Texas grocery chain H-E-B purchases site in city

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

H-E-B Grocery Co. on Monday assumed ownership of the La Villita Shopping Center at Midkiff Road and Wadley Avenue.

Kristy Ozmun, director of public affairs for H-E-B, said the company has begun the process of drawing up plans for a store and setting up a construction schedule. Construction is expected to begin in January and is to be completed later in the year.

She said the company expects to use area contractors as much as possible.

Adjacent to the store, H-E-B plans to construct a 20,000-square-foot retail center that Ms. Ozmun said will be available for lease.

She said it is likely that some of the existing structures on the site will be torn down to make way for the store, although specifics won't be determined until the final plans are drawn up.

Businesses in the area that won't be affected by the purchase include Ski Skeller Sports, Pinkie's Liquors, Taco Bell and the Shell service station.

In addition, H-E-B will own the leases on the property occupied by Kittiwake Furniture and True Value Hardware.

She said the company received calls from residents who wanted H-E-B to build a store in Midland.

"We're looking forward to coming to Midland.

"We're happy to be making this announcement, and we're anxious to get started so we can serve Midland shoppers with an exciting store, great prod-

King Hussein of Jordan, back to camera, and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin have private words after their speeches.

Leaders cap vow

WASHINGTON — Jordan's King Hussein and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin capped a dramatic joint pledge of friendship Tuesday with a sharp condemnation of terrorist attacks, saying they threaten the march to peace in the Middle East. Hussein, already at risk for pledging peace with Israel, condemned the series of extremist attacks on Jews around the world as having "nothing to do with Islam, nothing with my religion."/7A

House Banking Committee Chairman Rep. Henry Gonzales, D-Texas, right, checks notes with committee staffers before Tuesday's Whitewater hearing.

■ White House concedes laxity, not ethical lapses in Whitewater affair.

By Dan Freedman
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — White House Counsel Lloyd Cutler told lawmakers Tuesday that administration officials had violated no ethics rules in the Whitewater case, but nevertheless their actions did not reflect "as high a performance standard as we should have set for ourselves."

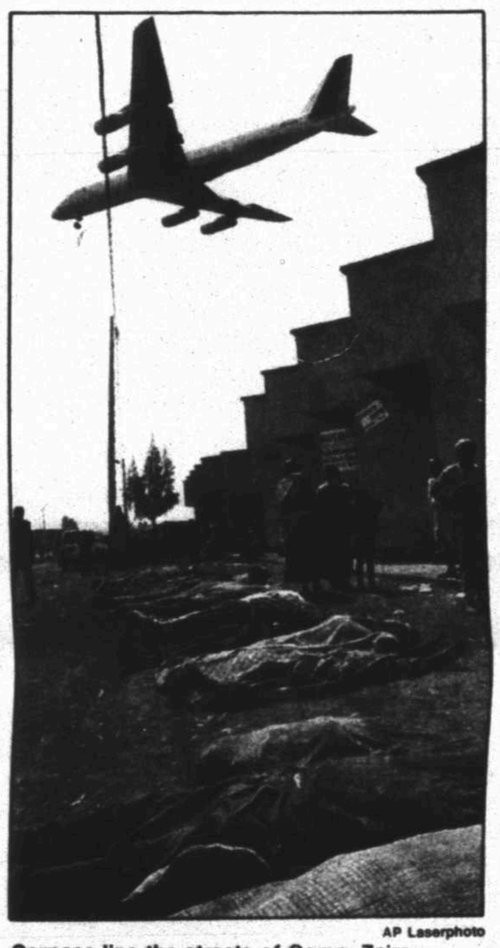

As Congress opened long-delayed hearings into Whitewater, Cutler testified that the administration has taken steps to assure that any future contacts between White House officials and regulatory or law enforcement agencies "will be beyond challenge."

The first of two days of hearings before the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee was little more than a sparring match between the committee's 20 Republicans and 30 Democrats over the necessity and scope of the hearings, with Committee Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez making frequent use of his gavel to exercise control over GOP members.

Early in the hearing, Gonzalez moved to block questioning about the death of White House Deputy Counsel Vincent Foster. The motion won on a largely party-line vote of 31 to 19.

Rwandan refugees feel tied 'between 2 deaths'

GOMA, Zaire — A group of refugees encamped in a roofless stone house held a spirited discussion on Tuesday afternoon on whether to return to their country. MARATHON (AP) — A deadly head-on collision between two freight trains is once again raising concerns about the safety of trains speeding hazardous materials through West Texas towns, an official said Tuesday.

Work crews began cleaning up the wreckage of the Southern Pacific trains that collided Monday in Brewster County, while investigators combed the area for clues to the cause of the accident that killed four rail workers.

Teachers' groups to MISD: Do what you must, but don't shortchange us

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Raise taxes, cut the budget, freeze administrator salaries, but don't give teachers the short end of the stick. That was the plea of several teacher organization representatives at Tuesday's school board meeting.

Although he said he didn't think "there is a person in this school district who is overpaid," Buck said he wouldn't oppose raising taxes or freezing administration salaries in order to put the money into teacher raises.

He said the school board also could

Car bomb injures three after embassy blast

LONDON (AP) — A car bomb exploded in north London early today, injuring three people. The attack occurred hours after another car bomb heavily damaged the Israeli embassy, injuring 14 people.

Police gave no immediate indication of the bombers' target or whether it was linked to the earlier attack Tuesday. But Sky News television reported the blast occurred outside a building housing several Israeli and Jewish organizations including a group called the Joint Israeli Appeal.

Police said the latest blast, which occurred at 12:46 a.m. today, was in the north Finchley area, eight miles north of central London's Kensington district where the earlier car bomb went off Tuesday.

The three victims of today's attack were hospitalized. Their injuries were not believed to be life-threatening, police said.

Police gave no further details.

Eyewitnesses in north Finchley reported seeing windows blown out and other damage and passers-by suffered cuts and shock.

Just before Tuesday's explosion, a smartly dressed woman had left an Audi with the trunk packed with explosives near the Israeli Embassy.

Police said although the woman did not appear unusual, she attracted the attention of two security men when she left the car in a nearby parking lot. As they approached, the gray Audi blew up and she disappeared in the confusion.

The woman was "a middle-aged lady, well dressed, carrying a Harrods bag, who would blend in and not attract very much attention in Kensington High Street," said Commander David Tucker, head of Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist branch.

Tucker said the woman was 55 to 60 years old, had light brown curly hair halfway down her back and appeared to be of Middle Eastern origin. The bomb went off within three minutes of her car's arrival, he said.

S. Korea discloses northerner's defection

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A close relative of North Korean Prime Minister Kang Song San has defected to South Korea, government officials said today

The defector, identifying himself as Kang Myong Do, 35, a son-in-law of the prime minister, defected through a third country in May, they said. They didn't identify the third country.

It was the 25th known defection this year and the second since North Korean leader Kim Il Sung died June 8. A son of former North Korean Construction Minister Cho Myong Chol defected to Seoul last week.

Kang was a vice president of a trading company under the direct control of North Korea's presidential office, said the officials of the Agency for National Security Planning.

The prime minister, 63, is related to Kim by marriage. He ranks fourth in the North's political hierarchy.

It was the second known defection since Kim Il Sung's death July 8.

Threat of invasion alarms Haitian politicians

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Haitian politicians expressed alarm Tuesday at a possible invasion, as the United States sought U.N. approval to restore democracy by force in the Caribbean nation.

The U.N. Security Council postponed until today consideration of the U.S. request to authorize a possible invasion to restore elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who was deposed by a coup in September 1991.

"If the Security Council passes the resolution, I fear the worst, not only for Haiti but also for the world," said conservative politician Hubert de Ronceray, a frequent critic of Aristide.

U.N.-imposed trade and travel embargoes on impoverished Haiti have failed to dislodge its military rulers.

Under the draft Security Council resolution proposed by Washington, an international force — commanded by the United States and monitored by U.N. observers — would remove Haiti's army rulers. International administrators would then prepare for elections in 1996.

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said last week that a force to take over after the Haitian army leaders depart could require as many as 16,000 people, including more than 5,000 combat troops.

'A date certain for my return and for the departure of coup leaders must be set in order to sustain the hope of the nation that democracy will be restored.'

— President Aristide

De Ronceray called the resolution "one of those sparks which announced a great fire" and said it would mean "a new period of neocolonialism was opening" in the Caribbean.

But Sen. Turneb Delpe, a leader of the National Front for Change and Democracy, the left wing coalition that nominated Aristide for president in 1990, said army leaders would have to take responsibility for an invasion.

"If there is an intervention, the army leaders — who have refused to take the road of negotiation — will have to take the blame," he said.

Coup leader Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras last year reneged on an agreement for Aristide to return to power by last Oct. 30.

The National Front opposes foreign intervention, but Delpe declined to comment on the proposed U.N. resolution until it was approved or rejected.

Fifteen pro-Aristide groups earlier this month argued against an invasion, saying it would only reinforce American domination of Haiti.

Aristide has made contradictory statements, sometimes seeming to call for military force while also saying he wouldn't return to the presidency if it resulted from foreign intervention.

On Tuesday, he didn't respond directly to the draft U.N. resolution, but called for a deadline for his usurpers to leave.

"A date certain for my return and for the departure of coup leaders must be set in order to sustain the hope of the nation that democracy will be restored," he said.

That slim rain chance lingers

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of rain, a high near 90 and east winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low between 65-70, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be partly cloudy with a high between 90-95.

After an overnight low of 73, Tuesday's high reached 94, compared to the record high for that date of 105 set in 1944. The record low was 60 set in 1973.

STATE

In West Texas, partly to mostly sunny skies prevailed Tuesday as a weak cold front made its way slowly south. Widely scattered showers lingered behind the front. Afternoon temperatures reached only into the 70s and 80s in areas north of the front and climbed into the 90s south of it.

Partly to mostly cloudy skies are expected across West Texas today with a chance for showers and thunderstorms. Highs should range from the 80s to near 100 with lows in the 60s and 70s.

A weak cold front had pushed into North Texas, where skies remained partly cloudy with little change in temperature. Afternoon temperatures were generally in the 90s. Some scattered showers were reported in south central North Texas.

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a chance of thunderstorms. Highs should be in the 80s and 90s with lows in the 70s.

Partly cloudy skies were reported over South Texas on Tuesday, where hot and dry conditions persisted. Winds were variable with speeds up to 25 mph. Afternoon temperatures were in the 90s and 100s.

Today, South Texans should see partly cloudy skies with a slight chance of thunderstorms from the Hill Country to the upper Texas coast. Highs will range from near 90 along the coast to near 100 inland.

NATION

A frontal system that curved Tuesday from Montana into western Texas and across to New York brought locally heavy rain and some severe thunderstorms.

Heavy thunderstorms and severe lightning disrupted flights at some airports in the Northeast, the Federal Aviation Agency said.

All departures from New York City's LaGuardia International Airport were canceled from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. CDT. Flights into Philadelphia International Airport were running at least two hours behind schedule.

High winds from thunderstorm damaged trees in parts of Mississippi and damaged trees and power lines in parts of New York state, the National Weather Service said.

Heavier rainfall for the six-hour period up to 1 p.m. CDT included 1.25 inches at Muscle Shoals, Ala.; 1.23 inches at Tulsa, Okla.; 0.85 of an inch at Fayetteville, Ark.; and 0.72 of an inch at Bluefield, W.Va.

Tulsa has gotten 11.39 inches of rain already this month, a record for July.

Behind the line of storms, temperatures fell as cooler, drier air filtered southward from Canada, reaching record-tying levels in Nebraska and North Dakota.

Temperatures dropped into the 40s and 50s early Tuesday across the northern and central Rockies and parts of the northern and central Plains, even dipping into the 30s at a few higher elevations.

Custer, S.D., fell to a low of 39 degrees. Williston, N.D., cooled to 42, tying its record for the date, and North Platte, Neb., tied its record at 52.

South of the front, warm, muggy air kept overnight temperatures in the upper 60s and 70s across the southern Plains, the middle and lower Mississippi Valley, the Southeast And the mid Atlantic states.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

ucts, low prices and service-minded people."

It is estimated that the store will employ approximately 400 people.

Rachel Porras, employment supervisor with the Midland office of the Texas Employment Commission, said the Midland office will begin taking applications for H-E-B after Christmas.

H-E-B was founded in Kerrville in 1905 by Florence Butt. The company has stores in 123 Texas communities and employs 42,000 people.

MISD: Teachers' groups plead their case

consider "buying out some of the higher-experienced administrators and teachers. Odessa College, Andrews and Kermit are doing it. If we have to, let's look at that, or at combining positions or not replacing all vacant positions to free up money and redirect it to teacher salaries."

The district's proposed salary schedule would give teachers a 3.5 percent raise at midpoint in the salary schedule. The starting salary for a new teacher with no experience would be $23,500. An educator who has taught for 29 years would receive $38,915. Several teachers said a 5 percent increase would be fairer in order for local educators to catch up with the state average.

Buck suggested that better salaries would attract and keep quality teachers in the district and would result in improved student test scores.

"So, if we guarantee more money, you guarantee higher test scores. Can we have that in writing?" said school-board trustee Dianne Anderson.

School-board trustee Robin Hightower noted that annuitjes and benefits should also be taken into consideration.

"Speaking just in terms of money being below state average — this is not all there is to the story," she said.

"No, it's not," Buck said, "but half of the school districts in the state still have Social Security and we replaced that with annuities. Many other school districts have both."

Linda Hancock, president of theb Texas Classroom Teachers Association, asked the board to consider adjustments to maternity leave pay and personal days.

"Teachers are parents, too," she said.

She said the administration's proposed raise of 3.5 percent — at the midpoint of the teacher salary schedule — was the most acceptable (of three district proposals) to educators in her organization.

"I realize compromises must be made in the budget . . . but make teacher salaries a top priority."

Karen Mosley, president of the Midland Educators Association, said teachers received a 2.5 percent raise a year ago. "And, on the average, our bills went up 4 percent."

She said approximately 10 percent of her salary goes back into the classroom for supplies and materials." Her comment received knowing nods from the roomful of educators.

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said 80 percent of the operating budget would go toward salaries. He said giving teachers his recommended 3.5 percent raise, as part of the total budget — which will be in excess of $100 million — would increase the tax rate six cents or "would require major surgery on the budget."

Following the teacher presentation, Baressi and the board reviewed the budget and considered cuts, including new and vacant staff positions. Baressi said the board had directed him to offer options to raising the tax rate six cents.

Ms. Anderson said she would like to give teachers the raise they asked for, but "taxpayers will be screaming."

"I want to give teachers a raise and make them happy, but I want to make taxpayers happy too," she said. "Help us cut fat from the budget."

Lee High School teacher Horace Griffin told Ms. Anderson that teachers had offered the board several ideas to make cuts in the budget.

"We don't have an average school district. Why pay us below average?" he said. "If we continue to go the route we're going, we will lose good teachers to other districts."

Baressi said the board will meet from 5 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. on Thursday to vote on the budget study and salary recommendations. If there is to be a tax increase, the board must declare its intent to raise the tax rate at that time.

The meeting is open to the public. The board will meet in executive session before the Thursday meeting to discuss personnel matters.

In other action, trustees:

- voted to extend contracts for various administrators;
- approved adding Computer Science III and Marketing Computer Applications courses;
- approved an increase in employee lunch prices from $1.90 to $2; and
- heard reports on the Partnership School Initiative at Midland High School and on block scheduling at Abell Junior High School.

RATE: Unemployment in basin jumps sharply

(From 1A)

The rate is just below the 8.7 percent recorded in June a year ago.

"We saw a similar increase in the statewide rate," said Rachel Porras, employment supervisor in the TEC's Midland office.

She said the statewide rate rose 0.9 percent from May to June.

"This is seen as a seasonal trend, with more people looking for work at the beginning of the summer."

The area's civilian labor force swelled by 2,100 in June, rising to 119,500 from 117,400. A year ago the labor force numbered 118,100.

Of those joining the labor force, 800 found jobs as total employment rose to 109,200 from 108,400 a month ago. Employment is up from 107,000 last year.

However, unemployment also rose, jumping by 1,300 people to 10,300 from 9,000 in May. In June 1993, unemployment was 10,300.

The increase, Ms. Porras said, "is not related to the recent announcements of layoffs, because those are considered announcements and not actual layoffs."

While she said current rates are an improvement over figures of a year ago, the employment picture in Midland-Odessa is not very positive at the present time.

In the city of Midland, the unemployment rate was 6.5 percent, up from 5.8 percent in May but below the 7.3 percent seen in June 1993.

The labor force totaled 49,018, up from 48,293 a month ago and from 48,819 a year ago.

Total employment was 45,825, up from 45,509 in May and from 45,265 last year.

Total unemployment was 3,193, up from 2,784 in May but down from 3,554 a year ago.

Odessa-Midland was ranked 18th among the TEC's 27 MSAs.

The lowest unemployment rate was seen in Bryan-College Station with 3.7 percent, followed by Austin-San Marcos with 3.9 percent, Amarillo with 4.7 percent, and Lubbock and San Angelo with 5.5 percent each. The highest rate in the state was McAllen-Edinburg-Mission with 17.2 percent.

Statewide, the unemployment rate was 7.2 percent, up from 6.3 percent in May but below the June 1993 rate of 7.5 percent.

TRAINS: Head-on collision raises concerns

officials.

"For years, citizens in this area have been concerned about the fact that the Southern Pacific trains come through a number of small towns at relatively high speeds carrying a lot of hazardous materials," Beard said. "I think this incident, unfortunate as it is, is going to focus attention on that situation again."

The Southern Pacific trains, which crashed just east of Marathon, about 230 miles southeast of El Paso, were carrying various types of hazardous materials, including paint, peroxide and petroleum distillates, according to railroad officials.

But there were no hazardous spills and the cars carrying potentially dangerous substances remained on the tracks, even as several cars carrying furniture derailed.

Killed in the accident were crew members Milby E. Winn, 59; Eddie J. Hanson, 55; F.H. (Rick) Bonnell, 56; and J.M. Davis Sr., 57; all of Sanderson.

"It's hard to understand how something like this (crash) could have happened," Beard said.

She said county officials had brought their concerns about rail safety to Southern Pacific officials in the past following other, smaller accidents in and around the county seat in Alpine and other small West Texas towns.

"Southern Pacific has not been terribly receptive," she said.

Mike Furtney, a spokesman for the San Francisco-based railroad, said he was not aware of any complaints by West Texas residents, but added, "That doesn't guarantee that there haven't been any."

He said that despite accidents like the Marathon collision, railroads still have the best safety record in the transportation industry.

JABS: Cutler concedes laxity, not lapses

(From 1A)

Dressed in a lemon-cream-colored blazer, the 78-year-old chairman opened the hearing on a note of partisanship, saying, "We are not here to charge, prosecute or adjudge questions of guilt or innocence."

But GOP Rep. Toby Roth of Wisconsin, asserted, in quizzing Cutler, "This thing smells to high heaven."

By agreement among lawmakers last month, both House and Senate hearings are limited to a series of meetings between White House, Treasury and Resolution Trust Corp. officials, starting in September 1993 and ending this February, over an RTC referral to the Justice Department on the failed Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, naming Bill and Hillary Clinton as possible beneficiaries of financial irregularities.

The RTC oversees failed S&Ls, and its referral to Justice meant that it thought there was a criminal case to be pursued.

Independent Counsel Robert Fiske, who is investigating the Whitewater matter, has asked Congress to hold off on considering its essential ingredients: The Clintons' joint investment in Ozark Mountain development property with the head of Madison, James McDougal, who sat quietly in the back of the hearing room throughout much of Tuesday afternoon.

Republicans bridled under the constraints.

"If these ground rules applied to the O.J. Simpson trial, you couldn't ask about the knife, the glove or the blood," Roth said, referring to the double-murder case against the former football star and sportscaster. "Under these ground rules, all you could ask is: 'So, O.J., how was the flight to Chicago.'"

Earlier this month Fiske announced there would be no criminal prosecutions on what has come to be known as the "Washington contacts" phase of the affair, the "heads-up" briefings for White House officials on the progress of the RTC's Madison investigation. However, he declined to pass judgment on the ethical propriety of the meetings.

Rep. James Leach of Iowa, the committee's senior Republican and the GOP's point man in pursuing the Whitewater allegations, said: "On the landscape of political scandals, Whitewater may be a bump. But it speaks mountains about me-generation public ethics as well as single-party control of certain states, cities and the U.S. Congress."

TIED: Refugees feel caught between 2 deaths

ning with relative albeit grim efficiency two days ago, has now been overwhelmed by the numbers. But the refugees who were chatting together on Tuesday believe — as others do — that returning to Rwanda to escape cholera means facing death at the hands of the Rwandan Patriotic Front, the Tutsi-led rebel army that is now the government.

"Going back or staying here, either way we die," said Wilson Ndabateze, a 35-year-old carpenter who, like others staying around the Munigi refugee camp, is a member of Rwanda's Hutu ethnic majority. He has concluded that for the moment it is better to stay.

"We are caught between two deaths," said Martin Munyanganizi, 35, a farmer. On Sunday, Munyanganizi wrapped up the body of his 10-year-old daughter in a cloth and laid her beside the road to be picked up by a truck and carried to a mass grave. She died of cholera, he said.

On Tuesday, four other children, caked with dirt and sickly, lay next to him on a straw mat on the hard ground. His wife leaned listlessly against the rock wall of the house, as her 1-year-old daughter, longing for milk, wailed and pulled in vain at her mother's dirty blue sweater.

"We are only farmers," Munyanganizi said. "If the international community could help us go back home, we would go." The sorghum and beans he planted on his 60-square-yard plot before fleeing in April are now ready for harvesting, he explained.

Officially, 1,316 refugees crossed at the border post here back into Rwanda, according to a young man who was keeping a tally in a stenographic notebook. But the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees estimated that 10,000 refugees may have crossed on Tuesday at unofficial places where there are no fences or natural barriers.

"It is a small trickle that is slowly gaining momentum," Machivenyika Mapuranga, assistant secretary-general of the Organization of African Unity, said late on Tuesday afternoon when he visited the border.

The relief agencies here in Goma, who were ill prepared and then overwhelmed by the massive refugee influx this month, remain as confused and divided as many of the refugees over what to do now.

Should they provide buses to take the refugees back? Should they set up feeding stations inside Rwanda to draw them back?

"We have had no reports at all from Rwanda of anyone who has gone back being killed," said Ray Wilkenson, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees. "Our reports are that they are being cordially and openly received."

Most of the refugee agencies here have no plans to disseminate that information. They are leaving it to reach the refugees by word of mouth, from those who have returned to their homes safely and whose stories will be accepted.

In any case, the thought of undertaking a major repatriation effort when a relief operation is barely under way here in Zaire is a daunting one for the aid agencies.

"From one operation that almost sank the aid agencies, we are now being asked to undertake another one," Wilkenson said. "We're not going to be able to work two miracles. Our resources are limited."

Only on Tuesday did about 75 American soldiers start setting up the first water purification systems in Goma, considered indispensable to halting the cholera epidemic here.

Death among the refugees still overwhelms the relief agencies. After finding it difficult to locate suitable places for more mass graves, the U.N. refugee agency obtained the reluctant assent of the local authorities to the burning of bodies.

Now the relief agencies face another problem. "We cannot find anybody to do the grisly task of burning the bodies," Wilkenson said. Several non-governmental relief organizations have said no to the task, as has the French military. The United Nations considered asking the Americans, but Washington has scaled back the number of troops it intends to send to Zaire.

It had been reported that the United States would send about 1,400 troops. But the French were not pleased by the prospects of being overshadowed here by Americans,

Defiant Serbs vow to renew Sarajevo siege

■ Serb stranglehold, scheduled to begin today, would end four months of near normalcy, jeopardize peace prospects.

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — In a harsh blow to peace prospects, Bosnian Serbs said Tuesday they would re-establish their stranglehold on Sarajevo, closing the only route civilians can use to enter and leave the city.

The surprise action, to take effect today, will deprive the Bosnian capital of a major food-supply route at a time when the U.N. airlift is indefinitely suspended.

It will also end a four-month period of near normalcy for Sarajevo, the first since Serbs began a bombardment and siege in April 1992.

Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic called the Serb move a "senseless decision" intended to sabotage already faltering efforts to bring peace.

In a letter to the U.N. peacekeeping force, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said the road was being closed because the Muslim-led government had violated the March agreement that opened the route.

He accused the government of using the road to smuggle arms and ammunition into Sarajevo. He also complained that government troops had been firing into Serb territory and that the government had not honored agreements on prisoner exchanges.

The Bosnian Serb news agency, Srna, later quoted Karadzic as saying the tightened siege was only temporary. The agency did not give details.

Izetbegovic, after an emergency meeting with U.N. officials, said the claims of arms smuggling were "absolutely incorrect."

Viktor Andreyev, the top U.N. political officer in Sarajevo, said the U.N. contingent had no evidence weapons were smuggled over the route, and he protested the Serb action.

Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic said the Bosnian government expected U.N. officials to persuade the Serbs to backtrack.

"It is not only crucial for Sarajevo, it's crucial for the peace process," he said. "The Serbs want to start a major problem here in order to avoid a peace process."

The Serbs' action followed their refusal last week to accept an accord worked out by the United States, Britain, France, Russia and Germany to end the 27-month-old war.

Russian Defense Minister Pavel Grachev and special envoy Vitaly Churkin met Tuesday with Karadzic and Slobodan Milosevic, the president of neighboring Serbia, to try to persuade the Bosnian Serbs to sign the plan. But the meeting ended with no word of progress.

Bosnian Muslims and Croats have accepted the peace plan, which would give them 51 percent of Bosnia and shrink the Bosnian Serb holdings from 70 percent to 49 percent.

But the Serbs have held out, despite international threats that government troops could be exempted from an arms embargo on all of former Yugoslavia.

Mexican opposition party calls for probe of 'strange' accident

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A top opposition party called Tuesday for a "truthful" probe of a hit-and-run collision that critically injured its candidate for Chiapas governor, saying it may have been a murder attempt.

Amado Avendano Figueroa, a 60-year-old lawyer and journalist, received head injuries and six broken ribs when a trailer truck slammed into his pickup truck in Chiapas state on Monday. The driver fled.

"This accident is very strange," said Porfirio Munoz Ledo, president of the left-leaning Democratic Revolutionary Party that nominated Avendano to run for governor in the southernmost state, where rebellion still smolders.

Munoz Ledo said the collision, which killed three others riding with the candidate, required an "immediate and truthful investigation" to ensure a peaceful climate prevails in Chiapas during Aug. 21 general elections.

Avendano was a prominent human rights activist and founder of the daily newspaper Tiempo in San Cristobal de las Casas, Chiapas, scene of an uprising by armed Indians that claimed 145 lives in January.

■ 'Infrastructure of terror' threatens to derail fragile Mideast negotiations, Rabin warns.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A car bomb attack on Israel's embassy in London marred an historic day of Middle East peace efforts here Tuesday, prompting Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin to warn that a global "infrastructure of terror" threatens to derail the fragile peace process.

President Clinton condemned the bombing, which left 14 injured just one week after a bomb killed dozens of people at a Jewish community center in Buenos Aires. He vowed to step up efforts to build reconciliation in the fractured Middle East.

"We cannot allow the enemies of peace to prevail," Clinton said at a White House news conference with Rabin and Jordan's King Hussein. "We must not allow them to disrupt this peace process."

In a telling indication of just how fragile that process is, however, Rabin's reaction to the bombing provoked a near-rancorous response from Hussein.

The Jordanian monarch bristled at the Israeli leader's reference to "extremist, radical Islamic terrorist movements," whose activities are "undermining any possibility to achieve peace."

Hussein condemned the bombings, but said, "Nothing irritates me more or is more painful to me than to witness and see acts and attitudes attributed to Islam that have nothing to do with Islam, my faith and my religion."

The White House press conference was meant to cap off two days of extraordinary talks between the Jordanian and Israeli leaders.

The two men signed an agreement Monday pledging to end the state of war that has existed between their two countries since the Jewish state was founded in 1948 and to pursue normal diplomatic and economic relations.

On Tuesday, they addressed a joint meeting of Congress in the first appearance ever before that body by leaders from two separate nations.

Word of Tuesday's bombing in London, however, underscored the remaining hostility existing in a region that has known no real peace for more than 50 years.

Rabin charged that extremist anti-Israeli groups that are known to have used car bombings and other terrorist acts in the past are now employing those techniques to oppose recent steps toward reconciliation.

Argentina, Panama probe explosions that kill, maim Jews

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The death toll in the bombing of a Jewish community center climbed to 95 on Tuesday, and Argentina's president said that the person who sold a truck used in the explosion had been detained.

Israeli military authorities say a Renault Traffic was loaded with explosives and blew up July 18 in front of the Jewish center in Buenos Aires.

"The vendor is detained and will have to be questioned about involvement," President Carlos Menem told a local radio station. He did not identify the person or give further details.

Israeli and Argentine government officials say they suspect Middle East terrorists planned the attack with help from residents.

The Emergency Medical Service listed 95 people dead and said at least 10 more bodies were in the rubble.

Two people, a Morrocan and an Iraqi, were detained after the bombing. Both have been released.

Jewish institutions, meanwhile, increased security as children returned to classes after winter vacation. Islamic schools and temples also stepped up protection, citing fear of reprisal attacks.

In Panama, a top official confirmed that a bomb caused last week's commuter plane crash that killed all 21 people aboard, including 12 Jewish businessmen.

The homemade bomb was attached to the Alas Airline plane, which exploded and crashed shortly after takeoff July 19 from the Atlantic coastal port of Colon, said government spokesman Menalco Solis.

"We have come to the conclusion that the disaster was caused by the explosion of an explosive artifact in the plane's fuselage," Solis told reporters.

He promised that Panamanian authorities would continue investigating to find those responsible.

Rabin, Hussein declare war over while addressing Congress

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Two longtime Arab and Israeli enemies reaffirmed their pledge to live in peace Tuesday and pleaded with the United States for financial and military support to help them achieve a comprehensive settlement in the Middle East.

In an extraordinary set of speeches to a joint session of Congress, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Jordan's King Hussein declared the state of war between their two countries to be over. Recalling the thousands who have died in the Arab-Israeli conflict, they urged their peoples to live with "normality and humanity" toward one another.

"What we are witnessing today, God willing, is a progression from a state of war to a state of peace," said Hussein, casting an eye toward Rabin, who nodded graciously.

"The state of war between Israel and Jordan is over," Hussein declared a moment later to a standing ovation from House and Senate members.

Rabin, who followed the king to a podium in the House chamber, spoke of the "wonderful, common future" Israel hopes to share with its Arab neighbors as they seek to bury the hostilities that have ripped the Middle East apart for the last 46 years.

Rabin speaks of 'wonderful, common future' Israel hopes to share with its Arab neighbors as they seek to bury decades of hostilities.

"Today we are embarking on a battle which has no dead and no wounded, no blood and no anguish," Rabin said, his eyes glistening with emotion. "This is the only battle which is a pleasure to wage — the battle for peace."

Their historic appearance together marked the first time two world leaders shared the podium at a joint session of Congress. The congressional speeches followed the signing at the White House on Monday of the "Washington Declaration," a document laying out economic and political steps Israel and Jordan will take to normalize relations.

Both leaders expressed the hope that their declaration will eventually lead to an agreement on a formal peace treaty. But they spoke of the "hard" road ahead in negotiations.

They warned Congress that without financial help from the international community, specifically the United States, the efforts to bring a comprehensive peace to the Mideast "will come to naught."

"The United States is essential to the achievement of this dream. . . . If we are to achieve our aims, all of us must be given the opportunity and the tools to play our part in this historic endeavor," the Jordanian monarch told Senate and House members.

The comments were tailored to persuade Congress to forgive Jordan's long-term debt to the United States of more than $700 million and provide even more financial and technical assistance to help Jordan modernize its military and improve its economy.

Rabin made no direct reference to aid in his speech. But he told reporters later at a White House news conference that more financial aid would be critical to Jordan, an extremely poor country.

Official: Israel-Syria pact may come soon

WASHINGTON (NYT) — With Jordan and the PLO having made peace with Israel in the backyard of the White House, a U.S. official said Tuesday that signs of a possible breakthrough with Syria may make another "similarly dramatic" ceremony possible by the end of this year.

Among the optimistic signs that Syria may be ready to make peace, the official pointed to the unprecedented "live" airing Monday on Syria's state-controlled television of the entire Israeli-Jordanian White House ceremony and a new message from Syrian President Hafez Assad of his interest in hastening the pace of peace talks.

Syria, Israel's most implacable foe, has led the Arab attack against Israel in each of the three wars the Jewish state has fought since its creation in 1948.

The new pledge by Assad came during a telephone conversation initiated by President Clinton shortly after the signing Monday of a declaration in which Jordan's King Hussein and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin ended their nations' 46-year-old state of war.

According to David Saterfield, director of Near East and South Asian Affairs on the White House National Security Council, Clinton wanted to bring Assad up to date on his private talks with Hussein following the signing ceremony.

During the conversation, Clinton was pleased to hear Assad not only "reaffirm his commitment to peace" with Israel but signal his desire "to move forward at the earliest time possible," the White House aide said.

Although Saterfield stressed the talks with Syria "will not be easy," he added that "similarly dramatic progress" could be achieved that would set the stage for White House ceremonies in 1994.

"We believe that a breakthrough is possible this year," he said.

The PLO's Yasser Arafat and Rabin signed a Declaration of Principles in a similar White House ceremony on September 13, 1993, that paved the way for Palestinian self-rule in Gaza and Jericho.

Government agrees to pay workers exposed to radiation

CINCINNATI (AP) — The government says it will pay for lifetime medical monitoring and provide $15 million in damages to settle a lawsuit by workers who claim they were unwittingly exposed to radiation at the Fernald uranium plant.

The deal announced Tuesday effectively ends a 1990 action that sought $500 million. It could become a model for six similar lawsuits pending against the U.S. Department of Energy.

The lawsuit by workers and subcontractors accused Fernald's previous operator, NLO Inc. and its parent company, National Lead Industries Inc., of intentionally subjecting them to radiation hazards and keeping the dangers secret.

The plant processed uranium for nuclear weapons from 1951-1989, when it closed for a 20-year radioactive waste cleanup.

About 6,000 former workers and subcontractors will be covered in the class-action settlement. About 4,500 are still living, said Stanley Chesley, the workers' lawyer.

The settlement includes a $15 million fund to pay emotional distress claims and legal fees. At least another $5 million was dedicated to medical monitoring.

The final cost depends on how many people seek free monitoring and how long they participate, Chesley said.

"If it costs $20 million, they have to pay it. If it costs $40 million, they have to pay it," Chesley said.

The medical monitoring program guarantees an initial medical exam valued at $800 and subsequent yearly exams capped at $450 each.

Workers claimed they suffer emotional distress from the fear their radiation exposure will cause cancer.

The trial began July 5. The presiding judge must accept the settlement. The government and taxpayers will cover all costs, under terms of the Energy Department's contract with NLO.

Lawsuits, study point to rigged bids on NASDAQ

WASHINGTON (AP) — A dozen class-action lawsuits filed in four cities and an academic study are reviving claims about a conspiracy to rig bids on NASDAQ, the nation's second-largest stock market.

The series of federal lawsuits filed this month allege some of Wall Street's largest firms — Merrill Lynch & Co., Lehman Brothers, Alex Brown & Sons Inc. — conspired to thwart competition in the pricing of stocks on NASDAQ, the electronically linked network of brokers that calls itself "the stock market for the next 100 years."

The central charge is that NASDAQ brokers have an unspoken agreement to charge excessively wide "spreads" in NASDAQ stocks in order to fatten their profits at the expense of individual investors.

"They're very serious allegations about a very serious conspiracy," said Arthur M. Kaplan, a Philadelphia attorney handling one of the cases.

A spread is the difference between the bid — the price buyers are willing to pay for a stock — and the ask — the price requested by sellers.

The spread amounts to the difference that the brokers, known as market makers, receive for executing a trade. A market maker can buy or sell orders on behalf of customers or out of their own accounts.

NASDAQ, which is not a defendant in the suits, and several of the brokers denied any collusion.

Answers are needed into S.P. train crash

Railroad cars strewn across the desert landscape near Marathon Monday after two Southern Pacific trains collided headon attested to the powerful impact of the collision that killed four crew members on the trains.

Southern Pacific officials and law enforcement officers are still investigating the crash in an attempt to determine the cause, but numerous questions are still left unanswered. Why were the two trains — one which originated in Long Beach, Calif. that was headed for Houston, and one which had started its journey in Memphis, Tenn. headed for Long Beach — on the same track? If the answer to that question can be found, it should indicate how the tragic collision occurred and, potentially, how future collisions like this one can be avoided.

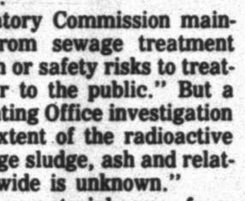

While the loss of the four crew members' lives is a tragic reminder of the importance of rail safety, the collision might have been even more threatening to innocent Texans had the cars on the trains carrying hazardous materials been among those derailed by the crash. Fortunately, the cars carrying those materials did not derail. It was also fortunate that the crash occurred near Marathon, at the doorway to Big Bend National Park, and not in a region of Texas frequented by more people.

The sobering fact of the headon crash and derailment, however, is that the same incident could happen anywhere in the nation on just about any day. That's why it's imperative that railroad authorities and law enforcement officers find the cause of this crash, and take appropriate steps to ensure that future collisions do not occur.

Nuclear menace may stalk our backyards

WASHINGTON — North Korea may pose the biggest threat to nuclear proliferation worldwide, but many Americans may have a nuclear menace in their own neighborhoods.

Anderson

Government regulators have been monitoring radioactive sludge and ash from sewage treatment plants — which get recycled and used in baseball diamonds, bricks and garden fertilizer. The radioactive material is all legally released and, where it has been detected, it shows up in concentrated amounts.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission maintains that the ash from sewage treatment plants poses "no health or safety risks to treatment plant workers or to the public." But a recent General Accounting Office investigation found that "the full extent of the radioactive contamination of sewage sludge, ash and related by-products nationwide is unknown."

Most of the radioactive material comes from waste generated by hospitals, manufacturers and laundries that these industries are simply allowed to flush away. GAO investigators say these practices have contaminated at least nine sewage treatment plants in the last decade. Neither NRC nor the Environmental Protection Agency require regular testing for radioactive contamination of sewage treatment plants that receive radioactive material.

NRC has assumed that the radioactive material from these sources would disperse through the large amounts of water processed by sewage treatment plants. Instead, the contaminants settle into the sludge left over after the treatment process, and they are further concentrated when the sludge is burned to ash. A 1991 NRC report concluded that the radioactive contamination of sewage treatment plants "may not be trivial" and required further study.

Twenty-one sewage treatment plants contacted by the GAO investigators were "generally" unaware of the radiation risk, and half were reusing the ash for fertilization, recreational or construction purposes. Ash from sewage treatment plants is a primary ingredient in the lawn and garden fertilizer milorganite.

"Potentially contaminated sewage sludge and ash can find its way into unregulated landfills, on farmer's fields, or even in our backyard garden as fertilizer," says Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee. "Sewage treatment plant workers could be exposed to low levels of radioactivity over a period of years. . .. It is our responsibility to fully explore this situation."

In sludge and ash at Cleveland's Southerly sewage treatment plant in 1991, NRC investigators found cobalt-60, a radioactive material commonly used to treat cancer patients, at levels 20 times higher than normal.

Customers of the Southerly plant have already paid nearly $1.5 million for a security fence around the contaminated material and on-site cleanup and containment. If NRC or the state government requires off-site disposal of the material, cleanup costs could top $3 billion.

"I am outraged," said Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, "that the NRC would prefer to have innocent parties, who could legitimately be described as the victims in this situation, pay to clean up contamination resulting from the discharges of radioactive material into the public sewer system, rather than forcing the company that discharged the material to pay."

"The full extent of this contamination nationwide is unknown," GAO inspectors wrote in their report, reviewed by our associate Andrew Conte. "Some treatment plants may use and dispose of their sludge and ash in a variety of ways that could expose plant workers and the general public to elevated levels of radioactivity."

Cooling war fever is Clinton's best course

President Clinton, feeling less pressure from refugees and sensing opposition at home, is having second thoughts about the urgency of invading Haiti. First, he wants a new, Desert Storm-style U.N. resolution that he hopes can persuade Gen. Raoul Cedras and his cronies to leave on their own. Yet the U.N. strategy, which would authorize member countries to use "all necessary means" to restore President Aristide to power and disarm his opponents, also relies on the logic of a military solution.

Meanwhile, U.S. forces conspicuously practice invasion preparations off the Haitian coast and White House and State Department aides pepper the airwaves with pointed warnings. Federal prosecutors investigate drug charges against Haitian military leaders in ways that are certain to recall the indictment of Manuel Noriega that became a key justification for the 1989 invasion of Panama.

Physically removing Cedras and his cronies from Haiti should be easy work for a large enough expeditionary force. But then what? Military force is a notoriously blunt instrument for solving political problems.

Unlike many opponents of military intervention, this page fully endorses the return of Aristide to power and harbors no illusions about the intentions of Cedras and his murderous cohorts. But invasions, even of small countries with weak armies, are not a rational solution to presidential frustration, the need to look tough or lack of other ideas. To invade would be an irresponsible use of the world's most formidable military force.

The administration hopes for a U.N. vote this week. But it will take another month at least to recruit countries to join in an invasion and a subsequent peacekeeping force. Administration hawks should use the delay to throw off their war fever.

The Clinton administration has yet to present compelling arguments that invading Haiti is in the best interests of the United States. Human rights are being massively and flagrantly abused. But over the long months when Washington looked the other way for fear of having to grant asylum to fleeing refugees, the terror was almost as bad. Similarly, drug allegations have been kicking around for years, but until very recently, Washington seemed eager to talk down their significance.

The surge of refugee departures has fallen off drastically in recent days, since Washington began denying boat people any chance of entry into the U.S., while providing safe havens elsewhere. At last, the administration has found a politically sustainable refugee policy.

Meanwhile, public opinion remains skeptical or downright hostile to the use of U.S. military force in Haiti. The Constitution and the precedent established in the Persian Gulf war would require congressional, not just U.N., approval for an invasion.

Horrible things are going on in Haiti. Democracy has been hijacked. People are being terrorized and a pitiful economy is being strangled. These are good reasons to put the strongest diplomatic and economic pressure on the junta and to provide sanctuary to fleeing refugees. They are not good reasons to send in the Marines.

Why go to Mars if it doesn't have gold, golf?

A recurring complaint heard during the 25th anniversary commemoration of the first moon walk is that this country has lost the will to explore outer space.

Astronaut Buzz Aldrin, who was on the historic Apollo 11 voyage, put it this way:

Royko

"For one crowning moment we were creatures of the cosmic ocean, a moment that a thousand years hence may be seen as the signature of our century.

"Yet an eerie apathy now seems to inflict the very generation who witnessed and were inspired by these events.

"The past quarter century has seen a withered capacity for wonder and a growing retreat to delusions of risk-free society."

Disappointment in our diminished space ambitions was put another way by Eugene Kranz, the flight controller.

Kranz said: "It is like Columbus discovering America and then deciding never to come back."

Are they right? Have we developed an eerie apathy that has killed our spirit of adventure, our zest for new frontiers, our desire to explore the unknown and push on to where man has never before been?

Have we abandoned the legacy of Columbus and the other great explorers of history?

Nah.

We stopped going to the moon and haven't gone to Mars and other places for one very simple reason.

There's nothing much to do there.

True, getting to the moon that first time in 1969 was very exciting. The liftoff . . . the eagle has landed . . . one small step for man, a giant leap for mankind . . . and the other suspenseful and thrilling moments.

Futurists immediately began jabbering about how this would begin a new era of exploration, with bold earthlings zooming all over the solar system, establishing floating space stations and colonies on the moon and Mars and who knows where else.

But what the futurists ignored was that when we got to the moon — at enormous expense — it turned out to be exactly as we expected. It was barren and bleak and dusty and had an awful climate.

Well, how many people want to visit a place like that? When I get the urge to go somewhere that is barren and bleak and has an awful climate, I hop in my car and drive to Indiana.

And Mars is probably even worse than the moon. It will take at least six months to get there, then what do you do? If you are a volcano buff, it has one that is 17 miles high. But you can fly to Hawaii in less than a day and see a volcano, as well as girls who dance the shimmy and some very good bars. You could explore Mars for a lifetime and not find one joint that serves rum drinks in coconut shells.

So it is not a lack of an adventurous spirit that has led to the decline of our space program. It's that most people want to go somewhere nice.

Look at the Japanese. When they come to this country, do they go to Indiana? Do they wander through central Illinois looking at corn fields?

Of course not. They go to golf resorts. And if the moon could support golf resorts, the Japanese would already be there.

Or take your average Americans. Where do they want to go? To Disney World, of course. But can you imagine taking three or four kids to the moon? All you would hear is, "What's there to do?" What would you tell them, "Go outside and play catch with a rock"?

As for the Apollo flight controller's observations that is was like Columbus discovering America, and not coming back: I guarantee that if America looked like the moon, nobody would have come back.

The explorers, pioneers and adventurers came here because it looked terrific and they correctly thought there was a lot of loot and booty they could plunder, and somebody helpless they could conquer.

That's always been what pushed man on to new horizons — the old loot, rape, plunder and pillage trick.

But what is there to loot and plunder on the moon? Too bad it didn't turn out to be made of green cheese. By now, the big food companies would have their own space fleets and would be chopping it into bite-size snacks.

Celestial DNA may tie O.J. to comet collisions

Everyone on Martha's Vineyard is trying to forget O.J.

The big talk has now turned to the Shoemaker-Levy comet bombardment of the planet Jupiter. The whole island was glued to the TV to see the fireball strike, and many theories were advanced as to why it happened.

Buchwald

The most popular one was that O.J.'s defense attorneys arranged for it to take place at this particular time to take the heat off the trial.

But some people at the beach were skeptical.

"O.J. was in jail at the time so he couldn't have struck Jupiter with a comet," Pomfret said.

"Then how you explain the glove found near Jupiter's red spot just before it was hit by the comet?" Turnstyle asked.

Bergstrom said, "It could have been left there by anybody. I don't think we should decide who is responsible for the explosions until we get the DNA tests back from the lab."

Wrightman said, "The National Enquirer has a story claiming that on the night of explosions O.J. had slipped out of his cell and had disappeared for two hours. Does anyone believe that?"

Everyone shook their heads. Except for Caliastro.

"What I don't understand is why the Irish Republican Army is taking credit for something O.J. supposedly did."

"They take credit for everything," Plumbell told him. "I think that an explosion of this size is more likely the work of the L.A. District Attorney's office."

"No matter what, it isn't going to help Clinton's Health Care Bill."

"Why not?"

Plumbell said, "Clinton is insisting on health care for everyone and this has to include F. Lee Bailey and Alan Dershowitz who are not covered by blazing fireballs under their present policies."

"It's easy for the judge to advocate full coverage for Jupiter, but who is going to pay for it?"

Feifer said, "According to The Star, O.J. purchased 250 million tons of TNT at O'Hare airport two days before the explosion."

Template joined in the conversation. "I was in the A&P and The Globe headline, said that O.J. was planning to go to Mars after blowing up Jupiter."

Feifer said: "I'm more interested in what effect the comet bombardment will have on the jury selection. An explosion like that has to affect public opinion. As soon as I get a tan on the back of my legs I'm going to try for the $500,000 reward."

To keep the conversation going I said, "What if there was no explosion on Jupiter and the networks concocted it to keep their ratings up after the O.J. story petered out?"

Template yelled: "That's impossible! We saw the car chase on Jupiter with our own eyes."

"You saw what the newscasters wanted you to see. The whole thing could easily have been created by computer imaging," I said.

"Nobody in the television industry lies about the solar system. If they ever got caught they would lose their FCC license. What proof do you have that the explosions weren't the real thing?"

"None at the moment, but if it's as big as they say it is, what happened to the knit cap that was hit by all those balls of fire on Friday?"

Art Buchwald's column is distributed by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, July 27, the 208th day of 1994. There are 157 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Three hundred years ago, on July 27, 1694, the Bank of England, the central bank of Great Britain, received a royal charter as a commercial institution.

On this date:

In 1789, Congress established the Department of Foreign Affairs, the forerunner of the Department of State.

In 1794, 200 years ago, French revolutionary leader Maximilien Robespierre was overthrown and placed under arrest; he was executed the following day.

In 1861, Union Gen. George B. McClellan was placed in command of the Army of the Potomac.

Child-custody order angers feminists

By Julia Prodis
Associated Press

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. — A judge's order taking a 3-year-old girl away from her college-student mother because the woman had put the child in day care has outraged feminists and day-care advocates.

"It illustrates an attitude toward women about where they should be — the bedroom, kitchen and those kind of places, not at college," Jacquie Steingold, a board member of the National Organization for Women, said Tuesday.

Circuit Judge Raymond Cashen said Monday the girl's father, Steve Smith, deserves custody because his own mother, a homemaker, has promised to take care of the child full-time.

Living with her mother, the girl would be "in essence raised and supervised a great part of the time by strangers," the judge wrote.

"A child gains the feeling of security, a safe place by virtue of permanency," he said.

Smith, 20, and the girl's mother, Jennifer Ireland, 19, never married.

Ireland moved to Ann Arbor with the girl, Maranda Kate Ireland Smith, last fall and put the child in day care for about 35 hours a week while she took classes at the University of Michigan. The giggly girl with a blond pigtail stays at a home near campus, where a woman looks after five children, including a couple of her own.

The judge was expected to sign the order today. It would take effect 15 days from then.

Ireland, who would get visitation on alternate weekends, holidays and other times, planned to appeal. For now, Maranda is living with her mother.

"It's just unfair. It's a decision based on the 1950s," Ireland said. "She loves going to day care. She wouldn't be with strangers."

Levona Whitaker, a spokeswoman for the child advocacy program Michigan's Children, said the order encourages single mothers to stay home and collect welfare instead of bettering their lives.

"In this day and time, day care is a way of life not only for single parents or parents on welfare. It's a way of life for our nation," Whitaker said.

"I think it's terrible," said Joyce Johnson, a spokeswoman for the Child Welfare League of America, a children's advocacy group in Washington. "She's doing what young people should do."

But Philip Holman, vice president of the National Congress for Men and Children, said the judge was admirably "gender blind" and placed the child in the most stable environment.

"Had the genders been reversed, this would not be newsworthy," Holman said. "The only shocking thing is a judge did not adopt the unwritten code, which is that children belong with their mother unless she's proven unfit."

Ireland and her supporters say the decision is unfair because Smith also plans to go to school and work.

Smith's 43-year-old mother, Debbie Smith, believes her home is better than day care.

"Kids before never had to grow up with day care. They grew up with their mothers at home," she said. "If you have no choice, you do what you have to do. But in this case you have a choice."

Study: Many seniors receive harmful drugs

CHICAGO (AP) — More than 6.6 million elderly Americans not in nursing homes are prescribed a dangerous or inappropriate medication every year, researchers say.

Use of such medications can cause people to lose their balance or faint, resulting in serious injury and death. It can also rob them of their ability to think clearly and remember, causing them to wind up in a nursing home.

In a few instances, such medications can also have toxic side effects, such as shutting down the production of blood cells in the bone marrow.

People receiving such drugs are "often placed at risk for loss of their memory, loss of their balance and mental slowing," the study's co-author, Dr. Steffie Woolhandler, said in a telephone interview from Boston, where she is an associate professor of medicine at the Cambridge Hospital and Harvard Medical School.

The study was published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

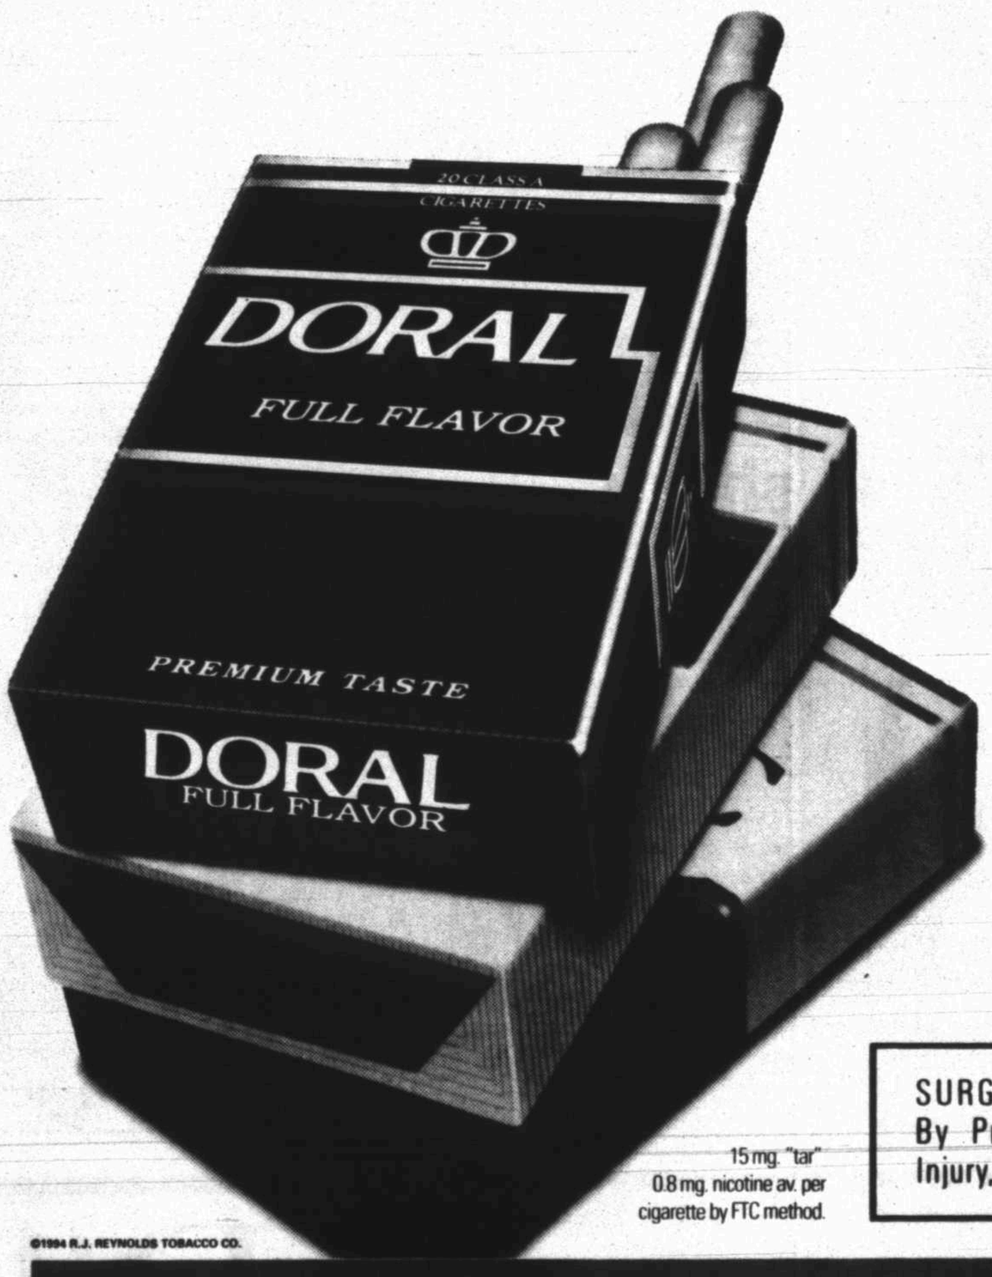

Critics of the study complained that its research is outdated and that there is disagreement among doctors about what drugs are inappropriate for elderly people.

House Dems' health bill requires all employers to cover workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Democratic leadership's draft health bill would require all employers to buy insurance for their workers, but give small firms the option of signing up for Medicare or buying the same insurance that federal workers get.

The draft plan, still subject to change, sticks closely to the blueprint for universal coverage produced last month by the House Ways and Means Committee.

But it also provides a lower out-of-pocket cap on medical expenses and scraps a proposed 10 percent rebate on generic drugs sold to Medicare patients.

The seven-page draft obtained Tuesday night by The Associated Press is a summary of proposals that House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., and key committee chairmen have been working on.

Laura Nichols, a spokeswoman for Gephardt, called it "a staff summary" that the leadership was using as a discussion document. "This is all open to change," she said.

The proposal would expand Medicare to cover poor people now on Medicaid, the uninsured, those with no jobs and some workers in companies with 100 or fewer employees.

To keep the government-run insurance program from becoming too large, it would give workers in companies with fewer than 100 employees that offer private coverage the option of signing up for the Federal Employees Health Benefit Program.

The summary did not address the thorny issue of abortion coverage. Although it sticks with a 1998 deadline for getting all Americans covered, Gephardt has said that date could slip by a couple of years.

Senate negotiators add assault-gun ban

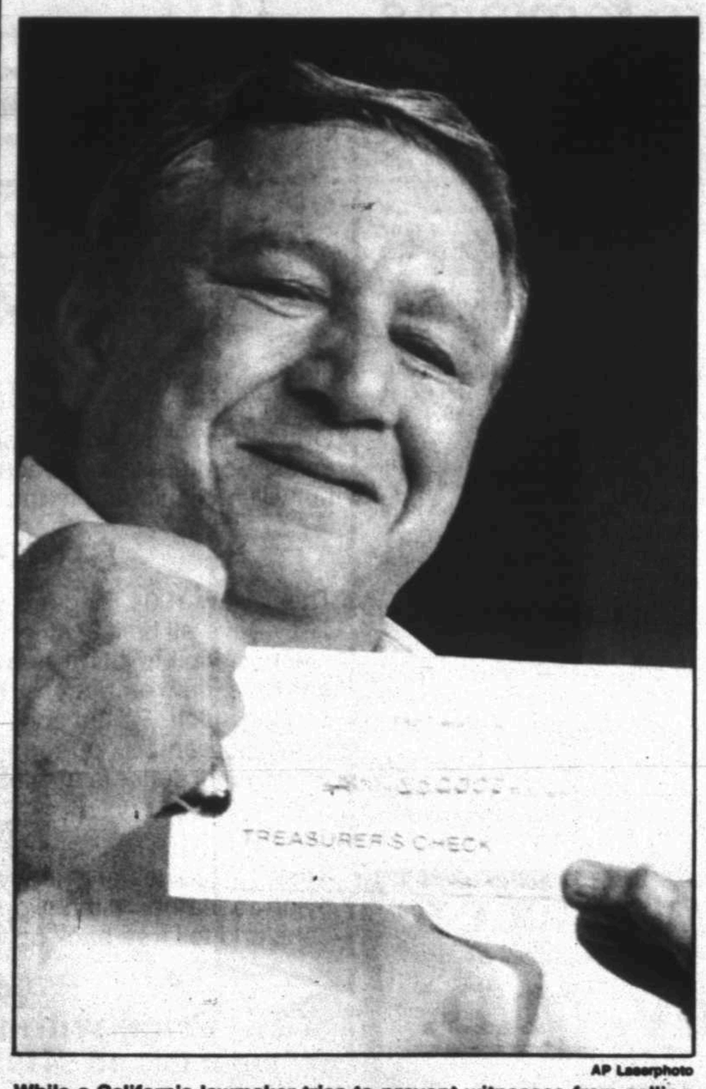

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate negotiators added a ban on assault-style weapons to the $30.2 billion crime bill Tuesday evening, and the amendment was considered likely to be approved later by House negotiators.

"There isn't any reason why semiautomatic assault weapons should be on the streets of America," said Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio. Without the ban, he said, the crime bill "isn't worth a tinker's damn."

The provision would ban 19 named types of firearms and scores of others that the government says meet the characteristics of assault-style weapons. Very similar to measures passed by both the House and Senate, the provision also would limit magazine capacity to 10 rounds. At the same time, it would exempt 650 named firearms and all guns legally owned when the law took effect.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, called the provision "just a game," and "a misleading substitute for fighting crime," saying less than 1 percent of violent crimes are committed with guns to be banned by the legislation.

These firearms are singled out for criticism, he said, because they "look sinister."

While a California lawmaker tries to prevent witnesses from selling their stories, another man donates money to the reward fund set up by O.J. Bernard Gimbels, of Saddle River, N.J., above, holds a $250,000 check during a news conference in Beverly Hills, Calif. The money will be awarded for information that leads to the arrest and conviction of the killer(s) of Simpson's ex-wife and her friend.

'Checkbook journalism' prompts call for reform

■ California Assembly Speaker Willie Brown wants to forbid witnesses in criminal cases from selling their stories until one year after trial.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A knife salesman's $12,500 deal to tell all to a tabloid in the O.J. Simpson case prompted a powerful state lawmaker Tuesday to propose a crackdown on "checkbook journalism."

Assembly Speaker Willie Brown, D-San Francisco, said he wants to forbid witnesses in criminal cases from selling their stories until a year after the trial.

The practice of selling stories, Brown said, is "severely hampering" the right to a fair trial in high-profile cases by casting doubt on the words of witnesses who could free or convict defendants.

"Payment so taints the system that it creates doubts in the minds of jurors about the credibility of the witness," Brown told a Sacramento news conference.

Brown said the measure, which he plans to introduce in the Legislature next month, was in response to a $12,500 payment from the National Enquirer to knife salesman Jose Camacho.

Camacho, who split the money with the two owners of Ross Cutlery, testified at Simpson's preliminary hearing that he sold a stiletto to Simpson several weeks before the June 12 knife slayings of Simpson's ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ron Goldman. Simpson, 47, is charged with two counts of murder in the case.

Under Brown's proposed legislation, witnesses who sell their stories could face up to six months in jail or fines of up to three times what they were paid. Expert witnesses, who usually are paid for their testimony, would be exempt under the misdemeanor.

Practice of selling stories is 'severely hampering' right to fair trial in high-profile cases, Brown says.

Brown insisted his proposal wouldn't violate the Constitution's protection of free speech.

"I am not barring them from saying it. I'm barring them from getting paid for it," he said.

State Sen. Quentin Kopp, I-San Francisco, has proposed two similar measures to prevent attorneys and witnesses from talking to reporters for money before trial.

Vidor judgement

HOUSTON — A judge on Tuesday ordered a Vidor woman to pay more than $300,000 for her "relentless campaign of intimidation" against a black man and his white friend in a public housing complex. Administrative law Judge Alan Heifitz said in his ruling, issued in Washington, that Edith Marie Johnson, 47, taunted fellow public housing resident Bill Simpson with racial slurs and threatened his life. Heifitz also ruled that Ms. Johnson threatened the life of Ross Dennis, a white man who had befriended Simpson at the Vidor Village complex. "The egregiousness of (Ms. Johnson's) discriminatory conduct cannot be overstated," Heifitz wrote. "Her conduct towards Mr. Simpeon and Mr. Dennis was flagrant, notorious and pernicious.

Norplant lawsuit

DALLAS — A woman who had the contraceptive Norplant capsules inserted into her arm and claims that she suffered through painful procedures to have them removed filed a class-action lawsuit Tuesday against the manufacturer. Phyllis Johnson, a former Dallas County resident now living in Oklahoma, is seeking damages from American Home Products Corp. on behalf of herself and other women who had the matchstick-size capsules inserted in Texas. That number may be more than 50,000, according to the lawsuit filed in a state district court in Dallas.

Turtle deaths

HOUSTON — A marine conservation group is planning a lawsuit against the National Marine Fisheries Service to prevent the continuing deaths of sea turtles in the nets of Texas shrimp trawlers. The action by the Center for Marine Conservation on Tuesday comes as state and federal officials reported that fewer dead sea turtles have washed up along Texas beaches since authorities launched a crackdown on shrimpers. Twenty-nine endangered turtles have been found dead since NMFS beefed up efforts last week to make sure shrimpers are using nets equipped with escape hatches for turtles, knowns as TEDs. The turtle-excluder devices have been a thorn in the side of the shrimping industry, with shrimpers arguing that they reduce their catch. In the week prior to the crackdown, from July 10-16 when the summer shrimping season opened in earnest, 55 turtles died along the Texas Coast. The number of endangered sea turtles that have perished this year stands at 340, just 15 short of the yearlong record of 355 set in 1990.

City favors restricted parking

■ Council decides MHS students won't be allowed to park on most surrounding streets beginning this fall. Action requires second vote.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Midland High School students who drive to school this fall won't be allowed to park on most surrounding streets — without being ticketed or possibly towed.

On Tuesday, the City Council voted in favor of an ordinance that would restrict parking on nearby streets to allow only residents and visitors with parking permits. The action requires a second vote.

The permit-only parking was prompted by complaints from area residents and a subsequent acknowledgment of those problems by police and city and school officials.

"I received a lot of complaints and a petition from most of the property owners in that area," said Gary Saunders, traffic coordinator for the city.

Students blocked driveways, parked improperly and congested parking availability in the neighborhood, officials said.

The ordinance establishes parking by permit only, between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., at the following locations: on the north side of Tennessee Avenue from A Street to D Street and on the south side from C Street to D Street, and both sides of B Street, C Street and D Street from Tennessee Avenue to Michigan Avenue. Some areas adjacent to the school will allow open parking.

"It's very similar to what we've done at Lee (High School) — parking permit only," Saunders said. That ordinance affecting parking around Lee High School was passed in 1989.

Several options were considered before electing to use permit-only parking around Midland High School.

Agency kicks off campaign with luncheon

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

United Way of Midland got a head start on its fall fund-raising campaign with Tuesday's 1994-95 Pilot Kickoff Luncheon in honor of its favored commercial contributors.

The pilot luncheon, held at the Petroleum Club, is a precursor to the official fall campaign that begins Sept. 21.

This year's goal, an increase over last year, is $2,731,000, said Lana Cunningham, UW communications director. Last year's goal of $2,604,000 was surpassed, with total contributions of $2,611,305.

Campaign Chairman Charles Spence, publisher of the Reporter-Telegram, challenged Midlanders to outdo the stated goal.

"I think we can raise $3 million in Midland," he said.

An anonymous contributor has offered to match every dollar over last year's total and has contributed $50,000 to this end.

This year's theme, Tune in The United Way, was the basis for the luncheon's entertainment. Emcee Bill Dingus played the role of a radio deejay and, joined by Spence, entered a battle of wits with evil deejay Dastardly Dan Discord, played by Darrell Ward — a regular with Summer Mummers — who tried to get the audience to turn away from United Way and think only of themselves.

Stanton seeks exemption to landfill regulation

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

STANTON — Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport is in Washington, D.C., today to plead the county's stance on a House bill that would exempt "certain small landfills from the groundwater monitoring requirements" of the Environmental Protection Agency.

The proposed legislation, House Bill 2654, would authorize the EPA to exempt from groundwater monitoring landfills that take in fewer than 20 tons of municipal waste daily and that do not contribute to groundwater contamination.

Deavenport — in his prepared statement to the House Subcommittee on Transportation and Hazardous Materials Committee on Energy and Commerce — contends that the Martin County landfill meets those regulations.

"Those of us in this area consider our groundwater a very precious resource and would not want to do anything to contaminate our limited supply," Deavenport's report says. "However, with our local landfill being located in an area where there is no groundwater, with our low annual rainfall and our high evaporation rate, we do not feel that there is any possibility for groundwater contamination."

Deavenport said the county has a population of 4,956 people in a 900-square-mile area — a density of "slightly over five people per square mile" — an annual rainfall of about 15 inches and a 70 percent evaporation rate.

In 1991, the EPA granted small arid landfills exemptions from some of the more stringent requirements.

Two years earlier, Deavenport joined small-town mayors and rural county judges from West Texas in forming the Sparsely Populated Entities Coalition to study EPA landfill rules.

The coalition sought EPA landfill exemptions.

But in 1993, Deavenport said the District of Columbia Circuit Court ruled that the EPA had "exceeded its statutory authority" in granting blanket exemptions from groundwater monitoring.

Richards touts teen curfews as tool against juvenile crime

AUSTIN (AP) — Curfews are needed to keep Texas teens home at night because some parents are falling down on the job, Gov. Ann Richards told county sheriffs Tuesday.

Richards, who has said she would consider state curfew legislation if communities don't enact restrictions, said curfews would be a major tool in helping combat rising juvenile crime.

"It is important to establish curfews for these kids because their mommas and daddies are not doing the job at home," Richards said.

"If you don't get them off the streets, you are going to be dealing with more homicides, more robberies, more burglaries, more juvenile bad behavior that has got to be addressed by the criminal justice system," she said.

Besides nighttime curfews, Richards told a meeting of the Sheriffs Association of Texas that she wants tough enforcement of truancy laws to keep children in school and out of trouble.

"Kids out there in the malls during the day are into nothing but trouble. It's essential that this state, and the school districts, provide more restricted alternative schools for those kids that can't fit and won't stay in an ordinary public school setting," she said.

Farmers, officials gather to discuss USDA 1995 Farm Bill

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

STANTON — The farmer's incentive to protect his land from wind and water erosion is to stay in business by farming fertile, productive land.

The government's business in compelling farmers to abide by conservation programs is to guarantee arable and productive land to feed, clothe and shelter the nation.

"Our goal is not to put anybody out of business," said Wes Oneth — the state conservationist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service (SCS).

Oneth was in Stanton Tuesday to speak to a gathering of about 60 farmers and state and federal agricultural officials about the upcoming USDA's 1995 Farm Bill.

"You don't have to terrace this land. The law says there has to be a 'significant reduction in erosion' on highly erodible land."

The meeting — held at the Circle Six Ranch north of Stanton — was called by the Martin County Cotton Growers (MCCG) and attracted farmers from Midland, Martin, Howard and Dawson counties.

Among the concerns of the MCCG membership were the cost of building terraces, which would be a financial burden to farmers.

The goal of Martin County farmers is "to minimize erosion and maintain a productive soil resource," said Stanton farmer Johnny Louder, who read the MCCG official paper, "Alternatives for Minimization of Wind and Water Erosion," to USDA officials.

Louder said that since adoption of the 1985 Farm Bill, "wind strips and cover crops have been added to normal farming practices" in Martin County.

Louder said 95 percent of Martin County farms follow tillage conservation practices to reduce wind and water erosion.

Measures to prevent water erosion would include contour tillage, furrow diking, grass-filter strips, high-residue perimeter strips, spreader dams, small narrow-base terraces and terraces as a possible option should alternative methods fail to control water erosion in normal rainfall years.

Martin County's average rainfall is 14 inches.

The farmers' session with USDA officials was "to ensure that we have a little local input on what's being mandated from" Washington, Louder said.

"We've lost local control. We feel like people (who) are here know best" about preventing erosion on their land.

"The environmental groups have such a large lobby, and their money is unlimited. The grass-roots level is the only way we have to compete with those people," he said.

LAND: Farmers gather to hear about 1995 bill

(From 1B)

"Without a productive soil resource, the economic viability of Martin County will be in jeopardy.

Historically, soil erosion has been the downfall of nations, said Oneth, who lives in Temple.

"The Roman Empire failed, not because its army dwindled, but because the country could no longer feed and support itself. It abused its resources out there: its forests, its soil, its water . . . (And other) empires have failed . . . because of erosion," he said.

West Texas farmers, like the USDA, want to stop erosion and want to maintain control of their land. Further, they think that they and not bureaucrats and policymakers are best-suited to protect their land.

The individual farmer probably knows his land "better than someone from the outside," Oneth said. "But many farmers are not scientists.

"Advancements in technology have increased our production. And we really don't know how much productive capacity has been diminished by erosion because of hybrid seeds and fertilizers and pesticides and herbicides.

"If we farmed today under 1940 conditions with the same seeds and the same fertilizers, the lack of herbicides and the lack of insecticides, I don't know whether our production today would be as good today as it was then," Oneth said. "I have a sneaking suspicion — since I know our organic material is less today than it was in 1940 — that our production would be down. But technology has kept our production increasing."

Earlier, Oneth said that the technical science of controlling soil erosion should not be influenced by politics.

J.D. Bilbro of the USDA's Agricultural Research Service in Big Spring said "some good, old common horse sense" should be applied to conservation measures.

"Farmers' No. 1 objective is to save the soil. But they have got to do it in a way to stay on the farm."

If the United States can put a man on the moon through technological advances, then surely the nation can design an effective program to save the soil while still making a living off the land, he said.

"Who knows the land better than the farmer?" said Bilbro, who thinks that conservation plans should be tailored for each field. "That's where local control counts."

If farmers "can control erosion, praise the Lord," Bilbro said.

Otherwise, the SCS agents should design conservation programs for neglected, abused or mismanaged land.

"I think the federal government should be a backup and not a dictator," said Bilbro, who has been in government service for 40 years.

Dwight Holman, a Washington-based SCS official, acknowledged that the USDA does "not have all of the answers. This is a two-way street."

However, Holman — assistant chief of the SCS's southern region — told the farmers that if "you are not receiving USDA benefits, you can do whatever you want to."

Just because "you are not participating in USDA programs, that doesn't mean you need a conservation-compliance plan except for ethical reasons."

Stanton banker Joe Hodges — whose bank specializes in agricultural loans — observed that "if we didn't have cotton farming, there would be very little economy left here.

"That is the foundation that our business, our banking and our livelihood is based on."

Increasingly, farmers are "recognizing that if 'we don't take care of this land, it's not going to take care of us,'" Hodges said.

"And that's what this (session) is all about.

"But if the federal government comes in with rules and edicts that are not practical and are too expensive and put the farmers out of business, (what then)?"

Hodges said he was heartened that the farmers are seeking economical "ways and means to stay in business" and still comply with the Farm Bill's provisions.

PLEAD: Judge seeks exemption

(From 1B)

The EPA then withdrew the exemptions.

As a result, Deavenport is to testify before the subcommittee to encourage enactment of the bill to exempt certain landfills because monitoring would be costly to landfill users, particularly those on fixed incomes.

"Most of the rural communities that I represent are based on an agriculture economy that is anything but booming," Deavenport's report says.

"The population is increasingly elderly with a good portion of the elderly living on a low, fixed income. Any increase in trash-service fees would shrink their funds that, in all too many cases, barely cover their basic needs."

Installing and maintaining groundwater monitoring equipment at the Martin County landfill would result in an increase of trash-service fees from $5 to $25 a month.

"Favorable consideration" of the bill "would give many rural communities the opportunity to continue an essential service at a reasonable cost," he said.

TEEN: Richards touts Texas curfew

(From 1B)

The Democratic governor is seeking re-election this year against Republican George W. Bush, who has made tougher juvenile crime laws a cornerstone of his campaign. Bush says he believes curfews should be a local option, not something mandated by the state.

Richards said youths today face different circumstances than those in the past.

Richards said she is particularly worried because so many victims of juvenile crime are other children.

POLICE REPORTS

Fraud

An Odessa man turned himself in to FBI agents in Midland on Tuesday after charges were filed against him for fraud and conspiracy.

Douglas Howard Dooley, 32, was charged with wire fraud, mail fraud and conspiracy as a result of an investigation by the Midland office of the FBI and the Midland County Sheriff's office, according to a report.

A complaint filed against Dooley alleged that he participated in a scheme involving the sale of oil-field pipe and the furnishing of false inspection reports as to the quality of the pipe. This resulted in a higher sales price for the pipe than would have been obtained if accurate reports had been furnished.

Dooley was employed by an Odessa oil-field pipe company at the time of the alleged scheme, according to the complaint. The company was not listed by name.

RESTRICT: City votes in favor of permit parking

(From 1B)

"It's about the only thing you can do without restricting parking altogether," Saunders said.

District 2 representative Juluis Brooks expressed concern about some students not being able to afford the parking fee for the Midland High School parking lot. Reserved parking at the school runs $25 a year on a first-come first-serve basis.

Midland Police Chief Richard Czech told Brooks that a nuisance does exist to the residents and many students park away from the school for "devious purposes."

In addition to the permit-only parking, the council voted to prohibit parking at all times on the east side of C Street from the south curb of Illinois Avenue southward 162 feet.

This measure was taken due to non-students, in addition to students, contributing to loitering in the area, littering, traffic congestion and other problems.

In light of the ordinances, Midland Independent School District officials don't anticipate any problems with students not having adequate parking.

"There's a similar ratio of students (who drive to school) to parking spaces at Lee and Midland High, and Lee's been able to accommodate the ordinance," said Wilson Heidelberg, executive director for auxiliary services for MISD.

From an enforcement standpoint, Czech said he doesn't anticipate any problems with the ordinance.

"It (has) worked very well in the Lee High School area," he said.

Students who continue to park in the restricted areas will be subject to being ticketed and can be fined up to $500, according to Czech. Illegally parked cars may also be towed, but probably wouldn't except in extreme cases such as driveways being blocked, he said.

Signs designating permit-parking only — similar to those near Lee — should be in place before school begins August 16.

Grand jury indicts forensics official

UVALDE (AP) — A grand jury Tuesday indicted former Bexar County serologist Fred Zain on charges of aggravated perjury and evidence tampering and fabrication stemming from a 1990 rape case.

The indictment is the latest in a series of legal troubles for Zain, who worked as a forensics specialist in West Virginia before moving to Texas.

The Uvalde charges resulted from DNA evidence in the trial of Gilbert Alejandro, 39, who was convicted of raping a Uvalde woman and sentenced to 12 years in prison based on Zain's testimony and serology testing.

Alejandro, who had maintained his innocence, was released to home confinement July 12 after a review of evidence indicated Zain incorrectly testified about test results.

On Tuesday, a judge freed Alejandro from supervised release and prepared to issue his findings after hearing evidence that DNA tests actually excluded Alejandro as a suspect in the rape. The findings are to be sent to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, which could overturn the conviction.

A Uvalde County grand jury convened by District Attorney Tony Hackebeil issued five indictments against Zain, who was charged with three counts of aggravated perjury, one of tampering with a government record and one of fabricating physical evidence.

"Warrants will be issued, and we will pursue the arrest of Fred Zain and ultimately prosecute him for those charges that have been filed," Hackebeil said. Authorities have said Zain's whereabouts is unknown.

Bullock calls for ethics clarification

■ Official wants Legislature to define 'indirect' interest in state business.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock is joining the call for the 1995 Legislature to clarify the conflict-of-interest provision in the Texas Constitution that applies to lawmakers.

The constitution prohibits state legislators from having any direct or indirect interest in state business. But it doesn't define what "indirect" means.

"A number of senators, since this has come up, have said it ought to be clarified, and I agree," said Bullock, who presides over the Senate. "I don't see any problem in defining 'indirect'."

Bullock's comments followed a report in the Austin American-Statesman detailing how a ready-mix concrete company headed by state Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, is a subcontractor on a half-dozen state prison construction projects.

Stiles says his involvement in the prison jobs is legal. He cites a 1987 memorandum from the attorney general's office that said lawmakers' companies may be subcontractors on state projects without violating the constitution.

Government watchdog groups, who criticized Stiles' subcontracting work, have called for the law to be changed or clarified to prevent a lawmaker from being involved, even through a subcontract, in state projects over which they have power as a legislator.

As a legislator, Stiles is a member of both the Legislative Budget Board and the Legislative Criminal Justice Board — the overseers, respectively, of state spending and prisons.

Stiles also chairs the House Calendars Committee, the panel through which all legislation must pass before it goes to the House floor for a vote.

Although Bullock said Monday that the constitution should be clarified, he said he is unsure where the limits on indirect business ties should be placed.

"I don't know how to do it," Bullock said. "I think we've got to take into consideration some hypothetical cases."

Bullock said he believes the issue should be handled by passing a new law and without changing the constitution, which would take a statewide vote.

House Speaker Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, who appointed Stiles chairman of the Calendars Committee in 1993, issued a statement Monday on the question.

"As members of a part-time Legislature, we are all challenged to make the best decisions we can to separate our public and private business," Laney said.

"But we do have a system of checks and balances to verify our decisions," he said. "I respect the way that system works. If it is determined through this system that changes need to be made, then I feel sure the Legislature will have an opportunity to review those proposals."

"Let's Talk."
By Linda Basham, External Affairs Manager
Southwestern Bell Telephone

Some of you may be familiar with Southwestern Bell's "Let's Talk." columns. We've found them to be an effective way to share important information with our customers. So if there's a telephone topic you'd like to see highlighted, please let me know.

Today, I want to tell you about several special discount programs offered by Southwestern Bell. These assistance programs are available to help provide telephone service to low-income individuals.

Through our Lifeline Discount Telephone Service program, eligible customers receive a $7 discount monthly on their basic telephone bill. To qualify for Lifeline, an applicant needs to meet three requirements: 1) be the head of the household; 2) have only one phone line in the residence; 3) and have income at or below the federal poverty level or be receiving benefits from one of the following programs: Food Stamps; Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC); Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP); Medical Assistance Program (MAP); Supplemental Security Income (SSI); or Women, Infants and Children (WIC).

More than 54,000 Texans are currently saving money through Lifeline. Simply call us toll-free at 1-800-244-5993 to apply.

If you don't already have a phone or are moving to a new location, you may qualify to receive up to 50 percent off basic installation charges through our Link-Up America program.

Eligibility requirements similar to the Lifeline program apply for Link-Up America. Southwestern Bell customers can call toll-free at 1-800-244-5188 for more information.

Tel-Assistance is another program established to reduce telephone bills for those in need. This program is administered through the Texas Department of Human Services.

Those qualifying for Tel-Assistance receive a 65 percent discount in basic monthly telephone service and a reduction of FCC line charges. Similar qualifications to the previous programs apply plus applicants must be at least 65 and disabled. Customers may apply for Tel-Assistance by calling the Texas Department of Human Services toll-free at 1-800-343-8353.

Thanks for your business. Have a safe and happy summer!

YOUR HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, JULY 27, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A positive attitude will open exciting new doors to you. Be on your very best behavior when dealing with influential people. Investment gains come in early fall. If looking for romance, host at least one party during the winter holidays. A financial deal you make early in 1995 could pay benefits for years to come. An older individual decides to aid your career next May or June. Be appreciative of any favors.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: figure skater Peggy Fleming, singer Maureen McGovern, tennis player Dennis Ralston, actor Keenan Wynn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A difference of opinion arises over the best way to reach a goal. Be willing to try an alternate approach if a partner feels strongly. Strive for serenity tonight. A favorite hobby helps you relax.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take advantage of the momentum created yesterday. Everything goes like clockwork once you are in gear. Adding artistic touches to your home or office should be easy if you are a do-it-yourself type.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Loved ones may be extra sensitive today and tomorrow. Tread carefully. Conflicting emotions could distract you from practical chores. Develop your talents as a builder or gardener.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Misplaced papers or a forgotten obligation could throw you for a loop this morning. Look everywhere for lost articles. The afternoon will run smoother. Play a waiting game if romance is less than ideal.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Team players will enjoy the greatest success today. Taking a small gamble makes sense if you can spare the money. Reach out to young people. You find that your work is cut out for you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A computerized plan may need more people-input to be a winner. A sophisticated individual could both complicate and brighten your day. You should feel good about an offer made by your mate or partner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Suspense could make this a lively day! You have the resources and talent to score big gains in the marketplace. Follow your heart in domestic affairs and you will not go wrong. Love deepens.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Retirement is a rewarding experience for those who are involved in exciting projects. Share your expertise with those who cannot afford to pay for it. Learning a new language or sport boosts your self-confidence.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Those who wait and watch will fall behind. Use your leadership skills to get a project up and running! The executive corridors beckon those ready to work long hours. Romance looks rosy tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can take some bits and pieces now and turn them into something great! Financial problems evaporate when you follow a professional's instructions. High-quality work is the only way to advance your business or career.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your artistic talent could bring you a special prize or gift this week. Shopping bargains can be found in an unusual setting. Seek the financial backing of a prominent acquaintance when launching a community campaign.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A cheerful attitude will win you widespread cooperation today. Others are receptive to your ideas and projects. Discuss your plans with family members to prevent any last-minute surprises. A former opponent becomes a supporter.

Opening lead: King of ♠

For a mathematical whiz, choosing the percentage line in any contract should be a snap. But the best we mere mortals can do is make sure we uncover all the possibilities and judge which is the right way to tackle the hand.

North-South used a cue-bidding sequence to reach an excellent slam. South's bid of five no trump was the Grand Slam Force, requesting partner to bid seven hearts with two of the three top honors. North respectfully declined.

West led the king of spades and at first glance it might seem that, since there was virtually a sure club loser on the hand, the fate of the contract depended on a successful trump finesse. That's strictly an even-money proposition, unsatisfactory odds for a slam contract.

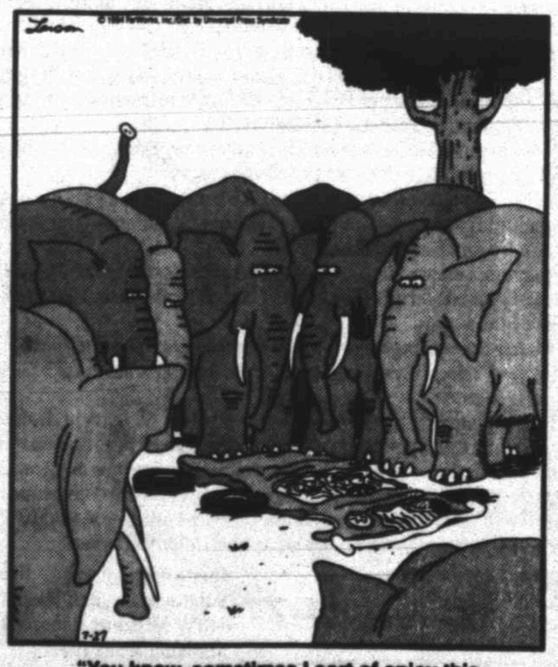

There is another line. Declarer can cash the ace of hearts and, if both defenders follow but the king doesn't drop, strip spades and diamonds from both hands, then cash the ace and king of clubs before exiting with a trump. If the defender who wins the trump has no more clubs, any return will allow declarer to ruff in dummy while discarding the club from hand.

Chances of dropping a singleton king when holding a combined 10 cards in the suit are 26 percent and a specific hand having a doubleton in another suit missing five cards is 34 percent, making that the better line. If numbers aren't your forte, look at the problem another way: two reasonable possibilities are usually better than one. And if you need a clincher, making a slam on a finesse will never appear in a newspaper column, while a strip and endplay might!

PORTLAND, Ore. — Nude photos of Tonya Harding from a home video of her honeymoon will appear in next month's Penthouse, the magazine said Tuesday.

Penthouse said the 44-photo layout will include shots of Harding and her now ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly.

Harding's agent, Merrill Eichenberger, said the former Olympic athlete will probably sue.

Gillooly pleaded guilty to racketeering for his role in the knee-clubbing attack on Nancy Kerrigan and drew two years in prison.

Harding was placed on three years' probation for conspiring to cover up the attack. She must pay $160,000 and complete 500 hours of community service.

NEW YORK — Janet Jackson is singing for Rwandan refugees this week.

Jackson, who is performing at Radio City Music Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday, will donate the proceeds toward an airlift for the refugees, who are dying by the thousands of hunger and disease in refugee camps in Zaire.

Janet Jackson is singing for Rwandan refugees this week.

"I wanted to act immediately, knowing that people are dying by the minute," she said in a statement. "My heart goes out to the people of Rwanda."

Life has taken a distinct turn for the better for Melba Moore, the Tony Award-winning actress and singer, who went on public assistance in December, having been impoverished, she asserted, by her estranged husband and former manager, Charles Huggins.

Tonight, Ms. Moore, now divorced from Huggins though still embroiled in litigation against him, opens in a production of Cole Porter's "Anything Goes" at Montclair State University in Upper Montclair, N.J. "I'm just trying to survive and keep on going, and I'm much better," she said during a rehearsal break Tuesday. The show runs through Aug. 14.

At Montclair State, Ms. Moore is revisiting a happier past. She graduated from the university in 1966 and received an honorary doctorate there three years ago.

"When I was a student here, it was a small state teachers' college; now it's a huge university," she said.

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — It's back to the books for Sean Connery.

He played Harrison Ford scholar-father in "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" and a cancer researcher in "Medicine Man." Now he's a Harvard law professor in the movie "Just Cause," directed by Arne Glimcher.

It's back to the books for actor Sean Connery.

In the movie, Connery is enlisted by a woman to help get her son off death row.

Also in the film are Ruby Dee, Kate Capshaw, Laurence Fishburne, Blair Underwood, Daniel J. Travanti and George Plimpton.

ELDON, Iowa — Roseanne and Tom Arnold have split, but that doesn't mean the walls will come tumbling down with them.

The Victorian mansion on their 2,000-acre estate — designed to be the largest in the state — still has no roof or siding. Construction stopped in June.

"Believe me, it won't be left half-finished," Tom Arnold said in a recent interview with The Des Moines Register.

While the house is on hold, Arnold said some of their other ventures are thriving, including Roseanne and Tom's Big Food Diner in Eldon.

But according to the divorce papers, Roseanne wants the cattle breeding operation on their estate.

BEATRICE, Neb. — Street-gang punk or country music singer? Joe Bonsall of the Oak Ridge Boys saw more of a future in singing.

Bonsall, who joined the country group in 1973, said he once came to a crossroads as a member of a Phildelphia gang and made the right decision.

But gang life wasn't quite what it is today, he said Monday.

"We might pilfer a quart of beer or flirt with some girls, but that was about it in those days," he said.

The Oak Ridge Boys are best known for the hit "Elvira" in 1982 and won Grammy Awards in 1979 and 1982.

HONOR: United Way recognizes contributors

(From 1B)

Also during the luncheon, three youths spoke about successes at the Palmer Drug Abuse Program, where their lives have been positively altered by the United Way agency.

One girl, Marie, was celebrating her first year of sobriety since junior high school.

A boy, identified only as Michael, told of how he was set on the road to sobriety by PDAP staff. "If it weren't for PDAP, I'd probably still be out there drinking and druggin' it," he said.

United Way contributors honored at the luncheon include Bank One; Chevron U.S.A.; the city of Midland; Compressor Systems; Cononco Inc.; Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe & Dawson; Dillard's; Elms, Faris & Co.; Energas; Barbara Fasken Oil & Ranch; Health South Rehab Hospital; Henry Petroleum Corp.; Johnson, Miller & Co. Total contributions from these agencies will be announced at the upcoming luncheon to kick off the general campaign.

United Way is the best value for local contributors, with 16 agencies being funded and 99 cents out of every dollar staying in Midland, Spence said.

Police form task force after wave of attacks

ARLINGTON (AP) — Police and apartment managers are teaming up to track down a man suspected of raping six women in southeast Arlington during the past year.

The Arlington Police Department has formed a task force of investigators and patrol officers to concentrate on finding the suspect, police spokesman Dee Anderson said Tuesday.

Police say the attacks have occurred at 90-day intervals since June 1993. Four assaults occurred in unlocked homes and apartments, while another was in the laundry room of an apartment complex, Anderson said.

That pattern was broken shortly after 7 a.m. Saturday, when a sleeping woman was attacked in her apartment bedroom, just one month after the previous attack.

Anderson said the victim's face was covered with a blanket. Police suspect her attacker entered through an unlocked sliding glass door, Anderson said.

The woman, like the five previous victims, was treated and released from an Arlington hospital.

Police Chief David Kunkle ordered the creation of the task force in response to public concern spawned by the attacks, Anderson said.

"We began receiving more phone calls and information than we could handle without the help of some specialists," Anderson said. "We had representatives from just about every division in the department."

Judge: Schools can keep teachers' notes confidential

HOUSTON (AP) — The Klein Independent School District does not have to give a parent some notes taken by school employees that concerned his daughter's conduct, a judge has ruled.

District officials claimed the issue was one of employees' right to privacy, but those favoring the release said the ruling may intimidate ordinary citizens who want to exercise their right to scrutinize school officials' performance.

The ruling issued Monday stems from a dispute that began last fall when Robert Lett, citing the Texas Open Records Act, asked the district to release notes concerning what he believed was the unfair discipline of his daughter, a 14-year-old Doerre Intermediate School student.

Klein officials sought the opinion of Attorney General Dan Morales, who in November ruled that portions would have to be turned over to Lett.

But the school board voted the next month to take the case to court, and a lawsuit was filed against Lett. State District Judge Scott Link ruled in the district's favor Monday.

Dan Feldman, the district's attorney, said such scrutiny would prevent officials from performing their duties with earnest candor.

But Ron Dusek, spokesman for the attorney general, said the ruling will make individuals wary of seeking public information.

"What we find most disturbing is that a person can be sued just because that person requested information from a government body," Dusek said. "That is very intimidating."

Dusek said he is unsure whether Morales will join an appeal by Lett.

Lett and his attorney Rob Wiley asked the district to turn over investigative and interview notes, written summaries, statements and a discipline book/record they say were compiled by five employees.

State ethics reformers hope to achieve goals during next legislative session

■ This is Part III in a special series that deals with ethical issues in state government.

Ethics advocates hope to resurrect key proposals that died when the 1993 session adjourned.

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Ethics reformers hope to get some of the things they couldn't get from the Legislature in 1991 or 1993 in the next session beginning January 1995.

After lawmakers hastily approved an ethics bill that few of them had seen in the final moments of the 1991 regular session, reform groups immediately urged a cleanup bill to strengthen the law.

In the 1993 regular session, with the new eight-member Ethics Commission in operation and offering suggestions, lawmakers hoped to close some loopholes.

But, as in 1991, the Senate and House approved different bills, which would have to go to a conference committee very late in the session.

With time running out, ethics reform advocates told lawmakers they would rather see the legislation die than repeat the 1991 scenario.

There simply wasn't enough time to work out a good comprimise bill, said Suzy Woodford, executive director of Common Cause of Texas.

No bill at all was better than a bad bill, added Tom "Smitty" Smith, executive director of Public Citizen of Texas.

The Texas Ethics Commission itself had taken only half-steps in its legislative proposals as the regular session opened in January 1993.

BY A 4-3 Vote, The Commission ReJected Proposals To Limit Campaign Contributions and to provide public funding for state Supreme Court races on a trial basis.

Commissioners said they spent months studying the high cost of elections and conducted 17 public hearings across the state, but could not reach a consensus on solving the problem.

The pilot program for Supreme Court races would have been voluntary. Candidates who agreed not to accept more than $5,000 from individuals or more than $10,000 from Political Action Committees would have received as much as $1 million from the state for general election campaign expenses.

Texas attorneys, who would have paid for the program with a $60 increase in their occupation tax, opposed the idea.

Commissioners did recommend:

■ Reducing the campaign season to cut costs by moving the party primaries from March to July.

■ Requiring candidates to provide additional information on campaign reporting forms, including the contributor's occupation, job title and employer.

■ Requiring more detailed monthly reports during the campaign cycle.

■ Requiring judges and their spouses to report details about their previous legal partners, business investments, sources of income and persons giving gifts, meals, transportation or lodging.

■ Extending the terms of state district and court-at-law judges from four to six years to reduce campaign costs.

In the end, those suggestions and others died when the 1993 session adjourned.

Ethics advocates will try again in January.

Judicial Campaign Reform Will Rank Highest On The Agenda. The Senate approved a bill in 1993, but it failed in the House.

Legislators and voters then saw another ugly race for the Supreme Court in the primaries this year, with charges about plaintiff attorneys and insurance and business interests donating sizable amounts to campaign war chests.

'Political people are products. . .They are not people any more. They are being sold as products by consultants.'
— House Speaker Pete Laney

Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, sponsored the reform bill in 1993, which was proposed by Supreme Court Chief Justice Tom Phillips, a Republican, and Justice Lloyd Doggett, a Democrat who is now running for Congress from the Austin district.

House Speaker Pete Laney also said the emphasis in 1995 will be on campaign and election reforms "because of the money it takes to get elected."

"Political people are products," Laney said. "They are not people any more. They are being sold as products by consultants. You are going to see a lot of legislation next time addressing some of those things and the amount of money that's being spent, and it's going to run all the way from full public financing of elections to limits on campaigns."

Woodford said Common Cause will push for judicial campaign reform, as well as prohibiting legislators from appearing before state regulatory agencies on behalf of clients.

The state also should Prohibit All Elected Officials From Becoming Lobbyists For Two Years After Leaving Office, she said. Lawmakers approved such a rule in 1991, but only for the top officials who work at regulatory agencies.

Common Cause also would like to see a change in the requirement for a "super-majority" by ethics commissioners to initiate investigations or refer a complaint to the proper authorities. Current law requires approval by six of the eight commissioners, which is a problem because the commission comprises four Democrats and four Republicans.

Woodford said a simple majority should be sufficient to take action, but it would be difficult make that change because it would require a constitutional amendment.

"The ethics commission is going to come to us with some suggestions for changes they think might be necessary, and when they do I'm going to be happy to look at them," Gov. Ann Richards said.

Richards would like to see A Requirement That All Candidates Disclose Their Federal Income Tax Forms.

"I feel very strongly that all elected officials should make their income tax returns public," Richards said. "I will try to get it passed again. I can't tell you that I'll be successful, but I think you ought to do it," she said.

"It gives the public an idea of who you are and how you make your living. It lets the public know whether there are individuals or concerns that might affect your performance," she said.

Such a requirement was one of 13 suggestions Richards made in 1991 as "absolute minimums" for an ethics bill. The final bill, however, covered only four of her issues and partially covered five more. Releasing income tax information was one of four of her issues that lawmakers refused to put in the bill.

Major issue in 1991 and '93 was whether legislators who are attorneys should represent clients before state agencies.

Richards said in a recent interview she accepted the legislation at that time as the best she was going to get.

"I felt like we got everything that we could possible get, and I thought it far more important to get what we did in establishing a commission and laying down rules than to lose it all," she said.

A major issue in 1991 and in 1993 was whether legislators who are attorneys should represent clients before state agencies or whether any legislator should appear on behalf of someone before a regulatory body. The House favored that idea, but the Senate killed it.

Hutchison probe spurs calls for DA power cut

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The 1993 investigation of U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison on ethics charges will lead to efforts next year to reduce the authority of the Travis County district attorney and to give more power to the Ethics Commission to conduct investigations.

State Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, is working on such a bill, but Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, the Senate leader, said the problem is one of jurisdictional and constitutional questions.

State law gives Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle's Public Integrity Unit reponsibility for investigating ethics complaints since the county is the site of the state capital.

Lawmakers have tried several times in the past to restrict Earle's power or to slash state funding for the ethics unit.

Earle said the principle at question is public participation in the process.

"The worst thing that could possibly happen is the insulation of public officials from public scrutiny," Earle said.

And the traditional way the law is enforced in Texas is through public institutions such as the grand jury, he said.

A November 1993 article in Texas Monthly magazine on Hutchison said state ethics laws are so strict a public official who signs a personal check with a taxpayer-provided pen technically has committed a crime.

In reality, neither law enforcement officers nor voters are likely to swoop down on politicians for minor violations.

"I don't think anybody is going to get into trouble for using a state pen to sign their rent check," said Gov. Ann Richards. "The questions is not use; it's abuse. That's when somebody's going to get into trouble."

The question is: Who decides when abuse of the public trust becomes a pattern that requires an investigation and possible grand jury indictment?

Earle is an elected official. Thus, his office is open to charges of "playing politics" with ethics charges.

When Earle, a Democrat, began investigating charges Hutchison used her office as state treasurer for political and personal gain, Hutchision, a Republican, charged she was the victim of a huge Democratic

Governor outlines 13-point 'absolute minimum' for ethics law

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

Gov. Ann Richards told legislators in 1991 there were 13 points that constituted "the absolute minimum" for an effective ethics law. The items she listed and the results, as approved by lawmakers, were:

1. Lobbyists must report all spending on public officials above a minimum amount of, for example, $10.

Result: Partially approved. Lobbyists must report spending, but can spend as much as $50 on each occasion without reporting in detail.

2. Set a limit of $250 as the maximum a lobbyist may spend on a public official in one year.

Result: Partially approved. The limit is $500 a year.

3. Prohibit gifts to public officials valued at more than $50.

Result: Partially approved. Gifts must be reported, but the limit is $500.

4. Ban accepting fees or "honoraria" for making speeches.

Result: Approved.

5. Ban free trips except for fact-finding visits or public speeches, which must be without frills and must be fully reported.

Result: Approved.

6. Rewrite the bribery statute to make clear that giving anything of value to a legislator in exchange for a vote is a penal offense.

Result: Approved. But prosecutors say a violation will be very difficult to prove.

7. Limit campaign contributions from individuals and Political Action Committees to a "reasonable amount."

Result: Not approved.

8. Limit the amount of their own money spent on campaigns that wealthy candidates can recoup through contributions.

Result: Partially approved. The limits are set only for statewide candidates, at $1 million to $1.5 million for the governor's race and $500,000 to $750,000 in all other races.

9. Allow only one political account into which officials can put campaign contributions and eliminate the so-called officeholder accounts that lawmakers raise money for and then use to pay for office and living expenses in Austin.

Result: Not approved.

10. Update and expand financial disclosure forms to provide a true picture of any potential conflict of interest.

Result: Not approved.

11. All officials and candidates should reveal their income tax returns upon announcing for office.

Result: Not approved.

12. Close the "revolving door" of government officials going to work for a private entity that profited from actions by the officeholder, and prohibit officials from leaving their jobs at state regulatory agencies and appearing before the agencies on behalf of clients.

Result: Partially approved. Only high-ranking officials at regulatory agencies are prohibited from lobbying before the agencies where they once worked.

13. Create an ethics commission with the power to investigate complaints of violations and to assess penalties.

Result: Approved.

PROBE: Earle prosecutes Dems

plot.

Earle previously has prosecuted numerous powerful Democrats, including former State Treasurer Warren G. Harding, former Attorney General Jim Mattox, and former House Speaker Gib Lewis.

Newspapers reported alleged political activities in the office of Land Commissioner Gary Mauro, a Democrat, about the same time they reported Hutchison staff members were doing political work for Hutchison. Mauro was Texas campaign manager for presidential candidate Bill Clinton at the time.

Earle asked Mauro and Hutchison to look into the allegations, and based on those internal investigations he said violations in both offices were minor and he found no pattern of abuse.

It was several months later that three female treasury employees, all of whom were Republicans who were hired by Hutchison, said treasury employees had conducted extensive campaign work and personal chores for Hutchison on state time and using state equipment. Three other employees in the treasury's computer department said an attempt was made to destroy evidence as part of a cover-up.

Two different grand juries indicted Hutchison on separate occasions. But after a judge refused to rule in advance of the trial on the admissibility of the evidence, Earle stunned everyone by refusing to go forward with the case.

Texas Monthly Executive Editor Paul Burka, in his article on the Hutchison case, said perhaps ethics reforms have gone too far beyond the old idea that politicians should go to jail for one of three reasons: selling their votes, putting money in their pockets or obstructing the public's right to know what they do.

Burka suggested lesser ethics violations are wrong but not necessarily criminal.

"It would make more sense to require politicians to disclose politicking on state time and then reimburse the taxpayers for it than to demand that politicians not be politicians," he argued.

Tom "Smitty" Smith, executive director of Public Citizen of Texas, said there is almost universal understanding of an "incidental use standard" for state officials.

If an official gets a call on a state phone from a day-care center and makes arrangements to leave work to pick up a sick child, "that incidental use is forgiven and understood, just as it would be for any private employer," Smith said.

"But it is when there are abuses that the system kicks in and begins to mete out punishment and indict people," he said.

As for who makes the decision on when the system kicks in, Smith said his organization supports the current method using the district attorney's office.

Roberts retires

The former star at Miami was an eighth-round draft pick by Miami in 1988.

The Cowboys didn't try to sign Roberts, who missed last season with injuries. He worked out briefly with the Los Angeles Rams.

"I decided the game had passed me by," Roberts said. "I'm a big cheerleader for the Cowboys now."

Hot ticket

AUSTIN — Cowboys public relations director Rich Dalrymple said the "American Bowl" NFL exhibition game between the Houston Oilers and Dallas on Aug. 15 will be a sellout.

"We're told that the capacity of 108,000 in Azteca Stadium in Mexico City will be reached," Dalrymple said.

Bonds theft

SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds stole the 300th base of his career Tuesday, joining his father, godfather and three other major leaguers to hit 250 homers and steal 300 bases.

Bonds, the three-time MVP of the San Francisco Giants, has 253 career home runs. He joined his godfather, Willie Mays (600 homers, 338 steals), and his father, Giants hitting coach Bobby Bonds (332, 461), in the 250-300 club. The others to reach the milestone are Joe Morgan, Andre Dawson and Vada Pinson.

Bonds stole second base in the first inning against the Los Angeles Dodgers and immediately pulled up the bag so it could be taken to the clubhouse. But umpire Eric Gregg told him to put it back in the ground.

In the middle of the second inning, members of the grounds crew came out and replaced the bag.

Smith released

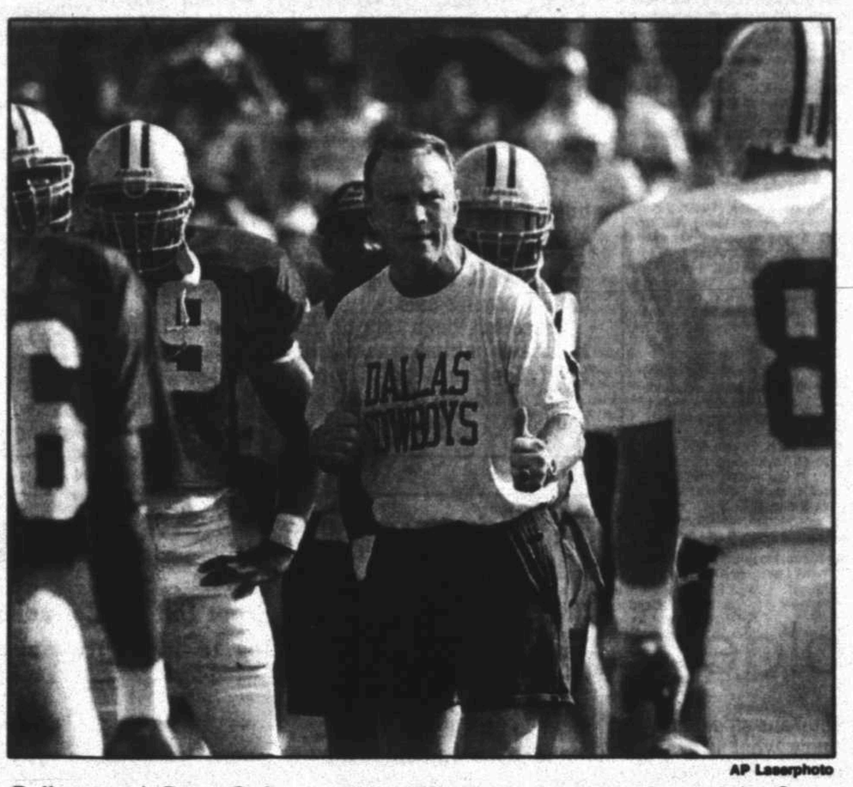

BOSTON — Charles Smith, the former Boston Celtics guard convicted in the hit-and-run deaths of two college students, was released from jail Tuesday after more than two years in prison.

Smith, 26, returned to Washington, his hometown. His lawyer, Dennis Kelly, said Smith would not grant interviews.

"He just wants to spend time with family and friends," Kelly said.

Smith, a former Georgetown star and Olympian, was convicted in the March 22, 1991, deaths of Michelle Dartley, 20, of Ridgewood, N.J., and An Trinh, 21, of Placentia, Calif.

Switzer feeling pain of first training camp

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

■ Cowboys' Training Camp

AUSTIN — Barry Switzer is 56, but his first professional football camp with long days and long nights sometimes makes him feel 10 years older.

"I've got bone spurs in my neck and right shoulder and it bothers me," said the Dallas Cowboys new head coach. "Sometimes it starts tingling. Sometimes I have a lot of pain."

So much pain that Switzer woke up at 4 a.m. Tuesday so he could adjust a cervical collar that shoots electrical impulses into the damaged areas.

"I guess I had too many board drills when I was a player at Arkansas sticking my head in there," said the former Razorback defensive lineman. "I even put on that collar when I'm watching film at night."

Switzer also is bothered by nerve pressure in his spinal area.

He called his neurosurgeon in Oklahoma City Monday night to tell him about his problems.

"I'll have to have it operated on sometime, maybe after the season," Switzer said. "That's why you see me walk funny sometimes, kind of leaning forward."

Switzer said if it wasn't for the pain in his back, neck, and shoulder, he would be cavorting about like a young colt.

"I'm in good shape, but the grind of two-a-days has taken its toll with these bone spurs," he said, rubbing his shoulder. "I woke up at 4 a.m. today and put on the collar and went back to sleep and felt great when I woke up.

"I'm supposed to be some kind of wild man, but I've been in bed almost every night by 10:30."

Fighting through the pain has been the toughest thing for Switzer in his first 10 days of training camp. Replacing Jimmy Johnson and facing the daily horde of media have been easy.

1994 MIDLAND WOMEN'S CITY CHAMPIONSHIP

■ Laura Waits, Paula King, Liz Tinney and Jo Dickson are left in the hunt for the Women's City Golf Championship.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

It didn't take long for Paula King to get comfortable on her home golf course. Home from playing collegiately for the University of Oklahoma, King took advantage of her familiarity with the Ranchland Hills Country Club to win her first round match in the Women's City Championship Tuesday.

King, who helped lead Midland Lee to the 1993 Class 5A state golf crown, defeated fellow RHCC member Becky Hakes 5 and 4 in the match play format. King advances to the second round where she will face Laura Waits, a winner Tuesday 3 and 1 over Mary Robinson.

King and Waits tee off at 8:30 a.m. today to begin the second round of the tournament at Midland Country Club. The third and final round will be played Thursday at Hogan Park. The most consistent golfer over three courses of play will have the easiest road to the 1994 City title.

Waits went into the tournament as the favorite this year after winning the qualifying round with a 71 Monday at Green Tree Country Club.

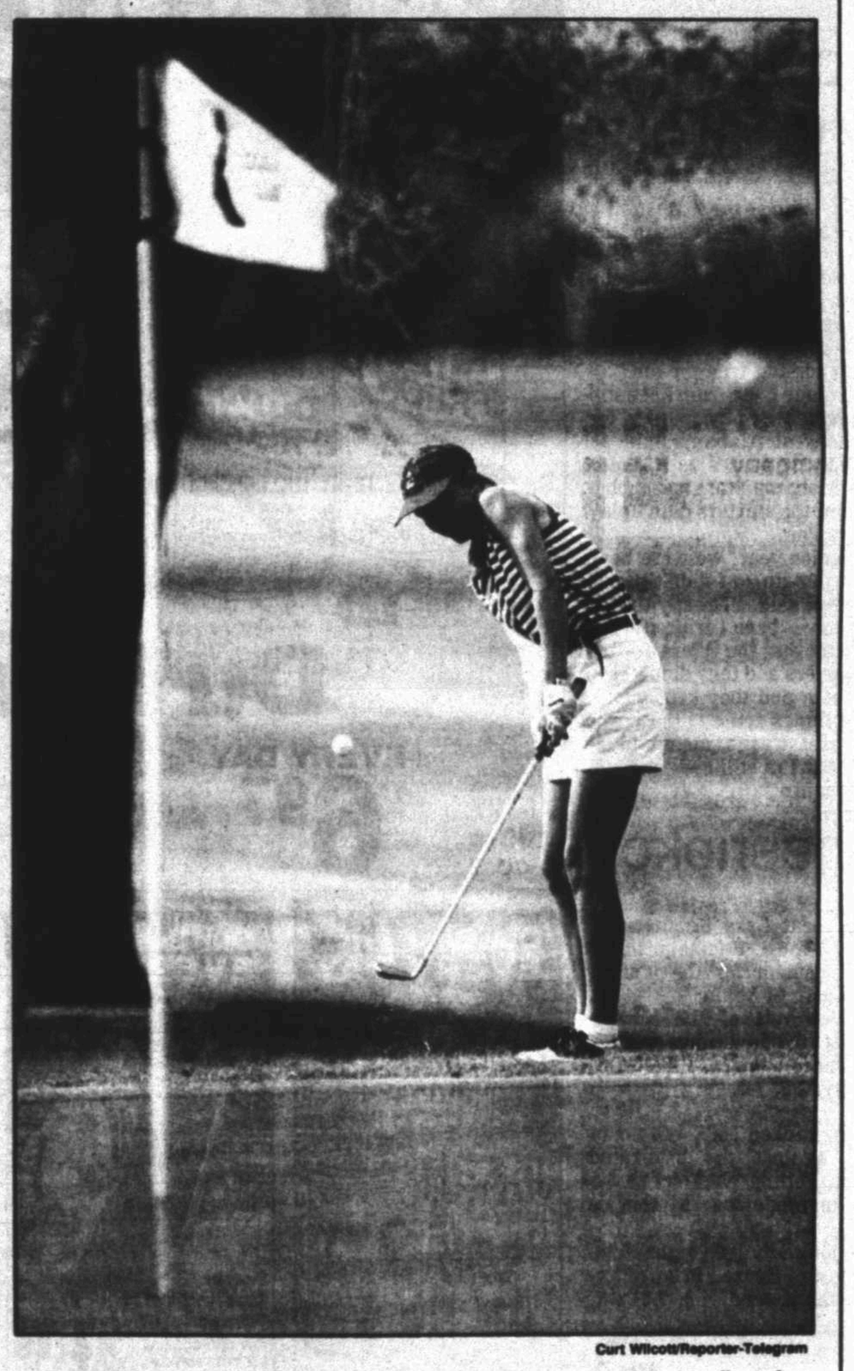

Despite playing at the Division I level for the Sooners, King said she was delighted to be among friends playing golf in her hometown.

"This is one of my favorite tournaments because it's match play which is a different format than I usually play and the ladies here are always so nice," King said. "I have fun playing here and I plan on playing here every year that I can."

Not only did King get to see familiar fairways, but she saw a lot of familiar faces — especially in the championship and first flights.

North stars fall to fumble

HOUSTON (AP) — Waco Robinson's Jason Tucker returned a fumble 93 yards with 2:34 to play, giving the South a 32-31 comeback victory Tuesday over the North in the 60th Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star football game.

Tucker, who also returned an interception 23 yards, was named the defensive most valuable player as the South cut the North's advantage in the all-time series 33-21-6.

His game-winning play came on first down from the 20, when Cedric Hodge of Kemp rushed for 13 yards then lost the ball at the 7. Tucker caught it in the air and rushed downfield for the touchdown. The two-point attempt failed.

On the North's final possession, Stewart moved to the South 42 in three plays, then he fumbled and Derrick Fletcher of Aldine recovered. The South ran out the final 1:37 to secure the victory.

The South had trailed 31-20 late in the fourth, but got within 31-26 with 27 seconds left in the third when Converse Judson's Jerod Douglas scored his second touchdown of the game on a 49-yard run. A two-point attempt failed.

Douglas, who broke the Class 5A state career-rushing record with 6,189 yards, finished with a game-high 81 yards rushing on 16 carries. Hodge led the North with 70 yards on 13 carries.

The North led most of the way behind the passing of Stephenville quarterback Branndon Stewart, who completed 18 of 31 passes for 243 yards and three touchdowns and was the offensive MVP. He was sacked eight times.

The lead changed hands seemingly every possession in the first half, with the North ending up ahead 22-14 heading into the third quarter.

Oilers blink at soft hands

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

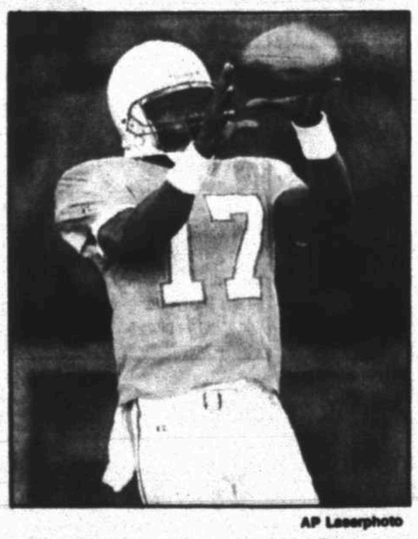

SAN ANTONIO — Reggie Brown lost his speed in 1989, but he didn't lose his hands.

Those soft hands and precision routes caught the eye of then-Houston Oilers general manager Mike Holovak when he went to Alabama State in 1992 to look at another player.

Holovak gave Brown a long-shot chance, and it paid off when Gary Wellman suffered a broken leg Saturday, projecting Brown into a starting role at outside receiver.

The promotion has helped Brown forget the pain of snapping all four ligaments in his left knee in 1989 and not being drafted in the NFL.

"It's made me work harder, it's made me humble," Brown said Tuesday. "I used to have great speed and great hands. Now I just have great hands. It's what I work with now."

Pessimism hits baseball

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Negotiators for baseball players and owners met in discussion groups Tuesday and both sides expressed pessimism going into Wednesday's full bargaining session.

Union head Donald Fehr and management negotiator Richard Ravitch said they didn't foresee any change in positions.

The executive board of the Major League Baseball Players Association is expected to set a strike deadline when it speaks by telephone at noon EDT Thursday. The union will announce its decision about two hours later at a news conference in New York.

"We have the feeling that nothing we do matters," Fehr said Tuesday. "They're on a track and they're going to make whatever decisions they've made."

Ravitch said Tuesday the union has "not made any reasonable proposals" and expects players to set a deadline Thursday. The most frequently mentioned possible strike date is Aug. 19.

Cincinnati Reds pitcher Jose Rijo said he's already made plans for a vacation at Boca Raton, Fla., starting Aug. 16.

"I hope I just lose that money and not my salary," Rijo said Tuesday. "I want to get a normal paycheck."

Owners are insisting players agree to a salary cap and players say they won't accept one under any circumstance. This would be the sport's eighth work stoppage since 1972.

"Whoever is responsible for this should be embarrassed for the game of baseball," Rijo said. "We're losing tradition. Baseball is supposed to be tradition — the pastime. It's not going to be for too much longer."

Management, which reopened the collective bargaining agreement on Dec. 7, 1992, waited until this June 14 to make its salary-cap proposal. The players rejected the plan July 18.

Tuesday's meetings didn't focus on the central economic concerns but on areas such as drug-treatment programs.

teammate and a member of the Lee golf teams which went to the state tournament in 1993 and 1994, qualified for the championship flight on Monday but got bumped by last year's finalist Liz Tinney, 6 and 4.

Fuller, who will play for the University of North Texas, moves to the consolation bracket in the championship flight. All of the first round losers have a chance at the consolation title in each flight. Second round losers, however, are out of the tournament.

Jo Dickson of Ranchland and April King of Hogan squared off in a match of former city champs. Dickson, who won the tournament in 1986 and 1989, defeated 1992 champ April King 3 and 2 to round out the championship flight. Tinney and Dickson will play today.

Paula King's former teammates performed well in the first flight. Kim Fisher, who will join King at Oklahoma this fall, defeated Dede Plank 3 and 2. Another Lee grad Jennifer Dickson, daughter of Jo, defeated Flossie Larsh 1-up on the 19th hole. Fisher and Dickson square off today in the semifinals.

"I've gotten on the course with some of them during the year but this is the first time we've been in the same tournament together since I left," King said. "So it was a lot of fun. It brings back memories."

King took the turn with a two-stroke lead on Hakes.

"We both did well on the front and then I made a couple of birdies that fell," King said. "We both struggled on the back, though."

King said the competition on the Division I level has helped her make strides in her game in a short time.

"You're playing with a pretty high caliber of players on that level," she said. "Most of them are able to shoot in the 70s or the low 80s. There's not anybody out there who is going to shoot 100. It's a lot tougher and more of a challenge but I've become a lot more consistent. Especially with the short game."

Dawson continues holdout

WHERE'S DAWSON?

Dawson continued his holdout on Tuesday but Young said he'd tried to call Dawson to tell him the offensive line is very thin and needs him.

"I told him I still loved him and to please come on back," Young said. "But he hasn't called back."

The Oilers already are thin in the offensive line because of the retirement of guard Mike Munchak.

"I've got six guys I can depend on right now and a couple of young ones that could come on later," Young said.

There has been talk of moving center Bruce Matthews out to left tackle if second year tackle Brad Hopkins doesn't improve.

"That's down the road, so far Brad's doing a good job," Young said.

■ Oilers' Camp Notes

MORE THAN A PASS RUSHER

Coach Jack Pardee likes the way Lamar Lathon is making the transition from linebacker to defensive end.

The Oilers want Lathon to use his speed and quickness as a pass rusher but he's also eagerly learning the other aspects of the position.

"He's getting into the spirit of the drills and learning to be more than a pass rusher, trying to outrun everybody on the field," Pardee said.

"That'll be the key, learning to play runs or traps and not just fly up field. I'm pleased with his work."

AND STANLEY SAYS...

Defensive line coach Jim Stanley thinks Lathon has Pro Bowl ability at defensive end.

"He can be as good as they come here," Stanley said. "But he has to take some reps and learn the system. I think by the end of preseason he will have a good understanding of what is going on. He can be the lead horse."

COACH: Switzer 10 years older

(From 1C)

"I think things have gone well," Switzer said. "The players are tired of hearing about the Jimmy thing and I'm tired of it, but that stuff is pretty well dying out. It's kind of like the jock itch. Pretty soon it goes away.

"The players have been great. They've been working very hard and I feel comfortable being back in the game again."

Switzer said all the controversy that surrounded his hiring by owner Jerry Jones will go away if the team wins. Switzer hasn't coached in five years since he was forced to retire at Oklahoma, where he won three national championships.

"Winning takes care of everything," Switzer said. "I know I've really missed the game, being around the players. It's good to be back."

Switzer spent the first part of training camp evaluating the players, particularly the defensive line, where some youngsters must come through.

"I've been making some opinions of the talent," Switzer said. "We lost some veterans on defense and I want to know what it looks like at that position. Otherwise, I'm letting my assistants coach like I did at Oklahoma. I've got some great assistants here."

Probably the only thing that has surprised Switzer so far as coach of the defending Super Bowl champions is discovering that he's in as much pain as some of his players.

back in shape, but you won't play football again.' That was a motivating factor," Brown said.

"When I didn't get drafted, people said I couldn't play in the NFL. Now a lot of people say, 'He can catch, but he won't be a great receiver in the NFL.' I guess I'm going to have to prove them wrong."

Brown was just a face in the crowd when Holovak, now director of player personnel, first saw him.

"He stood out right away because he catches the ball," Holovak said. "The knock on him is he doesn't have speed, but he's not slow. What you find is the guys who don't have the great speed work on their moves. He's that way."

The Oilers offered Brown a free agent contract in 1992. He didn't get into a game until last season when he made his first pro catch, a 26-yarder against the Rams.

It's been a long road to this point.

"It looks like I'm going to get a chance to play," Brown said. "I've been working hard, and hopefully I'll keep doing good things and it will keep coming true for me."

Brown came back from knee surgery to catch 50-plus passes for two seasons at Alabama, but he caught only 38 passes as a senior because Alabama State had such a good team, the starters didn't play the entire game.

"My senior year, we were beating teams 92-zip so I didn't play a lot," Brown said. "I really think I should have been drafted. The year I came out, the Oilers drafted four receivers and they didn't keep any of them and they kept me.

"Good things come to those who wait. I just wasn't meant to be drafted, but I'm still here and still have a chance."

Forget upsets Chesnokov

HILVERSUM, Netherlands (AP) — Guy Forget of France upset sixth-seeded Andrei Chesnokov of Russia 2-6, 6-3, 7-5 Tuesday in the $300,000 Hilversum Dutch Open clay-court tennis championships.

Forget, once rated as high as fourth in the world, began the tournament ranked No. 114, while Chesnokov is No. 32.

Alberto Berasategui, the top seed and 10th-ranked player in the world, crushed fellow Spaniard Jordi Arrese 6-4, 6-2 in his first-round match.

Spaniard Javier Sanchez, seeded third, beat Lars Rehmann of Germany 6-4, 6-4. Rehmann was a late replacement for the injured Alberto Costa of Spain.

Paul Haarhuis of the Netherlands beat his Davis Cup doubles partner Jacco Eltingh, a late wild-card entry, 7-5, 7-5.

Eltingh, ranked 54th, rushed to the net against the 27th-rated Haarhuis, getting each set to 5-5 before surrendering a service break.

Also, Sjeng Schalken of the Netherlands lost to Renzo Furlan of Italy, the eighth seed, 4-6, 7-5, 6-3.

Indians pull out split with Birds

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Dennis Martinez pitched eight innings of two-hit ball and Albert Belle had three hits, including his 32nd homer, as Cleveland beat Baltimore 9-2 to gain a split of a day-night doubleheader.

In the first game, Harold Baines snapped a long homerless drought with two solo shots in the Orioles' 10-4 victory. Rafael Palmeiro and Leo Gomez also homered for Baltimore, which withstood homers from Belle and Eddie Murray.

Belle, who has appealed a pending 10-game suspension for using a corked bat, has six homers in his last eight games. He had three RBIs Tuesday, giving him 93 for the season.

Cleveland took command of the nightcap in the first inning, using an RBI double by Belle and a three-run double by Manny Ramirez to go up 4-0. Belle hit a solo homer off Mike Oquist (3-3) in the third.

That was more than enough offense for Martinez (10-5), who had a no-hitter until Brady Anderson's two-out, RBI single in the sixth. Martinez, 9-1 since May 11, walked two and struck out six.

Murray singled in a run in a four-run seventh that put Cleveland ahead 9-1. Murray has 1,732 career RBIs, tied with Honus Wagner for 14th on the career list.

Baines hit his third homer of the day and 15th of the season in the bottom of the inning.

In the opener, Baines homered in the fourth inning, again in the sixth and capped his first multi-homer game since May 7, 1991, with an RBI single in a four-run seventh that made it 10-2. He had not homered in 69 at-bats since June 27.

Royals 3, White Sox 2

KANSAS CITY — Wally Joyner had a pair of RBI singles and Kansas City defeated Chicago for its fourth straight win.

■ AL Roundup

The Royals' winning streak is their longest since a five-game string in mid-April. Kansas City moved six games over .500 for the first time this season.

Tom Gordon (10-6) improved to 7-1 lifetime against the White Sox, helped by relievers Billy Brewer, Rusty Meacham and Jeff Montgomery.

Gordon allowed two runs and six hits in 7⅓ innings. He walked five and struck out four.

Tim Raines singled and Julio Franco tripled with one out in the eighth off Gordon, making it 3-2. Brewer retired Robin Ventura on a grounder, keeping the tying run at third base, and Meacham struck out Darrin Jackson.

Rangers 8, Twins 7

ARLINGTON — Rusty Greer's RBI single with two outs in the eighth inning pushed Texas over Minnesota.

Doug Strange's run-scoring pinch single in the bottom of the eighth off Rick Aguilera (1-4) lifted the Rangers into a 7-7 tie.

That made a winner of Jay Howell (4-1), who allowed the go-ahead run in the top of the eighth on Matt Walbeck's one-out solo homer, snapping a 6-6 tie. Tom Henke, the sixth Rangers pitcher, got the final three outs for his 12th save.

Red Sox 10, Yankees 7

NEW YORK — Tim Naehring and Mo Vaughn hit two-run home runs in the sixth inning to lift Boston over New York and Jimmy Key.

Naehring's seventh homer of the year came off Key (15-3) and capped a Red Sox comeback that began after the Yankees scored five runs in the first inning off Boston starter Chris Nabholz (3-3).

Reliever Xavier Hernandez walked John Valentin and Vaughn then hit his 22nd homer to give the Red Sox an 8-5 lead.

Key, who has lost two of his last five decisions, allowed 11 hits on six runs, five earned, in 5⅓ innings, walking three and striking out four.

Nabholz allowed seven hits and five runs, walked four and struck out six in five innings but held the Yankees to four hits after the first inning as the Red Sox snapped the Yankees' five-game winning streak.

Nabholz walked three batters and threw a wild pitch in the first inning as the Yankees scored on Mike Stanley's RBI fielder's choice, Jim Leyritz's RBI single and a bases-clearing three-run double by Mike Gallego.

Boston's comeback started in the third when Vaughn doubled in two runs and another scored on a fielding error by third baseman Randy Velarde to make it 5-3.

Tigers 9, Mariners 1

DETROIT — Travis Fryman broke an 0-for-26 slump with two doubles, two triples and four RBIs to lead Detroit over Seattle.

The win was the 2,125th of Detroit manager Sparky Anderson's career, tying him with Joe McCarthy for fourth place on the career wins list for managers.

David Wells (4-6) allowed just one run on five hits in his fourth complete game of the season. He struck out five and walked his first batter in 39⅔ innings, a span of 156 batters. The walk was drawn by Edgar Martinez, also the last batter that Wells had walked.

Jim Converse (0-3) continued to struggle for Seattle, allowing six runs on nine hits in 5⅓ innings. His ERA this season is 10.05.

Athletics 6, Angels 0

ANAHEIM — Steve Ontiveros and two relievers combined on a three-hitter and Stan Javier tied a club record with three doubles, leading Oakland over California.

A's first baseman Mark McGwire, whose return from the disabled list last month helped boost the Athletics from last place into contention in the AL West, left the game after grounding out and irritating his left heel. It was the same heel that put him on the disabled list April 6 with a stress fracture and caused him to miss 43 games.

Ontiveros (6-3), who pitched his only career shutout in June 1987 for the Athletics at Cleveland, was pulled after only 80 pitches with a 6-0 lead and a two-hitter through seven innings. Bob Welch and Billy Taylor each pitched an inning.

Brewers 7, Blue Jays 5

TORONTO — Jody Reed celebrated his 32nd birthday by hitting a pair of singles, scoring a run and driving in two more in the Brewers' seven-run first inning as Milwaukee snapped Toronto's season-high eight-game winning streak.

Reed, who had been in a 1-for-25 slump, led off the game with a single and after moving to second on a groundout, scored on Kevin Seitzer's RBI single for the first run.

Greg Vaughn followed with a single before Dave Nilsson made it 4-0 with a three-run home run to left, his 11th of the season.

One out later, Troy O'Leary singled and Jeff Cirillo walked before Jose Valentin hit an infield pop-up that Blue Jays third baseman Ed Sprague missed, allowing another run to score.

Reed then hit a two-run single, making the score 7-0 and chasing Toronto's Juan Guzman (10-10).

Ricky Bones (10-7) went eight innings to win his third straight start and help the Brewers snap their three-game losing skid.

Bagwell nails 101 as Astros near first

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Jeff Bagwell hit his 33rd homer and became the first major leaguer to reach 100 RBIs, and the Houston Astros bounced back to beat the Cincinnati Reds 6-5 Tuesday night.

Luis Gonzalez doubled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning as the Astros overcame a blown five-run lead. Houston's fifth victory in seven games moved them one game behind Cincinnati in the NL Central.

The teams conclude their final series at Riverfront Stadium on Wednesday afternoon.

Houston built a 5-0 lead off Jose Rijo behind Bagwell's two-run homer, which gave him 101 RBIs in 101 games. The Reds gradually chipped away at Pete Harnisch and finally caught up in the sixth when Deion Sanders — an NFL cornerback in the offseason — leveled catcher Scott Servais to tie it at 5.

But Johnny Ruffin (6-1) lost his perfect record and the lead in the seventh when Craig Biggio doubled to left and Gonzalez, hitless in the series, lined a double off the wall in right with two out.

Todd Jones (4-2) struck out Reggie Sanders to keep the score tied in the sixth and held the Reds hitless the rest of the way. Jones pitched 3⅓ hitless innings, struck out five and an allowed only an intentional walk.

Bagwell homered during a four-run first inning off Rijo, whose tender elbow usually gives him problems early. Twenty-four of his 68 runs (35 percent) have been given up in the first.

Giants 12, Dodgers 5

SAN FRANCISCO — Matt Williams hit his major league-leading 38th homer and Todd Benzinger drove in three runs, giving San Francisco a victory over Los Angeles.

The Giants moved within 1½ games of the first-place Dodgers in the NL West and sent a crowd of 55,771 home happy after scoring seven runs in the seventh. Los Angeles has dropped 12 of its last 18 games.

Williams hit his second homer in as many games in the fifth inning after Barry Bonds doubled. Williams drove a 3-1 pitch from Orel Hershiser (5-5) into the left field bleachers to give San Francisco a 5-0 lead.

Giants starter William VanLandingham (6-1) left with two on and two out in the seventh. Mike Piazza hit the first pitch from reliever Rich Monteleone for his 21st homer to make it 5-3. Piazza added an RBI double in the Dodgers' two-run ninth.

Mets 10, Cardinals 9, 11 innings

ST. LOUIS — Rico Brogna drove in four runs, two on a game-winning homer in the 11th inning, as New York defeated St. Louis.

Brogna, who tied a club record with five hits Monday night, has hit safely in his last 12 starts and is batting .488 (21-for-43) in those games. He also had a two-run single in the seventh to give the Mets an 8-6 lead.

Mike Maddux (2-1) pitched a scoreless 10th to pick up the victory and John Franco earned his 24th save. Franco was the eighth New York pitcher, tying a club record.

He got two quick outs before three straight hits, the last a single by Geronimo Pena, made it 10-9. Tom Pagnozzi struck out to end the game.

Trailing 8-6, the Cardinals tied the game with two runs in the eighth. Pena led off with a triple off Josias Manzanillo and scored on Pagnozzi's sacrifice fly off Mauro Gozzo. Pinch-hitter Luis Alicea then tied it a home run to right, his fifth.

Expos 5, Braves 3

The Expos opened a 3½-game lead over the Braves in the NL East, turning errors by Maddux and shortstop Jeff Blauser into a three-run seventh inning for a 5-2 lead.

The Braves held a players-only meeting before the game, but still lost for the seventh time in 10 games. They've lost two straight days to Montreal and seven of 10 to the Expos this season.

Maddux (13-6) lowered his ERA to 1.68, best in the majors, despite the loss. He had retired 13 consecutive batters until the seventh when leadoff hitter Wil Cordero reached on Blauser's error.

Cordero then took third on a hit-and-run when Mike Lansing's liner glanced off center fielder Roberto Kelly's glove for a single. Cordero scored the go-ahead run on Sean Berry's groundout.

Cubs 8, Pirates 4

Young, activated off the disabled list just before gametime, lasted four innings before leaving with fatigue in his right elbow and forearm. Young had been on the disabled list since July 10 because of a strained elbow.

Chicago's bullpen survived Tom Foley's solo homer in the sixth and Dave Clark's two-run pinch-hit shot in the seventh to finish up for Young, who is 1-0 with a 1.00 ERA in three starts against Pittsburgh this season.

Phillies 10, Marlins 8, 12 innings

MIAMI — Ricky Jordan hit a tie-breaking single in the 12th inning as Philadelphia blew a six-run lead but still beat Florida.

Jim Eisenreich led off the 12th with a single and took second when right fielder Gary Sheffield overran the ball for an error. Jordan then singled off Robb Nen (4-5) and later scored on an infield single by Kim Batiste, who had four hits and three RBIs.

Rockies 6, Padres 5

SAN DIEGO — Mark Thompson won his major-league debut and Colorado moved within one game of first place in the NL West, defeating San Diego.

Los Angeles leads the division by one game over Colorado and 1½ games over San Francisco.

Thompson, Colorado's second pick in the 1992 draft, became the first player ever taken in an amateur draft by the Rockies to appear in a big-league game. He allowed three runs and seven hits in 5 2-3 innings, walking four and striking out two.

Through tears Kersee wins

■ Goodwill Games

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia (AP) — She was driven to tears by accusations of cheating. She could hardly breathe because of an asmtha attack. She finished with her lowest score in 10 years.

Somehow, Jackie Joyner-Kersee managed to win her third straight heptathlon title at the Goodwill Games.

Joyner-Kersee, who has won every heptathlon which she has completed since 1984, almost had her streak broken due to a bizarre series of events.

A spectator apparently spilled beer over her javelins, leading a meet official to accuse her of cheating and threaten to disqualify her.

"I was so upset because this has never happened to me before," Joyner-Kersee said. "I was so upset I was shedding tears."

She regained her composure and ran the final event, the 800 meters, but she barely made it to the finish line. Gasping for breath, she chugged home dead last, then doubled over. Her husband and coach, Bob Kersee, poured water over her, pounded her on the back to help her breathe and gave her an inhaler for asmtha.

"In the home stretch, I was feeling so hot I wanted to pull my top down," Joyner-Kersee said. "I couldn't breathe. I'm glad it's over."

She finished the eight-event competition with 6,606 points, her lowest winning total ever and her lowest total since placing second at the 1984 Olympics with 6,520.

Joyner-Kersee was one of four world record-holders to win gold medals in track and field competition Tuesday. Mike Powell captured the long jump on his last attempt, Noureddine Morceli ran away with the mile and Moses Kiptanui won the 5,000.

The controvery surrounding Joyner-Kersee began when her two javelins became soaked with beer before the event. She told officials what happened and the javelins were inspected, approved and put into a pool with others for use by any of the athletes.

Joyner-Kersee said she never used those javelins. But afterwards referee Albert Kalin of Russia accused her of wetting the javelins herself to improve the grip. He also said she used them in the competition.

"The official wrongfully accused her of doing something wrong," Kersee said. "I'm not going to have Jackie accused of any wrongdoing."

The official relented and let her continue with a warning. She finished 114 points ahead of runner-up Larisa Turchinskaya of Russia. Ghada Shouaa of Syria was third.

Slowed by a right hamstring injury, he fouled on three of his attempts and was in second place behind 1994 NCAA champion Erick Walder, who had a jump of 8.39 meters (27-6 1-2).

But Powell came up with a wind-aided leap of 8.45 meters (27 feet, 8 3-4 inches) on his last jump for the gold — then sprinted over to the stands to hug his agent, Brad Hunt.

"Coming into the meet, I was worried I wouldn't get any jumps off," Powell said. "I figured if I just took my time and let my hamstring warm up, I would get one off. After my third jump, I thought, 'Now it's OK.' I'm happy I didn't foul that last jump."

World record-holder Morceli of Algeria pulled away on the last lap to win the mile in 3:48.67, the fastest time of the year. After crossing the finish line, he dropped to his knees on the track, spread out his arms and made the victory sign with both hands.

Beach volleyball was the day's other main attraction.

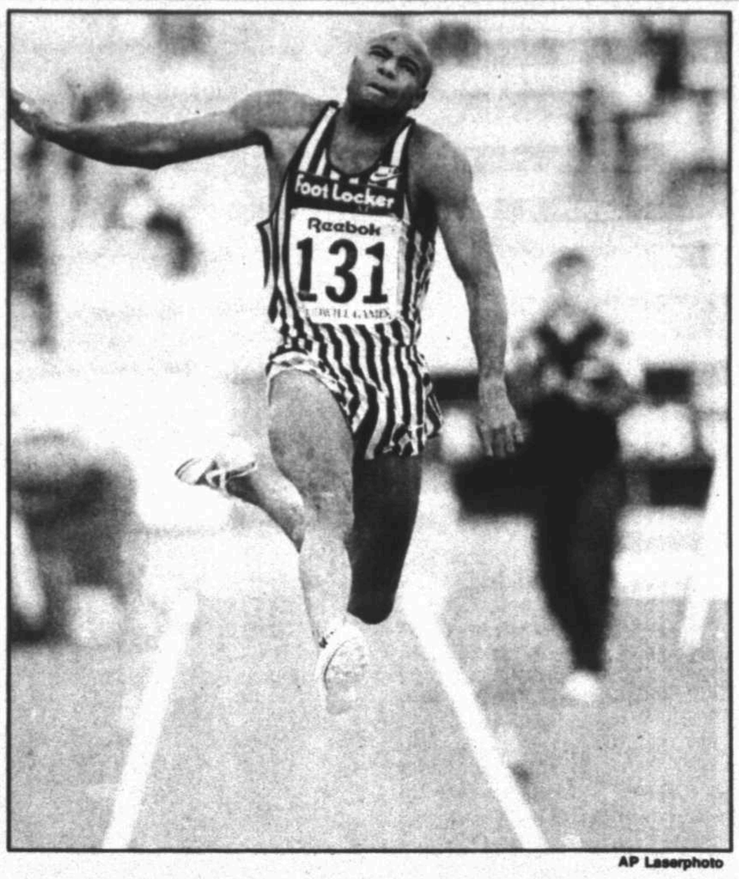

Americans Karolyn Kirby and Liz Masakayan won the women's gold by beating Monica Rodrigues and Adriana Samuel of Brazil, 12-9, 12-1. The Norwegian pair of Jan Kvalheim and Bjorn Maaseide won the men's gold, beating Americans Carlos Briceno and Jeff Williams, 12-8, 12-6.

The Norwegian winners could have passed for typical California beach boys: tall (6-foot-4), blond and deeply tanned. It figures that Maaseide attended UCLA.

But isn't Norway a winter sports country, famous for its snow and ice?

"If you want to call us the Vikings of the sand, that's fine with me," Maaseide said. "I just want to assure you: we do have sand beaches in Norway."

The real winner of the beach volleyball competition might have been the setting. The event was staged just outside the walls of the Peter and Paul Fortress.

Goodwill Games Capsules

TRACK AND FIELD — Jackie Joyner-Kersee struggled through the final event, the 800 meters, but won the heptathlon for the third time at the Goodwill Games.

Other winners were Kenya's Moses Kiptanui, who won the 5,000 in a Games' record time of 13:10.76; Derrick Adkins in the men's 400 hurdles in a Games' record time of 47.86; world champion Jearl Miles in the women's 400 in 50.60; Slovakia's Brigitta Bukovic in the women's 100 hurdles in 12.83; and Russia's Olimpidia Ivanova in the women's 10-kilometer walk in 42:30.31.

BEACH VOLLEYBALL — The women's gold was won by the U.S. team of Karolyn Kirby and Liz Masakayan of San Diego, who downed Brazil's Monica Rodrigues and Adriana Samuel 12-9, 12-1.

"Winning the gold in Atlanta is our ultimate goal," Kirby, 32, said. Masakayan is 29.

Americans Lori Forsythe and Barbra Fontana beat Maria Salgado and Roseli Timm of Brazil 15-8 for the bronze medal.

Norway's Jan Kvalhein and Bjoern Naaseide won the men's gold medal by beating the U.S. team of Jeff Williams of Fountain Valley, Calif. and Carlos Briceno of Santa Monica, Calif., 12-8, 12-6.

Sinjin Smith of Pacific Palisades, Calif and Bruk Vandeweghe of Beverly Hills, Calif. beat the Australian team of Andrew Burdin and Julien Prosser, 15-9, for the bronze medal.

BOXING — Two Americans, Shane Swartz and Stephen Beets led the way into the semifinals of the 165-pound division with decisions.

Benjamin McDowell and Edward Mahone also advanced for the United States in other divisions.

WATER POLO — Italy and Spain tied, 8-8 in the first game of the competition. The teams met in the gold medal game of the 1992 Olympics with Italy winning in triple overtime.

The U.S. opened its competition with a 11-8 loss to Germany.

Prep quarterback finds success in golf

By Kevin Taylor
Palestine Herald-Press

PALESTINE (AP) — Like many Texans before him and to come, Ryan Thomas dreamt of playing college football.

And, although it was highly unlikely that the former Leon quarterback would be throwing passes to Michael Adams at Texas or handing off to Leeland McElroy at Texas A&M this fall, much less gracing the cover of "Texas Football Magazine," there was that chance that he could play — somewhere.

"I kind of grew up with a football in my hand," Thomas said. "My dad (Gary) played at Rice and my uncle (Keith) played at Oklahoma. I came from a football family."

Not surprisingly, Thomas went into his final year at Leon High School hoping, if not expecting, to follow in his family's footsteps.

"I went into my senior year hoping to play (college) football somewhere," Thomas explained. "Then, I started doing well in golf. My parents told me to forget about football and start concentrating on golf."

Good advice.

Thomas, who shot a 68 at the Region II boys golf tournament in Tyler in the spring of 1993, got his wish when it came to playing college sports.

Only Thomas — who didn't pick up a golf club until he was 15 years old and didn't compete in his first tournament until his sophomore year of high school — isn't throwing passes or pitching the ball to running backs.

He's playing golf.

"I saw it on TV and wanted to do it," Thomas said. "It just kind of went from there."

While most college players were honing their skills in junior circuits from Houston to El Paso long before their high school careers, Thomas, born and raised in Jewett, was playing football, shooting baskets, running track and driving his pickup truck.

Oh yeah, when he wasn't barking signals as Leon High School's quarterback, he was chasing them (opponents, that is) as a starter at defensive end.

Now, having completed a successful year at Navarro Junior College, Thomas is more than a little optimistic.

"I kind of like it," he explained, "because I know I won't get burned out. Sure, I wish I would have played (when he was younger) but I'm still having fun and still trying to learn."

"I've had a few offers from small colleges," Thomas said. "Hopefully, after this year, I'll get some offers to play somewhere else."

If this past spring is any indication, Ryan Thomas won't have to wait long for the offers to come pouring in.

"I had a pretty good year," he said. "Our team finished 11th in the nation. I won my first tournament at Waterwood (Invitational) and finished second at Temple (Invitational). Overall, I thought it went pretty good."

At Waterwood, an April tourney hosted by Sam Houston State, Thomas — who had won many tournaments while in high school — was forced to sweat it out down the stretch.

That in itself was a lesson learned.

"I wanted to stay away from big numbers and tried to stay calm and not lose my concentration," Thomas said. "I matured on the golf course in different situations. Like at Waterwood. I know I had the lead the last seven holes and that was the hardest thing I ever did. That was really nerve-wracking.

"My team didn't do as well and I finished early and had to wait two hours to see if I had won or not."

Thomas, who is preparing for the upcoming Young Houstonian, a tourney played out on three different golf courses in Houston, matured in oither ways this past spring.

Calamity strikes cricket world

LONDON (AP) — Calamity has come in cricket, the national game synonymous with the ethos of fair play, enshrined in the old refrain, "Play up, play up and play the game."

Young Mike Atherton is being called upon to resign as England's captain only a year after he was hailed as the bright new hope following a string of humiliating international defeats.

Atherton, 26, is accused of tampering with the ball to make it move erratically. He denies that, but admits he concealed the full facts, and a pocketful of dirt, when questioned by the referee.

It's the summer silly season when small things can get blown up in the public prints. But even so the clamor is deafening.

The Times of London said there was no precedent in cricket history for what Atherton had done and he had probably been irreparably discredited.

"It is only a game, but at the same time it has come to represent a certain facet of English life," said Lord Deedes, former editor of The Daily Telegraph.

"What's the expression — keeping a straight bat, or it's not cricket? They're still used quite widely...

"It's a game which is meant to symbolize the British idea of fair play. And once that takes a knock, the sense of British fair play takes a knock," Deedes said Tuesday in an interview with BBC radio.

The cricketing world watching on television saw Atherton apparently rubbing something on the ball. Commentator Tony Lewis, a retired professional cricketer, remarked: "It looks like Michael is giving the ball the Aladdin's Lamp treatment."

To make matters worse it all happened at Lord's, the hallowed headquarters of the game as the home of Marylebone Cricket Club, MCC, which lays down the rules obeyed by cricketers everywhere.

The incident took place on Saturday on the third day of a scheduled five-day game against South Africa, returning to England after a 29-year exile because of apartheid.

The South Africans hammered Atherton's side, winning by 356 runs in four days. England played ineptly, Atherton was disgraced and the nation, not just cricketers, is aghast.

People everywhere are asking: What the dickens did Atherton think he was doing?

To retain the shine on a ball for as long as possible, cricketers are allowed to polish it on their pants or sweaters. The bowler can make a shiny ball swerve to force the batsman into an injudicious stroke, and perhaps hit a ball which is caught for an out.

Atherton said the hot and humid weather made his hands damp, so he put some dirt in his right pocket to keep them dry.

That breaks clause 5 of law 42 on unfair play: "Any member of the fielding side may polish the ball provided that such polishing wastes no time and that no artificial substance is used. No one shall rub the ball on the ground or use any artificial substance or take any other action to alter the condition of the ball."

Atherton did not tell referee Peter Burge about the dirt when he was questioned after Saturday's play, but owned up during a closed-door meeting on Sunday.

He was fined the equivalent of $1,500 for the dirt and $1,500 for not telling the whole truth initially.

Getting closer to the bench

By Steve Wilstein
AP Sports Writer

■ Hall of Fame

Only a dozen members of the Baseball Hall of Fame who played in the 1920s and '30s are still alive and, as one of them wryly observes, they're getting closer to end of the bench.

Bill Dickey died last fall, Ray Dandridge early this year. Ted Williams is recovering from a second stroke. Early Wynn, Buck Leonard and Lou Boudreau are ailing, too.

Rick Ferrell is plugging along nicely at 88 in Detroit, as is Al Lopez at 85 in Tampa. Joe DiMaggio still loves to go to the race track in Florida and keep to himself. Bobby Doerr lives comfortably on a farm in Oregon, Enos Slaughter on his farm in North Carolina. Monte Irvin is doing fine in Florida, Red Schoendienst in Missouri, and Bob Feller can often be found at Cleveland Indians games.

They are a trove of wonderful stories, and when they are gone a significant part of American sports history will disappear. As three new members of the Hall of Fame await induction Sunday — Steve Carlton, Phil Rizzuto and the late Leo Durocher — some of those who preceded them spoke about the way baseball was when every game was played on grass and every team rode the rails.

Many of them will journey to Cooperstown, N.Y., to witness the ceremonies and renew old ties, all of them part of a unique brotherhood and a vanished time.

There was a different sense of manliness back then, an unwritten code of behavior on and off the field that seems quaint or even foolish today. No water was allowed during games even in the worst heat, and no one munched snacks on the bench even near the end of a doubleheader.

Major leaguers wore heavy flannels and wouldn't think of adorning themselves with earrings or gold chains.

"You'd be joked out of the league," Ferrell said.

Players ran out home runs with their heads down, careful not to show up anybody. No one made snatch catches. Guys jockeyed from the bench all the time and kept up the chatter in the field, unlike the silent players nowadays. If a batter got hit, he didn't charge the mound or even rub his sore spot to acknowledge pain. He just jogged to first. If he got brushed back, he dusted himself off quickly, dug in his back foot and tried to get even with his bat on the next pitch.

"The hitters are intimidating the umpires, it seems," Ferrell, a catcher with St. Louis, Boston and Washington from 1927 through 1941, said of today's players. "They fuss on every pitch. The poor little pitcher out there, he can't say a thing. It seems like everything they do makes it tougher on the pitchers.

"Players are not stronger. The baseball is a golf ball now. They've tightened it up to where it just jumps out of the park. The pitching isn't that bad. They've narrowed the strike zone to nothing."

"Back then, if you got on somebody about knocking you down, why they'd come back and throw at you again," Doerr said. "It's just inviting another shot at you."

There is little envy among the old-timers about the big money players are making now. Rather, there is a consensus that the game was more fun when they played and a concern for the future of baseball amid serious talk of another strike.

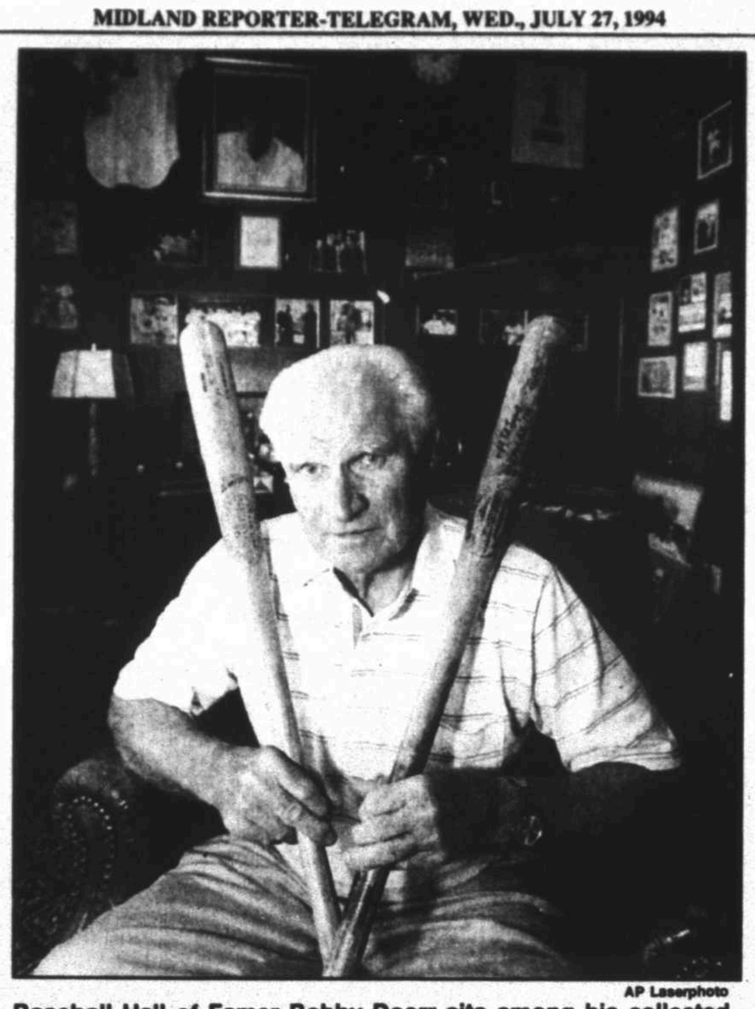

"Some of the clubs are in trouble on account of the salaries," Lopez said. "They're going to have to do something. I said when they had the first million-dollar player, 'This is just the beginning.' If this keeps up, there's going to be a $10 million player. They have to do something.

"I think there should be a happy medium. The players should realize, 'If they're losing money, we're going to have to do something.'"

Lopez held out once — for two weeks with Brooklyn in the spring of 1935 after hitting .273 and catching 140 games in 1934. They tried to cut his salary by $3,000, to $8,000.

"I got most of it back," he said. "It was the year Roosevelt closed the banks."

Lopez, who earned his Hall of Fame status as a manager in the '50s and '60s, never quite struck it rich as a player. The most he made was $16,500 with Pittsburgh in the 1940s, but he said he wouldn't trade that time for anything.

Schumacher given two-week vacation

PARIS (AP) — Michael Schumacher's domination of the Formula One season was sidetracked Tuesday, and the two-week suspension he received for breaking the circuit's rules could cost him the points championship.

International Automobile Federation (FIA) officials barred the German star from the next two Grand Prix races and gave Damon Hill a chance to win the title Schumacher appeared to have locked up.

Schumacher, a winner in six of eight races this season with seconds in the other two, had no comment, but was on the verge of tears when seen leaving FIA headquarters.

Schumacher was penalized for passing Hill on a warmup lap and temporarily ignoring a black flag during the British Grand Prix.

The driver's Benetton-Ford team called the punishment "harsh," but declined further comment, saying it was still deciding whether to appeal or comply with the decision.

Schumacher could appeal before the German Grand Prix, set for Sunday at Hockenheim. He also was barred from the Hungarian Grand Prix.

If he does appeal, Schumacher could race and score points until the appeal is heard. But he would drive with a cloud over his head, and also lose any points won if his appeal is rejected.

In addition to the suspension, FIA cut the six points Schumacher earned for finishing second in the race. His team was also fined $500,000 for failing several times to follow orders from race officials.

"Schumacher's explanation consisted of saying that he didn't see the black flag," FIA president Max Mosley said, adding the FIA World Council judged that explanation to be unacceptable.

If upheld, the sanctions could slash Schumacher's lead from 33 to seven points, providing Hill capitalizes on his rival's absence and wins both races, which are worth 10 points each.

Schumacher started the day with a 72-39 edge.

The council also said Benetton-Ford had a computer system capable of breaching regulations. While there was no proof it was used, the council fined the team $100,000 for failing to make the computer codes available immediately.

Pierre Aumonier, director of the British Grand Prix, was stripped of his license for a year for failing "in his duties with regard to various points."

The Royal Automobile Club, the governing body of British auto racing, was asked to investigate the race's organization and make changes to prevent such trouble in the future.

"Everything was run according to the rule book," said RAC spokesman Colin Wilson.

At the Silverstone race July 10, Schumacher passed pole-sitter Hill on the warmup lap before the start of the race and took five laps to stop after a black flag was waved in front of him.

The stop penalty gave Hill the race, since he and Schumacher were running neck-and-neck. After the race, Schumacher was fined $25,000 and his team reprimanded.

Fans seeking one-day strike

CLEVELAND (AP) — Two organizations claiming to represent the interests of baseball fans decided Tuesday to merge and seek a one-day strike by fans Aug. 13.

The purpose is to send a message to both players and owners as a possible players' strike nears.

The executive board of the players' union is to speak by telephone Thursday and a strike date could be set then.

Fans with season tickets to Aug. 13 games are being urged to stay home. Fans with single-game tickets are being urged to at least miss the first couple of innings.

"Overwhelmingly, the fan support is there," said Frank Sullivan, a season-ticket holder to Cleveland Indians games and organizer of a group called "Fans First."

"Everybody is fed up with all the money that's in major league baseball," Sullivan said. "What's forgotten in this is that the buck stops with the fans."

Sullivan, chief financial officer of a corporation in suburban Cleveland, formed Fans First with the help of his brother-in-law, Patrick O'Rourke of Greensboro, N.C., and friend Ron Dalton of Muncie, Ind.

Fans First has mailed about 1,000 letters to friends, fan groups and others urging a one-day fan strike.

Sullivan said fans need a way to express frustration at the prospect of a strike that could wipe out the baseball season, even as owners see the market value of their teams grow and players earn salaries in the millions.

Sullivan said he also doesn't want to see a strike end the Indians' first pennant race in decades.

In New York, Mark Isenman, Jeffrey Deutsch and Scott Sklarin last week formed "Strike 3, The Fans Are Out" with the same idea — a fans' no-show on Aug. 5. But on Tuesday, the two groups settled on the Aug. 13 date and pledged to back each others' efforts.

"Every fan in America that normally goes to a game, whether one game a year or 10, will be a part of history," said Isenman, a stockbroker.

The groups said they were not aware of any other organized anti-strike campaign.

"There may be others out there, too. The more the merrier," Sullivan said. "It would be just further evidence of a groundswell of loyal baseball fans out there who are fed up."

American League games Aug. 13 are scheduled in New York, Baltimore, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Kansas City and Oakland. National League games are scheduled in Miami, Colorado, Montreal, Atlanta, St. Louis, Los Angeles and San Diego.

"People are going to have to pick up the reins and do what works in each market," Sullivan said. "It could be a boycott, or a walkout during the game, or not going in until three innings have been played."

Officials at major league headquarters and the players' union in New York did not immediately return telephone calls seeking comment.

DNA test proves Coleman innocent

DETROIT (AP) — New Jersey Nets star Derrick Coleman will not be charged after being accused of rape by a woman who said he attacked her at a Detroit hotel.

DNA testing of semen found on the woman and her clothes showed conclusively that Coleman was not the source, Wayne County prosecutor John O'Hair said Tuesday.

Police chief Isaiah McKinnon said the case is closed and no charges will be pursued against the woman. But Harold MacDonald of Birmingham, Coleman's attorney and agent, said his client is considering a civil lawsuit against her.

"We want to draw a line in the sand," he said. "He's an individual. He has a reputation and you can't go after him like that. The problem is, you make the allegation, and it's a false allegation.

"Unfortunately, the allegation is out in the public. Somehow, the exoneration doesn't go as far. Anytime anybody wants to write about Derrick, they can say, 'alleged rapist.'"

Coleman, the NBA's highest paid player, signed a four-year, $30 million contract with the Nets last year,

The 22-year-old woman accused Coleman of raping her July 14 at the Westin Hotel in downtown Detroit. The woman said she met Coleman at a topless bar and they went to his hotel room. She said he made advances that she rejected and he raped her. She was found crying outside a police station the next morning.

Coleman, a 1986 graduate of Detroit Northern High School in town for a family reunion, consistently denied having any sexual contact with the woman.

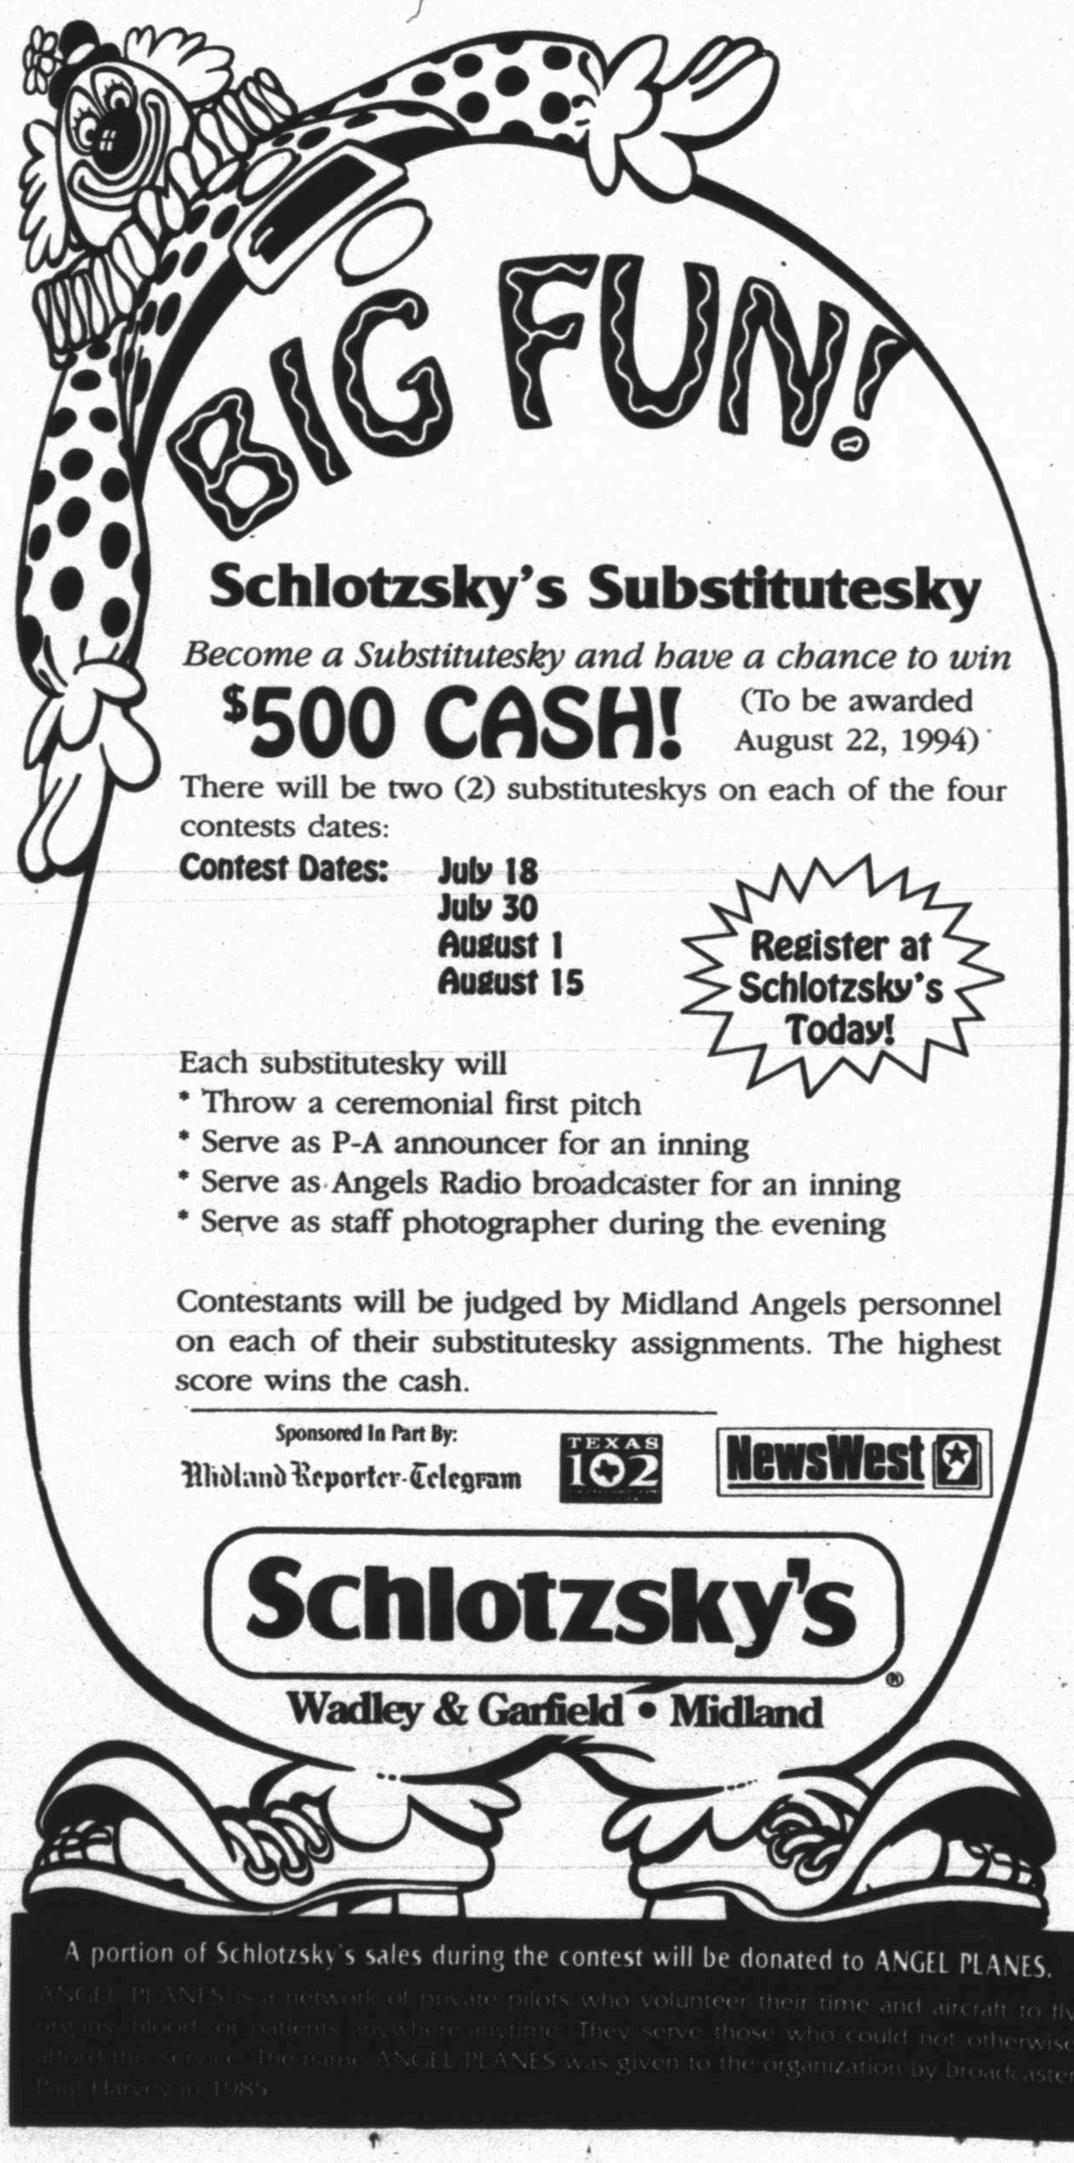

"Both statements given by the complainant and Coleman, on their face, appear credible and plausible, yet both cannot be true," O'Hair said. "There is clearly insufficient evidence to charge or successfully prosecute Derrick Coleman of any sexual assault upon the complainant."

O'Hair said the police investigation and circumstances surrounding the incident lead to reasonable doubt that rape occurred.

He said the DNA testing results were most important. In addition, the woman never alerted hotel security personnel that she was raped. When asked by hotel security personnel as she left if everything was all right, she said, "Yeah, thanks guys." O'Hair said no guests nearby heard cries for help and a search produced no physical evidence.

MacDonald said by telephone the news was "not surprising, but good."

"We knew a rape had not taken place. We knew consensual sex had not taken place. We were totally comfortable that he was innocent."

Southern League wants team from Puerto Rico

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Michael Jordan's bus wouldn't be able to get there. But that hasn't stopped the Southern League from proposing a minor league baseball team in Puerto Rico.

The Double-A circuit, which has teams ranging from Zebulon, N.C., to Memphis, Tenn., wants to put a franchise in Bayamon, a suburb of San Juan, Puerto Rico. If approved, other leagues no doubt will be looking southward to see the reception accorded a league from the U.S. mainland in an already fertile baseball market.

"The minute we look south, we're looking at a whole new world of opportunity," said David Hersh, who would manage the team at 14,000-seat Juan Ramon Loubriel Stadium. "It's kind of exciting to be on that cutting edge."

Will Puerto Rican fans scorn the teams from the mainland, preferring to maintain their loyalties with the island's winter league? Will they turn out in droves, prompting other Latin cities to seek out franchises in American leagues? Will Jordan stay with the Birmingham Barons another season so he can learn how to say strikeout in Spanish?

"The other leagues are all going to be watching us," said Southern League president Jimmy Bragan. "They're watching to see exactly how well received we are, whether or not we can be successful down there."

The Southern League proposal is far from certain — it still must be approved by the Puerto Rico Winter League, the National Association of Professional Baseball and Major League Baseball — and Bragan said it's only a one-year deal, with an option for another year.

But talk of this being a temporary move is only temporary.

Prices slump

West Texas Intermediate for September delivery fell 20 cents per barrel to $19.41.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $17.75 a barrel.

Uncertainty over the three-week oil workers strike prompted some selling Tuesday. Union leaders Tuesday were polling workers about continuing the strike, which started July 4 in an effort to oust the military government of Gen. Sani Abacha.

Also, there were forecasts that weekly inventory figures would show an increase. After the market closed, the American Petroleum Institute reported higher crude stockpiles.

Dollar slumps

NEW YORK — The dollar ended mostly lower against key currencies Tuesday in a second-consecutive session of lackluster dealings, with no significant new economic data or events giving direction to trading.

Gold prices advanced. On New York's Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery rose $2.20 to settle at $387.10 per troy ounce.

Other late dollar rates in New York compared with late Monday: 1.3455 Swiss francs, down from 1.3475; 5.4070 French francs, down from 5.4290; 1,585 Italian lire, up from 1,578; and 1.3793 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3778.

Stocks fall

Other popular market measures also declined. The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 0.48 to 250.24 and Standard & Poor's 500 stock index slid 0.89 to 453.36. The Nasdaq Stock Market composite index ended 1.22 lower at 715.66 while at the American Stock Exchange the market value index bucked the trend, rising 0.44 to 434.50.

Losers led gainers by about 5 to 4 on the Big Board where the trading pace remained sluggish. Volume on the NYSE floor came to 232.61 million shares, compared to 211.67 million Monday.

Industry sells, ships oil refineries

By David Ivanovich
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Alex Genin is shopping for a refinery.

He doesn't want a large one, maybe 50,000 barrels a day or so. He doesn't need a new one; a fixer-upper would do just fine.

And the neighborhood is no big concern, since Genin plans to purchase the refinery, pack it up and ship it to Estonia.

Genin, managing director of Houston's Eastern Credit Ltd., is helping the Baltic state select and buy a plant that could supply the fuel needs of Estonia's 1.6 million people.

As odd as that may sound, the notion of dismantling a mothballed refinery or chemical plant and sending it overseas is not new. A number of U.S. refineries have been shipped abroad, and more are on their way.

Houston-based Phibro Energy, for example, bought a huge Dow Chemical refinery in Freeport, Texas, last year. Company officials relocated some of the equipment to nearby Texas City, but sold a 200,000-barrel-a-day crude oil refinery, along with three other units, to South Korea's Hyundai Corp. The facility is being disassembled and will soon be steaming across the Pacific.

Louisiana Chemical Equipment Co. of Baton Rouge, La., recently shipped what was once the Jennings, La., refinery to Colombia. Kansas' United States Exploration has purchased refineries in Ingleside and Arnett, Okla., with plans to relocate them to the former Soviet republic of Kyrgystan.

"We've probably sold 25 plants over the last 10 years," said Steve Rotenberg, Louisiana Chemical general manager, who works in the company's La Porte, Texas, office. "We've sold them to India, China, South America, within the U.S., Canada — everywhere."

Used plant dealers such as Louisiana Chemical or Houston-based Ventech Engineers will help a buyer find the right refinery, ammonia plant or plastics operation.

The plant is then disassembled in a process known as matchmarking. Each piece of the refinery is given a number and dismantled. One of the more difficult — and costly — aspects of the job is the removal of the facility's piers from the ground. Sometimes those piers, laid in concrete, can be set 30 feet deep.

Once the facility is taken down, the smaller pieces are transported to the new location. There, a crew reconstructs the plant, using the matchmarking instructions.

"Used equipment is not bad equipment, we like to say," Rotenberg said. "Things are usually shut down because of economic reasons."

Equipment at shut-down refineries can be picked up for a song — typically less than 5 percent of the price of new equipment, officials at Houston-based Wright Killen Capital Services International said. But the transportation and refurbishment costs mount up quickly.

As a result, purchasing and moving an older refinery saves the buyer only about 20 percent of the cost of a new facility, said James A. Dudley, Wright Killen's managing director.

The biggest advantage to purchasing a second-hand refinery or chemical plant is time. A used facility can be packed up and moved in a matter of months. Ordering equipment and building a new plant can take more than three years.

N.Y. Times News Service

Microsoft Corp., fresh from a federal antitrust settlement that did little to curb its dominance of the business software market, is now hoping to conquer an emerging field where the company's computer-nerd skills may, or may not, give it an edge: electronic publishing.

Like many traditional paper-and-ink publishers, and many other software companies, Microsoft is busy acquiring information to fill CD-ROMs, shiny disks that look like music CDs but can each contain the equivalent of 250,000 pages of text for playback on personal computers. When done right, the technology can combine true-to-life video images, sound and animation in a multimedia package that both entertains and educates.

Although the market for consumer CD-ROM titles was only about $325 million last year, it is growing rapidly and is expected to reach $1 billion a year by the end of 1996.

But it is far from certain that Microsoft can ever dominate this new publishing market in the same way that it now leads in computer operating-system software and word processing programs. Unlike its earlier battles for emerging markets, this time the territory is less familiar to Microsoft.

"I don't think Microsoft will ever dominate the content business as thoroughly as they do the operating systems or word processing or spreadsheet businesses," said Charles H. Finnie, a multimedia analyst with Volpe, Welty & Co., an investment banker in San Francisco. "The content business is similar to the book or record business — where people want to buy a lot of different things from a lot of sources."

And yet, as the publishing industry turns increasingly to the computing medium, Microsoft brings considerable technical skills, deep pockets and a well-developed distribution system for getting its shrink-wrapped software onto retail shelves.

"Our goal is to combine great software with great information," said Patty Stonesifer, head of Microsoft's consumer division.

At Microsoft — the world's largest software company — CD-ROM publishing is still a relatively small market: in the 1993 calendar year, it accounted for $30 million of Microsoft's revenue; for the fiscal year that ended June 30, Microsoft reported $4.65 billion in total revenue.

Northwest, American cut fall air fares

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Northwest Airlines announced Tuesday that it is cutting fall fares up to 40 percent, matching an earlier announcement by American Airlines.

But Northwest is one-upping American, with the Minneapolis-based carrier saying it will donate $1 to charity for each ticket sold during the sale, up to $500,000.

American, based in Fort Worth, Texas, said Monday that its discounts, ranging from 30 percent to 40 percent, will continue until mid-December. The longer flights will receive the deepest cuts.

Northwest's sale is for travel in the U.S., Canada, Mexico, Hawaii, the Caribbean and several trans-Atlantic markets. Tickets must be purchased by Tuesday for travel between Aug. 15 and, on most routes, Dec. 14.

Company plans multi-sports complex

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The city of Midland on Tuesday accepted Extreme Sporting Innovations' bid for the former "Wild River Canyon" property at 4900 Princeton Ave.

The new Midland corporation plans to construct a multi-sport complex — Extreme Sports Center, which will feature inside and outside activities.

The complex, to be built on 31 acres of land, is expected to open next spring.

Partners in the project are Stephen Ochsner and Steve Selph — who will manage the complex — James Welty of Adventure Sports and Clothiers and Debbie Atwell.

The complex initially will employ eight people, including two International In-Line Skating Association instructors and professional rock climbing instructors.

Activities will be geared for all ages, with year-round in-line hockey leagues planned for both adults and children.

Adventure Sports & Clothiers will operate a full-service pro shop inside the complex. It will sell, service and rent in-line skates and equipment and arrange in-line skating lessons.

Memberships to the complex will be sold, but are not required.

Anti-oxidants boost

Skimping on anti-oxidants in your diet could dramatically boost your chances of developing rheumatoid arthritis. So suggests a new study from Finland.

Researchers followed 1,419 Finnish adults for 20 years. They noted that during that time, those who had low blood levels of three anti-oxidants — vitamin E, beta carotene and selenium — were more apt to develop rheumatoid arthritis.

To figure the risk, researchers combined the sums of these three anti-oxidants into what they called an "anti-oxidant index." The one-third of those with the lowest anti-oxidant index in their blood were eight times more likely to develop rheumatoid arthritis than the one-third with the highest anti-oxidant index.

The theory, researchers say, is that chemicals called oxygen free radicals trigger chronic inflammation that produces the pain, swelling and joint destruction typical of rheumatoid arthritis. Anti-oxidants such as vitamin E, beta carotene and selenium can neutralize these dangerous radicals before they cause damage.

Thus, people with low levels of anti-oxidants might not be as able to fend off the arthritis-inducing culprits.

Calcium advice

Sure, it's a good idea to get lots of calcium at all sges. But the best time to get the calcium that will protect you from brittle and broken bones in old age is when you are young — before age 25.

That's the advice from new studies and the experts.

For example, a new British study of 284 women ages 44 to 74 shows that those who drank the most milk before age 25 had the strongest bones of all types. And the more milk they had drunk when young, the thicker and denser their bones at middle and old age. Notably, early milk drinking was most critical in preventing later hip fractures.

Building strong bones when young is the most important way to ward off bone-thinning osteoporosis that will trigger more than 5 million fractures in the next decade, experts say.

That means people between ages 11 and 25 should take in from 1,200 to 1,500 milligrams of calcium per day. Most Americans get half that much.

Vitamins vs. cataracts

If you take a multivitamin pill, it might cut your chances of having cataracts by 27 percent. At least that was the outcome among a group of 17,744 male physicians older than 45, according to a new Harvard analysis.

The men are part of a long-term study, begun in 1982, to assess the value of aspirin and beta carotene in preventing cancer and heart disease.

However, at the beginning of the study, researchers asked the men whether they regularly took either a multivitamin or specific individual vitamins. A recent analysis of the data discovered that the multivitamin takers were only 73 percent as likely to develop cataracts years later.

Interestingly, taking vitamin C or E supplements alone or in addition to multivitamins did not reduce the risk of cataracts in this study, which is contrary to some other studies.

The researchers speculate that anti-oxidants in the multivitamins account for the protection, although other unknown components could also be responsible.

Medicine comes from both sides of border

By Sito Negron
Associated Press

CUIDAD JUAREZ, Mexico — Every day, U.S. residents can be found in the farmacias of Juarez, across the Rio Grande from El Paso. Some are searching for bargains. Others are trying to medicate themselves to wellness.

They head to the Juarez farmacias when they find themselves in need of antibiotics, blood pressure medicines or other drugs. No prescription is needed and the prices usually are cheaper than in the United States.

For whatever reason people buy medicine in Juarez, it's a border phenomenon that's been going on for years.

El Pasoan Lupe Maldonado said her grandmother shops for medicines in Juarez partly because "it's a bit of tradition."

She said her grandmother thinks Mexican medicines are superior to those bought in the United States: "She can get her medicine over here but sometimes she just thinks they're not working so she goes over there."

Although some Americans head to Juarez for cheaper prices, some Juarenses come to El Paso because they believe drugs available in the United States are of better quality.

"It works both ways," Mark Miles, manager of the El Paso Pharmaceutical Association, said. "There's people over there who feel they can get better quality over here, and people over here who feel they can get a better price over there.

"Does it (the two-way commerce) even out? I have no way of figuring," Miles said. In fact, nobody has a firm grasp on the cross-border medication traffic.

Dr. Laurance Nickey, director of the El Paso City-County Health and Environmental District, said his office is working with the El Paso and Texas pharmaceutical associations on establishing a grant through the El Paso Community Foundation to answer that question. "We need to define the issue because we know this occurs a great deal, (but) we don't know to what extent," Nickey said. "We don't have any real scientific proof. All we have are anecdotal situations. We really need to have hard proof and we'll attempt to do that."

Arturo Moreno, manager of Farmacia Benavides in the downtown Juarez Rio Grande Mall, estimates 15 percent of his clients are U.S. citizens. The pharmacy — with 10 stores, many well-placed to attract tourists — is part of one of the largest chains in Juarez. He said "there is no difference between the U.S. and Mexican medicine. The ingredients are the same."

His top sellers include items such as Rogaine, a hair-growth stimulant, and the wrinkle cream Retin A, $7 for a 30-gram tube: "Older ladies come in and will buy five or six of these at a time," Moreno said.

Researcher's work helps thwart some miscarriages

By Mark Fisher
N.Y. Times News Service

DAYTON, Ohio — Let me tell you what you've experienced, Neal Rote often tells a husband and wife who have had repeated pregnancies end in miscarriage.

Let me tell you about the stress this has put on your marriage. Let me tell you about the suffocating grief you've felt. Let me tell you about the bonehead comments from family and friends — you know, "It was for the best," or, "You can always have another one."

As a scientist whose research focuses on miscarriage, Rote is supposed to be detached, objective. But his is more than just a sympathetic ear. Rote knows the pain because he's lived it.

Rote, 48, and his wife had been trying to conceive for years. After turning to fertility treatments, his wife got pregnant and carried the child to full term. But on a visit to their doctor's office on April 5, 1989, Rote and his wife were told their unborn daughter was dead, apparently from the umbilical cord wrap-

New cancer center opens

Staff Report

ODESSA — The West Texas Cancer Center, a 28,000 square foot outpatient treatment facility of Texas Oncology, P.A., invites the public to meet the staff and tour the Center, located at 600 N. Grant, from 2-5 p.m. Sunday. Infromation and seminars on cancer prevention, detection and treatment will be provided and free refreshments will be offered.

The majority of cancer treatment is now performed on an out patient basis. With the opening of the West Texas Cancer Center, residents of the Permian Basin can receive complete cancer care, all within one facility, without having to travel far from home.

The West Texas Cancer Center was constructed as a full-service cancer center, with both chemotherapy and radiation therapy under one roof, including diagnostic, laboratory, pharmacy and support services, patient education and access to clinic research studies. Providing these services in a comfortable atmosphere, close to home, makes treatment more convenient for patients.

The seminar schedule for the West Texas Cancer Center open house is: 2:30-2:45 p.m. Joseph G. Kaczor, M.D., Radiation Oncologist will present "What is Radiantion Therapy?;" 3:30-3:45 p.m. Timothy K. George, M.D., Medical Oncologist will present "Coping with Cancer;' and 4:30-4:45 p.m. Pankaj Khandelwal, M.D., Medical Oncologist, will present "Chmeotherapy in the 90's."

New treatment for blood vessel defect

By Dr. Thomas S. Riles
Associated Press

An experimental device now being tested in a number of medical centers could lead to a dramatic change in the management of aortic aneurysms, a blood vessel defect that is responsible for the death of an estimated 15,000 Americans each year.

Aneurysms result from a weakening of the wall of a blood vessel. Under constant pressure from the internal blood flow, the aneurysm enlarges like a balloon and may eventually rupture.

When the aneurysm involves the aorta, the major blood vessel that carries blood from the heart through the chest and abdomen, rupture is often a catastrophic event, particularly for the elderly who are most afflicted with this disease.

The standard, medical treatment for aortic aneurysms over the last three decades has been surgical resection and replacement with a Dacron tube, a procedure developed in the 1950s. When performed electively in good risk patients, the operation is highly successful, but requires four to six weeks for recovery — one-two weeks in the hospital and three-four weeks at home.

The new technique currently under investigation still requires a Dacron tube to repair the weakened aorta. But instead of a major abdominal operation to access and replace the aneurysm, the new graft is threaded up into the aneurysm from a smaller artery in the groin. Once in position, the graft is fixed to the inside of the blood vessel with a wire stent. Although tightly folded when passed into the artery, the graft and stent are expanded and pressed into place with a balloon.

Without the need for the abdominal incision, patients have been able to ambulate the day after surgery and are discharged soon thereafter with minimal recovery. In some cases, this new technique has made aneurysm repair possible for patients who otherwise would not have been candidates for surgery because of other medical conditions.

Since its introduction by Dr. Juan Parodi, a vascular surgeon from Buenos Aires, Argentina, more than 100 patients have had repair of aortic aneurysms by this new "endovascular" technique. Several designs of grafts and delivery systems are currently under investigation.

However, the only device that has received Food and Drug Administration approval for clinical use for the elective patient is the Endograft, developed by a California-based company.

Although close to 50 Endografts have been implanted to date, the device is still considered experimental. Fifteen medical centers within the U.S. are cooperating in the study of this device, comparing the technique to conventional abdominal aortic surgery to determine if the endovascular procedure is as effective.

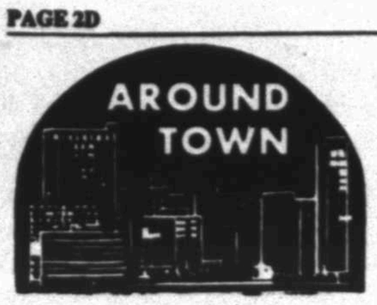

It is estimated that 1.7 million Americans have abdominal aneuryms, and each year more than 44,000 operations are performed for the repair of abdominal aortic aneurysms, with a mortality rate of 2 percent to 6 percent. If the endovascular repair proves to be as safe and as effective as conventional surgery, thousands of patients will benefit by treatment with less risk and lower cost.

First Alert, which manufactures a UL approved, battery operated carbon monoxide detector, says the deadly gas kills an estimated 1,500 people each year and injures thousands more. It is more dangerous to those with greater oxygen requirements, including unborn babies, infants, children, the elderly and those suffering from cardiac or respiratory problems.

DEAR ABBY

Spouse by any other name is sweetheart not to notice error

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Concerning widows and widowers who, after having been married for a long time, marry again: It is only natural to call their new spouses by the names of their former spouses.

Van Buren

My name is Barbara. I was happily married for more than 50 years to Fred. After Fred passed away, I married Frank, and I cannot count the number of times I have called Frank "Fred."

Frank had been married to a woman named Ethel for many years, and he has called me Ethel any number of times. Did I get angry? Heavens no! We made an agreement to just overlook it, and we get along very well.

We are both 81 and grateful that we found compatible mates the second time around. We also display pictures of our departed mates on the walls in the home we now occupy, and we both enjoy them. — BARBARA S., DELRAY BEACH, FLA.

DEAR BARBARA: You and Frank are two sensible people who are fortunate to have found each other. Most people who marry again after having lived many years with a former mate have experienced the embarrassment of calling their new mate the name of their previous mate; it's natural, and quite forgivable.

If they can both laugh about it, all the better. But do pay special attention while in the throes of ecstasy. "Oh, darling!" would be a good habit to form.

DEAR ABBY: I am an activity director at The Lakeview Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Terre Haute, Ind. Every morning, I read your column to my residents during coffee klatch time. They offer their comments on how they would respond to your readers' letters — then I read your response. Usually, both you and the residents think alike.

Recently there was a letter in your column about naked encounters. This reminded me of an encounter I had several years ago, which I shared with the residents. They asked me to submit it to you:

When my daughter was about 6 years old, we were camping with some friends. During shower time, my daughter, my friend, her granddaughter and I were taking showers in a large shower area. We were all exposed to one another but thought nothing of it. As we were drying ourselves, my daughter stopped, looked my friend up and down and said, "Carol, I didn't know you got your ears pierced!" — NAOMI GATES, RECREATION SERVICE MANAGER

DEAR ABBY: I'm responding to the letter from the mother of a Roman Catholic priest who complained about the way women chase after priests and ministers, embracing them with warm hugs.

We all need affection, and I would bet that they were probably married women who get little or no affection from their husbands unless they (the husbands) are after them for something else.

I was married to the same man for nine years, and rarely was I able to hug — or even touch him in a loving way — without him trying to get me to jump in the sack.

At least if you embrace a minister or priest, you have some assurance that you can embrace them "safely." — PRO-AFFECTION IN PORTLAND, ORE.

'Homemade' pizza is made from kit

By Linda Anderson

My children love pizza. I don't, but when I found a Contadina Pizza Kit, I knew I had to buy one for my children to try. And they didn't have to worry about me taste-testing it for them.

Anderson

A 21.5-ounce pizza kit containing a prebaked crust, pizza sauce, pepperoni and cheese cost $5 (actually two for $10 but why quibble). One without the pepperoni cost $4.50. That's quite a bit less than take-out or home delivered pizza from a restaurant.

Nutrition information claims that one serving — that's one-quarter of the pizza — contains 410 calories, with 160 of them from fat. It also contains 6 percent of the vitamin A, 2 percent of the vitamin C, 25 percent of the calcium and 8 percent of the iron suggested in the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance.

Label advertising on the back of the carton goes like this: "Everything You Need to Create A Great Tasting Family Meal in Minutes!"

In little, bitty print it says: "Contadina Pizza Kit uses only the finest ingredients and is freshness-dated to guarantee superior quality." Of course you know they all say that.

The company also includes a toll-free number for you to call if you have questions or comments — 1-800-727-0050. I always appreciate that, even if I never call.

Then it gives directions, and they really are easy. You spread the pizza sauce on the crust, sprinkle it with cheese and top with pepperoni slices. The you bake at about 425 degrees or until the "crust is crisp and cheese is melted and golden."

Oh, and it warns you not to microwave the product, but that's OK since baking it only takes eight to 10 minutes if the oven is preheated.

Well, as you might expect, the taste-test was a terrific success. My two taste-testers were joined by a young friend, and all three agreed that the pizza was "yummy." They, of course, have no problem with the idea of my buying the pizza kit again.

NEW: Treatment being developed

(From 1D)

Already physicians are looking to other applications of this new technology for repairing blood vessels from the inside. Not only are grafts being developed for repairing aneurysms in the chest and other locations, similar techniques are being used for traumatic injuries to arteries. What we are experiencing is a new era in the treatment of patients with vascular disease.

(From 1D)

Virtually all medicine sold in Mexico is made by U.S., British, German or Swiss multinationals based in Mexico, he said. To find out where it's made, look at the fine print on the box. The medicine may sound different because it often is sold under a generic name, Moreno said.

But he said most of his customers — senior citizens and young couples with children — already know what the medicine is and what it does and ask for it by the general name: "They always know what they're buying."

Moreno's customers include people from as far away as California and Colorado who are on vacation, as well as a steady stream of customers from El Paso and New Mexico. Often they buy several boxes of whatever they're looking for. Some say they're buying medicine for their neighbors, too, which is illegal if the drug is a prescribed medicine.

Customs officials say you can only bring over personal amounts of prescribed medicines, and you must have a prescription to show officials, even if the drug is available without a prescription in Mexico.

Barry Coleman of Coleman's pharmacy chain in El Paso said too often customs doesn't check people thoroughly enough: "It's a real problem and the government has not seen fit to address it."

He wants increased enforcement of laws regarding importation of prescription medicines because he feels if people are taking medicine without the benefit of a doctor or pharmacist's advice, it could be dangerous. But Arthur Pitt, port director for passenger processing with U.S. Customs Service in El Paso, said "the problem we have is trying to balance enforcement and facilitation.

"It could easily be in their pocketbook, wherever the drug is. We would back up the lines to Mexico City if we tried to stop every prescription drug."

El Pasoan Maldonado said she used to buy medicine in Juarez, just like her grandmother. But now that she has insurance, she said, she doesn't have to go over there for the cheaper prices.

"For myself, I have HMO, so I only pay $5 here for my medication. But I understand why a lot of people need penicillin or whatever, maybe it'll cost them a lot for the visit and the prescription here and so they just go over there," she said.

A 1992 report from Families USA Foundation found doctors' visits and medicine in Juarez can be anywhere from one-fourth to one-half the price in the United States. One reason the drugs are cheaper is because of the different approval process in Mexico.

"A lot of the research takes place in this country, and it takes a lot of dollars to get off the ground," Salvadore Balcorta, director of La Fe Clinic in South El Paso, said. Costs also include marketing and legal fees, which can bump up the cost even more, he said.

Terry Apodaca, 32, mother of three from El Paso's West Side who was shopping at Farmacia Benavides in east Juarez, said she buys most of her medicine in Mexican pharmacies. Pain killers are better than anything in the United States — especially headache relievers, Apodaca said. She was buying some kind of antibiotic for her husband's toothache.

"My husband just won't go to the dentist unless it's absolutely necessary. He says he can't miss work. This medicine (Pentryxl) gets rid of the infection and the pain. If it doesn't work, then we know we have to see the dentist. But if we don't have to go and it gets rid of the pain, then we save ourselves some money," Apodaca said. She spent $5.

Experts don't expect the North American Free Trade Agreement to change the situation anytime soon. The agreement has had no effect up to now on either demand or prices of Mexican medicine, Mexican pharmacist Moreno said.

U.S. rules regarding medicine remain different from those in Mexico, and there's no sign that's changing. "Many medicines are not approved for sale in the U.S.," Pete Araujo, a customs broker and president of Abaco Customs House Brokers Inc., said. "We have not been confronted or asked to handle the pharmaceutical line. I don't believe pharmaceuticals will be any different than they are today."

But Miles of the El Paso Pharmaceutical Association thinks that some day, perhaps decades from now, things may change: "Changes there will be quite a ways down the line, and I imagine binational committees have to be formed to solve the problems and then make recommendations to both nations."

El Paso Times reporters Carlos Hamann and Emily Jauregui contributed to this report.

WORK: Scientist's personal experience fuels research

wrapping around her neck.

Rote threw himself into his research with renewed intensity and, today, he seeks the causes and treatments for repeated miscarriages and related afflictions in his position as chairman of Wright State University's Department of Microbiology and Immunology.

The nature of his work "attacks (our) grief a little bit," he said. So does his wife's part-time work as a pediatric home-health nurse for Children's Medical Center.

Rote's research team has helped develop treatments for women whose recurrent miscarriages — three or more consecutive pregnancy losses — were caused by an auto-immune disease.

THE EFFECT OF "antiphospholipid antibody syndrome" is fiendish: A pregnant woman's body turns against her child in the womb. Nearly 19 out of 20 pregnancies to women with the syndrome end in miscarriage.

But, with the treatment Rote and his team helped to develop, at least three Miami Valley women with the disease have given birth to healthy babies. Rote said there may be dozens more in the Dayton area who could benefit.

Rote's team was the first to identify that for some women who suffer from repeated miscarriages, an antibody or group of antibodies in the mother's blood attacks the placenta, preventing it from growing and cutting off nourishment to the fetus.

Those few women who have the auto-immune disease and do give birth often have babies with low birth weights. And the mothers often suffer from dangerously high blood pressure, fluid retention and possible neurological problems during pregnancy.

The WSU team has helped make it easier to diagnose the disease. And it has helped to develop a treatment in which the pregnant mothers are given small doses of aspirin in combination with the blood thinner heparin, or with prednisone, which suppresses the immune system and is often given to kidney-transplant patients to keep their bodies from rejecting the new organ.

THE TREATMENT HAS no effect on women whose repeated miscarriages are caused by hormonal, anatomical or unrelated immune-system problems.

But, for those with the auto-immune disease, the treatment can work near-miracles. Two women Rote treated before he came to WSU had lost 10 pregnancies between them; both had healthy children with the therapy.

Rote said the availability of the treatment is not widely known among obstetricians. He has spread the word among local physicians and to physicians-in-training at WSU's medical school, where he teaches.

The research has been documented in medical journals, such as the American Journal of Reproductive Immunology and Immunology of Reproduction. In September, Rote and several of his students will present their work at a conference in Brussels.

Rote brought the miscarriage research with him when he came to Wright State from the University of Southern Maine in 1990. The project brings about $280,000 a year to the university in research money, most of it from the National Institutes of Health, which has funded Rote's research for more than eight years.

The reproductive immunologist — "I'm not a physician, I'm a basic scientist," he says — first launched his research specialty during a nine-year tenure at the University of Utah, long before his own experience with pregnancy loss.

DOCTORS AT THE time thought the antibodies were causing blood clots that blocked the flow of blood and nutrients to the placenta. Rote and his colleagues found that wasn't the case and began focusing on auto-immune diseases.

Rote learned of a New Zealand research team that treated pregnant women with aspirin and prednisone. Rote and his team performed a similar study in Utah that met with similar success rates, but prednisone has side effects, such as making patients more likely to retain water and develop infections.

After taking the job in Maine in 1987, Rote launched a study, treating women with aspirin and heparin. The combination proved just as effective in preventing miscarriage, with healthier babies and fewer problems for the mother during pregnancy.

Even though researchers have found a treatment, they have a long way to go to fully understand how the disease works and how the aspirin/heparin remedy protects the placenta from the scourges of the wayward antibodies.

The focus of Rote's WSU research is shifting toward more accurately diagnosing the auto-immune disease, fine-tuning the aspirin/heparin therapy and making the treatment options available to more women.

And the work is expanding. The team is looking into how the antibodies react in areas of the brain, sometimes causing strokes, dementia, blurry vision or other nerve problems. The researchers also are examining the role antibodies and the placenta play in protecting, or failing to protect, babies born to mothers with the AIDS virus.

For more information about the research, call 513-873-2996.

DRUG FREE YOUTH D-FY-IT IN TEXAS

D-FY-IT (Drug Free Youth in Texas) is a voluntary drug testing program that rewards students for being "drug free". For students to join the program they must voluntarily agree to a urinalysis test, and then subject themselves to retesting whenever their names are randomly selected. The urinalysis detects amphetamines, cocaine and marijuana. All testing is confidential, and test results are not reported to the police. A student who has a positive drug test is given confidential counseling by certified counselors who work with the program. This is done to keep that student in the program through counseling and further drug testing. Parents are Not notified when a student tests positive.

Once a student tests "clean", he/she receives a D-FY-IT identification card that entitles them to discounts from local businesses and admission to various D-FY-IT sponsored events such as dances and concerts. At this time, over 60 businesses in Midland are giving discounts to D-FY-IT members. The cards can also be used in surrounding towns that have the D-FY-IT program.

FOR MORE INFORMATION ABOUT D-FY-IT OF MIDLAND, CONTACT JOAN JOHNSON AT 685-7126 OR 694-0937

Membership Application

D-FY-IT utilizes a simple urinalysis test. The student will be notified to come to a designated place and give a urine sample. To keep the student's identity confidential, his/her school ID number will be placed on the sample bottle. The actual test will be performed by Harrison Laboratories or Allied Clinical Laboratories. One test will be made on the sample. This test will detect marijuana, amphetamines, cocaine and alcohol. Should the test come back positive, a second test will be performed to confirm the first test.

All students testing "negative" (i.e., drug-free) will be notified and presented with a D-FY-IT card that entitles them to the rewards of the program.

In the event a student's sample is positive, the designated D-FY-IT representative and the student will be notified privately of these test results. The primary purpose of this program is to rid students of drug use. Testing of drugs or narcotics in the student's system is in no way an investigative tool of a law enforcement agency. Positive results wil not result in criminal prosecution. It is the ultimate goal of D-FY-IT to abolish drug abuse instead of prosecuting.

Students will be periodically re-tested to maintain the integrity of the program. Re-testing will be done on a random basis and will not be announced in advance.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

Take Note Of This

Summer's end is just around the corner and it's time to start making arrangements for education and care of Midland's children. To assist you with information on where education and care is available, the Midland Reporter-Telegram is publishing it's annual Children's Education and Child Care Directory on Sunday, August 7th.

This Directory is a vehicle used to reach parents with information about the services that are available in the Midland area and who provides them. The parents of children in the Midland area have come to rely on this directory as a guide to quality education and care. This section focuses on the basic "who, what, where and when" of quality education and care in our area.

As a provider of these services in the Midland area, you will want your facility represented in this special Directory with an ad, as well as a story, photo and a dot on the map showing where you are located.

Deadline for Children's Education and Child Care Directory is Thursday, July 28th. To reserve your ad space, please call
