From Staff Reports

Severe winds and almost an inch of rainfall between Midland and Odessa Tuesday evening led to some tense moments at Midland International Airport and structure damage in the Gardendale community.

A National Weather Service meteorologist at Midland International, Gary Woodall, said today the storm blew in from the south, "collapsed right over the airport" and then moved north.

During the storm's twenty minutes, more than 300 airport visitors were "evacuated" to the baggage claim area and away from plate glass windows in the main concourse and waiting areas, Deputy Airport Director Larry Roman said.

Pilots of aircraft already loaded with passengers were instructed to close their doors and wait out the storm at the loading area, he said.

The storm caused a delay of about 30 minutes in takeoffs.

The severe weather also was responsible for damaging the wing tip of a Federal Express Cessna Caravan, said Roman.

NWS instruments measured .98 inch of rain and a wind peak of 59 mph, just above the level that weather service personnel consider "severe," Woodall said.

In addition, unofficial rainfall measurements from Odessa's east side held between .03 and .92 inch of rain fell west of the airport, Woodall said.

Northwest of the airport in Ector County's Gardendale community, at least one business — Gardendale Variety — lost part of its roof to high winds, according to Joyce Hopper, a community resident.

Ms. Hopper also noted that some trees bent completely over during the severe weather.

Ector County Dep. Richard Rattan, who is stationed in Gardendale, said the storm lasted about 20 minutes and then blew north. "It didn't last long," he said.

The deputy's phone went dead because of the weather, but "it goes out every time it rains," he noted.

Holt accepts additional role in Bush financing

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland businessman Bobby Holt, already second in command of George Bush's national fundraising efforts, has picked up additional duties to help Republicans raise money for the fall campaigns in Texas.

Gov. Bill Clements and U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm on Tuesday picked Holt to serve as finance chairman for the Texas Victory '88 Committee.

That group, which plans a massive fundraising dinner for September in Houston, is financing voter registration and get-out-the-vote campaigns on behalf of Vice President Bush and other Republicans running in the state.

Holt said the group has a $4 million goal, and he is optimistic they will reach it. "I look forward to this mission, and we'll get it done," he said this morning.

Shuttle rocket test successful

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Discovery roared to life on the launch pad today as NASA ignited its main engines in a crucial 22-second test leading up to the first U.S. manned space mission since the Challenger disaster 2½ years ago.

The firing, delayed five times in two weeks by leaks and other mechanical problems, checked modifications to the engines and other systems. It was critical to certifying the shuttle for the first post-Challenger launching.

"It was a very smooth countdown; the team and the hardware all worked successfully," Forrest S. McCartney, director of the Kennedy Space Center, told the team. "It's been a long night, but it sure ended right."

Launch director Bob Sieck thanked his crew "for making our toughest test look easy. You should be pleased because it was an excellent performance and you should look forward to the launch count with confidence."

Launch control center commentator Hugh Harris said it appeared all three engines fired for the required length of time.

Officials hoped to have a preliminary report on test results within hours.

The space agency said that if the firing was successful and there were no other problems, Discovery could be launched in late September. But because much work remains, most officials believe the liftoff will slip into October.

At the end of today's near-flawless countdown, the three main liquid fuel engines at the base of the delta-winged spaceship flashed to life. The launch pedestal was engulfed in a huge cloud of steam as the fiery exhaust collided with protective water pouring over the foundation of the structure.

Hispanic leaders pleased with naming of Cavazos

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hispanic Americans say they're pleased that President Reagan has made history with the first-ever selection of a Hispanic for the Cabinet, but some see it as a last-minute, election-year ploy.

"I'm sorry that it took so long. It's obviously a political move to ingratiate," said Jose de Lara, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

But, he added, "whether it's political or not political, we don't care. It's a giant step for Hispanic Americans."

Calling it "a proud day for all Americans," Reagan announced on Tuesday his selection of Lauro Cavazos, president of Texas Tech University, to succeed William Bennett as secretary of education.

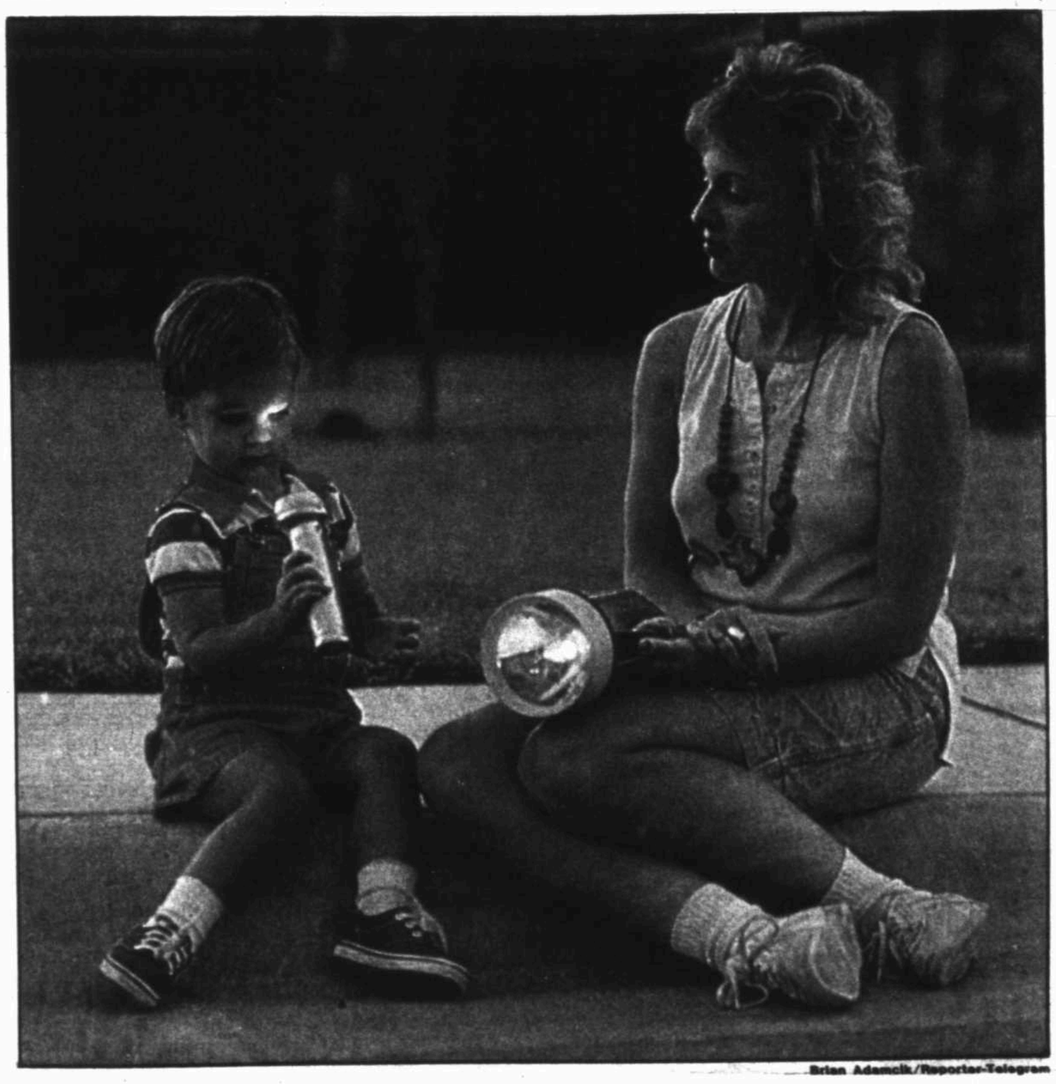

Reagan took the action about a month after Vice President George Bush pledged to de Lara's group that he would put a Hispanic on his Cabinet if elected president.

Asked whether that played a role in his decision, Reagan said, "No, I'm just still working at the job here."

Of Cavazos, he said: "I selected him because he seemed to be the best-fitted man."

Henry Santiestevan, a consultant to a Washington-based educational research organization, the Hispanic Policy Development Project, said, "I think it's high time and I'm sorry that it's so late that it now has the aspect of a strictly political move to affect the campaign."

Local 'Night Out' puts bite back in crime prevention

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Hundreds of persons — and a very famous and hungry anti-crime spokesdog — participated in dinners, barbecues, ice cream get-togethers and flashlight walks Tuesday during Midland's version of National Night Out.

The Night Out events, held to promote crime prevention efforts in general and neighborhood watch groups in particular, also managed for the most part to avoid ominous dark clouds which blew heavy rains into parts of the area.

"It was very nice," said Cheryl Meares, president of the Midland Crime Prevention Commission and organizer of the event. "We had a very good turnout, with at least 35 groups participating, and not one was cancelled. Everyone who planned to participate was able to."

Ms. Meares, who managed to visit all but a few of the events during a busy evening, said she was especially gratified by the response of Police Chief Richard Czech.

"He went out of his way to promote this. Just about every place I went, a patrol officer was already there or was pulling up behind me," she said. "I was absolutely shocked, since I found out later there were only seven cars on duty. It seemed like they had every car out."

Ms. Meares said the Night Out events, concentrated in central, west and northwest Midland, were large enough to be visible to persons who might not have joined in this year.

"We averaged 25 to 30 persons at each one," she said. "Only one was real small, and that was one of the last ones I visited."

At each stop, McGruff, the anti-crime dog, also paid a visit to the Midlanders promoting crime prevention.

"I took McGruff with me — and he ate along the way," Ms. Meares said.

Sgt. Lalo Camarillo, who heads the Midland police crime prevention unit, was gratified by the turnout.

"It was exceptionally good," Camarillo, who visited six events, said. "It was better than last year. People last year were not as familiar with it, didn't know quite what it was about."

A Midland County Sheriff's Department officer who visited three events in rural Midland, agreed with Camarillo.

"Luckily the rains ended before it could mess everything up," said Keith Turner. "Any kind of participation pleases me. It is a heck of a lot more than we have had in past years, including last year."

The Night Out began with a noon kickoff Tuesday in Centennial Plaza, which also marked the introduction of McGruff.

City Council sets hearing on tax rate increase

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

It was inevitable, officials say.

The city of Midland is going to have a public hearing on a proposed tax hike.

On Tuesday, Council called for a 6.85 cent tax increase — about 7.22 percent (operation and debt obligation) — over the current effective tax rate of 43.8 cents per $100 valuation. Based on the most current estimates, a homeowner with a valuation of $54,380, for example, will pay $28.66 more annually.

Because the city is seeking more than 3 percent above the effective rate, it is required by law to hold a public hearing. Council set the hearing for 10 a.m. Aug. 18 at city hall.

If there are no changes, council is expected to vote on the tax rate and adopt the budget Aug. 23.

Council will consider funding Midland's five operating funds — general, water, airport, sanitation and golf course — at a total of $57.3 million in 1988-89 if adopted, compared to $55.1 million presently.

In comments accompanying the city's 4-inch-thick proposed budget, City Manager Fred Poe said he expected the general fund will need an additional $1.24 million or a 4.62 percent increase for the fiscal year.

The city manager, in a story published Sunday in the Reporter-Telegram, cited personnel as the city's single-largest expense, which accounts for 71 percent — or 19.9 million — of the total $28.1 million general fund.

Struck by hard times when oil prices came crashing to a $10-per-barrel low in 1986, the city held the tax rate, cut services and slashed personnel.

In the past three years, the city has eliminated 100 jobs, mostly through attrition.

However, council agreed about five months ago to restore pay cuts among wage and salaried workers amounting to more than $400,000.

'Last Temptation' also drawing mixed reviews as art

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — "The Last Temptation of Christ," a film that is enraging segments of the Christian community for its reinterpretation of the Bible, is drawing mixed reviews as art on the secular front.

Included in the film is some nudity, Mary Magdalene plying her trade as a prostitute, and the scene that has most outraged its antagonists, in which the crucified Jesus hallucinates he marries her and has sex with her.

Film critics who viewed the R-rated movie in a Universal Studios screening room Tuesday, including Michael Medved of "Sneak Previews," Charles Champlin of the Los Angeles Times and Bob Thomas of The Associated Press, said they were unimpressed overall.

"It's the height of irony that this level of controversy could be generated by a movie this awful," said Medved.

"An intellectual exercise of the 'What if?' variety," Thomas said. "At times moving, often overwrought, and at least 40 minutes too long."

Daily Variety raved about the film.

"A film of challenging ideas, and not salacious provocations," the industry paper's review said.

And Time magazine's Richard Corliss wrote in this week's edition, "Those willing to accompany (director Martin) Scorese on his dangerous ride through the Gospels may believe he has created his masterpiece."

Scorsese, who also directed "Taxi Driver" and "Raging Bull," defended the film Tuesday night on ABC-TV's "Nightline."

WEATHER

According to the NWS meteorologist, a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms remains in the forecast for tonight, with a 20 percent chance forecast for Thursday.

Tonight's low temperature is predicted to be near 70, he said, with Thursday's high forecast in the mid-90s, he said.

Winds should be out of the southeast at 5 to 15 mph.

Woodall added that West Texas may be in for more wet weather as tropical storm Beryl winds down after hitting the Louisiana coast earlier this week. However, that occurrence remains "speculation," he said.

LOCAL

Conditions are right for a 30 percent chance of rain and partly cloudy skies tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be near 70 and winds will be southeasterly 5-15 mph.

Thursday's chance of rain will decrease to 20 percent, the high will be in the middle 90s and winds will continue out of the southeast 5-15 mph.

Tuesday's high of 97 was seven degrees cooler than the record high of 104 set for that date in 1947. The overnight low of 70 was seven degrees warmer than the record low of 63 set for this date in 1975.

STATE

Locally heavy rainfall is possible in Southeast Texas tonight as the remains of Tropical Storm Beryl move northwestward, forecasters say.

There is a good chance of showers and thunderstorms across most of the state through tonight and also the possibility of heavy rainall in extreme West Texas tonight.

Temperatures will be slightly cooler through Thursday.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 70s, ranging from the mid 60s in the Panhandle and mountains of the Trans-Pecos to the lower 80s along the coast.

Highs Thursday will be mostly in the 90s.

Scattered to numerous showers and thunderstorms were reported at dawn today from the upper Matagorda Peninsula into the northwest Gulf of Mexico.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms extended across West Texas from the Permian Basin to sections of the High Plains and low rolling plains and a few showers and isolated thunderstorms were reported over the Edwards Plateau.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s and 80s except int he Panhandle, extreme West Texas and the mountains of Trans-Pecos where readings have dipped intot he 60s. Extremes ranged from 68 at Amarillo and El paso to 83 at Laredo.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 74 at Wichita Falls, 79 at Fort Worth, 73 at Waco, 78 at Austin, 77 at San Antonio, 76 at Houston, 80 at Corpus Christi, 79 at Brownsville, 76 at San Angelo, 69 at Lubbock and 73 at Midland.

NATION

Tropical depression Beryl was heading northwest over Louisiana early today after dropping 1 to 2 inches of rain on southwest Mississippi and southern Louisiana.

The center of the depression, which was downgraded from a tropical storm on Tuesday, was near Lafayette, La., and was expected to continue toward the northwest.

On Tuesday evening, strong thunderstorms produced wind damage in west-central Texas. Winds gusted to 59 mph near Midland.

Thunderstorms dumped heavy rain over central New Mexico on Tuesday afternoon, causing local flooding. A 20-foot section of a bridge was washed out at Sandia Knolls, and considerable flooding of streets and dry gullies was reported at Albuquerque when over an inch of rain fell within an hour.

Other showers and thunderstorms fell over eastern Colorado, where large hail accompanied heavy rain in Colorado Springs; south-central Nebraska, Missouri, west-central Illinois, Florida and the coast of the Carolinas. The weather was fair over the rest of the nation.

The high for the nation Tuesday was 110 degrees at Bullhead City, Ariz.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 2 a.m. EDT included more than 2½ inches at the Marine Corps base at Cherry Point, N.C., more than 1 1/3 inches at Lafayette, La., and Albuquerque, and nearly an inch at Altus Air Force Base, Okla.

For today, scattered showers and thunderstorms were forecast for portions of the Ohio Valley and the southern half of the middle Mississippi Valley, and from eastern Texas and the lower Mississippi Valley to the southern Atlantic Coast and Florida.

Texas Tech now must press its search

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech University is gearing up for an accelerated presidential search and a more pressurized legislative session now that President Lauro Cavazos is leaving 11 months sooner than expected.

Cavazos' naming Tuesday as Secretary of Education left Tech officials pleased for their boss but uncertain of the university's administrative and political future.

Few decisions have been made in the wake of Tuesday's fast-breaking announcement.

The most likely scenario, according to regents chairman Wendell Mayes and finance Vice President Gene Payne, would be an emergency regents meeting to consider naming an interim or acting president. "Somebody's gotta' run the place," Mayes remarked.

Tech has a line of succession for temporary delegation of authority in the president's absence. The chain begins with academic and research Vice President Donald Haragan, who is out of town, followed by Payne, student affairs Vice President Robert Ewalt and arts and sciences Dean Joe Goodin.

Mayes expressed doubts, however, that any current Tech administrator would have time to take on the president's duties.

A permanent vacancy usually requires an interim, Payne outlined. Tech's last interim president was former arts and sciences Dean Lawrence Graves, who served in the late 70s after Cecil Mackey left and before Cavazos took the post in 1980.

AP Laserphoto

President Ronald Reagan is flanked by outgoing Education Secretary William Bennett, left, and nominees Lauro Cavazos. The current president of Texas Tech University in Lubbock, Cavazos would be the first Hispanic member of a presidential cabinet.

Although Cavazos told regents and some staff members last week he was being considered, Mayes said Tuesday night that no meetings have been scheduled to discuss an interim.

According to Mayes, Cavazos' nomination will not be submitted to the U.S. Senate until after Labor Day. He said regents will not meet until they know if and when Cavazos is to assume his new duties.

Outgoing Education Secretary William Bennett leaves in late September.

Cavazos was to leave Tech at the end of July 1989, take a developmental leave and return to teach anatomy.

Cavazos announced his resignation on May 11, two days after Bennett stepped down. Payne discounted the idea that Cavazos might have been positioning himself for the job, for which he also was considered in 1980.

Mayes emphasized that Cavazos' resignation was in no way related to Tuesday's events. "This was unforeseen," Mayes stressed.

Payne said Cavazos' selection did not surprise him. "It crossed my mind in May when Bennett resigned" that Cavazos might become a candidate, Payne said.

Tech has formed a presidential selection committee that met for the first time Friday. Search consultant Bill Funk of Dallas predicted that a replacement could be found by January.

No formal applications had been received as of late last week, but Cavazos' hastened departure could speed up the process considerably.

Another concern is how his absence will affect Tech's ability to obtain sufficient funding critical for the university and Health Sciences Center. Both schools are on tight budgets, and the center has faced several challenges in recent years.

State Sen. John Montford and Tech public affairs director Mike Sanders are predicting a tough legislative session for higher education in January. Payne said Cavazos' replacement will have to be "a quick study who can hit the ground running."

EDUCATION

Alicia Sandoval, spokeswoman for the National Education Association, called the nomination "just a ploy to help get Bush elected, and carry Texas. A classic case of tokenism."

"We are glad that the Reagan administration has finally appointed a Hispanic to the Cabinet, especially in the education field," Ms. Sandoval said. "However, we feel this particular announcement is politically motivated. Cavazos is like a substitute teacher. He won't have the clout to change anything in the little time he has."

Bush's pledge in July was a measure of the political importance of Hispanics, particularly in key battleground states such as Texas, California and Florida which have large Spanish-speaking populations.

Since 1980, the number of Hispanics in the United States has increased 30 percent, to 19 million, accounting for about 7.9 percent of the nation's population.

Cavazos, 61, appeared with Reagan in the White House briefing room and said, "This administration has clearly demonstrated that education is one of its highest priorities, and the initiatives that you have begun in this vital area will be of tremendous benefit to this nation and to this nation's future."

Cavazos, who has been president of Texas Tech in Lubbock since 1980, had announced in May that he planned to resign next July. He said he planned to take a leave and then return to teach anatomy in the medical school, where he is a tenured professor.

The educator is a native of South Texas, where his father was a foreman on the Santa Gertrudis division of the huge King Ranch. He and his wife, the former Peggy Murdock, have 10 children.

Cavazos received the National Hispanic Leadership award of the League of United Latin American Citizens in July for his efforts to reduce the dropout rate among Hispanic youth.

He is a former dean of the Tufts University School of Medicine. He began his teaching career as an associate professor of anatomy at the Medical College of Virginia.

At Tech, he headed a university and health sciences center with more than 24,000 students and 8,500 employes.

"His story is an American success story," Bennett said of Cavazos. "It is a tribute to his ability, to his hard work and to opportunity in the United States of America."

Cavazos is not a medical doctor, but received a Ph.D. in 1954 from Iowa State University. He earned his bachelor's and master's degrees at Texas Tech.

RALLY

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas said he was "very proud" of the efforts of the crime prevention commission, which was created several years ago by the City Council.

"We all know that crime prevention is just as important as apprehsension," Thomas told Night Out supporters at the rally.

Sheriff Gary Painter and Czech also spoke to the crowd, and thanked them for the help in boosting the popularity of crime prevention efforts.

"Today, we need the volunteers, we need the help," Czech said. "We want to see the porch lights on, we want to see the neighbors out together."

Ms. Meares also thanked area building managers, who agreed to light up their facilities to mark the event.

FILM

Regarding the sex scenes, he said, "It was important to show him go through all the steps of an ordinary life, to be married, to make love with his wife for the purposes of having children."

He denied any blasphemous intent.

"I'm a Catholic, raised Catholic," he said. "We have a right to explore God in our way."

As the critics watched, 150 protesters, none of whom had seen the film, rallied on another part of the studio lot to castigate Universal and its parent company, MCA Inc.

At the climax of the protest orchestrated by the Rev. R.L. Hymers Jr., a Baptist preacher, a mock crucifixion depicted a bloodied Jesus screaming as a man portraying MCA Chairman Lew Wasserman nailed him to a 10-foot cross.

Wasserman, encountered later, would not acknowledge a reporter's questions.

Earlier protests have drawn charges of anti-Semitism. Other Christian ministers denounced a march led by Hymers at a synagogue where he thought Wasserman worshipped.

There was no demonstration outside a New York screening.

Regarding the protests, Scorsese said: "I am not surprised at people being shocked by the idea of it. Not everybody's going to like it." But, he added, "I'm surprised at the anti-Semitism that's been brought around in the protesting."

HOLT

Holt said he had heard that other candidates have had trouble raising money in Texas because of the state's sour economy but added that Bush hasn't had that problem. "Texas has been very generous for the vice president," he said.

"Bobby has the strong business background to head up our finance operation," Clements said. "He brings energy and dedication to the campaign and will be an outstanding addition to the team."

Gramm said Holt will be "a key player" in the GOP's Texas plans. "He has the leadership and know-how to make our campaign a tremendous success," said Gramm, who co-chairs Texas Victory '88 with Clements.

Holt, a 51-year-old Midland oilman and cattleman, is a former three-term Midland city councilman. He served as co-chairman of the Reagan-Bush finance committee in 1984 and is Bush's national campaign vice chairman for fundraising.

The third generation Midlander is a Bush delegate to next week's Republican National Convention in New Orleans, only his second national convention despite 24 years of Republican involvement.

Clements and Gramm on Tuesday also appointed Houston oilman Bob Mosbacher as finance vice chairman of Texas Victory '88.

The city also doled out $217,000 to pay the increased cost of fringe benefits, paid the $175,000 price tag affixed to hiring four full-time employees and seven part-time employees; and authorized $90,000 for merit raises and job reclassifications.

Second to employee costs is a package of capital expenditure items showing an increase $359,596. Among the largest: $54,000 for street maintenance, $33,000 for building maintenance, $32,000 to the balance Hogan Park Golf Course budget, and $16,000 to the Midland Central Appraisal District.

The city also plans to add four officers to its police force.

By bringing the effective rate in line with current real estate prices, which have declined an average five percent in three years, city officials estimate a shortfall in the general fund of $2.76.

The requested tax increase will generate $990,000, according to Poe. Council is expected to tap about $1.8 million from reserves to make up the difference.

In other action Tuesday, council:

■ Approved a resolution approving plans and specifications and authorizing advertisements for bids on an Airport Lighting Rehabilitation Project.

The plans call for installing security fencing, runway and taxiway lighting and seal apron joints. Funds also are available for land acquisitions for new approaches at the airport.

The $1.7 million needed to fund the project comes from a Federal Aviation Administratin grant.

■ Approved a resolution authorizing the city to execute a lease for office space with the U.S. Border Patrol.

■ Approved a resolution appointing Mary Ann Oakley as an associate judge for Municipal Court.

■ Appointed Kingdon Hughes and Nick Taylor to the Midland Crime Prevention Commission.

SHUTTLE

As the engines, fed by liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen, generated thrust equal to the energy output of 23 Hoover Dams, a loud thunderclap rolled across the Kennedy Space Center.

The 85-ton spaceship strained against eight 3-foot-long hardened steel bolts holding it down on the pad. On an actual launch, two solid fuel booster rockets would ignite and explosive charges would sever the bolts to free the shuttle.

A total of 732 instruments were installed throughout the shuttle to take detailed measurements of all system operations. That's five times more than on any previous shuttle test or launch.

The ground-shaking firing followed five postponements, including a computer-ordered halt a split second before ignition last Thursday.

"Super job, super team," NASA administrator James C. Fletcher told the launch team following the test.

The 22-second burst of power today was just a fraction of the more than eight minutes that the engines are to burn in propelling Discovery into orbit. But engineers said the firing was long enough to test the entire shuttle system.

Clarify

According to Midland County court records, Billy Rodriguez was indicted recently for delivery of marijuana, which was published in Sunday's edition of Reporter-Telegram. Rodriguez, 23, lives at 416 S. Lee St. in Odessa.

Billy Rodriguez, 20, 4308 St. Andrews Drive in Midland, was not the person indicted.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the confusion.

Reagan to sign drought-relief bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan plans to sign a $3.9 billion aid package for drought-stricken farmers that cleared Congress with overwhelming support in both the House and Senate.

"We have kept the faith," House Agriculture Committee Chairman E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas, said Tuesday as the House approved the bill on a 383-18 vote. "Our promise has been kept."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan plans to sign the bill, which whisked through Congress in a matter of weeks. It emerged from a House-Senate conference committee last week and won Senate approval Monday.

The measure provides relief for farmers suffering crop losses of more than 35 percent of expected harvest due to drought or a variety of other causes, including hail, insect damage or even excessive moisture.

For damage exceeding the 35 percent eligibility level, the Agriculture Department would provide payments equal to 65 percent of lost income.

Also in the bill are larger payments for farmers with extraordinary losses. They would be eligible for payments equal to 90 percent of income lost as a result of crop losses exceeding 75 percent of expected yield.

The money for these payments is expected to come from savings that the government will realize as a result of the drought itself.

Income-support payments, known to farmers as deficiency payments, are based in part on how much the individual farmers produce. Destruction of crops by the drought has thus lowered the amount that the government-owned Commodity Credit Corp. must spend on these payments.

Some urban lawmakers in recent years have been highly critical of the amount the government spends on farm subsidies, but the drought bill largely escaped such criticism.

The House had been viewed as the toughest test. Unlike the Senate, it has members who represent no agricultural interests of any kind and some relish playing the role of fiscal watchdog when farm bills are on the floor.

Rep. Bob Walker, R-Pa., did complain about a $5.5 billion authorization contained in the bill to control water temperatures in the Sacramento River near California's Shasta Dam as a way to enhance salmon spawning.

"So the bill is going to take care of yuppies, too, and make sure their salmon mousse supply is not interfered with?" Walker said. He grumbled that the public "is sick and tired of Congress using every sort of emergency to pork barrel."

But there was virtually no political opposition to the general idea of drought relief.

"This bill is the product of a tremendous concerted effort to produce relief for drought-stricken farmers," said Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., the top Republican on the House Agriculture Committee.

Under the bill, farmers would not have to repay deficiency payments they have received in advance if production losses resulting from drought damage has now lowered their payment amount. But they would not be allowed to retain deficiency payments for lost crops and still receive disaster aid payments for the same lost crops.

To be eligible for disaster payments, farmers would have to purchase federal crop insurance for 1989.

Auditors say government likely can't fix check errors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten years of errors in federal records could cut the Social Security checks of 40 million recent retirees by $50 a month, a union says, and government auditors say there's little chance of fixing the mistakes.

Although a new agreement between two government agencies goes a long way toward preventing similar errors in the future, "early reconciliation results for past (error) backlogs are not encouraging," said Joseph F. Delfico, senior associate director of the General Accounting Office.

Kenneth L. Blaylock, president of the American Federation of Government Employees, which represents 60,000 employees of the Social Security Administration, said the discrepancies could affect the pensions of one-third of all recent retirees.

Testifying Tuesday before two House Ways and Means subcommittees, Blaylock said a recently announced plan by the Social Security Administration and the Internal Revenue Service to correct the records "is a cruel hoax and a charade." He said the two agencies are unwilling to commit the money and manpower needed to fix the problem.

At issue are the worker earnings reports that employers file with SSA; these reports determine how big a Social Security pension workers eventually receive. Employers must report once a year to SSA but four times a year to IRS.

For a number of reasons, those reports do not always match. Between 1978 and 1984, GAO estimates, employers reported $58.8 billion less to SSA than to IRS. That means the IRS collected and turned over to the Social Security trust funds more than $7.7 billion in taxes that are not credited to any worker's account.

That is only about 0.5 percent of all wages that SSA recorded during those years, but the discrepancy is enough to affect the pensions of 10 million retirees by about $17 a month, GAO estimated. Blaylock said the figures could reach 40 million and $50 a month unless the government makes a better effort to clear up past-year errors.

Another 2.1 million employer reports for 1984 through 1986 are being checked as well.

Conservatives now standing behind ticket

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Solomon Ortiz says he's had conservative Southern Democrats tell him they can now stand behind the party's nominee for president because Sen. Lloyd Bentsen is on the ticket.

Conservative Democratic leaders around Dixie say they're ready to campaign with Michael Dukakis, partly because he's chosen the pro-business, pro-defense Texan as his vice presidential running mate.

"Once they selected Bentsen they came to me, very conservative Democrats, and said: 'Now we can stand with this candidate on the platform, and now we can campaign with Dukakis, because of Bentsen,'" said Ortiz, a Corpus Christi Democrat. "They were from Alabama, Mississippi, all over the South."

Many boll weevil Democrats in Congress, who voted for Reagan's programs and avoided their party's presidential ticket in previous elections, say Bentsen's presence has energized them and their constituents.

Other factors play into the support Dukakis is apparently gathering across the South — part is the absence of President Reagan as a candidate and part is Dukakis himself, say some Democrats who see him as a tough and astute manager.

"For the first time in modern history, the nominee moved to the right in selecting his running mate," Rep. Charles Stenholm, a conservative Texan who can be considered the "head boll weevil" in the House, said Tuesday. "It's what we always ask for and finally received.

"I know of no candidate...for Congress who is running away from the ticket," said Stenholm, who remembers other election years when Democrats would not even appear on the same platform as the presidential nominee.

Although Stenholm supported previous Democratic tickets for president, he "couldn't influence one vote."

But Texas Republican Party Chairman Fred Meyer says the congressional support this time around is "all political rhetoric...They're doing it for political expediency. They're ready to paper over everything to win.

Meyer said the conservative Democrats were linking themselves with Bentsen "because in fact they're still running away from Dukakis."

Bush encouraged after poll shows Dukakis' lead shrinks

Associated Press

George Bush says he's gaining momentum after increasingly sharp exchanges with Michael Dukakis over image and issues, as a new poll gives Dukakis a smaller lead over the Republican vice president.

A Gallup Poll released Tuesday put Dukakis' margin at seven points over Bush, less than half of the 17-point edge the Massachusetts governor enjoyed coming out of the Democratic National Convention last month in Atlanta.

"I like it, I like it," Bush said Tuesday night in Philadelphia. While hastening to add he doesn't believe in polls any more, he said "it's a nice change" to narrow the gap.

Bush still has the Republican National Convention to come, beginning Monday in New Orleans, with its four nights of prime time partisanship designed to boost his standing with the voters.

Dukakis and Bush were both staying close to home today, with mostly private meetings in Boston and Washington, and the Democratic nominee was moving to blunt a stinging Republican attack on his support for a clean environment.

The Massachusetts governor will take part in the ground-breaking for a new sewage treatment plant on Boston Harbor, the first step in a $3 billion effort to clean up what the Environmental Protection Agency has called the filthiest harbor in the nation.

Bush had been getting some political mileage out of the harbor pollution. In his first term as governor, Dukakis opposed committing massive resources to the cleanup, a stance he now concedes was a mistake.

"He goes down to New Jersey and talks about the pollution off of New Jersey and look, over his shoulder is Boston Harbor, one of the most seriously polluted bodies of water in this country," Bush said Sunday.

Dukakis spokesman Dayton Duncan countered that "we'd be very happy" for the election to turn on the environmental record of the two candidates.

Tuesday brought good news for Bush in a new poll. The Gallup survey put Dukakis's support at 49 percent and Bush's at 42 percent in telephone interviews with 1,004 registered voters Aug. 5-7.

Only two weeks ago, Dukakis was sporting a 17-point margin over Bush, a 54-37 result in a Gallup Poll. Each survey had a 3 percentage point margin of error.

That would mean that the "bump" Dukakis gained from the Democratic convention had essentially evaporated.

Tuesday also brought another round of charges and countercharges between the major-party presidential candidates on themes that may well dominate the fall campaign.

Each sought to raise questions about just where his opponent stands on the issues.

"He's trying to run away from a record in Massachusetts on the very, very far liberal fringe," Bush said of Dukakis. "He thinks he can pre-empt the middle."

"There he goes again," replied Dukakis, recalling the line Ronald Reagan used to cut down Jimmy Carter in a 1980 presidential debate.

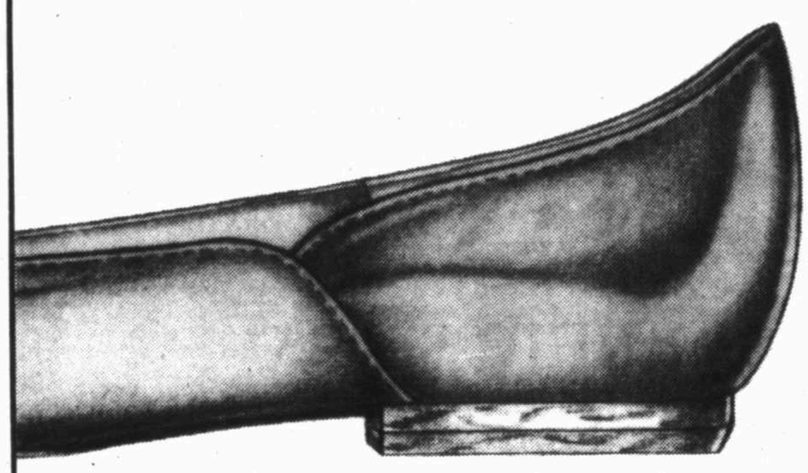

Bush had labeled Dukakis the "stealth candidate" on Monday, but the Democratic nominee came straight back at the incumbent vice president.

Baby kissing takes a political twist

Child care has become the motherhood issue of the 1988 presidential campaign. Both Vice President George Bush and Gov. Michael Dukakis are proposing federal child-care programs for working parents. They are kissing so many babies that one knows this definitely is the season of the politician.

With that realization, there is considerable political hype and self-interest in the proposals of both parties. Yet the nation simply cannot afford to support such potentially vast programs — this one could eventually reach $90 billion annually — without equally reducing other parts of the federal budget. Current federal deficits are a national — and international — menace.

The Dukakis plan would initially give states $2.5 billion to distribute for child care. It would create a large bureaucracy that would impose new regulations and licensing rules and monitor the program. This bill does not merely reach out to the poor; it extends funding to the middle class, those earning up to $36,000 a year. Dukakis obviously wants that political support.

There is a gross distortion in the Democratic plan. A poor working mother would get funding, while her equally poor next-door neighbor remaining home to watch her children, would receive none. This is not helping the needy. It is income redistribution at the expense of the family.

On the contrary, the Bush proposal would give low-income working families up to $1,000 in tax credits for each child. The money would allow parents to choose grandparents, neighbors or others to care for their children — creating no new government bureaucracy.

The Democrats would hire thousands of federal and state bureaucrats to dictate and control the program. Such past social engineering has put them where they are today — on the defensive.

Child care — with Washington as the Great Nursemaid — is not the duty of government. The creation of another bureaucratic machine, which would eat 25 percent of such funds, would be one more monument to past failure.

At the same time, however, this is not to argue against helping those working parents who have torn themselves away from welfare but are struggling above the poverty line. They can be assisted through the simple measure of added tax relief for the working poor. No new plan is needed.

This would be done — not because it is the duty of government — but such support makes social and economic sense by reinforcing poor working parents as productive citizens.

Such tax legislation would eliminate thousands of new bureaucrats, squelch the patronizing political bribe of middle class and women voters, and offer more help to those who truly need it.

Red tape may have helped kill woman

WASHINGTON — If not for government red tape, Carole Doster might be alive today.

Jack Anderson

In 1985, the 44-year-old State Department secretary wrote a memo asking security officers to keep her son out the building where she worked. He was prone to fits of violence and Carol Doster feared for her life.

Nearly a month after Mrs. Doster made her request, her 20-year-old son, Edward Steven Doster, smuggled a rifle and a knife into the heavily guarded State Department building in Washington. He shot and stabbed his mother to death and killed himself, just 120 feet from the offices of Secretary of State George Shultz.

The story behind the 1985 murder-suicide is that a piece of paper that might have saved Carole Doster's life was lost in a stack of paperwork until it was too late.

Steve Doster had a dependent's pass that allowed him entrance to the State Department building without going through metal detectors and without being searched. Because his mother was afraid of him, security guards in her building signed the paperwork to revoke that pass on June 21, 1985, but it was too late She was killed that day, before the paperwork left the security office.

Steve Doster had walked into the building with a break-down .22-caliber rifle hidden in a canvas bag. Once inside, he assembled his weapon in a restroom.

Our associate, Scott Sleek, has seen the recently declassified report of the State Department Inspector General's Office, which investigated the shooting. It shows that nearly two weeks may have passed from the time Doster wrote the memo to building security officials and the time she actually submitted it. The investigators also found that the memo may have sat on a security officer's desk for another 10 days.

The practice of giving passes to employees' family members dates back to the Iran hostage crisis. When hostage families doing business at the State Department complained that they had trouble getting past security guards.

Steve Doster had been issued a dependent's pass at his mother's request in February 1985.

While living with his mother, he displayed a violent temper. Steve Doster moved out of the apartment after she asked him to leave. Then, on May 30, Mrs. Doster wrote the memo requesting that her son's pass be revoked. She stamped her memo urgent, but for some reason did not submit it to the department's message center until the week of June 10. She may have been afraid of igniting her son's temper, or she may have been distracted by personal problems, the report said.

On June 11, Steve Doster showed up at the State Department carrying two knives. He was arrested by police on a prior assault charge.

After Doster's memo arrived at a security officer's desk, it sat unattended for more than a week. The officer told investigators that he routinely makes a quick check of all the mail before putting it in his "in-box" for later action. The officer didn't recall seeing Mrs. Doster's memo in that basket until June 19. It may have been stuck or paper-clipped to another document which hid it, according to the investigators' report.

The officer, described in the report as meticulous, drafted an order to security personnel as soon as he saw the memo on June 19. But he didn't sign the final order until June 21, the day Steve Doster used his pass for the last time.

Since the shooting, the State Department installed a computer-controlled pass system. Dependents must feed their cards into a reader which then opens a turnstile to admit them to the building. The system can be quickly programmed to reject a pass. Employees must justify their request for a dependent's pass and the dependent is subject to an investigation.

HEADS WILL ROLL — Presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater nearly lost his job during one of Nancy Reagan's fits of pique. Our sources in the White House say it happened earlier this year after ABC White House correspondent Sam Donaldson saw a memo he wasn't supposed to see.

The president's daily schedule includes a list of his appointments and "talking points" for each meeting — subjects to be covered, small talk and jokes. Someone left the suggested small talk in a packet of press releases and Donaldson read it on the air. The fuming first lady called Ken Duberstein, then assistant chief of staff. It was a blistering conversation and Duberstein promised that heads would roll. Fitzwater was home with the flu and couldn't explain how the leak happened. Fortunately for him and any other staffers who might be fingered, the Panama crisis erupted hours later and the case of the leaked talking points was forgotten.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The Christic Institute, a liberal legal foundation which sued the U.S government over the U.S. role in Central America, has turned up some interesting notes in an FBI file as a result of a subpoena. The notes belonged to a free-lance correspondent in Costa Rica who was investigating an assassination attempt against a contra leader. The correspondent says that his house was broken into and that his notes and confidential memos were copied. The FBI says it didn't break into the house, and it won't say how the notes ended up in an FBI file. We're reminded of a kid with a with a blank look on his face and a cookie jar on the end of his arm.

Another View:

Tuning out a case

The often sharp differences of opinion in U.S. Supreme Court rulings must make some people suspect that the justices don't always listen to one another.

Justice Harry A. Blackmun may have strengthened that suspicion recently. In discussing characteristics of his high bench colleagues at a conference of judges and lawyers in St. Louis, he remarked of Justice Thurgood Marshall:

"Thurgood is still full of humor, even though he seems sullen at times and overbearing and is tough on counsel at times. But we sit next to each other in conference. He is on my left. I wear a hearing aid, as you all know. He wears one on his right ear, so we both turn them off when we don't want to hear each other."

Is that any way to hear a case? Well, it may be one way.

A drama critic was once reproached for panning a play after having slept through the second and third acts. "How can you give an opinion when you fell asleep?" he was asked. "Falling asleep is an opinion," he replied.

In a similar vein, Blackmun might concur in the view that not listening is an opinion.

What's in water now? Certainly no sharks

CAPE COD — How bad was the ocean pollution along the East Coast recently? I'll tell you how bad it was. The sharks no longer consider it safe to go into the water.

Art Buchwald

Perhaps that's an exaggeration. The truth is that the sharks were swimming around, but nowhere near the shore. A submarine picked up on sonar the conversation of a school of sharks about 200 miles off Cape Cod the other day. The sonar operator identified the sharks as Jaws I, Jaws II, Jaws III and Jaws IV.

The transcript that follows has only just been released:

Jaws I: Don't go near Long Island. All the beaches have been turned into cesspools.

Jaws II: Ditto for New Jersey. Every bit of medical garbage known to man has been dumped into the water there, including blood contaminated with AIDS.

Jaws III: How can anyone live like that? Even squid don't poison their own water.

Jaws IV: I don't mind eating garbage but I'm not going to swim through the other stuff they're pumping into the sea.

Jaws I: I hear that it is so bad off Far Rockaway that you can get violently sick just by nuzzling your head against a swimmer's leg.

Jaws II: The people are not only releasing raw sewage from the land, but they are pumping it from their boats as well. There is no way we can go near the beach without getting herpes.

Jaws IV: Maybe we shouldn't stay here. The ocean currents could bring the stuff out to where we are now.

Jaws I: I would like to bite the arm off the person responsible for dumping all the medical swill into the sea.

Jaws II: I would, too, but only if I could hear him scream a lot.

Jaws III: And thrash around in helpless agony....

Jaws IV: That's all well and good, but what do we do about food? All the marine life in the area is now contaminated. Even the people on the beach are unsafe to eat.

Jaws I: That's outrageous. No one should be permitted to contaminate human beings. They're our meal ticket.

Jaws II: I can't believe that people who would dump all their waste into the sea would make sharks the heavies in the movies. For old times' sake, why don't we take one fast swim into shore and scare them to death?

Jaws III: We can't scare them if they are not allowed to go into the water.

Jaws IV: I hate to swim in red algae.

Jaws I: Just when we thought it was safe to go into the water we got sucked in by chemical waste. I guess we have to scratch Long Island as a good place for lunch.

Jaws II: It's not just Long Island. The whole ocean tastes funny. I say that all sea creatures pronounce the entire East Coast off limits until people can get their anti-pollution act together.

Jaws III: I hear it's not even safe around Martha's Vineyard or Nantucket either.

Jaws IV: Could we be declared an endangered species?

Jaws I: But we are not an endangered species, and these people are throwing all their bilge into the sea just to save money.

Jaws II: And to think people call us sharks.

Take stand on abuse

I keep hearing it, on TV, radio, newspaper — help stop child abuse! I think child abuse should be legalized. What right does anyone have to tell me how to solve my problems?

My kids interfere with my career, my relationships, my whole life! They don't fit into my plans, they get out of line, so I hurt them. Whose business is it anyway? They weren't "planned," they weren't "wanted." So what right do they have to live?

What's that you say? I should've thought about that before they were born? You're right. I should've killed them while they were still in my womb. It's legal that way.

Every day 4,000 children are violently murdered by the most evil child abuse of all — abortion! What have you done to stop this child abuse? The blood of over 22,000,000 children is crying out for your help. Don't turn the other way any longer. Dare to look at the mutilated and acid eaten bodies of the tiny innocent.

Take a stand against pro-death forces today! Or the ridiculous yet chilling argument above just might be next — what this apathetic, cold-hearted world accepts tomorrow. Think about it!

A better example

Your excellent lead editorial of Tuesday, July 26, "Drought cultivating Washington bailout," discussing Congressional relief for farmers was marred by an unfortunate choice of examples. "The rush to this relief recreates a fundamental question that has been around since the federal government bailed out New York City and the Chrysler Corp. Where does this all end?"

It would seem that substituting Lockheed for Chrysler would have been a more appropriate example. After all, Chrysler, under the able leadership of Lee Iacocca, paid their federal loan completely ... and early!

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Aug. 10, the 223rd day of 1988. There are 143 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 10, 1846, Congress chartered the "nation's attic," the Smithsonian Institution. It was named in honor of English scientist Joseph Smithson, whose bequest of $500,000 made it possible. Smithson's will directed that the money be used "for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men."

TOM WICKER

Will Navy tell truth on Airbus shooting?

First accounts of the Navy's internal investigation of the destruction of an Iranian passenger jet by the Aegis cruiser Vincennes suggest that the real story, however embarrassing, is being told at last. That impression ought to be taken with a grain of salt, for at least two reasons:

Wicker

First, since Iran Air Flight 655 was shot down over the Persian Gulf with the loss of 290 lives, the Navy has had to back steadily away from its original misleading statements, in which it insisted that no blame should attach to the Vincennes for acting in what its captain believed to be self-defense. What assurance is there, in view of this record, that the official investigation now will disclose the whole truth about the Vincennes' disastrous miscalculation?

Second, though the report has not been released formally, The New York Times account of it stresses that it's expected to place major responsibility on "crew error arising from the psychological stress of being in combat for the first time." But "no malfunction" in the Vincennes' exotic system of radar detection and electronic fire control is to be cited — though this "Aegis" system has failed often enough in previous tests to have aroused suspicion that it's either technologically flawed or too sophisticated for ill-trained crews.

Rep. Denny Smith, an Oregon Republican who was a fighter pilot with experience in Vietnam, recently called Aegis "just one of many flawed weapons the United States is buying, weapons often unsuited to a real combat environment." Criticizing such weapons and the Pentagon's methods of procuring and testing them, he wrote in The Washington Post on July 31:

"Off the coast of Beirut in 1983, an Aegis cruiser could not spot a light plane that was heading menacingly toward one of our destroyers; in a 1983 engagement with Libya in the Gulf of Sidra, an Aegis cruiser reported sinking a Libyan patrol boat that later proved to be a low-flying rain cloud."

But Congress and the Pentagon have continued to buy Aegis ships, though Smith said Aegis tests had been among those criticized in a General Accounting Office report. The GAO asserted that the Pentagon's weapons testing procedures were "not methodologically adequate" and tended to yield unduly favorable assessments not supported by the evidence.

The GAO found "significant problems or limitations" in tests of Aegis in precisely the area to be cited in the forthcoming Navy report — putting equipment and personnel under realistic stress that could give some reliable idea of how they would operate in actual combat.

It would hardly be surprising, therefore, if in the forthcoming report the Navy attempted again to protect its investment in and reliance on Aegis by pinning the blame for the destruction of Flight 655 on a few enlisted men and officers. Members of Congress with a responsibility for weapons procurement and performance should insist on a rigorous report on the function of the system as well as those who tried to operate it.

A cold eye ought also to be cast along the dismal trail of misleading or false statements the Navy already has laid down. No doubt some or perhaps even most of these were owing to too few facts and too much optimism, rather than to outright deception. Even so, the Navy and the Pentagon had no business rushing into print and onto the airwaves with explanations both incomplete and self-serving. The consequence is that many in the world, both East and West, will believe not only that the U.S. shot down the Airbus A300 but that it then tried to cover up its responsibility.

Even after The Times's publication of the Navy report's main points, Vice President Bush continued to insist that the Iranians had been irresponsible to send a civilian aircraft over a combat zone. But before he first made that statement to the United Nations, he should have known better; two days after the disaster, Pentagon officials told members of Congress that the Iranian jet was properly in the air corridor prescribed for civilian aircraft.

And what about all those statements that the destruction of Flight 655 was entirely different from the Soviet shooting down of K.A.L. 007 in 1983? That disaster took place in highly sensitive Soviet airspace on the night of a planned missile test, when an overly excited Soviet air defense, acting on inadequate information, fired too hastily. That's just about what the Navy is expected to report that the Vincennes crewmen did in the Persian Gulf on July 3.

NATION in brief

Human trials of new AIDS drug start today

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new type of genetically engineered AIDS drug is being tested starting today on human victims of the deadly disease at the National Cancer Institute.

The first round of tests is designed to assess the safety of the drug, called CD4, rather than its effectiveness, but researchers hope the drug will open new avenues to attack the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

The drug mimics a protein normally found on the surface of immune system cells that are susceptible to the AIDS virus.

Researchers hope the experimental drug will, in effect, fool the deadly virus into harmlessly attaching itself to the injected substance rather than the similar receptors on immune system cells.

Similar studies will begin in a few days at San Francisco General Hospital and New England Deaconess Hospital in Boston.

About 50 patients will be involved in the first round of tests of the drug which is manufactured by Genetech Inc. of San Francisco.

Senate OKs dumping ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate vote to ban dumping sludge in the Atlantic Ocean brings the nation "closer to the day when we'll stop using the ocean as a sewer," a key sponsor of the measure says.

The Senate, spurred by fears about sludge and medical waste that has washed up recently on East Coast beaches, voted 97-0 on Tuesday to bar the practice.

A similar bill is awaiting action in the House.

The Senate measure bans the dumping of municipal sludge off the coasts of New York and New Jersey after 1991 and orders the closing of a sludge dump site 106 miles off the New Jersey coast, the only site where sludge can currently be legally dumped.

The site is used by six sewage authorities in New Jersey and three in New York, including the city of New York.

The Senate added an amendment by Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., which bans the disposal of all medical waste in oceans or streams. It also approved another amendment, by Lautenberg, providing a five-year prison sentence for anyone caught violating that ban.

'Loan-a-cone' started

GROVELAND, Calif. (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service is looking for a few good pinecones.

They need the seeds to restore about 1 million acres of Northern California forests destroyed by fire in the past two years.

Officials of Stanislaus National Forest on Tuesday unveiled their so-called "loan-a-cone program" at a ranch here where the owners have offered cones from 23 high-quality Ponderosa pines.

"We desperately need the help of private landowners who have the cones on their trees that match our criteria," said Mike Rutty, a regeneration specialist for the Forest Service.

Officials hope to gather 1.5 tons of seeds from private landowners. That's about 35 percent of what they need to plant about 8.5 million trees on 811,000 acres in the Stanislaus, and 170,000 acres in the Shasta-Trinity national forests.

Landfill laws upgraded

WASHINGTON (AP) — A wide variety of hazardous industrial wastes will have to be rendered harmless before being dumped in landfills under new rules announced by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The congressionally mandated land-disposal regulations are expected to cost industry up to $950 million a year, according to J. Winston Porter, assistant EPA administrator for solid waste and emergency response.

The requirement to neutralize hazardous wastes before putting them in landfills will affect an estimated 861 million gallons of waste each year, according to the EPA statement.

It said the new rules would cover, among other things, some 129 million gallons of waste from electroplating and about 83 million gallons of furnace dust produced by mills that recycle scrap metals.

Panel grants reprieve

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — A divided appeals panel granted Yonkers a temporary reprieve from bankrupting fines hours after a state board took control of the city's finances in a dispute over housing desegregation.

"I knew we could find sanity outside (Judge Leonard) Sand's courtroom," said City Council Minority Leader Nicholas Longo, who was found in contempt by the U.S. District judge for refusing to endorse Sand's housing desegregation plan.

Three other councilmen and the city also were declared in contempt and subjected to fines since the Aug. 2 council vote that defied the desegregation order.

The one-week stay granted Tuesday by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals staved off layoffs due to the city's $100-a-day fine, which has been doubled daily. City officials had predicted layoffs would begin as early as next Tuesday.

For Longo and the three other councilmen, the stay halted their $500-a-day personal fines, which did not double, and removed Sand's threat of imprisonment he made had their contempt continued through today.

Senators closer to Contra aid pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic and Republican senators accused each other of seeking political advantage but appeared close to a grudging agreement on new U.S. aid to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

After days of inconclusive negotiations, some Republican senators said many of their number appeared ready to accept a Democratic-drafted compromise Contra aid plan which holds out the possibility of releasing stockpiled arms to the rebels opposing Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

If agreement is reached, it will be because a majority of Republicans realized that the alternative may be no aid at all, these senators said.

"I go home with high hopes," said Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., at the end of another long day of repeated conferences on and off the Senate floor.

But he added: "Time is running out. The sands in the hour glass are falling, one by one."

Byrd made clear that if there is to be a unified Senate position on Contra aid, including the possibility of renewing some military assistance, the concessions will have to be made by the GOP.

"On my side of the aisle, it's a fragile coalition and I'm not going to tamper with it," Byrd said. "There's just no more give on this side. Our coalition would just fall apart."

Several key Republican senators, most of them moderates, urged that a compromise be reached, warning that the alternative might be no Contra aid of any kind.

The Democratic plan would provide immediate humanitarian assistance but would not provide military aid unless both House and Senate approved a subsequent request from President Reagan.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., appealing to his colleagues to rally behind a single, unified package that would be sponsored by both Byrd and Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas, told the Senate: "It's far more important than any political consideration that if, even in this election year, we can speak with one voice" to Nicaragua's Marxist Sandinista rulers.

"We're so close," Rudman said. "It's almost at the point where we ought to join together...It would take only a small concession from the majority and minority leaders to do it."

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., a strong Contra-aid supporter, accused Republicans of playing politics with the issue and said the reluctance of GOP senators to embrace the Democratic aid package is "a real test of their sincerity."

"If they really want aid to the Contras, I don't see how in the world they can turn their backs on this proposal," Boren said, adding that it represents the only way to get aid to the Contras through Congress without a filibuster by aid opponents.

Street fair to benefit Basin food bank

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Where there are people, there is hunger.

And where there is food in abundance, there are surpluses.

And putting the two together is the role of the Permian Basin Food Bank, which collects donated foods, conducts food drives and then buys other needed foods to be distributed to service agencies which, in turn, see that poor and hungry people get fed as nutritiously as possible.

"You see the results immediately. It's tangible," said Dale Fowler, president of the food bank's board of directors. "You see the food go from here to the agencies to the hungry people."

The food bank distributes food to many non-profit agencies, such as soup kitchens, church groups serving the poor, and old-line agencies, including The Salvation Army and St. Vincent De Paul, in the Midland-Odessa area.

"There always is going to be surpluses," said Dolly Neff, the food bank's executive director, "and non-profit agencies always have needs."

"Dolly goes out, twists arms, persuades, negotiates, deals with, charms and does most everything" to find food for the food bank, whose mission is to "get food in and get it out" to the poor and hungry people of West Texas, Fowler said.

And the food bank's mission will be celebrated and benefited from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday when a Summertime Street Fair is held in the Midland Community Theatre's Courtyard at 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Each person who donates canned food goods will be eligible to sample foods — from staples to ice cream and candy — prepared by 16 Midland restaurants and confectionaries.

The recommended admission price is at least two cans of food or equivalent cash.

To help the food become better digested and to make the guests merry, music-making, singing and dancing will be held during the four-hour fanfare.

"Twenty-two agencies in Midland are served by the food bank," said Linda Bond, who is coordinating the Summertime Street Fair, "and that makes a difference to all of us. The food bank helps the community, and the community is what we are."

Odessan Joan Flynn, who helped organize the food bank in 1985, said that the fair is a "wonderful gift."

"I get excited when I see people working together to help people," Ms. Flynn said. "I really am very impressed by people working together. I think we need to work together to have an impact on community needs."

Restaurateur Karen Scarcelli of Venezia Italian restaurant said that the fair would be a "plug" for the restaurant.

But, she added, "It gives me a chance to do something, to send cans of food or cash" to the food bank.

"It's just a good cause," Ms. Scarcelli said. "You can see an immediate good being done. You can see the results immediately. It's not like sending money halfway around the world and not knowing where it is going."

"When you are in business," she said, "you become more involved in the community."

In Midland, the food bank provides food and goods for such agencies as the the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, High Sky Children's Ranch, Teen Challenge of the Permian Basin, Victory Outreach, Blessings of Obedience Soup Kitchen, The Salvation Army, St. Vincent De Paul, and Area Methodists Outreach Services.

There is no charge for the food. But the food bank assesses 10 cents a pound handling fee to sustain its operations.

"It's heart-warming," Linda Moore, AMOS executive director, said of the mission to feed the hungry. "We are serving all ages of people" — from, for example, an 81-year-old diabetic who has an amputated leg to babies "before they are born" through nourishing their mothers.

"I'm also feeding a stray cat," Ms. Moore said. "We've got to take care of all of God's children whether they are two-legged or four-legged."

The food bank takes in pet food and virtually all items — from toilet paper to frozen foods and produce — found in grocery stores. The food bank, however, does not distribute alcoholic beverages or drugs.

"We serve the entire community," Ms. Moore said. "One of my volunteers is a retired Baptist minister."

Another is J.R. Smith, a retired postal clerk and an active Methodist.

"I'm retired," Smith said, "and I have time to work."

The food bank, which is headquartered in Odessa, collects food items and household goods, such as paper goods, soap, toothbrushes, and other toiletries which may be slightly damaged in packaging but otherwise are either edible or usable.

"One week I may get a truck load of soy, and another week I may get a surplus of diapers," Ms. Neff said. "And you are not going to make a very well balanced meal out of that."

But in her role of ferreting out surplus and damaged food items, Ms. Neff brings in foods from Midland-Odessa area groceries stores and food processors; from Second Harvest, a nationwide network of food banks, which calls on the major food processors to get damaged and surplus foods to distribute to food banks; and also purchases foods, particular high-protein goods such as beans, rice and tuna fish with grant funds she solicits.

Food donors are protected by the Good Faith Donor Act.

"That makes people feel better about donating," said Fowler, an Odessa schoolteacher who lives in Midland. "And they get a tax break."

Fowler noted that poor people "eat just like everybody else. We like for people to eat as nutritionally as possible."

Fowler's interest in the food bank is fueled by his desire to honor the Golden Rule: "Treat others as you would like to be treated."

Grand jury to hear evidence in shooting

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A Midland County grand jury today is scheduled to hear evidence in the case of a 51-year-old man who was shot last weekend by a Midland police officer, and also expected to review the case in which five people were killed in a two-vehicle accident, Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre said.

Several persons, including Det. Brian Bogart and attorney Tom Morgan, are expected to testify about the shooting early Saturday at the Bojangles nightclub, 3709 W. Wall Ave., Schorre said. Bogart, 31, was working on a burglary investigation when Howard Mitchell of Midland allegedly displayed a loaded revolver, and appeared to point it at the officer, police have said.

On Tuesday, police announced a shooting team investigation concluded that Bogart acted properly when he shot the man twice.

This morning, Mitchell remained hospitalized in critical condition at Odessa Medical Center, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Morgan, who has questioned the police version of the incident, was subpoenaed by Schorre after he made several statements to the press.

Witnesses to a July 23 accident which killed three Midlanders and two other persons are also expected to appear before grand jurors, Schorre said.

Troy Dal Richburg, 23, 8403-A Golder in Odessa, has been charged with five counts of involuntary manslaughter. According to a Department of Public Safety report, Richburg was driving a pickup truck traveling westbound on west U.S. Highway 80 at a high rate of speed.

After the truck sped over a hill, it smashed into a 1982 Chevrolet four-door sedan packed with passengers, according to the DPS.

Results of a blood-alcohol test, which determines if Richburg was legally drunk at the time of the accident, was not released by Schorre's office, but will be presented to grand jurors, he said.

Killed in the accident were Ascencsion Ramirez Sr., 38, and his daughters, Amy Michelle Ramirez, 16, and 11-year-old Amanda Rose Ramirez, all of Midland. Their mother, Yolanda Sanchez Ramirez, 35, who was driving the car at the time, suffered a broken foot and was released from Midland Memorial Hospital on July 30, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Also killed in the accident were Derek Ryan Sanchez, 7, of Pasadena, and 16-month-old Amanda Kaye Hiarker of Sugar Land.

Another Pasadena youngster, Dustin Ray Sanchez, 4, suffered head injuries and was transferred from MMH to a hospital in the Houston area, the MMH spokeswoman said.

Richburg suffered minor injuries in the crash and was treated and released at MMH before he was taken to jail, according to the DPS.

Woman with butcher knife scares away masked man

By PATRICK CRIMMINS

A masked burglar-rapist who has been terrorizing women on Midland's east side struck again early today, but was scared away by the sight of a butcher knife, police said.

The man, who police say has sexually assaulted several women and committed over a dozen burglaries, entered an east side home about 12:50 a.m., and walked to the bedroom of a 25-year-old woman who was sleeping at the time.

The woman heard a noise, and when she awoke the man was standing near her bed, police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said.

"She pulled a butcher knife from under her pillow, and he ran off — quickly," White said.

The man apparently got into the house through a locked back door after he pried it open with a screwdriver, White said.

The woman, who was not injured, described him as a black man who wore a white hood with holes cut out so he could see, according to a report of the incident. He wore dark pants, and escaped on foot, according to the report.

The man last struck July 27, when he broke into the east side home of a 33-year-old woman and assaulted her. In each attack, he has worn a mask or cloth over his face and always carries a screwdriver, according to investigators.

The man has committed as many as 15 attempted burglaries or burglaries on the east side since the first incident was recorded April 1. So far, including today's incident, his activities have been confined to an area bordered by A Street on the west, Wadley on the north, Louisiana Avenue on the south, and Fairgrounds Road on the east, according to police.

The man has been described as black, in his 20s, about 5 feet 10 inches to 6 feet tall, with a slender build, White said.

Sgt. Milton O'Bryant of Crime Stoppers said his office had been contacted about the case, and he said filming of a "Crime of the Week" had been planned, with the episode to air Aug. 16 on television.

"We are anxious to find this person," White said of a previous request for the public's help in the case. "We want anyone, anytime, to report any suspicious activity in that area."

Public hearing set on MISD's proposed tax rate, budget

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

In six days, taxpayers can voice their opinions concerning the school district's proposed tax rate and budget for the upcoming school year.

At the regular meeting of the Midland Independent School District Tuesday, trustees again studied the tentative 1988-89 $63,213,380 budget line by line.

The proposed 13.32 percent tax rate hike still stands and will be up for scrutiny at the public meeting Aug. 16 at 7 p.m.

The suggested new tax rate of 90.54 cents per $100 of valuation is almost 11 cents greater than the 79.9 cent amount levied for the past two years.

A taxpayer with a $75,000 home last year paid $599.25 in school district taxes. If the school district's proposed hike is approved, that same taxpayer would pay $679.05 next year for MISD taxes.

However, school district officials have pointed out that most taxpayers likely will pay less than that apparent $80 increase because of the variety of exemptions open to taxpayers.

Odessa hospital battle could end up in court

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County and Medical Center Hospital's Board of Managers could be headed for the courthouse if new administrators are hired after Sept. 30, a Hospital Corporation of American vice president indicated Tuesday following the regular monthly meeting of the hospital board.

"We feel we have a valid agreement now," said Dick Coughlin, who added HCA has not been notified in writing, as required by the new agreement signed March 1988, of any breach of contract that would allow termination of that agreement.

Couglin's remarks came after a majority of the MCH Board of Managers created a committee "to seek qualified applicants for the following positions: interim administrator, hospital administrator, chief operating officer and other administrative positions deemed necessary and to engage the services of any professional firm the committee deems necessary..."

The committee authorization to hire "any professional firm" would be for the purpose of drafting a request for proposal that outline specifications for "more cost effective consultant services" for MCH.

According to Coughlin, the first indication of discontent with HCA came Monday during a joint meeting of the MCH board and Ector County Commissioners Court members, when a majority of the MCH board recommended approval of the county-owned facility's $52 million budget without funds to cover HCA's slightly more than $400,000 management fees.

Saying he has been in Odessa about 10 days, Coughlin said, "I've had conversations with people and they spoke about lack of communication and some nebulous kinds of problems, but nobody put it in writing and gave it to us as a matter to correct."

"However, we were working on it anyway."

Longtime administrator Sam Glenney and financial officer Russ Kyler, who resigned last month, are employed by HCA. Glenney, who earns about $94,000 as MCH administrator, said Tuesday afternoon that, if the HCA contract with MCH is actually terminated as of Sept. 30, he would stay with HCA. Glenney has been MCH administrator since inception of the HCA-MCH consulting agreement more than 11 years ago.

In addition to approving the MCH 1988-89 budget Monday, commissioners agreed to a continuing restructuring effort by MCH board members. In line with the proposal that top administrators be county employees, commissioners agreed to a proposed salary of as much as $105,000 annually for a new chief administrator, plus salaries of as much as $65,000 for a chief operating officer and assistant administrator for finance.

Boy dies in cycle-bike accident

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A motorcyle-bicycle accident in West Odessa Tuesday afternoon claimed the life of a 9-year-old boy.

According to the Department of Public Safety, a motorcyle driven by John Travis Mattlen Jr., 20, was northbound on Redondo Ave. near the intersection of West 29th Street about 1 p.m. Tuesday when Mattlen attempted to pass on the left side of a bicycle riden by Christopher Reno.

DPS Trooper John Feenstra indicated in his report that the Reno youth moved to the left also and into the path of the motorcycle. The youngster was thrown from his bicycle and suffered multiple injuries. He was pronounced dead at Medical Center Hospital at 1:54 p.m.

Mattlen suffered a broken wrist, according to the DPS, and was treated at MCH and released.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

ALL-STAR retreats planned

From Staff Reports

The public information office of the Midland Independent School District has announced that incoming high school ninth grade students are eligible to participate in two-day ALL-STAR retreats.

The Lee High School retreat is scheduled for Aug. 23 and 24. The Midland High School retreat will follow, on Aug. 25 and 26. Both overnight retreats begin at 12:30 p.m. and will take place on the students' respective campuses.

Since ALL STAR is an inclusive activity, relying upon school, community and parental support and involvement, participants' parents are asked to attend a combined orientation session 7 p.m. Aug. 22 in the Lee High School auditorium.

In addition to training in decision-making skills, self-esteem and positive peer interaction, participants will receive a campus orientation. The orientation will include information on extracurricular activites and the code of student conduct.

The program is free. However, parents are asked to make a $20.00 donation to cover the cost of meals and snacks.

For more information, students and parents can call their campus or Maridell Fryar, executive director of instructional services, 682-8611.

Tuition deadline nears

Thursday is the deadline for payment of tuition and fees for students who registered early the past four weeks for Midland College's fall semester.

Under its new early registration system, students were allowed to enroll and be assigned classes. Payment could be made at the time of enrollment, or deferred until the end of the early registration system.

"Students who do not pay their fees by 5 p.m. Thursday will be dropped from the classes for which they registered," said Dr. Don Cates, associate dean of students and registrar.

"This means they no longer are registered for those classes and will have to register again," Cates said.

Students who do not register by 5 p.m. Thursday, or don't pay their fees, must register on Aug. 23 or 24.

"Since classes are filling up rapidly, those students who early registered and want to assure they will be in the classes they want at the times they want must pay their fees no later than Thursday," Cates said.

Prospective students are being enrolled through Thursday from 7 a.m.-5 p.m. in the Student Center.

Anyone who has questions about this procedure can call 685-4501 for an explanation.

Classes to be finalized

The last day for parent and/or student initiated schedule changes, grades nine through 12, is quickly approaching. The deadline is slated for August 15.

Students new to Midland should call the appropriate campus to arrange for enrollment. Transcripts and other pertinent records will be required.

Freshmen campus and high school office hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Inquiries should be directed to the school counselors. For campus locations and phone numbers, consult your phone directory or call the Midland administration offices at 682-8611.

Astronomers to meet

West Texas Astronomers will conduct a symposium on "Views of The Scorpius-Sagittarius Region" at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium, 7:30 p.m. Thursday. Amateur astronomers and the public are invited to participate.

"First Light," a planetarium sky show, will be presented at 2 and 3:30 p.m. Sunday and at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 16 and 17. The planetarium, located in Haley Park, is open to the public without charge.

Campus orientation set

Students entering the seventh and eighth grade this fall should plan to attend their campus orientation, scheduled for 9:30 a.m. August 19.

This session will familiarize the students with the guidelines as well as the opportunities of this new phase in their academic journey.

For more information, students/parents should call the appropriate junior high campus.

Accident victim identified

BIG SPRING — The Department of Public Safety has released the name of a Big Spring youth who was one of two persons killed late Monday after the go-cart in which they were riding was struck by a van near Interstate 20.

Kenneth Ray Macke, 15, was killed in the accident which occurred at 9:40 p.m. three miles east of Big Spring on the south service road, DPS reported. Clinton Monroe Robbins, 16, also suffered fatal injuries in the crash, according to the DPS.

The two youths were riding in the go-cart, which was not equipped with lights, southbound on a paved road that crosses under I-20 between the north and south service road. The go-cart failed to stop at a stop sign and was struck broadside by a westbound vehicle, a 1978 Chevrolet van driven by Mary McMullin Paul of Big Spring, DPS reports said.

The driver of the van was not injured, according to the DPS.

Dead man's ad seeks loan

LUBBOCK (AP) — A man whose charred remains were found inside a burning van had placed a newspaper advertisement shortly before his death seeking a $100,000 loan.

The remains of Lewis Melvin Carson, 63, of Lubbock were discovered Friday in Lynn County, and Justice of the Peace Sam Edwards ruled the death a homicide.

A passer-by spotted the burning van on a county dirt road just west of state Highway 87. Lynn County Sheriff's deputy J.W. Jolly said authorities believe Carson was dead before the fire was started.

The man suffered a single gunshot wound to the chest, Edwards said.

On Thursday, Carson placed a classified advertisement with the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal seeking the loan, which he said he would pay back in 15 months with a 40 percent interest rate.

"This guy was a gambler-type person who would bet on anything," said Lynn County Sheriff Clifford Laws. "He'd hustle, play pool and took trips to Las Vegas."

The Texas Rangers are assisting with the investigation, but authorities have not yet discovered a motive for the killing. The investigation has turned up no suspects, said Texas Ranger Jackie Peoples.

Authorities are looking into a bankruptcy filing for a business Carson once owned and operated and are gathering information about his personal life from friends and relatives.

Carson and his wife, Sue, obtained a divorce two years ago, filed about the same time as the bankruptcy, said Laws.

FOOD

Fowler's wife, Mariana, shares her husband's interest in getting food to the poor and hungry and is especially concerned with ensuring that unborn babies are well nourished through their mothers and in babies and young people.

"If we don't pay to get proper nutrition to young people, we are going to pay later," Mrs. Fowler said. "If they are to grow up healthy and strong, they've got to have good nutrition," she said.

And in that regard, it matters not "how many toys" a child may have. "Proper nutrition during pregnancy is essential to healthy, intelligent children. That's the best start you can give a child."

MISD

Even with the tax hike, trustees foresee spending about $1.3 million in fund reserves to meet the expected $63-million-plus budget.

The public hearing is scheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 16, at the MISD administration building located at 702 North N St.

Trustees Tuesday also chose the Texas School Services Foundation insurance proposal for the MISD fleet of cars, trucks and buses.

The annual premium will be $69,083 with a total liability of $1 million per incident, said Ted Miller, MISD director of communications.

The only other proposal came from the Mims and Stephens Insurance Agency in Midland. That firm's bid was about $15,000 higher than the one chosen and had a total liability of $400,000 per incident, school officials said.

Developer, OSA reach agreement

ODESSA — An out-of-court settlement Tuesday between prominent developer Louis Rochester and Odessa Savings Association resulted in the dismissal of a lawsuit filed Aug. 1 to block the foreclosure sale of joint venture properties.

Jim Moseley, one of Rochester's Dallas attorneys, had said Monday negotiations were under way and he expected an agreement to be finalized Tuesday that would result in dismissal of the lawsuit.

Moseley said Monday that, while terms of the out-of-court agreement would not be made public, "basically, we'll continue to live under the joint venture agreements."

He indicated, however, he expected the agreement essentially would be an extension of the temporary restraining order granted Monday by 70th District Court Judge Gene Ater, which blocked the Aug. 2 planned sale of properties in a joint venture involving Rochester, his daughter, Joy, and Odessa Savings.

Rochester's lawsuit, in addition to blocking sale of the properties, sought to force Odessa Savings to honor all the terms of the joint venture agreements, which included "providing and obtaining financing to carry on the affairs of the joint ventures."

Moseley did not indicate the agreement reached Tuesday would require Odessa Savings to do anything about joint venture loans that have been in default.

From 1974 until 1983, Rochester, his daughter and son, Paul, and Odessa Savings have been involved in seven joint venture projects.

Rochester stated in his lawsuit that the joint ventures have earned Odessa Savings about $14 million in profit distribution and interest payments.

Rochester was named last month in a 25-count federal grand jury indictment in connection with loans made for the joint venture projects. Until about two years ago, Rochester had served on the Odessa Savings board of directors and as an advisory director.

Culver swears in PUC commissioner

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Saying he sympathizes with consumers for the high electric bills they pay, retired Houston lawyer William B. Cassin was sworn in Tuesday as a Public Utility Commissioner.

In action this morning, Cassin nominated Marta Gerytok also of Houston to be chairman of the three-member panel that regulates electric and telephone utilities.

Cassin, 56, took the oath on Tuesday from Supreme Court Justice Barbara Culver of Midland.

"I would say that I sympathize with (ratepayers) very much because I pay a very sizable electric bill myself," said Cassin, a former gas supplier who heads D2 Inc., a computer software company in Austin.

The PUC, he said, is a "vital part of our economy...(that) affects all of the citizens of this state in their pocketbooks, and that is very important."

Cassin said he will work to balance industry and ratepayer interests with a strict eye on the state's utility regulation laws.

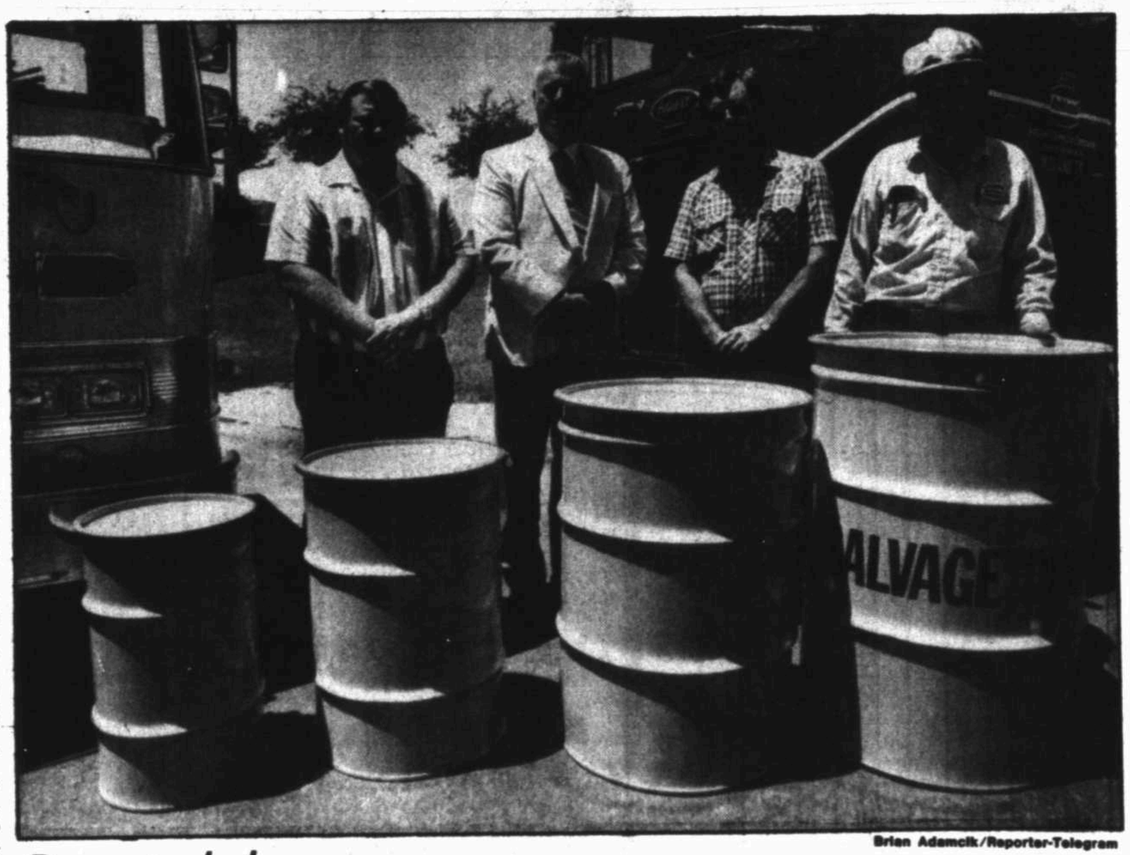

"I intend to apply those laws to the facts that are brought before me by the utilities and certainly by the representatives of the consumers," he said.

Cassin, who has long been active in the Republican Party, will work with Greytok, a fellow appointee of Gov. Bill Clements, and Jo Campbell, who was appointed by former Gov. Mark White, a Democrat.

Greytok and Campbell have been at odds in recent weeks, at times resorting to loud arguments in their inability to agree on important issues pending before the PUC.

Cassin said he will not allow his former association with Houston Lighting & Power Co. influence his decisions. He worked for 10 years during the 1960s representing HL&P as a lawyer in the firm of Baker & Botts.

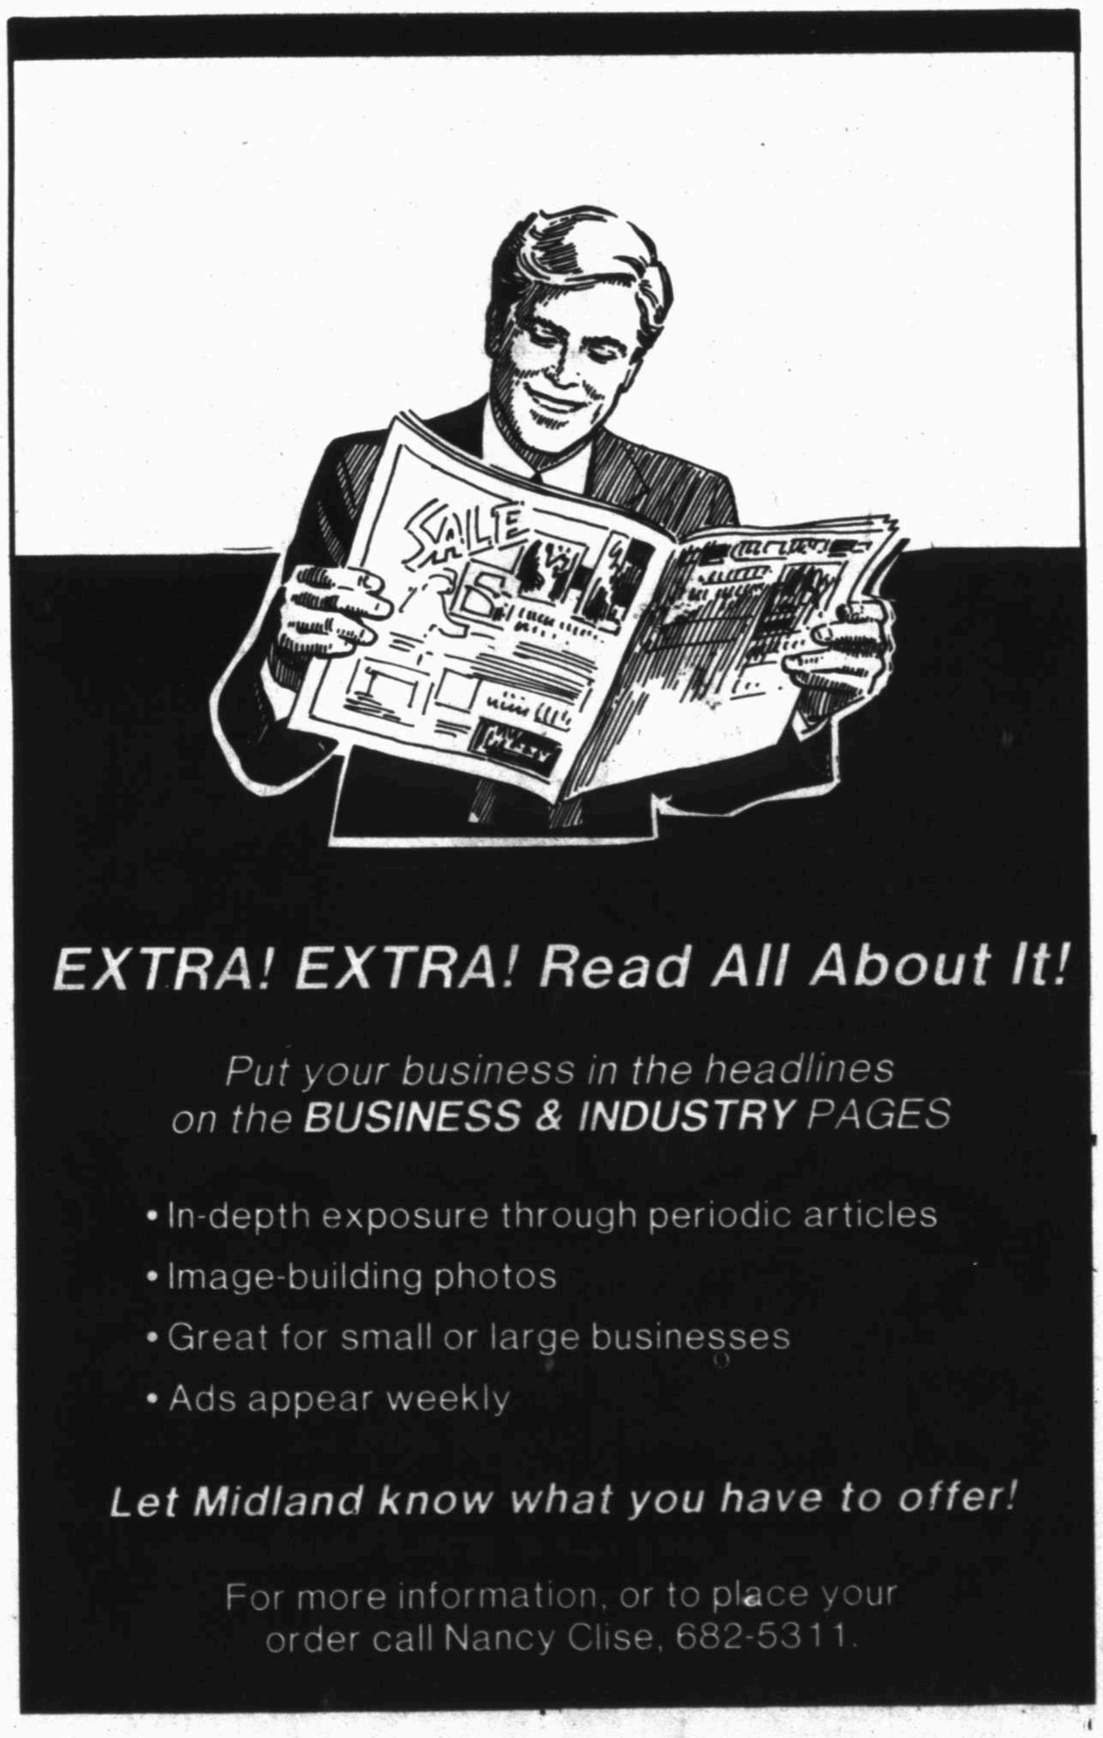

In an earlier news conference, Tom Smith of the consumer group Public Citizen said he was concerned about Cassin's former ties to HL&P.

El Paso group thinks Yale society has Pancho Villa's skull

STATE

EL PASO (AP) — The skull referred to in Yale University's secret Skull and Bones society belongs to Mexican revolutionary Pancho Villa, a group of El Paso history buffs believes.

A lawyer for the society — which Vice President George Bush joined in his Yale days — says the story is unfounded.

But the group of about a dozen history and archaeology enthusiasts feels sure enough of its allegations that it has tried to sue the Skull and Bones club in an effort to recover the skull and return it to Villa's robbed grave in Mexico. They have talked with Villa's widow and the Mexican government and have written a letter to Bush.

Francisco "Pancho" Villa was the leader of the last military invasion of the United States mainland when his forces raided Columbus, N.M., on March 9, 1916. He was assassinated in the northern Mexico town of Parral in 1923. Grave robbers stole the skull in 1926 — and its whereabouts have been a mystery since.

The group of about a dozen El Paso history and archaeology buffs — who discuss their interest over lunch every Wednesday — began the quest for Villa's skull about 18 months ago.

They had read the memoirs of Arizona native Ben Williams, who said a Skull and Bones member told him the society had the skull, said Alex Apostolides, curator of El Paso's Wilderness Museum and a member of the group.

Williams, in his memoir, "Let the Tail Go with the Hide," wrote that El Paso adventurer Emil Holmdahl told Williams he had stolen the skull. Williams wrote that years later former Skull and Bones member Frank Brophy of Phoenix told him the secret society had bought it from Holmdahl.

Frank Hunter, a retired lawyer and Democratic Party activist, said the secret society has not been very cooperative. After calling Yale's president recently, Hunter received a call from Connecticut lawyer Endicott P. Davison.

"He indicated he was a member of the society and legally talking for them," Hunter said.

Davison said the society did not have Villa's skull, Hunter said. After some conversation, Hunter said, Davison told him: "If you can prove we have it, we'll give it to you."

The El Paso group took that as a challenge, said Donald Rathbun, an El Paso doctor and member of the history group.

In a telephone interview Sunday, Davison told the El Paso Herald-Post he had meant only that the secret society didn't have the skull.

After checking, the El Pasoans found they had no standing to file suit against Skull and Bones, so they asked Villa's widow and the Mexican government to sue.

"If we could get into federal court, under the new federal rules of evidence, we could present a lot of the facts we had," said group member Frank Hunter, a retired lawyer and Democratic Party activist.

Villa's 92-year-old widow, Soledad Seanez de Villa, said she wanted no part in the search and contended the head was not missing, Hunter said.

The group asked Enrique Buj Flores, Mexico's consul general in El Paso, if the Mexican government would like to sue. But Buj Flores "ended up talking to himself about all the red tape" the suit would involve, Hunter said.

That left one option, Hunter said. The group vowed to give the Skull and Bones club the one thing it doesn't want — publicity. The group has contacted numerous publications about the story.

They also wrote an appeal to the vice president to persuade the club to give up the skull if it has it.

Bush's office in Washington confirmed the letter had been received, but said no reply had been written.

"It went through the appropriate internal channels, and it was determined no further action could be taken in our office," Bush spokeswoman Kristin Taylor said.

Anti-casino group spends $103,657

HOUSTON (AP) — A pro-gambling group trying to win a non-binding election to establish casinos on Galveston Island so far has spent nearly $104,000 — about $34,000 more than opponents have used to fight the proposal.

The non-binding referendum to be held this Saturday will decide whether the Texas Legislature will be asked to legalize casino gambling on Galveston Island next year.

According to campaign finance reports filed Monday, the pro-gambling group, Galvestonians for Economic Development, had contributions of $103,608 and expenses of $103,657.

The anti-gambling group, Galvestonians Against Casino Gambling, reported contributions of $92,083 and expenditures of $69,600 as of Thursday.

H.L. "Shrub" Kempner Jr., a leader of the anti-gambling group, claimed his movement is broad-based while the pro-gambling group got all of its money from a local development company and from Atlantic City and Las Vegas casino operators.

Kempner said more than $45,000 of the anti-casino war chest came from individuals or businesses, the largest being a $10,000 donation from Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot.

"Theirs is the campaign by and for the outside money men who won't have to live in the neighborhoods devastated by casinos," he said.

Pete Fredriksen, spokesman for the pro-gambling group, said Frank Fertitta Jr., whose Palace Station Casino and Hotel in Las Vegas donated about $25,000 to the pro-casino cause, owns a Galveston hotel and was born on the island.

Colonel pleads guilty to molesting 3 boys

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An Air Force officer has pleaded guilty to sexually molesting three boys, but court-martial procedures will continue, authorities said.

Lt. Col. Carl R. Jobson's plea on Monday was part of an agreement limiting the sentence he can be assessed. Officials declined to say what the sentence would be.

Jobson admitted to the charges during the pretrial proceedings at his court-martial hearing at Randolph Air Force Base.

"Sir, my intent was to satisfy my sexual desires," Jobson said in response to questions from a military judge.

About 100 photos of 10 boys were seized during a search of Jobson's apartment, but prosecutors say they do not need to enter them into evidence.

Jobson is accused of molesting an 11-year-old boy on a least seven trips he took with the boy throughout the country, including one to Disney World in Florida.

Prosecutor Maj. Richard Sarver said Jobson used his good reputation and psychology training to win the trust of the parents of the young boys. He said Jobson was a pedophile who would continue his activities if not locked up.

Hotel sued in man's death

DALLAS (AP) — The mother of a Texas A&M track star who fell to his death from a hotel window during a bachelor party has sued the hotel for failing to warn guests the windows would not support them.

Emily Calk of Cuero filed the suit against the Holiday Inn-Crowne Plaza in Farmers Branch, where her 23-year-old son, William Calk, fell seven floors the day before he was to be best man at a friend's wedding.

The suit alleges the hotel failed to install safety glass and was negligent in not informing its guests that the windows were not sturdy enough to contain them.

The action was filed on behalf of her son, who officials say fell to his death Friday through an eighth floor window and landed on the roof of the hotel bar on the first floor.

The Dallas County Medical Examiner's office ruled that Calk, a former Southwest Conference track champion and All American, died from acute multiple injuries and was intoxicated when he died.

Calk's attorney, Stephen Khoury, also obtained a temporary restraining order against the hotel to prevent personnel from repairing the window and destroying any evidence in the incident.

Projects get funding

AUSTIN (AP) — A tofu manufacturing facility in San Antonio, a rabbit processing plant near Gonzales and a wildseed production operation in Colorado County are the first three projects to be funded under the state's new linked deposit program, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower announced Tuesday.

The program was authorized by the Texas Legislature last summer and approved by voters in November.

The legislation earmarks $5 million in state deposits as an incentive for Texas banks and thrifts to make lower-interest loans for agricultural diversification projects.

State halts plan to seize cruise ship

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Attorney General's office has halted a plan to seize the cruise ship Galaxy and attempt to obtain refunds for hundreds of passengers who said their dream vacations turned into "nightmares."

Earlier this year, hundreds of passengers complained that they paid more than $2 million for a Central American cruise and found mutiny and miserable conditions aboard the cruise ship.

The passengers were forced to leave the Galaxy in midcruise, they said, because there was no food or water.

Apparently, about 50 crew members, described by the agent's brochure as "the friendly, attentive crew...always ready to cater to your every need," became enraged over working conditions and pay arrangements.

Some of them were arrested at a port in Costa Rica after a knife fight erupted.

Assistant Attorney General Raul Noriega said he received nearly 800 formal complaints from passengers and would-be pasengers from across the country, requesting $2.2 million in refunds from Golden Cruisetours Inc. of San Antonio, the agency that booked the tours and is no longer in business.

Noriega said Tuesday there are millions of dollars in liens against the ship that would preclude the state from receiving a dime from its possible auction. The owners of the ship never appeared in court to dispute the allegations made against them.

The attorney general's office has started sending letters to the complaining customers, telling them not to expect any refunds.

Some passengers said Fernando Inigo, a part-owner of Golden Cruisetours and the ship, was aboard the ship during the ill-fated cruise, but left at a Guatemalan port and never returned.

The ship, flying the Panamanian flag, now is probably somewhere near Greece, Noriega said.

THOUSAND OAKS

George Wolf/Reporter Telegram

Cowboy running back Herschel Walker finds time between autographs to practice at the team's Thousand Oaks training facility. Also shown are defensive tackle Don Smerek (60) and defensive end Jim Jeffcoat (77).

Walker: Thank God for kids

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — It's 9:50 a.m. and Herschel Walker is under siege — by kids that is.

Every morning starts the same for Dallas' No. 34 and every morning Walker greets them — smile on face — autographed scraps of paper in hand.

Herschel Walker is more of a fan of kids, than they of him.

"I tell so many kids out there to believe in themselves...to take a stand. Nothing in this world comes easy. You have to work for it."

Walker knows. This tree of a man has many branches to share with many people, but children are among his favorite.

So is his second pastime — one that he suggests could come when his days playing football are over.

Walker wouldn't mind starting a second career as police officer.

Not so surprising. Duing a superb running back career that was capped by his winning of the Heisman Trophy, Walker studied law enforcement.

"I still love it and I'd love to do it someday, but I can't think of being a police officer right now. If and when I do, it's something I'll have to talk over with my wife."

One of seven children, Walker was raised in the back area of Wrightsville, Ga.

He admits, during that time, that he was pretty naive about drugs, but never was tempted by them — even during his college football days.

"The problem today is, everyone is out to impress someone else. Maybe people were afraid to tempt me, because they knew how I was. Drugs aren't right in my life and I don't want them in my life," he said.

Walker is a fitness hound. His program is physical (off season he does 3,500 situps daily) and mental.

"It's a lot easier keeping the body in condition, then letting it fall apart and starting all over."

He contends he is a disciplined athlete — an athlete who works under the most adverse conditions to prepare him for the field wars of the fall.

He also is a deeply religious man — a man who credits God and family for his place today with the Dallas Cowboys.

"The Lord Jesus has always made way for me. He's given me a platform, a diving board to do different things from and I pray to him everyday."

But in between football, in between his interests from oil and gas to endorsements, Walker says he still has an interest in children.

Walker doesn't have any of his own as of yet, so he sends a message to others.

"I speak by my performance. It's not like my parents had money. I've worked hard for everything I have...I tell that to (children) too."

Thousand Oaks: One in a million town

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — Here in this city, where U-turns are known as "uies" (only in California) and smog is just a valley away, the Dallas Cowboys meticulously pursue a jewel that has eluded them too long — the NFC East crown.

Never mind the quarterback controversy or the crippled linebacking corp — this is Shangri-la — the kind of community where homes below $180,000 are mere "shacks."

Thousand Oaks. My photographer (a Californian, no less) and I didn't count them, but one would assume there are more than 1,000.

Certainly there are more residents. According to this city's chamber of commerce, 106,591 people call this area 55 miles north of L.A. home.

With a per capita income of $49,000, Thousand Oaks is a nice place to visit, but most people couldn't afford to live there.

Incorporated in 1964, Thousand Oaks is younger than the Cowboys' that have been coming here for 26 years.

TWO WEEKS ago, tiny Cal Lutheran University (the team's pre-season haven) threw them a 25-year anniversary dinner.

The "Dallas Dinner" as it's annually referred to, attracted 900 well-to-do wishers and raised a lot of money for the local academic set.

These people aren't Texans (far from it), but they know what they like and they like Cowboy football.

From signs on the street corners to the local pizza man to the neighborhood kids, this is Cowboy Country of a (totally, just totally) different breed. The feeling, according to Cal Luthran P.R. Director Jean Sandlin, is mutual.

MS. SANDLIN likes to draw a lot of parallels between Cal Lutheran and the Dallas organization.

Some are simple to buy, like: "We were both small at one time."

Others, like: Team president/general manager Tex Schramm's reported observations that the university's own football record mirrors how the Cowboys finish their season are pretty far-fetched. The Cowboys have done pretty well on their own.

Thousand Oaks isn't without it's own fanfare. This city likes to toot its celebrity horn — from Sly Stallone to baseball manager-great Sparky Anderson.

Pennant fever helps Grunhard

Stretch drive inspires Angel

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Hitting behind the top RBI man in the Texas League for most of the season hasn't been easy for Midland Angels outfielder Dan Grunhard. But the last two nights, Grunhard has moved out of Jeff Manto's shadow and into the spotlight.

Grunhard drove in the lead run for the second straight night to fuel a 6-3 Midland win over the El Paso Diablos that put the Angels into second place in the Texas League-West Division.

New-old pitcher Phil Venturino makes his first Texas League start of the season tonight to open a crucial five-game series with the San Antonio Missions at Angels Stadium. The Missions lead Midland by a game-and-a-half going into tonight's game, while El Paso is two back going into a Dudley Field set with cellar-dwelling Wichita.

Grunhard, who has only 28 RBI in 356 at-bats despite a respectable .280 batting average (Manto has a league-leading 95 in only 351 trips), scored the Angels' first run in the sixth after his second of three singles.

The Angels took a 3-0 lead in the sixth, but Tim Casey slammed a three-run homer in the El Paso seventh to put the Diablos back in the hunt.

But Mike Knapp walked to get Midland started in their half of the seventh. Ruben Amaro forced Knapp at second after an unsuccessful sacrifice attempt, but El Paso reliever Ed Puig, 8-3, wild pitched Amaro to second.

The second-generation pro infielder then moved to third on a long fly by C.L. Penigar and scored on Grunhard's third single of the night. Grunhard had moved his average to .280 by hitting .345 in his last 27 games.

"I think we have pennant drive fever," he said. "It's a new experience for most of us up from A ball." Indeed, many of the Angels played on also-ran clubs in the low minors.

"It's an added incentive for all of us."

The Angels got a boost when Vinicio Cedeno pitched six scoreless innings in his first start since 1986. Cedeno allowed only four hits and walked none before yielding to Miguel Alicea with two on and one out in the seventh.

The Dominican righty had posted an ERA of around 8.50 in his last 10 appearances dating back to June 20, but he was nearly perfect through six innings. El Paso touched him for two hits, but three Midland double plays helped the Angels face the minimum number of Diablo hitters through the first six innings.

"One of my problems has been control (about a walk every two innings this season)," Cedeno said. "Tonight, I just went out and threw strikes.

Boz alienates buddies

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Three former University of Oklahoma football players who call themselves friends of Brian Bosworth said they are disappointed in his much publicized accusations about the Sooner program, but added it's just another example of The Boz cashing in on his fame.

"Money is the most important thing in the world to Brian," said former Oklahoma end Mike Mantle in an interview published in Wednesday's editions of the Tulsa World. "If he really said those things to sell books and make money, I am disappointed in him."

Mantle and two other former Oklahoma players are the latest to respond to allegations made by Bosworth, crowned The Boz, about the successful Big Eight program currently under investigation by the NCAA.

Bosworth, the 23-year-old in his second season with the Seattle Seahawks, makes his claims in his not-yet-released but much-talked-about autobiography, "The Boz: Confessions of a Modern Anti-Hero."

Since news about the book surfaced late last week, former players, coaches and, now, friends of Bosworth have criticized the bulky superstar for allegations he made in the book ranging from use of steroids by fellow Oklahoma teammates, freebasing cocaine by Sooner players before games and violations of NCAA rules by recruiters.

Former teammate Buster Rhymes has said he is considering suing The Boz for statements in the book about him.

The attention Bosworth now is receiving by the media and others is the kind of thing that prompted him to write the book, and in some cases even "fabricate" claims, said former Oklahoma linebacker Paul Migliazzo.

"We liked Brian but it looks like The Boz killed him," Migliazzo told the World.

"I think Brian had a goal with the book and he lost sight of his obligations," said Migliazzo, recently released by the Chicago Bears and seeking employment in Kansas City, Mo. "What he said about drugs is fabricated."

"Chivalry is dead as far as Brian is concerned," he said. "He is trashing all of us by saying things that are not true. It really hacks me off."

"I was surprised Brian wrote that," former Oklahoma end Mike Aljoe told the World. "You have to understand Brian. He will take advantage of every situation. I don't think he does it to hurt anyone. He's just immature."

"There is a different side of Brian when he is not on stage. I like him. He was going to come to my wedding, but he canceled because he had an interview with Rolling Stone magazine. That's Brian.

Coming to America...

Gretzky the Great traded to Los Angeles Kings

By RONALD BLUM
Associated Press

Baseball had Babe Ruth. Hockey has Wayne Gretzky.

He is hockey's throwback to the Golden Age, to the day when lone figures dominated their respective sports — the Babe in baseball, Bronco Nagurski in football, Jack Dempsey in boxing, Bobby Jones in golf.

Gretzky, the fair-haired golden boy of the Edmonton Oilers who Tuesday was traded to the Los Angeles Kings in one of history's biggest trades, has set records that will be decades in the breaking — if they can be broken at all.

He may mean more to Canada than the prime minister; he is certainly better known. Gretzky, the captain of the national team, easily is the country's biggest celebrity, so famous that when he married actress Janet Jones last month, it was called Canada's Royal Wedding.

Even in the United States, where hockey largely is a regional sport confined to the Northeast, Gretzky is the one name that people recognize.

He was most valuable player in the National Hockey League in each of his first eight seasons, falling short this past year when he was injured and missed 16 games. It is last season that perhaps best portrays Gretzky's stature. He wasn't voted MVP because he scored "only" 149 points, a figure he exceeded annually from 1981 through 1987 but only two other players in hockey history ever reached.

After nine NHL seasons, perhaps only half his career, he already is the all-time leader in assists and playoff points. Despite playing only about half as many games as the career leaders, he ranks third in points scored and fifth in goals.

Gretzky holds or shares 49 records, according to the NHL, including those for most goals, assists and points in a season.

But Gretzky isn't just personal records; far from it. With Gretzky in charge, the Oilers have won four Stanley Cups in five seasons.

At each stage of his hockey career, the doubters said Gretzky was a phenom who would burn out, that he wouldn't be as good as Gordie Howe, Maurice Richard, Bobby Hull or Bobby Orr, to mention a few of hockey's greats.

"I've been playing this much and like this since I was six," Gretzky said in 1982 after breaking Phil Esposito's single-season scoring record of 152 points. "Back then, people said I'd be washed up when I was 12. I'm sure it will catch up with me but I'm not worrying about it. Every game is a challenge, every shift is a challenge."

"Wayne's desire outweighs anybody else," Esposito said that night. "That's what makes him so special. The guys today are bigger, stronger, shoot harder. Everything is better than the oldtimers and he's a lot better than the oldtimers."

Peter Pocklington, the owner of the Edmonton Oilers and the man who traded Gretzky to the United States, once called him the Nureyev of sports.

In a sport known more for fighting, Gretzky has been a contrast. He has averaged fewer than 28 penalty minutes per season.

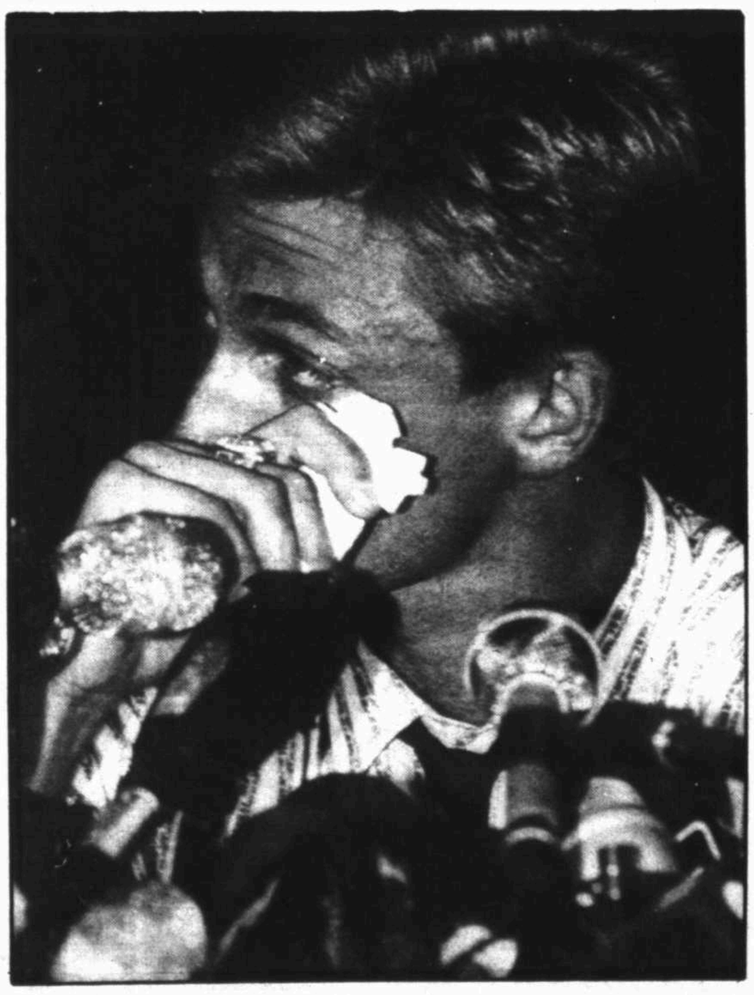

"I feel very fortunate to be playing in an era that suits my style best," Gretzky once said. "It's the greatest feeling in the world."

Gretzky was born in Brantford, Ontario, on Jan. 26, 1961. In 1976, he joined the Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League. The next season, he scored 70 goals and 182 points in 64 games for the Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds of the same junior league.

In 1978-79, Gretzky came to the World Hockey Association, a major league trying to compete with the NHL. He scored three goals and six points in eight games for the Indianapolis Racers before he was traded to Edmonton with Peter Driscoll and Eddie Mio for cash and future considerations in November 1978.

He scored 43 goals and 104 points in 72 games for Edmonton and was named the WHA rookie of the year.

Rangers' Witt three-hits Tigers

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

Bobby Witt is paying more attention to the hitters. The hitters wish he would leave them alone.

Witt pitched his sixth straight complete game since being recalled from the minor leagues as the Texas Rangers beat the Detroit Tigers 6-2 Tuesday night. He held the first-place Tigers to just three hits.

"He's worrying about the hitter, not the baserunners," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said. "That's one of the things we've been preaching to him about."

Witt, 4-7, began the season with the Rangers, but quickly pitched his way to Oklahoma City. In his first six starts, Witt was 0-5 with a 7.68 earned run average.

"I went to Oklahoma City with the right attitude," said Witt, who was optioned May 10. "A lot of people, when they get sent down they dog it. But I wanted to get back as soon as possible and I knew I had to put in the work to get that done."

Witt worked with Oklahoma City pitching instructor Ferguson Jenkins on his motion and approach to the game.

"Before, I'd go into the dugout between innings, cursing about some mistake I'd made," Witt said. "I'd dwell on what happened before, not on what I needed to do the next inning."

"Witt was just outstanding," Tigers manager Sparky Anderson said. "He deserved to win the way he pitched."

AL Roundup

Detroit leads Boston by three games in the American League East. New York is in third, 3½ games back.

Brewers 3, Red Sox 2
Red Sox 5, Brewers 1

Milwaukee's Joey Meyer homered on Roger Clemens' first pitch in the bottom of the ninth inning in the first game, but Boston earned a split in the second behind the seven-hit pitching of Mike Boddicker and Bob Stanley.

Meyer's seventh homer snapped Clemens' seven-game winning streak against the Brewers. Clemens, 15-7, struck out six to increase his major-league total to 241.

In the second game, Boddicker, 8-13, won for the second time in three starts for Boston. Stanley retired 11 of the 13 batters he faced to earn his fourth save.

Boston jumped on Brewers' starter Bill Wegman, 10-9, for nine hits, including three in a four-run fourth.

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 3

Sal Butera's two-run triple keyed a five-run sixth inning and reliever Duane Ward pitched four shutout innings as New York fell to third place in the East.

Toronto rallied against John Candelaria, 12-7.

Ward replaced Mike Flanagan, 11-8, after successive homers by Jack Clark and Don Slaught to open the bottom of the sixth. Ward allowed three hits and struck out three to earn his eighth save.

Twins 4, Indians 3

Gary Gaetti hit a two-run homer and Kent Hrbek broke a sixth-inning tie with an RBI single as Minnesota sent Cleveland's Greg Swindell to his 10th loss in 12 decisions.

Fred Toliver, 4-1, allowed nine hits and struck out six in six innings. Jeff Reardon, the third Minnesota pitcher, pitched the ninth for his 30th save and 223rd of his career, moving past Sparky Lyle for fifth place on the all-time list.

Royals 5, Orioles 4

Pat Tabler's three-run double in the bottom of the ninth inning raised his lifetime batting average to .571 with the bases loaded as Kansas City beat Baltimore for the 10th straight time this season.

The Royals have not lost to Baltimore since July 25 of last season.

Mariners 4, Angels 1

Alvin Davis became Seattle's all-time home run leader with a two-run shot in the fourth inning and Mike Moore won for the first time since June 24.

The Mariners have won three straight games, matching their high for the season.

Athletics 8, White Sox 1

Dave Stewart kept up with Bobby Witt, pitching a five-hitter for his sixth straight complete game as Oakland hit three home runs to win for the ninth time in 11 games.

Stewart, 15-10, struck out nine and walked one.

Astros close to within half-game

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Remember how the Los Angeles Dodgers seemed to have the National League West race to themselves a couple of weeks ago?

Take a look at the standings now. The Houston Astros, San Francisco Giants and Cincinnati Reds like what they see. The Dodgers just shudder and hope to find some runs.

Houston moved within a half-game of the first-place Dodgers Tuesday night by edging San Francisco 3-2. The Giants stayed 3½ games behind Los Angeles, which was blanked 6-0 by Danny Jackson of the Reds. Cincinnati is six games out.

On July 26, the Dodgers led Houston by seven games, San Francisco by eight with and Cincinnati by 11.

Astros 3, Giants 2

Glenn Davis' run-scoring single in the eighth inning was decisive as Houston won for the sixth time in its last seven games.

"We're sitting in good positon after playing the Dodgers on the last road trip," Davis said. "To me that was really the key. We know we play well at home and the Dodgers play good on the road. We beat them here, too, so I like our chances."

The Astros won five of seven meetings with Los Angeles in the last two weeks.

"We can't watch the scoreboard, we can't worry about that," Astros manager Hal Lanier said. "This club is right behind us, so we have to take care of them."

NL Roundup

Terry Puhl had three hits for Houston and Juan Agosto won his eighth game in as many decisions.

Reds 6, Dodgers 0

Jackson, the NL leader with nine complete games in 24 starts, including four shutouts, is 15-5. His best season was 1985, when he was 14-12 for Kansas City. The Royals traded him to the Reds last November for Kurt Stillwell.

He kept the clamps on the Dodgers' bats, allowing four singles and fanning eight, including the side in the ninth. Los Angeles has been shut out in its last two games and has scored just two runs over the last 29 innings.

"When you're struggling, everything seems to go wrong for you," Jackson said. "You look over there (in the Dodgers' dugout) toward the end of the game, and they were just sitting there."

Cubs 6, Mets 4

Night baseball finally got started at Wrigley Field. The first scheduled game after dark at the 74-yard-old ballpark was rained out in the fourth inning Monday night.

This time, minus all the fanfare, the game was started and completed. Chicago rallied to win with four runs in the seventh inning.

Mark Grace, Andre Dawson and Ryne Sandberg hit RBI singles in the seventh after pinch hitter Jody Davis' two-out double drove in the tie-breaking run.

Len Dykstra and Howard Johnson homered for the Mets.

Pirates 10, Expos 8

At Montreal, New York's closest pursuers met in a sloppy game. Sid Bream drove in four runs and Bobby Bonilla hit a two-run homer for Pittsburgh.

"It looked like two high school teams out there," Montreal manager Buck Rodgers said. "We beat ourselves on the mound and in the field. We gave them run after run. It was an ugly game."

Hubie Brooks led the Expos with three hits.

Cardinals 7, Phillies 3

At Philadelphia, Terry Pendleton singled twice, knocking in three runs, in a seven-run eighth inning. Phillies rookie Marvin Freeman had shut out St. Louis for seven innings, then was relieved by Steve Bedrosian, the 1987 Cy Young Award winner.

St. Louis blitzed Bedrosian and Bruce Ruffin. Ozzie Smith led off with a walk, took second on a passed ball and scored on Pendleton's first single. Tom Brunansky doubled and Willie McGee reached base and Pendleton scored when second baseman Juan Samuel booted McGee's grounder.

Padres 5, Braves 1

At Atlanta, San Diego's Eric Show held the Braves to four hits and Benito Santiago hit two home runs. Ron Gant's homer provided the only run allowed by Show, 9-10, who struck out four in his second straight complete game and seventh of the season.

ANGELS — WAYNE

"I figured if I make them hit the ball, somebody was going to catch it."

Cedeno said adjusting to the starting role wasn't a problem.

"After being here three years, I know this mound so well," he said. "It's like they say, there's no place like home."

Interim manager Joe Maddon said Cedeno succeeded by throwing within himself.

"If he'd had that strikeout mentality, he wouldn't have lasted seven innings."

Cedeno finally tired in the seventh, yielding to Miguel Alicea after singles by Bill Spiers and Greg Vaughn. But Casey greeted Alicea with a three-run shot over the right-field fence that ruined Cedeno's chance at a win.

Todd Brown then walked and stole second. Alicea struck out Joe Mitchell, but Frank DiMichele came on to retire the side.

The Angels scored their lead run in the bottom of the seventh to provide DiMichele with his first Double-A win after three losses. Kurt Walker set down the last four batters for his 12th save.

Manto tied El Paso's Vaughn for the TL homer lead with his 23rd, a two-run shot in the eighth that gave Walker some breathing room.

ANGEL NOTES: Vinicio Cedeno got the start after Todd Eggersten was unable to pitch because of a stiff shoulder. Eggersten will have the shoulder examined today, but doesn't expect to miss another start

Edmonton and Gretzky came to the NHL for the 1979-80 season and the records began to tumble. He scored 51 goals and 137 points to tie Marcel Dionne for the league lead in points, then won the scoring title each year until Pittsburgh's Mario Lemeiux got 168 last season.

In his second season, Gretzky scored 55 goals and 164 points, breaking Esposito's record of 152 points in a season. In his third season, Gretzky put together the highest-scoring year in history — 92 goals, 120 assists, 212 points. Five years later, Gretzky scored 215 points, setting a record with 163 assists.

Barbecue Sensation

There's something exciting about eating outdoors. Perhaps it's the change of scenery—the break in our indoor eating routine that whets our appetite. Or maybe it's the change in our cooking routine, and the wonderful aromas and flavors that result when food is cooked over hot coals. It could even be the change of pace that happens when family and friends gather to enjoy a meal in the relaxed atmosphere of the backyard patio.

Whatever the reason, it's never too early for a barbecue—especially when the menu features a variety of healthy seafood steaks, California almonds and California avocados used here in three "easy-on-the-cook" recipes.

The main dish, GRILLED FISH STEAKS, lets the cook choose or use three different kinds of fish steaks—salmon, tuna and halibut—each of which adapt well to outdoor grilling. In addition to the three kinds of fish pictured, a full variety of fish and shellfish can be grilled outdoors. The BASIL MARINADE, a blend of basil, olive oil, fresh squeezed lime juice and green onion, is the perfect complement to fish steaks or fillets. A mild AVOCADO SALSA to serve atop the fish features the rich taste and velvety texture of California avocados mixed with a portion of the marinade and a chopped, ripe tomato.

PASTA AVOCADO SALAD PRIMAVERA is a perfect make-ahead recipe. It combines the distinctive flavor and crunchy crisp texture of toasted California almonds with pasta shells, fresh tomatoes and English cucumber in a creamy cheese dressing. Arranged on a platter in "picture-pretty" fashion with sliced California avocados, watercress and Belgian endive, the salad is ready for guests and family to help themselves and then enjoy.

The crowning glory to this delicious and healthful meal is dessert—ALMOND MELBA ICE CREAM TORTE. Like the salad, it can be made ahead. Peach-flavored ice cream and raspberry jam are frozen in an easy, pat-in-the-pan crust made with crispy, toasted California almonds and chocolate wafer cookies. Topped with fresh berries and almonds, the result is a colorful, fresh-tasting dessert that is sure to generate plenty of compliments.

Why not invite some friends over for a Barbecue Sensation? It's a nice way to celebrate a weekend!

Grilled Fish Steaks

6 salmon, tuna or halibut steaks, 6 to 8 ounces each
3/4 cup loosely packed torn basil leaves or 2 teaspoons dried
1/4 cup olive oil, plus extra for oiling grill
1/4 cup fresh squeezed lime juice
3 teaspoons chopped green onion
1/4 teaspoon grated lime peel
1/8 teaspoon salt
1 ripe California avocado, seeded, peeled and diced
1 large tomato, seeded and finely diced
Dash bottled hot pepper sauce

Pat fish dry with paper towel and place in single layer in glass dish. Measure thickness of fish to determine cooking time.
BASIL MARINADE: Combine basil, olive oil, lime juice, 1 teaspoon green onion, lime peel and salt in work bowl of food processor. Pulse on and off 10 times until basil is coarsely chopped. Remove 2-1/2 tablespoons of mixture and reserve for salsa; pour remainder over fish. Marinate fish 30 minutes, turning once.
AVOCADO SALSA: Gently combine reserved marinade, avocado, tomato, remaining green onion and hot pepper sauce to make salsa.
TO GRILL FISH: Place fish on well-oiled grill 5 to 6 inches above hot coals. Baste fish frequently with marinade; turn after 5 minutes onto reoiled grill. Cover grill with lid for a more intense smoked flavor, if desired. Cook fish a total of 10 minutes per inch of thickness or just until fish flakes when tested with a fork. Transfer to a warm serving platter. Garnish with basil leaves. Serve with Avocado Salsa. Makes 6 servings.

FISH FACTS

- Grill fish steaks or fillets over a moderately hot fire, about 4 to 6 inches above heat. Oil the grill well before cooking fish.
- For fragile fish, use a hinged fish basket or place fish on aluminum foil which has been greased or coated with a non-stick spray; poke a few holes in the foil to allow the flavor to penetrate.
- Do not overcook seafood; cook about 10 minutes per inch of thickness. Baste frequently; turn halfway through cooking to retain moistness and flakiness.
- Fish cooks fast, so watch closely to prevent overcooking. Fish is cooked when it begins to turn opaque and starts to flake when tested with a fork, but is still moist and juicy.
- Cooking fish over specialty woods such as mesquite, apple or hickory imparts a delicious flavor.
- Fish is an excellent source of low calorie protein. It is also high in polyunsaturated fat, B-complex vitamins and low in sodium.

Pasta Avocado Salad Primavera

1 cup blanched slivered California almonds
1 package (4 ounces) small pasta shells
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1/4 cup lemon juice
2 cloves garlic
1 teaspoon Dijon-style mustard
1 cup loosely packed fresh basil leaves
3/4 cup each olive oil and sour cream
1/4 cup grated parmesan cheese
2 cups cherry tomatoes, halved
1 cup English cucumber rounds, cut in half
2 ripe California avocados, seeded, peeled and thinly sliced
1 bunch watercress
1 head Belgian endive, leaves separated
1 jar (2 ounces) red caviar

Spread almonds in single layer on baking sheet to toast. Bake at 350°F, 5 to 8 minutes, stirring occasionally, until golden brown. Cool. Cook pasta shells according to package directions. Drain and cool. Combine lemon peel and juice, garlic and mustard in blender; blend until smooth. Add basil, olive oil, sour cream and parmesan cheese; blend until smooth. Combine pasta with all but 1/2 cup of dressing; stir in almonds, tomatoes and cucumbers. Arrange avocado slices, watercress and endive leaves on large platter. Spoon pasta salad into center. Drizzle avocado and greens with reserved dressing. Garnish with caviar to serve. Makes 8 servings.

CALIFORNIA AVOCADO INFORMATION

- Ounce for ounce, California avocados contain almost twice the potassium of bananas. Research indicates potassium may help lower the risk of stroke. Another healthy benefit is that avocados contain no cholesterol. They are also low in sodium.
- California avocados are available all year. Winter varieties are available from November to March, Hass from January to November. Winter avocados have a smooth, thin skin; Hass avocados have a thick pebbly skin.
- When purchasing avocados, select either ripe fruit (which yields to gentle pressure when squeezed), or fruit that is firm, and let it ripen in a fruit bowl at room temperature. In addition to getting soft, Hass avocados show their ripeness by changing color from green to purple-black.

Almond Melba Ice Cream Torte

1-1/2 cups sliced natural California almonds
1 package (8.5 ounces) chocolate wafer cookies
2 tablespoons sugar
6 tablespoons butter, melted
1/2 cup raspberry jam
1/2 gallon peach-flavored ice cream
1 pint raspberries, rinsed and drained

Spread almonds in single layer on baking sheet to toast. Bake at 350°F, 5 to 8 minutes, stirring occasionally until golden brown. Cool. Combine 1-1/4 cups almonds, chocolate cookies and sugar in food processor; process to fine crumbs. Blend in butter. Press crumbs into bottom and sides of 8-inch springform pan; freeze until firm. Spread raspberry jam over cookie crust. Fill with softened ice cream. Freeze until firm. Serve, topped with raspberries and remaining 1/4 cup sliced almonds. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

ABOUT CALIFORNIA ALMONDS

- California almonds enhance any menu—be it main dish, salad or dessert. And, they're convenient. Almonds come in a wide variety of forms—whole natural or blanched, sliced, slivered or diced—making them a quick, crisp and delicious addition to almost any recipe.
- Almonds are an excellent high-fiber food and a good source of vegetable protein. They are especially rich in calcium, vitamin E and monounsaturated fat—with no cholesterol.
- Store almonds in a tightly sealed container in a cool, dry place such as the refrigerator to preserve freshness. Or, store almonds in the freezer to keep for up to a year.
- Always toast almonds before using to bring out their rich, nutty flavor. Spread in a single layer on cookie sheet. Toast at 350°F from 5 minutes for sliced to 12 minutes for whole almonds. Stir once or twice for even browning.
- Almonds contain only 170 calories per ounce—about 20 to 25 kernels.

Double sauces make meat twice as tasty

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Two sauces, one for brushing on the meat as it cooks and one for serving alongside, are characteristic of Texas barbecue. Folks there say two sauces make the meat taste twice as good.

TEXAS RIBS

4 pounds meaty beef chuck short ribs
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 tablespoon cooking oil
½ teaspoon instant beef bouillon granules
1 clove garlic, minced
¼ to ½ teaspoon ground red pepper
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
⅛ teaspoon chili powder
⅓ cup water
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 teaspoon cornstarch
¼ cup ketchup

To precook ribs, in a large kettle or Dutch oven cover ribs with water. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer, covered, 50 to 60 minutes or until tender.

For brushing sauce, in a small mixing bowl combine the Worcestershire sauce, vinegar, oil, bouillon granules, garlic, red pepper, mustard, chili powder and ⅓ cup water. Reserve ¼ cup of brushing sauce.

In a covered grill arrange preheated coals around a drip pan. Place ribs on rack over the pan but not over the coals. Lower grill hood. Grill ribs over medium-slow heat for 15 minutes, turning ribs halfway through grilling and brushing occasionally with brushing sauce.

Meanwhile, for serving sauce, in a small saucepan combine brown sugar and cornstarch. Stir in reserved brushing sauce and ketchup. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Cook and stir 2 minutes more. Serve sauce with ribs. Makes 5 or 6 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 409 cal., 41 g pro., 8 g carbo., 22 g fat, 128 mg chol., 343 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 19 percent riboflavin, 33 percent niacin, 30 percent iron, 21 percent phosphorus.

Chicks can become heat-resistant

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Chickens die during heat waves because they can't sweat, but heating chicks seems to make them more resistant as adults, says a researcher who doesn't have "the foggiest idea" why.

Chickens exposed to 95 to 100 degree temperatures when they are 5 days old, and again when they are 6 weeks old, seem to have a survival rate 70 percent to 95 percent better than unheated chickens, said Michael Denbow, a Virginia Tech associate professor of poultry science. "It's kind of neat."

Asked how it works, he said, "We don't have the foggiest idea."

Chickens cool off by panting, which evaporates water through their respiratory systems, said Denbow, who has spent three years testing the birds. Broilers are usually ready for market at about six to seven weeks.

Ribs usually end up on grill

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

More than half the beef and pork ribs sold in supermarkets end up on the barbecue grill. Here are some sure-fire tips for the best barbecued ribs you ever licked your fingers over.

SHOPPING FOR RIBS

- Pork loin back ribs: evenly covered with meat; premium ribs.
- Pork country-style ribs: meatiest pork ribs; resemble small chops.
- Pork spareribs: a favorite, though less meaty and more fatty than other pork ribs.
- Beef chuck short ribs: a less tender rib. Chuck short ribs are leaner than plate short ribs.
- Beef back ribs: long bones from rib-eye roast; more tender meat. (Also called dinosaur ribs.)
- Beef country-style ribs: mock ribs (chunks of pot roast with bone attached); meaty.

WHY PRECOOK?

- For tender beef ribs, precooking is best. With pork ribs, you can choose whether to precook. Precooking makes them more tender, but you get less intense smoky flavor.
- To precook: Cover ribs with boiling water; simmer, covered, until tender (45 to 60 minutes for pork spareribs or loin ribs; 50 to 60 minutes for beef chuck ribs). Grill, covered, indirectly over medium-slow heat for 15 minutes or until done.
- To grill without precooking: Grill pork spareribs or loin ribs, covered, indirectly over medium heat 60 minutes. Uncover; grill 15 to 30 minutes more or until done.

COAL CONTROL

- Coals not hot enough? Gently shake the grill or tap the coals with long-handled tongs to shake off excess ash.
- Coals too hot? Cover the grill and reduce the airflow to the coals for several minutes.

SMOKING

- Use woods from fruit or nut trees. Soft woods, such as pine, discolor the food and add a bitter taste. Use your favorite wood or mix them to develop your signature blend.
- Hickory, the most popular smoking wood, has an intense, sweet flavor.
- Mesquite has a light, clean smoky flavor.
- Apple, pear or cherry give delicately sweet smoke.
- For best smoke, chips should smolder rather than flame when added to hot coals. Soak the wood in water at least one hour before smoking.

RACK 'EM UP

- If you have a small grill, investigate rib racks. A rack increases the cooking space on your grill up to 50 percent because the rib pieces stand up rather than lying flat.

Provence sauce has different twist of taste

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Provence, an area along the Mediterranean in southern France, has a cooking style all its own. Many foods are prepared with tomatoes, garlic, olive oil, and herbs. Oranges often flavor main dishes and grilling is a favored cooking method in restaurants and at home. You can enjoy some of the flavors of Provence in this easy barbecue sauce.

BARBECUE SAUCE PROVENCALE

1 8-ounce can tomato sauce
2 tablespoons frozen orange juice concentrate, thawed
1 tablespoon water
1 tablespoon onion powder
2 teaspoons garlic powder
1½ teaspoons dried tarragon, crushed
¼ teaspoon pepper

In a small saucepan combine tomato sauce, orange juice concentrate, water, onion powder, garlic powder, tarragon and pepper. Bring to boiling, stirring occasionally. Reduce heat; simmer about 3 minutes or until desired consistency. Brush frequently over pork, chicken or burgers during last 10 minutes of grilling or broiling. Reheat remaining sauce and pass with meat, if desired, or cover and store in refrigerator. Makes about 1 cup.

Nutrition information per serving: 86 cal., 1 g carbo., 93 mg sodium.

WHAT'S COOKING

Cook enjoys baking cookies

EDITOR'S NOTE: "What's Cooking" currently is featuring nonprofit organizations that have published cookbooks along with some of their members' favorite recipes. This article is the third concerning Women from the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity.

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO
Lifestyle Writer

Even though Gertrude Alstrin admits that she would "rather eat than cook," she still can bake up a mean batch of cookies. Ms. Alstrin, a Midlander for 44 years and a volunteer for Means on Wheels for 14 years, said she gets involved in many activities because "sooner or later, they are going to need cookies, and I love to bake them."

Ms. Alstrin said her favorite activity is delivering meals to the needy in South Midland. She spends several hours on Mondays delivering meals and visiting with recipients of the Meals on Wheels program. "I wouldn't trade my time with Meals on Wheels for anything," Ms. Alstrin said. "The people who receive the meals are so appreciative and I try to stay and chat with them — some of those people seldom get out and see anybody else."

The Means on Wheels volunteer said she was "touched" by a recent "gracious" gesture of a fellow volunteer. "Peggy Schafer recently purchased and delivered fans to some of the people on our route," she said.

Ms. Alstrin, has two children and five grandchildren and enjoys cooking for traditional family gatherings. She is renowned in her circle of friends for her chicken spaghetti, but said she specializes in making desserts, "especially cookies for different organizations."

Ms. Alstrin has served on the Senior Citizen Board, is involved in Pi Beta Phi Alumni, the Midland Society of University Women, the Midland Symphony and Los Manos, the auxiliary to the Museum of the Southwest. She enjoys cooking, reading, adding to a Cybis collection and spending time with her two Lhasa apsos — "No one should have just one dog," she said.

Some of Ms. Alstrin's favorite recipes follow, including recipes for some "quickie" soups.

George Wolf/Reporter-Telegram

Gertrude Alstrin

G.G.'S SOUP

2 cups chopped broccoli
2 cups chopped cauliflower
2 cups chopped celery
2 cups chopped cabbage
1 quart tomato juice
2 quarts water
2 cups green beans
1 green pepper
1 small onion
1 can tomatoes
½ teaspoon salt
10-12 beef bouillon cubes

Cook all vegetables in pressure cooker about three minutes or in a kettle until tender, using some of the water. Be sure to save liquid to add to soup. Dissolve bouillon cubes in 2 cups of hot water. Put everything in a pot to simmer for two hours. Freezes well.

VEAL SCALOPPINE

1½ pounds of veal cutlets, sliced ¼-inch thick and cut into 2-inch strips
¼ cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup Parmesan cheese
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons olive oil
½ cup dry white wine
½ cup consumme
1 clove garlic
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Parsley

Mix flour, parmesan cheese, salt and pepper. Wipe meat dry and sprinkle with flour mixture and pound into meat with a potato masher. Heat oil and garlic. Brown meat lightly on both sides. Remove garlic. Add wine, stock and lemon juice. Cover and simmer slowly for about 30 minutes. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve.

GUMBO BISQUE

Can tomato soup
Can of cream pea soup
Can of milk
Can of crab meat

Mix all ingredients, simmer and add 2 tablespoons of sherry before serving.

GUMBO

Can of Chicken gumbo
Can of cream of pea soup
Can of water

Mix soups with one can of water, simmer and serve.

COCK-A-LUKE

6 cups of chicken broth
½ cup chopped onion
1½ cups chopped leek (white part only)
2 tablespoons of long grain rice
1½ teaspoons salt

Heat six cups of chicken broth in large sauce pan. Add leeks and onion. Reduce heat to low. Simmer covered 25 minutes. Stir in rice and simmer covered for 25 minutes.

CHICKEN PARMESAN

6 large broiler thighs, boned and skinned
1 cup dry bread crumbs
¼ cup olive or salad oil
15-ounce can tomato sauce mixed with ¼ cup chicken broth
½ teaspoon basil, ½ teaspoon thyme
¼ cup grated parmesan cheese
4 ounces of mozzarella cheese cut into six pieces
1 egg
1 teaspoon

Flatten chicken thighs by pounding between wax paper until ¼-inch thick. Beat egg with water in shallow dish and dip thighs in egg mixture, then bread crumbs. Brown in hot oil on both sides. Mix seasonings with tomato sauce. Spread thin layer over bottom of baking dish (1½-quart). Place thighs over sauce, overlapping slightly. Cover with remainder of sauce. Sprinkle with cheese and bake in 400 degree oven for 30 minutes. Place cheese on each piece and return to oven to melt.

MANGO SALAD

3 packages lemon flavored gelatin (3 ounces each)
8-ounce package of cream cheese
15-ounce can of mangos (measure liquid and add enough water to make four cups of liquid)

Blend mangos, cream cheese and liquid in blender (in two batches). Use part of water to dissolve gelatin. Mix together and put in mold.

FROZEN FRUIT SALAD

1 pint sour cream
¾ cup sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ pint fresh or frozen sliced strawberries
½ cup of chopped pecans
1 small can of crushed pineapple, well drained

Mix sour cream, sugar and lemon juice well. Add strawberries, pecans and pineapple. Pour mixture into paper cups in muffin tins and freeze. Makes 15-18.

Propane barbecue grills popular with outdoor cooks

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — The popularity of gas barbecue grills has many outdoor cookers wondering where propane has been all their lives.

But the propane grill is only the most recent application of a fuel which has been around for more than 50 years.

Paul Endacott first pioneered the bulk sale of the fuel in the late 1920s while working for Philgas, a subsidiary of Phillips 66. Today, propane is used for water heaters, stoves, central heating, space heaters, washers and driers and even as a motor fuel.

DEAR ABBY

Military wife worried about single pen pals

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is stationed in Korea and he wrote to tell me that the GIs there are having a ball with all the Operation Dear Abby mail. He says it's great for their morale. The guys go nuts when the mail comes in and a lot of them spend hours writing letters. He says all of a sudden, the most popular book in the barracks is the dictionary!

I would like to know if they give the mail only to men who don't get any mail at all, or do all the GIs — including the married ones — get a crack at the mail? My husband doesn't need to get mail from a strange woman — he gets enough mail from me.

Have you ever thought that maybe a married GI could get one of those letters and become pen pals with a single chick? You could bust up a marriage, Abby, letting young girls send pictures of themselves in bathing suits to some of those lonesome guys over there. The girls who write just assume only single men will write back.

Think about it, Abby. How are we wives at home going to protect ourselves from stuff like that? — CONCERNED IN CLEVELAND

DEAR CONCERNED: If any marriages have gone on the rocks because a married GI went ape over a picture of a girl in a bathing suit, I am not aware of it. I would hope that a married man would not pursue a romantic-type correspondence with a single woman, just as I would hope that no stateside married woman would encourage a romantic pen pal relationship with a single serviceman who's far from home and lonely.

DEAR ABBY: I am one of the millions of Californians who buy lottery tickets. If and when I win, I do not want anyone except my husband and the IRS to know about it. Could the lottery association keep this information confidential if I requested it?

The lives of lottery winners change the minute the word gets out that they have won. They are besieged by con artists, promoters and people trying to sell them something. Even their friends and relatives treat them differently.

I know it's possible for people to give money to charity anonymously, so if you can be an anonymous donor, why can't you be an anonymous receiver?

Please let me know at once. I should be so lucky as to find myself in a position to use your advice. — LA JOLLA GRANDMOTHER

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: According to Bob Taylor, public affairs director for the California State Lottery, it is absolutely mandatory to announce the names of the winners. (If they were to say, "We have a winner, but we can't disclose the name," the uproar would be heard in New Jersey!) However, their addresses and telephone numbers may be withheld at the request of the winners.

DEAR ABBY: I like to read my horoscope, but do not feel compelled by the suggestions. However, I am finding that the majority of my horoscopes all say the same thing: "Be careful while driving today!" "Take extra care when you are on the highway!" "Don't take any risks while in motion!"

Abby, is it true that all Pisces are incredible klutzes, and, therefore, accident-prone? Can you shed any light on this? Or is it possible that the astrologer who writes for my newspaper is just down on all Pisces? — OFFENDED PISCES

DEAR OFFENDED: An astrologer can't go wrong advising anyone who drives to drive with great care today. The same can be said of an Aries, Cancer, Gemini, Sagittarius, Aquarius, etc.

Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

In Louisiana, hot sauces are way of life

AVERY ISLAND, La. (AP) — Roll down the car window anywhere near the plant where Louisiana's most famous hot sauce still is made from a century-old recipe, and your head just fills up with the scent — a little tomatoey, a little spicy, a lot hot.

The odor is so much a part of the place that Paul C.P. McIlhenny, whose family has been making Tabasco sauce from the start, doesn't even notice it unless he's up close to the pulp barrels.

Hot sauce in southern Louisiana is like that smell. It's everywhere. On every table in every restaurant. Two dozen or so varieties. Louisiana hot sauce is a tourist attraction: It's on posters and coffee mugs and key chains, and people take tours of hot sauce factories.

"In the river parishes, where the Acadians first landed, its hard not to find a bottle of Louisiana hot sauce on the table," said John Folse, a chef and restaurateur in Donaldsonville who introduced Cajun food to Moscow during the summit meeting earlier this year. "It's almost like salt, pepper and Louisiana hot."

There is, of course, the theory that people who live in such steamy heat eat hot foods to perspire and cool off.

"My mother's people and my father's people grew hot peppers because they thought they were good for you," said television's down-home Cajun chef, Justin Wilson.

BUT THERE'S much more than science at work in a land where what to eat for dinner is often the focus of luncheon conversation and what to eat tomorrow is the dinner-table talk. Good food really matters here.

"When someone asks, 'What are you doing this afternoon?, You say, 'Oh I don't know, maybe a crawfish boil.' They always think in terms of cooking," said Folse.

And most everything — even to a bloody Mary sorbet, says Folse — gets a dash or two of hot sauce.

McIlhenny, 44, vice president of the McIlhenny Co., figures he goes through a 2-ounce bottle a month of Tabasco, which, by the way, is not a generic name, though McIlhenny's pleased if you think so.

Hot sauce is addictive, he said. "I've had friends use it out of loyalty, and then say, 'Hey, this is good,' as if it was a surprise. They say they get addicted."

So it's no surprise there are so many kinds — Tabasco, Trappey's, Tony Cachere's Creole Hot Sauce, Crystal Hot Sauce, Cajun Chef, Louisiana Gold, Durkee Sauce, Panola Red, Cajun Power Hot Sauce. You get the idea.

A premium sauce, it's agreed, uses only the pepper pulp. No seeds or skin. Most contain just salt, vinegar and peppers.

So, can connoisseurs distinguish among them?

Sure, said Folse, noting that most chefs stock four of five varieties.

"I've got items in my kitchen I use Tabasco on. However, I also really like Louisiana Gold," he said. "I don't find that it's quite as hot as Tabasco ... and when you have five or six chefs on the line, you want to have a little control. If they put one shot or two shots, you don't want to change the flavor competely."

"THEY ALL have a little different flavor, and they all use a little different amounts of vinegar, salt," said Wilson. "There are certain ones I prefer. ... It's just a question of experience, and God knows I have a lot of that."

The McIlhenny Co., too, has plenty of experience. Tabasco is sold in 100 countries; it's been on space missions.

"We end up in strange places," said McIlhenny. "I understand two or three Sherpas in Nepal will use a bottle at a single meal."

Nepal is a long way from tiny Avery Island, 18 square miles that are home to 700 people, the Tabasco plant and fields, a salt mine and oil wells. There also are 100,000 snowy egrets, 30,000 azaleas and 17,000 irises.

Avery Island is not really an island, but a salt dome that rises from the marshes and bayous on Louisiana's Gulf Coast. At 152 feet above sea level, the island is the highest point along the gulf from Mexico to Florida. It sits 150 miles from New Orleans, separated by sugar cane, rice and oil fields.

In 1818, John Craig Marsh obtained rights to part of the island, and later a Louisiana judge, Daniel Dudley Avery, bought part. In 1837 Avery married Marsh's daughter and eventually obtained the entire island.

In 1859, Edmund McIlhenny married an Avery daughter. The story is told, though not verified, that the family fled Avery Island in the Civil War and returned to find everything destroyed — except one defiant pepper plant grown from a seed or seedling given to Edmund by a friend returning from Mexico.

WHAT IS known is that Edmund McIlhenny came up with a sauce to perk up the bland food available during Reconstruction. In 1868, he packed his invention in ladies' perfume bottles, and sent samples off to 350 wholesalers. Two years later he had a patent, and in two years more a London office to handle all the European orders.

His sauce used a variety of Capsicum frutescens, a small fire-engined pepper, of which the McIlhenny Co. today is the world's largest producer. Tabasco is an Indian word for damp earth, which McIlhenny apparently chose because he liked the sound of it.

One hundred twenty years later, little has changed. McIlhenny is still a family company, with Paul McIlhenny and two cousins in charge. And Avery Island is their kingdom.

"This is an ideal site," said McIlhenny. "Part of the mystique is that only the soil, only the climate, only the nimble fingers of Avery Island could pick Tabasco."

Doctors: New drugs don't replace diet

NEW YORK (AP) — New cholesterol-lowering drugs should not replace a healthy diet, says the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

Dr. Michael Brown and Dr. Joseph Goldstein, whose Nobel Prize-winning research led to the development of lavastin, recently approved by the FDA, warn the drug should never be considered an alternative to a cholesterol-lowering diet, but rather an adjunct to it.

Freshest trout essential for special recipe

By NATHALIE DUPREE
New York Times News Service

ATLANTA — President Carter's new book on the outdoors, which says a lot about trout fishing, put me in mind of Trout a Bleu, or Brilliant Blue Trout, as I call it. It's a special trout dish that requires a freshly caught trout, captured either by someone standing in the cool, rushing waters of a mountain stream or by dipping one out of a pond with a net.

It has to be caught and cleaned without disturbing the naturally slick coating formed by microbes on the skin of the trout. If the carefully cleaned trout is then plunged into acidulated (usually vinegar) water and poached briefly, its skin turns a brilliant electric blue.

When cooked, the fish will usually turn so that it appears to be swimming on its belly, with its tail curved. The flavor is so delicate, clear and pure that if you ate the flesh without seeing it, you wouldn't know it was fish.

The blue trout is so exquisite that — on a whim — I decided it should be the main course for a surprise birthday party for 20 people to honor my friend Kelli Questrom, who doesn't eat meat but loves fresh fish. She and her husband Alan had just moved into a Colony Square penthouse, and we held the party there.

I found a friend with a van, and we drove up to the Georgia mountains to a trout farm. They loaned us an aerated barrel that fit into the van which would keep the water fresh enough to keep the fish alive until time to eat. We caught the fish ourselves, by rod and line and net.

We doubled the amount of fish we needed in case some spoiled. We sat by the side of the lake and carefully cleaned half the fish, put them into a pail of lake water and then put the pail on ice. This batch we put into plastic bags, still surrounded by the lake water, and froze once we got home.

The other half we kept alive and put into the barrel full of lake water. We were on our way, creeping down the winding roads. It was a long journey, and our slow-moving van backed up traffic for miles. Once home, we parked the van in the basement of Colony Square. During the night, we occasionally would run the motor to aerate the water enough to keep the fish alive until the next day.

Everything else was simple. The first course consisted of vegetables and sausages (we thought we had to have some meat in case we had any non-fish eaters coming) arranged beautifully on platters with a variety of shapes and types of homemade breads. We blanched asparagus, ready for rapid reheating in butter.

BRILLIANT BLUE TROUT
4 freshly caught rainbow trout
Vinegar or lemon juice
2 lemons, halved and cut decoratively

To clean: Hold the live trout securely, placing your fingers in the gills from the bottom without letting the surface of the fish rub against anything, including your hands, so as not to disturb the coating. With your other hand, club the fish. Insert a small knife in the vent and cut from the vent to the head. Pull out the gills and innards in one tug. Rinse gently, without splashing water on the skin. Return the fish to a vat of lake water until ready to cook.

Bring one or two pots three-quarters full of water to a boil, being sure the pots are large enough that the fish will not touch one another as you slide them in. Add 2 tablespoons of vinegar or lemon juice per fish. Remove the fish from the holding vat. You may choose to sprinkle the fish with vinegar or lemon juice at this time to ensure the fish will turn blue. Add individually into the boiling water, belly down. Let the water return to a simmer. It takes about 3 to 5 minutes to cook a 10-inch trout. (The eyes bulge when done.) Remove with a slotted spoon or Chinese strainer. Drain. Place on plates and serve with lemon halves.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 11, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your optimism will attract people to you in droves. Love turns a relationship around. Learn to be more subtle in transmitting your ideas and political opinions. Money worries will subside if you limit expenditures for leisure activities. More quiet time alone and periodic vacations will keep you alert and healthy. Lighten up on criticism of family and friends.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author Alex Haley, pitcher Bryn Smith, Rev. Jerry Falwell, actress Arlene Dahl, TV host Mike Douglas, actress Virna Lisi, actor Lloyd Nolan, columnist Carl Rowan.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You now see the light at the end of a financial tunnel. Business prospects improve. You meet the right person for building a lasting relationship. Travel will bring good luck.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Spend what you want today so long as you also save money for a rainy day. Your emotional support is greatly appreciated by your friends and family. You profit when you refuse to compromise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not give up! Pull up your socks and go it alone if help does not materialize. Your social life expands. You enjoy new freedom of choice. If your weight balloons, cut food intake, increase exercise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Unexpected expenses are annoying but manageable. You have good feelings about what you are doing now. Your personal life has more order to it giving you more time to enjoy yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Others want to get close to you. They hope your high spirits will rub off on them! Handle your own money and know where it is going. A career decision is less painful than expected.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Being industrious and conscientious begins to pay off. A mature attitude wins you new supporters and admirers. Those with greater experience offer assistance. Accept gratefully!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Long-distance travel is a distinct possibility. A solution can be found to a tricky financial situation. Recognize and respect other people's beliefs. Dining out proves very enjoyable. Invite a friend along.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A family business venture could produce an unexpected windfall. Set aside any extra funds for investment purposes. An important meeting taking place today will affect your romantic future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Self-discipline is the key to your success. A deal you negotiate now could mean a substantial increase in income. A romantic relationship can be strengthened through nurturing. Show more tenderness, consideration.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Business or employment affairs run as smoothly as expected. Work more efficiently behind the scenes. You may have to spend more for your wardrobe than anticipated. Travelers should look out for their luggage.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Cut unnecessary spending but refuse to skimp on essentials. Romance is on a very happy course. Do what you can to reduce last-minute errands by planning ahead. Keep to a schedule.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Mingle with people who possess the information you need to succeed. You will have to push harder to obtain approval for certain plans. Complete work on time.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♠

Had this hand cropped up in a good rubber bridge game, there would have been no story. South would have landed in a normal contract of five diamonds, and he would have considered himself a little unlucky not to have made an overtrick.

But the game was duplicate pairs, where minor suits have become like poor relations—welcome only in limited circumstances. So once North made the one bid his hand called for by supporting his partner's diamonds, South bounced into the standard duplicate game—three no trump.

West led his deuce of spades, and we venture to hazard that, at many tables, the game would have waltzed home. Where we watched, however, East made a well-reasoned shift to beat the hand.

Declarer won the first trick in hand with the king, then cashed the ace of diamonds. When West failed to follow to the second diamond, discarding a low club, declarer elected to insert the jack to concede his diamond trick immediately. The defenders were at the crossroads.

East had seen that his partner had only a singleton diamond, and he knew from the opening lead that his partner held only four spades. Since it was reasonable to assume that his partner would lead from his longest suit, West could not have a five-card holding. His distribution had to be 4-4-1-4.

If that were indeed the case, declarer had to have a singleton heart. Just in case it was the king, East shifted to ace of hearts and continued with another when his majesty appeared. It was a simple matter for West to win the jack and continue the suit to allow East to take two more heart tricks and beat the hand.

20th anniversary of rock festival troubles community

BETHEL, N.Y. (AP) — Woodstock, the rock festival that came to symbolize the 1960s for a generation of Americans, is again at the center of a controversy, this time over how big its 20th anniversary celebration should be.

On one side is the Bethel Town Board, which meets tonight to discuss whether to allow voters decide what to do about next August's anniversary. If a referendum is agreed upon, it would be placed on November's ballot, Town Supervisor Alan Scott said Tuesday.

On the other side are concert promoters who want to re-create the original Woodstock, which wasn't actually held in that Ulster County town but miles away on Max Yasgur's farm in Bethel, Sullivan County.

Scott said his town is against any rock extravaganza on the scale of the first Woodstock, which drew nearly a half million people and endured heavy rains, lack of food and sanitation facilities, drug overdoses and massive traffic jams.

Scott said the town wants to recognize the anniversary, but in a low-key manner. The problems created during the 1969 festival are still fresh in the minds of residents, he said.

"It really raised havoc in this area," Scott said. "It was a thorn in the side of many, many residents at the time."

He said that as a result of the three-day concert held Aug. 15-17, 1969, the town passed a mass assembly law that prohibits gatherings of more than 10,000 people.

In August 1986, town officials did erect a roadside marker at the site of the concert.

Scott said at least five promoters have approached the town board this year about staging another Woodstock festival.

Some have talked about bringing back such Woodstock performers as Country Joe Fish and Richie Havens, Scott said.

Other performers, such as Crosby, Stills & Nash, and Santana, still draw large concert crowds today.

"The general feeling is that we certainly don't want any massive gathering anywhere near the proportion of what we had," Scott said.

Scott said the board already has rejected a promoter's offer of $200,000 to allow the concert to be staged.

"We recognize the importance of the event, we realize the historical significance, but we are looking for something tasteful, not more than a one-day event and not more than 10,000 people," he said.

In August 1984, the 15th anniversary of Woodstock was celebrated at the posh Grossinger's Resort and Country Club in Grossinger, N.Y., about 5 miles from Yasgur's farm.

About 700 people showed up, including Abbie Hoffman and Woodstock performers John Sebastian and David Clayton Thomas.

FREEHOLD, N.J. (AP) — Actor Peter O'Toole wept with joy upon hearing that a judge granted him custody of his 5-year-old son during the school year, his attorney said.

"Peter O'Toole is a fabulous father," said attorney Jeffrey P. Weinstein. "He was not performing in court."

Superior Court Judge Alexander D. Lehrer ruled Tuesday that Lorcan O'Toole will live with his mother, Karen Somerville O'Toole, during school holidays in December and April and in the summer.

"I think she hoped to have been given the opportunity to educate the boy...but she will abide by the judge's decision," said her attorney, Gary Newman.

In May, a judge in London ordered O'Toole to return his son to Ms. Somerville O'Toole so the courts in New Jersey could decide which parent should get permanent custody of the boy.

The Irish-born O'Toole, 56, met Ms. Somerville O'Toole, 38, six years ago when she lived in California. Ms. Somerville O'Toole, who was never married to the actor but took his name, now lives in Navesink, N.J., and New York City.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Arsenio Hall, who co-stars in the hit movie "Coming to America" with fellow comedian Eddie Murphy, plans to host a new TV talk show beginning next year.

Murphy

"The Arsenio Hall Show," set to debut Jan. 2, marks Hall's second attempt at a nightly interview program. Hall had served as host of "The Late Show" on Fox Broadcasting until earlier this year when the program was replaced.

During a news conference Tuesday, Hall said his show "will try to do something different...Every night is going to be a party. We're going to have a lot of fun."

The one-hour program will be distributed by Paramount Domestic Television, and has been sold to eight of the nation's top 10 television markets.

"Coming to America" has grossed $100 million at theaters since it opened early last month.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two of the more than 6,000 Californians whose bank accounts have gone unclaimed for more than seven years were particularly easy for the state to find: President Reagan and Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

Meese

State Controller Gray Davis said Tuesday the state has returned $3,492 to Reagan from a dormant campaign fund account stemming from his eight years as governor of California.

Meese, who served as Reagan's state legal affairs secretary in 1967, also recently received $9,095 from a personal account left by his late father, Edwin Meese Jr.

Under California law, accounts that have been inactive for seven years or more are turned over for safekeeping to the controller's office, which has amassed a trust of more than $375 million in 1.1 million individual accounts.

So far, more than $3 million has been returned to 6,000 people with such accounts, including $131,000 returned to charities and civic organizations, such as the Boy Scouts of America.

Davis, a Democrat, said he even found $94.96 that appears to belong to Republican Gov. George Deukmejian.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Critics have liked Michael Keaton's dramatic portrayal of a drug addict in "Clean and Sober," but the actor says the praise shouldn't extend to his character.

"I thought there was nothing redeemable about this guy. There was nothing likeable about him," Keaton said of the movie that's being released today.

It was the second movie role Keaton accepted with reluctance, the first being the box-office hit "Beetlejuice."

Instinct needed for best grilling

By JIM WOOD
Hearst News Service

Badly grilled food is like a wax orange: It looks like the real thing but it has no zest. I know of no other method of food preparation that can cause more frustration, more disappointment. Yet if you follow a few basic rules, it's really a cinch.

Richard Olney, the noted American food authority who lives in France, is quoted in the wonderful new book "The Joy of Grilling" by Joe Famularo to the effect that "grilling has mostly to do with intuition, experience, touch, depth of coals, intensity of heat and so on. It is not an easy method to transform into a recipe."

It is somehow satisfying to stare into the coals as they cook a steak or chop, a great deal more rewarding than looking at the glow, of say, an electric coil for six minutes per side. I think the reason food tastes better outdoors, aside from the anticipation, is because you've been inhaling all that invigorating oxygen while the steak sizzles.

Over the years I've talked with a number of grillers who supposedly have given me all their secrets, but I think to some extend Olney is correct: Good grilling is a matter of instinct.

A few techniques are helpful, though. Don't stack the coals evenly. Have them slope from one side to another. That way you can move the meat or whatever you're grilling from ultra hot to merely quite hot if it begins cooking too quickly.

Many grillers like to avoid putting the meat directly over the coals as a way of preventing flareups. (Another way is to broil rather than grill; with the food under the heat source, the juices for the most part fall into the broiling pan instead of the fire.) The substitution is not 100 percent effective, however, since the juices bubbling to the top sometimes ignite.

If you're thinking about doing some grilling, here are a few important safety rules:

■ Never use charcoal for any indoor cooking.

■ Don't use kerosene, gasoline or alcohol to start a fire; they can explode.

■ Never squirt charcoal lighter on live coals; you can cause a serious flare-up.

■ If you use an electric starter, never leave it on the coals longer than specified in the instructions and never leave it where it can cause a fire or be picked up by a child.

Probably the safest method is to use a charcoal chimney, a vented cylinder of metal that creates an updraft. You can start your coals with some newspaper and there's no aftertaste.

MEDITERRANEAN PORK LOIN WITH EGGPLANT AND CHEESE

1½ pounds boned pork loin, trimmed (about 3 pounds with bone)
Marinade:
Salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
Zest of 1 lemon, cut into strips
¼ cup fresh lemon juice
¼ cup olive oil
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
½ teaspoon dried thyme
1 bay leaf
2 garlic cloves, crushed or pressed
1 large or 2 small eggplants
Crumb Mixture:
½ cup fresh French breadcrumbs
½ cup freshly grated romano cheese
1 teaspoon each dried basil, thyme, oregano and marjoram
¼ cup chopped parsley
¼ cup olive oil
8 ounces Teleme or fontina cheese, cut into 8 slices
2 large ripe tomatoes, each cut into 4 thick slices

Cut pork into eight 3-ounce slices. Pound each slice to ¼-inch thickness between two pieces of oiled parchment or waxed paper.

Combine marinade ingredients in glass or ceramic dish. Add pork; marinate at least one hour, or overnight in the refrigerator. Bring to room temperature before grilling.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Peel eggplant and cut into 8 thick slices. Sprinkle with salt and let stand for 30 minutes. Drain and pat dry. Arrange eggplant slices on baking sheet and brush both sides with olive oil. Bake on top oven rack for about 15 minutes, or until tender but not lifeless. Set aside.

Combine ingredients for crumb mixture; toss lightly. Set aside.

Preheat broiler. On oiled baking sheet, broil pork loin 5 inches from heat until seared, about 2 minutes per side. Layer pork with eggplant and sliced cheese so about half of each slice is covered by next. Broil again until pork almost done — springy to touch — and cheese melts. Sprinkle crumb mixture down center and broil again just until crumbs are golden brown. Serve with the tomato slices.

GRILLED RIB STEAK WITH HERB BUTTER, GRILLED ONIONS AND SAUTEED SPINACH

8 tablespoons (1 stick) softened unsalted butter
2 sprigs each of 4 different fresh herbs (rosemary, thyme, parsley, mint, etc.) finely chopped
Juice of 1 lemon
Salt and freshly ground pepper
2 red onions, thickly sliced
½ cup olive oil
2 double rib steaks (about 2 pounds each), bone in Peanut oil
2 bunches fresh spinach, stemmed
2 shallots, minced

Combine butter, chopped herbs and lemon juice. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Place herb butter on 12-inch piece of plastic wrap and roll into 1-inch cylinder. Freeze until hard (herb butter can be made well in advance and kept frozen).

Place onions on baking sheet, coat lightly with olive oil and season with salt and pepper. Bake in a preheated 400 degree oven about 20 minutes or until soft. (Pre-cooking makes onions very sweet).

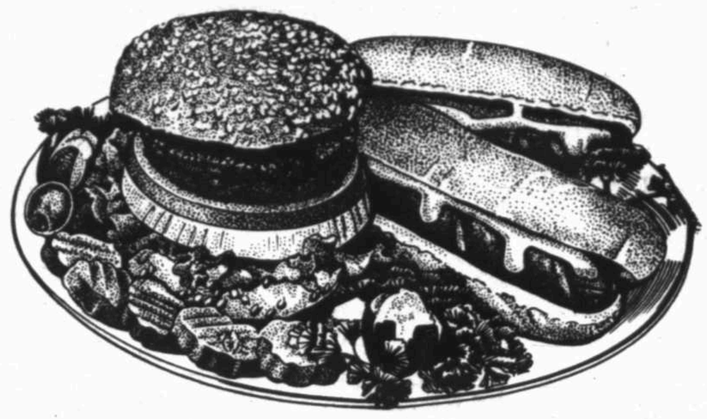

To grill steak, dry it well, season with plenty of salt and pepper and coat with peanut oil. Cook on very hot grill, searing outside. (Meat this thick will take about 30 minutes for medium rare.) When meat is done, remove from grill and allow to rest about five minutes.

Meanwhile, place baked onions on grill to mark them. Over high heat, saute spinach and shallots in 2 tablespoons olive oil until spinach wilts, 1 to 2 minutes. Season with salt and pepper.

To serve, slice beef from bone and top with slices of herb butter. Arrange spinach and grilled onions around meat on platter.

'Big business' brings good taste

By SHELLEE BRATTON

AMARILLO (AP) — The coals are glowing like the setting sun when you slap down that big, thick, juicy steak on the grill. The sizzle of the fat as it drips down onto the embers sets your mouth to watering and the pungent smoke gives your nose a preview of what your tastebuds are already clamoring for. Outdoor cooking; there's nothing like it.

But you probably already know that.

The Barbecue Industry Association estimates that Americans will barbecue more than 1.4 billion times this year. Only 29 percent of the American households do not have a grill.

"It's big business,' said Gene Boyer, divisional consumer service manager at Energas.

He estimates that Energas will sell up to 700 gas grills the Amarillo district during its summer campaign.

"We're seeing a big increase in barbecuing," he said, adding that even apartment complexes are puchasing the larger grills for their residents.

"It's fun, it keeps the family together. It's becoming a lot easier to do; and it's great for entertaining," he explained.

The Shriner Muleskinners couldn't agree more.

THE GROUP, although only 5 years old, already has gained the reputation of being outdoor cooks, par excellence.

"We do a lot of cookouts, roping, church events and things such as that," said Bob Rinehart, past potentate. Rinehart said the money raised at all the group's events goes back to the various projects of the Khiva Temple, including a hospital transportation fund for crippled children and the burn hospitals in Houston and Galveston.

R.T. White, president of the Muleskinners, credits the Muleskinner wives, the "Assets," for much of the group's success.

He said the ladies are not one whit jealous of their husbands' obviously superior cooking skills.

"We just wish that they'd (cook) more at home," laughed Rinehart's wife, Bobbi.

The Muleskinner menu starts out with basic hamburgers, but a special preparation technique makes them "hard not to eat," said White.

Using a half pound of meat, the Muleskinners add a little salt, pepper and garlic salt. Then, after the patty hits the grill, they add a bit of Lea & Perrins Worcestershire sauce.

Muleskinner Lloyd "Red" Vessel, throws in another ingredient when the flames get too high.

"We pour a little beer to subdue the flames, and it will smoke and steam the meat a little. We even pour a little on the meat sometimes," he said demonstrating. "It makes it taste better."

THE SECRET behind a good brisket, White said, is slow, low-temperature cooking.

"Don't cook a brisket for any less than eight hours at 200 degrees. You don't want the temperature to get over that if you want the meat to be tender," he said.

Vessel shared a tip on grilling chicken: marinate it in Coke.

"The Coke will break down the tissues in the meat and tenderize it."

Other Muleskinner lip-smacking specialties include beans, sourdough biscuits and cobbler — all prepared in a Dutch oven heated in an outdoor pit. White adamantly refused to divulge those recipes, saying only that they are pepared in an authentic Old West manner.

"We cook like the old cowboys used to, even down to cooking coffee over a campfire."

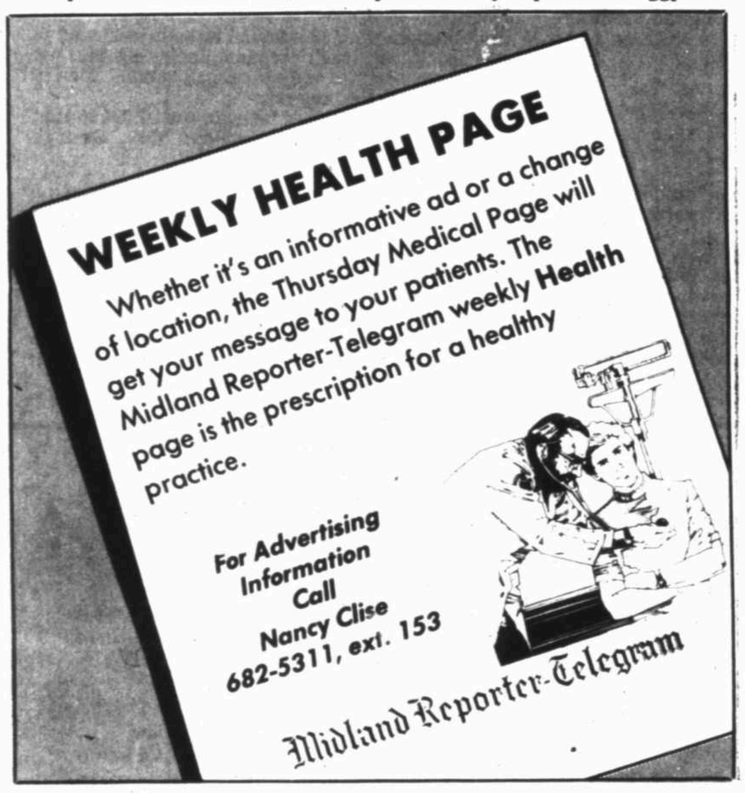

But an alternative to the campfire or standard charcoal grill is a gas grill.

Boyer said that gas grills have several advantages over old-fashioned braziers.

"When you use a regular grill, you have to get charcoal, lighting fluid and it takes forever to get (the fire) ready," he said. "When you cook with gas, it's ready when you are. Just turn it on."

In addition, a gas grill is easier to clean.

"You just turn it on for 30 minutes and it burns off all the food," said Marla Stark, consumer service specialist for Energas.

Mothers Should Be Home For Their Children.

Nothing could be more like home than having a baby in your own private Labor/Delivery/Recovery room–the new LDR's–at Women's & Children's Hospital. We've opened up a whole new childbirth option for mothers that comes with all the comforts of home.

Designed for low-risk births, our LDR's look every bit like professionally decorated bedroom suites. Just like home. Or, at a fine hotel. You'll find comfortable furnishings, a private bath, and even a restful easy chair in this beautifully-appointed birthing environment. State-of-the-art equipment and supplies necessary for childbirth have been thoughtfully hidden from view, but are ready and available when needed.

When you're admitted to an LDR, you will remain there throughout the birth process and recovery period. You may be supported by your husband or other chosen "coach." After you've welcomed your new child, and visited with siblings, family and friends, you'll be moved to your hospital room for the remainder of your stay.

The LDR's offer a cozy, secure place for you and your family to experience and celebrate one of life's most private moments. Call 334-8200 at ext 297 for a tour or more information about The Birth Place and the physicians on staff here. Then, come to Women's & Children's Hospital for the warmest welcome you can give your baby. You'll feel right at home.

Rate increase gets mixed response

NEW YORK (AP) — Investors dumped stocks and bonds Tuesday but the dollar rallied smartly against major foreign currencies after the Federal Reserve boosted its key bank lending rate a half-percentage point for the first time since Black Monday.

The increase in the discount rate, to 6.5 percent from 6 percent, was made "to reduce inflationary pressures (and) ... in light of the growing spread of market interest rates over the discount rate," according to the Fed.

Many economists predicted other interest rates, including those on mortgages or home-equity loans, would rise as a result. And a few market watchers worried about the near-term effects on the already skittish stock market.

The increase in the discount-rate — the fee the central bank charges member banks for loans — was the second since Alan Greenspan replaced Paul A. Volcker at the Fed's helm a year ago. On Sept. 4, the central bank raised the rate for the first time in three years, to 6 percent from 5.5 percent.

While last September's increase in the rate also was taken in response to inflationary fears, analysts later cited it as a contributing factor to the Oct. 19 stock market crash.

"I don't look for a market collapse but the cross-currents of the stock market aren't very favorable. It certainly is dangerous," said Irwin Kellner, chief economist for Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co.

On Wall Street, stock prices fell sharply in response to the announcement, with the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials losing slightly more than 28 points to 2,079.13. It had been down nearly 40 points late in the day.

Bond prices tumbled while interest rates rose. The Treasury's bellwether 30-year issue was off about $10 per $1,000 face amount, while its yield jumped to 9.19 percent from 9.10 percent late Monday.

In foreign exchange, the dollar advanced strongly against major currencies. Higher interest rates make the dollar more valuable.

The biggest increases came against the Japanese yen and West German marks. By late afternoon Tuesday, the dollar had broken through the psychologically important 135-yen level from Monday's New York close of 133.97, and to 1.92 marks from 1.90.

Analysts had expected the Fed to tighten its reins on the money supply this week, but few were expecting an increase in the discount rate, which is the most dramatic move the Fed can take.

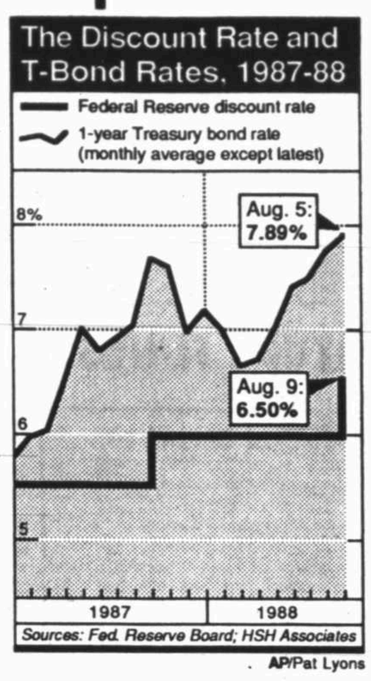

Tuesday's increase brings the discount rate to its steepest level since April 1986, when it fell to 6.5 percent from 7 percent.

"The (credit) markets have been screaming for a discount rate increase for quite some time; the surprise was in the timing of it," said Kellner.

"Not only is the Republican convention coming up, but we're in the middle of a Treasury refunding," in which the government is auctioning off $22 billion in new three- and 10-year notes this week to pay off its old debts.

"I don't think inflation is any worse today than it was last year," said Kellner.

But Robert A. Brusca, chief financial economist for Nikko Securities Co. International Inc., defended the discount rate hike.

NCNB Texas management appointed

DALLAS (AP) — NCNB Texas National Bank's chairman on Tuesday named a senior managment team that included the appointment as president of a longtime NCNB Corp. executive.

NCNB Texas chairman Buddy Kemp named Kenneth D. Lewis president of NCNB Corp.'s bank holding subsidiary that was founded 11 days ago from the failure of Dallas-based First RepublicBank.

Kemp appointed six people to senior management evenly divided between executives from NCNB Corp. and First RepublicBank.

MHCC considering new officers

By MELLA McEWEN

With the Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce state convention behind them, members of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce turned their thoughts to the future at Tuesday's meeting.

The chamber will elect new officers in September, and Roger Robles, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the committee's list of nominees. They are: John Castro, president; Charlene Romero Wurtz, first vice president; Ruben Vargas, second vice president; Linda Macias, secretary; Olivia Farias, treasurer; and Celia Morales, parliamentarian.

Nominated to the board of directors were Paul Cavazos, Felipa Lara, Lydia Torres, and Tom Wilbur.

Both Robles and Sam Flores, president of the chamber, emphasized that this was the nominating committee's list, and that members were welcome to nominate themselves or others from the floor at next month's election.

Members decided that the new officers will be installed at the chamber's fourth anniversary banquet and installation on Oct. 15.

Special guests at Tuesday's meeting were Cindy Ford, Patricia Gonzales and Grant Billingsley of United Way. They explained they were there to visit with eight to 10 volunteers to get their views on United Way, what it was doing and what it could be doing.

Gonzales is part of Operation Blueprint, a United Way project designed to attract more minority volunteers. Flores, secretary of the Midland United Way, told the meeting that "one of the things we've discussed is that Mexicanos in a lot of towns are viewed as takers, not givers, and we know that's not true. And given the opportunity to be a volunteer or serve on a board, when we see how much we can contribute, we'll have no trouble getting our community involved.

"It's not enough that a Nick Sanchez heading the Boy's Club. It's the people who use those facilities the most that give the least in terms of time or money. They say 'We'll take care of it manana.' Well, manana's here, and I think rather than perpetuate the perception that we're takers, we need to show our support and make sure a lot of our people who are intelligent, articulate and energetic volunteer some of their time. We should give as much as we've gotten."

Being rated number one can be good for business.

Television series get to stay on the air, newspapers continue printing, and television and radio stations can earn higher advertising revenues.

For local radio stations, the results are in with the arrival of Birch and Arbitron rankings. As with last year, the top four FM stations remain (in alphabetical order) KBAT, KNFM, KODM and KWES. This area is ranked 150th in the U.S. by Arbitron, with a 206,000 metropolitan population.

However, local radio station managers insist, their stations do not live and die by the ratings book. "The problem with ratings is they're like a presidential poll," says Bill Bundy, general manager of KUFO. "They're only good at the time they're taken. By the time the ratings come out, they're months old. We like to do business based on current happenings."

Though his station ranked near the bottom of the area's nine FM stations, Bundy says he's pleased with KUFO's performance, reporting a 400 percent increase in sales in the last six months.

Bill Gruber, co-owner and general manager of KODM, says his station has recorded a consistent 20 percent increase since 1985.

Bob Bunch, general manager of Bakke Communications, which owns KNFM/KMND Radio, noted a number of discrepancies between the Birch and Arbitron rankings. He noted that Birch uses a telephone survey method while Arbitron uses a diary method.

In addition, KNFM — which recently moved to a location near Midland International Airport and put up a 100 ft. tower, had tower problems during one ratings period, a problem shared by KUFO, which changed frequencies. These, both men agreed, affected their rankings within the two surveys.

Still, when it comes down to the bottom line, the bottom line is little affected by a station's ranking. What counts, according to Jim Martin, vice president and general manager of KBAT/KWEL, is the audience a radio station delivers to its client.

Radio is very fragmented these days, aimed at specific audiences, which makes it easier for an advertiser to reach his target market. "The key is response," Martin explained. "Even a station with a small audience can get results for some clients."

Agreed KNFM's Bunch: "I think any station will do a good job if it's reaching the right audience. The ratings services don't measure results, response or attitude."

That's why local stations don't see much impact from their rankings. Local advertisers — who comprise the majority of a station's business — can tune in to their station and survey customers to find which station best delivers the target market. National, and to a degree regional, advertisers — who don't have access to the station — are the ones who pay the most attention to the ratings, station managers agreed.

Mike Deardorff, general manager of KWES, said his station, like Bundy's, is having a good year, but he added that most of the local media is having a good year. "It's not necessarily because the economy is better, but because local businesses have discovered they can live through rough times and realized that, to grow and survive, they have to advertise and promote their business and bring people to their stores. And it's working."

Monday's price surge loses steam

From Staff and Wire Reports

The souring of earlier optimism about the impact of an impending cease-fire between Iran and Iraq has pushed oil futures prices lower.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the contract for September delivery of West Texas Intermediate opened 22 cents lower this morning, after declining 19 cents Tuesday to close at $15.68 a barrel.

The September crude contract had jumped 61 cents a barrel on Monday, on a wave of optimism sparked by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar's announcement that Iran and Iraq would begin a cease-fire in their 8-year-old war on Aug. 20.

Many traders believed the cease-fire would lead to more cohesion within the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, of which Iran and Iraq are members, making it more likely the cartel could cut production to help boost prices.

But the market bullishness evaporated Tuesday amid skepticism about the ability of Iran and Iraq — both of which will need funds desperately to rebuild their war-torn economies — to adhere to their official production quotas set by OPEC.

Dollar boosted by discount hike

LONDON (AP) — The dollar held steady against major currencies in nervous morning trading today, but dealers expected a further rise in the U.S. currency. Gold rose slightly.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.6865, compared with $1.6830 Tuesday.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

—1.9210 West German marks, up from 1.9160

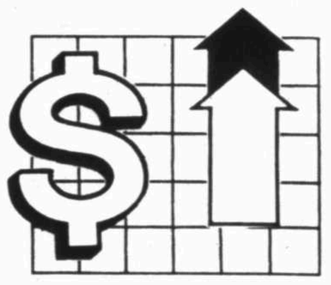

—1.6075 Swiss francs, up from 1.5960

—6.4785 French francs, up from 6.4325

—2.1707 Dutch guilders, up from 2.1570

—1,418.00 Italian lire, up from 1,403.50

—1.2180 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2137

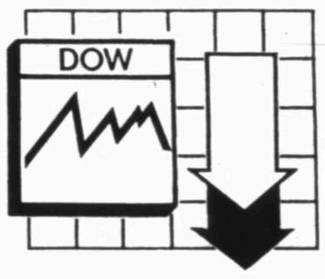

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 1.34 yen to a closing 134.92 yen following a half-percentage point increase to 6.5 percent in the U.S. discount rate on Tuesday. Later, in London, it was quoted lower at 134.77 yen.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $427.45 a troy ounce, up from late Tuesday's $426. At mid-morning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $426.95.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $6.62 a troy ounce, up slightly from Tuesday's $6.60.

Fed move drives Dow to fourth loss

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fell sharply Tuesday following the Federal Reserve's surprise hike in its key bank lending rate, which sparked fears that interest rates may be headed even higher.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had been off nearly 40 points, closed down 28.27 at 2,079.13, its fourth consecutive losing session.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 7 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 348 issues up, 1,206 down and 418 unchanged.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $31.76 billion, or 1.18 percent, in value.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Pickens to bid for Tenneco gas plants

AMARILLO (AP) — Mesa Limited Partnership is gearing up to bid on Tenneco Inc.'s oil and gas production in the Houston company's mid-continent and Rocky Mountain regions, general partner T. Boone Pickens Jr. said.

A Mesa acquisition of the two properties would boost the partnership's natural gas production levels by more than 235 million cubic feet per day, Tenneco daily production averages for the first six months of 1988 show.

Tenneco, the nation's 10th largest oil company, has put its production on the auction block in eight geographic segments: the Gulf of Mexico, onshore Gulf Coast production, mid-continent North America, the Rocky Mountain region, the West Coast, the North Sea, Colombia, and a package of other international properties.

Tenneco announced in May that it was getting out of the petroleum exploration and production business, which represents about 20 percent of its assets.

Audit: Half of defense contracts overcharge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense contractors routinely overcharge the government for spare parts, and the excess charges, although small in percentage terms, total hundreds of millions of dollars, the Pentagon says.

An unusually broad internal defense audit found that nearly half the contracts reviewed involved some measure of overcharging, auditors reported Tuesday.

In the majority of instances, the overcharges resulted from a military contractor's failure to abide by a law requiring the company to share with the government the latest information it has on labor and material costs.

BUSINESS TRENDS

Sears readies McKids outlets

New York Times News Service

CHICAGO — Sears, Roebuck & Co. said Tuesday that it would open 20 to 40 free-standing McKids specialty stores by 1990, under an exclusive license from the McDonald's Corp.

The move represents a deepening alliance between the nation's largest retailer and the nation's largest restaurant chain and reflects Sears's strategic decision to compete with specialty retailers.

In July 1987, Sears and McDonald's introduced the McKids line of children's apparel based on McDonald's characters. Sears declined to give sales of the line but called the venture a success.

"These new stores, located primarily in malls, offer an opportunity to broaden our customer base," said Michael Bozic, chairman and chief executive of Sears Merchandise Group.

Bozic added that the products offered in the McKids stores — clothing, shoes, toys and books — would be different from those in Sears stores and catalogues. The stores will also feature national brand children's products and the first will open this month in Chicago.

Sears had also been testing the idea of putting McDonald's food operations in its stores to increase customer traffic.

U.N. seeks funds for gulf truce watchers

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. officials say that unless withheld dues are paid, particularly by Washington, they'll be hard pressed to fund the force of international military observers monitoring a truce in the Iran-Iraq war.

A first contingent of five observers arrived in Tehran today, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

The Security Council voted unanimously Tuesday to authorize the 350-member U.N. Iran-Iraq Military Observer Group, a day after Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar announced a cease-fire effective Aug. 20.

Direct peace talks between Iran and Iraq are scheduled to begin five days later in Geneva.

More than 24 hours after receiving word of a truce in the 8-year-old war, Iraqis continued to celebrate, honking horns and jumping out of cars to dance in Baghdad's traffic-clogged streets.

Iran, which had suffered a recent string of battlefield defeats, had a more subdued reaction. The nation's acting commander-in-chief and parliament spearker, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said soldiers should remain vigilant in the face of Iraqi "mischief."

In a statement read over Tehran Radio, he said Iran would not initiate "any kind of military and armed moves. But just like always, (Iran) will be ready to give an appropriate response to the mischiefs of the enemy."

Marrick Goulding, U.N. undersecretary-general in charge of peacekeeping operations, told The Associated Press some observers left for the 730-mile front Tuesday afternoon and all 350 are expected there in a week.

The observers, known as the "Blue Helmets" for the robin's-egg blue helmets they wear, will come from 25 nations, told an earlier news conference. The nations were not immediately named.

Goulding said none of the five permanent Security Council members — the United States, Soviet Union, France, Britain and China — will send observers.

In a report to the 15-member Security Council, Perez de Cuellar estimated the cost of the force at $74 million.

"I simply do not have the money for this," he said. He looked at one American reporter and added: "You should advise your government to participate fully in these efforts for peace."

The United States, which is assessed more than $200 million a year — a quarter of the annual U.N. budget — is $467 million in arrears. The total of unpaid contributions to the U.N. budget by member nations is $602 million.

The United States has said it was holding back funding to demand reform in the budget-making process, personnel cuts and changes in practices that allow Soviet U.N. employees to remain under their government's control.

Goulding said the secretary-general would probably ask the 159-member organization to convene a special General Assembly session to levy funds for the force.

"I proceed on the assumption that the United States will come up with its full assessment of 25 percent or more" for the peacekeeping effort, he told reporters.

"I think the United States will meet its obligations and make its payments," said U.S. Ambassador Vernon A. Walters.

WORLD in brief

Shultz calling for new talks

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz called for renewed Nicaraguan peace talks after meeting with President Oscar Arias, who said he thinks Washington is more interested than ever in a diplomatic solution to the conflict.

Shultz is on a mission to involve the United States more closely in the year-old Central American peace initiative, which Arias authored.

After meeting with the Costa Rican leader, he flew to Tegucigalpa for talks with Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo and later to El Salvador for a visit with acting President Rodolfo Castillo Claramount. He flies home Thursday.

Shultz was to head today for Ecuador, the last stop of his Latin American tour, to attend the inauguration of President-elect Rodrigo Borja.

The visit to Quito gives Shultz a further opportunity to talk with Latin and Central American leaders. Among those attending the inauguration are presidents Fidel Castro of Cuba and Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua.

Bangkok buildings burn

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Demonstrators burned buildings and vehicles in the Burmese capital today and left the city barely functioning, diplomats said. The reported vandalism followed anti-government riots that left dozens dead.

State-run Radio Rangoon said Tuesday that at least 36 people died and 92 were wounded in rioting in the capital, Rangoon, and 26 other areas of the country. A curfew was imposed in Rangoon on Tuesday.

Some diplomatic sources said casualties were probably much higher, and one Western diplomat estimated more than 100 were killed. Troops had fired on demonstrators in Rangoon.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Ben Justesen said the department had "no hard information on casualty numbers, but they appear to be substantial."

India's actions decried

LONDON (AP) — Amnesty International today accused India of covering up alleged human rights abuses by its security forces and said there are credible reports that Indian police have murdered scores of religious minorities.

The Indian government accused the international human rights organization of biased and distorted reporting.

In a 26-page report on India, Amnesty International said it heard of dozens of prisoners being tortured and dying in police custody. The London-based organization also said an investigation into an alleged police massacre of 80 Moslem villagers had been kept secret.

Amnesty cited an "official failure to clamp down on lawlessness by India's national and state security forces"and called on the government of the world's largest democracy to investigate.

Soviet releases sought

MOSCOW (AP) — An official human rights commission called on the government to release Soviets jailed for violating laws limiting religious activity and said most of the prisoners have embraced Mikhail S. Gorbachev's reforms.

At the same time, religious activists in the western Ukraine reported a new crackdown on the banned Ukrainian Catholic Church, which operates underground.

In its appeal Tuesday, the Commission on International Cooperation on Humanitarian Questions and Human Rights said: "It seems to us that today these people do not represent any social danger for our society. We propose that it would be an act of great humane meaning to forgive them."

No figures were available on how many prisoners might be affected.

Bill-burners expelled

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Two Dutch tourists spotted lighting cigarettes with Yugoslav money have been fined and expelled, the state news agency Tanjug reported.

In a report Tuesday, it identified the two as Peeters Hendrikus, 25, and Peeters Hermanus, 36, but gave no other details of the incident in the Adriatic resort of Makarska.

Yugoslavia's currency, the dinar, has fallen rapidly in value as the country remains gripped by triple-digit inflation.

Speculation grows as princess awaits name

LONDON (AP) — The delay while Prince Andrew and his wife Sarah decided what to call their baby daughter had commemorative mug makers tense, bookmakers in a lather and newspapers in a fever of speculation today.

The Times of London said bookmakers offered short odds on Annabel and Victoria. It said Victoria was more likely because of Queen Victoria.

Andrew, the Duke of York, reportedly said several months ago that Annabel was his own choice for a baby girl.

Mike Raper, an executive at bookmakers William Hill, said odds-makers at one stage had taken bets at 3-1 on Annabel as the favorite but had stopped.

"If it is Annabel, we will have to pay out thousands and thousands of pounds," he said.

Wally Pyrah of Coral Bookmakers said Charlotte was also strongly favored.

"Charlotte ... has seen the odds tumble from 14-1 to 6-4 favorite. I hope that doesn't mean that everyone knows before us," he said.

"The second favorite (among Coral gamblers) is Victoria at 5-2 followed by two very popular names, Annabel and Elizabeth, at 4-1," Pyrah added.

Frank Martin, managing director of the ceramics division of the wallpaper and home products group Coloroll, said he had 10,000 commemorative mugs waiting to be rushed to stores.

Blank spaces were left on the mugs for the name. "We have the artwork all ready to go. As soon as we know the baby's name we can rush them out within 24 hours," he said.

The Times said another name being tipped was Elizabeth, after Queen Elizabeth I and the present queen, Elizabeth II.

It said a wild outsider was Francesca, after Sir Francis Drake.

The Daily Telegraph reported: "Elizabeth and Victoria are thought to be public favorites but Mary, Margaret, Harriet and Louisa are also tipped as likely names."

Andrew, 28, told crowds outside London's Portland Hospital on Tuesday after visiting his 28-year-old wife and baby daughter: "We have a few ideas but we haven't chosen a name yet."

Mothercare, a big retail chain specializing in maternity and baby clothes, has introduced a Grand Old Duke of York design for crib bedding and other items to mark the royal birth. The Grand Old Duke of York referred to was Queen Victoria's uncle Frederick, who became a nursery rhyme figure when, on a whim, he marched 10,000 soldiers up a hill one day and then down again.

Baby food makers Cow and Gate marked the occasion by producing give-away mobiles to hang over cribs consisting of a crown, a plane, a palace, a cow and a gate.

Italian communities battle visitors' bare-chested approach to summer

By MARY BETH SHERIDAN

ROME (AP) — The battle of the bare bodies has heated up in Italy this summer, with several towns and resort islands ruling that men and women must wear shirts in public or face penalties.

A Belgian man was even reported beaten up after he refused a request by a Rome subway attendant to cover his naked chest.

One southern town has made a notable break with the trend, guaranteeing that people can walk around topless. Agropoli's tourism chief has called on women to bare all, but the local priest is fighting back.

Topless bathing, popular in Italy for some time, now appears to be on the decline. One-piece suits, unthinkable a few years ago, have now become fashionable.

"It's necessary to return to the good taste of the past," Capri tourism commissioner Giuseppe Massa told the Italian news agency ANSA.

The famous island put into effect a new "cover-up" ordinance Tuesday that bars anyone from walking the streets with a bare chest or just a swimsuit. Penalties for offenders range from $70 to $350.

According to Mayor Saverio Valente, the law was necessary "for reasons not only aesthetic, but hygienic."

On the island of Ponza, about 65 miles to the north in the Tyrrhenian Sea, bathers are also barred from strolling the streets in swimsuits.

Mayor Francesco Ferraiuolo acted this month after receiving a note from local Roman Catholic priest worried about the practice, according to Italian press reports.

In Venice, meanwhile, a former director of tourism, Augusto Salvadori, is organizing patrols to advise tourists on how to dress and eat properly in the canal city. Travelers in shorts or too-skimpy sundresses are barred from the main section of St. Mark's Basilica.

Frustration with toplessness boiled over on a subway in the Italian capital Monday, according to Rome's Il Messaggero newspaper.

A subway worker advised 23-year-old Daniel Serge Meuree of Belgium to put on a shirt, the paper said, and the youth replied with a shrug of his shoulders.

"He even began to spit on the pavement muttering, it appeared, not very pleasant epithets about the Italians. And therefore someone, filled with the love of his country, reacted," the paper said.

Several subway passengers slapped and punched the Belgian, who subsequently pulled on a blue shirt, the paper said.

Refusenik family in Vienna, bound for Boston

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A Soviet Jewish refusenik family who became the center of a superpower tug-of-war during the Moscow summit emigrated to the West today, ending an 11-year struggle to leave their homeland.

Yuri and Tanya Zieman and their 12-year-old daughter Vera smiled broadly as they stepped off an Aeroflot jet from Moscow to a warm welcome from Western friends, U.S. Embassy officials and HIAS, an organization that helps emigre Soviet Jews.

Asked how she felt on arriving in the West at last, Mrs. Zieman said simply, "Stunned." Her daughter, clutching a welcome bouquet from wellwishers, giggled, "Excited."

The family will stay in Vienna until Friday, when they will fly to Boston for a reunion with an older daughter who emigrated in 1987 with her husband.

Several dozen friends and relatives gathered for a champagne toast at Moscow's Sheremetyevo airport today to celebrate the Ziemans' departure.

"I'm glad you're all here," Zieman told the group. "I invite you all to my new home." Zieman is a former computer specialist who has held odd jobs since applying to emigrate, and was seriously ill earlier in the year.

In Vienna, he said he now feels "much better. I'm so excited that it sometimes seems to me that all my sicknesses are behind me."

In Moscow, Mrs. Zieman called her departure "one of the most difficult moments of one's life."

"It's like your own funeral in a way because most of the people who are here today I won't see again — my old teachers, relatives, friends," she said.

The family spent a sleepless night clearing customs at the Moscow airport and saying goodbye to friends, she said.

Leftist president replacing archconservative in Ecuador

By MONTE HAYES

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Leftist law professor Rodrigo Borja, who today replaces an archconservative as Ecuador's president, has pledged renewed ties with Nicaragua and an end to the nation's free market economy.

Borja, leader of the Democratic Left Party, succeeds Leon Febres Cordero, a bitter political rival and President Reagan's closest ally in South America.

A champion of free enterprise during his four-year term, Febres Cordero was barred from re-election by the constitution.

Borja, who describes himself as a leftist but not a Marxist, defeated populist candidate Abdala Bucaram in a runoff May 8.

Presidents Fidel Castro of Cuba and Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua were among foreign leaders who came to Ecuador for today's inauguration, and Castro took a swipe at the United States in his arrival statement Tuesday.

In a brief speech at the Quito airport, he praised the good relations he said exist between his communist country and Ecuador.

"They are a proof of independence in the face of those who would like to see us not so united," Castro said in an obvious reference to the United States.

Castro rarely travels abroad, and his visit was seen as a sign of strong support for the Borja government.

Borja has criticized Ecuador's pro-American foreign policy and said he would seek close ties to the non-aligned movement.

Nevertheless, U.S. officials say they expect to be able to work with Borja and note that friends and foes consider him a highly intelligent and honest political leader.

"Borja may prove to be a problem for the U.S. at times, but he is no threat to democracy in Ecuador," said one U.S. official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz was to represent the United States at the inauguration.

This Colorado-size nation of 10 million on the northwestern shoulder of South America returned to democracy in 1979 after nine years of civilian and military dictatorships.

Borja said one of his first official acts after being sworn in would be to renew diplomatic relations with Nicaragua, where the leftist government has been fighting U.S.-backed Contra rebels.

Ties were broken in October 1985 after Febres Cordero accused Ortega of insulting him by calling him a pawn of U.S. foreign policy.

Borja, 53, is a long-time political foe of Febres Cordero, 57, and lost a bitterly fought runoff to him in 1984. He vowed to dismantle Febres Cordero's free-market economic program, which he blames for the country's bleak economic situation.

The economy shrank by 3.5 percent in 1987. Annual inflation is running at nearly 60 percent, and less than half the work force is employed full-time.

No payments have been made since January on Ecuador's $9.2 billion foreign debt. The nation is now more than a billion dollars in arrears.

The Febres Cordero government blamed the economic slide on the collapse of world oil prices and devastating earthquakes that crippled Ecuador's oil industry for nearly six months in 1987.

Borja said he will respect private enterprise, but announced he will impose exchange controls, restrict imports to save scarce dollar reserves and regulate prices of basic consumer goods to fight inflation.

He has also announced plans for a more restrictive foreign investment policy and a moratorium on foreign debt payments if creditors do not agree to negotiate easier terms.

SR-8 Liquefied petroleum gas service. VA does not warrant system.
SR-9 Property is condemned and does not meet city code. Property must be repaired to code or demolished.
SR-10 Maintenance assessment to be paid to homeowners' association, not included in mortgage payments. (Information in listing)
SR-11 Water service is by community system. Purchaser must pay all fees, deposits, etc.
SR-12 _____ will be reinstalled at sales closing.
SR-13 _____ will be repaired/replaced at sales closing.
SR-14 On term sales only, for owner occupied properties, seller will contribute 5% down payment on behalf of buyer if offer is submitted at or above listed term price.
B A $500 bonus will be paid to broker by VA at closing.

The offer which best serves the interest of VA will be processed for acceptance. The name of the successful offeror and sales broker will appear in subsequent publications. VA will accept cash offers up to 10 percent below the advertised term sales price. VA also will pay reasonable loan discount points and buyers' closing costs on cash offers when requested on the Cash Sale Addendum to Offer to Purchase. However, the combined loan discount points, buyers' closing costs to be paid by VA and the discount for cash may not exceed 10 percent of the term list price. Offers must be submitted at term listed price when buyers request a new GI loan with $1.00 move-in. Interest rate of available financing is 10 percent (APR 10.1 percent).
Purchase offers requesting VA vendee financing (Term Sales) must have VA Form 26-6705B, Credit Statement of Prospective Purchaser and Verification of Employment/Income, as outlined in Sales of VA-Acquired Properties Manual, attached to their VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale. Effective June 8, 1988, all credit underwriting for purchase offers requesting VA vendee financing is being referred to Shanks & Butler. All brokers are reminded to refer to PM letter #17-88 dated May 25, 1988, outlining these new procedures. Purchase offers not accompanied by the required employment/income verification WILL RESULT IN REJECTION OF THE PURCHASE OFFER.
VA has properties for sale statewide. If you desire to purchase properties in other areas, please contact any sales broker located in the area in which you are interested.

FORFEITURE OF EARNEST MONEY DEPOSIT

Prior to signing the offer, broker must deposit in broker's trust account at least $500 earnest money. Once a purchase offer has been accepted for processing by VA and is subsequently cancelled at the request of the purchaser, the Earnest Money Deposit WILL NOT be refunded and the broker will be required to forward the Earnest Money to the VA as liquidation expenses. There will be no exception to this policy. Therefore, the VA suggests that all brokers interview their buyers to assure they want the property, prior to submission of an offer to purchase.
VA pays 6% sales commission. Offers are subject to the provisions of VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale, on which all offers must be submitted. VA Form 26-6705 must be submitted in duplicate to:
