Ask Us

Q—Are you taxed twice on lottery winnings? It seems that taxes are taken out when you win, and then you have to pay income tax later.

A—According to the IRS, the amount withheld is like the withholding taxes on your wages. Then when you file your return, the tax withheld is applied against the actual tax owed.

Details sketchy...

Long-sought trade agreement reached

TOKYO (AP) — Energizing the economic summit's normally staid and ritualistic opening day, the world's richest democracies unveiled a long-sought agreement on trade today. "We have recaptured the momentum," President Clinton declared.

Designed to prod stalled world trade negotiations, the pact was reached a mere hour before the 19th annual economic summit opened with a reception at the Akasaka palace in the heart of Tokyo. Details of the deal were sketchy.

Under cloudy skies, the leaders' limousines rolled through the gates of the white-marble palace. The rain-soaked gravel drive was flanked by the flags of the summit nations, green bonsai trees and carved lanterns.

Despite the trade breakthrough and the opening-day pomp, leaders acknowledged economic uneasiness at home and tensions among themselves.

"This will certainly not be a summit of quick fixes," said Dieter Vogel, a spokesman for Germany's Chancellor Helmut Kohl. "It will be a summit of sober reflection and it will be rather hard to find common ground for all of our decisions."

Summit partners — the United States, Britain, France, Germany, Canada, Italy and Japan — are battling stagnant economies and have found themselves hamstrung by crises like the war in Bosnia.

"It was a good mood," Clinton declared at the conclusion of the summit's opening session. "We had over three hours all alone in which we just talked about several things. It was very valuable."

Secretary of State Warren Christopher told reporters the summit's political communique, to be issued Thursday, "will be one of substance and significance."

Japan's Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa looked every inch the genial host, chatted with each of the arriving leaders before ushering them into the palace's Hall of Flowers and Birds.

What's in a number? How about $50 million

Your spouse's birthday is the 25th, yours is the 9th and the kids' are the 12th and 30th. That takes care of four numbers, but what about the other two? Your wedding day? Social Security numbers?

There are thousands of formulas people use to pick lotto numbers, and almost every method conceivable will be used tonight, when the Lotto Texas jackpot hits $50 million.

One other thing — a lot of players will forget until late in the evening, then make a mad dash to buy their tickets.

West-T-Go, which leads Scurry County in volume sales, is bracing for the rush.

"Tomorrow, it's going to be crazy around here," Manager Christi Benningfield said Tuesday afternoon. "They'll be out the door and around the building, standing in line."

Last week, the store sold $7,428 in lotto tickets, including $3,529 on Saturday, when the jackpot was $30 million.

There was no winner, hence the jump to $50 million today.

Anita Farmer, manager of the 24-hour Skinny's convenience store on Coliseum Drive, is well aware of what to expect.

"I wish people would start buying their lotto tickets the very next day," said Farmer. "But everybody waits until the last minute."

She said as many as 80 people have crowded into the convenience store on lotto nights when the prize is a large one.

Like most of the other nine businesses in Scurry County which sell Lotto Texas tickets, West-T-Go and Skinny's have to put on extra help Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Skinny's on Coliseum Drive sold $4,396 last week, including $2,520 on Saturday.

For tonight's lotto, Farmer expects about double that number.

She said lotto appeals to the average person, and contends a look at the winners proves it. "Mostly they are work-a-day people. People think 'well, if a dishwasher or cook can win it, so can I.'

"I can hardly wait for one of my customers to win it. I may faint with them," said Farmer.

She said quick-pick has helped speed the process. Instead of players picking their own numbers, they can slap down a dollar and a computer will do it for them.

"A lot of people used to just agonize over the numbers for hours. Now, a lot of those people just use the quick-pick," she said, pulling an example out of her purse.

She buys lotto tickets, too?

"Oh sure," she said.

And she buys quick-picks?

"Well," she said, grinning sheepishly as she reached back into her purse and pulled out a ticket with four picks on it, "I've got my special numbers, too.

"I figure $50 million, that's worth five tickets, don't you think?"

Unlike some stores, West-T-Go doesn't sell a lot of quick-picks, in ratio. "Not many people want it.

Grand jury hands down indictments

A Scurry County grand jury, meeting Tuesday in its July session, returned 21 indictments but arrests in several of the cases are still pending.

Three persons were indicted for possession of a controlled substance, four for felony driving while intoxicated, two for firearms possession, four for burglary, one for criminal mischief and one for escape.

Scurry County Sheriff Deputies said five of the indictments will not be revealed until arrests are made sometime early next week.

Arnold Velasco, whose last known address was 2018 26th St. was reindicted on two counts - one for criminal mischief and one for burglary of a building.

Velasco, 24, is charged with the April 23 setting of a fire to a storage building in Ira owned by Stanley Martin. Velasco is also charged with the April 23 burglary of a building owned by Ruby Smith.

Gary Don Baker, an inmate in Snyder's Price Daniel unit, was indicted for escape. Baker, 30, failed to return June 30 from a furlough to Garza County. Baker, serving a sentence for the 1991 conviction of burglary of a habitation, was apprehended in Post and returned to the local unit of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Indicted for delivery of a controlled substance, less than 28 grams of heroin, were Tommy Lynn Baker, 32; Betty Ann Ervin, 37; and Johnny Dean Ervin, 37. All three of their addresses were listed as 2104 26th St. Baker was indicted for a May 27 offense and the Ervins for offenses occurring on June 2.

Juan Louis Hernandez, 36, of 2110 Ave. N, was indicted for possession of a prohibited weapon, a .20-gauge shotgun with a barrel less than 18 inches. He was arrested on May 16.

Robert Vernon Prince of 104 35th St. was indicted for possession of a .25 caliber handgun with an altered, removed and obliterated serial number. Prince, 59, is charged with a June 21 offense.

Arthur Ramos Garcia was indicted on two counts, one burglary of a vehicle owned by Ella Mae Row on June 8 and burglary of a habitation owned by Myrtle Ora Wells on June 7. Garcia, 17, lives at 1904 Coleman.

Oscar Bonilla Martinez, 33, of 305 29th St. was indicted for forgery by passing. He is alleged to have passed a check in the amount of $225 written on the account of Joe Brown on May 25.

Four were indicted for DWI. These included Cruz Martinez Jr., 37, of Snyder for a May 26 offense; Dewey Allen Lee Jr., 33, of 510 Ave. T for a June 14 offense; Rudolfo Velasquez, 34, of Sweetwater for a June 12 offense; and Robert Don Geiger, 26, of Midland for a July 1 offense.

28 dead as Calvin pounds Mexico's Pacific coastline

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — Dangerous winds and pounding seas closed seaports and airports as Hurricane Calvin crept northward today along Mexico's Pacific coast. Storm-related accidents reportedly killed 28 people and flooding forced 14,000 from their homes.

Civil defense officials said three of the dead drowned off this famed resort as heavy rain and winds up to 110 mph lashed many of Mexico's most famous beach retreats.

At 8 a.m. EDT today, Calvin's center was about 80 miles southeast of Manzanillo, and the storm was heading toward that fishing port and resort town at about 12 mph, according to the National Hurricane Center at Coral Gables, Fla.

The center said the hurricane was expected to follow a northwest course about 40 miles off shore through tonight, but a "slight wobble" could bring it to shore. It said the storm had strengthened slightly in recent hours and could generate even higher winds in the next 24 hours. An additional 10 inches or more of rain was forecast for some coastal areas.

The storm center edged past Lazaro Cardenas and the Playa Azul resort area, where a Norwegian tanker carrying 4,000 tons of corrosive sulfuric acid has been beached for days. The navy said there was no immediate danger of leakage.

Rafael Zarco Rangel, director of Delfin y Cia, the shipping agency representing the tanker Betula, said Tuesday it was unlikely the ship would be damaged by the storm.

2 Somalis working for U.N. are killed

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Two Americans at a guard post were wounded in a drive-by attack, and two Somalis working for the United Nations were killed by gunmen early today, officials said.

At least three other Somalis who distributed a U.N. newsletter in this embattled seaside capital were believed shot and wounded before being taken away by gunmen in a street market about a mile from the U.N. headquarters.

The Somalis were on their way to the offices of Maanta — "Today" in the Somali language — a daily newsheet produced by United Nations forces that carries articles on U.N. activities and policies.

"These people clearly were targets for execution because they work for the United Nations," said U.N. spokesman Barrie Wakley.

He said gunmen stopped a car carrying the employees, dragged two people out and shot them to death, according to witnesses.

Witnesses said at least three others in the car were injured in a burst of shots before being driven off.

U.N. military spokesperson Sgt. Sara Snell said attackers riding in a jeep fired a rocket-propelled grenade at a U.S. guard post in southwestern Mogadishu late Tuesday.

Two Americans were hit by shrapnel and one admitted to hospital was in stable condition.

Snell declined to identify the American casualties.

Towie Park was again packed for the annual Fourth of July celebration, culminating with the chamber's fireworks display. Missing from the local observance this year were some 40 students and sponsors from Snyder Junior High.

They were in Washington, D.C. on Independence Day and their proximity to the seat of the nation's government took on special meaning for the group.

Seven of the students, all but two who will be 9th graders when Snyder High opens in August, were selected to be part of a televised Fourth of July ceremony in the nation's capital.

The students placed a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington's National Cemetery.

Snyder students taking part in the separate ceremonies were Latrisha Lee, Christy Garner, Ryan Landes, Clark Church, Troy Allen and 8th graders Joe Steakley and Mary Higby. Their sponsors include Betsy Griffin and Janeen Patterson.

Parents of the students are Police Chief and Mrs. Lannie Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Jerald Garner, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Landes, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Church, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Allen, Mr. and and Mrs. Jene Steakley and Mr. and Mrs. Mike Brown.

The group returns to Snyder early Friday.

The week before the holiday, SDN bookkeeper Jacalyn Lowrance accompanied her sister on a business trip to the nation's capital. Like most visitors, she said there was too much to see in such a short time.

They stayed in the Grand Hyatt, a former Donald Trump hotel, just a block or so from Ford's Theatre where President Lincoln was mortally wounded.

She found that Washington has long been the source of humor. Lincoln was debating Douglas in a race for U.S. Senate. Douglas was a better orator and was much more handsome than his opponent. At one point, Douglas accused Lincoln of being two-faced.

Lincoln was quick on his feet and replied, "If I had two faces, would I be wearing this one?"

Texas's first case of hantavirus nears CDCP confirmation

LUFKIN (AP) — Health officials have verified that an East Texas woman who died last month in a Lufkin hospital had the same disease that killed 11 people in the Southwest, health officials.

Preliminary lab results on Tuesday confirmed the presence of antibodies for hantavirus, a disease spread by contact with rodents and their droppings.

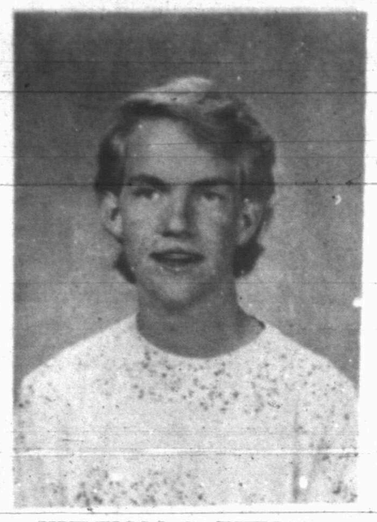

Final tests, being done at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, should be completed in about two weeks, said Beverly Ray, Texas Department of Health nurse epidemiologist.

"Right now all we know is it's a confirmed hantavirus case but there's no connection to the Four Corners cases," said John Bautch, Angelina County and Cities Health District administrator.

There have been nine other suspected cases in Texas, but none have been confirmed. The case in Zavalla, 22 miles southeast of Lufkin, would be the first for Texas, Ms. Ray said.

CDC figures show that 15 cases of hantavirus have been confirmed, mostly among Navajos and Hopis in the Four Corners area, which includes portions of Utah, Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado. Of those, 11 have died.

Officials are investigating 23 other suspected cases, 10 of which have resulted in death.

KURTIS McCATHERN

McCathern enters early admission Harvard program

Kurtis McCathern, a Snyder High School senior, is attending Harvard University this summer as part of the Secondary School Early Admission Program. Juniors who scored high on the PSAT test were invited to apply to enter Harvard a year early. Kurtis applied in the spring and was accepted into the eight week summer school session. Of the 5,800 students attending summer school at Harvard this year, about 800 are early admission students.

McCathern is enrolled in eight college hours including a government class, modern political philosophy, and a computer science class, programming in C. He is ranked eighth in his senior class at Snyder where he is pursuing an honors diploma.

Along with the classes the early admission students are given the opportunity to take historical and cultural tours and attend college fairs of major northeastern universities.

His parents are Glenn and Jan McCathern, and he has attended Snyder schools all of his life.

Emergency medical services often poorly equipped for kids

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a medical emergency, what is good treatment for an adult often can be bad or even fatal for a child. Sick and injured children need special equipment not always available in ambulances and hospital emergency rooms, a study said today.

The Institute of Medicine report said that in emergency medical care, children cannot be treated as if they were just small adults, but should be regarded as patients with unique needs far different than those of full-grown humans.

"Many people, including some in the medical profession don't understand that children are different from adults, both anatomically and emotionally, and require specialized emergency care," said Dr. Martin Eichelberger, a physician at the Children's National Medical Center in Washington and a member of a committee that wrote the report.

"Well-meaning emergency care designed for adults can actually result in more serious injury, or even death, for some children," Eichelberger said.

Ambulances, hospital emergency rooms and doctors offices often lack the special equipment sized for small bodies, the report said.

Treating children also requires special training because the small patients experience types of injuries seldom seen in adults and they often respond to trauma and to treatment in ways different from adults.

For instance, normal breathing and heartbeat rates are higher in children than in adults, while a youngster's blood pressure is lower.

"These differences in normal rates must be understood in order to distinguish normal and abnormal states in children," the report said.

Vital signs, such as respiration and blood pressure, that can be monitored to quickly determine the deterioration of an adult patient often will not provide the same warning of trouble in children.

"Impending shock from loss of blood or dehydration can be hard to detect in children because their generally healthier cardiovascular systems can maintain normal blood pressures far longer than adult systems can," said the report. As a result, an injured child can slip suddenly and without warning into a cardiac arrest from which there is no recovery, the report said.

Although some adult-sized medical devices will work on children, much of the equipment is too large or too powerful or shaped wrong for children.

Adult breathing tubes, which are slipped down the throat to supply emergency oxygen to the lungs, are too large for children. A child has a smaller airway and his or her larynx is at a different location in the throat.

Children have small veins and the adult-size needles used for administering emergency fluids often cannot be used safely, the report said. If the adult equipment is connected, there is a risk that it will deliver too much, too fast.

Breathing masks used to push oxygen into adult lungs can be too powerful for children and there is a risk that air could be forced into the chest cavity outside the lungs, a potentially-fatal condition called pneumothorax.

Equipment in four or five different sizes — to allow for all ages of children — should be available at every stage of the EMS systems, the report said. A well-euipped ambulance should have pediatric items ranging from small-sized stethoscopes to a stuffed toy for the comfort of a scared child.

Farrah Fawcett clarifies position

HOUSTON (AP) — Actress Farrah Fawcett says she has been mistakenly portrayed as a supporter of controversial Texas death row inmate Gary Graham, who's scheduled to die next month.

Several celebrities have rallied behind Graham, many organized by country singer Kenny Rogers. Fawcett said Rogers' wife contacted her several weeks ago but the actress said she never consented to the use of her name.

She said she wanted to set the record straight because she's seen her name repeatedly listed among those of Graham supporters.

"I do not know enough about the facts to be a supporter or to be against him," Ms. Fawcett told the Houston Chronicle in today's editions. "I don't feel one way or another because I am not familiar enough with all the facts."

Other Hollywood celebrities who have supported Graham include Danny Glover and Rogers. Graham, 29, is condemned to die Aug. 17 for the killing of an Arizona man during a 1981 robbery in Houston.

"I cannot in good conscience lend my name to something that I don't have all the information on," she said.

Your Birthday

Thursday, July 8, 1993

There's a possibility you could make a major change in both your political and philosophical attitude in the year ahead. These alterations will be good for you businesswise and make you a stronger person.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you attempt to impose your ideas and opinions on others today, you're likely to draw an unfriendly reaction. However, if you use teaching examples, what you say will be more palatable. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A joint endeavor could work out very well for you today, provided it's not a one sided affair. Each must be able to contribute that which the other lacks.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Involvements with groups or committees should work out rather well for you today. However, the result might not be as gratifying when you're dealing with persons on a one-to-one basis.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Although you might not relish it at the time, you're apt to perform exceptionally well when challenged or pressured today. This fact will be evident to others, as well as yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) To your credit you'll be able to handle moody and temperamental people in stride today, because, instead of dealing at their level, you'll know how to bring them up to yours.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) An associate who is in a position to do so might try to put obstructions on your path today, but someone with greater authority who is your ally will have them removed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be objective in evaluating ideas of associates today. If their thoughts are superior to yours, don't let your pride or ego compel you to reject them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You might be a bit fortunate in material ways today, but you're not likely to get something for nothing. What you receive you'll truly have to earn.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You may have to deal with someone today who takes a position diametrically opposed to yours. This could be a no-win situation, so instead of arguing, look for a compromise.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) There's a possibility you might not accomplish all you're capable of doing today owing to a depletion of your energy and drive by making your work more difficult than it is.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be careful how you conduct yourself today, or else you might come on too assertively with friends and create a number little hot spots where none should exist.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Forceful tactics that could prove successful for you today in the workaday world aren't apt to go over equally as well if you try to use them on family members.

Dear Abby

Good Manners Are History With Younger Generations

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1993 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the mother whose children neglected to send some kind of expression of thanks and love on Mother's Day: I am wondering if there is a trend for young adults living away from their parents and grandparents to accept what their parents and grandparents do for them as a duty which requires no recognition.

My adult children have always expressed appreciation of my gifts to them, but my grandchildren (ages 17 and 11) have never acknowledged my gifts with a note, a phone call, or even in person on those rare occasions that I see them. The gifts are mostly cash — in the amount which I consider appropriately related to my income.

I have never mentioned my hurt to my children. Should I? Where does the responsibility for this common courtesy rest? Their children have been old enough the past few years to initiate some response on their own.

Today, I received the first envelope addressed to me from my 17-year-old granddaughter. It's a high school graduation announcement! Now what?

HER GRANDFATHER
IN SCOTTSDALE

DEAR GRANDFATHER: Do not mention your hurt to your children. They may have taught their children better manners, but somehow it didn't take. (It happens.)

The next time you see your grandchildren, tell them that you do not need a written or verbal acknowledgment of your gifts — but they need to learn the importance of expressing their appreciation for having been remembered. If you can successfully drive that message home to them, you will have given them a gift more valuable (and lasting) than cash.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have an embarrassing problem. I have very sweaty palms. It is only when I am nervous, particularly in social situations. I do not sweat profusely from any other part, nor do I have an offensive body odor. This problem makes shaking hands with others in many situations a no-no. (I am a male.)

I have attempted to calm myself down, but that is not the problem. I am not an overly nervous person. Besides constantly wiping my hands on my pants, have you any other suggestions?

SWEATY PALMS

DEAR SWEATY PALMS: I rarely recommend a product, but so many readers have written to praise Drysol, I feel compelled to do so. It is manufactured by Person-Covey Inc. in Glendale, Calif. 91201, and a doctor's prescription is required to obtain it.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: The letter in your column about the kids who wet their pants in school brought back this memory:

My son, Steven, went to nursery school with Elizabeth Taylor's sons by Michael Wilding, when we all lived in Palm Springs during the winter. At the time, Elizabeth Taylor was married to Mike Todd. Mike took the boys to school and enjoyed sitting with them on one of those little chairs ... and he would tell them stories. Those children hung on every word and listened intently ... so when a puddle started to creep across the floor, Mike and the children got up and looked around for a "spilled orange juice," or whatever ... (Mike's idea). He graciously ignored my son's wet bottom!

The driver who brought my son home told me this story to explain why Steven was brought home in a skirt!

JANE ROBINSON,
CARMEL VALLEY, CALIF.

Divorced parents reunite to save son

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Divorced 17 years ago, Darlene Pinkerton and Paul Hartup reunited at a hospital, holding hands before going off into surgery. What brought them together was the hope of saving their dying son with parts of their own lungs.

"For the first time in a long time, even before the divorce, Darlene and I were able to hug one another, say, 'I love you, and we can do this,' " Hartup said.

Their 21-year-old son, Ty Hartup, was in guarded condition Tuesday at USC University Hospital. He has cystic fibrosis, an inherited disease that attacks the lungs and kills half its victims by age 30.

Without the June 29 transplant, "Ty would have died that night," said his surgeon, Dr. Vaughn A. Starnes. Now, he is off the respirator and breathing normally.

"He's doing great," Ty's father, a retired Navy man, said Tuesday. "Just to see him even when he's napping, to see him breathing in a relaxed fashion rather than struggling for every breath, it's a pleasure."

Hartup, 44, was released from the hospital Tuesday. Mrs. Pinkerton, 40, was in good condition and should be released soon.

"It was like a real healing time for us," Mrs. Pinkerton said of her former husband. "In spite of the differences we were able to put that aside for what was best for Ty."

The couple, from San Diego, divorced in 1976. Both have remarried. Ty remained with his mother, a real estate agent, and visited often with his father.

Last month, Ty's condition worsened and he was placed on a lung transplant waiting list. During the wait, Ty's parents, their spouses and other relatives attended support groups together.

With no donor lungs available in San Diego, Ty's physician, Dr. Ivan Harwood, consulted Starnes, who decided to perform the double lung lobar tranplant.

It was only the third such operation to use lobes from parent donors, said Starnes, who performed all three this year. The two others also were on cystic fibrosis patients.

On June 28, Ty was flown to USC University Hospital, and Ty's parents and their spouses all offered to donate parts of their lungs. At one point, Ty's father and his wife's second husband were to be the donors.

"I love my Dads," Ty wrote at the time.

But doctors decided that it would be best to use lobes from Ty's biological parents.

His parents were prepped for surgery and rolled on gurneys toward their separate operating rooms, their spouses at their sides.

Doctors removed a lobe from Hartup's right lung, and a lobe from Mrs. Pinkerton's left lung, and implanted them in Ty.

A pair of human lungs has five lobes. Two can serve in place of a whole set of lungs for a small adult. Most lung transplants involve whole organs from cadavers, but those are in short supply.

While a lung transplant is not a cure, doctors say new lungs do not ordinarily succumb again to cystic fibrosis. Starnes has said about 70 percent of his lung transplant patients live three to five years.

In a telephone interview Tuesday, Mrs. Pinkerton said she saw her son Thursday for the first time after surgery.

"He looked just wonderful," she said.

Chief resigns following DWI allegations

RICHMOND (AP) — Richmond Police Chief C.E. "Butch" Gore has resigned in the wake of allegations that he was given preferential treatment after a Fort Bend County deputy stopped him because he believed the chief was driving while intoxicated.

Mayor Hilmar Moore said Gore, who had been chief for nine years and had been employed by the department for 17 years, handed in a one-paragraph resignation letter Tuesday.

"I told him I wish this wasn't necessary, he felt like it was necessary, and wished him well, which I do," Moore said. "He just gave me (the letter) and said, 'I believe this is best.'"

Gore did not return phone calls from the Houston Chronicle.

Gore gave no reason for the resignation, but on June 19, a Fort Bend County deputy stopped Gore's weaving truck on U.S. 59 at Crabb River Road.

The chief, off-duty and driving his personal vehicle, was told to drive to a nearby bar and leave the truck, because the deputy thought he was too drunk to drive.

Appearances may be deceptive

By Phillip Alder

As W.S. Gilbert pointed out in "H.M.S. Pinafore," "Things are seldom what they seem, Skim milk masquerades as cream." The art of success in bridge is seeing through the masquerade and spotting the best line of play.

Today's deal occurred during The Sunday Times/Macallan Pairs Championship, held in London last January. Three declarers had to play in six clubs against a heart lead. How should they have tried to make their slam?

As you can see, declarer cannot lead a trump immediately as the defenders will cash a heart trick. South must discard his heart loser from one hand or the other before playing a trump.

There are two chances to attain the heart discard: take a successful diamond finesse or play on spades. Superficially, the diamond finesse is more attractive. A finesse is a 50-percent proposition, whereas a 3-3 spade break will happen only just over one-third of the time.

However, as the three declarers realized, they had extra strings to their bow by playing on spades. Maybe a defender with two low spades would have a singleton club ace. Or, if West ruffed the third spade low, declarer could overruff and then try the diamond finesse.

So, Enri Leufkens from the Netherlands, Henry Mansell from South Africa and P.O. Sundelin from Sweden played spades from the top and made their contract.

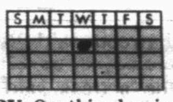

Avoid relying on superficial analysis. Always look below the surface for that vital extra chance.

Wife and son accused in former cop's death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thomas Warren Hooker spent the last 11 years with the mistaken belief that his life had inspired a TV series. Now his death has turned into the kind of sensational saga from which ripped-from-the-headlines TV movies are made.

Hooker's third wife and his adopted son were lovers and plotted to kill the 58-year-old, ailing former cop by starting a fire at the family home, investigators say.

Joy Hooker, 49, and David Hooker, 31, are jailed on charges of murder and arson. They could face the death penalty if convicted of murder.

Media reports after Hooker's death — based on information from the family — credited him as being the prototype for "T.J. Hooker," a police drama that ran on network television for five years, beginning in 1982.

The show's executive producer, Aaron Spelling, denies any connection. "It's the strangest thing I've ever heard," Spelling said. "The show wasn't built around anybody."

Hooker's real life did contain similarities to those of the television sergeant portrayed by William Shatner. Both were disappointed by a failed marriage and the death of a partner. Both were detectives who returned to uniformed duty.

"My father wasn't the kind of man to brag," said Hooker's 27-year-old daughter, DeeAnne Eldridge. "He would say that they took his information and didn't give him credit — but 'Oh, well, what are you going to do?' "

Hooker joined the Los Angeles Police Department in 1960, and was awarded its medal of honor the following year for rescuing the residents of a burning building.

He retired in 1980, his health beginning to fail because of diabetes.

He married Joy in 1983, and she became his caretaker. In recent years, he had several toes amputated, his vision deteriorated and he had to undergo kidney dialysis.

Last September, David Hooker returned home after spending 11 years in prison for armed bank robbery and making threats against then-President Reagan.

Eldridge said she watched in disbelief as her brother and stepmother began dating.

"We definitely knew things were going on," Eldridge said. "My dad knew it. He would say to me, 'I know they're just waiting for me to die. They're just waiting for the insurance money. I know they don't want me here.' "

After David's homecoming, he and Joy were "running all over spending money," Eldridge said. "A full house payment hadn't been made in 12 months," and they were facing foreclosure."

Investigators say Mrs. Hooker and her stepson used fireplace embers to ignite a love seat on April 19. They fled through a back window. Hooker was found slumped in the doorway of his bedroom, dead from smoke inhalation.

Memorial tourney planned at SCC

Snyder Country Club's Annual Golfer's Memorial Tournament will be played Saturday and Sunday.

Saturday's round of the 36-hole two-man event will be played in three different formats, six holes of alternate shot, six holes of scramble and six holes of low ball with no handicap.

Sunday's final round will be played in a low ball format, less 1/4 the total handicap of both players.

Tee-off times will be 8:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Cost for the tournament is $150 per team, including heavy snacks Friday night and Saturday's buffet dinner.

There will be a long drive contest for cash Friday at 6 p.m. and a putting contest Saturday with a grand prize of a 20-inch color TV.

For more information, contact club professional Rick Mammolite at 573-7101.

Boys Club gym to be open nights

Snyder Boys Club will be open from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. Monday through Friday through the rest of the summer for boys Little Dribblers basketball players ages 13 and 14.

Kenny Wayne Thompson, Larry Braziel and Israel Hinojos will supervise play at the club.

For more information, contact Thompson at the Boys Club at 573-3344.

Jordan attends baseball camp

CHANDLER, Okla. — Snyder's Patrick Jordan just completed a week of intensive baseball training at Bo Belcher's Chandler Baseball Camp.

Jordan, 14, was coached by former Tulsa Driller Jamie Doughty in the prep group.

He was one of over 130 players, representing 11 states.

Byrd accepts position with CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — Six months ago, Dennis Byrd literally took the first step in his recovery from a broken neck. Now, he's taken the first step toward a new career.

CBS Sports announced Tuesday it had signed Byrd as a football analyst for six games this season.

Byrd's football career with the New York Jets ended abruptly last Nov. 29 after a scary collision with a teammate in a game against Kansas City. Initially paralyzed from the neck down, he took his first, halting steps on crutches in January.

"I think there is hope that this will be the start of a whole new adventure for him," CBS Sports senior vice president Rick Gentile said. "I sense that he is very, very excited about it, as are we."

Bledsoe signs deal with Patriots

BOSTON (AP) — Former Washington State quarterback Drew Bledsoe, the top pick in the NFL draft, signed a six-year contract with the New England Patriots for $14.88 million.

Bledsoe reportedly received a $4.5 million signing bonus and has the right to renegotiate the last three years if he starts 10 games in the third season, participates in 55 percent of the plays in 10 games that year or gets a certain amount of total playing time in the first three years.

Snyder cruises past S-K, 21-1

Johnny Pena tosses no-hitter in second-round victory

Snyder continued its rampage through the field of the Area II Little League All-Stars Baseball Tournament Tuesday, ripping Stonewall-Kent, 21-1, behind a no-hitter from Johnny Pena.

Pena fanned 13 and walked four in five innings.

In Tuesday's early game, Hamlin eliminated Rotan, 14-10.

The tournament, being played at Logan Field in Towle Park, takes a break today, then resumes Thursday when Hamlin battles Stonewall-Kent in an elimination matchup at 6 p.m., followed by the 8 p.m. semifinal tilt pitting Snyder against Colorado City.

Pena got plenty of offensive support Tuesday as his Snyder teammates slammed 15 hits.

The fireworks started early as Snyder's No. 2 hitter Eric Lang slammed a two-run homer, bringing in Sam Bedell, who had doubled to lead off the game.

In all, the locals scored six runs and sent 10 men to the plate in the opening frame.

Other offensive leaders included Trevor Thompson, who hammered a pair of doubles, Eric Gard, who singled twice, and Josh Ward, Weley Wilson and Pena, who each lifted a hit.

Stonewall-Kent committed nine errors.

Hamlin stayed alive in the double-climination tournament with Tuesday's win over Rotan.

Winning pitcher Patrick Smith tossed the last three innings and gave up just three hits.

Rotan's Adam Garza lasted five innings, allowing 10 hits, including a 3-run homer by Hamlin's Mark Shoemaker in the fourth inning.

Rotan catcher Baldemor Frausto also blasted a round-tripper, a grand slam in the second inning that helped Rotan tie the score at 6-6.

Hamlin broke the tie in the top of the third with a pair of runs, before Rotan drove in three to take a 9-8 advantage.

Hamlin's offense added six more in the last two innings, while Smith limited Rotan to a single run in the bottom of the fifth.

The tourney is scheduled to wind up with the championship game Saturday at 7 p.m.

Palmer accounts for six RBI as Rangers blast Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP)— Dean Palmer was hit by a pitch and considered it a compliment.

"Nobody likes getting hit but it comes with the territory," he said. "If you hit a few home runs, they're going to pitch inside to you."

Palmer drove in six runs Tuesday with his 19th home run and a double in leading the Texas Rangers past Milwaukee 11-1 for their fourth consecutive victory.

He leads the American League in strikeouts but Texas manager Kevin Kennedy says that statistic is offset by Palmer's run production.

"He's had a big first half for us. I don't care what anybody says," Kennedy said. "That's a lot of runs and a lot of runs scored.

"He's worked very hard to get where he is. I still feel he's very capable of getting even better."

Palmer's three-run homer capped a four-run first inning against Milwaukee starter Bill Wegman. He added a bases-loaded double during a five-run sixth inning.

"I'm not trying to do too much," said Palmer, who has 57 RBIs and 82 strikeouts. "It's nothing mechanical. It's more a thought process of going up there and being patient and waiting for a good pitch."

In his last six games, Palmer had three home runs and 12 RBIs, rebounding from a 42-game stretch in which he hit .217.

Palmer was hit by a pitch from reliever Mike Fetters in the eighth inning. He dismissed it by saying it was in keeping with the nostalgia spirit of the turn-back-the-clock night, in which both teams wore old-fashioned uniforms.

"If you've got a team swinging the bat well, things like that happen," Palmer said. "It's been like that for years, since they've been wearing these (uniforms)."

"You just don't like it when (pitches) come around your head."

Darryl Hamilton's RBI single was the Brewers' only run off Charlie Liebrandt (8-4).

Leibrandt lasted just two innings in his last start at Detroit. He allowed six hits Tuesday, striking out six and walking one in seven innings.

"I thought I pitched a lot better tonight," he said. "I was a lot more aggressive and probably a little better fastball than I've had in the previous few games. I was throwing strikes and I haven't been throwing strikes."

Texas has won nine of its last 11 games and, going into today's game against Milwaukee, was 5-1 to start its current 11-game road trip.

Palmer's homer off Wegman (4-14) helped stake Liebrandt to a 4-0 lead. Dave Hulse singled to open, stole second and scored on Franco's single.

Juan Gonzalez singled Franco to third and Palmer followed with a drive over the left-field wall.

Wegman, 0-7 with a 6.63 earned-run average in his last seven starts, was rocked for five runs on nine hits in two innings.

"I didn't feel any pain," said Wegman, who missed his previous start with tightness in his forearm. "I don't know what it is. I just didn't feel right. It was just ugly."

Ballard guides Pirates past Astros to break four-game losing streak

HOUSTON (AP) — Jeff Ballard was the mystery man on the mound for the Pittsburgh Pirates because even he didn't know what to expect.

What he delivered was as strong a pitching performance as Pittsburgh could have asked for as he led the Pirates to a 10-3 victory over the Houston Astros.

The victory broke a four-game losing streak for the slumping Pirates. It also was only their third victory in the last 19 road games.

Ballard was called up from Triple A Buffalo Monday. He had spent all season in the minors after failing in a shot with the Oakland A's in preseason. The former Baltimore Orioles ace (he was 18-8 in 1989) signed a minor league contract with the Pirates on April 27 and was 6-1 with the Bisons.

He was brought up as a reliever for the Pirates, but when starter Stephen Cooke came up with a stomach virus, Ballard was thrown into the lurch. The Pirates, who had lost seven of their last eight games, had to be a little concerned.

"We really didn't know what to expect of him," third baseman Jeff King said. "And then he went out there in the first inning and kind of got roughed up."

Ballard, who was appearing in the first National League game of his career, gave up singles to the first two hitters, Craig Biggio and Andujar Cedeno. Then after a ground out, Ken Caminiti's single drove both runners in. Suddenly, Ballard was looking at a 2-0 deficit.

"I can't tell you what I was thinking," he said. "You couldn't print it. I realized the (slumping) situation the team was in coming in, and then I give up two runs right off the bat. It didn't look good.

"I was pretty nervous. I could tell it during the day when I had a lot of energy. I thought that was good, but I didn't know what to expect. In the beginning, I was just numb and they started hitting balls around."

Ballard had another rough inning in the second, when the Astros scored a run on Steve Finley's single, Pete Harnisch's sacrifice bunt and Biggio's run-scoring double. Then with two on and only one out, King started a 5-4-3 double play that got Ballard out of the jam.

"That double play was really big," Ballard said. "After I got it, I started relaxing. I had been throwing the ball up in the strike zone. But after the double play, all of a sudden, the ball started coming down where I wanted it."

"He really did a good job," Pirates Manager Jim Leyland said. "He started out a little slow. But he pitched pretty good after that. I was impressed.

"We really didn't know what to expect out of him. And the first inning, I was a little concerned. But he did everything we needed and more. And we needed it."

"It entered my mind right before the ball came to me that we needed a double play," King said. "I was hoping it would come to my right or my left so I could get one started.

Harnisch, 7-6, was rocked for seven runs on eight hits and three walks in only five innings. But there was a contributing factor to his worst outing this season.

"He wasn't sharp," Astros Manager Art Howe said. "But he had a little knot in his back that had some affect on him. I went out in the second and he said it was all right. He was getting the ball up there, so I left him in."

"The back of my rib cage hurt when I would breathe," Harnisch said. It happened in the first inning. It's a muscle pull or strain. I wasn't thinking it was that much of a problem, but I felt it on every pitch."

(3) CLIMBING THE CORPORATE LADDER BREAKING THRU THE GLASS CEILING
If your talents are overlooked or you feel stalled by artificial barriers, there are options! Successful excutives have the answers.

(4) FINANCIAL INDEPENDENCE THRU THE 900# BUSINESS
How to get involved and succeed in the fastest growing multi-billion dollar industry.

(5) CRIME
It's not even safe to travel in the U.S. anymore, maybe not even in your own hometown! The only protection you have is knowing how not to be a victim.

(6) HANDLING AND STORAGE OF TOXIC MATERIALS.
Radiation leakage, chemical seepage into groundwater and misuse of landfills are hazards that effect us all. Be informed!

(7) JOBS FOR THE 90'S
The job market and the skills required are changing dramatically. Will you be employable five years from now?

(8) PROTECT YOURSELF FROM CLINTON'S TAX CHANGES

Stylist will be paid for every touch

TOKYO (AP) — Eschewing Christophe and his $200 Hollywood cut, Hillary Rodham Clinton invited a Washington stylist to the economic summit to coif her high-profile hair at a low-brow rate: $17, a spokesman said, "every time he touches her hair."

The early reviews were good. Mariko Hayashi, wife of the Japanese finance minister, said of Mrs. Clinton today: "She looks really cute. Before, she looked a little like a bookworm. She looks so much better."

The stylist is Sylvain Melloul, owner of a small chain of salons called Visage Express.

Melloul's fee is not as hair-raising as the standard rates of Frederic Fekkai ($275) and Christophe ($200), the celebrity stylists whose work on the first lady and President Clinton confounded the president's middle-class image.

Neel Lattimore, spokeswoman for the first lady, said Mrs. Clinton was not trying to make a statement with the selection of Melloul.

"We've been using Sylvain for a while. We just didn't talk about it," he said today.

The stylist plans to pluck and preen between each of Mrs. Clinton's various events and, "He gets $17 every time he touches her hair, not just when he cuts it," Lattimore said.

In keeping with the White House tradition of bringing a personal hairdresser for the first lady, Melloul flew to Japan with the Clintons aboard Air Force One. The president and his wife are paying Melloul's expenses, although the stylist is staying at the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo as the ambassador's guest.

"The Clintons are paying him to be there," he said

Even with the reasonable fee, Melloul maintains an air of class.

Police note two arrests

Snyder police made two arrests and responded to several domestic disputes during the past 24-hour period, which ended early today.

Officers arrested 17-year-old Arthur Ramos Garcia in the 1900 block of Coleman at 9:35 p.m. Tuesday on warrants for burglary of a vehicle and burglary of a habitation. Garcia had been indicted by a Scurry County grand jury earlier in the day.

At 11:40 p.m., Snyder police assisted sheriff's deputies in locating some subjects who had been seen acting in a suspicious manner near the Ira Cemetery. Officers located the subjects in the 900 block of 23rd Street. A male juvenile was taken to the police department for probation violation and later released to his mother.

At 3:52 a.m. today, officers arrested a 29-year-old male in the 1800 block of 25th Street for public intoxication and a warrant out of Fort Worth for theft.

At 12:01 a.m. today, Stella Castellan notified officers that someone had broken into her 1105 15th St. residence. A report for burglary of a residence was filed.

Police responded to complaints involving domestic disputes Tuesday at 12:35 p.m. in the 2700 block of Avenue J, at 10:52 p.m. at the police department and at 11:37 p.m. in the 1400 block of 22nd Street. No arrests were made. In each case, a report for assault/family violence was filed.

At 1:25 p.m. Tuesday, officers worked a two-vehicle accident in the 2300 block of Avenue R. Involved were a 1979 Ford pickup driven by Lee Carlton Horrace of Rt. 2 and a 1989 Acura driven by Michael Riggins of 417 32nd St.

Perot voters remain skeptical about Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ross Perot's supporters are ignoring entreaties from the major political parties, defying history to form a powerful, "radical middle" in American politics anchored by a deep alienation from government, according to a study released today.

The national survey of 1,200 Perot voters showed strong allegiance to Perot despite doubts about his own ability to serve as president and many policy differences within the Perot constituency.

More than loyalty to Perot, the research attributed this solidarity to a distinct reluctance of these independent-minded voters to align themselves with the Democratic or Republican parties.

The study was commissioned by the Democratic Leadership Council to help it map a strategy for Clinton to court Perot supporters.

"President Clinton today faces an urgent political imperative: creating a strategy to expand his base beyond the 43 percent plurality that elected him," DLC president Al From said. "Such a strategy is crucial to the president's ability to govern effectively in the short term and seize the rare opportunity to realign U.S. politics around a new Democratic governing majority."

The poll and a series of subsequent "focus group" discussions with Perot supporters in California, Ohio and Maine showed many shared Clinton's policy goals and were open to supporting him — if he delivered on deficit-reduction, welfare reform and other major promises.

But it also showed Perot supporters are skeptical that Clinton can produce, that they are full of doubts about his leadership abilities and experience and also deeply pessimistic that any president can tame Washington.

"They fully expect a corrupt, gridlocked system to keep any leader from succeeding and helping people," said Stanley Greenberg, who conducted the research for the DLC and who also works as Clinton's pollster.

Man arrested in California on suspicion of killing wife

ROWLETT, Texas (AP) — Dallas police today found a decomposed body which may be linked to the investigation of missing woman.

A 38-year-old man stopped in a Los Angeles suburb for driving a vehicle without license plates has been charged with murdering his wife. The Rowlett couple was reported missing last week.

Scott Behling was arrested Tuesday in Van Nuys, Calif., after officers found Carolyn Behling's lab coat covered in blood and shovels in the car's trunk, the woman's relatives said.

The couple was last seen June 28 when Scott Behling picked up his wife at work. Her wallet was found last Thursday more than 250 miles away from Rowlett in a trash can outside Sonora.

Police spokesman Jim Chandler said a partly decomposed body was found shortly before 3 a.m. today in southeast Dallas, not far from where the couple was last seen.

Sources told KRLD radio they strongly believe the body is that of Mrs. Behling.

"She's so lovely and she's so sweet — she's the backbone of this family," said Janie Sharber, Mrs. Behling's mother.

Mrs. Behling's family said the couple had a troubled marriage and that he often exhibited a bad temper.

The Behlings have two daughters, ages eight and six.

Q2E grounds

LONDON (AP) — The luxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2 was traveling too fast in water that was "significantly" shallower than shown on sea charts when it ran aground off Massachusetts last year, a British report said today.

The Marine Accidents Investigation Agency also said the liner's crew overestimated the height of the tide.

The New York-bound QE2 ran aground Aug. 7 on uncharted rocks in 35-foot-deep water about three miles from Cuttyhunk Island off southeastern Massachusetts. No injuries were reported.

Push on to immunize Texas children

AUSTIN (AP) — Parents can get information about protecting their children with free or reduced-cost vaccinations by calling a toll-free number with a catchy tag: 1-800-4-BABY LOVE.

"We want every Texas parent to know that now is the time to get vaccinations for their kids, and that no child in this state needs to go without because their family cannot afford it," Gov. Ann Richards said in touting the number.

She and state Health Commissioner David Smith visited the People's Community Clinic in Austin Tuesday to promote July as Immunization Awareness Month.

"Immunization for preventable childhood diseases — like measles and mumps and whooping cough — saves children's lives," Richards said. "It saves needless suffering. It saves the taxpayers a lot of money."

Every dollar spent on vaccines saves $10 in the cost of treating serious complications from childhood diseases, she said.

Richards said that under a new state law, immunization services will be expanded this fall and the Texas Department of Health will get more funds for vaccines, people to give the shots, and education efforts.

The new law requires all Texas children, except those with a religious conflict or medical reason, to be immunized against contagious diseases.

Powerball's $100 million prize grips players in several states

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Despite floods, long lines and ads warning players not to get carried away, the ticket-buying frenzy churned on in 14 states as tonight's Powerball lottery jackpot reached $100 million.

"It's the most interest I've seen," said Sonny Cox, owner and manager of Tom's Supermarket in Chesapeake, W.Va. "Everybody's looking for the rainbow — for the pot of gold."

In Delaware, retailers churned out more than 1,400 tickets a minute in one hour Tuesday, setting a state record for sales per minute.

Along the flooded Mississippi River, some players hoped for a big win to offset losses caused by high water.

"They say 'I'm flooded and it would help me if I could win,'" said Terry Eickhoff, a cashier at Eagle Food Center in Davenport, Iowa.

This despite odds of some 55 million-to-1 to win the grand prize of $5 million a year for 20 years.

The rush of strike-it-rich dreamers had lottery officials in some states worried. Iowa, Idaho, Indiana and Minnesota took out TV and newspaper ads cautioning players to stay within their budgets.

"It's fun to dream about winning $100 million, but not at the expense of using money that should be for life's more important necessities," the Indiana Hoosier Lottery said in its ads.

But Steve Gates, 35, a Des Moines insurance salesman who bought five $1 tickets Tuesday, said he doubted the warning ads would have much impact. "If people are going to play, they're going to play no matter what," he said.

Powerball — one of the few lotteries to cross state lines — is played in Iowa, Delaware, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Washington, D.C. Together, the smallish states can muster jackpots to rival those of California or Florida.

Players pick five "white ball" numbers between 1 and 45, then a single red "powerball" number, which is drawn from a separate container of balls also numbered 1 through 45. The drawing is set for 10:59 p.m. EDT.

If no one picks the winning numbers tonight, the pot could grow to $120 million by Saturday's drawing.

That would top the nation's record jackpot: California's $118.8 million, split 10 ways in April 1991. Pennsylvania and Florida lotteries also have reached $100 million. The old Powerball record was $59 million, which two players shared in March.

Lotto

They'd rather pick their own numbers," said Benningfield.

She said people have different formulas.

"They have the key chain (a novelty item sold at most lotto outlets), birthdays, anniversaries. Some even use computers. And some draw numbers — put 50 numbers in a bag and draw out six of them. They've got all kinds of methods," she said.

Snyder hasn't had a six-number match, although several stores, including West-T-Go, have had five-number matches.

Snyder Lanes owner D.B. Lyle said he sells quick-picks, but most people like to work out their own formulas.

"Most people have their own numbers. They normally play them over and over. Maybe they ought to change them, because they aren't winning the big one," he laughed. "They use special events, birthdays, anniversaries and the like."

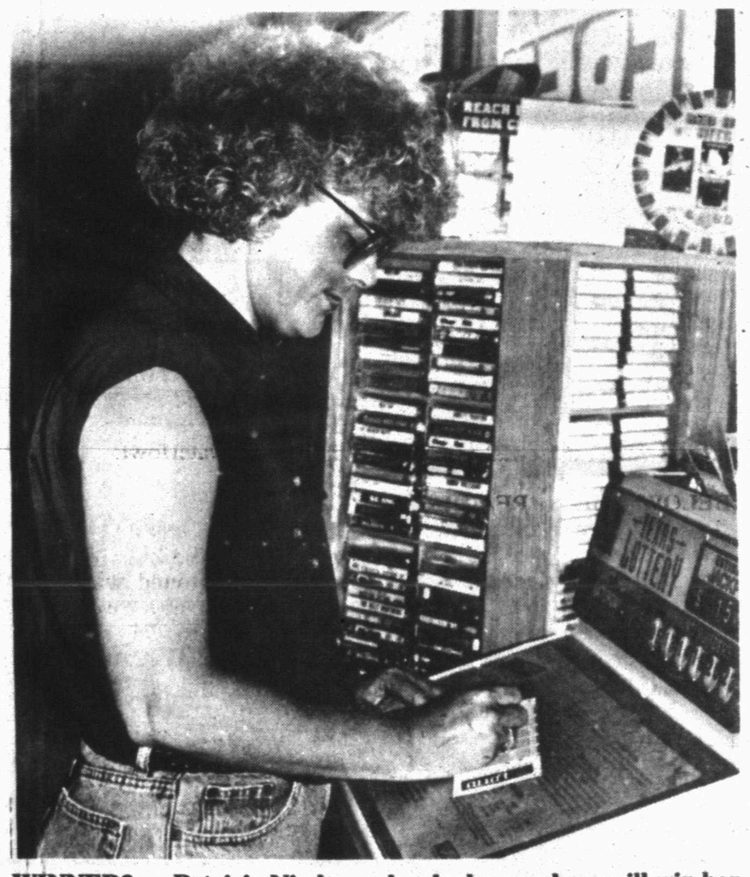

Lyle confesses to buying lotto tickets himself.

"Oh yeah," he says. "But I don't get involved like some people do."

It's not unusual for one person to plunk down $20 or more on lotto nights, according to local retailers. Almost all of the businesses have had customers who spent $100 at one throw. Most people who do buy lotto tickets spend from $2 to $5 at a time, however.

Lotto Texas claims there is a 1 in 16 million chance of winning tonight. The $48.6 million jackpot of May 1 was split by 14 winners.

Businesses in Scurry County which sell Lotto Texas are Allsup's in Snyder and Hermleigh, C&W One Stop, Circle In Grocery, Handi-Mart, Lawrence IGA, Skinny's on 37th Street, Skinny's on Coliseum Drive, Snyder Lanes, Town and Country and West-T-Go.

WINNER? — Patricia Nix hopes her lucky numbers will win her the $50 million lotto prize in tonight's drawing. There are 11 outlets in Scurry County that sell lotto tickets. (SDN Staff Photo)

Peace talks bring respite from violence

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Peace talks between rival black factions helped bring relative calm today to two black townships ravaged by violence.

Police said four blacks were killed overnight in Tokoza and Katlehong, adjacent black areas southeast of Johannesburg where four days of violence have left more than 70 dead. However, the township was quiet Wednesday morning, said police Lt. Janine Smith.

The African National Congress and the Inkatha Freedom Party, the two black groups locked in a bitter power struggle, held peace talks Tuesday mediated by independent negotiators.

Scores of houses and cars have been torched, and rocks and tree branches have been placed in the streets as barricades. Hundreds of residents have fled the area, some camping out in front of the Tokoza hospital.

"We have received a commitment for the fighting to stop," said Peter Harris, a human rights lawyer who helped mediate Tuesday's peace talks between the ANC and Inkatha. "Both parties have agreed that they will ... try to take control and calm the situation."

DISMISSALS: Herman Elkins, 304 34th; Donny Pavlovsky, Christopher Rose.

Census: 43 (Med.-6, Long-Term Care-36, OB-1).

Births

Paul and Belinda Fagin of Kingwood announce the birth of their son, Reid Archer Fagin, born July 3. He was welcomed home by his sister, Ellen.

Maternal grandparents are Maurice and Sammie Scott and paternal grandparents are John and Martha Fagin. Maternal great-grandmother is Jettie Wood of Sweetwater.

Two treated for injuries

Cogdell Memorial Hospital employees treated two motor vehicle accident victims Tuesday morning.

Twenty-one-year-old Nanette Sanchez of Hermleigh was transported to Cogdell by Snyder EMS at 10:30 a.m. She was treated and released.

Marilyn Lancaster, 35, of 3405 Kerrville, was brought to the emergency room by private vehicle at 11:40 a.m. She was also treated and released.

Information concerning the accidents was unavailable from DPS troopers.

Church builders due in Kansas for annual event

For the past 16 years, T.O. Upshaw has been traveling all over the country, helping to build churches for needy towns.

This morning, Upshaw and an estimated 20 other couples will travel to McPherson, Kan. to continue the tradition.

With nothing more than a concrete slab to begin with, work will start on Monday, July 12, and by Friday the 16th, a new Southern Baptist church will have been completed.

Donations are received from everywhere in order to pay for expenses. Both churches and individuals may contribute. Currently, $50,000 is the sum needed to begin construction.

Donations to next year's project are being accepted through the Church Builders in care of First Baptist Church.

Man charged with misdemeanor assault locally

A 38-year-old Snyder man was arrested early today at the Cooper Apartments in north Snyder following a family disturbance.

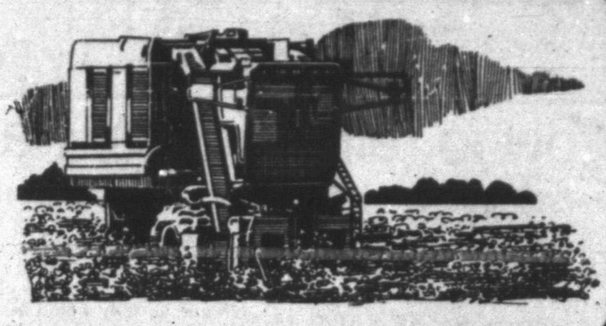

Deputies were called to the scene at 1:45 a.m. and found that a man had assaulted his wife. He was charged with Class B family violence, a misdemeanor.

Management clinic set in coliseum Thursday

Scurry and Mitchell County agricultural extension offices are sponsoring a Mid-Season Cotton Management Clinic in Room A of the county coliseum Thursday.

Registration begins at 8 a.m.

A variety of speakers from throughout the area will address producers. The clinic has been approved by the Texas Department of Agriculture for five continuing education units (CEUs) for private, non-commercial and commercial applicators.

At 8:30 a.m., local County Extension Agent Mike Morrow will speak on CEUs and record keeping for restricted-use pesticides.

Also on the agenda:

—At 8:50 a.m., County Entomologist Mark Logan will speak on the current insect situation.

—Dr. Jim Leser, Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) in Lubbock, will speak on bollworm and aphid management at 9 a.m.

—At 9:30, Dr. Tom Fuchs, TAEX in San Angelo, will speak on boll weevil and fleahopper management.

—At 10:30, Dr. Kater Hake, TAEX in Lubbock, will discuss management for earliness plant monitoring.

—Dr. Chip Lee, TAEX in Stephenville, will discuss seedling disease and nematodes at 11:15 a.m.

—Following Dr. Lee will be Beth Zipp with the USDA-Agricultural Marketing Service in Lamesa, who will speak on the new USDA classing system for trash content.

—A meal, sponsored by allied agricultural companies, will be held at noon.

—Lindy Patton, with the Rolling Plains Cotton Growers Association, will discuss a boll weevil eradication update at 12:30 p.m.

—At 1 o'clock, a turnrow meeting, plant mapping and scouting for insects will be held.

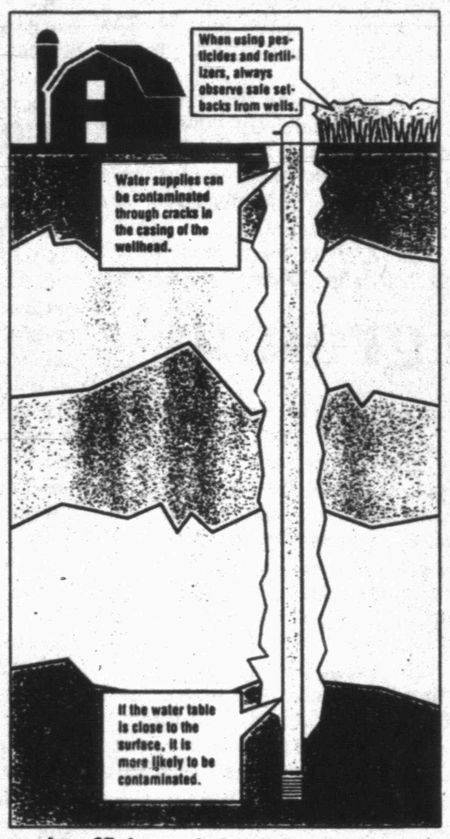

All information given herein is for educational purposes only. Education programs conducted by the ASCS, SCS and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

For rural Americans, wells are the most important source of water for their family, animals and crops. A turn of the tap brings water for drinking, cooking, livestock, crop irrigation and many other uses.

Because it's so valuable, it's critical that we all make every effort to keep our well water safe. To protect it from contamination you need to know as much as possible about the chemicals you use and the land you farm. Listed at the bottom are some factors that will determine just how careful you need to be.

Some combination of four factors determine whether an ag chemical is likely to reach ground water: properties of the chemical, properties of the soil, conditions of the site and chemical use management practices. Runoff into nearby surface water is also affected by these factors. For each site and combination of factors, the potential for water contamination can vary greatly.

Ag chemical containers often list on their labels warnings about their potential to leach to ground water. If you cannot find the information you need, the Extension Service, USDA's Soil Conservation Service, EPA or manufacturer's representatives can provide information on the leaching potential of different ag chemicals.

CHEMICALS ON HAND: If spilled on the soil, would your ag chemical products leach downward instead of binding to the soil? If spilled, would your products break down slowly in the soil?

SITE CHARACTERISTICS: Is the water table (ground water) near the surface of your farmland? Are there sinkholes or unsafe wells on your property? If spilled, would your products run off toward wells or surface water supplies?

SOIL PROPERTIES: Is your soil porous, allowing large quantities of water to move through it rapidly? Is soil organic matter insufficient to help bind spilled chemicals and slow their movement in the soil?

MANAGEMENT FACTORS: Do you store, mix or load chemicals near your wells? Do you fail to properly rinse ag chemical containers? Is your chemication or spraying equipment faulty or miscalibrated?

FARMING SMARTER

To protect your well water, carefully consider your choice of chemicals, cultivation practices and other management decisions for your crop, soil type, land condition, weather patterns and farming situation. These decisions are especially important if you farm in an environmentally sensitive area — one with highly vulnerable water supplies, wildlife or waterfowl.

BELOW THE SURFACE

If you could look beneath the surface of your farm, you'd likely find a complex system of rock, sand and gravel "containers" (acquifers) that provide water for drinking, irrigation and other uses. Roughly 97 percent of rural Americans depend on this underground water supply for drinking.

Pure water is impossible to find; nature and mankind have dissolved all kinds of impurities in our water. But, most people find it unacceptable to have even the tiniest traces of pesticides in their water, no matter how insignificant. Keep this in mind as you carry out your crop production activities.

Buying a home is the largest single investment that many people will ever make. In Texas, potential homebuyers should be aware of the high incidence of foundation problems in much of the state.

Areas of the state that are free of foundation problems have soils with high rock or sand content. Unfortunately, much of the state has clay soil, which expands with moisture gain and shrinks when it dries out.

Today, most builders in Texas have accepted a standard type of foundation called "slab-on-grade" foundation. A solid layer of concrete serves as a sub-floor and a support for the walls. The top of the slab usually is only a few inches above the grade of the soil but it has thick concrete grade beams around the perimeter and at strategic places throughout the foundation. These grade beams extend two feet or more below the surface of the slab. Typically, the main area of the slab is four to six inches thick with steel reinforcement used throughout. Grade beams are reinforced with steel bars. Where the soil is non-expansive, an adherence to minimal standards for concrete reinforcement and method of placement (pouring) may be adequate. However, in areas with expansive clay soil, foundations that are built to a minimal standard can result in problems for the homeower long after the builder has finished.

Most potential homeowners spend many hours planning room sizes, wall colors and kitchen cabinet styles. They depend upon the architect, engineer or builder to attend to the technical matters, such as the foundation. Yet, one of the most important decisions that prospective homeowners can make is about the foundation of their custom home.

The saying, "You generally get what you pay for," can certainly be applied to foundation systems.

When selecting a builder and consultants, keep in mind that some architects, engineers and builders are more knowledgeable and reputable than others. Although an architect, engineer or builder may be experienced, the QUALITY of the professional service must be evaluated. Ask these questions to find out more about the quality of their work:

—What specifications does the architect or engineer use for sandy soil and clay?

—What percentage of their custom designed houses has distressed elements resulting from foundation movements?

—Is any type of soil testing done before the foundation design is made?

—Who is the builder generally contracted by the architect or engineer?

—How reliable is the builder?

Some of the above questions may apply to the builder as well. Find out about the builder's past performance by checking the following information:

—Does the builder have a reputable foundation sub-contractor?

—Does the builder always use the lowest bidder even if there has been a record of poor performance?

—On foundation inspections required by a municipality, does the builder have a history of inspections that do not meet requirements the first time?

—Are foundations of homes which the builder constructed five years ago or longer perfoming well?

Before you build, get a soils report. the architect, engineer, soil scientist or builder may have substantial knowledge of the site and sub-soil conditions of the plot where the house is to be built. However, a soil or geotechnical investigation is recommended. A soils investigation specialist takes samples of the soil at the site to determine soil composition, compaction and moisture content at different levels.

For more details about proper construction of slab-on-grade foundations, ask your county extension agent for the publication "What Custom Homebuyers Should Know About Foundations" ($1.00 and "Homebuilder Recommendations for Slab-on-grade Foundations" $2.00.)

How to relieve chest wall syndrome

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been having chest pain for a year and a half which my doctor has diagnosed as chest wall syndrome. An EEG was normal, as was a thyroid blood test, chest X-ray, CT scan and MRI of my head. My doctor tells me I should learn to live with the discomfort. Is this appropriate treatment for my symptoms?

DEAR READER: Chest wall syndrome is, to an extent, a "wastebasket" diagnosis: Doctors use it when they can't find any other cause for chest pain. Your doctor seems to have delved appropriately into your symptom — and come up with the fact that you are healthy.

Try ibuprofen. I've found that it frequently relieves the pain of chest wall syndrome.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A recent exam included urinalysis. Since there was occult blood in my urine, I underwent an IVP. The result was sponge kidney. What is it?

DEAR READER: Sponge kidney is a congenital abnormality. During special X-rays, the kidneys show cystic structures, described as a "bouquet of carnations" appearance.

Sponge kidney may lead to kidney stones or infection, both of which are treated as they would be ordinarily, with diet or antibiotics, respectively. Thus, this condition is not a hazard to health and needs no treatment per se.

The small amount of bleeding that occurs into the urine is inconsequential. In fact, it's precisely this kind of abnormality that leads to the unexpected diagnosis of sponge kidney, during testing to rule out other, more serious renal disorders, such as tumors.

Occasionally, surgery may be required to remove the spongy portion of a kidney if a stone blocks this section, but such therapy is infrequent.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Kidney Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a black male who cross trains using weights and jogging. The pigmentation around my mouth decreases and the pigmentation on the side of my face increases simultaneously when I increase physical activity. This has been going on for about 13 years; however, it has elevated in intensity for the last two. It only takes weeks of great physical activity to appear, but months of inactivity to fade. Why?

DEAR READER: You have stumped me completely. I do not know the cause of your symptoms. Can anyone out there help me?

Woman wins right to sue J.C. Penney's pension plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mary Jane Forbush was shocked to learn that she would not receive a cent from the J.C. Penney Co. pension fund when a round of layoffs forced her retirement a decade ago.

Now Mrs. Forbush, 72, has won the right to sue the retailer's pension plan in federal court for herself and as many as 10,000 former or current employees who may have been similarly affected.

The small monthly benefit that Mrs. Forbush had expected in 1983 was cut to zero under a formula by which J.C. Penney calculated her pension by subtracting the amount it estimated she was eligible to get from Social Security.

"This has been shocking news as I had financially planned for these extra benefits," Mrs. Forbush wrote a Labor Department official eight months after her forced retirement.

In a decision last month, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered a federal judge in Dallas to allow the case to proceed as a class-action suit.

The decision could force the pension plan to pay out between $50 million and $100 million in past and future retirement benefits if the plaintiffs win their case, said Stephen Bruce, a Washington attorney familiar with the case.

The pension plan has as much as $500 million more than it needs to meet its obligations, he said.

Individual plaintiffs "are not going to get rich with a ruling in their favor," Bruce said. But thousands of former J.C. Penney employees like Mrs. Forbush could win a small boost in their monthly pension if the retirees win their case, he said.

There was no immediate comment from the company.

J.C. Penney's pension practices have been in the spotlight before.

Testimony before Congress by two former J.C. Penney employees helped spur passage of legislation in the 1980s limiting how much a company can reduce a retiree's pension by subtracting Social Security benefits.

One former J.C. Penney employee, Margery Boley, told lawmakers in 1985 that despite her 20 years of service, she would not receive any pension benefit because it was completely offset by Social Security, said Karen Ferguson, director of the non-profit Pension Rights Center.

In the 1986 tax bill, Congress prohibited employers from deducting more than half a retiree's private pension by deducting Social Security benefits.

The rule, however, only applies to years worked after 1988. For someone nearing retirement, most of their working years would be covered by the old rule.

At issue in Mrs. Forbush's case is whether the company could base its estimate of her Social Security benefit on the assumption that she worked continuously from age 21. This estimate method was used until 1989, Bruce said.

But like many of her former co-workers at J.C. Penney, Mrs. Forbush did not work continuously for 40 years. She raised a family and went to work at Penney's as a customer-service clerk after her children were grown.

Her lawsuit claims that the pension plan should have used a monthly Social Security payment that was $131 a month smaller than the figure used to calculate her benefit.

As a result, Mrs. Forbush could be entitled to a monthly benefit of nearly $30, Bruce said. The benefit would be retroactive to the day she retired, plus interest, he said.

Reached at her home in Paradise, Calif., Mrs. Forbush said she was pleased with the decision, adding that she knew a number of former Penney's employees who believe their retirement benefits were unfairly calculated.

Another J.C. Penney retiree who has sued over the same issue, Catherine Rhodes, of Monroeville, Pa., also was cheered by the court's decision.

"I hope we can follow this up and do some good for a lot of people," Mrs. Rhodes said.

In 1947, B.F. Goodrich Co. of Akron, Ohio, announced development of a tubeless tire.

President searches for common ground

By Barry Schweid
AP Diplomatic Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Absent the reliable Soviet bogeyman, President Clinton is banking on a desperate desire for economic growth to bind the world's wealthier democracies into a modern alliance.

In his initial overseas mission, Clinton is bidding to become the first president to integrate economics into American foreign policy. Others have talked about promoting growth and creating new jobs, but Clinton is heralding nothing less than "a new era."

Economics — not the Cold War, an energy crisis, terrorism or the Chernobyl nuclear disaster — is actually the central issue at the economic meeting that opened today.

Clinton proposes to keep the focus on it, the war in Bosnia-Herzegovina aside, and to carry Japan, Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada into a new alliance with the United States that is committed to global economic growth.

"The new global economy is here to stay," he said Monday in a stopover in San Francisco. "We can't wish it away. We can't run from it."

It is a serious undertaking. The well-being of millions of people in both prosperous and poor countries could depend on the outcome of negotiations to construct a modern trading arrangement with special attention to fast-growing Asia.

"The West today faces a crisis of employment, of leadership, of will," Robert D. Hormats, a former Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, has observed. "The risk of nationalism, regionalism and fragmentation of a global economy in this post-Cold War period, arising as disillusionment with the economic performance of Western governments, political parties and institutions, grows."

AP analysis

The challenge facing Clinton, the six other leaders and special guest Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin is to find remedies before breakouts of racial disorder and political extremism infect their democratic systems.

It is a task more subtle and potentially more dangerous than the Cold War competition that pitted West against East and provided a rallying cry for Clinton's predecessors.

Presidents before him beseeched Americans and U.S. allies to join in a crusade against the Soviet Union, to contain communism and to be prepared to fight and even to die in defense of democracies. The atom bomb symbolized the stakes.

Clinton's chosen crusade is intended to expand the world's economy by up to $6 trillion over the next decade and create 2 million jobs in two years in a West experiencing chronic unemployment.

Clinton is doing all this fully aware that his program must play well at home. He wants to crack open Japanese markets for auto parts, agricultural products and other American goods in a job-creating push to reduce American unemployment below the current 7 percent level.

His pitch is that the United States can thrive only if Japan and Europe, particularly Germany, adopt free trade policies, lower their interest rates and pull together with America.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Barry Schweid, AP's State Department correspondent, covered his first economic summit meeting in Williamsburg, Va., in 1983.

State officials can't force man to move

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Officials cannot force a convicted child killer to leave his San Antonio home for another location unless he agrees, a Pardons and Parole Division supervisor says.

Raul Meza served 11 years of a 30-year sentence for the rape and murder of an Austin girl in 1982 and was released last month from a Texas Department of Criminal Justice prison.

Officials tried to locate him in Uvalde and El Paso, but both efforts were met by strong protests from residents and officials. He was finally placed in a home rented by his parents in San Antonio.

The move to San Antonio was met by protests from area residents, who picketed Meza's rented home during the past weekend.

Officials announced that they would attempt to move him again.
