Irrigation to Transpose Wichita Country Into Second Golden West

DREDGE SLIDES DOWN WAYS AS CROWD CHEERS

Leaders Tell Value Of Project to This Section

Sketching of a picture of Wichita Falls and the surrounding territory, favored with an abundance of water each year, as rivalling the beauty of southern California by J. A. Kemp, and the declaration by Frank Kell, his business associate, who went into the statistics of the meaning of the project to the section, that the system, when fully developed, will be equal in value to the discovery of a large oil field each year, were highlights of the program marking the launching of the giant dredge T. B. Noble, at the site of the larger irrigation dam Tuesday afternoon.

500 Cheer.

The big boat, which will perform the heaviest operation in connection with the erection of the huge wall achross the river bed, and which was named in recogultion of the unselfish and untiring service to the project by the vice chairman of the controlling board, T. B. Noblie, slid down the ways and into the water amid cheering of a crowd estimated as at least 500 people.

It was released and started on its way after a brief sketch of the service of Mr. Noble by Rev. Nat F. Grafton, followed by a characteristically brief and modest reply by Mr. Noble, and was christened by Miss Eleanor Thompson, its sponsor.

Many Ride Ponies.

The crowd, which came from Wichita Falls and Seymour and the territory in between, surged around the speaker's stand, lined the side of the ways and lined the high bluff on the opposite side of the river from the launching. It gathered by four modes of travel—two representing the past era of this country and two the ultra-modern. Although the greater part came by automobile, the cow puncher on his pony and the buckboard of a couple of decades ago were in evidence, as was the airplane in which Harold Hanes and Dr. Anthony McClory made the trip from Wichita Falls.

Appreciation of the services of Mr. Noble was expressed by both Dr.

400,000 ACRES TO BE SERVED

Cultivation to Be Of Untold Benefit

When the irrigation system is completed and finally working, and when the farmers of the irrigated areas have gained full experience in irrigation farming, it will be found that the system impounds sufficient water for the irrigation of 400,000 acres, an area equal to the entire area of Wichita county, Frank Kell predicted in a talk at the launching of the dredge T. B. Noble at the irrigation storage dam Tuesday.

"The intensive cultivation of such an area will be of untold benefit to the section," Mr. Kell declared. "It will be equal to the discovery of a big oil field each year."

Mr. Kell based his estimate on the conservation of irrigation water and its use supplementing the average rainfall and on the filling of the big dam each season.

"You needn't worry about getting the water to fill the lake after the dam is finished," he said. He spoke of the area draining into the lake, which he fixed at approximately 4,000 square miles. A yearly runoff of three inches would fill the lake to capacity each year, he declared. The average annual rainfall is eight and a half inches over the area.

To Distribute Water.

"The lake will hold 500,000 acre feet of water," he told the crowd. "Allow 100,000 acre feet for water wasted, lost through evaporation and the water furnished to various towns in the section. You have 400,000 acre feet of water left—which means 12 inches rainfall in addition to the normal rainfall on 400,000 acres each year—sufficient to insure a bountiful cron every year."

He referred to the 11 inches rain in the month of April, and what it had done for the country, and pointed out how much more good it would have done if it could have been distributed as the crops demanded.

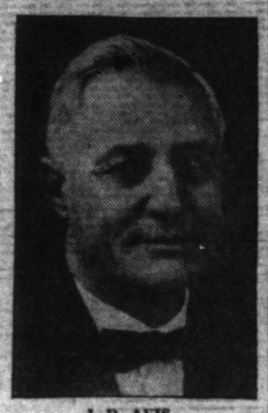

Under the least favorable circumstances and early in the game, he expressed the belief that the water would care for 200,000 acres of crops.

"Farmers unfamiliar with irrigation are prone to use too much water until they learn irrigation farming," he said. The work which is now being undertaken will only be well started when the dams and canals are finished, he told his audience—declaring that it was the duty of all

Avis and Gipson Are Asked by Friends to Make Legislative Race

CANDIDATE?

J. D. AVIS.

Two Others Already In Race and Still Another Considers Hurling In His Hat

J. D. Avis, pioneer local business man and ranch owner and E. H. Gipson, local attorney and at present city prosecutor, are prospects as legislative candidates from this district, it was learned Tuesday. If the two make the race, they will make it as colleagues and not oppose each other.

These entrants would give four avowed candidates for the two places to be filled exclusively in Wichita county, F. G. Swanson, unsuccessful candidate two years ago and J. D. Parnell, former legislator from the Wichita-Wilbarger district already being candidates for places 1 and 2 respectively. B. F. Johnson, present legislator from the Wichita-Wilbarger district, is also reported considering a new candidacy. Eric G. Schroeder, Vernon newspaper man, is a candidate for the flotorial position.

He is not expected to have opposition from this county, as under the old tacit understanding a Wilbarger county man would have the place this year, and Wilbarger county may be allowed a clear field each year for the flotorial candidate, Wichitans making a selection from the field of Wilbarger countians.

Mr. Avis is one of the best known and active of the older settlers in Wichita Falls, and for a number of years was engaged in business here. He is prominent in fraternal circles. Mr. Gipson, who is at present city prosecutor, has practiced law here four years, coming from Oklahoma where he was active in public affairs and at one time served as adjutant general of the state.

Mainly About People

They Follow Parrish—And Get the Votes—But Henrietta Protests—

By H. N. F.

CYRUS COLEMAN, PUBLISHER of the Henrietta Independent, is on the warpath. An editorial in his paper has this caption above it, "Grabbing Parrish's Coat-tail!" and the editorial is caustic to say the least.

"It is a compliment to a man that other people should follow in his footsteps, but sometimes the following is done so servilely that it works to the discredit of the follower—then we call it grabbing his coat-tail," writes Cyrus, the indignant.

"IN THE RECENT CAMPAIGN for congress in this district we had an exhibition of the coat-tail grabbing on the part of some of the candidates who seemed to think that all the people of Clay county wanted to know whether that they had voted for Lucian Parrish or that they had taken up his platform.

"Their campaigning in this respect was so persistent that we are informed in many instances it became disgusting and if so, must have resulted to the detriment rather than the advantage of the candidates using that means in endeavoring to win votes. And now comes a candidate for the senate who is using the same tactics.

"A LADY IN DALLAS IS GETting up a scrap-book of press clippings concerning the death of Mr. Parrish, so that his children when they grow up may know in what esteem their father was held, a work that is altogether commendable. But along with the letter asking for copies of the papers the lady adds a postscript stating that most all Mr. Parrish's friends are coming over to the other candidate she names and she hopes the recipient will do as well and then she encloses a booklet containing an address by the candidate.

"Of course, we all cherish Mr. Parrish's memory because we recognized him as a great and a good man and we deeply regret the deplorable accident that cut him down right in the beginning of an eventful career of great usefulness to his country, but we resent the idea that a lot of strangers should come along and claim our suffrages because they were friends of Mr. Parrish or use his name in any way as a boost for their candidacy before his body is hardly cold in its grave.

"People who seek a place in the congress of the United States, the greatest legislative body on the face of the globe, should base their candidacy on the principles which they advocate and not upon the matter of personal friendship and admiration which the voters may have for one of their fellow citizens."

JUDGE ELBERT H. GARY OF the United States Steel corporation favors the repeal of the income tax and the institution of the sales tax. This will throw Samuel Gompers on the other side of the proposition. Whenever Gary outlines a policy of government Samuel takes the other side.

ELBERT HAS A BILLION DOLlar corporation that cannot vote; Samuel has a large voting constituency if each unit would register or pay poll tax. There are thousands of working men everywhere who talk loudly and never vote. Their names

RAIL MEN TO VOTE ON BIG STRIKE

Wage Cut Stirs Up Maintenance Workers

By Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., May 30.—The executive council of the united brotherhood of maintenance of way employes and railway shop laborers this afternoon unanimously adopted a resolution instructing E. F. Grable, the president, to send out strike ballots to all members of the organization and all non-union workers in the crafts, affected by the wage cut ordered by the United States railroad labor board Saturday.

President Grable announced the ballots would be sent out immediately and that if the workers decided to strike in protest against the cut the walkout would be effective about July 5.

He estimated 478,000 members of the union, and about 72,000 non-union workers would be asked to vote on the matter, virtually every railroad in the country with the exception of short lines and electric roads being affected.

FIREMEN MAY JOIN IN RAIL WALK-OUT.

By Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Texas, May 30.—The convention of the International Brotherhood of Locomotive firemen and enginemen adjourned at 5 o'clock this afternoon without having taken action on the motion to authorize the president and secretary to prepare instructions for firemen to leave the service in event the rail labor board hands down a decision reducing their wages.

The motion apparently looks to the future in suggesting that general chairman prepare in advance instruction blanks, leaving blank the date for a walkout, the date suggested being the time that any wage cut should become effective. The motion was referred to the committee on the protective department. The motion stated that the "majority of the members of the board are determined to cut our wages."

Harding Lauds Lincoln In Unveiling Memorial

THOUSANDS AT SHRINE ERECTED TO ABE LINCOLN

President and Former Executive Honor Statesman

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The homage of a people was poured out today at the shrine erected by a decade of patient labor to Abraham Lincoln.

Under the thoughtful gaze of his marble likeness, dim in the shadowy background of the great white temple which his countrymen have raised to him, thousands of Americans gathered.

Men great in the council of the nation were there. The president came to accept in the nation's name, the memorial reared at the river brim. A former president came gladly to give accounting of his trust as head of the commission that saw the great work to its completion.

Senators, representatives, cabinet officers, admirals and generals all were there; but it was not these, lavish as were their tributes to the great dead, who made the day historic in American annals.

It was the swelling tide of humble people who stood for hours under a blazing sun to claim this temple of freedom and the man whose memory it enshrines as their own.

Far as the eye could reach from the high base of the memorial, Americans were spread over the lawns and clustering under the trees that grace the setting. How many may

GREAT LEADER'S WORK STILL IS NATION'S GUIDE

He Paved Way For Triumphs Of Today

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—"Maintained union and nationality," rather than "emancipation" was declared to be the supreme chapter in American history by President Harding in an address today accepting the Lincoln memorial in behalf of the American people.

Lincoln would have compromised with slavery, Mr. Harding declared, while cleaving to his great purpose—the maintenance of the "inheritance handed down by the founding fathers."

Declaring that the new memorial was fittingly placed near the towering spire of the Washington monument, Mr. Harding said that Washington, the founder, and Lincoln, the saviour, "offered outstanding proof that a representative popular government, constitutionally founded, can find its own way to salvation and accomplishment."

The president spoke as follows:

"It is a supreme satisfaction officially to accept on behalf of the government this superb monument to the saviour of the republic. No official duty could be more welcome, no official function more pleasing. This memorial edifice is a noble tribute, gratefully bestowed, and in its offering is the reverent heart of America; in its dedication is the consciousness of reverence and gratitude beautifully expressed.

He Guides Us Today.

"Somehow my emotions incline me to speak simply as a reverent and grateful American rather than one in official responsibility. I am thus inclined because the true measure of Lincoln is in his place today in the heart of American citizenship, though nearly half a century has passed since his colossal service and his martyrdom. In every moment of peril, in every hour of discouragement, whenever the clouds gather, there is the image of Lincoln to rivet

Man Whipped but He Knows Not Why

TERRELL, Texas, May 30.—"They whipped me nearly to death," a man whose name is said to be Bennett, told several citizens when he was put out of an automobile last night a short time after he was forced into the car by several unmasked men.

The whipped man was told to 'stick your hands up and keep your mouth shut," when he was ordered into the automobile. The whippers were not recognized and are believed to have come from some other town. No reason for the whipping was given.

COX FAILED TO PAY FOR LEASE

He Replies Receiver Interfered

By Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Texas, May 30.—Efforts on the part of the government to prove speeific cases of fraud in connection with the promotion of the Cox realization company, the General Oil company and the S. E. J. Cox company, marked the second day of the trial of Seymour E. J. Cox in the United States district court.

Cox, oil operator and former contender for the Bennett cup, is charged in an indictment containing 14 counts with the use of the mails with intent to defraud.

Nine witnesses were placed on the stand today by the government. The testimony of C. P. Boen of Grand Forks, N. D., was considered the most damaging to the defense. He testified he paid $50 an acre to the General Oil company for leases on five acres of land and later accepted the company's proposal to buy back the leases for $1500 but that he never received the money.

The government presented in evidence a booklet entitled "a souvenir" issued in connection with a Texas oil field Cox promoted. On the back of the booklet was Boen's name as one who resold his leases for $1500. Cox's attorneys said the repurchasing of leases was stopped by the receiver of the General Oil company and that otherwise the leases would have been purchased.

Cox took a keen interest in the trial. His demeanor was alternately serious and light-hearted. He frequently offered suggestions to his attorneys. Huge stacks of literature mailed out by Cox' companies were introduced in evidence by the government.

Rebels In All Parts Of Nation But None Are Organized, Say War Office Reports

By Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, May 30.—Press dispatches from the United States indicate that the rebellious activities of Felix Diaz are considered more seriously there then in Mexico.

The war department reports show that the revolutionary movements in Mexico have been effectively stopped by federal troops.

So far as is known here the rebel situation has not materially changed in the past month except for scattered flurries which are described by military observers as evident attempts to embarrass the administration during the absence in New York of Secretary of the Treasury De La Huerta.

A survey of the situation indicates that virtually every state harbors rebel bands, ranging from four or five to several hundred, but there is no unity of purpose or command.

None of them at present can be our hopes and renew our faith. Whenever there is a glow of triumph over national achievement there comes the reminder that but for Lincoln's heroic and unalterable faith in the union, these triumphs could not have been.

"History is concerned with the things accomplished. Biography deals the methods and the individual attributes which led to accomplishment.

Would Have Compromise.

"The supreme chapter in history is not emancipation, though that achievement would have exalted Lincoln throughout all the ages. The simple truth is that Lincoln, recognizing an established order, would have compromised with the slavery that existed if he could have halted its extension.

"Hating human slavery as he did, he doubtless believed in its ultimate abolition through the developing consciousness of the American people but he would have been the last man in the republic to resort to arms to effect its abolition. Emancipation was a means to one great end—maintained union and nationality. Here was the great purpose, here the towering hope, here the supreme faith.

"He treasured the inheritance handed down by the founding fathers, the ark of the covenant wrought through their heroic sacrifices and hallowed in their inspired genius. The Union must be preserved. It was the central thought, the unalterable purpose, the unyielding intent, the foundation of faith.

"It was worth every sacrifice, justified every cost, steeled the heart to sanction every crimson-ed tide of blood. Here was the great experiment—popular government and constitutional union menaced by greed expressed in human chattels.

"With the greed restricted and unchastening, he could temporize. When it challenged federal authority and threatened the union, it pronounced its doom.

"In the first inaugural address he stressed the great general principle that:

Quotes From Lincoln.

"'In our constitutional controversies we divide into majorities and minorities. If the minority will not acquiesce, the majority must, or the government must cease. There is no alternative, for continuing the government is acquiescence on one side or the other. If the minority in such case will secede rather than acquiesce they make a precedent which in time will divide and ruin them. * * * Plainly the central idea of secession is the essence of anarchy. A majority held in restraint by constitutional checks and limitations, and always changing easily with deliberate changes of popular opinion and sentiment is the only true sovereign of a free people. Whoever rejects it does, of necessity, fly to anarchy or despotism.'

"Here spoke the statesman, proclaiming deliberate public opinion as the supreme power of civilization, ready to be written into law when conviction should command. It ought to be tonic to the waning confidence of those of today who grow impatient that emphasized minority views are not hurried into the majority expressions of the republic. Deliberate public opinion never fails.

Lincoln's Vain Appeal

"Later, closing his first inaugural, when anxiety gripped the nation, there spoke the generous, forgiving sympathetic man of undaunted faith.

"'I am loath to close. We are not enemies but friends. We must not be enemies, though passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affections. The mystic chords of memory, stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave, to every living heart and hearthstone, all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the nation, when again touched, as they surely will be by the better angels of our nature.'

"But he appealed in vain. Passion was aflame and war was made the arbiter. Americans fought as Americans with equal courage and valor.

"Some one sent me recently an illuminated and framed quotation which fell from his lips when the storm of criticism was at its height:

"'If I were trying to read,' he said, 'much less answer all the attacks made on me, this shop might as well be closed for any other business. I do the best I know how, the very best I can; and I mean to keep on doing it to the end. If the end brings me out all right, what is said against me will not amount to anything. If the end brings me out all wrong, ten angels swearing I was right would make no difference.'

Knew He Was Right.

"He knew, of course, before the assassin robbed him of fuller realization, that the end was bringing him out all right. He knew when swords were sheathed and guns laid down, that the union saved was riveted anew and made forever indissoluble. He knew that in the great crucible of fire and blood the dross had been burned from the misdirected patriotism of seceding states and the pure gold restored to shining stars in dear Old Glory again. He knew he had freed a race of bondmen and had given to the world the costly proof of the perpetuity of the American union. But, I cannot restrain the wish that he might somehow know of the monuments to his memory throughout the world, and that we are dedicating today, on behalf of a grateful nation, this matchless memorial, whose forty-eight columns, representing the forty-eight states in the concord of union, testify that the end brought him out all right.'

"Abraham Lincoln was no superman. Like the great Washington, whose monumental shaft towers near by as a fit companion to the memorial we dedicate today, the two testifying in the greatest love of all Americans to founder and saviour—like Washington, Lincoln was a very human being, with the frailities mixed with the virtues of humanity.

"There are neither supermen nor demigods in the government of kingdoms, empires or republics.

"It will be better for our conception of government and its institutions if we will understand this fact. It is vastly greater than finding the superman if we justify the confidence that our institutions are capable of bringing into authority, in time of stress, men big enough, strong enough to meet all demands.

"Washington and Lincoln offered outstanding proof that a representative popular government, constitutionally founded, can find its own way to salvation and accomplishment. In the very beginning our American democracy turned to Washington, the aristocrat, for leadership in revolution and the greater task of founding permanent institutions. The wisdom of Washington and Jefferson and Hamilton and Franklin was proven when Lincoln, the child of privation, of hardship, of bagren environment and meager opportunity, rose to unquestioned leadership when disunion threatened.

"Lincoln came almost as humble as the Child of Bethlehem. His parents were unlettered, his home was devoid of every element of culture and refinement. He was no infant prodigy, no luxury facilitated or privilege hastened his development, but he had a God-given intellect, a love for work, a willingness to labor and a purpose to succeed.

"Biographies differ about his ambition, but Herndon, who knew him as did no others, says he was greatly ambitious.

"I can believe that ambition is a commendable attribute, without which no man succeeds. Only inconsiderate ambition imperils.

"Lincoln was modest, but he was so sure of himself, and always greatly simple. Therein was his appeal to the confidence of his country.

"His work was so colossal in the face of such discouragement that none will dispute that he was incomparably the greatest of our presidents.

"Let us forget the treachery, corruption and incompetence with which he had to combat and recall his wisdom, his unselfishness, his sublime patience. He resented no calumnies upon himself; he held no man his enemy who had the power and will to serve the union; his vision was blinded by no jealousy. He took his advisors from among his rivals, invoked their patriotism and ignored their plottings. He dominated them by the sheer greatness of his intellect, the singleness and honesty of his purpose, and made them responsive to his hand for the accomplishment of the exalted purpose.

"This memorial, matchless tribute that it is, is less for Abraham Lincoln those who follow after. His surpassing compensation would have been in living, to have his ten thousand sorrows dissipated in the rejoicing of the succeeding half century.

"How it would soften his anguish to know that the south long since came to realize that a vain assassin robbed it of its most sincere and potent friend when it was prostrate and stricken, when Lincoln's sympathy and understanding would have helped to heal the wounds and hide the scars and speed the restoration—how with his love and freedom and justice, this apostle of humanity would have found his sorrows ten fold repaid to see the hundred millions to whom he bequeathed reunion and nationality, giving of their sons and daughters and all their fortunes to halt the armed march of autocracy and preserve civilization, even as he preserved union.

"Fifty seven years ago this people gave from their ranks, sprung from their own fibre, this plain man, holding their common ideals. They gave him first to service of the nation in the hour of peril, then to their pantheon of fame. With them and by them, he is enshrined and exalted forever.

"Today American gratitude, love and appreciation give to Abraham Lincoln this lone white temple, a pantheon for him alone."

Noble, one of the active irrigation workers, is also mentioned in this connection.

"Lake Texas" is suggested by one correspondent, Mrs. C. W. Gilliland—first because it is the largest lake of any kind in Texas, and second because she is not only opposed to the naming of the lake for any individual, but for any city, or county in the state, declaring that many citizens of other sections will aid in its construction.

Out of town suggestions continue to be received, one in today's list coming from Electra and another from Seymour.

Names suggested follows.

"Kenoke Lake" (first two letters Kemp, Noble, Kell), L. Y. Woodruff, 1602 Burnett.

"Lake Big Wichita" for storage lake; "Lake City" for diversion lake, Mrs. J. A. Bradley, 1208 Travis.

"Lake Texas" or "Lone Star Lake," Mrs. C. W. Gilliland, 2015 Ninth.

"Lake Seymour," W. H. Merrick, Seymour, Texas.

"Kemp-Wichita Lake," E. A. Patterson, William-Mary hotel.

"Kemp-Faith Lake," H. L. Campbell, Cowin street.

"Lake Welcome" for the larger lake; "Wichitans' Faith" for the smaller lake; Fred Hull, 1108 Ninth street.

"Lake Joseph," for large lake; "Lake Flora" for smaller lake (given names of Mr. and Mrs. Kemp), John W. Bradley, city.

"Great Lake Wichita" for the larger lake and "Romny Falls" for the smaller lake; Monroe Lloyd, Electra.

"Wichita-Faith Lake" for the larger lake; "Dream Lake" for the smaller one; Marvin Bond, 1708 Tenth street.

"Kemp Dream Lake" for the larger; "Lake Noble" for the smaller; James Bradshaw, 1403 Austin.

"Lake Flora" of "Flora Kemp Lake" for the larger; "Beautiful Lake" for the smaller, Mrs. P. A. Martin, 2509 Ninth street.

"Lake Kemp" for the larger; "Lake Faith" for the smaller; R. D. King, 600 Austin.

"Lake Kemp Falls" for the larger; "Lake Noble" for the smaller; Maurine Corder, 1204 Marshall.

"Lake Kemp" for the larger; "Lake Faith" for the smaller; J. L. Pollard, 2012 Filmore.

Probably more suggestions have centered on the naming of the larger lake in recognition of J. A. Kemp's origination of the irrigation project and of his fight in its behalf for 27 years than have centered on any other one thing. What is your choice or suggestion? The directors of the irrigation project, feeling that the project and the lakes belong to the whole people, have asked that the people name them, and are anxious for suggestions. It will only take a moment to cut out the inclosed clipping, or to write your suggestion on a post card and mail it to the Record News.

Grafton and by A. H. Britain, who acted as master of ceremonies for the occasion. Mr. Britain, before announcing Dr. Grafton's subject, spoke of the part played by Mr. Noble in the long negotiation which resulted in an advantageous sale of the bonds voted for the project, as well as the load he has carried in connection with the administrative affairs of the project.

"The measure of the success of a man is not measured by the amount of money he accumulates," Dr. Grafton declared in speaking of Mr. Noble's services.

"This is well exemplified by the work of Mr. Noble who has had a great part in an accomplishment which will not only improve the affairs of his fellow citizens of today, but will prove a lasting benefit to those yet to come."

"The meaning of water to this country is exemplified by the beautiful flowers and gardens in Wichita Falls today," Mr. Kemp, the first speaker, declared in expressing gratification at the approaching realization of his dream of more than a quarter of a century. Mr. Kemp spoke briefly of the early day efforts he had made in the interest of this project, and introduced to the crowd Capt. Sam Bellah of Decatur, a pioneer citizen who had journeyed into that rough country on horseback in the early days and located the dam site which engineers of a later day declared the only feasible one on the river.

Tribute to Bellah

"He was never too busy, nor the weather too bad for him to come with me in those days," Mr. Kemp said. "I was unable in that day without roads to find the place alone, but I could always locate it by getting hold of Captain Bellah and getting him to come with me and show me the way.

Mr. Kemp spoke of the appreciation he felt for the loyal cooperation he had always received from Wichita Falls' citizens in his work for the project and the confidence that they had always accorded him.

The project had received the very best that was in him at all times, Mr. Kemp said, declaring that he felt a great responsibility to the people of the section in all his activities in connection with it, and expressed the hope that the men who were actually constructing the big work would keep that constantly before them.

Judge I. O. Newton of Seymour, after "getting even" with the master of ceremonies for a portion of his introductory remarks, spoke of the importance the immense lake to be created by the backing up of the water into the natural basin above the dam would have as a pleasure resort, not only for Seymour and Wichita Falls, but for the whole southwest as well. He expressed the appreciation of Seymour people in being given a part in the program, and of their good will and expectations from the project. He humorously referred to other contributions by Seymour and Baylor county to the project, pointing particularly to the furnishing of "free water" to fill the lake.

Work on this project means something more to himself and his fellow "Puget Sounders" than the usual humdrum of harbor and channel dredging, J. B. Lockwood, engineer in charge here for the Puget Sound Dredging company declared, in speaking on the subject of "From Puget Sound to the Big Wichita."

"We can see beyond the erection of the big dam on which we will work," he said. "We can see the prosperous farms and the beautiful homes for which the water we are working to impound will be responsible," he said.

The actual launching of the boat proceeded without a hitch. Following the conclusion of the program, and amid music by the Seymour band, Mr. Noble mounted to the deck, workmen with sledges pounded away the wedges which were holding it in place. Seemingly immovable, the boat stuck for a moment, then moving slowly until christened, after which it gathered way and slid with increasing speed to take the water in the basin prepared for it with a thoroughly satisfying splash.

to acquire and disseminate knowledge of irrigation farming.

Mr. Kell took occasion to compliment the engineering heads of the project, as well as to disclaim any credit for himself in this project, Mr. Kemp's accomplishment.

In speaking of the engineers, he told of the many eminent men brought here during the years of ardent work on the idea by Mr. Kemp—men who lead in the nation as consulting engineers.

"They attacked the problem as theorists," he said. "When we began actually to construct the work we went into the field and got practical men—men who were and had been for years engaged in building. It is the ideas of these men that you see going into execution here—it is their judgment on which we are relying. This great boat which will do a tremendous amount of work in the building of the dam—it was their judgment which fixed that as the best method."

He mentioned R. A. Thompson, chief engineer, and Capt. Harry McFarland, his chief assistant. The work of Mr. Thompson's work as engineer for the state railroad commission, his later connection with local enterprises in the building of the Northwestern and Southern railroads and the local traction company, and of his subsequent selection by the interstate commerce comission as one of five engineers to value the railroads of the whole United States.

He mentioned Capt. McFarland's work, and of his connection with a local enterprise, the building of the Southern line from Newcastle to Breckenridge, and the building of the Ranger line.

In his connection with the irrigation project, Mr. Kell said that although he "dreamed" and "played poker" a little with Mr. Kemp in the early days of the project, he soon got tired of "anteing" and drew out and that Mr. Kemp continued all alone.

"We referred to it in that day as 'Kemp's dream,'" he said, "and I guess that there were many who thought it was a dream. Now many of us are referring to it as 'Kemp's accomplishment' and it is his accomplishment alone. I had no part in it. I came in after the bear had been killed and the danger was over. I speak thus frankly of myself and my associate from the very reason of our close association for so many years, and in order that you may know the facts of the case."

THOUSANDS—

have been there to hear the words of the speakers, caught up and flung to far distances by the amplifiers that studded the coping atop of the marble structure, no man might estimate.

But when the last word had been said, when the president had gripped hands with Robert Lincoln at the foot of the father's statue, the public broke over the barriers and swept unchecked up the wide steps to see for itself the things that have been wrought in the people's name.

There was little of military splendor about this dedication services. Just a flourish of trumpets to mark the coming and going of President Harding, and the solemn ritual with which the men of the grand army of the republic dedicated the silken emblem of a re-united country on the steps of the memorial.

The words of the formal orders at this service were spoken in voices shaken and thin with age and the hands that held the banner aloft trembled under the weight of years; but the high courage and resolve that fired the veterans half a century ago are beyond the reach of time as is the memory of the great leader they honored.

Gray Clad Men There.

Along the front benches on a lower terrace facing the great statue above, were gathered the veterans. To the right, a handful of old men had donned again the blue that gave them front place in the days events and stood to act as guard of honor when the president arrived. Flanking these to the left, a bare score of gray clad veterans of the armies of Lee or other southern generals stood proudly to salute the flag that Lincoln's vision and high courage preserved as the flag of one people.

The sight of these bent men in gray drew President Harding from the written text of his address. He was saying that to Lincoln, greater than any other reward he could have known would have been the knowledge that his vision had been fulfilled; that the broad waters of the Potomac flowing within a stone's throw of the memorial marks no boundary between two nations but that from sea to sea Americans are our people.

said to offer serious threats to the central government. Until these scattered troops are consolidated there is reason to believe that President Obregon is justified in his optimistic declarations that the uprisings are not political and not important.

Of the numerous alleged revolutionaries in the United States, Diaz is the most widely proclaimed here, and his adherents are said to be most numerous in the Vera Cruz territory and in Oaxaca.

Gonzales and Cantu are especially strong in the north, but there have been no official statements to support the border rumors that these former Mexican generals contemplate aggressive action. It is generally understood that the rebels operating between Saltillo and San Luis Potosi is intended to make a demonstration against Secretary De La Huerta's train as it passed northward last week but the secretary changed his route at Queretaro and entered the United States through El Paso, without incident.

Yucatan Stirred

Disquieting reports have been received during the last few days from Yucatan, where radicals and conservatives are indulging in more than usual hostilities, but these disturbances are not aimed at the central government.

Secretary of War Serrano at present is engaged in an inspection trip throughout the entire southern part of the republic following his reported pacification of Tabasco, the revolutionary threats emanating from that region are not taken seriously here in government circles.

Mainly About People

Ministers and Mobs—
They Raise Their Voice—
Preachers Are for Law—

By H. N. F.

TEN BAPTIST PREACHERS IN the city of Waco, representing the Waco Baptist Pastorate association, have denounced mob law for the reason they say it defeats justice and demoralizes citizenship.

These pastors appeal to everybody to give their fullest co-operation to officers in a courageous enforcemem of law, through orderly processes and to set themselves openly and firmly against any movement whatsoever against mob law to the end that charges of legal delays and miscarriages of justice may no longer find any basis in fact.

THIS IS THE PLATFORM OF the Record News. This is the platform of sane men and women everywhere. Enforce the law without fear or favor. Enforce the written law in the courthouse. Punish crime and eliminate criminals. It can be done and it should be done by the law abiding and patriotic people of this commonwealth.

SENATOR HIRAM JOHNSON OF California proposes a constitutional amendment to prohibit child labor. Well, the women of America have the ballot now and the mothers of the country are very apt to favor at the ballot box legislation that will prevent the enslavement of little children.

It is of greater moment to the people of America to protect the child life of the nation than it is to create huge fortunes for a few individuals. Child labor should be prohibited. Children should be sent to school and all the children of all the people should be given educated heads and trained hands.

ACCORDING TO LORD BIRKenhead of England, national greed is hobbling Europe and a desire to get the best of it regardless of others delays recovery on the other side. Lord Birkenhead is a financier. He must know whereof he speaks.

Europe is as greedy today as before the world war. Of course, the kaiser was put away, but there are uncrowned kaisers just as hoggish and just as lustful for the property of others and just as arrogant as the Hohenzollern who lost his crown.

NEW YORK, May 31.—For the first time since the date of issue, all liberty bonds today sold at par or better. Heavy trading in liberty bonds at highest prices and transactions embracing several lots of $1,000,000, were the outstanding features of the bond market.

Continued ease of money and investment buying by individuals and corporations in anticipation of June interest and dividend disbursements gave stimulus to the days' extensive purchases of these war flotations.

SENATE BOARD PUTS OKEH ON SOLDIER BONUS

Forfeiture Clause Is Taken Out Of Measure

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—The commonly known McCumber soldier bonus plan was ordered favorably reported today by the senate finance committee. The vote was 9 to 4.

The effective date of the bill was changed, however, from next October 1 to January 1, 1923, after Senator Walsh, democrat, Massachusetts, told the majority that it would take six months to get the bonus machinery in operation.

The committee before approving the McCumber plan eliminated the forfeiture provisions as contained in the house measure, under which veterans failing to pay loans to banks to the government would have forfeited their adjusted service certificates. In such cases the secretary of the treasury would restore the certificates to the veteran in whose name it was issued at any time prior to its maturity upon receipt from him of the amount paid by the government to bank plus interest at the rate of 4 1-2 per cent, compounded annually.

Under another amendment approved by the committee, veterans could make application for adjusted service compensation at any time after the passage of the law. The house measure would have limited the time to July 1, 1923.

The senate bill as reported would provide for the payment of cash to veterans whose adjusted service credited would not exceed $750, as proposed in the house measure, and would give to other veterans one of these four options:

Adjusted service certificates having a face value of 3.015 times the amount of the adjusted credit computed at the rate of $1 a day for domestic service and $1.25 for foreign service, with provisions for loans by banks prior to January 1, 1926, and by the government thereafter. These certificates would mature in 20 years from the date of issue, or sooner upon the death of the veteran.

YANKS SILENCE REVOLT PLOTS

Reports of War Said To Be Bloated

By Associated Press.

LAREDO, Texas, May 31.—The Mexican situation in this section was quiet today and reports that American troops had been placed at the international bridge in anticipation of a rebel attack on Nuevo Laredo are incorrect. No troops have been ordered out at Fort McIntosh, the adjutant there stated.

According to all outward appearances here, reports of an impending revolution are exaggerated. American department of justice agents and military intelligence operators here report there is nothing to indicate that trouble may be expected in Nuevo Laredo.

Reports yesterday from El Paso that Nuevo Laredo was plastered with revolutionary manifestos are denied by Mexican officials and American civilians visiting the Mexican town bear out the denial. The garrison at Nuevo Laredo today went about its customary duties without sign of approaching attack.

Judge 'No'? Can Preacher Criticize Court? Pastor 'Yes'

CAUSTIC criticism of the action of Dr. H. D. Knickerbocker in preaching a sermon on what is known in the courts as the Mike Tucker case before the latter had come to trial, was expressed by Judge P. A. Martin during the examination of jurors to try the case in the 89th district court Wednesday morning. The statement was made when Fred Thompson, prospective juror, testified that he had been present when the sermon was delivered and had contributed to the collection taken up on that occasion in the interest of the prosecutrix.

Subsequently another prospective juror disqualified on the same ground.

When the first juror was challenged, Judge Martin said:

"I want at this time to express my disapproval on the cases that are pending in court and taking up collections for either side, if they were taken up for either side of the case.

"This kind of interference with the administration of justice is something that this court, upon the prop-

"PURE rot—seemingly an attempt to curb free speech, and a high-handed procedure," Dr. H. D. Knickerbocker, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, declared Wednesday when Judge Martin's criticism of his sermon giving the "side of the girl" in the Mike Tucker case was called to his attention. "I will attend to Judge Martin next Sunday night," he also declared in this connection. "No, not in a regular sermon—it won't take that—just a prelude"—he declared.

The sermon was preached to a crowded auditorium on the Sunday following the admission of Ethel Elledge, 18-year-old orphan girl, in an examining trial, that she had shot Mike Tucker, garage mechanic, on Monday night, Feb. 20. He had wronged her the Saturday night previous when she went riding with him, the girl said, and she invited him to go riding with her the next time for the purpose of punishing him. Tucker recovered from a wound in the lung.

Two Million Asked To Send Their Representatives

By Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, May 31.—Edward F. Fitzgerald, grand president of the brotherhood of railway clerks, freight handlers, express and station employes, today announced that invitations are being sent out from here to 16 of the grand chiefs of various railroad brotherhoods, under heads and other executives, asking them to meet in Cincinnati next week to consider matters affecting the common welfare of the 2,000,000 railroad workers.

It is asked if next Tuesday is an acceptable day for the meeting.

The sessions will in all likelihood be held in the office of Grand President Fitzgerald. Telegrams were being exchanged with the chiefs in all parts of the country late today.

It is understood that the meeting here is to take the place of the one scheduled to be held in Chicago Thursday to consider matters pertaining to the recent wage cut decision of the railroad labor board.

"It will be the first gathering of the kind ever held in the history of organized labor," said Fitzgerald today.

It is expected that a course of action with regard to the reductions in wages ordered by the United States labor board will be decided on. But that is a matter that will be developed at the meeting, it was stated.

Senator Warned On Use of Language

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Charges made against Secretary Hoover in the senate last week by Senator Watson, democrat, Georgia, led to a lively row today between that senator and Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin, in the course of which the Georgia senator was admonished by the vice-president against violating the senate rules as to the use of language in the senate chamber.

The tilt was precipitated through presentation by Mr. Lenroot of a letter from Mr. Hoover denying assertions made by Mr. Watson that the accounts of the foreign relief organizations under the commerce secretary's direction never had been audited.

Tom Watson.

Mr. Lenroot declared in presenting the letter that it "so happened that senators sometimes make statements that are absolutely without foundation," adding that the statement regarding the relief accounts was of that character.

Senator Lenroot was referred to by the Georgia senator as the "insolent junior senator from Wisconsin" and the senate was reminded that the speaker had "defied" Mr. Lenroot on two previous occasions when differences had arisen.

"I defied him then, and I defy him now," shouted Mr. Watson. "I'm not afraid of him here or anywhere else and the sooner he finds that out the better it will be for both of us."

Rate On Bulbs Is Cause of War

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—There was a revolt tonight in the senate republican ranks against the finance committee recommendations to impose a duty of 70 per cent ad valorem on electric light bulbs and other illuminating glassware. An amendment by Senator Jones, democrat, New Mexico, to substitute a 40 per cent rate was defeated 31 to 30.

Fourteen republicans supported the Jones amendment. They were Borah, Capper, Cummings, Kellogg, Keyes, Ladd, La Follette, Lenroot, McNary, Newberry, Norbeck, Norris, Sterling and Townsend. Two democrats—Broussard and Ransdell — voted against the amendment.

Without a roll call the senate approved a rate of 65 per cent ad valorem on household glassware, blown or partly blown in the mould and a duty of 50 per cent on such glassware when pressed and unpolished.

EPSOM DOWNS, May 31.—England's great blue ribbon classic, the derby, and a stake estimated at $100,000, fell to Captain Cuttle, the three-year-old colt of Lord Woolavington (formerly Sir James Buchanan) today. The winner was piloted by the veteran English jockey, Steve Donoghue, who wrested the rich prize for the fourth time from a field of 30 of the finest thoroughbreds in training.

This was one of the largest lists of contenders in the last century and although the odds were ten to one against Captain Cuttle, he galloped home eight lengths ahead of the public favorites, Pondoland and St. Louis, covering the distance in 12 minutes, 34 3-5 seconds.

Asking a restraining order from probate courts to prevent the marriage, Mrs. McCormick declared that because of her "tender age" Miss Mathilde might "become subject of machinations and intrigues of designing persons."

Negroes Out Late Must Talk Plain

Negroes who have been very much in evidence on streets in the residence district in the small hours of the morning are going to be called upon by police to give an explanation for their being about. Police Commissioner Fitts has declared. Chief McCormick will soon issue a warning, and the motorcycle police will be instructed to pick the negroes up and bring them after hours set by the chief.

The police commissioner is also working on an ordinance designed against "jelly-beans" whose offensive remarks to women passers-by have been the subject of a number of recent complaints.

MAN CONFESSES YET ANOTHER MUST DIE

(By International News Service.)

BOSTON, May 31.—Although another man has confessed to the murder of which he has been convicted, only a change in the law can save George L. Rollins from the electric chair. More than four years ago Rollins was found guilty of murdering Ordway Hall, manager of one of a chain of grocery stores here. Since then Jeremiah Murphy, now in the Philadelphia penitentiary, has twice confessed to the slaying of Hall. Rollins has been in jail nearly five years. The supreme court dismissed an appeal for a new trial on the grounds that "everything provides against the granting of a new trial after a year has elapsed from the time of conviction.

BAG GRAZES BY HOTEL SCRAPER

Another Drops On House-Top

By Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 31.—Twelve giant gas bags tonight were sailing through uncharted areas of upper air as participants in the thirteenth national balloon race which started here this afternoon and ends for navigator whenever and wherever it becomes necessary to return to earth.

Roy Donaldson's balloon descended on the roof of a house on the south side of the city near the corner of Beulah and Iron streets about five miles from the starting point at 3:30. There appeared to be a big dent in the bag.

Donaldson and his pilot escaped unhurt. The occupants by the aid of a guide rope reached a tree safely and came to earth.

Captain John Berry, St. Louis, got away at 3:42 p. m.

The helium filled balloon piloted by Lieutenant Commander J. P. Norfleet, left the ground at 3:50.

The balloon made a beautiful getaway almost straight up. It carried a newly embedded device which is being secretly tested by the government.

WACO KU KLUX OFFERS TO AID

From 200 to 2,000 Men Promised

Special to the Record News.

WACO, Texas, May 31.—Offering a force of from two hundred to two thousand men, Saxet 33, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, of Waco, has offered to aid "the proper authorities" in the enforcement of law here, following the lynching and burning of a negro after an attack upon a young woman here and the murder of a young man.

The resolution sent to a Waco newspaper, signed by "Saxet 33" and which bore the official seal of the klan, says:

"Whereas, our institution of government, and the integrity of the courts, are being threatened by the deplorable tendency to mobocracy; and,

"Whereas, we, as an organization, are pledged to uphold and enforce the constitutional laws of our country, and to conserve the sovereign powers of the nation and state; and,

"Whereas, it is not only possible, but easily practicable, to prevent mob violence with the determined opposition of the law abiding citizenship, through proper preparation and co-operation in such emergencies;

"Therefore, be it resolved by the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Saxet 33, Realm of Texas:

"1. That this organization unalterably condemns the action of any mob.

"2. That we tender our services, our aid and influence to the proper constituted authorities for the purpose of preventing mob violence, and in furtherance of such purpose we here and now tender to the [illegible] authorities, state, county and municipal, any number of our membership, from two hundred to two thousand, or more, such [illegible] ties in the [illegible] on all occasions [illegible] thorities may [illegible] such aid be required, and now pledge [illegible] such force under [illegible] head, for the duration of such emergency, subject entirely to the orders of such duly constituted authorities.

MARY REALLY IS DIVORCED FROM OWEN

By Associated Press.

CARSON, Nev., May 31.—Mary Pickford's divorce from Owen Moore was sustained today when the Nevada supreme court affirmed the order of District Judge F. H. Langan quashing service of summons in the action brought by Attorney General Fowler to set aside the decree granted the movie star.

The divorce of Mary Pickford, motion picture star, from Owen Moore, also a screen favorite, at Minden, Nev., March 20, 1920, precipitated an action by the state for the dissolution of the decree on the ground that Miss Pickford's residence in the state had not covered the period required by law.

Charge Fraud

The district court in which the divorce was granted was asked to review its decision and reverse itself, but held that the petition had been regular in every particular and that the decree should stand.

Attorney General Fowler then appealed to the state supreme court, charging that the divorce was obtained through fraud and collusion on the part of Miss Pickford, and holding that the Minden court had no jurisdiction.

The defense answered that the state was not an aggrieved party and therefore had no authority under the Nevada law to prosecute the action. Arguments were heard here with the personal appearance of both counsels Jan. 30. Gavin McNab of San Francisco was chief counsel for Miss Pickford in the Nevada action.

Miss Pickford married Douglas Fairbanks, also a motion picture notable, two weeks after her divorce.

"I'M VERY, VERY HAPPY," SAYS MARY

By Associated Press.

"I am very, very happy, more happy than I can express," said Mary Pickford, when informed of the decision of the Nevada supreme court upholding her divorce from Owen Moore, according to her counsel, Gavin McNab, who telephoned the news to her in Los Angeles.

Sergeant Alvin York Finally Shakes Off Mortgage and Begins Farming As Sole Owner of His 400-Acre Tract

By Associated Press.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 31.—Sergt. Alvin York at last feels secure, the deed to his 400-acre river bottom farm in Fentress county having been presented to him with the title clear by J. T. Heslen of Jamestown, one of the trustees of the farm fund started by the Nashville Rotary club.

The first campaign for the fund left the title to the farm clouded with a mortgage and the Argonne hero recently was reported considerably worried over meeting payments on the indebtedness. A second campaign was inaugurated by the Rotarians and the mortgage was paid. Presentation of the deed was held up pending incorporation in the document of an account of the sergeant's exploits in France.

SMITH PRAISED BY CLARENDON

He Urges Men to Aid In Clean-Up

Special to the Record News.

CLARENDON, Texas, May 31.—Rev. J. A. Smith of the Baptist church of this city, addressed men only in a farewell speech along the lines of general city improvement, and how to change the present moral conditions found everywhere, and asked everyone to help and aid any organization that may be for an advancement of the community.

At the conclusion, Rev. Smith spoke of his two years work and having built an annex to the church known as the Sunday school work room. This annex is a three story building, 32x54, being cut up in class rooms and an auditorium on each floor, and is modern in every way.

This annex under ordinary conditions would have cost about $10,000, but having been built entirely by members of the congregation, often working up until midnight, this building was constructed at a cost of about $4500. He then produced all of the bills for material etc., and with the aid of several of the members set fire to the bills and said as these papers burned, all of the bills against this church are destroyed.

During Rev. Smith's two years stay, he has added over 100 members to the church and it is with much regret to the members of his church and the citizens here that Rev. Smith leaves, having accepted the pastorate of the Emanuel Baptist church in San Angelo, Texas.

ARAB'S ENGLISH BRIDE IS HAPPY

Chorus Girl Finds Real Romance

By International News Service.

ALGIERS, May 29.—To be the English wife of an Arab, be he ever so handsome and Europeanized, is always the romantic life that young girls might suppose it to be, according to Mrs. Tayeb Ben Ahmed, former English chorus girl. And it is not because your husband is less wonderful than you had thought, but because the world in general will insist on prying into your affairs and romance alike occasionally.

Mr. and Mrs. Tayeb Ben Ahmed live in Biskra, Algeria, right beside the beautiful Garden of Allah. She is one of those women who goes through life quite unconsciously giving food to the public and wonderment to everyone who keeps a watchful eye turned in her direction. When the first production of "The Garden of Allah" was given in London a very discerning producer engaged her for the chorus. Thereafter she contributed a lot of local color right from the Garden of Allah.

Tayeb Ben Ahmed, one of the handsomest youths of Biskra, a true Arabian of swarthy complexion and proud bearing. With him came as many camels as are necessary to form a stage desert caravan, all of which Tayeb himself safely transported to London.

Once each night after arriving he led the camels across a London stage singing Allah, Allah, Allah" three times in a monotone so marvelously that every chorus girl was entranced. His words were few, but his costume and the way he walked were "just grand."

After many nights of success for the play Tayeb returned to his home in Biskra, a much more versatile guide, taking with him the lovely English chorus girl, with red cheeks and black eyes and hair. In Biskra the Arabs looked upon her not a little askance, for she arrived quite unveiled and even walked out on the street alone, which no fine Arab woman would ever do. Besides, it was a well-known fact that Tayeb had been married once to an Arab woman and where an Arab may have as many wives as he chooses, yet it is his first wife who really matters to him. However, the Arabs refused to make comments. What Allah has decreed so let it be, they said.

Almost two years have passed since Mr. and Mrs. Tayeb Ben Ahmed went to Biskra to live. Their white-walled Arabic house, which is near the center of town, bears large bill posters announcing that excursions into the desert will be arranged by Tayeb, who will also provide for shooting of "wild goats and the gazelle and will rent carriages, horses, camels and mules at moderate prices."

Occasionally one catches a glimpse of Mrs. Ben Ahmed, who appears in Arabian slippers of embroidered red leather, but wearing a soft European frock. As for Tayeb, he has combined his oriental costume with the European one effectively and more than once has been seen wheeling the baby carriage as only a well-trained European or American nurse would do.

VISALIA, Cal., May 31.—E. R. Woods of Porterville, extracted a revolver from beneath his pillow when he saw a rattlesnake on his bed yesterday and fired with deadly aim. He did not notice, however, that his right big toe was in the line of fire and the bullet which killed the snake also clipped off the top of his toe.

EVANSTON, Ill., May 31.—Declaring that they had his sympathy, but asserting that the matter is beyond his jurisdiction, Max Witkower, justice of the peace, has denied an application by the Young Men's club of Evanston for an injunction to protect them from the wiles and charms of the "flapper."

"We are afraid of short skirts and rolled stockings," the application said in expressing the fears of the petitioners.

"I agree that flappers are dangerous," said Justice Witkower. "They are menacing the future of mere men."

cent in 1925; 120 per cent in 1926; 120 per cent in 1927, and 140 per cent in 1928 or thereafter. Under the house bill the amount paid under option would have been the total of the adjusted service credit increased by 25 per cent.

Vocational training aid at the rate of $1.75 a day, but the total not to exceed 140 per cent of the amount of the adjusted service credit of the veteran.

Land settlement: Upon the opening of public or Indian lands to entry veterans would be given preference in their settlement for a period of not less than 60 days and then would be allowed to by the government for payment on such lands or improvements thereto, an amount equal to the adjusted service credit increased by 25 per cent. This provision is in lieu of the reclamation project proposed in the house bill.

Under the bank loan section of the bill prior to Jan. 1, 1926, any national bank or any bank or trust company incorporated under the laws of any state, territory, possession or the District of Columbia would be authorized to loan to any veteran upon his promissory note secured by his adjusted service certificate any amount not in excess of 50 per cent of the amount of his adjusted service credit, plus interest at the rate of 4½ per cent from the date of issue. The rate of interest charged at the date of the loan for the discount of 90 days commercial paper by the federal reserve bank for the federal reserve district in which the bank making the loan is located.

Treasury Pays on Default

Should a veteran fail to pay the principal and the interest of the loan within six months after its maturity the bank would present the note to the treasury and be paid the amount of the principal and interest. The certificate securing the note would be held by the treasury and would be restored to the veteran at any time prior to its maturity upon receipt from him of the amount paid by the treasury to the bank plus interest on such amount at the rate of 4½ per cent, compounded annually.

Should the veteran die before the bank loan matured or six months thereafter, the government would pay to his beneficiary the face value of the adjusted service certificates less the principal and interest of the bank loan.

After Jan. 1, 1923, the government would make loans directly to the veterans in the following amounts.

Before three years after the date of issue of the certificate, 50 per cent of the adjusted service credit plus interest at the rate of 4½ per cent compounded annually from the date of issue.

Three years after and before six years after the date of the certificate 85 per cent of the sum of the adjusted service credit plus interest at 4½ per cent, compounded annually. At any time after six years after the date of issue, 70 per cent of the sum of the adjusted service credit increased by 25 per cent plus interest from the date of the certificate to the date of the loan at the rate of 4½ per cent, compounded annually.

Payments of the loans to the government by the veterans would be upon amortization.

Should a veteran fail to make any payment when due the secretary of the treasury at any time prior to the maturity of the certificates would cancel the note and restore the certificates to the veteran upon receipt from him of the total amount due, thereupon, principal and interest, together with interest at 4½ per cent per annum compounded annually upon all payments that were in arrears. If a veteran failed to redeem his certificate before the maturity of the same, the certificate would be cancelled.

Under the house plan if the veteran failed to make payments to the government for a period of one year the certificate would have been cancelled and he would have been paid 80 per cent of the difference between what he borrowed and the maximum which he was authorized to borrow.

The McCumber plan, like the previous measures, provides that the maximum compensation shall be $500 for domestic service and $625 for foreign service.

The occupants of the ships shouted to persons here, but their words could not be distinguished and the numbers on the balloons were not discernible.

One other juror was excused on the same grounds. All of the 74 veniremen examined were asked the same question by the defense attorneys.

Coming in the midst of the routine of the examination of a special venire, the questions and answers and Judge Martin's remarks evinced a show of interest amounting to almost a sensation, and was a subject for interested discussion by the prospective jurors and others in the room.

The preacher told the "girl's side" of the story in a graphic way, and then asked all who felt sorry for her to applaud. A wave of applause swept the crowded building.

Taking a worn $10 from his pocket the preacher then said that he was going to show his sympathy for the girl in a substantial way, and invited the congregation to do the same. The ushers subsequently declared that the sum of $235 was obtained.

"No, it will not be for lawyers," the preacher declared. "I will see to the lawyer end myself."

YOUR NAME IS BADLY WANTED

Suggest Title Lake Should Be Given

Belief that Mrs. J. A. Kemp, as well as her husband, should receive some permanent recognition in the naming of the lakes for the big project, continues to be expressed in suggestions for names, as received by the Record News.

A particularly sincere tribute is paid by Mrs. E. B. Gorsline in making her suggestion, as follows:

"My choice for a name for the biggest lake in Texas is Flora, or Flora Kemp. Flora is the given name of Mrs. J. A. Kemp, and having personally known Mrs. Kemp for nearly 30 years I know her heart has been in this great enterprise just as much as has her husband's. Never for a moment did she lose faith that sometime their dream would come true. Another reason if Wichita Falls really wants to honor the man and woman who have accomplished this wonderful thing for Texas, they had a precious daughter named Flora and it would be a tribute to her memory.

"The name also means something of beauty, and we all hope that the lake and grounds surrounding it will be one of the 'beauty spots' of Texas."

Other suggestions received Wednesday include the following:

Storage lake—Lake Kemp; diversion lake—Lake Faith. J. W. Pond, 1619 Tenth.

Lake Bellah; Lake Dundee. Mrs. S. Y. Ferguson, 2514 9th street.

J. A. Kemp, Realization Lake; Wichita Falls, Superior Lake. Dr. J. S. Nelson.

Lake Charlotte; Lake Little Wichita. Mrs. A. Smith, 1300 Lamar.

Lake Kemp; Lake Faith. Ralph Dick, 1206 Tyler.

Wichita Falls-Noble Lake. Mrs. T. M. Murphy, 1506 Seventh.

Big Wichita Lake; Little Wichita Lake. A. W. Burnside, 914 American National building.

Superior Lake; Recreation Lake. Ansley Waters, Route 5, Box 156.

Noble Falls Lake. Mrs. Maud Myers, 1504 Seventh street.

M. L. Hoff makes the suggestion that the big lake be named "Vision Lake" suggestive of the vision of J. A. Kemp for 35 years, and of the vision and inspiration it will bring to young and old, and to Wichitans yet unborn, and for the smaller lake "Lake Reality."

From Henrietta comes a suggestion from an interested reader of the Record News, T. A. Mullin. His suggestion is name it "Foreseen Lake" and "Farseen Lake."

Another out of town reader sent in a suggestion Wednesday. J. B. Sisk of Iowa Park, proposing the names "Kemp Success" and "Prosperity" for the storage and diversion lakes, respectively.

Readers of the Record News where ever they may be, are invited to take part in the contest for naming the lakes. The majority of the readers have kept up with the progress of the irrigation project with great interest, and interest in the project is the best qualification to make a winning name. Suggestions may be sent in on the following blank:

Earl Matheson to Get New Hearing

Conviction of Earl Matheson, who was given two years on a charge of theft in connection with the theft of a fur coat from the Mack Taylor drug store was reversed and remanded for new trial by the court of criminal appeals Wednesday, according to information here Wednesday.

The case of George Floyd, charged with theft, was submitted on brief for both the state and the appellant.

TO SPRAY TREES

Arrangements with Frank Lancaster, formerly sexton at the Riverside cemetery, have been made by the park board whereby Wichitans may secure the spraying of trees for protection against various pests at a considerable saving over present rates, Commissioner Reed declared at the Wednesday night council session.

A spray will be loaned by the city, and a fixed scale of charges have been made, ranging from 20 cents to 60 cents per tree as the tree is graded—small, medium, large or extra large.

COUNCIL VOTES TROLLEY BILL

Scotland Franchise Passes Reading

Eventual passage of the Sixth-Austin-Scotland addition street car franchise as requested by the Traction company, was indicated at an adjourned session of the city council Wednesday night when the measure was passed on its first reading without a dissenting vote of those present. The motion for passage was offered by Commissioner Fitts.

Mayor Collier still expressed the belief that additional street maintenance provision should be included, but showed no desire to particularly press the point. Street Commissioner Clifford, who had also opposed the unamended passage, was not present at the meeting. Passage of the ordinance on two more readings and the holding of a hearing for which notice of two weeks must be given must precede final passage—requiring 30 days, but it is expected that the action of the council on the first reading indicated a final decision and will stand throughout the other deliberations on the measure.

COUNCIL TAKES UP PARKING

Double Decking Is Discussed

Downtown street traffic—parking—ranking—double decking—arrests for same—the whole interminable problem was again discussed by the city council at the special meeting of the city council Wednesday night, and without result except for the declaration of Commissioner Fitts that the constant increase in the number of automobiles here would soon force the elimination of unlimited parking on the streets.

"There are a lot more cars here now than there ever were during the boom," he declared. He intimated that parking lots and storage garages would eventually have to absorb the cars which now remain for hours parked in a single place.

Double-decking is now permitted by ordinance on Seventh street, he said, but is prohibited, even with a driver in the car, for more than two minutes on Indiana. He suggested a limited parking time on Indiana from Seventh to Tenth, and on Ohio from Seventh to Ninth, with unlimited parking time on Lamar and Scott as a possible solution, or the return to parking on Seventh street. Other members of the council indicated a hesitancy to return to the limited time for parking on any of the streets.

MARINA SENTENCED.

Frank Marina, charged with theft of over $50 in connection with theft of groceries from the Huffhines grocery was found guilty by a jury in the 89th district court and sentenced to a two year term in the penitentiary. The case is a companion case to the one of Earl Patterson, who received a similar sentence.

Judgment Reversed In Priddy Case

Judgment secured more than two years ago by F. T. Childers against W. M. Priddy for commission alleged to be due as the result of an oil transaction, was reversed and remanded for a new trial Wednesday by the supreme court of Texas, according to word received here.

SOUTHERN OIL PERMIT GIVEN

New Firm to Have Home Office Here

Permits to do business in Texas were granted two subsidiaries of the newly formed Southern States Oil corporation, the new member of the Haskell family, according to word received here Wednesday.

The two new subsidiaries are the Southern States Drilling company, capital $200,000, and the Sure Oil corporation, $100,000. Home offices of both are given at New York City, and the Texas office at Wichita Falls, with C. H. Verschoyle, state representative of the big holding company, as Texas agent.

Other subsidiaries of the new corporation are the Judson Oil company and the Columbian Oil corporation, holding company for the Judson, acquired by the Southern States.

VALUATIONS TO STICK HERE

City Finances Off Since Boom

Property valuations for city taxes must be maintained at last year's levels for this year's taxes, it was indicated at the Wednesday night meeting of the city council.

In spite of the rigid economies instituted in the city affairs, the city finances dropped behind during the boom development, which was a year or two ahead of tax increases, and no reduction in either valuations or rate can be seen by members of the council for this year at least.

The matter was discussed at some length by the council in executive session Wednesday.

CRUDE TRAIN IS RUN OUT OF ELECTRA

Activity of spot oil buyers at Electra is indicated in the report from the Fort Worth and Denver of a crude oil train run out of Electra on Tuesday, with New Orleans the destination. The crude is presumably for export. The train was composed of 26 cars.

The train load of crude was valued at approximately $15,000. The same number of cars of gasoline would have a valuation of more than $50,000.

VIEWS ON WORLD TOPICS

AMERICA'S welfare is dependent upon the rehabilitation of Europe, and without extension of credit from the United States, Europe's restoration to a sound economic basis will be impossible, Sir George Parish, British economist, declared recently before the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

"Never has a nation been faced by a graver responsibility," Sir George continued. "If America accepts the responsibility the world will move forward under American leadership to a state of well being never hitherto attained. If, however, America refuses responsibility, then every nation, including America, will sink into unprecedented poverty."

Summing up factors which he said were essential in the restoration of the world's economic balance, Sir George continued:

"It is essential for America to maintain her position as world banker which she assumed during the war.

"It is equally essential that America should now definitely assume the function of 'world trader' and that she should not only sell her own productions freely, but should buy without hindrance or restriction the productions of other nations.

"America must grant additional credit to Europe for reconstruction purposes on the security of German reparations plus the guarantees of the entente nations to the limit of her surplus supplies of produce and goods which otherwise she would be unable to sell.

"America must freely accept payment for any international credits she may grant in international goods and services.

"The question which America has now to decide is whether she will remain a world banker and will become a world trader, or will endeavor to confine her banking and trading activities to the limits of her own boundaries. If America seeks to reverse her policy of recent years, she would be unable to sell as much as she sold prior to the war, and foreign buying of American manufactured goods would entirely disappear.

"Nor would there by any expansion in the American home demand to make good the loss of the foreign demand. With the loss of their foreign markets American cotton planters and packers would be able to buy less, not more, food or manufactured goods.

"With the loss of the foreign demand for their products and with a diminished demand from the cotton states American farmers would be compelled to buy fewer manufactured goods and to use the railways less freely and the contraction in home demand for American manufactured goods would plunge the industrial and banking districts of America into great poverty.

"As soon as America makes it clear that she is willing to accept repayment of her credits, together with interest on them, in goods, produce and services the credit situation will at once improve. Credits to Europe must be financed by investors rather than by bankers and by securities and good bonds rather than by short bills."

ROOSEVELT FOR GOVERNOR

FRANKLIN D. Roosevelt was the vice-presidential candidate of the democrats in 1920. Now the democrats of New York who do not like William Randolph Hearst say they are going to run Franklin D. for governor and Al Smith for United States senator.

There appears to be a "re-awaking of conscience" on the part of New York democracy. Roosevelt is a grand old name and Franklin D. and the late Theodore Roosevelt are second cousins. Think of Father Knickerbocker coming back to New York on a ticket backed by the Tammany tiger.

Woman has the ballot and it is said that the women voters of New York helped to roll up the 456,000 majority for John F. Hylan for mayor. When it came to a distribution of the plums the Hylan women were given their share. Speaking of Roosevelt this is what Tammany says: "A good man with a great name." Political bosses are very cautious since Beveridge went over in Indiana and Pinchot swept all before him in Pennsylvania.

DR. CRANE'S EDITORIAL

BARRIE

WE get to thinking that all men are common, that life is drab, that nothing will happen, and that there is no new thing under the sun, and then comes along a genius, and puts his bomb under us, and blows smothering despair sky high.

If there is any one man in the world today who has the right and title to be called a genius, it is James M. Barrie. In the matter of creative imagination I put him before any living man.

The other day he was made Lord Rector of St. Andrews University in Scotland, a sort of honorary degree, I imagine. And he made a speech on that occasion which will ring around the world.

To find such a piece of literature coming from an institution of learning is as shattering as it would be to find a young archangel coming out of the slums. If you get a chance, read that speech of Barrie's. By all means, you must do so. Just as a teaser, I will quote you a few sentences.

He speaks of a certain MacConnochie, which is a name he gives to his unruly half. It is like Stevenson's Mr. Hyde, only, instead of being gruesome and sinful, it is whimsy and wayward. He said his desire was to be the family solicitor standing firm on his hearthrug among the harsh realities of the office furniture, but MacConnochie prefers to fly around on one wing.

He urged the youth to prepare for the great fight between them and their betters, "by youth meaning, of course, you and by your betters, us."

He spoke of a League of Youth. "You have more in common with the youth of other lands than youth and age can ever have with each other." He suggested that a League of Youth would be better than a League of Nations, as youth was most occupied with dying for quarrels that their betters had brought on.

He gave a definition of science which is a gem: "It is the surest means of teaching you how to know what you mean when you say so".

"The artistic callings," he said, "are merely doing what you are clamorous to be at; it isn't real work unless you would rather be doing something else." He alluded to "success which has become a somewhat odious onion nowadays, chiefly because we so often give the name to the wrong thing."

Again he said: "Courage! I don't think it is to be got by your becoming solemnsides before your time. You must have been warned against letting the golden hours slip by. Yes, but some of them are only golden because we let them slip. Diligence, ambition, noble words, but only if touched to fine issues." Unless a man has courage he has no security for preserving any other virtue.

"Don't forget to speak scornfully of the Victorian Age. There will be lots of time to repent when you know it better. Very soon you will be Victorian or that sort of thing yourselves—next session, probably, when the freshmen come up. Make merry while you may."

Altogether, a pure and shining diamond in the mud of contemporaneous literature.

STINNES AND GERMANY

GERMANY is to pay if a loan is made to Germany by the allies. The German mark has hit the bottom. It is as near worthless as the paper money of a people or nation has ever been. And yet the Germans expect to come back.

Hugo Stinnes is the uncrowned ruler of Germany. He has consolidated all the trusts into a Stinnes trust. He has amalgamated all the great industrial plants and organizations of Germany. He handles the labor organizations as well as the capitalistic organizations of Germany. He is the outstanding financial genius of Europe today and as a captain of industry, he has never had an equal in Europe. German financial experts say Stinnes is planning a rapid restoration of the mark to its pre-war value and they are fearful that if Stinnes wins there will be a slump come to Germany that will bring disaster to the little fellows while it will make billionaires of Stinnes and his coadjutors. But this: Germany is to pay if a loan is granted to Germany by the allies. Germany is coming back.

Germany has made a trade pact with Russia. This means that the Russia of the future is to supply Germany with food products and raw materials and that German money and German inventive skill will create in Russia a new industrial civilization. France knew this when the French prime minister smashed the Lloyd George program and Genoa. All these prime ministers of European governments and all the captains of industry of Europe are interested in the Russia of the future. Not because they love Russia or the Russians but because they know that Russia is a veritable store house of undeveloped [illegible] and that all the raw materials of [illegible] are to be found there in inexhaustible quantities. DUMM AND DUMMER ON THAT RUSSIAN REQUEST FOR A BILLION

"Dummer," said Senator Dumm, putting down his newspaper and adjusting his glasses, "let me have a billion dollars, will you, old thing?"

"How much?" asked Dummer.

"One billion," replied Senator Dummer.

"How will you have it?" asked Dummer. "Thralls or silver?"

"In dollars, and mostly fives and tens, if you don't mind," replied Dumm.

"Now that we know we're both crazy, what's the big idea?" demanded Dummer. "Who's this loose talk of a billion dollars?"

"I just wanted to feel like a Russian delegate to Genoa, that's all," explained Senator Dumm.

"Whaddya mean?" asked Dummer.

"Don't you read the papers?" demanded Dumm.

"Only for the arrivals in port of rum-runners," admitted Dummer.

"Well, Russia has just asked the allies for a loan of a billion dollars," explained Dumm. "With the calm demeanor of a man asking for a match, the head of the Russian commission has notified the allies that his country must have a billion or nothing, and that unless it gets it, it won't play any more."

"Will they get it?" asked Dummer.

"It'll be a good trick if they do," replied Dumm. "Russia is very serious about it and insists that nothing less than a billion can be even considered."

"What's the idea?" asked Dummer.

"It's Lenin planning on distributing dollar-bill sandwiches to the discontented populace?"

"No," explained Dumm. "It's like this. The allies need trade from Russia and Russia needs trade with the allies. The Russian mine is broke. What they want Russia to have the allies sell the goods and send them the money to pay the bills."

"A proposition like that shows that Lenin and Trotzky picked up a good business training when they were in the ladies garment business on the New York east side years ago," commented Dummer.

"Not so many years ago they would have collapsed at the mention of a billion dollars," argued Dumm. "For 880 worth of dress goods Lenin or Trotzky would have said yes to any proposition, and without any Genoa conference, either."

"It's a lot of money," mused Dummer wistfully.

"What's a lot of money; the billion or the 880?" demanded Dumm.

"Either," replied Dummer. "But, speaking of the billion, what does Russia intend to do with so much mazuma at one time?"

"The first thing she's got to do is to get new uniforms and boots for her Russian dancers," replied Dumm.

"Russian dancers?" questioned Dummer.

"Sure!" insisted Dumm. "They're the principal exports of Russia. She sends a lot of them to America, and you may have noticed how shabby their costumes have been the past few seasons.

"Now that you speak of it, I do," agreed Dummer. "I saw a troup of 'em in vaudeville last week and their boots were a disgrace to the act."

"Well, a good part of the billion will have to be spent that way," resumed Dumm. "A Russian dancer with bum boots and faded suit is a flop no matter how high he can jump or how many times he can spin around on one foot."

"But you're speaking of the male Russian dancers," said Dummer with a sudden gleam in his eyes. "Now you certainly can't claim any part of a billion is needed to clothe the lady Russian dancers."

"It slips me for the moment," said Dumm. "Let me think."

"Teh—teh—teh—thitcher—o-o-o-o" came violently from Dummer.

"That's it," said Dumm.

"What's it?" asked Dummer.

"What you just said."

"I didn't say anything," insisted Dummer, "I just sneezed."

"Well, you sneezed the name of the Russian delegate, Tchitcherin. In fact, you have to sneeze to pronounce it."

Rippling Rhymes

By WALT MASON

THE RUINED LIFE.

The pencil falters in my hand as I proceed to tell of Abner Lushington LeGrand, who's in a padded cell. I knew him in his younger years, when he was blithe and gay, and joyous as a yoke of steers he caroled on his way. In paths obscure he plugged along, and gained a small reward, and life was all a grand sweet song without a minor chord. At last by chance he conquered fame, and great was his renown, and all the snap shot artists came from every part of town. They snapped him when he sat to eat his shredded bran repast, they shot his hat, they shot his feet and made him stand aghast. He couldn't cough or swear or sneeze but snapshot fans were there; they snapped the spavins on his knees, the sandburs in his hair. He couldn't dodge the fatal lens, it got his every act, and, madder than nine setting hens, he felt als brain contract. The snapshot fiends so stirred his wrath he tore his beard and wept; they got him coming from the bath, they got him when he slept. And then his mind gave way, 'twas clear, his dome was on the blink; he had to shift to second gear when he would try to think. Ah, it would make one's bosom bleed to see him sunk so low; and still the snapshot fiends proceed, and picture as they go.

Another Outbreak Menaces China

By Associated Press.

PEKING, May 31.—General Chang Tso Lin, the Manchurian military leader, has arrived at Mukden and is making hurried efforts to re-establish his authority. He has ordered 7,000 troops to proceed to the Chinese eastern railway which is in the hands of mutineers.

The city of Harbin, which is controlled by sympathizers of General Wu Pie Fu, who holds the military ascendency at Peking, is expected to resist General Chang's forces.

Disorders are reported at Mukden where it is said that unless Chang regains his prestige a number of high military officials are likely to join Wu Pie Fu.

The Mucker

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

"There is no hope, I'm afraid," he said; "but, by George I intend to go down fighting, and not like those miserable yellow curs."

Barbara did not reply, but she grasped the spokes of the heavy wheel and tugged as he tugged. Theriere made no effort to dissuade her from the strenuous labor—every ounce of weight would help so much, and the man had a wild, mad idea that he was attempting to put into effect.

"What do you hope to do?" asked the girl. "Make that opening in the cliffs?"

Theriere nodded.

"Do you think me crazy?" he asked.

"It is such a chance as only a brave man would dare to take," she replied. "Do you think that we can get her to take it?"

"I doubt it," he answered. "With another man at the wheel we might, though."

Below them the crew of the Halfmoon ran hither and thither along the deck on the side away from the breakers. They fought with one another for useless bits of planking and cordage. The giant figure of the black cook, Blanco, rose above the others. In his hand was a huge butcher knife. When he saw a piece of wood he coveted in the hands of another he rushed upon his helpless victim with wild, bestial howls, menacing him with his gleaming weapon. Thus he was rapidly accumulating the material for a life raft.

But a single figure upon the deck that did not seem mad with terror. A huge fellow he was who stood leaning against the capstan watching the wild antics of his fellows with a certain wondering expression of incredulity, the while a contemptuous smile curled his lips. As Barbara Harding chanced to look in his direction he also chanced to turn his eyes toward the wheelhouse. It was the mucker.

The girl was surprised that he, the greatest coward of them all, should be showing no signs of cowardice now—probably he was paralyzed with fright. The moment that the man saw the two who were in the wheelhouse and the work that they were doing he sprang quickly toward them. At his approach the girl shrank closer to Theriere.

What new outrage did the fellow contemplate? Now he was beside her. The habitual dark scowl blackened his expression. He laid a heavy hand on Barbara Harding's arm.

"Come out o' dat," he bellowed. "Dat's no kind o' job fer a broiler."

And before either she or Theriere could guess his intention the mucker had pushed Barbara aside and taken her place at the wheel.

"Good for you, Byrne!" cried Theriere, "I needed you badly."

"Why didn't yeh say so den?" growled the man.

With the aid of Byrne's herculean muscles and great weight the bow of the Halfmoon commenced to come slowly around so that presently she almost paralleled the cliffs again, but now she was much closer in than when Skipper Simms had deserted her to her fate—so close that Theriere had little hope of being able to carry out his plan of taking her opposite the opening and then turning and running her before the wind straight into the swirling waters of the inlet.

Now they were almost opposite the aperture and between the giant cliffs that rose on either side of the narrow entrance, a sight was revealed that filled their hearts with renewed hope and rejoicing, for a tiny cove was seen to lie beyond the fissure—a cove with a long, wide, sandy beach up which the waves broke at the entrance to the little haven, rolled with much diminished violence.

"Can you hold her alone for a second, Byrne?" asked Theriere. "We must make the turn in another moment and I've got to let out sail. The instant that you see me let her loose put your helm hard to starboard. She'll come around enough I imagine, and then hold her nose straight for that opening. It's one chance in a thousand; but it's the only one. Are you game?"

"You know it, cul"—go to "t," was Billy Byrne's laconic rejoinder.

As Theriere left the wheel Barbara Harding stepped to the mucker's side.

"Let me help you," she said. "We need every hand that we can get for the next few moments."

"Beat it," growled the man. "I don't want no skirts in my way."

With a flush, the girl drew back and then turning watched Theriere where he stood ready to cut loose the sail at the proper instant. The vessel was now opposite the cleft in the cliffs. Theriere had lashed a new sheet in position. Now he cut the old one. The sail swung around until caught in position by the stout line. The mucker threw the helm hard starboard. The nose of the brigantine swung quickly toward the rocks. The sail filled, and an instant later the ship was dashing to what seemed her inevitable doom.

Skipper Simms, seeing what Theriere had done after it was too late to prevent it, rushed madly across the deck toward his junior.

"You fool!" he shrieked. "You fool! What are you doing? Driving us straight for the rocks—murdering the whole lot of us!" and with that he sprang upon the Frenchman with maniacal fury, beating him to deck beneath him.

Barbara Harding saw the attack of the fear-demented man, but she was powerless to prevent it. The mucker saw it too, and grinned—he hoped that it would be a good fight; there was nothing that he enjoyed more. He was sorry that he could not take a hand in it, but the wheel demanded all his attention now, so that he was even forced to take his eyes from the combatants that he might rivet them upon the narrow entrance to the cove toward which the Halfmoon was now plowing her way at constantly increasing speed.

The other members of the ship's company, all unmindful of the battle that at another time would have commanded their undivided attention, stood with eyes glued upon the wild channel toward which the brigantine's nose was pointed. They saw how what Skipper Simms had failed to see—the little cove beyond, and the chance for safety that the bold stroke offered if it proved successful.

With steady muscles and giant sinews the mucker stood by the wheel—nursing the erratic wreck as no one might have supposed it was in him to do. Behind him Barbara Harding watched first Theriere and Simms, and then Byrne and the swirling waters toward which he was heading the ship.

Even the strain of the moment did not prevent her from wondering at the strange contradictions of the burly young ruffian who could at one moment show such traits of cowardliness and the next rise so coolly to the highest pinnacles of courage. As she watched him occasionally now she noted for the first time the lionine contour of his head, and she was surprised to note that his features were regular and fine, and then she recalled Billy Mallory and the cowardly kick that she had seen delivered in the face of the unconscious Theriere—with a little shudder of disgust she turned away from the man at the wheel.

Theriere by this time had managed to get on top of Skipper Simms, but that worthy still clung to him with the desperation of a drowning man. The Halfmoon was rising on a great wave that would bear her well into the maelstrom of the cove's entrance. The wind had increased to the proportions of a gale, so that the brigantine was fairly racing either to her doom or her salvation—who could tell which?

Halfway through the entrance the wave dropped the ship, and with a mighty crash that threw Barbara Harding to her feet the vessel struck full amidships upon a sunken reef. Like a thing of glass she broke in two with the terrific impact, and in another instant the waters about her were filled with screaming men.

Barbara Harding felt herself hurtled from the deck as though shot from a catapult. The swirling waters engulfed her. She knew that her end had come, only the most powerful of swimmers might hope to win through that lashing hell of waters to the beach beyond. For a girl to do it was too hopeless even to contemplate; but she recalled Theriere's words of so short a time ago: "There's no hope, I'm afraid; but by George, I intend to go down fighting," and with the recollection came a like resolve on her part—to go down fighting, and so she struck out against the powerful waters that swirled her hither and thither, now perilously close to the rocky sides of the entrance, and now into the mad chaos of the channel's center. Would to heaven that Theriere were near her, she thought, for if any could save her it would be he.

Since she had come to believe in the man's friendship and sincerity Barbara Harding had felt renewed hope of eventual salvation, and with the hope had come a desire to live, which had almost been lacking for the greater part of her detention upon the Halfmoon.

Bravely she battled now against the awful odds of the mighty Pacific, but soon she felt her strength waning. More and more ineffective became her puny efforts, and at last she ceased almost entirely the futile struggle.

And then she felt a strong hand grasp her arm, and with a sudden surge she was swung over a broad shoulder.

Quickly she grasped the rough shirt that covered the back of her would-be rescuer, and then commenced a battle with the waves that for many minutes, that seemed hours to the frightened girl, hung in the balance; but at last the swimmer beneath her forged steadily and persistently toward the sandy beach to flounder out at last with an unconscious burden in his mighty arms.

As the man staggered up out of reach of the water Barbara Harding opened her eyes to look in astonishment into the face of the mucker.

CHAPTER IX.

Oda Yorimoto

Only four men of the Halfmoon's crew were lost in the wreck of the vessel. All had been crowded in the bow when the ship broke in two, and being far-flung by the forward part of the brigantine as it lunged toward the cove on the wave following the one which had dropped the craft upon the reef, with the exception of the four who had perished beneath the wreckage they had been able to swim safely to the beach.

Larry Divine, who had sat weeping upon the deck of the doomed ship during the time that hope had been at its lowest, had recovered his poise. Skipper Simms, subdued for the moment, soon commenced to regain his bluster. He took Theriere to task for the loss of the Halfmoon.

"An' ever we make a civilized port," he shouted, "I'll prefer charges ag'in' you, you swab you; a-losin' of the finest bark as ever weathered a storm. Ef it hadn't o' been for you a-mutinyin' ag'in' me I'd a-brought her through in safety an' never lost a bloomin' soul."

"Stow it!" admonished Theriere at last; "your foolish bluster can't hide the bald fact that you deserted your post in time of danger. We're ashore now, remember, and there is no more ship for you to command, so were I you I'd be mighty careful how I talked to my betters."

"What's that!" screamed the skipper. "My betters! You frog-eatin' greaser you, I'll teach you. Here, some of you, clap this swab into irons. I'll learn him that I'm still captain of this here bunch."

Theriere laughed in the man's face; but Ward and a couple of hands who had been shown favoritism by the skipper and first mate closed menacingly toward the second officer.

The Frenchman took in the situation at a glance. They were more now, where they didn't think that they needed him further and the process of elimination had commenced. Well, it might as well come to a showdown now as later.

"Just a moment," said Theriere raising his hand "You're not going to take me alive, and I have no idea that you want to anyhow, and if you start anything in the killing line some of you are going to Davy Jones' locker along with me. The best thing for all concerned is to divide up this party now once and for all."

As he finished speaking he turned toward Billy Byrne.

"Are you and the others with me, or against me" he asked.

"I'm ag'in' Simms," replied the mucker non-committally.

Tony Sawyer, Red Sanders, Blanco, Wison and two others drew in behind Billy Byrne.

"We all's wid Billy," announced Blanco.

Evine and Barbara Harding stood a little apart. Both were alarmed at the sudden, hostile turn events had taken. Simms, Ward and Theriere were the only members of the party armed. Each wore a revolver strapped about his hips. All were still dripping from their recent plunge in the ocean.

The men stood behind Skipper Simms and Ward, but there were two revolvers upon that side of the argument. Suddenly Ward turned toward Divine.

Miss Marian Maer Is Honoree at Morning Country Club Bridge

Complimenting Miss Marian Maer, whose marriage to Alfred M. Miller June 21, will be an event of the summer, Mesdames Leslie Stringer and Charles Francis were hostesses at bridge Wednesday morning at the Golf club. Nine tables were arranged for the players, and the club living room was artistically decorated for the occasion in a profusion of nasturtium. Large baskets containing the fragrant blossoms occupying every nook and corner. Miss Lula Wood won the high score in the games, and Miss Ruth Nolen, the low. Both were given lovely madeira center pieces, which they in turn presented to the honoree.

The affair was also a linen shower for the bride-elect, who was the recipient of many beautiful gifts. The presentation was made in a quaint and original manner, two "real" gold dust twins, of the sure enough colored variety, being employed to bring in a sack of neatly folded linens, which were delivered to Miss Maer.

At the close of the games, a dainty salad plate was served on the individual card tables, and nut cups carrying out the nasturtium scheme of decorations, the blossoms also being used for the plate favors. Those enjoying this delightful hospitality included: Miss Maer, her mother, Mrs. O. E. Maer, Mrs. Newton Maer and Misses Annette Walsh, Mattie Ruth Corlett, Lillian Fain, Florence Sammons, Sibyl Kell, Agnes Reid, Thelma Kahn, Cecelia Adickes, Willie Mae Kell, Gretchen Avis, Sadie Adickes, Louise Friese, Ruth Nolen, Lula Wood, Nancy Jane Harlan, Vera Hale, Suda Willis, Katheryn and Lois Moore and Mesdames Jack Speegle, Jim Barnard, Wayne Hammon, Harold Hanes, William P. THE BEAUTY SPOT FOR TODAY

No. 11 of Series.

Artistic and beautiful is the home of the Nossett studio on Tenth street built in a quaint design with trailing vines of ivy and Dorothy Perkin's roses adding to the effectiveness of the general scheme. Flowers of the tropical variety, including pines, and many varieties of shrubbery are gracefully arranged in the background and as a dividing fence on the east. While in front the yucca flowers are in full bloom. The building and grounds occupy one of the most attractive corners on the street. Canna lillies are used effectively on the west side next to the house.

The beauty of this particular spot is not confined altogether to the out side, the long room where many Wichitans have posed for their likness in the past few years, is also a place of unusual attractiveness. A long living room, with numerous east windows, at one end, a comfy fireplace, with restful chairs of ratan surrounding it. In these windows, numerous canary birds sing and go in and out of their cages at their leisure. Some of them are really trained and would do credit to many seen on the stage in vaudeville performances. A victrola furnishes inspiration to the songsters.

The back yard of the home, while not so appealingly beautiful, is the rendezevous of many kinds of fowl, fine chickens, quail and other varieties, the hobby of the proprietor of the studio, Mr. John Nossett, who is a hunter and lover of the out of doors.

Tomorrow, R. O. Harvey's yard will be the subject of the "Beauty Spots."

TODAY'S POEM

Pan in the Orchard.

He carved a flute of elder green
And notched it well and true,
Then pursed his lips and puffed his cheeks
And merrily he blew.

For it was springtime holiday,
A sun-tanned boy was he,
With russet freckles on his face
And a patch upon his knee.

The apple boughs above him flung
Their tangled sprays on high,
With one dark, bristly blue-jay nest
Rough sketched against the sky.

He knew the secrets of the grass,
The burden of the hour,
He saw the fierce, bluff bumblebee
Touse many a clover flower.

Orphaned and poor as poor could be,
The years before him lay
Dark billows of an unknown sea,
No lighthouse on the way.

And yet, and yet his elder flute
Could bring him comfort true;
He pursed his lips and puffed his cheeks
And blew, and blew, and blew!
—Maurice Thompson in Indianapolis News.

REVERTING TO TYPE

A wise man was talking about women in industry the other day. He was speaking of the current protest against women taking mens' jobs. "But," said he, "in reality the men have taken the women's jobs, and the women are simply trying to get back some of the industrial life over which they once held full control."

Have you ever thought of that side of the question? When Chief Thunder-in-the-Face ruled the plains there was no industrial problem, for the simple reason that Squaw Tear-in-the-Eye did the whole job. Thunder-in-the-Face hunted, scalped and otherwise amused himself, but the women of the tribe manufactured everything from the wicklups to the Choctaw hootch.

We think of the squaw as a downtrodden savage lacking "woman's rights." At a matter of fact, she pretty nearly controlled the rights—as the dominant workman always will. She had a rough life, but rough lives were expected in those days. While she did live she made a thorough job of it, and her touch was on every part of the tribal existence.

Came civilization and the hunting trails and the war paths were closed. No longer could a brave obtain honor by the number of his scalps. But he had to obtain honor some way—so one by one the women's jobs fell into his hands and their profits were transferred to him. The industrial world became masculine.

Then man began to wall his world around with law and sentiment. Because he wanted his job all to himself, he said that it was unwomanly to toil. He established the harem standards—those standards which still prevail today. He decreed that woman's place was in the home, although he had taken from that home all the crafts which once made that home a vital part of the tribal life.

And now women are again clamoring for that vital part of the tribal life. They have awakened from their harem stupor and are declaring that they are as able to be both mothers and influential citizens as that long passed Squaw Tear-in-the-Eye.—Elsie Robinson in the Milwaukee Journal.

MAN FOUND DEAD.

By Associated Press.

DENISON, Texas, May 31.—Harry Brooks, 50, an employe of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railway, was found dead in the bathroom of his home here this morning. A revolver with an empty chamber was by his side. His wife heard a shot and rushing into the bathroom found Brooks dying.

Little Stories for Bedtime

MR. BLACKSNAKE DECIDES TO DINE.

Mr. Blacksnake, coiled on a flat stone of the old wall on the edge of the Old Orchard, had fully made up his mind to dine on young Woodpeckers. All about him were the little feathered people who live in the Old Orchard, all screaming at him and calling him bad names. He didn't mind this in the least. In the first place, he was used to it. In the second place, he knew perfectly that bad names never yet hurt any one. The truth is, he had coiled up there just to draw the birds around him. You see, he is so sharp that he knew that he would be able to tell by the way they acted when they saw him which ones had babies in their homes and which had not. And sure enough he could. He knew that the ones who appeared the most worried at the sight of him, who were the boldest and came the nearest, were the ones who had babies at home.

One of these was Goldie the Oriole. "His nest is way up high and out on the slender branches. It is too much work and too risky to climb way up there," thought Mr. Blacksnake.

Another was Chippy the Sparrow. "His nest is not very high and it is easy to get to, but his babies are so small that they are hardly worth while," thought Mr. Blacksnake.

A third was Drummer the Woodpecker. "His nest is in a hole in that nearest apple tree, because I saw him making it there. It isn't very high up. His babies are of good size, and there is sure to be enough of them for a good meal. Young woodpeckers are very good eating, so I believe I'll sample them right away," thought Mr. Blacksnake.

He lazily uncoiled and slipped off the stone wall. Then he glided swiftly through the grass, all the birds following and anxiously watching to see where he was going. All the time they made a terrible racket. Mr. Blacksnake paid not the least bit of attention to them. He made straight for the tree in which was the home of Drummer the Woodpecker. When Drummer saw this he became almost crazy. Twice he dashed almost in the face of Mr. Blacksnake. Mr. Blacksnake just chuckled to himself, for he knew now that there wasn't the least doubt about those babies. Mrs. Drummer, who remained at home, now came out and she was even braver than Drummer in trying to drive Mr. Blacksnake away. Once he struck at her and almost caught her.

But nothing that Drummer or Mrs. Drummer could do changed Mr. Blacksnake's intention. He kept right on and began to climb the tree. Now, some of Mr. Blacksnake's relatives—in fact, most of them—cannot climb, but he himself is a very good climber, and it was no work at all for him to get up to the round hole which was the doorway of Drummer's home. As he drew near he heard a sound that made his eyes sparkle. You see, the babies inside the hollow heard him, and, being young and quite innocent of the dangers of the Great World, they thought it was their mother or father bringing them something to eat, and so each began to call for the goody they thought was being brought to them.

When Mr. Blacksnake reached the doorway he coiled himself about a branch so as not to lose his balance and fall, and then he looked in at the doorway.

"One, two, three, four, five," counted Mr. Blacksnake, and smacked his lips.

"My, but I shall have a feast! I'm so glad I happened to think to come up to the Old Orchard."

NEXT STORY—MR. BLACKSNAKE WISHES HE HAD HURRIED.

CAN NOW WIRE MONEY TO BELGIAN POINTS

Resumption of the handling of money transfers between the United States and Belgium, eastbound, suspended during the war, has now been resumed, according to an announcement by Charles Pogenpohl, local manager. Westward service will also probably be resumed in the near future—that is transfers of money from Belgium to the United States and Canada, as arrangements to that end have been practically completed with the Belgian government. New York rates of exchange will govern the transactions.

FALLS TO DEATH

By Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Texas, May 31.—E. Rivas, laborer, fell 295 feet to his death down the inside of a smoke stack at the Fort Worth Power and Light company plant here this morning.

FASHIONS

Cotton, linen, or wool fabric may be used for this middy suit.

There is no style more practical and generally becoming for the small boy of two to four or five years than the middy or smock suit, and for the one shown in the sketch a heavy linen or cotton fabric, washable flannel or wool jersey cloth would be smart and serviceable. The yoke adds to the appearance of the middy, as does the touch of contrasting color in the stitching and in the banding of collar and cuffs.

Style variety is frequently given to the little smock or middy suits for small boys by having trousers in one color and upper garment in another. A twin boy and girl of about three recently seen were rather charmingly outfitted, the skirt of the girl's dress and the trousers of the boy's little suit being of white flannel, while each wore a middy of French blue flannel or knitted fabric stitched and otherwise trimmed in white.

An unusual number of checked gingham suits for small boys are shown this summer, some being in the practical middy or smock style, while equally good looking little suits are of the Oliver Twist type. The latter usually have collar and cuffs of white or plain color, the buttons that hold trousers and blouse together matching the trimming.

The really wise mother always makes two pairs of trousers with every suit turned out for the small boy. There are two good reasons for following this plan. In the first place, it gives the suit a double lease of life, and, in the second place, it saves laundry bills. The trousers usually become soiled much more quickly than the little top garment, and, no matter what the fabric, the plan is an excellent one.

As a matter of fact, men are more and more following this plan in ordering their own suits, and the majority of ready-to-wear suits for boys of school age have two pair of trousers.

Buffs Take Second Kayo From Spuds in as Many Days

STEVE MOKAN PUTS STOP TO BUFF ATTACK

Tanner's Homer In Ninth Adds to Great Game

Special to the Record News.

HOUSTON, Texas, May 31.—The Wichita Falls Spudders continued their winning today when they annexed the second game of the series 11 to 7.

The Buffs were largely responsible for the loss by the home team, making seven errors behind Barnes and Kelly. These miscues with 12 healthy wallops were too much and the second game went to the visitors.

Tanner Stars

Buddy Tanner was again a large factor in the Spudder win, his terrific hitting and flashing play on the field being of big league caliber. He walked in the second, tripled to deep center in the fifth, singled to left in the sixth and drove a long homer into the bleachers with one man on base in the ninth. His greatest play in the field was starting a fast double in the ninth which stopped a threatened rally by the Buffs.

Wheeler started on the firing line for the Spudders, but retired in favor of Steve Mokan in the fifth after four runs had been counted, following two in the first, knotting the count.

Mokan pitched a great game until the tenth when he passed Gross and two singles followed which chased one man across the pan. A fast play by Tanner got him out of the hole and retired the side when Denoville hit to third, where Tanner grabbed the ball, tagged Whiteman on the line and threw the hitter out at first.

Beck Still Hitting

Fred Beck continued his slashing stick work, lamming out two singles and a double out of five trips to the plate. The veteran first sacker has increased his hitting average more than 100 points since the Spudders took the road on their present trip which ends here tomorrow.

Bob Bescher and Homer Summa each connected for a brace of safeties which drove in five of the Spudder runs.

Tanner was the fielding star of the game, handling eight chances at third, five of which were assists.

For the Buffs, Gene Bailey led with the stick when he hammered out three hits.

Barnes, recruit hurler, was hit hard, but the seven errors charged against the home team figured prominently in the Spudder scoring.

The teams meet in the final game of the series tomorrow.

SHRIVER GETS GREAT START

It isn't very often that a recruit breaks into major league competition with the kind of performance which Harry Shriver, young Giant star, flashed in his recent first start in the National league. When Christy Mathewson got that honor in 1900 he looked so bad that Horace Fogel decided to make a first baseman of him. Happily, Horace did not succeed.

Rube Waddell's debut was far from promising. The hard hitting Orioles soaked him for 33 runs, while the Rube's team—Louisville—got only three. The next time the Orioles faced him the Rube was working for Connie Mack and McGraw and his bunch whipped him by 36 to 7. But the third time Waddell shut out the Orioles and fanned eleven of them.

Take the case of Eddie Plank. He came from Gettysburg college, and in his first start for the Athletics faced the Orioles. They landed on him for 35 runs.

No, it is not very often that a case like Shriver's is seen in the majors. Let's see how Harry goes on.

MIDDY OARSMEN ALWAYS WINNERS

When the athletic achievements of 1922 are chronicled the showing of the Annapolis rowing crew must not be overlooked. The middies rowed away from Harvard and Princeton in their meet on the Charles river recently.

In the last three years this crew has competed in 35 races and has won 33 of them. Beginning with the race against Penn on the Severn April 12, 1919, the middies have the following wins to their credit: Defeated Penn 6, Syracuse 6, Harvard 4, Princeton 4, Columbia 3, Union Boat Club 2, California 1, Massachusetts Tech 1, Cornell 1, Duluth Boat Club 1, Duluth Boat Club 2d 1, Norton Row Club 1, Belgian Olympic crew 1, French Olympic crew 1 and Vesper (Leander) 1. Total 33. Lost to Syracuse 1 and Princeton 1. Total 2.

TEXAS SPEED LAW IS HELD INVALED

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, May 31.—The court of criminal appeals held unconstitutional this morning the state law holding that a motor vehicle shall not exceed a rate of 18 miles per hour on public highway where territory contiguous thereto is closely built up.

The opinion, written by Miles O. Lattimore, was delivered in the case of ex parte L. L. Slaughter from Smith county, who had appealed from a conviction for violation of the law. It was held that the law is indefinite and vague. The question is raised: How can an automobile driver determine when the territory contiguous thereto is closely built up? Slaughter was ordered discharged.

NEW WONDER ATHLETE

"Tiny" Hartranft throwing the discus

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., May 30.—Just take a peek at this boy—he's the newest sensation on the American intercollegiate track.

He throws the shot—officially—50 feet 3-8 inch, almost up to Ralph Rose's world's record of 51 feet, made with the 16 pound shot in 1909.

He tosses the discus—officially—147 feet 2 3-4 inches, better than anything in the west and within a few feet of Jim Duncan's world heave of 156 feet 1 3-8 inches.

Recently he won the 100 yard dash in a Pacific coast meet after winning both the aforementioned events.

Will he break the shot and discus records before the end of the present season?

Western sports writers say he will take first places in those events in the I. C. A. A. A. A. at Cambridge, and will place in or win the 100 yard dash.

Hartranft (first name Glenn) is a moose in a track suit. His form and his build are likened to the Greek athlete of olden days. Fair head, broad shoulders, long arms, well formed hips, tapering limbs—that is Hartranft.

He is an athlete who does not need the intensive training a less gifted man requires. This is his first season in intercollegiate conference competition on the Pacific slope.

FAN—is an abbreviation of the word FANATIC.

Babe Ruth knows that now!

The fans—the very one who cheered him last year—have been "riding" him ragged this year. They have booed and jeered him almost from the first day—and on the Polo grounds, his home grounds, too.

They hooted him unto exasperation and taunted him until he clambered into the stands after his tormentors.

And all because he has failed to hit the ball over the fence every time up!

Strange creature—the Fan.

He is always with the winner. He gives advice when it is not wanted and lends encouragement when it is not needed—and when his idols fail he lets 'em lay!

For instance, Dempsey!

You notice how the crowds all surge about him and cheer?

Just wait until somebody hits him on the chin!

Just wait—and watch.

EXTENSION IN ELECTRA FIELD

1700 Foot Sand Is Broadened

Special to the Record News.

ELECTRA, Texas, May 31.—What appears to be a three-mile extension of the 1,700-foot sand was the development of Monday morning when two wells of the Bankers Oil company struck a sand at 1,650 feet, which is showing up good.

The sand, which was encountered in No. 5 of that company on Section 33, Waggoner, 3 miles south of Electra and three miles west of the Gladiolus field, is showing as a good oil sand.

A core of three feet was taken from the hole and it was saturated with oil and showed no salt water. The Bankers, No. 3 well, which is being drilled with a machine, has also encountered the sand, but was not tested out on account of about 50 feet of open hole and casing is being set.

This section is the one that furnished the sensational wells of the Petroleum Producers company early in the year. It will be remembered that the first sand developed by that company was onue at 480 feet, which started off producing around 100 barrels per day. More recent wells have come in at around 20 to 30 barrels per day.

The Bankers Petroleum company was one of the first to enter the field following the strike of the Petroleum Producers and the company soon had several producers from the 480-foot sand. It was decided to pass it up for once and try the deeper sands with the machine, while the rotary was started as a test for the 1900-foot sands. F. Johnson, local manager of the company, states that the sands will be tested out and if they show up as good as is indicated by the cores that they will both be completed.

If a deeper sand is developed it will mean much drilling in this territory, which is already noted as one of the best shallow districts in the entire field.

Two Months could not turn in Bed Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Finally Restored Health

Seattle, Washington.—"I had dragging pains first and could not stand on my feet, then I had chills and fever and such pains in my right side and a hard lump there. I could not turn myself in bed and could not sleep. I was this way for over two months, trying everything any one told me, until my sister brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly until all the hard pains had left me and I was able to be up and to do my work again. The hard lump left my side and I feel splendid in all ways. I know of many women it has helped."—Mrs. G. RICHARDSON, 4640 Orcas St., Seattle, Wash.

This is another case where Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought results after "trying everything any one told me" had failed.

If you are suffering from pain, nervousness and are always tired; if you are low spirited and good for nothing, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

OILS ADVANCE IN STOCK MART

Court Ruling Causes Weakness

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 31.—Tendencies in today's irregular stock market were largely governed by developments in the final hour of Monday's session and other happenings over yesterday's recess, including industrial mergers.

The decision of the United States supreme court declaring the Southern Pacific-Central Pacific combination invalid created further weakness in Southern Pacific shares, but Union Pacific, which may benefit by the decree, was strong.

Reading common developed weakness on the ruling of the court which gives that stock no priority over the preferred shares in the distribution of the company's subsidiary assets, while Reading first and second preferred scored extreme gains of 4 1-2 to 5 points respectively.

Tobacco products strengthened on news of its prospective alliance with United retail stores. The latter was freely sold at a decline of three points, in marked contrast to the strength of other leaders of the tobacco group, Sumatra excepted.

Oils continued to advance for the most part under lead of Mexican and Pan-American petroleums, general asphalt and several of the domestic group, but cancelled much of their gain later when Standard Oil of California, reacted.

Leaders among steels, equipments and motors were sluggish, giving place to speculative issues.

Sugars, metals and several of the food specialties were bought on higher prices quoted for raw and refined commodities. Individual issues of those descriptions included Coca Cola and Postum cereal, both at high records, but prices as a whole eased as money rates rose. Sales amounted to 1,235,000 shares.

Call loans opened at 4 per cent, advanced to 1-2 in the fourth hour and to five per cent in the final hour. The stiffening of rates was ascribed to shifting of funds resulting from June interests and dividend payments. Thirty day loans were made at 4 per cent, but longer dates were fractionally higher.

Apart from the firmness of British rates, leading foreign exchanges eased moderately from Monday's best quotations, brokers reporting renewed offerings of French and Italian bills. Among the neutral exchanges the Dutch rates cancelled most of its recent rise.

COTTON DROPS ON REACTION

Market Opens At Advance

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 31.—An early advance was followed by reactions in the cotton market today, owing to realizing or liquidation for over the approaching government report and a better western belt forecast than expected. October contracts sold off from $20.70 to $20.25 and closed at the lowest with the general market closing easy to a net decline of 22 to 34 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 7 to 27 points in response to higher Liverpool cables, bullish Manchester trade advices and reports of unsettled weather with light rains or showers in the south over the holiday. There was relatively good demand for July, which sold up to $21.17 and December advanced to $20.45 on the call, but there was a good deal of realizing at these figures and the market worked gradually lower during the balance of the day, reaching the greater part of day on covering by the trade or the transfer of hedges to later deliveries, but after selling about 50 to 53 points over October, lost 10 or 12 points of the premium in the last few minutes. So far nine private reports have appeared with the consand averaging 68.2.

Local brokers assert that a report in line with these figures from the government on Friday has been pretty well discounted and attributed the bull of today's selling to this view of the situation. Offerings became a little more active after the publication of the western belt forecast for clear weather in Oklahoma and east Texas, although the outlook was for more or less unsettled conditions elsewhere in the south. Private cables said the advance in Liverpool was due to an increased spot demand and a more active business in Manchester, but Liverpool was a moderate seller in the local market. Exports today 50,489, making 5,216,313 so far this season. Port receipts 22,554. United States port stocks 892,640.

LIVELY TRADE IN MAY WHEAT

Rush to Sell Is Market Feature

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 31.—Lively but unspectacular trading and price changes today accompanied the final settlement of contracts for May delivery of wheat. The chief struggle between opposing forces in the market appeared to have ended Monday when values smashed downward 10¼c a bushel as a result of liquidating sales on the part of the leaders on the bull-side.

Shorts covered freely today, but met with no great difficulty in obtaining all the wheat they needed. Prices closed irregular at 2¾c net decline to ¾c advance, with May 1.16 to 1.17 and July 1.18⅜ to 1.18½. Corn finished ⅜c to ⅝c up, oats varying from a shade decline to ⅛@1c gain, and provisions unchanged to 10c lower.

Much nervousness was apparent in the wheat pit at the opening of the business, and there was a brief period of rapid fluctuations in price. A general rush to sell took place during the first 10 minutes, owing largely to a sharp decline in Liverpool quotations. Receipts here, however, totalling only 165 carloads, were much smaller than had generally been looked for, and the early deliveries on May contracts, 810,000 bushels, were also of a good deal less volume than many traders had expected.

In the last few minutes of the day, sellers of wheat were in a decided majority, and the price of May delivery was falling somewhat swiftly. After the close, additional deliveries on May contracts took place, aggregating 1,447,000 and making the day's total 1,857,000 bushels. Milling and export demand for wheat gave signs of improvement tody, but owning to temporary congestion of elevator facilities here shippers appeared reluctant to make immediate engagements.

Wet cool weather helped to give firmness to the market for corn and oats.

Provisions were easy in line with hog values.

Rheumatism at 60

How glorious you will feel, mother, when your rheumatism is all gone. Let S. S. S. do it. It will build you up, too!

S. S. S. Thoroughly Rids the Body of Rheumatism Impurities.

Somebody's mother is suffering tonight! The scourge of rheumatism has wrecked her body; limping and suffering, bent forward, she sees but the common ground, but her aged heart still belongs to the stars! Does anybody care? S. S. S. is one of the greatest blood-purifiers known, and it helps build more blood cells. Its medicinal ingredients are purely vegetable. It never disarranges the stomach. It is, in fact, a splendid tonic, a blood maker, a blood enricher. It banishes rheumatism from joints, muscles and the entire body. It builds firm flesh. It is what somebody's mother needs tonight! Mother, if you can not go out to get a bottle of S. S. S. yourself, surely somebody in your family will. Somebody, get a bottle of S. S. S. now! Let somebody's mother begin to feel joyful again tonight. Maybe, maybe it's your mother! S. S. S. is sold at all drug stores, in two sizes. The larger size is the more economical.

Hustle Gets More Than Horseshoes Asserts Veteran Who Helped Blaze First Rail Trail West From Chicago

(By International News Service)

KERRVILLE, Texas, May 31.—Stretching out from Chicago to points further west is a vast system of parallel steel rails — the Illinois Central railroad lines—standing as a monument to the energetic achievements of John J. Smith, America's oldest railroad worker.

Riding range over the great expanse of his ranch near here, the centenarian, who is 102 years old, philosophized today as he told of his work along the right-of-way of the new great railroad.

"Hustle will get you more than horseshoes," said Smith. "Young men today must deliver the goods if they succeed. Merit wins. Fellows who try to four-flush their way through the world only come to regret it. Competition is keener today than it was when I was a boy, but modern implements take most of the hardships out of achievement."

Smith was born near Cairo, Ill., and helped build the first mile of the Illinois Central lines from that city to Chicago. The first charter of the road was granted by the state of New York in 1823, he asserts, four years after his birth. The charter provide for a line only fifteen miles in length, the centenarian declared.

"When the I. C. was built," he continued, "there were no scrapers or other machinery for building grades. The first lines of the road were built entirely with shovels and wheelbarrows. I'll tell the world that we worked in those days—but we had a real incentive. We were blazing the trail to a better civilization."

By use of a cane Smith is able to walk around his place. His health seems not to decline, despite his exceptional weight and agedness. The centenarian is six feet three inches tall and until two years ago weighed 236 pounds. Recently he has lost about ten pounds.

GIPSON VOICES PROGRESS CRY

Prepare to Harvest By Irrigation

Possibilities and prospects of a big new irrigation project in Wichita Falls obligations in connection with the project formed the subject of the address at the Lions club regular meeting Wednesday noon by H. H. Gipson, local attorney, being the speaker.

Mr. Gipson told of other irrigation projects with which he was personally familiar, and detailed some of the profits that communities building the projects had come to face.

He urged citizens of Wichita Falls to prepare now to make the irrigation project the success that is deserved to be, and that the city and section lose none of the immense benefits that would accrue to it by proper support.

Plans which may mean that the Lions club will lead in the movement to enroll recruits for the citizens training camps to be held at the local training center. Just what action will be taken, if any, in this connection definitely, is not known, but it is expected to be taken at next week's meeting. The citizen's army training camps were brought to the clubs attention by its president, Dr. L. D. Parnell, who gave an unqualified endorsement of the movement.

The musical entertainment of the day was supplied by Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Pittman, who gave several selections, both vocal and instrumental.

Scotland Wants Added Facilities To Fight Fires

Residents of Scotland addition want added fire facilities, they want at least one and preferably two of the automatic fire alarm boxes, and an additional fire plug. Their wants in this connection were made known to the city council Wednesday night when a petition calling attention to their lacks, signed by nearly a score of residents of the addition, was presented by W. L. Neal. As presented the nearest fire alarm box is across the river from the addition, on the east end of the Burnett street bridge.

There are only two telephones in the entire addition, it was pointed out, giving little chance in the turning in of a fire alarm. An additional water plug is also wanted at Ninth and Broadway. Members of the council expressed belief that the addition was fully entitled to what it asked, and promised relief as soon as funds were obtained by the city from the loan negotiations now in progress.

M'CLURE WANTS TO LIMIT GAS

Blames Big Fire On Fuel

An echo of the recent big fire in the downtown district when an explosion, declared to have been from gasoline in one of the establishments, bulged the walls of a neighboring building several inches, and menaced seriously the lives of the firemen fighting the blaze, came in the city council meeting Wednesday night.

Fire Chief McClure asked the council for an ordinance limiting the amount of gasoline which could be placed in a building.

The present ordinance amounts to practically none at all, he said, as it is broad enough to allow for 260 gallons stored in a business house. This is enough, under proper conditions, to wreck one end of town, he declared.

"I would a lot rather face dynamite in a burning building," he declared. "It is all right unless something drops on it—anything is liable to set gasoline off."

Chief McClure was instructed to outline to City Attorney Mann the type of ordinance required, the council expressing favor toward its passage.

BUILDING CODE WOULD SAVE

Key Rate Would Cut Rate

Adoption of a building code, finally determined upon by the council and likely of passage as soon as it can be drawn and properly considered, would save the insurance payers of the city thousands of dollars each year, Fire Chief McClure declared at the special session of the city council Wednesday night when he urged its passage quickly. A credit of five cents on the key rate would be obtained by its adoption and enforcement, he said. The key rate, now 22 cents, would be cut to 17 which is about the minimum.

It would also secure a better class of building—spread of last week's fire from one specific building to another was blamed by the chief on certain types of construction made possible through lack of a proper building code. Members of the council have all expressed their favor to such a move, as has Mayor Collier. The mayor will appoint a committee to draw up the code next Monday night, he said, desiring the time for the careful selection of the personnel of the committee.

KATY TO BUILD $150,000 BRICK

Franchise Granted For Freight House

Early construction of the $150,000 brick and concrete freight house projected by the Katy lines for the past two years is expected following the application for a change in the company's franchise permitting the necessary rearranging of their switch tracks.

The franchise asked was passed on its first meeting. W. M. McGregor, an official of several of the Katy lines in this section, presented the franchise.

The new house, which will be of brick, steel and concrete, will be located at the corner of Ninth and Ohio, will run back along Ohio nearly to Tenth. A covered platform will carry the structure back to Tenth. Fifty feet inside the new tracks will be laid, one running flush with the inside of the freight house. A concrete teamway will be laid beyond the team track. The next tracks will step at the curb line on Ninth. Permission for the elimination of sidewalk and curbs abutting the house on Ohio and Ninth to the alley is carried in the franchise. The company also agrees to pave Tenth street from Ohio to the alley as a consideration for the agreement.

A second story will be built on the Ninth street end of the house to house the local Katy offices, now located in leased quarters. The Katy for the present three years has made shift with warehouses located along Katy tracks for the handling of their freight—those and the antiquated station which has served for a freight house since the erection of the union passenger station a number of years ago.

Necessity for getting court approval and the routine incident to the receivership and delay in securing loans thereby have held back the building of the house for over two years.

Plumbers Must Abide By Laws

Plumbers will be required to live up strictly to the provisions of the city plumbing ordinance, particularly as to examination by a board to determine their fitness to practice their calling, the council ruled Wednesday night.

The matter was brought up by Commissioner Reed who reported that six local plumbers who have never passed the examination and who refuse to do so are plying their vocation, as is one who took the examination and failed to qualify.

Prosecutions under the state law which provides penalties ranging from $25 to $250 were ordered by the council in instances of this kind.
