COAL MINE ROAD IS TALKED

The Much Mooted Subject is Now Being Agitated for the Towns Stephenville and Hamilton

Monday of last week a committee of eight from Hamilton and three from Carlton met the citizens of Stephenville at the latter place to discuss the matter of building a railroad from Thurber via Stephenville to Hamilton and perhaps extend it to the Llano iron fields and thence to San Antonio or some coast point. Quite an interest was manifested in the meeting by all parties and enthusiastic speeches by Dr. Geo. F. Clark, John L. Spurlin and G.R.Freeman of Hamilton and Judge Lee Young of Stephenville were listened to.

A committee of seven Stephenville gentlemen was finally appointed to consider the proposition of the Hamilton people. At 8 o'clock in the evening this committee met the Hamilton party and spent two hours considering and discussing the proposition. It was decided among other things that Attorneys Keith of Stephenville and Eidson of Hamilton should draft articles of agreement, after which stock will be solicited for the road and when all stock shall have been subscribed, that five per cent. of same be collected and a charter obtained. It was the general impression that an electric line would probably be best, however, this was left to be determined at some future time.

POINT LOOKOUT.

Regular Correspondence.

May 4th.—Since our last letter we have witnessed the coldest wave, without exception, we have ever seen for the time of the year in this section. On the 11th and 12th of May, 1857, we had sleet and snow and the accompanying freeze killed wheat, oats and corn outright. At that time no cotton was grown in this section. Wheat that was mowed down came out and made a fair yield but corn and oats were total failures.

Prospects are seriously impaired in this section by the late cold spell, corn looking bad and some cotton entirely killed, while garden truck is badly damaged and much of it will have to be replanted. A good rain at an early date will draw the frost out of the corn to some extent. As for cotton and gardens there is no time lost,as what was up was doing no good and a new planting will do better. We should not be discouraged however as there is great probability of having plenty of rain to insure a good crop—a good rain may be expected this month.

The fruit crop will be very short as what there is on the trees is rapidly falling off.

Mr. Johnson of near Oak Grove, who is visiting relatives here, reports gardens and crops seriously impaired in his section and says cattle are dying there at a fearful rate with something like Murrain.

Luther Davis lost a good mare last week. This is the second head he has lost within a few weeks.

J. Walter St. Clair of Ft. Worth arrived Tuesday for a visit with relatives. He says far more damage was done to crops around Fort Worth by the recent cold spell than has been the case here.

Young Lady Suicides.

Miss Ella Witte,the eighteen year old daughter of A. Witte of Cranfill's Gap, Hamilton county, committed suicide last Saturday morning. The young lady had just eaten her breakfast and stepped into an adjoining room to look for her gloves. Immediately after closing the door behind her the report of a pistol rang out and her father rushed into the room and found her in a dying condition. She had taken the weapon out of a bureau drawer, placed the muzzle against her forehead just above the right eye and fired. The bullet literally tore the top of her head to pieces and her brains were running out. No reason can be assigned for the act, as she had attended a dance the night before and was apparently happy and contented and at breakfast appeared in her usual good spirits.

Mesdames W. C. Davidson, J. E. McClain and J. E. Woodlee of Thurber are in the city for treatment under Dr. R. A. Miller.

Mrs. Lillian Jones came very near losing the sight of one of her eyes from her recent spell of sickness by the fever falling in it. It is improving now.

IN CONVENTION.

Teachers Learn Something Not in the Class Book.

A number of young women attending a teachers' convention at Oklahoma City some time ago learned a valuable lesson in hygiene through a sister teacher who says: "About a year ago I had my first attack of poor health and it seemed a terrible thing to me for I had always been so well and strong. My stomach distressed me terribly; it seemed like it was raw, especially after breakfast and it would burn and hurt me so I could not rest. I was soon convinced that it was caused by coffee drinking and at the request of a friend I gave up coffee and began to use Postum Coffee.

"The change in my condition was something marvellous. I had actually given up teaching because doctors were unable to help my stomach trouble but since I quit coffee and used Postum my troubles have disappeared and I have gone to teaching again.

"Some time ago I attended a convention at Oklahoma City and determined to have Postum at my boarding-house where there were eight other teachers, four of them suffering from coffee sickness. My landlady did not make the Postum right but I showed her how and all found it delicious. We all drank it the rest of the time we were there and the young ladies in question felt much better and declared that their heads were much clearer for study and their general health much improved. I have their names if you care for them." Names furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Michigan.

TWENTY GO DOWN

TO DEATH IN GREY OLD OCEANS DEPTHS.

MEET GRIM DEATH IN DENSE FOG

Whistles Were Distinctly Heard, But Could Not See a Ship's Length.

Norfolk, Va., May 6.—A collision at sea that cost the lives of twenty people and the sinking of the Clyde line steamship Saginaw by the Old Dominion Steamship company's liner Hamilton occurred on the Virginia coast at 4:40 o'clock Tuesday morning. The Hamilton left New York for Norfolk, and the Saginaw passed the Virginia capes at 9 o'clock Monday night, bound from Richmond and Norfolk for Philadelphia. A dense fog settled along the coast and while going through this fog at reduced speed the Hamilton crashed into the Saginaw's side about twenty feet from the stern. The scene of the collision is about thirteen or fourteen miles off shore, and between 180 and 200 miles south of New York.

The fog whistles of both vessels were distinctly heard by each other for several minutes before the collision occurred. According to Capt. Boaz of the Hamilton, his ship was making about nine miles an hour and the Saginaw about ten. The fog was so thick that objects a ship's length away were invisible, and when the two crafts hove in sight of each other, bows on, there was but a moment's interim before they met. The Saginaw veered, as did the Hamilton, but they had not time to clear each other, and the knife-like steel prow of the southbound vessel struck the Clyde ship on the port quarter, about twenty feet from her stern, cutting the entire rear of the ship away. The inrushing water caused the Saginaw to settle rapidly in the stern, and the impetus of the Hamilton took her out of sight of the crippled vessel. Engines, already reversed, were put full steam to the rear, and the Hamilton circled to the scene of the wreck, at the same time lowering two life boats. There was consternation among the passengers of the Old Dominion ship, and the first thought was for their safety, but so soon as it was discovered that the ship was uninjured save that some bow plates were stove in, all efforts were directed to the rescue of those on the Saginaw.

When the Saginaw was again sighted her stern was under water and her bow high in the air. Panic-stricken people rushed over the decks and scrambled toward the bow. Lifeboats were lowered and into the first fifteen colored women were placed, according to Second Officer W. L. Morris, who was in command. The boat was swamped as it struck the water, and its occupants were thrown into the sea. All were drowned save the second officer and the colored stewardess. The latter died before the small boat reached the Hamilton, more from injuries received by the impact of the collision than by drowning. She has been held up by First Mate Boslee. who sank himself as the small boat from the Hamilton reached them. In the meantime the rush of water into the bow of the Saginaw had caused the decks to burst from their fastenings, with a roar like the report of big guns, and tons of freight of all kinds soon littered the sea. To floating wreckage the struggling people in the water clung with desperation, and many of them were rescued by the boats from the Hamilton.

According to the Clyde Line officials only eighteen passengers are known to have been lost, and it is admitted by Second Officer Morris that fifteen colored women, who are now given up as lost, were in the swamped lifeboat.

Ellis County Still on Top.

Washington: The census bureau gave out a detailed bulletin on the cotton crop of 1902. Notwithstanding the small crop of last year, some of the Texas counties make a good showing compared with counties of other cotton states. Ellis county, even with a reduction of 38,000 bales as compared with the crop of 1900, is still the champion cotton county of the country, and in the list of the ten largest cotton producing counties Texas is represented by six counties as follows: Ellis county, Tex., 88,500; Washington county, Miss., 87,094; Bolivar county, Miss., 84,061; Navarro, Tex., 73,784; Fannin County, Tex., 70,540; McLennan, Tex., 70,087; Orangeburg, S. C., 68,807; Hill, Tex., 61,989; Lamar, Tex., 59,269; St. Landry, La., 58,175. Of the 243 Texas counties 167 produced cotton last year.

A Dastardly Deed.

Paris: While Julius Littlejohn, a colored farmer near Chicota, and his family were out in the field working, leaving two little sons, eight and ten, years old, at the house alone, they heard the report of a shotgun at the house. Not thinking that anything serious had occurred they didn't go to investigate at the time. About an hour later one of the family went to the house and found the youngest boy lying dead in the doorway. He had been shot in the face.

Plano: Fire broke out inBowser & Skiles' store two-story brick in the second story. The Star-Courier Company's office and fixtures were almost totally destroyed. Stark Grain Company, fixtures damaged by water; loss $[illegible], covered by insurance. Sol. Golden's stock of groceries was badly damaged by water; covered by insurance. He says the school will be reconstructed grander and larger than before with absolutely fireproof buildings and by Sept. 15.

Channing, the Seat of Hartley.

Channing: The Hartley county seat election, in which Channing, the county seat, and the center of the county were contestants, was held in the various voting precincts of the county Tuesday and resulted in victory for Channing by a vote of 114 to 99. The vote of the county was at least 25 per cent light on account of the poll tax provision.

Mrs. M. Gilmore, aged seventy-seven years, died at Bremond.

A Light General Rain.

Dallas: Rain of more or less intensity fell over the northern, eastern and central portions of the State Tuesday. From reports it appears to have saved the wheat and oat crops, about whose condition, on account of the recent frost and extreme dryness, farmers were doing considerable worrying. It will also help cotton planting. Good rains are reported in Johnson, Lamar, Bosque, and many other counties in the state.

They Played Base Ball.

Grapevine: John McPherson broke his arm in a most singular way. Last Saturday in a game of baseball, in throwing a curve his arm broke just about half way between the elbow and shoulder joint. In the same game a boy was hit with a bat and knocked insensible, and Marion Whitt, in a run to bases, fell and has been laid up since.

Painful Accidental Shot.

Paris: Mack Miller, a farmer living south of Paris, was accidentally shot last Friday on Blue Prairie, Fannin county, while he and his wife were visiting the family of Lew Allen. He was preparing to go hunting, and while his wife was handing him his gun it was discharged. The shot tor the under part of his arm from the wrist to the elbow, tearing away the muscle. The wound was not dangerous.

SEVEN WERE SLAIN

FLYING TRAIN BEARS DOWN UPON DENSE CROWD.

MANY WERE FEARFULLY HURT

Polish Excursionists Waiting for Train Could Not Be Kept Off the Track.

Detroit, Mich., May 4.—While 1500 Poles were waiting to board an excursion train for their homes in Toledo, after a holidy in Detroit Saturday, a fast passenger train on the Grand Trunk railway crashed into the crowd and killed at least seven persons and injured many others.

The day had been spent merrily by the members of the Polish Lancers of Toledo, and the hundreds of men, women and children were packed in close quarters at Canfield and Dequiner streets shortly after dark. While the people laughed and talked of the pleasant day enjoyed, the heavy train turned a curve and bore down on the human mass in the darkness. The headlight gave a mometary warning, but the people were crowded and so frightened by the rumble of wheels, the screeching of escaping steam and the grinding of the expeditiously applied airbrakes, that escape from the track was precluded. With a thud, smothered by the human obstruction and supplanted to a degree by the screams of the dying and injured, the huge locomotive plowed through the throng, throwing men, women and children to either side of the track. The very density of the crowd saved many lives, and the victims were hurled on to human cushions.

The engineer brought his train to a stand as soon as possible, and the police began to remove the dead and injured. All the dead and injured are thought to live in Toledo.

The death list includes four men, one woman and two boys. Walter Sidwick and Frank Rosinski are the only dead persons thus far identified.

About 8 o'clock the visitors began to gather at the corner of Canfield and Dequiner streets to take the train for Toledo. Both the Lake Shore and Grand Trunk tracks run out from the station on Dequiner street. Four policemen stood at the corner of Canfield and endeavored to keep the excursionists from crowding through the gates onto the track. Despite their efforts hundreds crawled under or over the gates and walked down the dark tracks to await the arrival of their train, which could be seen coming slowly up from the station.

Probably 1500 persons were scattered along the tracks for two blocks waiting for the Lake Shore excursion train to secure seats. It was only a few blocks down the track, creeping carefully along. Suddenly out from the darkness came the Grand Trunk Chicago-New York express, known as the Pan-American Flyer. It plowed through the mass of people, throwing them to both sides of the track, bruised and maimed, and grinding a number of them under the wheels.

Four of the dead were killed by the train and other died after being taken to the hospital.

Oak Cliff Not Yet Annexed.

Dallas: It has come to light that the bill annexing Oak Cliff to Dallas, by a mistake in the method of taking the vote, is not effective until July 1. There have been law suits, injunctions, dissolutions and free fights over the matter, and all to no effect. The antis died hard, and had just croaked when some one discovered the flaw in what was all along supposed to be a bill taking immediate effect.

Girdle the Globe in 40 Seconds.

New York: On July 4, in connection with the opening of the new cable to the insular possessions of the United States, an effort which now gives promise of success will be made to circle the globe in forty seconds. The message will be sent from the main office of the Postal Telegraph company in New York and it is hoped will be received on the opposite side of the room within forty seconds after the operator sends on the other.

Strange Old Man Murdered.

Austin: An old man probably 60 years of age was murdered some time Sunday morning near St. Elmo, a village six miles south of Austin. He was found in a dying condition at 12 o'clock and expired an hour later. He had been brained with a large rock, but the officers are unable to trace his murderers. The old man is not known here and there was nothing on his person by which he could be identified.

A WHOLE FAMILY KILLED.

A Frightful "Sunday Tragedy at Bristol.

Bristol, Texas, May 4: Mrs. W. C. Lineburger, aged about 59 years, and her son, Vestus, 28 years old, were murdered Sunday while the husband and father, W. C. Lineburger, an old man of 70, was found dead on his farm, about four miles from the scene of the murder, with his brains blown out, a double-barreled shotgun being the weapon used.

The Lineburgers were one of the most respected families in the community, and were very prosperous. They were Germans. The head of the family came to Texas from Tennessee, where all his living relatives are now. Mrs. Lineburger had a niece living in Greenville and a sister who lives in Kaufman County near Kaufman.

In the morning about 11 o'clock neighbors noticing an unusual stillness about the Lineburger house made an investigation. In the dining room lying partly under the table was found the dead body of the wife and mother. There were signs of a fierce struggle and a bloody club indicated the weapon of destruction. The woman's head had been battered to a jelly. Further search was made of the premises, but nothing further was found there. Then some onue suggested the barn, and on the floor near to the door lay the mangled bloody corpse of the son, Vestus. An ax covered with gore was found near the body.

The whole community was at once aroused and search made for the husband and father, who could not be found anywhere in the immediate vicinity.

Officers were at once notified and dogs were pressed into service in the search. Late in the afternoon the dead body of old man Lineburger was discovered on his farm four miles north of Bristol. His head had been literally blown from his body. An old muzzle-loading double-barreled shotgun, with both barrels discharged, lay beside the corpse.

Mob Hung Two Negroes.

Vicksburg: Bob Bryant and Will Morriss, the assassins of W. H. Legg, were hung to the Yazoo bridge at daylight Sunday morning.

Bryant had made confession implicating Morriss. Four deputies started for town with them. At a point on the route 200 farmers, armed with rifles and shotguns, stopped the officers and demanded the negroes, and gave the officers their choice of surrendering their prisoners or sacrificing their own lives in a useless resistance. There was no choice for the officers, and after a final protest the mob closed in, took the two blacks and disappeared in a nearby thicket. Their bodies were found swinging to the bridge this morning. Robbery was the motive for the murder. Three hundred thousand feet of lumber was destroyed by the fire started in Legg's ginhouse by the blacks.

Clarence Adams Killed.

Wills Point: Westbound Texas and Pacific passenger leaving Wills Point Sunday morning, discovered a man by the side of the track about two miles west of here. The remains were brought here and were immediately identified as Clarence Adams of Grand Saline. Deceased's relatives came up and confirmed the identification. The remains were carried to Grand Saline for interment.

A Murder And An Arrest.

Beaumont: L. G. Weaver, a laborer at the oil field, was found dead Sunday morning near the plant of the Union Oil and Refining company, about two miles below the city. He had been shot twice in the back. This evening Sheriff Landry arrested Kyle Blanchette, a negro. Blanchette was found under a warehouse on the McFaddin farm and had a 38-caliber Winchester when arrested.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE

The largest sum ever paid for a prescription changed hands in San Francisco, August 30, 1902. The transfer involved in cash and stock $112,500.00 and was paid by a syndicate of business men for a cure for Bright's Disease and Diabetes, and all kindred to incurable diseases.

They commenced the most thorough investigation of the specific. They interviewed scores of physicians and tried it out on its merits, spending over three dozen years in its treatment and watching its effects. They also got physicians to select for them incurable cases, and after a thorough test with the physicians for Aug. 25, eighty-seven per cent of the test cases were either entirely cured or showing favorably.

There being but three per cent failures, the parties who had secured and closed the transaction, after hearing the findings of the investigating physicians and the clinical reports of the cases were published and [illegible] mailed free on application. ## HOUSTON AND TEXAS CENTRAL.

Cuts Loose From the Southern Pacific System.

Houston, Tex., May 2.—All the officials of the Houston and Texas Central who have been identified with the Southern Pacific, with one exception, have tendered their resignations with the former company. The resignations will be effective by the 15th inst. The list of those resigning includes the following: Passenger Traffic Manager S. F. B. Morse, Freight Traffic Manager H. A. Jones, General Freight Agent C. K. Dunlap, Assistant General Freight Agents Beard and Christensen. The one exception mentioned is M. L. Robbins, general passenger agent of the two systems. He will remain with the Houston and Texas Central, severing his connection with the Southern Pacific.

It is said the separation of the offices and of officials was necessary, as the Southern Pacific had taken up the operation of the Texas and New Orleans, Dallas extension. Under the laws of the State the Southern Pacific could not participate in the operation of both lines, they being competitive.

FAIR DEDICATION

BUILDINGS OF LOUISIANA PURCHASE SHOW OPENED.

IN A COLD, BLINDING BREEZE

Grand Ceremony in Presence of 145,000 People. Too Cold for Comfort.

St. Louis, Mo., May 1.—The buildings of the Louisiana Purchase exposition yesterday were dedicated with all possible pomp and ceremony. In every way the exercises were a success, but the weather was bad. The wind blew fiercely from the west, sending great clouds of dust whirling into the faces of the troops as they marched past the president, and at times so nearly blinded the president it was well nigh impossible for him to see across the street in which the troops were marching.

Added to the discomfort of the wind and dust was a temperature which sought for the marrow and generally reached it. The women, who, on the strength of the warm weather of the past few days, came in summer dresses to the reviewing stand, suffered keenly, although the officers commanding the guard around the reviewing stand provided them with blankets. Both President Roosevelt and former President Cleveland remained in the reviewing stand, exposed to the icy wind until the end of the parade, although their faces were blue and their limbs were stiffened by the cold. Conditions in the Liberal Arts building, where the dedication ceremonies proper were held, were little better. There was no wind, but there were manifold drafts.

The effect of the cold was manifest in all the speeches, as the speakers, commencing their speeches in clear tones, were without exception, given over to catarrhal infection as they finished. Despite this heavy handicap, however, the ceremonies were splendidly handled, and the program was carried out to the letter. The police work was excellent, and the patroling of avenues and passageways by the First Missouri infantry was ably done, and all possible consideration was shown to the great crowd, which numbered in round figures 145,000.

A Horrible Find.

Weston: After eating a hearty dinner, Tom Holland, a resident of Maple, three miles north of here, told his wife that he was going to the field to plow corn. At 5 o'clock that afternoon his wife, having occasion to visit the barn, found his lifeless body in the stable. He had evidently been dead about four hours, and his body had been badly lacerated by hogs. There was no evidence of foul play, and deceased probably died from heart failure. Deceased was about 34 years old, and had lately come from Missouri. He leaves a wife and one child.

Fifth Murder Trial This Term.

Waxahachie: Hanna Steele, the negro woman on trial for murder, was found guilty of murder in the first degree and her punishment fixed at imprisonment in the penitentiary for life. She was convicted of the murder of Amanda Flowers, another negro woman, at Ferris last fall. This makes the fifth conviction for murder at this term of court.

Fire at Bonham.

Bonham: Thursday night fire broke out in the Russell Arledge & Co. building which together with entire stock, was destroyed. The walls of the building were left standing. The loss, as far as can be learned is fully $40,000 on the stock, insured for $12,000. Insurance on building not known. It was a two-story building, one of the largest in the city. Origin of the fire is not known. At one time it seemed that the entire of the west side of the square was doomed.

Cotton in the Stamford Country.

Stamford: Up to date there have been 14,323 bales of cotton shipped from Stamford, which is 2565 bales mores than was shipped for the season of 1901. Such figures as these are rapidly dissipating the old idea that this is in the "arid west." Thousands of acres of new land are being planted in cotton this year, and the output is expected to be increased 100 per cent this [illegible].

Rock Island Central Deal.

Austin: That the Rock Island deal the purchase of a half interest of Houston and Texas Central has allen through is shown by the hat the railroad commission has formed by N. H. Lassiter, general torney of the former road in hat he will be here in a few h the contract that has been uto by the two roads and obtain its approval by the finish. We'd [illegible] how.

A DAY WITH THE SOLONS.

The House and Senate Take Things Easy.

Austin, May 1.—As the pay is good and perquisites ample the mill runs slowly. In the house the senate bill to authorize the governor of the state of Texas in conjunction with the president of the United States to run and mark the boundary line between the state of Texas and the Territories of New Mexico and Oklahoma, was passed finally as amended.

Senate bill, making deficiency appropriation of $16,228 60 for the support and maintenance of the Confederate home, was passed finally.

House bill by Messrs. Brelsford, Stewart and Ragland, requiring railroad corporations to keep all their station agents informed regarding the movements of all passenger trains on their road, was placed on third reading.

House bill by Messrs. Seabury and Nicholson, providing that non-payment of poll tax should not disqualify for jury service was passed finally by a vote of 62 to 47.

Senate bill, appropriating $155,000 to provide a system of water, light and power for the capitol, governor's mansion and state institutions in Austin, was advanced to third reading.

Senate bill relating to duties and liabilities of railroad companies, requiring them to inform station agents regarding the movements of passenger trains, was advanced to third reading.

Recess for an hour.

Upon reconvening Senator Decker moved to concur in house amendments to the boundary bill providing for a survey of the Texas-New Mexico boundary line and fixing same. The motion prevailed.

Recess until 3 p. m.

At the afternoon session Senator Douglas had adopted a resolution inviting to the unveiling of the Confederate monument in Houston, in June, Dr. G. H. Bailey of Phoenix, Ariz., sole survivor of Dick Bowling's command at Sabine Pass.

Senator Decker secured the adoption of a resolution reciting the fact that the national bankruptcy act had served its purpose, and advocating its repeal.

Senator Davidson of DeWitt called up Mr. Seabury's house bill providing that non-payment of poll tax shall not disqualify persons otherwise eligible for jury service.

Senator Davidson of DeWitt offered an amendment, changing the bill so as to provide that jurors shall have paid their poll tax except where the trial judge, within his discretion, is of the opinion that it is impossible to secure a sufficient number of jurors who have paid the tax.

Senator McKamy and Grinnan spoke in opposition to the amendment. The amendment was adopted.

Adjourned until 9 o'clock to-day.

Pioneer Dead at Denison.

He was 67 years of age at the time of his death. The deceased leaves a wife and three children. Mrs. A. B. Riviere of Denison, Mrs. M. L. Davis of Comanche, I. T., and H. T. # TWENTY GO DOWN

TO DEATH IN GREY OLD OCEANS DEPTHS.

MEET GRIM DEATH IN DENSE FOG

Whistles Were Distinctly Heard, But Could Not See a Ship's Length.

Norfolk, Va., May 6.—A collision at sea that cost the lives of twenty people and the sinking of the Clyde line steamship Saginaw by the Old Dominion Steamship company's liner Hamilton occurred on the Virginia coast at 4:40 o'clock Tuesday morning. The Hamilton left New York for Norfolk, and the Saginaw passed the Virginia capes at 9 o'clock Monday night, bound from Richmond and Norfolk for Philadelphia. A dense fog settled along the coast and while going through this fog at reduced speed the Hamilton crashed into the Saginaw's side about twenty feet from the stern. The scene of the collision is about thirteen or fourteen miles off shore, and between 180 and 200 miles south of New York.

The fog whistles of both vessels were distinctly heard by each other for several minutes before the collision occurred. According to Capt. Boaz of the Hamilton, his ship was making about nine miles an hour and the Saginaw about ten. The fog was so thick that objects a ship's length away were invisible, and when the two crafts hove in sight of each other, bows on, there was but a moment's interim before they met. The Saginaw veered, as did the Hamilton, but they had not time to clear each other, and the knife-like steel prow of the southbound vessel struck the Clyde ship on the port quarter, about twenty feet from her stern, cutting the entire rear of the ship away. The inrushing water caused the Saginaw to settle rapidly in the stern, and the impetus of the Hamilton took her out of sight of the crippled vessel. Engines, already reversed, were put full steam to the rear, and the Hamilton circled to the scene of the wreck, at the same time lowering two life boats. There was consternation among the passengers of the Old Dominion ship, and the first thought was for their safety, but so soon as it was discovered that the ship was uninjured save that some bow plates were stove in, all efforts were directed to the rescue of those on the Saginaw.

When the Saginaw was again sighted her stern was under water and her bow high in the air. Panic-stricken people rushed over the decks and scrambled toward the bow. Lifeboats were lowered and into the first fifteen colored women were placed, according to Second Officer W. L. Morris, who was in command. The boat was swamped as it struck the water, and its occupants were thrown into the sea. All were drowned save the second officer and the colored stewardess. The latter died before the small boat reached the Hamilton, more from injuries received by the impact of the collision than by drowning. She has been held up by First Mate Boslee, who sank himself as the small boat from the Hamilton reached them. In the meantime the rush of water into the bow of the Saginaw had caused the decks to burst from their fastenings, with a roar like the report of big guns, and tons of freight of all kinds soon littered the sea. To floating wreckage the struggling people in the water clung with desperation, and many of them were rescued by the boats from the Hamilton.

According to the Clyde Line officials only eighteen passengers are known to have been lost, and it is admitted by Second Officer Morris that fifteen colored women, who are now given up as lost, were in the swamped lifeboat.

Ellis County Still on Top.

Washington: The census bureau gave out a detailed bulletin on the cotton crop of 1902. Notwithstanding the small crop of last year, some of the Texas counties make a good showing compared with counties of other cotton states. Ellis county, even with a reduction of 38,000 bales as compared with the crop of 1900, is still the champion cotton county of the country, and in the list of the ten largest cotton producing counties Texas is represented by six counties as follows: Ellis county, Tex., 88,500; Washington county, Miss., 87,094; Bolivar county, Miss., 84,061; Navarro, Tex., 73,784; Fannin County, Tex., 70,540; McLennan, Tex., 70,087; Orangeburg, S. C., 68,807; Hill, Tex., 61,989; Lamar, Tex., 59,269; St. Landry, La., 58,175. Of the 243 Texas counties 167 produced cotton last year.

A Dastardly Deed.

Paris: While Julius Littlejohn, a colored farmer near Chicota, and his family were out in the field working, leaving two little sons, eight and ten, years old, at the house alone, they heard the report of a shotgun at the house. Not thinking that anything serious had occurred they didn't go to investigate at the time. About an hour later one of the family went to the house and found the youngest boy lying dead in the doorway. He had been shot in the face.

Plano: Fire broke out inBowser & Skiles' store two-story brick in the second story. The Star-Courier Company's office and fixtures were almost totally destroyed. The loss is $2500; insurance about three-fourths of loss. J. D. Cottrell's law library was also burned; loss $250, insurance unknown. J. T. Stark Grain Company, fixtures damaged by water; loss $[illegible], covered by insurance. Sol. Golden's stock of groceries was badly damaged by water; covered by insurance. Bowser & Skiles, damage on the building is estimated at $1000.

He says the school will be reconstructed grander and larger than before with absolutely fireproof buildings and by Sept. 15.

Channing, the Seat of Hartley.

Channing: The Hartley county seat election, in which Channing, the county seat, and the center of the county were contestants, was held in the various voting precincts of the county Tuesday and resulted in victory for Channing by a vote of 114 to 99. The vote of the county was at least 25 per cent light on account of the poll tax provision.

Mrs. M. Gilmore, aged seventy-seven years, died at Bremond.

A Light General Rain.

Dallas: Rain of more or less intensity fell over the northern, eastern and central portions of the State Tuesday. From reports it appears to have saved the wheat and oat crops, about whose condition, on account of the recent frost and extreme dryness, farmers were doing considerable worrying. It will also help cotton planting. Good rains are reported in Johnson, Lamar, Bosque, and many other counties in the state.

They Played Base Ball.

Grapevine: John McPherson broke his arm in a most singular way. Last Saturday in a game of baseball, in throwing a curve his arm broke just about half way between the elbow and shoulder joint. In the same game a boy was hit with a bat and knocked insensible, and Marion Whitt, in a run to bases, fell and has been laid up since.

Painful Accidental Shot.

Paris: Mack Miller, a farmer living south of Paris, was accidentally shot last Friday on Blue Prairie, Fannin county, while he and his wife were visiting the family of Lew Allen. He was preparing to go hunting, and while his wife was handing him his gun it was discharged. The shot tor the under part of his arm from the wrist to the elbow, tearing away the muscle. The wound was not dangerous.

SEVEN WERE SLAIN

FLYING TRAIN BEARS DOWN UPON DENSE CROWD.

MANY WERE FEARFULLY HURT

Polish Excursionists Waiting for Train Could Not Be Kept Off the Track.

Detroit, Mich., May 4.—While 1500 Poles were waiting to board an excursion train for their homes in Toledo, after a holiday in Detroit Saturday, a fast passenger train on the Grand Trunk railway crashed into the crowd and killed at least seven persons and injured many others.

The day had been spent merrily by the members of the Polish Lancers of Toledo, and the hundreds of men, women and children were packed in close quarters at Canfield and Dequiner streets shortly after dark. While the people laughed and talked of the pleasant day enjoyed, the heavy train turned a curve and bore down on the human mass in the darkness. The headlight gave a mometary warning, but the people were crowded and so frightened by the rumble of wheels, the screeching of escaping steam and the grinding of the expeditiously applied airbrakes, that escape from the track was precluded. With a thud, smothered by the human obstruction and supplanted to a degree by the screams of the dying and injured, the huge locomotive plowed through the throng, throwing men, women and children to either side of the track. The very density of the crowd saved many lives, and the victims were hurled on to human cushions.

The engineer brought his train to a stand as soon as possible, and the police began to remove the dead and injured. All the dead and injured are thought to live in Toledo.

The death list includes four men, one woman and two boys. Walter Sidwick and Frank Rosinski are the only dead persons thus far identified.

About 8 o'clock the visitors began to gather at the corner of Canfield and Dequiner streets to take the train for Toledo. Both the Lake Shore and Grand Trunk tracks run out from the station on Dequiner street. Four policemen stood at the corner of Canfield and endeavored to keep the excursionists from crowding through the gates onto the track. Despite their efforts hundreds crawled under or over the gates and walked down the dark tracks to await the arrival of their train, which could be seen coming slowly up from the station.

Probably 1500 persons were scattered along the tracks for two blocks waiting for the Lake Shore excursion train to secure seats. It was only a few blocks down the track, creeping carefully along. Suddenly out from the darkness came the Grand Trunk Chicago-New York express, known as the Pan-American Flyer. It plowed through the mass of people, throwing them to both sides of the track, bruised and maimed, and grinding a number of them under the wheels.

Four of the dead were killed by the train and other died after being taken to the hospital.

Oak Cliff Not Yet Annexed.

Dallas: It has come to light that the bill annexing Oak Cliff to Dallas, by a mistake in the method of taking the vote, is not effective until July 1. There have been law suits, injunctions, dissolutions and free fights over the matter, and all to no effect. The antis died hard, and had just croaked when some one discovered the flaw in what was all along supposed to be a bill taking immediate effect.

Girdle the Globe in 40 Seconds.

New York: On July 4, in connection with the opening of the new cable to the Insular possessions of the United States, an effort which now gives promise of success will be made to circle the globe in forty seconds. The message will be sent from the main office of the Postal Telegraph company in New York and it is hoped will be received on the opposite side of the room within forty seconds after the operator sends on the other.

Strange Old Man Murdered.

Austin: An old man probably 60 years of age was murdered some time Sunday morning near St. Elmo, a village six miles south of Austin. He was found in a dying condition at 12 o'clock and expired an hour later. He had been brained with a large rock, but the officers are unable to trace his murderers. The old man is not known here and there was nothing on his person by which he could be identified.

A WHOLE FAMILY KILLED.

A Frightful "Sunday Tragedy at Bristol.

Bristol, Texas, May 4: Mrs. W. C. Lineburger, aged about 59 years, and her son, Vestus, 28 years old, were murdered Sunday while the husband and father, W. C. Lineburger, an old man of 70, was found dead on his farm, about four miles from the scene of the murder, with his brains blown out, a double-barreled shotgun being the weapon used.

The Lineburgers were one of the most respected families in the community, and were very prosperous. They were Germans. The head of the family came to Texas from Tennessee, where all his living relatives are now. Mrs. Lineburger had a niece living in Greenville and a sister who lives in Kaufman County near Kaufman.

In the morning about 11 o'clock neighbors noticing an unusual stillness about the Lineburger house made an investigation. In the dining room lying partly under the table was found the dead body of the wife and mother. There were signs of a fierce struggle and a bloody club indicated the weapon of destruction. The woman's head had been battered to a jelly. Further search was made of the premises, but nothing further was found there. Then some onue suggested the barn, and on the floor near to the door lay the mangled bloody corpse of the son, Vestus. An ax covered with gore was found near the body.

The whole community was at once aroused and search made for the husband and father, who could not be found anywhere in the immediate vicinity.

Officers were at once notified and dogs were pressed into service in the search. Late in the afternoon the dead body of old man Lineburger was discovered on his farm four miles north of Bristol. His head had been literally blown from his body. An old muzzle-loading double-barreled shotgun, with both barrels discharged, lay beside the corpse.

Mob Hung Two Negroes.

Vicksburg: Bob Bryant and Will Morriss, the assassins of W. H. Legg, were hung to the Yazoo bridge at daylight Sunday morning.

Bryant had made confession implicating Morriss. Four deputies started for town with them. At a point on the route 200 farmers, armed with rifles and shotguns, stopped the officers and demanded the negroes, and gave the officers their choice of surrendering their prisoners or sacrificing their own lives in a useless resistance. There was no choice for the officers, and after a final protest the mob closed in, took the two blacks and disappeared in a nearby thicket. Their bodies were found swinging to the bridge this morning. Robbery was the motive for the murder. Three hundred thousand feet of lumber was destroyed by the fire started in Legg's ginhouse by the blacks.

Clarence Adams Killed.

Wills Point: Westbound Texas and Pacific passenger leaving Wills Point Sunday morning, discovered a man by the side of the track about two miles west of here. The remains were brought here and were immediately identified as Clarence Adams of Grand Saline. Deceased's relatives came up and confirmed the identification. The remains were carried to Grand Saline for interment.

A Murder And An Arrest.

Beaumont: L. G. Weaver, a laborer at the oil field, was found dead Sunday morning near the plant of the Union Oil and Refining company, about two miles below the city. He had been shot twice in the back. This evening Sheriff Landry arrested Kyle Blanchette, a negro. Blanchette was found under a warehouse on the McFaddin farm and had a 38-caliber Winchester when arrested.

...To provide laws regulating the ...es of railroad corporations and em... ...es in regard to passenger train ...ice. Bill passed requiring railroad ...panies to provide competent train dispatchers to furnish agents information concerning the arrival of passenger trains. A companion bill to this enacted at the regular session, prescribes the duties of railroad agents in posting bulletins. A third companion bill, intended to provide penalties for violation of the other bills, died on the calendar at the regular session, and was killed by the house at the called session. The railroad commission, however, is given jurisdiction of the matters, and it is believed that it will be able to enforce the two acts which have passed.

10. To authorize heads of departments to loan state property in their charge to the Texas World's fair commission for exhibition at the St. Louis World's fair. Killed by the senate.

11. To appropriate $16,228.60 to the Confederate home to cover deficiencies. Bill passed.

12. To enact road laws for counties. Bills passed for Cooke, Guadalupe, Comal, Colorado, Caldwell, Bee, Jackson, Grimes, Hopkins, Hunt, Rusk and Fannin counties.

13. To appropriate money for the support of the state government for the two years ending Aug. 31, 1905. Bill passed appropriating $7,417,907.

14. To provide for an adequate supply of water and light for the state institutions at Austin. Bill passed authorizing the erection of a plant and appropriating $155,000 for that purpose.

15. Joint resolutions providing for a new constitution, and to provide for a special state tax for road building were introduced, but were reported adversely and were not called up. These measures were not submitted by the governor.

16. To provide a method of making application for the purchase of the state school and asylum lands and regulating the manner of filing on the same.

The senate and house each passed a bill, differing radically from each other. They both died in conference.

HOUSTON AND TEXAS CENTRAL.

Cuts Loose From the Southern Pacific System.

Houston, Tex., May 2.—All the officials of the Houston and Texas Central who have been identified with the Southern Pacific, with one exception, have tendered their resignations with the former company. The resignations will be effective by the 15th inst. The list of those resigning includes the following: Passenger Traffic Manager S. F. B. Morse, Freight Traffic Manager H. A. Jones, General Freight Agent C. K. Dunlap, Assistant General Freight Agents Beard and Christensen. The one exception mentioned is M. L. Robbins, general passenger agent of the two systems. He will remain with the Houston and Texas Central, severing his connection with the Southern Pacific.

It is said the separation of the offices and of officials was necessary, as the Southern Pacific had taken up the operation of the Texas and New Orleans, Dallas extension. Under the laws of the State the Southern Pacific could not participate in the operation of both lines, they being competitive.

A reorganization of the Houston and Texas Central will take place within the next two weeks. The road will be operated independently, notwithstanding that the Rock Island owns a controlling interest in it. The Southern Pacific also has traffic arrangements, and besides Houston and Texas Central trains Rock Island and Southern Pacific trains will run over the tracks.

FAIR DEDICATION

BUILDINGS OF LOUISIANA PURCHASE SHOW OPENED.

IN A COLD, BLINDING BREEZE

Grand Ceremony in Presence of 145,000 People. Too Cold for Comfort.

St. Louis, Mo., May 1.—The buildings of the Louisiana Purchase exposition yesterday were dedicated with all possible pomp and ceremony. In every way the exercises were a success, but the weather was bad. The wind blew fiercely from the west, sending great clouds of dust whirling into the faces of the troops as they marched past the president, and at times so nearly blinded the president it was well nigh impossible for him to see across the street in which the troops were marching.

Added to the discomfort of the wind and dust was a temperature which sought for the marrow and generally reached it. The women, who, on the strength of the warm weather of the past few days, came in summer dresses to the reviewing stand, suffered keenly, although the officers commanding the guard around the reviewing stand provided them with blankets. Both President Roosevelt and former President Cleveland remained in the reviewing stand, exposed to the icy wind until the end of the parade, although their faces were blue and their limbs were stiffened by the cold. Conditions in the Liberal Arts building, where the dedication ceremonies proper were held, were little better. There was no wind, but there were manifold drafts.

The effect of the cold was manifest in all the speeches, as the speakers, commencing their speeches in clear tones, were without exception, given over to catarrhal infection as they finished. Despite this heavy handicap, however, the ceremonies were splendidly handled, and the program was carried out to the letter. The police work was excellent, and the patroling of avenues and passageways by the First Missouri infantry was ably done, and all possible consideration was shown to the great crowd, which numbered in round figures 145,000.

A Horrible Find.

Weston: After eating a hearty dinner, Tom Holland, a resident of Maple, three miles north of here, told his wife that he was going to the field to plow corn. At 5 o'clock that afternoon his wife, having occasion to visit the barn, found his lifeless body in the stable. He had evidently been dead about four hours, and his body had been badly lacerated by hogs. There was no evidence of foul play, and deceased probably died from heart failure. Deceased was about 34 years old, and had lately come from Missouri. He leaves a wife and one child.

Fifth Murder Trial This Term.

Waxahachie: Hanna Steele, the negro woman on trial for murder, was found guilty of murder in the first degree and her punishment fixed at imprisonment in the penitentiary for life. She was convicted of the murder of Amanda Flowers, another negro woman, at Ferris last fall. This makes the fifth conviction for murder at this term of court.

Fire at Bonham.

Bonham: Thursday night fire broke out in the Russell Arledge & Co. building which together with entire stock, was destroyed. The walls of the building were left standing. The loss, as far as can be learned is fully $40,000 on the stock, insured for $12,000. Insurance on building not known. It was a two-story building, one of the largest in the city. Origin of the fire is not known. At one time it seemed that the entire of the west side of the square was doomed.

Cotton in the Stamford Country.

Stamford: Up to date there have been 14,323 bales of cotton shipped from Stamford, which is 2565 bales mores than was shipped for the season of 1901. Such figures as these are rapidly dissipating the old idea that this is in the "arid west." Thousands of acres of new land are being planted in cotton this year, and the output is expected to be increased 100 per cent this fall.

Rock Island Central Deal.

Austin: That the Rock Island deal for the purchase of a half interest of the Houston and Texas Central has not fallen through is shown by the fact that the railroad commission has been informed by N. H. Lassiter, general attorney of the former road in Texas, that he will be here in a few days with the contract that has been entered into by the two roads and hopes to obtain its approval by the commission.

A DAY WITH THE SOLONS.

The House and Senate Take Things Easy.

Austin, May 1.—As the pay is good and perquisites ample the mill runs slowly. In the house the senate bill to authorize the governor of the state of Texas in conjunction with the president of the United States to run and mark the boundary line between the state of Texas and the Territories of New Mexico and Oklahoma, was passed finally as amended.

Senate bill, making deficiency appropriation of $16,228 60 for the support and maintenance of the Confederate home, was passed finally.

House bill by Messrs. Brelsford, Stewart and Ragland, requiring railroad corporations to keep all their station agents informed regarding the movements of all passenger trains on their road, was placed on third reading.

House bill by Messrs. Seabury and Nicholson, providing that non-payment of poll tax should not disqualify for jury service was passed finally by a vote of 62 to 47.

Senate bill, appropriating $155,000 to provide a system of water, light and power for the capitol, governor's mansion and state institutions in Austin, was advanced to third reading.

Senate bill relating to duties and liabilities of railroad companies, requiring them to inform station agents regarding the movements of passenger trains, was advanced to third reading.

Recess for an hour.

Upon reconvening Senator Decker moved to concur in house amendments to the boundary bill providing for a survey of the Texas-New Mexico boundary line and fixing same. The motion prevailed.

Recess until 3 p. m.

At the afternoon session Senator Douglas had adopted a resolution inviting to the unveiling of the Confederate monument in Houston, in June, Dr. G. H. Bailey of Phoenix, Ariz., sole survivor of Dick Bowling's command at Sabine Pass.

Senator Decker secured the adoption of a resolution reciting the fact that the national bankruptcy act had served its purpose, and advocating its repeal.

Senator Davidson of DeWitt called up Mr. Seabury's house bill providing that non-payment of poll tax shall not disqualify persons otherwise eligible for jury service.

Senator Davidson of DeWitt offered an amendment, changing the bill so as to provide that jurors shall have paid their poll tax except where the trial judge, within his discretion, is of the opinion that it is impossible to secure a sufficient number of jurors who have paid the tax.

Senator McKamy and Grinnan spoke in opposition to the amendment. The amendment was adopted.

Adjourned until 9 o'clock to-day.

Pioneer Dead at Denison.

Dension: J. C. Flippin, an ex-Confederate soldier and one of the early settlers of Grayson county, died Thursday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. B. Riviere, No. 710 West Main street. He was 67 years of age at the time of his death. The deceased leaves a wife and three children. Mrs. A. B. Riviere of Denison, Mrs. M. L. Davis of Comanche, I. T., and H. T. DUBLIN, TEXAS, FRIDAY, MAY. 8, 1903.

New York is now treated to the extraordinary spectacle of a staunch republican newspaper booming Mr. Cleveland for the presidency.

Ever since the northern securities decision, the countenances of J. Pierpont Morgan, Esq. and James J. Hill Esq., have been afflicted with the smiles which won't come on.

Some people who have read the advertisements in the magazines and street cars are at a loss to understand how Shakespeare ever wrote his playes without eating the modern breakfast foods.

St. Louis will have no "Midway Plaisance" at her exposition but will have a plain "Pike" for the same sort of exhibitions. The name, however, will not prevent just as queer things bordering it.

A prominent Mexican newspaper, commenting on the complaints made in the New York press because ten thousand immigrants arrived at that port one day recently says, "Mexico would be glad to take them all."

"An inverted president" is suggested as a title for that photograph taken by Colonel Pitcher, which shows Mr. Roosevelt just after his skis capsized and left his excellency's feet uppermost in a snow drift.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie's prophesy that in time America and England will be one, recalls the fable of the lion and the lamb lying down together. Some curious people would like to ask Mr. Carnegie which will be inside.

Despite the efforts of the postmaster general to avoid everything sensational in the postoffice investigations, the removal of the contents of Judge Tyner's safe by his wife and sister-in-law is a most melodramatic incident.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie has just donated $600,000 to the Tuskogee Institute. This is entirely in addition to the $20,000 which he gave recently for a library in Tuskogee and the $10,000 he has been giving the institute annually.

The liklihood of contagion being carried by mosquitoes has received recognition from the government. Recently issued quarantine regulations give definite instructions for excluding mosquitoes and preventing the admission of persons who have been bitten.

PRETTY CHEEKS

A Food that Makes Girls Sweet to Look Upon.

The right food for young ladies is of the greatest importance to their looks, to say nothing of the health. Thin, sallow girls don't get the right food you may be absolutely certain. A Brooklyn girl says: "For a long time in spite of all I could do I was thin, skinny and nervous. My cheeks were so sunken my friends used to remark on how bad I looked. I couldn't seem to get strength from my food —meat, potatoes, bread, etc. So I tried various medicines without help.

"I often read about Grape-Nuts, but never tried the food until one day something impressed me that perhaps if I would eat Grape-Nuts for my nerves and brain I could digest and get the good of my food. So I started in and the food with cream was facinating to my taste and I went in for it regularly twice a day.

"Well I began to improve and now while on my third package I have changed so my friends congratulate me warmly, ask me what in the world I have taken, etc, etc. My cheeks are plump and rosy and I feel so strong and well. I sleep sound and eat it seems as though I couldn't get enough to eat. Thank you sincerely for making Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason for Grape-Nuts.

The removal of valuable papers from the safe of Judge Tyner, assistant attorney general of the postoffice department, demonstrates beyond question the advisability of suspending temporarily officials whose conduct is under investigation.

GREATLY ALARMED

By a Persistent Cough, but Permanently Cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. H. P. Burbage, a student at law in Greenville, S. C., had been troubled for four or five years with a continuous cough, which, he says, "greatly alarmed me, causing me to fear that I was in the first stage of consumption." Mr. Burbage, having seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised, concluded to try it. Now read what he says of it: "I soon felt a remarkable change, and after using two bottles of the twenty-five cent size, was permanently cured." Sold by Overton Drug Co., Druggists.

A Little Early Riser

now and then at bedtime will cure constipation, biliousness and liver troubles. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the famous little pills that cure by arousing the secretions, moving the bowels gently, yet effectually, and giving such tone and strength to the glands of the stomach and liver that the cause of the trouble is removed entirely, and if their use is continued for a few days, there will be no return of the complaint. A Startling Test.

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test, resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes, "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages, caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attack in 14 months." Electric Bitters are positively guaranteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and Kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c at Overton Drug Co., Druggists.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. YOU'RE NOT SO MANY.

Say, when you think you own the earth,
And by some right of royal birth
You think you are of nobler blood
Than those of us who're made of mud
And by that are the best of any,
Go count yourself—you're not so many.

Say, when you feel that you are what
The vast majority of men are not,
And cannot be, because your make
Is far superior to theirs, please take
A little tumble, if there's any,
And count yourself—you're not so many.

Say, if you have an idea that
You of us all known where you're at,
And while mankind remains in doubt
You know just where you're coming out:
Collect your wits, if you have any,
And count yourself—you're not so many.

Say, brother, ifyouhave the gall
To think you really know it all;
To feel that you are better than
The ordinary average man,
And that hereafter you will rise
To higher glories in the skies
Than those who do not have a penny,
Go count yourself—you're not so many.

THE PROGRESS $1.00 A YEAR

The Appetite of Human Nature

When Uneeda Biscuit were first introduced, a conservative said:

"They are all right as far as they go, but they won't satisfy the worker. The worker, you see, wants something solid, and substantial, and plain—like potatoes, cabbage, or beef. These delicate and crisp biscuit, packed so daintily, in that In-er-seal Package, will not appeal to him any more than winter strawberries."

That sounded like good reasoning. But fact upsets theory.

Workers everywhere have been great consumers of Uneeda Biscuit The outdoor worker, seated at noon upon the sidewalk, a house wall for his back rest; mill hands in the mill yard, seated on comfortable bales; teamsters and draymen, on their high box seats—all have eaten Uneeda Biscuit, and their wives have eaten them, and their children have eaten them.

Another conservative took another view:

"Uneeda Biscuit are all right," he said, "to sell to the workers, but you must not expect to sell them to the more prosperous people. They are too cheap. Five cents a package—that kills Uneeda Biscuit so far as the wealthy are concerned. The price should be higher—they are worth it."

That, too, sounded reasonable, but it also turned out to be only theory.

For the greatest grocers of the city and of the country say Uneeda Biscuit have taken the place of the more expensive biscuit. Over 200,000,000 packages have been consumed.

The whole world eats them because they represent the highest value as a food product—pure, wholesome, good.

An extraordinary incident was reported yesterday to tho Progress by J. W. Peoples as having occurred near the Baggett church on the Fleming road about fourteen miles from Dublin, the first of the week. He says a horse belonging to Mr. Richards of that community became raving mad and was killed and buried by the neighbors. The animal was bitten some three weeks ago by what was thought to have been a mad dog and has since been watched closely for any developments. On Monday he showed unmistakable signs of hydrophobia and bit and snapped at everything near him and literally tore the flesh from his legs with his teeth.

The new union passenger depot at Morgan is now occupied by the Santa Fe and Texas Central railroads. The building is quite a neat little structure for a union depot and has separate waiting rooms for whites and colored; also separate baggage rooms for the two companies. There is a tower constructed for the interlocking system of gates, which is contemplated being installed by the two railroads.—Whitney Messenger.

Mrs. E. H. Rauhut of Comanche was drowned at the home of her father near Priddy, on the Cow House, last Sunday. The deceased had been sick for some time but was able to be up and with other members of her father's family had gone to a small fish tank in the yard to fish. She was left alone for a few minutes and it is supposed that she become dizzy and fell into the water, and being so weak was unable to get out.

He intends to push the work rapidly.—Hico Review.

There is a genuine case of smallpox in Comanche county jail. The victim is Robert Bruton, who has been confined there for seven or eight months on charges of kidnapping and rape. He was taken sick last week and Monday morning the doctors pronounced it smallpox. The officers have no idea how he came to catch the disease.

Mrs. Luda Nixon of near Purves happened to a very painful accident last Saturday while hauling wood in company with her twelve-year-old son. They had to go quite a distance from home to get the wood and was returning and had gotten as far as Mexico school house when the wagon ran over a large rock and Mrs. Nixon was thrown off, falling against a wire fence, which threw her under the wheels. The load passed over her body and left arm, breaking the latter above the elbow, but it is thought no internal injuries were sustained. She was taken to a near-by house and a physician summoned to splinter the arm, after which she was conveyed to her home. Thoughful neighbors are administering to her every want and it believed she will entirely recover in a short time. She is a widow lady and supports five children, the oldest of which was with her at the time of the accident.

At the annual school election held last Saturday in Dublin but little interest was shown by either the candidates or their friends, the latter probably due to the fact that none but good material for trustees had offered for the place. ### Winter Nests.

O piteous nests of winter-time,
Disclosed to every careless eye,
In hedges dark with dripping rime,
Where is your summer secrecy,
Your green pavilion of the prime?

Poor little nests, that hang forlorn
In bushes almost reft of leaves,
And naked thickets of sharp thorn—
Robbed of your shelter by those thieves
The frosts, and made a mark for scorn!

Nests that so cunningly were thatched
With fibers made to interlace—
In which the brittle brood were hatched,
In your once cherished hiding place,
By winter's harpies rudely snatched.

Like yours grief's bitter blast lays bare
Love's secrets, that poor maidens hide,
In hope's green bow'rs kept with such care—
So long dissembled, but soon spied
In the keen havoc of despair!

O'Rourke's Marriage

Over the low fire in the middle of the waste place that had been a banqueting hall crouched Hugh O'Rourke. He was wet and chilled to the bone with a long ride through mountain mists in the heart of winter. There was winter in his heart, too, for his step was a broken one, and his name proscribed, and, where his father might have held together the breaking fortunes of name and clan by the sheer power of voice and face, Hugh the younger had been borne by his mother in a time of tempest and terror, and his face was wan and uncomely and his eyes wild and sad.

"My father did not well to take a woman by force," he said aloud to the sinking fire that was all his company. "Black eyes and yellow hair pleased him well, belike, but he pleased not my mother, and she revenged her upon me who was innocent and unborn, giving me an April mind and a craving heart for her gifts on the day that she conceived me. Who enters there, in the name of God?" He sprang up, sword in hand, and then laughed at his outcry, for it was a girl child who stood in the doorway, a little maid of eleven years, fair to see, white as a snowdrop, with pale yellow hair streaming from under her put back hood.

"Little maid, you come to an empty house," Hugh O'Rourke said, "but you are welcome. You do not come alone?"

"I come alone, Aodh," she said, answering his English with the Irish tongue. "I shall not fill your house."

Hugh stood still beside the fire, while she came slowly down the room toward him, shaking the raindrops from her flowing hair as she came. A little way from the fire she stood, looking at him with large eyes.

"Why do you meet me with bare steel?" she said. "I looked for other greeting from your father's son, Hugh O'Rourke."

Hugh cast down his sword upon the bench he had risen from and took a step forward to meet her. Then he stopped, amazed for it was not a child she was, but a grown woman it was that cast off hood and cloak and came to him with eager face and eager hands.

"Hugh O'Rourke," she said again in the kindly Irish tongue, "have you forgotten me so soon?"

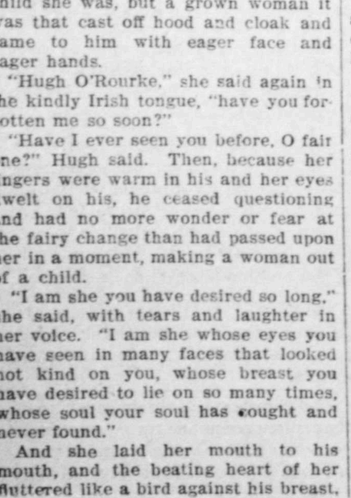
"Have I ever seen you before, O fair one?" Hugh said. Then, because her fingers were warm in his and her eyes dwelt on his, he ceased questioning and had no more wonder or fear at the fairy change than had passed upon her in a moment, making a woman out of a child.

"I am she you have desired so long," she said, with tears and laughter in her voice. "I am she whose eyes you have seen in many faces that looked not kind on you, whose breast you have desired to lie on so many times, whose soul your soul has sought and never found."

And she laid her mouth to his mouth, and the beating heart of her fluttered like a bird against his breast, and the fairy eyes of her darkened and laughed and lightened into his and set all his blood on fire.

A little while they clung together so; then he put her from him and held her at arm's length, looking at her with eyes that were anhungered.

"If I dared only think of it, beloved," Hugh said. "Yet you have mortal beauty upon your face and body."



Over the low fire crouched Hugh O'Rourke.

"What do you know of mortality, Hugh O'Rourke? And beauty is that core of our little life that cannot pass away, though the fruit that covers it turn rotten after growing ripe. Kiss me—nay, but only with your eyes, beloved—and tell me how mortal I am."

He kneeled down beside her now and cast his arms about her fair body as she sat in his seat, looking up at her with eyes that changed slowly their wonder for worship. Then he loosed a hand and drew down a thick curl of yellow hair to his lips, and presently blindfolded his eyes with its softness.

"I am answered," the woman said at last. "That which is not mortal in you has spoken to me immortal, and we know one another. So"—she drew the bandage of hair from his eyes and smiled down into them—"you love me, Hugh?"

"Barren years have I abided in mine anger, but now I lift my curse."

"If I know what love is, beloved."

She uncovered his eyes and looked deep into them, laughing. "I am beauty and I am love, and I have chosen to lie on the bosom of a man whom the tongue of the world knows not—a dreamer who has achieved none of his dreams, a soldier whose sword has won him nothing—and there is beauty and success and strength in the world outside. How is it you can keep me here, Hugh?"

"Sweet, I shall never know."

"Hush, unbeliever! Let us be man and woman together for a little. My feet are cold, and I have hunger and thirst upon me, Hugh. Bring me food and drink, and let be the fire. You shall warm my hands in your hands, Hugh, when we have eaten together."

"Dear, what will you eat? There is only coarse bread here, but I have red wine in my butt, and there is honey in the comb, I think, and store of apples in the loft—Winter Queenings, and the like."

"Bring me here the bread and wine and honey, beloved, and we will make a wedding feast of these. And bring me a Winter Queening that we may play ball with it when we have eaten."

He went out, and came back soon with the bread and wine in a basket on his arm, the apple in his hand, and a silk coverlet over his shoulder. He laid the quilt down at her feet.

"This for your carpet, beloved. Now will you eat?"

She drank half the cup of wine that he poured out, and Hugh drank after her; then they broke bread and ate the honeycomb together.

"Tell me my name, Hugh?"

"Grania, maybe, because you shine so bright, beloved."

"No."

"Esca, then, because your face is as pale as the moon when she is young."

"Not Esca. Have you heard ever of a woman that was bitterly wronged of an O'Rourke long ago, and died cursing him, and has come back and back to cry for the passing of every O'Rourke since then?"

"I have heard of her, beloved?"

"I am she, the banshee of your house, Hugh O'Rourke; but for you I shall not cry. Barren years have I abided in mine anger, but now I lift my curse, for my love is put upon a man of the house that wronged me. Do you take me for your wife, O'Rourke, knowing this?"

"I take you for my wife, Ban-shee, in the face of the sun and moon, and I plight troth to you past death, whether it come to-night or in fifty years."

"I take thee to my husband, Hugh O'Rourke, and I lift off my curse from thy house, thus and thus."

The woman drooped to his feet, shod in worn brogues as they were, and kissed them; rose to her knees and kissed his hands and the hilt of his sword; rose to her feet and kissed his mouth.

Then they went, handfast, into the shadowy upper end of the room, where the climbing firelight could no longer find them.

And when the morning came, rosy and wind-tossed, Hugh O'Rourke came out to his serving-men with life and the joy of life in his eyes, and he and the fair woman clinging to his arm gave them good-morrow and went forth, laughing. But, an hour later, these found the body of Hugh O'Rourke lying on his bed with shut eyes and folded hands, long cold. So the serving men knew that they had seen and bidden farewell to the soul of Hugh O'Rourke and that all was well with him at last.—The Sketch.

OATH-TAKING IN MANY LANDS.

Well Enough if All of Them Could Induce Veracity.

Chinese witnesses must be sworn in several ways if they are to be bound to tell the truth. In some cases the witness breaks a plate and assents to the imprecation that his soul may be shattered in the same way if he strays from the paths of veracity.

With a large section of the Chinese the formula is for the person administering the oath to light a match or candle, and, blowing it out, tell the witness that thus will his soul be extinguished if he does not speak the truth, to which he assents by giving a short nod.

Some tribes living on the Thibetan tableland can only be sworn in courts by cutting off the head of a live gamecock.

The Hindu law says:

"Let a judge swear a Brahmin by his veracity, a soldier by his horses, his elephants or his arms; an agriculturist by his cows, his grain, or his money and a souder by all his crimes."

A Galla of Abyssinia sits down over a pit covered with a hide, imprecating that he may fall into a pit if he breaks his word.

A Brazilian savage, to confirm his statement, raises his hand over his head and thrusts it into his hair or touches the point of his weapons.

Among the Aracans, an Asiatic tribe, the witness swearing to speak the truth takes in his hand a musket, a sword, a spear, a tiger's tusk, a crocodile's tooth, or a stone celt.

The hill tribes of India swear by a tiger's skin, and the Ostraks by a bear's head.

The sacred oath in Persia is "by the holy grave," that is, the tomb of Shah Besa 'de, who is buried in Cashmere.

Jews are sworn on the Pentateuch with their hats on; Mohammedans by placing the right hand flat on the Koran and the left on the forehead, and then bringing down the forehead to the book, and finally gazing a while at the book. The highest oath of the man who dwells by the Ganges in India is taken on the water of that river.

Why Many Young Men Fail.

It is the fault and the cause of the failure of so many bright, capable young men that, being put into a certain workday rut, they make no effort to climb or even crawl out of it; they do not seek the work that is not routine, and go beyond the terms of the bond in search of additional labor in order to attract the approving notice of their employers. They do not go to their posts before nor remain at them after the fixed hour. They are content to do enough, and no more than enough, to earn their hire. The life of the average clerk is generally genteel, easy, cleanly; he need not soil his hands, nor his clothes, and his ambition is satisfied with these pleasant conditions. — Philadelphia Ledger.

Too Radical a Reformer.

Count Batthyany, a young man of twenty-six, and an enthusiastic Tolstoian, has been confined in an asylum in Austria for the insane at the instigation of his relations. His friends say that he is perfectly rational, and are agitating for his release. The Count has an immense estate, and set about to inculcate his doctrines among his tenants. These serf-like peasants he treated as brothers, preached anarchy, and read to them Tolstoi's works, which he translated into the Magyar tongue. On account of these doings, his relatives, to whom such innovations were abhorrent had him placed in the asylum.

As Others See Us.

"I wonder if my face will change, too, when I am your age?" asked the sweet girl graduate, in a tone redolent with insinuation."

"Undoubtedly, dear," replied the elderly female, "and you ought to be thankful for the loss of a generous portion of your cheek."

A Wise M. D.

"Doctor," said the village gossip, "I'm troubled with that tired feeling. What would you advise me to do?"

"You might try five drops of chloroform on your tongue every half hour," replied the local pillmaker, as he winked his other eye.

Bacilli Make Fields Fertile.

The bacilli which grow on the roots of clover plants and have the power of abstracting nitrogen from the air account for the increased fertility of fields after a crop of clover has been grown on them.

Kerwin—I keep my mouth shut

The Brook.

Down swept the chill wind from the mountain peak,
From the snow five thousand summers old;
On open wold and hilltop bleak
It had gathered all the cold,
And whirled it like sleet on the wanderer's cheek.
It carried a shiver everywhere
From the unleafed boughs and pastures bare;
The little brook heard it and built a roof
'Neath which he could house him, winter proof;
All night by the white stars frosty gleams
He groined his arches and matched his beams;
Slender and clear were his crystal spars
As the lashes of light that trim the stars;
He sculptured every summer delight
In his halls and chambers out of sight;
Sometimes his tinkling water slipt
Down through a frost-leaved forest crypt
Long, sparkling aisles of steel-stemmed trees
Bending to counterfeit a breeze;
Sometimes the roof no fretwork knew
But silvery mosses that downward grew;
Sometimes it was carved in sharp relief
With quaint arabesques of ice fern-leaf;
Sometimes it was simply smooth and clear
For the gladness of heaven to shine through, and here
He had caught the nodding bulrush tops
And hung them thickly with diamond-drops,
That crystalled the beams of moon and sun,
And made a star of every one;
No mortal builder's most rare device;
Could match this winter-palace of ice;
'Twas as if every image that mirrored lay
In his depths serene through the summer day,
Each fleeting shadow of earth and sky,
Lest the happy model should be lost,
Had been mimicked in fairy masonry
By the elfin builders of the frost.

Bob's Race

It was a hot, sultry September day, and as Kirk Sanborn plodded wearily along the country turnpike road toward the village, teams of all descriptions sped by, leaving in their wake stifling, blinding clouds of dust.

It was the great day of the year; the county fair in all its glory was in full swing.

As the merry laughter of the young people passing by reached the boy's ears he bit his lip convulsively. Why should he not be happy and have pleasures and privileges like other boys of his age?

But these things were nothing compared to the bitter disappointment and the sorrow it had brought to him in not being allowed to ride Rob, his five-year-old colt, in the "Grand Running Race," the announcement of which stood out so prominently in large, red letters on the posters which were tacked up at many points along the country roads.

Kirk's father had been for years, and was at that time, one of the well-to-do farmers of that section. He had established more than a local reputation on the colts he had raised, and his success in this line was evident from the new additions which were continually being made to his already beautiful barns.

His only son had reached the age of sixteen years. He was a muscular, broad-shouldered lad, but short of stature. He was, too, an honest, open-hearted youth who made many friends, and some enemies, the latter because of an ungovernable temper.

The boy from the first showed an unusual amount of interest in horses, and for this reason when Rob was foaled Mr. Sanborn gave the colt to his son.

As the boy and colt grew up together they became greatly attached to each other, and the sight of the boy on his fiery steed, bare back, dashing up the road at an alarming gait, was a common one in the country round about.

When the colt had attained the age of three and one-half years a western relative made a visit to Kirk's home. The youngster's riding so pleased the man of the plains that upon his return to the west he immediately sent him a large Mexican saddle and bridle. It is needless to say that the horse with his new paraphernalia and his rider won the admiration of the village boys and filled them with envy.

On the day of our story, as the boy trudged along the road on his way to the fair grounds his young heart was almost broken. He bent his head low and pulled his crumpled felt hat down over his eyes that the country folk passing by might not see the large tears that trickled down his cheeks. His mind could dwell on nothing but his disappointment over his father's refusal to let him ride his own colt in the great running race of the season—the race that was to determine the colt's career.

"No," Mr. Sanborn said, gently but firmly, "the colt needs a more experienced hand than yours, Kirk— a rider more used to horses. I have already sent to New York for a jockey to ride Rob through the race and I expect the colt to win."

"But, father, Rob will not run for him the way he will for me. Let me ride my own colt and I will win the race if any one can," the boy pleaded, but the father shook his head and walked away. His mother and two sisters sympathized with him but his father remained firm.

Rob was to race on the last day of the fair, and it was not until that eventful day arrived that Kirk made his way to the grounds alone. The others of the family had left some time before.

Once on the grounds Kirk made his way immediately to the stables. Here disappointment and excitement reigned, for Rob's rider had not yet shown up, and the race was to come off in half an hour.

Mr. Sanborn was hurrying excitedly about, talking first with one and then another of his friends and gesticulating wildly in his despair.

A sudden ray of hope came to Kirk as he stood silently on the outskirts of the noisy group and with a bound he was by his father's side. "Let me ride Rob?" he cried eagerly, his eyes snapping with fire and excitement. At the sound of the boy's voice the colt gave a gentle whinny and pawed the soft earth impatiently.

"No," thundered his father, almost fiercely, as he thrust his son aside. An angry reply came to the boy's lips, but it was not uttered and, instead, the tears came; as if seeking sympathy he went up and patted the colt's glossy flank and smoothed his flowing mane.

A man from the judge's stand came running up to Mr. Sanborn and exclaimed hurriedly, "The next train gets in from Boston in three-quarters of an hour; that will delay the race fifteen minutes, but we'll wait. If your rider does not arrive then your horse will have to drop out."

"Have the colt all saddled and ready and I'll go to the station to meet my man," the latter exclaimed, and was off on a run.

Kirk hovered about the colt as if he were about to be separated from his companion forever. He saw the saddle and bridle put on his pet and adjusted by strange hands, and he ground his teeth and clinched his boyish fists.

The time set for the race was at hand; all the jockeys with the exception of the one who was to ride Rob were ready. The enthusiastic crowd which occupied the grand stand clamored impatiently at the delay until the starter stood up and announced that the race would be delayed fifteen minutes as the rider of "Rob" had not yet arrived but was expected on the next train.

Finally, as the bell was clanging impatiently from the judges' stand, a boy wet with perspiration and covered with dust broke into the little group surrounding Kirk and his horse, shouting, "Mr. Sanborn's jockey did not come, the race will have to start without Rob!"

"The horse shall run and win!" exclaimed Kirk excitedly, his eyes shining and his heart beating fast with suppressed excitement, and before the hostler, who had charge of the colt, could protest, the boy was mounted and galloping up the track where four other horses and their riders were impatiently waiting.

A great shout went up from the throats of the assembled crowd as they beheld Rob coming up the track, but his rider in an old felt hat and cowhide boots puzzled them and changed the applause into laughter.

As the horse and rider halted beneath the wire to have the number pinned on the latter's sleeve an urchin in the crowd yelled out, "It's Kirk Sanborn! Kirk's going to ride the colt!" A few rougns who lined the sides of the track began to jeer, but the boy did not heed them.

After receiving a little advice from the starter Kirk galloped up the track. He met his rivals, who were impatient for the start, wheeled into position and all were off down the course.

As the five horses and their riders passed under the wire and the starter, leaning far out over the railing of the judges' stand yelled "Go!" the enthusiastic crowd sent up a mighty yell.

Kirk's heart beat like a trip hammer; it was some seconds before the boy began to realize that he was riding a horse in a running race; then awakening to the seriousness of his position, the young rider leaned far out on the horse's neck and gradually pulled in his steed until two of the four of those in his rear had passed him.

The boy knew that by this time his father had returned from the depot and was among that crowd of eager spectators who craned their necks and swung their hats so excitedly as he sped by. He knew that his father had no confidence in his son's ability as a rider, and for that reason he would win—he must.

Three quarters of the mile was over. Kirk let his steed out and gradually crept up into second place. One of the leaders had fallen behind, but one of the two with whom he had kept pace up to the time of his spurt had crept up and was again even with him. The horses and their riders, well bunched and fairly flying, were now making the last turn on the track.

The people in the grand stand were all standing, endeavoring to get a better view and yelling madly as, enveloped in a cloud of dust, the five horses and their riders were coming with the speed of the wind into the stretch.

Kirk heard no cheering; all he knew was that he must win the race and, letting Rob have a loose rein, he leaned forward, patted the glossy neck of his steed and spoke soft encouragement into the dumb animal's ear. The horse seemed to understand what his young master expected of him, and, with his muscles standing out like iron and nostrils distended, he easily passed the horse that led him.

Deafening cheers rent the air, and some one shouted, "The kid will win! —but no, the race was not yet over; the boy's old rival who had so persistently kept Rob's pace was again even with him. If he could only shake off this horse and his crazy jockey who was beating his mount unmercifully with his whip, he could surely win.

"Go! Go! Rob, my love," Kirk whispered, as he stroked his colt's foam-flecked neck and spurred him onward. "Go, go, boy, we must win! win! win!" The boy's brain was in a whirl. The cheering of the crowd seemed afar off as the horse put all his efforts into his sinewy legs and ran as only a horse can run for the love of his master.

When within some twenty yards of the wire Kirk fancied he saw his antagonist drop behind until his horse's head was opposite his cowhide bootleg, but he did not know for sure. In a semi-conscious state he realized he was wishing, urging, praying that Rob might go faster; then the [illegible] his little colt—shot under [illegible] and a deafening roar [illegible] seemed to tear his eardrums [illegible] and he knew the race was [illegible] he had done his best and [illegible]

SETTLING THE CLAIM.

By George E. Walsh.

THE bleak stretches of browning grass gave a tinge of sadness to the landscape, and the hum of innumerable insects which had prolonged the summer months well into the fall were growing fainter and less rhythmic with the advancing season. The crops had been garnered and the approach of frost brought no terror to the farmers, but in some indescribable way it affected the nerves of the lonely woman standing before her rude shack gazing toward the setting sun. Somehow the autumn had always brought a shade of sadness into her life. Even back in the old New England days—before this horrible nightmare had transformed her life—she had experienced the same feeling of depression.

"I guess it's because I hate to see things dying," she explained to herself to stifle back a rising rebellion of sorrow. "The summer was short enough back home, but out here it's all too short."

There was a dreary, homesick expression in the eyes, and through the straggling hair the bronzed forehead showed little marks of premature wrinkling. Dorothy Wellington in her girlhood days had been termed "comely," a word which just fell short of calling her good looking or handsome. But with time and experience her features had grown harsher and yet without blotting out a certain sweet expression of resignation. Eternal longing for the impossible, however, eats out the heart and ambition of the strongest, and Dorothy was daily finding her burden more unendurable.

"It isn't natural," she confessed to herself many times. "I'd rather give up all and go back without a cent. I could work and make a living. Not in Dunbary, but somewhere else—anywhere except here."

It was a strained and unnatural position for a young girl to find herself in, and nothing but a strong, stern sense of duty could hold her to the bargain another day. It was not home on the bleak Oklahoma plain. The very quarter section on which they lived was in dispute. The shack which they had built for temporary quarters might not be their own. Across the "dead line" there was another shack—a second blot on the landscape. To one or the other the quarter section belonged, but to which none could say. The slow-moving courts would in time decide, but for the present there was only an armed truce, and neither side dared venture on the property of the other.

Jared Wellington had left Dunbary in the East to cast his lot with the early settlers of Oklahoma, and when the rush began he had been the first to settle on a desirable quarter section. But while he had been busy staking out the section another had filed a claim to the same piece of land. There was a dispute which threatened to end in murder, but Dorothy had been the means of quieting the two combatants. They agreed to let the courts settle the claim, and meanwhile the two owners built on opposite sides of the "dead line," which they drew exactly through the centre of the quarter section.

That was three months ago, and in the meantime Jared Wellington and Henry Egerton had nursed their wrath in silence while they planted and gathered their first season's crops. Each bitterly envied the other the crops which by right should belong to him. With alert eyes and gun loaded for active service, each watched the other, determined to exact the full pound of flesh demanded in the agreement. Had accident or sickness forced either over the "dead line," the other would unquestionably have shot his enemy in his tracks the moment he set foot on his property.

Such were the bitter conditions under which Dorothy had lived for three months, hoping and praying that the court's decision would shortly settle the controversy, but never did the law seem to lag more exasperatingly. Autumn was changing the whole face of the landscape and winter was approaching with its long period of gloomy weather, but the "dead line" and the Egerton shack in the distance, continued to make life for Dorothy and her father bitter and disagreeable.

Jared Wellington was as hard and set in his ways as the New England granite hills among which he had been reared, and Dorothy knew his nature too well to attempt to induce him to compromise with his lonely neighbor. Lonely Henry Egerton appeared to be in his shack, for neither wife, mother, nor child appeared around his home. Daily he had toiled in the fields all summer, returning to his rude home at night time to prepare his own supper, and smoke quietly and solitarily near the door of his shack until the moon was darkened by the blood-red horizon. Dorothy had watched these orderly proceedings from her quiet retreat, often wondering at the man's lonely life, and in her tender heart half pitying him.

He was young and not hard-looking, as she remembered him on that eventful day when she had interposed to save both from a possible tragedy. But after all it had been a fleeting glimpse of the flushed face and eyes burning with anger and determination. Those were exciting days when man forgot his thin veneer of civilization and displayed his savage origin. The wild rush across the promised line, the fights and struggles to gain possession of the best quarter sections, the fear and lamentations of those who had failed, and the awful intensity of the calm which had prevailed days and weeks before the final word was given to throw open the land to the eager public—all these pictures were burned on Dorothy's brain so that they seemed like some horrible nightmare. How different it all had been from the quiet New England village where she had been reared.

"Why could she not have lived there forever? What right had her father to tear her from her home, root and branch, and plunge into this wild, lawless cauldron of unrest and bitter strivings?"

Dorothy brushed back a rebellious tear and turned away from the front door of the shack. She had never given expression to such parental rebellion before, and she half shuddered at it. By way of apology, she added in an undertone:

"Poor father! He suffers, too. He has been disappointed and it is making him old. Why did that man want to come here?"

She looked bitterly across the "dead line." Henry Egerton had just emerged from his shack and stood, with hands shading his eyes, watching her. Nearby she could see his gun leaning against the side of the shack.

"He must be bad, or he would offer to compromise," Dorothy continued. "He is young and able and father is old and feeble. He might move on, and——"

She suddenly dropped her voice to an indistinct murmur, for an apparition appeared in the doorway of the shack which made her excited. She shaded her eyes and looked more keenly. It was a small, toddling child, scarcely two summers old, holding uncertainly to the side of the doorway, and cooing at the big ball of fire slowly disappearing below the horizon. The man raised his hands and the child ran to him and jumped into his arms.

"He is married, then, and has a family," Dorothy breathed. "Maybe I have misjudged him. Has the child a mother, or——"

Again her sentence died out in an indistinct murmur, but the sun had set and twilight was rapidly spreading over the landscape. Dorothy saw another form, bent of figure and white of hair, walking across the field, and after waving a hand of welcome to him she turned to her work inside.

There was seldom any mention of their neighbor's affairs between father and daughter, and to-night Dorothy merely told of the presence of the baby on the opposite side of the "dead line" and then subsided. Jared Wellington raised his shaggy eyebrows and grunted:

"Then he's married? He'll bring his wife next, I suppose. Maybe he has heard that the courts——"

A horrible suspicion entered the minds of both. Had the courts decided respecting their claims, and had Henry Egerton heard that he was the sole and legal possessor of the quarter section? Otherwise why had he brought his family out to his lonely home when he had lived without them for three months?

Jared Wellington felt the heavy oppression of disappointment, and his white head drooped lower and lower as the evening advanced. Dorothy tried to cheer him, but in vain. Finally she decided to present the matter clearly to her aged parent and show him that all would not be lost even if the courts decided against them.

"What of it, father?" she said, cheerfully. "We can go back East and live. I can work and support you. I will enjoy life more than out here. I can't stand this much longer. I must have companions and neighbors."

"No, no, Dorothy, it can never be," he murmured. I shall never live to see the East again. If it is true that—that—he owns it"—pointing dramatically toward his enemy's shack—"it will kill me. I cannot survive it."

The tears blinded the blue eyes of the woman, and she turned away to hide them. "It may not be, father," she murmured in a thick voice.

But whether true or not, Jared Wellington took to his bed, and on the morrow he was unable to raise his head from the pillow. Dorothy nursed him with all the skill she possessed, but he needed more than she could give. Slumbering fitfully, the patient would awaken occasionally, and murmur indistinct sentences. The fever of age and anxiety had unsettled his mind, and he raved like a child of ten.

Dorothy turned away in despair. Impending death in the dreary shack made even her stout heart quail. It was ten miles to the nearest physician, but it was necessary to go. Would the feeble patient awaken, and finding himself deserted, commit some wild act?

She held the door half open, debating whether to go or stay, when suddenly a slight pressure from without made her turn hastily. There, almost at her feet, was a bundle of red clothing, surmounted by a shock of light brown hair. The pair of innocent eyes looking up at her suddenly gleamed with a new-born happiness.

"Muzzer! Muzzer! I'se found you at last. Where's you been so long? Baby's been cryin' an' cryin' fur you. Hug baby, an' tell him you'll nebber, nebber leave him again."

A pair of warm arms were raised beseechingly upward. Dorothy picked the little child up in her arms and hugged and kissed it. The longing in her heart for some one to love and speak to was almost too much, and she broke into a violent sobbing. The child cuddled close to her and said softly:

"Don't cry, muzzer, fur I won't leave you ag'in. I'se goin' to stay forebber an' ebber with you."

The hands, chubby and warm, stroked the hair of the weeping woman. Dorothy raised her eyes to look at the little face pressed to hers, and then she started. A dozen feet away stood Henry Egerton, an expression of confusion and uncertainty on his face.

He raised his hat and said:

"Pardon me, I've come for Virginia. She ran away, and I could not catch her until she crossed—crossed over here."

Dorothy still held the child in her arms, and Virginia suddenly exclaimed:

"I'se found muzzer! I'se found muzzer, Uncl' Hen'y. Here she is."

The face of the man worked strangely. A softening of the firm outlines made him look tender and sympathetic.

"Poor Virginia lost her mother a week ago," he murmured, "and she has come to live with me. I could not bear to tell her the truth. But I suppose I was wrong. Come, Virginia, come with Uncle Henry."

"Not unless muzzer comes, too," pleaded the child.

The embarrassment of the man increased. Dorothy, understanding the position of the two, suddenly raised her eyes from the shock of brown hair and said quickly:

"Leave the child with me a short time. She is happy, and I—I—need some one."

There was a break in her voice, but she continued with more self-control: "But I must go away for a doctor. Father is very sick and he needs help and medicine."

Henry Egerton had been thinking of the picture the two made framed in the doorway, and he started at the mention of her father. Then, apparently without thinking, he said: "I'll go for the doctor if you'll keep Virginia until I return. I'll be back soon."

He strode away rapidly without glancing again at the picture, which somehow had strangely affected him, and within ten minutes he was riding fiercely toward Oklahoma City. During the ten miles he hardly saw an object on the landscape, and when he returned in company with the physician he was quiet and taciturn.

Virginia and Dorothy were not in the doorway to greet him on his return, but unmindful of the feud between the two families he strode into the small shack behind the physician. Then, while that individual examined his patient he waited patiently at the foot of the rude bed, furtively watching two faces which seemed inseparably associated together.

Jared Wellington was a long time in bed and the fever wasted him to a skeleton. Nature had robbed him of the power and strength to protect his shack from the approach of the enemy. But before his complete recovery the "dead line" had been obliterated. The little footsteps of Virginia had worn a smooth path across it from shack to shack, and often Henry Egerton followed after his tiny niece "to go and see muzzer." Somehow there was as much attraction for him as for the innocent child, who had found in its bereavement another who had quickly healed the wound.

Then one day Henry Egerton walked to the old shack with lines drawn tighter around his mouth, and with eyes hardened to bear a new burden. The decision of the courts in their respective claims had been handed down. The ownership of the valuable quarter section was decided forever. Beyond the hearing of the convalescent man, who sat in the sun of the doorway, Egerton told the news to Dorothy. Under the blunt announcement she paled and flushed by turns. Then pity for the drawn face before her made her exclaim:

"Oh, I'm sorry for you, Mr. Egerton. I think you should own half."

"No, it was all or none. Now the courts have decided it all belongs to your father. I'm an interloper, and must leave at once. You have the right to order me off before night."

"But I won't do it, Mr. Egerton," Dorothy replied, with a bright smile. "You can stay as long as you like."

"No man could do that unless"—he hesitated—"unless you could let me work the place for you. I could stay as your hired man until your father was well again; but I won't. I would stay at your bidding—if—if—you would always be Virginia's mother."

Dorothy held forth a trembling hand. He seized it and covered it with kisses, hastily interpreting the action as a plea to stay, and Dorothy did not have the courage to break his illusion. Then from the shadow of the shack a small figure toddled forth and a baby's voice exclaimed: "Muzzer, make Uncl' Hen'y stay an' play bear with me. I wants him."

Dorothy, with a happy smile and gleaming eyes, picked the child up in her arms and replied between her caresses: "He will stay, Virginia, and he shall play bear with you all the morning."—New York Times.

A Jail Cut Out of a Rock.

What is probably one of the most unique prisons in the world is located at Santa Rosalia, Lower California. It is cut out of the solid rock, the gates being made of thick iron bars.

The prisoners never know how long they will be detained in this terrible place, as they are not allowed to be present at their trial—an interesting custom which practically insures their conviction, unless they are in a position to oil the machinery of justice. Their friends, if they have any, bring them food, as the State does not undertake to feed them, and they get their water for drinking and bathing out of a cask set outside of the door. Altogether, the ordinary convict prison of America seems like a haven of luxury compared to this rock-hewn penitentiary.—Philadelphia Press.

A "KILLING" SPOILED

SMALL MISTAKE THAT PROVED VERY COSTLY.

Well-Planned Race Track Coup Would Have Netted Thousands of Dollars More But for an Oversight of the Managers.

"I won't say that it's about as hard for a man born in 1870 to get a total disability pension for participating in the battle of Gettysburg as it is to pull off a successful hog slaughtering on a race track nowadays, but I don't mind mentioning in confidence that the people who fetch through a successful killing on a race course at this stage of the game have got to be mighty slick, and they have got to have a whole lot of luck besides," said a veteran trainer in charge of a string out at Benning. "Any one of a thousand things can flatten a prepared coup out like a piece of roofing tin nowadays. The railbirds, in the first place, have got the prepared killing pretty nigh coppered. Nothing gets away from them on any track from dawn's early light. And even if the word doesn't leak, the battle between the layers and the players has now reached such an acute stage that the boys with the slates begin to rub the minute a man whose face they know begins to make the rounds on any horse with a price chalked up against him. Not only this, but the most foolish little mishap can utterly destroy all possibility of pulling off a killing that has been shrewdly and carefully planned and worked over, night and day, for months.

"A few years ago that fine mare Fleur-de-lis was brought East after a successful campaign on the California tracks, for a killing. There were fewer railbirds then than there are now, and therefore it was a lot easier to give her preparation and workouts without taking chances on her form being revealed.

"The mare was pitchforked, with nothing worth mentioning in the way of weight on her back, into an overnight handicap with a lot of swagger horses, which made a good price against her a certainty. Her people designed to blister the poolrooms throughout the country on the win, and so they sent their commissioners to various points with the money a couple of days before the race.

"Now, a short time before the day of the contemplated killing, the owner of the mare got permission from the Jockey Club stewards, for some reason or other, to change the mare's name from Fleur-de-lis to Maxine. The commissioners who had gone West and South with the big money to bet on Fleur-de-lis didn't know anything about this switch of the mare's name to Maxine, and, through an oversight, they were not informed.

"It happened that the poolrooms the commissioners went to failed to chalk 'formerly Fleur-de-lis' after the name of Maxine, as is occasionally done on the poolroom blackboards when a horse's name is changed, and so the commissioners, concluding, for some reason or other, that the mare hadn't been entered in the race that was to be the killing, kept all of that fine Fleur-de-lis money right in their clothes. You can draw for yourself a little charcoal sketch of how these commissioners felt when the operators in the poolrooms, after calling off the race and announcing that Maxine had strolled in something easy, supplemented their call-off with the dry remark: 'Maxine was formerly Fluer-de-lis.'

"The Maxine party made a big thing of the win at the track, of course; but so trivial an oversight as their failure to inform their commissioners that a change in the mare's name had been applied for cost them a good many tens of thousands of dollars."—Washington Post.

German Motorist in Hard Luck.

In Germany the motorist is in a sad dilemma. A sedate elderly gentleman was returning home one evening in his motor and passed through a small town called Dingsda. At that hour of the night the streets were empty, so he omitted to sound his bell as the local regulations prescribe. Shortly after committing this crime he was served with a summons for not sounding a warning while crossing a public thoroughfare. He protested, but in vain, and the fine was paid. Some weeks later he made the same journey at the same hour and, mindful of past misdeeds, loudly sounded the alarm at the crossroads. The result was the issue of a second summons, this time for causing "rest-disturbing noise"!

Poet's Murmuring Stream.

A poet came from 'way back east
Unto the glorious west,
Whose charms, he claimed, had ne'er by pen
In fitting garb been dressed.

He wrote of mountain, mesa, butte;
He sang of azure skies,
Whose blue he likened to the blue
Of the western girl's bright eyes.

His noblest effort, so he thought,
Was on the murmuring stream
That rippled 'tween alfalfa banks,
A sweet, soft-slumbering dream.

He took this to his western maid,
She laughed—the little witch—
And cried, "That stream? Ha! ha! Why, that's Dad's irrigating ditch!"

Too Great a Risk.

In almost every neighborhood some one has died from an attack of colic or cholera morbus, often before medicine could be procured or physician summoned. A reliable remedy for these diseases should be kept at hand. The risk is too great for anyone to take. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy has undoubtedly saved the lives of more people and relieved more pain and suffering than any other medicine in use. It can always be depended upon. For sale by Overton Drug Co.

The Wastes of the Body.

Every seven days the blood, muscles and bones of a man of average size loses two pounds of wornout tissue. This waste cannot be replenished and the health and strength kept up without perfect digestion. When the stomach and digestive organs fail to perform their functions, the strength lets down, health gives way and disease sets up. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure enables the stomach and digestive organs to digest and assimilate all of the wholesome food that may be eaten into the kind of blood that rebuilds the tissues and protects the health and strength of the mind and body. Kodol cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia and all stomach troubles. It is an ideal Spring tonic. Sold by Overton Drug Company.

A Woman's Wealth.

Paine's Celery Compound

GIVES VIGOR AND STRENGTH TO DEBILITATED AND RUN DOWN WOMEN.

It is maintained by many distinguished writers that the greatness of a nation depends much upon the physical condition of its women. The general conditions which contribute to health and long life, are those which do not imply a rapid and unequal exhaustion of those powers by which life is maintained. While we assert that the women of our land stand peerless for beauty and the virtues that make them lovable, we cannot hide the fact that there are thousands in our midst who, owing to overwork, worry, household cares, and an unequal exhaustion of life power, have become weak, nervous, sleepless, and debilitated.

We bring to the attention of all weary, despondent, hopeless, and sickly women earth's great rescuer and health builder, Paine's Celery Compound. Thousands of healthy women around us owe their present vigor, activity, and robustness to Paine's Celery Compound. Mrs. Stephen Smith, St. Paul, Minn., tells how she was snatched from the grave; she says:—

"I had a bad attack of la grippe this spring and was at death's door, and no one ever expected me to recover. I was so weak that as soon as they brought me out of one faint I was in another. I could not take any nourishment, and doctors' medicines did me no good. A friend advised my husband to get me a bottle of Paine's Celery Compound, which he did, but had no faith in it. The second day after taking the Compound, I began to get real hungry and took an interest in things. I had everything that money and loving care could supply, and with that and Paine's Celery Compound, I am now doing my own work, while three months ago I was almost in the grave. I know that I owe my health and strength to Paine's Celery Compound, and shall always recommend it."
