Money, Not Morals, Called Key To Abortions

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

FOR MANY women today, the decision whether to have an abortion is no longer one of morals. It's one of money.

Since Texas has no abortion statutes, legally there are no obstacles here to the procedure. But the drastic cutback in federal funds for Medicaid abortions in August, 1977, has made abortion available only to those women with the money to pay for it.

"It has put abortion back into the hands of those who can afford it," says Susan Olbekson, director of Lubbock's Planned Family Clinic, and clinic directors around the state agree with her.

"Money is making the decision as to whether a woman has the right to an abortion or not," Emerson Bell, head of San Antonio's Reproductive Services Inc., stated.

And Aralyn Cepeda, clinic administrator of the Austin Ladies' Center adds, "For poor women, the choice is almost totally taken away."

The guidelines put into effect last year, after more than a year of Congressional debate, ended federally funded abortions to "income eligible" women under the Title XX program, and limited federal Medicaid abortion support to only three specific situations:

•Cases when a physician determines the pregnancy would endanger the woman's life if continued to term.

•Cases of rape or incest reported to police or health authorities, and •Cases when, in the opinion of two physicians, the pregnancy would cause severe and long-lasting damage to the woman's physical health if continued to term.

For women whose income falls below the poverty level, this means there are virtually no federal funds available to pay for abortions.

In Lubbock, Mrs. Olbekson said about 10 women a month had federally funded abortions at Planned Family Clinic before the federal guidelines were changed. Following the change, that number was cut to zero.

But at least once a week, she said, a woman — often with several children — calls the clinic, desperate because she is pregnant and cannot afford another child. But she also cannot afford to pay for an abortion.

"I have to tell them there is no federal money available, and it just kills me to do it," she said.

"We try and counsel the woman to talk to the man (about helping pay for the abortion) or help her find her own resources to pay for it."

At Planned Family Clinic, an abortion costs $200 for women in the first 10 weeks of pregnancy and $375 between the 10th and 14th week. Fees at clinics in other major Texas cities range from $150 to $500.

Many clinics only provide abortions through the 12th week, and must refer other patients to other cities or other states.

"For poor women... when you're looking at a trip out of town and a stay overnight, and then paying $350 to $400 for an abortion, there's no way," said the head of an Austin clinic.

The director of San Antonio's Reproductive Services Inc., estimates some 90 women around the country have committed suicide or died during self-induced abortion attempts because their cases could

U.N. Council Okays Peace Force For Embattled Lebanon

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. Security Council adopted a U.S. resolution Sunday calling for immediate withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon and creation of a U.N. force to restore peace along the Israeli-Lebanese frontier.

The vote on the resolution, submitted by the United States, was 12-0, with the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia abstaining. China did not participate.

Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim told the council in a report the peacekeeping force would require about 4,000 troops from U.N. member countries at a cost of $60 million "over a six month period."

He named Maj. Gen. Emmanuel Erskine of Ghana to head the "U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon." Erskine is chief of staff of the U.N. Truce Supervision Organization in Lebanon.

To Arrange Withdrawal

Waldheim said he would instruct Finnish Lt. Gen. Ensio Siilasvuo, chief coordinator of U.N. Mideast peacekeeping missions, to set up meetings with Israeli and Lebanese representatives "on the modalities for the withdrawal of Israeli forces and the establishment of a United Nations area of operation."

Council members took Waldheim's report under study.

In Lebanon, eyewitnesses and Palestinian sources said armor-led Israeli troops were pushing toward the port city of Tyre, 12 miles north of the border, and had captured a handful of guerrilla strongholds.

The reported drive, said to have begun Saturday, took the Israelis several miles north of the six-mile-deep "security belt" along the border that they had seized after launching the invasion last Wednesday. Israel said it sent the troops into southern Lebanon to rid the area of guerrillas.

Negligible Resistance

On the other side of the front line, Israeli army officers reported only negligible resistance. One officer said reports from Beirut that Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas were still fighting were "rubbish."

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin flew to the United States for talks this week with President Carter.

"The main issue ... is how to prevent those (terrorist) bands which were driven out of southern Lebanon from coming back to the bases so that they can again attack Israel," Begin told reporters in a brief statement at New York's Kennedy Airport. "That must not happen again." He flies to Washington today.

Israel's Plans Unknown

It was not clear if Israel would heed the U.N. resolution.

Israeli U.N. Ambassador Chaim Herzog said his country "is prepared to begin discussions to achieve appropriate arrangements for the return of the area presently under our control to full Lebanese sovereignty."

Before leaving for the United States, Begin said he had "a great many doubts" about stationing U.N. troops in southern Lebanon and that he would present Israeli counter-proposals to Carter.

The resolution calls on Israel to cease its military action and withdraw "forthwith" from Lebanese territory. It establishes "at Lebanon's request" a U.N. force to "confirm the withdrawal" and aid the Beirut government in restoring Lebanese authority in the region.

Before the vote, sources in Jerusalem said Israel will insist that Syria agree to block Palestinian guerrillas from returning to south Lebanon before Israel would turn the border area over to a U.N. buffer force. Syrian troops dominate the Arab peacekeeping army that has virtually ruled Lebanon since quelling the 1975-76 civil war there.

The resolution makes no mention of Palestinian guerrillas who have used south Lebanon as a launching pad for cross-border forays into Israel.

Herzog said Sunday whatever arrangements are negotiated "must prevent renewed strife, vengenace and terrorism once and for all either against Israel or

Visiting Begin Mum On U.N. Peace Role

NEW YORK (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Sunday that the main issue of his talks in the United States will be how to prevent Palestinians "pushed out of southern Lebanon from coming back."

Begin, commenting briefly on his arrival in New York, said Palestinian strongholds in southern Lebanon "must not happen again."

Begin would not make any other comment on the United Nations Security Council resolution adopted earlier Sunday demanding Israel pull out of southern Lebanon and that a U.N. peace force be installed to patrol the embattled border.

Tight Security Enforced

Begin arrived under a tight curtain of security. Two police helicopters patrolled overhead as he spoke briefly to reporters on a windswept runway after alighting from an El Al jetliner.

Begin, accompanied by Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, was to travel Monday to Washington. He was scheduled to meet with President Carter on Tuesday.

Begin and Dayan met for more than an hour in the prime minister's hotel suite with Israel's ambassador to Washington, Simcha Dinitz, and U.N. Ambassador Chaim Herzog.

Begin's spokesman, Dan Pattir, said Israel's position remained unchanged. "We want to make sure south Lebanon is not used anymore as a base" for guerrilla forays into Israel, he said.

Israel wants "to see what the Security Council has in mind," he said, adding, that whoever is put in control of the U.N. buffer force must "be in a position to see there is no resumption" of guerrilla attacks.

Pattir declined to elaborate, saying he did "not want to preempt whatever is decided."

Meeting With Kissinger

Begin was scheduled to meet former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger this morning and to fly to Washington in the afternoon after further consultations with Israeli officials.

Begin and Carter were expected to face tough bargaining on the U.S.-sponsored Security Council resolution and the U.S. mediation effort in the Middle East.

Before he left Tel Aviv, Begin said his country had "'a great many doubts" about the effectiveness of a U.N. force on the Lebanese frontier.

Punch Across Border

Israeli troops punched across the Lebanese border Wednesday and seized a six-mile-deep "security belt" along the 62-mile-long frontier. The incursion, aimed at eliminating Arab guerrilla bases in the south, followed a guerrilla raid in Israel March 11 in which 35 Israelis died.

Begin, who was accompanied to the United States by Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, would not elaborate on his proposals for a Lebanese settlement.

Lt. Gen. Mordechai Gur, Israel's military chief of staff, told reporters the Israelis wants to negotiate a settlement with the Beirut government, Syria and Lebanon's Christian community, which is allied with Israel. He said a U.N. force would not be effective in stopping guerrilla attacks on Israel unless such an agreement is reached in advance.

Syrians make up the bulk of an Arab League peacekeeping force that has virtually ruled Lebanon since quelling the 1975-76 civil war there between Christian rightists and an alliance of Moslem leftists and Palestinians.

Trip Previously Postponed

Begin was been due in Washington last week but postponed the trip because of the bloody guerrrilla raid.

The prime minister spoke briefly by telephone with his British counterpart, James Callaghan, during a refueling stop in London. Begin's aides said the conver-

Range Fires Flare Over North Texas

By United Press International

A HALF dozen range fires whipped across the winter-dry North Texas prairies by 30 mile per hour winds Sunday burned out of control, threatening homes and livestock in a fivecounty area south of the Oklahoma border.

In Throckmorton County, about 75 miles southwest of Wichita Falls, firemen considered calling for an air drop of firefighters from neighboring Wichita County in an effort to slow down the spread of the largest fire.

"It's very rough terrain out there and we're having trouble getting trucks and people out to the danger area," a Throckmorton fire department spokesman said. "It's about 10 miles east of the city right now. There are no homes in immediate danger, but it's definitely out of control at the moment."

Visible For Miles

Flames from the burning grass and brush were visible for miles during the night. Sunday smoke from the estimated 15-mile long wall of flame could be seen in Weatherford, about 90 miles to the southeast.

"So far we have been lucky," Graham, Texas, fireman David Hooper said. "We've had no injuries and no homes have been burned.

"But the fires — there's at least a half dozen or more, counting that Throckmorton fire — are getting real close and that wind is whipping those fires up real well. We've got our hunds full. Trucks are heading out in every direction."

Low Humidity Blamed

The fires, many of which began about noon Saturday, were partially blamed on an unusally low humidity in the area.

"It's dropped down to about 25 or 26 per cent. That brush out there is just like gasoline when it gets that low. And those winds aren't helping anything," he said. "We don't know what started them. We're mainly concerned now with stopping them."

Thirty-mile-per-hour southerly winds were reported over much of the area. Wind gusts of up to 40 miles per hour were not uncommon during the day.

Almost all city and volunteer fire units in Young, Throckmorton and Haskell counties were involved, leaving only skeleton crews at the home stations. Stockmen and farmers converted cattle sprayers into makeshift fire hoses and joined the embattled firemen.

Cattle Released

Meanwhile, some ranchers were reported to be cutting their fences to release trapped cattle. No large loss of livestock had been reported, however.

In Montague County near the Red River, firemen from Bowie and at least nine other communities fought three separate fires. About 15,000 acres were reported to have already burned in that county alone.

"I can't even guess how much has gone up in that Throckmorton fire," Hooper said. "It's a big one."

Spring Ushers Warm Weather Into Lubbock

PARTLY cloudy skies and continued warm afternoons will herald spring as it officially arrives in Texas at 5:34 p.m. today.

Lubbock's high temperature today should reach the mid 70s with the low tonight dipping only into the mid 40s. Winds will be northwesterly at 15-20 mph.

A weak low pressure system that moved through the Panhandle Sunday morning producing the cloud cover over the South Plains is expected to remain stationary through Tuesday. But despite the cloudiness, National Weather Service forecasters say chances of precipitation in the area are slim until the end of the week.

Light spring showers, however, made an early appearance Sunday afternoon, leaving only trace amounts of precipitation in the regions west and south of the city. By 5:30 p.m. Sunday those showers had stopped.

Along with Sunday's high pressure system came a mild cold front. But most temperatures across the state on the last day of winter climbed into at least the 60-degree range.

Lubbock's high reading Sunday was 73 degrees and the low was a moderate 48 degrees. Wink, in far West Texas, reported the nation's high reading Sunday at 88 degrees. Thirteen other Texas cities, including Midland and Abilene, also recorded high temperatures of 80 degrees or above.

Dalhart was the coolest spot in the state Sunday with a high reading of 59 degrees. Amarillo recorded only 61 for its high as the low pressure trough moved

Divers Seal Leaks In Supertanker

BREST, France (UPI) — Divers Sunday sealed the damaged holds of a shipwrecked supertanker that has spilled 23.5 million gallons of oil off Brittany in one of the world's largest spills ever.

The American-owned Amoco Cadiz broke up on sharp reefs off the coastal village of Portsall in western France during a storm Thursday, sending oil gushing from three of the 15 cargo holds in the 900-foot vessel.

The black tide unleashed by the 233,000-ton tanker has killed thousands of seabirds and is menacing Brittany's tourist, oyster and fishing industries.

A team of divers Sunday sealed the three damaged holds to prevent more oil from escaping and adding to the slick that has covered more than 40 miles of Brittany's coastline.

Six tons of flexible tubing were flown in from Amsterdam and a team of experts prepared to pump out the rest of the ship's cargo of 64.6 million gallons of Arabian light crude from the 12 undamaged holds.

The 23.5 million gallons of oil already in the sea may be the second largest spill in history, behind the 1967 Torrey Canyon spill in 1967 that poured out 29 million tons of oil, much of it washing up on the English and French coasts.

French sailors spread chemicals over the slick, using chalk and detergent to disperse the oil in waters deeper than 150 feet and an absorbing agent in shallower depths.

The slick, which extends about 12 miles out to sea, was reported to be moving slowly north at midday. Earlier

BACK TO CAPISTRANO

Swallows Make Annual Trek

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (UPI) — The swallows returned to Capistrano Sunday, but there were far more birdwatchers than birds to watch — some 400,000 people jammed into the city to witness the annual event.

A flock of about 250 birds, ending a 3,000-mile migration from Argentina, circled the mission under cloudy skies shortly after dawn. They then swooped into the eaves as they have each year on the Feast of St. Joseph for all but one of the 202 years since the mission was built.

The swallows missed their March 19 arrival date only once, in 1935, when a storm put the birds three days off schedule.

Bill Smith, a mission spokesman, said the birds would be straggling in all through the day. He expected about 600 of the swallows to nest in the mission buildings. Another 1,500 were expected to nest in and around this coastal community.

Thousands more will continue north to settle in the San Joaquin Valley of Central California.

Smith said parking lots were jammed with trailers and motor homes. Streets were packed with cars. About 400,000 persons crowded into the city earlier to see the birds and join in the weeklong Fiesta De Las Golandrinas (Festival of the Swallows.)

Officials in Argentina reported Feb. 2 the largest bird migration ever was leaving the winter nesting area near Buenos Aires.

Legends have arisen out of the annual return on this date, but the Franciscan fathers at the mission have always denied any religious significance.

Scientists say the small insect-eating birds know when it is time to start northward by the length of the shadows in the Southern Hemisphere and they use the shadows to navigate on their flight.

Their remarkable punctuality, however, is not explained. They lived in nearby bluffs until the Spanish built the mission. Now they zoom in on their old nests and begin repair work, using mud and saliva to shape the gourd-like nests.

In October when the shadows lengthen the birds of the mission will become restless. As if on cue at dawn on Oct. 23, the Feast of St. John, they will circle and group into information to start the long flight southward.

Power, Coal Transfers Go Sans Government

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the coal strike drags on, the government says it is prepared to use its power to transfer available coal and electricity from regions of plenty to regions of shortage.

President Carter has said so twice, but the government isn't doing it yet.

Energy Department experts who would have to redirect such allocations maintain that available coal and electricity already is being redistributed into shortage areas without government orders.

The Midwest and Northeast have been hard hit by the coal strike because of reductions in coal supplies used by utilities in generating electrical power.

Department officials say electricity already is being poured into the coal-short east-central region from surrounding power pools at up to 85 percent of the capacity of their connecting power lines. They contend that because of this, government allocations could not move much more electricity than is presently being transferred.

Key government officials also are known to believe that with coal and electricity already being rerouted to shortage areas, any attempt to manage the flow through government action and additional paperwork might only make matters worse.

Circumstances could force the government to start directing the distribution of coal and electricity, but the Energy Department officials below Carter are clearly reluctant to do it.

Beyond the practical problems, state and federal governments are always ready for political reasons to yield generously to each other's jurisdiction — "After you, Alphonse" — when there is a particularly sticky job to be done, like taking somebody's electric power and giving it to someone else.

During the Arab oil embargo of 1973-1974, government allocation of available oil supplies was imposed hurriedly, and the allocation process has continued in part.

The United States relied on imported oil for about 37 percent of its supply in 1973 and the Arab embargo cut off nearly half of those imports. Domestic oil wells were producing close to full capacity.

In contrast, the nation is essentially self-sufficient in coal and can be supplied to some extent from mines which continue to work during the strike.

That is exactly what has happened. Coal deliveries nationwide have increased from about three million tons a week in early February to more than 4.7 million tons in the week ending March 4, as non-striking mines stepped up production.

Furthermore, coal, which can simply be dumped in a mountainous heap, was stockpiled heavily in anticipation of the UMW strike, while oil is not stockpiled in large quantities at factories and power plants.

There was enough coal stockpiled to last for months when the strike started Dec 6. Partial deliveries plus fuel conservation have slowed the drain on those stockpiles, so there still is a fair amount left.

The pattern of the U.S. oil market also distinguishes it from the coal supply situation. Petroleum refiners and distributors dependent on foreign oil faced disastrous loss of their products as well as a sudden tripling of prices during the Arab embargo.

This could have ruined them, in competition with refineries whose oil came without interruption from domestic producers under U.S. price controls.

A major reason for immediate allocation of oil in 1974 was to prevent threatened disruption of the nation's petroleum refining and distribution industry by spreading the supply and price impacts of the embargo equally among all U.S. refiners and distributors.

The coal strike is a national headache, to be sure.

But in deciding whether to prescribe government allocation as a pain-killer, the Energy Department is following this rule: Be sure the treatment won't do the patient more harm than good.

Crucial Coal Contract Vote Outcome Has Experts Guessing

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Perhaps the most crucial question in the history of the United Mine Workers union will be decided this Friday when the union's striking rank and file votes on the latest contract offer from the coal operators.

What will happen if the miners vote no? Nobody seems to know and nobody is inclined to speculate: not the union, not the operators, and not the government, which will be in the hot seat if the coal strike, in its 104th day Sunday, is not settled soon.

While nobody wants to talk about the possibility of failure, UMW President Arnold Miller is predicting the union's 160,000 striking miners will accept this package, the third tentative agreement reached by the union and industry negotiators since the union's contract expired last Dec. 6.

But many observers feel the large bulk of the rank and file still is waiting to see this proposal before deciding on their vote.

At meetings in many areas, UMW district officers were distributing copies on Sunday to local officers, going over the package step by step, as stipulated by the UMW constitution.

Sunday's district meetings after a week in which the miners ignored President Carter's attempt to get them back to work with the Taft-Hartley act. So few UMW members responded that the federal judge who issued the injunction in Washington said last Friday he had decided not to renew the order because nobody was paying any attention to him, and the government had not proved a need for the order.

The local officers will meet later in the week at the union's nearly 800 local union halls, strung out across the country from Pennsylvania to Wyoming. Most of the miners, however, are located in Appalachia, especially in West Virginia, where 65,000 active UMW members reside.

Miller also is from West Virginia, from District 17 — the union's largest with 25,000 active UMW miners. But he has been at odds with the District 17 leadership and repeatedly has charged that the district president, Jack Perry, and the vice president, Cecil Roberts, did not fully support the previous proposal, which was soundly rejected.

At the District 17 meeting prior to the earlier vote, nearly 1,000 miners showed up to hear the contract explained. One local president said the meeting was so chaotic that he soon got up and left in disgust.

"They let just anybody come into the meeting," said Mark Keenan, president of a UMW local at Ward in Kanwaha County. "Everybody just stood up and shouted and I left after about an hour of that."

Miller has said he would be paying particular attention to what happens at the district meetings on Sunday. He said the union would act against any district officer who does not support the contract proposal, approved on a 22-17 vote last week by the UMW bargaining council.

Although the narrow vote margin could be a dark omen for its chances of ratification, at least one council member who voted against it has said he would fully support the pact.

"There were quite a few changes" over the previous proposal, Ray Marshall, president of District 28 in southwestern Virginia, told a reporter for the Bluefield (W.Va.) Daily Telegraph in an interview recently. "There would be more complete hospitalization coverage, lower health care deductibles, and, of course, the wildcat penalties were taken out."

Marshall said the narrow vote by the bargaining council reflected the members' concern with a section that would permit the coal companies to contract with private health insurance carriers rather than contribute to a general health care fund run by trustees.

The plan also continues the controversial unequal pension programs, a fact that is extremely unpopular with the thousands of elderly miners covered by the 1950 pension plan. However, these elderly pensioners will not be voting on the contract Friday.

"I voted against the package," Marshall said. "But now that it's been passed by the majority of the bargaining council, I will support it and try to get the contract ratified. Overall, I guess it's a pretty good contract."

Miller, who did not actively stump for the first proposal, has said he has no plans to come to the coalfields this week. He also said the union will not launch another media blitz as it did earlier this month when Miller and country singer Johnny Paycheck attempted to promote the virtues of the earlier proposal in a series of radio and television spots.

However, the union has decreed that all voting will take place on Friday. This is an obvious effort to avoid the psychological disadvantage which UMW leaders think the last contract suffered.

PEOPLE — PLACES — THINGS

Candidates Share Names, Views

BOSTON (AP) — The name Edward King is getting a lot of exposure in the Massachusetts gubernatorial race since there are two candidates with the same name, but different middle initials.

Their beliefs are similar and neither candidate apparently is bothered by the confusion. Both candidates are conservatives. They oppose busing and abortion and expanded social services. They also are willing to bend over backward to assist business.

"We're looking at it as a plus," says Marty Burke, campaign director for Democrat Edward J. King, 52, a onetime pro football player and former director of the Massachusetts Port Authority. "It's something that has people talking."

Don Feder, campaign manager for 37-year-old Edward F. King, a Republican, says: "Most people who are politically aware understand the difference. As the campaign progresses and each of them becomes better known to the public at large, the confusion will diminish."

Each candidate is considered a longshot to defeat Democratic incumbent Michael Dukakis.

Osmonds Maintain Religious Faith

DENVER (AP) — Donny and Marie Osmond say they find no problem being in show business and at the same time meeting the strict requirements of their Mormon faith.

"The temptations are probably more in the show-business world than elsewhere, but we have good parents to keep us in line," said Donny, 20. "The standards aren't hard to follow when you believe."

Church rules forbid smoking and drinking.

The two were here last week and took part in meetings at Denver's First Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

The Osmonds recently moved their operations from Hollywood to Orem, Utah, near Provo. Donny said each of the children has a responsibility in the business. He grinned and said he and Marie are "in charge of smiling."

Freedom Quotations Published

LONDON (AP) — President Carter and the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey join the ranks of Plato, Voltaire and 2,000 other thinkers in a new book of quotations about freedom to be published Monday in London.

"Bachman's Book of Freedom Quotations," published by Bachman and Turner, is a collection of sayings spanning the past 20 centuries.

It is edited by Michael Ivens and Reginald Dunstan, leaders of the right-wing British organization "Aims of Freedom and Enterprise," who contacted Carter and Humphrey for contributions.

Carter selected lines from his inaugural speech of Jan. 20, 1977, including: "Because we are free we can never be indifferent to the fate of freedom elsewhere."

Humphrey chose this thought:

"We cannot seek democracy and social justice at home and abandon these principles abroad."

Solons Push Agricultural Products

TOKYO (AP) — Illinois Republican Congressmen Paul Findley and Edward R. Madigan were in Tokyo on Sunday to ask the Japanese to buy more more U.S. beef and agricultural products to help correct the United States' large trade deficit with Japan.

The request was made at a meeting with Japanese parliamentarians led by Eiichi Nakao, chairman of Japan's House of Representatives Agriculture Committee.

Findley, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said the United States wants to sell more beef, corn, soybeans and other agricultural products.

He said more imports of U.S. agricultural products would help Japan correct the trade imbalance, and also help the U.S. dollar, which plunged Friday to a record low of 230.025 yen against the Japanese yen on the foreign exchange market in Tokyo.

The Japanese "did not give a direct answer, but indicated historical, political and religious problems associated with the consumption of beef," Madigan said.

Democrat Contributes To Republicans

BUTTE, Mont.(AP) — Former state Rep. Robert Harper, a Butte Democrat, can't understand how he got on the Republican National Committee's mailing list.

But he returned the committee's survey anyway and added a donation.

Harper taped 25 pennies to the questionnaire and returned it in the business reply envelope. He said the U.S. Postal Service told him the Republicans would have to pay 58 cents postage to get the four ounces of pennies.

Harper said he would have put a lead bar in the envelope if it would have fit.

New Law Bans Debtor Harassment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Under a new law that takes effect Monday, bill collectors may no longer harass debtors by calling them at odd hours, threatening them or using abusive language.

The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, signed in September by President Carter, applies to personal, family and household debts such as those for car payments, medical care and charge accounts.

The Federal Trade Commission, which enforces it, said the law also gives consumers the right to sue collectors for damage suffered, court costs and lawyers fees, so long as they file suit within one year of the alleged offense.

"For too long the unscrupulous debt collector has been able to get away with such tactics as threatening to steal crutches from a crippled woman," said Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of a House consumer affairs subcommittee.

"It's about time the consumer had some protection in this area. Not everyone in debt is a deadbeat. In many cases the consumer is well-intentioned but unable to pay his bills due to sudden financial hardship or other events out of his control.

"It does neither the debt collector nor the consumer any good to pursue collection through intimidating tactics."

Under the law:

—Collectors may not use threats of violence, obscene or profane language, call without identifying themselves or repeatedly call the same person.

—Debt collectors may not contact a consumer at "inconvenient or unusual times or places," including while the debtor is at work, if the employer disapproves of that practice.

—The consumer has the right to receive a written notice from the collector, within five days of when he or she is first contacted about a debt, explaining exactly how much is owed and to whom, and what the debtor can do to challenge the debt if he or she thinks it is not accurate.

—The collector may not falsely imply that he represents an arm of government; may not claim he is a lawyer if he is not; or accuse the debtor of committing a crime if none has been committed.

—The collector may not tell a consumer he or she will be arrested or imprisoned if the bill is not paid, or claim that a consumer's paycheck or property will be subject to garnishment unless that is legal and the collector really intends to do so.

"On March 20, the consumer will have the right to be treated with respect and courtesy by a debt collector," Annunzio said.

Center-Right Victory In France Conceded By Communist Chief

PARIS (UPI) — Communist party chief Georges Marchais conceded victory Sunday for President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's incumbent center-right coalition in the runoff elections for the French Parliament.

"But the problems remain. The crisis remains," Marchais said. "The battle will be resumed. The Communist party will press more than ever its policy of unity of all those who want a change."

The center-right coalition campaigned on a "keep the reds out" ticket and computer projections showed them comfortably ahead but with a reduced majority in parliament.

The size of the center-right lead surprised both sides, since a perilously close finish had generally been expected.

But there appeared little doubt of the size of the center-right victory in the voting that saw a record 85.2 percent turnout compared with 83.3 percent in last Sunday's voting.

Early projections indicated a reduced government majority of about 75 seats in the new Chamber of Deputies compared with 120 in the outgoing parliament. Officials in Giscard d'Estaing's Elysee Palace were already describing the result as "a victory for the president and a victory for common sense."

Projection of the French election runoff by the Honeywell-Bull computer and French Television Channel 2 give the incumbent coalition a victory of 282 seats to 209 for the leftist opposition in the 491-seat Chamber of Deputies. A total of 246 seats is needed for an absolute majority.

Charles Pasqua, a leading member of the Gaullist Rally for the Republic, said "The French people have rejected the left's 'Common Program.'"

Socialist spokesman Jean Poperen said, "The new battle starts today."

The combined left, including small splinter Communist groups that vote with but are not formally a part of the leftist alliance, confounded public opinion polls in the first voting a week ago by winning only 48.4 percent of the vote compared to the center's 46.5 percent. This time they were doing worse.

It is the National Assembly that elects the Premier, and a leftist majority in parliament would have meant Communists in the new French cabinet — a prospect that gravely worried the United States and other members of NATO.

A crowd at Socialist party headquarters heard the early predictions in stunned silence.

At Communist headquarters party militants heard the first computer projections calmly. In fact, the party had been warned shortly beforehand that the results might be even worse for the left.

Gaullist Rally for the Republic workers gathered at their party's headquarters cheered when the first indications of a center-right victory were aired on television.

Robert Fabre, leader of the left-wing Radicals, the small ally of the Socialists and Communists, commented, "last Sunday we felt the left did not get the results it was entitled to expect. France is still divided in two, serious problems still exist and social measures obviously are needed to deal with them."

The leaders of the Socialist-Communist alliance — Socialist Francois Mitterrand, Marchais and Fabre — all were reelected Sunday in the runoff in their individual election districts.

55 Witnesses Subpoenaed In Kidnap Case

TYLER (AP) — Attorneys for Don Trull have subpoenaed 55 witnesses, including convicted swindler Billie Sol Estes, to testify at the Mississippi promoter's kidnapping trial, which starts today.

Trull, 40, is charged with holding an assistant of Tyler millionaire Billy Pyron hostage in Pyron's office Aug. 9 and demanding restitution for the $1.6 million he claims Pyron, Estes and others owe him.

The employee, Bill Mays, was released unharmed when Trull surrendered to police four hours after he splashed gasoline around the office and threatened to ignite it.

After his arrest, a high-ranking law enforcement source told The Associated Press Trull was given a lengthy polygraph exam and asked several questions pertaining to his allegations against Estes.

"According to the polygraph, he hasn't lied to us yet," said the source.

Besides Estes, the witness list is expected to include several West Texas and Tyler businessmen, many of whom also claim they lost money in Estes-orchestrated promotions.

Estes is on parole after serving about half of a 15-year sentence and is barred from engaging in any promotional activities. He was released from federal prison about eight years ago after being convicted of a massive fraud scheme involving non-existent fertilizer tanks.

Trull claims part of his missing million went for a similar scheme involving non-existent portable steam cleaners. The Texas Attorney General's office, the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service are investigating the allegations.

Pyron has denied any involvement in the alleged steam cleaning scheme or subsequent land deals, which Trull claims were arranged by Estes using Pyron's financing. Estes has referred all comments to his attorney, Jack Bryant, who has branded Trull a "common felon."

Shortly after he was indicted last September, Trull called a news conference and turned over a huge stack of documents to Smith County District Attorney A.D. Clark III. The promoter said he took the ledgers, letters and financial statements from Estes' Abilene office in 1975 when the two men were still officing together. He said he left with the documents when he realized he had been "ripped off."

Trull made the same documents available to The AP and the three law enforcement agencies several months earlier before he moved here from the Abilene area.

A similar stack of documents was turned over to state investigators by J.R. Patterson of Houston last year. Patterson said he also worked for Estes in promoting an Abilene-based electronics corporation as well as a steam-cleaning operation until he went broke in 1975.

Some of the investigators have been subpoenaed to testify at the trial, which Clark said will probably get underway March 27 after the jury is selected.

The case had been moved to a larger courtroom to handle the expected crowds.

Five Hanged For Murder Of Minister

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The government hanged five Moslem fanatics at dawn Sunday for the kidnap-murder last summer of former cabinet minister Sheikh Mohamed Zahabi, Egypt's Middle East News Agency reported.

The men, members of an extremist religious sect known as the "Society of Imprecation and Flight (from Sin)," were convicted by a military court in Cairo last November of "planning and executing" the assassination of the former religious affairs minister.

Zahabi, 64, was an outspoken critic of the sect, whose members advocate the overthrow of Egypt's secular government and its replacement by an Islamic state based on strict interpretation of the Koran, the Moslem book of scriptures.

He was killed by a single gunshot July 4. He had served in the cabinet for 19 months in 1975-1976.

Although various extremist religious sects have engaged in sporadic outbursts of violence here in the past three decades, the murder of Zahabi, which had religious and political overtones, was without precedent.

During the three-month trial Egypt accused Libya of conspiring with the extremists to overthrow the government of President Anwar Sadat. The two countries are at odds over Middle East policy — Egypt favors a peaceful settlement with Israel while Libya, already governed under strict Koranic law, seeks a war to eliminate the Jewish state.

'Memorial' Bill Is Monster

PERSUASIVE arguments against the Humphrey-Hawkins Full Employment and Balanced Growth bill have been advanced by the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research.

Opposition to the bill, passed in a somewhat watered-down version by the House and sent to the Senate, has centered on its socialistic goals.

There also have been fears that, because of its vague language, the bill if enacted could be warped by the federal bureaucrats through their "guidelines"—and by the federal judges through their orders—to justify just about any economic step they might want to take.

An employer, for example, might be blocked from closing down an obsolete plant in New Jersey and opening a new one in Texas if the Humphrey-Hawkins employment or "balanced growth" goals—as interpreted by the bureaucrats—had not been met in New Jersey.

BUT THE LIBERAL-sponsored bill won't even help those it is designed to help, Herbert Stein, a distinguished professor of economics at the University of Virginia, contends in the latest AEI publication.

Stein says the whole concept is based on outdated theories about economics and unemployment. He writes:

"...We are dealing with a kind of unemployment that is very different from the one Franklin Roosevelt faced 45 years ago. Many of the persons with whom we are now concerned have rejected education, although they have high school diplomas, have resisted training and resent doing any work for which they are qualified at a wage that they can earn without a subsidy.

"Laying out more of the same programs before them will not help."

HUMPHREY-HAWKINS would establish a national goal for unemployment (notwithstanding what achieving that goal might do to inflation) and—because it would focus especially on such groups as inner city youths—could result in favored treatment for some at the expense of other workers.

Stein continues:

"Many of the people who suffer chronic unemployment...are the victims of a society that, because of minimum wage legislation, union scales and discrimination, has excluded them from jobs they might fill—and a society that has shown them it is possible to live almost as well without working as by working."

SOCIETY, HE adds, "has brought them up in environments where unemployment is a normal way of life, not something to be vigorously avoided.

"It has taught them that unemployment is the government's problem, not theirs. It has taught them to pursue their advancement in the political process and in the courts but not in the labor market."

Finally, Stein says, "the Humphrey-Hawkins bill is floating toward enactment on a wave of demagoguery, sentimentality and guilt. If, once enacted, it is administered in the same way, it will hurt rather than help the cause to which it is directed."

Stein says, nonetheless, that it might be possible to "leave behind" all the bad aspects and make the bill a fitting memorial to the late Hubert Humphrey. We disagree. A memorial is no justifiable reason for bad legislation.

AN EDITORIAL:

Timely Word On Farm Front

IN A SPEECH prepared for delivery before students and faculty at Punjab Agricultural University in India, American Farm Bureau Federation President Allan Grant made some timely observations:

"We are disturbed by evidence of a growing trade protectionism in the United States and in the world. We contend that the economic health of the entire world depends upon active, growing, mutually beneficial trade among nations.

"Toward this end we call for fewer national trade barriers and restrictions.

"THERE ARE PEOPLE within the United States—particularly in our trade unions—who do not want to see vigorous export-import programs. They would like to shut the trade doors.

"They would like to keep our farm commodities within our national boundaries to assure cheap food for consumers—at the expense of the farmers who produce it.

"They would like to keep your exports out of our country, to reduce competition for what they produce.

"Most American farmers have the opposite view.

"We would recommend more effort toward increasing commercial international trade on a long-term, orderly basis.

"Farmers of our country do a better job at lower costs when producing at full capacity. We do not fear competition from you, or anyone else.

"We think competition is good and that it is through the spirit of competitive enterprise among farmers of the world that all citizens will benefit."

Mr. Grant went on to say that "trade expansion means improved markets and improved incomes.

As we said, his words are timely—particularly in an area such as the South Plains, which grows hundreds of thousands of bales of cotton each year suitable for an export market that needs expansion, not restriction.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Global Weather Recipe Born Of Witches Brew

THE WEATHER IS changing, with supersnows that would try the patience of Job, floods, mud avalanches, droughts and you name it. And in Europe as well as our country, this is a year of mysterious, chaotic weather.

In fact, in Switzerland the weatherman—wrong more often than right—committed suicide.

Oceans, of course, are immense creators of weather. Worldwide, an average 125 ships a year are lost at sea, mostly in the Pacific.

There 100-mile-per-hour typhoons, beginning even in the quiet doldrums, can produce 80-foot waves. They can extend more than 1,000 miles from the center of the storm.

You can be trapped like Jonah in the whale—an environment totally foreign to your experience. Even the largest ships bob like corks.

THE SUN IS A weather troublemaker. Solar radiation penetrates the surface of the sea. When the solar radiation penetrates the surfaces only to 11 degrees centigrade, it creates per cubic mile the heat energy equal to burning six million tons of coal. Waves, in turn, spread the surface heat further downward.

Tides, too, create temperature changes. So do currents. The Gibraltar Narrows is very deep. You find there a powerful four-knot current. But the Mediterranean is a major mystery. It is amazingly large, but it has no tides. Nor does anyone know why this locked-in sea does not overflow.

Weather forecasters call the North Atlantic 80 percent predictable and the Indian Ocean the least predictable of all. Some of the Indian Ocean's tidewater has the texture and specific gravity of warm, very salty soup. A sutra, a sudden flare-up of turbulent weather, reaches out form the Indian ocean.

The waves can be simply appalling. The earth is traveling nearly 1,000 miles an hour and some waves are giant crushers that come from opposite directions and collide with each other in fantastic crashes.

THE MOON ALSO affects the weather. Its celestial pull can create a wave about three feet high. This wave travels more than 100 miles an hour and follows the moon's revolution.

The wave lasts 12 hours and 20 minutes. This is precisely half the time the moon takes to circle the earth—and always affects the weather.

Even earthquakes alert weathermen. Managua, Nicaragua's horrible earthquake unleased 200,000 megatons of energy. This is 2,000 times the power of the biggest H-bomb ever detonated and 400 times the total nuclear bombs ever exploded in the atmosphere.

AND IN 1964 the horrible earthquake in Alaska unleashed even more. The weather impact followed promptly after the Nicaraguan, Alaskan, Italian and Yugoslavian earthquakes.

Meanwhile, the vast Sahara Desert and the Alps are in combat. In the high mountains the wind's velocity increases with the altitudes, but, in compensation, is steadier. This is the rule in the Alps.

However, the Sahara's hot desert winds rush across Europe. The colder air sweeps from the steeps of Poland and elsewhere. The Sahara's hot winds and the cold winds collide in the Alps. The collision produces much of Europe's weather.

And on some summits in the Alps the temperature can reach 140 degrees Fahrenheit below zero. The weather workers owe their jobs primarily to an event in 1870. That is the year President Ulysses S. Grant established the Federal Weather Service.

IN THE WINTER of 1868-69 our Great Lakes region was struck by terrible snowfalls and other storms. These sank countless ships on our Great Lakes and drowned more than 500 people. This resulted in President Grant establishing the Service.

Today weathermen watch the weather internationally. It is reported by some 8,000 land stations, 3,000 aircraft and 4,000 merchant ships. Moreover, the weather findings are now coupled into an international teletype network.

You hear it said, very often, that everybody talks about the weather but does not do anything about it. In fact, weather is mankind's favorite topic. Men and women everywhere huddle in offices and give meteorological judgments.

'I Figure You Need A Guardian Angel'

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

A Loose Bumble...

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—At the moment the State Department and the CIA were mapping plans to concede nothing to Moscow in the Shcharansky "spy" case, the No. 2 man on the National Security Council staff leaked authoritative word that could gravely damage Anatoli Shcharansky—a tragic case of ineptitude at high levels.

David Aaron, NSC director Zbigniew Brzezinski's top deputy, leaked to Time magazine that Shcharansky's one-time roommate in Moscow, Dr. Sanya Lipavsky, indeed worked for the Central Intelligence Agency briefly in 1975.

That leak (officially denied to us by the NSC) infuriated top officials at both State and CIA.

Aaron had committed a breach of iron-clad espionage policy never to say one word about an undercover agent.

(NOTE: Hugh Sidey, Washington Bureau Chief for Time Magazine, said in a statement subsequent to this writing that Evans and Novak "are wrong." David Aaron did not give Time the story. No one in the White House gave Time the story. Sidey said, "Diplomatic correspondent Strobe Talbott...reported the story from other sources." Meanwhile, Evans and Novak say they have rechecked their sources and are "convinced of the accuracy" of the column).

WITHOUT INFORMING Dr. Brzezinski, Aaron took it upon himself to confirm Soviet claims made one year ago that Lipavsky had been in the pay of the CIA in 1975.

While probably born of panic, Aaron's move seems dictated by a desire to spare the U.S. the unpleasant surprise of an ex-CIA agent testifying for the prosecution at Shcharansky's espionage trial.

But unwittingly, Aaron's leak lends superificial plausibility to the trumped-up charges against Shcharansky, leader of the once-flourishing anti-Soviet dissidents.

Besides potentially doleful consequences for Shcharansky, this bizarre turn of events further weakens confidence in the present conduct of superpower politics in Washington.

FROM THE START, the Carter administration's management of the Shcharansky affair has been bumbled. Intelligence sources here say Lipavsky was that familiar figure in Russian history—the double agent.

While working for the CIA, he was also an agent of the KGB. After he blew the whistle on himself by admitting espionage for the CIA, Lipavsky would finger Shcharansky as another "spy."

That would deal a lethal blow to the dissident movement.

Aaron's astonishing and apparently unilateral decision to leak the truth about Lipavsky was obviously tied to the astonishing decision made by President Carter last June.

He stated then that Shcharansky, already under arrest, "has never had any sort of relationship to our knowledge with the CIA."

THAT WAS THE FIRST recorded case of a President publicly exonerating a foreign national from his own government's charge of spying for the U.S. It gravely unsettled the CIA.

By claiming Shcharansky's innocence, Carter inadvertently may have weakened him. To find him not guilty, the Russians would have to uphold the President's word against their own charge.

That may partially explain the exhaustive build-up of the Soviet case and the brutal use of Lipavsky to entrap Shcharansky. Unanswered is this question: why did Aaron tell the truth about the Lipavsky-CIA connection at this particular time and against the accepted rules of the intelligence game?

THE ANSWER, AS supplied by others (Aaron did not return our telephone calls), finds its source in developments in Moscow the first week of March. As the Shcharansky trial neared, American reporters learned that proof of the CIA-Lipavsky link would be part of the trial.

High officials at both State and the CIA, informed of that fact, made a conventional decision: if and when Lipavsky's CIA link emerges at the trial, the U.S. would simply lie—deny the evidence.

However, if hard evidence were presented, the U.S. could always acknowledge the truth if needed. But at the NSC, Aaron panicked.

Those familiar with the case say he feared sudden headlines in the midst of the trial, naming Shcharansky's friend Lipavsky not just as a "walk-in" CIA volunteer but perhaps as a target deliberately recruited by the CIA.

IF THE RUSSIANS came close to proving that, they could undermine the President's public statement that Lipavsky's friend, Shcharansky, had no connection with the CIA (no matter how true).

Under this reasoning, Aaron's decision to leak Lipavsky's CIA connection—as a "walk-in" recruit who was obviously a KGB plant—had one purpose: to protect Carter from embarrassment. But Carter never would have needed protection had he not publicly vouched for Shcharansky.

Aaron's leak smacked of that very amateurism which persuaded the President to go public on Shcharansky last summer, based on a naive assumption that truth has power in the Kremlin.

ANDREW TULLY:

He Wags Sad Tale

WASHINGTON—We hear little these days of young men who fled America to avoid the draft during the Vietnam War. But they are still with us. I cite a case in which one of those draft dodgers may have provided a new definition of chutzpah, which the Random House Dictionary calls "unmitigated effrontery or impudence."

Call the young man John Doe, because his uncle, a lawyer, told me the story only on condition both he and his nephew would be granted anonymity. So be it.

But I find preposterous John Doe's assertion that it's all the Republic's fault that he became an emigrant to Canada because our law books contained something called the Selective Service Act.

IN TORONTO, Doe appeared before a U.S. consul and renounced his U.S. citizenship. But after several homesick months he returned to this country. Eventually, he was arrested by the FBI, and the Board of Immigration Appeals is considering an order that he be deported because he's an alien.

He says he gave up his citizenship "involuntarily" as his only legal alternative to fighting in a war he opposed.

Doe claims he would not have taken that step had there been no draft. His position is that there was no way to voluntarily accept compulsory military service, that since it was compulsory he had no choice.

Of course the Selective Service Act was compulsory. So is every other law in this country. Americans do not pay income taxes by choice, nor willingly give up $5 for a parking ticket.

Besides, Dope did avail himself of a choice. He chose to blow the country and relinquish his American citizenship. He was exercising one of his human freedoms when he stood before that consul in Toronto and proclaimed: "I hereby absolutely and entirely renounce my United States nationality together with all rights and privileges and all duties of allegiance and fidelity..."

NOW, HE IS suffering from a change of mind. Having evaded "all duties of allegiance and fidelity" to America by beating the draft law, he wants in on the goodies—"all rights and privileges" bestowed on an American citizen.

"I don't think," he says, "that they would do to me the type of thing they did to 'The Man Without A Country'," Philip Nolan's fictional 19th Century character who was banished from the U.S. for shouting "Damn the United States!" during his trial for high treason, and lived out his life on the high seas.

Perhaps John Doe is right. Off his record, he may not be the kind of man another country would welcome, although there's always Albania.

Poor John Doe. He represents the Paranoia Generation of the permissive Sixties, which seemed to regard all laws and even the rules and regulations at places of employment as acts of persecution.

I say poor John Doe, but only Christian duty compels me to offer him sympathy. I much prefer to be sorry for the young man who took his place and perhaps died in a Vietnam rice paddy.

JAY HARRIS:

A Police Recap...

WAS THE WIDELY heralded "reorganization" of the Lubbock Police Department, including the extra cars, supposed to make a dent in the city's crime problem?

The answer, it seems, depends on to whom the question is directed.

The man in the street seems to think that was part of the goal.

Mayor Pro Tem Dirk West, a candidate for mayor, says he sort of agrees, with qualifications.

City officials who pushed for the plan of a car-for-every patrolman,say it depends on what you mean by making a dent and in what time frame.

The man whose firm recommended it, says: "Definitely not. That was not the primary purpose. In fact, we said at the time this would not necessarily happen."

THE AUTHORITY for that statement is Bill G. Evans, vice president and director of Cresap, McCormick and Paget, Inc., management consultants of Washington.

It was Evans and his people who, at the bidding of the city, made the in-depth study of Lubbock's Police Department more than a year ago. Evans was back in town the other day and had some things to say about what has happened thus far.

In brief, he thinks the major goals of the reorganization have been met. He says there are some recommendations which have not been implemented which possibly should be. And he zeroes in on "fighting crime from the arrest to the conviction stage, or it won't work at all..."

Emphasizing the latter point, Evans, who has been around enough to know, says that only "by reducing a community's tolerance for crime and increasing the risk in committing it" can an effective campaign be waged.

AS FOR WHAT the plan was supposed to do for Lubbock, the consultant says he feels most of the goals have been met as regards the added 97 patrol cars.

"There were eight points involved here," he says, "as regards the patrol cars..."

The major ones he ticked off as 1. Higher visibility, to cut down on burglaries in those areas where the cars are parked, and to serve as a caution to traffic violators;

2. An aid in quick mobilization of officers, both on and off duty; 3. An aid to maintenance by the officers having the work done on their day's off and in not having the car driven almost constantly;

4. To provide a tax-free fringe benefit in exchange for the officer being on 24-hour call; 5. An aid in smoother shift changes in that officers do not have to come to the central station; 6. More economical in that the cars are almost "cost free" over a period of time by saving on wear and tear; 7. An aid in off-duty arrests, and 8. Having more cars and men available for peak demand periods.

MOST OF THESE goals have been or are in the process of being met, City officials claim.

How come then, we have had—and continue to have—one of the worst crime records per capita in the nation?

Evans says he isn't sure we do, although he admits it's not good. "You should study some of the cities we go into,' he says. "The problem, and the solution, isn't so simple that addition of X-number of cars, or even personnel, will result in an appreciable downturn in certain types of crime," he argues.

He also argues that to effectively determine how well a community is fighting crime, one has to run a "filtration" study. This means taking the number of offenses in a given category and following them through from arrests to actual convictions.

"Arresting an alleged criminal does no good if a case can't be made and a conviction achieved," he observes.

IN THAT RESPECT, Evans cited figures on a seven-county region in southern Illinois where at one point the figures showed only one-half to one and one-half percent of those who committed crimes actually were convicted and paid some sort of penalty for it.

"It may be that you should make such a study here in Lubbock," he observed. "You might be surprised at what you would find."

"The reason we have crime," he says, "is not because of poverty as widely espoused by some. We have crime because we tolerate it. In Ethiopia, for instance, a person caught stealing loses a hand. You don't see too many people walking around with both hands gone..."

Evans made another observation: "Most crimes aren't solved the way they are on television. Most times, the key to solving a crime is found with the arrival of the first officer and in his first few minutes at the scene."

"Does the officer," he asks, "check leads at the scene, talk with neighbors, witnesses, tipsters and 'build his case,' or does he just 'report' the crime?"

ALL OF WHICH brings us back to Lubbock's spiraling crime rate.

West says he agrees the cars have helped, but "I think we may be back where we were two or three years ago when we suggested we needed more officers. It's something to consider."

Vaughn Hendrie, director of community relations for the City, says that for much of the past year the City has been short 17 members of its allotted police force.

In January, a rookie class was graduated and joined the ranks, he notes. To avoid such a shortage again, the City has authorized and will start a new class of 12 would-be officers today.

Obviously, many factors are involved in fighting crime—including a community's tolerance and punishment, which is meted out by citizen juries and/or judges. Obviously, a year ago something needed to be done. It still does.

ASK THE gun expert in your house if there's any such thing as an automatic revolver. No? Wrong. The British Webley-Fosberry is so identified. It fires like a semiautomatic pistol. But has the shape of a revolver.

Nobody on earth knows exactly where that musical mastermind Mozart is buried.

A third of all the cars in the Soviet Union are jacked up on blocks during the winter months. Too little antifreeze, that's why. Lot of drivers do get ahold of antifreeze, though. And some use vodka.

Skeptics Convinced By Kreskin's Act

BALTIMORE (UPI) — "The Amazing Kreskin" claims he's no psychic and calls himself a "mentalist" instead, but he says he's been reading people's minds since he was 11.

Kreskin, 42, who refuses to divulge his full name, says he uses "natural, inherent powers common to everyone" to achieve feats of mental wizardry.

During a recent appearance at a college, Kreskin called an 11-year-old girl to the stage, held her hands and through what he calls the "power of suggestion" succeeded in getting the young girl to name the birhday of a student in the audience.

Brenda Payne, 19, of Washington, D.C., said if it hadn't happened to her she would never have believed it.

"It was real, it wasn't a hoax," she said. "I just concentrated like he said and through his powers the little girl guessed my birthday — Oct. 24, 1958."

Kreskin, of Caldwell, N.J., author of the book "Mind Power" and a frequent guest on late-night television shows, bills himself as a "mentalist."

"I'm not a psychic. I don't claim any supernatural powers," he said. "I feel under certain conditions you can perceive the thoughts of others or influence the behavior of others."

Kreskin says hypnosis is a delusion — "hogwash," he calls it.

"There is no absolute, hard core evidence that anyone has undergone a hypnotic trance," he said. "You don't have to put people in a trance to get them to respond to suggestion. You just have to stimulate their imagination."

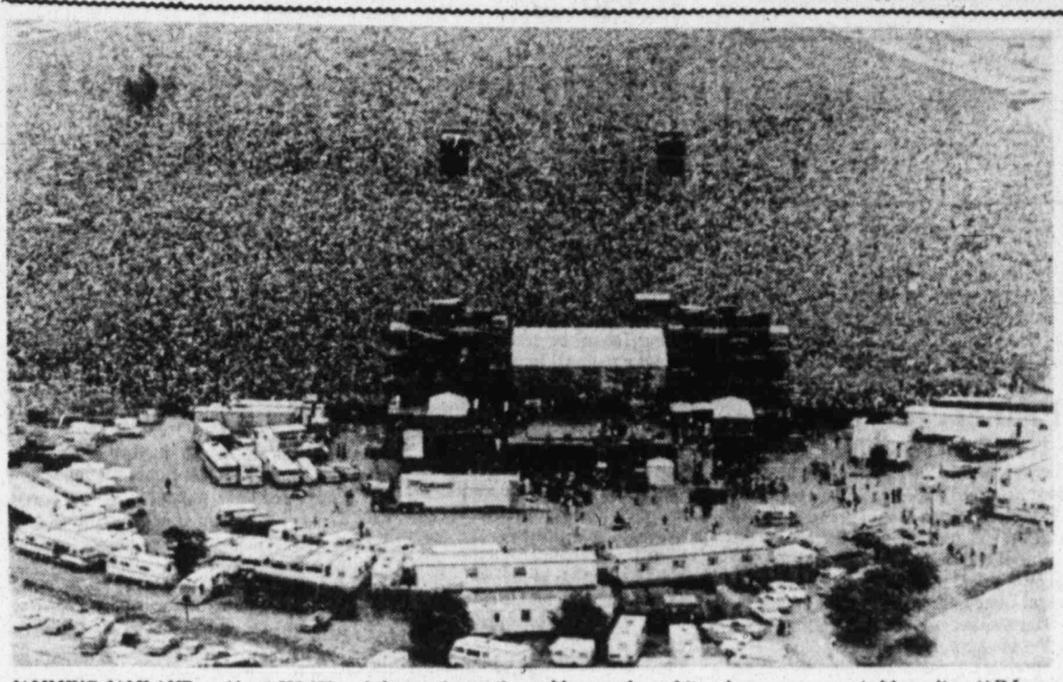
Law enforcement officials have called on Kreskin to help jog witnesses' memories. Kreskin said during one murder case in Reno, Nev., he had a woman using her imagination to recreate the scene she saw from her car.

"The woman said she couldn't really remember anything about the murder. I told her to picture a children's wooden block. She did and began describing the letters on each side of the block.

"We took it one step further and I had her behind the wheel of her car. She then began to discern figures, the alleged murderer and his victim. I snapped my fingers and she proceeded to describe the mole on the man's face, the part in his hair. It was like a zoom lens of a camera," Kreskin said.

"Three of the four people the police brought to me described the very same details," he added.

"We see things every day but our minds are preoccupied," Kreskin said. "A lot of the details we see are just not brought to the surface. It just depends on arousing one's imagination."



JAMMING JAMLAND — About 250,000 rock fans gather at the Ontario Motor Speedway, Ontario, Calif., to attend the California Jam II rock concert. Several incidents of stabbing, rape, robbery and one hit-and-run were reported by police. (AP Laserphoto)

Marathon Rock Concert Ends

ONTARIO, Calif. (UPI) — California Jam II, an all-star outdoor rock concert that drew a quarter million young people, was over Sunday but about 8,000 stragglers were still scattered over the parking lots, nearly two dozen were in jail and 75 were hospitalized.

More than 650 were treated at an emergency tent from Friday night, when the first fans arrived to camp overnight, through the 12-hour long concert Saturday. Police said most of those treated suffered drug overdoses, including a 9-yearold boy.

But victims of broken legs, broken ankles, a dislocated shoulder, stab wounds, beatings and rapes were among the hospitalized, George Brann, technical services manager for the Ontario Police Department said.

One pregnant women went into labor and was taken to a hospital.

Three rapes were reported and one arrest on that charge was made. A total of eight felony arrests were counted for charges including battery on a policeman, possession of hashish, strong armed robberies, and two hit-and-run counts.

The rest were misdemeanor arrests. The coroner's office earlier reported two deaths, but later retracted the statement and said there were no fatalities among the more than 250,000 persons who crammed into the oval Ontario Motor Speedway.

The mammoth crowd was attracted by such headline performers as Aerosmith, Foreigner, Heart, Dave Mason, Ted Nugent, Rubicon, Santana and Bob Welsh.

More than 200 police officers from the city and San Bernardino County and some nearby communities joined 1,200 hired security guards to control the crowd.

One guard, Greg Young, 21, of Cal State Long Beach, was among the stabbing victims. He said he was jumped by five boys when he tried to stop one of them from gate crashing.

Mayor Rizzo To Seek National Political Future

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Frank L. Rizzo, the law-and-order mayor of the nation's fourth largest city, has decided to seek a national following as a spokesman for American whites rather than a third term.

He has announced that he will not try to break the City Charter's two-term limit for mayors and will leave office when his present term expires in 1980.

Rizzo, a burly ex-policeman, bowed out in his own volatile way, swinging verbal punches on behalf of property-conscious whites who have been his power base at the polls.

He sidestepped the issue of whether he could win a third term, hinting that a more important role lies ahead for him. He did not specify what form his new role will take.

"I'm going to defend the rights of American citizens who happen to be ethnics," he said. "The whites have to join hands to get equal treatment.

"When blacks say something, it's to help their people. When the whites get together and ask for something they're racist. Now where's the fairness here? I'm tired of hearing that," he said.

For the announcement on Wednesday, he chose a Catholic school auditorium in his home turf of South Philadelphia where the white residents were meeting to discuss their opposition to public housing for low-income persons in their neighborhood.

"Four more years! Four more years!" the crowd chanted when he arrived. What followed was 35 minutes of a patented Rizzo rhetoric — fire and brimstone to the liberals, glory and honor to the Old World virtues he was raised on.

"I'm more liberal in my little finger than most of the so-called liberals are when it comes to human rights," he said. "I've done more for the minorities than any mayor before me — unquestionably.

"I want everybody to be treated equal ... Certain groups want special privileges — I just can't let that happen."

"I want to be a voice that is heard not only in Philadelphia but across this great country," he said.

Rizzo, a Democrat, appeared to have lost his stronghold on the city's Democratic machine last spring, when two candidates he backed for important local offices — district attorney and city controller — lost resoundingly in primary elections, and his most trusted adviser, Albert Gaudiosi, resigned.

Hoax Caller Here Persuades Woman To Strip

An 18-year-old Lubbock woman told police Saturday she was forced to strip and stand on a chair in front of windows facing a busy intersection late Saturday by a telephone caller who threatened her with a bomb.

Police heard the embarrassed woman's story late Saturday night after she realized the call obviously was a hoax, but not before she went on public display.

The service station attendant said she was working at the station about 10:30 p.m. Saturday when she was called by a man who said he was a policeman.

Her caller said the police department had just received word a man had left a bomb in the station earlier and would set it off if she did not remove her clothes, stand on a chair and have her boyfriend tie her up within 30 seconds.

Police reports indicate the woman stripped to her underarments and stood on the chair for about 10 minutes before she and her friend realized the call was a hoax.

Police said the woman and her friend ran from the station to a nearby business and called officers to see if the first caller was actually a policeman. He wasn't.

In other activities, a 20-year-old Lubbock woman said she was attacked by a man who followed her home from a club about 3:15 a.m. Sunday.

Sylvia Duran of 2817 Bates St. said the man followed her home, got out of his car and threw her on the ground. The man kicked her several times, she said, after she explained that she did not wish to see him.

Another Lubbock man, apparently irritated over comments reportedly made by Gilbert Franco of 1106-B 53rd St., pulled a straight razor and threatened him at a 35th Street cafe about 3 a.m. Sunday, Franco told police.

Authorities late Sunday still were investigating a shooting incident that reportedly injured several persons late Saturday.

Jesus Fuentes of O'Donnell said he and friends were at a restaurant in the 2900 block of East 2nd Place about 9 p.m. Saturday when three Mexican-American men pulled their automobile up beside his own.

Fuentes said a fight ensued after comments by the men, and that shots were fired in the episode.

Fuentes was treated at Methodist Hospital for his injuries and later released, but another man police theorize was involved in the mishap was not as fortunate.

Steve Smith of 301 Ave. X No. A told officers he heard someone outside his door about 9:30 p.m. Saturday. When he checked on the noise, he found 23-year-old Francisco Solis of 306 37th, No. 2 lying on the concrete.

St. Mary's Hospital officials said Solis was shot once in the chest. He was in satisfactory condition there late Sunday.

Burglars continued their activities, taking an $89 pistol from the home of Raul Paderiz of 805 E. Erskine St. about 8 p.m. Saturday.

Manuel Guzman of 2135 Duke St. No. 51 told police he was missing a $730 television after burglars entered his residence about 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Burglars who struck at a North Loop 289 storage building took a metal detector owned by Paul Mackey of 4701 Amherst, a tool chest and a case of motor oil owned by Mrs. Charles Pevery of Rt. 6 and a stove and two air conditioner compressors owned by Dale Tuttle of 4422 Vanda Ave.

Yippies' Convention Backs 'Soft' Strategy

NEW YORK (AP) — The Yippie Party, once known as a revolutionary band of anti-establishment malcontents, has a new maxim: never commit "a felony when a misdemeanor will do."

About 100 of the group's leaders gathered for a national convention this weekend to plot strategy for returning the Yippies to the forefront of the radical counter-culture movement.

The convention, in a renovated warehouse in the grimmy Bowery district that serves as the party's New York headquarters, began Friday night with a speech by lawyer William Kunstler.

Kunstler represented Yippies members at the Chicago 7 trial that grew from disturbances at the 1968 Democratic Convention. He called for legalization of all drugs.

The rest of the weekend was filled with workshops, regional reports, parties, films, music and marijuana-smoking. Convention-goers slept, ate, drank and smoked on the floor.

"Sure there's pot here. But only a little bit — for personal use," said Dana Beal, an organizer of the convention. "We tried to have a conference like this 10 years ago but the police shut it down. Now they're willing to let it be, then they were into power abuse."

Among the Yippies in attendance were Aron "The Pie" Kay, known for throwing cream pies at Howard Hunt and New York Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, and Steve Conliff, who is running for governor of Ohio. When introduced to the national leaders Saturday, a speaker said Conliff's candidacy had given members in Ohio "something we've been looking for for a couple of years, namely something to do in the winter."

Former Yippie heavyweights Abbie Hoffman and Jerry Rubin did not attend. Hoffman is now a fugitive wanted on drug charges, while Rubin has gone on to more traditional pursuits.

The new "soft" strategy of the Yippies entails flowing with the tide, sticking in the jabs when it's safe, being more careful not to get caught.

Beal said the strategy means Yippies will be "taking what we can get and asking for more — but never commiting a felony when a misdemeanor will do."

A felony is a serious crime such as murder, arson or rape; a misdemeanor is a minor offense that generally carries a penalty of less than a year in jail.

Despite the new strategy, the Yippies still plan to take part in the Spiro Agnew Memorial Smoke-In in Baltimore on April 16; a counter-demonstration in Skokie, Ill., this summer to coincide with the American Nazi Party's planned march in the predominantly Jewish suburb; and the National Marijuana Day Parade up Fifth Avenue in New York on May 5.

Connally Gives 'No' Vote To Panama Canal Pacts

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Texas Gov. John Connally, considered a possible Republican presidential candidate in 1980, said Sunday he would vote "no" on the Panama Canal treaty if he were a senator.

He said, however, it would be "wrong to categorize individuals on the basis of one vote and I would certainly not make the Panama Canal a litmus test."

Nor would he join party conservatives in working against a "hit list" of liberal Republicans, he said on the ABC "Issues and Answers" program.

He said that if asked, he would do what he could to help the campaigns of such senators as Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, Clifford Case of New Jersey, Mark Hatfield of Oregon and Charles Percy of Illinois.

He indicated that his hypothetical "no" vote on the treaty would not necessarily be out of personal conviction, but as a Texas senator whose constituency had made its feelings clearly known.

The Panama accords, actually two treaties, would turn over control of the canal to Panama by the year 2000, and ensure its neutrality after that. The Senate approved the neutrality pact 68-32 on Thursday.

Connally, a onetime Democratic governor of Texas and later Treasury secretary as a Republican in Richard Nixon's administration, said he has tried to stay aloof from the canal issue because he thought "a few of us ought to be in a position to bring divergent views together."

He said he didn't think the canal would survive as an issue in 1980 and that if Republicans try to make their party ideologically pure, "we'll become a smaller and smaller party."

He added that he personally thought the treaty ill-conceived. "If it's wise to give up the canal, let's give it up now. Why wait for the year 2000. If it's a compelling reason, it's a compelling reason now," he said.

Conally reiterated that he had not decided yet about running for president.

Impact Of Farm Strike Not Same For Everyone

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When the nationwide farm strike began three months ago, Associated Press writer Paul Stevens visited three Kansas farm couples to discuss what impact they expected the strike to have. He visited them again this week to see what happened. This is his report.)

By PAUL STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

PRATT, Kan. (AP) — Pratt County's farm strike office, a small building on busy U.S. 54 that once housed a hamburger stand, has become a second home to wheat farmer Don Bergner and his wife, Jean.

Six days a week, they make a five-mile trip to town to answer phones, organize meetings, pass out pamphlets to those who drop by and do anything else they can to support the strike urged by the American Agriculture movement.

Charles and Carol Eubank, who also farm near here in the heart of wheat country, haven't time or money to match the Bergners' efforts.

Eubank says they are struggling to keep afloat. Since January, he has spent most of his time caring for his cattle, and his wife works part-time at a bank to supplement their income.

Ed and Lisa Petrowsky also say they're on a tight budget. Petrowsky is readying for corn planting after selling a third of his crop early in the year. He supports the strike's goals of no selling and limited planting, but he has a banker to worry about.

All three couples are behind a move to push Congress to raise price supports to parity so farmers' buying power will equal what it was in 1910-1914. They — like other farmers — have backed the three-month strike to varying degrees.

The farmers' protests have gained them considerable attention from news media and political figures, but their economic boycott has so far had little measurable effect on farm markets or the food supply.

The Bergners, who have three grown daughters and work land once farmed by his father, have made two trips to Washington to buttonhole congressmen, present written testimony to the House Agriculture Committee and help staff the national strike office.

"We're glad there are some who can do that," Mrs. Eubank said of her neighbors' trips and strike work, "but we can't afford to."

Her 31-year-old husband interjected, "We've made a tremendous investment in farm equipment. It's either use it some or park it all and find some other job. It's tough when you're working for a landlord."

Eubank, who has college degrees in agriculture and economics, has farmed for seven years on 2,000 rented acres. He raises wheat, corn and other crops and has a herd of 300 to 400 beef cattle.

He said his cattle require constant care — even during a strike — and he pointed out that strike rules allow him to give this care. He has held back on selling grain to support the strike, he said.

Petrowsky rents 34 acres, is paying off a mortgage on 160 more and also helps his father farm. He and his wife support the strike's ban on non-essential purchases to the extent that they gave only one gift last Christmas — to a 2-year-old nephew.

Financial reality forced Petrowsky to market. "I had to sell a third of my corn to meet payments on my land," he said. "It was one of those situations where you either had to do it or forget it."

The 27-year-old farmer said he will plant enough corn next month to meet expenses, but noted he already has cut winter wheat planting by 35 percent from last year.

Petrowsky and his wife have no children. He has a degree in nuclear engineering and worked two years in Chicago before coming home in 1976 because "it looked like a good time to get into farming."

Wheat was then selling for $2.59 a bushel. It had been $3.86 two years earlier. Last year it was down to $2.15.

The Bergners, in their late 40s, planted 500 acres of wheat this fall. They said they've been able to toe the strike line by not selling 24,000 bushels of wheat stored under federal loan and making only essential purchases.

"We've bought nothing but food and medicine," Mrs. Bergner said.

All three wives said they avoided after-Christmas sales. Bergner said he put off buying a pickup truck and fertilizer for his crop.

The Bergners said were appalled at House and Senate agriculture committee members' lack of knowledge about farming.

"I can see why they think they made such a good bill because they don't know anything about it," Mrs. Bergner said, referring to recent legislation designed to raise farm supports.

Her husband added, "I think everybody should have to spend two weeks in Washington, just like serving in the Army. It's just a generally mixed-up situation."

To spur Washington along, the three men say they will follow the strike call and destroy some of their crop — Bergner and Petrowsky by plowing it under and Eubank by allowing his cattle to graze on it.

Maybe some day, Bergner said, the large sign at the strike office will prove true: "Wheat for Sale. '76 and '77 Models. '74 Price."

Red China To Hike College Enrollment

TOKYO (AP) — China's Education Ministry has told local officals to enroll more students in colleges beginning in April to help modernization efforts, the official Hsinhua news agency said Sunday.

The agency, in a dispatch received here, said the students will be drawn from those who scored well on 1977 entrance exams but were kept out of college by space limitations. No enrollment figures were mentioned. China's college entrance system is one of the world's most competitive.

Shootings Bring Tension To Big Spring

BIG SPRING (AP) — A few months ago, the names Tiburcio Griego Santome and Juan Galaviz meant nothing to most folks here.

Now both are dead, shot to death by police officers. The shootings made martyrs of two unknowns and brought an uneasy and unaccustomed tension to this West Texas community.

Santome died Nov. 6 in the back seat of a sheriff's patrol car about 35 miles south of here. The former deputy who shot him said he did so in self-defense after Santome stabbed him in the arm with a knife.

Galaviz was killed in a stolen car in downtown Big Spring. He was shot to death by a city police sergeant after a high-speed chase. Police said the officer fired after Galaviz reached into his pocket for a knife.

The shootings fired the wrath of the Mexican-American community around the state. Many claim Santome and Galaviz are just two more names added to the growing list of Hispanics who have died unjustly at the hands of police.

Late last month, Mexican-American leaders opted for a symbolic show of force to protest the shootings. About 1,000 marchers demonstrated in front of the Howard County Courthouse.

Just last Tuesday, the officer who shot Galaviz, Sgt. Leroy Spires, quit the Big Spring force, saying he was being harassed and threatened. The seven-year veteran said in his resignation letter he felt his life and the lives of his family may be in danger.

"It's just the end result of what's been happening around here for years," said Mexican-American leader Francisco Martinez. "This town, this area, has always operated under a double standard. I feel almost certain that if they (Santome and Galaviz) had been white they'd still be alive today. But because they were Mexican-American, there was no harm in killing them."

The Santome case has already been before a grand jury and the officer, G.B. Therwhanger, was no-billed. The Galaviz case is expected to go before the grand jury next month.

District Attorney Rick Hamby said he expects to call more than 40 witnesses in the Galaviz case, including six policemen.

"These cases are not among my favorites," said Hamby, "but if there is any pressure, it's self-imposed. I can't say whether Spires was justified in shooting Galaviz right now. I really can't say. That grand jury will have to decide that."

Meanwhile, the residents of Big Spring are uncomfortable with the black eye the two deaths have given the community. Things, as one resident put it, have "gone to hell in a handbasket."

Ugandan Judge Reported Slain

LONDON (AP) — Ugandan security forces dragged Senior Judge Sebugwaawo Amooti from his car and shot him in front of his two children last week, the London Observer newspaper said Sunday, quoting unnamed Ugandan sources.

The paper said Amooti was the third senior member of Uganda's judiciary to be executed since President Idi Amin came to power in 1971. It said the fate of the children was not known.

Transplant For Teeth Researched

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tissue matching for compatibility of donors and recipients appears to improve the success rate of transplanting teeth as it does for organ transplants, says a Navy dental researcher.

Dr. James E. Yeager of the Naval Dental Research Institute at Great Lakes, Ill., said studies with 30 rhesus monkeys indicate transplanted teeth remain in position better when donors and recipients are fully matched for immune system compatibility.

Speaking here at the annual meeting of the International Association for Dental Research, which ended Sunday, Yeager said tooth transplants could become more practical and common if rejection problems could be overcome.

The body's immunity system attacks not only disease organisms, but also foreign substances like transplanted tissue, leading to rejection. However, the more alike the foreign tissue is to the host, the less severe the attack.

Doctors use chemicals to suppress the immunity system for vital organ transplants, but problems associated with this are too severe to justify such treatments for teeth.

Yeager said in an interview that all teeth transplanted among monkeys fully matched for RhL-A antigens, immunity system proteins found in the blood, remained in position 18 months after surgery.

However, 27 percent of the teeth transplanted among non-matched or incompletely matched animals were lost during the same period.

Tooth transplants are competing with artificial implants as ways of avoiding the uncomfortable and destructive bridges of false teeth now commonly used. The artificial implants, still considered experimental, have had varying degrees of success.

"The only really successful tooth replacement system we've had so far is to move a tooth from one place in a person's mouth to another place in his mouth," Yeager said.

"At this point, I think tooth transplants are about equal to artificial implants in success, but this would improve with matching, which isn't commonly done now," he added.

Yeager said teeth can be kept viable for about a month under refrigeration. Some researchers claim teeth can be kept frozen for more than a year, he added.

If tooth transplants can be made more successful, tooth banking could become common, he said.

They said search teams in helicopters recovered the four bodies. The identities of the victims were not immediately learned.

Gripes About Cars Top Consumer Complaint List

WASHINGTON (AP) — Complaints about cars, particularly unsatisfactory repairs and warranties, constitute the leading source of consumer complaints to government agencies, a congressional survey has found.

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., chairman of a commerce subcommittee that opens hearings on the matter Tuesday, called problems with automobiles "a chronic multi-billion dollar consumer concern."

In advance of the hearings, the subcommittee sent a questionnaire to state consumer protection agencies. Ford said the answers "revealed that almost without exception auto repair problems rank as the No. 1 area of consumer complaints throughout the country."

The panel has received answers from 35 states. Officials in 29 of them said automobile problems are the largest source of consumer complaints, outranking such other areas as credit problems and food prices.

"Some consumers have had their cars repaired 25 to 30 times without resolution of the problem," said Herschel T. Elkins, deputy attorney general of California.

The Michigan Consumers Council said almost 20 percent of the complaints it receives are automobile-related. "This experience is similar to that of other state and federal consumer agencies which also acknowledge that automotive complaints are among the most difficult to resolve," the council said.

The highest estimate of automobile-related complaints came from Rhode Island. "Nearly one-third of all consumer complaints handled by this division involve autos," said its attorney general's office. A more typical figure was that one-fifth to one-fourth of all consumer complaints related to automobiles.

William L. Newcomb Jr., chief counsel of the Missouri Consumer Protection Division, said, "It appears that consumers who buy automobiles receive the worst treatment of any type of consumer. Not only is it true that the automobile is sometimes unsafe, poorly manufactured and deceptively priced, but when the consumer attempts to have his complaint resolved, the problem is ignored or goes uncorrected in many cases."

An Illinois General Assembly report sent to the subcommittee said: "Principal abuses include intentionally writing repair estimates that are lower than final repair costs, installing used parts while charging consumers for new parts, shoddy workmanship, installing unnecessary replacement parts, work without advance authority or knowledge of consumers, refusal to repair until after expiration of warranty."

Tim Ryles, administrator of Georgia's Office of Consumer Affairs, wrote, "We have no auto repair regulations in Georgia. For two years in a row, the Georgia auto dealers have successfully opposed our efforts to pass meaningful legislation. What is true in Georgia appears to be the case in other states as well: present state and local statutes and regulations, even where they exist, are not equal to the task."

Peking May Break 1977 Trade Record

TOKYO (AP) — China's world trade has grown steadily since a sharp drop in 1975 and may surpass the 1977 record of $14.29 billion this year, the Japan External Trade Organization says.

The organization says China's 1978 trade could reach $16 billion, but that its imports may surpass exports, reducing its substantial trade surplus.

Burnett Tapes Last Of Series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dressed as the charwoman, Carol Burnett shuffled across the big empty stage to a sign reading "The Carol Burnett Show" and flipped it over to read: "Closed."

After 11 years, 1,500 comedy sketches, 500 musical numbers and spoofs of virtually every old movie, Carol Burnett was closing shop.

She taped her final show at CBS Television City on Friday night. It will be aired as a two-hour special at 7 p.m. CST Wednesday, March 29.

Much of the show consists of sketches from old shows with Harvey Korman, who spent 10 years on the show, Dick Van Dyke, a regular earlier this season, and numerous guest stars.

"We've been on a roller coaster for 11 years," Carol said during a rehearsal break the day of the taping. "We've done about everything we could do in prime time. It wasn't the ratings. If it had been the ratings I would have quit the show three or four years ago. We were lower then than we are now."

Later, after flipping over the sign, she sat on a bucket on the edge of the stage and told the audience, "I have very mixed emotions. This is like graduation. It's a sad time and a happy time.

"CBS wanted us back, but I think it's classier to leave before you're asked to leave. I'm proud of our show. I'm no dummy. It's time to put it to bed."

The end of "The Carol Burnett Show" is the closing of another chapter in television. She is the last of the great comedic talents heading a variety show, and hers was the last offering live entertainment before an audience without electronic gimmickry.

"I think this is the end of an era," said Bob Wright, one of the show's producers. "You won't see another show like this, unless Mary Tyler Moore goes that way next year. If Carol comes back to television with another show it won't be like this. It'll be another kind of show."

Carol said she would do several specials, another film and would think about what she wants to do in the future.

During the rehearsal it could have been just another show. Carol, Tim Conway and Vicki Lawrence were on stage running through their lines — as well as trading quips that would never make it to the taping. Watching an old sketch in which Conway ends up sitting on a doorknob, Carol said, "Tim hasn't been a father since."

Afterward, wearing green slacks and a green blouse, she said, "I'm wearing green for St. Patrick's Day. You get pinched if you don't wear green. But then I like to get pinched. We're all in a silly mood. It's the best way to help us today."

Celebrities in the audience for the final show that night included Bernadette Peters, Allen Ludden and his wife, comedienne Betty White, Roddy McDowall and pioneer movie actress Lillian Gish, who is in the upcoming movie, "A Wedding," with Carol. Jim Nabors, who had appeared on the opening show each of the 11 years, arrived later.

As the show started, Carol appeared in a white sleeveless gown by Bob Mackie and received a two-minute standing ovation.

There were closing chapters of Carol as Wanda Wiggins and Conway as Mr. Tudball, and Carol as Eunice with Miss Lawrence as Mama in the Family sketch.

Carol's husband, executive producer Joe Hamilton, had a few surprises for her. Conway said he wanted to introduce a piano player. A curtain went up and there was James Stewart playing the piano and singing "Ragtime Cowboy Joe."

Carol broke into tears and said, "You don't know what this means to me. This man has been my favorite actor for years. I've worshipped him."

Latest U.S. Tank Design Readied For Military

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four years after some analysts declared the tank obsolete, the Army is preparing to equip its divisions with a new breed of armored fighting machine designed to win tomorrow's battles.

The new 58-ton tank, called the XM1, will be the most expensive in history — $1.4 million each. That is nearly twice the cst of the most advanced version of the present M60 tanks.

Pentagon research chief William Perry told Congress recently that the XM1 and West Germany's Leopard tank "will provide a qualitative edge to the North Atlantic Alliance on a tank-for-tank basis over any Soviet tank currently being produced."

Heavy losses inflicted by Egyptian and Syrian missiles on Israeli armor in the October, 1973, war prompted premature obituaries for the tank.

U.S. military officials, however, rejected the "tank is dead" thesis. They blamed Israeli losses on rashness and failure to cover their armor with artillery and infantry protection to knock out Arab missile teams.

Military planners in the Soviet Union, West Germany, Britain and France apparently agree with the Army view that the tank is still the most potent ground weapon. All those nations have pushed ahead with advanced tank technology costing the equivalent of billions of dollars.

Soviet Marshal A. Babadzhanyan, chief of Russia's Armed Forces, has challenged the idea that tanks are beginning to lose their former significance.

"We do not think so," said Marshal Babadzhanyan. "Soviet military art assigns to tank troops the main role of the main strike and maneuver force of the ground forces."

The keys to "survivability" on the battlefield of the 1980s and beyond, according to U.S. experts, lie in improved armor plate to repel anti-tank missiles and shells and a tank's ability to get in a killing first shot against an enemy tank.

The Pentagon believes the XM1 meets these criteria. The Army recently more than doubled the number it plans to buy, up from 3,312 to 7,058 tanks at a total cost of $10.4 billion.

The XM1 will be sheathed in a revolutionary new armor plate which Army specialists have testified will make the XM1 "over 100 percent more survivable than the M60."

Army technical officers claim this armor plate will give the XM1 a "crucial advantage in light of the 4-1 numerical advantage in tanks the Soviets now possess." Current intelligence estimates credit Russia with between 45,000 and 50,000 tanks, while the United States has about 10,000.

The British-developed armor to be built into the XM1 is made of secret alloys and is structured to defeat missile warheads and shells which rely on intense heat to penetrate tanks. Most of the Russian anti-tank ammunition is believed to be of the heat-penetration type.

The XM1 gun — both a 105 millimeter weapon to be placed in the first 1,000 to 1,500 tanks and a bigger 120 millimeter gun to come later — will fire an advanced "kinetic energy round." This projectile travels at terrific speed — about 1 mile a second — and punches its through 15 inches of armor plate, Army experts say.

U.S. experts also cite the XM1's swift acceleration, its 30-mile an hour cross-country speed (twice that of the M60) its laser range-finder and computerized fire control mechanism which "will make a first round hit a virtual certainty."

"It is almost imperative to hit with the first round when in the open because the first will most likely be your last if you miss," testified Assistant Secretary Percy Pierre, the Army's development boss, before congressional committees.

"There is no tank more adept at first round kills than the XM1," Pierre said.

se The Army still lacks much information about Russia's new T72 tank. But it is believed the XM1's turbine engine offers maneuvering advantages over the T72, including greater speed and quicker acceleration.

The diesel-powered T72 tank is said to mount a 125 millimeter gun, but U.S. experts say they doubt this would give the T72 any significant edge over ranges at which tank duels normally are fought.

The first 110 XM1 combat models will be assigned to U.S. troops next year. Army planners expect the M60 to serve with U.S. armored forces until at least 1990.

There was a brief embarrassment for both the Army and Chrysler when the first pilot tank to be delivered balked in full view of newsmen in Detroit.

The condition, at first blamed on icing conditions, "cleared itself without maintenance action," the company reported later. It has not happened again and the Army is inclined to regard the episode as a one-time fluke.

Throughout its development history, the new battle tank has been a centerpiece of U.S. efforts to promote standardization of weapons among North Atlantic Alliance forces.

The tank also has been caught up in U.S.-German differences which slowed the pace of the project.

Back in 1963, the two allied countries set out to develop jointly a single tank, the MBT70, for use by both armies. This effort finally broke down in technical squabbling, and each country went its own way.

About a decade later, a new effort was made to come up with a common tank. This time, the United States promised to adopt the West German Leopard II if tests proved it superior to the XM1. That effort went aground, too, on the shoals of parochialism in both the U.S. and German armies.

But, for the first time, there was agreement to build as many common parts as possible into both the U.S. and German tanks so they could use the same ammunition, fuel and spares. This will be important in a war.

While the United States already has agreed to mount the German 120 millimeter gun in later-model XM1 tanks, the Germans are testing the XM1's turbine engine for possible installation in their Leopard II.

U.S. and West German technicians also are exploring whether the XM1 and the Leopard can use the same treads, night vision equipment and fire control apparatus.

Looking to future prospects in armor weapons, Pierre said "that better tanks than these will be built is unquestionable .... There is no ultimate weapon in tank-antitank warfare."

Unusual Canadian Building Cuts Energy Expenditures

TORONTO (UPI) — Like a mammoth concave mirror in an amusement park fun house, Hydro Place reflects the passing scene at the corner of University Avenue and College Street.

Visitors react to the 2½-yearold headquarters of Ontario Hydro with either annoyance at its shockingly obtrusive facade or admiration for its ultramodern design. Few realize the government-owned utility building is unique for its energysaving construction.

A 20-story structure housing some 5,000 office workers in 1.3 million square feet area, it uses neither fuel nor electric heat.

Instead, Hydro Place utilizes the heat produced by people, lights and equipment. A sophisticated pump system circulates it with less than half the energy required for conventional office buildings.

Only 54.000 BTUs per square foot per year of total energy consumption are used at Hydro Place, compared with about 120.000 BTUs in most buildings of comparable size. A saving of some $1.7 million a year.

Toronto architect Kenneth Cooper, one of the chief designers, said the system is the result of 20 years of research in energy conservation and makes Hydro Place the prototype of future cold-climate buildings.

"If you pay attention to the cycle of increasing energy costs, you can't afford not to be concerned with energy," Cooper says. "Here, we use all of our energy; we reclaim every bit we can."

Hydro Place's conservation system works like this:

Conventional office buildings expend more energy keeping the interior working space cool than heating the perimeter during cold weather, "which means the furnace and air conditioning system are constantly fighting each other — a terrible waste," says Cooper.

Heat produced by people, lights and equipment in the building's core area, as well as from the refrigeration machinery on the top floor, is drawn off through air vents in the ceilings.

Two fans on each story push the warm air through insulated air passages in the floors to the perimeter of the building. There it streams over hot water-filled coils and flows upward through slits along the bottom of the windows, heating the inside glass wall.

The air is then returned to the fan rooms, cooled by being passed over cold water-filled coils, freshened with outside air and redistributed through ceiling ducts.

Two centrifugal refrigeration machines serve as the heart of the system. Much like a home refrigerator, they contain a freon-like substance that absorbs heat when allowed to vaporize, and gives it up when compressed and liquefied.

Water in pipes running through the heat-exchangers is heated and cooled in turn, and control the temperature of the air needed to cool the building's interior and warm its perimeter.

Excess energy is stored in a three-sectioned concrete tank in the basement. The energy conservation storage tank — one of the largest of its kind — holds 1.6 million gallons of water — equal to the capacity of 80 backyard swimming pools.

The reservoir holds heated and cooled water, which runs through a system of baffles controlled by sensing devices to prevent energy loss.

A central computer controls the system. Using more than 800 sensors, it measures inside and outside temperature, switches fans on and off, controls ventilation, channels water from the storage tank to where it is needed, operates alarm systems and even supplies washrooms with hot water.

According to Cooper, the Computer Optimized Energy Control System almost eliminates energy waste by ensuring delivery of just the right amount of heat or air conditioning in peak and off-peak hours.

Hydro Place has other energy conservation features.

The building's mirrored facade may be an eye-catcher from the street, but it is also one of the elements in minimizing energy requirements.

The glass is double-layered, the panes separated by an insulating vacuum. The outside layer is coated to reflect 86 percent of the sun's rays outward and keep indoor heat near the perimeter.

Because one of the primary sources of heat in office buildings is the lighting system, Hydro Place designers cut down on heat from the fluorescent bulbs by some 33 percent by installing the lighting units in highly reflective V-shaped coffered ceiling panels.

That enabled them to hold the lighting intensity to only 2.7 watts per square foot — compared with 4 watts in most buildings — and still provide an adequate 70 footcandles of illumination at desk level.

Hydro Place cost $44.7 million to build, which Cooper admits is somewhat more than a conventional building of similar size. But it is more than offset by savings in operating costs, he says.

"If energy costs continue escalating like they have over the next ten years, the cost of running a building like this will be impossible. But this building is run essentially by one man — the computer does everything.

"And, of course, it doesn't use fuel."

Poland Facing Gas Price Hike

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poles will pay about 20 percent more for gasoline and taxi rides beginning Monday as part of a government drive to reduce fuel consumption, the Polish news agency PAP said.

The top grade of gasoline will go from $1.48 a gallon to $1.75. Gasoline usage has nearly doubled in Poland sine 1974. Most petroleum here comes from the Soviet Union.

Israelis Extend Lebanon Push

TIBNINE, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli tanks and troops reporting negligible resistance pushed deeper into southern Lebanon Sunday from this shell-scarred town, eight miles north of the Israeli-Lebanese border.

A column of armored personnel carriers and trucks churned up a haze of dust as they carried fresh troops and supplies through Tibnine, once a Palestinian guerrilla stronghold and now flying a white flag of surrender.

At least in this central sector of southern Lebanon, the Israelis were moving more than two miles beyond the six-mile-deep "security belt" they seized when the invasion began last Wednesday. Israeli officials had said originally they would hold to that six-mile limit.

Three-Pronged Assault

(On the other side of the southern Lebanese front, eyewitnesses and Palestinian sources reported Israeli forces launched a three-pronged armored assault on the guerrilla-controlled coastal city of Tyre, capturing a handful of guerrilla strongholds along the way.

The Palestine Liberation Organization in Beirut said 144 guerrillas had been killed, wounded or were missing in the five days of fighting. It said 167 Lebanese civilians were killed and 392 wounded, and 450 Israelis were killed or wounded.

The Israeli military command has said 16 soldiers and two civilians were killed and 57 wounded since the fighting began. It said more than 200 guerrillas were killed and 600 Arabs were wounded, including civilians.

Planes Claimed Downed

The PLO also claimed Sunday that four Israeli jets had been shot down and 100 tanks and other armored vehicles destroyed.)

It was not clear how far the advancing Israeli column here would go. Israel radio said troops also moved west from Tibnine, but reporters were not allowed beyond the town.

A young Israeli soldier here said, "Everything is quiet, and it was quiet last night."

A resident of the town, 12 miles east of the Mediterranean, said, "All the Palestinians left before the Israelis came" two days ago.

Roads Shell-Pocked

It was not known how much fighting went on here, but roads were pocked with shell holes, power lines were down, windows in most of the houses were shattered and walls were scored by bullets.

Army escort officers who accompanied reporters into Tibnine discounted reports from Beirut that Palestinian guerrillas were still fighting Israelis. "Just rubbish," one officer said. "There is no fighting."

About 30 Moslem refugees squatted beside the road at Tibnine. They said they were fleeing rampaging Christian rightist soldiers in the south. The Christian militiamen, enemies of the Palestinians and their Moslem leftist comrades, are allied with Israel.

One grizzled Arab man made a sign of a throat-cutting when asked what happened in his village.

Attend Church Services

Just south of Bint Jbail, residents of the Christian town of Ein Ebel were out in their best clothes carrying palm fronds and flowers to Palm Sunday church services.

In Tel Aviv, Chief of Staff Mordechai Gur said Israeli troops "on average" were six to nine miles inside Lebanon. He said an important guerrilla stronghold was taken near the Akiya bridge over the Litani River and claimed this would cut the flow of Palestinian supplies to the south.

Tibnine is eight miles south of the Litani.

Gur, interviewed by Israel Radio after he saw Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan off to the United States, was asked why Israel had gone deeper than six miles into Lebanon.

"We are not talking any more about a security belt ... now we are talking not so much about the military aspects but more about the political agreement," he said. The general did not elaborate.

In New York, the U.N. Security Council adopted a U.S.-sponsored resolution Sunday calling on Israel to get out of Lebanon, and creating a U.N. buffer force to restore peace along the border.

Speaking before the vote, Gur said "never in history" has the United Nations been able to enforce a truce unless the parties agreed on it. U.N. forces sent to southern Lebanon would have considerable trouble with the Palestinians, he said.

Gur said a solution must involve the Lebanese government, Lebanese Christians and the Syrian-dominated peace force that crushed the civil war in 1976 and maintain the truce north of the Litani River.

Security Council Backs Peace Role

against any element of the population in southern Lebanon."

The Israeli invasion followed a terrorist raid in Israel March 11 in which 35 Israelis were killed. Israel claims the raiders came by sea from Lebanon.

Voting With U.S.

Voting with the United States for the proposal were Canada, Britain, France, West Germany, Gabon, Mauritius, Nigeria, India, Kuwait, Bolivia and Venezuela.

Soviet Ambassador Oleg Troyanovsky told the council Saturday his country would not support the resolution because it did not explicitly condemn "the aggressive action of Israel." He said he did not veto the resolution because Lebanon favored it. Czechoslovakia backed the Soviets. Chinese non-participation in such votes is routine because Peking opposes the use of international peace forces.

It was not immediately known what nations would provide troops for the U.N. peace force. Neither the United States nor the Soviet Union was expected to participate.

Rapid Action Applauded

U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young thanked the other council members for "making possible such rapid action on the adoption of this resolution."

The vote capped three days of council debate requested by Lebanon and Israel.

The council met just before noon and Lebanese Ambassador Ghassan Tueni requested it skip a long list of speakers and vote immediately because "human lives are engaged and people are still dying in Lebanon." The Lebanese Red Cross has said at least 300 Lebanese and Palestinians have been killed in the invasion.

While Israeli troops advanced in south Lebanon, Arab peacekeeping forces forcibly turned back panicked refugees trying to enter Beirut. An estimated 85,000 refugees fled north last week swelling the civil war-scarred city and severely straining its ability to provide food and shelter.

The PLO said it welcomed the U.N. resolution because it calls for "the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of the Israelis from southern Lebanon."

Damscus radio said foreign ministers from Syria, Algeria, Libya and South Yemen met to consider ways to support Palestinian guerrillas in southern Lebanon. Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam called on Arab countries to "end their hesitations and shoulder their responsibilities and take their place in the struggle," the broadcast said.

Canal Treaty Sidetracked For Vote On Farm Plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, spurred by nationwide farmers' protests, plans to put aside the Panama Canal treaty debate for a day this week to act on two bills designed to increase farm income.

Despite Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd's assertion that only emergency legislation would intervene, he granted an exception to the two farm bills at the urging of Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

The two measures will be considered Tuesday, each with a four-hour time limit. That assures final action before the end of the day.

One bill, sponsored by Talmadge, would offer farmers about $4.2 billion in payments to idle surplus-producing cropland this year.

Price Rises Foreseen

Agriculture experts estimate the production cutback would raise farm prices and therefore automatically reduce support subsidies.

The net result, they claim, would be a boost in farm income and a $100 million savings for the taxpayers.

The other bill, offered by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., is a "flexible" parity plan under which individual farmers could qualify for income protection up to 100 per cent of the federal parity standard, depending on how many acres an individual farmer wants to take out of production.

The more cropland retired, the higher support rate for the farmer.

Administration experts estimate this plan would add $1.5 billion to net federal spending.

The Senate begins a 10-day Easter recess Friday unless Byrd decides to cut it short, and the other three days of the week will be devoted to the canal treaty.

Amendments Expected

A number of treaty amendments are expected to be offered, mixed with general debate, but opponents do not appear ready yet to set a firm date for a final vote. Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd said Saturday he hoped to reach agreement for a final vote in the first or second week of April.

Opponents first want to see how much heat supporters get from their constituents during the recess, and what effect a $250,000 anti-treaty media blitz by the American Conservative Union accomplishes.

In the House, the Democratic leadership still plans to bring up legislation sharply cutting the amount of money political parties can contribute to candidates and the amount that political action committees can give to parties.

The Republican Party says the bill is aimed directly at the huge war chest it has put together for the fall elections.

On Saturday, Chairman Frank Thompson of the House Administration Committee, a Democrat, said he would try to amend the reform legislation — already approved by his own panel — so as to restore the previous $50,000-per-candidate contribution limit.

Congressional Campaign Funding

He said hoped conciliatory move would resolve a divisive partisan dispute and win support for a proposal to extend public financing to congressional campaigns.

Apart from Thompson's move, however, it is considered likely the spending reform bill will be killed by parliamentary maneuver before it ever reaches the floor.

If it should reach the floor, it is expected to include permission for an amendment covering public financing of House — but not Senate — races.

The House also will pass a four-month extension, through July, of the national debt limit, leaving it at its temporary ceiling of $752 billion.

Optimism Enters Hunt For Kidnapped Moro

ROME (UPI) — The chief investigator into the kidnapping of former Italian Premier Aldo Moro by Red Brigade terrorists said Sunday he had grounds for "reasonable optimism" after interrogating six mystery witnesses.

Pope Paul VI appealed for Moro's release during his Sunday benediction, saying, "Let us pray for Aldo Moro, dear to us, kidnapped in a vile ambush, with a sorrowful appeal that he should be returned to his dear ones."

Rome Deputy District Attorney Luciano Infelisi, in charge of the investigation into Moro's abduction Thursday, questioned the six unidentified witnesses Sunday morning at Rome police headquarters.

Afterward he told reporters, "My interrogations give grounds for reasonable optimism," but refused further comment.

The 61-year-old Moro, five-time premier of Italy and president of the ruling Christian Democrat party, was seized by 12 Red Brigade terrorists who ambushed his car in Rome and shot to death his five bodyguards in a hail of submachinegun fire.

The extreme leftists terrorists have not issued any ransom demands but on Saturday sent authorities a photograph of the shirt-sleeved Moro, sitting in front of a Red Brigades banner.

In an accompanying leaflet, the Red Brigades said Moro was being held in a "people's jail" and would be tried "before a people's tribunal."

Police headquarters and the Interior Ministry Sunday refused comment on newspaper reports that 32 German counter-terrorist detectives were in Rome to help the Italian police.

Rome and Bonn have noticed striking similarities in the kidnappings of Moro and industrialist Hans Martin Schleyer in West Germany last year.

Witnesses to the Moro abduction said they heard German or Slavic voices and accents from the Red Brigade kidnappers.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has promised to help the Italian investigation in any way possible.

Italian police have said they believe German-speaking Brunhild Pertramer, 31, wanted as a member of the Red Brigades, was involved in the Moro kidnapping and the assassination of a policeman in Turin nine days ago.

The slain policeman, Warrant Officer Rosario Berardi, 53, was to have appeared as a witness at the trial of 49 Red Brigades leaders whose comrades have threatened to kill anyone connected with the trial.

Milan police received a letter from Mrs. Pertramer Sunday in which she denied any connection with the Moro kidnapping, Berardi's shooting or the Red Brigades itself.

Mrs. Pertramer's letter said she was in the northern city of Bolzano the day Moro was abducted.

The trial of the Red Brigades, including their leader Renato Curcio, is scheduled to resume Monday. Two previous attempts to try the group had to be aborted because a jury fled when a defense lawyer was assassinated by Red Bridage gunmen.

In other developments, riot police were called out in Milan after the fatal shooting Saturday of two leftist youths sparked demonstrations by thousands of youths who rampaged through the city damaging cars and smashing shop windows.

a strong northeast wind pushed it south, menacing the port of Brest.

Local authorities deployed 10 miles of floating booms along the coast to protect beaches, harbors and oyster beds.

The disaster triggered a political storm with French voters going to the polls for the final round of National Assembly elections.

Leftist politicians demanded the center-right government explain how the accident could happen.

Paolo Bardari, Italian master of the tanker owned by Standard Oil of Indiana and registered in Liberia, was detained by police Saturday in an effort to establish liability in the accident.

Also detained was Friedrich Weinert, the West German master of the tug Pacific, which tried without success to come to the tanker's aid as it drifted rudderless before running onto the reefs.

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Former Prime Minister Golda Meir is in satisfactory condition after suffering a heart attack last week, the Israeli state television said.

Warm Weather Due In City into that region.

Winds Sunday were mild in the Panhandle, but in other sections of the state gusts more than 40 mph were recorded.

Sunday's high winds, combined with low humidity, prompted the NWS to issue a warning to North Texas residents concerning the threat of grass fires.

Firefighters from Athens and surrounding Central Texas towns battled a forest fire that burned an estimated 2,200 acres Saturday. Athens firemen said the wind-swept blaze was not contained until early Sunday morning.

Elsewhere across the nation, spring continued to beat its official arrival time. Record long periods of snow cover came to an end on the last day of winter Sunday in Des Moines, Iowa, and St. Louis, Mo.

Des Moines had gone 91 days with measurable snow on the ground while St. Louis was covered with snow for 66 straight days. The previous records at both cities were broken by more than two weeks.

And in Washington, D.C., a high temperature of 72 degrees was recorded, the first day a reading higher than 70 degrees was reached in that city since November.

Begin Mum On U.N. Role

sation was "more a courtesy call that talks of any substance."

Begin will face tough bargaining with Carter over Israel's refusal to withdraw from the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River or soften its peace terms in a bid to reopen direct negotiations with Egypt.

Despite U.S. mediation, the negotiations bogged down in January over the issue of a Palestinian homeland, and Israeli insistence on maintaining settlements in Arab territory.

On Sunday, Egypt urged the United States to increase its efforts to solve the Mideast dispute.

A statement by Foreign Minister Mohamed Ibrahim Kamel said, "We think this new expansion and occupation by Israel (in south Lebanon) should stimulate U.S. efforts toward trying to solve the whole question."

Earth Return Problems Irk Cosmonauts

MOSCOW (AP) — Back from 96 days of weightlessness in space, two Soviet cosmonauts are having some problems — they find even walking, picking up a cup of tea or turning a radio dial more difficult than it used to be.

"They're both still up there in the space station, not only physically, but in their thoughts," said Robert Dyakonov, the crew doctor, in a Tass interview. "Their organisms had gotten too used to freedom from weight. Now, every step is work. Even turning a radio dial is a workload.

"The cosmonauts have been trying to 'swim' out of their beds in the morning instead of getting up the normal way," Radio Moscow reported Sunday.

But doctors said the problems were not unexpected and cosmonauts Yuri Romanenko and Georgy Grechko, who returned to Earth last Thursday, are adjusting well.

They are at the Baikonur Cosmodrome resting from their Salyut 6 space mission, which broke the record of 84 days set by Americans Gerald Carr, William Pogue and Edward Gibson in 1974.

During the three-month flight, there was discussion in the Soviet press of the potential physical and psychological problems of a prolonged period of weightlessness and close confinement, and praise for the cosmonauts for their good health and spirits.

"Not a single decision involving a change of the flight or working program ... is taken without consulting the doctors," Tass reported midway through the flight.

Experienced cosmonaut Boris Volynov said Grechko and Romanenko proved to be an especially effective space "duet."

City Students Win Classical Honors

Seven Monterey High School Latin students won honors over the weekend at the Texas Junior Classical League Convention held at Trinity University in San Antonio.

Elizabeth Drew took first place in first-year Latin grammar and the decathlon, a combination of all tests given at the convention. Mary Ruth Thurmond also took first place honors in first-year mythology. Miss Thurmonds score was the third highest of all contestants at the meet.

Andrea Hyslop won second place in first-year literature and Mark Solomon took second honors in Latin derivative competition, level one.

Todd Mayfield garnered second place honors in Greek history and Steve Whipple took third in reading comprehension, level two. David Luke won fifth place in Roman life competition, level one.

Additionally, Monterey High won first place in statewide competition between schools offering only two years of Latin. About 1,900 students from across the state participated in the competition.

Money, Not Morals, Called Key To Abortions

not be funded under the new guidelines.

"We're still hearing from women who tried to abort themselves with coat hangers," Mrs. Olbekson adds.

And there have been reports of illicit abortions performed in a small town near Lubbock for $50.

The Department of Human Resources (DHR) is the state agency that administers Medicaid programs and helps pay for abortions which fall under the federal restrictions.

According to Lewis Mondy, director of DHR's Family Planning Programs, even for cases where Medicaid money is available, the state has added its own regulations.

Any doctor seeking to perform a "therapeutic abortion" under HEW guidelines must receive written permission through the department, a procedure that usually takes about three days. If a question exists about the safety of the mother's life, the doctor must get a second opinion, which "could conceivably cause the abortion to go beyond the first trimester (22 weeks)," Mondy said.

The change in federal regulations has brought about a corresponding change in the number of abortion related services provided by the DHR.

From Sept. 1, 1976, to August 4, 1977 (the day before the guidelines changed), the state and federal government paid for 3,506 Medicaid abortions at $186 each, and 11,300 Title XX abortions to "income eligible" women at $212 each.

Under the new guidelines, DHR reports only 22 Medicaid, or therapeutic, abortions have been financed from Dec. 1, 1977, to Feb. 28, 1978.

However, Medicaid-funded births, costing $850 each, numbered 17,532 in fiscal year 1976, and 10,475 in fiscal year 1977. Beth Weber, section director with DHR's Family Planning Programs, said 80 percent of these deliveries were "unwanted or unplanned for." And she predicts the number of births for this fiscal year will increase by several thousand due to the curtailed abortion funding.

Texas continues to try to rewrite the century-old abortion law struck down as unconstitutional in the U.S. Supreme Court's 1973 Wade v. Roe decision.

Jack Ogg, Senate co-sponsor of an unsuccessful 1977 bill says his measure to outlaw abortions after the 22nd week of pregnancy, except where the mother's life is in danger, is "about as moderate a bill as you can present."

Ogg reportedly plans to reintroduce the bill in the same basic form next year, along with measures outlawing saline abortions before the first trimester (22 weeks) when another form is acceptable, and requiring a medical team to provide life support systems for any fetus born alive during a legal abortion.

Personally, he says, he opposes abortion, but adds, "I think we ought to deal with an issue in which the states and Congress must set out guidelines... I don't think we ought to deal with rich or poor people."

But as one clinic director put it, without government funding, the rich or poor people problem is the heart of the abortion issue — and for some women a life and death issue.

THE GREATEST DRAMA: CHAPTER ONE

Forebodings Pervade Camp Of Jesus, Disciples

(EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the first act of an Easter series in the form of a five-act stage drama. All the dialogue is Scriptural, direct or indirect, with some unattributed comments of disciples specifically attributed, and sequences and settings compressed to fit this format.)

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Writer

Act I, Scene 1: Spring, 30 A.D., at twilight. Place: A campsite in Galilee at the foot of a mountain, its summit wrapped in clouds. A Jewish rabbi of about 36, Jesus, sits in a circle with 12 disciples around a flickering campfire.

Jesus, quietly but decisively: "Behold, we are going up to Jerusalem, and everything that is written of the Son of man by the prophets will be accomplished."

A few moments of strained silence. The others shift uneasily, trying to seem occupied, arranging bedding, breaking firewood, mending a sandal latchet, exchanging puzzled glances.

Andrew, solicitously: "Rabbi, eat."

First In A Series

Jesus: "I have food to eat of which you do not know."

Andrew, vexedly at the others: "Has any one brought him food?" Some shake their heads, spread their hands uncertainly, glancing at each other. Andrew gets up and rummages in a goatskin bag.

Jesus: "My food is to do the will of him who sent me and to accomplish his word."

Andrew draws chunks of bread, a cucumber and cheese from the sack and hands it to Jesus. He examines it, nodding, and bites into it heartily, giving Andrew an appreciative pat on the knee.

Jesus: "I tell you, my friends ... do not be anxious about your life, what you shall eat, nor about your body, what you shall put on ... Which of you by being anxious can add a cubit to his span of life?"

They chuckle, agreeing.

James, stoically: "What is ... life? You are a mist that appears for a little time and then vanishes."

Jesus, twitting them: "Your fathers ate the manna in the wilderness, and they died."

Peter, bluffly: "All flesh is like grass."

Jesus wipes his mouth with the back of his hand, turning serious. "I am the bread of life; he who comes to me shall not hunger, and he who believes in me shall never thirst ... The bread which I shall give for the life of the world is my flesh."

He pauses, watching their appalled reactions. "Truly, truly, I say to you ... he who eats my flesh and drinks my blood has eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day. For my flesh is food indeed, and my blood is drink indeed."

Thomas, skeptically: "This is a hard saying."

Philip, also dubious: "Who can listen to it?"

'I am the bread of life; he who comes to me shall not hunger, and he who believes in me shall never thirst ....'

Jesus, sympathetically: "Do you take offense at this? ... How is it that you fail to perceive that I did not speak about bread? ... It is the spirit that gives life, the flesh is of no avail; the words that I have spoken to you are spirit and life. But there are some of you that do not believe."

Peter, a brawny, rugged man, groaning at the complicated abstractions, lurches to his feet and stomps off a short distance in the shadows, his back to the group, the murmur of crickets filling the deepening dusk.

Jesus: "Will you also go away?"

Peter, after a long silence, sighs, turning about facing them: "Lord, to whom shall we go? You have the words of eternal life."

Jesus, softly: "Who do the people say that I am?"

Mixed, jumbled responses: "John the Baptist." "Others say that one of the prophets of old has arisen." "Elijah." "Jeremiah."

Jesus cuts them off: "But who do you say that I am?"

They turn silent, averting their eyes. Finally Peter strides over and looks down at him challengingly: "You are Christ, the Son of the living God!"

Jesus stands, embracing him: "Blessed are you, Simon bar-Jona! For flesh and blood have not revealed this to you, but my Father who is in heaven. And I tell you, you are Peter, and on this rock I will build my church, and the powers of death shall not prevail against it."

He draws away, adding in a pained whisper: "Tell this to no one."

Night deepens and the black mountain looms against the clouded sky. Coyotes yap in the distance and a screech owl cries his mournful notes.

Jesus, sitting, tossing twigs into the fire: "Let these words sink into your ears; for the Son of man is to be delivered into the hands of men. He will be delivered to the Gentiles, and will be mocked and shamefully treated and spit upon; they will scourge him and kill him, and on the third day, he will rise."

No response, the bewilderment shown by the blank silence, head-scratching and incredulous murmurs of dissent and puzzlement.

Peter, bursting out fiercely: "God forbid, Lord! This shall never happen to you."

Jesus, flintily: "Get behind me, Satan!" He stares into the fire, adding quietly: "You are not on the side of God, but of men ... If any man would come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me. For whoever would save his life will lose it, and whoever loses his life for my sake will find it. For what will it profit a man, if he gains the whole world and forfeits himself?"

Peter, kicking at a rock, muttering, "I am a sinful man."

Jesus: "Do not be afraid ... Truly, I say to you, unless a grain of wheat falls into the earth and dies, it remains alone; but if it dies, it bears much fruit ... Simon, Simon ... I have prayed for you that your faith may not fail, and when you have turned again, strengthen your brethren."

Peter: "Lo, we have left everything and followed you. What then shall we have?"

Jesus: "Then the sons are free ... Everyone who commits sin is a slave to sin ... So if the Son makes you free, you will be free indeed." He watches Andrew nimbly free the binding. "If you continue in my word ... you will know the truth, and the truth will make you free."

Matthew, urging him on: "Increase our faith."

Jesus, pointing to the dark hulk of the mountain: "If you have faith as a grain of mustard seed, you will say to this mountain, 'move hence to yonder place,' and it will move. Nothing will be impossible to you ... Have faith in God ... Truly, I say to you, whoever ... does not doubt in his heart, but believes that what he says will come to pass, it will be done for him."

Most of the group by now have cleared sleeping places and stretched out in them for the night, wrapped in sheepskin blankets. Jesus also reclines, wrapped in a blanket, his head on a hummock of grass. The air is still but sheet lightning still flares and rumbles around the mountain.

Jesus, musing: "For as the lightning flashes and lights up the sky from one side to the other, so will the Son of man be in his day. But first he must suffer many things, and be rejected by this generation."

Thomas, uneasily: "Where, Lord?"

Jesus: "Where the body is, there the eagles will be gathered ... The Son of man is to be delivered into the hands of men, and they will kill him, and he will be raised up on the third day ... They will deliver you up to councils ... you will be dragged before governors and kings for my sake, to bear testimony before them and the Gentiles ... Have no fear of them ... What I tell you in the dark, utter in the light; and what you hear whispered, proclaim upon the housetops ... And do not fear those who kill the body but cannot kill the soul."

'... Judge not, and you will not be judged; condemn not, and you will not be condemned; forgive, and you will be forgiven; give and it will be given unto you.'

John, vehemently: "Lord, do you want us to bid fire come down from heaven and consume them?"

Jesus, in rebuke: "Love your enemies, do good to those who hate you, bless those who curse you, pray for those who abuse you ... I am the good shepherd; I know my own and my own know me ... For this reason the Father loves me, because I lay down my life, that I may take it again. No one takes it from me, but I lay it down of my own accord .. For God so loved the world that he gave his only Son, that whoever believes in him should not perish, but have eternal life. For God sent the Son into the world, not to condemn the world, but that the world might be saved through him."

Jesus gazes about at the bundled bodies. "You did not choose me, but I chose you ... A little while, and you will see me no more; again a little while, and you will see me ... This is my commandment, that you love one another as I have loved you. Greater love has no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. You are my friends."

Jesus: "In the new world, you who have followed me will receive a hundredfold, and inherit eternal life. But many that are first will be last, and the last first."

James, grasping the arm of his brother, John, blurts: "Teacher, we want you to do for us whatever we ask of you."

Jesus: "What do you want me to do for you?"

James: "Grant us to sit, one at your right hand and one at your left, in your glory."

The others snarl resentfully.

Jesus, mildly: "You do not know what you are asking. Are you able to drink the cup that I drink, or be baptized with the baptism with which I am baptized?"

John: "We are able."

Jesus, frowning thoughtfully, after a pause: "The cup that I drink you will drink." Another pause. "But to sit at my right hand or at my left is not mine to grant ... Do not marvel at this ... I can do nothing on my own authority ... I seek not my own will but the will of him who sent me."

The others sneer at the two brothers, some poking them derisively.

Jesus: "You know that those who are supposed to rule over the Gentiles lord it over them, and their great men exercise authority over them. But it shall not be so among you; but whoever would be great among you must be your servant, and whoever would be first among you must be the slave of all. For the Son of man also came not to be served but to serve, and to give his life as a ransom for many."

'... For God so loved the world that He gave His only Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish, but have eternal life.'

Thunder rolls on the mountain, and lightning criss-crosses the sky.

John, with ardent devotion: "Teacher, we saw a man casting out demons in your name and we forbade him, because he was not following us."

Jesus, a bit appalled but restraining it: "Do not forbid him ... He that is not against us is for us ... Judge not, and you will not be judged; condemn not, and you will not be condemned; forgive, and you will be forgiven; give and it will be given unto you."

Peter: "Lord, how often shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him, as many as seven times?"

Jesus: "I do not say to you seven times, but seventy times seven." He lets that sink in. "Temptations to sin are sure to come ... Take heed to yourselves; if your brother sins, rebuke him, and if he repents, forgive him; and if he sins against you seven times in the day, and he turns to you seven times, and says 'I repent,' you must forgive him ... Be merciful, even as your Father is merciful."

Peter snorts, frustrated at untying a knot binding his sleeping blanket, damning its tight tangles, thrusting it to Andrew, with more patient fingers, to try to unleash.

Jesus, amused: "What do you think, Simon? From whom do the kings of the earth take toll? From their sons or others?"

Peter, emphatically: "From others."

Brownfield Budget Up 30 Percent Over Last Year's

By GAIL ATCHLEY
A-J Correspondent

BROWNFIELD — The preliminary 1978-79 Brownfield city budget was presented to the city council at a March 9 meeting and reflected an increase of approximately 30 percent over last year's. Total estimated expenditures amount to $5,484,902.

City Manager Jake Geron, in presenting the cover statement for the budget, stated that the major portion of the 30 percent increase can be attributed to the increase in the cost of making or purchasing electricity.

"When these (fuel cost) increases are taken out, then we are looking at an 11 percent increase in the balance of the budget, which is accounted for as follows: cost of living increase of seven percent in salaries; increased cost of maintenance; operation and supplies; increase in the cost of the Canadian River municipal water; the newly imposed unemployment tax; social security tax increase; increase in the minimum wage, reserve set aside for the purchase of machinery and equipment, including the initial step in purchase of a fire truck; additional expense of the operation of our computer system; and additional funds necessary for refunds under our street paving and utility extension ordinance."

The budget is figured with the tax rate and assessment ratio being the same as it has been since 1960, which is 35 percent of value and $1.30 per hundred dollars valuation. The assessed valuation for 1978 is estimated to be $30,100,000 compared to $27,323,000 for 1977. This increase in tax values can be attributed to the banner year of construction the city experienced in 1978. Revenue from ad valorem taxes for 1978 has been estimated to be $371,735.

The only rate increases being proposed for this budget are those in water rates and water tapping fees. All other rates will remain the same.

This budget also provides for the continuation of a fuel cost adjustment to be added each month to the electric bills. The cost of natural gas continues to increase. Based on estimates made by Pioneer Natural Gas Company and the city, the per unit cost of natural gas for the electric plant this budget year will increase approximately 25 percent.

Included in this budget are the first expenditures for purchasing power from Southwestern Public Service. Under the contract, which was signed several months ago, the city expects to purchase power beginning June 1, 1978.

The estimated cost of electricity purchased from Southwestern Public Service is slightly in excess of $602,110. Total estimated cost of fuel for the power plant this budget year is $10,000 more than the budget allowed last year. Even though the cost of fuel is expected to increase, the manager anticipates that the city will cutback on fuel consumption enough to offset most of the fuel cost increase.

Geron said, "The problem of just trying to survive during these difficult times increases each year, and increased interference by the state and federal governments is a challenge that becomes more difficult each month. Our most difficult task is to try to understand, interpret and accept these increased regulations, stay out trouble, and be able to function effectively during these changing times."

While discussion of the budget was taking place, the council discussed the work performed the past two years by Dick Fletcher, administrative assistant.

With words of commendation, the council named Fletcher the assistant city manager and raised his salary to the level of a superintendant.

There was also discussion of a letter received from General Telephone, stating that the company has filed a notice with the Public Utilities Commission seeking a reduced extension telephone rate and restructed nonrecurring charges. The changes are to become effective April 15.

The increase in costs will affect service under preparation and processing of customer records; work performed to connect the customer's service to the telephone network per lines connected; premise visit; customer initiated changes or additions to premise wiring per outlet; and station handling per instrument.

City Attorney Bill McGowan II told the council, "I just don't want to roll over and play dead. I don't want them taking advantage of us and the citizens."

He then said he would like for the city to acknowlege to the Public Utilities Commission that they have received the notice and get a chance to testify.

The council agreed to ask General Telephone for cost figures of the present rate, proposed increases and comparative rates.

Geron told the group that a public hearing on the proposed budget would be held at Thursday's meeting of the council.

Bids on transmission lines and construction of a sub-station were opened. The sub-station will join lines from Southwestern Public Service.

Low bidder was W.M. Construction of Bartlesville, Okla. Total bid was $50,572.50.

Two other bids submitted totaled $109,610.14 and $161,668.40.

Opponents To Back Suharto Reelection

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The chairman of the opposition United Moslem Party said Saturday his group will support re-election of President Suharto to a third five-year term.

The Moslems have staged congressional walkouts in recent weeks in a religious dispute with the government, and the controversy has damaged the regime's image in this heavily Moslem country. The Moslems fear that plans to legalize mystic beliefs favored by Suharto's party would threaten the basic Islamic teaching that there is only one God.

Sailing Vessels Set For Racing During Summer

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Tall ships with square-rigged sails and wooden hulls will race up the Atlantic Coast from Chesapeake Bay to Boston and from Hawaii to British Columbia this summer, the American Sail Training Association has announced.

The association, based in Newport, has scheduled races from Baltimore to Norfolk, Va., and on up the coast to Newport and Boston in June and July.

The boats in the East Coast race will be Class B vessels — sailboats over 30 feet long — but half a dozen brigantines and barkentines will sail along in company.

The association also is organizing races from Honolulu to British Columbia and down the Pacific Coast to Southern California. The West Coast races will include Class A — large, nationally owned ships — and Class B vessels. Between 40 and 50 tall ships are expected to participate in the races in June, July and August, the association said.

The races are designed to teach young people to sail. The training association's regulations stipulate that 50 percent of the crews be inexperienced sailors between the ages of 16 and 25.

"The philosophy of sail training is character-building," said spokeswoman Sandy Fuhr. "We like to take people who have a drug problem, or some problem with their personal lives, and show them they can do something worthwhile in the world.

"They spend two weeks to three months swabbing the decks or making nets, learning about maritime heritage. They find out the only way that they are going to learn something is if they knuckle down to discipline," Miss Fuhr said.

The young men and women can learn about the sailing program through yacht clubs, sailing magazines, their high schools and colleges or youth groups such as the Boy Scouts, she said. Some get high school or college credit for their work.

"We won't know until the end of June exactly who is coming," Miss Fuhr said. "But we sent out dozens of invitations, including six to South America and two to Japan."

The dates for the East Coast races are: Baltimore to Norfolk, June 20; Norfolk to Newport, June 25; Cape Cod Canal to Boston, July 2.

Regattas and harbor festivals will be scheduled between the races.

The West Coast races will begin with a 2,300-mile trek from Honolulu to Victoria, B.C., starting June 24. On July 24, the ships will "cruise in company" from Victoria to Vancouver.

The second race will be July 29 from Vancouver to Seattle, Wash. Another cruise is scheduled Aug. 5 from Seattle to Swift Shore Bank, B.C.

The ships will race 700 miles from Swift Shore Bank to San Francisco Aug. 6 and from San Francisco 360 miles to Long Beach, Calif., Aug. 15.

War Display Featured By Museum

BURLINGTON, Vt. (UPI) — In a sunlit second-floor gallery at the Fleming Museum, 142 scalps dangle from a Sioux warrior's jacket that hangs next to a shrunken head, the trophy of some obscure South American tribal dispute.

A Winslow Homer Civil War soldier broods in one corner; in another, British soldiers litter a battleground outside New Orleans with bright, blood-red splotches.

"A lot of people on campus look at me in horror and ask why we're doing an exhibit on war," said Nina Parris, curator of the University of Vermont museum.

"You know, through the ages a lot of man's creativity has gone into objects related to war. It seemed to us that now, when America is at peace, would be a good time to look at these things and learn something from them."

The resulting exhibit, "WAR!", which opened this month at the museum, is a oneroom survey of how man has converted blood and death into artistic images.

Miss Parris, a short woman with curly, graying hair, said she got the idea for the exhibit, when she pulled the dust cover off a bulky object in the museum attic one day.

"Every time I went up there, I tripped over the thing. It turned out to be a World War I German machinegun," she said. "We never did find out how it got there.

"We started to look around, and we were surprised how many of the objects in the collection were related to warfare in different ways."

Many of the objects had been gathering dust for years, gifts of 19th-century families whose sons wrote their tickets out of the state by going to war.

Pre-eminent among these is the Sioux scalp jacket, a long deerhide tunic decorated with multicolored beads and hung with tufts of hair, each from a different scalp.

The jacket was the gift of Ogden Benedict Reed, a pre-Civil War university student who later joined the Army and — according to university legend — was assigned to a unit sent to track down Sitting Bull. Reed sent the jacket, and other relics of the Plains Indians, back to his alma mater.

Looking at the jacket, and the nearby shrunken head, Miss Parris said, "I think that is one of the points the exhibit is trying to make. We look at the scalps and think, 'Ecch, how barbaric,' but the number of scalps on the jacket doesn't represent a whole civilization or a whole city."

Among the other items the museum uncovered were an 1858 Remington revolver, a Zulu animal hide shield and a gaudy French handkerchief with the legend, "Souvenir de Victoire, 1918".

As a collection, the images in the exhibit say as much about the cultures they are drawn from as they do about warfare.

"You see the machinegun as a turning point," said Miss Parris. "Before that the guns and daggers and clubs all had something engraved on them, often elaborate decoration. That showed they were not just for extinction, but they had a ritual, symbolic meaning as well.

"With a machinegun, it is clear there is only one purpose," she said.

Twentieth Century paintings of battle also stand out in the exhibit — by their absence.

In general, Miss Parris said, the work of painters has tended to glorify war. Battle paintings were most often commissioned by the winning side, and were intended in part to arouse national spirit or boost national pride.

Costs Endanger Hong Kong Club

HONG KONG (UPI) — The Hong Kong Club, one of the world's few remaining stately monuments to British colonialism, is in danger of sinking — literally.

Cracks have appeared in its Victorian facade and its foundations are being shaken daily by subway excavations right at the doorstep of the institution referred to simply as "The Club" by the upper-crust in this British crown colony.

The club's management will not supply a breakdown of the nationalities of its roughly 1,800 members, although most are known to be Europeans. A club official acknowledged only that it has "some" Oriental members. The three-story building that has been the club's home since 1893 is feared to be slowly settling into the weakened earth under it.

The club is also taking a few hard knocks financially, with bankruptcy at least a possibility should members decide to stick with the building in face of rising repair and maintenance costs and dropping patronage.

"Like many people I would like to see the building stay," said David McDonald, chairman of a committee evaluating the future of the club. "But can we afford it?"

The committee proposed moving the club to four floors of another building, and redeveloping the site, which stands on a prime piece of land in Central District. But members rejected the proposals and requested the committee to start a new investigation into the 130-year-old club's financial position.

The aging building with its fading white pillars, spacious veranda and large wooden-framed windows — used by the occupying Japanese forces as naval headquarters during World War II — is thus temporarily saved from the bulldozer.

HEARTLINE: My husband has recently passed away. I have four children who are all grown and married and have children of their own. I have a large savings account that I do not want tied up in probate after I die.

My oldest daughter has been named executor of my will. I also want her wishes to prevail with regards to this account. Is there anything I can do to make it easier for her to withdraw money from my savings if I die suddenly or become ill? C.S.

A. The first thing to do in this case is to get the advice of your attorney. This is because he or she can more easily see your entire financial picture and decide what is best for you.

Here is one possibility for you to consider: Establish a trust account at your bank, and name your daughter beneficiary to this account. Talk to a person in the trust department of your local bank about specific conditions.

Along with the trust account, which will allow you full control over this while you are alive, you might grant your daughter power of attorney so that she can handle your affairs if you become incapable of doing this. This assures that your daughter would have access to your account if you become ill.

To sign your daughter as a joint owner of your savings account may be practical for the moment, but some problems may develop later. For one thing, in the event of your death, anyone can contest her ownership of the account. And, if you were the source of most of the money in the account, it may be easy to establish her ineligibility to the claim.

With the combination trust account and the grant of power of attorney, you probably won't have the account probated. But, as in the case with any legal problem, consult an attorney to be sure you cover all aspects of gift and inheritance laws pertaining to your situation. Generally each state's laws vary.

HEARTLINE: I am 58 years old and I am a widow. I am drawing my widow's benefits from the Civil Service Commission as my husband always worked for the government. I have met a gentleman whom I have been seeing for quite some time. If I decide to marry him, what will happen to my pension from civil service? J.T.

A. If you decide to remarry before the age of 60, then you will lose your entire Civil Service Survivor's Annuity. Remarriage after the age of 60 will not terminate your widow's benefit. If you do decide to remarry before age 60 (and lose your annuity), your benefit can be reinstated if your remarriage is terminated by death, annulment, or divorce and you pay back the lump sum (if any) that was paid to you upon termination of the annuity.

HEARTLINE: I am 48 years old and I am working for a trucking firm. I have to do quite a lot of heavy lifting. I had a fall doing work at home about one month ago. My back feels terrible and I do not know if I can continue to work. Can you tell me what I need to do to apply for Social Security disability? C.S.

A. The first thing to do when applying for Social Security disability is to make sure that you meet all of the requirements. Here are the four basic requirements for Social Security disability:

1. You must be "fully insured" under Social Security.

2. You must have at least 20 quarters of covered earnings under Social Security in 40 consecutive calendar quarters ending the quarter in which your disability began. In other words, you must have worked five years out of the 10-year period immediately preceding your disaiity.

3. You must have supporting objective medical evidence showing that your disabiiity will prevent yo from doing any substantial, gainful work.

4. Your disability must be expected to last (or has lasted) for at least one full year or be expected to result in death.

If you do feel that you are eligible based on these requiremens, go to the closest Social Security office to apply. Make sure that you take with you the medical evidence (doctor's statement) of your disability.

A statement by a physician that a person is disabled is not controlling for the purpose of meeting the disability requirement of the Social Security Act.

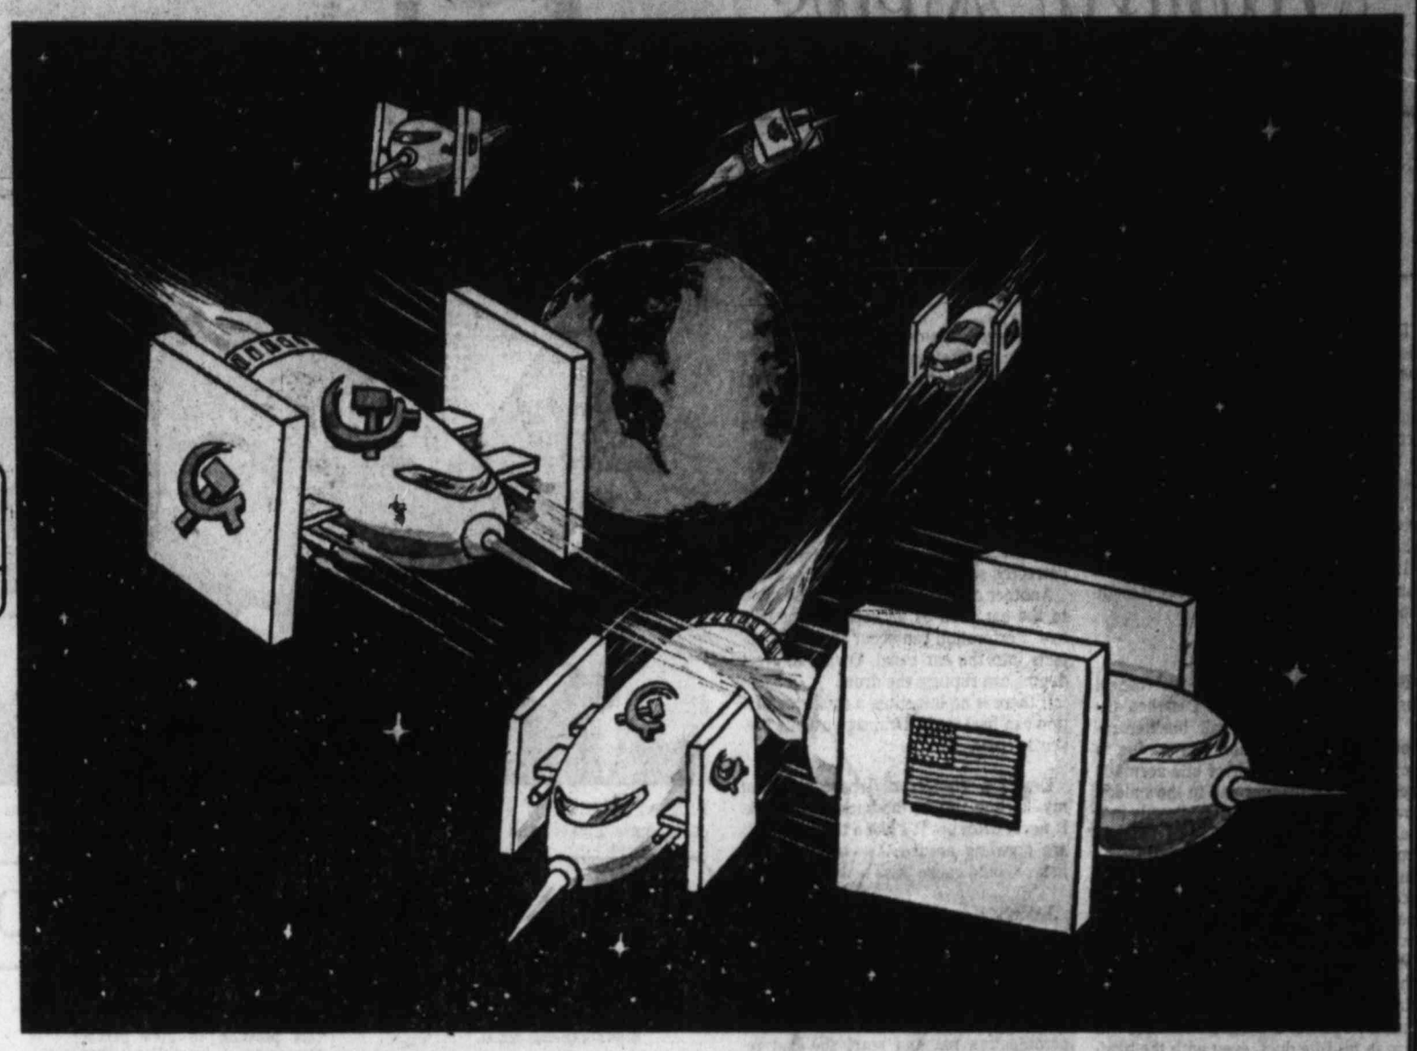
Space War Hardware On Increase



(EDITOR'S NOTE: When the Soviet spy satellite Cosmos 954 plunged into the Canadian wilderness in January, scattering radioactive debris, the U.S.-Soviet space war took on new meaning. The public wondered what else is up there and its chances of coming down. Here's a look into space this side of the year 2000.)

By HOWARD BENEDICT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Returning to its space station base from patrol, a U.S. Air Force rocket ship is attacked by a craft from a hostile earth nation.

Skillfully maneuvering at more than 17,000 mph, the American space crew slips in behind the attacker and opens fire with a weapon that converts nuclear energy into a powerful beam. The "death ray" vaporizes the enemy ship.

No nation is ready to fight such a "Star Wars" battle in space. But the United States and the Soviet Union have been accelerating an arms race in space. As a result, the security of both countries has become increasingly dependent upon orbiting satellites.

U.S. and Soviet satellites spy on each other and on other nations with high resolution cameras. Ships, submarines and planes navigate by satellite. Military leaders communicate around the world by satellite.

Other satellites hang in space to warn of enemy rocket launches as infrared sensors detect their heat.

During and immediately after the Yom Kippur war in 1973, the USSR launched six reconnaissance satellites specifically to observe events in the Middle East. America kept track by shifting the cameras of an already orbiting satellite to that area.

This growing reliance on space systems is causing concern at the Pentagon because the Soviets have introduced the first tactical space weapon — a hunter-killer satellite capable of blasting American payloads out of the sky. The United States is developing its own hunter-killer and extensive research is underway to reduce the vulnerability of U.S. satellites.

The Russians also have experimented with orbital nuclear bombs, which could be launched by rockets and commanded back to earth targets before they complete one circuit of the globe. The United States has not tested such a weapon.

Soviet cosmonauts are believed to be conducting extensive military reconnaissance from the Salyut space station, which passes over the United States twice a day. The United States will have an active manned military space program starting in 1983 when the Pentagon obtains a space shuttle, this nation's next generation spaceship.

The major U.S. spy-in-the-sky is nicknamed "Big Bird." It is a 12-ton, 55-foot-long technological marvel which carries electronic listening gear along with black and white, color and infrared television and still cameras. The satellite provides detailed data on Russian and Chinese grain harvests and charts military movements and missile locations. Exposed film periodically is parachuted to earth, to be snagged over the Pacific by Air Force planes.

"Man has moved from the earth's atmosphere into space in an instant of time. We who have witnessed this scientific miracle must acknowledge that it could lead to developments that we cannot now define."

Pentagon fears about the vulnerability of Big Bird and other American military payloads were expressed by Defense Secretary Harold Brown in Feb. 2 testimony before Congress.

In proposing $73 million in development money for space warfare, nearly double the present figure, Brown said:

"The Soviets currently possess an operational anti-satellite weapon system which could be used to attack some U.S. satellites. We certainly have no desire to engage in a space weapons race. However, the Soviets, with their present capability, are leaving us with little choice.

"Because of our growing dependence on space systems, we can hardly permit them to have a dominant position in ASAT (anti-satellite.) We might have to take steps to deter attacks on our satellites and to have the capability to destroy Soviet satellites if necessary."

The United States in the early 1960s pioneered in anti-satellite weapons through Project Saint, for satellite intercept. But this was dropped after defense officials concluded such weapons were not needed.

By contrast, the Russians over the last 10 years have launched at least 31 satellites as either killers or targets for their tests. In the last two years they have launched a series of eight highly maneuverable ASATs, all successful according to U.S. sources.

During the most recent test, in December, the hunter-killer Cosmos 970 was launched into a low orbit. Before it had circled the globe once, it was shifted by ground command into a path ranging from 588 to 712 miles high, and its inclination to the equator was altered slightly to match that of Cosmos 967, launched earlier.

After making four orbits alongside the target, presumably to test inspection equipment, Cosmos 970 moved far enough away to prevent damage to Cosmos 967 and exploded like a giant hand grenade. The Soviets had clearly demonstrated that the hunter-killer could have destroyed another satellite.

On at least three occasions Russian hunter-killers have passed close to U.S. satellites and then moved on, sources report.

Faced with this threat, the Pentagon increased total military space spending this year to $2.33 billion, up from $1.4 billion in 1972. Last September, the Air Force awarded a $58.7 million contract to the Vought Corp. of Dallas to develop a flying test model of a satellite killer.

Vought's weapon, which could be ready for space tests in two years, is a spinning cylinder 30 inches long covered with small steering rockets. It could be launched from the ground or from an aircraft and its infrared sensors would home in on a satellite and destroy it kamikaze style.

The Pentagon also is studying a Soviet-style killer that would run down its target and explode next to it.

Some defense experts believe the Soviets may have started a series of tests of satellites designed to carry high energy laser weapons. They could fire destructive beams of high-energy light at other satellites hundreds of miles away and perhaps shoot down enemy missiles as they rose from the earth.

The United States has done research in this area, but officials believe that spaceborne lasers, for both nations, are several years away. The technical problems are formidable, they say, requiring major advances in chemical laser devices, precision pointing and tracking, and large, high-power optics.

"Nevertheless, space is a favorable element for chemical lasers," one official said.

While researching these weapons, the United States also is considerig ways to protect its satellites from weapons that might be perfected by the Russians.

The Pentagon has begun looking into satellites that could sound an alarm when approached, a second alarm if they come under attack, or even fire a laser blast at an enemy payload if it draws too close. They also might eject decoys to lure attackers from the main target.

Studies are underway to make American military satellites more maneuverable so they could take evasive action if threatened. Also under consideration is the need for standby satellites at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., ready for launching at a moment's notice to replace disabled payloads.

Defense contractors are working on ways to harden space systems to protect them from laser, nuclear or non-nuclear damage.

In 1976, the Air Force orbited two survivable communications satellites, LES-8 and LES-9, intended to demonstrate means of hardening against nuclear or other blast effects. Features included radiation-shielded processing circuitry and an extremely low-drift, single-axis gyroscope for attitude control to eliminate dependence on external sensors vulnerable to nuclear effects.

The two satellites are powered by nuclear generators instead of solar cells which ar subject to nuclear or laser damage.

Defense planners also are considering placing many military satellites in higher orbits, where they would be more difficult to track.

Most U.S. early warning and communications satellites are in stationary orbits 22,300 miles up, out of reach of the Soviet hunter-killers. But the Big Birds and the Navy's Transit navigation satellites are within range.

Another plan would send dozens of communications satellites into orbit. Most would have their radios shut off so they would be difficult to pinpoint. If any of those in operation were destroyed, spares could be quickly activated.

The Pentagon also is considering ways of protecting ground stations which control the satellites. One is to develop a series of trailer stations which could move around the country, difficult to detect.

Rather than spend heavily on an arms race in space, many U.S. officials feel it would be simpler and surer in the long run to negotiate a treaty with the Soviets — like the 1967 pact to ban weapons of "mass destruction" from space, meaning nuclear weapons.

The Carter administration suggested to the Russians early last year discussions to limit the exploitation of space for military purposes. The spy, communications and navigation satellites are okay, officials said, but not tactical weapons like the hunter-killer or strategic weapons like an orbital nuclear bomb.

The Russians expressed cautious interest, but the two countries have had no further talks on the matter.

While research goes ahead on unmanned systems, man is just beginning to

Poll Shows Public Irked By Inflation

By LOUIS HARRIS

By 82-10 percent, a majority of the American people feels personally beset more by problems arising from inflation than by those stemming from unemployment. Moreover, a substantial 73 percent of the public now feel that a year from now the prices of most things they buy will be rising as fast as they are today or faster. This is a sharp increase from the 56 percent who felt that way a year ago.

A 46-33 percent plurality also feels that inflation is a more serious problem for the country as a whole than is unemployment. Last August, a narrower 44-36 percent plurality expressed this view. And, back in 1975, a 47-34 percent plurality thought unemployment was a more serious problem than inflation for the nation. There has been a distinct turnaround over the past three years, with worries over higher prices clearly dominating people's economic concerns.

One impact of this rising concern about inflation is that the number of people who say they think they ought to go out and buy products has dropped from 36 percent a year ago to 27 percent in the latest Harris Survey. In contrast, the number who think they should invest their money so that it will grow as inflation increases has risen sharply from 16 percent a year ago to 30 percent today. This trend indicates that Americans are worried about the shrinking value of their dollar at home. And, of course, the failure to control inflation here has been one of the major causes of the decline in confidence in and the value of the dollar abroad.

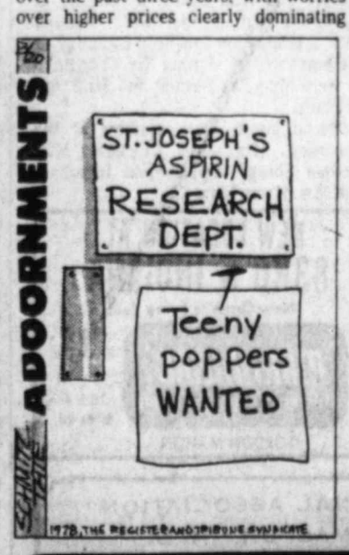
One of the more frustrating aspects of living through a period of sustained inflation is the rather deep sense a majority of people have that as individuals they simply cannot beat inflation. The notion that it is possible to obtain individual pay increases that will outstrip the rise in prices simply does not have much credibility for most Americans.

In this latest Harris Survey, a nationwide cross section of 1,510 adults was asked what they would do if they were up for a raise in pay. They were given a choice between getting a pay increase "higher than the cost of living but with no assurance the cost of living were being brought under control," or a pay hike "lower than the rise in the cost of living but with some assurance the cost of living were being brought under control."

By a clear 54-32 percent margin, a majority of the public would opt for a pay hike lower than the rise in the cost of living provided they felt something was being done to curb inflation.

One suggestion that has received much attention recently as a way to provide an incentive for business to keep both prices and wages in line is to have the federal government establish guidelines setting 6 percent as the limit for price and wage rises, and to cut corporate taxes for companies meeting these standards. Companies that exceeded them would have their corporate taxes raised. Among those who have suggested this kind of incentive method as a way to control major elements of inflation is economist Arthur Okun, former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Johnson.

When this proposal to tie corporate tax rates to wage and price guidelines was put to the cross section, a solid 56-21 percent majority favored it. Even among union members, a 52-28 percent majority favored such an approach.



Labor Contracts' Signings Announced

MBPXL Corp. has announced the signing of multi-year labor contracts with Local P-777 of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, AFL-CIO, covering the firm's plants in Plainview and Friona.

The contract for the Friona plant is for three years, terminating in February 1981. The plant currently employes some 400 persons, but will increase the employment to about 900 when a new fabrication facility is fully underway.

At Plainview, 700 workers will be covered by the contract, which will extend to August 1981.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I need your advice. Recently I had my gall bladder removed. Everything has been fine except for one little problem. I don't have control over my bowel movements. They are very loose. After each meal I have a bowel movement which I cannot hold back. Can you imagine what a problem this is when I have a client at dinner or lunch? I have to excuse myself before we've finished the meal. Embarrassing!

Is this normal after such surgery, and can it be controlled? Is there some medicine? — K.H.

Be patient. Hang in there and cancel business meals for a while. Diarrhea after a cholecystectomy (gall bladder removal) is not uncommon. This is due to the loss of the reservoir of bile normally present in the bladder and to the sudden flow of bile in large amounts directly into the intestinal tract. This kind of diarrhea almost always disappears with time as the bile system adjusts. Mild antidiarrhea medicine can be used. Ask the doctor about this. In a few weeks you should be back on the luncheon circuit.

While on the subject of gall bladder, another reader tells of having his removed four years ago. Now he wants to know what the chances are that new stones will form in his bile duct, even with the bladder gone. "I've heard that bile stones often form even in the absence of the gall bladder," he writes.

Wrong.

If the gall bladder and its duct are removed entirely and there are no stones left in the common bile duct (the one from the liver) then there is no chance of new stone formation. The problem is finding all stones in the duct and removing them at the time of the surgery. Some may be too small to show up on x-ray. If some remain they may cause problems later, but entirely new ones will not form.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What causes an eardrum to become perforated? And can one heal itself? — Mr. P.W.

The tympanic membrane (eardrum) is just this side of the middle ear about an inch in from the outside. The chief cause of perforation (puncturing, if you will) is a middle-ear infection. The immediate cause is the buildup of liquid than can accompany an infection. This fluid causes the pressure against the drum that creates the perforation.

If the infection goes untreated for long, of if there is repeated infection, the hole may enlarge beyond the ability of the body to heal it. Persons who know they have a perforated drum should avoid water sports because infecting organisms have a ready route to the middle, and eventually to the inner, ear sections. In selected cases the perforation may be corrected surgically.

Another cause can be a loud noise close to the ear such as an explosion or rifle fire. Perforation can occur by poking objects into the ear canal. Diving to great depths can rupture the drum.

If there is no infection, a small perforation can heal itself. Drainage usually prevents repair.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a rash at my hairline and on the back of my neck. It never dries up. It's like a thousand ants are crawling around. Do you think my nerves could cause this? — Mrs. C.M.

I doubt it is your nerves. There would be symptoms elsewhere on your body. It is more likely a contact skin reaction, possibly from a hair dye or unrinsed shampoo, possibly from a hat or scarf. I recall one woman who traced this to a combination hat and scarf she had received as a present. Her skin reacted to the material.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 46 and have been on the pill for 12 years. I haven't gone off because my husband refuses to have a vasectomy and feels the pill is the only safe way of birth control. I have cystic breasts and small fibroid tumors. Shouldn't I go off the birth control pills with these symptoms? — Mrs. H.J.

Yes, you should. What does your doctor say?

Are you bothered with ringing in the ears? If so, write to Dr. Thosteson at P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill., for his booklet, "Ear Noises — Their Causes and Cures." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

GOREN ON BRIDGE

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQJ95 ♡AKQ873 ◇93
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ◇	2 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Bid four spades. Even though it seems that most of partner's strength is in the minor suits, and that any club values he has could be wasted, you shouldn't yet give up hopes of slam. You can complete the picture of your hand by rebidding your spade suit now, showing a good 5-6 distribution.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ72 ♡85 ◇A8 ♣Q1073
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Dble.	Rdble.	2 ♠

What action do you take?

A.—You must bear in mind that partner's redouble could be based on short spades. Usually, it is correct to pass in this position to give partner the right of way. Here, however, in view of your holding in clubs, partner cannot possibly have sufficient length or strength in clubs to make a penalty double, and that might be your optimum spot. Therefore, you should help out and make the penalty double. Partner will then know that you are quite willing to defend unless he has a spade fit.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠6 ♡A108 ◇AQ762 ♣KQ83
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—In the light of partner's bid, your hand has become very strong and slam is not out of the question. You should plan to bid out your distribution to highlight your singleton spade for partner. To do this we suggest you first bid three clubs, and then support hearts at the four-level at your next turn, with a jump if necessary.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♡A109652 ◇84 ♣KJ52
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—What might have been a promising hand is now almost worthless. Partner has described a hand that contains six diamonds and five spades (with five cards in each suit he would have opened one spade). For the moment all you can do is give preference to three diamonds and wait to hear what partner does next, if anything.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A6 ♡9852 ◇QJ1072 ♣K6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	1 ♠
3 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Your hand contains golden values, and slam could depend on no more than partner's holding in hearts. You should advise him of the possibilities by cue-bidding three spades.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J74 ◇Q10972 ♣AK865
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Your hand has improved dramatically, and you can get this message across to partner by making a jump shift to three clubs. Even by a passed hand, a jump shift is forcing for one round, and suggests a fit for partner's suit.

Q.7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K7 ♡Q5 ◇A10832 ♣Q954
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	2 ♡
2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner must have extra values for his "free" rebid and, since you have working cards in both of his suits, a bid of three clubs would not do your hand full justice. It would sound to partner as if you were simply taking preference and he might pass. We suggest you give up all thoughts of a possible no trump game and jump to four clubs.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J1073 ♡83 ◇Q65 ♣K984
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	1 NT
Pass	Pass	Dble.	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—By doubling, partner has shown a good hand and a desire to defend against one no trump. You have some useful values, including a card that he expects to find with the no trump bidder—the queen of diamonds. There is absolutely no reason why you should remove the double. Pass and expect a juicy profit.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR MOMMIES:

Whatever happened to the old-fashioned mud pies we used to make when I was a kid? Seems to be a lost art nowadays.

It's free and keeps the kiddies busy for hours on end.

Mother always saved her fruit jar lids (plastic would be great for this), gave us an old spoon and a mixing bowl with some plain old dirt. We poured water in this and made our dough.

We also used play sand. She would also give us a few drops of her cake coloring so we could have differently colored pies.

Then we would pour the "dough" in the lid and set it out in the sun to bake. A few days later it would shrink and fall out of the lids beautifully. Those were our beautiful pies.

If any popcorn was leftover we decorated our pies with it.

This could be done on any patio, in any garage, or backyard the whole year round.

For those who live in the city:

When you take your next Sunday drive take along a pan and pick up a few pans full of dirt and if you can, also get a few scoops of sand. They make lovely different kinds of pies. The two can be mixed, and make an unusual pie.

Do consider this for the small fry. Just place newspapers down before starting and you will not have a mess to clean up.

A peck full of love to all mothers. In fact, let's make that a bushel overflowing. Heaven knows, you all deserve it. -Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Whenever I need to put garbage into one of the plastic trash bags, I always put the top of the bag over a kitchen chair and put the bag part on the seat of the chair.

It is easier for me to fill the bag. When it is full, I just slip the bag off the chair and tie it. -Charlene Hermanson

DEAR HELOISE:

When making noodles, I roll out my dough and make sure it is floured well on each side.

Make sort of a loose roll with the dough and get out those time-saving kitchen scissors.

Cut length-wise down the center of the roll. Now just cut the noodles the width you want them.

Sure makes it easy. -S.L.C.

DEAR HELOISE:

Several months ago you wrote something about how to keep flour from flying all over the place when it is poured into the canister from the bag.

Well, it dawned on me that I haven't had that happen to me in so long that I don't think about it any more.

The reason? I always keep an extra five-pound sack of flour in the freezer until I need more in the canister.

When the flour is cold, it doesn't "fly" all over me and the cabinet tops. -Bobbie Hayes

Bobbie, you just solved the mystery. I just couldn't believe this would work so I stuck a sack of flour in my freezer and sure enough it made all the difference in the world when I emptied it.

Thanks for solving this problem for all the homemakers -including me. -Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Last June, my daughter needed something to store all her college stuff in over the summer. As a joke, I suggested getting some garbage cans.

To my surprise the college said each student was allowed to store one trunk and two metal garbage cans at the college. Cartons were not allowed as they were fireproof.

Thought other college students with similar problems could use metal garbage cans and bike locks to lock the lids closed. -Mrs. Stanley Gimpelson

SCRAMBLED EGGS

Scrambled eggs are one of America's favorite methods of egg cookery. Even a novice cook can turn out perfect scrambled eggs. Add mushrooms, cheese, chives or vegetables for a hearty one-skillet meal.

Penn Dutch Gave U.S. Easter Bunny

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Easter bunny is among Pennsylvania Dutch contibutions to American folklore.

The legend about the Easter rabbit delivering eggs was introduced by German settlers who arrived in the 18th century. Their word for the bunny was Oschter Haws.

In "Easter the World Over," Priscilla Sawyer Lord and Daniel J. Foley (Chilton 1971) write that the bunny was supposed to be such a shy creature it hid nests full of colored eggs in secluded spots on Easter Eve.

The eggs were a reward to good children, who sometimes used their caps or bonnets as nests. Others were made with fancy paper. Elaborate baskets as we now know them came later when the tradition spread throughout the United States.

UNWRAP AND REWRAP?

When you bring your favorite beef cuts home from the market, take proper care of them to insure safe storage. The transparent wrap on packaged meat is fine for short storage. It is designed for maintaining the quality of meat for refrigerator storage for one to two days. For longer storage, overwrap or rewrap beef cuts in freezer paper and store in freezer at 0 degrees or less.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible©

Matthew 13:29-46, The Living Bible

29 'No,' he replied. 'You'll hurt the wheat if you do.
30 Let both grow together until the harvest, and I will tell the reapers to sort out the thistles and burn them, and put the wheat in the barn.'"
31,32 Here is another of His illustrations: "The Kingdom of Heaven is like a tiny mustard seed planted in a field. It is the smallest of all seeds, but becomes the largest of plants, and grows into a tree where birds can come and find shelter."
33 He also used this example: "The Kingdom of Heaven can be compared to a woman making bread. She takes a measure of flour and mixes in the yeast until it permeates every part of the dough."
34,35 Jesus constantly used these illustrations when speaking to the crowds. In fact, because the prophets said that He would use so many, He never spoke to them without at least one illustration. For it had been prophesied, "I will talk in parables; I will explain mysteries hidden since the beginning of time."
36 Then, leaving the crowds outside, He went into the house. His disciples asked Him to explain to them the illustration of the thistles and the wheat.
37 "All right," He said, "I am the farmer who sows the choice seed.
38 The field is the world, and the seed represents the people of the Kingdom; the thistles are the people belonging to Satan.
39 The enemy who sowed the thistles among the wheat is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world, and the reapers are the angels.
40 Just as in this story the thistles are separated and burned, so shall it be at the end of the world:
41 I will send My angels and they will separate out of the Kingdom every temptation and all who are evil,
42 And throw them into the furnace and burn them. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.
43 Then the godly shall shine as the sun in their Father's Kingdom. Let those with ears, listen!
44 The Kingdom of Heaven is like a treasure a man discovered in a field. In his excitement, he sold everything he owned to get enough money to buy the field—and get the treasure, too!
45 Again, the Kingdom of Heaven is like a pearl merchant on the lookout for choice pearls.
46 He discovered a real bargain—a pearl of great value—and sold everything he owned to purchase it!

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

A waiter approached our table the other night with what has become one of the most predictable rituals of eating out. He said, "Are you familiar with our salad bar?"

Is he crazy? At my age, it's the only thing I am familiar with.

To date, I have built my salad out of such cutesies as a bathtub filled with ice, a hay wagon, a pushcart, and a ferris wheel.

Basically, they are the same...a mound of ice featuring half-buried bowls of lettuce, shrimp, chicken, tuna, cottage cheese, pickled beets, cole slaw, fruit, assorted dressings, croutons and black pepper.

Don't misunderstand me. I'm not knocking salad bars. I consider them one of the most adventurous bits of daring to hit restaurants since the no-pay toilets.

It takes a lot of guts to put serving spoons into the hands of patrons and say, "Help yourself." That is probably why a lot of thought has gone into the salad bar because they have to consider man's most basic force: greed!

Thus, we have the salad bar with a glass angled over it. Within easy reach toward the front is the lettuce (39 cents a pound). In the rear is the crabmeat ($8 a pound) that you can reach only by leaning under the glass and severing your throat from the rest of your body.

As a shrimp freak, I am always interested in how they disguise them. One night the shrimp were so small I had to summon a waitress to identify them. (I had blemishes bigger than those little devils.)

In keeping with the "high risk" factor of self-service, I have noted that the coveted Blue Cheese and Roquefort dressings have serving spoons in them that I have not seen since I told my babies, "Open up wide, here come the choo-choo trains."

After the waiter asked his basic salad question, he progressed to even more intimacy by introducing himself. He said, "I'm Brad and I'm your waiter this evening. When you go to the salad bar, I'll turn in your order for dinner."

"Thank you Brad," I said. "I'm Erma, this is my husband, Bill, and my sons, Jaws I and Jaws II."

I thought I saw him wince but my husband said they carry insurance for nights like this.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Recently, more in jest than anything else, you recommended to readers that if they have any Confederate money left to hang on to it. You said, "With what's happening to the U.S. dollar, Confederate money might be as good as the currency we are using today." We should be so lucky!

The 50 cent Confederate Note is selling for $10.75 and the $5 Confederate Note is selling for $11.50. Thought you'd like to know what goes on in the world of finance. Money talks, you know. –R.S.K.

Dear R.S.K.: Money talks, all right, and the thing it has been saying lately is, "Goodbye."

Dear Ann Landers: This may be hard to believe but I have been married for seven years to a man who is illiterate. Bob (not his real name) cannot read or write. When we began going together I asked him how much schooling he had. He said ninth grade. Bob can sign his name and address and that's about all. He tried to fool me but I caught on shortly after we married.

I have tried very hard to get Bob to go to night school, but he is not interested. We now have a four-year-old son who is as sharp as a tack. He keeps asking his dad to read to him. My husband says, "Go ask your mother." Before long the boy will catch on, too.

Bob has held the same job for 11 years. He is a good worker but he'll never be able to advance unless he does something about his limitations. I love him. He's a fine person but the uncertainty about his future is making me nervous. What can I do to help him? — In A Dither

Dear Dither: Your husband probably has a learning disability which went undetected because he managed to bluff his way through and was passed from one grade to the next.

Contact a grade school principal and inquire about testing for learning disabilities. (Explain the person is an adult.) Perhaps if your husband knew his inability to read was due to a neurological or emotional problem and not stupidity he would be much more amenable to help. Good luck, dear. I hope he follows through. His life and yours will be ever so much richer if he overcomes this handicap.

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice to the woman who was frightened by obscene phone calls was good. You said, "Don't utter a sound. Simply hang up. The caller gets his jollies from an angry response and will continue to harass you if you fall into the trap."

My husband works for the phone company. He suggested another way to get rid of the sickies. Buy a dimestore whistle and keep it beside the phone. When an obscene call comes through — or someone who likes to play games — like breathing hard and not saying anything — or those who just let you say "Hello" and don't respond — blow the whistle as hard you can and it will just about take his ear off.

No charge for this, Ann. It's a payback for all the pleasure your column has given me and my family. — Grand Rapids, Mich.

Dear Grand: My friends at Ma Bell tell me the whistle is not a good idea. A "violent" reaction from the victim is what the sickie wants, and it will bring him back for more. The best way to turn him off is to hang up without a word.

It's not always easy to recognize love, especially the first time around. Acquaint yourself with the guidelines. Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Love or Sex and How to Tell the Difference." For a copy, mail 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

BY OSWALD JACOBY AND ALAN SONTAG

Oswald: "Some forty years ago I was shown the North hand. My questioner had doubled a one-diamond opening and received a one-spade response from South. He wanted to know what he should bid next. I suggested four spades and got the reply 'It dies there and we miss a slam.'"

Alan: "I don't suppose that you would have been that timid with the South hand."

Oswald: "I would probably have replied two spades back then, but if I had just bid one spade I would have found a bid past game after my partner jumped to four."

Alan: "I have suggested the modern way to reach his slam. South has 10 high-card points, four good spades and a really nice hand. It is a trifle too good for two spades which is only 99 percent forcing, so South cue bids diamonds.

"North cue bids right back, South knows that North is willing to play either spades or hearts and jumps to four spades whereupon North Blackwoods his way to six."

Oswald: "Six spades wraps up. There might be some trouble if all four trumps are in the East hand, but there are twelve easy tricks without that bad break."

Easter Crafts Inexpensive

NEW YORK (UPI) — Easter baskets that recycle throwaway plastic produce baskets are among the interesting and easy crafts in a new book by the crafts and travel editor of "Early American Life" magazine.

Most of the designs in "Holiday Magic" by Margaret Perry (Doubleday $10) either recycle materials or use inexpensive, eusily obtained materials, including paper doilies, cardboard, and construction and crepe papers.

Most projects are simple enough for children to do with little or no help from adults. Miss Perry's Easter egg tree, for example, consists of blown decorated eggs hung from bare tree branches seated in a onepound coffee can filled with plaster of Paris and covered with construction paper.

Trimmings on the eggs include lace seam binding, rickrack and metallic gift package cord.

The book covers both Christian and Jewish religious holidays, national holidays such as Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays; American Indian Jay and Mother's and Father's days.

TEARING TIPS

Cutting or tearing green leaves of vegetables activates enzymes which increase the deterioration of certain vitamins. Cutting vegetables also increase exposure to air and causes loss of some vitamins through oxidation. So don't cut green vegetables until just before you plan to cook them.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

In recent weeks, the number of income tax questions reaching this desk have, understandably, increased at a geometric rate. April 15 is fast approaching.

Rather than risk making errors (which is easy to do when discussing tax matters) I've asked the IRS office to set forth the "book" answers on popular queries. Here goes:

Q. My husband and I are both over 65. We sold our home in August 1977 at a gain of $10,000. Are we eligible for any special tax benefits of this gain?

A. You may be able to exclude from gross income all or part of your gain. One of your must have been 65 or older on the date of sale; you must have owned and used the home as your principal residence for at least five of the eight years ending on the date of sale; and neither of you can have previously elected this benefit. For the tax year 1977 (for which you file a report April 15) you may exclude from gross income the entire gain on the sale if the adjusted sales price is $35,000 or less. If the adjusted sales price is more than $35,000, the tax break is prorated. In the past, the full tax break could be taken only if the adjusted sales price was $20,000 or less.

Adjusted sales price means the amount you receive after paying selling commissions and certain allowable fixing-up expenses, such as painting part of the interior of the house. To report the sale of your home use Form 2119, "Sale of Exchange of Personal Residence." More information on the sale of a home by older people is available free from the IRS in Publication 523, "Tax Information on Selling or Purchasing Your Home," and Publication 554, "Tax Benefits for Older Americans."

Q. My insurance company sent me a statement saying it paid dividends and interest on my life policy. They don't actually send me a check. Does any of this have to be shown on my tax return?

A. Interest earned on dividends that are left on deposit with the company is taxable. The dividends are not taxable unless they exceed the premiums you have paid.

"When I call a conference, nobody comes."

Many out-of-town conferences consist of groups of people who keep minutes and waste days. My time's too valuable. That's why I hold a lot of my meetings by phone—on Long Distance conference calls.

I just dial "0" and ask for a conference operator who can connect me with up to 58 other telephone numbers. Coast to coast. Even overseas. The call is put through as soon as possible, or I can arrange to have a conference call placed at a specified time. And if I want to communicate important announcements, instructions or one of my famous pep talks to our other offices—without back talk—I can ask to transmit only. My telephone becomes a microphone.

Conference calling isn't expensive, either. For example, my 15-minute teleconference with the managers in St. Louis, Los Angeles and New York this afternoon cost about $30, plus tax. A sound investment, considering all four of us discussed my proposal at the same time. I didn't have to make additional calls to repeat information, and none of us had to spend our valuable time traveling. But most important, we got the job done. Today.

So if out-of-town conferences are your problem, remember the system is the solution. And a Long Distance conference call is part of the system you can use to keep people informed, and keep them working... simultaneously.

A good idea? It's genius!

American Girl Star In Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The latest sensation on Brazilian television is blonde, beautiful, sexy and talented. And, ironically in this land known for its beautiful women, she's American.

She's Kate Lyra, born Katherine Riddell in the little copper mining town of Ray, Ariz., 30 years ago.

In the past year on a nationally televised comedy show, she's become one of Brazil's most popular TV actresses and consequently one of the most sought-after models and covergirls.

Even more than her beauty and acting, it was a single phrase in Portuguese that thrust her into overnight fame: "O Brasileiro e tao bonzinho," which roughly translated means "Brazilian men are just so nice."

The line is delivered deadpan after she has recounted to the show's host her latest episode with a crafty Brazilian trying to lure her into a compromising situation. She naively mistakes his attentions as gentlemanly efforts to help an American girl in a fogeign land.

The show is called "Praca da Alegria," which means "Happiness Square," and its format is a park bench by which pass a variety of characters, each with his own comedy role.

Kate Lyra is the stereotype of a dumb, wide-eyed and beautiful American as seen by her Brazilian gag writers. The performance is a credit to her acting ability, because off the tube she's anything but the dumb blonde.

After a "typical small-town American childhood — I was a pompon girl, secretary of the student council and valedictorian of my class and I had won a beauty contest and was going to be a lawyer when I grew up" — Kate Lyra spent two years at the University of Arizona, then went to Mexico to study Mexican-American law.

But in Guadalajara, she got a job in a discoteque and later moved on to Mexico City, where she got an acting job in a film and started doing modeling for TV commercials. In 1969, she auditioned for a Brazilian musical play — "Poor Little Rich Girl" — and wound with the part and the author-composer-producer, Carlos Lyra.

After a two-year run of the play in Mexico, the couple returned to Brazil. And a few months later, their first and so far only child, Kay, now 6 years old, was born.

Kate got a job as a tourist guide but, "After I'd been doing that for seven days, I said 'Oh, yuk,'" she said, and she returned to her former job, modeling. Modeling jobs led to movie offers and she appeared in four feature films as well as on magazine covers.

KATE LYRA

In her films, her speaking parts were always dubbed and, with her Brazilian last name, nobody suspected she was really an American.

In 1974, the couple went to Los Angeles and Kate had a couple of appearances on the Rich Little Show. She also took a screen play-writing course and did vocals on a record featuring Bobbie Humphreys on the flute.

Besides her acting, singing and modeling, Kate Lyra has become an accomplished writer of lyrics. She has done English lyrics for a number of her husband's songs, including two recorded on a Sergio Mendes album, "Home Cooking" and "It's so Obvious."

In 1976, they returned to Rio and when TV Globo decided to revive its famous "Praca da Alegria" show which had previously had a successful 14-year run, she was asked to play the dumb American.

"When I read the script I thought, 'My god, this is insane. I'll never be able to say this in public. But anyway I did and it caught on. All of a sudden it was famous all over."

Now she's famous and has the mixed blessing-curse of all stars — instant recognition by fans, many of whom just can't believe she's not Brazilian.

She is currently at work writing a screen play and a television show and already has done a pilot for a children's musical for the local educational TV station. And she's still writing lyrics, mainly for her husband.

Museum Sets Folk Workshop

Folk arts and folk culture — fiddling to yarn spinning, water witching to quilting, rodeo to gospel singing and you-name-it — are on tap for the April 7-8 workshop at The Museum of Texas Tech University.

The end result of a blending of customs, cultures and culinary arts into an area uniquely its own will be subject of the Lubbock chapter of Regional Workshops on Folk Arts and Folk Culture sponsored state-wide by the University of Texas at Austin.

At Tech, the Division of Continuing Education is co-sponsoring the Lubbock Regional Workshop in Folklife open to everyone.

Sessions April 7 will examine such things as the Texas Cowboy Reunion, se the cowboy songs of Texas folklorist John Lomax, examples of Texas folklore on tapes and slides, instructions in constructing a regional profile of folk culture and a film on Mexican-American cultures.

One segment will be devoted to folk culture and related interests—education, history, fine arts, popular culture, ethnicity, performance and festivals.

Tech personnel will assist with the April 8 production—Dr. Evelyn Montgomery of the anthropology department and Dr. Warren Walker of the English department. Dr. T. Lindsay Baker of Tech will discuss Silesian Poles of Texas and Poland.

A film on Cajun Culture; the ethics and procedures of folklore projects; the techniques and methodology of collecting, preserving and presenting of folklore will take up most of the session.

A children's folklore performance will highlight the afternoon program which ends with a look at local, state and national folklore projects along with development of regional resources and the funding of such projects.

D. M. McElroy at Tech is the local contact for the workshop, but registration must be made with Folklore, Box 7879, Austin, Texas 78712.

Workshop fee is $20 with checks payable to the University of Texas.

The workshops began in February at Temple and have been conducted in Odessa and Fort Worth. The workshop, with Beverly Stoeltoe as instructor, will come to Lubbock from Beaumont and go to Edinburg.

Shah Condemns Raid

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi has condemned the Israeli raid on southern Lebanon as "bullying" and said it was new evidence of the ineffectiveness of the United Nations.

Jackie Gleason Returns To Stage Performance

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Jackie Gleason is doing live theatre for the first time since his 1959 Tony Award winning performance as Best Broadway Actor in "Take Me Along," and as "The Great One" is fond of saying, "How sweet it is!"

Gleason, a trim 210 pounds at age 62, took a break from the opening run of Larry Gelbart's adaption of "The Sly Fox" at San Diego's Fox Theatre to reminisce about a lengthy career that began as a swimmer and diver in water shows with Johnny Weissmuller of Tarzan fame.

"The part of Foxwell J. Sly was originally written for me," said Gleason, sipping drinks at Pernicano's Restaurant before a recent evening show. "But I didn't want to play Broadway...didn't want to do a show."

So the part went — along with rave reviews — to George C. Scott and then to Robert Preston for long Broadway runs.

"I told them not to send the script," Gleason said. "But after the show had been open for a year, I went into my den and there's the script lying on my desk. I opened it up and I started to read and I got nailed."

Gleason has never been one to shy from working. His career has included everything vaudeville and burlesque to television, films and the stage.

"But I don't like to show up anywhere at 1 o'clock every night," he explained. "It's hard work and I discipline myself. I have great discipline when I work and I just didn't want to be hung up with that discipline."

The script by Gelbart, whose credits include the "M-A-S-H" television series, provides "a perfect vehicle for someone like myself," says Gleason. And being back on stage "feels great."

"I've never been idle, never been idle," he said. "And I don't take things just because I particularly think they are going to be good for me. I like to work with interesting people like the Otto Preminingers and Maureen O'Haras."

Gleason is a close friend of Orson Welles and has run with Humphrey Bogart and Peter Lorre. "I'm the only man Bogart ever bought lunch for," he recalled.

After playing San Diego, "The Sly Fox" goes to San Francisco, Chicago, Detroit and Philadelphia before it opens Sept. 11 on Broadway. Gleason stars with another Tony Award winner, Cleavon Little, under the direction of Arthur Penn.

"It's wonderful working with Penn," Said Gleason. "He's not an absolute guy. He'll listen to you and allow you to make suggestions and if they're any good, he accepts them. You can argue with him."

Is a man of Gleason's fame inundated with scripts?

"No, they gave up because I kept sending them back," he said. "Now and then someone will send me a script like 'Smokey and the Bandit.'"

That movie starring Burt Reynolds evolved into the No. 2 box office grosser last year and was Gleason's first chance to do a "red-neck sheriff."

"I think it was the first 'Rocky,'" he smiled. "You know, people would stand up at the end of the picture and applaud. I never saw that in a theater. They were happy that Burt got away and I was still going after him. And I could see 'Son of Smokey' coming up..."

And speaking of sequels?

"Yeah, they're talking about it, but Burt's inundated with work," said Gleason. "Reynolds could be a great comedian.

Gleason says playing "The Sly Fox," a turn-about on a Elizabethan morality play by Ben Jonson in which Sly uses the greed of others to enrich himself, takes every method in his comedic bag of tricks.

"You gotta use nine different techniques," he explained about playing large auditoriums and cavernous theaters. "You have to use vaudeville, burlesque, legit, and you don't dare turn your back on the audience. On top of that, in the second act alone I have five changes, rapid changes because I play two guys in the show."

But "The Sly Fox," says Gleason, is a joy. "We got great notices," he beamed. "Startling notices," including a solid review by Variety.

For a man who doesn't like to work and professes to be on his second fortune — the one for security after spending the first for fun — Gleason has boundless enthusiasm. He says it's heart that keeps an actor going after four months on the road.

Space Latest U.S.-Soviet Pressure Point

take his place as a military observer in space. The outlook for the future seems unlimited.

U.S. intelligence officials believe the Russians intend to keep cosmonauts in space from now on, aboard Salyut space stations, to perform both scientific and military tasks.

The U.S. Air Force in the late 1960s had planned a space program named Manned Orbiting Laboratory and had named a team of astronauts to fly it to determine precisely what military tasks man could do in orbit.

But that project was cancelled, and the Pentagon must now wait until 1983 for a full-fledged manned military space program. That's when it will get a space shuttle, and it will mark a huge advance over the Russian effort.

The shuttle is a reuseable ship being developed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to be the workhorse of the U.S. program into the 1990s. It will take off from earth with rocket assist and land on earth like an airliner, ready to be refurbished for another launching within two weeks.

Each shuttle will be the size of a DC9 airliner and will be able to carry seven persons and 65,000 pounds of cargo. It will be used initially to carry satellites into orbit, to repair others on the spot or return them to earth for maintenance.

The shuttle will launch planetary probes from low earth orbit and will haul up space laboratories and parts to build large stations and other facilities in space. It will open up space travel to men and women of many nations and will make space rockets obsolete.

NASA has authority to build four shuttles and plans to start orbital tests of the first one next year. NASA will fly two of the shuttles out of Cape Canaveral, Fla., the Air Force will operate one out of Vandenberg Air Force Base, and the two agencies will share the fourth. Others may be built later.

The space agency projects 560 shuttle flights between 1979 and 1991, with 109 of them assigned to the Defense Department.

"The shuttle will be a very versatile transportation system," said one NASA official. "We won't really know all its capabilities until we start flying it."

On the military side, the shuttle crews will carry up satellites now launched by rockets and perform many of the same functions as the NASA shuttles. But Pentagon planners also see it as a good reconnaissance tool and as a potential fighter plane or satellite destroyer in case of war.

They contend a man aboard a spacecraft could spot and aim a knockout weapon at an enemy missile or satellite with a greater accuracy than an unmanned payload. He also could direct sensors at likely reconnaissance targets and se could sift out and relay data to earth with interpretation.

Some Air Force officials foresee the day when America's global strike force may be controlled from a command post in space.

"We may find," one said, "that this is the only survivable command and control structure. Should such a spaceborne command post become necessary, it would have to be large enough to carry all the electronic gear required to gather, process and disseminate operational information on a global basis. It would have to be capable of defending itself against any interference or attacks from the ground or in space."

He said the station would have to be able to dispatch manned ships to protect against attacks and to search out suspected enemy weapons carriers in space, board them and, if necessary, neutralize them.

By then, these Buck Rogers-like ships might be needed to protect non-military colonies that one day will be built in space, to support factories or just to excape an overcrowded earth.

Some in the Pentagon envision mammoth military installations in space. There would be elaborate communications facilities, sophisticated observation systems, workshops for repair, refueling and rearming of space battleships. It might support a space fleet scattered thousands of miles in space, perhaps out to the planets, ready to fight a far-out war.

Such an outpost might become a command center for the president in case of war.

"Whether we'll ever see such an installation is something we can't foresee right now," a defense planner said.

"But who knows what lies ahead?

"Man has moved from the earth's atmosphere into space in an instant of time. We who have witnessed this scientific miracle must acknowledge that it could lead to developments that we cannot now define."

Science Becomes Sophisticated

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Looking into the future is becoming a science fit for graduate studies. One school is teaching students how to combine numbers, imagination and good thinking to predict society's needs. Accuracy isn't important, and pessimists need not apply.)

By JIM CARRIER

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Looking into the future, which put food on the table for generations of fortune tellers, is becoming a profession for Ph.D.s.

Graduate students at the University of Minnesota are learning to forecast, not with crystal balls, hocus-pocus or tarot cards, but with statistics, imagination and a healthy dose of what one of them calls "good thinking."

It is known as futures studies or anticipatory science, and its graduates will call themselves futurists.

Most of us are intrigued by the future but don't have the faintest idea of what it holds for us. We flip to the astrology chart in the morning paper for a foolish look at the hours ahead. Good day, bad day, tall dark stranger. It doesn't matter what it says so long as it says something. It doesn't matter if it's right. It confirms we have a future.

In a way, that's how the futurist operates. He tells us that the accuracy of his forecast is unimportant. It is the process of looking forward that counts, that gives us some control of our destiny.

In a practical sense, forecasting what the automobile engine will be like 20 years from now is a step toward controlling our destiny.

The futurist would calculate the amount of gasoline that will be available; get educated guesses from experts on new engines, new metals and new fuels that might be developed; plug in the likelihood of mass transit and estimate where people will be living and how they will use cars.

Juggling these variables would give a range of possible engine types and uses. From these choices an engine company could choose one or two and tool up for them.

"The real test is not the accuracy of the prediction," says futurist Earl Joseph, who helped design the course. "The real test is: Did we steer that part of society along the path we wanted?"

If we had looked beyond our noses a few years ago, the futurists say, we wouldn't have been surprised when we ran short of gasoline, or polluted our rivers. Those bitter lessons have given everyone a simple lesson in future studies.

"You immediately look at the consequences," says graduate student Elizabeth Wroblewski.

The grads learn that nearly everything in the future is interconnected in complex ways, that almost any action causes a reaction. And they learn to visualize these relationships with a tool called general systems theory, which charts "information flows," "energy flows" and "feedback loops."

The program's first — and so far only — Ph.D. graduate is using the "systems" approach in her new job as director of research for the Minnesota Medical Association. Angie Nelson is grappling with the future of medical costs, under study by a cost-containment committee.

By forecasting the consequences of possible cost-cutting measures she can give policymakers a choice. Just one small example is a study of empty hospital beds.

Closing wings or entire hospitals is one choice, but Nelson sees as a consequence losses in jobs and services to surrounding neighborhoods.

Another possible choice is turning hospitals into "graduated care centers" in which patients would be charged according to the services they need. A patient in intensive care would pay top rates while a patient using the bed between laboratory tests would pay considerably less. One immediate need Nelson forsees is that government health regulations would have to be changed.

"Nothing ever has an easy answer," she says. "The committee will look at several ideas and decide which is the most cost effective without affecting care. We hope to start cutting costs in Minnesota with something unique."

The university's 8-year-old future studies program is headed by Arthur Harkins, an anthropologist with rugged good looks who wears blue jeans and goose-down vests to class. In his crowded cubby-hole of an office there is nothing that hints of tomorrow except for a blown-up picture of an Apollo console propped on a shelf spilling over with papers.

He is a theorist and expects his students to pick up on their own the statistical methods futurists use: Trend extrapolation, future wheels, relevance trees, the cross-impact matrix or the Delphi technique, named for the Greek oracle.

Harkins spends his time challenging his students to think. If the class drifts, he drifts with it making no attempt to focus on futures.

When he talks, he rips the English language apart and glues it back together in prases that leave some of the graduates frowning. He urges them to be "cosmocentric," that is, to look behind their own tiny planet and solar system; he derides the "giant techno-fix," ideology which offers to solve all our problems by applying technology on a grand scale, such as fusion power; and he speaks of the "synapse" or connection between futurists and general system theorists. He insists that the future requires a new language and is apparently paving the way.

In his Societies of the Future class, students fantasize about life in a space colony. They hear a spacecraft designer describe engines of anti-matter, eight-hour rides to the moon and asteroid mining camps.

"It opens up the imagination because it is completely alien," says Earl Joseph, a Sperry-Univac staff scientist who helped Harkins design the course. "What about sports — baseball — in zero gravity? Or new games? It is a neat tool for developing imagination."

The futurist is invariably a science fiction fan. For to view tomorrow, he cannot be limited by what he thinks is possible only by his imagination. And good science fiction stretches the mind.

But Harkins says a good newspaper is still the best source of the future. New discoveries, science news, trends, studies — the whole wide range is important to the futurist.

"You read anything you can get your hands on," says Dick Kolkmann, who forecasts energy requirements 10 to 20 years ahead for the Minneapolis-based utility Northern States Power. NSP put its executives through a nine-month futures class taught by Harkins and recently pulled back on plans for a new generator because of forecasts that demand won't be as great as expected.

NSP uses mathematical computer models involving about 1,000 equations to help predict the future. The models relate the number of households and economy to energy needs.

By looking at fertility rates, mortality rates and migration patterns, and projecting them years ahead, the company forecasts that households will be smaller and that the demand for housing will maintain its current pace.

The forecasters also can divine from birth rates the kind of jobs people will get, and from that their personal income, and from that their likely purchases of energy-using appliances. All signs point to a growth "not nearly as great as anticipated," says Kolkmann.

Such practical use of futures research is nothing new to the military, and to "think tanks" where some of the university graduates may work.

Futurists won't have trouble finding jobs, Harkins says, because they are policymakers. They are not afraid to deal with things they weren't trained to deal with. They are generalists, not bound by the limits of one specialty.

But above all, they are optimists. They know that merely by thinking about the future, they can change it.

Futurist Sees Better World After Collapse Of Industries

(EDITOR'S NOTE: He translives the planet, has studied everywhere and nowhere, speaks Unilang and projects a rosy future. He says we can't plan for it because things will happen too fast, but whoever's alive in 20 years will be immortal.)

By KAY BARTLETT

NEW YORK (AP) — Prophets of doom, alarmists, propounders of a collapsing world and those folks carrying signs saying "The World Is Ending," move over.

F.M. Esfandiary is upon us — a visionary optimist, philosopher and futurist. He agrees with the proponents of gloom in some ways but it simply cheers him up.

"The feudal industrial world is collapsing around us and I rejoice and marvel in it," says Esfandiary.

He believes the brightest of futures is upon us and will be ours by the year 2010 — or sooner. He believes, for instance, that anyone alive 20 years from now will be immortal, there will be limitless energy and food, we will reproduce — if we choose to — by cloning and test tube babies, we will all speak the same language, will be linked by instant communication and will have no permanent homes or families.

The world, in a sense, will be ours.

His only fear of his projections — "not predictions, I have no crystal ball" — are that they might be a little conservative.

"Ten years ago when I said these things people were ready to throw tomatoes at me, but that was all right since I'm a vegetarian and love tomatoes. But now when I am on panels or talk shows, the questions are not if, but when."

He says we can't plan for these changes because they will be so rapid. And already are. In 1920 a heart transplant, a trip to the moon, even pocket calculators would have sounded absurd. Today, every 8-year-old knows about them and we are just beginning to move, says Esfandiary.

He has taught at UCLA and the New School for Social Research in New York and has lectured extensively.

His book jackets are garnished with the following comments: "ruthlessly realistic" — Dr. Glenn Seaborg, former chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission; "persuasive" — The New Yorker; offering a "pungent philosophical assault on the pessimism of modern times" — Publisher's Weekly.

But who is Esfandiary and where do his futuristic theories come from? From his self-description on his three books, "Up-Wingers," "Telespheres," and "Optimism One:"

"I am Universal. I translive all over the planet. Learn via Unicom. Have many professions. Am involved with many people. Consider all children as mine also ... I have no age. Am born and reborn every day. I intend to live forever ..."

Even J.D. Salinger's book jacket was slightly more specific: He admitted to owning a dog.

Esfandiary says: "I am thrown off by such common questions as: What is your nationality? Where do you live? What is your profession? Where did you study? Are you married? How old are you?"

This Iranian-born philosopher, whose mother chose to possess him about 40 to 45 years ago — his description of motherhood — had lived in 10 to 15 countries by the time he was 15. A global diplomatic brat, as it were, Daddy being in the corps.

He says he had no feelings of being uprooted. "Far from feeling burdened, I felt very uplifted. The new has never awed me."

He says he's never been married, lives in Greenwich Village above a restaurant that emits wonderful smells at 3 o'clock in the morning and spends his summers at a mobilia in the fashionable Hamptons on Long Island.

Mobilia, as one finds in the glossary of made-up words in the back of Esfandiary's works, is "The stage beyond family and commune. A mobilia is a fluid commune — a transcommune. People linkup for a few days or weeks or months — then linkout."

And what degrees does he possess to enable him to talk about the imminence of store-bought replacements for every part of the body, ova banks, life-support suits that will keep us comfortable year round, and instantaneous elections or communications with the little computer-devices we will all own?

"I have several degrees from the finest kindergartens in Asia. Degrees would be useless. Books that I recommended two years ago are now out of date. What I would have learned 20 years ago would be completely out of date. I take courses constantly and read volumes of scientific journals."

How many languages would a global citizen like this speak?

"Unilang."

That's also in the glossary. It's his word for English.

"If everybody started calling it Unilang and forget any nationality, it might become more widely accepted. It is already the universal language of computers and airplanes. It is the language of the future.

"Besides, what is so important about language? Any cab driver in Tangier speaks eight languages and any camel driver speaks four."

Esfandiary has a following, Up-Wingers, with branches in New York, Orlando, New Orleans, Washington and Los Angeles. But he's not sure how many members there are since Up-Wingers are a mobile, free-flowing group.

He also has his critics. He says he gets the most negative reaction when he calls for the complete abandonment of the family and describes motherhood as a cop-out for women who are afraid to get involved with the world and contribute to it.

Esfandiary is a tall, handsome man, with intense brown eyes, bushy eyebrows and a scar on his left cheek that looks like it originates from something at least as dramatic as a duel with Errol Flynn.

How did that happen?

Esfandiary, in a rare burst of candor, answered.

"That," he conceded, "was a mistake."

Airline Makes Initial Hop To London

DALLAS (AP) — Seventeen days and 10 minutes later than scheduled, a huge Braniff International 747 roared down the runway at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, winging its way to London.

The flight was delayed until Saturday night because the United States and Britain could not resolve a dispute over low-fares proposed by Braniff and opposed by the British.

The dispute was resolved by an agreement under which Braniff can begin low-fare service from Dallas-Fort Worth to London and other carriers can fly at reduced rates to 13 other cities in the United States.

Harding L. Lawrence, board chairman of Braniff, said he is "extremely satisfied" with the agreement although it did not include approval of a Braniff proposal to offer standby fares and group round-trip service to other cities from New Orleans to Denver for only $50 more than the transatlantic fare.

Lawrence told a news conference Saturday night, "What we proposed was reasonable, good business ... and definitely not predatory."

He said it would be impossible to determine how much money the airline lost because of the 17-day delay.

The first of the daily flights carried 228 passengers, including 100 Braniff employees.

Devils Blister 'Cats

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Tournament Most Valuable Player Jim Spanarkel called the fast break Duke's key in winning the NCAA East Regional basketball tournament Sunday, moving the Blue Devils into the national semifinals for the first time in a decade.

"We came out fired up, looking for the fast break, and that was the turning point," the junior guard said after Duke routed Villanova 90-72 to advance to St. Louis.

Spanarkel, a 6-foot-5 gunner, had 22 points Sunday and 21 Friday night in Duke's 84-80 regional semifinal victory over Penn.

"We put everything together," said Duke Coach Bill Foster. "They missed some shots early and we were rebounding with a vengeance. We had four hands on the ball sometimes."

Duke's hustling zone defense forced Villanova turnovers and stymied the Wildcats' shooting to build the lead to double figures in the first five minutes. The Blue Devils never looked back.

"We don't get behind too often and make a big game of it," said Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino. "Everything Duke shot went in. We had to play catch-up."

Duke controlled the rebounding 40-30

Longhorns, Pack Advance To Finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Texas turned on the power with a 21-8 scoring burst behind Tyrone Branyan early in the second half and the 17th-ranked Longhorns went on to a 96-76 college basketball victory over Rutgers Sunday night and joined North Carolina State in the finals of the National Invitational Tournament.

North Carolina State made the championship round earlier Sunday with an 86-85 overtime victory over Georgetown on Clyde Austin's desperation 40-foot shot at the buzzer.

The doubleheader was played before a paid crowd of 18,504, the firt sellout for the NIT at Madison Square Garden since 1968.

Texas and Rutgers were locked in a close battle until, with 16 minutes left, Branyan keyed the Longhorns' game-breaking scoring spree.

The 6-foot-7 forward scored 8 of his 24 points as the Longhorns stretched a 5-point lead to 18 at 75-57 with 9:23 left.

With Branyan and high scorer Jim Krivacs contributing more baskets down the stretch, the Longhorns improved their margin to as much as 22 points and, with 2½ minutes left in the game, Coach Abe Lemons pulled most of his regulars.

With the help of 55 percent shooting in the first half and the combined 30 points of Krivacs and Ron Baxter, Texas grabbed a 48-42 lead. A 3-point play by Steve Hefele gave Rutgers life at the 16:30 mark as the Scarlet Knights cut the Texas lead to 54-49. But John Moore scored a basket and the Longhorns then began their decisive burst.

Krivacs led the Longhorns, 25-5, with 25 points and Baxter added 19.

Hollis Copeland scored 25 points and Jim Bailey had 19 for Rutgers, 23-7.

Austin's running one-hander capped a wild opening game in which the Hoyas had taken an 85-84 lead just 6 seconds from the end of overtime on a 3-point play by Craig Shelton.

North Carolina State dropped behind by 12 points, 49-37, at the start of the second half. But Hawkeye Whitney and Kendal Pinder led a spectacular second-half rally for the Wolfpack, triggering them into a 6-point lead at 67-61 with 7 minutes remaining.

North Carolina State stayed in front until Georgetown tied the game with a 4-point burst in the last 44 seconds of regulation, with Craig Esherick sending the game into overtime tied at 78.

Art Jones and Austin scored two quick baskets at the start of overtime to put North Carolina State ahead 82-78, but Georgetown tied the game on two free throws each by Ed Hopkins and Esherick.

Pinder's field goal with 18 seconds remaining in overtime gave North Carolina State an 84-82 lead before the 3-point play by Shelton put Georgetown back on top.

Whitney led North Carolina State, 21-9, with 26 points while Pinder added 25. The Hoyas, 23-7, were led by John Duren's 26 points and Shelton's 25.

Freshman forward Kenny Dennard sparked the Blue Devils in the second half with 12 points to help hold off the desperate Wildcats.

Duke, which last appeared in the NCAA semifinals in 1966, when it lost to Kentucky, used its team speed and a defense that did not let up despite the big lead to effectively put the game out of reach after just five minutes of the second half.

Irish Whip Blue Demons, Head To 'Gravy' Bowl

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Notre Dame, for the first time in its storied athletic history, is going to the semifinals of the NCAA basketball championships and an elated Coach Digger Phelps says whatever happens, "The rest is gravy."

"To make it to the final four is just unbelievable," Phelps said Sunday after a second-half rally boosted the Irish past DePaul 84-64 in the Midwest Regional final. "All we've been living for is this moment."

The Irish, 23-6, will meet Duke, a 90-72 victor over Villanova Sunday, in the NCAA semifinals next Sunday in St. Louis.

Phelps paused in his post-game analysis to praise Ray Meyer, the 64-year-old DePaul coach who captained Notre Dame teams in the late 1930s.

"Ray Meyer has done so much for college basketball," said Phelps. "As far as I'm concerned, Ray Meyer is the coach of the year."

The Irish, after losing a 4-point halftime lead, took the lead for good with 11:48 remaining when Kelly Tripucka's basket made it 47-46. Tripucka, who led the Irish with 18 points, keyed a 22-8 surge that put the game out of reach, Bill Laimbeer's 10-footer making it 67-54.

"We felt we just had to go after them," said Phelps. "Then, after we got control and momentum, we were in a position to be patient and work."

DePaul's star center, Dave Corzine, dislocated the little finger of his left finger in practice Saturday. The 6-foot-11 senior, DePaul's career scoring leader, was held to only 17 points.

"This made it painful for him to catch the ball, but I thought he put on a courageous performance," Meyer said of Corzine. "But the Notre Dame depth wears you down and I doubt if it would have made any difference."

DePaul, 27-3, was held scoreless from 7:54 until Curtis Watkins hit a short jumper at 4:51. The Blue Demons were ranked third in the final Associated Press poll while Notre Dame was rated sixth. DePaul had beaten the Irish at Notre Dame during the regular season.

DePaul quickly erased a 37-33 halftime deficit with Corzine scoring seven points in the first four minutes after intermission in an 11-2 run that put the Blue Demons ahead 44-39.

Notre Dame halted that surge with Rich Branning's 15-footer and then Tripucka, the hero of Notre Dame's Midwest Regional semifinal victory over Utah, hit three straight buckets.

The Irish dominated the rebounding in the final 12 minutes. DePaul seldom was afforded a second shot while the Irish often took two or three.

In the first half, the two Catholic rivals swapped baskets until Joe Ponsetto, hitting a hook from the lane, gave DePaul its first lead at 12-10. Moments later Gary Garland, who hit 14 points for the Blue Demons, fed Randy Ramsey for a bucket that gave DePaul an 18-12 advantage.

After Laimbeer pulled the Irish to within one at 22-21 with a pair of free throws, DePaul ran off seven points to take its biggest lead of the game at 29-21.

Tripucka, Dave Batton and Laimbeer responded with six points for the Irish and Laimbeer knotted the score at 33 with 1:15 left.

Bill Hanzlik then gave Notre Dame its first lead since the opening minutes with a 15-footer from the right side and, at the buzzer, Tripucka tipped in a Laimbeer shot to give the Irish a four-point advantage at the break.

Rich Branning and Laimbeer each scored 12 points for the Irish and guard Don Williams had 10.

Philly Hurler Aids Own Cause

By The Associated Press

Are the pitchers ahead of the hitters or vice versa? Philadelphia's Warren Brustar apparently is both.

The Phillies' reliever not only blanked St. Louis over the final three innings Sunday but also slammed a bases-loaded triple to highlight a five-run 10th inning that gave the Phillies a 7-2 exhibition baseball victory over the Cardinals.

Six Philadelphia runs, including all five in the decisive 10th, were unearned, thanks to a half-dozen St. Louis errors.

Meanwhile, last year's World Series opponents continued to have their problems.

Bo Diaz tripled home the winning run in the 12th inning to give the Boston Red Sox a 5-4 victory over the New York Yankees while Gary Carter doubled twice and Ellis Valentine homered to lead the Montreal Expos over Los Angeles 7-5 despite three Dodger homers.

The Seattle Mariners ended San Francisco's eight-game winning streak, getting run-scoring hits from George Mitterwald and Julio Cruz in the fifth inning and nipping the Giants 3-2.

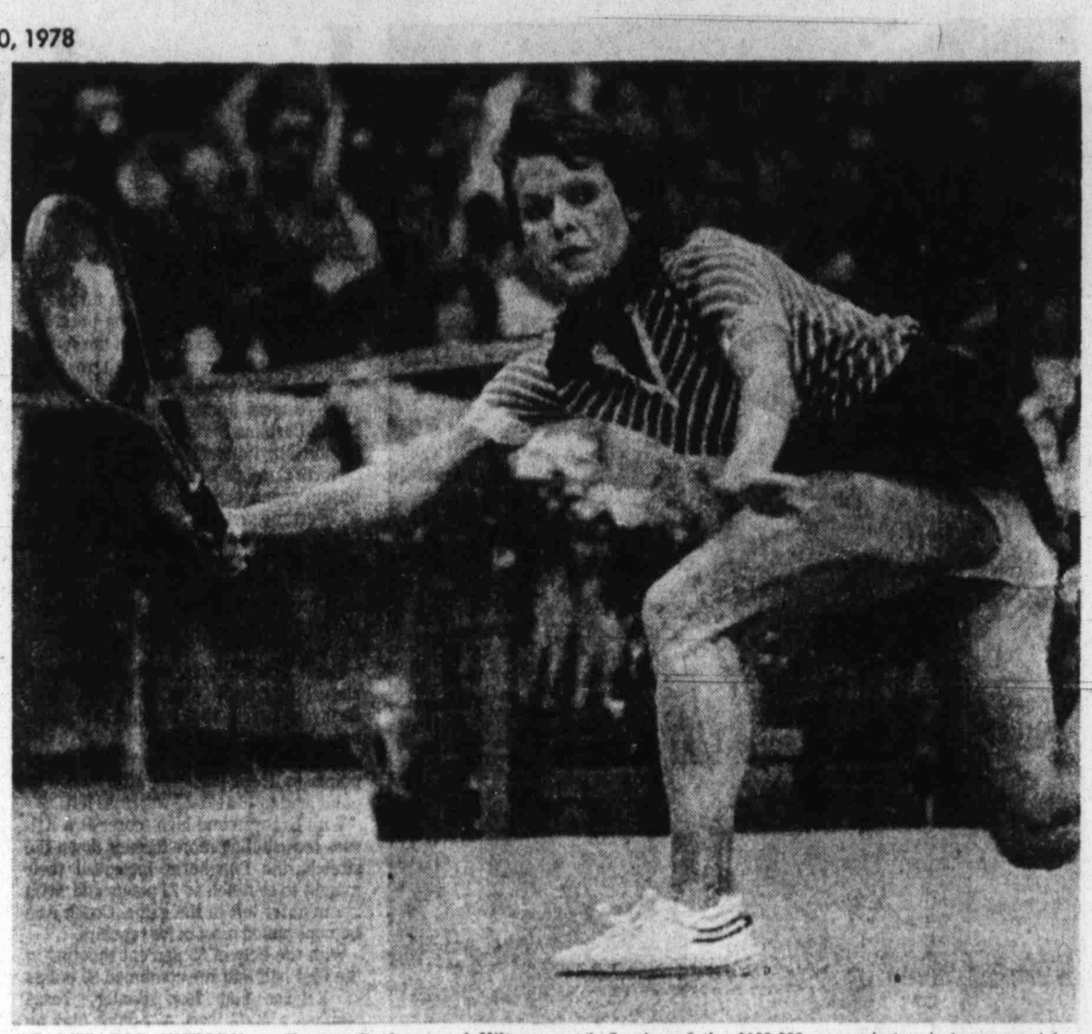
Dennis Leonard became the first Kansas City pitcher to go five innings — he yielded two runs and six hits — as the Royals downed the Toronto Blue Jays 6-3 and Detroit's Charlie Spikes slammed a three-run homer in the bottom of the ninth to take over the club RBI lead with 11 and lift the Tigers to a 5-4 triumph over the Chicago White Sox.

The Texas Rangers edged the Atlanta Braves 3-2 on rookie Pat Putnam's two-run pinch homer in the ninth inning for their ninth success in 10 spring games and George Foster's fourth exhibition homer, a two-run shot in the ninth inning, helped the Cincinnati Reds turn back the New York Mets 8-5.

The Pittsburgh Pirates suffered their ninth setback in 10 starts when Baltimore's Mike Flanagan, John Flinn and Tim Stoddard held them to three hits in the Orioles' 4-0 victory. Sam Perlozzo's bases-loaded single in the eighth inning lifted the Minnesota Twins over the Houston Astros 6-5.

Rance Mulliniks scored from second base on Milwaukee shortstop Robin Yount's two-out error as the California Angels defeated the Brewers 2-1 in a 14-inning game. Yount made a diving stop behind the bag on a grounder but his throw to second trying for a force play was wild.

Gene Richards drove in five runs with a single, double and homer to pace the San Diego Padres over the Cleveland Indians' 'A' team 8-3 while another Cleveland squad defeated the University of Arizona 5-3 with Willie Horton driving in a pair of runs.



HEADED FOR VICTORY — Evonne Goolagong of Hilton Head, S.C., makes a return shot to Chris Evert in their finals match Sunday of the $100,000 women's tennis tournament is Boston. Goolagong won the match 4-6, 6-1, 6-4. (AP Laserphoto)

HOLE-IN-ONE

Bill Houshins used a two iron to record a hole-in-one on the fourth hole at Pine Hill golf course Sunday. Looking on were Pat Richmond, Darrell Johnson and Lynn Cox. The hole is par 3, 182 yards long.

Leslie, Acosta Honored

For the second straight week, Lubbock Chirstian College hurler Oscar Acosta is the Texoma Conference pitcher of the week.

Actually, the freshman from Portales shared the mound honor with Midwestern sophomore Daryl Frazier, who reaped the first weekly award.

But it was the hitters who made the most noise last week and Chaparral Tim Leslie was among the leaders there, as his .605 batting average for 10 games attests.

Leslie, however, shared the hitting laurels with another sophomore, Rich Eberly of Texas Wesleyan.

All Leslie did in 10 games last week was: go 23-for-38, improving his average 104 points to .471, the best in the league. He also had four doubles, six homers and 22 RBIs, plus stole three bases and walked four times.

Eberly, in eight game, went 12-for-23, upping his average from .229 to .324. Plus he had five doubles, a triple, four homers, 21 RBIs and drew 11 walks.

Acosta had only one mound appearance, but went 12 inninngs and threw 180 pitches in whipping Abilene Christian 10-4. Actosa allowed only one earned run, scattered nine hits, fanned nine and walked six in winning his fourth game without a loss.

Frazier, now 2-1, spun a one-hitter against Abilene Christian two days before Acosta showed up, winning 12-0 with the lone hit coming in the sixth frame. He also whiffed six.

LCC, now 15-9, owns the longest winning streak in the conference, 12 games and will seek to extend that in the Hardin-Simmons Invitational Tournament this week.

TWC has won 10 straight since dropping its first Texoma Conference game to Dallas Baptist, but the Rams also played an 8-8 tie with Central Michigan in that span.

The Rams, who have tied two games this spring, are 18-8 overall.

Goolagong, King Win At Boston

BOSTON (AP) — Third-seeded Evonne Goolagong capitalized on several Chris Evert errors and displayed some dazzling shots of her own, to defeat the second-ranked Evert 4-6, 6-1, 6-4, in the final of a $100,000 tennis tournament Sunday.

It was the first meeting of the two stars of women's tennis since Evert defeated Goolagong in the 1976 U.S. Open final.

In an earlier consolation match, sixth-ranked Billie Jean King downed the tournament's top-seed, Martina Navratilova, 6-4, for third place.

In the doubles final, King and Navratilova were to meet Goolagong and Betty Stove.

Evert, who was returning from a four-month vacation, had complained earlier in the week that she was not "tournament tough." In the first set, however, she rallied twice from a 15-40 deficit to take the set.

Evert found herself behind 3-0, scoring only two points in the first three games. She rallied with a strong volleying game to take the set.

In the second set, Evert committed a number of unforced errors. Evert's strategy of keeping Goolagong away from the net fell prey to her inability to hit winners.

In the third set, Goolagong was able to break Evert's service in the fifth game to go ahead 3-2. Evert pulled even in the next game, however.

Goolagong, who sat out most of last year after giving birth to a daughter, came back to break Evert's service and go up 4-3 in the third set.

At this point, Goolagong returned to her aggressive game, charging the net and varying her shots. Goolagong had two match points in the ninth game, but Evert temporarily held off defeat by firing a backhand volley down the sidelines.

In the final game of the match, Evert hit two backhands into the net. Evert double faulted one time in the match, while Goolagong aced her opponent twice.

and hit on 65 percent of its shots from the floor. Villanova, after its ice-cold start, shot 42 percent.

The rebounding key for Duke showed up in the surprising statistic that gave Villanova guard Whitey Rigsby 13 rebounds, the game high, while the Wildcats' three starting big men were limited to a total of 11.

Duke center Mike Gminski and forward Eugene Banks combined for 20 rebounds. Gminski scored 21 points and Banks 17.

"Their front line was bigger," Massimino said. "A couple of times I thought we had a chance to get back in but the ball just spurted away."

Seventh-ranked Duke led by as many as 21 points in the first half. The Atlantic Coast Conference champions, 26-6, maintained their momentum even though Villanova came out for the second half with hot shooting by Keith Herron and Reggie Robinson. The Blue Devils drove through Villanova's man-to-man defense for a variety of layups and short jumpers while Villanova, 23-9, was forced to take 15 and 20-foot jumpers over the zone.

Little Holds Off Lopez

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Sally Little, who came from far behind to force a playoff, parred the first sudden death hole Sunday to win the $165,000 Kathryn Crosby Golf Classic.

Little shot a final-round 7-under-par 65 to finish in a tie with Nancy Lopez, who was trying for her third consecutive Ladies Professional Golf Association victory.

Lopez, who had a 68, first missed a 12-foot birdie putt at the 18th hole that would have given her the title. Then she left a 15-footer just inches short on the playoff hole. Little made a 2-footer for a par 4 which gave her the victory, worth $22,500.

Little and Lopez, who collected $14,650, finished the regulation 72 holes at 6-under-par 282.

Both players trailed Australian Penny Pulz late in the tournament, but Pulz 3-putted on the final green while Lopez was birdieing the 16th hole and Little was birdieing 16 and 18.

Pulz also had a 68 Sunday, giving her a total of 283. She earned $10,510. Pulz had two bogeys and six birdies in her closing round over the 6,212-yard Rancho Bernardo golf course.

Nicklaus Nabs TPC, 'Bearly'

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The fact that it wasn't exactly an artistic success bothered Jack Nicklaus not at all.

"I really don't care how I win," he shrugged after claiming one of the strangest of all his 65 victories in American golf Sunday in the error-plagued windup of the Tournament Players Championship.

Nicklaus didn't make a birdie, was 3-over-par with a 75, required 36 putts and still won by a single shot over equally troubled Lou Graham.

"The winner today was the golf course," Graham said of the treacherous, 7,174 yards of reclaimed marshland that make up the Sawgrass links. "There's no doubt about that."

Nicklaus agreed.

"I don't feel like I won," he said. "I feel like everybody else lost it. I'm not sure I won, or was the only one to survive it.

"I'm fortunate that nobody made a run at me. I tried to be aggressive, tried to make birdies, tried to get something in the hole. But coming down to the end, I just hung on to win."

Indeed he did. Most of the drama was concentrated in his successful effort to make a winning par 5 on the final hole.

His 289 total, 1 over par, was the highest winning total on the tour since Mark Hayes won this event with the same score a year ago.

While the wind and weather caused a flock of golfing negatives — including an unbelievable 85 by Arnold Palmer — Nicklaus was able to salvage some positive values from the relatively lack-luster finish: his second title of the season, third in five years in this ambitious event and $60,000 from the total purse of $342,000.

The big check pushed his total to $157,065 for the year and enabled him to take the money-winning lead from Tom Watson for the first time this season. Watson has $103,181 and was among the many glamour names who failed to survive the cut in this event, which is billed as the annual championship of the touring players.

While it may not have been an artistic success — Nicklaus, for example, didn't make a birdie over the final 18 holes — it stamped Jack a prime favorite in the Masters, Nicklaus' next planned start. He's finished second, first, second, first in his last four appearances — by far the best on the tour this season.

Graham, with a scrambly, hard-won 75, was second at 290 and won $34,200 from the biggest purse of the year.

Lon Hinkle had one of the few subpar rounds of the tournament, a 70, and closed up to take third at 291, but really wasn't a factor in the title chase.

Ben Crenshaw, Larry Nelson, Andy North and John Schroeder were tied for fourth at 292. Schroeder, involved in the best season of his 10-year career, had a closing 71. Crenshaw shot 74, North 73 and the slightly built Nelson 74.

Scores, generally, were extremely high, almost ridiculously so, ranging up to the 85-313, 25 over par, by Palmer.

Some others: U.S. Open champion Hubert Green, 71-295; Jerry Pate, 70-297; defending champion Mark Hayes, 73-300; Gary Player, 76-300; Hale Irwin 77-302; Tom Weiskopf, 79-306.

John Mahaffey provided one of the few bright spots of the chilly, windy day. In full view of a national television audience, the baby-faced kid holed out a 3-iron shot for an ace on the 15th hole, a water-guarded, 201 yard par 3. He finished with a 77 and a 296 total.

Nicklaus' final round was the highest by a winner since Roger Maltbie's closing 76 was good enough to win the 1976 Memorial Tournament.

In essence, it was a fight to see who could lose ground the slowest.

Allison Coasts To Atlanta Win

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Bobby Allison, driving a Thunderbird, coasted to an easy 1-lap victory Sunday in the 19th Atlanta 500 stock car race.

Allison led the last 197 laps of the 328-lap event, taking the checkered flag under caution, the fourth of the day, following a 3-car spin four laps from the finish.

Allison was leading by two laps at the time, and the caution flag enabled Bobby Marcis to move his Chevrolet to one lap down, the same as Donnie Allison, who finished third in a Chevrolet.

Fourth place went to Cale Yarborough, the pole-sitter in an Oldsmobile who led early in the race but went out of contention during a pit stop mixup when he left his crew without the lugs on his left rear wheel.

The fifth place finish went to Lennie Pond in a Chevrolet.

The victory, Allison's third in the Atlanta 500, gave Allison first prize money of $33,050. He averaged 142.520 miles per hour around the 1.522-mile Atlanta International Raceway.

Allison thus became the first Grand National driver to win two races this season, having captured the Daytona 500 earlier in the year.

It was his 48th career victory and his 23rd on a superspeedway.

The race was slowed four times by caution flags, totaling 19 laps and perhaps preventing Allison from making a run at the race record speed of 144.097 mph set last year by Richard Petty.

Earlier victims of car troubles were Darrell Waltrip, Buddy Baker and Neil Bonnett, the young driver who has sat on poles twice this season but missed his opportunity because of engine problems in time trials Thursday.

It was Allison's fourth victory on the Atlanta track, an 18-year-old facility which will be repaved for the first time before further racing here in July.

Allison also won the 1972 Dixie 500 on this track.

Yarborough earned a $10,000 bonus by holding the lead for the first 10 consecutive laps and appeared to be running exceptionally well until the pit mixup when he fell two laps off the pace.

Solomon Helps Netters Clinch Davis Zone Title

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Little Harold Solomon beat a tense and shaky Bernie Mitton of South Africa Sunday and clinched the controversy-ridden North American zone Davis Cup final for the United States.

The Yanks, who haven't won the Davis Cup since 1972, had an insurmountable 3-1 lead after Solomon's triumph and next will play Chile in the American Zone final in Santiago next September.

Solmon scored the clinching victory 7-5, 6-4, 6-2, rendering to exhibition status the final singles match between Vitas Gerulaitis and South Africa's Byron Bertram.

Plagued by massive demonstrations against South Africa's apartheid, or legal segregation, policies, the Sunday session — like the two previous ones — drew a very small crowd.

Attendance was put at 1,260, making a total of 3,892 for the entire series, a financial flop and a keen disappointment to sponsors of the event in the Vanderbilt University gymnasium.

Sponsors estimated the matches would need to draw at least 4,000 daily in the 9,500-seat complex to break even. However, the U.S. Tennis Association announced it was waiving the $83,000 guarantee.

Sunday's demonstrations were mild compared to the heavy outpouring of protestors the first two days, which had the backing of the NAACP and several other prominent civil rights groups.

However, there was an incident inside the gym that momentarily stunned the small crowd — the first happening of any consequence inside the arena.

As Solomon and Mitton were changing courts after the fifth game of the opening set, a young man wearing glasses leaped onto the court and held up a picture purporting to portray South African atrocities and in an almost inaudible voice told of injustices in South Africa.

He had only said a few words, including something about "Blood on your hands," when two uniformed officers grabbed him by the arms and led him from the scene.

Nashville police said they doubted he would be booked.

Ten minutes before the match began, there was only a scattering of protestors lounging around the parking lot adjacent to the gymnasiun and a single speaker was blaring statistics from an improvised podium wth the remarks going over loudspeakers placed in trees.

One newsman counted 35 policemen and 12 protestors.

There were only about 50 marching, sign-waving demonstrators compared with an estimated 1,500-2,000 each of the first two days. A small picket line was set up near the ticket windows.

The demonstrators chanted, "Join the march, stop the match."

Solomon was responsible for two of the winning points, having beaten Bertram 4-6, 6-0, 6-3, 6-1 in the opening singles match Friday. Gerulaitis had won over Mitton 2-6, 6-2, 6-1, 7-5.

South Africa's only point came on a 6-0, 6-3, 6-4 doubles victory by the veteran Bob Hewitt and Frew McMillan on Saturday over Sherwood Stewart and Fred McNair.

The Solomon-Mitton duel was a backcourt battle featured by lengthy rallies, with the 5-foot-6, scrambling American showing more steadiness and patience with his high trajectory "Moon ball."

Solomon weathered four set points against him in the 11th game before clinching the first set on his own third set point.

Mitton, 23, from Pretoria, showed only brief flashes of brilliance, as he did in his opening match against Gerulaitis. But he was unable to score on clutch points.

Solomon saved the first of the four set points against him in the first set with a beautiful two-fisted backhand shot down the sideline. But the other three times Mitton failed were on sloppy, loose shots.

Each time he gained set point, he seemed to tighten and hit the ball limply into the net on the easiest of shots.

Titans Surprise Tourney Field

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Two weeks ago people were asking who are the Cal State-Fullerton Titans. Today they know. They're the guttiest bunch of basketball players to come along in a long time.

The Titans didn't win the Far West regional basketball tourney. They won't be going to St. Louis as one of the final four with a shot at winning the national championship. But they won't soon be forgotten by the people who saw them play.

Unranked and unheralded Fullerton, which had knocked off nationally ranked New Mexico and San Francisco with great second half rallies in its first two NCAA tourney games, finally lost Saturday. The Titans came up with another wild second half charge but it fell short and fifth ranked Arkansas had a 61-58 victory and the trip to St. Louis.

"If I coach a hundred years I could never be more proud of a group of kids than these guys," said Fullerton Coach Bob Dye of his players. "They never quit and stayed in the ball game despite almost being blown out in the first half."

Arkansas, behind the hot hand of guard Ron Brewer, raced to a 15-point lead in the first half at 39-24. But being behind by that much at the half wasn't anything new for the Titans. That's where they had been in there games with New Mexico and San Francisco.

In fact, Dye said, "I told'em (Titans) at halftime, we had'em (Razorbacks) right where we wanted'em."

The Titans, who ended the season at 23-9, came out with a fullcourt press in the second half and during a seven-minute stretch early in the period outscored the Razorbacks 11-2 to get back into the nationally televised contest. They kept chipping away at the lead and with 1:43 to go, guard Keith Anderson hit a jumper from the corner to give Fullerton its only lead in the game at 58-57.

The Razorbacks didn't panic, however, and Brewer, who was voted the tourney's most valuable player, hit from the top of the key for his 21st and 22nd points of the game to give the Hogs' a 59-58 advantage.

Fullerton had one last chance when Arkansas' forward Jim Counce missed the front end of a one-and-one with 13 seconds to play and the Titans grabbed the rebound and raced down the court. Anderson, who pumped in 17 of his game-high 23 points in the second half rally, went up for a shot but the Razorbacks knocked the ball loose and fed it to Counce, who went in for a layup to seal the victory.

"It's the old bit about getting ahead too much too soon," said Sutton. "We played as well as we can play in the first half and it was natural for us not to be as sharp at the start of the second half."

But he added, "Give Fullerton credit —they're a gutty group of young men and could well be going to St. Louis instead of us. They've been doing it all season. They came back and beat New Mexico and came back and beat San Francisco.

"Boy they played hard," he continued. "Some ball clubs would have folded. I told our players at the half, 'That club is not going to play dead. They're going to fight you.'"

Sutton said Arkansas, now 31-3, would "go home and work on our press offense" in preparation for St. Louis, where the Hogs will challenge top ranked Kentucky.

"I'd much rather play Kentucky than Michigan State," said Sutton, who noted he saw on television about 25 minutes of Kentucky's 52-49 triumph over Michigan State in the mideast finals. He said he would prefer to play Kentucky because he thinks the Hogs can attack the Wildcats with their quickness.

But he added, "We can't rebound like we did today (Saturday) or they're liable to stuff us through the hoop."

Mahre Wins Slalom Title

AROSA, Switzerland (AP) — In an exciting climax to the 1977-78 World Cup skiing season, America's Phil Mahre of White Pass, Wash., won the men's parallel slalom race Sunday, narrowly beating overall champion Ingemar Stenmark in the final.

In the women's event, victory went to Austrian downhill champion Annemarie Moser-Proell — second in the overall 1977-78 standings — who defeated Christa Zechmeister of West Germany.

Mahre's victory over his great rival — he finished second behind Stenmark in the overall World Cup standings — gained an invaluable 25 points for the United States, enabling the country to hold onto third place in the Nations' Cup behind Austria and Switzerland.

It is the highest the United States has placed since 1970.

"It just goes to show how much work the whole team — both men and women — put in throughout the season and has certainly placed us firmly on the map as one of the best skiing nations," U.S. Coach Hank Tauber said.

Mahre, despite the victory, said, "I don't really like the idea of these parallel slaloms, with one man racing against the other. I could certainly never turn professional in the U.S. circuit."

Fullerton Boosters 'Go Crazy'

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — The 18,000-plus crowds that packed the University of New Mexico Arena for the 1978 NCAA Far West Regionals aren't likely to forget Cal State-Fullerton's basketball Titans for a long time.

And they aren't likely to forget the "Titan Hellraisers" either.

As the Hellraisers lived up to their name, their beloved Titans stunned national power New Mexico in the sub-regionals in Tempe, Ariz., then derailed 11th ranked San Francisco to gain the finals of the Far West.

There —to chants of "We Believe! We Believe!" from the Hellraisers —the unranked and unheralded Titans fought back from a 15-point deficit before losing to Arkansas 61-58 in the closing seconds.

The Hellraisers aren't your standard cheerleading group — though they work well with Fullerton's regular yell leaders. What they are, by their admission, is wild.

Led by towel-swinging graduate Bill Harvey of Santa Ana, Calif., the Hellraisers constantly whipped a Cal-Fullerton crowd of several hundred into a frenzy and at times had most of the people in the pit on their feet.

"Go crazy, go crazy," Harvey screamed through a megaphone as the Titans appeared on the court.

Harvey spurred the Fullerton crowd to a fever pitch when he danced out onto the floor and started slapping the surface with a towel he carried around his neck most of the time.

Harvey said the towel wasn't an ordinary one. Titan forward Greg Bunch, whom Harvey called the greatest player in Pacific Coast Athletic Association history, gave it to him after Cal Fullerton upset Long Beach to win the conference tourney and put the Titans in the playoffs.

"He gave me a towel he used to wipe his face," Harvey said. "I put it around my neck, wiped my face and hit it on the ground. Everybody loved it. It symbolizes non-violent energy."

Harvey was always on the go.

When his team's starting lineup was introduced he raced around the court imitating the basketball trademark of the player — a hook shot for center Steve Shaw or a behind-the-back dribble for guard Mike Linden.

Norton Maps Out Plans

By The Associated Press

Ken Norton promises to be a busy defender in the ring of the heavyweight championship he won outside the ring.

Leon Spinks was not talking. But he apparently will defend what he has left of the title in the fall against Muhammad Ali while battling in court to win back the share of the crown taken away from him by the World Boxing Council.

"I promise to be worthy of the title," Norton said after the WBC gave him championship recognition Saturday because of Spinks' failure to abide by an agreement made with the WBC that he would make his first defense against the top-ranked Norton.

"I'm going to do the best I can with it (the WBC title) and fight all the top contenders right down the line," said Norton.

"Certainly Ken is going to be a fighting champion," Bob Biron, Norton's manager, said Sunday. "He's not going to duck anybody."

But Norton's fighting situation is a precarious one. He has not fought since Nov. 5 when he scored a split 15-round decision over Jimmy Young in the fight now recognized by the WBC as a championship bout.

Should the WBC rule that his first defense be against the highest available contender, Norton probably would come off his layoff against either fourth-ranked Earnie Shavers or No. 5 Larry Holmes who are scheduled to meet in a 12-rounder next Saturday.

"First I have to sit down and talk with Jose Sulaiman (WBC president from Mexico)," Biron said Sunday when asked who and when Norton will fight. "I'd like an interim fight before meeting Holmes or Shavers because Ken hasn't fought in awhile."

Biron said Norton hasn't fought since November because Spinks' written agreement to the WBC that he would fight Norton in the first defense of the universal title he won from Muhammad Ali last Feb. 15 stated the Norton could not fight anyone other than Spinks after Feb. 15.

But Norton will fight whoever the WBC specifies, Biron added.

Sulaiman said that Norton would not have to fight third-ranked Jimmy Young first because that would be considered a rematch and the WBC does not sanction title rematches until the champion has fought someone else.

Norton said Sunday he would like to fight Spinks as soon as possible. But neither Spinks nor Ali figure to be be available until they fight for Spinks' World Boxing Association title.

As for a court fight, Bob Arum, president of Top Rank, Inc., which has Spinks tied up promotionally, said in Las Vegas that he would sue the WBC and so would Spinks, who really had a lost weekend.

Friday, Spinks' landlord filed a complaint in court to have Spinks and his wife evicted from their Philadelphia apartment for non-payment of two months rent. Then, early Sunday morning, Spinks was arrested in his hometown of St. Louis for driving the wrong way on a one-way street and for driving without a license.

After posting bond on the driving charges, Spinks became unavaiable for comment.

His mother, Kay, when informed of the WBC's action, said, "Leon hasn't lost any title. White or black, those people don't know what they're doing."

Arum agreed. "It's really a temptest in a teapot...the heavyweight champion of the world is Leon Spinks. "I don't think the American public is going to accept the action of a Mexican dictator."

Arum contends the WBC edict issued at the group's meeting in Spain last November violates its own constitution "...and therefore constitutes an illegitimate and arbitrary assertion of power by Mr. Sulaiman and his executive committe.

"...even if we should construe Mr. Spinks' letter as constituting an agreement to the edict, it would be of no binding force. One cannot legalize an unconstitutional act by agreeing to it."

ARE YOU LOSING HUNDREDS OF DOLLARS EACH MONTH?

If you are renting or leasing, each month's rent check is money down the drain. You receive absolutely no return on your money. With home ownership you not only receive the privacy and the amenities that come with owning your own home, but with each month you are building up an equity in your home. Your property is appreciating in value and you receive a valuable tax deduction, which in itself can save you hundreds of dollars each year.

Home ownership is not only one of today's greatest means to guard yourself against inflation, but is also an investment with potentially high return capabilities.

So if you would like to see your money working for you instead of your landlord, call or come by and let us show you where you are now and where you could be with our new COMPUTER ANALYSIS.

Li'l Mam'selle Stock Reflecting Entry Into 'A Beautiful Spring'

All in all, the current selection is the most gorgeous presentation ever at Li'l Mam'selle, whatever the clothing need for the happy, active season ahead.

And that is saying a lot, for Li'l Mam'selle Young Fashions, at 2147-A 50th St., traditionally presents the new and the fashionable.

"We'd love to have you come in and browse; we think you'll love what you discover for Easter and for Spring," is the word from all at Li'l Mam'selle.

There is a very nice selection of pretty, pretty long and short dresses, really cute sun dresses even, and smart coordinates by the scores.

The colors are very beautiful this spring, as evidenced by the stock throughout Li'l Mam'selle, including pastels and navy among the leaders.

Junior sizes 1 through 11 (with some 13s) are stocked, as are girls sizes 7 through 12.

Now in its seventh year, Li'l Mam'selle not only specializes in up-to-the-minute fashion in quality lines, but prides in stocking the often hard-to-find sizes.

New lines are added to the already-elite stock as need and fashion dictates.

Gift wrapping is available, and Li'l Mam'selle, in Oakwood Center, welcomes Visa and Master Charge purchases.

A trip to Li'l Mam'selle most certainly will put one in the Easter and vacation mood, as not only is the stock superb, but the skilled and friendly staff have a genuine welcome awaiting. They have selected the best of the new in fashion, all in good taste, and thoroughly enjoy seeing customers find "just the item for which they have wished" at Li'l Mam'selle.

'Folks You Know'

Ola Hamilton, longtime staffmember, is the very friendly and capable manager of the shop owned by her sister, Opal Jones. Monta Beasley, with the store throughout its present ownership, is on the job to further assist.

The stock continually has been expanded and upgraded under this ownership, management and staff.

And it is a friendly place in which to shop!

"We may possibly not remember your name, but we won't forget your face, and your patronage is appreciated. Let us prove it!"

Yes, one can enter into a new season with apparel that pleases; it has been made easy and economical at Li'l Mam'selle.

Pharr Recreational Vehicles Enable New Fun, Convenience

"Do you envy those enjoying the fun and freedom that comes with ownership of a recreational vehicle (RV) that meets the needs and preferences of the owner?

Then Pharr Trailer Sales should enter the picture!

Pharr Trailer Sales, 1702 Clovis Road, has a wide selection to offer at this time.

Whether the choice is from the Coachmen (No. 1 seller in the nation) mini-motor home, motor home, 5th wheel unit, travel trailers in all sizes, cab-over camper or even pop-ups; the Apollo motor home or the prestigious Silver Streak travel trailer, value and new convenience and luxury is assured.

Pharr also is a service center, together with sales; it is a "first stop must" in readying one's present RV unit for a trouble-free trip ahead.

Harold Pharr calls special attention to the selection of parts and accessories stocked within the attractive showrooms. When planning a trip, or even when just completing one, a person could do well to check for needed accessories "while it is fresh on his or her mind", with Pharr most likely having the very item desired.

Pharr knows recreational units, and this modern Lubbock firm can help immeasureably in correct selection that will give pleasure for years to come. Ask the man who owns a Pharr unit.

Production Heads Saluted In Rainbo Recognition Series

No matter how great the product, even with the quality assured by the Rainbo label, a key factor in its success and acceptance must be integrity, know-how and experience in production.

It is in this light that Rainbo Baking Company of Lubbock this week salutes two valued employees, members of the Rainbo family contributing to its total image as a successful business serving area needs commercially and as good citizens.

Charlie Rowton

Meet Charlie Rowton, production superintendent, who has been with Rainbo for a full quarter century.

Rowton began with the firm racking pans in a Wichita, Kans., facility. In Lubbock since 1975, he holds his present title after progressing through the ranks and personally performing, at one time or another, all the tasks involved in production of the fine Rainbo products.

Serving with the armed forces in Korea in the early 50's, Charlie came back and joined Rainbo only 10 months afterward, thus enabling him to make the statement that "I just never worked for anyone but Rainbo, and I'll tell you for sure it is a good company, it is managed and staffed by good people, and you know about its good products."

The Lubbock Rainbo production department, with its rigid product control for quality, quantity, sanitation, etc., is manned by 18 employees, and the production superintendent job actually can be a 24-hour-a-day challenge.

Johnny Johnson

Serving as right hand to Rowton is Johnny Johnson, assistant production superintendent.

Johnny has been with Rainbo for nine years, the last two in his present position with its related responsibilities.

Johnson, like so many others on the staff, came up through the ranks. After graduating from Dunbar High School in 1968, he came to Rainbo, starting as a bun racker.

Johnny's attitude toward his employer firm can be cited as one of the reasons for his value and success.

"It is a good company to work for, and I like my job especially well because of its challenge," he emphasizes. "There is something new every day . . . new problems to be met and solved, and I feel that one must know every involved process to meet these challenges."

All Rainbo bread and buns are produced locally, on an average during a 20-hour day, for area distribution.

"See how important the production department and its heads can be to your eating pleasure?"

Harry Hoopes, manager of the Lubbock firm, takes pride in the staff here and he invites the reader to watch for later articles regarding other staffmembers and facits of Rainbo's operation. It is a story you can appreciate and understand . . . because Rainbo is your kind or people, your kind of progressive enterprise, your kind of products.

"We are Rainbo just will not take second place to anyone in promotion of good eating and good times for our West Texas friends."

Compressors, Well Electrification Among W.M. Smith Firm Specialties

Well electrification . . . the W.M. Smith Electric Company way . . . is heartily recommended!

"Let us explain how we can serve you, as we likely have aided your neighbor, with vertical hollowshaft, v-belt drive, tumble-shaft drive and all the other advantages."

Well electrification by W.M. Smith Electric Co., 1911 Clovis Road, has further advantages, such as rodent protected, all-weather and temperature sensing control panels, flanges for tumble shafts, compact base gearhead mountings, high service factor engineering drives, all name-brand equipment and top resale value.

Free estimates on well electrification are featured, and one can be assured of service around the clock, quality in installation, wiring, material and workmanship, and for correct modifications in well set-ups.

Long On Scene

Dependence on W.M. Smith Electric Co. is nothing new to industry throughout West Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Oklahoma and Louisiana!

The Lubbock branch of the Dallas-based company was established back in 1952, and the growth of the firm here reflects the quality and demand of the services offered.

Compressor Values

In-stock compressors at extra low prices are one of the company features in Lubbock.

For example, check the rotary compressors, 30 hp, 130 cfm at 100 PSIG, at $3895; and the 50 hp, 200 cfm at 100 PSIG, at $5250.

Other prices are comparably attractive; such as tank mounted with motors, 5 ph for $808, 10 hp at $1144, 15 hp for $2600, etc.

And the names of Gardner-Denver, Kellogg-American and Campbell-Hausfield hardly need introduction.

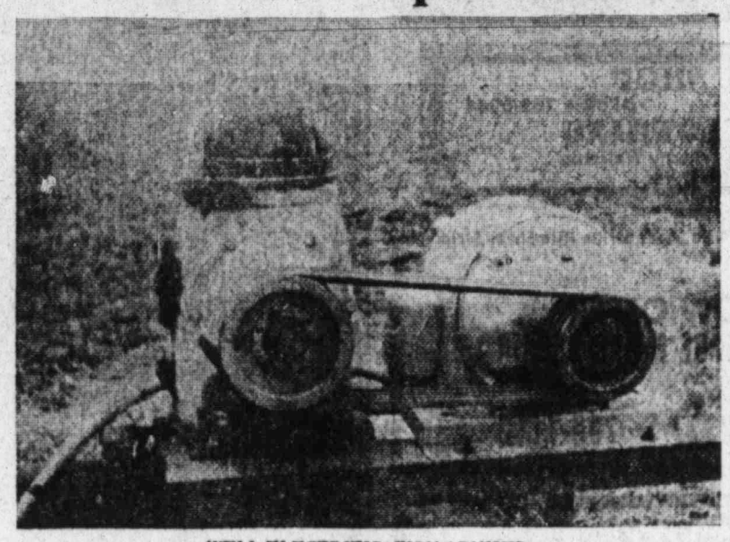
Also, Smith wants to service "your" air compressor, qualifying the invitation with its experience, inventory, ability, equipment and the desire to serve best.

"We service and carry a parts stock for most makes and models of air compressors, and our rebuilt units carry the same guarantee as new compressors!"

In stock are new and rebuilt compressors from 1/3 hp through 25 hp.

"Actually, we can exchange compressor pumps with you for the same amount it would cost to repair your old compressor in many instances."

Check all the several products and services of W.M. Smith Electric Co.:



WELL ELECTRIFICATION ADVISED

Hoists

Sales and service for all makes of hoists, including the Budget line, is another key segment of the business.

Motors

W.M. Smith Electric is distributor for three major lines of electric motors: General Electric, U.S., and Baldor, in all sizes.

Furthermore, the firm has parts for everything it sells, offering service on everything sold, also.

A staff of qualified mechanics and trouble shooters is maintained at all times.

Wire-in and installation of irrigation motors is another area-appreciated service provided by the company.

Pick-up and delivery is provided, and service men are on call day or night. Facilities in the shop enable prompt attention and repair in any emergency need.

History Recounted

Herb Witcher is vice president and manager of West Texas operations of the company. In fact, it was in August, 1952, when he opened the Lubbock office as a one-man operation.

"There was just a trickle of business at first. But as Herb's old Chevy pick-up truck became a familiar sight on the streets and roads in and around Lubbock, business picked up — fast. Night and day service at a fair price, which was what Herb offered, was a way of winning friends! By the spring of 1953, Herb had four men working for W.M. Smith Electric Co., Lubbock branch."

And how the firm continues to grow!

"The people of Lubbock and a wide surrounding area have been mighty nice to W.M. Smith Electric Co., Witcher says, "and we appreciate it more than we can tell you."

The present large, all-brick building of the firm at 1911 Clovis Road was constructed in 1957, and facilities within it were designed for maximum service.

"And possibly some of this service meets a need for you, in your own industrial or farming operation."

Sale and rentals of motors and generators is a popular service, as is repair and installation of electric motors, controls, hoists and cranes, welders, air compressors, rectifiers, pumps, transformers, etc.; machine and metalizing, dynamic balancing and other services.

"Chances are you already have used one or more of the services of W.M. Smith Electric Co. if you have ever had need of air compressors, electric motors and equipment or the related parts and supplies."

As the W.M. Smith Electric Co. pointed out in an Avalanche-Journal advertisement upon opening of the present offices in 1957:

"If you're willing to work, you 'can't hardly' miss in a dynamic, fast-growing city like Lubbock. Under Herb Witcher's leadership, our Lubbock office has doubled its volume of sales and service each year since 1954."

"This same brand of service continues — and can save for you, too."

Fur Storage, Finest In Drapery Care Among Attributes Of Master Cleaners

The same Lubbock cleaners that day in and day out can take care of all your apparel cleaning needs can do even more . . .

Such as expert drapery cleaning!

And services including fur storage.

Yes, take a combination of maximum convenience, professional care, long experience and a desire to serve . . . and there you have Master Cleaners, at a choice of facilities at 2301 34th St. or at the added location of 3420 82nd St.

Everything in drapery care is available . . . including cleaning, pressing and pleating. Finest equipment and experienced personnel assure a quality job.

And it is time to consider fur storage. Right? Master Cleaners handles all aspects, including de-germination, humidification and refrigeration in a cold storage vault. Furs for storage are accepted at either location.

R.D. Barnett, 25 years in business, and president of the firm, still serves at the 34th Street facility, with Dan Barnett, vice president, managing the newer establishment just a block west of Indiana on 82nd Street.

Great For South Lubbock

Everything is designed for customer convenience and for a quality operation at the new and added location.

Large concrete aprons make access easy, with plenty of parking space and two drive-up windows provided.

Professional care remains the watchword at both locations. Master Cleaners watches for tears, rips, missing buttons, etc. . . . all the little things that can be so important; they want your clothing to be right and look right when it is dry cleaned at Master Cleaners. Expert attention is assured by such staffmembers as Clara Dolloff, presser with the firm for 25 years!

Dan Barnett emphasizes that Master Cleaners specializes in such needs as wedding gown cleaning and preservation, leathers, suedes and furs, to say nothing of the very excellent alteration and drapery service.

One-day service is provided at no extra charge. Master Cleaners No. 2 is open Mondays through Fridays from 7 a.m. until 6 p.m. with Saturday hours of 8 a.m. until 2 p.m.

(On Saturdays, items brought in by 10:30 a.m. can be out by 1 p.m.!)

"For new convenience, for knowing that your clothing and drapes will receive only the finest care, and for knowledge that your business is appreciated, visit the new Master Cleaners now. It will become a habit!"

IN THE NEW-SEASON MOOD — Staffmembers of Linda G's, expressing thrill at new arrivals for Easter and other occasions of the season, include Ruth Ann Crumpton wearing a Tuck poly and cotton, with shop owner Linda Givens in a new clay colored quiana, and Modean Clayton in a soft pleat and flounce number, all hinting of the femininity of today's fashions.

Spring, Easter Fashion Wear Prettiest Ever At Linda G's

Sure recognition of fashion rightness for Easter and the balmy days beyond is reflected in a fantastic stock at Linda G's, the 4515 50th St. store where a galaxy of pretty, practical and so-fashionable apparel is presented.

"Truly, a woman can feel like a woman again . . . with wardrobe selection including dresses in the modish feminine look with ruffles, flounces, laces, etc., from Linda G's in Sunshine Square.

Select from today's materials including polyesters, poly and cotton, prints, soft quiana and all.

Of course, Easter wear is every much in abundance.

Ultra-Suedes

But there is more!

Such as the ever-standby jacket dresses.

And new longs, in a tremendously beautiful choice.

Also short "after-5" dresses with so many practical and desired uses, for the impending political parties, etc.

A nice selection of year-around ultra-suedes is stocked.

Select, too, from beautiful coordinates, gorgeous pegnoir sets, and more . . . all with the unmistakeable touch of Linda G's.

Lingerie, too, is presented in a provocative selection.

A very good choice in handbags to complete the ensemble is part of the Linda G's story, too.

Toiletries For Men

The men in the family are not neglected, believe it or not, at Linda G's, for a very exclusive and desired line of Andromeda cologne and after-shave items are stocked.

It all adds to the truism that Linda G's is ready for Easter and Spring in a most delightful and considerate manner, with this "complete" store in great shape in every department.

Linda Givens, owner, is understandably enthusiastic about the new-season presentations. She is joined by a most capable staff in welcoming opportunity to serve one's apparel needs for the season.

"Shopping at one's leisure in the relaxed atmosphere of this beautiful and elegant shop is an experience to be enjoyed, for a certainty; discover for yourself how Linda G's is extraordinary!"

Plainview's Westridge Manor Said 'Most Unique Within Area'

"Yes, most emphatically, you can enjoy the privacy of 'at home' living with the security of a protected environment, at Westridge Manor, West Texas' most exclusive and unique retirement living facility, at 4304 West 2nd St., Westridge Park, Plainview (west of the Coca Cola plant on Interstate 27)."

Not a nursing home . . . and not an apartment complex but an "in-between" service, that is Westridge Manor in Plainview.

At this "different" retirement home, the residents live in casual elegance as explained by owner Joe Turner, where they receive no regimentation, no institutionalism and no commercialism.

Designed to be nice enough for his own mother, Turner planned Westridge Manor "for anybody's mom and dad."

One simply cannot understand the difference that is Westridge Manor without a personal visit (which is invited) but the following thumbnail sketch of pertinent features is bound to hint of the special type facility that has been provided.

There is no buy-in, no deposit, just monthly rent.

Westridge Manor is for retired ladies and gentlemen who may need minimum assistance.

High-quality home-style living is enabled at minimal cost.

There is the privacy of one's own living quarters.

Residents may use their own furniture if preferred.

Many Services Included

The following services are included at no extra charge to the Manor's residents:

Maid service on a regular basis;

Meals prepared in a home-style manner, with special diets observed.

Mail service to one's room if desired.

Pick-up and delivery of pharmaceuticals, dry cleaning, flowers, etc.

Even van service to church, local activities, doctor, hospital, beauty and barber shops, shopping, etc.!

Other services, provided at a slight additional charge, include telephone in one's own room, cable TV, and more.

Further Benefits Cited

Special features due for consideration include:

Large, private rooms, with private bath.

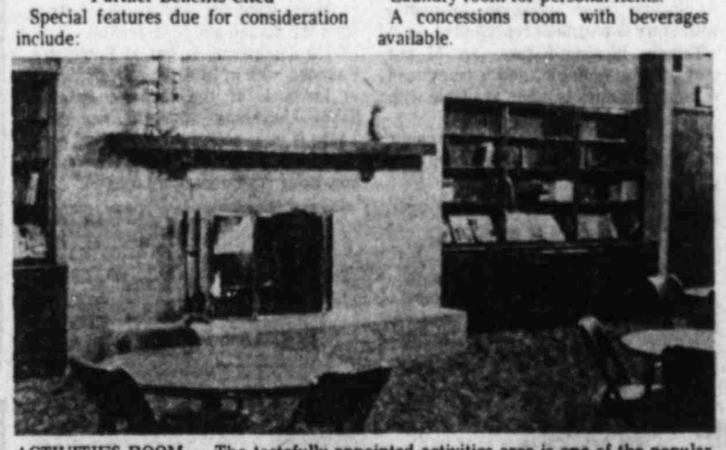
Laundry room for personal items.

A concessions room with beverages available.



ACTIVITIES ROOM — The tastefully appointed activities area is one of the popular rooms and considerations at Westridge Manor where casual elegance is provided in retirement living.

Highland Beauty Salon Places Emphasis On Talents Of Staff

"Hairstyling — an Art"; likely this can best describe the desire and capabilities of the beauticians at Highland Beauty Salon, 4031 34th St. in Lubbock.

Ann Workman, Beth Young, Kay Tilley, Alice Gibson and Helen Ingraham all are experienced beauticians, and they do not need special praise as their talent speaks for itself!

Shop owners Royce and Barbara Lane are not beauticians themselves, and they firmly believe in letting the beauticians take care of their own clientele, each in her own personal way, creating an atmosphere of friendliness and goodwill.

"We feel the girls are really working for themselves and will do everything for the benefit of their customers. Our main job is to keep the shop clean for a pleasant atmosphere, and we try to buy a variety of products that will suit each individual's needs," Barbara explains. "If we don't have it, we will try and get it."

Quality Products

Featured are Zoto's Lanolin Bath, White Velvet; Climatress, Trichoperms and Creative Curl from Redken; Uniperms, Perfect Touch permanent waves, styling cuts, colortints and rinses, frostings, shampoo and sets (with or without back-combing) and blow styling or curling iron styling.

Wig Styling

Wig styling also is one of the services offered.

"Our prices are reasonable and the shop specializes in hair care for the entire family."

Royce and Barbarta Lane join with the beauticians in inviting you to come in and get acquainted at Highland Beauty Salon.

Special Offer

Kay Tilley and Alice Gibson recently have designated Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays as their "Senior Citizens Days", and will give a shampoo and set, with or without creme rinse, weekly colors and haircuts at one-half price for their clientele of 62 years of age or over . . . so senior citizens, ask for Kay or Alice for one of these days and take advantage of their offer!

Highland Beauty Salon is open Mondays through Saturdays from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. each day for calls for appointment. Phone 792-9823. Early or late appointments can be arranged at convenience of each beautician.

Bowman's Termed Supermarket For Contractor, Drop-In Trade

'Tis Spring activity time again . . . and Bowman's, the same firm that serves the contractor superbly, is on hand to help the handyman, the do-it-yourself trade and even the landscaping enthusiast.

Bowman, at 8301 S. University Ave., truly makes it possible to fix the home the way you want it, with the knowledgeable help and the products at its one-stop facility.

It is a building material supermarket.

Contractors long have turned to Bowman's for quality and for expert service.

Walter Johnson, with 37 years experience in the Lubbock building trades, is in charge of contractor sales, and "he wants your business"!

Joe Swan, manager of the firm, relates that he believes Bowman's has the largest selection of materials in Lubbock to meet the contractor needs, whether it is lumber, hardware, carpet, lighting fixtures, plumbing supplies and more.

This same understanding of contractor needs, and the merchandise consequently stocked, pays off for every customer, "no matter how large or small your remodeling or building needs may be."

Experienced staffmembers at Bowman's are on hand available for immediate quotation on all commercial and residential building products, and every inquiry is appreciated, just as is the "drop-in trade" for everyday needs.

Likely one is thinking at this season of remodeling, constructing a patio or den enclosure, even remodeling bedrooms, kitchen cabinets, etc. Bowman's carries a full selection of materials for such requirements.

Sale Nears End

It is further pointed out that this is the final week of a tremendous "Taking Aim At Spring Values" sale at Bowman's, with every department represented.

Thomas lighting fixtures are 35 per cent off, for example, and a truck load of picture frames is made available with frames at 25 per cent reduction.

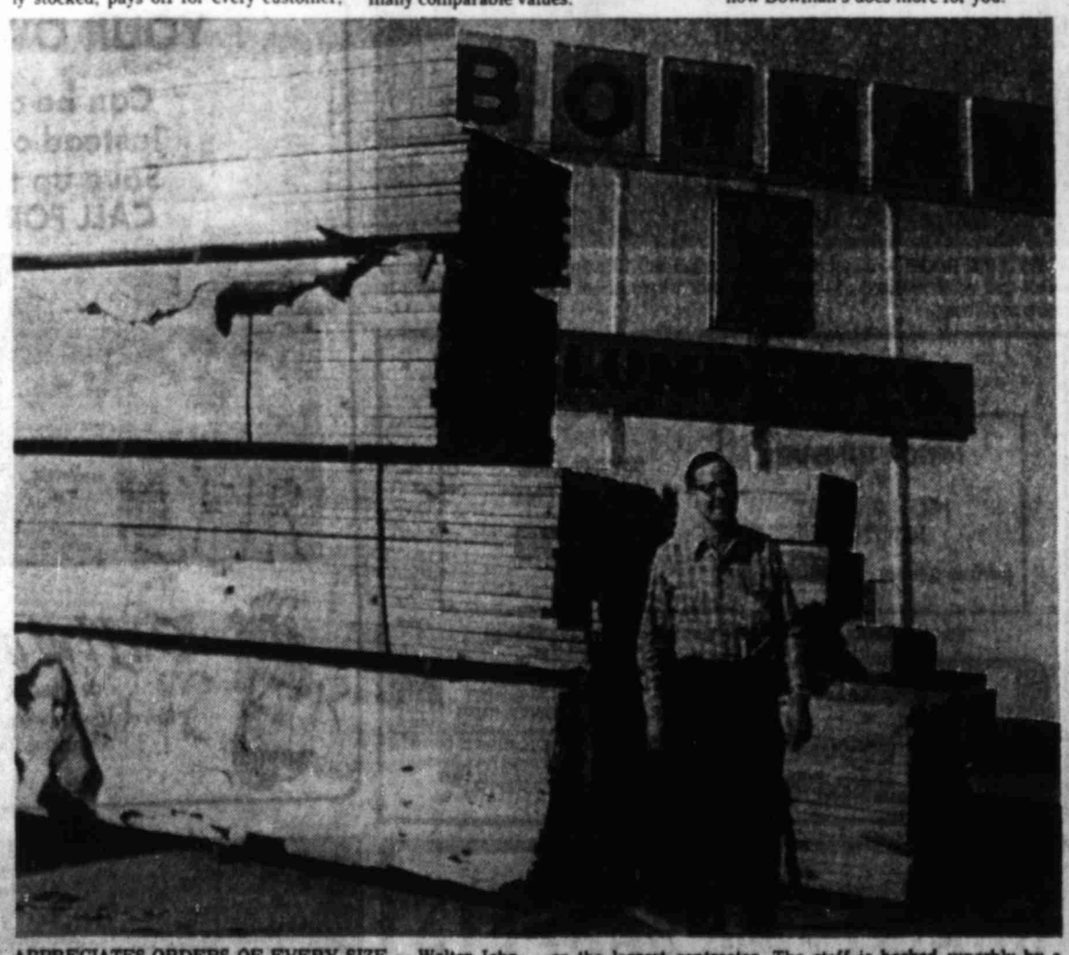
There are studs, with pre-cut economy, for 59 cents; oak barrels for $9.99, and many comparable values.

Maybe the need is paneling; Bowman's has a fantastic selection, with sale prices starting at $2.59 for 4 ft. by 8 ft. sheets. There are over 60 patterns from which to choose.

Door units, mini-blinds, woven woods, Kirsch drapery hardware, all wall covering, all in-stock vinyl flooring, all in-stock carpet are among the items included in drastic sale price slashes. See the big Bowman 32-page sale catalog for further eye-opening specials.

Note that the sale involves such categories as bath accessories, building materials, carpet, doors, drapes, electrical, gifts, hand tools, insulation, kitchen needs, paint, roofing, shelving, tile, power tools, windows, and scads of items from the garden and lawn section.

"The latchstring is out at Bowman's. Founded back in 1889, it has been located in Lubbock at the modern, spacious South University address since 1971. There is easy access and plenty of parking room; come out and see for yourself how Bowman's does more for you."



APPRECIATES ORDERS OF EVERY SIZE — Walter Johnson, pictured, is one of the well-known Bowman's staff on hand to serve in every building need, for the home handyman or the largest contractor. The staff is backed superbly by a huge stock in every department.

LUBBOCK FIRM CAN ASSIST IN THE BIG JOBS OR SMALL ONES ALIKE

Leaseway-Southwest Services Seen Advantageous To Region

Leaseway-Southwest, at 409 E. 50th St., in Lubbock, offers a complete transportation service to busy companies that simply cannot devote the time, space or money required to own and maintain a fleet of vehicles, or in some instances, just one or two units. This progressive leasing firm provides transportation vehicles to serve any size or type business.

Full Service

"Corporations as well as small operators find that full-service transportation package is more efficient from every standpoint."

"Full service" as provided by Leaseway-Southwest Transportation Corp., is exactly what the name implies. The firm provides the maintenance and inspection and even supplies the fuel and pays the taxes on the vehicle!

Personnel there are most adept, serving in a professional but considerate and friendly manner to meet the particular transportation needs of every customer.

"We'd like to count you, too, among our customers."

Upgrading and additions to its stock is a continuous operation at Leaseway-Southwest.

Leaseway-Southwest's understanding of the short-term, peak and long-term needs of area industry and business is well recognized, contributing to its own growth, too.

Half-a-hundred Lubbock businesses (and even more) depend on Leaseway-Southwest for transportation vehicle needs.

There must be a very good reason.

In Tune With Times

Keeping abreast with the needs of the area is one of the convincing reasons. Leaseway-Southwest continually adds new equipment for rental and for full-time customers of this service-oriented firm.

"Utilization of leased vehicles is the growing trend in transportation management" it is emphasized by Ken Wright, president.

Gray's Boys & Girls Fashions Exuding Readiness For Spring

"For infants through student size 20, Gray's Boys & Girls Fashions meets every Easter and new-season apparel need!"

Actually, selection has never been greater at Gray's, 50th Street at Salem Avenue (in Sunshine Square); and Easter and Spring are very much in evidence, in the newness of merchandise, the decorations, in everything within the beautifully appointed store.

It is fun to shop at Gray's Boys & Girls Fashions (where a great pre-teen selection is noted.)

Whether the need is for the really dressy apparel or for casual numbers, Gray's has the fashionable, sensibly priced answer.

There are lots and lots of boys suits at this time, sizes 4 to 20.

Swim Wear

And swim wear and shorts are arriving, signaling that the outdoor season is upon us, and that proper wear can make it fun to the fullest.

Gray's stocks just about everything in apparel for the age range it serves, with exception of shoes.

Pretty prom and banquet dresses are stocked, of course, with a gorgeous selection evident.

Sleepwear is available in the gamut of size ranges, with this assortment probably the most beautiful yet presented by this store noted for its beauty.

There are few stores that carry such a selection in the affected size range, and Gray's must be commended for its continuing and successful efforts in correct stocking.

Uncrowded Look

Owners and founders Tom and Kay Gray want to express their sincere appreciation for the reception of the type store they provide, and for the growing trade accorded them. Without this patronage and confidence, the present large Easter and Spring stock would have been impossible.

For those who conceivably may not yet have become acquainted with the distinctive store, the Easter season affords a banner opportunity. Come in, browse, note the pleasing decor and convenient stock arrangement, and the quality of merchandise. Even with the huge stock, nothing seems "crowded" at Gray's.

Both Tom and Kay are on hand personally to assure fullest in customer service.

Tallman Pools Now Scheduling For April Construction Dates

"There should be a Tallman Pool in your future . . . and soon!"

After all, Tallman Pools is one of America's oldest and most reliable swimming pool companies, and special pre-season savings are posted here until March 31.

"There still is time for extraordinary savings on a swimming pool of your own."

Call 797-6659 for a free estimate in your own situation.

The Tallman Pools story is quite a success story:

Back in 1962, Al and Jan Tallman, each in their early 20's, wanted a pool of their own . . . so what did they do? They started their own pool construction business, on a small scale, in their home area of Buffalo, N.Y.

Business expanded. Even after going into the Rochester area, they did all their own work, and really kept busy, for some 10 years.

At this time they had increasing difficulty in prompt material delivery from some factories, so what did they do? They began to manufacture the steel panels and vinyl liners, themselves!

The business prospered as the quality and integrity of their work became known.

In 1972 an additional facility was established to serve the south . . . at Atlanta, Ga. There are now two others, in Dallas and in Florida.

The Tallman Pools of Lubbock is a franchised operation owned by Lubbock residents Chuck and Kay Larson.

This husband-wife team previously lived in Fort Worth where they were co-owners of the Ft. Worth and Tarrant County franchise for Tallman.

Seeing the opportunities and desirability of Lubbock and area with its well-known business climate, and with the other apparent advantages of living on the South Plains, the Larsons have made Lubbock their home.

"We believe in what we sell", they emphasize, relating that there is a 10 year guarantee on their pool construction, with an even greater 20-year guarantee on materials by Tallman.

Larson is his own contractor, and of course is factory trained.

Custom designed pools, for the owner's particular need (landscape, budget, space, etc.) is a speciality. Some standard sizes also are available.

The pools are not pre-constructed . . . they are built especially for you and for your pleasure.

The quoted prices include everything, a ready-to-swim situation when the job is completed. Plumbing, electric units, even a deck is included in the turnkey operation.

No Untimely Delays

Most usually, construction involves 14 working days or less for this quality construction!

One is encouraged to check the Tallman Pools ads weekly on these pages, noting the current savings, effective through March, on standard size pools. It is stressed that the Larsons are now scheduling for April starting dates, and early inquiry and arrangements are well advised.

"For quality, for lasting joy and satisfaction, may we give you the complete Tallman Pools story? Call 797-6659 and let us, your hometown dealer, start you on the path to new pool enjoyment. And don't forget . . . compare our guarantee!"
