British still probing smuggling ring

AP Laserphoto

Workers in San Diego, Calif., load a cargo crate containing what NBC News identified as nuclear trigger components. Customs officials said Wednesday they foiled an attempt to smuggle the devices to Iraq via London.

LONDON (AP) — Three people charged with trying to smuggle devices for triggering nuclear weapons to Iraq appeared in court today, and two were ordered held without bond until a later hearing.

British authorities also said they were investigating the alleged smuggling of naval equipment to Iraq, but few details were released. One news report said documents had been seized in two British cities and that arrests were expected.

Iraq today denied any involvement in the alleged attempt to smuggle the U.S.-made nuclear weapons devices. Iraq also told Britain's envoy in Baghdad that it reserves the right to acquire any advanced technology it wants.

President Saddam Hussein of Iraq told a rally in Baghdad that enemies of the Arabs were trying to hinder Iraq's "march of progress." He did not specifically mention Britain or the smuggling case.

In the House of Commons, Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd today indicated Britain would not sever diplomatic relations with Iraq but said Britain may pursue some action through the United Nations Security Council.

"I can see considerable risk and damage by breaking off diplomatic relations ... and no actual advantage," Hurd said.

The two men and a woman who appeared in Uxbridge Magistrates Court in west London today were arrested Wednesday following an 18-month investigation by U.S. and British authorities in which American companies cooperated.

Britain's Customs and Excise Department identified the three as Lebanese engineer Toufic Fouad Amyuni, 37; Ali Ashour Daghir, 49, a company director with dual Iraqi and British nationality; and export executive Jeanine Celestine Speckman, 41, a French citizen. All gave addresses in or near London.

They were charged with being involved in the attempted export of 40 electrical capacitors with intent to evade the Export of Goods Control Order 1989. Amyuni and Daghir were remanded in custody until a hearing April 5, while Mrs. Speckman was granted bail. She is to appear in court May 10.

British customs officials said the devices were seized Wednesday in a freight shed at London's Heathrow airport as they were about to be put on an Iraqi Airways flight to Baghdad.

Some news reports said that fake devices has been substituted for the real ones before customs officials moved in to make the arrests.

Customs officials in London, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the capacitors are electrical components used in the detonation of a nuclear bomb.

Hussein, in his speech marking Palestinian Land Day, did not refer directly to nuclear technology or nuclear weapons, but he attacked unidentified anti-Arab forces he said were holding back Iraq's "march of progress."

Lately, Iraq has developed long-range missiles thought to be capable of delivering a nuclear warhead.

"The fires are intensifying, whether by aggressions or conspiracies, but the Iraqi people will not be worn down," Hussein said.

Legislators already looking to next try

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Legislative leaders were empty-handed but full of praise for their progress as the gavel fell Wednesday on the first special session called to consider school finance and judicial reform issues.

"Everyone has postured themselves; everyone has made their remarks," said House Speaker Gib Lewis, whose chamber rejected a $511 million school finance measure on a 101-45 vote this past Thursday.

"Now we're down to serious business," said the speaker, looking ahead to the next special session, which starts this coming Monday. Lewis said he expects House committee chairmen to negotiate an education compromise, have it passed by the House and in a conference committee with Senate leaders within 10 days of the session start.

"Trust me," he said. "We'll do it."

Under state law, special sessions last at most 30 days and have agendas set by the governor, who is the

One of the mementos Midlander Ernest Angelo brought back from Hungary is a poster supporting the League of Young Democrats, a political party challenging the communists. It pictures Lenin being hit in the face with an orange. An orange is the symbol for the League of Young Democrats.

Angelo returns from Hungary with taste of election history

Ernest Angelo Jr., petroleum engineer and Midland's former mayor, got more than a chance Sunday to simply witness Hungary's first free elections since 1947.

Angelo, who returned from his week-long trip Wednesday, was selected by the National Republican Institute for International Affairs to be an official observer of the historic elections.

"I went because of the historical aspects," Angelo said. "To be there and see a little bit of it when it was occurring was worth the effort."

Angelo was part of the 55-member International Delegation to the Hungarian Elections, headed by former Vice President Walter Mondale.

The 25 delegation members from the United States were either Republican or Democratic national committee members. The rest of the delegation represented 15 other countries.

"The purpose of the group was to observe the election process and determine whether or not the election was free and open," said Angelo, 56. "Based on our appearances at a number of polling places and the questioning of some of the voters, it was a free election."

Members of past U.S. delegations, which have watched elections in Chile, Nicaragua and Panama, acted more as monitors than observers, he said. Delegation membership changes each trip, he said.

Unlike other countries with new-found freedom, Hungary's elections went without incident,

Newspaper, staff receive seven more news awards

The Midland Reporter-Telegram captured a coveted community service award plus six other honors in the 1989 Hearst Newspaper Writing and Photography Contests. The results, for newspapers in Hearst's community newspaper division, were announced Wednesday.

The newspaper was recognized for a four-part package of stories by Assistant City Editor Allen Howland that focused on issues involved in proposals to make the University of Texas of the Permian Basin a four-year institution and the potential effects on Midland College. According to judges, "The stories were carefully delineated to give readers a thorough background on the pros and cons of the proposals including one in which the local community college would be absorbed by the University of Texas System."

It is the fourth Hearst Public Service Award presented to the newspaper. Others were in 1980 for a series on a severe Midland housing shortage and local efforts that were being made to alleviate it; in 1982 for a series that looked into the issue of operating expenses of Midland Memorial Hospital during that boom period of expansion and renovation; and in 1984 for a special package of stories concerning plans for disposal of radioactive waste in West Texas.

The Reporter-Telegram also was recognized as "Best Written Hearst Community Newspaper" for 1989. The highly-regarded award is presented annually and is based on quarterly judging in categories including news, features, sports, headlines and enterprise reporting.

"While the Reporter-Telegram has been rated first in photographic excellence for several years this is the first time the newspaper has received the overall writing award and it's a major tribute to our news staff," said Jim Servatius, editor.

In addition to Howland, individual award winners included four other staff members:

— Chris Van Wagenen for a series of stories on Midland's efforts to broaden its economic base entitled "Diversification: Beyond the hype;"

— Myra Salcedo for her se-

Mardi Gras making way to Midland?

Staff Report

A full-blown, New Orleans-style Mardi Gras celebration could be coming to the Permian Basin if the Midland Jaycees have their way.

Orland Purcell, president of the Midland Jaycees, told the board of directors of the Midland Chamber of Commerce Wednesday that the Jaycees were working to initiate a Mardi Gras celebration in Midland, perhaps as early as this February.

"Over a five to eight year period," said Purcell, "we think we can see this event grow into a major West Texas attraction that could put Midland on the map."

The Mardi Gras celebration which originated in Biloxi, Miss., and was made famous by New Orleans, is the traditional weekend of revelry that precedes the 40 days of Lent, a religious observance.

Purcell said the celebration would consist of a Mardi Gras style parade, followed by a jazz festival, traditional jambalaya feed and masquerade ball.

Mom says Bush could have been governor

Bush

DALLAS (AP) — George W. Bush could have won the Texas governor's race "hands down," says his mother, Barbara Bush, who also defended GOP nominee Clayton Williams.

The first lady, making stops in Austin and Dallas, said she wasn't relieved that her son decided to stay out of what has become a vitriolic contest for the state's highest office.

"No, I think he would have won, hands down," Mrs. Bush told reporters.

The president's son at one time considered entering the race as a Republican. Mrs. Bush declined to comment further, saying, "I think the governor's race will be fine. I'm going to stay out of that."

Mrs. Bush made the statements Wednesday after visiting a child day care center and an adult literacy project at a community center, both near downtown Dallas.

She also attended a fund-raiser for former City Council member Jerry Rucker, who is running against Democratic Congressman John Bryant.

While shying away from broccoli and politics, Mrs. Bush eagerly discussed her hopes for the Texas Rangers, of which George W. Bush is part-owner.

"George W. is so thrilled with the Texas Rangers, he can hardly stand it," she said. "I hope to get to the World Series this year. I hope it will be the Texas Rangers."

Mrs. Bush refused to answer questions about "you-know-what," a reference to broccoli. The president's recent order that no more broccoli be served to him caused a flap in Washington. Growers eventually shipped a truckload of the vegetable to the White House. Mrs. Bush has said she loves broccoli.

Mrs. Bush visited with nine people involved in an adult literacy program for low-income women at the Martin Luther King Jr. Community Center. She hugged each one and said, "I'm very proud of you. You are all saints, all of you."

She also encouraged community members to keep volunteering to work for the program.

"Everyone laughs at George's 'thousand points of light,' but each one of those families is one," she said.

Earlier, Mrs. Bush read a story to about 30 pre-school children at a day care center run by Baylor Medical Center, also near downtown.

As the first lady walked in, a small red-haired boy exclaimed, "We saw you on TV!" Mrs. Bush laughed, and then led the children in saying the Pledge of Allegiance.

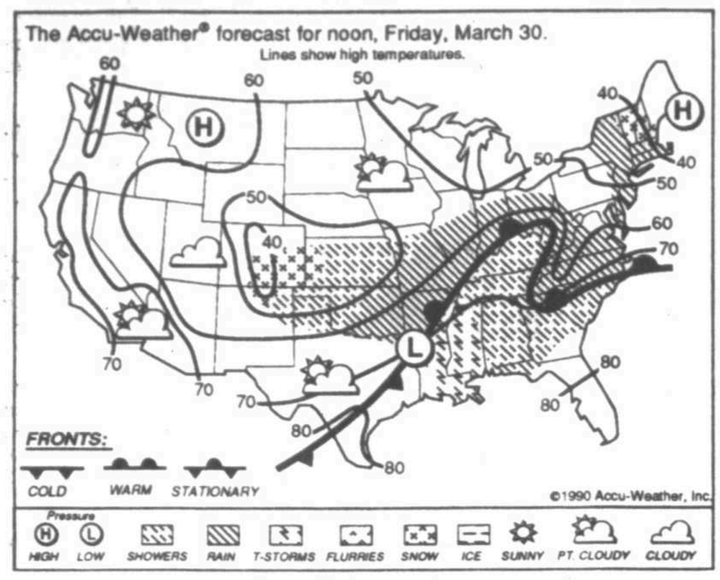
WEATHER SUMMARY



Cool, cloudy weather expected

Staff Report

Cloudy skies and cooler temperatures are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport, with a 20 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms. The low will be in the lower 40s and winds will be from the north at 5-15 mph.

Decreasing clouds are expected for Friday, with the high in the middle 60s and winds continuing from the north at 10-20 mph.

Wednesday's high of 80 was 12 degrees cooler than the record high of 92 set for that date in 1963. The overnight low of 50 was 32 degrees warmer than the record low of 18 set for this date in 1944.

STATE

A long-lasting cold front began to loosen its grip on the northern half of Texas Wednesday as a warm air mass moved northward through the state, accompanied by rain.

The warm frontal system created showers and thunderstorms through East and Southeast Texas. Marble-size hail fell in Dickinson and at Hempstead, with Houston getting 1.66 inches of rain, the National Weather Service said.

Meteorologists said the cold front had progressed southward through all of the Panhandle and stretched from Childress to just south of Lubbock.

Skies in West Texas were partly cloudy, but a few showers developed over the Trans Pecos region south of Midland.

Temperatures were in the 60s and 70s over most of the state. Some readings remained in the 50s in the foggy areas of extreme North Texas. Extremes ranged from 79 degrees at Midland and Harlingen to 53 degrees at Texarkana.

Winds gusted out of the southeast along the Gulf coast at 20 to 30 mph, shifting to the north at 15 to 20 mph in the Panhandle. Winds elsewhere were south to southwest at 10 to 20 mph.

It should be mostly cloudy across the state Thursday with scattered showers and thunderstorms and fair in the extreme west. Highs Thursday were expected to range from the 60s and 70s to near 80 in the far south.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Daylight-saving time returns Sunday

By Randolph E. Schmid

WASHINGTON (AP) — America will push back the hour of darkness starting Sunday.

Daylight-saving time is returning, bringing that extra hour of evening light to spend on outdoor projects, sports and barbecues or just fritter away.

The actual moment of change from standard to daylight time occurs at 2 a.m. for most of the nation. That's when clocks should be shifted forward an hour, although most Americans will make the change before retiring or in the morning.

The law calls for the change to be the first Sunday in April. Standard time returns Oct. 28, the last Sunday in October.

Although known as daylight-saving time, the change doesn't really save any daylight — or time. It simply moves an hour of light from morning to evening by delaying both sunrise and sunset an hour.

That means some children must wait for school buses in the dark in exchange for more time after school to play ball or join the family in backyard cookouts.

The idea has been attributed to various people, including Benjamin Franklin, but it was William Willett of England who launched the eventually successful campaign in 1907.

More time for evening recreation, less need for costly artificial lights and a possible reduction of evening crime were cited as major advantages.

It was the energy saving that prompted first use of daylight-saving time, in Germany in 1916. Other countries followed during World War I, returning to standard time afterward and resuming daylight time during World War II.

It was simple confusion that finally led to the adoption of the U.S. uniform time system in 1966, after allowing local communities to decide for or against daylight time resulted in a crazy-quilt pattern of time differences.

Daylight time is observed in all areas of the country except Arizona, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa and the part of Indiana in the Eastern time zone.

Surveys have found that daylight time is generally more popular in urban areas, where the afternoon and evening leisure time is appreciated.

Rural areas seem to be the focus of opposition, largely because of the loss of morning light for travel to work and school and adjusting to the change in dealing with livestock, since animals don't observe differences in clocks.

ANGELO: Midlander serves as observer at historic election

(From 1A)

Angelo said. However, he initially thought the delegation might be considered unwelcome visitors.

"I was concerned that we would be looked upon as patronizing or arrogant in our being there," he said. "There was nothing like that.

"The people in the polling places were very pleased to see us there, especially us Americans."

Members of the delegation were sent to counties throughout the country to ask the voters questions and observe the polling process. Angelo was sent to the town of Szeged (loosely pronounced "she-get").

He said one of his main interests was finding out why the Hungarians wanted a free election and what they hoped it would accomplish.

He said at first he feared that the Hungarians would expect immediate economic benefits from living in a free society — something that in reality would take years to accomplish.

But he said he soon found that the citizens were mainly interested in having freedom rather than more access to material objects.

"That meant a lot to me," Angelo said. "They want to be free. They hope in the long term that being free will bring the economic benefits.

"They were obviously very pleased to vote in an election that was free and that there were different parties to choose from."

The Hungarians openly expressed a strong dislike for Russians, as evidenced by one political party's campaign poster of former Russian leader V.L. Lenin with an orange smashed in his left eye.

Another party's campaign theme was "Wine, wheat and a beautiful wife," he said. That party received only 12 percent of the vote, he said.

None of the Communist parties fared well, receiving no more than 5 percent of the vote, he said.

A runoff election will be held April 8. The parties in that election are mainly conservative Democratic, he said.

Holly McGovern, executive assistant with the National Republican Institute for International Affairs, said the institute picked delegates that would be efficient in promoting democracy.

"Ernie Angelo is well versed and respected for his expertise in practical politics," Ms. McGovern said. "His expertise is valued as an observer.

"He knows what to look for in the election process. He is recognized as a national political leader who could look conceptually at the election process."

SMUGGLING: Three charged; Two held

(From 1A)

British Charge d'Affaires Robert Kealy was summoned to the Foreign Ministry in Baghdad and told by Deputy Foreign Minister Nizar Hamdoun that Iraq reserves the right to acquire advanced technology from other countries.

The Iraqi News Agency, which reported the meeting, also quoted Hamdoun as criticizing what he called a British campaign against the "so-called Iraqi nuclear program."

"The current British campaign is trying to provide the groundwork for an Israeli aggression on Iraq, reminding us of the year 1981," when Israeli jets bombed an Iraqi nuclear plant.

An unidentified Foreign Ministry spokesman also said in a statement carried by INA that Iraq has the right to take "measures" based on the principle of reciprocity. It did not elaborate.

Relations between Iraq and Britain have been strained since Iraq's execution March 15 of Farzad Bazoft, an Iranian reporter who was working for a British newspaper. Iraq accused Bazoft of spying. Britain reacted by withdrawing its ambassador from Iraq, but it has shown reluctance to let relations with Baghdad worsen further.

The British Customs and Excise office said today that investigations were under way in Scotland and northwestern England into alleged attempts to export naval equipment to Iraq, but it did not elaborate.

Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, reported that two arrests were expected, but a customs spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, would not confirm or deny that report.

Press Association also said authorities seized documents in Liverpool and Edinburgh on Wednesday in connection with the alleged naval smuggling.

Military experts said the capacitors are available only to a handful of major powers and their export is strictly controlled. They recalled two previous smuggling attempts, one involving Israel and the other Pakistan, both believed to have or to be trying to develop nuclear weapons.

News reports said the San Diego-area company CSI Technologies Inc. tipped off officials that Iraqi agents tried to buy the devices from the company. CSI officials were not immediately available for comment.

The Massachusetts company EG&G said late Wednesday that it also was cooperating with authorities.

President Bush called on nuclear suppliers "to exercise special restraint in providing materials related to the development of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and intermediate-range missiles in this volatile area."

While avoiding direct criticism of Iraq, Bush noted it was among the nations that signed the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Five people were arrested in and around London in the case. One, Iraqi national Omar Latif, was served with a deportation order. Another, a Cypriot with a British passport, was released after questioning.

In Washington, the U.S. Customs Service said sealed indictments had already been returned at San Diego District Court.

SESSION: Leaders leave empty-handed only state officer that can call a special session.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said the Senate likely will approve virtually the same $1.2 billion school finance plan the chamber endorsed during this past session.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and a co-author of the legislation with Hobby and Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, said he is peeved at the governor's office and House Republicans for not giving that bill more support.

Parker said he purposefully included such non-finance ideas as an exemplary schools program, excellence incentives and "site-based management" provisions to gain GOP support.

Now he is wondering if the extra effort will be worth it all over again, he said.

The bill's price tag is much higher than the $300 million that Clements has said the state should provide in additional education spending next year. The governor also has specified that all new education money must come from existing revenues.

Clements said he hasn't seen any bill that he could support and stay within his "no new taxes" parameters.

If lawmakers follow Lewis' timetable, Clements might place other issues on the session call.

Lewis did not mention an $850 million Department of Human Services shortfall among topics that the governor might allow lawmakers to consider.

Child hurt in shooting near school

ENNIS (AP) — One child was injured this morning in a shooting outside a central Texas junior high school here.

The shooting occurred at about 8 a.m. at the Ennis Junior High School.

Ennis is about 30 miles southeast of Dallas.

A police detective on the scene said two children were walking along a street near the school when an older model car pulled up alongside them and began chasing the two boys with the car.

The boys were chased around the corner, where the victim was shot in the right thigh with a small-caliber bullet.

The injured boy's name and condition were not immediately released, a spokeswoman at the Baylor Medical Center emergency room in Ennis said.

Police are looking for two men in the car. They said they have no motive for the shooting.

An Ennis police dispatcher said the youth's injuries were not believed to be life threatening. The dispatcher, who would not give her name says youth violence is rare.

"This is the first time something like this has happened here," the dispatcher said. "It could have been anybody. It could have been worse."

BUSH: He's busy with Rangers

(From 1A)

The first lady stopped in Dallas after leaving Austin, where she was inducted Tuesday in to the Texas Women's Hall of Fame.

In Austin, Mrs. Bush defended Republican gubernatorial candidate Williams, who has been criticized for a remark Saturday about rape.

Mrs. Bush said she is proud Williams apologized for the remark made at a cattle roundup in West Texas. Williams compared the cold, wet weather delaying the day's event to rape, saying, "If it's inevitable, just relax and enjoy it."

Legislation would limit SSC spending to $5 million

STATE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal spending on the super collider would be capped at $5 billion under legislation sent to the House by a committee divided over questions about the project's rising price tag and the role of foreign participants.

The House Science, Space and Technology Committee approved the bill 32-9 Wednesday after four hours of contentious debate.

The legislation, sponsored by Chairman Robert A. Roe, D-N.J., would cap federal spending $3 billion short of what the Energy Department believes will be necessary to construct the SSC, and hinges construction decisions on proof a key component will work.

Approval of the bill came after the panel defeated attempts by Rep. Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y., to bar all construction on the collider until the energy secretary certifies the superconducting magnets — a key component — could be mass produced by industry.

But the legislation says key construction decisions will depend on whether the superconducting magnets will work.

Chairman Robert A. Roe, D-N.J., claimed Boehlert's amendment could result in an 18-month delay costing $1.5 billion to $2 billion and urged his committee to either move ahead, can the program, but "don't let it linger in the swamp."

The panel also turned down a move by Rep. James F. Traficant Jr., D-Ohio, to ban foreign countries from participating if the president finds their trade practices discriminate against U.S. business.

The committee agreed, however, that U.S. taxpayers would finance a maximum of $5 billion to build what would be the world's largest scientific instrument.

Texas has committed another $1 billion, leaving the Energy Department to come up with some $2 billion in contributions from non-federal sources, such as foreign countries or foundations.

Deputy Energy Secretary Henson Moore, however, has said he did not think it was possible to win much more than $1 billion from foreign contributors.

Rep. Christopher Shays, R-Conn., called the $5 billion cap a "fraud" and a "joke" because it will be U.S. taxpayers — not Texas or foreign governments — that end up picking up the higher costs when the price rises.

"The cap to the SSC is what the debt ceiling is to the United States," Boehlert said.

The Energy Department originally estimated the total cost at $4.4 billion, then increased the price to $5.9 billion last year. DOE officials are now suggesting the cost could be closer to $8 billion.

Shays predicted Congress would have to authorize a higher cap later, adding: "Every indication is we're going to have to pay the difference. ... Why are we saying a $5 billion cap — it's a fraud."

Roe had suggested limiting overall spending at $7.5 billion, but the panel rejected that cap.

Some congressmen predicted the super collider's costs could go as high as $10 billion.

The SSC involves a 54-mile underground ring in which streams of protons, guided by the powerful magnets, would be hurled at almost the speed of light until they smash together and break into even smaller particles. Scientists say the SSC would recreate the physical state of the universe after the Big Bang.

Under the bill, the Energy Department would have to certify that prototype magnets can be produced by industry before construction begins, although design activities by the architectural engineers for the on-site facilities could proceed.

The magnet technology would have to be proven again, this time at the site, before the final 80 percent of funding is released, according to Roe's bill.

The bill would allow the construction of up to 8 miles of tunnel and other activities necessary to prove the magnets would work at the site.

Boehlert, who had sought to prevent any construction, including engineering and design work, pending certification that the prototype magnets would work, said he was not giving up his fight.

Communism's fall slightly overdone

If Hollywood were to make a movie about the "death" of communism, it likely would depict some modern-day hero, like Rambo, leading a one-man assault on the Kremlin and making Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev remove the shackles from the masses behind the Iron Curtain.

Hollywood's into the dramatic, needless to say.

In reality, though, communism was toppled in the 1980's not so much from without as from within. Fred Barnes, a roving editor for Reader's Digest, made that point in the March issue when he wrote that during the 1980s the system itself collapsed because it could not provide basic goods to consumers.

"Before, they had lacked consumer and luxury goods," he wrote. "Now perennial shortages of staples worsened as well. When Soviet miners went on strike in 1989, they demanded soap, toilet paper and sugar."

"In Poland," Barnes went on, "there was a toothpaste shortage because chalk (a key ingredient) was unavailable, even though Poland has ample chalk deposits."

Those were not the only indications of communism's inefficiency. Barnes revealed that jam produced there could not be exported because factories lacked the paper to print labels and that 40 percent of coal production was used up in extracting the product.

But that revelation was not Barnes' only contribution to understanding about what is happening in the communist world. Another part of the article insisted that "despite many eager declarations, the Cold War is not over. Communism is on the ropes but with a zombie-like momentum it thrashes on. There has been little evidence of any real contraction in Soviet military power."

Now, with Soviet troops staging a "pressure play" in Lithuania in an obvious play to force that Baltic country's hand in its quest for independence from the Soviet Union, Gorbachev's double-talk can be understood more clearly. When he says he is for more freedom he means exactly that. He is for more freedom for him, but for all the others behind the Iron Curtain he wants only continued repression.

Executions no bragging matter

The writers of "Saturday Night Live" didn't need to give the name of the state getting the old lampoon treatment recently. Everybody knew.

In one commercial spoof a candidate bragged about how many executions he'd helped carry out. Another candidate proposed new, more excruciating ways to execute. Another, the incumbent, promised ever more executions if re-elected. His campaign slogan: "Don't stop him before he kills again." Finally we had the hooded executioner himself. Since everyone was getting on the bandwagon, he was the most qualified to serve. His slogan: "Pull the lever for the guy who pulls the lever."

Parody is barely stranger than truth in this case. During Texas' primary gubernatorial campaign, Attorney General Jim Mattox and former governor Mark White engaged in a demeaning exchange: paid TV spots in which each took credit for executing people.

The interchange contributed nothing to the campaign debate. Not a single candidate for governor opposed the death penalty.

Regardless of whether or not one believes in the death penalty, executions are nothing to brag about. To do so is to pander to the lowest human quality next to the criminal quality itself.

Abortion's an issue

The politics of abortion is heating up and the issue is almost destined to play a role in the 1990 race for governor in Texas.

The Republican nominee, Clayton Williams, opposes abortion except in the case of incest, rape and the endangerment of a woman's life. The Democratic nominee — either state Treasurer Ann Richards or Attorney General Jim Mattox — will hold a pro-choice position on the issue.

The political volatility of the issue was again demonstrated recently in Illinois, where an unknown pro-choice candidate defeated the incumbent Republican minority leader of the Illinois House of Representatives, who opposed abortion.

In other parts of the country, abortion has amassed political energy. The Republican governor of Guam, a U.S. territory, has signed into law the most restrictive abortion legislation in U.S. history.

The Maryland Senate, following an eight-day filibuster that led to an impasse over the issue, finally agreed to a compromise that essentially would leave the decision to the voters.

The Idaho Legislature approved the most restrictive abortion law in any state, one designed to force the U.S. Supreme Court to review its 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision giving women the right to an abortion.

As these instances indicate, the interest in the abortion issue remains high, and there is every reason to expect the issue to play a prominent role in the Texas gubernatorial contest and subsequently in the Legislature.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, March 29, the 88th day of 1990. There are 277 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 29, 1973, the last U.S. troops left South Vietnam, ending America's direct involvement in the Vietnam War.

On this date:

In 1638, Swedish colonists settled in present-day Delaware.

In 1790, 200 years ago, the 10th president of the United States, John Tyler, was born in Charles City County, Va.

In 1812, the first White House wedding took place as Lucy Payne Washington, sister-in-law of President Madison, married Supreme Court Justice Thomas Todd.

In 1867, the British Parliament passed the North America Act to create the Dominion of Canada, effective July 1.

In 1882, the Knights of Columbus was chartered in Connecticut.

In 1951, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were convicted of espionage charges. They were executed in June 1953.

Ortega can be consoled by fortune

WASHINGTON — Pity Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega. He lost the election and now all he has to console him is the multimillion-dollar fortune that he and his family socked away in Panamanian banks while they feigned socialist austerity.

Anderson

Highly classified Central Intelligence Agency reports say the Ortegas are sitting pretty. Ortega and the Sandinista party ruled Nicaragua with a superficial commitment to distributing the wealth. The truth is, the wealth was spread to a limited inner circle who have now become Marxist millionaires.

We first reported on Ortega's capitalist ventures in 1985. The CIA has since been able to confirm our report and get more details through agents in Nicaragua and National Security Agency banking intercepts.

Ortega is scheduled to relinquish power on April 25 to Violeta Chamorro. In a gracious concession speech after the election last month, the hypocrisy slipped easily from his tongue: "The elections test the will of Sandinista revolutionaries who never have sought to cling to power, who were born poor and will be satisfied to die poor. ..."

Now, for a reality check: While the Sandinistas have been cleaning out their desks, they have passed a little piece of legislation that puts a lie to their socialist proclamations. The new law grants permanent property rights to any person now occupying government property. It is a blatant attempt to give more than 10,000 property titles to Sandinista leaders and followers to enrich themselves and strip Chamorro of a starting base.

One opposition leader called the law "the theft and decapitalization of the goods of the state." Another called it "a huge send-off party" for the Sandinistas.

The new law, combined with another one pardoning criminals for crimes committed until April 25, amounts to an invitation to widescale embezzlement over the next month, according to the CIA analysis.

We can't help but think back to the Sandinista's protests in 1985 when we reported on the property holdings and money-making ventures of party leaders. They claimed that each house the leaders lived in and each company they ran was actually owned by the state. Come April 25, even the Sandinistas will have to admit that the perks we said they enjoyed now belong to them free and clear.

Nicaraguans have had reason to suspect Ortega's taste for the finer things in life. In 1985 on a shopping spree in Manhattan, he and his wife bought $3,500 worth of designer eyeglasses. He likes to wear Italian leather jackets and other status symbols.

But — a point in his favor — Daniel Ortega is the least thieving of the Sandinistas. He lives modestly in a house in Managua. His brother, Army Chief Humberto Ortega, is another story. He goes home at night to an opulent housing compound complete with a small park.

A high-level Nicaraguan defector, Major Roger Miranda, confirmed some details of the Ortega lifestyle. The CIA has since uncovered several bank accounts in Panama traced to the Ortega brothers and totaling more than $3 million.

The CIA believes that Sandinista Interior Minister Tomas Borge is worth more than $1 million.

Another Sandinista leader, Bayardo Arce, has been sporting a new red Volvo and, according to one observer, "wears literally pounds of gold jewelry."

The Sandinista hierarchy shopped at special stores supplied with imported Western goods at cut-rate prices. They took vacations at Black Sea resorts in the Soviet Union and flew to Cuba for medical treatment. All of this was accomplished on official published salaries of about $50 a month.

President Bush is now pushing for $300 million in aid to Nicaragua. Our advice is to postdate the check until Chamorro is in office. Otherwise, the Sandinistas will find a way to give themselves a going-away present.

Party needs 'defining economic purpose'

WASHINGTON — Like an orchestra tuning up before a concert, the Democratic Party sounds more cacophonous than it soon will. They have no conductor, but Sen. Pat Moynihan has supplied some invigorating music.

Will

Sen. Barbara Mikulski of Maryland recently told some New Hampshire Democrats that to win, the party needs a "defining economic purpose," such as it has had, whenever it has won, since the days of Andrew Jackson's struggle over the Bank of the United States. The economic purpose about which Americans argue, perennially, is the proper balance of efficiency (growth) and equity (distribution). The purpose can be defined in small details.

Speaking in New Orleans to the moderate-to-conservative Democratic Leadership Council (DLC), L. Douglas Wilder, Virginia's new governor, boasted of cutting his state's "regressive sales tax" by exempting non-prescription drugs. And he complained that Virginia has "a $179-million balance" in the federal government's highway trust fund — the state's share of the trust fund being hoarded rather than spent, to mask the federal budget deficit.

Roads, non-prescription drugs — ubjects dry as dust? Think again, in light of the growing support for Moynihan's proposal to cut Social Security taxes. The proposal would put the system on a pay-as-you-go basis and deny the government surpluses of $1 billion a week now, $2 billion a week by 1993, $3 billion by 1997 and $4 billion by 2000.

Virginia's Sen. Charles Robb outlined to the DLC the "austerity trap" Democrats are in. Republican strategy is "to use large deficits to stifle public initiative and keep Democrats on the defensive over taxes." Meanwhile, "misuse of Social Security tax revenue keeps the deficit small enough to be manageable and large enough to keep Congress preoccupied with the Gramm-Rudman charade."

As Moynihan said in New Orleans (for the umpteenth time): The deficit is not a circumstance, it is a policy — a deliberate achievement. Moynihan did not say that the policy defines the Bush presidency, which is almost all politics, almost no governance. The Bush administration is part a singleminded strategy to use the Social Security surpluses to rent the White House for Republicans for the rest of the century, and beyond.

One way for Democrats to get off the defensive on taxes is for them to say over and over what Rep. Bill Gray of Pennsylvania, the third-ranking House Democrat, said in New Orleans: Nine out of 10 families are paying more of their family income in taxes today than they were a decade ago. Another way for Democrats to get off the defensive regarding taxes is to enact Moynihan's tax cut.

In New Orleans, Gray preceded Moynihan who was brandishing a report from the Bureau of the Census. The report says that it was not until 1988 that median family income finally got back to the 1973 level.

"Never," said Moynihan, "in American history has there been anything like this. Fifteen years. The Depression didn't last 15 years. The panics of the 19th century never did." From 1946, Americans never went even three years without reaching a new high for family income.

Moynihan's measure would end the scandal (as any Democrat should see it) of using a regressive payroll tax to service a deficit, with most interest payments going to wealthy individuals and institutions. The deficit is the basis of the "contrived austerity" that affects Virginia's roads and everything else.

"It was the Republicans," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen in New Orleans, "who built a mountain of debt so high that it now takes the personal income taxes of every American west of the Mississippi just to pay the interest." Bentsen flinches from Moynihan's proposal because it is unclear what revenues would replace the Social Security surplus stream. Moynihan says that is a good question, but secondary.

While the DLC was endorsing the principle of Moynihan's proposal, the Democratic National Committee, meeting in Indianapolis, was endorsing the proposal.

"This weekend," said Sen. Sam Nunn in New Orleans, "we've moved Moynihan from a tactical nuclear weapon to a strategic nuclear weapon." This is going to get interesting.

Media often unfair to 'The Other Woman'

If the Donald Trump divorce fracas has done anything, it has once again put the spotlight on what is known in social circles as The Other Woman. Fortunately, under the Freedom of Information Act, the nation's tabloids must give as much space to The Other Woman as they do to the wife.

Buchwald

Sometimes the press is not as fair toward The Other Woman as it is to the spouse.

My friend Debbie, who has been The Other Woman several times, believes that the system is unjust.

"Most women in this country have been The Other Woman at some time or another, and they should be the last ones to throw stones at another person's girlfriend."

"But," I protested, "we perceive The Other Woman as a home wrecker."

"Other Women don't break up homes. Those homes have either been broken up already or are about to be. All The Other Woman does is act as a support system when it happens. The wife likes to blame us for destroying the marriage because it makes her look good. That won't fly because I don't know of one Other Woman who can break up a home if nobody wants her to."

I said, "I believe that one of the reasons The Other Woman is distrusted is that in the majority of cases she always looks better than the wife. What I am really saying is that The Other Woman pays more attention to her wardrobe and make-up than a lady who cleans the dog dish every morning."

Debbie did not argue with me. "Maybe it's true, but then again The Other Woman has to work twice as hard to hold on to what little security she has. We don't own any casinos in Las Vegas, nor are Other Women given prenuptial contracts. All we have is our looks. Once we lose our paramour's undivided attention, it's Katy-out-the-door."

I told Debbie, "The problem is that many women are threatened by The Other Woman, particularly when she shows up on the front pages of the New York Daily News."

Debbie responded, "I suppose that they are, but let's be honest. In the pursuit of men, most women who now criticize have played the role of The Other Woman and relished stealing men away from the competition. What's the big deal if she happens to be a good friend of Donald Trump?"

"Because in Western culture, The Other Woman has no credentials. She is a huntress without a license so to speak. I personally have nothing against The Other Woman. I believe that when it comes to a happy marriage, a person should live and let live."

Debbie was determined to make her point. "Do you realize how many women eventually become the wives of the men they have been sneaking around with?"

"One hundred and four?" I guessed.

"Millions," cried Debbie. "As soon as they are married they are awash with respectability, and everyone but everyone forgets that they were once The Other Woman. The only people we consider scarlet women are those who didn't make it to the altar."

"It's true," I agreed. "There are many Other Women I have known who now wear rings on their fingers and are pillars of their communities."

"Someday, when all the accountants get finished with the case, Donald Trump's girlfriend, if she becomes Mrs. Trump, will be a woman of respect and reverence. She will also live happily ever after, unless another Other Woman steals Trump away from her."

I remarked, "It sounds as if it takes a lot of energy to get your man."

Debbie said, "Being The Other Woman means never having to say that you're tired."

STATE IN BRIEF

Extortion plot suspect freed

SHERMAN (AP) — A Gainesville man has been freed on $5,000 bond to await extradition to Delaware on a charge of extorting $130,000 from a Wilmington, Del., man.

U.S. District Judge Paul Brown set the bond Wednesday for Glenn Schaffer, 46, the owner of Schaffer Construction Co. He was arrested Tuesday night at his home.

Schaffer is accused by federal authorities in Delaware of attempting to extort money from Fred W. Dalton, a vice president with Reston Corp., a Wilmington construction company.

The FBI said the alleged extortion scheme stemmed from 1987 when Dalton, then living in Texas, borrowed $100,000 from Schaffer for a sand and gravel business, but filed for bankruptcy the same year.

Dalton was assaulted at his Wilmington home two weeks ago and given a note demanding payment of $130,000, the FBI said. Agents said the note included details on how and where to send the money.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Edmond Falgowski said Wednesday that Schaffer could be extradited to Delaware in about two weeks.

The charge carries a prison terms of up to 20 years, a $250,000 fine and three years' probation if convicted.

Hospital will close

GREENVILLE (AP) — Citizens Hospital of Commerce will close June 1 due to financial problems.

The Hunt Memorial Hospital District voted 5-4 Tuesday night to shut down the facility.

Attorney Harold Curtis read a resolution that said the 30-bed hospital has been a financial drain on the district he represents.

The board said, through the resolution, that it is in the best interest of the district as a whole to close Citizens Hospital.

After the meeting, the president of the Commerce Chamber of Commerce said an injunction will be sought to try and block the closure. Rob Brinkman said the board's decision is a political slap against Commerce, instead of a responsible fiscal decision.

About 300 supporters of Citizens Hospital attended Tuesday night's meeting.

Case returned to court

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals returned to a Dallas trial court Wednesday the case of a man sentenced to life in prison in the shooting murder of the unarmed mother of his child.

The trial court will decide whether Raul Paredes Reyes will get a new trial or simply a new punishment hearing, after the Court of Criminal Appeals ruled that the jury in his case was improperly instructed about the effect of the parole law on sentencing.

According to court records, Reyes fatally shot Mary Reyes with a handgun while their 3-year-old daughter was present.

Census Week set

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has designated this week as Census Week, saying it is vital that all Texans participate in the 1990 count.

"The 1990 census will affect federal funding for the state of Texas throughout the next decade," the governor said in a statement.

Man charged in murder

LUFKIN (AP) — A Colorado man faces death penalty murder charges in the slaying of a motel manager here.

George Dennis Sarna, 43, of Littleton, was charged Wednesday with capital murder in the stabbing death of Makanjibhai Patel, 53, owner and manager of the Holiday House Motel.

Patel's body was found in a bathtub at the motel Tuesday afternoon. Detective Rick Harrison said robbery appeared to be a motive.

Sarna also is wanted for questioning in Colorado in the deaths of a Colorado man and woman.

Developer says charge against daughter attempt to 'attack' him

LUBBOCK (AP) — D.L. "Danny" Faulkner says a federal indictment of his daughter on a jury tampering charge is an attempt to vindicate "the failure to get a conviction against me" in the nation's largest savings and loan fraud case to go to trial.

"I have been under attack by the U.S. government for eight years," Faulkner, a Garland land developer, said after Wednesday's grand jury action. "They spent 20 million dollars trying to get me ... now they have taken the last step.

"They are attacking me...the only way a parent can be attacked — through my daughter."

The federal grand jury's charge alleges Pamela Faulkner Tomalin, 27, "communicated, conversed and made contact" with juror Samuel J. Vera, 27, "for the purpose of creating a bias" to benefit her father.

Last spring and summer, Faulkner was on trial with six other men accused of defrauding five thrifts in Texas and Arkansas. The trial was moved from Dallas to Lubbock because of pretrial publicity.

"I am not guilty," Mrs. Tomalin said in a statement released by her husband Chris. "I will not plead guilty. I will not allow the government to hold me ransom in order to get my father. We will not submit to blackmail."

Vera was removed from the case on Aug. 3, 1989 and was replaced with an alternate by U.S. District Judge Sam Cummings, who presided over the seven-month-long trial.

A mistrial was declared Sept. 15 after jurors said they were hopelessly deadlocked 11-1 in favor of guilty verdicts for Faulkner and the six other defendants.

Cheryl Wattley, the attorney for Faulkner during the case, said she is confident Mrs. Tomalin did not contact Vera illegally.

"I would like to believe the government feels justified in a presentation to the grand jury," said Mrs. Wattley, who confirmed she would be involved with Mrs. Tomalin's case. "But I think a full trial is going to show Mrs. Tomalin did nothing criminal."

Roger McRoberts, assistant U.S. attorney in Lubbock, said Mrs. Tomalin's case would likely go to trial in about two months.

Faulkner said the government is trying to make the public think Vera had a voice in the deliberations.

"(The public) knows however that this juror was discharged weeks before the trial ended for numerous reasons, including going to sleep during the government's testimony," Faulkner said.

It became known as the Interstate 30 condominium trial, named for property owned by the failed Empire Savings and Loan of Mesquite. Empire was one of the thrifts from which the defendants allegedly bilked millions of dollars.

BEE SMART

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1990 Regional Spelling Bee March 31 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 30. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

pər-sō´nə

persona (noun) — If someone says you project a good "persona," that means the public role or character you project is acceptable and pleasing. The word describes the "front" individuals depict to society to express their role in society. Ancient Greek actors usually wore masks in theatrical performances. "Persona" is a Latin word meaning "mask." Eventually "persona" came to mean the character who wore the mask and from there came to mean a human being or "person."

Bill may affect planned dump site

EL PASO (AP) — A bill pending in Congress that seeks to restrict where low-level nuclear waste dumps can be built may help keep such a dump out of West Texas.

U.S. Rep. Robert W. Davis, R-Mich., introduced the bill. Denise Fee, his press secretary, said Michigan is experiencing a situation similar to Hudspeth and El Paso counties.

The counties have been fighting a proposed dump site in Fort Hancock, about 37 miles east of El Paso. The Hudspeth County site was chosen by the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority. A hearing on the matter is scheduled for mid-April.

Davis' bill, which was introduced early this month, makes it illegal to situate a dump site in a designated wet lands. But a controversy is brewing about the wetlands designation at the Fort Hancock site.

Other criteria to restrict the site include the presence of endangered species and proximity to an interstate highway.

U.S. Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, said he could not co-sponsor the bill until Davis asks for co-sponsorship of it.

"The wetlands provision in the bill would help El Paso because one section of the proposed Hudspeth County site has been termed as wetlands by the (U.S.) Corps of Engineers," said John Jackley, Coleman's press secretary.

But Ruben Alvarado, chief engineer with the authority, said the wetlands provision does not apply to the Fort Hancock site because it's not a legitimate wetlands.

"The only area I know of that's a wetlands is a stock tank near the site," Alvarado said.

KRON, Ohio – Quality is a word that is too often overused, but quality, at The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company however, is more than a word; quality is a rallying cry, a necessity, a requirement that every tire produced by this world giant has to meet.

Don't Drink The Water!

Long-term drinking of chlorinated water appears to increase a person's risk of developing bladder cancer as much as 80 percent, according to a major new study.

"Your water supply could be loaded with contaminant, including bacteria, pesticides, industrial runoff and lead. It is expensive to test for all the possible contaminant, so installing a basic Charcoal-Activated filter acts upon the most common ones.

Ralph Nader states that the approach has got to be Prevention at the Source. (Tap water in the home.)

Mattox challenges Richards to debate

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox challenged Treasurer Ann Richards to meet him in a debate before the April 10 gubernatorial runoff, and Ms. Richards challenged Mattox to release his income tax returns.

Neither did.

"I believe that Democrats must ask themselves the question, 'If Ann Richards is afraid to debate Jim Mattox, how is she ever going to deal with Clayton Williams and the Republicans in November?'" Mattox said Wednesday.

Williams, a millionaire Midland businessman, is the Republican nominee for governor.

Ms. Richards turned down two debate requests because of scheduling conflicts, her campaign aides said. "We're not going to let the attorney general dictate our schedule or strategy," said campaign spokesman Monte Williams.

Mattox said he would turn over his tax returns when Ms. Richards discloses her medical records from a chemical dependency center where she was treated for alcoholism.

Mattox has accused Ms. Richards of using illegal drugs when she was "a 46-year-old elected official," and said that's one reason she is dodging debates.

But, he said, he would consider laying off drug questions if that's what it takes to get her to debate him.

Ms. Richards, 56, was first asked about drug use during a televised debate before the March 13 primary.

"When she comes out and comes clean with the public, well then I'll let her look at my poor little humble returns," said Mattox.

But the Richards campaign said Mattox is not poor.

Glenn Smith, Ms. Richards campaign manager, said Mattox, who makes approximately $75,000 per year as attorney general, has accumulated $1.4 million in debt.

"The question is, how did someone with that kind of salary manage to borrow nearly one-and-a-half million dollars?" he said.

In other political developments, Gov. Bill Clements endorsed state Rep. Rick Perry in the GOP runoff for agriculture commissioner. Perry of Haskell faces Richard McIver, a consultant from Stafford.

The winner faces Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, a Democrat.

Judge drops female defendant in Avery lawsuit

KERRVILLE (AP) — Citing lack of evidence, a judge dropped a James Avery Craftsman Inc. officer as a defendant in a lawsuit filed by an ousted president of the religious jewelry company.

"They did not offer any evidence as to questions of fact," state District Judge V. Murray Jordan said Tuesday as he dismissed Sylvia Flores as a defendant in the case.

Former company president Charles Wolfmueller had sued the Kerrville-based company; James Avery, its founder and namesake; and Ms. Flores, vice president of sales.

Wolfmueller claims he was wrongfully fired and denied an opportunity to take part in a stock buyout plan that would have increased his ownership in the corporation.

Fired from his post in November, Wolfmueller is seeking $12.3 million from Avery and his company.

He also wanted $24,000 from Ms. Flores, who he claimed had an "extramarital relationship" with Avery that influenced his business decisions.

The trial, which is entering its 15th day today, has attracted dozens of spectators to the Kerr County Courthouse.

Jordan ruled the 12-person jury will determine if a stock redemption contract existed and, if so, whether fraud was committed in relation to the contract.

The judge also said jurors will decide if a search of Wolfmueller's desk invaded his privacy.

Avery denies he and Ms. Flores had an affair or that he ever agreed to the stock deal.

MISD trustees to consider school renovation

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Washington Elementary School Principal Melva Cardenas wants something done about her school's leaky roof.

"We're in need of the roof being replaced," Ms. Cardenas said. "There is one wing that has three classrooms that do leak, and one of those rooms is the library."

Ms. Cardenas may get her wish next year if Midland Independent School District trustees approve renovation plans for MISD elementary schools.

MISD officials have recommended renovation projects at three schools per year over the next 10 years, staff architect James W. Riggen said Wednesday.

The 16 elementaries built before 1960 will be considered for renovation first, Riggen said, and schools will be prioritized for renovation based on need.

Washington, South and Sam Houston elementary schools are at the top of the renovation list, a report approved by trustees this week shows.

"We looked at building code compliance, the condition of the site, the condition of the existing building," Riggen said of the prioritization process. "We looked at the condition of the structure, the interior and exterior appearance of the building and the spatial needs of the facility."

Wilson Heidelberg, MISD executive director of auxiliary services, said his office has recommended $500,000 per school, or $1.5 million a year, for elementary renovations.

"That was just a recommended amount, and the board did not act on that," Heidleberg said. "The board authorized the district to design renovations at those three buildings and come back to them with a cost estimation for approval."

The board could approve renovation money for next year's school budget, Heidelberg said.

"We're going to start out with the older elementaries that have never been renovated," Heidelberg said. "But the 10-year program would address all MISD buildings. We'll eventually do all those buildings."

Riggen, who was hired by MISD in January, said work could begin on Washington, South and Sam Houston in the summer of 1991. Renovations probably will not include building expansion, Riggen said.

"My job...is to help eliminate some of the space problems within some of the existing buildings, but these will not be major additions to the schools under this renovation package. To go in and drastically increase the area of the buildings is not in the scope of the work at this time."

Riggen said electrical systems will be overhauled to accommodate computer use, and kitchen and administrative areas will be "upgraded."

"We're going to renovate the mechanical and ventilation systems, the interior finishes, which includes floor coverings, walls, ceilings and lighting," he said.

Joe Cummins, MISD long-range planning director, said school renovations are not a substitute for new buildings.

Long-range plans call for construction of a new junior high school and a new elementary school, completion of Bush Elementary School and renovation of high school science labs. Trustees also have discussed building an alternative education center and adding multi-purpose rooms and classroom "pods" to some elementary schools.

"The long-range plan deals with the need for new facilities, but the board has developed a different set of plans that deal with the refurbishing of older buildings," Cummins said.

Dorsey Rushing, Sam Houston principal, said he is eager for his school to receive a facelift.

"I think it will improve the morale of everyone," said Rushing, whose school was built in 1951. "It will make a much more pleasant learning environment for kids once these renovations are complete."

Drug cases end in plea bargains

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

For city undercover agents, the calvary has finally arrived.

Down the street at the Midland County Courthouse, drug dealers are plea bargaining to some stiff sentences, saving the judicial system time and taxpayers dollars, according to law enforcement officers.

Sentences on an average ranging from 15 years to 55 years have been handed down in 16 of 27 cases that were part of a Dec. 6 grand jury sealed indictment.

The individual cases were a culmination of months of investigative work conducted by Midland Police Department undercover agents. Most involved "career criminals," Chief Richard Czech said.

"We did a good job as far as the arrests, but the D.A.'s (district attorney) office has done an outstanding job in getting these sentences," said the chief.

Czech praised District Attorney Al Schorre, who committed one full-time attorney to work the drug dealing cases. That attorney — Robin Sims — also received high marks from the chief.

Only one case to date has gone to trial.

That case involved Adam N. Conzales, 33, address unknown, who was arrested Sept. 22, 1989 on three counts of delivering heroin. Conzales was convicted to 40 years at the Texas Department of Corrections.

Hobby says DHS budget deficit threatens welfare, nursing homes

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby Wednesday warned that "scores of thousands" of Texans could be denied nursing home care and other welfare benefits due to poor projections by the Department of Human Services, but Gov. Bill Clements dismissed talk of a crisis.

Clements said he will wait for progress on school finance reform, which has stalled in the House, before he considers opening the next legislative session to other issues, but Hobby said a projected $152 million welfare shortfall demands immediate attention.

"We're about six weeks, seven weeks ... away from going over a cliff on that issue, and that has a shorter time fuse on it than the education problems do," Hobby said after the Senate adjourned on the final day of the third special session.

The state must come up with $77.6 million in state money to remain eligible for $74.4 million in matching federal funds for the West Texas is a lot more than its towns, cities

This place called West Texas is no real mystery. Not entirely. Yet, it is so many things both touchable and out of reach.

Todd

The West is what it is. And the reactions of its denizens, those that walk, runs, crawl, slither, burrow, swim, float, and fly, help determine what West Texas seems to be.

Indeed, it is mysterious. The original of the Marfa Lights is still embedded in folklore and scientific investigation.

West Texas can be, in a sense, "hostile" to its creatures and plants when they suffer from prolonged drought.

West Texas can be, and is, resplendent at dawn and dusk. Never can a sunrise or a sunset be boring. At the horizons, the "Hallelujah Chorus" performs twice daily. Sometimes, though rarely, it is muted with the blessed overcast that often signals rain and the renewal of life that water brings.

West Texas is more than the grassland plains, which is often rooted with hardy mesquite and roamed by the cunning coyote. It is more than underground fields wherein modern-day "explorers" called geologists, drillers and wheeler-dealers — "deal-makers" — seek their fortunes in black gold.

Some find it. Some don't. Some go broke quicker than others.

West Texas is more than oil-boom ghost towns, such as Texon, Best, and Crossett, and more than oil-boom communities such as McCamey, Crane, Iraan and Wink.

It's more than railroad towns, including old Big Spring and its faded Texas & Pacific Railway roundhouse, and Big Lake, which early on into the century, beat out Stiles for the Reagan County seat after the Orient Railroad came to West Texas.

It's more than old town Rankin, where sheep, goats and oil get more play than cattle and cotton. It's more than Andrews, which openly touts free enterprise and Americanism, and more than Stanton, the old Marienfeld, which became blends of cattle and cotton, Catholics and Protestants, oil and gas.

It's more than Lamesa, where cotton ranks as highly as does petroleum in Midland and Odessa.

It's more than the old towns, communities, and schools, now mostly memories, such as Frankel City, Florey, Sparenberg, Germania, Warfield, and Prairie Lee, which helped make up the new Greenwood community.

It's more than Midkiff, the old Hadacol Corner back in the Spraberry Oil Field boom days, and it's more than the ranching town of Garden City or the cotton communities of St. Lawrence, Patricia, Klondike, Lenorah and Tarzan.

West Texas is much more than the rival feisty towns-turned-cities of Midland and Odessa, where "diversify" is rapidly becoming the economic catchword in the post oil-boom days. It is places such as Orla and Notrees and places without names. It is Alpine and Fort Davis, Terlingua and Lajitas, Study Butte and Stafter, Candelaria and Presidio, Pecos and Balmorhea.

West Texas is a lot of land, draws, old buffalo wallows, and streams that flow in rainy seasons.

It is a cosmos within The Cosmos: from the flatland plains to the mountainous regions of the Davis Mountains and Big Bend National Park and Guadalupe Mountains National Park.

Even in a civilized society, so-called, West Texas is wild amid the tameness.

The land will prevail even as the people exploit the land in trying to make the fair earth produce survival and sustenance and even wealth for a few — for awhile. The riches are fleeting.

West Texas is more than plains, mountains, ravines, mesas, and mountains. It is mostly dialogue.

The dialogue is among the people, between the people and the land, between life (fauna) and life (flora), between the horizons. That is West Texas.

Striking Greyhound bus driver Rod Rogers pickets in front of the Amarillo terminal with the help of "Striker," a toy robot.

Striking drivers' suit dismissed

CLEVELAND (AP) — A federal judge on Wednesday dismissed a lawsuit filed by striking bus drivers against Greyhound bus operations in Cleveland, saying he doesn't have jurisdiction in the case.

"I'd like to have jurisdiction, because I'd like to help ... settle the strike," said U.S. District Judge Alvin I. Krenzler.

Krenzler agreed with attorneys for the bus line who said the complaint should be handled through the proper administrative agency such as the U.S. Department of Transportation or the U.S. attorney general.

Melanie Scofield, spokeswoman for Greyhound at its Dallas headquarters, said the Cleveland complaint appears to be the first such strike-related lawsuit filed against the company.

The Cleveland Greyhound workers filed the civil lawsuit March 12, alleging that the operations in Cleveland are unsafe because of inadequate training of replacement drivers and inadequate bus maintenance during the strike.

The complaint against Greyhound Lines, Inc. in Cleveland was filed by Amalgamated Transit Union Local 1043, its president, Charles F. Flanagan; and Guy Selinka, a striker injured in the picket line in Cleveland on March 2, the day the nationwide strike began.

Alan Belkin, attorney for the union, said he will file the complaint with the Transportation Department.

"Hopefully, the DOT will subpoena the records we asked for with this suit," Belkin said. "The people monitoring the (Greyhound bus) garage here haven't seen any maintenance going on."

The union alleged that replacement drivers weren't qualified and weren't trained according to federal guidelines. It also alleged that the company failed to provide bus maintenance during the strike.

The union had sought a preliminary and permanent injunction against operating buses that haven't been properly maintained and that are driven by replacement employees not adequately trained.

The union local represents about 130 workers.

The company has said the lawsuit was a ploy to stop the bus line's operations.

KMB has 2 events on clean-up agenda

Staff Report

Keep Midland Beautiful (KMB) is gearing up for major spring cleaning with two big events on its agenda.

Saturday will be KMB's third annual Glad Bag-A-Thon along the railroad right-of-way through the city. More than 1,500 volunteers are expected for the 9:30 a.m. event, according to Keep Midland Beautiful director Sharla Hotchkiss.

Participants are expected to collect more than 1,600 pounds of litter and recyclables this year, up slightly from the 1,400 pounds picked up by 1,000 volunteers last year.

"The Glad Bag-A-Thon program demonstrates that the solution to today's solid waste management crisis is in our hands," Hotchkiss said. It "provides our community with the educational information and opportunity to do something positive to improve our local environment."

KMB is arranging with Midland Recycling to transport and recycle aluminum cans and plastics collected during the clean-up day. A team of llamas will be used to transport some of the refuse to railroad cars along the right-of-way.

Glad Wrap & Bags, as national sponsor of the Bag-A-Thon, is providing trash and recycling bags in Midland and more than 110 other cities.

Other Texas cities participating include Dallas, El Paso, Fort Worth, Haltom City, Iowa Park, Lubbock, Plano and San Antonio. Last year more than 318,000 volunteers in 69 cities collected more than 8,000 tons of litter and salvaged 2 million pounds of recyclable materials.

After the clean-up a celebration for volunteers will commence at 1 p.m. at Marienfeld and Industrial at 1 p.m.

KMB also is currently accepting telephone and mail reservations for the large item pick-up of its Citywide Spring Clean-Up Campaign. Old furniture and appliances; bundled tree limbs, leaves and grass; lumber and other rubbish can be called in before April 6 to be picked up in the alleyway of any Midland home during the week of April 16-21.

Judicial selection extension given

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal appeals court has given Texas lawmakers more time to deal with how state judges are selected, and Gov. Bill Clements says that extra time was "sorely needed."

Legislators ended a special session on public school finance and judicial election reform Wednesday without sending a bill on either issue to Clements.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton of Midland last year ruled that the countywide method of electing state judges in nine urban counties violated the federal Voting Rights Act.

Bunton ordered special elections for 115 judges this year, but the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans stopped that order to give state lawmakers a chance to act. Counties in the case are Dallas, Harris, Bexar, Tarrant, Travis, Lubbock, Midland, Ector and Jefferson.

On Wednesday, the 5th Circuit Court said the Legislature doesn't have to act until an appeal in the case has been decided.

Teen injured in accident

Staff Report

A Midland teen-ager was in satisfactory condition today following a Wednesday night traffic accident involving a truck and a car, Department of Public Safety and hospital officials confirmed.

Kerry Dan Adams, 17, of Midland, was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital with a fractured right leg, a hospital spokesperson said.

A DPS spokesperson said the accident occurred about 9:45 p.m. Wednesday on northbound Texas 349 about two miles south of Midland.

The truck, driven by Melvin Fleming of Midland, collided with a 1981 Honda two-door driven by Adams. Adams was wearing a seat belt when the accident ocurred, reports show.

Highway Department crews were called to clean up about 80 gallons of diesel fuel which spilled from the truck's ruptured fuel tank, the DPS spokesperson said.

Army copter crashes

FORT BLISS (AP) — A helicopter carrying two soldiers that was being used to check Fort Bliss range land crashed, seriously injuring the two crewmen, an Army spokesman said.

The Wednesday morning crash of an OH-58 Kiowa scout helicopter was the second helicopter crash involving Fort Bliss soldiers in the last six days.

Injured in the crash were 1st Lt. John Vaughn, 27, and Chief Warrant Officer 2 Gerhard Turner, 28, both members of 4th Squadron, 3rd Armored Calvary Regiment, Rose said.

Both were in serious but stable condition at Beaumont Army Medical Center.

The crash occurred on McGregor Range, about 30 miles northeast of the Texas-New Mexico border.

"They were out doing a range sweep that is a routine operation they go through every day," he said. "They fly over impact areas to look over the range to make sure no one has strayed or wandered onto the range ... they do it preparation for range firing maneuvers."

Rose said the crash Wednesday and the one that occurred Friday are unrelated. There was no fire or explosion in either crash.

Schorre said those with prior convictions were given tougher sentences then those with no known priors.

"These weren't flip-of-the-coin type offers," said Schorre. "Overall, the offers made across the board were consistent. We looked at the types of drugs that were sold, how many deliveries they made and whether they had any priors."

The district attorney said he expected the same treatment will be given to the next group that comes through. "I think we've gotten some significant time."

Both Schorre and Czech said disposal of the current caseload already has had a definite impact on burglary and theft — both of which are down.

Czech said many of the sentences were given to career criminals, who were known among veteran officers.

DHS: Hobby proposes cigarette tax to make up shortfall rest of the fiscal year, which ends Aug. 31.

For the two-year fiscal period, agency officials project an $850 million deficit in state and federal revenue due to unanticipated increases in demand for welfare programs.

Hobby has proposed a cigarette tax increase for the DHS shortfall, but Clements ruled out any tax increase. "I'm on a different road perhaps, and I haven't seen a road sign that says a cliff is ahead, so we'll wait and see what happens," Clements told reporters.

If the shortfall is not addressed, Hobby said, the threat of nursing home residents put out on the streets "is a very distinct possibility."

A spokesman for the Texas Health Care Association said many nursing homes that depend on reimbursement from the state are threatened with bankruptcy if the state suspends payments, as the DHS staff has proposed.

The group is preparing a lawsuit to force the state to increase rates for Medicaid patients, as promised in the budget, said Sara Speights, spokesman for the health care association. The lawsuit also will seek court oversight of the welfare system, she said.

Hobby, president of the Senate, suggested that Rob Mosbacher Jr., chairman of the Department of Human Services, provided artificially low budget requests to the Legislature in 1989 to avoid forcing a tax increase.

"The department submitted to the last regular session of the Legislature figures which I believe the department knew to be false at the time," Hobby said. "You have to hold the chairman of the board, Mr. Mosbacher, responsible."

Hobby added, "I think, you can use the word low-balling or you can use the word falsification, either one."

McDonald's says it will buy potatoes, abortion law or no

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Some businesses already are snubbing the state over a tough anti-abortion law, but McDonald's Corp. said its french fries will be cut from Idaho potatoes no matter what.

Gov. Cecil Andrus said he will act by Saturday on the nation's most restrictive state abortion law, passed last week by the Legislature, and that the boycott by abortion rights supporters will not be the deciding factor in his decision.

Some 1,000 abortion rights advocates and 600 anti-abortion activists held separate Capitol rallies Wednesday to sway the governor.

Andrus has said he opposes abortion except in cases of rape, incest and to save the life of the woman.

"I'm going to do what I think is right," Andrus said. "The economic things, those I'm going to have to handle no matter how it plays out."

Susan Boresow, regional marketing supervisor for McDonald's Corp., said the company does not involve itself in personal, ethical, political or religious issues and would not take a stand on the Idaho abortion issue.

'I'm going to do what I think is right....The economic things, those I'm going to have to handle no matter how it plays out.'

—Cecil Andrus, Governor, Idaho

"Our customers represent all points of view, and we serve all of them," she said. McDonald's is a big buyer of Idaho potatoes.

But officials from the state's food processing, printing, travel and resort industries have already lost orders, Andrus said.

Commerce Director James Hawkins said anti-abortion forces have promised to buy more Idaho products, but those offers won't make up for the boycott threat.

Andrus declined to identify the companies affected so far or to give dollar figures for losses.

Abortion rights activists promise to challenge the law in what could provide the U.S. Supreme Court the context it needs to overturn the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion.

In West Virginia, anti-abortion activists are adding bags of Idaho potatoes to their grocery lists.

"We're issuing a challenge to the God-fearing people of West Virginia," said Avis Hill, spokesman for the 200-member West Virginia Parents for Life. "We're saying to them, if they choose not to buy Idaho potatoes, we'll buy an extra bag and give it to a food pantry."

The bill would ban 90 percent of the more than 1,500 abortions performed in the state each year. Abortion would be banned except in cases of nonstatutory rape reported within seven days; incest if the victim is under 18; severe fetal deformity and a threat to the life or physical health of the woman. It would take effect July 1.

House panel more than doubles Bush request for Eastern Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel is proposing $719 million in new aid to Eastern European countries overhauling their economies, more than double the amount President Bush is seeking.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., who proposed the enlarged package for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, said it would help soften the shock as countries such as Poland undertake "cold-turkey" switches from centrally planned to market economies.

As inefficient state enterprises are shut down and people are thrown out of work, unrest will inevitably result that could threaten the new democratic governments, Solarz told the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

"It could create a socially and politically explosive situation," he said. "We need to do more than we've done so far."

Poland and Hungary are receiving $293 million in U.S. cash aid this year, and the administration has proposed $300 million for Eastern Europe in the new fiscal year.

Meantime, the House speeded up the timetable for considering Bush's request for aid to new democracies in Central America. The chamber scheduled action today on a $2.4 billion money bill that includes $420 million for Panama and $300 million for Nicaragua.

The administration has agreed to pay for the Panama and Nicaragua aid through cuts in Pentagon projects and accounts totaling $1.8 billion.

The ultimate fate of the bill containing the Eastern Europe money remained unclear. The Foreign Affairs Committee planned to hold it over until next week pending the outcome of planned talks between Secretary of State James A. Baker III and lawmakers concerned about human rights issues in El Salvador.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, meanwhile, adopted a pared-down version on Wednesday that largely tracked the administration's Panama-Nicaragua request and added no provisions on unrelated matters such as Eastern Europe.

Poindexter avoids 'putting noose around his neck'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The defense kept former national security adviser John M. Poindexter off the witness stand at his Iran-Contra trial to keep him from "putting the noose around his own neck," one legal observer says.

Having Poindexter testify would have risked destroying any doubts about the prosecutors' case planted by defense attorney Richard Beckler, said Georgetown University law professor Paul Rothstein.

Prosecutor Dan Webb would have asked, "'Did Reagan ever authorize you to lie to Congress?' Poindexter would probably have to say 'No,'" Rothstein said.

"He would hit every one of those points where a seed of doubt has been laid and the last thing the jury would hear is Poindexter putting the noose around his own neck," Rothstein said.

The general rule among white-collar criminal defense lawyers is to put the defendant on the witness stand, experts say.

"Acquittals are very rare when a defendant does not take the stand," said Rothstein, who has attended Poindexter's Iran-Contra coverup trial.

The defense rested its case on Tuesday, and final arguments are scheduled for Friday in U.S. District Court.

Beckler, asked Tuesday why he did not call Poindexter to the stand, said, "Because I don't believe the government proved its case."

Rothstein said, "When a defendant does not take the stand, the jury supposes you are covering up something," even though the judge instructs ther panel not to hold the accused's silence against him.

Poindexter avoided what observers agree would have been withering cross-examination by Webb, who hammered away at former White House aide Oliver L. North for 3½ days.

The decision probably focused on the question of "were there any facts he could clarify or bring to the table that weren't already there," said E. Lawrence Barcella, a prominent defense lawyer in Washington. "Or were you just going to give a very good lawyer an opportunity to cross-examine him."

Generally, the accused would be expected to testify "if you've got a case where the only person who can explain things is the defendant," Barcella said. "But here you have all kinds of people who were explaining the events."

Poindexter is accused of conspiring to obstruct congressional inquiries into the Iran-Contra affair by lying and destroying documents. He also is accused of making false statements in meetings with lawmakers and in a letter to Congress denying that North was secretly helping the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Another danger Poindexter avoids is the possibility of a perjury charge if he contradicted sworn testimony he gave congressional hearings about the Iran-Contra affair in 1987, Rothstein said.

Poindexter told lawmakers he didn't tell President Reagan about the diversion of U.S.-Iran arms sale profits to the rebels.

Poindexter testified then that he kept Reagan in the dark to give the president credible deniability if the covert Contra aid operation were exposed.

But Rothstein said that version of events doesn't support Poindexter's contention that he had no motive to lie to Congress because he acted with Reagan's authority. And he would be courting a perjury charge if he provided a different explanation to the jury, Rothstein said.

The defense tried to show that a 1986 meeting with lawmakers, at which Poindexter is accused of lying, was really a formal congressional proceeding to which the former national security adviser made false statements about the Iran-Contra affair.

It raised the possibility that the document North said he saw Poindexter tear up was not a politically embarrassing document signed by Reagan that authorized U.S. involvement in a 1985 shipment of Israeli Hawk missiles to Iran.

In his seventh book since leaving the presidency Richard Nixon, 77, shows himself to be a man at peace with himself.

Book's by Nixon, on Nixon

By Mike Feinsilber

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another new Nixon emerges from Richard Nixon's new book — at 77, a man at peace with himself who says that despite the ordeals and crises "I can look back and say that the day has indeed been splendid."

Nixon still has the media to kick around — "too often they shoot first and literally ask questions later," he says, adding that Watergate "has elevated Peeping Tom journalism and character assassination to a new level of respectability."

Still, instead of an enemies list, Nixon prints a list of his friends among journalists and says, "I could not possibly have gone as far as I did in the political arena without having the benefit of some balanced as well as negative coverage."

"In the Arena," his seventh book since leaving the presidency, is his most personal.

"In the end what matters is that you have always lived life to the hilt," he writes. "I have won some great victories and suffered some devastating defeats. But win or lose, I feel fortunate to have come to that time in life when I can finally enjoy what my Quaker grandmother would have called 'peace at the center.'"

The book sums up a lifetime of victories, defeats and comebacks.

Almost dropped as the Republican vice presidential candidate in 1952 because of questions about a "slush fund," he saved himself with an emotional television address. In 1960, he was defeated for the presidency by John Kennedy in an election that he says his wife, Pat, still thinks was stolen from him.

Two years later, he ran for governor of California against Pat's advice ("she was right," Nixon says) and bitterly announced his retirement from politics, only to bounce back in 1968 to finally win the presidency.

But his second term was spoiled by scandal. Midway, he resigned. A tape recording showed that he had tried to cover up White House involvement in the Watergate break-in at Democratic headquarters, and impeachment appeared certain.

Nixon offers his standard defense on Watergate — that he was held to a higher standard than others.

"All administrations have sought to protect themselves from the political fallout of scandals," he writes. The break-in at Democratic headquarters and the coverup were illegal, but "not unusual in political campaigns."

Other presidents, he adds, taped private conversations and suffered no rebuke for it.

And most people and other presidents used foul language, he says. "But since neither I nor most other presidents had ever used profanity in public," people were shocked when he released the White House tape transcripts and all its notations of "expletive deleted."

Nixon says that despite his spats with the press — "you won't have Nixon to kick around any more," he told reporters after the gubernatorial defeat in 1962 — he has had good relations with many journalists.

He lists 73 of them by name, but leaves some others out "since being considered fair on Nixon by Nixon would almost certainly put them in dutch with their colleagues."

Bomb found in locker, students evacuated

PORT JEFFERSON, N.Y. (AP) — Police found an explosive device Wednesday in a locker at a high school after a bomb threat forced the evacuation of students.

Police were investigating to find who planted it and why.

Police spokesman Randy Jaret said the device was discovered in a locker in the boys' locker room of Port Jefferson High School. Police were examining it.

Police said a bomb threat was called in to the school and reported to police at 8 a.m. The caller said the bomb was set to go off at 10 a.m. A few moments later, the person called back to say the bomb would go off immediately.

The 935 students were evacuated and sent home.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company hereby gives notice that it has filed an application requesting the PUC to declare Southwestern Bell's intrastate Billing and Collection market subject to significant competition and to authorize the following form of pricing flexibility: detariffing of the rates, terms and conditions of the Billing and Collection services now offered in Section 8 of Southwestern Bell's intrastate Access Service Tariff. Approval of the application as filed would result in all tariff sheets in Section 8 (Billing and Collection) of Southwestern Bell's Intrastate Access Service Tariff being cancelled, and the service thereafter being provided on a contract basis. Through this application, using procedures established by P.U.C. SUBST. R. 23.27, Southwestern Bell seeks to obtain uniformity of rates, rules and regulations for intrastate and interstate Billing and Collection services.

Approval of this application would remove all rates, terms and conditions applicable to billing and collection from Southwestern Bell's Intrastate Access Service Tariff. Intrastate billing and collection service would continue to be subject to PUC regulatory oversight only to the extent that (1) Southwestern Bell would be required to maintain current price lists at the Commission for the service, and (2) the revenues or losses from the service would be subject to the regulatory treatment specified in P.U.C. SUBST. R. 23.27(p). Further, under procedures established by P.U.C. SUBST. R. 23.27, the PUC's General Counsel, the Public Utility Counsel or any affected person could seek a subsequent review of the rates, terms and conditions of this service.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings, or who would like further information, should call or contact the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, (512) 458-0100. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Information Office at (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221, teletypewriter for the deaf.

The PUC has assigned this matter to Docket No. 9224. A prehearing conference will be held on April 19, 1990, at 9:00 a.m. at the Commission's offices at 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard in Austin, Texas. The deadline for filing motions to intervene is April 26, 1990.

Art exhibit roils Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (AP) — A major donor to an arts fund denied a report Wednesday that he threatened to withhold contributions if the fund didn't sever ties to a museum exhibiting sexually explicit photographs by the late Robert Mapplethorpe.

The Cincinnati Post reported that George L. Ballou II had confirmed his participation in a campaign to get the Contemporary Arts Center to cancel the exhibition including the sexually graphic pictures.

Ballou owns West Shell Inc., the city's largest real estate agency.

The museum withdrew Sunday from the Fine Arts Fund's $5 million annual fund-raising drive, saying it wanted to protect other arts groups from a boycott by donors.

Ballou said he opposes the exhibit as pornographic, but said he never threatened to withhold corporate or personal donations from the fund. He said he is the 17th largest donor, but declined to give a specific figure.

'For my personal donation, I think the exhibit is inappropriate and pornographic....I guess what I resent is the implication that we are applying pressure.'

—George Ballou II, Cincinnati art donor

"For my personal donation, I think the exhibit is inappropriate and pornographic," Ballou said. "We have told our people, 'This is where we stand, and let your conscience be your guide.' I guess what I resent is the implication that we are applying pressure."

Officials of the Fine Arts Fund declined to comment. Lee A. Carter, chairman of the Institute of Fine Arts, which administers the fund, has said the group has received complaints but no explicit threats to withhold donations over the exhibition.

Nine of the 175 photographs in the exhibition depict homoerotic and sadomasochistic sex acts.

"I don't think it's an issue of nudity or art. But do we have a right to force people to see it our way? Absolutely not," Ballou said.

Ballou said he is not involved with the anti-pornography group Citizens for Community Values.

Police Chief Larry Whalen and Hamilton County Sheriff Simon Leis Jr. have said they plan to investigate whether to file obscenity charges over the show. The museum filed a lawsuit Tuesday seeking a jury's judgment before the six-week show opens April 6.

Installation assistants at the Cincinnati Contemporary Arts Center set up photographs by Robert Mapplethorpe Wednesday. Sexually explicit photos in the exhibition have ignited a local controversy, with some critics labeling the artworks obscene.

Man's coma revival puzzles all

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The doctor of a man revived by tranquilizers after eight years in a vegatativelike state cautioned against raised hopes the treatment would help other brain-damaged people.

"It makes me nervous that people are going to see this as a possibility" for treating such patients, Dr. Andres Kanner, a University of Wisconsin neurologist, said Wednesday. "I think we are getting excited prematurely.

"Every patient is different. Why this happened with this patient, we don't know."

After the case was reported Tuesday, the university received inquiries from around the world, said hospital spokeswoman Priscilla Arsove.

Kanner said the 45-year-old man was awakened temporarily after being injected with Valium during a routine dental procedure March 12.

The patient, a former airline pilot who is married with children, had suffered injuries in a car wreck 10 years ago. He was in a coma for about three months after the accident, then improved, but lapsed into a vegetativelike state about eight years ago, the doctor said.

The patient, whose identity was being withheld at his family's request, was being cared for in a nursing home when the drug was administered, the doctor said.

Kanner said the patient is being observed at University Hospital and Clinics in Madison, and doctors are experimenting to find the right dose of tranquilizers that would allow him to return home.

When medicated, the man has remained fully conscious for up to 12 hours at a time, Kanner said. During the initial discovery, he was able to walk with assistance, talk and perform complicated math calculations.

When not treated with the medication, he returns to the vegetativelike state, Kanner said.

The patient remained in that state Wednesday while doctors experimented with oral administration of the drugs, Kanner said. But that procedure so far has not had the same effect as when the drugs were introduced intravenously.

The doctors will experiment with dosage levels for a few weeks. But continuous injections of the tranquilizing drugs "has its risks," including depression of the respiratory system or heart, Kanner said.

A vegetative state is different from a coma because vegetative patients have sleeping and waking patterns, often open their eyes and sometimes utter words, experts said.

Kanner said Wednesday the man was in a "vegetativelike state" rather than a "true vegetative state."

The man had some reactions that would not be characteristic of someone in a permanent vegetative state, Kanner said. For example, he would sometimes pull his arm away when someone tried to give him an injection.

Experts said the man's reaction should stimulate more research and cause doctors to re-examine some of their patients, but it probably wouldn't have a significant immediate effect on medical practices.

"It must cause caregivers to be more cautious," said Dr. Richard Foa of Washington, a member of the American Academy of Neurology's Ethics and Humanity Subcommittee. "But an anecdote like this wouldn't alter my practice."

Foa said the vegetative state — and more particularly the persistent vegetative state — has been studied as specialists try to narrow the definition of the condition.

NATION IN BRIEF

Soviets visit weapons plant

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a sign of the Cold War's passing, the Bush administration is opening the doors today of the long-secret Savannah River nuclear weapons plant to Soviet officials.

The Soviet delegation is visiting the South Carolina installation and other U.S. defense nuclear facilities this week as part of a fact-finding mission designed to exchange information on ways of handling and disposing of radioactive wastes.

The Savannah River visit is part of a four-stop tour for the Soviets, who arrived in Washington on Monday at the invitation of Energy Secretary James D. Watkins.

EPA bill passes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is sailing toward creation of a new Department of the Environment, but the proposal may run into trouble at the White House.

The House voted 371-55 on Wednesday to elevate the Environmental Protection Agency to Cabinet level. The move is intended to give the agency greater prestige and influence within the administration.

President Bush has said he wants to sign such a measure on Earth Day, April 22. But the White House strongly opposes parts of the House bill, saying they would infringe on the president's authority to manage the executive branch.

Veto threat raised

WASHINGTON (AP) — Competing versions of legislation aimed at helping families find and afford child care face a House decision, with Republicans raising a veto threat and protesting the Democrats' push for rapid passage.

Floor action was scheduled today, less than 48 hours after the Democratic leadership's final version was made public.

"They can't win if they let the country look at the bill for a week," House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said Wednesday. "This is clearly machine tactics."

Gingrich and other Republicans also objected to legislative procedures set by the Rules Committee which, if approved by the full House, would strictly limit amendments that could be offered.

Bar goes Baltic

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A Lithuanian-born tavern owner is so upset about his compatriots' quest for freedom that he changed the name of his popular downtown haunt from Russian Lady to Lithuanian Lady.

"It may not affect much, but whatever I can do is important," said John Rimscha, who came to the United States in 1955.

Rimscha on Tuesday had the name painted over the bar's facade and ordered his staff to pour the bar's Russian vodka down the drain. He did the same thing in 1983 when a Soviet fighter shot down Korean Air Lines Flight 007. Then, he changed the bar's name to American Lady to protest the incident.

Rimscha, 46, said the tavern's new name will stay at least until Lithuanians obtain their independence, an event he's sure will occur.

"How could they possibly not succeed?" he said.

Woman gives new meaning to 'Why don't you just crash here?'

DETROIT (AP) — A woman fleeing an angry boyfriend was thrown 50 feet from the car she was riding in, crashed through a shingled roof and landed feet first on a refrigerator, authorities said.

"She got up, walked into my living room and lay down on my couch," said Sybie Cherry, owner of the home Denise Williams crashed through on Tuesday.

Williams was riding in a Ford Escort that was hit by the car driven by her irate boyfriend, said Police Officer Thomas Martinelli. He said the Escort sideswiped a tree, spun and hit a curb when Williams was flung out of the passenger door and into the air.

Cherry said it was the second time in less than year that a car crashed into her house, which is second from the corner.

"I still have it in my mind to move out. I'll never be able to lay down in the living room and relax and watch TV. I'd be too nervous," she said.

Williams, 27, suffered fractures to both wrists and her left ankle and had extensive cuts and bruises.

'Flats closure stalls nuclear-trigger output

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. nuclear arsenal will suffer "severe ramifications" if the government is unable to get its key weapons production plants back in operation soon, Energy Secretary James D. Watkins says.

Testifying Wednesday to a House Armed Services subcommittee, Watkins strongly hinted that one casualty of the production breakdown could be the Trident II ballistic missile, considered by experts to be the most accurate U.S. missile.

One key breakdown is at the Rocky Flats plant in Colorado, which makes plutonium triggers for nuclear arms. It has been closed since last November to correct safety and management problems.

Reps. Norman Dicks, D-Wash., and Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., asked Watkins whether the indefinite shutdown at Rocky Flats could force delays in outfitting newly deployed Trident submarines with missiles.

Watkins replied that he could not discuss details in public. But he added that as a general comment, "I can guarantee if we don't move aggressively" to get the weapons production complex back in full operation soon, "there will be severe ramifications."

West Texas Intermediate gained 1 cent in midmorning trading and reported a $20.09 price.

Excess supply of crude oil in the nation's storage tanks dragged crude futures prices lower Wednesday, while a decline in product inventories strengthened gasoline and heating oil prices.

Trading in the energy markets was driven mainly by new statistics from the American Petroleum Institute.

Market drifts

Stock prices drifted aimlessly Wednesday, drawing little inspiration from a stronger-than-expected reading on the state of the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down about 10 points at its early low, closed with a 6.75 gain at 2,743.69.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 142.30 million shares, against 131.61 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 171.38 million shares.

Dollar down

The dollar was down against most major currencies in European trading this morning, after dropping sharply against the yen earlier. Gold was mixed.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 156.65 yen, down 1.98 yen from Wednesday's finish. Later in London, the dollar traded at 156.85 yen.

"It was about time for the yen to recover after so much dollar-buying," said Mitsuhiko Kunugasa, a dealer with Daiwa Bank in Tokyo.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.63, up from $1.6285 late Wednesday.

Wang president fills 2 posts

N.Y. Times News Service

Miller

Richard W. Miller, president of Wang Laboratories Inc., was named Wednesday to the additional posts of chairman and chief executive.

Miller succeeded the company's founder, An Wang, who died Saturday at the age of 70.

"The board's unanimous decision reflects the confidence which the Wang family and the other board members have in Rick Miller," said a director, Peter A. Brooke, speaking for the board.

Miller, 48, joined Wang, based in Lowell, Mass., last August, succeeding Wang's son, Frederick A. Wang, who was removed from the president's post as the company's fortunes turned down.

An Wang's widow, Lorraine C. Wang, was named honorary chairwoman Wednesday.

Bush S&L nominee gets chilly reception

Democratic senators question Ryan's experience, ethics

By Dave Skidmore

Ryan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's nominee for top savings and loan regulator is getting a chilly reception from Democratic senators who question his experience and ethics.

T. Timothy Ryan Jr., 44, a former senior Labor Department official, parried mostly hostile questions from the Senate Banking Committee during a 4½-hour confirmation hearing Wednesday.

Now a private attorney specializing in pension and employee benefit law, Ryan has no direct experience in banking or savings and loans.

He told senators complaining about his lack of relevant experience that he was surprised when Treasury Department officials approached him about the job about four weeks ago.

Nevertheless, Ryan replied, "Absolutely," when senators asked if he was fully qualified to direct the Treasury Department's Office of Thrift Supervision, which supervises 2,600 thrift institutions.

"I am not ... an absolute expert on the thrift industry. I can tell you, though, that in the last four weeks, I've spent an enormous amount of time trying to educate myself," he said.

Ryan said he was an experienced manager of large organizations, citing his 1981-83 tenure as solicitor of the Labor Department where he managed 600 attorneys working in Washington and 16 field offices.

Despite their misgivings, senators are under intense pressure to confirm Ryan quickly. President Bush nominated him March 22, hoping to blunt a constitutional challenge that has put its S&L bailout program in limbo.

A U.S. District Court judge in Washington ruled last week that the acting director of the thrift office, Salvatore Martoche, and his predecessor, M. Danny Wall, lacked the constitutional authority to close failed thrifts because they were never confirmed by the Senate.

The Banking Committee could vote on the nomination as soon as its next meeting on April 3, but Chairman Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., said he could not guarantee the outcome.

"Some members have already expressed to me serious reservations about your nomination," Riegle told Ryan.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who is not a committee member but attended the hearing, contended that conflicts of interest between the nominee's public and private careers "raise basic questions about Mr. Ryan's sense of propriety."

While in government, Ryan helped select former Attorney General William B. Saxbe as independent counsel overseeing the Teamsters union's central States Pension Fund.

After Ryan left the department, Saxbe received court permission to join Ryan's law firm, bringing hundreds of thousands of dollars in fees from the pension oversight contract.

In 1985, the Labor Department asked Ryan to resign as a member of an advisory council on pension fund issues after it discovered that he was also serving as counsel to a trade group, the Employee Stock Ownership Association of America.

Metzenbaum also criticized Ryan for sitting on the council while a client, the Washington Business Group on Health, had an interest in issues before it.

And, he said Ryan should not have advised the National Maritime Union of America on a union election that the Labor Department had begun investigating shortly before Ryan left government.

In his defense, Ryan said a federal court concluded it was not improper for Saxbe to join his firm. He said he never participated in employee-owned stock matters while working for the advisory council, did not represent the business group on the pension matter that came before the advisory board and never dealt with the Labor Department directly concerning the maritime union.

Positive news seen in Chamber reports

By John Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

While some economic indicators are off, signs of progress and recovery are continuing to show in Midland, according to reports made to the Board of Directors of the Midland Chamber of Commerce Wednesday.

Economic indicators were mixed for the month, according to the Chamber, with construction permits and employment down, but airline boarding and utility connections were up.

As an indicator, Chamber membership, is looking better said a membership report delivered to the board. Joanne Langston, president of the Chamber, said a membership underway was succeeding very well. At press time today, 184 new memberships had been sold as a result of the drive, resulting in revenues of $33,640. Bruce Partain, spokesman for the chamber, said the campaign expected to result in the sale of over 200 new memberships and $40,000 in additional revenue.

Another encouraging note was delivered by Ray Proctor, president of the Midland Board of Realtors, who told the board that Midland Realtors were reporting sales increases for seven months in a row, that home prices and new construction were up, while the inventory of existing homes was down.

Proctor said the current inventory of homes for sale stood at 1,049 and was down 70 from the year before. "We're not seeing any dramatic price increases, yet as a result of the declining inventory, but we are beginning to see some price stabilization," he said.

The Convention and Visitors Bureau reported that activity in that sector was also continuing to improve with a number of significant convention bids for Midland having been approved or in the pending process. Among the groups set to come to Midland in the next two years are: Texas Education Food Services, Midland Sheriff's Association, West Texas

Top stock manager announces retirement

By Jonathan Yenkin

Lynch

BOSTON (AP) — One of America's top stock gurus, Peter Lynch, is retiring as head of the nation's largest stock mutual fund at the age his father died of cancer to spend more time with his wife and three children.

"There's nothing magic about 46," Lynch said Wednesday in announcing his retirement from Fidelity Investments. "But you think about those things."

Lynch managed the Magellan mutual fund for Fidelity for 13 years, guiding it through years that saw both bull markets and the Wall Street crash to establish a record of strong growth and performance.

The stock fund has $13 billion in assets, compared with about $100 million in 1981, when it became publicly available to investors.

Helping draw assets was the fund's performance: $10,000 invested in the fund on May 31, 1977, would have grown to $270,007 on Dec. 31, 1989, according to Fidelity estimates.

Lynch also amassed a personal fortune, estimated by Boston Magazine at $25 million, and now wants to spend his days more leisurely with his family.

"I spent about 21 years with Fidelity," Lynch said. "I'd like to spend 21 years doing something different."

Lynch, who retires May 31, will join the board of trustees for Fidelity, the nation's largest operator of mutual funds.

Fidelity Chairman and Chief Executive Edward C. Johnson III issued a statement saying: "Even if he never invests another dollar, Peter Lynch has won a place of

Soviets invite West to develop oil fields

HOUSTON (AP) — Energy officials from the Soviet Union outlined five oil and gas fields in their country that they hope to develop with the help of Western companies.

Six top national and local Soviet energy officials outlined the fields during a Tuesday seminar held in conjunction with Professional Geophysics Inc.

Four areas in the Western Siberian Basin the Soviets want to develop are the Russian hydrocarbon pool, the Bakhilovsk area, the Vanyegansk area and the Krasnoleninsk area. Those areas are estimated to hold reserves of 13 billion barrels of oil.

The Soviets also are inviting Western companies into the Bashkir region of the Volga-Urals Basin, which has deep, undiscovered oil and gas potential.

"We have outlined programs for the near future, but of course we can extend this program," said Aklim K. Moukhametzianov, deputy minister of the Soviet oil and gas industry.

Development of the areas won't be easy, and that is one of the main reasons the Soviets are looking for Western help, said Kindel P. McNeill, vice president of Professional Geophysics.

Problems include high paraffin content, large amounts of hydrogen sulfide under high pressure, low-gravity oil and thick layers of permafrost, McNeill said.

Moukhametzianov said the Soviets have experts who know how to attack the problems, but they don't have sufficient technology and equipment to do it by themselves.

Professional Geophysics officials said it is the first time that the Soviets have offered definite areas for development by western companies. The offer is being made through MDSeis, a joint venture between the Soviets and Pro-

Corporate profits fall 3.2 percent in third quarter

By Robert D. Hershey Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Profits of American companies fell by 3.2 percent in the final three months of 1989 mainly because of rising labor costs, the Commerce Department reported Wednesday.

For the full year, corporate profits from current production dropped by 8.3 percent; in 1988 they rose by 10 percent. The decline was the first significant drop since a 20.2 percent decrease in 1982, the most recent recession year.

While profits from current production are the purest gauge, the Commerce Department reports other measures of profits.

Current-production cash flow — the internal funds available for investment — fell by 0.3 percent after rising by 1.9 percent in the third quarter. Profits before taxes eased by 0.5 percent after a 7.1 percent decline, and profits after taxes rose by 2.8 percent, the first quarterly gain in a year.

The profits report accompanied the department's latest calculation of the pace of economic growth in the fourth quarter, now put at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.1 percent.

This suggested that the economy was slightly firmer than shown in last month's estimate of 0.9 percent. The first estimate, in January, had said the gross national product expanded at an annual rate of 0.5 percent in the quarter.

The figures on corporate profits, although not unexpected, reinforced the worries of some analysts that corporations would not have the means or the incentive to invest in new plant and equipment during 1990.

"This shows that a 'soft landing' is by no means synonymous with a painless landing," said Robert G. Dederick, a former Commerce Department official who is now chief economist for the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago. "One of the key questions now is whether this year is going to be dragged down by businesses responding to last year."

A "soft landing" refers to the effort of policy makers, so far fairly successful, to restrain the economy enough to keep inflation under control without tipping the economy into a recession.

Profits are a principal source of money for expansion, the other being loans. Many lending institutions have, however, been tightening credit standards recently, with lending to smaller companies seeming to be the most seriously affected.

The latest revision of the GNP growth figure reflects higher final sales for most major components partly offset by a $4 billion downward adjustment in the growth of inventories.

The gross national product measures the output of goods and services, and production adds to the GNP even if the goods pile up.

LYNCH: His fund outperformed annually

honor in the history of money management."

During the last five years, when it was the nation's largest common stock fund, Magellan has outperformed the Standard & Poor's 500 by an average of 6 percent annually, the company said.

Underpinning Lynch's success was his method of long-term investing in sound companies, rather than trying to outguess the market as a whole — a strategy he outlined in his best-selling book, "One Up On Wall Street."

Despite this success, Lynch said in recent months it was becoming more difficult to find underperforming stocks that can yield big returns, because stock prices have continued their annual growth.

"What you need is a drop in the market or a big recession for big winners," he said.

Magellan's new portfolio manager will be Morris Smith, 33, manager of Fidelity OTC Portfolios.

Smith's fund, which focuses on smaller companies listed in the national over-the-counter market, also has performed well. In the five years ended Dec. 31, 1989, the fund had an annualized average return of 25.05 percent, compared with 13.96 percent for all small company growth funds, according to Lipper Analytical Services.

Lynch, a graduate of Boston College and the Wharton business school at the University of Pennsylvania, would not say how he plans to spend his time.

But he lamented that he hasn't seen any Boston College hockey games this year, even though the school is one of four finalists vying for the national championship.

"Something's out of balance," he said.

POSITIVE: Progress seen in Chamber monthly reports

County Judges & Commissioners, Third Annual Ostrich News Convention, Texas Association of Distributive Education Clubs.

Jane Wolf, chairman of Convention & Visitors Bureau, said the Bureau was also working with the Jaycees to implement a Mardi Gras celebration which should attract a number of visitors.

Kathy Shorr, director of the Midland Arts Assembly, said more visitors should also attend an expanded Celebration of the Arts this year. About 73 artists will show at this year's Celebration which will be capped with a street dance.

As a result of increased convention and meeting activity, Midland Center is showing a 20 percent increase in revenues above 1989 and a 34 percent increase over 1988, according to Shura Glover, Center director.

In other Chamber business:

■ Clean Midland reported that it was continuing its recycling efforts and would present a video seminar on solid waste management on April 4. Clean Midland is also continuing efforts with the owner to have the old cement factory on West Front torn down and is launching its annual alley pickup service to begin on April 16.

■ Midland City Councilman J.D. Faircloth asked the Chamber to be aware of and participate in Land Use Assumption question. He also noted that the City had approved $10,000 to market Midland International in an effort to attract new airlines and cargo service.

SOVIETS: List six fields they would like help with fessional Geophysics.

Although the Soviets have moved at a slow pace in recent negotiations with other U.S. companies, they have set a speedy timetable for projects in the five areas described Tuesday. Joint venture partners should be selected by fall, and work could be some time after Jan. 1, according to information distributed at the seminar.

Soviet and Professional Geophysics officials said the terms will be worked out with each partnership. But a booklet handout described the parameters of prospective joint ventures stated that the "share of the Soviet side in the authorized fund of a join venture shall comprise not less than 51 percent."

The lifting costs of reserves in the targeted areas will be in the vicinity of $7 to $8 a barrel, said Professional Geophysics President Tom Russell.

New home sales up, but slack overall

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of new homes last month rebounded 3.1 percent from steep declines in December and January, the government reported Wednesday, but analysts said sales remained depressed because of high mortgage interest rates.

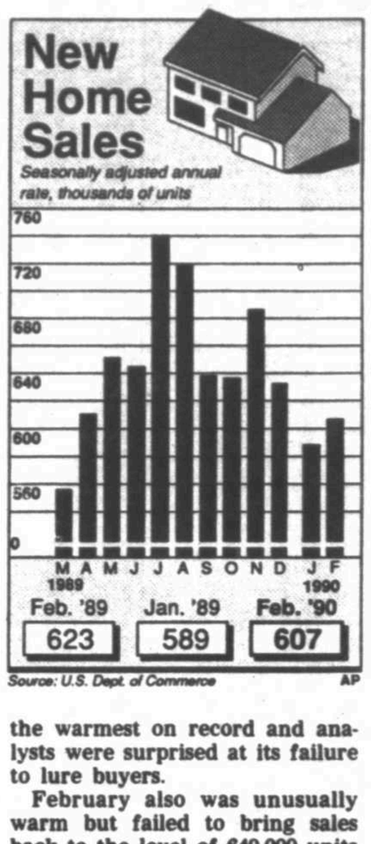
"It's not a terribly optimistic outlook for the housing industry," said economist Richard Peach of the Mortgage Bankers Association. "I don't see much of a decline in rates in the months ahead and there's substantial risk that they will go higher in the second half of the year."

The Commerce Department said new single-family homes were sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 607,000 units in February after plummeting a 6.8 percent in January and a revised 8.0 percent in December.

Sales in both January and February were the lowest since 556,000 homes were sold on an annual basis last March. Sales totaled 589,000 in January.

Sales in December — the fourth coldest on record — had dropped to 632,000, which was revised down from the 634,000 units originally reported. But January was the warmest on record and analysts were surprised at its failure to lure buyers.

February also was unusually warm but failed to bring sales back to the level of 649,000 units sold in 1989.



RYAN: Backers call him fair

(From 1C)

Ryan was strongly defended by Sen. John Warner, R-Va., who employed him as an aide in his last three campaigns.

"The president, the secretary of the Treasury and to some extent I have been involved in this nomination and we're going to stand by this man," Warner said. "The man's tough. The man's fair. The man's honest."

Some Democrats also are uneasy about Ryan's record as a Republican activist. He served as an aide or attorney in presidential campaigns for Richard Nixon in 1972, Gerald Ford in 1976 and George Bush in 1988. He was a legal counsel to Ronald Reagan's 1980 transition team.

"I pledge to you this (agency's work) will be done on a fully nonpartisan basis," Ryan told the committee.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Late IRA withdrawals can be 'forgiven'

By Bill Doyle

Q. Because I am 74 and my wife is 71, we are required to make withdrawals from our individual retirement accounts. On December 28, I went to the bank at which we have our IRAs to arrange for our 1989 withdrawals. The bank processed mine and gave me a check but I was told my wife would have to come in and sign the required form.

I explained she was home sick with a virus. They gave me a withdrawal form for her to sign and told me to bring it back the next day. I agreed, but I had the virus the next day and we both were sick over the New Year's weekend. I did phone the bank on Saturday, December 30, but the person I did business with was off for the day.

I finally went to the bank on Tuesday, January 2, to have my wife's 1989 withdrawal processed. I was told it was too late and, as a result, the withdrawal would be subject to a 50 percent tax penalty. I told them to give me the check, even though it was dated January 2.

Is there any way to have the tax penalty, which amounts to $98, reversed?

Doyle

A. Sure. Required IRA withdrawals made late, or not at all, are officially termed "excess accumulations." The tax penalty, at 50 percent on that amount, is mighty stiff. But it can be forgiven under certain circumstances.

Internal Revenue Service Publication 590 explains, "If you have a good reason for having an excess accumulation in your IRA, you may get a tax refund."

To request that refund, you must file Form IRS 5329 with your Form 1040 Federal income tax return. Pay the $98 penalty tax and attach an explanation for the excess accumulation, mentioning when it was withdrawn — January 2, in your wife's case.

A letter similar to the one you wrote to this column should do the trick. Despite some stories you hear, the revenooers are reasonable folks. Assuming the IRS approves the request, a $98 refund check will be on its way.

Q. I am a widow, 72, with an IRA amounting to $13,925. I want to know how much I must withdraw to avoid the penalty for not taking out enough. Right now, I am taking out $175 a month. Is that enough?

A. It's much more than enough to meet the minimum withdrawal requirement, which is based on your life expectancy or the joint life expectancy of you and your IRA beneficiary.

At age 72, your life expectancy is 14.6 years. $13,925 divided by 14.6 equals $953.77 — the amount you're required to withdraw this year, if you are using your life expectancy.

You're taking out more than the required amount, even if you are use joint life expectancy. Twelve $175 monthly withdrawals total $2,100 a year. $13,925 divided by $2,100 equals 6.6. At age 72, there's no way you could come up with an IRA joint life expectancy that low.

Q. In order to calculate IRA required withdrawals, what is a man's life expectancy and what is a woman's life expectancy?

A. They are the same. The IRS adopted unisex life expectancy tables for IRA and other retirement plan required withdrawal purposes about five years ago.

Q. Six of us play poker every Wednesday evening. We all have IRAs at the same bank. Four of us are past age 701/2; the other two are approaching that mark. No one at our bank seems to be able to provide accurate information about the correct amounts of our IRA required withdrawals.

What words of wisdom do you have for our poker group?

A. Obtain and study copies of Publication 590 from your local IRS office or by calling the IRS toll-free "Forms" number in your phone directory. You will learn a great deal about IRAs.

Toward the back of that booklet, you will find individual and joint life expectancy tables. Find your appropriate number. Divide your IRA balance, as of December 31, by that number and you will know how much you must withdraw this year.

Two more thoughts: Ask your bankers why they don't do that. And never draw to an inside straight.

SWC makes commitment to basketball

Penders agrees in principle to UT deal

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas basketball coach Tom Penders agreed in principle to a new seven-year contract, ending rumors he would take one of several coaching vacancies.

"This is what I wanted all along," Penders said Wednesday after meeting with UT Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds and President William Cunningham.

The coach, who led the 24-9 Longhorns to the NCAA Midwest Regional finals this year, agreed to a base salary of $105,000 per year and an annuity package. Details of the annuity package were not finalized.

News accounts said Virginia, Florida and North Carolina State were interested in the Texas coach and Penders said talked with Florida Athletic Director Bill Arnsparger by phone.

But after the meeting Wednesday, Penders said, "I'm not going to talk to anybody anymore. I'm taking DeLoss and the president at their words."

A contract won't be signed until both Texas attorneys and Penders' agent, whom he declined to identify, agree on its proper wording. But both Penders and Dodds said they consider that step a formality.

The agreement gives raises to assistant coaches Jamie Ciampaglio and Eddie Oran and an income supplement to Penders based on winning percentage and his athletes' academic performance, Dodds said.

"We're working on a way to build on a situation that would encourage him to stay for the length of the contract," Dodds said.

The new deal erases the final three years of Penders first contract, a five-year pact that had a base salary of $92,650. His total financial package, including benefits — shoe contract, radio and television shows, summer camp — was believed to be in the $200,000 to $300,000 range.

New Texas A&M basketball coach Kermit Davis appears at College Station to announce his employment.

A&M lures youthful coach to Aggieland

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Kermit Davis Jr. thinks he's getting in on the ground floor of something big — a resurgence of Southwest Conference basketball.

Davis was named head basketball coach of the Texas Aggies Wednesday and he's excited about his new team and the SWC.

"Our's is a program that's on the rise in a conference that may be the most exciting conference on the upswing in America," Davis said.

Texas and Arkansas' showdown in the NCAA playoffs could give the league a boost, Davis said.

"That was super for the conference," Davis said. "That exposure is good for the conference. It's going to help recruiting."

Davis replaces interim coach John Thornton, who finished out the season after Shelby Metcalf was fired in January.

"We wanted a young, aggressive coach that plays an up-tempo offense and aggressive defense," A&M athletic director John David Crow said. "We think we accomplished our goal."

Davis led the Idaho Vandals into the NCAA playoffs the past two years.

He led the Vandals to consecutive 25-6 records in two seasons as head coach. Southwest Mississippi Junior College had records of 17-9 and 22-11 in two seasons under Davis.

"I have a feeling of great expectation," Davis said. "I had a great opportunity at age 28 at Idaho and it took a great opportunity for me to leave Idaho."

Davis called Metcalf a family friend and said it would be difficult replacing him.

"I know how well Shelby Metcalf was liked and it's going to be difficult to follow the winningest coach in the SWC," Davis said.

Metcalf departed with a 9-10 record last season and has a 438-296 career coaching record.

Age won't be a factor in try-

Jordan lets it all hang out with 69-point game

Associated Press

How high can Michael Jordan go?

There seems to be no limit to his soaring or his scoring.

The high-flying Jordan reached a rarefied atmosphere Wednesday night with 69 points, the ninth-highest total in NBA history, as the Chicago Bulls beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 117-113 in overtime and clinched a spot in the playoffs.

"This would have to be my greatest game," Jordan said. "When I scored 63 against Boston (in the 1986 playoffs), we lost. It sure feels a lot better when you score a lot of points and win the game."

Jordan made 23 of 37 field-goal attempts and 21 of 23 foul shots. He also had a career-high 18 rebounds, plus six assists and four steals.

"The guy did it over, over, and over again," Cleveland's John Williams said. "He's one in a million, one in a billion. I don't think we'll ever see a player like him again. He's probably the world's greatest athlete."

It was the fourth time Jordan has scored more than 60 points. His previous career high was 63 against Boston in the 1986 playoffs. He scored 61 twice in 1987.

Only two other players have had multiple games of 60 or more points. Wilt Chamberlain did it 32 times and Elgin Baylor three times.

Jordan scored 16 in the first quarter, 15 in the second, 20 in the third, 10 in the fourth and eight in overtime. The Bulls led by 17 points late in the third period.

"In the first quarter I felt it, missing only one shot," he said. "I could feel that I was going to knock my shots in."

Jordan was just as proud of his rebounding and passing.

"I've been saying all along that I try to do whatever it takes for the team to win, whether it's scoring

Hogs wild about being in Denver

DENVER (AP) — The weather wasn't very pleasant when Arkansas arrived in Denver for the NCAA tournament finals. Temperatures were in the low 30s, with light snow and overcast skies contributing to a 90-minute delay for the Razorbacks' charter flight.

Coach Nolan Richardson didn't seem to mind.

"It's great to be in Denver. We're happy to be here," Richardson said Wednesday night.

"It's been a dream of mine to get to the Final Four, and not just to get here, but to have a chance to win a national championship," Richardson said. "We're not here to play for money anymore. We're here for the trophy."

Arkansas (30-4) will play Duke (28-8) in the national semifinal game on Saturday. That winner will play Monday night against the winner of the other semifinal, between UNLV and Georgia Tech.

Richardson, in his fifth season at Arkansas, is no stranger to national championships. He won a junior college title at Western Texas JC in 1980, then followed that a year later with a National Invitation Tournament championship while at Tulsa.

This is the first trip to the Final Four for any of the Arkansas players, while Duke is making its third straight appearance and fourth in five years.

"We've always been underdogs and that's good," Richardson said. "It makes us play a little harder. ... I think our kids will handle it (the pressure) very well."

The Razorbacks appeared loose as they deplaned and boarded a bus for their hotel. Sophomore Oliver Miller, a 270-pound center who will go against the Duke frontcourt of Alaa Abdelnaby and Christian Laettner, said the team was "on a mission."

"We've captured all our goals, and the only one left is to bring back the national championship. I think we can," Miller said.

The Razorbacks won the Southwest Conference regular-season and tournament championships, then reached this stage by beating Princeton, Dayton, North Carolina and Texas in the Midwest Regional. Duke came out of the East Regional, beating top-seeded Connecticut in the title game.

Saturday's game will be Richardson's first against Duke coa-

Lee trainer returns to land of Mojo

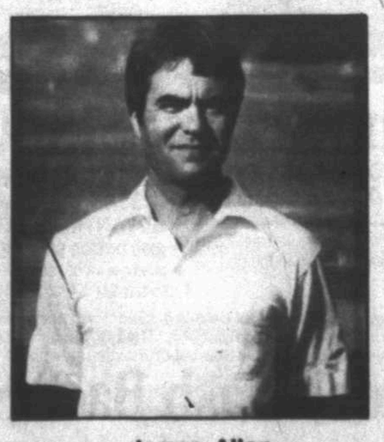
By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Ironically, James "Doc" Allen will serve his last day as Midland Lee's trainer when the baseball Rebels host Odessa Permian Saturday at 4 p.m.

Ironic? Well, Allen will become the head trainer at Odessa Permian next week, replacing Permian trainer Tim "Trapper" O'Connell, who has decided to take a job under Midland's Dr. Thurston Dean at Midland's Physio Therapy.

"I know its a strange way to leave Lee with us playing against Permian, but that's just the way it worked out," said the 39-year-old Allen.

Allen, who has been at Lee the last five years, has always felt that the Lee-Permian rivalry is one of the best in the state. He won't lose that with the move.



James Allen

"There aren't any two schools in the state that like to compete against each other like Lee and Permian. I just feel fortunate to have been a part of both schools.

"I've seen both sides of the rivalry and it just can't get any better than this," said Allen. "Someone might have it as good, but I don't see how that is possible."

Allen was Permian's trainer for five years from 1978 to 1982 when he dropped into the business world before coming back into the training profession at Lee five years ago.

"My decision to go back to Permian is strictly a personal move. I wasn't looking for a move and Midland Lee has been a great place to work," said Allen, "but I have two daughters (Amanda, 5, and Hailey, 8) who live in Odessa and this gives me an opportunity to be closer to them.

"Midland has been great to me. The coaching staff is excellent and the kids are enthusiastic and play hard. The coaches get the most out of the kids they have here.

"Scotty Alcorn, who has been one of the great Lee boosters over the years, always said, 'When people leave Lee, they leave out the front door and not out the back door.' I've tried to fill that mold. I hope I've come close to being as good to the kids and coaches here as they have been to me."

Allen said that he wouldn't trade for the experiences he's had in Midland.

"All the trips to the playoffs have been really special, but being associated with people like Ernie Johnson (who is retiring as Lee's head baseball coach after 29 years) and football coach Earl Miller has

SAD STATE OF AFFAIRS

New York's horrendous slide continued with its 106-101 loss at New Jersey on Wednesday. The setback was the Knicks' seventh in eight games and 12th in 17 games. Since Feb. 23, New York has been beaten by each of the five teams that have yet to win 20 games this season.

SEE-SAW

The Lakers, playing without Magic Johnson, led the Clippers by 23 points late in the first half on Wednesday, trailed the Clippers by four points with 10:15 to play and then scored 24 of the last 42 points to win 106-99.

points, rebounding or making assists," he said. "My heart's in every game and I think this exemplified it."

Jordan's point total was the second-highest by a guard in NBA history. Denver's David Thompson scored 73 against Detroit in 1978.

The victory was the eighth in 10 games for the Bulls, who tied a club record by winning their seventh straight on the road.

Mark Price led the Cavaliers with 31 points, Craig Ehlo added 26 and John Williams 23.

76ers 122, Celtics 104

Philadelphia won its fifth straight and opened a three-game lead over second-place Boston in the Atlantic Division as Charles Barkley scored 22 points, one of four 76ers with 20 or more. Hersey Hawkins and Ron Anderson each had 21 points and Johnny Dawkins 20.

Nets 106, Knicks 101

New Jersey shut down Patrick Ewing early, ended his club-record streak of consecutive 20-point games at 28, and snapped an 11-game losing streak. The victory was only the fourth in 34 games for New Jersey, which handed the Knicks their seventh loss in eight games.

Ewing finished with 17 points after being blanked in the first quarter and having just two at halftime. New Jersey built a 22-point lead midway through the third quarter and had to hold on as the Knicks twice closed the gap to two points in the final 68 seconds.

Chris Morris led New Jersey with 24 points, Purvis Short had 23 and Dennis Hopson 22. Gerald Wilkins led New York with 24.

Pistons 106, Hornets 97

James Edwards scored 22 points and Vinnie Johnson had 20 as Detroit snapped a three-game losing streak. Johnson was starting in place of Joe Dumars, who is out four weeks with a broken hand. Mark Aguirre added 18 points for Detroit, which won its 14th straight home game.

Lakers 106, Clippers 99

James Worthy scored 11 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter after the Lakers, without the injured Magic Johnson, blew a 23-point lead.

The Lakers built a 55-32 cushion late in the first half but trailed 75-73 after the Clippers' Charles Smith scored 14 of his 29 points in the third quarter. Ken Norman scored 22 points and Danny Manning added 19 for the Clippers. The Clippers led by four points with 10:15 remaining but Worthy's driving layup with 9:08 to go put the Lakers ahead to stay 82-81.

Bullets 113, Nuggets 99

Bernard King and Jeff Malone each scored 26 points and Darrell Walker had a career-high 16 rebounds to go with 10 points and 13 assists.

The Nuggets, who led by 10 points in the opening quarter, missed all but three of 31 shots in the second period. They missed their first 15 shots of the quarter and went 0-for-12 over the final 3:50. Meanwhile, the Bullets put together an 18-0 run for a 56-40 halftime lead. Alex English scored 16 for Denver.

Timberwolves 93, Kings 88

Tony Campbell scored 32 points and sparked a late 15-4 rally. Minnesota, which is allowing the second-fewest points per game in the NBA, held the Kings scoreless from 5:41 left to the 40.3-second mark.

Heat 109, Magic 104

Kevin Edwards had 25 points and Sherman Douglas scored 11 of his 18 in the final five minutes. The triumph was the second straight for Miami, which ended a five-game losing streak against Milwaukee on Sunday, and gave the second-year club 17 victories, two more than it won a year ago. The Heat is 3-1 against Orlando.

Douglas scored all of his fourth-quarter points after the Heat, which led by 13 points in the first half, fell behind 93-88 with just over five minutes left.

Vandy bilks Billikens in NIT final

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Invitation Tournament gave up-and-down Vanderbilt a chance to finish the season at the top of a hill.

The Commodores, who beat five NCAA tournament teams but lost seven consecutive Southeastern Conference games in one stretch and finished tied for eighth in the league standings, won the NIT with a 74-72 victory over St. Louis Wednesday night.

"The seven straight losses taught me that basketball has a long season," Coach Eddie Fogler said. "In December, we beat three teams that made the NCAA — Kansas State, Alabama-Birmingham and Virginia — then we lost all our confidence during the conference season. But television has made basketball a tournament-oriented game, and we got a chance to have a good season.

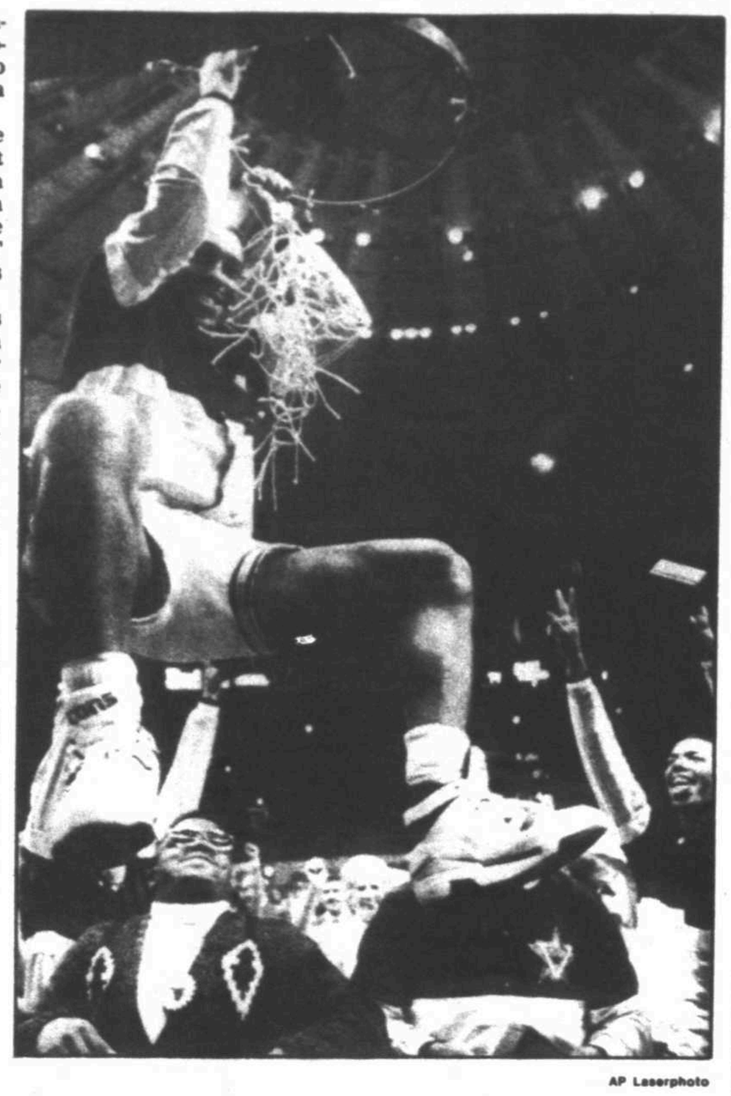
"The win gives us great exposure and the experience of tournament play, with the focus, media and national TV coverage. It's a great experience for the kids."

Vanderbilt (21-14), which had never before appeared in the final of a postseason tournament, blew all but two points of a 56-39 advantage with 10:35 remaining. Before advancing to the NIT semifinals at Madison Square Garden, the Commodores rallied from 17-point deficits against Tennessee and Louisiana Tech.

"We came back from 17 down twice in the tournament to get here, and St. Louis came back on us," Fogler said. "It can happen in college with the 3-pointer."

St. Louis (21-12), losing in the NIT final for the second consecutive year, hit six 3-pointers in the final 10:14, but Coach Rich Grawer said defensive intensity was the key to the comeback.

"Once we got down by 17, we played harder on defense and took out our frustrations on Vanderbilt instead of complaining to the referees," Grawer said. "Vanderbilt frustrated us offensively, bumping us, but not fouling us. That frustration manifested itself with poor defense at the other end."



AP Laserphoto

Vanderbilt's Derrick Wilcox celebrates the Commodores' win by cutting down the net at Madison Square Garden.

Anthony Bonner, the nation's leading rebounder with 13.9 per game, said the Billikens waited until it was too late to start playing well.

"It's a shame that we couldn't play with that intensity for 40 minutes," said Bonner, who finished with 19 points and 11 rebounds and averaged 20.4 points and 15 rebounds in the five-game tournament.

But Grawer and Bonner said the loss was not a big disappointment.

"I can honestly say we had a great year," said Bonner, a possible first-round pick in the NBA draft. "The guys here next year can build on it and the guys that move on will cherish the experience."

"It's a bigger disappointment that I won't have Anthony Bonner and Charles Newberry on the team next year," Grawer said.

Newberry scored 11 of his 18 points in the final 6:08 of the game.

Senior guard Derrick Wilcox, averaging 11.6 points, scored all of his 16 points in the second half for Vanderbilt.

"I wasn't concerned about going scoreless in the first half because we were ahead," Wilcox said. "I thought I would be OK as long as I stayed out of foul trouble."

St. Louis got within two points on four occasions in the final minutes, including 71-69 after a 3-point goal by Bonner with 33 seconds left.

Freshman Kevin Anglin hit two free throws with 15 seconds left for a four-point lead, and Wilcox made it 74-69 with a free throw. Jeff Gaona's buzzer-beating 3-pointer for St. Louis made the final margin two points.

In the third-place game, James Barnes scored 19 points and backup forward Dave Degitz gave Penn State the lead for good with a three-point play in overtime, lifting the Nittany Lions to an 83-81 victory over New Mexico.

Valvano's lawyer predicts lengthy talks

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Coach Jim Valvano's attorney continued pushing Wednesday to keep him at North Carolina State and predicted negotiations would run through the weekend.

"We had a hurriedly called meeting this afternoon," said attorney Woody Webb, who had submitted a written proposal Tuesday to N.C. State representatives asking for conditions under which Valvano could retain his job.

"Negotiations are now under way and will probably be very intense for the next few days and through the weekend. We are still pressing as hard as we can to keep Jim on."

The embattled coach has canceled plans to attend the NCAA Final Four in Denver this weekend and will visit friends in Washington instead.

He also will miss a campus rally planned for Friday by N.C. State students and others who support him.

The school's Board of Trustees voted 9-3 to have attorney Howard Manning and chief deputy Attorney General Andy Vanore find a way to terminate Valvano, who has been under scrutiny over NCAA violations and allegations of point-shaving by former N.C. State players.

On Tuesday, Webb asked N.C. State to specifiy conditions under which Valvano could retain his job. But the attorney said Wednesday that Manning and Vanore "don't appear very receptive to me."

Gathers picked for Wooden team

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The late Hank Gathers is among six college basketball players voted to the Los Angeles Athletic Club-John R. Wooden "All-American" team, making him a finalist for the 1990 Wooden Award.

Gathers, the Loyola Marymount star who led the nation in scoring and rebounding in 1988-89, died March 4 of a diseased heart after collapsing that day during a West Coast Conference tournament game.

Also voted to the six-man first team announced Wednesday were Derrick Coleman of Syracuse, Lionel Simmons of LaSalle, Larry Johnson of Nevada-Las Vegas, Gary Payton of Oregon State, and Chris Jackson of Louisiana State.

The top vote-getter in balloting by a nationwide panel of sports journalists will be honored April 4 in Los Angeles as the winner of the 1990 Wooden Award

Wooden, the former UCLA coach, will present the trophy to the player voted the best in college basketball.

Nicklaus' senior game 'semi-lousy'

By Tim Rosaforte
Cox News Service

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. - Jack Nicklaus is not happy with his golf game. He makes his Senior PGA Tour debut today in The Tradition, and he's spraying the ball all over the desert.

"My game has been sort of semi-lousy," Nicklaus said Wednesday at the Desert Mountain Cochise course he designed.

This is a semi-tough situation for Nicklaus to be in. He is expected to win again. This is like going back 20 years, when Nicklaus was the man to beat in every tournament he entered.

Lee Trevino added to that pressure two weeks ago on the Tonight Show when he said that if he can beat Jack Nicklaus in a Senior Tour event, he will win the golf tournament.

"He will feel it when they call his name on that first tee tomorrow," Trevino said Wednesday. "He can handle pressure. He didn't win the tournaments he has won if he couldn't handle pressure. But he's going to feel pressure he has never felt before on that first tee. I did. I snap-hooked it at Key Biscayne right in the water. First drive right in the water. I said, 'Hell, I got that out of the way.'"

Trevino also got his first victory out of the way when Jim Dent blew a three-stroke lead with two holes to go in the Caribbean Classic. Senor Senior was playing better than Nicklaus is now, but that back-door win over Dent took all the pressure off him. He has won three of the four Senior Tour events he entered - all by one stroke.

"I played with Jack at the Skins Game at Mauni Lani," Trevino said. "I thought he hit the ball as well as I have ever seen him hit it. I knew he was getting ready. Gary Player, as a matter of fact, looked at me and in that South African accent says, 'Mon, he can still hit the bloody thing, can't he?' I told him, 'You think Big Jack ain't ready, you're crazy.'"

Since then, Nicklaus has been fighting his mechanics and his confidence level is down. He hasn't broken par since an opening round of 68 in the Doral-Ryder Open. He followed that up with scores of 72, 75 and 74 to finish tied for 68th. At the Players Championship, he shot 75-78 and missed the cut.

Lessons with Peter Kostis have not yet yielded the dividends Nicklaus was hoping for when he went to the Broken Sound-based swing guru. Tuesday evening, after his first Senior Tour practice round, Nicklaus sought the advice of Golf Digest instructor Jim Flick.

Coogs drop MHS, 2-1

Staff Report

ABILENE — Abilene Cooper pitcher Scott Jenkins tossed a three-hit shutout Wednesday, as the Cougars downed Midland High 2-0 in District 4-5A baseball play here.

The loss dropped the Bulldogs to 1-2 in 4-5A play, and 10-7 overall. Cooper moved to 9-4 overall and 3-1 in district competition. MHS' Gabriel Salazar also threw a three-hitter, striking out nine Cooper batters in the losing effort.

The games was a makeup of Saturday's rainout, the first of two rainouts suffered by MHS this week. The 'Dogs return to action at 4 p.m. Friday, when they play San Angelo in a home game at Angels Stadium. That game is the makeup of an affair that was supposed to have been played Tuesday.

Then MHS is back on the road Saturday, when the Bulldogs take on Odessa High at Odessa, in a regularly scheduled event.

U.S. falls to Germans

Soccer

EAST BERLIN (AP) — The U.S. soccer team completed its two-nation tour of Eastern Europe with a sense of encouragement despite not winning a game.

The World Cup-bound Americans lost 3-2 to East Germany on a trio of Ulf Kirsten goals Wednesday night, but they showed vast improvement over their performance of eight days earlier in a 2-0 loss to Hungary.

"What we came here to learn was to adjust to the speed of play here. We accomplished it somewhat but we still have a way to go," U.S. coach Bob Gansler said. "I like the progress of the way we're doing it. We know we have to refine it to be competitive."

Peter Vermes and Bruce Murray scored for the Americans, 2-5 against national teams in their buildup to the World Cup finals that begin June 8 in Italy.

The U.S. squad paid for three defensive mistakes against the East Germans, but its aggressive play toward the end of the game showed the team is capable of using its fitness to keep up with quicker European clubs.

Chap netters to play in NM tourney

Staff Report

Midland College men's tennis team plays Friday and Saturday at the New Mexico State University invitational tournament in Las Cruces, N.M.

Coach Joe Williams sends his charges against host NMSU at 9 a.m. Friday, then the Chaparrals take on Northern Arizona at 2 p.m. Saturday's matches are against conference foes New Mexico Military Institute, at 9 a.m., and Odessa College, at 2 p.m.

Williams will not have all his weapons available, including his No. 2 doubles team and two of his top singles players. Mohamed Ridaoui and Amine Kadiri are remaining behind to catch up with class work. Ridaoui has been playing in Davis Cup competition for his native Morocco in Egypt the past two weeks.

Kadiri returned to Morocco after his father suffered a serious medical problem.

"Although we could use both Mohamed and Amine, this gives us an opportunity to play some of the others against strong competition," Williams said.

After this event, the men will play Texas-El Paso in El Paso on April 7. A conference dual match with NMMI was rained out Tuesday and Williams said he thought it would not be rescheduled. MC will go to Roswell to play NMMI on April 10.

The newest Volvo ITCA rankings show top-ranked MC as one of five men's teams from Region V in the top 11 teams in the nation. Following tthe Chaps in the team rankings were second-ranked Anderson, S.C.; No. 3 McLennan of Waco; Tyler and Abraham Baldwin, S.C. tied for fourth; No. 6 Brunswick, Ga.; Temple at No. 7; Miami-Dade, Fla. as the eighth-ranked squad; Odessa ninth; Indian River, Fla. 10th; and NMMI at No. 11.

Jesper Witt, the MC freshman who plays number one and has a season record of 26-4, is first in men's doubles on the Volvo ITCA list. Ridaoui is ranked fifth, Kadiri is ninth, Bernt Gade is number 26 and Pepe Garcia is number 45. Gade-Witt is the No. 1 doubles team, Kadiri-Ridaoui are No. 2, while Garcia and James Homan are ranked 23rd.

In the wacky world of spring baseball ...

Reds, Astros show how it's not done

Associated Press

The players are not in midseason form. They're not even in mid-exhibition form.

Three days into the exhibition grind, the Houston Astros and Cincinnati Reds gave some exhibition Wednesday, one on how not to play baseball.

The Astros won 8-6 but committed four errors, making all the Cincinnati runs unearned. Cincinnati committed two miscues, including first baseman Luis Quinones' throwing error that allowed the winning run to score in the seventh inning.

Royals 2, Rangers 1

Rey Palacios singled home Gary Thurman with two outs in the top of the 12th inning. Kansas City's Bo Jackson of the Royals was ejected by Class AAA umpire Bill McCallum in a dispute over a strike call in the top of the sixth.

Blue Jays 6, Phillies 1
Phillies 2, Blue Jays 0

Mookie Wilson had four of Toronto's 14 hits as the Blue Jays won the first game of a day-night doubleheader. Jimmy Key, Jimmy Rogers, Duane Ward and Ricky Trlicek combined on a three-hitter.

Tigers 7, Cardinals 3

Cecil Fielder, signed by Detroit as a free agent after a season in Japan, hit three two-run homers. Fielder, who had 38 home runs for Hanshin of the Japanese League last year after four years with Toronto, connected off John Costello in the third inning, Frank DiPino in the fifth and Omar Olivares in the seventh.

Brewers 12, Athletics 2

Milwaukee scored five runs in the third inning and added seven more in the last two innings. The Brewers sent nine batters to the plate in the third against Bob Welch. Terry Francona went 2-for-2 and drove in three runs.

Oakland second baseman Mike Gallego left the game after trying to break up a double play in the second inning. He was hospitalized with a possible kidney contusion and hip bruise and could be out for a week to 10 days.

Mariners 5, Giants 2

Greg Briley hit a two-run homer and six Seattle pitchers limited San Francisco to five hits. Briley's homer in the fifth inning came off loser John Burkett and gave the Mariners a 3-0 lead. Seattle has won all three of its exhibition games.

Mets 5, Orioles 2

Tom O'Malley and Tim Teufel hit run-scoring doubles in New York's three-run 11th inning. Dave Magadan opened the 11th with a walk off Mike Smith and O'Malley followed with an RBI double. Mark Carreon walked and Teufel hit his third double of the game to score O'Malley.

Red Sox 6, Twins 5

Wade Boggs hit a grand slam and Kevin Romine singled home the winning run after failing to bunt in the ninth inning. Randy Kutcher led off the ninth with a double off Paul Abbott. Romine fouled off a couple of pitches attempting to sacrifice, then hit the game-winning single.

Minnesota's Kirby Puckett hit a 450-foot, two-run homer off Wes Gardner in the fifth inning.

Pirates 3, White Sox 2

Third baseman Tracy Woodson's error, Chicago's second of the inning and fourth of the game, allowed the winning run to score in the eighth. Mike York pitched a scoreless eighth for the victory and Stan Belinda worked the ninth for the save.

Yankees 5, Expos 2

Pitcher Jimmy Jones hit a solo homer and hurled two scoreless innings and Alvaro Espinoza hit a two-run single to cap a three-run seventh. Roberto Kelly also homered for the Yankees. Alan Mills, who has never pitched above Class A, was the winner with two innings of scoreless, one-hit relief. Dave Righetti got the save in his spring debut.

Braves 7, Dodgers 5

Tom Redington hit a two-run double in the 10th inning off Don Aase. Pitcher Tommy Greene homered to tie the score in the seventh after pitching out of a fifth-inning jam. Green threw 2 2-3 scoreless innings, rookie Steve Kilner got the victory and another rookie, Steve Ziem, pitched out of trouble in the ninth for the save.

Cubs 1, Indians 0

Greg Maddux allowed two hits in three innings and Mark Grace drove in the only run with a first-inning single. Chicago second baseman Ryne Sandberg, who ended last season with a 90-game errorless streak, committed his first error of the spring on an easy grounder by Tom Lampkin.

Padres 10, Angels 7

Rob Nelson hit a pair of two-run homers, Tony Gwynn added a three-run shot and Fred Lynn, who signed as a free agent last December.

Umps off the field again as talks falter

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. (AP) — Just when it appeared that baseball's labor problems were over, the agreement to return major league umpires to spring training games fell apart over the choice of an arbitrator.

The umpires were scheduled to begin working spring training games Friday but that now appears impossible after Wednesday's fallout. Judge Stanley Greenberg withdrew as the independent arbitrator at the request of management.

The sides were due back in U.S. District Court in Philadelphia today, when baseball will pursue a preliminary injunction from Judge Norma Shapiro to force an end to the work stoppage.

The umpires decided to boycott spring training games as a protest when they were not consulted over rescheduling of regular season games following the settlement of the 32-day spring training lockout.

Baseball took the matter to court, but the sides averted a hearing when they agreed to arbitrate the issue. That appeared to clear the way for umpires to return on Friday.

But a dispute arose over the choice of Greenberg to hear the case. Shapiro refused a management request to disqualify him as arbitrator but when the sides later appeared before Greenberg, he withdrew.

That sent the umpires and management back to Shapiro's courtroom, where she proposed a number of other possible arbitrators, including former baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth and former Vice President Walter Mondale.

In each case, one side or the other would not accept Shapiro's suggestions and the day ended with no agreement.

The American Contract Bridge League named Dr. George Rosenranz, Mexico's leading player and noted bridge theoretician, as the ACBL Honorary Member for 1990. It is a fitting tribute to a person who has contributed much to the game.

In a recent tournament, Dr. Rosenkranz sat South, partnered by his wife, Edith, when this hand cropped up. East took advantage of the vulnerability to inject an overcall and South showed a balanced hand of 23-24 points. By agreement, North's three-club bid was a major-suit inquiry, and the spade game was reached.

West led a heart, covered by the nine, and declarer allowed East's ten to win. South followed low on the heart return and West ruffed, but that defender did not relish having the lead. A low diamond was selected and East's jack lost to the ace.

Declarer tried two rounds of trumps in an effort to drop the queen. When her majesty failed to appear, declarer finessed the ten of diamonds, discarded a club on the king of diamonds and then threw West on lead with a trump. West was forced either to lead a club into declarer's tenace or else yield a ruff-sluff by exiting with a diamond.

Dr. Rosenkranz makes an interesting point. When trapped in an endplay and you are forced to break a suit (diamonds in this case), it is invariably correct to lead your honor in the suit. Not only might that cause declarer to take a wrong view but, if the cards lie as in the diagram, declarer will not be able to set up a third diamond trick and will end up a trick short.

King, Jordan selected for inclusion in National Women's Hall of Fame

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tennis star Billie Jean King and politician Barbara Jordan will be two of the next four members of the National Women's Hall of Fame.

The four were chosen from a field of about 1,000 nominees, Sally Parr, the hall's executive director, said Wednesday.

The four are:

—The late Margaret Bourke-White, a photojournalist who worked for Life and Fortune magazines.

King

—King, who was ranked the No. 1 women's tennis player four times in her career and is the first woman athlete to earn more than $100,000 in a year.

—Florence Siebert, a medical researcher who in the 1930s isolated and purified protein, paving the way for an accurate test for tuberculosis.

—Jordan, a Texas Democrat who served in Congress from 1972 through 1978. She was the first woman and the first black to give the keynote address at a national political convention.

The four will be inducted into the hall in Seneca Falls, N.Y., on Aug. 26.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Andrew Dice Clay's ex-wife is seeking $3 million in a palimony suit against the foul-mouthed comedian.

The suit filed Wednesday by divorce attorney Marvin Mitchelson seeks half of Clay's property holdings, which Mitchelson estimated at $6 million.

Kathy Swanson, Clay's former wife, claims their 1986 divorce settlement granting her $18,000 in alimony defrauded her of half the couple's accumulated possessions.

"She was basically supporting him," Mitchelson said of the couple's relationship, which spanned five years of living together and two years of marriage. "He agreed when he hit it big that they would share the proceeds."

The complaint also alleged that Clay threatened Swanson with violence if she contested their divorce.

Neither Clay's manager nor his publicist returned phone calls.

Clay's expletive-laden routines have prompted record stores to yank his recordings. He was banned from the MTV cable network after uttering an obscenity during a live broadcast of the 1989 Music Video Awards.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dar Robinson was one of the greatest stunt men of all time, actor Danny Glover told a jury in a lawsuit stemming from Robinson's death when a stunt went wrong in the Arizona desert.

Glover, who saw Robinson work his stunt magic in the film "Lethal Weapon," was called as a witness Wednesday by attorney Jerry Kroll, who represents Robinson's family in a multimillion-dollar suit against Dino De Laurentis Entertainment Group and Productions Ltd.

Kroll maintains that Robinson died because an ambulance was unavailable at the remote desert location where he had a motorcycle accident while filming "Million Dollar Mystery" in 1986.

DEG and Productions Ltd. maintain there was no ambulance on the set because Robinson felt it was "bad luck" and an insult to his stunt abilities to have one around.

But Glover, who referred to Robinson as "one of the greatest stunt men ever," testified that an ambulance and fire engines were present when Robinson executed a dangerous stunt on the set of "Lethal Weapon" earlier in 1986.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — He doesn't wear a badge, but Mayor Sonny Bono figures he has enough moral authority to chase down speeding motorcyclists.

Straddling his black Harley-Davidson last weekend, his honor spotted a motorcyclist rocket through an intersection on Palm Canyon Drive, the main thoroughfare in the desert resort 100 miles east of Los Angeles.

"I chased him down," Bono said Tuesday. "He said something about not being able to read my shirt, and I told him, 'You'd better learn to read real fast unless you want to spend the night in jail.'"

That's when the young rider noticed "Mayor Sonny Bono" printed on Bono's T-shirt. The mayor, who became famous singing "I Got You Babe" with ex-wife Cher, got his man.

"We have had hundreds of those bullet bikes come in in the last three years," the mayor said. "If they want to behave, fine. But most just go screaming through here."

(AP) — Former boxing champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler and his wife, Bertha, have agreed to a divorce settlement.

Hagler

Neither Hagler, 35, nor his wife would reveal details of the agreement, which was reached Tuesday. Their seven-year marriage will end officially in three months. Bertha Hagler had been seeking a $4 million settlement.

"I'm glad it's all over," Hagler said as he left the courtroom.

Bertha Hagler, 36, had testified the former champion hit her in the face and punched her in the ribs hard enough to make her knees buckle in 1987, the year he lost the middleweight title to Sugar Ray Leonard. Hagler denied striking his wife.

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Aviation pioneer Lester J. Maitland, who in 1927 became the first pilot to fly from the U.S. mainland to Hawaii, died Tuesday. He was 91.

As an Army pilot, Maitland and copilot-navigator Albert F. Hegenberger flew a three-engine Fokker dubbed the "Bird of Paradise" from Oakland, Calif., to Wheeler Field on Oahu in June, 1927.

Maitland and Hegenberger were awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, and were feted at a huge celebration in Honolulu.

Latest findings reiterate vitamins, veggies inhibit precancerous activity

By Jean Carper

In a scientific first, Canadian researchers have discovered that eating green vegetables, taking vitamin A pills and eating less fat may discourage benign breast disease that can lead to full-blown breast cancer.

Carper

Specifically, by analyzing biopsy and dietary reports, scientists found green vegetables and vitamins seemed to put up road blocks to development of early precancerous cell changes, sometimes known as fibrocystic disease, says T. Gregory Hislop, at the Cancer Control Agency of British Columbia.

In fact, women consuming the most green vegetables and/or vitamin A supplements were less than half as likely to develop this abnormal cell growth.

Such benign breast disease, says Dr. Hislop, can progress to more cancerlike cell changes called "serious atypias" and to breast cancer. Theory is, if you block early cell changes, tumors cannot grow.

Dr. Hislop says neither vegetables nor vitamins seemed to do any good in thwarting later-stage "serious atypias." However, a high-fat diet put women at higher risk. Dr. Hislop theorizes green vegetables and vitamin A help block early stages of precancerous breast disease, and that fat promotes later stages.

The coconut oil defense

Worried about eating coconut oil? Don't be, says Harvard authority Dr. Vigen K. Babayan. "There's no danger unless you greatly overdo it."

Because coconut oil is a saturated fat, he says, everyone assumed it must be bad for you, just like highly saturated lard and butterfat which can boost cholesterol and clog arteries. But, Dr. Babayan insists, "Not all saturated fats are alike and not all are bad."

Coconut oil and meat fats are chemically quite different, he says. Dairy fats and lard are made up of long chains of fatty acid molecules. But coconut oil (and palm kernel oil) are made up of shorter-chain fatty acids. The body processes these shorter-chain acids differently, says Dr. Babayan.

Though agreeing the danger of tropical oils is "uncertain," the American Medical Association still recently called for better food labeling so people who want to avoid such oils can.

Jean Carper is a columnist for King Features Syndicate.

A biologist at Argonne National Labs in Illinois examines test samples which indicate that women who smoke may increase the risk of osteoporosisfragile bones due to calcium loss. In laboratory experiments, severe bone loss was produced in mice after the introduction of cadmium at levels roughly equal to that found in the blood of cigarette smokers. This bone loss contributes to osteoporosis, which afflicts many older women.

Evidence suggests body can attack certain cancers

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Scientists have found evidence that people with breast or pancreatic cancer naturally mount an attack on their tumors, raising hopes for a treatment that might make the reaction more powerful.

Patients with those diseases produce tumor-killing white blood cells that healthy people lack, said researcher Olivera Finn.

She and colleagues have identified a substance on cancer cells that appears to be the target of the attack, and they hope that a vaccinelike treatment might boost the anti-cancer response, she said this week.

Finn, an assistant professor in the department of microbiology and immunology at the Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C., spoke at a science writers seminar sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

More than 150,000 cases of breast cancer and 28,000 cases of pancreatic cancer are expected to be diagnosed this year.

Finn, with graduate students Donna Barnd and Keith Jerome, found that patients with either cancer produced immune system cells that could kill cancer cells while ignoring normal ones. That occurred in all 14 pancreatic cancer patients and all six breast cancer patients studied, Finn said.

Since no such cells could be found in healthy patients, they seem to come from a natural response to the tumors, she said.

The target of the killer cells was found to be epithelial cell mucin, which is found on the tumor cells, Finn said.

Tumors probably survive the attack by growing faster than killer cells can destroy them, she said. Or perhaps killer cells go after mucin that tumor cells secrete in large amounts into the bloodstream, instead of concentrating their attack on the tumor cells themselves.

A vaccine based on mucin might boost the immune system response and make it more effective against the cancer, she said.

The next step is to do large studies of patients with breast or pancreatic cancer to see how strong the natural immune system response is, she said. A vaccine may be ready for testing within a few years, she said.

Dr. Drew Pardoll of the Johns Hopkins University of Medicine cautioned in a telephone interview that mucin is also produced by some normal cells in the body. That could present a problem if one wants to encourage an immune system attack on the substance, he said.

But Finn said the killer cells do not destroy normal cells in the test tube. In the body, she said, the anatomy of organs that contain mucin-bearing normal cells appears to shield those cells from contact with the immune system.

In another presentation, Patricia Steeg of the National Cancer Institute reported the discovery of a gene that appears to suppress a cancer cell's ability to spread within the body.

In several kinds of cancer, the more active the gene was, the less ability the cancer had to spread, she said.

Upcoming studies will see if the level of activity of the gene, called nm23, can predict the spreading behavior of breast, lung, bladder and prostate cancer cells, she said.

If the gene does suppress spreading, called metastasis, it may be useful as a tool to find drugs that can hinder that process, she said.

Also at the meeting, Dr. Dennis Slamon of the University of California, Los Angeles, School of Medicine presented an update on studies of another gene, called HER-2/neu.

Patients whose breast or ovarian cancers show abnormally high numbers of copies of this gene per cancer cell had faster relapses and shorter survival times, he said.

The extra gene copies lead to extra copies of a protein called a receptor on the cell surface, which may give the cell a growth advantage, he said. The receptor probably snares some kind of growth-promoting substance for the cell's use, he said.

In one experiment, the growth of human breast cancers implanted in mice declined 80 percent when the receptor's functioning was blocked by proteins called monoclonal antibodies, Slamon said. When the antibodies were removed, the suppression disappeared, he said.

Such antibodies may prove useful someday in therapy, he said.

Conflict of interest prompts bureaucracy switch

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department is giving up responsibility for studying long-term health risks for workers at nuclear weapons plants, but Secretary James D. Watkins says he'll increase daily monitoring of the employees.

Watkins announced this week that he has begun negotiations for the Department of Health and Human Services to take over the long-term health studies, which seek to answer such questions as whether exposure to low-level radiation causes increased cancer risks.

The move reflected growing complaints from Congress, labor unions and communities near weapons plants that the Energy Department, which owns the facilities, cannot be trusted to perform objective studies of possible health hazards.

Last month, the author of a federal study that found a unusually high rate of cancers among workers at the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant in Colorado charged that Energy Department officials had pressured him to water down his findings in 1986 and 1987.

The allegation by Gregg Wilkinson, a former epidemiologist at the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico, which designs nuclear weapons, is under investigation by the Energy Department's inspector general.

Watkins' decision was prompted by a panel of health physics experts, which said in a report released this week that the department should monitor workers' health but should cede responsibility to another federal agency for studying long-term health issues.

The panel, headed by Kristine Gebbie, the secretary of health for the state of Washington, said the public does not trust the Energy Department to do its own studies.

"Because the department's role is to promote energy production, there is an inherent potential conflict between immediate production goals and health and safety goals," the report said.

"To restore public trust, to assure the highest scientific quality, and to assure the independence of investigators, the department needs an independent system," it added.

The panel also recommended that the Energy Department spend more time studying health risks from worker exposure to non-nuclear hazards at the weapons plants, such as toxic chemicals and beryllium, which are used in weapons manufacturing.

Laser technology isn't panacea, experts say

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A "Star Wars" medical mentality has bolstered the use of lasers to unclog blocked arteries, but other methods appear to be more effective and less costly, radiologists said.

Doctors meeting this week for the Society of Cardiovascular and Intervention Radiology conference also said studies show the laser method increases the chances of patient complications.

The radiologists issued the caution after surveying the 1,300 members attending.

Several papers were submitted comparing lasers to the more common balloon angioplasty, in which plastic balloons are pushed through an artery to clear obstruction.

The papers showed "lasers actually have results that are somewhat poorer" than the balloons when used in partially clogged arteries, said Dr. Arina van Breda, an associate professor of radiology at George Washington University in Washington.

"Lasers should not be considered to have any proven efficacy," said van Breda, program director for the society. "They should be considered experimental and patients should be forewarned."

The doctors said there are some situations in which lasers should be used — chiefly when the blood vessel is completely blocked, preventing the insertion of a balloon. But they said lasers should be used only for backup, not as a primary treatment.

Van Breda said patients are attracted by the idea of lasers, which sound more advanced than balloon angioplasty.

"People think that since they are high-tech, very expensive and very sexy, they must work — it's kind of a Star Wars medical mentality," she said.

Dr. Daniel Choy, who heads the St. Lukes-Roosevelt Hospital Center laser laboratory at Columbia University in New York, said he did not totally disagree with the findings.

"Certainly, laser angioplasty is still experimental," Choy said. "But I don't think lasers by any means are dead — they are being constantly improved."

He said lasers must improve their reclosure rate if they are to ever supplant or even complement balloon angioplasty.

Record lovers mourn vinyl's demise

By Keith L. Thomas
N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — Bruce Barham bought his first album in 1964. It was "Meet the Beatles."

"I was 12," the 38-year-old Atlanta salesman and record collector recalled. "I was so excited. I kept thinking, 'Man, an album — it'll last forever.' "

He was wrong.

Vinyl is vanishing — at least as far as retailers are concerned.

"I really find it appalling to walk into some of these so-called record stores these days," said Barham, whose own collection includes more than 12,000 albums. "Most of them, especially the major chains, simply don't carry records anymore."

How true.

Between 1978 and 1988, the number of LPs and EPs (12-inch "extended play" records) shipped by manufacturers dropped nearly 80 percent, from 341 million to 72 million, according to the Recording Industry Association of America (RIAA).

Conversely, the number of CDs shipped went from zero in 1978 to 149.7 million in 1988. Cassette shipments rose from 61.3 million to 450 million in the same period, the RIAA says.

In stores, CDs now outnumber albums by as much as 6-to-1; cassettes, about 12-to-1. Many new releases — such as Grammy winner Milli Vanilli's "Girl You Know It's True" — are released only on CD and cassette.

ALBUM OWNERS (an estimated 65 million Americans own turntables) don't think the CD explosion is groovy. It's made it tough — if not impossible — for them to get new releases on vinyl.

"Personally, I hate to lose LPs," said Don Radcliffe, vice president of operations for Justin Entertainment, a local wholesale distributor. "A lot of people grew up with vinyl. To take it away, you take away a part of their history."

On a professional level, Radcliffe says more and more retailers are simply avoiding or dropping vinyl altogether.

"People are now just trying to get rid of their existing vinyl inventories," Radcliffe said. "So it's not uncommon for music lovers to walk into their favorite store and all of a sudden find all the LPs gone."

That doesn't sit well with some.

"I still haven't bought a CD player yet," said Barham, standing in a small room lined with LPs, everything from blues to jazz to rock to Haitian voodoo music. "I think I can hold out another year. I sort of feel like the CD is being forced on me. And that really bothers me."

It's not just the dwindling availability of LPs that worries Danny Beard, co-owner of Wax N' Facts in Little Five Points. Much of the music that would routinely be issued on vinyl — such as new recordings by little-known bands on independent labels, and classic reissues of early R&B and country recordings by the majors — probably won't come out on CDs. And he speaks not just as a record retailer, but as president of DB Records, the South's most successful independent rock record label — which recorded the earliest releases of the B-52's and Atlanta's Swimming Pool Q's.

HOWEVER, LOCAL stores such as Wax N' Facts, Chapter 3, Wuxtry, The Book Nook and Metronome still carry impressive vinyl inventories — much of it in used records. In some cases, LP lovers can pick up gems from a collection someone sold off to go CD.

"I'd say about 70 percent of our stock is vinyl," Beard said. "However, we're also starting to carry a lot of used CDs. The way things are going now, you almost have to."

"You want to know what really killed the LP?" asked Jarid Neff, Southern marketing manager for Warner Bros./Reprise. "I think the cassette started the demise, the whole mobile-music thing.

"You know, the boom box, the car cassette player," he said. "The CD just basically delivered the knockout punch."

Consider:

- When compact disc players broke into the market in the early 1980s, the average cost was about $500. Now, a decent CD player can be bought for as low as $100.
- While CDs can be expensive ($13 to $15 generally, averaging $5 to $6 more than an album), more and more used CDs are becoming available for $5 to $10.
- Record companies are exploring ways to make CD packaging more creative and aesthetically appealing. Some copies of the Rolling Stones' "Steel Wheels" CD, for instance, came in a limited-edition steel box.
- Also, more record labels are imposing stiff penalities on vinyl returns and drastically reducing their stock of LPs. All but Top 40 and mainstream artists are generally dropped when labels start cutting catalogs.

BUT SOME audiophiles contend CDs can't capture all the sounds that vinyl can. There are also questions about CDs being impervious to wear and tear.

Whatever their eventual drawbacks, CDs are fast taking over the musical landscape.

Some say the next generation will be raised on CDs.

Single '45s' headed for extinction, experts say

By Joe Earle
N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — The 45-rpm single — the little record with the big hole that kept a couple of generations rocking around the clock and dancing in the street — is quickly going the way of the eight-track tape.

"They're dying. It's only a matter of time. It's inevitable," said Skid Weiss, national director of communications for Warner-Elektra-Atlantic records. "The demise of the 45 is a certainty. ... It's a dinosaur, an extinct configuration. It's going to be an extinct species."

Times and tastes are changing in the music business, and the signs are bad for singles. Vinyl is yesterday, record company officials say, and 45-rpm records can't fight the power of those newer kids on the block: "cassingles," hit- song cassette tapes.

Some record sellers believe new Top 40 vinyl singles may fade away from retail stores within a year.

Nationally, the number of 45s shipped by record companies dropped from 82 million in 1987 to 66 million in 1988 to 22 million during the first six months of 1989, according to the Recording Industry Association of America.

In Atlanta, many chain record outlets already have pulled new 45s from their shelves, and owners of mom-and-pop shops who try to stock singles say they sometimes have a hard time filling their new-release bins. About half as many new titles are being released compared with a year ago, record distributors say. During a recent week, only six of Billboard Magazine's Top 10 were available anywhere in the 45-rpm format.

Why? Record companies say it's the Walkman-ing and boom-boxing of America.

"It's just the now generation, instead of my generation, buying singles; they're buying cassette singles now," said 29-year-old Billy Slavens, a tape buyer for Tower Records in Atlanta who has 6,000 45s in his personal collection, including just about every one Dolly Parton or Johnny Mathis ever released.

But some store owners and record distributors counter that record companies are speeding the single's demise by changing the way records are priced. Several labels recently changed their pricing system to lower the wholesale prices for 45s, but they will not accept returns of unsold singles.

"Most of our stores are living hand-to-mouth," said Bob Patten, singles buyer for Nova Distributing Co. of Norcross, which supplies stores across the Southeast. "They can't afford to eat singles."

Once new 45s disappear from record stores, some still may be manufactured to fill jukeboxes, supply radio stations or cater to the singles-based "oldies" market, record distributors say. But for hit singles, it's twilight time.

"It's a shame, but it's going to happen," said Harry Clark, manager of Clark's Music, a store that has sold singles since the little records first took off in the 1950s. "It's definitely a dying era," he said. "Progress. Supposedly we're making progress here."

Camp-out memories marketed in cookie

By Linda Anderson

Remember when you were a kid and got to go on camping trips? Remember sitting around the campfire at night, listening to crickets chirp (at least, you hoped they were crickets), telling ghost stories and making that camp-out classic marshmallow-and-chocolate-and-graham cracker dessert, S'mores?

Anderson

Neither do I. I didn't learn about S'mores until I was in college and had already decided I didn't want to go on another camping trip as long as I lived. But some things about camping trips are worth saving, and S'more is one of them.

Evidently the folks at Nabisco think so too, because they have recently begun marketing Suddenly S'mores, a marshmallow and fudge creme graham cookie that is supposed to be flavored just like those S'mores of old. However, these are S'mores with a difference — according to information from Nabisco, they are "the first cookie created specifically for use in the microwave oven." Nothing like cooking over an open fire, I always say. Nothing at all, in fact.

Well, since the company sent us this valuable information — complete with complimentary box of Suddenly S'more — we decided to check out the cookie for taste, price and advertising accuracy. After all, there are worse jobs than taste-testing cookies.

Price for a 10-½ ounce box containing eight packs of two cookies each (16 cookies in all) is $1.99. That's about 12 cents per cookie.

Label advertising claims, "Great S'mores taste and fun ... Ready in seconds. New Suddenly S'mores are specially made to be popped into your microwave oven. In just seconds watch them magically transform into a warm, delicious cookie of melted chocolatey fudge, ooey-gooey (no, I did not make this up) marshmallow and graham cookies. Like the S'mores you've always loved, without the fuss or mess."

Then, you find out that "Suddenly S'more are also delicious right out of the pack, for those times when you're not near a microwave (like when you're on a camping trip, I guess). So take Suddenly S'mores along to school, work anywhere you might want a snack."

It turns out we do have a microwave at work, so of course that's what did — heated them up in the microwave. The first taste-test resulted in cookies zapped a little too long and coming out a little too soggy (not burned, though, thank goodness). For the second test, zapping time was reduced, and the result was much more satisfying. The problem here is that microwaves are almost as individual as the people who own them, so be careful the first time or two you heat them up.

But as we were enjoying the cookies — and they were good — the very logical question arose: What is so difficult about making real S'more with real graham crackers, marshmallows and chocolate? If it's so easy to zap them in the microwave, why not zap the real thing?

It's a question I couldn't answer. Maybe next time we'll try it and see how it works.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Toy makers hoping new items captivate children

By Jane Clifford
Copley News Service

If you still are trying to find places to put all the toys your children got for Christmas last year — or worse, still paying for them — then you probably don't want to hear that toy makers are busy working on what to sell you this year.

They are.

About 1,300 of them showed up recently at the American International Toy Fair in New York, with more than 5,000 new items. They displayed 150,000 different types of toys at the 10-day event, sponsored by the Toy Manufacturers Association.

The big question for them and the 18,000 buyers who came to the show is: What will be the next Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle, the next Nintendo?

Nobody would be pinned down on that one. The Ninja Turtles are starring in a movie to be released this week, and that is expected to keep the popular reptiles in the No. 1 rank among action figures.

And, since Nintendo devours a full 18 percent of the $13.4 billion toy market, it's not likely any toy could catch the video-game system anytime soon. (Lots of talk, though, of Sega's Genesis System, whose game cartridge selection and superior graphics are catching consumers' eyes. And Atari's new hand-held color system was mentioned as competition for Nintendo's Game Boy, even at almost twice the price.)

BUYERS LIKE Rich Brady of PlayCo, a chain of toy stores, and Sue Ottosen, whose family owns Toys Etc. stores in Southern California, made dozens of appointments with manufacturers to see what they could add to their stock.

"For the last couple of years the toy industry has been getting back to basics," Ottosen explained.

"1990 will be a good year for toys," Brady predicted. "Especially for dolls. Just don't pick the wrong dolls."

Brady acknowledged that the toy business is still largely a guessing game. The trick is to know what to buy and have it in the store when the customers come looking for it. It's also knowing when to stop buying it, preferably before you end up with lots of excess inventory.

So they watched as demonstrators fed baby dolls, cranked up race cars, dealt cards, tossed dice and combed curly synthetic locks.

"Tyco had the best lines overall," said Ottosen, who added that she noticed price changes for the first time this year on items by several toy makers. "Because the cost of materials has been going up, prices have been going up a steady 5 percent to 10 percent. But this year, they either kept the prices the same or they dropped them a little."

But a bad toy, no matter what the price, will sit on the shelves. So they listened as salesmen promised them the world.

"They always think their toy is going to do fantastic," said Ottosen. "That's part of the sales pitch."

"After a while, you get a certain feel for the products, a certain feel for the manufacturers," said Brady, who has been in the business for 20 years.

THESE TWO buyers mirrored each other on their opinions of three new products that emerged as would-be winners in 1990, and each noted several other items as potentially strong sellers.

Here's the unofficial list, based on interviews with them and others at the toy fair. Most of these toys are expected to reach the stores beginning in the summer. Prices, when listed, are suggested retail:

■ Victorian Doll House. This model of a turn-of-the-century house is from Playmobil. The 2½-story structure comes in several snap-together pieces, has working doors, windows and even cabinets. The price is expected to be around $170. A broad assortment of people, furnishings and accessories will be sold separately. A smaller version of the house will be marketed later in the summer and priced at around $100.

■ Ballerina Doll. From Tyco, the company that brought you Oopsie Daisy, the No. 1 doll last Christmas, comes this new entry. Dressed in a tutu, she pirouettes gracefully (thanks to batteries) and will also hold on to an exercise bar that comes with her — all for about $40.

■ Baby Uh-Oh. Hasbro's inventors move playtime closer to reality with this one. She wears plastic diapers that, uh, change colors when she drinks cold water. The "dirty" ones can be "cleaned" by dipping in warm water. Cold water also makes a diaper rash appear, but it can be "cured" by wiping Baby Uh-Oh off with a warm washcloth. She also has a bandage on her arm that appears with the application of cold water and, yes, disappears with warm. She will sell for around $25.

THESE WERE the three most-talked-about toys, but there were other items on buyers' shopping lists that you can count on seeing in stores this year:

■ Go Go My Walking Pup. More realism from Hasbro here. This is a mechanical dog whose stride and head movements are so natural they command a second look. Even the soft, furry coat rustles when the dog walks. Go Go will cost about $45 and may be the answer for parents who don't want to worry with a real pet for their kids. Besides, the cost of batteries could never come close to what the food and vet bills would total.

■ Monopoly Junior. All the money is in $1 bills and the games take less time to complete than Parker Brothers' original version. Those factors alone may be all that's necessary to make this a hit with parents who have played the classic board game with their children.

■ Cool Cuts Kara. She's from Kenner and one of several dolls released by manufacturers this year whose hair can be cut, styled and replaced. Kara comes with safety scissors and assorted accessories. Replacement wigs are available.

Ottosen is nervous about this one. She wonders if little girls like her 4-year-old daughter won't get the notion that they can cut the hair on all their dolls, even the ones whose hair can't be replaced. Worse, she's anxious it may encourage them to cut their own hair.

■ Real Model Collection. More dolls, this time fashioned after high-visibility models Cheryl Tiegs, Beverly Johnson and Christie Brinkley. Matchbox breaks from its traditional line of miniature cars in an attempt to take even a small portion of Barbie's $300 million-plus in annual sales.

■ Barbie. Dozens of new designs will be available for the queen of fashion dolls this year. Most notable, the Bob Mackie Barbie, for which the designer created an outfit. A collectible model, she'll go for around $100. Air Force Barbie, second in the American Beauty series, comes in a Pentagon-approved flight uniform for around $20.

BARBIE'S MAGICAL Mansion, according to its maker, is "the most elegant house Barbie has ever owned," and the pink palace is expected to carry a price tag above $300.

But Barbie is her wardrobe and the newest additions include everything from workout clothes to luxurious lingerie. Famous for her bathing suits, this year's styles include versions that change color when wet. There's more — enough items to fill up a six-page press release from Mattel — so clean out Barbie's closets. Prices vary.

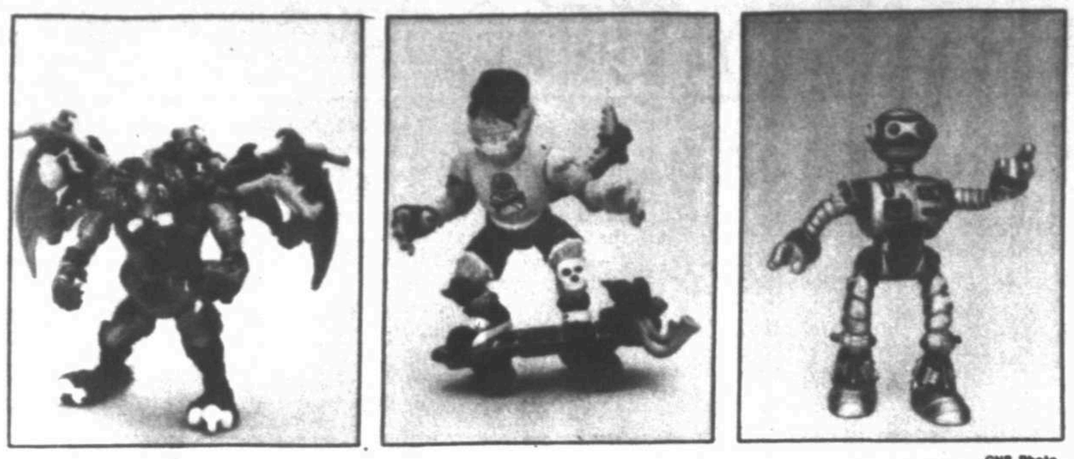
■ Barbie Lifestyles. This is Mattel's move to grab girls as they begin to tire of Barbie, the doll. Now there's Barbie, the lifestyle. Fashion bags for school and play are the first non-toy items in the line. And Barbie trading cards will be the first feminine version of an item that generated an estimated $400 million from boys' interest in baseball last year alone. Dress Up Magic will allow Barbie's young fans to dress in clothing patterned after the doll's fashions.

Buyers interviewed gave this line a lukewarm reception. They say it might do well with very young girls, but probably won't work to keep the Barbie buying habit alive in girls who have outgrown the doll.

■ Dick Tracy. Playmates Toys can only hope this line will be as popular as its Ninja Turtles. It will be released in conjunction with the new Disney movie by the same name starring Warren Beatty. Action figures will include 14 good and bad guys. Also look for the hero's squad car and the villains' getaway vehicle; an I.D. Composite Kit for junior sleuths; a Crimestopper's Kit complete with handcuffs, secret ring, badge, magnifying glass and other items; and, of course, a 2-Way Wristwatch that tells time when junior cops are not trying to summon D.T. himself. Prices vary.

BRADY BELIEVES this one is dead in the water if the kids don't like or don't see the movie.

■ Newborn Baby Shivers. Another Tyco doll, this one has a special mechanism that triggers shivering in the baby when her clothes are removed. All it takes to stop the shivering is a soft dressing gown (included) or a big hug. She'll be priced around $30.



CNS Photo

■ New Kids on the Block. The singing group from Boston has bombed with everyone over 15, but is wildly popular with the girls in the elementary and junior-high set. That's good enough for Hasbro, which plans to cash in on that appeal with a line including everything from action figures and tiny concert outfits to telephones, radios and other electronic equipment emblazoned with the group's image. Dolls start at $12.99.

■ Three-in-one Table. Fisher-Price, synonymous with toys for infants and preschoolers, debuted this outdoor toy that has a top that lifts to reveal two inner compartments, one for sand and one for water, or anything else parents and kids would like to put in them. When the top is down, it doubles as a picnic or work table. Playskool's version of the same item is the Sand and Water Activity Table, priced at about $60.

■ Mickey Says. This Mattel product is an electronic talking game for preschoolers. Mickey asks a child to "find my foot," and when the child presses on the right body part, Mickey is full of praise. Adaptable to more difficult games, Mickey Says will go for about $30. You will save a little on batteries, though, because he automatically shuts off after three minutes of no play.

■ Computer Warriors. Another Mattel introduction, these changeable figures fly, hide and battle it out to save a computer from a deadly "virus."

MONOPOLY JUNIOR was a standout with Brady and some buyers, but it was by no means the only interesting new board game they saw. Milton Bradley has a closet full. The one that grabbed the most media attention in New York was made with glasnost in mind. Gorbachev is a game that features Mikhail himself cutting his way through reams of red tape to find "what every true Russian longs for — things like American blue jeans, Japanese cameras and French perfume." Cost is countless rubles or 18 American dollars.

(The company also has come out with commemorative puzzles depicting the historic opening of the Berlin Wall. Three separate motifs are available in 500-piece assortments, each under $3.)

Neither Brady nor Ottosen thought much of the Gorbachev game. It's a fad, they say, that may or may not make it past one buying season.

Clever Endeavor (around $25), a tricky and challenging word game, was among those introduced by The Games Gang, makers of Pictionary.

Another Milton Bradley entry is Sabado Gigante, patterned after the No. 1 show on Univision, a Spanish-language television network carried on cable. The home version of the 3½-hour variety show also stars host Don Francisco. It will cost about $23 and comes with bilingual instructions.

And then there's Mall Madness, Milton Bradley's shopping spree in a box. The electronic game includes a three-dimensional box that looks like a mall and a "voice" that guides players through the game. Credit cards included, of course, and the cost is about $33.

THESE ARE just the highlights among thousands of new toys, and many repeats of previously released and popular toys will be back on toy store shelves.

Look for new versions of Cabbage Patch dolls, more adventures from GI Joe and He-Man. More entries in the mind-boggling assortment of My Little Pony and fresh variations on activity toys for infants and preschoolers.

It's important to point out that, with the exception of Playmobil, all these are what is known as mass-market toys, commonly referred to in the business as the promotional toys (as opposed to non-promotional, mostly educational toys, whose manufacturers do not advertise on TV).

The success of any of them this year depends on many variables, not the least of which is television advertising.

"Commercials drive the demand for the products," Brady explained. "They can make all the difference in the world (with the success of the product)."

"When you walk through the showrooms, they say they're going to have $3 million of advertising," said Ottosen. "You buy the product and you rely on this advertising. If they pull the ads, the product sits on the shelf."

SOMETIMES THE ads work against toy stores. Brady said that commercials often show up on TV for products PlayCo doesn't carry because of shoddy workmanship or poor play value. In those cases, store clerks are trained to tell customers just that so they understand why they can't find it in the store.

Now that the toy fair is over and both he and Ottosen are back home, they will have to make decisions, order their toys. And do it soon. Most everything is made overseas and takes time to make, ship, unpack and get on the shelves. It will be many months from now, almost time for another toy fair, before they know whether their instincts, their second-guessing of your buying habits, proved right again.

Growing long hair is pain in the neck

By Erma Bombeck

On Jan. 1, my secretary and I made a pact. We were both going to let our hair grow. We had shared the same short, perky hairstyle for too many years. This is a log I kept of our march toward fat, sexy hair.

Bombeck

Jan. 5: Norma has a picture she clipped from a catalog of a woman with her hair pulled back and neatly done in a bun. She hung it on her bulletin board. I have a picture of Crystal Gayle sitting on her hair to inspire me.

Jan. 15: It has been three weeks since I had a haircut. I don't notice much difference in the back and on top, but the sides have grown 2 inches. Norma said she looked at combs today.

Feb. 3: Over lunch, we both agreed that we thought letting our hair grow would be harder than it was. As we talked, I noticed she kept twisting her neck as if she had a tic of some kind. She said it was just a little annoying bit of "wispies" that caught on her jacket collar. Nothing she couldn't handle. I told her my sides were like that. They were too short to hook behind the ears but too long to let hang. I took down Crystal Gayle's picture and put up one of Cher. Sitting on your hair could be bad for the ends.

Feb. 20: Norma dedicates her life to twisting hairs at the nape of her neck. She does it when she is on the phone, taking dictation or sorting mail. Mine is starting to grow on top, but it won't curl. I wrap it around the curling iron and count to 30. I have enough spray on it to survive a flight deck on an aircraft carrier during takeoffs.

March 10: After I shampooed my hair this morning, I combed it straight back without curling just to see how I looked. My husband said I resembled Pat Riley, the L.A. Lakers coach. Norma laughed. She has always been so supportive.

March 15: Both of us stared at each other in silence. A big chunk of bang fell over Norma's left eye. Finally I said, "Where are you going with it?"

"I don't know," she said. "It's too curly on top to pull straight back. What about yours?"

"At the rate mine is growing, I will be 97 before I have enough hair to put a rubber band around. A ponytail at age 97 is not a pretty sight."

Both of us had become irritable. I told her long hair made her look "more mature." She told me long hair made my face seem "a little fuller."

Both of us are back to short hair. Being called "sir" by the UPS man is not the worst thing that can happen to you.

DEAR ABBY

Offering friendship is cure for loneliness

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A widow wrote to say that she has never known such loneliness in her life, and she doesn't care what people call her if they just please call her!

Van Buren

So what's wrong with HER dialing finger? Where is it written that lonely people have to wait for others to make the first move?

During my husband's final illness, I decided I would never let myself be lonely. I stayed in touch with friends and kept up as many social activities as I could. After my husband died, I joined a church-sponsored singles group and a widow support group. I made some wonderful new friends by volunteering to teach a senior citizens class in creative writing.

I call my friends and chat (cheerfully) about things of mutual interest. They also feel free to call me. Very often I call someone I know is alone and we go to lunch together — or just visit. I share the good things in my life, and keep the not-so-good things to myself.

It's said that the best place to find a helping hand is at the end of your own arm. It's equally true that the best way to find friends is to BE a friend. Don't sit around waiting for others to end your loneliness — they may not be aware of it. Reach out to them, and end it yourself. — MARIAN OAKS, ACWORTH, GA.

DEAR MARIAN: Hooray for you. It's easy to see why you will never be lonely. Unfortunately, not everyone has your drive and positive attitude, but perhaps your letter will inspire some less aggressive people to reach out and end their loneliness.

DEAR ABBY: I have one for you and your readers on baby-sitting. My wife of 6½ years wants to go and live with her son and his wife and two kids, to baby-sit, clean and cook — and whatever. She says she will be my "weekend wife." Isn't that the pits?

I guess, in time, she will want the job full-time. (No pay.) We are in our 60s; this marriage is the second time around for both of us. I was married 36 years to my first wife — until the good Lord took her. Wife No. 2 was divorced. Should I go for this, or shouldn't I? — SUCKER TO THE STEP-GRANDCHILDREN

DEAR "SUCKER": Don't go for it! She married you for better or for worse — not for "weekends"!

DEAR ABBY: Yes, I know, every child gets cranky and acts up occasionally in a restaurant, but one of the parents usually takes the child out of the room if the child doesn't calm down within a few minutes.

We were sitting at a table next to a toddler who was screaming at the top of his lungs. The mother said (to her husband), "Just ignore it — he'll quiet down." Well, the child didn't quiet down — so an elderly woman at the table across from them turned to the child, and in a very loud and commanding voice bellowed, "WILL YOU PLEASE HUSH UP!"

The child was struck dumb! The parents started to laugh and, believe it or not, the toddler laughed too.

A gentleman was leaving the restaurant, and as he passed the table where the "hush up" woman was seated, he smiled pleasantly, leaned down and said, "Good for you!" — ALSO IN THE CHEERING SECTION

Homemade graphics can enhance home videos

Associated Press

Getting tired of your home videos looking like, well, home videos?

Most people will agree that graphics add quality to any cinematic production. Most people also believe that creating these graphics requires buying thousands of dollars of sophisticated equipment.

However, according to an article in Video Magazine, there are a number of ways to simply and inexpensively spice up videos with homemade graphics.

Most of what you'll use are drawings or cutouts mounted on poster boards. By moving the camera, the desired effect can be achieved.

First, some basic rules. Larger art is easier to create, manipulate and shoot with a video camera than smaller art. Another basic rule is to use no more than 25 characters — letters and spaces, not words — per line. Any more than this may not fit or be read easily in a single frame.

It's also OK to think in pictures as well as words. Video is, after all, a visual medium. By keeping to a visual mode, you rely on video's strength to quickly convey ideas.

Keep the graphics bold, clean and simple. Designs shouldn't have a lot of thin lines or be too complicated to convey information quickly and simply. The condensed format of any typeface should not be used, since it can appear squeezed from the sides. When seen on a TV screen, the holes or empty spaces in some letters and numbers — O, A, D, 4, 8, etc. — appear filled in, and the result can be an illegible jumble.

When shooting graphics, remember the artwork and camera must be parallel with each other, and the lens must be focused on the center of the art.

If camcorder and art are not properly aligned, the taped image will be distorted. For example, if the camcorder is tilted up, the top of the art will be farther away from the lens and will appear smaller than the bottom. Keep this in mind for when you decide to create this distortion.

Lighting graphics requires two equal-wattage lights. They should be placed one on each side at about a 45 degree angle from the artwork. Also, they should be equidistant from it.

Change graphics rapidly. To do this without cutting between shots, put the art on cards, punch holes for a three-hole binder in each one and simply flip from one to the next as the camcorder rolls.

If your graphics are keyed over pictures or drawings, be careful where they're placed. You don't want words coming out of someone's ear, nose or other inappropriate part of the body.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis, left, speaks with Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene in the Lithuanian Legislature Wednesday. Landsbergis has told citizens of the Baltic republic not to resist if Soviet troops try to confiscate their weapons, while Moscow has granted amnesty to citizens who voluntarily surrender their guns.

Soviets offer amnesty to deserters

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Moscow today offered amnesty to army deserters in Lithuania after the Baltic republic put off posting border guards and urged its residents not to resist the Soviet army's confiscation of weapons.

The conciliatory moves appeared aimed at defusing tensions that developed since Lithuania's Parliament declared independence March 11.

The Soviet Defense Ministry announced the amnesty would cover Lithuanian deserters who turned themselves in, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

However, it said, soldiers who refuse to turn themselves in will be "searched out, detained, and be subject to criminal punishment in accordance with current law." The brief report did not give a deadline for the amnesty.

Hundreds of Lithuanian soldiers have deserted in recent weeks, some complaining of harassment and others refusing to serve in a "foreign" army after the republic declared independence.

Tuesday, the Soviet military raided two hospitals to seize 23 deserters. Tass reported earlier today that at least 50 deserters have returned on their own to their units and that more were expected.

Despite the signs of lessening tension, Tass also reported today that Lithuanians continued to sign up for a volunteer "territorial defense" force, which Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has demanded be stopped. Lithuanian leaders have assured him that the border post plans were suspended.

Tass said the enrollment was continuing in the port of Klaipeda and Lithuania's second-biggest city, Kaunas. More than 5,000 people have expressed interest in serving in the brigades, Tass said.

Wednesday, Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis said establishing Lithuanian border posts "would be stepping up confrontation."

Landsbergis also said he advised Lithuanians not to resist if Soviet authorities came to seize their hunting guns. A deadline set by the Kremlin for Lithuanians to turn in their weapons passed Wednesday without incident in the republic.

In Moscow, the commander of Soviet paratroopers alleged Wednesday there had been an increase in attacks on soldiers since the independence declaration.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Col. Gen. Vladislav Achalov reported "a noticeable increase in incidents of provocation against soldiers and armed attacks by groups of young hooligans against both individual soldiers and military sites."

He listed three recent attacks in Kaunas, Lithuania's second-biggest city. Two of the cases involved "hooligans" throwing stones at military guards, he said.

The Ukrainian republic's popular movement Rukh threw its support behind Lithuania's new government and urged rallies to support its independence. But Tass said the Ukrainian government asked local authorities to ban the rallies.

Independence movements in several of the Soviet Union's 15 republics, including Lithuania's Baltic neighbors Estonia and Latvia, are posing a stiff challenge to Gorbachev. Ironically, Gorbachev's political reform since he came to power in 1985 had in part paved the way for such dissent.

In Washington, the State Department Wednesday night underscored the United States' longstanding refusal to recognize the Soviet takeover of Lithuania in 1940. The Soviets crushed the then-independent Baltic republics after sighing a pact with the Nazis.

In an explanation of the status of Lithuanian representatives in the United States, the State Department described legation chief Stasys Lozoraitis as the fully accredited representative of the last free government of Lithuania and as head of the Lithuanian diplomatic service.

25 killed in South African Zulu fighting

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Hundreds of people today took refuge in churches and schools after savage fighting between Zulu war bands with guns and knives left at least 25 people dead and scores injured, authorities said.

Local reporters described the Edendale area of the southeastern province of Natal as a "valley of death" following the battle between rival groups for control of several villages. Bodies were seen lying in village streets and on hillsides in the rugged countryside.

Police and hospital officials said at least 25 people had been killed and 32 critically injured in two days of bloody clashes. Scores of other people suffered minor wounds and more than 200 homes were burned, the officials said.

A police report today said three people were killed in factional fights in other areas during the past 24 hours, including two women stabbed to death in a battle between rival groups.

AP

About 5,000 black trade union members paraded through central Johannesburg today to protest against government plans to sell off state enterprises. The chanting marchers, some of them carrying clubs, called for nationalization of the economy to aid poor blacks.

Police, some of them using tear gas, broke up about 2,000 workers taking part in a similar march in Pretoria.

In Edendale, hospital workers said the death toll was higher than 25 because some bodies were removed by relatives and the deaths not reported. The workers spoke on condition of anonymity.

Police Maj. Piet Kitching said police had been fired on several times as they struggled to halt the fighting. One police officer had been wounded, he said.

Police commanders said the situation was quiet around Edendale today, but some local journalists said they had reports of clashes in remote rural areas. South African army troops were helping police patrol roads and villages to restore order. Authorities said some roads were blocked by bands of armed men and warned travelers not to use them.

Hundreds of people, mainly women, children and old people, fled their homes as bands of Zulus armed with guns, knives and sticks battled for control of the villages dotting the rugged Edendale Valley. Frightened people crammed into community halls and schools for protection and shelter.

Thousands of people stayed away from work today because bus service was suspended or because they were too afraid to leave their homes. Some government offices and courts suspended operations.

Opposition lawmaker Pierre Cronje of the Democratic Party appealed to President F.W. de Klerk to visit the area to witness the devastation. Cronje said police were unable to stop the killing and that the government needed to take drastic action to halt the violence.

East German talks begin; Some call for new protests

WEST BERLIN (AP) — Leaders of the two parties that dominated East Germany's first free elections began crucial talks today that could have a major impact on the pace of unification with West Germany.

The talks came hours before the groups that toppled the old Communist order were to rally throughout the country, protesting the new leadership's alleged ties to the secret police of the ousted Communist regime.

Lothar de Maiziere, leader of the Christian Democrat-led coalition that finished first in the balloting, said he was optimistic that a government could be formed with the rival Social Democrats.

During a visit in the West German city of Stuttgart Wednesday, de Maiziere said that a new governing coalition could be formed within the next two weeks.

However, the Social Democrats, who finished a distant second in the March 18 balloting, have expressed concern about whether they will be able to work with some of the more conservative elements of de Maiziere's alliance.

The Social Democrats also favor a more gradual process for unification than the Christian Democrats.

"We expect to learn where the conversations will lead," Markus Meckel, a Social Democrat leader, told reporters before talks began today in East Berlin.

New Forum, which led the revolt last fall that brought down the government of Communist leader Erich Honecker, called for the demonstrations to force an immediate investigation of new Parliament members.

In Bonn, members of West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's junior coalition partners, the Free Democrats, joined with the opposition Social Democrats in rejecting a Kohl government proposal to grant amnesty to former members of the East German secret police.

"Wrongs cannot be allowed to be swept under the table," Gerhard Baum, deputy chairman of the Free Democrats, said Wednesday.

Voting in their first free elections March 18, East Germans overwhelmingly elected a three-party coalition that favors quick unification with West Germany and a capitalist economy.

De Maiziere, who heads the winning coalition; and Ibrahim Boehme, head of the Social Democrats, both were accused after the elections of having ties to the former secret police.

Both men denied the accusations. Similar charges have been raised against other members of the newly elected 400-member Pariament.

The 85,000-member secret police known as the Stasi and its 109,000 informers were used by East Germany's hard-line Stalinist government for decades to control the country's citizens. The unit was disbanded after Honecker was overthrown.

West German Interior Minister Wolfgang Schaeuble said Tuesday that "a generous amnesty," for the Stasi may be needed to quell further instability in East Germany.

"Not everyone who was forced to report to the Stasi was a criminal," Schaeuble said. Kohl later told reporters he agreed "in principle," with the proposal.

Five of the six political prisoners released from the Robben Island prison Wednesday await processing at a release center in Cape Town, South Africa. They are, from left, Ntemi Khome, Donnavan Saayman, Muzi Nkosi, Thomas Mngadi and Nogale Pelusa.

6 South African prisoners freed

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The government Wednesday freed six black nationalists jailed for crimes ranging from high treason to arms possession, a move the six said was aimed at reducing foreign pressure on South Africa.

"Our release is just a window-dressing to ease pressure from the international community," said Muzi Nkosi, 34, who read a statement on behalf of the prisoners after they left Robben Island prison.

The African National Congress has demanded freedom for all political prisoners before it will open talks on constitutional reforms with the white-minority government.

Five of the prisoners were ANC members and one belonged to the Black Consciousness movement. All were due for release in November or December.

Thirty-five prisoners have been released since February, when 300 prisoners staged a two-week hunger strike to demand freedom for those convicted of politically related crimes.

President F.W. de Klerk has agreed to free prisoners held for nonviolent political crimes, but he has said the release of violent political criminals will have to be negotiated.

De Klerk legalized the ANC and other black groups in February and freed ANC leader Nelson Mandela after 27 years of imprisonment in a bid to bring blacks to the negotiating table.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Chinese immigrants hurt in rush to track

MACAO (AP) — Scores of people were trampled today as thousands of illegal immigrants from neighboring China stormed the gates of a race track in hopes of receiving residency rights in this Portuguese territory.

Police fired shots into the air and arrested more than 1,000 people to bring the situation under control at the track, where about 40,000 people gathered for the registration program.

About 70 people were taken to two hospitals, where they were treated and discharged, said Nuno Roque, chief of staff for Macao's Security Force.

Several pregnant women suffered miscarriages and at least two men suffered broken bones in the rush, said Dr. Leong Chi-fai, director of Kiang Wu Hospital.

The incident occurred one day after the government began an amnesty program for illegal immigrants whose children earlier received permission to live in Macao.

Arab press agency open

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Palestine Press Service, an Arab-run news agency that played a key role in reporting the start of the Palestinian uprising, was allowed to reopen today after a two-year closure.

Ibrahim Karaeen, co-owner of the agency, said police returned the key Wednesday and that the telephones began working today.

"I hope this means that (Israeli authorities) will realize that we can make peace only by letting the other side talk and not stifling us."

The agency was founded in 1977 by Karaeen and Raymonda Tawil, now a Washington-based journalist, and was long the main source of news about Palestinian causes for both the Israeli media and the foreign press.

Palestinian journalists said they hoped the move would signal more openness toward Palestinian-owned media which have been targeted by authorities as a major source of inciting unrest in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Czechs alter citizenship

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Parliament has changed a law under which Czechoslovakia's former hard-line Communist leadership stripped thousands of people of their citizenship after they fled the Soviet-led invasion in 1968.

Parliament Wednesday also enacted a press law abolishing censorship, which was installed following the invasion.

The moves were the latest by the non-Communist government, which took office in December following a popular uprising, to rid itself of four decades of Communist control.

According to the new law of citizenship, Czechoslovaks can be stripped of their citizenship only at their own request.

Thousands fled the country after Warsaw Pact tanks crushed the Communist-led Prague Spring reforms and installed a hard-line government. According to the new law, those people may regain their citizenship by the end of 1993.

Hostage mission rumored

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A newspaper today reported that Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani had dispatched his brother to Lebanon in a new effort to win the release of Western hostages.

The conservative Beirut newspaper Ad-Diyar said Mahmoud Hashemi, Rafsanjani's brother, held meetings with leaders of Hezbollah, or Party of God, during a weeklong, unannounced visit that ended Tuesday.

The newspaper said the envoy also met with Hussein Mousawi, who heads the Islamic Amal movement based in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley. The movement forms the pro-Syrian wing of Hezbollah, Iran's main ally in Lebanon.

New reports claim wrong IRA members jailed in bombings

LONDON (AP) — A TV documentary identified four people it said were responsible for IRA bombings that killed 21 people, and a British lawmaker said new evidence should lead to the release of the six people who were convicted.

The Home Office, responsible for law enforcement, said in a statement today that all four people identified on the television program had been investigated by police and that the program "does not put forward new evidence."

Chris Mullin, a member of the opposition Labor Party, said Wednesday that those convicted, known as the Birmingham Six, were innocent of the 1974 bombings of two pubs. He said an Irish Republican Army informer identified one of the bombers, but that police failed to follow up the lead.

"The lie cannot be sustained much longer," Mullin told a news conference to publicize the third edition of his book on the case, "Error of Judgment."

The bombings in the northern city of Birmingham, which also left 162 injured, were the deadliest ever by the IRA in its campaign to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

Mullin based his charge on a police document — a summary of an interview with an IRA informer — and said it "ought to bring the end of this scandal."

Mullin also claims to have interviewed four men who carried out the bombings. He spoke hours before four alleged bombers were also identified in Granada Television's dramatized documentary, "Who Bombed Birmingham?"

Mullin declined to comment on the identifications made in the broadcast but said, "I advise you to take very seriously" the Granada broadcast.

None of those identified on the program is among the six convicted of bombing two pubs in Birmingham on Nov. 21, 1974.

The program identified the suspects as a man who served 12 years for other offenses, a man serving a life sentence in Ireland for murder and two men now living in Ireland. One of those two men, the program alleged, was involved in other IRA attacks including the murder of 11 people in London in 1982 and the bombing in Brighton in 1984 that nearly killed Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Granada said a fifth suspect could not be named for "security reasons."

The Home Office, however, said "the people named in that report were included in the police investigations into the Birmingham pub bombings and general terrorist activities in the West Midlands at the time."

One was not charged and no evidence had been found to link two others, the statement said. The fourth man stood trial with the six, was convicted on a conspiracy count and was sentenced to 12 years in prison, it said.

West Midlands Chief Constable Geoffrey Dear said Wednesday that he would investigate any new evidence disclosed by the TV broadcast. He also said police had never claimed the convicted six were the only ones involved.

The IRA's legal political wing, Sinn Fein, denounced the television program. "The quality and strength of the evidence which proves the innocence of the six is not, not should be, dependent upon pointing the finger of suspicion at others," it said.

LAWN SWING

Lazy summer afternoons, lemon phosphates, courting on the backyard swing ... you can revive that era by building this glider swing. It's as popular today as it was then. We used rough fir, but any lumber will do. Trace the full-size pattern parts onto wood, saw out and follow our step-by-step directions. You'll find lots of diagrams to guide you in construction. Then sit back and enjoy.
