State Report Sees School Tax Boosts

AUSTIN (AP) — New property value estimates, sure to arouse outcries as school districts jockey for state aid dollars, show Texans' taxable wealth is $464.4 billion.

The School Tax Assessment Practices Board issued its data Friday, and it could mean higher school taxes for urban areas unless the Legislature comes to their rescue.

"I have confidence the Legislature will come up with a very workable number for the rural and urban areas," said Walt Parker, the board's executive director.

Double 1976 Estimate

The board's figures are double the $232 billion estimate issued in 1976 by the Governor's Office of Education Resources and used by lawmakers last year in parceling out state school aid.

Parker said the big difference is that the Legislature told the board to count intangibles — primarily bank accounts, stocks and bonds — and personal property while the governor's office evaluated only real estate.

Intangibles, he said, total $154 billion.

The board's real estate figures were $78 billion, or 34 percent, higher than the resources report. Parker said this was partly attributable to economic growth and inflation.

"Different Results"

"In addition, our study found significantly different results in certain districts from that determined by GOER," he said — bearing out some lawmakers' complaints of inaccuracy in the governor's office data.

Sen. A.M. Aikin, D-Paris, said during a briefing of legislative leaders by Parker that the governor's office figures were "totally unreliable."

The board's estimates of the value of 14 categories of property were sent Friday to each of the 1,080 school districts, and a third of them are expected to appeal in the hope of lowering their estimates.

A district gains from reduced estimates of taxable property values because its state aid is based on taxable wealth. The greater the wealth, the less the aid.

Intangibles Big Issue

Whether to count intangibles will be the big issue arising from the board's figures, which show such property concentrated in urban areas.

Parker said 82.8 percent of Texans' intangible wealth is concentrated in the 52 counties that make up the 26 Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas.

Half the intangibles counted by the board are in only four counties — Harris, Dallas, Tarrant and Bexar.

The school finance bill passed by the 1977 Legislature required the board to count intangibles. And it mandated that the Texas Education Agency use the board's figures in 1979-80 and afterward in computing each district's local fund assignment — its share of the state-subsidized Foundation School Program.

A legislative commission is studying the school finance system and is expected to come up with recommendations for changes next year.

Parker said in answer to a question that all of the major urban school districts would become "budget balanced" if intangibles were included in the measurement of their wealth.

Budget balanced districts receive only constitutionally mandated per capita aid from the income from investing proceeds from state school land. They do not participate in foundation program aid.

Parker, a former state representative from Denton, said he was sure the Legislature would not allow the school districts to suffer huge cuts in state aid because of counting intangibles.

"If there are not some adjustments made for intangibles, the urban areas will suffer more than the rural areas," he said.

Rural legislators have contended for years, however, that the school finance system was unfair because it was based on real estate values and excluded intangible wealth concentrated in the cities.

Parker used his news conference to plug for the "Tax Relief Amendment" on the Nov. 7 general election ballot. One provision would remove the constitutional requirement — rarely obeyed — that intangibles be taxed.

"From a practical standpoint, school districts do not have the ability to tax these items at the present time since they cannot determine individual ownership. Passage of the proposed Tax Relief

Intangible Wealth's Tax Base Inclusion Draws Protest Here

By JEFF SOUTH

SUPERINTENDENT Ed Irons says he will fight a state agency's claim that the Lubbock Independent School District has under-reported its taxable property by about $1.6 billion.

If the claim goes uncontested, the district will appear to be so wealthy that state aid to the city's public schools could be "severely reduced," Irons said. Local taxes would have to be raised to make up the difference, he added.

Irons made his comments after the School Tax Assessment Practices Board released its report on the "true wealth" of school systems in Texas.

For the first time, the board included "intangible personal" property — such as bank deposits, stocks and bonds — in computing the theoretical tax base of each district.

The Texas Constitution says intangible property is supposed to be taxed. But in practice, tax authorities ignore that provision because they have no way of finding out how much each resident has in the bank.

The state tax board found that Lubbock's city-school tax office is extremely accurate in appraising most kinds of property. According to the board's study, Lubbock is only about 3 percent too low in its appraisals on real estate and other tangible property.

In contrast, most school districts — because they are lax in revaluing property and getting new items on their tax rolls — were found to be under-appraising tangible property by 33 percent.

The "devastating aspect" of the report is its findings on intangible property, Irons said. Because the Lubbock school system does not pursue such taxation, the district's tax roll shows practically nothing under bank deposits and other intangible wealth. However, the state tax board says those intangible items should total $1.47 billion.

So what?

Well, the board's data will be used by the 1979 legislature to determine each school district's share of the cost of public education.

A "wealthy" district ordinarily is required to raise a lot of local tax revenues and gets relatively little state aid. Conversely, a "poor" district usually is required to raise a relatively small portion of local tax revenues and gets a lot of state aid.

The Lubbock school district traditionally has fallen into the latter category be-

Guardsmen Oust Rebels From Nicaraguan City

MATAGALPA, Nicaragua (AP) — National guard troops tore aside makeshift barricades Friday and moved into Matagalpa, held five days by youthful rebels whose bloody resistance had become a symbol of the popular uprising against President Anastasio Somoza.

Dr. Cesar Amador Kuhl, a surgeon working with the Red Cross in this city 100 miles north of the capital of Managua, said 50 persons had died in the fighting since it began late last week, including an undetermined number killed in the final push by the guard.

He said more than 200 others were wounded.

Red Cross workers said the rebels had withdrawn during the night and that the guard, mainstay of Somoza's military government, was in total control.

(Guilliermo Balmaceda, of the Red Cross office in Managua, said he heard reports from Matagalpa indicating pockets of resistance still existed in the city. Col. Aquiles Aranda Escobar, chief spokesman for the national guard in the capital said the city was under control and being patrolled by police.)

Most of the barricades, hastily thrown together with sand bags and rocks, had been torn down, a Red Cross spokesman said.

"About 2 a.m. most of the firing stopped and the guard went in with jeeps, armored cars and a front-end loader and began tearing down the barricades," said a Red Cross volunteer who asked not to be identified.

An armored car equipped with a 40mm cannon opened fire repeatedly during the night to dislodge the rebels, said one Red Cross worker.

Witnesses said many of the rebels — large numbers of them teenagers armed with a variety of pistols, rifles and some shotguns — had fled into the hills surrounding this city of 40,000 people. Intermittent firing was heard in the hills at mid-morning.

A young man fleeing from the city who refused to be identified said the guard had staged "a violent assault with rockets and armored cars." He said "people without number" had been shot.

Another refugee, Red Cross nurse Esperanza Mesa de Lanza, said she had been working in a temporary morgue in the city where she had seen the dead "stacked one on top of the other like wood. There must have been 50 dead."

Their reports could not be independently confirmed.

Later in the day Friday, the armored car sat in one crossroads, its cannon covering the approaching streets. Other armored vehicles prowled different sectors of the city while troops patrolled the littered streets.

Anti-government violence was reported elsewhere in Nicaragua late Thursday, but there were no late reports of new fighting in the provinces Friday. Many shops and other businesses continued to observe a general strike called to press demands for Somoza's resignation.

Many residents of Matagalpa had been holed up in their homes since the start of the fighting. On Friday, some trudged through the streets, now covered with broken glass, carrying bundles of personal belongings and waving white flags.

The Red Cross in Managua sent five ambulances to bring back the wounded, along with seven larger vehicles to transport evacuees, said Guillermo Balmaceda of the Red Cross office in the capital.

The national guard, which serves as Nicaragua's 7,500-man army, began their assault on Thursday to try to free a national guard garrison that had been held at bay by the rebels. But the rag-tag in-

Judge Puts Stopper On Lake Drain Plan

U.S. DIST. Judge Halbert O. Woodward Friday ordered the weekend continuance of a restraining order barring the federal government from draining Buffalo Lake.

Woodward had issued the temporary restraining order to prevent draining of the lake, about nine miles northwest of Canyon, at a hearing earlier this week in Amarillo.

After a hearing in U.S. District Court in Lubbock Friday, Woodward continued the order until Monday.

He indicated he would rule early next week on the question of further injunctive relief.

Woodward said he would lift the restraining order if, in the interim, a storm threatens to run water over the spillway.

The temporary restraining order was obtained by an unincorporated association known as the Buffalo Lake Survival Committee.

The suit filed by the committee named Cecil D. Andrus, secretary of the interior, and W.O. Nelson, a regional director of the Fish and Wildlife Service, as defendants.

The U.S. Department of the Interior earlier announced that the lake, on a federal wildlife refuge, would be drained so that repairs to the spillway could be made.

The government decision to drain the lake came in the wake of Memorial Day weekend floods in Randall County, which were blamed for three deaths and $15 million in damage.

Plaintiffs contend the lake is a stop for migratory waterfowl and an environmental refuge, and that defendants should have filed an environmental impact statement.

The civil suit contends that by not filing the statement, defendants failed to comply with provisions of the National Environmental Policy Act.

Plaintiffs say no explanation has been offered as to why the spillway could not be repaired without draining the lake.

Minority Protesters' March Slated Today

MEMBERS of Lubbock's minority community will begin their march protesting "police brutality" at 10 a.m. today at Mae Simmons Park, 22nd Street and Quirt Avenue.

The group, led by Brown Beret leader Gilbert Herrera, are expected to reach the Federal Building at Broadway and Texas Avenue by noon, where they will hold a two-hour rally, according to city officials.

The march was prompted by the fatal shooting Aug. 16 of Tommy Earl Davis, 27, by a Lubbock policeman.

A parade permit was issued Monday. Herrera said between 700 and 1,000 persons are expected and the assemblage will be escorted by Lubbock police officers to prevent traffic tie-ups.

Clouds Abound But Rain Scant

RAIN FELL on a fair-sized chunk of Texas Friday, with the northern Panhandle reporting the only clear skies in the state, but Lubbock and the South Plains were among the areas with threatening but mostly unproductive clouds.

Thunderstorms occurred across a line extending as far west as Fort Stockton, northeast to Wichita Falls, into East Texas, into Central Texas and west again toward San Antonio.

Bastrop, southeast of Austin, reported more than two inches of rain by late Friday for the largest official measurement.

Temperatures were in the 80s and 90s across the state, with more of the same expected today.

Clouds moved over the South Plains most of Friday without significant results, but the chances for rainfall by this morning were still put at 30 per cent. Brief sprinkles cooled the air at times in Lubbock, where the high was 83.

'Family Stroll' 43 Centuries Ago Traced In California Footprints

VICTORVILLE, Calif. (AP) — The oldest human footprints ever found in North America record what seems to have been a family stroll through the cottonwoods that lined the Mojave River some 4,300 years ago, scientists say.

The discovery of 54 footprints was announced this week by excited archaeologists from the University of California-Riverside.

Two sets of adult prints, one larger than the other, were found preserved in the once-soggy ground. These barefoot adults walked purposely southward, taking longer steps now and then to avoid puddles. One lost his or her footing and skidded in the mud.

Two smaller sets of footprints point in many directions, suggesting two children who scurried here and there, as though playing and exploring.

"Finding the children's prints, that was really great," said Jim McManus, second in command at the excavation. "They show that people really haven't changed that much — at least kids haven't."

The trail of footprints "gives the impression of mom and dad and two kids walking along," James Swenson, the university's senior archaeologist, said during a press tour of the site.

"But," he added, "that's mostly supposition. All we can really say for sure is that somebody was walking by here."

Swenson said specialists will be considering for years to come questions of who the people were, what they looked like, where they were going and why.

He speculated that the footprints survived because a fire swept the area, hardening the mud and its trail of footprints not long after the four prehistoric people walked through.

Powdered charcoal found with the tracks allowed archaeologists to use radioactive dating techniques that showed the fire occurred between 4,200 and 4,400 years ago.

The footprints are by no means the oldest relics of civilization in North America. Skeletons, tools and other evidences have been found dating back at least 10,000 years.

But the oldest footprints found previously in the North America are a mere 400 years old, Swenson said. Those prints also are in Southern California, near the Salton Sea.

Swenson said the Mojave River tracks had been covered by dust, then by layers of silt from the river. The river later changed its course, moving a few hundred yards eastward.

Then, perhaps 1,600 years ago, another prehistoric group walked along the river. This group, probably ancestors of the Serrano Indians who still live in Southern California, built huts of twigs and brush. The village was in turn abandoned and buried beneath centuries of sand and silt.

It was while excavating that village in July that the trail of footprints was discovered almost three feet beneath the surface, said Carol Rector, who directed about 40 students working on the project.

The village itself was a valuable find, she said, since "we have very little information on the desert Serrano."

But the footprints — now the only direct evidence that men and women lived in the desert so long ago — were "the frosting on the cake. That was totally unexpected," Swenson said.

Ella Intensifies, Heads Near Coast

While the National Hurricane Center said Ella would likely turn northward and narrowly miss Eastern North Carolina, forecasters urged coastal residents to consider the hurricane in any weekend planning.

At noon EDT, Ella was centered a little more than 325 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C.

Highest sustained winds were 100 mph, with gales extending 100 miles from the center. The hurricane was moving northwest at 10 mph.

"There is no immediate threat to the coastal areas north of Virginia," forecasters said. No hurricane watch was issued for the Virginia coast.

Ella, the fifth tropical storm of the Atlantic hurricane season, formed Wednesday about 350 miles south of Bermuda. It grew to 74 mph winds, hurricane speed, on Thursday.

Davis Motionless Upon Hearing Judge's Refusal To Set Bond

FORT WORTH (AP) — Nine-year-old Trey Master sat at his mother Karen's side in the crowded courtroom, squirming like a kid in church, but he pulled himself forward, all attention, as a grim Cullen Davis entered.

Davis' black, expressionless eyes searched the first few rows of spectators, then locked onto the boy's wide blue eyes. Davis flashed him a wan smile and Trey broke into a broad grin.

But that was to be the only crack in Davis' inscrutable facade during Friday's bond hearing.

Outwardly, Davis looked the millionaire industrialist he is. He wore a beige suit, shirt and tie. Even his thick, black hair has dared to grey only gracefully at the temples.

But bags hang threefold under the clouded eyes no one could see into and a smudge darkened one shoulder of his expensive suit.

Mrs. Master, Davis' girlfriend, wore a prim, high-necked cream blouse and tan Ultrasuede skirt. She chewed gum throughout the hearing.

Kay Davis, the defendant's niece, sat next to Mrs. Master, her hands with their five rings and sculpted false fingernails folded in her lap. It was Miss Davis who was allowed to see Davis first following the hearing.

Next to her were Mrs. Master's two sisters.

Mrs. Master has said she and her family had never doubted Davis' innocence and will stay behind him to the end.

When the hearing was over and Davis had been led out of the courtroom, Trey crawled into his mother's lap, wrapped his arms around her neck, and cried.

"Okay, it's over," she said to Trey as they got up to leave.

"Chin up." She took him by the hand and they walked out of the courtroom.

Turnover Rates Itemized

AUSTIN (AP) — Examining office accounts or being a highway patrolman are more popular jobs than guarding prisoners or attending mental patients, the Legislative Budget Board was told Friday.

The board listened to a brief report by Dick Robertson, state classification officer, on the turnover in state jobs since 1962, with emphasis on 1977.

Robertson said Texas had the highest turnover rate among state employees in 1966 — 31.05 percent — but salary raises helped lower the rate to 23.68 percent in 1977.

"Other states are at about 18-25 percent," Robertson said.

A federal study in 1976 showed that the turnover rate in private industry was 21.7 percent, although it ran as high as 45 percent in the manufacturing industry.

"If it's over 25 percent, it is something for concern," said Robertson.

The highest turnover rates among Texas' 12 largest state agencies were 36.3 for Mental Health and Mental Retardation; 30.83 percent in the Texas Youth Council; and 29.2 percent in the Department of Corrections.

In individual job categories, lower-paid correctional officers had a turnover rate of 64.19 percent in 1977, with mental health attendants at 62.55 percent.

The lowest turnover rate was 4.67 percent among account examiners, followed by patrolmen at 4.7 percent.

Two other accounting-type jobs had low turnover rates of 6.32 and 7.22 percent.

Robertson noted that of the 3,805 mental health attendants who quit in 1977, only 505 listed "inadequate salary" as the reason for leaving. A total of 1,050 quit in lieu of dismissal or were dismissed for cause.

The main reasons given for quitting MHMR were "personal reasons," Robertson said. A total of 1,669 gave that as the reason for leaving.

Robbers Kill Police Chief In Oklahoma Shootout

CATOOSA, Okla. (AP) —The police chief of this Tulsa suburb was shot to death early Friday in a gunbattle after he fatally wounded one of two masked men during a robbery attempt, authorities said.

J. B. Hamby, 46-year-old veteran law officer, died after staggering out of the town's auto tag agency, which sells auto license plates through a contract with the state.

Officers said Hamby shot and wounded the other gunman, who fled the scene in a car with a woman. About three hours later, police said a woman driving a brown car dropped off a man at the Oklahoma Osteopathic Hospital in Tulsa and left.

Authorities said they were questioning the man, who was not believed seriously wounded, but would not say by early afternoon whether or not he was a suspect in the case.

The man told police he was shot in a Tulsa apartment. Officers went to the apartment and reported finding a pair of bloody blue jeans, a pair of boots and a police monitor.

Hamby was about two blocks away when tag agent Georgia McAfee told a school employee to whom she was talking on the telephone that she was being robbed.

"I said, 'Tell J.B. to get over here...we are being robbed.'"

A witness, Glenn Hawley, said Hamby drove his police cruiser to the building, ran to the front door and yelled for someone inside to "halt or freeze."

He said the gunfire erupted at that point and the officer fired several shots before being hit in the chest.

Hawley said Hamby staggered back from the door and around the corner of the building. He entered a laundromat and collapsed. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

One gunman was found dead inside the agency and the other was seen speeding away in a car.

Hawley said he followed the car in his pickup, but "when I topped a hill they just went over... that car was flat gone," he said.

An abandoned car was found later in Rogers County and officrs were checking to see if it was the escape vehicle.

Several persons were in the tag agency office when the gunfire erupted.

"Bullets were flying everywhere...It's a miracle no one else in the agency was hit," sid Mrs. McAfee.

A clerk in a nearby convenience store said she had waited on the two men shortly before the shooting.

"They came in and bought...I don't know what...but there was a short brown-haired woman with them when they came in the store," the clerk said.

Hamby was a long-time eastern Oklahoma law officer. He previously was a deputy sheriff in both Rogers County and Tulsa County and once ran unsuccessfully for sheriff against his old boss, Amos Ward.

A native of Jay, Okla., he began his career as an Oklahoma Highway Patrol dispatcher in Tulsa.

Backer Asks 'Nightmare' End For Hearst

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's supporters have renewed their fight to end her "4½-year nightmare" after William and Emily Harris bragged in court of kidnapping her at gunpoint.

The Harrises, members of the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army which plotted the abduction, also sparked a legal tempest Thursday by making a hotly disputed prediction that they will be back on the streets in five years.

"I think this will bring a tidal wave of protest against the continued persecution of their victim," said the Rev. Ted Dumke, a Hearst family friend who is chairman of the Committee for the Release of Patty Hearst.

Miss Hearst, 24, was returned to federal prison earlier this year after losing all appeals of her seven-year sentence for armed bank robbery. She will be eligible for parole next July.

"Isn't it time to bring this 4½-year nightmare to an end?" Dumke said in an interview after the Harrises' entered their pleas. "Justice and human decency demand that Miss Hearst be returned to the loving care of her family and friends."

Dumke said his committee has mailed 9,000 packets of information to persons who have expressed support for Miss Hearst.

He predicted the Harrises' courtroom expression of "pride" in the Feb. 4, 1974, kidnapping would generate further support for a pardon or commutation of her sentence for joining her captors in the bank robbery 10 weeks after her abduction.

Her current attorney, George Martinez, has asked a federal judge to set aside the sentence on grounds that trial attorney F. Lee Bailey presented an incompetent defense. Martinez declined comment on what effect the Harrises' pleas would have on his strategy.

Dumke said the committee keeps Miss Hearst's family informed of its activities but "we receive no money from them and no direction from them. This is a grassroots effort."

Among those who have written President Carter urging a pardon or commutation of sentence are Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., and California Lt. Gov. Mervyn Dymally.

Meanwhile, a legal storm brewed over the Harrises' dramatic guilty pleas, which came after their attorneys plea-bargained away charges that could have sent them to prison without a chance for parole.

In return for guilty pleas to a charge of simple kidnapping, which carries a sentence of 1-to-25 years, prosecutor Alex Selvin dropped charges of kidnapping with bodily harm, which carries a mandatory punishment of life in prison without parole.

Mrs. Harris, in an emotional statement, told spectators in court that, "Within 4½ years, Bill and I will be back on the streets."

Outside court, Harris' attorney, Leonard Weinglass, said the prosecution had agreed to a total 10-year, eight-month sentence which could be reduced to slightly more than five years with good behavior.

Selvin scoffed at the contention, saying there was "no way they'll be out in 1983." He predicted they would spend at least 10 years in prison.

"The Harrises are not members of the Community Release Board and it will be up to that board to determine their parole," Selvin said.

Seer Tallies Snowfall By Fog

CRAB ORCHARD, Tenn. (UPI) — "If we get a snow for all the fogs I've seen in August, it's going to be rough," says Helen Lane, East Tennessee's nationally famed folk weather prophet.

"There were five heavy fogs and that denotes five heavy snows, with lots of little ones, at least on this mountain. There was hardly a morning during August that we didn't have some fog."

Each fog during August indicates some snow, lighter ones perhaps ranging from a trace to an inch and the heavier ones up to three or four inches, Mrs. Lane said Friday.

"It could be milder than the last two winters but still be rough because the past two have been so bad," she said.

Other signs she looks for also indicate a harsh winter and an early one.

"The husks on my sweet corn were thick this year. And I've seen a lot of crickets this year scurrying around looking for a place to hide. They started moving around about the first of August," she said, "and generally they don't begin moving until the first of September. That could indicate the cold weather will start early."

Mrs. Lane said she heard her first katydid July 5, and that means that the first frost of the fall likely will occur sometime around Oct. 5, three months after the first katydid of the summer is heard.

Mrs. Lane said the leaves are beginning to turn early this year, also. Hornets have been building their nests close to the ground indicating a cold winter. "The nests are about the same as last year," she said.

"There are lots of spider webs on the ground, too, and that signals severe waather."

DANCERS STRONG

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — A study comparing the physical capabilities of dancers with athletes found that the two groups have about the same strength and flexibility, a researcher said. William R. Haviland, a researcher at Ohio University, said that a year of testing of 26 modern dance students showed the dancers have the same physical abilities as long-distance runners, basketball players and other athletes.

AN EDITORIAL:

Taxes--All Targets Fair Game

IN TRYING TO dodge Tax Revolt bullets, the nation's governors are guilty of throwing up a smokescreen and leaving the federal government to cover their retreat.

At their recent national convention, the governors adopted a resolution—quite sensible as far as it goes—offered up by California Gov. Jerry Brown.

Brown, who fought his state's Proposition 13 tooth-and-nail but who has been working to get out in front of the parade ever since its overwhelming passage, proposed a way for the states to "save" some money.

WHENEVER CONGRESS passes an act putting a financial responsibility on the states, Brown's resolution declared, Congress should send the money along with the mandate.

Governors adopted that resolution post haste and, more or less as an afterthought, also concurred that the states should provide the cities with money to implement programs that state legislatures mandate.

Okay, so it makes sense that one legislative body shouldn't be spending money out of another's treasury. As a matter of fact, governors and state legislatures long ago should have staged a Tax Revolt of their own against this insidious practice.

It's only been in recent years that Texas cities got up enough gumption to at least insist that the Texas Legislature estimate the fiscal impact on the cities of any bill it passes.

It ought to be difficult, if not impossible, for one level of government to require spending by another level.

BUT WHAT THE governors and the mayors hope the taxpayer won't get up in arms about is their chorus of demands that Congress send them money for programs they themselves dream up.

Cities and states for the last 15 years have been shifting a larger share of their day-to-day operating expenses to the deficit-riddled federal treasury.

Now, with the initial shots of the Tax Revolt being fired at the city and state property tax levies, the mayors and governors are wanting to shift even more of the load to Washington.

This is evidenced even in Lubbock by the City Council's shell game of granting a tax cut by soaking up $1 million in federal revenue sharing funds for operations.

With policemen, firemen, garbage workers, school teachers, postmen and other public employes staging and threatening strikes for more money and with the taxpayers getting in an angrier mood, it's understandable why politicians at all levels want to shift the fire toward another level.

The real message of the Tax Revolt, however, is that the taxpayers want spending at all levels cut. The quicker governors, mayors, legislators, councilmen, congressmen, the President and the bureaucrats get that message, the better chance we have for survival without economic collapse.

AN EDITORIAL:

You've Come Short Way, Baby

DESPITE THE increasing sophistication and skill of organized groups promoting women in politics, 1978 is shaping up as a mixed year at best for women seeking election to Congress.

The bright spot is the likelihood that Maryon Allen, the widow of Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., will become the first woman elected to the Senate in her own right since Margaret Chase Smith of Maine left office six years ago.

Mrs. Allen, who was appointed to the Senate upon her husband's death earlier this year, is heavily favored to win the special election to fill out the remaining two years of his term.

IN KANSAS, 45-year-old Nancy Landon Kassenbaum, daughter of 1936 GOP presidential candidate Alf Landon, has at least a fighting chance to defeat Democrat Bill Roy in the November Senate election, even though he has a sizeable headstart in campaigning and fund-raising.

Mrs. Kassenbaum defeated eight other candidates to win the GOP Senate nomination, and is regarded as a serious contender by political experts of both parties.

A third woman Senate nominee, Democrat Jane Eskind of Tennessee, has little hope of beating Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr.

Kathleen Sullivan Alioto, a Boston school board member, could have a shot if she should win the crowded Democratic primary for the Senate seat now held by Republican Edward Brooke.

IN THE HOUSE, however, three of the 18 women now serving are either retiring or running for other office.

Two others, Reps. Helen Meyner, D-N.J., and Martha Keys, D-Kans., are said to be girding for tough races.

A half dozen more—three Democrats and three Republicans—already have won House nominations in California, Maine, Indiana, Rhode Island and New York. But none is a shoo-in for November.

Women easily could wind up with fewer House seats than they now hold, and have little chance of making more than a one or two-seat gain.

But a fellow would have to be kinda dumb to count 'em out before the race is run.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

KGB Bag Of Tricks Virtually Bottomless

PRESIDENT CARTER presumably never has had any experience with the Soviet's Disinformation Bureau. But it is in Moscow—and he should know about it.

President Carter should also know that here enters the dreaded Komitet Gosudarstvennoi Bazopanosti, the KGB secret police. Ostensibly, it is headed by Uri Vladimirovich Andropov, 63, a thoroughly reprehensible thug suspicious enough to bite off his mother's finger.

He has fleshy, compressed, down-turning lips, slick hair that his fingers ruffle and dilated nostrils that signal inner disturbance.

ANDROPOV IS Chairman of the Soviet Security Committee. He is determined to win, and often does; he treats winning as a game. Andropov is suspicious and operates on the principle that nobody—nobody—is trustworthy.

He wallows in a beastiality that he himself creates. He sends his KGB agents out to betray each other, kill each other, and make each other scream in cellars.

Because the preservation of power depends so heavily on the KGB, party First Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev gives Andropov resources, responsibilities and authority never before concentrated in any organization.

Officially, the KGB is a government agency at the ministry level, but the Soviet government, at every level, is secondary to the Communist Party. Thus the true authority in the KGB is in the Administrative Organs' Section of the Communist party's Central Executive Committee Secretariat, which Brezhnev heads.

BREZHNEV HIMSELF is in direct and absolute control of the KGB. Andropov is merely Brezhnev's lackey.

Andropov was Soviet ambassador to Hungary during Kremlin's brutal 1956 reconquest of Hungary. In 1967 he was appointed chief of the KGB. In 1973 Brezhnev elevated him to the ruling 17-member Politburo; the first KGB chief to be so elevated since Lavrenti P. Beria. Beria was executed in a dungeon in Moscow's Lubyanka prison.

The KGB has four Chief Directorates. Lieut. General Alexandr M. Sakharovsky heads the 1st Chief Directorate. It has 16 departments. The Disinformation Bureau is one.

"Department A" is a bottomless bag that never runs out of tricks. To "Department A" propaganda, black is white and white is black. They know how to color the picture.

But their propaganda is only as effective as people are stupid. International simplemindedness is their opportunity. The Disinformation Bureau reaches everywhere. Then fellow travelers, faculty club liberals and many innocent, but muddleheaded, people multiply the effect. Thus the impact of "Department A" is cumulative.

Momentum: the product of mass multiplied by its velocity. It operates, as well, in the United Nations. Again and again, the United States courts "world opinion" there by not doing what we know we should do in the American interest.

APPARENTLY, PRESIDENT Carter fears the United States will be criticized in the so-called "court of world opinion." Somehow that seems to suit both President Carter and UN Ambassador Andrew J. Young.

Both are very fast in gathering publicity and both constantly confuse their own personal ambitions with the national interest.

And, clouding their movements as they go, both seem to back into their futures in a diversionary smoke screen. Both have favorite phrases like "keeping the options open."

However, this is simply circumlocation for saying that they will not do anything until circumstances force some reluctant action.

But what authority has Ambassador Young that he does not get from President Carter? None. It is grossly unfair to blame him instead of putting the blame where it belongs—on President Carter.

Tenure Bedrock Of Quality In University, Reader Says

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I see that The Avalanche-Journal has decided to begin the new school year by the traditional manner of baiting the faculty at Texas Tech.

I refer in particular to your editorial of Aug. 28 in which you enthusiastically endorse the plan of House Speaker Bill Clayton to destroy academic tenure in state universities.

As both you and Clayton seem somewhat confused over the character of tenure and its relationship to academic freedom, permit me to add some information.

Academic freedom means the right to discuss and teach subjects of controversy without fear of reprisal in the form of dismissal.

If the university is devoted to the unfettered search for truth, the faculty and students must be allowed to pursue their task without constantly looking over their shoulders to insure they have not offended local politicians or editors.

It is this search which is the unique glory of the university and it is this privilege that the taxpayers support when they establish universities.

Neither academic freedom, nor its major prop, the tenure system, provides a license for irresponsible teaching or dereliction of duty.

Grounds for dismissal are provided under all tenure systems, but these grounds are not capricious and are immune to the whims of pressure groups.

Tenure is awarded to a faculty member only after careful and lengthy screening in a highly competitive environment.

One wishes the citizens of Lubbock could benefit from such a competitive environment in the selection of newspapers to read.

The very best universities in the nation defend their tenure system as the bedrock of their excellence.

If Texas decides to do away with the tenure system it will be a major step in reducing the quality of higher education available to taxpayers.

A reduction in quality of higher education will ensure that such inane and vacuous expressions as uttered by Miss Carwright may pass unchallenged.

After reading this editorial and several of its predecessors it occurred to me that The Avalanche-Journal may have several motives for its repeated antipathy for the Tech faculty.

Perhaps baiting the Tech faculty is only a sly way of insuring controversy and letters to the editor. But I think a more serious problem is revealed.

I have concluded that the paper really dislikes the entire idea of a university except as that institution is revealed in such trivial manifestations as intercollegiate sports and vocationalism.

If only we could have Tech without having those faculty members who insist that the pursuit of knowledge is an end in itself and who uniformly recognize The Avalanche-Journal for the anti-intellectual rag that it is.

George Q. Flynn, 5601 Geneva Ave.

Woman Thinks She Got Runaround At City Hall

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I am wondering if others have had the same experience in dealing with the employes at City Hall as I have had.

The few occasions that I have had to deal with these public employes, for which my taxes help pay the livelihood, I have found that you feel that you are intruding on their privacy, from the Judge down through the clerk typist, and that you are not to be given any explanation whatsoever regarding your problem.

Recently, I filed a disturbance complaint for a very loud, and constant, barking dog and this complaint was thrown out of court in a hearing that I was not notified of, and upon my inquiring from the Judge who held this hearing, I was told that he did not know why the complaint was thrown out and that he would find out and let me know.

I have called him three different times since questioning him on this matter, and each time he tells me that he will let me know later. How long can later be? It has been some three months since I filed the complaint.

I am not a dog hater, but I do feel that the welfare of citizens should be protected by the City officials if the dog owners are not concerned enough to control the barking dogs. We definitely need a law governing this type of disturbance.

Idalou Reader Questions Stand On Pay, Price Hike

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

The A-J now spices up its standard fare of unreasoning railings against public employe pay raises with a large dose of hypocrisy.

While the guys in the ivory tower editorial offices were screaming their heads off over "especially generous" teacher pay raises (7 percent), the boys down in the accounting office were busy raising the price of newspapers a "reasonable" 12 percent. Your "do as I say, not as I do" attitude should spawn utter contempt in all your readers.

No doubt you chose to raise your prices in order to maintain your profit margin. But you yell "foul" when the teachers ask the school board to maintain their purchasing power.

You are secure in your monopoly position but chastise public employes who would organize to gain fair wages. You make no mention of the little old widow on a fixed income who has to pay more if she wants to read her paper daily, but you haul her out whenever city workers ask for a raise.

It would take a thousand words to correct all the half-truths and innuendos in your editorials. Perhaps a couple of examples will suffice.

In your July 28 editorial you made a comparison of how much raise a teacher would get. In order to come up with a figure of nearly 20 percent, you glossed over the fact that you were using a two-year time span (did you hope some readers wouldn't notice and assume it was one year?), and you completely omitted the fact that you were comparing a teacher with four years experience to one with six years of experience.

You also said "teachers...get automatic pay increases for an additional year of experience." No doubt you tried to leave the impression that all teachers get such increases. The fact is that a large percentage of teachers in any given year do not get such raises.

"Hypocrisy" should have a prominent position on your masthead.

Donna Alexander, Idalou

(Editor's Note: The teacher with four years' experience two years ago is the same one with six years of experience now; you can't figure his or her pay raises over that two-year period any other way if you want to avoid hypocrisy.

(As for the increase on the price of the paper, we should point out that the price does not even pay for the paper and ink in most issues. Furthermore, many of the products used by this company have gone up more than 12 percent in the past several months.

(Also, The A-J Carriers receive approximately one-third of the increase.)

Abolishing Tenure Seen As Blow At Texas Education

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

We would like to respond to the article in Friday morning's paper on the proposed abolition of tenure which Speaker Clayton is considering and last Monday's editorial on the subject.

The abolition of tenure would place Texas Tech University, as well as other Texas universities and colleges, at a disadvantage in the recruitment of first-rate faculty.

A long-term commitment to a university provides continuity in the growth of that institution as well as an ability to concentrate on teaching and research free of administrative or political whim.

Research may demand a lifetime of concentration which short-term contracts cannot resolve.

Can you imagine hybrid sorghum developed by a Tech or A&M professor under a 10-year contract or a solar energy program for Crosbyton which functions effectively and under a five-year contract?

We regret that the discussion of tenure has been isolated as an issue from many other legitimate questions such as faculty work load, size of class enrollment, proliferation of buildings and programs, etc. which are currently being studied by the Coordinating Board.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Call Me A Taxee

ANY GRASSROOTS GROUP that rebels against the power Congress has over our lives can't be all bad. It might even work a miracle or two.

It already has. It's got Congress on its side, and if that isn't an earth-shaking accomplishment, I'll eat my November ballot.

Anything that even smacks of usurping the legislative privilege so cherished on Capitol Hill would ordinarily be squashed forthwith. But these are not ordinary times.

The average voter, fed up with taxes, inflation and government interference in his life, is learning it doesn't have to be that way; that he can, indeed, do something about it.

With things called initiatives, referendums and recalls.

THEY'RE POWERFUL weapons and nobody knows it better than the governors of the states where they've worked.

In California, where Proposition 13 slashed property taxes in half and called for a two-thirds vote in the legislature to raise other taxes.

In Tennessee, where voters passed an amendment limiting increases in state spending to the estimated growth of the state's economy.

In Oregon, where the hottest issue in the coming election is a cut in property taxes. And in Arkansas, Texas, Michigan ...

Altogether, there will be 36 initiatives on state ballots this fall that reflect the little man's anger at the way the big guys are running things. Now, after Proposition 13, he's discovered he can run a few things himself.

The big surprise is the way he's making a believer out of Congress.

THEY'RE SO nervous they're about at the stage where they'll do anything to keep him quiet. (Short of voluntarily cutting their spending ways, of course.)

They are even (maybe you'd better sit down for this) considering a constitutional amendment to give Americans a direct vote on new laws.

It may be just election-year maneuvering, but they're talking about setting up a national initiative to let voters have the final say on how the government should be run.

It would take about two-and-a-half million signatures, but with the mood the country's in these days, that wouldn't be a week's work for its backers.

They're already organizing for it. A group called "Initiative America" has set itself up to keep folks stirred up. They've even chartered buses and are criss-crossing the country, calling on voters to grab back the government before it's too late.

HOW LAW BY popular vote would work on a regular basis is something that gives a lot of thoughtful people nightmares. The mechanics of the thing are just too mind-boggling.

But it has been tried a time or two. That's how we got direct election of U.S. senators. And it was a popular vote that killed the poll tax.

Even now there's a task force of southern governors working for another constitutional amendment to set a limit on federal spending.

No doubt about it, the natives—and some of the chiefs—are restless. They're caught up in a rush for "direct democracy" and their goal is to seize any legal way to change government policy when it runs cross-wise to majority opinion.

WHAT SPOOKED them finally, of course, was government spending. That's when they decided the only way to keep government in line was to cut off the money supply. Nobel Laureate economist Milton Friedman agrees with them. Sort of.

In an analysis in the summer edition of Policy Review, he bestowed his blessing on the right of the people to limit their government's budget by deciding exactly how much they are willing to pay.

"But," he says, "having done this, it is desirable for them to delegate to their elected representatives the difficult task of dividing that budget among competing good proposals."

The "fundamental defect" in our system, Dr. Friedman thinks, is that the people never get to vote on the total budget.

"EACH VOTER FAVORS spending measures that will benefit him. And he is not too strongly opposed to one that will benefit somebody else.

"The vested interests are not some big bad people sitting on money bags; the vested interests are you and me. Consequently, when each spending measure is considered separately, there is considerable pressure to pass it.

"The total cost is never added up."

"Tax limitation laws are not cure-alls. They are temporary stopgaps...until public opinion moves in the direction of limited government."

Dr. Friedman's clincher is a quote from President Grover Cleveland: "The people should support their government; the government should not support the people."

Mediation Offer Scored

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Leaders of a leftist guerrilla group that seized Nicaragua's National Palace in a bloody raid last week and then received safe conduct to Panama said Friday that U.S. mediation in strife-torn Nicaragua would be "repelling."

Dora Maria Telles, who calls herself Commander Two of the Sandanista Libration Front unit that attacked the legislative building, told a news conference:

"We know what their intervention has been in the past. We have specific examples of United States cruel interventions in Nicaragua. It has invaded our country three times and therefore it has no moral authority to act as a mediator."

The front, she added, "denounces Carter's suggestion as an alert to a possible invasion by the United States."

President Carter has not offered to mediate the conflict in Nicaragua, where scores of persons have been killed and wounded in clashes between national guardsmen and persons involved in the week-long general strike demanding the removal of President Anastasio Somoza.

A State Department spokesman in Washington said Wednesday the Carter government was considering offering its service as a mediator, but no decision has been made.

Eight persons were killed and 15 wounded when 25 Sandinistas captured the National Palace in Managua Aug. 25 and seized 1,500 hostages. Somoza bowed to their demands, freeing 59 political prisoners and letting the prisoners and guerrillas, with a ransom payment of $500,000 fly to Panama where they were given political asylum.

Hugo Torres, calling himself Commander One of the Sandanista raiders, told the news conference that Washington "has always supported General Somoza economically, militarily, politically."

He said "about 70 American mercenaries are actually training the Nicaraguan national guard today, as instructors at the Nicaraguan School of Infantry."

Asked to be more specific about U.S. military aid to Somoza, he said, "The uniforms and arms of the national guard are U.S., Belgian, Israeli, and Spanish. There have been national guard military actions against guerrillas in the mountains where the orders were given in English. The Nicaraguan air force flies U.S. helicopters and even uses mustard gas made in the U.S."

The Carter administration has moved to end military aid to Somoza's government, altough it is continuing economic aid. In 1977, military sales credits to Nicaragua amounted to about $2.5 annually. Smaller amounts of military grants also were provided along with training for some officers of the national guard, that serves as Nicaragua's army and police force.

Carter's administration has not allowed the expenditure of $2.5 million in the budget for fiscal 1978 and did not ask Congress for any military credits or grants for 1979. It did ask for $150,000 to continue training Nicaraguan officers, but it appears Congress might reduce that amount.

Marta Isabel Cranshaw, 23 and one of eight women freed, said at the news conference that prisoners were tortured and killed.

"I was placed naked in an ice cold room for long periods of time," she said. "Later I was forced to do rigorous exercise for days at a time until I collapsed."

She said other prisoners "told me of seeing women raped 18 consecutive times by national guardsmen and young Sandinista prisoners murdered in cold blood. Some of the prisoners were then forced to drink the blood of their companions."

Commander Two was asked why 22 of the former political prisoners flew to Cuba Thursday and she replied, "They have been treated very badly in prison and are ill both physically and pschologically. They need complete rest and security." When asked if they couldn't be cared for in Panama, she said, "It is a question of numbers. It is much easier to protect a group of 22 people than one of 80."

The Sandanista front takes it name from Augusto Cesar Sandino who fought the U.S. Marine occupation of Nicaragua in the 1930s.

In 1610, the astronomer Kepler pridicted that Mars has two moons. Both miniscule. They were not discovered until 1877 by Asaph Hall at the U.S. Naval Observatory in Washington, D.C.

Area Residents' Cash Proves Tempting Target For Burglars

Cash continued to be a tempting target for the burglars across the city and county, according to recent reports.

Ronnie L. Dulin, a salesman with L.B. Foster Co. Inc. at 2834 Clovis Road, told police that someone entered the firm through an unlocked door and took $170 cash, a $42 check and a $20 calculator.

Raul Flores said he and his wife were asleep early Friday when a burglar entered their 914 E. 35th St. home through the bedroom window.

Flores said the man went through the couple's dresser and took $160 cash stored there. The burglar, described as a black male wearing a white cap, white shirt and dark colored pants, then headed for the children's bedroom, Flores said.

At that point, Flores told police, his wife shouted "What do you want?" and the intruder ran out the front door of the residence and headed west on 35th Street.

Tony Turzer told sheriff's deputies that whoever pried the padlock off the front door of D.C. Wrecking along Clovis Road took about $90 cash, a CB radio and a .22-caliber pistol.

Turzer said $40 was taken from a filing cabinet in a back office and the remainder of the money was stolen from a soft-drink machine which was opened with a key that also had been stored in the cabinet.

Reports indicate the burglar also tried to pry a safe in the back office and deputies recovered a hammer that had been used in the attempt.

Jerry McDade, 24, of 410 Idalou Road said he was walking to his car in front of a club at 13th Street and Avenue F about 10 p.m. Thursday when a man walked up and asked if he had a cigarette. When McDade said he did not, the suspect pulled a long knife and stabbed McDade once in the stomach, according to reports.

The victim was taken to West Texas Hospital where he was treated and released. He described his attacker as a short, fat Mexican-American, wearing a white shirt and blue pants.

In one of several reported burglaries, Mark Burden Sampson of 1921 Ave. N said someone broke into his home between 8 p.m. and 11 p.m. Thursday and stole $1,150 in property, including stereo equipment and a television.

Paul Price Daniel told police his 5435 45th St. residence was burglarized between 12:45 p.m. and 3:25 p.m. Thursday. He reported missing $140 in cash and $530 in stereo equipment.

A burglar or burglars reportedly struck at Elodia Camacho's home at 528 42nd St., and made off with a television set and $25 in change. The woman said she left her home Thursday morning and returned about 3 p.m. to discover the break-in.

Donnie Lee Morris of 2317 Auburn St., Apt. 50, said his trailer was broken into sometime between Monday and Wednesday and a 12-gauge shotgun and $40 in change taken.

Sheriff deputies this morning were looking for a $329 concrete mixer and for the culprit who took it from Jessie Norman Wheeler's Slaton residence. Wheeler said the mixer was behind a fence in his yard and was apparently stolen sometime between Monday and Thursday.

Disgruntled Women Rap Rhythms On Disc Jockey

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Three women apparently didn't like the musical beats being played Friday on a local radio station, so they decided to do some beating themselves — on the disc jockey.

Michael Ray Corbin, 24-year-old disc jockey for KLLL Radio, said the women — described as being husky — came to the station at 1314 50th St. about 3:15 a.m.

The radio announcer said that when he opened the door to see what the visitors wanted, all three pulled him out of the building, started beating on him and yelling, "We have been trying to call for an hour to request a song."

As the distraught disc jockey was having his shirt ripped off and beer poured on his head by two of the women, the third suspect picked up a large potted plant and threw it at him, police were told.

The plant thrower missed her target.

Corbin said that as the women were leaving, one of the suspects threw a rock through the windshield of his 1974 Lincoln.

One of the suspects did finally get a phone call through to the radio station. Police say Corbin was giving police his account of what happened when one of his female attackers made a threatening phone call to him.

Two of the women were described as being in their early 20s with brown hair. The third suspect was in her 30s or 40s with black hair. All three were reportedly muscular.

Term Given Slaton Man In Rape Charge

A Slaton man Friday received a seven-year prison sentence after pleading guilty to aggravated rape.

Pleading guilty to the offense before 140th Dist. Judge William R. Shaver was Deary Wayne Darty, 18.

Darty was assessed the term as the result of a plea bargaining agreement with the Criminal District Attorney's office.

Darty had been accused of raping a 16-year-old Slaton girl at knife-point May 8.

According to stipulated testimony from the victim, she was attacked inside her home by a man wearing a purple sheet over his head and white socks on his arms. The testimony indicated that the man threatened her with the knife.

Darty admitted from the witness stand that he raped the complainant, using the knife to force her to submit.

Clovis Man Charged In Death Of Wife

A-J Correspondent

CLOVIS — Allye M. Steele, 58, of Clovis died about 3 a.m. Friday in Cannon AFB Hospital from injuries received when her husband reportedly ran over her twice with their family car.

James L. Steele, 53, is being held in the county jail here on charges of homicide with a motor vehicle and driving while intoxicated.

According to police reports the incident occurred about 1:13 a.m. Friday when Steele drove the vehicle into the front of the Steele home.

Mrs. Steele apparently came out of the house to stop her husband when the driver backed over his wife. Steele then drove forward, running over her body a second time, before driving into the front of the house and bringing the car to a stop in the living and dining areas of the home.

Krueger, Hill Endorsed By Civil Rights Lawyer

AUSTIN (AP) — Civil rights attorney Ruben Sandoval attacked Sen. John Tower's Spanish campaign billboards Friday as offensive throwbacks to antiquated ethnic political pitches.

The Republican senator's campaign has posted billboards around the state proclaiming Tower is "con nosostros," which translates "with us."

"I feel it's offensive, the appeal to ethnicity in billboards with 'con nosostros' when the record speaks otherwise," said Sandoval, who has represented families of three Mexican-Americans killed in law enforcement officers' custody.

Sandoval also endorsed Attorney General John Hill for governor.

"Both (Tower and Krueger) are friends to me," the San Antonio attorney said. "But we have decided in looking at the record that we feel Congressman Krueger will most likely serve our needs in areas which we are involved — mostly civil rights."

Tower's votes against the Voting Rights Act and the Civil Rights Act are fact, said Sandoval.

"In voting no, against that, we fail to see how he can be 'con nosostros,' " he said. "I know of Congressman Krueger's involvement. He's been with us and is with us now."

Some of Tower's campaign aides listened to Sandoval's remarks at the back of the news conference room.

"I'm also concerned that the (Republican) party bandleader, or whatever you want to call him, Mr. (Bill) Clements made the statement that under no circumstances would he support establishment of a Civil Rights Commission," Sandoval added. Clements is opposing Hill for governor.

Clements' comment that he is not running for governor of Mexico typifies some politicians' insensitivity to minorities, Sandoval added.

Although he was not speaking for the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC), the GI Forum or the Mexican-American Legislative Caucus, Sandoval said he was speaking for individual members of those groups.

In other comments, Sandoval said that Benjamin Civiletti of the U.S. Justice Department will announce a package of new policies for handling civil rights cases after Labor Day.

The policies will include establishment of civil rights units within each U.S. attorney's office; affirmation of a justice department pledge to investigate and prosecute civil rights violations; and creation of federal police-community relations units.

Students Nationwide Affected By Strikes

By The Associated Press

Thousands of students found their teachers on strike Friday as the school year opened with threats of even more strikes to come.

Already there were more than 150,000 students affected by teacher strikes, with hundreds of thousands more likely to find classrooms without teachers next week.

The biggest walkout was in New Orleans, where police patrolled the city's 140 public schools to prevent harassment of those willing to work. Teachers, bus drivers and other school employees picketed outside.

The three-day-old strike which affects 91,000 students centers on wage demands, the issue in most of the strikes that marked the opening of the school year. Teachers want an 8 percent raise. The school board offered 4 percent.

Teachers also struck in Washington state, Idaho, Michigan, Rhode Island, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

But the biggest strike of the new school year appeared to lie ahead as Philadelphia teachers set up picket lines outside the school district's headquarters. Although classes are not due to start until next week in the nation's fourth largest city, contract talks with the union representing 21,000 teachers broke off early in the day with no new negotiations slated. The strike would affect 250,000 students.

There were no negotiations under way in New Orleans either as officials tried to keep classes going with substitutes and teachers who crossed picket lines.

With bus drivers joining the strike there, about 14,000 of the pupils were without transportation.

Some of the early school strikes were settled quickly. Teachers in Edwardsville, Ill., accepted a new contract and the schools opened Friday morning. Teachers in Bellevue, Wash., also decided to accept a school board offer and classes will start next week. Settlements were also announced in Washington Township and Avon, both in Indiana.

Police in Marion, Ind., arrested nine pickets who refused to move from in front of city school buses Friday morning. Officials said they were not immediately sure whether those arrested were striking teachers.

Schools were closed at Waterloo and Collinsville, in Illinois, as strikes by teachers and service personnel continue there.

In Cleveland, teachers have voted not to work when classes start next week. Negotiators in Seattle say they cannot recommend that teachers work unless a settlement is reached.

Also in Washington state, a strike still threatens in Lake Washington, and Tacoma school officials decided to keep schools closed until a new contract is reached.

Teachers in Richmond, Ind., were still on strike, with classes suspended at least through Labor Day.

Grocery Survey Shows Overall Price Drop

By The Associated Press

Americans planning to celebrate Labor Day with a barebecue will find some good news at the supermarket: lower prices for hot dogs.

An Associated Press marketbasket survey shows the decline in the cost of frankfurters is part of an overall drop in grocery prices since the start of August.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. One item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list at the end of November 1977 because the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

Among the results of the latest survey:

— The marketbasket total increased at the checklist store in five cities during August and decreased in eight cities. The average boost was 1.9 percent; the average drop was 3.1 percent. On an overall basis, the marketbasket bill at the 13 checklist stores dropped 1.2 percent during August. In contrast, during July, the bill increased half a percent.

— During the first eight months of this year, the marketbasket bill at the checklist stores has increased an average of 5.1 percent. Last year, when coffee prices were soaring, the marketbasket bill increased 9 percent in the same period.

— The price of a pound of all-beef frankfurters declined at the checklist store in eight cities, with decreases from 3 to 24 percent. The drops reflect lower prices being paid for livestock.

— Coffee prices continue to drop despite a recent frost in Brazil which caused some damage to the crop that would have been harvested next year. The price of a pound of coffee decreased during August at the checklist store in 10 cities. The average price of a pound of coffee at the start of September was $2.80, compared to $2.99 a month earlier and $3.48 at the start of the year.

In some cities, shoppers are benefitting from special sales as well as general price declines. In Providence, R.I., for example, the regular price of coffee at the checklist store declined from $3.05 a pound at the start of August to $2.95 a pound today. Shoppers taking advantage of a pre-Labor Day sale at the store could buy coffee for $2.19 a pound.

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents.

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes were used when available. If the requested size and brand was not available on March 1, 1973, a comparable substitute was selected. Items temporarily out of stock on one of the survey dates being compared were not included in the over-all total.

The AP did not attempt to compare actual prices from city to city, to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease, saying a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

The USDA marketbasket issued each month is based on a complex set of statistics. It includes 65 retail items of U.S. farm-produced foods in amounts that theoretically could supply a household of 3.2 persons for one year. The department, which draws on information from 1,500 supermarkets in compiling its report, says the figures do not correspond to actual family food spending and are used mainly to illustrate changes in costs.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Ga., Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Pope Gives Reporters Views On Journalism

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul I, a frequent newspaper contributor who once wanted to be a journalist, implored reporters in a special audience Friday to "focus on the heart and substance of our ministry and not the incidental details."

His eyes twinkling behind steel-rimmed glasses, the new pope said he read with some amusement the speculation on papal candidates in news reports preceding his surprise election by the College of Cardinals last Saturday.

He likened the journalistic speculators to the Italian editor who covered the Franco-Prussian war "not by concentrating on the important discussions between Napoleon III and the King of Prussia but by dwelling on the brand of cigarettes they smoked and whether they wore red or gray socks."

More than 1,000 reporters, photographers and television crews from around the world thronged the golden-vaulted Hall of the Benedictions in the Apostolic Palace of the Vatican.

They heard the pontiff suddenly depart from his prepared text to lecture them gently on the basics of journalism from the point of view of a man who once said if he hadn't become a priest, he would have become a journalist.

Acknowledging the power of television, John Paul I indicated that as far as mass communications are concerned he will be a thoroughly modern pope in reaching his worldwide flock of 700 million Roman Catholics.

He drew a laugh by topping Cardinal Desire Mercier's remark to a French reporter early this century that if the Apostle Paul were alive he would have become a journalist.

"Better yet," the pope ad-libbed, "he would not only be a journalist, he would be a director of Reuters. And not only a director of Reuters, but St. Paul would go to Paolo Grassi (director of Italian Television) and ask for a bit of air time on television."

In his prepared text, the pope said he was "well aware of the importance of the media and the importance it has taken in the lives of people today."

He urged journalists to do their job "with a love for truth and for human dignity" so the media can realize its "great possibilities" in working for peace and to "help create a world that is more just and humane."

Albino Luciani, meeting reporters for the first time as pope, has himself become in less than a week Italy's best-selling author.

His "Illustrissimi" — imaginary letters written to Charles Dickens, Pinocchio, Mark Twain and other historical and fictional characters while he was a cardinal — is the hottest book in town.

"They go as quickly as we get them," said the director of Libraria Leonie, the only bookstore in Rome with a fresh supply. Several publishers were reportedly vying for the American rights.

Seeing the new pope in action at close range, the journalists were warmed by his ready smile and teasing wit. They were also impressed with how fast he was on his feet, almost quick-stepping up the long marble chamber to the gold-and-white throne, and how rapidly he spoke in Italian in a firm and somewhat high-pitched voice.

The pope promised reporters full cooperation from the Pontifical Commission for Social Communications, better known as the Vatican press office.

PAPAL BEST-SELLER — A book called "Illustrissimi," "Most Illustrious Men," appears in the window of a Rome book seller Thursday. The volume of satirical letters by Albino Cardinal Luciani became an instant best-seller when he was elevated to become Pope John Paul I. (AP Laserphoto)

Lubbock's Food Costs Continue To Decrease

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock shoppers will see a continued drop in grocery price totals this month thanks to significant decreases in the prices of coffee, round steak and potatoes, an Avalanche-Journal marketbasket survey indicates.

Though a few items took an upward swing, the total for 16 standard grocery items dropped 47 cents this month when compared to August prices in a local supermarket.

The largest price decrease of 41 cents was seen in a pound of regular grind coffee, which now sells for $2.98. Coffee hasn't sold for such a low price since February 1977.

A decrease of 30 cents is seen in a 10-pound bag of potatoes, priced for the past two months at $1.69 and now selling for $1.39. Potatoes last sold for the lower price in June.

A pound of round steak sells for $1.59 this month, which is 10 cents less than August's per pound cost. But the same cut of meat sold for a low 98 cents per pound last September.

Fryer chicken is selling for 59 cents a pound this month, down from last month's 65 cents-a-pound price.

A pound of hickory-smoked bacon jumped 16 cents this month to $1.79, registering as the largest increase among the 16 items surveyed. A pound of all-beef wieners ran a close second, increasing 14 cents from $1.69 to $1.83 which means consumers are now paying more per pound for wieners than round steak.

A gallon of homogenized milk sells for $2.12 this month — an increase of four cents from August's $2.08.

A dozen medium eggs increased slightly, selling for two cents more than last month. The eggs now sell for 69 cents a dozen.

Though temporarily off the shelf due to fluctuations in crops, a small can of whole green beans will increase from 44 cents to 46 cents when they return to the shelf, according to a grocery manager.

The last increase is seen in a 12-ounce jar of creamy peanut butter, increasing from last month's 82 cents to 84 cents.

All other items remained stable.

A large loaf of bread still costs 65 cents and a pound of stick margarine is still priced at 81 cents.

Five pounds of sugar is $1.23 and a five-pound bag of flour is priced at 95 cents.

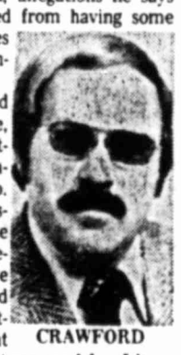
Soviets To Try U.S. Executive For Manipulation Of Currency

MOSCOW (AP) — American businessman Francis J. Crawford will be tried Tuesday on charges of "large-scale" currency manipulation, allegations he says apparently stemmed from having some suits and draperies altered by a seamstress.



CRAWFORD

The 37-year-old Mobile, Ala., native, a Moscow representative of the International Harvester Co. of Chicago, disclosed the trial date in a meeting with reporters Friday. He said he would plead innocent and repeated his assertion that "the charges against me are false. I have broken no law in the Soviet Union."

The seamstress, her husband and a cashier in a "Beriozka," a tourist store that deals in foreign currency, are on trial with him. If convicted, Crawford, the seamstress and cashier face possible eight-year prison terms, and the seamstress' husband could receive the death penalty, an attorney said.

Crawford, speaking in his company's Moscow office, said he was served a summons Friday and a copy of an indictment charging him with "violation of rules on currency transactions."

He said he is accused of buying 20,000 rubles on the black market with $8,500, almost four times the official exchange rate, and of buying six samovars, considered an item of antiquity not to be removed from the Soviet Union.

Crawford said that instead of paying money for the work on the suits and draperies, he gave small gifts to the seamstress, Ludmila Kiselev, and her husband, Vladimir.

Crawford's American legal adviser, Peter Maggs, said the cashier, Alla Solovyova, is accused of supplying items to the Kiselevs for sale on the black market, and that there is no apparent connection between the cashier and Crawford.

Crawford said "everything centers around" the seamstress and her husband, but he said he hardly knew them and visited only occasionally to have tailoring work done. He said the charges were based on a period between February and May 1978 and that he visited the couple only once during that time.

"We had an acquaintance, not a relationship," Crawford said. "I merely had contacted them to make alterations to the draperies.... I had one or two suits altered, and one or two other alterations," he said.

Maggs, hired by International Harvester to assist Crawford, said his review of the case showed manipulation charges against Vladimir Kiselev could total "more than $50,000 and maybe more than $100,000." He added that because Kiselev has been convicted of a similar charge and served 3½ years of a 5-year sentence, he might face the death penalty if convicted this time.

But Maggs, an expert on Soviet law from the University of Illinois, said, "I don't see anything in the evidence that would make me think he (Crawford) was guilty of anything."

Crawford was dragged from his car by Soviet police June 13 in a manner that drew a formal protest from the U.S. Embassy. He was held 15 days in Lefortovo Prison until he was freed on the recognizance of the American ambassador. That agreement was pegged to the similar freeing of two Soviets accused of espionage in the United States.

The Soviets, employees of the United Nations, are scheduled to go on trial in Newark, N.J. on Sept. 12. Many Western observers here believe the Soviets arrested Crawford to reciprocate for the espionage case.

Since Crawford's release, he has been summoned to the prison repeatedly for interrogation.

Maggs said he has been permitted to review eight volumes of case testimony, but will not be allowed to take part in the trial, as Crawford sought. The American defendant will be represented in court by his appointed Soviet lawyer, Leonid M. Popov. Crawford said he is satisfied with Popov.

Maggs said the Soviets "indicated" to him the trial would be open but it was not clear whether Western reporters would be allowed into the courtroom.

Former Airlines Aircraft Missing

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — The former flagship of Trans Regional Airlines, a twin-engine Navajo Chiefton, was reported missing Tuesday night by R.E. McClure, manager of the former airlines.

The aircraft also was taken in September, but was recovered two months later in Mississippi. The plane had sustained $70,000 worth of damages which were repaired in Lubbock.

McClure flew the plane from Lubbock to Meacham Air in Fort Worth to sell on Monday. The sale was incomplete however, when the plane was reported missing early Tuesday by airport officials.

The General Assembly of the United Nations meets in regular annual sessions when necessary. Special sessions are convoked by the secretary general at the request of the Security Council or of a majority of members of the U.N. A president and 17 vice presidents are chosen at each regular session.

Liquor Balloting Under Way

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — Absentee voting in the upcoming Childress county liquor election is under way, according to Charles Mock, who said the voting is extremely light. Final day to cast absentee ballots is Tuesday.

The special election is in Justice of the Peace Pct. 5 which includes the community of Tell. The election was called after county commissioners were handed a petition signed by 13 legal voters of the precinct. The number necessary to validate the petition was 11.55 voters, Mock noted.

A similar election was called about a year ago. Total votes were 34 against the sale of alcoholic beverages in the precinct, while 33 voters favored it.

This year's balloting is set for Sept. 9 with one voting poll, at the Tell Cotton Gin. Polls open at 7 a.m. and close at 7 p.m.

Cowboy Inductees Wanted

A-J Correspondent

HOBBS, N.M. — Charter members of the Lea County Cowboy Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center have until 5 p.m. Sept. 15, to nominate the original inductees for the Hall of Fame, according to Sylvia Benge, secretary of the organization.

Nominations must consist of a resume or biographical sketch of the person nominated. The resume should include pertinent facts about his or her life and the reason for believing the person nominated should be honored. If the candidate nominated is living, he or she must agree to accept the honor of induction if elected.

The nominee for the Hall of Fame must be at least 21 years old and be, or have been, a legal resident of Lea County who has distinguished himself in rodeo, as a ranch cowhand, or as a pioneer or present-day woman on a ranch whose role has been vital in developing or furthering the way of life in Lea County.

Those elected will be inducted at the first annual induction dinner Nov. 18 at the New Mexico Junior College Student Center.

The Hall of Fame is to be located on the NMJC campus.

Rural Rent House Loan Okayed

A-J Correspondent

CROSBYTON — Congressman Omar Burleson has announced the approval of a $109,510 Farmers Home Administration loan to the Crosbyton Rural Development Corporation to provide rural rental housing for Crosbyton.

The project will consist of four two-bedroom duplexes and two three-bedroom apartments to be constructed next to the existing duplexes in south Crosbyton.

Abernathy Traffic To Be Rerouted

ABERNATHY (Special) — The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation announced that on Tuesday, the traffic on the main lanes of U.S. 87 through Abernathy will be moved to the frontage roads.

Southbound traffic will be removed from the present main lane north of Abernathy and will remain on the newly completed frontage road until it reaches New Deal where it will be returned to the present main lane. Northbound traffic will be removed from the present main lane at the south edge of Abernathy and will remain on the frontage road until it is returned to the present main lane north of Abernathy.

Wellman Trustees To Meet

WELLMAN (Special) — The Wellman Independent School District Board of Trustees will meet at 9 p.m. Monday in the board room to discuss personnel changes.

Also on the agenda are the review and payment of bills, reports from the school superintendent and selection of a delegate to the Texas Association of School Boards convention.

Bids Taken For Post Office

ANTON (Special) — The U.S. Postal Service is asking for construction bids to build and lease a new post office building at Anton, Postmaster Sammie Norman said here.

Bids are to be submitted to Richard L. Heiligman, realty management and acquisition specialist, Field Real Estate and Buildings Office, U.S. Postal Service, P.O. Drawer 239, Dallas TX 75221.

Bids will be opened at 2 p.m. Sept. 28, in Room 523, Post Office Building, Bryan and Ervay streets, in Dallas.

The proposed building will have 1,905 sq. ft. of interior floor space. It will be built with private funds and leased to the Postal Service for a basic period of 10 years with renewal options for 20 additinal years.

The Postal Service has acquired an option to buy a site for the new post office which will be assitned to the successful bidder.

The site containing 17,500 sq. ft. of land is located on Lawrence St. between West 4th St. and Space Circle.

Historical Book On Sale

A-J Correspondent

LOCKNEY — A concentrated book sales drive with personal contact will begin soon for members of the Floyd County historical book committee.

Books are selling for $24.50 plus tax for a limited time. The next phase of the book project will require that the book price be much higher. Only the number of books sold will be ordered from the publishers.

Books may be ordered from Mrs. Joe Taylor in Lockney or from the Floyd County Historical Museum in Floydada.

In a recent meeting with the publisher's representative, the book committee decided that because of the high number (more than 1,100) of histories submitted, only one picture per family will be used with each history. Families desiring to pay for the use of several other pictures may contact the museum for further information.

Homecoming Activities Set

O'DONNELL (Special) — Daylong activities will highlight O'Donnell's annual Homecoming, set for Sept. 15.

The Ex-Students Association, which is sponsoring the events, announced that a parade through town will be at 1:30 p.m., followed by a pep rally in the O'Donnell High School gym at 2:30.

A banquet will be at 6 and the football game against Klondike High School is set for 8 p.m.

The Ex-Students Association will host a reception in the school cafeteria following the game. Two coffees will be given at private homes for students in the honor classes of 1928 and 1953.

Additional information may be obtained by calling 428-3809.

Hobbs Plans Safety Program

A-J Correspondent

HOBBS, N.M. — The Hobbs Police Department and the Hobbs Parent-Teachers Association City Council are planning to renew the "Helping Hands" student safety program Sept. 12.

New participants in the program are being sought. The program consists of selected city residents displaying flourescent red and white placards in their windows.

According to Capt. Bob Barbaree of the Hobbs Police Department, children who are either going to, or coming home from school, and who need adult assistance in case of emergencies or intimidation can stop at any residence displaying the symbol.

DENVER RAISES

DENVER (AP) — Twenty-six top Denver city officials may get raises of up to 28 percent next year under recommendations made by the city's Career Service Authority. The raises go into effect unless rejected by the city council. The personnel office's recommended raise for the city's manager of health and hospitals would make him the highest-paid public official in Colorado. Dr. Abraham Kauvar's annual salary would jump to $70,006 a year, up 6.4 percent from the $65,795 he now makes.

House Panel Wants Tire Recall

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel joined a federal safety agency in recommending Friday the recall of Firestone 500 Steel-Belted Radial tires, but company officials steadfastly maintained the tires are safe.

The oversight and investigations subcommittee of the House Commerce Committee issued a report concluding the tires pose an unreasonable risk of death and injury.

On July 7, the National Highway Traffic Administration had questioned the safety of the tires. It recommended a recall after analyzing 6,000 consumer complaints alleging "more than 14,000 individual tire failures, 29 deaths, more than 50 injuries and hundreds of property-damage accidents."

The House panel called on Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. to recall immediately some 13 million steel-belted radials still on the road.

If Firestone fails to issue the recall order voluntarily, it should be forced to do so, the subcommittee said. Its study contended the tires "frequently fail on the road even with the most careful tire maintenance."

Meanwhile, a Firestone spokesman insisted the report's conclusion a safety hazard exists is unjustified.

However, the spokesman, Robert Troyer, declined to make a detailed rebuttal, saying the company was awaiting a copy of the report at its office in Akron, Ohio.

"To the best of our knowledge, there have not been any proven cases where accidents injuries or deaths have been caused by a defect in the tire itself," Troyer said.

For its part, the highway safety agency remained undecided Friday on whether to order a full-scale recall. Joan Claybrook, the agency's administrator, said Thursday that a decision was expected within two weeks. The agency received complaints of blowouts, tread separation, blisters, bubbles, splits and cracks.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader has complained that government delay in ordering the recall is saving Firestone $1.25 million weekly because the number of Firestone 500s in use has declined since the agency investigation began in February.

Troyer said Firestone tire sales have decreased by two-tenths of 1 percent since the adverse publicity about the steel-belted radials began. The panel's study said that motorists have returned one of every six Firestone 500s because of tire failure.

Bagel Man, Brokerage Settle On Stock Order

MELVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — A Long Island bagel maker has won a $2,400 settlement with a major brokerage firm after handcuffing himself to the door of the firm's local office to protest a stock order that was never filled.

But while bagel man Jerry Steuerman, of Seaford, has reached a settlement of his claim against Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, the firm has not dropped trespassing charges against him.

"He wasn't acting the way a customer should," said William Clark, a Merrill Lynch spokesman. "He was disrupting the flow of business."

The trouble began last week when Steuerman ordered his Merrill Lynch broker to buy gambling industry stocks. The stocks went up, but to Steuerman's dismay he learned the broker had failed to execute the order.

Merrill Lynch offered him $2,000 by way of making up his loss. But Steuerman's estimate of the loss was $2,800, and he refused the firm's offer.

On Monday, Steuerman handcuffed himself to the door inside Merrill Lynch's office and spread $13,000 in bills on the floor, apparently to symbolize what his beef was all about.

Steuerman was arrested on the trespass charges and is due to answer the complaint Oct. 2 in District Court in Hauppauge. Despite the public attitude of Merrill Lynch, Steuerman thinks the firm will work with him to get the charge dismissed.

Meanwhile, Merrill Lynch upped its offer to $2,400 on condition that Steuerman take his business elsewhere in the future. Steuerman accepted, picking up his check in the firm's Manhattan office Thursday.

"The situation has been resolved amicably and, we think, quite fairly to Mr. Steuerman," said Clark.

Meanwhile, Steuerman found himself a new broker, purchasing the stocks he originally ordered from Merrill Lynch at an E. F. Hutton office.

"They welcomed me in with open arms," he said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We are in our early 40s and in the 32 percent federal income tax bracket. Our home is mortgage-free. We own $15,000 of Series E, U.S. Savings Bonds as well as $25,000 of savings certificates which are about to reach maturity. I want to invest the $25,000 in municipal bonds, to get tax-free interest. My husband wants to put the $25,000 in 8 percent savings certificates.

He doesn't believe that the interest received from municipal bonds is tax free. He says, "There is nothing free in this country." How can I convince him?

A. Let's try a little history lesson on hard-rock husband. The principle of tax-free interest in municipal bonds goes back to the early years of this republic — to the case of M'Culluch vs. Maryland — which was decided by the U.S. Supreme Court. Chief Justice John Marshall presided. Daniel Webster was attorney for the plaintiff.

It was during that trial that old Dan'l spoke his often-quoted words, "The power to tax is the power to destroy." Yes, he did sound like an early advocate of Proposition 13.

The court's decision was that states cannot tax interest paid on bonds issued by the federal government and that the federal government cannot tax interest on bonds issued by states and political subdivisions of states — municipal bonds.

This principle has been upheld, over the years, by all kinds of court decisions and legislation. If your husband doesn't believe you or me, tell him to phone the Internal Revenue Service. He'll get the same answer.

From the information in your letter, there's no doubt that the tax-free interest from municipal bonds would provide you with more real income than 8 percent taxable interest on savings certificates.

Q. Among the stocks I own is one listed on the American Stock Exchange — 50 shares now worth about $2 each. Considering today's brokerage fees, what do you suggest I do?

A. You might as well hang on and hope. Most brokers now charge a minimum commission of $25 for handling the sale of even the smallest amount of individual stock.

Casino Stock Margin Policies Tightened

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York and American stock exchanges, acting after a week of extreme price swings and heavy trading volume in gambling industry stocks, tightened their margin requirements Friday for many casino issues.

The exchanges raised from 50 to 75 percent the down payment that must be made in order to purchase the issues on credit. On Thursday, the bokerage house of A.G. Becker barred credit purchases of several issues, and rumors of a similar NYSE move sent gambling industry issues sharply lower toward Friday's market close.

Shortly after the close, both exchanges announced their new margin policies, the NYSE's effective until Sept. 18 and the Amex's effective indefinitely.

The NYSE said it acted "to assure the protection" of investors; the Amex cited "recent volatile price movements" as the reason for its move.

Brokerage houses worry about selling very volatile stocks to credit buyers because of the effects of a precipitous price drop. A sharp price decline could leave the buyer unable to raise enough funds to pay his margin debt.

The gaming issues this week were consistently among actively-traded issues and were subject to extreme price swings. Slot machine maker Bally closed ahead $9.75 Wednesday; on Thursday it closed off $6.50. Caesars World fell $9.50 Friday.

These are the issues placed under the more-stringent credit policy:

At the NYSE, Bally common; Caesars World common; Harrah's common; Harrah's 7½ percent convertible subordinated debentures; Playboy Enterprises; Ramada Inns common; Ramada Inns 8 percent convertible subordinated debentures due 1995, 5 percent convertible subordinated debentures due 1996 and 10 percent convertible subordinated debentures due 2000; Del E. Webb common.

At the Amex, CDI common, Golden Nugget common; Nortek common; Prime Motor Inns common; Resorts International class A common; Showboat common.

St. John's Announces Program

St. John's United Methodist Church, 1501 University Avenue, has announced a University of Life program for its congregation members this year.

The University of Life is a concept which gives year-round education opportunities in group study sessions to the entire congregation. Members choose areas of interest and learn together for one to eight sessions, which include opportunities in Bible study, theology, crisis counseling, Parent Effectiveness Training, Hebrew, Latin and Greek languages, the lay academy, little churches and others. The courses are planned to complement the regular Sunday School classes and youth activities of St. John's United Methodist Church.

A Christian Growth Group for women of the church will meet each Monday at 1 p.m. in Rev. Ted Dotts' office.

A Parent Effectiveness Training class (PET) will be held 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. each Monday Sept. 11-Oct. 30. The class will meet in the Aldersgate Classroom.

Archaeology and the Bible will be held at 7 p.m. Sept. 17 and Sept. 24 in the church's Garden Room.

Beginning Hebrew will be taught for eight weeks beginning Sept. 23 at the Wesley Foundation, 2420 15th St. The class will meet 10 a.m.-noon on Saturdays.

Little churches classes will meet in homes on five Sunday evenings in October, and on five Sunday evenings in April, 1979. Meetings will begin at 7 p.m. and end at 9 p.m.

The history and theology will be taught by Rev. Dotts during the Sunday School hour on the five Sunday mornings in October and five Sunday mornings in April, 1979. Sessions will study history of the Christian church, history of Methodism, theological guidelines, theology of the sacraments, and polity.

A Christmas perspectives is planned at 7 p.m. Nov. 26 and Dec. 3 in the church's Garden Room.

A tour of Israel and London leaves Lubbock on Dec. 26, with seven days in Israel visiting all the sites related to the life of Jesus and the beginnings of Christianity and a stop in London.

Rev. Dotts will lead a Growth in Meditation and Action class for eight one-hour sessions Sunday mornings in January and February.

Dr. Mainelle Cole will teach the beginning Latin class from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday in January and February in the church's Conference Room.

A Lay Academy class will meet on five Sunday evenings in January and February.

Rev. Dotts will teach a Christian Ethics class on four Sunday mornings in March.

A beginning Greek class will be held 10 a.m. to noon Saturdays at the Wesley Foundation, starting Feb. 24.

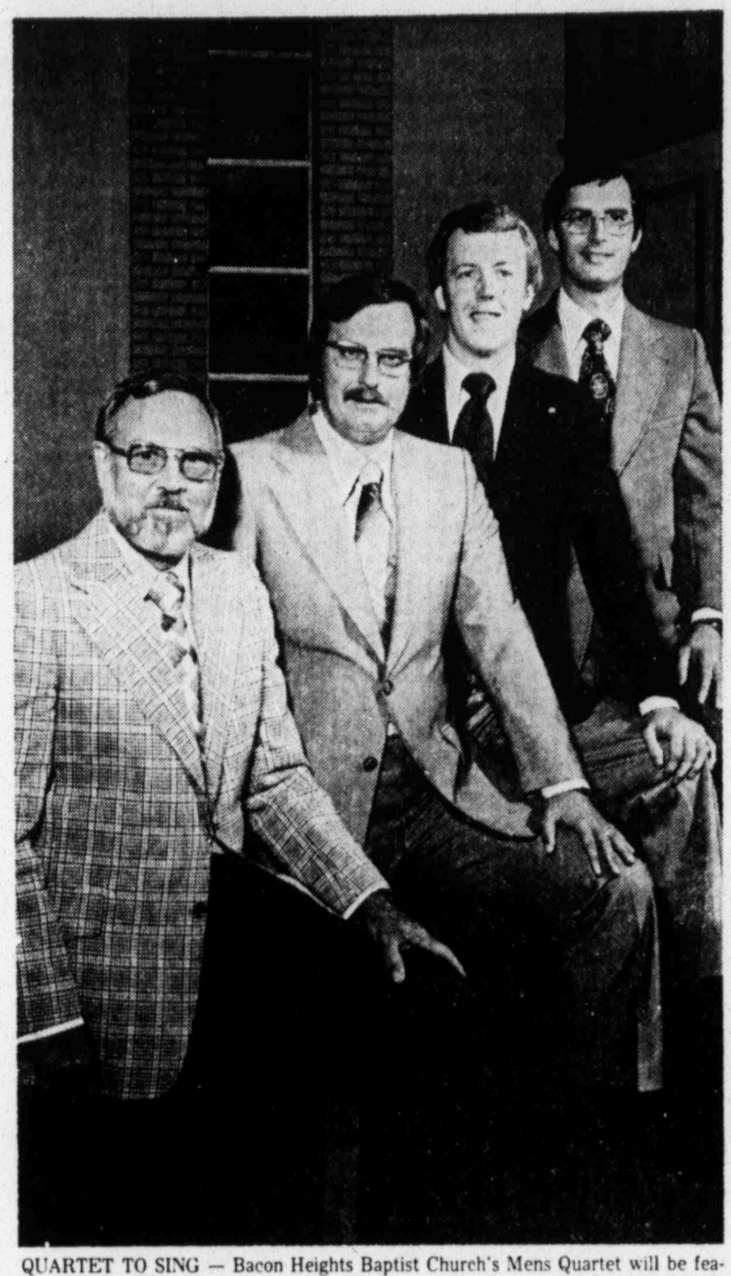
An introduction to the Gospels class will be held at 7 p.m. on Sunday evenings in March in the church's Garden Room.

A Confirmation Class for Junior High Youth will be held on Sunday mornings in March and April.

A crisis counseling class will meet 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Tuesdays in April and May.

A Bible course will be taught on Sunday mornings in July.

Further information about the University of Life may be obtained by calling the church office at 762-0123.



QUARTET TO SING — Bacon Heights Baptist Church's Mens Quartet will be featured during the 6 p.m. worship service Sunday at Davis Park, 42nd Street and Nashville Avenue. The day's activities will begin at 3 p.m. with games, followed by a covered dish meal at 5 p.m. The quartet consists of Lonnie Rowlett, Jack Hudson, Randy Roberts and Larry Wickham. The Rev. H.F. Scott is pastor of the church.

UMC To Sponsor Seminar Sept. 23

The Council on Children's Ministries of the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church is sponsoring a seminar by Dr. Dorothy Jean Furnish Sept. 23 in the First United Methodist Church of Lubbock.

The event will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sept. 23.

Dr. Furnish will lead a seminar on "Teaching the Bible," which will be directed toward Biblical instruction for teachers and workers with children in local United Methodist churches of the conference.

The seminar leader is professor of Christian education at Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary. She came to the seminary in 1965 as director of field education in religious education and became an instructor in religious education and director of the Religious Education Curriculum Laboratory in 1968.

From 1965 to 1968, she was a doctoral candidate at Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary and Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill. She received her doctoral degree in religion in 1968 from Northwestern University, with her major field of work in religious education at the seminary.

Before coming to the seminary, she was director of Christian education at the First United Methodist Church in Lincoln, Neb., 1952-65 and assistant professor of religious education at Nebraska Wesleyan University at Lincoln 1952-57. She was director of Christian education at Trinity United Methodist Church in Hutchinson, Kan., 1945-52.

The seminar leader serves on the Curriculum Resources Committee of the Board of Discipleship of the United Methodist Church and is chairman of its long range planning commitee. She is a member of the Religious Education Association; the Northern Illinois Conference Methodist Directors' Fellowship; the United Methodist Association of Professors of Christian Education; the Association of Professors and Researchers in Religious Education; and the Christian Educators Fellowship.

Dr. Furnish also is a Fellow of the American Association of Theological Schools Case-Study Institute.

The Illinois resident has contributed to Christian education publications of the United Methodist Church and has pioneered in the development of materials for church learning centers. She is the author of two books, "Exploring the Bible With Children," and "DRE/DCE: History of A Profession." She is a contributor to "Parish Religious Education," published this year.

Further information about the seminar's registration fee, childcare and meals may be obtained by calling the Northwest Texas Conference office at 762-0201.

Sarah Weddington To Speak At Church Meeting In City

The daughter of a Lubbock couple, Dr. Sarah Ragle Weddington, newly appointed adviser to the White House on women's issues, will be discussing life and work in Washington, D.C., at 7 p.m. Sunday in the Garden Room of St. John's United Methodist Church, 15th Street and University Avenue.

The public is invited to attend the informal meeting.

DR. SARAH WEDDINGTON

The daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. Doyle Ragle of 5437 47th St. was named to her new post Thursday. Prior to her appointment, she served as general counsel of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

An Abilene native, she obtained her bachelor of science degree, magna cum laude, from McMurry College in Abilene and her law degree from the University of Texas at Austin. She spent the next three years following her law school graduation as assistant reporter for an American Bar Association special project to re-evaluate ethical standards. In that capacity, she helped write the "Code of Professional Responsibility" for lawyers now used throughout the United States.

Dr. Weddington was an assistant city attorney for a year with the City of Fort Worth, and in 1971 she opened her own law office for general practice of the law. She continued her practice, in both state and federal courts, until she was sworn in as general counsel. Her experience in federal law includes a case that she argued successfully before the United States Supreme Court.

The Abilene native was elected to the Texas House of Representatives in 1972 to represent approximately 250,000 persons in Travis County, and was reelected in 1974 and 1976. She continued to serve in the state legislature until she resigned to become USDA general counsel.

"Texas Monthly" magazine named her as one of the 10 best state legislators in 1975. She successfully carried a variety of legislative proposals while serving in the Texas House and cosponsored a bill to provide for the taxation of agricultural land based on its productivity, rather than its market value.

Dr. Weddington has been active in a number of organizations, including the National Women's Political Caucus, the Women's Equity Action League, the American Association of University Women, Business and Professional Women, Sierra Club and Delta Kappa Gamma Society, an international society of women educators.

She was selected by the American Council of Young Political Leaders to attend the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance meeting in 1976 in Denmark, and was one of 16 young U.S. political leaders who spent two weeks in China this year under sponsorship of the National Committee on U.S.-China Relations.

Jehovah's Witnesses Open Convention Today

Jehovah's Witnesses from 35 communites throughout West Texas and southeast New Mexico are meeting for a circuit convention today and Sunday in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Approximately 2,800 delegates are attending the two-day meeting, whose theme is "Rendering Sacred Service with Loyalty."

The sessions are designed to increase understanding and appreciation of the Scriptures and to aid Witnesses in using such knowledge in service to God and their fellow man, according to John H. Moore, a Lubbock building contractor and the convention manager.

The meeting begins at 9:55 a.m. today when the delegates meet to hear the opening comments from their district director.

Also slated are an hour discourse on the group's Theocratic School and a dedication and baptism talk entitled, "Our Choice to Work With Jehovah."

The afternoon sessions begin at 2:30 p.m. Topics to be discussed include "Loyalty Rendering Sacred Service," "Serving Loyalty in Youth," and "Is Materialism Eroding Loyalty to Your Brothers?"

Singles Convocation Scheduled At St. John's Methodist Church

A convocation for single adults will be held at St. John's United Methodist Church Friday-Saturday under the auspices of the Northwest Texas Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church.

General theme of the convocation is "Single Encounters of The Best Kind!"

The convocation, a conference-wide event, will be different from other such meetings in that participants will set the agenda for the Saturday dialogue groups and leaders for the dialogue groups will help the groups work toward some answers rather than giving answers themselves.

Resource persons/enablers announced for the event have special expertise and experience in the area of single adult ministries.

The resource persons/enablers include the following: Dr. Wayne Lindecker, director of adult education with the United Methodist Board of Discipleship in Nashville, Tenn.; Phil Sorley, psychologist for the Mental Health/Mental Retardation Center and in private practice in Lubbock; Carolyn Jordan, attorney and Lubbock City Councilwoman; Joan and Bill Weir, educator and pastor and human sexuality specialists from Midland; Norman Cobb, minister and student, Wilderness Backpacking Trail boss from Arlington; Carolyn Badgett, a Department of Human Resources representative and past president of Parents without Partners; Dixie Robertson, seminarian and candidate for the ordained ministry from Dallas; Roger Loyd, campus minister at Texas Tech University in Lubbock; and Tom Daugherty, a chaplain at Methodist Hospital in Lubbock.

The event will begin with registration and supper at 6:30 p.m. Friday. The event will close with a snack supper at 5 p.m. Saturday.

CHURCH BRIEFS

The Kinsmen Gospel Singers from Wichita Falls are presenting a concert from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday at Happy Valley Baptist Church, 307 38th St. The public is invited to attend the concert.

• • •

Registration for the fall semester of Trinity Bible Institute will be held Sept. 13 in the conference room of the institute, 7002 Canton Ave. Orientation for students will be held from 6 p.m. to 7:25 p.m. Sept. 13 in Trinity Church.

• • •

First Christian Church To Have Sports Banquet

First Christian Church will be have its annual sports banquet at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday in the church's fellowship hall.

Jack Dale will be the featured speaker. Special guests for the event will include Texas Tech University's football team, athletic director and coaches.

The sports banquet is the first in a series of fall dinners sponsored by the church. The congregation is invited to attend the event.

Dale is sports director and sales manager for KFYO radio station. For the past several years he has been judged by his peers as one of the three top sportcasters in the state of Texas. He does play-by-play reporting of the Southwest Conference football games and Texas Tech basketball.

Dale came to KFYO in 1952 as sports director after working at stations in Oklahoma and Kansas. He has been honored statewide by newspaper sportswriters who have written columns every season praising his ability to paint a word picture of sports, whether it is basketball, baseball, football, track or golf.

He is a member of the Red Raider Club and the Advertising Club of Lubbock and was instrumental in forming an adult chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes here. He is a former football player.

The Alma, Kan., native received his basic training at the Pathfinder School of Radio Broadcasting in Kansas City. He is a member of the Melonie Park Baptist Church.

Dale and his wife Sue have two sons, Steve and David.

Women's Group Reveals Dates For Retreat

The annual Hi-Plains Area Christian Women's Fellowship Retreat for the Christian (Disciples of Chrsit) Church will be held Sept. 16-17 at Ceta Glen Christian Camp.

Retreat theme is "Spiritual Freedom."

Guest leader for the retreat will be Mrs. James (Fran) Craddock. She is vice president of the Division of Homeland Ministries of the Christian (Disciples of Christ) Church and is serving as executive secretary of the department of church women. She has been president of the state convention of the Illinois Disciples of Christ and served six years as president of the Illinois Christian Women's Fellowship.

She participated in the fraternal visit of church leaders with Asian church and political leaders, visiting Japan, Hong Kong, Thailand and India. Mrs. Craddock was a delegate to the Fifth Assembly of the World Council of Churches, meeting in Nairobi, Kenya, in 1975.

The registration fee of $7.50 is due by Sept. 12 and may be mailed to Mrs. Lois Stiner, 700 Ave. D, SE, Childress, Texas, 79201.

Evangelism Forum Set For Sunset Church Of Christ

The 11th annual World Evangelism Forum of Sunset Church of Christ is slated Sept. 15-17 at the church, 3723 34th St.

The third annual Seminar in Evangelism for Young Adults will be held in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center Sept. 15-17. Theme for the seminar, which is designed for young adults and persons working with young adults, is "Except A Seed Die."

Theme for the evangelism forum is "Where In The World Do We Begin?"

Missionaries from New Guinea, Ireland, South Africa, Europe, Australia, Brazil, East Africa, Thailand, the northeast United States and the northwest United States will be guest speakers.

Cursillo Movement To Hold Fiesta

The Cursillo Movement of the Diocese of Amarillo of the Roman Catholic Church will celebrate its 14th annual Fiesta de Colores Sunday at the Fair Park Coliseum.

Bishop Lawrence DeFalco will be the principal speaker and the event will be broadcast by local Spanish radio stations. Masters of ceremonies will be provided by members of the Cursillo Movement and Spanish music will be played during the event.

The annual event was begun in 1965 under the guidance of Rev. Antonio Gonzalez, spiritual advisor and director of the Cursillo Movement. The celebration, which is held each year on the first Sunday of September, has developed into the largest Christian gathering in the diocese. This year the fiesta is expected to attract 10,000 cursillistas from Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Kansas.

High point of the fiesta will be the crowning of the King and Queen of the Fiesta de Colores 1978. Contestants for the titles are between the ages of six and 12.

Parish participation in the contest has been one of the principal means of fund raising to construct a centrally-located building for Cursillo Movement activities. The Christian Renewal Center in Lubbock is the result of the planning.

Australian Bishop Lubbock Visitor

The Rt. Rev. Bruce Rosier, Bishop of Willochra for the Episcopal Church in Australia, is visiting Texas this month.

He will be in Lubbock Sept. 10 through 12 as the houseguest of Mr. and Mrs. George Miller. The Lubbock couple went to Australia on an exchange trip several years ago.

He is renewing a diocese-to-diocese friendship begun when the Northwest Texas and Willochra Dioceses were companion dioceses in the program of Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ.

Church To Hear Congressman

U.S. Rep. Carroll Hubbard of Kentucky will speak during the 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. worship services Sunday at Trinity Church, 7002 Canton Ave.

Elected to the U.S. Congress in November 1974, Hubbard was appointed associate whip of the U.S. House of Representatives in March 1977. He is a member of the Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee and the Fisheries Committee in the House of Representatives.

He is a member, deacon, and moderator of the First Baptist Church in Mayfield, Ky., and is a former member of the State Executive Board of the Kentucky Baptist Convention.

Church Begins Pick-Up Service

Children living west of Quaker Ave. can be picked up at their homes Sunday mornings and evenings by Green Lawn Church of Christ buses for fun, songs and Bible lessons.

The ministry serves children who would otherwise not be able to come to Sunday school and services. The church has arranged special classes and worship services for children coming on the buses, according to teacher Latrice Paxton. After the services, young people from 2 to 20 years of age will be driven home on the buses.

Green Lawn keeps the buses in top condition and posts rules for good bus behavior on the back of each seat to maintain a safe, enjoyable time on the bus.

Parents wishing their children to be picked up for the classes may call 795-4377 for more information.

Work Force

You can make good money at things like riveting or welding, but it isn't always a fun job. There's a tension to it that takes its toll of nerves and muscles.

Lots of jobs aren't fun, aren't even fulfilling. They're just necessary, both for the doers and for the rest of us, who profit by their services.

So what comes after work? Staying home and watching TV, or perhaps a little bit of nothing. It shouldn't be that way; not all that way, certainly.

People do have three facets—mental, physical and spiritual. It's the spiritual part that is the most apt to get shortchanged today, more's the pity. Because that's where the miracles begin.

Davis To Remain Held Without Bond

FORT WORTH (AP) — A silent and stoic Cullen Davis was told Friday he will remain in jail without bond pending his trial on charges he solicited the execution of the judge hearing his divorce case — an execution that never came off.

State District Judge Arthur Tipps ruled immediately after defense attorneys finished their final arguments at a bond hearing for the millionaire industrialist. Defense attorney Phil Burleson said there would be no appeal of the ruling. By law, the trial could begin within 60 days of Davis' Aug. 20 arrest.

Prosecutors allege Davis sought to have State District Judge Joe Eidson killed. Eidson Thursday removed himself from the four-year-old divorce action between Davis and his estranged wife, Priscilla.

Testimony "Incredible"

Tipps' rapid decision touched off expected reaction from the Davis defense team. Lead attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes labeled the testimony of star state witness David McCrory as "inherently incredible."

While Haynes disparaged McCrory's testimony, defense attorney Mike Gibson cited legal points that could hint at the team's defense.

"The evidence presented was not substantial enough to show guilt," Gibson said. "Even if so, the doctrine of collateral estoppel would apply."

That doctrine holds that evidence presented in a case in which acquittal was won cannot be used to press charges against the same defendant in another case. Prosecutors contended Davis should not be freed on bond because he was out on bond from three other felony charges at the time of his latest arrest.

Acquitted Of Murder

Davis was acquitted last year at Amarillo of capital murder charges in the shooting death of Andrea Wilborn, his 12-year-old stepdaughter, during a shooting spree at the $6 million Davis mansion in Fort Worth. Stan Farr also died and Mrs. Davis and a chance visitor to the mansion, Gus Gavrel Jr., were wounded. Davis still faces charges in those shootings.

The Haynes team also represented Davis in that action.

Gibson said the defense would also hit hard at an alleged conspiracy against their client. He called the latest charges against Davis a "continuation of a frame and the devices of Priscilla Davis to secure a substantial portion of Cullen Davis' wealth."

Defense Cites Meeting

The defense pointed to a meeting between Pat Burleson and Priscilla Davis. Burleson is the man who put McCrory in touch with the FBI, paving the way for audio and visual recordings to be made at meetings between Cullen Davis and McCrory.

Prosecutors reminded the court of a portion of those recordings in which McCrory tells Davis, "I got the judge dead for you." Davis replies, "Good."

Defense lawyer Steve Sumner, who headed Haynes' investigations in the latest case, also cited the Amarillo proceedings. He said their ability to investigate the solicitation charges were "dramatically enhanced" by evidence uncovered at the hearing "as well as what we learned in Amarillo."

"Lot Of Same People"

"There are different issues, but a lot of the same people are involved," Sumner said.

Even the prosecutors were mindful of the Amarillo outcome.

"I'm pleased, but this is just one battle in the war," Tolly Wilson said. "We did this the last time...and we eventually lost that case."

McCrory, wired for sound by the FBI, met with Davis and had telephone conversations with him. Recordings provided the basis for the prosecution during the hearing.

During an Aug. 20 meeting, McCrory said he showed Davis a posed snapshot of Eidson's "body" stuffed into a car trunk and was given an envelope containing $25,000 to deliver to an assassin he never actually hired.

The prosecutors also produced a videotape they said showed Davis accepting a .22-caliber pistol and silencer from McCrory. Those items were found in the trunk of Davis' car when he was arrested and are the basis for a second charge against him — illegal possession of a prohibited weapon.

Haynes said McCrory was the cornerstone of the state's case. "In order to understand what is reflected in the state's case, one must look at David McCrory," Haynes said. He said McCrory's testimony was spiced with "I don't know and I can't remember" and that McCrory was "totally unworthy of belief." McCrory is a former karate instructor and employee of one of several companies controlled by Davis.

Kay Davis, 24-year-old niece of the defendant and an officer in the Kendavis Industries empire, reacted to Monday's decision along the same lines as Haynes.

"One, the videotape does not show Cullen Davis handing anything to McCrory," Kay Davis said. "Two, David McCrory was out of sight of the FBI long enough to obtain the money, and three, the judge had his mind made up yesterday when he said he was going to have an answer by noon...and by God, he did. I don't think McCrory or the tapes support each other."

Haynes said Davis was not surprised at the outcome because he read in a newspaper that bond would be denied.

"You have to remember he has run the gauntlet," Haynes said.

Following Tipps' decision, Davis was whisked to an anteroom, where he told his attorneys, "I'm very dsappointed."

During those proceedings, Davis occasionally dined on steak in his cell and enjoyed some other luxuries not normally associated with incarceration.

Haynes told Davis, "I'll be up to see you this afternoon after you've had your massage and steak."

surgents at first drove the guardsmen back.

The current drive to end 41 years of rule by the Somoza family was in its 11th day Friday. Somoza's father had been put in power in 1937 by U.S. Marines who occupied this Central American nation.

Clashes or bombings also were reported Thursday in the towns of Esteli, Jinotepe, Diriamba and Leon.

"There's intense shooting near the Red Cross building right now," said a Red Cross official by telephone. He said townspeople had dug ditches across the street to prevent the passage of national guard troops. All businesses were closed during the day, he said.

In Jinotepe, 35 miles south of the capital, Red Cross spokesman Alvaro Flores reported: "There have been many bomb blasts tonight, but no shooting clashes." He said national guard patrols were in the streets.

Bombings also were reported in Diriamba, about five miles north of Jinotepe, and in Leon, 60 miles west of Managua. A Red Cross man in Leon said there was also sporadic shooting there, and some streets were barricaded with overturned cars.

Businessmen opposed to the Somoza regime accuse it of mismanaging the economy, of monopolizing much of the country's industry and business and of widespread corruption. They say the longer Somoza remains in power, the more people will turn to the leftist guerrillas who launched the current campaign with a two-day occupation of the National Palace last week.

Other foes of the dictator claim he has allowed the national guard to brutalize the population, a charge he denies. The leftist guerrillas, who favor establishment of a socialist system here, say Somoza has allowed exploitation of the masses.

School Tax Boost Eyed

Amendment would allow the Legislature to clarify the position of local tax administrators related to the taxation of intangibles," he said.

He said the amendment would let the Legislature decide whether to exclude intangibles from the tax base or provide tools for taxing them.

Parker said the board's data on real estate is more reliable than the governor's office report because five major appraisal firms estimated values on commercial property, oil and gas land and utilities.

"This is the first time we have had an appraisal of oil and gas and utility property," he said.

State Tax Formula Draws Protest Here

cause, compared with oil-rich counties and highly industrialized cities, Lubbock has a small tax base for tangible property.

Irons fears that if the state tax board's new figures are accepted by the legislature, Lubbock will be classified as a "wealthy" district.

"This is of great concern to us because it would drastically affect our portion" of financing public schools, the superintendent said. Under the recommended figures, the state "would have us pay more" in local taxes and get less in return.

The Lubbock district wants to pay its fair share, said Irons and John Brooks, city-school tax assessor-collector. If the board's new figures were indeed a reflection of true taxable wealth here, they said they would have no complaints.

"But it is ridiculous to consider intangible property as part of a district's wealth. It is impossible to assess and collect taxes on intangible property," Irons said.

School districts across the state are in the same boat, Brooks said. Hit especially hard are districts in urban areas, where most banks are located, he said.

The state tax board calculated its figures on intangible property by securing information on the value of bank deposits, bonds and stocks in each county. The board said this information was obtained from such sources as the Internal Revenue Service and other governmental agencies.

Brooks said that while it is possible to estimate the value of intangibles within a taxing jurisdiction, it is impossible to get figures on each and every resident. Tax offices have no legal means to such specific data, he said.

"Yes, the intangible wealth is here. But there's no way you can put a finger on it," Brooks said.

Even if banks were required to turn over to tax authorities the names and dollar amounts of each depositor, depositors easily could circumvent any tax, he said. "All they'd have to do would be to transfer their money to an out-of-state bank on Dec. 31 and then transfer it back on Jan. 2."

In so doing, the depositor's funds would not be in the taxing jurisdiction on Jan. 1, the day the tax roll theoretically is drawn up.

The state tax board's report, which is based on 1977 property values, is the second such study made in Texas. The first was done in 1975 by the Governor's Office of Education Resources.

Brooks said the governor's office recognized the "impossible task" of assessing intangible wealth by simply ignoring such property two years ago.

The use of intangible wealth in the new report may be designed to "create such a hue and cry from school districts that the legislature will officially exclude intangibles from taxation," he said.

The state tax board's study said that taxable wealth in Texas school districts totals $464.4 billion. Of that amount, the board said, $154.5 billion is in intangible property.

Because the districts themselves do not assess intangible property, the districts reported their intangible wealth at a minute $234 million.

The state board said the Lubbock district has intangible wealth totalling $1.47 billion. In contrast, Lubbock listed only $3.4 million — a figure Brooks said includes only information the district received on local finance-company loans.

Another item in dispute is household furnishings and other personal property. Again, very few districts tax such items.

Statewide the value of those personal items should total $7.7 billion, the board said. In practice, however, less than $1 billion is on school districts' tax rolls.

The board has Lubbock down for $72 million in furniture and other personal property. Brooks's roll listed just $14 million — representing boats and recreational vehicles.

Brooks said it is "next to impossible to accurately assess household furniture. The only way the board came up with a figure was by using a formula," amounting to 8 percent of the value of each house.

The state board contends that the total value of all taxable property in the Lubbock school district is $3.45 billion. In contrast, the district reported — and levied taxes on — just $1.86 billion.

But when intangible property and household furniture are excluded, the Lubbock district comes out very close to the $19 billion tax base that, according to the state board, the district should have.

"We couldn't hope to come any closer. When it comes to tangible property, our rolls reflect 97 to 98 percent" of what the state tax board has listed for Lubbock, Brooks said.

The board's report shows the Lubbock city-school tax office to be extremely consistent in appraising homes, apartments, automobiles, utilities, bank stock, businesses, vacant land and farms.

For instance, the state board said the local school tax roll should reflect a "market value" total for homes of $803 million. Brooks has homes down at $776 million, or 97 percent.

The board pegs the total value of business property in Lubbock at $613 million. Brooks shows $588 million, or 96 percent.

Such consistency is lacking statewide. For all Texas school districts, home values should total $73 billion, the state tax board says. Yet only $49 billion, or 67 percent, is on district rolls.

The total of commercial property in Texas should be $47 billion, the board reported. But only $34 billion, or 72 percent, shows up on school tax rolls.

Unemployment Rate Drops; Economic Slowing Still Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate declined to 5.9 percent in August, the government said Friday, but the improvement didn't change the Carter administration's forecast of a gradual slowing in economic activity.

The report came at the end of a week dominated by adverse economic reports ranging from a near-record trade deficit and steadily weakening dollar to falling factory orders and a decline in the index that points to future economic trends.

The decline in joblessness from 6.2 percent of the work force in July to 5.9 percent was the second time this year that unemployment has dipped below 6 percent. The unemployment rate stood at 5.7 percent in June.

Powell "Encouraged"

At the White House, press secretary Jody Powell said, "We're obviously encouraged by the overall reduction" in unemployment but "even more encouraged by the reduction in black unemployment and the increase in black employment."

Lyle E. Gramley, a member of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, said he thinks all the recent statistics, including the jobs report, are "consistent with the view that the rate of economic growth is slowing.

"It's what we expected. I don't see anything in the figures that indicate a precipitous slowdown," Gramley said. He added that the economy is still on target for a 3.5 percent to 4 percent growth rate in the second half of the year.

Actual Rate Steady

Although the jobs statistics have bounced up and down in recent months, Gramley and Courtenay Slater, chief Commerce Department economist, both said the actual unemployment rate has probably held steady at about 6 percent for the past several months.

The Labor Department report said total employment increased by 160,000, to 94.6 million, in August, while unemployment decreased by 115,000, to 6 million. The total labor force remained unchanged at 100.5 million.

Most of the August jobs gains were in service industries, especially wholesale and retail trade where employment increased by 80,000. The bulk of the new jobs went to women and teen-agers, with some gains for blacks as well.

Increase Slight

But a government economist, who did not want to be quoted, said the increase in employment was slight. And the economist pointed to a decline in employment in manufacturing and construction industries as being worrisome. "Those are bellwether industries; they rise and fall with the economy," he said.

Manufacturing employment was down 50,000 and construction employment was off 20,000.

However, in an interview, Gramley said the overall employment report was reasonably favorable and "consistent with the economy having a moderately slower rate of growth this summer."

Miss Slater agreed, saying, "We're looking at a situation of moderate economic growth and there will be little change in the unemployment rate for the next few months — that's the best-guess scenario."

Recession Discounted

Both Gramley and Slater said they think the economy will grow at about its "long-run potential" growth rate of between 3.5 percent and 4 percent during the remainder of this year and in 1979, and both discounted the danger of recession.

The economy grew at an 8 percent rate in the second quarter of this year, but some slowdown is considered necessary by the administration to help control the nation's stubbornly high inflation rate.

The Labor Department gave the following breakdown on unemployment in August as compared to July for various population categories:

— All workers, 5.9 percent, down from 6.2 percent.

— Adult men, 4.1 percent, unchanged.

— Adult women, 6.1 percent, down from 6.5 percent.

— Teen-agers, 15.6 percent, down from 16.3 percent.

— Whites, 5.2 percent, down from 5.3 percent.

— Blacks and other minorities, 11.7 percent, down from 12.5 percent.

— Fulltime workers, 5.5 percent, down from 5.7 percent.

— White-collar workers, 3.5 percent, down from 3.8 percent.

— Blue-collar workers, 7 percent, up from 6.9 percent.

The release of new employment figures capped a hectic week of economic activity, most of which confirmed the economy is slowing. Some economists privately warned it could slow more than the administration is predicting.

There were these developments: trade was in deficit by a near record $3 billion; consumer prices increased 0.5 percent; factory orders declined 3.8 percent; the index of economic indicators dropped 0.7 percent; interest rates increased, and the dollar resumed its plunge on world money markets.

Veep Due As Carter 'Stand-In'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter completed preparations Friday for next week's Mideast summit and instructed Vice President Walter F. Mondale to handle most other business during the conference.

Jody Powell, White House press secretary, said of Mondale's assignment, "This is unique in the sense that you've not had a president nor a vice president with that degree of mutual respect."

Carter's final pre-summit conference was with Mondale, Defense Secretary Harold Brown, CIA Director Stansfield Turner, presidential adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, and the U.S. ambassadors to Israel and Egypt.

Powell said the men conferred at lunch, then met into the afternoon. Altogether, he reported, Carter spent three to four hours in summit planning during the day.

The spokesman said Carter "wishes for the vice president in essence to assume responsibility for virtually all of the other activities of government" during the Mideast talks that begin Wednesday with Egypt's President Anwar Sadat and Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Powell said Carter wants Mondale to "leave him free to the maximum extent possible to concentrate on the work at Camp David."

While acknowledging that the president cannot delegate his formal powers to Mondale, Powell said the vice president will be responsible for planning administration strategy for forthcoming congressional debates on natural gas prices, civil service reorganization, and Carter's veto of the defense authorization bill.

Powell likened Mondale's assignment to the type of work that might be delegated to a White House chief of staff. He said it surely would be incorrect to refer to Mondale as "acting president."

Asked if Mondale would be held responsible for any administration failures with Congress, Powell jokingly replied, "I think that's probably part of the plan, yes."

In addition to minding the store at the White House during the president's absence, Mondale also will be directly involved in the Mideast talks, which could last 10 days or longer.

Powell said the vice president will be commuting to and from Camp David "on a fairly regular basis."

The vice president will be busy with still other matters, too. He will fly to Rome today to represent Carter at the installation of Pope John Paul I and will return Monday night.

The Carter spokesman declined to be drawn into a discussion of Begin's reaction to speculation the U.S. president might consider offering to place American forces along Israel's borders with the Arab world is that would promote a settlement. The prime minister said Thursday, "We don't want foreign soldiers to defend our people."

Carter said Wednesday he would be reluctant to send Americans to the Middle East on such an assignment, but did not flatly rule it out.

Train Collision Injures Eight

CHICAGO (AP) — Two elevated trains of the Chicago Transit Authority collided on a short curve at the southeast end of the downtown area Friday evening, injuring eight persons.

None of the injuries appeared to be serious, said Dr. Paul Mesnick of the Chicago Fire Department.

The two trains were traveling north after the rush hour peak. The second train hit the first train from the rear, fire officials said. There was no estimate of how many persons were on the trains.

Each train consisted of eight cars. Two cars derailed but did not leave the elevated tracks, which are about 25 feet above busy downtown streets.

Passengers said there was some confusion after the crash. Most of them left the cars and walked down the elevated trestle to the next station.

"My neck hit the back of the seat," said Ron Ashley of Chicago. "After that, the motorman came running down the track telling everybody to get out and walk to the Van Buren Street station. Half the people there were panicked."

But, he said, they left the cars in orderly fashion. One passenger was arrested on drunk and disorderly conduct charges.

A similar rear-end collision between two trains on a curve occurred on Feb. 4, 1977, sending four cars tumbling from the tracks and down to the streets. Eleven persons were killed and some 200 were injured in that accident.

Los Angeles Police Quell Iranian Melee

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — About 200 Iranian students shouting for the downfall of the shah clashed in a bloody melee with Los Angeles police on a main street in the Civic Center area Friday, attracting a midday crowd of thousands.n

More than 120 of the students were arrested. At least 20 were bleeding from head injuries after a force of more than 100 officers wielded batons after the Iranians charged into a police cordon line.

Ambulances were summoned into the Broadway area, which was closed to traffic for two blocks.

Demonstrators were booked at wooden tables hastily erected on a sidewalk. At least 80 for a time lay face down in the street, their hands fastened behind them in cuffs. Many still were screaming: "Down, down, down with the shah!"

A number of women were among those arrested. A spokesman for the demonstrators had said earlier that they were mainly Iranian students from colleges and universities in Southern California.

The demonstration began around noon at the federal building. Then about 500 students walked to Broadway, where they took up a position adjacent to the plant of the Los Angeles Times. There they protested alleged American news media falsifcation of events in Iran.

A spokesman said the demonstration was aimed at refuting reports that a fire that killed 600 people in an Iranian movie theater last week had been set by "Moslem extremists." He claimed the fire was set by the shah's agents. n

Led by a man with a loudspeaker, they chanted anti-shah slogans and held up banners. The uniformed officers took up a cordon position in the middle of the street and for a time it appeared the demonstration would end peacefully.

But then a group of about 200 massed together in the middle of the block surrounded by police.

The demonstrators suddenly broke out of the enclosed area, swinging fists and signs and charging out into the street still shouting, "Down with the shah." There were tackles and wrestling in the street which soon became blood-spattered and was littered with shoes, pieces of clothing and torn signs.

Asked to describe what happened, one police officer said simply, "They charged at us, that's what happened."

Mexican President Discusses Energy Potential

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Jose Lopez Portillo said Friday this country has potential petroleum reserves of 200 billion barrels.

Speaking in the annual state-of-the-nation address to Congress, Lopez Portillo said proven reserves stand at 20 billion barrels while the probable amount is calculated at 37 billion barrels and the potential is six times that. Saudi Arabia had been considered the world leader in reserves with an estimated 170 billion barrels.

"This is no exaggeration or a sense of triumph," Lopez Portillo said. "It is the truth and triumph can be achieved where we Mexicans invest intelligence, skills and organization."

Authorities here said Pemex, Mexico's state petroleum monopoly, has for years been very conservative in evaluating reserves. In early 1977 it announced 17 billion barrels in proven reserves at a time foreign industry experts said the figure was closer to 100 billion barrels, based on drilling and topographical studies.

"The caprices of old seas and jungles left a generous print on the greater part of our republic," Lopez Portillo said. He said nearly 7,000 square miles along Mexico's coasts and 10 times that offshore are potentiallly rich in crude oil and natural gas.

U.S. government energy planners have long considered Mexico as a future abundant source of petroleum and natural gas.

The hope is that Mexico's supplies, coupled with oil from the North Sea and Alaska's North Slope, can help solve the U.S. energy crisis and break an oil and price monopoly held by the the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Mexico has steadfastly refused to join the 13-nation OPEC group.

Plans by Mexico to sell large quantities of natural gas to the United States have been stalled by failure of U.S. Congress to agree on President Carter's energy bill.

Mexico contracted in principle to sell six American companies about 2 billion cubic feet of natural gas initially to six southwestern states, then follow with sales to California. The Department of Energy refused to approve Mexico's price of $2.60 per thousand cubic feet because it was higher than the $2.16 charged by Canada.

Lopez Portillo said Mexico will use the gas earmarked for the United States domestically in place of crude oil, which it is exporting.

But the president said Mexico will supplement petroleum and natural gas energy with development of hydroelectric, geothermal, nuclear and solar resources as well as coal.

He said Mexico will pay special attention to relations with its neighboring countries and will "ask only what we offer: solidarity and respect."

"Mexican matters are of no domestic concern of the United States as American problems are not part of our internal policies," he said.

He said the economic crisis that has plagued Mexico for many decades is ending and a 5 percent growth rate is on the horizon.

The economy grew only 1 percent last year and 1.8 the year before, when he took office, following a decade of sustained 6 percent annual growth.

The president said, "I admit errors and I am making maximum efforts to remedy them so that they don't continue. With the sacrifice and constant effort of many — but not all — we are now better off than when we started this adminstration."

Oil Companies' Gasoline Supplies Worry Government

NEW YORK (AP) — The government, concerned about a shortage of gasoline this fall, is asking oil companies to step up production. But the industry says there's nothing to worry about.

Department of Energy spokesman Carl Gustin said Friday that Energy Secretary James Schlesinger "has begun to contact major refiners and encourage them to increase their output." This is the time of year when refineries are usually about to switch their emphasis from gasoline to heating oil for the winter.

Gustin said Schlesinger is concerned because oil companies have less gasoline on hand this year than last, and because consumers are using more of the fuel.

"The Secretary is concerned that supplies be such that they will cover demand for the rest of the year," Gustin said.

But industry officials said Friday they're having no trouble meeting demand. They add that the lower level of gasoline stocks this year is a reflection of unusually high production last year.

"Exxon's motor gasoline supplies currently are adequate," said a spokesman for the nation's largest oil company. The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the company began the Labor Day weekend with a 10-to 15-day supply of gasoline.

"Demand has been higher than expected, but we feel the industry has been in a comfortable position inventory-wise," said Norman Alstedter, a spokesman for Shell Oil Co.

"We have been making as much gas as we can," he added.

"The comparisons are being made to last year, and last year's stocks were at an unusually high level," said Gary Ross, an analyst at the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, an oil industry organization.

According to the American Petroleum Institute, another industry association, there were 211.2 million barrels of gasoline on reserve last week — enough to keep U.S. motorists supplied for about a month.

That figure was a sizable drop from the 248 million barrels on hand a year ago, but industry officials said last year's figures were high because of heavier-than-normal demand for heating oil during the severe winter of 1976-77. In meeting that demand, refineries also produced more gasoline, which is produced along with heating fuel when crude oil is refined.

Gasoline refineries are operating at 93 percent capacity, and industry sources say that's enough to cover present needs, even with demand rising rapidly. Within a limited range, refiners can adjust the process to produce either more gasoline or more home heating oil.

Gasoline demand has been going up 5 percent a year, according to Dan Lundberg, who publishes the Lundberg letter, a gasoline research newsletter. But Lundberg said gasoline consumption soon will be tapering off.

"We're past the heavy driving peak," he said. "We're at the Labor Day weekend and there hasn't even been a regional pinch in gasoline supply." Demand for gas traditionally declines after the Labor Day weekend, the end of summer vacation season.

There are several reasons for the rise in demand. One is that gas prices have not risen substantially for several years. Another is that more persons are driving trucks and vans, which are not as fuel-efficient as automobiles.

A third factor is that the nation's population is swinging to the South and West. Because of better weather and greater distances, persons in these areas drive more than the rest of the nation.

"Consumption of gasoline continues to climb, with truly alarming connotations for the future," said Lundberg. "But that future isn't here yet."

Well Hits Inconclusive Find

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Exxon Corp. said Friday it has found some sign of oil or natural gas in its first exploratory well in the Baltimore Canyon area, but said the find is "inconclusive" so far.

Exxon is the second oil company to issue a positive statement about its exploratory drilling off the mid-Atlantic states. Texaco announced last month it has struck natural gas about five miles from Exxon's well.

Paul H. Dudley Jr., manager of Exxon's explorations in the Gulf of Mexico and Atlantic Ocean, said the 17,286-foot well "had encountered zones below 12,000 feet which exhibited inconclusive shows of hyrdocarbons."

Exxon's leased drillship Glomar Pacific "spudded," or started, the company's first exploratory well off the East Coast on March 29. It is 101 miles east of this resort.

Two exploratory wells by Continental and Shell were reported dry in the early summer, but Texaco announced it had struck natural gas Aug. 13 in its first well. Texaco said a second natural gas strike was made in the same well, but at a different depth, about five days later.

The Texaco rig moved about a mile to the west this week to drill a second well in an effort to determine the extent of the gas find.

Exxon's Dudley said the zones "would require further evaluation and testing ... to determine their contents."

Dudley said the testing for hydrocarbons, which could take a month to complete, would begin after the well "reaches its final total depth."

Exxon representative Perry Smith said the firm did not know what the depth would be. Exxon originally received U.S. Geological Survey permission to drill to 14,000 feet below the seabed, but it has received three approvals to deepen the well and can now drill to 18,000 feet.

Exxon suspended drilling Thursday because of the approach of Hurricane Ella, which was making its way up the East Coast.

The Glomar Pacific was reported Friday to be pulling up its eight huge sea anchors and plans were to have it floating free by noon Saturday.

Smith said most of the oil workers were being evacuated from the 452-foot drillship, leaving only seamen aboard to maneuver the vessel during the expected rough weather.

Oil industry sources said Exxon would lose about five days' drilling time because of the rough seas.

Public Ignorant Of Heart Ills

CHICAGO (AP) — The public is generally ignorant about the causes of heart disease and the means of preventing it, according to a poll conducted in three Chicago-area counties for the Chicago Heart Association.

Dr. Richared B. Shekelle of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago, headed the survey, which surveyed 617 residents of Cook, Lake and DuPage counties.

One percent of those sampled were able to name all of the three principal factors that contribute to heart attacks in persons under age 60: high cholesterol level in the blood, cigarette smoking and high blood pressure.

Half of those questioned could not name one of the three factors. Twenty-eight percent cited cigarette smoking, 21 percent high blood pressure and 13 percent cholesterol or fat in the diet or blood.

While three-fourths of the respondents said they thought heart attacks could be prevented, Shekelle said "few named specific behaviors that would effectively reduce risk factors" other than giving up smoking.

Fewer than 10 percent mentioned control of blood pressure and reduction of cholesterol.

Knowledge about the factors increased with the level of education, but Shekelle found that even among college graduates, only 32 percent named cigarette smoking, 30 percent high blood pressure and 15 percent cholesterol or fat in the diet or blood.

Gas Company Must Absorb Extra Costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has decided not to allow Columbia Gas Transmission Corp. to charge customers for $2 million of costs incurred during the winter of 1977.

The commission said Columbia Gas wrongly failed to curtail gas deliveries to industrial boilers in October, 1976, thereby unnecessarily incurring the $2 million cost of emergency gas purchases later that winter.

Columbia Gas is an interstate pipeline which transports natural gas to West Virginia, Kentucky, Maryland, New Jersey, Virginia, New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio.

A spokeswoman said the commission voted Thursday not to allow Columbia to pass that extra cost on to its customers.

It was not immediately clear whether this would require refunds or, instead, reduce customers' gas bills in the future.

The decision becomes legally binding only when it is formally issued by the commission, a move which normally follows the commission's vote within a few days.

The action was prompted by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, whose state was among those most heavily hit by gas shortages during the severe winter of 1976-1977.

Metzenbaum wrote to the commission alleging that Columbia Gas drew upon its stored natural gas supply too heavily in the autumn of 1976 and, as a result, ran short of gas during the winter when it had to purchase high-cost emergency supplies.

A commission administrative law judge, Samuel Kanell, issued an initial decision last February, disapproving the recovery by Columbia Gas from its customers of some $2 million for those emergency purchases.

The commission agreed, finding that Columbia Gas should have acted in the last week of October, 1976, to prevent further withdrawals of natural gas for boiler fuel.

Postal Service, Union Begin 'Tough' Session

By OWEN ULLMANN
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postal Service and union officials went back to the bargaining table Friday to launch a tense and difficult 15-day search for a new contract settlement that could end the threat of a nationwide mail strike.

As the countdown began toward a Sept. 16 deadline for settlement, a special mediator-arbitrator seeking to resolve the dispute predicted a "tough" set of negotiations and ruled out any progress initially.

"I think it's safe to say ... that it's very unlikely that we will be moving to a point of action which will be of particular interest" for several days, said James J. Healy, a 62-year-old Harvard professor and veteran labor trouble-shooter.

"My present feeling is it is going to be tough (to reach a settlement)," Healy said at the conclusion of Friday's initial bargaining session.

Healy said he spent the day exploring the disputed issues with the two sides and would do the same at sessions scheduled for Saturday and Monday. He said he did not expect "intensive discussions" to begin until after Labor Day.

Leaders of the American Postal Workers Union (APWU), the National Association of Letter Carriers and the Mail Handlers Division of the International Laborers Union were looking for a sweeter pay raise than the 19.5 percent hike proposed in the rejected three-year pact.

At the same time, officials of the U.S. Postal Service were trying to weaken a no-layoff clause that the unions successfully retained after a bitter fight that led up to the tentative contract accord of July 21.

"I'm not giving a damned thing up on the no-layoff clause," insisted Emmet Andrews, head of the 299,000-member APWU, as he arrived for the opening session here.

Shortly before the talks resumed, U.S. District Judge John Pratt extended until Sept. 18 his temporary order barring a strike by the two largest unions, the 299,000-member APWU and the 181,000-member letter carriers union. Although the order duplicates what already is in the law, it serves as a fresher, sterner warning to recalcitrant workers.

Meanwhile, a fourth union that bargained separately with the Postal Service announced that its state leaders have approved the contract rejected by the other unions. The 38,000-member National Rural Letter Carriers Association does not require ratification by rank-and-file members.

The two sides opened their latest round of talks with Healy under a unique bargaining arrangement fashioned Monday when a strike seemed imminent. The two sides agreed to a 15-day period for either reaching a settlement on their own or letting Healy resolve the dispute for them.

Under the compromise, Healy will try to guide bargainers toward a negotiated settlement that must be resubmitted for members' approval. But if he decides a settlement cannot be reached within 15 days, he turns into an arbitrator and must draw up a final, binding contract by the 10 a.m. EDT Sept. 16 deadline. In that event, workers would have no ratification vote.

Healy praised the two sides for their apparent sincerity and cooperation in finding a "workable solution" to their dispute. He said he would know by Sept. 12 or 13 whether a negotiated settlement seemed out of reach and would alert the bargainers at that time that he would be preparing to decide the issues himself.

However, Healy added that he still would give the parties a chance to reach a settlement on their own "right up to the 10 a.m. (Sept. 16) deadline.

While the new bargaining session delayed the possibility of a strike for at least two weeks, negotiators faced new threats of scattered wildcat walkouts led by militant local union leaders.

In another development, some 60 local leaders of the APWU voted in New York on Friday to stage wildcat strikes if the postal contract is decided by binding arbitration rather than negotiations.

Release Ends Nightmare For POW

(EDITOR'S NOTE: A negotiated ceasefire would come to both Vietnams on Jan. 27, 1973. There would be no public celebration. However, peace meant an exchange of prisoners of war and for hundreds of families throughout America this was just cause for private joy — and anxiety. How would the POWs react to freedom, to a changed America, to an older family? Lieutenant Commander Richard Stratton's release after six years in captivity, and reunion with his wife Alice, family and friends in America conclude the six-part series, "Prisoner at War," by Scott Blakey and published by Doubleday and Co. Inc.)

By SCOTT BLAKEY

Now in January of 1973 the long agony was done. Peace was at hand, so long in coming, with so many false starts, so much duplicity, so much blood, so many bodies.

The Western Union telegram from Washington was dated Jan. 28; it arrived shortly after the telephone call.

Alice Stratton's hand trembled slightly as she read it. She did not bother to wipe away the tears sliding toward her chin.

Last In A Series

"I am pleased to inform you that your husband, Commander Richard A. Stratton, USN, was included on the list of captured in Southeast Asia provided our government by the government of North Vietnam. It is expected that the first incremental release will be within the next two weeks. You will be notified of any additional information received concerning the release, health and welfare of your husband."

Alice Stratton's odyssey had come full circle. In the beginning, after Dick was lost, her days were painful and long. Long days were back, but no pain. Getting through each day to get to the next to get to the next to get to the day when she could see him get off the airplane from Hanoi would give her knots in her stomach.

She knew, too, that once the euphoria of reunion was over, a long and perhaps difficult path of readjustment for all of them lay ahead. Dick would need breathing room; they would need to get to know one another again as parents, as friends, and as lovers; and it probably would not succeed without much hard work and plenty of empathy. She was concerned how the boys would react to the return of a father with stricter, sterner ways.

Mail was pouring in, 25, sometimes 30 or even 40 letters a day from all over the nation. Letters wishing her well, one or two wishing otherwise. Letters from persons wearing POW bracelets with Dick's name on them, asking when they should be returned. She made a promise that once Dick was home every letter would be acknowledged, answered personally; more than 800 were stacked in the living room right now.

Yes, it was over. She was very glad it was over.

Stratton awoke before the reveille gong sounded; it was March 4, 1973, the 2,251st day of his captivity. With any luck he would not be here for the 2,252nd.

He felt a thick mixture of joy and apprehension, a combination of emotions that often afflicts children Christmas morning.

He felt the lump of letters under his butt. He had hidden them under his pallet automatically after the Vietnamese had presented them. He was not sure they would not be taken away. But prison taught you caution. He pulled them out. Already they showed wear. There were 40 letters in all. He had received 20 of them, in a bundle, five days ago, and 20 more the day after: 40 letters from Alice, the oldest dated in mid-1967, the most recent, 1971. Forty letters. He had felt the fury gorge his throat; it hadn't shown very much on his face, that was something else prison taught you.

'We wanted to make it clear that only when we crossed that line would we be happy.'

He would burn all the letters, burn everything in his waste bucket, letters, pictures, everything. He had gotten as much as he could. He was not going to give his captors the pleasure of taking them back. He was not going home with the letters in his pocket, the Vietnamese saying he had had them all along. No way.

Inside the main entrace to Hoa Lo prison was a large and carefully groomed garden compound. The prison officials took great pride in it. "Camp Unity" could be falling apart with age and neglect, but the garden grew on forever. It would be the last view of Hoa Lo for the POWs now being assembled in the garden for release.

Stratton walked in the garden with the others, nodding to acquaintances, chatting softly with intimates. They were lined up and marched through the gates, under the wall, and into the sunshine on the other side. The buses waited; beyond the buses was a crowd of Vietnamese civilians, a small sea of wide brown eyes, dark clothes, straw hats, and soft chatter.

Stratton was apprehensive at first.

"Since the crowds were absolutely under the military's control, what were they going to do to us out there? The crowd was all along the street, watching. They were very quiet and curious, which belied this natural hatred they (allegedly) had for the Caucasian air pirates. If they had really hated us that much they would have wanted one last shot at us..."

The buses were loaded, 20 men to a bus, roughly; the doors closed. The route through Hanoi to Gia Lam International Airport where they were to be repatriated was a long and circuitous one. From the bus windows the city looked far from desolate. Life streamed by on foot and in oxcarts; there were endless passings of pedicabs, military vehicles, Chinese trucks, and occasional World War II-vintage motorcycles with sidecars. They turned, heading east, for the airport.

The buses stopped on the airport runway.

"The word from the seniors was that we would leave with dignity," Stratton said. "We would not act like a bunch of animals sassing them or yanking their chains. We wouldn't act like a bunch of idiots jumping up and down; until we crossed the line, it was to be no smiles, somber, straight business, pure military. We realized the photographers would be there with the happy prisoners departing and we wanted to make it clear that only when we crossed that line would we be happy."

Across the field, perhaps 100 yards distant, three mammoth C-141 StarLifters waited, their silver skins shimmering in the midafternoon sun; tail markings identified them as belonging to the 10th Aeromedical Evacuation Squadron. Between the prisoners and the planes an imaginary border line temporarily separated two nations.

A Vietnamese officer read off the names of the assembled prisoners. One by one they walked forward to a table where two senior officers stood, saluted, spoke their names, and crossed the imaginary line into the welcoming arms of their countrymen. Stratton fidgeted, waiting to hear his name, watching the others go, watching, feeling hate and disgust churn in his guts.

Finally. His back stiffened and he marched forward, his face angry, his lips pressed thin, whitening with fury. A Colonel Bennett returned his brisk salute and reached out to shake his hand.

"Welcome aboard."

"Sir, get a picture and get the name of the officer reading those names off on the microphone. That bastard is responsible for torturing over 90 percent of the prisoners here." Bennett held tightly to Stratton's hand, soothing him, saying softly, "We've got him. We've got him. Now, don't worry about it. Just get on the airplane. We've got him."

He was firmly moved across the line. In a matter of minutes the airplane crossed the coastline and was over the Gulf.

'Suitcase A-Bomb' Acquisition By Terrorists Worries Experts

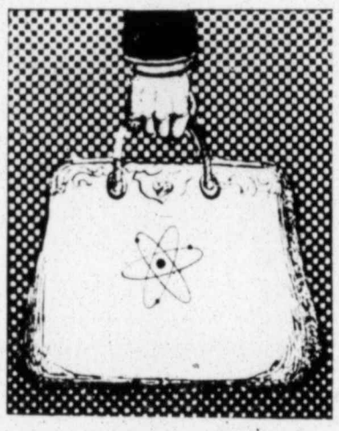
By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON (NEA) — For some time now political radicals in Europe and the Middle East have reportedly been shopping the world's black markets for an atomic bomb. But not just any atomic bomb. Intelligence sources say the radicals want a small weapon, easy to handle, and relatively simply to detonate.

That apparently narrows the field to one very special device in the U.S. arsenal: the Army's obscure "suit-case A-bomb." Weighing as little as 100 pounds, and packaged in two-foot knapsacks, the bombs are formally known as "Atomic Demolition Munitions," and are said to be something of a terrorist's dream.

The smallest of the suitcase bombs can be transported, set up, armed and exploded by two people. That means, in the wrong hands, the devices could be placed anywhere, at any time, to blow up a block of a city, or to wipe out a corporation headquarters, and thereby spread panic through an entire nation.

Pentagon experts say the smallest suitcase bomb, with less than a kiloton yield, could kill thousands if placed at the base of a large river dam. Likewise, a large



ADM, with up to two kilotons of force, could be placed out of view near the grounds of the White House, and very likely blow that building apart.

Such prospects are naturally unsettling. And as terrorists and terrorism acts have become increasingly bold, there has been a concurrent reevaluation of the wisdom of keeping ADMs around. Some intelligence officers say the risk of the ADM presently exceeds its strategic worth, thus it should be done away with.

Actually, the worth of the ADM has long been in dispute. The bombs were created in the mid-1960s to be used for wartime sabotage.

Proponents envisioned squads of nightfighters hauling the explosives behind enemy lines to blow up bridges. Critics said the idea would be passe during a nuclear holocaust.

Still, the bombs were produced "in the hundreds," according to a Pentagon spokesman. And despite their controversy they are doubtlessly ingenious instruments. Says one service retiree, now a Pentagon weapons consultant: "Prior to this century, two men with suitcase A-bombs could have won any war in the world history."

An Army nuclear affairs specialists says there are two kinds of ADMs. One is the suitcase bomb, housed in green duffle bag that is 13 inches in diameter. The second device is heavier (the exact size is

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Last fall I broke out with what my doctor called "pityriasis rosea." It lasted about a month, and the itching was severe. As fall approaches I am anticipating it again, since the doctor said it seems to appear at that time if you're going to get it. Is this contagious in any way? What is the best treatment? — K.F.

You should not have a repeat bout with this mild skin inflammation. Pityriasis rosea does not usually recur. We don't know what causes it, but the pattern of development is very predictable. It begins with a scaly outbreak in an isolated "herald" or "mother" spot, followed in the next several weeks by generalized outbreak usually on the trunk and upper body, rarely on the face or below the knees. It is not contagious, but may produce severe itching.

In the early stages it may be mistaken for a ringworm infection or a contact dermatitis. One peculiarity is the appearance (on the back usually) of a Christmas tree pattern of lesions. Sunlight may hasten the disappearance, which normally occurs on its own without any treatment in from two to three months. Ultra-violet light can help. A menthol solution applied locally will relieve a mild itch, and prednisone taken orally may be used for very severe itching. Some persons may have a mild headache and slight malaise during the course of the rash. In temperate climates, spring and fall do seem to be prime seasons for pityriasis rosea, and young adults are most commonly affected.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I need a bulk diet following my hemorrhoid surgery (successful). Can you give me some menus for a bulk diet? Incidentally, your booklet on hemorrhoids helped me in what to expect, etc. — Mrs. V.D.

You don't need a special menu for a bulk diet. Continue with your bran cereal, the prunes, both of which you tell me you now use. That along with daily use of fruits and vegetables, raw or cooked, supplies all the bulk you need. The printed material on this subject is still available. For a copy readers should send a quarter to cover printing and handling and a stamped, self-addressed envelope Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please explain the cause and cure of hammer toes. I have developed some in the last few years. They are very annoying. My own doctor was not very interested or helpful. — J.R.C.

Most non-foot doctors are not interested in our feet, unless they are obvious factors in other problems. Unfortunately, most patients as well are not very interested in these seemingly uninteresting anatomical structures until they give them trouble.

As to your hammer toe. It is the kinking of the second toe (usually). It can be a congenital (birth) defect or be acquired through wearing of short shoes and snug-fitting socks. The result is a claw-like deformity. The matter should be treated early before the tissues and joints become fixed in the deformed position. The first line of treatment is shoe adjustment. Sometimes the toe can be straightened by use of a cushion on top of the toe with an adhesive sling to hold it down. If this is unsuccessful surgery may be necessary.

One annoying complication of hammer toe is the forming of a callus on top of the toe, which can be quite painful. I suggest you see a podiatrist.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What would cause a 21-year-old girl to have horrible bunions? She recently underwent surgery for their removal and is confined to a wheelchair temporarily. — D.L.

Bunions are the result of ill-fitting shoes usually, which are too short, too narrow and too tight. It is not a coincidence that most bunion is found in women, although it usually takes longer to develop than it apparently did in this 21-year-old. There may also be some basic foot defect (as in the arch) that contributed to the problem at her age. Some surgery for bunion may involve not only removal, but realignment of the foot itself. This would require a period of inactivity afterward.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there any truth in a rumor I've heard that wheat germ oil can keep a man sexually active? — B.G.

I doubt there is any truth in it.

• • •

There's an old saying — if your feet hurt, you hurt all over. Dr. Thosteson's new booklet, "Relief and Care of Your Feet," shows you how to avoid and take care of foot problems. To get your copy, write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Did you know that ice milk usually contains more sugar than ice cream? One cup of ice milk contains as much calcium as 8 ounces of whole milk according to USDA home economists.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Following our president's advice to use the power of the sun, we recently bought an expensive clothesline so I could hang our clothes outdoors to dry.

I was very disappointed when the clothes I hung out dried stiff and scratchy, even if I double-rinsed them and used fabric softener. My towels and diapers turn out the worst.

Help! What am I doing wrong? — Kathy

Not a thing, luv... Clothes dried outdoors on a line are never, never, not ever, going to be as soft as those dried in a dryer.

But there are one or two things you can do to make the clothes less scratchy.

First, spin as much water out of them as possible, then shake each piece rather vigorously before hanging on the line. This will help greatly to make them less stiff.

LETTER OF THOUGHT

DEAR HELOISE:

Several weeks ago, a woman wrote to your column saying we should tell our children what they have done wrong when they do wrong.

I certainly agree with this, because children must be taught as they are not born knowing everything.

I also think we must make a point of praising whatever they do well, even if it is a simple thing.

If we explain kindly and with love when they make a mistake and praise lavishly when they do well, we will have no trouble with our children. — Meg Ryerson

Well put, Meg. I certainly agree with you. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

A sharp knife was hard to find in my kitchen till I accidently sharpened my favorite old paring knife.

It was so old and dull I decided to use it to scrape off the residue around a red clay flower pot when replanting.

I drew the knife around the inner edge of the pot, and surprise! The knife was sharpened. The clay pot served as a whet stone.

DEAR HELOISE:

I do quite a lot of baking as it is a hobby, and I have discovered how to cut down on clutter of dishes and keep my counter clean and tidy.

Mixing ingredients in a bowl can be messy, so I contain all mixing in my sink.

This eliminates scattering of batter on counter and walls. Immediately after using dishes and utensils, I soak them until I have a chance to wash them.

That way there is no scrubbing and my counter and walls are sparkling clean. — Mrs. Maria Dupuis

DEAR HELOISE:

When washing white uniforms together in a washing machine, they tend to slip and slide against each other, and sometimes don't get as clean-looking as they should.

To help with the problem, put a few towels in the machine with them. This causes a certain amount of friction, thereby getting the uniforms much cleaner and whiter. — Edna Mae Lockhart

DEAR HELOISE:

I work for a newspaper and was reading your column this morning. Some reader wanted to know how to keep her pie crusts from shrinking.

I am not the world's greatest cook, but have achieved some family celebrity status as a pretty decent coconut cream pie chef.

My crusts never shrink because I never stretch them to fit the pan. Stands to reason that anything stretched will return to its true size when heated and moisture removed.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My name is Don. Two years ago, on June 16, I received a phone call from a hospital in Indianapolis to say they had found a kidney for me. The dream I had been waiting for for two years had come true. I was going to have a kidney transplant. It would be my 40th operation, and the most serious. I was at the hospital in 45 minutes. The doctors did tests and when the results came back they gave the go-ahead for the transplant. At 5:00 p.m. I was in the operating room. Six hours later, I woke up with a new kidney.

I had been on dialysis for over a year and spent approximately 795 hours hooked up to the machine, unable to walk more than a few feet away. I can describe what it's like in one sentence: It's a life-saving hell. Without it you die. It's that simple. It's hell because you are a slave to the machine for three days a week, five hours each time. When a guy is 17, which is how old I am, he doesn't have time for much else.

When I got my transplant I was free. I could go anywhere and do almost anything. For the first time in three years, last summer our family finally took a vacation.

I would like to beg and plead with anyone who reads this. PLEASE, for the sake of thousands of people in the USA who can't see and need eyes, and people who need kidneys, hearts, or livers, PLEASE become organ donors. My kidney came from a traffic victim who was wise enough to know that he would not need his kidneys if he should die, so he made plans to leave them to someone whose life depended on them. I was the lucky one.

People are on machines every day. Some have been there for over ten years. The reason they are still on machines is the lack of donors.

In most states you can become a donor when you are getting your driver's license. In all states, a uniform donor card is a legal document. If you are the kind of a person who is saying, "No one wants any part of me," you are wrong. For every person who passes away, he, or she, could help six different people.

Thank you, Ann, for letting me use your column to say what is in my heart. I hope I helped someone. — Don

Dear Don: It is you who deserves the thanks. Anyone who wants to be a donor (eyes and/or kidneys) should write to The National Kidney Foundation, Box 353, New York, N.Y. 10016.

Dear Ann: My 41-year-old husband spends a fortune on wheat germ, dried alfalfa, vitamins and health-store foods.

Does this stuff do any good? He also eats a lot of raw and uncooked foods because he thinks they will give him the needed enzymes. Frankly, I think he is being ripped off. Will you settle this once and for all? — Wife Of A Health Nut

Dear Wife: An excellent book on the subject of food fads and phonies is "Eat O.K. — Feel O.K.," By Fredrick J. Stare, M.D., and Elizabeth Whelan, Sc.D. (The Christopher Publishing House, N. Quincy, Mass.) The price is $9.95. Your husband will save a lot more than the price of this book when he stops buying some of that useless junk. He will also learn which foods are REALLY beneficial.

GARDEN SALAD

2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
½ cup cold water
2 cans (10¾ ounces each) condensed chicken broth
1 tsp. vinegar
¼ tsp. hot pepper sauce
2 cups chopped fresh tomatoes
1 cup chopped zucchini squash
½ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup finely chopped green onions

In saucepan, sprinkle gelatine on cold water. Place over low heat, stirring until gelatine is dissolved. Remove from heat; add broth and seasonings. Chill until slightly thickened. Fold in remaining ingredients. Pour into a 6-cup mold. Chili 6 hours or until firm. Unmold on salad greens. Serve with mayonnaise. Makes about 6 cups, 6 servings.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The Professor studied the dummy for a full five seconds. Then he played its ace of spades and led a trump. East played the deuce and the Professor went right up with his king. When it held he led a second trump, bumped the ace and queen together, conceded two spade tricks (dummy could ruff his last card of that suit) and was ready for the next rubber.

"How did you work out the trump situation?" asked the student. "West had bid. Wasn't he more likely to hold the ace than East?"

"You're right about that," replied the Professor. "I didn't really think I was going to make my contract. However, I did give the cards the only chance to produce for me."

The Professor's analysis was correct as usual. He could not make his contract if East held the queen of trumps. Change the ace and queen around. South's jack would force West's ace, but West would simply play three spades and East would overruff dummy with that queen of trumps.

'Lenient' Teachers Adopting Stricter Attitude Toward Grades

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teachers, stung by criticism that they too often pass students they should not pass, are likely to put more Fs on report cards in the school year ahead, the National Education Association said Friday.

The organization of 1.8 million teachers said that a random survey of NEA leaders showed a stricter attitude as far as giving grades is concerned.

"Teachers are very sensitive to the charge that they have been too easy," said Richard E. Maxwell, of Dennis, Mass., who is president of Massachusetts Education Association.

Maxwell said most teachers dislike the practice of promoting children who failed examinations, but he said "often society, through school boards and administrators, has demanded it."

"It was argued," Maxwell continued, "that if we held children back, we might impair them emotionally. I just hope the public is ready for the consequences when a large number of pupils fail."

Robert Hicks, head of the Fairfax, Va., teachers' association, observed, "I know we've had more failures during the past year. I'm certain you'll see an even sharper rise this year."

But the NEA questioned whether the gruntled public will be willing to pay the increased cost of providing special help to students who flunk.

The annual Gallup poll on education, published in the September issue of Phi Delta Kappa magazine, found that more than two-thirds of the adults surveyed believe students should be promoted only if they can pass examinations. An even larger majority said those who flunk should get remedial help rather than being forced to repeat the whole year.

The poll also showed that the public's rating of the public school has sagged during the past year as 36 percent gave the schools an A or B rating, 30 percent C, and 19 percent D or F.

A year ago, 37 percent gave the top two grades, 28 percent C and 16 percent D or F. In 1974, 48 percent gave A or B, 21 percent C and only 11 per cent D or F.

But a majority of parents with children actually attending public schools gave the schools good grades — 51 percent A or B, 32 percent C, and 15 percent D or F — in the latest poll.

The government said Thursday the cost of all America's schools and colleges will jump $11 billion to $155 billion this year, although enrollment will be down 500,000 to 59.8 million students.

The summer vacation already has ended for some schools children, and most of the rest face the start of classes Tuesday after the Labor Day weekend.

KKK Suing To Reinstate Police Officers

ABERDEEN, Miss. (AP) — The Ku Klux Klan, in what it described as a civil rights complaint, filed suits Friday on behalf of two men who said their jobs with law enforcement agencies were jeopardized after they revealed they were members of the white supremacist group.

The two suits, filed in U.S. District Court in Aberdeen, seek job security and a total of $10,000 in damages for both David Wilson, dispatcher for the Lee County Sheriff's Office, and William Baker, dispatcher for the Baldwyn Police Department.

The suit on behalf of Baker alleges that Baldwyn police chief John Connelly and other city officials violated the plaintiff's constitutional rights in firing him without due process. The action came after Baker and Wilson unmasked themselves at a Klan rally in Tupelo a week ago.

The suit asks for back pay and reinstatement of Baker as dispatcher. The city board voted this week to reinstate Baker, but Klansmen said they decided to file the suit in order to establish precedent for their arguments and to force the dismissal to be expunged from Baker's records.

The suit on behalf of Wilson is similar. However, he was suspended, rather than fired from the Lee County Sheriff's Office. The suit names Sheriff Johnny Price as defendant.

Both suits ask for an injunction preventing the departments from harassing employees or denying promotional consideration in the future because of affiliation with the Klan.

Carter To Head Meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House announced Friday that President Carter will hold a town meeting in Aliquippa, Pa., on Sept. 16.

The President also plans to attend a reception for Democratic congressional candidate Gene Atkinson, the White House said.

Carter plans to travel later that day to Columbus, Ohio, for a Democratic fundraising dinner. The Columbus appearance had been announced previously.

There were only three departments in the first cabinet of the United States: state, treasury and war.

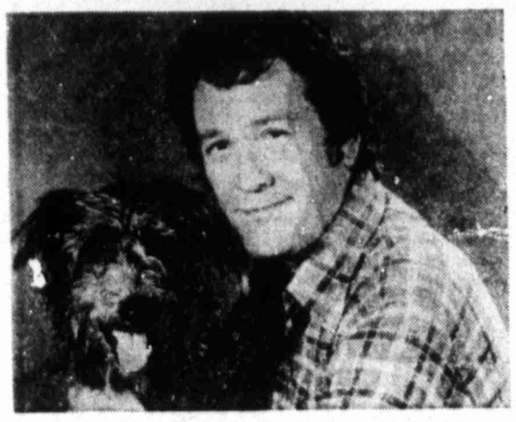
WHAT'S UP

A capsule view of tastes, interests and attitudes



Pet Care Week Chairman Earl Holliman and friend.

What's up in September?

September may be a dreary month for school children. But it is a great month for expectant fathers, working mothers, Argentinian teachers and pampered pets. Those are four of the groups honored with special holidays during the month.

Here are 15 special dates to add to the September calendar:

Sept. 3	Working Mother's Day
Sept. 5	Be Late For Something Day
Sept. 8	Yam Festival (Ghana)
Sept. 9	Admission Day (California)
Sept. 10	National Grandparents Day
Sept. 11	Day of the Teacher (Argentina)
Sept. 12	Defenders' Day (Maryland)
Sept. 16	Mexican Independence Day
Sept. 17	Citizenship Day, Expectant Father Day
Sept. 22	American Indian Day
Sept. 24-30	Responsible Pet Care Week
Sept. 24	Senior Citizens' Day
Sept. 28	Confucius' Birthday (China)

What's up in auto deaths?

The United States has one of the lowest auto fatality rates among western industrialized nations, says a new report from the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association. The U.S. rate stood at 3.3 deaths per thousand in 1977, a 40 percent reduction from one decade ago.

Australia	5.9
Belgium	12.6
Canada	5.6
France	10.1
Germany	8.4
Italy	7.8
Japan	8.0
Netherlands	6.9
Norway	4.4
Britain	4.5

What's up in postcards?

ELIZABETH ASHLEY

On the day President Kennedy was shot she was on the cover of Life. She was the hot new talent in town, a recent Tony winner, starring with Robert Redford in "Barefoot in the Park," which Neil Simon had written for her.

Now, 15 years later, Elizabeth Ashley is describing the twists and turns of the rocky road that became her career in an autobiography, "Actress: Postcards from the Road."

Among the candid details she discloses are her two marriages, the first early one to actor James Farentino (following Shelley Winters' advice that "Every girl should be married to an Italian once"), and the second stormy marriage to George Peppard.

Of her deterioration of her marriage to Peppard she says, "I watched the man I loved, one of the finest people I'd ever known, totally eaten by the so-called wisdom of the so-called wise men in the business...I saw the murder of a human spirit."

What's up in tennis?

Pele needs lessons.

Star gazing — not tennis — was the chief entertainment at the recent Robert F. Kennedy Pro-Celebrity Tennis Tournament. But some of the stars turned in creditable performances on the courts.

According to tennis pro Bob Peck, celebrities who showed the greatest promise were:

1. Actress Cathy Lee Crosby
2. Olympian Bruce Jenner
3. Comedian Alan King
4. Comedian Bill Cosby
5. Sportswear manufacturer Willy Bogner
6. Actor Parker Stevenson
7. Designer Oleg Cassini
8. George Stevens, director of the American Film Institute
9. Tournament organizer Ethel Kennedy
10. Writer Peter Stone

Among those who could use more tennis lessons were actresses Pam Grier and Penny Marshall, muscle man Arnold Schwarzenegger and soccer star Pele. For some reason, Pele kept trying to hit the tenis ball with his head instead of the racket.

KISS BATTLE EVIL — KISS makes up for television, when the rock and raunch band stars in NBC's "KISS Meets the Phantom of the Park." The $2 million movie will mark the first time a major band has starred in a TV film. Paul Stanley, left, and Gene Simmons, right, along with their two other KISS cohorts, battle an evil inventor (Anthony Zerbe, center) in this psychedelic bit of silliness, which will air appropriately on Halloween week. What's up in hamburgers?

Where can the world's best hamburger be found? National Public Radio came up with no fewer than 82 answers after putting that question to its listeners.

On the assumption that few people will travel all the way to Beaver Island, Mich., or Tunkhannock, Pa., for a hamburger, here are the winning eateries from major metropolitan areas:

Birmingham, Ala.: The Dairy Snack, Milo's.
Tucson, Ariz.: The Chuckwagon.
Los Angeles: Cassell's, Tommy's, Hampton's Kitchen.
New Haven, Conn.: Louis' Lunch.
Washington: Gallagher's Pub.
Fort Lauderdale, Fla.: Jack's Hamburger House.
New Orleans: Camilla Grill.
Cambridge, Mass.: Mr. Bartley's Burger Cottage.
Detroit: Checker Bar.
Ann Arbor, Mich.: Fleetwood Diner, Del-Rio Bar.
Minneapolis: Waldo's.
St. Paul, Minn.: Haberdashery, The Frontier, Gus's Diner.
Kansas City, Mo.: Blake's Lotaburger.
New York:Cedar Tavern, Julius, P.J. Clarke's, Jackson's Hole.
Cincinnati: Meihlenburgs.
Oklahoma City: Split-T.
Portland, Ore.:Yaw's.
Austin: Grove Drug.
Madison, Wis.: Bob and Gene's.

Of course, there is a killjoy in every crowd. In this case, it was the concerned vegetarian who wrote National Public Radio to say, "The best hamburger is no hamburger at all."

SEALS & CROFTS have set religion to a new rhythm in their music.

What's up in lyrics?

Not everyone realizes when Seals and Crofts sing "Summer Breeze" or "Diamond Girl" the songs are about, respectively, God and their wives.

"It's hard to balance a religious and family life with a career," says Dash Crofts, "especially in this business. But we've worked out a system, based on the fact that family life is the most important thing to us. That's what you have when it's all over."

The two Texans (transplanted to California) are followers of the Bahai faith. "Religion always scared me," says Dash, "the dogma, you know, 'this is the only way,' not to mention the confusion. Bahai pointed out the answers to me: why so many religions and what religion means.

"As a kid I was dragged off to many different churches — some had flowers, some couldn't; some had music, some didn't. Bahai says that there's one god, that all religion is from the same source, that all religions basically agree and that all men are one family. It answered a lot of questions."

And as the title of their new lp says, Seals and Crofts are "Takin' It Easy." And doing it their way."

JOHN TRAVOLTA

John Travolta may be the biggest thing to hit screen since sound, but when he goes home to visit his parents, Travolta still asks his mother at bedtime: "Tuck me in, Ma."

That may be strange behavior for a 24-year-old superstar, especially by Hollywood standards, but his folks say it comes naturally to their baby boy.

"He's still a kid in a so many ways, says his mother. Helen Travolta, who together with her husband, Sam, still lives in the same Englewood, N.J. home where they raised six kids (John is the youngest).

In the September issue of Good Housekeeping, she says, "When he comes home, I stock the refrigerator with hamburger, pies and frozen pizzas. He likes me to feed him right in that spot at that table (pointing to the dining room table) where he always used to eat and do his homework."

You can take the kid out of Englewood, but you can't take Englewood out of the kid.

BIRTHDAY ALMANAC

Compiled by the editors of The World Almanac

Sept. 10 — Arnold Palmer(1929-), the Pennsylvania-born golfer whose large and devoted following are known as "Arnie's Army." During his career, he has won four Masters tournaments and two British Opens.

Sept. 11 — D.H. Lawrence (1885-1930), the British novelist, poet, and short-story writer. His novels include the controversial "Lady Chatterley's Lover," "Sons and Lovers," and "Women in Love."

Sept. 12 — Jesse Owens (1913-), the Alabama-born track and field star who won four gold medals at the 1936 Berlin Olympics.

Sept. 13 — John J. Pershing (1860-1948), the Missouri-born military commander who headed the American Expeditionary Forces in World War I. In 1919, Congress made him General of the Armies, a rank previously held only by George Washington.

Sept. 14 — Margaret Sanger (1883-1966), the New York-born social reformer who pioneered the birth control movement in the United Sates.

Sept. 15 — William Howard Taft (1857-1930), the 27th President of the United States, 1909-13. In 1921, he was appointed Chief Justice of the United States by President Harding. He is the only man to have served as both president and Chief Justice.

Sept. 16 — Alien Funt (1914-), the Brooklyn-born television performer. He is the originator and host of the popular "Candid Camera" television program, and starred in and produced the film version, "What Do You Say to a Naked Lady?"

Sentencing Trends Push Jail Crowding To Limit

By MARK SHWARTZ
(c) Pacific News Service 1978

A new, hard-nosed judical approach to prison sentencing, especially in those states that have recently enacted the liberal reform of determinate sentences, has resulted in dangerously over-crowded, volatile prison conditions from California to Maine.

Ironically, the determinate sentencing laws passed by four states, which were intended to ease frustration and anxiety in prisons, already might be contributing to even worse conditions, according to penal specialists. And in the near future, according to corrections officials, the situation can be expected to reach catastrophic proportions as the impact of longer determinate sentences are felt in the ever-swelling prison populations.

California, Illinois, Indiana and Maine have implemented determinate, or fixed, sentencing laws. A determinate code will go into effect in Arizona on Oct. 1. And the federal government and other states are considering similar laws.

The purpose of the laws is to create a uniform, less arbitrary method of sentencing than was dealt out by indeterminate sentencing. For example, instead of handling down a sentance of one year for armed robbery, a judge might give a fixed sentence of four years.

But an unexpected result has been that public pressure has led judges to set longer sentences than convicts were averaging under the indeterminate laws. Thus, as more convicts in prison longer, the population will swell.

The determine sence, said Phil Guthrie, spokesman for the California Department of Corrections, "puts the heat right on the judge" instead of the parole board, which used to be responsible for deciding when a prisoner should be released. "There is very little sympathy for the prisoner in most parts of the country. Judges are being ousted in an unprecedented way because of court-watching (citizen groups) and all that."

David Petrocchi, a California Department of Corrections researcher, said that "one of the things that has always been an unknown factor in the effects of determinate sentencing is how judges will behave...A judge has so much discretion at his fingertips. If he increases his prison commitments from 8 percent to 10 percent, prison admissions go up 20 percent."

Another reason for the rising state prison population is that more judges are sending more defendants to prison instead of local jails, according to the Judicial Council of California. "Also, said a spokesman, "its's more attractive to plead guilty now that your sentence will be limited to 16 months or two years — minus good time."

California state courts sent more than 4,400 male felons to prison in the first half of this year, the highest six-month total in California history and a 22 percent increase over the same period in 1977. The total state male prison population jumped from 17,000 in January to nearly 18,200 today.

"The prison population is going up faster than we predicted," said Jerry Enomoto, California corrections director, "and this is primarily the result of a big increase in prison commitments by the courts. If this keeps up, we will face serious overcrowding and extensive double-celling in just a few months."

The only solution, Enomoto believes, is to allocate more money for new prison construction, something most states are decidedly unwilling to do.

Robert Colby, spokesman for the Illinois state prison system, which was rocked by violence this summer, said Illinois prisons are "already severely overcrowded. Because of the new sentencing law that went into effect on February 1," he said, "we do anticipate an increase in the number of prison commitments. Judges are giving more severe sentences."

He said the population of the state's 10 prisons, now estimated at 10,700, as increased 50 percent in the last two years.

"We're in the process of building two new medium-security institutions," Colby said, "but that won't be enough."

He pointed to the July 22 violent upheaval at the Pontiac prison that left three guards dead and three inmates injured. Although he said the prison was built to hold 1,200, there were over 2,000 prisoners there at the time of the incident.

"There are other reasons for overcrowded prisons," Colby said. "The economic condition has something to do with it. And there is no Vietnam — there isn't a war. Young people of crime-prone age are not getting killed."

The experience in Maine — the first state to institute determinate sentencing — reflects conditions in California and Illinois but on a much smaller scale.

"We have experienced a significant increase in the adult prison population," said Peter Tilton, assistant director of Maine's probation and parole division. "At our two main adult institutions, we've gone from not being overcrowded to overcrowded. But we're still trying to figure out just what the impact of the new sentencing law has been."

The population at the Maine State Prison increased from 350 to 500 in the last two years partly because the "mood of the times" has resulted in longer prison terms, Tilton said.

While some states have reduced the length of time an ex-convict must serve on parole, Maine has elimated parole and all forms of post-prison supervision.

Of the four states in which fixed sentencing has been if effect, only Indiana does not have an overcrowding problem.

Since the new sentencing code went into operation last October, the adult prison population has remained at about the same level, after an initial decrease, according to Tom Hanlon, administrative assistant for the Indiana Adult Authority or parole board.

One reason for the stable population could be Indiana'a liberal "good time" law that allows a prisoner to get a sentence cut in half for good behavior.

But the picture may not be so bright in Arizona, where a determinate sentencing law effect in October. The courts have ordered administrators to sharply reduce the convict population at the Arizona State Prison in Florence to avoid overcrowding As a result, the legislature has allocated about $30 million for planning and construction of new institutions. But even with that, a spokesman for the department of corrections in Phoenix expressed concern over whether the state "will be able to keep up with a constantly increasing prison population."

Congress also is considering a major change in federal sentencing guidelines under a controversial act that would totally revamp the federal criminal code.

Among other provisions, the bill would eliminate federal parole, establish a sentencing range for specific offences and create a sentencing commission.

"The Carter administration and the Justice Department are in favor of it," said Mike Quinlan, assistant to the U.S. Bureau of Prisons director. "All indications are that it will not pass the House this year, although it has passed the Senate."

Quinlan said a federal study has projected an initial increase in the federal prison population if the bill goes into effect.

"But our considered opinion is that a new sentencing commission would lower the sentencing guidelines to enable the prison population to decrease," he said.

Quinlan said that the 38 federal prisons now hold 29,000 convicts, an increase of about 6,000 since 1975.

Potomac 'Swim-In' Canceled By Rain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul W. Eastman, whose job it is to monitor pollution in the Potomac River, organized a planned Labor Day "swim-in" to show how clean the river had become.

But the effort was thwarted Friday when police said heavy rains in recent days and the threat of floating debris made the area of the river near Rock Creek — where the swim-in had been planned — too dangerous.

In recent years the Potomac has been called a running sewer. In 1975, then-President Lyndon B. Johnson pledged to make the river safe for swimming by 1975. Eastman claims that objective has been reached.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are able to organize your activities so they are more up-to-date and by so doing you have a greater amount of efficiency. Be careful not be become involved in confusing conditions.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Do something of a constructive nature to show appreciation to those who have done you favors in the past. Be clever.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Take steps to improve your appearance and then make a fine impression on those you are attracted to. Show more devotion to mate.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Good day to make your home more functional, which can save energy and money in the future. Avoid a troublemaker.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A fine day to complete a project you started long ago. Be alert of unexpected opportunities coming your way.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Find some way to improve any property you have and add to its value. Take no chances with your money at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Relieve yourself of a tension of long standing. Sidestep an opponent who could stand in your way of progress.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Attend to those tasks you have been leaving undone for a long time and gain the right benefits from them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get together with modern thinking individual and engage in recreations you mutually enjoy. Strive for increased happiness.

Brooke Affair Stirs Up Massachusetts Politics

By SID BLUMENTHAL
(c) Pacific News Service 1978

BOSTON, Mass. — A peculiar combination of marital peccadillos, TV talkshow salesmanship and public fervor over school busing and abortions may topple both the career of Sen. Edward Brooke and the political hegemony of Boston's 300-year-old Brahmin elite.

Until Brooke's recent acknowledgement that he had short-changed his ex-wife in their divorce settlement, the Republican senator held a virtually invincible position. As a result of his household crisis, however, Brooke's political standing has suffered severe damage.

Leaping into the breach as his main challenger was an attractive young "New Right" candidate, Avi Nelson. The son of a rabbi and a former radio talk show host, Nelson is a leading proponent of the city's anti-busing movement. Bolstered by the aid of national conservative mailing list wizard Richard Viguerie, he could eliminate Brooke's candidacy in the upcoming Republican Party primary.

A devotee of Ayn Rand's extreme conservative philosophy, he advocates the usual array of New Right positions: anti-abortion, anti-Equal Rights Amendment, anti-affirmative action, anti-government. Nelson has twice sought the Republican nomination for the U.S. House of Representatives, but was defeated both times by more liberal opponents, who went on to lose.

Nelson's break came with the rise of the anti-busing movement and a local radio talk show on which he trumpeted the movement's cause. He soon became a featured speaker at anti-busing rallies, was given a TV talk show and a column in the Boston Herald American.

Nelson has tempered his tone as he wades deeper into the senatorial contest. Now he says he will refuse to discuss Brooke's private woes in a public forum, thereby cleverly making them an unspoken issue.

Yet Nelson himself has several liabilities that may haunt him in the campaign. First is an all-expenses paid trip he made to South Korea, courtesy of a Korean government agency controlled by the KCIA.

Nelson's second liability may be his wife, who has rather peculiar ideas of her own about how to approach social issues. As a possible solution to the abortion conundrum, she proposed taking the fetuses from women desiring abortions and inserting them into women unable to conceive.

Despite the idiosyncracies of his own domestic life, Nelson is being heavily financed and promoted by the New Right, which hopes to increase its standing within the Republican Party by knocking off Republican moderates.

The Republicans recently gave the state gubernatorial nomination to Edward F. King, a self-made entrepreneur and something of a New Rightist himself. His intra-party rival is Francis Hatch, a state legislator and proper GOP Brahmin whose wife is heiress to the Merck drug fortune.

The nomination of King and the ascendency of Nelson are signs that the old Yankee hold on the GOP in Massachusetts — the party of Henry Cabot Lodge and Leverett Saltonstall — may be drastically loosening.

The attempt by the New Right to take over the Massachusetts Republican Party may be its most audacious move nationally. Though the GOP slid into seemingly permanent minority status some years ago, it has maintained its mannered Yankee style.

Sen. Brooke is more than the state's most prominent Republican office holder. He is the contemporary personification of the 19th Century relationship of Brahmins with blacks in Boston.

Black leadership until the New Deal was overwhelmingly Republican. Until 1960 blacks constituted only 3 percent of Boston's population. The old established black families of Boston predate the first wave of Irish immigrants. To them, the Irish are new arrivals. A special relationship based on the Yankee's sense of noblesse oblige developed between the blacks and the Brahmin aristocracy, and was partly expressed through the Republican Party.

In its challenge to Brooke, the New Right has assaulted the traditional basis of the Massachusetts GOP and threatened to disrupt the established order within the state Republican Party as a part of its national strategy.

On the Democratic side, the race for the opportunity to face Brooke is intense. Before the Brooke divorce scandal the field was sparse. One of the leading contenders, in fact, was an avowed lesbian, state legislator Elaine Noble, who played her politics within traditional bounds at the State House, and therefore was supported by the Beacon Hill leadership.

Regardless of which Democrat wins the nomination, Brooke will face a much stronger opponent than ever before. Although Massachusetts black leaders have vowed their unending allegiance to Brooke, they constitute a small constituency statewide.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR SEP. 2, 1978

PHYSICAL
Criticals: 9, 20, 32, 43, 55, 66 ..... Easily hurt
Highs: 10-19, 33-42, 56-65 ..... High powered day
Lows: 1-8, 21-31, 44-54, 67-75 ..... Today you tire easily

EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 7, 21, 35, 49, 63, 77 ..... Can't take teasing
Highs: 8-20, 36-48, 64-76 ..... Revamp your social life

INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 4, 21, 37, 54, 70, 87 ..... Poor decisions, take care
Highs: 1-3, 22-36, 55-69, 88-95 ..... Constructive idea day
Lows: 5-20, 38-53, 71-86 ..... Difficult to reason

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Plants Alone Need Extra Care

By ELVIN McDONALD

Our bags are packed, plane tickets and passports are in order. Mitzi Beagle has gone to a kennel in the country and the pussycats, Holly and Ivy, have gone to visit a friend. For the first time in years all of us will be away for a month or more — excepting my 300 house plants.

Usually when I travel one or more of my three teen-aged children is around to take care of the pets and plants but now Mark, the 18-year-old, has left for automobile mechanics school in Kansas City and Steven, 17, earned enough money earlier in the summer to go exploring in Europe with a friend. Jeannene, who is 14, will accompany me and my partner, Bill Mulligan, on a photography trip that will take us to see gardens and gardeners in England, France and Austria; she'll "pay" for her passage by soaking up French culture and language, the one subject with which she has had real difficulty in school.

If you too are about to depart on summer holiday or on an extended business trip, here are some suggestions for how to prepare your plants, in particular those growing in containers indoors or outdoors:

— Keeping the soil sufficiently moist is the most critical problem for container gardens. If you have pots or hanging baskets that consistently require watering every day or two in order to keep the leaves from wilting, transplant to larger containers with more soil before you leave, but try not to disturb the root system.

— Another way to retain moisture in small pots is to group several in one large container; pack wet sphagnum peat moss or unmilled sphagnum moss between, right up to the rims. You can reduce the rate of soil moisture evaporation from hanging containers by placing them on or near the ground outdoors in a shaded, moist spot in the garden or on a porch, with protection from hot, drying winds.

— The way I handle large potted plants indoors is to saturate the soil with water, then enclose the entire container in a heavy-duty plastic bag with the top tied around the trunk. I find this works better tha covering the plant itself with plastic.

— Indoors you can reduce the rate of moisture transpiration from plants that are growing in a fluorescent light garden by the use of an automatic timer set to burn the lights eight or nine hours out of every 24 instead of the usual 15 or 16.

— If all windows and doors of your house or apartment will be closed during your absence, without air-conditioning, heat buildup and lack of fresh air may foster disease problems. Plants with watery stems or leaves, in particular African violets, wax begonias and peperomias, are especially susceptible, as are those fresh-air fiends, the geraniums. Before you leave, remove all spent leaves and fully open or spent flowers. Space out all plants so that the foliage of one does not touch that of any others.

— If you are in the process of training a house plant such as coleus or flowering maple as a tree or standard, pinch out all growing tips of the branches, or even prune them back by one-third. Such treatment all at once may seem severe but by the time you return new growth should be in fine form.

Having taken these preparatory steps, I have also arranged for a gardening friend to come in every five to seven days to check on my plants. At the moment I don't think any bugs are on my plants but, from previous experience, I know that red spider-mites in particlar have a way of gaining a stronghold in stale air. If my plant sitter spots them at work, she knows to shower the leaves, top and bottom, with water, and, when the plant drains and dries, to spray with a miticide (Kelthane, for example), which I've left already properly mixed in a mister.

Even if you're not taking a long vacation right now, August is an ideal time to visit botanical gardens, nurseries and specialty growers. If, for example, you're in the vicinity of Greenwood, S.C., be sure to see the flowerseed trial grounds at the George W. Park Seed Compay; or, at Doylestown, Pa., there's Burpee's famous Fordhook Farms, not to mention Star Roses in nearby West Grove and Longwood Gardens at Kennett Square, both also in Pennsylvania.

For stay-at-homes, now is an ideal time to root cuttings of favorite geraniums, begonias, impatiens, all kinds of gesneriads — in fact, most house plants. If you have an outdoor garden, sow seeds of hybrid pansies and violas; select a cool, moist, mostly shaded site.

HOUSE CALL

Q. I am very proud of my new Ficus cyathistipula, but a sticky sap is exuding from the new growth on the tender shoots and leaves. There are tiny crustaceous (soft inside) bugs around the sticky parts. What's wrong?

A. Your ficus has an attack of brown scale which you can control by spraying with a house-plant pesticide (pyrethrin or malathion will do the trick). Hand removal is another means of control, but one that requires a lot of patience; dip a cotton swab in denatured alcohol and use this to rub away every scale you can see; repeat every few days. Incidentally, your ornamental fig tree, Ficus cyathistipula (sigh-uh-this-tip-PEW-luh), is beginning to come into widespread distribution. It makes a handsome plant and offers a welcome change from the more common weeping fig, Ficus benjamina.

Q. What causes the buds on my tuberous begonias to drop off before opening?

A. Probably too much heat, especially at nighttime, possibly in combination with insufficient moisture in the atmosphere. Soil kept too wet, too dry, or overfertilized could also be the culprit.

Airline's Employees Back Takeover Bid

MIAMI (AP) — Takeover threats often prompt skittish employees to begin calculating unemployment benefits or to call that once-hated competitor in search of a job. But many employees of embattled National Airlines are rooting against their own company.

"I think in most cases, a merger would be an improvement," said John Burch, a National mechanic who also is an official of the International Association of Machinists. "The stagnation in this company has been so bad. The management just doesn't seem to give a damn (about employees)."

National officials deny that the firm is anti-labor, but labor-management relations within the company have been strained for some time. There have been 11 strikes in the past 20 years, including a bitter four-month walkout by flight attendants in the fall of 1975 and a 108-day strike by machinists about a year earlier.

The machinists begin new negotiations with National next month. Flight attendants have been working without a contract for a year.

Now, Texas International Airlines and Pan American World Airways are vying for control of the Miami-based carrier and the Civil Aeronautics Board has given the two suitors permission to buy as much as 25 percent each of National's stock.

And while many National employees say almost any merger would be likely to make life easier for them, most seem to prefer a deal with Texas International, an aggressive Houston-based airline that is one-fifth National's size.

"I'd like to see us go with Texas International," said Eileen Schuyler, a National flight attendant for 10 years. "I think we could use a change of managements. We have talked with some of their flight attendants and it seems they have more of an open management than we do."

Miss Schuyler, like several other National employees interviewed, did express some concern about a possible takeover by Pan Am. The reluctance involves questions of seniority and whether Pan Am would retain National's Miami operations or move the facilities to New York.

"I'm not too crazy about Pan Am because their people would have been there awhile and it would push us back in seniority," she said. "But I don't think anybody's particularly worried about losing jobs with a Pan Am merger because we're not losing routes."

Pan Am officials have maintained that no jobs would be lost, but National pilots were concerned nevertheless.

"Pan Am's junior pilot was hired in 1967 or 1968; anyone hired after that has been furloughed," said Bob Pech, a 26-year veteran who now flies DC-10s for National. "Anybody hired by National after 1967 is going to have to wonder what's in store for him."

Pech said he believed it was too early for National employees to be choosing sides in the takeover battle, which won't continue past the 25 percent point until the CAB rules on the whole affair, probably early next year.

But many other employees already have taken sides — and very few were in favor of the status quo. One baggage handler said he preferred Pan Am because of its larger size. A ticket clerk said most of his friends preferred Texas International for reasons of seniority.

"Everybody's in favor of some kind of change," said Miss Schulyer, "as long as it's not Northwest (Airlines, which recently concluded a long strike by its pilots). They're about the only ones that could be worse for us."

Cost Of Improvements Eased With Home Loan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Are neighborhood children asking for pieces of your roof to sift sand? Or perhaps the neighbors refer to your home as the leaning tower of America?

Well, it may not be that bad but with the approach of fall many Americans will be turning their thoughts to home improvement in preparation for the cooling weather.

These loans are available for up to $15,000 from banks and qualified lenders. And if you borrow less than $7,500 it usually will be a signature loan with no second trust on your home.

The money can be used for any improvements that will make your house more liveable and useful, including the replacement of built-in kitchen appliances.

The loans can be used for energy conservation improvements and solar systems also.

However, the money cannot be used for luxuries such as swimming pools and outdoor fireplaces.

There are just three requirements: You must own the property or have a long-term lease, you must have a satisfactory credit rating and you must have enough income to repay the loan.

Turning to the repairs themselves, you can save some money by doing it yourself, if you are handy, but don't scrimp on materials.

If you plan to use a contractor, get suggestions from people you know first. You should also check out potential contractors with the Chamber of Commerce, Better Business Bureau and the local consumer protection office.

Get bids from three contractors if you can, and if they vary widely, find out why.

Read any contract carefully making sure it spells out what is to be done, the type of materials to be used and the cost of the job. It should also give an idea of how long the work will take.

To help, the Department of Housing and Urban Development has prepared a pamphlet discussing financing home improvements, suggesting how to do some work yourself and how to get the work done without being ripped off.

The pamphlet is availabe without charge by writing the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 666F, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

Potato With More Protein Available

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department reports that a new variety of potato is becoming available, offering more nutrition.

It's the Butte potato, which department experts say contains 50 percent more vitamin C and 15 to 20 percent more protein than the current most popular potato variety, the Russet Burbank.

The Butte was developed by USDA plant geneticist Joseph J. Pavek and has excellent cooking qualities, officials said.

The potato was introduced last spring in Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

Robot 'Invasion' Should Benefit Humans, According To Scientist

By BARBARA McDOWELL

The robots are coming. They will soon invade our factories, offices and homes. That is, if they haven't done so already.

But there is no cause for alarm. Robots are not out to take over the world. They will just make life easier for us humans.

Those are the views of Robert Malone, a gray-bearded industrial designer who has studied and built robots since childhood. One of his earliest creations was a robotic Frankenstein's monster that lighted up and "scared the bejeezus out of everyone," he recalls.

According to Malone, robots have endured more than their share of "bad press" since the publication in 1817 of Mary Shelley's "Frankenstein," the first work of fiction featuring a robot-like character. The term "robot" was first used in a 1921 Czech play about factory machines turning on their human masters.

Power-hungry robots have since been the villains of a long string of films beginning with Fritz Lang's "Metropolis" (1926) and extending through Stanley Kubrick's "2001" (1967).

But our success in living with increasingly complex machines has led us to reconsider our attitudes toward robots, notes Malone in his recently published "The Robot Book."

He sees proof of this "healthier attitude" in the popularity of R2-D2 and C-3PO, the robot characters in "Star Wars." "We have gone from people being the heroes to robots — and people — being the heroes," he claims.

Unlike C-3PO, however, real robots do not resemble humans in shining armor. Instead, function determines form. "We have robots that look like giant praying mantises, grasshoppers and reptiles," Malone laughs.

Nor do robots think like humans. In fact, declares Malone, their computer brains do not really think at all.

"The step-by-step logic the electronic brain uses does not approach the complexity — or the flexibility — of the logic used by the human brain," he notes reassuringly. "We are nowhere near designing a machine that approaches our own capabilities."

But robots are already ahead of us in some areas, such as consistency, strength, calculating speed and ability to withstand hostile environments.

Malone points out that the Mars Viking lander, the most sophisticated robot yet created, proved to be "the equivalent of five unimaginative but highly efficient chemists." And it didn't need the space or life-support systems required by human astronauts.

Robots will be used more and more frequently to free people from exhausting and dehumanizing work, such as auto assembly lines, says Malone.

"Robots are not superb craftsmen, but they are bloody consistent," he comments. "I'd rather have a car built by a robot than by a bunch of guys on Friday afternoon who want to go home and drink beer."

Within 10 years, says Malone, many of us will have robots in our homes.

The first to arrive may be home entertainment robots that will consolidate and coordinate the functions of our televisions, radios and stereo systems.

Instead of rummaging for the newspaper's TV listing or sifting through a towering stack of records, says Malone, we will simply tell the robot our entertainment preferences for the evening.

Let's say we're in a mood for jazz. The robot will present us with a long list of suggestions, possibly including a vintage Duke Ellington tape from our listening library, a Benny Goodman concert telecast live from Buenos Aires and a video tape of the 1941 film, "The Birth of the Blues." (By then, it will be commonplace to record TV shows for later viewing and to tune in hundreds of programs from all corners of the world, says Malone.)

If we decide to work on our own clarinet technique, we can request a programmed lesson from the same robot. If we opt instead for a chess match, the robot will give us a challenging game geared to our proficiency level.

Malone predicts that the second robot to appear in our homes will be a kitchen unit equipped to do everything from preparing the shopping list to disposing of the wilted lettuce.

The massive robot will combine all our existing kitchen appliances into one system. "But it's not going to walk around the kitchen stirring the taffy like Grandma used to," Malone cautions.

Malone envisions that the robot will be able to prepare one of as many as 28 different menus in 10 to 15 seconds. A "French sophisticated" model may even be available to prepare gourment cuisine and chill the wine to the proper temperature.

Best of all, this robot will do the dishes when dinner is over.

Next may come an all-weather robot capable of mowing the lawn in spring and summer, raking the leaves in fall and shoveling snow in winter.

And after that, Malone continues, we may have robot chauffeurs akin to the automatic pilots in airplanes. "Plug the robot into your car, punch out a destination and it will take you there," he explains.

Some robots may even tend to our emotional needs. In fact, a robot psycharist has already been developed at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"This robot," explains Malone, "will talk to you for two, three, four hours and never put you down." It is programmed to respond to certain key words; if, for example, the word "mother" is mentioned, the robot may automatically respond with, "Tell me more about your mother."

At MIT, says Malone, even programmers who understood the robot psychiatrist's simple workings poured out their hearts to it for hours on end.

"Robots may never be able to think," Malone concludes. "But who cares? Maybe they're just what people need."

Proposed Panama Canal Project Worries Solon

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressman and three members of the House Armed Services Committee staff plan to investigate proposed new construction in the Panama Canal Zone.

Declaring that any new spending by the U.S. government there is "just throwing good money after bad," Rep. Bill Dickinson, R-Ala., said he and the committee staff members will visit the Canal Zone and Puerto Rico to look into a budget change proposed by the Office of Management and Budget.

The proposal calls for $44 million for the first phase of new military construction for the Canal Zone. According to the congressman's office, the cost of later phases could exceed $100 million.

The Senate last Spring approved the twin treaties by which the United States will gradually turn control of the Panama Canal over to that country by the year 2000. In the interim, the United States plans to expand and upgrade a number of military facilities in the Canal Zone for its own use and the future use of Panama.

"I cannot understand why we are considering building over $100 million in new military construction in the Canal Zone when we know we are going to give it away," Dickinson said Friday in a prepared statement.

"Since we are giving up the canal, every penny we put into that place is just throwing good money after bad," he added.

Dickinson said his investigative group will also visit the Roosevelt Roads Naval complex in Puerto Rico to study the planned spending of $18 million for construction there.

KENNEDY TO RUSSIA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., a leading advocate of a national health insurance plan, will attend an international health conference in the Soviet Union next week. The senator's office announced Friday that Kennedy will attend the First International Conference on Primary Health Care in Alma Alta from Tuesday to Thursday. The trip is being paid for by the Senate's health and scientific research subcommittee, of which Kennedy is chairman.

Cassidy Sues Network

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Teen idol Shaun Cassidy, star of ABC-TV's "The Hardy Boys," has filed a $6 million suit against Universal Studios over merchandising rights.

CASSIDY

The suit, filed Thursday in Los Angeles Superior Court, contends that Universal's claim that it has all rights to the use of Cassidy's name and likeness has damaged his ability to license them elsewhere.

Cassidy also claims that he has been under an oral agreement with Universal only for his services in the television series.

The suit asked the court to determine that Cassidy is not bound by contract to "The Hardy Boys" and is free to leave when he wants.

Trek To Dramatize Plea

DOWNINGTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A quadriplegic has embarked for Harrisburg on a motorized wheelchair to dramatize a plea to provide special transportation for the handicapped.

Edward B. Davenport left Norristown Thursday morning, and got as far as Downingtown, about 25 miles, before the batteries of his electric wheelchair went dead. He spent the night here, expecting to reach Harrisburg, about 90 miles from his home, early next week.

Handicapped Pennsylvanians and their supporters are trying to get legislation that would require public transit firms to replace conventional buses with a new vehicle called a Transbus, which is equipped to meet the needs of the handicapped.

Swimmers Race 30-Miles

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A 63-year-old marathon swimmer won a 30-mile race by swimming across Lake Erie and back 10 minutes faster than his 25-year-old opponent.

"I'm just trying to get my brains unrattled because I'm very tired and very groggy," said Steve Wozniak after he beat Mike Caffrey. "We did it in about 10 hours, which is a very good time."

Caffrey, a University of Buffalo law student, and Wozniak waded into the lake at the foot of Michigan Avenue and began splashing toward Crystal Beach, Ontario.

JOPLIN — CROCE — PRESLEY — MORRISON

CAYWOOD MOORE AS JOPLIN — HAZERBROUCK AS CROCE — BOLT AS PRESLEY — RHYNE AS PRESLEY — O'CONNELL AS MORRISON

Rock 'Look-Alikes' Unwrapped

ATLANTA (AP) — Five would-be rock stars showed their new faces in public for the first time Friday. Well, the faces aren't exactly new — in fact they're supposed to be surgical copies of some of the most famous faces of rock 'n' roll.

Erin Rhyne, dressed in black leather, her hair shorn, dyed and greased, picked Elvis Presley. So did her partner Jesse Bolt.

The tab for all five operations was picked up by promoter Danny O'Day, who is hoping to recoup what he says is nearly $1 million in expenses with a concert tour featuring the new faces he affectionately calls his "clones."

Duke O'Connell, 30, plays Jim Morrison, lead singer of The Doors until his death in 1971. Marc Hazebrouck, 28, needed just a couple of stitches below his lip to become a ringer for singer Jim Croce, who died in 1973.

But Mona Caywood Moore, 27, didn't look at all like blues belter Janis Joplin, who died in 1970. Her surgery is only half finished, and she still doesn't bear much resemblance.

"She was so close vocally I couldn't refuse her," O'Day said.

O'Day will not disclose the doctor, the hospital or the fee for the surgery, which he says was performed in Miami on Aug. 19.

The bandages came off Friday, and the performers revealed their new look on NBC's "America Alive" program, broadcast from the warehouse-like auditorium where they will perform twice a night for 17 days at the Southeastern Fair.

President Stops Funding For Navy's Quickship

By TOM TIEDE

LEXINGTON PARK, Md.(NEA) — It seemed like a good idea at the time. Early in the 1960s, when strategists considered the future of the United States Navy, the conclusion was that the ponderous, vulnerable boats of tradition would in a missile age have to give way to a new generation of dexterous quickships.

TOM TIEDE

And so plans for redirection were made. President Lyndon Johnson was so fascinated with the idea that he personally approved construction of the first experimental model of the new generation: an imaginative "wave walking" craft designed to streak along the top of the seas at the speed of an automobile.

The model worked well. So well that a pair of larger reproductions were built, and, since 1972, have been undergoing tests and evaluation at a naval air station here on the Chesapeake Bay. Last year one of the 100-ton trial vessels reached a speed in excess of 90 knots on the bay — 103 mph.

"WAVE WALKING" — After 17 years of research and $352 million in outlays, the Navy's "wave walking" quickship may be doomed. President Carter thinks the craft is interesting but unnecessary, so he has dropped it from next year's budget. (NEA Photo)

But despite success in theory and practice, times may be changing for the concept of the quickship. After 17 years of research, and $352 million in outlays, President Carter has dropped further consideration of the craft from next year's budget. He says the quickship is interesting, but unnecessary.

The president's decision is being quietly condemned in the Navy. Capt. T. M. Barry, project officer for the high speed experiments, says he's so upset that he won't speak for the record. One admiral who does comment, anonymously, says Carter's decision is the "worst since he canceled the B-1 bomber."

The Navy's anger is all the more heated for Carter's timing. Blueprints have nearly been completed for the ultimate test of the quickship: the building and launching of a 3,000 ton, 100 mph frigate. This would be the true prototype of the new generation boats, and researchers are anxious to get it into water.

Planners say the frigate deserves a chance to show what it could do for the Navy. And, they add, it could do a great deal. It could outrun any enemy vessel, for instance, or any enemy torpedo. Noting that it now takes the fastest ship five days to reach Europe, advocates say the frigate could do it easily in two.

These speed descriptions are not speculation. The models already tested here have proven it can be done. The newest model, formally called a "Surface Effect Ship," can go from dead still to 50 mph in three or four minutes. And that, says one officer, "would have been quite nice at, say, Pearl Harbor."

The speeds can be reached because the SES ships ski over rather than plow through the water. They are not hovercraft (because their "skis" do not entirely leave the surface), but they do ride on pockets of air. The air is forced under the boats by fans. The ships then move by water-jets or large propellers.

The Navy believes the potential of the quickships is boundless. Project Chief Barry says they could haul troops, carry cargo, or fight: "Their real worth would be the ability to get quickly into and out of danger." He thinks they would make exceptional anti-submarine weapons, or fine aircraft carriers.

There is, however, another side to this optimism. For one thing, according to the White House, the high speed of the SES is still not enough to outrun a missile. Then too, there is no proof that a sufficiently large quickship could maintain extraordinary speed for thousands of miles in combat conditions.

Also, Carter's defense specialists worry about the apparent fragility of the SES. For example, the models are fitted with thin fiberglass seals fore and aft. The seals help keep the air bubble housed, and are crucial to the ship's operation, yet well aimed rifle fire would be enough to tear them apart.

Most importantly, could the SES operate on the high seas? So far the quickship models have been confined to bay waters, and seldom more than six-foot waves. Even some project engineers wonder whether the catamaran vessels would be able to retain their air pockets during a tempestuous ocean storm.

All in all, the White House believes the SES is simply an unaffordable risk. The Navy wants $450 million to build the prototype frigate, and probably more money after that for years of testing. In addition, extra millions would likely be needed to create and evaluate new weapons for the quickship.

But the president doesn't have the final word on the matter. The Navy has lobbied supporters in Congress, and the armed services committees of both houses are now in favor of retaining the SES program. So there is still hope, and Project Chief Barry says his staff is sitting atop two decades of data, "waiting."

Meantime there is word from the Kremlin of that nation's continuing interest in a quickship. The Soviet version is said to be amphibious, as well as swift. "I wish them well," says one U.S. naval strategist, "because if they start using warships that go 100 mph, then we will damn well do it also."

Safety Belts Could Save Lives On Road

CHICAGO (AP) — If all highway travelers during the long Labor Day weekend would use safety belts, 100 or more lives could be saved, safety specialists say.

Millions of Americans are expected to be on the road during the year's final warm-weather holiday, and the National Safety Council said between 470 and 570 of them could lose their lives.

That's based on the assumption that a lot of drivers and passengers, as usual, won't buckle up.

But, said Safety Council President Vincent L. Tofany, "if all motorists and their passengers wear their safety belts during the holiday weekend, 100 to 120 of those lives could be saved."

During a three-day, non-holiday period at this time of the year, 430 traffic deaths could be epected, the safety council said.

Last year, there were 469 Labor Day weekend highway fatalities.

Older Workers Prove Capabilities Again

By LOU COTTIN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Many employees will no longer be forced to retire at age 65 thanks to the new law raising the mandatory retirement age for most jobs to 70.

Businesses will reluctantly adjust to the change. Employers will be permitted to stop contributing to older workers' pension plans during those last five years on the job. Pension plays managed by trade unions may also make age 65 the cut-off date for collecting workers' pensions from employers.

Retired people who have not yet reached age 70 have two options: They can continue their retirement or they can go looking for jobs.

In some cases, sheer boredom will spark the desire to return to work.

In others, the need for more money will be the deciding factor. Housing and medical costs, taxes and other living expenses continue to go up.

For those of us with money to carry on, retirement is, at best, a mixed blessing. Without money, it's no blessing at all. For many in both groups, a part-time job might be the solution.

But finding a job after age 65 will not be easy. Only those with special skills or talents will easily get back on a company payroll.

The average worker won't make it. Employers have not yet become accustomed to the new retirement age.

That means we may be forced to register for some kind of retraining program.

Administrators of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) have a budget of $12.1 billion for aiding the unemployed and underemployed. Add to that sum the $340 million earmarked for senior citizens under Title IX of the Older Americans Act.

There's no question that a 65-year-old can be retrained. Money is available to do it. And the facts prove it can be done.

What will be needed first is a list of employers throughout the nation who can use part-time help profitably.

But a change in attitude will be necessary to get these employers to hire workers over 65. American business is locked into the idea that 65 is old. We will need to prove that a 65-year-old can be productive.

Fortunately, such proof is available. There are successful firms that keep employees on the job without regard to age. Some even hire people over 65.

Take, for example, Bankers Life and Casualty Company. At age 80, John D. MacArthur, who founded the company 40 years ago, remains active as chairman of its board.

Bankers Life has about $1 billion in assets and $4 billion of life insurance in force. The company employes 12,000 people.

John Maguire, director of corporate service at Bankers Life, and Richard Whalen, its assisant director of personnel, reported on the company's employment policies at a hearing of Rep. Claude Pepper's Special Committee on Aging. Here are some statements from their report:

— "Hiring people over 65 has been a good policy for us."

— "We are tough about requiring a good day's work. We expect a good day's work from every employee in every job."

— "Based on our experiences, older people are loyal and reliable. They come to work on time. Most have virtually perfect attendance records."

They completed their testimony with these words: "Basically, this is the approach we look for. Can the man or woman do the job? That is the only criterion for continued employment."

Those of us between the ages of 65 and 70 can look back over many years of top-grade performances in our jobs. We need to believe we still can make a contribution.

Let's not go applying for jobs with hats in hand. Let's not go with heads bowed. We aren't beggars. Our records of years of work attest to our honesty, dependability and understanding of how serious employees perform.

We are the men and women who brought the nation back to prosperity after the Depression. Today's business profits are the results of our efforts.

We are going to prove ourselves again. Those of us who go back to work at age 65 will give five years of valuable work to our employers.

We have, after all, an ulterior motive. We will prove by our performance that retirement at any fixed age is a social and business mistake.

Highland Hospital Adopts Costs Plan

Highland Hospital of Lubbock has announced adoption of a resolution joining the state and national attack on rising health care costs.

"We have been working diligently for a long time to hold down the cost of hospital care," said Jerry A. Howard, hospital administrator. "This resolution indicates our strong desire to reassure our current operating and capital budget to determine which expenditures can be reduced without sacrificing the quality of care."

The hospital industry's program to control costs is known as the Texas Voluntary Effort. This is part of a national effort which commits hospitals to reduce the national rate of cost increase by two percent a year for two years.

Family Getting Kick From Raising Mules

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — For three generations, one Tennessee family has been getting a kick out of showing a mechanized world that there's money to be made in the mule business.

"Hub" Reese, his brother Dick and their sons operate a feed and farm-supply business at Gallatin along with the Reese Brothers Horse and Mule Co. at nearby Lafayette.

From their show ring at Lafayette and from auctions at other cities, they sell about 4,000 mules a year, which ranks them among the nation's largest mule traders.

Hub, 70, says he's been in the business as long as he can remember.

In a telephone interview from the Kentucky State Fair at Lexington, where he was showing 10 mules, Hub said the animal's reputation for orneriness has been exaggerated.

"I prefer them to horses," he said. "Mules have more sense than a horse, and they work harder. They won't run over anything and hurt themselves; a horse will. They won't eat too much and hurt themselves; a horse will. And once they learn something, they've got it."

Mules aren't as numerous now as they once were because of inroads made by farm tractors. But buyers stampede to the family's mule auctions nevertheless.

"In the summer, we sell a lot of pack mules to Park Service outfitters at the Grand Canyon. We generally get our pack mules in the hills of East Kentucky. They're smaller, lighter-boned, and faster than the normal farm mule. And they're sure-footed, something you need for touring the Grand Canyon's narrow trails and steep walls.

"We start selling heavy draft mules in the winter, after Tennessee farmers quit working their fields. Our biggest buyers for those animals are the Amish people from Pennsylvania who don't use tractors."

Reese says pack-mule prices run from $150 to $300. "A good, matched set of draft mules will cost you around $5,000 — about the same as a team of registered work horses. And a run-of-the-mill set of draft mules sells for about $2,500 to $3,000."

Mules, the hybrid offspring of a donkey and a horse, have been around since the Trojan War. George Washington was one of the nation's first mule-raisers and biographers say the Marquis de Lafayette presented him with a matched set from Malta to upgrade his breeding stock.

Their use became especially popular in the South where farms often were small and fields were gouged out of mountainsides too steep for anything but the surest-footed of animals.

While mules remain popular around farms and lumber camps, and as high-priced novelties for collectors, they're being drafted into new jobs elsewhere.

"A buyer told me a couple of weeks ago that mules are being used in pari-mutuel racing and for cattle herding out West," Reese said.

Readjustment Problems Awaited Stratton

The passenger section was in bedlam. Yells, cheers, magazines, pillows, paper flew through the compartment.

They were free.

So began Richard Stratton's renaissance. First hours of reunion and emotion, dreamlike in some ways, blended into days of reality, and fatigue. He was very tired, like the rest of them, drained by tension and more than six continuous years of anxiety. Hanoi was so far away now, yet always close. Too close. A jingle of keys on an orderly's belt, or soft footsteps by his door in the middle of the night, brought him bolt-upright in bed, terror-stricken and soaked instantly with sweat. There were medical problems: an enlarged prostate gland, a tendency to go overweight rapidly, bone deterioration in his jaws, a glucose problem, unexpected bouts of euphoria and hyperactivity, and an inability to sleep well at night.

He had also suffered loss of his near vision, a result of the normal aging process — he was now 41 — and the inadequate prison diet. The military had anticipated these kinds of problems.

Days moved into weeks and the buzz continued: medical tests, dental drills, blood tests, urine samples, stool tests, intelligence sessions; it never ended. Thank God for Alice. Always, there was Alice, on the telephone or visiting him at the hospital; she carried news, mail, gossip, papers, and love.

Finally he was allowed to go home. The doctors gave him an hour, plus travel time. Alice was driving and the children were in back, just a little self-conscious.

There were some attempts at small talk but things got quiet. He turned around and spoke to them. His face was gentle.

"I want to explain something to you if I can," he said. "It is going to be difficult for you, I know, but you must realize that your mother is my girl friend and my wife as well as your mother. I am going to spend as much time with you as I can, but I'm also going to have private time with Mother, too, and you are probaably going to feel left out at times.

"I understand that and I appreciate it, and when you feel that way, let's talk about it, and if we keep talking about it, I am sure we can work it out."

Alice squeezed his hand and smiled.

There is in the odyssey of Richard and Alice Stratton an arguable irony. Between 1965 and 1973 — and a little before and a little after — many Americans renounced, sometimes with violence, such values from previous generations as unswerving faith in government and law, love of God or faith in religion, filial respect, self-reliance, emotional temperance, and an intangible capacity to persevere against adversity. But it was precisely these qualities, coupled with their own basic fibers, that succored the Strattons.

"You see it in any situation where tragedy can pull a family together or pull it apart," Richard Stratton comments now. "Somehow people have to cope, and what enables them to cope? I think about people under stress, whatever induces that stress: the Vietnam prison situation was a dramatic thing; it received a lot of publicity, but our sources of strength, I think, were still the same. I am talking about faith in something: faith in God, faith in your family, faith in your country. Anyone who has strong faith in something has a greater survivability quotient. If there is one essence to survival, a common thread, it is simply this: you have to want it."

Survey Says Americans Take Few Sedatives For Problems

By WILLIAM J. CROMIE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Americans don't simply take more and more tranquilizers and other prescription drugs to cope with the stresses of modern living.

"The majority of men and women, even those who are quite distressed psychologically and have actual medical problems, do not use drugs of any kind," says E.H. Uhlenhuth, a University of Chicago psychiatrist.

Uhlenhuth and scientists from other universities have conducted a series of collaborative studies on prescription use for the National Institute of Mental Health.

They are surprised at the low levels of use of minor and major tranquilizers, sedatives, anti-depressants, sleeping pills and other so-called psychotherapeutic drugs.

Seventy-five percent of men who reported more than five mental and physical health problems used no psychotherapeutic drugs during the year preceding a national survey. For women, the figure was 65 percent.

Women see their doctors more and take more prescription drugs than men, but men make up the difference with alcohol.

"If you ask, 'do you increase your alcohol consumption to deal with stress,' more men than women answer yes," Uhlenhuth points out. "Twenty-one percent of the male population says yes, compared to 9 percent of the females. It seems fairly clear that men use alcohol as a medication to cope with stress."

Uhlenhuth and his colleagues did detailed analyses of data on tranquilizers and sedatives, such as Valium and Librium. It is popularly believed that the United States is an "over-medicated" society, based on the increase in production and prescription of these drugs, particularly Valium.

"Nationally, only 5 percent of adults take minor tranquilizers regularly," the University of Chicago researcher says.

"By regularly, we mean for at least two months a year. Even if you count all the people who take at least one tranquilizer a year, the figure only goes up to 15 percent."

Use is higher in California, 20 percent. "Experimental and other occasional use, rather than regular therapeutic use, apparently account for the high frequency of users in the West," Uhlenhuth says.

"Our data does not support the widespread idea that many middle-class housewives are addicted to tranquilizers and other prescription drugs.

"We found no difference in intake between working and non-working middle-class women. Only in the lowest socio-economic levels do housewives take more prescription drugs than working women."

Use of minor tranquilizers increases with the number of psychological and physical problems people suffer.

"Usually they are used to treat a combination of anxiety (unjustified fear) and a somatic (physical) complaint," Uhlenhuth remarks. "In some cases, physical symptoms cause people to become psychologically upset. In others, feelings of tension and anxiety produce physical problems."

Smaller surveys have been taken more recently, but the last national study was done in 1970-71.

Renaissance Fairs Provide Sources Of Pleasure, Income

By NORMAN NADEL

NEW YORK (NEA) — If you want to get rid of the middleman, go back to the Middle Ages.

That is the unspoken but pivotal philosophy behind Renaissance fairs — or faires, as they are spelled with affectionate affectation. A West Coast phenomenon since the early 1960s, they spread to the Southwest and Midwest and now have invaded the East.

After a thousand years fairs continue to solve the dilemma of artists, artisans or craftspersons who have to sell whatever they make in order to live. If they sell their own stuff at a fair, they might make reasonable profits. Otherwise they must divide earnings with a retailer, wholesaler, landlord and possibly others.

> The idea is to give the public enough entertainment, food and drink to make the shopping expedition a kind of revel.

The latest manifestation is the Renaissance Festival of the Arts at Sterling Forest Gardens, an exquisite woodland setting near Tuxedo, N.Y., just west of the Hudson valley and about 40 miles northwest of New York City. During five late summer weekends, the glades fairly ring with the lusty clamor of jugglers, soothsayers, magicians, ventriloquists, dancers, players of plays, players of assorted ancient musical instruments, singers, jousters, gypsies, hawkers of foodstuffs, hawkers of practically anything, revellers and feasters.

Somewhat quieter but no less caught up are the crafts people in their myriad booths: jewelry makers, leatherworkers, potters, glass blowers, stained glass artisans, metalworkers, sculptors, painters, pen-and-ink artists and more.

Perhaps not all are practicing crafts indegenous to the Renaissance, that 14th century intellectual and cultural flowering of Italy that spread over the next 300 years as far afield as France, Germany, The Low Countries and England. There is no record, for example, that air-brushed T-shirts brightened the selection at fairs in early Venice, Vienna or London. Nor was the wine-jelly snowcone a staple of pre-Elizabethan diets. No matter.

The missionaries who have come East with this merry manner of merchandising are Donald Gaiti and Barbara Hope (Gaiti), two native Easterners and craftspeople both (they have a stained glass studio at Westhampton, Long Island, N.Y.) who had spent several years in California. Under the corporation title of Creative Faires, Ltd., they mounted indoor fairs in the New York area.

Sterling Forest is their first outdoor venture, and they did not overlook the fact that Sterling Forest sounds (yea, looks) like Sherwood Forest. So the theme of this particular Renaissance reawkening is Robin Hood, all the way to a staged fight on a footbridge between the romantic green-capped brigand and tall Little John. Maid Marian, Friar Tuck and the rest of the merry band also make their presence known.

You well might ask what all of this roistering has to do with selling arts and crafts. The answer is nothing and everything. Back then, people went shopping for entertainment. At the modern equivalent of the fairs, the idea is to give the public enough entertainment, food and drink to make the shopping expedition a kind of revel. "Fun" is Donald Gaiti's term, a world Erasmus might have used if he had thought of it first.

In California, Gaiti and Miss Hope showed their stained glass work in countless fairs, many but not all with the Renaissance motif. Other themes are used: American Colonial, Rural Old West. But Renaissance seems to create the most appropriate ambiance. Sometimes the couple would hit as many as five different one-day fairs in one week.

Standards appear to be high at Sterling Forest, with potters, for example, who consider themselves sculptors. "They're not throwing pottery off a wheel but are doing hand-built pottery which is quite beautiful," points out Miss Hope.

The performing artists are as spirited a company as you're apt to find outdoors or in, even if their Elizabethan speech is touched here and there with Brooklynese and other regionisms. If they're not all quite convincing in their roles, they are entertaining. Dramatic centerpiece is the play-within-a-play, "Pyramis and Thisbe" from Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," done broadly and loudly, as befits the piece and the outdoor setting.

Generally, the ambiance is more English than Italian or anything else. Purists might quibble with certain touches. "Ryde at thy own risk," admonishes a sign by the carousel; it should be "...at thine own risk," and I'm not so sure about "Ryde."

But what matters is that the fair is indeed fun, and the arts and crafts are being sold and bought like mad.

Bomb's Potential Frightening

A readily available field manual on the subject (FM 5-26) says "the ADM is basically similar to any other member of the nuclear family." Except that it's apparently simpler. In pictures, the bomb resembles the putterings of a safe cracker; firing components, for instance, are attached by plan wires and cables.

This simplicity is of course part of the design. ADMs were conceived to be fired by frogmen and pathfinders, not button-pushing scientists. ADM crews consist largely of enlisted men who have little or no nuclear training. In other words, during war, sergeants would deploy the awesomely destructive weapons.

And if sergeants can learn to blow the bombs, the worry is that terrorists could do it too. There is a secret code that must be used for remote detonation, according to FM 5-26, it can be avoided by use of an on-site timing fuse. One former ADM officer says arming the bomb "is not really complicated."

ADM proponents concede the weapon is uncomplicated, but at the same time they deny that it is any more a threat in the hands of terrorists than other atomic warheads. The Army nuclear specialist says some atomic artillery shells are even smaller than ADMs, and "may be just as easy to detonate."

Besides, the Army says terrorists would have to get an ADM before they could use it, "and that would be difficult." A spokesman explains that the bombs are stored (in America and Europe) under safeguards which surpass that for other nuclear weapons: "For example, they are never taken out for training exercises."

Still, the spokesman admits the ADMs are not totally safe from theft. No weapon is. In this case, the bombs are perhaps most vulnerable when they are transported from place to place; the security convoys are sometimes light, and always fully exposed, conditions that one day may invite a successful hijacking.

If that day comes, the world may never be the same. Given the features of the ADM, terrorists could put a device in the trunk of a car, say, then park the vehicle close to the Capitol during a State of the Union Address. They could then put on the timer, and be out of the country when the disaster occurred.

Officials Claim Eyeglass Costs Run Too High

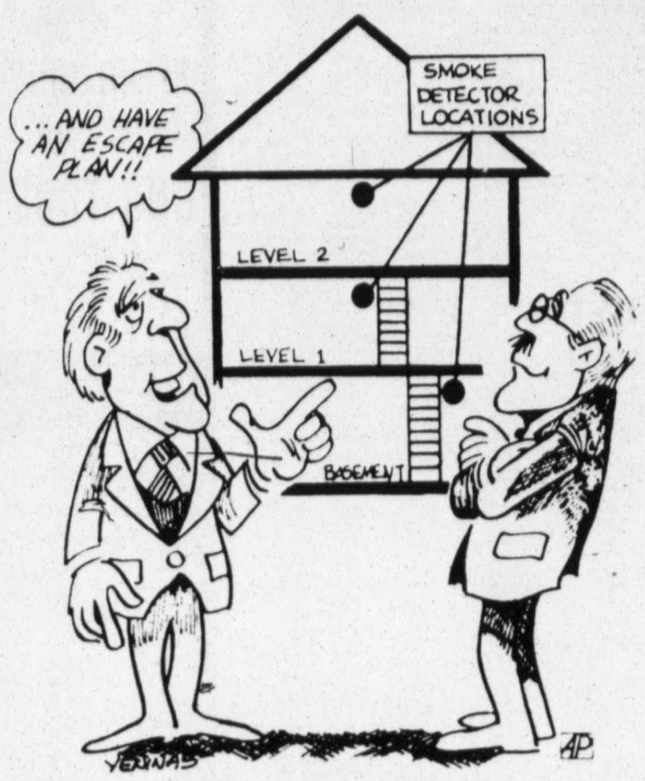
WASHINGTON (AP) — Eyeglasses and hearing aids for Medicaid patients cost the federal government too much, say officials of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, warning that payments might soon be limited.

The HEW announcement on Wednesday did not say what the new limits might be, but it suggested money could be saved by requiring states to buy eyeglasses and hearing aids in bulk purchases or by setting ceilings on how much the government will pay.

Current rules allow a state to pay its area's going rate for eyeglasses and hearing aids for Medicaid patients. Federal and state governments paid $100 million for them in the 1976-77 fiscal year under Medicaid, a government program providing health care to the poor.

"Many times these prices are unreasonably high," HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said. "These high costs must and can be held down."

In a notice being published in today's Federal Register, HEW asked for suggestions from the public in the next 45 days.



Smoke Detector Installation, Model Important

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Where there's a possibility of smoke, there's often a smoke detector these days, but the purchase of an alarm system is no guarantee of safety.

Carelessness, incorrect installation and poor maintenance can render even the best smoke detectors useless, said Peg Maloy of the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration.

It is important to develop an escape plan in case of fire. "A smoke detector wakes you up," said Maloy. "It doesn't get you out of the house."

More than 6,500 people die in residential fires every year; several hundred thousand more are injured. Smoke inhalation is a factor in more than half the deaths. Estimates of the number of lives that could be saved by the use of smoke detectors vary, but most experts agree that the death toll could be cut substantially.

Sales of smoke detectors have tripled in the past three years and the National Bureau of Standards reports that 12 million detectors were manufactured in the United States in 1977 alone.

Part of the push for the smoke detectors comes from state legislatures; at least 33 states have some form of smoke detector law.

There are more than 100 models of smoke detectors on the market and, as competition in the field has increased, prices have dropped. Some brands now sell for under $20, although most units range in price from $25 to $50.

No matter what you spend, you should select a model that has a seal of approval from a testing organization like Underwriters Laboratories Inc. or Factory Mutual Systems, Maloy said.

Proper installation is essential. If you have questions, contact your local fire department. Because smoke rises, the best place to put a detector generally is on the ceiling or high on an inside wall just below the ceiling. (If the ceiling is below an uninsulated attic or in a mobile home, the detector should be placed on the wall about 6 to 12 inches below the ceiling.) In a multi-story home, you should have a detector on each floor.

Smoke detectors should be installed close enough to the bedrooms so that the alarm can be heard even if the door is shut. (Don't worry about sleeping through the alarm. Experts say even the soundest of sleepers will be wakened by the shrill, penetrating noise.)

Do not install a detector in the kitchen since cooking smoke can set off false alarms. For the same reason, avoid placing a detector near a fireplace.

If you are installing more than one detector, consider units that can be interconnected. When one device detects smoke, all of them will sound.

There are two types of smoke detectors — photoelectric and ionization chamber. The photoelectric detector contains a photoelectric bulb that emits a beam of light. When smoke enters the detector, light from the beam is reflected from smoke particles into a photocell, triggering the alarm. This type of detector generally must be connected to an electrical outlet.

Ionization detectors contain a small radiation source that produces electrically charged air molecules called ions. The presence of these ions allows an electric current to flow through the chamber. Smoke particles entering the chamber attach themselves to the ions, reducing the flow of current and setting off the alarm. Ionization detectors usually are battery operated.

Each type of detector has its advantages and disadvantages. Ionization detectors generally respond more quickly to flaming fires, the bureau of standards says, while photoelectric devices react faster to smouldering fires.

You do not have to worry about replacing the batteries in a photoelectric devices, but you do have to be concerned about possible power failres. You also must be sure not to plug a photoelectric detector into an outlet controlled by a wall switch; turning off the switch could leave you without protection.

Battery-operated devices emit a trouble signal when the battery needs to be replaced. Keep a supply of batteries on hand and put new ones in immediately. You could forget otherwise.

According to the bureau of standards, a working smoke detector system should give you at least three minutes to evacuate your house. Once outside, stay out. Maloy said people have died because they went back to the house to telephone the fire department.

Hike In Road Toll Noted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government on Friday combined a Labor Day "drive slow" alert with a warning that U.S. traffic deaths in 1978 might surpass 50,000 for the first time in five years.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimated that 27,000 died on the nation's roads in the first seven months of the year, an increase of 2 percent over the same period in 1977.

The agency's administrator, Joan Claybrook, called the figures "distressing" and said if the trend continued "it would mark the first time since 1973 that the highway death toll reached 50,000."

In 1973 there were 54,052 deaths. But the figure dropped dramatically to 45,196 in 1974 after the national 55 mile an hour speed limit was imposed in response to the Arab oil embargo.

Officials cited several factors for the increase, but said the main reason was that drivers are increasingly violating the speed limit.

"These grim statistics are a cold reminder that we must redouble our efforts to drive safely and observe the 55 mh national speed limit," Claybrook said.

She urged motorists to be particularly vigilant over the Labor Day weekend, traditionally a period of heavy travel. In addition to obeying the speed limit, she recommended that drivers buckle their seat belts and avoid drinking alcoholic beverages if they are to drive.

In Chicago, the National Safety Council predicted Friday that from 470 to 570 persons will die in traffic accidents between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Monday.

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL

The Avalanche-Journal means value. Value that is both tangible and intangible.

Intangible value that comes with the quality of news coverage you receive by reading The Avalanche-Journal — a level of editorial excellence on the local, national and international levels unparalleled in West Texas.

Then there are the tangible benefits derived from reading the Avalanche-Journal. The cash benefits. The money you can save by subscribing to the A-J.

For instance, we publish a variety of store coupons each week. By using just some of them, you can save enough on purchases to more than pay for that week's A-J. Add to this the many advertised sales and your savings are greater.

All this boils down to one point. Subscribing to The Avalanche-Journal is more than getting a newspaper. It's making a profitable investment.

UT Will Pass More, Akers Says

Ground Attack Stalls With Earl Gone

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

AUSTIN — Tim Campbell remarked that, yes, he talked to brother Earl once in a while, maybe once a week. Only thing, he had to call long distance to do so.

Earl, who accounted for more than half of the Texas Longhorns' ground attack last year, is now playing in Houston, for the Oilers, and when he disappeared into the world of professional football, it was as if someone had removed a section of Memorial Stadium.

About half of that scoreboard remains, in the form of kicker Russell Erxleben. Those were raindrops, not tears, which pelted Austin and the burnt-orange campus Friday. But, there are some areas of concern for the returnees from last year's national (regular-season) champions.

Remaining as solid and formidable as Memorial Stadium is the Longhorn defense. But disappearance of Earl and his 1,700 rushing yards and his Heisman Trophy and his bruising line charges has caused coach Fred Akers to adjust his offense. And the defense, which benefitted so much from Campbell's ground-and time-consuming tactics, will be called upon to stay on the field more.

The result will not drop the Longhorns from the contending list, after that unbeaten regular season of a year ago. But.

"We will have an effective offensiveline," said Akers Friday, "but right now, we're young and experimenting with people. We'll have a lot of new faces, but when the time comes, they will do a creditable job.

"At quarterback, we're working eight people with the various top units, and we'll probably make a choice this weekend. We used to cut to three quarterbacks, but after last year (starting four at times and using three against Oklahoma), we'll probably work with four."

But, which four?

Randy McEachern was No. 1 at the end of the spring, and he ranks there now. The others will come from Mark McBath, Sam Ansley, Jon Aune, Ted Constanzo, even Andrews freshmen Booger Brooks and Donnie Little — although Akers indicated that neither freshman was figuring in the plans at present.

The problem at quarterback is not so much a problem, as just the matter of selection, Akers added; he has confidence in them all.

"The offensive line will have to adjust to not having the dominating runner like Campbell," Akers said, "But, I expect them to perform.

Currently, Johnny "Ham" Jones is back at his fullback spot, with Kermit Goode, an unproven sophomore, is holding the tailback spot played by Campbell. However, incoming freshman A.J. Jones, a 200-pounder from Youngstown, Ohio, is running third team, and many feel he will be the starter early in the campaign.

The receivers will come from Lam Jones (the Olympic sprinter), and lettermen Mike Lockett and Ronnie Miksch.

The picture, defensively, is almost a double exposure from '77. Eight and possibly nine starters return, and "if (injured linebacker Mark) Martignoni is able to play, our defense could be really outstanding. We need depth at tackle (where all-America Brad Shearer graduated)."

Actually, the Shearer spot is not going to an untried Longhorn. Bill Acker (250) alternated in the line last year. Opposite him, returneee Steve McMichael is up 20 pounds to 252.

"Linebacker is in good shape," said Akers, even with two newcomers on hand. Bruce Scholtz (228) lettered last year as a freshman, as did Robin Sendlein (218), who will fill in if the 220-pound Martignoni doesn't return from knee surgery.

All other spots are filled by returnees, and the play of middle linebacker Lance Taylor is "outstanding," said Akers.

The secondary is secure, headed by all-

Raiders Take Saturday Off

The Red Raiders worked out only in helmets and shorts Friday as Texas Tech coach Rex Dockery moved his team into game-week preparations for USC.

Sports Information Director Keith Samples said that there would be no scrimmage today, or, for that matter, for the rest of the season.

"He (coach Dockery) just feels that it's getting too close to be out there messing around with that kind of stuff," Samples said.

The Raiders will work out in helmets and shorts again this morning.

LOW BALL –Roscoe Tanner strains to return a low ball hit him by his opponent Friday, Victor Pecci of Paraguay. Tanner edged Pecci 6-3, 4-6, 7-6 in a thrilling second round match that had the packed crowd roaring at every point. As a reward he advanced another round in the U.S. Open. (AP Laserphoto).

Vilas, Tanner Provide Thrills At U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) —Guillermo Vilas and Roscoe Tanner won spell-binding matches in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships, and Martina Navratilova, Virginia Wade and Tracy Austin won their second-round matches easily.

Tanner and Vilas provided the first real thrills in the four-day-old tournament. A U.S. Open daytime record crowd of 14,779 attended.

Still to play at night were second-seeded Jimmy Connors against Steve Docherty of Australia, second-seeded Chris Evert against fellow American Donna Ganz, and Vitas Gerulaitis and Victor Amaya, who were to complete a match suspended by rain Thursday night. The fourth-seeded Gerulaitis had taken the first set 6-2, but was trailing 5-6 in the second.

And in an electric match of rocketing serves and thrashing volleys, 11th-seeded Tanner triumphed over Victor Pecci of Paraguay 5-7, 6-4, 6-3.

There were no fireworks, just business as usual as top-seeded Navratilova pounded Gail Lovera of France 6-1, 6-1. The Wimbledon champion was making her first appearance. She had drawn a bye in the first round.

Miss Wade, who also had a first-round bye, dispatched South African Brigitte Cuypers 6-0, 6-1. Austin, the fifth seed who is just 15 years old, eliminated Australian Chris O'Neil 6-3, 6-0.

Meanwhile, No. 9 Manuel Orantes, the gentlemanly Spaniard who won the Open in 1975, retired from his first-round match with an injured knee. Italian Adriano Panatta was leading 4-1 when Orantes walked to the net, extended his hand and left the court.

Tenth-seeded Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia was another casualty, the first of the seeded women to fall, retiring in the second set with an injured wrist. Renata Tomanova of Czechoslovakia thus advanced, 6-2, 4-2.

Tanner and Pecci battled like gladiators. Their final-set tiebreaker went with service to 5-5, when Tanner landed a blazing backhand near the baseline which Pecci did not return. A linesman called it in, Pecci objected and the umpire overruled to give the South American a 6-5 lead.

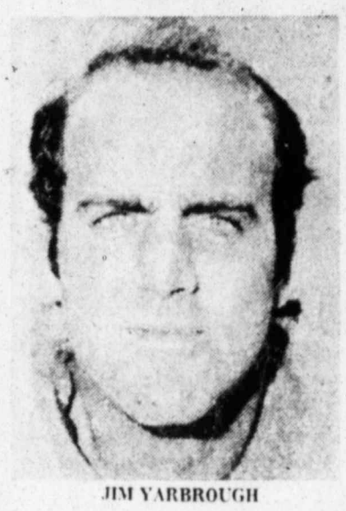
Tanner angrily returned to his baseline, served blisteringly and Pecci could only return it weakly into the net. Tanner stalked defiantly at the changeover and shook his fist first at the umpire, then at Pecci. On the next point, Pecci couldn't execute a half-volley, and Tanner was a winner.

"I'm real happy with the court. It's real good for me," said a beaming Tanner, who is rated a major threat in the tournament because of the fast surface and his unusually fast, aggressive game.

The third-seeded Vilas had to leave his beloved baseline to meet the scrappy Scanlon, a 21-year-old American. Scanlon showed, too, that he can rally nearly as well as Vilas. Many of the points went to 20 and 30 strokes.

The Argentine, who is more comfortable on slow clay, broke in the third game of the final set after battling three deuces. Scanlon broke back at love in the next, then Vilas broke again.

FRED AKERS



JIM YARBROUGH

Don Henry

Football Accounting

AUSTIN — IT WAS as much a wisecrack as a question, as UT coach Fred Akers was running down his offensie personnel.

The right guard spot on the depth chart read, "Jim Yarbrough 250 6-1 Gr-2L."

Jim Yarbrough is a first in the college football world.

It's all because Jim Yarbrough is a very intelligent young man. One day, he may be a model for others.

A year ago, Yarbrough was near graduation with an accounting degree. He had a year of eligibility remaining, but he had packed away enough hours and did well enough that he was poised for the graduation program. There was no way, under NCAA rules, that he could hold a BBA and OG at the same time.

Either you stayed an undergraduate or you checked in your burnt orange helmet.

• • •

BUT TEXAS FOLKS got to figuring: Why does a young man have to forgo his last year of eligibility when one of the objectives of the student-athlete program is to see guys get degrees?

So, UT officials suggested that, should the rules be changed, would Yarbrough be interested in returning to the field?

"I had made up my mind to graduate," Yarbrough said Friday. "I decided about the (time of the) Aggie game."

But, in December, Neils Thompson, Texas' faculty representative and president of the NCAA, submitted the proposal that such athletes not be penalized for academic excellence. The matter sailed through the winter meetings.

Thus, Yarbrough received his accounting degree and is back on the field, starting at offensive guard.

• • •

THE WAY YARBROUGH played the last half of the 1977 season especially pleased Akers.

"Jim started to really come on and become a good football player the last five games," remarked Akers as he discussed his lineman. "He's up 10 pounds (to 250) over last year, and his being back really helps."

"I don't know why I came on there at the last," Yarbrough said. He shrugged. "I just felt like I was playing better."

• • •

ALREADY, YARBROUGH HAS one mark of a young executive . . . the rapidly receding hairline. But, while preparing to help the Longhorns defending their Southwest Conference championship, Yarbrough is working on a second degree.

When he finally finishes his eligibility and his college work, he will have a degrees in finance and accounting.

From Texas, he plans to return to his Gulf Coast area (he played high school ball at Galveston Ball) and work toward a law degree and concentrate on the tax-law or financial field.

Yarbrough laughed, someone mentioned the possibilities.

Ali May 'Retire' After Spinks Fight

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Greatest is in town. Now for the Latest.

Muhammad Ali, 220 pounds of moving huckster, arrived here Thursday, displaying a well-rehearsed spiel as dazzling as his once-vaunted footwork.

"You're going to see the fastest, the baddest — you think I beat Sonny Liston, you think I put one on Joe Frazier, you think I put one on George Foreman, Ken Norton?" Ali shrieked to reporters at his airport arrival. "You watch, I'm windin' it all it up. This is the last time. This is the last fight...

"They're savin' the last dance for me. This'll be a September to remember. Tell the whole world, I'm gonna shock him. I'm gonna wipe him out. I'm gonna eat him up. I'm gonna beat him like he broke into church. You think I'm bad? You wait till you see me now. You'll think I'm 20 years old. You'll think I'm 20 years old.

"You got enough yet?"

The object of all that scorn, of course, is Leon Spinks, the self-proclaimed Latest whose disdain of being where he is supposed to be on time has had others calling him that as well.

Ali holds his first workout at Municipal Auditorium, about a dozen blocks from the Superdome where their heavyweight championship will take place Sept. 15.

He was mobbed as he and a police cordon walked the quarter mile from his arrival gate to the main terminal and then to a waiting white Cadillac limousine.

Heads turned, barbers stopped their clipping and rent-a-car agents scrambled for scraps of paper suitable for autographing as the entourage passed.

And all the while, the Mouth kept roaring.

"This time I am red-eee," Ali shouted. "You will see the real Muhammad Ali. I will be the first to win it three times. I want him, I want him! I WANT him!

"He borrowed my crown. He got it on luck. But now I'm ready. I'm talkin', cocky again. He's too ugly to represent the colored folks.

"The world champ should be pretty. I'm pretty, man. I'm gonna shock the whole world. I want the whole Superdome full. I want the whole joint sold out. Want the whole world watchin', 'Cause you're gonna see pretty man...

Bahr's Field Goal Gives Penn St. Win

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Matt Bahr's 23-yard field goal with 10 seconds remaining enabled heavily-favored Penn State to beat unheralded Temple 10-7 in college football's opening game of the 1978 season.

Penn State, ranked third nationally in the preseason poll, recovered a fumble with 4:49 remaining. Quarterback Chuck Fusina directed an 11-play drive that wound up with Bahr's winning three-pointer.

But the unranked Owls of Coach Wayne Hardin, considered a warm-up game for the potential Penn State powerhouse, struck back to tie on a seven-play, 52-yard drive with 10:49 left in the final quarter.

Quarterback Brian Broomell threw 21 yards to running back Zach Dixon for the Temple touchdown. Freshman Ron Fiorvanti kicked the tying point.

Earlier, Penn State marched 57 yards on five plays for its 7-0 lead. The key plays were a 14-yard pass from Fusina to Bob Bassett, a nine-yarder to Scott Fitzkee and Moore's 26-yard touchdown romp.

Temple's tying drive was triggered by a 17-yard pass from Broomell to Steve Watson for a first down at the Penn State 34. Anthony Anderson ran for 15 for a first at the 19. After a five-yard penalty for delay of game and a three-yard gain by Anderson, Broomell connected with Dixon for a touchdown.

In the fourth quarter, however, Penn State linebacker Lance Mehl pounced on a fumble by Dixon at the Penn State 43.

Moore ran 10 yards for a first at the Temple 48. The Lions picked up another first down on a Fusina to Fitzkee pass at the Owls' 35.

Four more running plays moved the ball to the 11. And with a fourth and five, Bahr kicked the field goal.

TOURNEY CONTINUES

Play will continue Sunday and Monday in the 54-hole Hillcrest Country Club Annual Men's Championship Golf Tournament.

The defending champion is John Farquhar.

Who Will Quarterback For Pardee's Redskins?

By The Associated Press

George Allen is gone, so no one really knows for sure whether battle-scarred Billy Kilmer is still Washington's No.1 quarterback or whether Joe Theismann will get the starting assignment Sunday against the New England Patriots.

Allen always seemed to lean toward Kilmer when he was coaching the 'Skins. But Jack Pardee, who guided Chicago into the National Football League playoffs before leaving the Bears and replacing Allen, isn't saying who he'll start Sunday in Foxboro. "We still have two No. 1 quarterbacks," he said.

That has Chuck Fairbanks, coach of the Patriots, up in the air.

"We've got to prepare for two different styles," he said. "Joe is much more active and mobile and seems to have the ability to make the big plays for himself when other things break down around him. Billy's got great experience, and he's won for them an awful long time."

The Patriots were the only team to make it through the exhibitions unbeaten — but they're still battered and their offense may be hurting with the definite absence of wide receiver Darryl Stingley and the probable absence of tight end Russ Francis, bothered by a sprained ankle.

The offense averaged 20 points a game in the preseason and allowed barely a touchdown a game. "The best team in the league right now," Pardee called New England. "All the experts will be picking the Patriots to kill us." The teams have met only once before in the regular season — in 1972 when the Pats won 24-23.

Pardee is only one of 10 head coaches either making their NFL debuts or at least starting out with new teams. Others who are taking over new reins this season following head coaching jobs elsewhere are Monte Clark at Detroit (he made San Francisco a winner in 1976), Dick Nolan at New Orleans (he coached San Francisco to three division titles in eight seasons) and Chuck Knox at Buffalo (he got five division titles out of Los Angeles in five seasons).

The six other newcomers are Sam Rutigliano at Cleveland, Marv Levy at Kansas City, Bud Wilkinson at St. Louis, Ray Malavasi at Los Angeles, Neill Armstrong at Chicago and Pete McCulley at San Francisco.

Can Tampa Bay Survive Success?

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

It's like going from the ridiculous to the sublime —except Tampa Bay's no longer all that ridiculous.

The Buccaneers, ridiculed for their first 26 National Football League games before they rose up and smote New Orleans and St. Louis last season, spent the preseason shedding their patsy image, so perhaps it is fitting that this "born-again" team inaugurate the regular season tonight.

The sublime team is, of course, the Dallas Cowboys, Super Bowl champs, the latest subject of "dynasty" talk. What better way to start Monday night football than with a bang, namely Dallas' shotgun offense and dynamite defense?

Buccaneers 17, Giants 13

New York's offense leaves much to be desired. The Giants' defense is pretty good up front, but we think the Bucs can beat it by going over it and into the secondary. Tampa Bay's biggest problem this year will be dealing with the heights of mediocrity.

Cowboys 24, Colts 14

Even if it still had Lydell Mitchell (traded) and Bert Jones (injured), Baltimore would be an underdog. Without them, every phase of the Colts offense is diminished greatly.

Seahawks 21, Chargers 20

Speaking of Lydell Mitchell, he'll do good things for San Diego — but not for a while. Missing most of training camp never does anyone any good. Seattle may not be as good as it looked in the exhibitions, but it's got enough to pull off this mild upset.

Raiders 28, Broncos 16

With memories of New Year's Day (last year's American Conference championship game) still fresh in their minds, the Raiders will come out roaring. This won't be the only week in which Denver's overworked defense short-circuits.

Cardinals 27, Bears 17

Some teams can perform well with their top offensive star at less than full strength. Walter Payton, though, isn't just the Bears' top star, he's their only star. Oh, well, at least Bud Wilkinson will start the season a winner.

Patriots 21, Redskins 14

Washington is a team on the way down. The Patriots, despite being rocked by injuries to Darryl Stingley and others, are still a serious contender and exciting to watch.

49ers 20, Browns 17

Oilers 23, Falcons 13

Earl Campbell will wake up Houston's attack plenty, even if he doesn't personally run roughshod over Atlanta. The Falcons still have a pretty good defense — but their offense has people shaking their heads.

Rams 28, Eagles 20

Steelers 27, Bills 10

Chuck Knox was a winner in Los Angeles. It'll take a long time before he feels that way in Buffalo. Pittsburgh isn't the power it used to be, but it's still got enough punch to kayo the Bills.

Bengals 30, Chiefs 7

Like Rome, it's going to take a lot more than a day to build Kansas City into something worth looking at. Even without Ken Anderson at quarterback, the Bengals will breeze.

Dolphins 31, Jets 21

Lions 21, Packers 9

Vikings 28, Saints 6

TOO TALL, TOO SOON —Cowboy defensive tackle Ed "Too Tall" Jones reacts a tad bit too quickly to Pittsburg quarterback Terry Bradshaw's moves. Steeler tackle Larry Brown reacts just in time, pushing Jones out of the way. Bradshaw completed this pass for a first down in an exhibition game. IDallas fans are hoping this won't happen too often in the regular season, which starts Monday night against Baltimore. (AP Laserphoto)

Improved Bucs Face New York In Opener

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — "As far as being the first black (rookie) quarterback to start in the NFL, I'll just try and not be the first black quarterback to mess up," says rookie Doug Williams.

The ex-Grambling star will lead the Tampa Bay Buccaneers against the New York Giants in today's National Football League season-opener at Tampa Stadium.

The 23-year-old athlete, chosen by the Bucs in the first round of this year's collge draft, will be the first black rookie quarterback to start a regular season game for a pro team.

Williams says he's not too concerned about making history.

"It might be history, but I'm not going to make a big deal out of it," he says. "Other people will make a big deal out of it but I look at it as a job. I'll just be doing my job."

Tampa's two veteran quarterbacks haven't entirely recovered from preseason injuries, leaving Williams the healthiest of the signal-calling corps. Gary Huff has a bruised shin and Mike Boryla is bothered by a sprained knee.

Williams, who saw some second-half action in the Bucs' 3-1 preseason, completed 28 of 59 passes for 330 yards with four interceptions.

"It will be just like starting the second half, only switched around," he says.

Tampa Coach John McKay said he isn't too concerned about the mistakes.

"I'd just as soon have him out there making mistakes because he's going to make some big plays for you. And who's to say a veteran quarterback isn't going to make those same mistakes... He's the best passer I've seen since Norm Van Brocklin."

New York Coach John McVay said he will start Jerry Golsteyn, instead of Joe Pisarcik. Golsteyn, a second-year player from Northern Illinois, hit 35 of 68 passes for 520 yards and four touchdowns with one interception during the Giants' 2-2 preseason.

Pisarcik, starter most of last year, was bothered by a series of injuries in preseason and played sparingly.

In that match Tampa had possession nine times inside the New York 35-yard line. Six of them were inside the 12 and twice the Bucs had first downs at the five. But they couldn't score.

He listed starting linebacker Brad Van Pelt as doubtful for the contest. He suffered a knee injury in preseason. Center Jim Clack is listed as questionable and linebackers Bill Bryant and Brian Kelley are listed as probable.

CARDS CUT BACK

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals have waived running back George Franklin and signed free agent wide receiver Tommy Southard, the National Football League club announced Friday.

Wilkinson Takes Cards Against Punchless Bears In Pro Debut

CHICAGO (AP) — When the St. Louis Cardinals had runner Terry Metcalf and receivers Ike Harris and J.V. Cain, three offensive sparkplugs, they lost their last four games last season to finish with a 7-7 record.

At Soldier Field on Sunday, new Coach Bud Wilkinson will get an inkling of how his Cards will do without them in the National Football League's regular season, which they open against the struggling Chicago Bears.

The Cards were 2-2 in preseason play and veteran quarterback Jim Hart was an important factor. He completed 36 of 54 passes. Not one was intercepted.

Several departures from the veteran Bears' squad have been directly to hospitals. Johnny Musso, the team's leading preseason rusher and receiver, and cornerback Allan Ellis underwent season-ending knee surgery this week. Linebacker Waymond Bryant, who has a bad shoulder, was placed on the injured reserve list and is lost for the year.

Musso was the substitute for Walter Payton, who will be trying to bounce back from a shoulder injury of his own. He ran just four times for a total of minus one yard before being injured early in the second pre-season game, a 26-14 loss to St. Louis. He hasn't seen game action since but is expected to play Sunday.

"The preseason game we played against them is totally insignificant now," Wilkinson said. "Our main goal that game was to test younger players and the Bears did the same."

Chicago ended exhibition play with an 0-4 record and scored fewer points than any other team. Only three gave up more.

The Bears won their last six regular-season games last season before losing to Dallas in the first round of the playoffs.

"This team has playoff potential as it proved last year. But what they did last year won't mean anything Sunday," said Chicago rookie head coach Neill Armstrong. "The way we've been playing — with mistakes, sometimes foolish mistakes — we take away our chance to win. We can correct those things but we have to play smart."

The Bears' offense scored only two preseason touchdowns and quarterback Bob Avellini said, "This offense we're using is built aiound Walter and we miss him when he's not in there."

Hobbs Coach's Job On Line

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

He is the head coach of the Hobbs Eagles and in two years he has won only seven games. Down here, people expect a winner. If they don't get one, they're not a bit hesitant about making changes.

When one southeastern New Mexico football coach was asked about the situation here, he predicted "If Jim Cromartie doesn't win one of his first three games, they may hang him."

While the situation may not be that serious, it is obvious that Cromartie's job is on the line. Hanging on the bulletin board behind his back when he sits at his desk is a newspaper clipping telling how one city councilman already has voted against renewing his contract.

What makes it tougher for the coach, the Eagles' first six games are against Artesia, Big Spring, Odessa, Lamesa, Lubbock Monterey and Ysleta Eastwood.

His predecessor, Pat Tone, won two state championships in three years. But, in 1975, when the record slipped, he was fired. He is now an assistant at Plainview.

"There is pressure," he readily admits. "But I look at it as being more self-imposed than coming from the outside.

"I expect it of me. I'm not thinking about keeping a job. I'm thinking about doing the job I came here to get done.

"I feel as a coach it's time we started coming around."

You won't find many townspeople that'll disagree with that statement.

What has happened that the once mighty Hobbs football program has fallen to such a state?

"You ask me what happened," Cromartie says, " I'll tell you what happened. We hit a slack period on talent and then we also kind of took winning for granted.

"Each and every school goes through a cycle where there are just not as many good athletes. That's when your program has to win for you. That's where the numbers come in. That's where the traditions come in. That's where pride comes in.

"I'll tell you right now, we don't have a super player. I mean we don't have an outright college prospect on our football team. I'm not talking about blue-chippers. All of our positions are questionable as far as playing college ball is concerned. If they have a good year, some of them might have a chance."

Still, there are signs that the Eagle program is coming around. In his first year, Cromartie saw 40 kids quit the team. At that time he got in trouble for saying his job was like "coaching at a country club." It seems that the players did not take to strenuous practices.

Among them is 5-10, 165-pound tailback Ray Gomez. He rushed for over 1000 yards for Hobbs last season. Other returning starters on offense include Alton Patterson (5-11, 175) at fullback, David Botkin (5-10, 170) at quarterback after starting at flanker last year, David Castillo (6-0, 230) at tackle, Wendell Barry (5-9, 185) at center and Jay Wilman, a junior, at split end. He was the first kid in the history of Hobbs High Scnool to win three letters as a sophomore.

"We can be a pretty good football team and be 1-4 or 2-4," he said. "That can affect the kids. Our record says we're no good, so we're no good."

It can also affect the parents.

Pointing to the clipping over his desk, Cromartie said "You're right, it's all political. But I'd rather be where I am than some place that didn't care."

New Home Has Found New Hope

By PAUL McGRATH
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

But it's not because all-District runningback Isiah Roberson is returning for his senior season. The 6-1, 185-pounder, nicknamed Pee Wee by his teammates, gained 936 yards last season. No, he's not what makes Wallace lose a few winks of sleep.

And it's not the fact that the Leopards return eight offensive and nine defensive starters out of 14 letterman from a team that went 4-1 in District 3-B after dropping its first four games.

It shouldn't be the Leopards' schedule —they play three of their five district ballgames on their home turf.

What is it then?

Of the five lettermen the Leopards lost, one was all-South Plains performer Marty McClintock. McClintock did just about everything for the Leopards except inflate the footballs. As quarterback, he nearly passed the Leopards to a zone championship, losing 20-0 to Borden City in the deciding game. As the team's punter, he kept the ball a good distance from his own end zone, forcing the other guys to work for their points.

Which brings up another sore spot for Wallace. . . the kicking game. The Leopards are in the process of revamping their field and in doing so were forced to take down the goalposts. Thus, no one on the squad has been able to practice placekicking. Furthermore, the goalposts are not expected to be back up until the week prior to the first home game on Sept. 15.

But one problem at a time. Wallace expects his senior-laden squad (19 out of 25 players) to go a little farther than last year and thinks he has found a suitable replacement for McClintock.

"We've been real optimistic. The school has been down for a few years," said Wallace, in his second year as head coach after six years as an assistant.

"They (the team's seniors) feel like it's their time to do something. If they are going to do something, this will be the year."

Filling McClintock's shoes will be Mickey Keith, a 5-10, 135-pound junior.

"Mickey is a good passer and he is a better runner than Marty was," Wallace said. "If he comes through for us, we'll have a good year."

The presence of McClintock is still felt in the form of Mickey McClintock, Marty's younger brother. The sophomore is preparing to step in should the need arise.

One would think the Leopard quarterback would have an easy chore by just handing the ball to Roberson or honorable mention all-District pick Tracy Smith, Roberson's counterpart.

"Isiah could be the best back New Home has ever had," Wallace claims. "If he doesn't get hurt, there's no telling what he can do."

Roberson, who was all-District both ways last fall, has "adequate speed with a lot of strength" says Wallace.

"He's a leader. When the kids drag a little in practice, he pumps them up. They really respect him," Wallace went on. "He's the heart of our defense (at linebacker) . . .a real headhunter. But he knows he has to work for it."

With the Leopards operating the Tandem I formation, Roberson, the 'dot' of the I, gets a better view of the play to find potential holes to burst through. His performance this season should draw a number of college scouts.

As for the nickname "Pee Wee", Wallace said Roberson obtained it in junior high where he was much smaller. Obviously, Roberson grew and there are few players who use the nickname derogatorily.

Preventing opposing defenses from stacking to stop Roberson is Smith, the fullback. Smith is strong and quick, Wallace says, possessing a different running style than the slashing Roberson, but just as effective.

The air game could remain top-notch with the acquisition of Robert Turner at split end. Turner, a senior who has not played football since his freshman days, has 9.9 speed for the 100 and is a threat on any play, Wallace said. His presence, further keeping defensive backs on their toes, will prevent the opposition from playing up tight to stop Roberson or Smith.

"We're worried about our offensive line," Wallace said, "we're real little, averaging about 130 to 140 pounds a man. If our line can come through and help us, we ought to be tough."

"They have that feeling. . .they're talking about it during practice," he said. "We've been romped on in the past but they've come of age. They feel like it's their turn."

Warriors May Take Lucas

NEW YORK (AP) — The Golden State Warriors were told Friday by Larry O'Brien, National Basketball Association commissioner, that they can have guard John Lucas and $100,000 or $350,000 and No. 1 draft choice in 1979 from the Houston Rockets as compensation for the loss of high-scoring Rick Barry.

The Warriors, who have until 2 p.m. CDT next Tuesday to decide, apparently feel that man cannot live in the NBA on bread, and speculation, alone.

"We recognize that Lucas is a fine player and at this point I think the team is leaning towards the option of taking Lucas and the $100,000," said Bob Bester, Golden State's director of public relations. "We accept this decision and realize that there is no recourse for us."

Barry, 34, played out his option with the Warriors last season and signed with Houston as a free agent June 17.

"Now that the decision has been made, I can say that we have a better club than ever," said Rockets President Ray Patterson. "We've got the best offensive club in the National Basketball Association.

"People still haven't realized what Rick Barry will mean to our team. He's the best passer in the game and he could even play guard. It will solve our problem of starting two small guards, which hurts us defensively. We now have an offensive attack with Barry that will make us devastating to defense."

"I don't like to say if it (O'Brien's decision) is fair or not," added Patterson. "I don't know what is fair or unfair. I will say the commissioner had the authority to make a judgment, and we now have a better team. I'm sure the commissioner loked at our roster and saw we have an abundance of guards."

O'Brien said he felt that the compensation should consist of a veteran forward who could fill Barry's spot. He noted that Rudy Tomjanovich would be a likely candidate, but the commissioner said "he suffered such severe injuries this past season that it is imossible to predict with confidence the level of his future performance."

"In my judgment, Lucas is the one player on the Houston roster who would be suitable as a significant part of the award," O'Brien said. "Lucas is likely to be able to make an immediate and substantial contribution and, in contrast to Barry, Lucas, at age 24, can be expected to play for several more seasons.

O'Brien added that he gave Golden State a choice in the matter because Lucas is a 6-foot-3 guard and would not specifically fill the same role as Barry, a 6-7 forward.

The commissioner also decided that Houston's proposal to give Mike Newlin or Dwight Jones or just a draft pick to Golden State would not be fair compensation and denied Golden State's principal request to obtain Moses Malone plus other considerations.

Lucas was the NBA's No. 1 draft choice in 1976 after starring at the University of Maryland. He has played two seasons with the Rockets and averaged 12.4 points and 9.4 assists last season.

Buffs Put Crown On Line

Against Mississippi St. Tonight

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi State University is out to break a forfeit-aided 27-game losing streak tonight when the Bulldogs take on West Texas State University in the season opener for both football teams.

Thanks to an NCAA penalty, the record books state that Coach Bob Tyler's squad hasn't won a game since a 15-12 victory over North Texas State in 1975.

Actually, however, the Bulldogs won 18 games and tied one during the penalty period. That included a 9-2 record in 1976 and 5-6 record last season.

The NCAA ordered Mississippi State to forfeit all games in which defensive tackle Larry Gillard participated. The now-graduated Gillard continued to play for the Bulldogs under a county injunction.

While Tyler isn't worried about the effects of the NCAA penalty on this year's team, he is concerned about the Buffaloes of West Texas State.

"Our fall practice went by really fast and while we've had good preparation, I honestly don't know how prepared you can be for West Texas State," Tyler said. "They're a fast team and they will come on as fast as the season has."

The 220-pound Robinson gained 1,399 yards for the ground-oriented Buffaloes as a junior last season and finished third among runners in the NCAA's Division I.

Tyler said overall his Bulldogs were healthy and "we've had good preparation and we're on schedule, and things have been coming together pretty good."

He worked his Southeastern Conference charges under the lights at Mississippi Memorial Stadium Friday night for their final drill before taking on West Texas, the defending Missouri Valley Conference champions.

The Buffaloes posted a 5-1 conference mark and a 6-4-1 record overall and Tyler noted they were unbeaten in their final seven games in 1977.

Yung said he realized "everyone will be shooting at us this year because of our championship season. It's always tougher to put it up the second time, but it's also always a greater accomplishment."

The Bulldogs, who used both the veer and pro set offenses last fall, will use the pro attack exclusively this year.

Guiding the Bulldogs will be quarterback Dave Marler, who transferred from Mississippi College as a placekicker a year ago.

"He has come on fine," Tyler said of the 195-pound senior. "He came a long way in the spring and in the past three weeks has come a long way."

Savannah Lark Wins In Upset

RUIDOSO, N.M. (Special)— Savannah Lark slipped through on the rail and overcame favored Ned Hanger in the final strides for an upset win in Friday's brigand handicap at Ruidoso Downs.

Savannah Larked was clocked in 45.54 and returned $40.40, $10.60 and $6.60.

Ned Hanger returned $3.60, and $3.40. Hopeful Journey made up much terrain at the end to take third, returning $6.20.

Friday's program also included the $32,500 third consolation of the All-American Futurity. The win went to Summit, who opened up at the midway point of the 440-yard run and hit the tape with a length lead. The Summit earned $5,364 for owner Joe Merrick of Sayre, Okla., and was clocked in 22.23.

Is Crimson Tide Best In Nation? Coach Bear Bryant's Not Talking

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Alabama ticks off its 1978 campaign tonight in the position it wanted in last year's final rankings but far from where Coach Bear Bryant wants it to be right now in terms of preparation and readiness.

After a controversial second-place finish behind Notre Dame in the final 1977 Associated Press poll, the Crimson Tide is No. 1 in the pre-season ratings heading into the 1978 opener against 10th-ranked Nebraska at Birmingham's Legion Field (ABC-TV, 8 p.m. CDT) but don't try and convince the Bear of that.

"The rankings are fine and they create interest, but I don't really know how being No. 1 affects you any more," he says. "But you've got to be stupid to let it have any effect before the season starts. In 1966 we were No. 1 in the pre-season and won all our games and only finished third.

"We're probably about 65-70 percent of what we were last Jan. 2, and where were we then?"

Although Bryant's overall 33-year coaching record is 273-76-16 — it's 182-37-8 in 20 seasons at Alabama — he's only 13-6-1 in openers, including two of the last three on the losing side. And 'Bama's last setback at Legion Field was the 1975 opener, a 20-7 loss to Missouri.

"I don't know a lot about Nebraska except they have a lot of talented people," Bryant says. "We've made some progress this fall, but I don't know if it is enough for a big game this early. We have been slow starters the last few years. We have a lot of new faces in the offensive line and we've had to do some juggling on defense. But it should be one of the most exciting kickoff games in history for the TV folks."

There's also a revenge factor. A 31-24 loss to Nebraska in the second game last year cost Alabama a perfect season and the national championship that an unblemished record would have meant.

Nebraska also has an unpleasant memory to fall back on. In 1976, the Cornhuskers were the No. 1 pre-season pick but were held to a 6-6 tie by unheralded Louisiana State. This year, they have a chance to spoil someone else's No. 1 ranking.

The Cornhuskers have a solid 1-2 running punch in I.M. Hipp and Rick Berns, two outstanding offensive linemen in tackle Kelvin Clark and guard Steve Lindquist and a sturdy defense keyed by end George Andrews and linebacker Lee Kunz.

Alabama's standouts are quarterback Jeff Rutledge, running back Tony Nathan, center Dwight Stephenson, offensive tackle Jim Bunch and a veteran defense led by tackle Marty Lyons — running mate David Hannah is out with a knee injury — linebackers Rich Wingo and Barry Krauss and cornerback Don McNeal.

Only nine other major college games are on tap for the season's kickoff weekend. Third-ranked Penn State faced Temple on Friday night while other games today tind Mississippi State vs. West Texas State at Jackson, Miss., Western Carolina at East Carolina, Texas-El Paso at North Texas State, Southern Mississippi at Richmond, Arkansas State at Tulsa, Eastern Michigan at Northern Michigan and Texas-Arlington at Drake. On Sunday, Utah State meets Idaho State in Osaka, Japan.

Palomino Sets Title Defense

LOS ANGELES (AP) — World Boxing Council welterweight champion Carlos Palomino will defend his title against England's Dave Green early in October, promoter Aileen Eaton of the Los Angeles Olympic Auditorium announced Friday.

The exact date and site of the 147-pound title match will be decided later. Mrs. Eaton will promote the 15-round match in conjunction with Top Rank, Inc., of New York City.

Palomino, of Huntington Beach, Calif., successfully defended against Green in London on June, 14, 1977, scoring an 11th round knockout. The Britisher currently is ranked the No. 2 challenger by the WBC.

Kelley Reveals Optimism On Upcoming Season

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Louis Kelley jiggled the change in his pocket, rubbed his hand over his face and forehead, folded then unfolded his arms before leaning back in his chair and beginning to squirm.

rationalized the constant motion by emphasizing that he had a lot on his mind.

This season, Kelley and the Matadors will begin a new era in the history of Estacado football. Since the school's opening in 1967, the Matadors have competed in district 3-AAA. However, because of realignment, Estacado will now battle in the 1-AAA race.

"I really don't see that 1-AAA will be tougher than 3-AAA," said Kelley as he began brushing his mustache with his right hand. "Both districts have about the same number of strong and weak teams."

That may be true, but one of Estacado's opponents this season—Dumas—is rated higher than any of the 3-AAA teams. Dumas has been picked second in the state.

"I really feel that the ratings are blown way out of proportion," said Kelley still brushing his mustache. "Dumas does have lots of folks back. But the only way to find out if the polls are correct is on the football field."

Speaking of having a lot of experience back, the Matadors return 16 lettermen from a team that posted a 6-4 overall record. The Matadors were 5-1 in district play.

"I think offensively we're further along than in any of the four years I've coached here," said the Matador mentor.

Kelley attributes a different strategy for the offensive improvement.

"Instead of devoting the entire time to conditioning, we divided the time in our two-a-day sessions between conditioning and running through some offensive and defensive plays," said Kelley.

But even with the improvement, everything has not gone the Matadors' way. With the opener still a week away against Plainview, Estacado has already lost two players for the contest. Quarterback Mike Chatham will miss the game with a pulled hamstring and wingback James Rose will be out of action with a separated shoulder.

MATADORS AT A GLANCE

DISTRICT—1-AAA. HEAD COACH—Louis Kelley(New Mexico State). RECORD AT SCHOOL—21-11. OVERALL RECORD—53-29-1. ASSISTANTS—Percy Hines (Tennessee State), Larry York (Texas Tech), Clarence Weatherspoon (Jarvis), Roy Farmer (Texas A&I). LAST YEAR'S RECORD—6-4, 5-1 in district. LETTERMEN RETURNING—16. LETTERMEN LOST—18. STARTERS RETURNING—4 Offense, 4 Defense.

THE ROSTER

"We're not in as bad as shape as some people may think,' said Kelley. "Because we've had people step in and assume the responsibilities."

In paticular, Kelley has been impressed with the play of Kenneth Henderson (175, Sr) at quarterback and Preston Davis (143, Jr) at wingback.

"Kenneth told me at the end of last season that he was coming to workouts this summer with the intention of beating Mike (Chatham) out of the starting quarterback spot," said Kelley. "I didn't think he could do it. But now, when Mike is able to come back, he will really have a fight on his hands in regaining the starting job."

Tailback is another position that has brought unexpectant joy to Kelley's heart.

George Irvin (152, Jr) is listed as the number one tailback. But besides playing tailback, Irvin is also the starting right corner back on defense.

"George is listed number one because he's had the most varsity experience," said Kelley. "But we have the people with the talent to spell George. I'm hoping that by the middle of the season that we can just concentrate George on defense."

Those people that have showed potential in practice have been Kelvin White (171, Soph), Robert Humphrey (160, Sr), and Todd Parsons (165, Sr).

Kelley installed the I-formation as the main offense with the tailback being the workhorse following the conclusion of the 1975 season. The 1975 season was the last year that Estacado won a district championship. The Matadors ran out of the wishbone formation in recording a 9-3 record. Pecos defeated the Matadors 12-2 in quarterfinal play.

"We changed formations to keep opponents honest," said Kelley. "Opponents that season didn't pay any attention to our passing game, because in all honesty, we didn't have one. But now the teams that we play will have to be aware of the pass. We have the people who have the capability of doing some damage."

When asked if there were any noticable comparisions between the last championship team and this year's club, Kelley paused for a moment.

"This club (1978) doesn't have the talent as the championship team," said Kelley. "This team just isn't as strong. But these kids were freshmen when we won our last district title and I feel they have a better knowledge of our offense. This team has worked harder than any squad I've ever coached."

"It took us until the fourth gme last year to get our offense moving," said Kelley. "But when we moved Rusty Johnson (195, Sr) and Mike Esquivel (167, Sr) to the tackle positions, our offense really got untracked."

Estacado's fourth opponent last season was Monterey. Monterey beat Estacado, 10-7, but the Matadors then went on to win five of their last six games.

"We lost on the scoreboard, but we dominated in all the statistics against Monterey," said Kelley while wiping his brow as if to remove perspirationn that was not there.

The right guard will be Darryl Saunders (168, Sr). His counterpart at left guard will be Greg Evans (204, Jr).

"Darryl has had some varsity experience," said Kelley "But Greg doesn't. Greg played junior varsity ball last year. He has looked good in practice, but you never know until you see how he performs in a game."

Rose, who also anchors the tackle position on defense along with his wingback duties on offense, will be out of action for an unlimited length of time. That leaves end Steve Wright (202, Sr) to build the defensive line around .

Steve played in all 10 games last season, and is the most experienced player back along the defensive wall,' said Kelley. "But again, I don't feel our defense will lack in quality with the replacements."

Those replacements include Esquivel and Leonard Chatham (202, Soph).

Kelley feels the glue to the defensive unit will be at linebacker. Outside linebackers Fred Dunn (183, Sr) and Kenneth Davis (165, Jr) have the experience in reading offenses.

But the Matadors lineup in a 4-3 defense. So, what about the middle?

"Well, Mike (Chatham) is the person that we hoped would play there," said Kelley. "But since he's being bothered with an injury, we've substituted Steve McGraw (159, Jr)."

Is McGraw an equal substitute?

"I'd say Steve has better lateral motion than Mike," said Kelley. "But Steve is also smaller than Mike. He is having a problem with straight on blocking."

One area, however, in which Kelley sees no flaws is in the defensive secondary.

Besides Irvin, the Matadors will have Preston Davis at the left corner, Dewey Turner (220, Sr) will play the strong safety and Willis Flowers (152, Sr) will be at free safety.

The most likely player to standout before the snap of the ball is Turner. Besides being a hefty 220-pounds, Turner stands 6-4. Turner also doubles as the Matadors tight end.

"Dewey might not be the fastest strong safety, but he is quick," said Kelley. "Anyways, it will give the opposition something to think about when they see him in our secondary."

Kelley then rose to his feet. As the conversation proceeded down the hallway, Kelley still kept folding and unfolding his arms.

Are you sure your not nervous?

"No, not at all," said Kelley. "I'm looking forward to the start of the season. But oh, is Plainview going to be tough.

Then if your not nervous, where are we walking to?

"I'm going down here to see about about some of these problems that are on my mind," smiled Kelley as he walked into the principal's office.

PLAINFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Tournament favorite Bob Clampett moved into the fifth round of the United States Amateur Golf Championship defeating John Jones in a morning match Friday at the Plainfield Country Club.

Clampett, of Carmel, Cal., took the lead when Jones bogeyed the par-four 445-yard second hole and never trailed in registering a 3 and 2 victory.

Clampett, who this year became the only player ever to capture the Western Junior and Amateur championship in the same year, played the 16 holes in 1-under par. Clampett was scheduled to face Rod Spittle, the 1977 Canadian Amateur champion, in Friday's afternoon session.

Rangers Survive Milwaukee, 5-4

By The Associated Press

Mike Hargrove and Al Oliver hit RBI doubles in a four-run third inning Friday night, helping the Texas Rangers survive two Don Money homers for a 5-4 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Ferguson Jenkins, 13-8, scattered nine hits and got ninth-inning relief help from Reggie Cleveland as the Rangers won their sixth game in the last eight.

A single by Juan Beniquez started the third as the Rangers overcame a 1-0 deficit. The runs scored on Hargrove's double, an RBI single by John Lowenstein, Oliver's double and a single by Bobby Bonds off Lary Sorensen, 15-10.

Don Money hit his 11th homer in the Brewer sixth and hit another in the eighth to bring Milwaukee within 4-3, but Toby Harrah homered in the ninth for a two-run Rangers bulge.

CUBS 14, ASTROS 11

Bill Buckner drove in four runs with a homer and two doubles and the Chicago Cubs scored in all eight innings they batted, outlasting the Houston Astros 14-11.

With the score tied 9-9, Rodney Scott led off the bottom of the sixth with a walk. Buckner then belted his third homer of the season and the Cubs' fourth of game off reliever Joe Sambito, 4-7.

INDIANS 4, TWINS 1

A pair of RBI singles by Andre Thornton and solo homers by Bo Diaz and Bernie Carbo backed the four-hit pitching of David Clyde and carried the Cleveland Indians to a 4-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Clyde, 6-9, won for the first time since July 16. He went the first seven innings, striking out five and walking for before being relieved by Dan Spillner.

MARINERS 3, YANKEES 0

Paul Mitchell pitched a four-hitter for his second shutout of the season, carrying the Seattle Mariners to a 3-0 victory over New York and snapping the Yankees' winning streak at seven games.

The outcome also ended a six-game winning streak for Catfish Hunter, 9-5, who gave up seven hits in the eight innings he pitched.

ORIOLES 3-9, WHITE SOX 0-3

Rookie right-hander Sammy Stewart struck out seven consecutive batters, a major league record for a first-time starter, and led the Baltimore Orioles to a 9-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox for a sweep of their twi-night double-header.

The youngster's 5 1-3-inning performance upstaged a first-game triumph by Cy Young Award winner Jim Palmer, who got relief help from Don Stanhouse and won his 17th of the season with a 3-0 triumph in the opener.

Stewart lasted only 51-3 innings, but won after Lee May and Eddie Murray hit home runs for a 7-0 lead after two innings.

Following a shaky first inning, during which he had an error and a wild pitch, Stewart struck out the next seven batters before Mike Squires flied out for the second out in the fourth.

The record of six consecutive strikeouts by a pitcher in his major league debut was shared by Karl Spooner of the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1954 and Pete Richert of the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1962.

ANGELS 6, BLUE JAYS 4

Brian Downing's two-out single to right field capped a three-run California eighth-inning uprising as the Angels rallied for a 6-4 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

It was the second time the Angels had fought from behind in the game. A solo homer by Lyman Bostock and a two-run shot by Ron Jackson had pulled the Angels into a 3-3 tie in the fourth.

TIGERS 6, ROYALS 2

Steve Kemp cracked a three-run home run and Jack Billingham won his 15th game of the season as the Detroit Tigers cruised to a 6-2 triumph over the Kansas City Royals.

The loss, coupled with California's 6-4 victory over Toronto, sliced the Royals' American League-West lead to one game over the Angels.

PIRATES 8-3, BRAVES 3-0

Dale Berra hit a two-run homer to back the combined three-hit pitching of Bruce Kison and Kent Tekulve, giving the Pittsburgh Pirates a 3-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves and a sweep of their twi-night double-header.

The Pirates, winners of five in a row and 17 of their last 20 games, took the opener 8-3 with the aid of two RBI each by Dave Parker, Willie Stargell, and Ed Ott.

Tekulve, major league leader with 75 relief appearences, notched saves in both games to raise his season total to 28.

REDS 5, CARDINALS 2

Joe Morgan scored a disputed run from first base on a ground-rule double with two out in the fifth inning, helping the Cincinnati Reds beat the St. Louis Cardinals 5-2 in a game played under protest.

Morgan's run, on a blow by Dan Driessen, was followed by Johnny Bench's RBI single, breaking up a pitching duel between Cincinnati's winning starter Paul Moskau, 4-4, and the Cards' John Denny, 11-9.

A'S 5, RED SOX 1

Matt Keough, 8-11, Bob Lacey and Dave Heaverlo combined on a six-hitter as the A's handed Boston a second consecutive defeat.

The Red Sox retained their 6½-game lead in the American League East, however. The second-place New York Yankees lost 3-0 to Seattle.

The A's, whose only victory in 17 previous games was an 8-4 decision over the Red Sox August 19.

Horns May Pass More

America candidate Johnnie Johnson at weakside safety.

The kicking game is even more secure, with all-America Russell Erxleben who averaged 41.4 yards per punt a year ago, but missed the national title since he didn't boot the minimum number. Erxleben also shares the NCAA mark for the longest field goal, a 67-yarder against Rice, with former Arkansas kicker Steve Little, who booted one the same distance against the Longhorns.

"Russell is one of the most outstanding football players in the country," said Akers. "He might just be the best in the country. He plays his position as well as anyone in the country."

"This year, he'll have an opportunity to win that title, since he'll have to kick more (without Campbell)."

Akers could have added that the defense will have more chances to prove itself, at least until the offense develops.

QUOTES

Defensive end TIM CAMPBELL, on borrowing a few dollars from his older brother, first-round draft pick Earl Campbell: "We never talk about it, but if I called and asked for it, he's send it."

Quarterback RANDY McEACHERN, on the long list of QB possibles: "The competition is beneficial. It'll make me try harder, especially on my running. With eight quarterbacks, you don't get enough work in practice, but they're going to cut down to four this weekend."

Kicker RUSSELL ERXLEBEN, on competition with Aggie kicker Tony Franklin: "I wished I had been well when we played last year. The wind was really blowing. Beforethe game, Tony was practicing from 75 yards with the wind. If I hadn't been hurt, I'd have lined mine up r8ght beside him and we'd have had a contest right there." On the new rule bringing missed field goals back to the line of scrimmage if outside the 20: "Naturally, it hurts me, but looking at from the fans' standpoint, I think it's better as it is. People come to see offense, not kicking."

ENMU Hosts Sul Ross State

PORTALES, N.M (Special)—Eastern New Mexico University will reveal its new Veer offense Saturday, when the Greyhounds open the 1978 football season hosting Sul Ross State. Kickoff is slated for 7:30 p.m.

Veterans dominated the Greyhound starting roster which includes eight seniors, five juniors, and eight sophomores.

The Greyhounds will have Rickett Layne, a Fort Worth sophomore, as the number one signal caller. Layne, 6-1, 170-pounds is a double threat. Besides having an accurate throwing arm, Layne is also know for his scrambling ability.

Some Hi-Fidelity tips on buying Stereo equipment

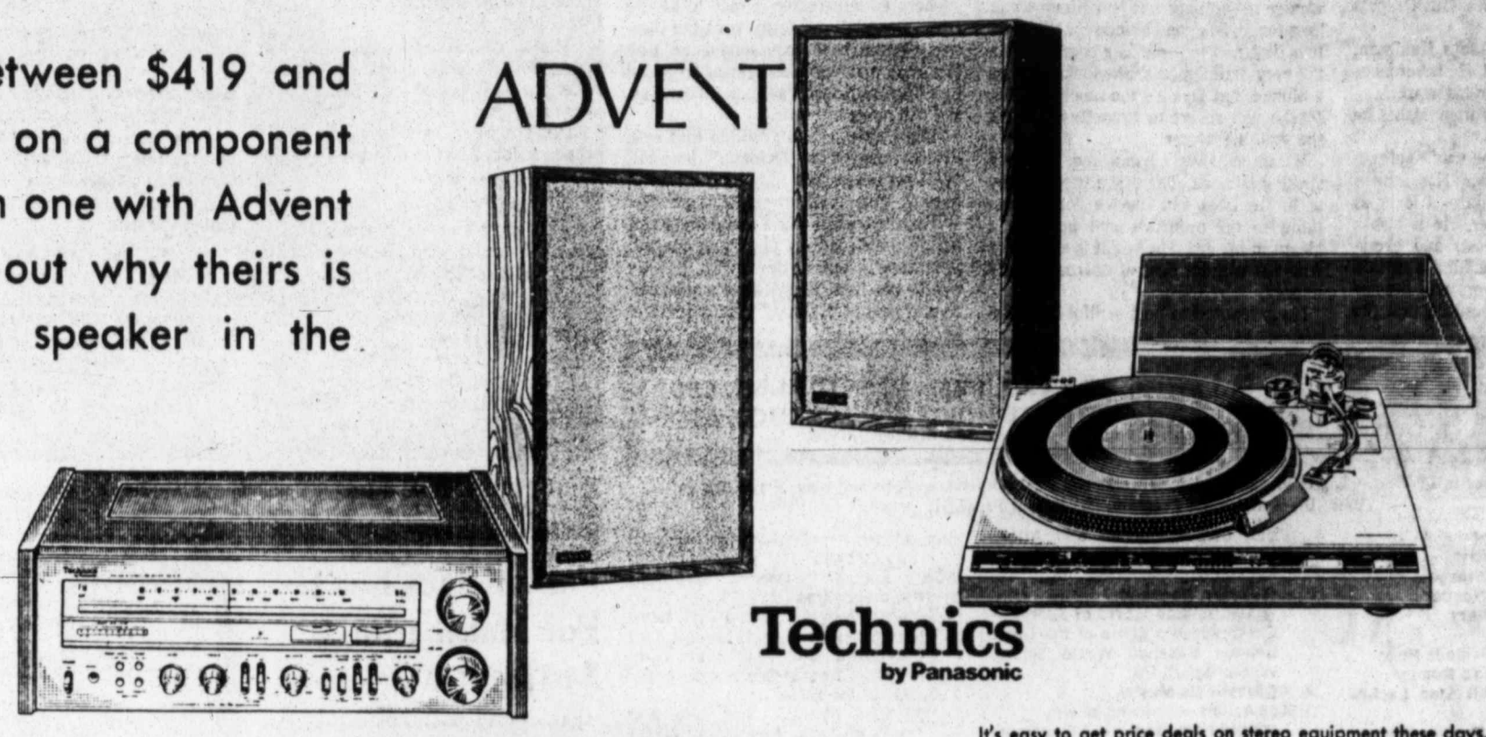
If you have between $419 and $749 to spend on a component system, invest in one with Advent speakers. Find out why theirs is the best-selling speaker in the country.



THE SALESMANS CHOICE

If you're planning to spend more than $750 on a stereo system, make sure it sounds better than this one (above) THE NEW ADVENT LOUD—SPEAKERS, THE TECHNICS SA-500 AM-FM STEREO RECEIVER and the Technics SL-230 AUTOMATIC BELT DRIVE TURNTABLE WITH BASE and DUST COVER. SHURE M-91ED STEREO CARTRIDGE...

HI-FIDELITY PRICE $419.00

MORE PEOPLE BUY THE ADVENT LOUDSPEAKER THAN ANY OTHER SPEAKER IN AMERICA.

When they were first introduced in 1969, no one had ever heard of Advent speakers. No one would believe that an inexpensive, two-way speaker could sound terrific, even though it did. But word-of-mouth advertising has changed all that. Now the Advent Loudspeaker is the best selling speaker in America and has been for over 4 years now. There's a good reason. It accurately reproduces every sound your records, tapes, or FM broadcasts have to offer. And the Advent/2 and Advent/3 speakers deliver everything the Advent Loudspeaker delivers except for the very bottom one-half octave of bass response.

Advent speakers are smaller in size as well as in cost. But they sound big and detailed and accurate. In fact, Advent makes the only small speaker that can reproduce all 10 octaves of music. So you can still have a roomful of sound without a roomful of gadgetry.

WE COULD SELL THESE SYSTEMS FOR LESS MONEY WITH CHEAPER COMPONENTS.

But we've made sure the components are perfectly matched. We've selected only those name-brand components that would give maximum performance, complement the other components, and come as close as possible to the high standards of our more expensive systems. We chose receivers to drive the speakers smoothly, pull radio stations into your living room by the bundle and keep them there. We chose turntables that take care of your records, yet don't let their sound go unexplored.

YOU CAN SPEND MORE (AND GET MORE) BUT DOLLAR FOR DOLLAR, YOU WON'T.

A lot of people who own medium low-cost stereo systems have had to settle for mediocre sounding radio-phonograph set-ups because of all the other things money has to go for. Like food.

THE REAL THING

HI-FIDELITY PRICE $499.00

One Year Speaker Exchange means that one year from purchase date, you can exchange the speaker system or systems for any speaker or systems with a selling price of $150 or more each.

5yr. WARRANTY

Five Year Protection Contract is in addition to the regular manufacturer's warranty. All electronic components are covered for 5 years on parts and 3 years on labor. Record and tape equipment is covered by a full 3 year warranty on parts and labor.

20-Day Exchange Privilege assures you of satisfaction after you buy. You may exchange any piece of equipment for another regardless of price within the 20 day period. If you happen to purchase a defective unit this exchange eliminates you owning a "lemon".

It's easy to get price deals on stereo equipment these days. Just look through this paper and you'll see stereo equipment marked down page after page. But most deals on stereo systems are like any other kind. Pay a cheap price and get a cheap product. In the long run, it's not going to satisfy you, and it's more likely to break down.

AT HI-FIDELITY, we aren't trying to give you the lowest possible price on stereo systems, we're trying to give you the best value, dollar for dollar. We've put together good sounding stereos in the $400 to $1000 range...and that's an art.

DON'T TAKE OUR WORD FOR IT.

Talk to someone who owns a pair of Advent speakers. Then listen to a pair. The only way you'll be able to hear the detailed, natural, clear sound of these systems is with good old fashioned listening test.

To let you compare the Advent speakers to other speakers, we've installed new speaker comparison devices in our Sound Rooms. It lets you compare two speakers of varying efficiency at the same volume level. Which is the only way to tell which one actually sounds better. Any other way can misguide you. Especially if you're a novice. Visit our Sound Rooms. Bring a record you'd like to hear more from. See why we say that you can't buy a better sounding stereo system for less money. Not from us, not from anyone.

'Love At First Bite' Leads Pack Of Dracula Films

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Dracula is hot. The Broadway play about the neck-nipper is a smash. Books about him are selling well. And there are a bunch of movies being planned on the old theme.

DICK KLEINER

One is already in front of the cameras. It is "Love At First Bite," which, obviously, takes the comedic approach. It stars George Hamilton, who also co-produced it, with Robert Kaufman, who wrote the script.

Nobody is quite sure why this sudden renaissance in things Draculian. Frankenstein's monster lies cold and still in his morgue. The Creature from the Black Lagoon is, presumably, back in the Black Lagoon. There hasn't been a confirmed werewolf sighting in years. But Dracula is alive and well.

"Dracula is exciting," says Kaufman, "because he's committed. He never gives up until you put a stake in his heart."

"Dracula is what every man wishes he could be," says Hamilton.

Maybe so, especially the way Kaufman wrote this one and the way Hamilton is playing him. This Dracula is a lover as much as he is a monster. He is also a practicing male chauvinist, and everybody connected with the film is certain the active women's libbers will despise it. The film takes the position that the male should be the dominant one and that females, generally, desire that domination.

"Genetically," Hamilton says, "the man is provider and protector. I don't care if women's libbers don't like the picture. Too many men are weak with women, and the women are angry.

So Dracula, as played by George Hamilton, will be dominant as he woos and pursues his lady, played by Susan Saint James. In Kaufman's story, Dracula is 712 years old and he's only seen the girl of his dreams (she keeps being reincarnated) three times in all that time. Now he sees her again, and, this time, nothing is going to stand in his way.

Miss Saint James, who may be the only woman in captivity who can effervesce at long range, has gone blonde for this role. It is designed to serve as a contrast with the very dark Dracula. She looks good as a blonde, but says it's too much trouble, so she will revert to brunetteship after the shooting is over.

Hamilton, always handsome, makes a striking Dracula. There is a wisp of grey at his temples and they've done something to his eyebrows and he adds a gleam in his eye. The result is a monster who has a great deal of charm and humanity.

He is reputed to be a skillful businessman, and, as part-owner of this project, has reportedly carved out a fine deal for himself. He is active, as the co-exectuve producer with Kaufman (Joel Freeman is the line producer), and says he serves as a liason man.

"In a film," he says, "you need a middle ground between the artist — who wants to do something totally uncompromising — and the producer — who just wants to stick to the budget.

"I've done 79 films," he says, "and that's more than anybody else involved in the project."

It's certainly more than the director. This is Stan Dragotti's second feature. The first was "Dirty Little Billy," with Michael Pollard about five years ago. Since then, he says, he tried to get financing to do, first, "Bury My Heart At Wounded Knee" and then Isaac Asimov's "I, Robot," but without success.

There is, apparently, a race to be the first "Dracula" movie to reach the theatres. Several have been announced. Bob Kaufman believes that the ones proposed by directors Roger Vadim and Ken Russell will never be made.

"But Universal's $10 million film with Frank Langella as Dracula," he said, "will get made. And they have vowed to bury us. They think we ripped them off.

"But the truth is that I wrote this script before the Broadway play even opened. Still, they're out to destroy us, but we will be out first. They'll have a good picture, a kind of 'Exorcist' kind of picture, while ours is a comedy."

Dick Shawn, Richard Benjamin and Arte Johnson are others in the cast of "Love At First Bite." Shawn wrote the title song, which Dionne Warwicke has signed to sing over the titles.

Hamilton, as Dracula, is in tails throughout the film, always elegance personified. He says it is his curse to play elegant roles.

"My image," he says, "is a dress extra in a world of blue jeans. I did nothing to change it — you can't change your image — so I might as well live with it. You can't go up to people and say 'Gee, that's not me, fellas.'"

So he's in his tails, with his arched eyebrows and graying temples and built-in leer — maybe the most elegant Dracula of them all.

Surveyed Physicians Oppose Saccharin Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The artificial sweetener saccharin, which has been under attack because of a possible link to cancer, got a boost in a survey of 517 health professionals.

The survey of physicians, dentists and dietitians showed that 70 percent of them opposed a ban on saccharin, indicating that in their views the benefits of the sweetener outweigh its potential harm.

The survey was sponsored by the Calorie Control Council, a group representing low-calorie food manufacturers and the soft drink industry.

Father Sues Foxx For Making Pass At Hotel Worker

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Comedian Redd Foxx has been sued by the father of a teen-age hotel bus girl who claims the entertainer made sexual overtures to her and called her obscene names when she rejected him.

The suit was filed in Clark County District Court on Thursday by Charles A. Branda on behalf og his daughter Cheryl, a 15-year-old who works at the Silverbird Hotel and Casino. The alleged incident occurred Aug. 19, according to the suit.

Foxx was not available for comment on the charges.

The action alleges that Foxx, whose real name is John Elroy Sanford, touched the girl while she was working and proclaimed, "This is the one I want."

Foxx then shouted obscenities at her when she told him to leave her alone, according to the suit.

"Defendant shouted these remarks in a contemptuous manner without provocation from the plaintiff and only because of the fact (she) would not submit to his sexual overtones," the suit alleges. The action seeks general damages of $10,000 and punitive damages of $10,000 and contends the girl became hysterical and nervous after the alleged incident.

Heavy Touch Mars New Film

FILMETER
A capsule look at cinema

Filmeter is compiled by Dick Kleiner in Hollywood and the NEA staff in both Hollywood and New York.

NEW RELEASES

BLOOD BROTHERS (R) — Paul Sorvino, Tony Lo Bianco, Richard Gere. Drama. Confused Bronx youth squares off against his Italian family/manhood code. Decent, sensitive story and fine performances are marred by a heavy touch and immature resolution. Should have had the once over from a pair of shears. But well worth a look. Caution: strong language, some violence. GRADE: B. (Handler)

CORVETTE SUMMER (PG) Mark Hamill, Annie Potts. Romantic lark. This is really a love story between a boy and his car. Mark Hamill, as the boy, tries to survive the silly script, but can't quite manage it. GRADE: B-minus.

GENERAL RELEASE

ANIMAL HOUSE (R) — John Belushi, Tim Matheson, Thomas Hulce. Comedy. Leave your raised consciousness at home and wallow. All the cliche college characters are here and the cast plays them to the hilt. Raucous and hysterical — a great movie to drink beer by. Warning: Topless cheerleaders and some verbal no-no's. GRADE: A-minus. (O'Brien)

BUDDY HOLLY STORY, THE (PG) — Gary Busey, Don Stroud, Charlie Martin Smith. Biographical drama. When Buddy Holly died at the age of 22 in a plane crash he was already a rock 'n' roll legend. Now, nearly 20 years later, Gary Busey brings Holly alive again in a touching, funny film that shows the life behind the legend. GRADE: A-minus. (Drake)

CHEAP DETECTIVE, THE (PG) — Peter Falk, Ann-Margret and a cast of dozens. Comedy-Mystery. This is Neil Simon's follow-up to "Murder by Death." It's a spoof of all those old Bogart movies. Most of it works, some of it doesn't, but you'll smile most of the way. The plot has more twists than a roomful of disco dancers, but don't worry about it. Just enjoy the gags and funny situations. Grade: B-plus.

CONVOY (R) — Kris Kristofferson, Ali McGraw, Ernest Borgnine. Action. Pointless and sprawling, the cheap ripoff of the CB pop song is maddeningly simplistic. Director Sam Peckinpah hits a new low. GRADE: F. (Posner)

DRIVER, THE (R) — Ryan O'Neal, Bruce Dern, Isabelle Adjani, Ronee Blakley. Melodrama. A getaway driver for bank robbers is the anti-hero of this low-key, slickly made car-crash epic. It's a contest between him and the cop who'll do anything to get his man. Everybody is rotten in this one, but there are plenty of car chases to keep you busy. GRADE: B.

EYES OF LAURA MARS (R) — Faye Dunaway, Tommie Lee Jones. Mystery. A basically good idea — a fashion photographer who sees visions of her friends' murders, and they all come true — is ruined by pretentiousness. Everything here is overdone, from the direction to the costumes to the make-up. The end result is a film that tries to be different and only succeeds in being bad. Caution: Gratuitous nudity, violence and raunchy vocabulary. GRADE: C-.

FOUL PLAY (PG) — Goldie Hawn, Chevy Chase. Comedy-thriller. The plot has more holes than an old Swiss cheese, but who cares? It's fun and scary to watch poor Goldie, the innocent, get involved with assassins, and dwarfs and albinos and snakes and all kinds of strange goings-on. It's very slick, with some laughs and some shrieks. GRADE: B-plus.

HEAVEN CAN WAIT (PG) — Warren Beatty, Julie Christie, Dyan Cannon, Charles Grodin. Comedy. A cheerful, gentle fantasy about a Heavenly mistake concerning the death of a pro football player. So he gets another chance — and another body. This time he's a tycoon, but he still wants to be a quarterback. Even the heavies are lovable in this upbeat film. GRADE: B-plus.

HOOPER (PG) — Burt Reynolds, Sally Fields, Jan-Michael Vincent. Action comedy. Sonny Hooper (Reynolds), reigning king of the Hollywood stuntmen, starts to feel the heat from the new kid in town (Vincent). Slam-bang combination of comedy and stunts directed by former superstunter Hal Needham. Solid Reynolds fare, plenty of fun. Caution: some strong language. GRADE: A-minus. (Gilles)

JAWS 2 (PG) — Roy Scheider. Action-thriller. Here we go again, but this time it misses the mark. The story is poor, the direction is weak, the shark looks fishy. Some moments of excitement but generally pretty dull. Compared to the first one, this sequel is strictly a sinker. GRADE: C.

REVENGE OF THE PINK PANTHER (PG) — Peter Sellers, Dyan Cannon, Herbert Lom. Comedy. The old Pink Panther is turning a bit green with overripeness. This, the fifth in the series, has more plot than its predecessors, but the gags are less inventive, more repetitious. Still, you know what you are getting when you buy a ticket. GRADE: C-plus.

SGT. PEPPER'S LONELY HEARTS CLUB BAND (PG) — Peter Frampton, several Gibb brothers. Rock operetta. Even our 8-year-old critic was bored, and old Beatles' fans were enraged by the sacrilege. Pathetic plot, overdone gags. GRADE: F.

SWARM, THE (PG) — Michael Caine, Richard Widmark, Katharine Ross and an all-star cast. Disaster. Producer-director Irwin Allen, the father of the disaster movie, has been a busy bee on this one, but it's overlong and sometimes downright laughable. The swarms of killer bees have their moments of frightening — or disgusting — us, but the dialogue is dumb. GRADE: D (Wish it could have been a Bee-plus).

(Film grading: A — Superb; B — Good; C — Average; D — Poor; F — Awful)

Anti-Nuclear Media Charge Industry Harassment

By ELEANOR SMITH
(c) Pacific News Service 1978

More than 20 years of shrinking expectations and growing public disenchantment with nuclear power have forced the nuclear industry to divide its public relations effort between "accentuating the positive" and "eliminating the negative."

Today the industry is engaged in both a stepped-up advertising campaign behind "Citizen Atom" and, according to television and movie writers and producers, an ambitious, expensive and controversial effort to block or influence films and TV shows depicting the potential perils of nuclear power.

Targets of the so-called "media watch and suppression effort" have ranged from the ridiculous to the sublime, from Spiderman to Karen Silkwood. Those involved in the productions contend that in many instances the nuclear industry as scored successes in keeping controversial material off the airwaves and movie screens.

"There is an ongoing effort to suppress all anti-nuclear media coverage," said "Don Widener, an Emmy Award-winning filmmaker who has produced two films on nuclear power. "Anyone trying to produce nuclear films hears from the industry."

While it is hardly surprising that the industry should be interested in such projects, and in fact denies exercising any influence, Widener believes their meddling has been unfair and damaging. He claims that while working on the 1971 film, "The Powers That Be," he received a threatening phone call in the middle of the night from the public relations director at the Atomic Energy Commission.

According to Widener, the caller asked if he were going to use anything on plutonium in the film, and warned that he would "go to higher sources" to stop him.

During negotiations for his 1977 film, "Plutonium: Element of Risk," Widener said, "PBS (Public Broadcasting System) got a letter from Atomic Industrial Forum President Carl Walske, screaming about the fact that I was doing another film." The letter, addressed to Henry Loomis, president of the Corp. for Public Broadcasting, complained that Widener was the "producer of a slanderously anti-nuclear program, 'The Power That Be.'"

PBS proceeded to complete the $124,000 film, but then decided to withhold it from national scheduling because it was "one-sided" and "over simplified." Consequently, only a dozen of the 268 PBS affiliates bought and used the film, which features actor Jack Lemmon demonstrating how to build a plutonium bomb in your kitchen.

Andrew Yocum, PBS director of scheduling, denies Widener's charge that the network yielded to industry pressure. "That was never even mentioned, nor was it thought," he said.

The nuclear industry's switch to the offensive in public relations may be traced to a 1975 memo prepared by Cambridge Reports Inc., a consulting firm that works for the electric utility industry. "Public support for the electric utility industry is clearly on the decline," the memo said. It then outlined a campaign to "stop the erosion we've seen in the last year in support for nuclear power."

The campaign targeted women, the young, the less educated, lower income people and blacks — what the film called "low-socio-economic status people...the weakest link in the anti-nuclear coalition," as those who could be "made to understand."

As public concern about nuclear power continues to build and as orders from new reactors continues to decline, the Atomic Industrial Forum (AIF), the industry's main lobbying arm, initiated the Infowire, a telecommunications system to spread information to members nationwide. It also conducted a seminar in Las Vegas on "Nuclear Information Strategies: New Setting, New Approaches."

Some of those new approaches were revealed at the industry's 1977 conference in San Francisco, at a seminar on how to "Make TV Work for You," Leonard Roller, public relations consultant, exhorted the crowd of technocrats to "accentuate the positive" in TV interviews, and to "do some investigative reporting of your own — find out what the reporter's attitude is."

"Video is visceral," he said and suggested that they hone their comments into such short catchy slogans as "nuclear power is safer than sex."

The industry last year spent more than $60 million on advertising and public relations, according to the Environmental Action Foundation's Utility Scoreboard. One utility, Georgia Power Co., spent more than $4 million. It has acknowledged that it operates an intelligence program in Atlanta with an annual budget of $750,000 and nine investigators to keep tabs on anti-nuclear protestors and projects.

Armed with the Infowire and the growing public relations budget, the industry has managed to generate almost instantaneos and monumental dissent to what it considers negative media coverage of nuclear power.

In January 1977, NBC Special Reports aired "Danger: Radioactive Wastes," an investigative report on the problems of nuclear waste disposl. Immediately afterward the Infowire carried an urgent advisory to members to protest the show to NBC officials, government officials and the sponsors, Textron Inc. and Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co.

While NBC stood behind the program and issued a point-by-point refutation of the Atomic Industrial Forum charges, the sponsors yielded. Northwestern Mutual said it will never again sponsor a TV documentary on nuclear power, and Textron said it is unlikely it will, either.

CBS and ABC have also dealt with industry efforts to suppress or alter programming. CBS resisted AIF pressure to postpone an episode of "Hawaii Five-O" on a plutonium terrorist plot. And ABC rejected an AIF bid to prevent airing of an episode of "Most Wanted," which depicted a group of plutonium hijackers threatening a large U.S. city. However, several local stations decided independently not to broadcast the "Most Wanted" episode.

Last spring, CBS officials met with AIF representatives who wanted to "offset the impact" of a two-part episode of the children's show "Spiderman," which dealt with nuclear terrorism. CBS aired the show on April 5 and 12.

"The pro-nuclear lobby is highly organized," said John Angier, producer of the PBS science series "Nova." "They conduct large mailing campaigns," he said and referred to angry mail protests following two "Nova" programs on nuclear issues, "The Plutonium Connection" and "Incident at Brown's Ferry."

Angier said he wasn't surprised by the protest, only that he received "identical letters of protest from PR men" representing different nuclear companies.

The industry also has attempted to block production of Hollywood films, according to some producers.

Film rights to Tom Scortia and Frank Robinson's book, "The Prometheus Crisis," concerning a reactor meltdown were sold to Paramount Pictures in 1975. A few months later Paramount dropped the option, blaming "problems with the script" and "changes in management."

However, producer Peter Bart, whom Paramount assigned to oversee the film, claimed that an AIF representative visited the studio to discuss the production shortly afterward.

"It was all very slick," Bart told Richard Pollock of Critical Mass Journal, an anti-nuclear publication. "Nobody from AIF ever said, 'We're going to blow up your office,'" but, Bart said, they got their message across.

Paramount, Pollock noted, is a subsidiary of Gulf & Western, which also owns the Energy Production Group (EPG), a division that manufactures products for nuclear power plants. A third of Gulf & Western's gross earnings for 1975 were related to the EPG.

The rights for "The Prometheus Crisis" have since been sold to independent filmmaker George Braunstein of Crystal Juke-Box Film Corp. Braunstein said he has had problems getting financing. "Everyone is pretty scared to get involved. It's too controversial for a main studio...It's like an ant taking on an elephant."

Similar problems have troubled filmmakers Buzz Hirsch and Larry Cano of Carand Productions. Since 1974 they have been trying to make a documentary film on the death of Karen Silkwood, an employee of the Kerr-McGee plutonium plant near Oklahoma City.

Silkwood died in a mysterious auto accident on the way to a meeting with a New York Times reporter to whom she had promised to divulge evidence on the plant's safety violations. Her family is suing Kerr-McGee and police agents for conspiracy to violate her civil rights and cover up the facts of her death.

Hirsch and Cano have spent $90,000 on the project, but have met obstacles all along the way. According to affidavits by witnesses, Kerr-McGee investigators have contacted their friends, sources and even the California finance company that held the loan on Cano's car.

A production assistant, who asked not to be identified to avoid further harassment, said her home was broken into and files and papers relating to the film were rifled. When police arrived to investigate, she said, the first thing they asked was, "How deep are you in the Silkwood case?

In early 1977 Kerr-McGee subpoened all the filmmakers' research material, claiming the papers were relevant to the Silkwood family lawsuit. The filmmakers lost the first legal battle to withhold the evidence, but won an appeal in federal court a year ago.

Cano said that the apparently unhindered airing of a recent episode of the "Lou Grant" TV show, which appeared to draw heavily from the Silkwood case, might be "a breakthrough. It opens the door and gives an air of respectability to the subject," he said.

Another door-opener could be "Power," a film starring Jane Fonda and Jack Lemmon in a tale about an accident at a nuclear power plant that also resembles the Silkwood case. Producer Michael Douglas said he was not intimidated by the nuclear industry. His film is scheduled for release next spring.

Prisoner Gives No Plea, Enjoys Ride

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I have no defense," the prisoner, facing a $48,288.75 tax judgment, told a surprised judge. He explained he made the trip to his court appearance merely to enjoy the ride.

Gary Frederick Ayers, serving a prison term in Marion, Ill., appeared in U.S. Tax Court in St. Louis after he was charged by the Internal Revenue Service with not reporting income from several bank robberies in Nevada.

The IRS calculated that Ayers owed $37,031 in taxes on robbery income of $78,153, plus a penalty of $9,257.75 for failure to file an income tax return.

"I have no defense," Ayers told Judge Bruce M. Forrester during the hearings last March, according to an IRS transcript released Friday.

"I'm in a United States penitentiary doing 25 years," Ayers said. "When I finish that, I go to Nevada to do a life sentence. All I wanted to do was come up here for a ride. What that man says is exactly true. Now, it's back to you, friend."

Emergency Farm Loans Available

PLAINVIEW (Special) — A new economic emergency loan service for farmers who have financial problems caused by credit shortage or cost-price squeeze is now in effect through the U. S. Farmers Home Administration (FmHA).

Karson L. Bivins, the agency's county supervisor for Hale County, says that FmHA is prepared to take applications at the Hale County Office in Plainview.

Economic emergency loans are authorized under the Agricultural Credit Act of 1978 signed by President Carter Aug. 4. They offer special help to farmers who are hard-pressed by recent shortages of credit from their regular lenders, or by debts accumulated during the recent period of low farm prices.

Bivins said the economic emergency loan program was enacted in recognition of the fact that "economic conditions, as well as weather, are often beyond farmers control." FmHA emergency credit has previously been confined to loans for recovery from natural disaster, or the guarantee of private lenders' loans to livestock producers affected by economic conditions.

Under the new economic emergency program, any established farm operator — the individual, partnership, corporation or cooperative experiencing scarce credit or an overload of debt coming due, may apply for up to $400,000 of credit through FmHA in order to survive in farming and continue the normal level or operation. Economic emergency loans will not be made to expand a farm operation.

Loans made directly by FmHA will be at an interest rate equivalent to the cost of money secured by the government through sale of its securities to the public, plus an administrative add-on of up to 1 percent. The rate initially will be 8 1/2 percent. Guaranteed loans will be made at rates negotiated between borrower and lender, with FmHA providing the lender up to 90 percent quarantee against loss.

Loans for operating purposes will be made for terms of up to seven years, with loan consolidations and rescheduling for another seven years permitted, and 20-year payment authorized under special conditions. Real estate loans may be made for up to 40 years. Loans for annually-recurring expenses will be repayable annually.

Bivins said initial inquiries about economic emergency loans can be made either through a commercial agricultural lender or the county FmHA office serving the county where the farm is located. The act calls for decision by FmHA on individual applications within 30 days.

While introducing the new economic emergency farm loan, FmHA will continue all pre-existing services. They include various programs of non-emergency real estate and production loans to family-size farms, terms of which will soon be broadened under the recent credit act; emergency loans to farms damaged by natural disaster, and loans or grants for housing, community facilities and business and industry in rural areas.

Live Cattle Futures Make Up Early Loss

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures quickly rallied from an early loss of 17 and finished 10 to 112 points higher led by October which was up 117 just before the close Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Sales were active at 21,396 despite the holiday.

Initial selling spilled over from Thursday, but support was encouraged by the one cent advance in carcass beef and reduced cattle supplies. Traders also noted open interest gained despite aggressive liquidation by a leading house Thursday.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 81 cents a pound, for all weights which was a three week high. Cash cattle were steady with the best top at $54 per hundredweight. Slaughter was 142,000 head. The major markets expect 20,900 head Monday.

Feeder cattle futures ran up 47 to 105 led by September on 1,498 cars. The contract gained 107 for a time. The market rebounded after an early loss of 55 in October.

Initial selling carried over from Thursday, but was arrested as live cattle futures advanced and traders also noted strength in beef and reduced cattle supplies. Bullish sentiment was also buoyed by economist Gene Futrell's projections for record high feeder cattle prices in the next few years.

Cash feeder cattle were steady with the best top at $66.90 per hundredweight at West Fargo. Receipts at the major terminals Monday are expected to be 1,800 head.

Hog futures erased an early gain of 90 in distant October and 47 in nearby December to close 110 lower to 25 higher. August was down the most on an offer with July off 100. Distant December gained. Volume was 3,598 cars.

The erratic action was traced to evening up ahead of the weekend with selling genreally on lower cash hogs, despite reduced arrivals and prospect of a sizeable hog run Tuesday. Support was primarily a spill over from cattle futures.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up one cent at 78 1/2 to 83 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were steady to off $1 with the best top at $49.50 per hundredweight. Kill was 285,000 head and the major markets expect 31,500 head Monday.

Pork belly (bacon) futures ended 42 higher to 5 lower on 2,774 cars. May was up the most with only March ranging lower. May was up 82 and February down 22 in erratic, pre-holiday trade.

Early selling stemmed from lower cash hogs on reduced arrivals. However, traders noted firmer tone to cash bellies and strength in cattle futures as stimulants.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 1/2 cent at 52 to 58 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, which is a two week high.

Corn Borer Makes Texas Appearance

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The European corn borer has made its first appearance in Texas since the mid-1960s, the Texas Agriculture Department warned Friday.

The insect attacks corn and grain sorghum and has been found in Moore County in the Panhandle. Agriculture department personnel will survey the area.

A quarantine could be necessary, the department said, making grain screening or fumigating necessary. Most Moore County grain is sold to local feedlots.

Borer larvae burrow into plant stalks. The pest was found in Bowie County more than 10 years ago, but it was eradicated. It is currently in several states north and east of Texas.

County Tour To Test Cotton Variety

Lamesa (Special) — The annual Dawson County farm tour is scheduled for to begin at 1:30 p.m. Sept. 7. The group will leave from the Forrest Park Community Center.

Cotton variety demonstrations will take place on the Airhart, David Volger and Shofner farms, respectively, beginning at 2:15 p.m. The Donald Volger farm will be the site of a cotton variety test at 4 p.m.

The tour is sponsored by the Dawson County subcommittee on crops in cooperation with the Lamesa Cotton Growers and Lamesa Area Chamber of Commerce.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A STUDY OF THE AMOUNT OF WATER in the Ogallala aquifer and projections for future years in Lubbock County has been completed by the Texas Department of Water Resources.

The study charts the impact and future course of underground water depletion through the next 44 years and its effect on irrigation water production.

In general, the study shows that if present water use and irrigation practices are continued, the aquifer will decline by about 33 percent by the year 2000 and about 53 percent by the year 2020.

Ground water in the High Plains is the lifeblood of the area's agriculture, where about 70 percent of the state's irrigated food and fiber is grown.

GUIDELINES IN THE 63-PAGE STUDY report were obtained by the use of electronic computers that simulate the aquifer's behavior.

Lubbock County had about 5.5 million acre-feet of ground water in storage in 1974. (One acre-foot is 325,900 gallons, enough to cover one acre of land one foot deep.)

The computer study shows that 67 percent of the Lubbock County total, or 3.7 million acre-feet, will be left in storage in 2000 if past water-use patterns and aquifer behavior are are continued.

Only 2.6 million acre-feet, or 47 percent, will remain in storage by the year 2020.

NOWHERE WITHIN THE COUNTY is the water expected to be exhausted, but yields of wells will decrease and expense of irrigation pumpage will increase.

Pumping lifts in Lubbock County wells now range from less than 100 feet to about 300 feet. By the year 2020 pumping lifts are expected to approach 350 feet in some local areas. The increased lifts will require more energy and thus greater cost in bringing the water to the surface.

With the thinning of the aquifer thickness, annual pumpage of water will decline significantly. The amounts expected to be produced in the years 2000 and 2020 are about 131,000 and 111,000 acre-feet, respectively, down from 161,000 in 1974, an overall decline of 31 percent.

During the past three decades, the withdrawal of ground water has greatly exceeded the natural recharge. If this overdraft continues, the aquifer ultimately will be depleted to the point that it may not be economically feasible to produce water for irrigation, the report says.

"Future events can be very different if these trends change," the report says. "The most determinative factor may be the decisions of the water users themselves."

A similar report on Cochran County says the county's 1974 storage of 2.9 million acre-feet can be expected to decline 45 percent to 1.6 million acre-feet in 2000 and 66 percent to 1 million acre-feet by 2020.

Pumpage there is expected to drop from 117,000 acre-feet in 1974 to 94,000 and 69,000 acre-feet in 2000 and 2020, respectively, an overall decline of 41 percent.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures prices closed narrowly mixed in very light pre-holiday trading on the Chicago Board of Trade Friday.

There was some evening out reported early in the session leading into the three-day Labor Day weekend but there was little overnight news to set the market.

The weekly soybean crush report of 16.4 million bushels was interpreted as slightly bullish but triggered little buying.

At the close soybeans ranged from 1/4 to 4 cents a bushel higher September contracts quoted at $6.56 a bushel; wheat was 1/4-1/2 cent lower to 4 1/4 cents higher, September $3.396; corn was 1/2 cent lower to 3/4 cent higher, September $2.13 3/4; and oats were 3/4 to 1 cent higher, September $1.23 1/2.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed $1.00 a bale higher to $1.40 lower Friday.

Prices closed mixed in the absence of any new developments, brokers said.

The average pricee for strict low middling 11-16 inch spot cotton advanced 30 points to 61.09 cents a pound Thursday for the 10 leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market was slow to moderate. Supplies of cotton for sale were heavy and demand was good.

Growers offered 1978 crop contracts at 1,300 to 1,500 points over 1977 loan rates. A few hundred acres were booked late last week and early this week.

Cotton Dust Standards Suspended For Batting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration said Friday it has suspended application of the new cotton dust standard for industries using cotton batting.

The Sept. 4 effective date for all other industries covered by the standards remains unchanged, the government said. Those given a delay include manufacturers of mattresses and upholstered furniture and facilities assembling automotive interiors.

OSHA said those affected by the suspension account for a relatively small part of the industries affected by the standards, although no percentages were available.

Cathy Scott, spokeswoman for OSHA, said the suspension was ordered at the request of industry representatives after the completion of a new study by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health.

Ms. Scott said she could not give any indication of what in the study warranted the delay. The study was an evaluation of a group of workers at a mattress factory.

"It's just that a study has been brought to our attention. We didn't have it then (when the regulations were issued). We do have it now. And we wanted to receive additional comment and give it further study."

The OSHA announcement said that after the new report is studied, Assistant Labor Secretary Eula Bingham, who is in charge of OSHA, "will determine whether it is necessary to reopen the cotton dust record for additional comments or to institute a new rulemaking procedure."

"If OSHA determines that these steps are not necessary, a new effective date will be given for the application of the standard to these industries," the announcement said.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall announced the new cotton dust standards June 19 after years of preparation and debate. They were immediately attacked by the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union, which called them inadequte.

The American Textile Manufacturers Institute, on the other hand, called them "both highly inflationary nd technologically impossible to meet."

The delay granted Friday had been sought by the National Cotton Batting Institute and the Textile Fibers and By-Products Association.

The regulation covering cotton batting operations would set a permissible exposure level of 500 micrograms of lint free cotton dust per cubic meter of air averaged over eight hours.

Bollworms Maintain Threat To Cotton

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Cotton bollworms continue to be in damaging numbers in spotted areas over Hale County, mainly in the irrigated, more tender cotton, according to Olie Liner, county extension agent.

Liner said as the cotton has become tougher, the bollworn in some cases has moved over into soybean fields and is working on the pods of soybeans. He urges farmers to keep a check both in cotton and in soybean fields.

In the soybean fields the pest is known as a pod worm. Some fields, Liner pointed out, have already been damaged by this worm as well as the beet armyworm. They are very difficult to control in soybeans because of so much foliage, Liner pointed out.

Firm Mulls Shift South

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — Electric Boat, Rhode Island's largest private employer, is considering moving its plant in Quonset Point, R.I., to Charleston, S.C., The Day of New London reported Friday.

EB, a major manufacturer of Navy submarines, has more than 4,000 employees in Quonset Point. Submarine hull sections are fabricated at Quonset Point and barged to EB's Groton shipyard, where Trident and SSN-688 submarines are constructed.

Company spokesmen weren't immediately available for comment on The Day's report.
