Marriages decline

A Census study says that black women are less likely to marry than white women.

Marriage study

WASHINGTON — Black women are far less likely to marry than white women, the government said Tuesday — a phenomenon researchers blame on unemployment, low income and high imprisonment rates in big cities. At age 40, one in four black women has never married, compared with one in 10 white women, a Census Bureau study said./6B

4 women head list

WASHINGTON — President-elect Bill Clinton is moving to name the first woman to serve as attorney general, and transition aides in Washington and Arkansas said Tuesday that he was considering four candidates. The finalists, three judges and a Washington lawyer active in public-interest causes, are emblematic of the pathbreaking women who entered law schools in small numbers in the 1950s and 1960s and then rose to the top of their profession./5B

Lottery payoff?

AUSTIN — Texas' former lotto hostess who was fired by Comptroller John Sharp may get $4,500 for her troubles. Venessa Grandjean was hired by Sharp for $575 per week to appear twice weekly on the televised broadcast of the lotto number selections. Sharp fired her after one broadcast following publicity about her salary. At the time, he had said, "I don't want to spend the money." But Ms. Grandjean, a model and ninth-grade English teacher in Luling, said Tuesday that lottery officials promised her a nine-month job.

Media mob troops; Somalia mission begins

■ U.S. forces move swiftly to seize capital's air, sea ports; three gunships sweep overhead.

Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Mobbed by the media but meeting no resistance, American troops landed by the glow of the moon and television lights early today and extended heavily armed helping hands to feed Somalia's starving millions. Troops moved swiftly to seize the capital's air and sea ports.

Brown and green amphibious vehicles came out of the Indian Ocean, rolled over the dunes and up onto the airport. Troops jumped out and raced into position, while others poured out of Navy transport helicopters. Helicopter gunships swept overhead.

Mobile post office licks downtown rush

By Darren J. Waggoner

While Santa Claus reputedly can deliver packages worldwide overnight, the U.S. Postal Service makes no such claim.

They will however, do their best despite rain, snow or gloom of night.

And to help expedite the Christmas gift and card mailing process, the Midland post office has set up a mobile outlet in the parking lot of Blockbuster Video at 4400 N. Midkiff Road.

"It's solely here for convenience sake. We want to make things more convenient and help customers save time," said postal worker Linda Roberts, who has volunteered to work at the roving post office for the last six years. "Lines around this time of year can be a big problem — this helps cut them down. We never have much of a line here."

The post office-on-wheels will remain open Monday through Saturday from 11:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. until Dec. 23. According to Ms. Roberts, she can do everything at her office that the established branches can do.

She said people who plan to mail out-of-state Christmas packages fourth-class should get them in the mail by early next week.

Board draws new-schools' official lines

■ Motion to approve junior-high boundaries passes 5-2 on second reading.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

School-board trustees finally hammered out the official boundaries for Greathouse Elementary School and Abell Junior High School Tuesday night.

The same motion that passed at the last school-board meeting was approved on its second reading, but not without last-ditch efforts to zone Parker residents for Abell.

After the motion was made to approve the junior-high boundaries, trustee Michael Dobey moved to amend it to include Parker in Abell's zone. His plan also would move DeZavala and Crockett students into Abell's attendance area. In exchange, Pease and rural Burnet students would be moved to Alamo Junior High School.

Dobey's motion failed for lack of a second.

The junior high boundary motion was then approved 5-2 with Adela Marmolejo and Michael Dobey opposing it.

Ms. Marmolejo opposed the motion because it involved moving bilingual English as a Second Language classes from Alamo to Abell. She previously stated that bilingual students are shuffled to different schools too often.

She also said that residents in her district were uniformed about junior-high boundaries.

JoAnne Luehring, who lives in the Parker area, criticized trustees for not supporting Dobey's motion. "I have been told that nothing ever changes in the school district. That's true," she said,

Hispanics to urge appointment of Cisneros if Bentsen resigns

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — National Hispanic leaders say they will urge Gov. Ann Richards to appoint former mayor Henry Cisneros to replace U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen if the senior Texas senator becomes Treasury secretary.

Raul Yzaguirre, president of the National Council of La Raza, said it is important to have a Hispanic in the U.S. Senate, especially because about 10 percent of the country is Hispanic.

"I don't think there is any question that we will weigh in on his behalf very quickly," Yzaguirre told the San Antonio Express-News in Tuesday's editions.

Judge: Noriega's a POW, must have full protection

MIAMI (AP) — A judge Tuesday declared Manuel Noriega to be a prisoner of war and said the ousted Panamanian leader can be sent to a civilian prison only if he receives full protection under the Geneva Convention.

U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler ordered Noriega held in Florida until the government chooses a prison and defense attorneys can demand a hearing to ensure his rights as a POW are protected.

The decision marks the first time a U.S. judge has declared a convicted criminal protected by the rules of war, a constitutional expert said.

The judge warned the federal government to "keep in mind the importance to our own

Today's total lunar eclipse to be visible in West Texas

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

Weather permitting, West Texans will be able to see the moon rise in total eclipse today at 5:36 p.m.

And the National Weather Service expects the skies to cooperate, with partly cloudy to fair skies predicted for this afternoon and evening.

"The moon will pass through the center of the Earth's shadow called the umbra," said Mark Hartman, Marian Blakemore Planetarium director. "The interesting thing is that from West Texas, it's going to be in the center of this shadow, totally, just about the time that it rises.

"So the moon's going to be quite a bit darker than it normally would when it rises in the East. The moon will rise just as the sun sets, and while it's ris-

As violence continues, government arrests Hindu leaders

By Edward A. Gargan
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW DELHI, India — Hundreds more were killed on Tuesday as violent Muslim protests against the destruction of a 16th-century mosque by Hindu fanatics on Sunday engulfed dozens of cities and towns across the expanse of India.

More than 400 have been reported killed in two days of rioting, but the actual number is widely believed to be much higher.

Responding to a deepening political crisis, Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao's government arrested six prominent Hindu fundamentalist political and religious leaders on charges of inciting the violence that led to the mosque's destruction.

Among those arrested was the leader of the parliamentary opposition, Lal Krishna Advani of the Bharatiya Janata Party, or Indian Peoples Party, who was taken from his home and confined to a government guest house near the capital.

Throughout India, mobs rampaged through towns and villages, attacking Hindu temples or Muslim shrines. The violence extended from Bombay in the southwest to Assam in the northeast, where 15 people were burned alive in a small village when mobs heaved fire bombs into huts.

In Bombay, India's commercial center on the Arabian Sea, Hindu temples were attacked with stones and firebombs, shops and homes were set on fire, and the police opened fire on rampaging mobs. The city's streets were deserted as most residents stayed indoors, most businesses were shut, and a curfew was in force throughout much of the city.

Early on Tuesday morning, 5,000 heavily-armed paramilitary troops retook the site of the mosque from the militant Hindus who destroyed it on Sunday, and Rao promised Muslim leaders that it would be rebuilt.

The government's latest actions were in contrast to its early slow response to protect the mosque and quell the riots that broke out in protest.

But the arrests and the retaking of the mosque, aimed at quelling the anger of Muslims, had the effect of re-igniting Hindu passions. As he was led away, Advani appeared to issue a threat of retaliation.

"This is a move to silence the voice of dissent," he said. "It will be suicidal for India. This is a repressive measure. We haven't indulged in any act of violence."

As bombs exploded in several towns, army troops paraded in shows of force through Muslim neighborhoods in dozens of cities. Curfews designed to keep people off the streets were declared across the country, but passions are so intense among India's 97 million Muslims over the destruction of the mosque in Ayodhya, that angry stone throwing youths spilled through alleys and avenues, challenging troops, burning buses, and storming Hindu shrines.

In Agra, the Taj Mahal, a monument dating from the Mogul conquest of India and perhaps the single most recognizable symbol of India, was closed out of fear by Indian officials that it would become a target of anti-Muslim rage like the mosque in Ayodhya destroyed on Sunday.

The Ayodhya mosque was built by Babur, who led the Mogul invasion in the 16th century, but Hindus have come to believe that it was constructed on the site of the birthplace of the Hindu god Rama. The Moguls ruled India until the British supplanted them in the 19th century.

Responding to the government's crackdown on Hindu militants, Hindu fundamentalists have vowed to strike back, calling for a nationwide strike to protest the arrest of their leaders and demanding that Rao abandon his pledge to rebuild the mosque. Already reeling from the deluge of bloody violence, India was thus bracing for a third day of strife in the form of vengence by militant Hindu youths against India's Muslims.

The government under Rao appeared to lurch from decision to decision, seemingly unsure of how to react to the country's descent into religious war and the challenge to the rule of law posed by the razing of the Ayodhya mosque.

Some senior aides to Rao suggested that the prime minister was stunned by the events of the weekend and that he had all but ceded control of the government to the politically powerful ally, Arjun Singh, a minister of Human Resource Development and longtime adviser on internal security matters.

There seemed to be no consensus among the tiny core of leaders over what to do next in the ruling Congress Party, which has governed India for most of the 45 years since it achieved independence in a conflagration of violence between Hindus and Muslims. An apparent decision to ban religious groups, announced on Monday, faded from view as party leaders struggled to respond to the crisis.

The country's Parliament, never a composed and deliberative body, failed for the second day to convene as members screamed insults at one another, shaking their fists and pounding their desks. The fractious mood made it doubtful whether the government will be able to move any legislation before the body for the foreseeable future.

The arrests of the Hindu leaders were widely seen as a symptom of uncertainty in the government and a possible indication that Rao had ceded his authority to hardliners. Many analyzed the prime minister's actions as a result of his feeling personally betrayed by Hindu leaders who had promised him that they would not let the fanatics among them actually destroy the mosque on Sunday.

Some said that the government's biggest mistake might have been its belief that Advani, who leads the Bharatiya Janata Party, could protect the mosque. Supporters of Rao had earlier praised him for trying to negotiate a solution to the conflicting claims between Hindus and Muslims over the mosque, but the prime minister's conciliatory approach was criticized on Tuesday as having failed.

"Rao has great bitterness toward the BJP," said Shekar Gupta, an editor at India Today magazine with access to the government, referring to the initials of the Hindu party. "He's told ministers, 'I've known Advani and these characters for 30 years, and when they promised me they wouldn't harm the mosque, I believed them.' "

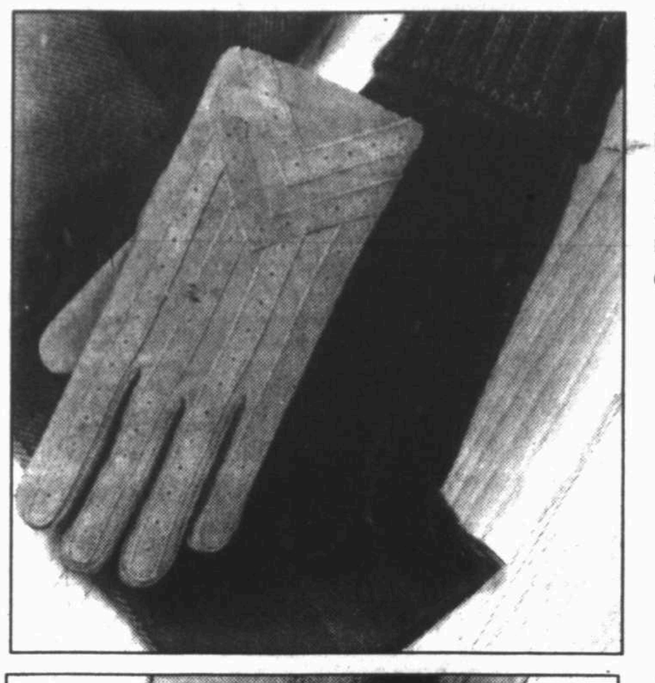

Gupta said Rao was now "being completely controlled by the most liberal stream in Congress, the real secularists."

The confusion within the party leadership seems likely to damage the country's efforts to restructure and revitalize its economy. Among the legislation that appeared doomed were measures to revise the financial system, free industry from regulations, and grant more autonomy to local governments.

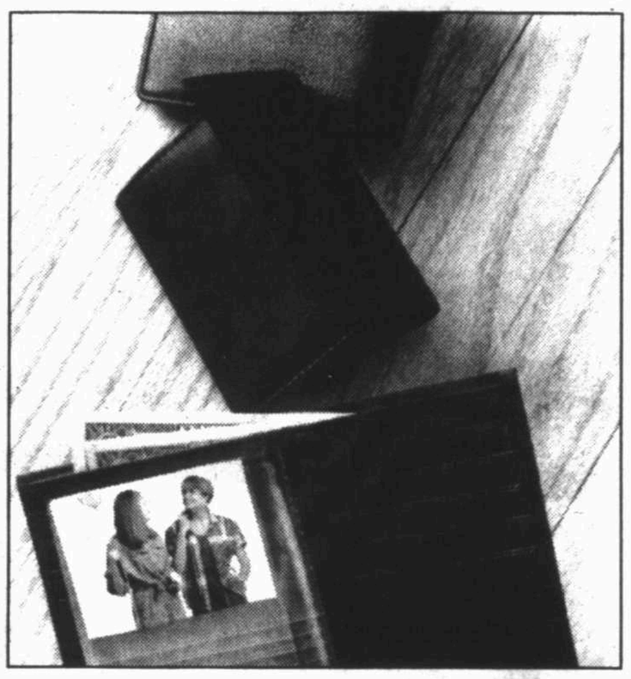

But it was the continued wave of bloodletting that has cowered this nation of 882 million people.

In Bombay, the police chief, S.K. Batat, said that his forces had managed to reimpose control over the areas of the city disturbed on Monday, but that violence was spreading to the suburbs. By late evening, more than 40 people were reported to have been killed, most by the police's firing on rioting mobs in 26 places in the city, Batat said.

Early on Tuesday morning, before the sun first edged over the sprawling dusty horizon of eastern Uttar Pradesh, central government troops stormed the site where the 16th century mosque had stood, and where Hindu fundamentalists had placed an idol of the mythical god Ram, whom they believe was born on that spot 5,000 years ago.

Avalanche claims lives of at least 75 people

By Peter McFarren
Associated Press Writer

LA PAZ, Bolivia — An avalanche of rain-soaked mud buried a gold mining camp in the Andean foothills Tuesday, killing at least 75 people. Hundreds of others were missing and feared dead, said Red Cross and mining officials.

The landslide covered nearly all the remote camp of Llipi, about 80 miles north of La Paz, where about 1,200 miners, their families and other workers live, said Edmundo Polo, an official for the Federation of Gold Cooperatives.

At least 75 bodies were recovered by Tuesday evening and it was feared that hundreds of miners and their families were buried by the estimated 700,000 cubic feet of mud. Miners have stripped many hills of trees and vegetation, making them more susceptible to landslides during the rainy season.

"We estimate that only 10 percent of the camp's population survived," said Jesus Mantilla, head of the Federation of Gold Cooperatives. "We urgently need blood, food supplies and helicopters to reach the camp."

It could be the worst mining accident in recent history in Bolivia.

President Jaime Paz Zamora ordered civil defense units to assist rescue operations. Ambulances and rescue workers from mining camps in the region also were mobilized, said Dr. Hugo Palazzi, Red Cross director for Bolivia.

Rescue teams were expected to leave from La Paz on Wednesday. Heavy rains made mountain roads from La Paz to the accident site virtually impassable Tuesday. Airplanes were also unable to fly to the region due to rains and poor visibility. The nearest airstrip is about a three-hour drive from the camp.

Government orders Gaza Strip closed in retaliation for attack

By Clyde Haberman
N.Y. Times News Service

JERUSALEM — Israel closed off the Gaza Strip on Tuesday and confined hundreds of thousands of Palestinians there to their homes as the army searched for the killers of three soldiers who were gunned down on Monday while on patrol.

Between army-imposed curfews and a general strike called by the Palestinians themselves, Gaza's dusty towns and tumbledown refugee camps were virtual ghost towns. They are likely to remain that way for several days, certainly through Wednesday, when Arabs in occupied Gaza and the West Bank mark the start of their anti-Israel uprising on Dec. 9, 1987.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said Gaza had been sealed to prevent possible flight by the gunmen, believed to be Muslim fundamentalists opposed to the continuing Middle East peace talks. Just before dawn on Monday, they waylaid a jeep carrying the three soldiers, all army reservists, and killed them in a fusillade of gunfire from automatic weapons.

But many Gazans regarded the curfews as a form of collective punishment, and some warned that tensions would soar if the restrictions lasted for a while and, in the process, prevented some 30,000 workers from going to jobs in Israel.

As the soldiers were buried on Tuesday in their hometowns, Israelis debated the immediate effect of the shootings, the direction of the Palestinian revolt, and the long-range question of what to do about Gaza, a narrow strip packed with 750,000 people who burn with anti-Israel fervor and create a fertile territory for fundamentalist groups. Some Israelis argue that they have no national interest in continuing to occupy Gaza and that the army should pull up stakes at once.

"If there is no national interest, we should have left even yesterday," wrote Alex Fishman, a columnist for Hadashot, a left-of-center newspaper. "This isn't a question of defeatism. This is a question of responsibility."

But right-leaning Israelis insisted that this is the time for a hard line against groups that, according to the daily Maariv, "want to turn Gaza into Beirut."

"We have to seal off entire areas — lock, stock, and barrel, and enter them in a massive way, checking each house, overturning every stone, lighting up every pit," the newspaper said in an editorial. "If this is what they order for themselves, this is what they'll get."

For Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, who is visiting Europe this week, the Gaza attack was a political blow, one of several he has suffered lately as the bloom fades from his rose after five months in office.

Amid high expectations, abroad as well as at home, he took charge in July promising to keep Israelis safe, to make swift progress in the Middle East peace negotiations, to give the economy a needed jolt, and to provide efficient government. Instead, violence continues apace, the peace talks are stumbling, unemployment is up, and the governing coalition is buffeted repeatedly by political rivalries and naked ambitions.

Whatever honeymoon Rabin enjoyed in the beginning is now a memory, especially with the Israeli press, which has begun taking him to task with fair regularity. "Nothing is moving," wrote Yoel Marcus, a columnist for the newspaper Haaretz. "And, if it is moving, it seems that it is only moving backwards."

Among the complaints is that Rabin tries to do too much himself, including run the Defense Ministry, which he also commanded when the Palestinian uprising began five years ago. After the latest killings in Gaza, Rafael Eitan, leader of a right-wing party that Rabin had tried unsuccessfully to draw into his coalition, urged the prime minister to turn over the defense portfolio to someone who can give it full-time attention.

Increasingly, the army is being challenged in the territories by armed militants, and one result has been a sharp increase this year in the number of gunshot casualties on both sides.

Including the three on Monday, 11 Israeli soldiers have been killed in the West Bank and Gaza this year, equal to the combined total for the previous four years of the uprising. Israeli civilian deaths in the territories have risen from 6 in 1991 to 11 this year.

But more Palestinians are being killed as well. Most commonly, it is at the hands of fellow Arabs who accuse them of collaborating with Israel. But after several years of decline, the number of Palestinians killed by soldiers has increased by 20 percent — from 82 in 1991 to 101 this year through November, according to the army.

About 30 have been killed by Israeli forces in just the last two months, leading to Palestinian assertions, denied by the authorities, that soldiers have been given greater license to shoot first and ask questions later.

Look for high in 60s today

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the lower 60s and northwest winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the lower 30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be partly cloudy with a high in the lower 60s.

After an overnight low of 45, Tuesday's high reached 67, compared to a record high for the date of 81 set in 1970. The record low of 13 was set in 1978.

STATE

Overcast skies blanketed much of the state again Tuesday. Light rain and drizzle continued over North Texas.

Fog lingered over much of North and Central Texas as southeasterly flow continued to bring moist air from the Gulf of Mexico into the area. The cloudy skies prevented temperatures from rising out of the lower 50s in North Texas.

Low clouds dominated the entire South Texas region, producing drizzle, fog, haze and light rain.

Showers and thunderstorms pelted the Panhandle. Skies elsewhere in West Texas were mostly sunny with temperatures in the 50s and 60s.

The forecast for North Texas includes clearing skies today after overnight showers. Highs today should be in the 50s with lows in the 30s.

West Texas should see fair skies today after overnight chances of rain and sleet. Lows will reach from the 20s in the Panhandle to the 40s in the Concho Valley and Edwards Plateau. Highs will range from the 40s to mid-60s.

The South Texas forecast calls clear skies behind the front that will move across South Texas today. Lows will be in the 40s and 50s. Highs will be in the 60s.

NATION

A storm spread snow and rain across the Southwest on Tuesday after earlier pummeling California, and a new storm moved into the Northwest with high wind and snow.

A low-pressure system centered over Arizona produced heavy snow at higher elevations of California, Arizona and New Mexico.

Four or more inches of snow fell at higher elevations of Arizona during the morning with over an inch of rain reported in the lower deserts.

The Phoenix Sky Harbor Airport had a record amount of rain for the date at 0.85 of an inch. Elsewhere in southern Arizona, Organ Pipe National Monument reported 1.22 inches of rain.

During the weekend, the storm had dropped up to 30 inches of snow in the Sierra Nevada. On Monday, it caused flooding and wind damage in the Los Angeles area.

A strong cold front moving eastward across Washington, Oregon and far northern California generated strong wind and dropped heavy snow over the mountains.

Rain and snow were scattered from the northern and central Pacific Coast to the Rockies.

High wind was reported along the coast of Washington. Friday Harbor reported wind blowing at 35 mph with gusts to 46, the National Weather Service said. Gusts to near 60 mph were reported at a few locations along the Oregon coast.

The storm also caused blustery conditions in parts of California and Nevada. During the morning, wind gusted above 60 mph on Slide Mountain, just east of Reno, Nev.

A winter storm watch was issued for Wednesday for eastern Idaho, the weather service said.

Some lake effect snow — generated by cold wind picking up moist air over the Great Lakes — was reported across western New York state.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

(From 1A)

"The bond (was) passed to alleviate overcrowding and the proposal will still leave 100 spaces at Abell."

Ms. Luehring said board members were not following all the criteria set up for selecting junior-high boundaries and that bus-ride time would be increased for Parker students.

"The feeder system has divided this city," she said. "It needs to be looked at again. It would work in another community, but not MISD."

Trustee Gary Willis said "There is no perfect plan," but he is satisfied that the boundaries are demographically balanced for all the junior highs.

Another parent spoke to the board and expressed concern that lack of housing construction in the San Jacinto area would prohibit any enrollment growth at the school. "You will be forced to change boundaries again in five years," she said.

In order to ensure a growth area for San Jacinto, trustee George Staley made a motion that "in the event a new elementary school is built north of Loop 250 (in a Midland High zone), it would be zoned in San Jacinto."

The motion passed 4-3 with James Fuller, Dobey and Ms. Marmolejo opposed.

Ms. Marmolejo said any new elementary schools being built should be built in south or southeast Midland where there is also population growth.

Final boundaries follow:

■ Greathouse — Will begin at the intersection of Holiday Hill Road and Loop 250, and continue north on Holiday Hill Road to the Midland County Line, east on the Midland County Line to Midland Drive, south on Midland Drive to Mockingbird Lane, east on Mockingbird Lane to Midkiff Road, south on Midkiff Road to Loop 250, west and southwest on Loop 250 to Holiday Hill Road.

The attendance area for Greathouse includes Northgate, Crestgate, Briarwood, Melody Acres, Greenhill Terrace and Greentree neighborhoods.

■ Abell — Will begin at the intersection of Andrews Highway and Midland Drive, continue north on Midland Drive to Loop 250, east on Loop 250 to Midkiff Road, north on Midkiff Road to Mockingbird Lane, west on Mockingbird Lane to Midland Drive, north on Midland Drive to the Midland County Line, west on the Midland County line to the extension of Holiday Hill Road, south on Holiday Hill Road to West Wadley Avenue, west on Wadley Avenue to the Midland City Limits, south on the Midland City Limit's line to Homestead Blvd., east on Homestead Blvd. to Hereford Blvd., south on Hereford Blvd. to State Highway 191, east on State Highway 191 and Andrews Highway to Midland Drive.

The boundary policy also designates that:

■ Rural students living in northwest Midland County — and presently assigned to Emerson — be reassigned to Scharbauer Elementary School with the opening of Greathouse in August 1993.

■ That rural students living in northeast Midland County — and presently assigned to Bowie — be reassigned to Emerson Elementary School with the opening of Greathouse.

The motion to assign elementary school boundaries, on its second reading Tuesday night, passed unanimously.

In other action, trustees authorized the issuance of bonds of $10.5 million, saving taxpayers $546,000 due to financing them at a lower interest rate.

Trustees also honored Migrant staff and students recognized by the Texas Migrant Association and Texas Education Agency.

Four Midland High School graduates were named Exemplary Migrant Students. Students honored were Sergio Cedillo, Patricia Galindo, Abraham Gutierrez, and Diana Lujan.

Trustees approved and praised community-based curriculum for secondary-age students with disabilities, which was presented by Patricia Maurer, Occupational Development Lab principal and Patricia Stevens, Carver intern. The curriculum, which Ms. Maurer said was two years in the making, offers instruction to improve the quality of life and independence for students with disabilities.

The next MISD school-board meeting is scheduled for Jan. 12. A report to include Bush and Greathouse into the cluster system will be presented and a schedule of community meetings on the cluster system will be announced.

Trustees agreed to dedicate Viola Coleman High School on Feb. 27.

Alma Marshall said other events in the community are planned to honor Dr. Coleman in February.

RUSH: Mobile outlet facilitates holiday mailings

er for hauling packages ... and small children can stay right in the car," she said.

Ms. Roberts said working at the location is a welcome change.

"The people always seem to have the Christmas spirit out here — they're not so grumpy. It's refreshing," she said.

Mail is picked up at the parking lot locale several times a day and is sent out the same day, Ms. Roberts said.

But for others desirous of avoiding the downtown post office rush, private mailing services are available at four locations in Midland.

Linda Green, owner of Mailboxes, Etc. USA, said her business works with the United Parcel Service and the post office to ensure prompt, efficient and worry-free deliveries.

"We find the best way for them to go, whether it be UPS or the regular mail," she said.

But her service also caters to shoppers who don't have the time to do anything except purchase the gift.

"We giftwrap, we pack everything and we take the hassle out of shipping," she said. "Essentially, we do it all."

Indeed, Mailboxes, Etc. USA at One North Park, will fax messages, rent mailboxes, wire money via Western Union and custom pack, among other things.

"We realize everybody's time is important. We're fast, so far. Next week, early, should be the busiest time, so it won't be quite as fast as now," Ms. Green said.

Next week, she expects UPS to pick up packages as many as three times a day. Postal workers will continue to pick up mailing throughout each day.

"We work well with both of them and they know if it's from us, they don't have to worry as much about damages," she said. "Our packing is sound."

Other private mailing services in Midland include: Pack'n' Mail in the Imperial Shopping Center; Database Specialties at 1308 S. Midkiff Rd., Suite 120; and Southwest Signature at 3524 Seaboard Ave.

CISNEROS: Hispanic leaders back former mayor

the former mayor, who worked as a senior adviser to the Clinton-Gore campaign, has discussed the Senate seat with Richards. But, he said, reports of a possible Cisneros appointment are speculative.

President-elect Bill Clinton is expected to begin announcing Thursday his Cabinet appointments, with Bentsen expected to be selected for Treasury. If the Texas Democrat vacates his Senate seat, Richards would name an interim replacement.

"The appointment of Cisneros would be a historic one, because Texas has never had a Latino senator," said Harry Pachon, executive director of the National Association of Latino Elected and Appointed Officials.

The last Hispanic to serve in the Senate was Joseph Montoya, a New Mexico Democrat who was defeated in 1976.

Pachon told the Express-News that Cisneros would receive a "groundswell of support" from NALEO and other Hispanic groups because of the "tremendous positive image he has out here."

Yzaguirre of La Raza said he believes Cisneros could be selected for a Cabinet post, and since the election Cisneros has been said to be under consideration for at least three Cabinet posts.

"But I think he wants to run for Senate," Yzaguirre said. "If he can get appointed and hold the seat, I think it would be tremendous for Hispanics."

ECLIPSE: Moon to rise shrouded in dust, shadow

(From 1A)

ing is when it will be in the Earth's shadow. We call it totality. It could appear very red or orange."

Sky watchers need to look east northeast.

"It will still be a little light in the sky because evening twilight doesn't end until about 7:15," Hartman said.

The totality the moon will be in when it rises ends by 6:22 p.m., Hartman said, adding that the mid-point of this part of the eclipse will be at 5:44 p.m.

The moon will be out of the darkest part of Earth's shadow at 6:22 p.m. and will be out of the penumbra part of the shadow at 8:33 p.m.

"There's essentially two different types of darkness — the central umbra shadow of the Earth and then the penumbra," Hartman said. "The reason that the penumbra is lighter is because there are areas where the sunlight is shining around the Earth. It bends through the Earth's atmosphere."

Hartman said scientists are talking of the "unique" quality of this eclipse due to volcanic eruptions in recent years.

"The last volcano eruption in 1991 of Mt. Pinatubo was massive, and that's going to make this one probably a little bit darker," Hartman said of the eclipse. "It could be reminiscent of the dark eclipses of December 1963 and 1982."

The eclipse can be viewed with the naked eye or through binoculars.

"It should be obvious," Hartman said.

The last lunar eclipse visible from this area occurred in February 1990. In 1993, there will be two lunar eclipses.

"The western U.S. will see one on the morning of June 4," Hartman said. "Hawaii will get best view. And then the whole of North America and Hawaii will have ringside seats for a total lunar eclipse on the night of Nov. 28."

RULING: Ousted leader's a POW, judge says

troops of faithful and, indeed, liberal adherence to the mandates of Geneva III."

"Regardless of how the government views the defendant as a person, the implications of a failure to adhere to the convention are too great to justify," he wrote in his decision.

All POWs are entitled to wide protections under the convention, guarantees that may be impossible to provide in a maximum-security penitentiary, he said.

Paul Rothstein, a constitutional law professor at Georgetown University Law School, said the decision was "the first time someone convicted in the ordinary process of the criminal law has had the Geneva Convention applied to them." But he said most U.S. civilian prisons should be able to meet the standards with only minimal adjustments.

'The implications of a failure to adhere to the convention are too great to justify.'

— William Hoeveler, U.S. District Judge

Noriega has recently been moved from the federal courthouse to a special cell at the Metropolitan Correctional Center oustide Miami, defense attorney Jon May said Tuesday.

Based on the judge's decision, the defense filed an emergency motion to prevent Noriega's immediate transfer.

Federal prosecutor Michael Sullivan acknowledged the government was likely to send Noriega to the tough, maximum-security federal prison in Marion, Ill., or an even more secure facility under construction in Colorado.

Noriega may even end up demanding a high-security prison because he has had difficulty with other prisoners, both at the Miami jail and the prison in Talladega, Ala., where he was moved after Hurricane Andrew, Sullivan said.

"I've been told by prison officials that he had some difficulties," said Sullivan, noting he was taunted by other prisoners. "He is in some danger."

Noriega was convicted in April of eight drug and racketeering counts charging he took bribes from Colombia's Medellin cartel to turn Panama into a way station for U.S.-bound cocaine shipments.

In July, Hoeveler sentenced him to 40 years in prison.

LANDING: U.S.-led mission in Somalia begins

(From 1A)

The Marines were taking control of the airport and harbor in the first step of a plan to seize vital gateways for international aid and get food, medicine and other supplies.

More than 300,000 Somalis already have died in one of history's most savage famines and the United Nations says 2 million more are at risk of starvation. The aid operation has been disrupted by civil war and looting.

The first reconnaissance team of 20 Navy frogmen and Marines came out of the sea four hours before the main force entered Mogadishu, a broken, shattered city ruled by the gun and reeking of decomposed bodies.

No "technicals" — gunmen riding in vehicles — were in sight as dawn broke over Mogadishu. They have normally cruised the streets at daybreak.

The special forces team, faces smeared with black and green camouflage cream, and armed with automatic rifles, anti-tank missiles and machine guns, was caught in the glare of television lights and surrounded by 50 to 75 journalists.

In Washington, senior Pentagon officials complained the lights put the troops' lives at risk. Network officials said the Pentagon, which had encouraged the coverage, should have advised them in advance not to use camera lights.

Although the Marines expected no major confrontations with Mogadishu's thousands of armed young militiamen, they were taking no chances.

They detained six Somalis at an airport hangar and made them lie flat with rifles pointed at their backs. The Somalis turned out to be employees whom the Pakistani U.N. peacekeepers permitted to sleep at the airport.

Nine other Somalis were arrested later.

A checkpoint was set up outside the airport. A Somali was seen kneeling on the ground under the guns of Marines as they searched his vehicle at the checkpoint.

Outside the airport, a number of Somalis clad in ragged clothes and sandals watched the Marine operation with fascination.

The U.S. troops didn't know whether they ultimately would be fighting or feeding Somalis. And they didn't know how long they would stay. The Bush administration has spoken of ending the operation by Jan. 20, but many expect it to extend months into President Clinton's term.

Clinton said he could offer no "artificial timetable" for U.S. withdrawal.

The White House issued a statement as the operation began that President Bush, moved by the enormity of the tragedy to take action in the closing days of his administration, was "pleased by the success."

Mogadishu was unusually quiet today. There were sporadic bursts of gunfire, but they were far from the airport. Traffic was light, with only a few people out on foot.

The 1,800-member advance team of America's Operation Restore Hope included a three-ship amphibious assault unit led by the USS Tripoli, backed by a Navy battle group led by the aircraft carrier USS Ranger with 60 warplanes.

Scores of clansmen departed the airport with their heavy weapons well before the U.S. arrival. They were leaving behind a cash cow they had milked for months through exorbitant demands for landing and cargo handling fees.

Both the port and airport have been closed sporadically by clan fighting, looting raids by heavily armed gunmen and other violence since the United Nations began its massive relief effort in March.

Once the ports are firmly under control, the way will be cleared for an airlift of up to 27,000 more U.S. troops to seize other key installations and protect truck convoys of food to the nation's hardhit interior.

They will be part of a U.S.-led coalition that will include troops from France, Canada, Italy, Belgium and Egypt, all operating under U.N. auspices.

Mogadishu's two major warlords, Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid and Ali Mahdi Mohamed, had both pledged to U.S. special envoy Robert Oakley that their militiamen will cooperate.

Both conceded, however, that they are not in full control of the city.

Aidid and Ali Mahdi signed a U.N.-brokered cease-fire in early March that ended more than four months of heavy fighting and left the shattered capital divided between Ali Mahdi in the north, and Aidid the south.

The cease-fire ended artillery and mortar shellings of each other's positions, but barely dampened small arms fire.

More than 30,000 men, women and children died or were wounded in that fighting. Hastily dug graves dot the city, small mounds of sand marked by sticks and stones. Some of the graves have been exposed by the torrential rains of the fall.

Many of the gunmen owe no particular allegiance to either warlord, plying their looting trade under the direction of wealthy merchants who control the city's open-air markets.

Those markets are awash in stolen food aid — wheat from Canada, Australia and the European Community, rice from Thailand, sorghum from the United States, sugar and dates from Saudi Arabia.

Looters have stolen up to half of the more than 220,000 metric tons of food and other supplies sent to Somalia so far this year, and the problem has been getting worse in recent weeks.

On Oct. 12, the United Nations announced an accelerated plan to deliver 100,000 metric tons of aid to save an estimated 250,000 people who might die without it before the end of the year.

But that so-called 100-day plan has been largely stymied by increased looting, a new outbreak of fighting between rival clans in the interior of southern Somalia and the closing of the ports.

Philosophy is at heart of school finance fight

Gov. Ann Richards, who said she was "sick" because of the vote in a special legislative session last week that was 10 votes short of the 100 needed to propose an amendment to the Texas Constitution on school financing, could suffer a relapse when the regular session opens in January.

Why?

Because the governor still has not realized, apparently, that the battle to craft a new school finance plan is about philosophy, not finance. She said as much while exasperated over the special session's failure to arrive at a proposed constitutional amendment.

We quote from a news story about the failed vote on school finance reform:

"Asked about Republicans opposing the amendment because of their philosophy, she (Richards) said: 'What philosophy? This is about a funding system for the schools of Texas. Don't give me all that philosophy garbage.' "

Begging the governor's pardon, but philosophy is what the school financing fight is all about, and unless she changes her attitude and agrees to recognize that fact, she will face a difficult legislative session again in January.

While Richards, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, Sen. Carl Parker and others have blamed the Republicans for the deadlock experienced in this special session over recapturing property taxes from property-wealthy districts for redistribution to property-poor districts, the entire premise of the plan put forward by Richards, Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis was based on recapture and, thus, was destined to fail. A significant number of Texans have already indicated they do not favor a "Robin Hood" plan whereby local tax dollars would be removed from a school district in Midland, for example, and transferred to a poorer school district as a means of equalizing school financing. And the "Fair Share Plan" proposed by Richards, Bullock and Lewis was a glorified "Robin Hood" plan, nothing more.

At this late hour — and with the Texas Legislature to convene Jan. 12 facing a June 1 deadline to design a constitutional school finance plan — it will press the assembly to come up with a plan, but that is the goal they must attempt to reach. To allow the courts to close down the public school system would be tacit recognition that our governmental system has failed; our legislature realized the problem existed, but could not reach a consensus.

The questions involved in the school finance battle are critical to our society and whether we become more socialistic or more of a society in which individual freedom is protected. Those questions include: Who pays for education? Who benefits from the "produce" of education? What should be the difference between public and private education? What should that difference mean for the students of each? What should define public education? What about private education's curriculum?

The answers to these and more questions will reveal to the governor and others the undeniable fact that the school financing debate is definitely about philosophy. When that fact is realized, then we can really get down to the matter of resolving our school financing crisis once and for all.

Now, federal bureaucracy holds Anderson 'hostage'

For those who like to keep tabs on nightmares from the bungling U.S. bureaucracy, here's a beaut: Remember Terry Anderson? The man kept hostage by terrorists?

Well, Anderson is writing a book about his experiences. He needed a little background about his captors, so he wrote the U.S. government to send him what they had.

Simple enough, eh?

Not quite.

Eight different federal agencies have now denied Anderson access to information about those who held him captive.

Why?

They said he will have to obtain the written consent of his captors before that information can be released.

Otherwise, said the U.S. Department of Justice, it would jeopardize their privacy rights.

However, the Justice Department did tell Anderson how he might obtain the information he needed.

He must obtain notarized personal privacy waivers from each of the terrorists including their full names and present addresses.

Said a befuddled Anderson: "I just find it kind of strange that they would want to protect the privacy of members of the Hezbollah."

He also said he would be happy to comply, but "they are awfully hard to locate to get them to sign the form."

That's our government in action!

Poor Anderson, now he's being held hostage by the federal bureaucracy.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, Dec. 9, the 344th day of 1992. There are 22 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

One-hundred years ago, on Dec. 9, 1892, "Widowers' Houses," George Bernard Shaw's first play, opened at the Royalty Theater in London.

On this date:

In 1608, English poet John Milton was born in London.

In 1854, Alfred, Lord Tennyson's famous poem, "The Charge of the Light Brigade," was published in England.

Postmaster's cuts happen too quickly

WASHINGTON — When the postmaster general of the United States recently conducted an inspection at a local office, the rank-and-file wanted to pass with flying colors — even if it meant playing an afternoon shell game with undelivered mail.

Anderson

That's what happened when Marvin Runyon visited the Merryfield Post Office in suburban Virginia recently. Runyon was looking for on-site proof that his cost-saving purges of postal personnel weren't delaying or disrupting mail delivery.

Like thousands of branch offices across the country, undelivered mail is piled high in the backroom of the Merryfield office. But with Runyon's visit, some eager-to-please workers at Merryfield hastily cleared the back room of all leftover mail in time for Runyon's white-glove test.

When Runyon arrived, according to sources, he strolled through the backroom and remarked at how tidy and efficient the place looked. He was filled with pride, even vindication. What he saw suggested that the trains, so to speak, were running on time.

Sources say Runyon then conducted an impromptu get-acquainted and gripe session with the troops. They were encouraged to be uninhibited in discussing the fall-out from Runyon's radical restructuring, which he began implementing since becoming postmaster in July, but most remained mum.

Finally, one mail clerk, who couldn't stomach any more, rose to confront the boss. It turns out appearances can be deceiving.

The clerk told Runyon about the mountain of mail that was carted off just hours before his visit by big 18-wheelers. The trucks were instructed not to return until Runyon departed.

The larger point made during this brief exchange is that the rapid pace of Runyon's restructuring poses a threat to smooth, timely mail service during the Christmas season, when the total volume of mail is 500 million pieces a day.

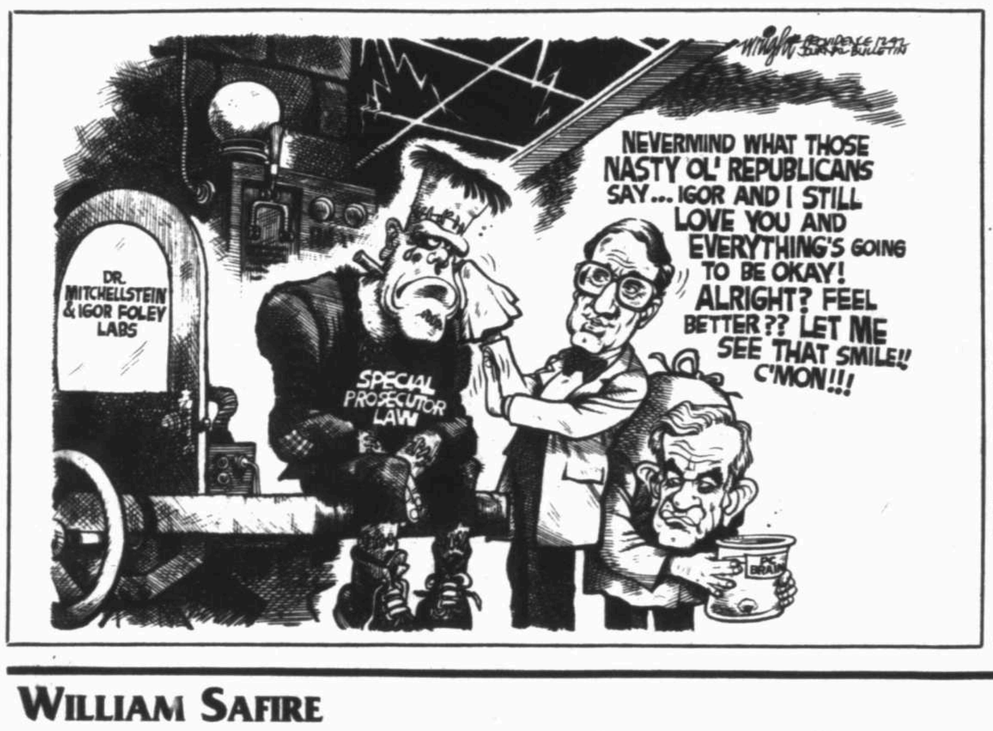

It's a point other critics have been openly warning about for months. The largest civilian workforce in the country could face a shortage of skilled workers if Runyon continues ramming his restructuring through at this pace. This incident illustrates how some local post offices are already at their breaking point.

Postal insiders don't dispute that the agency needed a dose of austerity to head off potential billion-dollar deficits. The rap on Runyon, who many call "Carvin Marvin" for his budget-cutting ways, is that he purged where pruning would've sufficed. The meat cleaver should have been a scalpel, and the bedside manner should have resembled that of a surgeon, not a butcher.

Besides slowing down Christmas mail delivery, Runyon's cuts are having devastating effects on morale among the post office's 700,000 employees. With the cuts coming hastily and, some say, arbitrarily, postal workers have had few chances to rise in opposition. When workers have had the chance, as with Runyon's Virginia visit, fear and self-preservation have prevailed over protest.

There are even legal questions surfacing around Runyon's reforms. A Washington law firm representing a loose coalition of postal workers affected by the cuts recently wrote to the Postal Service Board of Governors to question the legality of the moves.

"It is inconceivable that a major reorganization could be undertaken without an organized plan and without an opportunity for comment and discussion," the letter states.

Attorney general sets 'Iraqgate' deadline

WASHINGTON — Tuesday, Dec. 8, is the day that the attorney general of the U.S. has set for receipt of a report that will force a decision to obey the law or to continue to break the law.

The law, set to expire in one week, is the Ethics in Government Act. It upholds the ancient principle that no person shall be the judge in his own case.

Safire

That law directs the attorney general to seek from a special panel of judges the appointment of independent counsel when requested to do so by the Judiciary Committees of the House and Senate, most particularly when evidence is developed that requires further criminal investigation of high government officials.

The officials suspected in the Iraggate case of misusing appropriated funds, lying to Congress and then obstructing justice in the Banca Nazionale del Lavoro criminal case include former secretaries of state and agriculture, the national security adviser and White House counsel and the attorney general himself, as well as his predecessor.

"I will not be buffaloed," Attorney General William Barr says, by the likes of editorialists and congressional oversight committees into doing what is so clearly his duty. As evidence developed outside his corrupt Criminal Division has mounted, he has sought to play out the string of the expiring statute, thereby to avoid prosecution of himself.

Part of the delaying tactic was his appointment of a friendly lawyer as supposedly special counsel. Former Federal Judge Frederick Lacey, long familiar to the intelligence community, has helped the attorney general run out the clock by delaying his report until tomorrow.

Barr is set to respond on the same late day. They know that it takes the panel of judges that customarily chooses independent counsel at least three weeks to complete its task. In each case, potential conflicts of interest in candidates for independent counsel, as well as their law partners, must be closely examined.

Let us assume that Barr decides that refusing to carry out the law Tuesday would be tantamount to an admission of past obstruction of justice. But by dragging a foot until a few working days before the statute expires to seek the judicial panel's action, Barr apparently hopes to push its appointment of independent counsel past Dec. 15.

His defense strategy is transparent. If the appointment is made late, the entire case could be appealed on that ground after any convictions are obtained. If the appointment is rushed, and the independent counsel turns out to have a partner with a conflict, convictions could be overturned on those grounds. If time constraints force the panel to choose the patsy prosecutor already named by Attorney General Barr, a counsel with great "discretion" is assured.

The judicial panel, I presume, is aware of this subterfuge. We can hope it has a choice already vetted. According to career prosecutors and FBI agents eager to offer evidence to genuinely independent counsel, Barr and his mentor, White House Counsel Boyden Gray, are fearful of this readiness — and the prospect of a prompt countermove may tempt them to hang tough, defying the law and defiling their offices.

That's where the matter stands on the eve of decision. It's hard to believe that the Lacey report will be such a whitewash as to provide enough cover for further covering up.

Barr may be hopeful that a post-election attitude of "let bygones be bygones" would muffle any outcry if he decided to ignore the law. He may be counting on the general discreditation of conspiracy theorists by the Senate's long-expected finding that no "October surprise" existed in 1980.

But Iraqgate is no wild charge by political losers. Nor is its prosecutor likely to suffer from mistakes like those made in Iran-contra, where criminal convictions obtained against White House aides were overturned because public hearings influenced jurors.

Iraqgate is uniquely horrendous: a scandal about the systematic abuse of power by misguided leaders of three democratic nations to secretly finance the arms buildup of a dictator.

Tuesday the dam to hold back independent investigation will either be shored up one last time or, as I think more likely, will burst — and the court had better be ready to promptly appoint the unbeholden prosecutor.

Clinton may try to be in all Hillary's decisions

For all it's Southern charm Washington can still be a bitchy town — particularly when a new administration is coming in.

Right now the tongues are wagging about how much influence Bill Clinton will have in the White House when his wife, First Lady Hillary Clinton, takes office.

Buchwald

Rumors have it that Clinton will try to take over and be in on all of Hillary's decisions. But this has been adamantly denied by close friends of the Clintons.

One told me, "Bill Clinton will have no more influence on governing the country than Ronald Reagan did when Nancy Reagan was in power. The press has been constantly speculating about Bill's obsession with interfering, but that's not his style. He never got involved when Hillary ran things in Arkansas, and he is not about to now."

Another friend said, "It's unrealistic to think that when the Clintons retire at night, Bill will not ask Hillary, 'What happened in the country today?' It would be foolhardy to assume that Hillary would hold back, except, of course, on national security matters. But you have to expect that sometimes Hillary will use Bill as a sounding board."

I spoke to a newspaperman from Little Rock and he said, "You're going to see the hand of Bill Clinton in everything Hillary does. When he was governor he promised to keep out of Hillary's politics, but, unlike what his friends claim, he never did. Bill is one of those husbands who likes to meddle in things he doesn't understand."

"I guess the question everyone in Washington is asking is how much Hillary will make use of Clinton?" I said.

"Well, she's giving him his own office and secretary in the White House, and she has already announced that her door to the Oval Office will always be open to him. There is no doubt that Clinton will be given assignments such as representing Hillary at luncheons when she can't make it herself. She has also indicated that Bill will attend Cabinet meetings. There's nothing wrong with that. George Bush did it, and so did Jimmy Carter. Most first ladies like to have someone around that they can trust."

"People seem to be afraid that Bill Clinton may have his own agenda — unlike Ronald Reagan, who didn't have one. Will Hillary be as tough about moving forward as Nancy?"

"Every First Lady has a mandate from the American people, but you don't know until she takes over what she will do with it. Barbara Bush started out as a cuddly bear, but by the time the election rolled around she turned into a man-eating tiger. Politics affects first ladies like that."

Finally, I posed the big question to a director of the League of Women Voters. "Do you believe that a First Lady should serve more than two terms?"

"The League has not taken a position on that, but personally I feel that there should not be limits. There are some first ladies who aren't worth two months and others who could easily serve a lifetime. I feel that if a First Lady knew she was going to be in for only eight years she might not give it her all."

"I know that this is not an easy one, but if you were Hillary what would be the first thing you'd ask President Clinton to do?"

"I would require him to accompany me on all my trips for the American public to see that he is not the ambitious, conniving person everyone in the media has made him out to be."

Bosnian Serbs offer safe passage from Sarajevo; hunger worsens

By David Crary
Associated Press Writer

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serbs offered safe passage Tuesday to all seeking to leave Sarajevo, where their offensive has pushed through key neighborhoods and halted desperately needed food shipments.

Battles around the airport diminished hope that aid flights would resume soon.

The Serb offer was eyed with suspicion in Sarajevo as a possible propaganda ploy and attempt to blame the Muslim-led Bosnian government for the thousands that may die this coming winter from cold and hunger.

"All Serbs, Croats, Yugoslavs, Jews and all other citizens .. . wishing to do so (should) prepare themselves to leave Sarajevo, threatened by cold and winter," read a statement released by the Commissioner for Refugees of the self-proclaimed Serbian Republic in Bosnia.

The statement said Bosnian Serb authorities would "guarantee to every citizen of Sarajevo who wishes so to go to the desired location."

But it gave no date or details on who would oversee such an exodus or how it should be carried out.

The Bosnian government has opposed wholesale evacuation of the population of Sarajevo, saying it would render defense of the city impossible.

While truck convoys with food and medical supplies have not been completely cut off, the humanitarian airlift supplying 40 percent of the city's food needs has been suspended for a week.

Peacekeepers spokesman Cmdr. Barry Frewer said plans to reopen the airport Wednesday depended on "a great reduction in fighting."

The Bosnian army said four Serb tanks advanced to an area near the airport and were firing at the government-held western suburb of Dobrinja.

Croatian TV later quoted Bosnian military sources as saying that Sarajevo defenders withdrew from Vidikovac on Mt. Trebevic, captured from the Serbs on Monday.

At least 17,000 people have been killed and well over 100,000 officially reported missing since war broke out after the government in Sarajevo declared Bosnia-Herzegovina an independent republic in February.

At peace talks in Geneva, leaders of Bosnia's warring ethnic factions presented maps showing their ideas for provinces in the country as a way of ending the fighting, officials said.

American Cyrus Vance and Britain's Lord Owen, conference co-chairmen, have proposed geographic divisions. The Muslims say yes, but Croats balk. Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic insists Bosnia be divided into virtually autonomous ethnic states.

Sylvana Foa, spokeswoman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, said children in Sarajevo were increasingly begging for food.

"People are extremely dry and haggard. They no longer resemble the photos on their ID cards, they've lost so much weight," she said.

Many people have survived only on relief food — rice, cheese, biscuits, and maybe some canned meat. Fresh meat, milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables are unheard of for most.

Recent hostilities have led to a drastic drop in supplies reaching Sarajevo and other parts of Bosnia. Ms. Foa said 3,500 tons reached Bosnian warehouses last week, far less than the 9,100 tons considered a minimum subsistence level.

Frewer said U.N. military observers reported heavy fighting across the western outskirts of Sarajevo, near the airport.

Muslims set fire to Hindus, raze temples in Pakistan

By Zahid Hussain
Associated Press Writer

KARACHI, Pakistan — Rampaging Muslims set fire to Hindus, razed temples and kidnapped women Tuesday to protest the destruction of a centuries-old mosque in neighboring India.

At least 26 people were killed, including five Hindu women and a child who were burned to death and a Hindu man killed as he worshiped in southwestern Baluchistan province, Deputy Police Commissioner Sohail Humayun said.

In the central Punjab town of Multan, 14 Muslim protesters died when a Hindu temple they were demolishing collapsed on them, witnesses said. About 200 demonstrators were injured.

Dozens of Hindu temples were set ablaze by demonstrators in a dawn-to-dusk nationwide strike called by the conservative Islamic government to protest the destruction of the Babri mosque in northern India by Hindu zealots.

In Bangladesh, a predominantly Muslim nation on India's east, protesters paraded through the streets of the capital, Dhaka, as paramilitary police guarded temples and Hindu shops. "We shall retaliate!" the demonstrators shouted.

A Hindu temple in central Britain was gutted by fire early Tuesday and fires slightly damaged three other temples.

Iran's foreign minister, Ali Akbar Velayati, summoned the Indian ambassador in Tehran and demanded that the mosque be rebuilt, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

The Indian government already had announced it would try to rebuild the Muslim holy site in Ayodhya.

The Indian government ordered an estimated 200 diplomats and their families in Pakistan to leave Wednesday after the home of its consul-general in Karachi, Rajiv Dogar, was ransacked. Dogar said his family hid in a locked room to escape the frenzied mob of 500.

Thousands of Pakistani demonstrators tried to break through police barricades surrounding the Indian consulate in Karachi and the Indian embassy in the federal capital, Islamabad.

Hundreds of police battled the mobs with iron-cased wooden batons before hurling tear gas into the crowds and then firing into the air with machine guns.

Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif called out the army to help restore order in Karachi, a port city of 9 million that resembled a battle zone with black smoke and choking tear gas. Most of Pakistan's 800,000 Hindus reside in Karachi.

Mobs raced through the Hindu community of Naran Pura, burning shops, ransacking and looting some 200 homes and kidnapping young women, witnesses said.

Across Pakistan, created as a homeland for Indian Muslims in the 1947 partition of the subcontinent, businesses and offices closed their doors and traffic stopped. Many streets were blocked by burning tires and gangs of young men hurled rocks at vehicles.

Sharif urged peaceful protest marches, but hard-line Islamic clerics called for a jihad, or holy war.

The main opposition leader, former Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, called for another nationwide strike and protests for Friday and urged the government to cancel all meetings with India, including one scheduled this month between Sharif and his counterpart, P.V. Narasimha Rao.

More than a dozen temples were set ablaze in areas bordering Afghanistan, witnesses said.

In the eastern city of Lahore, bordering India, demonstrators commandeered government bulldozers, razed four temples, then burned the Indian flag.

Mexican officials charged with 1985 murder of U.S. drug agent

By Lawrence Kootnikoff
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY — Charges in a Los Angeles courtroom that powerful Mexican politicans were involved in drug trafficking and in the 1985 murder of a U.S. drug agent have shaken Mexico's political establishment.

The allegations were raised in the federal court trial of Dr. Humberto Alvarez Machain and Ruben Zuno Arce, now being tried in Los Angeles for conspiracy in the 1985 murder of U.S. drug agent Enrique Camarena.

Prosecutors and witnesses have accused three former Mexican cabinet members of accepting bribes to protect the drug ring that allegedly killed Camarena. The allegations made front-page headlines in Mexican newspapers.

Chief among the accused is Manuel Bartlett Diaz, governor-elect of Puebla state and interior minister from 1983 to 1988. One of the most powerful politicians in Mexico, he was a strong contender for the ruling party's presidential nomination in 1988.

Also named were former Attorney General Enrique Alvarez del Castillo, governor of Jalisco state at the time of the Camarena killing, and former Defense Secretary Juan Arevalo Gardoqui.

Prosecutors also said the three men took part in meetings with members of the Guadalajara drug cartel that plotted Camarena's kidnapping.

Camarena, a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent, was tortured and killed along with his Mexican pilot after they were abducted in Guadalajara in Feb. 7, 1985.

"There is a great deal of nervousness in the government," said Raymundo Riva Palacio, political columnist at the business daily El Financiero. "These are three very high-level people."

Political commentator Sergio Sarmiento agreed. "It would be very serious if the accusations prove true, and I doubt the prosecutor would present the charges without some proof," he said.

At the trial Monday, witness Jorge Godoy, a former bodyguard for Mexican traffickers, testified he delivered suitcases full of cash to Alvarez del Castillo and to Arevalo Gardoqui.

Riva Palacio says Salinas fears the charges could damage the free-trade deal the president has negotiated with the United States and Canada.

"People in Washington see a connection between drugs and free-trade," he said. "More trade, bigger and better highways means more drugs."

The Mexican attorney general's office angrily rejected the charges in an 11-page communique, which accused the prosecutors of acting "irresponsibly and immorally" by linking the three to drug smuggling and murder.

Some of the allegations were presented at Zuno Arce's first trial in 1990. His conviction then was overturned, and his new trial began last week.

Zachary Margulis, a reporter for the English-language daily The News, uncovered a DEA document presented as evidence in the trial while covering the Nov. 8 gubernatorial election in Puebla.

The document said Bartlett ordered the 1984 murder of a journalist named "Velasco" in Veracruz. In fact, a journalist named Javier Juarez Vazquez was killed that day in Coatzecoalcos, Veracruz.

The document also implicated Bartlett in the murder of Manuel Buendia, a columnist for Mexico City newspaper Excelsior.

Buendia was gunned down in Mexico City on May 30, 1984, by agents of the Federal Security Directorate, or DFS, a shadowy organization that had reported directly to Bartlett.

Margulis was fired last week after writing stories about the charges.

"There is only one story coming out of this trial," he said. "That top level Mexican officials are involved in drug trafficking, that the drug trade exists because these people protect them."

Bartlett's links to drug traffickers have long been rumored, but never proven. At a news conference Tuesday, he denied the charges and called the allegations "old."

On Friday, Margulis was invited to the office of Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, whom he met with for 15 minutes after a two-hour session with the president's chief spokesman, Jose Carreno Carlon.

Riva Palacio called the invitation "very unusual."

"It shows how worried they are," about publicity surrounding the charges and Margulis' firing, he said.

The DFS was disbanded in 1985 after agents were found to be protecting drug traffickers in return for a cut of the profits.

Clinton: World problems may interrupt domestic focus

By Steven Komarow
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President-elect Clinton said Tuesday his presidency will inevitably be distracted by world problems such as Somalia and Bosnia even as he tries to keep his focus on rebuilding the U.S. economy.

"I believe our administration will be forced to spend a lot of time on foreign policy whether we want to or not," he said.

"On balance, it is a wonderful thing that the Cold War is over," Clinton said. But with the end of the U.S.-Soviet domination of international affairs, he said, "there is more chaos in the world than there used to be."

"Some of it is very good and positive and leads to bubbling up of market economies and personal freedoms. But some of it is very troubling," he said.

More national news/5B

Clinton's remarks came as U.S. troops were preparing to enter Somalia to clear the way for food deliveries to the starving in a nation where government has collapsed and private relief efforts have been foiled by feuding warlords.

Clinton, visiting Democratic members of Congress Tuesday on his second post-election trip to the Capitol, reiterated his support for President Bush's decision to launch the operation and said he expected to face similar decisions.

Bosnia, the ethnically torn East European country where Bush has declined to intervene militarily, might be one.

Clinton said he would review his options on that later and declined to criticize Bush. "I understand entirely" why Bush did not want to make a commitment of ground forces there, he said.

The president-elect spoke at a news conference with congressional leaders following several hours of meetings in the Capitol. He later visited the Supreme Court, then was meeting with his transition team to continue work on putting together his government.

He spent about 45 minutes at the Supreme Court reception. All current justices except Byron R. White, who had to travel to New York, were present. Also there were retired Justices William J. Brennan and Lewis F. Powell.

Clinton noted at one point that he and Clarence Thomas had attended Yale Law School together, and that Thomas had corresponded with him while head of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

As Clinton was leaving, Justice Anthony M. Kennedy told him, "We'd like to tell you to come back any time but that may not be easy. If things get too hectic and you want a place that's quiet, just come see us."

Court historians said the visit by Clinton and Vice President-elect Al Gore was only the second of its kind. Ronald Reagan and Bush were the first, in 1980.

'I might have to spend all my time on foreign policy. And I don't want that to happen. The dividing line between foreign and domestic policy is increasingly blurred.'

—Clinton

Officials plan to use camera to search for missing miners

NORTON, Va. (AP) — Mine safety officials began drilling an air shaft Tuesday toward an area where eight coal miners were believed trapped, and planned to lower a camera to search for signs of life.

Rescue workers have had no contact with the men, who included a pair of brothers, but relatives kept up a vigil at the mine.

"I'm one of those that still has hope," said Michael Gentry, 17, nephew of trapped miner Danny Ray Gentry. "The family is waiting, hoping they find the bodies. They don't believe they're alive."

The effort to drill the vertical air shaft began after searchers retreated from the mine. They had detected smoke, heat and dangerous levels of explosive and suffocating methane gas about 300 feet from the chamber where the miners were working.

Drilling the narrow shaft down 1,000 feet could take at least 18 hours before a camera could be lowered.

"We will try to look around and see what we can see. We will check for smoke or how the visibility in the mine is," said Benny Wampler, assistant director at the Virginia Division of Mines and Minerals.

"There is the possibility that there is (healthy) atmosphere elsewhere in the mine that they could have traveled to," Wampler said. "We never give up hope."

The explosion early Monday blew through Southmountain Coal Co.'s No. 3 mine in rural southwestern Virginia.

The blast wrecked a mine office building outside one entrance to the mine and burned the paint off several vehicles parked nearby. Smoke continued to seep out, staining the cliff above the entrance.

A ninth miner working closer to the entrance crawled out and was hospitalized for burns.

The mine has had no fatalities since it opened in September 1990. However, a federal mine official said its injury rate was nearly triple the national average.

There was another reminder of the danger of mining Tuesday about 55 miles to the north, in southern West Virginia. Falling rock — a "roof fall" — killed one coal miner and injured two others inside the Alma Ridge Inc. Mine No. 1 near Thacker, state authorities said.

In Virginia, brothers Claude and Palmer Sturgill, both longtime coal miners, were among the missing men. A cousin and fellow coal miner, Jackie Burnette, said he has worked with Claude Sturgill often.

"He's the kind of guy who makes sure it's safe," Burnette said.

Claude Sturgill's wife, Audrey, refuses to leave the mine, Burnette said.

"She said she won't leave this place because she knows that he knows she's here waiting," Burnette said.

Coal mining is ubiquitous in this county of about 39,000 residents. The county had 119 mines in 1991, according to Kathleen Gillespie of the Department of Mines, Minerals and Energy.

"I think most people have relatives, friends or know somebody in the coal industry," said city treasurer Joe Stallard. "It starts you to thinking."

Eva Masterson's son was injured four years ago in a mining accident. Her other son still works in the mines.

"You never know when it's going to happen to you," she said, cooking hamburgers at Shannon's Corner Store. "When they go out, you don't know if they'll come back or not."

Gov. L. Douglas Wilder was in Norton for a plant dedication, but canceled a catered lunch and donated the food to rescue workers.

Judge to decide if statements admissible

■ Hyde to decide if defendant knowingly waived his rights when he confessed to murder of Midland cab driver.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Whether a confession to the July murder of a cab driver will be admissible in court is expected to be determined by a judge next week.

Testimony at a suppression hearing concerning statements made by 18-year-old Terrence Lee to police continued Tuesday before 238th District Court John Hyde. The hearing is expected to continue and conclude one day next week.

Defense attorneys want the statements made on Aug. 7, 11 and 12 to be barred from Lee's trial set to begin with jury selection Dec. 28.

The suppression ruling apparently hinges on whether Lee was able to waive his rights and knowingly and voluntarily give statements to a detective.

Lee and a second man, 20-year-old James Greene, reportedly admitted during separate interrogations that they were involved in the July 6 shooting death of taxi driver Alejandro Rodriguez.

Rodriguez, 20, was robbed and shot twice in the head during the early morning hours after being dispatched to 1119 E. Nobles Ave., where he apparently picked up his assailants, police said.

Rodriguez, employed by City Cab Co. for about six months, was found slumped over the steering wheel of his taxi in the 1700 block of Morgan Way by another cab driver, police said.

A Crime Stoppers tip identified Lee as the triggerman, police said.

After the murder, Lee and Greene were questioned about the crime and unsuccessfully attempted to implicate another man in the crime. The two later admitted involvement, police said.

A third person told police that shortly after the crime Lee and Greene "stated they had jacked a cab and shot someone," a detective testified.

Lee has undergone a psychiatric examination apparently to support the defense's claim that he did not understand the waiving of his rights when he confessed.

A second mental health examination on Lee for the suppression hearing will be conducted at the request of the prosecution.

When the hearing resumes, Lee is expected to testify. Earlier testimony included that of detectives and Lee's mother.

During testimony, Rose Lee described her son, the unmarried father of a 7-month-old boy, as immature for his age and a follower.

Ms. Lee also testified that she knew of no indication her son was threatened or tricked into a confession.

Prosecution and defense attorneys declined to expand on the on-

South Texan sets his mind on Somalia mission

■ 19-year-old Army private prepares for humanitarian effort.

By Larry Rowe
Associated Press writer

DONNA — Nineteen-year-old Charles Hubert knows exactly what to do when he gets off the plane amid a holocaust of starvation in Somalia.

It's like his dad, Carlos, a Vietnam veteran, in Belleview, Fla., told him last week.

"Just set your mind straight, don't go in sad and missing home. Just go in and do what you have to do and it will be over," said Hubert, a U.S. Army private who was a senior at Donna High School just two years ago.

"As an infantry soldier, your state of mind is set to equal out everything that you see," he said from New York Monday during a telephone interview.

"If you have a major emotional reaction, you could endanger yourself and your buddy next to you."

Pfc. Hubert is one of 10,000 American soldiers in the 10th Mountain Division at Fort Drum, N.Y., who were told last week to prepare for Operation Restore Hope, a famine relief mission to Somalia.

A total of 28,150 U.S. troops will lead an international effort to ensure that food gets to tens of thousands of starving people and not into the hands of Somali warriors.

Hubert said his battalion will not be told when it will leave for Somalia until hours before. And they will receive no instructions until shortly before the planes leave, he said.

Hubert was in the Army for less than eight months and married to 18-year-old Monica Hubert for less than two months when his squad leader took him aside last Thursday at a training camp in Virginia.

"The word was given out to get ready to go back to Fort Drum because we had a mission to Somalia," he recalled.

"The first thing that went through my mind was, I just got married. I got a wife back home. How's she going to feel about this? . . . I was going down to Florida for Christmas. That was in my mind. I'm going to Florida for Christmas with my wife. As soon as they told me, all that was just scrubbed."

At home in Watertown, N.Y., Monica Hubert sat alone in her apartment and cried after Charles called with the news.

"I think about him going away and not coming back," she said. "They've got them (the troops) to think that the worst can happen over there. It makes me feel bad. I don't want to lose him."

His mother, Donna resident Blanca Hubert, said she has mixed feelings about the mission.

"I am very sad that he's going,

Youth to have 'Storybook Christmas'

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

About 2,000 Midland first-graders will be getting one of their Christmas presents a little early this year.

Thanks to the three-month "A Storybook Christmas" project, the students will each receive a new book on Dec. 18.

The program was sponsored by Midland Zeta Xi's chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, the worldwide honorary teachers' sorority, and the Reporter-Telegram.

"We did very well and are very pleased," said Tressa Armstead, Zeta Xi president. "We were able to reach our goal thanks to a publisher who sold us the books cheap."

The project's goal was reached a couple of days late, with a little help from season's spirit of goodwill. The deadline for accepting money to order books was Friday, which left the project approximately $500 short Monday, Mrs. Armstead said. However, the project received a sizable donation Tuesday that enabled the project to end successfully.

The first-graders will get their new books at Christmas parties on Dec. 18. Each book will have "A Storybook Christmas" book-plate and have a space for each child to write his or her name.

The project began in September, when Zeta Xi mailed letters to Midland businesses, organizations, churches and individuals. Participants could either buy books to donate or send money for the group to purchase books.

Lists of appropriate first-grade reading material and book collection centers were located at area bookstores and discount and grocery stores.

The Zeta Xi Chapter also provided speakers for organizations that were interested in the project.

The project idea originated in Waco, where a community-wide "A Storybook Christmas" effort was organized in 1991 by Larry Browning, associate professor at Baylor University's school of education and sponsored by the Waco Tribune-Herald.

The Waco project's goal was to give at least one new children's book to 10,000 needy children last Christmas.

The local chapter chose first-graders because they are "new readers," said Mrs. Armstead.

She said she learned of the Waco concept during the Delta Kappa Gamma state convention in June when Ann Roznovsky, marketing director for the Tribune-Herald, spoke about the project.

Cheering crowd is incentive, bull riders say

■ Weekend cowboys compete in one of the 'deadliest' sports at area rodeos.

By John Toth
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — It's been raining most of the day, making the air cool and damp — not the best combination for bull riding. But Shane Davis isn't thinking about the weather.

His knees are bent sharply out to either side, his upper body crouched about six inches over the coarse-haired back of a 2,600-pound bull named Footloose.

In the chute, Davis tugs on a rope, his lifeline for the short ride. The bull under him grows restless.

Even for full-time professionals, riding bulls is risky. Davis, 23, of West Columbia, is no full-time professional rider. He's one of hundreds of weekend cowboys who work at regular jobs all week and enter bull-riding events at area rodeos on the weekends.

For most, the incentive is the cheer of the crowd — sparse this night because of the weather — and the thrill of the ride. Few catch that dream before the body overrules the mind, or an injury puts them out of action.

"A lot of people say that it's the deadliest sport," said Davis, who makes his living installing running boards on pickup trucks. "I do it because it makes me happy."

As Davis' weight hits the bull, the bucking begins. The gate hasn't even opened.

The huge animal turns his head and smashes a massive horn against Davis' left hand, pinning it against the pipes that make up the chute.

Later he will learn that the hand is fractured just above the wrist. But just now Davis cannot be bothered by that. He's concentrating fully on the ride.

The gate flies open. Footloose charges out of the chute, bucking fiercely, stretching his back and swinging his neck. He is too strong, too wild.

Slipping to the side, Davis falls to the ground. The bull wins in about three seconds, five short of a qualifying ride. Davis walks off holding his right shoulder.

The next day Davis is preparing to ride another bull, but he's still talking about Footloose.

"This bull bucked a world champion two weeks ago. I knew going in that it was really powerful," he says.

This time, conditions are more favorable. The air is less damp, and it's a little warmer. The rider's muscles stiffen in cold, clammy weather and the chance of injury becomes greater, while the possibility of a good-looking ride lessens. The looser a rider looks on a bull, the better his chances of staying on and getting a high score.

The Brazoria County Fair arena is filled to capacity for its last show.

Davis' name can be heard circulating in the stands. He is the only local rider.

His left hand is in a splint to protect the hairline fracture that resulted from the previous night's ride. The right shoulder is bruised, but it's not broken or dislocated. He ignores the pain.

The prize money will have to wait until another weekend. Thrown to the dirt after only a few seconds, he tips his hat, dusts himself off and walks out of the limelight, the dream he's chasing eluding his grasp again.

Next weekend, he will ride again. The fun in this sport is in the chase.

"Why would anybody want to get on the back of a mean, stinking animal that wants to kill you?" asks an observer.

The answer is complicated. It's a combination of state of mind, a social setting that allows a person to break away from the ordinary, a drive fueled by the ego-stroking cheer of a crowd, a desire to do something so different that it's hard to explain.

Most bull riders will be injured during their careers, and many will be stepped on by a bull that bucked them off his back, admits Terry Mears, 28, of Brazoria.

Mears, who works for a waste disposal company, was on the back of a bull five years ago that suddenly turned his head, smashing a horn through the roof of Mears' mouth.

"It broke my jaw in four places. The only thing I remember is being on the ground and then waking up in the hospital," he says. A few weeks after the accident, his bones not completely healed, Mears was on the back of another bull.

Many weekend bull riders laugh off the dangerous aspect of their pursuit. Sure, they know that unless the bull's attention is diverted after the ride, he'll go after the cowboy. But, perhaps it's only human that they think it won't happen to them.

A weekend rodeo is usually to be found within an hour's drive from Houston, and Bill Ainsworth, 22, of Brazoria, has been to most of them.

He has been riding bulls for five years and dreams of competing with the best of them, perhaps even making it to the national championships.

Ainsworth works at a crane and elevator company during the week, but on weekends he chases his dream.

The last thing on most bull riders' minds is danger.

"If you ride all the time, you get to the point that you don't even think much about it. You know what you're doing, and the chance that a freak accident will happen is less," Ainsworth says.

Robert Jackson, who owns the arena in McBeth, has seen bull riders come and go since he quit the sport 20 years ago.

"There can be a lot of money in this for someone who is good at it. It could work out to be a full-time job, but most don't get to that point," Jackson says.

He has been around rodeos for 50 of his 59 years. On Thursday evenings he opens his arena to the weekend bull rider who wants to get a little practice in at $8 a ride.

Judge reduces damages in Halcion case

DALLAS (AP) — A state district judge has reduced by $700,000 the amount of damages Upjohn Co. must pay a Fort Stockton family who claims the sleeping pill Halcion caused a man to commit murder.

On Nov. 12, a Dallas County jury recommended that the Kalamazoo-based company pay the family of William Freeman, a former assistant police chief of Fort Stockton approximately $1.8 million. Freeman's family had sued the company saying Halcion changed his personality and led him to commit a 1987 murder.

On Monday, state District Judge John Marshall ordered the verdict reduced by $700,000 because he said he couldn't find evidence of a "loss of support" the family suffered because of Freeman's prison sentence.

However, a preliminary assessment of the judge's order shows that the family would now receive $900,000, plus another $200,000 expected in additional damages.

Freeman is serving a life sentence for the 1987 shooting death of Donnie Hazelwood.

Richard Josephson, a Houston lawyer representing Upjohn, said Freeman's attorney is now required to submit a recalculated award that reflects Marshall's order.

"After a judgment is entered, Upjohn will file a motion to have this whole thing thrown out and request a new trial," Josephson said. "We haven't been able to do that yet because procedurally you go have to go through a bunch of steps."

Officer: Conflict between U.S. troops, Somalis is 'inevitable'

HARLINGEN (AP) — U.S. Marine Corps Commandant Carl E. Mundy Jr. said Tuesday that confrontations between American forces and "outlaw" factions in Somalia are probably inevitable.

"There are some cowboys down there that might be taken care of if they get in the way," said Mundy, the Corps' highest ranking official.

But he said he anticipated only small confrontations, "not anything on a larger scale."

Nearly 1,800 Marines aboard three U.S. ships began landing on the coast of the famine-ravaged African nation on Wednesday. A small force entered the country Tuesday.

The troops are the leading edge of what eventually will be a U.N.-backed American force of 28,000 charged with providing security and stability so non-governmental organizations can feed the nation's starving people.

Up to 18,000 Marines are expected to participate in "Operation Restore Hope," Mundy said. They will probably be in place for about two months before handing off the mission to U.N. forces, he said.

Mundy, in Harlingen to address students at the Marine Military Academy, noted that Somalian warlords have promised to cooperate with Marines.

But he said problems could come from the bands of gunmen roaming the Somalian capital of Mogadishu in so-called technicals, a variety of makeshift military vehicles armed with machine guns, rocket launchers and cannons.

Mundy said the biggest problem during the landing could come from anti-aircraft weapons.

"My worst fear of course is the loss of one American serviceman. ... But we are prepared to pay a price to aid people in need," Mundy said.

Amateur archaeologist molds replica of mastodon skeleton

CROSBYTON (AP) — Although some consider the bones of prehistoric animals to be more suitable for the museums of large cities, Joe Taylor views them as the basis for a potential new business for his hometown.

Taylor knows something about dinosaurs: The Crosbyton artist has been collecting the bones of prehistoric creatures ever since he found an ancient shark's tooth in a gravel pit near Floydada in 1955.

Since then, the amateur archaeologist has found the partial remains of prehistoric crocodiles, clams, mammoths, three-toed horses — even a fossilized prairie dog town — in the rugged canyons along the Caprock in Crosby County.

But his attention temporarily strayed from local digs, paintings and graphic designs during the past winter and became focused on Newark, Ohio.

That city, situated east of Columbus, was the site of the discovery of one of the world's most perfectly preserved mastodon skeletons, Taylor said.

The Crosby County native knew Sherman Byers, the owner of the golf course where the animal's remains were discovered in 1989. The Ohio businessman was looking for someone who could make molds and reproduce castings of the creature's bones.

Taylor, who "kind of figured" out the process of making molds 20 years ago, was the man for the job.

Eventually assisted by four helpers, Taylor spent five months in Newark creating molds for the mastodon. It was a tedious job, one that frequently required 14- and 15-hour workdays.

Each side of a bone in the mastodon's skeleton was molded in clay. As many as 20 coats of slow-drying liquid latex were then painted over the clay, followed by layers of plaster and fiber cloth, he said.

The process then is repeated for the opposite side of the bone.

"It was a major, major job," Taylor noted. "I probably used a hundred gallons of latex, which is a world of latex."

Once the two halves of the mold are joined, they are filled with plaster, fiberglass resin or other plastic materials that harden. Taylor used a low-density plastic foam for his castings that was light in weight and accurately reflected the original surface of the bones, he said.

While in Ohio, he made three casts of the mastodon's skeleton. One of the casts is housed in a former printing business in downtown Crosbyton where the 47-year-old artist has set up a workshop.

After assembling a replica of the 10-foot-tall mastodon skeleton, he hopes to have the replica displayed in the Crosby County Museum. He is even considering making it into a traveling exhibit.

It's ultimate destination, he speculated, probably will be a museum somewhere in Texas.

"It's something I can do for Texas," Taylor said.

He's now negotiating with a Dallas museum to borrow the bones of an Akracanthasaurus — a cousin of Tyranosaurus Rex — for a similar restoration. If that project proves successful, Taylor said, he may consider going into the dinosaur-building business.

"The local economy will not support an artist and the local economy needs manufacturing," Taylor said. "If I get going, I could hire up to 20 people. This is one way to create industry in this area. '93 — I hope that's the dinosaur year."

CSS to wrap gifts for homebound

Staff report

Community and Senior Services (CSS) will celebrate the holidays as volunteers gift wrap needed items for 300 Meals-on-Wheels and homebound elderly clients from 1-3 p.m. Saturday at 5702 W. Industrial (east of Loop 250 and west of Eisenhower parallel to Highway 80).

Gifts for the homebound include blankets, bedding, robes, towels, coats and necessary household items. The merchandise was brought from the Dallas Volunteer Center to help supply some of the critical needs of CSS clients. Many clients lack sufficient clothing and bedding for the cold winter months.

Cookies and spiced tea will be served while the gifts are being wrapped and distributed.

but he's very happy," she said. "I gave him my blessing (on the phone) and said 'God go with you.' "I hope he comes back fine," said Mrs. Hubert, an employee with Sam's Wholesale Club, McAllen. "I also am very sad for his wife, Monica, who will be without him."

As much as they dislike the timing of the mission, the Huberts strongly believe in it.

"We're not out to start war, but we're out to keep the peace around the world," Charles Hubert said. "This gives the Army a new name, not being the bad guys but being on a very good humanitarian mission."

Hubert participated in one other humanitarian mission during his short time in the military.

He was among the troops sent to Miami after Hurricane Andrew, and he remembers the grateful Floridians standing in their yards.

He said he realizes the experience could not have prepared him for the anarchy and carnage of Somalia. He and his fellow privates were counseled by platoon sergeants this week on what to expect.

"If you see it for the first time in your life, maybe a dead body or starvation — these people are skin and bones — it will stay in your mind."

Hubert was raised in Donna and played the bass drum in the Donna High School Band. He was also a member of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps during high school and rose to the position of platoon commander in his senior year, according to Master Gunnery Sgt. Jim Mims of the Donna High School ROTC.

Mims described Hubert as someone more interested in "the human side of current events" than in military conflict.

"I would rather see him involved in the humanitarian side of it than fighting a war," he said. "None of us know at this point what's going to happen, but there's always the possibility that it could end up in a major conflict of some type."

Although Hubert said the possibility of battle has entered his mind, he must stay focused on the mission of getting food to starving people.

"Like they say, the wise man always has some fear," he said. "If you don't have fear in yourself going into a certain situation like this, you're not living, you know? ... But being in the infantry, you can't have a big fear or, like I said, it could endanger you or your buddy."

Agency removes shellfish ban

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Corpus Christi Bay has been reopened to shellfish harvesting, after almost two weeks of closure because of high bacteria levels.

The bay yields mostly oysters and clams. The ban was enacted Nov. 21 and was halted Dec. 3, said Mike Ordner, spokesman for the state Health Department's shellfish sanitation control division.

"It's back to normal," Ordner said Monday. "Corpus Christi Bay generally has excellent water quality."

The high bacteria count was caused by heavy rainfall runoff into the bay in November, which lowered salinity levels, Ordner said.

The shellfish ban shouldn't have had a major impact in the area because most of the oyster harvesting in the bay is by recreational fisherman.

Wealth may pose conflicts if Bentsen heads Treasury

By John Solomon
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Clinton's apparent choice for treasury secretary has Texas-sized financial holdings. And as economic policy chief, Lloyd Bentsen would be hard-pressed to make any decision that doesn't affect his own fortune.

An advocate of returning the tax shelter to individual retirement accounts, Bentsen could help the securities industry in which one of his sons works and in which he has a financial stake.

Encourage higher interest rates? Higher rates most certainly would boost the value of the $1.1 million to $2.6 million in money market funds, checking accounts and interest-bearing bonds he reports owning.

If Bentsen, one of the Senate's wealthiest members, tinkered with the tax code, it would affect his vast holdings in Texas real estate, ranching, farming, minerals, oil and gas.

And nearly any economic policy he recommends would most certainly affect Wall Street, where much of his blind trust, valued in the millions, is believed to be invested.

The dilemma isn't new to Bentsen, who served the last six years as the chairman of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee. And the treasury secretary's position itself has had its share of millionaires in the past.

"The public has to be aware of these potential entanglements now so that when policies are promulgated people can scratch their heads and see whether they relate to his investments," warned Charles Lewis, executive director of the Washington-based Center for Responsive Politics.

Bentsen, who Clinton transition sources have said was selected last week by the president-elect for the treasury post, is no stranger to scrutiny. His finances have been picked over both in his role as a powerful Capitol Hill figure and as Michael Dukakis' vice presidential running mate in 1988.

And there have been some embarrassing moments. He abruptly canceled a so-called Breakfast Club fund-raiser in 1987 after it was learned he was asking lobbyists interested in his finance committee business to pay his campaign $10,000 to have breakfast with him.

He also resigned temporarily from two country clubs that had no black members and during the 1988 presidential race he got rid of stock in companies that did business in South Africa.

In some instances, positions he has advocated on Capitol Hill like restoration of the IRA tax break and maintaining tax breaks for oil and gas interests were favorable to his financial holdings.

Other times, his decisions ran contrary. In 1989 he opposed cutting the capital gains tax at the same he was selling a Virginia farm property in a deal that cost him considerable capital gains taxes, a spokesman said.

"He always votes the national interest," insisted Jack DeVore, Bentsen's spokesman.

■ Analysis

'His response would be 'you shouldn't be expected to take a vow of poverty and even if you did it would not stop all the questions.' '

— Jack DeVore, Bentsen spokesman

DeVore declined Monday to discuss what, if any, action Bentsen would take as treasury secretary since the appointment hasn't been announced. But he said avoiding the appearance of conflicts as a wealthy public servant was "an impossible task."

"His response would be 'you shouldn't be expected to take a vow of poverty and even if you did it would not stop all the questions,'" DeVore said.

Treasury secretaries historically have been well-to-do and have addressed conflict of interest questions by placing most of their assets in blind trusts. Nicholas Brady, a successful investment banker, did just that before assuming the job in 1989.

But that has not left some immune from problems.

In 1989, two years after current White House chief of Staff James Baker left treasury, it was learned he owned outside his blind trust $2 million in stock in Chemical Bank at the same time he was formulating policy favorable to banks like Chemical that had large interests in Third World debt.

Bentsen already has some of his assets in a blind trust even though DeVore conceded the Texas senator would prefer making his own investment decisions.

Bentsen's latest Senate financial disclosure form valued the blind trust assets at "more than $1 million" but it is believed the fund is worth substantially more.

The report didn't detail the blind trust holdings. But in 1988 when he was running for vice president, he reported the fund included stock in such corporations as Exxon, Chevron, and Colgate-Palmolive.

His latest report listed additional assets outside the blind trust valued at between $4.5 million and $10 million, much of it in money market funds, his late father's estate, ranching or real estate or the companies owned by his two sons, Lan, and Lloyd III. He reported 1991 income of well over $1 million.

In 1988, documents Bentsen released while running for vice president showed he had income of about $770,000 and assets valued at between $5.1 million and $7.9 million.

"It tends to increase on its own when you're fairly well off," said DeVore, who added that estimates that Bentsen's net worth exceeds $10 million were accurate.

A time may come when you or a member of your family becomes seriously injured or critically ill. In the midst of your shock and grief, you may be asked to make difficult decisions about the intensity of medical care being administered, or about whether to withdraw "life sustaining" treatment and change the goal of treatment from cure to comfort.

Because it is harder to make decisions on these complex issues when you are under stress, it is important for you to know about the levels and types of treatment available and to discuss the kinds of treatment you would want to use before you are called upon to make these decisions.

Mr. Hansen will address patient rights in relationship to advance medical directives, responsibilities and health care choices. A question and answer session will follow the lecture.

The shepherds said to one another, "Let's go to Bethlehem and see this thing that has happened, which the Lord has told us about" (Luke 2:15).

Christmas is the busiest season of the year. There are gifts to buy and wrap and mail, a tree to decorate, lights to hang, parties to plan and attend. It's easy to neglect the Child even as we celebrate his birthday.

This season, we invite you to join us in worshipping the Christ of Christmas. The events listed here are for you. They will help you "go to Bethlehem" and discover there the hope, joy, and peace of Jesus' birth.

FBC gives to Foreign Missions through Lottie Moon Christmas Offering
— Our Goal $160,000.00 —

Allow us to tell you of a very special lady who left her footprints on the pages of Baptist Missions. Lottie Moon was born December 12, 1840, into a staunch Baptist family. She grew up and was educated in Virginia. Like so many young people, church or religious involvement was not at the top of her list, but while in college the Lord convicted Lottie that she needed to carry His message to the lost world. She answered this call and traveled to China in 1873 and spent almost forty years witnessing to the people in that country. In 1912 a great famine swept that area of the Orient. Lottie refused to eat, giving her food to the Chinese women in her home. She became gravely ill and was put aboard ship to travel back to her native homeland. Before she reached her destination, Lottie Moon died on Christmas Eve, 1912. The December Foreign Mission Offering as we now know it was given her name as a memorial to her many years of Christian service.

First Baptist Church, Midland, has always been and we pray continues to be a church with a mission heart. As we move into the Christmas Season celebrating the birth of the Christ child born in Bethlehem, what will your gift be? Lottie Moon gave her all! Pray before you financially support the greatest gift of all — that of carrying the message of the Savior to a lost and hungry world.

"God has blessed Southern Baptist with resources of talent, money, committed lives and an active faith. We can either put protective walls around these resources and keep them for ourselves, or we can give them to our Lord to be used for a very needy world." Sandy Honeycutt, Missionary, Vienna

Babies disrupt class, students say

■ TSU student government president seeks on-campus day care so parents don't have to bring children to class.

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Texas Southern University students are complaining to school leaders about babies crying in classrooms and breastfeeding in bathrooms.

Student government President Tamara Sterling on Friday asked TSU regents to set up some affordable day-care facility so the image of TSU students doesn't become "books in one arm, a child in the other arm and another child on the back."

"It does really disrupt the education process," said Sterling. "I've seen as many as five infants in one class and the attention that goes toward them instead of the instructor can be frustrating to the entire class."

Sterling said a survey she conducted of 500 randomly selected TSU students found that 361 had children and that 223 brought them to school. All told, TSU has more than 11,000 students.

President William Harris, calling the matter "an issue of serious concern," said three groups — a committee of deans who have heard complaints from faculty, student government leaders, and the school's Center on the Family — are studying cost and liability.

"This isn't a problem we can solve overnight but it's certainly one I can empathize with students over," said Bobbie Henderson, director of the Center on the Family. "I know when I was a student at TSU I had to bring kids to class and it was pretty rough."

Day care is beginning to be an issue on the nation's campuses as student populations grow older.

TSU has no day care for babies and small children except for a teaching facility that is part of a laboratory in its home economics department. It serves about 35 students.

Sterling asked the board to look into some sort of day-care program that charges hourly rates. She said students who bring children to class don't qualify for state or federal aid available to some parents, while they also can't afford the going rate for most private care.

Randall County hires lawyers for counsel in Erdmann case

CANYON (AP) — Randall County commissioners have voted to hire an Austin law firm as protection against possible lawsuits filed by critics of former pathologist Ralph Erdmann.

Tuesday's unanimous decision to hire Ford and Ferraro law firm will help the county learn its liabilities on Erdmann and the indictment of Atlanta lawyer Millard Farmer, said Commissioner John Dodson.

"We just felt we needed to defend the county in case someone sues. We need to know what our options are," Dodson said.

Erdmann, who once worked in counties across West Texas, has pleaded guilty to falsifying autopsies. His alleged mishandling of Randall County autopsies is at the core of several capital murder cases.

Testimony about Erdmann has led to indictments in Lubbock and Randall counties against Farmer and two Lubbock police officers.

Farmer, a nationally noted capital defense attorney indicted for tampering with a government witness, told the Amarillo Globe-News he is thinking about suing the county to change the way the grand jury operates.

Farmer is accused of threatening to reveal Erdmann's mishandling of the autopsy of an elderly county resident if Erdmann didn't agree to change his testimony in a capital murder case.

■ Judge reduces damages in Halcion case

DALLAS — A judge has reduced by $700,000 the amount of damages Upjohn Co. must pay a family who claim the sleeping pill Halcion caused a man to commit murder.

On Nov. 12, a Dallas County jury recommended that the Kalamazoo-based company pay the family of William Freeman, a former assistant police chief of Fort Stockton, approximately $1.8 million. Freeman's family said Halcion changed his personality and led him to commit a 1987 murder.

On Monday, state District Judge John Marshall reduced the award, saying he couldn't find evidence of a "loss of support" the family suffered because of Freeman's life prison sentence.

Richard Josephson, an attorney representing Upjohn, said Freeman's attorney now must submit a recalculated award that reflects Marshall's order. After that is complete, he said he'll move for a new trial.

■ Judge gives short sentence due to age of gun

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — A man has been sentenced to nine years in prison for killing a tourist, a shorter sentence than he would have received had he used a newer gun.

Peter David, 27, showed no emotion as Palm Beach County Circuit Judge Thomas E. Sholts issued the sentence for his manslaughter conviction in the 1991 shooting death of Gus Arkoulis, 22, of Chicago.

Because the pistol was made before 1919, it is considered an antique, not a firearm, under state law. Had David used a newer gun, he could have gotten 17 years.

Antique guns or replicas of antiques cannot be defined as firearms unless used in the commission of a riot, murder, robbery, sexual battery, kidnapping, air piracy, aggravated battery, aggravated assault or burglary.

■ Group gathers signatures to ban abortion

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — A measure that would ban most abortions in Wyoming has garnered enough signatures to be placed on the ballot in 1994, the secretary of state's office said Tuesday.

Unseen Hands in Prayer started its petition drive in 1991. The group submitted the final batch of signatures in September and they were verified by last week.

The measure would ban abortion except in cases of rape or incest or to save the life of the mother. Supporters collected 24,646 signatures, enough to put the issue on the general election ballot in 1994, said Deputy Secretary of State Margy White.

The measure will be placed on the ballot unless the Legislature adopts a law with substantially similar wording in its 1993 or 1994 session.

■ Judge scraps community service program

BALTIMORE — The city's top judge has decided to scrap a program that allowed criminals to be sentenced to community service in lieu of jail time, saying cuts in state aid left him no choice.

Joseph H.H. Kaplan, administrative judge of the Baltimore Circuit Court, said he was forced to reduce his $6.6 million budget to $6.3 million when he received orders to trim an additional $159,000.

Some court system expenditures are mandated by law, and making cuts in other areas, such as in court stenographers, would probably bring the judicial system to a halt, Kaplan said.

The city's community service program has an annual budget of $260,000. Eliminating it on Jan. 4 will save $89,979 in the rest of the fiscal year that ends June 30.

Women head list for attorney general

By Neil A. Lewis
N.Y. Times News Service

The (attorney general) finalists, three judges and a Washington lawyer active in public-interest causes, are emblematic of the pathbreaking women who entered law schools in small numbers in the 1950s and 1960s and then rose to the top of their profession.

WASHINGTON — President-elect Bill Clinton is moving to name the first woman to serve as attorney general, and transition aides in Washington and Arkansas said Tuesday that he was considering four candidates.

The finalists, three judges and a Washington lawyer active in public-interest causes, are emblematic of the pathbreaking women who entered law schools in small numbers in the 1950s and 1960s and then rose to the top of their profession.

The candidates are Judge Patricia M. Wald of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit; Judge Amalya L. Kearse of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeal, in Manhattan; Judge Judith S. Kaye of the New York Court of Appeals, the state's highest court, and Brooksley E. Born, a partner at the Washington firm of Arnold & Porter. All are accomplished legal scholars and considered liberals to varying degrees.

The decision to focus on female candidates followed a meeting in Washington last week in which top Clinton aides, including Vernon E. Jordan, the transition chairman, conferred with the leaders of about a half-dozen women's rights groups.

According to those at the meeting, the representatives from the groups called on Clinton to select a woman for one of what is sometimes referred to as the "big four" Cabinet posts: Treasury, State, Defense and Justice.

One transition official said the meeting was not confrontational because the Clinton team was receptive to the idea that a woman be chosen for one of those four positions. The official said the Justice Department provided the greatest opportunity to fulfill that notion because of the large pool of accomplished female lawyers compared to the other fields.

All four candidates have been interviewed by top transition officials, two of them last weekend in Little Rock, Ark.

It was unclear what role was played by Clinton's wife, Hillary, a prominent lawyer who is active in many of the same causes as some of the candidates. Some Clinton aides suggested that however influential Mrs. Clinton might have been, she and her husband were uneasy about people believing that she had significant influence in such issues.

Transition officials also said Rep. Leon E. Panetta, the D-Calif., who is chairman of the House Budget Committee, has emerged as the leading contender for director of the Office of Management and Budget, a position Clinton is expected to highlight in his next round of appointments, to be announced Thursday and Friday.

Robert Rubin, co-chairman of the banking investment firm of Goldman Sachs & Co., is also at the top of a short list of names under consideration for an economic post to be announced this week. He is under consideration for the job of economic security adviser, a new and as-yet-undefined post, a Clinton transition official said, speaking on a condition of anonymity,

The tentative decision to focus on four women to head the Justice Department means that Jordan, once referred to in newspaper accounts as a candidate himself for attorney general, is not under serious consideration.

Judge Wald is, by some accounts, the slight favorite of transition officials. At 64, she is also the oldest of the four candidates.

She was appointed to the bench by President Jimmy Carter in 1979 after serving as assistant attorney general for legislative affairs.

After graduating from Yale Law School in 1951, she began work for a Washington law firm but soon took 10 years off to rear five children, managing at the same time to write a book urging reform of the bail laws and other scholarly articles. She returned to practicing law in the early 1960s by joining a neighborhood legal-services offices.

Judge Kearse, also named to the bench by President Carter, is the first woman and the second black lawyer to serve on the second circuit, the first black being Thurgood Marshall. She is a native of Vauxhall, N.J.

Judge Kaye, 54, became the first women to the state's highest court when she was appointed by Gov. Mario M. Cuomo in 1983.

The fourth candidate, Ms. Born, has combined an active private practice with interest in children's issues, legal services and bar association activities. Ms. Born, 52, graduated at the top of her class at the Stanford University Law School and was the first woman to head the Stanford Law Review.

Cold War giants create armed anarchy

By Charles J. Hanley
Associated Press Writer

■ Analysis

Superpower strategists once grandly dubbed a broad swath of troubled Asian and African nations "the arc of crisis," and anchored it with poor, remote Somalia.

Now the arc has come full circle, outsiders are shipping grain instead of guns, and some are blaming the superpowers for a human catastrophe.

The U.S. troops hitting the beaches of Somalia will find American fingerprints on the weapons that litter the devastated African land. In 21 years as Somali dictator, Mohamed Siad Barre was bestowed with thousands of tons of rifles, artillery and other arms — first Soviet, then U.S. — as the Cold War giants jockeyed for geopolitical advantage.

"They were the countries that really retained him in power," a former military aide, Brig. Gen. Abucar Liban, says of the toppled president. "... I think today we see the results of this combination of armaments in the country."

The results are armed anarchy. Thousands of youths, some loyal to a rebel faction, some simply free-lance racketeers, picked up the weapons and took charge of much of Somalia this year, looting food meant for starving Somalis, extorting small fortunes from aid workers.

But the stage was set for chaos in another way, too.

Siad Barre, the superpower protege, had destroyed much of the inner workings of Somali society — political parties, professional groups, the National Assembly, a free press. He even forbade wedding parties unless they were government-supervised.

The Somalia that finally overthrew its tyrant in January 1991 was less a nation than a collection of clan-based armed bands. And the bands next turned on each other.

"The savagery of the fighting points up the absence of civilian institutions to mediate the conflict — an absence that is the legacy of 21 years of dictatorship under Mohamed Siad Barre," writes Rakiya Omaar, a Somali who until recently headed the Africa Watch human rights organization.

To Cold War planners, Somalia was a backwater until 1979, a year of crisis that began with the anti-American revolution in Iran and ended with the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Strategists suddenly found a troubling arc on their maps, an Islamic crescent stretching from the Afghan mountains, through Iran and the Arab states of the Persian Gulf, to the Horn of Africa.

In Washington, scenarios unreeled: The Soviets grab gulf oil; Iran's revolutionaries undermine Saudi Arabia; the Soviets gain a blue water port in Pakistan. The Kremlin saw its own scenario: The Americans are working to surround us.

In Somalia, the scientific socialist Siad Barre seized power in 1969 and aligned himself with Moscow. But when he invaded neighboring Ethiopia in 1977, the Soviets abandoned him and threw their military support to Ethiopia's new Marxist government. Somalia retreated.

By 1979, Siad Barre was in the American camp, and Somalia's ports became a stopover base for Navy task forces patrolling the sea lanes of the arc. The flow of weapons began.

David Eisenberg of the Center for Defense Information, a private research group in Washington, calculates the United States supplied Somalia with $206 million in military hardware through the 1980s, including everything from M-16 assault rifles to 105mm howitzers to Hawk anti-aircraft missiles.

Gay groups draft sample order to reverse military ban

By Nancy Costello
Associated Press Writer

Gay groups and civil rights organizations have begun to draft sample executive orders to offer the Clinton administration on how to end the military's ban on homosexuals.

Some of the proposals call for the creation of an advisory committee to assist the Defense Department and anti-homophobia training for officers who would carry out the policy.

A presidential order also should restore health benefits, upgrade a less-than-honorable discharge and allow gays to re-enlist, one coalition says. And any new code of conduct should govern the sexual behavior of gay and straight soldiers, gay activists say.

"Inevitably, you are going to have situations of inappropriate conduct by heterosexuals and gay people. When it happens they should be disciplined," said Mary Newcombe, attorney for ex-Col. Margarethe Cammermeyer, recently discharged from the National Guard in Washington state after disclosing her homosexuality. "But making the presumption that only gay people will commit a sexual crime is unfair and inaccurate."

More than 15,000 people have been discharged from the military since 1982 because they were gay. At least 300 others may face administrative discharge hearings, according to estimates by the Military Law Task Force of the National Lawyers Guild.

President-elect Clinton has said homosexuality should not bar anyone from serving in the armed forces. He said he plans to consult with military leaders and others to overturn the ban.

Los Angeles corporate consultant David Mixner, who served as a senior adviser to the Clinton campaign on gay and lesbian issues, said the presidential transition team is soliciting information on the ban from several federal agencies. Input from gay groups would be welcomed, he said.

The Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund, which Newcombe works for, and the Military Freedom Project, a Washington D.C.-based coalition, are drafting sample executive orders.

The coalition includes the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Veterans of America; National Organization for Women; American Civil Liberties Union; National Gay, Lesbian Task Force; and the American Psychological Association.

The proposal drafted by the Military Freedom Project would add "sexual orientation" to a 1948 order signed by President Truman that called for "equality of treatment and opportunity for all persons in the armed services without regard to race, color, religion or national origin."

The project's order would ban discrimination of gays in military recruitment, job assignments and promotion. It also would have all negative references to homosexuals stricken from documents, said Tanya Domi, national board member for the Gay, Lesbian Bisexual Veterans of America.

Reversing the ban could save the military money, she said.

A recent General Accounting Office study found the military spent almost half a billion dollars between 1980-1990 to kick out homosexuals.

But an executive order that upgrades discharges and restores health and retirement benefits for gays also could be costly. Pentagon spokesman Lt. Col. Doug Hart says too many variables, such as the ranks and ages of gay veterans, make it impossible to estimate costs.

Some military officials and groups disagree with lifting the ban. They include the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Marine Corps League, Non-Commissioned Officers Association and the Air Force Sergeant's Association.

The VFW, which represents 2.2 million veterans, supports the Defense Department's position that homosexuality is a threat to military discipline, good order and morale, spokesman Bill Smith said.

"This issue places an additional legal and administrative burden on the armed forces," Smith said.

But some gay activists say the sample orders do not go far enough.

Parents complain about clustering at elementary school

By Karen De'Witt
N.Y. Times News Service

RICHMOND, Va. — No one is saying exactly why white pupils have been clustered at the predominantly black Bellevue Model Elementary School here, but it seems clear that as long as they have been a small minority in the school, some effort has been made to keep white students in any given grade grouped in the same classroom.

Now a complaint about that "clustering" has set off a furious debate here about how ethnic and cultural diversity can be maintained in an overwhelmingly black school system without discriminating against someone.

Two black parents complained to the school board that the "clustering" policy was essentially segregation by another name. But some other parents, both black and white, defended it as a way to encourage white parents to keep their children in the school, which is now 88 percent black, by making sure the white children had a "comfort zone" in the classroom. No classroom is all white, but some are all black.

To the Rev. Hylan Q. Carter Jr., and his wife, Valerie, who brought the complaint, no social goal justifies the clustering. "We felt it was morally and socially wrong to separate kids," Carter said.

Whatever the rationale, when the school board investigated and found that white pupils were indeed grouped, the superintendent ordered the principal to reassign them to achieve better integration. The superintendent, Lucille M. Richardson, said the clustering was contrary to board policy and was not occurring in any of the city's 30 other elementary schools.

The school's principal, Sylvia D. Richardson, who is black, is not talking to the news media and has retained legal counsel. But some parents at the school say they believe Mrs. Richardson is being made a scapegoat for a practice that was widely known and condoned.

"I think there is a travesty of justice here," said Dean Simpson, a professor of classics at the University of Richmond who has two children in the school. Simpson, who is white, said the clustering had been going on for at least five years and was public knowledge. He said the practice had succeeded in countering the re-segregation of Richmond schools.

After busing was instituted to comply with a 1970 court order to desegregate the schools, many middle-class families, white and black, left the city. Simpson said that at one point white pupils made up 3 percent of the student body at Bellevue; they now make up 12 percent.

Census: Black women marry less than white women

Tim Bovee
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Black women are far less likely to marry than white women, the government said Tuesday — a phenomenon researchers blame on unemployment, low income and high imprisonment rates in big cities.

At age 40, one in four black women has never married, compared with one in 10 white women, a Census Bureau study said.

Several experts on social and population trends said urban poverty makes it harder for black men and black women to marry.

"The economic opportunities available to men are greater for white men than black men," said Reynolds Farley, research scientist at the University of Michigan's Population Studies Center. "Black women are forced to assume more economic roles than white women are because fewer men can support them."

Economic necessity may also have given black women more role models of successful single women, and "it could be that the general liberation movement is more accepted by black women than by white women," Farley said.

Marriage has been declining for half a century. Among blacks, the decline has been particularly steep since the early 1980s, when a recession left one black worker in five without a job.

In 1975, 90 percent of black women had married by age 40. By 1985, the marriage among that group had declined to 81 percent, and by 1990, to 75 percent.

Among white women age 40, the marriage rate has held steady above 90 percent during that period.

Fewer black men are available for marriage "primarily because of poverty and many of the difficulties that follow from that," said Carl Haub, demographer with the Population Reference Bureau, a Washington research group.

Among the factors that researchers say keep blacks from marriage:

—Black unemployment now stands at nearly 14 percent, double that of whites.

—One-third of blacks live below the poverty line of $6,932 a year for an individual. Only one-tenth of whites are that poor.

—Blacks are imprisoned far out of proportion to their numbers. Blacks account for about 12 percent of the population but half the prison inmates.

—In the District of Columbia, 42 percent of black men under 35 are either in prison, on probation or parole, being sought on arrest warrants or out on bond, said Jerome Miller, director of the National Center on Institutions and Alternatives. In Baltimore, the number is higher: 56 percent.

The Census Bureau study said black women of all ages stay unmarried more than white women.

By age 30, three-fourths of white women have married, compared to fewer than half of black women. By age 35, nearly nine out of 10 white women have married. Among black women, fewer than two-thirds have married.

Only around age 50 does marriage among black women approach that of white women.

Israel encourages change in Syria's peace proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel publicly urged Syria on Tuesday to improve its peace proposal, hinting it would be willing to surrender territory on the Golan Heights in exchange.

But the chief Syrian negotiator, Muwaffiq al-Allaf, said his side had already made a very detailed and open offer to Israel. And, according to a diplomatic source, Syria did not modify it in Tuesday's session.

Consequently, Israel held back, waiting for "further clarification from the Syrian side, hopefully in the next several days," said the source, who insisted on anonymity.

While there was a wide gap between the two positions, peace talks proceeded at the State Department, and Israeli negotiator Itamar Rabinovich told reporters: "We should rule out the word 'impossible.'"

Rabinovich, who is to become Israel's new ambassador here in January, said Syria was offering "non-belligerency" in exchange for the strategic Golan Heights, which Israel captured in the 1967 Six Day War and later annexed.

"It is true that five years ago non-belligerency would have been quite a bit in Syrian-Israel relations," he said, "but this is not where we are today."

Rabinovich said Israel would "clarify" its offer to withdraw "should we hear more from the Syrians in the direction to which we are interested."

Syrian negotiator al-Allaf told reporters, however, that "this is becoming a vicious circle."

The Palestinian spokeswoman, Hanan Ashrawi, meanwhile, said "We are not trying to set up a Palestinian state" in the current phase of Mideast peace talks.

But she said Israel was approaching the talks as an occupying power and said the United States should intercede to give the Palestinians equal footing.

Al-Allaf declined to support a Palestinian call for direct U.S. intervention in the negotiations.

Machine-shop owners proud of shop's reputation

By Frank Rubin
Associated Press writer

AMARILLO — From the heyday of the blacksmith to the technological demands of modern times, Amarillo's Allison family has been in business for four generations.

The Allison Blacksmith, Welding and Machine Shop has been a fixture in this Panhandle city since 1930.

Owner Bud Allison and his father, Herschel, who owned the shop until the 1970s, have successfully made the adjustment to changing times and customer tastes.

The art of blacksmithing, which started fading in the 1940s, was phased out in the early 1970s, the Allisons said. Today the shop does welding and equipment repair.

"Blacksmithing relied 80 percent on farmers and many were using horses back then," Herschel Allison explained. "In the '30s, many were getting more modern, more powerful tractors and stopped sharpening equipment as they used to when they pulled the horses."

In the early days, the shop sharpened plow sweeps, used for cultivating the ground; go-devil knives, which were pulled behind horses and tractors to cut weeds; and grader blades, used to maintain roads.

The sharpening handwork of blacksmiths was replaced by mass manufacturing, which could produce thousands of new parts at a time.

The shop now repairs and welds a variety of items, including trailer hitches, shock and alternator brackets, air-conditioning parts and machinery for the cattle and feedlot industry.

"Our slogan is we repair everything but a broken heart," Bud Allison quipped.

He says the biggest difference from the old days to the present is the customer. Customers once brought their equipment in and left, but in today's hurry-up atmosphere many are used to having the work done while they wait. The shop has had to adjust to this change in expectations, he said.

Service and quality under time pressure are shop strengths, Bud Allison said.

"If we can get people in and out without them having to come back across town, we can do that."

They are proud of the customers they have maintained through the years.

Both Bud and Herschel Allison are proud of the shop's longevity and that it has maintained its same central location.

Bud said the shop has been able to adjust to changes in the trade because of the foresight of his father, who incorporated aluminum and stainless steel welding in the operation.

The family business goes back 63 years.

Bud Allison's grandfather, Harry Allison, moved to Amarillo in about 1917 from Oklahoma, where he was a farm laborer. He had learned blacksmithing on the farm, and in 1929 rented a blacksmith shop.

The next year, Harry bought used blacksmith equipment and leased property, where he started a blacksmith shop with acetylene welding. In 1931, Harry added an electric welder to the shop.

Herschel took over the shop after his father retired and moved to California. After a year, he bought it. In 1976, Herschel sold the shop to his own son, Bud.

One of the first things his children learned to do was sweep the floor, Bud says, perfectly natural, given their father's hard-earned claim to the business.

"Part of acquiring the business was that I pay for it," he said. "It wasn't handed to me. I knew I could make it continue to work and I had the desire to make it go. It took me 15 years to buy the first portion of it.

"He (Herschel Allison) sold it to me with the knowledge that some things would change and with the mind set that I would make it work. And God gave me the means to keep it going."

Bud Allison gives credit for his success to God and to his wife, Phyllis, a secretary in Amarillo's U.S. Probation Office. Phyllis Allison has helped with the book work for a long time, he said.

"Without her support and cooperation, No. 1, it wouldn't have been worth it, and secondly, I couldn't have done it by myself."

He also gives credit to his sisters and brothers, who he said are proud of the family tradition.

In the late 1960s, missionary work called Herschel Allison and his wife, Marita, and they were off to South America for months and even years at a time.

Meanwhile, Bud Allison took over the shop.

"The Lord made sure that we made enough that we had it as good as we ever did," Herschel Allison said.

He still works on equipment and a couple of 1930s cars in his garage.

"I'm trying to keep machinery going so I can keep the weeds down" on the 12 acres he has near his home, he said.

The business, already into its seventh decade, looks like a sure bet to be around for quite a few more years. Bud Allison's son, Jim Allen, represents the fourth generation of Allisons to work in the shop. Other children help with the bookkeeping.

Jim, who has a 6-year-old son and a 4-year-old daughter, also is proud of the shop's heritage.

Bushes select architect to design Houston home

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON Edwin A. Eubanks has landed a commission that will make him the envy of Houston's architectural community: designing a new house for President George Bush and Barbara Bush.

The Houston architect, a partner in the firm of Eubanks/Bohnn Associates and a member of the American Institute of Architects, said meet with the Bushes in Washington, D.C., last week.

This marks the first time in recent history that a new home has been built for a living president.

Renaissance Builders has been named general contractor for the house; the firm's president, Chandler Robinson, also went to the capital for the design conference, Eubanks said.

The Bushes own a lot on a horseshoe-shaped street off South Post Oak Lane in the Tanglewood area, where some of the older homes are being replaced with new, larger homes.

They bought the lot about three years ago from longtime friend Jack Fitch, who recently said the Bushes plan to exercise an option to buy an additional 4,320 square feet.

Construction is scheduled to begin in early 1993 and to be completed by next fall.

Fitch said the Bushes will live in his former home a few doors away from the building site while the construction is under way. The Fitches live in a townhouse they built on the same lot. The trend in the small neighborhood is to divide the original large lots and build large, free-standing townhouses.

Eubanks revealed no details about the style or size of the Bushes' house. He will work with his partner for the last eight years, Anne S. Bohnn, on the project.

Eubanks and Bohnn have designed residential and commercial projects ranging from upscale homes to street decorations on The Strand for Galveston's Mardi Gras. He said they have done work for friends of the Bushes' and have met the Bushes but do not know them well.

A native Texan and graduate of the University of Houston, Eubanks has been on the faculty of the University of Houston School of Architecture for 13 years.

Waitresses offer tips of the trade

By Mike Copeland
Associated Press writer

WACO — It can be a thankless job, but those who have done it well for a long time say they enjoy being waiters and waitresses.

The money's not bad. The occasional grump or drunk aside, patrons usually are friendly.

And even the embarrassing moments — spilled food and slips on wet floors — prompt a laugh in the retelling.

All have stories, tips on getting tips, secrets of the trade.

Lou Klinger, 52, was a waitress at Leslie's Fried Chicken, on the Dallas Highway, for 21 years before becoming part of management.

"I like the people, and I like this place," she said. "It's a friendly atmosphere, like a bunch of relatives working together."

Her most red-faced moment came about 10 years ago, she said, when a new busboy inadvertently left a watery trap on the floor.

"I fell over about three tables, and one had people sitting at it," Klinger recalled. "They were trying to help me up, of course, but I had rather have been under the table."

Klinger said she "hopped around" about two months after the incident until she could no longer bear the pain in her foot.

"It turns out I had a bad fracture in my right foot and a hairline fracture in my left," she said. "I took off a couple of days after I found that out."

Mary Williams, a 30-year employee of El Chico, owns four books filled with the names of people who ask for her station.

If her tables are full, "they wait for me."

She said her secret is giving "them good service, cut up and go on with them. I learn their ways and what they like.

"El Chico doesn't even want me to talk about leaving," said Williams, who turns 61 next month.

She said her most embarrassing moment was when she passed out while carrying three glasses of sangria on a tray.

"I didn't spill a drop," said Williams, who laughed and explained that a prescription drug caused her swoon.

"It was my fault. The doctor told me not to go to work."

Williams said a party of three left her the biggest tip she has ever received — $100.

"I just folded the bill up and put it away," she said. "I thought it was a dollar, but I didn't want to open it in front of them. Then I heard one of them say, 'I don't think she realizes what she has.' I opened it and it looked like a $100 bill, but I was so excited I got the cook to confirm it."

Robert Mathis, who is "73 years young," first began waiting tables at James Connally Air Force Base. He now has been at Nick's 27 years.

"I would say I get more requests than all the other waiters and waitresses combined," he says. "It's my manners. I act friendly, and I stay on top of my tables."

"You can be bothersome," he added. "You need to know when and when not to approach a table."

Mathis said it's "hard to say" what his biggest tip has been.

"On a single table, probably $17 for waiting on two people. A big group, $25 or $30."

Mathias said he likes his boss, Nick Klaras, owner of Nick's.

"I've never seen a man work as hard as him," he said. "He'll do anything. He doesn't mind getting his hands dirty."

Marcia Gregory, 35, a native of Idaho, has waited tables at the Miller Family Steakhouse in Waco for eight years.

It takes a good personality and a cordial spirit to succeed as a waitress, Gregory said, though some patrons would try the patience of a saint.

"You do wait on a lot of nasty people. Rude people. Those who complain about the food not being on time or cooked the way they want," she said.

"You just have to grin and bear it because they always take it out on the waitress — always," she said.

Gregory said she, like most waitresses and waiters, has had her share of spills — drinks, gravy, whatever.

"You just grab a towel and start wiping as fast as you can," she said. "Most people are understanding."

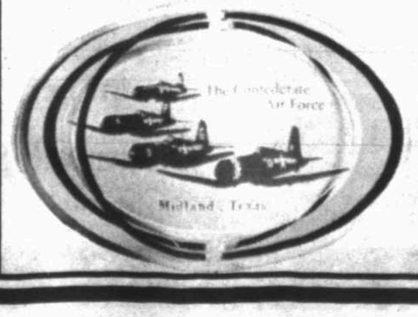

Despite odd hours and split shifts, "it's not a bad job," Gregory said. "The money is good; it really is. It would be hard to have a 40-hour job and make what you do here."

A 40-foot-tall inflatable Santa had been taken from an Austin Christmas tree lot Sunday. The $7,000 Santa was found near a University of Texas dormitory.

Thieves take 40-foot Santa from tree lot

AUSTIN (AP) — Santa Claus came to town and someone stole him.

Police are investigating the disappearance of a 40-foot, inflatable Santa from an Austin Christmas tree lot.

The giant Santa was recovered Monday afternoon near a dormitory on the University of Texas campus, police said.

"I was shocked," said Bob Byxbee, who manages the Papa Noel tree lot. "They took the light, the motor that keeps it inflated, the extension cords — they took it all."

"I couldn't believe that someone would come in and steal it," he said. "We've been coming here for 12 years, and nothing like this has ever happened."

Police said they had no suspects and no leads. But the giant jolly old elf was found reinflated outside the Moore-Hill Dormitory. The blower motor had been plugged into a bathroom outlet using the extension cords, police said.

Papa Noel owner Jim Coan said he was relieved that the $7,000 Santa was not damaged but added he is still distraught over another Christmas-related crime: the theft of about 250 Christmas trees.

Coan and police theft investigators say three tree lots have been hit since Dec. 1. The trees are valued at more than $7,000.

About 160 trees were taken from one lot in North Austin alone.

"Again, we have no suspects and no leads," said police spokeswoman Gail Phillips. "So if anyone saw someone taking off with about 160 trees, we'd like to hear from them."

Clinton team queries Sharp on budget-cutting blueprint

AUSTIN (AP) — Members of President-elect Bill Clinton's transition team want to see if Texas Comptroller John Sharp's budget-cutting blueprint can be applied at the federal level.

Sharp and one of his top aides met Tuesday with Al From, former executive director of the Democratic Leadership Council, and David Osborne, co-author of "Reinventing Government," according to Andy Welch, a Sharp spokesman.

More than 100 auditors examined state government last year at Sharp's behest. The resulting report recommended $4 billion in potential savings and identified $1.2 billion in additional federal funds for which the state could qualify.

The Legislature enacted some of the recommendations.

Comptroller employees said they weren't sure how the Clinton administration learned of the audits, but that Clinton officials began calling them before the Nov. 3 election for details, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

Investigators suspend officers

DALLAS (AP) — The handling of a sexual assault report against a Dallas policeman has resulted in the temporary suspensions of four other officers.

The discipline was ordered after a 24-year-old woman claimed Dallas Officer Mike Alvarez sexually assaulted her July 30. Alvarez resigned and later was charged with official oppression.

The suspensions were ordered Friday for Officer Craig McGaha, 30 days; Officer Scott Harn, 15 days; Senior Cpl. Laura Campbell, 10 days; and Officer Harry Deltufo, 3 days.

Internal affairs investigators determined that all except Deltufo knew of the alleged assault within hours, but did not report it.

"The suspensions are a strong message to officers everywhere," said Lt. Jeff Cotner, who is in charge of officers in the West End. "I think the message is clear that this will not be tolerated."

Alvarez has claimed that the sexual contact with the woman was consentual and the woman is apparently refusing to press charges against him.

Chain to open condom store next to church

Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Condom Sense, a national chain of stores specializing in unusual and odd prophylactics, soon will open its first San Antonio store.

The store, which features items like glow-in-the-dark and strawberry-flavored condoms, is drawing praise from safe-sex advocates who say it will help make people more comfortable with condoms.

But the new store's neighbors, parishioners of St. Sophia Greek Orthodox Church, are less than thrilled.

"I have nothing against condoms, but to put that next door to a church is poor taste," said church member Beatrice Catacalos. "It's unforgivable."

The Rev. Tom Zaferes, pastor of St. Sophia's, called the store's location "inappropriate."

"It's not like the church is opposed to sex or anything like that," he said. "It's just that I don't think it's a good deal next to our church and I don't think it's a good deal for the neighbors."

But church leaders say they won't try to stop the store, which is already under construction in a tiny, brightly painted shop on the south end of the Strip. A city ordinance prohibits the sale of pornographic books or videos within 500 feet churches, but it does not regulate condom stores.

The store's owners hope to cash in on an increasing market for condoms. Condom sales nationally have skyrocketed since the advent of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, since doctors say condoms help prevent the spread of the deadly virus that causes the disease.

Condoms also are considered effective in stopping the spread of other sexually transmitted diseases, and they are a popular form of birth control.

Condom Sense is a Dallas-based company that operates 10 stores, including three in Dallas, two in Houston and one in Austin.

The local store is painted bright orange and features a colorful green trim, and is expected to unabashedly tout its merchandise.

In Dallas, Condom Sense sells gag gifts, T-shirts and other novelty and gift items in addition to the condom.

But condoms are the store's top-selling product, according to Dallas employee Todd Ratliff.

St. Mary's Strip, where the store is located, is a popular hangout for young adults who frequent the bars and restaurants that line the street. It is close to Trinity University.

Ken Respondek, who manages the St. Mary's Street property, said he hopes the store will offer education and advice to sexually active San Antonians. "Maybe they'll even save someone's life."

The store is scheduled to open by the first of the year.

Contract goes to Richards' contributor, paper says

AUSTIN (AP) — A key aide to Gov. Ann Richards steered state business to a Houston man who contributed $35,000 to Richards, a newspaper reported.

State housing officials appointed by Richards said the $91,000 contract approved by her deputy chief of staff Richard Moya was not illegal. The contract was awarded without competitive bids and outside regular procedures.

"We found nothing requiring any further action," Paul Rodriguez, chairman of the Texas Housing and Community Affairs Board, told the Austin American-Statesman.

Moya, who has been on paid leave since state auditors brought the matter to Richards' attention, probably will return to work soon, the governor's press secretary, Bill Cryer, said Tuesday. Moya's state salary is $66,432 per year, Cryer said.

Republicans said Moya's actions were suspicious.

"I don't think it passes the smell test," said Karen Hughes, executive director of the Texas Republican Party. "The governor promised a high standard of ethics and integrity and instead we get questionable contracts with a lot of taxpayer money being awarded to her political supporters."

Richards has returned the $35,000 political donation, plus interest, to businessman George Speer. Cryer told The Associated Press that the donation was returned because there were "allegations surrounding it."

"She (Richards) did everything ethically that she could do to see that this thing was handled in the appropriate manner," Cryer said.

But the $91,000 contract has already been paid out to the New York firm of AIKO Advisers Limited, which served as brokers for a bond package. Speer served as the middleman in the deal, the American-Statesman reported.

Moya came to the housing agency as interim director in the summer of 1991. Moya has been Richards' chief troubleshooter, and in a lawsuit has been accused of firing people for political purposes. He has denied those charges.

Byrd recovery

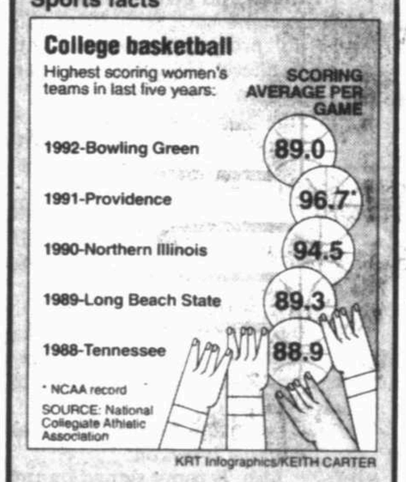

NEW YORK — Dennis Byrd, the New York Jets' defensive lineman partially paralyzed in a game against Kansas City two weeks ago, sat up in a wheelchair for the first time on Tuesday.

The Jets said that Byrd, who is undergoing rehabilitation at Lenox Hill Hospital, spent about 30 minutes sitting up. The team described his recovery as "uneventful" and said he will be transferred to the spinal cord rehabilitation facilities at Mount Sinai Hospital in a few days.

"Dennis continues to be in excellent spirits," the team said in a statement.

Byrd sustained a broken fifth cervical vertebra when he collided with teammate Scott Mersereau as he was sacking Dave Krieg of the Chiefs on Nov. 29.

HOUSTON — The Houston Oilers are beginning to look like what Coach Jack Pardee expected them to be in preseason — a team.

The Oilers racked up their second consecutive win Monday night with a decisive 24-7 victory over the Chicago Bears.

"This is the first time in quite a while that we really started to look like a team," Pardee said. "It wasn't feast or famine.

"The offense was moving the ball consistently and ended up with touchdowns at the end of the drives. The defense did a good job of getting some turnovers."

Cody Carlson continued to blossom as injured Warren Moon's replacement and the defense, improving in recent weeks, rattled Bears quarterbacks for five sacks and kept constant pressure on Peter Tom Willis.

"We have a larger cast of players making plays," Pardee said. "Curtis Duncan made some key catches (eight for 64 yards) and Cody really threw the ball well and Lorenzo (White) was running well."

Carlson completed 18 of 27 passes for 178 yards including a six-yard touchdown to Webster Slaughter, set up by Ray Childress' recovery of Brad Muster's fumble.

Bubba McDowell had the key play of the game with a 26-yard interception return for a touchdown with 44 seconds left in the half that gave the Oilers a 10-0 lead.

"Everybody on defense was making plays," Pardee said. "When you have that big of a cast making plays, you've got a better chance to win."

The Oilers (8-5) will play Green Bay, their fourth NFC Central Division foe in five weeks, Sunday night in the Astrodome.

"There's a bunch of us right there (at 8-5) but the key is we're starting to play better," Pardee said. "That gives us hope for the future. This will help only if we go and get after the Packers now."

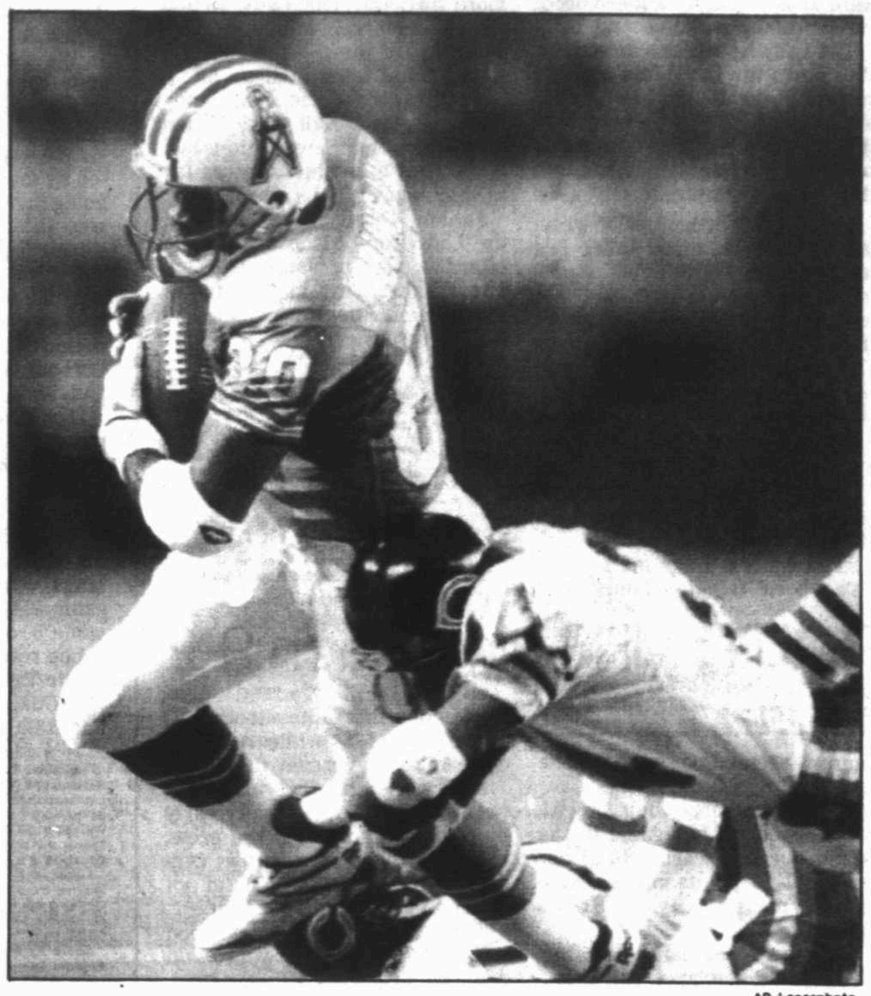

It would be in true character for the Oilers to make an impressive run at the end of the season after they've blown their chances of defending their AFC Central Division title.

Their fans weren't ready to totally embrace the Oilers, even during Monday night's game.

Even with a 17-0 lead, they booed Pardee's decision to go for a field goal instead of a touchdown with a four-and-one at the Chicago 30-yard line. The play almost backfired when holder Greg Montgomery bobbled the snap for a 15-yard loss and Chicago drove to its only touchdown.

But Haywood Jeffires got them cheering again with a 45-yard catch that set up White's one-yard touchdown to put the game away.

"They were within 17-7 and that was the most important play of the night in helping us get another touchdown," Carlson said.

MHS boys romp past Dunbar

■ Five Bulldogs reach double figures as MHS stuns Lubbock Dunbar, 89-60.

By Terry Williamson

When 6-foot-8 Andre Gill is taking fourth quarter three-point shots and Jumon Hailey is making dazzling behind-the-back circus feeds, you just know that things are going right for the Midland High basketball team.

In fact, things went so right for the Bulldogs that Tuesday's 89-60 romp over Class 3A Lubbock Dunbar was a Chaparral Center play time.

MHS had five players soar into double figures while hitting 51 percent from the field. The Purple Pack never broke a sweat as 10 of 13 players scored.

"If we really screw it down, we can play," said an elated MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "We're doing things a little bit better every time out. Our kids understand that they have a shot at the playoffs this year and you can tell it by the way they work and react to each other. We're getting closer to being a pretty good team."

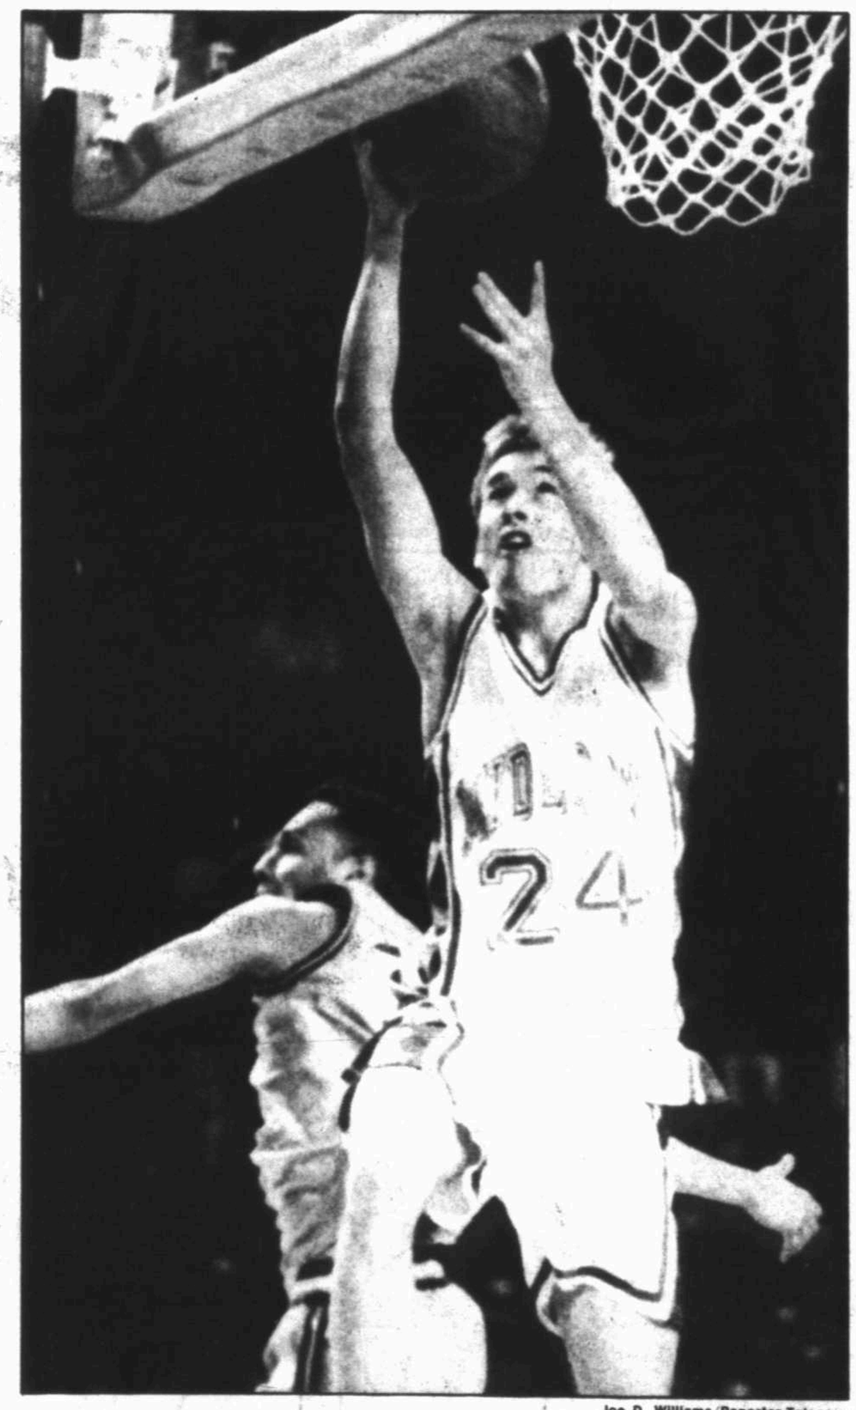

Gill led the Bulldogs with 16 points while Donald Carter had 14. But there was also a combined 23 points from the Bulldog backcourt as Mike Melzer hit for 12 points and Rob Foster for 11.

"Guard was a big concern for us because we lost five guards by moving or other reasons, but those two (Melzer and Foster) have just been playing great. And what can you say about the big guy (Gill). He's a player."

With the game out of reach in the fourth period, Stephenson let his team have some fun. Gill took his liberties, launching two attempts at treys — and he hit one of them. He also had a monster fourth quarter dunk (but we will mention that he blew a chance at another dunkster earlier in the game).

Asked if he was moving to the three-point game, Gill said, "No way. It was just because we were winning by a lot. You won't see me taking

Lady Rebels defeat Tors

By Jimmy Patterson

The Midland Lee Lady Rebels erased an eleven point halftime deficit and then held off a late rally by the Lamesa Lady Tornadoes to come away with a 54-50 win Tuesday night at the Rebel gym.

Lee outscored Lamesa 33-18 in the second half, finally taking the lead for good with 6:05 left in the game.

The Lady Rebels upped their lead to 46-43 — its largest of the night until that point — before Lamesa came back to within one, 50-49, on a pair of free throws by Cindi Smith.

Free throw shooting by Lamesa would prove to be part of its eventual downfall, though, as the Lady Tors missed three one-on-one front ends in the fourth quarter, a loss of what could have been six points.

To listen to coaches Elise Kail, of Lee, and Lamesa's Alan Thorpe tell it, it's as if the two teams traded offensive personalities in their halftime locker rooms.

Lady Bulldogs rout Andrews

While those lamentably long afternoons of August are called the dog days, December evenings in Midland are fast becoming Lady Bulldog nights.

Midland High's girls basketball team improved to 9-2 for the season Tuesday night at the Chaparral Center by routing Andrews, 65-36.

With District 4-5A's girls schedule opening next Tuesday and the Lady Bulldogs' only losses coming to No. 4-ranked Lubbock Monterey and Panhandle power Plainview, MHS appears ready to make a run for the league title.

Tuesday against Andrews, MHS junior guard and team leader Julie Chancellor drew her third foul in the first minute of the second quarter, sending her to the bench. Lady Mustang Kaci Graham made one of two free throws after the foul to cut the MHS lead to 17-10, and

Wild day in baseball includes possible deal for Schott

■ David Cone tops list of free agents that sign with new teams.

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Marge Schott became the big deal at the winter meetings Tuesday when, for the first time, baseball acknowledged it was negotiating an agreement with the embattled Cincinnati Reds owner.

Even on another wild day when free agent David Cone went home to Kansas City, Barry Bonds finalized his $43.75 million contract with San Francisco and Kelly Gruber and Ivan Calderon were traded, it was Schott who sent everyone scurrying.

Schott unexpectedly arrived at the Galt House in the afternoon and slipped through a back kitchen into a meeting of National League owners. All day, she got the same tight security the Rev. Jesse Jackson had when he came Monday to speak against Schott's alleged use of racial and ethnic slurs.

Schott did not comment on her situation. But Pittsburgh Pirates director Douglas Danforth, part of a four-member committee assigned to investigate Schott, said NL president Bill White had talked to her several times in recent weeks about a solution.

Baseball can fine or suspend Schott, and Danforth said White had discussed a deal with her to avoid a confrontation.

"That's what we would hope, that there would be an agreement that she would be comfortable with," Danforth said. "Bill feels there's been modest progress toward an agreement, but we're certainly not there yet."

"We want to be fair and thorough. Obviously, if we reached a consensus, that would be the best of all worlds," he said.

Danforth did not detail what kind of compromise was being worked out, or how Schott was feeling about it.

Meanwhile, many teams spent the day filling their needs. Dave Stieb, Charlie Hough, Dan Plesac, Dave half we made," Thorpe said, "but in the second half we couldn't make anything."

And from Kail, "We couldn't hit the broadside of a barn in the first half. We were 0-for-4 on our first possession."

Lamesa's press stymied Lee in the first half, but the Lady Rebels were able to handle a toned-down version of it in the second half.

The Lady Rebels also effectively shut down the Lady Tors' two top scorers in the second half. Amber Vaughn had 15 of her 17 points in the first half, while Kechia Mason scored only five of her 16 points in the final 16 minutes.

Lamesa had little hope of working against the much taller Lee team inside. Lady Rebel sophomore Krissy Woodard had not only her best offensive output of the season with 17 points, but she also controlled the glass and blocked passing lanes underneath all night long.

"When you're as short as we are, it's tough," Thorpe said.

Tanisha Mills had 15 points to complete the Lady Rebels' tandem of double-digit scorers.

"Teamwork has been what we've been talking about," Kail said. "TK (Strambler) didn't play the way she normally does (three points), but everybody made up for it.

Next up for Lee, a task a bit more difficult. The Lady Rebels travel to Merkel, a neutral site, Saturday, to meet Mansfield, the state's No. 3 team in Class 5A.

"If the girls decide that they want to play," Kail said, "Then they'll turn themselves into a ball team. They'll be able to go as far as they want."

Junior Varsity: Lee defeated the Lady Tors, 51-29, behind the offensive play of Jamie Gesting. The JV next plays in the Snyder tournament, beginning at 4:30 p.m. Thursday.

ROUT: MHS girls reach 9-2

(From 1C)

But 5-9 sophomore wing Amy Alcala stepped up her game in the second quarter, scoring 10 of her game-high 27 points in the period and stymying any Andrews comeback.

"Our team was doing just fine. We all just got relaxed and everybody's momentum moved up. I've been trying to play more relaxed. The first few games it seems like I was rushing my shots, but now it seems it's all falling into place," Alcala said.

"We had some people come to the front (6-4 senior post Lisa Koss scored 10 points, grabbed eight rebounds and blocked three shots in the game while Charlotte Scharbauer and Jackie Perez each scored in Chancellor's absence). We kept the heat on them and pretty much controlled the tempo of the game," said MHS head coach Jim Raughton.

Tempo was not the only thing the Lady Bulldogs controlled. Team rebounds was the only aspect of the game MHS did not outshine Andrews in, as the Lady Mustangs ended with a 27-24 edge based on the 15 caroms 6-1 junior Stacy Bookout nabbed (Bookout also led Andrews in scoring with 18 points).

But MHS pressed the Lady Mustangs into 23 turnovers while committing just seven, and took more than twice as many shots from the field as Andrews. The Lady Bulldogs ended the game shooting 40 percent (30-of-76) while Andrews came in at 36 percent (12-for-33).

And while the Lady Bulldogs put Andrews in the penalty early by committing fouls in the press, the disparity in free throws (Andrews 12-of-22, MHS 3-of-7) did not affect the outcome.

"We just went against a good ball club that played well," said Andrews head coach Roger Goldsmith, whose charges moved to 6-4 for the season. "They made us shoot a lot of shots off balance and forced us into a lot of mistakes.

"I'm real proud of the they way Stacy Bookout played. She had the kind of game she's capable of playing, she just needs to do it consistently."

In junior varsity play, MHS defeated Andrews 50-33, as Veronica Poage scored 21 points. Tara McDonald led Andrews with 13 points.

MHS next plays at Fort Stockton Friday in a 6:30 p.m. game, then opens district play Tuesday by hosting San Angelo.

those shots many times. But this was fun. Everyone plays better in a game like this. You're loose."

Stephenson also said Gill's game isn't the three-point shot, but added, "I'm not afraid of him shooting that shot. He can hit it. But I will say in a tight game, you won't see that happen. I want him on the glass."

Hailey made an incredible behind-the-back pass to Foster for a basket in the fourth quarter, again bringing down the house.

"When it happens, it happens," Hailey said. "You don't plan those things."

Dunbar had a couple of nice players. Daniel Johnson ripped a game high 25 points, hitting all four of his three-point attempts and Tatrick Baldwin had 17 points. But the Panthers had little else to go with them.

However, the way MHS was playing, it would have been tough for most teams to stay on the court.

MHS will play Amarillo Caprock in the opening round of the Tall City Invitational Friday at the Chap, bringing with them a 6-1 record.

In junior varsity action Tuesday, MHS took an 85-57 win over Dunbar to go to 7-2 for the season. No details were available for that game.

In sophomore action Monday, MHS climbed to 6-2 with a 59-49 win over Odessa Permian as Rico Hinson hit for 17 points and Brian Knottec had eight.

Baylor slips by North Texas in double-overtime encounter

DENTON (AP) — Willie Sublett scored 26 points and grabbed 10 rebounds Tuesday night as the Baylor Bears defeated North Texas, 88-86, in double overtime.

Baylor improved to 4-0 while North Texas' Eagles fell to 0-4.

Jesse Ratliff led the Eagles with 25 points and nine rebounds before fouling out with 29 seconds left in the first overtime. Xavier Henton added 19 points for North Texas.

The Eagles battled from an 11-point deficit to tie the game, 67-all, on two free throws by Ratliff with 42 seconds left in regulation. Baylor held the ball for the last shot, but missed at the buzzer.

In overtime, North Texas took the lead, 77-76, for the first time of the second half on Ratliff's 3-point shot. On Ratliff's later foul, Baylor's Anthony Lewis made only free throw, and North Texas had a chance to win at the buzzer, but Eric jackson's shot was short.

Baylor led at the half, 32-28.

Rebs suffer first loss of season

LUBBOCK — Midland Lee's boys basketball team was handed its first defeat of the season here Tuesday night, as the Rebels fell to Lubbock Coronado, 69-65.

"We played well enough to win, we just turned the ball over. You can't turn it over on the road," said Lee head coach Jon House.

Lee (8-1) led by seven points in the third quarter, but three unforced turnovers allowed the Mustangs to get back in the game.

"We were down by nine, then led by seven and wound up tied going into the fourth quarter. It was those three straight unforced turnovers in the end of the third quarter," House said.

Mustangs own all-district team

Midland Christian School dominated its all-district six-man football team by placing four players on both the first team offense and the first team defense.

And the Mustangs, who repeated as state champions in the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools six-man league, captured an additional five slots on the District I second team.

Named to both the first team offense and defense are quarterback/defensive back Andy Awtry, center/defensive lineman Gary Welsh and running back/linebacker Kyle Jackson.

Receiver Jody Duncan was MCS' other first-teamer on offense, while defensive lineman Gary Welsh was named to the first team defense.

Mustangs earning second-team recognition were Clay Gunter as both a running back and a defensive specialist, Lathan Houghton as a receiver, Wes Adams at defensive back and Jackson as a place-kicker.

Only District I member El Paso Jesus Chapel joined MCS with multiple players on the first team. Jesus Chapel claimed five of the remaining six first team slots as El Paso Northeast Christian Academy grabbed a lone first team spot with its defensive specialist.

El Paso Agape, District I's other member, did not have a first-teamer, but claimed four second-team spaces.

Magadan and Bob Ojeda were among the more than 20 players involved in transactions.

The Royals signed two free agents, Cone and shortstop Greg Gagne.

Cone began his career with Kansas City, was sent to the New York Mets in a deal for catcher Ed Hearn in 1987, and wound up late last season with the World Series champion Toronto Blue Jays. "Kansas City was my first choice. I never thought in my wildest dreams I'd get a chance to play ball back home," said Cone, who will make about $18 million over three years. "As far as Toronto goes, I wouldn't say it was close at all. After the World Series, I'd say they were a little behind. Philadelphia made a good offer."

"I know a lot was written about how much I'd like to play in New York," he said. "The Yankee negotiations were rather strange, needless to say. I think the chaos surrounding the front office there is rather self-explanatory."

Bonds and the Giants signed a six-year deal that was the richest in baseball history. The announcement came 45 hours after the contract hit a snag and stood up Bonds at a press conference, an embarrassing episode if there ever was one.

The deal became complete when an agreement was made that owner Bob Lurie, who is trying to sell the team for $100 million, will not be responsible if the sale does not get its expected approval. In fact, if the sale is not approved, Lurie will get to decide whether Bonds remains on the Giants.

Bonds, a two-time Most Valuable Player, broke into tears when he talked about wearing the Giants' famed No. 24 jersey.

Boston, looking to add power, got Calderon from Montreal for Mike Gardiner and another young pitcher. Calderon hit 19 homers in 1991, but missed most of last year after undergoing surgery on his left shoulder.

Gruber, rumored to be on his way to Los Angeles, was instead traded by Toronto to California. Gruber has slumped for two seasons, and the Angels got him for second baseman Luis Sojo. Two years ago, Sojo was traded by the Blue Jays to California in a swap for Devon White.

In other deals:

— Steve Howe, recently reinstated and given an eighth chance to come back from drug and alcohol problems, re-signed with the Yankees. He got a two-year, $4.2 million contract.

— Stieb, who bothered again by shoulder trouble, left Toronto and signed a one-year contract with the Chicago White Sox.

— Hough and Magadan both signed with the Florida Marlins. Magadan was let go by the Mets, and Hough was set free by the White Sox.

— Ojeda left Los Angeles and joined Cleveland.

Hoosiers tame Irish

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — The clutch shooting of Calbert Cheaney, who scored 15 of his 19 points in the second half, enabled No. 4 Indiana to recover after blowing a 17-point lead for a 75-70 victory Tuesday night over Notre Dame.

The Hoosiers (5-1) trailed the Irish (2-1) several times in the second half, the last at 69-67 after a 3-point basket by Notre Dame's Carl Cozen with 3 minutes to go. But Cheaney made two free throws to tie the game, and a 3-pointer with 2 minutes left to put the Hoosiers ahead 72-69.

Billy Taylor made one of two free throws for the Irish. But Cheaney hit another foul shot before Matt Nover clinched the victory with an off-balance, desperation basket with 16 seconds left — just beating the shot clock.

No. 3 Kentucky 82, E. Kentucky 73

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Jeff Brassow hit two 3-pointers in the final 1:08, and Jamal Mashburn had a career-high 38 points and 19 rebounds to rally Kentucky.

Eastern Kentucky (2-1) went up 73-72 when Brad Divine made two free throws with 2:21 remaining before Junior Braddy, Brassow and Mashburn went to work to save Kentucky (3-0).

Braddy penetrated inside the lane and hit a short leaning jumper that gave Kentucky a one-point lead with 1:55 to go. Fourteen seconds later, Dale Brown blocked a jumper by Eastern Kentucky's Arlando Johnson.

No. 8 Iowa 64, N. Iowa 44

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Northern Iowa held Acie Earl to 5 points, but Val Barnes took up the slack with 21 as Iowa withstood a second-half surge by the Panthers.

Earl, named the Big Ten player of the week on Monday, committed nine turnovers. It was the first time in 36 games he failed to score in double figures, dating back to his 7-point outing against Northwestern two seasons ago.

Top 25 Roundup

Randy Blocker had 12 points and Brain Carpenter 11 for UNI (1-2). Chris Street added 16 points for Iowa (4-0).

No. 11 Oklahoma 112, Idaho State 59

NORMAN, Okla. — Jeff Webster scored 19 points and Terry Evans and Bryan Sallier scored 18 apiece to lead Oklahoma over Idaho State.

Webster made 7 of his 11 attempts from the field and Sallier was 7 of 13 along with 10 rebounds for Oklahoma, which forced Idaho State into 29 turnovers.

Evans sank 4 of 6 3-pointers and the Sooners (3-0) limited a foe to less than 60 points for the first time since 1989.

The Sooners used a 26-2 run in the first half to take 61-30 halftime lead.

No. 14 Arizona 89, New Mexico 70

TUCSON, Ariz. — Khalid Reeves lost his starting job, but scored 13 points and helped lead the defense as Arizona beat New Mexico.

Ahead 39-31 at halftime, the Wildcats (1-1) extended their half-court defense — paced by Reeves and fellow guard Damon Stoudamire — and went on a 24-8 streak in the first 6:23 of the second half. They built a 63-39 lead, their biggest of the game.

Reeves had five assists and two steals.

No. 23 UMass 70, Siena 58

ALBANY, N.Y. — Harper Williams scored 21 points and Tony Barbee 15 as Massachusetts overcame a slow tempo with a second-half surge to beat Siena.

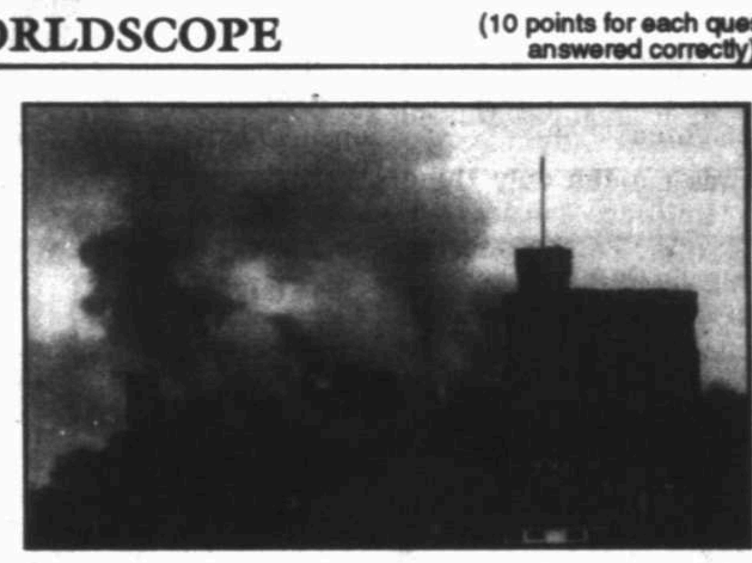

The Minutemen (2-1) never trailed, but were unable to shake the Saints (1-3) until Barbee started a 19-4 surge with a 3-point play to make it 51-44 with 7:32 left. Doremus Bennerman led Siena with 15 points, and Lee Matthews added 14 points and 17 rebounds.

Opening lead: Ten of ♡

Don't commit yourself to a line, no matter how obvious, until you have learned all you can about the distribution. This seemingly obvious piece of advice was ignored by most declarers on this hand from a duplicate event.

The auction shown was not uncommon. South's opening bid announced a balanced 25-27 points and North went all the way. However, with a flat hand and no intermediates, North should have reined in his exuberance and simply invited the grand slam by bidding five no trump, in which case South would have settled for 12 tricks—a grand slam was an anti-percentage proposition.

Declarer won the opening lead in hand and, since it seemed that there was no way home without the club finesse, he finessed right away. The queen fetched the king from West and declarer was ready to claim—until West sluffed a heart on the second club. The limit of the hand now was 12 tricks.

Suppose South delayed playing clubs until all the remaining winners were cashed. When East shows out on the second heart and West follows to three rounds of spades and diamonds, 12 of West's cards ar known—three spades, six heart and three diamonds. Since We cannot have more than one clu declarer must hope that it is t bare king. Therefore, declar should lead the three of clubs fro hand and, when the king appears, tricks roll in. True, that risks goi down an extra trick or two if We singleton isn't the king, but that' small price to pay to land a gra

Leukemia patient's plight spurs actor Charles Dutton into action

BALTIMORE — Actor Charles Dutton, spurred by the plight of a young leukemia patient, helped launch a drive Tuesday to encourage more blacks to become bone-marrow donors.

Demitria Campbell, a 21-year-old black student who was diagnosed last year with leukemia, has been unable to find a suitable bone-marrow donor because of a lack of blacks signed up for the National Marrow Donor Program.

About 1 percent of Baltimore's 436,000 blacks have registered with the donor program, said her father, Roland Campbell. "African-Americans are dying and they don't have to," he said.

Dutton, a Baltimore native who stars in the TV series "Roc," said he was deeply moved by Campbell's efforts to find help for his daughter.

"No matter what it takes," he said, "I will promote this drive." It is funded through the American Red Cross and Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Nationally, about 700,000 potential donors have registered with the program, but less than 4 percent, or about 30,000, are blacks. Since tissue types are often unique to a particular race, in most cases, only blacks can donate marrow to other blacks.

INDIANAPOLIS — John Mellencamp will play a benefit concert next month for the family of keyboardist John Cascella, who died of a heart attack.

Mellencamp

The benefit is to held Jan. 22 at the Murat Theatre.

Cascella, 45, was stricken Nov. 14 while driving in Hamilton County. He is survived by his wife, Kathy, and three children.

He joined the Mellencamp band 10 years ago and was a key element in the group's folk-rock sound. The band was on a two-week break from recording an album at Mellencamp's studio when Cascella died.

YORBA LINDA, Calif. — Unlike other presidential libraries, the Richard Nixon Library & Birthplace takes no tax dollars. But donors, admission fees and sales of memorabilia at its gift shop didn't cover the bills in 1991.

The library-museum, which opened in July 1990, lost money in its first full year of operation, ending with a $577,301 deficit, its Internal Revenue Service tax forms showed.

Private contributions declined from $4.2 million in 1990 to $1.9 million last year. Among the museum's donors were the Nixon family ($1 million in a trust), Chicago multimillionaire W. Clement Stone ($1 million), and Bob Abplanalp, inventor of the aerosol valve ($860,000).

There could be more red ink in 1992, said Library Director John H. Taylor. But the 1991 loss was covered with a loan and isn't in financial trouble, he said.

The 1991 shortfall was caused by "aggressive spending" on advertising, exhibits, lectures and developing Nixon's archives, Taylor said.

"The library needs to get the word out about its activities in a very crowded tourism market," he said.

MINNEAPOLIS — King Hussein of Jordan is likely to return to the Mayo Clinic this week for a checkup after cancer surgery earlier this year.

Royal palace officials said Monday the schedule is tentative, but the king is expected to arrive in Rochester on Thursday evening.

After spending about four days at the clinic, he's expected to visit Washington, D.C., for a few days, then go to Atlanta to meet with former President Carter.

Hussein, 57, underwent surgery this fall at the clinic, where doctors said they removed a cancerous growth in his left ureter. One kidney also was removed.

Who said what: "I was talking with an older guy . . . about marriage. We were having a real heart-to-heart. Then his wife appeared. She was a beautiful girl about 19 or 20. And I said, 'Oh, you are a lucky man.' And he answered, 'I should have stayed with my first wife. Things haven't changed; she just looks different.' "

— Mel Gibson, father of six, married for 12 years to Robyn, in a New York Times interview. Gibson's new movie is "Forever Young."

NEW YORK — Model Christie Brinkley was fired recently as host of a CNN lifestyles show.

Brinkley said she got the ax because she wouldn't accept a contract clause limiting her options to work with other networks and had asked for more creative input.

"They wanted to hire somebody to draw attention to their program. I was just hired to do wraparounds," she said in a telephone interview from Miami.

Bob Furnad, CNN's senior executive producer and vice president, said he didn't "consider the program a success."

Also, "the indication was they wanted more control, and we were not comfortable with relinquishing control," he said by telephone from Atlanta.

Her half-hour show, "Living in the '90s," has been on the all-news channel every weekday morning since September.

Presented by LITTLE & COMPANY STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Oil prices settled Tuesday at their lowest level since March with little news to spur buying.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in January settled at $18.84 per barrel, down 34 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. That's the lowest since March 12, when the near-term delivery contract settled at $18.83 per barrel.

Local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian, Navajo Refining and Texaco Trading and Transportation lowered their posted price 25 cents to $17.50.

"Until either OPEC does something that people see as credible or the refiners do something in the way of crude runs, this market isn't going to go up," said Fred Brill, senior vice president at Pegasus Econometric Group.

The market brushed off efforts by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to boost prices and refiners have been operating at nearly 90 percent of capacity.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar ended narrowly mixed Tuesday in light trading as the currency markets awaited an upcoming meeting of Germany's central bank.

In New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 123.75 yen, unchanged from late Monday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday's rates, included: 1.5562 German marks, down from 1.5563; 1.3945 Swiss francs, up from 1.3935; 5.3065 French francs, up from 5.3025; 1,367.50 Italian lire, down from 1,374.50; and 1.27225 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2727.

Stocks rally

NEW YORK — Stock prices gained more ground Tuesday, pushing their yearend rally to new highs despite pockets of resistance from sellers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 14.85 points to 3,322.18, stretching its gain since last Thursday's close to 45.65 points. Several other, broader indicators surpassed the record peaks they have established in recent days.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 6 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said hopes remained high for a continuing improvement in the economy in early 1993.

The Nasdaq composite index for the over-the-counter market edged up .59 to a record 667.12. At the Amex, the market value index was up .29 at 394.65.

High court to hear mortgages case

■ Ruling could shift bargaining power of individuals who file for bankruptcy.

By Pamela Yip
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — The U.S. Supreme Court will hear a case involving Texas homeowners that could shift the bargaining power of individuals who file for bankruptcy protection.

At issue is whether homeowners seeking to reorganize debts in bankruptcy court can avoid repaying the full mortgage debt if it exceeds their home's value.

A favorable ruling by the court could sharply reduce the money paid to mortgage lenders if a home buyer filed for protection under Chapter 13 of the bankruptcy code.

"It means they can stay in their homes, and they will only have to pay what the home is really worth — that much but no more," said Philip I. Palmer Jr., the attorney representing the Dallas couple who filed the case.

The court on Monday said it would hear an appeal by the couple, who owed about $71,000 on a condominium in which the value had dropped to $23,500.

Leonard and Harriet Nobelman in 1990 filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 13 of federal bankruptcy law. Chapter 13 allows individuals to repay as many debtors as possible from available income.

The Nobelmans' reorganization plan listed their condominium's value at $23,500 and proposed to make payments to creditors based on that amount.

The rest of their loan from American Savings Bank would be declared an unsecured claim, sharply increasing the danger of a loss on the mortgage. The borrowers would only have to make the back payments they owed before filing in bankruptcy court.

"It really comes down to whether we're going to live in the real world or live in the Land of Oz," said Palmer, the Nobelmans' Dallas attorney. "He's not going to pay $75,000 for a condominium that's worth $20,000."

Palmer said if the Nobelmans were to pay the loan's entire balance, there would be less money to pay their unsecured creditors.

"There are less dollars to pay others, so the mortgage companies will benefit substantially, but the unsecured creditors will pay the price," Palmer said.

A federal bankruptcy judge refused to approve payments based on a reduced value — a practice known as lien-stripping. A federal court also ruled against the Nobelmans, as did the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, whose territory encompasses Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

The appeals court acknowledged that its ruling conflicted with four other federal appeals courts that had allowed such plans.

Currently in Texas, consumers who file Chapter 13 must still pay their mortgage bills in full on their principal residence, said William Harris, a bankruptcy attorney and partner at Cage, Hill & Niehaus in Houston.

If the Supreme Court decides that lien-stripping can be used by a debtor under Chapter 13, it would open up a new door of relief for indebted consumers, lawyers said.

"It would mean if they wanted to take the chance of going into bankruptcy and didn't mind the lessening stigma on that, they could end up getting the monkey off their back with the property that's gone down in value and just pay the fair market value of it," said Ron Niehaus, a partner at Cage, Hill & Niehaus, who represents Cornerstone Mortgage Co. in Houston.

"The mortgage (lender) would end up eating whatever the excess was."

It would also make Chapter 13 a more attractive option for consumers, Harris said.

"The ability to be able to pay only the value of the home if it has decreased below the amount of the mortgage would be an additional attraction to somebody who might otherwise be deciding to choose this option," he said.

The appeals court said the federal bankruptcy law offered conflicting answers on the issue.

Commonwealth adds 'royal' Circle K reorganization plan

By Kenneth N. Gilpin
N.Y. Times News Service

In a continuing struggle for control of the bankrupt Circle K Corp., Commonwealth Oil Co. said on Tuesday that it intended to file an amended reorganization plan for Circle K that includes $360 million of equity capital supplied by a Saudi prince.

Besides further complicating Circle K's future, the emergence of Prince Turki bin Fahd bid Jalawi al-Saud pits members of the royal families of Saudi Arabia and Kuwait against one another for the Phoenix-based company, which owns thousands of convenience stores.

In October, Circle K filed its own reorganization plan, proposing that the company be bought for just under $400 million by the CK Acquisitions Corp.

Among the principals in CK Acquisitions is Sheik Ali Khalifa al-Sabah, a member of Kuwait's ruling family who for various periods in the 1970s and 1980s was petroleum and finance minister. He also was president of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Prince Turki bin Fahd is a cousin of Prince al-Waleed bin Tabal, who last year raised a stir in financial circles when he invested $500 million in Citicorp preferred stock. For his $360 million, Prince Turki bin Fahd would get a 42 percent stake in Commonwealth Oil.

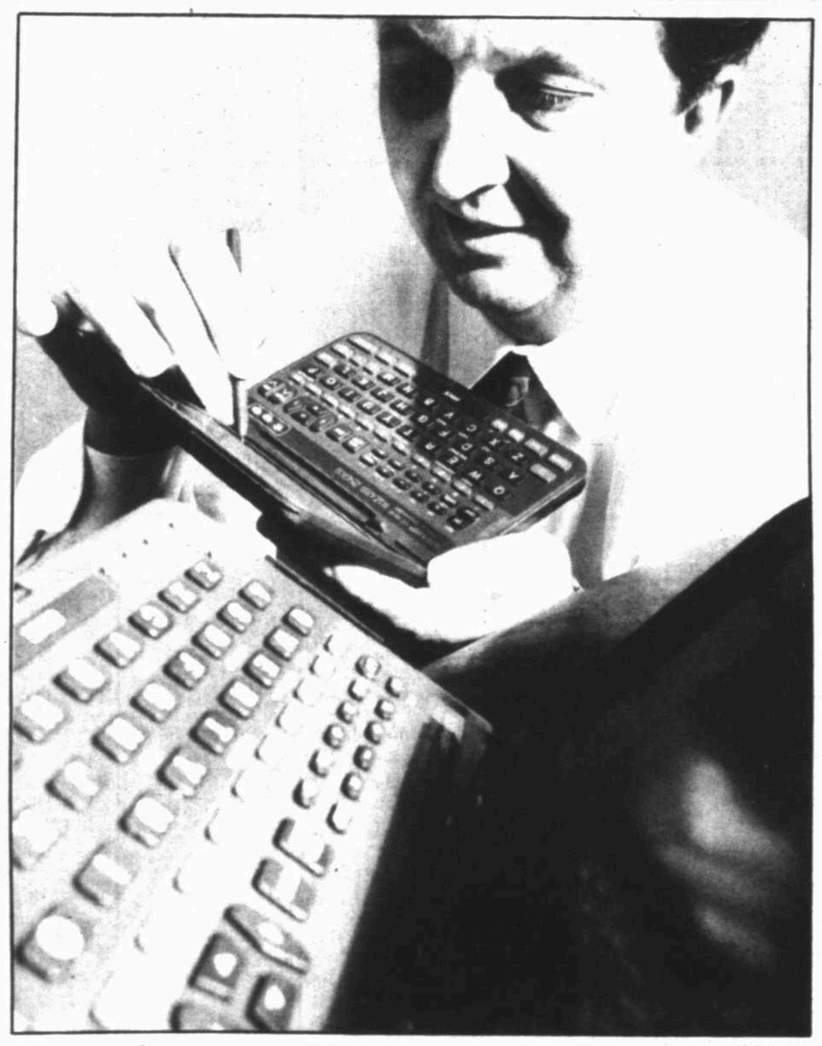

The new Commonwealth Oil plan, which is expected to be filed shortly in bankruptcy court in Phoenix, considerably strengthens Commonwealth's initial proposal.

That plan, filed in October, included an offer to buy Circle K for about $500 million, including $420 million in debt and preferred stock. Holders of Circle K bonds with a face value of about $450 million objected to the original plans filed by both Circle K and Commonwealth, and on Oct. 21 filed their own reorganization plan.

The bondholders contended that neither the Circle K buyout proposal nor the original Commonwealth plan provided adequate recovery for holders of Circle K's debt securities.

According to participants in the high-yield bond market, Circle K's 13 percent junior subordinated debt securities maturing in December 1997 were offered at 3 cents on the dollar before Tuesday's announcement and did not trade after word of the new plan was received. Circle K's 12¾ percent, five-year senior subordinated notes were trading at about 7 cents on the dollar.

Lawyers for the bondholders group reacted cautiously on Tuesday.

Some carriers extend air fare discounts to include holidays

By Jane Baird
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Christmas is coming cheaper to some air travelers this year.

The airlines announced another round of air fare cuts Monday, extending what started off as a post-holiday fare sale forward to cover the Christmas holidays.

Consumers this week through Dec. 11 can buy bargain tickets for travel Dec. 15 through Feb. 14. Fares are off up to 35 percent for travel Tuesday through Thursday and up to 25 percent for travel Friday through Monday.

Houston's Continental Airlines kicked off a sale last week on travel Jan. 5 through Feb. 14.

Northwest Airlines raised the ante this week by expanding the sale to cover travel from Dec. 15.

Continental Monday afternoon decided to push its sale forward to match, spokeswoman Peggy Mahoney said. The sale covers nearly all the fares in its system, except for a few markets where fares already are low because of competition with Southwest Airlines.

Several peak travel dates in the holidays are not included in the sale: Dec. 23, Dec. 27, Jan. 2 and Jan. 3. Other limitations include a Saturday night stay and a restricted number of seats on each flight.

"There is a feeling in the airlines industry that you don't mess with the holidays," which include about 10 days of high-load factors, said R. Alan Fox, president of Vacations To Go. The fact that Northwest initiated a sale during this time will be seen as a sign that it is exceptionally weak, he said.

This sale will not necessarily prove to be a big money loser, however, if the airlines restrict it carefully, Fox said. If controlled, the few cheap seats can be used to stimulate air travel that would not have otherwise taken place while protecting revenue that is already booked, he said.

U.S. broadens pickup safety probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government expanded its investigation Tuesday into charges that some General Motors pickups are susceptible to fires in side crashes because of their fuel tank location.

"The agency has been involved in a complicated review of a great deal of information on this issue during the past four months, and there is no question further investigation is needed to determine whether these trucks contain a safety-related defect," said Marion Blakey, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Blakey said the action doesn't mean the agency has concluded a safety-related defect exists.

A recall could cost General Motors Corp. about $1 billion.

The probe began Aug. 14 with a petition by the Center for Auto Safety and Public Citizen, two consumer groups that asked the government to recall the vehicles.

In question are about 4.7 million 1973-87 Chevrolet and GMC C/K series full-sized pickup trucks.

The trucks were made with "sidesaddle" tanks mounted outside the frame rails. The consumer groups say that position makes the vehicles more vulnerable to fires and explosions in side-impact crashes.

Stick shortening eases baking

By Linda Anderson

There's nothing like brisk, cool weather (or frozen and cold weather, or the end-of-the-year holidays, for that matter) to make you yearn for something warm and comforting from the oven. Don't think the people who make Crisco shortening don't know that, either — they've just introduced Crisco Sticks, that old favorite shortening in stick form that's designed to make baking (at least the measuring part) easier.

Anderson

Packaged in three one-cup sticks, this new form of Crisco is marked on its label in one-tablespoon increments so you can just slice off as much or as little as you need. It comes in regular and butter-flavored Crisco too.

The company is so proud of its "new" product that it sent a stick of each here to the office so we could check it out.

I found the Crisco Sticks in my favorite supermarket, and found out that a package of three sticks is priced at $1.79.

According to information from the company (these companies never send just the product — they always send lots of PR information too), the "release of the breakthrough packaging of Crisco Sticks and artificially-flavored Butter Flavor Crisco Sticks is the latest advance in a long history of innovations for Crisco. ...

"Like the familiar blue and yellow cans, Crisco Sticks are all-vegetable, and like all shortening, they contain no preservatives and are sodium-free. ... Crisco Sticks have 50 percent less saturated fat than butter (a tablespoon of Crisco contains 3 grams of saturated fat versus butter's 6 grams)."

In Crisco's 81-year history, the information goes on, "it has evolved over the years to maintain its quality and dependability. By the late 1940s, Crisco was based predominantly on soybean oil." In 1983 butter-flavored (artificially-flavored) Crisco was introduced. (I still am not convinced it's any better than margarine for baking. Notice the saturated fat content of margarine isn't mentioned where the saturated fat content of butter is.)

Then, "In 1990, when the saturated fat level of palm oil began to be questioned, it was totally removed from the product."

I've always been partial to baking with margarine, simply because (1) it tastes better; and (2) it's easy to measure. One stick of butter is one-half cup (or eight tablespoons, whichever you prefer). In fact, the only advantage that I could find in using shortening for baking is that shortening doesn't have to be refrigerated, the way margarine does. Of course, shortening is much better for frying, since margarine will just smoke and burn and make a mess, but I've never been sold on shortening for baking cakes, cookies, etc. Pie crust, maybe...

Anyway, I made one of our favorites — chocolate cake with fudge icing — using a stick of Crisco, to see how it worked. The recipe I used called for margarine and shortening, but I only used butter-flavored Crisco in a stick.

The chocolate cake was light and moist, as always; the fudge frosting was extremely decadent, as always (though I did use margarine in it); and everyone ate every crumb, as always. I really couldn't tell any difference in how the cake baked, tasted or was received.

The major difference, however, was that the price of three sticks of Crisco — three cups — is a lot more than many margarines in comparable sizes. One four-stick box of margarine — two cups — can cost as little as 49 cents to 79 cents. Double that — four cups — and you still pay less for the margarine, and get more baking power.

Crisco is a wonderful product with a lot of loyal customers, and I don't want to knock it. But for baking, I'm going to stick with margarine.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Foods bring back childhood

By Steven Kolpan

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Whenever I think of Hanukkah, I remember my childhood, because Hanukkah is a celebration for Jewish children all over the world. It is a time for good food, exchanging gifts and telling stories.

We tell our children how Judah Macabee preserved Jewish culture by defeating the Syrians, who wanted the Jews to worship Greek gods. We love to talk about the "miracle of the oil" — how there was only enough oil for one day in the Jerusalem Temple, but it somehow lasted eight days, so the menorah has eight candles.

There are also modern Hanukkah stories to tell, like the time my 5-year-old brother went to a department store to sit on Santa's knee. When asked what he wanted for Christmas, my brother replied, "Frankly, Santa, I'm Jewish, but thanks for asking."

And then there are the foods of Hanukkah, many of which are fried in oil. My mother's potato pancakes complemented the specialties of my two Russian grandmothers. Grandma Rosa made sweet and sour stuffed cabbage. Grandma Manya made her special Hanukkah fried chicken. After all, what is tradition but the love of the foods we ate when we were children?

POTATO LATKES

3 pounds (about 9 medium) peeled potatoes
1 onion, peeled and grated
4 eggs, lightly beaten
¾ cup matzo meal
1 teaspoon salt
Vegetable oil for frying

Grate potatoes directly into bowl lined with clean linen dish towel. Gather up edges of the towel; twist tightly to squeeze potatoes until quite dry.

Place potatoes in mixing bowl. Add onion, eggs, ¾ cup matzo meal and salt; blend well, but do not overwork mixture. If necessary, add additional matzo meal to adjust consistency of batter.

Heat about ¼ inch of oil in a skillet over medium heat. Allow oil to become quite hot, but not hot enough to smoke.

Drop spoonfuls of potato mixture into hot oil. Pan-fry about 2 minutes on first side, then turn and cook another 2 minutes on second side. Drain pancakes well on absorbent toweling. If necessary, keep them warm in the oven. Serve with sour cream, applesauce, or a dusting of confectioners' sugar. Makes 12 servings.

STUFFED CABBAGE

24 large outer leaves from white cabbage
3 pounds lean ground beef
1½ cups pitted prunes, diced
½ cup raisins
⅓ cup uncooked rice
2 medium onions, minced
1 carrot, grated
3 eggs, lightly beaten
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon ground black pepper
½ cup lemon juice
1 cup packed brown sugar
¾ cup tomato puree
3 cups water

Bring a large pot of water to a rolling boil. Drop in the cabbage leaves; blanch for 8 to 10 minutes. Remove from the pot, rinse in cool water, and drain.

Mix the beef, prunes, raisins, rice, onion, carrot, eggs, salt and pepper until evenly blended. Do not overwork this mixture.

Spread a cabbage leaf flat. Drop a serving spoon (about ⅓ cup) of the beef mixture onto the leaf. Roll it up, folding the ends in to form a closed package. Continue until all the leaves and filling are used.

Place the cabbage rolls in a baking pan that has been lightly coated with margarine.

Blend the lemon juice, brown sugar, tomato puree and water; pour over the cabbage rolls. It should be enough to barely cover the rolls. Add more water if necessary.

Cover the pan with foil. Bake in a 350-degree F oven for 45 to 50 minutes. Remove the foil; bake an additional 20 minutes. Serve the rolls with some of the sauce.

FRIED CHICKEN

3 whole frying chickens, cut into eighths
2 cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon ground pepper
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
2 cups milk
2 eggs
2 cups plain bread crumbs
Vegetable oil for pan-frying
2 lemons, cut into wedges

Rinse the chicken and pat dry.

Place the flour, salt, pepper, cinnamon, nutmeg and garlic powder in a shallow baking dish; stir to distribute all the ingredients evenly.

Combine the milk and eggs in a shallow bowl; whisk until evenly blended.

Place the bread crumbs in a separate baking dish. Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Place a rack on a baking sheet and have it ready for the chicken.

Coat each piece of chicken in the seasoned flour, dip it into the milk-and-egg mixture, then finally coat evenly with bread crumbs. Place the breaded chicken on a baking sheet.

Heat about ¼ inch of vegetable oil in a heavy-gauge skillet over medium-high heat. Add the chicken in batches, being careful not to overcrowd the pan; the pieces should not touch one another.

Gently swirl the pan to keep the chicken pieces in motion and to allow the hot oil to come in contact with all sides. Pan-fry about 4 minutes on the first side, then turn each piece and pan-fry another 3 to 4 minutes on the second side.

Remove the chicken to absorbent toweling; allow it to drain briefly. Place the chicken on the rack on the baking sheet; continue until all the chicken has been browned. Bake in a 350-degree F oven for 12 to 15 minutes, or until the juices from the thigh run clear when pierced with a skewer. Serve the chicken while still very hot with wedges of lemon. Makes 12 servings.

Dinner for four is inexpensive

Buy pork chops when the prices are low and freeze for future meals.

Thanksgiving's turkey is but a memory, and December meals invariably demand recipes that are a snap to prepare yet satisfying in cold weather.

Pan-fried pork chops are not only rib-sticking fare, but by adding red cabbage and apples, they become a one-dish meal. Once the chops are browned, and the apples and cabbage are added to the pan, cooking time is less than an hour.

Plus, if you shop for specials at the meat counter, you'll find packages of assorted pork chops as low as $1.48 a pound. Loin chops are nearly three times the price, but the assorted packages usually contain a few lean loin chops on top. Buy pork chops when the prices are low and freeze for future meals.

Add a dab of mustard just before serving and a loaf of crusty pumpernickel or rye bread and you'll want for little more.

GROCERY LIST:
2 pounds assorted pork chops $2.96
½ small onion .10
1 small carrot .06
1 small head red cabbage .69
2 medium apples .59
1 cup white wine 1.40
2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar .17
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard .24
1 loaf crusty bread .89
Staples: $ .09
Salt
Black pepper
Dried thyme
Bay leaf
Total: $7.19

Costs are based on current Atlanta-area supermarket prices.

BRAISED PORK CHOPS WITH RED CABBAGE AND APPLES

4 pork chops, cut about 1-inch thick
Salt and black pepper
¼ cup minced onion
¼ cup minced carrot
1 small head red cabbage, quartered, cored and sliced ¼-inch thick
2 medium cooking apples, peeled, cored and diced
1 clove garlic, unpeeled
⅓ teaspoon dried thyme
½ bay leaf
1 cup dry white wine or chicken stock
2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard, if desired

Trim excess fat from outside edge of pork chops, leaving about ⅛ inch. Slowly render trimmings in a heavy-bottomed skillet over low heat. When enough fat has rendered to lightly coat the skillet, remove the bits of browned fat. Increase heat to moderate and brown the pork chops well on both sides. Remove and season with salt and pepper.

Saute onion and carrot in pork drippings for 5 minutes. Add sliced cabbage, diced apple, garlic, thyme and bay leaf. Saute another 5 minutes or until cabbage has wilted. Season with salt and pepper. Add wine or stock and balsamic vinegar. Arrange pork chops in pan, basting with cabbage and juices.

Reduce heat and cover. Cook slowly 45 minutes, turning and basting once or twice, until pork chops are tender. Arrange cabbage on hot serving plates and remove garlic clove. Place pork chops on plates and top with mustard if desired. Makes four servings.

Cherry topping crowns ice-cream

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Summer and winter fruits meet in this rosy ice-cream topper. In the microwave oven, dried cherries simmer in cranberry juice to plump back to their bold summer size. Simmering in juice adds even more flavor to the already tasty dried cherries. (Because the water has been removed from the cherries, dried cherry flavor is much more pronounced). If you can't find dried cherries in your supermarket, look in gourmet food shops or in mail-order food catalogs. Of course, you can also use frozen berries and just cut back on the amount of cranberry juice.

CRANBERRY-CHERRY SAUCE

½ cup dried cherries or 1½ cups frozen pitted tart red cherries
¼ cup packed brown sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 teaspoon finely shredded lemon peel
¼ teaspoon apple pie spice
2 cups cranberry-cherry drink or unsweetened cherry juice

In a 4-cup glass measure stir together dried or frozen cherries, brown sugar, cornstarch, lemon peel and apple pie spice. Stir in cranberry-cherry drink or cherry juice.

Cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 3 to 5 minutes or until thickened and bubbly, stirring every minute until slightly thickened, then every 30 seconds. Cook for 1 minute more. Serve warm over ice cream. Makes about 2¼ cups.

NOTE: If using frozen pitted tart red cherries, decrease cranberry-cherry drink or cherry juice to 1½ cups.

DEAR ABBY

Adopted son rejected — again

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: We have a 21-year-old adopted son. "Jim" had never expressed interest in meeting his natural mother until two of his doctors suggested it might be a good idea. The reason was because of many medical problems he has had. When he discussed it with us, we were very supportive. We had always told him that he was given up for adoption because of his mother's love for him and her feeling that he needed more than she could give — which we truly believed.

Van Buren

When Jim pursued finding her, he knew she could possibly refuse to meet him or the courts might refuse to open the file. However, the courts did open the file and located the natural mother. The woman agreed for Jim to have limited information about his background, but she refused to meet him or give him any information about his biological father or about any other siblings.

Now I wish the courts had refused to open the file rather than having the mother refuse to meet Jim. I know her reasons are probably justified, but even though he says it doesn't matter, I can feel his pain in (again) feeling rejection.

I'm wondering what your opinion is. No names or cities, please. — PENNSYLVANIA MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: It is most unfortunate that your son was "rejected" in the manner that he was. His feelings could have been spared had there been a more sensitive "go-between" handling the possible meeting. Apparently, the woman did not want anyone to know anything about that part of her life. Perhaps, in time, she will change her mind.

Meanwhile, God bless you — it is your good fortune to have this lovely son. Please don't judge his biological mother too harshly. God only knows what kind of a life she has had.

DEAR ABBY: Last year, my brother "Ray" passed away of AIDS, and although he never did come out of the closet, everyone who knew him knew that he was gay, except for my grandparents.

You see, our grandparents are very old-fashioned, and they would never accept the fact that Ray was gay. So Mom and Dad are telling them that Ray died of complications from pneumonia.

Before Ray died, he made me promise to tell our grandparents exactly what he died from. It was his last wish. He begged me to fulfill it, and I said I would.

It's been more than a year and I still haven't told them the truth, and I feel guilty because I owe it to my brother to make good my promise. On the other hand, Ray is gone now, and revealing the truth at this time is not going to bring him back, and I really hate to hurt my grandparents with something like that.

What do you think, Abby? Should I keep my promise to Ray no matter how much it hurts my grandparents? Or should I let sleeping dogs lie? — TOUGH DECISION

DEAR TOUGH DECISION: You made a deathbed promise to your brother and you owe it to him to keep that promise. Ray had his reasons for wanting his grandparents to know the truth, and since you promised you would tell them, I think you should. The truth never hurt anybody — only lies hurt.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter and son-in-law composed this limerick while watching the election returns on TV. Since you enjoy limericks, I'm sending it to you:

There was a young scholar from Yale
Who ran against Bush and Dan Quayle
They fought to and fro
And he won even though
He smoked — but he didn't inhale.

— KAY HOLLAND, MADISON, ALA.

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended a 75th birthday party. The hostess allowed her dog not only to stay in the house, but she let him jump on people and get on their laps!

Most of the guests were elderly and dressed in their "Sunday best." Although I love dogs and have one myself, I didn't think a dog belonged at a party like that. What is your opinion? — DOG LOVER

DEAR DOG LOVER: I vote with you. But don't blame the dog; the hostess was responsible for (1) failing to train her dog to refrain from jumping on people, and (2) allowing him to make a nuisance of himself.

Abby shares more of her favorite, easy-to-prepare recipes. To order, send a long, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby More Favorite Recipes, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)
