South Wind Helps Firemen In Saving Residences At Elliott

ELECTRA, Nov. 29.—The business section of the Elliott community, 17 miles northwest of Electra was almost wiped from the map by fire early Sunday morning. The blaze started from the back-firig nof a gasoline engine in a filling station.

The General Merchandise store, filling station and supply store owned by the Dockey Bros. Mercantile company were completely destroyed. Loss on merchandise in General store $7,500, loss on building $1,500, loss on contents of filling station $1,500, loss on building $1,500. They carried $3,600 insurance. The total loss was $12,000.

The Electra fire department was summoned at 9:15 and responded with the combination chemical and pumper engine and ten firemen with C. A. Jones, assistant chief, in charge. They made the 17 miles over country roads in 30 minutes and spent one hour and 30 minutes fighting the flames.

Some water was pumped from two small wells and heroic work was done in keeping the flames out of the cotton yard across the street from the fire. The Vernon fire department responded with a chemical truck the other fire equipment being caled out to a fire in that city. The wind being from the south aided in saving the residences of Elliott.

T. E. Birchfield, a cotton buyer of Elliott told C. A. Jones that a substantial purse would be made up for the Electra fire department with him heading the list with a donation of fifty dollars.

Didn't Print all of Governor's Rum Proclamation, — Jim Claims

STOPS INTERVIEWS

Demands That Newspapers Learn to "Play Fair" With Administration

AUSTIN, Nov. 2—(AP)—Three hundred thousand dollars have been under written for a special session of the legislature in Texas, reports circulated here state, confirming the recent statement by Speaker of the house of representatives, Lee Satterwhite, that an extra session has been assured and underwritten.

Will C. Hogg of Houston, eldest son of the late James Stephens Hogg, governor of Texas is said to be one of the prime movers in raising the money, has secured $100,000 from south Texas and $200,000 from north Texas is being concentrated at an anti ku klux klan headquarters in Dallas, center of anti-administration forces.

In event Gov. Ferguson does not call a special session by December 10, as petitioned, it is the plan of special session advocates, and Speaker Satterwhite to call the special session December 15, for January 4, 1926, as the speaker has been petitioned by 78 members of the legislature. If the speaker calls the session it can be only for investigation with impeachment proceedings in view, and the legislature without power to appropriate itself funds on which to do business. Thus, the $300,000 fund has been reported underwritten.

Ferguson Silent.

Former Gov. James E. Ferguson, husband of the woman chief executive, had no comment today to make on the present political situation in Texas, but said he is "sore at you newspaper men for not carrying all the proclamation of Gov. Ferguson Saturday," offering $500 rewards for convictions of wealthy liquor law violators in Texas.

The conversation was over the private telephone wire in the governor's executive chambers. He said he understood that an agreement had been reached between newspaper men to suppress portions of the governor's proclamation, that referred to certain unnamed but easily identified men and "I believe I'll stop granting interviews to Texas newspaper men until their newspapers learn how to play fair."

Former Gov. Ferguson was informed that no agreement was thought of and the portions excluded from the proclamation evidentl ywere considered dangerous.

Divert Attention.

The proclamation requested authorities to enforce the liquor laws of the state against rich as well as poor people. It was considered, by political sages in the capital, to be a master stroke by the governor in the present political crisis caused by the state highway embroglio, and demands of members of the legislature for a special session of the legislature.

Not only did the liquor proclamation divert attention from rumors of possible impeachment proceedings and detract from the report of the Travis county grand jury made Saturday, but it brought to the recollection of many Texans, that the former governor and his family have always maintained impeccable temperances. The former governor never uses tobacco or liquor, and swears only occasionally.

No comment was available at the governor's mansion tonight on the arrest of her butler for alleged violation of the liquor law.

THE WEATHER

"I was lucky today. Grandma was here an' Skinny almost heard her call me 'darling,' but didn't."

LYRICS OF LIFE.
By Douglas Malloch.
Only a House.

Only a house beneath the hill
That sets the sky a-glow,
A house that burns, as houses will—
"I thought at first, you know,
It maybe was the cotton mill;
It's just a house beneath the hill.

"For, if it were the mill that burned
A hundred men would fret,
Tomorrow if no spindles turned
A hundred would regret;
But now we need not be concerned—
It only was a house that burned."

But someone's loss is very great,
And someone's heart is sore,
And someone lingers at the gate,
The gate that leads no more
Where chair and book and table wait—
Ah, someone's loss is very great.

Love labored here and fashioned things
That money could not buy
A woman fashions while she sings,
Now red against the sky;
And what insurance ever brings
Us back the most-remembered things!

This was the house where Father died,
And here our John was born,
And Mary Jane became a bride
One early April morn;
A house, yet something more beside;
This was the house where Father died.

"Only a house beneath the hill";
I pray you, say not so.
You do not know what treasures fill
Say not again, as some folks will,
"Only a house beneath the hill."

NEGRO SERVANT IN MANSION IS UNDER ARREST

Offered To Sell Liquor To White Men, Is Charge

SMASHED A BOTTLE

Threw Two To The Pavement, But Only One Broke

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 2—(AP)—A charge of possessing liquor for sale was filed today against George Brady, negro butler at the governor's mansion here. Another negro, in whose automobile officers found 17 half pints of whisky, also being held in jail, although no charge has been filed against him. Brady and Jackson were arrested late Saturday.

Officers who made the arrests say they saw Brady, standing on a corner frequented by negroes, offer to sell liquor to several white men.

Tried To Break Bottles

J. Arthur Woody, deputy constable, said when he started to arrest Brady the negro threw two bottles to the pavement. One smashed, but the other, filled with liquor, was unharmed.

The automobile in which the liquor was found was parked a short distance from where officers saw Brady was offering the liquor for sale. The owner of the car was arrested when he came from a nearby restaurant and entered his automobile.

Once Doomed To Die

Brady told newspaper men he was sentenced to hang in Bexar county for murder of a white woman named Carrie Staule, and that January 3, 1918, his sentence had been commuted by Gov. W. P. Hobby just a few hours before the hour set for his execution. A short time later, he said he was paroled by Gov. Hobby to serve as cook at Sam Houston State Teacher's college at Huntsville.

Ma Extended Parole

The negro said Gov. Pat Neff in 1923 revoked his parole "on general principles," but September 3, 1925, gave him a furlough and brought him to the governor's mansion. He said when Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson was inaugurated January 20, she extended his parole for five months and later granted him a conditional pardon.

Like Paul, Prosecutor In Jail Preaches Gospel From Behind the Bars

McCraw, assistant district attorney of Dallas county, prisoner in the county jail on a three-day sentence for contempt of court, this morning told the story of Paul's appearing as a prisoner before Agrippa, to his Sunday school in the jail chapel. More than 150 persons, including many visitors and county officials, filled all the bare wooden benches and lined the gray prison walls.

Mr. McCraw's declaration that, "if my incarceration shall bring one man to Christ, it shall not have been in vain," came true when Kal Segrist, a visitor, first baseman of the Dallas Baseball club, pledged himself to active work in the Boethian class of the Cliff Temple Baptist church.

McCraw was sent to jail Saturday night after failing to have a contempt order of Judge Felix D. Robertson set aside in appeal. McCraw outlined the story of Paul before the Roman government, including Felix and Festus.

Judge John Kay's Address Before Bible Class at Strand Yesterday

Judge John Kay yesterday spoke on sensitiveness to the Kay Bible class at Strand theatre. The full text of his lecture follows:

For a little subject this morning, I want to speak to you, for a moment, about being sensitive. You know, when I started out in life as a young lawyer, when I would hear some fellow over on Dry Creek had been saying something ugly about me, I thought it would ruin me; ruin my business. But, I have reached the time of life, now, where I would be very sorry to learn that there was nobody in the community "knocking" me. You mustn't go out with your feelings on the end of your elbow, to catch on every briar that you pass.

When Will Rogers was here, my good friend Ed. Howard, with all the caution of an old-time editor, said: "Will, how is it that you roast these famous men and kid them so much, are you not afraid to do it?" And Rogers said: "No, that's easy. All I have got to do is to be careful not to kid a little man." Now, you just take that home with you, and think about it tonight after supper, about being sensitive.

Too Sensitive.

An Irishman found me friend on the street one day. They were both bricklayers. He had his arm tied up, was limping and his face was torn. He said: "Mike what is the matter with you that you are not working!" Mike said: "Well, I fell off of a fourth-story scaffold day before yesterday, and I got mad and quit." He said: "Why, go on back to work. You are too sensitive."

Now, let's lay that aside. I never took a vote here in my life. You know, there are so few propositions that the preachers make that I can conscientiously hold my hand up on. But, I am going to take one this morning. How many here will say that hereafter they will try not to be self-conscious and sensitive. (unanimous).

Cites Paul's Incident.

No. St. Paul was carried up before a minor Roman official, then to a somewhat greater Roman official, and, finally, to King Agrippa, getting us more as he goes along before these different judges and governors, and kings. As he goes upward in the scale, he comes more nearly to men of his own size, so he makes a wonderful speech before Agrippa. He said but little before Festus, and still less before Felix, but, when he comes to Agrippa, he packs as much in one speech as you ever heard packed into that much space. He had already appealed to Rome, to Caesar.

You know, the old-time Methodist and it is sometimes valuable that we should look back and think about what our fathers wrote and believed, the old-time Methodists believed that everything worked out for good. That was one of his cardinal doctrines, that whatever happens, happens for the best. Do you know what I think was the reason that Paul appealed to Caesar? Because he knew that no great propaganda, no great gospel, no great advertising campaign, could ever flow out into the world from an exclusive, narrow people like the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

I wonder if a man that wanted to do something big, and famous, something for the world, and something worth while, would be willing to pick Wichita Falls as a place to start his campaign. Are there enough big men, enough broad men, enough righteous men, here? So that a man like Paul would say: "This, even here in Wichita Falls, is a good place to begin my great campaign." Would he! Could he!

Why Paul Went to Caesar

So, they offered Paul freedom. He was standing there in chains, and this king said: "If this man had not appealed to Caesar, he could be set at liberty. He has done nothing worthy of death or of bonds." But, Paul doesn't withdraw his appeal, but goes on to Caesar. Why!

Ah, he knew the Sadducees, Pharisees, and the High Priest in Jerusalem. He knew the tradition of the elders. He knew the hair-splitting theology that existed about the temple, and he knew that it was an empty shell.

Now, the Jews had no word for missionary. Think about what is involved in that. But, westward, far off to the west there was a Rome that had a word for missionary and the Roman people were missionaries in government, and missionaries in military matters, and missionaries in civilization, and missionaries in teaching, and they had come out to capture, and had captured the world.

Would Not Scrap Ships.

You know, I am a believer in peace. There is nothing in reason that I wouldn't do to bring about a world-wide peace, insofar as I may be able to do anything, but, hear me when I say to you that I am not one who would ever sink one of our battleships, and I think that our army ought to be two or three times as large as it is, because this great, fine, wonderful land that we have is worth protecting.

Rome was a country of broad vision,—a wonderful vision. Their soldiers had marched among the laurel on the Orontes. They had marched among the desert sands to the east and met the camels laden with spices. They had come into the frozen north and contended with men that were wearing furs. They had come up the River Nile and watched the red colonnade of a much older civilization. They were a people with a world vision, and I think that that is the reason, and the only reason, that Paul went there, even if he had to go in chains. Now, was he in chains? Is a man in chains simply because a chain is around his wrist? It was only the physical Paul that was in bonds. Byron knew what he was writing about, when he said:

"Eternal spirit of the chainless mind
Brightest in dungeons thou art."

And, notwithstanding that he was a prisoner, and in bonds, Agrippa recognized him as a great man. Everybody did. Do people recognize you as a good man everywhere? Do they? I was talking about people talking about me. I don't care how much of that I suffer with, as long as they don't tell the truth. I will tell you the kind of a fellow that I don't like to talk about me. He is the fellow that gets him a little bunch together and says: "Old John Kay don't finish what he starts." "If he don't live up to his religion." "When he goes off down to Galveston, he doesn't behave like he does here in Wichita Falls." "He doesn't pray enough and he doesn't work enough." That is the kind of a fellow that I don't want "knocking" on me, do you!

Ear Marks of Little Man.

Are you such a man that a foreign soldier, a foreign governor, the minute that he saw your face would recognize you as a good man? Every one of these Roman officers that had to deal with Paul recognized that fact. Now, why did they? I think it was because Paul wasn't whining. Do you know one of the earmarks of a little man? "My cow died and I never can get started off any more." "I had to pay another fellow's note that I signed for $15, down here, year before last." "People are talking about me." "The more I work, the worse behind I get." Here was a man, educated, aristocratic strong, and he didn't say: "Arrippa the have had me in jail. They have got the handcuff about my wrist. They are taying to mob me up at Jerusalem. They beat me with sticks." But, he stood in the presence of that great Roman and said: "My Lord is risen." Forgot all about himself! Forgot himself! "My Lord is risen." Ah, if we could get beyond the contemplation of ourselves,—our little, narrow selves. Paul's mission in life, and his great goal in life, was to advertise,—not himself,—but his Lord. And, when he stood among the ignorant, the vicious, or the wise and the good everywhere, they heard him, and respected him.

To Become Famous.

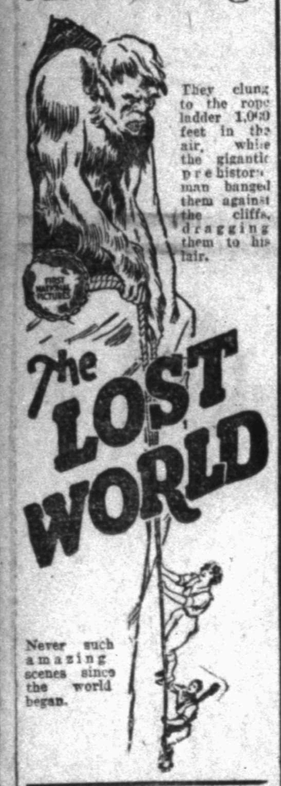

The finest man in this community, or in any community, is that man who doesn't devote all of his effort to his own welfare; trying to get rich; trying to get famous; trying to do this, that and the other. The best way to become famous—the best way to become great—is to kneel before you the wonder off the salvation of your Lord, and to keep diligently before you the welfare of your neighbor. Then and only then, will men say that: "This community was blest because such a man lived among us."

If Paul hadn't come to Rome, it may be that you would never have heard of a risen Lord and a Christian religion. I don't know. But, the Latin language was breaking up. It had already been carried into England, and France, and Germany, and all of the arteries of life, and of commerce, and of government, carried the blood of Rome out to the ends of the earth, and it was from there that Paul put out his advertisement, and his gospel and his news that rescued you and reached me also.

SPORTING NEWS — THE RECORD NEWS — FIRST ACCURATE COMPLETE

INDIAN RANKS WILL BE SHOT IN '26 SEASON

Wealth of Gridiron Stars Won't Answer Call Next Year

With the football season over Wichita Falls junior college athletes are turning to basketball. However, cage practice proper probably will not start before next week, according to Coach Bubs Mosley.

The Indians carried through a fairly successful season considering the fact it was the first in the junior college conference and the second season the Tribe put a team into the field.

The Mosley outfit lost four game, won three and tied two. The team was a good drawing card in Wichita Falls.

Mosley will have but a small number of veterans in 1926 as a nucleus to build on. Captain John Clary, Paul Karns, Roscoe Burks, Skinny Crites, Dummy Deems, Doyle Stephenson and Fred Datson are the regulars expected back next year. Steve West, Evan Harris, Jack Thurman, Ray Hirschi and Curtis Beaty have played their limit with the Indians. These lads will be missed sorely.

There is talk about the school of many other men quitting at the middle of the year, and if this takes the cut through the ranks Coach Mosley may be forced to form an almost entire new team.

Cummins Returns

Robert Cummings, who was injured in the Vernon game and was forced out for the rest of the season, plans on returning next year as strong as ever. Robert was a great lover of the game and with a heart set on lettering this year, but the injury in the first game put a stop to this ambition.

This year the club as a whole was one that sometimes played great ball and on other occasions became somewhat erratic. The Decatur contest was a good example of this. They played a very listless game in this encounter and the score, 46-0 Decatur, shows the result.

The club took one of the hardest schedules ever played in this section of the country. On a Saturday they met the John Tarleton Plowboys and were given a bad drubbing by the heavy Stephenville team. On the next Wednesday they played the McMurray college eleven to a 13 to 13 tie. McMurray was not in the junior college conference, but was a four-year college. The following Saturday they returned home and administered a 21 to 13 defeat to Weatherford.

The club failed to make the money that the high school made this year, but their season was far from being a failure. They played great ball all year and drew fair crowds. They seemed to get off slow at the start of the season, but have steadily climbed to the peak of the ladder.

In their first game the Indians invaded the Lion lair at Vernon. The heavy artillery of the Lions opened on a then loosely organized team and won 48 to 0.

The next game they played on the home lot and were defeated by the Clarendon college eleven by the score of 25 to 6. This was followed with a 6 to 6 tie with the Cameron Aggies.

Beat N. T. A. C.

Another practice game with the Quanah high school before they took on their first conference rival, North Texas Aggies, was a victory in more than one way. The 21 to 0 score and the uncovering of Doyle Stephenson was the big factor of this win. Then came that game with the N. T. A. C. when the great toe of the bandaged captain, John Clary, wrested a one-point victory from the visiting team. The score was 14 to 13.

Close on the heels of this game came the hardest schedule ever gone through by a Wichita Falls school. The Decature game last Thursday closed the season over the Maroon and Gold machine. The fans may get a chance to see a goodly number of these men back next year, but this is very doubtful.

The punting by skyscraper Crites, the plunging by Curtis Beaty, the passing of Jack Thurman, and the great playing of the other men will be greatly missed next year when the college swings into its third football season.

Both Dummy Deems and Jack Thurman played great ball at quarterback. Stephenson, West and Datson had a great year in the backfield, while Curtis Beaty stood out with his consistent line plunging.

Captain John Clary, Charles Weeth, Roscoe Burks, Paul Karns, Willie Saunders, Ray Hirschi, Crites and Evan Harris formed a great line for the Redskins and should be given their full amount of honors. Clary was also a shining light with his extra point kicking as well as at backing up the line on the defense.

All in all the Maroon and Gold had a very successful season.

Frank Elliott Sets 250-Mile Record

CULVER CITY, Cal., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Frank Elliott established a new world's record in winning the 250-mile classic of the National American Automobile association race here today. Four other records were broken. Elliott set a new mark of 127.81 miles an hour for the distance. Earl Cooper, who led up to the 185th lap when he ran out of gasoline, broke four records before he retired.

NOSKA WIRES HE'LL BE HERE THIS MORNING

Santel Works With Rosy Richardson's College Squad

Paul Noska, Chicago heavyweight who meets Ad Santel in a finish match Tuesday night at the Majestic theatre as the feature event of the Wichita Falls wrestling association card, wired yesterday, said Match-maker Ross, that he expects to arrive in Wichita Falls this morning.

Noska probably will workout at the Majestic theatre this afternoon.

Santel took a light exercise yesterday afternoon with Rosy Richardson's junior college wrestling team.

An hour or so was devoted by Santel to showing the amateurs various scientific angles of the game. He gave instruction in a number of holds and how to block them.

The college squad will work with Santel again this afternoon, it is understood. The light heavy champ intends to don his tights about 3 o'clock.

Jack Brewster of Olney who wrestles Charley Mason as preliminary to the Santel-Noska match will arrive tomorrow, said Ross. Brewster is rated as one of the best men in the game at his weight. Incidently, he will outweigh Mason several pounds.

The executive committee of the league will rule Monday on Caraway's eligibility. Should he be found ineligible, his team, one of the 13 now in the running for the state high school championship, would be eliminated.

1925 Moleskin Race Noted for Major Upsets

Oberlander of Dartmouth Eclipsed Performance Of Grange

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The 1925 football season, chiefly notable for the unprecedented number and character of its upsets in the ranks of major colleges throughout the country, has come to a spectacular close.

The army's triumph over the navy in their "air controversy" at the Polo Grounds yesterday not only supplied a brilliant closing spectacle, but furnished a flittingly sensational climax to a gridiron campaign, which besides witnessing the downfall of champions and contenders alike in a startling parade of form reversals, also saw the establishment of new attendance records, viewed the revolutionary development of the forward pass by such great elevens as Dartmouth, Princeton and Michigan, and glimpsed the "galloping ghost" of Illinois, Red Grange, as he passed from the intercollegiate picture with as remarkable a record as any individual has ever known.

Grange A Victim.

Grange himself was a victim of the general "overtrowing" tendency for the famous red head was stopped abruptly on several notable occasions, although he left convincing proof of his ability on the fields against Iowa, Pennsylvania and Ohio State before turning professional.

Grange was the leading "gate attraction" of the fall and Red's drawing powers were responsible for the season's next to highest single game attendance of 85,500 in Ohio State's stadium at Columbus. All told it was figured that Grange played before an aggregate throng of 371,000 during his final season and approximately three quarters of a million during his three year course.

Grange's explosits were the most keenly watched of any throughout the season, but the big majority of critics agree that the Illinois star did not measure up to the brilliant individual consistency of Andy (Swede) Oberlander, blocky Dartmouth halfback whose work was chiefly responsible for lifting the big green eleven to a premier position in the East and general recognition as the country's outstanding team.

Big Green Real Champ.

Dartmouth, with Oberlander's passing a strong factor in many victories not only established Eastern supremacy by conquering Harvard, Cornell and Brown by decisive margins, but wound up a sensational season by swamping Chicago in one of the season's outstanding intersectional frays.

Michigan in the middle-west, Alabama in the South and the University of Wasington in the far West sared recognition with Dartmouth as the foremost combinations developed during the fall, btu the Big Green outfit generally is selected as the successor to Notre Dame in possessing claims for national honors.

13 Teams Left in Texas High Football Drive

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Of the more than 300 elevens that started in the race for the high school football championship of Texas, only 13 are now in the running, Roy B. Henderson, athletic director of the Texas university interscholastic league, said today. By the end of the week, the contenders will be reduced to ejther seven or six. The executive committee of the league is expected Monday to pass finally on eligibility of Sherman high school. Should Serman be ruled out, by end of the week the number would be reduced to six.

Six games have been scheduled for this week. Amarillo will play Cisco; Cleburne takes on Graham; Coach Paul Tyson's Waco Tigers play San Antonio Brackenridge high; Itasca meets Bryan; Beaumont plays Rogstown; and Dallas Forest Avenue will play Sherman or Marshall. Should Sherman be ruled ineligible, Forest Avenue will play Marshall.

Each of the six games is expected to be desperately fought and decided by a narrow margin.

A total of not less than 20,000 people are expected to see the games. Bryan meets Itasca at Itasca Tuesday; the Waco San Antonio Brackenridge encounter will take place Wednesday at Waco; and Amarillo plays Cisco at Cisco Friday.

One of the best played games of Texas high school grid history is expected to be played between San Antonio Brackenridge and Waco. Both coach Bobby Cannon of the San Antonio school and Coach Tyson of Waco have fashioned splendid elevens. Waco probably boasts more smooth team play; but the individual brilliancy of such San Antonio stars as Capt. Rees, Friery, and Fenner should balance Waco's team play superiority.

Some of the results of last week follow:

Marshall 25, Athens 0; Waco 122, Brady 0; Amarillo 32, Memphis 14; Cisco 70, Colorado 0; Graham 6, Dallas Highland Park 0; Cleburne 24, Fort Worth Central 6; Beaumont 32, Fort Arthur 0; Forest Avenue 28, North Dallas 0; Brackenridge 56, Fredericksburg 0.

Grange Gets Away Better in Second Professional Tiff

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Harold (Red) Grange, making his second appearance as a professional football player, today "did his stuff" on a snow covered gridiron, helping the Chicago Bears defeat the Columbus Tigers, 14 to 13, while 29,000 fans shouted their approval.

Aside from experiencing his first professional football victory, Grange was also able to win almost twice as much yardage as he did in the tie game on Thanksgiving day with the Chicago Cardinals.

Last week he won a total of 199 yards, and today he carried the ball 18 times for a gain of 138 yards and from scrimmage advanced the ball 78 yards.

His scrimmage gains varied from 1 to 36 yards and once he was thrown for a one-yard loss. He shot four forward passes, two being completed, and paving the way for his team's two toughdowns. One of them, Grange to Walquist, was completed for 23 yards and his team's first touchdown, although he made no score himself.

He was on the receiving end of two forward tosses and one one of them raced forty yards; went down with a thump and dropped the ball. Twice he received punts, once, going back 36 yards before being downed.

Burnett's Book Is Topic of Datson

Francis Hodgson Burnett's "Dawn of a Tomorrow" was the novel chosen by Rev. Fred T. Datson for his weekly book review at the Church of the Good Shepherd yesterday afternoon. The book relates the story of a peer of England, Sir Anthony Dart, whose disgust with life has led him to take up his abode in the slums of London preparatory to killing himself. An unusual encounter with a "bundle of rags" named "Glad" and a little street walker named, "Polly" and Miss Monte Bayn, makes Sir Anthony change his mind, and he lives and stays in the slums to see how much good he can do. Character analysis of Sir Anthony, Glad, and Miss Montehayn featured the review.

The reviews next week will be a series of repetitions of those delivered last winter, "Les Miserables" being chosen for next Sunday's subject.

TYLER SPEAKS HERE

John Tyler, internationally known convert to Christianity, was a Wichita Falls visitor yesterday. He made two addresses here, one at the First Baptist church and another at the First Methodist church in the evening. Mr. Tyler's talks dealt with various experiences during forty years of non-Christian life and the change in his attitude toward the world following what he termed his miraculous conversion.

Pups Had Tough Year, But Look Out Next Season

Monty Builds Strong Club From Inexperienced Material

Junior high school's Coyote Pups have just wound up a very unsuccessful football season from the standpoint of games won and lost and clear money made for the school's athletic department. However, Coach Montgomery has developed from the ground up, starting with an exceptionally green squad, a machine which in the 1926 race bids fair to make 'em all sit up and look surprised.

The Coyote Pups of 1925 weren't so successful, but you want ot keep your eyes on the Pups of 1926. The ranks this year were sadly depleted by graduation of the stars of the 1924 season, forcing Monty to work with not even a fair nucleus of veterans at the start. Little by little, however, the junior high mentor has developed a machine which with the added pre-season practice next fall should prove one of the classiest little outfits of this section.

Monty started the season by shifting Captain Hunky Harris from the line to the backfield.

This was the first year Farris played in the backfield, but he was the star of every game. Green in the backfield but with a great show of fighting spirit, the big fullback ploughed into the game and always gave his best.

Dale Carter, scrapping little halfback, was out of the early games through flunking grades, but as soon as these were made up Carter jumped back in and played one of his best seasons behind the line. Carter was the first man to cross the goal line for the Coyote Pups this year. This touchdown came in the game with the Parkburnett second team when the Pups won their only game by the score of 20 to 0. This was also the only time this year that they did any scoring whatsoever.

Roy Brackett, Carter's running mate, was one of the best men on the squad. All year Brackett made great showings for the Pups and was always a consistent ground gainer. Brackett runs low, fast, and hard to tackle. This youngster seemed always to be ready for a gain through a stubborn forward defense.

Clyde Fly, quarterback and triple threat man, was another man that made a great showing with the Pups in the backfield. Fly was a new man on Wichita Falls grids, but was soon a favorite with the fans. Fly was used at quarterback after the first few games, and there displayed a great brand of generalship. His good right toe was very hard to beat in the way of punting.

Ray George was another backfield man who showed great promise in the backfield until he was injured in the Iowa Park game and was forced out the rest of the season. George was very light for the backfield, but nevertheless he made a good impression with the fans.

Shoestring Dulaney was a good man on the defense in the backfield but was never a consistent ground gainer. In the Bowie defeat early in the year the club seemed to form themselves around Dulaney and Farris. In his safety man position Dulaney made a great showing with shoestring tackling of men who had broken through the line. Dulaney brought many a man down that day.

Red Nichols, at center, played great ball. Nichols, like the remainder of the line was light but had the fight to stick out with the rest of the team throughout the season.

Ted Davenport, guard, was one who seemed to develop over night in the line. Davenport started late, and after catching on to the kinks of the game played a great brand of football. He was one of the many who played their first year of football this season.

Pete Powell, guard, was one of the best linesmen junior high has turned out. Powell is light and fast with lots of fight in him. He lost but one quarter this year, and in almost every game was a defensive power. Powell was often called back to back up the line on the defense, and there he made a great showing.

Fat Tandy, guard, heaviest man in the line, was a good man on stop plunges. Tandy was slow of foot, a fast thinker and one who was ing to tackle any man through line.

Berry, at tackle, was a steady p er both on the offense and defe Berry hits hard and low. His play is on opening up holes for backfield to plough through.

Clarence Bains, tackle, was the standing player at this position. B played his first year in the line with each game improved rapidly. the late games of the season B was one of the outstanding star the line.

Ben Mix is another linesman made a great showing in games t he got a chance to play in.

Babe Anderson, end, is one of best men on the club. Babe ope the season as a quarterback, but a the first few games was shifted end where he did some excellent w

AS OTHERS SEE US.

The London Daily News thinks President Coolidge's chamber of commerce addrress a rather vulgar exhibition, and thinks that "no rich parvenu can ever have addressed the humblest poor relation in a tone of more offensively oleaginous patronage." It objects to the President's insistence on the superior morality of this country in loaning money to Europe and in sacrificing billions in the settlement. It thinks that individuals like Mr. Hoover may have put forth unselfish efforts, but is unwilling to concede anything of the sort to the nation as a whole. Strange indeed that an intelligent newspaper does not realize that Mr. Hoover rwas the mere agent of the American people who went into their pockets to finance his activities, and that the money loaned to the allies was raised through the sacrifices of all the people down to the washerwoman bending above the tub.

The Presiden's speech was, in truth, a glorification of meterial things, for present-day Americans want just that. This explains in a measure his present popularity. There are Americans who share the opinion of the Daily News that we have degraded ourselves by standing aloof, but the President's great majority last fall was evidence enough that just now we are thinking only in terms of dollars and cents. In his speech the President mirrored the America of the moment.

THE GREAT DESTROYER

The number of persons killed in automobile accidents in New York state alone this year had reached 1,253 by October 1. In addition, 38,392 persons, including 11,768 children, had been injured, and to these September contributed 256 killed and 5,807 injured.

The nation will have killed, at this rate, approximately, as usual, more than twenty thousand persons and will have injured some hundreds of thousands.

In Cincinnati, as elsewhere, the list of killed and injured steadily mounts. People are not shocked by these figures; they go their ways indifferently! They would not do so were these people being killed and injured in a war, or by recurring epidemics of disease. They would get frantically busy, and do something about it.

Recently two members of congress were run down—Fitzgerald, of Dayton, Ohio, and Reed, of West Virginia. These men represent valuable toll that the nation is paying. But the destroyer is no respector of persons; it takes the high and the low, the rich and the poor, the aged and the young. What an army of little children it has destroyed! Who can estimate the value of these lost, their potentialities! No one.

An interesting feature of the recent report concerning New York fatalities especially in view of the insistent claims of the prohibitionists that drunkenness has about disappeared—is that many of the victims in that city met their deaths because of the recklessness of drunken drivers. These killed, during the month of September, according to the statement of the commissioners, seven persons, and caused injuries to forty-seven others. According to the commisioner, intoxication is the most frequent reason for license revocation or suspension. From January 1 to November 1 of this year 1,311 drivers lost the privilege of operating cars because of drunkenness; in addition 684 licenses were suspended pending prosecution of intoxication charges in the courts.

The destroyer's chief aids are carelessness, inattention and failure to observe ordinary rules of the road, and drunkenness.

Suggestions appear to be useless. If the facts themselves are not sufficient to arouse public sentiment to the menace of the situation, what could so arouse it?

OUR TAXES—WHO PAYS?

A subcommittee of the National Founders' Association has reported on the American burden of taxataion for two years as follows:

Federal	$3,228,000,000	$3,095,000,000
State	892,000,000	1,064,000,000
Local	3,601,000,000	3,748,000,000

Decreanse in Federal taxes have been more than offset by increases in state and local taxes, and these diverging tendencies continue. And particularly significant is the fact that 90 per cent of the state and local public revenue is furnished by the general property tax, while income taxes are the major source of the Federal revenue.

Uncommon Sense

ARE YOU A BEGGAR?

More things can be begged than money or meals or old clothes.

Every seeker for help to which he has no right is a beggar.

I once sat in the office of a prominent business man and listened to four callers, none of whom had any claim on him, yet all four wanted his influence to get them positions.

Two of them were sons of men he knew or had known.

One was a very distant relative.

The fourth had once been his employee, but had quit to take a position with a competitor.

All were in effect asking money when they asked assistance from so busy a man.

The time he would have had to spend in doing for them as they wished would have been worth a great deal, perhaps as much as all of them could have earned in a month.

I asked him when he had courteously but formly refused them all who he had seen them.

"On one day a week I see people of that kind," he said. "Sometimes there are among them those who really need my help. In that case I give it to them.

"But the average person who comes to me for assistance in getting employment is too lazy to get it for hemself. He is the sort who believes that influence counts for anything.

"If I got any one of these fellows a job, he would be back here in a week to ask my influence to keep him from being discharged.

"I have none of that sort of influence to 'lend.'"

Beggars of this kind are even more common than the miserable people you see holding out their hands on the street.

Every business man is bothered with them, even when he carefully guards his door against them.

In one way or another they manage to get appointments with him, or failing in this way lay for him on his way to and from this office, depending on his good nature to hear their stories.

Really they are as guilty of violation of the begging law as is the man who goes from door to door asking for meals.

The quality of independence is essential to any sort of success in life.

Once get the habit of dependence on somebody else for a position, or for promotion, or for occasional loans to tide over "broke" spells, and you will never again feel that you can look the world in the face and meet it on even terms.

Many an important man has a swarm of dependents around him, flatterers who pretend loyalty and devotion to him merely because he can help them when they are in trouble.

Creatures of this kind are simply mean cheats, who hope and try to live on the brains and the labor savings of others.

Asking favors of any kind which cannot be repaid is a form of begging, and not a particularly high class form of it.

It ranks one with human parasites of even lower varieties, and in time reduces him to plain begging—and eventually to beggary as well.

THE FRENCH POLITICAL TANGLE

France has a Parliamentary government. So has England. But the great difference is that in England a Prime Minister has the power to dissolve Parliament and get the decision of the country on any dispute between him and his political opponents. They may outvote him in the Commons, but then his responsibility to Parliment may take the form of advising the King to get another House of Commons as speedily as may be. In the French constitution the power to dissolve the Chamber is not confided to the Premier or even to the Ministry. All that it can do is to urge the President of the Republic to order a general election before the four-year term of office of the members of the Chamber has expired, and even that he cannot do unless he has first the sanction of the Senate. In practical effect, therefore, the Chamber of Deputies is an irremovable body.

How is it made up at present? Its composition illustrates "group" government at its worst. Glance at the classification of the Deputies as recorded in the vote of confidence given to the Painleve cabinet on Nov. 4. We encounter radicals and radical Socialists; Socialist Republicans and French Socialists; the Radical Left and the Republican Democratic Left; the Republican Democratic Union; the Democratic Republican Left; Republicans of the Left; Democrats; Communists; not to speak of a few Independents and an occasional Deputy who branda himself as a special kind of Socialist.

It is out of such disparate and refractory material that a Prime Minister has to form a government. One sees the immense difficulties of doing it. If the veteran Aristide Briand succeeds in framing a cabinet, it can have little promise of long life, since any artful combination that he may effect is subject to rupture as soon as the groups behind him begin to fall out with each other. It is possible, and of course it is devoutly to be hoped, that a new government may be allowed to live long enough to tide France over her present financial crisis. But it is to be feared that, once that is done, if it can be done, the game of politics in the Chamber will be gayly resumed.

The French constitution has been in existence for fifty years, and the republic has managed to exist and thrive under it. But its provisions for Parliamentary government are certainly defective. M. Briand, or any other public man called upon by the president of France to form a Cabinet, might well think that the effort to bring opposites together is too much like Carlyle's "Heaven and Hell Amalgamation Society."

PETER'S ADVENTURES IN ANIMAL LAND

BY MRS FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

RUNNING AWAY FROM HIMSELF

Louder grew the lowing of the cattle coming home to rest after their day in the field. By twos and threes they came out of the Great Woods and ambled down the long lane that led toward the barnyard. Peter the boy could hear the gentle creatures discussing family affairs as they browsed. And Mr. Cow—just as he should have done—was keeping eyes and ears wide open to make sure no harm came to the herd.

"This is the wrong side of the fence for me," muttered Growly the Bear. "If only I could squeeze through those bars, but tis too late in the season. I am too fat. Nothing for it but for me to climb over the top and before I am half way over some creature in that crowd will spy me."

"What? Running away?" gasped Peter, who couldn't believe his ears. "And I thought all bears were brave! And running away from a Cow!"

"Not from a cow at all but from myself," grunted Growly, and without more ado began climbing the bars, and Peter, who didn't understand things at all, followed him. For one thing, he had become quite fond of the shaggy fellow and then, too, he wanted to find out what it was all about.

Growly could climb, but he was clumsy, and sure enough, just as he himself had guessed, he was spotted long before he could clamber out of sight.

The dust began to fly. Mr. Cow was digging it up with his front feet and with head erect was bellowing scornful threats at the Bear.

"Hurry, hurry! I must hurry!" Growly was muttering to himself. "One look at that foolish animal and I shall lose my head. Ugh! Ugh! Over at last and out of trouble for this time at least."

Once on the other side of the bars Peter's curiosity got the better of him, and he turned to stare through the bars at the strange actions of the herd.

Not a Cow was grazing. In frightened groups they were clustered about their brave protector, who, in a voice like thunder, continued to bellow dreadful things at Bear.

"You great big bully! Why don't you stay and fight? All fat and fur and not a bit of courage in your huge body. Well, I know why you don't dare to face me! You are too sure I'd win! I'd toss you into the air and jump on you with all four feet, that's what I'd do. Brrrr! Run, you cattle thief, run! But I shall get you yet!"

Peter could have sworn that Mr. Cow's eyes flashed fire as he tore toward the fence, but he didn't wait to make sure. The Boy whirled about and ran after Growly as fast as his legs would carry him, and he never stopped until, by the side of his shaggy friend, he dashed around the Big Rock into the Woods at the far end of the field.

HOW IT STARTED

"The Emerald Isle"

"The Emerald Isle"—now familiar in song and story as another name for Ireland! So accustomed have we become to these words, used by patriotic Irishmen speaking longingly of home, and in affectionate reference by those who have traveled in that country, that the highly imaginative might conceivably think of the island as a block of dazzling bright green set in the blue slate of the ocean!

It is a fact that Ireland acquired the figurative name of the "Emerald Isle" on account of the rich bright green of its verdure, but the words did not accidentally take form out of a popular idea. Their origin, which we can definitely place, is truly poetical. For they were first used by Dr. Drennan, who lived from 1754 to 1820. In his poem called "Erin." And though the author and his poem may be otherwise unknown to us his memory will be green for generations to come through the brain-child which he has left to posterity, the expression "the Emerald Isle."

SYNOPSIS

Saltonstall Cabot Adams, halted on Long Island by a State Trooper, convinces him that the strange garb he is wearing is a masquerade costume he had worn the night bfore in Stamford, Conn. He had left Stamford suddenly to search for Connemara Moore, whom he hopes to marry, but who disappeared. Connie, her Aunt Celimena, Sweetie and David Lacy also are all on Long Island—following a night of wild adventure, but are about to set out for Stamford.

CHAPTER XVII—Continued

Aunt Celimena bowed deeply. "You qualify, Mr. Lacy, but unless I mistake myself I just heard you say that you would be forced to leave us in order to go over some private matters with your friend McTish. I believe that's the name you mentioned."

"It's the name, all right," Lacy agreed. He hesitated, then turned to Connemara. "That sort of puts me in a hole," he said to the girl. "I really ought to check in on Mac. As the advertisements say, there's a reason. But don't for a minute think you've seen the last of me. In fact—and I might as well go on record in front of this charming group of witnesses—you're going to see so much of me that some day you're going to say, 'Dave, my dear, don't you really think a man and a woman ought to get away from each other for one day after forty years of married life, however happy those years——'"

"Say!" yelped Sweetie and jammed her elbow into Connemara's side. "Didn't I tell you that guy was a fast worker? He begins where the others leave off."

"Is that so?" growled Bing. "Now listen here, Connemara——"

"Is that so?" growled Bing. "Now listen here, Connemara——"

But the girl herself, who was staring blankly into David Lacy's burning eyes, suddenly laughed.

"And which way do you want me to do my hair?" she said.

"Any way," said Lacy. "Wear a pink wig, for all I care. By golly, you could wear a pink wig."

And Celimena raised her hand. "That will do, Mr. Lacy. Perhaps you have never heard that personalities are seldom in good taste. If you will secure us a car——"

"I'll drive it," said Bing.

"And I'll oil it," said David. "I'll oil it and gas it and water it and dust it, and presently I'll follow it in a somewhat faster car—and after that I shall simply let the splendid discriminatory powers of Miss Moore do their natural work." Suddenly he wheeled to the girl, and his eyes grew soft. "Eventually, why not now?" he pleaded.

"At the first sign of rain put on your chains," said Connemara solemnly.

Lacy grinned. "That one is aged in the wood," he returned. "Still, mother's the health doctor. Just the same, I'm going to be the lucky one in five. That's the insidious thing about me. And I know," he bowed, "that you'll accept no substitutes."

Connemara's eyes were twinkling. "Make good on the car," she said. "I'm asking the man who owns one."

"Good kid," said David Lacy warmly.

Ten minutes later Bing, his eyes surly, was driving one of Lacy's cars down the smooth road to the Bayville ferry. In the seat beside him sat Sweetie. Behind them huddled Aunt Celimena and her niece.

"Take that swaddling band off your head," snapped Aunt Celimena presently. "I don't like it. And it looks silly."

But Connemara only smiled. "Not yet," she said cryptically.

At the ferry house Aunt Celimena suddenly observed in a perfectly natural tone of voice: "Why, there's Saltonstall! Isn't that odd? Ask him in, Constance Mary."

Connemara's eyes followed her aunt's. "Oh, merciful heavens!" she gasped. "Poor old Salt! I'd forgotten entirely that he was in fancy dress. Oh, Auntie, look how he's skulking along, as if he was ashamed of himself. Oh, I'm sorry for him!" A sudden twinkle flicked into her eyes. "No, I'm not. He's funny. He's the funniest thing I ever saw in all my life." And now she began to laugh.

"Look, there's Salt," announced Bing abruptly from the front seat. "Look, Connemara. I wonder how——"

"My goodness, Bing, are you color-blind?" Connemara gulped out. "Good Lord, for the last half mile I've been staring ahead at that red thing and thinking to myself, what a funny-looking gasoline pump! Oh, Bing, go over and grab him before he commits suicide or something."

Bing leaped out of the car, grasped the astounded Saltonstall by the arm, and led him back amid the chuckled plaudits of the ferry-house crowd.

"Oh, Mama," shrilled a tiny girl, "there's Little Red Riding Hood's daddy! Look, Mama."

A queue of admiring small boys swarmed after the red-clad young man in somewhat the manner of a tail escorting a flaring comet. "Get out," blared Bing at the small boys. They withdrew to a safe distance.

Then Sweetie spoke. "My Gawd," she breathed in awe, "if it isn't Archibald again! Say, Percy, I didn't really get them pants in the dark last night. Did you lose a bet on Harvard or are you really a chorus boy after all? I just adore chorus boys."

Said Salt harshly: "Shut up." Then his eyes found Connemara's. "Haven't you a blanket or a robe in the car?" he pleaded. "Oh, thank Heaven! Here—give it to me." He clutched at the proffered robe, flung it about his glistening redness and climbed stiffly into the automobile.

"I've had a rotten time," he announced wearily.

"Well, it hasn't been a strawberry festival for anybody," Connemara gently reproved him. "I'm glad you're all right, though."

"I assure you I'm very much all right," said Saltonstall Cabot Adams, to whom the enfolding blanket had completely restored his wonted dignity. "I'm not only all right, Connemara, but I have here"—he reached beneath his shirt and dramatically drew forth the shimmering auburn coil—"I have here your token of our engagement."

Bing snapped his head to the rear. "Don't be an ass," he growled. "I told you what that meant last night."

But Aunt Celimena spoke up. "Gentlemen, please," she protested. "We have all had too much. This is no time——"

"Once in a while you say a mouthful, Aunt Celly," agreed Connemara with a tired smile. "Besides this——"

"No more discussion, Constance Mary! Not, at least, while this terrible shadow of uncertainty hangs over us."

"Uncertainty?" Salt demanded. "What do you mean?"

"I mean exactly what I say. Those horrible men—and their fiendish associates!" Her lip curled just perceptibly in the direction of Sweetie. "I tell you I shall not sleep a wink until they are every one in jail. That is why I want Mr. Brewster and both Saltonstall and Bingham to remain with us at Moorelands tonight. I feel in my bones that something is going to happen."

Sweetie wheeled in her seat, faced the group in the rear of the car and deliberately winked.

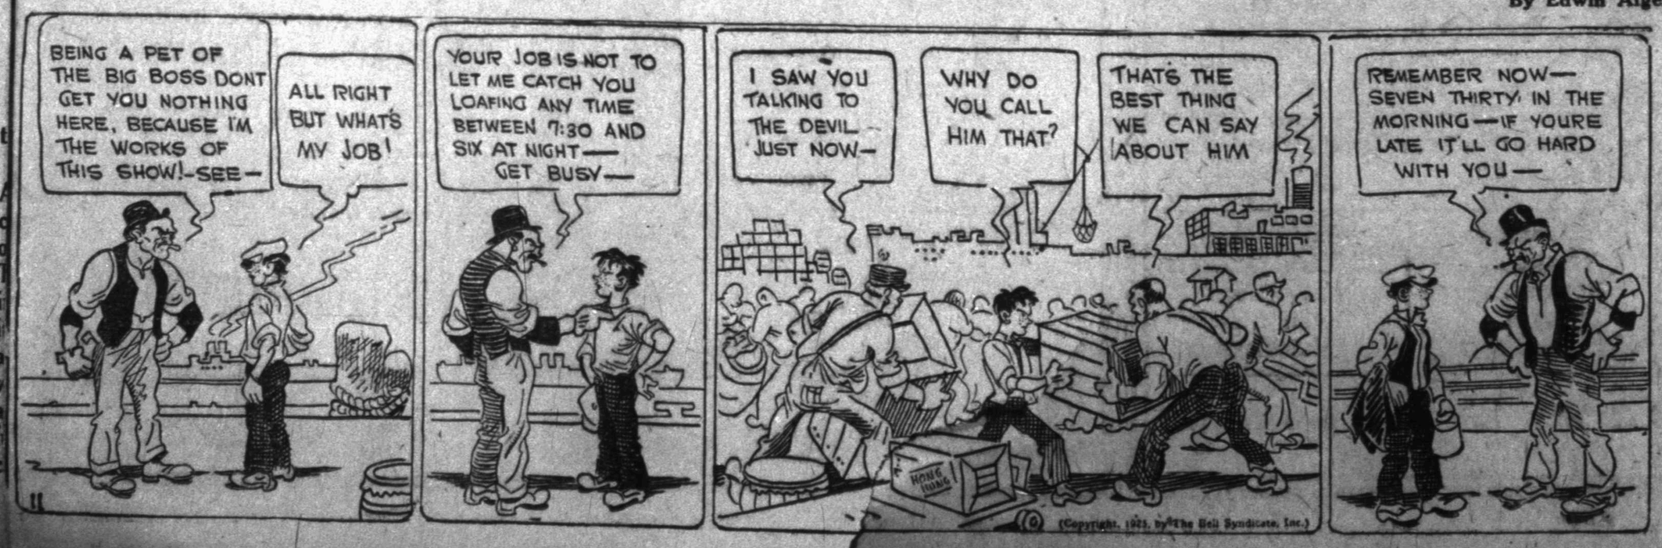

"Us poor defenseless women!" she murmured. "Ain't it the truth?"

From the ferry house came the shouted warning, "All aboard!" Bing threw in the clutch and the car moved slowly forward, toward Moorelands—and the night that lay ahead.

More Truth Than Poetry

PRETTY ROUGH

Chubb Stubbs is there with pep and zip,
He fells the tackles every trip,
And grabs the half backs with a grip
Which ain't exactly tentative.
But under age, alas, is he;
In fact he's only twenty-three,
And so of course he cannot be
A. U. S. representative.

In Congress there is many a mutt
As old and mildewed as King Tut.
They could not make a touch-down but
They're drawing down their salaries.
And all they ever have to do,
Is talk or sleep the hours through—
Or maybe make a speech or two
To empty, gaping galleries.

Chubb Stubbs, the day he graduates
Should work for these United States
And help to prune the income rates—
He needs the honorarium.
The men he says who now are there
Have either bald or silver hair,
And should be in the nation's care
In some nice sanitarium.

Why let these poor old dotards make
The laws that other people break,
Or vainly try to keep awake
Upon the people's charity?
Why should the constitution stay
The lads who've shown that they can play,
And also, on election day
Would prove their popularity?

ONCE UPON A TIME

THE PUMPKIN PIE PRINCESS—XIII

by W. J. ENRIGHT.

THE STORY UP TO NOW

ONCE THE PUMPKIN HOUSE OF A TINY LITTLE GIRL NAMED ESMERELDA FELL TO THE MOON. AS NOBODY IN THE MOON HAD EVER TASTED PUMPKIN PIE, THE MOON KING ASKED THE LITTLE GIRL TO SHOW THE COOK HOW TO MAKE ONE. HE INSISTED ON A TINY TASTE AS IT CAME ALL BROWN AND STEAMING FROM THE OVEN, BUT ESMERELDA TOLD HIM HE MUST WAIT FOR DESSERT BEFORE HE HAD ANY MORE.

DINNER WAS QUICKLY SERVED TO THE KING AND ESMERELDA, WHO ATE IN THE PRIVATE DINING ROOM.

ESMERELDA'S LITTLE TABLE AND CHAIR WERE PLACED IN THE CENTER OF THE KING'S TABLE. IT WAS A DELICIOUS DINNER, BUT THE KING PAID LITTLE ATTENTION TO IT AND HURRIED THE COURSES OFF UNTIL DESSERT CAME.

WHEN THE PIE WAS PLACED BEFORE THE KING HE VERY COURTEOUSLY HELPED HIS LITTLE GUEST TO A SMALL PIECE CUT AS DAINTILY AS HE KNEW HOW AND THEN HE CUT AN ENORMOUS QUARTER FOR HIMSELF.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

HE FINISHED ALL THAT WAS LEFT WITHOUT A WORD AND THEN LOOKING DOWN AT ESMERELDA SAID, "THAT'S THE BEST THING I HAVE EVER EATEN IN ALL MY LIFE. AND NOW THAT YOU HAVE TAUGHT ME WHAT PUMPKIN PIE IS I'LL DO ANYTHING IN THE MOON FOR YOU."

THE STATE OF TEXAS

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Wichita County, Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summon R. T. Couch and R. T. Couch Oil corporation by making publication of this citation once each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in any newspaper published in the seventy eighth judicial district; to appear at the next regular term of the seventy eighth district court of Wichita county, to be holden at the court house thereof in Wichita Falls, on the first Monday in December, A. D., 1925, the same being the seventh day of December, A. D., 1925. Then and there to answer a petition filed in said court on the thirty-first day of July, A. D., 1925, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said court No. 17273B wherein, the Continental Supply company is plaintiff and R. T. Couch, R. T. Couch Oil corporation of Texas, a corporation, P. S. Shackelford, F. J. Holmes, South Texas Commercial National Bank of Houston, Texas, and C. E. McCutcheon are defendants. Said petition alleging that on and about May 17, 1924, defendant R. T. Couch was the owner of the oil and gas leasehold estate, and all rights thereunder covering the west 50 acres of east 60 acres of north 120 acres of J. W. Robertson's 320 acre survey, Ctf. 1575, Abst. 252, Pat. No. 610, Vol. 14, Wichita county, Texas; that by agreement between plaintiff and defendant R. T. Couch, plaintiff was to furnish defendant certain machinery, tools and supplies for the development of said tract of land for the discovery of oil or gas thereon, the quantity of machinery tools and supplies necessary for said development not being known to said defendant, but said defendant agreed that he would pay the plaintiff the amount charged therefor at the end of each month, but that the debt for said machinery, tools and supplies would not be due and enforcible until the defendant had fully developed said lease, or purchased machinery tools and supplies from the plaintiff to the value of $10,000 that the defendant would make such payments upon account as he could from the proceeds of said leasehold estate; plaintiff says that from May 17, 1924, to June 16, 1925, it regularly and continuously furnished said defendant for the development of said leasehold estate, machinery, tools and supplies to the value of $10,200.99, which sum defendant agreed to pay the plaintiff, but said defendant, R. T. Couch is entitled to a credit for merchandise returned and cash payments made in the sum of $5,515.68, leaving a balance due and unpaid for said machinery, tools and supplies on June 16, 1925, of $4,684.61, which sum is long past due; that defendant has often been requested and demanded to pay said sum, but has failed and refused to pay the same or any part thereof, to plaintiff's damage in said sum of $4,684.61 with legal interest thereon.

Plaintiff further says that on about Feb. 18, 1925, defendant, R. T. Couch transferred and assigned all his assets, consisting of oil and gas leases, including the leasehold estate and described, and all personal property used in connection therewith to R. T. Couch Oil corporation of Texas; that defendant R. T. Couch Oil corporation of Texas, agreed to assume and pay off all the existing indebtedness of defendant R. T. Couch incurred in development and operation of said property as consideration for said assignment and conveyance. That said indebtedness owing this plaintiff by R. T. Couch was at the time of said conveyance one of the debts assumed by said R. T. Couch Oil corporation of Texas, as consideration for said property; that said machinery, tools and supplies above mentioned, were used in the development and operation of said lease above mentioned and described, that said R. T Couch Oil corporation has been benefitted by said machinery, tools and supplies, and at the time of filing this petition was using said machinery in the operation and development of said lease, and by reason thereof said R. T. Couch Oil corporation of Texas is bound and obligated to pay the plaintiff said sum of $4,684.61, with legal interest. Plaintiff further says that on June 25, 1925, after giving notice in accordance with law filed with the county clerk of Wichita county, Texas, its itemized statement of said machinery, tools and supplies so sold and delivered to said defendants showing the date of delivery, amounts, and the sums charged therefor, and claiming a lien upon said oil and gas leasehold estate covering the above described tract of land, the oil wells thereon, and all the buildings, equipment and improvements situated thereon, and used in connection therewith, and further claiming a lien upon the machinery, tools and supplies so furnished by it to said defendant Couch, as provided by the constitution and the statutes of the State of Texas. Said materialman's lien is recorded in Vol. 21, page 149, lien records of Wichita county, Texas, to which reference is here made.

Plaintiff alleges that it is informed and believes that defendant C. E. McCutcheon, F. J. Holmes, South Texas Commercial National Bank of Houston, Texas, and P. S. Shackelford are claiming some right, title or interest or lien in and to said oil and gas leasehold estate hereinabove described, but that whatever right, title or interest said defendants or either of them may have on, or assert in and to, said oil and gas leasehold estate, the same is subordinate, inferior and subject to plaintiff's right, title and claim by reason of its materialman's lien thereon.

Plaintiff prays for citation against each and all of said defendants and that it have judgment against defendants R. T. Couch and R. T. Couch Oil corporation of Texas, jointly and severally, for the sum of $4,684.61, with legal interest; that its materialman's lien above mentioned be declared by the court a first and prior lien upon said oil and gas leasehold estate, and that the same be ordered foreclosed as against all the defendants herein, and that said property be sold in accordance with law in satisfaction of the plaintiff's judgment rendered herein, that it recover its costs, and have all other relief, either at law or in equity, special and general.

Herein fail not, but have before said court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ with your return thereon showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and seal of said court, at office in Wichita Falls, Texas, this the sixth day of November, A. D., 1925.

"Love Bound In Wichita Falls"

As Written for the Record News By the Flapper Wife

FLOSSIE and MARY ROSE MIDDLETON are two pretty sisters, the daughters of a widowed mother. Both of them work for the Dexter Oil company.

Flossie helps keep the files under MISS MACFARLANE. Mary Rose is secretary to the sales manager, JOHN MANNERS, and is in love with him. But he is engaged to DORIS HINIG.

Mary Rose discovers that Flossie is carryin gon a flirtation with the president of the company, HILARY DEXTER, a married man with grown children. And when she begs Flossie to give him up, the girl threatens to leave home and go to live with her chum, ICE JAMES, a spirited young flapper.

Mary Rose's own love affairs reach a crisis when DR. TOM FITZROY asks her to marry him. She refuses him because of her deep feeling for Manners. One night he asks her to have dinner with him, but she refuses, telling him that it wouldn't be fair to Doris Hinig. That same night Flossie is arrested for speeding in Dexter's car by LENNIE BLAIR, a young policeman who is the son of the neighborhood gossip, AUNT HENNY BLAIR. Mary Rose keeps the fact from her mother.

Flossie is so excited by her arrest that she forgets to put her hair up in curlers, and the next morning announces her intention of getting a permanent wave. Mary Rose points out to her that a wave costs $20, her whole week's salary, but Flossie tells her that if she won't give her $20 from the family savings, she'll borrow it from Mr. Dexter. So, of course, Mary Rose gives it to her, and Flossie has her wave. On the way back to the office, she meets John Manners and asks him to take her to lunch. Manners does, and when Mary Rose comes in from her own lunch, she finds Flossie perched on Manners' desk, "kidding" him.

(Now Go on With the Story.)

CHAPTER XIV.

Mary Rose stood like a pillar of stone in the doorway, unable to speak or move.

A sort of blankness came over her. Flossie here, sitting on John Manners' desk! And talking to him as if they were the greatest friends in the world! Why, what could it mean?

Then Flossie saw her. She jumped lightly down from the desk and came toward her, laughing as she ran a hand through her shimmering curls.

"Hello, I was just waiting for you angel," she said carelessly. "I wanted to show you my wave. Isn't it slicky-tricky?"

She whirled around on one toe like a ballet dancer before she followed the older girl into the outer office. The door closed behind them.

"Flossie Middleton! You mustn'e go in there and sit on Mr. Manners' desk He won't like it," Mary Rose said when they were outside.

Flossie's laugh was like a chime of little silver bells. "Won't like it?" she asked. "Any old time he won't like it! Why, I've just come back from lunch with him"

Mary Rose's deep eyes widened. "You've been to lunch with Mr. Manners!" she repeated. "Why, how did that happen?"

But Flossie refused to answer. She shook her head, with its crop of soft little blond curls, and ran upstairs laughing, mysteriously.

All afternoon as Mary Rose worked at her desk between the desks of Miss Brown and Miss Minnick, she asked herself a question over and over:

"If John Manners asks Flossie to lunch with him, why shouldn't I go with him, when he asks me?"

Then another thought came to take its place:

"Perhaps he isn't in love with Doris Hinig at all—perhaps he's still looking for the girl he'll marry."

Could that girl be Flossie?

She sighed sharply, and her hands fell from the typewriter.

She thought of John Manners' eyes as they had looked at her last night, from under the shadow of the dripping lilac tree—and of his hand on her arm—his voice—

"Day dreaming?" asked Miss Minnick archly.

Mary Rose jumped, and went on working.

"No—just lazy," she answered. "Spring fever's making me dopey, I suppose."

At five o'clock Miss Minnick spoke again—in a whisper this time. "There's Manners' best girl," she said, and Mary Rose looked up. "She certainly keeps tabs on him, doesn't she?"

All in palest gray, Doris Hinig was coming across the outer office. There was a gray fox scarf around her neck ,and on it was pinned a pale pink rose.

"She couldn't help looking wonderful in a dress like that" Mary Rose thought, looking down at her own plain office dress.

As Doris Hinig passed her desk, she looked down and smiled. Mary Rose smiled back, and followed the tall girl with her eyes until she disappeared into John Manners' office.

"I've come to take you home for dinner," she heard Doris say before the door closed behind her.

She leaned back in her chair, pressing her hands against her tired eyes.

How she wished herself in Doris Hinig's pale gray suede shoes at that moment! How she would have loved to go into his office, all silk and perfume and roses, and to say, "I've come to take you home to dinner." Perhaps to be kissed by him.

"Oh," she thought, "I can't bear to think of his kissing her. I wonder if he does? I suppose so—"

With a hopeless gesture, Mary Rose pulled a sheet of paper from her typewriter. "I'm getting awfully sick of my job," she remarked to Miss Minnick.

"You!" Miss Minnick stared. "Well, that's a new cry from you. You've always been the little office Pollyanna-ad-Girl! What makes you sick of your job, all of a sudden?"

Mary Rose shrugged her pretty shoulders. "How should I know?" she asked lifelessly. "I just am."

The telephone rang.

"Hello." It was Tom Fitzroy's voice. "Would you like to go to a movie tonight, Mary Rose?"

"I would," Mary Rose answered eagerly. "Eight o'clock?"

"Seven thirty," Tom answered. "I'll bring the stink-wheel, and we'll go in style and gasoline fumes."

Somehow or other, it comforted her at that moment to know that Tom loved her.

As she hung up the receiver, the door of John Manners' office opened, and Doris Hinig came out. She was not smiling now, as she crossed the office. And she did not look to the left or right.

"Seems to have had a turn-down from her sweetie, doesn't she?" Miss Minnick asked. "I think she's too tall for him, anyway, don't you? I like to see a tall man marry a short girl, somehow."

A second later the buzzer on Mary Rose's desk summoned her to Manners' office.

"Yes?" she asked, opening the door.

He did not look up. "Would you mind working a bit late tonight?" he said. "I'm behind with my correspondence."

"I'd be glad to," she answered, forgetting all about Tom Fitzroy, for the moment. "Do you want to dictate to me now?"

He nodded, and she sat down with her pad and pencil, at the corner of his desk.

"No one can take this from me," she thought, as she took down his letters. "Even if he marries Doris Hinig, I'll still be able to see him six days of the week—to hear his voice and to sit here beside him, sometimes."

There was a sort of cold comfort in the thought.

At half past six all the letters were written and she carried them in to him and laid them on the desk.

She watched his firm brown hand, as it picked up a fountain pen and wrote his name, "John Manners," across the neat pages. A sudden longing to lean over and lay her lips on that brown hand took her. She tried not to think about it. She fixed her eyes on the western sky. It was violet with the first twilight.

"It's getting dark. I'll drive you home," she heard him say harshly.

She shook her head. "No thanks. I'm often out at night. I don't mind."

I've Come to Take You Home for Dinner," Mary Rose Heard Davis Hining Tell John Manners.

"I'll drive you home," he repeated.

Packed House Hears John Tyler Speak

A packed house at the First Methodist church heard John Tyler's lecture, "Up from Hell," last night. John Tyler's story is the story of more than fifty years of living apart from the Christian church, and of his conversion to Christianity. Mr. Tyler is 75 years old, and dates his conversion back nineteen years. He has told his story in the principal cities of Europe and in every nook and cranny of the United States.

He spoke three times yesterday, once in the morning at the First Baptist church, later at the Floral Heights Presbyterian church, and in the evening at the First Methodist church. He will speak next Sunday evening at the First Baptist church.

Musicians Club Concert Tonight

The Musicians club is to give its "thank you" concert to the public of Wichita Falls this evening at the Junior college in return for what is termed the "loyal support given programs of the club during the past year which were given as means of paying out the concert grand piano which has been placed in the Junior college auditorium. An extensive program has been arranged with most of the leading musical talent in the city participating. A general invitation has been extended.

NEWS OF THE FIELD

Cooke County

The Big Indian Oil company's second well in Cooke county, about three-quarters of a mile away from the first, was bailing Saturday when the casing parted and was dropped in the hole, necessitating a fishing job prior to completion. The well is showing some oil from a sand at about 3,657 feet, the gravity being swabbed for about fifteen barrels a day.

Orth Vicinity

The Consolidated Oil company had the sand early yesterday in their No. 1, Jeffreies, in block 51, TE&LCO survey, southwest of Orth, north Young county, and was setting casing to test, depth reported as 912 feet. Bailing probably will be completed this morning.

Personals

W. D. Rowland, Superior Oil Producing company, is leaving today for a week or ten-day trip to the Texas panhandle with the hunting grounds of New Mexico a probable destination. He has just returned from a visit to the Cooke county field where his company has some holdings.

TO GIVE BOX SUPPER.

The ladies of the Floral Heights Baptist church will give a box supper at the church Monday evening at 7:30 as a benefit for the church building fund.

WICHITANS LIKE THE AIR

More Than 900 Have Taken Rides in Last Two Days.

Enthusiasm in Wichita Falls for airplanes and a possible commercial air service station here is being demonstrated at the Texas-Oklahoma Fair grounds where two machines have taken approximately 900 people up and over the city in the past two days. The machines are the property of the Airway Transportation company and are in the city in connection with tentative plans to make Wichita Falls a midway point on Kansas City-San Antonio "bus" line. Another will arrive here today.
