TDC overcrowding likely won't affect Scurry County jail

Scurry County Sheriff Keith Collier reported Friday the current inmate population status in the county jail is "in good shape".

At 5 p.m. Friday, the Texas Department of Corrections closed its door to new prisoners because a court-ordered occupancy level of 95 percent was reached. State-wide, the closing of state cells to new prisoners has alarmed sheriffs where some facilities are also overcrowded.

While the TDC is closed, prisoners convicted of felony offenses and sentenced to terms in the state prison system would have to be kept in the county jails until normal releases from TDC lowered the inmate population.

Collier estimated the closure would likely result in no overcrowding problems here for at least two months.

As of Friday there were two prisoners from Scurry County ready to be transferred to TDC. Collier said his staff would attempt to do that Monday.

As of 3 p.m. Friday, there were 49 prisoners housed in the Scurry County Jail which has a maximum capacity of 57 depending on the number of male and female inmates.

Of those 49, 10 are prisoners being held here for Midland County under a year-old boarding agreement.

'Minimum' action ends 2-4A inquiry

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

The Snyder school district received an oral reprimand Friday from members of the District 2-4A executive committee for, in the committee's assessment, "unintentionally violating" a state UIL rule regarding summer practice for athletes.

An oral reprimand is considered the minimum punishment the committee could have administered.

The 2-4A executive committee is comprised of superintendents from each of the nine schools comprising the district. Meeting with them from Snyder was Superintendent Bob Hawes, himself a member of the committee, Athletic Director Dennis Tomlin and SHS Principal Ray Courtney.

Friday's session was called to discuss a letter mailed to SHS football athletes last summer which encouraged them to participate in evening "park practices."

The UIL rule regarding summer practice reads that school districts may not single out a "specific group" of high school athletes for "conditioning...(and) preparation" during the summer months.

Regarding the oral reprimand, Len Hise, superintendent for the Big Spring public schools and the current chairman of the 2-4A executive committee, said Friday, "The general feeling was that there was no intent to violate the rule or that (the practice) was done in a purposeful manner to gain an unfair advantage."

He noted the committee--by a vote of 5-2--voted for the oral

Resolution for Ewing scheduled

County commissioners will offer a resolution to honor Chamber of Commerce Manager Mort Ewing Jr. for his service to the community when they meet in regular session Monday at 10 a.m.

Ewing was killed in an automobile accident Wednesday night.

At Monday's meeting, the court will also name a replacement for Randy Davis to the county child welfare board. Davis has resigned that post to become a caseworker for the child welfare department.

In other board changes, commissioners will choose a replacement for Sybil Bley, who declined to serve on the Scurry County

Two new scholarships recent for foundation

A memorial initiated Friday for Mort Ewing is in addition to two fully established scholarships recently introduced into the Western Texas College scholarship foundation program.

For entrance into the foundation--which is managed by a board appointed by WTC--donations of at least $2,000 are required.

The two recent scholarships have been donated by McDonald's here and by friends and family of the late Jeff Polk, a scholarship set aside for fine arts majors at WTC.

McDonald's donated $2,000 to the foundation for scholarship monies and some $2,500 was donated in honor of the Polk boy. Some $2,000 of this was generated by ticket sales to the WTC summer dinner theatre production "Greater Tuna," which starred the boy's father, Glenn Polk, and Mike Dennis. The addi-

Singing group begins scholarship for Ewing

The Singing Cowboys have presented the Western Texas College Scholarship Foundation a memorial gift in memory of Mort Ewing, a member of the group who died early Thursday morning of injuries sustained in an automobile accident.

The Singing Cowboys met at WTC during the fall semester to work under the direction of Jane Womack, assistant professor of music.

The Cowboys' gift is intended to be the start of a music scholarship fund to be known as the Mort Ewing Memorial Scholarship.

Anyone interested in contributing to it may send checks to Dr. Jim Tully, financial aid officer at WTC.

Checks should be made payable to the WTC Scholarship Foundation and marked "Ewing Scholarship."

Acknowledgements of gifts will be sent by the college to the Ewing family and to the donor.

Weather cancels 4-Her stock show

Icy road conditions prompted the cancellation of the Scurry County 4-H stock show Saturday afternoon and sponsors say the show will not be reset due to the startup of the Scurry County Junior Livestock Show.

The coliseum ag annex faces a full schedule this coming week due to the county-wide show and Monday's scheduled Hermleigh FFA chapter show. It is to begin around 3 p.m. Monday.

Richard Smith, ag instructor for the Hermleigh schools, said he expects his students to show about 40 hogs and 40 lambs for Sweetwater ag teacher Kenneth Dudensen.

Activities related to the county-wide Scurry County Junior Livestock Show will begin Tuesday with morning weigh-ins for animals to be completed by 5 p.m.

That show will continue through the week with the swine show to begin at 6 p.m. Wednesday; the lamb show scheduled for 6 p.m. Thursday; and the steer and heifer judging slated for 7 p.m. Friday.

The show season will officially close next Saturday with the annual Scurry County Junior Livestock Association premium sale which begins at 1 p.m. in the ag annex.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The best way to stay awake during a speech is to deliver it."

At Louise's Coffee Shop the other morning, three long-time Scurry County residents were remembering pranks played in the oilpatch.

Bill McCormick of McCormick, Inc. was reminiscing with two retired Sun Gas Plant employees--Henry Lofton and Leroy Brown.

The incident occurred so long ago that none of the three could remember the victim of the prank. At any rate, another Sun employee had purchased a Volkswagon back when the imported car was a rarity in these parts.

Economy was the selling point, and co-workers soon became bored with hearing about his great gas milage. For several weeks co-workers added fuel to the tank--resulting in unbelievable mileage.

The bragging and the mileage increased until co-workers reversed the trend by draining a little fuel out each day.

The bragging stopped and the man started looking for an American-made car.

"We vouch for the quality of the three very qualified instructors in this fine institute, Marshall Erwin, Mel Stevenson and the opera is not over 'till the fat lady sings Simpson.

"We are sure you will derive great innumerable material benefits from this putting school."

The postscript added that the putting techniques will certainly enhance somebody's old age pensions.

House fire

A Scurry County residence east of Snyder was destroyed by fire just after noon Friday.

Fire Chief Terry McDowell said a passing trucker noticed fire at the Jerry Collins residence at the intersection of the Camp Springs Road and the Plainview School Road and called the department at 12:25 p.m.

Firemen reported the frame house was fully engulfed in flames when they arrived. No one was at the house when the fire was discovered.

McDowell said the cause of the blaze remains under investigation. The house was owned by C. J. Russell of Snyder.

Authorities probe confession

VAN HORN, Texas (AP) — A routine traffic stop for speeding has turned into two counts of capital murder for an escapee from a Michigan psychiatric center, who also allegedly confessed to slayings in four states.

"He has confessed to many crimes. We are working on it with several other agencies," said Culberson County Sheriff Richard Upchurch.

William Scott Day, 35, was being held in the Culberson County jail on charges of aggravated assault and robbery, Upchurch said.

In Friday editions of The Detroit News, Upchurch had said Day also confessed to slayings in Tucson, Ariz., Nashville, Tenn., Marianna, Fla., and New Orleans.

Upchurch refused to confirm the report, but said he is assisting other law enforcement agencies in criminal investigations. He said he could not comment further because the investigations are continuing.

District Attorney Steve Simmons of El Paso, whose jurisdiction includes Culberson County, and two of his assistant district attorneys spent Friday in Upchurch's office. Simmons refused to comment on Day's alleged confessions to slayings outside Texas but admitted he was in Van Horn because of Day.

Day, who escaped Dec. 4 from the Ypsilanti Center for Psychiatry, was arrested Jan. 12 west of Van Horn when troopers with the Texas Department of Public Safety clocked him driving at about 90 miles per hour.

Dorothy Alexander, 56, had contacted officials after she was robbed at the East Side Package Store in Van Horn, where she is a clerk, Upchurch said.

"She had been beaten on the head, robbed and left bound hands and feet," Upchurch said. "She worked herself loose and called us."

The DPS contacted the sheriff's office to say Day matched the description of the man who had robbed Ms. Alexander.

"When I got to the scene, the man was bloody and his pocket was bulging with money," Upchurch said.

Dewey Sage, 64, Ms. Alexander's employer, said the robber got away with about $250 in cash.

Experts to check paintings to see if they are authentic

AUSTIN (AP) — Two paintings discovered among several hundred sent to an Austin company by a famous Colorado hotel for reframing are being checked to determine if they authentic works of French impressionists Claude Monet and Alfred Sisley, a hotel spokesman says.

Paul Carolan, resident manager of the Broadmoor Hotel in Colorado Springs, said Friday the works will be examined by a museum curator in Denver.

"And if he feels it is necessary, if there is reason to believe they are authentic, we will probably fly someone out here from New York to look at them," Carolan said.

It could take two or three weeks before the hotel knows whether the works are authentic, he added.

Joe B. Smith, president of Fleetwood Art Distributors in North Austin, said the works were found about a week ago in a shipment of several hundred watercolors sent to the Austin company to be reframed as part of a renovation of the luxury hotel's furnishings.

Smith said the possible Monet, which is 12 inches by 14 inches and is signed, is "a pastel drawing that we believe is a study that Monet had done for a larger oil painting." The painting, an untitled landscape, was completed in 1881 but was lost track of in 1928, Smith added.

He said that the work that may be by Sisley is a 13-by-18-inch watercolor of frozen canals near Paris and appears to be a study for an oil painting finished about 1882, The painting has been in a private collection since the late 1950s, he said.

The works discovered in Austin were done on paper and glued to boards, and "are in very good condition," Smith said.

Mark Pearson, production manager for Fleetwood, discovered the signature on the pastel while he was removing the mat from the work, Smith said.

EMB realignment may end currency hassle

NEW YORK (AP) — A realignment of currencies comprising the European Monetary System could end the acrimonious standoff that flared this past week between France and West Germany over exchange rates.

The French insist that the German mark is too high and the German government should reduce interest rates, while they reject a devaluation of the faltering franc.

The central banks of both countries have intervened in the turbulent European currency markets in attempts to stabilize the currencies, spending billions of dollars' worth of public money.

The franc has been battered by political and industrial turbulence in France, where public-sector strikes over wages have undermined confidence in the country's economic prospects.

The mark has been the leading beneficiary of the dollar's recent decline, as many investors have sold dollars and purchased marks. The mark is popular because of West Germany's importance in world trade and the perception that it is more stable than other major European currencies.

The soaring mark and sagging franc have thrown the exchange-rate mechanism of the EMS out of whack and generated pressure for a realignment.

The exchange-rate mechanism includes currencies of West Germany, France, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Denmark and Ireland, which are allowed to move against each other within specified ranges. The British pound is not included.

An EMS realignment could indirectly depress the dollar's value by making the mark worth more, intensifying demand for the German currency.

Speculation had grown all week in currency markets that a realignment was impending. It was further fueled Friday when Danish and West German officials said European treasury and central bank figures would meet over the weekend in Brussels to discuss a possible reshuffling.

City is concerned as second airline cancels service

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Civic leaders are concerned about the effects of two major airlines dropping service to Corpus Christi in recent months.

United Airlines representative Charles Novak met with city officials Friday to announce United's plan to discontinue service to Corpus Christi on April 5, leaving three air carriers for the city: American, Southwest and Continental.

Eastern Airlines ended 47 years of Corpus Christi service on Dec. 9. Also last month, American Airlines cut one of its five daily flights from the city.

"You have to be concerned about the city when you're trying to attract businesses and they see that Eastern and United have pulled out of a city. They wonder what's happening," said Jimmy Lyles, president of the Corpus Christi Chamber of Commerce.

"It's a sign of the economic times that no matter what a town is doing, unless an airline can make a profit, they're going to leave town," Lyles said. "We've got to turn our economic situation around."

United began service to Corpus Christi three years ago. It flew its direct service to Chicago at 20 percent capacity in 1986, Novak said.

"It's unfortunate the traffic didn't generate, but we have to move on to other markets," said Novak, corporate communications manager for United.

Mayor Luther Jones said the loss of United was unfortunate, but that the city administration already had been positioning for such a situation by making room at the terminal in case another airline becomes available to take United's place.

"They now have the right to come into cities at will and to terminate at will," Jones said, referring to airline deregulation enacted during the administration of former President Carter.

"This condition makes it important that our airport be capable of taking on new airlines with short notice in the future," Jones said. "We're doing just that. The main terminal is being expanded."

The city approved $3.5 million worth of airport construction projects in March.

Without United, Corpus Christi International Airport will offer 16 flights a day on three carriers.

American makes three flights daily to Dallas-Fort Worth and one to Houston-Intercontinental. Southwest makes eight flights to Houston-Hobby. Continental offers four flights to Houston-Intercontinental.

Lyles said the key to turning Corpus Christi's economic tide would be diversifying its commercial base.

"We've got to find the tourist attractions and work on a number of other areas," he said. "We need to diversify our interests. This just points up once again the dependence we had in the oil and gas industry."

Novak said United employs a manager and six part-time representatives in Corpus Christi, all to be offered other positions or transfers.

AIDS drug could be on market soon

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — The first anti-AIDS drug available for prescription by any doctor could be in drugstores by spring if the Food and Drug Administration accepts the recommendation of an advisory committee.

However, the manufacturer of AZT promised the worried FDA panel Friday that it will take unprecedented steps to see that the drug — in short supply and still relatively unproven — gets only to the patients who need it most.

The 10-1 vote by which the committee recommended that AZT be placed in the same legal category with any commonly prescribed medicine came after hours of agonized discussion.

Words that popped up again and again were "extraordinary" and "dilemma."

"Extraordinary" was used to describe the health threat of AIDS, a fatal disease the government says is likely to afflict nearly 200,000 people in the next decade.

Ellen Cooper of the FDA's division of anti-infective drug products summed up the dilemma at the start of the committee's debate when she listed what she considered the strong and weak points of the company's application.

The strong point, she said, is that brief clinical trials earlier this year showed it extends lives.

The weak point, she said, is that the scientific community doesn't know much more than that about AZT — at least when compared with the extensive data the FDA usually requires before being a step away from approving a new drug.

By comparison, the FDA approved 20 new drugs last year, taking an average of more than 30 months between the end of clinical trials and final approval.

The AZT clinical trials started last April and were ended Sept. 30, cut short because the dramatic results up to then prompted the FDA to authorize wide though still tightly controlled use.

The advisory panel, appointed by the FDA, is made up of physicians who have demonstrated that they do not have links with drug manufacturers which might constitute a conflict of interest in recommending action on their products.

While the original clinical trials that led to the hurry-up consideration of AZT were limited for the most part to AIDS victims with a rare form of pneumonia called Pneumocystis carinii, final approval technically would not be limited to patients with that condition.

Related early tests also covered a less-severe condition called AIDS-related complex, or ARC.

One of the complications facing the committee was that final approval would not cover just patients in those categories but, in the extreme, anyone with an ailment that a doctor might think could be helped by AZT.

David Barry, vice president for research for Burroughs Wellcome Co., told the committee his company also was concerned that AZT, or azidothymidine, was available to physicians for general use, the drug might be administered to patients who would not necessarily benefit from it.

Moreover, he said, a shortage of the drug, which is derived from the sperm of herring, would prompt the company to try to restrict it to those most in need.

In data made public Friday, Burroughs Wellcome reported that 3,247 AIDS patients have been given AZT under special approval given by the FDA. The agency granted the special approval for wider use on Sept. 30 after positive results in clinical trials so that patients in a control group also could receive the drug.

Soviet negotiator's role is to be limited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yuli Vorontsov, appointed chief Soviet arms negotiator with a flourish, will play a limited role in talks with the United States in Geneva on missile reductions and space-based defenses, according to Reagan administration officials.

Unlike chief U.S. negotiator Max M. Kampelman, the Soviet first deputy foreign minister will leave all the direct bargaining to deputies and not remain in the Swiss city through the new round of talks, which is expected to last six weeks.

Vorontsov informed Kampelman of his plans at a get-acquainted meeting Thursday in Geneva, an official said. "He will not be spending all his time there," the official said. "We don't know what's behind it."

Vorontsov's predecessor, Viktor P. Karpov, was both in overall charge of the Soviet delegation and took direct charge of the discussions to reduce long-range nuclear bombers, submarines and intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Kampelman, meanwhile, has been negotiating on anti-missile defenses while also overseeing talks on missile cutbacks.

Three U.S. officials, who demanded anonymity, said Friday they did not know what impact the arrangement might have on the talks, now in a seventh round.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz sounded an optimistic note, however, at a news conference in hs office here.

He said Vorontsov and Kampelman "had a good initial meeting and the individual groups started off pretty well."

One group of U.S. and Soviet negotiators deals with long-range nuclear bombers, submarines and intercontinental ballistic missiles. A second handles intermediate-range missiles based in Europe and Asia. And the third is concerned with the U.S. "Star Wars" program and Soviet defenses against missiles.

The appointment of Vorontsov raised hopes on the U.S. side that the Soviets might be ready to offer compromises in order to wrap up an agreement to curb offensive weapons despite sharp differences on space-based defenses.

Party chief resigns position

PEKING (AP) — Hu Yaobang resigned as head of the Communist Party on Friday after declaring to his colleagues that he made mitakes in dealing with student turmoil and intellectual chllenges to the sysem.

He aparently was forced out by Deng Xaoping, whom he expected to succeed as China's paramount leader.

Chinese sources said Eeng,82, was happy with the 71-year-old party chief's handling of recent student pro democracy protest and of intellectul party members now being accused of inciting the young people.

It was not clear immediately whether he would give up the premiership.

Hu submitted his resignation at an enlarged meeting of the party's ruling Politburo, ending weeks of speculation about his political future. It was reported on state television and by the official news agency Xinhua.

The announcement said Hu "made a self-criticism of his mistakes on major issues of political principles in violation of the party's principle of collective leadership."

Participants in the meeting "gave Comrade Hu Yaobang a serious and comradely criticism and at the same time acknowledged his achievements," it said, adding that Hu would retain membership in the Politburo and its Standing Committee.

Both the resignation and Zhao's appointment will be submitted to the party Central Committee's next plenary session for approval.

The party chief is the first Chinese official to leave office since his predecessor, Mao Tsetung's hand-picked successor Hua Guofeng, was driven out by Deng's faction in 1981.

Hu has been a Communist Party member for nearly 50 years and took part in the 1934-35 communist Long March. He succeeded Hua as party chairman and was designated general secretary when the office of chairman was abolished in 1982.

Chinese officials cite exhaustion from overwork as the reason Hu has not been seen in public for almost three weeks, but both Chinese and other sources said he had lost favor with Deng and his ouster was just a matter of time.

Student demonstrations began early in December, partly inspired by Deng's own promises of more open government and other political reforms.

Deng has shown restraint toward the students but came down hard on intellectuals he has accused of inciting them by suggesting that Western capitalism and democracy are superior to communism.

Alcohol said danger to pregnancies

SEATTLE (AP) — Children born to mothers who drink alcohol during pregnancy may have shorter attention spans and slower reaction times, according to new results from a long-term study of 1,500 women and their children.

The most recent findings of the study, now in its 14th year, focused on 7-year-olds and confirmed previous research, performed at earlier ages, showing the danger of prenatal alcohol exposure to children and their development.

In addition to the physical deformities and mental retardation in children caused by mothers' alcohol abuse, the long-term research also has found more subtle effects linked to levels of alcohol, according to Ann Pytkowicz Streissguth, a professor in the University of Washington's Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences.

"That's why the Surgeon General's statement is so important," Streissguth said, referring to the admonition in 1981 that pregnant women avoid alcohol. "There's no known safe level. It's better not to drink."

Streissguth discussed her research Thursday at a monthly seminar sponsored by the School of Medicine of the University of Washington and in an interview afterward.

In 1974, Streissguth and several colleagues began the "Seattle Longitudinal Prospective Study On Alcohol and Pregnancy," to examine effects of alcohol and other factors on children's long-term development.

The study surveyed 1,500 pregnant women, then tested 500 infants of the women within two days of birth. The children were tested again for mental and physical development at eight months, 18 months, four years and seven years.

Streissguth was among UW researchers who in 1973 identified fetal alcohol syndrome as a birth defect.

As late as the mid-1960s, researchers thought there was no relation between drinking and harm to fetuses, Streissguth said.

"In 1973, people thought fetal alcohol syndrome was a Seattle phenomenon," she joked. "People thought only mothers in Seattle drank enough to damage their children."

But studies by the university indicate the syndrome may occur in one in 750 births while fetal alcohol effects may show up in one in 300, she said.

Infants with fetal alcohol syndrome may be smaller than normal, have smaller heads, and such facial abnormalities as a flattened face, small eyes, short nose or a smooth upper lip. Infants with a lesser range of symptoms are considered to have fetal alcohol effects.

About a third to a half of all mothers who heavily abuse alcohol during pregnancy produce children with the syndrome, Streissguth said. As the children mature, they often remain smaller than normal, are hyperactive, have learning disabilities and may be mentally retarded.

Streissguth and other UW researchers "are a leading group in the area of fetal alcohol work," Mark Green, health science administrator with the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, said Friday.

Leslie Lull, spokeswoman for the National Council on Alcoholism, said Friday alcohol is the third-leading cause of birth defects in this country, and the only preventable one among the top three, which include Down's syndrome and spinal bifida.

College administrator was once considered retarded

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Lupita Quintanilla said she could accept that she was a dropout and a failure.

But when her children began bringing home bad grades, she knew it was the system that was a failure. She also knew it was time for a change.

Dr. Quintanilla now, the former fourth grade dropout, is assistant vice president for academic affairs at the University of Houston.

She was among the panelists at the Texas Education Conference, which examined the problems of the dropout rate and educating disadvantaged children.

Quintanilla, who said students should receive counseling at the elementary level, told part of her story and rapped the system and lectured teachers.

"Of the speakers here, I am probably the only one who can speak as a student, as a parent, as an educator, as a dropout," said Ms. Quintanilla, who came from Mexico.

"The first and only teacher that I had in the United States gave me the gift of failure," Ms. Quintanilla said. "For 10 years I thought I was mentally retarded."

She said she blamed the system when her children were labeled as "slow-learners."

"I could believe I was mentally retarded, but my children were the brightest things that walked this earth," she said. With determination, she returned to school and wound up with a Ph.D.

She said teachers could use constructive criticism.

"Forget the idea that the teachers...know what they're doing. We don't know what we're doing many times and we need help," Ms. Quintanilla said.

Education Secretary William Bennett told the crowd of about 400 that parents need to take a more active part in their children's education.

He said education was the key to the success of disadvanted children who had a defiency in English.

He said he recommended to Congress on Friday that it amend the Bilingual Education Act to allow local school districts more control in their bilingual programs, part of the intention of the original act in 1968.

"Our reform has been portrayed as an attack on bilingual education. This is false," Bennett said. "Our intent is neither to promote one instruction method at the expense of another, nor to belittle or diminish any culture or heritage."

A suvey on Texas dropouts, conducted by the Intercultural Development Research Association, indicated that the attrition rate for 1985-86 was 33 percent.

Texas Education Commissioner Dr. William Kirby said the dropout rate for Hispanics is about 45 percent.

"This is a disgraceful statistic. It's a statistic of shame. It's statistic of failure. It's a statistic that cries out for us to do something today," Kirby said.

Oscar Hernandez, president of the Texas Association of School Boards, said the state lacks a system to accurately count dropouts.

Feds ok S&L action

DALLAS (AP) — San Antonio Savings Association acquired the Magic Valley Savings and Loan Association of Weslaco, Texas, in a plan approved Friday by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, officials said.

San Antonio Savings will operate its newly acquired subsidiary as a federal stock association known as San Antonio Federal Savings Bank, Dallas-based FHLB spokeswoman Rebecca Vail said.

Prior to the acquisition, Magic Valley was a $107.7 million state-chartered stock association with six offices. San Antonio Savings is a $2.4 billion state-chartered mutual association with 45 offices in Texas.

To aid the transaction, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. will make an unspecified cash contribution and indemnify both institutions against undisclosed liabilities and potential litigation resulting from the merger.

The action is the second FSLIC-assisted acquisition or merger this year, Ms. Vail said.

Many played role in arms sale decision, testimony says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane told Congress Friday that Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger "knew what was going on" during the decision to sanction arms sales as part of a bid to forge ties with moderates in Iran.

McFarlane also said President Reagan was warned "very emphatically" by his advisers that if the dealings became public, it would look like he was simply trading U.S. arms for the release of Americans held hostage in Lebanon.

McFarlane testified to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee as the White House was denying that Reagan has distanced himself from the controversy surrounding the clandestine arms sales and alleged diversions of sales proceeds to Nicaraguan rebels.

Not long after a Reagan spokesman was quizzed by reporters about the president's attention to the problem, David Abshire, the retired NATO envoy brought in to coordinate the White House's handling of the various Iran-Contra investigations, issued a statement saying:

"The president is continuing to follow closely the efforts to compile all the facts regarding the Iran issue currently under investigation. The president met with me Monday and will be meeting with me on a regular basis."

Abshire said Reagan "wants to be absolutely certain" that Congress, an independent counsel and a presidential investigative panel looking into National Security Council operations, "are receiving all the materials and information they need for a comprehensive and expeditious review of the issue. The president remains committed to his pledge to the American people that they get all the facts."

Former convicted killer may go free

HOUSTON (AP) — Prosecutors say the capital murder retrial of Vernon McManus in the 1977 slaying of a Baytown electrical contractor hinges on whether transcripts from a previous trial may be used.

Without the transcripts, McManus, whose death sentence was overturned, could go free, prosecutors said.

The 43-year-old former Lamar University assistant football coach is scheduled to be retried Tuesday on a capital murder charge in the slaying of Paul Cantrell, who was found dead with his wife, Mary, at the couple's Baytown home. They had been beaten, strangled and their throats cut.

State District Judge Johnny Kolenda is expected to rule next week on whether the transcripts can be used.

McManus' 1977 conviction was overturned in 1983 by a federal judge who found that a juror who had expressed reservations about the death penalty was improperly excused.

The two key witnesses in the 1977 trial, Paula Cantrell Derese and Ben Milton Tabor, are now serving prison sentences and are refusing to repeat their testimony.

"If they won't testify, and if we don't have the transcripts, we can't make the case," prosecutor Ted Wilson said.

The state's capital murder case, he said, might even be dismissed.

Prosecutors claimed the motive for the slayings was the couple's estate and life insurance and charged the Cantrells' only daughter, Ms. Derese.

Ms. Derese pleaded guilty to two counts of murder, was sentenced to life in prison and testified against McManus, her former boss.

Reform threatens safety of Texans

AUSTIN (AP) — The head of a consumer group said Friday proposed tort reform would threaten the safety of Texans by lessening the impact of consumer-filed liability suits against manufacturers of unsafe products.

"Manufacturers of dangerous products and chemicals, toxic waste dumpers and their insurers have joined together in a concerted public relations effort to convince people there is something wrong with our court system," said Tom Smith, director of Public Citizen.

"We believe what they are really trying to do is limit their liability for injuries they have caused individuals," he told a news conference on the Capitol steps.

In what was labeled "Parade of the Dangerous Dozen," Smith displayed a table of products he said were altered or yanked from the market because of consumer-initiated lawsuits.

A plaintifff suing a company or individual for liability for personal injury or damage to property files a civil lawsuit alleging commission of a tort or wrongful act.

The insurance industry and manufacturers are asking the Legislature to limit the amount of money a plaintiff would receive for pain and suffering and to cap punitive damages or fines the defendant pays as punishment for producing an unsafe product.

Lawmakers are considering tort reform because liability insurance premiums have steadily climbed in recent years and liability coverage has become harder to obtain.

But Smith said a corporation which has studied major manufacturers determined "it isn't federal regulations, it isn't morality and it isn't new product technology that forces them to change their product for product safety reasons. It's fear of punitive damages lawsuits."

He said a primary example was the Ford Pinto, which would on impact spill fuel into its passenger department because of the location of its gas tank.

"It wasn't until one person won an award of $126 million in punitive damages that the attention of the board of directors of Ford Motor Co. was brought to the problem and they ordered that product modified," Smith said.

Some of the products manufacturers pulled from the market after consumers filed suits include the Dalkon Shield, a contraceptive which contained fibers causing inflammatory pelvic disease; asbestos; the herbicide Agent Orange; and easily opened containers of drain cleaners, he said.

Five commodities to be distributed

Commodities of cheese, butter, rice, milk and flour will be distributed to senior citizens and handicapped persons on Tuesday, and to other eligible residents of Scurry County on Wednesday. Items will be distributed at the Senior Center, 2603 Avenue M, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. both days.

All participants must be recertified during the month of January. All applicants must come in person, have proof of identity and proof of residence. If the applicant receives AFDC, food stamps, medical assistant (MAO), or SSI they must bring proof of being in those programs by furnishing forms number 1009, 3087, 3088, or 1027 which establish eligibility.

Eligibility guidelines for citizens of Scurry County are posted at the Senior Center. There will be no make up day and all individuals are asked to enter through the north door of the Senior Center and to bring paper sacks or boxes to transport commodities.

Thousands to observe inaugural celebration

AUSTIN (AP) — The thousands of Texans expected to kick up their heels Monday and Tuesday for the inauguration of Gov.-elect Bill Clements and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby will have plenty to keep them entertained.

The 1987 Inaugural Committee said Friday celebrants will be able to choose between art exhibits and symphonic concerts to foot-stomping, shirt-sleeve dances and black-tie formal balls.

Clements and Hobby, accompanied by their wives, promised to visit all of the events. Vans loaded with reporters and photographers will accompany them to be sure all Texas voters know about it.

Admissions will range from free to $75 per person.

The celebrations are financed by private and corporate contributions and admissions charged, with no taxpayer money used, except for the swearing-in stand in front of the Capitol.

The whooping and hollering begins Monday night, before the inauguration, with "A Salute to Texas Arts" at the University of Texas Performing Arts Center. Without charge, the public will be able to view an exhibit of Texas paintings and sculpture and attend a concert featuring mezzo-soprano Barbara Conrad, concert pianist James Dick and the Austin symphony orchestra. State District Judge Roy Barrera Jr. of San Antonio will be the master of ceremonies.

The swearing-in ceremony is set for noon Tuesday on the front steps of the Capitol. A covered stand will protect the principals but others will have to brave weather on the front lawn.

The entire inaugural ceremony will be available to television and radio stations throughout the state by satellite and telephone network.

At 2:30 p.m., Clements and Hobby will lead an inaugural parade down Congress Avenue

Investigators talking with Sooner players

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) - Two NCAA investigators have been talking with players and coaches at the University of Oklahoma for the past two days, according to two published reports.

Athletic director Donnie Duncan told The Daily Oklahoman, in a story in today's editions, that the investigators had conducted some interviews and were being guided around campus by Dan Gibbens, the university's faculty representative.

Gibbens told the Oklahoman he would not say what matters were being checked by the NCAA or who had been interviewed. He said it was not unusual for NCAA investigators to be on campus.

Meanwhile, the Dallas Morning News reported that the investigators were talking with football players and coaches about the Sooner program.

"They talked to me and a few of the players in the past few days. It's no big deal," Coach Barry Switzer told the newspaper. "They were here before, and they asked a few questions."

Switzer would not reveal which players had been interviewed. A Sooner who declined to be identified said one player interviewed was All-America linebacker Brian Bosworth.

Duncan said he had met briefly with the investigators and offered his help, and they told him Gibbens was being very accommodating.

Duncan said he did not know the details, "but as I understand it, there is more than one issue here. One investigator has one issue and the other has another."

The Oklahoman said a member of the university board of regents said the NCAA investigators were reportedly looking into things that occurred in 1985 to see if there were any improprieties. Another regent told the newspaper that questions were being asked of basketball players and basketball coach Billy Tubbs.

Duncan told the Dallas newspaper that he expected the NCAA to conclude interviews this weekend.

"After that, I'm not sure what will happen," he said. "I expect we will hear from them," he said.

Contacted at NCAA headquarters in Mission, Kan., enforcement director David Berst would neither confirm nor deny the presence of investigators on the Norman campus.

Art Schlichter faces charges again of unlawfully betting

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Former Indianapolis quarterback Art Schlichter, once suspended by the National Football League for gambling, faces up to 180 days in jail on a misdemeanor charge of unlawfully betting more than $230,000 on baseball and football games.

Schlichter and 12 other men were charged Friday, Schlichter with a Class B misdemeanor of unlawful gambling. The offense carries a maximum penalty of 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Police Chief Paul Annee said an investigation uncovered evidence that money from an Indianapolis-based operation had been "finding its way to Detroit and New York."

"We cannot link organized crime to this specific operation," Annee said. "But all published reports, along with law enforcement intelligence, clearly establishes gambling as a major source of revenue in all organized crime operations."

Schlichter turned himself in to Indianapolis authorities early Friday and was released on his own recognizance. Police said he was released without having to post bond because this is the first criminal gambling charge lodged against him.

Six of the other men were charged with felony counts of promoting professional gambling and corrupt business influence.

"Art Schlichter fit into the scheme of things here as a bettor only," said David Cook, a Marion County deputy prosecutor. "That there's an organization that allows a person to bet that kind of money in that period of time, that's what concerns us."

The investigation lasted from September through December 1986. The bettors who were arrested are alleged to have wagered more than $519,000 during that period.

Joe Browne, director of communications for the National Football League, said Schlichter "right now is a free agent and he's eligible to be signed by any of the 28 teams. The contract of any free agent is subject to review by the commissioner's office when and if he signs. It's handled on a case-by-case basis."

Schlichter, 26, a former Ohio State star, was picked in the first round of the 1982 NFL draft but missed the 1983 season after Commissioner Pete Rozelle suspended him for gambling. He reportedly ran up $389,000 in gambling debts.

Schlichter was reinstated in 1984 after undergoing treatment in an effort to break his habit. The Colts had moved from Baltimore to Indianapolis in the meantime.

Schlichter rejoined the team as a backup to Mike Pagel but moved to the starting quarterback position for the final five games of the 1984 season and the first game of the 1985 campaign.

Rod Dowhower, then coach of the Colts, said Schlichter would be the starter unless a "catastrophe" occurred. It did, in the form of a 45-3 loss to Pittsburgh in the season opener, and Schlichter didn't play another down. Five weeks later, he was cut.

Donahue will stay at UCLA; declines offer from Falcons

LOS ANGELES (AP) - UCLA Coach Terry Donahue has decided not to take the money and run.

Facing what he called a no-lose situation, Donahue on Friday turned down a multimillion-dollar offer to coach the Atlanta Falcons of the National Football League.

Donahue, who was first approached by the Falcons on Tuesday, rejected a five-year offer that reportedly would have paid him a minimum of $2.5 million. He earns approximately $250,000 per year at UCLA, where he has a five-year contract that renews itself every year.

"I made a decision to stay here at UCLA," Donahue said at an afternoon news conference on campus. "I'm delighted with that decision. In terms of dollars, obviously there's a difference. I never did do well in math at UCLA, anyway.

"I certainly feel the opportunity the Atlanta Falcons offered me was very unique and very special. I don't think an opportunity like that will ever be presented to me again. I had to look at that. That was something I had to look at very hard and I did look at it very hard.

"It was a very nice position to be in. In my mind, I couldn't go wrong either way. I really had a no-lose situation. I just had to decide. I put a deadline of 9 o'clock this morning. Somewhere around 3 or 4 this morning, I decided."

Donahue's decision was announced Friday morning by Falcons executive vice president Taylor Smith, who said that Donahue "decided it was in his best interests to remain at UCLA where he was well established."

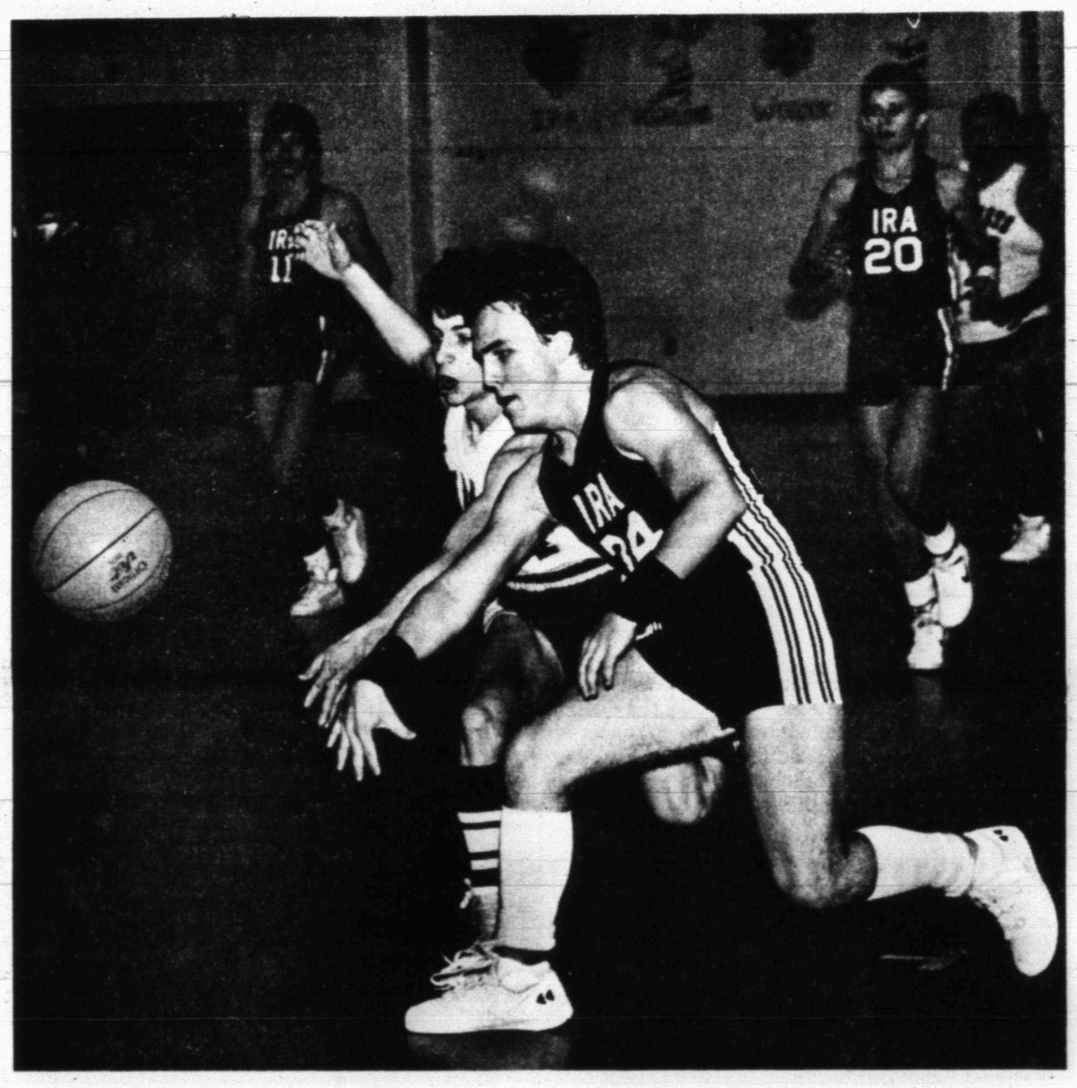

"We obviously felt he was a qualified candidate and are disappointed in the decision but respect it," Smith said.

Donahue, 42, has compiled an 88-34-7 record in 11 years at UCLA. The Bruins have appeared in bowl games following each of the last six seasons and have been victorious in their last five postseason appearances. They were 8-3-1 this season including a 31-10 victory over Brigham Young in the Freedom Bowl.

"There were many, many reasons," Donahue said in explaining his decision. "It's been a very interesting and a very difficult 48-hour period. When all was said and done, it was just a matter that I looked good in blue. That was the major thing.

"When the answer came out, it was stay at UCLA, keep smiling, have fun, stay in college football."

Smith said the Falcons would have no further comment until a successor had been found for Dan Henning, who was fired the day after the regular season.

Ditka may still leave Bears

CHICAGO (AP) - Mike Ditka threatened to resign as coach of the Chicago Bears last week and still may leave the team he led to the Super Bowl championship last year, published reports say.

When Ditka first heard last week that Jerry Vainisi, his close personal friend, was being let go, he tried to talk club President Mike McCaskey out of it and threatened to quit, Don Pierson of the Chicago Tribune reported.

The coach strongly hinted to friends he will will not work for McCaskey beyond the 1987 season, when his contract expires, according to Pierson's report. Pierson helped Ditka write his autobiography last year.

Brian Hewitt, who covers the Bears for the Chicago Sun-Times, wrote "it may be only a matter of time" before Ditka goes.

Hewitt quoted a source close to the Bears as saying "Vainisi was the glue that held this organization together ... Had Mike Ditka left, Jerry Vainisi would have left."

Ditka was visibly upset Thursday at a news conference announcing Vainisi's departure. He said he was "very, very hurt" by McCaskey's decision to let Vainisi go.

On Friday afternoon, radio station WBBM-AM quoted sources saying the Atlanta Falcons, whose offer of a head coaching position was turned down by UCLA's Terry Donahue, had asked the Bears for permission to talk with Ditka about the vacancy.

The Falcons promptly denied that report.

"To my knowledge, nobody has contacted us to talk to Mike," said Bears spokesman Bryan Harlan. "Mike (McCaskey) has been gone all afternoon and I don't think anybody could have reached him."

Besides their personal friendship, Ditka and Vainisi are partners in a downtown restaurant and night club.

On Thursday, McCaskey told reporters he was confident that Ditka "will have a long coaching career as head coach of the Chicago Bears."

Vainisi, 45, was one of the three men - along with Ditka and Bill Tobin, player personnel director - that operated the defending Super Bowl champions.

But, 10 days after the Bears lost their NFL playoff opener 27-13 to the underdog Washington Redskins, McCaskey said Vainisi and the Bears "agreed to part company."

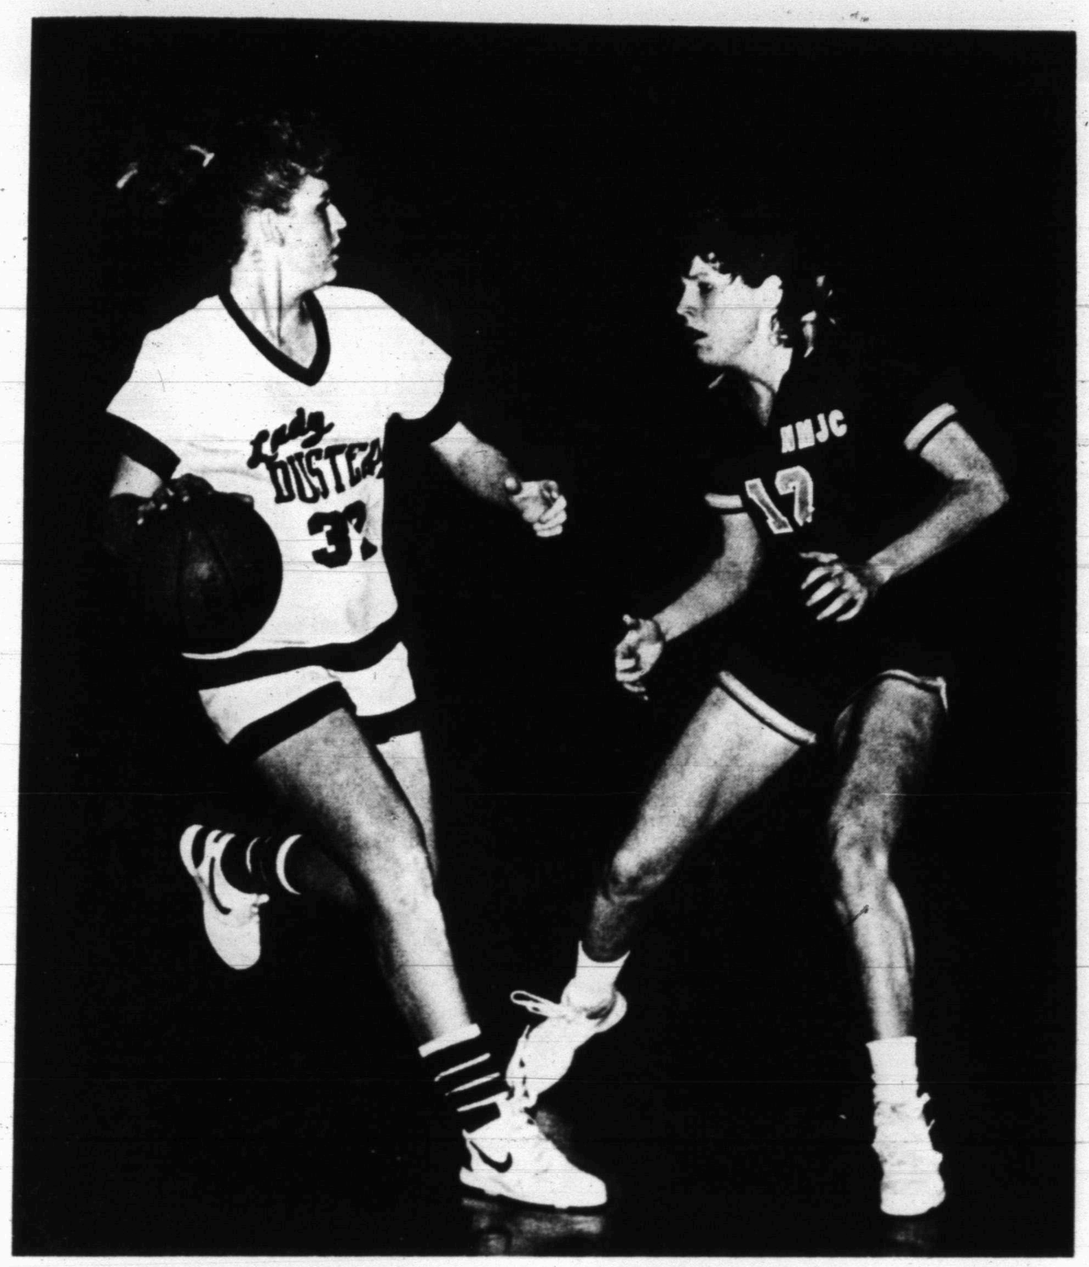

"Fired is too harsh a word," said McCaskey, grandson of the late George Halas, the Bears' founder.

Formal attire once meant white tie and tails. But these days when an invitation requests "formal attire," one can presume it's safe to wear a black tie and dinner jacket. A formal-party invitation during the summer months also allows the option of wearing a white dinner jacket and a black tie.

Tigers plan makeup contests; Tors-Mustangs' showdown set

Snyder and Monahans are expecting to reschedule Friday night's District 2-4A boy's basketball game sometime next week, Coach Larry Scott said Saturday morning.

The girl's game has apparently already been rescheduled for 5:30 p.m. Monday in the Snyder High School Gym. A junior varsity contest is set for 4 p.m.

Scott said the boy's game with the Loboes has not been reslated, but noted that Thursday looks promising for a makeup date.

The threat of steadily deteriorating weather conditions caused officials from the schools to postpone Friday's ballgames. Scott said the weather was apparently not too bad for travel to the respective games, but officials were concerned that by late in the evening teams might not be able to return home safely.

Meanwhile, the remainder of district 2-4A games scheduled Friday were played.

Andrews and Lamesa boys set the scene for their showdown by winning respective games. Andrews knocked off Big Spring 102-88 while Lamesa downed Fort Stockton, 75-63.

The two victors, both 7-0 in 2-4A play, meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Lamesa.

No score from Friday's Pecos-San Angelo Lake View game was available Saturday morning.

Meanwhile, Snyder's girls may have gotten some help in the 2-4A standings as Lamesa clipped Fort Stockton 37-31. Fort Stockton fell to 5-4 in loop play with the loss. Lamesa is 4-5.

Frontrunner Big Spring slammed Andrews 44-20 to improve to 8-1 in loop competition. In the only other game, Lake View defeated Pecos 57-45.

Sweetwater, idle Friday, is in second place in the girl's standings with a 6-2 mark. Lake View is 6-3 while Fort Stockton is 5-4 and Snyder is 4-4.

Snyder, 12-8 on the season, faces all of the teams in the district one more time and could find itself in playoff contention with a series of victories.

Monahans' ladies go into Monday's contest with a 4-12 season mark and are 1-7 overall.

Snyder boys, though they will probably play Lake View (on Tuesday) before making up the game with Monahans, are currently 10-10 overall and 3-3 in district play. Monahans is 9-8 and 2-4.

WTC men to host Midland; Dusters battle Blinn College

Western Texas College's Westerners are scheduled to entertain seventh-ranked Midland here Monday in Scurry County Coliseum.

Tipoff for the Western Junior College Athletic Conference game is 8 p.m.

In another contest Monday, WTC's Dusters travel to Stephenville to play Blinn Junior College in a non-conference game.

Midland is 17-1 on the season and 4-1 in conference play. The only loss on the season for the defending WJCAC and Region V champion Chaparrals was to fifth-ranked New Mexico Junior College.

Western, 6-11 overall and 1-4 in the WJCAC, is looking to snap a five-game losing streak that dates back to Dec. 11.

In other men's conference games Monday, Howard (11-8, 3-3) is at Levelland to play South Plains (14-3, 4-1) and Clarendon (6-7, 2-2) is at Odessa (12-6, 2-3).

Clarendon women (8-4, 1-1) also play at Odessa (16-2, 2-1) and Howard's Queens (14-6, 2-2) will be at Levelland to play South Plains (13-6, 3-1).

Western Texas' Dusters, ranked fifth in the nation, are 17-3 for the season and 3-1 in conference play after last Thursday's 68-66 loss to Odessa.

WTC's Westerners continue the week by playing New Mexico Military Institute in Roswell, N.M. on Thursday, Jan. 22. The Dusters do not play again until Jan. 26 when they join the Westerners to entertain Clarendon in a double header.

West course frustrating for players in cold, wind-blown Hope Classic

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) - Bernhard Langer used such words as "silly," "overdone," and "unfair," in describing the new, controversial PGA West course that is being used in the Bob Hope Classic for the first time.

"Not my favorite course," the West German said Friday.

And that was after he played it in 4-under-par 68, the best score on that course this week.

Andy Bean's description can only be left to the imagination. The big, red-haired guy said nothing at all, and simply stalked away into the darkness after a six-hour journey over the Pete Dye-creation that involved 75 strokes in cold, biting winds.

Bean's various difficulties on the undulating greens, the mounds and hillocks that make up the fairways, in and around the awesome bunkers, and Langer's cautious, conservative mastery of the course gave the German a three-shot lead after three rounds of the five-day, 90-hole tournament that offers $900,000 in prizes.

"Surprise, surprise," Langer said. A communications problem knocked out the electronic scoreboards on the course, so "I had no idea how I stood," he said after taking over the top spot at 202, 14 shots under par.

U.S. Open champ Ray Floyd, bundled into two sweaters and his rain gear, had a frosty 68 at Indian Wells that gave him second at 205.

"I can't recall it being this cold here - but I've only be coming here 25 years," the veteran Floyd said. He said the first green he played was "frozen so hard that when I walked on it, my spikes didn't even go into the ground."

Temperatures were in the 30s and 40s most of the day, with wind gusts to 30 mph or more. More of the same was forecast for Saturday.

Bean, the second-round leader, dropped back to a tie for third at 206 with PGA champion Bob Tway, who had a 70 at Indian Wells.

The format called for the pros to play one round at each of four courses, each day with a different three-man team of amateurs, before the field is cut for the final round Sunday at PGA West.

Langer and Bean were to play Bermuda Dunes in the fourth round, with Floyd and Tway facing two consecutive rounds at PGA West.

"Hopefully, I can shoot a good round at Bermuda Dunes before coming back here," said Langer, who reeled off one string of three consecutive birdies on the extremely difficult course and used "a lot of 1-irons and 3-woods off the tee to stay out of trouble."

The group at 207 included David Edwards, Mark Calcavecchia, former Hope winner Ed Fiori, Andrew Magee, Jeff Sluman and Charles Bolling.

Mavericks cop victory in Milwaukee, 124-122

MILWAUKEE (AP) - The Dallas Mavericks beat the Milwaukee Bucks for the first time ever in Milwaukee, but it wasn't pretty.

"It's one of those games we're not proud of, but we won," Sam Perkins said.

Perkins' basket and foul shot gave the Mavericks their biggest lead in overtime, 117-110, and Dallas hung on in the closing seconds to defeat the Bucks 124-122 in NBA action Friday night.

"I've never had a game like that in my career," Dallas Coach Dick Motta said.

The Mavericks opened the overtime period with a 7-0 run but saw the Bucks chip away at the lead, getting as close 122-121 with 17 seconds left before James Donaldson's dunk shot with four seconds to play put the game out of the Bucks' reach.

"We had a seven-point lead (in overtime). We gave it to them - and they gave it back," Motta said.

The Mavericks, averaging only 15 turnovers a game, had 27 for the night, including six in the overtime period.

"We missed the shots we needed to make and they didn't," Bucks reserve center Randy Breuer said. Breuer had a chance to win the game but missed a layup as regulation time expired, and the game went into overtime tied at 110-110.

The Bucks made only 42 percent of their field goal tries and also had trouble at the free throw line, making only 26 of 42.

Milwaukee missed a chance to tie the score at 122-122 when Don Collins made just one of two free throws with 17 seconds left in overtime.

Terry Cummings, who led the Bucks with a career-high 39 points and also grabbed 15 rebounds, said the game was another frustrating one for Milwaukee.

The Bucks have lost five of their last six games, including a 130-91 defeat at Atlanta Thursday night.

"It's just the way things have been happening for us lately," Cummings said. "I'm getting real tired of losing."

"I don't ever remember a worse stretch in my coaching career," Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said.

Mark Aguirre led Dallas with 27 points, while Perkins added 25, Derek Harper 22, Rolando Blackman 20, including six in overtime, and Donaldson 13.

PFRONTEN, West Germany (AP) - Olympic champion Michela Figini held off a strong challenge from her Swiss teammates and a surprisingly strong West German team in winning her second World Cup downhill ski race this season.

Stars & Stripes takes 3-1 lead in Cup race

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) - Stars & Stripes got the strong winds it likes best and sailed to a third victory against New Zealand Saturday in the America's Cup challenger finals, leaving skipper Dennis Conner one win from his chance to avenge his 1983 loss to Australia.

Powered by 26-knot winds, the San Diego-based yacht took a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven challenger finals with an easy 3-minute, 38-second win.

In the defender finals, Kookaburra III eased to a 2:06 victory over Australia IV and took a 3-0 lead in the best-of-nine series. Both the challengers and defenders are scheduled to race Sunday.

New Zealand, which won Friday to narrow the deficit to 2-1, was hampered by a broken backstay and a torn mainsail zipper that forced skipper Chris Dickson to sail conservatively in an attempt to keep the mast from snapping in the rough seas.

The top of New Zealand's $20,000 mainsail blew out seconds after it crossed the finish line.

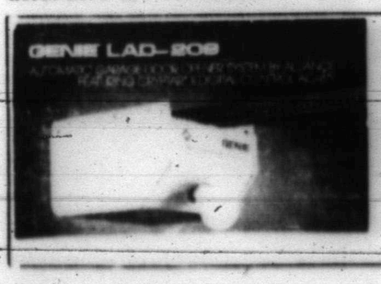

As he did in winning the first two races, Conner got far enough ahead early to rely on his boat's edge in straight line speed. Dickson, in a boat designed for greater maneuverability, never got close enough to engage Conner in a tacking battle.

B-1, at $265 million each, is losing friends in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The B-1 bomber, shot down under President Carter but patched up and sent aloft by President Reagan, is encountering heavy flak over Capitol Hill as lawmakers question the value of the world's most expensive airplane.

"The Edsel of the 1980s," Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., called it during a hearing this week of the Senate Budget Committee.

"Now we hear that the plane can't even clear Pike's Peak, and may cost $7 billion to $10 billion, according to my sources, just to get it to fly," said Sen. Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa. "Why did we buy 100 of these things before testing them?"

"It can fly all of its missions," countered Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

Weinberger and other Pentagon officials say it will cost much less than Grassley estimated to fix the problems plaguing the B-1, ranging from leaky fuel tanks to bugs in advanced electronics systems designed to help the pilot fly the plane and to confound enemy radar.

Air Force Lt. Gen. William E. Thurman, the commander of the Aeronautical Systems Division, which is overseeing the B-1 program, told The Associated Press he had received approval to "ask for about $469 million additional for the B-1 program that had not been anticipated" over the next three years.

But Congress is getting signals that the bill to fix the B-1 will run much higher. The Pentagon has requested $415 million in research and development for the fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1 and $387 million for the following year.

A congressional source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said documents submitted by the Pentagon put the cost of the fix at at least $3 billion.

Weinberger and the Air Force brass joined in tight formation this week to fight off criticism of the B-1.

"The central fact is that the B-1, the most advanced bomber in the world today, is today on alert at Dyess Air Force Base, Texas, fulfilling its intended mission," Air Force Secretary E.C. Aldridge Jr. and Chief of Staff Larry D. Welch said in a letter published Monday in The Washington Post.

Aldridge and Welch acknowledged "some deficiencies in the B-1 that require correction to realize the full, long-term potential. Most will be corrected in the short term. One or two will take longer."

"There is no indication that required work will exceed the $20.5 billion cost ceiling" set by Congress, they said.

Parents urged to send children to Bible class

HOUSTON (AP) — A school principal is urging parents of children at his school to send the students to Bible classes he plans to conduct.

Principal W.B. Johnson says the Bible classes will improve classroom behavior. But members of the teachers' union and the Houston chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union say Johnson is using his office to promote a religious cause.

Johnson, principal of Fleming Middle School in the Houston Independent School District, said in a memo, written on school stationery and sent to parents via their children, that the classes are one answer to the school's discipline problems.

"I have probed the causes of student behavior and misbehavior," the principal wrote in a Jan. 7 letter to parents. He said the classes would offer "some means for establishing good classroom atmosphere, thereby decreasing the probability of future discipline problems."

Some teachers at the school, with an enrollment of about 1,000, complained about the plan.

HISD Superintendent Joan Raymond declined comment but said she is investigating the matter.

Johnson's letter asked parents' permission for their children to meet with him and other teachers on some Saturdays at a Baptist church near the southeast Houston school. The letter also invited parents to the classes.

The first session is scheduled for Saturday morning.

One teacher, who requested anonymity, said, "He called students into the auditorium last week and told them they need to come to this thing on Saturday."

The educator said discipline problems at Fleming have increased recently, and said Johnson in many cases is not following district policy, which allows troublemakers to be sent to student referral centers.

Gayle Fallon, president of the Houston Federation of Teachers, blasted Johnson's plan.

Businessmen told to get involved with education

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The private sector must take a more aggressive role in the state's education system to help curtail the dropout rate, a businessman told the Texas Education Conference on Friday.

About 400 school administrators and businessmen gathered to discuss the problems of educating disadvantaged children and the state's dropout rate, estimated at 33 percent.

C. Martin Wender of San Antonio said the state needs to improve the education system and controlling the dropout rate would attract more industries.

"We can no longer treat education as a stepchild," Wender said. "We need to realize that education is the key to our future. We cannot rely on the public sector to carry the ball. Industry and businesmen have to realize where they have to invest their dollars.

"I don't want a businessman to think that if he does something for education that it is charity. If we consider it a charity, then we don't know what we're talking about,' Wender said.

Mayor Henry Cisneros, who moderated most of the conference, agreed with Wender.

"It falls on all of us to work together to intervene to solve ... the droput problem," Cisneros said.

Education Secretary William Bennett reminded the group that education was the key to success for disadvantaged youth, especially those not proficient in English.

He said he was recommending to Congress on Friday that it amend the Bilingual Education Act to allow local school districts more control in their bilingual programs.

He said the proposal was intended to restore the original intent of the act, passed in 1968, to allow for that local control.

"Our reform has been portrayed as an attack on bilingual education. This is false," Bennett said. "Our intent is neither to promote one instruction method at the expense of another, nor to belittle or diminish any culture or heritage."

Bennett said parental involvement in schools would help keep students interested in school.

A survey on Texas dropouts, conducted by the Intercultural Development Research Association, indicated that the attrition rate for 1985-86 was 33 percent.

Texas Education Commissioner Dr. William Kirby said the dropout rate for Hispanics is about 45 percent.

"This is a disgraceful statistic. It's a statistic of shame. It's statistic of failure. It's a statistic that cries out for us to do something today," Kirby said.

Oscar Hernandez, president of the Texas Association of School Boards, said the state lacks a system to accurately count dropouts.

Wheelchair-bound woman enters beauty pageant

VACAVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Shortly after Maria Serrao was paralyzed in a car accident 18 years ago, she had wheels put on her braces so she could roller-skate with her friends.

On Sunday, the 23-year-old actress and model tackles another goal when she becomes the first wheelchair-bound woman to enter a beauty contest that could lead to the Miss USA and Miss Universe pageants.

"If it's in your heart to do well, I believe anybody can do it and will do it," said Serrao, who lives in Studio City, a Los Angeles suburb. "Some of it is luck. But most of it is drive."

Pageant Executive Director Ouida Cooper-Rodriguez asked Serrao to compete with 21 other contestants for the Miss Solano County crown because she's a native of Vacaville, about 50 miles northeast of San Francisco.

"I think it would be good for her," Cooper-Rodriguez said. "I think she has accomplished a lot of her goals and she has not let that wheelchair stand in her way."

Cooper-Rodriguez said Serrao would be the first woman to compete in a Miss USA pageant who is in a wheelchair.

The brown-haired, hazel-eyed woman regularly goes to the beach. She can walk with her braces with difficulty, and spends most of her time in her wheelchair.

"I do wheelies," she said.

For a time, she considered becoming a lawyer. But after a short stint at a junior college she decided to move to Los Angeles and pursue an acting career.

Since then, she's appeared on television's "Cagney and Lacy," "Trapper John M.D.," "General Hospital" and in the film "The Falcon and the Snowman."

"I would like to get into episodic television," she said. "I think that's where I can showcase my talents to the best of my abilities."

"It takes a lot of dedication. It's not just a meat market where you're up there in a bathing suit, like I thought it would be. There's a lot of time and work involved," she said.

She admitted the other contestants were surprised to see her. "But now I'm not different. Now I'm just another contestant, and that's great," she said.

She said she does not categorize herself or consider herself a spokeswoman for any particular group.

"I consider myself a spokeswoman for anyone who has an obstacle to overcome," she said. "If I can be an inspiration to anybody who feels they can't do something for any reason, I think that is more important to me."

Lee Burke, Health and Physical Education Division Chairman, will teach the course, listed as HPE 112-404 on the schedule. Call 573-8511 for more information.

Registration for spring classes will be held on June 19-20.

If suspect isn't executed...

W. Germans: extradition ok

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The Justice Ministry on Friday predicted West Germany would extradite a suspected airplane hijacker to the United States — but not without U.S. assurances that he will not be executed if convicted.

Mohammed Ali Hamadi, who had been sought in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA jetliner, was arrested Tuesday at the Frankfurt airport. He is the first person arrested in the 17-day hijacking, in which a U.S. Navy diver was shot to death at Beirut airport before the 38 other American hostages.

A Justice Ministry spokesman told a news conference that federal authorities foresee no difficulties with Hamadi's extradition.

"It would appear this can be handled quickly," ministry spokesman Juergen Schmid said.

But he said West Germany, which has no death penalty, has told the United States it must first have an assurance that Hamadi will not be put to death.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Robert Heath declined comment Friday about whether the United States would provide such a guarantee.

The final decision to extradite Hamadi must be approved by West German prosecutors, courts and two government ministries, Justice and the Foreign Ministry.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman, Reinhard Bettzuege, said he was aware of no threats against West Germany from group or governments that might oppose Hamadi's extradition.

If such threats are made, "we will just have to live with it. Unfortunately, we are a country that is accustomed to terrorism," he said.

The U.S. Justice Department notified West Germany on Wednesday that Hamadi, 22, and three others are wanted for conspiracy to commit air piracy and murder in 1985 aboard TWA flight 847, which was commandeered on a flight from Athens to Rome. Air piracy carries a death penalty provision in the United States.

West Germany responded with a request for a copy of Hamadi's indictment and the assurances regarding the death penalty, Schmid said. He said the United States has not yet responded.

Hamadi was placed under "interim extradition custody" in Frankfurt on Friday. That legal status means he will remain under arrest until the extradition issue is settled, court officials said.

Chief Frankfurt Prosecutor Hans-Hermann Eckert cautioned that if Hamadi decided to contest the U.S. extradition request, "the process could take months." Eckert said questions as to whether Hamadi broke German law must also be resolved.

Hamadi, who had flown to Frankfurt from Beirut, was taken into custody at Frankfurt airport after customs agents seached his luggage and found three wine bottles containing methyl nitrate, which can be used to make explosives.

West German authorities believe he was planning a bomb attack, although they are not sure where.

An Interior Ministry spokesman, Michael Butz, said Hamadi had apparently intended "to meet with other Lebanese" in West Germany.

The daily newspaper Die Welt said the methyl nitrate taken from Hamadi probably was intended for attacks against U.S. and Israeli installations in West Germany, but Butz said he could not confirm that.

Security sources said Hamadi's arrest was due to the alertness of a customs official who thought the wine bottles in Hamadi's suitcase looked strange.

Butz said West German authorities were investigating whether Hamadi had any connection with a Lebanese man who was arrested Monday in Milan, Italy, with more than 20 pounds of plastic explosives.

In 1977, Dutch marines attacked a train held by South Moluccan terrorists in the Netherlands, freeing 49 of 51 hostages and resulting in the deaths of two hostages and six terrorists.

Mattox: beware of 'too good' deals

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox, warning consumers to beware of mail-order and telephone deals that appear "too good to be true," said Friday that Texas is joining other states in a crackdown on consumer fraud.

"If the deal sounds too good to be true, it probably is. It's probably not any good at all ... You shouldn't buy it. That's the most important thing," Mattox said.

Mattox's office this week filed a major lawsuit in San Antonio and reached a $240,000 settlement in Houston against firms he said were misleading consumers with fraudulent come-ons.

"In this modern age of electronics, it is amazing how widespread these telemarketing schemes have become. Everyone in America who has a phone is vulnerable," Mattox said.

In the Houston case, Mattox said, a company called the International Federation of Business Bureau notified consumers they had won a three-person boat and outboard motor. The winners were told they would receive the boat if they paid an average of $122 in shipping charges, Mattox said.

When the boat arrived — in a cardboard box — it turned out to be an inflatable craft with a small electric motor that Mattox described as similar to an eggbeater.

Also included was advertising for an air pump, battery, oars and other items for the boat that were sold separately, he said.

"The actual cost of the boat that was received was $38," Mattox said.

"In this consumer rip-off," Mattox said, the settlement called for full restitution to any customer who was dissatified and payment of $24,000 in fines, court costs and attorneys' fees to the state.

Mattox said there are numerous scams being carried on in Texas today, promising consumers everything from free vacations to luggage sets.

He said his office is joining a nationwide crackdown by the National Association of Attorneys General against illegal telemarketing schemes.

"The consumer rip-offs in question usually involve 'boiler room' operations in which consumers are telephoned and offered so-called free gifts if they will purchase other goods or if they will participate in surveys," he said.

Mattox said consumers who feel that they have been victimized by such operations should contact the consumer protection division of his office.

White to join Houston firm

AUSTIN (AP) — Lame-duck Gov. Mark White said Friday when he leaves office next week, he will return to the Houston law firm where he worked before entering politics.

The Democrat said he is joining Reynolds, Allen & Cook, which will be renamed Reynolds, White, Allen & Cook.

"I look forward to assuming the role that's more powerful than all the rest, and that is being a private citizen of the state of Texas," White said.

White refused to say how much money he will earn, expect to say "a little better than minimum wage." Published reports have speculated he will receive well into six figures.

"I don't know exactly what it will be," White told a news conference. "But by the time Linda Gale gets done buying furniture, I'm sure it won't be enough."

This is the third time White has joined the firm. White first joined it in 1968, leaving in 1972 to become secretary of state for then-Gov. Dolph Briscoe, then again for nearly a year before running for attorney general in 1978.

He said he decided at mid-morning Friday, after having considered about more than a half dozen offers.

The decision came "after some very careful consideration and opportunity to talk to people not just here in Texas, but from throughout the country and some very generous offers ... law firms and businesses.

"I felt this would be the best opportunity, and it gave me an opportunity to rejoin old friends."

Asked if he would act as a lobbyist either in Austin or Washington, D.C.; White replied, "I don't intend to."

The firm employs more than 70 lawyers and deals with civil rather than criminal law.

Stanley B. Binion, the senior partner, told reporters the firm has "always considered Mark to be one of us. We had to wait 15 years to get him back, but it just one of those rare opportunities that we as a law firm welcome. Mark will be a tremendous addition."

The governor, who will be succeeded by Republican Bill Clements at noon on Tuesday, said he will work in both the Houston and Austin offices.

"I expect to be here for about six months for the conclusion of school. Then we'll be moving to Houston," he said. The Whites have three children who have attended public schools in Austin during his term.

Movers on Friday hauled furniture from the Governor's Mansion to the Whites' new residence. The rented house is located in one of Austin's most fashionable older neighborhoods, a short distance from downtown and west of the University of Texas campus.

White displayed a sense of humor in explaining his choice of law firms.

"Let me just level with you," he said. "The old firm was called Reynolds, White, Allen & Cook. The White was another White. I was an associate at the time. They have a lot of that stationary left over and this was a very economical way to use it."

Singing class for women set at local college

The department of vocal music at Western Texas College will offer a singing class for women in the spring semester starting Wednesday.

This new class is especially for women who wish to be part of a women's chorus, Jane Womack, instructor, said. Music fundamentals, vocal techniques, choral style and sight reading will be emphasized as the group learns music of various styles and levels of difficulty. Performances by the group will be an important part of the course, depending upon opportunities as they occur.

The class will meet twice weekly in the late afternoon in order that women who work will be able to attend. The days and times for the class meetings will be arranged to suit the needs of the group, Mrs. Womack said. Call Mrs. Womack at 573-8511 or 573-5731 for more information.

Mrs. Womack, assistant professor of music at WTC, teaches vocal and instrumental music. She taught public school music before joining the WTC faculty and was formerly choir director at Snyder's First United Methodist Church where she is currently organist. She graduated from Hardin-Simmons University with a degree in music education.

First S&L closes

DALLAS (AP) — The First Savings & Loan Association of Burkburnett, which has been operated by state officials since 1984, was closed Friday and federal authorities directed the transfer of the thrift's accounts to a Fort Worth savings and loan.

First Savings, which was chartered by the state in 1960, had $213.5 million in assets and offices in Burburnett and Wichita Falls, a spokeswoman for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said.

The board appointed the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. as receiver and directed the FSLIC to transfer insured accounts to Colonial Savings & Loan Association of Fort Worth, said spokeswoman Rebecca Vail.

The board's action followed the closing of First Savings by the Texas Savings and Loan Commission, which has been operating the institution since April 7, 1984, Ms. Vail said.

One wreck reported with icy conditions

Ice which accumulated on Scurry County roads Friday made for extremely hazardous driving conditions, but only one wreck was reported in the county which produced heavy vehicle damage.

It involved Hermleigh man Billy Don Haynes, whose 1986 Ford Bronco II was damaged as it spun out of control on the overpass leading into Snyder from U.S. Hwy. 84 out of Hermleigh.

Time of the wreck was placed at 7:30 a.m. some 1.1 miles south of here.

Haynes received a cut hand in the accident due to a broken front windshield.

Department of Public Safety troopers say his vehicle slid into the overpass railing, causing heavy damage to the right front and front. Haynes, who was alone in the vehicle, was wearing his seatbelt, they noted.

DPS officers were busy throughout the day with motorist assists also. Trooper Pat Alexander said the roads were so hazardous that wreckers were unable to pull many vehicles from ditches, primarily located north of the city on U.S. Hwy. 84.

Most of these vehicles were left in the bar ditches, he said.

Snyder man sentenced to 3 years for assault

A 20-year-old Snyder man was sentenced to a three-year term in the Texas Department of Corrections after pleading guilty to a charge of sexual assault on a minor.

David Guerra Jr. of 307 N Ave. Y pleaded guilty to that charge in exchange for the prison term.

He had been indicted for an assault on a 14-year-old girl on Nov. 1, 1986.

Drawing 10-year probated prison terms in exchange for guilty pleas to burglary charges were Lyndon Ray Phillips, 19, and Trey Clayton Sibert, 18, both of Austin.

Phillips and Sibert had been indicted by the Scurry County grand jury in January for burglarizing the James Hill residence on the Old Lubbock Highway in December.

Although they drew probated prison terms, both remained in the county jail Friday evening pending transfer to Llano County where other felony charges are pending against them.

Kidnappers issue photos of latest U. S. hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A terrorist group Saturday released photographs of two American hostages and in a separate statement threatened to "punish" all participants of an Islamic summit to be held next week in Kuwait.

The independent an-Nahar newspaper said its offices in west Beirut received the photographs of Joseph Cicippio and Edward Tracy at dawn in an envelope bearing the name of the Revolutionary Justice Organization. It said the pictures were not accompanied by any statement or demands.

The group is believed made up of Shiite Moslem zealots loyal to Iran's revolutionary patriarch, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Inquiry ends with reprimand

reprimand primarily because the letter made it unclear if the sessions were voluntary or mandatory.

Hise noted testimony given by Snyder school officials indicated that local athletes apparently realized that the sessions were voluntary, however.

He said both Tomlin and Courtney informed the committee that their discussion with students indicated the players felt the sessions were not mandatory.

Regarding the split vote of 5-2 for the oral reprimand, Hise said it was unclear if the two dissenting votes favored a stricter or a more lenient ruling.

"Everyone had their say during the discussion, but no one specifically commented following the vote," he said.

Local Superintendent Bob Hawes expressed relief Friday afternoon following the session.

He had noted earlier the executive committee, if it felt the infraction justified it, could have moved for harsher punishments.

He noted this could have ranged from the oral reprimand to some sort of forfeiture or suspension action for next season.

"I think it's important that the district felt none of our actions were intentional," he said.

"I also think it was in our favor that we voluntarily approached them for some sort of decision," he added.

Friday's meeting before the 2-4A executive committee was prompted by Hawes, who forwarded a copy of the summer workout letter after he received a copy of it at his office.

He said when he returned from the Christmas holidays, a copy of the letter had been anonymously mailed to him.

After this occurred, he said he notified Hise as the district committee chairman, who in turn set up the committee meeting in Midland Friday.

Hawes said he felt the committee was lenient also because of the vague wording in the UIL rule regarding summer practice.

As recently as Thursday, a statewide UIL committee in Austin has been meeting to discuss this specific concern.

The Off-Season Committee was told this week by the head of the UIL, Director Bailey Marshall, that the UIL should identify to a greater extent the need for control of off-season and summer workouts for high school athletes.

Jail problems not felt here

In the event that the beds occupied by the Midland prisoners are needed for local inmates, the boarding inmates can be shipped back to Midland immediately, Collier said.

According to Collier, Scurry County sends an average of 4 to 5 prisoners per month to TDC.

At that rate, he estimated that Scurry County could hold out for at least two months if forced to keep felony convicts here.

Births

Charles and Peggy Kuss of Midland are the parents of a baby girl weighing 7 pounds, 6 ounces.

The boy was born Friday, Jan. 16. at 1:25 p.m. in Midland Memorial Hospital.

Paternal grandparents are Albert and Gladys Kuss of Hermleigh.

2 wrecks noted with ice in city

Despite icy conditions in Snyder Friday, only two wrecks, one a hit-and-run, were reported inside the city.

At 11:30 a.m., a two-vehicle collision was reported in the 2700 Block of 38th St.

Involved vehicles were a 1979 Pontiac, driven by Shondra Deanne Robinson of Rt. 3, and a 1885 Dodge driven by Lisa Lynette Massey of Rt. 1.

The hit-and-run was reported at 11:46 a.m. at the Terry Rumpff residence, 2310 41st St. Reports indicate someone apparently hit Rumpff's legally parked 1985 Chevrolet Citation.

Two arrests noted Friday

Two arrests were reported Friday night by police.

At 10:43 p.m., a Mexican male was instantered for driving without a license, failing to have liability insurance and for an unsafe lane change.

At 12:27 a.m., a Mexican male was arrested for outstanding Department of Public Safety traffic warrants for speeding and failing to have liability insurance.

Closing prison shifts problem

by The Associated Press

Closing the Texas prison system will only shift the problem of overcrowding to county and municipal jails where some sheriffs were already squeezing mattresses on floors for their inmates, Texas sheriffs said Friday.

"Closing the prisons is simply moving the problem down the line," said Denton County Sheriff Randy Kaisner, noting that overcrowding is more severe in county jails than in the Texas Department of Corrections system.

"It seems to me that this is part of a repertoire of responses the state gives (U.S. District Judge William Wayne) Justice every time he rattles their cage," he said. "It's good window-dressing but it's not exactly new."

In Rockwall County the jail is under a remedial court order that will allow no more than 12 male inmates. Others are put in other jails elsewhere in East Texas under contract, said Sheriff John McWhorter.

Panhandle, West Texas get snow and freezing drizzle

By The Associated Press

A winter storm dumped snowfall across a vast area of West Texas and triggered freezing rain and drizzle that slickened a vast area from west of Fort Worth to Del Rio.

At least two people died as a result of the winter storm that was moving northeastward early Saturday.

Ray Trusler, 38, an Abilene pharmacist, died Friday from injuries he suffered in a two-car accident on icy Interstate 27 near Hale Center, about 35 miles north of Lubbock.

Authorities said Trusler was driving south when another car in the northbound lane hit a patch of ice, slid across the median and struck Trusler's car head-on.

Abilene Police traffic Sgt. Gene Keesee estimated that officers responded to about 50 accidents between 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Kathy Martinez, 24, of Fort Hood, died early Friday when her car went out of control on an ice-slick road and overturned about 2 miles east of Slaton, said Department of Public Safety spokesman Avis Goodwin.

Up to 5 inches of snow blanketed the Amarillo area by dawn Saturday and the National Weather Service estimated that snowfall amounts would likely range from 3 to 6 inches over much of West Texas before the snowfall is expected to end from the west Sunday.

The area of freezing rain covered a vast area west of a line from near Fort Worth to Del Rio at dawn Saturday, forecasters said. They warned that the freezing precipitation might move across the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex later Saturday, Saturday night or early Sunday.

Freezing rain mixed with snow was moving towards the Wichita Falls area at dawn Saturday and authorities forecast hazardous driving conditions, urging people not to travel unless it was an emergency.

In Amarillo, police and emergency personnel were kept scrambling as motorists bumped and bounced off each other on the city's slick streets, but with no major injuries.

More than 100 accidents were reported inside the city limits by 6 p.m., none serious, police said.

A teen-age boy was critically injured at 7:15 a.m. Friday near Vega when a pickup truck carrying four people overturned seven miles inside the Texas state line on Interstate 40.

Two trucks overturned on U.S. Highway 287 one mile north of the Canadian River bridge, a Department of Public spokesman said Friday.

No injuries were reported.

Ochiltree County officials at Perryton said at least 6 inches of snow covered the ground and light snowfall continued to fall late Friday.

Runways at International Airport in Amarillo looked good despite the snow, according to Herb Sellers, air traffic manager.

"They're plowed 200 feet wide, and there's about a half inch of packed snow and six foot piles along each side," he explained late Friday. "There is no problem with landing or departure."

Cross-country buses were reported running behind schedules, but experiencing no severe problems.

"From the west they're running about six hours late," Trailways operations manager James Worden said. "From the east toward Dallas, about 45 minutes late."

Accused officer's freeway stops recalled by people

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A highway patrolman accused of strangling a motorist he allegedly pulled over had stopped other drivers on the same stretch of highway and some said they were left puzzled and frightened.

"It was strange," Sigurd Ziegler, a passenger in his wife's car, said Friday of a Dec. 16 nighttime stop on Interstate 15 by Patrolman Craig Alan Peyer.

Peyer, a 13-year California Highway Patrol veteran and the father of three, was arrested Thursday night in the slaying of Cara Evelyn Knott, 20, of El Cajon.

The body of the San Diego State University student was found Dec. 28 off I-15 in an isolated area of northern San Diego. The day after the killing, Peyer appeared, on the recommendation of the San Diego CHP office, in a local television news story about how women should protect themselves on the highway.

Ziegler said he was resting in the passenger seat and not immediately visible when Peyer stopped him and his wife last month.

"We pulled over to the side and there was ample room on the shoulder but he bullhorned her to go on, go on, until we hit an off ramp situation," Ziegler said, referring to the Mercy Road exit ramp, where Knott's abandoned car also was found.

According to police, Knott was thrown off a 75-foot-high bridge near the exit ramp after she was strangled.

Ziegler, one of at least a half-dozen motorists who have contacted police and the news media about unusual stops involving Peyer, said his wife couldn't stop safely until they reached the bottom of an incline on ramp.

"We were totally out of sight of I-15 and in total darkness," Ziegler said.

Cut your own taxes and save

Work expenses can reduce tax bills

By Robert Metz

(Fourth of 14 articles)

Even if you are not in business for yourself, you may be able to reduce your taxes by noting certain expenses you have in your line of work, if your employer doesn't reimburse you for them. Some of these are deducted only if you itemize your deductions; others are taken out on a separate line on the 1040 form, as adjustments to income.

Let's take a look at those entertainment expenses. They're not all deductible. The IRS says your entertainment expenses must be directly related to or associated with your work. In some cases, the IRS has taken this to mean that you had a substantial business discussion with your customer, client or associate soon before or soon after the entertainment.

If you can show that kind of close timing, you can deduct the expense of entertaining guests at a wide range of places — nightclubs, social, athletic and sporting clubs, theaters, sporting events, on yachts, or on hunting, fishing, vacation and similar trips.

The IRS ruling that says you can deduct the expense of taking business associates to breakfast, lunch, cocktails or dinner if two conditions are met:

You must be able to show a business relationship with the person. This means you must be able to show that you were not entertaining for social reasons, but that the person was an actual or potential customer, employee, agent, supplier, client or some other association.

And you must show that you had your meal or drinks in a place where there were no noisy or distracting influences, like a floor show or play.

• Tax trap: The IRS frowns on reciprocal entertaining — situations where a group of business associates take turns picking up each other's entertainment checks whether or not a business purpose was served.

• Tax tip: You can deduct the costs of business gifts — but no more than $25 for gifts to one person in one year. So, if you give 30 clients a desk diary worth $10, you may deduct the $300 cost; however, if you give ten clients umbrellas worth $30, you may deduct only $250.

Things like engraving a gift, wrapping it, insuring and mailing it do not count toward the $25 rule. So if you bought a client a $15 birthday gift and spent $5 insuring and mailing it, you could still deduct up to $10 of the Christmas gift you bought that same client. And items that cost less than $4 each and have your business name stamped on them (like pens or desk sets) aren't counted as gifts in figuring the $25 tally.

Remember, these are the sorts of business expenses you can deduct only if you itemize; they are deducted on line 22 of Schedule A. The IRS gives more information about these expenses in publication 463, "Travel, Entertainment and Gift Expenses."

SAVE THOSE RECEIPTS

Travel	Entertainment	Gifts
• Each separate amount you spent for travel away from home such as transportation, lodging and meals. • Dates you left and returned home. • City or town you traveled to. • Purpose of the trip.	• Each separate amount, including meals, tickets, taxi fares and phone calls. • Date of entertainment. • Location and type of entertainment. • Name and title of person you entertained. • Purpose of entertainment.	• Cost and type of gift. • Date given. • What business benefit you expected. • Name and title of person who received the gift.

YOU MUST keep detailed records, made at or near the time you paid for expenses, in order to qualify for most adjustments. Pocket-sized record books are available at stationery stores.

An employee who incurs business expenses and who is not reimbursed for them by the employer may be able to claim these expenses as an adjustment to income. Such expenses include transportation, travel, and meal and lodging expenses while away from home overnight or longer — but not while on local errands or commuting to and from work.

Other expenses can be claimed only if you itemize your deductions. These expenses include entertainment, education costs, gifts, uniforms, trade magazine subscriptions, union dues and tools.

The IRS makes an exception, however, for outside sales personnel. They are allowed a wider range of business expenses as adjustments to income. Such expenses include all business-related automobile and travel expenses, entertainment expenses, telephone and telegraph charges, the additional expense incurred in having a telephone answering device or a business telephone installed in a home, hotel rooms and meals while away from home, laundering and dry-cleaning charges while traveling and reasonable tips.

• Tax tip: In case of IRS audit, carefully kept records should detail the date and amount of the expense, name of the restaurant, business reason for the luncheon or entertainment, and the name and business relationship of the person entertained.

Obviously, Uncle Sam does not want you to deduct these expenses if your employer has already reimbursed you for them. So he asks you to report any reimbursements that were not reflected as income on your W-2 Form. Such reimbursements are subtracted from your expenses before you transfer them to your tax forms.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

Who would give up a part-time salaried position to work almost full-time for no pay? Margaret Johnston of 3713 Ave. U did just that. And her dedication to volunteerism at the Scurry County Senior Citizens' Center has placed her at the head of the list of those who have given the most hours this year.

Born and raised in Houston, Margaret became involved in center activities shortly before her first husband's death. "I went mainly to get out of the house and have something to do," she said.

She particularly enjoyed game night each Thursday evening. During those weekly sessions, she met her current husband, Pat. "He worked six days a week and came down on Thursday. That's how we met by playing Skip-Bo with each other and sometimes against each other," she laughed.

After Margaret and her first husband, Glyn Nichols, closed their upholstery shop, she went to work as a clerk for O'Rear Furniture Store. Later, she worked for Gary Landes after he purchased the business.

Pat retired as a letter carrier with the U.S. Postal Service in Nov., 1981. Margaret completely retired in May, 1985.

Before her retirement, Margaret began giving as much time as possible to center work primarily by helping serve meals and by recording readings for the blood pressure program.

Since April 1, 1986, she has amassed almost 1,067 hours to lead all other volunteers. Center personnel count hours from April 1 of one year to March 31 the following year. The individual with the most accumulated hours is honored during the annual banquet.

Most of Margaret's time is spent handling paperwork and answering telephone calls. She also assists with record keeping and distribution of government commodities. Because she understands the guidelines that must be followed, she can also assist clients with questions about their eligibility for the program.

"We are understaffed for the amount of paperwork that must be done. She is our right arm as far as handling the paperwork is concerned," noted Assistant Center Director Jean Smith.

In addition, Margaret helps prepare reports on 10 current center activities. Her reports are combined with other reports and data to be forwarded to the West Central Texas Council of Governments which oversees area centers.

Currently in her third year of a three-year term, she is a member of the Senior Citizens' Advisory Council. "It's kind of like a governing board that's responsible for programs, expenditures and anything affecting the center," she explained.

Margaret and Pat usually arrive at the center between 9:30 a.m. and 10 a.m. every weekday. "I guess we spend most of our time here because we usually stay until it closes. Sometimes we are here seven or eight hours," Margaret said.

Although Pat participates primarily in center activities while his wife deals with paperwork, he also contributes volunteer time. "I really just like to play pool," he laughed.

"He says he's a 'go-for.' He does a lot of little things. Whatever they want him to do or need him to do, he does it," Margaret added.

She believes that giving her time to the center keeps her active and helps others at the same time. "Volunteering not only keeps me going, but it gives you a good feeling to help others."

She believes, too, that each person has his own unique contribution to make as a volunteer. "Some people can do one thing. Others can do something else. I like detailed work. I like to keep reports and do this kind of work. Some people are good with dealing with the sick, for example. But I'm just not comfortable with that except with family," she added.

Margaret also enjoys making cross stitch quilt tops to be quilted for the May Day quilt sale. The couple participates in the annual auction, too, and proudly point out that they were among the first to purchase one of Dr. Robert Taylor's small white buffalo statues last year.

The couple was named Valentine King and Queen for the center in 1985 and Pat has served as a past president of the Golden K Kiwanis Club which meets at the center.

The pair points out that the center offers activities for everyone. "I think the center helps us stay active and get involved. And I don't know where you can get a better meal. Many people believe this a a welfare program, but it's not," Margaret noted.

Jean Smith also emphasized that the center caters to all seniors 60 years of age and older. Those younger than 60 can also participate if their spouse is 60 or over. "This is not a federal program that excludes people in higher income brackets. It's not a welfare program, but a very, very active program open to everyone," she said.

"We always need new blood and as people turn 60, we would like to have them join us. We've got something for everyone. Even if a person just wants to visit, there are plenty of people here who will," she added.

Center participants enjoy a wide range of activities including pool, "42" and dominoes, a gospel sing-a-long each Friday morning, quilting, ceramics, crafts, the Kitchen Band and the Sunshine Choir. Other activities are developed as needs arise.

Seniors interested in offering volunteer hours through the center can choose from several areas as well. Center staffers have arranged for participants to become involved in several community projects.

Currently, volunteers serve in the Cogdell Memorial Hospital Auxiliary, Snyder Nursing Center, Snyder Oaks Care Center, the Association of Retarded Citizens Garage Sale, the Snyder Day Care Center and the Scurry County Library.

Volunteers assist as bowling score keepers and as helpers with the swimming program at Humble Smith School for Exceptional Children.

The center also began a home delivery library program for homebound elderly persons who enjoy reading. A volunteer visits the individual to determine his or her favorite reading material. He gets a library card in the individual's name and picks up and returns books to the library every two weeks.

Other volunteers assist as unpaid teachers' aides in the lower grades in the Snyder ISD system. Several also participate in the center's home and hospital visitation program.

Seniors also volunteer for short term projects such as the American Heart Association's Turkey Walk, stuffing envelopes for the United Way campaign, making calls for United Blood Services, assisting the local Boy Scouts and serving the Scurry County Museum whenever asked to do so.

"In October, we helped get a quilt display together for the museum and we had volunteers there to explain each quilt," Jean added.

Light and depression are focus of research

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Scientists hoping to shed light on winter depression are working to see if light can help alleviate it. Other researchers are working with light in other depression cases, not necessarily studying whether that depression is seasonal.

"It's a very common phenomenon, so common that people accept it as a normal part of life, that in the winter we're going to slow down, not have as much exuberance," says Norman E. Rosenthal, chief of outpatient services in the clinical psychology branch of the National Institute of Mental Health at Bethesda, Md.

"In some people the feelings assume enough of a proportion to become a clinical syndrome. People want to withdraw, and become quite disabled in many cases," he said.

The clinical condition is called seasonal affective disorder. Symptoms can include lethargy, oversleeping, overeating, weight gain, carbohydrate craving, sadness, despair and tearfulness, said Rosenthal, a psychiatrist who has conducted research on seasonal affective disorder and light therapy.

"Interventions with light seem to help some of the symptoms a lot," he said. "Light doesn't work for everybody; other forms (of treatment) need to be considered."

A group with milder depression is also being studied to see if light helps them as well, Rosenthal said.

John Nurnberger Jr., director of the Institute of Psychiatric Research at the Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis, says a study has begun involving different aspects of melatonin, a light sensitive hormone, and its effects on depression — not just seasonal depression.

Other research on general depression includes work at the IU Medical School, where Stephen Dunlop, a psychiatrist who is an assistant professor of psychiatry there, says a study of a new drug to treat depression is under way through the department and LaRue Carter Hospital.

"We do see more patients or clients during the winter months than we do during the summer months," said James T. O'Donnell, executive director of the Adult and Child Mental Health Center in Indianapolis. "When there's a change of seasons, referrals to facilities such as ours increase," he said, adding that there is some question as to whether it's folklore, personal opinion, or medically based.

A ruff in the hand can lead to trouble

By James Jacoby

Finally, here's a simple approach to playing the 4-3 fit. Most South players would open the bidding with one diamond, feeling that the gilt-edged values (A, A-K, A-Q) would fully justify a second-round reverse bid of two hearts. Since today's South was old-fashioned and a bit of a hand hog, he started with one heart. North raised hearts and then jumped to four hearts over three diamonds. (It would have been better to raise diamonds.)

Although five diamonds is a safe game contract (whatever the lead, draw trumps and pitch a spade from dummy on the fourth heart), declarer found himself in four hearts, and the club jack was led. If the opposing trumps are 4-2, declarer cannot allow his trumps to be shortened if he wants to draw trumps and run the diamond suit. Instead of ruffing the second trick, he should throw a spade loser. He would then throw another spade if the defenders continued to play clubs. Now, if a fourth club is led, dummy can ruff. With normal breaks (no 5-1 or 6-0 heart division), South will take the last 10 tricks.

Remember this is just another way to play the hand when your trump length is short. Discard losers that you can comfortably afford until such time as the dummy can ruff, preserving your own trump length.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

Academy packs in students

AURORA, Ill. (AP) — This building originally was designed to house 2,100 students.

But the 205 sophomores, the first class to attend the new Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy, still manage to fill it — right up to its newly patched roof — with shrieks, hoots, laughter and the constant, high energy din that young teens produce simply because they are young.

While their dorms are being built, the students both live and work in the former West Aurora High School north campus. Their close quarters and advanced course work have made the academy like no other school in Illinois.

On a recent afternoon, in the middle of social studies class, a tribunal of young "magistrates" shouted accusations at a suspected "witch" during a re-enactment of the Salem witch trials.

Their enthusiasm echoed throughout the building, bouncing off the walls of David Workman's physics class.

But the screams of the wicked and the damned didn't seem to distract Workman's students from his presentation of accelerating weights. Each time he asked a question, three or four students raised their hands.

At home, Jody Yates, 15, had her own room. Here she lives with 24 girls, who are crammed, bunk to bunk, in a former classroom. They eat together, study together, attend classes together, shower together.

Badri Rengarajan, 15, of South Barrington, said, "You are with your friends all the time. It's just great. We have fun here. By the second day, I knew everyone in my dorm. If I didn't like it here, I would miss home more."

When Suja Chacko, 14, of Northlake, closed her books at 1:30 a.m. recently, she remembered the good old days at Proviso West High School when all she had to do to get A's was show up for classes.

"I expected (the academy) to be hard," she says, "but deep inside, I never expected it to be this hard. No one just gets their grade here. If you get an A, you have really accomplished something."

At her old school, she says, it wasn't considered cool to study.

Secret panels find new use

ATLANTA (AP) — Secret panels leading to hidden passageways in old houses were a staple of Hollywood mystery movies in the '30s and '40s. Today, secret panels are back — but with an entirely different function.

The new panels look like wallpaper and allow the do-it-yourself-er to "paper" a room with the ease of putting up paneling.

Today's wallpaper-like panels are still "coverups," says Georgia-Pacific, a maker of building products. "They hide irregular surfaces, damaged walls and wallpaper that won't come off."

HOW TO GET YOUR CHILD A 'PRIVATE SCHOOL EDUCATION' IN A PUBLIC SCHOOL. By Marty Nemko.

Many of today's concerned but busy parents don't have the time to be a classroom volunteer, parent activist, or to make other time-consuming efforts to get a fair shake from public schools. So, they often feel forced to spend thousands of dollars each year on a private school. Now, parents have a choice. In their landmark book, Drs. Marty and Barbara Nemko use their many years as public school insiders to show you straight-forward and less time-consuming but potent ways to help your child thrive, not just survive in a public school. This ground-breaking book can enable even the busiest parents to get their child the same quality of education in a public school that big-spending parents hope to get in a fine private school.

Marco Polo brought the noodle to the Western world from China in the late 13th century. However, chow mein, stirfried noodles, did not reach the shores of America until the 19th century. The popular Oriental dish was introduced here by Chinese laborers building the transcontinental railroad.

CHOLESTEROL — GETTING TO THE HEART OF THE PROBLEM

Are you afraid of things that don't go thump, thump in the night? Like your heart, for example. Heart disease is the leading cause of death in the United States, but it's probably the most misunderstood disease around.

The biggest misconception surrounding this disease centers around the role of cholesterol. Many Americans have banished red meat from their diets because of cholesterol. If this is what you've done, take another look. The facts may pleasantly surprise you.

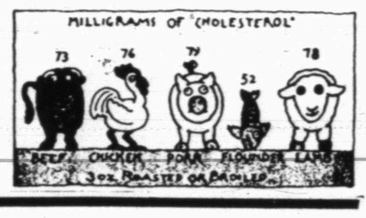

Coronary heart disease is caused by coronary atherosclerosis, an irregular thickening of the walls of the arteries that supply blood to the heart muscle. The primary cause or causes of atherosclerosis are not known.

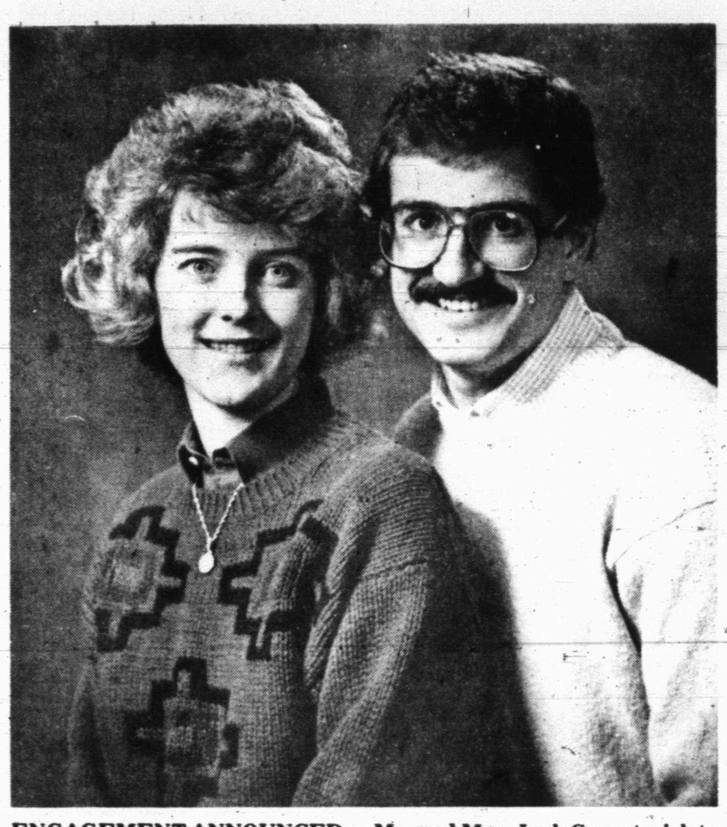

Statistics have shown that persons with elevated serum cholesterol levels are more likely to develop atherosclerosis than those with normal levels. Because of this link, some scientists believe that dietary control may reduce the risk of developing heart disease. Scientific experiments, however, have yet to prove this hypothesis.

Even when no cholesterol is consumed, the body manufactures between 800 to 1,500 milligrams daily anyway. Cholesterol is an essential part of body chemistry and the body will fight to keep it around. Many scientists believe that high blood cholesterol is probably a sign, rather than a cause, of atherosclerosis.

Even though scientists disagree on all the causes, individuals can take certain steps to minimize risk factors generally associated with atherosclerosis. Cigarette smoking, lack of exercise, obesity, stress and high blood pressure contribute to heart disease and most scientists agree that they should be controlled.

As for cutting down on dietary cholesterol, the debate rages, but most experts agree that it can't hurt. The American Heart Association recommends 100 grams of cholesterol per day. At 65 milligrams of cholesterol per three-ounce serving, broiled top loin fits well within AHA's recommendation. So enjoy! At that low level, your heart can safely go thump, thump in the night without your tummy going grrr, grrr.

Counselor teaches laughter and play

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Laughter, humor, play and friendship are all in a day's work for Steve Saffron. He makes a living teaching people how to have fun.

"I've always been a fun person, but now I have a license," Saffron says.

A certified counselor and the director of the American Indian programs at Scottsdale Community College, Saffron teaches a personal development class there. He also has taught classes in laughter, humor and play for Rio Salado Community College and the Franciscan Renewal Center.

"One of the things I've learned about maintaining friendships is humor and an open door to humor. What I teach in my friendship class is how to lighten up and play more," he said. "If you're going to maintain friendships, you have to know how to have fun."

Saffron has 56 students in his friendship class at the college. The course is important because many people do not understand the value of friends and the role they play in wellness, he said: "We need a wide variety of friends if we're a growing, evolving person."

Unfortunately, friend is a loosely used word, Saffron said. "It's a neglected relationship in our culture. When I say friends, we're talking about choosing quality people.

"A good friend, a close friend, you can't have too many because it takes too much energy. If you go through life and you have a few really good close friends, you've done OK," he says, adding that finding those friends can be difficult.

Saffron, who has been studying friendship for 20 years, says spouses or relatives are not fill-ins for other friends. "Even if we have that one juicy relationship, we'll still only have 50 percent of what we need," he said. "Life is very stressful, and friends are a way to promote health."

One of the biggest mistakes people make when they get married or enter into a love relationship, is dropping their friends, he said; "then in later years, they realize they need friends."

When a love relationship does not succeed, the couple will need to turn to friends for support, Saffron said.

"Everybody senses the importance of friendship and feels that need, but people are afraid. They are afraid to take risks because they've been hurt or put down," Saffron said. "I see the class as a place for them to implement what they do and try it out in a comfortable environment. The class is a safe place. We do dance in the class, music and readings."

Bake a caramel pecan cheesecake

Cheesecake purists say there is nothing better than the rich, compact New York variety. This cheesecake recipe, shared by a California reader, is that type. It won top marks from our recipe tasters because of the sensational pecan crust and caramel filling.

CARAMEL PECAN CHEESECAKE

1 cup graham cracker crumbs
¾ cup ground pecans
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
12 ounces cream cheese, softened
½ cup caramel ice-cream topping
3 eggs
2 tablespoons milk
½ cup dairy sour cream
¼ cup caramel topping
Pecan halves

In a mixing bowl combine crumbs, pecans, sugar and melted butter. Pat onto bottom and 1½ inches up sides of an 8-inch springform pan. In a large mixer bowl beat cream cheese until fluffy. Gradually beat in the ½ cup caramel topping. Add eggs and milk; beat just until blended. Turn mixture into crust. Bake in 350-degree oven for 40 to 45 minutes until center is set. Cool in pan 15 minutes. Combine sour cream and remaining caramel topping; spoon over cheesecake. Loosen sides of cheesecake from pan with spatula. Cool 30 minutes more; remove sides of pan. Cool. Chill. Garnish with pecan halves before serving. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Space enthusiast starts program for youth

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Roy Enders was one of those kids who used to make balsa-tree wings and jump off barnyard roofs. His love for space and science has expanded to the formation of a worldwide, 3,000-member Junior Shuttle Pilot Program.

The 29-year-old Mesa man plans to deliver his club's space science-high technology newspapers to schools throughout the state. He has orders for about 20,000 papers to go to such districts as those in Mesa, Scottsdale, Yuma, Kingman and Payson.

The 12-page broadsheet newspaper is written at a fifth-grade level with information on such topics as computers, robotics, aerospace and science and technology.

"We take information from the brightest minds in industry, government and the private sector and pass it along to the children in a fun and rewarding fashion," he said.

The paper includes stories, photographs, games, contests and experiments. The last page of each paper serves as a poster to encourage children to keep the issues, Enders said.

Robin Kline, a Scottsdale teacher and runner-up to Christa McAuliffe in the Teacher-in-Space program, designs two pages of information and games for kindergarten through third-graders.

Entitled Kline's Korner, in the January issue it has information about the solar system.

Enders says that, because he advertises his club in magazines that are distributed worldwide, he has subscribers in many countries, including Germany, Japan, New Zealand, Brazil and Canada.

Group helps people cope with death

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — People need to learn to help each other more in coping with death and other losses, say the founders of an educational organization dedicated — and called — To Life.

"Life is a series of losses," said Alexis Stein, executive director of To Life, which sponsors programs and counseling on bereavement, suicide, separation and divorce and other crises. "When a community is hit by a tornado, people pull together because they are united in pain. But when a loss hits an individual, that person is often forced to grieve alone."

"If you're there for others, when it's your turn, there'll be someone there for you," said Howard Winokuer, who founded the non-profit grassroots organization with Ms. Stein in 1979.

There are other organizations dealing with bereavement and loss, they say, but To Life is unique in that it also focuses on "life enhancement."

To that end, it sponsors talks by people like "Professor of Love" Dr. Leo Buscaglia and Dr. Howard Halpern, author of a column for singles and the book "How to Break an Addiction to a Person." It organizes workshops on enhancing children's self-esteem and on breaking free of stress and depression.

But running throughout the activities of To Life is the theme that loss is both an inescapable part of life and an opportunity to grow. The "small deaths" of life include not only the loss of loved ones but also the losses of youth, material possessions, independence, moving away, friends who move away, pets, even belief in Santa Claus.

"In our society, we tend to try to avoid pain and to put on a happy face," said Ms. Stein, 42. "That's denying our humanity."

Winokuer, 36, said the lack of communication about loss could lead to all sorts of other problems, such as drug abuse and suicide. Working with clergy, teachers, students, grieving relatives, the terminally ill and others, To Life's four professional staffers hold about 150 workshops and seminars around the country each year to improve that communication.

"The time to talk about death is not when you're dying, it's when you're healthy," said Winokuer. That applies especially to children, whose eyes are shielded when it comes to death, said Ms. Stein.

Healing the wound of loss first requires a full acknowledgement of the sadness or anger it causes, said Ms. Stein. Crying, exercise, talking and journal writing may provide an outlet for some of the pain.

"Loss is a scar that must be cleaned or it will develop an infection," said Winokuer. "If the grief isn't dealt with, it's going to fester ... After the scar heals, it's still there, but there isn't any pain. It's there to let you know that what you lost was an important part of you."

The support of friends is an important part of the healing, despite the tendency of many friends to try to ignore the death or make the grieving person forget it.

"What do you say (to a grieving person)? Your greatest present is your presence, that you were there to touch or hug," said Winokuer.

The next step in grieving involves changing the environment, such as painting the room of a family member who has died. Finally, the grieving person "reinvests in living" in small steps — going out, meeting new friends, even joining activities he or she used to enjoy with the family member.

To Life also sponsors programs on suicide, including teen suicide prevention and support groups for people left behind or otherwise affected by suicide.

Teen-agers usually know before anyone else when a friend is thinking about suicide, and To Life's prevention programs for students stress finding these clues and going for help.

To Life was conceived in 1979 when Ms. Stein and Winokuer — both trained in counseling and psychology — organized a conference on death and grieving to go along with a performance of "The Shadowbox" at the University of South Carolina. The play is about three families and their responses to dying relatives.

To Life was incorporated later that year. For three yeas, the founders worked part time on To Life, then took to it full time in 1982 when office space was donated by Myers Park Baptist Church.

DEDICATED TO LIFE – Howard Winokuer and Alexis Stein of Charlotte, N.C., are the founders of To Life, an educational organization that helps people with bereavement and life enhancement. (AP Photo)

So far, the founders estimate more than 25,000 people have attended To Life seminars or conferences.

About half of the organization's $125,000 annual budget comes from the fees these people paid, although no one is turned away for lack of funds. The rest comes from individual and corporate contributors.

Signing lawyer provides clients with unusual courtroom services

EDITOR'S NOTE — As both a lawyer and a teacher of the deaf, Nancy Leibold performs an unusual and useful service for the deaf in Cleveland area courts. Her knowledge of sign language helps keep her clients informed of what is going on during legal proceedings.

By Stephanie Nano
Associated Press Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — A lot of clients are referred to Attorney Nancy Leibold through "word of hand." Fluent in sign language and a former teacher of the deaf, Ms. Leibold went to law school with the aim of helping deaf people contend with the legal system.

Before that, she went to school to learn to be a teacher and then to more school to learn sign language.

Because of their handicap, deaf people may be misunderstood and mistreated by law enforcement officers and the courts, Ms. Leibold says. They also are forced to use interpreters to deal with lawyers.

"One of my goals when I first was teaching was independence for deaf people," she says. "That's one reason I did this, so that a deaf person could come to me independently, on his own, with privacy and tell me the problem without an interpreter there."

Her knowledge of sign language helps keep her clients informed of what is going on during legal proceedings.

"I make sure that my clients understand everything," she says. "I break down the legal language to the most basic language if I have to. It's really important that they understand."

Ms. Leibold's first contact with the deaf came in junior high school in suburban Cleveland. She remembers a deaf classmate struggling to present an oral book report in an English class. "It impressed me so much," Ms. Leibold says. "I just can't imagine having to do that. She was really brave."

Ms. Leibold, 32, decided to become a teacher of the deaf and attended Kent State University. The university program emphasized oral communications so she did not learn sign language.

The accepted teaching method now is a combination of lipreading and sign language, she says. "Lip-reading is an important skill to learn but you can't depend on it totally," she says. Only a third of speech sounds are visible on the lips.

Ms. Leibold mastered sign language while teaching at the Regional School for the Deaf in Brownsville, Texas. Her roommate, who also taught at the school, was an experienced signer. "We spent every minute signing," she says.

After two years in Brownsville, she moved to San Antonio, where in addition to teaching she worked as an interpreter for the deaf. Her experience interpreting at court hearings played a role in her decision to study law.

When she applied to law schools, instead of a lengthy essay, she wrote three sentences to explain her motive: "I'm a teacher of the deaf. I speak sign language fluently. I want to be a lawyer for the deaf."

"It was the whole reason I wanted to go to law school," she says.

When she began looking for a job three years ago after graduating from Cleveland State University's Cleveland-Marshall College of Law, Ms. Leibold couldn't find a position that would allow her to develop a deaf clientele. She decided to start her own practice.

"Nobody knew what to do with this person that wanted to be a lawyer for deaf people," she says.

She's now with a suburban law firm and the majority of her work is for deaf clients.

Ms. Leibold handles a variety of cases, criminal and civil, real estate, divorce, etc., and uses a portable typing device to communicate with some clients by phone.

"I have to do so many areas of law because I pick my clientele rather than picking the area of law," she says.

In Ohio courts, court-provided interpreters for deaf defendants are required in criminal and juvenile cases, but not others, she says. For simple cases, Ms. Leibold says she can interpret for her client. But that doesn't work during a trial.

"It's very hard to concentrate and think about your case and interpret what the other guy is saying at the same time," she says.

Banker is weekend wrestler

DENVER (AP) — By day, Randy Morse is a quiet banker — a man who lives with his mother and answers questions so softly you can barely make out the words.

By night, he's the 6-foot-6, 270-pound grunt in the wrestling ring, slinging his opponents into the ropes, wrapping their legs in pretzel positions, working up the crowd to a nasty froth: "Kick him! Kick him! Kick him!" they yell.

Call him Rotten Randy.

Or call him Sir.

Although he wrestles every now and again, Morse's real job is perhaps the most intimidating of all: assistant vice president in charge of installment lending.

You'll find Morse, 34, behind a desk in the Omnibank in University Hills from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. White shirt, pin dot tie, hair carefully parted.

There he walks on pink and green carpet and looks at walls papered in a nice leaf pattern. He listens to a receptionist say hello on the phone with the perfect lilt: "Good afternoo-oon Omni Bank."

But on the weekend, he leaves that civilized world.

If the World Wrestling Federation is in town and one of the regulars is injured or sick, Morse trades his blue suit for blue trunks and exchanges his wry sense of humor for a scowl and a sneer.

Morse is a former big-time bad guy.

A graduate of South High School and the son of a truck driver, Morse wrestled professionally from 1972 to 1981 with well-knowns like Big John Studd, Jesse "The Body" Ventura, Greg Valentine.

He holds titles with the National Wrestling Association and was world champion in 1979 with the Continental Wrestling Alliance.

Concerned about cutting the amount of fat you eat? Then get acquainted with evaporated skim milk. You can use it in many recipes for soups, sauces and desserts where you usually use light cream or regular evaporated milk. A cup contains just 1 gram of fat, compared to 28 grams for cream and 20 grams for regular evaporated milk.

CHICKEN CHOWDER

2 whole medium chicken breasts, skinned and boned
1 cup water
1 medium onion, chopped
1 medium carrot, shredded
1 clove garlic, minced
2 teaspoons instant chicken bouillon granules

GLASS OR PLASTIC?

When those who wear glasses have to choose between glass and plastic lenses, the decision may be difficult. No lens material is ideal for everyone. One must weigh the advantages of each material as they relate to his or her individual needs. Here is a comparison of the two most common materials:

	Crown Glass	CR-39 Plastic
Superior Scratch-Resistance	✓
Superior Shatter-Resistance		✓
Lighter-Weight		✓
Superior Ultraviolet Protection	✓

Other materials have recently been developed which are lighter, thinner, and more scratch-resistant than CR-39 plastic, so the choice is not easy. Let us help you decide. Call now to make your appointment.

Teeth are eroded by acids. As vitamin C is ascorbic acid, it is capable of decalcifying and eroding teeth if in contact with them for some time. Chewable vitamin C, which may stick to the teeth, is best avoided unless you have a complete set of dentures.

Vietnam movie controversial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just as they were during the war it depicts, congressmen and the men who served are divided over "Platoon," the latest and perhaps most powerful of Vietnam War movies.

Numbness was the common reaction among those invited to a special Washington premiere of the new film. As with the war, the movie appears destined for controversy, but there was no debate over its intense impact.

"It probably was as emotionally draining an experience as I've had," said Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., who is vice chairman of the caucus of Vietnam-era veterans in Congress.

"When I came out I felt a little ashamed," said Bob Moran, a double-amputee who now works with the Paralyzed Veterans of America. "I didn't stay for the credits."

The movie, which is just opening around the country, is the film of the Vietnam experience many veterans say they've been waiting for — one written and directed by a Vietnam vet, Oliver Stone.

The Vietnam Veterans of America, the service organization chartered by Congress, sponsored the showing Wednesday night along with Daschle's group, Vietnam-Era Veterans In Congress.

When it was over, grown men were crying.

Former Texas Justice dies

AUSTIN (AP) — Wilmer St. John Garwood, a former Texas Supreme Court justice whose family long has played a role in Texas legal circles, is dead at age 90.

Garwood, who left the state Supreme Court in 1958, died Thursday at an Austin nursing home after an illness.

"He was certainly a gentleman of the old school and a scholar and a distinguished jurist," said Austin lawyer Bob Hearon of the firm of Graves, Dougherty, Hearon & Moody. Garwood was a long-time adviser to the firm.

Ecologists nix 100-point plan as too vague

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A leading ecology group said Thursday the government's new 100-point anti-pollution program was "far from sufficient" and was mostly a rehash of plans announced in the past but never put into practice.

Ecologists from the Mexican Ecology Movement, or MEM, said they would watch for signs in the next month that the government is serious about carrying out the program announced earlier this week.

If there are no indications of government action, "we ecologists will begin our own actions" in trying to close down the worst polluters in greater Mexico City, Antonio Cipres Villarreal, MEM president, told reporters.

The Department of Ecology and Urban Development program, called "100 Actions," includes 37 measures aimed at reducing air pollution, mostly generated by cars and factories, that plagues Mexico City yearround but especially in winter.

One innovation calls for 300,000 of the capital's estimated 3 million cars to submit each year to emissions inspections, and for Mexican automakers to install pollution control devices starting with 1988 models.

Other parts of the program include cleanup of waterways and of the polluted bays at some of Mexico's famous beach resorts, new controls on the production and use of pesticides, and better regulation of land use throughout the country.

The MEM, like other watchdog groups in the city, said the government's "very action of making this agenda public is a reason for satisfaction to ecologists."

However, the MEM said in a statement, the government plan gives few specifics on how and when each proposal is to be carried out. In addition, it said, the proposals are overwhelmingly "corrective" rather than "preventive."

Moreover, Cipres Villarreal noted the government never carried out a 21-point emergency plan announced a year ago, when the winter pollution was at its worst, for improving air quality in Mexico City and its suburbs.

"This is just a repetition of the failed project of 1986," Cipres Villarreal said.

Citing weather, pollution and sickness patterns from the past two years, Cipres Villarreal predicted Mexico City would suffer about 75 temperature inversions through March and that "hundreds of thousands" of residents would become ill as a result.

He said the government plan lacks any measures for immediate reduction of the ozone, carbon monoxide, sulfur dioxide and lead that constitute the worst contaminants in Mexico City's air.

Authorities could improve the air in the Valley of Mexico immediately, and protect the valley's 20 million residents, by shutting down the 300 factories that contribute most to the pollution, Cipres Villarreal said.

Among those factories, he said, are producers of cement, tires, pesticides, chemicals, petrochemicals, steel and asbestos.

Peregrine White, the son of William and Susanna White, was born in 1620 aboard the Mayflower in Massachusetts Bay — the first child to be born of English parents in New England.

Treatment of genital rash

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've been prescribed Monistat-Derm (2 percent) for a genital rash. Is the rash a fungus? How can a fungus be contracted?

DEAR READER — If you have genital candida, a type of fungus, the Monistat should do the trick. However, genital rashes can have other causes, including other yeasts. If the rash doesn't clear up in a couple of weeks, you will require further tests, such as a skin culture and scraping, to identify the cause of the eruption. Fungus infections can be spread from one person's warm moist area to another's — as any athlete's-foot sufferer can testify.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 80 and my left hand shakes. The doctors say I have Parkinson's disease. I've been to two doctors and have taken many pills, but haven't had any results. What is your advice?

DEAR READER — The causes of tremors or shaking in the elderly can be elusive. Parkinson's disease is certainly a possibility, but other causes have to be considered, too. If you have had no results from anti-Parkinson treatment, your doctors surely will wish to obtain a third — or even a fourth — opinion. Ask for a referral to the neurology clinic at a teaching hospital. Your tremor may be treatable once the diagnosis has been established.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had Class II and Class III Pap smears and a biopsy indicating dysplasia on the cervix. The dysplasia was frozen off. How is this done and what does the biopsy mean?

DEAR READER — The Pap smears suggested — and the biopsy confirmed — the presence of abnormal cells in your cervix. "Dysplasia" means that there were pockets of tissue that didn't look right. A cone biopsy, or the more recent technique of freezing the area, will remove (or destroy) the abnormal cells. If you had a cancer, the biopsy would have shown it. You probably had a pre-cancerous condition, but it has now been eradicated. Nonetheless, you will need periodic gynecological examinations and Pap tests in the future to make sure that no dysplasia grows back.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 45 and have been bulimic for 21 years, with no apparent ill effects. What are the medical facts on why throwing up would be harmful?

DEAR READER — Bulimia (binge eating followed by vomiting) is a serious psychological disorder for which you should start treatment. The physical consequences include malnutrition, inflammation and bleeding of the esophagus, halitosis and loss of dental enamel from exposure to gastric juice. Many problems or illnesses can have ill effects that aren't apparent, or that develop over time. You probably will develop physical complications of bulimia if you don't acknowledge you have a problem and get help.

Doctors differ — like real people

A former patient of mine moved to Florida. During a visit north, she told me that she had experienced difficulty finding a new doctor who was warm and sympathetic, as well as capable. She made an appointment with a practitioner whom a friend had recommended. She was kept waiting more than an hour. Eventually she was ushered into a narrow, windowless examining room — one of six in the office, she later discovered. She disrobed. No one appeared for many minutes.

At last the doctor materialized. He asked her some perfunctory questions, took her blood pressure, listened to her heart and lungs, wrote out some prescriptions and left in a white-coated blur for the next examining room.

"Hey!" the woman called after the retreating figure, "is that it?" — or words to the effect.

"This is the way the doctor is," explained the nurse. "He is science-oriented. If you want a people-oriented doctor, you'll have to go elsewhere."

My reaction to this was probably similar to yours: "You're kidding!" I exclaimed. "No," my former patient replied. "That's the honest truth. I finally did find a doctor who would listen, but it took several weeks."

I thought: If we doctors are dividing ourselves into two classes — science-oriented and people-oriented — we are in trouble. What happened to the physician who was both? Well, apparently the breed is threatened with extinction.

People in general, and doctors themselves, have traditionally recognized that medical stereotypes exist. For example, surgeons are seen as "domineering and arrogant" and psychiatrists as "emotionally unstable." These stereotypes, and others like them, have been rumored to attract young doctors into certain specialties. This year, researchers at England's Cambridge University School of Clinical Medicine reported a study in the British Medical Journal. The study confirmed that, indeed, there are personality differences between specialties: Surgeons tended to be more interested in technology; psychiatrists appeared to be more humanistic. General physicians — and women doctors in all fields — occupied a middle ground.

My thinking has been colored by this report, and I believe that I may have been unfair to my colleagues in the past. All M.D.s don't practice the same kind of medicine; our orientations differ. Our profession is flexible enough to encompass many different approaches. Just because some doctors favor science over humanism doesn't necessarily mean that they are better (or worse) practitioners. We simply hold divergent opinions about disease, patients, ourselves and the world.

For instance, the surgeon has a need to act, to become involved, to alter — in a physical sense — the outcome of disease. He is attuned to technology; his whole life centers around it. On the other hand, we general doctors and internists prefer to be less aggressive, more introspective and cognitive, more interested in the whole patient. Rather than looking at people as collections of independent systems ready to break down and need repair, we tend to sit back and languish in the meaning of it all.

Every doctor is exposed to stereotypes. We are attracted to a way of practicing our trade by the practitioners who preceded us. We pick the specialty that we think will give us the most satisfaction. We behave differently because of our personalities and the ways we interact with other doctors within our own circle of interest. Therefore, I'd be unkind to criticize a doctor for acting in a way that, to me, would be insensitive.

Perhaps it is a mark of greatness that some doctors can be both science- and people-oriented at the same time. In a sense, this is a depressing realization, because I'd always thought that doctors, on the whole, were supposed to be simultaneously caring and competent. Maybe the pressures of medical practice and the perplexing complexities of scientific achievement force us to choose, early on, which flag we will follow.

I think that doctors should indicate their preferences in a more public way so that patients would no longer have to scuttle around searching for Dr. Right. The science-oriented surgeon should put "S.O." after the "M.D."; the people-oriented physician should tack on "P.O." This way, stereotype confusion could be avoided. The doubly scientific surgeon would come to be known as a SO-SO healer; the general doctor would familiarly become just a PO' M.D.

Drummer returns to alma mater

FOX CHAPEL, Pa. (AP) — Chris Frantz, drummer and founding member of the Talking Heads rock group, returned to his alma mater to tell high school students they must take risks to succeed.

Frantz, who graduated from the private Shady Side Academy in 1970, spoke to about 300 students, parents and faculty members Wednesday.

"Take a chance. Fall flat on your face," Frantz said.

"Art of today is different than Renaissance stuff. ... It's not just a matter of what's good and what's junk. It's 'Can you excite me? Can you turn me on? What can you offer me that will last, make an impression on me?'"

Tax possibility thought likely

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis says Texans probably will be paying new taxes when the Legislature winds up its session this year.

Asked directly if he expects that this session, which faces a near $6 billion budget deficit, would be forced to raise taxes, Lewis on Thursday replied with what he called "a qualified yes."

"It's going to be very difficult to get out of this session without some type of revenue formula," Lewis said.

In Texas, all tax bills must originate in the House of Representatives. However, the speaker said he doesn't yet know what type of tax increase might be approved.

Last summer, the Legislature met in special session and approved temporary sales and gasoline tax hikes that pushed the state sales tax rate to 5¼ percent and the motor fuel tax to 15 cents a gallon.

Those temporary levies were set to expire Aug. 31, but Lewis said they might be extended. Or some other type of tax overhaul may be enacted to raise money for essential state services, he said.

"No one likes taxes, and certainly I don't," the Fort Worth Democrat insisted.

But Lewis said lawmakers would have to have additional revenues in order to maintain current state services and improve the state prison system, which is under a federal court mandate for reform.

"I don't see any way we can get out of this session without some type of taxes. Be it extension of the tax bill that was passed in the special session or some newer, broader tax or whatever it might be," he said.

Lewis said he remains strongly opposed to either a personal or corporate income tax and doubts that the Legislature would approve either.

Lewis' comments came during a news conference at which he unveiled the results of a task force study of ways to revitalize and diversify the ailing Texas economy.

One key recommendation of the panel was to form a new commission to study the state's basic tax structure.

Gov. White has $1.6 million debt

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White will leave office Tuesday with a debt of $1.6 million remaining from his unsuccessful re-election campaign, aides say.

White's campaign treasurer, Shannon Ratliff, said he expects to begin fund-raising efforts to pay off the debt.

The $1.6 million, borrowed from a number of Texas banks, emerged from a list of outstanding loans in campaign finance reports filed Thursday by White's three major campaign committees — Citizens for Mark White, the Texas Committee and the Gov. Mark White Committee.

The lame-duck Democrat cannot engage in fund-raising efforts now because of a state law that limits such activities during a legislative session.

However, as soon as White leaves office he will be able to resume efforts to pay off the loans, Ratliff said.

Republican Gov.-elect Bill Clements, who will take office at noon Tuesday, reported raising about $2.6 million during December, the period covered by the latest campaign finance reports.

Ray Bolger, Scarecrow, dead at age 83

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ray Bolger, the last surviving member of the whimsical foursome that skipped down the Yellow Brick Road in the classic film "The Wizard of Oz," has died less than a week after his 83rd birthday.

Bolger, the lean and limber actor and dancer whose career spanned six decades, died at a nursing home Thursday from complications of cancer, said family spokesman Barry Greenberg. Bolger had celebrated his birthday Saturday.

"Now, Dorothy and her friends are back together again," said Jack Haley Jr., whose father played the Tin Man to Bolger's Scarecrow in the 1939 movie. Dorothy was portrayed by Judy Garland, who died in 1969, two years after Bert Lahr, who played the Cowardly Lion. Jack Haley Sr. died in 1979.

"A great dancer and a great performer," said actress Rose Marie. "He sang, he danced, he did skits, he did comedy, he did drama."

Bolger, who appeared in more than a dozen movies, preferred to think of himself as a comedian rather than a dancer.

"I was hired as a comedian in my first show and I'm still a comedian," he once said. "I became a dancer in self-defense. I was doing a comedy monologue and didn't know how else to get off, so I danced off."

Michael Kidd, who choreographed Bolger in the 1952 movie "Where's Charley," said "nobody danced the way he did."

"His legs gave out, his knees buckled. I always wondered how his knees held up. He would do a series of falls and get up and do them over and over again."

The dancing stopped in 1984.

"I stepped down from the stage and there was nothing there," Bolger recalled after the performance in Coronado.

He underwent surgery to receive an artifical hip after X-rays showed almost all the cartilage was gone. His doctor said he could dance again, "But I'm 80, and how much more dancing do I want to do?" Bolger asked.

"The Wizard of Oz," in which he portrayed the brave man of straw in search of a brain, was his favorite film.

He said he had no idea the movie would become a classic.

Raymond Wallace Bolger was born in Boston in 1904.

It was in 1936 that he became a star, when he appeared in "On Your Toes," which included the celebrated and exhausting dance number "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue." His later films included "The Great Ziegfeld," "Rosalie," "Sweethearts" and "Sunny."

Your Birthday

Jan. 18, 1987

In the year ahead, you'll establish several major objectives for yourself. What makes this year so unusual is the fact that your goals are all likely to be attained.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll resent doing something for someone else today because you believe he could do it for himself, but you'll bite the bullet and do it anyway. Major changes are ahead for Capricorns in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o of this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Business and pleasure don't mix well today, especially romantic intrigue. If you get involved, your secret won't go undetected.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Agreements into which you enter today should be thought through in every aspect. If you impulsively say yes to be a nice guy, you may get the short end.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Temporarily shelve jobs today that you don't enjoy doing. You'll be far more proficient performing the same tasks when you're in a better frame of mind.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Stay on familiar turf or you might get yourself involved in something you know little about. That could cost you financially and emotionally.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Guard against overreacting today if someone you love doesn't show proper gratitude for something you've gone out of your way to do.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Try to appreciate your mate today instead of finding fault with the little things he or she does that displease you. Use compliments, not complaints.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Attempting to appease someone you've made angry recently with a gift or material peace offering won't work as well as a sincere apology.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you're overly protective of those in your charge today, the measures you'll use might not be understood or appreciated. Loosen the reins.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) People who like you will go out of their way to make life easier for you today, but don't take their good deeds for granted. Try to reciprocate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be prudent regarding the types of activities in which you involve yourself today. Don't get in over your purse.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today, if you're in the company of a person who hasn't been as fortunate as you've been recently, don't flaunt your successes and make him or her feel inferior.

Your Birthday

Jan. 19, 1987

You have good possibilities for success in the year ahead, provided you stay in your area of expertise. Don't waste time and effort going off on tangents.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't try to impose your biased opinions or dislikes upon others today. You're not apt to win over their minds, just their resentment. Major changes are ahead for Capricorns in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) No one is about to offer you something for nothing today. Be careful that you don't make an arrangement that has too many hidden strings attached to it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) An ambitious objective won't be achieved today if you team up with someone who knows as little as you do about how it should be done.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) An assignment that's distasteful to you is equally as unpleasant to one you might try to palm it off onto today, yet you'll demand perfection.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Impulsive behavior could create unnecessary problems for you today. Don't jump into things without first considering all of their possible consequences.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be realistic regarding the demands you place upon your mate today. If your orders are unreasonable, you'll get problems instead of production.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you say unkind things about others today, there's a good chance that something even more unkind may be said about you at a later date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be doubly cautious today in all of your financial affairs. If you get careless, errors you make will be difficult to rectify.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't be wishy-washy in matters where you should take a firm position today. Fence-sitting will contribute additional complications.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Negative thinking and self-doubts are your worst enemies today. Instead of being fearful of failure, at least step out and try.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's best to not to take financial gambles today on situations where the events are controlled by others. You might back the wrong horse.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be mindful of your behavior careerwise today so that you don't alienate allies. Their needs must be treated equal to your own.

We've just lived through the traditional splatter of Top 10 news stories--that annual event tied to trying to get the old year in perspective while simultaneously girding for a new 12 months of potential disasters.

The Associated Press, probably because we send them money each month, kindly furnished us with a Top 10 list as prepared by both AP member editors in the U.S. and news editors from no less than 45 foreign nations.

Suffice to say that seven of the Top 10, despite some variance in order, were exactly the same from both groups.

To ball them all up into a long hyphenated word, these were stories about Challenger-Chernobyl-Summits-Marcos-Irangate-Libya-Terrorism.

We found the difference between the two lists to be the most striking, however.

The good old American press found such stories as congressional changes in the federal tax code, efforts to combat drug addition and the overall U.S. economy as Top 10 material.

As seen by the foreign press, however, unrest in South Africa and the spread of the AIDS virus are more urgent and, as a result, more "important" news stories. To this point, we'll side with the "furriners."

And then we come to Number 10 on the list of the world press guys. At the tail end, they voted a tie between the fall in world oil prices and the murder of Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme.

Our response was, "Say whutt?!"

The families affected by the downturn in oil around these parts, of course, don't give a fat rat's fazoo about the Swedish prime minister. Elsewhere, somebody obviously does.

And the right or wrong of either selection is not so much based on news sense as it is geography.

It did illustrate to us the dangers in making a mostly gray business like news fit into any kind of a black and white formula--particularly as stringent a guideline as a "Top 10."

And besides, why make up such a list when it only makes you a target for potshots?

We think for a variety of reasons, not the least of which is the otherwise lack of hard news over the Christmas-New Years holiday.

Also, journalists as a bunch don't like loose ends. An obit isn't complete until you have your subject both dead and buried, so a Top 10 list is one way to finish off the year's major stories.

Journalists also like to think of themselves as shadetree historians, and a Top 10 list is one way to exert a little influence down the line--a time when we're all destined to become the lead paragraph in that aforementioned obit.

As for directions regarding what is a Top 10 story, we'd offer a simple formula that applies to all sizes of newspapers--weeklies, dailies, the works.

It's a Top 10 story when it sneaks up behind your reader and bites him on the hind parts. You can't get any more personal than that.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

Those of you who have been reading my column for very long know that I have a favorite theme: comparing city/-suburban life (where I grew up) with small town/rural life. If you've read more than one or two of my columns, you know where I stand on the subject.

And nothing fuels the fire more than a trip "home." (Actually, we don't even call it home any more. Snyder is our home, in every sense of the word.) We faithfully make these semi-annual treks to Dallas for the purpose of connecting grandfolks with grandkids and looking up a few (emphasis on few) old friends. Although we enjoy visiting with family and friends, it seems to be getting harder and harder to force ourselves to make the trip each time.

Maybe it's because most of the people we visit look at us as if we were aliens from a foreign planet. It's no secret that they think we are stark raving lunatics to live "out in the boonies" with a bunch of large animals. And city people still call folks from small towns "hicks."

Most of you know that Kent and I grew up in a corporate suburb of Dallas called Richardson, a homogenous community with a high standard of living and an even higher snobbery ratio. We rebelled against what we perceived to be shallow, materialistic values and left as soon as we graduated high school.

During a recent visit, my brother-in-law, a paramedic and fire fighter who had just completed his master's degree in city management, made the statement that Richardson was "ranked third highest in the nation for quality of life."

"QUALITY OF LIFE!" I exploded. (Yes, "exploded" is the proper word.) "What do you call quality of life? Good shopping? Handy convenience stores?"

"There's an excellent school system here, for one thing," he replied, unruffled.

"I'll grant you that," I conceded, "but there is a heck of a lot more to 'quality of life' in a community than rich schools. Having good, solid friends whom you can count on, spending loving time with your family, achieving a certain amount of respect and support from your community, that's quality of life," I said. "Out in West Texas, a person is judged by his integrity and sincerity, not by how much money he makes."

"That's not completely true," said my diplomatic husband. "There are some oil-rich folks to whom money is very important."

"That may be so, but it's only a few individuals, not a whole dadgum town," I insisted. "And I know plenty of 'oil-rich' folks who are down-to-earth, friendly people who don't give a hoot what kind of car you drive or where you buy your clothes." He nodded in agreement. "I used to know folks in the suburbs who would buy a splendid house in a ritzy area, then sleep on cots because they couldn't afford to furnish it — just so they could live in the 'right' neighborhood. You call THAT 'quality of life?'" I'm afraid I was beginning to shout.

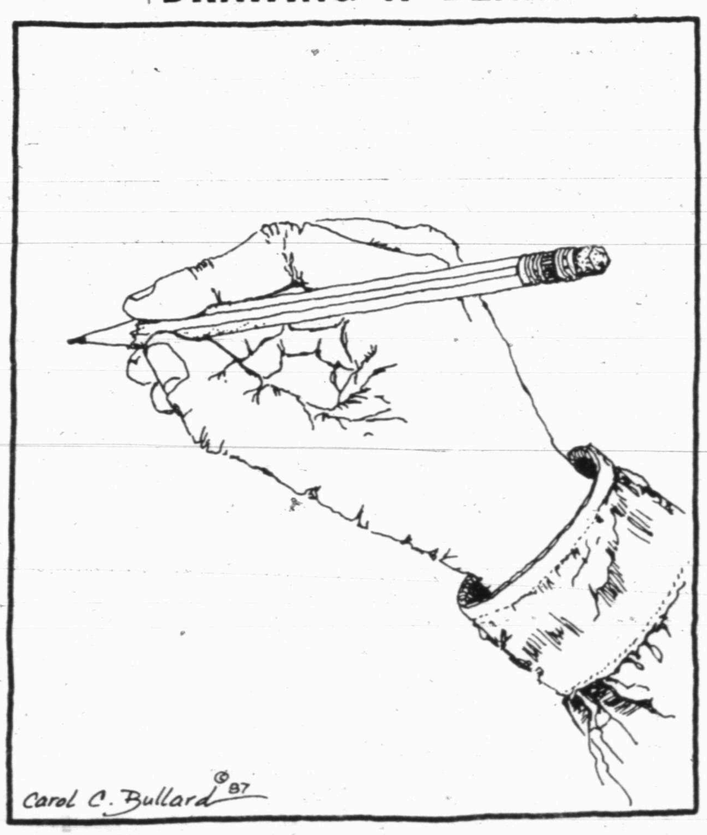

"The town has changed," said my husband's sister. "Those of us who grew up here are raising our children differently. There are large ethnic communities here now, Vietnamese and Korean, for example. It's not the same."

"I will agree that people can change," I admitted, "but a whole town? Let's drive past the high school parking lot and see how many brand-new sports cars are parked in it. I won't be convinced otherwise." I leaned forward pleadingly. "You can't imagine what it's like to sit on your porch swing in the evening breeze and watch the sun set over the valley."

There was a moment of silence. Then, my brother-in-law, who is an honest man, shook his head in wonderment and said simply, "I'd go nuts."

I rest my case.

The judicial decision, handed down in 132nd District Court by Judge Gene Dulaney, finds the former industry in default of its contract with the local foundation.

As part of this default judgment, it was determined that King's Highway owes the foundation some $81,700 in unpaid rent through Jan. 1 plus almost $46,000 in other miscellaneous fees--a total of some $127,700.

Those wondering what to look for as the 70th session of the state legislature convenes in Austin were given a preview of possible action in Sunday's newspaper.

A summary of "best guesses" from the non-partisan, non-profit governmental watch group, the Texas Association of Taxpayers (TAT), was offered by Roy Baze.

It was reported Monday a suspect has been arrested here for the reported rape of a 22-year-old Snyder woman, who told officers she was taken from her residence and sexually assaulted in a nearby field around 7:30 a.m. Sunday.

Rex Robinson, an employee of Snyder National Bank the past 36½ years, Monday was named the bank's chief executive officer.

J.B. Tate Jr., executive vice president of Snyder Savings and Loan Association for the past six years, Monday afternoon was named chief executive officer of the financial institution.

Three new members to the Cogdell Memorial Hospital Board, two new members on the board of county development and the appointment of two members of the pilot's association to the airport board were among the changes approved Monday by county commissioners.

In all, court members named 22 persons--many of these past members of other county boards--to fill expired terms on the seven voluntary boards which serve Scurry County.

Monday afternoon, commissioners approved final 1986 budget balances for each of the county's funds and also approved the figures as 1987 beginning balances for each fund.

County Auditor Bernhard Bartels reported seven funds closed the year with remaining monies including the general fund with some $764,143 and the hospital depreciation fund with over $1.2 million.

Western Texas College administrators were directed Monday to place the lion's share of some $85,000 in "unexpected" state funds into an interest-bearing account for this school year.

The direction came from board members in response to an informational item from college administrators, who offered staff recommendations regarding proposed uses for the funds.

The first monthly reporting period for Snyder sales tax returns shows the local spending estimate to be some 14.1 percent behind totals reported in January last year, it was reported Friday.

In actual dollar amounts, the report indicates the 1 percent tax returned some $46,000 this year compared to more than $53,000 last year.

The water rates charged Snyder and other member cities of the Colorado River Municipal Water District are scheduled to be reduced during 1987, it was reported Friday.

The decline in charges includes the absorption by the district of what was expected to be a 5 cent per 1,000 gallon increase to all member cities to help finance the Stacy Reservoir project.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

The recent changeover of various county board members may be a very good idea; however, the manner in which it was done was most unbusinesslike and showed a lack of caring for the individuals involved.

I was not notified in any way that I was not being reappointed and I assume that no one else was. If someone had failed to read the paper or been out of town, she could have found herself at a board meeting of which she was no longer a member.

Board directors might also be surprised when their board assembled because as of this date, the director of my board had not been notified that her board was changing in any way. She also has not been told who the new board members will be and has a regular meeting scheduled in less than a week. Her ONLY information also came from the newspaper.

We should all be extremely grateful for your news reporting!

My board director took the time to call me and express appreciation for the time I have served on the board.

It seems to me the county commissioners should have taken some responsibility for a word of thanks and showed some consideration to the heads of the various county boards.

Texans again move to the top of Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Texans settling into two of the most powerful seats in Congress and holding at least two more committee chairs, the Lone Star State delegation is emerging as the most powerful on Capitol Hill.

Lording over the House in the 100th Congress will be Jim Wright of Fort Worth, a House veteran of 31 years who as speaker is the most powerful man in Congress.

Quietly laying out a strategy as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee is the scrupulous Lloyd Bentsen, whose panel has jurisdiction over virtually all Senate measures on taxes, trade and public aide.

With the twin Democratic towers of Wright and Bentsen in place, the entire delegation will gain in strength. Even some rivals for power admit they will have to work with Texans more often to get things done in the coming session.

"California, New York and Illinois are three states that will have some significant impact and voice in the 100th Congress, but we are not on the same playing field as Texas," said Rep. Jerry Lewis, R-Calif., recently.

Texans already chair two committees in the House and stand to gain a third.

Emboldened by Wright's ascension, Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Waco, earlier this month engineered the ouster of Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., from the chairmanship of the Armed Services Committee, putting himself in line for the job instead.

Later this week Democrats will decide Aspin's replacement on the committee, which is charged with reviewing defense spending and arms control in the House. Leath is the leading candidate.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, chairs the Agriculture Committee, and Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, chairs Government Operations, which has the authority to look into virtually everything.

Power is nothing new to the 27-member delegation, which has produced three speakers and a president in the past 60 years and traditionally has held a number of important committee chairs at any given time.

"Over the long haul, Texas has been a very powerful delegation," said Larry Neal, an aide to Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. "In the mid-70s (Sen. John) Tower was ranking in Armed Services, Bentsen was moving up in Finance, and we had four committee chairs in the House."

Before that, Lyndon Johnson wielded power in the Senate, was vice president and president through the 1960s, and Sam Rayburn was House speaker through much of the 1940s and 1950s.

One key to the delegation's enduring clout is its uncanny ability to close ranks and do battle together on state or district issues — as long as those issues don't conflict with the interests of individual members.

"Other big delegations seem to have factional splits that they just can't get over. But not in the Texas delegation. If you have an agricultural issue you go to Kika, who chairs the Agriculture Committee. If you have something on defense, it's Charles Wilson (D-Lufkin, the ranking member) on Appropriations, and on and on, regardless of party affiliation," said Neal.

Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, who entered Congress in 1982, said the informal code of the delegation was laid down for him long before he was elected and has served him well since.

"We tend to help each other as Texans, and that doesn't mean just Democrats," Coleman said. "Ideologically, the Democratic Party itself covers a fairly wide spectrum, but we don't place ideological burdens on a member."

waiters, etc. are taxed 8% of the total bill, regardless if a tip is left for them or not. There (are) numerous days these workers do not make the 8% that they have to pay tax on.

Waitresses and waiters have a hard job, long hours and they have to put up with all types of people, and keep on being a pleasant person regardless what is dished out to them. They are in a very disorganized profession, and to be a good waiter or waitress they have to be pleasant and courteous to everyone. I myself feel that they have to be very special people to handle a profession like theirs.

Each pay period our help declares their tips, and at the end of the year if their declarations don't come up to 8% of the gross sales, they are taxed for the amount if they make it or not. For instance a tip of 50¢ on a $5 purchase, the government taxes 40¢ leaving the waiter persons a mere 10¢. The pay scale on these types of jobs are very low and most of our people are depending on the tips to help make a living and help support their families. To me the Tipping Tax Law is grossly unfair, and should be rewritten.

The mothers who work as waitresses take long hours away from the children plus have to pay high for sitters to take care of the children while they are at work. I for one say thanks to each and every person who shows these people respect and appreciation for a job well done by leaving them the tips.

To the editor,

I recently mailed questionnaires to every registered voting household within the region I represent in the Texas House of Representatives. I have asked the people in the 78th District how they feel about the critical issues we will face in the January legislative session, and their response has been extremely helpful.

Although our mailing is derived from the Secretary of State's latest list of voters, we frequently find families who do not receive a questionnaire. I hope that anyone who did not receive one will write to me at: Texas House of Representatives, State Capitol, P.O. Box 2910, Austin, Texas 78769 or call me at (512) 463-0480 and we will send one out immediately.

Sincerely,
Steven A. Carriker
State Representative

Dear Abby

Welcome Mat Shouldn't Be Out For Mooching Mother-in-Law

By Abigail Van Buren

1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I just read your answer to "Getting Ulcers" whose mother-in-law had moved in with one of her daughters for "just a few months" and stayed for eight years. And now she wants to visit her son for "a few months." You said to let her come for a specified length of time, but it should be clearly understood by the mother-in-law that her stay will not be indefinite.

Abby, please hurry to your telephone and call "Getting Ulcers" long distance AT MY EXPENSE and advise her to tell her mother-in-law that since they have no guest room, they will be glad to rent her a room in a nearby motel, but under no circumstances should she let her move into their home for even one night!

Surely, an able-bodied 65-year-old woman with no money problems can find some way to fill her time without moving in on her married children. Introduce her to a church group, urge her to do some kind of volunteer work, or join a senior citizens club. Invite her for dinner and take her out occasionally, but move in with you — never!

It's a whole lot easier to refuse to let someone put his foot in your door than to get him out once he's in.

NO ULCERS IN GEORGIA

DEAR NO ULCERS: My mail is running 100-to-1 against my suggestion that mother-in-law come to visit only if it's made clear in advance how long her stay would be. So, your "no foot in the door" advice was better than my foot-in-mouth suggestion.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I have to agree with you on one point regarding "recycled gifts." It IS the thought that counts. However, the gift-giver may be thinking, "How can I get by cheaply, and get rid of something I don't want?" (Such "thoughts" I don't need.)

Abby, you said, "Don't look a gift horse in the mouth." I beg to differ with you there. One would be wise to look a gift horse in the mouth. An old horse costs a lot more to feed and care for, and may not be worth keeping.

JANET IN DULUTH

DEAR JANET: Maybe so. But it's a lot easier to get rid of a white elephant than an old horse.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Something happened in our town recently, and I will not be able to sleep until I write this letter.

Abby, please warn all women never to get into their cars at night without first walking all the way around the car and looking through the windows to be sure nobody is hiding inside.

A woman had just left a restaurant alone and got into her car to drive home. One man had been hiding on the floor of her car in the back seat, and another man was hiding on the floor in the front seat on the passenger side. They forced her to get into the back seat, then drove her to a secluded area where they both raped her. Then they emptied her purse of all her cash, threw her out and drove away. (Her car was later found abandoned.)

If a woman should suspect that someone is hiding in her car, she should get to the nearest phone and call the police. Robbery is bad enough, but rape is a horror no woman should ever experience.

STILL TREMBLING

DEAR STILL: Thank you for caring enough to write. Men should take this advice, too. Also, it need not be nighttime — such incidents have occurred in broad daylight. Locking one's car does not always ensure safety. Experienced thieves can get into locked cars easily — even in a parking lot or an indoor multilevel parking facility. Also, carry a flashlight and look underneath your car. Criminals have been known to hide there. Readers, take heed, and have a safer 1987!

CONFIDENTIAL TO D.L. IN IOWA CITY: You speak so much of being "good." Please define goodness. As G.K. Chesterton said: "The word 'good' has many meanings. For example, if a man were to shoot his grandmother at a range of 500 yards, I should call him a good shot, but not necessarily a good man."

Shifts at the bargaining table

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a visit dictated by protocol, Yuri Dubinin, the Soviet ambassador, called last week at the State Department to report a shift at the top of his government's arms control negotiating delegation.

Yuli Vorontsov, a fast-rising star in the Soviet hierarchy and the first deputy foreign minister, would take over for Viktor Karpov in Geneva.

The Soviet ambassador also had a request to make as he informed Assistant Secretary of State Rozanne Ridgway of the change: Would the United States match the Russians by appointing a higher-level negotiator?

As Dubinin was to explain this week at a news conference at the Soviet Embassy, Moscow's intention was not to "send any arrows" in the personal direction of Max Kampelman, who has headed the U.S. delegation since the missile-reduction talks began 22 months ago.

Nor, he said, were the Soviets seeking to engage in a "propagandistic duel" with the Reagan administration.

Dubinin said Moscow simply wanted to elevate the position of chief delegate and hoped the United States would go along.

The implication was that more powerfully placed negotiators could more readily come to terms.

The U.S. response was to give Kampelman a second job, one he had been in line for anyway: counselor of the State Department. That raised his status while he stayed on as chief U.S. negotiator.

Actually, there is no precise equivalent to first deputy foreign minister in the State Department hierarchy. Deputy Secretary John Whitehead and Undersecretary Michael Armacost are roughly comparable in position to Vorontsov but not exactly.

Larry Speakes, the presidential spokesman, said he hoped the dispute "is "not an excuse by the Soviets to avoid serious discussions" in Geneva.

Both sides entered the latest and seventh round of talks pledging to do their best to reach agreements. But while they are close to an understanding to reduce their missile stockpiles, they apparently are too far apart on space-based defenses to come to terms.

Should it make a difference, then, who is in charge of the delegations?

Zbigniew Brzezinski, the national security adviser in the Carter administration, says he does not think the appointment of Vorontsov "matters substantively."

He views the move as an attempt by Moscow to give the impression of movement since President Reagan's summit meeting in October with General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev.

"The Soviets are making a symbolic issue out of it," he said in an interview Wednesday.

"It does not matter really," he said. "The negotiators do not have any authority to deviate from the position of the United States and the position of the Soviet Union."

A critic of Reagan administration policy, Warnke said, "The problem is they are sending Max over there without anything he can sell... And you can't make chicken soup out of chicken feathers."

Earlier in the day, Warnke and William Colby, a former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, unveiled a report by the Committee for National Security, a private research group.

It called on the Reagan administration to curb "Star Wars" tests that might be interpreted by Moscow as part of a plot to quickly mount a defense against missiles. Tests of other components would be permitted.

The idea is to reach a compromise with the Soviets that would allow agreements to reduce offensive weapons to go through.

Dubinin, at his news conference, did not seem receptive to the idea. He said the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty prohibits the testing of all components in space.

The Reagan administration, on the other hand, does not appear to be in a mood to make concessions on a program that the president said Monday should "proceed as expeditiously as possible."

With that gulf, it really may not matter who is sitting at the negotiating table in Geneva.

Bill mandates border control

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — The man with a new congressional mandate to control the nation's borders said Thursday he will use additional manpower, equipment and technology to accomplish his mission.

Hugh Brien, chief of the U.S. Border Patrol since September, was in the Rio Grande Valley for four days this week to meet agents and discuss with them how the patrol will implement an immigration reform act signed into law Nov. 6.

"We're taking a three-pronged approach — we'll have an increase in personnel of approximately 1,000 positions, with increases in equipment and technology," said Brien, who began his career with the Border Patrol 27 years ago in Brownsville.

"We must fulfill a congressional mandate under the new law, which says we will have control of the border," Brien said.

The legislation also includes amnesty and possible citizenship for aliens who can document they have been in the United States since 1982. Another section subjects employers to civil fines and criminal penalties for knowingly hiring illegal aliens.

"The mandate that Congress has given us is like a three-legged stool — it's a balance of legalization, sanctions and control of the border. If one of them is missing, you're not serving the purpose.

"I think we have to get a message out to employers ... to in fact persuade them to abide by the law and I think most will abide by the law," he said.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service, of which the patrol is a part, has established a new position of commissioner for employer relations to help educate employers about the legislation, Brien said.

An educational period ends in May, when agents will begin giving first offenders warnings. Warnings will no longer be given beginning in May 1988, when the full penalties take effect.

Brien said it was too early to say what type of businesses would be targeted for investigation of possible violations of the law.

"Essentially what we're going to have to do, within the regional district sectors, is get out and get the message out over the coming months and I think we can do that and I think it's desirable.

"Hopefully we'll get the majority of employers to comply; that's where our success will lie, with people agreeing to comply."

The Border Patrol has 3,250 agents and 350 support personnel, and Brien said it will get another 1,000 positions under the bill.

The patrol's arsenal of equipment will be expanded with additional planes and helicopters, ground sensors and low-light TV cameras capable of scaning the border in darkness or low-light conditions.

Low-light TV has been successful in El Paso, Laredo, Nogales, N.M., and along the northern border of Vermont, Brien said.

"I think it's the way to go," Brien said.

He said a "good share" of the new equipment and manpower would go to the Valley — a corridor for contraband drugs and popular point of entry for aliens other than Mexicans.

"McAllen, Laredo, El Paso, Tuscon and San Diego; these are areas that come to mind immediately" for more funding, he said.

Bodies, plane parts hurled from the sky

KEARNS, Utah (AP) — About 150 elementary school pupils at St. Francis Xavier Roman Catholic School were finishing lunch when an airplane collision at 7,000 feet pelted the front porch with debris.

"To my knowledge, none of them saw it," the Rev. Louis Fischer said of the youngsters, who were evacuated by bus Thursday to a sheriff's office to await their parents.

Other residents saw the grisly remains of the crash.

"I saw a body hit right there," said Floyd Ries, 22, pointing to the church parking lot.

"I ran over to see if she was all right or if there was anything I could do. When I got there, I saw that the only thing holding her together was her clothes."

Kathy Horne, a playground aide at West Kearns Elementary School, said she "heard this boom and looked up and I saw a white flash."

"I saw the debris flying off in all different directions," she said. "I saw the main part of the body of the one plane going east," she said. "I went in (to the school) and yelled, 'A plane just exploded out here!'"

Authorities from at least seven agencies converged on St. Francis Xavier school and church, turning classrooms into a command post and a church storage room into a morgue after the collision of a Skywest Airlines commuter plane and a single-engine aircraft killed all 10 people aboard the planes.

The impact hurled bodies and wreckage over a three-mile area.

The fuselage of the Skywest Metroliner "just kind of went plop, right out of the sky," landing in the middle of a snow-covered residential street behind St. Francis Xavier, four bodies inside, said Salt Lake County Sheriff's Deputy Les Newrin.

Two blocks away, the Skywest landing gear and a wing crashed through the roof of Rebekah Whitelock's home as she mopped her floor.

"I thought it was the end of the world. I thought it was a nuclear bomb or something," said Whitelock, 20, after the wreckage caved in the bedroom of the pink and white house.

"I was four steps away from opening up the door and it hit. My two kitties didn't make it," she said.

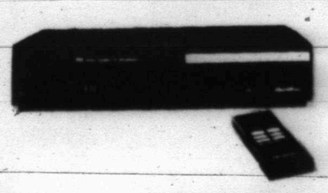

Sheriff Pete Hayward said phones rang incessantly for hours with residents reporting debris in their yards and on their homes.

On Nov. 11, 1918, fighting in World War I came to an end with the signing of an armistice between the Allies and Germany inside a railroad car in the forest of Compiegne in France.

In 1620, 41 Pilgrims signed a compact aboard the Mayflower, which was anchored off the Massachusetts coast. The compact called for a "body politick" to enact "just and equal laws."
