Americans wounded in Madrid blast

MADRID, Spain (AP) — An explosion ripped through a restaurant near a U.S. Air Force base Friday night and a radio station said at least 23 people were killed and 81 injured. U.S. officials said at least 10 Americans were among the wounded.

Although there was no immediate confirmation, police speculated the blast at the El Descanso barbecue restaurant might have been caused by a bomb.

The restaurant, located on the main Madrid-Barcelona highway, is nine miles northeast of Madrid near the U.S. Air Force base at Torrejon de Ardoz.

Madrid Province officials confirmed 16 deaths, and said it was not known if any Americans were among those killed.

The independent radio station Antenna 3 said the injured were taken to nine Madrid hospitals. It said 18 of the victims were killed in the blast and five died in hospitals of their wounds.

The restaurant was known to be popular with Americans, particularly those who worked at the air base.

Police said there were about 200 people in the building when the explosion occurred at 10:45 p.m. (3:45 p.m. EST).

The U.S. Air Force public affairs office at Torrejon said 10 American personnel had reported to the base hospital with minor injuries. It said in a statement that other Americans could have been taken to hospitals in Madrid.

Barbara Grecher, of Los Angeles, who was eating in the restaurant with five others at the time of the blast, told The Associated Press she thought "either an airplane or a bomb" had hit the restaurant.

The restaurant is located near the end of the main runway of Madrid's international airport.

"It was just like a boom," Mrs. Grecher said. "Then the ceiling came down on us and all the lights went out and I thought my husband was dead."

Mrs. Grecher and her husband, Elmer, who are visiting Spain, were treated for minor injuries at a nearby hospital and released.

The other four people in the Grecher party, one of whom works at the Torrejon base, were taken to other hospitals, according to radio reports.

Juan Jose Gonzalez, son of the owners of El Descanso and who was working the bar at the time of the blast, told the Antenna 3 radio station he was certain a bomb caused the explosion.

"First I felt a brief vibration. Then the doors of the rest rooms came flying towards me. Then I was completely covered by pieces of plaster," he said.

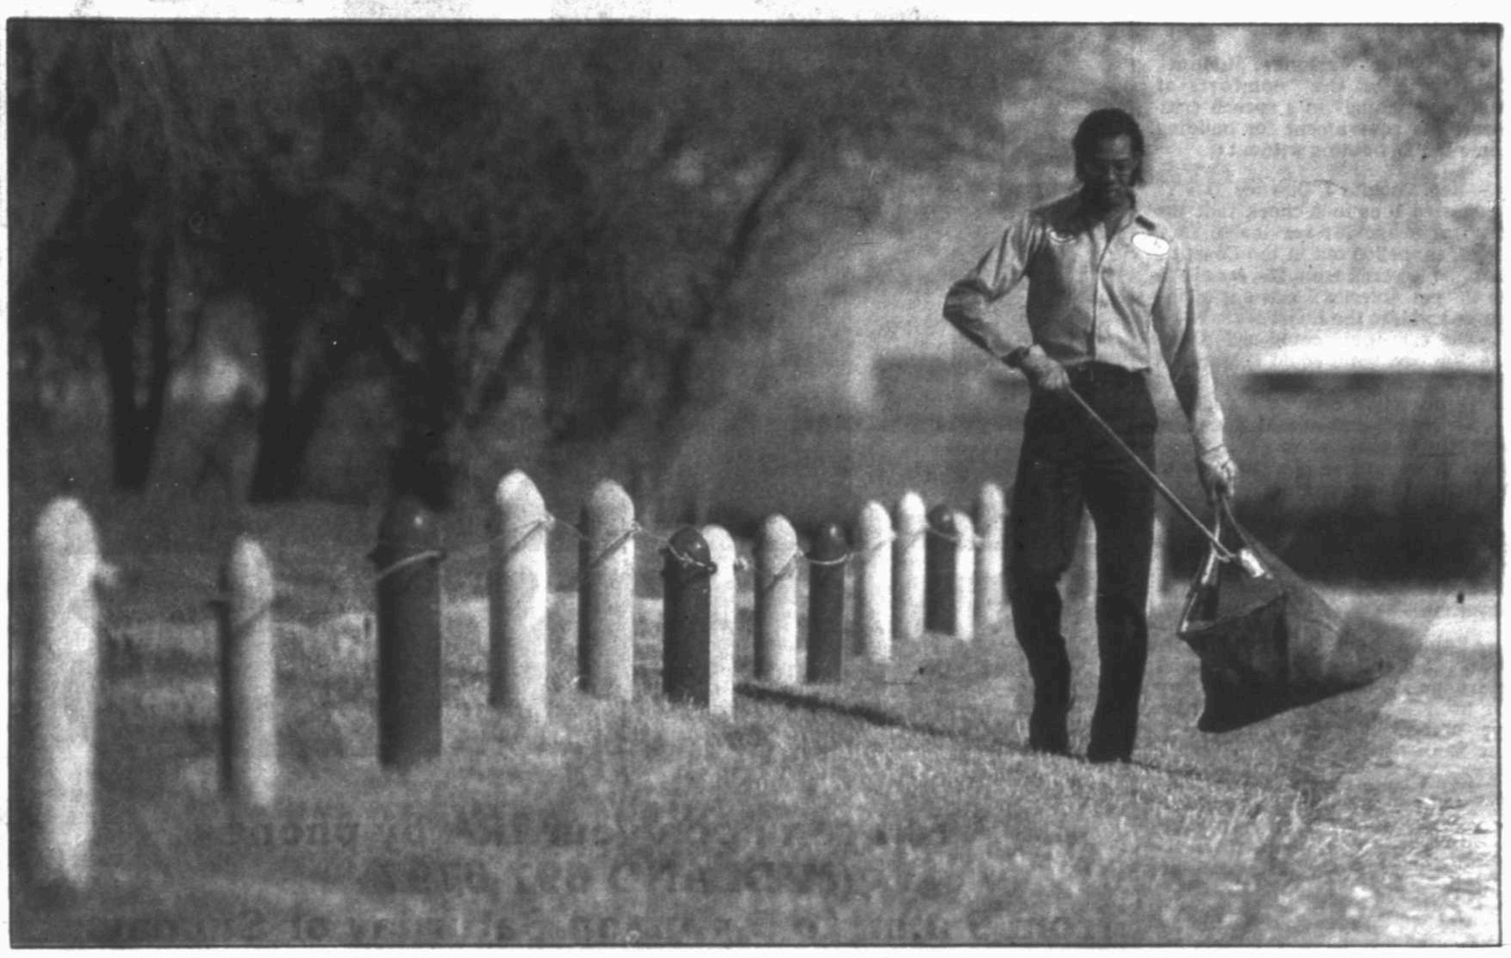

Madrid's provincial governor, Jose Maria Rodriguez Colorado, said in a radio interview he was not certain a bomb caused the blast, but "there are possibilities that it could have been a bomb."

Firemen told the Antenna 3 radio that they had found the butane gas tanks in the restaurant kitchen intact — another indication the explosion had been caused by a bomb.

Police said the three-story building was nearly flattened by the blast. The restaurant was on the ground floor, and its owner and employees lived in the upper two floors.

At midnight, fireman using bulldozers began removing debris in a search for other victims. They said there were piles of bricks and mortar six feet deep.

As the firemen worked national police explosives experts also began sifting through the rubble.

Storm leaves parts of city in dark

From Staff Reports

A dramatic thunderstorm that passed through Midland Friday evening left 3,300 to 3,400 residents without power when a northeast electrical substation was struck by lightning, reported a spokesman for Texas Electric Service Company.

"We had service go out from 8 p.m. to about 9:30 p.m.," said Gerald Gotcher, a customer service manager for TESCO. "Apparently, lightning struck a substation on the east side of Main Street, just south of the Scharbauer Draw."

"It affected all three feeders coming out of the substation, but we got it working again, although it will take more maintenance."

Gotcher reported that the power outage was widespread.

"It's hard to find one particular 'place' that was affected," he said. "But along Big Spring on the east side of the road and the downtown area were heavily affected."

Gotcher said that the county library and city hall were without power.

"When something this major happens, it's hard to know the extent of the damage," he said. "There could be power outages in some of the rural areas and we might not even know about it."

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal, the thunderstorm activity left only .05 inches of rain and no other damage was reported.

Today will be partly cloudy with a high in the mid 70s and winds shifting to the northeast at 10 to 15 mph, said a spokesman.

More thunderstorms are forecast for tonight, with a 20 percent chance predicted. The low will be near 50 degrees.

Sunday calls for continued partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid 70s.

The high for Friday was 82 degrees — 17 degrees cooler than the record of 99 degrees set in 1972. The low of 52 degrees was 24 degrees warmer than the record low set in 1957 — 28 degrees.

Local Jaycees follow national lead, vote to admit women

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Almost eight months after the national and Texas Jaycees voted to admit women, the Midland Jaycees bowed to the inevitable Friday, approving a charter amendment admitting women to their ranks.

"It's a step forward," said Midland Jaycee President Glenn Jennings of the amendment, which passed by two votes more than the necessary two-thirds. "The time delay was just procedural."

"It's an idea whose time has come," said Debbie Reid, publicity secretary of the Midland Jaycee Women, which will disband at the end of the month. Of the 62 Jaycee Women, "about 20-25" have expressed an interest in joining the Jaycees.

"We'll be let in en masse as long as we have our paperwork in on time," said Ms. Reid.

The amendment replaced "man" with "person" on the Jaycee charter, following the lead of the national and state organizations. According to Jennings, the delay wasn't due to any sexist sentiment among the Jaycees:

"In September (when the amendment was first proposed, and then tabled), we found out the general membership had a number of questions that had not been considered. I don't think it (the vote against the amendment Friday by one-third of the membership) was against women."

Midland is a conservative town, Jennings said, and many members voted against admitting women "as a matter of principle" because they felt pressured by outside interests. But he said the change was inevitable.

"To remain affiliated, we would have to change our bylaws," he said. "Eventually that question would have to have been settled."

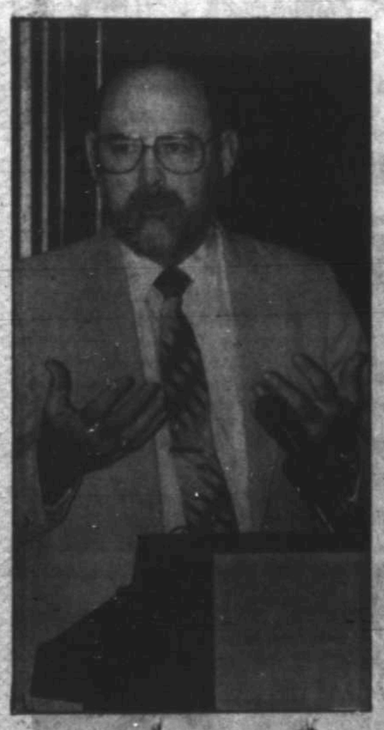

The U.S. Jaycees decided to let women in after the Supreme Court ruled they could not revoke the charter of a Minnesota chapter which had started admitting women. Since Jaycee chapters often act as unofficial training programs for future community leaders, the court found the male-only requirement unlawfully discriminated against women, since it had the effect of denying them equal opportunity to prepare for public office.

Unlike a private social club, "We're kind of viewed as belonging to the public, and I think rightly so," said Jennings.

No Midland women had applied for Jaycee membership before Friday, but a large group of Jaycee Women members will soon join, and since their parent organization already has been consolidated with the Jaycees at the state and national levels, the women will retain their tenure and have the right to run for office in the April 26 elections.

Loeffler, Combest address College Republicans

G. Thane Akins

Tom Loeffler

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Comparing the "yuppies" of today to the New Dealers that kept FDR's programs popular long after his presidency ended, Rep. Tom Loeffler (R-Hunt) spoke to a group of about 50 delegates of the College Republicans of Texas at the Midland Holidome Friday evening.

The group's state convention, held in Midland this year, will run through tonight. Included in the lineup of guest speakers were Loeffler, Rep. Larry Combest (R-Lubbock), Mayor Thane Akins and a visiting Honduras businessman, Gilberto Goldstein, who is in Texas seeking support for President Reagan's plan to provide the contras in El Salvador with $14 million in aid.

Loeffler, speaking first at the 7 p.m. dinner, compared the young audience to followers of the New Deal program under President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"I used to wonder what would happen when Reagan was no longer in office," said Loeffler. "I wondered about what would happen to his programs.

"But then we examined the polls and found that the majority of the age group from 18 to 40 were supporting the candidates we were supporting.

"This is much like the momentum that kept the New Deal rolling long after FDR died," said Loeffler. "The voting group that kept it going in the 1930s kept it rolling right along in the 1940s and 50s."

Loeffler switched gears and talked to the college students about a recent trip he made to Central America.

"We can't walk away from freedom-seeking people anywhere," said the congressman of the president's proposal to supply aid to guerrilas in El Salvador. "Right now, we are probably about 45 votes shy of passing the proposal."

Loeffler then called for the college students' support in writing letters and on the campuses.

Also speaking in support of the president was a sugar plantation owner, Gilberto Goldstein of Tegucigalpa, Honduras, who compared neighboring Nicaragua as "the Libya of Central America."

"They only have one goal," said Goldstein. "And that is to de-stabilize Central America and embarrass the United States, causing problems that could lead to Mexico becoming a war zone."

Goldstein commented on the recent municipal elections held in Midland.

"I was very sad to hear that only four percent of your voting population turned out to vote," he said. "In our last election, 83 percent of the population turned out to vote."

Goldstein also called for the college students to support the president in supplying the aid.

"It is not the $14 million," he said. "Cut it down to one dollar if you want. It's the message and if that message is sent loud and clear, I think that Russia, Cuba and Nicaragua will take a good long look at the situation."

Also commenting on the low voter turnout at the last city election, was Mayor Thane Akins.

"For us not to get involved in politics is unthinkable," said Akins. "The election was really pathetic due to apathy. We recently went to single-member districts and unfortunately, only 4.5 percent of the district that was largely minority turned out to vote."

Rep. Combest spoke to the group of delegates preceding the dinner and called for more support for defense spending.

MIDLAND CENTENNIAL 1885-1985

House members can say what's on their minds

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — OK, you've got one minute — 60 seconds, no more, no less — to blurt out what's on your mind. Say anything you want. You're not supposed to swear, but otherwise there are no rules.

You've got a podium and a microphone and a nationwide cable television audience. What would you say?

Members of the House of Representatives have that opportunity at the start of each day's session.

Any one of them can get up and speak on any subject — so long as it's for no longer than one minute. On any given day, between one and two dozen members do just that.

It's bewildering how much can be crammed into those minutes — or how slight a connection some of the speeches have with legislative business.

The following are some recent examples — all from one-minute speeches given on the House floor during the first week of April.

—Rep. Ron Marlenee, R-Mont., held forth on the "comforts of indoor plumbing" in a speech criticizing the government for building some Indian housing without it.

—Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., suggested tongue-in-cheek that the minimum age for service in Congress, as spelled out in the Constitution, be lowered from 25-year-old to 15 to "get America's kids out of the home and into the House."

"The carry-outs could sell 'Twinkies;' missed votes could be excused with a note from mom; and should party discipline ever be a problem — we could send errant members directly to their rooms," Downey said. "It would give new meaning to the term, 'junior senator.'"

—Rep. J. Roy Rowland, D-Ga., complained that doctors must now pay $50,000 a year or more for malpractice insurance. Rowland is a physician.

—Rep. Robert E. Wise Jr., D-W.Va., told colleagues he was driving home for the Easter recess in a car using alcohol fuel derived from coal, and asked if anyone wanted to join him.

—Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., took notice of the 24th anniversary of the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion by recalling that "heroic effort to achieve libertion for the people of Cuba."

—Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, used less than his full minute to extol Rep. William H. Natcher, D-Ky., for having recently cast his 14,000th vote, a congressional all-time record. "May his example of constancy and dedication be a light in the darkness of political negativism and a continuing inspiration to us all," Wright said.

—Rep. John R. McKernan, R-Maine, gave a speech praising the U.S. footwear industry while Rep. Beverly B. Byron, D-Md., announced that a constituent, John Howard Chamberlain of Westminster, Md., had been named "truck driver of the year."

—Rep. Michael L. Strang, R-Colo., likened the federal deficit to having "a rhinoceros in our living room. Mr. Speaker, if we do not take steps to get the rhinoceros out of our living room, we shall have no house at all."

—Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., and Rep. Bob Edgar, D-Pa., both turned to poetry to prase Villanova's championship-winning college basketball team. Biaggi: "I rise today to honor a team, the Villanova Wildcats now reign supreme." Edgar: "For the skill of the Wildcats arose so supreme and breathed life in the face of the impossible dream."

—Rep. William E. Dannemeyer, R-Calif., also turned to verse to discuss offshore drilling ventures and corporate takeover attempts. "Oils well that ends well," Dannemeyer entitled his poem, "with apologies to Curly, Larry and Moe" of the Three Stooges fame.

Newspaper discovers more than 'pink coal'

PIKEVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The Troublesome Creek Times account of the discovery of pink coal in eastern Kentucky may startle some readers.

So might its front-page stories in today's edition on a porcupine that laid eight eggs and a survey revealing the most famous Kentuckian ever to be Secretariat the race horse.

The reason for this week's bizarre stories is simple, says Ron Daley, editor of the weekly: "If you wait until after April Fools' Day people will know what you're doing."

Daley has learned from experience how to put out an April Fools' edition. Five years ago he proclaimed that gold had been found on a creek in the area and at least 30 people scurried to the site, he said.

The front-page stories jump to Page 2, where an "April Fool!" headline and a note saying, "The rest of the paper we believe is the truth," finishes the stories, Daley said.

Mikhail Gorbachev not getting rave reviews from Maryland town

By BARRY SCHWEID

QUEENSTOWN, Md. (AP) — Here on Maryland's Eastern Shore, where some top Reagan administration officials and arms control experts are discussing awesome nuclear questions in splendid isolation, Mikhail Gorbachev is not getting rave reviews.

After only a month on the job, Gorbachev is being dismissed as the same sort of cautious plodder the Soviet system has produced in the past, a leader without challenging new ideas.

An Analysis

"There is no evidence yet that he will try to change policy," said a senior U.S. official, who, like all those attending the conference sponsored by the U.S. Arms Control agency, demanded anonymity. The official said he was "skeptical" Gorbachev would change.

On Easter Sunday, in what Moscow called a goodwill gesture to the United States, the Soviet leader announced the temporary suspension of new SS-20 missile installations in Europe and invited the Western allies to join in other nuclear restraints.

"I was not wowed by the magnificence of this," said a senior U.S. official who plays a prominent role in shaping American policy on arms control issues.

A third official, experienced in negotiating with the Soviets, said that after a month of U.S.-Soviet talks in Geneva — the same month Gorbachev has held the reins — the Soviets still have not replied to a 1983 American proposal for an agreement to limit strategic nuclear weapons based on a "trade-off."

The idea is that the United States would give up advantages in some weapons if the Soviets would yield their edge in others.

Unquestionably, Gorbachev's self-imposed freeze is an old idea. A predecessor, Leonid Brezhnev, took the same step in 1982. By the time he ended the moratorium 20 months later, the State Department says, he had quietly added about 70 SS-20 missiles to the Soviet arsenal.

The principal administration criticism of Gorbachev's freeze is that it would preserve the big Soviet lead in Europesan-based nuclear warheads. Even if the United States kept installing new Pershing II and Cruise missiles in Western Europe, by November, when the moratorium expires, the Soviets would have an advantage of about 5-1.

The officials, and private analysts here at the Wye Plantation, call that "instability." By their logic, if the Soviets are way ahead in one type of nuclear weapoon — and they are, in heavy land-based intercontinental missiles, as well as Euromissiles — U.S. security is at risk.

It's almost Christmas (in April)

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

For an estimated 150 elderly or handicapped Midland homeowners, Christmas will come twice this year — once in December and once in April.

Christmas in April, Midland's volunteer housing project, is set for April 27 as teams of volunteer surveyors are screening homes of persons who have been approved for the 1985 program.

"We have about 151 homes on the list," CIA President Bobby Trimble said. "We've already worked on 29 homes this year."

Christmas in April Inc. — now in its 13th year — is a non-profit program using locally donated funds, materials and labor to repair homes of the poor, handicapped and elderly.

CIA also provides emergency repairs, such as fixing heaters and plumbing, throughout the year, according to Trimble.

The program was initiated in September 1973 when the Park Center YMCA, located in southeast Midland met with local church and civic groups to organize a program for needed work on several homes.

The initial effort resulted in the repair of 17 houses at a cost of about $3,750.

In the dozen years that followed, Christmas in April has repaired more than 1,000 Midland homes. Last year, approximately 120 homes were repaired while $70,000-$80,000 was raised to pay for the materials to make the repairs. Approximately 3,000 volunteers participated in the event.

Today, CIA is no longer confined to April or to Midland. Several CIA-style projects have emerged in communities nationwide including Lubbock, Wichita Falls and Washington, D.C.

The first CIA-style project conducted outside Midland was in 1982 at Cisco where volunteers constructed a house for a needy man.

In 1983, Trevor Armbrister, senior editor of "Reader's Digest" visited the Midland program and was so impressed that he began one like it in Washington, D.C. with about 250 volunteers working on 18 houses.

The selection date for houses to be repaired by groups of volunteers in 1985 was April 2, according to Trimble. Each home has a detailed list of the needed repairs plus a picture of the home and information regarding the recipient(s).

Trimble said qualifications for CIA assistance include: an elderly or handicapped individual who owns or is in the process of purchasing or residing in a home in need of repair.

For information, call Trimble at 688-9387 or the CIA Headquarters at 694-4907.

Another satellite to be launched

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space shuttle Discovery blasted through sodden skies Friday, avoiding a sixth launch postponement by 55 seconds, on a voyage that gives Sen. Jake Garn of Utah a demonstration ride like no other.

After waiting out a rainstorm, Discovery lifted off 55 minutes behind schedule. The same murky weather, however, ruined a Kennedy Space Center doubleheader, delaying the arrival of the new shuttle Atlantis.

Nearly 300 miles above the clouds and no longer bothered by them, the Discovery crew sent a Canadian communications satellite spinning out of its cargo bay toward an eventual orbit high above Earth.

"It was a good deploy," said astronaut Jeffrey Hoffman.

"It looks good from down here," said Mission Control.

"I guess it was easier to launch a PAM than it was to launch the shuttle — no weather problems," Hoffman said. PAM refers to the rocket attached to the satellite.

The deployment of the satellite, for Telesat of Canada, followed a familiar scenario. After releasing the satellite, Discovery moved away to be out of blast range 45 minutes later when the PAM engine fires to send it to a 22,300-mile-high orbit.

The rocket, the same kind responsible for two satellite launch failures last year, burned for 86 seconds, as it was intended, Hoffman said.

"It was very impressive," he said, "because while we were looking at it, there were lightning flashes all over the Earth that we could see going off while the PAM was burning nice and steady."

The astronauts will launch a second satellite, to be used for Navy communications, this morning.

Garn is aboard Discovery as a congressional observer, but he also is a working seventh crew member whose contribution to space progress began in the opening minutes of the five-day flight.

As the space plane climbed to its 285-mile by 184-mile orbit, the senator's digestive functions were monitored by five sensors on his head, four on his stomach and three on his chest. It is part of an effort to learn more about how the human body adapts to weightlessness.

The other crew members are commander Karol Bobko; pilot Donald E. Williams; mission specialists Margaret Rhea Seddon, David Griggs and Jeffrey Hoffman; and payload specialist Charles Walker, who almost lost his ride Thursday when his drug-making machine sprang a leak.

It is only the second time that seven people have shared the same spaceship.

"That launch was something special, but the best is yet to come, that's for sure," Walker radioed in mid-afternoon, reporting his machine was off and running.

Ground controllers held the countdown at the nine-minute mark, first to allow time for a laggard cargo ship to leave a launch-endangered area, then because of moisture in the cloud layer aloft. During the shuttle's high-velocity climb, raindrops become little darts that pit the fragile tiles which shield the spaceplane from the heat of reentry.

Discovery had to lift off by 9 a.m., EST to meet its satellite launching requirements, or wait until Saturday.

"We did it with 55 seconds to spare, which seems like we were playing brinksmanship," said shuttle operations manager Tom Utsman. "The only thing we were doing was letting our decision process run as long as time would allow."

As Utsman walked in to his post-launch news conference, NASA television screens were showing the departure of Atlantis from Edwards Air Force Base in California, on the back of a 747 jumbo jet.

Utsman noted that this 16th shuttle launch came on the fourth anniversary of the first flight, and said:

"To walk into this room and see on the screen an orbiter taking off to come to the Kennedy Space Center ... and to realize we've got another in the Vehicle Assembly Building ready to roll out ... it says we've come a long way."

Atlantis, the fourth and last in the shuttle fleet, was held overnight at its refueling stop in Texas because of rain in Florida. The arrival time was reset for Saturday noon — a day before a third shuttle, Challenger, is transported to the launch pad for a flight on April 29.

Discovery's launch had been postponed five times, scrambling NASA's ambitious hopes of flying shuttles at the rate of one a month. The last mission lifted off on Jan. 27.

Eight more flights are scheduled this year, with Challenger set to be transported to the pad late Sunday or early Monday for launch on April 29. There are 15 flights planned in 1986 and 17 in 1987.

"We pulled the stopper today, and we're looking forward to getting on with the rest of them," said launch director Bob Sieck.

Among the thousands viewing Discovery's blazing departure were 200 people from Utah, Garn's home state.

"It was frightening," said Garn's wife, Kathleen, who watched with six of the senator's seven children. "Even though I had seen it on TV, I didn't realize there was going to be quite so much fire. And I expected it to go faster. I thought, oh, my gosh, it's going to stall out. The kids screamed, I cried."

Four men arraigned in auto theft

From Staff Reports

Four members of a Midland motorcycle gang suspected in the theft April 1 of an automobile from an Odessa car dealership were arraigned Thursday afternoon on charges of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bail for the members of the "Murphy Gang" at $7,500 each, which all four posted.

Jerry Ray Murphy Sr., 40; Larry J. Murphy, 30; Ronnie Cale Murphy, 29; and Kenneth Dale Kuykendall, 33, were arrested Wednesday night at the home of the two older Murphy brothers at 500 Spraberry. The four were alleged to have been in a 1982 Pontiac Grand Prix, reported stolen from Jack Ariedge Oldsmobile-Cadillac in Odessa.

Odessa police, stumped in the case, contacted the Midland County Constable's Office Wednesday with a description of the suspects, which matched those of the motorcycle gang, said Constable Tom McGinnis.

Officers with Midland sheriff and Midland and Odessa police departments assisted the constable's office in the arrests of the four. Traffic warrants also were served on two women who were at the residence.

A warrant was held on another gang-member, suspected in the March 6 robbery at La Quinta Motor Inn, 4130 W. Wall, but officers could not locate the woman during a search of the house, which was conducted with the Murphys' permission.

A fifth gang member, who matched a description of a man who looked at the car the day it was stolen, was brought in for questioning Friday.

After being read his rights by Pine, the man declined to talk with members of the constable's office without an attorney and a warrant for his arrest is expected to be served Monday, according to officials.

Police probing several theft reports

From Staff Reports

About $1,200 worth of equipment was reported stolen from Texas Instruments about 3:30 p.m. Friday. According to police reports, one VCR valued at $800 and one 35 mm camera valued at $400 were reported by Bob Jenkins as stolen. No suspects have been found as yet, but the investigation is continuing.

A report filed with the city police shows a 1981 Chevy Malibu valued at $6,000 was stolen from an apartment complex at 4405 N. Garfield sometime between midnight Thursday and 11:30 a.m. Friday. Troy P. Lehigh reported the theft at 12:53 p.m. Friday. Lehigh said he had lost his car keys near the apartments on Thursday. He had not given anyone permission to drive his car. The investigation is continuing.

Snow skis valued at $350 and a black silk-covered wooden chair valued at $1,200 were stolen from Colonial Storage. Police reports show that Clarice Sullivan of 4400 Andrews Highway reported the theft at 10:41 a.m. Friday. She told police she had placed the above items in a storage unit on March 13 and put a combination lock on the unit at that time. There are no suspects.

Vehicle damage was reported at the Best Western motel at 1000 W. Interstate 20 Friday. Peggy Blake told police that $889 worth of damage was done to her car when two police officers arrested a resisting suspect outside a nightclub.

Officers Lynn Rice and Roy Sanders were attempting to arrest a man and a woman for simple assault and public intoxication when one of the two resisted arrest and prompted a fight with the officers. During the struggle, one of the resisters scratched Ms. Blake's 1979 Lincoln Continental and broke her antennae. Ms. Blake told police her car had been repainted several days prior to the incident.

JAYCEES

"That's really were you get most of your leadership training — running for office," said Midland Jaycee Women President Tami Beck, who foresees no problems with the women being accepted by the 180 male Jaycees.

"I really don't see any difficulties. If a woman's capable, then the guys are going to give her credit," she said. "The only bad thing about the whole thing is we can't run all the projects we had," especially fashion shows and other projects aimed exclusively at women: "That type of thing will probably not be continued."

The Jaycee Women began life as the Jayceettes, an auxiliary group for Jaycee wives, but the Midland group began admitting single women in 1983, changing its name and becoming more professionally oriented. There was some controversy among the women about consolidating with the men, according to Ms. Reid — "Some don't want to be a part of a men's organization" — but she said the change would benefit both groups:

"We have areas we are real strong in, and they have areas they are real strong in."

"I think the two groups will work well together because we've worked well together for so long (as separate organizations)," Jennings said. "I don't think there's going to be a big problem. Our committment to the community is not going to change. Our objectives are not going to change."

Association aims to locate forgotten burial ground

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — With spunk and a dash of militancy, the Iowa-Nebraska Cemetery Protection Association aims to save old, abandoned cemeteries from a variety of threats, including the farmer's plow.

Association members say the dead should be respected even if their descendants can't, or don't care to, fight for the preservation of their resting places.

"It's basically sacred ground. We (as a society) don't even consider cemeteries sacred today," said Association President Eric Driggs. "We figure if the family's gone, that's it."

Some families have long forgotten the old burial places, others recently have been forced to sell the family farm with its old family plot, he said.

"One hundred — perhaps only 50 — years from now, will your ancestors be able to find your final resting place intact?" asks a brochure printed by the association.

"Or will time have erased your name? Today there are countless cemeteries and family burial plots whose stones cry for attention, plead that someone care — in a seemingly uncaring, throw-away world."

The Omaha-based association, formed last June, has attracted 20 members interested in preserving the old cemeteries scattered across the prairie of Nebraska and western Iowa.

The nucleus of the group includes members of the Greater Omaha Genealogical Society and the Old Council Bluffs Historical Recovery Development Group.

Besides respect for the dead, association members mentioned another motivation.

"Really, your tombstone is your only claim to fame," Driggs said of many of the pioneers and homesteaders who collectively were the heroes of the region's early days.

Death certificates weren't common until 1904, Driggs said, so genealogists and historians often must rely on tombstones for vital information. Although no one may have cared yesterday about the information on a particular tombstone, someone may care tomorrow and the information will have been lost forever.

However, more and more old tombstones are being destroyed each year, particularly by farmers, according to association members.

"Their motivation isn't just strictly greed. It's just common sense," Margaret Forsythe, association treasurer, said of the farmers. Although many of the abandoned cemetery plots are relatively small, she observed, plowing around them every year could be a bothersome chore.

If it is impractical to preserve a cemetery, farmers should at least record all information available from the cemetery before plowing it under, she said.

Association members say they can't estimate how many old cemeteries have been destroyed. But they aim to find out how many abandoned cemeteries remain. They hope to attract members across Nebraska and western Iowa who will help them compile a cemetery census.

They say many farmers don't bother to preserve the cemeteries because they don't know anyone is interested in them.

One family cemetery near Bennington, about 15 miles northwest of Omaha, was cited as a prime example of the association's work by member Marie Dabbs.

About 20 people were buried in the plot on farmland believed to have been acquired in 1874 by German immigrant Albert Kobs. But in 1979, Albert's grandson, Ernest, sold part of the family farm.

The acreage sold included the cemetery, with its remaining half dozen tombstones dating back to the 1870s and 1880s. The cemetery was located about a half mile back from the nearest dirt road and in the middle of fields.

Mrs. Dabbs said she was looking for another cemetery more than a year ago when she stopped at the Kobs' farmhouse to get directions.

Marjorie Kobs, Ernest's wife, said she didn't know where that cemetery was. However, she added it looked like a bulldozer was out back getting ready to do away with the Kobs' family plot.

French — women included — have yet to grasp feminism

By NANCY KENNEY

PARIS (AP) — Feminism has failed to capture the popular imagination in France, even among women themselves.

"Feminism is just a lot of froth and foam that has served only to ridicule women. It's what makes American women so aggressive," Alice Saunier-Seite, a former government minister for universities, said in an interview. "French women feel better about themselves."

Photographs of briefcase-toting women dashing through Manhattan in business suits and track shoes make Parisiennes chuckle.

One who might fit the category of dashing businesswoman is Francine Gomez, who brought the Waterman Pen Co. from the brink of bankruptcy in 1969. But she denies doing it with any hard-nosed business sense.

"I HATE BUSINESS," she said. "I succeeded because I was creative.

"Women are blessed with dominance in the left side of the brain, which controls imagination. Men are dominated by the right lobe; they're more logical and practical."

That analysis is not unusual for French women who underline their "feminine" qualities and distance themselves from the rhetoric of women's rights.

They rarely have been segregated socially by men, and their dominance within the home is undisputed. But the effects of the 1804 Napoleonic code giving them the legal status of minors have not been easily erased.

French women were denied the right to vote or hold office until 1944. Contraception was not widely practiced until the 1970s. Not a single large French city has a woman mayor. Abortion was legalized in 1975, but it was six years before the law was fully enforced because of doctors' hostility.

FRENCH WOMEN are in the workplace, but their unemployment rate hovers around 10.7 percent, 2 percent higher than men's, and they remain clustered in traditional careers like teaching, retail sales and secretarial work.

The historically male professions which French women have managed to penetrate — 50 percent of France's judges are now female and one of three medical diplomas is awarded to a woman — "have been terribly devalued in recent years," said lawyer Nicole Dreyfuss.

The feminist movement that does exist is plagued by internal squabbling, and the government of President Francois Mitterrand has provided most of the impetus for change since it came to power four years ago.

Mitterrand elevated the Women's Rights Administration to a full-fledged ministry and increased its budget tenfold. He also appointed a record six women to Cabinet-level posts and instituted other reforms, such as extending government medical coverage to abortion, financing job training for women and ordering large businesses to submit data on hiring, promotions and salaries.

But a French distaste for confrontation between the sexes appears to have sabotaged some of the reforms.

When Women's Rights Minister Yvette Roudy proposed a bill to ban sexist advertising in 1983 — indignantly flashing a nude photo of singer Grace Jones baring her teeth in a cage — she became a focus of public ridicule. Newspaper attacks severe and the Socialist administration has not mentioned the bill since.

"IF YOU TELL a young French woman she's a sex object, she'll say to herself, 'Thank goodness,'" said Francoise Giroud, co-founder of the news magazine L'Express. "That's one thing that will never be tossed out."

A 1983 equal pay law gave unions the power to file sex discrimination suits on behalf of women members, but to date no suits have been filed, according to the Ministry of Women's Rights.

"Filing lawsuits is not a priority for us," said Chantal Cumunel, an official with the Confederation Generale des Cadres, a union representing 290,000 administrators. "Women shy away from them anyway."

"You see, in France a phrase like 'International Women's Day' doesn't go over well; it sounds like International Horses' Day," she said.

French women do not like to complain because generally they count themselves lucky in contrast to women elsewhere, said Georgina Dufoix, minister of social affairs.

LAWS SPURRED by France's sagging birth rate allow women to bear children without losing their jobs. They enjoy four-month paid maternity leaves and the possibility of unpaid "parental" leave of up to two years, with stipends for large families and an internationally praised day-care system for tots.

"This is a good time to be a woman in France," said Mrs. Dufoix, who has four children, "because women are recognized both as mothers and people with careers."

But the women who land top jobs tend to see themselves as exceptions.

"There never will be many women in positions like mine because middle-class women can meet and marry someone who earns enough for two," said Anne Duthilleul, 31, the first woman graduate of France's selective state graduate engineering school. Ms. Duthilleul draws up the budget for state scientific research.

Simone Veil, France's best-known woman politician, consistently ranks first or second nationally in political popularity polls. But she has just announced she is no longer a contender for high office.

MRS. VEIL, a moderate conservative, had always been realistic about her chances of becoming premier or president.

"You know what the French attitude towards women in politics is like," she told American reporters last year. "I doubt it could happen."

She served as president of the multi-national European Parliament from 1979 to 1982, but is best known for her battle to legalize abortion.

High school home to pranksters, bright students

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH (AP) — Until recently, Paschal High School was better known for alligators, astronauts and authors than violence and vigilantes and the shadowy Legion of Doom.

The colorful southside high school produced its fair share of weirdos, toughs and pranksters, but mostly it was identified with some of the best and brightest of the city's overachievers.

"Paschal was really a special place," insists Jerre R. Todd, a 1950 graduate and now a Fort Worth advertising and public relations executive.

"You felt proud and lucky to have gone to Paschal."

Among those who did were Apollo 12 astronaut Alan Bean, former Gov. Price Daniel, authors Dan Jenkins and Bud Shrake, pro football quarterback Frank Ryan, U.S. Rep. Martin Frost, syndicated New York columnist Liz Smith, Olympic gold medalist Earl Meadows and San Antonio's first female mayor, Lila Cockrell.

Local heroes included the students who kidnapped an alligator from the Fort Worth zoo and smuggled it overnight into the school courtyard, and the youngsters who airbombed the rival Arlington Heights bonfire and bulldozed the Heights field house.

STILL, FOR a school that counts Olympians, governors and moon explorers among its alumni, the revelation recently of a blue ribbon vigilante operation on campus was as surprising as it was disturbing.

According to investigators, the Legion of Doom consisted of a small number of honor students and athletes who intimidated classmates with threats and violence in what they claimed was an effort to curb theft and drug usage.

Legion targets told police and reporters the elitist group included students from the city's most prestigious and affluent families.

Police have filed no charges but have hinted that legion members may be linked to as many as 50 acts of violence, including the pipe bombing of a student's car.

With the nation's attention already riveted on the vigilante issue in New York City, the Paschal disclosures brought a notoriety uncommon to a school rich in history and tradition but hardly a stranger to youthful hijinks and rowdiness and occasional vandalism.

AP Laserphoto

This 1978 file photo shows the damage done by a Paschal High School student, who drove a bulldozer through a rival Fort Worth High School's field house.

Often without knowing it, fans of author Dan Jenkins have been reading about Paschal High School for years in such novels as "Semi-Tough" and "Baja Oklahoma" and his latest bestseller, "Life Its Ownself."

Asked by a Dallas newspaper about Legion of Doom activities, Jenkins quipped:

"Those are the kinds of things they used to do to people who didn't support the football team."

He said the issue should be "treated with humor."

ELSTON BROOKS, a 1948 graduate of Paschal and longtime entertainment columnist at the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, contends tongue in cheek that classmate Jenkins was "the only rich kid we knew" back then.

"His grandmother gave him a $20 bill every week," said Brooks, "and he had his own car."

Brooks maintains Jenkins couldn't attend the senior picnic "because he didn't have any old clothes to wear."

Jim Lunn, a production coordinator at KTVT-TV in Fort Worth and a 1962 Paschal graduate, said the youngsters of his era did a lot of fighting "but not with guns or knives, much less a rocket launcher."

Among the weapons reportedly at the disposal of Legion of Doom members was a bazooka.

"Nothing like that went on in the early sixties," said Lunn. "On any given night, we'd go to the 19th Hole or Carlson's Drive-in and watch Joe Don Looney get it on with guys who thought they were tough.

"We're not talking about guys with a whole lot of intelligence if they'd fight Joe Don."

Looney, a 1960 graduate, remains one of the most storied of Texas athletes, as much for his activities off the football field as on it.

"He once ate a pinball machine at the 19th Hole," deadpanned Lunn. "It did something he didn't like and he left it lying in the corner in a pile of rubble."

ANOTHER PASCHAL alumnus recalled, "The big deal back then was to burn the Heights bonfire before they did. All me and my friend did was rent a plane, fly over the bonfire and drop some purple and white streamers."

A number of Paschal students arrived as the plane winged away and a fight broke out. Forty-six Paschal students landed in jail.

A week later, on the day he was slain in Dallas, President Kennedy was in Fort Worth and heard a reference to Paschal.

"Oh, yes, Paschal," he laughed. "That's the school with its own air force."

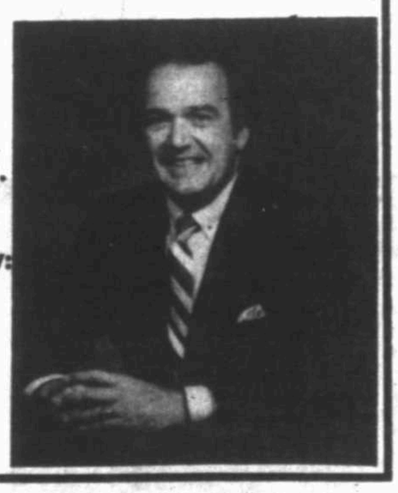

Critics found considerably less humor in a 1970s incident in which two Paschal students hot-wired a bulldozer and plowed into the Arlington Heights field house, causing $10,000 in damage.

Even fewer were amused in 1980 when a group of Paschal students was implicated in a robbery-extortion ring.

'Rumors' save Austin loss of$90 million

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Thanks to "rumors on the street," the city of Austin avoided the possible loss of $90 million it invested with a New Jersey securities firm that collapsed this week, a city official says.

Bevill, Bresler, Schulman Asset Management Corp. of Livingston, N.J., has been placed in receivership and its assets frozen. The Securities and Exchange Commission has charged Bevill and affiliates with fraud.

Austin avoided a loss by selling the collateral given the city to back the money sent to the New Jersey firm, said Sheila Matthews, the city's acting director of financial services. Austin had invested in Bevill by buying repurchase agreements.

Repurchase agreements involve the sale of securities to an investor, with an agreement that the seller will buy back the securities after a set period. The agreements — which actually are loans of money — are secured by government securities.

Austin received U.S. Treasury bills as collateral. The city sold the securities Tuesday because "We heard rumors on the street. We stay in touch with the grapevine," said Ms. Matthews.

The city also was fortunate in that it took physical possession of the securities issued as collateral, she added. They were put in a bank vault here.

Other creditors allowed other companies to hold the securities for them.

"There is some evidence that securities held as collateral weren't held as collateral," she said.

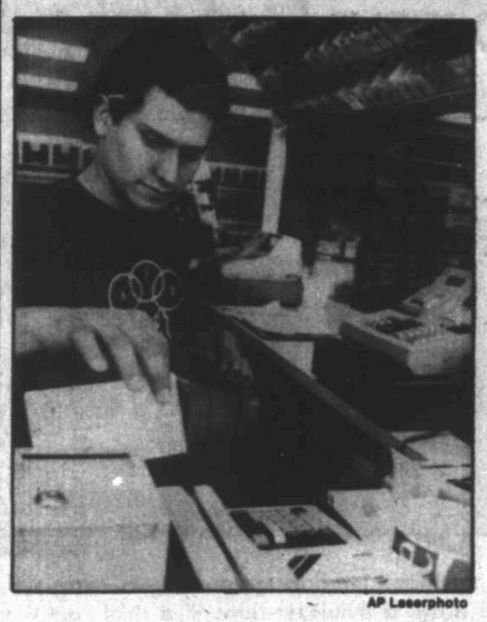

And the securities sold for more than 100 percent of the city's investment with Bevill, according to Ms. Matthews. The excess will be held in escrow for the Livingston, N.J. firm.

The city continually looks for good investments.

"We always have construction cash on hand that we invest so that it matures when we need it," she said. "We call around and say we have these dollars to invest. Whoever gives us the best rate is who we do business with."

Greater risk brings higher interest, she said. It's worth it "if you are real careful with who you do business with" and "as long as you take the collateral," according to Ms. Matthews.

More than $198 million might have been lost in the failure of Bevill and its associates, according to Saul Cohen, court-appointed trustee.

Operating an electronic "point-of-sale" terminal at a Diamond Shamrock station in Austin is Marcos Otero.

Austin bank gearing up 'point-of-sale' installations

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin bank plans to have 200 "point-of-sale" electronic terminals in operation by year's end, allowing consumers to purchase merchandise by using their electronic banking cards.

First City National Bank officials said they expected to have installed terminals at 54 Austin locations by Friday after installing them at 29 Diamond Shamrock gas stations this week.

The terminals will allow Diamond Shamrock customers to buy gasoline, convenience grocery items and receive up to $50 cash by using a bank card or major credit card, officials said.

In about 45 days, the system is to be expanded to accept any of more than 5 million Pulse or Mpact bank cards in Texas, bank officials said. The 200 Austin terminals expected by the end of the year would be part of a 1,000-terminal system installed by First City Banks around Texas.

"We intend to press our advantage," said Edward Piner, vice president and manager for corporate services for First City Bank Austin, who calls the point-of-sale terminals "an opportunity to gain new business relationships in the Austin market."

"Merchant servicing is already a big profit center for the bank. We intend to grow in that area," he said.

For Diamond Shamrock, the Austin stations will be a test market for the terminals to determine whether the company will use the system at its stations statewide.

MTech, the Dallas subsidiary of the MCorp bank holding company, is a rival to First City in installing point-of-sale systems in Texas. To date, MTech has concentrated on putting terminals in the Dallas area, but company officials said they plan to expand into Austin later this year.

Terminal boosters say the system offers some advantages to both customers and retailers.

Consumers have the convenience of paying with a bank or credit card and having the transaction completed quickly. First City officials say the transactions should be completed in 10 seconds or so.

Teacher learns lessons from Amazon jungles

By CINDY LOPEZ

ARLINGTON (AP) — In the summer he can usually be found deep within the Amazon jungle, hunting jaguars or talking to the Indians.

Hugo Munoz

Hugo Munoz, Spanish graduate teaching assistant at the University of Texas at Arlington, is from Colombia. When he wants adventure he goes back to South America. He has many tales to tell.

Some of his adventrues would make Indiana Jones drop his jaw. Like the time that an anaconda was coiled around his body.

Munoz's eyes light as he talks about hunting cats. "Jaguars are fascinating," he says. "They are extremely powerful...the fastest animals around."

He lights a cigarette as he explains how he stalks the animals.

To get the cats' attention a freshly-killed wild pig is dragged through the jungle to leave its scent.

Then Munoz finds a nearby tree to climb. "I wait until it is pitch dark. I must be very still. Any sudden noise or movement will frighten the jaguar."

He waits. And waits. Sometimes his outings are fruitless. Other times he gets his prize. And once in a while he is surprised.

Once he had just killed a jaguar and was ready to get out of the tree. He had just spent has last shell.

He heard a noise. He turned on his flashlight to discover two glaring red eyes.

Oops.

He knew the chances of another jaguar coming were rare. This was one of those occasions.

Luckily, the hunting party came along and helped kill the animal.

Monzo also hunts wild pigs, which travel in packs of 200 to 300. They will charge anything and are the only animals the jaguar fears.

"One must be very careful when hunting wild pigs," Munoz says. "They have large tusks that make a clapping sound when rubbed together. If someone is in a tree, the pigs may surround, chew and knock the tree over. Then you're in trouble."

But the animals that really scare Munoz are poisonous jungle snakes.

Woman handles maps with ease

By BETTY BOWER

TYLER (AP) — "If you have a good map and know how to read it," said Kitty Womack of Tyler, "you can travel anywhere and find places you seek."

With that as a lifelong idea, it's not surprising to find that this woman handles maps with ease.

She may have an edge over some individuals, however, since she's not only a skilled map reader but also a skilled map maker.

With a new map of Tyler just out and Smith County's first book-map collection ready for release, Mrs. Womack already has her eye on 48 cities in Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Those areas are next in line for Mrs. Womack to chart under contract for the U.S. Postal Service.

"Naturally they're interested in every known detail since their delivery staff uses these maps on their routes."

Drawing zip code, sector lines and route boundries helps clarify who delivers where. she adds.

Nor is street mapping the only tupe of locale designation handled by this cartographer.

"I've done petroleum and geological maps, electrical design in pipeline mapping and subdivison plot mapping."

Reading the curves and contours of a map may seem an unintelligible task to those unfamiliar with mapping. But, just as most people who travel or frequently work in new housing areas learn to look for identifying marks to help 'spot' the area, mapmakers also hunt for landmarks.

"I'm a believer in driving or walking every street and road that's included on a map," she said. "Just because someone says there's a street doesn't mean it actually exists or is passable."

Opening her office two years ago in the Tyler area, Mrs. Womack recalls that few people realized that a woman was actually doing mapping.

The signature "K. Womack" on some geological maps brought one caller to ask for "Mr. Womack," she said. "He couldn't believe a woman had done the maps.

"I guess most people don't think women even read maps, let alone design them," she said.

Interested in art as a teen-ager, Mrs. Womack took drafting classes in high school, never dreaming what use they'd be.

Starting out as a secretary in a Houston oil company, she did some basic drafting when the regular staff was out of the office.

From there, she describes the work as "a bonding."

She said, "I loved drafting, and I think I had a knack for it."

Less than 18 months after beginning work as a secretary, Mrs. Womack was chief drafting engineer and on her way to more detailed mapping.

Working with Brown and Root Engineering, world-wide construction company, Mrs. Womack handled electrical drafting, moving into pipeline design drafting with Trunkline Gas, plotting out pipeline layout in some rather "far-out places," she added.

After a brief stint doing custom design golf clubs for handicapped individuals, Mrs. Womack returned to Brown and Root. She left that firm in 1978 to locate in Tyler.

Consulting jobs for several area firms have taken her in and out of the city for differing periods of time, but each time the commitment has been firm: "I like Tyler and I wanted to get back to the map business."

Being out in the field to check details makes this business more than just a routine "drawing" job. She explained that new cities and territories keep the assignments a challenge.

Drawn on a scale of one inch for 600 ft., using 4-color and numbering streets by 100s for easier location, Mrs. Womack also indexes maps by telephone and zip code areas.

"Police or firemen on emergency calls, businesses providing delivery services need to pinpoint the exact spot in a hurry," she explained.

Ex-Congressman goes far after leaving politics

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alan Steelman can truthfully say, with tongue in cheek perhaps, that he has gone farther than any other former Texas congressman.

His new home is a far cry from Mesquite, from which he represented East Dallas in Congress from 1973 to 1977. But after leaving politics in 1977 and spending a few years in the Washington area, he packed his family up last year and moved to Singapore.

"The island is 25 miles by 14 miles but there are 2½ million people on the island, so there is not much room for single-family housing. We live in a high-rise," Steelman said in a telephone interview from Singapore.

Steelman, 43, left politics after running unsuccessfully on the Republican ticket against incumbent Democratic U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen in 1976.

He stayed in the Washington area, renovating a seven-bedroom, 150-year-old house on the Chesapeake Bay, and then joined the Alexander Proudfoot Co. about seven years ago as a board member. He later became a full-time employee, working as a productivity consultant for the international business consulting firm.

Steelman, his wife, Carolyn, and the three youngest of their five children moved to Singapore when he was named managing director of Alexander Proudfoot Co., Far East.

Steelman said two of his children, seniors in high school, just returned from a trip to China and now one of his sons is in Malaysia for Easter break, camping out on an island in the South China sea.

"They've all adjusted really well. They like it a lot."

For Steelman, who "had never been west of Hawaii," the transition from back-slapping good ol' boys in Texas politics to the somewhat arcane world of Oriental business required a re-education.

"There's things that you have to do differenly than in the Western world," he said, adding that Westerners tend to be more direct than Orientals and that it takes patience to close a business deal in Japan or Korea.

Ecology Trailers: Resort or 'cult?'

Associated Press

DALLAS — At a commune-like trailer park in a lonely part of rural Dallas County, allergy sufferers pay $500 for what is advertised as a chemical-free environment.

The life at Ecology Trailers of Dallas is spartan — and controversial.

Since there are no indoor stoves, the residents cook outside with electric skillets. In most cases, their furniture consists of a metal table and a folding chair, a cotton sleeping mat that rests on a built-in cot, a refrigerator and white cotton curtains.

The insides of the trailers are covered with either aluminum foil tape or foil, which the proprietor says prevents "outgassing" from the chemicals in things like particle board or plywood.

The park is advertised in the Yellow Pages under Health Resorts. Many of the residents are from out of state and don't see their new home until they arrive. At first sight, some are stunned.

"It was like camping in the woods without any provisions," one former resident told the Dallas Times Herald.

Since 1982, the park has been a refuge for people diagnosed as suffering from a controversial ailment sometimes called "20th century disease," a sensitivity to a host of chemicals, foods and inhalants.

Clinical ecologists who treat it say the disease can affect every part of the body and even prove fatal. But many immunologists and allergists are skeptical and say symptoms are being misdiagnosed.

There is also debate among current and former residents of the trailer park. Some say they improved during their stay. Others describe it as cult-like or a "leper colony."

Some local allergists criticized the trailer park as a haven for dust, pollen and mold that is "inappropriate" for allergy-sufferers.

Life in the park follows a monotonous routine, former residents told the Times Herald.

The residents wash their clothes — all of it 100 percent cotton — in baking soda in a washing machine in a small shed and hang them out to dry. They clean their barren homes and cook strict diets, often consisting only of "safe" organic foods.

Many are unable to watch television because they say the sets emit phenol fumes and electromagnetic radiation. They seldom read because of sensitivities to print and paper.

So they sit around and talk, mostly about the one thing they have in common — their disease, participants say.

Some former residents and employees say the owner and creator of the park, Ray Scott of Dallas, scares people into staying.

"He told people they had no other place to live where they'd be safe. He's in it to make money. That's all he cares about. Making money," said former employee Jody Brown.

But Betty Franz, who lived in the park for two months in 1983, said it was a welcome haven from the chemically-saturated outside world.

"I was happy to have a place to live that was safe," she said.

Although Scott has been treated for chemical allergies, he does not live at the park.

The trailer park falls between the cracks of state and county regulatory agencies, the Times Herald said. It is not a medical facility, so it is not governed by health care regulations. And because it contains only small travel trailers, the state does not have the authority to regulate them.

STATE IN BRIEF

Judge 'convicts' sting

HOUSTON (AP) — A prostitution "sting" operation that resulted in the arrests of about 290 men was set up by police "solely for the purpose of getting someone to commit an offense," a county judge said.

"Somewhere there's got to be a stop to setting up traps for the unwary," County Court-at-Law Judge Bill Ragan said Thursday after acquitting a man of solicitation charges.

Ragan said Jim Faizi, 23, was the first defendant who had the courage to stand trial on the charge.

Faizi posted $800 bond in January after authorities notified him he faced arrest on a charge of soliciting prostitution. In December, Faizi said, he and a friend visited a "modeling studio" in Houston's Montrose area just to explore.

"We went in and they appointed him a girl and me a girl," Faizi said. The two men were later told no rooms in the studio were available, so he and his friend left. Faizi said he was unaware until his arrest of any alleged involvement with prostitution.

Police set up the studio in November as a prostitution sting operation.

The studio, located in Houston's Montrose area, resulted in the arrests of about 290 men on solicitation charges.

Informant son jailed

CONROE (AP) — A man who informed on his father, a former New Jersey mobster accused of running a brothel from his prison cell, was jailed for protection because he is a material witness in the case, a prosecutor said.

Raymond Freda Jr., 34, feared for his life after giving investigators information about the business allegedly run by his father, stepmother and uncle, said Jim Keeshan, Montgomery County District Attorney.

"He has expressed fears for his safety, although no overt threat was involved in our decision to take him into custody," Keeshan said. "We were also concerned about being able to find him to testify."

The younger Freda told authorities he cannot support himself and has no place to live, Keeshan said.

He was jailed April 9 and is being held on $20,000 bond, Keeshan said.

Plant prices questioned

DALLAS (AP) — An electric cooperative that owns part of the Comanche Peak nuclear plant has defaulted on contract payments and another part owner is trying to renegotiate its commitment to the project.

Both actions came after the Rural Electrification Administration declared the price of the plant unreasonable and refused to guarantee more federally subsidized loans to the cooperatives.

"We felt that it is becoming increasing hazardous to go further," said Harold Hunter, the electrification adminstrator.

The Tex-La Electric Cooperative of Texas Inc., which is based in San Augustine and has a 2.167 percent share of Comanche Peak, went into default in February, the Dallas Times Herald said.

Placement discussed

TYLER (AP) — Mentally retarded Texans who live in state schools can't be put in community homes at the expense of medical care or family access, a state official testified Friday.

The state first wants to develop individual programs for each of the hundreds of state school residents before they're placed in community homes, said Jaylon Fincannon, deputy commissioner of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

"That is our main goal," Fincannon said in the fifth day of hearings before U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice on issues centering on community placement.

The plaintiffs, residents of state schools, want hundreds of residents to be moved into group homes outside the school. Parent groups that have steadily attended this week's hearings have strongly opposed that plan.

Hotel to be demolished

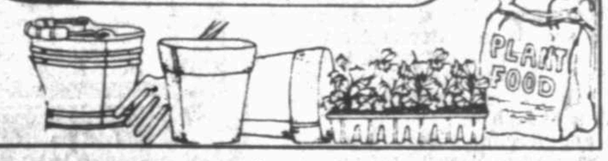

HOUSTON (AP) — The Lamar Hotel in downtown Houston served as a meeting place and home-away-from-home for some of Texas' wealthiest businessmen for more than 56 years.

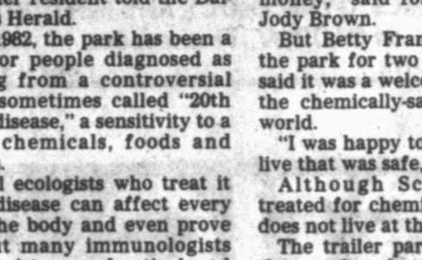

But on Sunday morning demolition experts plan to transform the once elegant structure into a pile of rubble in less than 20 seconds.

What would adventure movies be like without the rattlesnake?

Copley News Service

They are Freudian to be sure, elegant, deadly, a symbol of evil and of the gods.

Poor rattlesnakes. They generate such fear and loathing, yet you can't make a decent adventure movie without them.

Going a few eons further, David Morafka, a biology professor at California State University at Dominguez Hills, says you can't tell one ice age from another without them.

Here's how the lifelong snake enthusiast describes the venomous creatures:

"To the Incas they were symbols of god and of authority. I've collected hundreds of rattlers, but my heart always leaps when I meet one in the wild.

"I am fascinated by the deadly, powerful geometry of their heads and by the fact that they surely sensed my presence long before I ever saw them."

Here are some rattlesnake facts:

They are reptiles, but they bear live young (don't write me letters, it's true). They have highly advanced senses of taste and smell. In the pits just below their nostrils they have infrared sensors that can pick up the body heat of a warm-blooded creature in the dark.

There are 30 to 40 different kinds of rattlesnakes in the United States.

Before killing a brightly colored reptile, Morafka advises, remember the old Boy Scout saying: "Red and black, my friend Jack. Red and yellow, kill the fellow."

Now back to Dominguez Hills, and Floyd, an ornery rattler who was moved into a cage on campus about 15 years ago and has yet to come to terms with his captors.

Studied, photographed and even featured in an Encyclopaedia Britannica film strip, this fine example of crotalus viridis helleri is in his case striking at the glass and rattling his formidable tail.

Unlike most venomous snakes in captivity, Floyd has remained lean and lightning fast.

His eyes are dull like a shark's. And if we could observe his strike in slow-motion we'd see his jaws open 180 degrees until they resemble a flat board with two deadly nails in it.

All those strike-like-an-arrow rattler legends are just that. He is fast, but he can reach out only about one-third of his body length in an attack.

The 15 or so people who die of rattler bites each year are usually those silly enough to engage a chap like Floyd in mortal combat.

However, what is really interesting about Floyd isn't his specialized functions — mostly eating, killing and mating — but his ability to tell us about evolution and geography.

For the past few months Morafka has been working with scientists

Bhopal tragedy still embraces dead, living

BHOPAL, India (AP) — They lived through the world's worst industrial disaster, but now thousands are finding that survival is a mixed blessing.

Almost three months after toxic gas poisoned this central Indian city, the survivors of Bhopal are sick and weak, unable to work, dependent on government rations that do not reach all of them.

Most are still without the compensation money they were promised, and many face mounting debts. They are emotionally crippled. And many are legally crippled as well, having given away crucial documents to American and Indian lawyers who promised them big settlements and then disappeared.

Neelam Devi's story illustrates the tragedy that embraces both the dead and the living in Bhopal.

Her husband was one of the more than 2,000 people killed when they inhaled poisonous gas that leaked from a Union Carbide pesticide plant here Dec. 3. She was one of the estimated 200,000 others who survived but were made ill by the gas, 60,000 of them seriously.

Since breathing the fumes, the 32-year-old widow has not reported to her job as a maid. She says she is exhausted and feels acute pain everytime she exerts herself. She feeds her three children with free government rations.

"I haven't earned a penny all these days. How will I go on like this?" she asked.

Ashwaq Mohammad, a 40-year-old laborer, said he has no relief money, no rations, no work. And he has a 12-member extended family to support.

"No one wants to employ me now. My body is wasted inside," he said. "I look strong but I can't even lift my child. I start coughing." He has had to borrow more than $200 from a moneylender.

In the shanties and mud hovels surrounding the U.S.-owned pesticide plant, most breadwinners among the 200,000 slumdwellers are like Mohammad — out of work.

Most had been construction workers and casual laborers in stone quarries. Now they are unfit for physical labor, suffering from such after-effects as extreme fatigue, eye irritation and shortness of breath.

They are dependent on government aid and charity, and hopeful for compensation payments. But the relief program has been sporadic, and many victims may never get compensation because they handed over relatives' death certificates and doctors' reports to unfamiliar lawyers, or never obtained the documents in the first place.

The Madhya Pradesh state government says it has spent more than $1 million on relief, including rations of wheat, rice and milk, and on payments equivalent to $830 to families of each of the dead. It expects millions more to be spent.

But in early January, faced with mounting bogus claims, the state government suspended its program of compensating the injured with up to $166, pending an official door-to-door survey expected to be completed by March.

"Our eagerness to provide relief has put us in a spot," the state's chief secretary, Brahm Swaroop, said in an interview. "There are thousands of claims — and from people who never lived in Bhopal. It is a tough job to sift genuine claims from bogus ones."

American and Indian lawyers flocked to Bhopal after the tragedy and, in the rush for compensation, signed up an estimated 30,000 people as clients.

The victims granted the lawyers rights to almost half any damages awarded. Some signed up with more than one. Many illiterates used their thumbprints as signatures.

American lawyers, in the names of victims, already have filed at least 18 lawsuits in U.S. courts, totaling $280 billion in claims. The Indian government also plans to file its own lawsuits against Union Carbide in the United States.

But the victims did not understand that such lawsuits can take years to settle and seemed to think payments would come immediately. They gave away their only copies of papers documenting death and illness, certificates they need in order to obtain more immediate compensation and relief here.

"The evidence of damage and death has been taken away from these people. They can't even read Hindi, and what can they understand of tedious legal papers?" asked Vibhuti Jha, a Bhopal lawyer doing volunteer relief work.

"I must have signed at least 10 different forms," said Bange Lal, a Bhopal vegetable vendor who has suffered serious lung damage. But he does not know the names or addresses of any of the several lawyers who knocked at his broken tin door. No one left a calling card.

The state government has opened five legal-aid centers to inform the public of their rights, advising them to avoid foreign lawyers and instead empower the state government to appoint attorneys on their behalf.

By the end of January, more than 45,000 people had requested government attorneys.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Saturday, partly cloudy with highs mid 70s. Wind shifting to north-east early morning.

Hail hits Brownfield, Levelland

Associated Press

Very strong thunderstorms erupted Friday in West Texas along a weak cool front, producing two brief tornadoes in northern Cochran and southern Lamb counties, the National Weather Service said.

Golfball-size hail fell near Brownfield and Levelland, as thunderstorms — several severe — swept across the South Plains and Panhandle.

According to the Hockley County Sheriff's Department, tornadoes touched down late in the afternoon near Sundown, Whitharral, Whiteface and several miles west of Levelland.

Students in Whiteface, about 50 miles west of Lubbock, were evacuated to a tunnel at the school as one tornado passed nearby. Ed Cousins of the Morton area said there were "tornadoes sprouting up all around us." No damage or injuries were reported from that storm.

With thunderstorms along the front extending from central Kansas through northwest Oklahoma into the Texas Panhandle, another area of scattered heavy thunderstorms was noted west of the Pecos. A few showers and thundershowers lingered across Southeast Texas with the remainder of the state under partly cloudy skies, the weather service said.

Temperatures were mostly in the 70s, except for far West Texas and the lower Rio Grande Valley where a few lower 80s were recorded.

East to southeast winds of about 10 mph were reported over the eastern two-thirds of the state. Southwest winds gusted to over 25 mph across the high plains while behind the cool front a light northeast wind was observed.

NATION

April showers stretched from the Gulf of Mexico to the Mississippi Valley and from the northern Plains to parts of the Great Lakes on Friday, with gusty winds chilling parts of the Northeast.

The western third of the nation had clear to partly cloudy skies and temperatures in the 70s.

Scattered thundershowers continued to plague the Gulf coast and most of Florida. Nearly 5 inches of rain fell in 24 hours at Key West, Fla. New Orleans got one-fifth of an inch in six hours.

Fog and haze persisted in parts of California.

Final three holes wipe out Watson's lead

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Tom Watson appeared to have command of the Masters golf tournament when he was two strokes clear of the field with three holes to go in Friday's second round.

But a bad break on the 16th — on a ball that stopped rolling, then started again — and a bunker on the 17th sent him back to the pack and into a 3-way tie for the lead. It also opened the gates to literally scores of potential challengers in this 49th renewal of the event that has become golf's annual spring rite.

"Realistically, anyone six or seven shots back now is still within reach of winning the tournament," Watson said.

And that includes 48 players.

Had he finished with a string of pars, that number would be 24.But it was not to be.

Watson, the man who has dominated world golf in recent years, struggled home bogey-bogey-par for a 71 and reached the tournament halfway point at 140, four shots under par.

He shared the lead with Craig Stadler, the man called "The Walrus" by his fellow tourists, and Payne Stewart, a casual sort who was wearing lavender plus-fours and a matching cap.

Stadler, three times a runner-up but not yet a winner this season, started play more than an hour in front of the other contenders, scattered eight birdies across his card and shouldered his way past 25 players with a 5-under-par 67. Stewart shot 71.

Gary Hallberg, the first-round leader, could do no better than a 73 and was another shot back at 141, three under par for two trips over the Augusta National Golf Club course.

Gary Koch managed a 70 despite a bogey-bogey finish and was at 142, two under par.

Sandy Lyle rallied from an opening 78 with a 65, one shot off the tournament record, vaulted over 61 players and joined a group at 143, one under par.

"Yesterday was disappointing. Today, it was amazing," said Lyle, a native of Scotland.

He was tied with PGA champion Lee Trevino, veteran Ray Floyd and Bruce Lietzke, golf's most successful cross-handed putter, who shot 71 in the mild, cloudy weather. Trevino, 45, had a 73. Floyd, twice a PGA champion and a former winner here, had the same total despite a ball in the water and a double bogey on the 12th.

Curtis Strange, like Lyle an early starter, also shot 65, improving 15 strokes from his opening 80.

"I won my own little war," said Strange, the season's leading money-winner whose awful opening had put him in danger of missing the cut for the final two rounds.

"Missing the cut doesn't set well with me. I hate it," said Strange, who pitched in for an eagle-2 on the third hole and chipped in for birdie on the 14th.

Jack Nicklaus, however, couldn't make the magic happen as the five-time Masters champion, holder of a record 17 major professional titles, fell from a contending position with a bogey-bogey finish to a 74 and a 145 that left him five strokes off the pace.

Defending title-holder Ben Crenshaw was another stroke back at 146 after a 76 that included a double bogey on the 11th.

Arnold Palmer, the 55-year-old who scored the last of his four Masters victories in 1964, was the first man off the tee and rewarded his still-faithful gallery with a par round of 72.

"It was fun," Palmer said. "The conditions were perfect. I was hitting the ball well. I was playing at Augusta National. Everything was as it should be."

Except that he had opened with an 83 and had a 36-hole total of 155, five strokes too high to qualify for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

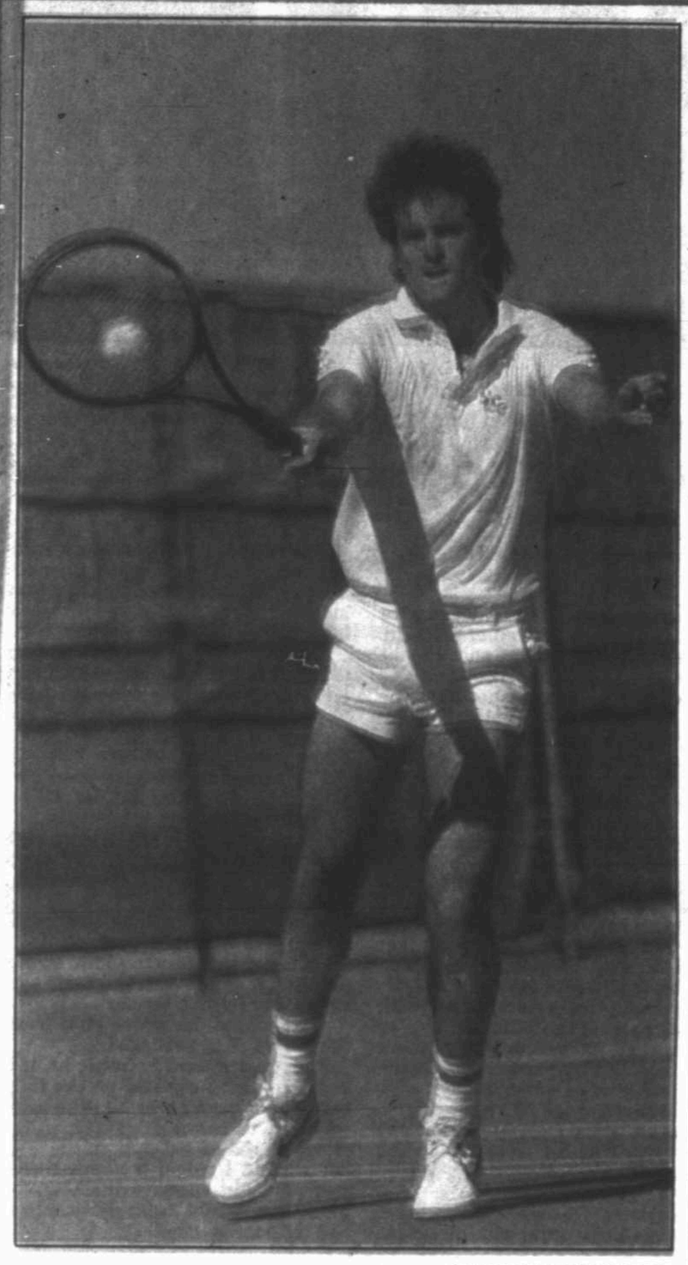

Tom Kite and U.S. Open champion Fuzzy Zoeller also were casualties. Kite, who has challenged so frequently for this title in the past, blew to a 79 and 154. Zoeller, a winner earlier this season and among the pre-tournament favorites here, was 75-152.

Watson, twice a winner of the green jacket that goes to the champion of this event and a five-time British Open title-holder, appeared a sure leader when he continued his domination of the two par-5 holes on the back side.

He reached each of them, the 13th and 15th, with an iron on his second shot, and two-putted for birdie on each, just missing the eagle putt on the 13th.

Midland College's Sean Strickling is rated 21st in the country in singles by the latest junior college poll — but that's not high enough to suit his tastes.

Snubbed? MC slighted by polls

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

It's not quite the boost he was hoping for, but for Sean Strickling, Midland College's top tennis player, it might be all the incentive he needs to vault him to a national championship.

Strickling, who has recorded a 12-4 record this spring going against the top man from every school, including 12 Division I programs, is ranked 21st in the latest Intercollegiate Coaches Tennis Association poll, the Reporter-Telegram has learned. The ranking is lower than everyone around the MC tennis courts expected.

"Of course I'm disappointed, but the only thing I can do is look ahead," Strickling said. "But it gives me more incentive from the standpoint of really starting to work hard. It gives me something to prove in nationals."

MC's No. 2 man, Brad Bailey, is ranked 37, quite a drop from being ranked 13th in the last poll and Robert Vrij is 41st. Bailey has compiled a 15-1 record this spring and Vrij has also gone 12-4 at No. 3.

Strickling joins coach Joe Williams in scoffing at the poll's credibility, pointing out that the ITCA rankings list Strickling and Emil Bijleveld as the 12th-rated doubles pair when the two have not played together all spring. Bailey and doubles partner John McCauley are rated 16th.

AS A team, the Chaparrals are rated fourth, down from their lofty No. 1 perch in the first poll. But that doesn't rankle Williams as much as the disrespect pollsters are showing the MC singles and doubles players.

"It seems to be such a political thing, I don't know how they come up with these things," Williams said. "I can understand how as a team we wouldn't be No. 1 anymore, I half-expected that. But looking at the competition we've played, I would've thought we would be ranked much higher in singles and doubles. But if I complained, it would look like just sour grapes coming from the coach.

"The rankings may serve to motivate us when we start playing against the ranked players. We still have the same goal we always did — show who is the best in May at the national tournament."

For now, MC is putting thoughts of rankings behind, and concentrating on the upcoming tournaments. The Western Junior College Athletic Conference tournament is scheduled for April 19-20 in Levelland, then the next weekend in the Region V tourney slated in Waco. That is where the Chaps will begin to encounter some strong competition, but should still qualify for the nationals held this year in Ocala, Fla.

Strickling, a sophomore, is eyeing the national tournament as a chance to prove to major colleges he is their type of player. And with his booming serve and intense competitiveness, it could turn into the perfect showcase for him.

Midland sports era coming to end

'Dogs' Davis, Rebs' Jones make final home stands

TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Today's Tall City Relays at Memorial Stadium will be the last athletic appearance in Midland for two of the city's most productive athletes. That in itself should make the event something special as an era comes to an end.

It will be the last time for Midland fans to see Midland High's Darrell Davis and Midland Lee's Walter Jones in action. There may not be two more athletes in Tall City history who have produced more in their high school careers.

Davis' Bulldog career, lasting only two years due to age, has been awesome. His senior season alone is fantastic. He was the only player in 4-5A to earn first team All-District football honors as both a defensive and offensive player. He was also second team All-State in football.

In addition, Davis was the MVP during the 4-5A basketball season with a 25.8 scoring average for the season and again a second team All-State selection. As a junior, Davis was third in the state shot put and is now gunning for the state title as a senior, owning a state best of 63-3¼ to date.

Some have called Davis the best all-around athlete in Midland sports history. Even though that claim could be debated, few, if any, have had that type of success in three sports.

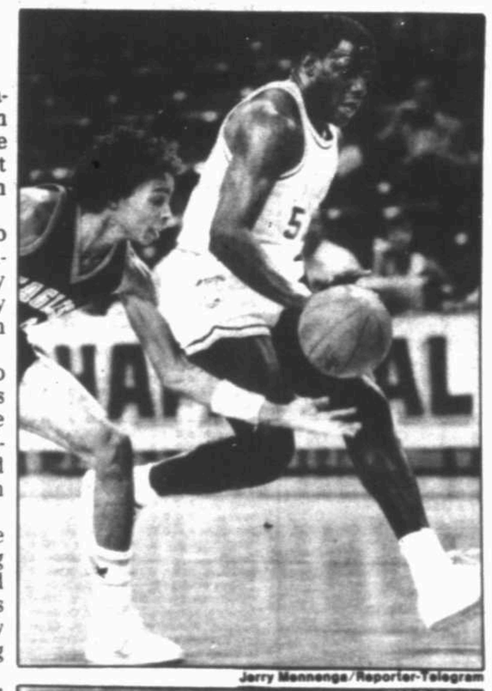

JONES TOO has been an athletic force at Lee with a stunning three-year career in football and track. Lee owns a varsity football record of 27-6 with Jones on the team as a halfback.

He is the only Rebel back in history to have two 1,000-yard rushing seasons and he helped lead Lee to the state finals in 1983 and to the quarterfinals in 1984. He was an All-District choice as a running back in 1984.

That success on the gridiron also moved to the track oval where Jones has won Region I berths in seven events and two trips to the state meet as part of Lee's 1600 relay teams.

A few weeks back in Andrews, Jones became the first Lee trackster to win four events in a single meet. He has a chance to earn four more Region I berths next week in Abilene's 4-5A meet.

Davis didn't go over the 60-foot mark until the Region I meet last year in the shot put, but he has left MHS coach Johnny Williams shaking his head in 1985. At Andrews, Davis threw a 61-4¾ and Williams said, "I think he might be able to reach 63 before the season is over."

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Cody Bell/Reporter-Telegram

Though competing in track this weekend, Midland High's Darrell Davis (top photo) and Midland Lee's Walter Jones (bottom) have excelled in other high school sports.

Last weekend in Austin, Davis made state news with a 63-3¼ and now Williams is saying that, "64 may be possible."

Davis wants even more. "I would like to crack 65-feet by the Region I meet, but I would really like to win the state championship," said Davis, who is bound next fall for a football date with TCU.

"There is no question that Darrell has been a force at Midland High," said Williams. "He has a lot of talent, but you don't win on talent alone. He works hard at everything he does."

IN TRACK, Jones' greatest heights have been reached while a member of Lee's 1600 relay teams. It is his least favorite event. He says, "The distance is just too far for me, but we've done well. I would really like to qualify in four events for the Region meet and I think that can be done. I don't think anyone at Lee has ever done that before."

Lee assistant track coach Eddie Wolski said of Jones, "He is one of the best competitors I've ever been around. He doesn't like finishing second to anyone — even if everyone knows that he doesn't stand a chance."

That very factor worked against Jones last weekend in Austin. Lee posted a 3:15.0 in the 1600 relay, near a school record. But the Rebels were fourth as a California team set a national record 3:07.40.

"Jones ran his fastest 220 meters ever, but he died at the end. He just didn't like being behind and ran too fast from the start," said Wolski.

Lee anchor Marq Brackens laughed. "Walter died at the end. He looked like Frankenstein coming in."

Lee track coach Sam Volpe said, "You would win a lot of meets if you had a handful of Walters. He knows how to compete and his success shows it."

WHEN THE season is over, Jones could leave for his new home at Texas Tech, where he will play football, with 11 Region I qualifying berths to his credit and at least one more state berth. That would give him a trip to state for three straight years.

Brackens is another Lee trackster who will be ending a productive track career. He has qualified for Region twice in the 400 meters and twice has gone to state on the 1600 relay team.

The Tall City meet will also be a time to say farewell to Volpe, who will resign after 24 years as head track coach at Lee. This will be his last meet in Midland.

Lee can oust Mojo from playoff race

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The last time Midland Lee and Odessa Permian met on the baseball diamond, the Rebels erupted for six runs in the third inning to give them the edge in the 9-7 final score.

That victory kept Lee in District 4-5A first place with a 3-0 record while Permian was bogged down in a tie for sixth at 1-2.

The Rebs went on to post six more victories before dropping Tuesday's 8-4 decision to Abilene Cooper to fall into a tie for first at 8-1 with the Cougars.

The Panthers, though all but eliminated from the 4-5A title chase, have gone 3-3 since that date and are now in fourth place at 4-5.

Today, the two teams meet again and this time Permian is in a must-win situation. A Permian loss, combined with wins by Cooper and Lee, would leave only Midland High with a shot at one of the two 4-5A playoff berths if the Bulldogs can get past 2-6 Odessa High.

Lee will be hosting Permian at Lee Field while the Bulldogs travel to Odessa High. Both games are scheduled for 2 p.m. Elsewhere in the 4-5A, Cooper is at Big Spring and San Angelo at Abilene High, also 2 p.m. games.

THOUGH THE Rebels failed to come back from Cooper with their perfect district record intact, they still held on to a piece of the 4-5A lead and the way both teams have been playing this year, it's possible Cooper and Lee will meet again in a one-game playoff for the 4-5A title.

Should one stumble, the three-game cushion over Midland High would likely be enough to guarantee a playoff berth. As it stands now, the magic number for Lee and Cooper is two: Lee or Cooper victories or MHS losses.

Statistically, Permian doesn't matchup well with Lee. The Rebels are the second best in both hitting and pitching categories with a .370 team batting average and 3.78 team earned run average.

Permian is hitting at only a .252 click (seventh) and giving up 5.19 earned runs a game (sixth).

Individually, the Rebels have two players still hitting .500 or better and three above the .400 mark: Donny Rivas (.533), Keith McDonald (.500), Cary Brown (.464), Tuey Rankin (.424) and Mike Small (.417).

Permian's best hitter this year is Albert Jimenez (.382) while Kyle Bowen (.375) and Donnie McNatt (.355) add some extra punch to the lineup.

The Rebel pitching staff is led by right-hander Mike Small (3-0, 2.45 ERA), one of only two 4-5A pitchers with an unbeaten record with three or more decisions. Small is second to teammate George Matta (4-0, 4.28) who is also among the district leaders in saves with two. Rebel Mike Rittenberry (1.1, 4.82) also has two saves.

Puhl ignites late rally over Phillies

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Houston's Terry Puhl drove in three runs with a triple and single in a seven-run sixth inning Friday night and Enos Cabell provided the game-winner with a single to rally the Astros to an 8-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Philadelphia starter Jerry Koosman shut the Astros out for five innings and the Phillies scored three times in the top of the sixth to go ahead 3-0 before Houston's big inning.

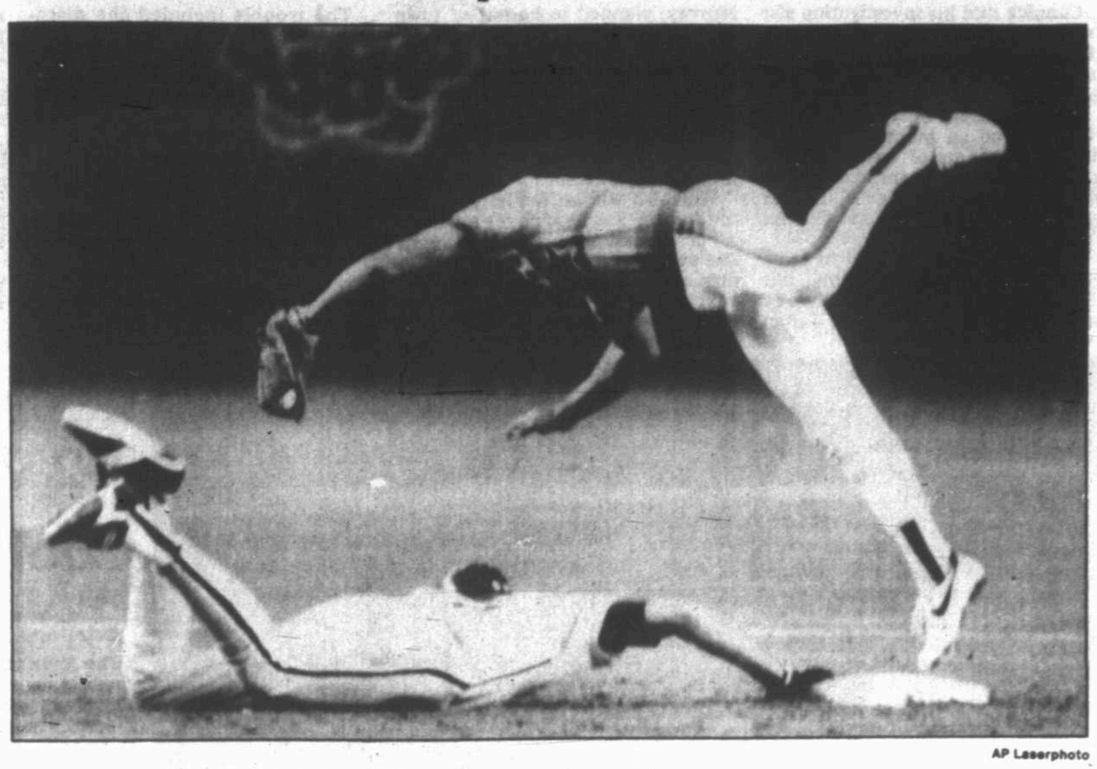

Jerry Mumphrey opened the assault with a single and scored the first run on Puhl's triple. Puhl remained at third when Alan Ashby singled off third baseman Mike Schmidt's glove to chase Koosman and bring on Larry Andersen.

NL

Bill Doran hit Andersen's first pitch for a double, scoring Puhl. After pinch hitter Denny Walling was walked intentionally, Dickie Thon singled to score Ashby with the tying run and Cabell followed with a go-ahead single.

Houston's other three runs came when Don Carman walked Mumphrey, forcing Thon home, and Puhl drilled a two-run single off second baseman Juan Samuel's glove. Puhl added a sacrifice fly in the eighth.

Houston's Dave Smith, 1-0, who faced one batter in the sixth, was the winner and Andersen, 0-1, took the loss.

Leaping lizards! It's the Astros Bill Doran saving a pick-off attempt from pitcher Mike Scott. The baserunner, Von Hayes of Philadelphia, was caught stealing third on the next pitch.

Expos 5, Cubs 1

CHICAGO — Dan Driessen slugged a two-run home run and Herman Winningham hit his first major league homer Thursday, powering Bryn Smith and the Montreal Expos to a 5-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Driessen's homer triggered a four-run fourth inning and Winningham hit his solo homer in the fifth off loser Dennis Eckersley.

Smith, who was winless in four lifetime decisions against the Cubs — including 0-3 last year — limited Chicago to three hits through eight innings. Jeff Reardon pitched the ninth.

Leon Durham singled in the second and Smith retired the next 12 batters before rookie Shawon Dunston tripled to open the sixth. He scored on pinch-hitter Thad Bosley's sacrifice fly.

Giants 4, Dodgers 1

LOS ANGELES — Jeff Leonard ripped a two-run homer as San Francisco erupted for four runs in the third inning to spoil Los Angeles' home opener.

Mike Krukow, making his 1985 debut, checked the Dodgers on eight hits, including a solo home run by Sid Bream in the third inning, the first major league homer for the rookie first baseman. Krukow walked one and struck out five.

Rick Honeycutt, the Los Angeles starter, allowed five hits and four runs in 3 2-3 innings in his first appearance of the year.

A crowd of 46,910 watched the 500th meeting between the two former New York rivals since they moved to the West Coast in 1958.

Dan Gladden singled with one out to start the Giants' third-inning outburst and Manny Trillo doubled him home. Chili Davis' single scored Trillo and Leonard's first homer of the year, a shot to deep center, gave San Francisco a 4-0 pad.

Pirates 6, Cardinals 4

PITTSBURGH — Jason Thompson drilled a two-run homer to key a four-run first inning as Pittsburgh celebrated their home opener with a victory over St. Louis.

The Pirates, held to two runs and nine hits in a pair of season-opening losses to the Chicago Cubs, collected 10 hits off four St. Louis pitchers, including Doug Frobel's two-run single in the first inning.

Bill Madlock drew a two-out walk off Kurt Kepshire, 0-1, in the first before Thompson belted his first home run of the season deep into the right-center field seats. The Pirates then made it 4-0 when former Cardinal George Hendrick singled, went to third on a single by Tony Pena, who took second on the throw to third, and Frobel's two-run single.

Don Robinson, 1-0, pitched 3 1-3 innings of two-hit relief to earn the victory after replacing starter Larry McWilliams with the bases loaded and two out in the fifth and the Pirates leading 5-2. He was replaced by John Candelaria after Steve Braun opened the St. Louis ninth with a double. Braun eventually scored on a double play grounder. St. Louis also scored in the eighth on a double play.

The Pirates scored solo runs in the second on Johnny Ray's RBI single and in the fifth, against reliever Bill Campbell, on consecutive singles by Pena, Frobel and Tim Foli.

Padres 7, Braves 3

ATLANTA — Steve Garvey drilled a pair of solo homers and Kevin McReynolds and Al Bumbry rapped two-run doubles to power San Diego over Atlanta, spoiling the Braves' home opener before a crowd of 45,389.

The Braves, who had won two straight games in Philadelphia to open the season, managed only three hits in seven innings off Andy Hawkins, two by Dale Murphy, who continued his torrid early-season hitting.

Murphy, who has seven hits in his first three games, slammed a bases-empty homer in the sixth inning — his second of the season — and scored on a single by Chris Chambliss in the fifth after cracking a double.

Garvey, who had three hits, homered in the fourth inning off starter and loser Rick Camp and in the eighth off Gene Garber.

Camp was tagged for eight hits and four runs in four innings. Hawkins drove in the Padres' first run in the second inning with a single. McReynolds hit his two-run double in the third after the Padres filled the bases on a double by Tony Gwynn, Garvey's infield hit and a walk to Graig Nettles.

Bumbry gave the Padres a 6-0 lead in the fifth with his two-run double off Craig McMurtry following a walk to Tim Flannery, Garry Templeton's single and a sacrifice bunt by Hawkins.

Mets 1, Reds 0

NEW YORK — Gary Carter hit his second game-winning home run in three games and Bruce Berenyi allowed one hit in seven innings as New York defeated Cincinnati.

Berenyi, limited by a sore shoulder to 13 innings of work in spring training, worked seven innings and allowed only Pete Rose's first-inning one-out single. He struck out six, walked one and got a fine defensive play by center fielder Mookie Wilson to protect the lead.

Berenyi retired 14 batters in a row before hitting Dann Bilardello with a pitch leading off the sixth inning. Berenyi then walked pitcher Mario Soto and Bilardello went to third as Eric Davis bounced back to Berenyi for a double play. Wilson made a diving catch of a sinking liner to left-center by Rose.

Berenyi left for a pinch hitter in the seventh and Doug Sisk allowed singles by pinch hitter Eddie Milner in the eighth inning and Rose in the ninth before earning his first save and boosting the Mets' record to 3-0. They are the only unbeaten team in the National League.

Carter, whose 10th-inning homer won the Mets' opener on Tuesday in his debut in a New York uniform, hit his second of the season to lead off the fourth inning. The homer came on a 2-2 delivery from Soto, 1-1, who was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the eighth.

The Mets wasted an opportunity in the third when infield hits by Rafael Sanata and Wally Backman around Berenyi's sacrifice put runners at first and third with one out. Sanatana was thrown out at the plate on Mookie Wilson's grounder to first and Keith Hernandez grounded out to end the inning.

Homers lift Angels over El Paso, 11-6

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — The Midland Angels rebounded from a 2-0 deficit in the fifth inning to explode for four runs and come away with their first win of the Texas League season, 11-6 over the Diablos.

Reggie Montgomery's two-run homer, his second in two nights, was the big blow in the four-run fifth bringing home Billie Merrifield with him to take the lead for good, 6-5. But before Montgomery even walked to the plate, the Angels had scored a pair of runs thanks to singles by second baseman Mark McLemore and outfielder Devon White and throwing errors by both the El Paso catcher and centerfielder on an attempted steal play.

MIDLAND LIT up the scoreboard for four more runs in the eighth inning, with the key blow a three—run shot into the left-field seats by McLemore. The homer gave the second baseman four RBI for the night. The Angels pushed across an insurance run in the ninth on a single by shortstop Kevin Davis and an RBI double by Tito Nanni.

Julian Gonzales picked up the win with four innings of strong relief of starter Doug McKenzie. Gonzles allowed four hits and just one run while walking none and striking out two.

AFTER MIDLAND took a 2-0 lead in the third, it looked as if it were the same old story when El Paso erupted for five runs in the bottom of the third. Glen Braggs knocked in the first two runs with a single, and after an RBI hit by first baseman Joey Meyer, Eddie Diaz singled in another pair.

But this time manager Joe Maddon found someone in the bullpen who could stifle the hot Diablo bats. Montgomery and McLemore took care of the rest.

The two teams will go at it again tonight in the finale of the five-game set, before the Angels make their home debut Sunday at 2 p.m. against Beaumont.

High fives abound for Milwaukee catcher Bill Schroeder after he hit his first career grand slam off Texas' Frank Tanana Friday night.

Brew crew slams Texas' opener

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Bill Schroeder knocked in six runs with his first career grand-slam homer and a single Friday night as the Milwaukee Brewers tarnished the Texas Rangers' home opener 11-6.

The loss leaves the Rangers at 0-3 on the young season.

Schroeder delivered a two-run single in the second inning off Frank Tanana, 0-1, and Randy Ready added a sacrifice fly as the Brewers rallied to take a 3-2 lead.

The next inning, Cecil Cooper led off with a double, Mark Brouhard singled and Paul Householder walked to load the bases. Schroeder then lofted a drive that just cleared the wall in left field for a grand slam off Tanana that made it 7-3.

Texas cut its deficit to 7-6 in the fifth with four runs. Curtis Wilkerson's walk, Don Slaught's single, and Toby Harrah's walk loaded the bases with two out. Gary Ward singled across two runs and Buddy Bell doubled in two more.

Bell's hit knocked out Darwin and brought on Gibson, who went 2 ⅓ innings for the victory.

The Brewers iced it with four unearned runs in the eighth off Ranger reliever Dave Schmidt. Doug Loman, Paul Molitor and Cecil Cooper all contributed run-scoring singles.

AL Roundup

Danny Darwin, traded by Texas to Milwaukee, made his debut for the Brewers and lasted 4 ⅔ innings. He was touched for five hits and six runs, including Cliff Johnson's two-run homer in the first.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 2

BALTIMORE — Gary Roenicke homered to break a fourth-inning tie and Jim Dwyer, pinch hitting for Roenicke in the seventh, lined a bases-loaded triple to lead Baltimore over Toronto.

Scott McGregor, 12-4 lifetime versus Toronto, went five innings for the victory in his first start of the season. He allowed seven hits, including George Bell's home run in the first inning and Willie Upshaw's homer in the fourth.

Sammy Stewart worked four hitless innings for his second save of the season as Baltimore ran its 1985 record to 3-0.

The Orioles took a 2-1 lead in the third inning on consecutive doubles by rookie Fritz Connally and Rick Dempsey and an RBI single by Cal Ripken.

Roenicke's homer, his first of the year, made it 3-2 and came off Toronto starter Jimmy Key, 0-1, who worked the first 3 13 innings.

Baltimore broke the game open in the seventh with four runs against reliever Ron Musselman. Lenn Sakata led off with a single and took third on a one-out double by Ripken. Eddie Murray was intentionally walked to load the bases and then Dwyer, a left-handed hitter batting for Roenicke, tripled into the gap in left-center. Dwyer scored on Musselman's wild pitch.

Mariners 2, Twins 1

SEATTLE — Jim Presley belted his third home run in three nights and Matt Young gave up five hits over 8⅓ innings as the Seattle Mariners edged the Minnesota Twins for their fourth straight victory.

The 4-0 record marks the best start in the nine-year history of the Mariners.

Young struck out seven and walked two in his first appearance of the year. He left the game in the ninth after allowing a one-out single to Kent Hrbek, his first hit of the season in 13 at-bats. Reliever Edwin Nunez earned his third save by getting Tom Brunansky to ground into a double play.

Ken Schrom took the loss despite pitching a three-hitter in his season debut.

Presley snapped a 1-1 tie in the bottom of the fourth when he drove a 3-1 pitch 20 rows deep into the left center-field bleachers.

Seattle took a 1-0 lead in the first when Harold Reynolds drew a lead-off walk, stole second, moved to third on a grounder and scored on a groundout by Alvin Davis.

Tech pitchers pummeled again

Associated Press

Arkansas 14, Texas Tech 4

LUBBOCK — Behind 22 hits and the seven-hit pitching of Kevin Campbell the Arkansas Razorbacks drilled Texas Tech 14-4 Friday in Southwest Conference baseball.

Arkansas, 27-9 overall and 8-4 in the SWC, scored two runs in the top of the second inning after Tech, 18-23 and 2-11, had taken a 1-0 lead in the first.

Arkansas' Mark Jackson got three hits, including two doubles and three runs batted in. Norm Roberts also was three-for-five at the plate and Ralph Kraus collected four hits in six trips the plate for the Hogs.

Campbell struck out five going the distance for Arkansas to improve his record to 5-4. Tech starter Mark Puckett, 3-2, took the loss.

The Raiders were led at the plate by Dan Spencer, who had a two-for-four showing.

HOUSTON — Friday's scheduled Southwest Conference baseball game between Texas Christian and Houston was postponed because of wet grounds. A doubleheader was scheduled for Saturday.

Texas 6, Rice 5

AUSTIN — Bill Bates' bases loaded triple in the sixth inning led Texas to a 6-5 comeback victory over Rice.

The victory evened the Longhorns SWC record at 3-5, while Rice slipped to a 3-9.

The Owls had taken a 4-1 lead and ace Greg Swindell on Mike Fox' two-run homer in the third.

Texas rallied for two runs in the fifth when David Denny singled with two outs to score Robbie Byers and Coby Kerlin, who had walked. That cut the Owl lead to 4-3.

Rice freshman Todd Ogden (2-4, 2-3) had held the Longhorns to just three hits until the sixth, when Dodd Johnson and David Wrzesinski singled and Kerlin walked with two outs. Bates drove Ogden's second pitch to the wall in left, and the Longhorns were ahead, 6-4.

Rice scored a seventh inning run when Ben Mathews doubled and scored on a groundout by Carl Mikeska.

Swindell surrendered two unearned runs in the first inning, but came on to strike out 13.

The two have a doubleheader scheduled Saturday.

Green Wave athletic director turns in resignation

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Hindman Wall, athletic director at Tulane University since 1976, resigned Friday, saying years of turmoil plus a current scandal involving the Green Wave basketball team had "taken a toll."

Wall, 49, whose resignation is effective June 30, said he was not forced to quit.

"Absolutely, I had no pressure. I was not asked to resign," he said.

Basketball Coach Ned Fowler and two assistants resigned last week, and Tulane President Eamon Kelly has recommended dropping men's basketball.

Kelly accepted Wall's resignation and said a search for a successor would begin immediately.

He also said the school's ongoing investigation into possible NCAA infractions "have not yielded any evidence that Mr. Wall was involved in those matters."

District Attorney Harry Connick announced last month that he had broken a point-shaving scheme involving five Tulane basketball players. Three players and five other men have been indicted in the gambling case.

Connick said his investigation also turned up evidence of NCAA violations — a cash bonus allegedly given one recruit and cash payoffs allegedly made to at least one player.

Mark Olensky, 21, of Fair Lawn, N.J., entered an innocent plea Friday to 10 counts of sports bribery and two counts of conspiracy in an appearance before Judge Alvin Oser of Orleans Parish Criminal District Court.

Olensky originally was to have been arraigned next Monday, but the procedure was done Friday because his defense lawyer, Julian Murray, planned to be out of town early next week.

Wall said his resignation is linked to the scandals only by time.

"The combination of the last several years has just taken a toll on me," Wall said. "It's been coming on for a while. It's just one of those things. I'm just tired."

Wall also said he had no plans for the future: "I'm looking for a job."

For at least the past three years, the athletic program has been in turmoil at Tulane, a selective, 150-year-old private university with about 10,000 students.

The trouble included the discovery of a $1 million deficit in the athletic department; allegations that former football coach Wally English sent an assistant to spy on a Mississippi State practice; and a suit against the school by quarterback Jon English, the coach's son.

The lawsuit challenged the NCAA's transfer rule and permitted the quarterback to play in seven games under a series of injunctions.

Wall fired Wally English after last season and hired Mack Brown. But the rift between the coach and the athletic director had divided Tulane supporters into pro-Wall and pro-English groups, as well as a group that felt they both should be fired.

Wall, moved to Tulane in 1976 after two years as athletic director at Cincinnati.

At Tulane, Wall raised funds and built a new administration-football complex and established an endowment fund that, by last fall, had paid for 55 athletic scholarships at $50,000 each.

Ben Weiner, a Tulane financial backer, said, "This is a sad day for Tulane. In my opinion Hindman is the best director in America.

Midland College's Helen Lebeller returns a back hand shot Friday against Cooke County.

MC women post 7-2 victory over Cooke County

From Staff Reports

The Midland College women's tennis team finished its home season Friday with an impressive 7-2 victory over Cooke County Junior College. The MC women were recently promoted to third in the polls and Cooke County was fifth.

At first, coach Joe Williams thought the Chaps might blank the visitors, but No. 4 and No. 6 singles players, Rachel Hostutler and Karen Wild were edged in grueling three-set matches.

The rest, including all three doubles pairs, charged straight ahead to raise their record to 12-2 overall. Helen Lebeller, ranked third in the nation at No. 1 singles, rolled over Samantha Gough of Cooke, 6-2, 6-2. Other Chaps had a little more trouble, Charissa Pruim at No. 2, was taken tho three sets before finally disposing of Judith Hosie, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

MC takes the next week for preparation for the Western Junior College Athletic Conference tournament next weekend in Levelland.

Singles: Helen Lebeller (MC) def. Samantha Gough, 6-2, 6-2. Charissa Pruim (MC) def. Judith Hosie, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3. Sarah Swan (MC) def. Diane Walker, 6-3, 6-4. Betty Chaves (CC) def. Rachel Hostutler, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3. Jane Howe (MC) def. Asa Andersson, 6-3, 6-0. Angie Ryan (CC) def. Karen Wild, 2-6, 7-5, 7-6.

"I feel real confident about my game right now," Strickling said. "My confidence is really high. This year I've learned what a nemesis my serve is to an opponent. I've begun to understand it more — and use its potential.

"But there are a lot of players who slap it back just as hard as I serve it. So there are other aspects of my game that I work on to enhance them, too. But I'm basically a serve and volley player."

THE CHAPS may find the low rankings could help them in the team standings if the team qualifies for nationals. If the national tournament seeds are determined by the rankings, MC may have a chance to knock out some of the top seeds from the top teams in early rounds denying those players a chance to score points for their team.

Of course, the sting of not being ranked highly has some immediate effects, especially for those players trying to hook up with major colleges when their junior college eligibility expires.

"I was planning on sending out letters to coaches once these rankings came out, but 21st, that's not very high," Strickling said.

Both Strickling and his doubles partner Robert Vrij, are planning a visit to Weber State in Ogden, Utah, this week while the Chaps take a break from competition. Weber State has a strong program, ranked in the top 30 in the county right now, but Strickling, for one, has higher goals.

"I'd really like to go to Arkansas. It's in the Southwest Conference where the strong tennis in this country is right now, and I'm from Tennessee originally. I like that part of the country, and my mother went there, too."

To earn the respect of Arkansas and the rest of the Southwest Conference coaches, not to mention the pollsters, Strickling will just have to prove them wrong in Ocala.

"I'M PLANNING on it, believe me."

Bulls rally to down 'Slingers

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Larry Mason, subbing for the injured Mike Rozier, ran for 100 yards and one touchdown to lead the Jacksonville Bulls to a come-from-behind 28-17 victory over the San Antonio Gunslingers in a United States Football League game Friday night.

Mason, the Bulls' leading rusher last season, carried the ball 16 times, once on a 2-yard touchdown jaunt up the middle early in the final period to give the Bulls a 21-17 lead with 13:31 left to play.

4-5A

Permian hasn't got a stopper, either as a starter or in the bullpen. Donnie Wright (2-3, 4.67) is the best on the staff with Donnie McNatt (1-2, 5.88) a distant second. Combined, the two have given up 88 hits in 58 innings of duty, 13 more than the combined one-two-three hurling punch at Lee.

FOR MHS, today's game could turn into a laugher if recent Odessa High play has anything to say about it. District teams have been scoring runs in football fashion against the Broncho pitching staff and defense while other teams give them up like a soccer game.

Recently, the Bronchos went down to defeat 30-2 against Cooper and lost 13-2 to Lee. The Bulldogs have seen both sides of Odessa High's game, defeating the Bronchos 18-1 in the first half of the season after rain washed out an OHS 4-0 lead in the second inning.

It's that rain game that bothers MHS coach Tim Whalen. "Even though they're not playing well, they still make me nervous."

Statistically, the Bronchos are the worst team in the league in hitting (.237) and pitching (9.04) while the Bulldogs are third in hitting (.321) and fourth on the mound (4.90).

Individually, Midland High's Ricky Castaneda (.478) is leading the way at the plate while three others are above .300: Mark Torres (.462), Kenny De La Garza (.387) and Mike Stanton (.300). OHS has only Paul Chavez (.433) and Junior Valenzuela (.370) swinging a steady bat.

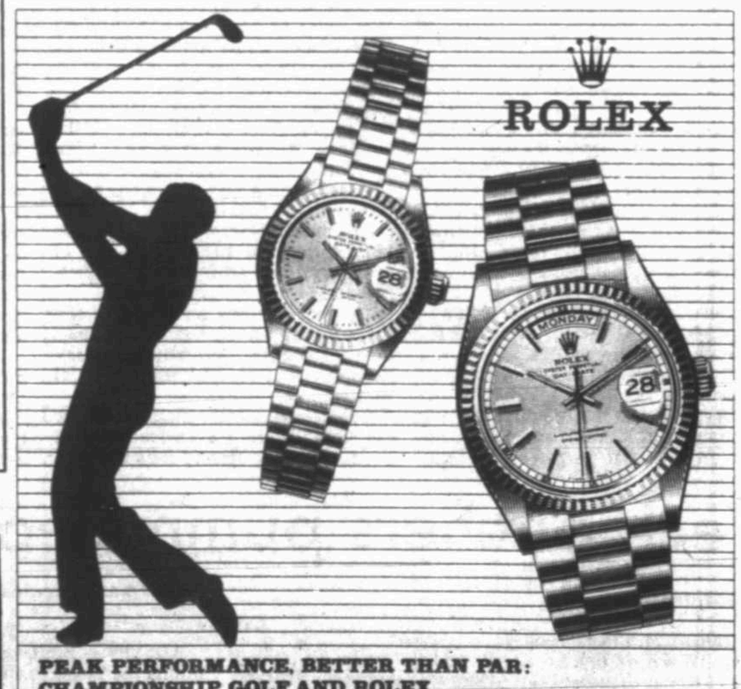

The Bulldogs have two pitchers among the 4-5A leaders: De La Garza (2.90) and Michael Gonzalez (3.94). The Bronchos have none.

JIM MURRAY

One more major leaguer to join 3,000 club

In all the long history of major league baseball, only 15 players have ever gotten 3,000 or more hits. They are all household names, a roll call of legends — Ty Cobb, Pete Rose, Stan Musial, Hank Aaron, Nap Lajoie, Willie Mays, Honus Wagner, Tris Speaker.

Sometime this season, they will be joined by a 16th, Rod Carew. The game will be stopped, TV crews will come onto the field, ceremonies will be held, and the ball will be sent immediately to Cooperstown, there to await the arrival of its hitter.

And sometime in 1986, this regal crew may be joined by a guy who wears a zero on his back and who might as well have played in a mask and under an assumed name all these years, for all the attention anybody paid. He might as well have had a question mark on his back. When he passes the milestone, 50 million people will ask "Who?"

Al Oliver is so little known you'd think he came to fix the plumbing. The guy who lives next door to him must think he spies for a living. A night watchman is more of a celebrity. Oliver leaves the house every night and disappears like a safecracker. You'd think he couldn't cast a shadow or see himself in a mirror. The player without a number is a man without a name.

It's one of baseball's enduring mysteries. You'd think Oliver would be able to get his name someplace besides the back of his uniform — if not in lights, at least on the cover of The Sporting News once in a while.

No one in the game today ever struck a ball with more consistency and authority than Mr. Zero. He has rattled 2,676 hits off his bat. The interesting thing is that, of the Hall of Famers ahead of him on the hit list, most of them took a significantly higher number of times at bat to get to their plateaus. Almost all of them played 1,000 or more games.

Lou Brock, for instance, got 3,023 hits — in 10,332 times at bat. Pete Rose, of course, went to bat 13,411 times to reach 4,097 hits at the end of last season. Carl Yastrzemski stepped in 11,988 times for his 3,419 hits.

All Oliver has needed for his 2,676 hits were 8,783 times at bat. He could, conceivably, achieve his 3,000th hit in fewer appearances at the plate than any of them.

Like all of them, like all good hitters everywhere, Oliver has more hits than games played, a ratio, in his case, of 2,676 to 2,272.

None of which solves the mystery of what does Al Oliver have to do to get noticed — solve the Middle East crisis? Balance the budget? Control the climate. It's clear he's been going about it all wrong. Being the best hitter, pound for pound, in his league won't get it. The public must want him to do card tricks, too.

Usually, when a player's exploits outrun his recognition, baseball nods wisely and looks for the story on why there is no story. The fellow has to be something anathematic. A clubhouse lawyer, for example. That worthy who starts more mutinies than he does rallies.

Or, he is whispered to be "not a team player." This can mean a variety of unspeakable things but, since baseball is not precisely a team game, it seldom means much of anything if the guy leads the league in hitting — as Oliver has done. It's pretty hard not to help your team when you bat .331 or get 209 hits in a single season — as Oliver has done.

Sometimes, management accuses a hitter of protecting his average, chopping line singles or bunting his way on with men already aboard base. But Oliver's 214 major league home runs are a respectable total for a player who strikes out as seldom as he does, only 28 times one year. He's not a wild swinger, just a hard one. His 1,295 runs batted in are more, for example, than Pete Rose, Mike Schmidt, Steve Garvey or George Foster have. Oliver holds the bat down at the end, all right. He's not a clubhouse anything. He just uses it to shower, like everyone else.

Oliver, in fact, is as mystified as anyone else over his invisibility. "I would think you guys (the press) would be delighted with me," he says. "I never ducked in a trainer's room from an interview in my life. I never screamed at any official scorer for charging an error on a hard-hit ball. I talk to people whether I go 0 for 4 or 4 for 4. I like interviews. I like to talk."

Therein may lie the tale. The press, you see, or that part of it involved in the sporting scene, is sometimes like the lovelorn suitor in "Of Human Bondage." It thrives on rejection. The chase is the thing, not the conquest. Inaccessibility titillates it. Challenge stimulates it. Steve Carlton got more press, not less, when he stopped talking to the media. Howard Hughes became twice as famous in absentia than he had been in person. Garbo made a career out of it.

Al Oliver has to cultivate a snarl. He has to build in a sneer he can call upon when the press descends on his locker room cubicle. He has to learn to say, "What kind of a pitch was it? I don't know, I just hit 'em, I don't analyze 'em! What kind of a bush question was that?"

He has to learn to disappear when he goes 0 for 5, and, if possible, to push a microphone into the face of somebody who asks a question he doesn't care for. He has to study aloofness, to practice menacing silences and learning to say, "Do you mind getting your cameras to hell out of here, I have to get dressed."

Journalists like ballplayers who let them use such words as moody, temperamental and controversial. Common politeness excites their suspicion. It irks them.

It would help if Oliver could, somehow, incur the enmity of two or more of his teammates, provoke the kind of feud that, after all, made Steve Garvey famous. It might help to go around bad-mouthing the manager or the general manager, or both. Journalists, like the hero in Rock Hudson movies, love it when you're angry.

It's sure-fire headlines if you miss planes and buses. The 11 o'clock news would much rather have you miss a bus or a signal than a homer.

If you do all of these things, you don't need 3,000 hits. Which is a good thing. Because, if you do all of these things, you probably aren't going to get 3,000 hits. But you're going to get a lot more ink than a guy who does. Just ask Al Oliver.

Gilmore goes nuts in second half as Spurs tip Kings

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Artis Gilmore scored 27 of his 31 points in the second half as the San Antonio Spurs took a 117-112 victory over the Kansas City Kings Friday night in National Basketball Association play.

Gilmore hit 10 of 15 second-half field goal attempts, compared with one of four in the first two periods, to help ward off the rallying Kings.

The victory upped San Antonio's record to 41-40 while the Kings fell to 31-50.

San Antonio's Mike Mitchell was the game's top scorer with 34 points and Johnny Moore was the Spurs' only other scorer in double figures, with 16, all in the first half.

Eddie Johnson led Kansas City's balanced scoring attack with 21 points.

The Spurs led at intermission, 59-53. After six lead changes and 10 ties in the second half, Gilmore put San Antonio ahead to stay with two straight field goals, the first coming on a stuff with 4:52 left to play. Gilmore's tip-in at 4:14 made it 107-103.

Gilmore had 10 rebounds as the Spurs won the battle of the boards, 55-43, while LaSalle Thompson led the Kings with 10.

Clippers 115, Rockets 110

HOUSTON — Marques Johnson scored 24 points, 20 of them in the first half, to lead the Los Angeles Clippers to a win over the Houston Rockets.

Johnson hit 10 of 12 from the field in the first half as the Clippers bounded to a 66-56 lead at intermission.

Houston outscored the Clippers 10-4 in the first three minutes of the third period to cut the deficit to 70-66. But the Clippers pulled ahead 93-83, outscoring Houston 8-2 in the final two minutes of the period.

Los Angeles dominated the boards early in the fourth quarter, increasing its lead to 107-88. The Rockets battled back to pull within five points behind the shooting of Robert Reid, who chipped in 10 points.

Michael Cage contributed 21 points and Norm Nixon added 19 points and 15 assists as the Clippers improved their season record to 31-51.

The playoff-bound Rockets, 47-34, were paced by Ralph Sampson with 19 points.

Pistons 102, Bullets 96

DETROIT — Terry Tyler scored 18 points and Isiah Thomas set a National Basketball Association single-season assist record, carrying the Detroit Pistons to a victory over the Washington Bullets.

Thomas had 17 points and 21 assists, giving him 1,110 assists to eclipse the old mark of 1,099 set by former Piston Kevin Porter during the 1978-79 season.

Thomas set the record with his 11th assist of the game with 8:36 to play in the second quarter when he fed Tyler for a 12-foot jump shot.

During a brief ceremony, Thomas was given the game ball and received an ovation from the crowd of 17,483.

Detroit trailed 87-86 midway through the fourth quarter, but Dan Roundfield's jump shot capped a 12-4 spurt as the Pistons took a 98-91 lead with about two minutes left.

Cavaliers 109, Knicks 108

NEW YORK — Ron Anderson hit a 25-foot, 3-point goal with two seconds left in overtime as the playoff-bound Cleveland Cavaliers handed the New York Knicks their 11th straight defeat.

Anderson, who led the Cavaliers with 25 points, also saved the game with a 12-footer with one second left in regulation to tie the score 96-96.

76ers 111, Pacers 105

PHILADELPHIA — Julius Erving tossed in 28 points as the Philadelphia 76ers held off a furious Indiana comeback and defeated the Pacers.

Philadelphia led by 19 points on three occasions and held a 94-78 advantage after a jump shot by Clint Richardson with 10:31 left in the game. However, the Pacers then went on a 23-10 surge, closing within 102-99 on two free throws by Vern Fleming with 4:01 to go.

After an Erving field goal, Indiana's Clark Kellogg scored five straight points to tie the score at 104-104 at the 2:29 mark. The Sixers then scored the game's final six points, including four by Erving, to seal the victory.

The 76ers never trailed in the game and jumped out to a 21-5 advantage on a layup by Maurice Cheeks with 5:46 left in the first quarter. Philadelphia led 62-49 at the half and 67-49 with 10:30 left in the third quarter, but Kellogg scored eight points in a 19-10 Indiana run that narrowed the score to 77-68.

Philadelphia then tallied 10 straight points to post an 87-68 lead on a layup by Charles Barkley with just under two minutes left in the third quarter.

Phoenix 96, Utah 92

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Rod Foster scored 11 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter, including a pivotal 3-point goal with 1:26 remaining, as the Phoenix Suns beat the Utah Jazz.

Phoenix, which trailed 32-22 after the first quarter, 54-49 at halftime and 74-72 after the third period, took its first lead of the game at 88-87 on Kyle Macy's jumper with 3:31 left.

The lead then see-sawed until Foster sank his second 3-pointer of the quarter to put the Suns up 93-91.

Bucks 115, Celtics 113

BOSTON — Backup Center Paul Mokeski sank two free throws with no time left in overtime to lift the Milwaukee Bucks to a victory over the Boston Celtics despite 47 points by Larry Bird.

Bird had tied the score 113-113 with an off-balance, three-point field goal with five seconds remaining in the extra period. After a timeout, Mokeski dribbled to the foul line and took a desperation shot. The shot missed, but Boston center Robert Parish was called for a foul.

The victory was Milwaukee's 10th in 12 games and fourth in five games this season over Boston. Boston had a nine-game home winning streak snapped.

Two straight field goals by Parish in the final 1:02 of the fourth quarter erased a four-point Milwaukee lead and tied the score 103-103 after regulation play. Milwaukee got the first six points in overtime and led 111-106 with 1:59 to go. Then Bird got Boston back in the game with a pair of field goals that made the score 111-110 with 34 seconds remaining.

Ricky Pierce, who had a season-high 24 points, then hit two free throws with 15 seconds left, giving Milwaukee a 113-110 advantage.

Hawks 119, Bulls 108

CHICAGO — Dominique Wilkins scored 11 of his game-high 31 points in a torrid fourth quarter to lead the Atlanta Hawks to a victory over the Chicago Bulls.

The Bulls were leading by as many as 16 points late in the fourth quarter. But Wilkins, Eddie Johnson, and Antoine Carr blitzed the Bulls with hot shooting to all but dash their hopes of finishing better than seventh in the NBA's Eastern conference for the post-seaoson playoffs.

The Hawks outscored the Bulls 14-2 in a six-minute flurry in the fourth quarter and handed the Chicago their 43rd loss of the year against 38 wins. With a win, the Bulls could have tied the Washington Bullets for the sixth playoff spot. Washington lost to Detroit 102-96 Friday night.

Led by Michael Jordan's 28 points, the Bulls built up a 65-54 halftime advantage and moved ahead 81-65 with 6:07 remaining in the third quarter.

Blazers 131, Mavs 111

PORTLAND, Ore. — Kiki Vandeweghe scored 28 of his 38 points in the first half as the Portland Trail Blazers raced to a 131-111 National Basketball Association victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

It was Portland's first victory over Dallas in five games this season.

Portland and San Antonio are tied for the fifth place at 41-40 in the Western Conference standings with one game to play. The fifth-place finisher will meet Dallas in the opening round of the playoffs, while the sixth-place team plays Houston.

Vandeweghe connected on 15 of 18 field goals and hit all eight free throw attempts. He hit 12 of 13 from the field as Portland raced to a 67-50 halftime lead. Blazer guard Jim Paxson, who had 22 points, was 10 of 13 from the field as Portland hit 56 percent of its shots.

The performance was a contrast to Portland's 38-point loss at Utah 24 hours earlier. One of the differences was rebounding, with the Blazers controlling Dallas by a 46-39 margin. The Blazers also made 35 of 42 free throws.

Portland held Dallas' high-scoring Mark Aguirre to 15 points.

Connors Lendl in semifinals

DALLAS (AP) — Jimmy Connors and Ivan Lendl struggled early but each rallied for victories Friday night to set up their semifinal match in the Buick World Championship Tennis finals.

Connors, playing with a bad back, ousted Aaron Krickstein 7-5, 6-2, 6-3 while Lendl had to go five sets to down Stefan Edberg of Sweden 3-6, 7-6 (10-8), 3-6, 6-1, 6-2.

Saturday's other semifinal matches Joakim Nystrom of Sweden and Tim Mayotte.

Nystrom advanced in Thursday's quarterfinal games by upsetting No. 1 ranked John McEnroe, and Mayotte surprised 4th ranked Mats Wilander of Sweden.

Connors had to go 69 minutes to win the first set, then breezed through the final two sets.

Team with worst record healthy, playing hard

Associated Press

The Minnesota North Stars entered the Stanley Cup playoffs with the worst record of the 16 qualifiers, including a 1-6-1 mark against the Norris Division champion St. Louis Blues. But being healthy has made a world of difference for the National Hockey League team.

"We've got an awful lot of players we didn't have then; it makes a difference," Coach Glen Sonmor said Thursday night after Minnesota jumped off to a 2-0 series lead with a 4-3 triumph over the Blues. Now the North Stars, 25-43-12 during the season, are at home for the next two games, starting Saturday night, in the best-of-five series.

Keith Acton and Willi Plett scored two goals apiece and and Gilles Meloche turned back 41 shots to lead Minnesota Thursday night.

"If we do well in the playoffs, nobody's going to remember you played that bad all season," Acton said. "We've got a chance to redeem ourselves for a terribly embarrassing season."

Washington, Philadelphia, Edmonton, Winnipeg, Quebec and Chicago hold 2-0 leads as the teams switch sites for the next two games of the divisional playoffs starting Saturday night. In the other series, Montreal and Boston are deadlocked at 1-1 going into Saturday night's play in Boston.

In Thursday night's action, Washington defeated New York Islanders 2-1 in double overtime; Philadelphia beat the New York Rangers 3-1; Edmonton topped Los Angeles 4-2; Winnipeg downed Calgary 5-2; Quebec edged Buffalo 3-2; Chicago ripped Detroit 6-1, and Montreal stopped Boston 5-3.

The Islanders hope a switch to their home ice will help after losing two straight overtime games to the Capitals. New York used to excel in extra session, winning six in a row and 21 of 26 such postseason games entering the 1985 playoffs. Mike Gartner's disputed goal 83 second into the second overtime pulled it out for Washington.

Referee Don Koharski denied the Islanders' heated claim that Washington's Greg Adams was in the crease with goalie Kelly Hrudey. Koharski said that Gord Dineen, an Islander defenseman, had pushed Adams into the crease.

Rookie Todd Bergen registered two goals and goalie Pelle Lindbergh made 38 saves as Philadelphia downed the Rangers. Bergen got the winner at 5:23 of the final period, then Ilkka Sinisalo added a cushion goal. The series now shifts to Madison Square Garden.

The Flyers Ron Sutter sees a possible sweep. "If we play like we did here (Philadelphia) we can win in New York," said Sutter. "The Rangers threw everything at us they could and we beat their challenge."

Mark Napier and Mike Krushelnyski scored 42 seconds apart in the third period for defending champion Edmonton against visiting Los Angeles. Napier's goal broke a 1-1 tie.

Host Winnipeg got third-period goals from Scott Arniel, Laurie Boschman and Ron Wilson to beat Calgary.

Automakers reveal bonuses

By EDWARD MILLER
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT — Ford Motor Co. announced Friday it paid former Chairman Philip Caldwell a $630,000 salary and $950,000 bonus for 1984, more than he received a year earlier, when auto executives' pay brought criticism from unions and the Reagan administration.

The disclosure was made in Ford's yearly compensation announcement for the top five officers. Caldwell was in his final year as the first non-family head of the nation's No.2 auto company.

General Motors Corp. said salary and bonus for Chairman Roger B. Smith and GM's other top four officers would be released later in the day.

The 1983 bonuses for Caldwell, Smith and their management teams set off a wave of criticism against the U.S. auto industry.

Ford said its former President Donald Petersen, who has replaced Caldwell as chairman, earned a salary of $487,000 and a bonus of $750,000 for 1984.

Caldwell also exercised nearly $2.5 million in stock options in 1984 compared with $5.9 million the previous year, Ford said.

The executive promoted to replace Petersen as president, Harold Poling, made $390,000 in salary and $700,000 in bonus.

Chrysler Corp. said it might release its bonus figures Friday, but would give no firm date. Its figures will be for 1983 because the No. 3 carmaker was late last year in arranging its bonus plan.

The company turned a $701 million profit that year and tripled that to $2.4 billion in 1984. Executive bonuses will reflect that.

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca was critical of Smith and Caldwell's 1983 bonuses and said company directors would redesign the Chrysler bonus system so more money would be paid to lower-rank executives and less at the top. However, Iacocca never released the Chrysler figures.

Chrysler's 1984 payouts won't be released until next year.

"We'll be out of sync forever," company Vice President Baron Bates said Friday.

GM made a record $4.5 billion in net profits last year, despite costly strikes in the United States, Canada and Europe.

Ford made $2.9 billion, also a company record.

The bonus and salary disclosures were made in the company's proxy statements to shareholders in preparation for their annual meetings later this spring. Federal law requires that the total compensation of the top five officers of each company be published.

Last year's reports showed that in 1983 Smith made $625,000 in salary and $866,000 in bonus for running the world's second-largest industrial corporation, for a total of about $1.5 million.

Caldwell, who passed the reins to Petersen on Feb. 1, made a salary of $520,000 for 1983 and a bonus of $900,000, for a total of more than $1.4 million. In addition, Caldwell made millions in stock options.

Petersen made a $413,000 salary and $700,000 bonus for 1983, for more than $1.1 million, as Ford president.

The auto industry made a combined $6.15 billion profit in 1983. In 1984, Big Three profits approached $10 billion.

The United Auto Workers union used the 1983 payouts as ammunition in its contract talks with GM and Ford last year. The White House used them to claim that the industry had recovered from its depression of the early 1980s and that quotas on Japanese car imports should be eliminated or relaxed.

Some Cabinet members joined in criticism of the large bonuses.

Japan has announced plans to increase its car shipments to the United States by 25 percent.

American Motors Corp. released its proxy statement last month and it contained no bonuses. The document said the company won't turn "significant profits" until it expands its car line into larger, more profitable vehicles. A

BOWLING BEAT

Gutierrez, Roberson knock out 700-plus series

By RANDY ISENBERG

Tommy Gutierrez, 290 game and 722 series bowled at Dellwood Lanes in the Chicano Men's League, and Duane Robersons 267 game and 722 series bowled in the busy Mens League at Fairmont Park Lanes, paced bowling in Midland for the past two weeks.

Carol Gibson paced the women with a 615 series bowled in the City Classic Ladies League at Dellwood Lanes to pace the women. Top performer at Fairmont Park was Claudette Welch, who rolled a 582 series while bowling in the Southwestern Bell League.

Earl Phelps rolled his first 700 series, a 708, paced by a 247 game. Earl also rolled a 264 game and 638 series during the week. Phelps' bowling is an example that practice, practice and more practice is a prerequisite for bowling improvement.

Bowling Tip: This weeks bowling tip comes from Mike Lastowski, a Fair Lanes corporate staff person in charge of that organization's Pro Shop and instruction department. Fair Lanes operates 106 bowling centers throughout the United States and Puerto Rico. Lastowski, won the prestigious ABC Masters in 1983.

The background on this lesson deals with controlling ball deflection, the importance of equipment, and the importance of developing skills to increase the bowlers accuracy in controlling ball deflection and therefore resulting in more strikes.

As you may recall in a previous column, Bo Burton stressed the importance of practicing spares, and improving shotmaking to making each person a better bowler. Burton's practice suggestion was to roll a few games by using your first ball to shoot critical spares, the 7 pin and the 10 pin for instance and the second ball to practice your strike ball. Lastowski's lesson deals with making more strikes by controlling ball deflection.

Lastowski, recommends that every serious league bowler own at least two bowling balls. One that will hook moderately on fresher conditions, and one that will go straighter on conditions that are drier. It is a fact, that better equipment does have less ball deflection, every bowler should realize, that the ABC record holder for the most 300 games with 27, including 8 during the 1966-67 season, Elvin Mesger accomplished this feat without the aid of the popular urethane bowling ball, but also accomplished this record before the mandatory 3lb. 6oz pin, and fire-resistant water based and urethane lane finishes.

Lastowski describes a perfect strike, as one that begins with ball striking the 1-3 pocket for righthanders, the 1-2 for lefties, around the 17th board. (There are 39 boards on a bowling lane, spanning 42"s. in width, and the distance to the headpin from the foulline is 60 feet. After striking the headpin, the ball will strike the 3-5 and 9 pins for righthanders. Lastowski, explains that there are no such things as "taps" when it comes to bowling. For instance, when the 4 pin is left, the ball has come into the pocket "high", causing the headpin to crowd the number 2 pin, sending it sliding past the 4 pin. If the ball is pulled towards the pocket by the bowler, 4-6 combination splits are often the end result. If the ball rollsout, and does not "finish" strong, this is the result of the bowler not following through properly with enough lift or extension, and sometimes the 4-9 split may be the result.

Perplexing single pin leaves such as the 10 pin or the 8 pin are also explained by Lastowski. On the 10-pin the ball is striking the 3 with more impact than the headpin on its direction into the pocket, causing the 3 to strike the neighboring 6 pin at an angle on its leftside sending the 6 in front of the 10 pin. The skilled bowler who practices frequently, learns to feel his game, so as to know when the ball rolled although accurately directed towards the pocket, will not necessarily result in a strike.

The 10 pin for instance is created by an approach that may have been rushed slightly quicker than the best tempo allows for an individual bowler, and thus resulting in a ball that may slide more through the head section of the lane, the first 15 feet, than the required strike ball release. Solid 8 pins are often caused by releases rolled too good, (unless the bowler has slid the ball into the pocket and escaped without leaving the 8-10 a common pocket split), and the ball collects the 5 pin fully, sending it straight back to the "mat", and leaving the 8 pin.

Lastowski's practice tip is this: During practice, the bowler should experiment with different hand positions, to learn to make the ball go a little straighter than normal, or to hook more than normal. These techniques will allow you to match your shot to the condition on which you are confronted with. Equipment is important only to the degree in which your equipment is fitted and to the degree in which you have developed your own skills. Skills learned through diligent practice will enhance your bowling scores consistently, and will enable you to maximize the benefits derived from your equipment selections.

Current Midland bowlers who have developed their games through diligent practice are: Professionals, Charlie Lacy, who developed his own unique "off the approach" approach, Randy Canales, who cashed in this week's PBA stop in Garden City, New York, after only two months on the circuit, and top notch league bowlers, Bill Theobald, the city's average leader, Tommy Gutierrez, Monica Elger, Karen Joran, Earl Phelps, B.J. Williams, who made it to the regional state finals of this year's Miller National Doubles tournament and cashed, Bill Larson, Wanda and Pete Zepeda, Elaine and Sherman Wright, and many others who spend a lot of time practicing and are fast becoming excellent bowlers.

Tournament Notes: Midland's City bowling tournaments get underway beginning April 13th. Tall City Lanes is playing host to the Midland Womens Bowling Association's tournament, while Dellwood Lanes will host the team event and Fairmont Park Lanes will host the doubles and singles event of the Midland Bowling Associations men's city tourney.

Dellwood Lanes has been selected as the site for the 1986 Regional Miller National Doubles site for West Texas, and Fairmont Park Lanes will host a Grand Prix Youth Tournament in June.

Personnel Notes: Guy Conley has been named General Manager of Bowling Operations for World Class Bowling Centers in Midland. Conley has been an associate of this organization's parent company since February, 1977, and has been instrumental in bringing to Midland bowling centers excellent insights into Pro Shop operations and Food service.

Football team gets tips on passing — Courses

By CAROL CIRULLI
Irving Daily News

IRVING (AP) — Spring training for the Irving High School football team came with a new twist this year.

Instead of working on the football field every day to build their physical endurance, the team is staying in the weight room some days to prepare for next season in another way — they are learning new study habits.

Every Wednesday, Irving head football Coach Jim Bennett is holding academic workshops for his players. Bennett invites teachers to give presentations which he hopes will help the players pass all their courses.

Bennett hopes the workshops will help those students who might not be allowed to play football because of the new state rule that prohibits failing students from participating in extracurricular activities.

In Irving, about 24 percent of the high school athletes who participate in the major spring sports were benched for six weeks because of failing grades.

Bennett does not want to see the same thing happen to his team this fall.

"The concept behind this was to give our kids every advantage — make every effort that we could to get them to the point where they would pass," he said.

Wednesday, special education teacher Jennifer Laster gave the players some tips on test-taking. She said she is optimistic the workshops will make a difference.

"I think it's great. We're trying to find a solution for all the problems, and until we do something about it, there are going to be failures," Ms. Laster said.

The workshops began with a four-day series last week. At week's end the players were asked to rate the program. "All of the kids rated it real high," Bennett said. "They've been very attentive, and that's sometimes hard to do in the weight room," Bennett said.

Junior John Kinser, who plays guard on the team, agreed the workshops are helpful. "It does a lot of good. Everybody likes it. We're going to have a whole lot of extra people eligible."

"They know how I am about off-season. We don't waste time. Last week when I told them we were having a four-day workshop, they couldn't believe it," Bennett said. "They knew it was out of the ordinary not to be dressing out. They knew it was serious to me, so they took it seriously."

But the team's academic preparation does not stop in the locker room.

Bennett has assigned each player to a coach who will monitor his academic progress on a weekly basis. Even though the education reform bill only requires grade checks every six weeks, the weekly grade monitoring will continue for the football players.

Any player who is failing a class, is issued a Tutoring Report Attendance Page. It is used to verify that students who are failing one class attend tutoring sessions three times a week. Those failing more than one class are required to attend tutoring sessions five times a week.

"If those kids don't want to do that, we get an indication that they don't want to be in the program, so we get them out," Bennett said.

When next season comes, its unlikely that all players will be passing all classes. But that's what Bennett would like to see.

Godoy gets Boston Marathon okay, drops out

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Marathon, already under fire, appeared to have dodged its latest bullet, this one involving a Colombian runner, but in the end, it backfired on the race.

Minutes after the Boston Athletic Association, the race organizer, had agreed Friday to allow Carlos Godoy to compete in Monday's race, following a published report that he had submitted a phony qualifying time, the 33-year-old Colombian native decided to withdraw.

"The problem is not really running," Godoy said. "It's something more than that."

The problem involved the distress he said he felt about a story on the front page of Friday's Boston Herald that accused him of lying about his qualifying time and which said he had "a history of questionable running incidents."

"My lawyer said, 'Don't attempt to run Boston this year,'" Godoy said by telephone from his home in Glendale, Calif., where he is the track coach at the local high school. "So I cancel it.

"There's too much pressure now," an angry Godoy said. "I lost my concentration completely. I don't feel I could run a good race. I'm very upset at this point.

"This is a very critical and serious situation."

The newspaper story quoted Colombian long-distance runner Domingo Tibaduiza and the president of the Colombian Athletic Federation, Ederth Artunduaga, whom Godoy said was the secretary not the president, of calling Godoy "a liar." And it said that two American race directors, Rich Castro and Tom Sturak, who knew Godoy, had labeled him a "con man."

"I don't need to lie," Godoy said. "For what reason?

"They're trying to destroy my name. It (the story) is incorrect.

"This is a complete surprise to me. Why me?

"How can I go to Boston, when they (the newspaper) say I'm a liar?" he added. "I can't.

"I can't believe it. I would like to clear this up, because I can't accept this.

"I'm the guy on the front page. I don't need that."

Godoy got on the front page when the newspaper reported that his qualifying time of 2 hours, 14 minutes, 41 seconds on his entry application was incorrect.

Godoy explained the time was his personal best, run in the Fukuoka Marathon in Japan in 1978. The published report had claimed that Godoy submitted that time as having been run in the Beppu Marathon in Japan, where he allegedly finished fourth.

But there was no record of his having finished fourth in the Beppu race in either 1984 or 1985, the newspaper said.

Godoy said he recorded his qualifying time of "2:20:41 or 49" this year in a marathon in Chorilo, Mexico.

Off the strength of his submitted time of 2:14:41, he was given No. 6 for the Boston Marathon.

Friday, after a meeting of race officials, it was decided that Godoy would be assigned another number, to more correctly represent his time "of between 2:20 and 2:30," said Len Luchner, a member of the BAA's Boardof Governors.

Numbers are assigned according to seeding, with the fastest runners receiving the lower numbers.

"We are not going to disqualify him," Luchner said. "He is sending us a copy of his true times to let the press know that he did not intend to deceive the BAA."

Ironically, Godoy would have started the marathon next to South African Mark Plaatjes, whose ineligibility to compete was confirmed Thursday by The Athletics Congress, the national governing body for track and field.

Plaatjes had been assigned No. 5.

BEFORE YOU BUY A GERMAN IMPORT, TAKE A LOOK AT THE IMPORT GERMANS LIKE BEST.

Every year, West Germany's leading automotive journal, Auto Motor und Sport, invites its readers to vote for the world's best cars.

For each of the last three years, they've named the Saab 900 Turbo "the best imported car . . . under 2,500 cc." Each year, Saab's margin over the nearest competitor has been enormous.

We're deeply gratified at such high praise from drivers who constantly deal with high-speed autobahns, alpine switchbacks and $2.00-a-gallon gasoline. And we're pleased to be so highly regarded in a country that produces some of our nearest competitors.

So, if you're considering buying one of the cars that Germany exports, you should have a look first at one of the best cars Germany imports.

By JAN TOMAS

SONORA, Texas (AP) — The first thing to notice about George Hoffman is a dollar-sized lion's tooth which hangs on a gold chain around his neck.

The sharp, gold-encircled tooth is a fitting symbol for the professional big-game hunter, who conducts safaris through the Sudan, Mozambique, Rhodesia, South Africa, Tanzania and Angola for six months each year. He is one of about 10 Americans who guide hunters in Africa.

Hoffman's living room is a preservationist's nightmare. A 58-head collection of game trophies adorns the walls. A greater kudu, sprouting long, curving horns, leans three feet away from the wall. Two giant elephant tusks curve around the fireplace while a cape buffalo commands space above the mantle. A stool, made from an elephant's foot, sits in a corner.

A complete, stuffed leopard creeps behind two couches. A lion skin, along with other animal hides, lies atop the wall-to-wall carpet.

The trophies educate a visitor. One sees the enormous size of the cape buffalo; its horns rest on its head like a dowager's hat. A black sable head is turned sideways, its neck huge and powerful, the horns gently curving backward.

THE 49-YEAR-OLD Hoffman "retired" five years ago from a petroleum and mining engineer's career to conduct game safaris full-time. While employed in New Mexico and Colorado, he guided people on deer and elk hunts in his spare time. A hunter all his life, Hoffman said he dreamed of earning a living as a guide. But the hunting season in the United States was too short for that occupation.

In 1971, Hoffman visited Africa on business. Thinking this would be his only opportunity to hunt on the Dark Continent, Hoffman cashed in his life savings and borrowed money to join a three-week safari.

The safari changed Hoffman's life.

Carl Sandberg told of a chameleon who got along very well adjusting moment by moment to his environment. Then one day the lizard had to cross a scotch-plaid garment. He died heroically trying to relate to everything at once.

Sometimes we nearly kill ourselves doing the same thing. Discover with us what's really important.

Patient Tabby

Swaying on a limb outside my kitchen, a bird flapped his sleek black wings and curved his throat in a burst of pure beauty.

"Watch out!" I wanted to cry. For over by the woodpile Tabby crouched, carved in predatory silence. Stone-like she stared, as the bird warbled, and even after the songster flashed off in a streak, she sat impassively.

How like our Tabby we humans sometimes are. Caught in the frenzy of making a living, stalemated with problems, we look indifferently at our world. Forgetting that God reveals Himself in simple ways, we overlook the laughter of a child, the smile of a stranger, and the flaming colors of our landscape.

Your church can show you how to find joy in life again. Within its fellowship you can learn the happiness which comes from loving God and serving Him.

Graham's son called in different way

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

They're both tall and lean with those direct, penetrating eyes. Both have that strong jaw, the introspective smile. Both boost the Christian faith. But Billy Graham's son is doing it in his own way.

"We move in the same direction, but I can't be a little Billy Graham Jr.," says the famed evangelist's offspring and namesake, the Rev. William Franklin Graham III. "I just don't have that calling.

"God has called me into another area."

The elder Graham, now 66, and the world's most widely heard minister, serves the Gospel with his Bible-studded preaching, but his closely resembling son, 32, pursues the same cause with deeds.

"I want to be faithful, too," he said in an interview. "But I do it through social action. I never wanted to ride on my father's coattails."

Young Graham, admittedly something of a hellion until his early 20's, now is president of Samaritan's Purse, an unusual, innovative agency for enabling overseas churches to help their own poor and meet emergencies.

"Everything we do in crisis areas of the world is done through the local churches, and they get the credit for it, not some foreign agency," he said. "That lifts them up and strengthens the message on the scene."

Samaritan's Purse, named from the parable of the Good Samaritan who helped an injured Jew instead of passing him by like others, acts as a kind of broker or middleman between U. S. contributors and Third-World churches.

Supported by individual donors and congregations enlisted through young Graham's preaching visits, the interdenominational organization channels its funds or materials to overseas churches in zones of dire need.

They do the relief work themselves.

"It's not our program, but that of others," he said. "It's done for the needy regardless of faith, but it gives the churches in the areas the opportunity to show the love of God in Jesus Christ."

Graham's organization, based in Boone, N. C., about 80 miles from his father's mountain home at Montreat, dispensed $3.2 million last year in underwriting overseas church projects for the needy in about 100 countries.

Projects range from building houses — more than 200 of them — for Lebanon refugees to planting income-producing coconut trees on poor family plots in India to digging wells there, 2,000 so far, and plans for well-drilling rigs in Ethiopia.

"There's great satisfaction in doing something for people and seeing the results," Graham said. "It's evangelism, but not in the sense of my father's."

Young Graham said he found in a study of Jesus' miracles that they always stemmed from compassion. "He could not pass by the lame, the sick people and the hurt. He would always stop and do something about it."

Afterward, the accounts say, "and many believed," Graham noted, adding:

"He lifted them out of a ditch and they believed in him. I believe that's what he wants us to do today in a hurting world, to heal, feed and lift out lives from the ditch so they might believe in the person of Jesus Christ.

"That's why all our work is through the local churches in the areas of need."

While the work of Samaritan's Purse is extensive, it stays lean itself with a staff of only about 20 and operating budget of $330,359 a year, less than 10 percent of its outlays in aid, a markedly low overhead.

Graham, one of five offspring of the globe-girdling evangelist and his wife, Ruth, including three older married sisters and a younger brother still in college, said they had ordinary, rural childhoods.

"We never hobnobbed with the wealthy," he said. "Mountain kids and farm people were my friends. My parents still live very simply in the same log house I grew up in."

But in his late teens, Graham said he had an errant streak, that he smoked, drank, drove fast cars, earned a pilot's license and got kicked out of his first try at college for skipping classes and assignments.

"I never rebelled against anything my parents stood for, but I was just interested in having a good time, living for myself," he said. He said hi parents never nagged him, seeing his activities as "symptoms of a deeper spiritual problem."

"I always loved my parents very much and knew they loved me," he said.

Although converted at age eight, he said he hadn't made Christ "the Lord of my life" until one night, at about 22, on a transcontinental drive across Europe, he had an experience in which he surrendered his will to Christ, promising to live by his leading.

Back home, he re-entered college, was graduated from Appalachian State University at Boone, married and settled down with his wife, Jane. They now have three sons, one a 10-year old named William Franklin Graham IV.

Graham, six-foot-one, an inch shorter than his father, resembles him in face, build and manners, but his eyes are hazel rather than blue like his father's and his hair brown rather than his father's greying blond.

"I'm as much interested in evangelism as my father, but in a different sense," he said. "I don't believe the son who tries to follow a famous father's foosteps ever succeeds.

"All my life, I've seen how people used Billy Graham, even relatives. I'm not going to use my father like everyody else. There's nothing macho about it. It's just out of love for my father.

"I'm not trying to imitate him, but to be exactly what my heavenly Father wants me to be to serve his purposes and plan for my life."

Bishops vow critics won't silence religious voices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leader of America's Roman Catholic bishops vowed Friday that critics won't silence religious voices on political issues, then illustrated his point by taking a new slap at officials who see Central America as a battleground for world powers.

Bishop James Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, also said no military solution to problems in the region — into which the Reagan administration has channeled considerable military aid — "is either possible or desirable."

Malone, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, made his remarks in a speech to the annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Noting criticism of church leaders' speaking out on such issues, Malone declared that the U.S. Constitution guarantees religious freedom and that "we do not purchase religious freedom at the price of silencing religious voices."

He said many critics who contend the church leaders should stick to more traditional church business really object to the conclusions they reach rather than the fact that they speak out.

And he said he and his "brother bishops" were committed to continuing to publicly address such controversial public issues as abortion, nuclear war, the U.S. economy and conflict in Central America.

In that latter conflict, President Reagan and other U.S. officials have talked of a danger of spreading international communism as a main reason for American support of rebel groups in Nicaragua and the government in El Salvador.

"We do not deny the significance of regional and geopolitical factors," Malone said. However, he added, "we have consciously resisted giving primacy to the geopolitical interpretation which views Central America as primarily an East-West problem."

The local situation, not any global power struggle, is of first importance "in understanding the conflict in Central America," he said. "Essentially, we have argued that long-standing injustice and human rights problems are the first cause."

THE HOLY SPIRIT: TEACHER IN RESIDENCE

There is now no condemnation awaiting those who belong to Jesus Christ. For the power of the life-giving Spirit--and this power is mine through Christ Jesus--has freed me from the vicious circle of sin and death.

We aren't saved from sin's grasp by knowing the commandments of God, because we can't and don't keep them, but God put into effect a different plan to save us. He sent His own Son in a human body like ours--except that ours are sinful--and destroyed sin's control over us by giving Himself as a sacrifice for our sins.

So now we can obey God's laws if we follow after the Holy Spirit and no longer obey the old evil nature within us. Those who let themselves be controlled by their lower natures live only to please themselves, but those who follow after the Holy Spirit find themselves doing those things that please God.

Following after the Holy Spirit leads to life and peace, but following after the old nature leads to death, because the old sinful nature within us is against God. It never did obey God's laws and it never will. That's why those who are still under the control of their old sinful selves, bent on following their old evil desires, can never please God.

But you are not like that. You are controlled by your new nature if you have the Spirit of God living in you. (And remember that if anyone doesn't have the Spirit of Christ living in him, he is not a Christian at all.)

Yet, even though Christ lives within you, your body will die because of sin; but your spirit will live, for Christ has pardoned it. And if the Spirit of God, who raised up Jesus from the dead, lives in you, He will make your dying bodies live again after you die, by means of this same Holy Spirit living within you.

UMC choir to present free concert

The Chancel Choir of First United Methodist Church will present a free concert of choral music in celebration of the 300th birthday of George Frederic Handel and Johann Sebastian Bach at 7:15 p.m. Sunday in the church sanctuary, Main and Illinois streets.

Included on the program will be the Easter section of "The Messiah" by Handel and Cantata 96, "Lord Christ, Thou Only Son of God," by Bach. Also featured during the concert will be a vocal solo, "My Heart Ever Faithful" by Bach, performed by Jane Kisner, associate director of Music Ministries, and the Toccata and Fugue in d minor for organ, performed by Brad Kisner, director of Music Ministries at First UMC.

Handel and Bach were both in 1685 in Germany and, although each were prolific composers and music leaders of their time, they never met.

Handel's "Messiah" was written in the time period of 24 days and first performed in 1742 in Dublin. It is one of the greatest and most widely performed masterpieces of choral music.

The Bach Cantata No. 96 was written for the 18th Sunday of Trinity and first performed in 1724 in Leipzig where Bach was at the time employed. This cantata is rarely performed.

The choir will be accompanied by members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra and Carol Hall, organist of First UMC. Bert Bostic, director of music at St. Luke's UMC, will be the guest soloist.

Child care will be provided. The public is invited to attend.

The Pollard family, from left Brandon, Billy, Kaye and Misty, will speak at the Foursquare Church of Midland Sunday.

Pollards will speak at church

The Billy Pollard family, missionaries to New Guinea, will be the special speakers at the Foursquare Church of Midland, 415 E. Alta Ave., at 10:45 a.m. Sunday.

The Pollards, who are from Dumas, are working out of the Australia Foursquare Church, which is part of the International Church of the Foursquare Gospel.

After working as missionaries in Australia for six months, 18 months ago the family took over directorship of the Lighthouse Bible College in Madang, Papua New Guinea. Pollard serves as director of the college and family members serve in leading evangelistic projects. The Pollards will be returning to New Guinea in June.

Toto tries to shed its faceless image

By WALTER BERRY

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Toto, the Grammy Award-winning rock band, is trying to shed its faceless image and has embarked on its first U.S. tour in three years.

"It's kind of like we're starting all over again," says guitarist Steve Lukather.

The group, which won six Grammys in 1983 for its "Toto IV" album, was on a 50-city "Isolation" tour with a new lead singer, Dennis "Fergie" Frederiksen. "Isolation" is Toto's first LP in two years.

Former frontman Bobby Kimball and bassist David Hungate left the group last year over "personal differences and reality differences," said percussionist Jeff Porcaro, 31. "David just wasn't into show biz. His priorities changed. Same thing with Kimball."

Toto took a 28-month hiatus in October 1982 following a show at London's Hammersmith Odeon.

"We had to regroup and see what we wanted to do. That's why it took so long in between albums," said Lukather. "We were looking for a sex God, someone little girls could throw their underwear at. A good frontman, that's something we never really had. Our live gigs never came up to our records. Now I think it does. The best is yet to come."

The 33-year-old Frederiksen, formerly of the heavy-metal bands "Trillion" and "Le Roux," was suggested to keyboardist Steve Porcaro by Toto's tour manager, Chris Littleton.

"He fits in like a glove," said bassist Mike Porcaro, one of three brothers in the band. "Fergie's a good looking blond guy who's a gymnast and got a great physique. If Fergie went out there in a G-string, we'd be playing stadiums now. He knows how to work a crowd. Bobby was timid on stage. We're five times the band live now."

"We've finally found our chemistry for touring," Porcaro said. "It's how we've always pictured it being. All the pieces are there now."

"This is the real Toto," said keyboard player and vocalist David Paich, 30. "I can see this lineup lasting another six to 10 years."

When Kimball and Hungate left Toto, however, there was speculation that the band was finished and they would go back to being exclusively sessionmen.

The work of Paich, Lukather and the Porcaros can be heard on albums by Michael Jackson, Paul McCartney, Eric Clapton, Boz Scaggs, Aretha Franklin, George Benson, David Gilmour, Donna Summer, Billy Preston, the Tubes and The Brothers Johnson.

Toto also wrote the soundtrack to the movie "Dune" and the boxing theme "Moodido" for Columbia Records' "The Official Music of the XXIII Olympiad Los Angeles, 1984."

"This is the original faceless band," said Mike Porcaro, 29. "Everybody in this band has probably done 500 albums in their careers. We're double-scale studio musicians. You get $300 for a three-hour session. You don't get royalties."

"People get impressed with a salary like that — $100 an hour. They go, 'Wow, what a lucrative business you're in!' There's no mega-millionaires here," said Steve Porcaro, 27. "Session work is not a steady thing at all. You do eight of them in one week and then go three months without any. That's the way it really is."

Toto started taking shape when "Paich, Jeff and I had a band in junior high school," Mike Porcaro said. "Lukather and my brother Steve had a band right after us and they even kept the same name."

Lukather said they were "the oldest high school garage band" in Los Angeles. The two bands merged in 1976 and Toto took its name from the dog in the movie, "Wizard of Oz."

'Space' has all 'the right stuff'

ENTERTAINMENT

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — The maxiseries "Space" takes viewers on an exhilarating mission that floats effortlessly amid fact, fancy and fireworks, recapturing the tingly drama that once surroundeded those red, white and blue heroes who hitched rocket rides through the sky and our imaginations.

CBS will broadcast the $32 million, 13-hour television adaptation of James Michener's best-selling novel on five consecutive nights, Sunday through Thursday.

Warning: this is don't-miss viewing. So clear the week's calendar for the grandest commercial TV epic of the season.

Schmaltzy soap opera, where the only space is between the sheets, this isn't. It is, however, everything "The Winds of War" never was — intelligent, insightful and funny. Even the romance is mostly credible and purposeful.

And America's former love affair with space will be tapped with stirring scenes recalling the space-launched goosebumps from the early flights.

"Space" captures those times, while emotionally touching major themes from the 1950s, '60s and '70s: the fickleness of press and public about space, the public's insistence on making mortals who had walked on the moon into larger-than-life heroes, the civil strife during the Vietnam War, the civil rights struggles of blacks and homosexuals, and feminism and conflicts within two-career families.

The production doesn't go overboard on the science fiction. Special-effects junkies won't get their kicks until the fourth part, but the real NASA footage melds nicely with the artificial stuff, and Part Five's walk on the moon (actually the Paramount lot) is not cheesy at all.

"Space" will immediately grab you. The elaborate musical opening sets a momentous tone, alternating the violins of surrealism, the synthesizers of science and the rock 'n' roll of reality, all with pictures to match.

Then the character introductions, normally slow going, will hook you for good. "Space" is the story of five men, and their women, whose lives connect and are dominated by America's space program from the 1940s to the 1970s:

— James Garner, who gets top billing while the rest of the cast takes alphabetical turns in the credits, plays war hero Norman Grant who becomes a U.S. senator and cheerleader for the federally funded space administration.

Garner is solid as a rock as the politican who lets his principles get in the way of his power struggles. Grant's wife (Susan Anspach) is a strange one, a homebody who can't find happiness (sexual or otherwise) with or without Norman. Her character is never fully fleshed out.

— Bruce Dern, thoroughly likeable in a rare TV appearance, is Dr. Stanley Mott, an engineer who delivers key German rocket scientists to America at the close of World War II. Dern becomes nursemaid and confidante to these new immigrants and their big IQs.

— Dieter Kolff, played by the classy Michael York, is the featured German. Working out of Texas, then Alabama, his genius guides the space program and helps overtake the Russians and their Nazi braintrust.

— Harry Hamlin plays straight-arrow astronaut John Pope. Hamlin is the weakest link, mistaking John Glenn-type virtuosity for blandness. His relationship with his girlfriend-wife Penny (Blair Brown) is the least interesting match, and their constant separations and reunions are grating.

Flamenco troupe smashing in U.S.

By MARGARET GORDY

NEW YORK (AP) — There are no flashing smiles, no snapping fingers, no raised eyebrows. When he speaks — in rapid-fire Spanish — nothing moves but the hand that brings a chain of cigarettes and tumblers of Scotch to his lips.

Indeed, nothing in the stillness of the slender, brooding man slouching on a couch would indicate that he's the famous flamenco dancer, Antonio Gades.

Then he pins you to the wall with his smouldering gaze, and you suddenly understand why he was asked to create Spain's first national ballet company, why his latest movie won two prizes at the Cannes Film Festival and why his flamenco troupe's North American tour is a smash.

It has little to do with flamboyance and everything to do with will.

"Flamenco is something you feel inside," he said severely. "It's not a technique, but a culture, a people — their sorrows and their joys. The steps mean nothing. The costumes mean even less."

To prove his point, Gades has brought his group of 22 dancers, singers and guitarists to New York with a live version of "Carmen," danced in street clothes. Not a red ruffle nor black hat will be seen. As a further challenge, he has staged the 90-minute show at City Center without a break.

"I have two enemies — rich ladies and barmen. The ladies because they can't show off their dresses at intermission, and the barmen because they can't sell drinks," the 48-year-old Gades said in an interview.

The risk is compounded by the fact that Gades is competing with the memory of a half-dozen productions of "Carmen" shown in New York last year — including his own movie version.

"I couldn't care less!" he growled. "We are not here to teach anybody a lesson, but to do the most honest piece of work possible...We hold nothing back."

Five years ago, Gades and director Carlos Saura became the first artists to record a full-length story in flamenco, with the film "Blood Wedding." In 1983, they took it a step further by making a film version of "Carmen" that mixed a realistic plot with a surreal ballet, and Spanish folk music with French opera.

Though some would argue that what resulted bore little resemblance to flamenco, Gades defends it as mere refinement — "the difference between elegance and vulgarity."

"I go against the current," he said. And he's had lots of practice at it.

Rape recantations part 'of trauma syndrome'

By TAMARA JONES
Associated Press Writer

Counselors and investigators say it is not unusual for women who have been raped to recant their accusations, but such denials generally follow soon after the crime, and because the victim fears retaliation or the ordeal of a trial.

Recantation is "part of the rape trauma syndrome," says Lt. Audrey Martini of the Detroit Police Department's sex crimes unit.

However, experts say that such recantations typically follow within days or weeks of the rape. None could cite a false recantation several years after a rape.

In Illinois, a judge concluded Thursday that Cathleen Crowell Webb had made such a false recantation, six years after testifying against a man convicted of raping her.

The motives behind false recantations vary, and experts in the field believe most involve cases where the victim was raped by a relative or acquaintance.

A New York coed who was beaten in the face and raped by her date recanted the charges after telling a detective she didn't want to ruin his career because he was a medical student.

In 1982, a 20-year-old woman in Delaware said she had falsely accused a man who had already served two years for rape. But when the case came up for a hearing, the woman changed her testimony again, saying a men's rights activist had pressured her into falsely recanting the charge.

While some recantations are undoubtedly genuine, "the overwhelming majority" are phony, said Clare Holzman, a counselor at New York City's Women Against Rape crisis center, which handles some 1,500 cases annually.

Woman now willing to stand trial

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — A woman who could not convince a judge that she lied about being raped six years ago challenged prosecutors to try her for perjury, while a distraught Gary Dotson, the man she once accused, was sent back to prison Friday.

"I'd like to see a jury of my peers hear the truth," said Cathleen Crowell Webb, who said the court "did a great injustice" by refusing to believe her now.

Dotson, 28, told reporters in a barely audible voice that he was "very upset" as he was returned to the Joliet Correctional Center, but vowed to continue his quest for release.

"We're working on it. That's all we can do," said Dotson, of suburban Country Club Hills.

Gov. James R. Thompson said he had received calls from Dotson's relatives and others seeking his release, but ruled out any immediate action.

"The issues are factual and legal, it's not a matter of public opinion," Thompson told a news conference.

Mrs. Webb, who had accused Dotson of raping her in 1977, stood by her contention that he is innocent. "And I'd like to see the court try me now (for perjury), and the other six witnesses," she said in an interview.

"And I'd like to see a jury of my peers hear the truth," said Mrs. Webb, 23, who was reared in suburban Homewood and is now a mother of two living in Jaffrey, N.H. Her husband, David Webb, was by her side.

Gary Dotson

Cathy Webb

Terry Levin, a spokesman for the Cook County state's attorney, declined comment Friday on the possibility of perjury charges.

Circuit Judge Richard Samuels ruled Thursday that Dotson did not prove his case "and I cannot find that perjury was committed" in his trial.

Samuels, who had sentenced Dotson in 1979 to 25 to 50 years in prison on the rape and aggravated kidnapping charges, said Illinois court rulings made it difficult to accept recanted testimony. New witnesses who appeared on Dotson's behalf failed to "establish the credibility of Cathy's recantation," he said.

"I do not know for what reason Cathy Webb got up on the stand and told us what she did," Samuels said in court. "That is best known to her."

Dotson had been freed April 4 on $10,000 bond after Mrs. Webb had stepped forward to recant her testimony.

Dressed in a yellow jumpsuit, he was returned by bus Friday to Joliet Correctional Center with 147 other prisoners from Cook County, said state Corrections Department spokesman Nic Howell.

"He is distraught," Howell said. "We are going to take him over to the institutional hospital to talk to a psychologist and-or psychiatrist to see if they can help."

Howell said Dotson would be sequestered there, probably in a room alone.

Dotson won't be eligible for parole until 1988.Petitions for clemency are submitted to the Prisoner Review Board, which makes recommendations to the governor.

Dotson's mother, Barbara, 48, said in an interview that she had talked with her son twice Thursday night, which he spent at the Cook County jail. She said he assured her he was all right, although he was sedated "to calm him down."

"He knows we're out here fighting for him," Mrs. Dotson said.

Mrs. Webb said she had fabricated the July 9, 1977, rape because she feared she was pregnant and didn't want her foster parents to know she had had sexual relations with a 17-year-old boyfriend.

Mrs. Webb said her religious beliefs and conscience prompted her to come forward.

"We don't know what God's reason for doing this is," Mrs. Webb said on NBC's "Today" show, referring to the judge's ruling. "But all things work together for the good of them that love the Lord.

"I just have to have faith that everything is going to work out for Gary's good," she said. "And I have faith that the Lord is a just God and he knows that Gary is innocent, just as much as I know it and Gary knows it."

Reagan, Bush reveal income taxes

By W. DALE NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his wife Nancy paid 34 per cent of their earnings in 1984 federal income tax but Vice President George Bush and his wife, Barbara, paid only 13.5 per cent, the White House disclosed Friday.

The Reagans' return, released here and in Santa Barbara, Calif., showed that they paid $147,826 on $440,657 in income, which included the president's $200,000 White House salary and $115,608 in interest from various sources.

The Bushes' return, also released at the White House, showed that they paid $11,753 in federal income tax on an adjusted gross income of $87,239. The vice president's salary is $97,900 and he reported $10,936 in interest earnings, but said he lost $54,337, most of it on a financially troubled apartment complex in Houston, Texas.

In 1983, the Reagans paid just over 30 percent of their income in federal taxes and the Bushes paid 12.8 percent.

The Reagans are due a refund of $14,605 because they had $162,431 withheld from his salary or already paid to the federal government in estimated tax payments. Rather than collect the refund, Reagan said he wanted the money applied to his 1985 taxes.

Bush had $28,198 withheld from his salary, entitling him to a refund of $16,463. He chose to get the money rather than have it applied to the next year's taxes.

The president, who once said he believes in tithing or giving 10 percent of income to charity, reported contributions of $20,616 or 4.7 percent of his total income. He and his wife gave $5,000 to his alma mater, Eureka College in Illinois, and $4,786 to the National Federation of Parents for Drug Free Youth. The rest of the contributions were not itemized.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said in Santa Barbara, Calif., that the president is "a personal and private giver" to organizations and people that do not make him eligible for a tax deduction.

The Reagans are due back at the White House Sunday from a 10-day vacation at their ranch in the Santa Ynez mountains, 50 miles north of Santa Barbara.

The Bushes gave $8,215, or about 9.4 per cent of their adjusted gross income, to charity. The contributions included such items as $500 to the American Red Cross, $250 to the Episcopal Church Foundation and $100 to the fire company kn Kennebunkport, Maine, where Bush maintains a home. None was over $1,000.

Speakes said the president signed his return Tuesday when his accountant, Roy D. Miller, visited the ranch, and the return was sent to the Internal Revenue Service center in Fresno, Calif.

The tax form revealed that Reagan lost $114,000 in 1984 in his blind trust, into which his holdings were placed when he became president.

Asked if Reagan was unhappy about the performance of the trust, Speakes replied, "I haven't talked to him about it."

The loss by the blind trust was up sharply from 1983, when a net loss of $11,425 was reported.

As he has in the past, Reagan said he did not want $1 of his taxes to be applied to the presidential election campaign fund, which finances candidates for president. Bush did choose to have the dollar go into the fund. The Federal Election Commission said the Reagan-Bush committee received $40.4 million in federal funds for the 1984 campaign. Speakes said the president is opposed to public financing of campaigns but accepted the money because other candidates were.

The Reagan return showed that Mrs. Reagan received $89 from a rerun of a "Diff'rent Strokes" television show on which she appeared and $24.50 for an appearance on "Hour Magazine." Speakes said Mrs. Reagan is obligated by her union membership to accept payment for these appearances. The Reagans, both former film performers, took a $98 deduction for union and professional dues.

They received $3,600 from the government in rent for a radio tower on their ranch which Speakes said is used as a navigation device for commercial aircraft flying up and down the Pacific Coast. He said the Reagans have had this arrangement for several years.

The vice president's press office said a blind trust agreement, which originally prohibited disclosure of the vice president's returns, was amended last year so that the returns could be released provided no information about the trust's investments was disclosed.

The announcement said this agreement requires the return to be reviewed by the Office of Government Ethics before a copy of it is made available to the vice president.

In 1983, the Bushes paid $18,305 on an adjusted gross income of $142,117.

The vice president's press office said the main reason for the lower tax in 1984 was that the Bushes paid $54,671 in tax-deductible interest to the Internal Revenue Service last year. Most of the interest was occasioned by a tax deficiency of $144,000 arising from a rollover of the capital gain on the sale of the Bushes' Houston, Texas, residence in 1981, and tax treatment of leftover campaign funds contributed to the Republican Party, the annoucement said.

The IRS increased Bush's 1983 tax bill by $198,000 last March after disallowing a tax deferral that Bush claimed in 1981 on profits from the sale of the Houston home, which he tried to "roll over" when he purchased his property in Maine.

The announcement said the Bushes lost $41,000 in connection with their interest in Ponderosa Forest, an apartment complex in Houston in which they invested in 1977. The complex was sold in 1981 and the Bushes reported a gain of $131,671 from the sale. The announcement said the purchaser was unable to keep up the mortgage.

Trip to cemetery stirring reaction

WASHINGTON (AP) — A veterans group said Friday it is "terribly disappointed" that President Reagan plans to lay a wreath in a German cemetery where Nazi soldiers are buried, and Jewish organizations voiced outrage and pressed the White House for a change.

While administration officials said they might reconsider, Jewish leaders said they were flooding the White House with calls, letters and telegrams. Chairman Elie Wiesel said he was convening an emergency meeting Monday of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Council, all Reagan appointees, to appeal to the president.

"I have rarely seen such outrage," said Wiesel, a survivor of two Nazi death camps. 'I know the president. I know this is not his sentiment."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan was "concerned" about the harsh reaction to the planned visit.

"Yes, he is disturbed that anybody would question his sensitivity," Speakes told reporters in Santa Barbara, Calif., where Reagan is vacationing.

In a statement relayed through his spokesman, Reagan said, "While we remember the past with deep sorrow, we must look to the future with a firm resolve that it will never happen again."

Reagan earlier had decided not to visit a concentration camp during his visit, which coincides with the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II, saying he didn't want to reawaken "the memories and...the passions" of those times.

Speakes said the president's itinerary for the European trip was in a draft form and could change, but he added that the cemetery stop planned for early next month remains on the schedule at this point.

Father-daughter team tackles chores on farm in North Texas

By SYLVIA JONES

LOCKETT, Texas (AP) — In a period when hard times on the farm are making national headlines, a Wilbarger County father and daughter are working hard to make the "gamble" of farming pay off.

Rather than take her bachelor's degree in elementary education into the classroom, Carlie Ann Streit, now 28, came home to the Lockett community the day after graduation from West Texas State University in May 1979 to become a hired hand in her father's farming operation. A year later she and her father formed the partnership of Homer and Carlie Streit Farms.

The father-daughter team currently farms some 340 acres that are family owned and 660 acres of wheatland leased from the W.T. Waggoner Estate.

"Farming is a gamble," said Carlie, "and lot of hard work. You have to like it. You can lie in bed and take it easy, but, if you do, your crops will blow away."

But, Carlie worries little, if any, about the perpetual element of risk in her work. She is very serious about farming, but "takes life as it comes one day at a time."

She said about her chosen vocation, "I like it and hope I never have to do anything else."

She can remember as a 6-year-old how she liked to drive her dad's Ford tractor around the vacant lot adjoining the Streit home which then was on Beaver Street. Even then she knew that she wanted to be a "real farmer" someday. When she was a high school student, she began to work with her father as a hired helper.

During one of her early visits to a local cotton gin, she convinced herself that being a farmer was possible for her. It was there that she saw Avis Judd, also engaged in farming, bringing in her cotton crop. Although Ms. Judd normally only oversees the actual work done on her more than 1,000 acres, she represented a successful role model for the young girl who thought, "If she can do it, by George, I can do it, too."

In 1975, Carlie graduated from Vernon High School and was ready to begin working full time. But her mother, Virginia Streit, told Carlie that she had to go to college first if she wanted to farm.

"So I packed my bags real quick," said Carlie.

She spent two years at Vernon Regional Junior College before going on to WTSU. While majoring in education with a minor in art, she also earned credits in golfing and bowling and was on the VRJC bowling team.

Fishing during summer and hunting during winter are now her favorite sports — which she enjoys at every opportunity.

Cooking is something else she really loves to do. She is the number one luncheon chef for her parents and herself in their home located just across the field from her own house.

A typical day begins about 5:30 a.m. After breakfast and the daily chore of feeding chickens, hogs and her "critters" (three cats: Tuffy, Buff and Tippy-toes, and a part German shepherd-part golden retriever dog: Muffin), Carlie meets with her father to plan the day's work.

The day can be long, especially in the summertime when work usually lasts until 9 p.m or later.

Many of the winter days are used to get machinery and equipment ready for the heavy spring and summer schedule. A large metal shop-barn, built by the farming partners, provides a warm place for this work — as well as space for a relaxing solitary game of pool or group parties which are frequently initiated as fish fries.

Carlie is very much at ease with any task involving their big tractors. In January she hired out to help a neighbor strip cotton, but had none of her own to harvest.

NATION IN BRIEF

IRS offering its help

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service said today it is offering extended hours of service this weekend for people who need help filing their federal income-tax returns.

The toll-free telephone hot line will be open between 1 and 5 p.m. local time Saturday and Sunday to answer tax questions only. Questions about refunds and other clerical problems should be delayed until regular business next week.

On Monday, the deadline for filing, the toll-free lines and walk-in service at various IRS offices will be open until 6:30 p.m. local time.

The telephone numbers open over the weekend are the same ones in use through the week for taxpayer assistance. They are listed in the instructions that accompany the tax forms received from the IRS.

Wholesale prices rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose a modest 0.2 percent in March — the first increase of the year — as a grab bag of price gains for everything from baby clothes to furniture offset declines in gasoline and food, the government said Friday.

Inflation at the wholesale level has gone up just 0.3 percent in the past 12 months, the smallest gain in 20 years. Analysts predicted the good news will continue as Americans reap the benefits of a strong dollar and oversupplies of oil and food.

The 0.2 percent March increase in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index followed a 0.1 percent decline in February and no change in January.

Food costs dropped 0.2 percent in March, the third monthly decline, as lower prices for beef, poultry and fish offset a big 16.7 percent jump in vegetable prices.

Gasoline prices dropped 0.8 percent even though prices at the pump actually rose 1.7 percent, according to the department's survey. Since prices normally rise 2.5 percent during this time of year, the department's seasonal adjustment translates the smaller gain into a decline.

Shultz seeks 'response'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz urged the new Soviet leadership Friday to abandon "various propaganda ploys" and respond to American proposals for deep reductions in nuclear weapons.

"We have put interesting propositions on the table," Shultz said in an interview. "Our negotiators are there (in Geneva), ready for give and take. But we haven't been responded to."

Stepping up U.S. criticism of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's public arms control proposals, Shultz said "he offered us the sleeves from his vest, we examined them carefully and found there was nothing there."

Gorbachev's offer to freeze new Soviet nuclear missiles in Europe until November and other proposals for joint weapons restraints "showed little sense of change there," Shultz said.

Burned boy improving

CINCINNATI (AP) — A Florida boy who was badly burned by a bomb when he opened what he thought was a Christmas present has made a remarkable recovery and should be able to go home soon, hospital officials said Friday.

Eleven-year-old Paul Jewell told reporters one of the first things he wants to do is go fishing.

His right leg was mangled in the blast and was amputated below the knee Dec. 29, two days after he was flown to the Cincinnati hospital. He has since undergone 15 other surgical procedures, most of them skin grafts to repair his burns.

Ticket selling battled

NEW YORK (AP) — Frequent fliers who receive mileage awards are being courted by brokers who buy the free tickets and sell them at a discount — a practice the airlines don't like but can't seem to stop.

Frequent fliers who sell their tickets risk being kicked out of the awards programs, and travelers caught using discount tickets from brokers risk having the tickets taken away. But the airlines concede that the system is almost impossible to police.

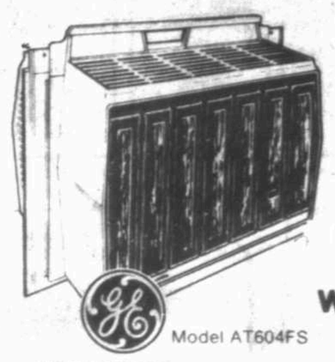

The major airlines began frequent flier programs in 1981 to attact customers by awarding free flights based on mileage flown. Delta, for example, offers a free round trip domestic coach ticket for 40,000 miles flown, and a free round trip trans-Atlantic ticket for 110,000 miles flown.

Milk probe 'proper'

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois' new chief health official said Friday the 2-week-old salmonella investigation has been conducted properly despite the sudden firing of his predecessor and the mounting number of milk-borne cases in the Midwest.

Standing outside the suburban Hillfarm dairy that processed the suspect milk, Inspector General Jeremy Margolis, acting director of the Illinois Department of Public Health, said all agencies involved "have been conducting a proper... capable investigation."

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Be a leader in the months ahead, but recognize when it would be best to defer to someone with greater experience. No one expects you to have all the answers. Financial backing is forthcoming for a special project. Be patient. A cautious investor wants to be sure he/she has every bit of available information. Romance forces you to make a long overdue decision. Follow your heart. Community activities involving children prove especially rewarding. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: country singer Loretta Lynn, actress Julie Christie, Rod Steiger, Cincinnati Reds player-manager Pete Rose, Bradford Dillman, Sir John Gielgud, historian Arnold Toynbee.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Home and family affairs claim your attention. A sermon or talk proves inspiring. Go ahead and mix business with pleasure if traveling today. A child shares an important secret.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Relatives may be difficult to please today. Take a trip to the country or spend time with old friends. You could get the urge to test your "green thumb."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New approaches lead to new solutions for old problems. Give more thought to tax and insurance matters. Take advantage of the cooperative spirit you sense at home. Plan a special outing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will probably want to stay close to home today. Postpone a trip. Family gatherings prove especially enjoyable when everyone shares the cooking chores. Something thought lost forever reappears.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A drive in the countryside provides a wonderful change of pace. Take the entire family along. This is not a good day to make a major financial or real estate decision.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept 22): Devote more time and thought to family matters. A candid chat with mate relieves tension. Pay bills on time to protect your credit rating. Romance is a source of both pleasure and mystery.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A well-organized trip will be worth the extra effort. Be careful not to divulge secrets at a family gathering. Someone is counting heavily on your discretion. Watch what you say and do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Friends are a source of real joy today. Greater communication will bridge the generation gap. Write to parents. Romantic partner wants you to be more tactful and understanding. Make fewer criticisms.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Adjust your schedule to accommodate family member's needs, even if it means postponing some personal pleasures. A close neighbor is willing to help out in an emergency. Show your gratitude.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A teenager needs special attention now. Be a good listener and refrain from asking too many questions. A short trip or family outing proves very refreshing. Take along a camera.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A great day for new personal relationships. Be extra careful when driving. An emotional confrontation could arise if you act too rigid with teenagers. Use persuasion, not threats.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Loved one is not telling you all of the facts. Be diplomatic and you will discover how to help mate or partner. Put your keen intelligence to the best possible use.

Fifth heart implant planned

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — With all tests completed, Jack C. Burcham spent a quiet day with his family Friday at Humana Hospital Audubon, where he will become the world's fifth recipient of a permanent artificial heart this weekend.

"He's in excellent spirits," said Humana Inc. spokesman Bob Irvine. "We're letting him build up strength for the operation Sunday morning. He has a good sense of humor and is quick to joke around."

Irvine said the 62-year-old retired railroad engineer from Le Roy, Ill., has shown a strong will to live and is eager for the implant, the third at Humana.

Burcham, who will be the oldest person to receive the Jarvik-7 heart, "has been talking things over with his wife and children, naturally."

Dr. William DeVries said Burcham is in better health than his three previous implant patients and, therefore, will be a good test of the experimental heart. The Jarvik-7 pump also was inserted into an unidentified patient in Sweden last Sunday.

The mechanical heart has been keeping William Schroeder alive since Nov. 25. Schroeder suffered a series of strokes and a flu-like illness after the implant, but was discharged from Audubon last Saturday, making him the first such recipient to live outside the hospital. He and his wife are living in a specially equipped apartment, owned by Humana, across the street from the hospital.

Murray Haydon, whose heart was stitched into his chest Feb. 17, is still in the intensive care unit at Humana, recuperating from breathing problems.

DeVries' first implant patient, Barney Clark, survived 112 days after his surgery at the University of Utah on Dec. 2, 1982.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newspapers should open themselves to community views and treat people with greater empathy to counter perceptions that they are biased and too often invade individual privacy, editors were told Friday.

Those recommendations were contained in a report presented to the annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Entitled "Newspaper Credibility, Building Reader Trust," the study was conducted by MORI Research Inc. of Minneapolis and included a poll of 1,600 adults as well as a series of focus group discussions.

After the poll was conducted by telephone last December and January, 1,002 of the people contacted completed a questionnaire and had a second telephone interview.

Presenting the report to the editors, David Lawrence Jr., publisher of the Detroit Free Press and chairman of the ASNE Credibility Committee, said "some good journalists would argue that all this talk about credibility does our craft no good and maybe some damage." But, he added, the industry "ought to be willing to face up to the perceptions as well as the truth."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Is it the end for J.R.'s mother? Will Barbara ever return to Southfork?

There's no need to stay tuned to find out. Producers of "Dallas," the popular CBS television series that specializes in cliffangers, gave the game away Thursday.

Barbara Bel Geddes, who left the series two years ago after a heart attack, will return for the show's eighth season this fall as the poised and distinguished Miss Ellie, mother of the villainous J.R. Ewing, and matriarch of Southfork Ranch.

Miss Bel Geddes, 62, who underwent quadruple-bypass surgery after her heart attack in March 1983, was replaced in the show by Donna Reed. Miss Bel Geddes had won an Emmy for her work on "Dallas."

"Barbara all along had hoped to come back, and everyone had hoped so, too," said Bob Crutchfield, a spokesman for Lorimar Productions. "Donna knew this was a basically temporary situation."

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace, who has been suffering renewed pain, has refused to be hospitalized for tests and will instead be examined as an outpatient, says an aide.

Wallace, 65, was left paralyzed from the waist down by an attempted assassin in 1972. Since he returned to office in January 1983, he has made four trips to University Hospitals in Birmingham for ailments linked to the paralysis.

"The decision not to enter the hospital was made by the governor, in consultation with his doctors," said press secretary Billy Joe Camp.

Wallace has made infrequent appearances at his Capitol office during the past several days, choosing to work instead from a daybed at his office in the the Governor's Mansion.

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — Brandeis University plans to triple security for two shows by Eddie Murphy because homosexuals plan to protest anti-gay jokes by the comedian, officials say.

Fifty to 60 guards will be on duty for the concerts next Wednesday instead of the normal 20, said Moran Collins, Brandeis director of technical affairs.

The Boston Herald reported Friday that homosexuals plan to picket the shows because of Murphy's jokes about homosexuals and AIDS, the deadly disease that most often afflicts gay men.

But Murphy's co-manager, Robert Wachs, said, "Of course security is not going to be increased. Eddie Murphy is not anti-gay. He said that in Rolling Stone."

Wachs said the report is the first hint of protest during Murphy's 37-city tour, which has sold out concerts at four colleges in the past two weeks. Police reported no problems elsewhere.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — When Zsa Zsa Gabor refused to perform unless a crowd of noisy handicapped theater patrons moved their seats, it was discrimination, says the city's Commission on Human Relations.

The incident happened two years ago, but the commission's ruling came Friday.

Miss Gabor was fired after the affair and the City Line Dinner Theater has since been praised for its attitude toward the handicapped. It closed in the winter.

But the commission said the theater was guilty of discrimination because Miss Gabor was an employee at the time.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The United States may be headed for another tragedy in Central America while it glorifies its memories of the Vietnam War, says author Studs Terkel, proving that those who forget the past repeat history's mistakes.

"We, the richest country in the world, may be the poorest in memory," he told students at the University of Arkansas Thursday night. "We're taught that yesterday has no meaning."

Terkel's field is oral history. He has tape-recorded ordinary people telling of great events like World War II and the Great Depression, to contrast their stories with textbook history: "The Pharaohs didn't build the pyramids of Egypt, thousands of anonymous slaves did. The Pharaohs stayed as immaculate as Nancy Reagan," he said.

Terkel, whose appearance was funded by the Rockefeller Foundation, criticized President Reagan, the subject of many of his jokes.

MADRID, Spain (AP)— Fresh from their farewell to Moscow, a group of 13 U.S. congressmen led by Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill were given the royal treatment by King Juan Carlos Friday.

Global trade negotiations could be staged this summer

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

PARIS — The major industrial nations agreed Friday to begin preparations this summer for a new round of global negotiations on liberalizing trade, but they failed to set a date for the negotiations.

In a declaration at the close of two days of discussions, ministers from the 24 nations of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development said a new set of trade negotiations would help combat a trend toward protectionism.

The last round of global trade negotiations ended in 1979.

The finance and economic ministers also agreed to continue pursuing anti-inflation policies in order to sustain the world economic recovery and reduce unemployment.

The United States, led by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, failed to persuade its trading partners to set a date for the start of the talks. But conference sources said that probably would be done at the summit meeting of the seven largest industrial democracies in Bonn, West Germany, in early May.

Baker told a news conference he was not concerned by the European resistance to setting a date now for opening the trade negotiations.

"I'm not so sure the difference is not a difference of form rather than substance, when you consider that there was unanimity for a new trade round as soon as possible," Baker said.

William Brock, the U.S. trade representative, called the proposal for a preparatory meeting this summer "a major step forward."

Brock said he believed the preparations could be completed in six or seven months, allowing the formal negotiations to begin in early 1986.

Baker appeared to clear the way for eventual agreement on the timing of the trade negotiations when he signaled on Friday a U.S. willingness to hold separate talks on ways of improving the world monetary system.

The Europeans, led by France, have insisted that a firm commitment to trade negotiations could not be made before the United States agreed to discuss ways of limiting swings in the value of the dollar.

The closing communique said the ministers proposed a meeting of senior officials be held before the end of the summer, "to reach a broad consensus" on the content of a new round of international trade talks.

The United States, supported by Britain, Canada and Japan, had wanted the ministers to commit themselves to a starting date in early 1986.

All the countries agreed, however, on the need for negotiations.

"The avoidance of any resurgence of protectionist measures is of vital importance to sustained economic recovery and to preservation of the multilateral trading system," the communique said.

The declaration also singled out the United States and Japan for criticism.

It said large U.S. budget deficits were to blame for a rising burden of debt repayments in other countries.

It also said the strong dollar was contributing to pressures for protectionist legislation in the United States.

Sikhs say concessions not enough

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — The main Sikh political party said Friday that government concessions to its demands are not enough, and threatened a campaign of civil disobedience in Punjab beginning June 1.

Paramilitary units and thousands of police marched through Amritsar, holy city of the Sikhs, as as about 100 Sikh leaders held a strategy meeting Friday at the sacred Golden Temple.

Shopkeepers in some parts of the city locked their doors for fear of trouble.

Rajiv Gandhi's federal government announced Thursday that it was lifting a ban on a radical Sikh students' group and ordering a New Delhi judicial inquiry into anti-Sikh riots that followed the assassination of his mother Oct. 31. The government said Indira Gandhi's killers were two of her Sikh security guards.

The government said Thursday that it was considering the release of all imprisoned Sikhs against whom no criminal charges had been filed. The state government of Punjab, where members of the religious sect are in the majority, freed 53 jailed Sikh youths Friday night.

After the government announcements, which were a response to demands by the Sikh party Akali Dal, the party said the government had taken a "welcome step." It postponed agitation planned for Saturday, the Baisakhi harvest festival.

Party president Harchand Singh Longowal said Friday: "Authorities have shown some good will toward the Sikhs by accepting three of our demands but we still have four key demands. We want them to accept these or face a mass struggle."

Of the government concessions announced Thursday, former Maharajah Amarender Singh said: "Authorities took these steps because they were essential to keep the pent-up anger of the Sikhs from getting out of control. There is a lot of built-up anger and frustration among the masses because of the continuing repression in the state."

A resolution adopted at the four-hour Akali Dal meeting said, "We urge the government to repeal all the black laws in Punjab and pardon all Sikh soldiers who mutinied last June."

Thousands of Sikhs have been imprisoned under two controversial laws: the National Security Act, which allows preventive detention without trial for up to two years, and the Terrorist-Affected Areas Act, which permits closed trials in special courts.

Nearly 5,000 Sikh soldiers revolted in northern India after the Indian army stormed the Golden Temple last June to flush out Sikh terrorists holed up inside the sect's holiest shrine.

The party also demanded that the government end what it called discrimination against Sikhs and stop treating them as "anti-national."

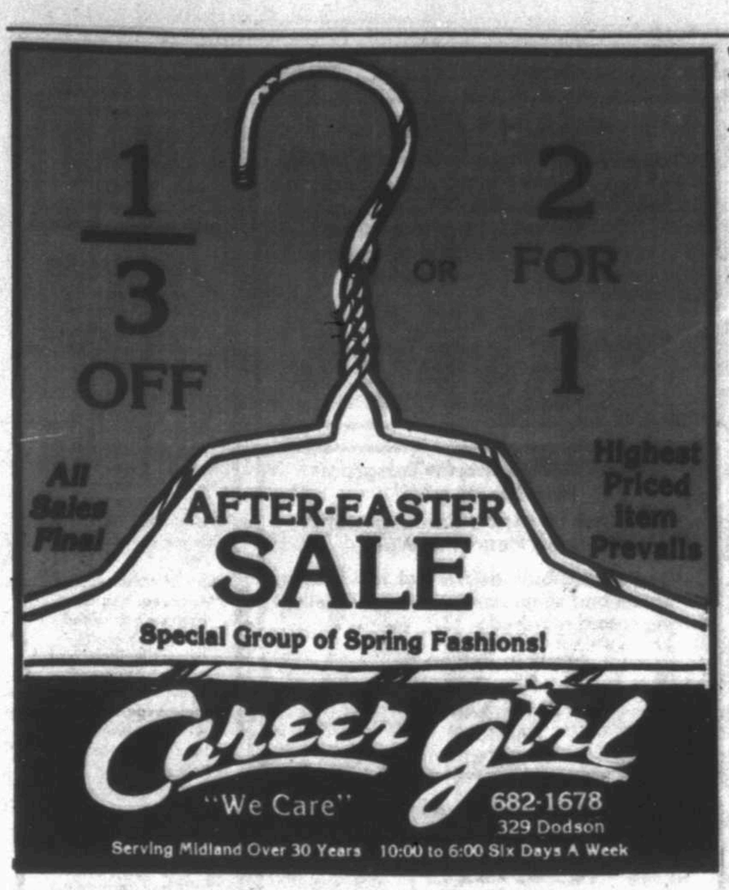

"We want greater political and religious autonomy for Punjab, but that does not mean we are seeking a settlement outside the framework of the Indian constitution," Longowal said. "It is the government which has maliciously branded us as separatists."

The party pressed for the release of all Sikhs, contending that most were jailed on "trumped-up charges."

It also asked the government to hold a judicial inquiry into the anti-Sikh riots, not only in New Delhi but in all the other 100 northern towns where they raged for four days after Mrs. Gandhi's assassination. More than 2,700 people were killed, 2,100 of them in the capital.

Akali Dal leaders said they would begin the civil disobedience campaign June 1 if their remaining demands were not met. Longowal said it would begin with "Massacre Week to commemorate the martyrdom of thousands of Sikhs in the army attack a year ago" on the Golden Temple.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Checkpoints established

NABATIYEH, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese soldiers set up checkpoints around this southern market town Friday to prevent a reoccurrence of the sectarian warfare that broke out after the Israeli withdrawal from Sidon.

The Israelis pulled out of Nabatiyeh and the surrounding hostile Shiite Moslem villages on Thursday, as part of the second phase of their planned disengagement from south Lebanon.

About 100 Lebanese army soldiers set up a half-dozen checkpoints around Nabatiyeh. Soldiers who entered the town were greeted by clapping children and women scattering rice and rose water in a traditional Lebanese welcome.

Rebel date 'unsuitable'

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte said Friday his government cannot hold a third round of peace talks with rebels on the date they suggested because of the campaign to vaccinate children set for that day.

A statement broadcast earlier this week by the rebels' clandestine Radio Venceremos asked that the next round of talks, interrupted after October and November sessions produced few concrete results, be held April 21 in the northeastern province of Morazan.

Morazan, some 100 miles northeast of the capital, has been stronghold of the left-wing guerrillas in their 5½-year-old war against the U.S.-backed government.

Peruvian election near

LIMA (AP) — Supporters of rival political parties clashed before dawn Friday in a brawl that left one man dead, police said, as the otherwise peaceful campaign for the weekend presidential election ended.

Authorities said they were reinforcing security throughout the country because of reports that leftist guerrillas planned to disrupt Sunday's balloting.

Two-months of political rallies and meetings formally ended at midnight Thursday, although candidates continued to bombard Peru's 8.2 million voters with radio, television and newspaper advertisments.

A nationwide ban on the sale of liquor went into effect at midnight Friday and continues through Sunday.

Hoxha funeral 'closed'

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Albania said Friday it does not want foreign dignitaries at the funeral of Enver Hoxha, the dictator who ran the isolated outpost of Stalinism for 42 years.

The announcement was made by Albania's Radio Tirana in a broadcast monitored here by the official Yugoslav news agency Tanjug.

Hoxha died Thursday at age 76 after a long illness. The funeral is scheduled for Monday in Tirana, capital of the tiny, mountainous Balkan country that is Europe's poorest.

Ramiz Alia, 59, who is president of Albania and is expected to succeed Hoxha as head of the ruling Communist Party, is chairman of the funeral committee. The broadcast said the decision was taken on behalf of the Communist Party, the government and Parliament.

Korean workers riot

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Pro-union workers and their student supporters on Friday battled riot police near a busy Seoul marketplace.

Witnesses said hundreds of police clad in combat gear fired heavy tear gas barrages at about 2,000 demonstrators who hurled gasoline bombs and stones, but there were no reports of serious injuries.

About 40 demonstrators were reportedly taken in for questioning.

The workers, mostly employees of small garment firms, had scheduled a rally to protest what they called government suppression of the labor movement in South Korea.

Reaction 'favorable'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, disputing press accounts suggesting Latin American sentiment to President Reagan's new proposal for a Nicaragua settlement has been hostile, said Friday that nine hemispheric presidents have commented favorably on the plan.

The department released a summary of remarks that the nine presidents have made following Reagan's call last week for a cease-fire in Nicaragua coupled with peace talks between the Sandinista government and anti-communist rebels.

Reagan has said he will withhold a resumption of arms shipments to the rebels so long as good-faith negotiations are being carried out.

Arms session brief

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Six key U.S. and Soviet negotiators and their aides met Friday for the shortest bargaining session in five weeks of superpower arms talks.

It was the first meeting to include the three principal negotiators from each side since the talks split into working groups on March 21.

The meeting was between two teams of about 20 people each headed by Max M. Kampelman for the United States and Victor P. Karpov for the Soviets. It lasted one hour and 35 minutes at the Soviet mission, a U.S. spokesman said.

Both sides remained silent on what was discussed and did not reveal who had requested the plenary session.

Mexican mobster jailed

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Ernesto "Don Neto" Fonseca, the reputed head of La Familia narcotics empire, remained jailed Friday awaiting his day in court in a case the government says may be related to the kidnap-murder of an American narcotics agent.

A midday hearing had been scheduled for Fonseca, 60, before Federal Judge Carlos Arzate Hidalgo, but the judge said "there will not be anything today." He did not indicate when Fonseca would be brought into court to hear the charges and enter a plea.

Fonseca, a reputed drug dealer for more than 40 years, was arrested Tuesday night along with 23 bodyguards and associates in the Pacific resort of Puerto Vallarta following a brief shootout with police who found a cache of high-powered weapons.

FUTURE THINK.

Who would have thought a Buick Electra could be so aerodynamic, responsive, and precise in handling? Who would have expected front-wheel drive, available multi-port fuel injection and rack-and-pinion steering in a car so quiet, luxurious, and smooth riding? Buick thinks ahead without forgetting the past. Look at the proof.

Buicks are equipped with engines produced at facilities operated by GM car groups, subsidiaries or affiliated companies worldwide.

Wouldn't you really rather have a Buick?

Buy a truck built tough enough to win the world's roughest off-road race, and you can't go home a loser.

In case you didn't know, an Isuzu just won the Baja 1000 in the Stock Mini-Pickup Class.

While that may come as a surprise to Chevrolet, Ford, Nissan, Toyota and Mitsubishi, it doesn't surprise us.

Because we've been building trucks tougher than the world's toughest roads since 1939.

And since Isuzu can survive the torturous badlands of Baja, where there are no roads, it'll certainly take any punishment you can dish out.

So if you're looking for a tough truck, here's your chance to invest in a real winner.
