Hospital battle has just begun

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Out of a three-ring fight last week emerged one local hospital as the apparent winner in a battle for similar facilities which include psychiatric and/or chemical dependency services. But "the fireworks have not even started yet," according to Tom Camp, administrator of the Texas Health Facilities Commission.

Midland Memorial Hospital's application for a $3.4 million 50-bed chemical dependency facility was given a favorable recommendation by the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency Wednesday night.

The other hospitals, Parkview and West Plains, lost the first round in competing for similar certificates of need to establish psychiatric hospitals with drug/alcohol abuse services when the PBHSA handed them an unfavorable recommendation.

Parkview's application calls for a $500,000 conversion of the existing 60-bed facility to a 60-bed psychiatric hospital. West Plains, a hospital with Southwest of Midland/Odessa Inc., applied for a $4.169 million, 60-bed psychiatric hospital. Both facilities will include substance abuse services.

After spending thousands of dollars to retain lawyers and make presentations at the local level, the three hospitals will start back at square one April 5 in Austin.

"MIDLAND MEMORIAL Hospital has a slight edge with the recommendation, but there are a lot of other factors involved — one being the question of need," Camp said. "Certainly all three could be approved if the commission felt it was in the best interest of the public and need."

Although MMH is pleased wth the local decision, they are remaining cautious.

"Winning this recommendation is like winning at half-time — we're cautious — we have to gear up and win all the way now," John Holt, vice president of quality assurance, said.

Under state law, a hospital must file for a certificate of need, which is a governmental body authorization for health-related capital expenditures.

The application is reviewed at the local level by the PBHSA, a watchdog organization established to improve the quality and availability of health services.

The 30-member body attempts to restrain cost increases and prevent duplication of services. It is also charged with preserving and improving competition in the health service area.

PBHSA HELD meetings Jan. 12 and 18 which allowed public comment. That panel's decision depends upon presentations from the applicants and public comment. However, the meetings were attended by only health agency providers and the applicants' staffs and lawyers.

PBHSA chose to recommend Midland's public facility, which will be funded by a general obligation bond issue, as opposed to the other two applicants which would support their facilities with private funds.

Now, all three applications will be reviewed by the THFC in Austin along with recommendations from PBHSA.

The procedure begins with the applicants going before a hearing officer, a lawyer who acts as an administrative law judge. In a formal courtroom-like setting, he will hear testimony from witnesses and the applicants.

"WHERE YOU HAVE three parties joined (for similar facilities), it could take two to three weeks for the parties to present testimony," Camp said.

After testimony is completed it is compiled by a staff analyst. A finding composed of facts and recommendations will then go to the three-member commission, which is appointed by the governor. Despite the PBHSA and hearing officer's recommendations, the commission may render any decision it chooses.

Because the commission's decision is based upon facts that demonstrate need for the facility, it is imperative that the applicants give an accurate, concise presentation.

"A lot of the THFC's decision will be based on bed need — facts and figures — not intangible issues," Holt said. "If we (MMH) can't explain early in our presentation that this facility is a chemical abuse unit...it could hurt us."

"Our plan is to make as solid a presentation as possible regarding the need for the type of beds we will provide in the behavioral health service (chemical dependency unit)," MMH president Branson said.

"We're going to use the same strategy (at the THFC) as we did at the local level, but our stand will be much stronger," Dick Liley, Parkview administrator said.

"THE OPERA'S NOT OVER until the fat lady sings," James Bingham, West Plains representative said. "We don't feel we were hurt at all last night (Wednesday). We're back to square one. Now, the next step in Austin for Parkview and us is to prove there is a need for psychiatric beds (in Midland)."

Liley and Bingham agreed that they will have to make definite presentations on the need of psychiatric beds in Midland.

Presently, MMH has five psychiatric beds. According to a hospital official, 325 patients spent a combined 2,083 in-patient days at MMH in 1981.

However, Branson contends that the regional need for "psychiatric beds is more vague, in our opinion."

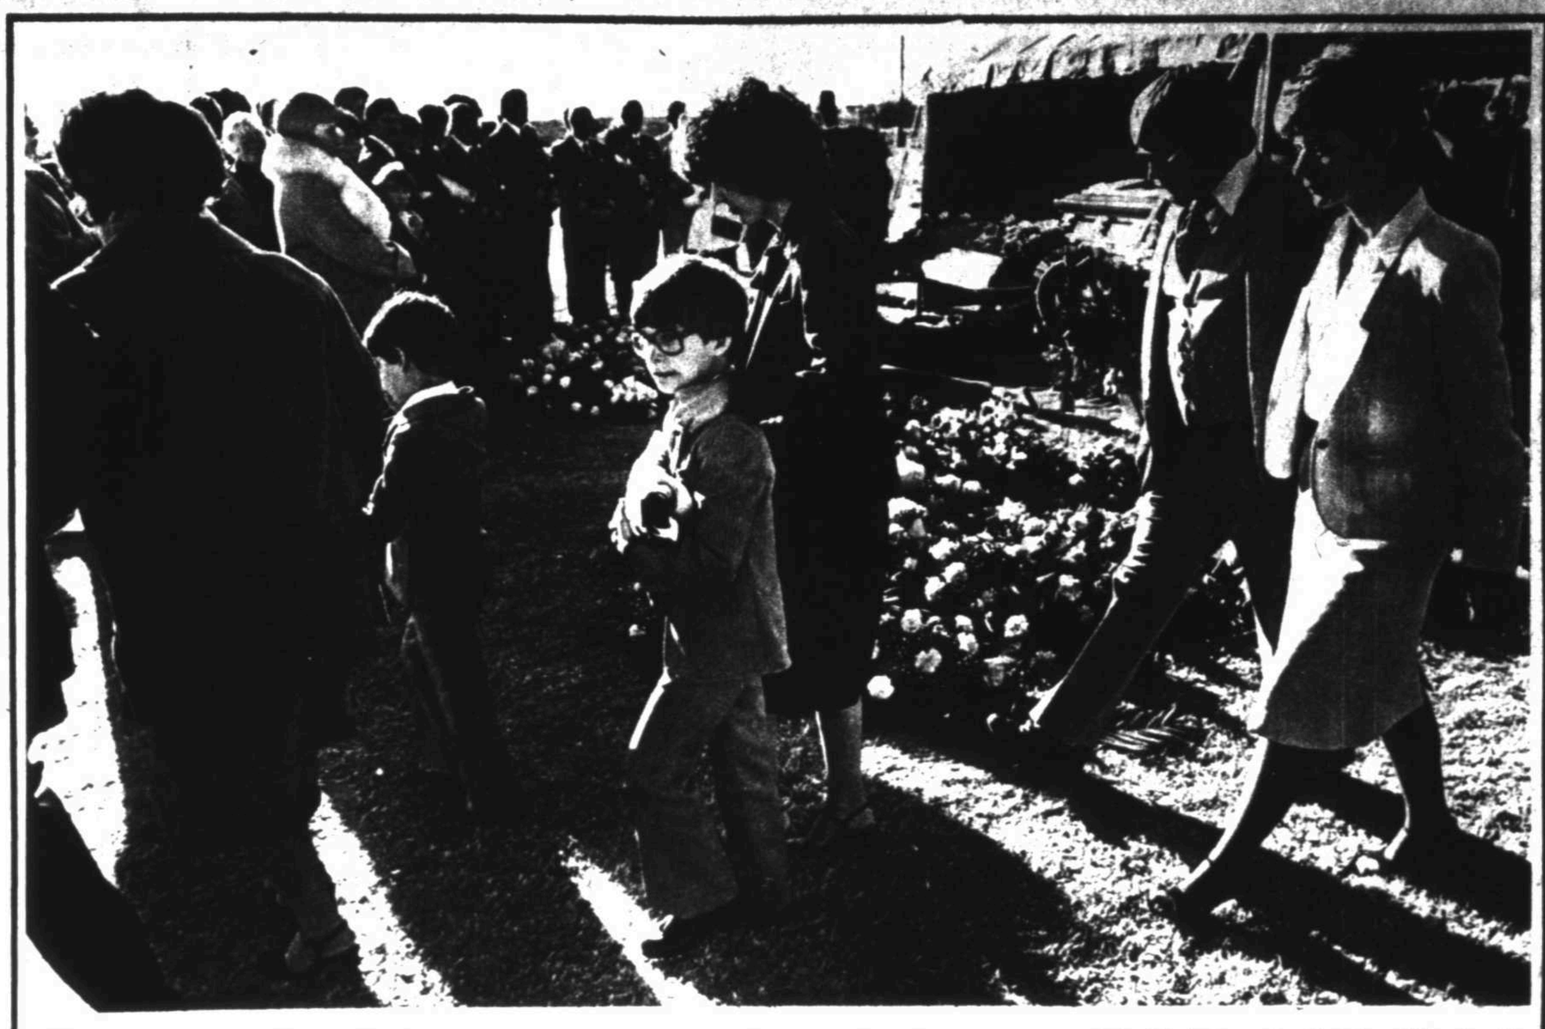

"We don't have to get a certificate of need for psychiatric beds — we have them," he said. "Our application is for something that is not available."

Branson said he is familiar with how a chemical dependency unit is operated because he initiated and opened a 27-bed unit in 1979 in Oklahoma City, Okla.

Liley also leans toward experience.

PART OF PARKVIEW'S strategy will be to show that out of nine hospi-

Blue uniforms attend en masse

CRANE — It was the sea of blue uniforms which stood out in the crowd of about 500 people gathered around the flag-draped casket at Crane County Cemetery Saturday afternoon.

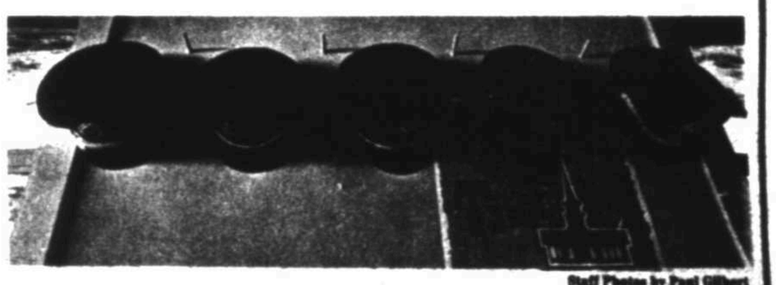

Five major airlines — Air Florida, Eastern, Texas International, Delta and Southwest — and the Air Force were represented at the funeral of Roger Alan Pettit, 31, former resident of Crane and co-pilot of the Boeing 737 involved in the first major plane crash in two years.

Pettit was one of 78 people killed when an Air Florida jet struck the 14th Street Bridge and plunged into the icy Potomac River in Washington, D.C. Jan. 13.

Unlike the cold, snowy day on which Pettit died, the mid-afternoon sun streamed warmly through the bare branches of the naked trees, throwing shadows across the flowers scattered on nearby graves. The wind was calm for a West Texas winter afternoon.

Wives of the many Air Force and civilian pilots in attendance dabbed occasionally at the corners of their eyes with one hand, while the other remained securely in the hands of the silent, dignified men they stood beside. It easily could have been one of them sitting under the green tent with their family.

The pilots milled listlessly about, greeting men they hadn't seen in years in subdued tones. Men with whom they had trained. Men with whom they had flown.

Hats of pilots fill the rack in the First Baptist Church of Crane as fellow fliers pay tribute Saturday afternoon to Roger Alan Pettit, co-pilot of the Air Florida plane which crashed Jan. 13 at Washington, D.C. Pettit, a former Crane resident, was one of the 78 victims. Pilots represented by the hats include, from left, Air Florida, Texas International, Eastern Airlines, U.S. Air Force and Air Florida.

FOLDED IN MILITARY style, the American flag was given to Pettit's widow, Donna, and their two sons, Jason, 9, and Cody, 7. Tears filled Mrs. Pettit's eyes as she acccepted the flag and handed it to the older son.

Eight members of Air Florida and the Air Force served as pallbearers. The 318th Fighter Interceptor Squadron and the Ninth Tactical Fighter Squadron served as honorary pallbearers.

Earlier, in the First Baptist Church of Crane filled pew to pew with local residents and pilots, the Rev. Dub Bryant, pastor of Bethel Baptist Church in Alamogordo, N.M., spoke on crossing the threshold to death. Rev. Stanley Wilson of the First Baptist Church of Crane recited "High Flight," a poem written by a fighter pilot who died in action during World War II.

The words sent chills through those congregated in the church — and the pilots sitting in designated sections straightened their shoulders with pride.

"Up, up the long delirious burning blue
I have topped the wind-swept heights with easy grace
Where never lark, or even eagle, flew,
And while with silent, lifting mind I have trod
The high untrespassed sanctity of space,
Put out my hand, and touched the face of God."

Pettit was born March 11, 1950, in Odessa, and graduated from Crane High School in 1968.

His interest in flying emerged at an early age and by 17 he had received his pilot's license.

An eight-year veteran of the U.S. Air Force, Pettit had been flying for Air Florida as a first officer on its Boeing 737s since September 1980. While an officer in the Air Force, he had been stationed at Holloman Air Force Base in Alamogordo where he flew F-15s.

Pettit received his bachelor's degree in political science from Texas Tech University in 1971, and masters of arts degree in human relations in 1977 from Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma, Wash. He served as a clerk for a special branch of the FBI in Washington, D.C.

The Rev. Bryant noted that throughout Pettit's work, he still had devoted time to community affairs, listing the pilot's activities in the Baptist church and as a scoutmaster and coach for youth sports.

"Both life and death can be exciting," the pastor said during his eulogy of the former West Texas pilot.

DC-10 with 190 aboard skids into Boston Harbor

BOSTON (AP) — A World Airways DC-10 carrying at least 190 people skidded off the end of an icy runway and plunged into Boston Harbor on Saturday night as it landed at Logan International Airport, authorities said. All on board were reported safe.

The plane came to rest partially submerged in the freezing sea water, and police said all the passengers had been rescued.

"The plane did not sink," said State Police Cpl. Richard Dondero. "Everybody is off the plane. There are no fatalities."

Some passengers were taken away from the wreck on stretchers, but the extent of their injuries was not immediately known.

Buses were brought to the scene to carry passengers off the runway. Many, wearing life preservers around their necks, were able to walk to the vehicles.

At least one passenger was taken to Massachusetts General Hospital.

An engine on the aircraft was reported still running when the plane came to a halt.

The plane, Flight 30, was arriving in Boston from Newark, N.J., on runway 15. It had been scheduled to continue on to Los Angeles.

The accident occurred as snow turned to freezing rain. The temperatures was 34 degrees and snow had fallen earlier in the day.

Blizzards blanket Midwest

No deaths, but region almost shut down

The Associated Press

A record blizzard born in an historic winter buried parts of the Midwest in waist-deep snow and whipped up 9-foot drifts Saturday while power lines and trees limbs snapped in an ice storm in the East.

Snowslides closed three main passes in the state of Washington and warm chinook winds gusted to 97 mph on the eastern slopes of the Colorado Rockies.

The storm which trucked out of the Rockies late last week put the hammer down across much of North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa and Michigan with up to 20 inches of wind-blown snow on top of record amounts that fell earlier.

Although no deaths or serious injuries were blamed on the storm, the region was practically shut down, with thousands of travelers stranded and some missing. Snowmobiles went to the rescue of about 200 motorists trapped on a Michigan highway.

"There are all kinds of cars on the roads, and there's just no way to get to them," said police Sgt. Duane Girard in Calumet, Mich., as winds gusting to 65 mph piled deep drifts across highways.

In South Dakota, where up to 20 inches of snow fell, travel was forbidden in much of the central and eastern part of the state. Officials in Vermillion said any drivers who ventured onto the roads would be arrested.

Accumulations ranged from 20 to more than 40 inches across Minnesota and many roads were blocked in the northern part of the state.

"They're recording snow up there over the hoods of cars," said Sgt. Donald Woodson of the Minnesota State Patrol's communications office in St. Paul.

THE BLIZZARD CAME on the heels of two previous weekends of record subzero cold in the Midwest, brought on by a different system of frigid and dry air swooping down from the polar regions.

"Along with the cold, this has been an extreme winter," said Mike Streib, a meteorologist for the National Weather Service in Kansas City. "We're talking about 100-year-old records being broken.

Reagan gets high marks for first year

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — Just before our Thanksgiving holiday, I wrote a report about the first ten months of President Reagan in office which seemed adequate time to assess his stewardship. In its way, the column anticipated the hullabaloo made over his first anniversary the other day since most folks and the media appear taken with anniversaries.

Hearst

Little of momentous nature has happened since I drafted my thoughts on the performance of Ronald Reagan, elected handsomely and enthusiastically by the nation to be our 40th president. From the time he took office until his press conference in Washington the other day, he established a style of leadership characterized by disarming candor and a cautious optimism. When he makes a mistake, he takes the blame for the boo-boo. The president, with a wry grin, told the media in a free-swinging conference: "Don't judge us by our mistakes. I'm probably going to make more of them. But judge us by how well we recover and solve the situation."

He repeated the late President Truman's dictum about a presidential decision which was one you may recall, "The buck stops here," meaning that any president worth his salt makes the important decisions, once all the advice and memoranda are on his desk. President Reagan's frankness is always unnerving to aides and critics. He promised after his election that America would have a "new beginning." To that end he trimmed budgets, although they're still too big for his taste, and he remains dedicated to toughing out the economic side while remaining concerned about the poor and ill.

ABOUT THE ONLY untoward event that marred his determination at home and abroad was the Soviet-sponsored crackdown on Poland, where the puppet communist regime imposed martial law and imprisoned thousands of outspoken members of the Solidarity union. President Reagan invoked sanctions against both communist governments, but has been compelled to act more slowly and mildly than he liked because our NATO allies are fearful of the Russians and want their trade. They have agreed, though, to language lambasting the U.S.S.R., and President Reagan declared fresher and tougher action is at hand.

While the president faces increasing skepticism about his domestic programs — the latest is the flare-up of

Cheerleader's murder may be linked to attacks

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A man was arrested Saturday in connection with the brutal stabbing death of a former high school cheerleader, an assault police suspect is linked to the rapes of three young women and threats received by others.

The man, arrested about 4:30 a.m., gave police a statement and would be charged with murder, said Fort Worth police officer R.M. Sharp. He declined to release further information.

The partially nude body of 18-year-old Retha Lee Stratton was found Thursday evening in her bedroom closet. She had been stabbed 38 times in the upper torso with a kitchen knife, an autopsy showed. Pathologists have not yet determined whether she was sexually assaulted.

Her roommate, Amy King, told police she returned to the duplex just before 6 p.m. and found blood on a wall and on a living room lamp. She said she ran next door to get her sister, Jennifer, and the two found Miss Stratton's body.

Police said they found no evidence of a struggle and no valuables were taken from the home.

Miss Stratton graduated last year from Castleberry High School in the suburb of River Oaks, where she was a cheerleader for three years. She had worked at the Ralston Purina Co. as a computer terminal operator since graduation.

Family friends said Miss Stratton had been cautious because of recent attacks on former Castleberry cheerleaders.

In early December, a former cheerleader and the sister of another were raped on consecutive nights in their parents' homes, police said.

In both cases, the rapist wore a ski mask and entered through an unlocked door between 10:30 and 11 p.m., said River Oaks Police Chief Walter Schertz.

Schertz said that while police had no suspects in either case, he had a "gut feeling it was someone who had been inside those homes at one time."

At least two other cheerleaders at Castleberry High School have been threatened, police said.

A 19-year-old Saginaw woman who recently graduated from Boswell High School was raped in early November in her parents' home by a man whose description matched that of the River Oaks rapist, said Saginaw Police Chief Gene Springer.

He said the Saginaw assailant was described as being white, muscular, and 5-foot-9 or 5-foot-10. He also wore a ski mask.

All the rapist's victims, Springer said, have been "blond-headed and real shapely" and recent high school graduates.

'Bucket drowner' gets 10 years

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A 10-year prison sentence has been handed down to a man convicted of murder in the mop-bucket drowning of a nightclub bookkeeper.

Steven Glenn Payne was sentenced Friday by a district court jury that earlier found him guilty of murder. Prosecutors had asked for a sentence of at least 50 years.

Family gets decreased award

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has reduced the damages awarded to the family of an Air Force pilot killed in a training maneuver because the original $3.5 million award was "excessive and shocking to the conscience of the court."

On Dec. 12 a federal jury awarded $2 million damages to the widow and son of Capt. Harry Wahl, but on Friday U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton reduced it to $750,000. He let stand the $1.5 million actual damages awarded to Dianne Wahl and her son, Billy, 17, of Austin.

Wahl died two years ago when he ejected from his plane as it went into a dive after a standard training maneuver. Air Force surgeons said he suffered a broken neck when the parachute opened.

Defendants in the suit were Fairchild Industries, maker of the plane, and McDonnell Douglas Corp., maker of the ejection seat.

Arson suspected in church fire

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Arson is suspected in an early morning fire that heavily damaged a church under construction on the city's northeast side Saturday, investigators said.

The blaze, which broke out shortly after 5 a.m. at the Church of Jesus Christ-Latter Day Saints, appeared to have several points of origin, authorities said.

Damage to the building, which was 70 percent completed, was estimated at $100,000.

Six people, including four firefighters, suffered minor injuries when a pumper truck responding to the blaze collided with a car.

Foreign investment said good for Texas

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The chairman of a governor's task force says foreign investments in Texas are good for the state and there is probably no need for laws restricting such investments.

"We can't find anything bad (about it) yet," said Jack Lander, a Houston banker.

Gov. Bill Clements' Task Force on Foreign Investments met Friday to hear statistics about foreign ownership of Texas businesses and land. The committee was formed by the governor after unsuccessful attempts last year by lawmakers to limit foreign investment.

Jim Kaster, Clements' legislative liaison, said there was "a perception by some legislators that foreigners were taking over all the agricultural land in Texas."

However, figures offered by Vic Arnold of the Texas 2000 project showed that foreigners own an "insignificant amount" of Texas agricultural land — less than 0.6 percent of the state's 138 million acres.

Hidalgo County has the highest percentage of foreign-owned farmland — 14.5 percent of its 470,159 acres. No other counties are close to that percentage.

An August 1981 poll of 2,040 Texans showed 61 percent in favor of "definitely" restricting foreign investment. Another 11 percent said restrictions are "probably" needed.

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says it was a state senator's pleas, not a campaign backer's money, that sparked him to ask for an attorney general's opinion on the proposed deepwater port off Freeport.

Clements recently asked Attorney General Mark White about the legality of using state-backed bonds to help finance the long-discussed offshore port near Freeport. In August, Clements said he opposed the use of the state's credit to back the project.

On Dec. 1, however, he asked Attorney General Mark White for an opinion on the proposal.

Hobby McCall, a prominent bond attorney representing the businessmen pushing the port, made a $10,000 campaign contribution to Clements last year, but the governor said the money had nothing to do with his opinion request. The request was prompted by Sen. Buster Brown, R-Lake Jackson, according to Clements.

"Sen. Brown, in whose district this port would be, made a strong plea to me to ask for an attorney general's opinion," said Clements. "This came through Brown as an important piece of business for his senatorial district. He had been asked and prodded by his constituents to see what could be done or could not be done in this regard."

"My position is absolutely consistent. Under no circumstances...would I ever approve of the state's credit being put behind the building of this port," he said.

By using the state's credit, the builders of the port could save hundreds of thousands of dollars on the $200 million project.

Clements was asked what McCall's $10,000 contribution means, in terms of access to the governor.

"It means he's fairly prosperous as a bond lawyer," he said. "I'm grateful to him for his help and support. I've only known him for 55 or 60 years."

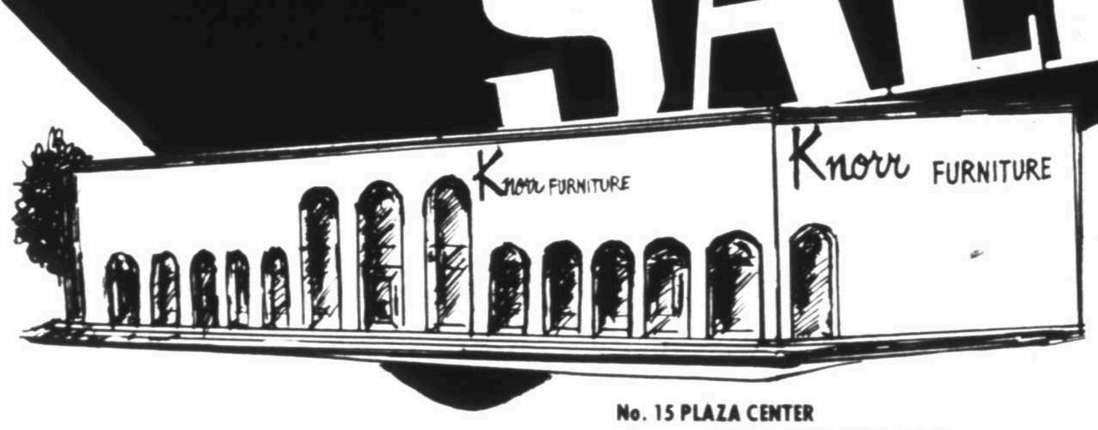

Also at the Friday news conference, Clements introduced minority organization leaders supporting his call for extension of the U.S. Voting Rights Act, which gives federal authorities the power to monitor Texas elections.

"I am extremely pleased and encouraged by Texas' widespread support for the extension of the act. It has been good for Texas," he said.

The governor will go to Washington to testify at a Feb. 4 Senate subcommittee hearing on extending the act.

Nature is playing weather roulette

Nature seems to be playing weather roulette with West Texans. Lately, the spins have been stopping on warm days and somewhat cold nights.

And that's what will be in the offing today and Monday, when the temperature highs will be into the mid-70s and the overnight low will plunge in the mid-30s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

But, the ol' roulette wheel holds promises of stopping on cold, cold days, which may be accompanied by snow or sleet.

Today's fair weather will be accompanied by southerly winds of 10 to 15 mph.

Saturday's high temperature of 61 degrees was nowhere near the record high of 82 degrees for the date in 1950. The overnight low of 23 degrees was far afield from the record low of 9 degrees in 1963.

Overton seeks second term

STERLING CITY — Mary Lou Overton has announced she is seeking a second term as county and district clerk of Glasscock County, subject to the Democratic primary on May .

Mrs. Overton took office Jan 1., 1979, after winning the election in 1978. She has been employed in the office since April 1975 and feels that this experience is a definite asset toward her re-election.

During her first term she was able to obtain the cooperation of the court for microfilming the records and she said this will be kept up to date periodically.

Microfilming was necessary in case of fire or other disaster which could destroy the records, Mrs. Overton added.

"I have enjoyed serving the people of Glasscock County and others who have occasion to use the office from surrounding counties and cities," she said.

Mary Lou Overton

Mrs. Overton has been a resident of Glasscock County for 25 years. She and her husband, Wesley, have three children, Wesley, Crystal and Candy. She is a member of the First United Methodist Church where she also is pianist.

In addition, the three applicants have had some knowledge or experience with THFC hearings.

"Austin becomes a fact-finding situation, just as in a court of law," Bingham said. "There will be testimonies, depositions and cross-examinations. It is not conducted in any way the local agency handled this. It could come down to that none of us has an edge over the other — the decision lies with the commission."

"I think we all three have a chance to be successful in our projects, but only one will be chosen," Liley said. "Our attorneys have a very good track record. They are specialists in health care law and have appeared before the THFC on numerous ocassions."

In addition, Kevin Reed, attorney for MMH, has been a hearing offices for the THFC.

Nation gears up for Super Bowl XVI

By ANDREW ANGELO
Associated Press Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — In millions of households, taverns and other gathering places across the nation and scattered around the globe, things will stop today.

The point of interest will be Super Bowl XVI, the San Francisco 49ers vs. the Cincinnati Bengals for the National Football League championship.

"It's more than a football game. It's a world event," said Ernest A. Jones, general chairman of the Michigan Super Bowl Committee Inc.

Bettors are wagering millions on the contest — in office pools and Nevada casinos alike. Ray Lenzie of the Stardust race and sports book in Las Vegas estimates he'll handle some $2 million in bets.

Consider, too, the following scenes expected to be sparked by the 4 p.m. EST kickoff in the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich.:

—In Reno, Nev., an MGM casino spokeswoman said the world's largest casino will "come to a standstill" at game time as high-rollers of all persuasions scamper into rooms equipped with large-screen TVs or to their suites to watch the scoreboard.

—In Cincinnati, where Bengalmania reigns supreme, the Northgate Mall will close an hour early. Mall general manager Renald J. Tavolier said the operators of the 104 stores "decided that since hardly anyone was going to be here anyway, we'd close her up early."

—In Detroit, actress Cloris Leachman and the cast of "Twigs" will be excused from a scheduled Sunday matinee at the Fisher Theatre so theatre staff and Super Bowl visitors alike can concentrate on the game and related hoopla.

—In Dallas, patrons of The Filling Station bar will jam in front of an 8-foot-by-8-foot TV screen. "We just get crazy," says Gene Harris, the bar's proprietor. "If the Cowboys were playing, we'd be uncontrollable."

—From Phoenix to New York, National Basketball Association arenas will be dark. The only NBA game scheduled Sunday is Portland at Boston, and that will finish before the 2:30 p.m. EST pre-game festivities begin. The NBA acknowledges it has little hope of denting the Super Bowl audience.

—In Colorado, skiers at the Breckinridge ski area will be able to find out the score from lift operators posting it on large blackboards on the slopes. Jim Gill, area manager, says there'll be crowds on the slopes, but it won't be like Super Bowl Sunday in January 1978, when the hometown Broncos met Dallas and "you could have spit in every direction and not hit anybody."

—As on Super Bowl Sunday for the past 15 years, TVs have been finetuned, and snack and thirst-quenchers stockpiled. At the Silverdome itself, up to 800 barrels of beer are on hand and some 70,000 hot dogs and kielbasa are ready.

While the betting, food and overall hoopla surrounding the Super Bowl is the same as usual, there's little resemblance between this year's site and last year's contest at New Orleans — except the temperature inside each domed stadium.

AP Laserphoto

A road grader clears the parking lot outside of Pontiac's SilverdomeSaturday after an overnight storm dumped snow and freezing rain on the area. The San Francisco 49ers will meet the Cincinnati Bengals at the Silverdome today for Super Bowl XVI.

Outside the Silverdome, the snow has piled up and the thermometer has plunged — a far cry from last year's 73 degrees at mostly sunny in New Orleans. That hasn't stopped most of the 70,000 visitors from celebrating.

"Some people were skeptical, but once they got here they had fun," Jones said.

Super Bowl hosts — challenged by skeptics who questioned what the economically depressed, not to mention cold, area could offer for entertainment — came up with singer Diana Ross, mud wrestlers and Bourbon Street North, a five-block stretch of mostly deserted storefronts in Pontiac, temporarily rejuvenated and renamed after New Orleans' famed entertainment district.

But come kickoff time, the distractions stop and all eyes turn to the Silverdome, described as "a giant Belgian waffle" by one visiting writer.

CBS pegs the Super Bowl viewing audience at more than 100 million. Travis Whitlow of the A.C. Nielsen Co. in Northbrook, Ill., said, if tradition holds true, the contest will take a place in the list of most-watched shows ever.

In fact, every Super Bowl since 1972 now ranks in the top 30 of the single most-watched broadcasts since July 1960.

Haig, Gromyko talks center on Poland

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. flies to a Geneva meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko prepared to use Soviet interest in strategic arms control as a lever to try to wrest concessions on Poland from the Kremlin.

The meeting on Tuesday will be the second between the two in four months and takes place at perhaps the lowest point in U.S.-Soviet relations since President Reagan took office a year ago.

The Haig-Gromyko meeting in Switzerland immediately follows the Reagan administration's decision to downgrade the talks by cutting back their length from two days to one and by shifting the focus from arms control to Poland.

This new assertion of U.S. determination to link arms control talks to Soviet behavior in the world was underscored late last week by State Department spokesman Dean Fischer.

Fischer said that although President Reagan remains committed to "meaningful" arms control, the strategic arms reduction talks (START), "cannot be insulated from events."

The talks between the top Soviet and American diplomats is likely to be the highlight of Haig's trip, which also takes him to the Middle East.

He is to meet in Jerusalem with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and in Cairo with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak to explore possibilities of making progress in the stalled autonomy talks between Israel and Egypt.

There is no public sign Haig is bringing with him any concrete suggestions to break the deadlock in the talks, which effect the future of the 1.3 million Palestinians living in the West Bank and Gaza Strip territories occupied by Israel since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

In explaining the U.S. position as Haig prepares to enter the meeting with Gromyko, Fischer noted Haig repeatedly has emphasized "that the continuing repression of the Polish people, for which Soviet responsibility is clear, obviously constitutes a major setback to the prospects for constructive East-West relations."

"There can be no question that the climate of East-West relations in turn has a serious effect upon the prospects for moving forward in arms control," Fischer said.

Several knowlegeable U.S. officials make clear that the administration is divided on the issue and that there is continuing pressure from U.S. allies in Europe to get on with the arms control process.

However, they also say that the long anticipated effort to use the Haig-Gromyko talks to announce the date for opening strategic arms reduction talks has become untenable in light of the martial law crackdown in Poland and of criticism in the United States that the U.S. reaction has been too restrained.

"We have been jumped on pretty damn heavily," says a U.S.-Soviet expert, who also declined to be identified.

He cites a barrage of complaints, including those of former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, that the United States should not be talking arms control with the Soviets so long as martial law keeps thousands of members of the Polish Solidarity labor movement in jail.

EDITOR'S REPORT

tax-exempt status to schools which discriminate because of race — his personal popularity in the country remains high. This is a puzzler to pollsters because in past samples both the president and the programs have taken a beating together from the electorate. In short, he has not exhausted his political mandate for change. Public support seems inclined, I read and am told, to give President Reagan about another year to see if he can achieve the alterations he wants.

That means a run-up to the mid-term 1982 elections next November. So far, the brightest spot in our economnic scene is progress on combatting inflation. But that remains the most solid effort in a time of deepening recession, which may be around until late spring. Then bottoming out or recovery should occur.

AS PRESIDENT Reagan often has remarked, he was elected as "president of all the people," not just as a partisan. In one year as president, he has demonstrated that he is a flexible pragmatist more than a rock-ribbed ideologue. He proved to conservatives and liberals that he's president of all the people.

However, when critics and supporters urge him to pare our defense budget — around $225 billion — he remains adamantly opposed. Why? For years we permitted the nation's defenses to be the poor relation. We're paying the price now, with Soviet aggression going largely unchecked in much of the world and its sponsorship of terrorism ignored. President Reagan won't yield to cutting defenses; rather, he has insisted on beefing them up. It's useful to remember what he had to say about defense at his press conference: "We've never gotten in a war because we were too strong. But the purpose of this military program — we're engaged in rebuilding something that was allowed to deteriorate very badly over recent years. We are way behind where we should be now."

IN SHORT, President Reagan doesn't want us to be seen in the world, especially where the U.S.S.R. is concerned, as an uncertain, timorous giant. That's why the Russians growl every time the U.S. appropriates money for a new weapon or rearms an ally. They want to keep us as a collective white-gloved honor guard which can be pushed around by tinhorn communist despots the Soviets sponsor.

Quite coincidentally, when Ronald Reagan took office, the American hostages were set free from 444 nightmarish days of captivity in topsy-turvy Iran. Hope was refreshed in the U.S. spirit, which was beginning to wonder about help and hope.

"LOOKS STEEPER THIS YEAR"

Prosecutors able to use test results in von Bulow trial

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Prosecutors will be able to use test results on a drug-tainted syringe and disputed blood samples against Claus C. von Bulow as they try to prove he attempted to kill his heiress wife with an insulin injection.

Superior Court Judge Thomas H. Needham has rejected defense claims that the test results should be barred because the original lab samples have been destroyed.

The state will argue von Bulow, 55, used the syringe in the last of two alleged attempts to murder his wife during Christmas stays at their Newport mansion.

Tests on a blood sample taken from Martha "Sunny" von Bulow shortly before she fell into a lasting coma revealed abnormally high levels of insulin, and analysis of washings from the syringe produced traces of insulin, according to court documents.

Attorney Herald P. Fahringer said he should have a chance to repeat the tests to see if they yield the same results, but the samples were destroyed in what laboratory officials say is a routine procedure.

The motion was one of several rejected by Needham during day-long courtroom debates Friday on evidence in the trial.

Shooting evidence goes to grand jury

Evidence in Friday's shooting death of a westside man by a Midland County sheriff's deputy is expected to be presented to the grand jury this week.

"I plan to do it Wednesday," Sheriff Dallas Smith said Saturday. "It depends on their schedule, though."

Killed by a .357-caliber slug through the heart was 39-year-old Robert Wayne Beauchamp of 4518 Brookdale Drive.

He was shot shortly after 5 p.m. Friday by Sgt. Tommy Jones after he brandished a shotgun while Jones was attempting to arrest him on a child abuse warrant issued by Tarrant County authorities, according to a sheriff's department spokesman.

The shooting occurred in Beauchamp's house and was witnessed by his wife, who Smith said is supporting Jones' account of the incident. Following the grand jury investigation, Smith said he would hold a press conference and release further details on the case.

Cauble prosecution surprisingly rests

By LEIGH SHIRLEY
Associated Press Writer

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors promised jurors at the onset of Rex Cauble's trial that evidence would prove the millionaire rancher knew of his employees' involvement in a marijuana smuggling ring, yet continued to help them.

But after many hours of confusing and sometimes contradictory testimony from some 30 witnesses and thousands of pages of documents, defense attorneys and courtroom spectators agreed it would be difficult to convict Cauble on the basis of the evidence presented thus far.

Earlier in the day, U.S. District Judge William Steger and defense attorneys had discussed the probability of government attorneys presenting witnesses and evidence through Monday.

Some suggested prosecutors shut down after suffering a setback a day earlier, when Larry Dale Washington testified under cross-examination that federal agents had written his statement to indicate he knew of Cauble's involvement in a scheme to ferry 106 tons of marijuana in shrimp boats from Colombia to Texas in 1977 and 1978.

WASHINGTON TOLD defense attorney G. Brockett Irwin that, in fact, he told FBI agents the statement did not reflect his belief that Cauble did not know of the smuggling ring. But, he said, the agents refused to retype it.

Assistant U.S. Attorney David Baugh refused to say why he decided to rest before presenting all of the government witnesses and evidence.

Defense attorneys, who moved for a directed verdict of acquittal immediately after prosecutors rested, said government attorneys had not followed through with a promise to present enough circumstantial evidence to show Cauble's knowledge of the illicit operation.

"The government promised the jury to produce a smoking gun," said Charles Burton, one of four attorneys defending Cauble who contended "the evidence is insufficient."

Outside the courtroom, spectators milled about and discussed the case among themselves.

"I've got my own personal opinion, but on the basis of the evidence they've presented this far I couldn't convict...if I was on that jury," said Rickey Silvertooth, a former Texas Department of Public Safety narcotics officer.

Cauble, who has shown signs of strain throughout the trial, left the courthouse smiling.

The 67-year-old rancher is charged in a 10-count indictment with racketeering to help the smugglers bring marijuana into the country on five separate occasions during 1977 and 1978.

PROSECUTORS HAVE TRIED to prove Cauble received income from the sale of the illegal weed and poured the profits into his businesses, including his oil and gas interests and Cutter Bill's Western World clothing stores.

Baugh contends Cauble got involved in the illicit operation because he had heavy debts and needed cash — liquid assets — to bolster his businesses.

The government fired its biggest gun with the testimony of convicted drug trafficker Raymond Eugene Hawkins. The bearded rancher testified that Cauble knew of the smuggling scheme all along.

He said he once paid $250,000 in smuggling profits to Cauble's ranch foreman, Charles "Muscles" Foster, as the millionaire looked on. Hawkins said Foster immediately gave the cash to Cauble.

But under cross-examination by lead defense attorney Roy Minton, Hawkins said he had changed his testimony from the time he appeared before a grand jury in Beaumont in 1979.

Minton pointed out that at the time, Hawkins swore he knew nothing of Cauble's involvement in the scheme. Hawkins said he lied to grand jurors to protect himself, even though he had been told he would be prosecuted only for perjury.

Prosecutors called several bank officials to show that Cauble embezzled $147,000 from banks in Denton and Houston to finance the scheme.

Ben Walker, former president of the Western State Bank in Denton, said Cauble, a majority stockholder, requested several hefty loans to Foster, although the cowboy only made $250 a week. But Walker conceded the loans all were repaid.

THE MONEY WAS intended to set Foster up in the restaurant business in Denton and the shrimping business in High Island, but prosecutors contend Foster used the businesses as fronts for the smuggling scheme.

Walker and other bank officials described several large cash deposits during 1977 and 1978 made by Cauble Enterprises. According to testimony, thousands of dollars in cash were brought in in paper sacks for deposit.

Prosecutors contend the money was smuggling profits that Cauble attempted to cover up by crediting the cash to cattle sales.

Courtroom observers agree that by far the most damaging evidence against Cauble has been testimony concerning cash cattle sales in 1977 and 1978.

Testimony showed the cattle sales, which amounted to hundreds of thousands of dollars, had no documentation other than deposit slips.

Prosecutors introduced evidence and testimony that showed they were unable to trace the nine cattle buyers named by Cauble Enterprises. Two cattle auction owners also testified that large cash cattle sales were uncommon.

Slavery convictions result from workers' treatment

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In a judgment prosecutors hope will lead to more humane treatment of migrant labor, two men have been convicted of conspiring to enslave several workers, one of whom died.

Dennis Warren and John Lester Harris also were convicted of aiding and abetting the holding of workers Craig Conners and Harvey Rutherford as slaves, but they were found innocent of enslaving laborer Alvin Rhodes.

In addition, Harris was convicted of kidnapping Joseph Sims from a Raleigh street and taking him to the labor camp to be held as a slave.

"It was evident from the start that they (the defendants) were using intimidation to reach their goal — intimidation and violent actions," said a member of the U.S. District court jury, who asked to remain anonymous. "When you subjugate somebody's will with threats or actions to make them afraid to leave, in essence I guess that does constitute slavery, whether you hold them physically or psychologically."

A third man, Richard Warren, was convicted on a lesser charge of conspiring to hold unnamed workers as slaves and another charge of aiding and abetting the holding of Rutherford as a slave.

Richard Roberts, one of two U.S. Justice Department prosecutors, said he believes the slavery convictions involving the death of laborer Robert Anderson are the first of their kind. He said there have been other trials involving slavery charges but none involving the death of a worker.

"We're entirely pleased with the verdict," Roberts said. "We're encouraged that a jury in this district found the evidence as we presented it."

When asked whether prosecutors believed the conviction would result in changes in the treatment of migrant workers, prosecutor Susan King answered, "We hope so."

Fire considerably damages Roosevelt home

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Fire badly damaged the gracious old home of Franklin D. Roosevelt on Saturday, exactly a week before the centennial of his birth, and restoration experts moved in to shore up walls and ceilings that threatened to collapse.

Dozens of National Park Service staff members and volunteers plunged into the burning building to save paintings, furniture and other priceless artifacts in the lifelong home of the only U.S. president elected to four terms.

"We knew they were going to throw us out any minute. The fire was still going strong and the ceiling was about to collapse," said curator Emily Wright. "They told us not to go in there, but we had to."

She said another rescuer moaned, "Oh my God, this would kill Sara Roosevelt if she could see this." The president's mother owned the 35-room house until her death in 1941.

FIRE OFFICIALS TRACED the blaze to outmoded electrical wiring in the third-floor nursery and attic, which electricians had been replacing on Friday. Ms. Wright described the wiring as "just ghastly."

Damage was worst in the central part of the home, built in 1826. The wings added in 1915, including the library and bedrooms of Roosevelt, his wife, Eleanor, and Sara Roosevelt, were largely spared.

The fire broke out shortly before midnight in the third floor. Most fire damage was confined to that floor, and the first and second floors were damaged by water.

About 250 firefighters from nearby communities, including many volunteers, fought the blaze. Firefighters were forced to chop through walls and ceilings to reach burning insulation, which continued to flare up long after the fire was brought under control about 4 a.m., Ms. Wright said.

Small holes were drilled into the floors to allow water to drain into the basement, where it was pumped out.

A team of National Park Service restoration experts arrived shortly before noon to brace walls and ceilings and to secure the house so repairs could begin.

THE HOUSE IS expected to be fully restored, Ms. Wright said. "These experts can work miracles — and this will take a miracle," she added.

Roosevelt was born in the house in 1882 and lived there when he wasn't in Washington or Albany.

Dignitaries from all over the world have visited the house. Winston Churchill and the Duke of Windsor conferred there with FDR during World War II.

Workers moved valuable objects, like a famous Dresden chandelier, into outbuildings and placed tarpaulins over some items, such as a baby grand piano and a credenza.

"We salvaged an incredible amount," Ms. Wright said.

Henry VanBrookhoven, a curator, rushed into Roosevelt's bedroom shortly after the fire broke out and threw tarpaulins over furnishings to protect them from water and smoke, Ms. Wright said.

Cops say 'ghouls' who robbed homes during funerals have been caught

CHICAGO (AP) — Police say they have broken a ring of burglars described as "ghouls who prey on the miseries of others" by robbing homes while families were at funerals and wakes.

Police District Commander John Stibich said the gang has been operating since November and estimated their haul at about $25,000 in cash and jewelry from 20 homes.

Stibich said five men were arrested Thursday after a stakeout at a South Side home. He said police had staked out several likely targets after receiving 20 reports of burglaries in homes on the North Side and the South Side while families were attending wakes or funerals.

Tire responsible for trucker's death

ST. JOHNS, Mich. (AP) — A spare tire flew off the top of a tractor trailer, shattering the window of an oncoming truck and killing the driver, officials said Saturday.

William Joseph Easter, 28, of Sturgis was killed instantly in Friday's accident on Michigan Highway 21 in Bengal Township, Sheriff's Deputy Sharon Rosekranz said.

She said Timothy Kochanski, 24, of Dearborn was driving a truck carrying wood shavings covered with canvas and anchored by a spare tire. As the two trucks passed in opposite directions, she said, the canvas and tire flew off into the path of Easter's truck, she said.

Ms. Rosekranz said the accident was under investigation.

Group votes to ban some coal use

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Oregon Environmental Quality Commission has voted 4-1 to ban the use of unprocessed coal for home heating in six Oregon cities after July 1, 1983.

The commission acted on the recommendation of Director Bill Young of the Department of Environmental Quality, who said unrestricted use of coal for home heating could lead to major air pollution.

The commission's ruling places new limits on the sulfur and flammable organic content of coal that can be used for home heating in Portland, Salem, Eugene, Springfield, Medford and Ashland.

DEQ officials have said that no coal now for sale in Oregon meets the new standard.

The rule allows an exemption for families who used more than 1,000 pounds of coal for home heating in 1980.

Air fare war continues along New York-Florida corridor

By SUSAN POSTLEWAITE
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — The New York-Florida air fare war flared anew as airlines on the lucrative run rushed to match Air Florida's surprise move to slash prices.

Air Florida struck first Friday, cutting its mid-week fares from $107 to $79. Competitors quickly charged the action was irresponsible and a desperate attempt by the Miami-based carrier to stay alive in a slumping industry.

But by day's end, Delta Air Lines, Eastern Airlines, Pan American World Airways and Trans World Airlines had cut fares.

Air Florida, the budget airline that has made profits by lowering fares and taking over routes shunned by the major carriers, surprised the big carriers by announcing the fares in full-page newspaper ads Friday. It announced a three-week "seat sale" with fares of $79 from Florida to New York and Chicago; $89 to Washington and $99 to Boston and Toledo.

Then Pan Am undercut Air Florida by $2 and dropped the New York and Washington-Florida fare to $77, effective Jan. 25, seven days a week.

The fares previously were $107 weekdays and $127 weekends.

The domino effect continued. Eastern Airlines, the dominant force in the Florida market, Delta Air Lines and Trans World Airways all matched the $77, seven-day-a-week fare.

Eventually, Air Florida found itself matching the other carriers.

Safe landings mean plane gets to crash

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — A 20-year-old jet that has made 53,470 safe landings will be smashed into the ground in one of the biggest aviation safety experiments in history, federal officials say.

The experiment, scheduled for 1984, is to determine if an additive to jet kerosene can prevent explosions on impact.

The Boeing 707-720, assembled in Renton, Wash., has logged 20,000 hours in the air. The four-engine plane, called N-23, has been used by the Federal Aviation Administration to fly research missions and to fly in conditions similar to those in which fatal crashes occurred.

The more than 52,000 landings are the most any Boeing jetliner has ever made.

During its last flight, according to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, crewmen will make a final check of N-23's new seats, make sure its tanks are filled with fuel and send it barreling down the runway by remote control. The plane will climb, then be directed back over the Mojave Desert where it will smash into the earth.

NASA and the FAA are hoping there will be no fire and that the $10 million test will be a success.

"It will probably be the agency's single biggest aviation safety experiment," said Mike Benson, an FAA spokesman in Atlantic City.

"One in five people killed in civil aircraft accidents die from fire and toxic gases rather than from impact injuries," said Russ Barber, project supervisor at Edwards.

Key to the experiment is whether a polymeric anti-misting additive to jet kerosene developed in Britain will work. It is the fuel mist that causes the explosions and fires which often incinerate airplanes during crash landings.

A study for the FAA by Aerospace Corp. of El Segundo says use of the additive could save 135 lives a year, but said it will cost $20 billion for the airline industry to implement over a 20-year period.

Still to be worked out is when to add the antimisting element to the kerosene. Most research seems to indicate that introducing it just before pumping the fuel onto the aircraft will be the best time.

Formation of a mist is necessary for combustion inside the jet engine, so an antimisting additive has to be degradable at the engine nozzles to allow normal combustion within the engine, NASA technicians say.

Researchers have been working on additives that will prevent kerosene misting since 1964. Numerous simulated tests have been performed.

In addition to testing the fuel, special seat restraint systems, emergency lighting systems, new floor structures and rupture-proof tanks also will be evaluated.

Instruments aboard N-23 will record how much fuel is released and its exposure to ignition sources.

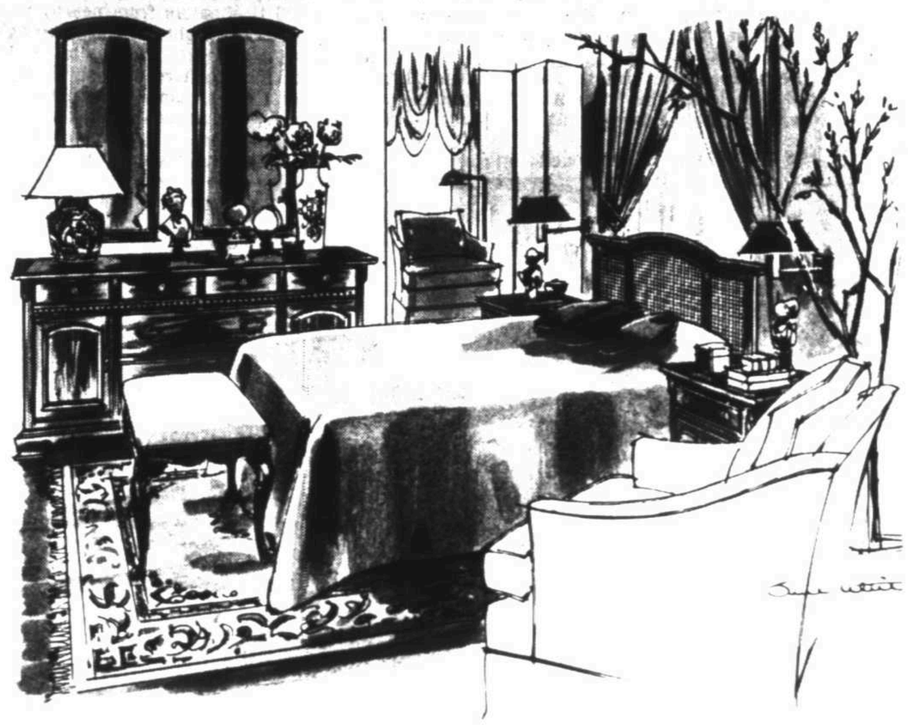

"If it burns, instruments will tell us at what rate and if it does not burn, we will know why," said William Westfield, chief of the FAA's engine-fuel safety branch.

Task force says handgun control crime-cutting key

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Controlling handguns is the key to reducing crime in the United States, the head of an American Bar Association task force said Saturday.

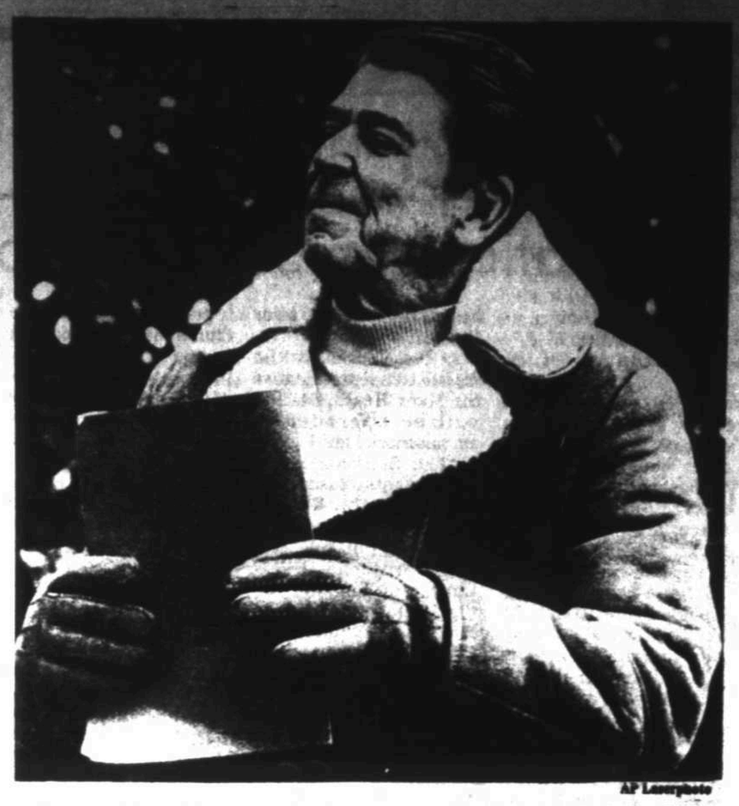

"We do not think that without effective gun control there can be any solution to the crime problem in the United States," said former Miami prosecutor Richard L. Gerstein.

Gerstein, head of the ABA's Task Force on Crime, said, "We regarded effective gun control as the most important recommendation we were making."

He acknowledged that there is "emotional and organized" opposition to such restrictions.

'Gun control is a very sensitive political issue," Gerstein told a news conference at the mid-year meeting of the ABA, the nation's largest lawyers' group. But he maintained that "effective gun control does not impinge on anyone's (constitutional) rights."

Gerstein, now in private law practice after serving as Miami's chief prosecutor for 21 years, said that to be effective, gun control must come at both the "federal and local level."

Concern caused by leases granted on wilderness areas

DENVER (AP) — The U.S. Department of the Interior has granted at least 45 oil, gas and geothermal leases for scenic preserves during the last decade, authorities say.

Fourteen oil and gas leases apparently are held by Dyco Petroleum Corp., of Minneapolis, Minn., in Colorado's third-largest wilderness area, the West Elk Wilderness near Gunnison.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., revealed the existence of the West Elk drilling leases on Thursday, saying he learned of them while inquiring about applications for new drilling operations in Colorado.

And at least 31 leases in other wilderness areas around the country were acknowledged by federal officials Friday.

The existence of the leases immediately was assailed by environmental groups. Sierra Club spokesman Tim Mahoney compared drilling on the wilderness land to "graffiti in the Sistine Chapel."

Diane O'Connor, press officer for the U.S. Forest Service in Washington, identified four oil and gas leases in the Absaroka-Beartooth Wilderness in Montana, three in Wyoming's Bridger Wilderness, three in the Capitan Wilderness of New Mexico and seven geothermal development leases in the Mount Hood Wilderness of Oregon.

She said 14 other oil and gas leases were issued for wilderness in the eastern United States, but details of those leases were not immediately available.

No drilling has taken place so far at any of the 45 sites, Ms. O'Connor said.

In Colorado's West Elk, she said, the oil and gas leases cover 20,695 acres in the 192,412-acre wilderness. Half of those leases expire at the end of this month and the rest expire Aug. 1, she said.

Lee Carr, a spokesman for the Forest Service in Denver, said Friday that Dyco Petroleum holds leases in the unspoiled West Elk because of a clerical omission.

"Somebody obviously made a mistake," he said, adding there should have been a clause in the leases granted to Dyco ensuring that no drilling take place on the land.

Dyco has asked for an extension of its leases, but Hart has asked Interior Secretary James Watt to reject the extension.

Frank Salwerowicz, Interior Department deputy secretary for oil and gas resources for the central region, said a decision would be made next week on whether to renew some of the leases or let them expire.

In 1980 Congress expanded the wilderness areas to include additional leased land, apparently without knowing of the leases' existence.

Watt said as recently as last November that he believed no oil and gas leasing had been allowed in wilderness areas up to that time.

Stephen Saunders, an aide to Hart, noted that the leases — at least in the case of West Elk — were issued without public notice, without public hearings and without environmental reviews.

"It's a peculiar and unsettling discovery that there has been that much lack of communication," he said.

First Vatican ambassador to Britain since 1534

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — A Swiss archbishop who designs papal coats of arms becomes Vatican ambassador to Britain next month, the first since King Henry VIII broke with Rome in 1534 in a spat over divorce.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Bruno Heim, 70, has been apostolic delegate to Britain for eight years. Although his promotion was automatic when Pope John Paul II announced the upgrading of relations on Jan. 16, a formal Vatican announcement is expected next month.

As a fully accredited ambassador, Heim will have easier access to government officials and more responsibility to report to the Vatican about British-ruled Northern Ireland, where sectarian violence between Catholics and Protestants has claimed 2,200 lives since 1969.

At the Vatican, British diplomatic representative Sir Mark Heath, 54, also will be upgraded to ambassadorial level.

"The British government wants closer contacts with the Vatican because of Northern Ireland and Poland," the Rev. Christopher Hill, a Church of England foreign relations adviser, said in a recent interview.

The exchange of ambassadors, ending a 448-year-old rift between the two states, is a cordial prelude to Pope John Paul II's planned visit to England, Scotland and Wales in May.

The pope's pastoral visit to the 5.8 million Catholics in Britain's 56-million population will be the first by a reigning pontiff since Henry VIII formed the Church of England with himself as its temporal head.

"May this voyage serve the cause of bringing together the Catholic Church and the Anglican Communion, and of accelerating their much-desired union," the pope said during his Sunday blessing in St. Peter's Square last week.

The breach was caused by Henry VIII's vain attempt to persuade Pope Clement VII to sanction his divorce from Catharine of Aragon, his first wife, because he had no male heir.

When the pope refused, Henry secretly married Anne Boleyn, persuaded Archbishop of Canterbury Thomas Cranmer to declare his first marriage illegal, and in 1534 asserted royal supremacy over the church. Parliament confirmed it.

Archbishop Heim, an authority on ecclesiastical heraldry, has known several popes personally and converses with Polish-born John Paul II in German. He designed and painted the pope's personal coat of arms, a blue shield bearing a gold cross with the letter "M" — for Mary the madonna — in the bottom right corner.

A keen gardener who likes cooking and entertaining, Heim is highly respected in London, where he was accorded diplomatic immunity in 1979.

The Times of London once quoted Heim as saying with relish that he and his staff are the lowest-paid diplomats in London, and that his Vatican salary is about one-quarter of what he pays his own maid in Switzerland.

There are about 65 pronuncios around the world, along with about 40 nuncios in predominantly Catholic countries, including the Irish Republic.

The nuncio in Dublin, Archbishop Gaetano Alibrandi, is the Vatican's representative for the whole of Ireland on church affairs.

Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, spiritual head of the world's Anglicans, has welcomed the diplomatic thaw between the Church of England and the Vatican.

However, the low-church evangelical wing of the Church of England opposes the upgrading as "wholly unnecessary," said the Rev. David Samuel, secretary of the anti-Catholic Protestant Reformation Society.

H & R Block does all types of income tax returns, not only the 1040A's but also business & farm returns are done at a modest fee.

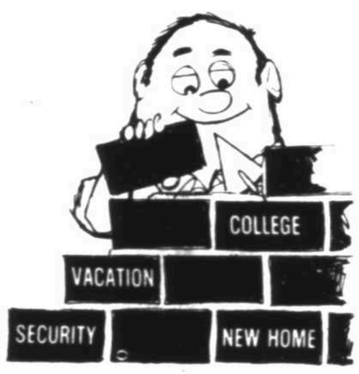

This is the 25th year for America's largest tax service. The company was built on the $5.00 and up tax return and today still charges only $7.50 and up for a 1040A. The average fee last year in Midland was less than $25.00. H & R Block this year is instantly processing 1040A's, which means the guaranteed 1040A return will be done in only one visit.

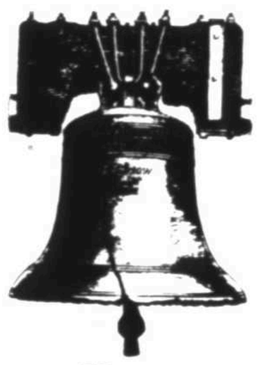

Taxpayers overpay their taxes because of a lack of tax knowledge and a fear of an audit. People file the form they receive without checking to make sure that they have taken all of their deductions and credits. H & R Block believes every client should have a complete personal interview and the return done while the client is with the tax preparer. Block knows taxes. Not only are they the world's largest tax firm, they also conduct the world's largest tax school. ADV.

Mr. Jim Martin, KBAT
3306 Andrews Highway
Midland, Texas

Dear Jim,

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for your persistence in trying to get our company account. I had been approached by your people on and off for the past four years and each time I had firmly told them that they need not bother to call on me again. My reason was that I was sure that my Mercedes Benz customers did not listen to your station and neither did I.

Well, after your determination I finally relented about six months ago and let you start running some Mercedes spots for us, honestly thinking that it was a wasted effort on my part.

It is time that I take my hat off to you and your station for helping us have the strongest year this dealership has ever had in Mercedes Benz sales. Because of your help we have doubled our business and it gets stronger every day. Just two days ago a local customer came in and wanted to know where the cars were that we had advertised with your station. He took delivery of a new Mercedes 380SL coupe roadster, price range approximately $42,000.

Never again will I doubt your word that our type customers would listen to your station. In fact as soon as we are moved to our new location in Midland I'm sure that our business will take another giant leap. And I appreciate your help along the way.

Merry Christmas to you and your staff from everyone at Oran Britt Buick-Mercedes Benz.

Sincerely,
Michael Britt

Intruders shoot sleeping Protestants

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Two armed intruders shot a Protestant shipyard worker, his son and his dog early Saturday morning as they lay sleeping at home, police said.

They said Robert Mitchell, 48, and his 21-year-old son, also called Robert, died instantly in the attack by two gunmen who forced their way into the house in east Belfast.

It was not known whether the killers were associated with the outlawed Irish Republican Army, the predominantly Roman Catholic guerrilla organization fighting to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

Guerrillas, soldiers clash in San Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas and government forces skirmished in three San Salvador suburbs Friday night, and authorities said the bullet-riddled bodies of 14 young men were found Saturday.

The shooting, reported by residents of San Antonio Abad, San Ramon and Antiguo Cuscatlan, followed guerrilla threats of increased violence to overthrow the U.S.-backed junta.

The army said guerrillas fired bazookas and mortars at its outpost in Usulutan, 100 miles southeast of San Salvador. The guerrillas retreated and there were no government casualties, the army said.

However, newspapers here carried the obituaries of 12 army soldiers killed in the past 48 hours.

More than 32,000 people have been killed in battles or by paramilitary death squads since the junta took power in October 1979. Most of them have died since the civil war escalated a year ago under a nationwide guerrilla offensive.

Hussein praises Pope John Paul's support

VATICAN CITY (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan has praised Pope John Paul II's support for religious rights of Moslems, Christians and Jews in Jerusalem, the Vatican said Saturday.

Meeting with a papal envoy in Amman on Jan. 19, Hussein "underlined the importance of the point of view of the Holy See, that the Holy City should become a fraternal meeting place for believers of the three monotheistic religions," the Vatican said.

The king also expressed "appreciation for the perseverant efforts of John Paul II in favor of peace in the Middle East and in the entire world," the statement said.

The Vatican and Israel have a long-standing dispute over the status of Jerusalem.

Israel says Jerusalem — including the eastern sector captured from Jordan in the 1967 war that contains most of the holy places — is the Jewish state's undivided capital and has formally annexed the eastern sector.

In a personal message to Hussein, John Paul reaffirmed the Vatican's support for Palestinian rights.

Hussein cuts short Persian Gulf tour

By The Associated Press

King Hussein of Jordan cut short a Persian Gulf tour at Bahrain, his first stop, and made plans to fly home Sunday, officials said. The Bahrain government gave no reason for the decision, but officials said privately it was related to increasing border tensions between Jordan and Syria.

Hussein also was to visit the United Arab Emirates, Qatar and Oman.

In Tunis, Tunisia, the Arab League postponed until Feb. 7 an emergency foreign ministers meeting scheduled for Sunday. League sources said Syria requested the postponement to avoid conflict with a U.N. Security Council meeting Thursday that is to schedule a special General Assembly session.

Syria asked for the Arab League and General Assembly sessions after the United States vetoed a Security Council resolution Wednesday approving voluntary sanctions against Israel. Syria wants the international community to force Israel to rescind its Dec. 14 annexation of the occupied Syrian Golan Heights.

Diplomatic observers said the strained relations between pro-Soviet Syria and pro-Western Jordan lessen the chances of a productive Arab League session.

On Friday Syria charged that that gunmen protected by covering fire from the Jordanian army slipped into southern Syria and raided an army patrol, killing a Syrian officer and a soldier.

Jordan issued a formal denial Saturday. It quoted "travelers and eyewitnesses " as saying the gunbattle near the southern Syrian city of Deraa involved renegade Syrian soldiers fighting Syrian security troops.

Hussein's government earlier this month accused Syrian intelligence agents of planting a string of bombs that exploded in the Jordanian capital, injuring six people.

Syria and Jordan made warlike moves 15 months ago, rolling tanks and truckloads of troops to their common border, but Saudi Arabian diplomats persuaded both sides to pull back.

Syrian President Hafez Assad has accused Hussein of allowing fundamentalist Moslem Brotherhood opponents of Assad's regime to operate from Jordan.

The Arab League's previous meeting last November was called off several hours after it opened in Fez, Morocco because Syria and four other Arab nations refused to send heads of state to discuss a Saudi Arabian Middle East peace plan.

League sources say the situation is likely to be reversed this time, with Saudi Arabia the chief stumbling block to a unanimous action by the 21-member Arab League.

Syria, which lost the Golan Heights to Israel in 1967, wants the League to approve mandatory sanctions including an oil embargo against countries that refuse to punish Israel.

Commentaries in Saudi Arabia's official press this week indicated the oil-rich kingdom would reject such a plan.

NATO may impose sanctions against Poland

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — America's NATO allies said Saturday the Polish situation has worsened and that they may announce sanctions "in the immediate future."

A senior U.S. official said some of the sanctions may be announced next week and could range from travel restrictions on Soviet and Polish diplomats to withholding of financial credits to both countries — steps the United States has urged its allies to take since martial law was imposed Dec. 13.

The NATO representatives said in a declaration, "The allies agreed that the situation in Poland has worsened since Jan. 11," when Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and 14 other NATO foreign ministers demanded an end to martial law in Poland.

The allies said Polish martial law chief Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski reneged on promises to maintain civil rights in Poland.

"On the contrary, the Polish authorities supported by the Soviet Union continue to ignore the true aspirations of the overwhelming majority of the Polish people," NATO declared.

"This being the case and with the aim of exerting steady and graduated pressure on those responsible for events in Poland, allied representatives indicated a range of steps that their governments have taken now and others they are considering for implementation in the immediate future," the statement said.

Soviets fail to meet production targets

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet economy failed dismally to meet key production targets for food and heavy industry last year, portending a leaner than expected 1982 for already strapped consumers, statistics released Saturday showed.

Agricultural production fell by 2 percent in 1981, the Central Statistical Board announced in the government newspaper Izvestia. The paper notably failed to report grain production, signaling another disastrous harvest.

President Leonid I. Brezhnev has already said that last year's grain harvest was "poor," virtually guaranteeing continuing shortages of meat, milk and eggs. The poor harvest also will force Moscow to continue spending hard currency reserves on imported grain.

Western agronomists in Moscow estimated that the Kremlin will have to import at least $6 billion worth of grain, $2.5 billion in sugar and $1 billion in meat this year.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has estimated the Soviet grain harvest at 175 million tons, well short of the target of 239-243 million tons.

Instead of releasing a grain harvest figure, Izvestia said, "Government reserves of grain are fully adequate to guarantee delivery to the population of the country an adequate supply of bread products."

Overall, the Soviet economy continued to grow but more slowly than planned. National income rose by 3.2 percent over 1980, compared to the targeted 3.4 percent. Industrial production rose by 3.4 percent, compared to the goal of 4.1 percent.

The bleak overall economic figures come as the Kremlin pumped more of its own badly needed food and raw materials into neighboring Poland's failing economy.

Production of milk — along with bread, a mainstay in the Soviet diet — fell to 88.5 million tons from 90.9 million tons the year before. The 1981 production of meat, while up marginally from the year before, was well below the planned average yield of 97-99 million tons for the five-year plan, which runs from 1981 to 1985.

At the end of 1981, even in relatively well-stocked Moscow, butter and eggs were missing from grocery shelves for weeks on end. Egg production missed the target and was even short of the goal the state set for its farmers in 1980.

The harvests of sugar beets, potatoes, fruits, and other farm products were also below target, promising to add to the woes of Moscow shoppers who already grumble about the poor quality of the produce available.

On many days even fatty sausage is not available in food stores and when it is long lines form outside the shops.

Western diplomats were not surprised by the poor performance, which they said continued a six-year slowdown in Soviet economic growth.

It may appear similar to summer camp — but it is still a learning process and, in most situations, done in a classroom environment.

It may look like fun to the younger students and it is to the older ones.

But it's not a vacation by any means — it is still school.

Since Tuesday morning, the seventh through ninth grade students at Trinity School have been participating in their annual miniterm, a week of unusual, but educational, classes sandwiched between the fall and spring semesters.

According to Margaret Farrell, Trinity instructor, the purpose of the miniterm, which has been in existence at Trinity for about 10 years, is to give students a week of activity-oriented learning.

"It's not a vacation from learning," Mrs. Farrell said, "but an opportunity to learn in a variety of ways."

THESE TRINITY students are allowed to participate in an exhaustive examination of the subjects they choose —from backgammon boards to the history of flight, from filling out a job application to witnessing an actual courtroom trial, from the Greek culture to the inside of a photography lab.

Seniority counts and the ninth graders get first pick of the courses in which they will enroll. After they have chosen their schedule from the 25 or so classes, it is on a first-come, first-serve basis of registration for the seventh and eighth grade students.

Most of the classes are taught by Trinity instructors, while others are taught by parents. Courses include hobbies, history lessons, exercise and assisting community volunteers. All are educational.

For example, a student in science teacher Andy Prokopeak's Backgammon for Bumblers class learns about odds and probabilities while having fun. The students are involved in tournament play with those winning first and second places receiving prizes.

In Helen Rucker's Survival Skills, students learn how to balance a checkbook, figure percentage of income tax withheld and fill out a job application.

Bitsy Hopper works on a model airplane she is building during Trinity School's miniterm. The unique session allows seventh through ninth grade students to participate in "a week of activity-oriented learning."

"I give the kids a lot of time to do this (complete their models) which is one thing they are not used to," Coombes said. "Kids are pretty impatient."

Coombes also teaches History of Flight, and most of his students are enrolled in both classes. "They learn how airplanes fly and how they are controlled," he said.

Beginning Marksmanship, taught by parent Charles Preston, shows students problems and rewards of gun handling, and encompasses tips on rudiments of target shooting and safety while hunting.

Students wishing to go incognito signed up for Theatrical Make-up, taught by drama teacher Debbie Waddell. Learning how to redesign their faces to become clowns, monsters or animals offers some fun for the students.

Parent Harvey Cunningham's Woodworking class attracts two girls, who quickly find themselves building a two-story gerbil cage for their pets. And in Space Colony, five boys seek ways to survive on Mars.

The game, similar to Monopoly, includes learning how to ration such supplies as food, water and oxygen. Money is unimportant on Mars, so when a player passes the equivalent of "Go" he receives 300 units of whatever supply he chooses, instead of the customary $200.

Cards include accidents and failures ("An electrical malfunction has destroyed a solar generator. Return a solar generator if you have one or more"), successful experiments ("For studies of the gasses that circle Saturn, the World Science Foundation grants you one free greenhouse") and expeditions ("Phobos is found to be former asteroid captured by Mars — Take two extra turns and advance around the board", or, if the player rolled an odd number, "Went to Deimos. Miss your next regular turn while you wait for the moon to come back around the planet.")

The preliminary requirement for playing the game calls for reading about life on Mars.

ZEN AND THE Art of Bicycle Maintenance teaches students how to repair their own bikes by greasing bearings, changing flats and keeping them clean. Students work on their bicycles in back of one of the shops on Trinity's campus.

In Montessori, students work with primary school children using the Montessori method of teaching.

Students can also sign up for "Run for the Health of It," which is taught in the school gym, or Shape-Up, taught at the YMCA.

In Teen-agers and the Law, attorneys explain various laws applying to youth. A trip to witness an actual courtroom trial is also included in the course.

Around the World in Five Days and Greek Week explore various cultures, foods and lifestyles of Egypt, Latin America, Africa, France, China and Greece.

Can You Compute? exposes students to the world of computers using a TRS 80 Micro-Computer. Participants write their own programs using information gained in the class.

Three classes teach students how to help others in the community.

Bill Fleischmann, who is licensed to teach cardiopulmonary resuscitation, instructs students in the techniques of artificial respiration, artificial circulation and aiding a choking victim. The course has been responsible for saving thousands of lives each year. Students completing the course will receive their CPR certificates.

Or, students can travel with Meals on Wheels volunteers. These students assist the community by taking meals to people who, because of age or health problems, are unable to prepare their own food.

Drug searches becoming 'condition of employment'

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

With on-the-job drug and alcohol use looming as a substantial threat to valuable equipment and the safety of their employees, oilfield companies are beginning to require that workers agree to impromptu body and vehicle searches as "a condition of employment."

"The problem may not be new, but the concern is only two or three years old," said Charles Booker, author of an Oct. 19, 1981, Drilling Magazine article pointing to government statistics which indicate that 42 percent of the employees in the job category that encompasses oilfield workers smoke or have smoked marijuana.

The incidence of so-called hard drugs in the oilfield is proportional to their use by the population at large, according to the government's figures.

"THE RECENT explosion of drilling activity has brought new people into the industry who weren't in it before," Booker said in a telephone interview Friday. "A lot of them are younger people with 1960s values — including drugs."

While local drilling contractors say they aren't aware of any serious drug or alcohol problems with their employees, they're nonetheless taking steps to provide "a safe environment" for their workers and in the process lessen the risk of equipment damage.

"I don't know that we've ever had a problem," said Gene Sledge of Sledge Drilling Corp., which employs about 125 people. "But we're not so naive to believe it's not going on once in a while."

In compliance with recent court rulings that allow searches of employees and their belongings — as long as the employees are forewarned — drilling contractors and other employers are posting notices that outline company safety policy and spell out the consequences for violating it.

An Amoco Production Co. memo on the subject defines the type of "contraband material" — including drugs, weapons and alcohol — outlawed on company property and concludes by saying:

"ANY COMPANY employee who refuses to submit to a search or is found in possession of any such illegal or unauthorized items without a (satisfactory explanation) will be subject to disciplinary action up to and including immediate discharge.

"Specially trained, authorized personnel will conduct the inspections without prior announcement and at such times and locations as considered appropriate by Amoco.

"These inspections will be conducted only with the written consent of the person to be searched. While cooperation is voluntary, refusal of any person to consent to a search will be cause for not allowing that individual to enter or remain upon Amoco-operated facilities and for future denial of access to any such facility."

A.L. Mitchell, director of corporate security for Tom Brown Inc. of Midland, which has 31 rigs operating in several states, said the industry first noticed the problem several years ago on offshore rigs and has realized that it's becoming one on land-based drilling sites.

In April 1980, as part of its ongoing efforts to prevent accidents and reduce equipment damage, the company began posting notices similar to those used by Amoco and embarked on a drug education program for field and middle level supervisors.

Said Mitchell, who was a Texas Ranger, Department of Public Safety narcotics agent and New Mexico state trooper prior to going to work for Tom Brown Inc. three years ago:

"WE'RE TELLING OUR employees up front that certain rules apply — not under color of the law because we're not policemen — but to provide safe working conditions. The whole thrust is from the safety standpoint.

"We will not search anyone who doesn't agree to be searched, but those who don't agree will be asked to leave. There have been no comments whatsoever on the notices, and its been almost two years now.

"By and large, our people are good people. But if other companies have identified some problems, we're going to see if we have the same problems."

Tom Brown Inc. expects to have its drug and alcohol safety program in full swing by April 1, including large signs at the entrance to work sites informing visitors of the regulations that apply once they set foot on company property.

In a decision dated Jan. 25, 1980, the U.S. District Court, Eastern District of Louisiana, dismissed the defamation and invasion of privacy claim of an oil company employee who was fired after marijuana was found in a search of his property on a rig site.

Citing an earlier federal appeals court ruling, the district court said: "A search conducted by a private individual for purely private reasons does not fall within the protective ambit of the Fourth Amendment."

As an example, the court held that "a merchant's detention of persons suspected of stealing store property simply is not an action exclusively associated with the State. Experience teaches that the prime responsibility for protection of personal property remains with the individual."

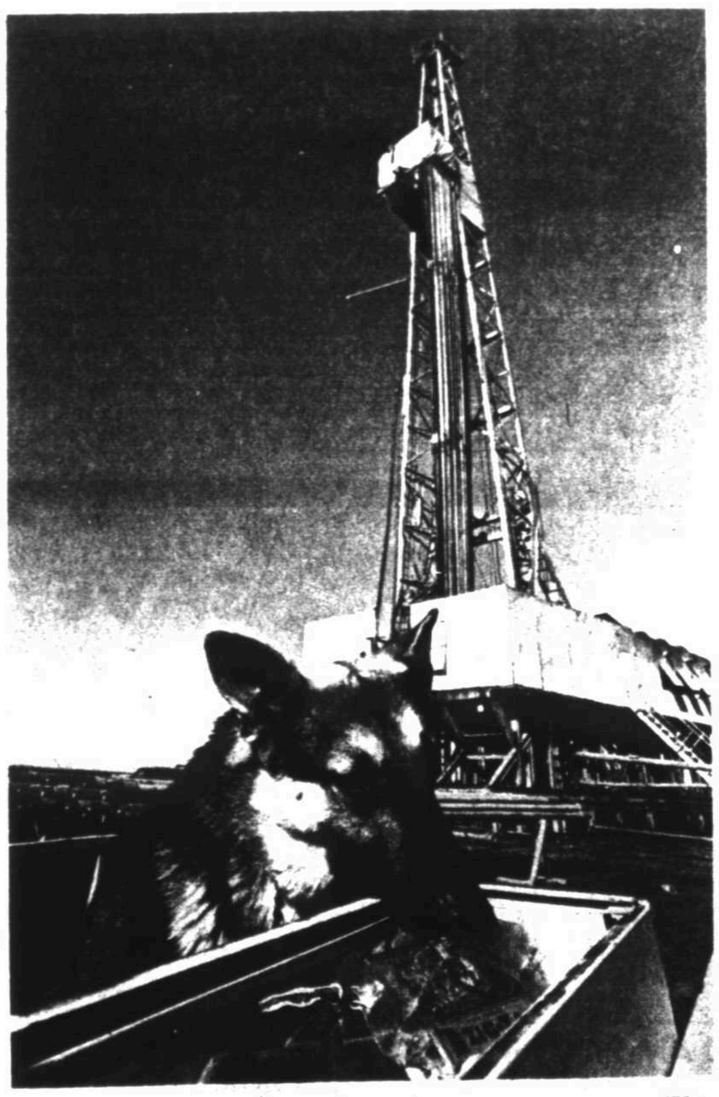

LIKE SLEDGE DRILLING and Tom Brown Inc., MGF Oil Corp. of Midland also has launched a drug and alcohol safety program under the guidance of its security director, former DPS trooper and narcotics officer Eddie Everett.

With 1,050 employees working on 45 rigs throughout the Southwest, Everett said the company "cannot tolerate drug or alcohol usage on the job."

To wit, MGF will employ "aggressive searches, enlightened education and tougher screening processes," he noted, adding that in his experience marijuana is the most abused drug in the oilpatch, with stimulants coming in second.

"We're working together in a combined effort with several oil companies and slowly building to the point where we're really fixing to go out there and get after it full scale."

Citing his 15 years as an attorney, Odessa lawyer Jerry Lopez said, "As far as I know, there is no law prohibiting an employer from requiring consent for on-site searches as a conditon of employement."

Specially trained dogs are being used by drilling companies and related industries to stem what is believed to be a flood of alcohol and drugs in the oilpatch. And agreeing to such searches is fast becoming "a condition of employment."

Cold weather increases vacant building fires

By BILL MODISETT
Staff Writer

Smoke rising from the old house told only a part of this story.

Desperate work by Midland firemen in the bone-chilling cold of early morning had paid off again. The house had been saved; but the victory likely was a bittersweet one for firemen. This house, after all, was no home. It was just a place for someone with no other place to go.

Fires in vacant houses in Midland have been almost commonplace in recent weeks. Some of the fires can be attributed to arsonists, some to vandals, according to Assistant Fire Marshal Bobby Williams. But one cause for vacant house fires becoming increasingly common is use of the structures by transients — those migratory individuals passing through Midland or having just arrived but reluctant to pay the high room rentals commanded by the city's booming oil economy.

Usually transients will set up housekeeping in a vacant building, such as an old house or dilapidated building, Williams said. If the weather's nice, no one may ever be the wiser. But if it's cold, chances improve that the fire department will be called out before the night's over.

With "the first norther" of the winter season, the fire department's calls to vacant houses increase. Another bad period is mid-summer, Williams noted.

Midland's growth and the influx of people to the oil fields have only exacerbated the problem, evidenced by the fact that the fire department has responded to about 20 fires in such circumstances this fall.

The dilemma facing fire department personnel is how to respond to the problem. On the one hand, use of vacant houses by transients increases the fire danger and, thus, potentially the work of firemen. But on cold nights only the most hard-hearted firemen would make a transient leave his only means of shelter.

"What are you going to do in the bitter cold?" questioned Williams. "They've got to be somewhere."

Problems usually surface when transients build fires inside the houses to keep warm. A commonly used heater, said Williams, is paper and wood burned in a five-gallon can. A transient may think the metal bottom of the bucket will protect the wooden floor beneath from the heat generated by the fire, but it won't, said Williams. In fact, such a fire can burn right through a floor.

Not long ago firemen responded to such a fire at a building in Midland where nine transients were staying. They had built a fire on a piece of tin laid on the floor. The fire burned through the tin, through the floor and dropped underneath the house, spreading the fire significantly.

"We're real fortunate we haven't lost some of them," said Williams, adding that most transients are not the type of individuals one would expect to see "in a fire prevention course."

It isn't particularly common for the fire department to find transients present when they arrive at the scene of a vacant house fire. And if they do, firemen actually gain very little information by talking to them. If firemen do get the chance to talk to transients, the homeless people usually tell them they have permission to stay in the building, Williams noted.

The fire department's only recourse, apparently, is to continue as is, hoping no transient dies in a vacant house fire. But there is another danger, too, that isn't commonly recognized.

Fighting fires in the middle of the night is dangerous enough under optimum conditions. But it's particularly dangerous for firemen who are awakened to icy cold weather that freezes the spray coming from the firetruck hoses and otherwise impedes their firefighting efforts.

A particular problem area for vacant house fires, said Williams, lies just outside downtown because it's convenient to the railroad tracks, stores and the unemployment office. In that region the fire department has encountered multiple fires in some structures.

While many of the vacant house fires likely begin accidentally, some are arson fires, said Williams, and may be the result of animosity between two transients. In some instances, Williams said, a transient will try to "get back" at another by burning the other's vacant house.

The fires, while presenting a danger to transients and a danger and headache to local firemen, likely will continue to be troublesome as long as Midland grows and the vacant buildings are allowed to remain, Williams said.

But the housing market in Midland still is so expensive and so saturated that the assistant fire marshal feels he would not eject a transient from a vacant house in cold weather.

"I really wouldn't run them out of the house," Williams said thoughtfully. "I might make them put their fire out."

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

He went into the backcountry wasteland alone, on foot, carrying only a canteen of water, cheese, prunes, poncho and machete, and stayed days at a time.

It was the mid-1930s. Big Bend's towering desert crags, sun-parched deserts and yawning canyons were so remote that only wagon roads existed, and beyond them only utter desolation. It was here he lived for almost three years, first in tents with 280 other men in the Civilian Conservation Corps, then in primitive wooden structures.

He would follow game trails up and over forested slopes of the Chisos Mountains, through great boulder-strewn gullies of the desert floor. Game trails meant wildlife. They also meant water. And water, in this isolated frontier hardly touched by the hand of man, meant life.

NOW, ALMOST 50 years later, James Owens of Midland at age 69 is not sitting idly at a retirement center, reliving old memories and staring wishfully at photographs he took a decade before Big Bend became a national park — he is planning further assaults on that sometimes unearthly terrain that has almost a mystical appeal to him.

"The Big Bend intrigues me to no end," he says, relaxing in his living room as various wilderness portraits stare down at him: Santa Elena Canyon, Blue Creek, the South Rim of the Chisos. His hair is snowy, thinning, but the scarcity of wrinkles in his face denotes the features of someone much younger than his seven calendar decades. "I like the feeling of going somewhere where not a lot of people are going."

Owens knows the existence of physical features in the Big Bend perhaps unrealized even by the National Park Service, for his solo explorations in the 1930s carried him by foot from one end of the great twist of the Rio Grande to the other.

He was 20 years old, and the nation was fighting its way out of the grips of a brutal depression. He joined the CCC, a federal program which took youths off the streets, provided them with jobs, food, medical attention. The CCC was largely responsible for the development of several state parks, and Owens first helped construct facilities at Lampasas State Park before he was transferred to then-Chisos Mountains State Park in May 1934.

LIKE OTHER CCC members, he was paid $30 a month — $25 of which was sent back to his family. Then he was promoted to "local experience man," earning $45 a month and doing primarily clerical work for the crew superintendent.

The CCC set up camp in the Chisos Mountains basin, into which they constructed a gravel road. And even though Owens was a part of the operation, the development he saw ongoing left him saddened. Here, only the Apaches once had ruled with the desert sun and unspoiled wildlife. Then had come the ranchers with their goats and livestock. And now, came the first signs of civilization.

"As far as I'm concerned, they ruined that basin," he reflects, remembering that upon his initial trek into the Chisos there existed only wagon roads and horse trails.

But at the same time he was witnessing the sometimes cruel hand of man against nature, he was himself becoming more and more a part of that nature, feeling an inexplicable oneness with it develop within him.

"WHENEVER I GET in that country I just become a part of it — my soul blends in with it," he tries to explain, but it is a feeling that transcends words. "It just exhilarates me, leaves me tingling."

Owens' tales of those early years of exploring Chisos Mountains State Park, as it was then called, are legion, filled with excitement, danger.

Such as his attack on the awesome 12-mile gash through the Mesa de Anguila known as Santa Elena Canyon, referred to in 19th Century literature as the Grand Canyon de Santa Helena.

Here, the Rio Grande slashes a crevice so narrow between 1,500-foot walls that members of an 1899 expedition reported that by extending their oars on either side of their crafts "we could almost touch either (side)." Once within, it becomes a tomb. There is no turning back against the pull of wicked rapids, no chance for escape from the wall-to-wall water except by letting it sweep the crafts to its end.

Or theirs.

In the midst of the canyon lies Rock Fall, a quarter-mile stretch of deadly white spray and hydraulics formed by a maelstrom of water fighting a course through house-sized boulders. It has claimed the lives of several persons who have attempted to shoot its rapids even in the most sophisticated of rubber rafts, but Owens and his four companions had not those comforts — they sported only truck innertubes.

THEY STARTED out long before dawn from the adobe village of Lajitas, and after six brutal hours they were swept into the vertical slit in the wall of the Mesa. The waters savaged their primitive crafts. Hydraulics sought to claim them, suck them under. When a great roar told them Rock Fall was ahead, they reached the shoreline, clambered over the fallen boulders to escape the most devastating of white water. Later, when the current subsided, they were forced to swim the final four miles out of the canyon.

> "The Big Bend intrigues me to no end. I like the feeling of going somewhere where not a lot of people are going."

On another occasion, Owens was traveling solo and sought to scale a portion of Ward Mountain that was treacherous and covered with moss. A sudden downpour drenched him, left the sheer precipice slippery, the handholds impossible. He clung to a crevice for two hours, waiting for the rain to stop and the sun to dry the mossy cliff so he could descend.

He made it — but it taught him a lesson, for he knew he had taken one step too far.

"That cured me — I'll never do it again," he says firmly. "I don't want to have anything to do with rappelling. I like to take a chance, but I like to take a calculated chance. Foolishly brave people don't live long."

rens continued. A high-ranking Mexican official came to the area, checking out the possibility of establishing an adjoining park in the mountain ranges of northern Mexico. Owens accompanied him high into the alpine-forested slopes of the Fronterizas range, and burst upon a sparkling lake ("out of this world," he describes it) so clear that he could see speckled trout "as long as my arm" darting through its depths.

Great riches also passed before his eyes. He came across a silver mine in Mexico, viewed a vein of the precious metal so broad several fingers couldn't cover it. Silver prices were down; the mine was abandoned as worthless. Today, it would be worth untold fortunes.

Several times he tangled with predators in the Chisos, including once when he chased a black bear from a bee hive on 7,835-foot Emory Peak to claim its honey for himself. Another time he stood outside a cave formed of a crevice extending deep into Emory and watched as two companions fled from it, followed at their heels by a half-grown black bear.

HE LEARNED THAT the desert sometimes racks the body, plays tricks with the mind. He remembers being part of a search party which spotted a lost youth among the desert bluffs, where the sun bakes land and skull alike. The boy had lost 40 pounds from dehydration and suffered so from disorientation that he ran from the party, sought to lose them. They had to chase him down and bring him to safety by force.

But that experience did not deter Owens' solo treks. Twice, mountain lions breathed down his neck. Hiking along Blue Creek, he looked up at a boulder at his shoulder to see a great cat's eyes fixed on him, and on another occasion he kept hearing footsteps behind him as he made his way down the forested slopes of Emory, he turned to see a cougar stalking him.

He crowded enough adventure into a brief three years to fill most persons' lives, and then he "dropped out" of the backcountry, taking a 30-year hiatus from the Big Bend upon quitting the CCC in 1936.

But the basic character traits honed by nature continued to rule him. He joined the U.S. Marines in World War II and participated in the assault on Iwo Jima. He received a bachelor's of science degree in animal science from Texas A&M and later added master's degrees in soil science and biological science. He taught high school vocational agriculture for a few years and then moved up to the college ranks, teaching a variety of natural sciences at Howard College at Big Spring including microbiology, chemistry, anatomy and ecology of wildlife management.

HE ALSO ADDED a wife along the way, and later a pair of daughters whom he once led up Mitre Peak in the Davis Mountains.

But all the while, the mysticism of the Big Bend remained in the back of his mind, and in 1966 he finally "came home."

But his return to the Big Bend was tinged with submerged tragedy when he surveyed the pavement, the structures, the scores of people in the Basin where civilization once had been only a memory.

"I was saddened in a way because of all the buildings — it had destroyed more or less what I consider the virginity of the place," he says quietly. And he recounts with fondness eating supper countless nights with early-day ranchers who carved out a rough and tumble existence in these badlands where every man still wore a gun. He tells how he absorbed the lore and legend that is a part of Big Bend's mystique, lore that has become a part of him.

"I was down there when the old timers were there and I saw the flavor of it when it was ranch country and there was nothing but wagon roads," he notes.

But with development came devastation. Many ancient huts were bulldozed, destroyed, and with them, priceless history that never can be reclaimed. Owens hopes it never happens again.

"THEY NEED TO save it, keep it for people who are venturesome and have the get-up-and-go to go down there and see an area that has as much history as the Big Bend does," he states adamantly.

Owens, for one, still has that energy. Upon his retirement in 1978 he found himself with plenty of time on his hands and an even greater desire to confront challenges and conquer them. He has retreated to the backcountry every couple of months since then, in such areas as Pecos Wilderness, Gila Wilderness and Guadalupe Mountains National Park, but Big Bend remains his first love.

> "Whenever I get in that country I just become a part of it — my soul blends in with it. It just exhilarates me, leaves me tingling."

Here, only a couple of years ago, he was attempting a 40-mile hike through Telephone Canyon in the desolate reaches of the northern Sierra del Carmen when he suffered extreme dehydration, sustained blisters that carved into his heels and toes until every step was forced. But he was isolated, at one with nature, and it was enough.

For despite the encroachment of civilization, the land is so vast, so rugged, that man's hand may dent it, but can never destroy. And the decreasing visitation rates due to gasoline prices the past decade only make conditions better, he believes.

"WHAT I LIKE about it is knowing there haven't been other people down there to contaminate it," he explains. "I'm laying out some plans right now. The Big Bend still has a lot to see and do, but what I really want now is to get a good picture of a cougar." That, as well as to explore remote areas such as New Mexico's Gila Wilderness, Wyoming's badlands, the Rio Grande's lower canyons.

It's a safe bet that this man who seeks out the wilderness "for my soul's sake" will squeeze all of those adventures into the next few years, for few persons of any age have the drive which he possesses. Bicycling a hundred miles a week, running 14, walking 21, lifting weights, lugging a 50-pound pack — it's all a part of the makeup of a man "blending in" with nature.

It comes as no surprise that he always carries his topographical map of Big Bend's backcountry in his pickup. After all, he says, glancing fondly at his backpack, "I never know when I'm gonna take off."

City Council may firm up plans for $28 million bond issue

Issues and prices for a bond issue coming up this spring may be narrowed down on Tuesday when the Midland City Council gathers for a regular session at 10 a.m. in City Hall Council Chambers.

During the last meeting on Jan. 13, the council looked at putting in a $14 million project to pipe effluent from the sewage treatment plant to a farmer's land, using $4 million to install water and sewer distribution lines, placing $3 million into city streets, using $2 million to construct two new fire substations and equip them, and delegating $5 million for revising the parking and street systems at Midland Regional Airport.

The $28 million package was discussed on a preliminary basis during that meeting and the staff was instructed by the council to pinpoint exactly where the money would be going.

In addition to firming up the bond issue proposals, the council also will consider a resolution to hold a city-wide election the first Saturday in April in conjunction with Midland Independent School District, Midland Junior College District and Midland County Hospital District.

The council will look at revising rules for downtown loading zones after several members mentioned at the Jan. 13 meeting that the plan wasn't working as well as they had hoped. They will review a survey made on the use of those downtown zones, the permits issued for these and changes that need to be instituted to eliminate reported abuses.

Midland's effluent disposal problem has appeared on the agenda again as the council considers a resolution to appropriate funds for additional consulting services regarding disposal of the treated sewage.

Annexation requests under consideration include one by Hertzmark-Parnegg Realty, Inc. for a 156.41-acre tract on the east side of Cotton Flat Road and 2½ miles south of Interstate 20.

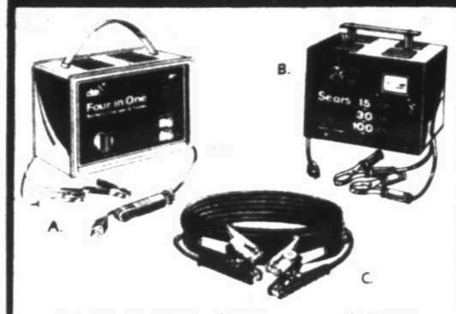

In addition, public service plans on other annexation requests deal with a 100-acre tract east of Lamesa Road and north of I-20 and a 320-acre tract north of Green Tree Estates.

Zone change requests are coming from Hailco, Inc. for the northwest corner of Fairgrounds Road and Pecan Avenue and for the southwest corner of Hemlock and Fairgrounds Road, from Energas Company and the city on the north side of Franklin Street between Truman Street and Circle Drive, from Larry Sutton and the city on the north side of Cuthbert Avenue and the alley north of Bedford and between Idlewilde and Woodcrest streets.

Two other zone change requests deal with land south of Bluebird Lane, both from Richard Moise and both are to change the zoning from 1F-1 to 1F-2.

Lloyd Cline selected to represent area

LAMESA — Lamesa banker-farmer Lloyd Cline unanimously was selected to represent the Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers Inc. on a U.S. Department of Agriculture study committee.This group will recommend alternative methods of setting quality differentials in the cotton-loan program for 1982 and subsequent years.

Cline is a PCG past president.

Current PCG President Gary Ivey of Ralls is PCG's nominee as Cline's alternate on the 10-member committee. Committee appointments will be made by U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block.

"It is imperative that we secure the appointment of Texas-Oklahoma committee members who have the knowledge, the background and the ability to effectively represent our interest," Ivey said.

Personnel director considered

Midland County Commissioners will be in session at 10 a.m. Monday in the Midland County Courthouse to consider hiring a personnel director and to carry on other business.

The Commissioners' Court's agenda also includes:

—Proposals to change the rental policy of the Midland County Exhibit Building.

—Approval of plats of 349 Ranch Estates, Section 2, Longview Subdivision.

—Consider formal amendments to previous resolution regarding West Texas Higher Education Authority.

—Consider acknowledging the abandonment of a railway easement and the dedication of the alley easement upon request by the Industrial Foundation of Midland. Representing the foundation will be Grant Billingsley, director of economic development for the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

—Consider authorizing County Auditor Johnnie Thompson to advertise for bids for road materials.

Farmers defend methods

WASHINGTON (AP) — A campaign by animal welfare advocates who charge that many farmers are using inhumane methods to produce livestock and poultry appears to be picking up steam.

But at least one major farm organization is challenging the campaign, currently being highlighted by a news media blitz about the veal business and how calves are produced for slaughter.

The latest charges are made by the Humane Society of the United States in a series of anti-veal advertisements in a number of big-city newspapers and magazines, including New York, Washington, Los Angeles, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia.

Typically, the ad says, "Before you choose veal ... think twice" about milk-fed or "white" veal as an expensive gourmet item.

"Most white veal comes from calves raised in total confinement," it says. "A million a year. Isolated in narrow stalls ... for their whole lives. Unable to turn around. Denied roughage. Fed liquid diets low in iron so their flesh stays fashionably white.

"Your veal purchase supports this industry. Think twice before you choose veal."

The American Farm Bureau Federation, one of the few farm organizations to take a hard public line on the animal welfare issue, recently countered with its own ad in the New York Times and, as it has for months, continues to make available its own literature about animal welfare.

"Veal calves, usually, surplus dairy bull calves — like all dairy calves — are weaned from their mothers at an early age," said the Farm Bureau. "Prime milk-fed veal calves are fed a scientifically balanced liquid diet that is equal to or better than their mother's milk."

The Farm Bureau contends further that it is a common practice to include antibiotics in the calves' liquid diet to reduce diarrhea and respiratory problems.

Pruning clinic may help homeowners

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midand County Extension
Agent — Agriculture

The Shade Tree Pruning Clinic sponsored by the Extension Landscape Horticulture and Turf Committee is set for 5:00 p.m., Wednesday, January 27, at Hill Park, Cuthbert Avenue and G. Street.

Actual pruning of several species, both deciduous and evergreen, and discussion of procedures will be done by Dr. L. Austin Stockton, Area Extension Horticulturist for District 6. Assisting Dr. Stockton will be Guy Richards and Mike McAlister, professional horticulturists in Midand.

The aim of the Landscape Horticulture and Turf Committee is to help the homeowner become familiar with the correct pruning techniques on all plants commonly grown around the home to avoid the damage done annually by incorrect pruning practices. The practice of topping trees is not horticulturally sound in any sense of the term, but is done all too often in the area.

If you would like to learn the correct techniques in pruning, plan to attend this demonstration.

Crime — perhaps the most persistent and troublesome problem currently facing Texans — is under attack. Launching a new educational program in crime prevention is the Texas Agricultural Extension Service of the Texas A&M University System.

Since preventing crime is the role of every good citizen, the new program will focus on actions that cam be taken by both individuals and organized groups to reduce crime in their neighborhoods and communities.

The Extension Crime Prevention Program will focus on the following six areas: vandalism prevention, home security, farm security, personal protection, neighborhood and community watch and prevention of con games and other frauds.

County Extension Agents will be providing leadership in conducting local programs aimed at crime prevention. Local law enforcement officials will be involved.

Each program area is supported by visual aids and handout materials that have been developed with assistance from the Texas Crime Prevention Institute.

Anyone interested in learning more about this new educational program should contact their local County Extension Agent. The programs are available to any group wanting to learn about crime prevention.

Anyone interested in obtaining a copy of the yearbook may request one from their congressional representative or senator. The yearbook may also be ordered for $7 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

CONSUMER TIPS

Action can be taken against landlord

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin

"A window in my apartment is broken and the cold wind is blowing in. I have explained to the manager that it needs to be fixed immediately since my baby has a cold, but he doesn't seem interested in making the repairs. What can I do?"

As a result of the recent cold weather, many people have been asking the Better Business Bureau what they can do when their landlord refuses to make needed repairs.

According to a law passed by the Texas Legislature, action can only be taken against a landlord who refuses to make repairs that "materially affect the physical health or safety of the ordinary tenant."

If the tenant feels his carpet needs replacing, yet the condition of the carpet was caused by ordinary wear and tear and does not materially affect his health or safety, the landlord is not responsible for replacing the carpet. If the tenant caused the damage by negligence, he is responsible for correcting the problem.

If the needed repairs do affect the tenant's health or safety, according to the law the tenant must follow a specific complaint procedure. The following steps need to be carefully followed.

-Explain in writing exactly what repairs are needed and request that the matter be taken care of as soon as possible. The notice needs to be delivered personally or sent by certified mail.

-Send a second notice if the repairs are not made within a reasonable period of time. It is important to state your intentions in the second notice because you can terminate the rental agreement without being penalized after informing the landlord of your decision and allowing seven additional days for the repairs to be made.

You should also request a written explanation of why the repairs are being delayed, since the court will probably assume the delay was unjustified if no explanation was given. Again, make sure the notice is actually received by the landlord.

-You must continue to pay the rent.

-In special instances, such as hail or explosions, the damage may be covered by an insurance policy. If this is the case, you must allow the landlord enough time to be reimbursed by the insurance company.

If you desire to stay, have followed the above procedure, and no action has been taken by the landlord, see a lawyer. You have the right to sue for one month's rent, $100, actual damages resulting from the delay, plus court costs and attorneys' fees. The suit must be filed in the district or county court.

Evicting a tenant in retaliation for following the above procedure is illegal. If a landlord files a suit for eviction within six months of receiving the tenant's repair notice, the tenant can have the suit thrown out of court. The tenant will need to prove the needed repairs materially affect his health and safety and the eviction is a result of his repair request.

If a tenant signs a rental agreement that includes a waiver statement voiding the landlord's responsibility for any repairs, the tenant forfeits his rights under this law. Therefore, as with any contract, it is important to read the contract thoroughly before you sign.

Several hundred of the approximately 44,500 certificates which her office mailed out more than a week ago have been returned to sender.

"My biggest trouble is the post office has changed addresses within the city limits," moaned Mrs. Builta, Midland County deputy voter registrar.

Another situation which causes her problems occurs when voters fail to notify her of address changes when they re-locate.

The U.S. Postal Service returns the postal-card-size certificates if they are not deliverable to voters at the addresses on the certificates. Law prohibits their being forwarded to the addressee even if the voter has posted a change-of-address form with the post office.

Mrs. Builta said purpose of that law is to prevent misuse or illegal use of the card at voting time.

"If anyone receives a salmon-colored card that doesn't belong to him, tell us what happened across the top (of the card) so that the mail carrier can bring it back to us," she said.

Currently, the Texas Secretary of State is issuing new voter registration certificates, which are renewed once every two years. The 1982 card is salmon-colored.

Mrs. Builta noted that in many cases, particularly on the Rural Routes, the U.S. Postal Service revised mailing addresses after voters had reported to her office what was then their correct mailing addresses. But the postman is forbidden by law to forward the mail.

Voters who are due those new salmon-colored cards and haven't received them may drop by her office in the basement of the Midland County Courthouse. The Voter Registration Office may be reached weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. by dialing 682-9481.

"If they don't come in (to her office) and correct it, you go on the strike list," she said.

Mrs. Builta's over-riding concern is to get the citizenry to the polls on elections days, which in 1982 falls on April 3, May 1 and Nov. 2.

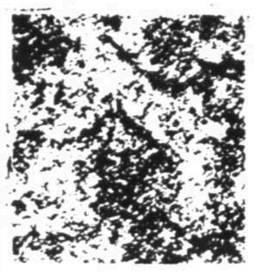

MHMR to meet

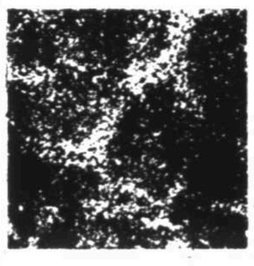

The regular monthly meeting of the board of trustees of the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation will be held at 4 p.m. Tuesday in the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commisssion conference room.

Among the items on the agenda the board will review the treasurer's report for December, the chairman's report and the director's report.

POSITIVE THINKING

Dynamic faith can bring person great joy

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

The little city girl sitting by the train window gazed out at the passing scene in fascination. Every few seconds she went into transports of delight. "Oh, Mommy, look, a cow!" "Mommy, see the horse in the field! See that pretty horse!" And an instant later: "Oh, what a beautiful big truck! Mommy, look!"

The child's high-pitched, excited voice carried the whole length of the car. The mother was visibly embarrassed. "Shush, shush," she kept saying. Finally she turned toward the people sitting nearby and said, "Please excuse her. She still thinks the world is wonderful."

Now the thing I find significant in this little episode is the mother's apology. It appears that finding the world wonderful is something one expects and tolerates in children only — until they are old enough to know better! If this is just one person's notion we can write it off as some unaccountable idiosyncrasy. But one wonders to what extent it may typify the unconscious attitude of many people.

SUPPOSE THE adult citizens of this nation were to take an association test in which you were supposed to jot down the first thing suggested to your mind by the word "life." Some people would come up with association words like "wonderful," "precious," "thrill, "you," "glorious" and the like. But I wonder if this group isn't outnumbered by others who think of life as mainly hard, uncertain, strenuous, bewildering, bleak, tough or even "lousy."

The tendency to see primarily the dark side has no doubt been with us since the dawn of history. "We men are always complaining that happy hours are so few and our sad hours so many," wrote Goethe, "and yet it is we who are to blame. If we opened our hearts to enjoy the good that God offers us every day we should have strength enough to bear the evil when it does come."

IF YOU are not now one of those who find life wonderful and exciting, you can become one. A lot more joy in living can be yours if you will let yourself be opened up to it, and there are many ways in which this can happen to you. To some it comes through living close to nature, attuned to nature's moods; to some through fascinating work that calls their latent powers into action bringing the thrill of newfound ability and strength. But the great secret of more joy in living is through spiritual inspiration and the development of vital faith.

Among the most deeply joyous persons I have ever known was a man by the name of Weiss, who was a member of my church. Mr. Weiss had to have a leg amputated. He took that grueling experience with a cheerful fortitude sustained by his rugged faith and a heart brim-full of love for God. But further suffering was in store for him, for later his other leg had to be amputated too. A day or two after the second operation I went to see him at the hospital. When I asked the nurse on duty where I could find Mr. Weiss, she exclaimed, "You mean the man who has lost both legs. What a wonderful man he is! He's the happiest person I ever saw in this hospital."

She then told me about a drunk who had wandered into the hospital carrying a bunch of flowers. He kept insisting, "I want to see my friend."

But when finally he managed to remember his friend's name it turned out to be a patient who had been discharged and gone home. "Well, then," said the inebriated visitor, "I'll go through the ward and find the happiest fellow there. I'll give him my flowers."

THEY TRIED to shoo him out but finally let him wander through the ward, accompanied by this nurse. When he came to Mr. Weiss's bed he stopped. Despite the alcoholic haze clouding his mind and vision he evidently had a flash of perceptivity, for he said, "You are the happiest man here. I give you my flowers. You are my friend."

"Sure I'm your friend," answered Mr. Weiss, "and I'm pleased to have your flowers."

Sitting beside this remarkable human being I remarked, "I understand that even a drunk realizes you're the happiest man around. Just how do you come by all that happiness?"

He put out his hand and touched the Bible lying on the beside table. "When I start feeling depressed or sorry for myself," he said, "I just read this Book, and pretty soon I'm happy and gay again." He gave me a big smile. It was plain to see that even in time of grim personal calamity a person of dynamic faith can have joy.

Parents Awareness Rally to take fresh approach

A Parents Awareness Rally for parents of all Midland elementary and junior high school students will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the San Jacinto Junior High School auditorium, Community Lane and North N Street.

The program, jointly sponsored by the San Jacinto, Alamo and Goddard junior high schools' PTAs, will take a fresh approach at parenting, according to Myra Thurman of the Goddard Junior High PTA.

Purpose of the rally is to increase parental awareness of wholesome recreation available for Midland youths, as well as unwholesome recreation and drug abuse.

"The PAR is aimed not just at the junior highs," Mrs. Thurman said. "All of the elementary schools have been invited."

Mrs. Thurman stressed that although the rally is being sponsored by PTAs, it is not a typical PTA program. Interested parents are encouraged to come and get acquainted with the parent's of their children's peers.

Bush named Texan of Year by state legislative conference

NEW BRAUNFELS — Former Midlander George H.W. Bush, vice president of the United States, has been named Texan of the Year by the Texas Legislative Conference. He will be present to receive the award here March 12 at a luncheon of the 16th Annual Legislative Conference.

The announcement was made by Leon Jaworski, chairman of the conference advisory committee, and John Chunn, chairman of the conference arrangements committee.

According to the two men, Bush's career in the field of public affairs, which has benefitted Texas, was the primary reason for his selection.

Bush became the youngest commissioned pilot in the Navy at the age of 18 and served as cadet and career pilot from 1942 to 1945. During his World War II service, Bush earned three air medals and the distinguished flying cross.

He earned a degree in economics, graduating Phi Beta Kappa from Yale University in 1948. Then he joined Dresser Industries in West Texas. In 1951, Bush co-founded a small royalty company known as Bush-Overby Development Co. And in 1953 he became co-founded of Zapata Petroleum Corporation. At age 30, Bush became president and co-founder of a third firm known as Zapata Offshore Company.

He was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1966 from the Texas Seventh Congressional District and was re-elected two years later. In 1971-73 he served as U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations. From January 1973 to September 1974 he served as chairman of the Republican National Committee.

In October 1974, Bush was selected to serve as Chief of the U.S. Liaison Office in Peking, the Peoples Republic of China. Following this, he was appointed director of the Central Intelligence Agency. And in 1980 he became Ronald Reagan's running mate on the Republican presidential ticket.

According to Chunn, the Texan of the Year Award is given each year in conjunction with the Texas Legislative Conference to recognize those individuals who have given valuable leadership in the field of public affairs for the benefit of Texas.

Previous recipients have included Ambassador Anne Armstrong, Ladybird Johnson, Dolph Briscoe, George Mahon and John B. Connally.

'Heli-stat' may return zeppelin-like ships to sky

LAKEHURST, N.J. (AP) — Only a few hundred yards from the site of the spectacular crash of the Hindenburg zeppelin, construction on another giant lighter-than-air ship is nearing completion.

If the "heli-stat," a combination of a blimp and four helicopters, proves successful in a test launch this summer, it will be used by the U.S. Forest Service to haul lumber from previously inaccessible government lands.

The Forest Service is paying Frank Piasecki, owner of a Philadephia aircraft company, $10.7 million to build the airship.

Piasecki said he is aware that memories of the May 1937 Hindenburg crash which killed 36 people still linger, but he said his heli-stat will change public apprehension about blimps.

"When I first tried to get support for the idea, people would literally fall in the aisles laughing," the Piasecki Aircraft owner said last week. "But after listening to the facts and figures, they became serious supporters. People laughed at Henry Ford, too."

James Beavers, heli-stat project director for the Forest Service, said the government hopes the heli-stat will be able to recover thousands of tons of wood which otherwise would be lost to blight.

"Five billion board feet are lost each year. We could harvest at least some of this wood," he said.

Piasecki said the heli-stat might also be used to fly oil derricks, pipelines and military equipment to remote areas.

He said the helicopter has shown "mobility and economy" in heavy lifting but that "we've come to the end of the road."

MC student count slightly higher

Monday is the final day for fulltime students to register for classes at Midland College. After one week of late registration, Midland College is running slightly more than 100 students ahead of its count for the 1981 spring semester.

Dee Windsor, associate dean of students and registrar, reported that 2,494 students had signed up for credit courses by Friday morning, compared with 2,377 for the same period last year. The final 1981 spring semester enrollment totaled 2,581 students taking one or more credit courses.

Late registration continues until Feb. 2 for students wishing to enroll for three classes or less.

Registration is handled in the Office of Student Services, in the administration building, between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. on Friday.

"By now, a number of our popular classes in the more desirable time periods already have been filled," said Dr. Don Hunt, vice president for instruction. "However, we still have quite a few openings in many of our courses that might be attractive to part-time students. There are still some vacancies in management, music, art, some of the social sciences, and a number of the daytime vocational courses, such as machine technology, industrial engines and heating/air conditioning."

Specific information about classes which still have vacancies may be obtained by visiting the Office of Student Services or by calling 684-7851, extension 166.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Weight, breast cancer not related

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother is 75 years old and has always been on the heavy side. She's in good health. She says she's big-boned, but other people would call it fat. I've heard that heavy older women have a bigger chance of getting breast cancer. Do you think my mother should lose weight? — Carol, Trenton, N.J.

Dear Carol: I'm certainly not going to suggest weight loss for a 75-year-old woman in good health whom I have never seen. If your description of your mother is accurate, she must be doing something right.

In regard to the issue you raise, one study did suggest some relationship between excessive weight and the risk of breast cancer in older women. However, a more recent study by the National Cancer Institute of Canada shows no such association.

It may be that weight loss is a desirable goal for your mother, but that will have to be decided by someone much closer to the situation than I am.

Dear Dr. Solomon: You recently wrote an article about neurofibromatosis. It had to do with "The Elephant Man." Exactly what is "The Elephant Man's" disease? — Mrs. M.K.

Dear Mrs. K.: In the play "The Elephant Man," the lead character had neurofibromatosis (Von Recklinghausen's Disease). It is one of the commonest inherited neurologic disorders. Approximately 100,000 people in the United States are afflicted with neurofibromatosis. It affects people of all nationalities and races. Neurofibromatosis affects all areas of the nervous system and the skin. It usually begins in childhood or adolescence. Multiple benign tumors appear in the brain, spinal cord, and skin. The nerves controlling vision and hering are often affected. In addition multiple dark patches of skin, called "cafe-au-lait" spots, are usually present. Tumors of the skin, called neurofibromas, can develop superficially or just under the surface of the skin. As many as 10,000 neurofibromas of the skin have appeared in one person. Most people with neurofibromatosis have a predominance of growths involving the brain or skin.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My sister-in-law recently suffered a severe heart attack. She took birth control pills for many years but had stopped about two years ago. The doctor feels the Pill was a factor in her illness, but I don't understand. Didn't the risk of heart attack from the Pill stop when she stopped taking it? — Rosemary, Dover

Dear Rosemary: Not according to a study by Dennis Slone of Boston University Medical School and colleagues. They found that the longer women took oral contraceptives, the greater was their risk of heart attack. Their increased risk persisted for as long as nine years afterward.

It is good that your sister-in-law has stopped taking birth control pills, and if she now follows all of her doctor's guidelines, she should be fine.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I never realized what a nasty disease ulcerative colitis can be until I came down with it myself. I'm allergic to some foods, and I wonder if the two conditions are related. — Hank, Chicago

Dear Hank: Various studies have suggested — but have not proved — that food allergies do not play a part in the development of ulcerative colitis.

Acupuncture helping to cure drug addicts

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In the early '70s, after the flower children lost their bloom, the Haight-Ashbury Free Medical Clinic was a haven for heroin addicts.

A decade later, trappings of the hippie culture amuse tourists on Haight Street and the clinic still cares for addicts. But now there's a new type of treatment available to end the tragedy of addiction — acupuncture.

"I don't think acupuncture is a panacea," says Gregory L. Johnson, a sociologist who investigated the value of acupuncture during an 18-month, federally funded project involving 460 heroin addicts.

"Acupuncture offers a chance to break out" of the traditional approach of replacing heroin with other drugs such as methadone and tranquilizers, Johnson said during an interview at the clinic.

Acupuncture also helps those addicted to Valium, a frequently prescribed tranquilizer.

ADDICTS who used acupuncture "demonstrated dramatic improvements in symptom relief and mood-states, especially in the area of withdrawal pain, depression, and anxiety," concluded Johnson and co-researcher John A. Newmeyer.

Acupuncture "worked as well as pills on short-term (addiction) and maybe better for those highly motivated," Johnson said.

Acupuncture is about 35 percent cheaper than drug therapy combined with counseling and 50 percent cheaper than methadone treatment, the researchers said.

The $170,000 trial yielded some disappointment. Addicts who chose acupuncture were "significantly more likely to drop out" of the treatment than those taking medication. Six months after treatment, usually given for 21 days, just 5 percent of addicts were still off heroin.

Two out of three patients who originally used acupuncture requested medication upon their return to the clinic.

"Despite their endorsement of acupuncture's effectiveness, most clients discontinued treatments because of its inconvenience relative to pills and the perceived pain of the needles," Johnson and Newmeyer said.

"We're really fighting people's liking for pills," Johnson said.

The acupuncture needles, usually inserted in two points in the outer ear in a 30-minute session, transmit a nine-volt electric current which deadens pain impulses.

The treatment is painless, although the thought of sticking needles ⅛-inch deep into the skin disturbed some clients, said Susan Lo, an acupuncturist who tends to 40 to 70 patients a day.

Two areas of research gave birth to the study, conducted from October 1979 to April 1981. One was the work last decade of H. L. Wen, a Hong Kong neurosurgeon, who is credited with discovering the pain-killing effects of acupuncture on addicts withdrawing from heroin.

The other inspiration came from recent neurological research which indicated that acupuncture triggers pain-suppressing substances in the brain known as endorphins.

The Haight-Ashbury project found that acupuncture was more likely to help better-educated, employed clients who lived outside heavy drug-use areas than those with criminal records and surrounded by other addicts.

Investigators probe the wreckage of a small plane that crashed in Victorville, Calif., Saturday after colliding with another aircraft. The pilot of the other plane managed to land safely at a nearby airport. The plane crashed on a street in a business district.

Light planes collide in mid-air over business district

VICTORVILLE, Calif. (AP) — A mid-air collision Saturday plunged one plane into this city's business district, killing the pilot and one passenger, while the other plane crashed at a nearby airport, officials said.

It was the fourth accident involving light aircraft in Southern California in the past four days. Nine people have been killed.

Saturday's collision occurred at noon over Apple Valley, a Mojave Desert community 60 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

One of the single-engine planes limped to Victorville, four miles away, and slammed into a six-lane boulevard in the business district, killing the two people aboard, San Bernardino Sheriff's Deputy Joe Castanon said. The pilot seemed to be trying to "control the plane, but apparently couldn't," he said.

The victims' names were not immediately available, said Sheriff's Lt. Charles Sandro.

No injuries or damage were reported on the ground, fire dispatcher Ron Jenkins said. "It (the street) was pretty empty for some reason," Jenkins said.

"The plane just crashed into the street and then scattered into a zillion pieces," he said. "There's wreckage all over." He said there was no fire or explosion.

The pilot of the second plane, a Cherokee Pathfinder, crashed trying to land at the Apple Valley Airport, Castanon said.

That pilot, identified as Wayne Cobb of Fallbrook, Calif., was treated for minor injuries at St. Mary's Hospital in Apple Valley, the emergency room supervisor said. His three passengers were uninjured, said Capt. Jim Stevens of the Apple Valley fire department.

Skies were "clear as a bell" when the collision occurred, Castanon said.

In previous accidents in the past week, a single-engine plane crashed in rain and light snow near Palomar Mountain east of Escondido in San Diego County, killing three people aboard.

On Friday, two bodies were found near the snow-covered wreckage of plane on a mountain ridge north of Banning, about 80 miles east of Los Angeles.

Also on Friday, a single-engine Mustang II plane crashed into an open field in Lancaster, 60 miles northeast of Los Angeles, killing two occupants.

Six TCU students face charges

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — At least one of six Texas Christian University students suspected of planting a home-made bomb at a campus fraternity house will be charged, police say.

The six turned themselves in Friday afternoon after a tip led investigators to the suspects, said arson squad Capt. W.E. Dunkin.

Second-degree felony charges for possessing, transporting and placing a prohibited weapon will be filed this week against some or all six of the students, Dunkin said.

If convicted, the students could receive maximum penalties of 20 years in prison and $10,000 fines.

"They think it was a prank, but you can see by the penalty that it's not a prank," Dunkin said Friday. "We certainly don't consider it a prank."

Bengals, 49ers give Super Bowl new look

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Super Bowl was becoming too predictable. The same faces. The same places. So, a year ago, from New Orleans, the National Football League looked west, looked east — then headed due north.

This, of course, is the first Super Bowl to be played in the nation's snowbelt. The snow's effect will be limited to the 80,000 or so fans driving to and from the Fibreglas-enclosed Silverdome.

This technological wonder with its cross-hatched, air-pressured roof stands upon what used to be the burial ground for worn-out, rusting automobiles.

In this struggle for survival between the Cincinnati Bengals and the San Francisco 49ers, we have a group of highly paid athletes on center stage in an annual event which is the very essence of opulence.

Yet this is Michigan, the most economically hard-hit state in the nation. Just down the road from Pontiac lies Detroit, the hub of the nation's auto manufacturers, where officials say recession has long since given way to depression, where a nce-awesome all-American industry is gridlocked by inflation, by stalled labor negotiations, by the influx of cheaper foreign-made cars.

JUST OUTSIDE the Silverdome, beyond the $40 seats, beyond the vacuum of a green-carpeted world where skill, luck, hard work and clean living are almost inevitably paid off with success, there lies another world ... another struggle for survival.

In the state of Michigan, 627,000 people are looking for work. That's more than the entire population of Alaska (440,000) or Wyoming (471,000) or Vermont (511,000).

But for those few hours encompassing Super Sunday, the world — or at least that part of it which cares what happens in Commissioner Pete Rozelle's domain — will forget matters such as economic yardsticks. It will be more concerned with the yardsticks that measure the inches between success and failure, between victory and defeat.

And after the sun has set, Rozelle will crown a new champion to replace the The Oakland Raiders. A new team will celebrate a fantasy-become-reality.

Not since Joe Namath engineered the most startling upset in the history of the pro game a dozen years ago have two first-timers met in the Super Bowl. And never before has a team (in this case, both teams) arisen from the ashes of a losing season one year to reach this climactic event the next.

YET, DESPITE the occasional asides that something's lacking here — namely a so-called championship-type team like the Dallas Cowboys or maybe the Pittsburgh Steelers or San Diego Chargers — what we have here are the National and American conferences' two best teams.

A year ago, Forrest Gregg and Bill Walsh had inherited teams that had become community embarrassments, and they were just getting comfortable in their jobs.

Gregg was finishing up his first season as the Bengals' coach. And they knew he was boss. The Bill Johnson-Homer Rice era, when laxity was a byword, had ended with the suddenness of a slap in the face.

Gregg was schooled by the ultimate taskmaster, Vince Lombardi, during his days as an offensive tackle with the Green Bay Packers' Super Bowl teams of the 1960s. He whipped the Bengals back into shape in one big hurry.

But if there were turning points, they came last April and again last September.

First, the Bengals gave quarterback Ken Anderson Cris Collinsworth, a pass receiver who would turn defensive backs' eyes saucer-wide. He was their No. 2 draft choice, and he was No. 2 in receptions and No. 1 in yardage on the team.

THEN, WHEN Anderson stumbled badly on opening day, throwing two interceptions and getting yanked out of the game before it was one-quarter old, Gregg gave him another chance, starting him in Game 2 against the Jets. If the game hadn't been in New York, Ken's wife has said, and if he had not started out well, he might not have survived the fans' wrath.

But he won, completing 21 of 33 passes for 246 yards and three touchdowns along the way. And with what turned out to be a fiercely protective front line, he and the Bengals kept on winning.

The last-place team at 6-10 in 1980 became 1981's first-place team at 12-4. And Anderson, a two-time passing champion in the 1970s, was that again and much more, earning Most Valuable Player and Offensive Player of the Year honors, too.

That, too, makes this a unique Super Bowl. For it is not so much Gregg's patience in 1981 that made Anderson what he is today so much as it was Bill Walsh's patience in 1971.

Walsh was an assistant under Bengals boss Paul Brown for nine years. It was Walsh who convinced Brown to draft Anderson, a little-known quarterback out of a lesser-known school, tiny Augustana College in Illinois in 1971. By mid-1972 Walsh had painstakingly molded him into a starting quarterback. By 1974 (and again a year later), Anderson was the league's premier passer.

YET WHEN Brown chose to relinquish his coaching duties after the 1975 season, the job went not to Walsh but to Johnson, "one of the boys." The disappointed Walsh left the Bengals, spent a year in San Diego (where he began the conversion of Dan Fouts from a disillusoned young man into the NFL's most awesome thrower), then headed into the college coaching ranks at Stanford, just outside San Francisco.

It was there, in 1979, that Edward J. DeBartolo Jr., the young owner of the 49ers, went when he needed a savior.

Excited, who's excited about Super Bowl XVI. Cincinnati Bengal quarterback Ken Anderson doesn't seem too concerned as he fails to stifle a big yawn as he waits for the team's practice Saturday.

Nelson struggles to keep Phoenix lead

PHOENIX (AP) — Larry Nelson retained the lead with a struggling 1-under-par 70 in the second round of the $300,000 Phoenix Open golf tournament and looked ahead to "a grinding weekend."

The soft-spoken Nelson, the current PGA champion, put together a 36-hole total of 133, nine shots under par for two trips over the 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club course.

"I just wasn't very sharp," Nelson said. "I don't know if the layoff had anything to do with it."

Nelson, who completed his first round before rain delayed play Thursday, had a day off Friday. The rain delay threw the tournament a full day off schedule. It's now set to end Monday.

Morris Hatalsky, who last season won his first event in a six-year tour career, and tour sophomore Fred Couples moved into a tie for second at 134, 8 under par at the tournament's halfway point.

Couples, one of the longest hitters on the tour, matched the best round of the chilly, sunny day with a 65. Hatalsky had a 67 despite a last-hole bogey that cost him a share of the lead.

"It was a gamble, and I paid for it," Hatalsky said with a shrug after boldly going for the green with his second shot on the par-5 finishing hole. He found the water instead.

The group at 135, only 2 shots back with two rounds to go, included defending title-holder David Graham, hometown boy Tom Purtzer, former PGA champ Lanny Wadkins and Lon Nielsen. Graham, the U.S. Open champ, had a 68. Wadkins shot 70, Purtzer 69 and Nielsen 66.

Some of the game's bigger guns also remained in position for a shot at the title. Tom Kite, last year's leading money winner, had a 67 and was at 138. Johnny Miller, winner of a $500,000 first prize in South Africa earlier this month, was 69-139. And 1981 Player of the Year Bill Rogers was at 140 after another 70.

Lee Trevino, 73-146, and Arnold Palmer, 73-147, failed to make the cut for the final two rounds.

Nelson, who had opened with a spectacular 63, had a 2-shot lead when play began Saturday after a one-hour delay because of frozen greens.

"I knew what I had to do when I started off," he said. "I figured no one else would be better than 8 under par and whatever I shot, the number under par I was today, that would be my lead.

"Unfortunately, 1-under was the best I could do. It was just not a very good round of golf.

"I really don't know how well I'm playing, whether I'm playing well enough to win. I won't know until tomorrow.

"I'm kind of expecting the scores to bunch up. I'd like to be far enough in front going to the last few holes that it doesn't matter.

"But I don't think that's gonna happen. I'm looking forward to a grinding weekend.

"I just hope I can stay in it, stay close enough to be in the golf tournament going into the last round."

Nelson, winner of two titles last season, opened with birdies on his first two holes, then had to work hard to keep it going.

He matched two more birdies with as many bogeys, had a 2-shot lead going to the final hole, then surrendered half his advantage with a 3-putt bogey.

Mancini keeps boxing crown

The 135-pound Mancini, rated fourth by the World Boxing Association, kept his 132-pound opponent on the run. Valdez, a native of the Dominican Republic who recently moved to New York, frequently tied up Mancini throughout the fight.

In the eighth and ninth rounds, Mancini and Valdez, 16-10-1, traded punches toe-to-toe before a national television audience at the Sands Hotel and Casino.

Mancini regained momentum in the 10th round after knocking out Valdez's mouthpiece. Seconds later, Mancini ended the fight by stinging his opponent with a right hook as Valdez spun around to avoid him. Valdez got up before the count but he appeared dazed and could not raise his gloves.

"I hit him with a tremendous hook," Mancini said. "But I didn't know it shook him till I saw him move back. I got a little overanxious but I saw an opening with a right hand and I hit him as he was turning away."

Promoter Bob Arum of Top Rank Inc. said after the fight that Mancini would get a title shot sometime in April against the winner of the Jan. 30 fight between WBA lightweight champion Arturo Frias and No. 1 challenger Ernesto Espana.

Best and Worst

Wandering down Super Bowl's memory lane

By LEONARD SHAPIRO
(c) 1982 The Washington Post

Once there was a little girl and a toy. It was called Super Ball.

Her father had a toy, too. It was called the Kansas City Chiefs, and when they needed a game between the champions of the American Football League and the National Football League, Lamar Hunt turned Super Ball into Super Bowl, just as big brother Bunker once turned the silver futures market into his own toy. But that's another story.

In case you haven't noticed, it's time for the Super Bowl's Sweet XVI, and the NFL has basically rented out Detroit for the celebration. CBS will televise the game Sunday.

The first 15 games have produced all manners of memorable moments, including these personal favorites:

Wackiest play: Super Bowl VII, Redskin Mike Bass' 49-yard interception return of a pass thrown by Miami kicker Garo Yepremian. "I've got to work with Garo," Dolphin quaterback Bob Griese said. "His throwing technique isn't what it should be."

Best prediction by a player: Super Bowl III, Jet quarterback Joe Namath. "The Jets will win on Sunday, I guarantee it." Final score, Jets 16, Baltimore 7.

Worst prediction by a player: Super Bowl III, Colts defensive end Lou Michaels to Namath before the game: "You're gonna find it tough throwing out of a well." Namath's final statistics: 17 of 28 passes for 206 yards and no interceptions.

BEST SUPER Bowl party: Super Bowl X in Miami. The league rented out Hialeah Racetrack for the night. Drinks were dispensed from parimutual windows, and the NFL union chief Ed Garvey, waiting in the buffet line, was served a subpeona to testify in a league-related trial.

Best curfew violation: Super Bowl XV in New Orleans last year, Oakland Raiders defensive lineman John Matuszak. He showed up for the Thursday press conference begging the TV guys to turn off their lights. "You're killin my eyes," he pleaded, giving new meaningto his personal credo, "You'll get bruised when you cruise with the Tooz."

DUMBEST pregame statement: Super Bowl XII, Cowboy linebacker Thomas Henderson. "Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw is so dumb he couldn't spell cat if you spotted him the c and the a," said Henderson. Final score: Pittsburgh35, Dallas 31, with Bradshaw completing 17 of 30 passes for 318 yards and four touchdowns.

Worst performance by a coach: Super Bowl VII, George Allen — all week. Complaining about distractions, charting the sun in Los Angeles Coliseum, very nearly causing a mutiny on his team by fining injured Jim Snowden for breaking curfew.

Best performance by an owner. Super Bowl IX, Art Rooney of the Steelers. All week long he regaled members of the press with tales of his great days at the racetrack, his years of frustration over losing. When his team prevailed, 16-6 over the Vikings, he cried and told his team, "I'm grateful to you."

Worst performance by an owner: Super Bowl VIII. Miami's Joe Robbie said he would pay for the players wives to fly to Houston, but no mothers, sisters or girlfriends of single players.

Worst practice facilities: Super Bowl VIII, Minnesota's practice field at Houston's Delmar School. They dressed in a locker room without a single locker but featuring 15 showerheads, only three with running water and two housing nesting sparrows.

BEST COMEBACK: Super Bowl X, Lynn Swann of the Steelers. Two weeks earlier he had been knocked unconscious and hospitalized with a concussion suffered during the AFC title game against the Raiders. In the Super Bowl, he caught four passes for 161 yards and a touchdown, was named MVP in Pittsburgh's 21-17 victory over Dallas.

Worst post-game performance by a network announcer: Super Bowl VI, Tom Brookshier trying to interview Dallas Gowboy running back Duane Thomas. "Are you happy, Duane?" Brookshier wondered. Said Thomas, who had not spoken to reporters all season, "Never said I was mad."

Another 'dynasty' coming up today

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

Get ready. If it's a close game today, both will be included and if one wins decisively, it alone will be credited with launching a new "dynasty" in pro football.

That's dynasty like in Atlanta Falcons, Louisville's Cardinals, Cincinnati Reds and Houston Rockets, not to be confused with dynasty as in New York Yankees, Montreal Canadiens, UCLA Bruins, Boston Celtics, Joe Louis or Green Bay Packers.

ANY TEAM that wins or comes close today, will promptly be labeled the next living dynasty. Not that the San Francisco 49ers or Cincinnati Bengals couldn't be the next dynasty, but these things don't happen overnight, although sportswriters and casters like to think they do.

Remember last year the Philadelphia Eagles and Atlanta Falcons, not to mention the San Diego Chargers, were the wave of the future.

BEFORE THAT Denver's loss to Dallas in the 1978 Super Bowl was interpreted as just a temporary setback on the way to a long reign of terror in the NFL's AFC.

Remember when Hank Stram's Kansas City Chiefs beat the Minnesota Vikings and the Chiefs' verstatile, imaginative attack was hailed as the coming offense that would revolutionize the game?

IN THE 1960's, the St. Louis Cardinals won a couple of baseball pennants in a row and it was a "dynasty." Same with the Cincinnati Reds in the 1970s. Maybe it's a sign of the inflationary times in which we live.

The nearest thing resembling a baseball "dynasty" in the 1970s was the Oakland A's.

The Philadelphia Flyers' hoodlum dynasty was short-lived. They won a couple and then along came the Russians to revolutionize the thinking in hockey.

THE PHILADELPHIA 76ers always seem to be on the verge of dynasties, from the days of Wilt Chamberlain to the current Dr. J, but there's always someone in the way. They have as much trouble winning the big ones as the Eagles.

Now, the old Yankees were what you would call a legitimate dynasty. From 1921 to 1964 there were 29 pennants and 20 world championships.

The NHL Canadiens and NBA Celtics of later years were almost as dominant for shorter periods of time and although UCLA can't even win its conference any more, the Bruins' domination of college basketball was so complete for so many years, that opponents still regard the Westwood wizards with awe and respect and a little fear.

IN THIS era when the NFL is striving for parity, it's not easy to build anything lasting. And even this year's Cinderella winner, may be next season's pumpkin when it is faced with a tougher schedule, the reward for all winners.

So many teams on the verge of blossoming faded into the night. New England, Tampa Bay, the rejuvenated Chicago Bears, the Rams, Houston all seemed only a year away, but...

However, we have every confidence that San Francisco's 49ers will launch a dynasty today. It may be the best of Super Bowl games, which isn't necessarily that great a feat, but Joe Montana, a long as Dwight Clark stays healthy, gives the 49ers the edge, say 31-28.

Walsh plucked 49ers future from '79 draft

In 1978, the 49ers had staggered through a 2-14 season. They did so again in 1979, Walsh's first year. For one thing, Walsh had little in the way of youth to work with. The previous regime had dealt away baskets of draft choices in trades such as the one that brought temporary box-office star (but by then ineffective runner) O.J. Simpson to town.

But also in 1979, Walsh had his own draft to work with. And among the gems he picked up were a Notre Dame quarterback named Joe Montana in the third round and a Clemson wide receiver named Dwight Clark seven rounds later.

What he had done with Anderson, Fouts and a few other pro and college quarterbacks along the way, he did with Montana. He nurtured him along and made him a winner, passing champion of the National Conference.

When Clark made his soaring end-zone catch to beat Dallas in the NFC title game two weeks ago, it was the end result of Walsh's passing-game philosophy that somehow, somewhere, someone is open downfield.

BUT THAT was only half the story of the 49ers' turnaround from 2-14 to 6-10 and then to 13-3 and the winningest team in the league. In 1979 and 1980 the 49ers had thrown and caught the ball more than any team in the history of the league, had rolled up an inordinate amount of yards and points and yet had lost 24 of 32 games. There was the small matter of a defense, too.

In the 1981 draft, Walsh went straight for the jugular, the 49ers' dismal secondary. No way was he going to dabble in a little bit of this, a touch of that, a patchwork solution.

First round: cornerback Ronnie Lott. Second round: cornerback Eric Wright. Third round: safety Carlton Williamson. He made them instant starters in a backfield where Dwight Hicks was a veteran of just three years.

At the start of the season, they played occasional games of Alphonse and Gaston, of "who's my man?" By year's end, the triumvirate of rookies and the rest of the defense, strengthened by the canny decision to whisk pass-rushing defensive end Fred Dean away from San Diego, had balanced the team's ability to strike with or without the ball.

This is a game of imponderables. Even the stars — Anderson, Montana, Pete Johnson, Freddie Solomon, Isaac Curtis, Dwight Clark and the rest — are all but anonymous beyond the Ohio River and San Francisco Bay.

There are no Pittsburgh Steelers and Terry Bradshaws with a history of Super Bowl heroics. No Minnesota Vikings and Fran Tarkentons with a history of Super Bowl failures. No John Matuszaks and Oakland Raiders with a history of bizarre behavior.

No history, period. Not in the building. Not even in the city. But they valiantly tried to instill this event with instant history.

DOWNTOWN Pontiac was designated for Super Bowl week "Bourbon Street North," a pitch to draw the tourists who, in five of the previous 15 Super Bowl games, snaked their way through the streets of New Orleans.

The tourists spent their money, more than enough to defray the money spent to dress up Detroit and its suburbs.

On Sunday, two teams will play a football game.

On Monday, Super Bowl XVI will be history. The NFL will, for this season, close down the road show and quietly leave town. It will leave behind $60 million ... and the most economically depressed city in the most economically depressed state in the nation.

Thornton joins A&M

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Charles J. Thornton will join the Texas A&M's sports staff, athletic director Jackie Sherrill announced Saturday.

Thornton, who has been assistant athletic director at Alabama for 18 years, will be associate athletic director for all sports except football, Sherrill said.

Hokies stun Louisville

Schneider's heroics were set up when Louisville's Scooter McCray stepped out of bounds with 48 seconds left in the game. The Hokies methodically worked the ball around the perimeter until Schneider got open for the winning basket.

The victory lifted Virginia Tech's record to 12-3 overall and 3-2 in the conference. The Cardinals slipped to 11-5 and 4-2.

Schneider's performance overshadowed that of Smith and Lancaster Gordon. Smith finished with 29 points and Gordon 25, both season highs for the two Cardinals.

Hastings' shot nips Cougars at wire

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas center Scott Hastings swished an 18-footer with six seconds remaining as the 15th-ranked Razorbacks rallied to beat Houston in a 67-66 Southwest Conference victory Saturday.

The 19th-ranked Cougars led by as much as 11 points midway through the second half but only scored four points in the final seven minutes. They had a one-point lead when Keith Peterson knocked the ball away from Michael Young with 33 seconds remaining. The Razorbacks worked the clock until the six-foot-10 Hastings hit the winning bucket. Rob Williams, who was instrumental in Houston's 17-2 spurt early in the second half, missed from half court as time expired.

Arkansas, now 13-2 and 4-2 in the SWC, has beaten Houston seven straight in Fayetteville. Houston is 11-4 and 2-3 in the league.

A jump hook by Williams, who had 24 points, put Houston on top 62-52 with 7:10 left in the game. Seven-foot Akeem Olajuwon blocked two straight shots but picked up his fourth foul in the melee and Darrell Walker made both free throws to cut the lead to eight. Houston spread out its offense and Lynden Rose picked up a charging foul that Hastings converted into two points.

Hastings made an eight-footer that made it 63-58 with less than six minutes left. Houston spread out again and Larry Micheaux threw the ball away. Walker drove the baseline to cut the lead to two and Young turned the ball over to set up another baseline basket by Walker that tied it at 62 with 2:08 left.

Baskets by Williams and Young, wrapped around a free throw by Hastings, made it 66-63 with 1:11 left. Ricky Norton, who entered the game when Walker fouled out, made a 17-footer with 57 seconds left. Seconds later, Young was stripped of the ball.

The lead changed hands 13 times in the first half before Arkansas took over 26-25 on a rebound basket by Peterson with 8:23 remaining. The Razorbacks stretched the lead to eight on a couple of occasions but six free throws in the final 2½ minutes cut it 41-37 at the half.

Houston made 11 field goals in the first half but the Cougars, who entered the game as the poorest free throw shooting team in the league, stayed close with 15 out of 17 from the line.

Hastings led Arkansas with 22 points. Walker had 18 points.

Sports Banquet boasts 6 Indy firsts

Indy 500 alumni meeting

The Midland Sports Banquet is beginning to look like an alumni gathering for Indianapolis 500 winners. Winners of six Indys will be on hand for the Feb. 9 fete at Green Tree Country Club.

Johnny Rutherford will join Al Unser at the celebrity table...and between them they have won six 500s, three apiece.

Both will be driving for Midland based teams this year, hopefully, Memorial Day when the "Gentlemen start your engines" instruction goes out.

Rutherford became the sixth driver to win a third Indy in 1980 on his way to being named America's driver of the year by the AARWBA and prestigious Olsonite panel. The 150-writer City of Hope panel also named him auto racing's "man of the year" and the Fort Worth Advertising Club presented him with the Dateline Award as Fort Worth's most newsworthy citizen in 1980.

Rutherford, now 43, began racing in 1959 at Dallas' Devils Bowl, driving a car he built himself. Five years later he started his first Indy and won his first Indy in 1974, surviving to serious crashes in earlier years. In 1964, he survived the Dave MacDonald-Eddie Sachs accident in the first lap. In 1968, Johnny and Jim McElreath were involved in an Indy crash.

He also walked away from a 1966 flip in an Eldora, Ohio, sprint car race in April 1966, a mishap that broke both his arms and sidelined him from racing for a year. In 1968 he suffered severe hand burns in a crash at Phoenix.

A series of minor irritations spoiled the 1981 season. For example, he was driving Jim Hall's ground-hugging Chaparral to its third win in the last four Indys when a $4.53 belt drive broke and spoiled his bid for a fourth title. Rutherford was leading at the time.

Debris on the track cut a tire in the Norton Michigan 500 while he was leading, Jerry Karl put him out of the California 500K at Riverside and he spun on the final lap of the Michigan Champion 400 NASCAR and wound up 13th.

Johnny Rutherford

While relaxation might be a round of golf or a line in a quiet pool somewhere for most, Rutherford relaxes by piloting his restored P-51 Mustang or on one of his five motorcycles in off-road sojourns.

Rutherford joins Unser, San Diego manager Dick Williams, Houston Astro catcher Alan Ashby and Master of Ceremonies Bobby Bragan for the Sports Banquet. Tickets are on sale at the Midland Cubs office.

Cummings lifts DePaul over UBA, 79-68

CHICAGO (AP) — Terry Cummings was tired, but it didn't keep him from turning in a brilliant performance Saturday in leading fourth-ranked DePaul to a 79-68 victory over Alabama-Birmingham in a nationally televised college basketball game.

"I did as much as I could," said Cummings, who scored 24 points and grabbed 19 rebounds. "I was tired. I got to bed early last night but tossed all night long. I felt a little fatigued when the game started."

WEST TEXAS OUTDOORS

ROD N. REELE

Texas fresh water anglers outperformed their saltwater counterparts in setting Texas records last year. According to the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department, six saltwater records were set, but none in any of the popular species.

They included the Warsaw grouper, mojarra, pinfish, thresher shark, southern stingray and skipjack tuna.

The four new freshwater records were more impressive. John Alexander of Richardson caught back-to-back state record large-mouth bass at Lake Echo, near Athens, one weighing 15 pounds eight ounces.

The state walleye record was broken by Ray Thrailkill, Amarillo, with an 11-pound, 5 3/4 ouncer off the dock at Lake Meredith.

THE AVERAGE weight of mature bucks taken during public hunts on the Chaparral Wildlife Management area near Artesia Wells showed an increase of 25 pounds per deer over those taken last year.

The two heaviest taken weighed 165 pounds each, one a seven and the other a nine-pointer....

An injunction prohibiting the international export of bobcat pelts taken after Jul 1, 1981 from Texas and other states will continue indifinitely. TPWD officials said bobcat taking and tagging season will close Feb. 15. The export ban is expected to put a damper on bobcat pelt prices...

Tar Heels belt Georgia Tech

ATLANTA (AP) — Top-ranked North Carolina, getting overpowering inside play from James Worthy and Sam Perkins, whipped Georgia Tech 66-54 in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game Saturday night.

Worthy scored 24 points and Perkins added 18 as the Tarheels rebounded from their only setback of the season, a 55-48 home-court loss to Wake Forest Thursday night.

The victory lifted North Carolina to 14-1 record overall and 5-1 in the conference. It was the Tarheels' 14th consecutive decision over Tech.

KENNY REDIN'S

Fin & Feather

Wow, if 1981 wasn't a wild year for outdoor sportsmen!

Waterfowl provided the major stories during an eventful 1981 for wildlife activities throughout the state of Texas. And believe me, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department had its share of challenges.

A late-summer pesticide scare, a courtroom challenge to the nontoxic shot rule and establishment of a new state waterfowl stamp combined to keep ducks and geese in the news during the year.

Fortunately, the discovery of residues of the pesticide Endrin in waterfowl and other wildlife species in Montana during the summer proved to have little if any effect on Texas' waterfowl hunting seasons.

Laboratory analysis of 201 ducks collected to date from across the state revealed no detectable amounts of Endrin. After a review of date, Texas and other Central Flyway states proceeded with the waterfowl hunting season without change.

Pesticide use is just one threat to waterfowl. Another, lead poisoning, also made the outdoor news during 1981.

THE TEXAS Parks and Wildlife Department established a nontoxic shot zone for the 1981-82 seasons made up of all or portions of six Southeast Texas counties. The possession or use of lead-loaded shotgun shells for waterfowl hunting is illegal within the zone.

The zone is inended to reduce the incidence of lead poisoning in waterfowl, which pick up and inest spent lead shot pellets.

A suit against the department sought to halt enforcement of the nontoxic shot rule. The petitioners claimed in part that the nontoxic shot zone discriminated against hunters in that area, since waterfowlers in other parts of the state still could use lead loads. A state distrcit court in Austin ruled in favor of the department and the steel shot law was enforced.

Waterfowl hunters had a special opportunity to assist their beloved resource for the first time this fall with establishment of the first state waterfowl stamp. The $5 stamps are required of all waterfowl hunters, in addition to a valid hunting license if required. Federal law also requires huners to have a $7.50 federal waterfowl stamp.

BY MID-SEASON, more than 100,000 state stamps had been sold, and the total was expected to surpass the 140,000 mark by season's end. Revenues from stamp sales will be used for waterfowl management and research as well as acquisition, lease or development ofhabitat.

There were a number of other noteworthy activities by the department's Wildlife Division during the year. These included:

During 1981, a record total of 16,000 ring-necked pheasants were stocked in 21 counties. These included new areas within Calhoun, Guadalupe and Williamson Counties. Also, pheasants were released for the first time in Comanche, Hamilton, Hudspeth and McLennan Counties.

A spring turkey season was held in 72 counties, the largest number of counties ever to have a spring turkey season. The total will increase to 127 counties in 1982.

BIOLOGISTS brought 92 pronghorn antelope from Colorado and stocked them in King, Shackelford and Foard Counties in West Texas. In exchange, the department sent 50 Rio Grande turkeys and a shipment of catfish and crappie to Colorado.

A total of 23 eastern turkeys from Oklahoma were stocked in Red River county, and eight from Mississippi were stocked in Newton County.

Two new wildlife management areas were opened featuring public hunting. They are Granger W.M.A. on the shores of new Graner Lake, Williamson County and Choke Canyon W.M.A. which will be on the shores of Choke Canyon Reservoir when impounded. It is located near Three Rivers in McMullen and Live Oak Counties.

An outstanding hunting season was enjoyed by the state's hunters. Favorable weather conditions allowed turkey and quail to have an outstanding nesting year.

Thouvenal String Quartet performs Beethoven pieces

On the 159th anniversary of Beethoven's acceptance of a commission to write his late quartets, the Thouvenel String Quartet will perform two of his masterpieces, Op. 95 "Serioso" in F minor and Op. 132 in A minor.

The concert will be presented at 8 p.m. Monday in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium at Midland College. Admission at the door for those who have not bought a season membership is $4 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens.

The quartet Op. 132 is considered by music lovers as well as critics to be one of the most sublime musical works. The famous slow movement, "Heiliger Dankgesang" or "Song of Thanksgiving," was composed by Beethoven following his recovery fromm a serious illness.

The Thouvenel String Quartet — composed of violinists Gene Purdue and Teresa Fream, violist Sally Chisholm and cellist Jeff Levenson — recently received the honor of being invited to perform four concerts in Vienna, Austria this summer and to record for a well-known European recording company while there.

Other concerts the quartet will be performing include the Baltimore Chamber Music Society Series, an engagement in El Paso and one at Abilene Christian College. The quartet will also present two major concerts in New York this April with guest artist Gilbert Kalish and two members of the Juilliard Quartet, Joel Krosnick and Samuel Rhodes.

Locally, the quartet will perform at various churches this spring.

'M-A-S-H' doctors may be returning from war

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After 10 years of fighting idiocy, authority and somebody else's war, are the surgeons from "M-A-S-H" about to go home? Is the Korean War finally over?

Several of the cast members, including the star and creative consultant, Alan Alda, say they believe the popular CBS comedy about the consequences of war has run its course. They want this to be the last season for "M-A-S-H." They want to go out on top, and do it in style with a long-form TV movie.

"I don't want people saying, 'I remember when "M-A-S-H" was much better,'" said Loretta Swit, who plays Maj. Margaret Houlihan. Ms. Swit, Alda (Hawkeye Pierce) and Mike Farrell (B.J. Hunnicutt) favor striking the "M-A-S-H" set for good for quality reasons. Their careers also have branched out into the movie world.

David Ogden Stiers (Maj. Winchester) said he wants to leave the show because he's unhappy that the writers have been robbing his character's dignity. "In one episode, they had me running naked through the compound," he said.

Three other actors in the series — Jamie Farr (Cpl. Klinger), Harry Morgan (Col. Potter) and Bill Christopher (Father Mulcahy) — all said they want to continue with the show for another season.

And CBS and 20th Century-Fox, which owns the show, desperately want to keep "M-A-S-H" in business. Hit shows are hard to come by, and "M-A-S-H," the season's fourth highest-rated program, is a big money-maker for the network.

CBS and Fox currently are negotiating with Alda for another season, and as Alda goes, so probably will the show.

"My hunch is that 'M-A-S-H' will be back with Alan and the rest of the cast," said Donald Grant, president of CBS Entertainment. "I hope so, as does the American public. I think the quality of 'M-A-S-H' is as good as it's ever been."

Grant said he doesn't think the resistance of the actors is a contract ploy. All their contracts expire March 28, and the decision whether to go another season would have to be made before then.

INSTALLMENT SALES NOW SIMPLER

Installment sales of real estate are often used when the seller has a large capital gain and wants to spread out the tax over more than one year. But its tax structuring was complicated. Now, Congress has passed the 1980 Installment Sales Revision Act which has made the installment Sales much simpler in order to qualify.

Prior toi the new Act, the seller could receive no more than 30% of the selling price in the year of the sale. This restriction has been eliminated. Now, the seller can receive as much or as little as he wants. Under the old law, there hade to be two or more payments spread over two or more years. This requirement has been dropped and the seller can opt for as many or as few years of payments as he desires. Also, prior to the change, an installment sale had to be "elected." Now, an installment sale is an installment sale automatically.

Many of the changes are retroactive, so if you lost deductions for prior installment sales, see your accountant.

Ex-hostage never felt like hero; turned to alcohol

TUSTIN, Calif. (AP) — Marine Sgt. John C. McKeel, one of the U.S. hostages held in Iran, says he never felt like a hero and he turned to alcohol, apparently trying to forget guilt as well as memories of captivity.

"I knew I wasn't no hero, but everybody was acting like we were, and I knew it was nothing compared to what guys had gone through in Vietnam in a real war," McKeel said in an interview published Saturday in the Register of Orange County.

"I guess I tried to forget my feelings about that and Iran and a lot of things, and began drinking more than I should. I felt a little guilty about all that fuss that was made over me, I guess."

McKeel, 28, and 51 other hostages were released from 444 days of captivity in Iran on Jan. 20, 1981.

"I got to forget those blindfolds and being up against a wall with someone put there in front of me playing with a shotgun or a Uzi machine gun," he said.

When McKeel, of the Dallas suburb of Balch Springs, realized he was drinking excessively he checked into Long Beach Naval Hospital for eight weeks before reporting to the El Toro Marine Base here.

LONDON (AP) — A plane piloted by Prince Philip, husband of Queen Elizabeth II, was flying 600 feet too low when it crossed the path of a British Airways jumbo jet last November, it was reported Saturday.

Radio and newspaper reports said an inquiry by Britain's Civil Aviation Authority cleared the prince of any blame because a Royal Air Force pilot on board was in overall command of the aircraft.

The reports said incident occurred Nov. 27 as a Miami-bound Boeing 747 with 200 passengers on board climbed from London's Heathrow Airport. Philip, at the controls of a twin-engined turboprop plane, was approaching Gatwick, London's other major airport, on a flight from Manchester.

A British Airways spokesman said the pilot of the Boeing filed a near-miss report after seeing a "black silhouette" in front of him. Radio and newspaper reports said the two planes were "only seconds" from colliding before the Boeing was ordered to change course.

Eileen Paisley told about 3,000 people at Bob Jones University on Friday that she and three other Northern Irish Protestants are touring the United States to collect a debt.

"If Ulster's timely and enormously effective contribution to the life and the very identity of modern America is not as fully appreciated in America as it ought to be, it is not forgotten in Ulster (Northern Ireland) that America owes a debt to the Ulster people."

Mrs. Paisley told a news conference that her group was touring the United States to "help end the campaign of genocide" being waged by the Catholic IRA.

Paisley, leader of the Ulster Democratic Unionist Party, could not join the tour because the State Department refused to renew his visa.

National Young Artists Competition staged at MC

Eighty-five talented young musicians will be competing Friday and Saturday at Midland College in the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale's 20th annual National Young Artist Competition. The competition alternates yearly between Midland and Odessa.

Judges for this year's competition are Dr. Lara Hoggard, music director and conductor of the Midland-Odessa Symphony when the competition began in 1962; concert pianist Lili Kraus, currently artist in residence at Texas Christian University; violinist Dr. Milton Katims, artistic director at the University of Houston School of Music; oboist Dr. A. Clyde Roller, who recently finished a term as guest conductor of the symphony and chamber orchestra at the University of Wisconsin at Madison; and baritone William Walker of the Metropolitan Opera, currently professor of music at TCU and associate artist at Lamar University at Beaumont.

This competition began when Hoggard was the symphony's director. He envisioned a competition which would allow talented young musicians, both high school and college age, to compete for recognition and financial rewards. It was through his efforts then and those of the Midland and Odessa symphony guilds through the years that the competition has become one of the largest events of its kind in the U.S.

Both college and secondary school divisions include piano, strings and wind instruments, with a voice category in the college division. Registered students in secondary schools, colleges, universities, conservatories and institutes of music are eligible for the competition, provided they have not reached their 26th birthday prior to Jan. 29, 1982. Persons who have already launched a professional career are not eligible.

This year's prize money is $8,000, contributed by Mr. and Mrs. W.D. Noel of Odessa, Mrs. Raiford H. Burton, Mrs. Andrew A. Bradford, Mr. and Mrs. Donald A. Ross and Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Anson, all of Midland. This year, for the first time, a performing winners transportation fund has been provided by Mr. and Mrs. Earle M. Craig Jr. This fund allows the NYAC to pay the traveling expenses of the four performing winners when they return for their March performance with the Midland-Odessa Symphony.

Administrative expenses are provided by the Beal Foundation, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bruno of Midland and Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Jones of Odessa. Mr. and Mrs. Jerome M. Fullinwider of Midland are benefactors of the Lara Hoggard Performance Medallion given to the performing winners.

The schedule for preliminary auditions on Friday is 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., college piano in the fine arts auditorium; 8:30 a.m. to noon, college winds in Band Room 126; and 1:30 to 3 p.m., college strings in Band Room 126.

Saturday's schedule includes 8:30 to 10:30 a.m., secondary piano in the fine arts auditorium; 9 to 10 a.m., secondary strings in Band Room 126; 11 a.m. to noon, secondary winds in Band Room 126; 1 to 4:30 p.m., college voice in the fine arts auditorium.

Preliminary auditions Friday and Saturday and the finals on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the fine arts auditorium are open to the public at no charge.

Official hostess for this year's event is Mrs. John J. Redfern III, current president of the Midland Symphony Guild. A special advisory committee composed of several past NYAC chairmen includes Mrs. LaDoyce Lambert, Mrs. Charles Jones, both of Odessa, Mrs. James Stimmel and Mrs. Howard Parker, both of Midland.

In charge of registration and advance preparations is Mrs. Fullinwider, NYAC general chairman. She is assisted by Mrs. William U. Sumner, co-chairman, who will serve as chairman in 1984 when the competition returns to Midland.

Both are aided by a large committee which is further subdivided. Members of that committee who serve as chairmen include Mrs. Horace Griffin and Mrs. W.W. LaForce Jr., registration; Mrs. Charles Tighe and Mrs. Anson, practice piano schedule; Mrs. Henry Tillett and Mrs. Manton Jones, presiding officials; Mrs. Frank Vitrano, mailing; Mrs. Billy F. Elgin and Mrs. William Barnes, refreshments; Mrs. Edward Gemmill, physical arrangements; Mrs. John Ochsner, housing; Bettie Gay Burton, judges; Mrs. Bruno, judges' entertainment; Mrs. Parker, accompanists; Anson, house manager; Mrs. Durward Goolsby, transportation; Mrs. James Woodcock, ushers and attendants; Sam Woodward, publicity; and Mrs. Roger Freidline, secretarial.

The five-day symposium will involve student/faculty discussions and performances of works representative of the 20th Century. During the symposium, Texas Tech faculty and students will perform their own contemporary music.

Visiting composers and performers will assist with the study of new trends in music during the symposium.

All events are free and open to the public. For more information call the music department at 1-806-742-2294.

Guitarist gives free concert

ODESSA — Guitarist Ron Hudson will present a free concert of classical and contemporary music at 8 p.m. Feb. 9 in the Globe Theatre here.

Hudson also is scheduled to present a free guitar techniques workshop for the public at 3 p.m. the same day in the Fine Arts Auditorium at Odessa College.

Hudson, who plays a variety of music from classical Spanish pieces to works by Paul Simon and Mason Williams, will perform "Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 3," which he spent four years transcribing for the guitar.

Texas Opera Theater presents five-day opera workshop

A five-day opera workshop is being presented Feb. 3-8 by Texas Opera Theatre through the sponsorship of Midland College and the Midland Opera Advisory Committee.

The workshop is a prelude to a March 30th "Rigoletto" performance by Texas Opera Theatre at Midland Community Theatre. The opera will be sung in English.

Eight sessions designed to assist those interested in opera as a career and those seeking more information about this art form are a part of the workshop. Included will be presentations of "Starbird," "Is it Broadway or is it Opera?" and "Shakespeare Sings."

The workshop carries one-hour credit from MC. Persons interested may register for the workshop now or on Feb. 3. Cost of the workshop will be $44.50 which includes tickets to all workshop performances plus "Rigoletto."

Sessions will be held in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. The first one will be on auditioning and career awareness on Feb. 3 from 1 to 3 p.m. This workshop will cover how to audition for roles in opera, plus information about the careers that are available as musicians, cast and chorus members, make-up artists, set designers, costumers and in decoration.

From 1 to 3 p.m. Feb. 4 will be a session on critiques and another on music theater games from 7 to 9 p.m.

Feb. 5 the Texas Opera Theatre will present opera previews from 1 to 3 p.m. with a performance of "Starbird" from 7 to 9 p.m.

A workshop session from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday will be held for a presentation of "Is it Broadway or is it Opera?"

Feb. 8 the workshop's 1 to 3 p.m. session will be a make-up demonstration. During the 7 to 9 p.m. session will be a presentation of "Shakespeare Sings."

By the end of its 1981-82 tour, Texas Opera Theatre will have appeared in 31 states and the District of Columbia, playing to more than 650,000 persons.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Monday, January 25, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: World-renown newsman Edwin Newman and Dean Jones, the star of many Disney movies, celebrate this birthday with you. In the months ahead, you will have good luck when establishing new businesses or partnerships. Choose your confidants with care. Certain friends are less discreet than you think. Studies that have held your interest in the past can now be pursued to your financial advantage. Let mate, romantic partner in on your plans! A personal relationship is likely to move in a different direction as the result of a change that occurs later this year. Know what you want and where you are headed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A liar never believes anyone else, so save your breath if dealing with one. A pay raise is possible in early February. Scholarship or educational grant may also be available. Apply now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Charm will win you the object of your affections. Social connections lead to business success. Your leadership qualities make you eligible for a golden employment opportunity. Sign contracts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A reconciliation is possible in romance. A second honeymoon could do wonders for a marriage. Join social and professional groups. You have good luck if participating in competitions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your abilities receive attention. Use them judiciously. Humor, versatility help avert embarrassing situations. Give a "glad-hander" a wide berth. Money could be at stake—your own!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Expand your horizons, but avoid scattering your forces. A promotion is in the spotlight. Your image awareness could lead you to start a new diet. Mate applauds your efforts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A close associate figures prominently in your professional or personal plans. Streamline work methods and techniques. You could learn another person's secret just in time!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Say what you mean. Express your ideas clearly. Diplomacy will help extricate you from a ticklish situation. A "backstage" meeting is exciting but fleeting. Do not read too much into it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Loved one may pressure you. Compromise is your best solution. Reach beyond your current expectations. You win a new ally in a business situation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You feel stronger and more confident now. Show that you can handle new responsibilities even if they are not part of your job. Lead with your best shot if you are challenged.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have the ability to be a leader. Keep a close eye on finances. You should be coming out of a period where you have had very little control over your fortunes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Delegate less important chores to others so that you can tackle a major project. Romance could be interfering with your concentration. Put work first!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not be held back by someone who is selfish. Reconciliations in love are possible. You are in the right place at the right time. Family member has your best interests in mind.

Eye surgery is booming business for Peking doctor

EDITOR'S NOTE — Beauty may be only skin deep, but that's the beauty the Chinese appear to be pursuing today. Proof is in the success of a cosmetic surgeon in Peking who is performing operations previously considered bourgeois Western decadence.

By LIU HEUNG SHING
Associated Press Writer

PEKING (AP) — Curious comings and goings are reported at No. 65 Soochow sidestreet. Young men and women tiptoe in with a bandage on one eye and tiptoe out smiling with a bandage on the other.

Dr. Fu is the only private plastic surgeon in Peking who performs "eye jobs" — cosmetic surgery to create folded or "double" eyelids, considered a mark of wide-eyed beauty. He operates on one eye at a time so the patient can still bicycle home. The operation takes about an hour.

Most northern Chinese are born without double eyelids and Fu takes a few stitches to remove the epicanthal fold in the upper eyelid that is typical of Asians.

"The eyes are the windows of the soul and I am not afraid anymore to admit I want to look more beautiful," says Jia Xiaogu, a bus conductor proudly batting her double eyelids. Her operation was so successful that she took two of her girlfriends to have their eyes widened.

"All my neighbors say my eyes look larger and I am prettier now," she says with a giggle. "And my boyfriend also approves."

Cosmetic surgery once was prohibited and condemned as bourgeois Western decadence. Today, however, the simple operations are increasingly popular and are part of a renaissance of vanity and self-expression in once dreary, uniform China.

In a recent 10-month period, Fu performed more than 150 double eyelid operations, costing the equivalent of $18 each.

His clientele includes factory workers, actors, actresses, sons and daughters of high party, government and army officials, and some bureaucrats themselves.

Fu, 58, a graduate of Sichuan Medical College, lives and works in a single 6-by-14-foot room with his wife-assistant who wears a long, black traditional Chinese dress.

He works under new regulations that permit private medical practice and private enterprise, once banned as capitalist.

Fu paid about $1.20 for a 10-year license from the city health department. He earns the equivalent of $200 a month, tax free, a salary matched only by the highest Communist officials.

He shows his new patients an album of before-and-after pictures of satisfied patients, many good looking but born with the single eyelid and narrower eyes.

He also displays a glossy color photograph of actress Sophia Loren with large, seductive eyes.

"But I generally don't recommend those European-American eyelids for Oriental faces," Fu says. He recommends a simple double eyelid which enlarges the eye with a few stitches.

A few patients, especially party and government cadres, also want the esthetically pleasing double eyelids. But they want their eyes narrowed to appear more mysterious or inconspicuous.

Eye surgery is part of the rush to beauty in China today. Plastic surgeons also perform nose surgery, pierce ears and create dimples.

Fashionable, form-fitting clothing is back after years of disguise in shapeless, proletarian clothes. Brassiere sales soar.

"Health and Beauty" magazine sold over 1.1 million copies in one issue and is deluged by letters from women who want double eyelids and larger breasts, says editor Xian Nong Zhang.

"Only by studying hard and doing suitable exercises can young females be ensured of a healthy and beautiful breast development," readers were told.

Admonitions aside, the beauty business is booming for Fu.

Fu performed cosmetic surgery for years — until he was denounced during the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution. He and his wife sold their possessions, clothing, even his pocket watch to buy food.

Now he has all the business he can handle. "People come to me because I do a better job than public hospitals which charge about $60 for double eyelids," he says.

Fu says young people complain they can't find dates because they don't have beautiful eyes. Matchmaking services say some clients demand double eyelids in their marriage partners.

Machinist Huang Zhoc Jian, 28, says he was turned down by 10 women before he had double eyelids. Now he is happily married. To show his appreciation, he brings Fu presents of fruit and fresh eggs.

Yan Wen Hua, 24, makes about $30 a month working in a paper box factory and spent almost $20 for Double eyelids.

"For that money I can be beautiful for the rest ofmy life," he says. "It's a bargain because everyone loves to be beautiful."

PRODUCTION SYSTEMS NODAL℠ ANALYSIS

A ONE-WEEK COURSE
February 8 thru 12
Holiday Inn (Odessa)

This course is designed for Engineers, Managers and Field Foremen associated with Production Systems and Artificial Lift Planning.

Kermit E. Brown, Ph.D.

Each participant will receive Dr. Brown's three new books:

- Technology of Artificial Lift Methods, Vol. 1, inflow performance, multiphase flow in pipes, the flowing well.
- Technology of Artificial Lift Methods, Vol. II, beam pumping, gas lift, electrical pumping, hydraulic piston pumping, jet lift, plunger lift, other methods of lift and comparison of methods (2 books).
- Vol. III, 2200 pages of new gradient curves including vertical multiphase flow, horizontal multiphase flow, gas production and gas injection curves. (Scale 20,000 ft. by 5600 psi.) (2 books.)

This course will show you how you can SAVE MONEY and INCREASE PRODUCTION by:

- Changing the separator pressure
- Changing the flow line size
- Changing tubing size
- Increasing perforation shot density
- Placing well on Artificial Lift
- Applying Nodal Systems Analysis to entire system
- Knowing how to predict flow capacity of oil and gas wells

QUESTIONS TO BE ANSWERED IN THIS COURSE

- Production rates possible — oil or gas?
- Tubing size correct?
- Flowline size correct?
- Enough perforations?
- Completion problems — gravel pack or other restrictions?
- Safety valve sized and set correctly?
- Is surface choke necessary and is it sized correctly?
- Should be on Artificial Lift?

The above questions will be answered in detail by:

- Showing methods for predicting the flow rates possible from oil and gas wells.
- Showing how to use gradient curves and computerized multiphase flow correlations to select tubing sizes for vertical or directional wells.
- Presenting a complete systems analysis to show the effect of perforation shot density. A standard shot density of 4 to 8 shots per foot may not be sufficient.
- Applying the Nodal Systems principle to check the effect of restrictions such as gravel pack
- Applying the Nodal Systems approach to see if the safety valve is sized correctly and check to see if it will close correctly.
- Applying the Nodal Systems approach to correctly size a choke for a certain flow rate and to see if the choke should be eliminated.
- Applying systems analysis to see what effect the separator pressure has on the entire system. A correct setting of the separator pressure, in particular for a closed rotative gas lift system, may show a tremendous rate of return on investment.
- Working example problems to show: (a) the rate possible by natural flow, (b) the rate possible by artificial lift.

WE WILL SHOW YOU:

- How a change in separator pressure will save money with no loss in production.
- How a change in flowline size or separator pressure may prevent buying additional compressor H.P. for gas lift.
- How increasing the perforation shot density may double the production on gas wells.
- Why the tubing size may be too small or possibly too large.
- How to predict the flow capacity of oil and gas wells.
- Other production problems.

COURSE OUTLINE

Ability of oil or gas wells to produce fluids
Oil Wells
1. Predicting present-day inflow curves Constant PI case, Changing PI case, Vogel's solution, Standing's solution — for flow efficiencies - 1.0, Fetkovich flow after flow and isochronal tests, flow equations and making use of pressure build-up and fall-off tests to prepare inflow curves.
2. Predicting future inflow curves, Standing procedure, Fetkovich procedure, others.

Gas Wells
1. flow after flow tests
2. Isochronal tests
3. Modified Isochronal tests
4. Pressure build-up and fall-off

Multiphase flow in pipes
Vertical, horizontal, directional and inclined flow.
1. Best correlations
2. How to use gradient curves and computer applications
3. Effect of rates, pipe sizes, GLR's, fluid properties, etc.
4. Practical problems on correct selection of pipe size, find flow rates, wellhead pressures, GLR's, etc.

The flowing or Artificial Lift well
Applying systems approach to:
1. Size tubing and flowlines
2. Correctly predict rates
3. Analyze wells

Evaluation of completion
Sufficient perforations or not?
1. Prediction of flow rate through reservoir with no restrictions
2. Determining DeltaP occuring across perforations, gravel pack or other restrictions.

Nodal systems analysis
An over-view of the entire flowing or artificial lift system to evaluate:
1. Separator pressure
2. Flowline
3. Surface choke
4. Tubing string
5. Safety valve
6. Any other tubing restrictions
7. Completion efficiency, (a) perforations, (b) gravel pack, (c) skin

Summary for planning
This new course will tell you:
1. Sufficient perforations
2. Pipe sizes correct or not
3. Flow rates possible — now and future
4. When Artificial Lift is needed

This course makes use of new technology applied to everyday practice in the field.

Is It Worth It? Our Nurses Think So.

To tell a nurse that nursing is hard work is a waste of time. They know it because they do it. Yet it is the kind of hard work that carries with it its own kind of rewards and satisfaction. It's the kind of hard work that makes our nurses proud of their profession, and being a part of a medical facility that understands. But for all the hard work and satisfaction there must always be compensation in other areas.
Medical Center Hospital recognizes that financial and personal rewards must be involved, as well as professional, for a nurse to be fully satisfied. We have progressive facilities and the thinking to go with it. Come by and talk with us or give us a call...

'Hope for the journey of life'

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

The problem of coping with divorce, re-marriage and the multitude of interpersonal relationships it brings was explored in depth at the 32nd annual School of Christian Living held recently in Midland Center under sponsorship of Midland Association of Churches.

The theme of this year's school was "hope for the journey of life," and additional seminars taught by experts in their fields explored "desert prayer" and the difficulties faced by ever-increasing numbers of elderly Americans.

DIVORCE

The seminar on the changing structure of the family was led by Mary Lee Loving, 46, a psychotherapist and director of the mental health division of MHMR in Amarillo.

"In our culture today, 'mother' is the most powerful member of the family," she noted. "But, if the divorce rate is to be (reduced), we've got to have more 'father' and less of 'mother'. It is in observing the mother and father together that children learn what life is to be about."

The effect of a divorce on a family, she said, is immense. "Probably the two greatest traumas that happen in the life of a family are the death of a child, because it's not expected, and a divorce," she told a small group of persons who had braved icy streets to attend. "I see (the father getting involved with the children) improving, and I hope it continues in the next two generations and it will have an impact on the divorce rate."

But divorce and its associated feelings of rejection and loss, she noted, has become a blunt reality in the lives of many men, women and children and therefore must be addressed. One of the most emotion-wrenching decisions, she said, involves the determination of which parent will bear the responsibility of raising the children.

"I find judges are more willing for fathers to have custody or have co-custody" than a few years ago, said the mother of five who herself suffered through a divorce before re-marrying her husband. "I don't recommend that when the child becomes school age, because the child needs that continuity. But certainly each of the parents should have an opportunity to spend as much time with their child as possible."

STEP-PARENTING

In an age of ever-accelerating divorce rates, the number of single parents also is on the rise, said Mrs. Loving. "In figures gathered in 1979, there were six million single parent families with children under 18," she explained.

And, she added, re-marriage often brings step-parents into an already unstable situation for children. "It is estimated that by 1985, 60 percent of school children in the public school system may have more than one set of parents," she said. "A child thus may have four parents and multiples of grandparents."

Step-parents, she explained, have five tasks with which they must cope:

—Mourning their loss. "The step-family is a family born of loss," said Mrs. Loving, "and that's almost one strike against it."

—Dealing with the fact that the step-family has no traditions.

These burdens place added pressures on a second marriage involving step-children, she noted, and the initial months of adjustment are the most important. "The first two years in a second marriage are the most critical," she said. "If you make it through the first 18 months or two years, maybe you'll hang in there."

STEP-FAMILIES

The step-family as a unit also must deal with the loss of previous family members as well as prior history, but added burdens are present as well, explained the psychological associate.

"If we were giving a prescription for how to have a good marriage, (it would be recommended that) you have a strong bond between the husband and wife before they have children," she noted. "If the couple does not have to struggle together in some manner, there is no real bond there. But (in a step-family situation) the parent-child relationship pre-dates the adult relationship."

A step-family also must learn to deal with biological parents of step-children and the accompanying pressures it exerts on the youngsters. "They do adjust, the marvelous little creatures they are," noted Mrs. Loving, "but it is a strain."

It is generally recommended, she said, that a step-family undertake certain tasks in order to accomplish adjustment as a unit successfully, including:

—Acquiring its own home rather than living in one rich in history from either of the prior marriages.

—Allowing the two adults to establish a bond between themselves.

—Engaging in family activities that involve different sub-groups.

—Avoiding critical remarks regardng biological parents.

—Maintaining courteous relationships with ex-spouses.

—Developing its own traditions.

"There seems to be one emotion involved in most divorces — and that's anger — that must be resolved before the step-family can be put together," explained Mrs. Lovng.

However, she stressed the importance of preventive medicine for marriage: the need for prospective spouses to be aware of the responsibilities of such a commitment. "We've got to have more education about what marriage is all about before we get to that stage (divorce)," she said.

FAMILIES AND THE AGED

Mrs. Loving also discussed the problems associated with the elderly in a society where better health care and medications have resulted in multitudes of older Americans. "We have not always had as many as we have, and we have not had as many cultural problems" associated with them as well, she noted.

She classified older Americans into three age groups:

—Menopausal, ages 38-55. "We are seeing the female menopause extended in age...as a result of the fact we're becoming a nutrition-wise, diet-wise people," she said.

—Aging, ages 55-72. "When you ask people, what age are you making plans for?, this is the age they're talking about," said Mrs. Loving.

—Aged, ages 73-92. "This group's (increasing in size)," she said. "What we have is people in the menopausal category who have parents in the aging category who have parents in the aged category."

Mrs. Loving, a grandmother herself, noted that persons in the aging category often exhibit a number of mental health problems, including anger, isolation ("These people are saying, 'we're sitting out here with these problems and no one's doing anything about it"), sense of loss and vitality, fear, and worthlessness. "Some of the saddest women I've ever seen were widows at 65 who felt their lives were over, and their lives as they'd known them were over," she recalled.

It is the church's responsibility, she said, to respond to these problems as well as to oversee an aging population's general well-being. "We used to be worried only about child abuse," she explained. "Now we're worried about elderly abuse."

PRAYER

"Be not afraid,
I go before you always.
Come follow me and I will give you rest.

"If you pass through raging waters in the sea you shall not drown.
If you walk through the living flames
you shall not be harmed.
And blessed are your poor,
for the Kingdom shall be theirs."

The music stopped; the people prayed aloud. When a reverent "amen" signifies the close of the prayer, Sister Blostic of Maranatha House of Prayer in Demarest, N.J., spoke quietly.

"We can hear about prayer, and talk about prayer, but (what we need to do) is take time to sit down and pray," said the holder of a masters degree in theology from Oblate School of Theology. "One of the ways that we dispose ourselves for prayer is by relaxing. This means a straight spine, feet flat on the floor, legs not crossed so we're not hampered by poor circulation...and hands upturned."

Sister Blostic discussed "desert prayer" and the benefits stemming from its associated solitude. Having spent 13 months in a desert house of prayer 70 miles southwest of Corpus Christi 8 years ago, she gained insight, she said, into the desert prayers of the Israelites in their 40 years of wilderness wandering.

"During this time God really cared for the Israelites," she said, "but (it was) also a time of suffering and trial. It was a road of suffering, and (in my own experience) I really understood how they lost heart at times."

Sister Blostic said that in the Christian's desert experience, the question for which each must find his own answer is "do we really believe He is with us? If so, then we will commit ourselves...to have this deep communion with Him in prayer."

She explained that desert prayer is symbolic of the "life-death-resurrection pattern than we all go through," and that she recommends Christians to to commit themselves to certain periods of solitude and prayer each day. "You may first find great resistance...to sitting down to pray," she said. "But there is a pattern: if there is the greatest resistance, if we persevere there is the greatest grace for us."

Sister Blostic noted another probing question which Christians should ask themselves about their prayer life — "is our motivation sincere, or is it misguided? ... We need to come with an expectant attitude but not with specific expectations in this kind of (prayer)...With receptivity we can allow the hand of God as it comes to us to evoke our true response...and allow the healing aspects of nature to take over so we can appreciate a sunrise or a sunset."

Sister Blostic, who is associated with the Fanciscan Missionary Sisters, said the end result of desert prayer is "union with God."

Deadline nears for entering Uptown B&PW YCW competition

Only two days remain before the deadline for entering the Young Career Woman contest passes.

The most talented, successful young business women under the age of 30 in Midland are being sought by the Uptown Chapter of Business & Professional Women's Club for competition in the Young Career Woman contest. Final date to enter is Tuesday.

The Young Career Woman program (YCW) is an annual event and is open to all women between the ages of 21 and 30 years. It is part of B&PW's national program to recognize successful young women throughout the country.

The candidate must be a veteran of her career field for at least one year prior to selection. Various YCW candidates at local, state and national levels have listed such career fields as sales, public relations, banking, education, management, engineering, geology, medical, legal and administration.

Winner of the Midland YCW award will compete on the district level. Diserict winners will vie for the state title later this year.

Activities for the candidates prior to the competition include attending the Uptown B&PW luncheon on Jan. 27 and a luncheon on Jan. 28 in the Executive Dining Room of The First National Bank.

Competition will be held at 7 p.m. Feb. 11 during a dinner in Green Tree Country Club.

During the evening each candidate will deliver a three-minute prepared speech on a topic of her choice. A round-table discussion among the candidates will follow. Candidates will be judged on their resumes and transcripts in addition to personal interviews with three judges who have been selected from the business community.

Judging will be three persons selected from the business community. The public is invited to the event and should make reservations.

Information about the contest and applications may be obtained by telephoning Marion Kimberly, 694-0231 or 694-5141.

Clean up those evergreen shrubs

By TOM STEVENSON
(c) 1982, The Washington Post

Q: The foliage of several of my evergreen shrubs is covered with soot and grime. I've tried washing it off with the hose without success. Is there a way to clean them up?

A: Penn State specialists recommend dissolving 2 1-2 pounds of meta-phosphate crystals in a gallon of water; dissolve and stir a bar of pure soap into the gallon of saturated solution; put this gallon in 25 to 50 gallons of water: spray this solution on the foliage, and keep the foliage moist for about one-half hour; then thoroughly rinse with water from the hose. Smaller proportions can be made if the larger quantity is not needed.

Q: My mother has a beautiful red dogwood in her front yard. Can I take cuttings from it and start one for myself?

A: Cuttings of pink or red dogwoods can be rooted under intermittent mist in about 30 days when taken in early summer after the second flush of growth has occurred. To survive the first winte,r the potted cuttings must be kept at a temperature between 32 and 45 degrees in a heated cold frame or cool greenhouse.

Q: I've tried several times to transplant a small pine from the woods to my yard without success. Can it be done?

A: Even small pines growing in the woods usually have long, straggly root systems, and it is almost impossible to dig them without leaving most of the roots behind. If you must take one from the wood, try taking two or three that are only 2 or 3 inches in height.

Q: When should a pear tree be pruned? The tree is 10 years old and a good bearer of fruit.

A: The best time is early spring before it breaks dormancy. Only very light pruning should be done, because succulent new growth is very susceptible to fire blight, a serious disease of pear trees.

Q: My lawn used to be Kentucky bluegrass and bentgrass, but now it is almost all bentgrass. Must I start all over, or should I keep the bentgrass?

A: Bentgrass can provide a good lawn, but it requires a lot of maintenance. If you are willing to provide the necessary care, keep the bentgrass; otherwise make a change.

Q: After most snow storms, my small trees are bent to the ground. What can I do to help them?

A: If the snow does not come off with light brushing, prop up the branches instead of taking a chance of breaking them off by strong shaking. The limbs become very brittle as the temperature falls, and they may snap off.

A: They will grow nicely but won't bloom unless they get very good light and humidity is at least 40 percent.

Q: We have a great big oak tree in our yard. Is there a way to tell how old it is?

A: The age of the tree can be determined by counting its growth rings. To count the rings, take a cylindrical sample of wood with a hollow auger called an increment borer. Each ring represents one year of age.

Q: I have two Bartlett pear trees, one 6 and the other 10 years old. Both are loaded with blossoms each spring and bear no pears. How come?

A: Pollination is the problem. Bartlett pears usually bear little or no fruit unless cross-pollinated with another variety, such as Duchess d'Angouleme.

Solder spool becomes iron rack

By AL CARRELL

There are still lots of folks who prefer the old-time soldering iron to the more modern soldering gun. Those who do know the problem that sometimes arises when you put the hot iron down for a moment. The hot tip touches something, and you have either a char or a fire. That's why there are so many creative holders for soldering irons. D.I.S. came up with with a good one. He maintains that anyone who solders very much will end up with empty metal spools made for the wire solder. By merely bending out the end flanges so the spool can't roll, you have a holder that won't burn or roll. Since the spool is lightweight metal and hollow, it won't absorb much heat. And since it's a throw-away item, the price is certainly right.

Dear Al: When the autumn leaves got up to knee deep, I had to do something. I came up with an improved way to pick them up. I used two dust pans, one for each hand, and by facing them toward each other, I scooped up the leaves faster and easier. It cure helped me. — Mrs. C.E.H.

...and me too, Mrs. H.

Dear Al: You recently ran a hint on how to patch a hole in a wall by providing backing for the patching compound by cutting out the wedge the same size as the hole from a piece of foam insulation. By tapering the piece so it would fit tight when wedged into the hole, it would stay. This gave me an idea. I used a large cork, which was already tapered, to act as backing for a hole. I trimmed the cork so it could be forced into the hole. Then I pushed it until it was slightly below the surface. With it firmly wedged in the hole, I could then cover over it with spackling paste, and the patch was done. — W.L.Y.

A SUPER HINT — This is one of those "I don't know if it works but it's worth a try" type hints. A lady told me about having a family of raccoons move into their attic. She couldn't get up the nerve to kill them, but they were driving her batty with their nighttime parties. Her husband came up the this idea. He put the stereo speakers up in the attic and aimed them toward where the 'coons apparently were nesting. He then put a Halloween record with all sorts of weird ghostly sound effects including baying hounds on and turned it up full blasts. The lady was posted outside and said that the 'coons didn't just run out, they almost flew. With interlopers gone, they patched up the entry hole, and the 'coons didn't come back for a while. They did come back twice since then, but each time the stereo did the trick.

Dear Al: Saw your cable television demo on short posts to protect the sprinkler heads along your circular driveway. My way is better. I cut rings from large plastic drain pipe and set these into the ground surrounding the pop-up sprinkler head. The ring sticks up above the head so that if the car leaves the driveway and runs over it, the sprinkler head isn't touched. It's better landscaping than the posts. — F.A.M.

SHOP TALK — Congratulations to General Electric for coming out with do-it-yourself repair manuals for five of their GE Hotpoint major appliances. There is a separate manual for ranges, dishwashers, clothes washers, dryers, and for refrigerator-freezer units. Ask about these where you'd buy GE replacement parts for any of these appliances. I hope other appliance makers will wise up.

Browsers beware! Abe is on the prowl

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Browsers get a chilly stare of disapproval from newspaper dealer Abe Sherman, a Baltimore institution who doesn't hesitate to eject customers for mishandling his stock.

"I don't kick anybody out, you just invite them out," says the 82-year-old newsdealer, explaining his customer relations policy. "They have to make the first crack ... then I chew right into them.

The crusty veteran of two world wars sold newspapers to F. Scott Fitzgerald, H.L. Mencken, Babe Ruth and scores of prominent Maryland politicians from the newsstand he ran for more than 50 years on the city's courthouse square.

"Oh yeah, he was a drunk," Sherman says when asked about Fitzgerald, who lived in Baltimore during part of his writing career. "It's been said he wrote the most perfect English, but he was a souse."

Newspaper columnist Garry Wills characterized Sherman as "bilious" in a piece written not long after he was invited to leave the downtown bookstore Sherman has run since he closed the outdoor newsstand in 1971.

"I ran him out of here, just something he did," Sherman recalls. "I got a shot at him and he got his shot at me."

One regular patron, requesting anonymity to avoid incurring the newsdealer's wrath, remembers Sherman's tart reply to a customer who called him a jerk.

"Of course I'm a jerk, I was a jerk to let you in here in the first place," Sherman reportedly told the insulting customer before showing him the door.

Sherman says he has fired a tear-gas gun on several occasions to ward off would-be robbers. "In here it's like Russian roulette, you never know what going to pop up," he says.

A decorated veteran of World War I who earned the nickname "Stripeless Sergeant" for his refusal to wear the insignia of his rank, Sherman earned World War II battle stars after enlisting at the age of 44.

"I was a champion draft dodger. In the first World War, they drafted them between 21 and 31 so I went in at 19. The second World War came along, I didn't wait for no draft, I just enlisted.

"I hated the Nazis for what was going on," says Sherman, who took down the license-plate numbers of customers who purchased Nazi literature at his newstand.

"I was selling Hitler's stuff on full display. When guys went by they spat on me, but I didn't care. But what they didn't know was I was taking the license numbers of the cars of guys who were buying this stuff."

Sherman claims the information he turned over to federal agents led to the arrest of German spies.

"This was a great spot for sabotage," he says of the Baltimore area.

Sherman once tackled a man who escaped from the courthouse after he had been sentenced to a year in jail. "I just dove for his legs and nailed him. He just hit the deck. Then the police came."

Accepting premenstrual tension as murder defense

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Christine English, a mother of two boys, stepped hard on the accelerator of her car and drove straight at her lover, pinning him to a telephone pole and killing him.

Sandie Smith, a barmaid on probation for stabbing a woman to death in a brawl, walked into a police station with a 4-inch knife and threatened to kill a sergeant because she said he had insulted her.

Both women claimed premenstrual tension provoked them to violence. Both were tried, convicted and then set free.

The two cases made legal history when they went through the British courts late last year.

Premenstrual tension, or PMT, a long-recognized medical condition that afflicts millions of women in varying degrees, had been used to explain relatively minor crimes such as shoplifting — but never as a defense for murder.

Now doctors and lawyers are debating just how far the rulings have opened, or should open, the courts to women hoping to escape punishment because of stress caused by the start of their natural monthly periods.

Dr. Gerald Swyer, an expert in gynecological medicine and a prosecution witness in the Smith trial, said he believes the way is clear for a barrage of frivolous court cases.

"It is a very disturbing situation," he said in an interview. "Any woman can plead PMT and literally get away with murder.

"I don't think anything is going to set back women's causes more than this thing," Swyer said. "To let women think they become criminal once a month as a result of their physiology is to really debase the status of women. This is to say women are criminal by nature."

However, Dr. Katharina Dalton, a gynecologist who appeared as a defense witness in both cases, said medical tests can easily verify whether a woman actually suffers from PMT and "only a few" women are driven to violence by it.

PMT occurs during the first four days before and the four days after the onset of menstruation. Symptoms include depression, lethargy, irritability, breast swelling and emotional and mental problems. When a woman's period is over, the symptoms disappear.

Mrs. Dalton, who has studied the disorder for the past 30 years and treats sufferers at her Harley Street clinic, said in an interview that an estimated one million women in Britain alone have a form of PMT severe enough to require treatment.

It is among these women, she said, that you find the "once-a-month suicide attempt and baby-batterers."

Mrs. English and Miss Smith both pleaded innocent of murder but guilty of the lesser charge of manslaughter due to diminished reponsibility brought on by PMT.

Under British law, murder carries a mandatory sentence of life imprisonment, but manslaughter convictions leave sentencing to the judge's discretion.

Identical pleas aside, the cases of Mrs. English and Miss Smith contrast starkly.

Mrs. English, a 37-year-old divorcee, had no previous criminal record and no history of uncontrolled violence, before her arrest for running down her lover, Barry Kitson, with her car on Dec. 16, 1980, in Colchester, 52 miles northeast of London.

She and Kitson had quarreled over another woman, but she testified she never meant to kill him, just to frighten him.

After her trial, she told reporters, "I knew my period was due but I didn't connect it with what happened ... But I now know I am one of those women who have a bad reaction."

The 29-year-old Miss Smith, on the other hand, "became z raging animal each month" without treatment for PMT with the hormone drug, progesterone, said her lawyer, Keith Evans.

When she was arrested last year for threatening to kill a policeman, she already had some 30 previous convictions, including the manslaughter of another barmaid, theft, arson, assault, writing threatening letters and throwing bricks into windows.

Psychiatric reports said she had attempted suicide "dozens of times."

In May 1980, London Judge James Miskin convicted Miss Smith of manslaughter for killing the barmaid a year earlier and placed her on three years' probation after being told in court that progesterone kept her "sane and benign."

But last April, following a lowering in her progesterone dosage, she showed up at a London police station, saying she intended to kill a sergeant who insulted her three years earlier, according to court records.

She was charged with three offenses involving intent to kill and carrying an offensive weapon.

Miss Smith was convicted Nov. 9 in London's Old Bailey Court, and Mrs. English was convicted one day later in Norwich Crown Court.

Miss Smith was placed on another three years' probation. Mrs. English was banned from driving for one year and given a one-year conditr that period of time or risk serious legal consequences.

Writing in The Lancet, a British medical journal, lawyer Diana Brahams said that society's interest would not have been served by sentencing either woman to prison.

"The only fear is that the barriers against killing are being eroded and that human life is valued more cheaply in terms of prison sentences, than, say, tax evasion or fraud," she wrote.

"Should a person with severe and chronic migraine be included as suffering from abnormality of mind? Or toothache? Or back trouble?"

Brightest not always best as managers

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — The brightest is not always the best, at least when it comes to managerial ability, according to an industrial psychologist and management specialist.

Roger Gill, director of management programs in the School of Management, State University of New York at Binghamton, believes "masterminds" do not necessarily make the best managers because they tend to spend too much time "intellectualizing" instead of making decisions.

Gill says research has shown that, as a rule, the best managers come from the middle ability range.

"The brightest people usually don't gain as much from management training courses as students of average intelligence," says Gill, a native of Great Britain and consultant to the National Productivity Board of Singapore.

"The skills important in decision-making are more related to personality and aptitude than to intellectual ability," he says. "There must, however, be a minimum level of intelligence — the manager should certainly not be a dunce, even though many employees may suspect their supervisor fits into that category."

Gill says there is an optimum level of intelligence that gains most from management training.

"Above that," he says, "the benefits diminish because the very bright student usually begins a philosophical consideration of the problem rather than concentrating on a practical solution."

Employers, he says, may be missing the best candidates by putting too much emphasis on intelligence when they select applicants for management-training positions.

"By looking for the brightest they are denying opportunities to the average intellect, the very person who benefits from management training, and who develops into the best manager," Gill says.

Gloria Vanderbilt says anybody can make a collage

By ELLEN APPEL
Copley News Service

Anybody can make a collage. Every time a woman jumps up to rearrange objects on a table, she's applying the principles of collage, according to Gloria Vanderbilt.

"It may seem like puttering to her husband," she remarks, "but to those who know, she's really making a tabletop collage."

In the "Gloria Vanderbilt Book of Collage," recently published in a paper edition y Van Nostrand Reinhold, Vanderbilt shares her collages, thoughts and techniques with the reader. She feels the medium of collage is well-suited to most everyone, and notes that Picasso, Braque, and nearly every child in elementary school has worked in collage.

According to Vanderbilt, artist Jean Cocteau's most successful portrait was a collage. When he attempted to draw Isadora Duncan, he abandoned his pen and began to cut shapes from paper. One of the discarded snippings looked so much like the famous dancer that he did a collage instead.

By definition, collage is an art form in which papers, pictures and objects are pasted onto a flat surface. Nearly anything can be pasted onto a collage, including soap wrappers, magazine illustrations, decoupage cutouts, photographs, gift papers, ribbons, lace doilies, pressed flowers, fabrics, aluminium foil, and greeting cards. The possibilities are unlimited, and a reason collage is so popular.

"Once I tuned into the extr!ordinary world of collage, all sorts of commonplace objects began to assume new meanings ..." comments Vanderbilt. "A bottle cap was not only a cover for soda, it was something that might be used in a picture."

In her own collages, Vanderbilt uses an abundance of lace, gingham fabrics, gift papers, photographs, and decoupage cut-outs. Her materials often suggest her subjects, which range from child-lik6d6⅛⅛76n¼7nH:o ornate Elizabethan figures.

"It was inevitable, once I started making elaborately ornamental figures, that I would find the subject of Elizabethan court ladies and gentlemen exciting," she states. "Portraits of the period show us costumes that are themselves fantasies of lace, embroidery, brocades, passementerie, gold and jewels, and these suited me perfectly.

Beginners need not be elaborate, however. In her book, Gloria Vanderbilt recommends the simple first project described below, and offers valuable suggestions for future projects.

She suggests, for example, using one object in each collage that you really love. "...Your affection for it will probably influence the shape the picture ultimately takes," says Vanderbilt.

She also recommends keeping a file of materials, separated into groups of pictures, postcards, box tops, photographs and other elements. In this manner, everything will be ready and at hand when you are ready to construct each new collage.

You can keep adding new elements until you are satisfied with your collage. It is your feelings that tell you when your picture is completed," comments Vanderbilt. "No painting has a real finish that can be defined before the painter reaches it. If it's successful, it simply stops at a good place."

Materials: Cardboard; scissors; utility knife; rubber cement or other glue; old newspapers; shiny black gift-wrapping; aluminum foil; white paper.

Directions: 1. Cover work surface with newspapers. 2. Using t⅛6d⅝:ility knife, cut black paper to fit cardboard. 3. Paste paper to board. 4. Cut a simple vase from aluminum foil; a simple flower, from white paper. 5. Arrange flower and vase on paper-covered board. Paste in place. 6. Cut a black circle for center of flower. Paste to flower.

Antique or junque

Dear Mr. McCollam: This figurine is marked "Real Vienna Bronze, Austria." Can you tell me anything about when it was made and what it is worth? — N.C.R., New London, Conn.

Dear N.C.R.: This was made in the early 20th century and in bronze-plated white metal. They were made in large numbers and sold all over the world.

The value would be in the $100 to $150 range.

The figurines that are valuable will be signed by such sculptors as Moreau, Bayre, Clodion, Mene, Preiss, Chiparus, etc. They will be solid bronze and sometimes also carry the mark of the founder.

Dear Mr. McCollam: When I acquired this chair, it was falling apart and the seat was almost split in two. I repaired, refinished and reupholstered it.

I would like to know when it was made and what it would sell for now. R.J.K., San Diego, Calif.

Dear R.J.K.: Office chairs like this were made in the first quarter of the 20th century. It would sell for from $100 to $300, depending on market area.

People who have oak rolltop desks are eager to find chairs like this. You did an excellent job of restoration.

Five women who wouldn't strike

By RANDY FITZGERALD
(Special from Reader's Digest)

Deanna Ussery didn't hear the pickup truck stop in front of her Hot Springs, Ark. home one April evening. Shotgun blasts baroomed in the darkness. A bedroom window blew apart, and shot peppered the bed where her 8-year-old daughter usually slept — by a stroke of fortune, the girl was away overnight. The gunmen sped away.

Deanna's nightmare began a month earlier after she and five other women had crossed a United Steelworkers Union picket line at the plant of National Rejectors, Inc., which manufactures currency-changing machines. In 1976, Union president Frankie Joe Russell threatened a company vice president. Fired, Russell continued to boss the union from his home.

When the local's contract expired in Jan. 1978, Russell demanded a strike to force his reinstatement, with full back wages, and to satisfy other grievances. Only three of the company's 350 employees defied the strike call: Sally Boyd, a grandmother who had refused to join the union and who supported a disabled husband; Dana Milligrock, whose young son was about to undergo surgery; and another employee who had a small child to support. (Not long after, she quit her job after being frightened by union threats.)

As the strike entered its eighth week, discontent surfaced among the union membership — the strike was bleeding their finances. Ramona Drobena, pregnant and separated from her husband; Sharon Gentry, divorced with two young sons; and Deanna Ussery, with seven children and a jobless husband, resigned from the union and returned to work.

Three nights later, on a dark country road, Sally Boyd noticed a truck following her. She drove to the top of a hill but a pickup truck blocked the road. She swerved into a ditch — and escaped.

Faced with financial losses, National Rejectors gave in to union demands and reinstated Russell with full back pay. The union had won. "We'll get those scabs!" Russell had boasted.

When union workers returned, a group of them screamed obscenities at Ramona and Sharon. Oil and grease were smudged on Sharon and Dana's chairs. Obscene signs appeared over their work stations. Thirty or more women walked past Sharon and Ramona shouting, "We'll get you. We know where your children are!" Ramona couldn't sleep. In view of her pregnancy, her doctor wrote her a medical leave of absence, and she never worked another full day at National Rejectors. Sally Boyd quit to be with her now critically ill husband.

Efforts to portray the remaining three women as a threat to the union bore bitter fruit. One day after work, they were confronted by scores of union members brandishing tire tools.

Police dispersed the crowd and escorted the terrified women from the parking lot.

Deanna and Sharon took medical leaves of absence. Only Dana Milligrock returned to work the next day. When her shift ended, she discovered her car windows had been broken, tires slashed and "scab" painted in yellow across the blue hood.

Then came the shotgun attack on Deanna Ussery's home. One after another, the five women resigned from National Rejectors. It appeared that the terror tactics against them had succeeded.

But the five fought back. The National Right to Work Legal Defense Foundation agreed to file a lawsuit charging the union had forced the women from their jobs.

The suit came to trial in Hot Springs in May 1980. It ended with the jury awarding damages of $250,000 plus interest, to be divided equally among the five women. The union's appeal was dismissed by the Arkansas Supreme Court. The experience of Ramona Drobena and her colleagues is not unique. This kind of violence is occurring at an alarming rate:

Elizabethton, Tenn. — Striking steelworkers went on a rampage in 1979, unleashing a series of bombings, shootings and acts of arson against non-striking workers at the Jarl Extrusions Company.

Forsyth County, Ga. — Arsonists set fire to the home of Doris Glover, who luckily was sleeping in an adjacent trailer. But the house was burned to the ground. Glover had defied a union strike order at a Frito-Lay plant.

Thousand Oaks, Calif. — A Teamsters Union gang stormed the warehouse of Redman Moving Co., damaging 12 of its 14 trucks. Other union members followed a Redman truck all the way back to Connecticut, where they reduced the cab to a burned-out hulk. This, because the owner of Redman had complained that the Teamsters were coercing his employees.

As these and other eruptions of violence have demonstrated, many state and local officials cannot, or will not, ensure worker safety during labor disturbances. Local authorities more often than not choose to remain uninvolved.

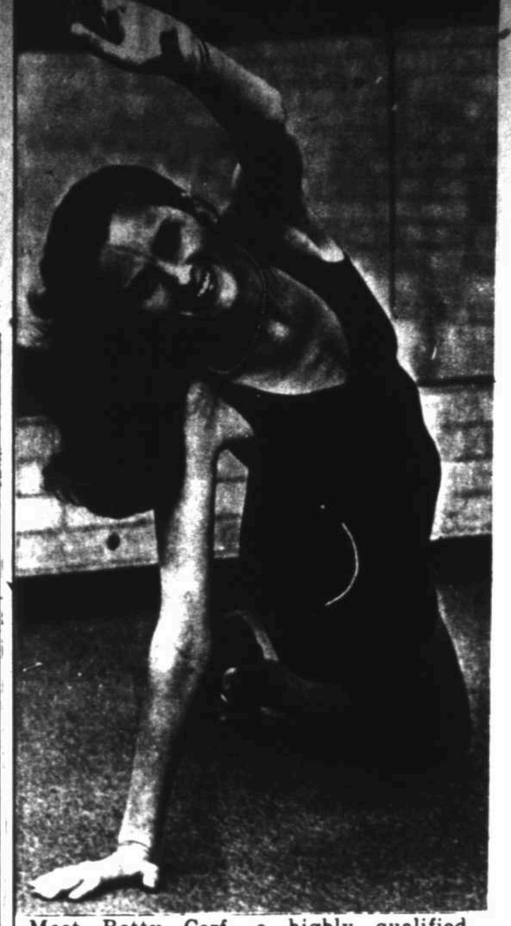

Ferret, rarest mammal, discovered in Wyoming

A black-footed ferret, the rarest of North American mammals, was captured alive in Wyoming recently and outfitted with a tiny radio transmitter so wildlife biologists can learn more about the habits of these secretive nocturnal creatures.

The ferret, a male about 2 years old and weighing a little over 2 pounds, is the only posivivdly known living member of its species, and the first taken alive in the wild since 1973 despite intensive searches. The last black-footed ferret in captivity died in 1978.

Here's how

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service

Q. What can be done to get moisture out of sealed, double-pane window glass? Normally, these are airtight, but one has developed this moisture condition.

I considered using a fine bit to drill the inside pane. Does this seem to be logical, or is there a better way?

Thanks for your help. Your column is a very helpful one. — Lee R.

A. The combination of tightly fitting storm sash and inside windows which are not weather-stripped is a common cause of this problem. Damp house air can leak around edges of the inside panes and be trapped by the outer pane, which causes condensation.

Very often, drilling three or four very small holes in the bottom rail of the outer storm sash cures the problem. In fact, many prefab aluminum storm sash have small sliding louvers in the bottom rail to provide ventilation when needed.

This might well be worth an experiment on one of the windows, the window you are having trouble with. If it works, also try it on the others.

If the storm sash is framed in wood, drill several ¼-inch holes in metal, not the glass.

Should this treatment fail, weather stripping of the windows may be necessary to prevent the moisture problem. You also should try to reduce the moisture content of the air in the interior of the house.

Q. Floor covering in my kitchen is 9x9-inch vinyl tiles. After several years of use, the seams are separating and beginning to buckle in a few places.

Is there any sure and simple way to repair the damage and prevent further buckling or cracking alkong the seams?

The initial cause of the problem was damp mopping without waxing for a few months. That seemed necessary at that time because a member of my family had sufffered a light stroke and found it difficult if not impossible to walk on the waxed surface. Now that the damage is done, I wonder if the floor can be restored satisfactorily and inexpensively. Thank you for your advice. — Mrs. L.B.L., Oroville, Calif.

A. There is really no way you can repair the damaged tile. Lack of wax should not have caused the problem.

If the tile is laid on a wooden floor without proper underlayment, the slight give when walking on the floor will cause the tiles to separate, especially over the years. If flooring is laid on a concrete slab, the trouble could be caused by lack of moistureproof adhesive when the flooring was installed.

Your best solution is to remove the damaged tiles and have a new flooring laid properly. Consult with reliable flooring dealers for their advice.

Q. About your column on a white bathtub treatment — is this treatment successful on colored tubs? Although clean, my tub is streaked white. — Mrs. W.

A. Any method recommended for white tubs can be used on colored tubs.

First try sponging with warm white vinegar. This should remove the white residue if it is caused by hard water.

A solution of oxalic acid may also help.

Questions on building, home maintenance and repair may be sent to Here's How, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

Color photography had a starchy start

In the early 1900s, French inventor Louis Lumiere discovered the first practical color-photography process. He dyed tiny potato-starch granules in three primary colors, covered a glass plate with dyed starch and carbon dust, and coated the whole business with potato emulsion.

The processed plates, called Autochromes, became quite popular. Lumiere's plant was producing about 6,000 9x12-inch plates daily by 1913, each covered with some 75 million starch grains.

Luckily, we can't hear bats' loud cries

Bats emit surprisingly loud sonar calls to locate their prey. The energy carried by a little brown bat's sonar pulse, for example, when measured close to the bat's mouth, is 20 times greater than the sound energy produced by a pneumatic drill measured at a distance of a few yards.

Some other bats are even louder, with sound levels 60 times that of a pneumatic drill. If these sounds weren't emitted at frequencies too high for human ears, the night sky would be filled with a tremendous amount of noise.

Former teacher makes baby dolls

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Mary Bess was a teacher for 19 years. Twelve of those years were spent teaching in Midland.

In 1977 Mary Bess suffered a hearing loss and retired from her teaching career.

"I tried new art (and crafts)...because I missed the classroom and the children so much," she said.

Recently Mrs. Bess has found a way to work in crafts and be around children at the same time. She is making "Real Children Soft Hand Sculpture" dolls. She said, "Each baby is soft like real children are soft...they even have five fingers on each hand."

"I can make a doll in a day," Mrs. Bess said, "but then it takes me an extra day to decide what style hair to make and choose its clothing."

"The art of it comes after you are finished molding it, in deciding what color hair, what kind of hair, what kind of clothes," Mrs. Bess said, "they are all different and have different personalities."

Mrs. Bess said she used a variety of knit fabrics in making her dolls, but she preferred crepe knit. She said thick fabrics tend to make the dolls too fat. "I (also) use a variation of fabrics for hair...I have used fancy fur...rug yarn...even cut up an old wig to use for hair."

"I didn't follow the instructions (totally)," Mrs. Bess said, "I used my imagination...(The dolls) aren't hard to make, it's just using your imagination in how you want them to look...(The doll's features) are formed because of the way you stick the needle in and push...but first use your fingers (to help you decide on how you want the features to look)."

"All my dolls are washable," she said, "I look for the right filling to give it that soft, squeezy touch."

Mrs. Bess said she is working on making dolls representing children all over the world, "because we have different children all over the world."

Mrs. Bess has taught sign language to adults and children in special education. She sings in the deaf choir at First Baptist Church. She said, "I try to take my handicap in and live to the best of my ability (in a hearing world)."

Group piano lessons seen as aid to kids

CHICAGO (AP) — For a youngster who is just starting out at the piano, 10 or 12 hands can be better than two.

Group lessons give youngsters the confidence to tackle piano with the same uninhibited energy they bring to basketball or soccer, according to two prominent music educators. And, as in team sports, being part of a group boosts confidence.

"One of the major advantages of group teaching and playing is that students immediately learn to play something musical," says Marguerite Miller, coordinator of keyboard studies at Wichita State University and an advisor to the National Piano Foundation. "They have the instant enjoyment of success — which spurs them on to new accomplishments."

In a typical beginning class, Ms. Miller explains, each student learns a short, simple melody, while the teacher and other members of the class provide backup accompaniment — usually a jazzy sound made by cymbals, drums, tambourines, or sometimes unconventional instruments such as sticks, pots and pans or jingling keys.

"The total sound gives the students a sense of making music," says Ms. Miller, "and that's very satisfying."

Generally instructors are discovering that theory and musicianship — especially creative activities — can be taught more easily and quickly in groups, notes Dr. E.L. Lancaster, associate professor of music at the University of Oklahoma and education projects coordinator for the National Piano Foundation.

"The new version of group teaching stresses creativity, improvisation and feeling for all types and styles of music — ethnic, rock, folk, ragtime, classic," she says. "The aim is to expose the child to popular as well as serious music, not for the purpose of playing all the styles, but rather simply to recognize and identify the musical elements."

The arrival of new technology — audio-visual equipment, tape recorders, cassettes — in the music studio has helped to fan interest in group teaching, Lancaster says. Some instructors use portable keyboards for classroom activity, planning games and contests around suitcase-size modules, as they're called. Some of these modules, which sell for under $200, have an organ-like touch, but allow the young students to transfer easily to the piano keyboard. As for the students — "They think it's a treat," Lancaster says.

Ms. Miller agrees that the new electronic equipment is a boon to student and teacher alike.

"Recording devices are revolutionizing music education, enhancing teaching and learning," she says. Students in her classroom use the tape recorder, for example, to evaluate their progress and check on the sounds they're making. Or cassettes can be sent home for students who might have missed a class.

An unexpected but pleasant bonus of the group-study movement, says Ms. Miller, is that music is moving from the classroom into the home, where young students inspire their parents to join family sing-alongs and add-on harmony played with improvised instruments found around the house.

Occasionally parents even join in class recitals. Group learning has spawned a number of unusual recital programs, Lancaster reports. Some might have a holiday theme — Valentine's Day or Christmas — and everyone in class then learns a song or composition keyed to the holiday. Or a recital might be built around the music of a single composer.

Giving momentum to the group-teaching trend, adds Ms. Miller, is a wealth of good material available for the piano — published by instructors who have had notable results from their group-teaching experiments. Class practice songs no longer are "hand-me-downs" from another era ("as boring to teachers as to the students"), but rather designed for specific class needs.

"Now we can assess the level of student ability and find materials specifically for the group," she says.

Valentine cards have 'new look'

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Romance has taken a turn to the unconventional in this year's Valentine cards, according to a designer of such greetings for 1982.

"Valentine's Day was once a very traditional holiday, and despite different fads that came and went, the sentimental American usually stuck to hearts and flowers, laces and bows, and colors of mostly reds and pinks," says Hallmark designer Miriam Cuddy. This time around, she reports, the lid is off.

"Valentine motifs and colors have gone wild; about the only rule today's greetings must follow is the trend toward cleaner and more graphic styles. More mauves, lavenders and various shades of blue will make their appearance on many cards."

One reason for the swerve from sticky sentiment, says Ms. Cuddy, is that card buyers for Valentine's Day have the youngest median age of any holiday's purchasers (upper 20s, low 30s) and these card customers are demanding smarter, more sophisticated, and even more daring, designing.

The influx of women into the work force also has had a continuing effect on card tastes, resulting in more tailored and less frilly valentines. "It's getting more and more awkward for a husband to bring home a super-fancy valentine to a wife who provides half the bacon," explains Ms. Cuddy.

"However, there are still plenty of old fashioned, romantic cards available," she adds.

Iowa magazine names 'in' neighborhoods

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Formerly seedy waterfronts, inner-city areas and warehouse districts have made a comeback, and are now "in" residences for "The New Elite," reports Metropolitan Home magazine.

The publication has picked the top 10 city neighborhoods in the nation as new prestige addresses for affluent younger urban dwellers.

The Waterfront in Boston; Dupont Circle in Washington, D.C.; SoHo in New York City; Society Hill in Philadelphia; Santa Monica in Los Angeles; Montrose in Houston; Inman Park in Atlanta; Printing House Row in Chicago; The Marina in San Francisco; and Curtis Park in Denver.

Cleaning up the castle

By ERMA BOMBECK

I haven't read it yet, but I just heard there's a new book coming out, "401 Ways to Get Your Kids to Work at Home," by Bonnie McCullough and Susan Monson.

Offhand, I can only think of two. Perpetual cruelty and their own Swiss bank account.

Most mothers entering the labor market outside the home are naive. They stagger home each evening, holding the mail in their teeth, the cleaning over their arm, a lamb chop defrosting under each armpit, balancing two gallons of frozen milk between their knees, and expect one of the kids to get the door.

Grow up, mothers! Kids don't breathe in and out unless they're paid scale. Their contention is, "Who asked you to work? It's not our fault you're not fulfilled shrinking jeans and fighting stubborn stains."

You're not going to believe this, but I originally went to work in 1965, to buy a Barbie doll a wardrobe to go to the Ohio State football game with Ken in a cardboard car. I year later I couldn't have a doll languishing in dust balls under the bed dressed better than I, so I worked a few more years to buy a few things for myself. The rest is history.

As you can imagine, I tried every trick in the book to get the children to pitch in with household chores. From shouting, I got varicose veins of the neck. Nothing more. I progressed to "Dirty Looks" and "Martyrdom," which also got me nothing.

I thought I was onto something one day when I discovered the TV dial was loose and I could carry it around in my pocket like the distributor of a car. When they performed, they got TV; when they didn't they got withdrawal chills. Then they got smart and went to a neighbor's home.

I tried the reward system. Its failure only served to remind me that I couldn't make enough money in one week to pay someone to do what I'd been doing free for 20 years.

The family was telling me something, but I wasn't listening. I eventually learned to live with their priorities and discovered that beds made by running a clothes hanger over them slept just as well as those made so taut you could bounce a dime off them. Children used less toilet tissue when it wasn't on a spindle. Slice-and-bake cookie mothers also got cards on Mother's Day. The crummy little rug in front of the bathroom sink that rolled up in a ball every time you opened the door was shortening my life.

Moral: If the home is everyone's castle . . . let everyone clean it!

Shnells publish mystery magazine

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
Associated Press Writer

SPARKS, Nev. (AP) — Jack Shnell stood in his kitchen clutching a razor and contemplating murder.

Shnell, a big man with a shock of short, white hair and a gravelly voice, isn't a violent sort. But he's right at home these days with murder, suspense and intrigue.

A few strokes of the razor, and he stood back, gazing at what he had done. His wife, Pat, watched from the corner of the room. Finally, she could keep quiet no longer.

"Oh, it's going to be beautiful," she said, smiling at her husband. And together the Shnells scanned another page of Mystery News.

Trimming and pasting up magazine pages isn't exactly what Jack Shnell had in mind when he left 30 years' work in radio and television production and moved from Southern California to Nevada several years ago.

But his spare time now is devoted to Mystery News, a dream of his wife's which slowly took form over the past two years. The first issue, a 12-page tabloid with 35 charter subscribers, came out in Decmember. It's a humble beginning, but the Shnells are convinced it will lead to bigger and better things.

What they offered in Volume 1, Number 1, was six book reviews, 72 publishers' notices, an interview, and assorted odds and ends, all about mystery books, and all intended for the diehard reader who just can't wait to get his or her fingerprints on the latest whodunit.

"There are probably an absolute minimum of two new mystery titles a month by each publisher, and some publish three or four a month," Mrs. Shnell said. "There is almost never any advertising or promotion budget for a mystery. And there is no way that these people who love mysteries can possibly find out about them."

Except, of course, through Mystery News.

Mrs. Shnell got the idea for the magazine in part from similar publications aimed at readers of romance novels. But mainly, she said, the stimulus for the magazine was her own frustration over not being able to find the latest mystery from her favorite authors.

A bookbuyer by profession, Mrs. Shnell is a full-fledged mystery buff herself, and has tried her hand at writing a mystery novel.

For years, she said, she tried to think of ways to get news about mysteries to doting fans. "I tried to sell it as a magazine column," she said, "and I got another stack of rejection slips to add to the ones that I had for my book."

There are other magazines being published for mystery readers, Mrs. Shnell admitted. But she said they offer information only about selected mysteries, and the true mystery junkie wants to know about them all.

"It's kind of like the old-fashioned movie fans," she said. "They wanted anything they could read about the movie stars. We are going to give the readers what they want."

Of course, different readers want different things. "In effect, every mystery buff has their own preference, and they want to see everything that's available in that catagory, that sub-genre," Mrs. Shnell said.

So Mystery News will cater to them all, with special sections on murder mysteries, spy mysteries, horror mysteries, ghost mysteries — in all, 13 catagories, including "miscellaneous."

What's Mrs. Shnell's favorite category? That's a mystery, but there is a clue.

"Shhhhhh," Mrs. Schnell said. "That would be very impolitic at this point."

HINTS FROM HELOISE

A key to problem-solving

HI THERE!

Have you ever lost your house or car keys, then worried that someone might find them and figure out where you live?

It's a problem but it nevertheless is a good idea to have keys identified in some way so they can be returned. Still, don't put your home address on them. Instead, use your office address. Or, with permission, you might use a friend's or relative's telephone number.

Speaking of keys, don't — I repeat don't! — put a house key under the mat or a flower pot or above a door or window sill. You'll be asking for trouble if you do. If you must leave a key someplace, put it under your neighbor's doormat or flower pot.

Stay safe and happy. — Hugs Heloise

PERFECT COOKIES

Dear Heloise: Here's a quick way to make cookies that have to be rolled into a ball, then put on the baking sheet.

On a flat surface, pat the dough into a rectangle about a half-inch thick. With a knife, cut the dough into smaller rectangles, one for each dozen cookies you are making.

Cut each small rectangle in half, then each half into six even pieces. Shape the pieces into a ball with your hands, and you'll end up with even-sized cookies, and exactly the number the recipe calls for. — Eleanor Christner

BODY HEAT

Dear Heloise: According to statistics 20 percent of our body heat escapes through our head.

Solution? Wear a hat or cap when going outside. Works equally well when indoors and the house is a little chilly. Pull a little stocking cap over your head and you'll be at least 20 percent warmer! — D.M. Anderson

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: Need a pencil and paper while in the car or a place to keep the turnpike ticket without misplacing it before you reach the other end?

Place two large rubberbands over the sun visor to hold these items, along with maps, etc. and your problem will be solved. — Fred Packard

ARE YOU ALLERGIC?

Dear Heloise: If you, or someone in your family, is allergic to metal, such as watchbands and rings, try coating the underside with clear fingernail polish.

Allow it to completely dry overnight, and I think you'll find it helps prevent an allergic reaction.

Of course, you'll have to repeat the process every few weeks or months to insure protection. — Okie

SECURED RUG

Dear Heloise: When placing a bathroom rug on the floor around the commode, the rug never seems to stay in place, especially with children.

Pin a quarter-inch wide strip of elastic on each end of the rug after bringing the elastic around the back side of the commode.

The rug will stay in place until you're ready to wash it. — Sydell Schneider

SLIPPERY ON ICE

Dear Heloise: Being an elderly person, I have to be extremely careful when walking on ice.

Since I have to negotiate a long, hilly driveway to reach my mailbox, I find that slipping a pair of woolen socks over my shoes or boots gives very good traction, and I have no fear of falling. — Mrs. George T. Welch

Send your most helpful hint to Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, TX 78216 today. She can't answer your letter personally but, sure as soup hits the spot on a cold day, she'll print the best hints received in her column.

Administration may require that parents be notified before prescribing birth control

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move certain to stir controversy among advocates of family planning, the Reagan administration may require that parents be notified any time a child under age 18 gets birth control material from a clinic that receives federal funds.

The proposed regulation is receiving serious study despite an opinion from the general counsel of the Department of Health and Human Services that it goes further than Congress intended.

It is expected to stir new debate over the government's role in providing family planning services and whether the well-established rule of physician-patient privacy will apply to minors.

"Parents should know when one of their children under the age of 18 is being given a prescription drug or device of this kind so they can be aware of any risk their child is taking," said Richard S. Schweiker, the cabinet member who heads the department.

Schweiker approved the regulatory change before it was sent to the Office of Management and Budget for review, department spokeswoman Claire Dorrell said Monday.

She said the secretary is aware that changes Congress made in the family planning laws last year do not require that a federal regulation be written on parental notification.

Details of how the notification process would work under the proposal were not clear. In instances where similar state or local requirements are already in place, the clinics are supposed to mail notification to the parents.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, already has written the administration protesting the proposed federal regulation.

In a memorandum to Schweiker dated Nov. 4, Juan del Real, the department's general counsel, noted that Congress explicitly called for the provision of family planning services to adolescents in 1978. When it reauthorized the law last year, Congress also agreed to "encourage family participation" in the provision of services.

But del Real concluded that the legislative history of the provision and the language itself "clearly preclude its being read as supporting any federally imposed consent requirement unless exceptions to the requirement are permitted so that it does not act as an insurmountable barrier to receipt of services."

Del Real recommended instead that the department limit any regulatory changes to encouraging minors who seek counseling or other services to involve their families "to the maximum extent possible" in these activities.

He said states should be given the option of imposing parental consent requirements and described this approach as "the strongest legally."

But Marjory Mecklenberg, acting deputy assistant secretary for population affairs, argued that family planning clinics are not likely to notify many parents that their children have been in unless they are required to do so.

In a memorandum to the general counsel, she said only about 15 percent of adolescent patients received contraceptive services in 1978 from family planning programs where parental consent or notification was required by state or local rules.

"Many outside individuals and groups will be deeply disappointed if this administration fails to significantly increase parental inovolvement and, since the 97th Congress specifically called for encouraging more family involvement, some legislators may feel the administration is abdicating its responsibility unless real change takes place," she wrote.

Opponents of mandatory parental involvement in family planning decisions have argued that it would deter some adolescents from seeking or using effective contraception.

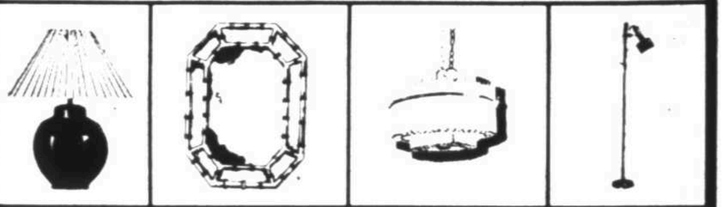

They also maintain it would not curb sexual activity and probably would lead to more teen-age pregnancies. Moreover, such a provision could be circumvented easily if a youngster lied about his or her age, forged parental signatures or provided false names and addresses, opponents say.

Finally, they maintain that the use of birth control pills, the most widely prescribed form of contraception, poses only minimal risks to teen-age users.

Specialized teaching helps those children with learning problems do better in school

By NANCY LORD
Lifestyle Writer

Learning. To most children it comes easily. Some children, however, have difficulties in some areas even though their IQ's are average or above average. They have what is known as learning disabilities.

Many of these children get help through special education classes at public schools, but some of them can benefit from special help provided by private centers such as the Midland Achievement Center, operated by Dr. Robert J. Currie and Alicia Parsley.

Dr. Currie and Ms. Parsley, who together have a total of 35 years experience in working with learning disabled children, have developed a curriculum for learning disabled children which includes their parents and school teachers as well.

"We work with teachers and parents to find problem areas," said Ms. Parsley.

"We are able to give more individualized attention (to these children.) We actually do one-on-one teaching," said Dr. Currie. He also noted that they teach parents how to teach their children.

"The parent is the best measure of progress," explained Ms. Parsley. She also said that parents are also excellent sources of "something's not going right here."

Center currently serves some 20 children from all age groups, but emphasis is on the younger child. "The whole premise (of the program) is getting children early," said Ms. Parsley.

According to Currie, about one out of every five persons is affected by some kind of learning disability.

The curriculum of the center addresses all types of disabilities, such as visual-perceptual problems, perceptual-motor problems and auditory-perceptual problems. Currie and Ms. Parsley also teach behavioral controls and search for the "hidden disability." Currie said the child with a hidden disability often gets low grades in school, but isn't identified as having a learning disability.

Currie said that one of the main problems with the public school special education program is that they often can't help the child with less critical problems.

"You have to be about one to two years behind your grade level to get into (public school) special education," Currie explained. He said that his center works toward "putting kids who don't have great problems back on the right track. We're trying to facilitate kids being successful in school."

Each child enrolled at the center has a program specially tailored to his or her individual needs. Ms. Parsley said that she and Currie constantly monitor progress and restructure the child's program accordingly.

Positive reinforcement is one of the most important teaching tools used at the center. Ms. Parsley said that they do this by ignoring unsatifactory behavior and praising satifactory behavior. "You've got to make these children successful," she explained.

Some of the materials used at the center are a large learning center, which trains children to have a better sense of their bodies and to expand language and vocabulary; a balance beam, which teaches children balance and space; and language training with auditory tapes tailored individually to each student.

Both Currie and Ms. Parsley explained that they don't "cure" the child, they just help him or her to learn to compensate for their disabilities.

"I have never seen a child that cannot learn more than he is at any given moment," Ms Parsley noted. "At every level, there is something to be learned."

Hospital radiologists now using peanut oil to aid in tomography examinations

MALMO, Sweden (AP) — Peanut oil has moved from grocery shelves into the hospital, where it may eventually help radiologists to better visualize the inner walls of the bladder during computed tomography (CT) examinations.

At Malmo General Hospital here, a medical team headed by radiologist Dr. Jan G. Hildell used peanut oil as a contrast material to visualize bladder tumors in 69 patients examined by CT. According to the physicians, the polyunsaturated oil appears to provide the best contrast yet. Other agents, including carbon dioxide and urine in the bladder, cannot provide radiologists with a consistent and satisfactory view of both the tumor and the bladder wall.

In addition, the oil seems to be well tolerated by patients with bladder cancer, whereas other agents may cause irritation. Further studies are in progress to assess the oil's efficacy.

Exhibit shows fashions of the 18th century

By JOAN BRUNSKILL

NEW YORK (AP) — Fashionable dress in the 18th century could range from a 6-foot-wide, gold-embroidered silk wedding dress to a Quaker's simple gray costume. These and more than 120 other modish outfits contribute their varied grace and color to "The 18th Century Woman," an exhibition in the Costume Galleries of the Metropolitan Museum here through August 1982.

The exhibition reflects the context of the 18th-century woman's life — it includes men's costumes, as well as a rich assortment of accessories, hats, shoes, fans and jewelry.

To set the scene, the mannequins are posed among period furniture, tapestries and paintings, and there are display cases of objets d'art, bric-a-brac and personal trinkets. Most of the costumes in the exhibition are from the museum's own collections, but there are a number on loan from other collections in the United States and Europe.

The exhibition spans the century from 1690, the date of the earliest costume shown, up to about 1790, just after the outbreak of the French Revolution. Much of the emphasis is on French dress, but there are also examples of the fashions of the day from England, Sweden, Italy, Denmark, the Netherlands and America.

In this country, as in France, ladies of society took pleasure in their elaborate dress, and had the wealth and time to develop refined tastes reflected in everything about them. Eighteenth-century women were not only ornaments — they enjoyed the influence they had on society through their wit, intelligence and enterprise as well as through their beauty.

As the century progressed, the basic fashionable silhouette went through its own evolution. There was the robe volant with its loose, airy back panel, then the bustle and even more cumbersome styles curving out from a tightly defined waist. By the end of the century there was the simple Empire line appearing, with a slender skirt below a high waist.

The fashionable shapes are given variety by the individual beauty of fabrics used and by details of trimming. The fabrics include heavily embroidered and quilted silks and satins, some with brocaded and woven designs. There are fine cottons, velvets, wool, linen and blends, again embroidered, printed or even painted. Garments are trimmed with lace and ribbons, with bands of ruching, pleats and frills.

The 1759 Dutch wedding dress with its enormously wide panniers and stately train has been lent by Amsterdam's Rijksmuseum; it has never been shown in public before, anywhere. In striking contrast there's another wedding dress — this time all black, a handsome watered silk, in the Swedish national dress of the day.

NEW YORK: the day.

Most of the colors are lighter — ivory, blue, green and pink prevailing — and flowers are everywhere, in patterns, embroideries and as trimming. These colors are used for informal day gowns as well as for court dresses, for outfits running the gamut from airy summer wear to the most formal, encrusted with sequins and precious stones. From American fashion comes a bolder note: a splendid fiery scarlet wool cloak and hood.

Among the men's clothes, there are several examples of a favorite item, the dressing gown — an elegantly narrow, full-length coat worn over a long vest and breeches. The outfit was so comfortable that it was made in handsome fabrics and emerged from the privacy of the dressing room to be worn in public and outdoors.

A charming group of models are the ladies' vastly becoming riding habits, knowingly borrowing from men's, with severely cut jackets softened with high-tied stocks, skirts and bold hats.

A little topknot of flowers or lace, perhaps matching a choker, bracelets or dress trim, sits on a small, neat head. Hats of ingenious variety crown other models, including the outrageously tall constructions which double the wearer's height, where a towering wig carries its own fantasy crest — for example, one bearing a model galleon in full sail.

On display among the jewelry are two legendary necklaces. One is the Queen's Necklace, a replica in white sapphires of the "river of diamonds" made for, but never worn by, Marie Antoinette. The other is the Liberty Necklace given to Ben Franklin by a Polish countess, its gold and silver setting and diamonds intact, its emeralds now replaced with paste.

The exhibition was organized by Diana Vreeland, special consultant to the Costume Institute, whose characteristic touches include the piped-in period music and the floral fragrance which perfumes the galleries. The exhibition was funded by a grant from Merle Norman Cosmetics.

DEAR ABBY

Virgin has first-night jitters

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, a 19-year-old college boy, signed "Never Been Kissed," was embarrassed because of his lack of experience with the opposite sex. He was a virgin and getting close to a sexual relationship with his girlfriend and didn't know how to handle it. You advised him to act as though he knew what he was doing, follow his natural instincts and bluff his way through.

Would you give the same advice to a man more than twice his age with the same problem? I am 40, normal and healthy in all respects, reasonably attractive and I am still a virgin. How do you suggest I handle a social situation with a woman in my age bracket who is sexually experienced and probably assumes that I am too?

This is no joke, Abby. Believe me, I wish it were. — NEVER BEEN KISSED OR ANYTHING ELSE

DEAR NEVER: I wouldn't advise a 40-year-old male virgin to bluff his way with a sexually sophisticated woman.

If you are "healthy, normal and reasonably attractive" and desirous of a sexual relationship, I am wondering why you are still totally inexperienced. If you don't know either, you should see a competent sex therapist.

DEAR ABBY: Ever since reading the letter from "Longtime Pastor" regarding his refusal to allow an "obviously pregnant bride" to have "I'm Having His Baby" sung at her wedding, I have been on a slow simmer. He states, "I think it makes a mockery of the sacred vows when people say 'I do' after they have already done it."

I would like to ask the "Longtime Pastor" why he allowed an "obviously pregnant bride" to have anything but a very private, family-only wedding ceremony, sans soloist, fanfare, etc. I believe that anything else makes a mockery of the sacred vows and that it is the responsibility of not-so-open-minded pastors to maintain sacred standards for the sacred ceremonies they perform in their churches.

Thanks, Abby, I feel better. Sign me. — LUTHERAN MOTHER OF FOUR DAUGHTERS

DEAR MOTHER: A pregnant bride is also entitled to a church wedding with a "soloist, fanfare, etc.," if that's what she wants. It is not the pastor's function to judge her. That's the Lord's job.

DEAR ABBY: When my nephew graduated from high school last June, I sent him a check for $100. Not too shabby for an uncle on a fixed and somewhat limited income. I have yet to receive an acknowledgment of my gift. The lad is now away at college.

I saw the father of this nephew recently, and I asked if his son ever received my graduation gift. The father said, "Yes, didn't you hear from him?" I told him I had not, whereupon he just shrugged his shoulders and replied, "Well, you know how kids are!"

Abby, I'm not sure I know "how kids are." Maybe you can tell me. — UNENLIGHTENED UNCLE

DEAR UNCLE: Some kids are well-mannered, appreciative and prompt with their thank-yous. Others are ill-mannered, unappreciative, lazy and procrastinating. Your nephew obviously belongs to the latter group.

DEAR ABBY: I've had the same hairdresser for years. She does nice work, and I had always looked forward to my weekly appointment.

Unfortunately, someone gave her a small portable TV for Christmas, and she keeps it turned on so she can watch it while she works. She keeps the volume turned down, but she does keep her eyes on the TV much of the time, which I find annoying.

If I speak to her, she says, "Shhh ... please, I want to hear this!" She is a faithful Dear Abby fan.

Add dash of drama to staid apartment

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. My husband and I are planning to move back to the city and have taken a new apartment that is quite suitably located and has adequate space. However, the rooms are so absolutely plain and sterile.

Our previous home was certainly not grandiose but it did have charming old architectural touches here and there. I wouldn' want to make the new apartment seem like something it isn't yet I feel the rooms are a bit too austere for my rather traditional furnishings.

What would be your suggestions for adding some architectural features but not going overboard? T.K.

A. A subtle wall covering is a good place to start. Patterns with a hint of Oriental are complementary to traditional furnishings yet seldom are heavy-handed.

You might add a dark-stained molding to the point where the walls meet the ceiling; a baseboard and the same molding to give plain windows a distinguishing characteristic.

If the carpeting needs replacing or if you have none, consider installing wood floors. The patterned parquet designs are particularly charming and most elegant when topped with a decorative Oriental or other accent rug.

Q. We have a small alcove off the kitchen which apparently was designed as a family room but is too small for much furniture.

We do not need a family room because our living room is most relaxed and comfortable. However, with a small used brick fireplace in this alcove, there is some need for furnishing the area.

I'm not sure what would be pleasant and how I might tie the area into the kitchen from a decorating point of view. We have white simulated brick flooring, fruitwood cabinets and off-white counter tops — T.C.

A. With a warm and slightly colonial decorating scheme already established in your kitchen-sitting room area, why not create a sort of luxurious, old-fashioned keeping room.

You could do this easily with a pair of wingbacked chairs. Choose a style with the fruitwood legs and upholstery that complements you scheme. If you nave not decided on a clor yet, be bold and use a red and white houndstooth weave or a print of nearly any combination of colors. You could repeat the upholstery in your kitchen curtains.

Q. I want to apply fabric to my lampshades but don't know how to do it. I'm not very accomplished at this sort of thing so I need lots of help.

A. One of the best little books I've seen on do-it-yourself decorating ideas is Judy Lindahl's "Decorating with Fabric — An Idea Book," which I recently picked up in a fabric shop for $4.

The book is published by the author, who lives in Portland, Ore. Lindahl explains graphically how to cover several different styles of lampshades with fabric.

IOTA BETA CHAPTER, BSP

Cheri Kemp was hostess to the Iota Beta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi. Plans were made for a pizza party to honor Shirley Menard of High Sky Girls Ranch. Members also arranged to distribute linens purchased for Terrace Gardens as part of the chapter's service project.

It was announced Iota Beta Chapter will entertain Xi Pi Kappa Chapter with a spaghetti social Sunday.

Mrs. Kemp gave the program on names, with a short history of each member's name.

Also included in the chapter's service project is painting props in the nextfew weeks for Midland Community Theatre.

AAUW MORNING LITERATURE GROUP

Ralph Sellmeyer, the Allison professor of journalism at Midland College, spoke to the Morning Literature Group of the American Association of University Women in the home of Jean Thomas. Mildred Pope was co-hostess.

Sellmeyer spoke on the practice of public relations and presented several problems for the group to solve.

CHAPARRAL EXTENSION HOMEMAKERS CLUB

The Chaparral Extension Homemakers Club met in the home of Mrs. Berley Anderle for a business session.

Yearbooks were distributed, and Mrs. Jean Connor gave the council report. She said there will be a training meeting Feb. 2, and Mrs. Mary Evelyn Bryant will be a candidate for the extension homemakers' state treasurer.

BETA DELTA CHAPTER, BSP

A meeting of the Beta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi was held recently in the home of Betty Ruth McAnally. After business was conducted, a pledge ritual was held for new members who have been invited to join the chapter. New members were Mrs. Vickie Lambillotte, Mrs. Margo Hill, Mrs. Marleen Griffen, Mrs. Vickie Lipps, and Mrs. Sue Lee.

XI ALPHA MU CHAPTER, BSP

Xi Alpha Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met in the home of Ann Tayrien recently for a regular meeting. Genell Emerson announced plans for entertaining members of Iota Beta in January. A Mexican food dinner will be served, followed by a special style show. Members will meet to work with Psi Phi Chapter members on decorations for the Valentine Ball. The chapter voted to purchase personal items to fill bags to give to children placed in foster care in Midland.

Kay Blanck presented the program on "The Life and Trials of Jill Arthur". Barbara Elliott won the hostess gift and two members received gifts from their secret sisters.

MIDLAND JUNIOR WOMAN'S CLUB

Kathleen B. Atkin and Linda H. George were guest speakers for a meeting of the Midland Junior Woman's Club in the Midland Woman's Club.

Ms. Atkin, who has been assistant cashier and women's services officer for the past 10 years at Commercial Bank & Trust Co., spoke on advantages and disadvantages of IRAs, the constant changing of interest rates and why women should have a more active role in money matters.

Ms. Atkin conducts a number of financial seminars for women, investors and small business owners, as well as the bank's S.O.S. program, a special organizational service for widows and divorcees.

Ms. George, M.S.W., A.C.S.W., former executive director of Family Services now in private practice, discussed the role of the corporate wife. Relocations and job promotion are accepted in corporate families, but often the wife questions what is expected of her. This can cause stress, anxiety and guilt for the woman whose situation, until recently, has not been addressed. Ms. George explored relocation, dual careers and other issues affecting the corporate wife.

During the business session, it was noted the club supported four children for the Salvation Army's Dress a Live Doll program. Plans were announced for a Mexican buffet social and marriage encounter with spouses in February.

The club provides Story Hour each Tuesday in the Midland County Public Library, and does the annual spring Parade of Homes, which is scheduled April 25.

Guests were the speakers and Donna Nichols.

Dr. Grant is the co-ordinator of music at MC and directs chamber ensembles. He discussed the importance of chamber music and performed two pieces for the association. Dr. Grant and Nancy Young Knapp performed the Brahms' "Sonata in E Flat for Clarinet and Piano" and joined with Elaine Berman in Schubert's "Shepherd on the Rock."

Volunteers monitor CB to respond to calls for help

The call for help, over a CB radio, may be from a family stranded with an empty gas tank; from a motorist suddenly confronted by three or four cows on the highway; or from a driver involved in an accident.

Chances are good that the plea will be intercepted by someone like James Cozine, a member of one of the many volunteer organizations monitoring Channel 9 in Kentucky.

"We receive all kinds of messages," said Cozine. "We try to screen them as much as possible to keep state police from making unnecessary runs. If the plea is legitimate, it's passed along to the proper agency and assistance is on the way in a matter of minutes."

"Our club tries to cover the county," he said. "We begin listening at 4 a.m. and shut down about 1 a.m. Ordinarily, the range for a CB is five miles but when atmospheric conditions are right, you'd be surprised at the stories you hear."

Cozine recalls an evening when he and other club members kept picking up a distress call from "a boy in the Black Rock Desert. Seems he was trying to cross a dry river bed, got stuck, and wanted any listener to telephone the sheriff."

After checking the map, the club determined that the driver was in Nevada, "over 1,700 airline miles from us. We got in touch with the boy's mother in Reno, told her what had happened, and arrangements were made to rescue him."

He also remembers the time when a boat broke down "either in the Gulf of Mexico or somewhere off the coast of South America.

"The boat owner repeated his location for several minutes and we relayed the information to the Coast Guard in Louisville."

After Cozine returned to the air that afternoon, he overheard a radio operator on shore telling the people on the boat that "there's good news and bad news. The good news is that the Coast Guard will be standing by. The bad news is that they're not going to tow you to port."

There are approximately 20 members in Cozine's club.

"Now and then we get a check from a guy we've helped. The money is passed along to the Red Cross since we use their headquarters for our meetings."

Oilman produces in the classroom

The rapid growth of the petroleum industry over the past few years has brought about a demand for skilled workers that has yet to be satisifed.

In response to the demand, a variety of industrial training and education programs have come into being recently. Jim Brock, Houston, conducts one of them.

Brock teaches well log analysis — how to interpret the elaborate graphs produced by tools lowered into oil and gas wells. He was in Midland last week instructing 17 students who were enrolled in "Open Hole Log Interpretation — Theory and Analyisis" at the Permian Basin Graduate Center.

The five-day-course was geared for people who are not familiar with log analysis, Brock explained. "And you wind up getting a working knowledge by the end of the week."

In addition, Brock said, the course is designed to show students how to save money by knowing what to look for in a logging company, and what kind of services to order from it.

Brock said he got into teaching "through the back door."

He began instructing while working with the Schlumberger logging company. He liked it and decided to develop his teaching skills by taking university courses and attending training seminars.

After working nine years for logging companies, Brock became a full time trainer of petroleum industry workers about a year ago.

Brock's logging course is built around a 400-page manual he disigned. It helps him take his students through a step-by-step examination of the logging process.

"We discuss the limitations of all the readings and how to maximize the readings you get," Brock said. "And I teach them how to do some old electric log interpretation."

"With a little bit of practice and experience they can be as good as any of the wireline (logging) field engineers — or better."

He also provides in-house instruction for oil companies who want their employees trained to read logs.

Brock has designed a second course to for those with some understanding of log analysis. During the course he teaches how to use a programable calculator to speed up the log interpretation.

Fast answers are important to oilmen, Brock said. "Rig time means money, and you don't want to slow the program down any."

Some oil wells can never be produced profitably, Brock said. Acurrate calculations can tell you if a well will be profitable or not.

If the producing formation has a water saturation of over 50 percent, Brock said, "you're never going to produce anything but water."

Brock will return to the Graduate Center to teach the use of a programable calculator in February.

Boyer is an American oil man from the soles of his cowboy boots to the tips of his cigars. Like many of his expatriate buddies — "expats" in oil-speak — the 40-year-old Boyer has knocked around in the world's energy-rich corners, eager for both the good money and a dose of adventure.

The foul weather, the tail of a South China Sea cyclone, reminds him of the bitter cold and deadly winds he faced while working on the Alaska oil pipeline. It reminds him, too, by contrast, of the placid tropical seas off Indonesia, Asia's major petroleum producer.

Boyer's company, Union Oil Co. of California, began operations in Thailand in 1962, but the real action has come only during the past three years as crippling bills for imported oil spurred the government to seek out its own energy sources.

Today, Union Oil's 115-square-mile "Erawan Field" is studded with 12 platforms and supported by a small fleet of boats and helicopters. The natural gas flows onshore through a 264-mile undersea pipeline — the longest of its kind in the world — for sale to the Thai government.

The gas began moving through the pipeline Sept. 12, and Union Oil says it is discovering enough reserves in five other Gulf of Siam fields to plan on being in Thailand for at least the next two decades.

This is just fine for veteran oil men who rank Thailand way above such places as the North Sea oil fields with their brutal weather and the Middle Eastern countries with their strict taboos against drinking and night life.

Off-duty living is relatively easy in Thailand, and on the job the "ex-pats" have high praise for the growing number of Thai workers being integrated into the operation. Many of the Americans and other foreigners are old Asia hands, some with Vietnam War experience, and have married Asian women.

Boyer has facial scars from four helicopter and plane crashes. The combination of sea and heavy, sometimes dangerous equipment also takes its toll. A recent report from the U.N. International Labor Organization said offshore rig accidents claim 250 to 500 lives each year.

But there are hefty compensations. The average American on this field is paid about $3,500 a month in salary plus generous housing and cost-of-living allowances.

The schedule of 12 days of work followed by 12 of shore rest — and four weeks of leave in the United States and two in the region — allows some workers to hold second jobs. Boyer, whose wife and two children live in Bangkok, takes his four-week leave to coincide with the harvest on his 600-acre farm in South Dakota.

A 5,500-ton tender barge has to cut its ropes from a well platform because of the heavy seas and then misses ramming the central platform when its anchors begin to drag. A returning night crew cannot disembark because of the waves and must spend 12 hours of seasickness on a small boat before being hauled onto a platform in personnel baskets.

The "Basic Reservoir Engineering for Geologists" is for geologists, geophysicists, petroleum land management specialists, and managers. No previous training in reservoir engineering is required. The course deals with how fluids flow through reservoir rock, the natural trends in reservoir production and how these trends can be altered to produce greater recovery and profits. Topics include basic fluids and rock properties, types of reservoirs, and their performance characteristics, water flooding, gas injection and enhanced oil recovery, significance of reservoir concepts to the petroleum geologist. Registration fee if $260.

The "Advanced Reservoir Engineering for Geologists" will deal with advanced principles and case histories and workshop problems. Fee is $100.

Basin rig count drops below

The Permian Basin Roatary rig count dropped below 500 last week — to the lowest level in six weeks — according to a survey by Reed Rock Bit Co. Reed tallied 495 rigs making hole thoroughout the Basin.

The national count continues to slide, according to International Association of Drilling Contractors figures. It was down to 4,438 Jan. 18, after peaking at 4,530 in December.

The IADC counted 1,346 land rigs working Texas, and 158 drilling ahead in New Mexico.

On Jan. 19, 1981 there were 3,391 rigs were turning to the right nationwide.

RRC reinstates LPG amendments

AUSTIN — Amendments that will reinstate four Liquefied Petroleum Gas Division rules concerning the location of LP-gas containers were presented to the Railroad Commission Jan. 11 by the division. Those amendments, along with one new amendment concerning the examination of employees in the LP-gas industry, will be published for public comment in the Texas Register for 30 days before the Commission considers final approval.

The amendments will reinstate rules that establish distance requirements between property lines or highways and LP-gas bulk storage containers, domestic fuel storage containers, fork lift storage containers, gas service station and bottle filling storage containers and Department of Transportation cylinders. The distances required will vary according to the capacity of the containers.

Existing rules set minimum distances between buildings and containers. The reinstatement of distance requirements between containers and property lines is an effort to avoid a situation where new construction of a buildings and containers. The reinstatement of distance requirements between containers and property lines is an effort to avoid a situation where new construction of a building would put an already-installed container in violation of these rules. In that case, the container would have to be taken out of service.

The amendments will not effect existing containers if adopted.

A permanent location and schedule for the examination of employees in the LP-gas industry will be established by the final amendment. This action will make it easier fo the LPG division to computerize theexamination program and will reduce the paperwork for those taking the exams.

The Railroad Commission requires all those engaging in LP-gas activity to take exams to ensure their knowledge of safety procedures when handling LP-gas.

Deregulation price jump sparking new crime wave

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oil price deregulation is spawning a new breed of rustlers who are raiding oil fields to steal oil or the equipment that retrieves it, authorities say.

"What's happened is that as oil has risen in price, the temptation to steal it has increased," David Linowes, a University of Illinois professor and chairman of a five-member federal commission on oil thefts, said Thursday.

Between 2 percent and 6 percent of all U.S.-produced oil is stolen. That's about 500,000 barrels daily, worth some $18 million, according to Linowes' panel, the Commission on Fiscal Accountability of the Nation's Energy Resources. The commission was established by Interior Secretary James G. Watt.

Southern California's Kern County, one of the nation's top oil-producing counties, has three sheriff's deputies assigned full-time to investigate oil field thefts, which last year amounted to $877,185, officials said.

Thefts occur at wells, from tanker trucks pumping out storage tanks or from loaded tankers enroute to processing plants, said LeRoy Anderson, the sheriff's chief of operations.

The vice president of Kernridge Oil Co. of Bakersfield, a Shell Oil Co. subsidiary, said the company might not have learned it was being robbed if an employee hadn't reported that thieves approached him with a bribe.

When you decide on a Sharp SF-770 Copier
IT'S A VALUE JUDGMENT.

Matter of fact, as you read on, you can't help but see with your own eyes why our new Sharp SF-770 Copier is just more valuable, period.

Maybe that's because it's got more going for it, more raw potential, more features featured, than any other copier in its class.

The Sharp SF-770, with its own self-diagnostic capabilities, can tell you all by itself when it's hungry or thirsty for more paper or toner (dry toner, of course).

Or if something went down the wrong pipe (which is rare).

Point is, you know just how your copier is feeling at all times. That's because we believe in preventive medicine.

Paper-size-wise, that is. We can copy 11" x 17" or 8½" x 11" or even down to invoice size just by switching paper cassettes.

We can even be a 2-faced copier as well, because you can copy on both sides of our 2-sized paper. Double-duty!

The Sharp SF-770 doesn't clam-up on you when you've got a problem. Quite to the contrary.

If your copier is on the blink, our easy-to-service "clamshell design" makes the job a breeze for rapid repairs.

And isn't that what value is all about?

Twelve pipeline permits issued

AUSTIN — Twelve permits to operate new pipelines in Texas were granted by the RRC in December 1981.

Six of the permits were for gathering pipelines, four were for trunk transmission lines, and one was for a gas plant line. Another was for a multipurpose line.

Nine of the newly-permitted pipelines will transport gas, while one will move petroleum products. Two will carry other materials.

Private pipelines accounted for 10 permits last month, while two were for gas utilities. A common carrier performs public work for hire, such as the movement of petroleum products.

In December, three permits were granted in East Texas, two each in the San Angelo area, West Central Texas and North Texas, and one each in Southeast Texas, East Central Texas and the Midland area.

Gathering lines approved:

Seatex Energy Pipeline Company, Graham, gas, Young County; Weneeda Gas Gathering System, Addison, gas, Brown and Coleman counties; Cordova Resources Inc., Dallas, gas, Eastland County; Corpus Christi Oil and Gas Company, Corpus Christi, gas Matagorda County; Amerada Hess Corporation, Midland, crude and condensates, Midland County; Pecos Gathering Systems, Inc., Houston, gas, Terrell County.

Trunk transmission lines approved:

American Pipeline Company, Houston, gas, Rusk County; Panola Pipe Line Company, Houston, other materials, Angelina, Nacogdoches, Panola, Rusk, and Shelby counties; Campeon Pipeline Corporation, Dallas, gas, Freestone County; Crystal Pipe Line Company, Henderson, petroleum products, Gregg and Rusk counties.

Gas plant lines approved:

Warren Petroleum Company, Tulsa, gas, Grayson County.

Multi-purpose lines approved:

Texas Intra-Mark Gas Company, Inc., Midland, gas, Crockett County.

Back to school — again!

Colleges and universities throughout the nation are beginning to tighten up on their admissions policies, sounding what may be the death knell for the egalitarian philosophy that dominated higher education during the past decade. The change is coming none too soon.

Recently, a national news magazine noted that the tougher admissions policies include California's new demand starting in the fall of 1984 for 15 units of college-track subjects or incoming freshmen, including four years of preparatory English and two years of math.

Florida State University intends to begin requiring that freshmen graduate from high school with 2.5 grade-point averages, as compared with the current 2.0 GPA, including more stringent test scores on math and English Scholastic Aptitude Tests.

A little closer to home, the University of Texas plans to begin reducing its enormous student body by tightening admissions reqirements.

Primarily responsible for this changing philosophy in the role of education is the effect of the open admissions policies of the past several years on the quality of students showing up on college campuses today. The University of California found that between 1977 and 1980 only half of a block of 50,000 students could demonstrate reading and writing skills necessary for college-level courses.

Another basic reason is the misdirection of teaching dollars and teaching skills being experienced in the institutions of higher learning. Georgia's 33 institutions spent more than $6 million this year on "developmental studies" — the socially acceptable way, apparently, to say remedial education.

The basic truth open admissions policies overlooked was simply that every person is not suited mentally to a college atmosphere. By attempting to make a college education available to everyone who desired it, our society actually lowered the quality of education offered to all.

Slowly the educational system has evolved with a growing emphasis on vocational education for those students who might not be particularly suited to disciplined study at an institution of higher learning. That is good; those courses of study fit a definite need in society today.

But the old philosophy that it is a matter of shame for one not to attend college must be altered significantly if the educational system is to be saved. Less emphasis should be directed to giving "all" youngsters a college education and more at giving "all" youngsters a good education suitable to the abilities of the individual.

The effort at redirecting the future of education will place a demanding social responsibility on the institutions where that responsibility should lie — the family and the public schools. It is the responsibility of each to ensure that each child be educated to the fullest. It is the responsiblity of colleges and universities to provide a higher education only to those who can make the grade to enter. Quality must not be sacrificed for quantity on the college campus.

Practices of the past have kept society from this course far too long. It definitely is time to begin learning again.

No easy middle ground

Anyone who wants additional evidence on why an American president's lot is not always a happy one need look no further than the critical aftermath of his compromise to sell arms to Taiwan.

The president had no clear-cut "right" or "wrong" decision to make concerning Taiwan's request for shipments of the sophisticated F-5G fighter planes which carry radar-guided missiles. Mr. Reagan's judicious response was to stop short of the F-5G sales, but continue to sell other weapons, including the more conventional F-5E planes. He got hit from three directions.

1 — As was expected, officials in Taipai were pleased that some military aid would continue, but displeased over limitations imposed by the Reagan administration.

2 — As was also expected, officials in Peking reacted in reverse order. They were pleased with the limitations placed on Taiwan, but expressed in no uncertain terms their displeasure over any sales at all to the Nationalist Chinese.

3 — To the surprise of many, the Reagan action found the Republican Party's far right wing rising in wrath. They said Taiwan had been snubbed. California's Senator S.I. Hayakawa accused the president of "kowtowing to Peking." Richard Viguerie, the rightist fund-raiser who seemed to think he had the Reagan administration in the bag, complained: "It's obvious that the administration is beginning to move away from the kind of views we thought it had."

Mr. Reagan may not be able to please everyone. But he surely realizes that there are days he must compromise for the good of the country.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Reagan considering news flow restrictions

WASHINGTON — President Reagan seems relentlessly determined to control the flow of information to the American people. There is a word for this, and it isn't the word he chooses to use. He speaks of "security"; the correct word is "censorship."

Jack Anderson

The president has vowed to use "all legal methods" to bottle up the information that his administration decides the public should not know about. This means he will not, apparently, set up a crew of "plumbers" in the White House basement to plug the leaks by extralegal and illegal means.

But the restrictions he contemplates would impose tighter press control than even Richard Nixon dreamed about. Already, Reagan has issued a directive threatening "appropriate disciplinary measures" against any government employee who discusses classified matters with newsmen without the advance approval of an unspecified "senior official." The Reagan administration will decide, of course, what matters are classified.

This missive will be followed by an executive order, which will have the force of law. I reported several weeks ago on the first draft of the proposed order. It would give the Central Intelligence Agency something it has always considered its due: virtually total immunity from public scrutiny. It would also put "SECRET" stamps in the hands of a whole new horde of federal bureaucrats.

That first draft has now been revised. But my associate John Dillon has seen a copy of the latest draft. If anything, it's even worse than the original proposal. The new draft, which is being circulated under the signature of presidential counselor Edwin Meese, retains the CIA's blanket immunity from public disclosure and toughens up the language regarding classification.

For example, the original wording allowed defense material "vital to national security" to be classified and thus kept from the public. The new version allows the classification of material "relating to national security."

Thus a corrupt official could cover up, say, the purchase of paperclips for the Army from his brother-in-law's firm by identifying the transaction as "relating to national security." The difference between "vital" and "relating" is the difference between an umbrella and a circus tent.

While most bureaucrats probably welcome the protection from potential embarrassment that the new, much looser classification rules will give them, there are some who think the new regulations don't go far enough. They'd like to keep the public completely in the dark about their activities.

Internal Pentagon memos show how eager the generals and admirals are to take advantage of the secrecy that the Reagan administration advocates. They want a whole new category of "security" classification to cover everything that doesn't qualify under the rules for "CONFIDENTIAL," "SECRET" and "TOP SECRET."

The new catch-all classification would be "RESTRICTED," a stamp that has actually been around for years as an informal method of designating material that really isn't sensitive but is considered less essential for public edification than, say, a press release.

One Pentagon memo argues that the proposed classification is needed for "the effective safeguarding of a range of information that is not now generally classifiable." It goes on to describe this as information "the disclosure of which reasonably could be expected to cause the loss to the United States of a technological, diplomatic or military advantage ..."

That could include everything from a report on recruiting difficulties to an off-the-cuff remark by a general at a Pentagon reception. But even in the secrecy-infatuated Pentagon, one internal memo cautions that "it is poor policy and poorer politics to adopt a 'presumption of non-openness' ... It is illogical to create a body of unclassified information that could damage the national security ... 'Unclassified information of military value to an adversary' is an intrinsically contradictory phrase."

The memo-writer, ironically, then went on to support the creation of a "restricted" category of classified information.

No loyal American wants sensitive information to reach the Kremlin. But the Soviets pick up fairly few secrets by reading American newspapers. Rather, they depend upon an exhaustive espionage apparatus equipped with technological devices that are not available to the press.

So if President Reagan wants to keep secrets from the Russians, he should speak to the FBI, not impose censorship upon the press. The truth is, of course, that he hopes to use the security issue to regulate the news. Like presidents before him, he would like to feed reporters daily trivialities and keep them occupied with diversions. But he doesn't want the acts and policies of his administration to reach the people through what he considers the distorting prism of the press.

What he wants the public to know, he will communicate directly through television talks or other tightly controlled mechanisms. He has the open face and amiable manner that will help him to get away with managing the news. But inevitably, as he tightens the nozzle on the news, the official pipelines will spring multiple leaks.

The public has learned from unhappy experience that government secrecy is merely a device for covering up crimes, blunders and deceptions. So Reagan's attempt to contain the press and shut off leaks is likely to fail.

ART BUCHWALD

I watched "Washington Mistress" on television the other night. It added to the legend that sex, power and politics are all we think about in the nation's capital.

Art Buchwald

In the show, the heroine is done wrong by an ambitious heel, a lobbyist who has political ambitions, but time to hop in bed with his "mistress" throughout the two hours, whenever he isn't having dinner with the vice president of the United States or partying with the "right" people so he can become a Cabinet officer.

While everyone seems to dramatize the plight of the bright young girl who is victimized, what about the young men seduced by ambitious women here? I interviewed one such man. Here is Arnie's story:

"I was a kid from Warren, Pennsylvania, and all my life I dreamed of working for the government. After finishing college and earning a master's degree in international relations, I got a job in the passport division.

"One day a congresswoman came in for a new passport. Our eyes met as she handed me her two photographs and I could feel goose bumps go up and down my arms. As I pasted one of the photographs in her passport she said to me, 'How would you like to have dinner tonight?'

"I knew it was wrong, but there was something about her that made me say 'yes.' Besides, I was lonely in Washington and I saw no harm in just having dinner.

That night as I was dressing, I told my roommates who was taking me out and they were flabbergasted.

"'Don't you know she's married?' my best friend Charlie said. 'You're asking for a pack of trouble.'

"'Don't worry, it's just a dinner date, and I'm sick and tired of sitting home watching television every night. I can handle it. I wasn't born in Warren, Pennsylvania, for nothing.'"

"We had dinner at a fancy restaurant. 'Z' knew exactly what wines to order and I couldn't believe all the famous people she said hello to in the restaurant.

"After dinner she took me for a walk to the Lincoln Memorial. The moon was shining and there was a slight breeze blowing off the Mall. I stood with my head against a pillar and suddenly she took me in her arms and said, 'I want to make love to you.' I didn't know what to do. At first I tried to push her away, but suddenly I melted into her arms. I didn't care anymore what happened. I was in love.

"What started out as an innocent one-night fling turned into an obsession. At work I could think of nothing else except 'Z.' I kept making mistakes such as stamping in people's passports 'NOT GOOD FOR TRAVEL IN SWITZERLAND' or 'THIS PASSPORT IS ONLY VALID IN ALBANIA.' My supervisor called me in and said 'Arnie, I know what's going on. It's all over town you're having an affair with Congresswoman "Z." Believe me, she'll break your heart.'

"'How can you say that?' I cried. 'She promised me she was going to divorce her husband and marry me.'

"'She'll never leave her husband. She is a very ambitious woman and wants to be chairman of the House Subcommittee on Student Loans. Her husband's family has the connections to get her the job. Do you think she'd give that all up to marry a passport clerk?'

"A few months later when we were in bed at the Twin-Marriott Motel, 'Z' told me, 'I'm going to have your baby.'

"'We can't right now. No one would ever accept a divorced woman as chairman of the House Subcommittee on Student Loans.'"

Arnie concluded, tears running down his cheeks, "I knew it was all over then. She would never marry me, because in Washington power is the name of the game, and except for issuing her a new passport without waiting in line, there was nothing I could do for her to further her congressional ambitions. It's no fun being a man in Washington — but then again it's not fun being a man anywhere."

GEORGE F. WILL

FDRs of today are needed on local level, not national

George F. Will

Mayor William Donald Schaefer has a large head, like Franklin Roosevelt. FDR's face seemed made for that famous smile, but Schaefer's countenance, although not exactly woeful, is creased like that of a basset hound. While Schaefer was visiting the John F. Kennedy Institute for Handicapped Children, where briskly matter-of-fact professionals do their unsung work healing bodies and unlocking minds, a change, a slight tautness, came over his face, a change that was the more striking for being so controlled that it was barely discernible.

At the national level, government is a matter of abstractions and formulas. At the local level, government is elemental, even tactile. The sort of human feelings visible on Schaefer's face are a reward, sometimes a risk, of government on a human scale.

The Kennedy Institute performs social services as well as basic research. It is the last hope for some children and the primary hope for some scientists, and it is all of this on a budget of just $11 million a year. Now federal cuts may cost it $3 million. It is up to Baltimore, the community as well as the government, to patch and caulk and keep things afloat.

Fortunately, Schaefer embodies his community more completely than even Richard Daley or Fiorello LaGuardia embodied Chicago and New York. Baltimoreans are only human, so when approached by someone asking them to do good works, their instinct is to take evasive action. But when galvanizing Baltimore's public-spirited sector, Schaefer resembles a German shepherd that has been to finishing school: He is quiet, but you'd better do what he says.

At almost exactly the moment Schaefer was watching the boy struggle to feed himself, Texas A & M University, casting about for some way to augment its near-perfection, signed a new football coach to a contract worth $1.7 million over six years. We are a nation that spares no expense on behalf of the strongest bodies.

On the great contemporary question of whether Atari or Intelevision makes the best video games by which the nation can further drug itself, I remain agnostic. But of this I am sure: It is disgusting for the limbs and minds of children to remain unmended because of a shortage of money in a nation where television commercials, aimed at mass audiences of millions, advertise video disc machines for "under $500." Whatever else can be said — and few adjectives are pungent enough — to describe a society characterized by million-dollar college football coaches and expensive adult toys, it is not a society that has any excuse for neglecting its needy.

I shall make myself tiresome by saying again and again and again that America is undertaxed. That conclusion is compelled by considerations of equity as well as national security. President Reagan was right to cut marginal tax rates, which were having irrational disincentive effects. But especially in older cities like Baltimore, there is an inverse relationship between equity problems and revenue sources for dealing with them. So national revenue measures (such as a value-added tax, or a $1 tax on a gallon of gasoline) are needed.

On the other hand, Schaefer's record supports some of Reagan's essential points. They are that local communities can rise to local challenges more than they realize; that enlarged responsibilities will attract larger persons into local politics; and that $1 raised and spent by someone like Schaefer is apt to do more good than $10 dispersed by the federal bureaucracy 40 miles down the road.

When Reagan became America's most important political figure, Schaefer and others similarly situated became almost as important, not least to Reagan. The moral correctness of Reagan's policy of dispersing responsibilities depends on the ability of Schaefer and others to elicit new material and spiritual resources from their communities. Schaefer must practice what Reagan preaches. By this division of labor, the Democrat can vindicate the Republican.

The 1930s called for an FDR — a great energizer and mobilizer — at the national level. The 1980s call for FDRs at the local level. Of course something called for need not come forth. But in Baltimore it has.

Chief Justice Greenhill favors redistricting courts

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — With as many challenges to redistricting efforts that State and Federal courts have had to deal with lately, one might suspect that even the judges are becoming tired of redrawing boundaries.

But Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice Joe Greenhill still would like to see another redistricting effort undertaken — that effort being to redraw the state's judicial districts.

"We've never had redistricing since the Civil War," Greenhill reports.

There have been some efforts to overhaul the trial court set-up, he notes, but the Legislature (and some judges) haven't been too enthusiastic about the prospects.

"We should come to a better system of court organization and administration," Greenhill argues.

Texas, he says, "is one of the few states of any size that has no responsible chain of command — every judge is elected on his own, sits when he wants to..."

Cases can be distributed among the courts of appeal, Greenhill notes, but attempting to do that at the trial court level is another matter.

Many judges in areas where few lawsuits arise would like to try more cases, Greenhill says, but the existing system isn't structured to allow that.

Gov. John Connally, Greenhill comments, was the last governor to push strongly for a judicial redistricting.

"He said he wouldn't appoint any more judges," Greenhill recalls, but "a lot of legislators didn't want their judges messed with," and the effort failed.

Last year, he says, the House Appropriations Committee expressed "great interest" in such a redistricting — partly because the Legislature is having to add dozens of new district courts each session.

Redrawing judicial districts, however, isn't the only change Greenhill would like to see in the Texas court system.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Another change — one which Greenhill has advocated for a long time — is to move away from the partisan election of judges.

"My view," Greenhill says, "is that we should come, ultimately, to a merit selection of judges, with the right of the people to remove them."

Greenhill stresses that he doesn't favor life tenure for judges — as in the case of Federal judges — nor does he favor requiring judges to run for election as Democrats or Republicans.

"Just by party is the wrong way to pick them," Greenhill contends. "They should be picked on their qualifications, their ability and diligence..."

"In the immediate future," he says, "I think it would be highly desirable to get the judges elected on a statewide basis and in metropolitan areas on a non-partisan ballot."

"People," he comments, "just don't know who we are...Greenhill isn't exactly a household word."

Greenhill feels that "the great expense of partisan politics" may discourage many qualified people from considering serving as judges, particularly at the statewide level.

At the court of appeals level, he says, the cost is $150,000 to $200,000 "just to get name identification."

"On the statewide basis," as Supreme Court and Court of Criminal Appeals judges have to run, "it's a whole lot more than that," he comments.

Two years ago, Greenhill says, one Supreme Court race resulted in $1 million being spent, while another race cost $400,000.

"That puts the judge in the position of having to solicit funds or having funds solicited for him," Greenhill notes.

And, he comments, election of judges doesn't necessarily assure the election of qualified people — as Texans discovered with the election of one Supreme Court judge who later resigned after being faced with impeachment over his aggravated perjury indictment.

"Most of the states have come away from popular partisan election of judges," Greenhill says, with only 17 states — mostly in the South — retaining that system.

Texas, he concedes, may not be ready to make that change yet, although a proposal for merit election of judges did receive the support of a majority of Senators (although not the two-thirds needed) in 1981.

Gov. Bill Clements has indicated interest in some type of non-partisan election plan, but the matter eventually would have to be decided by the voters, since a constitutional amendment would be required.

Greenhill argues that any changes aren't likely to be soon or sudden.

KINGSBURY-SMITH

Tax hikes likely to offset benefits in income tax cuts

By JOSEPH KINGSBURY-SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — It is becoming increasingly apparent in Washington that hikes in federal, state and local taxes over the next three years are likely to offset considerably the benefits of President Reagan's 25 percent income tax cuts.

The extent to which those tax cuts will be offset by increased taxes is a partisan issue in Congress. Democrats predict increased taxes will sharply reduce the relief the tax-payer gets from the tax-cuts. Republicans contend the impact of increased taxes on the President's three-year tax cuts will be negligible, especially if, as he hopes, his recovery program succeeds in moving the country out of the recession by the end of this year.

Because of the President's "New Federalism" plan to shift from Washington to the States and city governments the responsibility for funding a large part of welfare, transportation and education costs, the Democrats foresee state and local authorities being forced to take away with increased taxes a substantial part of the relief the taxpayer will get from the 25 percent cut in federal income taxes.

Furthermore, the Democrats believe the Reagan administration will have to keep on increasing federal taxes to prevent the federal deficit from soaring over $100 billion annually because of loss of revenue caused by the tax cuts, the proposed 15 percent increase in defense spending, and the recession.

Under the strong and unanimous urging of his chief economic advisers, the President has, according to administration officials, reluctantly agreed to propose increases in Federal excise taxes on gasoline, cigarettes, whiskey and wine, but not beer. These proposed tax increases would apply to the 1983 fiscal year, which starts next Oct. 1. The President is expected to announce them in his State of the Union address on Tuesday.

Budget Director David Stockman reportedly urged doubling the excise taxes on gasoline, cigarettes and alcohol, but White House sources said while the existing eight-cents-a-package tax on cigarettes might be doubled, smaller increases would be sought for spirits and wine.

Stiff opposition is expected in Congress to proposed increases in the federal excise taxes on the driving, drinking and smoking items, and not only from Democrats. Two senior House Republicans, Jack F. Kemp, of New York, and Trent Lott of Mississippi, sent a blistering letter to Stockman charging that such tax increases would hurt "working men and women." Republican governors are also concerned because local taxes on alcohol and tobacco have been traditionally a source of state revenue. An increase in federal taxes on those items could reduce consumption and thus cause a loss of state revenues.

Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee, told the Hearst Newspapers that primarily because of the Reagan administration's budget cuts, 30 states have or will have raised taxes this year by a total of $2.5 billion.

"This will be the largest tax increase by those 30 states in ten years," he added. "A little over a third of the total, i.e. $860 million, will be in higher sales taxes. Seven hundred and fifty million dollars will represent motor fuel tax increases."

Asked if he thought the administration could cope with the projected huge deficits, now estimated to total over $100 billion annually in 1983-84, without continuing to increase federal taxes in those years, Rep. Jones replied:

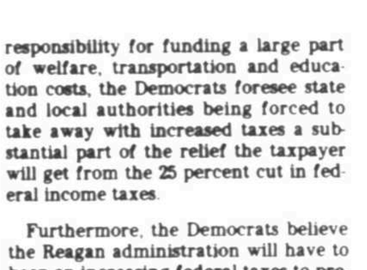

"No. If they are serious about wanting to balance the budget, or even bring it down substantially below $100 billion a year, they have got to raise revenues.

"We have tried to analyze what they are recommending insofar as it concerns essential government. They can wail against welfare, but after you boil all the rhetoric down and you pump in all the military expenditures they plan and what they say the cost of government operations will be, you still have a huge deficit.

"They will have to pay for it, either indirectly by high interest rates and inflation, or directly by increased taxes."

Since continued high interest rates and inflation could wreck the President's economic recovery program, the assumption is that increased federal taxes will be necessary to bring the budget deficit down to around the $50 billion figure administration officials talk about as the goal for 1984.

Year 2000 marks end of period, not beginning

People are, but that's expected. They're human.

A lot of lives are out of whack. Neither is that surprising; if people are whacky, then their lives should follow suit.

Even numbers are out of whack; now, that's startling. The science of numbers and numbering is a pure science; it's as simple as 1-2-3 if you understand it. It is sheer. But there's a discrepancy in there somewhere.

Yep and Nope.

Now, according to an anonymous expert, the year 2000, though seemingly the beginning of a period, really is just the end of an old one.

"The year 2000 will be the last year of the 10th decade of the 20th century — not the beginning of the 21st century as is commonly assumed," said the expert.

When most everybody else in 17 years and 341 days will be celebrating — or lamenting — the advent of a new century, you can be snickering. They'll be a year early and wrong, according to the expert who's supposed to know something about the imperfect Gregorian calendar.

You can be the smart aleck, and say, "Ah Ha! Dear friend, you're a year off." The year 2000 will be the end year of the 20th century. The year 2001 will signify the first year of the 21th century.

"Most of us look forward to a change in numbers, much like watching the nines turn over to zeros when you have driven your car 100,000 miles," says the calendar buff. "It is an event. But with the calendar, it signifies the end of the millennium — not the beginning."

If you're grateful for that bit of knowledge, you're welcome. If not, tish, tish. Either way, with the newfound enlightenment, you can dewhack part of your whacky thinking and at least get your numbers right.

But don't be too sure, now, about being right. Things change.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To The Editor:

I find this picture not only grotesque, an invasion of privacy and an insult to anyone who has any sense of decency. This kind of "news" we don't need. (One can't use "journalism" as journalism denotes professionalism and this is certainly not professional.)

How would you like to be the man's family?

Mrs. W.H. Robinson
Midland

Gruesome photo

To The Editor:

I found one photographic depiction used in The Reporter-Telgram's coverage of the Washington air disaster was at best, disgusting. I am referring to the front page photograph on your Thursday, Jan. 14 issue.

The picture was that of a lifeless male body floating in the icy waters of the Potomac. The very idea of Associated Press dispatching such a gruesome shot was disgusting enough. However, Reporter-Telegram's tasteless deed of actually printing it was utterly repulsive.

I do not believe such a sensationalistic approach was necessary. It is evident that there was no consideration for this man's family or friends. As a matter of fact, there was obviously no regard for any of your readers who may have been shocked or offended by viewing such a photograph. I was very careful to keep that issue inaccessible to my first grade son.

I am certain that Midland is not ready for such callous and lurid media coverge. I, for one, hope we never will be.

Susan Sexton
Midland

Disgusting photo

To The Editor:

The main topic of discussion at our office the past two days has been the tragic airplane crash in Washington, D.C. The general concensus among us was that the photo which appeared on the front page of the Jan. 14th edition of The Midland Reporter-Telegram was absolutely disgusting. The photo was of an unidentified victim of the crash whose body had not yet been recovered from the Potomac River.

It is evident that the media will print anything in order to attract attention. Mr. Editor, suppose that was a picture of your son lying in those icy waters. We are certain that under those circumstances such an inhumane photo would not have been printed. Somewhere there is a mother, wife or child who will forever have to live with the nightmare of seeing the death of their loved one turned into a mockery of all that is sacred and just in this world.

If it was your intention to stir emotions by printing such a photograph, then you may be certain your wish came true. We have come to the conclusion that you either have no heart, you enjoy preying on the grief and loss of other people, or you place no value whatsoever on human life.

When the time comes, may we expect to see a front-page photo of your dead mother, father, wife or child?

Judy Shephard
Midland

Accountability?

To The Editor:

"FREEDOM OF THE PRESS" — this has become little more than an excuse for the media to invade my privacy. I'd like to address the other side of this issue — ACCOUNTABILITY. Your right also includes responsibilities!

I was personally appalled and am publicly outraged that your newspaper would print such a picture as appeared on the front page of Jan. 14, 1982. You showed a picture — obviously recognizable — of a man who died in the plane crash in the Potomac. You used your right to print — now, please, you must account for it. How could you possibly explain to the wife, parent, or child of this crash victim if you were asked why you disgraced their deceased loved one in this manner? How can you justify this gross injustice?

You have lowered this newspaper to sensationalism and repulsive reporting. I am so tired of the media purporting to entertain and inform me with morbidity.

The family of this dead man also has rights. They have been denied privacy in their grief. My heart breaks for them in this tragedy, but more because they have been put on public display. I am sorry that my newspaper thinks I want to see this. I apologize to his family for the cruel gawking of the curious.

Mr. Editor — if you can, please account for your indiscriminate publishing of that picture.

Mrs. Craig L. Johnson
Midland

EDITOR'S NOTE: You and other readers who have expressed views on this subject are correct: Freedom does include accountability; rights cannot be separated from responsibility.

Many of the events of life are not pleasant. Airplane crashes, soldiers wounded, dying or dead on the battlefield, My Lai, and the assassination of a president in a motorcade in Dallas are among them. Photographic coverage of such events expresses, in ways stories cannot, the tragedy and horror of them.

Most people probably would agree it would be inconceivable for the news media to cover a war without showing the results or to fail to show film or publish pictures of one of the most violent events in U.S. history — the assassination of John F. Kennedy. But other major news events are no different and we feel an obligation to report, in text and pictures, what is happening and what has happened.

Sometimes the picture is not a pretty one. On those occasions, decisions are not made lightly. While we believe the public wants and deserves complete coverage, even when it may illustrate the violent or tragic side of life, we have no intention of sensationalizing the news or emphasizing the morbid and have no respect for publications that do.

As evidence of that, we would point to how seldom during a year's time pictures that create controversy are published and the fact that, while the wire services provided many pictures of the plane crash tragedy, only one of this type appeared in The Reporter-Telegram.

We hope that indicates our lack of intent to sensationalize as well as a sense of accountability for what we do publish.

Thanks, Mr. Leahey

To The Editor:

The purpose of this letter is to commend to your attention, the aid provided by Mr. Bob Leahey of Denny's and his staff during my last trip to Midland on Jan. 6.

After having breakfast at Denny's on the corner of Midkiff and Highway 80 and leaving for work, I realized that I had lost my wallet and airline ticket. I checked back over my route, but nothing turned up. At this point, I thought everything was gone for good, including major credit cards, drivers and professional licenses, club membership cards, and cash. Needless to say, I was reasonably distressed.

Sometime later in the day, my office called me at the jobsite, (we are the architects for the new Sakowitz Store at Midland Park Mall) and asked me to contact Mr. Leahey, that he had my wallet. I did, and was extremely happy to learn that everything was completely intact, including all cards, cash and airline ticket. Further, Mr. Leahey would not consider a reward of any kind.

As a result of his honesty and efforts on my behalf, I have a very high opinion of him, the quality of the staff at Denny's and an appreciation of the good people of Midland.

Thanks community

To The Editor:

What didn't get done in '81 I will do in '82 has been my approach to the new year, therefore:

On behalf of the Midland Branch American Association of University Women I wish to start 1982 by thanking all of the mother's, father's and children who attended the 1981 Lunch With Santa. All proceeds from this event are used locally for our education projects.

Without the support of the community there would be no awards and scholarships.

A thank you also to anyone who gave LWS the necessary boost to make it a great success.

Strengthen military

To The Editor:

Did you read about it last month? You know some religious and pacifist leaders in California and Minnesota appealed for holiday prayers and other actions to end the nuclear arms race. That's not ncessarily bad.

People are thinking more and more about nuclear power and what a nuclear war would mean. There is no doubt about it, it would be something fearful and horrible. But some of these wishful thinkers are advocating a nuclear freeze issue in their respective states. In California they are seeking enough signatures to require a statewide referendum on whether the state should urge the president to propose to the Soviet Union a bilateral freeze on further development and deployment of nuclear weapons.

It seems many well intended people will never learn. You cannot make an agreement with the Soviets or the Red Chinese and expect them to abide by the agreement. If it is to their benefit they will keep an agreement, if not, they will not be bound by any agreement or treaty.

The Soviets have not kept a single treaty with the U.S. unless it was to their advantage to do so. Look at the records. They still plan to bury us; they still want what we have. They are encircling us to get all that we have. Do you think that the Soviets would agree to a nuclear freeze? On paper probably yes, in actuality, no.

Don't let your church leaders draw you into thinking that our enemies, the Soviets and Red Chinese, are going to be dissuaded from seeking American's overthow. Vote to strengthen America's weakened military postion!

To The Editor:

Today I was informed of something we should all be aware of that is going on in our fair city. It is called dog fighting. I'm sure most Midlanders do not even know about or probably have never witnessed such a cruel sport.

There is really little we can do except report such events to the sheriff's department urging they do something! If you have puppies or kittens for "give away," please be very careful who you give them to as these dog fighters train their fighting dogs on these small creatures. They need to get the taste of blood and this is their cheapest method, to take your unwanted puppies and kittens off your hands!

Let's be responsible pet owners, spay or neuter your animals. If you need to place an animal, be sure you know what kind of people you are turning your animals over to, as death in a humane way could possibly be much better than for a small creature to be torn apart by a fighting dog. Please care, the animals need you to protect them from evil people!

MGF Oil Corporation announced it has made an oil and natural gas discovery at its Vermilion Bay Northwest prospect in Iberia Parish, La. The well, the State Lease 1-6343, was drilled to a total depth of 13,530 feet then plugged back to 12,914 feet on the 1,007 acre lease block.

The well flowed at a rate of 480 barrels of oil per day and 1.94 MMCF of natural gas during a three hour test. Flowing tubing pressure was 7,940 pounds per square inch through a 10/16 inch choke. The zone was perforated between 12,496 and 12,511 feet in the Planulina Sand formation.

MIDLAND (SWN) — Parallel Petroleum Corporation has announced completion of two development oil and gas wells located four miles southwest of Coyanosa.

Frank S. Delay, president, said the two wells are located on Parallel's Coyanosa Prospect in Pecos County. The No. 2 McIlvain flowed on initial potential test at a rate of 83 barrels of oil and 56,000 cubic feet of gas per day through a 24/64-inch choke, tubing pressure 60 pounds per square inch. The No. 3 McIlvain flowed on initial potential test at a rate of 97 barrels of oil and 69,000 cubic feet of gas per day through a 14/64-inch choke, tubing pressure 300 pounds per square inch. Production is from the Delaware formation through perforations between 5200 and 5240 feet. Both wells are offsets to the previously announced No. 1 McIlvain which pumped on initial potential test at a rate of 63 barrels of oil and 40,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

HOUSTON — Moran Energy Inc., recently announced discovery of what the company believes is the first commercial gas well from the Arbuckle formation in the state of Arkansas.

The Reaper No. 1 well, located in White County, Arkansas, initially tested gas at the rate of 1.3 million cubic feet per day from perforations at a depth interval between 6,634 and 6,644 feet through a 1/4-inch choke.

The closest Arbuckle production is approximately 200 miles to the southwest in the Cumberland Field in Marshall County, Oklahoma. The nearest production is 22 miles west from the Spiro formation in the Quitman Field.

Moran is operator and has 50 percent interest in this discovery well. The company is currently negotiating a contract with a pipeline company to buy any gas produced. The well is less than one mile from an exixting pipeline and two miles from a pipeline now being laid. Moran also holds approximately 6,245 net acres in the area surrounding the well.

ABILENE — Harken Oil & Gas, Incorporated announced recently a discovery well drilled in Burke County, North Dakota. The well, Lostwood No. 1-11, flowed at a rate of 1,074 barrels of oil per day plus 300,000 cubic feet of gas per day on a drill stem test of the Mission Canyon Limestone formation from 6,168 feet to 6,233 feet through a 1/4-inch choke, with a shut-in pressure of 2,740 pounds per square inch. Total depth of the well was 6,801 feet.

The discovery well is approximately 15 miles north of Lostwood, North Dakota and is 5 miles north of Mission Canyon production in the Stanley Field. The prospect was drilled on a large sub-surface feature indicating the possibility of numerous locations that could be productive from several zones that had shows of oil and gas in the discovery well.

SHREVEPORT, La. (SWN) — Transcontinental Energy Corporation announced recntly the completion of an oil well which discovered a new "pool" in the Strawn 'B' formation in the Permian Basin portion of southeastern New Mexico.

The State No. 7-1 well located in Lea County, was completed flowing 700 barrels of oil and 300,000 cubic feet of gas per day at a depth of 11,400 feet. This well extended production north of four wells drilled in the Lovington prospect since the initial discovery well was completed in the Strawn reef formation in February 1980. Initial test rates of those wells varied from 150 to 1,320 barrels of oil per day.

The State No. 7-1 well encountered original reservoir pressure and is considered to have opened a new pool in the Strawn 'B' formation. The test was conducted through a 26/64-inch choke with 350 pounds of flowing tubing pressure. The well is expected to produce at the maximum allowable rate of 450 barrels of oil per day as set by the state of New Mexico. Blanks Energy Corporation of Midland, Texas is the operator.

DALLAS (SWN) — American Public Energy Company has successfully completed a fifth gas well at is Sonora prospect in Sutton County, Texas.

The Hull No. 5 was completed in the Canyon formation which is classified as a tight sand eligible for higher gas prices under the Natural Gas Policy Act. During testing, the well flowed 711 MCF of gas per day through a 12/64-inch choke with 460 pounds per square inch flowing pressure. The well was perforated in the Canyon formation at intervals between 5,731 and 5,985 feet. The Hull No. 5 was drilled to a total depth of 6,300 feet. The gas will be sold to El Paso Natural Gas Company at a current price of $5.70 per MCF.

American Public Energy Company completed the discovery well at the Sonora prospect in November, 1980, and drilled three additional gas producers there during 1981. At least one additional location will be drilled at the Sonora prospect.

••••

HOUSTON (SWN) — Gulf Oman Petroleum Limited, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Gulf Oil Corporation, in partnership with Quintana International, Ltd., and Occidental of Oman, Inc., has spudded its fifth well onshore Oman in the Suneinah concession.

The first four wells drilled included two dry holes and two gas discoveries.

The new well, the Suneinah No. 2X, has a projected depth of 14,000-15,000 feet and will explore for oil accumulations in the middle and lower Cretaceous formations.

Located in northern Oman, the well lies within a concession area of some 3,200,000 acres held jointly by Gulf, 35 percent; Quintana, 20 percent; and Occidental, 45 percent. Gulf is the operator and Sedco, Inc., is the drilling contractor.

DENVER - Presidio Oil Company of Denver has announced completion of a new oil and gas discovery in Haskell County, West Central Texas, drilled by the company's wholly owned subsidiary The Desana Corporation of Midland, Texas.

The discovery, No. 2-24 Flat Top Ranch, was completed flowing at a rate of 393 barrels of oil and 170,000 cubic feet of gas per day through a 20/64-inch choke, flowing tubing pressure 300 psi. Production is from Bend Conglomerate through perforations between 5,638 and 5,654 feet. The well produced no water. Oil is 42.6 gravity.

An application has been filed with the Texas Railroad Commission for permission to initially produce the well under a discovery allowable, which the company said is roughly 120 barrels per day.

The well, nine miles northwest of the town of Stamford in section 24, H&TC Survey, is located on a portion of a 34,000-acre lease operated by the Presidio subsidiary. Additional leases covering 1,040 acres offsetting the discovery have been acquired by the company.

FORT WORTH — Originala Petroleum Corporation recently announced a gas discovery in Palo Pinto County, Texas. The Padgett Well No. 7 located two miles east of Palo Pinto, section 35, block 1, T&P survey, A-748 has been completed as a conglomerate gas discovery from perforations at 4315-4339 feet. While on test, the well flowed at a rate of 1,272 MCFD. Flowing tubing pressure was 1,574 pounds per square inch through a 14/64 inch choke. Calculated absolute open flow potential was 6,700 MCFD.

OIL INDUSTRY NOTES

Texas Oil & Gas Corp. (TXO) recently reported the best quarter in the company's history. Net income for the three months ended November 30, 1981, increased 34 percent to a new record of $54,179,000, or 57 cents per share, from the $40,365,000, or 42 cents per share, earned in the first quarter of fiscal 1981. First quarter revenues increased 26 percent to $434,363,000 from $344,137,000.

William L. Hutchison, the comapny's chairman and chief executive officer, attributed the performance to several factors including record first quarter gas gathering delivery volumes, which averaged 1,029,460 thousand cubic feet daily, up 12 percent over fiscal 1981's first quarter total of 916,460 thousand cubic feet daily; high production levels of company-owned natural gas, crude oil and condensate; and higher prices. FWA Drilling Co. Inc., TXO's wholly owned contract driling subsidiary, also had a strong first quarter.

TXO reported assets totaling $2,189,258,000 as of Nov. 30.

HOUSTON — Moran Energy Inc.,recently announced that on January 1, 1982 its ownership interest in Moran Drilling Limited Partnership increased from 31.39 percent to 54.26 percent in accordance with the governing Partnership agreement. This occurred because limited partners have received cash distributions and allocation of certain tax benefits in a predetermined amount.

The Partnership was formed in September 1978 to own and operate two deep drilling land rigs and an offshore jackup drilling rig. During 1981, the Partnership generated $18 million of revenues.

Employers reminded to post OSHA forms

DALLAS — Employers with 11 or more employees are reminded by the Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) to post from February 1 to March 1 the total number of job-related injuries and illnesses that occurred during 1981.

To fulfill the requirement, employers need to post the last page or righthand portion of the OSHA Form 200, "Log and Summary of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses." The form must be posted in areas where notices to employees are customarily posted.

The OSHA form 200 includes information on the type of injury or illness, its extent, and outcome. This information serves several functions in carrying out the Occupational Safety and Health Act: (1) aids compliance safety and health officers in conducting inspections and investigations; (2) provides a basis for a statistical program which produces reliable injury and illness incidence rates; and (3) aids employers and employees in identifying factors that cause injuries and illnesses in the workplace.

Establishments having no injuries and illnesses during 1981 should enter zeros on the total line and post the form. The person responsible for preparing the annual summary must certify that the totals are cor rect and sign the form.

Firms must also notify employees who move from worksite to worksite, such as construction workers and employees who do not report to any fixed establishment on a regular basis. Employers must give a copy of the summary to any of these employees who are on the payroll during February.

Elmployers with 10 or fewer employees are exempt from OSHA recordkeeping and posting requirements. They are also exempt from other OSHA recordkeeping rules, unless they are selected by the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics for a statistical survey or are subject to certain state recordkeeping regulations. However, all employers are required to report within 48 hours to the nearest OSHA office all accidents which result in one or more fatalities or in hospitalization of five or more employees.

Copies of the OSHA Form 200 are available from the OSHA Publications Office, Third St. and Constitution Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C. 20210, telephone (202) 523-6138.

Efforts being made to overhaul Texas condominium laws

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Renewed efforts are being made to overhaul Texas' laws on condominiums, with representatives of the condominium insudtry urging a House subcommittee to resubmit reforms which failed to pass in 1981.

Dallas realtor Sharon Reuler told the Business and Industry committee panel the reforms proposed last year shouldn't be abandoned, and Dallas attorney Martin Cude Jr., blamed a lack of communication among realtors, title agents, insurance compannies and other industry representatives for failure of the bill.

Both urged that such mattters as time sharing and insurance provisions, along with the basic definition of condominium, be adressed.

Suzann G. Butler and Delores McGee, members of a San Antonio management firm, said the legisilation also should govern the development of condominiums, from the start up to the sale of the final units.

Rep. Steve Wolens, D-Dallas, who chairs the subcommittee, said the panel wants to hear additional testimony on changes, and urged that interested parters submit written comments to be considered at later meetings.

The panel also includes Reps. Buzz Robnett, R-Lubbock, and Tom Delay, R-Sugarland.

Fifty members of the Texas Credit Union League Employees Credit Union have recieved special telephones to allow them to take part in a pilot program using telephones to order opayment of personla bills.

William J. Hamilton, vice president of TCUL Services, Inc., reports the credit union is one of six institutions (including another credit union and four banks) participating in the program organized by Chase Manhattan Bank.

The first transactions were carried out Jan. 13, Hamilton says. The program is to continue through March.

Those participating use the telephone as an input terminal record information on which bills are to be paid, and when, Hamilton explains.

Cost of the system to the consumer is $1 per month, plus $2.25 per transmission — with as many as 20 bills being paid with one transmission, he reports.

"That would require $4 just for postage," Hamilton says.

State Board of Insurance decided to continue current worker's compensation rates in effect, folowing a staff report which concluded that rates should be lowered to an average of 0.2 percent.

SBI members also rejected a proposal to eliminate the $300 weekly payroll limitation used in the rating formula, despite arguments by proponents that most states have moved already to remove such payroll limits.

Both the National Council on Compensation Insurance and the Texas Classification and Dating Committee have urged SBI to eliminate the $300 limit; the proposal has been opposed by some employers and business groups.

SBI staff members have been instructed to study whether the limit should continue in effect, be removed, or be changed to a higher figure — such as $500.

The Governor's Task Force on Trust and Asset Management hs established three subcommittee to study issures related to how the State manages it money.

Chairman Don Houseman, Dallas, appointed Alton Bowen, Bryan, to head a panel on asset management practices of the Treasury Department and small State agencies, with Joe Kilgore, Austin, to head a panel on practices of the retiremet systems and educational funds.

The task force also recieved a report from Danny Burger, executive director of he Minicipal Advisory Council of Texas, regarding pledging requirements — with Burger noting that Texas law requires collaterization of government deposits.

SBI is continuing to work on a simplified commercial auto policy for Texas, with the effort to take in business, trucker's and garage policies.

Auto insurance section director Donald O'Brien and representatives of the Texas Auto Insurance Services Office are trying to work out language for the policy, with O'Brien reporting that the major problem seems to be with endorsemets.

However, the new policy is expected to reduced the number of required endorcements by 40 percent, insurance industry officials report.

Interest rate predictions don't square with market

By DAVID W. DEITCH
Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Predictions that interest rates will spiral toward new peaks later this year as the economy recovers and Treasury borrowing crowds out private investment don't square with the interest rate futures market, says John W. Schulz of Brean Murray, Foster Securities. Schulz points out that 90-day Treasury bill contracts for delivery at quarterly intervals through March 1983 are quoted at prices reflecting discounts ranging no higher than 13.9 percent, compared with last year's peak of nearly 17 percent. Evidently the futures market folks are counting on flattening interest rates.

••••

Inflation may be heading down but the "real" rate of interest – adjusted for inflation – is still running high. That's one of the biggest arguments against looking for speculative gains in existing assets such as real estate and gold, which don't earn money unless you sell them.

••••

The top five mutual fund performers of 1981, according to Standard & Poor, whose 500 stock index fell 9.7 percent, were: Merrill Lynch Pacific, up 35.3 percent; Lindner Fund, up 31.7 percent; Delta Trend, up 15.6 percent; Sequoia Fund, up 15.5 percent; and Magna Fund, up 15.1 percent.

••••

After warning correctly that Ford would announce a dividend cut, Standard & Poor is raising caution flags in advance of the February General Motors dividend meeting. But the investment advisory service still likes both stocks, figuring that the next peak year will show a huge rebound in earnings.

••••

If you want to check the earnings record on your Social Security account, get form SSA-7004 from your local Social Security office. Six weeks after filing, you should get an answer. A warning on the form alerts you that if you wait three years, three months and 15 days to request a correction after an error is discovered, a change may not be possible. So do it now, and follow through if necessary.

••••

Corporate executives are losing confidence in the economy, Dun & Bradstreet reports. At only one other time in the last decade, 1975, have expectations plummeted so sharply, D&B said in its measurement of first-quarter 1982. Manufacturers of non-durable goods seem most pesimistic of all.

••••

The extent of the decline in industrial production this month could be most important in guaging the extent of the recession, analysts say. Industrial output is now within hailing distance of the 1980 recession low, and a fall below that would be aa serious sign of weakness in the economy. The 1981 industrial peak in the U.S. and other leading western industrial nations either barely exceeded or failed top reach 1980 productioon levels, indicating that the malaise is world-wide.

Production shop, office expansion completed

ODESSA — Production shop and office expansions have recently been completed at Perry Gas Processor's Pearl Street location in Odessa. Don Barlow, president of Processors (a subsidiary of Perry Gas Companies, Inc.) stated, "We've expanded our production capacity by nearly 40 percent. I am pleased that Perry is continuing to grow and keep pace with the growth in the oil and gas industry."

Expanded Quality Control and Production Control offices, as well as change room and lunchroom facilities for employees, were part of the 21,000 square foot shop expansion project. A 7,200 square feet expansion of Processors' group administration office building provides additional engineering support for the operations.

Perry Gas Companies, Inc. a subsidiary of Parker Drilling Company, continues to serve the U.S. and International markets with gas processing and pipeline equipment and technology.
