is about nude bathing, the naughtiness, the shock value, the feeling of freedom as the body glides through the water, skinny dipping is becoming more public.

Cape Cod has the only national seashore in the country where nudity is explicitly banned. People have received warnings. Nobody's been arrested.

The fine, a maximum of six months in jail or $500, is the same as for littering.

The Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts has filed suit alleging that the ban violates rights of nude bathers to free expression.

There is also controversy about nude swimming in Los Angeles and Cocoa, Fla., among other areas of the country.

In fashionable La Jolla, Calif., the city has given its official blessing to an "optional swim suit zone," a 900-foot stretch of sand called Black's Beach. It is so popular, San Diego's "nude beach committee" wants the city council to add more beach.

At the other side of the country, Edgartown Police Chief Jesse J. Oliver III said, "We have no laws against it. I have nothing against it." A lot is left to the policeman's discretion, he added, but last year, no one on the Vineyard was arrested for swimming nude.

At the Chamber of Commerce in Vineyard Haven, visitors are greeted by a photograph of three nudes walking down a beach.

Would-be nudists should take note, however. Most nudists swim off the narrow, isolated beaches, accessible only by a rutted dirt road.

On Nantucket, skinny dipping can cost the offender fifty bucks. And officially, at least, police say they enforce the ban.

Sgt. Paul Smith sat back in his chair at the police headquarters just off cobblestoned Main Street and mused about rights.

"People should be able to choose if they don't want to be exposed to it," he said. "Public nudity is an encroachment on other people's rights."

Therefore, he added, "We frown on nude bathing, especially on public beaches. If it's in an area where it isn't going to bother anyone, we haven't enforced it." And yet, he said police picked up 15 people last year for indecent exposure.

Did Smith, who grew up on Nantucket, ever go skinny dipping?

He smiled. "We used to do it, but at night," he said. "We were discreet."

Freedom Train Chugs Across Heartland Of U.S.

By CHARLES HILLINGER
The Los Angeles Times

FT. WAYNE, Ind. — The 27-car, red-white-and-blue Freedom Train chugged across the flat heartland of American, carrying two centuries of Americana — 750 artifacts, ranging from George Washington's notes on his copy of the Constitution to moon rocks.

As the train made its way slowly across Ohio and Indiana last week, thousands of people gathered in small towns, on overpasses, at crossroads, in open fields and even in a cemetery to watch it pass. They cheered and waved American flags.

If there are blase Americans who can scoff at this national project, designed to call attention to the bicentennial celebration, they are hard to find here.

"I thought the country was dead," Edward T. Mungovan, the train's security officer, said as he stood on the observation platform.

"Look at them," he said, waving at the crowd at the old depot in Wawaka, Ind. "It's been this way ever since the train started." The 21-month journey began in Wilmington, Del., last April 1 and the train traveled through New England and New York before heading into the Midwest.

Texas stops in Fort Worth, Dallas, Houston, Austin and San Antonio are planned for next February or March.

"Men, women and children all along the tracks." Mungovan said, "... out in the country, in small towns and big cities, waving flags, clapping, cheering for America as the Freedom Train goes by."

As he spoke, he waved at the crowd watching the train as it moved slowly past the old Wawaka depot.

Tears welled in Mungovan's eyes. "I get choked up. I can't help myself. I thought the country was going down the drain," he said.

Mungovan resigned last October after 12 years as police chief of Morgan City, La., five years before he would have become eligible for a pension.

"But I had had it right up to here," he said, running his hand across his neck. "I was fed up with America, fed up with the abuse we in law enforcement were taking, fed up with the courts. There was nothing you could do right.

"Being on this train has restored my faith in my country."

To gauge public interest in the Freedom Train, a Los Angeles Times reporter rode it through three municipalies — a large city, Cincinnati, population about 500,000; a medium-sized city, Ft. Wayne, population 180,000 and a small town, Archbold, Ohio, population 3,200.

In all of them, the reception was astonishing. People waited in lines for hours. Thousands stood waiting in the rain. Some came from more than 100 miles away.

Last week, the bicentennial special spent 2½ days at Archbold, the smallest stop on the route, and 40,000 people showed up. Flags flew from nearly every home in the town. All the sorefronts on Defiance St. were draped with red, white and blue bunting.

Archbold, 50 miles west of Toledo, is a prosperous mid-American small town with 20 industries. The recession has not touched Archbold.

People come from 50 miles around to work in the town, where the largest employer is the 600-worker La Choy food company plant, where noodles, chow mein, egg rolls, pork fried rice and other Chinese foods are prepared.

So, even though no Chinese have ever lived in Archbold, the signs on the outskirts proclaim: "Welcome to Chinatown, U.S.A."

"This is the best damn town in America," shouted Dick Walter, 48, a longtime Archbold mailman, as he sipped a stein of beer in the Carriage House, one of the town's four taverns.

It was Saturday night, and the Carriage House was jammed with 300 people who whooped and cheered at Walter's remark. Many were out-of-towners who had come to see the Freedom Train.

High school history teacher Lynne Papenhuss, 25, who drove 170 miles to Archbold from Heath, Ohio: "It's a dream come true, to be able to come so close to these fantastic documents and all the other memorabilia of our nation. Nothing like this will probably ever be assembled in one place ever again."

For Mrs. Pauline Burkard, 60, of Toledo, "It's the nostalgia as much as the train and all the priceless things on it. The crowds in this small town. The cotton candy and American flags. This is America. People love it."

Cathy Ulicny of Fostoria, Ohio, held her 1-year-old daughter in her arms for three hours as she waited to board the train.

"She slept through the whole things," the young mother said with a laugh. "But my husband and I wanted Amanda to be able to say she was on the Freedom Train when she grows up."

For Archbold Fire Chief Bill DeGoff, 59, and his 26 volunteer firemen, the first day of the train's visit meant having to treat 16 people who had fainted from the heat while standing hours in the line.

The second day at Archbold 5,000 people at one time stood in a cloudburst for five to six hours and never left the lines.

"Isn't it incredible," the fire chief said as he stood under cover at a souvenir stand. "No one's crabbing about being out in the rain. And when they're finished touring the train, they go to their cars mired in mud parked in fields. And they're still not complaining. . ."

Tornado warnings had been out for hours. The sky was ablaze with streaks of lightning. Cracks of thunder bombarded the crowds. One lightning flash startled people as it stuck a utility pole not far from the train.

But the people kept coming, lining up in the downpour.

Scott Leithauser, 8, had his parents drive him 30 miles to Archbold from Sherwood, Ohio, "just so I could see Hank Aaron's 714th home-run ball and the bat he hit it with." Scott's teeth chattered as he stood in the chilly rain.

Scott Leithauser, 8, came to see the train 'just so I could see Hank Aaron's 714th home-run ball and the bat he hit it with'

Those standing in line were treated to a montage of American music that permeated the soggy atmosphere from speakers on exhibit cars: from songs of the Revolution to New Orleans jazz; from show tunes to folk rock.

Raindrops peked the umbrellas as people listened to Martin Luther King's "I Have a Dream" speech, to President Franklin D. Roosevelt's "Day of Infamy" broadcast, to President John F. Kennedy's "Ask Not What Your Country Can Do for You," and much, much more.

The Freedom Train is a costly project. There is concern whether there will be enough funds available to keep it going the entire journey.

The train has no government funding. It was launched with $1 million from each of four major corporations, Pepsi Cola, General Motors, Kraft Foods and Prudential Insurance Co.

"We're $2 million to $3 million in the red at this point," explained Michael Rosenberg, head of operations for the American Freedom Train Foundation.

"But we're just getting started and ticket sale money is just beginning to come in. In the first two months we had gross sales at $1.2 million, which isn't bad, considering the admission price is $2 and $1 a ticket.

"If there is any profit, it will all go to charity. We have a big overhead, 138 staff traveling with the train, 40 more back at the foundation headquarters in Bailey's Crossroads, Va. Then there's the cost of maintenance, etc."

Visitors travel through the 10 exhibit cars on moving walkways. They carry individual transistorized sound units that play a running narration coordinated with the exhibits.

At first, visitors were whisked through the train in 15 to 17 minutes, but the moving walkway in each car has been slowed to allow visitors 22 to 25 minutes.

Aboard the train are 200 years of American dreams, heartaches and triumphs — the sights, sounds and smells of the nation.

There are historical documents, rare photographs and art treasures from more 250 museums, from the National Archives and from private collections:

—Benjamin Franklin's original copy of the Articles of Confederation. Abraham Lincoln's preliminary handwritten draft of the Emancipation Proclamation.

—The original documents formalizing the Louisiana Purchase, Oregon Compromise and Gadsden Purchase.

—Paul Revere's saddlebags. Martin Luther King's vestments. The Bible used at President Ford's swearing-in ceremony.

—Rudolph Valentino's jacket. Will Rogers' lariat. Jack Benny's violin, Judy Garland's "Dorothy" dress from the "Wizard of Oz."

—Johnny Bench's and Willie Mays' baseball gloves. The original typewriter, roller skates and sewing machine.

And so much, much more out of America's past.

For railroad buffs, the old steam engine is a highlight of a visit to the Freedom Train.

At Ft. Wayne, home of the legendary "Johnny Appleseed" (John Chapman), Mayor Ivan Lebamoff, 42, said, "Some say the steam has gone out of this country. "Well, the Freedom Train is proving this isn't so. We've tired of rising gas prices, of the gloomy economic picture. The Freedom Train is something special for the spirit. . ."

Sometimes working at ground level is easier.

It's not a tourist attraction — yet, but the oldest house in Midland still draws visitors.

Earlier this year, a group of Midland artists gathered at 213 Weatherford to catch the Sarah Brown Dorsey House on canvas.

Reporter-Telegram photographer Johnny Virden then caught the group on film as they studied the old structure.

The Midland County Historical Society is seeking funds with which to restore the house in time for the 1976 Bicentennial celebration. The house was built in 1900 and is the only structure left from Midland's earliest days.

Mrs. Salinas, 81, Dies At Lamesa

LAMESA — Germina C. Salinas, 81, of Lamesa died Thursday following a lengthy illness.

Services were Saturday in the St. Margaret-Mary Catholic Church with the Rev. Jerome Vitek, pastor, officiating. Interment was in Lamesa Cemetery under the direction of Branon Funeral Home.

A native of Star County, Mrs. Salinas had been a 12-year resident of Dawson County. She was a lifelong member of the Catholic Church.

Children Compare Educational Eras

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Second graders from the Lucas Valley School near here spent a day at the old one-room Dixie Schoolhouse to discover the difference in their modern education and that of the 1869 era.

The children dressed in clothes of the period, long dresses, bonnets, caps and hats. They sat and did their lessons at the old wooden desks. Missing was the old pot-bellied wood stove so typical of the small country schools of that day.

The Dixie School was made a historical landmark several years ago.

Alternate School Method, Born In '60s, Still Very Alive

By TIMOTHY HARPER

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — "There's no real way of doing things at Rainbow."

Chris Hollibush, coordintor of Milwaukee's Rainbow School, is bemused as she recounts the eight frantic weeks in 1972 when she and several other parents decided to start their own alternative school in an old apartment building.

Process Evolving

"It's a process that keeps evolving," she shrugs. "Every year we have more kids, but fewer desks and fewer chairs." Rainbow is one of the more successful counterculture school started throughout the United States by idealistic young people the '60s.

Although times have changed, many parents believe that these alternative schools still are the best way to pass on their values to their children. The New Schools Exchange Clearing House in Pettigrew, Ark., lists 1,200 privately run "alternative" schools in communities around the United States. They have 50,000 children enrolled, mostly in the grades prior to high school.

Students Different

Some of the students are noticeably different than contemporaries in public schools.

"My 13-year-old daughter Robin started at a public high school last fall after two years at Rainbow," Mrs. Hollibush says. "She felt very ignorant. She didn't know all the facts and figures the other kids did. The amount she doesn't know about geography astounds me.

"On the other hand, she's already had two books of poetry published."

It was more important for Robin, Ms. Hollibush believes, to spend her years at Rainbow grappling with new ideas and concepts than memorizing the Gettysburg address or conquering the rudiments of algebra.

No Complete Studies

There have been no comprehensive studies of how students from alternative elementary schools — which meet education standards in most states if they have certified teachers and if students attend a certain number of days each year — perform later in public high schools.

But alternative education's supporters say most of the graduates are not handicapped by a lack of basic information because their eagerness to learn allows them to catch up to their classmates in traditional schools quickly.

Rents Building

Rainbow, which rents the apartment building space it uses, finished its third full academic year in June and is therefore older than most alternative schools now operating. It's also more structured than most.

During the school term, all 50 children (the oldest 12) spend the first hour of the day on language or math. Teachers wander from room to room, occasionally lecturing to all, but more often stopping to help individuals.

The children sit, stand, walk, hop, wiggle, lie on the floor, talk and yell, seemingly at will.

"We try to work on basic skills as unobtrusively as possible, says Ms. Hollibush, who prefers that designation. "Reading a traffic sign is reading, and measuring a table is math. We don't try to push anybody into anything."

Informal Classes

The rest of the day is spent in informal classes, studying subjects selected by the teachers and students for that month. Topics include city living, war, pollution, union organizing, geology. And there is individualized activity for students who prefer to curl up with a book.

"Nobody," Ms. Hollibush says firmly, "is allowed to do nothing."

Most Underpaid

Most free school teachers are young and underpaid. Many work only for room and board in cooperative communities born as farm communes. Some are drawn to alternative schools because they will be able to say and do what they want; others simply couldn't find "real" teaching jobs.

Rainbow's three teachers, one for preschoolers and two for elementary age students, each earn $400 a month.

Growth Predicted

Frank Lindenfeld, a free school founder in the 1960s when he was a sociology professor at the University of California at Berkeley, says the alternative movement will continue to grow as long as the teaching job market is tight.

"It might continue for several more years," says Lindenfeld, now a professor at Cheyney (Pa.) State College, "as teaching graduates find it increasingly difficult to obtain public school jobs and find alternative schools that provide them with work, if not necessarily with money."

Perhaps the most volatile fuel for the alternative movement is disdain for U.S. public education.

Killings Expected To Further Divide Reservation Factions

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (AP) — The killing of two FBI agents on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation is expected to further divide hostile factions on the nation's second largest reservation.

FBI agents Jack Coler and Ronald Williams were shot near the village of Oglala on June 26. The FBI has launched a massive search for the suspects, called by some law enforcement authorities as a para-military band of well-trained guerrillas.

Reservation officials, tribal members and law enforcement officers say the shootings will further exacerbate relations between the supporters of the American Indian Movement — AIM — and Oglala Sioux Tribal Chairman Richard Wilson, who generally shuns the goals of the sometimes militant AIM.

The 3,150-square-mile reservation is a national stronghold of AIM activity. AIM leader Russell Means narrowly lost a 1974 tribal election against Wilson for control of the reservation.

Opinion on the reservation is split as to whether the 16 persons suspected of shooting the agents were AIM members or sympathizers.

FBI and tribal law enforcement authorities on the reservation say there is no evidence linking any AIM members to the shootings.

Wilson said he believes the persons who killed the agents are connected with AIM and will turn most reservation residents against the organization, signaling AIM's death knell.

"I think they were turned away long before this shooting," said Wilson, who has announced plans to seek a third term as tribal chairman. "If it doesn't turn them away, they are darn sick people."

AIM leader Vernon Bellecourt denies Wilson's allegations.

"Wilson's trying to cover up for his poor leadership," Bellecourt said. "It's been a policy of the BIA and Dick Wilson to blame such things on the American Indian Movement."

Bellecourt said while the death of the agents is unfortunate it may have some long-term benefit in awakening white Americans to the problems faced by Indians.

"It took the killing of two white men before we got the broad awareness and attention from white America that we've had since the shooting. Now that we've got their attention, they may begin to recognize our problems."

BIA Special Agent Kent Sayers said he has received no indication that AIM members were involved in the shooting, but he said, "The shootings are going to affect everybody on the reservation."

Factionalism on the reservation is "probably one of the major causes of our problems," Sayers said.

AIM's goals include a broad restructuring of what it says is a white-dominated BIA and U.S. recognition of treaties earlier abrogated by the government. However, Wilson and his followers generally support tribal and BIA administration of the reservation.

Many reservation residents depend on the tribe and the BIA for a significant share of their incomes, coming from lease payments from white ranchers and government subsistence programs controlled by the tribe and the BIA.

Reservation officials say there is no accurate estimate of how many of the reservation's 12,500 inhabitants hold allegiance to either AIM or Wilson's group. The officials say that while most of the reservation's population do not have close ties to either group, a significant number do sympathize with one of the loosely knit organizations.

Sayers said part of the trouble is that some AIM sympathizers believe the law officers on the reservation are aligned with Wilson's followers.

"We are trying to shake that image," said Sayers. "As far as I'm concerned, everybody on this reservation is equal and entitled to the same protection under the law."

FBI spokesman Clay Brady said the FBI wants to remain apart from reservation factionalism.

However, court records released since the occupation of Wounded Knee indicate that the FBI has paid at least one person to infiltrate AIM.

"We don't want to get involved in any type of political situation. We don't want anyone to think we're taking sides. If anything, we want to be in the middle," said Brady.

Why The American Revolution?: Freedom

DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

One of the hardest things the founding fathers had to do was explain the American Revolution. The answer they finally came up with was the only one that works, even today. They were fighting for liberty.

Two hundred years ago today the Continental Congress issued a declaration explaining why they were doing such an outrageous thing as rebelling against fellow Englishmen and the mightiest empire on earth.

"We have counted the cost of this contest and find nothing so dreadful as voluntary slavery," wrote Thomas Jefferson, the liberal intellectual leader of the Congress, and John Dickinson, the brilliant conservative.

"Honor, justice and humanity forbid us tamely to surrender that freedom which we received from our gallant ancestors, and which our innocent posterity have a right to receive from us," Congress said in the Declaration of the Causes and Necessities for Taking Up Arms, adopted on July 6, 1775.

"We cannot endure the infamy and guilt of resigning succeeding generations to that wretchedness which inevitably awaits them, if we basely entail hereditary bondage upon them."

But what does it all mean? On the surface this overblown rhetoric is absurd. Americans were not an oppressed people. In fact they were doing pretty well. Their economic opportunities and personal liberties were among the best in the world.

Yet, here were prosperous Yankees talking about bondage and slavery, as if a British bayonet was held at every American throat.

The simple truth is that the Americans who formed our nation took their liberties that seriously. A threat to their dreams was as offensive as a thrust at their persons.

Two great forces drove the American to revolution long before taxes and tea became an issue. The first was the kind of life they found in the new world.

From the first English settlers at Jamestown and Plymouth to the embattled farmers at Concord bridge, Americans had learned to work or starve, sink or swim, in a bountiful but dangerous wilderness.

It made them self-reliant, suspicious, and excruciatingly independent. Nobody pushed Americans around without a fight. In 1775 the British pushed and got a fight.

And America was the land of economic opportunity for all its people.

The turning point in the developing struggle was a long war between the empires of Britain and France. It ended in 1763 and left the British supreme over most of the North American continent.

Several things happened because of this war that started the American colonies toward separation. The first was their own perfidy.

Some Americans built fortunes supplying both armies at the same time. This prompted an indignant British government to tighten long dormant trade restraints.

And when the fighting was over, it was a whole new world. For the first time since the first Englishman landed, there was no French threat, no Spanish threat, no Indians stirred up by European provacateurs.

The lush, virgin lands across the Appalachians beckoned to this generation of Americans like California gold did to another. But British policy and the vagaries of a world economy entering the industrial age threw up blockades.

First the British, seeking to avoid Indian trouble and to simplify administration, drew a line down the Appalachian ridge and told the colonists not to step across it.

The order ran counter to the colonists' desire for physical freedom. It also put restraints on the economic prospects of Americans, from the biggest land speculator to the smallest sodbuster looking for a better farm. And it came at a time when worldwide depression made the need for new opportunity greater than ever.

The Depression stunned Americans and made them resentful of threats to the American dream of security for anyone willing to work for it.

And there was a war debt, which the British wanted the American colonists to help pay. They also thought it was about time they brought some order to the commerce of the newly secured empire.

These efforts, in the context of deepening suspicion and resentment in America, were the immediate cause of the Revolutionary War.

Parliament and King did not actually ruin American business and put an end to opportunity. But for more than a decade Americans feared this would happen. And it came close enough to happening to justify their fears.

To be free meant more to the colonists than abstract politics. It meant freedom from all kinds of restraints, potential or actual. It meant freedom of movement, freedom to advance.

So the issue of the American revolution really was freedom — as each colonial American defined it for himself.

Japan's Prime Minister Says Summit Meet With Ford Of Vital Importance

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Takeo Miki said Saturday his summit meeting next month with President Ford is of vital importance because of the "drastic changes" in Asia.

Miki, replying to questions during a nationally televised news conference, said that his talks with Ford "will help contribute not only to U.S.-Japan relations but to the world as a whole."

The Japanese leader cited the situation on the Korean peninsula, the "necessity of cooperation" between industrialized nations and the importance of dialogue between resource producing and consuming countries as likely topics to come up during the Washington summit scheduled for early August.

The "drastic changes" in Asia he spoke of included the the U.S. withdrawals from Cambodia and South Vietnam following Communist victories in April.

The news conference followed the close of the 75th regular session of Parliament — the first for Miki as premier, where a number of his key legislative proposals were either rejected, shelved or passed in watered down versions.

Miki also suffered a setback in a public opinion survey published Saturday by the mass circulation Asahi Shimbun. His support dropped to 34 per cent, down from 45 per cent in an Asahi poll taken last December after he assumed the premiership.

Political observers noted that his trip to the United States, which precedes the October visit by Emperor Hirohito, may be used by Miki to strengthen his tenous hold on the faction-ridden, ruling Liberal Democrats.

"During my visit to the United States, I hope we can understand each other better and recognize the world issues," he said.

But before leaving for Washington, Miki said he will send Foreign Minister Kiichi Miyazawa to confer with officials in Seoul because the "security of South Korea and that of Japan are closely interwoven."

Turning to China and the drawnout negotiations over a peace and friendship treaty, he said the accord could be hammered out once "both sides come back on the right track from technical details."

One of these details is the "anti-hegemony" clause insisted on by the Chinese and believed aimed at the Soviet Union. The Japanese don't want to upset their relations with Moscow and have opposed the Chinese wording of the clause.

"Hegemony means power politics," Miki said. "Therefore, to refuse hegemony is one basic rule for peace. It does not imply any certain country and I believe Chinese leaders know what I mean."

New Delay Seen In Parr's Trial

HEBBRONVILLE (AP) — Although just about everything that can happen to delay a trial has happened, the ouster of trial of suspended Duval County Judge Archer Parr continues at a slow pace.

Another delay is expected Monday when Parr, who has not attended the trial, is to appear in San Diego for a deposition hearing. Defense lawyer Marvin Foster has said he will not produce Parr for the deposition hearing although Dist. Atty. Arnulfo Guerra says he will proceed with the deposition.

Parr, who has been county judge for the past 16 years, was temporarily suspended from office March 24 by District Court Judge O. P. Carrillo after Guerra filed a civil suit against Parr.

The suit, filed in behalf of Duval County Grand Jury Foreman Jose R. Nichols, noted Parr's federal perjury conviction and accused him of acts of official misconduct and conflict of interest.

The trial has moved so slowly that Judge Carrillo told the jury of nine men and three women he plans to start holding night sessions beginning Monday. He asked the jurors for suggestions concerning the hours for the night sessions. Some may welcome the night sessions because of the stifling heat in the un-airconditioned courtroom.

The trial also has been delayed by frequent and often heated legal arguments between Foster and Guerra. Another delay came one day when the court reporter's wife became ill and had to undergo surgery. Another time, a witness did not understand the judge's instructions and reported to testify more than an hour late. The power failed one afternoon, causing the judge to send the jury home almost an hour early.

A truck ran into an automobile parked outside the courthouse one afternoon. Jurors, hearing the crash, started looking out the windows to see whose automobile had been damaged. The judge called a recess. It turned out the automobile belonged to a newspaper and had been parked there by a reporter.

The heat in the courtroom has slowed the pace of the trial. Judge Carrillo usually calls a recess about every hour in the afternoon to give the jurors a break from the heat and to wake up.

Wiping sweat from his face, one juror commented, "We need an air conditioned courtroom. A month ago, I wouldn't have been in favor of the county spending the money, but now I am."

Rattlesnake Hunt Draws 10,000 Plus

EMPORIUM, Pa. (AP) — More than 225 persons ranging in age from 14 to 77 and from as far away as California and Florida, registered Saturday for the 7th Annual Cameron County Rattlesnake Hunt.

Only one woman, Jan Buksar, 25, registered.

The two-day hunt ends today. Preliminary eliminations were held Saturday. A crowd of more than 10,000 was expected, according to Malcolm Kitchen, the hunt chairman.

Prizes will be awarded for the most rattlesnakes caught, largest, smallest, and the one with the most rattles.

NAACP Avoids Possible Battle With Labor Unions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Avoiding a possible floor fight with allies of organized labor, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has called for government guarantees that newly hired or promoted minority workers will not bear the brunt of job cutbacks.

The petition came in a compromise resolution adopted Friday at the close of the civil rights group's 66th annual convention.

It called on federal and state agencies, the courts and Congress "to act to assure that blacks and other minorities and women who have secured employment as a result of equal employment legislation not be deprived of the benefits of that employment under the last-hired, first-fired theory."

Before adopting the resolution, the 3,550 delegates deleted stronger language, including a call for elimination of any seniority system which works against minority employment unless such a system is job-related or is "justified by business necessity."

Frenchmen consume an average of 32 ounces of mushrooms each year.

Hit-And-Run Driver Comes Back Again

DETROIT (AP) — A hit-and-run motorist struck a woman pedestrian on a city street, then turned around and struck a man who came to her aid, an eyewitness told police. Both were killed.

Wayne County Medical Examiner Werner Spitz, Wayne County medical examiner, listed the deaths of Susie Gadson, 49, and Leo Flack, 59, as a double homicide.

Police said Mrs. Gadson was walking on the city's East Side Thursday night when she was hit by the auto.

Flack stopped his car to help Mrs. Gadson but the hit-and-run vehicle returned and struck Flack, witnesses told police.

Police said the driver escaped.

A witness said the car seemed to speed up before impact and Mrs. Gadson was flung about 80 feet. Flack then stopped his car in the middle of the street.

He was kneeling over Mrs. Gadson and apparently did not see the dark colored, late-model car as it made a U-turn about 200 yards away and approached him at about 60 miles per hour, police said.

Gulf Oil Canada Official Addresses AA Convention

DENVER (AP) — The chairman of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. says part of today's "required corporate responsibility" is a constructive policy in dealing with employes who have a serious drinking problem.

Addressing the 40th anniversary convention of Alcoholics Anonymous on Friday, C.D. Shepard said that in 1967 his company dropped the old policy of firing any employe whose excessive drinking caused deterioration in his work or threatened the safety of others.

During the intervening eight years the firm has developed a program which views most cases of alcoholism as a health problem.

He said the firm draws a distinction between social drinking and problem drinking which jeopardizes work and health, and urged employes to seek medical help immediately.

"Once an employe is made aware, by reading our policy, that alcoholism is a health problem just as respectable as diabetes or other illnesses . . . and takes the step of visiting any of our health centers, he or she is invariably guided to AA" he said.

More than 17,000 members of AA are registered for a three-day convention in Denver this weekend. They claim 29 homelands.

Stroke Victim Fetes Christmas On July Fourth

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Instead of hearing firecrackers on the Fourth of July, Tommy Tiller heard "Silent Night."

When the 60-year-old Tiller suffered a stroke last Dec. 20, his family refused to break the tradition of family holiday gatherings by celebrating without him.

They waited for his recovery. The Christmas tree stayed up. The wreath remained on the door. The presents were unopened.

On Friday, his three children and five of six grandchildren gathered to open gifts in traditional Christmas spirit.

"This is wonderful," said Tiller, now confined to a wheelchair.

A daughter-in-law, Judy Tiller, said the children had not minded the wait.

"And I think it's been a good lesson for all of us," she said. "After all, Christmas is a time when you are supposed to think of others."

"I started Aamco Transmissions with $3000 and made hundreds of men wealthy. Now I have an even better idea."

That's Anthony A. Martino talking. He started Aamco on a shoestring and built it into an empire. Today, he heads up another business with even greater potential; auto painting and refinishing. The potential is greater because practically every car will someday need repainting and body work. And there's no company in the field with a quality national image. The market is virtually untapped.

As the owner of MAACO Auto Painting Center, you'll have a substantial cash flow from the very first week you're in business, and every week after that, with net profit yield as high as 25%. And we have the books and cash receipts to prove it. That's because auto painting represents one of the largest, self-perpetuating, yet virtually untapped businesses in the auto industry.

After completion of MAACO's training program, you will be an expert in the management of every aspect of your business. Prior experience is not an advantage.

We invite serious inquiry — just mail the coupon below. Right now is the time to act.

Mrs. Lambert To Coordinate New Program

Mrs. LaDoyce (Gloria) Lambert has been employed by Family Services of Midland as coordinator of the new Big Brothers and Big Sisters program.

Big Brothers and Big Sisters is a preventative program designed to meet the needs of boys and girls who live in one-parent homes.

By providing one man-one boy or one woman-one girl relationships, the organization seeks not only to prevent and correct problems the boys and girls may be experiencing but also to promote their healthy growth and development.

Mrs. Lambert recently returned from Denver, where Big Brothers of America and Big Sisters International held their first concurrent annual meeting.

Larry Mahan Wins Cody Stampede Event In Wyoming

CODY, Wyo. (AP) — Larry Mahan, six times the national all-around cowboy, won that title at the three-day Cody stampede which ended Friday night.

Mahan, of Dallas, didn't win an event but placed in saddle bronc, bareback and bull riding to take home the top paycheck of $1,093.

Tom Elliot of Colorado Springs, Colo., wrestled a steer in 4.0 seconds, only two-tenths of a second off the national record, and won that event to pick up $980.

Other winners in the $20,000 rodeo were: Bareback—Paul Mayo, Lewisville, Tex., 80, $619.

Calf roping—Richard Stowers, Madill, Okla., 9.7 seconds, $900.

Saddle bronc—Ivan Daines, Innisfail, Alberta, Can., 75, $713.

Bull riding—A. J. Swain, Cowiche, Wash., 75, $866.

Team roping — H. P. Evetts, Hanford, Calif., and Gerald Camarillo, Oakdale, Calif., 7.6 seconds, $514 each.

Girl's barrel racing—Jimmie Gibbs, Valley Mills, Tex., 17.8 seconds, $233.

Miniature Train Derails, Hurting 17

FORT WORTH (AP) — A miniature train at Forest Park derailed Friday, injuring 16 passengers after its operator suffered a stroke.

The engineer, C. V. Egan, 79, was in serious condition at a Fort Worth hospital. Other riders on the train were less seriously injured.

Raymond Hames, president of Forest Park Rides Inc., called the incident "the worst accident we've had in the 50 years my family has been operating rides and amusement facilities in the park."

Police and witnesses said the train picked up speed while crossing a bridge across the Trinity River and crashed through a chain link fence.

One passenger said Egan was "bent over" when the train began crossing the bridge. Another witness said Egan "straightened up" in the train as it approached a curve and "began frantically moving, jerking levers and throwing switches, trying to stop it."

Police said Egan suffered severe cuts and possible broken bones in addition to the stroke.

A total of 40 people were on board the $25,000 amusement park train.

10% to 50% off on all Merchandise

SUPER SAVINGS ON FINE FURNITURE . . . We have combined our mid-year storewide sale with the final month of our remodeling program. We are scheduled to have our Grand Opening the first week in August. We still have lots of odds and ends, manufacturers discontinued groups, many one of a kind floor samples, some things we have just looked at too long. This is the final push to move all of this fine furniture at greatly reduced prices. Only a small charge for delivery is made if you do not choose to take purchases with you.

SOFA SALE

Every sofa on our sales floor reduced to clear with discounts up to $200 and more.

We're desperate! Over 25 sofas are in our way on our sales floor. The paperhangers, electricians and carpet installation crews want them out of their way so work on our remodeling can continue to completion by August 1. You'll find the style, the color and the design to please you and the prices are lower than they will ever be! This is the final month from our remodeling and we have combined this with our semi-annual sale . . . bringing you the best furniture values in West Texas.
