O.J. embarrassments

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Detective Mark Fuhrman (allegedly) is a racist. Ronald Shipp (allegedly) sat in a Jacuzzi with a blonde who wasn't his wife. Rosa Lopez (allegedly) discussed selling her story for $5,000. These witnesses in the O.J. Simpson murder case, not on trial for anything, had to answer such accusations in a public courtroom, on national television, even though the claims were strongly denied and based on frayed evidence. It seems the only one presumed innocent is Simpson. Legal experts say hammering witnesses with unsupported allegations justice is a time-honored tradition among lawyers and is considered acceptable behavior. 7A

AUSTIN (AP) — One ticket bought in West Texas correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $4 million. The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 3, 9, 17, 23, 36 and 46. It was not immediately verified where in West Texas the winning ticket was sold. Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $4 million.

Iraq confirms prisoner report

U.S. soldiers' whereabouts are unknown

■ Saddam's No. 2 man says borders must be respected but "nothing much will happen' to prisoners.

Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — The No. 2 official in Saddam Hussein's regime acknowledged Saturday that Iraq was holding two Americans who crossed the border from Kuwait but said "nothing much" will happen to them.

The two men, who Defense Secretary William Perry said were servicing aircraft in Kuwait, were arrested Monday night by Iraqi police. Their whereabouts and condition were unknown, despite intensive diplomatic efforts to track them down.

In the first official Iraqi comment on their disappearance, Vice President Taha Yassin Ramadan told Associated Press Television: "The borders must have some respect. There are rules and laws. Surely it will be taken into consideration in dealing with any person that does not respect the laws of the country."

Ramadan did not say where the Americans are being held or whether they would be put on trial, but he said: "Nothing much will happen to them."

He also hinted at possible linkage to Baghdad's drive to get the U.N. Security Council to lift crippling trade sanctions imposed after Saddam invaded Kuwait in August 1990.

"I think those two, you're not supposed to give them more attention than the 20 million Iraqis that the Amer-

After being considered dead by the U.S. Social Security Administration for about eight years, Karen Kreger, of Big Spring, is preparing to file a $5 million lawsuit against the SSA in hopes of regaining her identity.

Woman seeks compensation for loss of identity

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Imagine being pronounced dead by the U.S. Social Security Administration — being booted out of school, denied jobs and loans and threatened with arrest because of a Social Security number that belongs to a dead person.

This is what a Big Spring woman has been living with since 1985 when she turned 18 and her Social Security number suddenly became that of a dead woman with her name — at least in the "eyes" of computer systems across the country.

During this time, Karen Kreger married a man who received a government pension. He talked her out of making trouble with the government and they existed on his identity and credit for about five years, Ms. Kreger said.

Since the breakup of that marriage, Ms. Kreger has been waging a campaign to regain her rightful identity. But each new piece of evidence that is uncovered points more toward the macabre and fantastic than to something as mundane as a simple computer error, explained R. Scott Ferguson, an attorney with a Lubbock-based firm.

Ferguson will be filing a $5 million lawsuit against the U.S. government on behalf of Ms. Kreger, he said. The lawsuit will probably be filed in Lubbock U.S. district court next week, he said.

"This is by far the most bizarre case I've ever worked on," Ferguson said. "If we're going to talk about this, we've got to do it now, because once we

Jordan ends 17-month hiatus from basketball

DEERFIELD, Ill. (AP) — "I'm back."

With those two words, Michael Jordan ended his 17-month hiatus from basketball, the sport he once ruled. He is returning, ending more than a week of speculation, wild rumors and media-mobbed practices for the Chicago Bulls.

"He walked in this morning, shook my hand and said, 'It's a done deal,'" Bulls coach Phil Jackson said Saturday.

Jordan will make his return today against the Pacers at Indiana in a nationally televised game.

Terms of the deal were not revealed. Jordan, 32, had this year and next left on his previous contract that called for about $4 million annually.

But all the Bulls really needed to know was that No. 23, perhaps the most popular and well-known athlete in the world — certainly one of the most well-paid, with a line of endorsements that brings in a reported $30 million a year — was going to rejoin them.

"I think after having him on the floor tomorrow, I'll be able to describe it ... maybe I won't be able to describe it,"

Sinn Fein leader's visit to U.S. angers Britons, but also raises hopes of peace

■ Prime Minister John Major's office confirms government's draft agenda for possible talks.

LONDON (AP) — Encouraged by U.S. backing for its calls for IRA disarmament, Britain has sent the IRA-supporting Sinn Fein party a draft agenda for possible ministerial-level talks on Northern Ireland.

A week that began with British anger as Sinn Fein made its White House debut ended with British satisfaction at growing international pressure on the Irish Republican Army to lay down its arms.

Prime Minister John Major's office confirmed Saturday the government has sent Sinn Fein a draft agenda for possible talks that would be the first at the ministerial level with the IRA's political allies.

"The ball is firmly in their court," a spokesman for Major said, on customary condition of anonymity. "We are saying, if and when a minister were to join talks, this is the sort of agenda we visualize."

The spokesman said that despite Sinn Fein president Gerry Adams' comments that his party is prepared to discuss "all relevant issues," the government has "had no firm assurance yet" that Sinn Fein is prepared to talk about destroying the IRA's large arsenal.

But he welcomed President Clinton's call Friday for all gunmen to surrender their weapons, and said Major's office "will have more to say" after the two leaders talk by telephone, which they were to do sometime Saturday. He did not say when draft agenda was sent to Sinn Fein.

The IRA's Sept. 1 cease-fire ended its 24-year campaign of violence against British rule in Northern Ireland. But the outlawed group did not give up any weapons, a British condition for Sinn Fein's participation in all-party talks on Northern Ireland's future.

During his buoyant visit to Washington and New York, Adams met Clinton for the first time, dined with the Irish-American elite, raised hundreds of thousands of dollars for Sinn Fein and attended a high-spirited Irish party at the White House. He also stuck to the line that while Sinn Fein supports dearmament by all sides, it has no control over IRA arms.

The Anglo-American relationship has been strained by Clinton's decision to meet with Adams and to allow Sinn Fein to raise funds without demanding that the IRA first give ground on the arms issue.

"What's going on in Washington at the moment stinks," the left-wing Guardian newspaper declared Saturday in an editorial.

"The east coast Irish political circus on and around St. Patrick's Day is posturing, tribal, self-indulgent and unhelpful," it said, urging American politicians to give Adams "a hard time as well as a handshake."

Northern Ireland's mainstream Protestant parties, which boycotted St. Patrick's Day festivities at the White House because Adams was attending, were also angered by talk of possible ministerial contacts with Sinn Fein.

"It's been made very, very, very clear that Sinn Fein-IRA are not going to give up those weapons until they achieve their political demands," said Ken Maginnis, security spokesman for the Ulster Unionist party, which gets the bulk of Protestant votes in Northern Ireland.

Zedillo takes big gamble with his unpopular, severe economic plan

■ Business, labor, public, even members of own party are angry; social tensions rise.

Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — President Ernesto Zedillo is taking a big gamble with his new austerity plan.

He's betting that the measures, which include a 50 percent sales tax hike, will stabilize the economy before they could spark widespread unrest.

But business, labor, the public, and even politicians from his own party are already angry at the severe measures, and social tensions are rising. More protests like those that took place last week are likely.

"Ernesto Zedillo, his closest collaborators and the lawmakers who only represent the president ... could be making another mistake," columnist Daniel Cazes warned Saturday in the Mexico City daily La Jornada.

"Or they could be tricking us once again," he added, referring to government assurances about the economy before the peso began its slide in December, plunging the country into crisis.

The plan, unveiled Mar. 9, calls for a 50 percent increase in the sales tax, substantial hikes in the prices of gasoline and electricity, and a 10 percent limit on how much the minimum wage can rise — even though the government forecasts inflation this year of 42 percent.

Zedillo has conceded the plan would be exceedingly painful for his 90 million compatriots. But he insists the tough measures are necessary to stabilize the economy, which has been in chaos since Dec. 20.

"The social unrest is caused by the economic crisis, but if we do not apply these measures, the social costs will be much worse," he told The Associated Press in an interview Friday.

His message hasn't convinced many. The ruling party-dominated Congress, which usually follows the president, held an extraordinary five minutes of silence Friday to mark the "tragedy" of the economic debacle.

Only after 10 hours of rancorous debate did the Chamber of Deputies approve the austerity plan late Friday.

While the deputies' vote was 290-173, there was unprecedented dissent from within the Institutional Revolutionary Party, known as the PRI, which has governed Mexico since the 1920s.

The Senate on Saturday voted 87-30 to accept the plan.

Opposition lawmakers allied with some PRI members denounced the new 15 percent sales tax. Congressman Alejandro Rojas Duran-Diaz took an unprecedented step for a PRI lawmaker — he joined the opposition in voting against the plan.

A PRI senator, Layda Elena Sansores San Roman, voted against the plan Saturday evening.

"If the immense majority opposes this recipe, it was because ... they weren't able to convince the people of its curative effects," she said.

"Not only should (the sales tax) not go up, it should go down," said Rodrigo de Goicochea of the National Manufacturing Industry Chamber in comments carried in Saturday newspapers.

Numerous street protests against the plan also erupted over the past week. A group calling itself El Barzon, or "The Yoke," blocked some 60 banks throughout Mexico to protest high interest rates.

Hundreds of shouting protesters nearly surrounded Zedillo's bus Friday in Durango, 470 miles northwest of Mexico City, where the president went to drum up support for the plan.

Last day of winter to hit 80s

Staff Report

Sunny skies and higher temperatures are to reign over Midland today, the eve of spring's official entry into the year and the last day of winter.

Today's forecast calls for a high in the upper 80s and southwesterly winds at 10 to 20 mph and gusty, according to a forecaster at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight calls for mostly clear skies and a low in the upper 40s.

Monday is to be mostly sunny with a high near 80.

After an overnight low of 47, Saturday's high reached 81, compared to the record high for that date of 86 set in 1978. The record low was 23 set in 1938.

State

Texas was sunny and mild Saturday with light southerly breezes. However, gusts from the southwest were clocked at 26 miles an hour in Lubbock.

High temperatures were mostly in the 70s and 80s with readings ranging at 3 p.m. from 69 degrees at Guadalupe Pass in the West Texas mountains to 84 at McAllen and Reese Air Force Base near Lubbock.

Only a few high clouds were reported as high pressure maintained control over Texas.

The North Texas forecast is for partly cloudy skies with a slight chance of thunderstorms through Monday. Highs in the upper 80s today and around 80 on Monday. Lows in the upper 50s tonight and lower 50s Monday night. sunshine allowed temperatures to rise into the upper 70s to low 80s in many locations. Winds were light and variable.

South Texas is expected to have continued fair skies through Monday. Highs today in the low to mid 80s and lows in the 50s. Monday will remain warm with highs in the 70s and 80s and lows in the 50s.

Nation

Snow and heavy rain pelted the Pacific Northwest Saturday as thunderstorms in the Southeast diverted the space shuttle Endeavour's landing to California's Mojave Desert.

Another series of storms was heading toward waterlogged northern California. No significant new flooding was expected but the ground was already saturated in spots from earlier high water and runoff.

Rainfall was heaviest along the southern Oregon coast and northern California's midsection, with more than 1 inch recorded at Hoopa and Slate Creek in California, and in Brookings, Ore.

Several inches of snow fell in the Oregon Cascades and the Sierra Nevada, where winds gusted to 75 mph. The highest gust was atop Slide Mountain west of Reno, Nev., where winds were clocked at 82 mph.

TALE: 3-legged cat returns to owner

she found out through a Reporter-Telegram article that the cat was safe and healthy in Midland.

It was in late May 1993 when Mrs. Worley, a 76-year-old widow, had brought the cat with her from Paducah on a visit to her son, Dr. Johnny Worley. During her stay, the cat slipped out an open door.

For most of the past two years the cat has been cared for by Wanda Shaw and her neighbors in the 2100 block of North H Street, which is about 1 1/2 miles east of where Mrs. Worley's son used to live.

The cat's caretakers named her Alley, since the first time they saw her she was wandering in the H Street alley.

Mrs. Shaw, who is president of Animal Outreach Association — which seeks to adopt out homeless pets — placed classified advertisements in the newspaper in search of the cat's owner. Similarly, Mrs. Worley had advertised for her missing three-legged cat. Neither plea produced immediate responses.

The cat — which lost her leg and tail in 1987 after climbing underneath a car hood during a storm — apparently is not handicapped in speed and climbing ability because of the missing limb.

Late last year, Mrs. Shaw placed Alley in the care of her retired neighbors, Walton and Bobbie Schuyler. Schuyler built a carpeted, copper-roofed house for the neighborhood pet, which was the first cat they had ever cared for.

At noon Saturday, Mrs. Worley and her son picked up Alley from the Schuylers.

Mrs. Worley said she told the Schuylers that if the cat "wasn't satisfied, I'd let them have her back. I'll bring her back if she doesn't adjust.

When Alley gets back to Paducah, she will be joined by her 9-year-old daughter, Baby Kitty, and about 20 stray cats that Mrs. Worley feeds.

BALL: Jordan returns to sport he once dominated

(From 1A)

Jackson said. "But once we see him out there in that red uniform playing for the Chicago Bulls, that'll be the emotional moment we've looked for and we've all waited for."

To many, Jordan was a god in long basketball shorts. His jersey was retired Nov. 1, and a statue of him unveiled in front of the United Center — across the street from the old Chicago Stadium, where the thrills he provided included a run of three NBA titles.

Jordan's two words Saturday came in a statement released by agent David Falk. After practicing with the Bulls, Jordan sped out of the parking lot in his Corvette to a rousing ovation from hundreds of fans perched above a fence across the driveway from the Berto Center.

The Bulls then announced Jordan's return with a short release.

"Michael Jordan today informed the Chicago Bulls that he is ending his retirement from professional basketball," it said. "He will make his return to the Bulls lineup tomorrow when the Bulls face the Indiana Pacers."

Rookie Dickey Simpkins was placed on the injured list to clear a roster spot

Bulls owners Jerry Reinsdorf, reached by phone in Arizona, said Saturday:

"Obviously I'm pleased that he's coming back, how could anyone not be pleased? He's back playing the sport he's best at. As long as it's something he wants to do, I'll support whatever he wants to do and right now he wants to play basketball.

"I thought when he retired that he would never play again. As late as three weeks ago, I thought he would never play again. Maybe the first time I had any question was when he left the White Sox camp."

'Michael Jordan today informed the Chicago Bulls that he is ending his retirement from professional basketball.'

—Chicago Bulls, press release

Jordan cut short his attempt at a baseball career earlier this month, pulling out because he did not want to be caught in the middle of the game's labor problems.

Reinsdorf said he had talked with Jordan "several times about it, if it was something that made sense for him to do. He made his decision yesterday."

Reinsdorf claimed, however, that a new contract was not part of the discussions.

"There were no contract negotiations. I can't change his contract because of the moratorium," Reinsdorf said.

Clubs are currently banned from negotiating with players until a new league-wide collective bargaining agreement is in place.

Then what was the holdup in getting Jordan back on the floor?

"He decided he wanted to play. That was the only thing. He was going to take the time he needed to take to see if he wanted to play again," Reinsdorf said.

Jackson said he didn't know how much Jordan would play today. Jordan has not played in an NBA game since June 20, 1993, when he helped the Bulls beat Phoenix in Game 6 for their third straight title.

"He knows he's going to be tired in this kind of contest, where he hasn't played a 48-minute game," Jackson said. "The only way he can prepare for it is game conditioning. So we'll try to save him for six-, seven-minute bursts to start with and see how his conditioning is right away."

Jordan isn't out of shape. But he'll need to get his wind and legs back on a basketball court.

"A lot of us are excited," Bulls center Bill Wennington said. "We hoped he would do it last year but didn't have the opportunity. It'll be neat. There will be some adjustments, but Michael is talented and he already knows the offense. He brings everyone's level up."

After the third championship, Jordan stunned the NBA when he stepped away a month before the start of the 1993-94 season, saying he had little left to accomplish in the game.

His high-leaping, creative, incomparable style made him a worldwide figure, both as a performer and a pitchman.

Kids dribbling basketballs on playgrounds everywhere wanted "To Be Like Mike," a ferocious, tongue-wagging competitor who could not be guarded but who was, at the same time, charming with a big smile.

Jordan's basketball career launched a lucrative string of endorsements for shoes, food, sports drinks, automobiles and underwear that made his name known from North Carolina to Chicago to Japan to Paris.

Jordan also had his troubles.

He'd been shadowed by gambling allegations. Then, in August 1993, his father was found slain in North Carolina.

Months later, he launched an improbable baseball career. He played Double-A last season with Birmingham, hitting .202, but also helping the team attract huge crowds. He even bought the team a new bus for the long and tiring road trips.

During his nine-year career with the Bulls, Jordan was the NBA's most valuable player in 1988, 1991 and 1992 and became the first player to win the MVP Award in the NBA Finals three straight seasons.

Jordan won seven straight league scoring championships and had a career scoring average of 32.3 points, the league's best ever. His 41-point average against Phoenix in the 1993 Finals was the highest in NBA history. His 63-point spree against the Boston Celtics in the 1986 playoffs is a single-game NBA playoff record.

Jordan also earned gold medals in the Olympics in 1984 and 1992.

Now, he's back. The Bulls have 17 regular-season games remaining.

"I hoped for it," Jackson said of Jordan's return. "I never thought it would be an actuality. It seems like he hasn't missed a beat."

When Jordan left, the Bulls had won three straight NBA championships. Without him, they were eliminated in the second round of the playoffs last year. This season, they are only three games above .500.

PRISONERS: Iraq admits holding U.S. soldiers

ican administration is working to kill them by starving them to death and making them sick," he said.

The United States has blocked efforts in the Security Council by Russia and France to consider an easing of the oil embargo, which has wrecked Iraq's economy and caused hardship for the Iraqi people.

The two Americans were arrested after they crossed into Iraq from Kuwait to visit friends in a Danish engineering unit attached to the U.N. observer mission, U.N. officials said. The U.N. mission, based in the Iraqi sector of the divided border port of Umm Qasr, was established after the 1991 Gulf War.

In Washington, a Clinton administration official said the United States has contacted the Iraqi government through Polish diplomats, who handle American interests in Baghdad. The United States does not have diplomatic relations with Iraq.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, had no comment on whether the Iraqis had made any response. In Warsaw, Foreign Ministry spokesman Krzysztof Sliwinski said he had not received any information from Baghdad.

Defense Secretary William Perry, visiting Saudi Arabia, said the men were employed by McDonnell Douglas Corp. and are in no danger. U.S. officials declined to name the men, citing privacy laws.

Kathy Daliberti of Jacksonville, Fla., told The Florida Times-Union newspaper that one of the men is her 41-year-old husband, David.

"I'm just about at my wit's end, not knowing if he's all right and how they're treating him," she was quoted as saying Friday.

Joyce McCall, a friend who said she had been asked by Mrs. Daliberti to speak for the family, said the State Department contacted them Saturday.

"They are doing everything they can with the Red Cross and the U.N. and other diplomatic intermediaries," McCall said.

She said, however, that Daliberti works for Kay and Associates of Chicago, which also does aircraft maintenance work. She did not know if he was working under contract to McDonnell Douglas.

MEET: Midland to hold swimming competition

(From 1A)

Swendig said this meet will serve as a stepping-stone for those who want to take their act to the next level where Olympic dreams are made.

"There are virtually no U.S. swimmers that make it to the Olympic team without coming through this meet," Swendig said. "Several of the kids will be on the next two Olympic teams (1996 and 2000)."

College scouts, as well as national team coaches, will have their stopwatches out and ready. Numerous recruiters on all levels will also be here to evaluate the talent. Knowing this, it is good that the Mabee center pool was built for speed. In fact, breaking records could be commonplace during the five-day event.

"It was specifically built for this meet," Swendig said. "This will be the fastest meet they'll have held Junior Nationals in. I don't think there are any pools faster anywhere."

What meet organizers hope to do this week — and during the week of the Phillips 66 National Diving Championships — is to make a good enough impression so that Midland will be able to hold the event on a rotational basis. A meet of this magnitude is usually held in natatoriums and university pools.

"We hope we do a good enough job that we get in a rotation and it opens doors to the other competitions," Swendig said. "They (U.S. Swimming) have never had a meet in a place owned by a swim club."

The opportunity to see tomorrow's future greats starts Tuesday with the 1,000-yard freestyle (timed final) for boys and girls starting at 4 p.m. Beginning Wednesday, the meet hits full throttle with four or five events a day. Preliminaries take place at 9:30 a.m.; finals will begin at 6 p.m.

Overall, there will be 34 events ranging in distance from 50 yards to 1,650 yards.

Qualifying for the meet means the swimmers are top-notch. For a swimmer to dominate here is something special.

"If you see a kid evolve and win two or three events ... then they have done something extraordinary," Swendig said.

IDENTITY: Woman files lawsuit against Social Security

file, we're going to have to shut up," he said.

Ms. Kreger's Michigan birth certificate indicates she was born Sept. 27, 1967, to Stewart Kreger and Eileen Marie Tierney.

She used this and other documents in her battles with Social Security in an attempt to prove that she is who she says she is. But Social Security officials continued finding her date of death as February 1985, even though no death certificate or even the date of her death has been produced.

During her struggles with bureaucracies, it became apparent to government officials that this person had, before her "death," been receiving monthly checks from the Social Security Administration — leading some to think they were dealing with fraud.

"At one time they were talking about deporting me," Ms. Kreger said. "And I said: 'Deport me! To where?!'"

After hiring Ferguson, she began requesting more and more government documents under the federal Freedom of Information Act. Among other bits of information, she found computer lists of Social Security checks in her name mailed to her parents for several years after the state of Michigan had removed the then 14-year-old Ms. Kreger from an allegedly abusive family, according to documents in Ms. Kreger's possession.

A Permian Basin SSA official said they could not discuss an individual's case, and therefore could not comment on the Kreger case.

The SSA spokeswoman said that there are 130 million Americans with active SSA files. "It is within the realm of possibility that a mistake could be made," she said.

There is extensive documentation of her time as a ward of the state and of Social Security Administration queries determining that fraud had indeed occurred during the time she was away from her family, yet the family was still receiving funds for her care, she said.

From reams of paper, Ms. Kreger produced a copy of form SSA-L732 that is used to determine if Social Security fraud is taking place. The form records answers from a Michigan child-welfare official, regarding who was responsible for the girl's care during the time payments were being made to the parents.

Neither Ferguson nor Ms. Kreger have been able to determine why the SSA had been paying her working parents for the care of a healthy child. A child receiving SSA money for his or her care would have to be disabled or would be the dependent of a disabled or retired parent, the local SSA spokeswoman said.

Then there is the problem presented by a certificate of baptism from the Church of St. Mary Magdalene in Detroit that showed Ms. Kreger's mother spelled her name Eiline Mary Tierney, whereas on the birth certificate, the name is spelled Eileen Marie Tierney.

When the story of her premature demise was first publicized by the Houston Chronicle in the late 1980s, Ms. Kreger said she received a letter from a woman claiming to be her sister. This phantom sibling writes from Colorado that her mother's actual name is Eileen Shirley Poirier, according to the correspondence.

Ms. Kreger said she has never met this woman who claims to be her sister.

The story is further muddled by memories of her father returning home from work on several occasions, having his family pack and leave at night. "We'd pack the suitcases, a couple of pots and pans, and boom — out the back door," she said.

The family would drive through the night, leaving a house full of furniture, and would start over in a new city in a new state, she said.

Ferguson is attempting to compile enough documentation to show that each time this occurred, Stewart Kreger would move from one high-level job with the government or government contractor to another. Ms. Kreger claims that at the time she was removed from the home at age 14, her father was working as a government employee level GS-13, which is a high-level, lucrative position.

Ferguson's efforts, however, have been partially blocked by federal confidentiality laws, he said.

When this matter goes to court, however, a federal judge will not rule without sufficient information and the evidence will be subpoenaed and the truth will come out, he said.

"There was a time when I would have been satisfied with the truth, and an apology," Ms. Kreger said.

Meanwhile, since publicity regarding her "death" first surfaced, SSA officials in another state gave Ms. Kreger a new Social Security number.

But when she tried to get a job using this card, Ms. Kreger was told to leave for trying to use the Social Security number that belonged to a 6-month-old girl, she said.

As one might expect, Ms. Kreger has been unable to receive student aid or credit with the new number, she said.

Ms. Kreger has had two other short-lived marriages and is raising four children. The children receive medical insurance through the government under the Social Security numbers of their fathers. Ms. Kreger has no insurance and provides for her children working part-time jobs.

Country celebrates as Spain sees first royal wedding in 89 years

SEVILLE, Spain (AP) — Princess Elena said "I do" inside a cathedral packed with royalty, and a roaring cry of "Long live the bride and groom!" rose from the ordinary thousands waiting outside as Spain celebrated its first royal wedding in 89 years Saturday.

"This is much better than the Pope's visit," said one well-wisher, 43-year-old homemaker Maria Dolores Espinosa, referring to John Paul II's 1993 stop in Seville. "It's much more joyful. We Sevillanos have gone all out for our princess, the prettiest in Spain."

The 31-year-old daughter of King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia exchanged vows with Jaime de Marichalar y Saenz de Tejada, a banker eight months her junior. The 90-minute Roman Catholic ceremony was orchestrated to show off the proud position the restored Bourbon monarchy has carved out for itself in modern Spain.

Television cameras perched high above the altar of Europe's third-largest cathedral zoomed in to close-ups of Elena as she knelt next to her groom, wearing an ivory silk organza dress with a heavily embroidered bodice.

The princess, the second of three children, exchanged glances and comments with her mother, who was dressed in a sky blue silk chiffon dress, a single strand of pearls and a traditional Spanish black mantilla with tortoiseshell comb.

Sofia and Juan Carlos, who wore an army dress uniform, sat a few yards from the couple to the left of the high altar in red plush and gilt chairs.

Elena, her light brown hair braided under a chiffon veil, held back tears as her groom accompanied her out of the cathedral 90 minutes later to climb into an 18th-century horse-drawn carriage.

The couple waved to cheering crowds as the carriage drove them across town to the Church of El Salvador, where the couple prayed to the accompaniment of traditional Andalusian music. Elena left her wedding bouquet at the tomb of her great-grandparents, Prince Carlos of Bourbon and Princess Luisa Francisca of Orleans.

Next stop was a wedding luncheon for 1,300 guests, including government officials, trade union leaders and members of nearly all of Europe's royal families. Guests included Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands, Queen Paola of Belgium and Prince Rainier of Monaco. Britain's Prince Charles attended the wedding, but was to return home afterward.

Juan Carlos became king two days after the 1975 death of dictator Gen. Francisco Franco. Though the king has little direct role in politics, his astute handling of Spain's transition to democracy won popular acceptance that has turned to affection for the 57-year-old monarch and his family.

The decision to hold the wedding in Seville, known for its love of a good party as well as its royalist sentiment, was shrewd.

A jovial Juan Carlos opened the ceremony, leading the princess down a red-carpeted path from the royal residence in Seville to the cathedral. Thousands of well-wishers shouted "Elena, Elena!" and greeted the royal family with Andalusia's traditional rhythmic hand-clapping.

People danced the traditional "Sevillanas" and sipped cold sherry under a pristine sky in spring-like temperatures.

Bars, hotels and restaurants overflowed with celebrants who took advantage of the festivities to gear up for their annual Holy Week and April Fair a few weeks away.

For some, it was even a bit too much.

"This is real good for business, but it's a pain for the working man. I can't wait for it to be over so I can get some sleep," said Jaime Curado, a 27-year-old waiter.

Launch center's disrepair reflects Russian decline

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

BAIKONUR, Kazakhstan — It's as though time stopped in this desolate Russian rocket-launching center, once the world's premier space base.

Evidence of disrepair is practically everywhere at the Baikonur Cosmodrome, where NASA astronaut Norman Thagard blasted into space this week and became the first American to fly to a Russian space station.

Buildings abandoned midway through construction, vacant offices, silent halls — these are but a few examples of the decline that set in with the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1991.

Two Russian Buran space shuttles that were built to fly to the orbiting Mir station are parked in a hangar, grounded for good. They've been there for years, gathering dust, after just one flight between the two of them.

In another building, behemoth Energia rockets are stacked side by side in need of buyers. The engines are covered with soiled plastic; bird droppings and feathers litter the side railings.

There have been only two Energia flights. The second, and last, was with an unmanned Buran in 1988.

Once, 2,000 people used to work at the Energia assembly building. Now there are 700, most of them performing maintenance.

"I don't have any hope. You see what's happened to our country," said Nina Omysova, chief engineer at the Energia assembly building. "Everybody has forgotten us."

"If I knew what would happen, I would have become an economist," she said.

Grigory Sonis, who's in charge of the assembly building, said it's more than a feeling of depression to have a dozen boosters lying there. 'It's a pain," he said.

It's even grimmer in the nearby town, Leninsk, where most cosmodrome workers live.

Apartment buildings are crumbling, businesses are deserted, squares are empty, space workers hustle to make ends meet. Most blame the collapse of the Soviet Union.

"It's hard to find food for your kids," muttered Sergei Rostovtsev, 46, a launch commentator. "The stores have nothing. Just three years ago, community services were better. Now there's no electricity, sometimes no water."

NASA officials on hand for Thagard's Russian Soyuz rocket launch Tuesday admitted parts of the cosmodrome and town look bad. But they said they're hopeful the decline won't affect the Soyuz or Mir space station program, both vital to the U.S. and Russian joint space agreement.

'I don't have any hope. You see what's happened to our country. If I knew what would happen, I would have become an economist.
— Nina Omysova, chief engineer, assembly building

Indeed, Thagard's flight left on time and without a hitch.

Rostovtsev noted, however, that it takes longer to prepare a rocket than before and the number of mistakes is increasing as good workers leave. He said he doesn't know of any new technology that's been tested in the past five years.

Many NASA managers seem unaware of these problems. The Russian Space Agency's director, Yuri Koptev, clearly doesn't want to discuss it, at least not publicly.

Koptev brushed aside a reporter's question about cosmodrome conditions at a news conference following Thagard's arrival at Mir on Thursday, saying all that was needed was some fresh paint.

"Certainly, as Russians go forward they're going to need to concentrate on their infrastructure," admitted NASA's Tommy Holloway, head of the shuttle-Mir program.

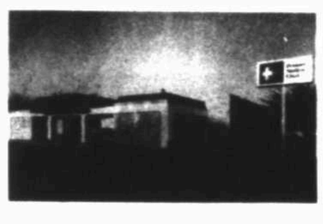

The $400 million that NASA is paying the Russians for use of Mir should help. The U.S. space shuttle Atlantis — and not the startlingly similar Buran — is supposed to dock seven times over the next three years with the aging Mir.

After that, the United States, Russia, Europe, Canada and Japan plan to start building an international space station.

"We hope our joint work will help give them the resources to improve their infrastructures," said NASA astronaut Bonnie Dunbar, who trained in Russia as Thagard's understudy. "That's what it will take to improve infrastructure. Not will. They've got the will."

Africa's fledgling democracies face wide array of challenges

By Howard W. French
N.Y. Times News Service

As African governments face grave crises, leaders in Washington and in the capitals of Western Europe are increasingly telling them they will have to rely on their own meager resources to solve the continent's problems.

BAMAKO, Mali — For the three decades that constituted the infancy of African independence, Washington and its allies preached the virtues of democracy to this continent while supporting many of its most corrupt one-party regimes, invoking the strategic considerations of the Cold War.

Now, with the Soviet Union no longer the opponent that justified this policy, democratic systems have taken root for the first time in a score of countries across Africa.

But as these sub-Saharan countries face grave crises of debt, population growth, poverty and religious militancy, leaders in Washington and in the capitals of Western Europe are increasingly telling African governments that they will have to rely on their own meager resources to solve the continent's problems.

According to a recent report by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, which monitors Western aid, the net flow of assistance to developing countries fell to $55.96 billion in 1993, down from $60.85 billion the year before. Aid to all of Africa accounts for about $20 billion of this total.

American assistance to sub-Saharan Africa has followed a similar trend, falling to $1.2 billion in 1992, the latest year for which complete figures are available, from a high of $1.72 billion in 1985. Last year, in a round of budget cuts that hit Africa more than any other continent, the U.S. Agency for International Development closed 8 of its African missions, leaving 27.

President Clinton's national security adviser, Anthony Lake, widely seen as sympathetic to Africa's development needs, summed up the administration's concerns in a speech at the headquarters of the Organization of African Unity in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, in December.

"Those of us who recognize the importance of continued active engagement and support for Africa are confronting the reality of shrinking resources and an honest skepticism about the return on our investments in peacekeeping and development," Lake said. "The world around Africa is fast coming together, and this continent risks becoming the odd man out."

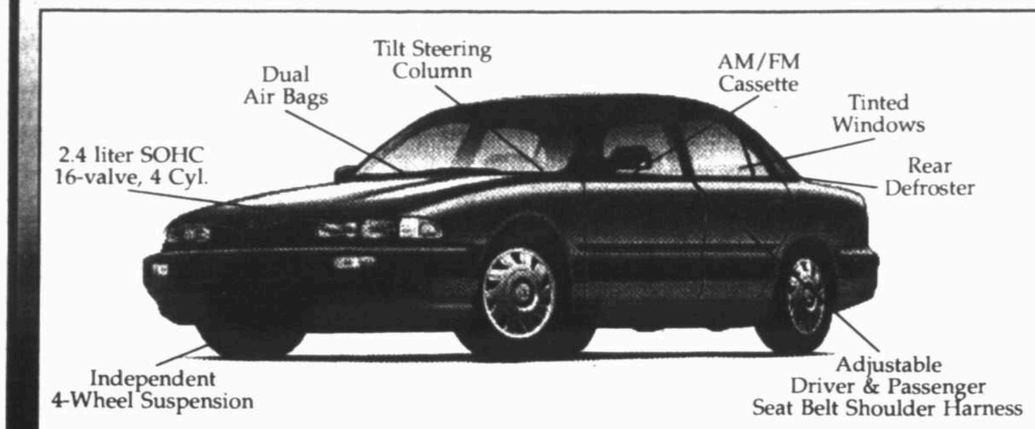

Lake's comments followed last year's mid-term elections in which Republicans won control of Congress and quickly began urging cuts in foreign aid, often singling out Africa.

As they struggle to carry out Western-prescribed economic reforms that focus on privatizing industry, trimming government payrolls and paying off the huge debts that benefited dictators' personal accounts, Africa's new generation of democratic leaders is warning that the growing indifference of the West imperils the continent's democratic spring. The result, many say, will be the resurgence of military-led governments and a spread of misery and chaos throughout the continent.

"We are confronted with a series of grave inherited problems today, and if we do not receive the kind of help that we need, we will not make it," said Mali's president, Alpha Oumar Konare, an archeologist by training who was elected in 1992.

O.J., not witnesses, seems to be only one presumed innocent

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Detective Mark Fuhrman (allegedly) is a racist. Ronald Shipp (allegedly) sat in a Jacuzzi with a blonde who wasn't his wife. Rosa Lopez (allegedly) discussed selling her story for $5,000.

These witnesses in the O.J. Simpson murder case, not on trial for anything, had to answer such accusations in a public courtroom, on national television, even though the claims were strongly denied and based on frayed evidence.

It seems the only one presumed innocent is Simpson.

Legal experts say hammering witnesses with unsupported allegations justice is a time-honored tradition among lawyers and is considered acceptable behavior. The theory is: Potential embarrassment or hurt feelings of a witness are a reasonable price to pay in the serious business of determining guilt or innocence.

The system's intended check on preserving a witness' dignity is a judge's instruction to jurors that questions, no matter how loaded, aren't evidence.

But some suggest that expediency, rather than high-minded goals, is a major reason for allowing such lines of inquiry, and critics contend that in some cases the lawyers are allowed to go too far.

'I do worry that this really discourages people from coming forward and being witness. ... It certainly sends a message out to people: Don't get involved.'

— Erwin Chemerinsky, law professor, University of Southern California

"I do worry that this really discourages people from coming forward and being witnesses. ... It certainly sends a message out to people: Don't get involved," said Erwin Chemerinsky, a University of Southern California law professor. "On the other hand, witnesses' credibility has to be tested. It always has been tested, and it should be tested."

Fuhrman's lawyer, Robert Tourtelot, sees it differently.

He said his client will never completely recover from the emotional scars left from the defense's media leaks and F. Lee Bailey's suggestions during cross-examination that Fuhrman planted a bloody glove on Simpson's estate to frame him for the murders of his ex-wife and her friend.

"He will carry with him the rest of his life the stigma, in some people's minds, (that) the character assassination had some truth to it," Tourtelot said.

The defense was allowed to use as evidence a statement from a woman who contends that about 10 years ago Fuhrman expressed hatred toward interracial couples and said all blacks should be burned. The judge barred — for now — questioning on race-related allegations from other potential defense witnesses.

The defense's frame-up evidence was purely circumstantial: Bailey suggested a second glove was at the murder scene and Fuhrman may have had the opportunity to move it.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito said he was compelled by law to allow questioning on the racism allegation because the claims touch on issues relevant to the case. Fuhrman is white; Simpson is black and his slain ex-wife was white.

Earlier in the case, the defense mounted an aggressive attack against Shipp, an ex-policeman and self-described Simpson friend who testified that Simpson, after the murders, confided he had had dreams about killing his ex-wife.

Without offering any evidence, defense lawyer Carl Douglas suggested in his questions that Shipp was an alcohol-abusing Hollywood hanger-on who messed around behind his wife's back by drinking wine with a blonde in Simpson's Jacuzzi.

Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden pleaded with the judge to restrict the questioning, saying, "You know, we can't destroy the lives of every witness who takes the witness stand ... just to suit Mr. Simpson's needs."

Ito allowed the line of questioning. Shipp said he no longer drinks, and he denied the Jacuzzi allegation.

The defense hasn't been alone in this practice. Lopez, a potential defense witness who testified out of order on videotape because of her threats to leave the country, responded to unsubstantiated allegations from the prosecution.

At one point, Darden confronted Lopez with an allegation that he later admitted was untrue.

Attorneys can usually get away with this because anything said in a court of law is privileged speech, insulated from libel and slander lawsuits that would be filed if the same things were said on the sidewalk.

Appeals court overturns status in hemophiliacs' lawsuit

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal appeals court has ruled that thousands of hemophiliacs who contracted the AIDS virus from blood-clotting medicine can't join in a lawsuit against drug companies, partly because it might bankrupt the industry.

In a 2-1 ruling Friday, the court ruled that a federal judge who consolidated cases into a class action exceeded "the permissible bounds of discretion."

Such a class action would allow one jury to "hold the fate of an industry in the palm of its hand," and could "hurl the industry into bankruptcy," Judge Richard A. Posner wrote for the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

David Shrager, the lead attorney for the hemophiliacs, vowed Saturday to seek a rehearing next week before the full seven-member appeals court.

"I find this extraordinary," Shrager said. "These are affluent companies, and it has never been the purpose of this litigation to bankrupt these companies. It's a very curious argument and is inconsistent with the pattern of American law."

Several hemophiliacs were outraged.

"It was profit over safety that led us to this disaster," said plaintiff Corey Dubin of Goleta, Calif. The ruling is "shocking, given the 8,000 to 10,000 (hemophiliacs who are infected), and the emotional, physical and mental devastation of thousands of people who thought they were using these products from companies where safety was considered a priority."

The lawsuit contends four drug companies knowingly distributed clotting products contaminated with AIDS-causing HIV.

It also accuses the New York-based National Hemophilia Foundation, a research and information group partly funded by blood-product manufacturers, of misleading doctors, patients and the public about the seriousness of the AIDS threat.

The federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta estimates 9,000 U.S. hemophiliacs — 45 percent of the hemophiliac population — were infected with HIV more than a decade ago from medicine they took to clot their blood.

At least 1,900 hemophiliacs died from AIDS from 1981 through 1993. Currently, about one hemophiliac dies a day from AIDS.

Hemophiliacs contend the manufacturers resisted heat treating donated blood for years despite growing evidence that the process kills HIV.

Execution nears for man whose death sentence sparked numerous arguments

McALESTER, Okla. (AP) — Thomas Grasso, scheduled to die early Monday for killing an 87-year-old woman on Christmas Eve 1990, never put up much of a fight over his death sentence. It's everyone else who's been arguing over it.

As New York governor, death penalty opponent Mario Cuomo refused to hand him over to Oklahoma for execution. Some of his victim's relatives think perhaps he should live out his life in prison. Civil rights groups want to go to court for him.

He doesn't want their help.

He just wants to die.

"I don't see any purpose in spending my whole life locked up," the 32-year-old Grasso said last month from Oklahoma State Penitentiary.

The state has no problem granting his wish. Barring a change of heart, Grasso will have a lethal injection of three drugs begin flowing into a vein when Warden Ron Ward nods his head to three hooded executioners standing behind a mirrored door in the execution chamber.

Grasso has said repeatedly that he will not change his mind, and state officials don't expect any surprises.

"Every indication we've had is that Mr. Grasso is resolute about his decision," said Gerald Adams, a spokesman for the attorney general's office. Tulsa police admit they had no idea who killed Hilda Johnson on Dec. 24, 1990, until Grasso was arrested in New York the next summer for killing 81-year-old Leslie Holtz. He confessed he killed Holtz, and Johnson as well.

New York, then without the death penalty Gov. George Pataki signed into law earlier this month, convicted Grasso of the Holtz murder. He got 20 years to life.

Then he was brought to Oklahoma. Within four months, he'd pleaded guilty, asked for and received the death penalty, and gotten an execution date.

That's when Cuomo stepped in.

Cuomo, who regularly vetoed death penalty legislation during his 12 years in office, demanded that Grasso be returned to New York to serve his time. Federal guidelines say a prisoner must serve his sentence in the state where he was first convicted.

Grasso was in the holding room of the execution chamber on Oct. 18, 1993, when a federal court ruled that if New York wanted him, New York got him.

With Cuomo defeated in the election, Pataki lost no time in sending Grasso to Oklahoma for the execution he'd demanded.

That demand is why some would rather see him live, and suffer.

New vaccination adds to growing arsenal against childhood disease

WASHINGTON (AP) — One by one, the diseases that imperiled children in America two generations ago are falling.

Smallpox has disappeared. Polio is almost gone. Rare are diphtheria, cholera and tetanus. Measles, both German and red, are under control, as are mumps and whooping cough.

And now chickenpox — a so-called nuisance illness that sometimes kills — is on the run. The Food and Drug Administration last week approved a new chickenpox vaccine, adding it to the arsenal of shots that ward off childhood diseases.

Chickenpox infected 134,722 Americans in 1993, the last year for which figures are available. About 9,000 were hospitalized and 90 died of the illness. Those numbers will start going down, experts say, when the use of a vaccine called Varivax becomes common.

Such advances over the last half-century have cleared from the American landscape diseases that once made childhood a perilous time. The 1940s was an era when epidemics of mumps, measles, whooping cough and polio regularly swept through neighborhoods, sometimes killing or crippling children.

Smallpox was still feared in 1945, though vaccination was rapidly bringing it under control. The last reported U.S. case was in 1949. Now the disease has been wiped out, worldwide.

Polio epidemics led fearful parents to isolate their children and shun strangers. Swimming pools often were closed in midsummer and movie theaters stood vacant. Hospital wards filled with feverish kids, many destined for iron lungs, braces or death.

The year polio vaccine was first introduced, 1955, there were almost 30,000 reported cases. A decade later, the number of cases dropped below 80. The last reported American case of the disease from a "wild" source was in 1983, and polio has now disappeared from the Western Hemisphere. The World Health Organization expects polio will join smallpox as one of the conquered diseases within 10 years.

Dr. Neal Halsey, a professor of medicine at Johns Hopkins University and an expert on public health history, said that red measles, or rubeola, was so common in the 1940s that 98 percent of the population got it in childhood. And not everybody escaped without damage.

About five patients in a thousand died of measles and 3 percent to 10 percent had lifelong effects, such as deafness or mental retardation, he said.

Measles vaccine became available in 1963. That year, there were almost 400,000 cases in the United States. By 1993, there were only 312 cases reported in the country.

Mumps vaccine came out in 1971, but control has been less successful.

"There were almost universal schools laws against measles, but not for mumps," Halsey said. "The effort has not been as rigorous."

In 1971, there were 124,000 mumps cases in the United States. In 1993, there were fewer than 1,700.

The revolution in antibiotics since the 1940s has had an effect, too. Many infections that once caused serious injury or death now are cleared with modern drugs. All of this has significantly improved childhood survival.

In 1940, for example, the death rate for children ages 1 to 4 was 289.6 per 100,000. In 1993, the death rate was 43.6 per 100,000. For ages 5 to 14, the 1940 death rate was 103 per 100,000. In 1993, the death rate for that group was 22.5 per 100,000.

Women give Gingrich more negative rating, new poll shows

BROOMALL, Pa. — Speaker Newt Gingrich may be revered by Republicans on Capitol Hill, but polls suggest that his remarkably high profile has carried a price among voters.

At the Kmart here in this solidly Republican suburb outside Philadelphia the other day, even people who said they liked the speaker were leery of him.

"He's entertaining, he speaks his mind, he makes politics interesting," said Chuck Towne, a 61-year-old sales representative who identified himself as a Republican. "But I don't think he's good for the country."

Another professed Republican, Twila Emuryan, a 48-year-old nurse, was less entertained. "I think he's using his situation as speaker of the House to his own personal advantage," she said. "I don't think he understands life. He wants to stop supporting the food program for schools. Why starve the kids? And welfare. You just can't pull the plug on everyone."

Such views reflect the findings in the latest New York Times/CBS News Poll not only that the 51-year-old Georgian is unpopular outside Washington but also that women react far more negatively to him than do men.

But beyond that, they illustrate just what a bad first impression Gingrich has made since he grabbed the political spotlight after the November elections. This shows up not only in national surveys but also in the sour comments heard even in a place like Broomall, an overwhelmingly Republican suburb that stuck with George Bush in 1992 even as neighboring Republican towns went Democratic.

Broomall is in the heart of Delaware County, home to one of America's most enduring Republican machines, where party discipline is a way of life.

Gingrich's negative ratings surpass those of almost every other contemporary political figure, with the possible exception of the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

The Times poll, conducted by telephone last month among 1,190 adults around the country, found that 22 percent viewed him positively and 33 percent negatively; the rest had no opinion. A Wall Street Journal/NBC News poll this month found that 27 percent viewed him positively and 41 percent negatively.

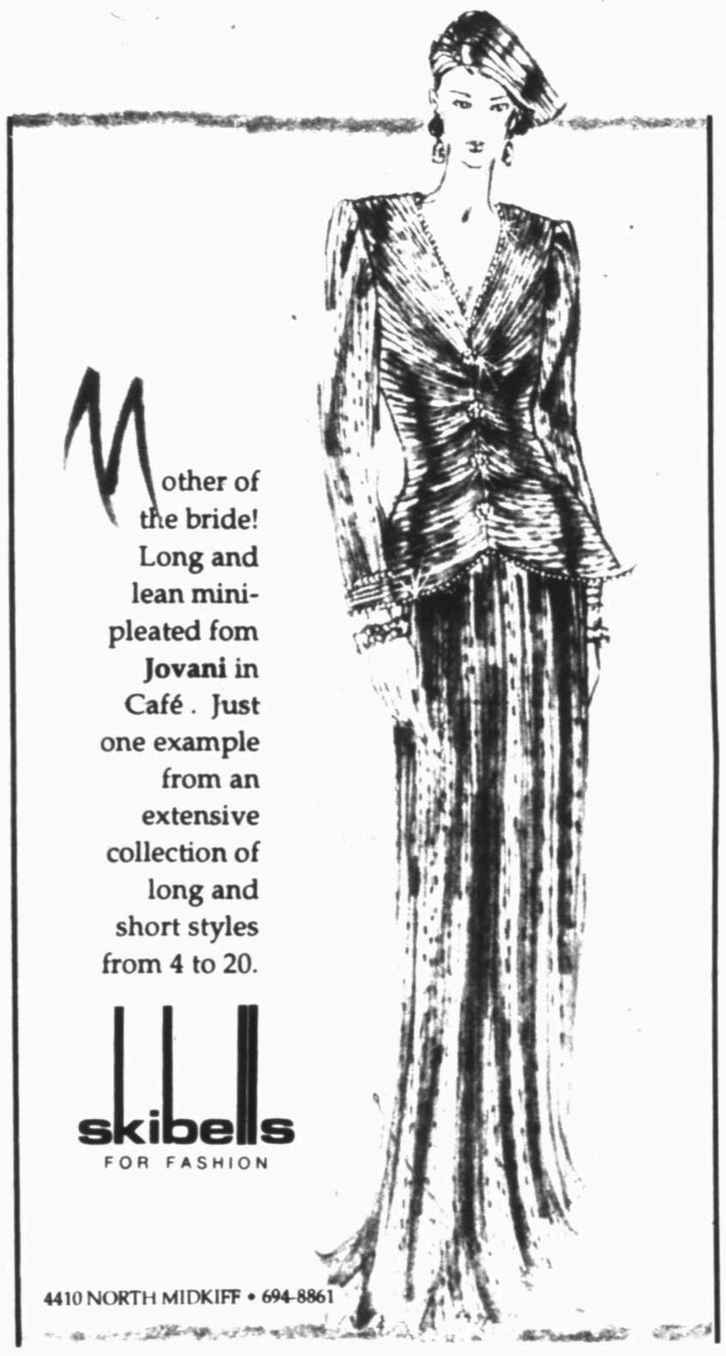

In every region of the country, according to the Times survey, more people thought badly of Gingrich than thought well of him. The Journal poll showed that more people thought worse of him than of President Clinton.

"I don't think there's ever been anyone who's become so unpopular so fast without being a mass murderer," said Mark Mellman, a Democratic pollster. "It's unparalleled."

To be sure, some voters here appreciate Gingrich's drive.

"He's making a difference down there, relative to what we had before," said James Bryan, 70, a retired chemical engineer. "I'm more encouraged about Congress, although I'm not sympathetic to all" of the Contract With America, the House Republican agenda, set by Gingrich.

But in an afternoon of three dozen random interviews, more people seemed unhappy. "I think he's a time," Louise Hartley, a 47-year-old waitress, said as she headed into the Kmart. "I don't trust him as far as I can see him."

Welfare reform would magnify hard times for some immigrants

■ Legislation headed to House floor this week would bar immigrants who are legal residents from largest federal aid programs.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Jose and Reina Alvarenga arrived in the United States with immigration papers and a plan: He would work as a landscaper, she would care for their three children, and together they would build a life far from the chaos of El Salvador.

Then Jose was shot dead, for bumping against a stranger on the sidewalk.

And his wife and three children tumbled into a controversial group — immigrants on welfare.

This subset of the U.S. population, with no voting rights, would be among those hit hardest by the House Republicans' plan to curb welfare spending.

Illegal immigrants already are excluded from the nation's major welfare programs.

Legislation headed to the House floor this week also would bar immigrants who are legal residents of this country — like the Alvarengas — from the biggest federal aid programs: non-emergency medical care, food stamps, social service programs, and cash assistance for families, the elderly and the disabled.

Supporters say that would cut welfare spending by roughly $21 billion over five years — two-thirds of the savings in the sweeping GOP welfare reform plan.

The bill also would authorize the states to bar legal immigrants from state assistance programs if they choose to. Currently, a U.S. Supreme Court decision requires states to treat legal immigrants the same as citizens.

Mrs. Alvarenga said she and her three children could not get by without their medical care, food stamps and welfare check.

"It helps pay for the rent and food, but it never pays all the bills," Mrs. Alvarenga, who cannot speak English, said through a translator. This month, the gas and electricity were shut off in their apartment, which sits above a small market, at the top of glass-strewn stairs.

In 1986, to gain a toehold in this country, Mrs. Alvarenga and her husband left their three children with relatives in El Salvador, and entered the United States illegally.

They worked in Washington without green cards for six years, he as a landscaper and she as a cook, sending money home. Their youngest child was born here, making him a U.S. citizen.

"We never applied for any kind of assistance when my husband was alive, even when I was having the child," said Mrs. Alvarenga, 34.

In 1992, the Alvarengas returned to El Salvador to apply for legal immigration for themselves and two of their daughters. They were admitted because Jose Alvarenga had the promise of a job here.

On May 4, 1992, less than three months after they returned as legal residents, Jose collided with a stranger on the walkway outside the apartment building where the family lived. There were angry words. The stranger pulled a gun, and 33-year-old Jose was shot.

In a city infamous for its murder rate, his death didn't make the papers. A suspect was arrested two days later, but the charges were dropped for lack of evidence.

For Jose's widow, just keeping their children, ages 6, 12 and 15, safe and in school is a daily struggle. Mrs. Alvarenga said she wants to return to work, but couldn't earn enough to support her family without government help.

"I wouldn't have any choice but to leave," she said. That would mean giving up the dream she sacrificed so much for — U.S. education and opportunities for her children.

Those who want to ban welfare for immigrants say the United States can't afford to support such non-citizens.

"At a time when citizens are closing their libraries and schools early, when Americans are tightening their belts in every way, it's not justifiable to lavishly dole out benefits to legal immigrants right off the boat," said Dan Stein, executive director of the Federation for American Immigration Reform, which advocates tighter limits on immigration.

An immigrant is almost twice as likely as a citizen to receive cash welfare from a federal program, according to a study by the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress. Some 1.4 million immigrants received cash assistance in 1993.

Still, only a fraction of all immigrants — about 6 percent — receive such aid, the GAO found. They are vastly outnumbered by citizens on the welfare rolls.

"Contrary to popular opinion, most aliens who come to this country are not a burden," said Rudolph Brewington, a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service. "These people tend to be very industrious."

Endeavour lands in California, ends its record-setting mission

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Endeavour and seven astronauts touched down in California's Mojave Desert on Saturday, ending a 16 1/2-day stargazing mission, the longest flight in shuttle history.

Commander Stephen Oswald guided Endeavour through clear skies to an Edwards Air Force Base landing at 4:47 p.m. EST, 16 days, 15 hours after the crew blasted off from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

The astronauts traveled 6.9 million miles and circled Earth 262 times during NASA's 68th shuttle flight, Endeavour's eighth.

The longest previous shuttle flight was 14 days, 18 hours by Columbia last summer.

"Welcome home Endeavour after a fantastic record-setting mission. It will be a tough one to beat," Mission Control's Curtis Brown told the crew after Endeavour rolled to a stop on the runway. "It sure is nice to have you all home."

"It's nice to be here," Oswald replied.

More than 1,000 spectators filled a viewing stand and another 100 VIPs, including crew members' families, watched the afternoon landing. NASA officials made last-minute arrangements for Administrator Daniel Goldin, accompanied by two daughters and a grandson, to witness the landing.

Goldin earlier in the week had been at NASA's Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif.

Goldin greeted Oswald and two other astronauts — Wendy B. Lawrence and William G. Gregory — in the bright sunshine while they still were in their orange flight suits and getting their land legs.

The astronauts were scheduled to fly to Houston today after extended medical evaluations, said NASA spokesman Don Haley.

KFC slayings suspect's blood samples are turned over to lab, report says

HENDERSON (AP) — Blood samples from the son of a former Texas lawmaker have been submitted to a laboratory for DNA testing in the renewed Kentucky Fried Chicken murder investigation, according to a copyright report Saturday.

The Tyler Morning Telegraph said two vials of blood from James Earl Mankins Jr. of Kilgore have been turned over to Genescreen Laboratory in Dallas after the Texas attorney general's office obtained a warrant.

Mankins is the son of James Earl Mankins, a two-time Democratic member of the Texas Legislature.

The younger Mankins' attorney, J. Paul Nelson of Henderson, told the newspaper his client's blood was drawn at the hospital and in the presence of law enforcement officials.

According to an affidavit used to secure the blood test warrant, attorney general's Chief Criminal Investigator John B. Pantermuehl "does believe evidence which tends to show that James Earl Mankins Jr. committed the offenses of murder and capital murder" can be obtained through DNA testing.

'My client position is that it's not his fingernail. If it is — if the tests show it is his fingernail — there's either something wrong with the test or someone planted it.'

— J. Paul Nelson, attorney for James Earl Mankins Jr.

Rusk County Court at Law Judge Darrell Hyatt signed the warrant Tuesday before the blood was drawn.

Pantermuehl's affidavit states that investigators believe a fingernail found on the clothing on one of the victims links Mankins to the slayings of five people abducted from the now-defunct Kilgore fast-food restaurant about 11 1/2 years ago.

Mankins' attorney said the torn fingernail found on Joseph Johnson's body during a Southwestern Institute of Forensic Sciences autopsy in Dallas 11 years ago may not belong to his client.

"My client's position is that it's not his fingernail," Nelson said. "If it is — if the tests show it is his fingernail — there's either something wrong with the test or someone planted it."

The five victims were abducted from the U.S. Highway 259 South restaurant Sept. 23, 1983, during the course of a $2,000 robbery. The next day, the five were found shot to death on an oil lease in rural Rusk County, about 14 miles south of the restaurant.

No one has been arrested in the murders. Until March, authorities cited a lack of evidence in proceeding to a grand jury.

One witness to the panel this month has been threatened, the Gregg County sheriff's office told the Longview News-Journal.

Lt. Ken Hartley told the newspaper some people approached the unidentified witness, who later reported receiving an anonymous telephone call in which a threat was made.

Hartley said the threat investigation, to be assisted by state prosecutors, focused on whether it was a retaliation, punishable as a third-degree felony.

In November 1993, the attorney general's office took over the case at Rusk County District Attorney Kyle Freeman's request.

Freeman said if indictments are issued, defense attorneys would probably request that the subsequent criminal trial be moved, according to the Henderson Daily News.

The prosecutor said Thursday that possible sites for the trial were Georgetown, Huntsville or Kerrville.

Freeman told the Henderson Optimist Club that Attorney General Dan Morales' office would bear trial costs.

Since the state has taken over the investigation, it has already spent $20,000 on part of the case, Freeman told the newspaper.

From March 7-9, a Rusk County grand jury heard testimony from witnesses in East Texas' most infamous unsolved murder case. The grand jury has recessed until next Tuesday.

The man identified as a suspect was one of 20 people who received a grand jury subpoena. His attorney confirmed in a previous interview that the suspect appeared before the grand jury for a brief time March 9.

According to the affidavit, the fingernail was tested by forensic serologist Sarah B. Williams and Dr. Irving Charles Stone, both of the Southwestern Institute of Forensic Sciences.

County, Justice Department lock horns over agent's testimony

HOUSTON (AP) — A legal battle between Grimes County and the U.S. Justice Department is focusing on a federal agent who may have information about possible wrongdoing in the U.S. Customs Service.

At issue is whether one agent's superiors can continue preventing him from testifying before a county grand jury about a drug smuggling case, and whether he should be held liable on contempt charges in state court if he doesn't testify.

A hearing that was scheduled for Friday was postponed until later this month.

District Attorney David Barron wants investigator Kevin Cleary, 45, to tell the grand jury what he knows about a 1987 case involving two brothers of former Texas National Guard Col. Richard Brito.

The grand jury has indicted the 50-year-old Brito, of Austin, on an aggravated perjury charge in connection with the case, which involved a conspiracy to bring a planeload of drugs into Grimes County.

Six of the nine men accused were convicted, including one of the Brito brothers, Mario, who disappeared before the end of his 1990 trial. The other, William, fled before his trial could begin. Both are thought to be in Mexico.

Cleary was instrumental in the case, said his Houston attorney, Kent Schaffer.

Richard Brito was involved in a joint federal-state drug task force operation in Texas when the smuggling plot came to light. He was allowed to retire rather than face a court-martial investigation. He is suspected of witness tampering and obstruction of justice in connection with the case, Schaffer said.

Schaffer said Cleary can discuss Brito's role in the 1987 investigation and testify about possible wrongdoing — specifically "the extent to which Customs has gone to assure that Brito is never brought to justice in either state or federal court."

Schaffer accused federal officials of a cover-up.

"The government has an interest in keeping (Cleary) quiet because of the political embarrassment," he said. "The government is going to a lot of trouble and expense to assure that Kevin Cleary does not testify."

Customs spokeswoman Judy Turner said only the agency is "proceeding according to federal law."

Schaffer would not disclose what his client may know about Brito or about Customs misdeeds, but said Cleary has 15 years' experience in drug interdiction for Customs and has a reputation for honesty.

Barron has said Cleary is pivotal to his investigation of Brito.

Schaffer said Cleary wants to testify before the grand jury, but federal policy requires that he get his superiors' authorization.

Saints pick up Allen

NEW ORLEAN) — Pro Bowl cornerback cornerback Eric Allen has signed a five-year, $14 million offer sheet, and could wind up the second-highest-paid member of the New Orleans Saints.

"I would be shocked if the Eagles matched," agent Gary Uberstine said.

He said the Philadelphia Eagles refused before the season started to make a long-term offer to Allen, whose five interceptions returned for touchdowns are a team record, and whose 34 interceptions tie him with Bill Bradley as the team's career leader.

Allen has made it clear he wants to leave Philadelphia.

Saints executive vice president Jim Miller acknowledged late Friday that the club had received Allen's signed offer sheet. The offer sheet probably will not be sent to Philadelphia until Monday at the earliest, he said.

The Saints must make some contract or player changes to fit the offer into the $37.1 million salary cap.

Eagles coach Ray Rhodes indicated this week at the NFL owners meetings in Phoenix that the Eagles would not match an offer sheet on Allen.

Tech women roll; Texas falters

Lady Raider 'big bodies' pound Wisconsin, 88-65

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech poured out stingy defense and 56 second-half points in an attempt to keep their drive alive for another women's national basketball championship.

The No. 5 Lady Raiders, who won the NCAA title in 1993, roared back after leading by only two points at the half to beat Wisconsin 88-65 Saturday in the second round of the NCAA Tournament.

"They have big bodies and they pushed us around inside," Wisconsin coach Jane Albright-Dieterle said. "They broke us down. They came out like their national championship team. That's who they thought they were."

Junior National Championships up to speed at COM's Abell-Hanger

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

Nearly one thousand of the best swimmers in the country will stroke and kick their way through competition at the Speedo Junior National Championships in Midland this week. And every event will have its champion. But the real star may be the City of Midland swim club's Abell-Hanger pool.

Without the state-of-the-art facility, there would be no Junior Nationals in Midland Tuesday through Saturday. And Abell-Hanger's built-for-speed design could mean the end of several meet records.

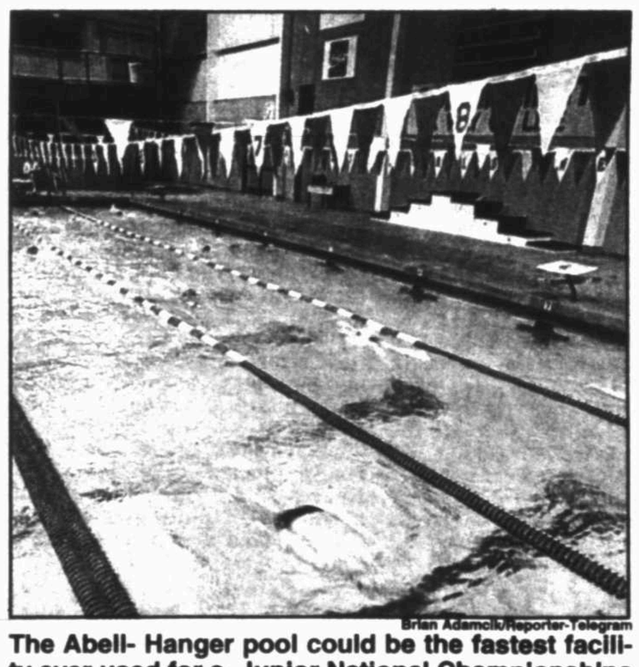

"In my 'unbiased opinion' our pool is faster than the fastest one in the world," COM director and coach Brand Swendig said. "There may be ten other guys out there saying the same thing ... but I don't think there are any pools anywhere out there that are better. This will be the fastest pool they've held juniors in maybe ever."

Randy Rutherford had 18 and Oklahoma State's suffocating defense limited Alabama to 36 percent shooting in a 66-52 second-round East Regional victory Saturday.

The Cowboys also got a boost from an injury to Crimson Tide center Antonio McDyess, whose brief absence helped the No. 14 Cowboys turn the game around.

Reeves (16 points) and Rutherford (14) accounted for 30 of Oklahoma State's 38 second-half points, including all 9 in a 9-0 run that put the Cowboys ahead to stay.

Odessa Permian has professional look in 13-1 win over Midland High

By Bill Petitt
Sports Writer

Looking across the field during pregame warmups, Odessa Permian resembled the Chicago White Sox with their pin stripe pants and black shirts.

Five innings later, Midland High coach Lew Kennedy must have thought he had played the major league ballclub as the Permian Panthers put the big hurt on by pounding out 13 runs on 13 hits and pitcher Jeremy Delcor silenced the Midland High offense in a 13-1 win at Christensen Stadium on a sun-splashed Saturday afternoon.

Midland High finished 0-3 after a murderous stretch of Permian, Midland Lee and Abilene Cooper to start the District 4-5A race. Permian has rebounded from a league opening loss to Odessa High to even its league record at 1-1 and 11-3 overall.

'I'm back' all Jordan need say on day of his historic return

■ Michael Jordan ends his two-year absence from the NBA by dodging reporters and saying little.

By Jim Litke
AP Sports Writer

He was gone for nearly two full seasons.

He offered just two words upon his return.

"I'm back," Michael Jordan said.

Any man who would alter the course of sports history has only so much time for small talk. Even so, let the record show that those two words were all Jordan had to say on this historic day, and that he chose not to pronounce them himself.

Instead, they were quoted in a statement issued around noon, EST, Saturday, from the Washington, D.C. office of his agent, David Falk. At the time, Michael was actually some 750 miles to the west, breaking a sweat inside the Bulls' suburban Chicago training facility.

It didn't matter. By the time he left practice and deftly sidestepped further questions and all the reporters waiting in ambush outside, the words were already echoing from coast to coast:

"I'm back."

That was the way he wanted it.

So now there will be no more asking Michael: "Are you coming back?" Now, the question becomes: "Why come back?"

And after the way he left the first time, no one should be surprised if Michael chooses his answers with more care on the occasion of his return.

When Jordan made his stunning retirement announcement on that bright October morning in 1993, in the absolute prime of a brilliant career, two thousand words didn't seem like enough of an explanation. But still he tried.

The desire just isn't there, Jordan

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Bill Frieder knew Arizona State could play better Saturday despite the numbers.

His fifth-seeded Sun Devils had been outrebounded 24-11, shot only 29 percent and trailed 31-27 at intermission against Manhattan.

"I knew we could play better, so I thought if we played better, made the adjustments, we could win this basketball game," Frieder said. "That was the whole thing. Control the rebounding, control the boards and solve the half-court offensive problems."

Arizona State (24-8) responded by grabbing 15 offensive rebounds in the second half and downed No. 13 seed Manhattan 64-54. The victory puts the Sun Devils into the regional semifinals for the first time since 1975, and they will play either top-seeded Kentucky or Tulane, at Birmingham, Ala.

Frieder started 6-foot-9 James Bacon in the second half and took advantage of Manhattan's double- and triple-teaming of Mario Bennett. Bacon got five rebounds, allowing Bennett to grab nine of his final total of 12.

"I thought that was a backbreaker," Manhattan coach Fran Fraschilla said of Frieder's move. "He should get credit for starting Bacon in the second half. I think he gave them a fresh body."

Manhattan (26-5) led by as much as 11 points and was up 31-27 at intermission. But the Jaspers opened the second half with five fouls in 5 minutes, and hit only three shots over the first 12 minutes.

Arizona State took control underneath, and scored 16 points on second-chance shots at one point in the half. Bennett, who finished with 17 points, put Arizona State ahead to stay with eight straight points, the last giving the Sun Devils a 41-38 edge at 12:33.

He had called together the Sun Devils before the second half started and told them to play harder.

"I didn't want to go home yet. I didn't want the season to end so quickly, and I definitely didn't want any Cinderella coming through us," Bennett said.

Manhattan didn't quit. Ron Riley threw a pass to Bennett out of bounds, then Justin Phoenix dunked the ball off a long inbounds pass, pulling the Jaspers to 53-48 with 4:34 left.

Jeremy Veal, who finished with 10 points, hit a 3-pointer with 2:15 remaining, and Riley added a dunk with 1:01 to go for Arizona State's biggest lead at 64-52.

Kentucky 82, Tulane 60

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Kentucky saw to it that Tulane's worst fears were realized. As a result, the top-seeded Wildcats are in the Southeast Regional semifinals.

Kentucky blitzed the Green Wave with an 18-0 first-half run. During the run, which lasted 8 1/2 minutes, the Green Wave missed nine shots, four free throws and committed seven turnovers.

"In watching tapes of them, they have shut people down for long periods of time," Tulane coach Perry Clark said. "We got so wrapped up in how we were going to handle the pressure, we didn't focus on running our offense."

Coach Rick Pitino seemed unfazed by the surge, which allowed the Wildcats to breathe easily the rest of the way.

"It happens all the time to Kentucky," he said. "It might not be 18-0, but it'll be a 12-2 run or 14-0. What you hope for during the course of a game is two or three runs.

"It's like a shark feeding to them when they get on that kind of run," he said.

HORNS: Seventh career 30 for Smith

(From 1B)

the regional semifinals next week. The Huskies beat Cincinnati, 96-91, earlier Saturday.

Smith, who struggled through a 9-point, four-rebound night against Gonzaga in Thursday's first round, carried Maryland past the ball-hawking, pressing Longhorns.

With his seventh career 30-point game, Smith again followed a poor outing with a spectacular one. Held to a season-low six points and five rebounds by Duke on Jan. 28, Smith responded with 29 points, 21 rebounds and seven blocks against Virginia four nights later.

"I knew coming off Thursday's game, Joe was going to come out on fire," said teammate Duane Simpkins.

Smith said he expected the numbers he put up.

"I know lots of people didn't expect me to bounce back after the Gonzaga game and I wanted to prove I could come out and play. That's all I wanted to do," he said. "My teammates did a great job of breaking the press and getting me the ball inside."

"It was a hard-fought, gritty battle that got away from us at the end," said Texas coach Tom Penders. "Defensively, we just played our hearts out."

Smith now has scored 30 or more points seven times in his career — one more than the late Maryland All American Len Bias.

Smith, in foul trouble most of the night against Gonzaga, was an impact immediately against Texas, grabbing rebounds, intimidating Texas' shooter and scrambling after loose balls.

Texas (23-7) got 15 points from senior guard Terrence Rencher and 14 each from Roderick Anderson and reserve Reggie Freeman. But the Longhorns, very much in it with a 60-60 tie and 6:27 left, missed five free throws the rest of the way to allow Maryland to pull away.

Anderson hit just 3 of 19 shots and was 1-for-9 on 3s.

"They were zoning off (the perimeter) so I had to take the shots in the lane," Anderson said. "The shots just weren't falling."

Smith's double-double was his fourth in the last nine games and by halftime had already put in a good day's work with 15 points, 11 rebounds, four blocks and four steals.

Smith, the Player of the Year in the Atlantic Coast Conference, hit 10 of 17 shots and also had four steals.

Connecticut 96, Cincinnati 91

SALT LAKE CITY — Donny Marshall danced down the court, delighting in one of the more spectacular plays he started and Ray Allen finished near the end of Connecticut's victory over Cincinnati.

Marshall, who scored 16 of his 25 points in the second half, seemed to be everywhere offensively and defensively as he led Connecticut to the West Regional semifinals at Oakland.

With just over six minutes left, Marshall poked away the ball for a steal, then watched Allen jam an alley-oop pass from Doron Sheffer to give Connecticut its biggest lead of the game, 82-66.

As Marshall went into his dance, Cincinnati called timeout, its season all but over.

Allen scored 24 points for Connecticut (27-4), and Sheffer added 16 points.

LaZelle Durden, who hit six 3-pointers, led Cincinnati (22-12) with 25 points. Darnell Burton also hit seven 3-pointers for all 21 of his points, three of them coming in the final minute.

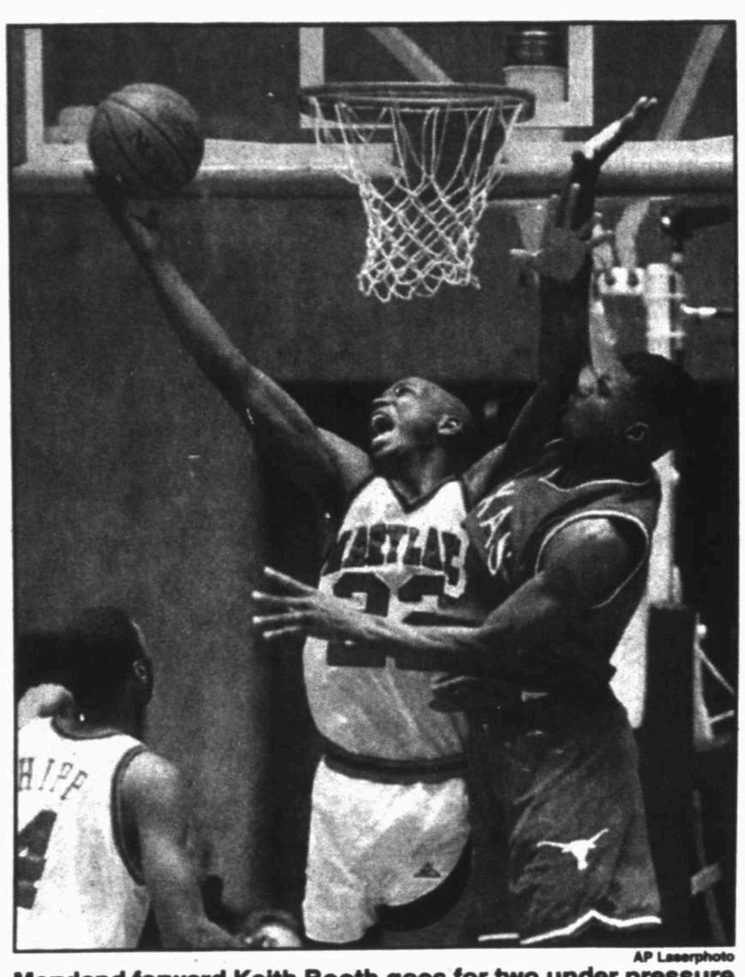

Marshall, who also had seven rebounds and three assists, ruled the game with Allen in the second half as the Huskies broke it open after a 44-44 tie.

Connecticut outsprinted Cincinnati at the start, taking a 15-8 lead in less than five minutes, and seemed poised to break open the game until 7-foot center Travis Knight went to the bench with his third foul with 7:51 left in the half and the Huskies leading 25-15.

Without Knight to clog the middle, the 6-foot-8 Long became unstoppable, laying up shots and slamming down a spectacular one-handed dunk on an alley-oop pass from Damon Flint.

Connecticut scored the last seven points of the first half to take a 44-41 lead after Long and Burton brought Cincinnati back from a 27-15 deficit to a 41-37 advantage. Long scored all 14 of his first-half points during that comeback by the Bearcats, and Burton had three 3-pointers. Long finished with 22 points.

Durden hit a 3-pointer to open the second half and tie the game 44-44. But Connecticut took control with a steal and dunk by Allen, a 3-pointer by Allen, and a steal and layup by Marshall.

Kansas hits free shots, erases seeding doubts

The Associated Press

■ Midwest Regional

DAYTON, Ohio — Time and time again, Kansas stepped to the foul line with the game on the line and flicked away all those questions about its seeding.

The top seed in the Midwest Regional advanced to the semifinals Saturday night by using its height advantage to build the lead and then hitting clutch free throws for a 75-70 victory over Western Kentucky.

The Jayhawks (25-5) are in the regional semifinals for the third straight year. They head to Kansas City — where the won the national championship in 1988 — for a game Friday against Virginia, which beat Miami of Ohio 60-54 in overtime in the earlier game.

"We supposedly weren't a real No. 1 here, but we're still playing," coach Roy Williams said.

Williams and the Jayhawks spent the week in Dayton fending off criticism that they didn't deserve the top seed. They put the issue to rest once and for all Saturday by showcasing their many strengths.

Kansas pushed the ball inside to its towering front line to frustrate the undersized Hilltoppers (27-4). When Western Kentucky sagged inside to cut off the middle, the Jayhawks hit big shots from the outside.

And when Western Kentucky chopped a 13-point deficit to four in the final minute with a blaze of 3-pointers, the Jayhawks coolly put it away from the foul line.

Kansas sank 22 of 25 from the foul line in the second half. Jerod Haase hit 10 of his 14 points from the line, including eight free throws in the final minute.

"Kansas is a good basketball team and they sure weren't going to beat themselves," said Western's Darius Hall. "Even when we started hitting 3s, they did what they had to do: hitting free throws and handling our press."

They showed the kind of poise that was missing in their last big NCAA tournament upset — a second-round loss to Texas-El Paso in 1992 when the Jayhawks also were the top seed at the University of Dayton Arena.

Virginia 60, Miami-Ohio 54

DAYTON, Ohio — Junior Burrough wanted a second chance. When it came — in the form of overtime — he made the most of it.

Burrough scored Virginia's first seven points in overtime as the 13th-ranked Cavaliers beat upstart Miami of Ohio in the NCAA Midwest Regional.

"Going into the overtime, I took it upon myself to do what had to be done," the 6-foot-8 senior said. "I didn't want my senior year to be over. It was a chance for us to make up for what had been happening. It was a chance to redeem ourselves."

Virginia won its ninth straight overtime game, keeping its seniors undefeated in extra periods during their college careers. The Cavaliers (24-8) advanced to meet the winner of the Kansas-Western Kentucky game in the regional semifinals next Friday at Kansas City.

Miami (23-7) led by seven points in the first half and by as many as 10 in the second half.

"That was two teams going hard at each other, trading body shots," Virginia coach Jeff Jones said.

A turnaround jumper with 59 seconds left in regulation by Burrough, who had 28 points and 12 rebounds, tied the game at 46.

"He's our heart and soul," said Virginia guard Harold Dean.

EAST: Cowboy defense shines as Alabama 2-for-20 on threes year long," Oklahoma State coach Eddie Sutton said. "Today, if we were giving game balls, we'd give one to each of them."

Everyone on the Cowboy defense deserved one, too. Alabama was 2-for-20 from 3-point range and it was the ninth time in the last 10 games that Oklahoma State held the opposition under 40 percent shooting.

"You have to give most of the credit to Oklahoma State's defense," Alabama coach David Hobbs said.

Reeves upped his season total to 733 points — most in Oklahoma State history. The 7-foot senior topped Byron Houston's old mark of 726 with a soft jumper that gave the Cowboys a 53-46 lead with 4:52 remaining.

Oklahoma State (25-9), the fourth seed in the East, reached the round of 16 for the third time in five seasons.

The Cowboys trailed 33-32 when McDyess limped off the court with 14:44 left after hurting the area around his left knee. By the time he returned with 11:35 to go, the Crimson Tide trailed 40-35.

Alabama (23-10) never got closer than 3 after that.

"I came down wrong," McDyess said. "When I came back I was still hurting, but I just tried to play through it."

McDyess, who had 39 points and 19 rebounds in the tournament opener against Penn, finished with 22 points and 17 rebounds against the Cowboys, But his short stay on the bench cost the Crimson Tide dearly.

"Obviously, it wasn't a good turn of fortune for us. He's one of our best players, and it was an unfortunate situation," Hobbs said.

"When McDyess got hurt that really opened it up for me," Reeves said. "Our guards did a great job of putting it for me where I could put it in the basket."

With 16:43 left, McDyess hit a turnaround jumper to put Alabama ahead 33-30. He left soon after that, in the midst of a 13-2 Oklahoma State run in which the Crimson Tide managed just one basket over 8:36.

By the time Alabama's Eric Washington scored on a dunk with 8:07 left, the Crimson Tide trailed by 6.

No. 3 Wake Forest 64, Saint Louis 59

BALTIMORE — Tim Duncan scored 25 points and Randolph Childress added 21 as top-seeded Wake Forest avoided another NCAA tournament upset with a 64-59 second-round victory over Saint Louis on Saturday.

The Demon Deacons (26-5) advanced to the regional semifinals for just the second time since the field expanded to 64 teams in 1985, the other being in 1993.

Their 12th straight victory sent the Atlantic Coast Conference champions to East Rutherford, N.J. next Friday night where they will play fourth-seeded Oklahoma State, a 66-52 winner over Alabama on Saturday.

Ninth-seeded Saint Louis (23-8) was able to scare Wake Forest despite not doing what it does best — hit the 3-pointer.

The Billikens, avoiding going inside against the 6-foot-11 Duncan, finished 9-for-39 from 3-point range (23 percent), well off their 40 percent shooting from behind the arc this season.

Duncan finished 9-for-12 from the field and had 9 rebounds. His dunk with 3:01 to play gave Wake Forest a 59-52 lead and was the Demon Deacons' last field goal of the game. They were 5-for-6 from the foul line down the stretch with the Billikens getting no closer than 63-59 with 21 seconds to play.

Travis Banks finished with 9 points and 13 rebounds for Wake Forest, which shot 49 percent from the field.

Scott Highmark led the Billikens with 22 points, while David Robinson and Erwin Claggett had 12 each.

TECH: Lady Raiders in regional semis

(From 1B)

ing the Badgers 56-35 in the second half.

The victory puts Tech, seeded second behind Tennessee in the Mideast Regional, into the regional semifinals next Thursday in Knoxville, Tenn.

Freshman post Alicia Thompson scored 16 points in eight minutes off the bench.

"I just wanted to go in there and try and contribute," Thompson said. "Luckily, I was just on fire."

The Lady Raiders led by as much as 32 points late in the game. Tech's reserves saw a lot of action, while three Badger starters stayed in with four fouls each.

Tenth-seeded Wisconsin (20-9) took a 10-4 lead and stayed out front most of the first half — a time when the Lady Raider centers struggled to find the basket. Michi Atkins went 5-of-13 and Melinda White was 1-of-6.

Karie Cattanach's 3-pointer gave the Badgers a 21-15 lead at 8:57. But Tabitha Truesdale evened the score at 21-21 on a free throw awarded when Connie Robinson was fouled, twisted her knee and left the game for good with 5 points.

The Lady Raiders never trailed again.

Robinson, who came to Texas Tech after being named the junior college player of the year in 1993, missed the last six games of Southwest Conference play with a torn ligament in her left knee, but returned for the post-season SWC tournament.

A trainer said at halftime that Robinson suffered a minor twisting of the knee and might return after intermission. A brace that Robinson wears on the knee was adjusted, and she was on the Tech bench in the second half.

Wisconsin's Barb Franke sank two free throws — she hit eight total — to bring the Badgers to within 32-30 at the half.

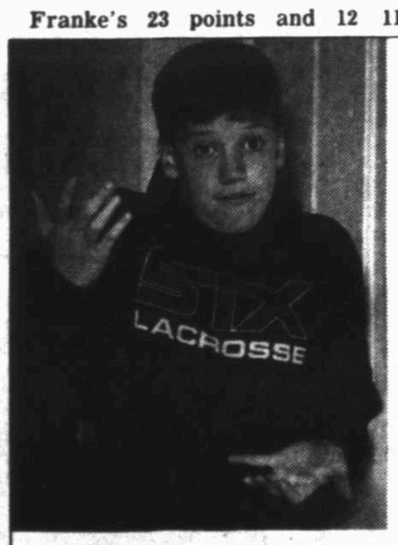

But Tech dominated the boards 24-to-16 after the break and Atkins scored 14 of her 24 points then. Tech's second-half shooting improved to 55 percent from 39 percent.

"I told the girls in the locker room at halftime that we were going to have to pick up the intensity if we were going to win the ball game," Tech coach Marsha Sharp said. "They met the challenge and really produced."

Noel Johnson finished with 12 points for Tech and Nikki Heath, 10.

Franke's 23 points and 12 rebounds led Wisconsin. Katie Voigt and Cattanach each scored 11.

Speedo Jr. Nationals brings future stars

Going into Tuesday's 1995 Speedo Junior Nationals West at the Mabee Aquatics Center you may not know the names, but coming out you will know them as the hopefuls for the 2000 Olympic team headed to Sydney, Australia.

The Junior Nationals are a place where young swimmers make their mark in the water and tell the swimming world to take notice.

Nine hundred to 1,000 swimmers from 23 states and five time zones will converge on Midland this week with their dream of moving on to the next level of national and international competition in their sights.

"The kids with established names for themselves will be senior national, but, what we hope to see are some young emerging stars we are going to be watching in '96 and 2000," said Brad Swendig, head swimming coach for the COM. "This is where that happens. They come through and win two or three events and then there name is out in front of the public. This is where they make their names."

Teams for all over the western half of the United States will be there. Among those swimmers will be Patty Nash from the North Pole — as in Alaska as in where Santa Claus lives.

The largest contingent will hail from the Mission Viejo (Calif.) Nadadores. The 25 person squad could set several pool and national marks.

"They generally considered the best swim club in the United States," said Swendig.

Former Mission Viejo junior nationalist include Cheryl Murphy, a 200-yard backstroke specialist that broke the west national record with a time of one-minute and 59.21 seconds in 1993. She now swims in the senior national meet.

'What we hope to see are some young emerging stars we are going to be watching (in the Olympics) in '96 or 2000.'
— Brad Swendig, head coach for City of Midland swimming

Approximately 70 swimmers will hail from Texas, including Midlanders Monica Stroman and Howard Flowers.

"We hope this is the season where Monica and Howard make that step up to the next level and make the national team," said Swendig. "There are going to be several college coaches here and that's important for Howard because he's looking for a place to swim in college."

But this year as important as who is going to be at the Junior Nationals will be who is not.

The University Interscholastic League's State Swimming and Diving Meet is being held the same days at the University of Texas in Austin.

A number of the state's top swimmers will have to make a decision between the junior nationals or state.

"It hurts both meets there will be some kids here that won't go to state and vice-versa. It weakens the field in both places and it is unfortunate that some kids will be forced to make a decision," said Swendig. "We have a girl from Terah Gisolo of Odessa Permian and she is going to the state meet because of a direct conflict in scheduling.

"Some of these kids in longer events it hurts them. Especially the seniors and they have a chance to swim in front of 1,000 recruiters and could cost them a scholarship or even swim in college and that's something they can never recover from."

The Woodlands, considered one of the top swim clubs in the state, will send just three to junior nationals while the rest of the club is in Austin.

The largest group from Texas comes from San Antonio and the Alamo Area Aquatic Association with 12 participants.

Several athletes from the college ranks will also participate. Rice University freshman Josh Kimmel will be competing in the men's competition.

Youth will be no barrier as several 13-year-old women will try to impress the COM crowds with drops in their personal best times. Among those already scheduled to appear are: Brooke Sprague, of the F, Coeur D'alene Sta Fit Club from Coeur D'alene, Idaho. Ashley Miller of the Davis Aquadarts of Davis, Calif. Shea Fitzgerald of the Evergreen Swim Club of Olympia, Wash. Jamie Robinson of the Greeley Swim Club, Greeley, Colo. Kristin Stecher of the Multnomah Athletic Club of Portland, Ore. Vicky West of the Redlands Swim Team of Redlands, Calif. and Shannon Flahive of the Anaheim Aquatics in Garden Grove, Calif.

No matter where the hoemtown Mdiland is serving as a spring board to a bigger date — Sydney in the year 2000.

Phillips 66 National Diving Championships to be staged at Mabee in front of television

Swimming won't be the only thing going on at the Mabee Memorial Aquatic Center this spring.

In fact, Olympians, national champions and other top United States divers will converge on the Tall City April 19-23 for the Phillips 66 National Diving Championships, the first major event of the diving season and the first televised event from the Midland facility.

The event is sponsored by the Phillips Petroleum Company, which has been a national sponsor of U.S. Diving since 1979. The Prime Sports Network (HSE) will provide national television coverage.

Phillips 66 National Diving Championships Schedule

3 p.m.: Women's 10m quarterfinal, women's 10m semifinal.

Friday, April 21
10 a.m.: Men's 1m quarterfinal, men's 1m semifinal A&B.
3 p.m.: Women's 3m quartefinal, women's 3m semifinal, men's 1m final.

Saturday, April 22

Sunday, April 23
Noon: Women's 3m final, Men's 10 m final.
3 p.m.: Women's 3m synchro final, men's 10m synchro final.

The meet, which will serve as the fifth in a series of seven national championships to determine the field for the 1996 U.S. Olympic Diving Trials, features all five of the defending national champions.

They include: Melisa Moses of Orange Park, Fla. in the women's 1- and 3-meter springboard events; Becky Ruehl of Lakeside Park, Ky. in the women's platform; Chris Devine of State College, Pa. in men's 1-meter; Mark Bradshaw of Galloway, Ohio in men's 3-meter and Bryan Gillooly of Kissimmee, Fla. in men's platform.

Those five divers along with Carrie Zarse of Rockford, Ill., Kristen Kane of Kingston, Wash., Mary Ellen Clark of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Dean Panaro of Miami, Kent Ferguson of Miami Beach, Fla. and Patrick Jeffrey of Miami were part of the United States team at the XIIth Pan American Games in Mar del Plata, Argentina on March 12-19.

Clark, the 1992 Olympic platform bronze medalist, is one of eight total divers who have competed in the Olympics. Bradshaw and Jeffrey were both on the 1988 team while Ferguson was on the 1992 team.

Others include Scott Donie of Miami, the 1992 platform silver medalist, and Craig Lincoln of Canoga Park, Calif., a three-time bronze medalist in the 1972 Games. Two others had Olympic experience with other countries but are now competing as U.S. divers. Kongzheng Li of Orlando, Fla. was the 1984 platform bronze medalist for China while Veronica Ribot-Canales of Miami was a three-time Olympian for Argentina.

The meet will also feature the first national look at a diving category that has already been premiered internationally.

Synchronized diving is now a full-fledged medal event that will be contested at most national and international events in 1995, including the IXth Diving World Cup at the Olympic Aquatic Center in Atlanta From Sept. 5-9.

The competition format for synchro diving has been on the drawing board since 1993. It was officially approved by FINA last August and later adopted by U.S. Diving in September. The first international competition was held in Auckland, New Zealand, and U.S. divers won both the men's and women's 3-meter events.

Competition consists of same-sex pairs diving simultaneously from the same 10-meter platform or adjacent 3-meter springboards.

Although synchro diving will be on the program of events for several upcoming national competitions, world cups and world championships, it is not an Olympic event.

Swimmers boost revenue

The Speedo Junior Nationals Championships brings to Midland swimming's future stars and gives exposure to the City of Midland swim club's top-notch facility. But it will also bring revenue to the Tall City's businesses and more attention to the city in general.

"We are excited about the it," Susie McElmurry, manager of the Convention and Visitors Bureau of Midland's Chamber of Commerce, said. "It is a national event that will give us national coverage on a higher level."

With the 1,000 swimmers that will come to Midland, an estimated 1,500 family members, coaches, recruiters and spectators will accompany them. That means 3,000 hotel and motel room nights will be occupied, making it almost impossible to find a room in Midland.

"Most rooms in town are full," City of Midland director Brad Swendig said. "They are having to send people to Odessa. Most places (around town) are going to see a tremendous impact."

Midland hotels are expecting to make their fair share from the week-long event, and right now with rooms filling, things are on target.

"We are forecasting a week's worth of sold out rooms," said Libby Allison, a Hilton Hotel representative. "We usually run at 90 percent occupancy during the week. This week it will be at 100 percent for six nights. This includes the weekend when we don't do as well.

Rental cars will also be in demand. An increase of reservations has already hit area rental car companies with some companies' reservations up by 20 percent.

Loene Nichols, co-owner of Budget Rent-A-Car says her business has been affected especially when it comes to mini vans, which have been sold out throughout the city.

"We had to cut them (reservations) off," Nichols said. "Events like the meet help our business."

Other local businesses also benefit from the event. When not swimming or resting, the out of town people become tourists to Midland and that means spending in the town's shops, restaurants, grocery stores and other businesses. All in all, an estimated $650,000 will be spent in the Midland, a figure that excites many Midlanders.

"The effects will be city-wide," McElmurry said. "They (visitors) don't just stay in hotels rooms."

POOL: Region I, WAC could be next making waves with a pool that doesn't make waves.

"Our pool is deeper than that one (at UT) and the gutter system and water return system is at least as good as theirs," Swendig said.

Abell-Hanger's water return jets are at the bottom of the pool, making for less turbulence. And it's overflow gutters are four-feet deep, cutting off any rebound wave action. Those features cut down on the water's choppiness and the swimmer's times.

The pool's swimming lanes are nine feet, wider than the standard seven and one-half feet, making for less wave effect between swimmers.

The meet is a special coup for COM because it's the first time ever a United States Swimming meet will take place at a USS club wholly owned by the club. COM follows the junior nationals, its first national level meet, with the Phillips 66 National Diving Championships April 19-22.

"In a 25-yard course the most important meet you could have is the one we're having," Swendig said. "Outside of university facilities there are probably ten facilities in the country that could host this meet. There are four facilities in Texas that could host it including ours."

But it's more than just Abell-Hanger, with it's Olympic diving facilities, that brings the Junior Nationals to Midland. The COM Mabee Aquatic Center includes a separate pool for warmups and warm downs. And there's enough deck space for coaches and officials and spectator seating. Swendig admits Mabee barely meets requirements for the latter needs.

Abell-Hanger was built to bring in national level meets. But even that hasn't prepared the club for the enormity of hosting swimmers from 22 states followed closely by a national diving championship meet.

"We built this facility with two meets specifically in mind: the junior nationals and the diving meet we're having next month. " Swendig said. "It was our hope and our desire that one day we would get one of them, and we didn't know whether we would get either."

The club's wishes were granted twice.

"It's a little intimidating to run national meets and when you haven't done it it's a scary undertaking," said the COM director. "To get both was certainly intimidating to us. It's still intimidating."

But that hasn't stopped COM from wanting more. The club is bidding for the high school Region I meet, now conducted at Texas Tech in Lubbock. That could be difficult with the Lubbock Independent School District having just approved a new competitive swimming facility. With the Western Athletic Conference picking up three more Texas schools — TCU, SMU and Rice — WAC officials have approached COM about having their conference meet at Mabee.

If and when either of those events come to COM, Swendig and crew should be well over their large-meet jitters.

said. Nothing left to prove. Time to watch the lawn grow out and the kids grow up.

We know now that only some of it was true. The rest we will find out as the comeback unfolds, beginning Sunday inside Indianapolis' Market Square Arena against the hometown Pacers, and stretching out as far and as fully as Jordan himself allows.

And until Michael deigns to provide a more definitive answer as to why he chose to return, we will keep going back to something the father, James Jordan, said about his son not too long ago.

It came during the Bulls' Eastern Conference playoff series against the Knicks in what would become their three-peat championship season. The father was serving as the unofficial spokesman for the family because Michael was in the midst of a self-imposed media silence.

Right or wrong, Jordan felt betrayed by coverage of a late-night gambling junket he took to Atlantic City between games in New York and had quit talking for public consumption.

"My son doesn't have a gambling problem. What he does have," James Jordan said with certainty, "is a competition problem."

It was only a few words, but it was the truth distilled to as few words as he needed. What made his son special, James Jordan said, was that he was a man in perpetual search of a challenge. Not just one night on a basketball floor, but every day, everywhere. It took most of us a long time to grasp what he meant.

When Michael Jordan retired, he still had a competition problem. It was just submerged beneath the pain of his father's recent murder and the fatigue of playing through three championship seasons and the Barcelona Olympics with almost no time off. He had no urge, and more important, no reason to own up to it.

Jordan wanted time off, but the NBA had no provision for sabbaticals. He wanted his privacy, but the media didn't issue waivers. So Jordan took the easy exit. He turned his back on basketball and everything that went with it.

But he never intended to watch the grass grow. After a few days and weeks off, after enough rounds of golf, the competition problem his father referred to made itself felt once more. And in no time after that — and to the surprise of very few people who knew him — Jordan took up baseball.

That adventure ended formally last week, with another of those terse statements issued through his agent's office. From that point forward, it was only a matter of time to Saturday's even briefer confirmation that the competition problem had him in its grips once more.

"I'm back," Michael Jordan said.

NBA's biggest crowd sees Spurs beat Mavs

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson had 36 points and 13 rebounds and San Antonio treated the largest crowd in the NBA this season to a 116-106 victory against the Dallas Mavericks on Saturday night.

A crowd of 35,888 watched as Sean Elliott added 29 points and Vinnie Del Negro 20 for the Spurs, who beat the Mavericks for the first time in three games at the Alamodome this season.

It was San Antonio's third straight victory overall.

Jamaal Mashburn led the Mavericks with 29 points, but was 8-of-24 from the field. Jason Kidd scored 26 points, Roy Tarpley 17 and Lucious Harris 15.

Dennis Rodman, benched for Thursday's victory over Philadelphia after he arrived 30 minutes after tipoff, had 14 rebounds and 4 points for San Antonio.

San Antonio led 88-84 after three periods and opened the final period with a 7-0 run, but the Mavericks wouldn't quit. They got back to within 99-93 with 6:07 to play.

Robinson, however, scored on a putback, Elliott hit a 20-footer and Robinson added two free throws to rebuild the lead to 105-93 with 4:55 to go.

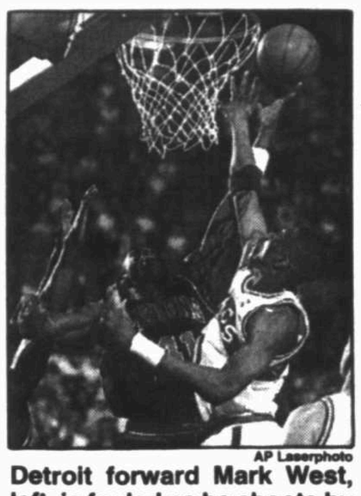

Knicks 92, Nets 91, OT

NEW YORK — Derek Harper's free throw with 5.6 seconds to play in overtime snapped a tie and Chris Morris' 23-footer at the buzzer missed the rim entirely as the New York Knicks edged the New Jersey Nets.

John Starks hit 6-of-14 3-points and scored 25 points to lead New York, which let a 15-point lead with three minutes remaining in the third quarter slip away. Patrick Ewing, who was held to two points over the final 21 minutes, finished with 17 points and 14 rebounds.

Derrick Coleman led New Jersey with 22 points.

Kenny Anderson broke an 83-83 tie with a breakaway layup and 18-foot jumper to give New Jersey its largest lead of the game, 89-83, with 3:52 to play. But Hubert Davis' 3-pointer keyed a Knicks' rally and Charles Smith's two free throws evened the game at 89 with 2:05 to go.

Detroit forward Mark West, left, is fouled as he shoots by Seattle's Erivn Johnson.

Coleman and Ewing traded field goals before both teams missed chances for easy baskets in the final minute of regulation.

The victory, New York's 18th in 21 games against New Jersey at Madison Square Garden, was the second since the Knicks placed forward Anthony Mason on the suspended list for "conduct detrimental to the team." Mason left the Knicks bench in a huff after being chastised by coach Pat Riley in a game on March 14.

The Nets trailed until Chris Child's 3-pointer with 1:11 to play in the fourth quarter gave them a 79-78 advantage. Ewing missed two crucial free throws, but Starks' 3-pointer from the right baseline with 32 seconds to play gave New York an 83-81 lead. Anderson then tied the score with two free throws.

New York built a 27-17 lead after the first quarter and increased the margin to 46-32 behind the assertive inside play of Charles Smith, who scored 11 of his 18 points in 11 first-half minutes.

■ NBA Roundup

Hawks 122, Suns 117

ATLANTA — Steve Smith scored a career-high 37 points, and Mookie Blaylock 27 as the Atlanta Hawks survived a late Phoenix rally, snapping the Suns' four-game road winning streak.

The Hawks saw a 106-89 lead with 7:45 remaining dwindle to 115-110 on a dunk by Charles Barkley with 2:42 to play. But the Suns never got closer until the final 13 seconds when a Richard Dumas dunk cut it to 119-115.

Barkley, ejected with his second technical with 58 seconds to play, and Kevin Johnson each scored 26 points for the Suns. Barkley also had 18 rebounds.

Coach Paul Westphal also was ejected for two technicals, coming with 10:59 to play in the final quarter. Barkley appeared to bump Blane Reichelt, the official who called the second technical, while they argued following the ejection.

The Hawks, snapping a two-game losing streak in winning for the eighth time in 12 games, also got 22 points from Stacey Augmon.

After building the 17-point lead on Blaylock's basket, Johnson sparked the Phoenix rally, scoring 10 points in just over 4 minutes and getting an assist on Barkley's dunk that cut the lead to five points with 2:42 to play. Danny Ainge also had a 3-point basket during the rally.

SuperSonics 133, Pistons 110

TACOMA, Wash. — What a difference six days meant for the Seattle SuperSonics. They only beat the Detroit Pistons by 23 this time.

Hitting a club-record 14 3-pointers, the Sonics followed up their 40-point victory at The Palace last Sunday night with a win against Detroit before a sellout crowd of 17,326 in the Tacoma Dome.

Detlef Schrempf, the NBA's top 3-pointer shooter, led the Sonics' 3-point barrage with 4-for-4 shooting from outside the circle. Schrempf and Gary Payton each finished with 25 points.

Winning their fifth in a row, the Sonics improved their record to 21-5 against Eastern Conference teams this season.

Losing their fifth straight, the Pistons were led by Lindsey Hunter's 24 points.

The Sonics, who beat the Pistons 134-94 in Auburn Hills, Mich., led by 27 points in the third quarter, but Detroit made a run in the final period, charging from behind to cut its deficit to 10 at 108-98 with 6 1/2 minutes to play.

That was the closest the Sonics allowed the Pistons to get. In the final 5:49, the Sonics blitzed Detroit with five 3-pointers, two by Schrempf and two by Nate McMillan. Little-used Byron Houston made Seattle's final 3-pointer with 5.4 seconds left to allow the Sonics to break their team record of 13 set Feb. 3 in a victory in Atlanta.

The Sonics had seven players in double figures. Shawn Kemp had 20 points and 11 rebounds, Sam Perkins scored 17 points, McMillan and Vincent Askew each tallied a dozen and reserve Kendall Gill, back after missing three straight games with a bruised rib, scored 10.

Nuggets 110, Trailblazers 90

DENVER — Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf and Rodney Rogers scored 17 points each as the Denver Nuggets defeated the cold-shooting the Portland Trail Blazers.

Denver, which won for the seventh time in its last nine games, moved within two games of .500 and a half-game behind Sacramento in the battle for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Western Conference.

Cliff Robinson's 17 points paced Portland, which lost for the second time in its last seven games.

Denver outrebounded the NBA's top rebounding team, 54-43.

Staybrook wins PBA title No. 2

STONY BROOK, N.Y. (AP) — Jess Stayrook won his second Professional Bowlers Association title of the year Saturday, capturing the $200,000 Bud Light Championship by one pin.

Stayrook, 35, of Tempe, Ariz., defeated tournament leader Philip Ringener of Big Spring, Texas, 237-236 in the title match to notch career win No. 5 and $37,000. The telecast was held in an arena setting at the Indoor Sports Complex at the State University of New York in Stony Brook.

The fifth-seeded Stayrook won four matches on the day, all with scores of 235 or more.

"I've never had to bowl more than two matches on TV before, but I'm glad I picked today to do it," said Stayrook. "The setting, the crowd, everything was perfect today. I couldn't ask for anything better."

Opponents lining up for return of Tyson

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mike Tyson will be packing up his belongings and walking out of the Indiana Youth Center into a world that can't wait for the former heavyweight champion to climb back in the ring.

Promoters are calling, opponents are lining up.

"He has indicated lately that he will resume his boxing career and understandably, the world is excited," said Michael Marley, a spokesman for Don King, who has promoted some of Tyson's fights.

Tyson was convicted in 1992 of raping beauty pageant contestant Desiree Washington in an Indianapolis hotel room. His six-year sentence will be cut in half for good behavior. He is due to be released March 25 between 6 a.m. and 8 a.m.

As Tyson prepares for a future that is certain to offer multimillion dollar bouts and no shortage of opponents, the woman he was convicted of raping is also moving forward.

"For the past three years, Ms. Washington has attempted to pick up the pieces of her life and move on. This has not been easy to do," her lawyer, Michael Weisman, said in a statement Friday. "The trauma of the rape has had a profound and lasting impact on her life, and caused her to suffer considerable anguish and pain.

"Ms. Washington is doing her best to put the rape behind her and build a healthy, positive future for herself," the statement said.

Washington, a college senior from Coventry, R.I., had no comment on Tyson's release.

On Friday, Tyson will sign some papers and inventory his belongings, mostly clothes, letters and books. The next day, he will be taken a custody building, wait for paperwork to be processed, meet the people will accompany him away from the prison, and head to the front door.

Ken Moss, the prison's classification supervisor, said Tyson's release will be routine, with the exception of a few extra officers to keep the expected throng of reporters about 275 feet away from the front door.

"That's the only change," Moss said. "It's just a matter of signing a piece of paper, and we let him through the gate and he'll go with whoever's taking him."

It is expected that promoter King and managers Rory Holloway and John Horne will be there to pick Tyson up, said Marley. From there, he is expected to head home to Trumbull County, Ohio, east of Cleveland.

"I think it's fair to say he'll rest and relax for a certain period," said Marley. "I don't think there will be any rush to make any boxing decisions."

The former heavyweight champ will still owe four years' probation, which will be supervised by Ohio authorities for Indiana.

Tyson must make regular visits to a probation officer and undergo counseling related to his conviction. He cannot leave the country without court permission and he cannot carry a gun.

And like every other probationer, he'll have to show evidence that he's working to support himself.

A giant boxing paycheck — something Tyson is likely to see after his first major post-release fight — would fit the bill, said George Walker, chief probation officer for Marion County.

"If he works one day and earns $60 million, he's supporting himself," Walker said.

Davies birdies three of four for Standard lead

The Associated Press

PHOENIX — Laura Davies shook off her challengers with three birdies in a four-hole stretch late in the round Saturday to grab a two-shot lead in the Standard Register-Ping tournament.

Davies, beating par for the seventh straight time in a tournament she won by four strokes last year over Beth Daniel and Elaine Crosby, fired a 3-under 70 and was at 12-under-par 207 going into Sunday's windup.

She finished with a flourish, getting birdies at Nos. 13, 15 and 16.

Daniel, who was one shot behind after 36 holes, carded a 72 for 209 over the Moon Valley Country Club layout, the LPGA's longest tour stop at 6,483 yards.

Wendy Ward, a senior at Arizona State and the defending U.S. Women's Amateur medalist, birdied the last hole to hold sole possession of third place at 211.

Betsy King and Mitzi Edge charged into contention with third-round 68s and 54-hole totals of 212.

Rosie Jones, Joan Pitcock and Michele Redman were six shots off the pace, with Marianne Morris, Karen Weiss, Michelle Estill, Michelle McGann, Nancy Lopez, Katie Peterson-Parker and Dottie Mochrie, last week's winner, another shot back at 214.

After four pars, Davies and Daniel both bogeyed the fifth hole, allowing Davies to maintain her one-stroke lead.

Nestle Invitational

ORLANDO, Fla. — Loren Roberts retained a two-stroke advantage in the second consecutive uncompleted round of the storm-disrupted Nestle Invitational.

Roberts, the defending champion, was 2-under par for the day with five holes to go and 13-under for the tournament when darkness halted play at Arnold Palmer's rain-soaked Bay Hill Club.

Roberts and 39 others were stranded on the course as a result of a 1-hour, 49-minute thunderstorm delay Saturday afternoon — the second in as many days.

The second round was not completed until Saturday morning. The third round is scheduled to resume Sunday morning.

Weather permitting, the final round will be played in threesomes off two tees Sunday afternoon, beginning about noon.

Although the leader, Roberts will be under considerable pressure to hold off such contenders as Peter Jacobsen, Bob Lohr, Brad Faxon, Jesper Parnevik of Sweden, Mark McNulty of Zimbabwe and Dan Pohl.

But Roberts, a soft-spoken former club pro who had to return to the tour's qualifying school three times to regain his playing rights, is making his run on perhaps his favorite track.

Toshiba Seniors

COSTA MESA, Calif. — Tom Wargo fired a 3-under-par 67 and grabbed the lead after two rounds of the $800,000 Toshiba Senior PGA Classic.

Wargo's two-day 8-under-par total of 132 put him one shot in front of his close friend, Larry Laoretti, who shot a second-round 68.

Wargo has not made a bogey in the first 36 holes of the tournament being played on the par-70, 6,307-yard Mesa Verde Country Club course.

Nick Faldo blasts from the sand on the 18th hole at Saturday's Nestle Invitational.

"Hopefully, I can continue to keep it going tomorrow," Wargo said.

Jones overwhelms, beats Byrd

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Roy Jones Jr. had a sellout crowd in his hometown shouting his praises Saturday night, and he even won grudging admiration from Vinnie Pazienza, who wants to be his next opponent.

Jones overwhelmed Antoine Byrd, knocking him down twice and stopping him at 2:06 of the first round in his first defense of the IBF super middleweight title before a crowd of 9,300 at the Pensacola Civic Center.

"Oh my God, I'm not going to fight him now," Pazienza said, feigning fear.

But Pazienza also admitted: "He's good. He's developing a Mike Tyson mystique."

Pazienza insisted he will fight Jones in June, but Jones said "I have nothing to gain by fighting Vinnie Pazienza. If he says things, yeah, I might get up for him. But right now I have not made any decision."

Jones brought the crowd to its feet when he entered the ring wearing a maroon-, black- and gold-striped tuxedo jacket. He kept them on their feet after the opening bell by knocking down Byrd twice and leaving him helpless along the ropes.

"He let my fool him into trying to trade with me," said the unbeaten Jones.

Watters 1-hits Odessa High

ODESSA—Midland Lee senior pitcher Lance Watters threw a no-hitter until the bottom of the fifth inning, before Odessa High-'s Chad Allison hit a single as Lee pounded out 11 hits to overwhelm Odessa 12-0 here Saturday afternoon.

The win moves Lee, 9-7 on the year and 3-0 in District 4-5A play, into sole possession of first place in the league, one-half game ahead of idle Abilene Cooper. Odessa High dropped to 1-2 in district and 7-5-1 overall.

The Rebels got to Odessa ace pitcher Brandon Swinney (4-1, 1-1) with four runs in the second, three more in the third and four in the fourth to hand the senior his first loss of the season. Swinney went three innings, allowing nine runs, six earned, on eight hits.

Watters was near perfect as he struck out a season-high 11 batters.

"It was by far his best performance of his career," said Lee coach Jesse Benavidez. "He gave up a lead off walk to start the game and then just totally shut them down.

"It was one of the few times that when the other team came to the plate, they looked like they were already thinking they were going to be an out."

Offensively, Lee busted out of a mild slump as Kevin Jordan hit his fourth home run of the year. Ten batters recorded hits in the game.

"When you have 11 hits you have got to be happy, especially against a pitcher like Swinney," said Benavidez.

Lee returns to action Tuesday when they host San Angelo Central at Ernie Johnson Field at 4 p.m.

MHS downs San Angelo

SAN ANGELO — It took six innings, but the Midland High softball team still run-ruled San Angelo 18-8 in District 6-5A action Saturday.

"I'll take it especially it being a district win," MHS coach Sherri Culwell said. "We looked sloppy at times and we looked brilliant at times."

Michelle Quintela, 3-0, picked up the win for the Lady Bulldogs, 12-3 for the season and 4-2 in district. Katrina Kelly picked up the save.

On the offensive side of the ball, Shelia Vines went two for three, Heather Klein went 3-5 and Joye Lewis went 2-5 with 5 RBI's for MHS, who collected 13 hits Saturday.

Midland High will play next on Tuesday at 4 p.m. when they battle Midland Lee for district's second-half bragging rights.

Lee softball wins Andrews Tourney

ANDREWS — Midland Lee swept their two games Saturday to win the Andrews Tournament in non-district action.

Midland Lee, 17-0, defeated Andrews 18-3 in the final behind a three-hitter from Christian Lance, 3-0.

Adrian Nobles had a home run and a single for four RBI's aghainst Andrews. April Rice had a double with three RBI's and Barbara Thompson had a single with 2 RBI's.

In the tournament's semifinal game, Christian Lance, 5-0, threw a four-hit shut out while striking out 11 and Lee defeated Big Spring 21-0.

Marci Villa had a double and three RBI's, Jessica Garcia had a double and 4 RBI's, and Shannon Middleton had two singles and 4 RBI's.

Adrian Nobles, Susanna Reed, and Emily Hayes were named to the team's all-tournament team.

Permian JV upends MHS

The Odessa Permian junior varsity scored twice in the top of the seventh inning to break a 6-6 tie and held off Midland High for an 8-6 win at Zachery Field Saturday.

Midland drops to 3-6 on the year and 1-1 in district play.

Mike Carrasco picked up the loss in relief. Starting pitcher Russell Dunlavy struck out 13 while allowing eight hits over 5 2/3 innings for MHS.

Permian jumped out a 3-0 lead after two innings, before MHS rallied with three runs in the third. Each team scored one run in the fourth and two runs in the sixth.

Hector Morales and Dunlavy gathered two RBIs each and Brendon Morris and Shane Jobe each added one RBI for Midland.

The Bulldogs return to action next Saturday when they face the Odessa High JV at Odessa.

Lee JV beats OHS

ODESSA — The Midland Lee junior varsity baseball team defeated Odessa High 3-1 Saturday.

Lee, 5-3, was pitched to victory by Bo Garrison who three a three hitter with seven strikeouts. Garrison, 2-1, also had a triple on the offensive side of game.

Lee had five other hits on the day. Mike Gonzalez had two doubles, Crow had a double, Chad Chandler had a single and Nick Kleinhans had a single for the Rebels.

Lee will play again on Tuesday at Zachary Field at 4 p.m. versus San Angelo.

Lee sophs blast Andrews

Jim Valadez went 4-for-4 with a home run and four runs scored to lead the Midland Lee sophomores to a 20-5 win over the Andrews junior varsity at Ernie Johnson Field Saturday.

Lee improves to 6-3 on the year with the win as sophomore John Purvis recorded the win for Lee.

Dusty Crowe went 3-for-3 with two triples and a double for Lee. David Smith went 3-for-5 and Blake Moravick gathered two hits to lead Lee.

LHS returns to action on Friday when they travel to Odessa to face Permian at 4 p.m.

MHS sophs blast Odessa

Clay Zachery went 3-for-3 with five RBIs as the Midland High sophomores erupted for nine first inning runs eroute to a 16-5 decision over the Odessa sophomores at Zachery Field Saturday afternoon.

Midland evens its season record at 4-4 with the win.

Jeff Lawson picked up the win in relief by striking out five batters over 2 2/3 innings.

when we needed them," said Midland coach Lew Kennedy. "We gave them an opening early and they took advantage of it. We have to play better than we did today if we are going to compete."

The Bulldogs fumbled the ball in the top of the first allowing Permian to score three runs, two unearned and that was enough from starting pitcher Jeremy Delcor as he held Midland to four hits in the win.

"I thought my fastball was working well today. I didn't throw many curve balls. My fastball had good movement and they were having trouble keeping up with it."

Delcor (5-0 overall and 1-0 in 4-5A play) gave up his only run of the game in the second inning when Keith Lant hit a single with one out in the inning. Roy Coats, pinch running for Lant scored after designated hitter Jeff Perez hit a rope down the right field line for a triple to cut the lead to 4-1. Delcor then shutdown the Bulldogs by striking out four batters in the final two innings.

"I thought Jeremy competed real well today," said Permian coach Steve Coleman. "He stayed ahead of them in the count and never let them get anything going offensively. Scoring runs early really put him in a good situation."

Permian scored in every inning and blew the game wide open in the fourth with six runs on three hits.

Lant (2-3 overall and 0-2) was chased from the game in the fourth after allowing loading the bases on a walk, single and hit batsman with one out. First baseman Jason Rogers came on in relief and gave up three hits, including a home run to shortstop Miguel Bustos to give Permian a 12-1 lead.

Bustos finished the game 2-for-3 with a double, home run and four RBIs.

Bustos was moved from the cleanup spot to fifth in the lineup since the Tournament of Champions two weeks ago and the move has paid off big dividends.

"I think it has taken the pressure off Miguel," said Permian coach Steve Coleman. "Miguel has a lot of tools, but the pressure of being in that fourth hole can play with you sometimes. Moving (Chris) Roberson to the fourth spot has loosened him up."

Roberson was as effective with two hits and five runs batted in. He scored in the first inning on a single and two errors in the field that allowed him to round the bases and give Permian the early 3-0 lead.

Panther leadoff hitter Lane Brannon set the tempo of the offense with a 4-for-4 performance, scoring twice and adding an RBI.

"I've faced Lant five or six times now and I thought he wasn't having his best day. His velocity was off and his curve ball wasn't breaking as much as it usually does. Still, I thought he pitched OK, we just hit awfully well today."

Porter leads Opryland USA

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Randy Porter of Greenville, S.C., used a different approach to lead second-round qualifying Saturday for Sunday's Opryland USA 320 NASCAR Busch Grand National stock car race at Nashville Speedway.

Porter, driving a Ford powered by a V-6 engine, turned the .596-mile track at 106.349 mph, the second-fastest speed in the field, but good enough only for 26th starting position.

The top 25 spots in the 40-car field were determined on Friday, and Porter spun on his attempt in the first round.

"It barely grazed the wall when I spun out on Friday," Porter said. "We got it back together and gave it another shot. We should have been starting up front because this is a fast car."

All but four of the cars in the field are powered by V-8 engines under new rules for the Grand National Series this season, but Porter and several other drivers opted to use V-6 engines, which are still legal in 1995.

Stanford wins fourth swim title

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Stanford won its fourth straight NCAA women's swimming and diving title Saturday, overcoming Michigan in the final two events of the meet.

Michigan led Stanford by 21 points with two events left, but Stanford's Eileen Richetelli won the platform diving, in which no Wolverines competed, and Stanford then wrapped up the title by capturing the 400 freestyle relay.

The Cardinals finished with 497.5 points to 478.5 for Michigan, which became the first team other than Texas, Stanford or Florida to finish in the top three of the team standings. Texas finished in third place with 355 points.

Stanford senior Jenny Thompson, a two-time Olympic gold medalist, won her third individual gold of the meet in the 100 freestyle. She was also part of the winning 400 freestyle relay — the 18th national title of her four-year career.

■ NCAA Swimming

"We knew we'd swim fast, but our divers were just amazing," Thompson said. "They definitely helped us get this win."

Beata Kaszuba of Arizona State set her second NCAA record of the championships, winning the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:09.71 to earn National Swimmer of the Year honors.

Michigan's Rachel Gustin (2:10.37) also broke the previous record of 2:10.69, held by Southern Cal's Kristine Quance, who finished fourth in Saturday's final. Kaszuba had set a U.S. Open record in Friday's 100 breaststroke.

"I didn't think about breaking the record," Kaszuba said. "It seemed too far off for me to get, but I'm happy and surprised."

Michigan's top diver, Carrie Zarse, skipped the championships in order to compete in the Pan American Games in Argentina. Her absence severely damaged her team's national title hopes.

Florida junior Mimosa McNerney opened the final day of the meet with a win in the 1,650 freestyle. The victory was her second of the three-day meet, having earlier captured the 500 freestyle.

Alecia Humphrey won her second gold medal of the meet in the 200 backstroke (1:54.68) to keep Michigan ahead of the team standings early Saturday. But Thompson's 100-free win, coupled with a fourth-place finish by the Cardinals' Claudia Franco in the event, helped Stanford pull ahead, 398.5-391.5 with just four events left.

The Wolverines took medals in next two events, however, making it impossible for Stanford to overtake them.

Stich falls to unsung Californian Joyce

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Reluctant participant Michael Stich lasted barely an hour at the Lipton Championships.

Stich, seeded fifth, lost his opening match Saturday to unsung Californian Michael Joyce. Playing as though he had a plane to catch in the 6-3, 6-2 setback, Stich continued a pattern of lackluster showings at Lipton. His record in the tournament fell to 5-4.

■ Lipton Tennis

"I just don't like it here at all," he said. "I just don't like being here in Miami. I just don't like the place, so it is not for me. I don't think it is worth probably coming back again."

Stich, ranked eighth, entered Lipton this year because ATP Tour rules — and bonus money — encourage top players to play in big tournaments, and Lipton is one of them. By spending 61 minutes on the stadium court against Joyce, Stich met his commitment.

The 22-year-old Joyce, meanwhile, earned his second match victory of the year, his second in as many days and his first ever against a top-10 player.

"Kind of shocking," said Joyce, ranked No. 126.

Ninth-seeded Todd Martin also lost his opening match, falling to Todd Woodbridge of Australia 6-2, 7-6 (10-8). Woodbridge is ranked No. 93.

Seventh-seeded Jim Courier eliminated Jean-Philippe Fleurian 6-3, 6-4.

There were no upsets in women's play. Top-ranked Arantxa Sanchez Vicario beat Tatyana Jecmenica 6-4, 6-0; defending champion Steffi Graf defeated Ginger Helgeson Nielsen 6-2, 6-3; No. 3 seed Jana Novotna swept Petra Langrova 6-2, 6-0; No. 4 seed Lindsay Davenport beat Stephanie Rottier 7-5, 6-3; and No. 5 seed Gabriela Sabatini beat Elna Reinach 6-2, 6-0.

Gigi Fernandez was forced to retire in the second set of her match with Maureen Drake due to a groin strain.

The career of Joyce, a former juniors champion from Santa Monica, was stalled by two shoulder operations. He won two of seven tour matches last year and lost in the qualifying rounds at a tournament earlier this month.

But he considered Stich vulnerable to an upset.

"A lot of people told me that if I got on top of him and if I played good, of all the top players ... I mean, sometimes he doesn't play so well," Joyce said.

With red hair, a white cap and a two-handed backhand, Joyce looked a bit like Courier while taking control of the match. Any hopes for Stich ended when he lost his serve at love on a double fault to fall behind 4-1 in the second set.

Evans easily takes 1,500

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Janet Evans took another step toward the national title record of U.S. swimming great Tracy Caulkins, easily winning the 1500-meter freestyle Saturday night at the Phillips 66 National Swimming Championships.

Evans, 23, of Placentia, Calif., claimed her 45th national crown on the final night of competition at the University of Minnesota Aquatics Center. She is three titles shy of Caulkins, who won her crowns in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

■ Phillips 66 Swimming

Evans was timed in 16 minutes, 34.43 seconds.

"It would be a great honor to match Tracy's title count," Evans said. "I came here and did what I wanted to do. Now I have to keep on training. I'm looking forward to the Nationals this summer."

Earlier in the meet, Evans won her 43rd and 44th titles in the 800- and 400-meter freestyle events.

David Fox, 24, of Raleigh, N.C., nabbed his third title of the competition with a victory in the 50-meter freestyle. His time of 22.23 seconds cracked the pool record of 22.72 set by Australian Darren Lange in 1991. The swim earned Fox the Phillips 66 Performance of the Meet award.

"I really didn't think I would be that fast in this race," said Fox, who trains with United States Swimming's Resident National Team in Colorado Springs, Colo. "Our team's focus has been on this summer and on the Olympic Trials in 1996, so it's a bit of a surprise to swim this fast this soon."

Fox won the 100-meter freestyle on Wednesday and the 200-meter freestyle on Thursday.

Three other swimmers claimed their second titles of the meet Saturday. Sergey Mariniuk, 26, of Santa Clara, Calif., won the 200-meter individual medley in 2:02.80. His time snapped the pool record of 2:04.01 set by Paul Nelsen in 1991. Mariniuk was the 400-meter individual medley champion Thursday.

Jennifer Parmenter, 14, of Granada Hills, Calif., won the 200-meter individual medley to go with her 400 individual medley title Thursday. She was clocked at 2:17.10.

Reeve Irvin, 16, of Charleston, S.C., was the 1500-meter freestyle champion with a time of 15:35.49. He won the 400-meter freestyle Friday.

Ashley Chandler, 16, of Atlanta, won her first national title by taking the 50-meter freestyle in a pool record 25.64. Her time broke the record of 25.69 set by U.S. Olympian Angel Martino in 1991.

Goodyear to drive for Tasman team

SURFERS PARADISE, Australia (AP) — Scott Goodyear will drive in the Indianpolis 500 for Tasman Motorsports, team owner Steve Horne announced Sunday.

Goodyear, 35, will join Andre Ribeiro at the Speedway in the Tasman-prepared Reynard-Hondas.

"The Indianpolis 500 is a very prestigious event and it is important for both Tasman and Honda to have two cars there," said Horne. 'Adding someone with Scott's ability and talent to our team will strengthen our package, as well as provide Andre with an experienced veteran to help him as he attempts to capture rookie honors."

Goodyear has two Michigan 500 wins and 90 career IndyCar starts. He was second to Al Unser Jr., in the 1992 Indy 500 in the closest finish in race history.

This will be Goodyear's ninth year of IndyCar racing. He has won two pole positions in addition to his two victories and has 14 top-five finishes and 44 top-10 finishes.

Offensive line depth one of many Cowboy woes after latest losses

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Free agency is breaking up that old Super Bowl gang of the Dallas Cowboys.

Dallas lost seven players last year, headed by linebacker Ken Norton, offensive lineman Kevin Gogan and safety Thomas Everett.

Norton, as you recall, was rubbing it in after the NFC championship game loss to San Francisco. Some players found it difficult to remain Norton's friend after all his crowing. He blamed Dallas management for not trying to keep him and is still bitter about it.

■ Sports Analysis

Four more championship diamond ring wearers have defected this year. More are likely to follow.

Buffalo reached out to grab pass rush specialist Jim Jeffcoat.

Washington came to terms with free safety James Washington, who just missed being the Super Bowl MVP two years ago.

Wide receiver Alvin Harper said "Hello" to an amazing dollar offer from the Tampa Bay Bucs.

Center Mark Stepnoski gave owner Jerry Jones a chance to match a strong offer from the Houston Oilers and got a thumb's down. The Pro Bowler wasn't a top priority for Jones. Tight end Jay Novacek was and signed the next day for the Cowboys.

Running back Derrick Lassic, who proved valuable when he subbed for Emmitt Smith two years ago, was taken in the NFL expansion draft along with young and swift wide receiver Willie Jackson, a fourth round draft pick a year ago.

The Cowboys are getting backed into a box canyon. They must have a productive draft in April and also hope they can pick off some free agent journeymen who can fill some needs.

Charles Haley "unretiring" and Tony Tolbert signing saved the Cowboys defense. First-round draft Shante Carver, a defensive end, was a major disappointment last year and must mature quickly if he's going to be a player.

The Cowboys got help from only one draft pick and that was the much celebrated offensive lineman Larry Allen of Somona State, who had some good games and some bad ones, such as the NFC final against the 49ers.

The offense line dominated teams in winning two back-to-back Super Bowls. With Stepnoski gone, things could deteriorate rapidly.

Erik Williams, injured in an automobile accident last October, isn't likely to be a force in 1995. The right tackle is undergoing a painful and tough rehab. Williams is determined but may not make it.

The Cowboys were shopping for another center but Mark Tuinei could move from left tackle to center. He made the Pro Bowl for the first time last year and his playing days are winding down. He had back trouble. How is playing center going to help?

More Sports/12B

How many more years can Nate Newton keep playing at guard. He was so banged up last year it was touch and go for him to stay in the lineup during the playoffs.

Derek Kennard had a mediocre season at right guard. What do the Cowboys do there? Do they re-sign him or test the open market?

Gogan, Stepnoski and Williams were the anchors of the Cowboys magnificent offensive line and two have taken the free agent road and the other is battling an off-the-field injury.

The Cowboys had locked up Williams to a long-term contract, too, before the wreck.

Signing Michael Irvin and Novacek certainly keeps the Dallas offense dangerous.

The Cowboys need to explore backup running back possibilities for Emmitt Smith. Blair Thomas may not be the answer.

Smith had started to show some wear and tear. His average was off a yard last year. He needs to be rested more so a competent backup needs to be found.

But the biggest thing hurting the Cowboys is that other teams are chipping away at them through free agency.

If you can't beat 'em on the field, then whip out your wallet. It's the new NFL way.

All-woman America's Cup crew picks up male

SAN DIEGO — (NYT) The one scenario that has run like an undercurrent throughout America3's effort to field an all-female team for the America's Cup finally happened Saturday. The team has brought a male crew member on board.

In an 11th-hour meeting that went late into Friday night, the women agreed to invite Dave Dellenbaugh to sail with them as strategist for the start of the semifinals Saturday. He will replace J.J. Isler, America3's tactician, at least temporarily.

Dellenbaugh, a racing rules expert from Easton, Conn., was the starting helmsman and tactician for Bill Koch in 1992 when the men's America3 team successfully defended the America's Cup against Italy.

U.S. boxer founds out how tough Cubans are

MAR DEL PLATA, Argentina (AP) — Maybe it's a question of experience. Maybe it's the Cuban mystique. Whatever the reason, another U.S. boxer found out Saturday just how tough the Cubans will be to beat in the Pan Am Games.

The first U.S.-Cuba boxing matchup of the games went to Cuban veteran Arnaldo Mesa, who picked apart an inexperienced Diego Corrales in a boxing exhibition that left the American in tears.

■ Pan Am Games

"I wasn't intimidated at all by the fact he was a Cuban," Corrales said. "He's just definitely a slick item. But it was my first international loss and I won't lose any more."

Corrales, who had only two previous international fights, had the misfortune of being the first U.S. boxer to face a Cuban. And he had to do it in his first fight in the 125-pound class, against a veteran who has been fighting internationally since 1986.

The loss put a damper on a promising start for the United States, which won its first four fights. It suddenly finds itself with two more Cuban matchups on Sunday. Cuba, which won 11 of the 12 golds in Havana four years ago, is 4-0.

"I still feel good about this team," U.S. coach Tom Mustin said. "I feel we'll beat some of the Cubans in this thing."

Two other American fighters won on Saturday, including college student Albert Guardado, a two-time U.S. champion who beat Brazil's Jose Guimaraes at 106 pounds.

"I've been collecting too much bronze," said Guardado, who won bronze medals in last year's world championships and Goodwill Games. "I'm working for the gold this time around."

Texas Tech sweeps First Pitch games with 9-2 win over Owls

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Tech has taken full advantage of the Southwest Conference's new "First Pitch Tournament," winning all three of its games opening the 1995 SWC race.

The Red Raiders followed up victories over Texas on Thursday and Houston on Friday with a 9-2 victory over Rice Saturday.

Matt Kastelic had a home run, triple and double for Texas Tech (24-3, 3-0), accounting for three of the Red Raiders' 13 hits. The victory was the Raiders' 14th in a row, one off the school mark of 15 set in 1988. Kastelic also had a triple and home run.

Clint Bryant also hit a solo homer for Tech, and Randy DuRoss extended his school record hitting streak to 24 games.

Jose Cruz Jr., a 1994 All-American, had three hits for Rice (18-7, 1-2).

Jeff Peck earned his fifth win without a loss by pitching nine innings and striking out five. He surrendered just one extra-base hit — a triple by losing pitcher and designated hitter Mark Quinn, who fell to 2-1.

The league added four SWC games for each team this season, with three of them coming in this tournament. Because the caliber of SWC teams is high, the league went to the tournament as a way to improve the quality of SWC teams' schedules, thus helping them in the eyes of the NCAA postseason selection committee.

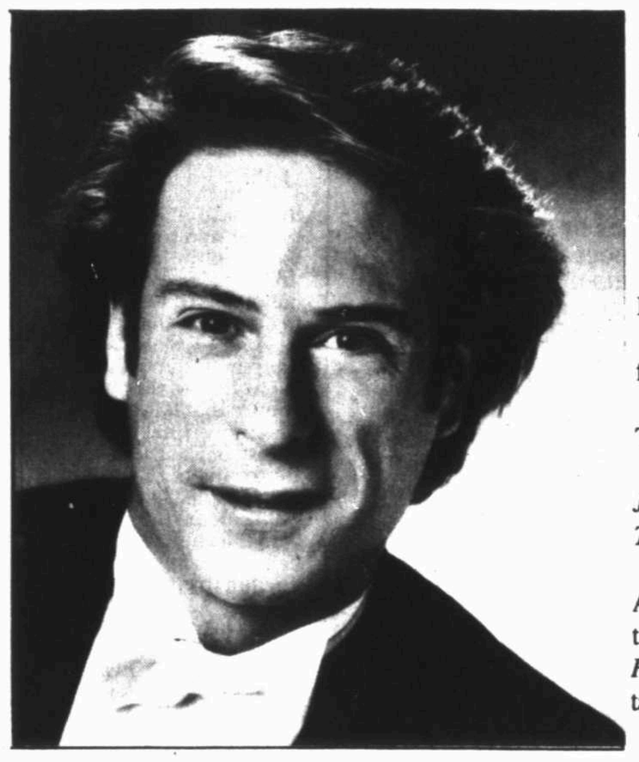

Scott signs with New York Jets

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Unrestricted free agent Todd Scott, a former Pro Bowl safety for Minnesota, agreed to terms with the New York Jets on Friday.

Scott has started 44 games in his career and has seven interceptions, one of them returned for a touchdown.

Weapons move is needed measure

While it's certain to generate more than a few heated discussions in the days ahead, approval in the Texas Senate of a bill that would restore to Texans the right to carry a "concealed weapon" has moved a step closer enactment of a measure that would significantly change the status quo for the criminal element in Texas.

Whether giving Texans the right to apply for a permit to legally carry a pistol will make life in the Lone Star State inherently more dangerous is likely a matter of perspective. It could if the bill sponsored by Republican Sen. Jerry Patterson of Pasadena causes more shootouts between would-be criminals and armed civilians. But similar laws permitting civilians in some other states to arm themselves against an increasingly hostile criminal element have not created more violence. They have made life tougher and more dangerous for the criminal, however.

Senators wisely crafted a bill that creates a four-year license, at a cost of $140 and requires 10 hours of training from the Texas Department of Public Safety, the National Rifle Association or other approved entities. Convicted felons or others who fail to meet the requirements of licensing would not be granted a permit, but then law-abiding citizens are not those out intentionally committing crimes today anyway.

If approved by the House, the concealed weapon legislation will restore to Texans a right removed by the Legislature following the Civil War because of concerns that freed slaves might arm themselves. It is a right polls have indicated Texans want. It definitely will take away from criminals the assurance that their intended victims will not be able to put up a life-threatening fight. Will that fact lower the crime rate in Texas? Perhaps not.

That really isn't the question, though. What is at stake here, rather, is the God-given right of any man or woman to defend themselves or their family against an increasingly hostile, even arrogant, criminal element. Sen. Mike Moncrief, a Democrat from Fort Worth, addressed that point during the Senate debate when he said, "The product that we sent the House today is a reflection of what (constituents) want. Anything we can do that provides necessary safeguards and allows for additional protection is the right thing to do."

We agree.

Housing police fight to save city projects

CHICAGO — It's a sleepy day for this city's public housing police: They've only had to launch a "tactical strike" against teen-age gang members, who have seized control of a building in order to extort money and steal groceries from the elderly.

Anderson

There have been no homicides, car-jackings or random shootings today. This temporary calm is among the fruits of a "detente" forged by Chicago Housing Authority Chairman Vincent Lane with the "gang-bangers."

As the landlord for the nation's third largest and most troubled public housing program, Lane does not mince words. "Every building is controlled by a gang," he told us during a recent tour of the projects.

Some of those teen-age and even pre-teen gang members sit handcuffed to benches and each other as they wait to be processed in a procedure that has become second nature. It is an assembly line of apprehensions that never stops: In February, there were 1,446 arrests in the projects. Even more vivid proof can be found in the "evidence vault" kept by the CHA's police department.

In the vault sit the weapons of urban warfare seized during the last 6 months, but there's enough firepower to invade a small Caribbean country. Lane listens as the housing police chief points to an Uzi that was confiscated from a 15-year-old girl. There are AK-47 assault rifles, a pump shotgun like the one used by Arnold Schwarzenegger in "Terminator 2," and a sword-like knife emblazoned with "Rambo III."

In one of the vault's cabinets sit $2 million worth of narcotics. Then there are the log books, meticulously maintained by drug dealers down to every last vial of crack sold and every look-out assignment. The hand grenades and plastic explosives are not kept on the premises, but the communications equipment used by the gangs is also state-of-the-art, including police scanners and cellular pagers.

All this is from the "post-detente" era. Lane's version of detente was born back in 1991 on a day he remembers as his most painful during his seven-year tenure. He had just established a 400-man police force after concluding amid great controversy that Chicago cops lacked the motivation and manpower to protect the 150,000 people who live in some 168 low-rent high-rises that ring the city's downtown.

Lane's show of force prompted the gang members to send him a "message." Lane recalls: "They assassinated one of our police officers."

The killing occurred on a Thursday night and Lane did not sleep until the following Sunday — nor did much of the gang community. Lane shut down three blocks of buildings during the ordeal, knowing that if he failed to take bold action his credibility with this violent constituency would be shot.

Some of the buildings under gang control generate $30,000-40,000 per week in drug trade, according to Lane. Hitting his adversaries in the pocketbook was more threatening than the unlikely prospect of putting them in prison.

"It's detente," he explains. "As long as they don't go after and injure innocent people it's fine. I can't stop them from using drugs. Everybody belongs to a gang. They are going to burglarize apartments to support their habits. You send a message. You don't say you can do these things, but over time they know that the only thing that's going to set me off is when they start hurting innocent people." Those innocent people have inspired Lane to smash through conventional wisdom with a giant wrecking ball.

His official job description is only two-fold: collect the rent and fix the plumbing. But he stands convinced that — to invoke some Vietnam War era vernacular — the only way to save public housing is to destroy it.

GEORGE WILL

Contract is consolidation of domestic policies

WASHINGTON — Around 982 A.D. Eric the Red, explorer and pioneer of the public relations business, named one of his discoveries Greenland because it wasn't — a green land that is. He hoped the name would lure colonists. Today Republicans in the House of Representatives call their Contract agenda a "revolution," perhaps because although it isn't one, calling it one generates the energy necessary for even less-than-revolutionary change in something as complex as American federalism.

Will

The modest and sometimes contradictory aims of the Contract are explored in a new study, "Fine Print," written for the Brookings Institution by two scholars not unsympathetic to the Republicans' rethinking of the federal government's responsibilities. John DiIulio of Princeton and Donald Kettl of the University of Wisconsin call the Contract exhibit A for the proposition that today's anti-government, anti-Washington consensus is "3,000 miles wide but only a few miles deep."

Without enactment of the Contract, they say, America will enter the next century with a federal government spending several trillion dollars annually. And if "every jot and tittle" of the Contract is approved, America will still enter the next century with several trillion dollars of federal government. "Viewed historically, the Contract represents the final consolidation of the bedrock domestic policies and programs of the New Deal, the Great Society, the post-Second World War defense establishment, and, most importantly, the deeply rooted national political culture that has grown up around them."

The political culture is now national (as it was not, for example, in 1861 when Robert E. Lee, like many others, said he could not fight against his "country," Virginia) in part because the mobility of Americans attenuates localism: Between 1985 and 1990 more than 21 million Americans migrated between states and in 1990 only 61.8 percent of Americans lived in the state they were born in. When Americans drive on the Interstate Highway System (this powerful instrument for nationalizing Americans was conceived by a conservative Republican president, Eisenhower), cross a bridge, board an airplane, drink water, buy food or do any of hundreds of other things, they assume that what they are using or consuming conforms to standards — national standards.

Or consider what once was considered a quintessentially local responsibility, crime. It has been high on the federal agenda since it was put there in 1964 by Mr. Conservative, Barry Goldwater, who accused national Democrats of laxity concerning "crime in the streets." Far from removing crime from the national agenda, today's Congress of the Contract has moved to substitute conservative for liberal provisions in the most recent crime bill, but accepts the bill's essence, which is, as DiIulio and Kettl say, "a $20 billion widening of Washington's role in financing, setting, and administering crime policy, and a clear if unintended reaffirmation of the popular belief that crime is a national problem with a national solution." (That belief coexists with the belief of 93 percent of Americans — according to a June 1994 Justice Department survey — that crime is not a problem in their neighborhood.)

The problem of welfare, too, illustrates the tensions, not to say contradictions, in the Contract's conservatism. Barely one percent of adults receiving welfare work for their benefits. The public wants work requirements for able-bodied recipients. However, the public also wants "less government." Trouble is, say DiIulio and Kettl, "As a group, long-term female AFDC recipients are second only to male and female long-term prisoners in terms of the number and severity of life problems they carry: learning disabilities, substance abuse problems, physical abuse and neglect as children or adults, teen pregnancies and more."

To equip such people with the skills, habits and services (such as child care) necessary for their participation in the work force requires more, not less government, according to DiIulio and Kettl. They cite Republican Gov. Tommy Thompson's plan by which Wisconsin has become the only state outside the Deep South to reduce its welfare rolls in recent years.

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

Clinton should make visit to 'free' Russia

The White House should stop agonizing and accept the Russian invitation for President Clinton to attend ceremonies on May 8 marking the 50th anniversary of the German surrender in World War II.

Presidential advisers are overly concerned that Clinton's presence would be taken as a blanket endorsement of President Boris Yeltsin and the savage Russian war in Chechnya.

That need not be the case. With some skillful stagecraft, Clinton could actually use the occasion to reach out to Russian reformers and to remind Yeltsin and the Russian army that the Chechen war is a betrayal of the principles that united the allies in the war against Fascism.

The president belongs in Moscow on May 8 to honor the Russian sacrifices of World War II. Just as American presidents have paid tribute to the American, British, French and other Western European soldiers who lost their lives fighting Hitler's armies, Clinton should offer American sympathy and gratitude for the millions of Russians who died in battles from Leningrad to Stalingrad to Berlin.

No country invested and lost more in the war, and no country played a more vital role in the defeat of Germany. The Russian losses still stagger: more than 25 million Soviet soldiers and civilians perished, with Russians taking the heaviest hit.

Russians, particularly older generations, could not forgive the United States for snubbing the May 8 commemoration. The war occupies a singular place in the Russian national identity that is hard for Americans to appreciate.

Even as Communist propaganda about the "Great Patriotic War" has faded, and Stalin's wartime leadership has been demythologized, Russians still consider the war an extraordinary moment of national sacrifice, triumph and unity. For many, it is the only achievement in a miserable century of famine, terror and tyranny.

In going to Moscow Clinton could take a page from Ronald Reagan's 1988 visit, when Reagan conducted business with the Soviet leadership while dining with dissidents and taking every opportunity to talk to Russians about democracy. While in Moscow, Clinton could meet with reformers who have broken with Yeltsin, making clear he does not support Yeltsin's drift toward authoritarian rule.

He could remind the Russian army of its duty to defend democratic principles, and take Gen. John Shalikashvili, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs, with him to talk to Russian counterparts about military reform.

Clinton could urge Russian politicians and businessmen to speed the transition to a market economy. All this would make it abundantly clear Clinton was in Moscow not to endorse Yeltsin but to affirm American support for reform.

The president could even invite Sen. Bob Dole to join him. Dole, who fought and nearly died in World War II, would be a fitting American representative at the commemoration. It would be easier for Dole to stay home and criticize Clinton for making the trip.

Clinton and Dole standing together in Moscow on May 8 would be a powerful symbol of America's enduring ties with a newly free Russia.

Broadcasters can cash in on divisible channels

WASHINGTON — They all laughed at the economist Milton Friedman when he suggested a generation ago that the federal government auction off broadcast licenses, instead of giving them away to political favorites.

Safire

The last laugh is his; last week, in the greatest auction in history, bidders for wireless places on a tiny fragment of the broadband spectrum committed nearly $8 billion to the U.S. Treasury.

And that's only the beginning of the taxpayers' bonanza in the sale of our valuable thin air.

Remember all the talk, eight years ago, of high-definition television, the Japanese invention that was supposed to force us all to replace our 200 million TV sets? U.S. manufacturers, with antitrusters' blessing, formed a "Grand Alliance" to match the Japanese advance.

Along came an unexpected scientific breakthrough. We leapfrogged the analog (feh!) competition into the brave new digital world. This not only produces a knock-your-socks-off picture but expands each TV channel into five or six wireless channels for video, audio, computer data transmission, telephones and every form of communication short of mental telepathy.

Broadcasters smacked their lips at the bonanza. "Advanced television is not just about pretty pictures anymore," FCC chairman Reed Hundt told Edmund Andrews of The New York Times, one of the few reporters on top of this story. "It's about the digitization of television and a huge range of new services."

It's as if one old oil well gave birth to six new gushers. Broadcasting lobbyists have descended on Congress and the FCC to insure "flexibility" — that is, to exploit exclusively all the new technology, and to charge viewers for the "ancillary and supplementary" services.

Even if accompanied by payment of rent to the government, the exclusive arrangement sought by broadcasters would be an outrageous taxpayer ripoff.

What is the digitized, divisible channel worth? Senate Commerce Committee chairman Larry Pressler gave a hint in an op-ed piece last week, suggesting that noncommercial licensees had a huge hidden asset: "Public broadcasting stations could rent, sell or make use of the additional channels for other telecommunications and information services."

Based only on current uses, which are primitive, the market value of the VHF, UHF, cellular, broadband and narrowband spectrum ranges around $120 billion.

But in the near future, your television set will combine with your computers and telephone and fax machine into a single unit you can hang on the wall or fold up in your pocket. That's soon — possibly in the next presidential term.

I've seen not-for-attribution estimates that the market value of the digitized spectrum in that onrushing era will be — hold your breath — a half-trillion dollars, give or take a hundred billion.

Before rushing into any giveaway, or any long-term exclusive rentaway, we need extended, wide-open, thoroughly debated hearings to make certain of three outcomes:

First, we want a guarantee of spectrum competition. The criterion to determine competition must be scrupulously economic, not jiggered by the Government to introduce sexual or racial or ethnic or ideological favoritism. An appeals court yesterday stayed the FCC from holding auctions that favored minority fronts.

Next, we want a holdback of certain rights. For example, we can solve the campaign finance dilemma justlikethat by putting a right-of-way in the deed setting aside air time, on-line time and direct E-mail advertising for candidates, which could be used or traded or sold by them in election campaigns.

Finally, we want top dollar for our public property. That means a series of Friedman-style auctions. After the purchases, sophisticated risk-takers and their banking backers can enhance the value of their property at no cost to the taxpayer and with great benefit to the consumer.

Where should the spectrum-sale money go? Toward reduction of the crushing national debt. By recognizing our hidden asset of the spectrum, Americans can ride the wave of the future.

All areas of community can benefit from growth

I read with interest the story written by Michael Kashgarian titled "Council makes concessions to appease neighbors, OKs rezoning of Target retail site." (Reporter-Telegram, Wednesday, March 8).

I find this interesting because the opening sentences point to a larger problem in this city, that being the redlining by developers and bankers and ultimately our City Council and the Planning and Zoning Commission.

The message is vivid and clear to the taxpaying citizens of Southeast Midland: Although the land is there; although the area is presently available; although there is a market (from Greenwood, Rankin, Big Lake, Gardendale, Stanton and more importantly South Midland and Big Spring) we are going to cram this development down your throats in spite of the fact there is another location that does not want us there. Is this redlining? Southeast Midland lies barren from a lack of development and the City Council makes "concessions" when citizens of Southeast Midland and the downtown area could use some development...redlining?

New homes, banks, retail business, new schools are all being built in North and Northwest Midland...redlining?

What new construction has taken place in Southeast Midland or downtown? Redlining? It's exasperating to witness a city ruled and governed by supporters of the color line — when the total Midland community could benefit from growth and development now and in the future. What affects one section of our community affects all!

There is no benefit from gun identification

I do not own a gun. I do support the Texas Legislature's proposal to allow licensed citizens to carry concealed weapons because Florida has shown that this law will aid in deterring crime. However, I strongly oppose the inclusion of a requirement that licensed citizens must publicly identify themselves in any manner.

Why do I oppose the current proposal that people licensed to carry concealed weapons must display a sticker on their vehicles or on their homes? Because I believe that such a requirement will actually increase crime and will defeat the purpose of the concealed carry permit. The requirement will result in:

1) Increased violent crime. Criminals can selectively determine unarmed victims. This would have struck me as a farfetched claim two years ago, but in the intervening two years criminals have selectively targeted tourists in Florida because "they don't carry guns" (this explanation was given by Florida criminals when they were asked about the attacks on tourists).

2) Increased gun theft. A thief who wants a gun just needs to target unattended vehicles displaying the "concealed carry" sticker.

3) Reduced effectiveness of the deterrent side of concealed weapons. A major benefit of legal concealed carry permits is that a criminal will think twice about attacking someone because they just might be carrying a gun.

4) Reduced compliance with the law. Most gun owners are law-abiding citizens. Some however choose to disobey contraventions against concealed carry because they fear for their safety more than they fear the law.

5) Increased fear of agency harassment. Many gun owners believe that the BATF and the FBI have become rogue agencies that use any excuse to harass law-abiding gun owners.

6) No benefits. Someone who plans to commit a crime is not going to advertise themselves with a license, much less with a sticker. There is no benefit.

Harvard shouldn't miss this opportunity

On the front page of today's paper (Monday, March 13) you have presented a picture and an article on Carlos Salinas de Gortari, and stated that he may be headed for a "teaching assignment" at Harvard.

Nearly 80 years ago, under somewhat similar circumstances, Harvard failed to offer a visiting professorship to Doroteo Arango (also sometimes known as Pancho Villa) that might have changed the image of Harvard and higher education in general in the U.S.A.

Let's hope Harvard doesn't miss its current opportunity.

Spanish language is as American as English

In reply to Vera Wecker's letter (Letters, March 12) saying she doesn't believe a school board should have to listen to speakers using a foreign language: Spanish isn't a foreign language. It's as American as my English, and was spoken a long time in Texas before the first English word was uttered or heard.

This English chauvinism is an attempt to hide or obliterate the Hispanic culture and heritage that is part of my heritage and culture as a Texan and American. My love for this state and nation is based on the multilingual, multicultural, multiethnic, and multi-religious tapestry, and the respect for difference in individuals that binds us together.

This Hispanic segment of our population has earned the right to speak Spanish from the efforts of those like Lorenzo deZavala, Juan Seguin, Gregorio Esparza (who died at the Alamo with Travis and Bowie), and Francisca Alvarez, the Angel of Goliad, who nursed wounded illegal immigrants from the United States, and helped some of them escape massacre. Recently, names like Reynaldo Fernandez and Domingo Munoz were inscribed on the new Vietnam memorial at the airport. I don't know how well they spoke English, and don't care because they died fighting for the United States of America in Vietnam.

I'm nowhere near fluent in Spanish, but I speak enough to respect my fellow citizens of Hispanic ancestry, especially those who served in Vietnam like me, where the willingness to fight and stand with me as my companeros-en-armas (comrades-in-arms) far outweighed how well they spoke any language.

A question for the English only and English first types: Do you call San Antonio, St. Anthony, and El Rio Grande, The Big River?

Responsibility lies with individual, adults

In an Associated Press article by Christopher Sulivan printed in the March 12 issue of the Reporter-Telegram, the story of 12-year-old John Willingham is used to illustrate a shocking phenomenon: Namely, that anywhere from 10-100 youths kill themselves while in juvenile custody annually. This is shocking. I expected the number to be many times higher. It is reported that 2,100 teen-age Americans commit suicide a year. For such a small percentage of those suicides to come from a sub-group that has already exhibited extreme maladjustment is remarkable. Think for a second about the state of mind of a 12-year-old who has already had numerous run-ins with the law and been engaged in many criminal acts.

So whose fault is it that John Willingham killed himself while in a juvenile detention facility? The more important question is, "Why was John in a juvenile detention facility in the first place?" The AP article states that family members freely admit that "Little John" was no angel. John's uncle says, "He was more of a follower. Some of the guys with more experience on the street would use him to their advantage." Did it occur to this uncle that there's something wrong with the idea of a 12-year-old on the streets? Where were John's uncle or mother to protect and steer him away from experienced street hoodlums?

The article mentions public indifference towards juveniles as leading to jail conditions that aggravate suicidal tendencies. I'm sure that many detention facilities are far from perfect. We should have humane facilities. However, in a majority of cases in the country an individual has control over going to jail by what he does or does not do. The responsibility lies with the individual. Beyond individual responsibility, especially in the case of juveniles, responsibility lies with those adults in positions of authority in that child's life. By what can be gleaned from Christopher Sulivan's article, neither Little John nor the adults around him were willing to assume any responsibility.

There is difference in unity, uniformity

Insecurity is so prevalent in the world today that more and more pressure is put on people to conform to the will of others.

Such intolerance and increasing use of force seems somehow to validate their own cultural, political and religious correctness. It is uniformity and not unity that they seek and there is a vast difference between the two. Uniformity can only lead to stagnation as it is powerless, consequently creativity grinds to a halt; whereas unity through diversity is the foundation for synthesis.

As this phenomenon becomes part of man's consciousness we will not only celebrate it, but will become increasingly aware that our diversity, when accepted with tolerance and goodwill, will give us that security and peace and empower us to become infinitely greater than the sum total of our diverse parts.

Only thus will we begin to master the art of living on planet earth.

Stillbirth story leaves out many of the facts

I wish to reply to an article in the March 7th edition of the Reporter-Telegram, page 5B, concerning the stillbirth of a woman's child while in the care of Bronx Hospital's nurse midwives.

The article gives little in the way of facts. Facts of the case include gestational diabetes in particular and Certified Nurse Midwives (CNMs) in general.

It appears that the woman received the proper testing and screening and was deemed low-risk. It is impractical to use a physician for all pregnant women. Doctors are trained for maximum intervention for the most ill patients. Their skills are much better utilized with high-risk patients. It is like using an elephant gun to shoot a canary. By the same token, CNMs are trained at facilitating the normal processes of pregnancy. Pregnancy is not an illness. The quote from the mother about excess amniotic fluid (polyhydramnios) is incorrect. This condition is the result of several different fetal anomalies and not the cause.

Gestational diabetics have an increased rate of fetal loss, statistically, and this carries over to subsequent pregnancies even if the mother does not exhibit signs of the disease, granted, to a lesser degree.

This is just the way it is. Medical science is making great strides in all areas but it is far from guaranteeing a perfect baby from each pregnancy. It is naive to expect such and consumers need to educate themselves as to the risks of pregnancy and the fact that it is at best a calculated risk — one that we must take with our eyes wide open and with full responsibility for whatever outcome occurs.

Babies and mothers can die regardless of the degree of the care-giver. In my opinion lawyers need to get a grip and stop encouraging the "someone has to be blamed for all bad outcomes" attitude. This only leads to tests and technology needlessly applied routinely to all pregnancies, when in fact some routine interventions can actually cause problems.

To clean up a favorite quote, "stuff happens."

Taxpayers should have say in matter

In my letter published in the Reporter-Telegram on Feb. 5, I admonished our city management for not calling a referendum election concerning building a new $30 million airport terminal building.

The perfect opportunity for such a referendum election has presented itself to our city fathers and the taxpayers of the city of Midland. With the upcoming May 6 city elections, let's put the referendum on the ballot. It will not cost the taxpayers one red cent, and it will put an end to the controversy one way or another.

This is nothing personal against the council, but since the taxpayers of the city of Midland are the ultimate guarantors of these loans I believe we should have a say in the matter.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish "open" letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702, or you may fax to 682-3793.

SPEAKING OUT

It's time to stop forcing our views on others

By Nancy Hart

A terrifying mindset has grabbed this country. Whatever name you choose to give it — political correctness or family values — it's all the same: my way or no way. This narrow-mindedness, which is practiced by liberals and conservatives alike, is destroying privacy and freedom of choice, pitting us against one another, and setting a terrible example for our children.

We're angry and resentful, bullying or whining. Once we've made a choice, it becomes not only our choice, but the only choice. We seem convinced that if we yell loud enough, invoke the wrath of almighty God, or pass enough laws, everyone else will come around. Well, it won't work. We can't control what others think. In our pious frenzy, the Christian values of tolerance, humility and kindness are minimized or forgotten altogether. Our children learn to scream and harass; to pontificate and browbeat. What they don't learn is personal responsibility.

Self-righteousness is a heavy burden. A true believer must be constantly on the alert for those who stray and must be ready to immediately and violently interject himself into others' lives. Perhaps the most ridiculous example, and the one that precipitated this writing, is Heather Firestone, the new Miss America, who is deaf. Some have criticized her for speaking rather than using sign language. Her private choice has become someone else's political agenda. Is it more politically correct to sign than to speak? Why does one have to be better than the other? And whose business is it anyway?

A lifetime Midlander, Nancy Hart is an attorney who teaches in the Legal Assistants Program at Midland College.

And then there's the conservative agenda of restoring prayer in schools. Religion is the most private of choices; the freedom to choose was one of the reasons this nation was founded yet we seem determined to stuff our choices down everyone's throats. Those who are truly religious practice it all day long and don't have to use the classroom to force their views on others. I have immeasurable respect for those who apply their religion; they try to abide by the values they learn there and pass them on to their children and others by example. I have less admiration for those who loudly espouse religion on demand.

What about the buzzword of buzzwords: "family values?" I am always immediately suspicious of politicians who latch onto that phrase. It's such a wonderfully simple issue. How can you be against it? I always want to ask "whose family?", but I guess if you have to ask, your family surely needs to get some new values. I have a friend whose ideas about sexual freedom and child rearing are much more liberal than mine. I haven't told her that she's making some very big mistakes, but I've criticized her aloud to others. I've been playing God myself and I owe her an apology. Rather than spending my time toting up her faults or lecturing her, I'd better take my own moral pulse and read up on pride.

Finally, there's the whole feminist agenda that seems to have spun out of control. Women who choose to pose for "Playboy" and not feel exploited and may not agree that a nude photograph threatens the philosophical survival of feminism and the world. Men and women are different; is that a problem? Insisting on new gender-neutral words won't change anything and besides, they sound downright silly. I don't feel demeaned or threatened my the term "mankind;" I've always considered myself a member. Don't we have more important things to worry about.

What should we worry about? Maybe we should worry about our own lives instead of everyone else's. Maybe we should ask ourselves why it's so important that everyone agree with us. Maybe we should consider whether our children hear ear-splitting invectives, constant complaints or calm discussions. Perhaps we should concentrate on the virtues of courtesy and introspection instead of speechifying. Please don't misunderstand me. I'm a firm believer in the First Amendment; I may not agree with you, but I'll defend your right to speak. But, let's all back up a little, think a bit, and turn down the volume.

Moss jailed for probation slip

RACINE, Wis. (AP) — Former Wisconsin Badgers running back Brent Moss, who hoped to join an NFL team despite a drug conviction, was jailed for what authorities called a probation violation.

His agent Jim Steiner declined to speculate what Friday's incident might do to his chances of getting picked in next month's NFL draft.

Moss, 23, the Rose Bowl's most valuable player a year ago, was dismissed from the Badgers' roster following his arrest on a narcotics charge last year.

He was picked up Friday by Racine police on orders of the Dane County probation office. Dane County deputy sheriff Bernie Reinfeld said the order could detain Moss for up to five days while his case is reviewed.

The order did not specify what the violation might have been, he said.

"I won't comment until I have had a chance to talk to him first. I will say that this is not a very positive development in his career though," Steiner, of St. Louis, said.

Moss' father Henry Moss said the arrest "seems to be a mistake this time" and that family members "don't want this to be blown out of proportion."

State crime is up, statistics show

■ 'Crime and Justice in Texas' reveals results of a 10-year study of state crime, as well as giving complete information for 1993.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Texas received little good news concerning its crime statistics that were compiled in a book recently released by the Criminal Justice Center at Sam Houston State University.

"Crime and Justice in Texas" is a compilation of statistics for 1993 — the most recent year for complete statistics — and a study of crime in Texas for a 10-year span.

According to the publication, Texas had a 3.5 percent decrease in violent crime — murder, rape robbery and aggravated assault — from 1993 to 1992.

The only violent crime that had an increase was rape, which went up by 5.3 percent. The largest decrease was in robbery, which was down by 9.2 percent.

However, looking at the statistics from 1983-93, the news was more disturbing.

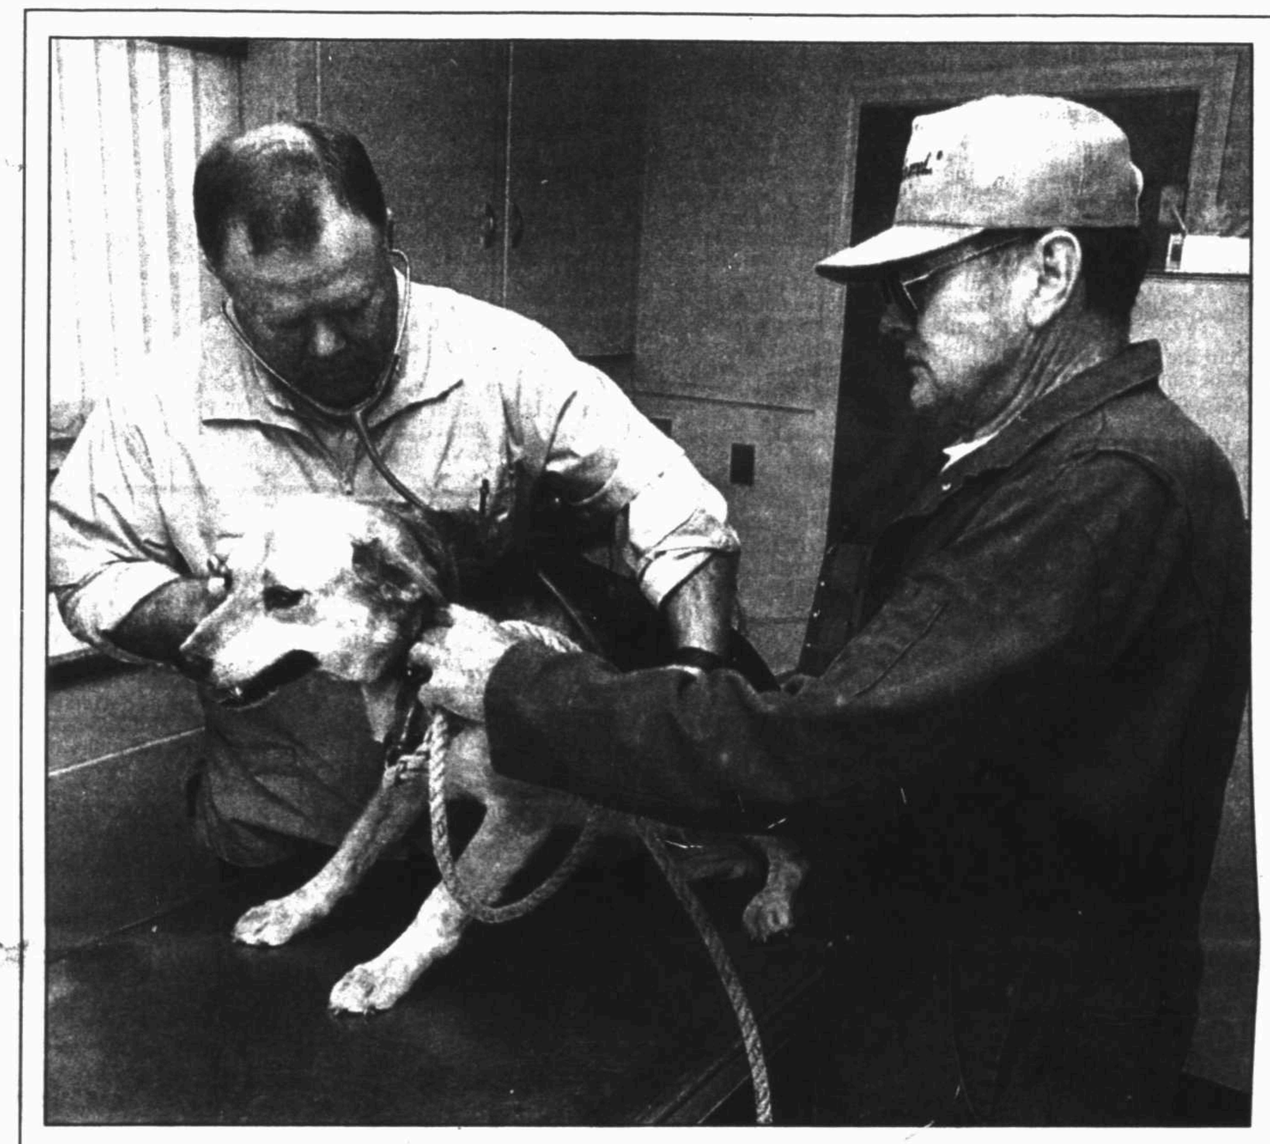

Violent crimes in Texas increased by 51 percent, compared to 38 percent nationally. The state led in each category: 76 percent to 52 percent in assault; 26 percent to 25 percent in robbery; and 20 percent to 14 percent in rape.

Texas also led in property-crime increases during the same 10 years — 16 percent to 9 percent nationally. Theft increased by 33 percent in Texas, 9 percent nationally.

Although the number of murder cases in Texas dropped 29.2 percent from 1980 to 1993, the state still had the third-highest murder rate in the nation in 1993, with 2,147 cases reported that year.

The publication reported that in the homicide cases, 53 percent of the deaths were the result of the use of handguns; 13 percent due to a knife or stabbing instrument; 3 percent, rifles; 7 percent, shotguns, 10 percent were due to an unknown firearm; 4 percent, personal weapons; and 11 percent were due to another type

Coincidences play significant role in 2 lives

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Melinda Murphy and Bob Bowdon's lives have crossed paths so many times with coincidences so peculiar that their story is a little hard to swallow.

Murphy

But the two on-camera television personalities for NewsTalk Television, Multimedia Entertainment's new cable network, swear it's the truth.

And, would they lie considering they have family here in Midland? Probably not.

Bowdon lived in Midland from 1974-1976 and attended Emerson Elementary and Goddard Junior High schools. Ms. Murphy was born and reared in Midland and also attended Emerson and Goddard.

Bowden

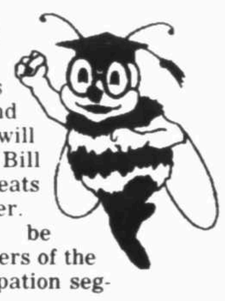

But, the pair never met in school, not even when they performed in a school Christmas show together.

Now, via telephone from the New York City office they share, they laugh as they reminisce about the teachers they had in common from music teacher Mrs. Tipton to Bowdon's favorite teacher, Coach Dewey Teel.

"He was way ahead of his time," Bowdon said happily. "I owe all my success

Teams register for bee

Seven teams of corporate spellers have signed up for the April 7 Bee for Literacy, which benefits Midland Need to Read, according to Patti Groce, executive director of Need to Read.

The teams are Texaco, Arco, Bank One Midland, Chevron, Parker and Parsley, Midland College and Texas Instruments. Only five more teams will be able to compete since the time frame necessitates limiting the number of competing teams to 12, Ms. Groce said.

This year's event is set for 11:30 a.m. at Midland Center. Tickets are $10 and include lunch, which is to be catered by Murray and the Frenchman.

Corporate teams pay a $500 fee, which covers participation, lunch for three team members and Bee T-shirts.

The public is invited to attend the event, which will be emceed by Bill Dingus. John Deats will be pronouncer.

Prizes will be awarded to winners of the audience participation segment of the bee.

Company representatives wishing more information on the bee should contact Midland Need to Read at Midland College, 685-4572.

The Reporter-Telegram, sponsor of the event, underwrites expenses in order that all proceeds can be used in the local effort to combat adult illiteracy.

Conference to focus on increased trade, cooperation with Mexico

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Establishing a corridor for trade and cooperation is to be the focus of a conference set for March 31 at the Best Western Hotel, 3100 Wall St.

The purpose of the first Bi-National Encounter Conference — sponsored by the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce — is to introduce top leaders of adjacent Mexican states to businessmen and similar leaders in the Midland area, explained Fernando De La Rosa, a specialist with the chamber's International Department.

Increased trade and economic cooperation along a direct corridor between the Pacific Ocean in the state of Sonora and the Dallas/Fort Worth Metroplex and beyond and through the Texas Panhandle is the goal of U.S. and Mexican backers of the conference, De La Rosa explained.

This is a much more efficient route for goods and services for many parts of the United States and Mexico than the usual route through California. Furthering the establishment of this corridor gives Texas easy access to vast areas of the world through Pacif-

GARY OTT

Single people tend to develop some protective instincts

Ott

At some point in an unmarried person's life certain parental instincts begin to form.

It happens slowly. Maybe you decide to adopt an animal and then talk to it as though it were a little person. Or, perhaps you actually coo and make silly faces at a co-worker's baby when he is brought into the office. Or, maybe you even agree to babysit a friend's kid.

OK, forget No. 3, but you get the point. All of us, at some point in time, feel a need to be protective of a loved one, be it a brother, sister, friend, or what have you. We worry about their well-being.

But you know you have REALLY gone over the deep end when you start directing that concern at your parents, especially when they are still quite alert and more than capable of making major decisions that affect their lives, such as how late to stay out at night.

Still, we worry.

See if this sounds familiar.

It is a Tuesday night and you decide to make a quick long-distance call to your parents, "just to see how things are going." You figure the whole thing will take 15 minutes, tops. So you turn down the TV, pour yourself something to drink and start pecking out the number.

It rings once.

Then twice.

Finally a third time.

Still no answer.

You check your watch. 10: 15 p.m.

"Where are these people?" you say to your cat as she waltzes by, sort of flicking her tail in your general direction. "They should be at home at this hour."

The ringing continues.

Four, five, six times. Still no answer.

Since your dad spends 95 percent of his waking time in the easy chair in front of the TV next to the telephone, you have a pretty good idea that no one is home. But you let it ring a time or two more, just in case.

Nothing.

As you hang up, you mentally sift through the various possibilities. They're probably at your oldest sister's home, having enjoyed a late dinner. Or, maybe they are visiting friends. There is even an outside chance they could have gone out of town for a few days without telling you.

Probably no big deal.

I mean, they ARE adults. They are certainly entitled to move about without getting your permission. Besides, if they want to stay out half the night, acting like a couple of wild teen-agers, so be it. They always were irresponsible anyway, coming and going as they darn well please. Don't they know we worry about them. Well, if that's the way they want to behave, to heck with them. I wash my hands of the whole sordid affair.

It is about then, of course, that you realize just how foolish you are acting. So you kind of laugh at yourself and return to your TV program. A short time later you head on to bed.

Now turn the clock ahead 24 hours.

You again dial your parents' number. This time your dad answers on the second ring. That's more like it.

"So," you say, attempting to be extra casual. "I tried to call you last night. What were you guys up to, anyway?"

"Not much," he responds.

"Well, it was after 10."

"Really?" he says. "I didn't notice."

"Are you being coy with me?" you snap.

"Not at all," he says with a laugh. "Just getting even with you for when you were a teen-ager and kept us up half the night worrying."

Touche.

TALK: Coincidence brings 2 together

to him."

The two didn't even know until years later that Bowdon's best friend at the time lived one door down from Ms. Murphy or that they went to the same church and had many of the same friends.

"We talk about it," Ms. Murphy said of their common childhood stomping grounds.

"It's wild," Bowdon added.

"We just recently realized we went to the same church. The whole thing is really silly," Ms. Murphy said.

They could have met when Bowdon's brother, Dick, married Ms. Murphy's best friend and college roommate, Melody Stewart. They were supposed to walk down the aisle together, but Ms. Murphy wasn't able to attend. Dick and Melody Bowdon live in Midland.

But, that wasn't the only wedding they had in common. Bowdon once dated Jill McElligot, who married Melinda's best guy friend, Rodney Mack.

The meeting

Finally, they met, but not in Midland.

They met in the lobby of the World Trade Center in New York City in 1987 on a blind date arranged by Bowdon's brother and his wife.

"It didn't go very well," Ms. Murphy said tactfully.

"It was a disaster," Bowdon recalls. "We had both gone to big state universities and were both, then, in corporate sales. I worked for AT&T and she worked for CBS. I didn't think we had much in common other than that. We were fairly bored with each other's company, so we just ate and drank."

"We just didn't hit it off at all. We both thought the other one was a little stiff, a little boring, I guess. Boy, were we wrong," Ms. Murphy recounted.

One more date was all it took for the pair to know romance wasn't in the cards for them.

"We took different paths from there, but we met again and worked together on different jobs," Bowdon remembered.

The pair saw each other again three years later at a concert in Central Park among thousands of concert-goers. Both had left their corporate sales jobs to pursue careers in television.

"We worked together off-and-on and we'd get each other jobs," Ms. Murphy said.

Bowdon was a location scout on "Hangin' with the Homeboys" with New Line Cinema. He helped his "old, new friend" get a job there as an intern.

Following the wrap of the film, Bowdon secured them both jobs selling beer at Central Park concerts, while they continued their efforts of breaking into the entertainment industry.

Then, Ms. Murphy got a job on "The International EMMYs" as a talent assistant. She helped Bowdon get a job as an audience assistant. They both worked on "The Sports EMMYs."

Next, in the saga of this pair of former Midlanders, Ms. Murphy landed a job on the short-lived "New York at Night" program that ran on WWOR-TV.

Surprisingly enough, or not, Bowdon worked there, too.

Ms. Murphy was a production coordinator and eventually became a talent booker. Bowdon was a researcher before becoming an associate producer.

While working at the station, they entered a costume contest for Halloween. As a team, they went as "Operation Welcome Home" and won a bright orange hearse.

Ms. Murphy called it one of her favorite possessions.

Unfortunately, the vehicle was vandalized and had to be junked, lamented Ms. Murphy.

Separate ways

For a while, the pair actually split and took separate career paths.

Bowdon went on to "The Jackie Mason Show," "Science and Technology Satellite News" and then to "The Roger Rose Show."

Ms. Murphy went to "Sally Jessy Raphael" and then out to Los Angeles to work on television pilots.

Both became producers then senior producers.

Finally, their paths crossed again.

"We both had the same boss at one point and she runs the network. She gave us our jobs," Ms. Murphy said.

Rose Mary Henri, executive producer of NewsTalk Television, gave Bowdon a shot at an on-camera job. He debuted in October as an information specialist, working with computers, live, on-the-air to enhance several of NewsTalk Television's programs.

The producers were so impressed, they even gave him his own half-hour show.

The channel then wanted to add additional programming and they needed another information specialist.

Unbeknownst to Bowdon, Ms. Henri called Ms. Murphy in Los Angeles and asked her to come to New York City to audition for the job.

Ms. Murphy called her old friend Bowdon to tell him the news.

She flew to New York and got the job and her own show.

Bowdon described their shows as news discussion shows similar in format to CNN's "Crossfire," with news-oriented discussions and live viewer calls and interfacing with the computer.

"Basically it's a debate-type show in which we moderate and allow phone-ins from our viewers," Ms. Murphy said.

Now, they work in a little office, side-by-side on the 12th floor of The New Yorker Hotel.

On-air, Ms. Murphy works days and Bowdon works nights.

As coincidence would have it, the first time each went on the air, their parents sent them flowers.

Romance?

"We have had the strangest lives," Ms. Murphy said with a chuckle.

Stranger yet, Ms. Murphy recently talked to a psychic. The psychic said Ms. Murphy and a coworker, who she interprets to be Bowdon, had been married in a previous life. They had a successful marriage and entrepreneurship, but Ms. Murphy had been jealous of the fact that her husband got to travel and she didn't. But, the psychic said the pair would be great friends in this life.

Hmm.

Despite the psychic's theory of past love, neither of them think romance will ever be in the picture.

But ...

"I have played this silly name game since I was in first grade with just about every boy's name I ever dated. You cross out common letters and then count them by saying either 'love, hate, friendship or marriage.' It's kind of like daisies and 'she loves me, she loves me not.' And you know what? Bob is the only guy I've ever played the game with and ended up marriage. How scary is that?" Ms. Murphy said.

About the Job

Formerly The Talk Channel, NewsTalk Television was officially launched nationwide on Oct. 1, 1994, on Galaxy VII, transponder 22. It is a 24-hour news-based interactive cable channel and reaches 1 million subscribers.

Midland's Dimension Cable doesn't subscribe to NewsTalk Television, so Ms. Murphy's parents, James and Natalie Murphy, bought a satellite dish to see their little girl.

"It's just like being in school again. They'll call and ask me what was the deal with my hair that day because it looked funny ... but, they'd be happy to invite the whole town over to watch with them," Ms. Murphy said.

"Anybody who wants to see the show can call their cable company and request the channel," Bowdon encouraged with a laugh.

RISE: State crime is up, publication says

weapon or blunt object.

Locally, the picture did not get much better.

According to the publication, there was a 7 percent increase in total crimes from 1984-1993 in the Midland-Odessa area. Violent crimes increased 29 percent and property crimes increased by 6 percent.

In addition, Ector County was listed as one of six counties with the highest crime rate, with 80 or more crimes reported per 1,000 people. The other counties were Dallas, Travis, Bexar, Nueces and Jefferson.

"I don't have the raw numbers, but I don't think that the numbers have gone up that dramatically in Midland alone in the past several years," said Midland Deputy Police Chief John Urby.

"However, there has definitely been an increase in the past 10 years in violent crimes in Midland. We are seeing more weapons being used in disturbances calls. And, I think our call load has increased more than that 7 percent."

Deputy Chief J.R. Smith said despite the increase during the past 10 years, the drop in violent crimes across the state from 1992 to 1993 was a positive sign.

"It indicates that crime rates can come down with community involvement," Smith said. "Crime is not just a police problem, it's a community problem."

In Texas, property crimes — theft, burglary and auto theft — outnumbered violent crimes eight to one in 1993, comprising 88.3 percent of crimes committed that year, according to the publication.

There were 274,302 combined burglaries and robberies in 1993 with a total property loss of $328,219,715.

Juvenile crime increased dramatically across the state, according to the publication.

Although the juvenile population in Texas increased by only 30 percent from 1984 to 1993, the number of juveniles who were arrested increased by 47 percent and the number of juveniles arrested for violent crimes increased by 282 percent.

In 1993, juveniles accounted for 26 percent of all arrests in Texas, up from 14.4 percent in 1984.

There were an estimated 750 gangs in 12 Texas cities in 1992, with 13,480 members or associates; the number of prison gang members has doubled in Texas since October 1989.

The three most frequent categories for arrests in 1993 in Texas were drunkenness (17.5 percent), theft, not including motor vehicles (10.5 percent) and driving while intoxicated (10 percent.) A total number of 1,068,928 arrests were reported by Texas law-enforcement agencies.

CONFERENCE: Chamber hopes for cooperation

(From 1C)

ic shipping, De La Rosa said.

The cities of Midland and Chihuahua — being strategically located in the center of each country's half of the network — would serve as the two major hubs of this shipping corridor, he said.

Good rail service already exists along the Mexican portion of this corridor, and officials in that country already are upgrading and establishing good highway systems to complete the motor-traffic part of the corridor.

"They are doing their job, and that's why we need to do (this conference)," De La Rosa said.

Good rail service already exists along the Mexican portion of this corridor, and officials in that country already are upgrading and establishing good highway systems to complete the motor-traffic part of the corridor.

Sessions at the conference will include:

- Economic Development Aspect for Northeast Chihuahua and Southwest Texas by Salvador H. Avila, industrial planning director for the state of Chihuahua.
- Economic Development Aspect, by Patricio Robles Luke, sub-secretary of economic promotion for the state of Sinaloa.
- Privatization of the Infrastructure of Transportation and Commerce in Mexico, by attorney Humberto Gayou Madrigal.
- Texas Transportation, by August Chavez, of the Texas Department of Transportation.
- La Entrada al Pacifico (Entrance to the Pacific) Corridor, by Charles Perry, chairman of the Midland/Odessa Transportation Alliance.
- Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce, by Massey Villareal, vice-chairman of economic development for the chamber.

"We are inviting all the chambers of commerce of Texas, but it (the conference) is open to anybody who wants to attend," De La Rosa said.

At the meeting, it will be determined what each area of the corridor has to offer, what each area needs and how cooperation can be fostered for the profit of all, he said.

The cost of the conference is $30 a person. Those wishing to attend should RSVP by Friday by calling the chamber at 682-2960.

MAJORITY TO MINORITY TRANSFER

The majority-to-minority pupil transfer policy provision is an important part of the desegregation plan of Midland elementary schools. This transfer policy allows eligible young children to attend the same school as older brothers and sisters in grades 4, 5, and 6. The majority-to-minority transfer policy states:

> A primary-level pupil (grades 1, 2, or 3) may transfer from a school in which the pupil's race or ethnic background is the majority to another school in the assigned elementary school cluster, serving the residence, in which the pupil's race is the minority. Transportation is provided by regularly scheduled bus routes which transport intermediate level pupils (grades 4, 5, and 6) within the elementary cluster.

Pupils in grades 1,2, and 3 may transfer to another school in the elementary cluster when their race or ethnic background is a majority in the home school. Also, the race or ethnic background must be in a minority in the receiving school. Transportation is provided by regularly scheduled bus routes within the elementary cluster. You may receive more information by contacting the principal of any elementary school or Jimmie Kelly at the Office of Compliance at 689-1098.

"I went because they were affordable. I stayed because they're wonderful."

I first went to Planned Parenthood because I really couldn't afford a gynecologist. I was young. And nervous. And didn't know what to expect. But now I can afford to go anywhere. And you know what? I still go to Planned Parenthood.

From my very first visit, I felt they sincerely cared about me. They took the time to know me and answered all my questions in plain talk. Every time I go, they're as kind and understanding as ever.

I also feel their medical staff is professional, knowledgeable and very up to date. They're extremely sensitive to a woman's special medical concerns, and everything is kept confidential. I'm glad they offer such a wide range of services. As far as I'm concerned, Planned Parenthood is like family and will always be an important part of my health care.

Jury recommends life sentence

FORT WORTH (AP) — Shortly after prosecutors called Allen D. Norrid a "horrific character" who threatened to hurt anyone who crossed him, a jury recommended he serve life in prison for trying to hire a hit man to kill his former lover and her husband.

The jury intentionally set the fines at $2,000 for each intended victim because that was the amount Norrid had promised to pay for their murders, prosecutor Lisa Mullen said Friday.

Norrid, 27, of Burleson, was convicted Thursday of two counts of solicitation of capital murder.

He was accused of trying to hire the hit man while being held in Tarrant County Jail early last year on charges of the aggravated kidnapping of Suzanne Hickman, the woman with whom he had been involved.

The "hit man," however, turned out to be an undercover Tarrant County investigator who was taping the conversation.

Ms. Mullen asked the jury to recall Norrid's own words from the murder solicitation tape when the undercover officer asked what should be done with the bodies: "Let the bugs eat 'em, for all I care."

HOMES

Spring Has Sprung!

Set on large grounds in a peaceful part of Old Midland, this compact and affordable three bedroom, two bath house offers the home buyer masses of potential. The main aspects of the house, such as the hardwood floors which stretch throughout the property, provide an ideal foundation from which to create a dream home.

The reoccurring theme throughout the house is warm-hued wood. Elegant wood floors mirror the knotty-pine paneling and cabinetry which is a tasteful feature of the kitchen and family room.

The kitchen offers much to the gourmet chef. Masses of counter space is echoed by the cavernous cabinets which are crafted out of the same dark pine as the paneling. The storage space is accentuated by the built-in desk and bookshelves which mirror the overall theme.

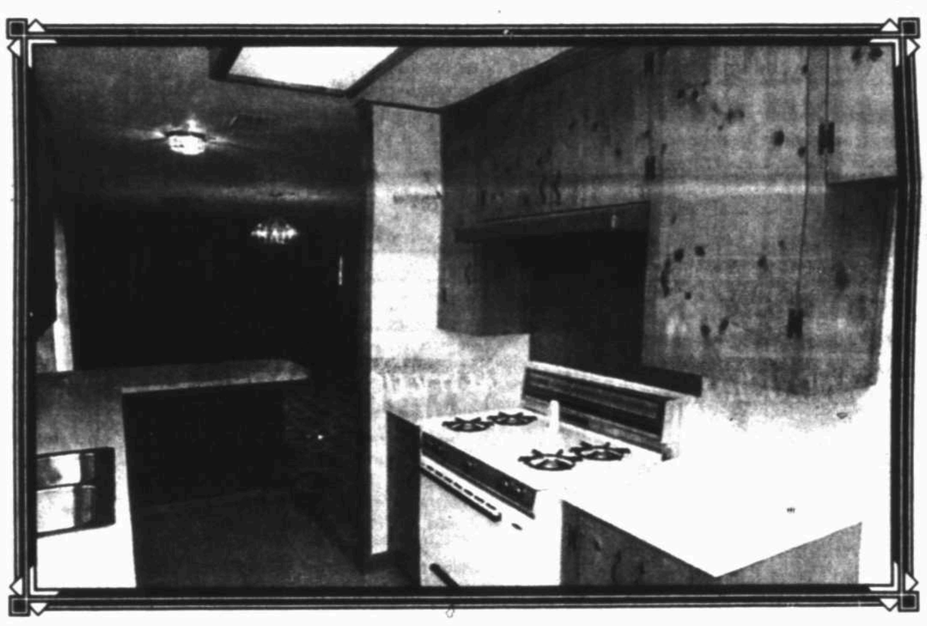

The family room, onto which the kitchen opens, offers huge windows that have a pleasant view over the large back yard.

One of the unusual features of this house, and one sure to please the home handyman, is the large workshop in the back yard. With a enormous, solid workbench and lots of storage space it is the perfect place for home projects.

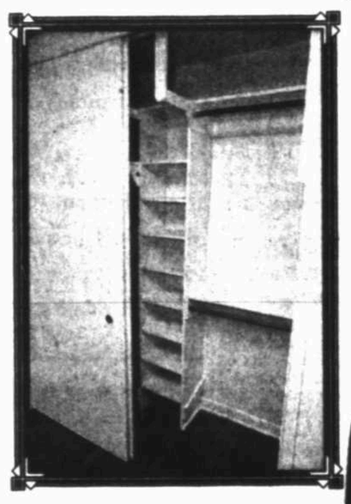

Other aspects of the house, such as the new interior paint, built-in shelves in the closets and pretty tiled bathrooms all add to the pleasant feel of the house; particularly when coupled with interesting features such as the 'phone niche in the hallway.

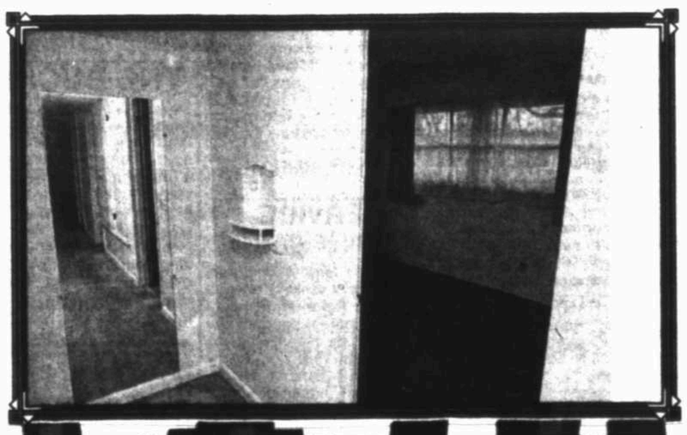

Perfectly suited to a young family who would appreciate all the space, this is home with great possibilities, situated in a lovely neighborhood.

Listed at $69,900 by Ruth Young of ReMax (682-8820), the house will be open for viewing between two and four o'clock this afternoon.

Three crucial elements influence monthly payments

Brian Cooper
President/Midland Association of Realtors

How much house can you afford to buy? Although financing your dream home may be costly, you may be able to afford more than you think, according to the Midland Association of Realtors.

"Buying a home usually involves both a cash down payment and a mortgage for the balance of the purchase. Unless you know in advance the amount of down payment and the mortgage you'll need, you really don't know how much house you can afford," says Brian Cooper, president of the Midland Association of Realtors. He points out that three elements are crucial to the purchase of a home -- the down payment, closing costs and qualifying for a mortgage.

The following information is provided to you by the Midland Association of Realtors to assist you in the home purchase process;

DOWN PAYMENT: The amount of the down payment you'll need depends on how the transaction is structured and the type of financing you obtain. Typically, conventional lenders will require a 20 percent down payment, although in some cases, loans with down payments of as little as 10 percent may be obtained. If a down payment of less than 20 percent is made, the buyer will likely have to pay private mortgage insurance, which guarantees that the lender will be repaid in case of default.

Single-family mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) have more lenient down payment requirements than most conventional loans. In most cases, FHA financing requires down payments of less than 5 percent. Mortgages guaranteed by the Department of Veterans Affairs (DVA) require no down payment on loans up to $184,000.

CLOSING COSTS: Closing costs, paid at settlement, vary considerably. However, the most common costs include the following: discount points (one point equals one percent of the loan amount), title insurance, escrow fees, attorney fees, termite report, recording fees, appraisal fees, document preparation fees, notary fees and a loan underwriting fee.

LOAN QUALIFICATION: Determining how large a mortgage for which you qualify is based mainly on the interest rate offered and your income. The higher the interest rate, the higher the monthly payment. And, the higher the mortgage. For conventional financing, lenders generally limit the monthly payment to 28 percent of your gross monthly income, although exceptions can be made depending on individual circumstances.

A point to remember -- the monthly payment probably will be calculated to include taxes and insurance, along with the principal and interest on the mortgage.

Besides checking your income, the lender also will require a credit report, as well as a statement confirming your employment. Be prepared to show financial statements proving that you have the money to cover your down payment and closing costs.

"Buying a home does require some financial resources. But, savvy buyers can make the maximum use of their money to get what they want," says Cooper. "When you know how much you can afford, you're in a better position to negotiate with sellers. If you take the time to work through your budget, you will find out what you can pay without stretching yourself too thin or sacrificing important aspects of your lifestyle."

The Midland Association of Realtors is one of more than 1,800 local boards and associations of Realtors that comprise the National Association of Realtors. As "The Voice for Real Estate," NAR is the nation's largest trade association, representing nearly 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

First impressions often make or break home sale

Peggy Strong, CRS, GRI
Chaparral Realtors

Have you ever heard that first impressions are everlasting and non-replaceable. It's a good philosophy to remember when marketing your home for sale. Last week we began an inspection through the eyes of a buyer and progressed up to the front door. Today we enter the door and get our first impression. Here's hoping yours is a good one!

Buying a home is usually one of the largest financial transactions considered. Consequently, every bodily sense is at full alert and positively responds to the sight, sound, smell, and body language a home gives off. The entrance of a home, the first impression, must absolutely radiate in perfection.

Set the Stage! Lights on! Soft pleasant music! Inviting aromas!

Odors are a sure turn-off for the majority of buyers and just as importantly pleasant aromas can do magic! Invest in potpourri, candles, carpet deodorizers, etc. Baking cookies, popping popcorn, or simmering vanilla on the stove have been know to win a buyer's smell. The way to a man's heart is said to be through his stomach, pleasant odors affect many buyers as well. Once a Buyer wanted to have a front kitchen, 2 living areas, and rear 2 car garage and bought a lovely home without a front kitchen, only 1 living area, and a front 2 car garage . . . why? Because the peach potpourri in every room overwhelmed his other thoughts!

Pet odors are difficult to cure and quite often will terminate any further interest of a buyer. Whether it is dirty diapers, cat box, cooking odors, Homeowners may find certain odors difficult to observe simply because it is part of their everyday life. It is imperative to understand it is an important issue if and when resale occurs. many buyers shy completely away if indoor pets are observed due to allergies. Ask your Realtor and several friends for advise on the smell of your home!

Soft "elevator" music is the final element needed at the entry way. The ambience set, the mood and atmosphere delightfully perfect, and the Buyer is ready to move on to the next phase of this inspection.

Wow! We have not yet left the entry way, but next week we'll continue on to discuss a few more secrets of a successful sale! Gig'em!

Moving usually represents some of life's greatest stresses

Ruth Young
Re/Max of Midland

Only death and divorce is more traumatic than moving. One out of five families moves every year.

Leaving old friends and moving to a new city where you don't even know your next door neighbor, let alone directions to the nearest supermarket, not knowing a doctor, and unknown schools for children, is never easy. You can't get a decent hair cut, and the soap you've always used makes water cloudy or leaves scum.

The logistics of physically getting a family and their possessions from one home to another is expensive. Emotional turmoil, discomfort, uncertainty are a factor no matter how welcome the move. Sometimes children cry when they see their toys and belongings go on the moving van. They can become physically ill and may think you're leaving them behind. Smile often, and be positive.

To take some of the trauma out of your next move consider the following:

Choosing a carrier or moving yourself is one of the first steps. If this is a transfer, the relocation company or employer's representative will contact you with the names of the moving companies they have negotiated a contract with to move you. Weekends and holidays cost more (usually 1 1/2 times).

If you are paying for this yourself, be sure to call several companies and have them come to your home and give a written estimate. Remember that a written estimate is often not binding. You'll still have to pay according to weight and mileage on moves more than 50 miles, and by the hour on local moves. Movers offer a packing and unpacking service.

Always read the small print to see what damage the mover is liable for, whether insurer can limit the amount paid for lost, stolen, or damaged goods or any extra costs. You may want to get a written appraisal on antiques.

Be sure to check references, check to see the number of moves a company makes in a month. Make sure they hire only permanent, experienced movers and not people off unemployment lines. If moving across state line, check a company's performance record through the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Self movers make up 80 percent of all moves made. One out of three self movers will use rental trucks while the rest will use their own or borrowed vehicles. While it can mean more work, self movers can add up to extra savings.

If renting a truck, newer trucks or ones that are better serviced generally means better gas mileage. Availability of the proper size truck can save money. Check on drop off charges. Also, if moving aids such as furniture pads, tow bars, and dollies are included.

Boxes packed by owner are not usually covered in case of damage. Most packed containers weigh less than 50 pounds. New or used boxes can be purchased, or get them from someone moving in. Some carriers pick up and resale your used boxes. See if you are paying for the boxes.

Consider not even moving the excess furniture or all the things in your garage you don't use. Have a garage sale (to help pay for your move). Donate the leftovers. If you are not going to use it, don't take it.

Storage bills add up quickly, so consider the value of items in storage.

Have someone stationed by the door where items are being unloaded and check the number on each container, box or piece of furniture. If a box is missing turn in a claim. If contents are damaged, save the box with number and the damaged item.

Some families move all the small things and hire a mover to move the furniture. Have everything ready to load in the truck if paying by the hour on a local move.

Look on the bright side! It's a chance to clean house and garage and throw away what you don't need for your new beginning.

Real Estate Facts . . .

Credit check prior to home shopping proves valuable

Vicky Garrett
Chaparral Realtors

Planning to finance your next home? Want to know a simple way to eliminate some of the frustration of being approved for a mortgage? Get a credit checkup before you begin looking for your new home.

There are many types of mortgage loans, each driven by a different set of guidelines. The lenders who arrange home loans must adhere to the appropriate rules and regulations in order to approve their loans. The guidelines include income-to-debt ratios, employment verifications, and debt repayment histories.

One of the first steps taken by a lender after you make your formal loan application is to order a current credit report from one of several reporting agencies. The lender will ask the credit agency to update all information for the report, including employment, outstanding debts and payment history.

The lender will expect the updated credit report to accurately reflect the information given during the application process. This is where a credit checkup can really pay off for you.

Before you begin your home search, contact the local credit reporting agency. Ask them to furnish you with a copy of your current credit file. There may be a small charge for this report.

When you receive the report, look at each individual creditor reporting. Check amounts owing and payment history shown for accuracy. Be sure to examine each creditor's information carefully. Ocasionally, inaccurate or false information may be reported. This would show up on the mortgage lender's report too, causing possible delays in your mortgage approval, not to mention the embarrassment of being asked for an explanation.

The time to correct inaccuracies is before you apply for a home loan. Then, when you make the loan application, you can rest easy knowing the lender has complete, accurate information upon which to base loan approval.

PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, MARCH 19, 1995 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BRIEFING

A weathered spool from a cable tool rig lies behind a fence.

Drilling slips

Drilling activity fell for the week ended March 10, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count slipped two rigs to 111 for the week but remains above the year-ago level of 96.

Lea County, N.M. remains the most active in the Basin with 21 rigs, followed by Eddy County, N.M. with 14 rigs. Midland County had eight rigs.

Nationwide, the rig count continued to fall, dropping nine rigs to 675 for the week. A year ago the count was 733.

Williamson named

Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Barry Williamson has been named second vice chairman of the Interstate Oil and Gas Compact Commission.

As second vice chairman, he will serve as chairman of the IOGCC Nominating Committee and vice chairman of the Steering Committee.

He was named Texas' official representative to the IOGCC by Gov. George W. Bush.

The IOGCC is a national organization representing the governors of 29 states that hold virtually all of the nation's energy reserves. Williamson has been a Railroad Commissioner since January 1993.

A junkyard is filled with used drilling and production equipment.

Prices improve

Energy prices showed modest improvement this past week, boosted by strength in gasoline futures.

After hovering just below the $18 level a couple of times this week, West Texas Intermediate for April delivery closed at $18.16 late in the week on the Mercantile Exchange. The posted price at $19.50 a barrel.

Natural gas futures surged to a 10-week high of $1.62 per thousand cubic feet late in the week.

WTGS short course

The West Texas Geological Society will host a Short Course on "Evaluation of 'Settled' Oil & Gas Properties/Royalties" Thursday at the Midland Center, Room 5.

Presenter will be Sidney Moran, a consultant in evaluating and acquiring domestic oil and gas properties and royalty interests.

Cost is $50, including lunch and course notes. Registration is available by calling 683-1573.

PBPA speaker

Denise Bode, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, will address the Permian Basin Petroleum Association Thursday at the Petroleum Club.

The Oklahoma native is the first woman to serve as president of the IPAA.

The public is welcome, but reservations are required and can be made by calling the PBPA at 684-6345.

A composite view of a workover in progress and a pumping unit at sunset, reflects the busy nature of the well servicing industry. The industry is in a state of flux, driven by a changing infrastructure, low rates, alliances,labor problems, and a major reorganization of AOSC.

Low rates set the pace for well servicing

By John Paul Pitts
Business/oil editor

Ask well service contractors what it will take to get the well service industry back in shape and chances are the answer will come back in two words — better rates.

To get an indication of how bad it is, rates now appears to have surpassed environmental overkill as the top concern, because it is at the root of all well-servicing ills — including labor problems and deteriorating equipment.

Because of a lack of a good rate that allows contractors to replace equipment, Steve Rachel of D.C. Well Service in Denver City says the industry has lost its cushion . "The idle rigs have been have been cut up for scrap, cannibalized or sold overseas," says Rachel.

Rex Busby , operations manager for Eunice Well Service typifies the mood of many contractors in the industry.

"Our rigs are busy, but I wish we had a decent rate increase. We can keep afloat with current rates, but we can't buy any equipment," said Busby.

With $400-$500,000 needed to put a new rig in the field, Busby thinks rates will have to improve in the future, and he thinks that will come as service companies get larger. "Rates are bound to go up, because the big companies will control the market," he says.

Like others he is trying to keep costs down by working crews only 40 hours per week.

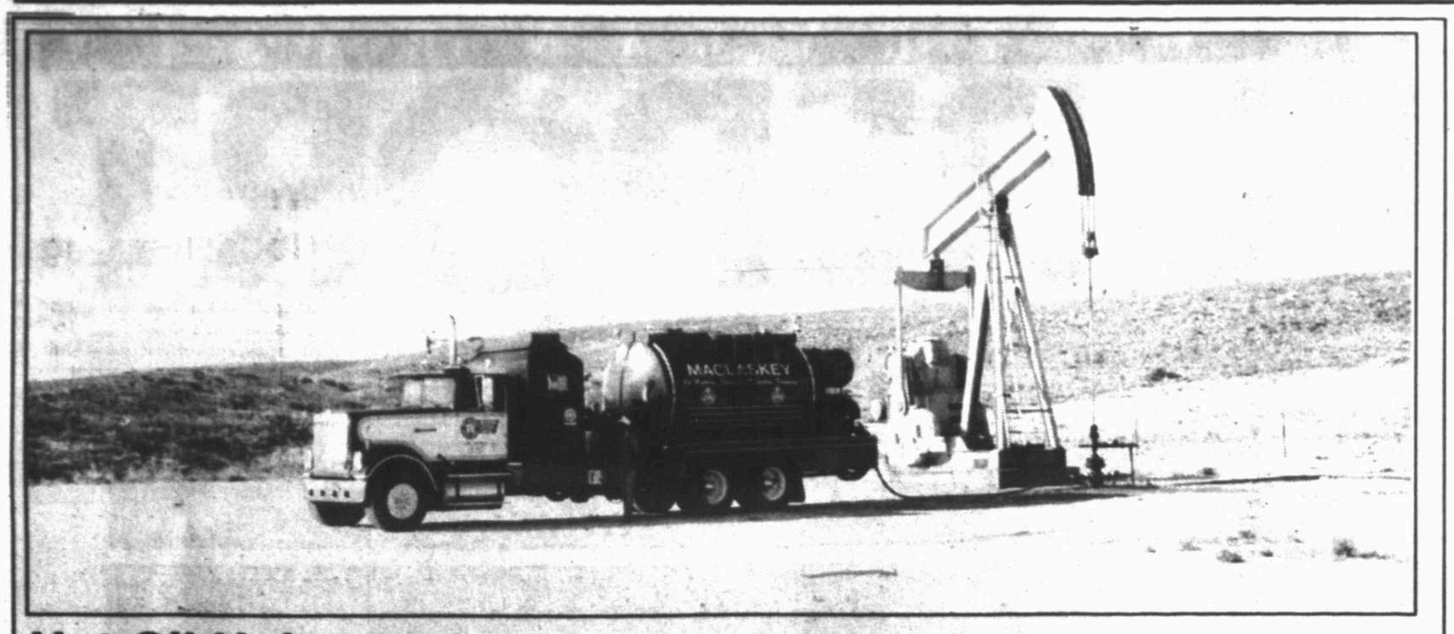

Paul Galloway, owner of Galloway Enterprises, operates four rigs in Abilene and agrees that overtime is a main factor in eating up already thin margins. "There is a point of diminishing return, when it is cheaper to add another rig and crew than to pay overtime."

Galloway is also concerned that some customers don't want to pay the $50 per day for H2S equipment, when his crews have to work in an H2S environment.

Tommy Pipes of Yale E. Key says rates are better than they were, but not good enough and need to improve some more. "Contractors who schedule $40 million of work, with a one percent return are just spinning their wheels. We don't want safety to become an issue because of

Hot Oil Unit

Introduced at the 1994 Oil Show, a hot oil unit manufactured by McClaskey Oilfield Services of Hobbs, incorporates technological features that could change the face of the hot oil business. Built by Energy Fabrication of Odessa, the unit features computerized pumping and a round tank for easy clean-up and access. An on-board computer measures elapsed time, line pressure, temperature, flow rate and total barrels pumped. A print out informs the operator that exact instructions have been followed in the hot oil treatment of a well and that he has gotten exactly what he paid for. Above, the Maclaskey hot oiler treats casing and flow lines for Floyd Oil Co. on the Mescalero Ridge Federal lease, 35 miles west of Hobbs.

Keeping the crew together

Well servicing ponders growing labor problem

By John Paul Pitts
Business/oil editor

There has been a slight improvement in rates, but the big problem remains labor, says Brian Watson, manager of R&H Well Service.

"In this game whoever has the most experienced hands will win," says Watson.

Steve Rachel of D.C. Well Service, laments the passing of the experienced hands from well servicing. "Too many of the experienced hands have gone on to other jobs and will not be back."

Jimmy Webster, president of Webster Service in Abilene, said that nearly half of his crew applicants fail the drug test. "We have four rigs stacked for lack of crews." He said that in his opinion labor problems have now passed environmental regulations as the number one concern in the industry.

"If it doesn't ease up in the next year and a half, this industry is going to be in trouble. This is the worse I have seen it since 1947."

Some contractors, Webster include, blame a welfare system, which makes it possible for one to earn almost as much money for not working as working, as part of the problem. Others blame low rates and low wages.

Globe Well Service Owner Frank Sandel says company uses cash incentives and extra vacations to instfll safety and quality performance, but still is having the same problems as everyone else with finding qualified applicants.

"The only people who are applying are totally inexperienced, so the problem is just going to get worse."

He said he has very few applicants who can't pass the drug test, because of the company's reputation for being tough on drugs. Globe was one of the first well service companies to test for drugs and alcohol.

Hubert Young, with Jolley Well Service in Sweetwater, says he has five rigs but will stick with working only four until his luck with finding crews improves.

Others, however, report better results. L& R Well Service's Bob Lloyd said he has been lucky with crews, in that he has had little turnover in the seven years he has been in business.

To keep steady crews and to keep them busy, Dwayne Taylor of Lucky Well Service says he has diversified into swabbing, kill trucks, vacuum truck, frac tanks, BOPs, transports, and hot oilers.

To attract and keep good hands, Yale E. Key has its own training center where crews receive full OSHA training.

"To compete in this business you have to provide quality work and part of that is compensating hands the best you can," said Tommy Pipes. "We have a safety bonus program that gives hands extra incentive to work accident free."

The experienced hands have gone on to other jobs and will not be back, said Steve Rachel, D.C. Well Service in Denver City.

Inexperienced hands are put on as a fifth hand and worked with experienced hands, until they can work safely with everyone.

I have had to turn down work, because have had more equipment than people. "The work load fluctuates, and the crews come and go. I can't blame them. They have bills to pay."

RATES: Soft rates add to problems

From 1E

the disrepair of rigs."

Bob Lloyd of L&R Well Service in Hobbs thinks margins may have improved slightly this year, but were knocked out of whack by workmen's compensation.

There are indications that alliances may have played a role in the industry's bare bones rates. "Alliance bidding has become very competitive," says Dwayne Taylor, owner of Lucky Well Service in Hobbs, "but I had rather park my equipment than give it away."

Lynn Massingill, owner of Well Co. in Brownfield, says companies must either downsize or grow to become competitive. She thinks the majors will eventually turn over operations of their assets to service companies.

Harry Teague of Diamond Rental in Hobbs sees a remating of the oil companies and the service companies. He said the big oil companies will go with single source service companies, and the larger single source contractors will turn loose of small production companies.

"It will take time, but eventually I think you will see the small service company mated with the small producer almost exclusively."

Despite the fact that his 35 rigs are showing an 85 percent utilization rate, Mike McDermett, president of AOSC and president of Cobra Well Servicing of Hobbs, is also concerned about margins. He is concerned about a lack of capital to refurbish rigs and equipment or to buy new equipment.

He said to his knowledge only one new rig has been built in this country since 1986, and some of the rigs in the field are now beginning to show wear.

"If a rig is not repainted, it leads to rust and rust leads to a weak spot."

Rates are directly linked to oil prices, and everyone agrees that a stable oil price would lead to better rates, and better rates would solve a lot of well servicing problems.

But there is also growing agreement that if the industry, is to continue to operate safely, something may have to be done about rates regardless of improvement in oil prices.

Mitchell finals sale of 28 wells

THE WOODLANDS - Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. has completed the sale of its interests in 28 wells in Colorado, Matagorda and Lavaca counties, Texas to Shana Petroleum Co. of Natchez, Miss. for $2.7 million.

The wells, which produce a total of 1.6 million cubic feet of natural gas and 166 barrels of oil and condensate a day, are in the Nada East, Palacios and Northeast Provident City fields. The company's working interest in these wells ranges from 62.5 percent to 100 percent. Mitchell retains an overriding royalty interest in production from any future drilling.

Pride, X-Pert merger pending, revenues improve significantly

HOUSTON - As of press time, the long-rumored acquisition of X-Pert Enterprises Inc. by Pride Petroleum Services had still not closed.

The deal had been announced in early February and was expected to close in March. When consummated, the merger will make Pride one of the three largest well service companies in the Permian Basin. According to Well Service Market Report, five companies now account for 59 percent of the area's rig fleet.

In the meantime, Pride Petroleum Services Inc. announced results for the year and quarter ended December 31, 1994 were significantly improved from the comparable periods of 1993.

For 1994 revenues grew to $182,336,000, up 43 percent from $127,099,000 in the previous year. Net earnings before cumulative effect of change in accounting for income taxes for 1994 nearly tripled, increasing to $6,214,000 or 30 cents per share compared to $2,105,000 or 13 cents per share in 1993.

For the three months ended December 31, 1994, revenues were $54,300,000 as compared with $38,257,000 for the same period in 1993. Net earnings during the fourth quarter of 1994 were $2,378,000 or 10 cents per share, more than double that of the same period of 1993 which were $1,020,000 or 6 cents per share.

Speaking Out

Basin contractors give views on issues

By Ellen Hopkins

In the 1995 Well Servicing Edition, contractors were asked to comment on margins, safety, crews, technology, regulations, activity levels or whatever else was on their mind.

Attempts were made to contact all contractors, some we were unable to get make contact with, others simply did not respond. Here are some of the views and concerns of the contractors we were able to contract.

D.C. WELL SERVICE --- Steve Rachel, secretary/treasurer with D.C. Well Service in Denver City, said he's had to turn down some work the last month and one-half because he's had more equipment than people. He commented on crews coming and going as the company's workload fluctuates.

"The hardest part for us is maintaining them when the work isn't steady," Rachel said. "The last three to four months we've had fairly steady work, but as soon as we slow down a little the hands get restless and that's all it takes to tempt them away and go work for someone else. I can't blame the hands; they have bills to pay."

When he has to hire an inexperienced hand, Rachel said he'll put him on as a fifth man on a crew and pay him a training wage until he learns the job and can work safely with everyone.

Rachel said a steadier workload would not only improve his crew situation, but also margins which have been down somewhat. He said the company hasn't changed rates in two or three years. Rachel said currently 11 of 14 rigs are operating.

He wishes the industry had more stable prices. He said after the government ran its study to determine that high imports are jeopardizing the country, they still didn't change anything.

"The only way this industry can return to normal activity and pick up production is with a stable price," he said. The important thing now is to stay and survive until things get better and he believes they will.

"There will never be another boom, unless something drastic happens to the market--which is always a possibility with OPEC. But the infrastructure is gone and too many of the experienced people are out of the business and won't be back," he added.

Rachel said idle rigs have either been cut up for scrap, sent overseas or cannibalized for parts. He cited a recent example of needing a part, borrowing one from a competitor's idle rig, and then replacing it a month later when his new part arrived.

The only new technology he's noticed was an article about automated rigs that are used in California. He said the shallow, single derrick rigs wouldn't work on deep wells in the Permian Basin.

CLARKE WELL SERVICE --- Another item that won't go over well is new federal legislation requiring a fall device for anyone working over six feet off the ground. Ike Bailey, president of Clarke Oil Well Service in Hobbs, said the new mandate took effect February 6th and is going to be expensive.

"It's going to cost several thousand dollars to equip a rig, and it doesn't just apply to the oil industry," said Bailey. "Anyone working on a roof, washing windows, painting a house, or anything that puts them six feet high will have to comply with this."

Bailey added that the fall device must prohibit the individual from falling farther than 18" and in some cases the tying cord must be a bungee-type of stretch cord.

"The safety belts we use now on derrick hands that go around the waist will be obsolete and have to be replaced by full body harnesses," he said. He added that evidently this OSHA law doesn't apply to people riding in ski lifts, bungee jumpers or those participating in other dangerous sports.

Bailey said there are a lot of new laws coming at the industry, but he also cited the positive aspects of directional drilling and re-entries. He said he's excited about this work and said his 14 rigs have been running at an 80 to 85 percent utilization rate.

"Margins are better this year," Bailey said. "We don't need another '94." He prefers not to work in alliances and thinks the oil companies and service companies each do a better job of running their own businesses and using their own expertise, rather than getting too involved in telling each other what to do. He said crew turnover is still a problem this year.

R&H WELL SERVICE --- Brian Watson, manager with R & H Well Service, said the company has 55 rigs running now, up from last year. He said until the last week or so business was up 12 percent over last year, but now it's down about 20 percent.

"Now there's some stability for you," he said. The drop was somewhat anticipated because it usually hits around the first of February each year. He said the initial increase this year was probably overflow from the end of '94.

"Labor is a big problem," said Watson. "Whoever has the most experienced hands will win this game."

He's seen some improvement in margins, but is not looking forward to the new environmental regulation requiring a secondary fall device for derrick men. He said it will interfere with a derrick man's ability to lean when he latches and unlatches tubing.

Watson said last year that alliances were going to be the wave of the future, and the company is still involved with them throughout the Permian Basin.

BROWNLEE WELL SERVICE ---Brownlee Well Service in Andrews is involved in a trucking alliance with Unocal, according to Reo Brownlee, vice president. He said alliances are a good deal for those who have them, and he said the company has some other proposals out.

Brownlee said his workload increase is due to the independents buying properties from the majors, because of their ability to operate them at lower overhead.

"The independents are working on these fields that haven't had any money spent on them in a long time," said Brownlee. "They can survive on a lesser return, and it's good for us because this spending in the field has increased our workload."

He said the company has 16 rigs, and 14 or 15 have been steadily busy. He's all crewed out and although his hands have remained fairly steady, he said everybody's having hand problems.

Brownlee said his concern is with a new regulation regarding the fall line for the derrick man. He explained that the climbing assist device, a counterweight that makes it easier for a hand to climb the ladder, now needs to incorporate a climbing arrest device that will catch him without jarring his body and causing back problems.

One such type of device has a retractable line that works like a seat belt and catches a derrick man within six inches.

"Our concern is that he wears it all the time, and the oil and produced water that gets on everything on the rig will be repeatedly retracted in this device," said Brownlee. "How long will it be before the line is coated and won't work anymore?"

In conjunction with safety regulations, Brownlee said the company plans a safety banquet for April and may make it an annual event. Awards and drawings for those with good safety records will be included.

WELL-CO WELL SERVICE --- Lynn Massingill, owner of Well-Co Service in Brownfield, has used several innovative programs to keep hands and inspire them to work safely. She agrees that qualified, experienced hands are hard to find.

Massingill is continuing the safety incentive program which rewards hands for attendance, having no accidents and using safe working practices. Added to this is a new "lottery" program through which five hands each won $1,000 last fall.

"We analyzed what was spent on accidents and decided to institute this lottery program," Massingill said. "Lottery tickets are given with safety checks and it worked very well. The hands voted to do it again this summer, but they'd rather have ten $500 winners."

Massingill said the idea was to add even more emphasis on safety, and by adding more incentives to what was already given she would keep safety in the front of everyone's mind.

Also still in effect is the performance objective program centered around measurable job performance aspects such as how well a rig is maintained, how well rods are pulled out of the hole, etc.

She said 50 of Well-Co's 69 rigs have been busy, and although margins have been down somewhat, she maintains alliances with Amoco, Texaco and Mobil. Massingill believes oil companies are continuing to change and well service companies will have to change accordingly.

"We either have to size down, or we have to grow and become as competitive as necessary," she said. "The majors have been cutting overhead by selling properties to independents and we'll continue to see this. But I think we'll also see the majors turning over operations of properties while still keeping an interest in those properties."

Massingill said this will keep the majors in the domestic market, and is simply a result of the independents' ability to operate more efficiently than the majors.

"Oil companies are asking us about the "enviropump' that is used to keep oil off the ground," she added. "So the environment is still a big issue. Also, OSHA is getting very involved again in the industry." She cited a recent DOT directive under which drivers will be more heavily tested, not just for illegal drugs but also for alcohol.

WESTER WELL SERVICE --- Jimmy Wester, president of Wester Services in Abilene, said nearly one-half of all his rig hand applicants fail the drug test.

"We're in bad need of crews, especially floor hands," said Wester. "I've got four rigs stacked because I don't have enough people."

He added that although he has 16 rigs running, the crew shortage problem is as bad as last year. What is working as well as last year--if not better--is his safety program.

Wester has a safety program in place which includes a safety engineer, awards, tailgate meetings, monthly meetings for each district and quarterly meetings for everybody.

"It costs a lot, but it's the best paying work we do," said Wester.

Another expensive part of doing business deals with the environmental regulation concerning oil filters. Wester said he has to rent a barrel in which he discards oil filters; the barrel is picked up monthly.

"Environmental regulations can be a problem, but what I'm worried about is the labor situation," he said. "If it doesn't ease up in the next year and one-half, we're (industry) going to be in trouble because it's deteriorating very rapidly."

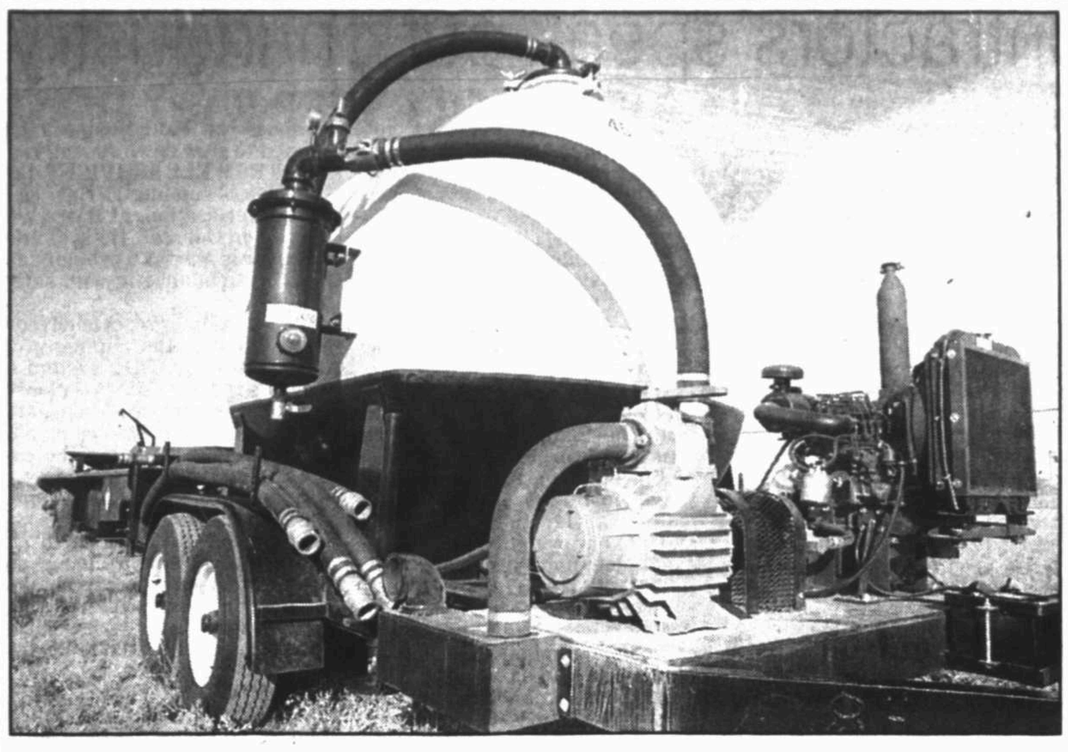

Wester said he's never seen it this bad since he started in 1947, and he blames the government for ruining all industries available labor force. He said federal giveaway programs have potential employees laughing because they can make almost as much as he pays by combining food stamps, medicaid and unemployment pay.

"There may be nothing you or I can do to change it today or tomorrow, but it needs to change," he said.

SIERRA WELL SERVICE -- Joey Fields, vice president of operations with Sierra Well Service, said the company is instituting an electronic change, and has just about completed work on an EDI system (electronic data interchange) with Phillips. His five plugging rigs have been very busy and his crew turnover rate is minimal.

"We're busy all the time," said Fields. "Plus we pay top wages. Plugging hands are more expensive because they have to know how to run pump trucks and do other special things."

Fields added that the company has investigated coiled tubing, but is waiting on some different types of tools to expand the number of applicable wells.

He also noted a new procedure Sierra has recently completed involving NORM disposal. He just completed working with Unocal in New Mexico using this procedure and it was very successful. The process blends NORM with a substance that causes it to gel up such that it can be pumped downhole.

DA&S WELL SERVICE --Kyle Reiger, director of sales and marketing with DA & S Oil Well Servicing in Hobbs, said 31 of the company's 35 rigs have been steadily busy. He refers to the overall workload as "feast or famine."

Despite the fluctuations, Reiger said margins have improved due to increased oil prices and crews have been fairly steady. He attributes the latter to DA & S having an outstanding benefits package.

"It's been a plus for us," Reiger said, "but we still have problems finding qualified people to hire, and people who can take orders because they understand english."

He said the company is in the process of updating its safety program to further the incentives for hands. Under consideration is a "team building" program by which hands evaluate one another, take responsibility for observing one another's actions and list what they've noticed--good and bad--on a daily form.

"The idea is for hands to feel accountable and therefore stay on top of what happens," he said.

DA & S is involved in a "mutually beneficial" alliance with a major for the third year. Reiger said it has kept rigs busy even when prices dropped last year. He thinks highly of this type of alliance and said it can provide a three to five year plan for a contractor to work from. It's still important to keep a certain number of rigs available for other jobs that come in.

The company instituted an EDI (electronic data interchange) system of electronic billing last year. Reiger said he's anxious to connect via EDI with other oil companies as soon as they are ready. He plans for DA & S to stay a step ahead on all new work-related developments.

In the area of legislation affecting the industry, Reiger said that includes 500,000 acres nearby that the Bureau of Land Management does not want drilled due to a protected species that no one has seen. He said oil companies are out collecting signatures.

The regulation regarding the full body harness that a derrick man must wear instead of his safety belt is not news to Reiger. He said DA & S has been using these for over a year and a recent AOSC meeting presented a manufacturing rep from a harness maker.

"Our tradition is to do what's safe and use the right equipment so we can get the jobs," he said. "It's expensive to implement all these safety programs. And it becomes even more difficult when you're bidding against other contractors and you can't raise rates."

PRIDE PETROLEUM SERVICES --Pride Petroleum Services, with 75 of 109 Permian Basin rigs working, is another company that implemented the full body harness a year ago. Jon Peters said the harness costs about $100. However, proposed legislation could require a fall protection device that catches the derrick man within three feet. "I know of two types," said Peters. "One is a bungee type of connection and the other is more like the cord reel that retracts on a vacuum cleaner."

He explained that the reel would be mounted on top of the derrick, and the cord on the derrick man would retract if he slips and falls. Estimates are that the cost will be about $1,700.

Peters added that Pride uses the DuPont STOP safety program under which rig hands learn to stop someone on the job from doing something dangerous. There is no associated reprimand, just discussion about what almost happened. Incidents are logged on cards and discussed at the next safety meeting.

"Once you get a field hand convinced that management is 110 percent behind its safety program, he becomes aware and strives toward safety," Peters said. "We're at this level, we talk safety everyday, and our hands know all accidents are preventable."

He said the program has been very effective and Pride has since implemented a quality management program.

Peters said alliances are a major part of the company's business. Pride is continuing to participate in an alliance with Amoco and uses an EDI system.

Under another major alliance with Coastal Management, tool pushers have been provided with a laptop by which they can access well information. He said pushers input any changes they've implemented into the laptop and the data are downloaded directly into Coastal's system.

Experiments are underway with Mobil using a laptop "board" similar to the type delivery companies use for receipt signatures.

"Using this type of board, a rig operator would enter information from the field, for example the time a rig worked and the names of the employees," Peters said. "This information would electronically transfer to the customer and into our systems. It would be a complete paperless trail."

GLOBE WELL SERVICE --- Frank Sandel, president of Globe Well Service in Big Lake, said his company computers are ready to implement EDI or any other communications technology, but none of his customers have required it.

"We work 98 percent for the independents," said Sandel. "They've been our bread and butter for years."

Sandel has been in the business for 37 years and is proud that Glove won the AOSC's Gold Award for the second year in a row. The award was given for working over 200,000 manhours without a lost time accident. He said the company has received 19 safety awards from the AOSC in the last 20 years.

"We really work at safety and our people respond," he said. "Our in-house safety program includes cash bonuses and extra vacation."

Sandel added that all 10 rigs are working and he shares other contractors' difficulties in hiring qualified people.

"The only people who are applying are totally inexperienced, so the crew problem everyone is having is just going to get worse," he said. "But we have very few applicants who can't pass the drug testing."

He said Globe was one of the first in the area 10 years ago to start testing for drugs and alcohol, and his reputation eliminates most of the applicants who can't pass.

PARKS WELL SERVICE --- Jack Shook, with Parks Well Servicing in Lamesa, said his crews have been stable and is glad he hasn't had to replace anybody this year.

"We give our hands a dozen pair of safety gloves every month that they don't have an accidents," Shook said.

He works strictly for independents and has all eight rigs busy, although he said business has started to slow down recently.

BATES WELL SERVICE --Larry Bates is running 17 rigs, or 80 percent utilization, at Bates Well Service in Odessa. He said crew turnover is always a problem and he ties attendance in with safety bonuses.

Although Bates is not involved in any alliances, the company did incorporate an EDI system at Amoco's request. Bates is pleased with the system's timesaving ability to track a lost invoice by simply retrieving it within the program, editing and re-sending it, with no hardcopy involved.

Environmental changes at Bates include using the Envirovat to maintain clean wellsites and handle spillage. Bates has included the Envirovat in the equipment taken to every wellsite and said it keeps oil leaks and dirty water off the ground.

DIAMOND RENTAL TOOLS --- Harry Teague, with Diamond Rental in Hobbs, said meeting environmental and safety regulations is expensive, and the costs are increasing every year.

"In 1986 we spent $5,000 per rig to meet OSHA standards," said Teague. "It seems we're required annually to make some large capital outlay for compliance that we can't recoup."

Teague has three of his five rigs steadily busy, and said companies his size won't be able to work for majors if they continue to prefer a "sole source provider." He said diversifying to the extent that he could provide all related well services is too much for any company to consider that has less than 12 to 15 rigs.

"It seems that some oil companies tend to use the dollar/hour rate as the deciding factor on hiring a contractor, when they should be looking at how that contractor's crews perform," Teague said. "I'm not sure in the long run if these oil companies are saving money."

He is proud of his crews' safety record and said that since he implemented the monthly safety bonus program five years ago, he's seen his record improve. In 1993, Diamond Rental won the AOSC's Gold Award for Class Two--100,000 manhours worked without a lost time accident.

Teague foresees a transition in the well service industry as independents continue to buy the majors' properties and become larger in the process.

"The biggest change we'll see is a remating of the contractors and oil companies," he said. "The big companies will go with the 'sole source' contractors, while these larger contractors will turn loose of the small production companies.

"It will take time for the transition, but I think you'll see the small service companies mated with the small producers almost exclusively."

COBRA WELL SERVICE --- "There has been no increase in margins for us because our rates have stayed the same," said Mike McDermett, president of Cobra Well Servicing and current AOSC president. "But hospitalization insurance, supplies and materials are all costing more."

McDermett said it's fortunate there is still plenty of equipment throughout the industry to do the work, so there's no need--and no

Conoco completes Terrell County gas find

Staff Reports

CONOCO INC. has completed an apparent Pennsylvanian pool discovery in the KM field of Terrell County, 20 miles southwest of Sheffield, one of three wells the company completed in the area.

The No. 1 Culbertson State "16" was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 21,250 Mcfd. The well flowed from perforations 10,848 to 10,860 ft., which had been acidized with 1,000 gallons of HCL acid and fractured with 92,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Permitted as a 14,000 ft. test, the well was drilled to 11,592 ft. and plugged back to 11,349 ft. with seven inch casing set at 11,439 ft.

Formation tops, on kelly bushing elevation of 2,871 ft., include the Ferry Lake Mass Anhydrite at 870 ft., Wolfcamp at 4,720, Pennsylvanian at 10,848 and Strawn at 11,001 ft.

Location is 1,513 ft. from south and 1,981 ft. from east lines of Section 16, Block 2, CCSD&RGNG survey, Abst. 2771.

Conoco also completed two oil producers in the KM Southwest (Wolfcamp) field, 26 miles southwest of Sheffield.

On potential test, the No. 1 Creek Ranch "57" flowed 287 barrels of 46 gravity crude and 202 Mcfd on a 14/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 550 psi. The well flowed from Wolfcamp perforations 5,610 to 5,818 ft. The interval was treated with 78,000 lbs. sand.

Scheduled as a 14,000 ft. test, the well was drilled to 6,100 ft., where five inch casing was set, and plugged back to 5,960 ft.

The well topped the Cretaceous at 880 ft. and Wolfcamp at 3,236 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 2,830 ft.

Location is 3,060 ft. from north and 841 ft. from west lines of Section 57, Block 1, CCSD&RGNG survey, Abst. 113.

On potential test, the No. 3 Creek Ranch "60" pumped 49 barrels of 46.1 gravity crude, 229 Mcfd and 11 barrels of water from Wolfcamp perforations 5,300 to 5,458 ft. The interval was acidized with 336 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid and fractured with 16,381 barrels of gel and 248,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Total depth was 5,720 ft., where five inch casing was set, and the well was plugged back to 5,619 ft.

The well topped the Cretaceous at 860 ft. and Wolfcamp at 3,205 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 2,878 ft.

Location is 1,927 ft. from north and 597 ft. from west lines of Section 60, Block 1, CCSD&RGNG survey, Abst. 1981.

Marathon completes dual gas discovery

MARATHON OIL CO. has completed a dual gas discovery in Pecos County, 15 miles west of Girvin.

The No. 2 University "17" was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 5,001 Mcfd from perforations 4,113 to 4,393 ft., which had been acidized with 7,700 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid.

From perforations 4,502 to 4,518 ft., the well flowed a CAOF of 1,076 Mcfd. The interval was acidized with 168 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid.

Permitted as a 5,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 4,743 ft.

Location is 907 ft. from south and 2,076 ft. from west lines of Section 17, Block 26, ULS survey.

Dual producer opens new Strawn gas pool

A possible new Strawn pool discovery has been made in the Hunt Baggett (Strawn) field of Crockett County with completion of a dual producer by SONAT EXPLORATION INC. MIDLAND.

Sonat tested the No. 2T Baggett "B" for a calculated absolute open flow of 4,172 Mcfd from Strawn perforations 8,984 to 9,034 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,200 gallons of NeFeHCL acid and fractured with 51,500 gallons of gel.

In the Baggett (Clearfork) field, the No. 2U was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 905 Mcfd from Clearfork perforations 2,568 to 2,577 ft. This interval was acidized with 1,200 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFe acid.

Scheduled as a 9,800 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 9,296 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 9,300 ft.

Location is 1,500 ft. from south and 950 ft. from east lines of Section 24, Block F, GC&SF survey, Abst. 617.

Terry County field gets second producer

A second producer has been completed in the Brownfield Southeast (Fusselman) field of Terry County, a west-southwest offset to the field opener, 4.6 miles southeast of Brownfield.

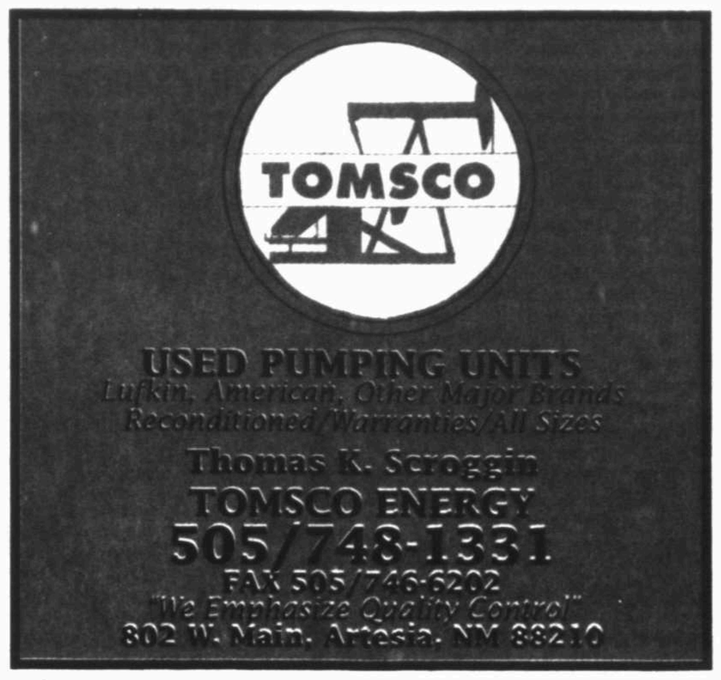

AMERICAN COMETRA INC. potentialed the No. 2 Riley-LGB "73" to flow 95 barrels of 36 gravity crude and 2 Mcfd on a 6/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 320 psi> The well flowed from Fusselman perforations 11,986 to 11,988 ft.

Scheduled as a 13,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 12,078 ft., where 5-1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 12,058 ft.

Location is 1,550 ft. from south and 2,325 ft. from east lines of Section 73, Block T, DW RR survey, Abst. 161.

Mapco plans pipeline project in New Mexico

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A natural gas subsidiary of Mid-America Pipeline Co. announced a $90 million expansion project that will increase deliveries to eastern New Mexico with a new 400-mile pipeline.

The expansion will allow Mapco to fill contracts with El Paso Natural Gas Co. and Meridian Oil to transport natural gas liquids on Mapco Natural Gas Liquids Inc.'s Rocky Mountain Pipeline System, the company said.

Capacity will increase by 50,000 barrels a day on a new 12-inch pipeline that will run parallel and adjacent to Mapco's existing pipeline, which has a capacity of 135,000 barrels a day.

Construction is scheduled to begin this summer and be finished by the end of the year.

The contracts will give Mapco stable volumes for its pipeline system, said Robert Sachse, president of Mapco Natural Gas Liquids. He said the expansion will increase the efficiency of the Rocky Mountain line and increase volumes on its Seminole Pipeline System to the Texas Gulf Coast.

Historic rig debut

Mack rig was made for a purpose

By John Paul Pitts
Business/oil editor

If they had an awards show for rigs, the Watson-Hopper Workover Rig would be up for three of them.

One, it is the first rig ever built in New Mexico. Two, it is possibly the first new rig to be built from the ground up, since 1986, when the bottom fell out of the oil industry Three, it is an innovative new breed of workover-drilling rig that could find a niche not only in the Permian Basin but the national and international well service industry as well.

Especially designed and built for Mack Energy of Artesia, New Mexico, it is the first rig built by Watson Truck since the company bought Hopper Rig Co. in 1992 and moved it to New Mexico.

Powered by computer controlled Detroit, D-Deck engines, which give it improved fuel efficiency and pollution control. It is built on a standard Hopper I-beam chassis. The five-axle chassis is equipped with a 48,000 Eaton rear end and a 28,000 Eaton front end.

The rig which took eight months to build is also equipped with a super sturdy mast that allows it to drill pipe and casing.

"This 106 foot mast is rated to 300,000 pounds and is one of the larger in New Mexico," said Weldon Craig, vice president of sales for Watson-Hopper. He said it also had one of the largest draw works in this part of the country.

The custom rig was built for Mack Chase, owner of Mack Energy of Artesia, who operates over 600 wells in Eddy and Lea counties.

Robert Chase, president of Mack, said the rig would be used exclusively in-house for workovers, clean-outs, and well-deepening. "We have a lot of work to do and will keep it busy 25 days a week," said Chase. At present the company does not plan to drill new top-to-bottom holes with the rig, even though the rig is rated to drill to 8,500 feet and comes with its own power swivel, pumps and air drilling compressors. It is rated to 18,000 feet for workovers.

The four-man rig is completely tooled out, with tongs and slips for both drill pipe and workovers, and has a special 8x12 fold down floor that is supported by cables from the tubing board.

"It is the first rigs in this part of the country to be equipped with the big Eckel tongs," said Craig. "With this rig Mack Chase will be self-sufficient." He said the rig could run 5 inch casing.

"As a producer, we find that having our own rig and crew works very well for us," said Robert Chase. "It gives us more control on safety. We have it when we want it. We have the same crew all the time. We can fit it out anyway we want, and all the improvements we put into it belong to us."

Watson-Hopper is betting that the which cost in the neighborhood of $500,000 to build and tool up will find favor in the Permian Basin among producers and contractors.

"We are in the process of building two more on speculation," said Craig.

Are alliances just another passing organizational fad. Or, the future of the oilpatch?

The verdict appears to still be out on the matter. For those involved in alliances there appear to be few complaints. Some, however, don't have an alliance and don't seek them. Then, there is the complaint that alliances have become nothing more than a device for extracting the last ounce of margin from a contractor.

Reo Brownlee says his company Brownlee Well Service is involved in a trucking alliance with Unocal, and has other proposals out. "Alliances are good for those that have them," said Brownlee.

Says Ike Bailey, president Clarke Well Service: "We don't like to get involved too much in alliances. Oil companies and service companies do a better job of sticking to their own expertise, rather than telling each other what to do."

The beauty of an alliance is that it helps round out the ups and downs of the industry and allows contractors to plan ahead, even though the margins may be desperately thin.

One contractor reported that within the span of two weeks his business went from being 12 percent up to being 20 percent off.

Kyle Reiger, director of sales and marketing for DA&S in Hobbs says that even though 31 of the company's 35 rigs have kept fairly busy it has sometimes been a feast and famine situation.

He said DA&S was now in a mutually beneficial alliance with a major oil company for the third year in a row, and that it had kept rigs busy even when oil prices dropped. "It has allowed us to develop plans three and five years out," said Reiger. He said that not all rigs are committed to the alliance, that some are made available for jobs as they come up.

Size may be a factor in the alliance game. R&H Well Service, which operates 55 rigs, says it is heavily involved in alliances throughout the Permian Basin and thinks they are the wave of the future.

Bates Well Service, on the other hand, says it runs 17 rigs at about 80 percent utilization and does it without alliances.

Pride , with 75 of 109 rigs working, says it depends heavily on alliances, as does Pool Co. which has alliances with Shell, Texaco, Coastal Management, American capital--to purchase new equipment. He's aware of only one newly manufactured pulling unit sold in the U.S. since 1986, and that was a recent sale to a company in Artesia.

VIEWS: A myriad of concerns face industry

He's said one of his major concerns is that the present rate structure doesn't allow contractors to refurbish their rigs as often as they would like to in order to keep rigs in top shape.

"If a derrick is not reprimed and repainted it will develop rust," said McDermett. "The rust leads to a weak spot and this is a safety concern for the contractor and the employees, as well as for the oil and natural gas companies."

McDermett favors alliance agreements in that they help assure him of a certain amount of work down the road. Cobra currently has 35 rigs and an 85 percent utilization rate for the first two months of '95.

He said stable oil prices would go a long ways toward strengthening a contractor's ability to maintain crews, but with volatile oil and natural gas prices the last 12 to 14 months workloads have fluctuated greatly.

As AOSC President, he cited safety as an area the well service industry has expanded. He said there are many excellent safety programs in position and a number of companies that are now self-insuring for workers compensation. He said safety bonuses are popular throughout the industry and are just one example of how invest a lot of money in safety.

McDermett added that the industry wants to attract new labor. But when prices fall two months after a contractor hires a new crew, his labor goes back out looking for work. They may return if the situation improves, but prices fall again and the hands again find themselves unemployed.

"After this happens a couple of times, we lose that experienced labor because those hands will change careers and get into a job that allows them to pay their bills on a regular schedule," he said.

JOLLEY WELL SERVICE --- Hubert Young, with Jolley Well Service in Sweetwater, said if he could find another operator he'd crew a fifth rig. He's been running four rigs and plans to stay with four unless his "bad luck" with crews changes.

He said his four rigs are crewed well and he gives the hands incentives to continue working safely. Safety gloves, new boots and coveralls are among the awards. Young is trying to set up a means to pay for the hands' uniforms.

He added that so many of the wells in the area are older and it's not always feasible to patch holes in the casing. Operators tend to plug them instead. He works entirely with independents in the area.

"One of our big pushes is to keep tongs, elevators and slips rebuilt," he said. "Some of the bigger companies don't charge for tongs, but that's an expense we have to pass on."

Young said he is spending a lot of money in the Midland/Odessa area with repair shops.

BABER-GIBSON WELL SERVICE ---John Baber, with Baber-Gibson Well Service in Hobbs, stressed rig maintenance and safety as two issues important to the company.

"We didn't have the pricing capability to keep rig maintenance as high as we'd like to," Baber said. "But the merger allowed us to bring our rigs up to the 100 percent range again."

Baber Well Service merged with J.W. Gibson Well Service which has offices in Englewood, CO and has 15 operating locations in eight states.

Baber-Gibson has nine rigs, with eight currently working. Baber said he thinks highly of alliances and offers his crews a an excellent benefits package.

Safety is paramount with the company and include daily, weekly and monthly meetings. He said hands sign a card each day that they've had an accident-free day.

Along with sign postings everywhere to promote safe work practices, Baber said monthly random drug tests are performed and every "near miss" is reviewed by all crews. The idea is to live and breath safety.

HARRISON WELL SERVICE ---Dennis Harrison said crews at Harrison Well Service in Denver City have been very stable. He's been running the same three rigs for several years and his hands have been with him a long time.

Harrison gives his righands gloves and jackets as incentives, furnished them with health insurance and tries to pay as good a salary as possible. He's worked for Shell for 30 years and puts safety at the top of his list because said Shell is very safety-oriented.

"You either stay on top of safety in this business," said Harrison, "or you don't stay."

POOL COMPANY ---The safety program adopted by Pool Company is the DuPont STOP program, according to John Slaughter, district manager. He said to be proactive in safety you need to be observant, and the STOP program allows hands to observe each others' work habits and stop if they notice unsafe practices.

Slaughter said Pool is running 90 rigs in the Permian Basin with good utilization. He said his shortage of manpower is just like last year and just like everyone else is experiencing.

He views alliances as the direction the industry is headed. Pool has alliances with Shell, Texaco Drilling, Coastal Management, American Exploration and Mobil, and Slaughter said they comprise 80 percent of the company's activity level.

The company has seen an increase in its trucking business basically due to the alliances. Slaughter said overall this business has doubled in size. Pool provides water hauling, frac tanks, kill services and now has eight hot oil trucks.

Pool is getting ready to implement an EDI system in Denver City to eliminate the current paperwork and approval system.

"We need to get out of this mammoth paperwork process and away from all the signatures required on every piece," said Slaughter. "It's ridiculous the number of transactions it takes to make an accounts payable and accounts receivable system work."

Along with reducing overhead via the EDI system, Slaughter said another new innovation for Pool is adding air cylinders to their rigs to perform the heavy lifting of picking up and laying down tubing. He said the company is trying to lessen its employees' exposure to back injuries.

FIVE STAR CONSOLIDATED ---Wayne Harper, with Five Star Consolidated in Denver City, said he has 12 rigs running at 100 percent utilization. Crews have been steady, and Harper said he provides hands with safety incentives and employs two full-time safety engineers.

GALLOWAY ENTERPRISES ---Paul Galloway said Galloway Enterprises in Abilene has four rigs running. He had an auction and sold five rigs, and is back in the market to buy two more.

He said idle rigs and idle hands are behind him due to a long-range waterflood project in West Texas that will keep one or two of his rigs busy for years to come. He is in the process of hiring another crew.

He commented that not many companies can plan ahead these days, with prices so uncertain.

"The price uncertainty means companies are without a playing field to forecast what they can count on next week, next month or even next year," said Galloway. "Everybody is struggling with the price of oil and there seems no relief in sight with politics the way they are."

Galloway said one cost-conscious area he pays attention to is that of overtime. He wants his hands to work 40 hours a week, but said paying overtime for any more than that can eat up profits.

"I find that we quickly reach an area of diminishing returns when we pay four people time and one-half," he explained. "And it's not just the dramatic increase in cost of labor. Overtime increases insurance, maintenance, all kinds of related costs. We have to decide if it would be cheaper to use another rig and crew."

He said he'll have those decisions to make on an upcoming job that is in an H2S area. He said H2S equipment will run $50 per day per rig, and not all customers will pay for it.

EUNICE WELL SERVICE --- Eunice Well Servicing has nine rigs runnings and one swab unit, according to Rex Busby, operations mamager. He added that crew turnover has been high.

He offers hands a cash safety bonus every month in which they work the full month without an unexcused absence or injury.

"We feel like our rigs are pretty busy, but we sure wish we could get a rate increase," said Busby. "We can keep afloat with current rates, but we can't buy any new equipment.

Busby said it would run $400,000 to $500,000 to put a new rig in the field. He said as the large contractors keep diversifying and getting larger, at some point in time rates will go up because they will control the market. He wonders if the majors are paying attention to this.

"Bigger is not always better," said Busby. "The big companies have the same problems with quality control, the same maintenance costs."

One way he tries to control costs is to only work a rig 40 hours. He said he often pulls another rig out of the yard to avoid paying overtime, but he also realizes hands

Technology Show

Oklahoma event offers contractors latest in well servicing technology

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Changing technology is playing an important role in the changing oil industry, and the Oklahoma Chapter of the Association of Oilwell Service Contractors is playing an important role in keeping contractors up to date on changing technology in the well service industry.

The Fourth Annual Well Service Technology Show, sponsored by the Oklahoma chapter, is set for April 20 in Oklahoma City and is expected to draw over 350 attendees.

The Show is designed to acquaint well service contractors with the ever-changing technology in oilwell servicing and will feature the latest in products, services, supplies and tools, according to Ray Price, Show Chairman.

The Show, which has been getting larger each year, will be held at Superior Auctioneers; 11500 S. Meridian in Oklahoma City. A 10 x10 booth space costs $220 and includes a complimentary B-B-Q dinner. Booths are available on a first come, first served basis.

Price says the Technology Show covers only rig operations and does not get into downhole production equipment. "A lot of the products deal with upgraded equipment," said Price.

He said the show would have leading edge technology, plus upgraded equipment and supplies. "There will be some rig manufacturers, refurbishing shops, equipment manufacturers, safety products, mobil telephone and lubricant companies," said Price." In all about 35 exhibitors are expected for the show, which raises about $2,000 in scholarships for AOSC.

Price said the show which attracts attendees from outside Oklahoma also helps to attract new members to the AOSC.

Technology changes slow in well servicing. Computerized engines and disc brakes, introduced several years ago, were the lastest technology to hit the rig operations market, but this year a new air-operated backup for open-faced tubing tongs will be introduced.

"This is a piece of equipment that could make a big difference in our business. It could reduce crews from four to three --- operator, derrickman and one floor hand."

The tongs, manufactured by Oil Country Tubulars of Ventura, California, could bring costs down and improve margins for contractors.

AOSC looks to expand its services

By John Paul Pitts
Business/oil editor

As the oil industry changes, so must the trade organizations, says Mike Clark, executive vice president of the Association of Oilwell Service Contractors.

As the International Association of Drilling Contractors becomes more focused internationally, the AOSC is looking to expand its services to other well site services. The net result could be the largest and one of the most powerful oil trade associations in the U.S.

In a briefing paper distributed by Clark to AOSC executive committee members, the mechanics of the new organization are laid out. Clark explained that not only has the well service industry changed the industry it serves has changed.

He said the economics of well servicing and the demands of the customers had forced contractors to diversify, that few contractors today are involved in providing only one service.

"Well service companies have become: operators, producers, tool renters, cementers, water haulers, testers, and a multitude of other services," said Clark. "Providing multiple services has become a necessity for companies to survive."

He said the scope of interests had not broadened well beyond just well-pulling, and it was time for AOSC to change to reflect that expanded scope of services that its members now provide.

He said AOSC must redefine itself to be inclusive of and representive of all direct well site services. And, that it what the executive committee of the organization voted unamiously to do at its annual meeting in Houston, in late February.

The committee also voted to appoint an ad hoc committee to implement the change. The committee is now in the process of the following:

- proposing a name which will properly reflect the new contsttuency of the Association;
- submitting revisions to the existing bylaws to incorporate the changes;
- work out an acceptable dues structure and assessment that will attract new members while at the same time preserving the income base derived from present membership.

Some names recommened for the new association are:

Association of Oilfield Service Companies---AOSC

Association of Energy Service Companies---AESC

Oilfield Energy Services Association---OESA

Energy Service Companies of America---ESCA

Association of Well Site Servicing Companies---AWSSC

According to the proposal presented to the executive board, the Association will acquire, preserve and disseminate business information, act as a forum for the exchange of ideas and sharing of common interests in the development of all aspects of well-site servicing Membership would be open to company, individual or corporation engaged in providing well-site services.

Potential members are described as: casing crews, well stimulation and cementing, perforating and logging, wireline tools, rental and fishing tools, hot oilers, well testing, pipe testers, production tools and services. In the areas of construction and maintenance membership would be open to: roustabouts, vacuum trucks, frac tanks, haul trucks, welders and site contractors.

Any firm or organization not directly engaged as a well site service provider but whose products and services are connected with the servicing industry would be elgible to become an associate member. Dues in the new well site association would be determined upon gross revenues, and would range from $200 per year for revenues of $750,000 and under up to $15,000 for revenues of $50 million and over.

AOSC has allotted $90,000 first year expansion plans to allow for additional staff and development.

FACTOR: Alliances alter industry

Exploration and Mobil. Pool says it counts on alliances for about 80 percent of the business that its 90 rigs do. The fact that Pool has diversified into water hauling, frac tanks, kill trucks, and hot oil units helps to cement its alliance business.

There is little doubt that alliances seem to be a "big company" and "small company" situation, but as small producers become big producers through acquisitions what will be the affect on alliances?

"We are going to have to change as the oil companies change," says Lynn Massingill, owner of Well Co which maintains alliances with Amoco, Texaco and Mobil. "Majors are continuing to turn properties over to independents, but they will also maintain an interest in some properties."

VIEWS: Safety, environment top concerns

have bills to pay and may not make it on straight time alone.

Busby said Eunice is an employee-owned company and he stresses quality service. He feels the approach works because it's not unusual for customers to call in and request specific crews that they know provide quality work.

YALE E. KEY --Tommy Pipes with Yale E. Key said 125 rigs are crewed out and operational in the Permian Basin. Utilization runs about 90 to 95 percent.

He also has 30 frac tanks a day out, good activity on the company's pump-pit-swivel packages and said his crew situation has stabilized considerably with turnover way down.

Last year saw the opening of Yale E. Key's training center. Pipes said righands receive all OSHA required training at this in-house facility and learn to go above and beyond what customers expect.

"To compete in this business you have to provide quality work and part of that is compensating hands the best you can," said Pipes. "We also have a safety bonus program that gives the hands an extra incentive to work accident free."

He said the company's alliances with majors have been successful and they are on the edge of incorporating an EDI system.

"We have the technology and we're all set up for EDI," he said. "We're just waiting on our customers."

He said the company is part of a team of contractors, oil company representatives, safety equipment suppliers and national and local chapters of AOSC, which is working on compliance to the new regulation for a derrick man's fall protection device.

"It's not possible to comply with the available equipment the industry has now," said Pipes. "This team will figure out the best answer."

He added that the service industry's rate structure is not where it needs to be, but appears to be improving. He said it's vital that it continues to improve so contractors large and small can maintain their equipment.

Pipes said even contractors who schedule $40 million worth of revenue, but only have a one percent return, are spinning their wheels. He said no one wants safety to be in jeopardy due to the disrepair of rigs.

RAM OIL WELL SERVICE --- Ray Ramsey, with RAM Oil Well Service in Hobbs, said regarding safety, "I've always maintained that the most effective safety device ever created is a conscientious employee."

RAM has 14 rigs running now at 100 percent utilization. Ramsey said he has actually had to turn down some work, and his crews have been very stable.

This May, at the request of Chevron, RAM will incorporate an EDI computerized billing system. Ramsey said the company has an alliance with Texaco that keeps two rigs busy. He sees alliances as the way majors want to do business now, but doesn't foresee that these partnerships will last forever. He said margins haven't improved.

"Margins are about the only thing that hasn't changed for the better this year," Ramsey said.

He said consideration will be given to a rate increase later in the year, but agrees that it's difficult to raise rates when so many companies are bidding on work.

L&R WELL SERVICE --- Bob Loyd said margins for L & R Well Service in Artesia might have improved this year, except for the cost of workmen's compensation. Loyd said his business has steadily improved though.

"We've been in business eight years and each year it gets better," he said. "We started with one unit and now we have seven and they're all busy."

Loyd said he's been lucky with crews. He's experienced little turnover and has not had to shutdown a rig because he can't crew it.

"Our safety meetings each month really help us, and I pay the hands a bonus every day that no one on the rig gets hurt," he said.

Environmental regulations have impacted his business to the extent that the company uses trays under the rig to catch oil and produced water.

"Some companies have asked us to use an enviro-pump," said Loyd. "For example, Phillips wants this used on every location."

LUCKY WELL SERVICE --- Dwayne Taylor, owner of Lucky Well Service in Hobbs, said business has been good the last four or five months, but he doesn't expect it to continue with his current customers. He said they are showing signs of cutting back and haven't mentioned any long-range plans.

Taylor said 1995 appears to be a repeat of last year, in that March through June was a slow period and then worked picked up dramatically in July.

"Bidding is really competitive, but I'd rather park my equipment than give it away," he said.

He commented on the safety regulation regarding the full body harness, and said it was probably directed toward industries in general initially and has now reached well servicing. He added that it's another cost he'll have to absorb and won't be able to pass on to customers.

"We need some help from the government to stabilize oil at around $20," said Taylor. "Even a stabilized price at around $17 or $18 would help us maintain our equipment, but $20 would really kick off the industry, allow us to raise our rates and improve our equipment."

IF I HAD A HAMMER...

Whether it's because of a new job, a new location or a new relationship, at one time or another nearly everyone has to establish a new home.

That, of course, involves purchasing or acquiring sheets, towels, furniture, appliances large and small, and all kinds of items designed to make a house a home.

But after all the shiny new household items are in place, many new homeowners discover that new homes have a way of becoming lived-in homes, and as such, they are going to need some minor repair jobs now and then.

Some home repair jobs require the services of an expert, such as an electrician or a plumber. Others can be done a whole lot cheaper by the home owners.

That's why experienced homeowners agree — while setting up a new household with furniture, appliances and linens, items such as hammers, nails and screwdrivers should not be forgotten.

Of course, even the simplest tools are useless if you don't have the knowledge to use them. Fortunately, the skills needed for many minor repairs aren't difficult to learn.

Tony Burge, department manager with Westlake/Ace Hardware in Midland, advised prospective do-it-yourselfers to consider purchasing instruction books for whatever particular job they want to do themselves.

And never hesitate to get an expert's advice, if necessary. After all, he said, "you can always call (his store) and ask."

Chuck Sanders of McCoy's Building Supply Center in Midland agreed. "It's not difficult to learn, but you need to read the directions," he said. "If a person has no common sense, he doesn't need to be using tools anyway."

But for those with common sense — and the desire to really learn to be a Mr. (or Ms.) Fix-it — these experts suggest that some basic tools would be really handy to have.

"You always need a hammer, a screwdriver and some pliers," Burge said. "Nowadays, they have a screwdriver that can flip around — one end is flat, the other is a Phillips head."

A plain, old, everyday hammer is best, he said. "Hammers come in different sizes and weights. A 16-ounce is a good size. A regular hammer has claws so if you mess up a nail, you can pull it out."

And for these hammers and screwdrivers, Burge advised to get a variety pack of nails and another one of screws. "You're not going to need to get real big (nails and screws) for inside the house."

Sanders agreed with Burge, and added a few suggestions of his own. A prospective handyman needs "a claw hammer, a good pair of pliers (8-inch is a standard size), a tape measure, flat and Phillips screwdrivers. A hand saw is kind of 'handy,' if you'll pardon the expression. ... In basic tools, a hand saw is a good thing to have."

As handyman skills increase, Sanders said, some other tools to consider are a 24-inch level, "a stud finder to find studs in the wall so you can hang a mirror if you want to," a propane torch "for plumbing work," and, along those lines, "if you have the old-fashioned kind of

Joan Baskin honored as community builder

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Although Joan Baskin considers her greatest accomplishment her family and being a "home builder," three Masonic lodges in Midland deemed her to be the worthy recipient of their Community Builder Award this year. It is given annually to a volunteer, who "has followed the precepts, ideals and standards that have long been established for Masonic behavior in building better and stronger communities," according to Mason Leonard Wood.

McKnight-Harrison

Joan was the guest of honor at an award ceremony the evening of March 11 at the Midland Masonic Temple.

Mason Ronnie Williams, master of ceremonies, lauded Joan for her unselfish service to make Midland a better place and for her boundless energy and dedication in doing so. In her acceptance speech, Joan emphasized that builders don't do it alone. "It takes a crew," she said, "and I feel you too are the builders, and I am a part of that crew."

The Saturday night event marks the third year the Community Builder Award has been given in Midland. Previous recipients were Deane Stoltz and Bobby Trimble.

A reception in the Masonic Temple's dining room followed the presentation.

Joan was joined by her husband, Judge Pat Baskin, and two of their four children for the event — J.J. from Austin and Becky with her husband, Doug Ferguson, and their son, A.J. of Midland. The Baskins also have two sons, Bo and Steve, who reside near Marble falls.

Among Joan's good many friends who turned out for the occasion were Paula (Mrs. Frank) Cahoon, Marty (Mrs. Jim) Conine, Suzanne Martin, Chan Driscoll, Georgia and Carroll Thomas, Jane (Mrs. Gary) Garlitz, Pam and Bob Leibrock and Fredda and Randall Lundy.

GINA AND GORDON TATE celebrated Mardi Gras in the traditional Cajun Prairie way in Southwest Louisiana. Gina tells us that the celebration is completely different than that of the cities, such as New Orleans and Lafayette, where the pre-Lenten festivities are much more formal and glamorous.

Gina went on to say that at the turn of the century, a group of local men, who called themselves the Mardi Gras, would ride horseback through the country, gathering chickens from the farmers and meeting with families and friends at day's end to make chicken gumbo, dance and in general, have fun. Today, they ride on trucks and gather late in the day for a community gumbo.

In order to belong to the Courir de Mardi Gras (Mardi Gras run) their costumes must be homemade, even the masks and "capuchons" (tall hats). Practically, the entire population of Iota, La., turns out for festivities held throughout the day as they wait for the men to return. There are arts and crafts, street dancing and delicious home cooked dishes, featuring crawfish prepared in a variety of ways.

The Cajun Prairie tradition reflects "Laissez le Bon Temps Rouler," which translates to "Let the Good Times Roll."

GIRL SCOUTS everywhere observed "Thinking Day" on Feb. 25. It is a day set aside to celebrate friendship and think about Scouts around the world.

Members of Brownie Troop 449, first graders at Hillander School, celebrated by having an English tea party at the home of Linda (Mrs. Jim) Hicks, with Heather (Mrs. Chris) Kirk from Bristol, England, as their special guest.

Heather played a game with the girls, where they learned that although we all speak English, we have many words that differ, i.e., lift vs. elevator, fringe vs. bangs, rubbish vs. garbage, bonnet vs. hood, boot vs. trunk, and so on. She also had English currency for the girls to compare with American money.

Talk centered around Queen Elizabeth and her numerous garden parties, and Heather taught the girls how to properly curtsy before Her Majesty.

The young ladies, dressed in their Sunday best and wearing "jewel"-encrusted gold crowns they had made for the occasion, enjoyed a formal English tea with cucumber sandwiches and cream puffs, complemented by silver teapots and linen napkins.

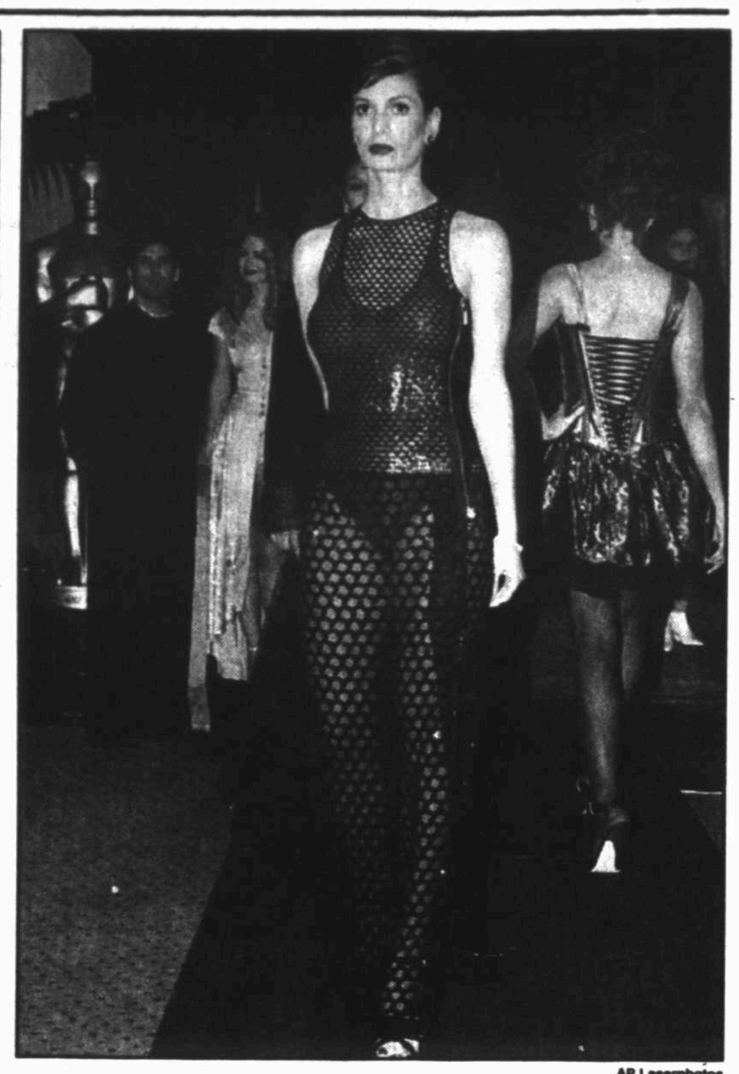

Virginia (Mrs. James) Siegfreid provided a number of English children's books for the girls to peruse while awaiting for the others to arrive. Virginia and her family resided in London for seen years before moving to Midland last year.

Bringing the event to a memorable conclusion was a ride in Arlen Edgar's English taxicab. The girls could be seen practicing the Queen's wave as they drove around the city.

Troop leaders are Linda Hicks, Lynn (Mrs. Kelly) Cox and Lorraine (Mrs. Randy) Davis.

Oscar fashions show return to Hollywood glamour

Annual fashion preview for Academy Awards features exclusive designs, Winston jewels

By Barbara De Witt
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Look ahead to fashions for the coming Academy Awards and you'll find yourself looking back.

Designs unveiled March 7 for the Oscar telecast March 27 showed a return to the Hollywood glamour of the '40s and '50s.

A slinky white-beaded sheath with a floor-sweeping marabou feather coat led the fashion parade at the annual sneak peek of fashions to be worn by nominees and award presenters.

Oscar fashion director Fred Hayman put together the preview — shown in the lobby of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Beverly Hills, Calif. — featuring gowns by Vera Wang, Karl Lagerfeld, Krizia, Badgely Mischka, Isaac Mizrahi, Pamela Dennis, Zang Toi, Gianfranco Ferre and other international designers.

In an attempt to bring more color and formality back to the Oscars, Hayman focused on a palette ranging from red to glittery gold.

Among the other standouts were Anna Sui's bronze '40s siren dress worn with a bolero and gold stiletto sandals, Vera Wang's mint green ballerina gown with umpteen layers of tulle and Marc Bouwer's teen-style salmon sequin dress with sheer netting and white patent boots.

Helping to set the tone were hairstyles and makeup by Jose Eber, authentic jewels by Harry Winston and tiny jeweled handbags by Judith Leiber.

Hayman also showed the trend in formal menswear, which included several Giorgio Armani tuxedos featuring Nehru jackets, which he calls "tab collars" this time around.

TOOLS: Basic tools are needed for do-it-yourself jobs

faucets, an assortment of washers is handy to have."

Eventually, power tools might be the best choice for home repairers. "Anyone who owns a home should have a ⅜-inch reversible drill and a 7¼-inch circular saw," Sanders said.

However, he warned, "if you have no knowledge of power tools, it's a good idea to go to an expert first and get advice.

"Most people don't realize that if you are wearing cotton gloves while using a power saw, you are asking for a quick amputation" because threads from the gloves can get caught in the saw and pull the hands in front of the blade.

"If you have no knowledge of tools, people buying tools should ask the advice of someone who does."

Sometimes that advice comes from a professional, such as Burge or Sanders or one of their coworkers. Other times, the expert is a relative or friend who just happens to be handy around the house.

Mike Casey is an electrician by profession and a homeowner by choice. And as a homeowner, he is used to doing minor repairs around the house.

His list of basic tools also contains a hammer, two kinds of screwdrivers, a tape measure and pliers (three kinds — slip joint pliers, needle nose pliers and channel lock pliers), but had a few other practical suggestions: "A roll of electrical tape, a Crescent wrench (or open end adjustable wrench), Super Glue, a box of Band-aids and a cordless phone. Oh, and a can of WD-40."

Screws and nails to go with the hammer and screwdrivers "should already be in the house, or you can get an assortment," Casey added.

Prospective handypersons should not panic, he said, because learning to use all these tools is not difficult. Most home repair jobs can be done by following directions, either those that came with the project planned (such as making book shelves or a toy box), or those given by someone who already knows how to use the tools.

And following directions is very important, Casey said, because some jobs are trickier than they seem. For instance, "A leaky faucet is kind of tricky because if you don't get the water shut off at the main valve (before starting the job), the water goes everywhere."

Casey said he and his brother, Scott, learned a lot about home repairs while they were growing up on a ranch in Oklahoma, but even city people should have no trouble learning how to do minor home repair jobs if they have the right tools and follow directions.

Maybe that's why some of today's young to-be-marrieds are registering for tools at the hardware store, as well as registering for fine china and silver in the traditional way.

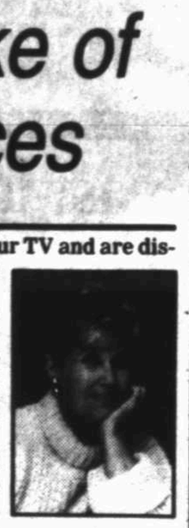

So when buying items for a new household — or, for that matter, an old, established one — don't forget the tools. And remember, when you read a wedding announcement that says something like: "Following a honeymoon in the south of France, the couple will make their home in Midland," they may be doing just that.

AT WIT'S END

Men may become obsolete in wake of talking appliances

By Erma Bombeck

For those of you who are tired of talking back to your TV and are discouraged by carrying on a one-way conversation with the lump you married, there is help on the way.

Bombeck

In two short years, you'll be able to have a meaningful exchange with your kitchen appliances. The first of these opportunities showed up last month at the annual National Association of Home Builders convention in Houston.

Let's imagine you're getting up at 4:00 a.m. on Thanksgiving morning and everyone else is asleep. You stagger to the refrigerator, open the door and remove a 20-pound turkey. Then you reach in and grab a stick of butter and tell the refrigerator, "I'm down to my last stick of butter." The refrigerator has a remote control device that will record and play back your list of needs just before you go to the store again.

Back to the turkey. You lug the beast over to the oven and a voice asks, "Cook?"

Knowing how I feel in the mornings, I'd probably say, "No, I am just trying to increase my heart rate by running around the kitchen with a naked bird."

The oven has no humor. It replies, "Weight?"

"I don't think that's any of your business ... oh, you mean the turkey? Twenty pounds."

Next the oven asks, "When done?" and you instruct it, "Noonish."

The oven will recognize the voices of up to five users and obey their commands. Just try to enlist family volunteers for THAT honor.

The possibilities for conversation are endless. What if you approached a washer or a dryer with an armload full of clothes and commanded it to "Open." What a sense of power!

The problem with babbling objects up to this point has been that cars and elevators do all the talking. (As if I care what they think.)

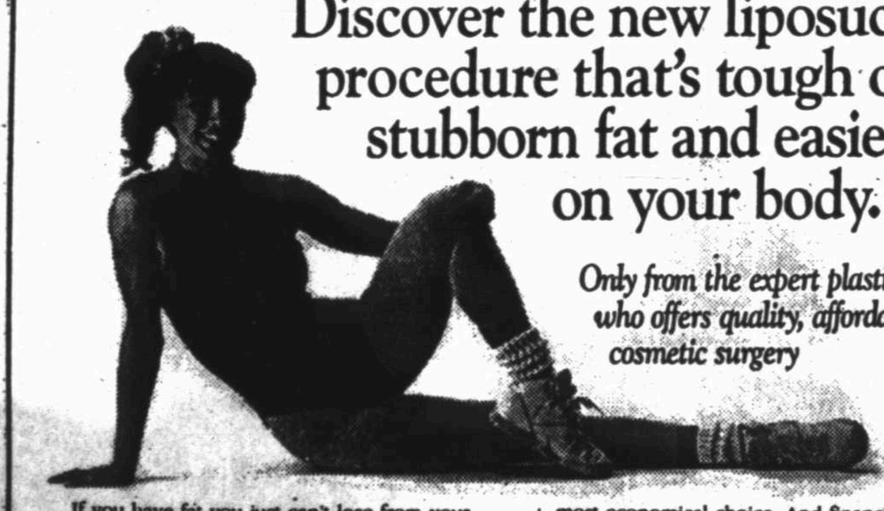

Loneliness is right up there in the top 10 diseases. I can see a real relationship forming between my refrigerator and me. I could alert it to my son who opens both doors and becomes hypnotized. It could say, "Your nostrils are beginning to frost. Shut the door." Or if I'm on a diet it could counsel me and say, "I'm running out of tape and patience with you. Touch that Dove Bar and you'll end up on Oprah with three psychologists and Jenny Craig."

Frankly, I think talking appliances are a wake-up call for the men in this country who go around as if they're shot full of novocaine. With 40 talk shows on TV, telephones that encourage you to leave your name, number and message, little boxes that you shout into at every carryout, and the promise of partying with your appliances, men may just become obsolete.

A street party celebrating the Kurdish new year in Cizre, Turkey, turns to panic as people flee government forces, which often disrupt expressions of ethnicity in Southeastern Turkey. The region is a stronghold of independence-minded Kurds, who light bonfires to welcome the new year, and spring.

Leap of fire marks arrival of spring

By Thomas Goltz
Associated Press

BAKU, Azerbaijan — It is scarcely dark before the scrapwood and trash fires start burning in the back streets and alleyways of Baku.

The acrid smoke soon attracts eager participants to an ancient rite in this capital city on the Caspian Sea. Young men are the first to join in, shouting as they jump over the flames. Children and the elderly wait until the fires burn down before taking their ritual leap from winter to spring.

It is the arrival of Novruz, or "new day" — March 20, the first day of spring and, for many, the first day of the new year.

From the western end of the Great Wall of China to the Mediterranean coast of Turkey, the celebration involves millions of people belonging to about 35 ethnic groups; among them Persians, Kurds, Afghans, Tajiks, Uzbeks and Uighurs.

Although most Novruz observers are Muslims, it is a pre-Islamic pastoral festival based on the old Persian solar calendar, rooted in the rhythm and renewal of nature, the changing of the season.

"It's a joyous time. It's New Year's, Christmas and spring break all in one, the most important holiday of the year," says Mehrdad Izady, a professor of Near Eastern languages and civilization at Harvard University.

For the early non-nomadic people of Iran and the Anatolia region of Turkey, Novruz or Newroz (there are numerous ethnic spellings) was essential to the cycle of planting and harvesting. It has remained part of the culture, coexisting with Islam.

The lighting of bonfires, a tradition among some of the groups, celebrates the return of the spring sun, accompanied by singing and dancing.

As people jump over the small fires, Izady says, they often recite an incantation: "May your warmth, health and redness be mine. May my illness, slowness and yellowness be yours."

It symbolizes "the exchanging of the life of the fire for the maladies of the person," he explains.

The observance of Novruz is strongest in Central and Western Asia, areas of old Iranic cultural influence, Nasrin Hakami, an Iranian sociologist, said.

In Iran (formerly Persia) and a number of other countries, Novruz is a national holiday — "a moment of rejuvenation for us and our cultural heritage," says Seyyed Hossein Nasr, professor of Islamic studies at George Washington University in Washington, D.C.

Bonfires are only the beginning. "Houses are cleaned feverishly. New clothes are put on. Old feuds and enmities are put aside. Old friendships and family bonds are renewed," Nasr says. "The younger people visit the older people, and receive gifts."

Special foods are served, and the celebrating lasts for about two weeks. On the 13th day after Novruz, "everybody goes to the countryside for protection against bad luck," Hakami says. "To stay home is a bad omen."

Although Novruz has been "Islamified" somewhat, it "is not Islamic except in the sense that it is Iranian and everything Iranian is Islamic," observes a Baku-based Iranian diplomat.

In some parts of the Muslim world, Novruz has become politically provocative. The Kurds in Turkey, for example, have tried to turn it into a national anti-Turkish-government day. Hundreds were killed in a four-year period when authorities tried to stop celebrations that appeared to be more like demonstrations.

But in 1994 the Turkish government in Ankara said it would embrace the fiery festival as a sort of pan-Turkic holiday to defuse the political impact of the Kurdish Novruz and to strengthen cultural ties with Turkic people in other countries who celebrate Novruz.

In Azerbaijan, the government is tacitly encouraging such practices as fire-jumping to restore the cultural heritage suppressed when the country was part of the Soviet Union. There are still fire-worshiping temples with eternal flames fed by natural gas.

Farmers and local gardeners spend the first day of spring sowing wheat and other crops. City dwellers mimic the act by planting miniature boxes of sprouts on graves. Children enjoy a type of trick or treat. Young women try to select a wedding day.

And as evening approaches on March 20, friends and families circulate among each others' houses to feast on traditional rice meals. The young, quite spontaneously, descend again on the back streets and alleyways, kindling new fires and girding themselves for another leap into the new season.

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing something that appeared in our church newsletter; the author is unknown, but I found it inspirational. It is posted on my refrigerator, and I read it many times a day. It is something you may want to share with your readers. — COLEEN BERGEN, BRICK, N.J.

Van Buren

DEAR COLEEN: You hit the bull's-eye. Many thanks for sending it.

YESTERDAY, TODAY AND TOMORROW

There are two days in every week that we should not worry about, two days that should be kept free from fear and apprehension.

One is YESTERDAY, with its mistakes and cares, its faults and blunders, its aches and pains. Yesterday has passed, forever beyond our control.

All the money in the world cannot bring back yesterday. We cannot undo a single act we performed. Nor can we erase a single word we've said — yesterday is gone!

The other day we shouldn't worry about is TOMORROW, with its impossible adversaries, its burden, its hopeful promise and poor performance. Tomorrow is beyond our control.

Tomorrow's sun will rise either in splendor or behind a mask of clouds — but it will rise. And until it does, we have no stake in tomorrow, for it is yet unborn.

This leaves only one day — TODAY. Any person can fight the battles of just one day. It is only when we add the burdens of yesterday and tomorrow that we break down.

It is not the experience of today that drives people mad — it is the remorse of bitterness for something which happened yesterday, and the dread of what tomorrow may bring.

Let us, therefore, live one day at a time!

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from a widow who felt lonely and forgotten by her married friends.

She said she got a lot of attention right after her husband's funeral, but now they neglect her. It seems to me I've heard that song before. I would like to ask this widow how often she included her single friends in parties and outings when she was part of a couple?

Did it ever occur to her that her single friends might appreciate being included? Or, did she, like many married people, exclude singles in favor of couples? Please don't ignore your single friends; someday you may need them.

Instead of waiting for people to give to her, she should get involved in volunteer work, meet others who share similar interests, and make new friends with people who do not sit around bemoaning their fate, but do what they can to make this world a better and happier place. — K. DRAKE

DEAR K. DRAKE: Bravo! And thanks for some excellent advice to widows. There's little I can add to it.

DEAR ABBY: I found an error in your column. You said the Psalms are in the New Testament. You are wrong; the Psalms are in the Old Testament. I'll bet I'm not the first person who caught it. Love and hugs ... MRS. KATHLEEN HUNNE, CAMP HILL, PA.

DEAR KATHLEEN: You were closer to the 101st person who caught it, and I am still "catching it" from sharp-eyed readers.

To receive a collection of Abby's most memorable and most frequently requested poems and essays, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

For beauty with less work, best perennials are daylilies, irises

By Deborah Benge Frost

Benge-Frost

Beautiful color, magnificent form, dependable, long-lived and productive: These are just a few of the words and phrases that help describe two of the best flowering perennials around — daylilies and irises.

Both make a tremendous contributions to landscapes, perennial beds or mixed borders. They mix well with other plants and hold their own in terms of individual beauty. They do not completely dominate, but rather contribute to the growing site.

Let's take a look at these must have perennials.

One of my favorite flowering perennials is the daylily, Hemerocallis. The large grass-like, arching leaves grow in a fan shape forming attractive spreading clumps. They have persistent fleshy, tuberous roots that can be easily divided with increasing size and age in spring or fall.

Lily-like flowers open on the end of tall, leafless stalks that stand well above the leaves. No suprise, the flowers last only a day but are followed by buds that open consecutively over a long period of time. Old species and varieties had yellow, orange and rust-red flowers. Joining them are thousands of modern varieties that range from white, shell pink, vermilion, buff, apricot, ruby, fuschia and bicolors. Some varieties have flowers with an "eye," usually in a similar or contrasting color. Two colors have been elusive among daylily breeders — a pure white and blue. In terms of white, they've come very close and many purples and lavendars have some blue tones.

The daylily flower is edible and often is used to garnish various dishes. The buds are platable, digestible and nutritous, and buds can still be found in oriental stores for culinary purposes. The roots and crowns were once used for medicinal purposes, specifically cirrhosis and jaundice.

Plants can be classified as evergreen, semi-evergreen and dormant. As a general rule, the evergreen-types are best grown in warm climates and dormant types in cooler locations. Smaller in scale are the very useful dwarf daylilies. With limited size landscapes, patio homes, courtyard homes and apartments, these smaller stature plants have an important place.

Of recent years, daylily breeding has been manipulated to double the number of chromosomes resulting in varieties referred to as tetraploids (44 chromosomes rather than the normal 22). Tetraploids tend to have flowers that are larger, more intense in color, and have sturdier scape (flower stalk) and more substance. The plants tend to be sturdier, more vigorous and prolific.

Daylilies require at least 6 hours of direct sunlight to perform well, so full sun is best, but they will tolerate some shade. Afternoon shade is especially helpful with some of the reds and purples that tend to fade in full sun.

Soil is not a big problem, but well-drained, highly organic soils will produce the best results. Any soil will benefit from added organic matter, especially our sandy soils which require more careful watering and fertilizing since they don't seem to hold on to these too well. If drainage is a problem (persistently wet soils), plant in raised beds. Daylilies planted beneath oak and pecan trees don't compete well with the roots, but pine trees are much less competitive and provide a better situation.

Most plants can be set out on 18- to 24-inch centers. Place the plant so the crown is even with the soil surface. Avoid planting too deep. Firm soil around roots and water in. Follow with a generous layer of mulch.

AS THE PLANTS begin to flower, it is best if you can remove individual flowers as they fade, this will prevent seed formation and keep the plant healthier. Keep plants vigorous by adding fertilizer in the spring. Nitrogen is generally one of our more limited nutrients, so try to add some nitrogen in the form of a complete fertilizer (3-1-2 ratio), ammonium sulfate, blood meal or cottonseed meal. Make sure soils are moist, keep fertilizer off plants and water fertilizer into soil.

As clumps become crowded, divide plants in fall or spring. Dig entire clumps up and separate by hand or you can take a sharp knife to separate plants.

The bearded iris is the best known of the irises and one of the easiest to grow. They are beautifully striking and have interesting vertical foliage. They are extremely hardy and do well in the Permian Basin.

The bearded iris can be divided into flower size and height. Those with flower stalks over 27 inches are considered tall and those with stalks under 27 inches are further divided into miniature dwarfs, standard dwarfs, intermediate, border and miniature tall. There are also some rebloomers that bloom in the spring and then again in the fall.

Flowers are majestic in size, form and color. Flower color ranges from white to red, with purples, blues, oranges, yellows in between. Flowers can be solid (called self, or bicolored) or speckled with color (called a plicata). The varieties are endless and choosing can be overwhelming.

IRISES ARE SO easy to grow, no garden should be without them. They grow and spread from a stocky, tuberous rhizome root that protects it from drought, heat and other stresses. The only thing that will really hurt them is overwatering and poorly drained soils. The modern hybrids have flowers that will last up to 3 and 4 days and these are followed by the opening of still more blooms.

The best planting time is July through October, although I wouldn't hesitate planting an iris at almost anytime due to their hardiness. In fact, rhizomes can be dug and stored in a cool, dry place for weeks until they are planted and do fine.

It's good to improve soil with compost, peat or other decomposed organic matter before planting. A complete fertilizer can be mixed into soil as preparation is taking place. Organic fertilizers are good choices.

When planting rhizomes, barely cover them with the top just beneath the soil. Spread roots out as far as possible by forming a mound of soil in the center of the hole. Firm the soil around roots to eliminate air pockets and water. Plant rhizomes 24- to 30-inches apart to allow room for growth. Grouping several rhizomes of the same color will provide quicker concentrated color, but may require digging and dividing quicker.

Fertilize prior to new growth and apply a light application of fertilizer after blooming. Water when the soil drys out. Be prepared to thin about every three years. Poor blooming is usually due to crowding or not enough sunlight.

Get an idea of the vast array of irises by going by the Permian Basin Iris Society 1995 Iris Show noon-4 p.m. April 22, at the Holiday Inn-Parkway in Odessa.

They are both great flowers and the choices are endless. Even if your thumb is a little brown, you are sure to have success with these. Try both, or several of both...you won't be disappointed.

Mark your calendar for April 10, 11, 17 and 18 for the "Home Landscape School." Treat yourself to this great home landscaping school, you'll be pleased with the results of landscape plan whether it's a new landscape or an update on an existing landscape.

Helping a child plant a garden offers lesson for life

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Help a child plant a garden and you'll give him important lessons for life, says Ray McNeilan, home horticulturalist with the Oregon State University extension service.

"Kids need to understand how important plants and the environment are to themselves and everyone else. And they will carry these attitudes and this knowledge into their adult lives," he says.

But let the child do it his way.

"Adults may want everything in neat rows, but kids don't care, and the things don't have to be that way," he says. "The important thing is that the garden belongs to the child, and the child should be involved in the planning of it."

Let imagination go wild. Think about stories you've read together for a garden theme. A bean pole tepee could be a Jack in the Beanstalk garden. Pumpkins and lady slippers can feature in a Cinderella garden. An ABC garden — space permiting — can have everything from asters to zinnias.

Or what about a rainbow garden with broad stripes of different colors that ends in a pot of golden marigolds, or an all-green Kermit-the-Frog garden with lettuce, spinach and chard?

"A child's garden should not be a forbidden place that is entered only when there is work to do," McNeilan says.

Youngsters like vegetables, but skip the radishes. "Almost every book of kids' gardens tells you to plant radishes, mostly because they grow fast," McNeilan says. "But do your kids like radishes? Usually they take one bite and 'yuck,' they don't want them. Other crops such as carrots, pumpkins, tomatoes and sweet corn will take a bit longer, but they are worth the extra wait."

He advises thinking of the senses in suggesting plants to the child — the feel of tubular leaves on green onions or the ferny tops of carrots and the smell of a crushed tomato leaf, for example.

Mythical Mistinguett considered 'queen of revue'

By Associated Press

PARIS — Mistinguett was the stage name of Jeanne Bourgeois (1875-1956), a legendary French theater and cabaret performer.

Born in Enghien-les-Bains, the talented singer-dancer made her Paris stage debut in 1895 and later starred in lavish spectacles at the Folies-Bergere, the Casino de Paris and the Moulin-Rouge.

Among the many partners of the mythical Mistinguett was Maurice Chevalier, whom she discovered in 1905 and introduced in her act.

As actress and "queen of revue," she set styles in high fashion for years.

State-of-the-art training

Donation of car helps automotive program

A donation of a 1993 Dodge Intrepid to the Midland College Automotive Technology Program means that students can stay current with technology, particularly with computer systems, according to Tony Smith, Automotive Technology Instructor.

"It is a state-of-the art car," Smith said. The car is part of a new generation of vehicles using multi-plexing, technology that features sensors that feed into all the car's computers.

Multi-plexing cuts down on the amount of wiring needed in cars, and it also creates new challenges for the automotive technician, Smith said.

Being able to work on the car, donated by Chrylser, will assist students in learning about engine performance, electrical systems, heating and air conditioning and suspension and steering.

The car was donated to the program though Chrysler and Village Lincoln-Mercury-Dodge of Midland.

"We admire what's happening at the college," said Bill Stella, general manage of Village Lincoln-Mercury-Dodge.

"We are interested in helping the college and the students," he said, adding, "if we do this hopefully people in other industries will do the same thing.

Chrysler also uses Midland College as a regional training center for automobile technicians. In early March, eight technicians from across the Permian Basin attended a three-day training school to learn about the 1996 Dodge minivan.

The minivan is one of only two prototypes in Texas. The technicians went over the car "bumper to bumper," Jim Manney, Chrysler instructor from Dallas, said.

"Training at Midland College is a big help to us because it gives a centralized training center," he said. Without the Midland site, technicians would have to travel to Irving for training.

ELISE COOMBES

Creative Writing Contest continues 21-year tradition

A 21-year Midland College tradition continues as the annual Creative Writing Contest is again underway. The contest recognizes excellence in poetry, essay and short story writing.

This year the prize money awarded winners in each of the three categories has increased to $100 for first place, $75 for second place and $50 for third place, according to contest co-coordinator Dr. Russell Goodyear.

"We have a good creative writing program, and we want to continue that tradition of excellence," he said. "This is our small way of rewarding that excellence."

Another change in the event this year will be the creation of a Distinguished Writers Advisory Board to honor outstanding past contest winners.

Coombes

Goodyear said he hopes creative writing faculty members will then be able to tap into the expertise of these students.

The contest is an outgrowth of Midland College's creative writing program, which offers special classes in poetry, short fiction and novel writing. The spring contest and the Hilda-Simmons Levitt Poetry Contest in the fall gives the college's student writers a chance to be published and recognized for their achievements in writing.

Judges for the contest will be published writers and/or from area universities and colleges other than Midland College. Selected writings from the contest will be pulished in Tableau, an annual publication designed to display representative works of students.

The contest entry deadline is Friday, March 31. The awards ceremony and critique session will be Friday, April 28.

Entries may be submitted to any Midland College Department of English faculty member or to a lab instructor in the Writing Lab in the Learning Resource Center (LRC).

All full-time and part-time currently registered MC students or former students who have been registered at MC within the last two years are eligible except for the 1994 Creative Writing Contest first and second place winners.

Only work that is not being considered for publication elsewhere is eligible for entry.

Format requirements may be picked up in the Writing Lab in the LRC, room 232, or call the lab, 685-4561 for requirements to be mailed out.

For other questions, contact the Writing Lab, Goodyear, 685-4605 or Dr. Glenda Hicks, contest co-coordinator, 4627.

Scientists study what makes an animal's smell so unique

By Natalie Angier
N.Y. Times News Service

Americans may try to scrub it off, soak it away, spritz it, splash it, deodorize it and atomize it into invented sweetness, but they will never fully eradicate their personal smell, an odor-print as unique as the whorls on the fingers.

"We're all little chemistry factories," said Dr. George Preti of the Monell Chemical Senses Center of Philadelphia, one of the most famous institutions in the field of smell research. "We have bacteria mingling with excretions from the body that form a variety of odors depending on what part of the body we're talking about."

Preti, a specialist in underarm odors, said there are about two dozen compounds contributing to underarm smell, nearly all of them acidic in nature. "You can rearrange those compounds to give many millions of combinations, so that underarm secretions collected from six individuals will all be very different bouquets," he said.

RECENTLY, PRETI and his colleagues discovered that the most important of those acidic compounds is carried to the skin surface in an odorless, precursor form and does not become smelly until armpit bacteria start chewing it apart.

Preti suggested that a new generation of deodorants could operate by providing armpit bacteria with decoys — synthetic mimics of the precursor compound in sweat but without the aroma. Preoccupied with feeding on the decoy chemicals, the bacteria would not have a chance to liberate the body's acidic compounds from their nonodorous state.

Complex though body odor may be in outcome, its genetic origin may be relatively simple. Twenty years ago, the physician-writer Lewis Thomas suggested that the source of an animal's unique smell may be the same molecule that distinguishes one individual immunologically from another, the so-called major histocompatibility complex. This protein is found on every cell of the body, and marks each cell indelibly as "self."

Researchers at Monell and elsewhere have since demonstrated that there is considerable evidence supporting this hypothesis. Mice can distinguish the urine of two other rodents that are genetically identical except for a tiny difference in their major histocompatibility complex.

MORE RECENTLY, researchers from the University of Chicago have found that among the Hutterites, a sect of Anabaptists who live communally in parts of the Northwest and Canada, men and women tend to choose as partners those who turn out to be the most different in their histocompatability complex, as though to assure the greatest possible immune variation in their offspring.

"The only reasonable way they would know who was immunologically different than themselves would be via odor cue," said Dr. Gary Beauchamp of Monell.

But scientists still do not know how these immune molecules influence the overall chemical dynamics of the body sufficiently to send forth a fragrant broadcast that cries, "It's me!"

CITY LIGHTS

Romance commands the limelight when Texas Best turns on the "City Lights" at Midland Center at 6:30 p.m. Friday.

This benefit performance and dinner features familiar songs from musicals performed by local talent and a special guest artist as well as a concert version of a new musical by Linda Bond and Steven Porterfield.

"It's a very romantic musical set in Scotland in 1726, which is based on the poem 'The Highwayman' by Alfred Noyes," said Linda Bond, director of Texas Best, a nonprofit organization that arranges entertainment and recreation in downtown Midland.

In the lead role of "The Highwayman," will be former Midlander Robert Marshall, who has just completed a tour of Berlin, Leipzig, Budapest and Prague.

"While living and singing in Midland, Bobby made many friends, some of whom have traveled all over the world to see him perform," said Ms. Bond. "When I wrote the book and lyrics for 'The Highwayman,' Bobby was exactly the type of performer that I had in mind.

"He has an endearing quality that even though the Highwayman is a scoundrel and a thief, you still love him. And in the poem 'The Highwayman' — the way that I've chosen to use it in this play — the Highwayman finds that following his heart can get him into trouble. "

Adept with 20th century works, Marshall is sought after for roles such as the title one of "Albert Herring," which he recently sang for Opera North, Anatol in "Vanessa," Lennie in Carlisle Floyd's "Of Mice and Men," and operas by Benjamin Britten.

Marshall, who starred in Midland Community Theatre's production of the musical "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," appeared as the Youth in the world premiere in July of Conrad Susa's opera "The Wise Women," presented at the American Guild of Organists National Convention. He will sing a Lerner and Lowe concert this spring in his debut with the Dallas Symphony.

The concert version of the musical "The Highwayman" will be presented during the second half of the program.

From left, Carol Wagner, president of the Arts Assembly of Midland, Emma Burnett, director of the Assembly, and Becky Bailey, chair of the 1995 Celebration of the Arts, work to raise money for the local arts council.

When this year's Celebration of the Arts paints Centennial Plaza and Midland Center with brightly-colored activities May 5-7, most who are enjoying the games, demonstrations, live entertainment and art show will spend little time wondering where the money goes. Few know part of the proceeds are re-granted back to local arts and cultural organizations.

"This year we have sub-granted to date since October — $46,000," said Emma Burnett, director of the Arts Assembly of Midland, sponsor of COA, which draws artists from Texas, Colorado, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arizona and Arkansas.

"That's impressive anywhere in the state for a sub-grant program, and especially it's impressive for a city the size of Midland that

LIGHTS: Performance spotlights romance

(From 1G)

"In the first half of the program he will do a very traditional repertoire of the kinds of songs that are romantic leads like Bobby does," said Ms. Bond. "As a lyric tenor, things like 'If Ever I Would Leave You,' are just right for him."

Marshall also will sing such favorites as "Maria" from "West Side Story," "Go Home with Bonnie Jean" from "Brigadoon," "On the Street Where You Live," from "My Fair Lady," "Empty Chairs and Empty Tables" from "Les Misérables" and "Close Every Door" from "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat."

"I know that Bobby's going to enjoy working with the cast that we've assembled," said Ms. Bond. "He's sung with many of them in other productions when he was here in Midland. It's a great mix of voices."

Singing with Marshall will be Drew Anderson, Jane Burgess, Beth Dufford, Guy McKenzie, Rob Montgomery, Diana Nuss, Steven Porterfield, Pam Six and Scooter Tilley. Jane Burgess is directing. Running lights will be Linda and David Whitaker.

Music for "The Highwayman" was written by Porterfield, who also is the musical director for the "City Lights" performance.

"It was a wonderful experience working with him," said Ms. Bond. "One of the reasons it was so exciting is because we have become so technologically advanced in what we can do in music.

"I would read Steven the words that I wrote, and he would say, 'How do you think that might sound.' And I would hum a word or two. Using the synthesizer, he would turn it into a song, which could have symphonic strings or piano or drums or any sound we wanted it to have.

"Then he'd hand me the computer disc from the synthesizer. I'd put it into the computer and print out musical scores complete with words. It was a wonderful process because he's very creative. And although he's done a lot of performing, he'd never had the chance to use the gift of creating music like this."

Ms. Bond particularly enjoyed the process of taking the traditional works by Robert Burns and "turning them into contemporary music, weaving Burns' themes through entire scenes."

In the Scotland of 1726, the country had been conquered by the English.

'Summer in the City started last summer when a group of us decided it would be really fun tohave entertainment in Centennial Plaza. It was so popular that we added another month for this summer.'
— Linda Bond, director, Texas Best

"They weren't allowed to wear their kilts; they weren't allowed to have clan meetings; and the gypsies had all been driven out of Scotland," said Ms. Bond. "So we combined all of those elements to create a show that utilized that kind of discontent for dramatic effect."

Although gypsies won't be singing from the Midland Center stage they will be serving the pecan-roasted prime rib dinner.

"The Junior League's Opportunity Knocks class has made this one of its projects and 10 members are going to be dressed as gypsies. They are actually going to serve the dinners to the guests. They'll be joined by other high profile people."

The gypsies, who also will usher guests to their tables, include queen gypsy Vicky Hailey assisted by Jane Bronnenberg, Laura Grafe, Eileen Wilks, Peggy Bales, Cami Andrews, Kim Newton, Jane Wolf, Karan Young, Beverly Alstrin, Beth Lawless, Deanne King, Stephanie Rogers, Karen Wentworth, Dana Runyan, Janet Andrews, Siri Langston, Martha Manulik, Karen Pape, Cheryl Ray, BeaLea Somerville, Dr. Billy Cook, LaNell Honeyman, and Danny Norwood. Their costumes were designed by Porterfield who was assisted by Cynthia Wadleigh.

City Lights is a benefit for Summer in the City, which arranges free entertainment in downtown Midland during the summer. Tickets to the performance and dinner are available at Pages & Prints, Wadley Avenue at Garfield Street, or the Cat's Meow, 408 Andrews Highway. For reservations by phone call Texas Best, 685-5050. Tickets to the dinner, which includes pecan-smoked prime rib, dessert and more from Main Events Catering, and the performance are $30 per person.

The "City Lights" performance is the first benefit for Summer in the City, a series of concerts offered free the summer of 1994.

"Summer in the City started last summer when a group of us decided it would be really fun to have entertainment in Centennial Plaza," said Ms. Bond. "We had a performance every Thursday night in June and July. It was so popular that we added another month for this summer.

"We're also creating a children's area and already have all the themes for the whole summer," said Ms. Bond, adding that they would be announced Friday at "City Lights."

Texas Best is an independent nonprofit that came out of Summer in the City.

"We're now doing this year round," said Ms. Bond. "I was the president of the volunteer board, and now I have become full time director. Mark Kimball at Executone has given us a whole floor in his building so that we can be downtown."

Ms. Bond, a free lance writer for Texas Highways, Sunset Magazine, Modern Maturity, AAPG Explorer and others, also has written two other musicals. The first was "Home Fires," which has been shown off Broadway in New York. The second was 'World War II Red, White & Blue,' which showed at the American Airpower Heritage Museum symposium last year.

This is the first one with original music.

"It was challenging and exciting," Ms. Bond said. "We're going to make a tape of the music from the 'City Lights' performance so that my agent in New York can have the music when he shows producers the script. One nice thing that I've been doing lately is several of us, Pam Six, Jami Owen and Steven Porterfield, are in the musical group — Then and There. And we get the opportunity to perform for groups and conventions. It's nice to be able to learn what audiences respond to in a very first-hand way."

ASSEMBLY: Preparation begins for annual celebration

(From 1G)

we are supporting our local arts and cultural organizations at that level."

She described the Assembly, Midland's council for the arts, as "a lifeline for other arts agencies here in town in that we raise money and write grants for money and basically re-grant it to local arts organizations."

In 1994, around 15,000 people came through the COA gates. The event grossed more than $100,000, Ms. Burnett said. "And bills have to be paid out of that," thus the event netted around $49,000, a percentage of which will be used for the 1995 event.

Now through the COA Preview Party May 5 the Assembly is raising sponsor money for the annual festival. The festival provides the Arts Assembly with, Ms. Burnett said, "A lot of visibility, and it gives the arts in Midland an opportunity to be seen by the entire area.

"All the non-profit organizations have a booth at the festival where they can disseminate information, and it allows us an opportunity to serve them in that way. It also allows us an opportunity to generate funds which we not only re-grant, but also use as matching funds to generate other grants."

An example of the matching funds grant is one the Assembly currently has pending at the Texas Commission on the Arts, Austin. "We have asked for $19,000," Ms. Burnett said. "But we promised the Texas Commission on the Arts we'll match it with another $19,000. These are funds we re-grant to local arts and cultural organizations."

Other uses the Assembly has for the money it brings in during COA include entertainment at COA and special events held in conjunction with other arts organizations.

"We use part of our earned income to match grants to bring in Khenany for COA and the Missoula Children's Theatre, " said Ms. Burnett. She noted that both were Mid-American Arts Alliance Grants.

'The mission of the Arts Assembly is to enhance the quality of life in Midland by encouraging participation in the arts among people of all ages and cultures.'
— Emma Burnett, director, Arts Assembly of Midland

The Missoula Children's Theatre production of "Beauty Lou and the Country Beast" comes here April 28 and 29. The production, which will feature around 55 local children, is being brought here by the Assembly and Midland Community Theatre.

"I had heard about this group for years from a group down in the valley — they go down to Del Rio every year — and it seemed like an appropriate theme to do as a collaboration with Midland Community Theatre because it's educational," Ms. Burnett said. "It's a children's theater group in the sense that they audition the children. They send in three people and they audition children K through 12 in the city. And with those children, they produce a play."

The auditions, which are open to all children in grades K-12, will be held after school hours April 24. The time and place have not yet been determined. For more information call the Assembly, 687-1149.

"This is a very good example of the role that arts councils play in most communities by providing technical assistance in the sense of helping organizations find grant money and collaborating and helping them do projects," Ms. Burnett said.

In addition to the money it brings in through the COA, the Arts Assembly receives money from the City of Midland through the hotel-motel tax. "As does just about every city in U.S.," said Ms. Burnett. In most cities like Midland, "hotel-motel tax funds are generally re-granted through the arts council."

The amount allocated to arts councils is a predetermined percentage of the total revenue and may have a ceiling set as is true in Midland.

"It's not a set amount," Ms. Burnett said. "It depends on the hotel-motel tax. If you have a lot of conventions, you have a lot of money. It's a percentage, not to exceed $60,000."

The Assembly also uses the funds from COA and the hotel-motel tax to do projects like:

- "Through Our Eyes," a program, made possible through a collaboration between the Assembly, Casa de Amigos and the Museum of the Southwest, which allows KidsArts & Company children to create a photographic and oral history of their respective families with a curated show, "Mi Vida: People anbd Places That Are Important to Me," planned in the Abell-Hanger Gallery of the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum April 4-16;
- KidsArts & Company, a program designed to increase opportunities for children of all ages and socioeconomic levels to particpate in visual and performing arts with classes offered four days a week, free of charge, at Casa de Amigos;
- and CityArt, this program allows Midland youth from all segments of the population to take part in "hands-on" fine arts experiences and provides local artists who participate an opportunity for recognition. Through support from the CityArt Program, murals have been painted at Ulmer Park, at the South campus of Midland College, in an alleyway on Seaboard, in Hogan Park and on the wall of a Mr. "M" Store on Big Spring Street.

The Assembly also provides the information for the Midland Marquee that runs in the Sunday Arts & Entertainment section of the Reporter-Telegram and is announced Fridays on the KWES-TV Morning Show and maintains a yearly calendar in the Assembly office to facilitate scheduling for local cultural and civic organizations.

"The mission of the Arts Assembly is to enhance the quality of life in Midland by encouraging participation in the arts among people of all ages and cultures," said Ms. Burnett. "Services of the Arts Assembly of Midland reach the entire population of the Permian Basin and the Celebration of the Arts reaches out to New Mexico, Oklahoma, Colorado and Arizona."

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Special benefit set

ODESSA—The Permian Playhouse, 310 W. 42nd, will be holding a special benefit performance of "Stepping Out" at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Just recently the Playhouse along with three other theaters in this quadrant participated in the Texas Non-Profit Theatre Festival held in February at the Playhouse. Each theater performed a 40-minute play with a 10 minute set up and 10 minute strike.

The other theaters that participated were the Big Bend Players, Amarillo Little Theatre and The Globe of the Great Southwest. Both Amarillo and the Playhouse were selected to advance to the state competition to be held in Fort Worth March 23-26.

"Stepping Out," which was on the Playhouse's season in the spring of 1994, is the show presented at the recent competition that will go to state. The plays centers around a community tap dance class held at a church basement in Texas.

In addition to being selected to advance to Fort Worth, three members of the cast received All Star Nominations. They were Jack Harding, Janis Dominguez and Marcy Hubbard.

The benefit performance is being held to raise funds to go to Fort Worth. Tickets are $5 and are general admission. For more information, call the Playhouse, 1-915-362-2329. The box office is open Monday through Friday from noon to 6 p.m.

■ Demonstration set

ODESSA—A demonstration of the ancient art of bronze casting and the colonial art of pewter casting will be conducted from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Thursday in the Odessa College Instructional Building, Art Department.

Barry Phillips Jr. and his sculpture students will demonstrate wax working, investment/burnout processes and tool, equipment and materials for lost-wax bronze and pewter casting. Several pewter castings will be created during that time.

The main event, bronze casting, is scheduled for 11 a.m. when a number of large bronzes will be poured in the metal foundry. The temperature of a glowing crucible of molten bronze is more than 2,000 degrees. When poured into the investment opening, the super heated molten metal emerges in a transparent stream of fiery orange-gold. Civilizations have used bronze casting techniques for more than 4,000 years.

The public is invited to attend.

■ Concert scheduled

ODESSA—The Country Music Association's 1994 Horizon Award winner John Michael Montgomery performs at Odessa's Ector County Coliseum Friday.

Montgomery

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, MARCH 19, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Acquiring real estate will give you greater financial security. Do the necessary research and planning to make a business expansion successful. Next fall, secrecy shrouds your activities behind the scenes. Make certain your mate and other allies are pulling with and not against you. Keeping a cool head in early 1996 will save you both money and a friendship.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Glenn Close, frontier marshal Wyatt Earp, actor Bruce Willis, actress Ursula Andress.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Things should be a bit quieter today, although there are signs of confusing developments. Watch over your belongings and resources. You will enjoy playing the social butterfly tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Go all-out to endear yourself to influential associates. Those who share your values will make promising allies. A business enterprise will pay nice dividends if organized correctly. Gather with friends and family tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The emphasis now is on making do with the things you have at hand. Long-range financial programs will work best in the long tuft. Keep an open mind about a newcomer's daring ideas.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Continue to remain out of the public eye, enjoying the blessings of home and family life. Overeating causes discomfort. Exercise self-control. Discussing your personal finances with relatives would be a mistake. Change the subject.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You and a family member may be on the outs. Forcing a showdown will boomerang. Avoid issuing ultimatums. Ignoring a minor ailment could cause serious difficulties later on. Seek medical advice first thing tomorrow.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your relationship with a neighbor or relative takes a splendid turn. Confide in those closest to your heart. Making decisions is easy when you feel inspired. Avoid being too trusting in financial matters. Check figures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The latest in home comforts should please those who share your lodgings. If interested in a closer romantic union, guard against emotional upsets this evening. Show young people your tender, sentimental side.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): This is your day. Make the most of it! An unexpected break brings excitement. Good relations with your mate are assured when there is unity of purpose. Strike while the iron is hot.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Family and partnership finances should prosper now. Group effort makes a long-cherished goal move within reach. A conservative approach works best for you. All signs point to a mutually-beneficial agreement with mate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have an opportunity to close a profitable deal in the next few days. Consider any offers that are generous. An "innocent" flirtation could cause lots of trouble. Resist the temptation to prove your attractiveness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An excellent day to check out a piece of real estate or tender an offer. When outlining your plans to loved ones, emphasize the positive. A timely investment will pay dividends for many years.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A showdown with an older relative may be unavoidable. Be polite but stand up for your principles. Changes made in haste could cause regrets later on. Be willing to admit any mistakes you make.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	Pass	2NT	Pass
6♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♡

When skill alone might not be enough, it does no harm, circumstances permitting, to pull the wool over the opponents' eyes. South's sleight-of-hand here paid handsome dividends.

This hand is from a team match. Things had not been going well for North-South, so South barged to six spades in an attempt to recover something from earlier disasters. We recommend either a bid of three spades, which would be forcing in this sequence, or an invitational jump to four no trump, inviting North to bid a small slam with a maximum two-no-trump response. Both actions would have kept the contract below the slam level.

Obviously, a club lead would have left declarer with no play. Indeed, that would have been our choice. Against a small slam, an attacking lead will gain more often than a salvo from three low cards. After a heart lead, it seemed that the contract hinged on the trump finesse, but declarer decided that, given a reprieve, he could engage in some skullduggery at little cost.

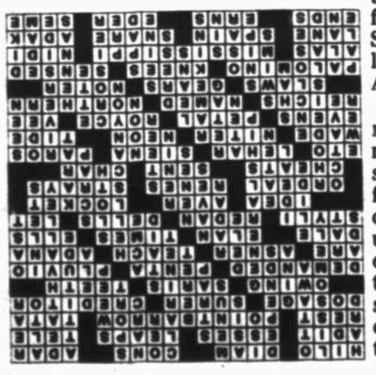

The first trick was taken with the ace of hearts, the queen of hearts was overtaken with the king and the jack of hearts was cashed for a diamond discard. Now the nine of spades was run to West's king.

West could not wait to shift to a diamond. Declarer won in hand, drew trumps and claimed the rest of the tricks.

While we applaud South's effort, West could have avoided the debacle by simply letting dummy's nine of spades hold the first lead of the suit. On the second round of trumps East would signal by discarding a high club, and the defenders will get the two tricks which were their due.

■ Paintings displayed

ODESSA—From March 23 through April 16 the Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University, will present "Mysteries of Light and Shadow," an exhibition of pastel paintings by Kathleen Cook.

At 7 p.m. Thursday, Ms. Cook will give a gallery talk about her work, followed by a reception for her hosted by the Art Institute board of trustees and staff.

Ms. Cook, a resident of Kerrville, has been a professional artist for 26 years. Working exclusively in the vibrant pastel medium for the past 14 years, she is a signature member of the Pastel Society of America.

Her paintings have won major awards in national and international competitions. She has been featured in American Artist and Southwest Art magazines and is listed in "Who's Who in American Art," Bowker Edition.

Ms. Cook is a contemporary realist painter whose works are a non-traditional approach to her subject matter, said a release from Marilyn Bassinger, director of the Art Institute. "Through the use of unusual combinations of objects, asymmetrical compositions, dramatic perspectives and strong light and shadows, Kathleen creates magical environments that produce a sense of mystery and give the viewer the impression of having 'happened upon' a strange scene that we are not normally allowed to observe."

The public is invited to attend the free reception and gallery talk.

Regular hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. For more information, call 550-3811.

At 93, opera diva becomes Rio carnival queen

By Gary Richman
Associated Press

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — She was the belle of the opera, the Brazilian diva with the crystal voice who enchanted maestro Arturo Toscanini and the crowned heads of Europe half a century ago.

Now, at 93, Bidu Sayao has returned in triumph, but on a very different stage — at Rio's world-famous carnival parade.

Sayao's career was the theme of this year's parade by the popular Beija-flor — Portuguese for "Hummingbird" — samba group of Nilopolis, a poor district on Rio's northern outskirts.

As 5,000 samba dancers in glittering costumes gyrated down Marques de Sapucai Avenue to the throbbing pulse of a 300-piece percussion band, the grandstands exploded in a thunderous chorus of the samba written in her honor.

Atop a float, in lacy gown and turban, Sayao beamed and waved to the crowd.

"It's a fairy tale come true," Sayao, a naturalized U.S. citizen who lives in Lincolnville, Maine, said in an interview here. "I was queen of the opera, and now I'm queen of carnival."

Few of the 70,000 revelers at the parade were even born when Sayao was conquering Europe and etching her name among the great sopranos.

Sayao toured America, performing in 49 states. In 1959, she obtained American citizenship.

Then she retired from the stage and dropped from sight. Out of the public eye and far from Brazil, Sayao was remembered mostly in scratchy recordings and trivia questions.

Two years ago, she had a near-fatal stroke.

"I thought life was over," she said. "I felt all of my energy being drained."

Then came the carnival invitation — sort of a "This Is Your Life" with a samba beat. Her career, opera houses and famous roles were depicted in floats by the "Hummingbird" artisans.

But opera with samba? The salon and the saloon? Sayao feels they have a lot in common.

"Carnival is the people's opera," she said.
