Eight Negroes Sent From Harris County to State Farms for Work

HUNTSVILLE, Texas, April 21. (UP)—The iron-clad ruling that no more inmates be accepted in the state penitentiary because of overcrowded conditions was lifted partially today with the announcement of state prison board members that 40 convicts would be admitted immediately.

Prisons at Houston, Fort Worth and Wichita Falls will be relieved of pressure brought on by the necessity of holding men slated for Huntsville, Warden Harrel said.

Eight negroes were taken from the jail at Houston. The negroes will be shipped to the prison farms and employed at cotton chopping.

Warden Harrel said he had been instructed by Lee Simmons, manager of the state prison system, to accept four convicts from Fort Worth, Tarrant county, who recently were denied admission. Simmons now is in Sherman visiting his sick father.

Wichita Medical Society Urges Drastic Revision of City Health Code

Drastic revisions in the existing health ordinances in Wichita Falls in order to eliminate from them practices and requirements no longer recognized by medical science and to bring them up to date in keeping with the modern practice of medicine were recommended to the city council Monday night by the Wichita County Medical society.

The suggestions concerned all quarantinable diseases with particular reference to diphtheria. Dr. Austin F. Leach, president of the society; Dr. Wallace J. Masters, chairman of the special committee; Dr. H. P. Ledford and Dr. J. A. Little composed the group before the council. Doctor Leach pointed out to the aldermen that the city has suffered in the past few years from epidemics of diseases such as smallpox, scarlet fever, diphtheria, whooping cough and measles.

Changes Urged

"Each year we have too many cases of diphtheria with a rather high death rate," Doctor Leach said. "We first recommend that the ordinance here requiring fumigation be abandoned. It is a scientific and practical fact that fumigation does not destroy infectious germs and gives a false security to persons in a home where infection has existed. Plenty of soap and water, fresh air and sunshine will do more to rid a place of disease than any other known method.

"Second, we recommend that the city furnish laboratory service free of expense for the making of cultures on diphtheria patients and those who have had contact with a known case of the disease. This would include diagnostic cultures

COMMISSION APPROVES NEW ROUTE PLANS

Rock Island and Frisco to Connect North Texas Towns

OLNEY WINS ROAD

Vernon-Seymour Line Joins Panhandle Route in Fresh Extensions

WASHINGTON, April 21. (AP)—Opening of a through route between Northern Texas and Southwestern Oklahoma to Fort Worth and Dallas, proposed by the St. Louis-San Francisco and the Chicago, Rock Island, and Pacific lines, was authorized by the Interstate Commerce commission Monday.

The Rock Island was given permission to construct a five-mile connection from Shamrock to the Frisco line at Quanah, from there extending 100 miles to link up with the proposed Vernon-Seymour Frisco line at Beaver Creek. The road was also authorized to operate under trackage rights over the Frisco between Quanah and the point of connection with the proposed line five miles north.

Trackage Arrangement

In the 75-mile run over the proposed Vernon-Seymour line, the Rock Island will use trackage rights between Beaver Creek and Seymour and over the Gulf, Texas, and Western between Seymour and Jacksboro.

The St. Louis, San Francisco and Texas railway, the Texas operating company of the Frisco, is permitted a 42-mile connection between its line at Vernon and the Gulf, Texas, and Western road at Seymour, and will operate under trackage rights over the Rock Island 71 miles between Jacksboro and Fort Worth.

In connection with the new routes the Clinton, Oklahoma & Western railroad of Texas is authorized to build a branch line from Heaton, 8 miles southwest to a point in Gray county near the north fork of Red river.

The commission denied the application of the Fort Worth & Denver to construct a 110-mile connection between Childress and Pampa.

OLNEY GETS DIRECT ROUTE

Special to The Record News.

OLNEY, Texas, April 21.—Business men here are jubilent over the prospect of a main trunk line railroad through this section of the state as a result of the approval given the Frisco-Rock Island application to purchase the Gulf, Texas & Western railroad and to extend to the Panhandle.

The new project will afford a direct route to the Fort Worth and gulf markets and will be of great benefit to stockmen, farmers and merchants of Olney and surrounding territory.

The granting of a permit to extend the G. T. and W. northwest from the present terminal at Seymour and on to Shamrock opens up a section of the state heretofore lacking in railroad facilities. When the Gulf, Texas and Western was built from Saleseville through Olney to Seymour in 1910, the original plan called for an extension through to the Plains but this road was never built.

Local business men have displayed a keen interest in the applications filed by the Frisco and Rock Island last year and notice of approval has been received with enthusiasm. Committees from the chamber of commerce have been cooperating with these two railroads and last year sent representatives to appear before the Interstate Commerce commission in behalf of the Frisco.

The approval of the petitions filed by the Frisco and Rock Island eventually means two trunk line railroads through Olney. The Frisco will extend its Oklahoma line from Vernon to Seymour and the Rock Island will build from Shamrock to Quanah and connect with the Frisco at Beaver Creek, a point north of Seymour. The two lines will operate with joint trackage rights over the present Gulf, Texas and Western through this immediate territory.

Oklahomans to Honor Southwest's Pioneer Women Today

Unveiling of Statue at Ponca City Draws Thousands to Town

PONCA CITY, Okla., April 21. (UP)—Ponca City reverted to its pioneer days of a half century ago today as its citizens prepared to act as hostess to the entire state at the unveiling of the pioneer woman statue tomorrow.

While members of the reception committee, comprising virtually every resident of the city, prepared to accommodate some 40,000 expected guests, preparations were made in Washington for high government officials to acknowledge the event over radio.

After many ceremonies tomorrow the large bronze statue symbolizing the socialising of the Southwest by the pioneer women will be donated to the state by E. W. Marland, wealthy oil man.

One part of the ceremony will carry out the spirit of the pioneers. The other will be a modern appreciation of their empire building.

Early settlers, dressed in high heeled boots and "ten-gallons" hats arrived today in limousines. Others came on horseback as they did in the frontier days. They will meet in one vast reunion.

The other part of the program will be given over radio. Secretary of War Patrick J. Huckly will broadcast an address over the National Broadcasting chain at 2:00 p. m. CST. He was unable to attend the ceremony on account of illness. Arrangements were made today at Washington for President Hoover to broadcast an address from the White House.

Other dignitaries on the program include Will Rogers, the cowboy humorist and stateman extraordinary, whose home town of Claremore is only a few miles from here.

Gov. W. J. Holloway will accept the gift for the state. Mrs. John A. Hull, member of a prominent Oklahoma family was selected to represent the southwest's pioneer women at the ceremony.

Wild Scenes Of Disorder Follow Wholesale Deaths In Columbus, Ohio, Cells

By HARRY W. SHARPE
United Press Staff Correspondent

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 21.—A brief, fierce fire, set by prisoners themselves, made an inferno of the west cell block of the Ohio state penitentiary tonight and by mid-evening one of the greatest tragedies in recent history was in its final stage.

Three hours after the first fire broke out and was fanned by a stiff West wind across the prison, it was officially estimated 309 convicts had been burned to death.

It was possible this estimate might be revised either upward or downward.

Three hundred more men were burned or overcome by smoke and of these many were doomed to die.

For more than three hours the situation could be described as little less than a hell.

Hundreds of convicts were trapped hopelessly. Others attacked guards and released themselves and those of their comrades they could reach.

Within a short time a good proportion of the 4,950 men in the prison were out in the central yard—much like a university quadrangle.

Screaming Men Beg Deliverance

They were frenzied with rage and excitement. Inside in cell blocks away from the fire the other thousands of convicts screamed and cursed in fear they might have been abandoned.

Before even a semblance of order was restored, police had reinforced guards, a company of federal troops had reinforced the police and a regiment of national guardsmen had been called out.

Doctors, ambulances, army trucks, the soldiers and others were mixed up in a seething mass.

The convicts in the yard threatened again and again to make a break for liberty through the central gate.

As this scene presented itself, fire broke out in the prison cotton mill.

The convicts in the yard had set it—not satisfied with the Frankenstein that had overcome so many of their mates in the west cell block; for officials said there was no doubt the fire there had been started by prisoners, hoping for a chance to escape.

The cotton mill blazed brightly with an eerie beauty over the unworldly looking prison yard. Most of the ordinary lights around the yard went out, fire having short-circuited the prison lighting system.

Emergency strings of garden party-like lights were trellised about from building to building and wall to wall. Still there was not enough light to enable guards and soldiers to make sure of the mob of convicts and acetylene lamps were set up in the yard and on the walls.

Order Restored Little by Little

Order was brought about little by little. The screams from the convicts died down. National guardsmen, bayonets fixed, worked their way around, trying to bring quiet.

Lines were formed through which the dead and injured could be moved from the ruined prison wing to the central gates and out to the nearby fair grounds where a temporary hospital had been erected—the prison hospital being full—and an emergency morgue established in a cattle barn.

Ten army trucks moved the dead out while ambulances evacuated the injured.

At 10 p. m., there was comparative quiet. The cell block was still smouldering. The cotton mill blaze was under control, though still burning.

Everything was being done that could be done but the hoped for reduction in the estimate of dead had not come. At 10:20 p. m., the estimate of 300 dead, 300 injured was made again.

The prisoners were being herded together and separated into gangs, ready to be crowded into the already jammed cell blocks not affected by the fire.

The state penitentiary, one of the biggest in the world and one of the most crowded, had seemed a dangerous spot. There had been trouble before. This afternoon it was quiet. It loomed up darkly in the heart of an industrial and warehouse district, overlooking railroad yards, quarries and long, dingy rows of dirty wooden houses.

At 4:30 the men in the west cell block went to dinner. Shortly before six, they returned, tramping in their monotonous march, to be locked up for the night.

A flame licked upward from under the stairs of cell blocks G and H. (Afterward charred remains of bundles of prison clothes were found there). The cry of fire, bad enough anywhere but awful in a prison where men are locked in helpless, rang out. At almost the same moment, the same cry rose from the Catholic chapel 200 feet away.

Convicts Blamed for Holocaust

This seemed sufficient evidence the fire was set by convicts themselves in hope a prison break would be possible.

It was natural that in a moment the orderly prison was in pandemonium. Convicts looked toward the guards—that is those who were not already locked in their cells, but who were moving into position before them, awaiting the arrival of the keys. Those already locked in began shouting for release.

"Let them out, for God's sake," shouted a man in the corridor.

Others took up the shouts. The guards, fearful of a break, refused. The convicts in the corridors demanded the keys. Their demand was refused. They broke, overpowered the guards and took the keys. One guard joined the convicts, unable to stomach the picture of the men locked in.

Some prisoners unlocked a way to the central quadrangle. Others stayed to unlock the cells of their fellows. There was not much they could do. The fire had been well laid. It blazed upward with frightful speed, to the fourth, fifth and sixth tiers. It was in these upper tiers, the loss of life occurred; most of it in the topmost tier.

This, which takes only a few minutes to tell and read, took only a few seconds to enact, and there were other things occurring.

Before the fire department could get into efficient action, the worst prison fire on record was at its most tragic stage.

While hundreds of convicts poured into the prison yard, a few heroic guards and a few heroic prisoners fought to rescue the men trapped in the upper cell tiers.

Bank Robber Saves Comrades' Lives

Pickaxes were used to chop away bars in some instances.

"Big Bill" Morton, a desperate Cleveland bank robber, broke out of his own cell with his bare hands in a cold superhuman burst of strength, and instead of fleeing to the yard, rescued several men. When he could find no more living, he carried out two dead bodies.

Frank Ward, another Clevelander, and a former policeman, also chose to redeem himself. He seized an axe and chopped his way into half a dozen cells. "Wild Bill" Croninger saved 12 of his mates. He returned for the 13th, collapsed, and was burned to death.

Outside there was chaos.

Wave after wave of police had poured into the prison yard, into the flickering glare of flames. Every policeman who could be spared from a beat was there. Every fire engine in Columbus was at the scene. Every ambulance within range was there. Physicians who had been called were not enough. Word was sent out for students at Ohio State university to go and help care for the 300 or more injured, some of them burned so that recovery was hopeless.

Chapel Fire Quelched

The fire department put out the chapel fire with little difficulty. By the time the west cell block roof collapsed, there was little life left, though many living men were lying under the debris—masonry, plaster, steel and smouldering wood, sending up a revolting stench of burned flesh and dampened ruins. The cell block fire, too, was under control.

But in the yard, things were becoming worse. A call was sent for a company of federal soldiers from nearby (Continued on Page Two)

Ohio State Prison Scene of Holocaust

Fort Hayes. They arrived, but they were a handful of men among the thousands there.

The 166th infantry, Ohio national guard was called out at 7:45.

The strategy was simple—to keep the men in the yard. The tactics were worked out as time went on. Police, guards and federal troops formed cordons around the convicts in the yards, manned the convicts in the yards, manned the prison walls in skeleton fashion and formed another line around the walls.

Guns Mounted

Machine guns were mounted on the buildings to command the central gate and the walls and a strong force was posted at the gate itself. Each estimate of the dead was higher. The first, a few minutes after the first fire broke out, was 25. It went to 100 to 142 to 200, to 250, to 300.

The prison hospital was full of dead or injured men. It was then the emergency hospital in the fair grounds was decided upon.

As organization became more efficient, the deads were sorted out separately inside the yard. The injured were taken to the fair grounds hospital.

None of all this was calculated to quiet the convicts herded in the yard. The prison gate was only a few yards away. Before it, there were soldiers, but not many in proportion to the convict's numbers. The prisoners moved about, first one group in front and then another, mustering up courage for a break. It occurred to one of them that a diversion might be created by setting another fire—this time in a building unoccupied for the night. This was the cotton mill, in back of the crowd toward the cells, and about 200 yards from the west cell block. The way between the convicts and the prison proper was but thinly and casually guarded.

Victims Long Termers

Hautily, a few bolder men formed an incendiary squad. It should be said all the men affected, dead, injured and loose in the yard were long termers. Most of them were serving from 25 years to life. The fire setting gang made a break for the cotton mill and reached it. They battered their way in and set it on fire. The warning given to those in authority for the state was the lick of flames from the darkended building.

Brighter and brighter they flared up. Firemen made for it with their axes, hose and fire extinguishers. The convicts barred the way and turned them back.

Critical Moment

This was the critical moment of the threatened riot, which would have been the worst, as was the fire, in prison history.

Squad after squad of firemen went up to the seething crowd of prisoners, to be driven back, many of them beaten.

The city fire chief demanded protection. He told the prison warden that unless his men were given adequate protection at once, he would withdraw his entire department, and leave the prison to be burned entirely.

The warden decided on emergency measures. He first told the prisoners sending word around by the surrounding cordon of assorted police, guards and soldiers, the first man who advances so much as a yard would be shot. This word went through the crowd and nothing happened. The crisis was past.

Troops formed lines for the firemen and the work of extinguishing the cotton mill fire was started. It was a hard fight but without loss of life and after an hour and a half—at 10 p. m.—the cotton mill blaze was under control.

Lights Doused

In burning, the fire had short circuited the prison lighting plant. An emergency light system was set up by wires run from the street.

Still there was not light enough, with these, and the gradually diminishing glare from the cotton mill, and acetylene lamps were set up. They flared out whitely soon from yard and walls.

The convicts in the yard were becoming a little less restive, though still threatening. The warden took the opportunity to send word around news of the survivors' safety would be telegraphed to relatives if the men would be quiet and permit a checkup.

The promise was effective.

Troops formed the convicts into gangs. Some were sent into the smouldering cell block to aid in the work of bringing out the dead and injured. The rest were held ready to be sent to cells.

The stage became the hospital at the fair grounds, where hopelessly burned men screamed, groaned or shut their teeth on their pain. Nurses moved in and out among them, administering opiates, while the doctors worked as rapidly as possible. The nurses had tried to get into the prison hospital previously, but so bad was the temper of the yard convicts the warden would not admit them, afraid the prisoners might use them as shields in an effort to escape.

That was the situation late tonight. An accurate checkup of dead and injured still was impossible and the figures remained at 300 dead, 300 injured.

Troops Guard Walls

Outside, the streets on four sides of the prison resembled an armed camp. On the outside lawns guards armed with machine guns had their weapons trained on the prison windows. On the pavements, national guardsmen stood rigid, facing the prison walls. At the main gate the regular army troops stood with bayonets affixed to their rifles. In the streets for several blocks Columbus policemen were on duty. The crowds of spectators, attracted by the clouds of dense smoke, high shooting flames, and fire sirens, were held back by the police.

At 8:00 p. m. prisoners and guards succeeded in getting into their number 4, in I and K cell blocks. Here they found nothing but dead. The convicts went to work dragging the dead from the cells and passing them down the tier steps. Other bodies were lowered by ropes from the windows. The prison yard now was covered with dead and dying. Most of the men brought from this tier had met death by smoke. A few were burned.

Firemen continued to labor on the top of the G and H cell blocks. The fire had practically died out but much smoke still curled from the ruins.

Regular Army Helps

A company of regular army soldiers reached the scene and were assigned to duty on the main gate. Prison officials said this heavy guard was placed on the gate because they feared some of the convicts loose in the prison yard would be driven insane by the excitement and might make a break for liberty.

The prisoners in the yard were calling on each other for help to bring men out of the fifth and sixth ranges and the H cell block, where it was estimated 68 men were trapped. Prisoners, firemen and guards were making their way into this section with axes, picks, wire cutters and all available tools.

Office in Confusion

All was confusion in the inner prison office. Here guards handed out ammunition to reserve guards. Door guards had a difficult time identifying doctors and others who were permitted to go into the prison yard. Women members of the Thomas family, all panic stricken by this sudden disaster and great loss of life, were standing within the door of their home watching guards and volunteers removing their valuables from the warden's residence which was in the path of the fire.

An Associated Press staff man inside the walls counted 90 bodies completely covered with blankets as though dead. The floor of the hospital basement was covered with men, many of them dead or dying, and at least 50 were on the floor of the main hospital, some of them apparently lifeless. Physicians in white were working with water soaked handkerchiefs over their noses so dense was the smoke.

Miss Amada Thomas, daughter of Warden P. E. Thomas, when asked for an estimate of the number of dead replied "We have no idea."

Warden P. E. Thomas ordered 700 convicts moved from the cell blocks number two and eight, toward which the fire was sweeping.

A huge crowd gathered outside the prison walls.

Warden Thomas left his home as the flames, fanned by a stiff west wind, moved toward E and F blocks west of the warden's quarters.

Firemen attempted to place lines on the roofs of the blocks in an effort to check the blaze.

Artificial respiration was resorted to in an attempt to save the lives of the men overcome by smoke, a number of whom were revived at 7:30. The fire was virtually under control at that hour.

Smoke Causes Deaths

Harry Silver, state director of finance, on coming from the prison yard, said most of the deaths were caused by the heavy smoke.

The scene within the prison yard continued one of utter disorder as darkness descended. At least 600 convicts, all orderly and aiding rescuers and firemen, were in the yard. Doctors, clad in white, worked valiantly on unconscious prisoners. Other prisoners, row upon row lay on the damp green lawn, covered fully with blankets. These were numbered among the dead. Prison guards rushed to and fro, attempting to keep the prisoners orderly and aiding in the rescue work.

"Bad Men" Restless

The prisoners in the east cell blocks, where is housed company K, the "bad men" of the Ohio penitentiary, screamed and yelled, fearing the fire would reach them. Guards were trying to quiet these men. They were prepared to open the cell doors if the flames continued to sweep toward the east.

The flames continued to blaze near the west gate at 7:20 p. m., tonight, eastern standard time. Firemen drove it back a little, but a stiff westerly wind fanned the flames and drove them through G and H blocks, where some 60 men were trapped. Convicts, guards and firemen were making valiant efforts to get into these blocks.

Convicts Restless

State Fire Marshal Ray R. Gill and his special Deputy J. D. Clear were on the scene while the fire still raged.

The convicts in the yards were reported to be getting excited as darkness descended.

A radio call for doctors and nurses brought some 300 from distances of 30 miles. There were so many on duty in the prison that most of these could not be used.

Warden Thomas was unable immediately to determine the exact origin of the fire. He was convinced, however, that it was not started by prisoners in an attempt to escape.

Wet Triumvirate Formed to Defeat Walsh of Montana, Brookhart Says

WASHINGTON, April 21. (AP)—A charge that the "Curran-Raskob-Mellon combination" had entered into an agreement to support a wet Republican candidate for the senate from Montana in an effort to defeate Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, a dry, for re-election, was made in the senate today by Senator Brookhart, Republican Iowa.

Brookhart, an outspoken dry, said he was going to "fight the efforts of the Curran-Raskob-Mellon combination" to elect wets in the coming elections.

"They are non-partisan in this matter, and I am going to be non-partisan," he said.

The Iowan said a meeting was held recently in Washington at which it was decided to support A. J. Galen, whom he described as a "wringing wet Republican," for the United States senate from Montana.

SECOND STORM HITS ISLANDS

Typhoon Takes Heavy Toll In Philippines

MANILA, P. I., April 21. (UP)—Many were dead today, thousands homeless and untold damage had been done to public buildings, homes and crops by the second disaster to strike the Philippine islands within the last few days.

A typhoon of terrific force swept Leyte Samar on Good Friday and left desolation in its wake. The convent of Tolosa was totally destroyed as were municipal buildings at Dulag. So terrific was the force of the typhoon that a concrete school and theater comprising the culture center of Dulag was blown down.

Similar devastation occurred at Palo, Burnan, Carrigar, Taclobin, and many other villages.

Communication lines were disrupted and provincial roads closed by flood waters.

Cocoanut and hemp plantations were laid in ruins.

With thousands homeless as the result of the typhoon and some 12,000 homeless on Negros island as a result of a disastrous fire there last week the greatest need at present is food.

S. M. U. Glee Club Gives Concert Here

Opening their annual spring tour of West Texas with a typical and well sung program, the S. M. U. "Mustang" Glee club entertained about 200 persons at the Memorial auditorium in an appearance arranged by the Kiwanis club as a benefit for their Holliday park fund.

The elements which attract the general public, as well as alumni of an institution, to college glee club concerts were well balanced in the program given Monday night under the direction of David MacPherson. Heavier compositions of the recital and concert type, from such composers as Dudley Buck, Horation Parker, F. F. Bullard and Dvorak alternated with popular songs of the Berlin-Whiteman school and the lighter, humorous concoctions evolved as encore material for every glee club under the sun.

Mr. MacPherson, baritone, contributed a group of solos in a baritone voice which was particularly rich and appealing in its lower register, while Charles Kiker of Breckenridge furnished one of the most brilliant performances of the evening in a group of piano solos which included Debussy's "Prelude in A Minor," and David Guion's "Turkey in the Straw."

The club will sing in Bowie Tuesday night.

as well as those to determine when the disease has left the child so that he may safely return to school without the chance of spreading the disease.

"Last, we urge that the ordinance pertaining to diphtheria quarantine be so modified as to require that no patient be released from quarantine until two negative cultures, made on two consecutive days, have been obtained, the first not earlier than the eighth day of the disease. It is customary to charge $5 for each culture, this being no small item for the family to assume. In some cases the attending physician must assume it in order to safeguard the public health. The present ordinance requiring a quarantine of three weeks does not always assure that the child is free of the disease. The only sure method is by cultures. Our only interest in making these suggestions is based on a desire to advance health in our city."

Country Club Estates Guard

The council votes to instruct City Manager George D. Fairtrace to communicate with Dr. M. H. Glover and doctors of the society in forming a contract by which Doctor Glover would cooperate with the city health department in preparing and examining curtures according to the recommendations.

A delegation of residents from the Country Club Estates, headed by Harry Hines and J. L. McMahon, presented a request for the city to share the expense of maintaining a special officer for the area. It was pointed out the location of the estates prevented proper policing if residents there were dependent on the downtown police headquarters and that they have been forced to pay $200 a month to retain a special officer. The matter was referred to the city manager, who was instructed to confer with the residents and report to the council.

Kelly as notary public and the document then tendered to Mr. McBroom for presentation to the aldermen.

The council voted to receive and file the petition and instructed Mr. McBroom to check each of the 310 names in order to establish their qualifications to sign. Thelbert Martin, city attorney, asked to state an opinion concerning the ruling of the statutes in such a case, quoted the state law providing that 10 per cent of the qualified voters of a city must sign any petition requesting a vote to change the charter. Mr. Martin also said the number necessary in Wichita Falls according to that law would be in excess of 800.

Don't fool yourself!

Since halitosis never announces itself to the victim, you simply cannot know when you have it.

Men won't forgive this in a girl

How can you expect attention from others—especially from the opposite sex—when you have halitosis (unpleasant breath)?

Many a vacation and pleasure trip that otherwise would have been jolly and romantic has been a failure because of it.

Don't fool yourself that you never have halitosis. Because you simply cannot know when you are a victim. Halitosis does not announce itself. Unknowingly, you may offend.

Why take the chance at all? Simply use Listerine every day. Then, if you have halitosis, Listerine ends it. If you haven't—your mouth has had the benefit that Listerine always gives.

Being an active germicide capable of killing 200,000,000 germs in 15 seconds, full strength Listerine checks mouth fermentation and infection—both a cause of odors. Then it gets rid of the odors; it is an instant deodorant. Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

Thin Folks Gain Weight and Health

Sickly, tired out folks must be benefited speedily says your druggist, or money back

Since Scientists have discovered the fact that we must have a plentiful supply of Vitamins in our bodies in order to keep healthy and vigorous, millions of people have just learned that life is worth living.

The thin, weak, tired out, despondent, nervous person that is at all up-to-date takes Nature's own Vitamins instead of drugs—they have learned that lack of Vitamins in the body causes most of the ill health in the world

Probably ninety per cent of the men and women in America would feel better—would be more vigorous and keener minded if they had more Vitamins in their body.

The quick and sure way to get these Vitamins into your body is to take McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Extract Tablets which are brimful of weight building and energy creating Vitamins—no drugs whatever.

Why not try them—Nature's own Vitamins can do you nothing but good. You can get them at your druggist. 60 tablets, 60 cents. Take them as directed for 21 days and then if not joyfully satisfied, get your money back. Just ask for McCoy's at any drugstore in America.—Adv.

FRECKLES

This Safe Method Removes Disfiguring Rusty Blemishes

No matter how stubborn or numerous your freckles may be, you should fade them out completely in only a few days and make your skin as white and flawless as a gardenia!

Simply get a jar of Othine double strength and spread a little of the dainty white cream over your freckles at night before you go to bed. Doesn't take two minutes. Then look for results in just a day or two. The lighter freckles vanish almost at once and the others follow in a few days. You'll hardly know your own skin! Even the worst case of freckles rarely requires more than an ounce of magic Othine.

Don't be afraid to use it generously. All drug and department stores sell Othine, but be sure to ask for the double strength, for this is sold with a positive guarantee of money back if it does not remove even the worst freckles and give a beautiful complexion.—Adv.

Stop Rheumatic Pains With Rx A-2851

Local druggists who are dispensing Prescription A-2851 are all loud in their praise of what it will do. It doesn't seem to matter whether the condition is of long standing and the pain constant, or whether only occasional twinges are felt—Prescription A-2851 seems to go right to the seat of the trouble and knock out the pain.

While this particular prescription was compounded especially for rheumatic conditions—it has also proven successful in many forms of gout, neuritis and sciatic nerve pain.

Tear out this announcement and hand it to your druggist, or be sure to remember the name—Prescription A-2851. Its liquid or pill form. There is nothing else as good to drive out rheumatism.—Adv.

LINDY PLEASED AT RECORD HOP

Flier Describes Cross Country Flight

NEW YORK, April 21. (INS)—A happy Charles A. Lindbergh, tired but enthusiastic, told in his own words the story of the record-breaking, one-stop, cross-country flight, following his arrival at Roosevelt field. Exercising the same care for the safety of his new monoplane as he did for his prized Spirit of St. Louis, Colonel Lindbergh personally directed work of placing it in the hangar, then told interviewers:

"The flight was splendid. There was a little bad weather, but we flew both over and through it. Our maximum altitude was 15,500 feet and we averaged about 14,000 feet.

"There was no time, however, when I could not have glided to safety in a range of five to 10 miles had engine trouble developed. But epgine trouble is not a frequent danger these days.

An Experiment

"The trip, of course, was an experiment. I feel that transport flying of the future will be at higher altitudes. On the whole, conditions of the flight were not of the best, and I cannot predict the immediate results of this one flight.

"Our maximum speed was 185 miles an hour. We could have come through from Glendale without the stop at Wichita, with the amount of gasoline with which we started.

"To do so would have required flying at a lower altitude and at a reduced speed, as fuel-saving means."

Surprised at Record

Colonel Lindbergh appeared surprised when first informed that he had established a new cross-country record and, to avoid detracting from the achievement of a fellow airman, declared:

"This is not to be compared with Captain Hawk's record because his was a nonstop flight. I have already explained that greater time would be required for a flight of that type.

"Our interest in this flight was in the time it takes to go across the country, taking into consideration the stopover time.

"The speed was slightly reduced from the maximum while at our highest altitudes."

Anne Navigator

Relating Mrs. Lindbergh's part in the record-breaking flight, the smiling colonel said:

"The ship is equipped with dual controls and Mrs. Lindbergh did part of the piloting, but mainly her duties were those of navigator. We changed from time to time and her flying was excellent. Mrs. Lindbergh also took readings with her sextant, with which she is becoming very proficient."

Household oil must do 3 things, say experts

Household oils that merely lubricate do only half the job, say lubrication experts. Locks and hinges, sewing machines, electric fans, vacuum cleaners, lawn mowers, washers—all household devices are constantly gathering dirt and rust when not in service. To get best results one should use an oil that cleans and protects as well as lubricates.

Unlike ordinary oil, 3-in-One is a blend of high grade animal, mineral and vegetable oils, so it does these three things as no other oil can. 3-in-One Oil scosts more to make than ordinary oil, but it costs much less to use. It is cheapest in the long run, for it will save you many dollars on repairs and replacements of expensive household equipment.

Don't be satisfied with anything but the best. Get the old reliable 3-in-One Oil. At good stores everywhere, in 15c and 30c cans and bottles. For your protectfbn, look for the trade mark "3-in-One" printed in Red on every package.—Adv.

Lovely Luncheon Announces Popular Girl's Engagement

As whimsical as spring herself is Cupid, who, supposed to save weddings for June, is giving April more than her share of announcements for the smart society set. Mrs. Fred T. Couper, in a lovely luncheon at her home on Ninth street Monday, announced the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Miss Anabel Couper, to Arthur Clark, the event to take place at noon on April 30.

With the entire home fragrant with flowers, the dining room presented the heart of the beautiful scene with the table, covered in a handsome imported Italian cutwork and real filet cloth. A centerpiece of sunburst roses, with the same shades in sweet peas and daisies, was flanked with green crystal candle sticks holding candles in the sunburst shades. The green crystal service used throughout made artistic appointments more perfect, and as the room was lighted only by candles, the colors were most effective.

Announcement was made in a pretty manner. At each place lay a lovely shoulder bouquet in sunburst shades of roses and sweet peas and tucked in the center of these were tiny cards announcing the date of marriage.

Seated with the hostess Mrs. Couper were the bride elect, Miss Anabel Couper, her sister, Mrs. Warren Hastings of Alexandria, La.; Misses Gene Nelson, Ethel Moran, Mary Jo Kell, Thelma Fisher, Lucile Smith, Crystelle Waggoner, Helen Grisham, Helen Knotts, Marguerite McDonald, and Mesdames Ray Arnhold, J. Warner Zimmer, P. King Smith, John Barnard, Clyde Straus Jr., Darrold Kahn, Overton Abernathy and Raymond Myers.

'FINE FOR GAS, SOUR STOMACH'

Black-Draught Also Praised By Illinois Woman for Benefit in Constipation

Cairo, Ill.—"I have used Black-Draught in my home for fifteen years, and it is a splendid medicine," writes Mrs. Bernice Brack, of 3301 Commercial street, this city. "Sometimes I am subject to colds and constipation, and I find it to be the finest thing for this.

"My mother used Thedford's Black-Draught in her home for years, and it was there that I began taking it. She thought it was so good that she had me to use, and I have never found any medicine that would take its place satisfactorily.

"I find Black-Draught fine for sour stomach and gas. A few doses taken for several nights rid the system of poison due to constipation, and it makes me feel like a new person.

"I try to keep Black-Draught always on hand, and I treat all small illness with it. I can certainly recommend it for I have found it very good and dependable."

Thedford's Black-Draught is a purely vegetable cathartic or laxative medicine, composed of selected medicinal herbs and roots.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

One of the lovely things of life is that youth has imagination. The horizon for the young has no boundary. Their eyes pierce through it to the ideals that belong to true natures.

◇ ◇ ◇

So often though as one grows older, he finds that the youthful ideals were illusions. Then it is the fighter who counts, and bucking the disillusioned facts of life makes a winner in the end. It comes to our mind as vacation time draws near, how every fighter needs at times a vacation.

◇ ◇ ◇

That word means different things to different people. When one is very tired, two things that mean paradise are "rest and being alone."

◇ ◇ ◇

Being alone—that is at times a vacation in itself. There's only one person on earth who has at the same time the same taste in art, books, music or nature that you have, and that is yourself.

◇ ◇ ◇

Though "company" may like to read, they would probably not want the light on in the room when you wished to enjoy "bedside books."

◇ ◇ ◇

And though "company" may love nature, they might find it tiresome to lie beneath a tree and see heaven in the dense greenness.

◇ ◇ ◇

Though some one would share some of your pet diversions, they could not share them all. Every person should have the opportunity once in his life to do just what he wishes for a week or two.

◇ ◇ ◇

Not have someone wishing to read when you wish to wade a pool and cast for trout; nor wishing to sleep at home when you are wishing to roam the woods.

◇ ◇ ◇

If you wish to hear grand opera, why should you not have the opportunity to hear grand opera? Or if you prefer the old sweet songs, or even the song of the wind in the trees or rain pattering on the roof—then let them give you rest.

◇ ◇ ◇

A vacation to some people means change of scene; to some, meeting interesting people; to some persons, going where they may change clothes several times a day and make an impression. And to some, it means a rest cure.

◇ ◇ ◇

No matter whom you are, there's no person on earth who has all your tastes in common.

◇ ◇ ◇

And if you are worth life—then you can always be good company for yourself in resting.

You've Never Tasted Coffee Like This

The Rare Tang and Flavor of Coffees From the West Coast of Central America... Just try it for a change

ALONG the West Coast of Central America is a region that produces probably the choicest flavored coffees known today.

They have a certain winey tang and pungent richness that experts concede are not duplicated anywhere else in the world.

We don't want to tell you how good it is. We want you to try it yourself and see.

This coffee was first served years ago in the famous Bohemian restaurants of San Francisco where it was brought by Folger. Travellers who first tasted it there wrote back for shipments. For that was the only way to obtain it then.

Today, however, it is brought to you by your grocer, packed in flavor-tight vacuum tins by Folger.

The Secret of Flavor

Ordinarily you note little difference when you change from one brand of coffee to another. That is because over 70 per cent of all the coffee entering this country comes from one vast common region—giving it the same common flavor.

In Folger's you taste another flavor altogether. The piquant tang and mellow body of rare mountain coffees from Central America.

In this district alone does nature put this fine rare flavor in coffee. It depends on soil, climate and altitude of the place where it is grown.

You'll be struck with the difference in the rush of fragrance the instant you break the vacuum seal of your first tin of this coffee.

The Test by Taste

Because Folger flavor is so distinctly different, we make an unusual offer. Buy a pound of this coffee today. Drink it tomorrow morning. Next morning drink the coffee you have been using. The third morning serve Folger's again. If for any reason you do not choose Folger's, your grocer will gladly refund the full price. We'll pay him. That's fair, isn't it? Why not try it today?

Health and Diet Advice

Belching and Gastritis

Many patients complain of belching large quantities of gas from the stomach. Sometimes this occurs after eating, and in some cases when the stomach becomes empty. This is especially likely to occur in nervous patients who watch their symptoms closely.

In many cases the belching of air after a meal does not indicate any serious condition, as it is natural for most people to swallow a small amount of air when eating, especially with foods of a rather porous nature. Often, too, the mixture of foods used may produce some gas in the stomach.

When I first began to examine patients under the flouroscope of the x-ray, I was surprised to see in many cases that the patient actually began to belch when there was no gas present in the stomach, and after belching for a few minutes, a large quantity of gas was shown in the stomach. Whenever these nervous patients feel solid substances in the stomach, they feel uncomfortable and go through an elaborate system of belching, evidently for the purpose of getting rid of the gas, but the x-ray shows that while they are endeavoring to belch, they are really swallowing air each time until the stomach contains quite a large amount.

When patients endeavor to relieve the gas pressure in the stomach they often resort to the use of soda. The soda combines with the hydrochloric acid of the stomach and releases large quantities of carbon-dioxid which may in turn be belched up, giving the patient in turn the impression that the soda is relieving the stomach of large quantities of gas when it is in fact producing more. The relief which occurs after the use of soda is because the soda neutralizes the hydrochloric acid, and in those cases where distress is felt, there will practically always be found an inflammation of the stomach which is irritated still more by the hydrochloric acid.

Belching may also be caused by a return of some of the alkaline contents of the small intestines back into the stomach. When the alkaline secretions of the intestines mix with the acid secretions of the stomach, gas is usually formed. This is most likely to occur when those who are suffering with some form of liver or gall bladder trouble. The cure of belching in these cases depends upon the cure of the real cause.

By far the greater number of cases of belching are of the nervous type, however, and patients who are affected in this way must make conscientious effort to understand the condition and control the nervous impulse to belch.

Patients who feel distress in the stomach and gas will practically always be found to have stomach inflammation or gastritis and the best treatment for a permanent cure seems to be to use only a liquid diet until the inflammation has subsided. The milk diet serves well for this purpose, as the milk and cream seem to form a sort of salve on the inflamed lining of the stomach. I will be glad to send the instructions for taking the milk diet to anyone who is interested who will write to me in care of this paper and enclose a large self-addressed envelope.

Where there is an inflammation of the stomach, anything that produces an added irritation may cause this belching desire. Among the more frequent causes are ice water and cold foods, fibrous vegetables, and the acid fruits. This occurs as long as the inflammation exists, even though fruits and vegetables are wholesome foods.

In tomorrow's article I will explain some of the common causes of flatulence.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Fear of Falling

Question—J. S. asks: "Why is it that some people are so affected while going down in a fast elevator? I have never heard a satisfactory explanation. I would be glad to have you explain through the column."

Answer: Psychologists are under the belief that the discomfort people sometimes feel going down in an elevator is simply a mental attitude which remains ever from the fear of falling which every baby is born with.

Popcorn

Question—Wm. D. asks: "I would like to know if popcorn is a good food, or if it is bad for the stomach. I am very fond of it, and eat a great deal."

Answer: Popcorn is a form of starch which is easily digested when it is cooked in the usual way, that is, by heating the popcorn till it pops open, splitting the kernel wide open and exploding the starch cells. It may be used as the principal starch part of a meal, and should be seasoned with butter or salt.

Tuberculosis From Milk

Question—H. G. asks: "If milk is handled in a home dairy by a person who is said to have tuberculosis would there be danger of that milk becoming contaminated, thereby making the user subject to a risk?"

Answer: In most localities the health authorities have made laws compelling those working in dairies to submit to regular health examinations, but where there is any possibility of tuberculosis infecting the milk, the milk should be pasteurized.

Daily Editorial

THE manure heap now ranges itself alongside the rubbish pile and the saw-mill refuse bin as a babbler of precious secrets. Chemistry having led the way as a snooper-out of new healths from old wastes, patology takes the hint and proceeds to quest for curative agents where yesterday least expected their existence.

The packer's offal tank is already delivering specifics for a score of organic diseases, which previously defied medical wit.

But even the extraction of human repair parts from animal inedibles, hardly prepared us for the proclamation that the maggot-bearing egg of the blue-bottle fly holds the only successful check against osteomyelitis which is the high-falutin name for a group of bone diseases which prey upon our marrow content, and set up rots that neither pharmacy nor radiology can halt.

Dr. William S. Baer of Johns Hopkins tells the veterans committee in the house of representatives how this 92 per cent effective treatment for bone infection was suggested by the absolute healing of maggot-infested wounds in the late war.

Heaven alone knows what we'll learn next. Nature indulges in no futile gestures. Every creature the substance is here for a given purpose.

It isn't hardly so important to find life on the moon or vegetation on the planets as to unmask the rendezvous or longevity on the earth. Imagination is squandering precious thought searching the stars, while man remains at the mercy of uncontrolled corruptions.

A detected flu-germ or cancer bug is worth more to humanity than any survey of betelgeuse or message from Mars.

The fondest hopes of tomorrow lie in microscopes not telescopes.

THE GANG RECRUIT

HE WAS six years old when the family was transplanted to America.

Old growth accommodates itself reluctantly to new soil. But young tap-roots are quickly acclimated to a changed environment.

The compulsory education law placed him in school, and within a year he had acquired a working knowledge of English. And, at the same time, an incipient contempt for slower-witted parents, whose tongues remained vernacular bound. Neither could assist him as he struggled with his simple lessons. That gave him a sense of superiority; he knew more than they did.

At an age when most children are utterly dependant upon elderly guidance he was the established go-between of the household—its purchasing agent and interpreter—sympathetically winking to the grocer and playmates at his father's ludicrous speech and his mother's foreign mannerisms. And so, gradually, he grew into an impudent little bully. He saw, in his crafty, selfish way, his indispensability as a liason officer. Bit by bit he lost final respect, resented restraint and drifted to the street corner. When the old man shambled past, the big lads made wisecracks and jeered at the "greenhorn."

For a while he instinctively resented their hobbledehoy cruelty—but in the end, he abetted it. Then finally grew ashamed of his own flesh and blood, and, with the loss of respect, became a law into himself.

Wherever aliens hive the same ugly conditions persists. It mainly accounts for the increasing number of rowdy young foreigners, and helps explain the spread of the gang menace. The boys are not to blame. The parents are helpless. It is one of the innumerable problems that bubble in the melting pot and one of the saddest.

WARING DIVORCED

CLEVELAND, April 21. (UP)—Mrs. Dorothy Waring today was granted a divorce from her husband Fred M. Waring, director of Waring's Pennsylvanians, nationally known collegiate band, on grounds of gross neglect.

A Yale dean says, "The return of the old beer gardens would be a fine thing." Particularly for the college hops.

Eugene O'Neill, dramatist, sends important secret messages on postcards. A sort of play on words, as it were.

Decline of the Village

THE present census apparently is going to show us a few things about the mysterious new course our nation is taking.

Nothing that the enumerators have turned up so far has been as interesting as their disclosure that the small town of the Middle West seems to be heading for oblivion.

Nearly 60 per cent of the small towns counted in Illinois and Indiana showed a marked decline in population during the last 10 years. Some have been abandoned altogether, and even those that have increased in size are increasing less rapidly than the normal birth increase. In adjacent states the same tendency is noticed.

The small town, evidently, is going the way of the one-horse shay. For generations it was perhaps the most purely American thing on the continent. Now it is going. The census of 1940, undoubtedly, will show its decline carried still further.

A good many things are to blame. The automobile and the hard-surfaced highway probably head the list. They have freed the farmer of his dependence on the crossroads store, the village doctor, the diminutive country bank and the small town professional man. Movies, radios and daily newspapers probably have played a part, too. The rural hamlet, in other words, has outlived much of its usefulness. People no longer need it as they once did.

This change indicates a shift in a basic part of American life. These rural villages would not be dwindling unless some very profound change were coming over us. Our population seems to be getting centralized; yet, at the same time, it is altogether impossible just now to tell what the final result will be. Will we all, eventually, be grouped into big cities? Or will the cities, in their turn, begin to split up as improvement in transportation continues, so that suburban villages will lie scattered over a 100-mile radius? Either thing can happen; it will be years before we can see which it is to be.

Meanwhile, let's not shed too many tears over the passing of the small town—if, as the figures seem to indicate, it really is passing. Life in the small town was never quite as idyllic as we often suppose. The small town had a way of breeding provincialism and narrowness. It had no slums, but it cramped many a life quite as effectively as a crowded city tenement district. We may not be losing quite as much as we think we are.

At any rate, for better or for worse, we are changing. Modern life is setting us on a new highway, and no one is wise enough to say where it will lead. We are in the midst of a tremendous rearrangement. The census figures can only give us a glimpse at a few of its major tendencies.

High Cost of Postoffices

THERE is another scandal brewing. It has been named "the high cost of postoffices." It deals with contracts made and rent paid for buildings used by the government for postoffice purposes. That of St. Paul, for instance. In the days when Woodrow Wilson was president, a proposal was received from the owner of a building in St. Paul and filed for reference before Postmaster Albert Sidney Burleson stepped down and out.

Harding came in and Will S. Hays was the successor of Burleson.

Hays accepted and approved the contract. He is a very pious man, this Mr. Hays. It would be impossible for him to do a great wrong, to self or country or party or conscience. Now there is going to be a senate investigation. There is a commission appointed every week by the federal administration and an investigation asked every day by the senatorial representatives of the American people.

Transatlantic Air Service

IT BEGINS to look as if regular commercial airship service across the Atlantic were to be a reality in the comparatively near future. According to plans announced at Washington, Germany will build a new ship to go with the Graf Zeppelin and America will build two more, making a fleet of four. Service going east will provide two-day trips, with three-day trips for the westbound line. Passenger fares will be about double steamship fares.

This announcement may be the beginning of a new kind of traffic of enormous importance. It seems foolish to suppose that the steamship will ever be displaced as the carrier of bulk freight, but the dirigible may very well be about ready to give the fast passenger liner something to worry about.

Something Accomplished

IT MAY BE a trifle early to appraise completely the work done at the naval conference in London. Nevertheless, it becomes evident that the whole thing was well worth doing, even though the high hopes entertained when it opened may not have been altogether fulfilled.

As Secretary Stimson says, "the habit of mutual agreement has received one more successful precedent. The principle of limitation is strengthened by its successful practice."

The treaty may not be all that we had desired. Nevertheless, the conference was not held in vain. Competition in armaments received a real check; and that, after all, was the real purpose of the conference.

Henry Demands Joint Debates

FORMER CONGRESSMAN ROBERT LEE HENRY has issued a challenge to Senator Morris Sheppard for a series of joint debates away down here in Texas for the discussion of the prohibition question and all its ramifications. Publicity is the thing. It keeps the name of the speaker in the headlines. Senator Sheppard looks upon the prohibition question as a settled issue. He is not going to disturb a settled issue—not if he knows it.

Salvage

Tonight I picked a letter up from you,
A little faded as old letters are,
And sullen-eyed I read it through and through,
So small a thing to leave so deep a scar;

For there was written down in black and white
The inconsistency of all my ways,
My failure to distinguish wrong from right
Was paramount in every biting phrase.

I take the blame—I set a merry pace
And spurned your chances time and time again,
But now I merely hope the years erase
The memories of all that needless pain;

And leave instead the magic of a night
When we were not concerned with wrong or right!—Don Wahn.

Boomerang

Lester Allen will tell you, too, that you never know what heckler is in the audience. A bit of a naughty himself, Lester was called on to entertain the guests at the Ben Bernie party in the Leviathan's new night club. He opened up with this sassy crack: "For the benefit of you people who might not know me, I am Lady Chatterley's lover!" "Yeah," interrupted a sneerer, "which one?"

Nifty

Leave it to the New York flipcrackers who attend the premieres of the new plays in the tryouts towns to sum things up. At New Haven the other night a new play was given its initial showing. It is described as a great artistic success, a perfect performance. The consensus of opinion among trained observers is that it has no chance commercially. The final curtain was falling. There was a hush. And then this sotto voce crack: "No errors. No hits. No runs."

Oop!

George Stark of Detroit unfolds this tale about George Bernard Shaw and Lady Astor. It was at a tea given by Lady Astor and after the sweets had been masticated Shaw went into his routine of roasting every country except Ireland and Russia. "What would you and I have done in Russia?" asked the noblewoman.

"If you and I had been in Russia," flipped Shaw, "we would have been married and divorced long ago."

Add Little Ironies

Among other volunteers to the Heywood Broun benefit show for the unemployed the other night was Dave, the Blue Room restaurateur. The popular Dave contributed oodles of sandwiches and other delicacies for the army of talent that appeared. A long table backstage was weighted down with the food, which was devoured quickly by the actors and by a great crowd of crashers who managed to sneak back stage. Four times Dave phoned his restaurant to hasten over with more food until he exhausted his own supply.

Then, for all his pains and generosity, he lost his regular 3 a. m. business. For when the stay-uplates went to Dave's, the restaurant was out of food and the crowd patronized Dave's rival, Reuben's!

Incidentally

At the same benefit show two Broadway columnists did a sketch with Harry Richman, who for a long time has been the target for their abuse. The plot of it went like this. The newspaper men were introduced to the audience and while they were waiting for their music cue Richman dashed on the stage and began giving them a piece of his alleged mind. A great quarrel ensued, with Richman pushing and shoving his antagonists. Jack Donahue, another star, intervened and urged Richman to remember that it was a benefit performance and to behave himself. But when Richman explained that the columnists were mean to actors and that their names were Hellinger and Winchell, Donahue cried: "Oh, yeah? I've been waiting for this opportunity myself!" And so saying he whipped out a pistol and blazed away.

This was all very cute, but what the audience didn't know was that the columnists refused to go on the stage until they had sent for a gangster acquaintance who inspected the cartridges in the gun to make certain that they were blanks.

Hehehah

Among the affable Walter C. Kelly's endless routine of jokes is the one about the old Irishman who just came from the old country and was going to Pittsburgh. As he struggled with his bags down the gangplank and out to the street he kept walking, bound for the Pennsy station. A Yellow taxi slowed down near him. "Cab?" inquired the driver.

"No!" grumbled the old fellow.

The next morning in Pittsburgh he ankled out of the depot and the driver of a Yellow taxi yelled: "Cab?"

"I told you no yistiddy!" shrieked the Tad, "wot th' hell are ye followin' me for?"

The Girl With The Red Hair by Rob Eden

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Gay Terris agreed to marry her wealthy employer, Frank Patterson, whom she did not love, in payment for a loan of $5,000 to send her sick mother to Arizona. After making her contract, she fell in love with Patterson's nephew, Mark Loring. In order to earn $200 more for her mother, Gay represented Fania Crandall, a crook posing as a society woman at a masquerade where a valuable necklace was stolen. Gay learned through Paul Ladishaw, Fania's accomplice, that Fania was the thief. Mark disappeared and Gay concluded that Fania was responsible. She told the whole story to her friend, Andy Grant, a newspaper reporter. He took her to Captain Bennett, detective, but when Fania and Ladishaw smoothly denied Gay's accusations, she was proclaimed insane and ordered to a psychopathic institution until cured.

CHAPTER XLI

Hours after this, it seemed to Gay, hours of answering questions. But she did the best she could. . . .

It was over except the verdict. She might go to lunch. They ate, Andy, Mark, Miss Mosely and Doctor Sloan and Gay, at a little restaurant nearby. The girl could hardly eat. Mark, too, seemed to have no appetite. When at last they went back to the courtroom, she was shaking, weak. She could barely walk from the door to the chair she was occupying.

They must believe her! They must!

Mark touched her cold, trembling hand, and whispered words of encouragement. She had never hated Fania Crandall as passionately as she did then. Her love for Mark so intense, her hate of Mrs. Crandall the same. . . .

The judge was very kind as he called her to him. But she knew what he was going to say before he spoke. She saw it in his eyes, and braced herself for it.

The sanity commission had found her unbalanced. She was to be committeed to an institution until she was cured. . . .

Fania had won.

There was little said after the verdict.

Mark was heartbroken. Gay could see that. His lips were twitching and his arm around her slim waist tightened spasmodically.

They walked out into the hall together and hesitated at the elevator. Miss Mosely kept close to the girl. She was responsible for her now, as Doctor Sloan had gone back to the hospital. Andy wanted to say something but didn't know what to say.

A white flame of anger came over Gay. Anger toward Fania Crandall who had done this thing to her. She tucked her purse under her coat, and looked back down the corridor. They had come around a corner, and beyond that she had seen stairs . . .

If she could get to Paul, herself, now . . .

A chance it was. And a slim one at that.

She looked anxiously at the elevator. It might come up any moment, and the chance would be gone. There was no time to consult Mark, or Andy. Besides Miss Mosely would hear if she said anything.

"I left my purse in the courtroom," she mumbled, "I'll get it—" and she ran down the hall, without looking back, without waiting for more. At the turn, she saw the stairs, and flew down them.

Miss Mosely would be after her by now—perhaps she wouldn't thing of the stairs.

Four flights and Gay was on the street, sliding through the crowds. She was safe, for the time being. Too bad she couldn't have Mark, but she hadn't had time to explain. She was going to Paul, going to find him someway and make him tell the truth. Her only chance.

A man looked curiously at the flying figure, and her heart stood still. She though everyone knew that she was running away. As she turned another corner, she bumped into a policeman, and muttered a hurried apology. She would have to slow down. She was going too fast. Suspicious going so fast. So she walked more slowly, trembling at everyone who brushed against her, worrying for fear she wouldn't make the subway in time. She had to ask where it was because she wasn't familiar down here.

Finally she was in the train and it was speeding on. Her head rested wearily against the glass of the window. Her nerves were gone . . . frightened by the possibility that she didn't have Paul's card with her, that she wouldn't remember his address if she didn't have it. Afraid to look. When she did, she found it, at the bottom of her purse, stained a little from the loose powder that had sifted onto its white surface.

If Paul weren't there . . . She brushed this thought fiercely from her mind. He had to be there! She must find him.

At 42nd street she shuttled across to the east side, frantic because she had to waste the time, but thankful withal because she was underground. A woman sitting beside her started a conversation, which Gay answered in a desultory fashion.

"Lovely hair you have," the woman remarked.

Gay swallowed hard and turned the conversation onto less dangerous topics. She realized how her hair branded her. It would be easy to trace her by her hair. When the woman was separated from her at Grand Central she tucked some of her red locks under her hat and pulled it farther down over her eyes. There, it didn't show so much, she thought, as she peered into a glass above a gum slot. Not so much.

When she finally arrived at 93rd street she hesitated before going into the street. It seemed all right, but she wasn't sure. Only a few blocks over. She must risk it. She tried to walk nonchalantly, as if she hadn't a care in the world, but her legs were trembling, weak, and now and then she glanced back of her to see if anyone were following. That was Paul's apartment house there. She breathed more easily when she was past the liveried doorman and inside the cool lobby. No one would think of looking for her here. The clerk at the desk told her that Mr. Ladishaw lived on the third floor.

Three forty-nine. Sidling away from his desk, she took the stairs instead of the elevator. It was bad having to ask Paul's apartment number, but when he had given her his card, he had merely scribbled on it his street address. Although Andy and Mark had been up to find Paul, they had neither of them mentioned his apartment number.

Her confidence came back when she stood in front of 349, and put her finger on the bell. Almost immediately a man answered it—Paul's servant, she knew from the visits Andy and Mark had paid here.

Without saying anything she brushed past him, and found herself in Ladishaw's living room.

"Tell Mr. Ladishaw Gay Terris is here," it was more of a command than a request, but Gay felt sure of her ground.

"Mr. Ladishaw is not here, Miss." The servant was annoyed. He wasn't used to visitors like this. Besides he had orders from Mrs. Crandall. Mr. Ladishaw was not to see anyone.

Gay looked at him scornfully and rushed through the apartment, opening all the doors, peering into the rooms. But Paul was not there. In his bedroom she paused. On a table beside the bed, was an ash tray filled with cigaret butts. Paul had been in the room recently, she decided. She looked again at the tray, and picked up a pamphlet beside it. Franconia. Could Paul be going to Europe? For the pamphlet described the ship . . .

Without giving the servant a backward glance, she went out of the apartment, holding the brochure in her hands. In the lobby, she found a phone and called the booking office of the Franconia. The ship was sailing at 6 for Cherbourg. Mr. Ladishaw was on the passenger list.

The clerk gave her the time. Four-thirty. She had plenty of time to get down to the dock.

Gone was her fear now. It had passed into anger again. She walked to the subway quickly, and inquired bravely at the change window the directions to the Franconia wharf.

She was quite calm as she stepped into a train. She had forgotten Miss Mosely, the hospital. She only knew that she was going to see Paul, and that he wasn't going on this trip to Europe. . . .

By the time she got down to the dock it was 5:30. Only half an hour to find Paul, to talk to him. She was panting when she finally found herself on the gangplank, actually going aboard the Franconia. The shrill blast of a whistle upset her, and she stumbled into the arms of a white coated steward on the deck.

He couldn't tell her whether Mr. Ladishaw was on board. What passage was he taking? There were fifteen hundred passengers . . .

Precious minutes lost while he directed her to the purser's office. A line waiting there. The ship would be leaving by the time she worked her way up to the window.

Another whistle—she trembled when she heard it. Immediately after a deep, stentorian voice came booming through the crowds—"all visitors ashore! All visitors ashore!"

She hadn't known it would be this hard finding Paul on the boat. What should she do?

"Could you tell me the number of Paul Ladishaw's stateroom?" She had thrust herself at the front of the line unceremoniously, rudely. The woman who was beside her, talking to the purser, frowned and tried to push her aside.

"Mr. Ladishaw's stateroom?" the purser asked, thumbing his list.

"Please. I want to find him before the boat leaves!"

"You should be off now, miss—Ladishaw, Ladishaw . . . here it is, A deck, 69."

She thanked him and hurried off through the labyrinth of passengers, feeling more lost, more helpless than ever.

"Five minutes yet," a man was looking at his watch, and mumbling.

But she couldn't find A deck. What a madhouse this was! People rushing about. Stewards carrying baggage, their faces wet with perspiration, their arms weighted down with luggage. One of them told her at last where to find A deck. Pointed with his arms full of suitcases, vaguely upward. She found 69 easily, then, and rapped on the door. When no one answered she opened the door and looked in.

Suitcases were piled on the bed, and a steamer trunk occupied one corner, but the room was empty. Paul must be on deck . . .

On deck she went, wondering how she would find Ladishaw in this mass of passengers leaning against the rail.

Her head was swimming. But was it her head? No, the dock was moving away. The Franconia was leaving . . . sailing . . .

A band was playing some place, and a flutter of handkerchiefs met her eyes as she pushed herself to the rail.

The Franconia was sailing . . . and she hadn't seen Paul yet.

Wednesday—The rich little poor girl.

Q.—What caused the peculiar echo in the Byrd broadcast?—G. M.

A.—The sound was caused, according to W. A. R. Brown, a National Broadcasting company engineer, by what might almost be termed a "feedback." The Australian station in the 20,000-mile hook-up was receiving from both the Schenectady and New Zealand ends of the leg and re-broadcasting each to the other. This pick-up in the Australian studios was responsible for "echo effect" heard. In other words, a voice in the General Electric studio was picked up in Australia for amplification and rebroadcast to the New Zealand studios, and a portion of it could not be prevented from traveling back over the route by which it had reached Australia.

Q.—Do the United States and France use the same flags on ship which they use on shore?—T. J.

A.—The stars and stripes of the United States are used on men-of-war and ships of the merchant marine. France also uses but one flag, the tri-color.

Q.—Does the arrangement of flowers have special significance in Japan?—T. A. G.

A.—It does. Flower-masters teach flower arranging and a course is included in the curriculum of nearly all girls' schools in Japan.

Q.—How far from the earth is the planet which has just been discovered?—L. B.

A.—It is estimated at 3,720,000,000 miles.

Q.—Is there a federal law which prohibits the issuing of a check for less than one dollar?—E. F. L.

A.—It is not against the law to write a check for less than one dollar if the check is intended to pay a debt and not for circulation. The United States code, section 3563 reads: "No person shall make, issue, circulate or pay out any note, check, memorandum, token or other obligation for a less sum than one dollar intended to circulate as money or to be received or used in lieu of lawful money of the United States; and every person so offending shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than six months, or both, at the discretion of the court."

Q.—What is the percentage of illiteracy in the Philippines?—M.J.D.

A.—According to the last report it was 37 per cent.

Q.—Who invented dice?—A. H. E.

A.—Dice were probably evolved from knuckle bones but it is almost impossible to trace clearly the development of dice as distinguished from knuckle bones on account of the confusion of the two games by the ancient writers. Both were played in times antecedent to those of which we possess any written records. Sophocles in a fragment, ascribed their invention to Palamedes, a Greek. He taught their use to his countrymen during the siege of Troy. Herodotus relates that the Lydians, during a period of famine, in the days of King Atys, invented dice, knuckle bones, and practically all other games except chess. Dice have been used throughout the Orient from time immemorial and have been found in tombs and mausoleums of ancient Egypt, classic Greece, and the Far East.

Q.—Is it really believed that the Mayan civilization is a survival of the old Atlantis?—K. F. H.

A.—The Bureau of American Ethnology says that the Atlantis theory of the development of the Mayan civilization is no longer accepted by Mayan scholars.

Q.—How powerful a glass is necessary to watch races when part of the course is six or eight miles away?—C. R.

A.—In order to watch horses, automobiles, etc., at a distance of six or eight miles, the bureau of standards says that a six or eight-power binocular or a 20-power telescope is recommended. If fine details are to be examined the telescope is the better.

Q.—What was Voltaire's object in writing "Candide"?—V. K.

A.—Candide is a satire which Voltaire wrote to attack the current theory that "all is for the best in this best of all possible worlds."

Q.—How far from Tokyo is Fujiyama?—N. A.

A.—This celebrated quiescent volcano is 70 miles west southwest of Tokyo. It rises to a height of 12,395 feet and its southern slopes reach the shore of Suruga bay.

Q.—Where were the first millefiore paperweights made?—A. L.

A.—The very first ones were manufactured in Venice but later they were made in other foreign countries and in the United States.

DANFORTH HERDS STEERS TO 5-3 VICTORY OVER SPUDDERS

The Rambler's Corner

By FRED D. THOMPSON

Two of our youthful Spudders who had not been in a game this season saw duty Sunday in the unpleasantness with Shreveport. They were Dick Florrid, up from Columbus, Ga., of the Southeastern league, who pitched two innings; and George Nebel, who spent a period at Abilene last year, who replaced Fitzgerald for a while in center field.

It so happened that the Sports, during Nebel's three-inning stay in the garden, were concerned just then with knocking the pill into left field, and so George didn't come into any especial notice, except that several fans remarked he could do very well with a new and cleaner uniform. And George didn't get to bat but once. In that attempt he at least hit the ball, grounding out to short; but no one could base a judgment on such a slender number of times at bat. George was noticed, however, for his pep. He's always got plenty of that.

As for Florrid, the young Jawjan in his two innings allowed two hits and a run, nearly, but not quite as bad as Cy Smith's two-inning record, which showed three hits and one run allowed. But Florrid undoubtedly will do better when he's given a more extensive stay on the mound.

Cy Smith hasn't had any luck at all against the Sports. Both games in which he has appeared on the home lot this season were with Shreveport, and both were lost. Not meaning, of course, that he was responsible entirely. He started against the Sports in the last game of the first series here, and was battered off the mound after three and a third innings. Sunday, after Lester White was mistreated for five innings, he went in as a relief pitcher, but offered little relief.

At that, however, there is some virtue in Smith's fast ball pitching. He struck out three men in his two innings Sunday, which was a better record than White's, which shows one strikeout, and Tuero's which shows two. Smith is still young, he has yet to pitch a full season with a class A club, and he has plenty room to snap out of it.

But hurry up, Cy; we're waitin' on you!

All our players are young, thank goodness, and there is not a fossil anywhere near Spudder park, but the most refreshing picture of youth is that offered by our new pitcher, Earl Caldwell. Dern it, he even blushes! He's a handsome bloke, which, indeed, is not such a novelty down at the clubhouse, because most of our Spudders are; but in addition to being handsome he's timid and reticent, which is excellent.

Well, Art Phelan sure pulled the wool over our eyes when he brought his ragged Sports here on April 9. He didn't even intimate that under the rags there were silks so fine, and we had no idea his team could show such teamwork as to bring them two straight victories on our home lot. Yes, Art has got a good team, but don't worry, mates, these guys from Louisiana won't be so hot as the season advances. They have a fairly capable pitching staff, but even their best, who appears now to be Spitballer Tuero, can't come within a mile of Shut-out Wiltse; and Huarte, who scintillated around the shortstop position Sunday, was only doing what Spider Levey has been doing all year, and in much better form, we think. Holman may be a good third baseman, but he can't match Walter Euller; and their keystoner and first baseman will have to go a long way to outclass Storti and Jack Burns. And if there's a better young catcher than Jack Crouch we'd like to see him. To say nothing of our gardners, Kloza, Fitzgerald and Bettencourt, otherwise Battencourt.

Incidentally, here's a little fragment from life. President J. Alvin Gardner was leaving the park the other day just after Fitzgerald had made several spectacular catches, one of which, in the ninth inning, had saved the day for the Spudders. Near the gate in her car was Mrs. Fitzgerald and her son, waiting for the ruler of the house and home.

"Hello," said the league prexy, "Did you see your husband make that wonderful catch?"

"Which one?" Mrs. Fitzgerald asked, naturally.

CALDWELL GOOD FOR NINE HITS

Willingham Connects for Home Run

Special to The Record News.

DALLAS, April 21.—Collecting nine hits off Earl Caldwell, one of them being good for Willingham's home run in the seventh inning, the Dallas Steers today broke their losing streak of five games by defeating the Wichita Falls Spudders, 5 to 3.

The superiority of Dave Danforth in the pinches held the Spudders in check throughout the game, and frustrated a ninth inning rally in which the visitors were able to push over only one run.

The Spudders are here for two more games of the three-game series.

The Steers started counting in the second, and made three more in the fifth before the Spudders finally managed to push over a tally in the sixth. Willingham's homer in the seventh followed and the Spudders made their last two in the eighth and ninth.

Brown Starts Scoring

Brown scored the Steers' first run in the second. Blackerby, first up, rolled out, third to first. Brown singled to left. Morse singled to right, sending Brown to third. Windle flied to left and Brown scored after the catch. Robertson forced Morse, Storti unassisted, to close the inning.

The Steers' productive sixth inning started off in the same manner as the second, with Johnson rolling out to the infield. Swanson walked. Willingham doubled to right, scoring Swanson. Blackerby doubled to left, scoring Willingham. Brown singled to center, scoring Blackerby, was trapped between first and second, but reached the keystone sack on Burns' wild throw to Storti. Morse grounded out, Burns to Caldwell, Brown taking third. Windle popped to Caldwell, ending the inning.

Levey started the sixth off by walking. Storti singled to left, Levey going to second. Fitzgerald walked, filling the bases. Kloza popped to second. Burns grounded out to first, unassisted, Levey scoring. Bettencourt flied to left and the inning was over.

Storti Scores

Storti scored the Spudders' second tally in the eighth. The first man up, he doubled down the third base line. Fitzgerald fanned. Kloza grounded out, short to first, Storti taking third. Burns singled to center, scoring Storti. Bettencourt flied to left for the third out.

The ninth inning was marked by the Wichita Falls team's desperate but futile attempt to even the score. Euller fanned. Crouch walked. Allday, batting for Caldwell, walked, advancing Crouch. Levey popped to second. Storti doubled to left, scoring Crouch and sending Allday to third. Fitzgerald flied to right and the game was over.

HOUSTON, April 21. (AP)—Art Reinhart, southpaw who has had trouble winning this spring, got a "break" today. FRENCH GOLF MEET PLANNED

Women's Team to Play Two Tourneys Abroad

By DIXON STEWART
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, April 21.—Glenna Collett, captain of the American golf team which will compete against Great Britain next month in the first women's international team match in history, today announced acceptance of an invitation for a second international match to be played in France. Pairings for the final practice matches to be played at Knollwood Country club, White Plains, N. Y., Monday also were announced.

The matches with France will be played May 27 at St. Germain Golf club, situated on the River Seine, 15 miles from Paris, following participation of the American forces in the team matches with England and in the British ladies' championship.

Scheduling of the match with France has solved Miss Collett's problem of securing international competition for all members of the team. When she originally broadcast an invitation for American women to join her team she promised competition for all players. Acceptances exceeded expectations and Miss Collett found she had 16 players, while Mollie Gourlay, captain of the British team, insisted on limiting the matches to 10 players to a side.

The American team is assembling in New York for sailing on the S. S. Berengaria next Tuesday. The final competition will be held at Knollwood Monday with competition in Scoth foursomes, the style of play to be used in the international matches.

Miss Collett today announced the lineup for the Knollwood matches, declaring the pairings were no indication of how she will array her players against Great Britain or France, but that the final test would enable her to obtain a line on the temperament and game of squad members for this style of play.

The team match with Great Britain will be played at Sunningdale on Thursday, May 1, giving the American players only a few days to practice abroad. Miss Collett intends to use her 10 strongest players in singles competition and give the remaining players an opportunity to compete in the foursome play.

All members of the American team will compete in the British women's tournament at Formbay, May 12-16. Details of the match with France have not been completed but Miss Collett hopes to arrange for each side to use 16 players.

Phil Scott, English Boxing Apollo, To Become Beauty Parlor Magnate

By HARRY CROCKER
Universal Serv. Staff Correspondent

LONDON, April 21.—Phil Scott, the Apollo of the English ring, is going to run a beauty parlor.

Phil has acquired premises near his home in Thornton Heath and he will begin shortly to fulfill two of his ambitions — beautifying women and keeping men young.

And it is not his recent defeat at Miami by Jack Sharkey that has decided Phil on giving more attention to a gentler art. It's just that he wants to put a few of his pet theories into practice.

"Massage—that's the secret," he declared, "and plenty of sleep, and a sensible diet."

Massage, sleep and diet will keep men young, Phil believes; diet sleep and massage will make women beautiful. But Phil will not stop there.

"The thing most beauty specialists ignore is temperament," he said. "I shall study temperament. That will help a terrific amount in my treatment ...

Owner of Boston's Only Champs Again Watches Battered Braves Perform

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyr't, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, April 21.—Jim Gaffney watched his old ball club play McGraw's Giants the other day.

Jim Gaffney is the only man that ever owned a national league world's championship club in Boston. He owned the Braves in 1914, when George Stallings tongue-lashed that miscellaneous mob to a pennant in his own league, and then nagged them on to beating one of the greatest ball clubs of all time, the Philadelphia Athletics.

Stallings is dead and buried down in his beloved Georgia. The crew that he always lovingly referred to as "my little ball club," has long since disintegrated. Most of them have passed out of baseball altogether. But some remain.

Jim Gaffney's eyes lighted up when he saw the gangling figure of Lankus Hankus Pankus Gowdy patrolling the coaching line. His face wrinkled with smiles when "Rabbit" Maranville nabbed a twisting grounder, and gave it that old time chuck to first base. Lankus Hankus and the "Rabbit" were members of Gaffney's club back in 1914.

The Indian heads that the Braves wore on their uniforms and the name of the Braves are lingering memories of the Gaffney days in Beantown. I believe they were called the Braves because of Jim Gaffney's connection with New York's Tammany hall. At least that had something to do with it. Before Gaffney bought the club, the outfit was known as the Beaneaters.

Jim Gaffney was once a New York cop. A "flatfoot," as he proudly states. A New Yorker to the core—Tammany hall, and all—he had certain contracting interests that took him to Boston town. He had always been a violent baseball fan, with a strong penchant for the Yankees owned by his friend, Frank Farrell.

The National leaguers in Boston were a sad case in those days, chronic tail-enders, and playing in a ramshackle old plant that seemed ready to fall apart. I do not know the circumstances of Jim Gaffney's acquirement of the Braves along in 1912, but I do know that no one thought he had acquired much at the time.

At the beginning of the season of 1913, the redoubtable Stallings, once leader of the Yankees, was summoned to Boston as manager by Gaffney, and started out with a ball club that seemed about as ramshackle as the Braves' plant. Yet he somehow managed to sneak into fifth place that year, which was a big improvement over the eight-hole in which John Kling, the old catcher, had landed them the year before.

The Giants in 1913 had won their third consecutive pennant, and seemed a fair bet to repeat in 1914. The season was pretty well along when Stallings' mob which was absolutely last on July 4, began winning baseball games a regularity that astonished the land. The Georgian was working a pitching combination of Dick Rudolph and Bill James, right handers, and Tyler, a left hander, with scant variation, and suddenly the Braves found themselves with a pennant.

It was the biggest baseball surprise of many years, but a bigger surprise was yet to come. The Braves won the world's series in four straight games. It was more than a surprise—it was a shock!

Big Dutch Schmidt, a slow-footed bloke from Baltimore with a mighty wallop in his hickory switch, was Stalling's first baseman. The great Johnny Evers was at second, not as good as he used to be, perhaps, but still a fine ball player. Maranville was at short and Deal at third. You couldn't call that a great infield—certainly not to be compared with Connie Mack's $100,000 array—McInnes, Collins, Barry and Baker.

In his outfield in 1914, Stallings had different people. He had Moran, Connolly and Whitted some days, and on other days he had Cather, Mann or Devore. But in that box he practically always had Rudolph, Tyler or James and behind the bat he had Ol' Lankus Hankus Gowdy, who was later to carry the colors of a fighting regiment of the Rainbows through the Champagne and the Argonne.

In the first game of the world's series of 1914, at Philadelphia, Little Dick Rudolph held the Athletics to five hits and a single run while the Braves were making seven tallies.

"An accident," sniffed the baseball world.

In the second game, Bill James shut out Mack's champions with two hits and then the baseball world sat up and blinked it's eyes.

In the third game, at Boston, Tyler started, and James finished a game that was won by the Braves in 10 innings, 5 to 4. In the fourth and final game, Rudolph again held the great Athletics in the hollow of his oily old pitching glove, setting them down with seven hits and a single tally, while the Braves were scoring three markers.

Bob Shawkey, now the manager of the Yanks, and Pennock, who was later to win his real baseball fame at the stadium up in the Bronx, pitched that game for Mack. Old Chief Bender and Wyckoff figured in the opener, and the mighty Eddie Plank succumbed in the second pastime. "Bullet Joe" Bush was the Braves' victim in the third.

Stallings managed the Braves for 11 years thereafter, and finished second once, and third once, but never better than fourth in his other seasons. Jim Gaffney felt that he had all the baseball glory he cared for, especially as his nerves were bending under the strain, and he quit the presidency of the club in 1915, but not until he had given Boston Braves field. It is one of the finest baseball plants in the country.

It must have brought back glowing memories to him to see old Lankus Hankus Gowdy nad Maranville in the familiar uniforms again. No one else has given Boston a National league pennant since he left there.

I notice that Jim Gaffney is again racing a few horses on the Metropolitan tracks. He had once withdrawn completely from that game, too. Now, that he is back in it again, there is perhaps a chance that he will return to baseball. He was undoubtedly a great asset to that pastime, though I doubt if he made much money out of his investment in Boston.

He was a popular man with his players, and with the fans. Of engaging personality, liberal and a sportsman, baseball could very well use Jim Gaffney again. Oddly enough, another New Yorker of much the same type, owned the Boston Red Sox of the American league, when Jim Gaffney owned the Braves. He was Joe Lannin, as fine a man as ever lived, who died a few years after retiring from baseball for the same reason as Mr. Gaffney—his health.

A.'S ENCOUNTER FIRST DEFEAT

Senators Whip Mackmen, 6 to 3

PHILADELPHIA, April 21. (AP)—The world's champions Philadelphia Athletics suffered their first defeat of the season today losing to Washington, 6 to 3.

The Mackmen got off to a 2 to 0 lead by bunching their hits on Bumps Hadley in the first inning but the Senators tied the score by the third inning and in the fourth Earnshaw's wildness forced two more runs over the plate.

Howard Ehmke, world's series hero, made his first appearance in the box this year as Earnshaw's rescuer in the fourth inning. In the fifth inning Cronin hit Ehmke for a homer with one on base and clinched the game for the visitors. Score:

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, April 21. (AP)—Cotton was generally quiet today with prices lower under scattering liquidation which appeared influenced by the expectation of May delivery notices next Friday. May was sold off to 15.76 or 23 points net lower, closing at that figure. October closed at 14.88 showed a net loss of 16 points. The general market closed barely steady at net declines of 15 to 23 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 1 to 5 points under comparatively small offerings. The continuance of the Easter holidays abroad had a restricting effect on business, and traders seemed to find nothing in the over-holiday news of stimulating character. The failure of weather reports to indicate any rainfall in the droughty section of West Texas may have brought in a little buying of new crop months, but it was supplied around the initial figures and the market soon showed net losses of about 8 to 14 points.

The market seemed rather unsettled in the last few minutes when July sold off to 15.92 and the new December contract to 15.00. Closing prices were the lowest of the day on all positions with May 16 points under July compared with 11 points at the close of last Thursday but showed a premium of 88 points over the new October compared with 95 points at the close of business last week. The report of the bureau of agricultural economics indicating that 75.7 per cent of the ginnings from the crop of 1929 were tenderable compared with 82.2 per cent of the previous crop seemed without particular effect.

Port receipts 5,241. U. S. port stocks, 1,733,171. Exports 29,398. Making 6,189,-058 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, April 21. (AP)—Following a brief spurt of activity at the opening, cotton ruled quiet through today's session, fluctuating narrowly within the early range. Traders were disposed to wait for the first notice day for May deliveries, later in the week and large tenders are looked for as the certified stock at the delivery points now total 267,729 bales.

In the absence of Liverpool, the market still being closed for the Easter holidays, the market here opened irregular and 7 to 16 points lower, owing to an accumulation of selling orders over the holidays. The market rallied 10 to 11 points, however, but lost some of this gain before the end of the first hour. After that the market was dull. Near the close weakness developed on reported selling of May by Wall street and the market made new lows 12 to 15 points under the highs, closing at or near the lowest.

July after opening at 15.63, down 16 points, rallied to 15.74 and then eased to 15.57 and closed at 15.60, at a net decline of 19 points. Then general market closed steady at net losses of 18 to 19 points.

On the opening decline May sold off to 15.46, and October to 14.96, or 12 to 16 points under the previous close. May rallied to 15.56, and October 15.03, or 10 to 11 points up from the early lows.

After scarcely moving at all through the session and keeping within the early range the market weakened again, May dropping to 15.41, July to 15.59, and October to 14.91 or 12 to 15 points under the highs. The close was at or near the bottom.

Receipts 4,302; for week 6,719; for year 8,107,076; last year 9,108,149. Exports 33,410; for week 37,134; for year 6,040,203; last year 6,973,418. Stocks 1,713,285; last year 1,493,919. Stock on shipboard at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston 72,344 last year 77,652. Spot sales 1,030; last year 5,966.

Rumors of Unsatisfactory Quarterly Reports Send Market Prices Down

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, April 21. (US)—Heavier professional pressure and some liquidation forced prices lower in a more active stock market today. Short selling was accompanied by widespread discussion of the less satisfactory showing to be made by most companies in forthcoming quarterly reports. Bullish utterances at the U. S. Steel annual meeting and easier money offset the bearish propaganda to some extent.

Steel finished 3¾ lower, while American Telephone lost 7⅛, American Can 2⅝, International Telephone 2⅛, Westinghouse 1⅜, General Electric 4, Anaconda 3⅞, Bethlehem 2, Kennecott 3½, Atlantic Refining 3⅜, Warner 1½, Columbia Gas 2⅛, Foreign Power 4⅝, Electric Power 4⅜, New York Central 2, Canadian Pacific 3, and Johns Manville 3⅝.

Vanadium remained the outstanding feature of strength gaining 6¼. Turnover increased to near the 4,500,000 share level. Call money eased to 3½ from a renewal of 4 per cent.

One of the largest stock exchange firms has ordered all employes to prepare to finish their vacation by the end of July. Smaller firms have done likewise. The main reason given is that a record active stock market is expected by the end of summer or early in the fall. Banking leaders are believed to have the market well in hand now and as soon as the first stages of reparation financing are completed will ease the brakes and let the market go ahead with greater speed.

The brokers expressing such views point out that the sustained strength of the market is influencing cheerfulness throughout the country and in all industries. They believe that the financial leaders will throw in support whenever a dangerous setback in prices is threatened although admitting, at the same time, that unrestrained speculation will be discouraged pending the completion of the first part of the German offering.

The new litigation in the Fox situation has temporarily held up the plans of bankers. It was planned to offer the General Theater bonds and the Fox Film debentures before the end of the week. As those now in control have a big majority of stock supporting them they expect to complete their plans eventually, however. Those who have been making the active and steady market in General Gas continued their operations. They look for a series of favorable developments in the natural gas field over the next several months. In this connection good buying of Dresser Manufacturing is reported also as it has a virtual monopoly on products needed by the industry.

Kreuger & Toll people were said to be interested in Diamond Match so that in addition to the splitup report there was expectation voiced that change of control might result. Eastman Kodak continued to be well taken. All the banks are installing its new device for check protection which takes a complete film of all checks coming through from which a full sized photograph is produced.

Selling of Checker Cab was due to knowledge that earnings for the first quarter were well under $1 a share as compared with over $4 a year ago. In that quarter last year abnormal demand resulted from introduction of the new model car. Later in the year the company will be ready with another new offering so that insiders do not seem to be worrying.

Meeting of the U. S. Steel stockholders brought the bullish statement expected from Myron C. Taylor and Mr. Farrell. It was a disappointment, however, in that none of the officials commented directly on the possibility of a splitup of the stock and larger dividend that is expected to result. However the remarks of Chairman Taylor telling of the strong financial position as a result of bond retirement, etc., and the corporation's plans for expansion all were indications that such recapitalization is not far off.

It is the policy of the Morgan-First National banking interests who control steel affairs to make the stock as much of a public favorite as possible. This can be done only by putting it in a popular price field. When the directors decide to announce their splitup plans they probably will call a special "surprise meeting" such as was done when the stock dividend melon was cut.

Holiday abroad tended to keep the foreign exchange market quiet with most currencies holding firm. Cotton slipped off further as additional bearish advices were received from abroad. Wheat and other grains remained reactionary also.

MIDWESTERN LIVESTOCK REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, April 21. (AP) (U.S.D.A.)—Shippers at several points around the 11-market circuit filled a few orders for hogs at firm to slightly higher prices but later business was weak to 25c lower. The top of $10.55 was paid at St. Louis. Offerings 107,000 a decrease of 16,500 from a week ago, but 14,000 more than the corresponding day last year.

Curtailed receipts prompted a 25@50c upturn on fed wooled lambs but spring lambs and mature clases of sheep at some centers were lower. Grain

TEXAS CASH GRAIN

FORT WORTH, April 21. (AP)—Wheat on the cash grain market here today was off slightly, but mills were bidding more actively for it with high protein grain again wanted. Bids ran $1.10@1.11½ for ordinary No. 1 hard milling wheat delivered Texas common points and $1.11¾@1.12½ for 13 per cent protein.

Dealers reported fair demand for corn and oats with barley slow and sorghums easier and dull. Cane seed of good type and germination were still wanted at around the season's top prices.

Bids and offers on coarse grains ranged as follows, basis carloads delivered Texas common points, freight paid:

Corn—No. 2 mixed 94@95c; No. 2 white or yellow 96½@97½c.

Oats—No. 2 red 56½@57½c.

Barley—No. 3 nominally, 74@75c.

Sorghums—No. 2 milo per 100 pounds $1.57@1.59; No. 2 kaffir $1.57@1.59.

Cane Seed—Bulk country run red top, per 100 pounds, according to type, germination, origin and clean-out $4.25@4.60.

Dealers also quoted as follows, basis delivered Texas group one points; No. 2 mixed corn 91@92c; No. 3 white 93½@94½c; No. 2 yellow 94@95c; No. 3 white oats 53½@54 cents to which add one cent per bushel for delivery group three.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, April 21. (AP)—Acute weakness in corn values today caused the market to break 3c a bushel in some cases. Flurried selling to stop losses developed, the trade being taken by surprise as a result of the corn visible supply showing an increase nothwithstanding liberal shipments from Chicago accompanying opening of lake navigation. Rapid progress of spring wheat seeding, together with talk of discontinuance of federal farm board loans to wheat growers, had a bearish effect on wheat.

Closing quotations on corn were nervous 2⅛@2½c lower than Saturday's finish. Wheat closed unsettled at ¼c net decline, oats ⅛@½c down, and provisions unchanged to 7c off.

Most of the instability of the corn market developed near the close and after announcement of 261,000 bushels increase of the corn visible supply during the last week despite shrinkage of stocks at Chicago. The country's total stock of corn in sight is now 23,641,000 bushels against 30,853,000 bushels a year ago.

Beneficial rains over sections of the Southwest and West, together with statements that the United States wheat visible supply on May 1 would total about 138,000,000 bushels against a 10-year average of only 47,000,000 bushels did much to make wheat prices average lower. With most European markets closed on account of a post-Easter holiday, overseas demand for wheat from North America was poor. Oats were easier, sympathizing with corn and wheat.

Provisions reflected downturns, both in hog values and in corn.

PIT NOTES

CHICAGO, April 21. (US)—Bearish sentiment toward wheat is pronounced in the local trade. It is felt that the greater share of the winter crop is out of danger for the time being, that there is not much reduction in spring acreage and that liquidation of the May will depress the market fairly consistently the next few days.

Lack of interest in the buying side was the only reason advanced for the extreme weakness in the corn future today. Scattered selling sent the market into stop-loss sales. Until the cash demand becomes brisker there is not much interest expected despite the apparently sound statistical position.

Most of the advices from the Northwest indicate exceptionally favorable conditions for seeding of the crop. Many of them add that both wheat and flax acreage is being increased, but it will be a week or two before any concrete estimates of acreage will be at hand.

Broomhall's news regarding foreign crop conditions is generally very favorable.

The total U. S. visible supply is 139,000,000 bushels against 118,000,000 bushels the previous year, but the 10-year average of wheat supplies visible May 1 is only 47,000,0000 bushels.

POULTRY-EGG MARKET DULL

New Milk Route Opened to Olney Area

Increased supplies and static demand in the poultry and egg market were reported Monday by local dealers, with the prediction that prices may show a downward revision within the week.

New supplies of sweet milk for the Southwest Dairy Products company were established with the opening of a new route Sunday from Olney, Archer City, and surrounding territory. The route runs from Olney to Wichita Falls, by way of Archer City, and is expected to produce on the average about 3,500 pounds of milk daily.

Opening of the condensing and powdering operations at the plant formerly occupied by the Kraft Cheese company, postponed early this month because of unusually heavy demande for whole milk will take place soon, according to P. R. Freeman, manager. No definite date was announced.

Jazz Band Livens Easter Services

NEW YORK, April 21. (INS)—An Easter service augmented by a well known jazz band at the Manhattan Congregational church last night was being discussed here today.

Dr. Edward Henry Emmett, pastor, explained that he was "merely meeting the demands of the time."

"Brethren, we are very happy to have with us this evening Paul Specht. This is the first time he has played for us and will continue to play every Sunday I hope."

The 15-piece orchestra, including saxaphones, cornets and trombones then breathed forth a low melodius syncopated jazzed version of "To an Evening Star."

The audience of 1,200 gasped. A flapper said, "You could dance to this." A lady fainted. She said the air had been a little close . . . and the Easter excitement.

Another prayer and a hymn and the orchestra jazzed "To a Wild Rose" by MacDowell and a selection from "Thais," and the service came to an end.

AGED NEGRO GOES TO TRIAL

Court Refuses Lunacy Plea Of Norford's Attorneys

The first four state witnesses in the trial of James Norford, aged negro, on a charge of murder in connection with the fatal shooting of his wife, Ada, here last March 11 were called to the stand in the 30th district court Monday afternoon after the greater part of the day had been spent in selecting the jury. The 12th juror was accepted for service shortly before 4 o'clock.

Prior to completion of the jury, Judge Allan D. Montgomery overruled a defense motion alleging Norford was insane and incompetent to testify and seeking a trial of the accused man on a lunacy charge. The motion was signed by Judge Edgar Scurry of defense counsel.

Officer Testifies

The first witness called to the stand was Detective Pat Allen of the city police department, who with other officers arrested Norford following the slaying. Detective Allen testified he was summoned to Norford's house and that when he arrived he found Ada Norford dead, her husband standing in the blood-spattered room.

The next three witnesses, all negro women, were officers and members of the Mosaic Templars of America, an organization to which the slain woman belonged and under which she had held an insurance policy for $300. Attorneys for the state indicated they would contend that the accused negro had altered the policy, placing his own name in the place of beneficiary.

Zenobia Trimble, a negro woman and former secretary of the lodge, testified that she witnessed the signing of the policy and stated the rules of the organization permitted alteration of the policies only within the lodge room. Ada Norford could not sign her own name at the time, the witness said, she herself having written the name and that of the beneficiary, Collie Garrett, on the policy. No other beneficiary was named on the policy at that time, she told the jury, and no other was later named by the slain woman so far as she knew.

Courtroom Crowded

Lottie Dorsey, present secretary of the lodge, was next called to the stand. She testified she knew nothing of a change in the policy.

The next witness was Susie Craft, who with Zenobia Trimble, witnessed the signing of the policy. Her testimony was in corroboration of that of the other two witnesses.

Bob Crain and John Davenport are assisting Judge Scurry in the defense while Mike Anglin and George W. Anderson, assistants to the district attorney, and Bernard Martin, special prosecutor, represented the state.

The courtroom Monday afternoon was filled almost to overflowing with negroes, both on the lower floor and in the balcony. Only 20 white persons, including Judge Montgomery, the jury and the attorneys, were in the courtroom.

Another indictment is pending against Norford, charging him with the slaying of Andrew Byrd, aged negro proprietor of a store near the Norford home. It is alleged the accused man first shot Byrd to death in front of the store and then went to his own home where he shot his wife.

MAJESTIC: Charles Rogers in "Young Eagles," with Jean Arthur and many airplanes. Pathe comedy "Garden of Eatin'." Sound news.

STRAND: "Show of Shows," a long column of vaudeville acts calling the roll of stars. Paramount sound news.

STATE: "The Bishop Murder Case," S. S. Vane Dyne mystery story, with Basil Rathbone, Leila Hyams, Raymond Hackett and Polly Moran. Sound news.

GEM: Nancy Carroll, Helen Kane and Jack Oakie in "Sweetie." "Jim Jam Janitor," comedy.

This department has had a new experience. During the past three days, numerous and sundry patrons of screen entertainment could have been induced to thump out its 297 words merely by offering them the space. This statement is based upon expressions which not only have been volunteered, but actually have been hurled at us, as one who should lend a sympathetic and interested ear. Assigned to any one of the volunteers, the entire six and a half inches of this column would have told in great detail and with lurid expletives just how the "Show of Shows" dealt a complete "bust" to an unsuspecting public.

◆ ◇ ◆

For a pleasant change—or alternative, for Tuesday, Buddy Rogers' "Young Eagles" over at the Majestic not only provides an entertaining story, but contains three elements which will be generally recognized as marking progress even without Mr. Hays' autograph. In the first breath, Buddy and Jean turn in the best performances, from the standpoint of histrionics, which they have filmed thus far. Their excellence carries the tale successfully over the two or three cheaply obvious dramatic tricks which were employed for lack of time to evolve better methods. The picture also introduces two innovations in its general idea: fighters on opposite sides in the late war retain a capacity for friendship outside the fighting zone, and the tremendous struggle remains in the background while comedy and romance, rather than blasted bodies and exploding shrapnel, fill the foreground. Paul Lukas and Stuart Erwin support Jean and Buddy with unusually capable characterizations.

◆ ◇ ◆

Reduction of battlefield shots to a minimum, substitution of typical barracks room comedy for trench tragedy, and a new angle in plot building are aided by another improvement. Harken: there is no theme song. In a moment of great enlightenment, this director uses the old songs found on the piano in any "Y" building in 1918. Along with the "morale" tunes to which buddies marched are heard "Memories," "Till We Meet Again," "Love, Here Is My Heart," and others of equally authentic periodicity.

◆ ◇ ◆

Educational features in the news reel along with "Young Eagles": Gen. John J. Pershing receiving the degree of "doctor of military science" from New York university; Mussolini bestowing air medals upon heroes, or heroes' widows, and showing Hollywood how to kiss without kissing; a 10-year-old youngster in Singapore delivering to American kids a three-minute speech of greeting for which he had learned English all pure but peculiar.

Record Order Claimed For Electric Refrigeration

What is said to be the largest order for electrical refrigeration ever placed in the South was placed by the Radio Equipment company of Texas with the Majestic Household Utilities corporation, an affiliate of the Grigsby-Grunow company, Chicago, when they ordered 30,000 of the new Majestic electric refrigerators. The dealers are anxiously awaiting this new product. Inquiries coming in by mail, telephone and telegraph, with many dealers endeavoring to place their orders even before the final announcement was made. In all probability the sales demand will far exceed the first year's supply.

Testimony Starts In $35,000 Damage Suit

Hearing of testimony in the $35,000 damage suit brought against W. P. Lincoln by Miss Violet Stone, who is alleged to have sustained permanent injuries in a highway accident near Harrold on the Electra highway last October, was begun Monday afternoon before Judge P. A. Martin in the 89th district court. The first witness was called to the stand a short while before adjournment and his testimony will be continued Tuesday morning.

The accident in which Miss Stone was injured, claimed the life of Gaston Scott, driver of the car in which she was riding. According to the testimony, Scott's car and a truck owned by Mr. Lincoln were involved in the crash.

Cline Gives Talk At Kiwanis Lunch

Implied pleas for more consistent and more serious attention to maintaining home, church, and school were prominent in a philosophical discourse by Walter D. Cline before members of the Kiwanis club in their weekly meeting at the Kemp hotel Monday.

Mr. Cline's admonitions included the statement that more work on important things and less wishing for unimportant distinctions would greatly increase general happiness. Most people try to do too many things, he said, and lose sight of fundamental values in the confusion of unimportant activities.

Mr. Cline was introduced by Walter Nelson Jr., R. G. Storey of Dallas, lieutenant governor of Kiwanis International, was a guest at the meeting, and made a short talk. Dr. F. R. Collard introduced Fred Boardman as a new member, and guests were presented by Phil M. Cordell. The weekly singsong was conducted by William E. Young.

Members of the club were reminded of the S. M. U. Glee club concert at the Memorial auditorium and were urged to attend.

STORE HEAD VISITS HERE

Sears-Roebuck President Says Business Improving

Wichita Falls was paid a 40-minute visit Monday morning by Gen. R. E. Wood of Chicago, president of the Sears-Roebuck and company, who made a brief inspection of the local store on a tour of the Southwest.

Arriving at 10:30 a. m. by airplane from Dallas, General Wood left this city at 11:10 by automobile for Temple, Okla., where he planned to visit the B. & O. store. He returned to this city to board the Safeway plane Monday afternoon to Tulsa.

General improvement in business conditions throughout the country has begun, the visitor said, and should increase materially during the succeeding months of the year. He expressed the opinion that controversy anent chain stores has not damaged their business to any measurable extent.

Following a career in military and naval affairs of the nation which began before the world war, General Wood became vice president of the Sears-Roebuck company in 1924, and in 1928 succeeded the late C. M. Kittle as president.

Sixth District Of Federation Opens Meet at Coleman

Special to the Record News

COLEMAN, Texas, April 21.—A full attendance at the fifteenth annual convention of the sixth district meeting of Texas Federation of Womens' club is not expected until registration is completed tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

Some delay in arrivals was occasioned by the funeral of Congressman R. Q. Lee at Cisco this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. At 2:30 o'clock this afternoon eight visitors and 30 committee heads and members of the executive board had registered and were meeting with Mrs. Greenleaf Fisk, president, presiding at the home of Mrs. H. J. Ohair. At 6:30 o'clock board members were entertained at a buffet supper at the Manhattan cafe.

At the meeting tonight at the Baptist church Dr. J. D. Sandefer, president of Simmons university at Abilene, was the main speaker. His topic was "Perils of the Modern Youth." The program tonight opened with an invocation by Rev. C. E. Lancaster, pastor of the First church, and a vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. Gypsy Ted Sullivan Wyle of McMurry college of Abilene. Welcome addresses were delivered by Mayor R. H. Alexander, Walter C. Woodward, president of the chamber of commerce, and Mrs. Chas. Polk, president of the City Federation of Women's clubs.

The response was made by Mrs. Brack Simpson of Brady. A violin solo was given by Miss Camilla Marrs, Simmons university, Abilene. Following Dr. Sandefer's address, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. C. E. Lancaster. Visiting ladies are being entertained in local homes.

ATTEMPT MADE BURN CAPITOL AT NOON HOUR

AUSTIN, April 19. (UP)—An apparent attempt to set fire to the state capitol building here today was frustrated when employes discovered the flames and extinguished them before serious damage was done.

FIRE-PROOF?

No building is fireproof — entirely proof against fire. True, there are fire-resistive buildings. But repeated proofs show the necessity of insuring even that type — the safest type — of building.

Don't resist the prudent thought of carrying adequate insurance on fire-resistive buildings and their contents. It's better to have insurance and not need it than to need it and not have it, isn't it?

C.-C. Issues Call for Reservations For Goodwill Trip to Altus

All business and professional men of Wichita Falls who plan to make the goodwill trip to Altus Wednesday with the delegation organized by the manufacturers and jobbers division of the chamber of commerce were urged Monday by L. A. Estes, chairman, to get their reservations in by Tuesday noon.

Ten dollars is the one and complete price of the trip, according to Dudley P. Foy, assistant manager of the chamber of commerce. That sum will pay round-trip railroad fare and provide luncheon not only for the Wichita Falls party but for about 50 Altus business men who are to be guests of the visiting delegation at the Orient hotel in Altus, it was said. Members of the group will have time to obtain their morning and evening meals in this city, according to plans made for the trip.

More than 60 places already had been bought Monday afternoon, and Mr. Estes estimated that at least 15 more reservations would be made. Mr. Foy stated that additional members would serve the convenience of the chamber of commerce materially by bringing the money for the trip to the organization offices Tuesday morning when making reservations.

The train will leave this city at 7:15 a. m., arriving in Altus at 10:25 a. m. Following a parade through the city, members of the party will spend about four hours with Altus business men, including a luncheon at the Orient hotel. The return trip will start at 4:30 p. m., with the train scheduled to arrive here at 7:30 p. m. The Lions' club boys' band will accompany the delegation to Altus.

County Clerk Files Report With Court

The March report of the county clerk's department was presented by Miss Elizabeth Hall Monday at the regular weekly meeting of the county commissioners court, indicating receipts amounting to $1,659.40 during the month and disbursements totaling $1,475.

The report further disclosed issuance of only 15 marriage licenses during March.

An emergency appropriation of $400 for purchases of steel to be used in the repair of a bridge on the Petrolia road east of Wichita Falls was made by the court after M. A. Bundy, commissioner for the Wichita Falls precinct, had pointed out the serious condition of the bridge at present. The Bailey-Moline Hardware company was selected by the commissioners on a bid of $230 for purchase of a new motor lawn mower to be used on the courthouse lawn and at the county farm.

Vernon-Crowell Road Ready For Travel May 10

Announcement of the completion of concrete pouring on the Vernon-Crowell highway last Saturday was made Monday by D. M. Puckett, division highway engineer in this district.

It is expected that the entire strip from Wichita Falls to Crowell will be opened to general traffic by May 10, Mr. Puckett said, and that police patrol will be established on the section between Vernon and Crowell by that date.

Work has just been resumed on the remaining portions of the Wichita Falls-Seymour road, Mr. Puckett stated, in order to complete paving of about nine miles of road just northeast of Maybelle. With the finishing of this strip, the highway from this city to the Throckmorton county line will be complete, it was said.

THEATER GIVES PLAY TONIGHT

Group to Present Best Play Of Year as Benefit

Seekers after high-class dramatic entertainment Tuesday night will be privileged to eat their cake and have it too when the Wichita Falls Little Theater presents "The Enemy" at the Memorial auditorium for the benefit of Family Relief association and Salvation Army work in this city.

Staged for the double purpose of providing funds for placing the Little Theater's best play of the year in competition with other similar organizations of the state at Fort Worth on April 25, and for procuring funds to supply the needs of the two local charitable organizations for their program of work among the poor, the play affords the citizens of this community a convenient and attractive plan for contributing heavily to the latter cause. The state Little Theater tournament participation will require only about $400 for the local organization. Twenty-five hundred tickets for "The Enemy" were placed in the hands of the Junior chamber of commerce members for sale at 50 cents each. Purchase of 2,500 seats at the stated price will mean a net deposit of $850 for the purpose of charity.

While officers and directors of the community chest have striven almost desperately during the past six weeks to raise sufficient money to enable that organization to meet the heavy demands made upon it, the Little Theater and members of the Junior chamber of commerce have cooperated voluntarily by arranging this performance of the Pollock play.

Tickets will be on sale all day Tuesday at each of the local banks, and at the Renfro Drug store, Scott and Eighth. The play will begin at 8:15 o'clock Tuesday night.
