Peace can't come quick enough for lawmakers

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The 11-week NATO bombing campaign in Yugoslavia intensified Tuesday as a tentative peace deal was coming together, but observers of the ongoing conflict have doubts about the worthiness of U.S. involvement in the matter.

For one thing, headstrong Yugoslavian president Slobodan Milosevic, an indicted war criminal, remains in power.

Midland College historian Bill Coombes noted that what "Milosevic is doing or has done is just a travesty.

"But I can't see that the actions that we have taken through NATO have accomplished anything that is particularly good," Coombes said of the airstrikes. "And now we are going to make an agreement with a guy that we proclaim to be a war criminal? That seems a little strange. You shake hands with a guy and declare some kind of peace agreement. On the other hand, you've got an indictment for the guy for war crimes. It's just strange."

As an end to the conflict seemed almost assured, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm said that "Peace cannot come a moment too quickly because this is a war that should not have been fought.

"The president has never made a convincing case for putting the lives of Americans at risk in a war where we have no vital national interest at stake," Gramm said in a statement.

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, said on Tuesday that he is "hopeful that we are at the beginning of the end" of hostilities in Kosovo.

"We don't know the final outcome, but we do know that the Clinton Administration has failed in its goal to halt the exodus of refugees" out the Serbian province of Kosovo.

Wild on the PRAIRIE

"I saw a jaguarundi." Several West Texans have made the claim in the past year.

"I saw a black cat a little bigger than a bobcat."

As one of several disseminators of local natural phenomena, should the Sibley Nature Center inform the public that jaguarundis live here?

Professional scientists would say the arrival of jaguarundis is only

Bobcat finds way into Midland neighborhood

By Jennifer Cherry

An unusual visitor was at Shannon Garland's Midland home Tuesday morning. When she looked out of her living room window, Mrs. Garland spotted a bobcat in her driveway.

"I went in to raise the shades about 8:30 a.m.," she said, "then I saw a bobcat in the driveway."

Mrs. Garland's mother, Gail Parham, said the bobcat was simply walking in front of the house. Although Mrs. Parham said no one in the household had ever spotted the animal before, Coy Willis, director of Midland Animal Control, said there had been reports of a bobcat in the area.

"We never get a report in time to catch one (a bobcat)," Willis said.

This time it was different.

Teens skeptical of restrictions on R-rated films

By Matt Josefy

For American teens, going to the movies may soon bear a striking similarity to buying a pack of cigarettes.

Teens are going to be asked to show proof of age upon their attempts to purchase tickets for movies like "The Matrix," "The 13th Floor," "Instinct" or "Go."

The National Association of Theater Owners on Tuesday agreed to support President Clinton's desire to check identification at R-rated movies, which Clinton pledged in a May 15 radio address.

The resolution would apply to the 65 percent of movie screens in the United States which belong to the association.

The R rating is intended to designate "Restricted: under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian."

Ratings have been assigned by the Motion Picture Association of America since 1968.

But how often and how effectively is the ban on teenage admission to R-rated movies enforced?

Until now, enforcement of the policy has always been in the hands of each individual theater, Hollywood Theatres Tall City 10 manager Mitchell Carlisle said.

"If they look underage, we've always carded in the past," Carlisle said. "Usually you can recognize, but of course there are exceptions" who slip through the cracks.

The theater's employees "do our best to be fair," he added.

Carlisle said he believes that the responsibility is not solely in the hands of the theater.

Delegation in Guyana puts energies into orphanage

Editor's Note: This is the third in a series of articles by staff writer Jeff Stevens who is in Guyana with a group of Midlanders working on a Christmas in April project. The following are his thoughts and reflections of the country.

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

NEW AMSTERDAM, Guyana — Monday was the first day we spent an entire day working on our projects and there seems to be no escape from the heat. No escape for some of my companions anyway. Bobby Trimble, founder of Christmas in April, and Rev. Bob Walter are staying at the government house.

Stevens

The fringe benefit of their accommodations is they have a maid who will wash their clothes everyday. But they don't have any air conditioning, making it hard to sleep at night.

Barbara Avakian, Dennis Lawless and I are staying at the Parkway Hotel. We have air conditioning but no hot water.

Running water isn't a popular item here even in the nicer homes. The common method of getting water into the home is to place a tank on a tower, letting gravity pull water into the home.

The interesting thing is that the homes have wells and the wells are used to pump water into the tanks which then drain water into the homes.

At home, of course, we would just pump the water directly into the home. One reason for doing this is that the electrical system is not very reliable here.

According to Cristin Fitzgerald, a Canadian student doing volunteer work in Guyana, the city is subject to blackouts once every two days, resulting in no power for the rest of the day. Our party only has noticed small glitches because each of our accommodations have back-up generators.

The rest of our party are staying in guest homes belonging to influential businesses in town. They get air conditioning, hot water and maid service.

Our party is divided among different places, which has caused some problems in transportation. This is especially true considering four vehicles are needed at four different locations to transport 16 people to a dinner party every night or to lunch everyday.

The problem is not poor planning, however. It's just that there is no place in New Amsterdam large enough to accommodate our group in one place.

Logistics are not the only problem we are experiencing.

Our main project, the bus terminal, is not going according to plan. We're supposed to finish that project before we leave Thursday but

G-8 nations clear hurdle to peace in Balkans

COLOGNE, Germany (AP) — The United States, Russia and six other nations agreed Tuesday on a draft U.N. resolution that could settle the conflict with Yugoslavia and send international troops under NATO command to Kosovo within days.

"We have made a very decisive step toward peace," said German Foreign Minister Joschka Fischer, hailing the breakthrough after two days of talks during which Russia dropped its major objections.

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic should take the cue and direct his military commanders to agree on a rapid phased withdrawal of all 40,000 Serb troops from Kosovo.

"Unless he is totally tone deaf he should be getting the message it's time to withdraw," Albright said after the draft was approved by the United States, Russia, Britain, Canada, France, Germany, Italy and Japan at a foreign ministers conference here.

After the meeting, Albright flew to Brussels, Belgium, to brief NATO Secretary-General Javier Solana, who said the stalled military talks in Macedonia would resume soon.

"We are putting the pieces into place," Albright said in a joint news conference with Solana. "It all depends on compliance, verifiable compliance."

The text was immediately sent to the United Nations, where the Security Council held its first meeting on the draft. The United States and its NATO partners are pushing for quick adoption but China is questioning key points.

British Foreign Secretary Robin Cook said a Serb withdrawal and a suspension of the bombing could occur "in the next few days." But he stressed the sequence must begin with Yugoslav military commanders resuming their talks with NATO officers and agreeing to a phased withdrawal.

After the Serb troops quit Kosovo, and their departure is verified as part of a wholesale pullout, the bombing would be suspended and the U.N. resolution put to a vote in the Security Council, Cook said.

In Washington, President Clinton said implementation was the key to ending the 11-week conflict. "A verifiable withdrawal of Serb forces will allow us to suspend the bombing and go forward with the (peace) plan," the president said.

"NATO is determined to bring the Kosovars home."

Russian Foreign Minister Igor Ivanov acknowledged his government had made concessions in drafting the resolution — Moscow had resisted a dominant role in peacekeeping for NATO — but he said "the goal is to bring an end to the war."

"If we can achieve that, as quickly as possible, we can be satisfied with this resolution," he said.

At the G-8 foreign ministers' meeting, Ivanov pledged Russia's support for the resolution, but later he suggested NATO must stop bombing before final U.N. approval. Ivanov also said participation of Russian peacekeepers still had to be negotiated.

Clinton, for the second straight day, telephoned Russian President Boris Yeltsin to try to push the peace plan forward. Clinton also dispatched his envoy, Deputy Secretary of State Strobe Talbott, to Moscow to work out the details of Russian participation in a Kosovo peacekeeping force.

Yeltsin "expressed satisfaction with the draft" resolution, the Kremlin press service said, although he, too, insisted on an immediate bombing halt. The main sticking point was Russia's resistance to having NATO in charge of the peacekeeping force and forming the backbone of the operation.

The foreign ministers agreed not to mention NATO in the text of the draft U.N. resolution; but in an attached annex, they said a "substantial NATO participation must be deployed under unified command and control."

Albright, a former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said legally "annexes were as much a part of the document as the text itself."

NATO keeps up bombings, pressure on Milosevic

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — NATO warplanes attacked targets across Serbia on Tuesday in a thunderous warning to President Slobodan Milosevic to implement a Kosovo peace plan, as eight major powers unanimously signed off on a text meant to secure U.N. blessings for the agreement.

NATO officials in Macedonia announced that talks would resume Wednesday night between British Lt.-Gen. Michael Jackson and Yugoslav generals at Kumanovo — the border town where they broke off early Monday after details of the peace draft upset the Yugoslavs.

NATO intensified its air campaign, flying 658 sorties over the past 24 hours, alliance spokesman Jamie Shea said — a 50 percent increase over the level since Milosevic accepted a peace proposal last Thursday that he subsequently refused to carry out.

Serb media said one person was killed by a missile in Novi Sad, the country's second-largest city, and NATO also hit targets near Belgrade, the capital, for the first time in days.

About 100 missiles hit Kosovo province, according to media reports.

The Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe said Serb shelling of Albanian villages continued overnight, with shells exploding in the village of Llugaj, about 7 miles over the border — one of the conflict's deepest cross-border shellings.

U.S. B-52 bombers pounded Serb positions for the third day near the key Albanian border point at Morini. There were unconfirmed reports of a large number of Yugoslav army casualties from the bombing.

Finnish President Martti Ahtisaari, a key figure in pushing Yugoslavia to accept the peace plan, arrived in Beijing on Tuesday to discuss the plan with the Chinese leadership.

Tanjug quoted a doctor in Novi Sad hospital, Djordje Janjic, as saying six people were brought to the hospital, including a seriously injured child. One person later died, Janjic said.

Slaying of Mexican TV host stirs outrage over crime

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The death of a television star in a fusillade of bullets has galvanized popular outrage over crime and insecurity in Mexico.

The motive for the slaying of Francisco "Paco" Stanley remained a mystery on Tuesday, and its professional style made it untypical of murders in the Mexican capital, where taxicab kidnappings, armed robberies and carjackings have long terrorized citizens.

But the fame of the victim and the brazenness of the noontime attack shocked many Mexicans, and prompted some to use it to attack the city's opposition party mayor, a candidate for president.

"With so much violence in the city, the government has ignored us. Anybody can carry a weapon in his hand just as he'd carry a cell phone," said Claudia Flores, one of thousands of people who lined up outside a funeral home Tuesday to file past Stanley's coffin.

"Nobody protects us. We are alone," she said. Many in line sobbed as they talked among themselves about their memories of the comedian.

Stanley was a sort of morning-show cross between Rosie O'Donnell and Ed Sullivan, a wisecracking host offering musical acts and silly skits.

"If I woke up pessimistic, he would tell one of his jokes, which were stupid but graceful," said Carmen Dolores Duran, 74, a retired school principal, clutching a rose against her gray suit.

Thousands attended the funeral later Tuesday at Mexico City's Spanish Cemetery. The 24 hours of developments since Stanley's death were covered almost nonstop on Mexico's two main television networks.

Police said a gunman with a .40-caliber automatic weapon fired 26 shots into Stanley's black Lincoln Navigator at noon Monday in front of one of the capital's most famous restaurants alongside its busiest freeway, the Periferico.

An insurance agent standing nearby also was killed and three people were hospitalized with gunshot wounds.

Mayor Cuauhtemoc Cardenas, whose 1997 election victory came on a wave of outrage at soaring crime in the city, quickly came under attack — turning the slaying into a possible political issue ahead of Cardenas' likely run for the presidency in July 2000 on the opposition Democratic Revolution Party ticket.

"Although the government of Cardenas camouflages the statistics of the fight against crime ... Paco's death is one more example against what the authorities say," Congressman Jorge Galvan of the National Action Party told the daily El Heraldo de Mexico.

"The responsibility is that of Cuauhtemoc Cardenas," charged Jorge Garralda, a newscaster on the TV Azteca network where Stanley worked.

"Somebody should resign and make way for people who are capable of protecting us," Mexico's best-known newscaster, Jacobo Zabludovsky, said on the rival Televisa network.

A prominent anti-crime lobbying group, Mexico United Against Crime, announced plans for a demonstration on Sunday.

Cardenas claims that his administration has reduced the wave of armed robberies, carjackings, thefts and kidnappings that have soared in recent years.

But figures are untrustworthy. Officials admit that many crimes are not reported due to lack of faith in authorities, and those victims who do report crimes sometimes find they are not treated seriously: an attempted kidnapping, for example, is classified as a lost document.

Cardenas at first seemed to minimize the Stanley killing, saying it "is one more case and it will be investigated as one more case. ... The city is well."

But as public outrage grew — and more fingers were pointed his way — his tone changed.

"There is no such thing as a 'common crime,'" Cardenas said in a paid statement placed in Tuesday newspapers, vowing "our most urgent priority" to solve the crime.

He accused "some news media" of "an act of great irresponsibility" in blaming his government for the crime and insisted that the federal government — run by the Institutional Revolutionary Party — also is responsible for fighting crime.

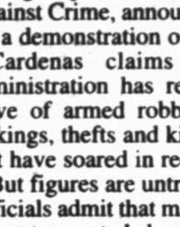

Stanley's show was not politically controversial and the motive for his slaying remained a mystery Tuesday. But that didn't stop the speculation.

"The style of the execution of Paco Stanley is that of a settling of accounts among drug-trafficking mafias," the newspaper Excelsior noted in a Page 1 editorial.

The newspaper Reforma said government intelligence reports earlier had linked Stanley to drug traffickers, but the city attorney general's office would not comment on the allegation.

At first officials suggested it might have been a bungled kidnapping attempt, but that theory soon disappeared as the investigation made clear it was a deliberate assassination.

Police on Monday detained at least two people whose car matched the description of that seen by witnesses. But they said Tuesday that none of the witnesses could identify the two and they were released.

CAT: Animal Control responds to many calls about wild animals

(From 1A)

The bobcat was first seen in the 3400 of Humble Ave. After the cat realized Mrs. Garland and her mother had spotted it, the cat ran to a large tree in the next door neighbor's yard. Mrs. Garland and Mrs. Parham were able to snap a few pictures of the large cat before it bolted up the tree.

"It was kind of exciting," Mrs. Parham said.

She and her daughter were not afraid. In fact, she said, the cat was more scared of them than they were of it.

A short time later, Mrs. Parham called Animal Control. It did not take them long to respond. One Animal Control officer tried to coax the animal out of the tree, but by the end of the bobcat's adventure, it took Marc Dimmig and three officers with a bucket-lift truck — loaned to them from the city's traffic department — to finally pull the unwilling cat from the tree.

"It was kinda upset," Dimmig said. "It hissed and growled. If he could have bitten or scratched me, he would have."

The cat was not much more than 1-year-old, Willis said. And it weighed about 25 pounds and was some 17 inches high.

After the use of a live trap failed, the bobcat was drugged, Willis said. But that only slowed the animal down.

Tranquilizers are only used as a last resort, Willis said, and the minimum amount of dosage is used on animals.

"We have a fear of overdosing them," he added.

Perhaps surprisingly, bobcat spottings are not all that unusual. "We get 20 to 25 reports a year on bobcats," Willis said.

Throughout Midland, Willis said Animal Control handles approximately 500 to 600 calls about wild animals in domesticated areas a year. Skunks are the most common cause of concern.

When calls are made, Animal Control acts quickly, Willis said. If nothing is found, officers strategically set "humane traps" for the animals.

The reason so many creatures from the wild are reported here is because Midland is surrounded by wild life. The young bobcat, however, was a little deeper into urban Midland than most that are reported.

Javelinas have also been spotted in the area. Dimmig and another officer responded to the first javelina report almost two months ago. The wild boar was found running down Midland Drive. Dimmig said the second javalena was found on Golf Course Road a few weeks ago. The various construction sites on the outskirts of Midland could be the reason for the wild animal sightings, Dimmig said. He was not sure about why the bobcat was so far into the city. He did say that his job was never boring, as in Tuesday's case, "You run into something new everyday."

Now the bobcat will stay at the Animal Control center in an outside cage for the next week while city Animal Control officials contact the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department to determine the animal's destiny. The only way the public can view the cat is from a distance, Dimmig said. There is a fence between the pen the cat is in and the public.

SPOT: Sibley documents changes taking place in local ecosystem

remotely possible. No specimens have been recorded anywhere near here. In the scientific community a jaguarundi researcher would be required to produce a specimen found in West Texas to be taken seriously. Otherwise, only photographic evidence clearly depicting a jaguarundi in unique local habitat is acceptable to establish a scientific record.

The role of the Sibley Nature Center is to help people learn what lives here. We are not professional scientific researchers, we collect data to help us gain a clearer picture of our local environment. When someone tells us that they have spotted an animal that is far from its normal range, we record the story, but do not treat it as scientific fact. The Sibley staff has been told by three different people about sightings of a jaguarundi. One of these individuals is known to our staff as a careful observer — a rancher who carries a field guide library of animals, plants, and birds in his pickup at all times.

Have jaguarundis moved into West Texas? Maybe. Could be. Who knows? Will it turn out to be like the thousands of sightings of black panthers? No specimen of a black panther has ever been found.

The natural world is a mystery. Humans are not all-seeing or all-knowing, and never will be. We create folk tales to help us understand the natural world. Anecdotes about black panthers can represent the mysteries unknowable to us. Folk tales are transformed into facts with the presence of specimens.

We love to hear stories people have about their encounters with the natural world. Often a story will illuminate a behavior of an animal and amaze us with a demonstration of that animal's intelligence.

Two years ago a homeowner called Sibley to inquire about what might have killed a box turtle. The turtle's head and legs had been sliced off. Could it be a very mean child, or could some wild animal do the damage? Our answer: It could be a child, or it could have been a raccoon or a fox. Soon after, the homeowner found more of her backyard turtles killed in the same fashion — one on her roof, and another lodged in the fork of a tree. She gathered up the remaining living turtles and placed them in a small enclosure with chicken wire over the top, and placed it where tracks would show. Raccoon tracks appeared the next morning. A trap was set with smelly anchovy paste as bait. The raccoon was captured and was transported thirty miles into the country.

As the Sibley staff began telling her story in our programs we learned that two other residents in the same neighborhood had lost turtles in a similar way. WHAT A SMART RACCOON! The raccoon had learned it could obtain an easy meal in many back yards. This story raised a question: How did the raccoon find the turtles at night? Box turtles usually find shelter at night, burrowing into mulch, under firewood stacks, under decks, or a den that they dig. Could the raccoon smell the turtles? Were the turtles catching bugs under an outside light after dark?

People have had a close relationship with the natural world throughout history. Our languages are enhanced by that close relationship. Think about some of our expressions: hog-wild, slippery as a snake, cunning as a fox. When a person interacts with the natural world the mind is stimulated. Humans instinctively seek understanding of their surroundings. When little data exists to form a full understanding, we often let our imaginations fill in the unknown. In this way folk tales are created.

When data is collected over time some of these unknowns become familiar. As facts are collected and analyzed, one result is learning about the breadth of human imagination. Folk tales are a wonderful human response to the unknown. Just as wonderful is the ability of the human mind to analyze factual information, thereby creating a more realistic image of the natural world. There is always another question to be answered when a person is actively observing the world around us.

WILD IMMIGRANTS

Many people have reported locations for the tree squirrels now found in town. At least half of Midland has been visited (or taken over) by tree squirrels. Some have caused damage to houses and are now considered pests. Other animals have moved to town as well, and the Sibley staff would like reports about their locations and habits. Green anoles appear to have become an established member of the urban forest ecosystem. Green anoles are brown when at rest, and bright green when active. It is presumed that these lizards arrived in Midland in potted plants sold at local nurseries. Mediterranean geckos arrived the same way. Both species might die out, however, if another long cold winter occurs.

Occasionally, a person finds a Green Tree Frog, which travels to new habitats the same way as the anole and gecko. A breeding population, however, does not seem to have become established. Residents neighboring Wadley-Barron Park have reported several species of turtles that were probably brought home by fishermen and released after being kept as pets. Anytime a strange creature is found, please let the staff at Sibley Learning Center know, so that we may continue our efforts to document the changes taking place in our local ecosystem.

Another immigrant is well known: the Argentine fire ant has now spread over most of Midland. They will survive wherever we water our landscapes and also in drainage ditches and on the banks of floodwater holding ponds. Fire ants do not seem to survive long in the pastures, possibly due to the dryness. The first fire ants arrived in old railroad ties used as landscape timbers and others probably arrived in sod or balled-and-burlapped trees.

A number of animals are extending their ranges on their own, helped by the development of the mesquite brushland that has replaced the old buffalo prairie. Porcupines, raccoons, opossums, white-tailed and mule deer, javelinas, ringtails, mountain lions, blue jays, Mississippi kites, cicada killer wasps, and others have found the evolving habitats of brushland, urban forests, and wastewater ponds to their liking.

Many species of wildflowers and garden weeds have also come to Midland. Almost one hundred species of plants currently found in Midland County were originally found only in other countries. Rescue grass (commonly called wild rye) came from South Africa, as did Johnson grass. Both were introduced over a century ago elsewhere in the United States for forage. North African Rue arrived on the mothballed World War II planes at Pyote, and then spread as far as Midland and Carlsbad. Mullein and Texas Paintbrush have only been found at the Midland International Airport.

Seeds travel unnoticed, hiding in packing boxes, the treads of car tires and tennis shoes, and dust or encrusted mud in or on almost everything transported. Several species of plants have been found only along railroad tracks. With so many Midlanders raising horses, goats, ostriches and other livestock, many seeds have arrived in hay and other feed.

Each year brings a new element to the diversity of the ecology of the southern Llano Estacado. What will be able to survive? What will become pests? What will be the next immigrant creature or plant? It is fascinating and exciting to keep watch!

DOUBTS: Lawmakers restate position against war in Kosovo

(From 1A)

The Russian-influenced NATO-Milosevic peace agreement was contingent on, among other factors, Serb military forces peaceably exiting Kosovo and allowing the ethnic Albanian refugees to return to Kosovo under the security of United Nations peacekeepers.

Smith, who was in Midland earlier this year, charged that President Clinton had violated the 1973 War Powers Act by authorizing American forces, without Congressional approval, to join in NATO airstrikes in an effort to stop the ethnic cleansing in Kosovo by Milosevic's Serb forces.

A subsequent lawsuit filed by 31 congressmen had accused Clinton of violating the War Powers Act, said Smith spokesman Allen Kay. Smith was not among the 31 congressmen who filed the lawsuit although Smith has been critical of Clinton's handling of the Kosovo situation. The lawsuit was dismissed Tuesday by Federal Judge Paul Friedman.

Becca Underwood, press secretary for U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, said that Combest has been steadfastly opposed to America's involvement in Kosovo.

"He has been opposed to the policy that got us there in the first place because he doesn't see a clear exit strategy," Ms. Underwood said.

In putting a test to going to war, Combest, she said, asks: " 'Is the operation in the U.S. national security interest? Are there clear and well-defined goals for the exit strategy? Would I send my own children to fight in this conflict?' "

U.S. Rep. Henry Bonilla, R-San Antonio, who recently visited the Balkan States, noted America's humanitarian effort, Operation Shining Hope, to bring food and shelter to the refugees.

However, the war in Kosovo is not part of America's interest, he said.

GUYANA: Delegation to hand over projects by noon today

as of Tuesday night, most of the Midland group had not done any work at the site.

The project was not ready on the Guyana side and the portion of the project Midlanders were to do is not ready.

To make up for the disappointment, we've been putting our energies into the Alpha Orphanage. The orphanage houses some 23 orphans and the conditions are deplorable. They have no phone, inadequate food and clothing and their sewer system is damaged and they can't fix it.

We came to paint and repair some windows but it won't be enough. Still, the orphans and the matron are very pleased with the assistance.

"I don't know how to say thanks," said the home's mistress, Doreen Boyer. "Thanks is such a small word."

After a hard day at the orphanage, we attended dinner at the Rose Hall Sugar Estate Monday night.

Dinner was very mild and similar to other dishes we've had while in Guyana — mostly chicken and lamb with a rice dish.

It was much less adventurous than the meal we had Sunday night at New Amsterdam Mayor Errol Alphonso's house. While there, we sampled Labaa — also known as Paca, a very large rodent found in South America — venison and alligator.

Life was less adventurous but more educational at the sugar plantation.

Sugar makes up 30 percent of Guyana's gross national product. Guyana Sugar Co. (Guysuco) is the major player in that game and because it's a government-owned business, it is the largest contributor to national government coffers.

Our host, J.B. Rhagurai, general manager of the largest estate in the Guysuco chain and one of the most powerful men in the region, was very appreciative of Midland's relationship and welcomed the delegation.

Most of Tuesday, the delegation spent finishing up at the orphanage. The group still had not began at the bus terminal or the elderly living facility and time is ticking down.

Our delegation is expected to hand the projects over by noon today before part of our group heads to Barbados and four others go tromping into the rainforest.

MOVIE: Some teens think enforcing rating is impossible

(From 1A)

"It starts with the people who make the movies. As a society we need to pay attention to what our children watch," Carlisle said.

Hollywood employee Kristie Blue, a teen-ager, said carding is part of the policy at the theater.

"We're supposed to and I always do, whether I'm selling tickets or letting people in," she said.

Another employee in the concession stand, Jamil Driscoll remembers "back in the day (before he turned 17), we used to get into R-rated movies all the time. Recently, they've started cracking down around here."

Nevertheless, the letter of the law and what actually happens do not always agree.

Midland 16-year-old Ian Miller said he has never been carded, in more than half a dozen trips to R-rated movies.

His friend Hunter Kennedy agreed with his friend's assessment.

"The only times they card are like at opening nights," he said. "They're scared to offend you. If they ask (for your ID) you just say 'I don't look 17?' and they let you in."

Matt Stevens, 16, who has been carded once in his life, thinks that trying to enforce the rating is virtually impossible.

"There's not really anyway that you can stop it without putting a whole police force at the movies," he said.

Besides the proclamation's enforceability, its value is also still subject to debate. Seventeen-year-old Beth Guzy questions the necessity of the requirement to card.

"We see stuff like that everyday anyway," she said.

Arriving refugees say Kosovo terror unabated

By Laura King
Associated Press

JAZINCE, Macedonia — Some wincing from bullet and shrapnel wounds, dozens of ragged Kosovo Albanian men sprawled exhausted in a grassy field a few miles from the border with Yugoslavia. For them, this was the end of the road out of Kosovo.

Even as NATO strategists plot their troops' entry into the southern Serbian province, the exodus from Kosovo continues, with the latest refugees to make their way out Tuesday telling of booby-trapped houses, mass graves and high mountain passes littered with corpses.

"The mountains are full of people, and conditions are terrible, terrible," said Ismet Nika, 47, whose feet were swollen and scabbed from the journey. "There were no small animals left in the forest, because people had already caught and eaten them."

This group — all men — had fled or been driven from their homes in southeast Kosovo weeks earlier, they said. Serbs forcibly separated some from their families; others said they feared endangering loved ones by staying together because as fighting-age men, they were prime targets for roving Serb paramilitary men.

Nearly all of those interviewed in the group of 135 who straggled over the border on foot before dawn near the village of Jazince told of surviving or witnessing killings of friends and neighbors at home or along the way.

"They didn't say a word — they just started shooting," said Muharem Nebihu, 28, who said masked paramilitary men fired without warning on him and four other men in the village of Vrbovac in central Kosovo last month. Shot in the buttocks, he lay unmoving among the bodies of the others and was left for dead, he said. At nightfall, he crawled away.

Others in the group recounted killings of what they said may have been more than 100 people in and around Vrbovac over a period of about a week. Afrin Becani said he ran when paramilitary men began shooting at him and a group of neighbors and relatives.

Later, from a hiding place in the woods, he said he watched the Serbs use bulldozers to bury a group of bodies, including that of his uncle.

"You can't imagine how it felt to see this," said Becani, a rangy 18-year-old with blazing pale-green eyes and matted hair. He said he and other villagers who kept watch from a distance saw Serbs dig up the bodies later and rebury them separately, in an apparent attempt to conceal evidence of mass killings.

As the men spoke, a small contingent of Red Cross workers arrived and began distributing bottled water and bright-yellow packets of food rations to them. Nebihu, the wounded man, tore weakly at the plastic ration bag, unable to open it.

A Red Cross worker saw him struggling and slit the bag with a pen knife for him. All around, the refugees began gnawing hungrily at fig biscuits and cold globs of lentil soup and pasta.

Reclining beneath a tree was 22-year-old Florin Shabani, who was wounded in a blast near the village of Duga when one of his companions tripped a wire and set off a mine as they walked along a gravel road earlier this month.

"I suddenly found myself a distance away, lying on my back," Shabani said, gingerly touching an inflamed-looking wound on his abdomen. He said he could feel shrapnel fragments beneath the skin.

As the refugees made their way toward Macedonia, sleeping hidden during the day and moving by night, hunger drove some out into the open or into abandoned houses to search for food, Nika recounted. In some houses, he said, Serbs left booby-traps attached to items like sacks of flour.

Along the way, the refugees said they saw dozens of bodies scattered over the rugged terrain. Nika said he and his companions once found a big pile of clothing, but no bodies nearby. In another eerie find, they came across a pile of burned corpses.

"We buried those bones and walked on," he said. "There was nothing else to do."

Some of the men said their families had already managed to cross into Macedonia. Others were worried about relatives left behind. The Red Cross said it believed there was a group of several hundred women and children on the other side of the frontier near where this group of men had crossed over.

About 300 refugees had made their way across the border the day before, pursued by what Macedonian officials said may have been fire from Serb paramilitaries. Before dawn Monday, four rocket-propelled grenades hit the hillside border farm belonging to the Kamare family, punching a hole in a barn roof, leaving a crater in the pasture and sending a shower of debris into an upstairs room that was empty at the time.

Jetmir Kamare, 20, said no one was hurt, but eight refugees who had been staying with the family were so terrified they insisted on moving out. The family was staying put, though.

"The idea is to scare us, but we're not leaving," he said.

CAT: Animal Control responds to many calls about wild animals

(From 1A)

The bobcat was first seen in the 3400 of Humble Ave. After the cat realized Mrs. Garland and her mother had spotted it, the cat ran to a large tree in the next door neighbor's yard. Mrs. Garland and Mrs. Parham were able to snap a few pictures of the large cat before it bolted up the tree.

"It was kind of exciting," Mrs. Parham said.

She and her daughter were not afraid. In fact, she said, the cat was more scared of them than they were of it.

A short time later, Mrs. Parham called Animal Control. It did not take them long to respond. One Animal Control officer tried to coax the animal out of the tree, but by the end of the bobcat's adventure, it took Marc Dimmig and three officers with a bucket-lift truck — loaned to them from the city's traffic department — to finally pull the unwilling cat from the tree.

"It was kinda upset," Dimmig said. "It hissed and growled. If he could have bitten or scratched me, he would have."

The cat was not much more than 1-year-old, Willis said. And it weighed about 25 pounds and was some 17 inches high.

After the use of a live trap failed, the bobcat was drugged, Willis said. But that only slowed the animal down.

Tranquilizers are only used as a last resort, Willis said, and the minimum amount of dosage is used on animals.

"We have a fear of overdosing them," he added.

Perhaps surprisingly, bobcat spottings are not all that unusual. "We get 20 to 25 reports a year on bobcats," Willis said.

Throughout Midland, Willis said Animal Control handles approximately 500 to 600 calls about wild animals in domesticated areas a year. Skunks are the most common cause of concern.

When calls are made, Animal Control acts quickly, Willis said. If nothing is found, officers strategically set "humane traps" for the animals.

The reason so many creatures from the wild are reported here is because Midland is surrounded by wild life. The young bobcat, however, was a little deeper into urban Midland than most that are reported.

Javelinas have also been spotted in the area. Dimmig and another officer responded to the first javelina report almost two months ago. The wild boar was found running down Midland Drive. Dimmig said the second javalena was found on Golf Course Road a few weeks ago. The various construction sites on the outskirts of Midland could be the reason for the wild animal sightings, Dimmig said. He was not sure about why the bobcat was so far into the city. He did say that his job was never boring, as in Tuesday's case, "You run into something new everyday."

Now the bobcat will stay at the Animal Control center in an outside cage for the next week while city Animal Control officials contact the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department to determine the animal's destiny. The only way the public can view the cat is from a distance, Dimmig said. There is a fence between the pen the cat is in and the public.

SPOT: Sibley documents changes taking place in local ecosystem

remotely possible. No specimens have been recorded anywhere near here. In the scientific community a jaguarundi researcher would be required to produce a specimen found in West Texas to be taken seriously. Otherwise, only photographic evidence clearly depicting a jaguarundi in unique local habitat is acceptable to establish a scientific record.

The role of the Sibley Nature Center is to help people learn what lives here. We are not professional scientific researchers, we collect data to help us gain a clearer picture of our local environment. When someone tells us that they have spotted an animal that is far from its normal range, we record the story, but do not treat it as scientific fact. The Sibley staff has been told by three different people about sightings of a jaguarundi. One of these individuals is known to our staff as a careful observer — a rancher who carries a field guide library of animals, plants, and birds in his pickup at all times.

Have jaguarundis moved into West Texas? Maybe. Could be. Who knows? Will it turn out to be like the thousands of sightings of black panthers? No specimen of a black panther has ever been found.

The natural world is a mystery. Humans are not all-seeing or all-knowing, and never will be. We create folk tales to help us understand the natural world. Anecdotes about black panthers can represent the mysteries unknowable to us. Folk tales are transformed into facts with the presence of specimens.

We love to hear stories people have about their encounters with the natural world. Often a story will illuminate a behavior of an animal and amaze us with a demonstration of that animal's intelligence.

Two years ago a homeowner called Sibley to inquire about what might have killed a box turtle. The turtle's head and legs had been sliced off. Could it be a very mean child, or could some wild animal do the damage? Our answer: It could be a child, or it could have been a raccoon or a fox. Soon after, the homeowner found more of her backyard turtles killed in the same fashion — one on her roof, and another lodged in the fork of a tree. She gathered up the remaining living turtles and placed them in a small enclosure with chicken wire over the top, and placed it where tracks would show. Raccoon tracks appeared the next morning. A trap was set with smelly anchovy paste as bait. The raccoon was captured and was transported thirty miles into the country.

As the Sibley staff began telling her story in our programs we learned that two other residents in the same neighborhood had lost turtles in a similar way. WHAT A SMART RACCOON! The raccoon had learned it could obtain an easy meal in many back yards. This story raised a question: How did the raccoon find the turtles at night? Box turtles usually find shelter at night, burrowing into mulch, under firewood stacks, under decks, or a den that they dig. Could the raccoon smell the turtles? Were the turtles catching bugs under an outside light after dark?

People have had a close relationship with the natural world throughout history. Our languages are enhanced by that close relationship. Think about some of our expressions: hog-wild, slippery as a snake, cunning as a fox. When a person interacts with the natural world the mind is stimulated. Humans instinctively seek understanding of their surroundings. When little data exists to form a full understanding, we often let our imaginations fill in the unknown. In this way folk tales are created.

When data is collected over time some of these unknowns become familiar. As facts are collected and analyzed, one result is learning about the breadth of human imagination. Folk tales are a wonderful human response to the unknown. Just as wonderful is the ability of the human mind to analyze factual information, thereby creating a more realistic image of the natural world. There is always another question to be answered when a person is actively observing the world around us.

WILD IMMIGRANTS

Many people have reported locations for the tree squirrels now found in town. At least half of Midland has been visited (or taken over) by tree squirrels. Some have caused damage to houses and are now considered pests. Other animals have moved to town as well, and the Sibley staff would like reports about their locations and habits. Green anoles appear to have become an established member of the urban forest ecosystem. Green anoles are brown when at rest, and bright green when active. It is presumed that these lizards arrived in Midland in potted plants sold at local nurseries. Mediterranean geckos arrived the same way. Both species might die out, however, if another long cold winter occurs.

Occasionally, a person finds a Green Tree Frog, which travels to new habitats the same way as the anole and gecko. A breeding population, however, does not seem to have become established. Residents neighboring Wadley-Barron Park have reported several species of turtles that were probably brought home by fishermen and released after being kept as pets. Anytime a strange creature is found, please let the staff at Sibley Learning Center know, so that we may continue our efforts to document the changes taking place in our local ecosystem.

Another immigrant is well known: the Argentine fire ant has now spread over most of Midland. They will survive wherever we water our landscapes and also in drainage ditches and on the banks of floodwater holding ponds. Fire ants do not seem to survive long in the pastures, possibly due to the dryness. The first fire ants arrived in old railroad ties used as landscape timbers and others probably arrived in sod or balled-and-burlapped trees.

A number of animals are extending their ranges on their own, helped by the development of the mesquite brushland that has replaced the old buffalo prairie. Porcupines, raccoons, opossums, white-tailed and mule deer, javelinas, ringtails, mountain lions, blue jays, Mississippi kites, cicada killer wasps, and others have found the evolving habitats of brushland, urban forests, and wastewater ponds to their liking.

Many species of wildflowers and garden weeds have also come to Midland. Almost one hundred species of plants currently found in Midland County were originally found only in other countries. Rescue grass (commonly called wild rye) came from South Africa, as did Johnson grass. Both were introduced over a century ago elsewhere in the United States for forage. North African Rue arrived on the mothballed World War II planes at Pyote, and then spread as far as Midland and Carlsbad. Mullein and Texas Paintbrush have only been found at the Midland International Airport.

Seeds travel unnoticed, hiding in packing boxes, the treads of car tires and tennis shoes, and dust or encrusted mud in or on almost everything transported. Several species of plants have been found only along railroad tracks. With so many Midlanders raising horses, goats, ostriches and other livestock, many seeds have arrived in hay and other feed.

Each year brings a new element to the diversity of the ecology of the southern Llano Estacado. What will be able to survive? What will become pests? What will be the next immigrant creature or plant? It is fascinating and exciting to keep watch!

Burr Williams is education director for Sibley Learning Center.

GUYANA: Delegation to hand over projects by noon today

as of Tuesday night, most of the Midland group had not done any work at the site.

The project was not ready on the Guyana side and the portion of the project Midlanders were to do is not ready.

To make up for the disappointment, we've been putting our energies into the Alpha Orphanage. The orphanage houses some 23 orphans and the conditions are deplorable. They have no phone, inadequate food and clothing and their sewer system is damaged and they can't fix it.

We came to paint and repair some windows but it won't be enough. Still, the orphans and the matron are very pleased with the assistance.

"I don't know how to say thanks," said the home's mistress, Doreen Boyer. "Thanks is such a small word."

After a hard day at the orphanage, we attended dinner at the Rose Hall Sugar Estate Monday night.

Dinner was very mild and similar to other dishes we've had while in Guyana — mostly chicken and lamb with a rice dish.

It was much less adventurous than the meal we had Sunday night at New Amsterdam Mayor Errol Alphonso's house. While there, we sampled Labaa — also known as Paca, a very large rodent found in South America — venison and alligator.

Life was less adventurous but more educational at the sugar plantation.

Sugar makes up 30 percent of Guyana's gross national product. Guyana Sugar Co. (Guysuco) is the major player in that game and because it's a government-owned business, it is the largest contributor to national government coffers.

Our host, J.B. Rhagurai, general manager of the largest estate in the Guysuco chain and one of the most powerful men in the region, was very appreciative of Midland's relationship and welcomed the delegation.

Most of Tuesday, the delegation spent finishing up at the orphanage. The group still had not began at the bus terminal or the elderly living facility and time is ticking down.

Our delegation is expected to hand the projects over by noon today before part of our group heads to Barbados and four others go tromping into the rainforest.

DOUBTS: Lawmakers restate position against war in Kosovo

(From 1A)

The Russian-influenced NATO-Milosevic peace agreement was contingent on, among other factors, Serb military forces peaceably exiting Kosovo and allowing the ethnic Albanian refugees to return to Kosovo under the security of United Nations peacekeepers.

Smith, who was in Midland earlier this year, charged that President Clinton had violated the 1973 War Powers Act by authorizing American forces, without Congressional approval, to join in NATO airstrikes in an effort to stop the ethnic cleansing in Kosovo by Milosevic's Serb forces.

A subsequent lawsuit filed by 31 congressmen had accused Clinton of violating the War Powers Act, said Smith spokesman Allen Kay. Smith was not among the 31 congressmen who filed the lawsuit although Smith has been critical of Clinton's handling of the Kosovo situation. The lawsuit was dismissed Tuesday by Federal Judge Paul Friedman.

Becca Underwood, press secretary for U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, said that Combest has been steadfastly opposed to America's involvement in Kosovo.

"He has been opposed to the policy that got us there in the first place because he doesn't see a clear exit strategy," Ms. Underwood said.

In putting a test to going to war, Combest, she said, asks: " 'Is the operation in the U.S. national security interest? Are there clear and well-defined goals for the exit strategy? Would I send my own children to fight in this conflict?' "

U.S. Rep. Henry Bonilla, R-San Antonio, who recently visited the Balkan States, noted America's humanitarian effort, Operation Shining Hope, to bring food and shelter to the refugees.

However, the war in Kosovo is not part of America's interest, he said.

MOVIE: Some teens think enforcing rating is impossible

(From 1A)

"It starts with the people who make the movies. As a society we need to pay attention to what our children watch," Carlisle said.

Hollywood employee Kristie Blue, a teen-ager, said carding is part of the policy at the theater.

"We're supposed to and I always do, whether I'm selling tickets or letting people in," she said.

Another employee in the concession stand, Jamil Driscoll remembers "back in the day (before he turned 17), we used to get into R-rated movies all the time. Recently, they've started cracking down around here."

Nevertheless, the letter of the law and what actually happens do not always agree.

Midland 16-year-old Ian Miller said he has never been carded, in more than half a dozen trips to R-rated movies.

His friend Hunter Kennedy agreed with his friend's assessment.

"The only times they card are like at opening nights," he said. "They're scared to offend you. If they ask (for your ID) you just say 'I don't look 17?' and they let you in."

Matt Stevens, 16, who has been carded once in his life, thinks that trying to enforce the rating is virtually impossible.

"There's not really anyway that you can stop it without putting a whole police force at the movies," he said.

Besides the proclamation's enforceability, its value is also still subject to debate. Seventeen-year-old Beth Guzy questions the necessity of the requirement to card.

"We see stuff like that everyday anyway," she said.

Arriving refugees say Kosovo terror unabated

By Laura King
Associated Press

JAZINCE, Macedonia — Some wincing from bullet and shrapnel wounds, dozens of ragged Kosovo Albanian men sprawled exhausted in a grassy field a few miles from the border with Yugoslavia. For them, this was the end of the road out of Kosovo.

Even as NATO strategists plot their troops' entry into the southern Serbian province, the exodus from Kosovo continues, with the latest refugees to make their way out Tuesday telling of booby-trapped houses, mass graves and high mountain passes littered with corpses.

"The mountains are full of people, and conditions are terrible, terrible," said Ismet Nika, 47, whose feet were swollen and scabbed from the journey. "There were no small animals left in the forest, because people had already caught and eaten them."

This group — all men — had fled or been driven from their homes in southeast Kosovo weeks earlier, they said. Serbs forcibly separated some from their families; others said they feared endangering loved ones by staying together because as fighting-age men, they were prime targets for roving Serb paramilitary men.

Nearly all of those interviewed in the group of 135 who straggled over the border on foot before dawn near the village of Jazince told of surviving or witnessing killings of friends and neighbors at home or along the way.

"They didn't say a word — they just started shooting," said Muharem Nebihu, 28, who said masked paramilitary men fired without warning on him and four other men in the village of Vrbovac in central Kosovo last month. Shot in the buttocks, he lay unmoving among the bodies of the others and was left for dead, he said. At nightfall, he crawled away.

Others in the group recounted killings of what they said may have been more than 100 people in and around Vrbovac over a period of about a week. Afrin Becani said he ran when paramilitary men began shooting at him and a group of neighbors and relatives.

Later, from a hiding place in the woods, he said he watched the Serbs use bulldozers to bury a group of bodies, including that of his uncle.

"You can't imagine how it felt to see this," said Becani, a rangy 18-year-old with blazing pale-green eyes and matted hair. He said he and other villagers who kept watch from a distance saw Serbs dig up the bodies later and rebury them separately, in an apparent attempt to conceal evidence of mass killings.

As the men spoke, a small contingent of Red Cross workers arrived and began distributing bottled water and bright-yellow packets of food rations to them. Nebihu, the wounded man, tore weakly at the plastic ration bag, unable to open it.

A Red Cross worker saw him struggling and slit the bag with a pen knife for him. All around, the refugees began gnawing hungrily at fig biscuits and cold globs of lentil soup and pasta.

Reclining beneath a tree was 22-year-old Florin Shabani, who was wounded in a blast near the village of Duga when one of his companions tripped a wire and set off a mine as they walked along a gravel road earlier this month.

"I suddenly found myself a distance away, lying on my back," Shabani said, gingerly touching an inflamed-looking wound on his abdomen. He said he could feel shrapnel fragments beneath the skin.

As the refugees made their way toward Macedonia, sleeping hidden during the day and moving by night, hunger drove some out into the open or into abandoned houses to search for food, Nika recounted. In some houses, he said, Serbs left booby-traps attached to items like sacks of flour.

Along the way, the refugees said they saw dozens of bodies scattered over the rugged terrain. Nika said he and his companions once found a big pile of clothing, but no bodies nearby. In another eerie find, they came across a pile of burned corpses.

"We buried those bones and walked on," he said. "There was nothing else to do."

Some of the men said their families had already managed to cross into Macedonia. Others were worried about relatives left behind. The Red Cross said it believed there was a group of several hundred women and children on the other side of the frontier near where this group of men had crossed over.

About 300 refugees had made their way across the border the day before, pursued by what Macedonian officials said may have been fire from Serb paramilitaries. Before dawn Monday, four rocket-propelled grenades hit the hillside border farm belonging to the Kamare family, punching a hole in a barn roof, leaving a crater in the pasture and sending a shower of debris into an upstairs room that was empty at the time.

Jetmir Kamare, 20, said no one was hurt, but eight refugees who had been staying with the family were so terrified they insisted on moving out. The family was staying put, though.

"The idea is to scare us, but we're not leaving," he said.

How much did NATO really win in Kosovo war?

Although the war in Kosovo may be nearing an end, NATO aircraft continue bombing and the evidence doesn't support President Clinton's assessment that the allied effort there has scored a victory.

Late last week, Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic reportedly had agreed to a peace proposal that included independence for the province of Kosovo. But NAT0 aircraft were to continue bombing on a reduced scale until Serbia's troops are out of Kosovo.

That was a wise move. In the first place, 72 days of NATO airstrikes didn't stop the "ethnic cleansing" being carried out by Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic's troops against Albanians in Kosovo. Even as Clinton and the NATO spokesmen were pushing the peace overtures, the exodus from Kosovo continued and will likely continue for weeks to come.

Even if many of the refugees could return to their homeland, the fears of facing the atrocities of past months again could be too strong. In adopted countries,they at least have the promise of a new and safe beginning. Back in Kosovo many of their loved ones may be gone now, victims of the ugly war carried out by Milosevic and his followers.

There certainly were accomplishments during the brief bombing war that Clinton can rightfully point to with pride. The NATO alliance held together and performed admirably. The air campaign was carried out without the need to send in ground troops, something Clinton had said he would not do. And world attention was drawn to Milosevic's "ethnic cleansing" campaign. That presssure probably did lead to his eventual capitulation.

But in Kosovo the horror of war and the NATO bombing has reduced to rubble much of the existence the refugees had known. How could the refugees rebuild their lives there?

That in itself is another of the reasons for looking skeptically at any assertion that the war is over now and everything will simply return to a good peaceful existence.

One is the fact that Milosevic and others indicted by a NATO war crimes tribunal remain in power. In that regard, a parallel can be drawn to the end of the Persian Gulf War and the fact that Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein was left in power there. He has continued to be a thorn in the side of U.S. leader's since that time.

The NATO bombing in the former Yugoslavia may have ended this assault by Milosevic, but as long as he remains in power how much has the NATO alliance really won?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 9, the 160th day of 1999. There are 205 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 9, A.D. 68, the Roman Emperor Nero committed suicide.

On this date:

In 1870, author Charles Dickens died in England.

In 1940, Norway surrendered to the Nazis during World War II.

In 1954, Army counsel Joseph N. Welch asked Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, "Have you no sense of decency, sir?" during the Senate-Army Hearings.

In 1973, Secretariat became horse racing's first Triple Crown winner in 25 years by winning the Belmont Stakes.

In 1978, leaders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints struck down a 148-year-old policy of excluding black men from the Mormon priesthood.

In 1980, comedian Richard Pryor suffered almost fatal burns at his San Fernando Valley, Calif., home when a mixture of "free-base" cocaine exploded.

In 1985, American educator Thomas Sutherland was kidnapped in Lebanon — he was released in November 1991 along with fellow hostage Terry Waite.

Ten years ago: China began reporting large-scale arrests in the wake of the crushed pro-democracy movement. The arrests coincided with the public reappearance of Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping, who was rumored to have been seriously ill.

Five years ago: In a bipartisan slap at President Clinton, the House of Representatives voted 244-178 for the United States to defy the international arms embargo on Bosnia.

One year ago: Three white men were charged in Jasper, Texas, with the brutal dragging death of James Byrd Junior, a black man. President Clinton unleashed a torrent of public works money, signing a $203 billion transportation bill.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Kosovo offers lessons for dealing with tyrants

Safire

The right thing was to place humanity's resistance to barbarism above national sovereignty. When a nation commits a mass atrocity against a segment of its own people, other nations have just asserted their right to intervene with force.

Although the Yugoslav agreement to withdraw seems to have come unglued, this is historic. International moral standards of conduct, long derided by geopoliticians, now have muscle.

We will not always be able to do the right thing everywhere. But we have set a precedent of doing the right thing somewhere, and once the right thing becomes possible, it tends to become probable.

What are the lessons the West is learning in trying to stop national criminality?

1. Never tell the criminals what you will not do. This is a sign of lack of confidence in your own people and your allies, and diminishes your ability to lead. "I do not intend to send ground troops" encourages the criminals and prolongs the war. Only when NATO ground forces became a live option, and when KLA guerrilla forces made a foray that flushed out Yugoslav tanks and made them targets for air destruction, did the criminals begin to talk. Our troop buildup must now begin apace.

2. When you decide to strike, strike decisively. As Napoleon told his hesitant generals, "If you are going to take Vienna, take Vienna." We should have turned out the lights in Belgrade and destroyed telecommunications the first day. Slow, steady escalation invites propaganda exploitation of "collateral damage," highlights mistakes like the Chinese Embassy destruction and in the long run costs lives.

3. Do not place a higher value on the lives of warriors than on the lives of civilians. Members of armed forces are trained and paid to risk their lives; civilians are not. By bombing from 15,000 feet, we avoided NATO casualties but failed for over two months to stop the murder, rape, pillage and mass deportation that was a mission of our military intervention.

4. Do not overestimate the courage of an army and paramilitary that kills the unarmed. Just as the vaunted Iraqi army, adept at gassing civilians, cracked and ran at the first sight of firepower, many Serbs who destroyed villages in Kosovo are apparently unwilling to die for Milosevic. Committers of atrocities are rarely brave professional soldiers and should not intimidate well-armed rescuers.

5. Remember that in any alliance, some allies will be more allied than others. Britain emerged as NATO's leader and France was stalwart. The United States is providing the air punch but temporized on a ground threat and unwisely insisted on a Russian intermediary. Germany, Italy and Greece are the weak sisters. Consensus should be sought, but no member of NATO should be able to veto the great majority's decision.

6. Do not let mistrust of the leadership's competence becloud faith in the rightness of a cause. Principled isolationists and pacifists of right and left are having their say, but most opposition to our Kosovo intervention comes from Republicans who feel Clinton blew too uncertain a trumpet and would settle for a weak compromise. McCain, Bush and Dole put backbone in Clinton policy while others fail to help.

7. Do not let the loser win. Until sensible Serbs decide to hand the Milosevic gang over to the Hague tribunal, no bridge should be rebuilt or embargo lifted. Allow no subversion of Montenegro and lock in autonomy for Hungarian Vojvodina. When withdrawal finally commences, the Kosovo Occupying Force must be commanded and controlled by NATO, not India or Sweden, and the European nation with the largest army — Turkey — should have a commensurate presence.

8. Don't try to mix oil and water in patrolling the peace. The returning KLA will be "demilitarized" (no tanks) but not disarmed; it will be seeking vengeance. The burden on peacekeepers will be to protect minority Serbs and to uphold a pretense of their sovereignty. Better to offer individual Serbs in Kosovo a relocation bonus to safety and to let Kosovo's victims have their independence.

The NATO-Yugoslav war is not yet over, but civilization is more civilized for having intervened to do the right thing. Next time we are more likely to do it the right way.

KATHLEEN PARKER

Bringing attention back to the boys

They just don't get it. Remember when women said that about men? Fast forward a decade or so. Here at the turn of the millennium, the roles are reversed. Women just don't get it.

They don't get that the war is over. They don't get that girls have more than equal the opportunities of boys. They don't get that boys more than girls are in trouble today. No matter how many new studies — or news magazine covers — attest to the tragedy that is The American Boy, they just don't get it.

During any given week, I hear from dozens of readers blasting me for betraying The Plight of Women and Girls. One in the past week accused me of really being a man. Another lamented my failure to understand that I'm a victim of the patriarchal society. A female student wrote asking for help on a paper about inequities in education for women. Oops, wrong columnist.

Alas, my hankie is dry. One need only be the parent of a son to know that boys are the underdogs these days. Absent a son, one need only watch the news or read any of a half-dozen new books that attempt to make a case for saving our boys.

Here's some of what you may have missed while taking your daughters to work:

Four boys are diagnosed as emotionally disturbed to every one girl; two boys are learning-disabled for every one girl; six boys are diagnosed with attention deficit disorder to every one girl; two teen boys die for every one girl. (Source: Dr. Michael Gurian's book, "The Wonder of Boys.")

Fifty-five percent of college students are female, according to a 1991 U.S. Department of Education report. Although women still lag behind men in earning doctoral degrees, more than half of all bachelor's and master's degrees are awarded to women.

On standardized tests administered to 17-year-olds, boys still outperform girls by three points in math and 11 points in science, according to the same DOE report. But girls outperform boys by 13 points in reading and 24 points in writing.

Girls outnumber boys in all extracurricular activities except for sports and hobby clubs, according to the 1996 Digest of Educational Statistics. That, too, is changing. By 1987, 26 percent of girls participated in high school athletic programs, compared to only 4 percent in 1972, according to a 1992 report by the Wellesley College Center for Research on Women.

More boys than girls drop out of school, according to the 1992 Digest of Educational Statistics. Boys are more likely than girls to be robbed, threatened or attacked. Just about every pathology, including alcoholism and drug abuse, hits boys harder.

It is true that girls are four to five times more likely than boys to attempt suicide, as reported by the Wellesley Report. It is also true, however, that boys succeed more often. Current figures show that 21.9 boys per 100,000 between the ages of 15 and 24 kill themselves; for girls in the same age group, the number is 4.2 per 100,000.

The rate of suicide among African-American adolescents, meanwhile, has increased 100 percent in the past 10 years, according to Dr. William Pollack, Harvard psychiatrist and author of "Real Boys: Rescuing Our Sons From the Myths of Boyhood."

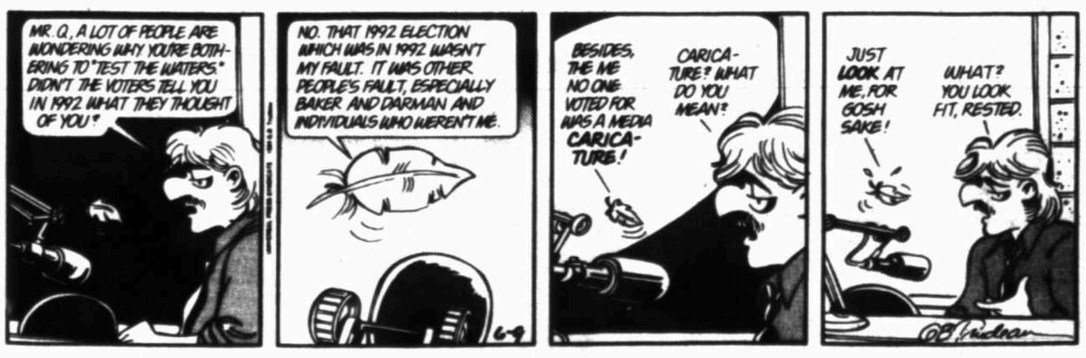

Finally, no one needs reminding who brings guns to school and kills classmates. No one needs reminding which kids were ceaselessly bullied and tormented. No one needs reminding that girls are more special than boys. If in doubt, just ask a boy.

Which suggests we (ital) do (end ital) need reminding that elevating one segment of society at the expense of others is always unfair, inevitably counterproductive, and in the absence of hope or remedy, often fatal, as recent events compel us to note.

It's time to get it.

Hey, Adolf, buddy, let's make a deal

So we made a deal with Milosevic in Yugoslavia. It's almost as good as the one we might have made with Adolf Hitler if he hadn't committed suicide in his bunker.

Buchwald

This is my scenario -- and no mail, please.

It's 1945. "Adolf, we know you're down there. If you sign a peace treaty we'll stop bombing Berlin."

"I want immunity for myself, Eva Braun and my German shepherd. And this means no war criminal trial."

"You're not in a position to bargain. You've killed millions of people, and the only reason we're even talking to you is we don't want to put ground troops into Europe."

"I want to redecorate my home in Berchtesgaden, and I want a numbered Swiss bank account, as well as the paintings Hermann Goring stole from Holland. Take it or leave it."

"Adolf, we're going to continue to bomb you until you get out of every country you are now occupying and admit you have done terrible things."

"I am holding a cupcake in my hand. It is full of poison. If you make me agree to your demands I am going to give this cupcake to my dog. Then I'm going to give another cupcake to Eva Braun. And I have a third cupcake for myself. So don't push me too far."

"Adolf, please be reasonable. The world wants peace and will do anything to get it. Just sign the paper we are sending down, and we'll let you tell your side of the story on the BBC."

"One more thing. I want Berlin to get the next Olympic Games."

"I don't see that as a problem."

LETTERS

Remarks distracted from accomplishments

EDITOR'S NOTE: Copies of this letter were included in the board packets for each of the MISD board members. It is reprinted here with the permission of Ms. Manulik.

After the adjournment of the May 28 special meeting of the school board, I spoke angrily and inappropriately to some of my fellow board members as well as to some others who attended the meeting. For that I am deeply sorry.

I also wish to apologize to Superintendent Joe Baressi, to our other fine administrators, and to our wonderful teachers. I sincerely regret that my remarks may have shifted the focus away from MISD's extraordinary accomplishments. Midland's public schools have completed another year of increasing academic and athletic success at a low cost per student that is unique among school districts of similar size in Texas.

Finally, to all Midlanders, whose strong support has contributed so greatly to the constantly increasing effectiveness of our excellent schools, please know that I am dedicated to the cooperation and effort necessary to achieve the goal that each of us desires: The very best education possible for every Midland child.

Three officers aquitted in racial brutality case; another convicted

NEW YORK (AP) — A white policeman was convicted Tuesday of holding down a Haitian immigrant in a stationhouse bathroom while another officer brutalized him with a broken broomstick. Three other officers were acquitted in the racially explosive case.

The split verdict came two weeks after Officer Justin Volpe — the central figure in the trial — pleaded guilty to torturing Abner Louima with the stick.

The case against five white officers heightened racial tensions between the Police Department and minorities and touched off protests. But it also brought about the collapse of the "blue wall of silence" that keeps police from testifying against each other.

The anonymous jury of eight whites, three Hispanics and one black deliberated 18 hours over three days in federal court.

Officer Charles Schwarz, 33, sat impassively as the jury convicted him of violating Louima's civil rights. Schwarz was immediately taken into custody as his supporters wept in the courtroom.

He and Volpe could get life in prison.

Volpe rammed a broomstick up Louima's rectum as he lay handcuffed in a bathroom on Aug. 9, 1997. Louima suffered severe internal injuries, including a ruptured bladder and colon, and spent two months in the hospital.

"I'll say something that I've never said before: The jury reached the wrong verdict," said Stephen Worth, Schwarz's attorney. "I'm sure they were under pressure to convict somebody, but they got it wrong."

'I'll say something that I've never said before: The jury reached the wrong verdict. I'm sure they were under pressure to convict somebody, but they got it wrong.'
— Stephen Worth, attorney

Louima, 32, was not in the courtroom for the verdict but said later that the decision fell short of what he had hoped for. Louima, who is suing the city for $155 million, added: "I am confident in the end that complete justice will be done in my case. I hope what comes out of my case is change."

Schwarz was acquitted of beating Louima inside a police car before the bathroom attack. Also acquitted in the alleged beating were Thomas Wiese, 35, and Thomas Bruder, 33.

"I did nothing wrong that night," Bruder said outside the courtroom, where he hugged Wiese. "I didn't do anything wrong. I treated Mr. Louima like a gentleman that night."

Louima had testified that Bruder came to his aid after the bathroom attack by taking off his handcuffs and helping him dress.

Sgt. Michael Bellomo, 37, was acquitted of lying to cover up the false arrests of Louima and another Haitian man, who were picked up during a melee outside a nightclub.

"I knew I didn't do anything wrong, and the jury saw that," Bellomo said outside.

Louima had provided some of the trial's most riveting testimony. He testified he was arrested, beaten and finally tortured in a filthy bathroom stall — an account bolstered by the testimony of four police officers credited with shattering the blue wall of silence.

The trial was interrupted on May 25 by Volpe's dramatic guilty plea. The stocky, square-jawed patrolman admitted brutalizing Louima in the mistaken belief that Louima had sucker-punched him outside the nightclub.

The Rev. Herbert Daughtry, a veteran civil rights activist, said he was not disappointed by the split decision.

"I've lived with worse than this," Daughtry said. "What it says, finally, is that this man told the truth. We keep on struggling and maybe next time justice will prevail."

Mayor Rudolph Giuliani and Police Commissioner Howard Safir praised the officers who stepped foward to testify against their colleagues. Giuliani said the police testimony "made possible the convictions."

Getting the word out on Y2K a delicate balance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Robert Bennett, the Senate's leading expert on the year 2000 computer problem, wants Americans to know that Y2K is an "unpredictable event that may have life-altering consequences."

But he says they must also know that Y2K "will not be the end of the world as we know it."

Striking a balance between those two messages has been a delicate task.

Critics say the government is sending out mixed messages and lulling Americans into a false sense of security by playing down the possible crises from computer systems that fail because they can't read the year 2000 date.

"They are erring more on the side of fear," said Liza Christian of the grass-roots Rogue Valley Y2K Task Force in Oregon. "Fear that the American people will act with a lack of intelligence, that they will take bizarre measures."

John Koskinen, head of the President's Council on Year 2000 Conversion, acknowledged that it hasn't been easy to convey their central theme, that national systems — power grids, telecommunication networks, air traffic — are safe, but people should be prepared for some localized, temporary disruptions.

"It is confusing, but we are trying to make it as clear as we can," he said.

His council has created 25 working groups to make sure industries around the country are talking to each other about the computer problem and recently began a nationwide campaign, with a Y2K tool kit, to promote community conversations on the subject.

The key, he said, is for people to make cool, informed decisions. "I told some of the doomsayers from the start that sometimes people in a well-meaning way drive the argument to the extremes."

James Adams, head of Infrastructure Defense, a technology information firm that runs a Y2K news Web site, praised the council's efforts but said Koskinen is underfunded and the United States is well behind such countries as Canada and Britain in making people aware of the possible consequences.

In recent testimony before Sen. Bennett's special committee on the Y2K problem, Adams cited a survey taken last year revealing that two-thirds of Americans did not know what Y2K was. Some thought it was a tooth whitener, a movie rating, a stain remover or a brand of petroleum jelly.

People are now more aware of the problem, but "the level of ignorance remains alarmingly high," he said.

Bennett, R-Utah, who chairs the Y2K panel with Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., agreed with Koskinen that there will almost certainly be isolated disruptions, but predicting where the problems will arise can be a risky business.

He recalled that when "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson joked in 1973 that toilet paper was disappearing from grocery store shelves, the next day 20 million viewers rushed out to stockpile supplies and caused a real shortage.

"The antidote to panic is always accurate information," Bennett said in an interview. "But some of the accurate information can be pretty scary."

Bennett's Internet site advises people to check with police, doctors, pharmacists and grocers about their services, keep on hand batteries, warm blankets and "a couple of extra cans of food," save copies of financial transactions and beware of Y2K con artists.

Bennett said that at his own home he has filled a 55-gallon drum with water and has stored food. "That's prudent in modern life. There's so many things that can interrupt your life."

Koskinen's council offers similar "common sense" suggestions such as preparing a three-day supply of water and nonperishable goods, filling up on gas and keeping copies of bank statements.

The Web page assures people that major national disruptions are unlikely, that planes are safe and that coffee makers, microwaves, elevators and other equipment without calendar functions should not be affected.

Others, such as Rogue Valley's Christian, say these guides seriously understate the problem and that people should have at least three weeks of basic supplies. She said President Clinton needs to take the lead in organizing a national fire drill this fall.

But Bennett said there is a limit to what Washington can do. "I don't think it's John Koskinen's responsibility or mine to run around to every local community and say the federal government is checking on you."

Talks begin to cancel recycling contract

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

City Council members Tuesday gave City Manager Mike McGregor authorization to begin negotiations to end the city's recycling services contract with Recycle Midland LLC.

"Recycle Midland has the best reputation in the nation, especially in Texas," said Deputy City Manager Rick Menchaca. "They pull up to 17 percent of the waste stream, they operate efficiently; this isn't anything they've done in the manner of operating the facility."

He said he and City Utilities Director Ken Jones have reviewed the revenue side of the contract, which was executed in mid-July 1998, "and it's not been meeting expectations in terms of what was agreed to in the contract. The recyclables market has gone down tremendously, like oil prices last winter. It's something we can't control and we can't forecast any significant improvement. Right now we're recommending that we take a look at what we're doing and change from a full-service recycling program."

Menchaca pointed out that in March 1997, when the Materials Recycling Facility opened its doors, it and the city received $1,260 per ton of aluminum cans. Currently, it is receiving $860 a ton. In March 1997, the MRF received $135 per ton of cardboard — which comprises 50 percent of the facility's recyclables. This month, it is receiving $65 a ton.

He said he plans to visit with the board members of Keep Midland Beautiful and get them to begin thinking of alternatives.

"I need their assistance. They've been our partner in litter control and reduction and recycling," he said. "We'll be working with them, their board and committees to assess what level recycling the citizens of Midland are interested in doing and the cost of those types of services. When we have a program designed, we can take it to the council later this year and give vendors an opportunity to make their pitch."

He stressed that the city will still have a recycling program, with the recycling bins at the schools and fire stations remaining in place because he said Midlanders are interested in recycling, the city staff just needs to determine what program citizens can afford and are willing to participate in.

"Recycling is important for the environment, and we also believe there will be federal regulations — two or three years out, we'll receive some mandates. The state has set goals, the Environmental Protection Agency has goals, and the next step with the federal government is usually to change those goals into mandates. At that time we'll have to do recycling and it will be an unfunded mandate — we'll have to do recycling no matter what the cost."

When the contract with Recycle Midland was renewed, the city implemented a $1 recycling fee on residents' utility bills that went into effect this past October. Menchaca said that city staff will recommend to the council that "since we sold that fee to the council on the basis of funding a full-service recycling program, effective October 1999 we will eliminate that $1 fee."

Menchaca also reported to the council that he and council member Lee Wood met with Doug Henson, president of SBC Corp., and the engineering firm Parkhill Smith and Cooper in regards to land to be donated by the Scharbauer family along Highway 191 and Loop 250 for a proposed sports complex. The meeting, he said, was to determine the exact amount of land the Scharbauers will donate. A proposal is expected to be made to the council in the next 60 days to formalize the donation.

Council members Tuesday also agreed to apply

Philanthropist donates $480,100 to local charities

By Matt Josefy

Helen Maddox Greathouse showed on her 90th birthday Tuesday that it truly is more blessed to give than to receive. And she did so in a big way, contributing more than $480,000 to non-profit community organizations.

Recipients were numerous, with a total of 20 organizations benefiting from the $480,100 that was handed out.

Mike Tandy, senior vice president of Chase Bank and a trust officer, began by stating that this "is a celebration for a very fine lady." It was announced that the Texas Legislature had adopted a resolution, signed by Gov. George Bush, commending Mrs. Greathouse as a "Midland pioneer" and "a humble humanitarian." In addition, Mayor Bobby Burns proclaimed the day Helen Greathouse Day.

Her birthday coincided with the presentation of various checks to organizations. Mrs. Greathouse and her husband, the late Barney R. Greathouse, had no children of their own, but "have countless children in the community," according to Charlene Younger. That was evidenced as children's organizations received a large portion of the funds, under Mrs. Greathouse's direction.

Mrs. Greathouse says she is "just glad to be in Midland. I plan to stay here (for the rest of my life)." She and her husband originally came to Midland in 1929 and started a business that grew into the 1955 opening of Midland Drug at the site of today's Walgreen's Drug Company on Illinois Street. She says of Midland, "This is a wonderful place to live and I have always wanted to give back to those who made it possible for us to have so much."

Mrs. Greathouse controls a $30 million foundation that gives back to the community. Last year, the foundation contributed some $300,000 in the form of charitable grants. This December a second round of awards will be handed out bringing the total for the current year to over $800,000. Mrs. Younger, a member of the advisory board, said that "children and the handicapped are her main priorities" but she contributes to other causes as well.

The City of Midland Aquatics, for example, received $100,000 to further

Manulik offers apology in aftermath of MISD meeting

By Daniel Arp
Staff Writer

Barely a word was mentioned at Tuesday's school board meeting about the verbal personal attacks leveled by some at an emergency meeting May 28.

The only indication that anything had happened at all was a brief acknowledgement by Board President Becky Oekerman of an apology letter offered by board member Martha Manulik for some of her comments.

The letter — distributed to board members the day prior to the meeting — did not specifically mention or address Vice President James Fuller, whom Mrs. Manulik had called a derogatory name in the immediate, emotional aftermath of the May 28 emergency meeting.

"I received the letter like all the other board members," Fuller said in an interview outside the board meeting Tuesday evening.

When asked whether he accepted the apologies expressed in the letter, Fuller said, "Given the fact that her remark was directed to me, I got no apology."

Fuller added, though, that what transpired between himself and Mrs. Manulik was a personal issue.

"We've got to move on" as a board, he said. "We've got bigger fish to fry."

The board spent a lengthy Tuesday meeting frying those fish without personal incident. Among the board's decisions was a unanimous vote to change the math curriculum in elementary schools next year.

Based on the recommendation of a 22-person committee, the school board elected to do away with the $80,000-per-year Excel math program — essentially a collection of black-and-white computational worksheets that have been the main part of the curriculum since the early 1980s.

This year, however, the state has adopted a new textbook — at no cost locally — that some administrators feel surpasses Excel. The new textbook also has been found to be aligned with the Texas Essential Knowledge and Skills guidelines, said Dorsey Rushing, MISD executive director of elementary education who presented the committee's recommendations to the board.

Testimony begins in case of Stanton woman accused of killing her toddler

By Rick López
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Odessa nurse Joanna Williams hasn't forgotten Nov. 19, 1995.

It's the night 2-year-old Brandon Graves entered her life.

As she examined patients in the waiting room, 19-year-old Carlos Cain Hinojos stumbled in with a pale, battered child in his arms.

"I need help," he said, walking toward Ms. Williams. "He's very sick. Very sick."

As she got closer to the toddler, later identified as Brandon, Ms. Williams got a better view of his bruised face and blue-tinged lips. He was beaten so severely that she couldn't tell if he was breathing.

The boy was rushed to the emergency room, where he would live the next six hours under a translucent web of catheters, breathing tubes and IV drips.

Meanwhile, she asked Hinojos a few questions about the boy's injuries. He said the boy seemed sick ever since his mother, 19-year-old Cynthia Jolynn Graves, left the child in his care before she went to work at 4 p.m.

But Hinojos could not explain the bruises. He told the nurse that he spanked the child once that night because he wanted a glass of water.

"He was cooperative," Ms. Williams said Tuesday, while testifying in Ms. Graves' capital murder trial. "He seemed anxious and nervous. He did a lot of pacing."

She decided to call Ms. Graves at a restaurant in Midland, where she was working the night shift. She told Ms. Graves that Brandon was in bad shape and the doctors needed her at the hospital as soon as possible.

"She said it was OK, because Cain brought in Brandon," Ms. Williams testified. "She said she knew (Brandon) had been ill and was vomiting the night

Real estate pros want accurate reporting

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The community has a vital interest in the accurate reporting of real-estate sales to the West Texas Regional Multiple Listing Service.

"We all need to work hard to bring new business and industry to our community," Suzi Knight, president of the Women's Council of Realtors in Midland, said Tuesday in a meeting with the group. "This is one way we can do that — by reporting correctly so that they (prospective new businesses and industries) can view our community, see it in the real light. If we don't report correctly, they are not seeing us as we really are."

Ms. Knight moderated a real-estate session that included Ron Stegall, chief appraiser of the Midland Central Appraisal District (MCAD); Mark Clark, executive director of the West Texas Regional MLS, and Mike Hance, an independent Midland fee appraiser.

Stegall's appraisers classify properties with similar amenities and square footage in making fair-market appraisals for taxing purposes.

"By definition, we are supposed to be close on all (appraisals) but not right on any," he said. "It's based, pure and simple, on sales."

Each year, Stegall collects about $90 million in taxes for the Midland Independent School District, the city of Midland, Midland College, and the Midland County Hospital District. Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Kathy Reeves collects taxes for Midland County and the Greenwood ISD.

The MCAD, Stegall noted, evaluates property as of Jan. 1. "Really, we are looking at sales at the last quarter of 1998 and first quarter of 1999. We take

Destroying an entire town can be a powerful, thrilling experience

A Tears for Fears song: "Everybody Wants to Rule the World."

I, on the other hand, just wanted to ruin it.

López

The sad saga began two weeks ago, as a friend, his dachshund and I milled around Hyde Park on a lazy Sunday afternoon. Across the street from us, two young, curly-haired girls set up a "For Sale" stand with a few knickknacks at low prices.

We didn't have much money to spend, but we figured we'd at least help the girls attract some business. Nothing on the table, however, interested me: a rusty curling iron, a cracked, ceramic Tigger bank, half-used watercolors, and hey ... what's this? Used Super Nintendo cartridges?

They were only $4 a piece, so I took two of them. I was excited I finally had my hands on "Sim City," a game I learned how to play on my friend's PC.

It's a really neat game, if you have destructive tendencies like me and ever did the following:

- killed the patient in "Operation,"
- provoked a melee between your tan and green toy soldiers, or
- rid your mom's garden of slugs by sprinkling margarita salt on the little pests.

I fired up my crusty NES system and popped in the cartridge. The objective is to build and maintain a city, as it grows from a rural town to a thriving metropolis. With an unlimited cash stipend at your service, you can build schools, hospitals, airports, houses, commercial zones and — gasp — casinos.

The best part: you choose your city's name. I liked the ring "Infernal, TX" had to it. Or the perfect combination of two Texas cities: "Oddland."

As your town's population advanced, so do the amenities, like amusement parks, convention centers and public transportation. But if you wanted to be a self-serving mayor and ignore the public's interests, you could splurge the remainder of your budget on another airport, or better yet, a 10th city park.

When "Infernal" became too big for its own good, then it was time to destroy. My favorite strategy was raising the tax rate so high, that half the residents were forced to leave. Then, you could always cut the police and fire department salaries, which would force out another 20 percent of your population.

And if nothing else worked, then you could bombard "Infernal" with tornadoes, alien invasions and earthquakes. Then, you go sit atop the fourth floor of your empire and admire the hideous wrath you chose for your once-booming city.

But my power thrill became an obsession. I found myself wanting to be the ill-managing mayor of "Infernal" 24-7. I had vivid dreams about the game. I made excuses not to go out with friends — just so I could stay home to play. At work, I broke out in cold sweats and mumbled: "Must ... play... Sim... City .... Must... destroy... Infernal."

I knew it became a problem when my thumb grew a fourth callous, and I was averaging four hours of sleep a day. No support groups could help a fellow like me, so I did what I had to do: toss the game into a blazing barbecue pit.

So forgive, if once in a while, I seem to be ignoring you. It's not because you bore me, but probably because I'm having another morbid daydream about drowning an ant farm. Or knocking down card houses. Or siccing Godzilla on "Infernal."

TRIAL: Attorney says defendant will testify

When Ms. Williams mentioned the bruises, Ms. Graves explained that Brandon had fallen down some stairs a few days ago.

"Your son is unconscious and critically ill. We need you to come to the emergency room soon," Ms. Williams said.

After urging the woman to come over five times in that conversation, Ms. Graves finally budged.

"She said she'd try coming over," Ms. Williams testified.

That night, before Ms. Graves arrived, Hinojos called a lawyer.

Hours later, Brandon died despite resuscitation attempts by the intensive care staff.

Over the next three years, authorities spent countless hours trying to figure out what happened to Brandon that weekend. At that point, all they knew was that Ms. Graves and Brandon, her son from a past relationship, were living with Hinojos in his Odessa apartment.

And something awful happened to Brandon during his stay there.

Case history

In November, the Odessa Metro Homicide Unit arrested Ms. Graves, who now lives in Stanton, and Hinojos on capital murder charges. Both were 23 years old at the time of their arrests.

After their arraignment, Ector County District Attorney John Smith said he wouldn't pursue the death penalty and was open to the idea of making a plea deal.

Smith's original theory of the crime was that the night before the alleged beating, Hinojos had been out with friends, met a woman and spent the night at her home. Ms. Graves, Smith contended in opening arguments Tuesday, kept calling Hinojos and tried to lure him back home by claiming the child was sick.

Smith said the downstairs neighbors will testify that the night of the alleged beating, they could hear something striking the wall and a child wailing.

On Friday, Smith and Hinojos' attorney, Rhett Hoestenbach, negotiated a plea bargain, which was accepted Monday — midway through the jury selection of Ms. Graves' trial. The timing, Smith said, was coincidental.

Hinojos was charged with a less-severe offense — failure to prevent injury to a child by omission, a second-degree felony — and ordered to serve 10 years in prison. He remained in the Ector County jail as of Tuesday, Smith said.

Ms. Graves, whose trial began Tuesday, was never offered a plea deal, Smith said. He said there is a "good chance" Hinojos will testify in the trial.

Defense theory

Tom Morgan, who represents Ms. Graves along with attorney Jeff Hinkely, told jurors Tuesday that the real perpetrator in this case is Hinojos: the defendant's ex-boyfriend.

He challenges the state's theory that Brandon was kicked and beaten to death by his mother, as she is charged in the November 1998 indictment.

The state contends the child was beaten with such force that it ripped a gash in his colon, which allowed fecal matter to seep into his bloodstream and slowly poison him to death.

His injury caused an agonizing infection that killed the child over two or three days, Smith said. Brandon also sustained severe head injuries and rib fractures.

"We won't have to prove a thing, because the evidence is going to show she (Ms. Graves) never struck her son," Morgan said. "You're also going to hear evidence that if Brandon needed to be taken to a doctor, she (Ms. Graves) would take him in a snap. You'll hear that from her pediatrician."

Morgan said Ms. Graves was hesitant to go to the hospital because she trusted Hinojos with Brandon's life. Ms. Graves also claims that Ms. Williams never told her anything that was so alarming that she would have rushed to the hospital immediately.

"She asked 'What's wrong?' All she heard was the same answer over and over again: 'Get over here. Get over here,'" Morgan said.

Morgan said he and his co-counsel will present evidence that Hinojos had inconsistencies in the sworn statements he gave to the hospital and police. He said two private pathologists — one that has never testified in favor of the defense — will contest the autopsy's findings.

His client also will go out of her way to prove her innocence, he said.

"She will give up her right to remain silent, because you need to hear from her," Morgan said.

Medical examiner testifies

Dr. Randall Frost, who conducted Brandon's autopsy in Lubbock, testified that the boy died of "blunt abdominal trauma."

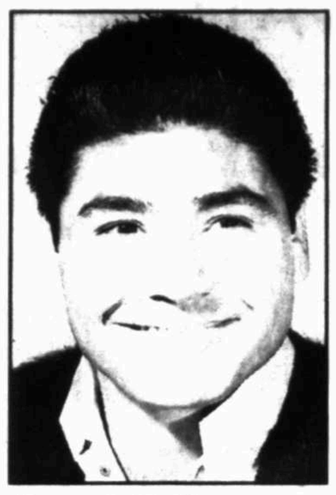

He said several bruises were found over the child's body, but he couldn't estimate how long they'd been there.

"It's almost impossible to date injuries," Frost said, adding that he found other signs that Brandon had been beaten, such as crusting internal injuries and rib fractures.

He disagreed with the theory that Brandon sustained his injuries when he fell down the apartment stairs. The markings were obviously from a beating, Frost said.

The trial will continue this morning in the 358th District Court of Judge Bill McCoy.

OBITUARIES

Angel Ortiz

Angel L. (Winnie) Ortiz, 57, died June 5, 1999, in a Galveston hospital following a lengthy illness. He was born August 2, 1941 in Midland, Texas where he was raised and educated. He worked in construction most of his life. He was a Catholic.

He is preceded in death by his parents, Inez and Pedro Ortiz; and brothers, Jose, Pedro Jr. and Pascual Ortiz.

A Rosary has been set for Wednesday, June 9, at 7:30 p.m. at the Reyes-Garcia Chapel. Funeral services will be held on Thursday, June 10, at 11:00 a.m. at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church, with Father Jerome Burnett officiating. Interment will follow at Fairview Cemetery. The funeral arrangements are under the direction of Reyes-Garcia Funeral Home.

Survivors include his wife, Olga G. Ortiz of Floresville, Texas; two sons, Juan Ortiz and Robert Ortiz, both of Floresville; two daughters, Soyla Ortiz of Floresville and Olivia Ortiz of Midland; a brother, Juan Ortiz of Lubbock; five sisters, Lorenza Gomez and Beatrice Cristan, both of Levelland, and Inez Ortiz Sosa, Aurora Ortiz Armendariz and Esperanza (Hope) Aguilar, all of Midland; three grandchildren, Michael Angel Salgado of Midland, Tabatha Ortiz of Odessa and Mystinia Ybarra of Floresville; and numerous nephews and nieces.

Esther E. Turner

Esther Turner passed away Sunday, June 6, 1999. Esther was born September 13, 1910, at Camp San Saba, McCulloch County, Texas, where her parents, Ernest and Nellie Kothmann Leifeste were living on a ranch owned by her grandparents.

In 1912, her parents moved to their farm near Fly Gap, where she learned English while attending school at Fly Gap. As the "middle" child of 9 brothers and sisters, she experienced all the adversities of having 4 older brothers and sisters and all the responsibilities of being the oldest of 4 younger siblings.

The family moved to Mason, Texas, about 1924 to facilitate school attendance and Esther graduated from Mason High School in 1928. After graduation, she moved to San Antonio and began training at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital where she graduated in 1931 and was certified as a Registered Nurse.

She met her future husband, Harvey J. Turner, and they became engaged on July 4, 1934, and were married on April 21, 1935, in their pastor's home.

Her two sons, Harvey Jr. and David, were born on June 28, 1941, and February 13, 1945, in San Antonio. Both of her sons earned graduate degrees from the University of Texas. Harvey was successful in the construction business in San Antonio while David became a DDS specializing in orthodontics. Harvey Sr. passed away in February, 1992, and Harvey Jr. passed away in April, 1995.

Esther is survived by her sister, Florence Blake of Mason, Texas; her son, Dr. David Turner, his wife, Krista, of Midland; and daughter-in-law, Sharon Turner of San Antonio; seven grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren. The grandchildren are Trey Turner of Poteet, Todd Turner of Austin, Tamara Turner of San Antonio, Angela Turner of Austin, CPT. Doyle Turner of Cannon AFB, New Mexico, and Ryan Turner and Robert Turner of Midland, Texas. The great-grandchildren are Joshua Williams, Hannah Jane Turner, Sarah Turner, Jordin Turner, and Jett Turner.

Pallbearers are Trey Turner, Todd Turner, Doyle Turner, Ryan Turner, and Robert Turner. Honorary pallbearers are Dr. Travis M. Hausler, El Paso, TX; Arthur A. Wisakowsky, Jr., Dallas, TX; Tadlock E. Leifeste, Mason, TX; Dr. William W. Leifeste, Orange, TX; Sam E. Leifeste, Austin, TX; Rodney D. Leifeste, San Antonio, TX; Randy L. Leifeste, Fredericksburg, TX; and Glen E. Blake, Roswell, New Mexico.

The family extends special thanks to the 'angels' of Home Hospice who ministered to mother during her final weeks in our home. In lieu of flowers, the family requests that donations be made to Home Hospice, 1802 W. Wall, Midland, Texas 79701.

Services are scheduled for 11:00 AM on Friday, June 11, 1999, San Antonio, Texas, at Mission Park North Funeral Home, 3401 Cherry Ridge, (210) 349-1414. Services will be officiated by Rev. Malcolm Grainger of Castle Hills First Baptist Church. Interment will be at the family ranch near Blanco, Texas.

Obituary & Death Notice policy

There is no charge for death notices of residents or former residents of Midland or for those who have Midland relatives. We also publish death notices for residents of the surrounding West Texas area.

Free death notices include date and place of death, service and burial information, funeral home handling arrangements, date and place of birth, brief biography, survivors and memorials. A longer, more detailed obituary is available for a charge. It may include tributes, expanded biography, organizational associations, notes of appreciation, pallbearers, honorary pallbearers and a photo.

Deadline for both free death notices and paid obituaries is 3:30 p.m. and information must be either received from or verified by a funeral home.

DONATION: MARC will use money to buy vans for disabled its program for the elderly, handicapped, and children. It pledges to build new pools that are accessible to the handicapped and potentially could house programs including water aerobics for those with arthritis.

"Water is the greatest medium for exercise" for those with numerous conditions, according to a spokesman for the Aquatic Center.

The Alzheimer's Association's Greater West Texas Chapter was also a major winner, receiving $45,000 to further support groups for a disease that makes families of victims feel like they endure "a 36 hour day."

As the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens (MARC) received a $68,000 award, several tears were seen across the room. MARC has grown due largely to the support of Mrs. Greathouse, who spurred the construction of the Greathouse building which became the first off-site house for MARC's programs.

Four additional houses and a vocational building also have been constructed in part through Mrs. Greathouse's gifts. The current donation is designated for the purchase of two vans with wheelchair lifts so that workers can "transport two disabled men anywhere they need to go with dignity," rather than struggling to load the men into a normal vehicle.

More than one speaker at the ceremony in the Roadrunner Room of Midland College referred to the "ripple effect" that touches many people that Mrs. Greathouse will never know. Story after story was told of individuals who have been helped through the various organizations because of Mrs. Greathouse's support.

According to Tandy, "her heartbeat" lies in actually visiting the people that Mrs. Greathouse had the opportunity to help. In determining how the funds will be allocated, she actually visits many of the sites and reviews the track record of the organization.

"Children enjoy seeing her just as much as she enjoys seeing them," according to Mrs. Younger. One child of High Sky Children's Ranch (which received $25,000) drew a Pooh bear birthday card to honor the special bond that was established during one of Mrs. Greathouse's visits to the Ranch.

The following organizations also received allotments for various projects: Boys' and Girls' Clubs of Midland ($10,000); Buffalo Trail Council ($15,000); Camp Fire Boys and Girls ($6,600); Casa de Amigos ($15,000); Centers for Children and Families ($5,000); Christmas in April ($3,000); Gladney Fund ($10,000); Midland Cerebral Palsey Center ($42,500); Midland College ($50,000); Midland Community Theater ($5,000); Habitat for Humanity ($35,000); Midland Memorial Foundation ($5,000); Museum of the Southwest ($10,000); Safe Place ($15,000); Samaritan Counseling Center ($10,000); Teen Challenge ($5,000).

CONTRACT: Council members vote to apply for HUD loan for a $1.045 million loan from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to match funding provided by Midland College, the Midland Independent School District and the Abell-Hanger Foundation to establish an Advanced Technical Center at Cuthbert and Midkiff.

Menchaca said the loan would come from a Community Development Block Grant Section 108 Loan Guarantee and make the city a partner in the vocational center.

If approved, the loan would be paid back through a combination of Community Development Block Grant funds and economic development funds.

Council members accepted two grants for the HOME Investment Partnership Program. A grant of $125,000 plus $5,000 in administrative funds for a total of $130,000 from the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs was received, along with a $12,500 matching grant from the Permian Basin Area Foundation for a Midland Housing Trust Fund.

Sylvester Cantu, CDBG Administrator, said that the funds will be used to rehabilitate homes of elderly residents.

"The grant requires us to rehabilitate a minimum of four houses, but we'll do five for sure and probably wind up rehabilitating six houses," Cantu said.

Representatives of local agencies receiving CDBG grants appeared before the council to express their appreciation, and in some cases request a few more dollars for projects.

Cantu said that allocations of 1998-99 CDBG grants are almost finalized, with council members making some minor adjustments to stretch dollars and assist more agencies. The list of grants will be made available for public review, he said, and then at the end of July public comments will be reviewed, adjustments made and at the July 27 council meeting, the final list of allocations approved and sent to HUD for funding.

The Confederate Air Force received approval from council members to apply for a grant through the Texas Department of Transportation to construct a new hanger and maintenance facility, to be home of the CAF's B-29 bomber "Fifi" and B-24 bomber "Diamond Lil" and other aircraft. City approval was required for major capital improvements to city property leased to the CAF. There are no costs to the city and the CAF will raise funds not provided by the grant.

The city Planning and Development Department was asked to write an ordinance implementing two proposed residential zoning districts, urban Estate and Single Family Estate, for council members to consider at the June 22 meeting.

POLICE REPORTS

Sudden death

ODESSA — A one vehicle accident in Odessa Tuesday morning was believed to have caused the death of a 71-year-old man.

Donna Dean Doan, 71, was found dead in his pick-up, which ran into a fence south of the south curb of 2100 W. 22nd. Investigators found that Doan in fact suffered a fatal heart attack, while driving and did not hit the fence until after he died.

There were no additional injuries as a result of the accident.

TAXES: Agencies use information to bring funds to community a look at what properties are selling versus what we are appraising them for. We're trying to hit as close to 99 or 100 percent median level.

"I'll be looking at 1999 sales next year" in determining valuations that are applied to tax rates set in 2000 by the taxing entities. "The sales for 1998 are not that away (down). But, the trend may, in fact, be down. I haven't really analyzed that yet."

Hance cited the importance of accurate reporting of sales to the West Texas Regional MLS. "That's what we all operate off of. There are times when sales did not enter into the MLS system — go unreported .... I have to have current information."

Hance does customized appraisals, which, Stegall noted, would be impractical and too costly for MCAD. "The dollar-per-square-foot evaluation is one of the most common but most troublesome values because there are so many variables involved in that specific evaluation," Hance said. "You have to look at the individual amenities" from lot and location to improvements.

"When you have accurate information," said Clark, "then potential businesses, corporations, and individuals that are planning on or thinking about relocating to the Permian Basin and Southwest Texas can know that they can rely upon that information to make accurate business decisions or personal decisions for their family."

Ms. Knight noted that agencies use information in the West Texas Regional MLS to help "bring in local, state, and federal funds to our community based on those statistics.

"Our economic reporting-area statistics are affected by that," she said. "Our national, state, local funding is directly affected by correct reporting of home sales," Ms. Knight said. "If everyone reports accurately, if you throw the correct values into the fish bowl, we know the bottom line of what we need in taxes. Then, you have an equal proportion coming out of all the pockets. And some of those that are reporting correctly don't end up with the lion's share of the taxes."

Realtor Gloria Lott, who has been in the real-estate business since 1971, said, "I have seen the market up, and I have seen the market down — up and down.

"Right now, with the interest rate being what it is (6.5 to 7.5 percent), it's a marvelous time to purchase," said Ms. Lott, who noted that she has seen interest rates up to 16 percent in years past. "There's a lot of properties on the market. But they are moving. I've seen the changes: I've seen a buyer's market and a seller's market. Today, right now (it's a buyer's market) because of the selection of properties. They (prices) are averaging pretty close to the asking price. I really feel like it's kind of balancing."

Skeet Doss, president of the Permian Basin Board of Realtors, said that the real-estate business has "had a good year" especially in light of the relatively low interest rates.

"We are still seeing the retirees come in," Doss said. "We don't have hurricanes. We don't have mud slides. And our crime (rate) is low. As a result, we are a good draw. This is still always going to be a town of people moving up. If we sell a low-priced house, nine times out of 10, that low-priced-house person is going to move up, if they are going to stay in town, into a bigger house. And if those people sell, they are going to move into a bigger house. A lot of our business is move up."

BOARD: Vote was unanimous to change math curriculum

(From 1B)

"The Excel (program) has not been looked at by anybody" independently, Rushing said, to determine if it aligns with TEKS.

A number of speakers who served on the committee — some of whom said they had supported Excel at first — expressed their beliefs that the new textbook would be a better choice.

"I had to come back to you today and tell you why I had changed my mind," said Clydene Freeman, principal of Henderson Elementary. Mrs. Freeman had previously told the board she thought Excel was easier to use for teachers who may not be the most proficient in math. She also had argued that because nationally normed Terra Nova scores tended to be above the national average for the district, the program was working.

But on further review, Ms. Freeman said, she saw that the computational score for MISD students was lower than the concepts score — by as much as 30 points.

"Those kids are not getting math concepts," Ms. Freeman said. "We're teaching them to compute, but we're not teaching them to think."

The discrepancy between MISD students' computational skills — well-accounted for in the Excel curriculum — and math concepts skills also explained to some the discrepancy between Terra Nova scores and students' less stellar performance on the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills test.

"We have a lot of kids passing the TAAS, but we don't have a lot of kids mastering the TAAS," said Ken Young, an intern at Washington Elementary, who attributed the problem to the "higher order" thinking the TAAS required, which Excel "doesn't address at all," he said.

The recommendation came on the heels of a presentation of this year's Terra Nova scores, which, at a district level, showed performance on the math portion above the 70th percentile at all grade levels.

Rushing addressed the numbers in his presentation, saying that they might call to mind the old saying, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

"I can't buy that," Rushing said. "If you bought that totally, we'd all be driving Model T's right now."

Elizabeth Dole says NATO should arrest Milosevic for war crimes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican presidential candidate Elizabeth Dole said Tuesday that NATO troops should arrest President Slobodan Milosevic to face his international indictment on war crimes. "The next person who talks to him should be the one who arrests him," she said, taking a hard line on bringing the Yugoslav leader to trial.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Mrs. Dole said her husband, the 1996 GOP presidential nominee, has a growing role in her presidential bid. After deciding to "go solo" early in the campaign, Mrs. Dole is asking the former Senate majority leader to help raise badly needed money.

"He never did it for himself. He just doesn't want to ask anybody for money. But you want to know something? He's doing it for me," Mrs. Dole said. "He's on the phone asking for money and he's also going to be doing some fund-raisers between now and the end of the month."

If there were a Dole administration, she said Bob Dole would bring respect and experience to the White House and would be particularly suited to handle agriculture issues. But there will be no Cabinet post, no "two for the price of one" that supporters of Bill and Hillary Rodham Clinton promised in 1992.

"It's not going to be a co-presidency," she said.

Mrs. Dole, 62, who plans to formally announce her candidacy in the late summer or fall, is trying to become the first American woman to win a major party nomination. The former American Red Cross president and two-time Cabinet secretary ranks second in GOP polls, well behind front-runner George W. Bush but ahead of Democratic hopeful Vice President Al Gore.

Much of her support comes from women eager to see a female succeed in politics or who think Mrs. Dole can relate to their hectic lives inside and outside the home.

Campaign 2000

In one recent poll, Dole's female supporters outnumbered men 3-to-2.

"I think most of the women who are involved today in trying to be the supermom or the superexecutive and all the rest would acknowledge that 'Yeah, I have had to make some sacrifices. I don't have the time I need for all these areas,'" Mrs. Dole said.

But she does does not think the government programs — such as the Family and Medical Leave Act — are the solution.

"Women make different choices. There's not one mold for everyone," she said.

Saying "my path was a different one," Mrs. Dole commended women who choose not to work.

"Those who decide to stay at home and raise a family of outstanding future citizens ... I want those women to be honored, too," she said. "We don't give them credit as a society the way we really should. I want them to feel like they've got a choice. That that's just fine to do that."

She and her husband didn't have children so they dedicated themselves to public service, Mrs. Dole said.

She also:

■ Announced that pollster Tony Fabrizio would be her top strategist, replacing Kieran Mahoney who departed in an early staff shakeup.

■ Defended her record at the Red Cross, which has been the subject of a critical review by the KPMG Peat Marwick auditing firm. "It is really one of the most far reaching contributions that I have had the opportunity to make in 30 plus years of service to the public."

■ Supported a move to raise the maximum individual presidential donation from $1,000, saying it takes too much time to raise money in such small increments.

Water's history. Use Fit® to help get rid of the pesticides, wax, and dirt that water can't.

Fit gets off what you can't see.
Your produce goes through a lot before it ever reaches your table. It's sprayed with water-resistant pesticides, handled by lots of people, and poked and prodded in the store. Water simply can't clean all this off your produce. But Fit removes more pesticides and handling residues. In fact, Fit removes 98% more pesticides than water alone.

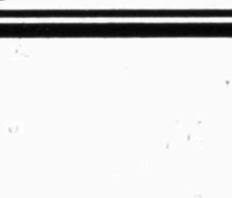

Fit is better.
Water can't remove the wax that covers apples, trapping pesticides and other chemicals. Fit, however, removes 98% more of this wax, helping provide your family with clean fresh fruits and vegetables.

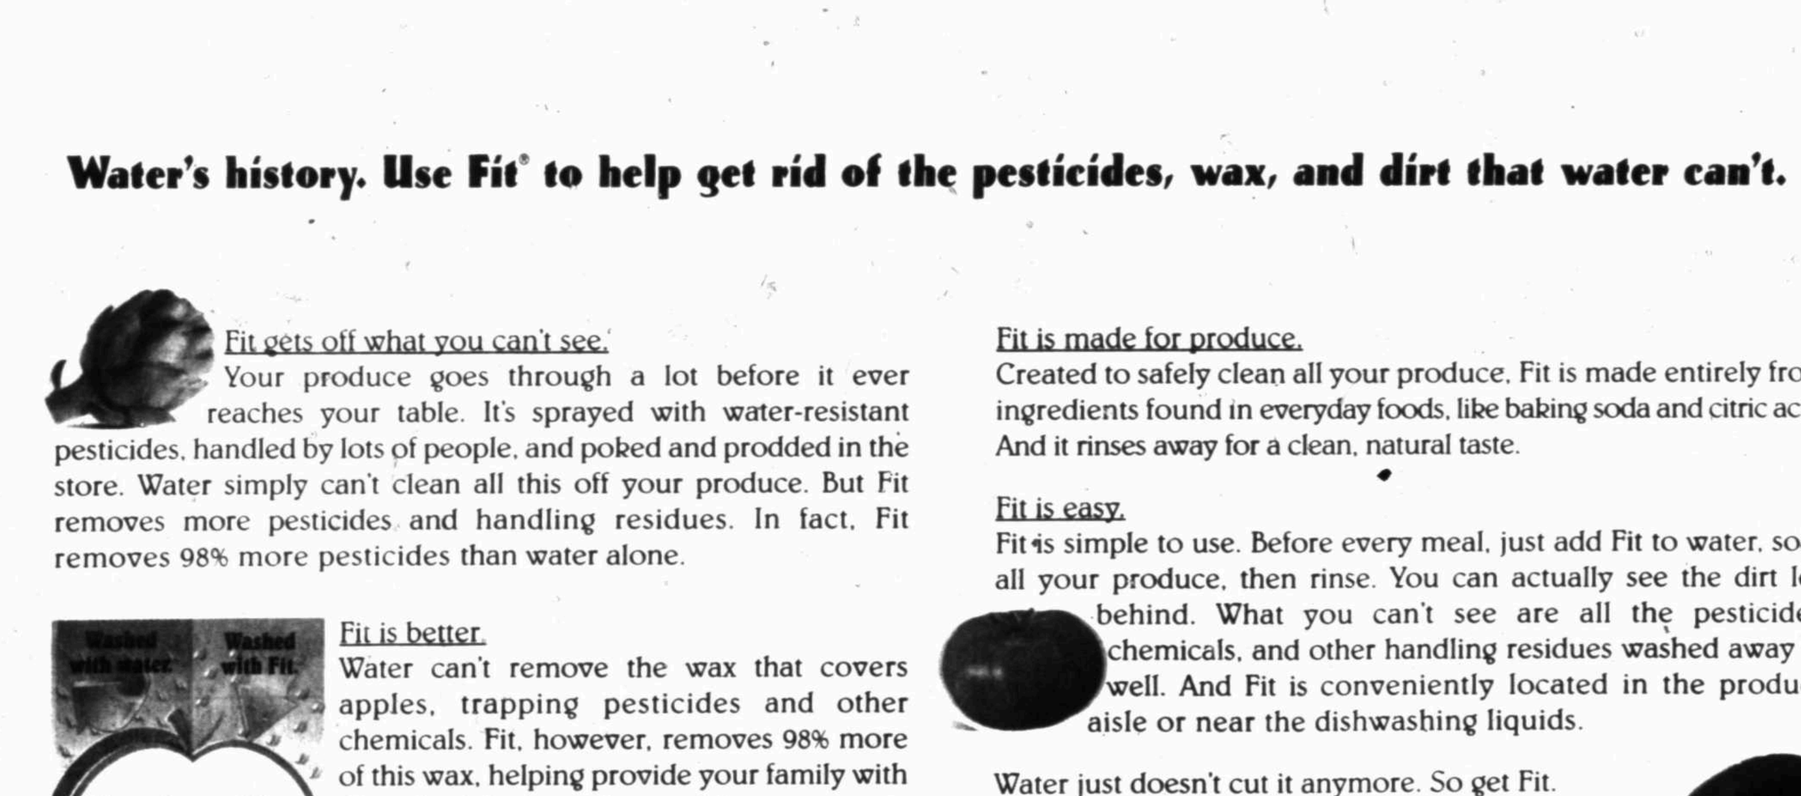

Fit is made for produce.
Created to safely clean all your produce, Fit is made entirely from ingredients found in everyday foods, like baking soda and citric acid. And it rinses away for a clean, natural taste.

Fit is easy.
Fit is simple to use. Before every meal, just add Fit to water, soak all your produce, then rinse. You can actually see the dirt left behind. What you can't see are all the pesticides, chemicals, and other handling residues washed away as well. And Fit is conveniently located in the produce aisle or near the dishwashing liquids.

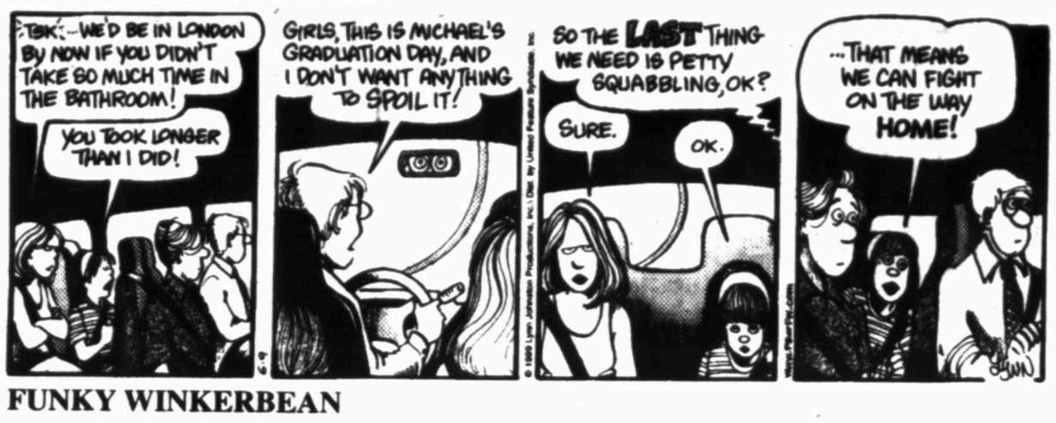

Water just doesn't cut it anymore. So get Fit.
For cleaner fruits and vegetables. For your family.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, June 9, 1999:
Clarity is instrumental to your success. Live your dreams; make them real through careful planning. Network and brainstorm with those in the know. You get what you want because of your unusual creativity and imagination. Others don't always have your vision; gradually introduce them to your way of thinking. Ideas and solutions come easily. If single, recognize that others can't easily meet your lofty expectations. Make fewer demands of a loved one. If attached, romance comes from working together and from sharing a long-term aspiration. Opt for a dream vacation or a special, treasured goal you've discussed. ARIES comes through for you in a big way.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ By now, you probably are used to the soaring tempers and the frustration. Have you found a way to deal with others when you lose your cool? You could be distorting facts and living in a fairy tale. When another points this out, be grateful. You aren't always easy to approach. Tonight: Happy as a cat.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ You could be shaking your head at the cobwebs in your mind and at the upset around you. If you're not ready to charge in, pull back. Mull over a decision. Later, you will know exactly what to do. You might not be getting a complete perspective. Tonight: Do your own thing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Recognize what you want, though somehow you could feel like you are drowning in information and in others' needs. Take a long look. Others will push to get you to do what they want you to do. Remain in command of your ship. You know where you are going. Tonight: Network and socialize.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Getting the complete story proves to be more than challenging. You might not agree with others, but be clear about your choices. Pressure revolves around finances. When another makes a demand, be willing to call it unrealistic if it is! Tonight: Working late.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Seeing clearly is difficult, especially in the presence of another. You aren't seeing this person realistically at all. Someone may be upset that you didn't respond the way he wanted you to. Withdraw, rather than engaging in a power struggle. Tonight: Explore a favorite bookstore.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Pressure remains intense, especially when dealing with a coworker. A highly emotional situation is under a cloud of confusion. Take an overview. Your perspective could change considerably. Use special caution with funds. Tonight: Talk to a trusted associate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Your temper flares. Use it, not for war, but to resolve some inner conflicts. Perhaps you don't say, "Enough is enough" as quickly as you need to. Take responsibility. You might not have the whole story concerning a child or loved one. Tonight: Ask another for clarity.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Pressure builds. You might feel like turning on your heels and reversing course! Listen to a family member. Are you seeing him as he truly is? Be realistic, yet caring. Start a new exercise regime. Tonight: Buy some flowers on the way home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Take the high road with a child or loved one. You could be frustrated by another's interference in a key project or meeting. Clarify expectations. Another seems to misunderstand your words, intentionally or not. Be especially careful; emotions and messages can get twisted! Tonight: Let off some steam.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Your financial picture is muddy, to say the least. This may not be anyone's fault. A message could be falling on deaf ears. Understanding others clearly remains key to your security. Money could easily slip through your fingers. Pressure is intense at work. Tonight: Relax at home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ You might think you are being explicit, when in reality others are clueless! Feelings stand in the way of communication. Keep hammering your message home; diligently seek to understand the words of others, as well. Eventually, you will succeed! Tonight: At a favorite spot.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Another has great ideas — for your budget! Put a halt to this type of thinking before it becomes a bad habit. Laughter punctuates a misunderstanding if you handle it well. Your intuition guides you at work and in interpersonal dealings. Tonight: Pay your bills first!

Just Devilish

Neither vulnerable. North deals.

	NORTH ♠ A K 8 4 ♡ A J 4 3 2 ◇ Q J 9 7 ♣ Void
WEST ♠ J 7 ♡ 6 5 ◇ A 10 8 6 ♣ A 9 7 4 3		EAST ♠ 9 6 5 3 2 ♡ 9 8 7 ◇ Void ♣ Q J 8 6 2
	SOUTH ♠ Q 10 ♡ K Q 10 ◇ K 5 4 3 2 ♣ K 10 5

The bidding:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1♡	Pass	2◇	Pass
4♣	Pass	4♡	Pass
4♠	Pass	5◇	Pass
6◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: ?

The bidding of this deal paints a clear picture of the North hand. Can you, West, find the opening lead which, for all practical purposes, assures the contract's defeat?

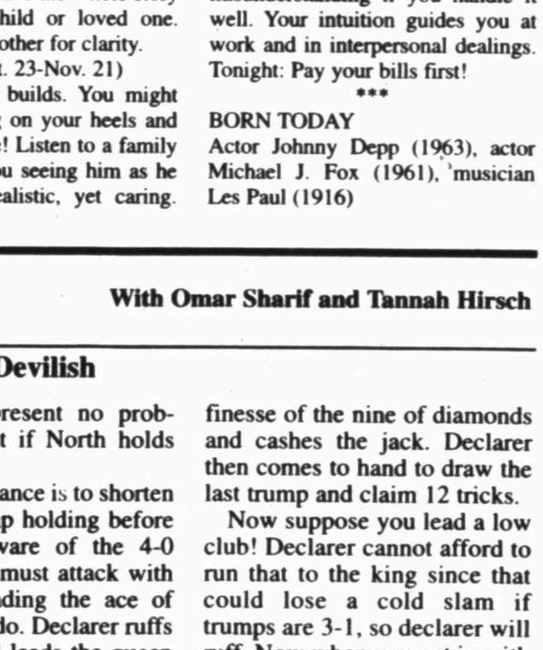

North's jump to four clubs showed shortness in the suit and confirmed a diamond fit. When North later rejected the opportunity to ask for aces in favor of a cue-bid, then contracted for slam when South signed off, it became obvious that North was void in clubs. Have you selected your opening lead?

Chances of winning a trick in a side suit are slight. Therefore, you need to take two trump tricks to defeat the contract. If the nine of diamonds is in the South hand, that should present no problem. But what if North holds that card?

Your best chance is to shorten dummy's trump holding before declarer is aware of the 4-0 break, so you must attack with clubs. But leading the ace of clubs will not do. Declarer ruffs in dummy and leads the queen of diamonds, revealing the trump division. Suppose you win (it does not help to hold up) and persist with a second club. Declarer wins, takes the marked finesse of the nine of diamonds and cashes the jack. Declarer then comes to hand to draw the last trump and claim 12 tricks.

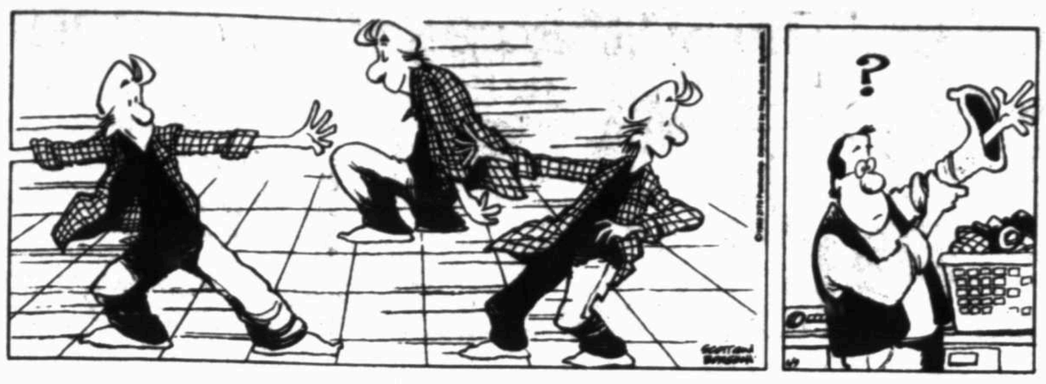

Now suppose you lead a low club! Declarer cannot afford to run that to the king since that could lose a cold slam if trumps are 3-1, so declarer will ruff. Now when you get in with the ace of diamonds, ace of clubs forces dummy to ruff again, and your 10 of trumps becomes the setting trick. Well done.

CLOSE TO HOME

As they caught up to the foursome in front of them, Phil's and Bob's hopes of finishing their round in four hours quickly faded.

Jones' mangled vehicle for sale

MANCHESTER, Tenn. — Looking for the perfect gift for that die-hard country music fan?

George Jones' mangled sports utility vehicle, a black Lexus LX470, is on sale for $22,000 at Fann's Auto Salvage. The salvage yard acquired the vehicle after Jones wrecked it March 6 in an accident that nearly killed him.

A grainy picture of the crumpled vehicle tops the salvage yard's advertisement in the June 11 issue of the "Wheels & Deals" shopper publication, with a promise that Fann's "has parts to fix many of our cars."

"We've had a lot of people come look at it," said salesman Terry Henderson. "Somebody will buy it."

Jones pleaded guilty to driving while impaired and violating the state's open-container law in the accident. He promised to complete alcohol counseling and was fined $550.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The opening of a center honoring Muhammad Ali will be pushed back by fund-raising delays, but backers remain optimistic that it will be built.

"I am confident about our ability to raise the money," businessman Larry Townsend said Monday. "Of course, we are going to get it."

Townsend, who has worked with Muhammad and Lonnie Ali to build the center, declined to say how much has been raised or pledged so far. But he acknowledged that fund-raising delays will prevent it from opening by January 2001 in the former boxing champion's hometown.

The opening of a center honoring Muhammad Ali will be pushed back by fund-raising delays.

The center will include a museum and an institute promoting good sportsmanship. It will also sponsor retreats to help young people develop self-esteem.

MINNEAPOLIS — One of the books includes flattering and relatively tame details of a politician's career; the other reveals seamy stories of that same politician's sexual tastes and personal quirks.

Guess which one is the autobiography, and which is the unauthorized biography?

Hint: The subject is Gov. Jesse Ventura.

Quietly competing with Ventura's "I Ain't Got Time to Bleed" on the national bookshelves this month is "Body Slam," a 246-page paperback that provides some new details about Ventura's career.

"Body Slam" maintains a mostly positive tone about Ventura's rise in show business and politics.

"I can't compete ... especially when he tells the world he doesn't wear underwear," joked author Jake Tapper, a writer for the online magazine Salon.

"I wasn't out to get him. I was just trying to explain him to the rest of the world," said Tapper, who was denied interviews with Ventura.

LONDON — Sophie Rhys-Jones will promise to love, honor and, yes, "obey" Prince Edward when she marries the youngest son of Queen Elizabeth II next week, according to the bishop performing the wedding.

The Right Rev. Peter Nott, the Bishop of Norwich, said Miss Rhys-Jones' decision to include the word in the June 19 ceremony was "no big deal."

"It is a mistaken assumption that when a bride says she will obey it means she is going to be subservient," Nott said. "It is to do with trust and listening. The partnership is equal, and leadership in a good marriage always shifts."

"I think obey means 'I trust you to make decisions that are for the good of the family,'" he said.

The former Sarah Ferguson included the word "obey" in her vows when she married Prince Andrew in 1986, but Princess Diana omitted the word when she married Prince Charles in 1981.

Study: Hormone therapy increases risk only for treatable breast tumors

CHICAGO (AP) — A study of 37,000 women found that taking hormones after menopause does not increase the risk of breast cancer, except for some uncommon forms of the disease that are slow-growing and highly treatable.

Researchers said the findings are good news because they add to evidence that the benefits of hormone supplements outweigh any increased risk of breast cancer.

Millions of women take hormones to ease the symptoms of menopause, such as hot flashes. The hormones are also known to reduce the risk of heart disease, brittle bones and possibly even mental decline.

Previous studies have indicated that women who take hormones — specifically estrogen — after menopause are more likely to develop breast cancer. Other studies have found no link.

This was the first hormone study to categorize cases of breast cancer according to whether they were slow-growing or fast-growing.

"When a woman weighs the risk of breast cancer vs. the benefit of possibly reducing cardiovascular disease and reducing risk of osteoporosis, this just provides further evidence for the benefit," said Dr. Susan M. Gapstur, a cancer epidemiologist at Northwestern University Medical School in Chicago who led the study.

The study appears in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

It may help explain the conflicting data in other studies and why hormone takers survive breast cancer more often than non-takers.

"One possible explanation is that they develop more favorable tumor types," said Dr. Melody A. Cobleigh, director of the Comprehensive Breast Center at Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago.

The researchers analyzed data on 37,105 subjects enrolled at ages 55 to 69 in the Iowa Women's Health Study. Over 11 years ending in 1996, a total of 1,520 cases of breast cancer developed among the women.

Women who took hormones and women who didn't had no difference in their risk of getting the fast-growing, life-threatening tumors that make up 85 percent to 90 percent of all cases of breast cancer.

Women who used hormones for five years or less were 1.8 times more likely to have slow-growing, highly curable tumors than women who never took hormones. Those who had used hormones for more than five years were 2.6 times more likely to have the least-threatening tumors.

Study: A few cups of coffee per day might help prevent gallstones by 40 percent

CHICAGO (AP) — A few cups of regular coffee per day might help prevent gallstones.

A study found that men who drank two to three cups a day had a 40 percent lower risk of gallstones than those who did not drink regular coffee. Men who drank four or more cups a day had a 45 percent lower risk.

But hold the decaf: Only coffee with caffeine stimulates contractions in the gallbladder and lowers cholesterol in bile that can form painful gallstones.

Exactly why is unclear. Caffeinated tea and soda don't have the same effect, the researchers reported in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

"I wouldn't actually say we would recommend that people take up coffee just to prevent gallstones," said Dr. Michael F. Leitzmann of the Harvard University School of Public Health. "But it's OK to continue drinking it. Coffee doesn't cause any other major diseases."

Gallstones are painful deposits of cholesterol in the gallbladder, the organ under the liver that stores bile. They affect about 20 million Americans and cause 800,000 hospitalizations each year, researchers said.

Leitzmann said lack of physical activity and being overweight are the two main causes.

The researchers followed 46,008 men from 1986 through 1996. The men, who were 40 to 75 in 1986, were participants in the Health Professionals Follow-up Study, which is looking at diet and lifestyle factors and their effect on diseases.

Leitzmann said he believes the findings would have been the same in women, but a separate study would look at that.

Dr. Thomas Magnuson, a professor of surgery at Johns Hopkins University, has conducted animal research that reached similar conclusions about the link between coffee consumption and gallstones.

Artist turned comic strips into painting and sculpture

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roy Lichtenstein, the artist who made comic strips into museum-quality paintings, is getting his first big sculpture exhibition. And it turns out that a lot of his sculpture looks like comic strips, too.

The Corcoran Gallery of Art is putting on the first comprehensive show of about 100 of his carvings, castings, moldings and forgings, and 100 of the drawings he made in planning them.

Outside the building stands a 32-foot aluminum "Brushstroke Group" by Lichtenstein painted black, white blue, yellow and green. A similar work, only about 8 feet high, sold for $126,000 at a Sotheby's auction in 1990.

Nearly half a century ago, Lichtenstein apparently fell in love with the tiny, regular dots that can still be seen when looking closely at comic strips. They originate in the mechanical process used in printing, but Lichtenstein used them as an artistic element for the rest of his life.

In the Corcoran sculptures, the dots appear much enlarged in a variety of his work from "Brushstroke Nude" that dominates the main staircase, to the low-slung BMW 320i sedan that had to be dismembered to get through the gallery's entrance. The car won first place in its class at Le Mans in 1977 — for its speed, not Lichtenstein's painting on it.

Jack Cowart, curator of the show, told a story that the artist's children brought him a bubble gum wrapper and challenged him to do a painting as good. The story says the result was his picture of Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck now owned by the National Gallery of Art, called "Look Mickey, I've caught a big one."

Cowart explained that when Lichtenstein and other American painters started imitating comics in the early 1960s, they were reacting from the fashionable "abstract expressionism" that produced colorful but unrecognizable images. He "monumentalized" the new style, Cowart said.

"Roy was the one who was most interested and most successful in taking the dot pattern, the line pattern, the design and composition pattern and kind of re-engineering (them) into his own compositions," said Cowart.

"Roy Lichtenstein, Sculpture and Drawings" will close Sept. 30. It comes in part from an exhibit in Mexico that Lichtenstein was helping put together when he died in 1977. Admission for adults is $6. Students and senior citizens $3. Parts of the exhibit will go on to Valencia and La Coruna in Spain.

Stanley Cup Finals Game 1: Sabres send Stars sprawling

By Alan Robinson
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Jason Woolley came off the bench, grabbed the puck and scored the winning goal at 15:30 of overtime and the Buffalo Sabres, kept in the game by Dominik Hasek's brilliance, seized home-ice advantage by beating the Dallas Stars 3-2 in Game 1 of the Stanley Cup finals Tuesday night.

Hasek stopped 35 of 37 shots and kept the Stars to only one power-play conversion in 10 opportunities in the Sabres' first Stanley Cup game in 24 years.

Woolley had just come off the bench when Curtis Brown spotted him skating down the slot and put the puck on his stick to beat Ed Belfour, whom Hasek once backed up in Chicago.

"I just wanted to release as quick as I could and not give Belfour a chance," Woolley said.

Buffalo coach Lindy Ruff said Woolley "just joined late, was wide open and nobody picked him up."

Ruff had another reason to celebrate.

"The East has been swept the last three years. We just one one for the East," he said, pumping his fists.

Colorado in 1996 and Detroit the last two years won the NHL title without losing a game in the finals.

Game 2 will be Thursday night in Dallas before the series shifts to Buffalo on Saturday.

The Sabres, who had 14 fewer regular-season victories than the Stars, were outshot 23-9 over the first two periods. But they trailed only 1-0 entering the third period mostly because Hasek refused to fold, except for a tying goal by Jere Lehtinen in the final minute of regulation and Brett Hull's first Stanley Cup finals goal.

Shaking off the rust from an eight-day layoff, Hasek's refusal to let the game get out of hand allowed the Sabres to finally mount an offense in the third period and take a 2-1 lead on goals only 5:04 apart by Stu Barnes and Wayne Primeau.

"I thought as the game went on, we started to come on," Ruff said. "In the third period, for the longest time I think we gave them only one shot.

"We were sloppy in the first two periods. We came on in the third."

The goals seemed to deflate the Stars' confidence — they were 5-0 in the playoffs when leading after two periods — and a towel-waving crowd

RockHounds again go to work early, get another victory over San Antonio

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

The San Antonio Missions pitching staff has been the perfect way for the Midland RockHounds to take out some pent-up frustrations from the recent series in Wichita.

For the second straight night, the RockHounds went to work at the plate early by taking a 12-3 lead after five innings Tuesday and then holding on for a 12-9 victory at Christensen Stadium.

The 'Hounds offensive explosion of the last two nights has equaled 23 runs on 32 hits. The only problem is that the Missions have responded with 17 runs of their own on 26 hits during the same 48-hour period. But whatever the Missions have done offensively, the 'Hounds have done it better by compiling a 9-3 record against San Antonio this year and outscoring them 101-84 in their 12 meetings.

"It seems like every year, you're going to have a team that you have trouble beating and every year you're going to have a team you're going to have success against," said Midland third baseman Adam Piatt, who connected on his 23rd homer of the year in the six-run third inning. "San Antonio's got a great group of players. I don't know why things fall like they do. Wichita's got a great group of players but their not that much better than

'Team of the Decade' LSU sits out final College World Series of 1990s

By Molly Wood
Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. — The LSU fans will probably be crying alligator tears at the Cajun food stand at Rosenblatt Stadium.

Once dubbed "Team of the Decade" by Baseball America magazine, traditional national power Louisiana State will be sitting out the last College World Series of the 1990s.

"Yard work," LSU coach Skip Bertman said gruffly. "Getting a lot of yard work done."

It's just the third time this decade the Tigers won't travel to Omaha. LSU has won four national championships during the 1990s, including consecutive titles in 1996 and 1997.

Those purple and gold Mardi Gras beads won't be the only familiar sights missing when this year's tournament begins Friday.

Defending champion Southern California lost to Stanford in last weekend's super regional, and Trojans coach Mike Gillespie said it will be hard for him to watch the series on television.

"I think we justifiably believe we are one of the teams that could have given a good account of ourselves," Gillespie said.

That's not to say the CWS field represents a shakeup.

Last year's top-seeded team, Miami, is back for the sixth straight year. Alabama is making its third trip this decade, Cal State-Fullerton won the title in 1995 and Oklahoma State was here as recently as 1996.

Rice, a relative newcomer to Omaha, is making its second trip overall but it's the school's second visit in three years. Texas A&M, making its fourth trip, last qualified for the series in 1993.

Spurs continue layoff as East teams keep battling

By Kelley Shannon
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson isn't worried about having more than a week off before the NBA Finals. He's getting used to these layoffs.

"We're just going to take a couple of days and get our minds right, get our bodies right and get ready to go," he said.

The San Antonio Spurs won their first trip to the championship round by sweeping the Portland Trail Blazers in the Western Conference finals with a 94-80 victory Sunday.

Now San Antonio awaits the outcome of the Eastern Conference finals, with Indiana and New York tied 2-2. The NBA Finals begin June 16 at the Alamodome.

The Spurs spent an extra night in Portland because their plane had mechanical trouble. When they arrived home Monday aboard their charter, a crowd of 3,500 fans greeted them.

"They've been part of the Spurs family for 26 years," coach Gregg Popovich said. "It's just a thrill to be able to give this to them. I couldn't be happier for them."

The Spurs came to San Antonio from Dallas as part of the ABA before the 1973-74 season. It's the only major league sports team in town.

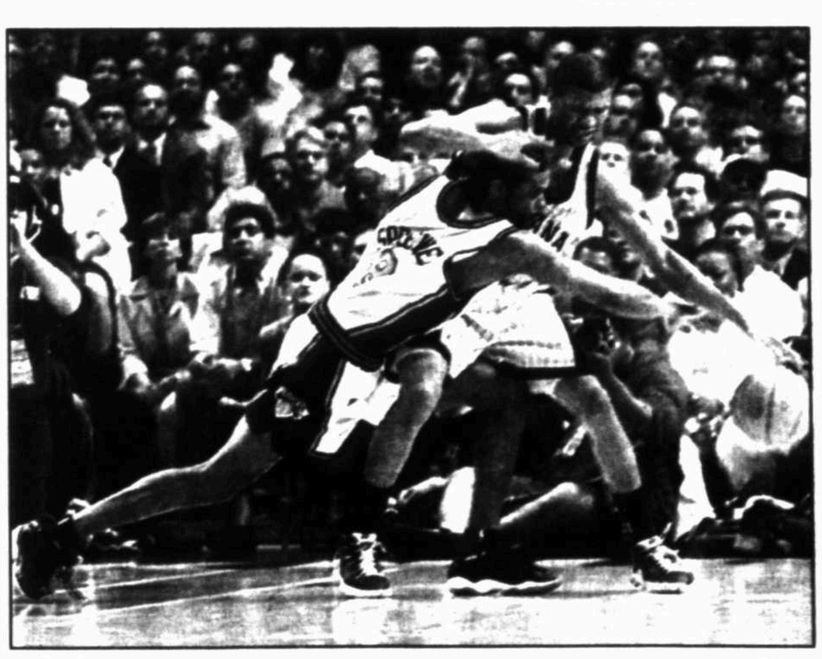

Usually not one for playoff pomp, Popovich couldn't help but delight over the airport party.

"When you get all these people out here, if you don't feel that in your veins you're pretty much a dead person," he said.

Popovich didn't schedule practices for Monday or Tuesday. Workouts resume Wednesday.

"The gym's locked," Popovich said. "We don't want to see them on the court. We just want them to mentally and phys-

Indiana doesn't worry about Knicks rotation

By Hank Lowenkron
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Up 2-1 in the Eastern Conference finals, the New York Knicks gambled on a smaller, quicker starting lineup for Game 4 against the Indiana Pacers.

The gamble backfired.

Latrell Sprewell, making his first playoff start, picked up two quick fouls and was ineffective defensively against Chris Mullin as the Pacers evened the series 90-78 Monday night.

Sprewell fouled out for the first time this season, scoring 12 points in 33 minutes on 6-of-14 shooting.

"Any time you win the game, and he doesn't play the way he's capable of playing, you can look back with hindsight and say it was, or was not, a good move," Jalen Rose said of the switch. "They were going for the jugular. Being up 2-1, playing in front of their home fans they wanted to get a chance to have everybody involved in the game early so they could put us to sleep.

"Fortunately, it backfired."

Indiana coach Larry Bird has no intention of changing his starters, no matter what Knicks coach Jeff Van Gundy does.

"We're not going to match what he's doing. We're just going to try and play our game," Bird said.

"We're not going into trying to cross-match and mismatch, and do things to shake up the lineup. We've had the same lineup since I've been here."

Van Gundy, whose team already is hurting from the loss of center Patrick Ewing with a partially torn left Achilles' tendon, said he had no second thoughts about the move.

"It doesn't matter who we start if we defend and rebound like that," he said of his team's play Monday night.

Rose said he thought having Sprewell start was a matter of New York "trying to adjust to our depth. ... I think they were bringing Sprewell in early as opposed to having him go against myself or Derrick McKey's defense."

Rose's offense wasn't bad, either. The Teams win in city tourney

Four teams came away with wins in the National Little League City Tournament on Monday at C.J. Kelly Park.

The Mid City Pirates clubbed the North Central Cubs 10-0 with Patrick Wayland picking up the win. Nickolas Luevano and Kyle Davis had doubles for the Pirates.

The North Central Astros won a nip-and-tuck 3-2 win over the Devil Rays with Jeff Anderson getting the win.

The Northern Mets ripped the Mid City Diamondbacks, 11-3, with Matt Day getting the win. Day also homered for the Mets. Travis Gordon and Jason Shelton both homered for Mid City. Shelton also doubled. Justin Herricks, Thomas Frisbie, David Harp all doubled for the Mets.

The Northern Astros took an 8-5 win over the Tower Diamondbacks as Jordan Coulon picked up the win. Bobby Whiteside homered for the Astros while Josh Hastings, Barry Keiffer and Nathan Sherman all went deep for Tower. Todd Edwards had a double for Tower.

MHS' Vandergriff on scholar team

Midland High's Travis Vandergriff, a tennis standout, has been selected as one of 12 students to the 1999 FINA/Dallas Morning News All-State Scholar-Athlete Team.

Each of the team members will receive a $4,000 scholarship and were selected by a panel of judges from 44 finalists. Over 2,500 students from 1,000 high schools submitted applications. Applicants had to win a varsity letter in a UIL sport, be in the top 10 percent class ranking and a 90 grade average or better. Community involvement was considered; athletic ability was not a factor.

Vandergriff and the state scholar-athletes will be introduced this weekend to fans at The Ball Park in Arlington and will participate in team and leadership building activities through a ropes course. They will attend a banquet on Saturday evening.

Phelps leads team to win

SAN ANTONIO — Cleveland Phelps, head boys basketball coach of Midland Trinity, coached the North team to an 85-67 win over the South here over the weekend in the TAPPS All-Star game.

Jon Singleton of Grand Prairie Shady Grove led the North with 21 points.

Phelps, in his first year at Trinity, was selected to be the North All-Star coach by a committee of TAPPS basketball coaches. He led the Trinity Chargers to their first ever TAPPS district title, posting a 25-6 season record.

Villa named All-Conference

HILLSBORO — Marcie Villa, a former softball player for Midland Lee, has been named Player of the Year for the North Texas Junior College Athletic Conference.

Villa also was placed on the All-Region V team. She has been a standout for the past two years playing at Hill College in Hillsboro and was on the All-Conference team in 1998.

Villa led the conference in hitting with a .468 average, in hits with 88, in home runs with 18 and runs scored with 75. The outfielder was also listed among leaders in all other offensive categories with 23 doubles, five triples, 68 RBIs and 16 stolen bases.

Marcie's sister, Gracie, who is also a former Lady Rebel, also played for Hill College. Both have signed to play ball at Tarleton State in Stephenville this coming fall.

Bond pitches perfecto

Rhonda Bond pitched a perfect softball game recently for the Slammers in MUGS 12-under competition. Bond faced the minimum 12 batters in the four-inning game, striking out seven.

us. It's just the way baseball works."

Midland's big-inning fireworks display in the third came on seven hits and 12 'Hounds being sent to the plate against San Antonio starter Allen Davis (4-5). Starting with a Willie Morales walk, Davis allowed the first six batters he faced in that inning to reach. The big hits came from Jeff DaVanon, who hit a two-run double, and Piatt, who crushed yet another ball out of the Christensen Stadium zip code for a three-run shot to center field.

"Every inning is big for us," said 'Hounds third baseman T.R. Marcinczyk, who had a double in that big inning and ended the night 3-for-5 with two doubles, a triple and four RBIs. "That got us going early."

Midland added three more runs in the fourth and three more in the fifth to make the score 12-3 in Midland's favor.

San Antonio bounced back in the sixth with two runs of their own off Midland starter Randy Niles (2-3), who picked up the win by going six innings.

The Missions again made it very interesting in the ninth with a two-out rally. Glenn Davis doubled home Tony Mota, and Luke Allen hit a three-run bomb. 'Hounds reliever Chris Gorrell was able to get Geronimo Gil to pop up to center field to end the game and give Midland a two-game win streak.

Those type of rallies by the Missions probably would've killed the 'Hounds on the road, but thanks to some home cooking at Christensen Stadium, the 'Hounds are making those close games go in their favor.

"Every team feels more comfortable playing at home," Marcinczyk said. "It's always good to come back home. It's like when you go home and spend it with your mother, it's always good."

With four games remaining against the Missions at home and 10 games left in the Texas League's first half of play, the 'Hounds could very well find themselves back in the thick of the West Division title.

"If we can win a couple from these guys the next couple of days and then if El Paso and Wichita can beat each other up a little bit, maybe we can sneak back in there," Piatt said.

ROCKHOUND BITES: Midland is now 3 1/2 games back of Wichita and 2 1/2 games back of El Paso in the Texas League West. On Tuesday, El Paso and Wichita split a doubleheader with the Diablos winning the first game, 5-1, and the Wranglers taking the nightcap 7-4... Josue Espada now has 17-game hitting streak after going 3-for-4 with two runs scored against the Missions.

NHL: Sabres take 1st game of series of 17,001 watching the first final-round championship game in Dallas sports history.

But what seemed to be an unbeatable combination, the Sabres with a lead late in a playoff game with the game's best goaltender in the net, wasn't.

Repeatedly rushing the net in the frantic final few minutes of a period that threatened to dramatically swing the momentum of the series, Hasek moved slightly to his right and out of the crease as the puck went behind the net.

That allowed Mike Modano, one of just two Stars remaining from the franchise's last Stanley Cup team in Minnesota in 1991, to throw it in front of the net and onto Lehtinen's stick for his eighth and biggest goal of the postseason with 49 seconds left in regulation.

The sigh of relief emanating from north Texas probably could be heard to the Oklahoma border.

The arena went eerily quiet as Woolley scored the kind of opportunistic goal that often decides such games.

Woolley's goal was his fourth of the playoffs and resulted not just from the Dallas defense's negligence in picking him up, but Brown's ability to see him skating into scoring position.

The Sabres now can win the first Stanley Cup in their history by winning all of their games in Marine Midland Arena, where they are 7-0 in the playoffs.

Tuesday's setting seemed unusual for a Stanley Cup finals — deep in the heart and heat of Texas in early June, with an outside temperature of 90 — but the first goal came from one of hockey's familiar faces.

Brett Hull, a renowned scorer who at age 34 has transformed from a stubborn one-way player into one who willingly checks and hits, beat Hasek between the pads with a slap shot from the high slot at 10:17 of the first.

The power-play goal came with one second left in Miroslav Satan's boarding penalty. The scouting report on Hasek is the only way to beat him consistently is up high, but this shot squirted through a tiny gap between Hasek's red-and-white pads.

White Sox edge Astros

By Associated Press

CHICAGO — Magglio Ordonez drove in three runs and Jaime Navarro won his third straight start to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 4-3 victory over the Houston Astros on Tuesday night.

Frank Thomas hit his second double of the game with one out in the sixth to set up Ordonez's two-run homer, his 11th, which gave Chicago a 4-3 lead.

Ordonez also hit a RBI groundout in the fourth as the White Sox won for the seventh time in their last 11 games.

Jaime Navarro (5-4) allowed three runs and eight hits before being replaced by Bob Howry to start the ninth. Howry earned his 10th save when pinch-runner Glen Barker was caught by Brook Fordyce trying to steal third base to end the game.

Shane Reynolds (7-6) lost his third straight start, giving up four runs and seven hits in 7 1-3 innings.

Rookie Daryle Ward collected his first major league RBI when he hit a two-out, run-scoring double in the fourth for the Astros.

Marlins 2, Orioles 1

MIAMI — Jesse Orosco walked Luis Castillo on a 3-2 pitch with two out and the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth, and the Florida Marlins won their sixth game in a row by beating the Baltimore Orioles 2-1.

The Marlins' winning streak is the longest in the major leagues. The game, delayed twice by rain, was the opener of a doubleheader.

Giants 6, Angels 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Shawn Estes pitched seven strong innings and the San Francisco scored three runs in the seventh inning to break a tie.

Marvin Benard led off the Giants' seventh with a single and went to second on Bill Mueller's sacrifice bunt against Steve Sparks (2-5), who was then relieved by Scott Schoeneweis. One out later, Armando Rios singled off shortstop Andy Sheets' glove to score Benard with the go-ahead run.

Expos 5, Red Sox 1

MONTREAL — Dan Smith retired 20 straight batters at one point in his major league debut and pitched the Montreal to a the win.

Smith (1-0) allowed three hits to the first four batters he faced, including an RBI single to Nomar Garciaparra. He didn't allow another baserunner before being lifted for a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning.

Tigers 11, Pirates 4

DETROIT — Nelson Cruz pitched seven strong innings to win his first major league start and Detroit hit five homers to beat Pittsburgh.

Damion Easley, Gregg Jefferies, Dean Palmer, Juan Encarnacion and Luis Polonia homered for the Tigers.

Brewers 2, Indians 1, 10 innings

CLEVELAND — Jeromy Burnitz, one of the many Indians traded away the past few years, homered leading off the 10th inning Tuesday night for Milwaukee.

Burnitz, dealt to Milwaukee in 1996 for Kevin Seitzer, hit a 1-2 pitch from Paul Assenmacher (1-1) off the right-field foul pole for his 12th homer.

Phillies 11, Yankees 5

PHILADELPHIA — Rookie Marlon Anderson had two hits and drove in three runs, and Rob Ducey had a bases-loaded triple to cap a nine-run seventh inning as the Phillies came back from a five-run deficit.

Starters Curt Schilling and Hideki Irabu were long gone when the Phillies erupted with two runs in the sixth and nine in the seventh to hand New York its fifth loss in five games at the Vet.

Mets 11, Blue Jays 3

NEW YORK — Jason Isringhausen earned his first major league win since beating Toronto in 1997 and New York won with manager Bobby Valentine temporarily taking over as the third-base coach.

Rey Ordonez went 4-for-5 as the Mets won their third in a row. The mini-streak came after GM Steve Phillips fired three coaches following eight straight defeats.

Braves 11, Devil Rays 2

ATLANTA — Gerald Williams and Ozzie Guillen, who have both struggled at the plate this season, each had four hits.

Williams, who entered the game with a .207 average, went 4-for-5, drove in three runs and scored twice as the Braves won their fourth straight. Guillen, who started the day with a .141 average, went 4-for-4 with an RBI and three runs scored.

Twins 5, Reds 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Brad Radke scattered five hits over eight innings as Minnesota won its third straight.

Radke (5-5) improved to 3-0 in his career against the Reds, who lost their second straight at the Metrodome after winning eight straight games, all on the road. Mike Trombley pitched the ninth for his fifth save in eight chances.

Royals 11, Cardinals 10

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Joe Randa's second triple triggered a four-run sixth inning as error-prone Kansas City snapped a nine-game losing streak.

Mark McGwire hit his 18th homer and 475th of his career after missing Monday's game with a sore back. His two-run shot in the ninth tied him with Stan Musial and Willie Stargell for 17th place in history.

Malone makes All-NBA team

NEW YORK — Even Michael Jordan and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar never accomplished what Karl Malone did Tuesday — make the All-NBA first team for the 11th time.

The Utah forward, winner of the NBA's MVP award this season, was the leading vote-getter on the team with 580 points and 113 first-team votes from a panel of 118 NBA writers and broadcasters. He finished four points ahead of San Antonio's Tim Duncan, who had 576 points and 112 first-team votes.

Joining Malone and Duncan on the first team were Miami's Alonzo Mourning, Philadelphia's Allen Iverson and Phoenix's Jason Kidd.

Jordan, Abdul-Jabbar, Elgin Baylor, Bob Cousy, Bob Pettit and Jerry West each made it 10 times.

Mourning received 95 first-team votes and 542 points, Iverson had 93 first-team votes and 532 points, and Kidd had 86 first-team votes and 516 points.

ABC unveils pigskin schedule

NEW YORK — From the Pigskin and Kickoff classics in August to the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 4, 2000, that will probably determine the national champion, ABC Sports will televise many of the season's top college football games.

ABC released its schedule on Tuesday, with Arizona at Penn State in the Pigskin Classic on Aug. 28 kicking off the season. On Aug. 29, ABC will televise Miami-Ohio State in the Kickoff Classic at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

Games ABC will televise nationally include: Notre Dame at Michigan on Sept 4; Ohio State at Penn State on Oct. 16; Michigan at Penn State on Nov. 13; Ohio State at Michigan on Nov. 20; Texas at Texas A&M and Nebraska at Colorado on Nov. 26; and Notre Dame at Stanford on Nov. 27.

The network also will televise the Big 12 and SEC championship games on Dec. 3.

Among the bowl games on ABC are the Citrus, Rose and Orange on Jan. 1; the Fiesta on Jan. 2; and the Sugar on Jan. 4.

The Sugar Bowl matches the top two teams in the final Bowl Championship Series standings.

Regional telecasts include: UCLA at Ohio State and Georgia Tech at Florida State on Sept. 11; Miami at Florida State and Michigan at Michigan State on Oct. 9; and Georgia at Georgia Tech and Arizona at Arizona State on Nov. 27.

ATLANTA — Former National Basketball Association star Dennis Rodman signed an agreement with World Championship Wrestling for a series of appearances, including an Aug. 14 pay-per-view event in Sturgis, South Dakota.

Rodman, who was released by the Los Angeles Lakers on April 16, has wrestled twice in the past with WCW, including a 1998 tag-team match that included Utah Jazz star Karl Malone. He'll appear Monday nights beginning July 5.

WCW is a production of Time Warner Inc.'s Turner Broadcasting System Inc.

The flamboyant Rodman, known for his multicolored hair, tattoos and outlandish behavior, had played in 23 games with the Lakers, averaging 2.1 points and a team-best 11.2 rebounds, before being placed on waivers.

He had missed practices, took a leave of absence for personal reasons stemming from his marriage to actress Carmen Electra and refused to re-enter games.

Valerie Hogan poses by a case containing trophies and a portrait of her late husband, legendary golfer Ben Hogan, in a new room dedicated to him at the United States Golf Association Museum in Far Hills, N.J. on Tuesday. The room, which contains more than 300 of Hogan's personal objects, will open to the public today.

Hogan's wife remembers husband as exhibit opens in USGA Museum

By Tom Canavan
AP Sports Writer

FAR HILLS, N.J. — Walking around a room filled with the trophies and medals that were a testament to her husband's greatness as golfer, seeing his trademark white hat and some of his clubs and clothes, Valerie Hogan gave in and cried for a moment.

"Ben would have loved this," she said Tuesday as the USGA Museum opened the Ben Hogan Room, the first it has dedicated to the life and career of a professional golfer. Hogan died two years ago at age 84.

What Ben Hogan also would have liked would have been to hear his wife of more than six decades talk about the man whose 63 career victories and nine majors rank third in both categories.

She talked about his love of practicing, his personality, his battle to come back from a near-fatal car crash in 1949, and most of all, her love for him.

"I would give anything if he could be here, even if I were not here," Valerie Hogan said, and there was no doubt she meant it.

The 24-case permanent exhibit includes more than 300 objects, with the majority coming from Valerie Hogan. It details Ben Hogan's early years — did you know his real first name is William? — follows the highlights of his golf career, his accident and recovery and later his work as a clubmaker.

"I can tell you no one, no one loved golf more than Ben Hogan," Valerie Hogan said.

However, playing in tournaments wasn't what Ben Hogan enjoyed most. It was practicing on the range.

"I think he felt the actual playing of golf was for something else," she said. "Where he really enjoyed it was on the practice tee and then hoping he would play the way he would like to play."

One of the most feared golfers of his time, Hogan was known as a loner by many competitors. He spent endless hours on the practice range and was known to be a man of few words during a round.

Off the course, Valerie Hogan said her husband was a man of many interests who also tried to do his best at whatever he was doing. He also didn't speak much off the course, for a reason.

"He could discuss almost any subject with you because he was the best listener," she said. "As he said: 'People who talk all the time don't learn anything because you have to listen, that's how you learn,' and believe you me, he listened."

That wasn't true all the time, especially during his recovery from the head-on collision with a bus in 1949 that shattered his legs. After that, he always played in pain.

In the first month after the accident, Hogan barely survived blood clots in his left leg. It took him almost a year to start swinging a club again, said his wife, who admits she was never sure whether he would play again.

"After he got home, he surprised me one day," she said. "He so wanted to walk sometimes, he would slip out of the house. I had help and they wouldn't even know it. He would be out trying to walk and sometimes I'd have to go in the car and find him."

Within 16 months, he would win the U.S. Open in a playoff with Lloyd Mangrum and George Fazio, much to the surprise of his wife. He had qualified for the playoffs by playing a 36-hole final day at Merion.

"I'd have to say that the night he came in, I didn't feel he would have the strength the next morning because he eyes were in the back (of his head) and he was so very, very tired. I felt that he was not going to be able to play the next day."

But Hogan slept like a baby and woke up refreshed the next morning.

"Even then I doubted he would have the strength," she said. "I was probably the most surprised person he won."

Hogan would go on to win two more U.S. Opens — only Jack Nicklaus, Bobby Jones and Willie Anderson have won as many — and the 1953 British Open at Carnoustie. He won the Masters and U.S. Open that same year, a year he won five of the six tournaments in which he competed.

Ironically, Valerie and friends had to persuade Hogan to play in the British Open, the only time he did.

"He kept saying, 'I just think you want me to go just to see me get beat over there,'" his wife said.

Valerie Hogan's funniest comment was about the movie 'Follow The Sun' which portrayed her husband's life and starred Glenn Ford.

"Glenn Ford, he worked so hard, but he did not know how to play golf, but he told them he did," she said.

A woman who knew very little about golf when she married, Valerie Hogan has grown to love the game. She still watches it all the time. Justin Leonard is her favorite player.

Asked if anyone reminds her of her husband, she bluntly says, "No."

"I don't think it's fair to compare," she said. "I think he was the greatest, especially when he came back. I know what he went through and all that he did."

Women's major tourneys suffer from identity crisis

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

WEST POINT, Miss. — The size of the gallery and the size of the check were the only things that distinguished the U.S Women's Open from any other stop on the LPGA Tour.

After finishing two rounds at Old Waverly Golf Club, Kelli Kuehne was mildly surprised by her score of 9-under 135, especially since it wasn't even leading the tournament.

"This is the U.S. Open," she said. "Par is a prized possession, birdie is like a bonus and bogey is to be expected."

Not at Old Waverly.

That Juli Inkster won with 19 birdies and only three bogeys for 72 holes should not take away from what she accomplished. She was a great champion and next in line for the Hall of Fame. Her chief challenger was Kuehne, a feisty, 22-year-old Texan destined to be a star.

But women's golf needed more than what Old Waverly could offer.

In what should be the toughest test in golf, Inkster became the third champion in the past four years to set some kind of scoring record in the Women's Open.

Annika Sorenstam won with a 272 at Pine Needles in 1996. Alison Nicholas won at Pumpkin Ridge a year later with a score of 10-under. Inkster matched Sorenstam's score and shattered Nicholas' record in relation to par.

Blame unseasonably cool weather in May for keeping the rough so low that players didn't think twice about pulling a fairway metal. Blame two days of rain for making the green soft enough to make a 5-iron approach drop and stop.

Still, one USGA official predicted a month earlier that the women would "eat that place up." And Inkster realized after two practice rounds that under par would win.

The scoring and the style of play reflected the State Farm Rail Classic instead of the one tournament could set itself apart from what has otherwise become an identity crisis among the four majors in women's golf.

The LPGA Championship is in three weeks. It has the second-highest purse in women's golf ($1.4 million) and is the second-longest running event on the LPGA Tour behind the U.S. Open. Still, it's hard to take a major seriously when it has a title sponsor (McDonald's).

The first major of the year is named after a sponsor and an entertainer, although that can be excused for the Nabisco Dinah Shore.

More Sports/2D

The Dinah, the youngest of the four majors, started in 1983 and is critical to the LPGA. Eight tour events have food-related sponsors, and no doubt several of those were spawned by CEOs who discovered women's golf during the pro-am festivities.

Plus, it has a signature celebration of the winner taking a plunge into the lake in front of the 18th green (even Pat Hurst, who can't swim, got in up to her knees). The trouble is, no one sees it. The Dinah always goes up against The Players Championship. If that's not enough, the Final Four is the same weekend.

The fourth major may have more than an identity crisis on its hands. For those Americans who thought du Maurier was a French settler, it actually is a popular cigarette brand in Canada — one reason why the tournament is on its last leg.

The most likely replacement would be the Women's British Open, which was played at Royal Lytham & St. Annes last year and goes to Royal Birkdale next year. And that might be enough to replace the U.S. Women's Open as the "toughest test in golf."

SPURS: Team gets more time off

ically just restore themselves a little bit."

Rust does not seem to be a big concern for the Spurs, especially for veterans like Robinson who are glad to have some time off.

"It's played well for us so far," said Robinson, pointing out the Spurs had a few days off between each playoff series this year.

The Spurs have swept their last two rounds 4-0 and have won 10 straight playoff games.

"After the first round we had a nice little rest then we came back pretty fresh. Five days, after the second round. But I think we'll do the same this time," Robinson said. "We'll be ready to go."

The time off also gives point guard Avery Johnson's left knee a chance to heal. He bruised it late in the first half of Sunday's game after he slipped on a wet spot. But Johnson came back to play most of the second half.

Popovich said there is nothing structurally wrong and the bruise will ease. After arriving from Portland, Johnson sounded ready to go.

"We have to practice even harder," he said. "We've still got one more goal."

EAST: Series moves to Indiana

(From 1C)

6-foot-8 reserve guard scored 19 points in 31 minutes, consistently scoring big points to kill New York's bid for its fourth dramatic comeback in the series.

Rose and Mullin, who had 18 points, helped Indiana overcome a scoreless first half by Reggie Miller and Rik Smits to lead 45-32 at halftime and foil every New York comeback bid.

"This is not a one- or two-man show. Guys really know how to step up when other guys have been injured or have been struggling through the course of a game," Miller said.

The Knicks remain confident despite Indiana regaining home-court advantage in the best-of-7 series.

"We're not down," said Marcus Camby, who came off the bench to lead the Knicks with 18 points and 14 rebounds. "Both teams are going to be pumped up, juiced up. ... We just have to play better on defense."

Sprewell agreed.

"We're confident that we can win on the road. You know home-court advantage doesn't really mean much. The teams have been pretty evenly matched," he said. "It's just all about who is playing well and who is defending well."

CWS: LSU misses tourney

(From 1C)

"I like the idea of some fresh people that haven't been there much before," Texas A&M coach Mark Johnson said. "I don't like to see total domination by any team in any sport."

Some new blood might even make the CWS more fun to watch. Johnson said the famed traditions of Aggie football fans — kissing after touchdowns, coordinated cheering and so on — sometimes carry over to the baseball diamond.

"We have a lot of great fans," Johnson said. "They have real Aggie spirit and we know those who show up in Omaha will carry it well."

The NCAA tournament grew this year from 48 to 64 teams. As a result, the NCAA Division I baseball committee added super regionals for the first time to fill out the expanded bracket.

"Our super regional was pitted against Alabama and they were the hottest team in the country," Bertman said. "We weren't good enough to beat them at their place. USC of course would have been back, but they ran into the same problem we had. They had to go to Stanford's place."

So while Texas A&M fans are puckering up at Rosenblatt, Bertman said he will be mowing his lawn in Baton Rouge.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar fell broadly against major European currencies Tuesday as data showed Germany's economy stronger than expected, signaling that surrounding stagnant economies could be expanding.

The dollar also fell against the yen as rumors surfaced that a major upcoming economic report will show Japan may be finally recovering from its devastating recession.

In late New York trading, the euro was quoted at $1.0458, up from $1.0286 late Monday and its most recent record low of $1.0260, set in the opening of trading in London Monday. In other late trading Tuesday, the dollar was quoted at 118.88 Japanese yen, down from 120.80 yen.

Traders liked several pieces of news Tuesday, including a report showing that Germany's gross domestic product rose 0.7 percent on an annual basis, against an expected growth rate of 0.5 percent.

The euro has been sliding since its inception in January as Europe's economies have lagged. The German economy is the world's third largest and the largest in Europe, and has not been able to help the flagging economies in the 11 countries the euro represents.

Stocks fall

NEW YORK (AP) — The fear of higher interest rates returned to Wall Street Tuesday after a three-session hiatus, sending blue-chip stocks and bond prices sharply lower.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 143.74 to close at 10,765.64, more than wiping out Monday's solid gains.

Broader stock indicators also ended lower. The Standard & Poor's 500 dropped 17.19 to 1,317.33, and the technology-dominated Nasdaq composite index fell 49.71 to 2,474.50.

Major market averages rallied in recent days as new economic data suggested the nation's unprecedented growth may be continuing without rising inflation. Analysts said many investors had abandoned their certainty that the Federal Reserve would raise interest rates to stifle inflation when its Open Market Committee meets June 29.

Gas prices rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy futures prices were mixed on the New York Mercantile Exchange Tuesday amid news of a refinery shutdown.

Prices rose early in the day after news that the Valero Energy Corp. would shut down a refinery in Corpus Christi, Texas, for a week.

After reaching a high of $18.07 a barrel, however, light sweet crude for delivery in July succumbed to a round of late selling and finished down 20 cents to $17.66.

In other trading, July unleaded gasoline rose 0.24 cent to 51.49 cents a gallon; July heating oil fell .33 cent to 42.05 cents a gallon.

Natural gas for July delivery fell 4.9 cents to $2.393 for each 1,000 cubic feet.

In London, North Sea Brent Blend crude oil for delivery in July fell 26 cents to $15.84 a barrel.

Volume was light in New York as investors awaited the survey results by the American Petroleum Institute, released after the close of Tuesday's trading.

Airlines boost then slash fares

CHICAGO (AP) — Just a week after raising fares, the nation's major airlines on Tuesday began offering steep discounts for summer vacationers.

Major airlines quickly matched the sale by United Airlines, the nation's No. 1 carrier, on leisure domestic and international tickets.

Analysts said the airlines brought on the fare war by adding too many planes to fleets too quickly, leaving many seats empty despite strong bookings. Wall Street expressed its disapproval to the fare cuts by sending airline company stocks lower.

Under the promotion, consumers would see the best savings on tickets purchased in advance for travel on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Saturdays. In some cases, those traveling in parties of three could pay less for all their tickets combined than one full-fare ticket cost earlier this year after prices jumped 11 percent.

"The real winners here are those in larger parties and those flying coast-to-coast, amounting to savings in some cases of 55 percent," said Tom Parsons, editor of Bestfares.com, an Internet travel company.

"The major airlines haven't given us a 55 percent discount in many, many moons, so people should sit down and consider these will probably be the best fares of the summer," Parsons said.

For example, ticket prices for a round trip from New York to Los Angeles fell to $398 from as high as $622 earlier this month. And two fellow travelers could fly that route for just $258 each.

United also capped advanced round-trip domestic tickets for the remaining travel days at $498.

The promotion, in which tickets must be purchased by June 18, applies to travel through the end of September.

The sale is similar to a more restricted promotion launched last week by Northwest Airlines that was due to expire in a few days. In addition to the Northwest cuts, the latest promotion allows for travel on Saturdays and sets no age limit on companion travel.

The fare war undercuts a 4 percent boost in ticket prices instituted last week by major airlines and comes as the carriers are finding an unexpectedly large number of empty seats despite strong summer bookings.

Thirteen percent of Americans are expected to fly this summer, up 3 percent from a year ago, according to the Travel Industry Association of America.

The fare war also comes after United parent UAL Corp. and US Airways Group, the sixth-largest carrier, warned second-quarter profits will fall below Wall Street expectations because of weak demand.

Airlines, flush with success from three years of record profits, recently went on a plane-buying spree and have been adding flights faster than they retire older planes.

New planes have been arriving as May bookings came up unexpectedly short. Traffic industrywide rose 1.4 percent, less than a third of the 3.7 percent capacity increase. And the amount of plane seats filled, called the load factor, posted the sharpest monthly decline since mid-1993, at 1.6 percentage points.

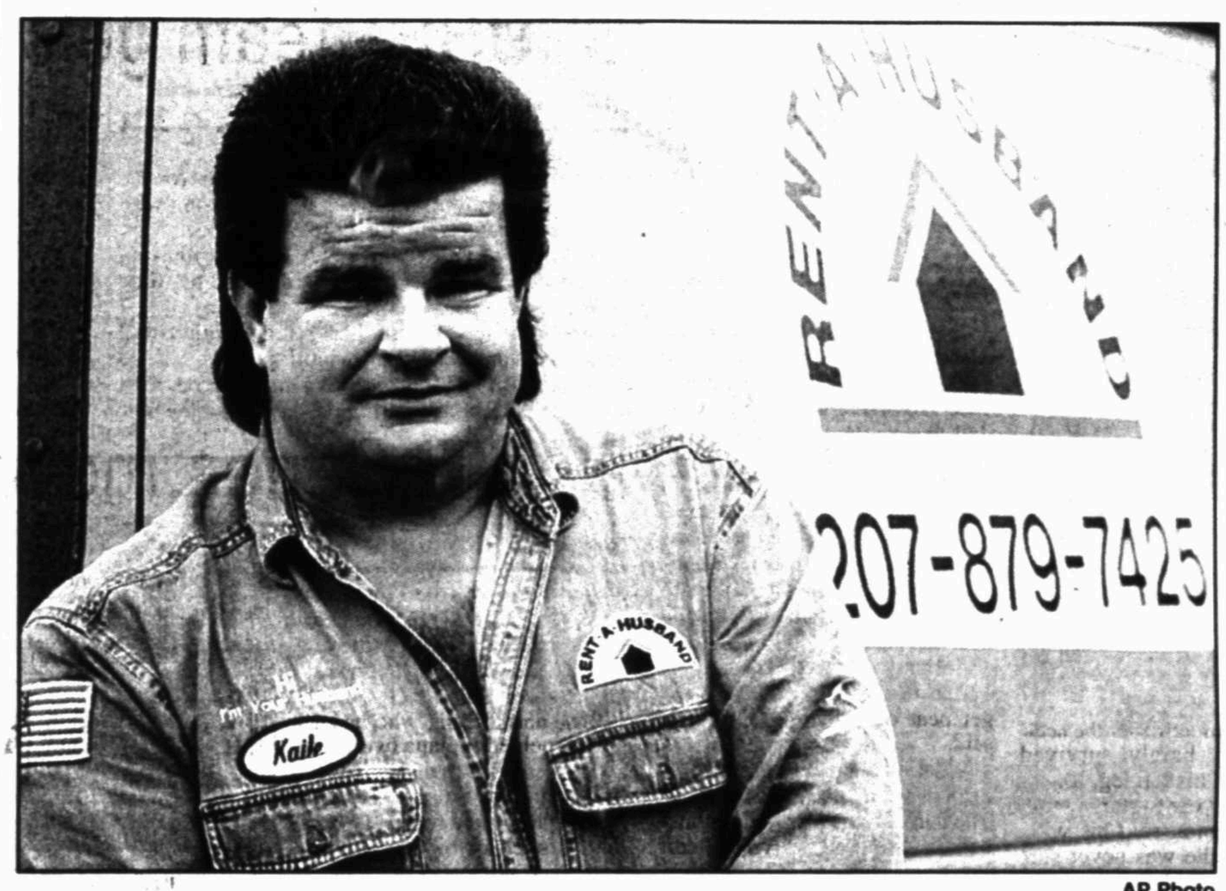

Aviation analyst Samuel Buttrick at PaineWebber said airlines also have been hurt as companies better manage travel expenses for their employees. Airlines generally court business travelers because tickets cost far more than leisure fares.

"Corporations are gaining leverage in managing travel expenses by increasingly opting for advanced purchases, negotiated discounts with preferred carriers and using the Internet as a booking tool," Buttrick said. "With the Internet, they now have a booking tool that allows them — and consumers — to access the lowest fares for a particular itinerary."

United spokesman Joe Hopkins said consumers who previously purchased tickets under the old fares can get a travel credit for the difference or can get a cash refund after paying a $75 ticket-change fee.

Airline shares tumbled on the New York Stock Exchange. UAL's stock fell $2.56 1/4, or by 3.9 percent, to $63.81 1/4 a share. American's stock fell $2, or 2.9 percent, to $67.68 3/4 a share, while Delta fell $1.06 1/4, or 1.7 percent, to $59.93 3/4 a share.

IBM continues 2nd day of claims against Microsoft

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a second day of testimony damaging to Microsoft, an IBM Corp. manager accused the software giant Tuesday of dangling valuable discounts for Windows if IBM agreed not to distribute rival software on its line of personal computers.

Garry Norris, a manager at International Business Machines Corp., testified that Microsoft executive Bengt Ackerlind told him clearly in a March 1997 meeting: "No Netscape."

The government showed U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson the notes handwritten by Norris regarding that meeting, when Microsoft Corp. allegedly offered to increase rebates available under its so-called Market Development Agreements if IBM promised not to include Internet software from Netscape Communications Corp. in the personal computers it sold.

In notes he marked in the margins with three asterisks for significance, Norris wrote: "No Netscape & receive more MDA $ across the PC Co."

Norris, the government's next-to-last witness in its antitrust case, recounted the meeting with Ackerlind, who wanted IBM to distribute on its computers the fourth version of Microsoft's Internet Explorer Web browser software.

"We would have to agree to load IE 4 without any competitive software," Norris said, shifting in his seat to face the judge. "Bengt was very specific. He said, 'No Netscape.'"

For a second day, the judge appeared transfixed by parts of the testimony. He took notes and alternated glances between Norris and Microsoft's lawyers at their defense table.

Finals for Stars, Spurs kick sales in Dallas area into high gear

UNDATED (AP) — With two Texas teams making it to their respective championships, Lone Star pride has kicked into high gear this week.

Hockey fans and basketball devotees across the state are rallying for the Dallas Stars and San Antonio Spurs. It's a rare opportunity for everyone, including those from cities without their own national teams, to get on the bandwagon.

One ebullient Dallas radio talk show host said Monday, "A Texas takeover — bring that on."

Merchandisers are adding staff, beefing up stock and doing what they can to get hockey and basketball team gear to thousands of souvenir-hungry fans.

"We've more than doubled the stock, and even that's not sufficient" said Terrence Brown of Aramark, a company licensed to the Spurs to sell official team products. "We've had to have everything expressed in (by shipping companies)."

Brown said the demand for merchandise specially made for the Western Conference champs has pushed sales about 40 percent higher for this time of year. Aramark has two stores — one inside the Alamodome and the other within walking distance of the stadium.

At the StarStuff store in the Dallas area, located at the Dr Pepper Stars Center in suburban Irving, sales are running 300 percent above previous years.

Jill Moore, the Dallas Stars' retail manager, told The Dallas Morning News: "It's just nonstop. The frightening thing is this is nothing like what it will be if we win the Stanley Cup."

Both sports franchises sell traditional team-branded sports goods, like tee shirts, posters, jackets, caps and game jerseys. But the stores are also seeing a rush on newly-minted souveniers like miniature Stars goalie masks, Matchbox-sized Zambonies, Spurs beer steins and silver and black Spurs car flags.

Brown said he's even considered stocking actual boot spurs, made of heavy metal with a Spurs logo branded on the cowboy gizmo's boot latch.

For their own part, San Antonio officials are expecting the benefits of a Spurs championship match to bring in even more cash and more exposure that the city saw when it hosted the NCAA Final Four two years ago.

"Were excited to be going to the dance," said Carmen Vazquez-Gonzalez, a spokeswoman for the city manager's office. "The first two finals games are sold out, and this means (the city) gets much more international coverage — it's the NBA."

John Solis, of the San Antonio Convention and Visitors Bureau, said a Spurs championship could turn out to be the biggest event the city has hosted.

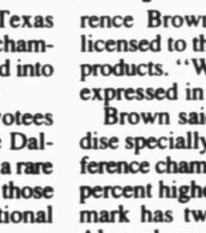

In Dallas, a town raised on football and quickly earning its mark in baseball and hockey fan loyalty, the Stanley Cup finals games on Tuesday and coming up on Thursday have some talking about even grander events.

New building under construction for Texas agency

By Melia McEwen

Under construction on Air Park Road next to the post office is a new two-story office building for the Midland regional headquarters of the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services.

McEwen

Public Information Officer Melissa Weaver explained that the lease on its offices at 1030 Andrews Highway was expiring, and the department had outgrown its space.

"When Midland was made its own region, we leased the space on an emergency basis," she said. "Before we were made our own region, overseeing 30 counties, we were tied to Abilene and then with El Paso, so it's a positive thing that we were made our own region."

She said the department expects to move in to the new building, which will house a regional headquarters staff of about 40, in September.

"We'll also be pulling in positions from Odessa and Midland that more logically belong in regional headquarters," she said.

The department's caseworkers will remain in the building at 901 W. Wall.

Now open in the North Park Shopping Center, 4706 N. Midkiff, is POKA LAMBRO WIRELESS.

Beth Bridges, vice president of public relations, said that the store is a retail store front for the company's Digital Personal Communications Service (PCS) wireless service.

Customers can go into the store, purchase a wireless phone and sign up for service, ask questions or seek service, she said.

Options range from monthly plans for 100 minutes or 1,000 minutes and can include call waiting, call forwarding or three-way calling. Ms. Bridges added that customers who make a call from the home area, which includes Midland-Odessa, Big Spring up to Lubbock, where the company is based, to anywhere in Texas, New Mexico or Oklahoma, for free.

"We market them as super cordless phones," she said. "They can be your home phone number, business phone or mobile phone all in one and include Caller ID and voice mail."

Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday. A grand opening is planned for July.

The ALBERTSON'S at 4706 N. Midkiff is undergoing a complete renovation, according to store director Bill Higginbotham.

"Everything will be brand new," he said. "The only thing existing will be the four walls."

He said the store will be redone in the new corporate design and include a full-service bank, one hour photo service and a coffee and cappuccino bar, all items the corporation is putting in its stores to meet the desires and demands of its customers.

"It's a gorgeous design," he said.

The renovations are expected to be phased in over the next several months, he said.

Now located at 1005 N. Midkiff is WRIGHTWAY VACUUM CLEANER CENTER, formerly at 903 S. Midkiff.

Owned by Glen Wright, Wrightway Vacuum sells new and rebuilt vacuum cleaners, has repair service and sells attachments and other accessories.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

MIDLAND PARK MALL will host an arts and crafts show throughout the property Thursday through Sunday.

Also at the mall, CREATIVE EXPRESSIONS will be located in front of Radio Shack through June 18 setting appointments for photographs, which will be taken June 24-27 next to Sears.

Sunny Brown, a partner in PET HAVEN pet store, and her husband Glen have added PET HAVEN PET SITTING AND PET TAXI SERVICE.

They will care for a customer's pet while the customer is out of town, or the pet taxi can take dogs from home to the shop for grooming and back home or to the veterinarian.

Teen-agers gobble up soft batch 'homestyle' cookies

By Linda Anderson

Well, I made the mistake of taking my kid to the supermarket with me on one of my weekly shopping trips. I know, I know, that can be a mistake because they can find all kinds of things to buy, which changes your whole shopping list. But she hasn't been to the store with me in years, and as a recent high school graduate, she's going to have to get used to going to the store for herself (shopping with me was a training exercise). That's one of those chores you have to learn to do for yourself when you leave the family nest, right?

So anyway, I took my kid to the supermarket with me and she heavily influenced my shopping decisions — that's just a nice way of saying she found things to try that I would never have dreamed of buying, mainly because they were expensive!

One of the items she said really looked good was Keebler's Soft Batch Homestyle Cookies in Double Chocolate Chunk. (Can you tell she's her mother's daughter?) And I, as a doting mother whose baby is soon to go out on her own, caved in and bought a box.

The 10.8-ounce box of the large, soft, chocolate-chocolate chip cookies cost $2.50 (on sale for $5 for two boxes), but contained only "One Dozen BIG Cookies," according to the label. That's 12 cookies. For $2.50. Like I said, she picked out more expensive stuff than I would normally buy.

One of these cookies contains 130 calories, with 60 of them from fat, according to its nutrition label.

Label advertising claims these "New" cookies are "Cookies So Soft They Taste like They're Right From the Oven."

On the back of the box, the Keebler Elves get into the act: "We Keebler Elves have been busy baking up another special tradition...a batch of soft cookies that look and taste like a cookie should...Soft Batch Homestyle cookies. Made with chunks of chocolate and other high-quality ingredients. Soft Batch Homestyle cookies are an Uncommonly Good way to give your taste buds a hug ..."

Well, I tell you, that was almost enough to make me swear off chocolate, but I won't go that far, even though that advertising is obnoxious! I mean, "give your taste buds a hug"!!!!! How gross and disgusting!

The taste test showed that even very large children — soon to be official adults — act like small ones when it comes to cookies (especially when there's only a dozen in the bag). They all agreed, however, that the cookies are "awesome." It's nice when they agree on something!

Personally, I thought the cookies tasted like every other soft, "homemade" style, store-bought chocolate-chocolate chip cookie I've ever tried. And in my opinion, store-bought cookies don't taste like homemade ones, no matter how hard the company tries.

The kids loved them though...

Staff Reports

June is often associated with brides, but this month also heralds the arrival of other types of seasonal showers: baby showers and reunion receptions. The gift shower, however, is enjoying a renaissance of sorts as the children of the baby boomers reach the age of marriage and parenthood.

"As members of Generation X are growing into adulthood, they are embracing many of the old traditions that their parents discarded when they were in their 20s," said Nancy Siler, consumer affairs director of Wilton Enterprises and a home-entertaining expert. "The return of semi-formal bridal and baby showers is one of those traditions."

According to Ms. Siler, while gift-giving for weddings and births has remained relatively constant through the years, the shower itself is enjoying newfound popularity.

"A shower is nice because it turns gift-giving into a unique event and a social occasion," she said.

It all adds up to tables laden buffet-style with finger foods. Unless the guest of honor requests it, a shower does not typically include a full meal. Having enough tables for people to sit down with plates is often a problem, so finger foods take away the need for cutting and having a flat surface. Finger foods are also more convenient for guests to eat while gifts are given and the games played.

According to Ms. Siler, the ideal menu for a bridal or baby shower is an assortment of homemade candies, petit fours and fruit tarts.

"Everyone likes to nibble on something sweet, and by making the candies and Petit Fours yourself, you can decorate them according to the shower theme," Ms. Siler said.

For heartier fare, opt for an antipasto platter, heaps of fresh fruit and finger sandwiches.

PETIT FOURS

You will need:
Bite size cookie cutters
12x18 jelly roll pan
Vegetable cooking spray
Parchment roll or waxed paper
Pastry brush
1 box cake mix
1/2 cup seedless raspberry jam, melted
CHOCOLATE GLAZE:
1 package (12 ounces) dark cocoa candy melts
3/4 cup heavy cream
WHITE GLAZE:
1 package (12 ounces) White candy melts 2 tablespoons vegetable oil

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Spray 12 x18-inch pan with vegetable pan spray. Line bottom of pan with parchment or waxed paper. Prepare cake mix according to directions on package. Pour batter into prepared pan spread evenly. Bake 17-20 minutes or until cake springs back when touched. Cool 10 minutes in pan, invert on rack and cool. Cut into desired bite-size shapes with cookie cutters. With a pastry brush remove excess cake crumbs and brush with melted jam. Place on cooling rack; pour glaze over pieces, touch up with spatula if necessary. May require two coatings. Allow to dry before decorating.

Shower etiquette for the '90s

While the gift shower has returned to vogue, there is some confusion as to the proper etiquette for hosting a bridal or baby shower. Nancy Siler, consumer affairs director of Wilton Enterprises and a home-entertaining expert, offers the following basic guidelines:

■ Showers should be hosted by a friend of the couple/mother-to-be. Historically, it has been considered improper for a family member to host a shower. Because showers are a gift-giving event, a member of the family was thought to appear greedy. While attitudes have changed slightly to allow sisters to host a shower, the bride or expectant mother should not host her own shower.

■ The bride/expectant mother should be consulted in planning the shower. The hostess should talk to the guest of honor about possible dates and times, the guest list and gift ideas. It's important for the hostess to know what items are needed because many of the guests will ask about this. For this reason, a "surprise" shower is generally difficult to plan.

■ If it is not the first wedding or child, host a "sprinkle" instead of a

PARTIES: No one wants to cut food at a bridal reception

(From 8C)

CHOCOLATE GLAZE:

Heat cream until bubbles just break at side of pan or microwave container. Remove from heat, add candy melts, cover and let set five minutes. Stir until smooth.

WHITE GLAZE:

HOMEMADE CANDIES

Molding Candy:

Fill the desired mold with melted Premium Candy Melts, using a spoon. Or fill an uncut disposable decorating bag with melted coating, cut tip and use to fill mold. When the mold is filled, tap it several times on a counter to eliminate air bubbles.

Chill the filled mold in the refrigerator or freezer until candy has set (about 15-20 minutes). When the underside of the candy mold appears frosted, the candy is ready to unmold. If there are any dark areas on the underside of the mold it means some of the coating is still soft, so chill the mold for a few more minutes.

Unmold the candies onto a cotton dishtowel or waxed paper. Simply invert the mold about an inch above the surface, then gently flex or tap the mold.

DRIZZLING:

Drizzling decorations in contrasting colors is an easy way to add sparkle to your candy. Use a decorating tip with a small opening or cut a very small opening in a disposable bag. Hold bag at a 90-degree angle slightly above candy.

Drizzle strings of melted candy using a side-to-side motion. When firm, trim excess coating from the bases of candy pieces with a sharp knife.

DIPPING FRUIT

Fresh fruit needs to be washed and dried before dipping. For slices or chunks of apple or banana, dip first into lemon juice to prevent discoloration let dry, then dip in melted Candy Melts. Hold strawberries and cherries by the stems to dip in coating. For other fruit, use a dipping fork.

CANDY CLUSTERS

Mix nuts, coconut, crisped cereal, dried fruit or any combination of ingredients into melted Candy Melts (about 1 cup of ingredients to 1 cup melted Candy Melts. Drop the mixture in 1-tablespoon portions on to wax paper and let set.

TRUFFLES

1 (12-ounce) package candy melts in desired color 1/3 cup whipping cream 1 tablespoon liqueur, for flavor (optional)

Chop candy melts coarsely; set aside.

Place cream in a small saucepan over medium heat and heat just until bubbles break around the sides of the pan, stir constantly; remove from heat; add chopped candy melts and cover pan.

Let stand approximately 5 minutes or until coating has melted; 1 tablespoon liqueur can be added at this point for flavor, if desired. Stir until smooth and creamy. Refrigerate until firm. Roll into balls. Truffles may be rolled into a variety of coatings (Sprinkles, chopped nuts, coconut, cocoa powder, and confectioner's sugar.

Yield: 25 to 30 3/4-diameter centers.

FRUIT TARTS

Will need:

Round single tart molds

Square single tart molds

1 package (15 ounces) refrigerated pie crusts

Assorted fresh fruit:

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Roll dough on lightly floured surface to 11-inch round. Turn tart mold over and cut out six pastry shells.

Press into bottom and sides of mold. Prick dough with fork. Place on cookie sheet and bake 10-12 minutes or until lightly browned. Cool. Spread one tablespoon cream cheese mixture into each tart. Top with assorted fresh fruit.

CREAM CHEESE SPREAD

2 (3 ounce) packages cream cheese, softened

1/2 cup granulated sugar

3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice

1 tablespoon fresh lemon peel

Combine all ingredients and blend well. Makes approximately 1/2 cup.

ANTIPASTO PLATTER

1 cup antipasto party olives

1 (4 ounce) jar of marinated artichoke hearts

1/4 cup chopped onion

1/4 cup sliced radishes

1/4 cup crumbled feta cheese

1/4 pound thinly sliced Genoa salami

1/4 pound thinly sliced hard salami

1/4 pound thinly sliced pepperoni

3/4 cup Kalamata olives

3/4 cup country olive mix

3/4 cup cracked green olives

5 roasted sweet peppers, cut into long strips

12 breadsticks

In a bowl, toss together antipasto party olives, artichoke hearts, onions, radishes and cheese. Place mixture in center of large serving platter. Tightly roll meat. Place meat and olives around outside of platter. Wrap strips of roasted sweet pepper around breadsticks; place on platter. Serves 12.

MEDITERRANEAN PITA POCKET

1 (8-ounce) container plain yogurt

1/2 whole cucumber, peeled, seeded and finely chopped

1/4 teaspoon dried leaf oregano

2 whole pita pockets, each cut in half

4 Romaine lettuce leaves, center rib removed, washed and thinly sliced crosswise

1/2 pound deli roast pork or ham, thinly sliced

1 (10-ounce) tray sweet Florina pepper strips, drained

1/2 cup pitted Kalamata olives quartered

For dressing, in a small bowl, combine yogurt, chopped cucumber and oregano; set aside. Gently open pita pockets. Place lettuce in the bottom of each pocket.

Top with 1/4 each roasted pork or ham, pepper strips and olives. Drizzle each pita with 2 to 3 tablespoons dressing and serve. Makes 4 pita sandwiches.

ETIQUETTE: Keep party at two hours

(From 8C)

shower. Just because it may not be appropriate to host the traditional gift-giving party this doesn't mean that a wedding or impending birth isn't a good occasion for friends and family to gather.

■ Hold the shower at least one month before the wedding or due date. Avoid scheduling a shower too close to the big day, as that can be a busy time for the guest of honor.

■ A shower should last approximately two hours. This leaves time for the gift exchange, general conversation and possibly a couple of games. No more than two hours will drag things on. Best to move to conversation after two hours.

DEAR ABBY

Female dating game players share rulebook with men

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a young woman who, along with my friends, has run into many different men — and many different styles of dating. We have compared notes, and decided that it's time to share some basic "dating guidelines" for the men out there:

Van Buren

1. Whoever asks (male or female), pays. Whoever pays makes the plans.

2. If you really like a girl and are broke, don't ask her to share costs — and if she offers money, refuse. If she's worth your emotional investment, she'll be happy going to free concerts, picnics, etc.

3. A guy who asks for money to help with the date before he's asked you to be his girlfriend (usually around three months) is usually just "marking time" and looking for a fling until someone he really likes comes along. And even if you're going steady, don't assume she'll share the expenses from then on.

4. Meet her where it's convenient for her the first few dates, and after that, pick her up from work or her place. Open doors, help her with her coat, etc.

5. Don't whine and sulk if she won't sleep with you right away. It's truly unattractive, and if you're dating her just for sex, and that's obviously not what she's in it for — be nice, break it off and say goodbye.

6. Call several days ahead to ask, then call to re-confirm the night before.

These are the basics, Abby. If your readers have anything else to add, we're open to suggestions. — 20-SOMETHING IN L.A.

DEAR 20-SOMETHING: Your contemporary rules for dating may raise a few eyebrows, but they seem sensible to me. Readers? Anything you'd like to add?

DEAR ABBY: In about a month, my sister "Jane" and her husband, "Dick," are going to Hawaii for a vacation. Dick enjoys the nude beaches, but Jane does not — and she has gotten a lot of verbal abuse about it.

For the entire 32 years of their marriage, Dick has verbally abused my sister because of her weight. Jane has tried every diet known to man, and then some. Her self-esteem is low. He takes every dime he makes, and refuses to allow her to buy clothing when her weight is up. She works in the public sector and feels terrible because she can't dress as well as her co-workers.

During the last conversation I had with her, she said, "Don't get me wrong. I appreciate the vacation, but I just can't go nude. And Dick says he'll cut my bathing suit off me if I refuse. I don't know what to do."

Of course, Dick has never had a weight problem and has always looked like he walked out of GQ.

Abby, could you please offer some suggestions? I know Dick needs counseling, but that is out. — JANE'S SISTER

DEAR JANE'S SISTER: Dick doesn't need counseling as much as your sister does. Jane needs to understand why she has tolerated for 32 years the kind of treatment you have described, and to become strong enough to demand the kind of respect she deserves. Until she does that, nothing will change.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a single parent, a father raising a 6-year-old boy. My father also lives in our home. My son gets a lot of attention from Dad and me, and he also has everything money can buy.

My friends have advised me to marry as soon as possible so that my son will have a mother. Should I rush into a marriage? How will living in an all-male household affect my son? — WONDERING DAD

DEAR WONDERING: Although it's ideal for a child to have two parents in his life, the wrong mother is worse than no mother at all. Should you notice signs that your son is "missing" something, enlist the help of a female relative to provide some female influence. Or consult a child psychologist to advise you.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? Get it off your chest by writing to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

WNBA players find out that labor stress is gender blind

By Lena Williams and Judy Battista
N.Y. Times News Service

The players union of the Women's National Basketball Association overwhelmingly ratified a labor contract last month, the first in women's professional team sports in the United States. The players won increased salaries, year-round health coverage, including maternity leave, a matching 401(k) program and limited job security for veterans.

But many of the WNBA players agree that the process of insuring labor peace and jobs for the next four years was a lot rougher than they expected.

Nearly three months of bargaining revealed an inexperienced union at odds with itself, its leadership and management, insecure in the knowledge that it stood to lose as much as it might gain.

"As women basketball players, we weren't really experienced in dealing with things like the union, the league and collective bargaining," said the Houston Comets' Cynthia Cooper, the league's two-time most valuable player.

But the union also faced an issue it could not control: 90 fellow pros were out of work because the rival American Basketball League had folded in late December. As the WNBA prepared for its third season, the pros no longer had the option of playing in another American league.

"We had no bargaining power," said Rebecca Lobo, the Liberty forward and a member of the negotiating committee. "As soon as the ABL folded, we had no leverage. "We went in there and just tried to get the best thing we could get. And I think we did a good job."

The union wanted to limit the number of ABL players allowed into the WNBA, while the league wanted no restrictions.

"It was extremely difficult because we had to continually justify, not only to ourselves, but to our friends in the ABL and the public, the general position that we took," said Coquese Washington, the Liberty forward who emerged as one of the most vocal player representatives. "As a union that organized before the ABL folded, we had a constituency that had issues to be met, and job security was an issue before the ABL went under."

In the end, the WNBA expansion teams in Orlando and Minnesota were allowed to have five ABL players each. The other 10 WNBA teams were limited to three each, either as draftees or free agents. After this season, there will be no limit on signing ABL players and in 2000 four more teams will join the league, creating an additional 44 jobs for players.

Other bumps in the negotiations were predictable once the women voted last November to align themselves with the National Basketball Players Association. By the time the women started negotiating their contract with the league, the NBPA had just ended its contentious labor dispute with the National Basketball Association, which owns and operates the WNBA.

"We feared being shut down all together and alienating fans of the league," said Lisa Leslie, the star center for the Los Angeles Sparks.

Given the tangential concerns — plus the players' labor inexperience — their mistakes were inevitable.

"People who are new at collective bargaining always make mistakes," said Richard Hurd, professor of labor studies at Cornell University. "If you're negotiating an established contract, then you go over every word and see if you can improve it. With a first agreement, things slip by."

The union, for example, did not raise the issue of how players from the ABL would be classified upon joining the league. Union leaders assumed the players would be considered veterans, which would entitle them to be paid at a higher scale. The league viewed them as rookies.

The dispute was one of a handful of issues that on April 22 led to the collapse of an agreement in principle reached between the league and the union eight days earlier. What happened next caught the union off guard: the league issued a news release accusing the union of reneging on key terms of the agreement and making new economic demands. It also postponed the April 27 draft.

When the WNBA made those announcements, the union's top three officials were out of town. Some of the players learned of the developments in news reports.

A small but vocal group of players made it clear to the negotiating committee that they weren't prepared to walk out over a few lingering contract demands. Among the issues was a league stipulation that players would not be allowed to play for the season if they had not signed a contract by May 14, the start of training camp.

"When the draft was canceled, that really caught my eye," said Nikki McCray, a guard for the Washington Mystics. "That's when everybody just got together and said, 'Look, what's at the table right now is not worth us losing our season.' We didn't want to start the season with negative energy from our fans."

The players said they were hearing one thing from the union, and reading another from management.

"I never knew which side to listen to," said Rhonda Blades, who plays for the Mystics. "I would listen to the conference calls, but it was hard to know who to trust."

Some players also had a hard time trusting the union leader they inherited: Billy Hunter, the head of the NBPA, who played an integral role in organizing the women but was better known for his role in the NBA lockout.

"I was seen, or at least, I was characterized as being somewhat of an impediment to the negotiations," said Hunter, who participated in only a half-dozen negotiating sessions. "I felt it was incumbent on my part, and probably in the best interest of the women, to remove myself from the scene. So while I was involved, I just wasn't out front."

But his conspicuous absence led to accusations, from some players and advocates of women's pro sports, that he was neglecting the women.

Hunter said he was briefed on everything that took place. By the time he appointed Pamela M. Wheeler as director of operations for the WNBA players association on March 30, most of the groundwork for the contract was already in place.

"It was important to the women to have a woman there," Hunter said about Wheeler during the final stages of negotiations, which also involved Valerie B. Ackerman, the WNBA's commissioner.

"I wasn't operating in a vacuum," Wheeler said. "I was armed, not only with the necessary tools from Billy, but his confidence in my ability to help arrive at a bargaining agreement. We also had extremely competent attorneys from the NBPA"

Yet others were disappointed in the players' decision to accept the men's union. The Women's Coaches Association, which has 4,500 members in the collegiate and professional ranks, felt it could do more to champion the needs and concerns of the women of the WNBA.

"They are not up on the personalities of women's basketball, the coaches, the players, not just the athletes but the movers and shakers of the game," Beth Bass, executive director of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association, said about the men's union. "This is the very thing our association was worried about. You get people involved that don't understand the history of game, and especially the women's game. The men's game is different from the women, especially in development."

And as a new union, the women were completely dependent upon the men of the NBA for funding and staff. The women didn't have the luxury of holding out with the men footing the bill.

Considering the logistics of briefing 132 athletes, some playing overseas, and facing a deadline imposed by a season timed to the NBA's off season, the union said it was proud reaching an agreement in less than four months and walking away with something to please most, if not all.

Next time around, however, the players hope to do things differently.

For starters, Lobo would like to get rid of some of the lawyers.

"When you have six or seven lawyers on each side involved," Lobo said, "you're in for a lot of, 'What does this word mean?' The negotiations would have been good, if you had a player, who really had a good handle on things, a bright attorney with Val and a bright attorney with the union."

Even better, Lobo suggested, would be a change in scenery.

"In three years, when we have to renegotiate, we should all go out on a golf course and get the deal done," she said.

Pay higher in NBA

Rookies playing in the NBA make nearly five times more than in the WNBA. Veteran NBA players earn 13 times as much as their female couterparts.

Per-game minimum pay*:

Veterans
NBA $12,195
WNBA $938

Rookies
NBA $3,681
WNBA $781

*Averages based on the following salaries: NBA, 1999-2000 season, 82 games: veteran, $1 million; rookie, $301,875. WNBA, 1999 season, 32 games: veteran, $30,000; rookie, $25,000

Sparks to get relief from Yugoslavian stars

Wire Reports

LOS ANGELES — The two highly regarded Yugoslavian players expected to join the Sparks' training camp roster late will be arriving in Los Angeles today and have one day to practice with the team before the season opener Thursday.

But still, the 5-foot-10 guard Gordana Grubin and 6-6 center Nina Bjedov are expected to make the 11-player cut Wednesday.

The pair has been with the Yugoslavian national team competing in the European Championships this past weekend.

Sparks coach Orlando Woolridge saw both last year when he was an assistant coach on the USA Basketball women's national team. Woolridge speaks highly of Grubin, 26, who can play the point or shooting guard.

The Sparks will have five guards in camp with Grubin joining. She is expected to put pressure on point guards Penny Toler and Jamila Wideman. Rookie Ukari Figgs has received the nod as the starting point guard.

Bjedov will help in the low post.

"She's 6-6, a very good body, and does a great job of shooting the ball from outside facing up," Woolridge said. "She has good post moves. She relly understands the game. We're fortunate to have two other Olympians to join what we have here right now."

WNBA named All-Star coaches

NEW YORK — The WNBA said that Linda Hill-McDonald of the Cleveland Rockers and Van Chancellor of the Houston Comets will be the coaches for the league's inaugural All-Star Game.

The coaches were selected on the basis of their teams' respective finishes as conference champions during the 1998 season.

Hill-MacDonald, who will coach the Eastern Conference, led the Rockers to a 20-10 regular season record and the team's first post-season appearance.

Chancellor, who will coach the Western Conference, guided the Comets to their second consecutive WNBA championship last season and a 27-3 regular-season record.

The WNBA All-Star Game will be held July 14 at Madison Square Garden in New York.
